Hospital rankled by federal report

Rives says report isn't indicative of DSGH care quality

From staff and wire reports

Deaf Smith General Hospital was listed as one of 102 hospitals in the nation with a higher-than-anticipated death rate among Medicare patients in fiscal year 1990. DSGH was one of 17 Texas hospitals on the list of 102. They were culled from the 5,329 hospitals that treated Medicare patients in FY 1990.

The survey was released Wednesday by the Health Care Finance Administration. It oversees Medicare and Medicaid programs for the federal government.

Rives

"This does not necessarily mean that the care in these hospitals are the poorest performing hospitals in the United States," said HCFA in the study.

"It means nothing, really," said DSGH Administrator Ron Rives. "It is not a report card on the quality of care we provide here, and I actually don't know why we are on there."

The study was for the year ending Sept. 30, 1990. That was almost a year before Rives came to Hereford when Lubbock Methodist Hospital began management of the hospital.

Jim Houdek, a spokesman for the Texas Hospital Association, was even more succinct.

"I think it borders on the criminal. It has just gotten to be absurd and a terrible waste of federal dollars," Houdek said. He called the report a "mass of statistical gobbledygook."

Houdek pointed out the report uses 30-, 60- and 180-day mortality rates for its figures.

"Let's say a Medicare patient goes to the hospital for whatever, gets better and goes home," Houdek said. "Two months later, that person is walking down the street and gets hit by a truck and dies. Well, that goes on the mortality rate against the hospital. That's how absurd this thing is. It was intended for internal use by HCFA to help evaluate hospitals, but it's not a real good tool for anyone."

HCFA predicted the death rate for each hospital by a method which figures in the diagnosis, age, gender and whether the admissions were voluntary or emergency. Since Medicare is for elderly and disabled persons, both Rives and Houdek pointed out those persons would have a higher-than-average death rate.

"Frankly," Rives said, "it's a bunch of bull."

Also named to the list were Family Hospital Center and Northwest Texas Hospital, both in Amarillo.

Simons asks for support of efforts by community

By JOHN BROOKS

County Judge Tom Simons issued another call to county residents to work for industrial development during a speech Wednesday to the Hereford Lions Club.

"The cost of doing business never ceases to go up, but our tax base hasn't gone up and people are paying more taxes," Simons said. "Our tax base just hasn't changed much in five years."

The county judge said many of the people who served on the Prison Task Force are working on an industrial development group. The group is working with one definite prospect that will be building a processing plant in the High Plains.

"A successful project would put us back in the frame of mind of being successful," Simons said. "We can't be stagnant and we can't sit still. We can look at Plainview, which continues to be successful in landing new business, and Dalhart, which has hit a couple of big home runs." Dalhart recently landed a new state prison and a large hog feeding operation.

"Things like that make a great impact on communities our size," Simons said. "You can't do too much to work in support of these committees and governments."

Simons said the cost of county operations will go up again in the near future as the county has to meet the requirements of the American Disability Act. At the Deaf Smith County Museum, that may be very expensive.

"The Texas Antiquities Committee may not approve a lift for the museum, but we must make the museum, somehow, accessible," Simons said. "We'll have to pay for that, and you as taxpayers will have to pay for that."

He praised elected officials and department heads for "doing a great job providing services to our community for the least amount of money."

Farmers may apply for loan aid

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says you understand the full meaning of "identity crisis" the first time you try to cash a check in a strange town.

Overheard at a committee meeting: "We now have eight separate plans of action, narrowed down from the two we started with."

Overlooked in our last column, when discussing the many activities next week, was the King's Manor Barbecue which is held each year by the Founder's Association. It is scheduled Saturday evening, June 20. Others mentioned included the Lions Club Carnival, June 16-20; and the Rhinestone Roundup, June 18-21.

