U.S. copters, arms to aid in anti-drug war

■ Related stories, Page 7C

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush said Friday he will send $65 million worth of helicopters, weapons and other equipment to help Colombia in its "courageous" battle against drug barons who have proclaimed all-out war against their government.

The first shipment, a $20 million package of eight Huey transport helicopters; arms such as machine guns, mortars and ammunition; 4-wheel drive vehicles; ambulances; communications equipment and anti-tank guns, will be sent next week, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Later shipments will include medical supplies, 12 more Huey helicopters, a Blackhawk medical evacuation helicopter, assault boats, trucks, medical supplies and airplanes, Fitzwater said.

Hours after the announcement, a official who requested anonymity said discussions were still going on with the Colombians about their specific needs.

Fitzwater said no U.S. combat troops will go to Colombia, but U.S. advisers will be sent to train the Colombians in operating the U.S. equipment.

"It's not anticipated they would be in a combat role," he told reporters accompanying Bush on his vacation here.

"Our only motivation is to do as much as we can as fast as we can," the president's spokesman said. "We have a war situation in America, let alone in Colombia."

Bush, in a statement read by Fitzwater, noted attacks by the drug lords against the Colombian establishment, including last week's assassination of a leading presidential candidate, and said:

"It is time for the United States and other countries of the world to stand with President (Virgilio) Barco during his courageous challenge to these insidious forces that threaten the very fabric of Colombian society."

Officials said Colombia is most in need of transportation to conduct raids and apprehend the drug cartel operatives.

The materiel, to be taken from Pentagon stocks, will be paid for with unspent funds made available through the 1986 Foreign Assistance Act.

TSTA still seeking more say, higher pay for teachers

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Kouri

Midland schools have already taken steps to garner more teacher input and increase salaries, Superintendent Joe Baressi said in response to a state teacher group's demands Thursday.

Wielding results of a summer poll, Texas State Teachers Association Vice President Richard Kouri said West Texas residents want their teachers to have higher pay and more say in school operations.

Kouri, speaking at a press conference in Midland, also said the respondents believe local schools "do a good job of educating students, but they have even more confidence in the ability of the local teachers who staff these schools."

Baressi said Midland Independent School District set up a teacher communications committee last year, which meets with him once a month to discuss campus issues.

One teacher elected from each campus serves on the committee, which also meets with the school board about every three months.

"I think it has been very effective," Baressi said. "We have felt for some time that it's important for teachers to have more input."

He said the committee has been instrumental in the direction of dress code and discipline policies and the creation of a "sick bank" among other changes during the year.

For the sick bank, teachers who donate a day of sick time to the bank can use up to 50 days of paid sick time for prolonged illnesses.

Baressi also pointed out that trustees in July approved a $1,140 per year teacher pay hike. Tight budgeting and a lack of enough state funding kept the raises from being bigger, he added.

Superintendent Gene Buinger of Ector County Independent School District said improved administrator-teacher communication will become a major goal in coming years.

"I would agree that there's a greater need for more involvement of teachers and parents in the education process," Buinger said. "It's something I'm committed to."

He said plans for improved communication will begin with campus-level administrators rather than central administration.

"The top-down approach has not proven successful in business and government," Buinger said. "Ultimately the best school improvement is going to occur at the building level."

According to the TSTA poll, 76 percent of the 110 surveyed in 55 West Texas counties said teachers deserve more pay, while 83 percent said teachers should have more say in local education decisions.

Some 71 percent gave their schools a passing grade of "C," while 16 percent gave them an "A," 28 percent a "B," 9 percent a "D" and 4 percent an "F." Some 10 percent didn't know what grade to give their schools.

However, in a similar poll conducted last year, more than 50 percent gave their schools a grade of "A" or "B." Some 78 percent of respondents said teacher input should be considered when school officials draft education policies.

This year's findings were the result of poll conducted by Harte-Hanks Communications and Texas A&M University. Kouri said the poll has a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

Kouri said, "It is extremely heartening to the teachers here that 81 percent believe teachers care about students, while 85 percent say teachers are hard working and 79 percent believe teachers are well informed in their subject matter."

Kouri said the West Texas results were similar to those statewide, where 1,007 residents were surveyed.

Linda Harris, TSTA District 18 president, said the results will be presented to MISD trustees at an upcoming meeting.

"It confirmed what I have known all along," Ms. Harris said of the poll. "Our teachers are doing a good job."

'Wow, what a way to leave the solar system,' scientist says

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Voyager 2 brushed by Neptune's north pole and photographed volcanoes that once gushed ice lava on frosty, fault-cracked Triton, revealing "a world unlike any we've ever seen," NASA said Friday.

"All we can say now is, wow! — what a way to leave the solar system," said U.S. Geological Survey geologist Laurence Soderblom, deputy leader of Voyager's photographic imaging team.

The one-ton space probe capped its historic 4.43-billion mile, 12-year tour of four planets when it skimmed 3,048 miles over Neptune's north pole Thursday night, then dove past Triton, the planet's largest moon. It made its closest approach about 23,900 miles above the moon's surface at 2:10 a.m PDT Friday.

"We are witness today to truly an amazing feat of American space technology," Vice President Dan Quayle told hundreds of scientists and dignitaries Friday at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. "I am exceedingly delighted to be here on this very historic day for America and America's space program."

During its approach to Neptune, Voyager discovered six moons in addition to Nereid and frost-covered Triton, which were first observed from Earth.

The spaceship also discovered one complete ring of debris around the planet and a partial ring, or ring arc, scientists believe will also prove to be a complete ring.

Voyager's closest photos of Triton were recorded on tape for playback to earth this weekend, but those returned Friday astounded scientists. Soderblom said they showed at least three volcanoes, now inactive, that once produced flows of viscous ice — perhaps frozen natural gas or nitrogen ice.

"The images returned this morning revealed a world unlike any we've ever seen," said Voyager project scientist Edward Stone.

While icy volcanic flows without associated craters have been seen on Uranus' moon Ariel and some other moons, "it's the first time we've seen an icy volcano," Stone said, referring to one of the huge craters on Triton. "This is a real volcano."

But Stone noted that Triton's volcanoes are "filled with ice instead of rock. The lava flow is a flow of ice, not of rock."

NASA geologist Joseph Boyce said one of the ice volcanoes — which look like dry lakebeds filled with smooth material — measures several hundred miles across.

Other Triton photos showed long fault lines, ridges, low-lying cliffs and "ice structures of various sorts, like glacier terrain," JPL scientist Torrence Johnson said. "They're like things you see in polar caps on Mars."

"It looks like there's all kinds of fault systems all over the place," Soderblom said, adding that the faults suggest "Tritonquakes" may have occurred at one time on the moon.

Also visible were some meteorite impact craters, and long sets of parallel ridges bounding apparent val-

"This facility enhances medical technology for Midland and the surrounding rural areas while making the Midland area more appealing to new industries," Gramm said at the afternoon opening of the Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) Center.

Joining Gramm in celebrating the grand opening were State Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, MMH President Ray Branson, Dr. Scott Sheward, chief radiologist at MMH,

Band members' attackers were drunk, police say

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

A group of young men who allegedly attacked high-schoolers Friday during an early morning band initiation ceremony were drunk when the incident occurred, a suspect told police.

One of an estimated six suspects "cooperated" with police detectives Friday and is "leading us to other suspects," Midland Police Det. Dan Walkenshaw said.

Six Midland High School band members were treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital early Friday morning after being injured in an attack by several men brandishing knives and a gun, police reports said.

Walkenshaw said the suspects had been cruising the neighborhood drinking alcoholic beverages and verbally harassing the band students.

Police have ruled out the chance that the brawl stemmed from high school rivalry, Walkenshaw said.

About half of the suspects are older than 17 and will be classified as adults, Walkenshaw said.

The brawl broke out early Friday morning when MHS band members were "initiating" sophomores during a ceremony school officials said was unauthorized.

The suspects approached the band students on the high school field and hurled beer bottles and rocks at them, White said.

"The (band) kids at the school were good kids. They told the suspects, 'We can't have you here with beer around our school. We'll get in trouble.' And they ran them off," Walkenshaw said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Chance for storms looms

From Staff and Wire Reports

Chances for thunderstorms loom throughout the weekend, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport said.

Today will be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The high should be in the mid-90s with winds south at 10-20 mph.

Tonight will also be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. The low should be near 70.

Sunday will again be partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high in the mid-90s.

The record low for today occurred in 1970 when it dipped to 58 while the record low for Friday occurred in 1936 when it reached 103.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms developed along the Gulf coast Friday, as well as in northwestern and far western regions of Texas, according to the National Weather Service.

A large area of thunderstorms also developed in Southeast Texas and scattered showers and thunderstorms dotted the rest of the coast. Other storms were located around the Wichita Falls area and in the Big Bend region.

A weak, high-pressure front continued to influence Texas weather in the form of a light south wind at 5 to 10 mph. The wind in West Central Texas gusted at 25 mph.

Temperatures were in the 90-degree range over most of the state except in the Panhandle, where readings were in the 80s.

NATION

Summer vacationers donned overcoats in the Northeast and snow fell in Montana on Friday, while the deep South experienced uncomfortable summer heat.

Fall weather made an early appearance as temperatures fell to as low as 29 degrees at East Haven, Vt. Warm coats were needed atop of Mount Washington, N.H., where temperatures were around 30 degrees and winds gusted over 60 mph.

Scattered frost is expected Saturday morning in the colder valleys of northern New England and northeastern New York state.

Cold weather also the rule across the northern and central Rockies, with temperatures in the 50s and 60s.

Heavy rain since Wednesday has caused flooding in parts of northwest Montana, where more than 2½ inches rain fell from noon Thursday to noon Friday at Great Falls.

Heavy snow covered some mountain ranges in Montana. The Beartooth Highway southwest of Red Lodge was covered with 1 to 2 inches of snow Friday morning.

Elsewhere, showers and thunderstorms were scattered from eastern portions of the northern and central Plains across Arkansas and the Gulf Coast to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Widespread thunderstorms drenched northern Florida. A thunderstorm doused Daytona Beach with almost an inch of rain in a half-hour.

A warm front extended from southern Missouri across northern Kentucky to the Carolinas, separating cloudy and cool weather in the North from hot weather in the South.

Temperatures as high as the mid-90s and high humidity made things uncomfortable from south-central Texas across the lower Mississippi Valley to Georgia.

Midland statistics

Neptune farthest planet from sun

What's the farthest planet from the sun?

Pluto, you say?

Well, you'd better rethink that one because the planet Pluto, as you may remember, has an eccentric orbit.

That means the farthest planet from our sun will continue to be Neptune until the year 2,000 when the planet Pluto returns to the outer reaches of its orbit.

And notice if you will we said the planet Pluto.

leys filled with icy "erupted plastic masses," he said. The icy flows either poured down valleys or erupted from valley floors, similar to what happens if someone is "using a razor and slicing open the side of a toothpaste tube," Soderblom said.

He said scientists don't yet know the makeup of the volcanic ices and other ice flows, or when the volcanoes last erupted.

Earth and Jupiter's moon Io are the only objects in the solar system known to have volcanoes that are currently active.

Voyager also revealed Triton has an atmosphere, as predicted. It's content wasn't immediately determined, but NASA said the haze might be like photochemical smog.

Stone said the discovery that Triton's surface once was geologically active supports the theory that the backward-orbiting moon — about four-fifths the size of Earth's moon — once was a comet-like, sun-orbiting object captured into orbit around Neptune.

Under that theory, Triton initially would have orbited Neptune in a long ellipse, but Neptune's gravity slowly pulled it into a circular orbit, making Triton a semi-molten, geologically active ball for the first billion years after its capture, he said.

By 9 a.m. PDT today, Voyager will be 2.753 billion miles from Earth and 1.385 million miles from Neptune, speeding away from the giant planet at 37,847 mph.

The spacecraft revealed 400-mph winds in Neptune's bluish atmosphere, as well as cloud "streamers" stretching thousands of miles, and an assortment of storms, including an Earth-sized cyclone called the Great Dark Spot.

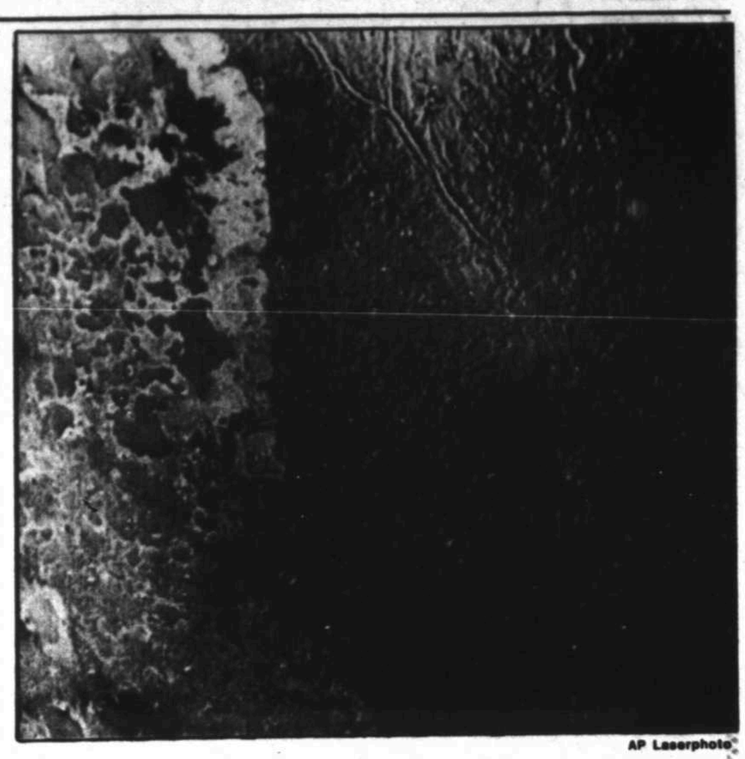

Voyager 2 was launched in 1977 and explored Jupiter in 1979, Saturn in 1981 and Uranus in 1986. Its trip to Neptune followed a 4.43-billion mile curving path, although the planet is now 2.75 billion miles from Earth.

