Area Residents Credited For Saving Boy

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Brent Engels is alive today, and the parents of the bright-eyed, freckled 9-year-old believe the people of Lubbock and the South Plains are part of the reason.

Three and a half years ago, Brent, then a first grader at Hardwick Elementary School, went to the doctor. His mother says "he was barely sick." His doctor said differently — Brent had leukemia.

The March 12, 1976, diagnosis threw the Engels family into a crisis. "It's a shock, you hear the death knell when the doctor says leukemia," remembers the boy's father, Roger.

"We were pretty low," Engels, who then was director of Texas Boys' Ranch, continued. "But the people of this community — of the whole South Plains — stepped in and really made a difference."

Friends held a blood drive in their home, someone started an emergency medical fund which reached $2,000, and neighbors volunteered to care for the Engles' other sons — Noel and Shane — while Brent and his mother traveled to Houston for the boy's treatment.

"Money came from people we don't even know. Churches of many denominations were praying for our son 24 hours a day," recalls Mary Engels, her eyes glistening.

"We're grateful to those people for their outpouring of love," she continued. "They really practiced their faith."

Almost immediately after Brent's illness was diagnosed as acute lymphatic leukemia, he began taking chemotherapy at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. His mother remembers the frequent flights the two made, and their stays in Houston while Brent was under observation at the hospital.

Finally, the family moved to Houston, where Engels now is assistant chief of the juvenile probation department.

Brent began his chemotherapy with a 20 percent chance to live, says his mother. Three years later, doctors say his cancer is in remission, and the odds are better than reversed — 85 percent — that the disease will not claim him.

His parents credit the treatment with saving Brent. "It was rough, we knew it would be rough," said Mary Engels. "But with support groups it is possible, and it saved our son's life."

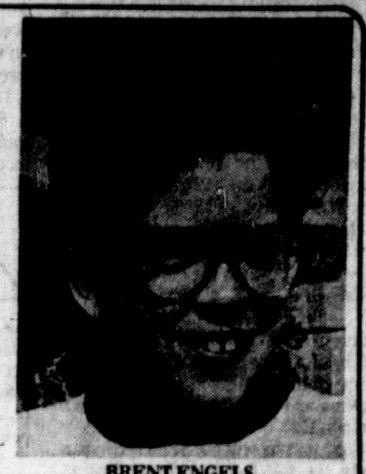

There is nothing about Brent Engels to betray the strain of the prolonged chemical treatments today. He and his brothers, now aged 12 and 8, played noisily on the snowy front lawn of Lubbock friends the family recently visited.

"He doesn't remember the worst of it," says his mother.

His parents remember, however. They remember the pain of their child's early brush with death, the strain of constantly making allowances for the disease — "It pulls some families apart," says Engels, "ours it brought closer together.

"You hear about the people of the South Plains, but you never know how good they can be until you're down and out," said Engels.

"We waited three and a half years, but our message now is thank you to everyone, and Merry Christmas."

Gold Hits $496 In Europe

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold zoomed toward the $500 mark today, jumping $19 in Zurich and more than $16 in London to trade at a record $496 an ounce in both centers. Gold closed Tuesday at $477 in Zurich and $479.50 in London.

"The market is going mad," a Swiss gold dealer in Zurich said. "I think we will see gold at $500 an ounce before we close today."

The dollar was mixed but little changed in what dealers described as very thin trading in advance of the Christmas and New Year holidays.

The gold price has climbed to successive record highs this week as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in Caracas, Venezuela, to discuss raising prices on crude oil.

Gold, an investor's haven in times of monetary uncertainty, thrives in the sort of inflationary spiral that a further round of oil price hikes could trigger. Middle East oil producers are also heavy investors in the metal and increased oil revenues would give them more money to buy gold.

The gold rush has pushed up the price of the precious metal by more than $200 since Aug. 8, when it was trading at around $289 in London and Zurich. Just over a year ago, Nov. 30, 1978, gold was $193.25 in London.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before the business day begins in Europe, the dollar zig-zagged against the yen today, finishing at 239.75, nearly two yen lower than Tuesday's close of 241.40.

The U.S. currency opened at 239.40 yen, little changed from 239.50 yen in late New York trading Tuesday, and immediately sank to a low of 238.70 yen under selling pressure from foreign banks apparently anticipating the dollar's further decline.

The strange sight in the sky must have startled youngsters in the area, already anticipating a visit from Santa next Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Iranians Jeer U.S. Threat Of Blockade

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Tens of thousands of demonstrators mourning a slain religious leader today swarmed around the U.S. Embassy shouting anti-American slogans, but the government relented somewhat, saying relatives of 50 American hostages held inside may be allowed to visit them for Christmas.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini dismissed reports that Washington may begin a naval blockade of Iran as a maneuver by President Carter "acting like a frightened lion who roars and puffs up his mane."

Even as the funeral marchers shouted "Down with America!" Interior Minister Hashemi Rafsanjani said in a newspaper interview that "there is a possibility their (the hostages') families will be allowed to visit them for Christmas and we would like such a thing to happen."

The final word, however, belongs with the student captors holding the 50 hostages for the 46th day, he said.

A militant spokesman said, "No decision has been taken on that yet. So far we have agreed to allow them cards and gifts." The students previously said none of the 50 hostages would be released from the embassy by Christmas.

Khomeini, in an interview today with former Egyptian newspaper editor Mohammed Hassanein Heikal, said: "The people of Iran want to be martyrs. Only those who are worried about death will be frightened of Mr. Carter's military threats. But not us.

"In fact it is Mr. Carter who is frightened, because he doesn't believe in the hereafter."

Carter's warnings are "like the cries of an animal trying to frighten his rival," Khomeini said. "We are supposed to be frightened. We are not."

Throngs of mourning demonstrators swarmed around the U.S. Embassy, chanting "Down with Carter!" and "Down with America!" in a new wave of anti-Americanism. Inside the embassy compound, militants said they will put the hostages on trial even if the United States imposes a naval blockade.

Carrying the bodies of religious leader Mohammed Mofatteh and two guards who were gunned down Tuesday, a huge crowd of mourners marched through Tehran and then congregated in front of the banner-draped American embassy, chanting slogans and waving signs.

Mofatteh, head of Iran's main Islamic religious school, will be buried later in the holy city of Qom.

Today's march was the largest anti-American demonstration in several weeks, triggered by accusations by Khomeini, the ruling Islamic Revolutionary Council and the militants that the United States was to blame for Mofatteh's killing.

The White House immediately labeled the charges "absolutely untrue."

And later Tuesday, an underground terrorist group, FM, in a telephone call to the official Pars news agency, Tuesday claimed responsibility for the three killings.

The militants also reiterated their threats to kill the American hostages if Washington attempts to rescue them.

Chrysler Loan Hits Snag

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today gave preliminary approval to a $1.25 billion federal loan guarantee for the Chrysler Corp. but an opponent threatened to stall final action by a filibuster.

The vote was 54-43.

Opponents of the Chrysler aid plan moved for reconsideration of the vote and the Senate recessed to talk the situation over behind the scenes.

The measure was adopted as an amendment to a bill approved earlier by the Senate Banking Committee that called for a three-year wage freeze by members of the United Auto Workers.

The amendment eliminated the freeze, but called upon the UAW members to give up $400 million in negotiated wage increases.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who had said earlier he was considering a filibuster, told the Senate: "I see no possibility under the circumstances of any vote on the Chrysler bill in this body — maybe Saturday at the earliest."

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia called for the recess so senators could leave the floor and discuss what they should do.

If a bill is approved by the Senate, it will sent to a House-Senate conference committee, which will compromise it with the $1.5 billion loan guarantee approved by the House on Tuesday.

Both bills require the UAW to double the $200 million in wage concessions they have already made to Chrysler. Union President Douglas Fraser said he would recommend approval, but could not guarantee the union members would go along.

The Senate bill provides a total of $3.2 billion in aid to Chrysler from the loan guarantee, the wage concessions and other sources. It calls on Chrysler management, stockholders, suppliers, state and local governments and banks to come up with $1.43 billion.

Chrysler, its workers and the Carter administration are pushing to have a final bill approved in both houses by Friday, when Congress is scheduled to start a month's vacation.

Clouding the outlook for the Senate bill, however, was the fact that several senators have said workers of the nation's 10th largest corporation should make greater sacrifices.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., was ready to submit an amendment calling for $800 million from the hourly workers.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., prepared an amendment for $550 million in concessions. Tsongas said he was aiming at a compromise of $475 million once the issue reaches a House-Senate conference committee.

Whatever package Congress finally approves will require UAW ratification, because the union recently approved a three-year Chrysler contract providing for only $200 million in wage concessions.

House passage on a 271-136 vote Tuesday followed a debate in which Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said a Chrysler collapse might bring on a depression.

"We can't afford what would happen to this country if Chrysler went down the drain," he said. The company has 113,000 employees, but backers of the aid say more than three times that number would ultimately be jobless if Chrysler goes under.

Firm Gives Candy For Needy Tots

Help a child know Christmas joy.

The plea from Chief Goodfellow got a big response this week — thousands of peanut patties from the Goodart Candy Co., enough to put some in each family's Christmas sack.

Chief Goodfellow was very pleased, but not too surprised. Lubbock folks are just that way. They help.

Contributions help bring Christmas to many children, like the family a neighbor told Chief Goodfellow about.

The father and grandfather just died, the mother "ran away" and the grandmother is doing what she can with hospital and funeral bills, plus extra mouths to feed.

"If they have food, that will be a happy Christmas."

With the help of Lubbock, as Lubbock has helped for 44 years, Chief Goodfellow will see that more than food puts a spark in the eyes of Lubbock children.

Contributions are rolling in, but inflation forces Chief Goodfellow to ask for even more to fill an estimated 10,000 sacks for children who might miss Christmas. He needs $20,000 this year to do the job.

Be a good fellow, he urges. Put a smile on at least one child's face this Christmas Day. It only costs $2.25 for one. Each additional $2.25 lights up another child's face.

New Housing Starts Dip Sharply In City, Nation

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Anyone trying to buy a new home in Lubbock today probably has discovered two facts: the houses cost more and there are fewer of them to choose from.

"The construction of new homes is slower than it was last year," noted M.B. Smith, executive officer for the West Texas Home Builders Association.

According to Smith's figures, new housing starts in the city are down 27 percent from 1978. During the first 11 months of last year, building permits were issued for 1,259 houses. In the same period this year, there were only 918 house permits, Smith said.

The situation in Lubbock merely reflects what is going on across the nation. Housing starts have tumbled by more than 22 percent in the past two months and are running at a near-recession annual rate of 1.5 million units, government figures show.

Figures released by the Commerce Department Tuesday show housing starts are down 28 percent from November 1978.

Smith said the reason for all of this is the tight money policy adopted Oct. 6 by the Federal Reserve. "There are many people who want to buy houses, but the availability and cost of money is a real problem," he noted.

To illustrate his point, Smith described the current situation if a consumer attempts to purchase a $65,000 home. With a required 10 percent down, the homebuyer would be looking at a mortgage loan totaling $58,500 over a 30-year period. Under more normal conditions with a 9½ percent interest rate, the purchaser's monthly payment would run $492, Smith said. However, with the present interest rate of between 11.5 and 12 percent, the monthly payment would climb to $602.

Not only does money cost more, it also has become less available for mortgage loans, Smith said. Even if people can afford to pay the higher monthly payments, they are finding it more difficult to obtain loans.

The tight money situation has caused

Watchdog Takes On All Comers

The Mark Stephenson family of near Idalou has a watchdog that really believes in doing his job. The problem is, he's not too discriminating about who he does it on.

The Stephensons heard the dog, an Australian Shepherd, barking about 3 a.m. today, they said, and Stephenson went outside to investigate about 7 a.m. when he heard a car horn honking.

A slightly chewed up man later identified as a Mexican illegally in the United States had gotten into the car to escape the dog and was honking the horn.

Idalou Police Chief T.L. Waggoner was called to the farm a mile north of Idalou. He also got a none-too-friendly reception from the overzealous dog, but escaped with apparently minor bites and torn pants.

Neither Waggoner nor the man, who was turned over to the Border Patrol in Lubbock this morning, was reported seriously injured.

Growing Support Seen For Former President

Analysis

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gerald R. Ford used to tell Republican audiences that the more the voters see of Democratic government, the better the GOP looks.

That's about the only advantage a politician or a party can claim in losing elections. When things go wrong, the winners get the blame and after a while there is nostalgia for the good — or at least better — old days when the other guys were in charge.

Now the former president is hearing a variation of that theme applied to his own brief tenure in the White House. It comes from people who supported him last time and undoubtedly would again if he ran in 1980.

Ford says he will not be an active candidate for the Republican nomination, but would be available "in the remote possibility" that the party turned to him.

He also has said that he would run "if unforeseen developments take place between now and the convention." Ford isn't saying what that means. "It's unforeseen," he said recently. "You define it. I can't."

Since unforeseen is undefined, Ford could if he chose declare that the unforeseen had happend almost ny time durin the nominaton campaign. He could, for example, assert that the competition was becoming so divisive as to threaten Republican prospects in the fall, and make that the basis for a late-starting campaign.

Or he could stay out, as he said he would on Oct. 19. In what Ford said was a definitive statement, he announced that he had made "a firm decision not to become an active candidate."

That has its advantages, one of which was illustrated the other day in a discussion at The American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, Ford's Washington base since he left the White House.

That's where the suggestion was made that there is a reservoir of support for Ford around the country among people, many of them nominal Democrats, who feel they were better off four years ago than they are now.

It was coupled with the observation that many people seem to know Ford by his absence rather than having known him as president.

Ford smiled, and said he really didn't know what could have been done about that, or could be now.

"Maybe it's the comparison as to where they were when I was president and to where their problems are today."

"I don't think I'm any different today than I was then," the former president said. "Maybe a little more relaxed. ..."

But where candidacy begins, relaxation ends. Apart from the contest for the 1980 Republican nomination, Ford can be above it.

There is little criticism of Ford nowadays, and more than any of the active candidates, he can speak for the party. That would not be the case were he competing for the nomination.

In an era of hectic, non-stop campaigning for the White House, the man on the sidelines has a certain appeal, particularly when he is a former president who came close to winning the office in the last election.

Given the amnesty of memory, the problems that faced the country during the Ford administration seem less severe than those on today's agenda.

In fact, they were the same problems. With inflation spiraling, Ford says the economy has deteriorated to a point that will make it a major handicap for any Democratic nominee in 1980. President Carter concentrated on economic issues, particularly unemployment, in campaigning against Ford four years ago.

Ford says the state of U.S. defenses also will be a major issue, and it, too, was on the agenda last time. The former president bristles at the suggestion that his administration bears a share of blame for a decline in American military power. He says it began with the refusal of Democratic Congresses to spend what was necessary.

"So I welcome that debate, if I were involved," he said.

He will be involved as a spokesman for the Republican cause, if not for his own candidacy.

That role makes the most of Ford's political advantages. In another era, it might have been a promising route toward the nomination to try again for the White House.

But in a campaign of 35 presidential primary elections, the odds are heavily against the inactive candidate.

Chinese emperors for a period of 141 years (1227-1368) acknowledged dependence upon their subjects by being crowned on a blanket, held aloft by a group of their people.

Refugee Camp Bustling City

GALANG ISLAND, Indonesia (UPI) — There is a bustling community of 13,500 people, growing all the time, on this island of lush rain forest where the South China and Java seas meet.

Coffee houses, barbershops and fruit stands line the streets. There is a large general store. A modern hospital is almost complete. The people are well cared for by 21 doctors, 14 nurses and 145 teachers.

The houses are prefabricated, just temporary barracks housing 100 people each. And the water supply is a constant worry.

But this is a camp for Indonesia's boat people from Vietnam. It has been turned into the main processing center where screening teams from the United States, Australia, Canada and other countries interview refugees for permament settlement.

"It may not be perfect," said Harriet Jakobbsen, a Swedish woman working for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

"But if there have to be refugees, may all the camps be like this one."

Eventually, Galang will house 30,000 Vietnamese, 80 percent of them of Chinese ethnic origin, as refugees are brought in from other islands.

Indonesian officials say they are startled by some foreign reports comparing Galang with a prison camp.

"This was unbelievable," said Rear-Admiral Kunto Wibisono, who governs the region from his base on Tanjung Pinang, a 45-minute speedboat ride from the island.

"The refugees may go wherever they want on the island, although they do need a permit to go to the jetty and the beach," the handsome officier explained. Refugees can go once a week to buy goods at Pinang.

Galang camp and processing center is costing $13.2 million to build, the money coming from the U.N. High Commissioner's office in Geneva. It is 2½ hours by fast boat from Singapore, from where processed refugees are flown to countries of settlement.

The international money involved inevitably has led to profiteering. Local contractors demanded 10 times the real value for labor and building materials. But that was stopped with the arrival of a Swiss disaster relief team. The Indonesian government was happy to let a neutral do the bargaining.

"But this is nothing compared to what was attempted in the Philippines," said one Western official who did not wish to be named.

"There, local companies demanded $150 million to set up the camp at Ulungan Bay. Only when the experts arrived was it discovered that the real cost, including a fair profit for contractors, was $30 million."

Indonesia currently has 36,373 Vietnamese refugees. In November, there were just 162 new arrivals on all the islands while 4,030 were processed out of Galang, most to the United States.

"What we are afraid of is that arrivals will increase as soon as the monsoons are finished," Wibisono said.

Indonesian authorities emphasize the camp is temporary, and may be used for a youth program when all the refugees have gone. But Western experts believe it will be four to five years before the camp is empty.

So far, 75 percent of the refugees have been vaccinated against major diseases. Wibisono offers a reward of $1.50 for each malaria-bearing mosquito caught.

"So far no one has succeeded in finding one," he said with a smile.

The camp, which at night looks like any Chinese community with its lantern-lit tea and coffee houses, is policed by the refugees themselves.

"The only violence we have had was when one woman hit her niece over the head with a wooden board for disobedience," Harriet Jakobssen said.

There apparently is a thriving black market in international relief supplies of rice, flour and other items. Many Chinese brought diamonds and gold with them or receive money from relatives already settled in the West.

Carl Harris of the State Department's Refugee Affairs Office said the U.S. system of processing begins with young Americans, some of them Peace Corps veterans, questioning refugees to trace possible relatives. There are hundreds of orphans.

Today is Wednesday, Dec. 19, the 353rd day of 1979 with 12 to follow.

The moon is new.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter, Saturn and Mercury.

The evening star is Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Sagittarius.

British Arctic explorer William Perry was born Dec. 19, 1790.

On this date in history:

In 1972, the splashdown of Apollo 17 ended America's moon exploration program.

In 1974, Nelson Rockefeller was confirmed by Congress as vice president after a six-hour debate in the House. He then took the oath of office and was sworn in.

A thought for the day: German philosopher Arthur Schopenhauer said, "Intellect is invisible to the man who has none."

Journalists Entertained By Artist

PARIS (UPI) — It was billed as a news conference but it turned out to be a court audience by the king of surrealistic art — Salvador Dali.

The aging, puzzling, joking and regal Spanish artist greeted more than 200 journalists, photographers and televison camera crews this week in one of the fanciest Paris hotels.

His appearance came on the eve of the opening of an expansive Dali exhibition that is to run through April 14 at the Georges Pompidou Cultural Center, also known as Beaubourg.

Dali drew more reporters than most politicians could ever hope to convene. But he refused to take any of them seriously, which was not at all surprising, considering some of the questions.

"Do you get more inspiration from the left side of your mustache or the right side?" one reporter queried.

Dali pulled on his gray, skyward-pointed mustache, which he once explained was designed to act as an antenna for cosmic radiation.

"The left side of the mustache gives me the most inspiration," the 75-year-old artist said, "along with the left testicle."

Another reporter asked what kind of music Dali would like to accompany his exhibition, which features 120 paintings, 200 drawings and 2,000 documents.

"My favorite kind of music," he quipped, "is silent music."

Dali tugged on the single white leather glove he was wearing, thumped his cane, stood up, threw out his arms, bulged his eyes and grinned.

"Are there any more questions?" he leered out at the bright lights and clicking cameras.

"Do you think young people like your art?" one middle-aged woman asked.

"All those who are younger than you do," he shot back.

Dali has been known to appear in public wearing his wife's shoes because his "were being shined" or in a black dinner jacket with tiny liqueur glasses sewn all over it.

This time he was "conservatively" dressed in a jacket, gold vest and large tie.

"My life is an uninterrupted work of art," he told the crowd, "but some of my paintings I don't understand at all."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

That's Enough Of VAT

DESPITE PROPONENT claims that a federal value added tax theoretically is a fair and effective substitute for some existing taxes, VAT will be subject to all of the same political pressures that created the current tax system.

Accordingly, there is the very real danger that the value added tax also will end up promising more benefits than it delivers.

"Opposition to the VAT springs not from its theoretical promise, but from its political potential," according to Eugene McAllister, a Washington economist and Heritage Foundation Fellow.

The case for the VAT is based on a comparison of the ideal VAT with the existing tax structure. "What proponents fail to recognize is that the same forces which fashioned the allegedly inadequate current system will shape the legislated VAT," McAllister writes.

OFTEN COMPARED to a national sales tax, a VAT is a tax assessed against the increase in the value of goods or services created during each step of production.

While the VAT could increase domestic economic activity and boost U.S. exports, McAllister said, there is a very real danger that it will be distorted by the political process into becoming a new federal money-raising mechanism.

"A one percent VAT, for example, would raise anywhere from $10-$14 billion," McAllister estimated.

This same concern was voiced by economist Norman Ture, president of the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, in a recently published monograph entitled "The Value Added Tax: Facts and Fancies" (Heritage Foundation 1979).

SAID MCALLISTER: "The basic question of the VAT debate is quite simple. Are the expected economic returns of sufficient value to warrant the risk of increased federal revenues, and hence, more spending?"

Implicit within approval is a confidence that Congress will place a greater value on the tax's economic potential than its social uses.

"The recent calls for reform and the push for the VAT itself are a testament to Congress' shifting priorities," warns McAllister.

Somewhat disconcerting is the realization that Congress has not and does not always assign the highest priority to economic effects when shaping our tax system.

CHICAGO'S overpaid transit workers, demanding an immediate cost-of-living raise, went on strike and the city's firemen voted to do likewise.

The transit walkout, stranding one million daily riders with the chill factor at 9 degrees below zero, was in defiance of a court order outlawing the strike.

The union theoretically risked a $50,000-a-day fine and the employes defied a threat they would be fired by going on strike.

Firemen, meanwhile, voted 2,356 to 658 to go out on strike in Chicago and the city's schools faced a possible shutdown because there was no money in the till to meet the payroll.

Holmes Alexander:

Electorate Hungers For Change

WASHINGTON—Rep. John Rousselot of California is running hungry for the Senate seat of Alan Cranston, and this contest says something about the famishing country—famishing for a change as it was in 1932.

An unapologetic right-winger since he first arrived as Congressman in 1961, Rousselot (until recently a John Birch Society member) feels he has in Cranston a liberal ideologue whose time has gone.

"It surprised me," Rousselot said in our interview, "that California people are still angry about the Panama Canal giveaway.

"I was against it and spoke against it in and out of the House, and Cranston says he's getting mail that runs 10 to one, even 20 to one, against the Senate treaty that turned over the canal to Panama.

"What's more, he says that doesn't matter. He thinks that the canal transfer was the right thing to do, regardless of what Californians think."

YOU COULD SAY that in this instance Sen. Cranston was showing a profile of courage, leading his people instead of following.

But Rousselot with his conservative opposition to the wild spending and timid foreign policies of both parties has been showing the independent profile for years.

It isn't the Panama issue of itself that makes Cranston vulnerable. But his entire record contradicts the Vox Pop of the turning decade, making him a man of yesterday even before the tomorrow of the 1980s.

"He's out of step with the times," says Rousselot. "There is a resentment running against all incumbents who refuse to keep pace with the trend expressed in Proposition 13 and Proposition 4," the anti-spending initiatives.

There is nothing more direct a message from the people than such initiatives, and no more anti-democratic and arrogant a political attitude than to ignore the people's hunger for change.

"POLLS AND SURVEYS everywhere show the people turning against the promise-breakers," Rousselot goes on. "There was a time that Cranston spoke up for a balanced budget, but he doesn't vote that way."

Rousselot runs hungry, but not over-confident. He finds Cranston showing 45 percent approval in his state against any yet unchosen opponent.

The representative from San Marino when matched against the senator is 16 points to the rear, but Rousselot is gaining and Cranston is backing up to him.

I asked Rousselot if there wasn't an analogy in his favor from the last California Senate race where S. I. Hayakawa, Canadian-born, in his seventies and in his first political start, swamped the incumbent Democratic Sen. John Tunney.

"No, there's nothing there. Hayakawa ran with an identity rating of 90 percent and mine is only 40 percent. I dropped the Birch membership, which is well understood in my District, but that would take too much time to explain statewide."

I reminded him that Richard Nixon lost his nerve and lost the California gubernatorial election when he repudiated Birch support, whereas Ronald Reagan had a nifty answer:

"When the Birchites endorse me, it means they're buying my ideas, not that I'm buying theirs."

This is going to be Rousselot's way, and Ronald Reagan is his presidential candidate. They both are going with the motto "Get the Government off my back and out of my pocket."

It's happened before that as California goes, so goes the nation, so it could be Rousselot and Reagan in 1980.

Sylvia Porter:

Can You Pass Simple Inflation I.Q. Test?

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following column is excerpted from Sylvia Porter's new best-selling book, "Sylvia Porter's New Money Book For The 80's.")

WASHINGTON—After having been in so relentless a price squeeze for so many years, most consumers feel they are experts on inflation.

But how much do you really know about inflation and its effects on the goods and services that you buy? To find out, take this little inflation quiz.

The answers are enclosed by parentheses and follow each question.

1. How many times during the last 10 years has inflation reached the double-digit range?
A. three times B. once C. twice
Answer: (C). In 1973-74 and in 1978-79.

2. HOW HAVE U.S. auto prices risen compared to all other U.S. goods and services during the last five years?
A. more slowly B. about the same C. more quickly D. much more quickly
Answer: (D). About 100 percent faster.

3. Let's say you went to a market in the late 1960s and spent $20 on food, how much would the same items have cost you in the late 1970s?
A. $55 B. $33 C. $42 D. $60
Answer: (C). $42.

4. Between the start and the end of the 1970s, which of the following basic necessities rose in price the fastest: food, housing, medical care, transportation, energy?
A. food B. housing C. energy D. transportation E. medical care
Answer: (C). Energy rose at an average rate of 10 percent a year during this period.

5. IN THE LATE 1970s, which of the following factors contributed most significantly to the higher cost of housing: interest rates, labor costs, land prices, building materials, or real estate taxes?
A. land prices B. real estate taxes C. labor costs and interest rates D. interest rates and building materials
Answer: (D). Interest rates and building materials.

6. How much do government-mandated safety and pollution-control devices add to the average price of an American-made car?
A. $185-$500 B. $501-$1,000 C. $1,000 or more

NOW TRY THIS quiz for a revealing insight into yourself.

How much money are you earning? How much are you spending each month? Are you managing to save enough? Should you borrow? Are you investing your dollars wisely?

These questions are of the most vital concern to you. Yet many of you seldom discuss them, even among your dearest friends and family members.

The private money matters of individuals the nation over remain a mystery. In an age that places great emphasis on full disclosure, frankness and public revelation of private lives, personal finances are still taboo.

Why? Why are private financial affairs one of the few types of affairs still locked in the closet?

Your reluctance to look hard at your own financial habits feeds on itself; you end up frightened, guilty, confused.

Since you feel neither trained nor qualified to deal with money, you procrastinate, sometimes crashing head over heels into debt.

And often you just muddle through, hoping that you can make it through life before your ignorance catches up with you, and you discover too late the answers to so many of the questions you never took the time or worked up the courage to ask.

TO AVOID SUCH futile fumbling, you must learn the basics about how not only to survive in the U.S. economic jungle but also how to triumph in the marketplace.

And when you come across financial language or situations that you do not fully understand (wage garnishment, vesting requirements, price-earnings ratios, for instance), you must find out where and how to get help. And above all, the decade of the sobering '70s has told you that you MUST: Do-it-on-your-own!

James J. Kilpatrick:

Rhodesia Totters On Precipice

WASHINGTON—On the evening of Dec. 11, Rhodesia's parliament voted 90-0 to dissolve itself. The following day Lord Soames arrived from London to take charge.

Fourteen years after its declaration of independence, Rhodesia has returned to the Commonwealth. Hopes and fears intermingle.

Every friend of that lovely and beleaguered country will pray that it all works out—that a cease-fire agreement commands obedience, that elections go smoothly, and that by early spring a newly christened Zimbabwe will find a peaceful place within the family of nations.

But let us keep fingers crossed for luck. The road ahead is as perilous as the road behind.

THERE ARE GOOD omens. With Lord Soames' arrival, economic sanctions against Rhodesia come to an effective end. The paper resolutions of the United Nations may remain on the books, but they will cease to have meaning.

Britain and the United States are prepared to resume normal relationships. That is all that matters.

A final word might be said about those UN sanctions. We expect a certain imbecility from the United Nations, but the sanctions grandly imposed upon Rhodesia in 1965 amounted to folly on a monumental scale.

The late Dean Acheson characterized them flatly as violative of the UN charter. International traders ignored the proscriptions. The sanctions merely pinched; they never strangled.

If the UN can learn something from its mistakes—a doubtful proposition—it could learn some useful lessons from its blunders in Rhodesia.

Another hopeful sign: The 90-0 vote in parliament symbolized the willingness of Rhodesia's white minority to sport the new constitution and to pull in harness on the road ahead.

DOUBTLESS IT WILL be said that the white power structure had no choice, and this is true—but only to a point. A vast difference separates willing help from passive obstructionism.

Without white skills, the fragile structure of Zimbabwe could collapse into the same ruins we observe in Mozambique and Angola.

This could happen anyway. Too much praise scarcely can be voiced for the superlative efforts exerted by Mrs. Thatcher's government in London in recent weeks; the protracted negotiations that led at last to settlement provided a model of diplomatic initiatives in action.

But it is a long, long way from the paneled drawing rooms of Downing Street to the mud huts of the Rhodesian bush.

WILL THE GUERRILLA forces lay down their arms? We don't know. The rival terrorist leaders, Joshua Nkomo ahd Robert Mugabe, publicly have accepted the agreement, but they resisted a settlement at every step of the way.

In times past, both men have voiced their contempt for the democratic process. If either of them comes finally to power in Salisbury, the guarantees of the new constitution could turn out to be mere scraps of paper.

Mugabe is supposed to have 12,000 troops based in Mozambique, Nkomo perhaps 4,000 based in Zambia, but many of these "troops" are little more than roving bands of armed thugs.

It is widely assumed that hundreds, if not thousands of these guerrillas quietly have infiltrated back into Rhodesia as negotiations proceeded in London.

During the bloody, brutal years of guerrilla warfare, an estimated 150,000 persons have fled to Zambia, Mozambique and Botswana. The repatriation of these refugees presents formidable problems.

THE GROUND RULES for the forthcoming election will provide a severe test for every faction; if Mugabe and Nkomo refuse to commit themselves to a far and free outcome, the whole delicate fabric swiftly could unravel.

Rhodesia is a small country, but as Daniel Webster supposedly said of Dartmouth College, there are those who love it.

Under the generally benign rule of British governors and later of Prime Minister Ian Smith, Rhodesia's black people have gained the highest standards of literacy, health care and personal income in all of Africa.

Free of sanctions, a soundly based economy could quickly recover. It is now pretty much up to Mugabe and Nkomo to say whether wounds fester, or whether the wounds heal.

Nicaraguan Interpreter's Body Moved To Cemetery Near Home

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Six months ago, on June 20, millions of Americans watched with horror the killing of ABC television correspondent Bill Stewart by a member of the Nicaraguan National Guard.

Stewart was one of an estimated 40,000 casualties of the bloody Nicaraguan conflict. But many people, including some high-level members of the victorious Sandinista National Liberation Front, believe his death shortened the war.

No other single event so consolidated outside pressure against former President Anastasio Somoza's corrupt regime.

Within days, at a special meeting of the Organization of American States, U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance called for Somoza's immediate resignation.

But one other person died along with Stewart on that June afternoon, his death forgotten by all but a few.

He was Juan Francisco Espinoza, a quiet, 26-year-old Nicaraguan who had been hired as Stewart's interpreter. He had gone ahead of Stewart to ask permission from the soldiers to film them at their barricade.

Espinoza took a bullet in the head from a national guardsman's rifle. Moments later Stewart, unable to communicate with his executioners, suffered the same fate.

Stunned residents who witnessed the killings from their windows said the national guardsmen hastily buried the young Espinoza on the spot where they killed him.

Six months after Juan's death, Mrs. Castro, with part of the insurance money she recently received from ABC, is having a cement tombstone placed on his new grave in a cemetery near her home.

"I'm not the only mother who has lost a son," said Mrs. Castro, who still dresses in black. "But it has been a struggle."

A widow with 11 children, Mrs. Castro earned $60 per month cleaning in an airport. Two grown sons and Juan chipped in wages from sporadic work to keep the family on its feet.

Juan, a former shoeshine boy, was educated by a benefactor impressed by the boy's eagerness and honesty. He graduated from high school in the United States.

He was going to make something of himself, Mrs. Castro said.

Oxford University Press' New Book Lists 'Correct' Quotes

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — Nowhere in the Bible will you find "The lion shall lie down with the lamb." Humphrey Bogart did not say, "Play it again, Sam" and Mae West didn't say "Come up and see me sometime."

It's the wolf who dwells with the lamb. Bogart said, "If she can stand it I can. Play it." And Miss West's actual words, with her inimitable leer, were, "Why don't you come up sometime, see me?"

The correct quotes are among the quotations from 1,536 authors from Abelard to Zola in the revised compendium of wisdom and wit, "The Oxford Dictionary of Quotations," published by the Oxford University Press.

"That 'immortal' phrase of Sherlock Holmes, 'Elementary, my dear Watson,' appears nowhere in the stories of Conan Doyle," said OUP publicist Elizabeth Knight, adding that the editors spent a lot of time chasing "ghost" quotations, which were supposed to have been said but turned out to be garbled versions or non-existent.

Assembling such a book sounds like a difficult job.

"It was," Betty Palmer, who with Richard Brain edited the 900-page volume, said in an interview. "We assembled a panel of 20 journalists, writers, clergymen, and even a philosopher, and got them to write down every quotation they could think of, and circulated each one to the other members. If it got a vote of seven, eight or nine, it got in."

In assembling the volume, the editors also looked at other collections of quotations and double-checked those they liked for accuracy of source.

"Of the greatest use was an enormous file, which goes back years, of letters from the public suggesting quotations," Mrs. Palmer said.

The dictionary first appeared in 1941, underwent a slight revision in 1953 and in this latest version has 40 percent new material. Newcomers include writers of the past 40 years such as Noel Coward, Graham Greene, Nancy Mitford and others whose work was little known or undervalued at the time of the earlier editions.

Coward wrote of the Taj Mahal in "Private Lives": "It didn't look like a biscuit box, did it? I've always felt that it might."

"Any victim demands allegiance" is from Greene's "The Heart of the Matter." And in "The Pursuit of Love" Mitford expressed what many feel is a national sentiment; "Abroad is unutterrably bloody and foreigners are fiends."

As usual, the most quoted writer is Shakespeare, followed in descending order by the Bible, the Prayer Book, Tennyson, Milton, Johnson, Kipling, Browning, Dickens and Byron.

With 75 pages, Shakespeare is master of the field, reminding one perhaps, of the schoolboy who said that Shakespeare was "a man who wrote quotations."

The bard also appears in 31 quotations about him by other writers. The naturalist Charles Darwin said he found Shakespeare "intolerably dull," while the poet John Keats thanked God that he could read and understand him.

The new dictionary has jolly quotes, too.

"The lunches of 57 years had caused his chest to slip down to the mezzanine floor," wrote P.G. Wodehouse in "Chester Forgets Himself."

And old favorites. It is the task of British prime ministers to appoint bishops. Lord Melbourne, twice premier under Queen Victoria, said of the task: "Damn it all, another bishop dead — I verily believe they die to vex me."

Pope Tallies Flying Time

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — If Pope John Paul II maintains the current pace of his travels abroad, he could soon earn the title of "the flying pontiff."

Italian air force officers received in audience Monday by John Paul told him he has already chalked up 104 flying hours, including those inside Italy in Air Force helicopters.

They presented him with the insignia of an air force observer, a flaming brand with wings on either side.

The officers calculated that if John Paul carries on at his present pace, he will have clocked 1,560 flying hours after a 15-year reign.

Last week, the pope said he hoped soon to visit Haiti and he is also due to visit the Philippines.

Those two trips alone should bring him close to Paul VI's mark.

McDade Tells Why Victim Shot

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Murder defendant Nathaniel McDade this morning told a jury he intended to kill Arthur Lee Jones the early morning of Sept. 8.

But the shooting was prompted because, according to the 25-year-old defendant, "I was scared."

McDade took the 140th District Court witness stand this morning in his own defense and told the jury he had been arguing with Jones about six hours before the fatal shooting in an East Lubbock pool hall. McDade said the argument was over some clothing Jones was wearing which belonged to McDade.

The slender, soft-spoken defendant also related a series of other arguments the night of Sept. 7, ranging from ownership of a pair of boots to drugs.

McDade said he went to the apartment complex in the 400 block of 17th Street, outside of which Jones was fatally shot in the head, because he thought his girlfriend might be there taking drugs.

Testimony Tuesday afternoon indicated one apartment there was a frequent gathering place for drug users and prostitutes. McDade told the five-woman, seven-man jury he took a gun with him because of the character of the persons usually at the apartment.

McDade said he saw the 47-year-old Jones at the apartment complex, and as the defendant was leaving with his girlfriend, Jones was standing on the sidewalk south of the building. McDade said he once again approached Jones about the clothing.

After a brief discussion, McDade said in response to questions from defense counsel Floyd Holder, Jones "told me either he'd drop me or I'd drop him."

"Then he went for his pocket, and I went for mine," McDade testified.

The defendant said he had seen Jones leave the apartment with a man he believed was "packing a piece" and thought Jones might have gotten the gun from the other man.

"But did you ever see a gun in Arthur Lee Jones' possession that night?" asked Travis Ware, assistant criminal district atttorney.

"Well he could have had one when he got shot," McDade replied.

"But you never actually saw a weapon," Ware continued.

"No, I didn't see one, like he didn't see mine," McDade said.

Monday, Lovis Clifton, who also lives at the 17th Street apartment complex, said he saw Jones standing on the sidewalk facing the apartment complex when McDade came up behind Jones. Clifton said when Jones turned to see who was behind him, McDade pulled a nickle-plated pistol and fired once at Jones' head.

After the shooting, Clifton testified, McDade walked away from Jones and then returned and it appeared he was going to kick the lifeless body.

Clifton said he told McDade to leave Jones alone because he was dead. "He (McDade) said 'He ought to be dead,' and then walked back down the street," Clifton said.

On cross-examination, however, Clifton told defense counsel Holder, he was talking to another man and really didn't give his full attention to the happenings between the defendant and Jones.

"The pistol went off and I looked," Clifton said.

Holder also rigorously questioned the observations of the other witnesses called Tuesday afternoon by prosecutors Mark McBride and Ware.

One witness, William Louis Thomas, told the jury panel he followed McDade out to the sidewalk where Jones was standing facing the street. Thomas said McDade positioned himself to the right of Jones and also faced the street.

And Thomas testified that it looked as if the gun McDade fired was next to Jones' head when it went off. Thomas said he was near enough to suffer powder burns around his eyes from the bullet which struck Jones in the right-middle section of his forehead.

Thomas said after the shooting, McDade "said something about he (Jones) ought to be dead and he's (McDade) going to kill a bunch more."

McDade re-entered the apartment then, Thomas said, and threatened another man with the pistol.

The man McDade allegedly threatened after the shooting incident, Joe Lee Mackey, told the jury Jones was angry with McDade because of some drugs Jones had given one of McDade's female friends.

Mackey said it was his understanding Jones believed McDade had told police Jones gave a woman some methadone, a drug most commonly used by recovering heroin addicts.

Mackey said that before the 1:30 a.m. Sept. 8 shooting, McDade and Jones had exchanged words at a 13th Street pool hall and Jones left. He said the pair also argued about the ownership of clothing before going into the 17th Street apartment before the shooting.

Mackey told the jury he saw Jones leave the apartment, followed about a minute later by McDade and then heard a shot. Mackey said McDade came back into the apartment, told Mackey he wanted some clothing back and "rapped me across the head with the pistol."

After being struck by McDade, Mackey testified, he ran from the apartment and hid behind a cafe down the street. He said he saw McDade, his female companion and her son walk down the street a few moments later, McDade still carrying the pistol.

A third witness to the incident said he saw McDade and Jones standing as described by Thomas, but that he never saw Thomas in the immediate area. And, Robert Earl Wilson said, he could not say that Jones had been standing in the unthreatening position of having his arms crossed against his chest.

Wilson, the man who drove McDade from his 1515 Ave. C apartment to the shooting site, said the "street talk" after the shooting was that Jones had his arms crossed. Clifton and Thomas testified that was how Jones was standing when McDade shot him.

Wilson also said the gun was about five inches from Jones head, not next to it as Thomas had testified. The gun McDade used, Wilson said, was Wilson's .38-caliber nickle-plated pistol.

After the shooting, Wilson said, he got in his car and left and later picked McDade up as he was walking toward Avenue A. Later Sept. 8, Wilson said, he accompanied McDade to the police department, where McDade turned himself in to authorities.

Woman Not Harmed In Shooting Incident

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The widow of a former Lubbock police captain escaped injury Tuesday night when a man broke into her house and shot at her before fleeing.

Inez Forrester, widow of Capt. Leonard W. (Skeet) Forrester, who was head of the detective division until his death in 1968, told police a man entered her southeast Lubbock residence about 10:45 p.m., fired two shots at her and then fled.

Both of the .22-caliber bullets missed her by about a foot, according to investigating officers.

The intruder, described as a young, black man, apparently left behind a chunk of his skin. Police said a piece of skin, about 1½ inches long and ¼-inch wide, was found hanging from broken glass on the front storm door.

"Blood and flesh (were also) found on the storm door glass and porch and driveway," reports stated.

Police said the skin and blood apparently came from the hand or arm of the suspect, who remained at large at noon today. There was no blood in Mrs. Forrester's living room — where shots were fired — indicating the man was injured as he left the house.

Mrs. Forrester said she awoke when her doorbell rang, but that she refused to answer it because of the time of night. She said she called a neighbor and asked him to check outside her house after the ringing stopped and then started up again.

When the 58-year-old woman began hearing tapping on her front door, she got up and started walking toward the living room. When she entered the room, the overhead light came on and she found herself confronted by the pistol-wielding man.

The intruder "took aim and started shooting" at Mrs. Forrester, Cpl. Jim Taylor stated in his report. One of the bullets ricocheted off a lamp and struck a wall furnace. The slug was found near the furnace, police said.

The other bullet penetrated the south wall of the living room.

After being shot at, Mrs. Forrester began screaming and running towards her bedroom, according to police.

Mrs. Forrester's 56-year-old neighbor said he heard the gunfire and started walking towards the woman's house when he saw the suspect run out her front door.

He said the man turned and fired his weapon once at him. The intruder missed his target and began running west, reports indicate.

The woman and neighbor told police they never saw the gunman get into a vehicle.

The neighbor said that rather than chasing the suspect, he went into Mrs. Forrester's house and found her uninjured.

An investigation revealed the burglar apparently gained entrance into the house by breaking the glass storm door and jimmying open the inner door, possibly with a screwdriver.

Capt. Wayne Love, who took over as head of the detective division after Forrester died of cancer in January 1968, said he felt the suspect was just surprised by the late captain's wife, and that she was not the target for a criminal seeking revenge against the dead policeman.

"He was just a surprised burglar in my opinion," Love said. "He was too young to have even been around when Forrester was captain."

The suspect was described as a black man in his late teens or early 20s, wearing a brown pullover short-sleeved shirt. Mrs. Forrester said the man was about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, and sported a small mustache and a short afro haircut.

Police did not have a suspect in custody by noon today, Love said.

Forrester, who was 51 when he died, joined the Lubbock Police Department in 1942. After serving in the Marine Corps from 1943 to 1946, he rejoined the department and soon became a desk sergeant and detective sergeant.

Forrester became a captain and inspector of police in 1951 and deputy chief of detectives in 1953. He was appointed head of the detective division in 1955.

Council To Discuss Mortgage Proposal

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The City Council will hold a special meeting at 12:45 p.m. Thursday to discuss establishing a tax-exempt mortgage bond program and to set up hearings on a proposed South Plains Electric Co-op rate increase.

The council had been slowly moving towards the establishment of a program under which tax-exempt bonds would be sold to make money available to lenders for home loans.

However, rumored Congressional action on regulating the sale of the bonds has prompted the council to initiate the program by forming a non-profit corporation to oversee the program.

A bill now under consideration by the U.S. House would prohibit any such bond program in Lubbock by requiring cities to have taken steps to begin such a program before April 24, 1979.

However, City Manager Larry Cunningham said he has learned that bill may be amended on the House floor to allow bond programs in cities which took affirmative steps before Dec. 31, 1979.

To ensure the city would qualify under such an amendment, the council will consider applying for a non-profit corporation charter from the Secretary of State for the corporation which would govern the bond program.

The council would appoint the board of directors of the corporation as required by state law.

The opposition of local lenders to the bond program was a primary reason for the council's foot-dragging on the bonds. But council members now say those lenders have radically changed their stance and now support the program.

Lubbock homebuilders and real estate dealers also are pushing the bond program to provide some mortgage money in Lubbock.

Also at the meeting, council members will consider a proposed rate increase sought by South Plains Electric Cooperative.