Under the "local-girl-makes-good" heading: Remember Donna (Kendall) Shepherd, talented singer from Hereford? She'll be singing the national anthem before the Cleveland-Oakland baseball game on July 5. The game will be televised on ESPN beginning at 7:05 p.m. We hope the tv coverage includes her rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner." Donna, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kendall, lives in Perryton, hometown of Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove.

Children can be very perceptive. A woman reported her 5-year-old son was intently watching a documentary on television about the Civil War. When the show ended, he asked his father, "Daddy, what is a slave?"

"A slave is someone who works real hard, all day long, for other people," the husband replied, "without getting paid for it."

"Oh, I know!" the son responded with wisdom. "you mean like Mommy!"

Gambling kinda sorta doesn't pay

Girl, after lesson gone awry, donates a lottery winner

Denise Herrin's mom wanted to teach her children a lesson.

She bought three lottery tickets and gave each child their choice. She was trying to prove that gambling doesn't pay.

Except... Denise scratched off the coating on her ticket. Lined up across the top row were three $100 signs. A winner.

Denise, who has been involved in Hereford Camp Fire, decided not to spend her money on video games or music tapes or CDs or anything like that. Instead, she gave the ticket to Hereford Camp Fire to provide scholarships for Camp Fire members who may not be able to pay all of their own way to various camps and other activities.

Gambling, usually, doesn't pay

Denise Herrin, right, presents a $100 Texas Lottery ticket to Brenda Pagett, director of Hereford Camp Fire. The ticket will be cashed and will go to the Camp Fire camp scholarship program.

Bush may become national scapegoat

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Cold War and the Gulf War were won on George Bush's watch. Dictatorships fell in Panama and Nicaragua with a lot of help from Washington. At home, the economy struggled out of recession.

This was supposed to have been the year the president was invincible, coasting to a second term. Instead, he is in deep political danger.

Associates say Bush is frustrated and puzzled by his slump in the polls. He seemed gloomy on a vacation to Kennebunkport, Maine, this month, and when asked how he felt, replied, "About a seven."

Clearly, voters are angry. "They're a very strong anti-incumbent fervor," said Clayton Yeutter, White House counselor of domestic affairs and former chairman of the Republican National Committee. "I believe it's much broader than the United States. The whole world is in a funk."

"This is a weird year," Bush said last week. "This is what they call one of the weird ones out there."

At the heart of the president's malaise is a witches' brew of problems and unflattering perceptions of him, analysts say.

Many of the difficulties spring from the economy, which under Bush has been at its weakest since World War II.

"The recession has finally crystallized in many peoples' mind the sense that they have been going downhill, that they're running faster to stand still, that median incomes are really not increasing above inflation," said Stuart Eizenstat, who was White House domestic adviser to Jimmy Carter.

"People are looking for that elusive thing called leadership, and George Bush does not project leadership," said Lyn Nofziger,

White House political director under Ronald Reagan.

"It's sort of a creeping sense that you've seen build over the years that something really is seriously wrong," said political consultant Jody Powell, who was Carter's press secretary. "The people have sort of come to the conclusion that he's not the guy to fix it."

"We have built the presidency up so much in this country," Nofziger said. "He's responsible for all that's good and all that's bad. When things go wrong we always blame the president."

"He is the national scapegoat," Yeutter said leadership is a problem that Bush recognizes he must address. He said the president's leadership "is more fully understood outside the borders of the United States than it is inside."

A Republican poll by the Wirthlin Group found that 83 percent of the people believe the nation is on the wrong track, the worst showing in at least 12 years.

Despite signs of economic recovery, Bush said a national poll found that 70 percent of Americans believe the economy is getting worse.

Underlining those fears, unemployment jumped to 7.5 percent in May, the highest level in nearly eight years.

Bush lost credibility with many Americans when he reneged on his read-my-lips-no-new-taxes pledge, observers said. It damaged him with conservatives "and that began to have a more corrosive effect generally," said Norman Ornstein, a presidential analyst at the American Enterprise Institute.