Voyager 1 also was launched in 1977, exploring Jupiter in 1979 and Saturn in 1980 before speeding out of the plane of the planets.

Until its official "near encounter" period ends Oct. 2, Voyager 2 will look back over its shoulder at Neptune. Then it, like Voyager 1, will head toward interstellar space.

"Voyager 2 is now past Neptune and is continuing to press outward into the darkest and farthest region of the solar system," NASA administrator Richard Truly said. "The Voyagers are destined to wander through the Milky Way. ... What wonders they will encounter."

The surface of Neptune's moon Triton is shown in detail in this Voyager 2 photo taken early Friday morning. The surface is dominated by many roughly circular, multisided and arched features between 18 and 30 miles across, which scientists say resemble the eroded impact craters of Mars.

LULAC seeks review in death of Colorado City man

LULAC officials allege that the May 13, 1988, shooting death of Sammy Gomez by former part-time patrol officer Billy Ray Williamson cannot receive a fair investigation in Mitchell County.

COLORADO CITY (AP) — A Hispanic organization and district attorney have asked a second pathologist to review an autopsy report which supports a former patrol officer's claim a man he shot had lunged at him.

Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio lawyer with the League of Latin American Citizens, said Thursday the organization wants a federal grand jury to hear the case.

But LULAC officials allege that the May 13, 1988, shooting death of Sammy Gomez by former part-time patrol officer Billy Ray Williamson cannot receive a fair investigation in Mitchell County.

Williamson, the Colorado City fire marshal, was no-billed by a Mitchell County grand jury shortly after the shooting.

LULAC officials claimed several members of the June grand jury that was scheduled to hear the case had close ties to the city and police departments.

Police officers contend Williamson shot Gomez, who was being arrested as a rape suspect, after the 27-year-old man lunged at officers with a knife. Three bullets hit Gomez, entering his chest, back and the back of his skull.

Officials from both sides have agreed to let a Hispanic pathologist at the El Paso Medical Examiners Office examine the autopsy report by Dr. Patrick Besant-Matthews, former deputy chief medical examiner at the Dallas forensic lab.

District Attorney Frank Conrad said he doesn't doubt the accuracy of the autopsy, but agreed to let a second pathologist examine it.

"We're only doing it to satisfy LULAC's concerns and objections," Conrad said.

Sandoval said Gomez's body will be exhumed if the El Paso pathologist thinks it's necessary.

"We can almost predict what the outcome will be," Sandoval said of a second grand jury that is to convene in October.

Conrad said District Judge Weldon Kirk decided to use a jury wheel system — where names are drawn out of a rotating drum — to seat the grand jury.

Normally, grand juries are selected by three grand jury commissioners, Conrad said.

The judge also has asked for a LULAC representative to be present when the names are drawn.

and other health care and civic leaders.

The senator also viewed a demonstration of the $2 million system's scanning techniques.

According to Branson, the MRI Center's opening represents the culmination of "a lot of hard work on behalf of many different people."

Doctors and hospital officials started thinking about bringing magnetic resonance imaging to Midland 1½ years ago, after it became apparent that the technology was "state-of-art and necessary" in the diagnosis of certain illnesses and injuries, he said.

Hospitals in Lubbock and San Angelo have similar MRI centers, but Branson pointed out that the Midland machine is larger.

The MRI Center's 14-ton steel magnet is totally encased in 70 tons of 3-inch-thick steel and is located in the southwest corner of the new Abell-Hanger Medical Pavillion.

Its features include a $1.8 million General Electric MRI system magnet that is 25,000 times the strength of the earth's magnetic field. Designed to align hydrogen molecules in the human body, the system can produce a three dimensional image from any angle.

By enabling the physician to view tissue hidden by bone, the system eliminates the need for many exploratory surgeries.

"Some of the studies that are coming out on this machine indicate that it will revolutionize the ability to make timely and accurate diagnosis," Branson said. "Even though it cost $2 million, it still represents a more cost effective way to diagnose and treat certain illnesses and injuries."

Sheward prefers the use of the MRI technology over X-rays in certain situations because it doesn't expose the patient to radiation or other known biological hazards.

With that in mind, physicians like the chief radiologist are hoping for more information, improved special resolution, improved diagnosis of normal disease states and abnormal disease states — all with no side effect.

"We're very excited about it," he said. "I think it will help us improve our diagnostic capability for the residents of the Permian Basin."

Also impressed by the system's capabilities was Midland Chamber of Commerce Chairman Steve Davidson, who described it as "one more brick in the building" of economic diversification.

"Certainly, medical services are a large part of that and we look forward to this facility as well as others serving an entire region," he said.

DRUGS

The act gives the president about $75 million in discretionary funds yearly; about $10 million has been spent this year, said an official in Washington.

Noting that Colombia will get virtually all of the money left for this year, Fitzwater said, "Since we're using all the money in the fund, it stands to reason we could have used more."

He also said that the United States has begun shipping a variety of military gear bought earlier by the Colombian government, including 20 Huey and five Blackhawk helicopters. The State Department was also lending Colombia two helicopters.

The administration's $65 million aid package does not include those helicopters.

Fitzwater said Bush would propose sending additional aid to Colombia in the Sept. 5 speech in which he will detail his administration's plan to battle drugs.

In Washington, Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said that he supports the administration's decision and that the United States must be united with Colombia in the drug fight.

"The drug problem will not be solved solely through the use of military measures," Mitchell said in a statement. Nevertheless, he added, "the drug dealers cannot be allowed to prevail in this struggle simply because they are willing to ignore all norms of civil society."

INCIDENT

"Harsh words were exchanged ... and I think that's where the thing started," the detective said.

Walkenshaw said detectives are closer to tracking down the owner of the gun one of the suspects allegedly wielded during the attack.

The "cooperative" suspect who talked to police will be formally arrested and charged when other suspects are, the detective said.

The suspects face third degree aggravated assault and criminal mischief charges when arrested.

Two windshields were smashed during the brawl, Walkenshaw said.

Appeal said unlikely in Soldier of Fortune case

HOUSTON (AP) — The attorney for relatives of a slain woman whose death resulted in a multimillion-dollar judgment against Soldier of Fortune magazine said Friday it was unlikely he would take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court after a federal appeals court threw out the award.

"We are considering it, but it is doubtful," Ronald Franklin said. "The 5th Circuit (Court of Appeals) intentionally structured its opinion to preclude any further consideration of the measure."

The New Orleans-based appeals court last week overturned a Houston jury's 1988 award of $9.4 million to relatives of Sandra Black, who was murdered by a mercenary hired through a classified ad in Soldier of Fortune.

The court ruled the jury had imposed too high a standard on the magazine, adding that publishers could be discouraged from running other ambiguously worded ads if the award were upheld.

Robert Black was convicted of hiring hit man John Wayne Hearn to kill his wife, Sandra Black, in February 1985 through an ad. Robert Black is now on Texas' death row and Hearn is in Florida serving three life sentences for the Sandra Black killing and two other murders.

Soldier of Fortune attorneys argued before the appeals court there was no way the magazine's publishers could have known the ad, run in 1984, was a solicitation for murder and hailed the 5th Circuit ruling as a First Amendment victory.

"It's really sad," Franklin said. "They (the appeals court) completely missed the proper analysis of Texas state law. It's sad because they completely ignored the jury findings of a unanimous jury. It's sad because they never looked at the evidence that prompted a jury to award $7.5 million in punitive damages.

"And it's sad because we won't have the Supreme Court of the United States look at an issue that's important to everyone."

Franklin said people should be interested in preventing publications from running unclear personal services ads.

He speculated that the only ads that might be liable now are ones that specifically say something like: "I will kill your wife for money."

"It's foolish to believe that an advertiser is going to do something that blatant," he said.

Houston politicians argue over Leland succession

HOUSTON (AP) — As U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland was being buried in Houston, local politicians began arguing over how his successor will be selected.

Leland was killed in a plane crash in Ethiopia more than two weeks ago. The popular six-term congressman was buried Thursday in Houston.

Shortly before Leland's burial Thursday, state Rep. Ron Wilson appeared on a radio talk show to criticize Harris County Commissioner El Franco Lee and state Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, for setting up a committee to screen hopefuls for Leland's seat.

Lee and Washington decided on their own to interview candidates and make endorsements.

Friday afternoon Washington announced he was running for Leland's seat.

"The process that Franco and I had set up to screen candidates is the best way of going about and it still is. Every time I went through that process in my mind and came up with potential candidates ... (one) capable of filling in for Mickey Leland was missing and that's me."

Washington said he is undecided whether he will resign his state senate seat.

Wilson, who won't say if he'll run in the Nov. 7 race to fill Leland's vacancy, accused Lee and Washington of becoming a "political elite" trying to dictate a Leland successor.

"We need to keep this process open for everyone," he said.

Lee is defending the process, saying the screening sessions were "not intended to preclude or exclude, just codify."

But Wilson contended the effort was meant to "control and to put the control in the hands of a few people, rather than allowing voters to decide."

"We've come a long way to try to open up the process to everyone, and to try to hold a screening meeting in some secret place with a videotape, and limit access and have it conducted by elected officials, seems to me to really go backwards instead of forward," Wilson said.

Three potential candidates who already hold office elsewhere are emerging as likely entries into the race for the 18th congressional district.

Houston City Councilman Anthony Hall says he's "inclined favorably" to run.

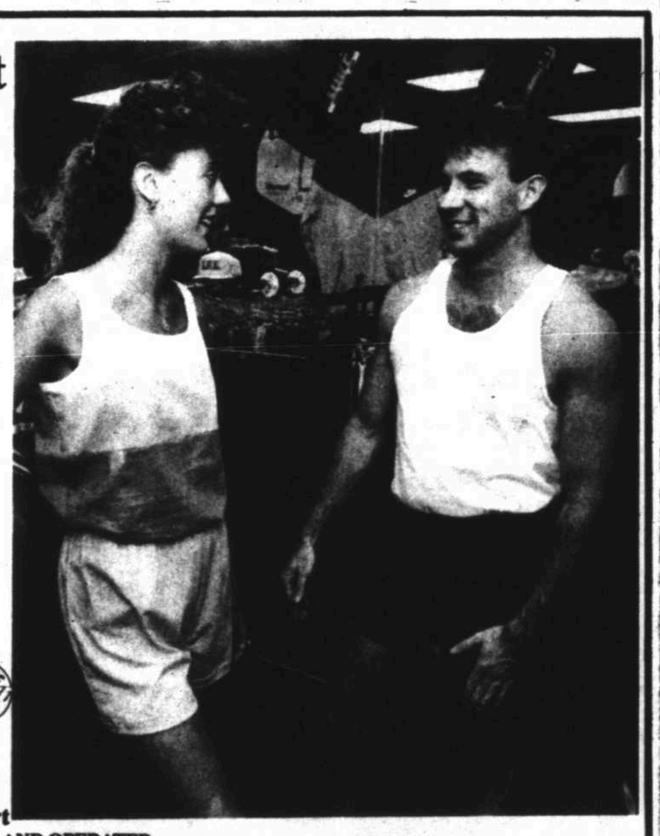

Asked if he will run, Justice of the Peace Al Green said, "I think so."

And state Rep. Larry Evans, asked if he would run, replied, "If I were a betting man, I'd say 'Yeah.'"

Evans said he had agreed to be interviewed today by Lee, Washington and about a dozen other district residents at Washington's office.

STATE IN BRIEF

Poor Texans can't afford legal counsel, justice says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Many poor Texans, especially along the Mexico border, can't afford legal counsel and thus have limited access to the judicial process, the chief justice of the Texas Supreme Court said Friday.

"I'm concerned about legal access even to the middle class," Chief Justice Tom Phillips said. "I think our rules about getting to trial are too complicated."

Phillips spoke to about 250 people at the Texas Association of Hospital Governing Boards' Fall Conference in San Antonio. Phillips said most of the money for legal services for the poor comes from the federal government.

The judicial process in Texas causes litigants to spend too much time and money just getting to trial, Phillips said.

"We are reaching a crisis point," he said. "People don't feel that they can go to court to get justice."