Under the state Public Utility Regulatory Act, the council has the authority to suspend the rates for 120 days to permit an examination of the proposed changes.

The co-op had proposed an effective date of Jan. 1, so council action to suspend the rates would delay implementation of the new rate structure until April 30.

Cunningham said he expects the council to set a time for hearings on the proposed rates to determine if they are justified.

Many of the customers served by the co-op in Lubbock reside in areas recently annexed by the city. Which utility should serve those areas is a matter of litigation in the courts and before the Public Utility Commission.

Coupons Brought Big Savings

By United Press International

The great airline coupon war is over with the federal government and some fast-moving entrepreneurs counting themselves among the big winners on the half-fare discounts.

The government's General Services Administration estimates it saved taxpayers at least $250,000 through the 9,998 coupons it purchased and distributed to 40 federal agencies for employee air travel.

Dealers, who got into business last summer when United and American Airlines issued the half-fare coupons, turned handsome profits by collecting the script before its value was known and reselling the coupons to the government, corporations and individuals.

"It was an adventure," said Peter Featherston, 22, of Norwalk, Conn., who worked with his younger brother to turn a $27 investment in coupons into "a lot more than $10,000."

The last shot in the coupon war came at midnight Saturday when all travel using the discount had to be completed. United and American this week estimated that no more than 65 percent of the coupons were redeemed, meaning some 1.6 million of the 4.3 million coupons distributed went unused.

United originated the coupons in May as a come-back promotion after a 58-day machinists strike. American responded with its own coupons. Trans World and Pan American also honored their competitors' coupons on a limited basis.

GSA, which acts as the government's landlord and purchasing agent, was late getting into the coupon game but made up for lost time with huge block purchases from three coupon dealers, including Featherston.

"If we had known about this in advance we could have gotten in a couple of months earlier and saved some more money," said Miles Manchester, assistant commissioner for transportation and travel management at GSA's Washington headquarters.

Government purchases were delayed, Manchester said, by dealer demands for payment before the coupons were used and a feeling by some officials that the government shouldn't get involved with the hastily organized middleman operations selling the script.

"From my point of view, it was a good example of the free enterprise system," said Manchester. Government lawyers finally hammered out a 10-page contract under which dealers provided coupons on consignment so GSA could return unused discounts.

Manchester said the government negotiated most coupon purchases for about $38 with its maximum price contract being $51. Agencies also collected coupons on their own from employees receiving them on earlier travel.

Among the biggest federal users of coupons was the Air Force, which took 1,100 from GSA. The Transportation Department ordered 1,800 and the Navy almost 1,400. The Securities and Exchange Commission, a relatively small agency, took 10 coupons.

Manchester said GSA won't have exact figures on coupon usage and how much the government shaved off its travel bill until next month. He estimated, however, that 60 percent were redeemed for an approximate savings of $250,000 after deducting coupon costs. The savings could almost double in the unlikely event all the government coupons were used.

Dealers including Featherston said this week they were caught with some now-worthless coupons but still came out way ahead on the mini-industry they created. Analysts expect airlines to make future coupon offers but on a more limited basis for new route promotions and other special circumstances.

Barge Serves As Concert Hall

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sunlight slanted through the narrow leaded windows of the converted barge onto the small audience, intently listening to the musician playing the lute only inches away.

The sound of the music mixed with the calls of gulls and the gentle lapping of the water outside the moored craft on the East River at the foot of the Brooklyn Bridge, across from Manhattan. A small fire crackled in the fireplace behind the musician.

It was another full-house performance at Bargemusic Ltd., the one-woman non-profit project of a dynamo named Olga Bloom. She sat at the back of the 120-foot barge, which also serves as her home, and drank in the scene with a sense of satisfaction.

The 60-year-old retired viola player defied everyone who said it couldn't be done and succeeded in putting together a community concert hall to showcase individual musical talent on a small enough basis to "make the audience become a part of it."

Furthermore, she managed to locate it on the virtually unexploited east waterfront with a spectacular view of lower Manhattan and managed to lure city folks across the bridge to enjoy it.

"They all said I had rocks in my head," she said, chuckling to herself. Being unorthodox seemed second nature to the outspoken, weathered-looking Mrs. Bloom.

She started the project when it occurred to her after years of playing commercially "on Broadway, ballets, symphonies, you name it" that musicians rarely got to develop their talent as they wanted. She is from Boston and studied at the New England Conservatory and Boston University.

She and her late husband, Tobias Bloom, who played the violin with Toscanini, would often host small groups of musicians in their home. She felt a lot of talent never got fully used in larger orchestras.

"I wanted to be able to establish a full-time dependable income for educated performers who would be able to perform for a more intimate group," she said. "Never mind showcasing for nothing. They've been doing that and starving for centuries."

The $5 admission fee from the barge concerts, which seat about 100, and grants allow Mrs. Bloom to provide an income for her resident five-member chamber group. They perform on Sundays at 4 p.m.

Shari Says Trick Easy To Perform

By SHARI LEWIS

This is absolutely the easiest card trick in the world. Mind you, that doesn't mean that it's not good. It is!

Here's what happens: A person picks a card, and you can tell immediately which card they picked.

How? Well, most decks have a design on the back. Set up the whole pack so that the designs on the cards are all facing the same way.

Now you can ask someone to take a card. As he or she is looking at it, you turn the rest of the deck (which you are holding in your hand) around so that the card gets put back facing the other way.

That selected card will be the only backwards card in the deck. Just look through the backs of the cards and you can't miss it!

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: What kind of slot machine is used most in the United States?

ANSWER: The telephone.

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: In earlier columns I asked the questions, "What word contains all of the vowels — a e i o u? "What word contains all of the vowels in order?" The answers? Questionable and facetiously. Louis N. Pennisi of Brooklyn, N.Y., says he knows another word containing the five vowels in order. Can you figure out what the word is? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Have you any one particular Christmas anecdote you like to think back to? — Judy W., North Miami Beach.

A: Not only any, but many. Guess our favorite is the time we asked Shirley Temple when she stopped believing in Santa Claus. She pondered a moment, then smiled and answered: "I remember that clearly. It was when Mother took me to the biggest store in Hollywood, and after sitting on Santa's lap, as we started to leave he asked for my autograph!

Comment: The Good Old Days were when a stranger with a long white beard was affectionately hailed as a Saintly Santa. Since the emergence on the scene of the ayatollah, he's a meanie symbol of Satanism.

Personal Postcard: Steve Allen's full name has never flashed on a marquee or in TV Best-Bet listings. It's Stephen Valentine Patrick Williams! When Joe Abrell tracked town a rumor that Steve had a yen to resume hosting the "Tonight" show if and when Johnny Carson vacates it, Allen had a retort ready. Said a big no — that it would be taking a giant step backward, not forward. "It's a brain-numbing assignment!" — or words to that effect. Especially to one of the most versitalented and wittiest persons in all phases of the creative arts.

Oh the Upbeat: It was Golda Meir who said: Don't be humble — you're not THAT great!"

Richard Nixon told a newsmag regarding the suggestion that he rewrite the title of his best seller ("My Six Crises") to include Watergate: "History will justifiably record that my handling of the Watergate crisis was an unmitigated disaster!"

Veteran telephone talk show host Jackie Eigen, who played out a string of thousands of off-the-cuff late night chummy chatter radio session in such cities as New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Miami-Ft. Lauderdale, will title his memoirs "The Greats and the Ingrates."

The purse at stake is said to be a mere $2.54 billion (not to be confused with MILLION bucks). The two men spent some hours recently in Manhattan where the litigant gave a deposition to the lawyer.

Sudden Thought: Between inflation pollution and all of our other headaches this happy season, you can't afford to pour oil on trouble waters — or vice versa.

U.S. TV Makers Seek Restrictions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American television-making industry and its labor unions want President Carter to restrict imports of color television sets from Japan, Korea and Taiwan for another three years.

The U.S. International Trade Commission was asked this week by an industry-labor coalition for a three-year extension of the current marketing agreements that restrict such imports.

The ITC will send its recommendation to President Carter for his approval. Current quotas expire June 30.

Allen Dawson, Corning Glass Works executive vice president, and co-chairman of the coalition called the Committee to Preserve American Color Television, predicted a bleak future for the industry if the restrictions were not maintained.

"If the limitations are removed from imports of color television receivers next July, the domestic color TV industry will disappear within a very few years," predicted Dawson.

Dawson was joined at a news conference by Jacob Clayman, past president of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department, who is the other coalition co-chairman.

The current executive order, initiated on July 1, 1977, limits annual Japanese exports of color TVs to the United States to 1.75 million units. Additional agreements limited imports of sets from Korea and Taiwan.

"We are fighting for the survival" of the industry, said Clayman. He noted there are only 26,000 jobs in the color TV industry now, compared to 42,000 in 1972.

"The United States industry has not recovered from the shock of the flood of imports" during the early 1970s, Clayman said.

Clayman said the agreements have not forced up the price of TV sets as had been feared.

"The plain fact is that consumer prices have not gone up," he said.

Dawson said domestic production has improved since the agreements, up from 6.4 million sets in a 12-month period before the import relief to 8.6 million sets in the second year of the restraint program. Nevertheless, he said production capacity was only 46 percent, up from 38 percent before the agreements.

Hypertension Treatment Upheld

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A government-supported study proving that careful, systematic treatment for high blood pressure saves lives is expected to produce sharp changes in the way doctors deal with the disorder.

The study began in 1972 and involved 10,900 people with various degrees of high blood pressure in 14 communities across the nation. Half received specialized treatment with increasingly powerful drugs and half received routine care.

Those in the group that received systematic care in special hypertension treatment centers had death rates from all causes 17 percent lower over five years than those who received standard care from their regular doctors.

"This was not a case of comparing good care with no care," said Dr. Robert L. Levy, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute. "It was a comparison of aggressive care versus the typical care one would find in our communities.

"And the fact that the care routinely given in communities today for high blood pressure has improved considerably over recent years just adds to the significance of this study and to the basic finding that systematic care of high blood pressure saves lives."

Earlier studies had shown that aggressive drug treatment for people with very high blood pressure was effective. But it had not been demonstrated that it was worthwhile to treat 24 million Americans with mild hypertension — with diastolic blood pressure between 90 and 104.

As a result, physicians have been conservative about treating people with mild high blood pressure and often were not prescribing drugs.

"This study clearly demonstrates that the systematic, effective treatment of mild hypertension may reduce premature deaths by 20 percent," Levy said.

Dr. Richard D. Remington, professor of public health at the University of Michigan, said any doubt about the value of treatment for mild hypertension is now gone.

"There should be a big change in the practice of medicine in this regard," he said.

Dr. B. Franj Polk, who helped direct the study in Boston for the Harvard Medical School, said not only would the study findings encourage more aggressive treatment for high blood pressure, but they will probably stimulate additional research in the field.

"As exciting as the (program) results are, it should be much more rewarding to prevent the development of elevated blood pressure rather than treat with medication for a lifetime."

Polk said not enough is known yet about non-drug ways to treat high blood pressure.

"We suspect that weight loss, salt reduction, exercise or meditation may be important, but more work needs to be done to assess their roles."

In summing up the significance of the $70 million study, Levy said:

"To the millions of Americans who have high blood pressure, this study says: Get on treatment and stay on treatment. It will mean a much longer life, more years to spend with your loved ones."

House, Senate Conferees Make Little Progress On Two Bills

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate conferees are making only halting progress toward compromise on two key energy bills.

Separate Senate-House conference committees on the so-called "fasttrack" or Energy Mobilization Board bill and the synthetic fuel or Energy Security Corporation bill failed to reach final agreement this week.

In a goodwill gesture to environmentalists, Senate conferees Monday also rejected a House "compromise" proposal for waiving certain federal laws that get in the way of energy projects designated as crucial by the proposed mobilization board.

"I don't see where there's any way we can get a waiver provision," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., telling the House conferees the Senate side felt it owed a debt to environmental foes of the waiver provision.

"They could have conducted guerrilla warfare, but they didn't," he said, complimenting environmentalists for cooperation.

The Senate believes it can expedite or "fasttrack" crucial energy projects by giving the proposed mobilization board power to streamline time-consuming regulatory processes.

Johnston asked the House conferees to consider a Senate compromise that would exempt key energy projects from burdensome state or local laws such as adverse zoning ordinances enacted after they were under way.

Later in the day, another joint conference panel failed to resolve House-Senate differences over a synthetic fuels development bill.

"I'd say that we are mired hub deep," remarked Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., after an hour of discussion produced no agreement.

Senate conferees met afterward to discuss a House proposal that sought to preserve in the final legislation at least some elements of the $3 billion House measure authored by Rep. William Moorhead, D-Pa.

Theologian Removed From Post

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican removed Professor Hans Kung, one of Western Europe's leading liberal theologians, from his teaching post in West Germany this week and declared he can no longer be considered a Roman Catholic theologian.

In a statement approved by Pope John Paul II, the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the former Holy Office, said Kung has fallen short in his writings "of the integrity of the truth of the Catholic faith and therefore he can no longer be considered a Catholic theologian nor exercise his teaching task."

Kung, a 51-year-old native of Switzerland, had been professor of dogmatic and ecumenical theology and Director of the Institute for Ecumenical Research at the University of Tuebingen since 1963. He was not immediately available for comment.

Kung was one of three liberal European theologians under investigation by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, investigations which aroused concern in liberal quarters of the church that the pope was throwing his influence behind ultra-conservative factions in the Vatican Curia, the central administration of the church.

However, the announcement claimed that the cases of Kung and the other two, Edward Schillebeeckx and Jacques Tohier, were independent of each other.

Schillebeeckx underwent two days of questioning by a commission from the Congregation last week on his views, which some conservative churchmen charge lean toward heresy.

Early this month, the Vatican Radio said the views of Kung, Belgian-born Schillebeeckx and Dutch-born Edward Schoonenberg were almost heretical. It said that the three theologians questioned the main pillar of Roman Catholic doctrine, that Jesus is man and God at the same time.

The criticism came in an interview with a leading Jesuit theologian, Jean Galot, who compared the teachings of the three men to Arianism, the heresy started by Arius, a priest in the 4th century, which spread throughout the Christian world of the time.

Vatican sources said then that Pope John Paul had examined the case of the three theologians with a top official of the Vatican-based International Theological Commission.

Joseph Cardinal Hoeffner, chairman of the German Bishops' Conference, said at a news conference today that the Vatican sent the wording of its decision by messenger to Kung this morning. Hoeffner said he regretted the painful step had to be taken, "But he is not excluded from the church and remains a priest."

In Amsterdam, an associate of one of Holland's bishops said "We were stupified by what has been done to Kung."

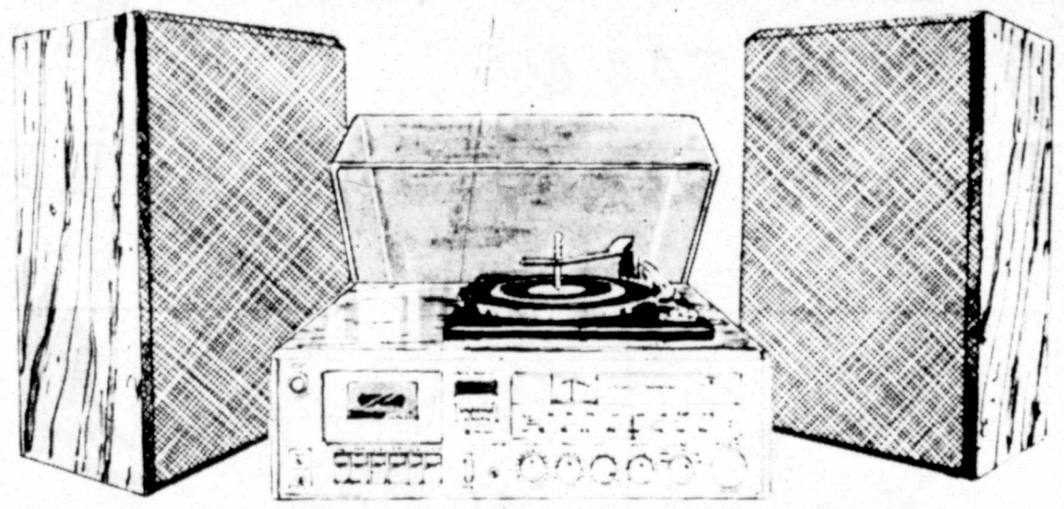

Only last month, said the associate, who asked not to be named, Kung had told him the church was in for a "new inquisition."

The Rev. Ben Vredebregt, a friend and associate of Schillebeeckx, said the Kung decision came as a surprise to Schillebeeckx, but that the theologian had no immediate comment.

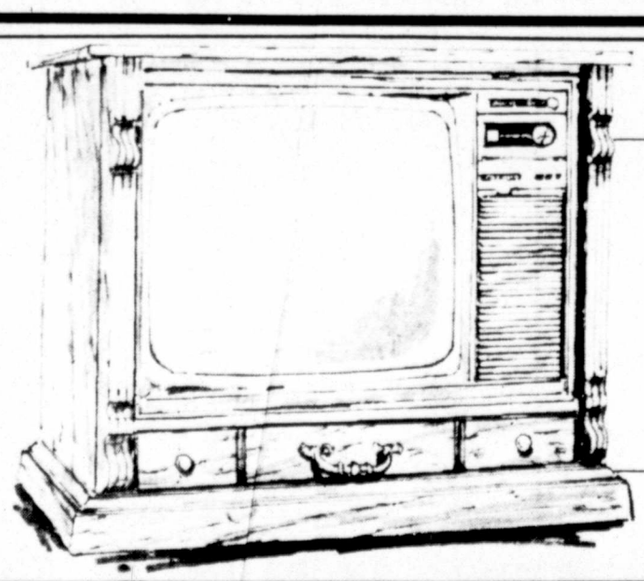

Church sources in Amsterdam said there were differences between Schillebeeckx' case and Kung's. "Cardinal Willebrands is on the side of Schillebeeckx, but the German bishops are certainly not on the side of Kung," said one source. Another difference was that Kung had consistently refused to go to Rome, but Schillebeeckx had gone willingly to put his point of view to the congregation for the doctrine of the faith, they said.

Kung was served notice to stop teaching once before, in 1975, after six years of investigations into two of his books.

Filibuster Attempt Falters

By LEE BYRD

WASHINGTON (AP) — When silence is golden, Sen. William Armstrong confesses his gilt.

The Colorado Republican found himself alone on the Senate floor late one night last week during the filibuster over oil tax legislation. But like a trouper, he continued the colloquy with nothing to say and nobody to listen.

"I must confess I am somewhat perplexed," he said. "I discover that the chamber is virtually empty, and I wonder if somehow someone has circulated the word that I was about to make a speech at this time."

Armstrong pressed on, awaiting the return of a GOP colleague, though he admitted that "it is not plain to me why, if I had words of great wisdom to speak at this time, which I do not, it would be in aid of any known good cause for me to do so."

Finally Armstrong breathed a sigh of relief when he saw Bob Dole, R-Kan., reenter the chamber with Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia. Their mutual arrival, he suggested, surely meant that a backstage compromise had been reached on the logjam.

But Dole dashed his hopes. "We came from different directions," said the Kansas senator.

At that, Armstrong could take no more. "Mr. President, I am left speechless," he said. Byrd then had to order a quorum call the keep the session going.

Term Confuses Solon

The term "D & C" came up during the House debate on an abortion amendment and left Rep. George E. Danielson, D-Calif., puzzled. He turned for help to Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., a physician.

"I am a layman," Danielson said. "What in the world is a DNC? It is not the Democratic National Committee, I know that."

O'Neill Out In Cold

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill summoned his 434 colleagues into session an hour early. As reporters awaited the speaker's arrival for his pre-session news briefing, press aide Gary Hymel entered the office to apologize.

"The speaker's still out in the cold," he said. Seems O'Neill had forgotten to mention the early start to his driver.

Watchdog Title Upheld

Rep. Robert E. Bauman, R-Md., was arguing against a spending bill when he paused to reflect that "From time to time I have been characterized in the newspapers as 'the watchdog of the House.'

"If indeed I ever deserved that title," he said, "I want to say about this bill:

University Uses Fireworks To Scare Off Birds

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — It sounded and looked like a New Year's Eve celebration but the party was about over for millions of blackbirds, starlings, gackles and cowbirds who roost near the campus of Mississippi State University.

University officials, under the supervision of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, used fireworks and amplified shotgun sounds this week to scare off an estimated 5 million to 10 million birds as they returned to their nesting area.

Area residents had complained about the noise and the smell of the manure coming from the 25-acre site located between the campus and an affluent residential area.

Teams of noisemakers spread out and shot off fireworks for an hour while loudspeakers mounted on cars blared noises. Officials plan to continue the noisy routine for two more days.

Bobby Tramel, state supervisor for the Fish and Wildlife Service, said every other attempt by the Service to relocate roosts has been successful. He estimated that over half the birds left the roost after this week's offensive.

"By Saturday night 98 percent of the birds will be roosting elsewhere," Tramel predicted.

Health officials at Mississippi State said the relocation of the birds was necessary for public health.

"It was obvious that the bird population had increased to the point that a wider roosting area was needed," said Dr. John C. Longest, director of Student Health at Mississippi State and a nearby resident.

"The noise of the birds migrating morning and evening over their property and the stench of bird manure plus public health considerations made it necessary that this roosting area be disrupted," Longest said.

University officials said the three-day operation would cost about $1,200 in university funds.

BIG SWARM

The greatest swarm of desert locusts ever recorded consisted of an estimated 250 billion extended over about 2,000 square miles, observed crossing the Red Sea in 1889.

Discount Bonds Offer Tax Advantages To Many

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the legacies of the sharp rise in interest rates over the past two years is the wide selection of so-called "discount" bonds available to today's investors.

The word "discount" is used so many different ways in business and finance that it often causes dilation of the pupils and other symptoms of profound apathy in anyone not familiar with what's being discussed.

There is the Federal Reserve's discount rate, talk of the stock market discounting a future recession, even the local discount store whose prices may or may not be a bargain.

But in the case of discount bonds, the idea is pretty straightforward. It refers to bonds whose prices have declined since they were issued because interest rates have risen in the interim.

These bonds generally offer lower current income than bonds being issued at today's prevailing rates. But when you add in the capital gains that will come when the bond is redeemed at face value the day it matures, the over-all return looks much better.

And since capital gains get special treatment under the tax laws, discount bonds offer a tax advantage for many people as well.

"Discount bonds should not be confused with 'junk bonds,'" Martha J. Mulligan, a bond-market analyst at the brokerage firm of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., pointed out in a recent report.

"Junk bonds are bonds of doubtful creditworthiness, or ability to pay interest and principal at maturity. Junk bonds are sold with higher yields than current markets because of the financial problems of the issuing company.

"Discount bonds, on the other hand, may be of any quality from the highest to the lowest creditworthiness," Miss Mulligan said.

Their discount stems from these basic facts: Yields on all bonds, whether issued yesterday or 20 years ago, tend to move up and down with fluctuations in other interest rates.

The stated, or "coupon," interest rate on a bond is fixed. So for the actual return on an existing bond to keep pace with current market conditions, its price must change — rising when interest rates fall, falling when interest rates rise.

With most rates currently near all-time highs, it stands to reason that nearly all older bonds now sell below their face value. Miss Mulligan cites the hypothetical example of a bond issued long ago at 5 percent (compared with today's rates of 10-percent plus).

From a face value of $1,000 per bond, the price has declined to $616, so that the $50 annual interest payment amounts to a little more than an 8 percent return.

But when the bond matures in, say, 15 years, the issuer is obligated to pay off $1,000 on each bond, and so today's buyer will net an additional $384 in capital gains. If that capital gain is considered as part of the yield on the investment, then the total annual "yield to maturity" on the bond works out to 12.27 percent.

The capital gain, in addition, isn't taxed as ordinary income, the way bond interest payments are. Under current tax laws, 60 percent of any capital gain is exempt from taxes.

With such features going for it, Miss Mulligan points out, discount bonds can be useful for a broad array of financial purposes — retirement and estate planning, financing future college expenses, and more.

Of course, she acknowledges, they carry risks as well as potential rewards. One of the disadvantages — lower current income than a new bond — has already been mentioned.

Another important drawback is simple market risk. People who bought that discount bond for $800 a few years back must take a capital loss if they must sell it now rather than holding it to maturity.

If interest rates were to go higher still, those who buy it for $616 would soon find themselves in a similar position. For that reason, Miss Mulligan says, an important consideration in deciding whether to buy a discount bond is "timeliness of the current market environment and the outlook for interest rates."

Old Jewelry Bringing High Prices

By MARY TOBIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Americans are buying gold jewelry in record numbers and they are selling their old jewelry for high prices. Even the gold fillings in teeth are worth their weight in it.

Industry sources estimate the average American household has about $150 worth of gold in the attic or stashed away in drawers or closets.

Empire Diamond and Gold Buying Service is paying the market price for that gold and customers are filling the waiting room to take advantage of the record prices, now over $450 an ounce.

Jack Broad, 70, owner of Empire, which was a charter tenant in the Empire State Building when it opened in 1931, said he buys about $250,000 worth of gold fillings a year and thinks "probably several million dollars worth of used gold fillings are purchased annually throughout the country."

But most of Empire's customers are selling jewelry. They give various reasons — "the insurance is too high" or "I'm afraid of robbery."

But Broad said the principal reason is the public "is more aware that gold is worth something and they want to take advantage of the high price."

How much one gets depends on weight. Empire — most reputable buyers work the same way — buys gold by weight. If the gold bullion price is $450 an ounce, for example, a 14 karat gold bracelet (14.24ths pure gold or a little over half) that weighs one ounce would be worth roughly $250.

"Jewelry that has antique value, 100 years or older, is worth much more if its an attractive piece," Broad said. "Even modern jewelry in good condition and useful for resale, might bring more."

Broad said he can resell good jewelry at a profit because with bullion prices and labor costs so high, jewelers find it cheaper to buy good used gold than to order it new.

Americans also are buying jewelry in record numbers. Wideband Coin Jewelry, which makes necklaces and other ornaments from Krugerrands and other coins, reports that sales are expected to reach $50 million for 1979.

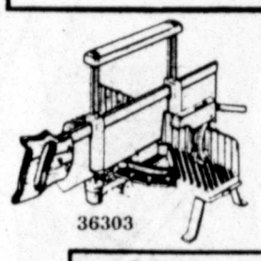

"People are more conscious than ever of gold as an investment, but at the same time interest in gold jewelry from an aesthetic standpoint continues at a high level," said Irving Korwin, Wideband president.

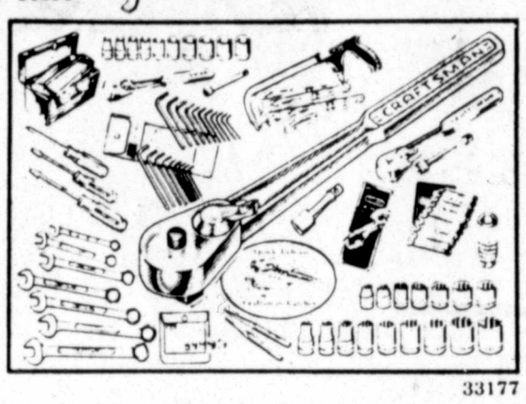

Broad, who feels that today's high gold price is "sheer folly" remembers the early 1930s when he sold his gold to the assay office in New York for refining at $20 an ounce, and for $35 after the Gold Reserve Act of 1932.

Citizens Praise Court Decision On Nativity Scene

DENVER (UPI) — One flipped switch illuminated the city's Nativity scene as though nothing had happened.

Mary, Joseph, the Wise Men and the manger baby were there as usual, but this year 200 residents came, too, to give special thanks that a 40-year Christmas tradition was allowed to continue.

Bundled against the cold Tuesday night, they carried candles and sang carols, celebrating a court decision keeping the Nativity scene on the City and County Building steps.

The U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals Tuesday stayed the execution of a district court order requiring the city to dismantle the life-size religious arrangement.

"If one man can take away what the majority of people want, I think the Constitution should be changed so the freedom of speech and religion is more important than the separation of church and state," said Gordon Day, who came with his wife and 11-year-old daughter.

The American Civil Liberties Union, representing Citizens Concerned for Separation of Church and State, filed suit alleging the use of tax money for the creche violated the constitutional requirement for separation of church and state.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch ruled in favor of the ACLU Monday and gave the city 48 hours to dismantle the Nativity scene. The city filed an appeal Tuesday and was granted the stay pending full consideration of the case.

For 40 years, the City and County Building has been lit with multicolored flood lights and the steps decorated with full-size replicas of the Nativity scene, Santa Claus, nine reindeer, a sleigh and a toy shop with elves.

"The appeals court answered the prayers of many people. We would not have Christmas at all if not for the birth of Christ. It is God's will to keep Jesus as the center of Christmas," said Don Newman, who called for a silent prayer for the hostages in Iran.

The piping voices of children rang out above the crowd during the singing of a full repertoire of carols, all from memory. Extra white and red candles were passed to newcomers or divided when the number of participants grew.

Signs erected at the foot of the steps said, "Jesus is Lord, not the ACLU," "Christ is too big for a Manger," and "Christ is Christmas." Although the tone was religious, many in the crowd said they came for other reasons.

"We feel our rights are being infringed upon by the ACLU. We pay taxes and we should have a say, even though we are more passive. Now, we want to add our support," said John and Ruth Gordon, who over 30 years have brought their children and then grandchildren to the display.

Florence DuVault said atheists have been fighting the display for 10 years. She suggested that instead of spending money on court fights, atheists should not come downtown to see it.

James Joy, director of the Colorado ACLU, said the Citizens Concerned was an ad hoc group formed by the Humanist Quest for Truth, a national atheist organization, to challenge the Nativity scene.

"We were very disappointed, of course. I am surprised the court granted the stay, but needless to say the real issues will be tried later on. It is not a great loss, but a disappointment," said Joy.

In issuing the stay of execution order, the appeals court said it was convinced the public interest would be served best by the temporary stay and a complete review of the issues involved. The review could take six to 18 months.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 22) Do nothing tomorrow that a helpful contact could interpret incorrectly. Should one who is trying to aid you feel he is being used, he may withdraw his support.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Success could elude you tomorrow if your goals are not clearly defined. Be wary of starting off in one direction and then changing to another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Tomorrow will not be a good day to become involved in something you know little about. It could add to your responsibilities. The burdens may be larger than you realize.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unless you are invited in, it's best to steer clear of the complicated affairs of friends tomorrow. Even if you're asked, it may be unwise to participate.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will be much smarter to play things loose and off the cuff tomorrow. You have a tendency to push too hard, and could unintentionally antagonize associates.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Revisions in your plans will be necessary tomorrow if you hope to get anywhere with your contacts. Try to put yourself in their shoes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'd be wise tomorrow not to make any major changes that could affect your family without at least taking a straws vote. Don't be surprised if you lose.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's not likely you'll be able to have everything your own way tomorrow. Some concessions may be necessary. They could be hard to swallow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Matters you deem important should not be left to subordinates tomorrow. They could misunderstand what you hope to accomplish and gum up the works.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your prudence in money matters could be put to a severe test tomorrow. If you yield to extravagance or gambling you might come up a loser.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be careful what type of subjects you bring up around the dinner table tomorrow. If they're too volatile, the whole household could be triggered into an uproar.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be very careful about criticizing friends tomorrow about how they use their money. You may be told in no uncertain terms to mind your own business.

Policeman Doubles As Lawyer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The badge Clyde Keenan carries identifies him as a police lieutenant but the certificates on his office wall say he's an attorney at law.

He's legal officer of the Memphis Police Department, policeman and lawyer, law enforcement's answer to rapid changes in laws of criminal investigation.

Keenan, 29, didn't set out to be a lawyer when he enrolled at Memphis State University in 1972. "I really just wanted to be a police officer," he said in an interview.

While studying police administration, he joined the Memphis police reserve program, becoming a full-time officer after graduation. Keenan's beat was Memphis' north precinct, an area policemen call "busy."

"Every young police officer wants to be in the spot where something's going on," Keenan said. "Frankly it was a lot of fun."

Late one night a house on his beat caught fire.

"That was probably the dumbest thing I've ever done," he said when asked about the medal hanging on his office wall. "Naw, it was something I had to do."

Keenan earned it for pulling four members of a family from the burning home.

He had already decided to continue his education. "There was the question in my mind, 'If you want to be a professional police officer, what kind of background do you need?' I had a choice of a graduate program or law school," he said.

"If I wanted to be a professional police officer, if you have one degree you can get by, but if you have a law degree, too, you're better off."

Two years ago, after passing the bar examination, Keenan was assigned to the detective division as a legal advisor. He coordinated the investigations with the legal requirements to make the case stand up in court.

"It was fascinating," Keenan said. "We had the choice cases. It was a dream."

And he found that his background as a uniformed officer came in handy.

"It's difficult for a legal advisor who is not part of the case to know the ins and outs — to find the best investigative route and not violate anyone's rights," he said.

"If you go by strict rules of criminal procedure you'd never get a confession, and confessions are 90 percent of your cases. There's no absolutely perfect answer to anything in law enforcement."

A year ago, Keenan moved into the department's legal office, replacing a civilian attorney. He still works with detectives on legal problems and he heads a team that investigates shootings involving police.

He has no interest in a private law practice.

"It would be hard for me to go into court and argue on behalf of someone I knew to be guilty," he said. "I've been a police officer too long to do that."

Solons Seek Delay In Usury Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate agree they would like to delay for three months the effective date of a court ruling scheduled to ban interest-paying, checking-type accounts in 43 states Jan. 1.

But an unrelated issue involving state usury laws is threatening final action on legislation to delay the effect of the court decision. The Senate approved the three-month delay Tuesday but added wording to waive state usury laws for up to 18 months. The House approved a three-month postponement of the court decision, but rejected a Senate proposal to override state usury laws. The court-delay legislation is being pushed to give more time to work out permanent legislation legalizing interest-bearing checking accounts.

Frigid Area Has Tropical Past

By AL ROSSITER JR.

McMURDO STATION, Antarctica (UPI) — The rugged, ice-covered Ellsworth mountains of West Antarctica carry the unmistakable record of a tropical past.

Fossils of 20 different now-extinct species of primitive mollusks that lived in tropical waters are found in ocean sediments that collected up to 600 million years ago. These sediments are now hardened into beds of twisted and elevated rock.

After a period of glaciation, as shown by sediments deposited by a massive sheet of ice, the climate returned to at least semi-tropical conditions. There are beds of coal, the product of swamp deposits, and fossil leaves of the fern-like tree Glossopteris that lived about 250 million years ago.

Third In A Series

Today, the 40,000 feet of sediments that make up much of the Ellsworth Mountains are virtually devoid of life. A few lichens grow on sheltered rocks and an occasional Arctic tern flies overhead on an outing expedition from the coast hundred of miles to the north.

Although no one has been there in the winter, temperatures there are believed to plummet to below minus 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

Why the drastic difference between the climate of today and the past climates experienced by the mountain sediments?

Because they have not always been at the bottom of the world. The sediments were deposited far to the north when what is now the continent of Antarctica was part of a super continent called Gondwanaland.

Dr. Gerald F. Webers, professor of geology at MacAlester College in St. Paul, Minn., said Gondwanaland split up 200 million to 180 million years ago into what is now Africa, South America, Australia, Antarctica and the subcontinent of India.

Antarctica began drifting southward away from the other continents, riding hot, plastic material beneath the Earth's crust.

Sometime during that transit, Webers said the sediments that now make up the Ellsworth Mountains were compressed laterally, folded like an accordian, lifted up, tilted and then beveled off by erosion.

The result is a spectacular range of mountains with over 15,000 feet of relief extending 220 miles long and 50 miles wide.

Webers is heading a team of 45 scientists on a major National Science Foundation effort this spring and summer to better understand the Ellsworth Mountains and their place in the evolution of the lands of the Southern Hemisphere.

"I'm trying to determine the geologic history of the Ellsworth Mountains and to fit that into what we know of Antarctica and hopefully add that to the history of the world in terms of the history of the Southern continents," Webers said in an interview before leaving this main American Antarctic base.

The start of the project was delayed two weeks by bad weather and aircraft problems. The temporary mountain base camp from which the scientists will operate had to be built from scratch, with everything flown into the area by LC-130 ski planes.

Webers, who first visited the mountains in 1962, expects to have as many as seven field parties out in the mountains at one time. They will be supported by three bright orange Navy helicopters and a dozen snowmobiles.

The geologists plan to spend six or seven weeks in the mountains this season and then return next year to complete their field studies. The overall project is expected to take four years.

Vandals Steal Santa Claus

"He disappeared sometime over the weekend and seven of the reindeer legs were broken off."

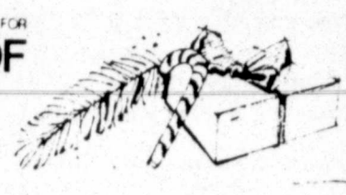

Residents of the rural northern Maine community, angry at vandals who stole the Santa Claus from a town Christmas display, have posted a $2,500 reward for conviction of the culprits.

"There was close to $1,000 damage in all," said Dyer. "You ought to be in my shoes with the pressure I've got here. People are very upset."

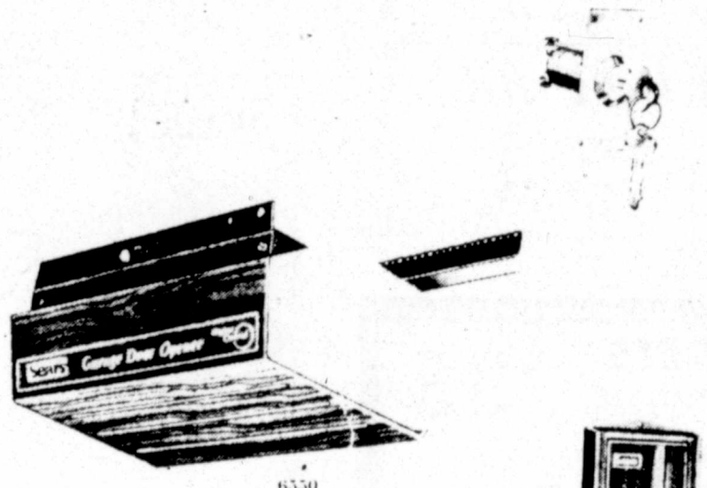

Dyer said the sleigh had been on display in front of the Foxcroft Academy, the local high school, every Christmas for more than a quarter of a century.

Bible Used To Cure Neurotic Disorders

But the titles on the magazine table include "Christian Life" and "The New English Bible."

The yellow walls are decorated with religious plaques and pictures, and the entire staff meets once a week for prayer and Bible study.

At the Center for Christian Psychological Services, the Bible is seen as the basis for helping persons with problems ranging from depression to phobias to marital conflicts.

The center was founded two years ago by Dr. William Backus, who believes that "truth" as revealed in the Bible is the basis for curing neuroses.

"Half the cure is getting over the notion that if you're a Christian you shouldn't have problems," says Backus, an ordained Lutheran minister with a doctor's degree in clinical psychology.

Backus, 53, was a parish minister for 10 years before earning his doctorate degree at the University of Minnesota.

He served on the staff of the Hennepin County Medical Center as senior clinical psychologist for five years before opening the clinic.

Backus and eight associates see an average of 80 clients per week at rates ranging from $20 to $60 per hour.

The bearded, bespectacled Backus says most therapists push some kind of value system on their patients. Common assumptions include "the belief that man is basically a material set of systems" and that "the resources for getting well are within the client."

"The Christian assumption is that man does not have the resources in himself. The resource for help comes from God in Christ Jesus, and the vehicle for transporting that resource is in the Bible," Backus said.

He believes many emotional problems are caused by "misbeliefs" or lies which people tell themselves: "I'm worthless," "Life isn't worth living," or "I can't control my behavior."

"All lies originate from the Devil," Backus says. "The therapist's job is to replace the misbeliefs with truth."

Backus supplements standard psychological techniques such as biofeedback and behavior modification with prayer and Bible study.

He also believes some mental problems are biochemical in nature and may be helped by low-sugar, high-protein diets, as well as by more orthodox medications.

Backus says most of his clients are Christians — whom he defines as "those who have a personal relationship with Christ as Savior and Lord."

Begelman Gets Post At MGM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Begelman, toppled from power at Columbia Pictures in a 1978 forgery scandal, has bounced back to the movie industry's top echelon with the announcement that he will become president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's motion picture division.

BEGELMAN

Frank E. Rosenfelt, president and chief executive officer of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Inc., said Tuesday he believes Begelman was "a sick man" when he forged checks on a Columbia account.

Now, he said, the 59-year-old Begelman has recovered and is ready to resume his former role as a gifted hit-maker in the movie industry.

"I am persuaded that period is behind him. He has paid a very severe price," Rosenfelt said.

Begelman, whose Columbia projects included "Shampoo" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," spent a year on probation after pleading no contest to grand theft charges for forging $40,000 worth of checks. He was not available for comment and his office said he would be out of town all week.

Begelman has been working as an independent producer at Columbia since his resignation as studio president.

Rockefeller Buys Expensive Farm

HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — David Rockefeller, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, is acquiring 1,000 acres of rich Hudson Valley farm land with a reported price tag of more than $1 million, according to published reports.

ROCKEFELLER

Rockefeller and his wife Margaret recently purchased the 400-acre Stone House Farm owned by Stanley and Margaret Voorhees Sr. The farm is considered the focal point of the purchase.

Closings on three other adjacent farms are expected within the next several weeks, with the cost of the entire parcel expected to exceed $1 million, according to the Hudson Register-Star.

The Rockefellers plan to use the farm to raise show cattle, the paper said. They do not expect to live on the property, however.

Michael Learned Marries Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Learned, star of the television series "The Waltons," and her 17-year-old son Luke both had something to celebrate — her marriage and his birthday.

Miss Learned, 40, was married Tuesday to screen and television writer William Parker, 34. It was her second marriage and his first.

About 100 guests arrived at a reception at a Manhattan restaurant aboard a double-decker English bus sporting a "Just Married" sign.

Miss Learned's youngest son was not left out of the festivities. A small note on her three-tiered wedding cake read: "Happy Birthday, Luke."

Baby, It's Cold Outside

McPHERSON, Kan. (AP) — When the Armstrong family cat sought a warm place to sleep last weekend, she got more than a nap in the bargain.

Lighter Side Of Today's News

The family took a 6-hour automobile ride, and "Baby," who was asleep atop the air cleaner under the hood, accompanied them.

Several hours after they arrived in Pineville, Mo., the Armstrong's restarted the car and heard a familiar "meow" from under the hood, and discovered Baby's napping place.

"She must have been really scared because we made a couple of stops during the trip and she could have gotten out then," Paula Armstrong said.

Grandmother Murdered While Fulfilling Dream

KAYSVILLE, Utah (AP) — After her husband died and her six children married, it seemed only natural for Elizabeth King to fulfill her life-long dream of doing missionary work for the Mormon Church.

But the 66-year-old grandmother's mission to South Carolina lasted only eight days. She and a missionary companion were found shot to death last weekend in the trunk of their car.

"It's something she'd always wanted to do and she was just thrilled to be going," remembers daughter-in-law Kaye King.

The killings stunned this quiet town 30 miles north of Salt Lake City. ButMrs. King's children express no hate for the killer. They prefer to take comfort in the Mormon belief that persons married in a church temple are reunited in heaven.

"With that end in view, it's quite easy to overlook the rough part of it," Kenzie King said of his mother's death. Her husband Wallace, who also had served as a missionary, died 10 years ago.

Police said Mrs. King and her companion, Jane Ruth Cannell Tuescher, 65, of Fish Lake, Idaho, each had been shot in the chest. Their bodies were found Saturday at a North Charleston, S.C., shopping center.

James Arthur Brown, 24, was arrested Monday and charged with two counts of murder and one count of sexual battery. He was ordered held without bond Tuesday. Brown had been free on $5,000 bond in connection with an attack on a 38-year-old woman.

"I'm glad I don't feel a bitter hatred toward this man," said a daughter, Marie Taylor. "That's the kind of poison that can make you sick all over. I just feel sorry for him and wonder what kind of home life he had."

However, she said, "I do feel some anger about our system that lets people like that out on bond."

Friends and relatives remember Mrs. King as "down-to-earth, homespun and strong ... a typical loving grandmother type" and an unsurpassed cook.

Mrs. King's family, like many others in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, was committed to missionary work. The 4.3 million-member church has 29,200 full-time missionaries, the majority young men of 19 to 21.

In the 1930s with a 10-month-old daughter, Mrs. King said goodbye to her husband for 2½ years while he served a mission in California. Both her sons and two grandsons have been missionaries, and another grandson will soon leave for Korea.

Mrs. Taylor talked to her mother by telephone last week and found her excited about her new companion, also a widow.

Days earlier, Mrs. King had written a message in the family Christmas letter. "It was written in the past tense and I don't know why," her daughter said.

School Strike Sit-In Dwindles

CLEVELAND (AP) — A wreath with candles decorates the sparse marble lobby of Cleveland's school administration building where a sit-in protest has been in progress for two weeks.

Only four of the original 33 demonstrators continue to occupy the area in a vigil that began as an attempt to hasten efforts to end a teachers' strike.

Books and magazines, a radio and a few blankets and sleeping bags are their only comforts.

"God has a plan ... there's always the faithful few," said Cleveland councilman-elect Tyrone Bolden.

The strike by the 5,000-member Cleveland Teachers Union is 63 days old and is expected to continue at least until Dec. 27, when balloting ends on two school board contract offers. Leaders of the union have recommended rejection of the proposals.

Schools have been officially closed to 92,000 pupils in Ohio's largest city since Nov. 6.

"We are carrying the burden of 92,000 kids on our shoulders. The glamour has worn off, but our commitment is still here," said Dr. Eugene Jordan, a dentist who has abandoned his East Cleveland practice to participate in the sit-in since Dec. 5.