D-FW airport role is focus of dispute

Dallas council action prompts filing by Fort Worth

DALLAS (AP) - The smoldering rivalry between Dallas and Fort Worth has reignited in a tit-for-tat legal dispute over a rule that ensures the regional dominance of the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The relationship between oil-slick Dallas and the city dubbed "Cowtown" isn't exactly the Hatfields and McCoys, but the North Texas cousins have fought frequently since Fort Worth publishing magnate Amon G. Carter Sr. quipped he would rather take a sack lunch than eat in Dallas.

Former Fort Worth Mayor Willard Barr, who helped negotiate the DFW airport deal in the mid 1960s, said differences between the cities go far beyond economics.

"Dallas was settled mostly by merchants," said Barr, who served as mayor from 1965 to 1967. "Fort Worth was settled by ranchers, primarily, and those who dealt with ranchers."

"You could almost say the two cities represented two cultures."

Even when the cities worked together, they weren't happy about it.

"The first few partnerships between the cities could only be described as a shotgun wedding," said Dallas city councilman Chris Luna. "After that there has been some good cooperation."

That is, until recently, when an ongoing disagreement over the Wright Amendment flared again.

The rule, adopted in the late 1970s, promotes the regional airport while restricting growth at Dallas Love Field. Opponents claim the arrangement causes higher air fares by restraining trade and competition.

The Dallas City Council recently took up efforts to reconsider Wright Amendment provisions. That talk was quickly stopped when Fort Worth filed a lawsuit alleging that its neighbor had breached a 1968 agreement to maintain DFW as the region's premier airport.

Fort Worth, however, has refused to drop the lawsuit, and Dallas Councilman Domingo Garcia on Tuesday said he and others are considering a counter lawsuit that would accuse Fort Worth of violating the 1968 pact by building Alliance Airport.

"They want to force another shotgun marriage," Garcia said. "At this point we don't want to get married. We might get divorced."

Some Dallas council members also have said they would not support going ahead with a planned $218 million commuter train project on a 34-mile corridor linking the cities unless the lawsuit is dropped.

Dallas Mayor Steve Bartlett had planned to use Wednesday's council session to study ways to end the dispute.

"It's something that's gotten itself to almost petty status," Bartlett said. "We're dealing a little more with emotion than intellect."

"It clearly prevents both cities from getting on with other issues."

Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger said her council was not satisfied that Dallas stopped its discussions. It wants Dallas to reaffirm its support for DFW in a resolution.

"They have unscheduled a hearing ... they have not said they feel any different," Granger said. "What we recognize in Fort Worth ... is that DFW is the engine that drives the region's economy."

"My fear is unless the lawsuit is dismissed soon I think the relationship will be poor to miserable for the next year and a half to two years," he said.

Barr, 84, who has lived in both cities, predicts the neighbors eventually will stop bickering and live in harmony, but he doesn't see it in his lifetime.

"It may be another generation before it happens, but it'll happen," he said.

Evidence supports planet theory

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Scientists have found evidence that seven stars in our Milky Way galaxy may be orbited by planets, NASA announced today.

In the past decade, researchers have claimed to discover evidence of planets around some two dozen stars. But so far, scientists have not conclusively established the existence of any planetary system outside our own.

Using a new method that involved analyzing infrared light from space, astrophysicists Kenneth Marsh and Michael J. Mahoney at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory found nine sun-like stars that appeared to be orbited by companion bodies.

Two of those stars were found to be orbited by faint stars, Mahoney said. But the seven other stars may be orbited by planets, faint stars or "brown dwarfs," gaseous bodies too big to be planets but too small to become stars.

Other scientists praised the new method but said they aren't yet convinced the astrophysicists found planets outside our solar system.

"The landscape of previous efforts to detect planets is littered with the corpses of claims that haven't been substantiated," said David Black, director of the Lunar and Planetary Institute in Houston.