State courts will play a more powerful role in the 1990s, said Phillips, who cited cases pending before the Texas Supreme Court such as education finance, the right to fire employees without cause and alcohol warning labels.

Judge finds drifter guilty

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A judge Friday found a drifter guilty of first-degree murder in the beating death of a 24-year-old Texas woman who had been working as an intern reporter at the local newspaper.

Rodney Woidtke, 28, formerly of Bakersfield, Calif., was convicted of killing Audrey Cardenas, who had been in town only 11 days when she disappeared June 19, 1988.

Her nude body was found in a dry creek bed a week later by a custodian at Belleville Township High School East. Ms. Cardenas, a recent graduate of Texas A&M University at College Station, had come to Illinois to work for the Belleville News-Democrat.

Judge Richard A. Aguirre, who presided over the five-day bench trial, set a sentencing date of Sept. 28. Woidtke could face a 20-to 60-year sentence.

In closing arguments earlier Friday, defense attorney Brian K. Trentmann said police made Woidtke a scapegoat in the slaying and failed to fully examine the possibility of other suspects.

Anti-takeover move stopped

WACO (AP) — A federal judge Friday ruled against Farmers Insurance Group's attempt to throw a wrench in takeover plans by a British investment group.

At issue is the right of a state agency, in this case the Texas Insurance Commissioner, to review a takeover bid involving foreign companies. Hoylake Investments of London has made a takeover offer for Farmers' parent company, BAT Industries, also based in Britain. Farmers' is based in California.

Hoylake has filed lawsuits in Texas and eight other states claiming that it is unconstitutional to subject Hoylake's takeover bid to state regulatory review. The company's position is that the Hoylake takeover offer is strictly a British securities transaction out of the reach of state regulatory review.

Farmers' had filed motions to dismiss Hoylake's case in Texas. U.S. District Judge Walter Smith denied that request Friday At the same time, Smith denied Hoylake's request for a preliminary injunction against the state insurance commission review.

Hoylake said it would appeal the judge's ruling as soon as possible.

Hoylake attorney Laurence Tribe characterized the takeover bid as a "wholly-foreign securities transaction." Subjecting it to state agency reviews "not only exceeds the constitutional limitations on state authority, but imposes an unfair burden on foreign companies," he said.

Third of students fail TEAMS

AUSTIN (AP) — More than one-third of the public school seniors who took the May 1989 minimum skills test required to receive a diploma failed the examination, the Texas Education Agency reported Friday.

The agency said 64 percent of the 11,660 seniors taking the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills in May passed the mathematics and English sections of the exam, up slightly from the 63 percent who passed the May 1988 test.

However, 4,170, or 36 percent, of the seniors who took the test failed one or both sections of the exam and thus were not eligible to graduate.

Fifty-three percent of the 47,433 juniors who took the test passed both sections, down slightly from 54 percent in 1988.

But more than 22,000 eleventh graders failed to master one or both sections of the test and will require remediation during their senior year, the agency said.

In the fall of 1988, 209,095 students were tested and 151,458, or 72 percent, passed, state Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said.

James Cross denied parole

AUSTIN (AP) — James C. Cross Jr., who was sentenced to an 80-year prison term in the 1965 murder of a University of Texas student, was denied parole Friday by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Cross was convicted in 1967 in the death of Susan Rigsby of Dallas, after his first conviction and life sentence were overturned. He has served 23 years of his sentence.

He was denied parole on a 3-3 vote by the board, said spokeswoman Karin Armstrong. Under state law, a majority vote is required to parole an inmate.

Cross, 46, has been denied parole at least 15 times, Ms. Armstrong said.

Ms. Rigsby and her Chi Omega sorority sister, Shirley Stark of Dallas, were killed on July 18, 1965, after arriving in Austin for the university's second summer session.

According to Cross's confession, admitted as evidence in the trial, he attacked the women after they came to use the shower in his apartment. Cross and Ms. Stark were acquaintances.

As the women emerged separately from the shower, Cross attacked and strangled them.

Group to raise English issue with candidates

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the American Ethnic Coalition said Friday the coalition would inject "18 magic words" into the 1990 political campaigns by asking candidates how they stand on making English the official language of Texas.

All candidates will be asked if they would support the following on a non-binding referendum: "Should English be the official language in which the business and affairs of government are conducted in Texas?"

Chairman Lou Zaeske of Bryan also told a news conference the coalition is asking the leadership of the Democratic and Republican parties to ask their candidates to refrain from campaigning for office in a foreign language.

Fred Gray of Pasadena, chairman emeritus of the coalition, said Republican gubernatorial candidate Kent Hance "wholeheartedly" endorses a referendum on official English.

Gray said U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, "supports official English," and possible GOP lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher of Houston endorses a non-binding or binding referendum on the issue.

Frank calls trying to aid prostitute 'a mistake'

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Barney Frank said Friday he was trying to change the life of a male prostitute he had once patronized when he hired him as a personal aide, and later felt duped when he suspected the man was selling sex from Frank's Washington apartment.

Frank

Frank, a Democrat who disclosed his homosexuality in May 1987, said he became friends with the man after their first paid encounter, and was trying to wean him from a life of drugs and prostitution. He fired the man in August 1987 when it appeared his effort had failed.

"Thinking I was going to be Henry Higgins and trying to turn him into Pygmalion was the biggest mistake I ever made," Frank, 49, said during a news conference at his office in this Boston suburb. He referred to the character in the play "Pygmalion" and the musical based on it, "My Fair Lady," a professor who tries to turn a poor London woman into a lady.

He also said Steve Gobie offered on three occasions to arrange sex partners and Frank declined. "His suggestion that he was procuring sex partners for me is a lie," Frank said.

The incident was disclosed in Friday's editions of The Washington Times. Frank, 49, said he had no intention of resigning or dropping plans to run for re-election next year. But the state Republican Party said he should quit.

"I don't think I'm going to be heavily penalized by the voters for being suckered by a guy I was trying to help," he said.

In an interview on Washington, D.C., television station WUSA, a man identifying himself as Gobie repeated charges that Frank was aware of the sexual activities at the apartment.

"He knew what was taking place. He knew there were clients coming to his house. As long as the clients weren't there when he was there, that was no problem," Gobie said.

"These appointments and meetings were of a sexual nature," he said.

The only other member of Congress to publicly acknowledge being a homosexual, Rep. Gerry Studds, easily won re-election after being censured by the House in 1983 for an affair 10 years earlier with a 17-year-old male House page. Like Frank, Studds is a Democrat from Massachusetts.

After acknowledging his sexual orientation, Frank won election to his fifth term in 1988 with 70 percent of the vote in the state's 4th District.

Denver officer says problems prompted him to disappear

DENVER (AP) — A Denver police officer who turned up in Utah after a week-long manhunt told investigators Friday his financial and personal problems compelled him to abandon his patrol car and head west on a motorcycle.

David Hayhurst, 39, who had gotten a new apartment and a job at an auto-body shop in Reno, Nev., said he decided to return home after reading a newspaper account of the manhunt and deciding "I couldn't do this to all those good people in Denver."

"I just took off. I'm just sorry that I did it," he told KMGH-TV while en route to Denver, escorted by two police detectives. "I should have got some help somewhere. I didn't know where else to turn."

Hayhurst was in uniform when he phoned authorities and his family Thursday night from a convenience store in Salt Lake City.

Hayhurst's abandoned patrol car was found in southwest Denver early Aug. 18, its motor running, lights on and driver's door open. Investigators initially theorized that the 17-year veteran had been kidnapped following a routine traffic stop.

At a news conference Friday, Denver Police Chief Ari Zavaras said Hayhurst cited personal and financial pressures in admitting he walked away from the patrol car, hopped on a motorcycle and left Denver, planning never to return.

"He ... said he was under such pressure that he just couldn't handle it anymore," Zavaras said.

Zavaras said he has placed Hayhurst on paid administrative leave and ordered him to undergo psychological and physical examinations. He said Hayhurst could be reprimanded or fired after the tests. Hayhurst said he hoped to remain on the force.

After arriving in Denver Friday morning, Hayhurst met with his family for half an hour at police headquarters.

Principal loses job over link with call boy

CHEVY CHASE, Md. (AP) — An elementary school principal who admitted he let a male prostitute use offices in the building has been suspended and will not be allowed to return to work there, the president of the school board said Friday.

And in the narrow neighborhood streets that surround Chevy Chase Elementary School in this upscale suburb of Washington, D.C., few people were aware of what went on for several months since Gabriel Massaro became principal two years ago.

Massaro, who was suspended with pay from his job after school officials read an article about his activities in The Washington Times Friday, admitted in an interview with the newspaper he had a four-year relationship with a call-boy and gave him access to facilities at the school.

The prostitute, who the newspaper said used the alias of Greg Davis, was identified Friday by Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., as Steve Gobie. Frank said he had a two-year relationship with the prostitute, beginning in 1985.

Massaro was not at home and was not at the school on Friday.

"Right now he is suspended and there will be an acting principal in the school on Monday," said James Cronin, president of the Montgomery County School Board. "So far as the children are concerned, his presence won't be a factor.

"What will happen in the future, I don't know," Cronin added. "But I think it will be safe to say he will not return to Chevy Chase Elementary."

Debra Wood, co-chair of the Chevy Chase Elementary School PTA, said "I really don't have any comment. The matter is under investigation. It's unfortunate ... kind of takes you by surprise. And it's too bad."

The prostitute told the Times he had used a guidance counselor's office at the school, usually in the evenings, where he used the telephone to set up appointments with his customers. He said he did not have contact with any of the children in the school, which has students in grades three through six.

Massaro said he did not know the man was engaged in arranging prostitution services from the building.

"I knew he was an escort, but I didn't know he was running an escort service," he told the Times. "I couldn't condone it from going out of here (the school) ... He may have done that, but I did not know that."

The prostitute told the newspaper that the principal "was very aware of what I was doing and what was going on."

He also said that on at least one occasion he performed a homosexual act with a client in the guidance counselor's office. The prostitute said Massaro did not know "that I had met a client at the school."

"There were some afternoons where he just had nowhere to go, so I would just let him come here to the school and just use the bathroom and stuff like that."

The principal said he ended his relationship with the call-boy after the call-boy had misused his credit card.

"I just used very poor judgment. What can I tell you," Massaro told the Times. "It was just stupid. I never thought it through. I just thought I was helping somebody."

In an interview with a Washington television station, WUSA, Gobie said "categorically" that no children were ever involved in any of his activities at the school.

He admitted he has been convicted on felony sex and drug charges in Virginia, and said he went public on the relationship with Massaro and Frank because he wants to sell his story to the entertainment industry.

People living around the school and Massaro's neighbors in Rockville, another nearby Maryland community, said nothing at the school or in the principal's behavior offered a clue as to what had been going on.

Montgomery, Ala., police officers arrest Jeffrey A. Shannon, 23, Thursday night for disrupting a prayer given by Mayor Emory Folmar before a high school football game. Six persons were ejected from the game after the demonstration.

Prayer protesters ejected from school stadium

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The mayor prayed on the 50-yard line as 10 protesters blew horns and jeered in one of the first gridiron confrontations over a court ban on invocations at high school athletic events.

Mayor Emory Folmar's prayer ended with six people being escorted out of Cramton Bowl for sounding airhorns. One protester was arrested for struggling as he was led out of the stands.

Folmar said Friday his actions were justified by the response of the 5,000 fans who attended the high school football game. Most cheered at the end of prayers by Folmar and County Commission Chairman Bill Joseph.

"I didn't know it was big news. We've been praying at football games for 50 years. I wasn't trying to make a point," said Folmar, a conservative and former chairman of the Alabama Republican Party.

But a civil libertarian said the Thursday night episode highlighted the difficulty Southerners have dealing with religious diversity and a Jan. 3 ruling by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The court ruled that prayers before school-sponsored events violate the constitutional principle of separation of church and state.

On May 30, the U.S. Supreme Court let stand that decision, which upheld a student's lawsuit to prevent pre-game prayers in Douglas County, Ga. The ruling affected only Florida, Georgia and Alabama, and was largely ignored until the Supreme Court refused to overturn it.

"I am a Southerner, and traditionally in the South we have been so homogeneous religiously that people are unable to put themselves in the place of the minority," said University of Alabama law professor Martha Morgan, a state board member of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Whatever the interpretation of the pre-game ceremony, it appears the issue will wind up back in court.

Olivia Turner, state director for the ACLU, said a lawsuit over the prayers was "highly likely."

"We're going to fight the charge of harassing police," said Jeff Shannon, 23, the college student who spent more than an hour in jail following his arrest on that charge at Thursday night's game.

Since the Supreme Court decision, many school systems in Florida, Georgia and Alabama have expressed displeasure with the ruling while saying they would abide by it.

In Childersburg Thursday night, a group of about 100 people led fans in a spontaneous recitation of the Lord's Prayer during a game between B.B. Comer High School and Childersburg High.

This week, all across Alabama, radio stations are broadcasting prayers at 6:55 p.m. — five minutes before most prep games start — and are asking fans to take portable radios to the stadiums.