Mayor Says Teachers Will Be Paid

CHICAGO (AP) — All of Chicago's 48,600 school employees will be paid on Friday, Mayor Jane Byrne says, but she didn't reveal where the money for the $41.5 million payroll would come from.

The last two payrolls for the public school system, which is strapped for cash and unable to borrow money, have been met only because the state advanced aid money and in the process gave up several million dollars in interest it would have earned.

"I expect everyone who works for the Board of Education ... to get paid on Friday and go home for a merry Christmas," Mrs. Byrne said.

She also said the Board of Education would meet a $20 million note coming due soon.

The Internal Revenue Service will give the school board a 90-day reprieve from paying $16 million in back withholding taxes, Mrs. Byrne said at a news conference Tuesday.

She said a payment schedule was worked out Monday between IRS agents and the school board, but only after several top elected officials spoke to the agency about the problem.

Mrs. Byrne said after the calls were made to the IRS, the agency realized it did "not want to be Scrooge for Christmas."

Schools Plan Semester Switch

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Students probably will notice little difference and teachers no doubt will welcome the decrease in paperwork when Lubbock public schools make the switch next fall back to the semester system, says a school official already at work on the changeover.

Assistant superintendent for instruction Jay Gordon said the switch from the quarter system is "more of an organization change than anything else."

Texas schools operated on the semester system until 1975 when the legislature decided to abandon that procedure for the quarter system.

State lawmakers this year mandated a switch back to the semester operation. The changeover was optional for the 1979-80 school year, but is required for the 1980-81 term.

The change primarily will affect the secondary grades as the elementary schools operate without any kind of semester or quarter break.

Gordon said the revision of the course offerings bulletin constitutes the bulk of changeover work. Because some courses — mostly electives — now are described as quarter credit courses, Gordon will have to change the descriptions to read as one-half or full unit credits.

He said that since students are required to attend only three quarters under the current system, the Texas Education Agency recommmends giving students one-half credit under the new operation for each quarter credit they currently have, and a full unit for two quarters completed in a course.

Giving students less credit "would be taking something away from them," Gordon said.

The superintendent said that content of courses "won't change a significant amount." Teachers will simply have more time for instruction of some courses.

The only expense, amounting to "several thousand dollars" will be in the printing of certain forms, said Gordon. But even that will not be a problem, he added, because most forms have to be printed every year anyway. "We don't stockpile a large number of forms."

Gordon said he does not know why the legislature decided to require schools to revert back to the semester system. "It came as a little bit of a surprise."

He explained that lawmakers throughout the country who advocated the quarter system several years ago, reasoned that such a move would better utilize school buildings.

They reasoned that the school year would be divided into four quarters so that all schools would be used in the summer as well. Students would be assigned to take their vacation during a particular quarter Since all students would not be in the building at the same time, the need for new school buildings would be reduced.

"But it didn't work," said Gordon. Most of the schools did not have air conditioning for the summer, which presented a problem, and also the Texas legislature only funded three out of the four quarters. Students who want to attend a fourth quarter would have to provide the funding.

Gordon said he believes teachers and students will accept the new system. He said teachers "showed no dissatisfaction" with the semester system before and that they will even have "a little bit less work in grading" for two terms instead of three.

Poll Says Americans Worried About Heating Bill Payments

NEW YORK (AP) — Nearly two out of five Americans are worried they won't be able to pay their home heating bills this winter, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

Almost half of those who use fuel oil for heating are afraid they can't afford to keep warm, while slightly more than one-third of those who heat with natural gas or electricity are similarly concerned.

Americans are still concerned that not enough heating oil and other fuels will be available this winter, but that fear has apparently been overshadowed by worries about being able to pay for the fuel.

Thirty-eight percent of those questioned Dec. 11 and 12 said they are worried about being able to pay for the fuel to heat their homes this winter. Sixty-two percent were not worried.

That 38 percent broke down into 17 percent who were very worried about being able to meet their heating bills and 20 percent who were only somewhat worried. One percent of the 1,595 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone were not sure.

Those most worried about paying their bills use heating oil.

Forty-eight percent of those polled who use heating oil are worried about paying their bills, versus 52 percent who aren't worried. Twenty-three percent are very worried and 24 percent somewhat worried about the bills. One percent was not sure.

Thirty-six percent of those who heat with natural gas and 34 percent of those who use electricity were worried about the bills. For each group, roughly half were very worried about paying their bills with the other half somewhat worried.

Seventy-two percent of those questioned said they are not worried about getting enough fuel this winter, while 28 percent are worried.

ZBA To Debate Routine Matters At Next Meet

The Zoning Board of Adjustment faces a short and very routine agenda when it meets at 8:15 a.m. Thursday in City Council Chambers.

Terry Echols, representing ATI Transmission, will request a variance in the setback requirements for a business at 40th Street and Avenue Q.

Echols wants to expand the current building, extending it to the property line. Although the required setback is 43 feet, the business is set back only 10 feet because it was constructed before the new zoning ordinance was adopted.

Also on the agenda is the request of Lewis Garnett, representing Donna Womack, for a variance in the setback and parking requirements for a day care center at 4302 22nd Place.

Garnett is requesting a five-foot variance in the front yard setback and a three-space parking variance.

Jerry Cooley, representing J&G Waste Systems, will ask the board for a special exception to allow a mobile home to be used as a temporary office at 405 30th Street.

Keith Samples, representing Agape Methodist Church Men's Group, will request a special exception to permit Christmas tree sales in a residential zone at 1201 Slide Road.

Abilene Oilman Plans Search For Elusive Sunken Titanic

ABILENE (AP) — An oilman who has looked high and low for ungodly creatures and divine relics says he'll now sink to new depths in search for a legendary ocean liner.

Jack Grimm, 54, is a man whose vision may indeed exceed his reach — but not for want of trying.

He has tracked Big Foot across Canada, sought the Loch Ness Monster in Scotland and has produced a documentary film on the search for Noah's Ark.

Now the Abilene oilman wants to find the Titanic, the "unsinkable" luxury liner that sank into the icy depths of the North Atlantic on its maiden voyage in 1912 with 1,513 persons aboard.

"Everyone has been curious about it for years," Grimm said, "but no one's ever thought we could reach it."

But after several years of planning and with the aid of modern science, Grimm says he can reach the ship resting 12,000 feet under the surface and 380 miles off Newfoundland's coast.

"The one thing that haunts us is that it's such a watery tomb," Grimm said Tuesday. "It's not our plans at this time to do anything about any of the individuals. It's just to locate it, to film it, to prove where it's located and the extent of the damage to the vessel."

Grimm and his associates will begin the search in the spring, as soon as the winter storms are gone. He expects the project to last a year and a half.

Grimm will be aided by Michael Harris and Marvin Steffins of International Expeditions, a film company that has produced several documentaries.

Harris said the scientists and photographers plan to film the wreck with the aid of the world's largest deep-diving submersible.

The 50-foot Aluminaut, which was used to retrieve a lost hydrogen bomb off the coast of Spain several years ago, can carry nine or 10 persons to a depth of 15,000 feet, and stay submerged 36 to 72 hours.

Harris said the Titanic should be in good condition because at 12,000 feet there is no coral life to corrode metal. He expects only a light layer of silt.

The first step, Grimm said, is to pinpoint the ship's exact location.

"Once the site is pinned down, then we can put a ship over it with cables and lower cameras to the depth," he said.

The Aluminaut then will send two submersible "robots" into the Titanic to take photographs.

Photographs will be used to put together a mosaic of the Titanic.

Baby Switch Sends Mom Home With Wrong Son

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Her mother told her the infant just didn't look plump enough, but Linda Gardner was convinced the baby in her arms was hers.

But the next day, when she glanced at a name tag tied around the baby's leg, Mrs. Gardner realized there had been a swap.

Mrs. Gardner, a 27-year-old divorcee from suburban Hendersonville, said Tuesday she thought she was taking home Kevin Jason Gardner, her fifth child, when she left Metropolitan General Hospital on Monday.

"My mother told me that if that was my baby he has lost an awful lot of weight," she said. "I thought it didn't look like my baby. But I thought it was my baby because that was the baby they gave me in the hospital. I had had it all day long."

In the wee hours Tuesday, hospital officials realized the babies had been swapped. They drove to Mrs. Gardner's home, returned Kevin and picked up Nina Ollis' infant.

"That was a little bitty thing she brought home from the hospital," said Clara Copass, Mrs. Gardner's mother. "I knew something was wrong. I have nine grandchildren and this is the first time anything like this has happened."

John Stone, director of General Hospital, said he was investigating the mixup but that the employee who apparently made the switch was out of town.

"Everything has been corrected and it's back to normal," he said. "It was an error. The employee is supposed to check the tag and the mother is supposed to check the tag."

Dr. William Altemeier, General's chief pediatrician, said that after a second set of footprints of the two infants was taken to verify the identities, a second swap sent the children to their right mothers.

"After we realized what had happened, it was easy to tell them apart," he said. "One weighed about a pound more and each of them had distinguishing characteristics."

Officials Doubt Prison Escapees Still In Area

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — Despite citizen "paranoia," local police said today they were beginning to doubt four escapees who remained at large 10 days after New Mexico's largest prison break were still in the area.

Gov. Bruce King today was scheduled to receive a briefing on conclusions of an investigation into the prison break by the state Criminal Justice Department. The governor also said he expected Attorney General Jeff Bingaman to submit a preliminary report in early January on his investigation of possible causes for the escape.

A concentrated police manhunt and a citizen vigilance program has produced no confirmed sighting of any of the four since last weekend when one of them held an elderly couple captive in their home for more than 30 hours.

The couple escaped unharmed, but so did the convict, Harom Ellis, 44, one of the four escapees still at large following the 11-man breakout Dec. 9.

Police Chief Jesus Sosa said officers were dispatched Tuesday afternoon to check out a school boy's report he was chased by a man matching Ellis' general description.

U.S. Gives Warning To Iranian Leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would consider use of American hostages as witnesses in an Iranian investigation of U.S. activities under the deposed shah to be "public exploitation," a Carter administration spokesman warns.

Iranian authorities should be aware they would bear "full responsibility for any ensuing consequences" if the hostages are forced to participate in a trial, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Tuesday.

The militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4 have threatened to place their 50 American captives on trial as spies.

As an alternative, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has proposed creation by Iran of an international "grand jury" to investigate U.S. involvement in the regime of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Under his plan, the American hostages could be required to testify.

Powell's statement seemed to indicate the U.S. government would consider use of the hostages as "witnesses" as serious as actually putting them on trial.

President Carter has several options for stepping up U.S. action in the crisis. Among them is a massive military response, such as a naval blockade. While such action would not necessarily shed blood, it would be more punitive than economic actions taken against Iran so far.

Asked Tuesday if the military option remained open, Powell repeated Carter's contention that a peaceful resolution of the stalemate is preferred.

But he also reiterated a Nov. 20 White House statement issued on first word of a possible trial, saying there is "a range of options available to the United States under international law and the United Nations charter" — a reference to a U.N. provision which provides for a country's right to take military action in certain situations.

The militants holding the hostages also are continuing to demand that the United States return the shah to Iran for trial. The deposed monarch, whose arrival in the United States for medical treatment triggered the crisis, is now in Panama.

Meanwhile, a draft copy of a congressional study obtained Tuesday says the informal cutoff of U.S. supplies to Iran has weakened the U.S. threat of a trade embargo.

The Congressional Research Service report said a "de facto" embargo has been created by President Carter's freeze of Iranian assets and actions by private citizens, such as the refusal of longshoremen to load ships bound for Iran.

The only exports that have not fallen dramatically are agricultural products, the study says, concluding that "the principal short-term economic embargo weapon against Iran must be food."

It warns that the impact of such an embargo would depend on participation by other nations because "Iran has recently been reducing its dependence on the U.S. (for food) and diversifying its food imports."

The study also says an embargo would need strong international support to prevent third-party countries from selling U.S. products to Iran.

It is uncertain how many American allies would join in such an embargo. The study notes that "Western Europe as a region generally is more vulnerable to Iranian (oil) supply interruptions than the U.S."

In other action Tuesday:

— Secretary o State Cyus R. Vance briefed members of the Senate on the situation. Neither Vance nor the senators revealed the substance of that session.

— The House of Representatives, on a 369-4 vote, passed a resolution calling for "appropriate financial compensation" for the hostages by the U.S. government upon their release and return. The resolution now goes to the Senate.

— Informed sources said the United States has begun informal discussions with U.N. Security Council members about instituting economic sanctions against Iran. State Department spokesman Thomas Reston said the United States has not decided whether to seek the U.N. sanctions.

Panama Tough On Protesters

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Police firing tear gas and shotguns dispersed 100 high school students protesting the presence of the ousted Shah of Iran on Panama's Contadora Island. One car was burned and windows were smashed in other cars.

About a dozen students were taken away in ambulances, but it was not known how seriously they were hurt.

Disturbances began at about 9 a.m. CST at the National Institute, Panama City's largest high school, across the street from the Panama Canal Zone and three miles from the U.S. Embassy where anti-American demonstrations took place Tuesday.

An estimated 300 students gathered outside the school shouting, "Down with the shah! Out with the shah! Down with the government!" About one-third of the demonstrators began throwing rocks, and two Molotov cocktails thrown at police exploded harmlessly on the ground.

Police fired tear gas and a dozen shotgun rounds at a range of 200 feet at the crowd, which dispersed and regathered in small groups in side streets near the school. Later, police herded the demonstrators into the school and then allowed them to go home.

Earlier, Panama City's mayor warned residents that only peaceful demonstrations would be allowed. On Tuesday 300 leftist students, protesting the government's decision to give sanctuary to ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, broke windows at the U.S. Embassy and the government lottery office. They lowered the American flag at the embassy and dragged it along the ground, shredding it.

An embassy spokesman said national guardsmen acted quickly to disperse the mob with tear gas. No injuries were reported.

The shah flew to Panama on Saturday at the invitation of President Aristides Royo for an indeterminate stay on Contadora, a resort island 35 miles southeast of here in the Pacific Ocean.

The shah is trying to regain his strength after spending more than a month in a New York hospital for cancer and gallbladder treatment and a brief stay at an army base in Texas.

He left the United States, saying he hoped to better the chances that militants holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran, will free 50 American hostages. The militants said they plan to try the hostages as spies.

The deposed monarch has long been under a death order from Iran's revolutionary government, and the official Pars news agency in Tehran said Tuesday that Sadegh Khalkhali, former chief Islamic prosecutor, ordered his fedayeen gunmen to Latin America to assassinate the shah and his wife.

Two weeks ago, Khalkhali claimed his gunmen were responsible for the slaying of the shah's nephew, Shahriar Moustapha Chafik, in Paris.

Despite the renewed death threat, the shah embarked on a lengthy, 40-minute walk around the sprawling grounds of the island Tuesday — under tightened security. His wife and their poodle remained at their new residence, a private home once owned by Gabriel Lewis Galindo, a former Panamanian ambassador to the United States.

University Suspends Students

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — At least 12 Iranian students at Jackson State University have been suspended for participating in campus demonstrations last month and about 20 others placed on probation, a spokesman for the students says.

Melvin Miller, public relations director for the predominantly black university, confirmed that a committee of students and faculty had decided on penalties for the Iranian students. Miller said, however, that the committee's action would not be announced until the students involved were notified.

The university had ordered 32 Iranian students to appear at the hearings to face charges of violating regulations by failing to receive prior written permission to stage the demonstrations on Nov. 19 and Nov. 29 following the takeover of the American Embassy in Tehran.

The students claimed they notified officials verbally of their intention to protest and had not known written permission was required.

Sadegh Shamloo, a spokesman for the Iranian students, said letters were delivered to the students Tuesday, but that not all students had been notified of the action taken against them. Shamloo said the students would appeal the decisions to the university administration, then turn to the courts if the penalties are not set aside.

Shamloo said the students who have been suspended could face deportation. He said he felt the action was an effort by school officials to make it possible for immigration officials "to kick the students out of the U.S."

Chicago Police Protect Strike-Breaking Trains

CHICAGO (AP) — Commuters streamed to work this morning in autos and on police-guarded elevated trains as a strike by 11,000 transit workers entered its third day.

There was no charge for train riders and unrestricted street parking was still in affect in the downtown area.

Mayor Jane Byrne had ordered some elevated trains back into operation Tuesday, operated by supervisors and some union members who crossed picket lines. But commuters who wanted to take the trains faced the problem of getting to stations with no bus service.

No major incidents of violence were reported. But on the South Side, three switch boxes were opened and the tracks switched so southbound trains would go to the northbound tracks. An automatic override system stopped the trains. Officials said there were delays, but no injuries or damage.

By 6 a.m., there were build-ups on expressways that resembled normal peak rush-hour traffic that usually hits two hours later. Motorists were on the go despite a scramble for gasoline that has intensified because of a Teamsters strike. A growing number of service stations closed, shortenend their hours or limited purchases.

Settlement was reached with six major distributors, but Shell, Texaco, Gulf, Phillips and Conoco have not signed.

Meanwhile, Gov. James R. Thompson authorized the release of 60,000 gallons of gasoline from the state's fuel reserves to keep 1,000 of Chicago's taxi cabs operating for at least three days.

Helping out was the unseasonable mild weather. It was dry and clear with temperatures expected in the 40s.

Union leaders said Mrs. Byrne rejected a contract offer on Tuesday. CTA lawyers were prepared to argue in court later today for an order to end the strike.

Circuit Judge Daniel J. O'Brien, who on Sunday issued a temporary restraining order against the strike, was to hear the CTA request.

His order was ignored and 11,000 bus drivers and train operators walked off the job early Monday, causing traffic jams, keeping some people home from work and dealing a blow to downtown merchants during the Christmas shopping season.

About 1 million commuters normally use the system each day.

CTA supervisors began operating a few elevated trains during the rush hour Tuesday evening, and trains were heavily guarded by police.

The elevated routes were chosen because they were more easily protected than those using subways, said CTA chairman Eugene Barnes. No buses were running, but Barnes said more trains would operate as employees returned to work.

Mrs. Byrne said employees of the streets and sanitation department trained Tuesday to learn how to switch the trains.

The service was free "because of the inconvenience to our riders (caused) by the wildcat work stoppage," said Barnes.

"I think they owe it to us," said Stanley Whitney, who used the service Tuesday. Others expressed gratitude for what they termed "initiative" on the part of the CTA.

Commuter Robin Bourne said the timing of the walkout further aggravated riders. "It's winter, it's Christmas and there's a gas shortage," she said.

Union leaders said Mrs. Byrne rejected a proposal from them late Tuesday that would have included a limit of 14 percent on cost-of-living increases, to be made twice a year. The two sides had agreed to that more than a week ago.

The cost-of-living increases were made quarterly and were based on a federal price index under the contract that expired Dec. 1. There was no limit on the increases. Top pay for motormen and drivers is now $10.58 an hour.

Timothy O'Mahoney, recording secretary of the Amalgamated Transit Union's Local 241, said the proposal included a 24-cent-an-hour raise and protection against layoffs or retaliation for the strike.

However, he said Mrs. Byrne called the proposal "unacceptable" and repeated her insistence on binding arbitration.

"They're making good money," said commuter Mary Ellen Coyle. "If they weren't making good money, I could sympathize with them."

The mayor rode the trains Tuesday and predicted service would improve. She also said many of the 11,000 members of the two ATU locals "are calling in and saying they want to go to work."

However, Wilford Spears, Local 241 president, said, "I don't think we've lost control. We've got the confidence of the membership."

However, Daniel V. Maroney Jr., president of the ATU internatonal union, sent a telegram to strikers urging them to return to work. Maroney said the strike was illegal because it had not been approved by the union executive board in Washington, because local members did not vote on the strike authorization and because union leaders did not offer to enter binding arbitration before calling the strike.

Iranian Government Indicates Relatives May Visit Hostages

ing the funeral for Mofatteh, a close aide to Khomeini, who was gunned down outside his Islamic school by three hit-men riding a single motorcycle.

The controversial leader of Iran's Islamic court system ordered his killer squads to Panama to try to assassinate the shah and his wife, Pars said Tuesday.

Sheikh Sadeq Khalkhali, who claimed responsibility for killing a nephew of the shah in Paris recently, said in a communique "this duty, with all its dangers, must be completed."

Diplomatic sources said the assassinations Tuesday and repeated student assertions they would put the hostages on trial apparently led to both sides hardening their positions. They said it might also have fully undermined the position of Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, who earlier this week indicated some of the hostages could be released by Christmas.

In an interview with the Washington Post published Tuesday, the foreign minister admitted this was unlikely and virtually pleaded with the United States to launch an investigation into the rule of the shah as a way of breaking the impasse.

The militant captors who have already rejected this as "insufficient" tried to personally rebuke Ghotbzadeh in a communique Tuesday and insisted the hostages would go before spy trials unless the shah was returned to Iran from Panama's Contadora Island.

The captors at the embassy also shrugged off reports from official sources in Washington who said late Tuesday the United States may take swift military action — including a naval blockade of Iran —if the hostages are tried or humiliated in any other way.

There are currently two huge American naval task forces in the Arabian Sea.

One militant spokesman said today: "Let them bring their ships and their planes as well. We are not worried about these things.

"It will not affect our position. The hostages will go on trial. If they (the Americans) try to rescue them, then they will be killed."

Khomeini said in a statement Tuesday: "America is content to bring fear to the hearts of our people. But they are blind. They cannot see that this cannot affect our brave people."

"Our enemies who have been defeated everywhere are now using terrorism to frighten us."

Former POW Identifies Marine As Collaborator

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (UPI) — A former POW leaned forward, pointed to Marine Pfc. Robert R. Garwood and named him as the man who lived as a comrade among his communist captors while fellow Americans starved to death in a Vietnamese POW camp.

Eleven years have gone by since the two men's paths crossed in a jungle camp in South Vietnam. Their reunion came Tuesday in a cramped military courtroom at a hearing to determine whether Garwood will be court-martialed on charges of desertion and collaborating with the enemy during 13½ years with the North Vietnamese.

Chief Warrant Officer Francis G. Anton, 36, the first witness called in the investigative hearing, painted a grim picture of a prison camp where a handful of Americans, all except Garwood, were forced to eat the camp cat to fight off starvation.

Anton's scheduled cross-examination today was delayed until this afternoon to let defense and government attorneys confer on legal questions involving how far Garwood's lawyers can go into Anton's background.

The defense has vowed to wage a legal battle to make public a tape-recorded debriefing Anton gave government officials after his return from Vietnam in 1973.

The government, acting on the authority of base commander Brig. Gen. David Barker, has refused to release those documents. Government attorneys maintain the debriefing cannot be made public because it contains highly personal information about Anton.

Garwood, 33, an Adams, Ind., native who returned to the United States last March, maintains he is innocent and said he did only what was needed to survive. His attorney indicated his cross-examination today would be aimed at showing all POWs collaborated to some degree in order to stay alive.

The Marine disappeared in 1965 while driving a jeep outside Da Nang, but for years was the object of reports from returning POWs, many of whom will testify in this investigative hearing.

He could face death if convicted of the charges, and would be the first Vietnam-era veteran found guilty of such acts.

Anton testified that Garwood lived outside a compound housing 12 to 20 American POWs in a tiny camp 35-40 milee southwest of Da Nang and that he performed many of the same duties as the communist troops running the prison camp.

The lanky, balding Garwood looked gaunt and his eyes were riveted on Anton during his hour-long testimony.

contractors to cut back in their home building, Smith said. He estimated that right now, there are less than 250 new houses available for sale in Lubbock. At times in the past, there have been as many as 700 new homes on the market.

Smith expressed hope that the tight money situation will improve by March or April of 1980. He noted that the prime lending rate has dropped in the past three weeks from 16 percent to 15 percent. If the prime lending rate drops down to between 12 and 13 percent, Smith said the interest rate charged to homebuyers should be around 10 percent.

However, the chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders is not too optimistic. Michael Sumichrast sees the drop in housing starts as an indication that the nation is in a recession.

"I don't think we are going to see much improvement until a year from now or the first half of 1981," Sumichrast said.

Oil Ministers Seek Price Compromise

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met in secret today seeking to work out a compromise solution on the price split which has persisted through their year-end conference.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister and a leader of OPEC's moderate bloc, held the talks in his hotel suite, a conference source said.

The moderates are trying to keep the official price of oil near the $24 per barrel level while Libya, which already has boosted the price of its oil to $30 a barrel, has said it would like to see the base price elevated to $34.

Today's is the final session of the three-day meeting and officials said it was possible the conference could end without agreement, meaning each member would charge as much as it can get or thinks prudent.

It would not be the first time the 13-nation oil cartel failed to reach agreement.

"We've had these differences for 19 years," said one source. "One time it was Iran which was the biggest producer, and Iran wanted a price different from the others. The price issue, while it seems important now, in a few years will not be so important as the supply issue."

Humberto Calderon Berti, Venezuela's oil minister, admitted that price negotiations had been "very difficult" since the 13 delegations began meeting Monday.

He said OPEC's economic commission had proposed the conference set a base price of $24 to $25 a barrel and that "it would be good for OPEC to reach an agreement."

But the issue of how high members could go over the benchmark price — that for light crude oil from Saudi Arabia — concerned many ministers. Yamani called the issue "a very serious matter."

Traditionally, the quality of oil and its distance from markets have determined how much of a premium over the benchmark can be charged. But some OPEC members have tacked on surcharges that have left the old system of price differentials in disarray. Iran, for instance, used to charge 11 cents more than Saudi Arabia for a like grade of oil. At $28.50 a barrel, Iranian oil now carries a $4.50 premium.

How much higher the price goes depends on the financial health of the Western importers, and "we're worried about the effects of higher prices on the international economy," said a source close to the delegation from Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer and leader of the price moderates.

The Saudis raised their prices by 33 percent to $24 a barrel last week, 50 cents above OPEC's last ceiling, which already had been breached by a number of other members charging up $30 a barrel on long-term contracts, and much more on the spot market.

Hoping to block even greater hikes, the Saudis said they would maintain their new price for the first quarter of 1980. They were seconded by the United Arab Emirates, which said it would freeze the price through the first half of 1980, Qatar and the conference host, Venezuela.

But Libya, charging $30 for a 42-gallon barrel, claimed the minimum price could climb as high as $34 without causing any distress.

There was better news for the industrial nations concerning production. Saudi Arabia said it would continue to produce at the rate of 9.5 million barrels a day at least for the first three months of the new year. Nigeria said it plans no production cuts for 1980. Iraq disclosed it increased its output to 3.7 million barrels a day — a gain of 600,000 barrels, according to unofficial estimates — and might raise output to 4 million barrels.

That would be enough to supply half the present U.S. imports. However, Iraq said the increase was ordered not to aid industrialized countries but "to meet the requirements and demands of our fellow developing countries."

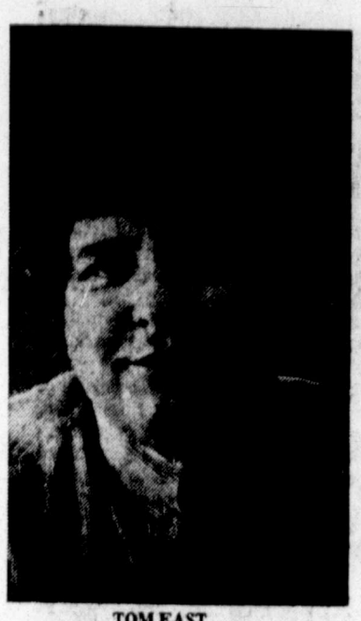

DC-9 Airplane Loses Tail While Landing

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says a cracked spring latch caused a Republic Airlines DC-9 to lose its tail cone for the second time in just over a week.

"There is no apparent problem with the design of the DC-9," FAA spokesman Jack Barker said this week in Atlanta. "The problem is with this particular aircraft."

No injuries were reported when the jet, carrying 36 passengers and four crew members, lost the 10-foot-long tail cone while landing recently at Memphis International Airport.

Dallas Movie Board Draws Criticism

TOM EAST
Dallas Movie Censor

DALLAS (AP) — The city of Dallas has a unique movie rating system that local critics say is getting "Big D" panned in Tinsel Town.

Some say the 26 citizen reviewers on the one-of-a-kind Dallas Motion Picture Classification Board are unqualified to judge films and are practicing modern-day censorship.

The board is "a very archaic system of classifying films," said one Dallas distributor for a major film company.

"Dallas is fast becoming one of the top three movie markets," said the distributor, who asked not to be identified. "To have a big city with progressive attitudes and a board with 1930s censorship attitudes, it's got to hurt."

But the board members — and many other residents — believe their work is essential.

Board chairman Tom East criticizes the familiar industry-sponsored ratings system of the Motion Picture Association of America.

"You now see former R-rated (no one admitted under 17 without a parent or guardian) becoming PGs (parental guidance suggested)," he said. "Unless a parent or guardian has an inclination to prescreen a movie, our board is about the only way they can determine its suitability."

The board's power to brand a film "not suitable" rests with the community standards doctrine — a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding the constitutional authority of cities and states to limit youths' exposure to books and films that cannot be denied adults.

But what fuels most of the criticism — and sometimes outright ridicule — of the board is its power to restrict attendance at films which are not restricted by the MPAA.

"We have a rating system in Hollywood," said Chick Lafield, Dallas sales manager for 20th Century Fox. "That's all that's needed."

Decisions by the unsalaried board members — appointed to two-year terms by the City Council — carry the force of law.

The board has the authority to expand the "suitable" classification with symbols warning of sex, violence and objectionable language, and to declare a movie "not suitable" for persons under the age of 16.

Classifications must be displayed on all Dallas newspaper advertisements and at all theaters. Violations of the ordinance, such as permitting unaccompanied youths to attend "not suitable" movies, carry fines of up to $200 per day.

The distributor who didn't want his name used said the industry "most definitely" has a financial interest in the board's ratings.

"Some PG films, such as Paramount's 'Prophecy' and United Artists' 'Invasion of the Body Snatchers' were rated unsuitable (in Dallas)," he said. "Theater managers were going crazy having to turn away the young horror-sect viewers that came."

Although board member Honu Frankel said the city should not be able to restrict youthful moviegoers, she defended the board's expansion of the PG-rating.

"We're not qualified to rate movies," she said. "We're qualified to tell what we would like our children to see."

East described the board as "a cross-section of the community" that "is trying the best it can do to apply the ordinance to what members feel are community standards."

Miss Frankel disagreed: "We don't have a cross-section. There are only five men out of a possible 26 ... and we have only one black member."

Statewide Opposition To Amendment Seen

AUSTIN (AP) — Most of the 1980 election talk so far has been about presidential prospects with maybe a little about the Texas Railroad Commission and local races.

Before it's over, however, you may be hearing a lot about horse racing, bingo and Sunday closing laws in the balloting.

The legalization of bingo and raffle games for the benefit of charitable organizations is already guaranteed for the Nov. 4 general election ballot. The proposed state constitution change was sent to the people for a vote by the 1979 Legislature. If approved by voters, local option elections could be held to authorize bingo within a county, in much the same way wet-dry elections are held now.

Already there are indications of statewide opposition to the amendment, particularly from church groups who traditionally oppose gambling in any form. On the other hand, some of its staunchest support may come from other church groups who have trditionally held bingo games in churches for charitable causes.

At a recent meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee, State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said he had been approached about statewide straw votes on horse racing and Sunday "blue" laws to be presented to the state committee at its March 10 meeting. That is the same time the Democratic policy makers will consider a statewide presidential preference poll at the May 3 party primary.

Gary Mauro, director of the state Democratic headquarters, said it was expected the requests would be made directly to the state committee at the March 10 meeting, instead of presenting petitions. Petitions that would require the committee to order a referendum must contain at least 49,000 names. On the other hand, the state committee can order a straw vote on its own without a petition.

Wayne Thorburn, head of the state Republican headquarters, said his party had not received any requests for similar straw votes. A GOP petition would require about 8,000 signatures.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: Recently, I testified in a State District Court. I believe I was treated very rudely by the judge of the court. May question is ... can I file a complaint against a State District Judge and, if so, where can I file it?

A: Yes, you may report your experience with this judge, through the State Commission on Judicial Conduct in Austin. Your report must be presented as an affidavit giving the name of the judge and the attorneys involved. This affidavit should state concisely what you considered misconduct on the part of the judge. Complaints should be mailed to P.O. Box 12265, Capitol Station, Austin 78711.

Q: When one of us dies, what will our bank do to money my husband and I have in joint accounts?

A: If either of you dies without a will and is survived by children, the descendants may have an interest in the funds. The money on deposit, including accmulated interest, is probably community property. If the bank is fully informed of the facts and has been put on notice of the children's claim, it may freeze the account and require you to present proof of your right to possession or control of the funds. Your attorney can assist you in getting the necessary proof.

Q: While I was driving on the expressway, a passing truck threw a rock that hit and cracked my windshield. I took the license number of the truck. Can I sue the truck driver or the company he represents to have my windshield replaced?

A: Yes, you can sue the truck driver and the company for which he drives, but you will have to prove that the truck driver was negligent. For example, if the truck was being driven unreasonably fast on a road covered with a fresh layer of gravel, the driver could be shown negligent.

Q: My ex-wife plans to send our younger daughter off to live with the grandfather who will pay for her schooling expenses. Do I still have to send my ex-wife child support payments?

A: Until the court having jurisdiction over the children orders a modification of your support obligation, you MUST continue to obey orders in effect. You may consult an attorney, however, to set a hearing for a modification. At that hearing you may present your daughter's changed circumstances and request appropriate support orders be presented.

Q: John Smith owes $50,000 on his home mortgage. He has $15,000 in the bank. He refuses to pay property taxes on the house. It is repossessed and resold for back taxes that amount to $7,000. Smith then rebuys his home for the taxes due and now owns it free and clear. Is this possible and is it legal?

A: No, a person who has a mortgage on his house cannot relieve himself of his obligations under that mortgage by refusing to pay his property taxes and then purchasing the house at a tax foreclosure sale.

If Smith tries to buy the land from the state after the state has taken it for nonpayment of taxes, his offer will be treated as a payment of the $7,000 due.

Send your questions to "You and The Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers are not possible.

Japan Called Nation Of Readers

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's publishers cranked out more than a billion books last year, a statistic that shows the Japanese aren't letting television or other leisure distractions get in the way of their claim to being the world's most literate nation.

Pointing out that the figure is almost 10 books for every one of Japan's 115 million citizens, the Japan Book Publishers Association also reports that the number of books produced annually has doubled in the last seven years.

"There's a saying in the industry that sales will continue to rise as long as the cities keep growing and the trains keep running," said Ryoichi Kurosaki, a senior employee of central Tokyo's Yaesu Boi Center, possibly the world's largest bookstore under one roof.

However, the commuters who straphang with one hand and hold a book in the other are only a small segment of a public that devours everything from harum-scarum comic books to translations of such heavy imports as economist John Kenneth Galbraith's "Age of Uncertainty."

Priced at the equivalent of $10 — about average for a new book here — Galbraith's effort sold 400,000 copies. That's only middling good in a country where, according to Masaaki Shigehisa, director of the Book Publishers Association, many best sellers easily top the million mark.

And as might befit a nation where the biggest daily newspapers have circulations upwards of 11 aand 12 million, Japan has long claimed the world's highest literacy rate, saying that nearly 100 percent of its people can read and write.

Skeptics say the figreu may be somewhat inflated, because the official criterion for literacy is the ability to sign one's name.

Moreover, one needn't be especially literate to spend time with the "manga" (comic) books that make up about 20 percent of Japan's published material and have a legion of dedicated fans that span the range of society, from teen-agers and housewives to briefcase-toting salary earners.

These 100-page pulp magazines feature serialized stories that are short on text and long on crudely-drawn gore, sex, fantasy and sports. Some run to 7 million copies a week; one baseball "manga" alone sold 25 million copies.

A number of fast-yen publishers also have turned pulp thrillers into runaway best sellers by collaborating with movie producers in highly publicized films based on their books.

Tokyo's Research Institute for Publications, which monitors Japanese reading habits for the Book Publishers Association, reported recently that while 91 percent of the people spent more time reading every day, the average had dropped from 44 minutes in 1976 to 38 minutes last year.

That reported shift coincides with other polls showing that television, sports and other recreational pursuits consume an increasing part of the Japanese person's day.

Refusal to join the trend toward lighter fare was seen in publishing circles as the reason for the bankruptcy last year of Chikuma Shobo, a respected publisher of encylopedias and other serious books. Publishers Association spokesman Shigehisa said the company had gone broke "because it failed to bend to the public demand for paperbacks and periodicals."

In the face of that, however, many regular booksellers continue to prosper. The 52-year-old Kinokuniya company, a specialist in Western books, saw sales top a million yen ($455,000) a day in its 27 outlets last year, and Yesu Book Center is a whopping success in its first 12 months.

"To suggest that the written word is disappearing is a myth," said Yaesu's Kurosaki. "Buying and owning a book gives people a sense of satisfaction they will never receive from watching television or movies. There will always be a basic human need for reading."

Woman Ponders Man's Proposal

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — A Yadkinville man who advertised for a wife in a local newspaper proposed to a respondent the day they met. After five days, the woman isn't sure if she will accept.

Beulah Hutchins Brewer, 67, of Stokes County, who accepted a proposal from Robert L. Evans, 71, said she began having second thoughts after a disagreement with some of his relatives. She did not elaborate.

Evans remained convinced he wanted to marry Mrs. Brewer, to whom he proposed recently.

Mrs. Brewer said she will make a final decision sometime this week.

"I've got my studying cap on," she said.

Evans advertised in the Yadkin Ripple newspaper for two weeks seeking "a nice woman, well-built ... should be able to drive automatic car ... be able to tend a large garden..."

Iranian Art Exhibit Featured At Gallery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Gallery of Art has opened a big show of Persian-Iranian miniatures, painted four centuries ago and planned for showing long before the current Iranian crisis broke out.

Officials at the government-run gallery say the exhibit, planned for years, includes works lent by Britain, France and Sweden but none from the government of Iran.

The show is called "'Wonders of the Age: Masterpieces of Early Safavid Painting, 1501-1576." The paintings were done under the patronage of Shah Tahmasp, who was a talented artist himself. Highlights include paintings and manuscript ornaments ordered by the shah to illustrate the "Book of Kings," the Persian national epic.

Schools Consider Grade Revisions

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

To promote increased enrollment in honors and advanced courses, Lubbock public school officials are proposing a weighted grading scale for those classes to allow students to earn a higher grade point average.

School trustees will consider the proposal Thursday, along with an alternative school year calendar for 1980-81 in which classes would start after Labor Day rather than the end of August.

Jay Gordon, assistant superintendent for instruction, said the revised grading scale is an "encouragement for students to take heavier courses and honor courses."

Gordon said he has heard that students are reluctant to take the more challenging courses for fear they will not make as high a grade as they would in a regular course.

Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said the student population, like other segments of society, are inclined these days "to take the easy way out." As a result, students who could handle more difficult material are choosing the less challenging classes to insure receiving higher grades.

The weighted grading scale for honors courses would allow students more points per letter grade. Currently an A is worth four points, a B is worth 3, a C is worth 2, a D is worth 1 and an F is worth 0.

The new scale would give a student 5 instead of 4 points for an A and each descending letter grade would be worth one less point, although an F would still be worth 0 instead of 1.

The additional points would allow a

Laundry Plan Loses Ground

Directors of the Lubbock Mental Health & Mental Retardation Center agreed Tuesday to make a last-ditch effort to save a proposed laundry training program for the mentally retarded.

Hopes for the controversial program dimmed greatly when the directors learned the center could not receive a $187,500 grant to build the laundry if Lubbock laundry owners continue to oppose the plan.

But directors agreed to let staff members try to gain the support of operators of three protesting Lubbock laundries — Sunbeam, Plains and Bluebonnet.

The directors voted last month to delay the proposal after a group of local laundry operators claimed the state-funded laundry would be unfairly competing with private enterprise.

At the beginning of Tuesday's meeting, some directors wanted to abolish the laundry program entirely . Others wanted to go ahead and re-order equipment for the training laundry. The equipment order was canceled last month after the laundry owners protested.

All arguing was quieted, however, after chairman Jim Kimmel told directors the center would not be able to use the grant as long as the laundrymen objected.

"Officals with the Texas Rehabilitation Agency— although they approved of the laundry concept—felt in view of the opposition in the business community, that we should go in another direction,"

Officers Begin Bear Hunt With Few Clues

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

As Lubbock County Law enforcement officers planned an air search for the mystery bear in Horseshoe Bend Canyon, the strongest lead about the animal's origins seems to have fizzled.

Nancy Hickman, president of People for Animal Welfare, said Tuesday a Slaton man had reported in October that his pet black bear had escaped.

Mrs. Hickman said the man called the Lubbock Animal Shelter after seeing a story in The Avalanche-Journal about the possible sighting of a bear west of Slaton.

He described the bear as "full-grown and mean," she said.

The man, when contacted by The Avalanche-Journal, said he has never owned a bear. Another family member labeled the report to the animal shelter a hoax.

Nevertheless, Lubbock County Sheriff's deputies and officers of the Department of Public Safety plan to "go bear hunting" this morning in the DPS helicopter, said Assistant Chief Deputy Alton Hobbs.

"We're going to give that place (the canyon) a good going-over," Hobbs said.

If indeed there is a bear in the canyon, which is situated approximately three miles north of Slaton, an attempt to capture the animal will be made, Hobbs said.

If it is captured, the amimal probably will be given to a zoo or turned over to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, Hobbs said.

He stressed that bears are protected by game laws and that shooting one, even in West Texas, is illegal unless the animal is attacking.

Hobbs said he was worried that an over-eager hunter might shoot the animal if he encounters it.

The sheriff's office, along with other authorities, were initially skeptical about the possibility of a bear roaming the area until tracks were found in the snow on the north and south rims of the canyon.

Jack Young, district supervisor of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, and Deputy Don Gass went to the north rim of the canyon Tuesday morning to investigate and photograph the latest tracks found.

Those tracks were discovered by Buddy Neugebauer of Acuff, who said the tracks indicated the animal walked along a barbed wire fence before crawling through it and leaving clumps of fur on the fence.

Neugebauer added that, judging from the tracks, the animal walked on its hind legs along the fence for a short distance.