"It's way too soon to tell" if Marsh and Mahoney really discovered other worlds, he said, but the method used is "very interesting ... very creative."

Marsh was scheduled to present the findings today at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society in Columbus, Ohio.

Existing telescopes cannot detect objects as small as planets outside our solar system. So scientists have searched for planets by looking for wobbles in a star's motion or variations in its radiowave pulses that might indicate the gravitational tug of a body nearby.

Marsh and Mahoney instead analyzed the infrared light emitted by the swirling disks of gas, dust and debris surrounding stars. It was in such a disk surrounding the sun that matter is believed to have clumped together to form Earth and other planets in our solar system 4.6 billion years ago.

Even if the bodies found by the NASA scientists prove not to be planets, the study is significant because "it's a whole new way of looking for planets," said Steve Maran, spokesman for the American Astronomical Society and an astronomer at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md.

Eight of the nine stars with apparent companion objects are in Taurus-Auriga, a star-forming region of gas and dust clouds about 450 light years - or 2,650 trillion miles - from Earth in the Milky Way galaxy. Mahoney said the ninth star, whose companion is definitely a faint star, is in the Orion region about 1,300 light years, or 7,650 trillion miles, away.

Marsh and Mahoney analyzed infrared light measurements made by a NASA satellite in 1983 and by a variety of Earth-based telescopes from 1981 to 1983 to identify dozens of stars surrounded by disks.

Then they calculated what the spectrum of infrared light would look like if a disk had a ring-shaped gap in it. A gap should exist where gas, dust and debris had coalesced to form planets, a brown dwarf or a companion star.

Infrared light from disks around nine stars indicated gaps - indirect evidence the nine stars are orbited by companion objects, Mahoney said.

That conclusion is bolstered by the fact that gaps were detected where temperatures are cold enough to let water vapor condense into ice to help form planets, he added.

Last year, the supposed discovery of a planet around the star PSR1829-10 by other scientists gained worldwide publicity, but they retracted the claim this year after discovering they goofed. The more recent, possible discovery of two and perhaps three other planets around another star was much more convincing.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 42 now and have been following your column since high school. I notice that you have stood up for firefighters, waitresses, policemen, bus drivers, school teachers, nurses, truck drivers, bank tellers--the list is endless--but I have never seen a word about the most abused segment of society--those of us who work for a telephone answering service.

I've been at this job for 18 months and have developed stomach problems from the aggravation. My doctor says I should quit even if I have to clean offices at night, but I am hanging in there, hoping to learn how to cope.

Why doesn't the public understand that we are there to help them? We are expected to handle at least 75 lines, which is a big load, but it wouldn't be difficult for an experienced operator if it weren't for the garbage-mouth cranks who make us miserable.

We have instructions to be civil no matter what people say to us. Well, how would you like to have someone yell, "Get the yell off the line. I'm calling long-distance and I don't want to talk to an answering service!"

I've had people ask me, "Is this a recording?" When I say, "No it is NOT a recording," they say, "Prove it!" I ask you, Ann, is this the height of ignorance or what? How could a recording respond to a question?

You would be doing a lot of people a big favor if you printed my letter. We need to get the word out and you could make a big difference.--N.Y.C. Of Course

DEAR N.Y.C.: People who are abusive to telephone personnel are really cowardly. They know they can be nasty and not have to face the people they've been rough on. As that old song goes, "They are more to be pitied than censured." Give them a hasty disconnect and put a smile back in your voice.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Wow! I knew you were popular, but never imagined how well read until you published the name of our bank, the Savings Bank of Rockville. I had written to let you know that one of your columns had prompted a customer to return $50 that he had mistakenly received from our bank. You printed my letter.

I heard from college classmates, former employees, family members and strangers from coast to coast. My Aunt Agnes sent me a letter that says it all. Please share it with your readers.--William McGurk, Rockville, Conn.