Mayor Folmar, however, decided to take it a step further before the season opener between Robert E. Lee High School and Jess Lanier High. He walked onto the field, took the public address microphone and led the crowd in prayer.

"We thank you Lord that we do live in a free land, a free land where we can pray," said Folmar.

NATION IN BRIEF

Lawyer says couple was afraid to seek help for son

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — A couple accused of letting their teenage son starve to death feared seeking outside aid because authorities did not help years earlier after their children were abused, a defense attorney said Friday.

"The evidence will show the entire family knew what will happen if they did not eat ... that a person without food for a long time will die," public defender Al Flora said in opening arguments in the third-degree murder case.

But Larry and Leona Cottam were too scared to turn to outsiders for food because they were afraid the children would be taken from them and hurt, Flora said.

Eric Cottam, 14, died in January and his parents and 12-year-old sister, Laura, were hospitalized after a six-week fast. The family went without food despite having saved $3,775 they said was a tithe belonging to God, police said.

Assistant District Attorney Ann Cianflone told the jury that the family wanted to eat. She said Eric had tried to stay alive by eating roots from the yard and hiding a frying pan and oil in his bedroom.

"All the evidence will show that for a six-week period of time, Larry and Leona Cottam did nothing to get out of the situation they were in," she said.

Mrs. Cottam wept quietly throughout opening arguments.

Underwater wonders listed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A list of the "seven underwater wonders of the world" was announced by a panel of marine experts Friday with the aim of focusing public attention on protecting the world's underwater environment.

"If a concerted effort is not undertaken soon to protect and preserve our underwater wonders, they — like the classic Seven Wonders of the World — could be lost forever through carelessness, negligence or deliberate mistreatment," said Rick Sammon, president of the sponsoring organization, CEDAM International.

The seven underwater wonders, selected Friday by the 14-member panel of marine scientists, conservationists and explorers, are:

Palau, an island group in Micronesia; the northern Red Sea; the Great Barrier Reef of Australia; the waters of the Galapagos Islands off the coast of Ecuador; Lake Baikal in Siberia; the Belize Barrier Reef; and the deep ocean vents in the middle of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

5 charged in black's killing

NEW YORK (AP) — Five young white men were charged Friday as members of the gang that killed a black teen-ager in a rage against interracial dating, and a sixth suspect was being sought, police said.

Police would not say if the man being sought is the person who shot Yusef Hawkins Wednesday.

Addicted mother gets 15 years of probation

SANFORD, Fla. (AP) — A judge Friday imposed 15 years of probation on a cocaine-addicted mother convicted of delivering drugs to two of her children at birth.

Jennifer Johnson, 23, faced a 30-year prison sentence on the conviction under a law usually applied to criminals engaged in illegal drug transactions.

"I don't have any desire to hurt you. ... I'm not here to put you in prison," Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr. told Ms. Johnson before handing down the sentence, which includes at least one year in the residential drug-treatment program she is now attending.

Ms. Johnson is believed to be the first mother in Florida — and one of only a few in the country — convicted of providing drugs to their newborns under a criminal drug-dealing law.

In a non-jury trial last month, Eaton determined that Ms. Johnson had delivered cocaine to her babies through their umbilical cords. He acquitted her of a child-abuse count.

The children — a boy born in 1987 and a girl born in January — are cared for by relatives and are described as in in good health. But scientists have said that cocaine can cause neurological problems, premature birth and even death in newborns.

Justifying the conviction under the statute which prohibits "delivery" of an illegal substance from one person to another, the judge ruled that "a child who is born but whose umbilical cord has not (yet) been severed is a person" within Florida law.

Other terms of the lengthy probation period included one year of strict supervision by probation officers during the rehabilitation program, random drug testing at least once a month for a year, educational and vocational training, an intense prenatal program if she should become pregnant again and 200 hours of community service.

Ms. Johnson, a slim, bespectacled woman with a ready smile, declined the judge's invitation to speak about her problem. But in response to the judge's question as to whether she believed she was getting some benefit from the drug-treatment program, she said, "Yes sir, I just feel a lot of pressure."

Prosecutor Jeff Deen, who said the case would set a precedent in Florida, had recommended strict compliance with the drug-treatment program and lengthy probation. He had called it "a child-abuse case, not a drug case."

"We want to send a message not of fear, but of hope" to drug-addicted mothers to take care of their problems, Deen told the judge.

"She's used up all her chances," the prosecutor said.

Monkeys lose cocaine interest after buprenorphine shots, researcher says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pain-reliever that causes laboratory monkeys to lose interest in cocaine may now be tested to see if it can help human addicts lose the craving for drugs, researchers say in an article published today.

Researchers at a Harvard Medical School drug abuse research center report that five Rhesus monkeys that had been dosing themselves regularly with cocaine chose to ignore the drug after receiving injections of buprenorphine. The study appears in the journal Science.

Dr. Jack H. Mendelson, a co-investigator in the research, said as a result of the animals' response to buprenorphine, clinical studies are proposed to determine if the analgesic will help people overcome dependence on cocaine and heroin.

"We feel that it (buprenorphine) may provide an opportunity for some persons to stop using cocaine and not feel the adverse effects of cessation," Mendelson said in a telephone interview. "This would provide a window in time for someone who might be able to stop using the drug and ultimately become drug-free."

In the laboratory studies, five Rhesus monkeys were fitted with intravenous catheters that were connected to pumps operated by levers. Each monkey, if it chose to, could press the lever and receive a small dose of cocaine.

"The monkeys self-administer cocaine, but are under no compulsion to do so," Mendelson said. "It is completely an elective act."

He said earlier studies showed that when given this choice, nine out of 10 Rhesus monkeys will press the lever for cocaine, though they will choose not to self-administer some other types of pharmaceuticals.

Mendelson said that when the five test monkeys received injections of buprenorphine, their cocaine use rapidly declined, and approached zero use at some doses of the buprenorphine.

When a type of placebo, saline solution, was injected, the monkeys chose to press the cocaine lever repeatedly.

"The placebo didn't do anything," Mendelson said. "But the buprenorphine suppressed the cocaine self-administration."

At the same time, he said, the monkeys continued to press another lever to receive banana pellets, and otherwise behaved normally while taking the buprenorphine.

"It doesn't produce the behavior changes and its safety is enormous."

Mendelson said buprenorphine may be particularly useful in weaning abusers away from "speedball," a combination of heroin and cocaine that is becoming more widely used by drug-dependent people.

Confidence growing in blood supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing understanding about AIDS is building Americans' confidence in the safety of the nation's blood supply, but many still believe it is likely they could get the disease by receiving or donating blood, said a poll released Tuesday.

The poll conducted for the American Association of Blood Banks found that 66 percent think the blood supply is safer today than five years ago, up from 56 percent last year and 44 percent in 1985 when screening for AIDS in blood donations began.

The survey shows "the American public understands the steps being taken to protect the blood supply," said Laurence A. Sherman, president of the association.

He said, however, gaps remain in the public's understanding.

More than half of those surveyed, 52 percent, said they believe it is unlikely they could get AIDS from a blood transfusion. However, 44 percent considered it likely.

In fact, Sherman said, the chances of getting AIDS from a transfusion are extremely low. Since 1985, public health officials estimate that about 60 people have been infected with the virus through transfusions, a tiny fraction of the 4 million to 5 million transfusions performed each year in the United States.

"We're not happy with 60," but that is far lower than the 30,000 that are believed to have been infected before procedures were initiated to screen out AIDS-contaminated blood, said Gilbert Clark, executive director of the association.

"The American public wants zero risk...but zero risk is unattainable," as with any medical procedure, he said.

Blood banks receive about 12 million blood donations a year.

Three-quarters of those polled said it was unlikely someone could get AIDS from donating blood, but 20 percent erroneously believed it was likely.

Sherman noted that the proportion of the public believing AIDS could be transmitted while giving blood has dropped from 34 percent in 1985, but he said this faulty belief has made if more difficult to recruit blood donors.

Overall, the nation's blood supply is "marginal" and the amount of blood in the system has been unchanged for the last several years.

He said that donating takes more time today than it did before 1985 because blood banks require more detailed questioning of donors as part of the AIDS-screening efforts.

Among the other findings:

- Contracting AIDS through a transfusion and difficulties during recurperation shared second place, each cited by 17 percent, as the greatest concerns in the case of an operation. The top concern, 27 percent, was complications due to errors made by doctors and medical staff. Sixteen percent cited complications from anesthesia.
- 41 percent said they feel they have "a lot" of accurate information about AIDS, up 4 points from last year and 20 points since 1985.
- 16 percent of those polled said they personally knew someone infected with the AIDS virus, but 82 said they did not.

Bush's fishing buddy lets president break in lures

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — Bob Boilard likes nothing better than using President Bush as a guinea pig for his homemade fishing lures.

Boilard

"I make lures for myself, and...I make him my official tester,'" Boilard said.

In an interview at his nearby Biddeford home, the 64-year-old retired Navy man said he made a string of mackerel flies to give the president over the weekend while Bush is at his oceanfront home.

"I'll say, 'Good luck. If we don't catch anything, we'll get rid of them,'" Boilard said.

He showed off a variety of lures, some made from old spoons and forks, and said, "You're seeing some of the stuff the president's going to fish with."

And how well does the president fish?

"You wouldn't put him in the class of the bass masters or what have you, although he's been down there with the bass people, and that's mostly what his fishing was, prior to this saltwater involvement," Boilard said.

"But, oh, yes. He's attentive, and he's got the patience. A lot of people say he hasn't got the patience, but I know."

One problem Boilard has encountered while fishing with Bush has been the disruptive presence of Secret Service agents in other boats. But he finally persuaded Bush to lessen the interference by getting the agents to stay off to the side, instead of traveling in the wake of Bush's boat.

Boilard said he met Bush accidentally near the Saco River in 1983, not long after he retired as a mechanic at the nearby Portsmouth Naval Shipyard.

"We met in the ocean," Boilard recalled. "I was fishing out at Wood Island out there at the mouth of the river, and I was just minding my business.

"I didn't notice anyone else around and I heard a voice behind me, and I was playing a bluefish at the time...and I heard this voice behind me: 'What are you catching them on please? Oh, please, what are you catching them on?' I turned around and said, 'Oh my gosh.'"

After comparing lures for a few moments, Boilard told Bush, then vice president, to follow him for a good fishing spot.

"So we took off and went 100 yards, 150 yards...I was king of the heap."

Boilard recalls that Bush gave him his private phone number at the family estate in Walkers Point and asked him to call with fishing tips.

Since then, they have been fishing when they can and exchanging letters when they're unable to fish.

In one letter to Boilard dated Feb. 24, 1988, Bush wrote:

"Dear Bob: Articles on both blues and mackerels made me think of you. It was great seeing you in New Hampshire. Bob, I'm going to win, but I'll promise you one thing. It won't affect our fishing together."

But Boilard acknowledges Bush doesn't always have a lot of time for fishing:

"You know the hardest thing in the world is to get that guy out there for some time to be able to fish, to do the fishing."

Businessman plans to rent out waddlers for charity

DEMING, N.M. (AP) — The man they call Mister Duck is ducking out on the Deming Duck Race this year.

Robert Duck, a seven-time winner, said he's afraid his participation again this year could cause competitors to quack in their boots. Instead he plans to rent 60 of his waddlers to others this weekend for $5 apiece, with proceeds going to charity.

"We've won seven of the last nine years, and last year we made a clean sweep of all three places," Duck said.

"People get reluctant to participate if they don't think they have a chance to win."

Duck, an Albuquerque businessman, puts his charges through six weeks of intensive training before each race and pays close heed to bloodlines.

"I stick to registered ducks," Duck said. "Mine are all in the American Quarter-Duck Association."

Race officials expect 400 ducks to join in two days of racing.

"Everyone who's been trying to beat Duck all these years has added to their flocks and seems determined to win," said George Hoskins of the Deming Chamber of Commerce.

The world's richest duck race began in 1980 and has grown into a three-day festival, including a beauty contest for people dressed as ducks, an outhouse race and a tortilla toss for which the record is 322 feet.

The ducks race on the lawn of the Luna County Courthouse, along 16-foot, straight-line tracks.

The fastest fowl wins $2,000. In all, $7,500 in prize money will be distributed.

Clinic brings medicine to rural areas

PROGRESO, Texas (AP) — Miles from doctors' offices in Mercedes or Weslaco, Progreso residents line up outside a big, white 18-wheel trailer parked behind the Catholic Church.

Here a mother of five may be screened for cervical cancer, a 13-year-old boy will learn about hygiene and his changing body, and an elderly gentleman may discover and learn to control his diabetes.

It's the Hidalgo County Health Clinic, where, in a few feet of space, a nurse practitioner, nurse and clerk battle the poverty of the border with up-to-date, if somewhat compacted, medical technology.

"I like the challenge," said nurse practitioner and director Cecilia Hinojosa. "You never know what problem will walk through the door next. Every day is unique."

Daily they come to the clinic on wheels with complaints ranging from ear infections to tonsillitis to head lice.

Since the clinic opened in May, Ms. Hinojosa said they've learned to work with what resources they have. "We make the best of the room we have," she said. "The patients understand our limitations. And we're bringing medical assistance a lot closer to them."