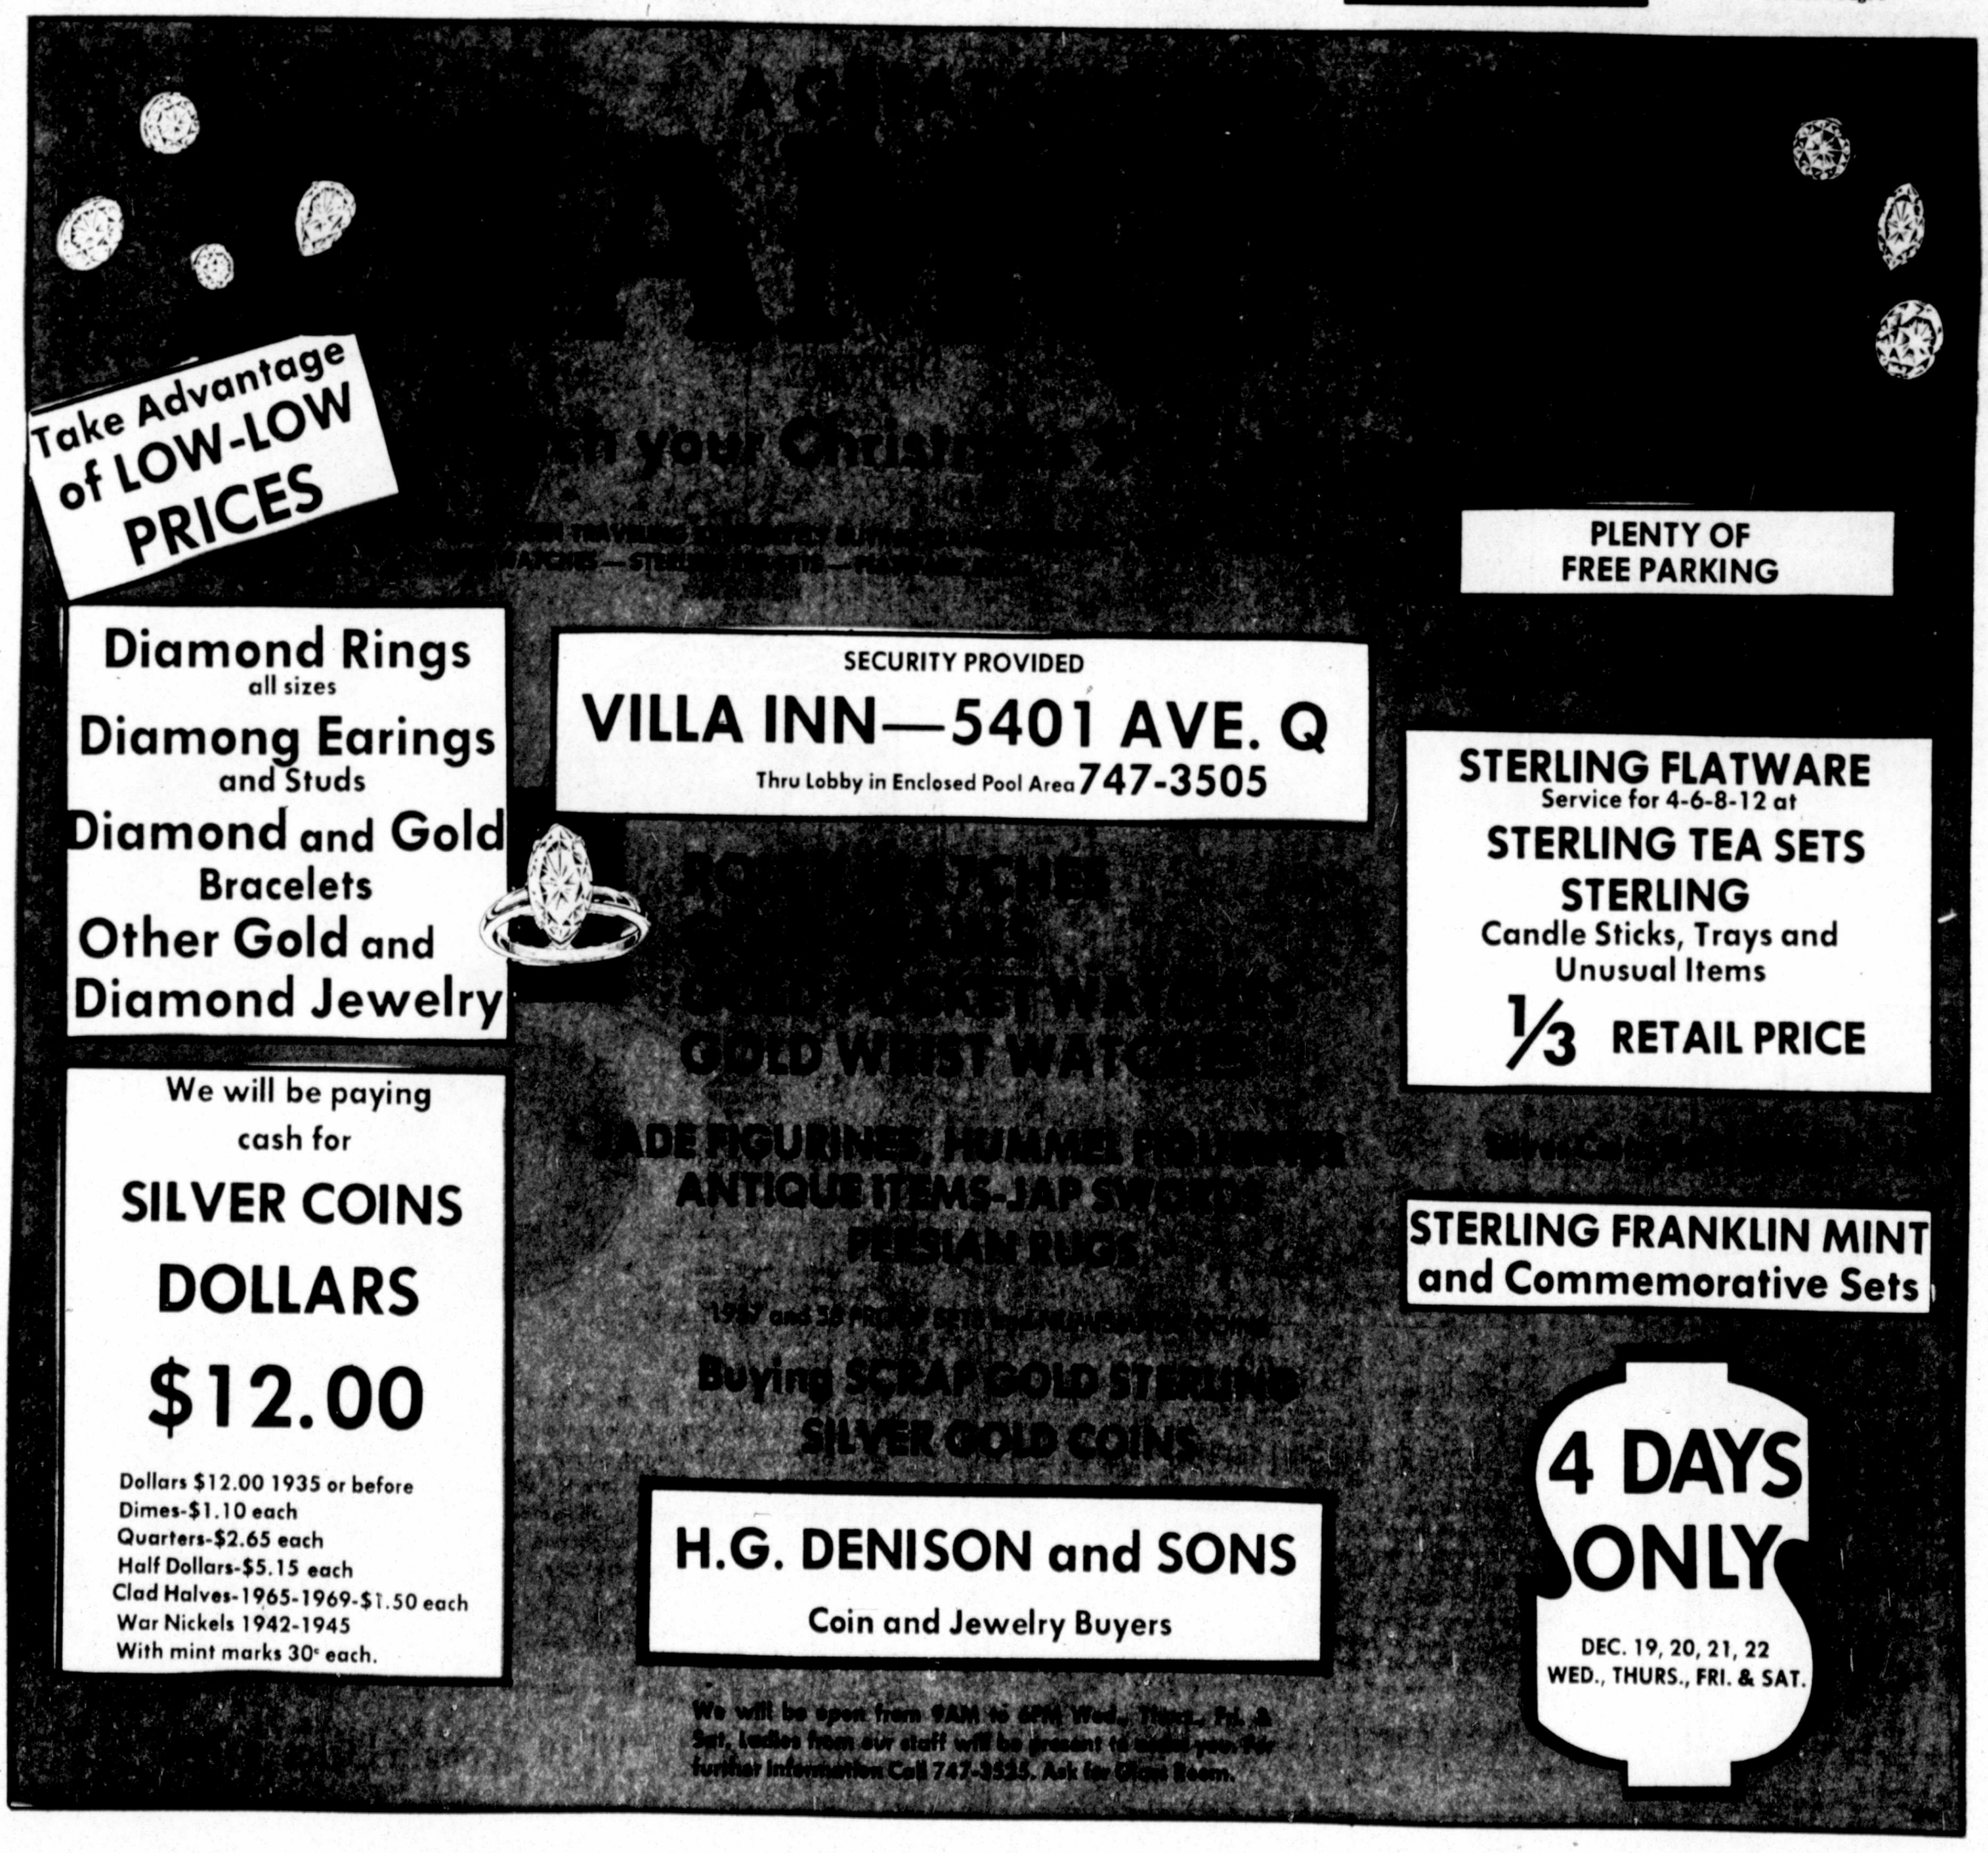

The imprints had been partially distorted by melting snow, but they measured about 6 inches long and 3 inches

Education Specialist Says Playgroups Answer Needs

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — "Cooperative" playgroups — or "do-it-yourself nursery schools" — are one answer for young children without playmates, says a family life education specialist.

Mothers take turns serving as coordinator of the playgroups, she says.

Mrs. Welch is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University Systems.

"These playgroups are an effective way for mothers to help young children learn about the outside world and how to get along with others in a small, intimate environment," Mrs. Welch says.

"The plan works best when there are truly conscientious mothers with similar goals and ideas about the organization of a cooperative playgroup for their children," she adds.

STARTING A GROUP

Some playgroups start among mothers who already know each other and whose children know each other, while other groups might start in newly-established neighborhoods or in very mobile communities.

An interested mother might invite a group of others with children of the same ages to meet with her and discuss the idea.

SETTING GUIDELINES

For the guidelines, which each group sets for itself, here are some ideas:

1) Keep groups small — three or four children seem to work best.

2) Decide how often the group will meet, which day or days, and time of day appropriate for the children and the supervising mother of the day.

Some new groups meet during mid-morning for two hours, once a week.

3) Make a calendar of each mother's supervising days.

4) Agree on a schedule of activities, discipline and steps for deciding when a child is sick and how to arrange for a substitute supervisor-mother.

5) Exchange a list of emergency phone numbers, emergency-treatment permission slips and notes about each child in the group.

In the notes, include likes and dislikes, abilities and interests, allergies and any restrictions on activities, along with other helpful guidelines for working with each child.

MAKING SCHEDULES

Schedules could include a planned project, a storytime, songs and games, a snack, free play and pick-up time.

Whatever the schedules might be, it's important to agree on consistency — to avoid confusion for the children.

Also, set a definite arrival and departure time.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

You've all seen them.

They're members in good standing of the free-spirit generation who take to the open road in search of themselves with nothing but a pack on their backs, a T-shirt that makes a statement and a top ten song on their lips.

I saw one of them last summer in an airport in a remote village in New Guinea. I was sitting on eight pieces of matched luggage at the time. He ambled off the plane in faded bluejeans and sandals, reached into his pack (I've carried larger cosmetic bags), took out a quart of orange juice and drank the entire thing chugalug. His load down a quart, he pushed out the door and into another adventure.

As parents, have you ever wondered how these young people travel so light and so far?

Because somewhere in Toledo, Ohio, a mother is falling over his $800 stereo system, 3,000 records, and six-piece drum set.

Home dropouts are becoming staples on the American scene. Just when you think their goodbyes are final, you look down at your feet and there's their dog with a sign around his neck: "Store, feed and love until I return."

My mail reflects what I am saying. One woman in Ocala, Fla., even suggested I come up with a bill of divorcement for parents to present to their adult children who regard their homes as first class storage lockers. Here's a start.

"Whereas...when a meaningful relationship between parent and child ends, child will get custody of:

"The car that has no motor, no tires and no future and occupies the only parking space in the garage.

"Three closets full of memorabilia including every blue book from every test ever taken to bubblegum baseball cards to typing trophies to broken tennis rackets.

"Let it be known to all parties that mail unopened after 20 days will be sent back to the sender. Anything that has to be fed, cleaned or started during cold weather will be sold at public auction.

"Traveling young adults must register with their parents at least once a year...or lose their family citizenship status and part-time residency. Hair dryers, records, books, and clothes left behind longer than 60 days become community property."

If this doesn't work...try changing your locks.

A great memory is not a prerequisite for good bridge. By that we don't mean that the absent-minded professor has an edge; we just don't believe that it is necessary to remember 52 cards. Orderly thinking and proper planning is the key to winning bridge, and if you have done that, it is seldom necessary to remember more than a few cards. Many players err by trying to think back to reconstruct the play. A simple and more effective technique is to make mental notes of the material facts as you go along.

In today's hand, watching the spots very carefully permitted South the rare pleasure of finessing a four on the third round of a suit.

The bidding was a classic example of how to conduct a cue-bidding sequence. After South discovered that his partner had good hearts, the ace of clubs and the king of diamonds, he felt fully justified in contracting for six hearts. This was an excellent contract, but it might have foundered had West opened a club.

West led his top spade, however, covered by the nine and jack, and won by the king. Declarer drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy, then led the ten of spades. East covered with the queen, declarer won the ace and was delighted to see West drop the seven. Now declarer's six of spades was high and West surely held no more spades.

Declarer crossed to dummy with the king of diamonds and led the deuce of spades. East produced the three and declarer won the trick with the four. Declarer discarded dummy's queen of clubs on the six of spades and thus emerged with an overtrick.

To prevent an avalanche of mail, let us advise you that we are aware that the contract can be made even if West leads a club initially. Declarer can spurn the finesse and ruff out East's queen of diamonds, establishing dummy's jack as a parking spot for his losing club. Or he can take the finesse, then lead the ten and nine of spades off the table, pinning West's 8-7. Neither play, however, is likely to be found at the table.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal format. Do they know something you don't? 1 cup walnuts
1 cup seedless raisins
2/3 cup currants
1 cup snipped prunes
½ cup dried apricots
½ cup halved candied cherries
¼ cup chopped candied orange peel
¼ cup chopped candied lemon peel
1/3 cup butter or margarine
½ cup granulated sugar
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. allspice
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. mace
¼ tsp. ginger
2 large eggs, beaten
⅛ tsp. baking soda
¼ cup golden molasses
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour

Coarsely chop walnuts and raisins; rinse and drain currants. Combine well with prunes, remaining fruits and peels. Cream butter, sugar, salt and spices until fluffy. Beat in eggs. Add soda, molasses and flour; mix to moderate stiff batter. Combine with walnut-fruit mixture. Pack batter into 6-cup mold or pan. Bake at 275 degrees about 2½ hours until cake tests done. Cook, then remove from pan; wrap in foil and store in cool place. Batter measures about 5½ cups and weighs about 2 lbs., 10 oz. Makes one cake that may be eaten after 48 hours storing.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: Last summer my sister and her two sons (9 and 11) visited me. The boys found a closet full of clothes which I had stored away, so they put on a "fashion show" for their mother and me. It was cleverly done and both boys made beautiful models.

I was recently informed by my sister that her 11-year-old had taken home one of the gowns he had modeled, as well as a pair of my high-heeled shoes! She found them in this guitar case. This same boy used to wear his mother's clothes when he was 4 and 5, but she thought he'd outgrown it. My sister is a strict disciplinarian. "Grounding" is her choice of punishment. What would be your recommendation for correction such tendencies!

CONCERNED AUNT

Dear Aunt: Your sister should be counseled by someone who is familiar with transvestism (cross dressing), and learn more about it. She als should keep the channels of communication open with her son so that he will feel free and unashamed to share his feelings and tendencies with her. Grounding him for something about which he may be compulsive is exactly what she SHOULDN'T do. The boy needs understanding not punishment.

DEAR ABBY: A reader recently asked if it was considered proper etiquette to turn his wine glass uside down at a dinner party, and you said it wasn't.

Abby, as a non-wine drinker, I have always turned my wine glass upside down to let the waiter know that I do not wish wine. Otherwise he is apt to come along and fill my glass which I'm not looking, which is a foolish waste of wine.

It's just a matter of common sense. You disappointed me.

NO WINE IN CEDAR RAPIDS

My problem is that my husband (let's call him John), will call me at least five times a day asking me to do things for him. (Make calls for him, run copies, bring him a snack, etc.) John just called to ask me to remind him of an appointment he had this afternoon! If I suggest that he tell his secretary, or make reminder-notes like I do, he gets angry and hangs up on me.

Abby, I have a job to do just like John does. I'm afraid this is going to jeopardize my job. How can I end this dilemma without offending my husband? I am becoming a

Dear Surrogate: As long as you continue to act as a "surrogate secretary" for your husband, you are contributing to the dilemma. If his secretary isn't as efficient as you, tell him to make a change. Margaret Truman Assumes New Role

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Margaret Truman Daniel's youngest son, Thomas, is obviously impressed with her new role as spokesperson for America's toy manufacturers.

"Wow!" he said, when Mrs. Daniel described a plastic construction set she had seen for making space toys. "Am I going to get one?"

Before she could locate a set at a toy store, the manufacturer gave him one.

In an interview, the daughter of former President Harry S. Truman made it clear her four sons, ages 13-22, are not going to get all the toys they ask for, any more than they did when they were small.

"Over the years we've taken the children with us to two or three toy shops to see what catches their eye," she said in an interview. "Then we select what's suitable."

Mrs. Daniel said the oldest boy, Clifton, 22, "did his best to take the (construction) set away" from Thomas.

Which led to the question of how to deal with disputes over toy possession, especially among very young children.

"I've tried psychology," Mrs. Daniel said. "Then I finally get tired and say, very firmly, 'That is his toy. Let go of it.'"

As spokesperson for the industry, she's granting interviews and making radio and television appearances to answer parents' questions and reflect the industry's views on their products. To prepare for this, she is visiting TMA Members' factories throughout the country.

Asked why she undertook an assignment so different from her musical, stage and radio work, she said:

"We've had a toy store in our house for 22 years.

"I find this industry fascinating," she added. "After 22 years of buying toys, I hope to be able to make parents aware of good ways to select them.

"I think parents try, but some have quite a lot to learn."

She recalled one Christmas back home in Independence, Mo. "I was eight, I think. I had my heart set on a toy electric train. My father presented me with a beautiful Steinway piano instead."

She finally got the train of her dreams a few years ago, a gift from the producer and assistant producer of the radio show she conducted in the early 1970s.

Mrs. Daniel is first to agree that age is an important consideration in toy buying.

So is dexterity, she said.

"One three-year-old may not use his fingers as well as another. Some five-year-olds are not as quick as some threes.

Most manufacturers put age guidelines on toys these days, she said.

"I think parents should be consulted by other members of the family before they select toys," she added, to make sure they are both safe and appropriate. Children who cannot work a toy properly become frustrated in trying.

"My parents and in-laws have always consulted us about buying toys for our sons," she said.

She could recall only one incident when a friend gave one son a birthday present that was unsuitable. She's forgotten why she opened it ahead of time, but it was lucky she did.

"It was a very involved game," she said, too complicated for his age at the time. So she put it away in a closet until he was older.

Mrs. Daniel disagrees with people who criticize TV toy ads for their hard sell or for allegedly being misleading.

"I have watched many ads. The toy industry regulates itself beautifully. It has very strict guidelines," she said, adding that she's opposed to government regulation.

"I think there's too much government in everything," she added, with the directness for which her father was famous.

It's fine for toys to educate, she said, but a toy's first function should be the pleasure children get from it.

Until what age?

"Until they're 16. Then I don't know what they're doing," she said, her face lighting up with the famous Truman smile.

On safety:

If you don't have separate rooms for older and younger children, she recommends toy storage shelves too high for the little ones to reach, and teaching the older children responsibility.

"When our oldest son was 12, Thomas was a baby. He wasn't allowed to play in his older brothers' rooms unless I — or a sitter — was around."

Group Study Views Belief In Santa

NEW YORK (UPI) — A cross-generational study by three psychologists indicates children today are more likely to want to teach their offspring about Santa Claus than did youngsters in 1896.

The study also showed the 19th century tots were much more likely than contemporary children to attribute superhuman powers to Santa — perhaps, the psychologists theorize, because today's children are raised on stories and television shows about such superhuman characters as Wonder Woman and Batman.

The research was done by Ludy T. Benjamin, Jr., Jacqueline F. Langley and Rosalie J. Hall, and reported in the December issue of Psychology Today magazine. The new study replicated that done in 1896 with 900 7-to 13-year-olds in Lincoln, Neb., public schools.

Cities Seeking Aid To Protect Diplomats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are seeking to contrast protection of foreign diplomats in this country with recent attacks on U.S. embassies abroad, but New York and other cities complain there is little federal effort outside the nation's capital.

In Washington, a branch of the Secret Service watches over embassies and international organizations.

But protection of more than 100 foreign missions to the United Nations in New York and of other foreign consulates and offices across the country generally is left to local police.

The federal government provides no financial help for routine protection.

When the Cuban and Soviet missions to the U.N. were bombed earlier this month — the Cubans for the third time (in a year) — the Soviet news agency Tass sharply criticized U.S. security precautions.

The State Department called the complaint "a scurrilous attempt to justify the Iranian actions." And the White House said "the United States is totally committed to carrying out its responsibilities for the protection of foreign diplomats."

Led by New York City, which spends $8 million annually to protect the U.N. missions, local governments have complained for years about bearing what they consider to be a national burden.

Federal aid is available for "extraordinary" events, such as the recent visit of Pope John Paul II, but only to a handful of cities under narrowly defined circumstances.

Under regulations that went into effect in 1976, New York and six other cities — those with 20 or more foreign consulates — can be reimbursed by the federal government for events such as a visit by a head of state.

But the rules are somewhat erratic. A city can collect for guarding the "domicile" of a foreign dignitary, for example, but not for protecting his or her motorcade.

Rep. William Green, R-N.Y., whose district includes the United Nations neighborhood, has introduced a bill calling for a complete federal takeover of the costs of diplomatic protection. The measure has been stalled in committee for more than a year.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Richard Davis said this week that the Carter administration was "actively considering" such a move, but was not yet convinced of its necessity.

New York so far is the only city to collect any money under the existing rules, and $3 million of its $4.5 million in claims was disallowed.

More liberal rules, which have been the subject of negotiations since they were proposed in June, are close to completion, according to several sources close to the situation.

The new rules could give New York a chance to recoup some of its past expenses, but funds already set aside for the program would be exhausted quickly.

For instance, New York wants $6.6 million to cover recent visits by the pope and Cuban President Fidel Castro.

But there is only $6.35 million currently available for such visits, a Treasury Department official said. And he noted that this sum includes all the unspent funds appropriated since the program began in 1976 as well as the full appropriation for fiscal year 1980, now less than three months old.

size that Congress could be asked for more money if New York's claims are approved. Under the statute, another $2.75 million could be added this year.

But that still might not be enough to cover claims from New York and the other cities eligible for federal aid under current law — Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans and San

1979 Longer Than 1978

SWINDON, England (UPI) — Don't adjust your watches just yet, but 1979 will be one second longer than 1978.

The Science Research Council issued a reminder that a "leap second" will be slipped into the last minute of this year, making it 61 seconds log.

"Leap seconds are introduced to ensure that the Royal Greenwich Observatory's time signals, which are controlled by atomic clocks, will remain within one second of mean solar time at Greenwich," the council said.

This "mean solar time" — the precise relationship between the earth and the sun at Greenwich, England, from which the world's time zones are determined — is established "by astronomical observations of the slightly irregular rotation of the earth," the council said.

This year's "leap second" is the ninth since the system was introduced in 1972. The next one, the council said, "probably will be at the end of 1980."

Group To Challenge Provisions Of Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — A liberal-conservative coalition led by Eugene J. McCarthy and Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., plans court challenges to some provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act.

The first suit will ask the U.S. District Court here to strike down spending restrictions for individuals or groups acting outside a particular candidate's official campaign organization, McCarthy said this week. He said future suits will seek to ban contribution limits for all challenging candidates and minority parties, to remove the $25,000 annual ceiling on campaign contributions by individuals, and to abolish special postage rates for the Democratic and Republican committees.

Orphan Train Carried Youngsters To New Homes

McPHERSON, Kan. (AP) — One day after her 11th birthday, Anna Fuchs sat on a platform in a drafty Kansas church praying for a mother to step forward out of the curious crowd and give her a new life.

It was Dec. 7, 1924, a milestone for a crippled orphan from New York City and a lonely spinster from McPherson, Kan. Forever after, their lives would entwine.

Anna Fuchs' story is one of thousands of footnotes in the story of America's orphan trains. The trains ran west from 1853 to 1929, but today fewremember the transplant of nearly 100,000 abandoned and orphaned children from the ghetto streets of a metropolis to the isolated towns strung out along the tracks.

Miss Fuchs — 66 and retired — is now a civic leader in the small prairie town where the train deposited her. She is one of five children whose past is recounted in a new book, "Searching for Home," by Martha Nelson Vogt and her daughter, Christina Vogt, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

"I hesitated at first," said Miss Fuchs, a soft-spoken woman whose cheerful laugh dispels a prim image. "But I realized that most who had talked about it already were ones whose adoption didn't work out or were mistreated. I thought it wasn't fair to tell just one side.

"The happy, well-adjusted ones like me have been swallowed up by society. I wanted our side to be heard, too. And I wanted to pay tribute to the people who opened their homes and made it possible for a child like me to get a second chance."

The story begins in 1853, when social worker Charles Loring Brace founded the New York Children's Aid Society. It was a time before widows' pensions, health insurance, welfare subsidies, compulsory education and child labor laws — an age when infanticide was not uncommon.

New York City overflowed with immigrants. Many died of disease, overwork and hunger. With relatives far away in the Old Country, tens of thousands of penniless orphans took to the steets.

The society started orphanages and schools, but Brace felt the only decent life for the children lay to the west. He believed that in exchange for an extra pair of hands for chores, farm families would provide waifs with wholesome food, a Christian upbringing and an education.

Legal adoption was possible after a year if the placement was satisfactory for both child and foster family. That was the ideal. It didn't always work that way.

"I know a lot of people today will feel this was a terrible thing, to bundle up a bunch of kids, ship them out on a train and give them away to somebody who liked the way they looked when they lined up on a theater stage or a church altar," said Miss Fuchs.

"But back then there were no psychologists or computer matches. It was either the orphan train or turn them out destitute on the streets to become beggars, thieves and prostitutes. There was no other way and we all knew it. And anything was better than an orphanage."

The orphan trains — actually normal passenger coaches on which chaperoned groups of children traveled — started in the late 1850s. In 1875, the peak year, more than 4,000 children chugged west.

In 1920, Anna's father, a butcher from Hungary, died in a tuberculosis sanitarium. Anna, a sickly child suspected of having TB, stayed at the Catskill Mountains hospital until 1924, when her mother died in New York City.

"I was sent back to be with my sisters, and neighbors got us into the orphanage," said Miss Fuchs. "That first night, I grew up. I knew I was completely alone then, and I was determined to somehow survive."

After Thanksgiving, the girls were told they were going west to new homes. She recalls humming "California Here I Come" on the long journey with her two sisters and six other orphans.

But when the train stopped, Anna was stunned to find herself in "a flat, desolate, snowbound landscape in the middle of nowhere."

This wasn't California. Where was it? "Kansas," replied the chaperone. Anna had never even heard the word.

Two days later, awkward in a too-big blue velvet dress and a red sailor hat that failed to hide her unruly bangs, Anna stood before a standing-room-only crowd at the Presbyterian church. People stared in frank curiosity at the scared little strangers.

In the back of the room sat Jennie Bengtson, a 49-year-old spinster who supported herself by taking in boarders. She hadn't intended to come.

Her gaze kept coming back to Anna. On impulse, she told an adoption committee member: "I would like to have the girl on the end."

The orphan spent that first night eating ginger snaps and crying. Jennie felt as helpless as Anna felt lost. But slowly, tentatively, the bond grew.

"I was teased about my New York accent. I was a free spirit and Jennie had strict rules. But I had no choice. I had to stay there and make a go of it, and she stuck with me all the way," Miss Fuchs said. "One day I realized we loved each other."

Anna started the fifth grade and went to church every Sunday. Her sisters, Margaret, 9, and Helen, 7, adopted by other local families, visited occasionally. Life settled into a routine.

Anna graduated from McPherson College in 1937 with degrees in music and education. She and Jennie weathered the Depression years and in 1941, Anna was hired by an insurance company.

"My main concern was to make my own living and never be dependent on anyone else," said Miss Fuchs. "After studying genetics in college and not knowing my hereditary background, I wasn't ready for marriage. I never wanted to adopt a child myself. I never felt I had the patience or the foresight."

ORPHAN TRAIN CHILD — Anna Fuchs, 66, stands on the train platform in McPherson, Kan., next to the tracks that brought her to this small town aboard an orphan train in 1924. Miss Fuchs is one of nearly 100,000 orphans who were sent from New York City to the Midwest from 1854 until 1929, to be adopted by farm families and people in small towns of America's heartland. Iranian Embassy Lists Attacks

By United Press International

The Iranian Embassy in Washington, D.C., issued a statement documenting what it called murders, brutalities and indignities committed against Iranians in the United States. A UPI spot check shows many of the allegations are exaggerated, some questionable or without foundation.

The four-page, single-spaced list received by the UPI Washington bureau Tuesday included alleged incidents in Texas, California, Maryland, Oklahoma, Massachusetts and Ohio.

A headline over the list said, "Campaign of Intimidation and Victimization of Iranians in the U.S." No dates were given for the alleged incidents.

Included in the list were an alleged attack on a pregnant Iranian woman at a Safeway store in Maryland, an Iranian student clubbed in Oklahoma City, several attacks on the Iranian consulate in Houston, an Iranian slain in Houston and the stabbing of an Iranian in Boston.

Also included were claims that police in Beverly Hills, Calif., during an anti-shah demonstration beat Iranian students, who "were bitten by police dogs after they had been jailed," and bombings of mosques in Norman, Okla., and Cleveland.

Maryland State Police said they knew of no report of an Iranian woman being beaten; and local police in Montgomery and Prince George's counties in Maryland, where most of the state's Safeway stores are located, knew nothing of such an incident.

The Islamic Center of Cleveland, the only mosque in the city, has had some of its windows broken. But mosque president Amir Khalili, an Iranian native, said, "It's nothing significant. We think it's not so much a result of hatred, more of kids doing things after school."

Demonstrating Iranians in Beverly Hills were attacked by American counter-demonstrators Nov. 9. Police broke up the fighting and arrested about 130 Iranians, mainly for their own protection. There were no substantiated reports of police brutality or aggressive police dogs.

In Boston, a fight between four Brookline High School students and two Iranian students last May resulted in the stabbing death of one Iranian. The fight hed been described as a "turf war" between student factions. Police said the Americans did not know they were fighting Iranians; one thought they were Hispanic. Three of the Brookline students have been indicted for murder.

A check showed an Iranian student at Oklahoma City University was struck with a club during a confrontation between Iranians and other students. At the University of Oklahoma in Norman, a homemade firebomb was thrown against the door of the headquarters of the Iranian Student Alliance, causing minor damage to the door.

The Iranian Consulate in Houston was closed for at least three days last month because of daily lunchtime demonstrations; the only damage reported was defacing of the consulate door.

The body of Mahmood Dehle Hosseinzadeh, 22, of Iran, was found stabbed and shot in a ditch in Houston. His empty pockets had been turned inside out and police suspect robbery was the motive.

Among other claims by the Iranian Embassy:

—"The notorious 'no dogs, no negroes' sign has been changed to 'no dogs, no Iranians' and placed at the entrance to many restaurants."

—"Many Iranians have been thrown out of their homes and their jobs ... Not only have Iranian students been harassed by American students, they have been denied by college officials (in writing) the right to finish their education."

Christmas Cards To Hostages Flooding Post Offices In Iran

By The Associated Press

Postal facilities in Iran are being flooded with mail as Americans by the hundreds of thousands write one additional Christmas card this year — to the hostages in Tehran.

From Philadelphia to Pine Bluff, Ark., and Los Angeles to Lincoln, Neb., well-wishers signed cards and wrote holiday messages Tuesday to be sent to 260 Takhte Jamshid Ave., the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

"Dear Americans," wrote Ellen Rosenthall as she began her message in a downtown Pittsburgh department store. After filling one side of the card she looked up and said, "I hope this will help somebody in some way."

The card-signings coincided with President Carter's designation of Tuesday as national Unity Day in support of the hostages. Flags were hoisted and one city, Huntington, W.Va., halted all activity for 50 seconds at noon.

Many of the Christmas cards were donated by Recycled Paper Products Inc., a Chicago-based card and stationery publisher, and given away Tuesday at department stores.

Philip M. Friedmann, president of the company, said arrangements had been made for 500,000 cards to be given away at 100 distribution centers around the country.

In Erie, Pa., thousands of area residents lined up in a shopping mall Tuesday to sign a 350-foot Christmas card.

"So far, we have over 200 feet of signatures, said John Kanzius, assistant to the president of radio station WJET, sponsor of the project. The 3-foot-wide card will be rolled up and mailed to the embassy in Tehran on Thursday.

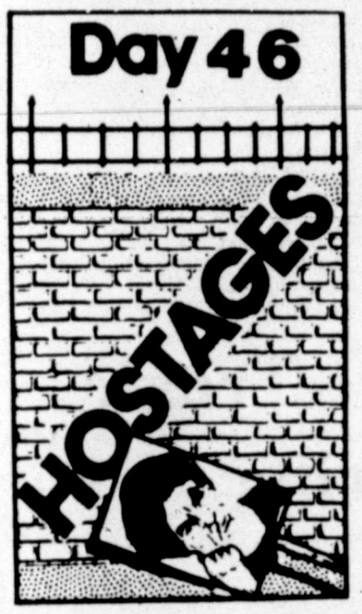

Meanwhile, 6,000 cards already have been delivered to the embassy, where 50 Americans have been held since Iranian students took over the building Nov. 4.

And a Los Angeles radio reporter coordinating the card program from his hotel room in Tehran said the post office there has been unable to keep up with deliveries.

"The hotel didn't get a postal delivery today and the post office said they had so much they couldn't get it all sorted," said Alex Paen, 26, of KMPC.

He said well-wishers from 35 states, most of them children, had sent greetings and presents, including Bibles and cookies.

"I'm thinking of you this Christmas," said a card from Linda Coatney of Mountain View School in Aloha, Ore.

Americans Respond Nationwide To Carter's Call For Unity Day

By United Press International

Americans responded to President Carter's call for a national day of unity in the Iranian crisis by flying the Stars and Stripes from millions of homes across the country.

They also prayed, sang songs, lit candles, turned on their headlights and sent thousands of greeting cards to their countrymen being held hostage in Tehran.

President Carter proclaimed Tuesday as National Unity Day, calling for flags to wave across the nation in a show of support for his administration's efforts to win the unconditional release of the hostages.

In New York, the Port Authority unfurled a 60-by-90-foot flag from the George Washington Bridge. A sign on the bridge urged motorists to turn on their headlights for the hostages. Thousands of flags flew from skyscraper windows, construction sites and apartment buildings.

It looked like the Fourth of July, Flag Day or other national observances in many cities and towns across the nation.

Gov. Ella Grasso of Connecticut urged Americans in all towns and cities to gather at 6:30 p.m. today and burn candles in a silent vigil for the hostages.

The Greenfield, Mass., Board of Selectmen went beyond a Unity Day and proclaimed the entire week the "Days of Concern." A card of hope was being circulated for signatures to be sent to Iran.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements urged hundreds of state employees to pray for the hostages.

An 8½-foot Christmas tree sent by Douglas Turnbull of Seattle got hung up in red tape in the international mail facility at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago. Postal inspectors finally waived an Agriculture Department requirement the tree be inspected for pests and sent it on its way to Tehran.

Turnbull said he was not sure Iranian authorities would deliver the tree to the hostages, but said, "We've got some congressmen working on it. We can only hope that it arrives and arrives on time."

Shah's Condition May Be Worsening

NEW YORK (AP) — The decision by doctors to order chemotherapy for the former Shah of Iran may indicate his cancer has taken a turn for the worse.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi began treatment with an anti-cancer drug or drugs for his lymphoma, a cancer of the lymph system, just before leaving Texas on Saturday for Contadora Island off the coast of Panama.

The shah's New York doctors, Benjamin Kean and Hibbard Williams, have revealed few details of the treatment for the deposed monarch.

But Kean said in an affidavit in a Fort Worth court last week that the shah's condition had "deteriorated" and that "additional surgery might be necessary." The shah underwent surgery two months ago here to remove his gallbladder and several gallstones, and also had two weeks of X-ray therapy for swollen cancerous lymph nodes in his neck.

The surgeon who removed his gallbladder noted that the shah's spleen was enlarged, which is usually a sign in lymphoma that the spleen has become cancerous and the cancer is spreading. Doctors questioned the finding, since medical records showed the shah had had an enlarged spleen for 30 years.

But when Kean examined the shah at Lackland Air Force Base last week, he found that the spleen had swollen even further since the shah left New York. Hence, there is a good chance the shah's cancer has returned.

Doctors familiar with lymphoma said it was not unusual for a cancer to recur rapidly, especially in a patient like the shah, who took anti-cancer drugs for six years for a case of chronic lymphatic leukemia before the lymphoma was diagnosed earlier this year.

"This guy has had a lot of disease, he's been treated with drugs and radiation, and there's going to be recurrence. In general, in this setting, you're in trouble," said one doctor, who asked not to be identified.

The doctor said any new flareup might be difficult to treat, since it could be resistant to the drugs used against the earlier case of leukemia.

The shah's New York doctors originally planned to combat the lymphoma with what was described as an "aggressive" six-drug therapy.

These drugs are toxic, and patients must be closely watched during treatment. But one of the shah's physicians said Tuesday it would be possible — though not desirable — to give them in a place like Contadora, where medical facilities are few.

However, another of the shah's physicians, though declining to discuss the case in detail, hinted that only a few or even only one anti-cancer drug was involved in the shah's current treatment.

Jail Inmate Treated For Dehydration

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — One of five Iranian prisoners taking part in a week-long hunger strike has been treated for dehydration, but apparently is suffering no other ill effects from the fast, the director of the Bexar County Jail says.

The prisoner, Fazfhid Furoozandeh, 24, reported for sick call at the jail Tuesday morning, jail officials said. He and four other Iranians had been on a hunger strike since Wednesday in a protest against the shah of Iran, who spent two weeks at San Antonio's Lackland Air Force Base.

An examination revealed signs of dehydration and Furoozandeh was sent to Robert B. Greene Clinic for tests. He was returned to the jail Tuesday night, according to jail director Norman Cox.

Furoozandeh and his companions were arrested Dec. 12 on the steps of the San Antonio city hall, where they had been demonstrating against the city's denial of a parade permit to protest the shah's presence in the city.

No date has been set for trial, Cox said, and the Iranians are still refusing to post bond.

City officials denied the parade permit because they feared violent anti-Iranian counter-demonstrations. The Iranians say they began their hunger strike two days before their arrest.

Cox said the five have taken only tea and sugar three times daily since their arrests.

"In their weakened condition they are sleeping most of the time now," Cox said. "Other than segregating them from the other prisoners for security, they get the same privileges as everyone else."

Stafford's Wife Gives Testimony

PRELIMINARY BEGINS — Roger Dale Stafford, already convicted in Oklahoma City's steakhouse murder case, came to the McClain County, Okla. courthouse to begin his preliminary hearing in the murder of the three-member Melvin Lorenz family. (AP Laserphoto)

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford's preliminary hearing on charges of murdering three members of a Texas family was winding to a close today with cross-examination of his wife, who testified Tuesday she saw Stafford gun down the family.

Verna Stafford, 26, testified that her 28-year-old husband killed Melvin Lorenz, 38, his wife Linda, 31, and son Richard, 13, of San Antonio when Lorenz refused to turn over money during a robbery alongside Interstate 35 near this central Oklahoma town on June 22, 1978.

Stafford defense attorney J. Malone Brewer and McClain County District Attorney Kay Huff both said they expected the preliminary hearing would end today with an order by Special Judge Sam Goodwin for Stafford to stand trial on charges of murdering the Lorenz family.

Mrs. Huff said she will seek three new death sentences against Stafford in the Lorenz case, on top of the six he received for his October conviction for the murders of six Oklahoma City steakhouse workers in the worst robbery-murder in Oklahoma history. Stafford is appealing the conviction.

Mrs. Stafford was the chief prosecution witness against her husband in the steakhouse case, as she is in the Lorenz murders. She testified she watched her husband and his late brother, Harold, kill the six steakhouse workers during a July 16, 1978 robbery.

Harold Stafford died in a Tulsa motorcycle accident six days after the steakhouse killings.

Brewer, who also defended Stafford at the steakhouse murders trial and is handling Stafford's appeal of his conviction in that case, objected repeatedly to allowing Mrs. Stafford to testify in the Lorenz case.

As he argued unsuccessfully at the steakhouse trial, Brewer contended a wife cannot legally testify against her husband. However, like judges in the previous case, Goodwin chose to reject that argument.

Brewer sharply attacked Mrs. Stafford as he began cross-examining her.

Brewer asked Goodwin to "place Verna Stafford under arrest on a charge of murder in the first-degree," contending that by testifying she was present at the Lorenz killings, Mrs. Stafford was confessing her guilt in the murders.

Goodwin refused Brewer's request.

Mrs. Stafford has not been charged with any crimes. Mrs. Huff said she and the prosecutor in the steakhouse murder case — Oklahoma County District Attorney Andrew Coats — will meet after the Lorenz case ends and charge Mrs. Stafford with a crime of a less serious nature than murder.

In dramatic testimony Tuesday, Mrs. Stafford said her now-estranged husband fatally shot the Lorenz family after Lorenz stopped his pickup truck alongside I-35 at about 2 a.m. to aid Mrs. Stafford, who was standing alongside the Staffords' car pretending to be a stranded motorist. Roger and Harold Stafford were crouching out of view on the side of the car, Mrs. Stafford said.

"When he (Lorenz) got out he asked me what was wrong and I told him the car was overheated and I didn't know what to do," Mrs. Stafford testified, breathing heavily and tightly squeezing her hands.

Nelson, Braxton To Assume Urban Renewal Agency Posts

George Nelson was elected chairman and J.T. Braxton was selected as vice chairman of the city's Urban Renewal Agency during annual officer elections Tuesday.

Nelson, a three-year veteran of the agency, took the helm from outgoing chairman Tommie Stevens and will serve through December 1980.

After the election, the board took care of several bids affecting land parcels across the city's Community Development areas, the largest of which was a bid of $14,935 for the demolition of 28 structures on 25 parcels. That bid was awarded to J.L. Kubacek, whose bid was the lowest of the two received.

The board also approved resolutions authorizing eminent domain proceedings to secure title and price on two separate parcels of land in the 1700 block of E. 14th Street.

Proceedings toward obtaining the title on the L.I. Robinson parcel at 1707 E. 14th St., and the price on the Sally Moncivais parcel at 1711 E. 14th St. were unanimously approved. Both parcels are in the fifth year Community Development area 27-A.

The board also agreed to pay $750 for a 50-foot tract in the Coronado area and to spend approximately $500 to construct a fence for Lewis Jones at his 3010 E. Second St. residence. Nelson said the funds for the fence will come from a special loan supplement.

In other action, the board:

•Passed a resolution approving plans and specifications and authorizing the advertisement for bids for the demolition and clearance of 30 parcels of land across the city's community development areas.

•Approved the adoption of the Housing and Urban Development handbook entitled "Relocation and Real Property Acquisition" as the official governing regulations for property acquisition and relocation.

•Approved the expenditure of $750 to allow several city staff members to attend a special convention of the National Association of Housing and Redevelopment Officials to be held in McAllen in January.

•Set Jan. 22, 1980 as the date for their next meeting.

School Trustees To Vote On New Grading Scale

student to beef up his or her grade point average, and also will benefit students when class rank and honor graduates are determined, Leslie said.

Gordon said the scale, which is being utilized in other school districts, would be used in honors and such "heavy" courses as fourth year math and science and in some of the LEAP (Lubbock Exemplary Academic Program) courses at Lubbock High School.

Trustees also will be presented with two alternative school calendars for next year, one of which would move up the starting day of classes to Sept.2, the day after Labor Day.

The other calendar sets the first day as Aug. 27, the traditional date for starting school after summer vacation.

Leslie said administrators will recommend the board approve the calendar that sets the starting date in August.

Leslie said that Sept. 1 is the earliest date on which Labor Day can fall, and that in subsequent years when the holiday falls later in September, students will have to attend classes into June in order to fulfill the requirement for school attendance days.

He said that classes in June present a problem for teachers who wish to attend the opening summer school session at Texas Tech University, which begins June 1.

He said an advantage of the post-Labor Day starting date might be that more students will attend during the opening days of schools. Traditionally, early attendance is low when school starts in August because many students wait until after the Labor Day holiday to begin classes.

The board also will consider a request to dismiss classes early on two days at the start of 1980 in order to provide special education in-service training for regular and special education teachers.

The in-service requirements were mandated by Senate Bill 350 that was passed during the last state legislative session.

The board will meet at 7:15 a.m. Thursday at the Administration Building, 1628 19th St.

Family Members Relive Tragic Events At Murder Hearing

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — "You always think it's somebody else and then — bam! It's your own family. You have no way of knowing what it's like."

Dennis Lorenz, 33, was talking about a personal tragedy — the June 22, 1978 murders of his brother Melvin, 38, Melvin's wife Linda, 31, and son Richard, 13, of San Antonio.

This week, Lorenz and his 67-year-old father Edward, both of Jamestown, N.D., are reliving the tragedy as they attend the preliminary hearing of Roger Dale Stafford, who's charged with murdering the Melvin Lorenz family during a robbery along I-35 near here.

At the time of their deaths, the murder victims were driving to North Dakota to attend the funeral of Melvin Lorenz's mother, who had died of cancer.

"You can read about these things, but it's hard to imagine."

"Those first three weeks (after the deaths) a person was just a ball of nerves," Dennis Lorenz said.

Both Dennis and Edward Lorenz believe Stafford is guilty.

"They got the right fellow, it seems to fit," said Edward Lorenz.

"I don't know how he (Stafford) possibly can't be guilty. I don't see how he can possibly be innocent," Dennis Lorenz said, after testifying at the preliminary hearing to identify gruesome pictures of the blood-soaked bodies of the three murder victims.

"I'd like to give him (Stafford) exactly the chance he gave Ricky (Richard Lorenz)," Dennis Lorenz said.

"I've got faith in the people down here" to convict Stafford and sentence him to die, Dennis Lorenz added.

The murders changed Dennis Lorenz's life forever, he said, prompting him to become a part-time deputy sheriff in Stutsman County, N.D.