DEAR MR. MCGURK: Thanks for letting me know that a letter in my column sent shock waves through the family hot line. It was fun and I will indeed share your Aunt Agnes' letter with my readers. Here it is. And won't she be surprised!

DEAR BILL: You certainly electrified the family and created a swell of activity. I'm sure Marianna has told you that Marion phoned excitedly from Torrance, followed by Jimmy from San Diego. Next I had a note from Aunt Martha. She said Muriel called Paul at work when she spotted your letter. Paul promptly called his mother. The next day Mike called from Missouri to say Nan had phoned him at work to read him your letter. And, of course, I called Sheila. Nice letter. You're famous. Way to go, Bill! Love, Aunt Agnes

DEAR AUNT AGNES: You sound like a living doll. Thanks for helping my readers end the week with a smile. Gem of the Day: Vacations are wonderful social equalizers. People come back just as broke as their neighbors who couldn't afford to go.

An alcohol problem? How can you help yourself or someone you love? "Alcoholism: How to Recognize It, How to Deal With It, How to Conquer It" will give you the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Alcohol, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

Blazers survive bad start; series tied 2-2

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - Michael Jordan put the ball on the floor and drove to the basket. Which move would he use this time?

Would he race past Clyde Drexler, as he has done so often in the NBA Finals - as he did in league MVP voting? Or would he just make Drexler think he would drive and, instead, pull up for the quick jumper? In your face, Clyde. Again.

This time Jordan drove. This time, Drexler thought Jordan would drive. And for the first time this series, Drexler beat Jordan. Beat him clean, took away the ball, started and finished the fast break that gave Portland its first lead.

Drexler's Trail Blazers went on to beat Jordan's Chicago Bulls 93-88 in Game 4 Wednesday, tying the best-of-7 series at two games apiece. Game 5 is here Friday night before the teams return to Chicago Stadium for Game 6 Sunday.

"When you play a guy enough, eventually you learn some of his moves. Michael's got about 2,000 of them. I just happened to guess right that time," said Drexler, who had 21 points, nine assists, eight rebounds and two steals.

"It was just one of those plays where you try to anticipate one of his moves and I was able to get my hand on the ball. Then it was off to the races."

Jordan opened the fourth quarter with two baskets against Drexler - scoring the last of his 32 points and putting the Bulls ahead 73-66.

With just under four minutes left, he was trying to increase Chicago's 82-81 lead. He drove hard to the basket before Drexler used his left hand to knock away the ball. It deflected into the hands of Jerome Kersey, who led Terry Porter, who flipped the ball back to Drexler for the layup.

Portland 83, Chicago 82.

"I guess I tried that move too often. I scored on it just (a few) minutes before. He anticipated it well," Jordan said. "It's an open-court situation, and they finished it off very well. It was a big motivational factor for them."

"I've been stripped before. I've been blocked before. I've been dunked on before. I've missed dunks before. You just want to redeem yourself ... as a team. We just didn't do it as a team down the stretch."

Drexler and his team redeemed themselves. The Trail Blazers after a miserable performance in Sunday's Game 3 loss and a terrible start to Game 4 that saw them fall behind 10-0 and 18-5. Drexler after missing seven of eight third-quarter shots and failing to score for almost 8 1/2 minutes of the fourth.

Just before his big play, Drexler missed two free throws that could have tied the game with 3:59 to go. The 12,888 fans in the Blazers' 682nd consecutive sellout crowd groaned. A few even booed.

"We just couldn't get over the hump," Drexler said. "It was a feeling, like, 'We keep making it tough on ourselves.'"

Drexler and the Blazers finally decided to make things tough on the Bulls.

Cliff Robinson, 2 of 11 from the floor in Game 3, made a free throw to cut Chicago's lead to 82-81.

Drexler made his steal. Kersey, who had been shooting 40.6 percent in the series, dunked on an assist from Drexler to match Drexler's 21 points.