Referrals to the dental program, infant stimulation program and the adult clinic are the most common. Referrals are limited by the patients' ability to pay, though.

"Most of the patients are unable to pay for a private physician" said Ms. Hinojosa.

Education plays an important role at the mobile clinic. Women learn to examine their breasts each month, and men learn to monitor their own bodies for testicular cancer.

"We talk to them about it, give them literature if they are able to read...we do get a few who cannot," Ms. Hinojosa said.

As a member of the board for the American Cancer Society, Ms. Hinojosa speaks with authority. However, she adds, "We have to convince them it's not just something we're making up."

The UT Health Sciences Center in Houston is the largest contributor to the clinic, part of its "Valley Project."

The center provides the rig, totally remodeled from a mobile hearing testing clinic. It also pays Ms. Hinojosa's salary.

Hidalgo County contributes $25,000 to its operation, and the state adds $50,000 for supplies and support staff.

"It's a great deal for the county," said county health director Dr. Charles Wilson. "We're very fortunate we stumbled into this."

Wilson added that the rig sat unused on a government parking lot for six years until Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby noticed the line item in his budget and sought a use for the facility.

Health officials plan to tour the rural areas of the county with month-long stops at each destination.

Vendors say business either 'good or bad'

ALICE, Texas (AP) — Evaristo Pina says selling watermelons from his 1982 pickup in 100-degree plus weather can be profitable. But only if customers decide to stop.

"It's a good or bad situation either way you look at it," the Alice resident said of selling his produce along Highway 44 west of Alice. "People want a bargain so they stop. Others don't, so they browse."

Pina, 58, who started parking his truck on the busy thoroughfare in 1987 after securing a vendor's permit, says the art of selling to passing motorists often tests one's patience rather than one's craft.

"It's a simple matter of sitting and waiting," he said with a frown from the seat of his pickup. "But I look at it as a part of the trade. If you want to sell, you have to sit. Like they say in Spanish, 'entre verde y seco,' 'good or bad.'"

Raymond Ramirez, a 64-year-old Falfurrias resident who sells cantaloupes, squash and watermelons from his truck a few feet away, agrees.

"The stop is definitely worth the time, and among the more profitable spots in the area," he said from the caliche roadway adjacent from the Tex-Mex railway line. "If you don't have a permit, you can't sell. That just makes it that much more profitable."

While the hot weather may have its disadvantages, both Pina and Ramirez say customers, rich and poor alike, often stop for a "cool" watermelon to take home or as a gift.

"People don't realize just how popular watermelons really are. It's a great food that rarely lasts long."

Ramirez, who makes the trip on occasion with his grandson Freddy, a 15-year-old Falfurrias High School student who shares the work with his grandfather, said he stocks as many as 50 melons a day, with prices ranging from one to two dollars.

"We just load the truck up and head out here," he said with a smile.

Most of the melons, Ramirez said, are purchased in Falfurrias or are handpicked from area fields. The pair work the roadside from 7 a.m. to late in the evening — rarely leaving their concession — keeping a close eye on the passing stream of automobiles.

"We see them come and go. All day long. One after another," he said.

A third vendor, Jose Marquez, 49, of Alice, says he often stays longer but stocks as many as 62 melons daily.

Texas League West race still tight as ever

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Jim McCollom, left, is greeted by Danny Grunhard, center, and San Antonio catcher Homar Rojas following McCollom's first home run of the season Friday night at Angel Stadium. McCollom, the 1988 Texas League batting champion who has been on the disabled list all season, has just returned to action with the Angels.

Angels slam Missions, 17-12, remain one-game behind Wichita

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

Ugly, hideous and sloppy probably aren't strong enough words to describe the Midland Angels' 17-12 win over the San Antonio Missions in Texas League football, er, baseball action Friday at Angels Stadium, but they'll have to do.

Friday's "win" allowed the Angels to keep pace with the first-place Wichita Wranglers with three days left in the still-torrid Texas League West race. Wichita defeated the El Paso Diablos, 5-4, Friday to all but knock the third-place Diablos out of the race.

But Midland needs help from the Diablos, because Manager Max Oliveras' Angels are still one game behind Wichita with three to play. In effect, Midland must win one more game than Wichita during the next three days to have a chance at a tie.

The teams combined for 12 errors and 13 bases on balls. In addition, there was a variety of other faux pas that were not statiscally measurable — such as losing foul balls in the lights or letting catchable balls drop in front of one's shoes.

Despite four errors and general sloppiness throughout the game, the Angels were glad to get away with the win.

"It's a win and we'll take them that way, but we can do better than this," Oliveras said.

"It was an ugly game, but we won and that's what matters," first baseman Jim McCollom said.

Though McCollom wasn't immune from the tragedy of errors, last year's Texas League batting champion unloaded off San Antonio reliever Kevin Campbell for a two-run home run in the second inning and a two-run single in the third to give the Angels enough of a cushion. He later added a RBI single in the seventh for some insurance.

Friday's game was only McCollom's seventh game back in Midland after missing most of the season in the wake of surgery to remove a cyst on his rib cage.

Rose convicted by media

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

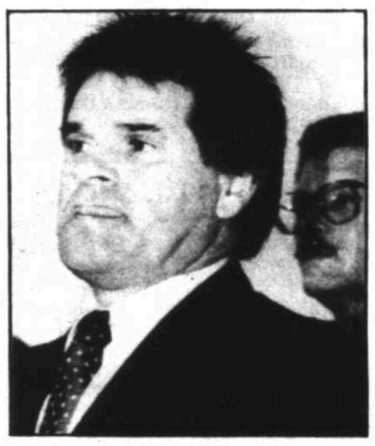

Still protesting his innocence, Pete Rose was found guilty beyond a reasonable doubt Friday by the sports writers and newspapers who covered him for 24 years as a player.

There was no sympathy for Charlie Hustle, only vilification for a man called everything from "some night animal caught in headlights" to "a street corner hooker."

"Shed no tears for Pete Rose," the Miami Herald said in an editorial. "The Cincinnati Reds manager, suspended from baseball 'for life' yesterday, was paid handsomely by the game that he graced then betrayed."

Few sports columnists or editorialists seriously expect Rose to return to baseball in the near future, although he has the right to appeal for reinstatement in a year. His gambling was too dangerous to the game, they said.

"Pete Rose is banned for life from baseball for gambling, and everyone except Pete Rose knows it," the Baltimore Sun wrote.

Pete Rose

Rose avoided a formal hearing by signing an agreement with baseball. Under its terms, he accepted lifetime banishment. In return, he doesn't have to admit he gambled on the game or his own team.

Why, he was asked at a news conference, would he accept a life sentence if he was innocent?

"And Pete Rose, baseball's Dead End Kid for 30 years, said nothing right there," wrote New York Daily news columnist Mike Lupica. "His mouth would not open. He wasn't the guy who ran over Ray Fosse in an All-Star Game for show and ruined a career, or the guy who got into it with Buddy Harrelson, or the one who broke Ty Cobb's record. He wasn't so tough.

Valvano asked to step down as AD

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano was asked Friday to resign as athletic director by the university system president, who also called for better drug testing, open booster club books and tighter adherence to academic rules.

"The evidence is clear that the academic processes and standards of North Carolina State University have been misused in a number of instances to benefit some individual players," said C.D. Spangler Jr., president of the University of North Carolina system.

Spangler said he wanted Valvano to step down as athletic director no later than Dec. 31. Valvano said Thursday he would resign if asked to do so, but in speaking with reporters at a news conference Friday evening would not give specifics on when he would step aside.

"From what I do understand, this was given to committee in the (N.C. State) board of trustees," Valvano said. "So I fully expect to work with them to implement that decision."

Valvano said he takes full responsibility and accountability for the department, but said he would like to help in solving the problems brought out in the Poole Commission report.

"I'll be the first to admit that if I've been part of the problem, one of the reasons I'm here today is that I want to be a part of the solution," Valvano said.

The Board of Governors met for about three hours in closed session before unanimously approving the report, which now becomes policy for the UNC System.

A resolution adopted unanimously by the board said, in part:

"The Board of Governors is not satisfied with the way the basketball program has been conducted at North Carolina State University by the administration and the athletic department, and in order to correct that problem and similar problems arising anywhere in the university system, the recommendations of the president are adopted to the end that academic integrity be assured."

The report says that no coach of any sport may serve as athletic director. Also affected by the decision are Jeff Mullins, basketball coach and athletic director at North Carolina-Charlotte, and Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines, basketball coach and athletic director at Winston-Salem State University. Their jobs must be separated by July 1, 1990.

"It is essential that the athletic director be in an unambiguous position," Spangler said. "Mr. Valvano has served without pay in this position ... but I believe that is a responsibility he should not carry along with his duties as a coach."

Irving says no to beer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Irving City Council members have rejected a request from Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones for the sale of beer and wine at Cowboys games.

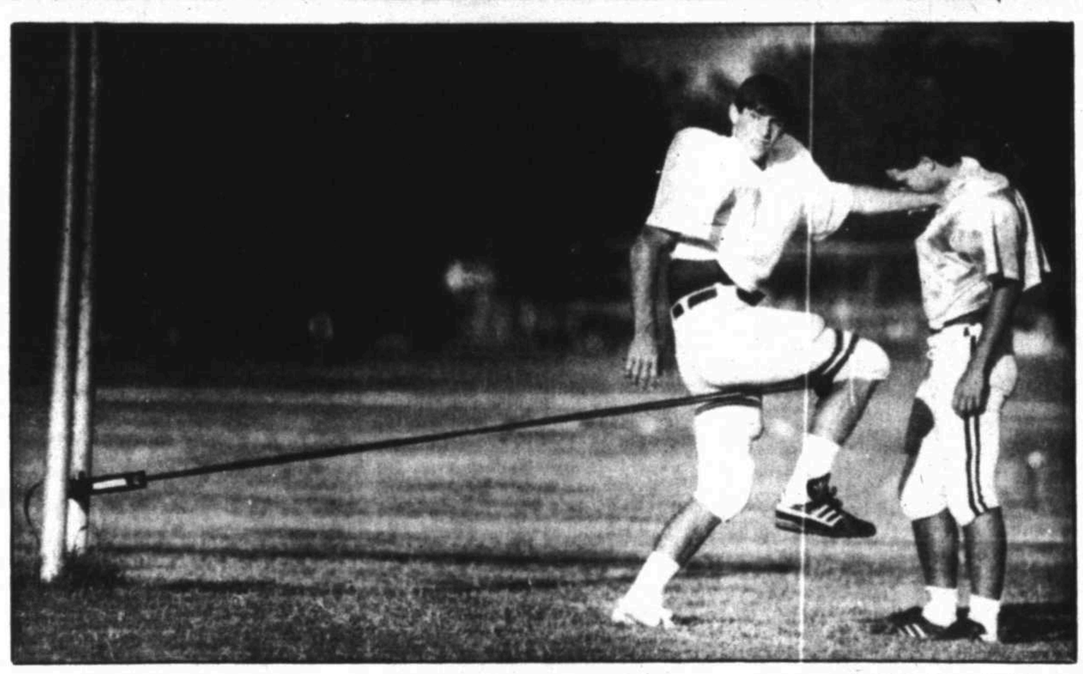

The council voted Thursday to prevent Texas Stadium Corp. from seeking a zoning variance allowing the sale of alcoholic beverages at the stadium.

Jones wanted to sell beer and wine at the stadium. The 18-year-old facility has always been dry and is the only NFL stadium where beer is not sold.

Texas Stadium is owned by the city of Irving.

"As long as Mr. Jones chooses to play football games with his football team in Texas Stadium, I think it would behoove him to understand the community that owns that stadium and be compatible with the fiber of that community," Councilman John Danish said.

Under Irving's current zoning law, only "fine restaurants" may sell alcohol.

One thing's for sure: Don't ever bet against Pete Rose

When I was a kid growing up in Irving, the guys who lived around the corner and I would spend fall and winter afternoons and evenings down at Otis Brown Elementary school playing sandlot football. And when we felt really brave, we'd just get out in the middle of Mitchell street and play on the concrete.

Patterson

In the summers, we'd head back down to the school and play baseball.

During those growing-up years, the Dallas area hadn't yet heard of the Texas Rangers, so there weren't any baseball players nearby we were able to look up to.

There were plenty of kids I knew who wanted to grow up to be doctors or firemen or astronauts. But my friends and I, well, we just wanted to be Pete Rose.

Sure, Cincinnati was hundreds of miles away, but we all knew who Pete was. Pete was the guy who taught us how to slide head first. He was the guy who taught us how to knock the bejeebers out of a catcher if he got in the way of home plate. Pete taught us how to run to first base after drawing a walk.

And now that we're grown up, Pete has taught us something new. Several new things, really. There's no need to go into all the sordid details again, just let it be said that Pete sort of ruined that childhood role model image that all of us thirtysomething types had back in the late 60s and early 70s.

Pete Rose could flat-out play baseball. He would do whatever necessary to cross the plate. Batting from both sides and running with reckless abandon. His style of play is without equal in the 80s. Forget the betting controversy for a moment — Pete deserves to be in baseball's Hall of Fame.