Dennis Lorenz is upset that Stafford's estranged wife, Verna, has not been charged in the three murders.

Mrs. Stafford, 26, is the star prosecution witness against Stafford, 28. She testified Tuesday that she posed as a stranded motorist to get the Lorenz victims to stop alongside I-35 to lend assistance. Stafford then killed the three, Mrs. Stafford said.

City Laundry Operators Protest Training Plan

said MHMR executive director Gene Menefee.

One thing the directors did agree on was the pressing need for job training for the mentally retarded in Lubbock.

Director Norma Porres said she feared that no matter what kind of job training program the MHMR center implemented, opposition would surface somewhere.

"It's a terrific blow for me to learn we cannot implement this program for fear somebody would be losing x amount of business, when they don't know for sure," Dr. Porres said.

Jim Clopton, chairman of the board's program committee told the board that the proposed MHMR laundry would take away "at most" 2.6 percent of business from other Lubbock laundries.

Any business lost is too much, claim the laundrymen, who also say competition in the city is stiff.

"Life is more than profit, and I believe in the worth of this program," Dr. Porres said. "And I don't believe we should put it in a corner and forget it. There's been too much work already done."

Director Claude Dollins, however, suggested the center stay out of the laundry business.

"In lieu of adverse publicity we've received, I think we need to begin anew," Dollins said. "I genuinely question the logic and rationale of trying to press this on the community."

Dollins added, "Private enterprise in this city is not that callous to the needs of the mentally retarded."

The directors agreed to "hold in abeyance" the laundry program for another month after Tony Mattox, mental retardation coordinator, asked for a chance to change the dissenting laundrymen's minds.

Mattox added, however, that the chances of accomplishing that are slim.

One woman in the audience, the mother of a retarded child, told the board: "He (one of the dissenting laundry owners) said he was interested in where his tax dollars were going. Well, it's our tax dollars, too. I think it's a tragedy to let them (the laundrymen) do this."

Bear Hunting

wide, Young said.

He noted that the tracks were not identical to those made by a bear, adding that no claw marks could be found.

Young did say, however, that the tracks were made by an animal, and were not made by a human as a hoax.

"I personally would have to have a lot more evidence before I could say it's a bear," Young said.

The bear hunt began when Keith Harber, who lives just north of Slaton, called the sheriff's office Sunday night and said he had found bear tracks in the snow near his house.

A couple living west of Slaton told sheriff's deputies in mid-October they had seen a bear rummaging through their garbage cans in the early morning hours.

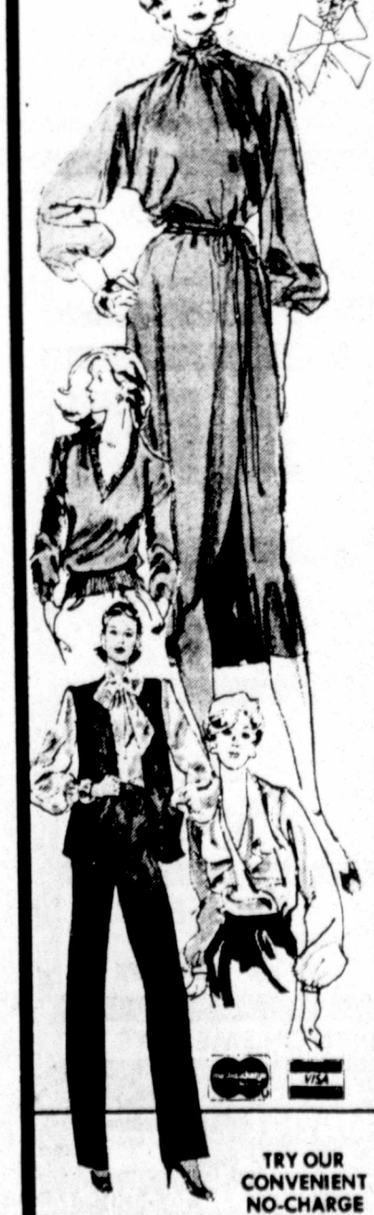

Anyone with information about the mystery animal is asked to contact the sheriff's office at 765-9363 of Young's office at 744-6847.

Poland Facing Energy Crisis

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — With stalled elevators and fading television screens, Poland is heading into another power-short Eastern European winter.

"Last year our commission made proposals to the government," legislator Marceli Faska said, as the country neared another record power deficit. "Unfortunately, nothing was done..."

Sporadic and largely unannounced blackouts have become common throughout much of Poland. Power is being cut back to non-essential industries and Poles are getting extra Saturdays off to save more energy.

In neighboring Czechoslovakia, pedestrians ignore sudden blackouts that plunge all of central Prague into darkness.

Streetlights have been dimmed and extingusished from Bulgaria to East Germany this year. Hungarians have cut back street lighting and patrol officers turn off unneeded lights.

Romania is one of the darkest countries in central Europe, thanks to its cutbacks, and television sets there present wavering imania blamed on reduced power levels.

Poland had a 457-megawatt electricity surplus as recently as 1979. It is expected to finish this year 2,816 megawatts short of what it planned to have.

Critics complain that the government knew the electricity margin would disappear in 1975, but did nothing in time to avoid the present problems.

The weekly newspaper Politkya complained recently that the government approved new power plants in 1971 that could not go into operation until the next decade. Even then, it said, the government still approved expansion of the power-devouring cement, steel and chemical industries.

The government put all power producers under a single Energy Ministry in October, the newspaper said, to cut an "interministerial Gordian knot of near-sighted interests, lack of imagination and mismanagement."

Calling for a new way of thinking in Poland, the newspaper cited the ultra-modern Skawina aluminum mill near Krakow.

"Modern it is, but to produce one ton of aluminum takes three times the energy needed by the old methods," it claimed.

"Inventors of prefabricated buildings should wonder why Polish prefabricates are three times as badly insulated as similar products abroad," the newspaper said. "They think they are produced cheaply, but the total costs are much higher in the end."

Polish experts estimate the country could avoid shortages if its power plants could just avoid half their breakdowns.

But they say maintenance at the plants is delayed because of the shortages.

Power plants are also said to have received only 64 percent of the spare parts they were due, and only 65 percent of the maintenance scheduled for the first nine months of 1979.

Postwar Poland's energy production has been managed by seven different systems.

"Not a single plant has been built under the same authority," said Polityka.

Polish authorities have responded to the power deficit with a policy of temporary power cuts, many of them unannounced blackouts which have left people stranded in elevators and sitting before darkened television screens.

The Communist Party official in northern Poland won public praise because people in his territory were given a quick extra blackout to warn them that a bigger one was coming.

"We pre-notify our people by a brief flash," said party Secretary Zenon Luksza, "and everybody knows."

More Money Sought By Republic

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Republic of Transkei, South Africa's first homeland nation for blacks, not only still lacks international recognition after three years of "independence." It also lacks money.

A confidential memorandum, leaked recently to South African newspapers, and allegedly authored by Transkei's finance secretary, claimed there isn't even enough money to pay the salaries of government workers.

Transkei, now the flagship of three "independent" black homelands, became a republic with 2.5 million people within South Africa on Oct. 25, 1976, amid much pomp and ceremony.

The event was ignored by all countries of the world, including the United States. Only South Africa recognized the new republic. Today, not even South Africa has formal diplomatic relations with Transkei. The Transkei government broke off relations in 1978 over a land dispute.

The severing of relations meant little. Borders remain open and Transkei remains economically dependent on handouts from South Africa's white-minority government. South Africa annually gives it $138 million in cash.

But even with this help, the leaked, "strictly confidential" memorandum of the Transkei Finance Ministry said only $7 million remained in the state coffers, that the country is $45 million in the red this year and that there isn't enough money to pay the salaries of 30,000 civil servants.

Finance Minister Ramsay Madikizela was quoted by the Rand Daily Mail as saying that the document had been leaked to the press "by enemies of Transkei wishing to create a damaging impression of the actual situation."

The memo also said that South Africa rejected a request for a $42 million loan but wouldn't object to South African banks putting together a private loan package up to a maximum of $24 million, if it was repaid in two years.

Transkei, and two other homelands — Bophuthatswana and Venda — are part of an official strategy by South Africa to grant "independence" to black tribal homelands in its territory.

Critics of South Africa's race segregation politics, claim granting "independence" to the homelands robs the 19 million black majority of its political rights in South Africa by making blacks "citizens" of what they charge are pseudo-republics and non-citizens of South Africa, so the 4.5 million white minority can remain politically and economically dominant.

Kennedy Slips In Polls, Wins Udall Endorsement

By United Press International

Sen. Edward Kennedy won the endorsement of Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., a contender in the 1976 presidential race, but he also lost support in a poll that shows President Carter has pulled even with him in Iowa.

Meanwhile, Republican presidental candidate John Connally, campaigning in Des Moines, Iowa, called on Carter to brief all presidential candidates on the crisis in Iran.

Kennedy Tuesday made his fourth trip to Iowa, which starts the nation's delegate selection process at next month's precinct caucuses. But he cut short his scheduled two-day visit because of the rush of Senate business.

Aides said he would return home to Washington to vote today on legislation to offer loan guarantees to the Chrysler Corp.

Carter remained at the White House Tuesday and told 15 Democratic state chairmen he hoped the Iranian crisis would not become a partisan issue in the campaign.

Udall, a liberal who finished second to Carter in many of the 1976 primaries, told a Capitol Hill news conference he was backing Kennedy because they were close philosophically, had a long friendship and because he thought Kennedy would be a stronger candidate than Carter.

"I don't view this as anti-Carter. I view it as pro-Kennedy," Udall said.

He said that at a time when Americans are frustrated and cynical, Kennedy "offers us the freshest hope to break out of the stalemate and paralysis as we end this most troublesome decade."

Carter's meeting with the Democratic chairmen was private, but Democratic National Chairman John White told reporters later that Carter did not say when he would be able to leave the executive mansion to begin campaigning. White said, however, he expects Carter will go through with his commitment to debate Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., in Iowa in early January.

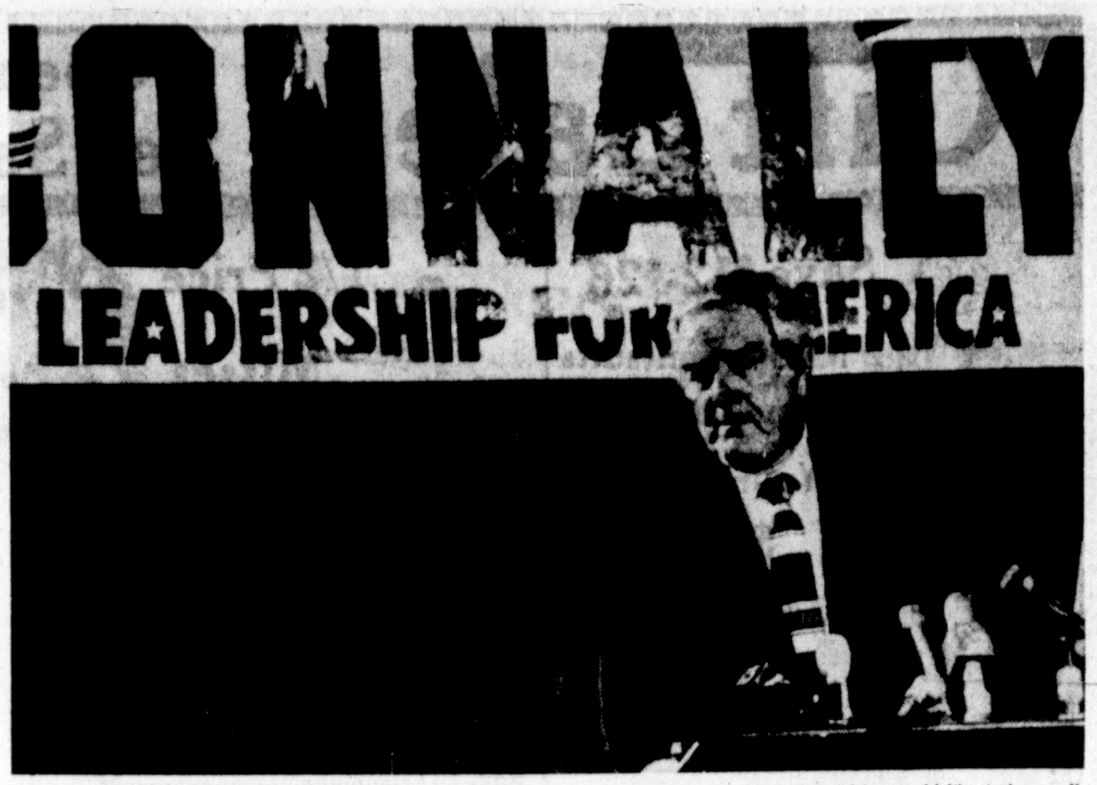

Kennedy got news about the Iowa Poll, conducted by the Des Moines Register, while campaigning in Waterloo. The poll showed the senator and Carter each favored by 40 percent of the Democrats surveyed. In August, Kennedy had 49 percent to Carter's 26 percent in Iowa.

Kennedy press secretary Tom Southwick said he believed Carter's jump was a reflection of the Iranian crisis and speculated the president's strength might not hold up once the situation is resolved.

At a news conference, Connally reaffirmed his support for Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis but said, "It is time for the president to show greater concern and cooperation with those of us who have been so supportive."

Connally called for a "bipartisian conference of all the presidential candidates so we might be fully briefed on what has transpired, what actions he (Carter) has taken and what options were available to him."

Connally said such a briefing would enable the candidates to "more effectively contribute support to his efforts."

CALLS FOR IRAN BRIEFING — Republican presidential hopeful John Connally called on President Carter Tuesday to brief all Republican and Democratic presidential candidates on the situation in Iran. Connally said he would like to know all that had transpired during the 45 days, what options Carter has and what actions he has taken. (AP Laserphoto)

Teddy Battles Tough Questions In Iowa

WASHINGTON (AP) — One questioner asked Sen. Edward M. Kennedy if he wasn't just another "slick politician" undeserving of the man's vote.

Another wanted to know how much Kennedy's wife, Joan, was behind him and whether they are a happy couple the way Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter appear to be.

A third person asked about busing, and Chappaquiddick also came up as did inflation and other issues as Kennedy spent several hours Tuesday filming television commercials in Waterloo, Iowa, for use later in his presidential campaign.

The trip to Iowa was Kennedy's fourth since he announced his candidacy on Nov. 7, an indication of the importance he attaches to the state's Jan. 21 precinct caucuses.

The Massachusetts senator had been scheduled to spend part of today in the state, but abruptly changed plans and flew back to Washington early this morning.

Aides said he wanted to be on hand for a key Senate vote on legislation to provide federal loan guarantees to the Chrysler Corp. It was the second time this week Kennedy quickly changed campaign plans to attend to Senate business.

On Monday, he canceled campaign appearances in Illinois and Wisconsin so he could stay in Washington for votes on the "windfall profits" tax.

Kennedy's abbreviated trip to Iowa was unlike his earlier visits. While he made two campaign appearances, one a speech at the University of Northern Iowa and the second at a black church, he spent most of his time in private question-and-answer sessions with Iowans while cameras filmed the discussions for possible use in the commercials.

Directing the filming was Charles Guggenheim, who has worked for Kennedy in the past and also helped prepare commercials for Robert F. Kennedy's presidential campaign in 1968.

All three sessions were closed to reporters, but Mona Sievers, who attended one, said Kennedy was asked some tough questions.

"His wife came up," Mrs. Sievers said. "One woman said she sees President Carter and Rosalynn as a happy couple and she did not see Joan campaigning for him." Mrs. Sievers said Kennedy replied that his wife campaigned with him last week and was at a fund-raising reception Sunday.

"He said she will be in Iowa campaigning in January," Mrs. Sievers said.

She also remembered that one participant told Kennedy, "I think you are a slick politician," and questioned whether he deserved support.

Campaign Letter Says Liberals Will Take Over Talmadge Posts

ATLANTA (AP) — Two opponents challenging U.S. Sen. Herman Talmadge for his Senate seat have denounced a campaign letter warning that if Talmadge loses in 1980, liberals will fill two key posts.

Lt. Gov. Zell Miller on Tuesday called on Talmadge to apologize to Sens. Gaylord Nelson and George McGovern and to repudiate "smear tactics" represented by the letter.

Georgia Appeals Court Judge Norman Underwood said the people of Georgia "are not going to be intimidated" by allegations made in the campaign solicitation letter.

The letter was sent by Savannah physician Carson B. Burgstiner. It warns that if Talmadge, a 23-year Senate veteran, is defeated then McGovern of South Dakota would become the chairman of the Agriculture Committee and Nelsn of Wisensin would become chairman of the health subcommittee.

"Nelson favors cradle-to-grave national health insurance, arbitrary limits on health care revenues and other radical and irresponsible socialist-bent federal plans," the letter said, according to The Atlanta Journal.

"Furthermore, if the senator is defeated, George McGovern would be his replacement as chairman of the Agriculture Committee. The choice is yours," the letter continued.

Talmadge campaign chairman Charles Campbell said the letter was mailed to a large number of Georgia physicians but that it only states Burgstiner's feelings.

"I think Sen. Talmadge's supporters are entitled to say what they want to say," Underwood said, but "I don't think the people of Georgia are going to be intimidated into voting in a particular way because of allegations of the dangers posed by the views of senators from some other part of the country."

FCC May Order More Children's TV Shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, despite heavy lobbying by broadcasters, is launching a formal rulemaking process that could eventually force television stations to offer a minimum amount of children's programs each week.

The FCC staff charged two months ago that the television industry had failed to meet its obligations to children under voluntary guidelines adopted by the commission in 1974.

The staff then offered several options, ranging from mandatory programming standards to continued use of voluntary guidelines. The commission's Children's Television Task Force made it clear, however, that is saw little hope forimprovement without minimum standards.

The television industry, led by the National Association of Broadcasters, has focused its lobbying effort almost exclusively on the proposed mandatory guidelines.

The FCC's staff has recommended guidelines that would specify a minimum of 7½ hours of children's programming each week. But the broadcasters say that would lead to an unprecedented violation of their First Amendment right of freedom of speech.

The broadcasters claim that while such a rule would focus on quantity, it would inevitably lead the commission to intrude in the area of quality just by trying to define what a children's program is. And a rule specifying quantity would not guarantee better quality, the industry adds.

Since the FCC staff report was issued, the seven members of the FCC have been heavily lobbied on both sides of the issue. Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., chairman of the Senate communications subcommittee, joined the fray last week by suggesting a delay of five to six months in the rulemaking process.

Hollings said he had received "reasonable assurances" from the industry that it would use the additional time to offer some constructive alternatives.

Senate Panel Approves New China Trade Status

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite some concerns it might further strain relations with the Soviet Union, the Senate Finance Committee has approved a 1979 trade agreement that would grant most favored nation trading status to China.

By unanimous voice vote after less than an hour's deliberation, the committee Tuesday followed the advice of Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., to grant China most favored nation trading status, something which it has so far denied the Soviet Union.

"We should put this through now and not wait for similar action with the Soviet Union," Ribicoff said.

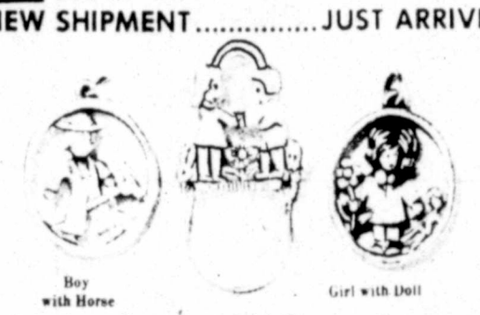

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said China "appears to have opened Chinese borders to visits by Americans of Chinese ancestry."

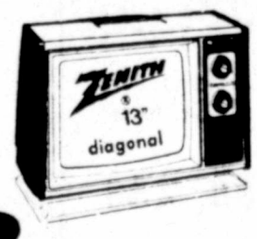

The Soviet Union has sought most favored nation trade status but under a 1974 law, the status cannot be granted to any Communist nation unless it allows citizens to emigrate more or less freely.

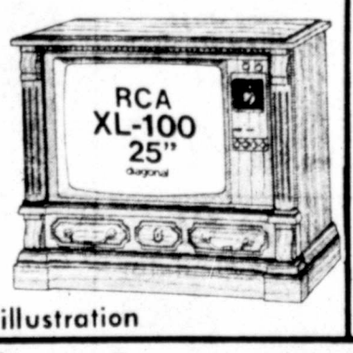

Members of Congress feel China has a much stronger open door policy than the Soviet Union.

The July 1979 trade agreement with China will become effective only if a resolution approving it is passed by both houses of Congress. The House gave its approval earlier.

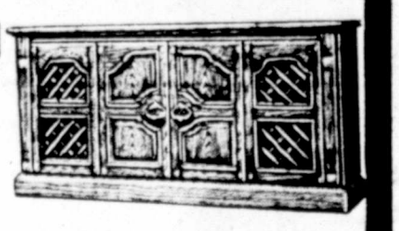

The pact is patterned after trade agreements the United States has with Romania and Hungary. It calls for the United States and China to provide most favred nation — or nondiscriminatory — tariff treatment to imports from each other's country.

Maryland Ready To Scrap Costly Pension Plan

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Maryland is about to become the latest in a growing number of states that are gradually scrapping overly generous and costly public pension plans, and replacing them with newer systems that promise to be less of a burden to taxpayers.

Numerous state pension plans around the country have gone into ever-deepening debt because they promised more generous retirement benefits than taxpayers could afford.

Maryland's four state retirement systems are no exception. But starting in January, that state will embark on a kind of "end-run" of its mounting pension woes — a solution at least five other states have turned to in the past five years. Among them are New York State, Washington, Louisiana, South Dakota and Tennessee.

Maryland's chief deputy comptroller Basil Wisner explains that a new, reformed pension system will exist side-by-side with the old plans. Eventually, he says, the old plans will disappear as its remaining participants die.

The state's four existing pension plans — for ordinary state employees, for teachers, for state police and for judges — have many of the features that have gotten scores of public pension systems around the country into trouble.

A state worker earning an average of $20,000 in his last three years of work can retire after 30 years of service with a pension of about $12,000. On top of that, he gets Social Security which the state helps pay for, plus unlimited cost-of-living increases as long as he lives.

"The bottom line is that retired workers are better off than when they were working. And retirees have gotten bigger annual increases than active workers because of the cost-of-living feature," says Wisner.

Largely because of the cost-of-living provision, Maryland taxpayers are now stuck with an unfunded pension liability that outside actuaries estimate as high as $500 million. That means that if Maryland had to pay off all at once what it owes state workers in pensions, the state would be $500 million short.

But more immediately, it means that taxpayers have faced a rapidly escalating annual pension tab in the state's budget. In 1979, says Wisner, pensions cost $31.3 million, and the state's share of Social Security was $100 million.

A bill to remedy Maryland's pension woes was first considered, and defeated, by the legislature in 1978 — an election year. It passed this year, however, with little apparent commotion from state employees.

Wisner says the new pension reform law will do the following:

— It establishes a new pension system that will be fully funded, that is, there will be no unfunded liability.

— Starting in January, state employees now on the payroll will have the choice of staying in the old pension plans, or joining the new one. But all employees hired from January on must join the new plan.

— The advantages of joining the new system are that it is non-contributory, while the old system required state workers to contribute about 5 percent of their salary toward pensions. Thus workers would receive, in effect, a 5 percent take-home pay hike by joining.

In addition, workers joining the new plan would get back in cash whatever they had contributed into the old plan.

In summary, says Wisner, the choice of joining the new plan might be most appealing to younger employees who would get an immediate chunk of cash plus higher take-home pay.

— Those who opt to stay with the old plan, probably workers near retirement age or who plan to make a career of state work, will have a better pension than that offered by the new plan. While the existing plan offers an unlimited cost-of-living allowance, the new plan limits it to 3 percent a year.

And instead of getting the state pension plus Social Security, the new plan calculates what the worker's pension should be — say, $12,000 for the worker earning $20,000 — and that's all the worker would get, including Social Security.

"I'm 44 years old and I've worked for the state for 21 years. There's no way I'd opt for the new system," says Wisner.

There is no way of knowing until January how many state workers will choose the immediate cash benefits of the new plan over the long-range benefits of the existing plans.

But the state hopes its "end-run" strategy will mean the old plans with their unfunded liability will shrink and eventually disappear, leaving in their place a fully-funded state pension fund offering reasonable benefits that taxpayers can afford.

Soldier's Gun Fires At Meet

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Four shots were fired accidentally by an embarrassed security guard outside the meeting place of the influential OPEC ministers.

The shots rang out outside the Tamanaco Hotel as the 13 oil ministers of the cartel discussed a unified oil pricing policy.

A spokesman for the host delegation said no one was hurt when the soldier on duty on a hill opposite the hotel apparently dropped his submachine gun, triggering four shots.

Reporters and plain clothes security men who heard the shots rushed outside, only to find a very embarrassed soldier.

Security measures surrounding the conference have been very tight. Soldiers armed with submachine guns guard the hotel's exits and entrances, and armored cars are parked nearby.

'Windfall-Profits' Issue Becomes Mind-Boggling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "windfall-profits" tax working its way through Congress is a good example of how a simple idea can be turned into a mind-boggling law.

The idea: tax away a portion of each new increase in domestic crude oil prices so the oil industry will not profit unduly from President Carter's decision to phase out price controls.

The result: legislation that imposed a half-dozen different taxes by separating U.S. crude oil into a dozen categories depending on when it was discovered and where and by whom it is produced.

Not all the complexities can be blamed on Congress or bureaucrats; it seems that tax simplification and oil just don't mix.

A conference committee of 15 House members and 11 senators were to begin tackling some of those complexities this afternoon. That panel must find a compromise between the Senate's $178 billion bill and the $277 billion version passed by the House. There are growing doubts the committee can complete action on the bill this year.

Congressional experts concede their estimates of what the bill will bring in from 1980 through 1990 could be off by as much as $100 billion, mainly because the figures are so dependent on outside forces.

They assume the average price of U.S. crude oil freed from controls will be about $30 a barrel, and that the figure will increase every year by the amount of inflation plus 2 percent. If inflation in 1980 is 10 percent, that $30 will become $33.60 a year from now.

The tax, incidentally, would not end in 1990. The 1980-1990 figures are generally cited only because Carter's original energy program covered that term. The Senate tax probably would run through the late 1990s and most of the House version would end in 1990. Again, it depends on how quickly oil prices rise.

The average price of uncontrolled U.S. oil grows each time the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raises the world price. The average OPEC price has jumped 60 percent in 1979. A repetition of that in 1980 could perhaps double the size of the windfall tax.

Why, then, would President Carter want to phase out controls?

Supporters of that decision — including numerous economists — say the higher prices that result will encourage conservation and investment in new forms of energy; domestic oil production will increase because it will be more profitable; and U.S. dependence on imported oil should drop, reducing the flow of dollars abroad and weakening a strong outside influence on American foreign policy.

The price for those benefits will be paid by American consumers. Decontrol would let the oil industry take an estimated $1 trillion more from consumers in the 1980s by charging higher prices for gasoline, heating oil and other products.

Increasing production will cost the industry $100 billion in round numbers. And as the oil companies produce more, they will make more money — and that means roughly $500 billion in higher state and federal taxes under existing laws. That would leave a net "windfall" in the range of $440 billion.

Supporters of the new windfall tax say there is no reason the industry should keep all the money if — in the extreme example — oil that sells today for $6 suddenly sells for $30 because of decontrol.

Thus, the "windfall profits" tax, which really isn't a tax on profits at all. It is really a tax on increases in the price of domestic oil. Though not imposed on profits, it would, of course, cut profits by taking a share of industry revenues for the government.

But that's not the end of the cycle. Parts of the windfall tax would be shipped back to lower-income Americans to help pay their fuel bills, some money would aid development of new energy sources and some would go for transportation improvements.

That would leave billions of the windfall tax and $350 billion or so in increased oil-industry income taxes that Congress could use however it sees fit. With the economy lagging and an election coming up, that likely would include across-the-board cuts in individual income taxes.

Solons To Negotiate Taxing Of New Oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest financial issue facing a Senate-House conference on the "windfall-profits" tax is how stiff a tax to impose on oil yet to be found.

The House voted to tax away 60 percent of future price increases in such "newly discovered" oil. The Senate, contending no windfall is possible on oil that is still hidden, levied a tax of 10 percent.

The lower tax on that oil, which within 10 years will represent about 43 percent of U.S. production, would be worth more than $50 billion to the oil industry over the 1980s. That is the biggest single difference between the $178 billion tax passed by the Senate and the $277 billion version cleared by the House.

The conference committee of 15 House members and 11 senators planned to start work this afternoon on resolving their differences. But there was growing doubt the panel can complete its work before the tax is due to take effect on Jan. 1.

In addition to the dispute over how to tax newly discovered oil, here are other major differences between the two bills:

—INDEPENDENTS: The House voted no special exemption for independent producers, which include "wildcatting" individuals as well as multimillion-dollar firms that are not affiliated with any of the oil giants. Recognizing that they drill 90 percent of the exploratory oil and gas wells, the Senate voted to exempt from the windfall tax the first 1,000 barrels of oil produced each day by an independent. This would cost about $26 billion.

—OLD, NEW OIL: Old oil, from reservoirs discovered before 1973, and new oil, from fields found between 1973 and 1978, would face a 60 percent tax in the House bill. The Senate raised the levy to 75 percent.

—HEAVY, TERTIARY: Heavy oil, so thick that extra expense is required to pump it, and increased production from "tertiary" methods, which include costly chemical injection, would be taxed at 60 percent in the House bill; 20 percent in the Senate version.

—SPENDING: The House bill does not spend any of the tax revenue. The Senate measure would spend more than $35 billion to help lower-income Americans pay rising fuel costs; to encourage homeowners, landlords and businesses to conserve; and to grant tax credits to boost production of such unconventional fuels as gasohol and shale oil.

—SOCIAL SECURITY: Senators voted to set aside about $18.6 billion in income tax revenues to pay for a Social Security tax cut in 1981. Further action by Congress would be necessary to impose the cut.

—INTEREST: The Senate bill includes a provision exempting from income taxes the first $201 in interest and dividends earned each year by an individual, or $400 for a couple filing a joint return. There is wide support for this in the House, but it is not in the House bill.

—INHERITANCE TAXES: The Senate bill would repeal a 1976 change in inheritances taxes that is so complicated Congress never allowed it to take effect. Although repeal is not in the House bill, this provision all but vanished as an issue Tuesday when the House instructed its conferees to accept repeal.

The change, known as carryover basis, would have imposed income taxes on the full increase in value from the time property is acquired by the deceased until it is sold by the heir. Repeal would mean a tax only on the increase in value from the time the property is inherited until it is sold.

Whatever the shape of the final oil tax bill, it will not really be a "windfall-profits" tax. Instead, the tax will take a percentage of future oil price increases. But like any other tax, the new levy ultimately would cut into industry profits.

Offshore Drilling Rights Sale Exceeds Initial Expectations

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The sale of offshore oil and gas drilling rights in the Georges Bank raised nearly $230 million more for the federal government than expected, officials say.

Postponed twice in the last two years by legal challenges, Tuesday's sale was delayed again for three hours when U.S. Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan requested additional time to study a last-minute appeal by environmentalists for an injunction.

The proceedings also were interrupted briefly when demonstrators threw a dead fish and several bags of oil at the 300 oil executives gathered at the Veterans Memorial Auditorium for the bid opening.

Oil companies submitted bids on 73 of the 116 tracts available. Frank Basile, manager of the New York Outer Continental Shelf Office, said the $827.8 million in high bids received for the tracts was well beyond the $600 million he had anticipated the sale would produce.

Basile said it was "close to phenomenal" that an average of more than two bids was received for the tracts in the Georges Bank, one of the world's richest fishing grounds.

"It's an excellent sale for the area," said J.R. Jackson, Exxon's manager of exploration and regulatory affairs. "It indicates a lot of interest by industry."

Exxon was one of the major bidders, bidding $150 million for 15 tracts and offering up to five times more than its competitors for choice areas.

A group of companies headed by Mobil Oil Corp. offered the highest bid of the day, $80.2 million for a nine-square-mile piece of ocean floor about 100 miles southeast of Cape Cod.

The 29 participating companies submitted 189 sealed bids totaling almost $1.3 billion for the most desirable tracts.

Two executives were soaked in the oil-throwing incident, which interrupted the sale for about five minutes. State police said the protesters were not apprehended.

The protesters also threw leaflets identifying themselves as members of "Fish For Survival." The leaflets said it was "high treason" to promote drilling in the prime fishing grounds, which supply an estimated 17 percent of the nation's food fish.

Federal geologists estimate the Georges Bank could contain 123 million barrels of oil and 850 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

The government has 45 days to decide whether the top bids are high enough and should be approved. It would take an additional six to seven months to obtain necessary permits, preventing any drilling from beginning before next summer.

Although Brennan rejected the last-minute appeal, Basile said there may be other legal roadblocks to drilling. A suit is pending in U.S. District Court in Boston seeking to block exploration on environmental grounds.

Fuel Price Hikes To Hit Consumers

By United Press International

Gulf Oil Corp. today announced a 5-cent hike in wholesale gasoline prices, the latest in a series of oil company fuel price increases that consumers can expect to face on the retail level almost immediately.

A Gulf spokesman said the increase was a "pass-through" of their increased costs.

Gulf, which last increased prices slightly Dec. 11, also hiked aviation gas 5 cents a gallon and jet fuel 3 cents a gallon.

Exxon Corp. raised its wholesale gasoline prices by 6 cents a gallon Tuesday and became the fourth U.S. partner in the Arabian American Oil Co. consortium to boost prices since Saudi Arabia increased its crude oil prices last week.

Exxon, the world's largest oil company, also raised its wholesale prices for home-heating oil, diesel and kerosene by 3 cents a gallon.

Texaco Inc. increased its gasoline by 3 cents last Saturday and Mobil Corp. added 3 cents to its wholesale gasoline prices last Wednesday.

"The sad thing is that it looks like there's more to come," said Frank Bradley, a vice president of Standard Oil Co. of California's Chevron USA division. Chevron Monday lifted its gasoline prices by 6 cents a gallon.

The four Aramco partners produce and buy much of their oil from Saudi Arabia, which had been charging $18 a barrel — or several dollars a barrel less than most other OPEC members — prior to raising its crude to $24 a barrel last week.

Middle East analysts said Saudi Arabia had adopted the price increase because the kingdom believed its price moderation was benefiting the Aramco partners, which reported substantial third-quarter profits, and not the American consumer.

"The reason is the recent crude-oil price increases by several OPEC suppliers, retroactive to November 1st," an Exxon spokesman said in Houston:

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meeting in Caracas to set new 1980 price levels, was expected to deliver another price jolt to the United States and other consuming nations.

Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar joined Saudi Arabia in raising their crude $6 a barrel, a move analysts estimated would add between 3 and 5 cents to the U.S. consumer's bill for gasoline, heating oil and diesel fuel.

"Cost increases can be passed through to consumers and still conform to guidelines," said Mark Sullivan, a spokesman for the Council on Wage and Price Stability. "I don't think there is any problem" with the latest round of oil company price increases, he said.

Professor Studies Back Rubs

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Back rubs are a time-honored treatment used by nurses around the world. Marilyn Rubin decided to find out why.

Miss Rubin, a professor at the St. Louis University School of Nursing, spent a year studying the exact effects of the back rub on the body.

Performing the rubs herself on healthy volunteers, she measured such variables as temperature, heart and respiration rates, blood pressure and electrocardiograph readings during a series of five-minute massages.

Some of her findings were expected — a significant decrease in heart rate and systolic blood pressure during the rub and a significantly decreased respiration rate following the massage.

Science Today

In several cases, she said, the back massage acted as a diagnostic measure to demonstrate previously unknown heart disease.

But Miss Rubin was surprised to find that in one-third of the volunteers, there were electrical changes in the heart during the massage, for no apparent reason. The results indicate back rubs may not be good for some patients, a theory she will test in research on persons with long-term heart disease.

A curious policy concerning patients with heart disease led Miss Rubin to conduct her study. She said in an interview that many doctors restricted the use of back rubs for some heart patients, but when she tried to find out why, none of the answers she received had been tested in the medical literature.

"It seemed to relax people," she said, "but I wanted some scientific evidence for why this happens. A lot of people in the nursing profession awaited the results of the study. Back rubs are a frequently used therapy for comfort."

In an era where six-figure government grants are common for specialized scientific studies, Miss Rubin noted that her back rub analysis cost just $540 for supplies. The money came from the Beaumont Fund, which was established to promote original research at the university.

The 31 male and 39 female volunteers for the study were between the ages of 21 and 61, with an average of 36. They were recruited primarily as a result of local publicity on the project. Their only compensation was a five-minute massage from the experienced and expert hands of Miss Rubin.

"A lot of people were interested in the fact that we were dealing with something that expresses care for the individual," she said. "It wasn't a mechanical study, and it didn't look at cells or something like that.

"People can relate to back rubs a lot better than they can to someone looking at cells through a microscope. Many mothers change the behavior of their children with back rubs. It's a calming influence."

Back rubs may be as old as nursing itself. Florence Nightengale speaks of using comfort measures on patients, Miss Rubin said, although rubs are not mentioned specifically. Nursing means caring, she said, and that's what back rubs are meant to provie.

"There could be psychological reactions to back rubs, especially in terms of touching the patient as an expression of caring," Miss Rubin said. "Maybe the comforting is enough all by itself, and I would think that would make it worthwhile in itself."

DR. LAMB

Tension Has Effect

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have trouble with my eyes. I have spells when about one-fourth of my vision is fuzzy. Things are bright and fuzzy like a heat wave. This lasts for about 30 minutes and then it goes away. Then my hands get numb, my lips and sometimes my nose. I also have trouble with my speech. This also lasts about 30 minutes.

Sometimes I have a real bad headache. It's a bad experience and it usually takes two or three days to get back to feeling normal. I have been to several doctors and they say I have a migraine headache. I have had my blood checked for sugar and many other tests and all were normal. My head has been X-rayed and everything is all right.

I've had these for eight years now. They don't come at any certain time. Sometimes I have them in the night and they wake me up. I went for a year once without one and sometimes I have two in one week. My aunt's three girls all have them so it may be something that's inherited.

I can take muscle relaxers and they help me some. I'm 29 years old and have two children. I am overweight but I also had these headaches when I wasn't. I would like to know if this is my nerves. How should I cope with them? What can I do to keep from having one? Someone said it was a lack of oxygen getting to the brain. What can I do to prevent this? Is there any exercise I can do or help from certain foods? I sure would like some answers.

DEAR READER — Your description certainly fits with migraine headaches. The typical migraine is associated with changes in circulation to the brain. The arteries to the brain area may constrict and then dilate. Recent studies show that there may be very severe constriction of arteries through parts of the brain that affects the circulation before the headache starts. Then the arteries dilate and it's the stretching of the artery walls on the nerves that seems to produce the severe headache.

I know you've seen many doctors but you might want to see a neurologist who specializes in disorders of the brain, including migraine headaches. There are new medicines available which help to control the attack and some can be used to prevent the attacks. One of these, Propranolol (Inderal) is relatively safe and there are others that your doctor might wish to use instead.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 2-9, Headache: Man's Most Common Pain. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This issue will give you basic information on what causes headaches and what can be done about most of them.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you explains, there are certain personality characteristics that are typical of the individual with migraine headaches. They are often perfectionistic individuals who are overachievers. They try very hard to do a good job so that they will be liked. The tension that results from this situation has a lot to do with the headaches.

As your story indicates, migraine headaches may occur in several members of the family. That's not unusual.

'Old Wives' Remedies Attacked

PARIS (AP) — A shot of calvados in the bottle to soothe a cantankerous baby, a little cognac for a cold — such traditional French home remedies have come under attack by the National Center for Defense Against Alcoholism as the first step to combat juvenile drunkenness.

Citing an increasing problem with alcoholism in young people, the center, a private organization made up of doctors, lawyers and other concerned citizens, launched a public appeal this month for the protection of children and to warn pregnant women against the dangers of alcohol abuse.

"We are obliged to condemn not only the uselessness, but also the dangers, of 'old wives' remedies, which women no doubt practice, thinking they are being good mothers," said Dr. Perre Plat, director of the Department of Bio-Medical Research at the National Intitute for Pedagogique Research.

"It seems youth today consumes more and more alcohol, either in the form of wine, beer or cider," he said. Wine is traditional at meals in French homes.

France, which has a population of 53 million, is estimated to have 4.5 million people who drink to excess, 2 million of whom are considered serious alcoholics. The figures, however, to not make a distinction between youth and adult alcoholism.

Though specific figures on youth alcoholism are lacking, recent studies in the Bordeaux wine region using 124 children aged 12 to 14 years showed many with a substantial alcohol content in their blood systems.

Plat cited the case of a 9-year-old boy admitted to the emergency room of a Bordeaux area hospital with delirium tremens.

Other studies are being conducted, notably in Rennes, Lille, Calais and Brittany in northern France, to show the greater vulnerability of children to alcohol dependence than their adult counterparts.

Contributions Blamed For Killing Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Campaign contributions from the American Medical Association played a major role in killing legislation that would have saved Americans billions of dollars in hospital costs, Common Cause says.

House members who voted to kill President Carter's hospital cost containment bill received four times as much in contributions from the AMA — which opposed the measure — as did supporters of the bill, the political watchdog group said this week.

On Nov. 15, the House voted 234-166 to substitute for the bill a national commission to study and monitor hospital costs.

A study of campaign financing reports from the 1976 and 1978 congressional elections at the Federal Election Commission showed 202 of the 234 House members who voted against the bill received campaign contributions from political committees of the AMA, Common Cause said.

Those House members received a total of $1.6 million or an average of more than $8,000 each.

The study also showed 122 of the 166 who supported the bill got money from the AMA, but they received much less — on an average of about $2,000 each.

Only two of the top 50 recipients of AMA funds voted for the cost containment measure, the study showed.

Overall, the AMA contributed $3.9 million to House and Senate candidates during the last two congressional elections.

"The American Medical Association has played the central role in the determination of our nation's health policies, and political contributions are the primary source of its power," said Fred Wertheimer, senior vice president of Common Cause.

"A variety of factors were obviously involved in the House fight over hospital cost containment legislation," he said. "Our study shows, however, that AMA (political action committee) contributions played a major role in killing the proposal."

President Carter said the legislation was needed to fight inflation this year and estimated it would have saved Americans more than $40 billion in hospital costs during the next five years.

White House press secretary Jody Powell called the House defeat of the proposal "a blow to the fight against inflation" and "a victory for a highly financed special interest lobby and a defeat for the common good."

'Unnecessary Surgery' Overstated, Study Shows

CHICAGO (Special) — Prevalence of so-called "unnecessary surgery" has been substantially overstated, says a report in a recent Journal of the American Medical Association.

The report suggests second-opinion programs — wherein the individual gets the opinion of a second doctor after the first doctor has recommended surgery — are valuable, and their growth should be encouraged by public policy. But data gained from second opinion programs should not be used to estimate the prevalence of unnecessary surgery in a community, says a report from the New York City Health Department.

A review was conducted of the first 12 months' experience with a voluntary second opinion surgery consultation program in New York City. The program covers some 950,000 persons — employees of the City of New York, retirees andd their dependents.

Of those recommended for elective surgery, such as hernia repair, hemorrhoid removal and other nonemergency operations, some 25 percent were told by the second opinion doctor that the surgery probably was not needed at that time. But further studies showed that firm rejection of surgery on the basis of second opinion actually occurred in only 8 percent of the cases reviewed, says Dr. Martin Paris. That is, many of those who were told their operation might not be necessary later found it advisable to go ahead.

The New York City data indicate that there was much less so-called "unnecessary surgery" in that city than had been indicated by earlier reports.

The New York doctors still believe that second opinions are useful, on a voluntary basis, in patient care. The programs can help assure patients that the care they are receiving is warranted and appropriate, Paris says. The major thrust of the second opinion program should be to improve quality of care, rather than merely as a money-saving measure.

Antihistamines Ease Colds

CHICAGO (Special) — Antihistamines are effective in relieving the runny nose and congested sinuses of the common cold, says a research report in a recent Journal of the American Medical Association.

Antihistamines have been widely used in non-prescription cold preparations for some years, but their value in relieving symptoms of the common cold had been the subject of considerable controversy. Some had contended the effect was mainly a placebo.

In the present study, 271 individuals with colds were studied. Some were given antihistamines (chlorpheniramine maleate) and others were given placebo. The antihistamines proved much superior to the placebo in lessening the degree of symptoms of the common cold, says J. Campbell Howard of Kenilworth, N.J. Differences were found on the first day and as late as the seventh day of the cold.

Young Jesus Full Of Spunk, Remained Obedient

(EDITORS NOTE — While Jesus was raised tenderly by his mother, the influence of Joseph was all-encompassing. This third installment in a five-part Christmas series, "The Secret Years," describes family life during the boyhood of Jesus.)

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Writer

A warm hearth ... a big outdoors ... the scampering ... the tumbles ... the duties ... school, the budding questions ... a dependable father and a tender mother. These are the bulwarks of a boy, as they were to Jesus.

He always cherished the perspective of childhood. "... to such belongs the kingdom of God," he later described it.

His family, after being harried hither and yon for at least the first three years of his life, finally gravitated back to tribal territory, the rustic village of Nazareth in the northern uplands of Galilee.