After John Paxson's 3-pointer made it 85-85, Robinson made another foul shot, Drexler played hand-in-face defense as Jordan missed a short jumper, Porter made two free throws, Portland's defense collapsed on Jordan to force another miss, Robinson hit yet another free throw to give him 17 points, and Drexler made two foul shots for a 91-85 lead.

Chicago pulled to 91-88 on three free throws before Porter took Drexler's outlet pass and hit the clinching layup.

Jones' team wins scramble

First place in Wednesday's Scramble at Pitman Municipal Golf Course went to a team composed of Kelly Kitchens, Bartley Dowell, Cliff Jones and Martha Jones.

The winning team scored a 30 on the back nine while two teams finished with a 32, and four carded 33s. Winning second on a scorecard playoff was the team of James McDowell, Speedy Nieman, R.L. Blakely and Perry Ray. Third went to James Downs, Max Goforth, Sid Ham and Marcy Hughes.

The scramble is held each Wednesday and is open to all interested golfers. Signup begins at the completion of each Wednesday's play.

Mariners' sale nears approval

NEW YORK (AP) - Five months after it was proposed, the sale of the Seattle Mariners to a Japanese-led group was scheduled for final approval today.

The American and National leagues approved the $125 million deal in principle during separate meetings Wednesday, then set the formal vote for today. Under baseball's rules, a final vote can take place only during a joint meeting of both leagues.

"We have reason to believe our three-quarters majority will be easily reached tomorrow," AL president Bobby Brown said.

"We passed it in principle during a voice vote," NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said.

The group buying the club is headed by Hiroshi Yamauchi, president of Nintendo Co. Ltd. of Kyoto. Yamauchi says he has no interest in baseball but is buying the team as a gift to Seattle. Nintendo of America Inc. is located in suburban Redmond, Wash.

Volleyball camp planned in July

The 1992 Lady Whiteface Volleyball Camp will be held July 13-17. The camp is for girls who are entering the fourth-ninth grades.

The sessions go from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. with a one-hour break for lunch (not provided). The morning sessions concentrate on mass drills such as passing, setting, serving, hitting, blocking and digging. The afternoon drills feature team development on indoor and outdoor courts.

The camp will be conducted by HHS coach Brenda Reeh. She'll be assisted by other high school and junior high coaches and by seniors from this season's HHS volleyball team.

The camp fee is $60. A $10 deposit is required by July 1.

Tourney to help WTSU athletics

The Foundation for Buffalo Athletics will sponsor a Twilight Golf Classic June 19 to benefit the Athletic Scholarship Fund at West Texas State University.

The tournament will be played at Palo Duro Creek Golf Club in Canyon. The format will be four-man teams (with a minimum total handicap of 40) playing under Florida Scramble rules. Starting at 6 p.m., nine holes will be played in daylight. After dinner, nine holes will be played in the dark using glow-in-the-dark balls.

Coaches from each of WTSU's sports programs will be present. There will be prizes for the top four teams. In addition to the scramble, there will be night-putting and night-driving contests.

Entry fees are $240 for a team or $60 per player. The fee includes meal, cart and special night golf balls. To enter or get more information, call Rick Thompson at 656-2125 or 656-2700. The field will be limited to the first 15 paid teams.

"Someone asked, 'What would we do differently,'" Smulyan said. "I said, 'Take more partners.'"

"We've learned a lot about running a club," he added. "I'm very proud of the people we assembled and the things we did."

Control of the team will pass from Smulyan to Ellis in approximately 30 days, after the final documents are drafted and approved by the ownership committee. That panel voted 7-0 Tuesday to recommend approval of the sale.

Commissioner Fay Vincent, who did not attend the news conference, said during an informal session with reporters that he was pleased with the outcome of the deal, especially the inclusion of local businesses in the partnership that is purchasing the team.