He deserves it simply because of the way he used to play the game, and what he used to mean to baseball. His career record 4,256 hits. A 44-game hitting streak. Twelve All-time Major League records.

Regardless of how guilty he is of gambling now, it'll take years to find his equal on the field. Wade Boggs and Jose Canseco and Kirby Puckett and Tony Gwynne can hit, but none of them have the desire Pete had.

Maybe I just don't want to believe Pete bet on baseball or the Reds. Maybe I'm voting with my heart. Maybe because he meant so much to me and all the other guys when we were kids, I wouldn't be able to understand keeping him from the Hall.

If he vote on baseball and the Reds, banishment from participation in the game for life is appropriate. But only if he makes no progress in his treatment.

And he should get treatment. And baseball should help him. Bart Giamatti should cough up the money to send Rose to Gambler's Anonymous or whatever, the same way Peter Ueberroth saw to it to rehabilitate others with drug and alcohol problems.

If Pete can stay clean for a year, that's fine. But a year away from Dial-A-Bookie is not a sign that he has kicked his problem. Maybe two, three or five years from now, if he still has resisted the urge, then he should be allowed to apply for reinstatement. But not as manager. Put him back in as a scout or a hitting instructor and make him work his way back up through the ranks again.

And, isn't it a bit hypocritical of some of us in the sports business that we condemn Pete Rose in articles placed in the very same sports pages that carry the bookmakers' latest odds?

When the Rose betting scandal broke last February, there was another issue that came to forefront: Rose was a less-than-perfect father. He didn't know his son's phone number, much less ever call him. The papers shouted out how he never took time to be with his kids because he was too wrapped up in himself, his baseball or his bookie. Hey, if the guy has a betting problem, that's punishable. If he's a bad dad, that's personal. That's his problem and he and the family need to deal with it. It didn't deserve to be front page news.

I feel sorry for Pete. He hurt himself, his fans, and little guys who used to play sandlot baseball at elementary schoolyards everywhere. I feel sorry for him because his livelihood — his very life, for that matter — has been snatched away from him. Granted, he's to blame for losing that livelihood.

Don't ever bet against Pete Rose, though. As much as he loved baseball, and as hard as he worked for everything he achieved, don't ever count him out. He may just recover after all. And that's all anyone can ever hope for.

Royals make a move on first in AL West

Mark Gubicza stretched his scoreless streak against Oakland to 34 innings as the Kansas City Royals beat the Athletics 3-1 Friday night and closed to within 3½ games of the first in the American League West.

Oakland, which lost to Texas 6-2 on Thursday, dropped consecutive games for the first time since July 24-25.

Gubicza, 12-10, allowed four hits in seven innings, struck out five and walked one as Kansas City won for the 10th time in 11 games. Terry Leach pitched a hitless eighth and Jeff Montgomery finished for his 14th save.

Montgomery struck out Mark McGwire, giving the reliever at least one strikeout in 28 consecutive appearances. He gave up a run-scoring single to Stan Javier.

Mike Moore, 16-7, lost for the second time in 10 decisions and fell to 2-6 lifetime against the Royals. He allowed eight hits in 7 1-3 innings, struck out three and walked one.

Kansas City went ahead in the sixth with an unearned run. Bob Boone singled with one out and took second second when right fielder Jose Canseco allowed the ball to roll under his glove for an error. One out later, Willie Wilson singled and Boone scored just ahead of Canseco's throw.

Jim Eisenreich singled and scored on Danny Tartabull's double in the seventh. Pinch-runner Gary Thurman took third on a groundout and scored on Frank White's suicide squeeze.

Angels 4, Rangers 1

Slumping Brian Downing broke open a scoreless game with a three-run double in the sixth inning and the California Angels beat the Texas Rangers.

Kirk McCaskill, 14-7, pitched 6 1-3 innings before leaving with an unspecified injury. He gave up five hits and is 4-1 in August.

Greg Minton finished with hitless relief for his eighth save as the Angels moved back within one game of Oakland in the American League West.

McCaskill and Bobby Witt, 10-11, each gave up no runs on three hits for five innings. But Witt walked three batters with one out in the sixth and Downing, in a 4-for-41 rut, hit a two-out double into the left-field corner.

The Angels scored again in the seventh as Devon White singled with two outs, stole his third base of the game and came home when center fielder Jeff Kunkel dropped Claudell Washington's fly ball for a two-base error.

Steve Buechele broke up McCaskill's bid for a league-leading fifth shutout with a 445-foot home run with one out in the seventh. Kunkel then reached on shortstop Kent Anderson's error and, with a 3-2 count on pinch hitter Rick Leach, McCaskill left the game.

AL Roundup

Blue Jays 3, Brewers 1

Jimmy Key and Tom Henke combined on a three-hitter and Ernie Whitt hit a three-run homer as Toronto beat the Milwaukee Brewers before 49,457 fans, a Blue Jays' record.

Toronto won its fourth straight game and sent Milwaukee to its fourth consecutive loss.

Key, 9-13, gave up three hits in seven innings in his second appearance since coming off the disabled list. He struck out six with no walks.

White Sox 5, Indians 4

Dave Gallagher's two-runs single capped a four-run seventh inning and rallied the Chicago White Sox over the Cleveland Indians.

The White Sox overcame a 4-1 deficit in the seventh, helped by second baseman Jerry Browne's error.

Richard Dotson, 4-7, gave up four runs, two of them unearned, on seven hits in 7 1-3 innings. He is 2-2 in 10 starts since joining the White Sox in late June. Bobby Thigpen finished for his 27th save.

Twins 2, Mariners 1

Mike Dyer allowed four hits in seven innings and Jeff Reardon got his 25th save as the Minnesota Twins beat Seattle and sent the Mariners to their ninth consecutive loss.

Dyer, 2-3, allowed four hits in seven innings, struck out seven and walked one. Jeff Reardon got five outs for his 25th save, finishing the combined five-hitter.

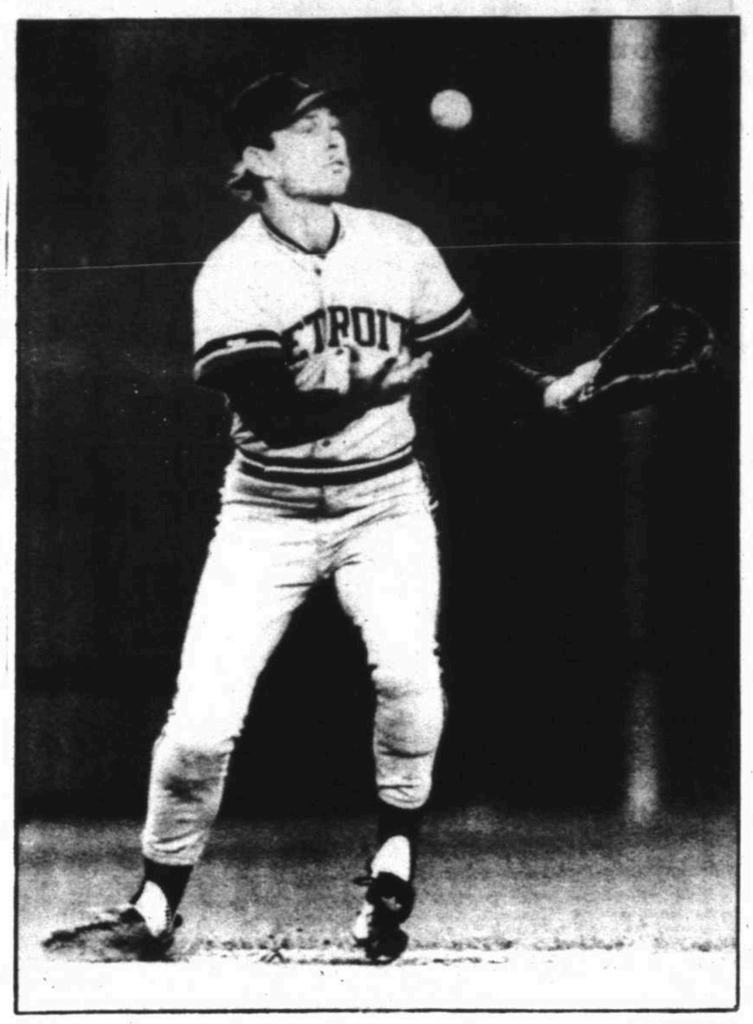

First baseman Alvin Davis' first-inning error allowed Minnesota to take the lead and Dan Gladden hit a run-scoring single in the third. Kirby Puckett, who scored the second run, singled twice for his 57th multiple-hit game of the season.

Orioles 3, Yankees 1

Jeff Ballard became Baltimore's top winner in three years with relief help from Gregg Olson as the Orioles beat the New York Yankees.

Baltimore maintained it 1½-game lead over Toronto in the American League East. The Yankees fell to 58-72, the first time they've been under .500 since the last day of the 1967 season.

Ballard, 14-6, gave up 10 hits and left after rookies Hensley Meulens' RBI single with two outs in the ninth inning. Olson retired Steve Sax on a grounder with two runners on base for his 20th save.

Red Sox 4, Tigers 2
Red Sox 11, Tigers 3

Mike Greenwell drove in four runs and Jody Reed had three hits as the Boston Red Sox beat the Detroit Tigers and completed a doubleheader sweep.

Reed also had three hits in the first game, including his second home run of the season, as Boston beat Detroit 4-2. Ellis Burks also homered and Mike Smithson, 7-12, allowed one run in seven innings.

Cubs end six-game losing streak

Associated Press

Ryne Sandberg's run-scoring single with one out in the 12th inning gave Chicago a victory over the Atlanta Braves, snapping the Cubs' six-game losing streak.

Catcher Rich Wrona, recalled up earlier in the day to replace the injured Damon Berryhill, led off the 12th with a single to left. Domingo Ramos sacrificed and Jerome Walton was given an intentional walk before Sandberg bounced a single to left field off reliever Mark Eichhorn, 4-4.

Mitch Williams, 3-2, pitched one inning for the victory.

Dale Murphy gave the Braves a 3-2 lead in the eighth with his 18th homer on a pitch from reliever Les Lancaster.

The Cubs tied it in the bottom of the eighth when Sandberg drew a walk from John Smoltz. After Lloyd McClendon flied out, rookie Mike Stanton replaced Smoltz and Mark Grace fouled to third.

Joe Boever relieved and threw a wild pitch allowing Sandberg to take second. Andre Dawson followed with a double to tie the score.

Smoltz allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings and struck out four.

Lonnie Smith put the Braves ahead 1-0 in the first inning with his 19th home run but the Cubs rallied with two runs in the bottom of the inning.

Walton singled, stole second and scored on a double by McClendon, who came home on Grace's single.

Jeff Treadway led off the Braves' sixth with a single off starter Mike Bielecki and Smith walked, and one out later, the runners advanced on a passed ball. After, Darrell Evans was intentionally walked, Lancaster relieved and got a grounder to force Treadway at the plate. Jeff Blauser then walked to force in a run.

After the Cubs scored twice in the first, Smoltz retired 12 straight before giving up a walk to Bielecki with one out in the fifth. Walton singled but Sandberg flied out and McClendon lined to Smoltz.

Pirates 12, Reds 3

The Cincinnati Reds, playing their first game since Pete Rose was banned from baseball for life, lost to the Pittsburgh Pirates as Gary Redus hit for the cycle.

A crowd of 25,722 brought only a few reminders of Rose to Riverfront Stadium — a sign that said "Thanks Pete For 4,256," his final hit total, and another that simply said, "14."

Fourteen was Rose's uniform number. It also was the number of hits the Pirates rolled up in the first six innings, on their way to a total of 17.

Interim manager Tommy Helms, who took over after Rose was banished Thursday, was cheered loudly when he came out of the dugout for the first time — to remove starter Rick Mahler after the Reds fell behind 7-0 in the fourth inning.

Redus, a former Red, became the first Pittsburgh player to hit for the cycle since Mike Easler did it on June 12, 1980, in Cincinnati. Redus got an infield single in the second inning, hit a three-run homer in the third, doubled in the fifth and tripled in the seventh.

Redus finished 4-for-5, scored three runs and drove in four. He went 3-for-5 Thursday night in a 6-1 victory over Houston. His homer, his fourth of the season, highlighted a six-run third inning.

Jeff Robinson, 6-11, snapped a personal five-game losing streak by allowing 10 hits and three runs over 6 2-3 innings. It was his first victory since July 3.

Mahler, 9-13, was hit hard in his fifth straight loss, giving up nine hits and eight runs in 3 2-3 innings.

Cardinals 7, Astros 4

Jose DeLeon got his career-high 14th victory and the St. Louis Cardinals roughed up Mike Scott and Houston, the Astros' fourth straight loss.

DeLeon, 14-11, struck out seven, raising his National League-leading total to 165, in 8 2-3 innings. He gave up seven hits and walked two. DeLeon's previous top win total was 13, accomplished last season.

Scott, 17-7, again failed to become the first 18-game winner in the major leagues.