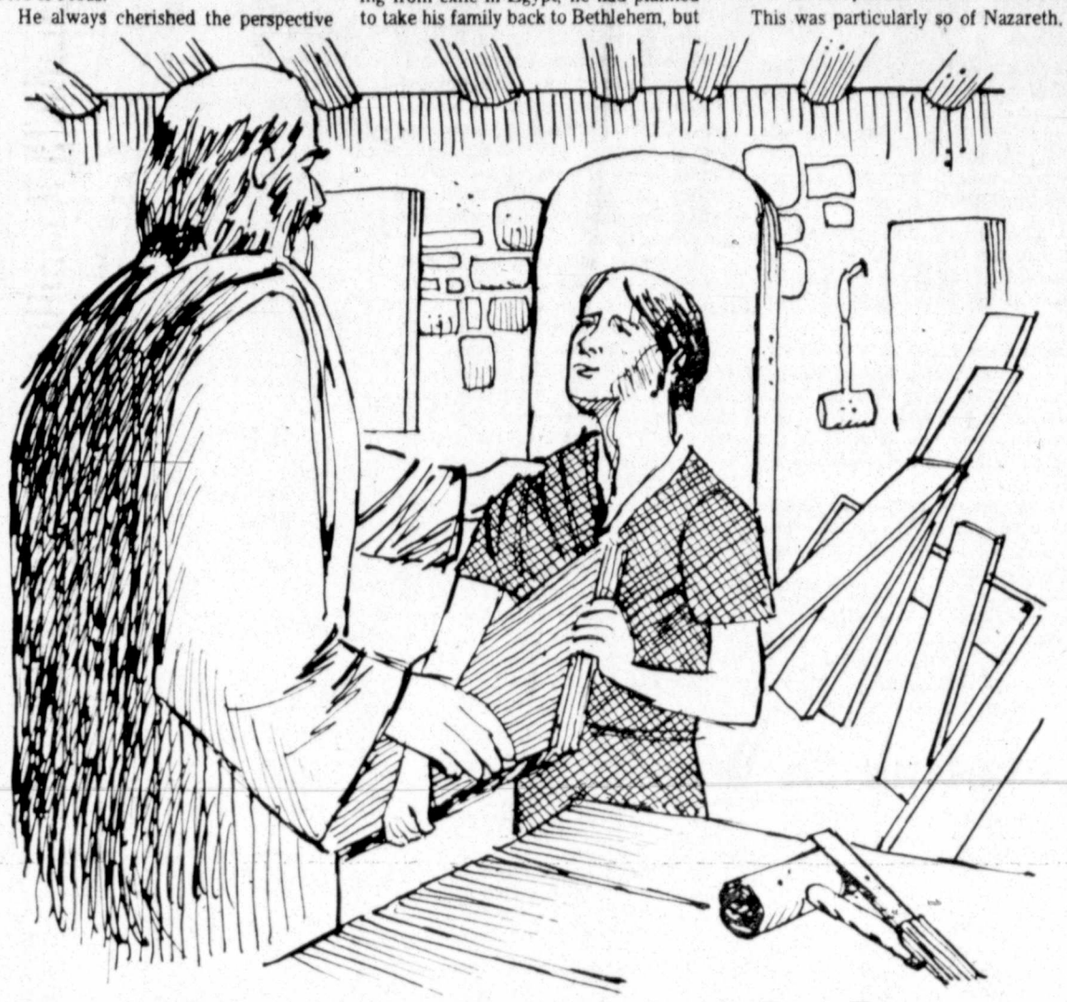

This wasn't what Joseph had intended, considering the past tension he had faced there over his marriage. On returning from exile in Egypt, he had planned to take his family back to Bethlehem, but when he learned that Archelaus, a rapacious son of Herod, was Rome's newly named ruler in southern Israel, "he was afraid to go there," as Scripture notes.

Turmoil raged in that region, with heathen occupation legions executing rebellious Jewish throngs en masse, including 3,000 at a riot in the courts of the Temple in Jerusalem. Resistance also smouldered in Galilee, but it was more remote from reprisals.

This was particularly so of Nazareth, a bucolic little town of plowmen, shopkeepers, field hirelings and sheep raisers, situated on a curving mountainside overlooking the plain of Esdraelon to the south.

There, as related in primitve Christian writings not accepted in the church's later compilation of the gospels, the boy Jesus roamed the hills and wooded draws, gathered firewood, drew water, squatted by a brook and molded toys of wet clay, romped in the pastures.

"Come, my playfellows," he is quoted as he skipped among a herd of goats. "Let us play together."

He took falls, once from a thatched roof; he helped a man who sliced his foot with an ax, prankishly mixed colors in a dyer's vats, scuffled with other cildren and got hit by a stone hurled by one of them, the accounts say. He knew the whirling precision of a slingshot himself.

Joseph at times reprimanded him, once for talking back to a cranky woman who objected to his wading on the Sabbath.

"For thy sake," Jesus assertedly responded to Joseph, "I will hold my peace." The boy had spunk but, as Scripture observes, he remained obedient to his elders.

His native tongue was Aramaic, a common Hebrew dialect, and as he grew older, he may have acquired some Greek and Latin from the foreign influx. Whenever orange-caped soldiers of "Edom" rode by, his schoolmates spat on the ground. The times were revolutionary, and continued so throughout his life on earth.

He was part of a big clan of relatives there in Nazareth. Scripture mentions sisters and four brothers, terms often meaning cousins. Non-canonical literature also lists four brothers and two sisters, describing them as older children of Joseph by a previous marriage, most of them grown up.

It is said that the youngest of them, James, was brought up by Mary, along with Jesus, and that the two boys worked together with Joseph, their muscles toughening as they wielded the ax and chisel.

Other kinspeople also lived nearby, including the more prosperous Zebedees, who had a fishing fleet on the Lake of Galilee 15 miles away. Their two high-strung sons, James and John, eventually became apostles of their cousin, Jesus.

The house in Nazareth was lean in possessions, but abundant in devotion.

It was dug into the limestone mountainside, with niches in the walls for oil lamps and utensils, chests for clothing, a grilled fire pit, and floor mattresses of rushes. Fixed to the doorpost was a mezuzah, symbol of divine guardianship over all Jewish homes. It contained a folded parchment bearing the great Shema:

"Here, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord ..."

Judging by their known religious habits, they ate kosher food — mostly barley bread, cheese, spiced vegetables, fruit, fish and poultry and, on festival days, mutton. Like most women, Mary usually did the grain grinding and cooking in an outdoor courtyard.

In devout Jewish households, every meal and every action, no matter how ordinary, evoked praise to God and thanksgiving, beginning with the cock's crow in the morning. "Praise be thou, O Lord our God, ruler of the universe, who hast given the cock intelligence to distinguish night and day."

Faith permeated living. The rabbinical sages set about a hundred benedictions to accompany every sort of pleasure, work and activity, as commonplace as tying on a belt, for the earth and all its functions were considered sacred, natural and supernatural combined. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof."

Not a single sparrow falls, nor hair grows, without God's active concern, Jesus would later emphasize. And he learned his parables — teaching lessons — from his boyhood surroundings, from sowers, sprouting seeds, shepherds and workmen.

His exemplar as a "father," the sturdy old Joseph, of callused hands and dauntless heart, gave the boy a new, vivid term for expressing the intimacy of the divine relationship, "Our Father ..."

As a woodworker and joiner, Joseph would have earned about a drachma (20 cents) or two a day. Jesus must have gone with him regularly to fell timber and drag it back to the shop to be shaped into yokes and plows.

But the prime parental responsibility was to impart God's truths.

"You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise."

There also was the more formal study, and Jesus' probing questions.

"And the child grew and became strong, filled with wisdom, and the favor of God was upon him," Scripture says. It also notes that there was a common saying about his scraggly hometown:

"Can anything good come out of Nazareth?"

Mail To U.S. Hostages In Iran Rivals Volume Sent To Santa

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Cookies, Bibles and a paperweight filled with "American soil from a fellow American" were included in the avalanche of mail — rivaling Santa's volume — which poured into Tehran this week, bound for the occupied U.S. Embassy and the 50 hostages inside.

Thousands of Christmas cards also arrived in the blitz that could top 20 million pieces of mail from campaigns organized in the United States by several persons, including Los Angeles newsman Alex Paen, and radio stations, businesses, local governments and cities.

A Post Office spokesman in New York, Harry Nigro, said the hostages averaged about 80,000 pieces of mail each day this past weekend, up from about 40,000 mid-week.

Comparing the hostages' mail volume with Santa's, he said, "It's a good guess they're running neck and neck."

Militant students initially said they would accept Christmas cards — the first batch of 3,000 were delivered this week — but for "security reasons" would not take Christmas gifts.

Last week, however, Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the hostages, would not be allowed presents, but would have Christmas trees, services by both Protestant and Catholic clergy and would "spend Christmas with their Iranian friends."

The first gifts to arrive this week were home-baked cookies from various parts of the states, Bibles and one present from New Milford, Conn. — the paperweight filled with "American soil from a fellow American" who remained anonymous.

In Alexandria, La., florist shop ower Emily James was astonished this week to learn her order for a Christmas floral arrangement for the American hostages reached the occupied embassy.

The plant, which she said appeared to be a poinsetta or similar Christmas flower, was shown on television news among the first mail to reach the embassy this week.

Miss James said she and two of her employees at her flower shop ordered the plant through an international organization of florists, telegramming the Iranian member in Tehran through Western Union.

The Christmas cards came from young children, elderly people, students and teachers and almost all were addressed simply to "fellow Americans."

Many expressed the hope to the hostages that "you can return home and reunite with your families during the holidays."

Most of the cards sent by children were hand drawn, many with simple Christmas trees on the cover, and one youngster pinned "Christmas without you is like a Christmas tree with no presents."

Others were more blunt: "You will definitely survive, just keep thinking you are coming back."

And another, "Hang tough. Stay loose. United States is behind you, with you. If any harm comes to any of you, the Iranian government will be subsequently reminded."

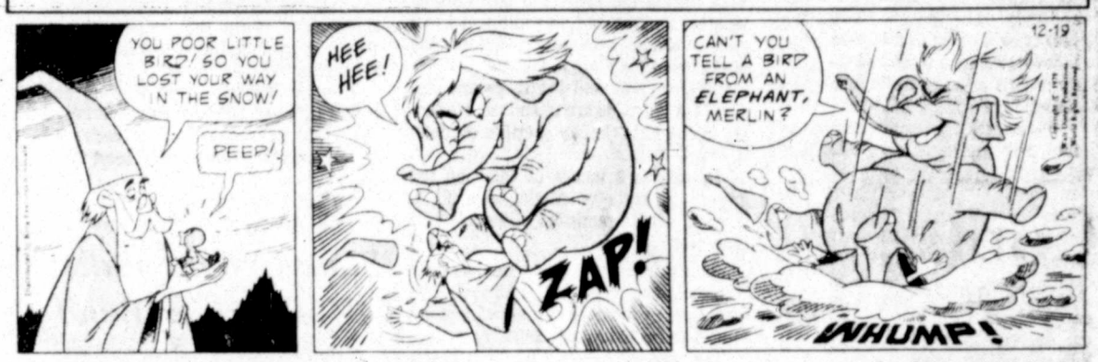

Firing Range Used By Foreign Police

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) — On a given day at the police firing range here, you might see 200 visiting German police chiefs practicing marksmanship or an Israeli security squad armed with submachine guns rehearsing commando tactics.

"We've had an endless number of police ... Navy, Marine and Army personnel use the range," said Police Chief Joseph McCarthy.

Range officer Lt. Harold Reilly said local police exchange tactical data with the Israelis. "They have some of the best tactics. We can learn from them." Reilly said he was contacted by Israelis stationed at Kennedy International Airport about using the range.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for Thursday calls for a combination of rain and showers mixed with snow and flurries in an arc from the Pacific Northwest through the Rocky Mountains to Arizona and New Mexico. (AP Laserphoto)

Arctic Front Dumps Snow In Northeast

A-J News Services

An arctic front spread heavy snow from Michigan to New England today and put the Northeast in a deep freeze that pushed thermometers far below zero in some areas.

While a steady morning snow fell on Christmas shoppers in New York City, weathermen in mountain towns to the north reported severe cold, with readings of 20 below zero at Twin Mountain in New Hampshire and 18 below at Old Forge, N.Y., in the Adirondacks.

The freeze even spread into northern Florida, where temperatures fell into the 20s. By contrast, it was 84 degrees this morning in Gila Bend, Ariz.

About 4 inches of snow had fallen in Buffalo and other parts of western New York during the night and the National Weather Service said an additional 1 to 3 inches would accumulate before the storm tapered off late today.

"It's snowing and the roads are slippery, but all roads are open," said a deputy at the Erie County sheriff's office in Buffalo.

There was 3 inches of snow on the ground in parts of Michigan while a freezing drizzle punished other areas of that state.

At a time of the year when weather extremes are common, Lubbock will have a happy medium in mild wintertime temperatures today and Thursday.

The forecast calls for readings in the low 60s today and Thursday and in the low 30s tonight.

Winds were expected to be westerly at 5 to 10 mph today and tonight.

The record maximum today is 76 degrees in 1921 and the record low is zero in 1924, the National Weather Service said.

For Friday through Sunday, the extended West Texas forecast calls for cooler weather this weekend with a chance of showers Friday over the region. There will be a chance of precipitation over the western and northern sections of West Texas Saturday and mainly over the north Sunday.

Temperatures will range from the 60s to the low 70s over West Texas Friday and will drop to the 40s and 50s in the north and 50s and 60s in the south by Sunday.

Texas had buttermilk skies and mild temperatures for good Christmas shopping weather over the state this morning.

The broken high cloudiness moved in during the early morning hours, and temperatures registered slightly higher than overnight lows earlier in the week.

The coldest area was the Panhandle, which logged pre-dawn temperatures in the 20s, and the warmest was the San Antonio area, where readings were in the mid-40s.

In Salt Lake City, where dense smog forced three airliners to bypass the city and caused several traffic accidents on Tuesday, air quality was still poor today.

Sniper's Bullet Wounds Local Train Engineer

A 55-year-old railway engineer was grazed by a bullet about 8 p.m. Tuesday while he was pulling box cars near 26th Street and Avenue A.

Alvie James Scott of 2619 44th St. told police he was looking out the window of his locomotive when he felt something hit his back.

The Santa Fe Railway employee said he went home and discovered he had been struck by a bullet. Scott was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was treated and released.

Reports indicate the victim did not see who fired the shot.

In other activity, a 19-year-old Lubbock man was treated and released at Methodist Hospital after being assaulted in front of his home about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Kenneth Lee Farley of 4409 52nd St. said his three assailants began following him as he drove away from the South Plains Mall at 6002 Slide Road. He said the men jumped him in front of his house, pulled his hair and stepped on his hand.

The suspects were described as tall, young white men. Farley said he had never seen the men before and that they appeared intoxicated.

Two Lubbock men, ages 17 and 21, were arrested about 5:30 a.m. today after they were caught allegedly burglarizing a car in the 1700-block of Avenue R.

Police Cpl. Tom Martin said the suspects had "wide-eyed, surprised" looks on their faces when he flashed his patrol car lights on them.

The men were taken into custody after it was discovered the car had been burglarized and car speakers ripped out.

Lubbock police cornered an 18-year-old burglary suspect inside Sewell's Big Country Store at 405 Idalou Highway shortly before midnight Tuesday.

Dispatched to answer an alarm, police arrested the man inside the business and took him to the county jail on suspicion of burglary. Store owner George Chester Sewell Jr. said nothing was taken from the business, but about $200 damage was done to a door which had been kicked open.

The suspect told police he had an accomplice in the break-in, according to reports.

A Crime Line informant led to the arrest Tuesday of Roy Lee Newton, a 28-year-old man charged with burglary.

After a $300 reward for information about the suspect was published Monday, police received a tip that Newton was hiding at his mother's East 15th Street residence.

Officers searched the house about 1:45 p.m. Tuesday and found the suspect hiding in a closet under some clothes.

Bob M. Wood of 5419 78th St. said his pickup truck was entered and a $600 set of diamond earrings and vehicle parts were stolen while the truck was parked in front of a 50th Street bowling alley between 9 a.m. Tuesday and 1:30 a.m. today.

William Rodney Trainor of 4124 17th St. said his house was burglarized between Saturday and 8 p.m. Tuesday and $600 in property stolen, including a television set, calculator, file cabinets, vacuum cleaner and clock radio.

About $1,000 in property, including a television set, radio and Christmas present, was the apparent loot taken in a break-in at Tim Alan Botkin's 2618 46th St. residence between 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesday.

A driver for a Lubbock vending machine company told police someone pryed open a door on his truck and took several bank bags containing an undetermined amount of money.

Joe Taylor Sams, 20, employed by B&M Vending Co., told investigating officers that he had parked his truck on the west side of J.C. Penny's department store at South Plains Mall Monday and was away from the vehicle for about 10 minutes.

Reports indicate when Sams returned to the truck he noticed the right door of the vehicle had been pryed open. Police said the bank bags, at least four cartons of cigarettes, Sams's personal checks and a calculator were stolen from the truck.

In other activity, a 23-year-old pet store employee reported to police that her house had been burglarized and approximately $1,000 worth of property stolen.

Pat Mitchal told investigating officers that a portable color television, sewing machine and lady's wristwatch had been taken from a bedroom in the southwest corner of her house.

Reports indicate entry to the house was gained by breaking a bolt-type lock on a door.

Rivers Begin Leveling In Washington

SEATTLE (AP) — Flood-swollen rivers in western Washington have begun leveling, but forecasters are watching an approaching storm that is expected to bring more rain to the drenched Olympic Peninsula.

Heavy rains have caused rivers and creeks to flood, forced the evacuation of about 550 people; damaged roads and culverts and were linked to at least three deaths.

All but two western Washington rivers had reached their flood crest and were receding by Tuesday night, officials said. The Chehalis River and the Skagit River had not reached their predicted peak.

Ted Vuehner, a forecaster at the National Weather Service in Seattle, said a new storm packing gale-force winds would move into Washington today. But he said the rain would not be as heavy as those that have drenched the area since late last week.

"It should not have a major effect on the rivers," he said Tuesday night.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray has declared a state emergency, clearing the way for immediate disaster relief from state and federal agencies for Clallam, Snohomish, Whatcom, Jefferson and Grays Harbor counties, where officials had requested assistance.

The storm caused an estimated $1 million damage to roads, culverts and drainage ditches in the Olympic National Forest in Clallam and Jefferson counties, said information officer Tom Sayre.

Rivers were going down Tuesday night, said Don Roberts, Clallam County undersheriff. "We're clear of any additional damage. It looks like things are coming back together."

One man was killed Friday when his truck plunged into the Bogachiel River at a bridge washout. And 75-year-old Henry Jardine apparently died of a heart attack Monday night as he was being evacuated. The third man died when his fishing boat swamped on the Skagit River.

About 550 persons who were evacuated from the Elwha Valley and other parts of Clallam County were either already home or on their way back, Roberts said.

Although there was no official damage estimate, Roberts said one home was destroyed and 49 other homes, 16 businesses and 16 farms were damaged.

The Snohomish River had reached its crest and was holding at more than five feet above flood stage Tuesday night.

Slaton Youth Makes All-American Band

Slaton Junior High School ninth grader Tracy Diaz has been named to the All-American Hall of Fame Band.

Diaz received a certificate of merit from the organization which is sponsored by the music department of Purdue University.

The annual band awards are made by the non-profit All-American Hall of Fame Foundation in order to identify and recognize outstanding high school musicians throughout the country.

Board Schedules Hearing For Presley's Physician

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The state Board of Medical Examiners has scheduled a January hearing for the late Elvis Presley's doctor on charges he overprescribed drugs for himself, Presley and other patients.

Dr. George Nichopoulos, the physician, has had no comment on the charges since they were first made Sept. 24.

The board has the power to suspend or revoke Nichopoulos' medical license if the complaint is sustained, subject to appeal through the state court system.

The state filed an amended, 59-page complaint against Nichopoulos this week. It provides further details about the accusations against the doctor.

He is accused of prescribing uppers, downers, tranquilizers and narcotics over several months for Presley, including some on the day the singer died, Aug. 16, 1977.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market Tuesday was moderate to active. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was good.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations advanced 25 points.

The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mike 3.5-4.9 was 64.85, up 200 points from one week ago. Grade 42, staple 31, mike 2.7-2.9 was quoted at 49.05.

Growers sold mikes 3.0-3.2 for 1,025 to 1,225 points over 1979 loan rates. Mikes 2.7-2.9 sold for 600 to 800 over.

Gins paid growers $100 to $125 per ton for cotton seed.

Fire Victims To Receive First Damage Payments

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The first damage payments will be made this week to the 103 survivors and to the estates of the 165 people who died 2½ years ago in the Beverly Hills Supper Club fire.

Attorney Lawrence Kane Jr., a trustee of the $16 million fund created by out-of-court settlements with several defendants, said checks totaling more than $3.2 million would be delivered Thursday.

U.S. District Court Judge Carl Rubin signed the partial payment order Tuesday, Kane said. A companion order was expected to be signed today by Campbell County Circuit Court Judge John Diskin.

Payments ranging from $5,000 to $25,000 will be made to 214 claimants processed as of Monday, Kane said. Of that number, 145 are death claims and 45 are injury claims from the May 1977 fire.

Disbursement will be based on ages of the victims who died. Estates of each victim under 17 will receive $15,000; those between 18 and 49 will receive $25,000; 50 to 59, $15,000; 60 to 64, $10,000, and 65 and over, $5,000.

Injured persons will receive compensation ranging from $5,000 to $25,000 according to the amount of their medical expenses through September 1979.

The state and federal courts have agreed that attorneys' shares will be limited to 5 percent of this round of payments, Kane said.

The $16 million fund was created by settlements with a number of defendants in the class-action suit, including the Richard Schilling family, which operated the popular night spot; the Union Light, Heat & Power Co., which provided electricity; several electrical manufacturers and a number of insurance companies.

The $13 million left after the initial payments could grow through investments and a case now being heard in federal court here.

The fund is being invested in U.S. Treasury bills, and income earned from that investment has been declared tax free by the Internal Revenue Service, Kane said.

Testimony was to resume today in the only case to reach court, a huge trial in which the plaintiffs are seeking to prove that the entire aluminum wire and electrical device industry is liable for damages because of faulty aluminum wiring they say caused the fire.

So far, a week of testimony has focused on where plaintiffs contend the fire started, in a receptionist's cubbyhole office adjacent to the club's Zebra Room.

The defendants contend there was no aluminum wiring in that area of the rambling, often-remodeled building.

Evening Newspaper To Debut In NY

NEW YORK (AP) — An afternoon newspaper that will try to capitalize on the commuter trade will debut on New York newsstands during the first quarter of 1980, according to publisher Michael Goldstein.

The Wall Street Final will be a five-day-a-week newspaper featuring closing stock quotations and other late-breaking business, national and international news. Goldstein, founder and former publisher of the Soho Weekly, a Manhattan tabloid, said Monday his goal is to sell 20,000 copies daily. The city's only other afternoon paper is the New York Post, which sells more than 640,000 copies a day.

Stock Prices Decline Again Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices lost more ground today as the price of gold soared to another record high in world markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off nearly 6 points Tuesday, was down 1.53 at 837.12 by noontime.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The princ of gold shot up to $494 an ounce at the morning fixing in London. It dropped back to $488.50 at the afternoon fixing, but that was still $11 above where it had stood 24 hours before.

Gold is considered a good indicator of the level of concern and uncertainty around the world over such problems as inflation, pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange, and oil prices.

Delegates to an Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Caracas were still trying today to reach an agreement on pricing plans.

Chrysler led the active list, up ½ at 7 in trading that included a 115,000-share block at 6½. The House approved a federal loan-guarantee plan for the troubled automaker Tuesday, and action on the measure was pending in the Senate.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.29 million shares at noontime, against 20.01 million at the same point Tuesday.

Food Label Regulations Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three federal agencies announced plans today to require that food labels be simplified while divulging more information about the ingredients, additives and nutritional value of what's inside.

The Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department's food and consumer services office developed the proposed changes in their regulations over the last year. The Federal Trade Commission, which oversees advertising of food products, cooperated in the development of the tentative changes.

"The goal of this program is to make sure that food labels provide consumers with information they want, in language they can understand and use," said FDA Commissioner Jere Goyan.

"We want complete ingredient labeling for all foods; we want colors and spices to be listed by specific names; we want open dating in appropriate foods; we want nutrition labeling on more foods; and we want the label to provide more information about sugars, salt and cholesterol," he said in a prepared statement.

"I don't think it should be necessary for the American consumer to go to the supermarket with a magnifying glass, a scientific background or a Ouija board when buying food," added Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

The National Food Processors Association immediately described itself as troubled by the agency's labeling proposals. The industry statement endorsed voluntary labeling changes and said that "it appears some of the proposals would add to costs of food without bringing corresponding benefits to consumers."

Dallas Police Ruled Biased

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has ruled the Dallas police department has discriminated against blacks in its hiring practices, a decision the plaintiff's attorney estimates could cost the city between $2.7 and $5.7 million in back pay.

U.S. District Judge Patrick Higginbotham's ruling Tuesday covered blacks rejected by the department from August 1973 to December 1978.

The class action suit charged that the department discriminated against blacks and women, but Higginbotham ruled that the department's practices are not biased against women. Fewer than 100 of the 2,000-member force are women.

Higginbotham left intact the city's 45-hour college requirement, but said the department offered no explanations for the disparity in hiring blacks "except generalized statements about blacks' reluctance to engage in police work because of their attitude 'toward the man.'"

"Apart from its typecasting bias, that argument blinks at the reality of the numbers of blacks that did apply. The question of why blacks have disparately failed has not been answered."

The judge set no date for arguments on the damage phase of the lawsuit, but plaintiff's attorney Kenneth Molberg estimated it would take at least a year to prepare.

Winners Picked In Contest

The $100 first place prize went to Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Simmons, Segrest said. Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ray Doss won the $75 prize for second place and Mr. and Mrs. C.B. Looney won the $50 third place prize, he said.

The 300 lot leasees of the lake area were all invited to participate in the contest, Segrest said. The residents have always decorated for Christmas, but the contest generated a lot more interest this year, he noted.

Judges for the contest were three members of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce's beautification committee, Paul Lang, Debbie Salinas and Mrs. N.A. Cox.

The lights and decorations at the lake area will remain up throughout the month of December.

Buffalo Springs Lake is located four miles east of Loop 289 on Farm Road 835. Visitors can get there by going out East 50th Street. There is a general admission charge of 50 cents per person over 12.

Man's Property Sold By Couple

A married couple apparently had a yard sale Saturday in Lubbock, much to the chagrin of the man who told police he owned the property that was sold.

Hoyle Phillips of 3005 E. Third Place said he went to a house he owns in the 2600-block of Baylor Street about 8 p.m. Tuesday and found it vacant and $1,200 in furniture missing.

Phillips told police he had been renting the house to a couple who told him they were moving to California.

However, before they left they reportedly had an outdoor sale, using Phillips' furniture as merchandise.

A person living near the rented house told Phillips Tuesday night that the man and woman had a yard sale Saturday and that they sold a "bunch of furniture."

The victim said that among the items missing were tables, chairs, couches, beds, a dresser and four lamps.

Profits Higher At U.S. Banks

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

With the public and the Congress highly sensitive to big jumps in profits, the country's bankers are looking for ways to tone down their own good fortune — and they have plenty.

A couple of weeks ago, Clarence Barksdale, chairman of the First National Bank of St. Louis, raised some eyebrows when he suggested that banks "manage" their earnings this year to avoid being put into the same boat as the oil companies. Barksdale, though, was only saying publicly what many other bankers have been saying privately.

The banks have had a good year despite — some say because of — record-high rates. They're looking over their shoulders because, as Barksdale put it, "the next industry facing a windfall-profit tax will be banking."

The banks haven't had a year like the oil companies, but it's been good enough.

In the third quarter, their overall profits were 21 percent higher than the same period last year. When they finished adjusting, their full-year net should be about 20 percent over 1978, on average.

No banks are reporting tripled profits, but the bankers are worried anyway.

Barksdale's comments brought an irked reaction from Rep. Henry Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee. Reuss thinks that if the bankers feel their profits are too high, they could correct them by cutting their interest charges.

The bankers don't agree — Federal Reserve tight-money policies and all that — and besides they have better ways. One of the nice things about being a banker is that you can maneuver money and look like a patriot at the same time.

Although 1979 has been a good year, 1980 doesn't look so rosy. Whether the recession has started or is coming, the demand for business loans seems to have flattened out.

Next year, bankers say, there is likely to be more trouble collecting on loans. So, they do the "prudent" thing and build up their reserves against losses.

In the third quarter of 1978, banks held reserves equal to 0.88 percent of their outstanding loans. By the end of September this year, that percentage was up to 0.98.

Loan loss reserves are charged directly against profits, so the bankers were able to build up a cushion for next year (and maybe the year after) while avoiding showing anybody even bigger jumps in profits at a time when mortgage money is expensive and tight and when many banks are turning their backs on less-profitable consumers lending.

There are other ways to spread some of this year's profits into next year and beyond.

There could be a rash of year-end bonuses on the banking business. Banks will be pre-paying expenses for next year, such as equipment leases, rents and even postage.

Some have started amortizing the fees they receive for loans (in addition to interest), taking them into profits over the full term of the loan instead of when they're actually received.

The loan loss reserves, though, are the favorite tool.

Each tiny fraction of a percentage point salts away millions of dollars. And, as one bank analyst put it, "it's the most difficult one to challenge; they can always say they're just protecting their stockholders and depositors."

Later, of course, when the economy looks better or profits look worse, the bankers can decide they don't need such hefty reserves and pump the cash back into profits.

According to sources we've checked with, a number of bankers have talked about softening the impact of the profits increases — but not in public.

At a meeting New York's Citibank officials had with analysts a few weeks ago, treasurer Donald S. Howard began by asking if there were any reporters in the room. Assured there weren't, he laid out a 10-year projection of profits by the country's second-largest bank.

Analysts tell us the same question has been asked at other bank meetings. Barksdale apparently didn't ask.

Yugoslavia Unstable, Businessman Says

By DAN HALL

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Your manufacturing company has just invested several million dollars opening a branch office in Yugoslavia.

Yugoslavia is a communist country, but Marshal Tito traditionally has taken a firm stand against Soviet intervention. What's more, U.S. government investment counselors highly recommend the country.

Imagine your chagrin on hearing the following prediction from a man who pioneered in gathering business intelligence abroad:

"If a third world war is going to begin, it will begin in Yugoslavia," says Benjamin Weiner, president of Probe International Inc. "Yet the U.S. government is saying great business opportunities exist there."

The rosy picture grows out of Yugoslavia's relatively stable government, but it ignores the age-old hatred between the Serbs and the Croats, complicated by Soviet support of the Croats in apparent hope of gaining an Adriatic port, he said. And the power of Tito, at age 87, is limited.

Nine years ago, when ex-Foreign Service officer Weiner founded his business-intelligence operation, there was little if any demand for the service, he said.

"Today it's getting better for us because things are getting worse," he said in an interview.

Terrorism imperils business executives on virtually every continent, U.S. prestige abroad is seriously ow, and about one-third of all goverments change hands each year, he said.

Probe International is one of several information-gathering services that make a nifty profit by providing inside information on the political prospects for investment in a given company.

Last year Weiner and his four professional investigators counseled a dozen U.S.-based multinational corporations operating in Italy, Germany, Turkey, Egypt, Iran, Libya, Nigeria, China, Taiwan, Malaysia, Brazil, Mexico and China, he said.

Probe commands fees ranging from $3,000 to $4,000 a month.

"You don't look at whether a country is stable or not," he said. "We look at whether you can go into a country and operate ethically and profitably. We can no longer accept the word of a foreign government."

Iran currently overshadows other U.S. trouble spots. While Probe would not recommend a business venture there today, a few U.S. businesses still operate quietly not far from the seized U.S. embassy because they provide services needed by the revolutionary government, Weiner said. He declined to identify any of them.

PepsiCo might have not have had trucks toppled and burned while the Shah's government was falling if it had received better advice, he predicted.

Moslem revolutionaries focused their wrath on Pepsi trucks, not because of anti-American feeling but because the company's local branch was run by a Bahai, whose religious group is despised by Shiite Moslems, he noted.

In contrast to Weiner's methodical approach to information gathering, the New York native wandered into foreign service about two decades ago at age 26. He had done a stint in the Army then went to college, majoring in government.

For 10 years he served with the Foreign Service — in Southeast Asia, Western Europe and Washington — learning about U.S. foreign investment and making invaluable contacts at home and abroad that aid him today.

After two years with consulting firms, he launched Probe alone.

"I was very, very lucky with my timing because I was predicting a possible change in relations in U.S. relations with China."

Before long, the Nixon administration made the historic overture.

"For the first two years, we did nothing but China business. But I panicked for two reasons: I didn't want to be identified with only one country, and I feared that China didn't have a great (business) potential."

As Probe branched out geographically, it also began to focus on a growing threat, terrorism, and its implication for business operations abroad.

Weiner, now 47, now sees two important issues affecting the foreign investment atmosphere: separatist movements such as those in Yugoslavia, and religious activism, ranging from the Shiite uprisings in the Middle East to political involvement of Roman Catholic priests in South America.

Probe has studied business investment in Canada's Quebec province and even predicted growing strength of the separatist Parti Quebecois at a time news analysts were saying the 1974 elections showed the movement was dying, he said.

Further investigation for a client showed that Quebec secession would not hurt its U.S. business ties but could enhance them, he added.

Probe's nine directors include former CIA Director William Colby, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, the retire chief of naval operations, and former British diplomat Lord Caradon.

The firm presents frequent conferences on foreign problems as well as consulting individual clients. Participants include corporate executives and government officials, who pay up to $1,000 for a two-day session.

Weiner's basic message is that Americans must be more realistic about our role abroad.

"I think the U.S. government is doing a disservice to U.S. companies because it tells them all the advantages of foreign investment but none of the disadvantages.

Financial Experts Predicting Only Mild Recession In 1980

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Don't expect too much from the recession of 1980.

Even before that recession has officially begun, the correctiveness of it is gradually being discounted. What has been sold as stiff medicine to remedy our ills may turn out to have the potency of cough syrup.

This isn't to say the recession, which has been predicted for at least a year, won't hurt. Unemployment is expected to rise, there'll be lots of pressure on wages and profits, and housing starts may fall sharply.

In other words, the medicine might taste awful but its effectiveness might be awfully weak, too. It probably won't bring down prices and borrowing costs by very much, if at all, in 1980.

Isn't a recession supposed to depress prices and interest rates? That's the standard explanation, and it's expected to apply in 1980, but apparently not to the degree that we were led to expect.

Several economists or forecasting groups in recent days have in effect warned Americans not to expect early declines in prices and borrowing costs unless the recession is deeper than now anticipated.

Henry Kaufman, economist with the Salamon Brothers securities firm and considered a seer by some of his peers, believes that even higher interest rates are ahead. This despite a rather sharp decline recently.

As he sees it, the prime lending rate, which dropped to 15 percent from 15¾ percent in less than one month, will move higher again. Sometime in the next six months, he says, it might hit 17 percent.

After that, he believes, it should drop sharply. That drop, however, could be delayed until the second half of the year, or months later than most economists are forecasting. Alan Sanai, monetary authority for Data Resources, whose numbers are widely used, even suggests the Federal Reserve might tigthen credit again, more than easing the rate declines since November.

Jack Carlson, an economist and president of the National Association of Realtors, said in an interview he doesn't expect a sharp drop in rates for home mortgages, despite many such forecasts.

Analysis

"The best we can expect is one or two percentage points lower in the next year or two," said Carlson. But, he quickly added, they might stay right where they are.

Where they are or recently have been is record high territory, a bit higher or lower than 12 percent in most areas and much higher in some, as high as 15 percent at some California institutions.

Housing prices too might stay where they are or rise, says Carlson. The increases won't be as great as in the 1970s, he believes, "but prices in the 1980s will at least stay even with inflation and probably rise a bit more." He sees inflation at close to 12 percent in 1980.

The Business Council is also worried about higher prices. Two months ago it said it expected inflation to be about 8 percent in 1980. Last week it revised that to 10.8 percent, eliminating the "significant easing" it had foreseen in the earlier forecast.

NEO-PRIMITIVISM

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Institute of Contemporary Art at the University of Pennsylvania says it is presenting the first major exhibition to focus upon neo-primitivism in recent art.

Judge Raps Weicker In Making Ruling

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal judge, refusing to enforce a subpoena against Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., says the Securities and Exchange Commission allowed its probe of the company to be politically abused by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

U.S. District Judge Donald Ziegler's ruling this week stymied the SEC's probe of Wheeling-Pittsburgh's potential mergers and acquisitions. Court sources said the ruling was unprecedented in its examination of political influence on the SEC.

The SEC "permitted, and at times encouraged, the abuse of its investigating function," the judge said, charging that Weicker teamed with Wheeling-Pittsburgh competitor CF&I Inc. of Colorado to keep the SEC probe alive.

In a lengthy opinion, Ziegler said the senator and the company fed information to SEC investigators after failing to block $140 million in federal loan guarantees to financially troubled Wheeling-Pittsburgh.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh, which plans to use the guarantees in financing pollution controls and a new rail mill in nearby Monessen, had asked the court to quash the entire probe. But Ziegler said the action went beyond his authority.

Weicker and SEC investigators on the case were unavailable for comment. A spokesman for rail manufacturer CF&I, formerly Colorado Fuel & Iron, said the company would have no comment until it had time to study the judge's statement.

Weicker had tried to block the loan guarantees before they were granted to the Pittsburgh-based steelmaker.

"When efforts appeared doomed in the political forum, they (Weicker's office and CF&I) began using the investigative authority of the SEC to achieve a political result," Zeigler said. "More importantly ... the commission was aware it was being used and did nothing to prevent the process."

CF&I filed suit on the day the guarantees were announced, but a federal judge in Colorado dismissed the suit.

Weicker's involvement in the SEC probe began with a letter to the agency alleging that Wheeling-Pittsburgh President Dennis Carney made a false statement about the hoped-for guarantees at an April 27 stockholders meeting. The judge said the charge was "trivial."

At times, communications between Weicker's office, CF&I and the SEC took on "the appearance of a partnership," Ziegler said.

"We are not condemning contact between legislators and the commission," Ziegler said. But because of the circumstances, the judge said he could not approve of the agency's actions.

Western Mills Reflect Slower Building Pace

PORTLAND, Ore. (Special) — The western lumber industry operated at 88.5 percent of its practical operating capacity during September, according to the Western Wood Products Association.

That was a decrease of 3.9 percent from year-to-date average figures that show the industry operating at 92.4 percent for the first nine months of 1979. The 1979 year-to-date pace is off only 1.1 percent from 1978's 93.5 percent.

September figures were off 7.7 percent from August's 96.2 percent, which was the second highest reporting month in 1979.

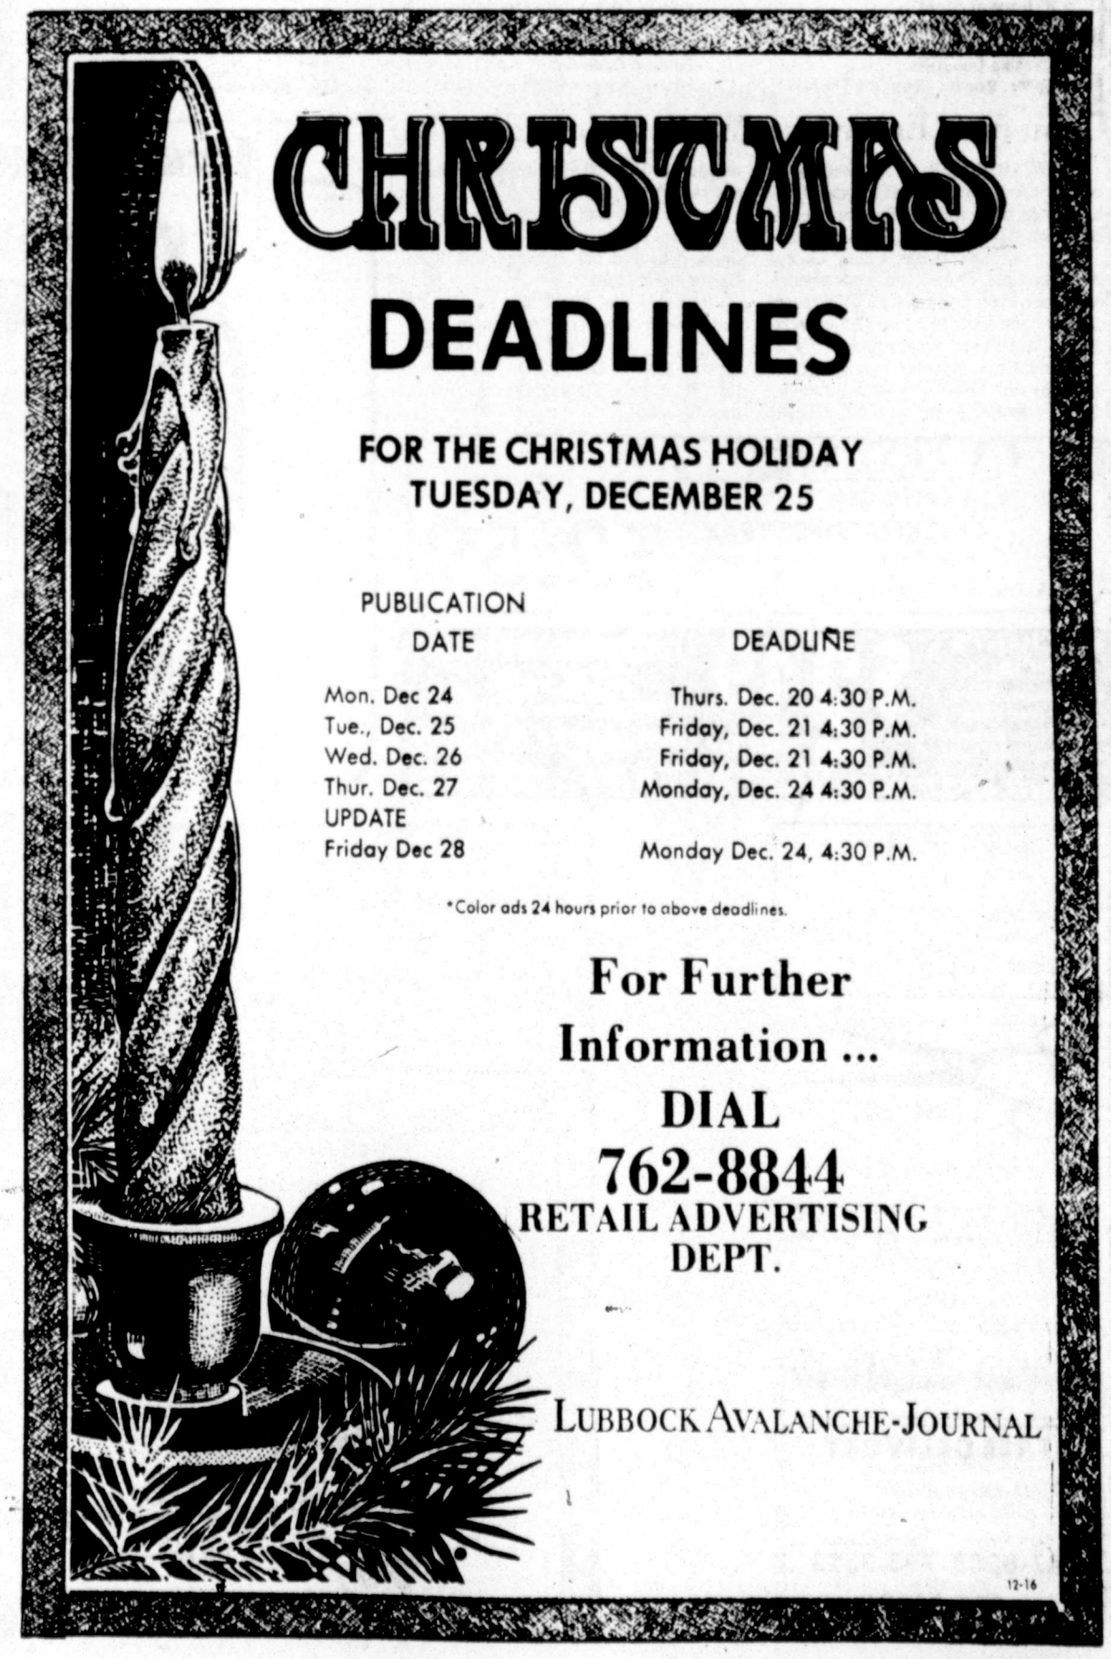

The industry operated at 94.3 percent of capacity in September 1978.

"The fall-off in September simply reflects a slower pace of building or construction activity this year," Fred Reseburg, WWPA director of economic services said. "This decline should not be confused with the recent Federal Reserve action and consequential reaction of money-tightening by banks and S&L's. Any slowdown caused by that action might show up in later figures," he said.

WWPA established the 12-state western lumber producing industry's practical capacity for any given month as the highest actual production reached in that month during the last five calendar years, including the current month.

Since it required time for its development, this capacity information always is reported the second month after the month covered.

The monthly WWPA capacity report covers lumber production totaling about 18 billion board feet manufactured annually in the 12 western states. That is about 60 percent of the U.S. softwood output.

Musical Fits Gay Mood Of Christmas Season

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mix spun sugar sentiment with a whipped cream plot, decorate with hearts and flowers and the result is a lighter-than-air musical confection called "She Loves Me."

What makes this 1963 hit Broadway musical into a delicious television production is the crisp professionalism of a vivacious cast that plays the silly story out at full tilt, having fun and giving it.

The BBC musical, which fits the gay mood of the Christmas season, will be shown on PBS's "Great Performances."

The story goes back to the Hungarian — a comedy called "Parfumerie" by Miklos Laszlo. It tells of a young man and woman who work in a chic Budapest perfume shop, bickering with each other but carrying on a secret mail-order romance with an unseen partner.

Surprise! They unwittingly are writing "Dear Friend" letters to each other.

A hit in Europe, the play suffered a name change on crossing the Atlantic and in Hollywood became "Little Shop Around the Corner," starring James Stewart and Margaret Sullavan — an unlikely pair of middle Europeans.