The local group includes Ellis, Christopher Larson of Microsoft Corp. and John McCaw, a director of McCaw Communications Cos. It also includes Frank Shrontz, chairman of The Boeing Co., who is making a token investment.

"It's the most powerful group that's ever been assembled in Seattle," Vincent said.

Sosa's homers help Cubs win

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

Greg Maddux looked at the scoreboard after Ray Lankford doubled with one out in the sixth inning and realized it was the first hit for St. Louis.

It didn't bother him a bit. He has come to expect such things. "I don't think I've had a no-hitter since high school," Maddux said after limiting the Cardinals to three hits in seven innings while pitching the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory Wednesday night.

The four runs by the Cubs were a boost for Maddux, 2-6 in his last nine starts. During that stretch, the Cubs have scored fewer than three runs a game.

"I don't worry about how many runs we score," he said. "I worry about how many I give up."

He had some room for error this time because the slump-ridden Cardinals made it easy for the Cubs. They committed three errors and Chicago's Sammy Sosa hit two homers.

Lankford said the Cardinals helped Maddux (6-6) by being impatient.

"He was pretty much in control all night," Lankford said. "He looked relaxed. We gave him some outs by swinging at pitches out of the strike zone."

Sosa's first home run, in the second off rookie Mark Clark (0-1), gave the Cubs a 1-0 lead they never surrendered.

The Cubs scored their second run in the fifth with the help of two St. Louis errors and added another in the sixth on first baseman Gerald Perry's second miscue of the night. Sosa's fifth homer of the season accounted for the rest of the Chicago offense.

Pirates 2, Phillies 1

Visiting Pittsburgh used two walks, a single and an error on Philadelphia's Len Dykstra to score an unearned run in the 12th inning.

Barry Bonds walked against Barry Jones (4-3) to start the 12th and advanced on an infield out. Gary Varsho was intentionally walked and Jose Lind singled to center. Bonds initially stopped at third, but raced home when Dykstra bobbled the ball in center field.

Bob Patterson (3-0) pitched two-thirds of an inning. All of Patterson's victories are over the Phillies. Roger Mason relieved Patterson with nobody out in the 12th after John Kruk singled and retired the side for his sixth save.

Padres 5, Astros 1

At San Diego, Fred McGriff homered for the second straight game and hit an RBI double.

Craig Lefferts (7-4) allowed six hits in eight innings but failed for the second straight game to pitch his first career complete game.

McGriff hit a two-run shot off Butch Henry (1-5) with two outs in the third for his 14th of the year. He drove in Tony Gwynn, who had singled, to move into a tie with Barry Bonds of Pittsburgh for the NL home run lead.

Giants 6, Reds 2

Bud Black pitched three-hit ball for eight-plus innings and Will Clark and Robby Thompson homered as San Francisco beat visiting Cincinnati.

Black (3-1) took a two-hitter into the ninth, but a single, a walk and an error cost him the shutout and brought on Jeff Brantley.

Clark, who entered the game with a .214 career average against Cincinnati starter Jose Rijo, singled, doubled and homered against the Reds' ace, then added a double against reliever Rob Dibble in the eighth.

Rijo (2-5) gave up four runs and six hits in six innings.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1

Steve Avery allowed five hits over eight innings.

The visiting Braves scored the winning run in the sixth when David Justice hit a sacrifice fly to score Otis Nixon.

Avery (4-5) struck out six and walked three. Kevin Gross (3-6) lost despite allowing only five hits and two runs in seven innings.

Expos 8, Mets 2

At Montreal, the Mets made six errors to tie a club record.

Montreal's Mark Gardner (4-5) allowed two hits, struck out four and walked three in five innings.

The game marked the fourth time the Mets have made six errors, the last April 15, 1980, against the Expos. But only two Montreal runs, both in the first inning off David Cone (5-4), were unearned.