The Astros scored three runs in the ninth. Harry Spilman and Glenn Wilson hit doubles and Ken Caminiti's RBI single with two outs finished DeLeon. Pinch hitter Glenn Davis doubled home a run off Todd Worrell.

Piniella turned down Yankee job

By PHIL COLLIER
Copley News Service

An authoritative source says Lou Piniella turned down an invitation to replace Dallas Green as manager of the Yankees, preferring to remain in the club's broadcast booth.

Piniella would like to manage again, but not for George Steinbrenner, who has fired him twice.

Green insisted on not having a personal services clause in the two-year contract he signed last winter, so he'll be paid through 1990 without having to do anything for the Yankees.

Ousted coaches Frank Howard, Charlie Fox, Pat Corrales and Lee Elia had only one-year contracts. The Yankees asked Howard to take over the Columbus farm club in place of Bucky Dent, who has succeeded Green, but Howard said no.

FUMING REDS

The Cincinnati Reds are sore at new NL president Bill White for not taking any public action against umpire Joe West for twice pushing second baseman Ron Oester during a post-game argument August 15.

"Pete (Reds manager Pete Rose) was suspended for 30 days last year for pushing an umpire," Oester said. "This (West's actions) is no different."

This time, Rose got between Oester and West and pushed West with his left arm.

"I'm not an expert on shoving umpires," Rose said. "But I did it once and paid dearly for it."

Rival manager Don Zimmer of the Cubs witnessed the Oester-West-Rose confrontation and may have influenced White's thinking by siding with Oester and Rose.

JOHN'S PATIENCE

At 46, Tommy John continues to work out three days a week in New Jersey in hopes some team will need pitching help down the stretch. The Yankees released John in early season.

QUIXOTIC QUIRK

Here's an example of the shortage of major league talent: The Royals had given up on Jamie Quirk when they released him last fall. Quirk was released by both the Yankees and A's earlier this season before hooking on with Baltimore, his fourth team in the last 10 months.

POLONIA NOT THE FIRST

The recent arrest of Yankee outfielder Luis Polonia for allegedly having sex with a 15-year-old girl is merely the latest in a line of similar baseball incidents.

Houston's Sondra Renfroe filed a paternity suit against Dave Winfield and was awarded a goodly share of the Yankee outfielder's multi-million salary. Also, Mike Tyson's mother-in-law accused Winfield of giving her herpes.

Former Yankee pitcher Marshall Bridges once was shot in the foot by his wife.

In the 1970's, Cincinnati pitcher Teddy Davidson, one of the game's real flakes, was shot by his wife. When Davidson regained consciousness in the hospital, he said: "She had great stuff tonight. She was firing bullets."

Some 15 years ago, Yankee pitchers Mike Kekich and Fritz Peterson swapped wives.

In 1949, girl friend Ruth Steinhagen shot Phils first baseman Eddie Waitkus in his Chicago hotel room.

In 1932, Cubs infielder Billy Jurgess was shot three times in his Chicago hotel room by showgirl Violet Valli.

VENGEFUL BREWERS

The Milwaukee Brewers are out to get rookie Yankee outfielder Marcus Lawton for putting a roll block on second baseman Jim Gantner, who is out for the season after undergoing career-threatening knee surgery. "That's not even legal in football," said veteran Paul Molitor.

MULTIPLY BY SEVEN

The majors' youngest manager, Nick Leyva of the Phils, turned 36 Wednesday and admitted that handling a last-place team has taken its toll.

"I feel 10 years older than I did last August," Leyva said. "They should figure managers' ages the way they do dogs — multiply each year by seven.

"My foremost concern has been with the issue of academic integrity," Spangler said, adding that he also wanted booster clubs — such as N.C. State's Wolfpack Club — to make public their annual audits.

Spangler said the four-man commission he appointed to probe allegations about the basketball program determined there were no violations of N.C. State academic rules. But he said the spirit of the system was violated. One irregularity was the use of "incomplete" grades to allow players to remain technically eligible to play.

"The system has been misused," he said.

Spangler said some players merely registered for classes with the intent of remaining eligible but they never intended to receive a degree.

" ... a part of North Carolina State's problems can be traced to the lack of enforcement," he said. "When a basketball team member is allowed to cut corners, to skip classes, or to commit other infractions, the problem is not easily corrected if there are no penalties relating to his participation in basketball."

Spangler also called for a mandatory drug testing program. He said he had "serious doubts about the adequacy" of the college's voluntary, nonpunitive drug testing program.

Cowboys, Falcons talk Pelleur

DALLAS (AP) — Despite reports that Dallas Cowboys holdout quarterback Steve Pelleur would rather not play football in Atlanta, discussions to trade him to the Falcons continued Friday, his new agent said.

Leigh Steinberg said he had preliminary discussions with Jim Hay, vice president and chief financial officer of the Falcons, Friday afternoon and expected to talk to him more Friday night.

"We are exploring the best opportunity for Steve in a football sense and in terms of a place that would be attractive to play," Steinberg said in a telephone interview from his Los Angeles office.

Steinberg, who represented retired former Falcon quarterback Steve Bartkowski, said he is familiar with Atlanta organization.

Pelleur dropped Joe Courrege as his agent Thursday and hired Steinberg, an agent for several of the National Football League's top quarterbacks, including Cowboys rookie Troy Aikman.

Steinberg said Kansas City is also being explored as a possible trade opportunity.

Newspapers reported Thursday that Pelleur would prefer a trade to the Chiefs, where he would have the opportunity to start.

NFL Preseason

WASHINGTON (AP) — After enduring a frustrating preseason in which he had completed only 47 percent of his passes, Washington Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien took advantage of a porous Miami secondary to get back on track.

Rypien completed 13 of 16 passes and Willard Reaves scored two touchdowns Friday night as the Redskins kept the Dolphins winless in preseason play with a 35-21 victory.

Rypien was 3-of-14 against the Minnesota Vikings on Monday night, but he completed his first five passes against the Dolphins and directed three long scoring drives in the first half to help Washington take a 21-7 lead.

"He smoothed things out pretty well," Gibbs said of Rypien. "Last week we couldn't get any kind of sync. This time, everything we did was good."

Rypien quickly exited the locker room without talking to reporters.

The victory enabled Washington to effectively erase the memories of Monday night's 24-13 loss to the Vikings.

"I think it's a sign we're not going to lay down and die," said Redskins defensive end Dexter Manley. "We're cussing and fighting to come back."

Speaking of coming back, the Dolphins made a bid to earn their first preseason victory by using a 13-yard touchdown pass from Cliff Stoudt to Deval Glover and J.B. Brown's 6-yard run with a blocked punt to close to within 28-21 with 4:48 left in the game.

The Redskins wrapped things up, however, when Joe Howard took the ensuing kickoff 94 yards for a score.

Miami, which used quarterback Dan Marino only in the first half, fell to 0-3. Marino completed 11 of 20 passes for 126 yards and one touchdown.

"We're going to have to continue to work," said Dolphins coach Don Shula. "We realize we have a long way to go, especially on defense, where we're just not anywhere close to where we have to be in order to win. Our run and pass defense could not stop them."

The Redskins, 3-1, marched 75 yards for a touchdown on the their first possession of the game. Gerald Riggs accounted for 43 of those yards on seven rushes, the final carry a 9-yard touchdown run behind a crushing block by tight end Terry Orr.

Riggs sat out the rest of the game, but his replacement, Jamie Morris, enhanced his chances of making the team by running for 69 yards in 10 tries.

Morris gained 32 yards in an 80-yard drive that gave Washington a 14-0 lead with 8:23 left in the second quarter. The 13-play drive was capped by Reaves' 2-yard run over left tackle.

Crenshaw holds lead in NEC golf

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr.
New York Times News Service

AKRON, Ohio — Ben Crenshaw didn't play nearly as well Friday as he did Thursday.

But he still managed to hold on to the lead in the NEC World Series of Golf halfway through this $1 million tournament with a 45-man select field of winners from around the world.

The 37-year-old Texan, who shot 64 in the first round when he chipped in twice and needed only 20 putts, struggled for a two-over-par 72 and four-under 136 that shaved his lead from three to two shots on the Firestone Country Club South Course with par 70.

There was an impressive three-some tied in close pursuit at 138: Greg Norman, winner of last week's International, who charged back from nine shots off the first-round lead; the British Open champion, Mark Calcavecchia, and David Frost of South Africa.

Sheehan leads ladies

BUFORD, Ga. (AP) — Patty Sheehan birdied three of the last four holes to complete a 6-under-par 66 and take the lead halfway through the LPGA World Championship of Women's golf Friday.

Sheehan, winner of 20 events in 10 pro seasons, had a 36-hole score of 136, eight shots under par on the hilly, 6,107-yard PineIsle Resort course along the shores of Lake Lanier.

"I like to play this golf course because you can make a lot of birdies," Sheehan said. "It's like shooting darts out there."

Sheehan held a one-shot lead over Betsy King, a five-time winner this year and the season's leading money winner. King shot a 71 for 137.

Charles, Coody share PGA Seniors' lead

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two-time defending champion Bob Charles and Charles Coody each shot 6-under-par 66s Friday to share the first-round lead of the $300,000 Sunwest Bank-Charley Pride Senior tournament.

Charles and Coody went to the front on a day that saw 35 of the 72 players equal or break par on the par-72, 6,686-yard long Four Hills Country Club course.

Charles, a three-time winner and the second leading money earner on the Senior circuit this season, broke out of a three-week slump with a round that included seven birdies, one bogey and 29 putts.

Schultz's eagle good for Chattanooga lead

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Ted Schulz rolled in a 40-foot eagle putt on the eighth hole Friday to cap a 7-under-par round of 63 and take a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the Hamilton County-Chattanooga Classic.

Schulz, who had a first-round 66 over the par-70, 6,640-yard Valleybrook Golf and Country Club for a two-round total of 129, leads Don Shirey by a single stroke.

Morris Hatalsky and John Daly are two shots back at 131, while Pat McGowan and Fred Funk are three strokes off the lead at 132.

With rookie backs, Denver can now display backfield

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos' fans should finally get a glimpse of their Dream Backfield this weekend.

Bobby Humphrey and Melvin Bratton, a pair of prized rookie running backs, can be expected to line up in the same backfield for at least a few plays against the Dallas Cowboys here Saturday night.

"I'm excited about looking at them," coach Dan Reeves said. "They should be in there together some of the time. Melvin has had a few plays, but it's the first live action for Bobby. I'm sure it will help him get over the butterflies."

Humphrey, Denver's No. 1 pick in the supplemental draft, signed with the team just a week ago. Bratton, a seventh-round draft choice who was projected as a first-rounder prior to a serious knee injury, has been with the team only a few days longer.

They'll join quarterback John Elway in the backfield. Elway, in need of some playing time after appearing for only two brief series in the preseason opener and sitting out last week's game when his knee brace turned up missing, is scheduled to play three quarters against the Cowboys.

Reeves said five running backs will get the bulk of the work Saturday night. Steve Sewell and Jeff Alexander will start in the backfield with Elway. Humphrey and Gerald Willhite will rotate in at halfback, with Bratton spelling Alexander at fullback.

"We've got more good backs than we've ever had," Elway observed. "We haven't seen enough of Bratton and Humphrey. We already know what Sammy (Winder) can do."

The Broncos bring a 1-1 record into the game, having beaten the Los Angeles Rams 17-13 before bowing to San Francisco 35-17.

Dallas is 2-0, boasting a 20-3 triumph over San Diego and a 27-20 defeat of the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Cowboys have their own dream backfield of Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh, although the two rookie quarterbacks don't, of course, play at the same time.

Aikman, the first player taken in this year's draft, will play the first half Saturday night. Walsh, Dallas' No. 1 pick in the supplemental draft, will play the second half.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson refuses to say which of his high-priced quarterbacks has the inside track on the starting job.

"I wouldn't say either one of them has an edge," Johnson said Thursday. "We decided before the preseason that we would evaluate after the Denver game, taking into account their performances throughout training camp.

"It's very close at this time. We're very pleased with both of them, and feel both can be outstanding NFL quarterbacks."

If the battle for No. 1 is truly as close as Johnson says, then Saturday night's game is crucial for both players. Johnson intends to settle on a starter after this game.

Aikman said he wasn't reading anything into his being named the starter for the Denver game. "I started the first game, Steve started the second," he noted. "Somebody has to start and play the first half."

Regardless of who prevails, Aikman said he envisions both quarterbacks "getting to play quite a bit this year. I don't know if the backup will be around next year, though. It would be hard for me to accept the backup role. But I'm not saying I wouldn't accept it."

Johnson admitted he isn't likely to carry two No. 1 draft choices at quarterback indefinitely.

"A couple of years down the road, it would be difficult to have both of them on the club," he said. "We'd probably have to pursue a trade or something. But I don't see anything happening for a year or two."

Johnson said he planned to use running back Herschel Walker for only two-to-four series in the game. "We're using the preseason to evaluate," he said, "but I don't need to evaluate Herschel. I just want him to be comfortable with the offense. We'll blend him in on some plays."

TL championships still up in the air

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Texas Baseball League championship series will begin either Thursday or Saturday, depending on what happens the next few days, league president Carl Sawatski said Friday.