It was put to music as "She Loves Me" on Broadway in 1963, which is the version the BBC televised with dark-haired beauty Gemma Craven as the girl, with her boyfriend played by Robin Ellis, seen as Ross Poldark in the PBS television series of the same name.

In another piece of Christmas cheer, CBS has a new series called "House Calls," based on the movie of that title, which promises to be a hit. Again, the cast is a winner.

The show made its debut Dec. 17, snuggled cozily between "M*A*S*H" and "Lou Grant," and stars Wayne Rogers, Lynn Redgrave and David Wayne.

While Rogers and Miss Redgrave banter, bicker, and work for Kensington General Hospital — he as doctor, she as administrative assistant — David Wayne steals the show whenever he barges on stage.

Wayne plays the senile chief of surgery who cannot be trusted to operate.

If the opening show spotlighted Wayne, the second in the series, to air Dec. 26, illustrates that over the long haul the success of "House Calls" depends on the very attractive talents of Rogers and Miss Redgrave.

Comedian Entertains While Signing Books

NEW YORK (AP) — A middle-aged, well-dressed woman walked up to the bookstore table where comedian George Burns sat signing copies of his new book.

"My husband thinks I'm a George Burns groupie. I've seen all your movies, read your book and have all your record albums" she told the comedian as he sat puffing on his most famous prop.

Without missing a beat, as he signed her copy of "The Third Time Around," the 83-year-old Burns replied: "That's wonderful. You tell your husband I thiNk you're very smart."

It was one small repartee in an hour-long series of off-the-cuff jokes and one-liners delivered not on stage, but at B. Dalton Booksellers.

To those who asked him to sing, he had various responses, all of them negative: "I've got a new album coming out. It costs $30,000. Buy it." Or: "If I had a few violins here, I'd sing. (Frank) Sinatra uses 12 violins."

Why The Precision Haircut Might Be Right For You.
If you hate the way your haircut disappears the day after, come to Command Performance where we specialize in the precision haircut.
Precision haircutting is our technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. So, as it grows, it doesn't lose its shape. And because the hair is cut to fall naturally, you don't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.
The precision haircut with shampoo and blow-dry costs just fourteen dollars for guys and gals. We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. No appointment is needed, just come in. And you'll see that precision is right for you.

Asner Cast In Romantic Lead For CBS Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's sort of an ode to the masculine mid-life crisis — Edward Asner, married, balding and round, has an affair with Meredith Baxter-Birney, single, fetching and unround, and gets away with it.

Really, that's pretty much the story of "The Family Man," airing tonight on CBS. As interesting as the story here is Asner's casting in a romantic lead.

Asner, who rides helm over the city desk on CBS' "Lou Grant," plays a happily married, financially secure family man. He's just become a grandfather, an event that seems to suit him fine, and his other child is about to move out into the world, leaving Asner and his loving wife (Anne Jackson) alone for the first time in 25 years.

Stepping uninvited into this sweet family portrait is Miss Baxter-Birney, a high-born and well-bred Juilliard student who is struggling to make it on her own. She's just broken up with an abuser, and is attracted to Asner's kindness and caring; he, on the other hand, is attracted to her, period.

See, he has been feeling restless lately, taking long walks alone and pining for the sea and...well, never mind, suffice it to say he asks her to the opera and she accepts. One thing leads to another and Edward Asner strikes a triumphant chord for fellows balding and round.

His wife, meanwhile, is nervous about growing old and about being alone with her husband. Plus, she has an intuitive feeling that something is awry (as required in all such dramas). There is resolution, though, by which time Edward Asner has made roundness and thinning hair absolute virtues.

"The Family Man" has something to say about marriage, family, love and growing older, and its voice is subtle and adult; much of its "message" is not uttered at all, just understood.

The ladies in this are just fine, but Asner, Asner is something to see. He lends a very valuable regular-guy quality to the role, without turning the thing into "Lou Gets Lucky."

"It's just another scalp," he says of the role. "I've got all the acting tools for a role like this.

"People are shocked that I'm there (in a romantic lead opposite Meredith Baxter-Birney), people who didn't see me as a sexual object before. Well, we're all sexual objects. I think of myself as a sexual object. When we were shooting the love scenes, I just tried to think, 'Keep a stiff upper lip, and show the SOBs how many tricks you've got.'"

He has a few, it turns out, and employs them all to answer once and forever a question that has plagued me ever since I got into this dodge: Do city editors have romantic encounters?

About 43 percent of the money the U.S. Department of Agriculture spends on animal diseases is spent on a program to eradicate brucellosis.

Carter Appears Set For More Political Risktaking

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter got to the White House by successfully defying conventional political wisdom. A cautious president, Carter was a real high rolling gambler as a campaigner in 1974-1976.

First, Carter refused to accept the belief that a southerner could not be elected president. As strong as he was in 1964, Lyndon Johnson, convinced that eastern liberals would reject a southerner, took to calling himself a westerner. Carter bet that times had changed; didn't even try to avoid the southerner label and won with it.

Second, Carter ran even though he thought Sen. Edward Kennedy would be a candidate in 1976. And he went into New Hampshire, which would have been regarded as an easy win for Kennedy. When Kennedy didn't run, the fact that Carter was in New Hampshire and Sen. Henry Jackson wasn't probably changed the whole campaign.

Third, Carter entered almost every primary in the country. That amazed professional politicians who knew Carter could not campaign in all the states and would be vulnerable to candidates who could work in those he had to skip. They were right, but by the time that happened, Carter's momentum was unstoppable.

In 1980, Carter appears ready for some more political risktaking.

He planned, before the Iranian hostage crisis intervened, to start heavy duty campaigning a full year before the election. This is contrary to the theory that the incumbent can do himself the most good by working in the White House until the final phase of the campaign. This "Rose Garden" campaign theory was believed valid as late as 1976 when Gerald Ford used it to win the GOP nomination and nearly closed a vast general election gap.

Washington Window

Carter also is the first person elected to the presidency to agree to debate and certainly the first incumbent to debate opponents of his own party. The Iowa precinct caucuses probably are not going to make or break anyone's candidacy, but the Carter-Kennedy-Brown debate early in January has the potential to be a turning point of the 1980 campaign.

Of course, there is a common denominator to all these departures from political orthodoxy. All are the products of adversity; long odds — chances taken because safer alternatives did not seem to be available.

Everything Carter did in 1976 was designed to get his name before the public in a hurry. His biggest problem was recognition, and he simply had to take risks to overcome the lead almost every other contender had in that area.

This time, the problem is the public perception of failure. The long slide in the polls and the appearance of both Kennedy and Gov. Edmund G. Brown against him made Carter look like a wounded duck.

The president had a choice: Taking the fight aggressively to his challengers or sitting back and waiting for the polls to improve or for his opposition to trip.

Carter chose to act early, hoping to establish an early dominance and perhaps destroy both the Brown and Kennedy candidacies before the snow melts. That means it should not be too long before we know whether he has managed to beat the odds again or has finally made the wrong guess.

Senate Passes Price Supports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate passed by voice vote legislation to change price support provisions for extra long staple cotton, a specialty cotton for thread.

Without comment, the Senate Tuesday approved a version of the legislation which differs somewhat from a bill approved Monday by the House.

Aides said they expected the Senate to act soon to approve the House version so that a House-Senate conference can be avoided.

Both bills would raise price support loan levels and reduce total price supports, reducing government payments to extra long staple growers by $34 million over four years.

Extra long staple cotton is grown in Arizona, Texas, New Mexico and California. It is a relatively small crop compared to the common upland cotton grown in the South and West.

As petroleum costs continue to rise, cotton becomes more competitive with polyester, and U.S. manufacturers continue to export more and import fewer cotton goods.

Benson Fired; Tech Officials Mum

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Gay Benson, currently in her third season as Texas Tech women's basketball coach, was officially notified last Friday by Tech women's athletic director Jeannine McHaney that she would be relieved of her duties following the end of the 1979-80 school year.

Mrs. Benson told The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday that Miss McHaney called her into her office last Friday (Dec. 14) and informed her that she would be relieved of all budgeting, recruiting and correspondence duties immediately, and that her contract with Tech would not be renewed following the current school year.

"I don't want it to sound like sour grapes," Mrs. Benson stated. "What's done is done. I just think the public needs to be aware. Texas Tech is a great institution, but not all things going on are great."

Miss McHaney was out of her office most of the day Tuesday, but when contacted would not confirm or deny Mrs. Benson's firing.

"I cannot discuss personnel matters with anyone," Miss McHaney acknowledged. "The law prohibits us (university officials) from discussing these types of things."

Dr. Robert Ewalt, vice-president for student affairs and Miss McHaney's immediate superior, also refused to clarify the situation.

"I am not in a position to comment on any personnel matter," Ewalt stated. "I know that doesn't help you any, but I'm not free to make any comment concerning personnel matters."

Mrs. Benson was hired by Miss McHaney in the spring of 1977 following a brilliant coaching career at Slaton High School. Under Mrs. Benson's eyes, the Tigerettes compiled a 379-133 won-loss record over a 15-year period. In 1974, the Slaton girls captured the state Class AA basketball championship.

The Raiders went 34-11 during the 1977-78 season, the first for Mrs. Benson. Tech wound up 14-18 last year but had to forfeit six first-semester victories because of an ineligible player, Rhonda Farley.

Miss Farley dropped a course during the first semester that made her ineligible. According to Mrs. Benson, she nor anyone else in the women's athletic department was aware Miss Farley had dropped the class.

Tech women are presently 8-5 following an impressive 92-63 victory over Houston last weekend. This season, the Red Raiders are primarily an underclassmen squad. Mrs. Benson will start three freshmen, a sophomore and a junior when the Raiders play hostess to Arizona Saturday.

Mrs. Benson said she asked Tech women's sports information director Craig Pletenik to release information concerning her dismissal to the various Lubbock media, but Pletenik refused, saying Miss McHaney instructed him not to do so and that the news of Mrs. Benson's firing would leak out in time.

Mrs. Benson's main concern at the present time is the reason for her firing. She claims she has never been given an exact reason, although she has asked on numerous occasions.

"I want to know the reasons and I want the public to know the reasons," Mrs. Benson stated. "I know I'm not perfect, but I don't know what I have done to be fired.

"I've worked hard to build a program at Tech and now I'm working hard to keep my team together. At this time, I'm not sure how many of my players will even be coming back to school next semester."

The formal firing is the culmination of events which began last July with a meeting between Miss McHaney and Mrs. Benson. The meeting was called by Miss McHaney for the purpose of discussing several areas that Miss McHaney felt Mrs. Benson needed to improve upon.

Those areas included an improvement in the 8-25 record the Raiders posted during the 1978-79 season and, hopefully, at least a fourth-place finish among Texas college and university squads this season; more consistency on the part of Mrs. Benson in building the women's basketball program at Tech and less player attrition; a more positive approach on the part of Mrs. Benson in her dealings with players during games and practices (Miss McHaney claimed that Mrs. Benson humiliated players in front of their peers and the public on more than one occasion), and that Mrs. Benson show improvement in what Miss McHaney called her "physical and emotional problems."

Mrs. Benson suffered a miscarriage in the middle of the basketball season last February but claims at that time there were no problems that she knew of between herself and anyone else in the women's athletic department.

"In March she (Miss McHaney) told me I was doing a good job, except I was too blunt when it came to recruiting," Mrs. Benson said.

According to Mrs. Benson, Miss McHaney also stated that she could not prohibit her players from smoking or drinking because of their rights and that Whatever strides Gay Benson has made in the development of the Texas Tech women's basketball program may soon vanish. Mrs. Benson may just pick up her building blocks and go play somewhere else.

Last Friday, Mrs. Benson was fired (effective at the end of the 1979-80 school year) by Tech women's athletic director Jeannine McHaney. The 39-year-old Mrs. Benson was in her third year as head coach and apparently had the Tech women pointed in the right direction. The Raiders are 8-5 so far this year and several of those losses have been to teams (Texas, Delta State and Stephen F. Austin) ranked in the Top 20 in the nation.

Mrs. Benson fielded a relatively young ball team and the sentiment of those freshmen and sophomore players is "wherever Coach Benson goes, we're going, too."

"If she leaves Tech and coaches at another college or university, I'll definitely go with her," confessed freshman starter Pam Stone, who leads the team in rebounds (9.8 per game) and is second in scoring (13.3 ppg).

"Gay Benson is the main reason I came to Tech," the first-year center add-

No Rush To See 1980

THE CALENDAR INSISTS that we are about to enter a new year, most commonly observed by the expression of good tidings.

I, for one, recognize the futility in such dalliance. I've wished myself well for years and it's generally taken me nowhere.

These days, I'm used to getting what I want because I ask for very little.

I also shun the blind alley of predictions. I don't bother to speculate about the future because I've seen enough bygone days to understand that, in the ways that matter most, the future is little more than the past recycled.

Besides, what is a prediction if not the desire to see something change or remain unchanged?

Sure, there are things I would enjoy experiencing in the coming year, but few of them center around the world of sports. Sound priorities.

My list of New Year's sports' expectations is quickly reduced to a simple rundown of likes and dislikes. These are superior to resolutions (they can't be broken) and predictions (I can't be proven wrong).

If possible (and, in some cases, they're not), here are a few random samples of events it would not upset me to have occur in 1980:

• AN END TO TELEVISED pseudo-sporting events like "Battle of the NFL Cheerleaders" and the sickening "Network Superstars." (I'd love to see Robert Conrad "dare" Coy Bacon.)

• One authentic, gripping film about the subject of sports, unlike this year's

Dunbar Girls Deflate Morton

Dorcas Perkins and Lisa Cavell each pumped in 15 points as the Dunbar Panthers overcame an early deficit to nip Friona at the wire 62-55 Monday night.

Friona led 14-10 at the end of one period and 29-25 at the half.

But Dunbar pulled ahead in the third period and maintained that narrow lead down the stretch.

Georgetown Struggles; BYU Defeated On Road

By The Associated Press

It was a big weekend for both the Georgetown and Brigham Young basketball teams, but a pretty bad hangover afterwards.

After working hard to win weekend tournaments, the 17th-ranked Hoyas and 18th-ranked Cougars showed the after-effects Tuesday night when Georgetown struggled to beat an inferior Providence team 55-50 at home and BYU lost to Long Beach State 78-76 on the road.

"We lacked mental concentration," said Georgetown coach John Thompson. "The weekend tournament, the travel and exams all contributed to our losing our concentration."

Craig Shelton scored 18 points for the Hoyas, who were fresh off a victory in the Nike Cage Classic in New Mexico. Thompson attributed Tuesday night's close score to "mental fatigue."

The same might have been said of Brigham Young, which won its Cougar Classic with a frenetic, triple-overtime victory over LaSalle Saturday night. The Cougars, who scored 108 points against LaSalle, were nowhere near the high-powered club of the weekend. Michael Wiley scored 25 points and Craig Hodges added 22 to lead the Long Beach offense.

In other action involving the nation's Top Twenty teams, No. 5 Indiana rolled past Toledo 80-56, 12th-ranked Virginia defeated Chaminade of Hawaii 79-54 behind Jeff Lamp's 23 points, and No. 14 UCLA whipped Athletes-In-Action 75-69 in an exhibition game.

Indiana, just dropped from the No. 1 spot after a weekend loss to Kentucky, was led by 19 points from Mike Woodson and 15 by freshman guard Isiah Thomas.

"We had perhaps as good defensive play as we've been able to sustain all year," said Indiana coach Bobby Knight. "We had more balance offensively. We got some good offensive plays out of our defense."

Rod Foster scored 21 points to lead UCLA's conquest of AIA, an amateur team that plays a major college schedule.

Elsewhere, Mike Olliver's 26 points led Lamar past Texas A&I 94-81; Clark Young scored 24 points as Seton Hall whipped Stanford 72-55; Rickey Brown's 27 points and 13 rebounds led Mississippi State over Iowa State 84-63; Ron Charles had 23 points and Jay Vincent 21 to power Michigan State past Central Michigan 95-76 and Auburn trimmed Austin Peay 65-61 as Bubba Price scored 14 points.

Also, Antoine Carr scored 30 points to lead Wichita State to a 97-70 victory over Samford; Mark Harris' two free throws with nine seconds left led Harvard over Holy Cross 81-80; Oregon trimmed Humboldt State 85-62 as Richard Wright scored 17 points; Ronnie Valentine's 19 points triggered Old Dominion to a 70-65 decision over East Carolina; Bruce Collins scored 28 as Weber State whipped Seattle 80-71; Tommy Morgan had 21 points to lead Fullerton State over San Diego State 68-53; California hammered Cal-Davis 87-59 behind a 26-point output by Michael Chavez and Dave Mason's 26 points helped Akron defeat Kent State 68-67.

Coronado Cagers Drop 68-65 Tilt To Borger

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Coronado had just finished strapping on the Keds for the fifth time in six nights — which is no mild feat, to say the least. So the question then for coach Barry Arnwine was obvious: "Weren't the Mustangs getting just a little bit leg weary?"

"I can't say that," laughed Arnwine. "I think I used that excuse last night."

For the second consecutive evening, Coronado found itself bowing to a Class AAA opponent. Estacado dealt Arnwine & Crew a setback Monday night. It was Borger's turn Tuesday as the Bulldogs narrowly edged past CHS 68-65. Coronado, which had run off six wins in seven outings early in the year, has now lost three of its last four.

And by all account, this one was one Coronado should have won. The Ponies looked good at times, but bad at others — particularly when it counted.

"I'm tired of playing good and losing," commented Arnwine.

For most of the contest, Coronado managed to hold the upper hand. In fact, with just 2:54 left in the game, the Mustangs owned what appeared to be a comfortable 4-point lead 65-61.

Then things started turning lukewarm.

Following the bucket by Scott Williams which gave the Mustangs the 4-point advantage, Coronado failed to toss in another point. But that certainly doesn't mean Borger couldn't — and didn't.

Brett Smith hit the front end of a one-and-one to cut CHS' lead to 3 points 65-62. And after a Coronado turnover, Gary Ray canned a 10-footer with 2:17 left and the Ponies led by only uno, 65-64.

John Lord had a chance to put Coronado up by either 2 or 3 points, but he failed to hit the front end of a one-and-one try. Gregg Belton ripped down the defensive rebound for Borger and 12 second later he hit a jumper from 6 feet out to give Borger its first lead since late in the second quarter. It was 66-65 with time running out.

Coronado saw another excellent chance to jump ahead fall by the courtside when Sam Law, the Mustangs' leading scorer with 17 points, tossed up a shot that hit more glass than rim. Belton again pulled down the rebound, giving Borger the ball and, well, the game, too.

Ches Williams canned two shots after being fouled by Jimmy Johnson. The two points added up to a 3-point lead 68-65 with 16 seconds left.

"I hate to say we're playing bad, because we're not," said Arnwine. "What hurt were the turnovers at the end. I just wish when I called them over, they'd told me they were going to turn it over three times. Then, maybe, I'd tried something else."

Arnwine will have to wait over a week to implement the strategy since Coronado won't see any more action until the ABC Caprock tournament during the Christmas break.

SLATON, POST SPLIT

Esolita Whaley scored 20 points to lead the Slaton girls to another win, this one 63-36 over Post. But in the boys game, the Antelopes turned the tables, taking a 56-55 win behind Chuck Black's 23 points. Ronald Nedd netted 17 for Slaton.

RALLS SPLITS

Harvey Fink scored 18 points to lead Crosbyton's boys past Rolls 53-43 but Tracy Wiley sscored 21 points in the girls game as the Jackrabbits took a 46-41 win.

FRENSHIP ROLLS

Will Ritchey scored 22 points to pace the Frenship boys past Roosevelt 79-48 Tuesday night.

FOLLIS WINS 800

Lamesa coach O.W. Follis recorded his 800th career win Tuesday with a 69-56 decision over Monahans. Pepe Lucio led the way with 15 points for the Golden Tors.

NEW DEAL GALS ROLL

Vickie Teal fired in 18 points and the New Deal girls' team rolled to an easy 71-33 victory over Petersburg Tuesday night. Vickie McLaughlin had 12 for the losers.

In the boys tilt Petersburg took a lopsided 70-41 win as Quintin Berry fired in 25 points. David Lira had 12 for New Deal.

VALLEY, IDALOU SPLIT

Linda Eudy fired in 14 points to lead the Valley gals' to an upset victory over Idalou Tuesday night, 42-34. Jimmie Hitt had 12 tallies for the losers.

In the boys' tilt, Dennis Green jammed in 30 points to lead the Wildcats to a 53-46 victory over Valley. Tommy Brittian had 13 for the losers.

DUNBAR BOYS WIN

Charles Mitchell fired in 18 points Tuesday night to lead the Dunbar Panthers to a tough 68-64 victory over Friona. Randy Kerr had 20 points for Friona, now 7-5. Dunbar is 5-7 on the year.

ABERNATHY SWEEPS

Abernathy got 46 points from Dean McGuire and Joey Garcia to down Canyon 73-72. McGuire scored 24 and Garcia 22 to lead the Antelopes past Canyon. Kendall Walling and Ken Johnson chipped in 16 each for the losers.

Lubbock Girls Fall To Permian

Odessa Permian, despite having only one player score in double figures and having three players foul out, topped Lubbock High 42-37 Tuesday night.

Charla Brown was the only girl from Permian to score more than 10 points, and she just barely made it with 12.

Lubbock High was led by Jennifer Smith's 11 and LaShawn Zahn's 10.

Amherst's Johnson, Lazbuddie Coach Honored

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A coach who turned his team from dog house to top dog, and a back who gained more yards than all but three runners in the history of this area, top 1979's Class B All-South Plains team.

When Dewayne Sexton took over his Lazbuddie Longhorns in 1975, the team had won just five games in the last three years. Now, five years later, he has molded them into zone champions and strung together three straight winning seasons.

In Class B, 1979 was the year of Ronald Johnson. The 5-11, 175-pound back pounded out 2,020 yards on 235 carries for the Amherst Bulldogs. Only three other players from this area have ever gained so much.

Johnson, the only offensive returner from last year's all-South Plains squad, finished his prep career with 4,092 yards on 478 carries, a per-carry average of 8.5 yards.

Sexton's Longhorns placed more players — six — than any other team on the young squad. Amherst and Wilson had four each and Valley (which lost to state champion Wheeler by only a point) and Klondike had three each.

This year's squad is one of the youngest in memory. Five of the 11 offensive players are juniors and six defensive honorees have one year left.

Leading that bunch is Klondike's James Martin, and Wilson's Quintin Talkmitt, both juniors named on both offense and defense.

Martin is a 6-1, 230-pound offensive tight end and defensive lineman and Talkmitt is a 6-0, 180-pound offensive tackle and defensive linebacker.

The offensive backfield and the linebacking corps are where most of the youth lies. Three of the four offensive backs are juniors and all three linebackers are juniors.

Besides Johnson, a senior, there is Lazbuddie's Andy Rogers at quarterback, Valley's James McNary (who averaged 155.6 yards a game and 8.8 yards a carry during the regular season) at one running back and Klondike's tough Lonny Ferguson (a 135 yard-per-game and 7.5 per-carry average) is at another.

All three are juniors.

In addition to the McMeans and Talkmitt, Russell Windham from Lazbuddie also made the team. Windham averaged 19 tackles a game this season and Talkmitt 18.

LCC Cagers Rest Before Dallas Tournament

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

"The next time I enter a tournament, I think I'll ask who we'll play first," joked Lubbock Christian College coach Larry Hays Tuesday.

"They all want us. Seems like they give us a lot of encouragement, with the teams we play first. We go up to Oklahoma (Chickasha) for a tournament, and we draw Cameron, the number one team in the nation. We play in a doubleheader at Howard Payne and we have to play them and Angelo.

"Then, after Christmas, we go to the Dallas Baptist tournament and have to play East Texas State, with one of the best small-college teams around."

But, it's tough competition, and this is what Hays knows his team needs for the 1980 conference season.

Right now, the Chaparrals are 7-9 for the year, after splitting games at Howard Payne last weekend. They defeated Angelo State 71-71, but lost to HPU 92-77.

Still, "It was the best road trip we've had this year," remarked the LCC coach. "Even against Howard Payne, with 1:20 left in the half, we were only down by one and went to the line with a one-and-one.

"But, we had (starters Marshall) Smith and (Bill) McGee on the bench with foul trouble, and they got us down about eight at the half.

"Outside of that, when we weren't in foul trouble, we played pretty well. We just don't have any depth at the point-guard position," Hays remarked.

Hays said he had been pleased with the team's improvement, but this week, the Chaparrals have scattered for home for the Christmas holidays, "And I hated to stop (working out) at this point."

The addition of Larry Holt helped in the Angelo State game, as the 6-3 freshman scored 12 points, hitting three of four field shots and six of seven free throws. He had been injured and did not return to workouts until last week.

Also, reserve forward Jim Steensma dropped in 13 points against Angelo.

"Holt came in and gave us some stability. He shot well both games," said Hays.

The LCC coach remarked that Cecil Norris will become eligible in time for the DBC tournament next week, "and that will help. It will give some more depth.

"And, hopefully, Keith Money (a 5-10 freshman) will be eligible after the first of the year. That will help us at point guard behind Smith.

"McGee has been having to play small forward and point guard, and it's hard to adjust to that.

"But, this just shows our weakness (in depth) in a hurry."

The Chaparrals will play in the DBC tournament Dec. 27-29, then start conference play against Austin College in Sherman on Jan. 12.

Pardee Named AP Coach Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Pardee, who guided the aging, draft-poor Washington Redskins to within a whisker of a division championship, was named today the National Football League Coach of the Year by The Associated Press.

Pardee received 30 of the 84 votes cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sports broadcasters, three in each league city. Dick Vermeil of the Philadelphia Eagles was a close second with 23 votes.

Other coaches receiving more than one vote were Don Coryell of the San Diego Chargers, 10; John McKay of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, 7; Sam Rutigliano of the Cleveland Browns, 6, and Bum Phillips of the Houston Oilers, 4.

The Redskins, 8-8 last year and picked by many to fall below .500 this season, rose instead to 10-6 and came within 40 seconds of beating Dallas for the NFC East title before losing to the Cowboys 35-34.

"It's a great honor to have been selected," Pardee said. "Certainly I would have rather had a couple of more points last Sunday. I'd trade the individual honor for team honors anytime. But considering the other coaches I was up against, it really is an honor to be chosen and I accept the award on behalf of the entire team."

In 1978, after one year as head coach of the World Football League's Florida Blazers and three seasons as head coach of the NFL's Chicago Bears, Pardee took over the Redskins' reins. He inherited a veteran-packed team whose future had been mortgaged by George Allen's "the future is now" philosophy.

Allen, seeking instant success (he achieved it to a moderate degree in the early and mid-1970s), dealt away most of Washington's draft choices for older players.

"What we want to be is more aggressive, more physical and have more speed," he said before this season began. "We want a swarming defense. We want to be able to run the ball better. We expect better spirit."

He also wanted youth — so Pardee cleaned house, cutting a number of veterans, most notably quarterback Billy Kilmer, linebackers Chris Hamburger and Harold McLinton, safety Jake Scott and defensive end Ron McDole.

Then with a lineup including rookies like linebackers Neil Olkewicz and Rich Milot and tight end Don Warren, Pardee implemented "situation" football — a different unit for almost every play, depending on the situation.

In a way, it was Pardee's philosophy which cost Washington a wild-card playoff berth. Two weeks after being assailed for supposedly running up the score against Dallas with a last-play field goal in a 34-20 victory, he refused to run it up against Green Bay, ordering his team to run out the clock in a 38-21 triumph.

One more touchdown against the Packers — or any other team — would have given the Redskins, not Chicago, the wild card.

MVP Campbell Lauds Team

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler running back Earl Campbell has not only proven he can perform feats on the football field to compare with O.J. Simpson and Jim Brown, he's also All-Pro at dishing out praise to his offensive linemen.

Campbell was named the National Football League's Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press Tuesday after becoming only the third player in NFL history to win the rushing title his first two years in the league.

Campbell set NFL records for most rushes in a season at 368 and most consecutive 100 yard games in a season with seven. He also tied NFL single-season records with eleven 100 yard games and 19 touchdowns.

Following his rookie season in 1978 Campbell received 29 post season awards. He's off on another award-winning binge this year but his acceptance speech never has changed. It's always a pat on the back for his offensive line.

"It's kind of like it is with a movie star," Campbell explained. "It takes a lot of people working to make him look good. That's what the offensive line does for me. I wouldn't be anything without them. They're the ones that make it possible for me to get those yards."

Campbell, behind the blocking of his offensive line, won the NFL rushing title with 1,697 yards on 368 carries to give him a two-year total of 3,147 yards. Campbell beat out Chicago's Walter Payton with 1,610 and St. Louis rookie Ottis Anderson with 1,605 for the title.

Campbell, like Simpson and Brown before him, has done more than praise the Oiler offensive line. He's taken the players out to dinner twice this season.

Although he's tried, Campbell has yet to pay for a meal he's hosted. Both times, an Oiler backer picked up the tab.

When a jeweler presented Campbell with a watch after he won the NFL rushing title Sunday, the former Heisman Trophy winner suggested his offensive line should also receive watches.

The jeweler compiled and also gave watches to Mike Barber, Conway Hayman, Ed Fisher, Morris Towns, Carl Mauck and David Carter. Starting tackle Leon Gray had received a watch earlier.

Oiler offensive backfield coach Andy Bourgeois points out that Campbell has done more this season than run through holes provided by the offensive line.

"He's still one of the hardest workers on the team," Bourgeois said. "He came to training camp this year like he thought he wasn't going to make the team. And for him to accomplish what he has this year is greater than last year in my opinion."

Oregon Prexy Supports Coach

Brooks offered to resign after the Eugene Register-Guard newspaper reported that freshman football player Paul Perez had received 10 hours of academic credit for courses at Los Angeles Valley College in which Perez was enrolled but did no work.

Oregon athletic department representatives issued conflicting reports as to whether Becker had decided to resign, and Becker was not available for comment.

Brooks issued a prepared statement that said, "My letter of resignation was prompted by my total support of John Becker and my feelings for him, plus my overall responsibility for the football program." Brooks withdrew his letter of resignation after Boyd rejected it.

Boyd said of Becker, "He could simply tell what happened, and if the facts indicate something less than dismissal was called for, I would have been prepared to act appropriately."

Boyd said he had not heard from Becker on the matter. Boyd said Oregon apparently would forfeit no victories because illness and injury kept Perez from playing football.

Earlier, Perez admitted receiving three hours of credit without doing any work in a summer extension course taken at Los Angeles Valley College through Ottawa University of Kansas.

Cheerleader Imposter 'Just Having Fun'

DALLAS (AP) — Barry Michael Bremen, 32, lives in Detroit, sells insurance, has a wife and three young children, and insists "I'm really not kinky."

So why would the hairy-chested Bremen put on a brassiere with stuffed 38C cups, a wig, dress up like a Dallas Cowboys cheerleader and slip past guards onto the sidelines where he danced before 62,867 persons at Sunday's Dallas-Washington football game?

"I was just having fun," said Bremen, who high-stepped for a time with the real cheerleaders before security guards realized he was different and led him away in handcuffs.

Bremen, who makes a hobby of using disguises to get into sporting events, said, "I chose the Cowboys' cheerleaders because they're the most famous in the country. The organization is so up-tight about wanting a conservative image that they were a good target."

Suzanne Mitchell, who is in charge of the 36-woman squad, had no comment on the incident.

In earlier pursuits of his pasttime this year, Bremen has practiced at the National Basketball Association all-star game dressed as a member of the Kansas City Kings, played nine holes in the U.S. Open Golf Tournament in Toledo, Ohio, and got into the dugout at baseball's all-star game dressed as a New York Yankee.

Although led away by guards and detained for a while, no further action was taken against Bremen Sunday.

In Detroit, his wife, Margo, said, "I don't know if I'm really proud of him, but he is extremely dedicated about everything. He worked very hard to do this."

Bremen said he spent about $1,000 on the Dallas scheme. He wore a copied uniform and white boots made especially for him. He had learned one dance step and joined a line of cheerleaders when he saw them doing it.

But one of the main reasons he was caught, he believes, is because the real cheerleaders were wearing their warm-up suits over their skimpy uniforms, and Bremen, wearing only pantyhose, "hot pants" and a halter, did not have one.

It was the second time Bremen tried the stunt at Texas Stadium. The first time, when Dallas played Philadelphia in a Monday night game earlier this season, he said the Cowboys had been tipped off and increased security.

But now that the scheme worked, even if ever so briefly, Bremen says he will be reimbursed by People magazine, which is doing a story on his antics, and has scheduled appearances on national talk shows.

Mentioned Briefly

TENNIS
SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Paul Kronk of Australia upset countryman John Alexander 7-6, 6-1 in the first round of the New South Wales Open Tennis Tournament. In other matches, Phil Dent ousted Ken Rosewall 6-1 6-2 in an all-Australian match; Guillermo Vilas of Argentina eliminated David Schneider of South Africa 7-6, 6-4; Victor Amaya beat Chris Kachel of Australia 6-4, 6-2; Australian Geoff Masters defeated Ray Moore of South Africa 6-1, 7-6; John Sadri downed Mark Edmonson 6-4, 6-4; and Ross Case of Australia turned back countryman Phillip Davies 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. Also, Australian Tony Roche beat Gene Malin 7-6, 6-4; Chris Delaney overcame Colin Dibley 1-6, 6-1, 6-3; and Kim Warwick whipped Wayne Pascoe 7-6, 6-4 in an all-Australian match.

FOOTBALL
NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers, the NFL's rushing champion for the second successive season, was named the League's Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press. Campbell finished the 1979 season with 1,697 yards to surpass the league-leading 1,450 he gained in 1978, when he was the overwhelming selection as The AP's Offensive Rookie of the Year. The 1977 Heisman Trophy winner with the University of Texas received 34 of the 84 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Quarterback Dan Fouts of the San Diego Chargers was second with 27 votes.

GYMNASTICS
TOKYO (AP) — East Germany's Ronald Bruckner won the floor exercise in an international gymnastics competition with a total of 9.75 points. In other action, Arthur Akopyan of the Soviet Union won the men's vaulting horse competition with 9.60 points and the horizontal bar event with 9.80. East Germany's Sulvia Hindorf and the Soviet Union's Natalia Ilienko tied for first place in the women's floor exercises with 9.65 points.

COLLEGE
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Earle Bruce of Ohio State, the top-ranked college football team in The Associated Press poll, will be hospitalized a few days as a precautionary measure, it was announced. Bruce was admitted to Riverside Methodist Hospital after complaining of chest pains. Doctors, however, found no evidence of heart disease. Bruce' Ohio State team will play third-ranked Southern California in the Rose Bowl in New Year's Day.
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The FBI said it is investigating allegations of mail fraud and bribery involving student athletes at the University of Oregon and Oregon State University. A spokesman for the Portland FBI office said the allegations arose during a similar probe conducted at the University of New Mexico and that at both schools' student athletes allegedly received credit for a mail order course without doing any course work. In Eugene, Oregon head football Coach Rich Brooks issued a statement saying he had offered to resign but was turned down.

Lobos Look At Morrison

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — There is a strong possibility Tennessee-Chattanooga football coach Joe Morrison will be named head coach at the University of New Mexico, says UNM athletic director John Bridgers.

Morrison was in town Tuesday being interviewed for the position, said UNM president William E. Davis.

The Chattanooga Times reported in today's edition that Morrison would be named to the post at a news conference this morning in Albuquerque.

However, Davis and several other university officials said late Tuesday they knew of no such announcement.

The Lobo football coaching job has been vacant since last month when UNM's board of regents, at the recommendation of Davis, decided not to renew Bill Mondt's contract.

Ski Ice Free

When your skis, boots, or bindings ice up, it can freeze your enthusiasm for making more runs, downhill or cross-country. ARMOR ALL Protectant wards off ice build-up by giving your gear an incredibly slick surface. And a quick spray of ARMOR ALL Protectant will help keep your goggles clear.
ARMOR ALL Protectant also helps your gear weather the winter better. Just spray, let penetrate and wipe to protect your skis, boots, gloves, goggles, helmets, pole baskets—anything made of vinyl, rubber, leather or plastic. Many advanced skiers even spray their ski bottoms to increase speed.
This season give your gear a lift when you go for the slopes. Get ARMOR ALL Protectant at your favorite drug, hardware, automotive or food store.

Ellenberger To Talk But Not At Present

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Fired University of New Mexico basketball coach Norm Ellenberger has a lot to say about the scandal that led to his ouster — but not today.

"I will have an opportunity to say a lot of things that are on my mind as the future unfolds," Ellenberger told the first reporters he talked to in weeks.

However, he said, he was abiding by his attorney's advice not to discuss the matter pending the outcome of a federal grand jury investigation.

"There's a lot more to be said and as this thing closes out, I will be able to open up a lot of thoughts in the minds of others," said Ellenberger, who was fired Monday by UNM president William E. Davis.

Ellenberger was the latest casualty of an ever-widening scandal that erupted Nov. 28 with an FBI investigation of alleged bribery and fraudulent academic transcript rigging for Lobo basketbal players.

"I know it's trying times for all concerned," the former coach said, "but without a doubt things will progress. The sun came up this morning and there's hope for the rest of the day."

Despite his tribulations, Christmas was on the mind the man who compiled a 137-62 record in a seven year stint that included two Western Athletic Conference titles and two trips each to the NCAA and the National Invitation tournaments.

"The first thing I'm going to figue out is how to have a merry Christmas," Ellenberger said. "It may take a lot of eggnog, but I'll work on it."

Ellenberger's attorney, David Norvell, said the coach's firing probably would be appealed.

Norvell said Ellenberger should have been given a postponement of an athletic council hearing on his status until after completion of a federal grand jury investigation.

The council recommended Ellenberger's dismissal at a meeting held in Ellenberger's absence. Norvell said Ellenberger chose not to attend because it was "impossible to fend against allegations in the athletic council report without possibly prejudicing his case before the grand jury."

UNM officials have begun the search for a new head coach.

They said acting head coach Charlie Harrison would not get the job because he was a member of Ellenberger's staff. After seven players were declared ineligible or suspended, Harrison was left with four regulars, plus walk-ons.

The decimated team has a 1-6 record, but Ellenberger said he was "really proud of Charlie and the players. They're giving it their all and what they need more than anything else is for the people. . .to get behind them so they can finish out this season as strong as possible.

"If that happens," Ellenberger said, "they'll surprise some ball clubs in January and February."

RODGERS FIRED — Georgia Tech football coach Pepper Rodgers was fired Tuesday. Rodgers had been head coach at Kansas and UCLA before returning to his alma mater six years ago. He had an overall 34-31-2 record there and was 4-6-1 last season. (AP Laserphoto)

UNM Regents Reject Resignation Request

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — The University of New Mexico regents today rejected "absolutely" a newspaper's suggestion that they resign because of an ongoing scandal that has rocked the school's athletic program.

In a lengthy letter to the editor of the Albuquerque Journal, the regents said they moved to correct athletic department problems "many months" before learning of NCAA or FBI allegations regarding the school's basketball program.

The letter indicated the regents were concerned about the practice of recruiting transfer students from junior colleges instead of freshmen with good academic records who would "develop a loyalty to the institution" and graduate.

School officials have said about 25 percent of UNM athletes received degrees during the past decade. The regents said steps were taken to improve "weaknesses in academic advisement and counseling for student athletes."

The regents said their problems included theft allegations against two members of last year's basketball team and allegations of rape and drug abuse involving several athletes in a campus dormitory.

Former athletic director LaVon McDonald said basketball coach Norm Ellenberger, who was fired Monday, tried to comply with the regents' recommended recruiting practices, but "he had to take what he could get."

The scandal, which erupted last month, involves ongoing investigations of alleged bribery and mail fraud in the doctoring of a basketball player's academic transcript and a number of other cases of alleged transcript rigging.

The scandal has sent shock waves to other schools.

The FBI announced earlier this week it would conduct an investigation into academic records at the University or Oregon and officials of other schools were subpoenaed to testify before a federal grand jury in Albuquerque last week.

Ellenberger's ouster was preceded by the resignation of his top recruiter, Manny Goldstein. Earlier, seven basketball players and three football players were declared ineligible or suspended and all six Lobo football victories and one basketball game were forfeited.

Asked if the regents' letter should be taken as a refusal of the Journal's editorial suggestion Sunday that the regents resign, chairman Henry Jaramillo Jr. said "absolutely."

"I think that answering the way we did indicates very strongly that we have been very positive in the positions we have taken. That refutes the (newspaper's) allegations."

The Journal had said UNM president William Davis and the regents acted only when forced to by outside investigators. Davis Monday called the charges "ridiculous" and said he felt he had "acted appropriately and ethically in this whole matter."

Women's Basketball Coach Fired At Tech

Three months after the meeting, Miss McHaney sent a formal memorandum (dated Oct. 17) to Mrs. Benson reviewing the areas in which improvement was required. The memo also stated, "To date, I have not seen any improvement in your coaching techniques at practice and there is great internal turmoil on the team."

Miss McHaney again mentioned the attrition problem and cited other areas where she felt improvement was needed in the Oct. 17 memo. Those areas included Mrs. Benson's disciplinary treatment and correction of student athletes; what Miss McHaney termed "an obvious discontent on your part over the students' rights;" a complaint lodged against Mrs. Benson by a staff member concerning alleged unprofessional conduct, and Mrs. Benson's supposedly negative attitude concerning paper work, details of management, AIAW rules, constructive criticism, the trainer and staff meetings."

Mrs. Benson responded to the memo in a letter of her own addressed to Miss McHaney and dated Oct. 23. In the letter, Mrs. Benson defended her position and coaching techniques.

Mrs. Benson pointed out that she certainly hoped to improve upon the 1978-79 record, but that she "could not guarantee a winning season."

Mrs. Benson explained her attrition rate this way:

"You have stated that we needed less attrition on my team. I really do not think that my dropout rate or turnover is exceedingly high. You may not realize it, but the dropouts from the 1978-79 team were for the following reasons: (1) an automobile accident; (2) a year-long injury; (3) one who quit; (4) two who went to track full-time; (5) a player that was non-scholarship who went to the University of Texas at Arlington because her father teaches there; (6) a player whom I was told would never be able to have a scholarship at Tech, but who now has a volleyball scholarship (Rhonda Farley); (7) one non-scholarship who quit at Christmas who knew she was not capable of obtaining a scholarship; (8) one who had an amputated finger and had told me earlier in the year that she was going to give up basketball; (9 and 10) two others who graduated."

In the meantime, Miss McHaney — from Oct. 17 until Nov. 6, the date of the Raiders' first game — monitored the basketball practices. Miss McHaney or her assistant, Kathy Ramsey, and sometimes both women attended every practice session during that three-week span to check Mrs. Benson's performance.

"At first we didn't know what was going on," freshman starter Pam Stone said. "But after a while, we knew something was strange. It was a very ackward situation to practice in."

The practice monitoring ended the day the Raiders played their first game of the season against West Texas State.

Then, on Nov. 30, Mrs. Benson received a memo initialed by Miss McHaney that stated that unless Mrs. Benson resigned her position by Dec. 10, she would be fired. At that time, Mrs. Benson went to Miss McHaney and asked her why she was being fired.

According to Mrs. Benson, Miss McHaney would not discuss the matter and said she would have to discuss it with Ewalt. Mrs. Benson visited Ewalt Nov. 30 and asked for some reasons, but, according to Mrs. Benson, Ewalt said he would have to talk to Miss McHaney and that he would get back with Mrs. Benson. Mrs. Benson claims she hasn't heard a word from Ewalt.

The Raiders were out of town Dec. 4-9. There was no memo regarding Mrs. Benson's firing Dec. 10 as promised, but four days later, Miss McHaney called her into her office to deliver the news, with, according to Mrs. Benson, "her office door wide open."

"I just want to know why," added the obviously confused Mrs. Benson. "Heck, I'm just a good old country girl who likes basketball and that's all I've ever want to do was coach basketball."

Cagers Support Ousted Coach

ed. "I can't speak for all of the players, but I feel that most of the younger players would leave Tech and go wherever she goes."

Miss Stone also disspelled another rumor that Miss McHaney entered in her memo to Mrs. Benson dated Oct. 17, 1979. That being that there was "great turmoil" on the squad.

"I never knew of any problems on this team," acknowledged Miss Stone. "We've always had a good team spirit. What has been going on lately has only unified us that much more. Our entire team is behind Mrs. Benson. We all love her."

Sophomore Lynn Webb, who is one of the first players off the bench for Mrs. Benson, expressed the same feeling for her coach, who also instructed her at Slaton High School.

"Every coach has different ways to get their point across," offered Miss Webb. "Coach Benson just wants us to play well and up to our ability. I've never known her to do anything out of the ordinary."

"I haven't really thought about it that much, but, yes, I probably would go with her," added Miss Webb. "I think the majority of freshmen and sophomores would go with her."

As far as team unity and togetherness, Miss Webb also claims the Raiders are together.

"We have a good feeling on this team," she stated. "We're all pulling together as a team and we're pulling for her."

"She's very vocal. She expresses her desire for you to do well," senior Loann Phillips added. "I've never been embarrassed on the court by her. She does a great job recruiting. I think the young players she has are capable of being the nucleus of a championship ball team."

Mrs. Benson's graduate assistant, Mark Osina, who coached for two years at Pasadena Dobie High School, also had nothing but praise for the coach.

"She is no different than any other coach I've had or been around," Osina conceded. "And I've never heard any of the girls complain about her. We have three freshmen on this team that could play for any school in Texas."

U.S. Takes Commercial Route To Olympic Games

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Uncle Sam won't have to be apprehensive or embarrassed when he sends his nephews and nieces to the impending Olympic Games — both the Lake Placid, N.Y., and Moscow variety. He will be fielding the best athletes that money can buy.