Montreal's Tim Wallach went 3 for 5 with two RBIs. New York's Bobby Bonilla hit his eighth homer.

White Sox beat Angels in 12th

By The Associated Press

It was a good night to be a former Angel.

Shawn Abner and Kirk McCaskill, both one-time California players, came out on top of their former team Wednesday night. Abner's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 victory.

McCaskill pitched well for eight innings, carrying a three-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the ninth. But the bullpen failed him and he wound up with a no-decision.

"I didn't do bad playing for them every four of five games," said Abner, who was released by California near the end of training camp. "I guess some people like you, some people don't."

The folks at Comiskey Park certainly liked what Abner did with the bases loaded in the 12th.

With the score tied 2-2, George Bell drew a walk from Steve Frey (2-1). Craig Grebeck then singled, sending Bell to third. Steve Sax was given an intentional walk to fill the bases.

Abner's fly ball into medium center field was caught by Chad Curtis, whose throw was dropped by catcher Mike Fitzgerald. Bell beat the throw on a close play, anyway.

It was tough for McCaskill not to get a victory. Ahead 1-0, he yielded a leadoff double to Von Hayes in the ninth and hit Hubie Brooks with a pitch.

Scott Radinsky relieved, followed by ace Bobby Thigpen, and Rene Gonzales eventually hit a two-run single.

The Sox came back to tie it on Frank Thomas's RBI single.

Rangers 5, Mariners 3

At Arlington, Juan Gonzalez homered for the fifth time in his last four games and Dickie Thon's two-run homer keyed a five-run third inning.

Seattle starter Randy Johnson allowed only four hits in his four innings, but he walked six and hit two batters. Johnson leads the league in walks (51) and hit batters (eight).

Jose Guzman (6-3) yielded six hits and walked one in seven innings in winning his fourth straight decision.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 1

At Baltimore, Rick Sutcliffe tied for the major league high with his ninth victory. Sutcliffe (9-4) allowed six hits in winning a fourth straight start for the first time since 1989. He lost his shutout in the seventh when Ellis Burks hit his team-high sixth homer.

Mike Devereaux drove in two runs for Baltimore.

Athletics 5, Brewers 2

At Milwaukee, Mark McGwire

became the fifth-fastest player to reach 200 career homers, getting his 22nd this season. McGwire's 200th homer came in his 2,852nd career at-bat, faster than everyone except Ralph Kiner, Babe Ruth, Harmon Killebrew and Eddie Mathews.

Harold Baines also homered in support of Ron Darling, who yielded seven hits in seven innings.

Blue Jays 10, Yankees 3

Toronto continued its mastery at Yankee Stadium as Joe Carter homered, tripled, doubled and drove in four runs. The Blue Jays swept New York, outscoring the Yankees 28-7 in the three-game series, with 15 hits in the finale, including two homers, three triples and four doubles.

Greg Myers hit a three-run homer during a six-run second inning and Devon White got three hits, drove in two runs and scored twice.

Indians 4, Tigers 2

At Detroit, Glenallen Hill continued his power surge with two home runs. His second of the night broke a 2-2 tie in the 11th inning. Brook Jacoby, the next batter, also homered.

Steve Olin pitched the final 3 2-3 innings and allowed just two hits to win it.

Royals 7, Angels 6

At Kansas City, Brian McRae had three hits and drove in three runs, leading the Royals to their ninth victory in their last 11 games.

The Royals led 5-0 before Minnesota scored six times in the sixth. Shane Mack doubled and scored on Gene Larkin's double. Kirby Puckett bunted for a hit and Kent Hrbek hit his eighth home run.

Brian Harper singled to knock out Kevin Appier. Tom Gordon relieved and got Chili Davis to ground out, but threw a wild pitch and gave up a run-scoring single to Scott Leius. Greg Gagne and Jeff Reboulet singled to score Leius.

RBI singles by McRae and Keith Miller in the bottom of the inning brought back Kansas City.