Corporate giants are pouring millions into the U.S. Olympic coffers. The official emblem is being peddled to anyone willing to pay the price to have its product associated with America's Olympic effort.

Analysis

So the once-proud emblem hits you in the face every time you flip on the television set or go to market. It's on cars, trucks, tires, bananas, soda pop, orange juice, slacks, you name it — more than 150 items that have been given the Olympic blessing — for a consideration.

One report is that a beer company is paying $10 million to have its product designated the official suds of the 1984 Games in Los Angeles.

He was a stuffy, stodgy old character — this straight-backed millionaire who ruled the Games with an iron fist as president of the International Olympic Committee from 1952 until his death in May 1975.

He thought the Olympics should be purely amateur, as mandated by Baron Pierre de Coubertin, father of the modern Games — contests among everyday people competing for the pleasure merely of taking part while promoting international good will.

How really naive.

Did these two dreamers really believe such ideals were possible in a world bloated with national pride and ambition and ripped by differences in political idealogies?

Did they believe that the Soviet Union and other Communist nations could negate their basic doctrine and not subsidize the strongest Olympic force their governments could afford? Or that America would stand still and allow its athletes to be relegated to secondary status?

Let's face it. Money is the name of the game. It's hard to find an ounce of amateur blood left in it. The five multicolored rings should be painted pure gold. The official emblem should show, instead of a flaming torch, a hand holding aloft an open check book.

Americans have trumped the Communists' ace card — governnment subsidy for athletes — with its own big weapon: Capitalistic commercialism. We can no longer cry that the Russians and East Germans are beating us with pros. We have our own pro version, perhaps necessary but no purer.

The U.S. Olympic credo is: "America doesn't send our athletes to the Olympics, Americans do." True. Americans and their corporations.

Robert Kane, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, said on a recent visit to New York that the committee expected to raise $43 million for next year's Games ccompared with $16 million spent in 1976.

We called the Olympic headquarters in Colorado Springs to ask who were the big contributors and advertisers in this gigantic undertaking.

"Oh," exclaimed a spokesman at the other end, "we have corporate donators, but most of the money is solicited by the various sports organizations and the Lake Placid Organizing Committee themselves.

"We are competitors with them in solicitation, but the poorest. We are pikers compared with them."

A corporation has underwritten U.S. speed skaters for $100,000. The U.S. ski team has a $2.1 million budget, 10 times that of a decade ago, raised by the U.S. Ski Educational Foundation, which tapped a variety of firms — margerine, yogurt, foreign cars, airline.

All the sports federations are passing out the hat. In addition, Lake Placid, host of the Winter Games, is lending its Olympic seal to every marketing avenue in sight.

The Russians have learned from their Yankee capitalist friends. The Olympic organizing committee in Moscow is getting up to $3 million for plugging a product with the Olympic symbol.

In the United States, you can get the Olympic stamp on everything from razor blades to Mack trucks.

Poor Avery. Remember when he was going to plough up all the Alpine ski runs because skis carried a trade name?

KC Wins Seventh Straight

By The Associated Press

The Kansas City Kings got their first taste of champagne last season, when they won their division title. So when they posted their seventh consecutive victory Tuesday night to regain a share of the lead, there was no whooping or hollering.

"I don't think that way and they don't think that way," said coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, whose Kings beat the San Diego Clippers 110-96 to move into a tie with idle Milwaukee atop the NBA's Midwest Division at 20-14.

"I think if this was our first time," added Fitzsimmons, "if we hadn't already pulled it off last year, we'd be all excited and jumping around. Now we aren't even thinking about it.

"The only important thing is how we finish."

Scott Wedman scored 26 points for Kansas City, which got off to a 5-11 start but has since won 15 of 18 games. Wedman got eight of his points in a 27-6 spurt that gave the Kings a comfortable 88-63 lead over San Diego late in the third period.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, Los Angeles beat the Chicago Bulls 129-118, the New York Knicks edged Atlanta 101-99, Philadelphia defeated the Detroit Pistons 114-102 and Utah trimmed the Cleveland Cavaliers 105-103.

San Diego, which got 25 points from Lloyd Free, came no closer than 14 points in the final period.

Otis Birdsong added 18 for Kansas City, Phil Ford 14, Reggie King 12 and Len Elmore 10.

As for the division race, Ford said, "You never want to get too far out of striking range. But I wasn't too conerned when we were losing, and I'm no too concrned now."

Lakers 129, Bulls 118

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 18 of his season-high 39 points as the Lakers pulled away from Chicago for their seventh victory in the last eight starts and moved within one-half game of first-place Seattle in the Pacific Division. Chicago's home record dropped to 6-9, the worst in the league.

Knicks 101, Hawks 99

Joe C.Meriweather scored 21 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and blocked five shots as New York built a 14-point lead and then held on to beat Atlanta, snapping the Hawks' four-game winning streak and their own five-game losing streak.

76ers 114, Pistons 102

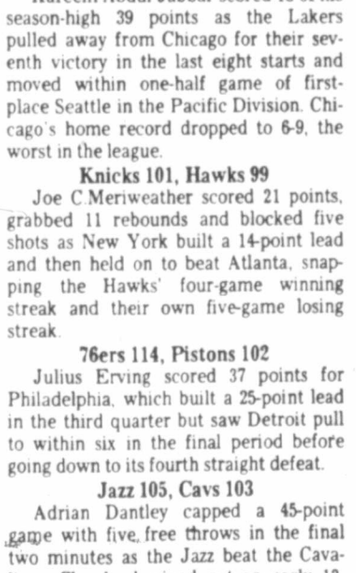

Julius Erving scored 37 points for Philadelphia, which built a 25-point lead in the third quarter but saw Detroit pull to within six in the final period before going down to its fourth straight defeat.

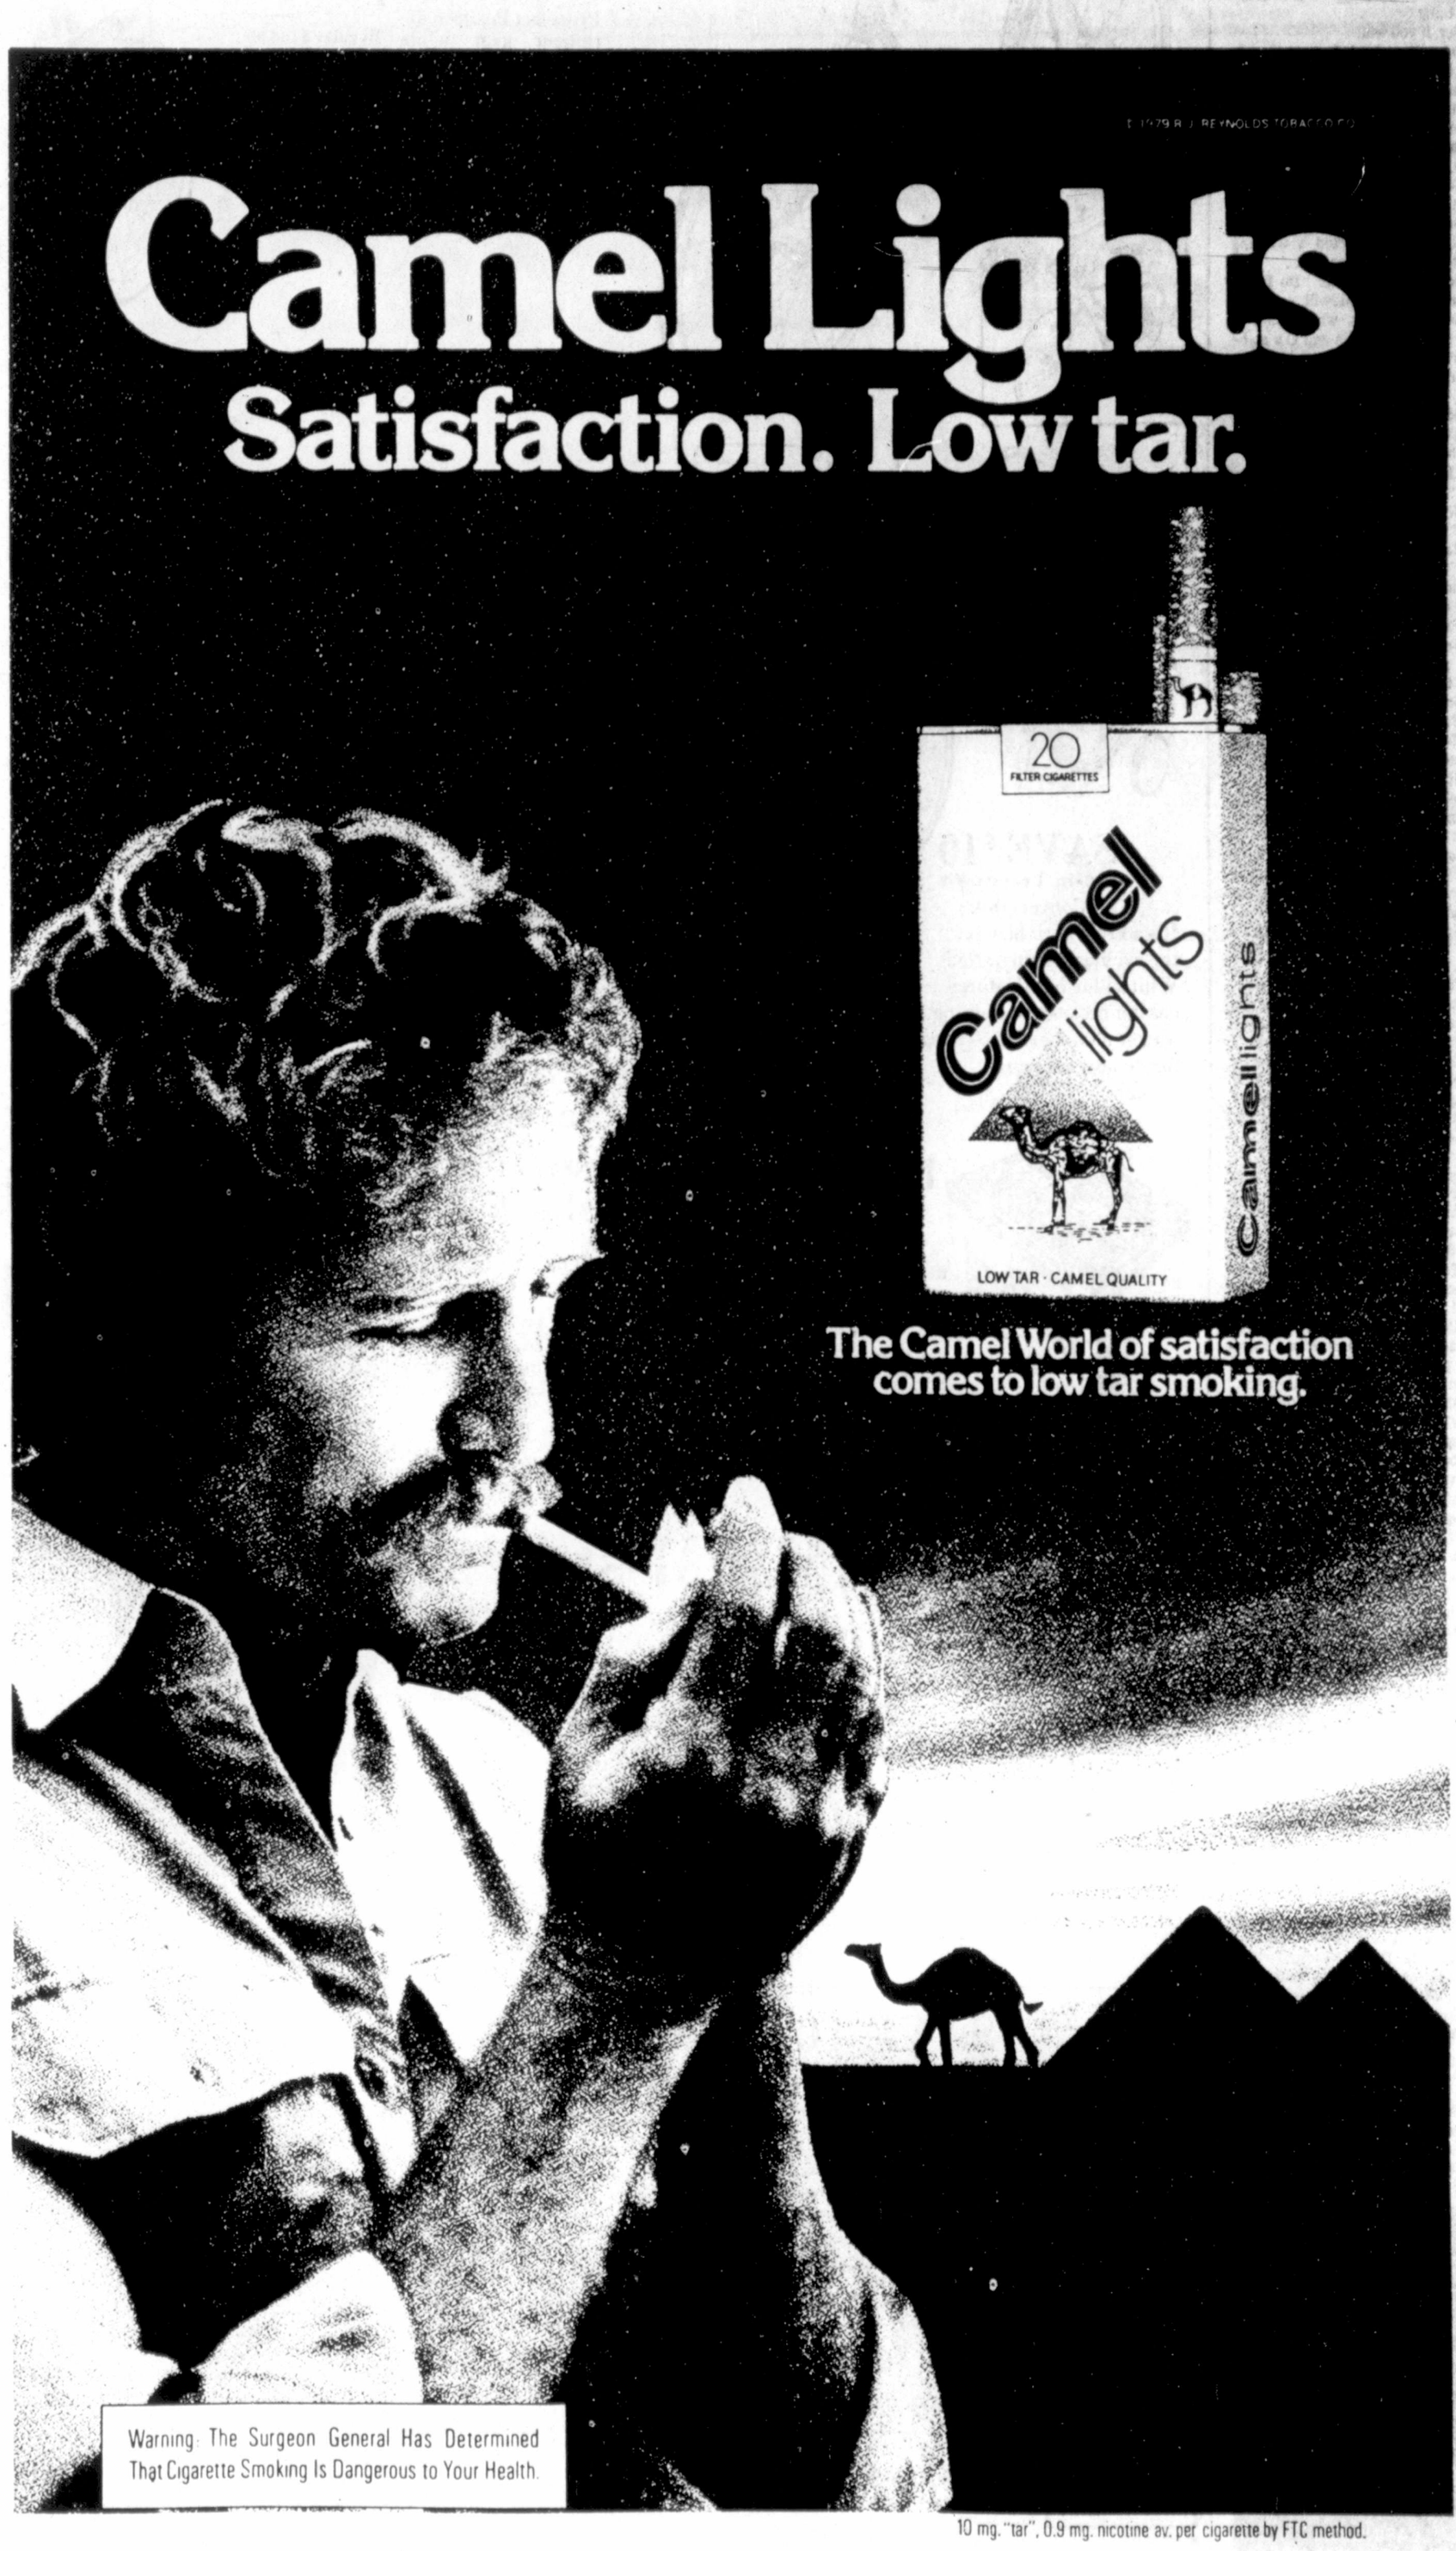

Jazz 105, Cavs 103

Adrian Dantley capped a 45-point game with five free throws in the final two minutes as the Jazz beat the Cavaliers. Cleveland wiped out an early 13-point deficit, but Dantley, Terry Furlow and Tom Boswell helped Utah pull it out in the fourth quarter.

BOXING TRIALS

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The 1980 Western Olympic Boxing Trials have been scheduled here for the last week in May, said Jack Zappone, president of the Inland Empire Amateur Athletic Union.

More Awards Given

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The Associated Press' National Football League All-Pro teams, Most Valuable Player, Coach of the Year and the like will be dispensed later this week — but before all those big names hog the headlines, a few other awards are in order.

After all, winning isn't necessarily everything, or the only thing. . .or, in some cases, anything.

Consider, if you will:

The John Beresford Tipton Award: To Toni Linhart, who had a chance to become a millionaire, if only he'd missed kicks for the rest of the league as well as the Baltimore Colts and New York Jets.

The Chuck Fairbanks Award: To Bud Wilkinson, who constructed a winning record in the college ranks, only to wind up a loser in the NFL.

The Bud Wilkinson Award: To Chuck Fairbanks, who constructed a winning record in the NFL ranks, only to. . .

The George Steinbrenner "Do It My Way!" Award: to Billy Bidwill, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, who thinks he knows as much about X's and O's as he does aboutchecks an balances.

The Urban Renewal Award: To Robert Irsay, owner of the Colts, who has threatened to move from Baltimore to Jacksonville (thus lowering real estate values in both cities).

The Lamont Cranston "I Am The Shadow" Award: To Matt Robinson, quarterback of the the New York Jets. . .for a few minutes, anyway.

The Roone Arledge Instant Replay Award: To Willie Spencer, who ruined a virtually perfect officiating season by pulling a handkerchief out of his pocket in Houston.

The Bud Collyer "Beat The Clock" Award: To Roger Staubach, for pulling the Cowboys out of the fire in Dallas.

The High-Rent District Award: To the Cleveland Browns, who — if they lived in any other division — would probably be in the playoffs.

The Low-Rent District Award: To the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who — if they lived in any other division — would probably be out of the playoffs.

The Spike Jones Award: To Drew Pearson, who blew his own horn once too often.

The Primo Carnera Award: To Raymond Clayborn, who found that going man-to-man in the locker room can be tougher than playing a zone on the field.

The Teddy Roosevelt "Speak Softly And Carry A Big Stick" Award: To Will McDonough, who knows that the pen is mightier than the sword but a good right cross is nice, too.

The "Didn't You Used to Be Somebody?" Award: To Bert Jones, who spent a second season riding Baltimore's bench while Greg Landry broke Johnny Unitas' passing records.

The Richard M. Nixon Cover-Up Award: To the NFL's cheerleaders, who waved their pompons around without the fanfare of a year ago.

The Pete Rozelle Competitive Balance Award: To The American Conference, for proving that, on any given Sunday, it can beat the National Conference.

The Merriam-Webster "Watch Your Language" Award: To John McKay, who told Tampa Bay's fans, "Don't boo the players; boo me. I can take it," and then let loose with a stream of invective when they booed him.

The Opportunity Only Knocks Twice Award: To Don Strock, Bob Griese's heir-apparent in Miami, who couldn't move the ball and lost his job, then couldn't hold onto the ball when he moved it himself.

The Being Next Door To Disneyland Couldn't Be More Appropriate Award: To the Los Angeles Rams, a fantasy team with Super Bowl dreams, moving into the land of make-believe.

The Raggedy-Ann Award: To Joe Pisarcik, once the New York Giants' first-string quarterback, who was escorted to the injured reserve list by two tons of angry linemen and linebackers.

The Texas Instruments Computer Award: To the Chicago Bears, who knew exactly how many points they had to score, scored 'em, and got a bit of help from the Lone Star State.

The Bobby Layne "A Quarterback Is Just One of Twenty-Two Starters" Award: To the Detroit Lions, whose bright hopes for a winning season were destroyed when Gary Danielson went down in the preseason.

The Methuselah Couldn't Have Done It Better Award: To Jim Marshall, a remarkable study of longevity in a high-risk position.

The So Long, It's Been Good To Know You Award: To O.J. Simpson, not only one of the most talented men ever to wear an NFL uniform but certainly one of the classiest, too.

Shula Could Go To Rams — Not Notre Dame

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — For nearly a month now, I've been hearing rumors Dan Devine is out at Notre Dame, and Don Shula of the Miami Deolphis will replace him.

Rumors are like weeds: No matter how many of them you root out, others immediately pop up to replace them.

Checking this particular one out, I would say forget it. Dan Devine will be back coaching the Irish next year despite the fact they've just come off their poorest season in 16 years. If you want the source for the assurance of Devine's return next year, you have the word of his boss, Moose Krause, Notre Dame's athletic director.

Shula, busy getting his Miami Dolphins ready for the NFL playoffs, will not be going to Notre Dame next year, nor will he be coming to New York to take over either the Jets or Giants, as also has been rumored. If he goes anywhere at all, it most likely would be with the Los Angeles Rams because the lady who runs the slow with them, Georgia Rosenbloom, leans toward big names.

As far as Devine's rumored departure from Notre Dame is concerned, Krause says there's nothing to it whatsoever.

"He'll be back as our head coach next year," Krause assured me from South Bend, Ind. "Considering the fact we had the toughest schedule in the country, I would say losing four games certainly is no disgrace."

Nor are the Irish exactly dancing a jig over a season in which they lost more games than any other one since 1963, are they?

"We're following (Knute) Rockne's philosophy," Krause said. "We want to play the best. If we lose to a good team, we don't consider it a disgrace. We lost to four pretty good ball clubs — Purdue, Southern Cal, Tennessee and Clemson."

Another report that has surfaced with regard to Devine is that he and the president of Notre Dame, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, don't get along that well because they aren't in agreement on football-related matters.

Analysis

"Father Hesburgh doesn't get involved in things of that nature," Krause said. "He's much too busy. As far as I know, he and Dan have always gotten along fine."

That brings us back to Shula.

Years ago, when his five children were younger, he might have been interested in coaching at a school like Notre Dame and possibly living in a place like South Bend. Now, the job wouldn't be likely to have the same appeal for him.

There was a period back a few years when he and Joe Robbie, the managing general partner of the Dolphins, were ice cold to each other and didn't even talk. At one point in the spring of 1974, it took an archbishop to get them together.

While they're not exactly buddy-buddy now, they're at least cordial to one another when circumstances throw them together. The fact is Shula was offered the head coaching job with the San Diego Chargers while Tommy Prothro was still with them and he turned the job down.

When he signed with Miami originally nine years ago as general manager and coach, Shula was also given a lucrative stock option, which he exercised. Since then, he has sold the stock back to Robbie.

There is that possibility the Rams may make Shula an offer he'd find difficult to refuse, and maybe he might consider it, but one thing seems quite clear. He's not going to Notre Dame — not right away, at any rate.

Oil Well Leak Still Threat To Texas

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — The annual shift in Gulf currents that began pushing Mexican oil slicks away from the Texas coast is only a temporary reprieve, and long-range damage to the state's marine life is getting harder to predict, Texas A&M Biologist Dr. Jerry Neff says.

The summer-long assault on Texas beaches by oil from the blown-out Ixtoc I oil well in Mexico's Campeche Bay abated in the fall, when currents shifted south and carried the oil away with it. But Neff said those currents will shift back toward Texas in February and March, and Ixtoc I is still spewing oil into the Gulf.

"If there's still oil down there, when the current changes it starts back this way," Neff said. "And they haven't capped the well yet."

The Ixtoc I spill was the world's worst, breaking a record set by the 1978 spill onto France's Brittany Coast by the breakup of the supertanker Amoco Cadiz.

Neff and Texas A&M veterinary pathologist Dr. William Haensly have completed a year-long study of the Amoco Cadiz spill and its effects on the commercially important marine life off the Brittany coast.

Their samples showed that fish in the region still suffered from diseases of the gills, liver, stomach and skin, and from digestive disorders brought on by resistance to oil in the digestive tract.

French studies show that 16 months after the spill, the vital oyster industry has been devastated and disease among flounders in the area seemed to increase as time went by, Neff said.

"We can't prove it, but we have a pretty good circumstantial case that these effects are becoming more pronounced," Neff said.

Neff and Haensly said the implication is that hydrocarbon pollution from oil spills hangs in the sediment and continues to weaken marine life long after cleanup efforts are complete.

The Texas coast may not suffer as much of that kind of damage as the Brittany coast because the oil has washed into Texas slower and has covered more distance, Neff said.

"The oil by the time it reaches Texas is pretty well weathered and most of the toxicity is gone," Neff explained.

He said if oilslick barriers succeed in keeping oil out of bays along the coast, shortrange damage could be reduced. He said there is concern for animals that live at the bottom of the Gulf, which included commercially important shrimp.

"Also, the Texas coast recovers faster than coastal areas in northern Europe," he said. "The marine life has shorter life cycles."

Neff and Haensly have completed one study of the Texas coast under a $70,000 grant from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. However, Neff said long-range studies have stalled on bureaucratic complications and congressional footdragging.

"There haven't been any long-range studies. There are several agencies involved here, and it's my personal feeling that lines of authority haven't been clearly drawn."

Plane Crashes Into Hangar

YUMA, Ariz. (UPI) — A Navy jet whose pilot ejected on takeoff slammed into a hangar at 280 mph, killing one person and injuring three others in a fiery mass of spewing flaming fuel and exploding ammunition.

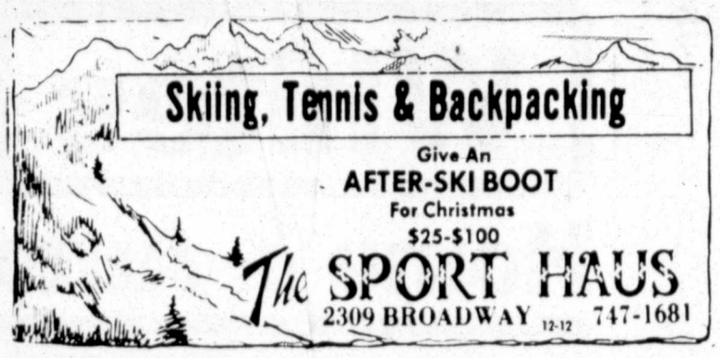

"It looked like Vietnam," said Yuma County Sheriff's investigator Bud McCall. He said debris was scattered for a quarter mile.

Yuma Marine Corps Air Station officials said Ens. Patrick Coyle, 24, of Philadelphia was beginning a weapons training flight from Yuma International Airport when he had to abort the takeoff as the TA4J jet left the runway.

Maj. Daniel Dorn, base spokesman, said the plane never got off the ground but "may have bounced a few times."

The hangar owner, Paul Burch, about 63, of Yuma, was killed. Melvin Burt, 22, and Barbara Reddin, 22, a secretary, both of Yuma, were injured in the office of Ag-Spray, a crop dusting firm next to the Burch Hangar.

Agency Hopes For Rise In Unemployment Rate

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over at the Labor Department, some people are rooting for the unemployment rate to rise. That may seem odd for an agency that is supposed to promote jobs, but Washington can be an odd place at budgeting time.

Labor Department officials want more money for federal job-creating programs next year. They figure a jump in the jobless rate — long anticipated by economists who foresee a recession — will convince the White House of the need to increase spending.

So, when the news arrived that the unemployment rate had dropped unexpectedly, there was no hiding the dismay.

"We were hoping the unemployment rate would go up, but damned if it didn't go down," sighed one official, who did not want his name used. It's bad politics to promote unemployment openly.

President Carter will propose his fiscal 1981 budget next month. In advance of that, the president's budget scrooges are looking for places to trim federal spending while government departments argue for more money.

For budget planners at the Labor Department, the early December report that unemployment in November had fallen from 6 percent to 5.8 percent couldn't have come at a worse time.

The president has labeled inflation his top economic concern and has vowed to fight it by keeping a tight rein on federal spending to minimize the budget deficit.

Carter's inflation-fighting policies are designed to slow economic growth. One consequence of that would be higher unemployment.

The Labor Department, however, believes Carter needs to expand job-creating programs next year to cushion a still anticipated rise in the jobless rate and minimize the political damage.

"It would have helped for the unemployment rate to go up above 6 percent to establish a trend," said the Labor Department official. "It would have been good if the upward trend started earlier."

The department's proposals have drawn an unsympathetic response from the Office of Management and Budget. OMB shocked Labor officials by not merely rejecting proposed increases in spending but by urging a reduction in the department's jobs programs in the name of an austere budget.

Analysis

The dispute eventually will be decided by the president. In the view of many economists, he can choose to fight either inflation or a recession, but not both.

The latest decline in unemployment, combined with recent reports showing inflation maintaining its 13 percent annual pace, suggests Carter will stay with his inflation-fighting budget strategy.

That choice would appear to have little opposition in the current political climate. Carter is under pressure to do something about inflation, but there have been few loud cries recently about unemployment. Even organized labor, the leading advocate of jobs programs, has labeled inflation its primary concern.

Carter's top economists have not issued a revised 1980 forecast, but most private economists predict a recession for the first half of the year with unemployment rising to nearly 8 percent by the fall.

If the jobless rate starts climbing rapidly, it will be difficult for Carter or Congress, particularly in a presidential election year, to resist the traditional Democratic tonic — increased federal spending to create jobs or a tax cut to stimulate the economy.

Labor Department officials have programs in reserve that would create federally subsidized jobs as the unemployment rate rises. What the programs lack is a presidential commitment to spend the money.

"The argument we get from OMB is that everybody is worried about inflation, but at most only 8 percent will be worried about unemployment," groused a department economist.

That is why, the economist reasons, Carter may break traditions by "going cold turkey" — letting the jobless rate rise without applying the usual anti-recession treatments.

Top officials at OMB aren't convinced the employment picture will be as bleak as private economists forecast. One high-ranking official notes that economists in the last few years have overestimated the unemployment rate. Most forecasts for 1979, for example, said the jobless rate would be between 6.5 percent and 7 percent right now; none predicted the rate would be under 6 percent.

If the economists prove wrong again and the jobless rate remains relatively low, at least by current standards, Carter may be able to avoid making the politically risky choice of fighting inflation or recession and unemployment.

Shop Becomes Booming Business

By LEROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — In 1965 Grover (Jeep) Harned and his wife, Joyce, put a for-sale sign on the hi-fi shop they had operated for 10 years in Fort Lauderdale offering the whole business for $50.

"We were worked out and half-starved, we'd been robbed a few times and our original $8,500 investment was gone," said Harned, an engineering graduate of Mississippi State University.

Luckily nobody came up with the $50.

Today the business, converted from retailing to custom manufacturing of professional music recording equipment, is doing $24 million a year in sales.

Harned calculates he has 36 percent of the domestic market in his chosen field and 45 percent of the overseas market. "We are now breaking into the Eastern Bloc market," he added.

In 1965, they couldn't even afford a part time clerk. Now they have 525 workers and expect to have 600 next year. They have a plant for which they paid $4.5 million and the only money they owe is the mortgage on that building.

How did it all happen?

"Quality and word of mouth reputation," said Harned. Truth to tell, he wasn't much cut out to be a service retailer. What he was interested in was high quality sound reproduction and when people called him to their homes to fix their hi-fi sets, he would fix them so they were better than new and perhaps lose money on the job.

Although he did not exactly realize it in 1965, Harned had been laying the foundations for future success for several years. He had been building some custom recording consoles for what is now Criteria Recording Studios in Miami and Bob Richardson's Master Sound Studios in Atlanta. These contained features that were far ahead of their time and news of the high quality of their recording performance had begun to spread throughout the pop music industry.

The Harneds already had changed the name of their business from Music Centers to MCI, Inc. "We got tired of calls from people who wanted theater tickets and guitar strings," Harned said. And the new name suited the custom manufacturing business.

The business grew rather fast once Harned began devoting his full time to designing the custom consoles and working out new time-and money-saving features for them.

"Our philosophy has been simply to make the highest quality professional consoles and recorders and sell them at reasonable prices," Harned said.

A trade publication said the Harneds reduced the costs so much they made it possible for many of today's smaller recording firms to get into the business — on investments as low as $40,000.

MCI's success is the more remarkable because it has some mighty well-heeled competitors, 3-M Co. and Ampex in the United States and the Struder Co. in Switzerland, for example

Harned has explanations for that too. "Good business sense isn't something you learn in school," he says. "You get it by hard knocks."

And, he says, you succeed by becoming a good judge of people and trusting those you choose. He decided early on a two-layer manufacturer-wholesaler operation that gives substantial margins to the wholesalers and dealers.

"We extended lines of credit of up to $100,000 to men who didn't have a quarter of their own to put in the business," he said. "We have made successful businessmen out of at least 25 individuals who had nothing when they came to us or we found them."

Priest Allowed To Wear Collar

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Roman Catholic priest who doubles as a lawyer can wear his clerical collar in court while defending a teen-age girl charged with selling marijuana, a judge has ruled.

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Hugh McShane made the ruling this week in favor of the Rev. Vincent LaRocca, who as an attorney offers legal aid to indigents.

In previous court cases, LaRocca had been turned down in his bid to wear the collar during a trial.

LaRocca tried earlier this year to wear the collar in court, citing constitutional rights and changing times.

"The time is ripe to have another go-around," the priest said earlier this year in his petition.

It was expected that the district attorney's office would appeal the ruling.

Tiger Waiting To Meet Mate

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (UPI) — "Lonesome" Bill, the Sumatran tiger at the Miller Park Zoo, won't meet his Katie at least until next spring.

The closest Bill has gotten to Katie, the female Sumatran who arrived last month from a zoo in the Netherlands, is a sniff through a metal door that separates his outdoor display area from her indoor den.

"We aren't counting our cubs before they're born," said zookeeper Val Anderson. "It is a bit soon, and besides you might not get anything from the first litter. They may die when they are born, or the mother might not know how to take care of them."

Katie was purchased with money from the "Get That Tiger" fund raised by Bloomington-area residents. Sumatran tigers are rare and zookeepers wanted a female to mate with Bill.

Even when the two tigers are introduced it will be a gradual process.

"We'll put a 'howdy' screen which allows them to see and smell each other but not touch," Mrs. Anderson said.

Squeeze Hits Poultry Producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The huge boost in broiler production that has helped consumers cope with rising meat prices may be winding down because of "a cost-price squeeze" on poultry producers, says the Agriculture Department.

Broiler output this year, estimated at 10.9 billion pounds, showed a 10 percent gain from 1978, the department said this week. Along with stepped-up pork output, that has helped dampen price increases for beef.

"Meanwhile, production costs have continued to rise," the department's outlook board said. "This situation likely will prompt broiler producers to end the lengthy up-trend in production by mid-1980."

The analysis said broiler producers "recently have reduced the rate of expansion and are likely to continue doing so in coming months." Output in the first half of 1980 "will run slightly above" the same period this year "but could drop below in the second half," it said.

There has not been an even price trend, however. After broiler prices dropped sharply last summer, they showed "unexpected strength recently," the report said.

For example, the wholesale price of broilers in major city markets in the fourth quarter of this year will average around 41 cents a pound, down only about one cent or so from 42.1 cents a pound in the final three months of last year.

But wholesale broiler prices in the coming months are expected to "remain under pressure from larger pork and poultry supplies and a sluggish general economy," the report said.

Thus, as it appears now to USDA analysts, wholesale broiler prices are expected to average in the range of 42 to 44 cents a pound in the first quarter of 1980 and 41 to 43 cents in the second.

This year, prices averaged 47.5 cents a pound in the first quarter and 47.7 in the second.

Turkey output rose about 9 percent this year from 1978 "because producers have responded to the favorable returns of the past two years" and will continue rising in the first half of 1980, perhaps by nearly 25 percent over the same period this year, the report said.

"Percentage gains in output will slow in the second half but will remain above 1979," it said. "The increased turkey production and large supplies of competing meats will hold first-half turkey prices under the 1979 level of 68 cents a pound."

Total egg production increased by about 2 percent this year "as a result of the larger laying flock and the higher rate of lay," the report said. A further increase of 1 to 2 percent could occur in the first six months of 1980. However, it said prices are not expected to be high enough to generate an expansion in the second half.

Wine Owner Gives Up Legal Fight

HAMMONDSPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Walter S. Taylor, ordered by a judge not to use his own name in ads or on the labels of his Bully Hill wines, has given up a legal battle against the Coca-Cola Co. and the Taylor Wine Co., formerly owned by his family.

In losing his case, Taylor compared himself to the Lone Ranger.

"In private, we all know what the Lone Ranger is, but in public he wears a mask," the 45-year-old vintner said.

He said his Bully Hill winery will stay in the business and use labels with a raccoon smoking a cigar, a bulldog, a ram and a bull.

Taylor Wine Co. was founded in this Finger Lakes village in 1879 by Taylor's grandfather. It was purchased in 1977 by Coca Cola Co. of Atlanta.

Walter Taylor's association with the Taylor Wine Co. ended in 1970 and he established the Bully Hill winery. He used his named on Bully Hill products' labels and stated Bully Hill wines were "bottled on the Taylor estate."

Coca Cola sued.

An agreement filed with U.S. District Judge Harold Burke in Rochester premanently restricts the use of Walter Taylor's name and references to his family.

"The American public should realize that when a giant corporation wants to change history, they can change history," he said.

Taylor President Joseph Swarthout said, "Our rights and the heritage of Taylor Wine Co. have been protected by the court."

Earlier this year, Swarthout, a 23-year veteran with the company, noted Taylor and his father, Greyton, had sold their interests in the company.

"Walter has been paid a lot of money for his name. He has been paid many times over for the company name, and now he wants to get paid again," Swarthout said.

Firm Settles Antitrust Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department announced Monday a proposed settlement of a 1976 antitrust suit against St. Regis Paper Co. of New York City, which was charged wth conspiring to fix prices on consumer bags.

The settlement, subject to approval of a U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, would prohibit the company from price-fixing or other antitrust violations in the manufacture of the paper product.

Three other defendants entered into a similar agreement with the Justice Department last month. They are Continental Group Inc. of New York, American Bag & Paper Corp., Philadelphia, and Harley Corp. of Philadelphia.

In a companion criminal case, American Bag & Paper and Harley pleaded no contest. Continental and a fifth defendant, Chase Bag Co. of Greenwich, Conn., were convicted by a jury in November 1977, and St. Regis was acquitted. The companies which were convicted or pleaded no contest were fined a total of $2.14 million.

The proposed settlement of the civil suit against St. Regis would also apply to all other paper and plastic products produced by the company and would be in effect for at least 10 years. In addition, under a related settlement, St. Regis would be barred for 25 years from any antitrust violations involving folding cartons.

Wassail Bowl Custom Explored

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — After that Christmas unpleasantness about the coal scuttle at the London counting house of Scrooge & Marley, old Ebenezer made it up to Bob Cratchit with a fat raise over "a bowl of smoking Bishop."

Mulligan's Stew

Sir Roger de Coverley, the swinging country squire in Joseph Addison's "Spectator," said he always allowed "a double quantity of malt to my small beer, and set it a-running for twelve days to everyone that calls for it."

In addition to a small beer, the squire provided a free lunch counter for the neighbors to tuck into throughout the holiday season: "I always have a piece of cold beef and a mince pie upon the table, and am wonderfully pleased to see my tenants pass away a whole evening in playing their innocent tricks and smutting one another." He did not go into details about the innocent tricks or how they went about smutting each other.

When Washington Irving, in the person of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent., his nom de plue in "The Sketch Book," spent a Christmas at an English manor house, dinner in the great banquet hall got off to a lovely liquid start. "...The butler brought in a huge silver bowl of rare and curious workmanship, which he placed before the squire. Its appearance was hailed with acclamation; being the Wassail Bowl, so renowned in Christmas festivity."

Wassail, from the Anglo Saxon wes hal, meaning "be in good health," has long been a part of our Christmas tradition.

The Anglo-Saxon warrior kings in their drafty knights' halls celebrated Christmas with a rowdy round of singing, gambling, hunting, feasting and drinking the Wassail. The hot spiced beer and mulled ale flowed so copiously in Olde England that Alfred the Great, who reigned in the 9th century, tried unsuccessfully to have the 12 days after Christmas set aside for sacred and abstemious observance.

In 18th century England the peerage and the landed gentry passed the steaming punchbowl, floating with fragrant nut meats and simmering dabs of toast, from hand to hand around the table like an Indian pipe of peace. Well-to-do city dwellers carried a bubbling urn of spicy spirits from house to house, inviting the neighbors to have a snort and contribute some of their own liquor supplies to the bottomless concoction.

In some parts of the kingdom, only the fairest wenches were commissioned to carry the punch bowl through the town and dole out the moist merriment. Ladies from the best families were known to go a 'wenching. The custom apparently thrived even in Cromwellian times when Christmas revels were deemed anathema by the Puritan Parliament. But witness these lines from a Christmas carol by George Wither, a former captain in Cromwell's army:

"The wenches with their Wassail bowls
About the streets are singing,
The boys are come to catch the owls,
The wild mare in is bringing."

It must have been quite a blast if the lads were out chasing after owls.

In Dickens' day, the poorer classes took their mugs bedecked with ribbons to go "a-wassailing" from door to door, begging a drink or money to buy some. Carolers making their rounds departed from the more pious lyrics to remind the listeners that their whistles needed wetting with the words of a 17th century song:

"Here we come a'wassailing
Among the leaves so green,
Here we come a'wandering,
So fair to be seen.
Love and joy come to you,
And to you, wassail, too
And God bless you and send you
A happy New Year.

Colonial silversmiths like Paul Revere did some of their best work in decorating punch bowls with angels and cherubim to watch over the drinkers and, as Oliver Wendell Holmes pointed out in his poem "On Lending a Punch Bowl," protect them from scolding tongues:

"Then fill a fair and honest cup and bear it straight to me;
The goblet hallows all it holds, what'er the liquid may be;
And may the cherubs on its face protect me from the sin
That dooms one to those dreadful words: —
'My dear, where have you been?'"

There was a mystique and a technique to preparing the Christmas libation that went beyond the ingredients, as Washington Irving observed:

"The contents had been prepared by the squire himself, being a beverage on the skillful mixture of which he particularly prided himself; alleging that it was too abstruse and complex for the comprehension of the ordinary servant. It was a potation, indeed, that might well make the heart of a toper leap within him; consisting of the richest and raciest wines, highly spiced and sweetened, with roasted apples bobbing about the surface.

"The old gentleman's whole countenance beamed with a serene look of indwelling delight as he stirred this mighty bowl. Having raised it to his lips with a hearty wish of a Merry Christmas to all present, he sent it brimming round the board for everyone to follow his example according to the primitive custom."

One wonders how much work Cratchit performed or if he could even see the bottom line after Scrooge ladled out the "Smoking Bishop." The recipe calls for steeping grilled Seville oranges a couple of days in bubbling vintage claret with sugar, mace, cloves and nutmeg.

Substituting rum and brandy for the claret elevates the bishop to cardinal, and using Tokay as the base fuel results in the election of a pope.

Other potations, toddies, nogs, grogs and glugs suitable for the Wassail bowl have such delightful names as Blue Blazer, Bosom Caresser, Ambassador's Morning Lift, Dog's Nose, Hot Brick Toddy, Corpse Reviver, Pope's Posset and the explosive "Bang."

Serious sipping of some of these could induce the symptoms recorded by Irwin S. Cobb after observing imbibers of corn liquor: "a sudden violent jolt of it has been known to stop the victim's watch, snap his suspenders and crack his glass eye right across."

For those who want to start the new year with a bang, rather than a whimper, the recipe says to mix a pint of cider wth a pint of warm ale, sweeten with treacle, grate in some nutmeg and ginger, top off with a tumbler of gin or whiskey.

Colby College Head Calls New Job 'Wonderful'

WATERVILLE, Maine (AP) — William Cotter never even thought about being a college president until his New York City squash partner brought up the subject over lunch one day.

But the squash partner had a daughter attending Colby College, a quiet liberal arts school with a good, but limited, reputation. And Colby was in search of a new president for its graceful 900-acre campus on a hill overlooking Waterville in central Maine.

For all practical purposes, the search ended at that lunch table.

Cotter, a 42-year-old Harvard-trained lawyer with years of experience in the problems of Third World universities, got the job in February, moved from Long Island to Waterville last summer and was inaugurated as Colby's 18th president in September.

"It's been wonderful so far," said the quiet-spoken newcomer in a recent interview.

"I'm sure there'll be some spring riots when it won't be so pleasant," he added with a smile.

Leaving New York has proved to be a "big wrench," he acknowledged. He and his wife and three children miss the cultural life available in New York and the sense of "centrality."

But he's digging in with an enthusiasm that has impressed students and staff.