The Arkansas Travelers and the Wichita Pilots won first-half titles in the Texas League's eastern and western divisions, respectively, and both teams lead the second half.

Arkansas is involved in a series with second-place Shreveport that will determine the second-half champion while Wichita is playing a series with El Paso, which is tied for second with Midland. Midland and San Antonio are playing a regular season-ending series.

Any of the three teams could end up winning the title in the west.

If a team other than Arkansas or Wichita wins the second half east title, a three-game series will determine the division representative in the seven-game championship series. Division playoffs, if required, begin Wednesday.

If Arkansas and Wichita win the titles without a playoff, the championship series would begin Thursday at Wichita. The first three games are set at the home field of the western division winner with one travel day and the final four games, if needed, at the eastern division champion's field.

If division playoffs are needed, the championship series begins Saturday with three games at the western division site.

ANGELS—

And his season started with such high hopes. McCollom made the California Angels' 40-man roster after edging El Paso's Mario Monico for the TL batting crown, but the nagging rib cage injury that had been bothering him for two years flared up during spring training and ruined a possible shot at making the big club.

The New Yorker was able to take batting practice at Triple-A Edmonton for most of July, and played eight games at Class A Palm Springs earlier this month before receiving the call to Midland when Otto Gonzalez left for Puerto Rico last week.

"My timing is still off," McCollom said. "One at-bat I will feel okay, but I might feel funny on the next."

He's just glad to be in the thick of action after a summer of relative inactivity.

"It feels good to be in a pennant race," McCollom said. He will try to catch with a winter league team in Mexico, but is not optimistic about his chances because he hasn't played all year.

If Mexico doesn't pan out, he'll go back to New York and train for the 1990 season — the first time he will have been able to work out in three winters.

The Angels scored 15 runs in the first three innings on only 10 hits off starter Kevin Armstrong, 8-8, and reliever Campbell. The Missions didn't help themselves any by committing six errors in the first three innings.

On top of that, Armstrong committed an error on an errant pickoff throw, threw two wild pitches and balked once — all in the first inning. And to think he'd thrown 16 consecutive scoreless innings going into Friday's game.

After allowing seven runs in the first inning, Armstrong finally left the game with two on and one out in the second inning when his elbow popped as he was delivering a pitch.

McCollom greeted Campbell with a homer over the left field fence, however.

Angel bats cooled after they scored five runs in the third. Relievers Campbell, Gordie Hershiser and James Wray combined to allow the hosts only two hits and two runs in the final five innings.

Meanwhile, the Missions stayed in the game with the help of four Midland errors and three runs in the second, one each in the third and fourth and two in the seventh that rid them of starter Chris Beasley, 8-4. Midland reliever Vinicio Cedeno then allowed three runs in the eighth and two in the ninth, before Tim McCoy came on to get the final two outs after delivering a bases-loaded walk to score Midland's last run.

Charlie Hustle: A marketable outcast

"He was some night animal caught in headlights. He stared straight ahead, and his mouth wouldn't open. It was the one honest moment of a morning filled with more lies. ... "

While baseball's commissioner, A. Bartlett Giamatti, said he had no doubt that Rose gambled on the Reds, Rose said his banishment resulted from a few, simple mistakes. He would be back soon, he said.

"Who is kidding whom?" syndicated columnist Jerry Izenberg wrote. "For the first time in history, a man called a press conference to say, 'Rip me, I'm innocent.' "

No one believed it.

"How dare Pete Rose insult us," Mark Bradley of the Atlanta Constitution wrote. "How dare he stand before TV cameras, his stupid, spiked hair sticking straight up, and evince no real remorse, take next to no responsibility for his actions and then, blithely and chillingly, say he hopes to be back in baseball posthaste. Having dishonored himself and his sport, all Pete Rose wanted to talk about was how soon he might be reinstated. Gall, thy name is Pete."

Then, only a few hours later, Rose was on a cable television network, selling autographed bats, balls, pictures — virtually anything he could sign except his agreement with the commissioner.

"On the last day of his life in baseball, Pete Rose was doing what he does best," Jim Reeves of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram wrote. "Selling himself like a street corner hooker."

Apparently, the columnists concluded, Rose does not understand what he did to the game and what he continues to do by rejecting the notion of guilt.

"An incomparable sports career has come to a humiliating end, and baseball, the great American pastime, has taken a 90-mile an hour fast ball square in the eye," the Indianapolis Star said in an editorial. "The hurt was made all the worse by Rose's embarrassing and inexplicable statements of innocence just an hour after the commissioner announced the mutually agreed upon sentence."

And, the Baltimore Sun asked: "Doesn't he understand that much? He has lost the big one. It's over. ... Rose, who just received the loudest wake-up call a man could ever hope for, has not yet awakened."

Only insofar that gambling is an illness was there any sympathy at all for Rose. Rose, though, denied that he's sick and said he won't seek treatment.

"Pete Rose must accept the realities of his personal situation," The State of Columbia, S.C., wrote. "He should swallow his arrogance and pride and seek professional help. Only then can there be serious consideration of his reinstatement and eligibility to the Hall of Fame."

Perhaps, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette suggested, "baseball should take a new look at how it deals with problem gamblers. After all, the sport's drug and alcohol abusers are treated with maximum humanity and minimum penalties. But it will be hard to forget that gambling once almost brought the game down. Enlightenment must not be bought at the cost of the underlying integrity of baseball."

"It is a sad day for Pete Rose," the Post-Gazette said. "But he owed baseball more than he was willing to give it."

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose can make large sums of money off his name, even if he never steps on a baseball field again.

Marketers say Rose's lifetime ban from baseball may actually increase the demand to have the former Cincinnati Reds manager at memorabilia shows and speaking engagements.

"He is so incredibly marketable," said Steven Warshaw, team sports marketing manager for International Management Group in Cleveland. "Look what's going on right now — he's still selling balls and bats on a cable shopping network.

"He's an American hero. He's like Ollie North."

Rose isn't sure what he's going to do without baseball in his life. His lifetime suspension Thursday by Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti bars him from any association with the game.

That may indirectly rule out product endorsements for Rose, whose national endorsements have diminished in recent years anyway. But he's still free to hawk his autograph and make appearances for money — a lucrative source of income for Rose in recent years. Star athletes can make $10,000 off one signing appearance.

"He could just survive off memorabilia shows, the cable shopping networks and appearances," said Warshaw, whose firm represents about 500 athletes, not including Rose. "He doesn't need endorsements."

The lifetime ban apparently hasn't tarnished his marketing image.

Rose appeared on the Cable Value Network out of Minnesota a few hours before his lifetime ban was announced, then flew back a few hours after his farewell news conference to sell more jerseys, bats and baseballs.

It was an odd scene, baseball's banished superstar making money off his name the day he was banned for life. But Warshaw said Rose can cash in on his high profile from baseball's investigation and the lifetime ban.

Bad news is better than no news in marketing stars such as Rose.

"He's hot," Warshaw said. "I think this is the hottest time for him because of the controversy. Any time you have an athlete garnering as many inches in the newspaper, you strike while the iron is hot."

There's another reason for him to jump at financial chances now — his growing troubles with the federal government.

A federal grand jury in Cincinnati has been investigating Rose's tax returns to see if he hid income from gambling and memorabilia sales. Federal prosecutors aren't permitted to talk about grand jury proceedings, and there's been no indication when it might conclude.

A source familiar with the grand jury said the government's investigation has continued while the grand jury has been in session. Chicago radio station WBBM reported Friday that investigators from the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are looking into links between Rose and convicted Chicago bookmaker Dominic Basso.

The radio station also said Rose could be indicted as early as next week.

Rose denied any knowledge of Basso at his farewell news conference Thursday.

"I don't know Dominic Basso," Rose said.

Evidence uncovered by federal and baseball investigators has linked Rose to bookmakers in southwest Ohio, New York and Massachusetts. Rose has admitted placing bets with bookmakers on professional sports other than baseball, but hasn't identified the bookmakers.

Rose's name also was brought up again Friday in the drug and tax evasion trial of former housemate Tommy Gioiosa. A government witness said Gioiosa talked about cashing a winning racetrack ticket that was actually owned by Rose and claiming it on his taxes.

The government alleges that Gioiosa falsely claimed a $47,646 Pik Six ticket from Turfway Park in northern Kentucky on his taxes to reduce the taxes on the winnings. Rose has denied that he owned the ticket.

Government prosecutors have declined to comment on the case, and aren't required to reveal their witness list.

However, he belongs in the Hall

By GEORGE VECSEY
New York Times News Service

Bob Welch, Oakland pitcher, was watching Bart Giamatti and Pete Rose on television the other afternoon when a momentous thought occurred to him: There might be something in this for the kid.

"Hey," Welch asked. "What about the .468 Pete hit off me? Do I get it back? Man, Pete used to wear me out."

The answer was, nice try but it all stands, every hit Rose stroked off Welch and Freddie and Rick and Jerry and Orel and Buff from the old Dodger days.

They were doing their best to get him out, and by every shred of evidence, he was trying, too.

Rose hit .303 against the aggregate of pitchers he faced in his 24 years in the major leagues.

Even though he stands forever disgraced for having bet on baseball games while managing the Reds, he was first of all a great player, and he deserves to be in the Hall of Fame.

Statistics are not everything in baseball, but Rose's 4,256 hits were achieved without a blemish, and are the most in the history of the game.

The commissioner of baseball, A. Bartlett Giamatti, when asked about Rose's eligibility for the hall, said it was up to the baseball writers in their wisdom.

Since Giamatti was, at that very moment, drumming Rose out of organized ball, it was clear the business has no legal barrier against Rose's entering the hall.

Many writers of good conscience may not be able to vote for somebody who broke the gambling rule so blatantly, but I can rationalize separating playing from managing.

Different conditions. Different demands. Different times in Rose's life.

The Hall of Fame has many members who were chosen partly for their good deeds, pioneering, longevity, popularity, and that's all right.

And some of the greatest players had vile habits by somebody's standards: drunks, brawlers, bigots, cardsharps, wife beaters, aiimony skippers, deadbeats and cads, maybe even some cutthroats and horse thieves.

The commissioner brought it up himself that baseball's current rule against gambling on games dates back to "the trouble with Cobb and Speaker in 1926."

They were suspected of being heavily involved in actual conspiracies to throw games, but were later elected to the hall.

Shoeless Joe Jackson and seven mates from the Chicago White Sox were banned from the game for at least knowing of the plot to throw the 1919 World Series.

No matter that Jackson, with the third-highest batting average in history, apparently played to win in that Series.

Despite current efforts on his behalf, his accomplishments must lurk outside the hall, like mist on Lake Otsego.

There was no plot to throw games involving Pete Rose. None of his shady associates has said there was, and the commissioner said he knows of none.

Rose tossed and he lost as a bettor, not a conspirator.

And what of that cocky kid who raced down the first-base line in the muggy Tampa sun one Sunday afternoon in March of 1963? The old fatcat Yankees purred in the dugout and nicknamed him Charlie Hustle. Ha-ha-ha.

Charlie played five positions in the majors, won three batting titles, dived headfirst into bases, and showed generations of kids how to play. How to win.

Later, some of the glory vanished from Charlie Hustle.

He openly cheated on his first wife. He ignored his daughter. He put distance between him and his namesake son.

As his playing days ended, he started a second family with a younger wife.

People tell of the aging Grover Cleveland Alexander on display in a booth near Times Square.

Just as sleazy are the reports of Charlie Hustle slipping off to Atlantic City to sell autographs in his late days as manager, or hustling autographed balls on a consumer television network before and after his dismissal from baseball.

Baseball players do not exactly meet Mother Teresa and Albert Schweitzer and Harriet Tubman and Mohandas Gandhi outside the clubhouse doors, but even Rose's colleagues began to think there was something creepy about the company he kept.

Now Rose must face what he has done to himself.

It is hoped that the same lawyers who stalled baseball for six months before advising him to give it up will now show him how to get help.

In Rose's absence, let us try to remember him sticking his bulldog mug in the dirt as he slid into second base.

Or prowling the dugout before a game, swinging the bat, talking baseball, compelling and funny and knowledgeable, and as far as anybody knows, honest.

Maybe he hit .468 off Bob Welch, or maybe it just seemed that way.

It was .303 against the world, and it still belongs to him, and he still belongs in the Hall of Fame.

Heart surgeon says animal 'liberationists' hurt research

LUBBOCK (AP) — Animal-rights activists who use radical methods such as "liberating" laboratory animals are setting back medical research and could be placing people in danger, heart surgeon Michael DeBakey says.

DeBakey, chancellor of the Baylor College of Medicine and the first surgeon to perform a successful heart bypass, said Thursday that groups like the one that took five cats from a Texas Tech research lab last month "are holding patients hostage."

A group identifying itself as the Animal Liberation Front stole the cats July 4 from the lab of Tech physiology professor John Orem. The thieves spray-painted "Don't mess with Texas animals" on the lab walls.

DeBakey, who agreed to address the animal-rights issue at Tech before the break-in, said at a news conference that people will suffer needlessly if groups like the ALF make it difficult or impossible to experiment on animals.

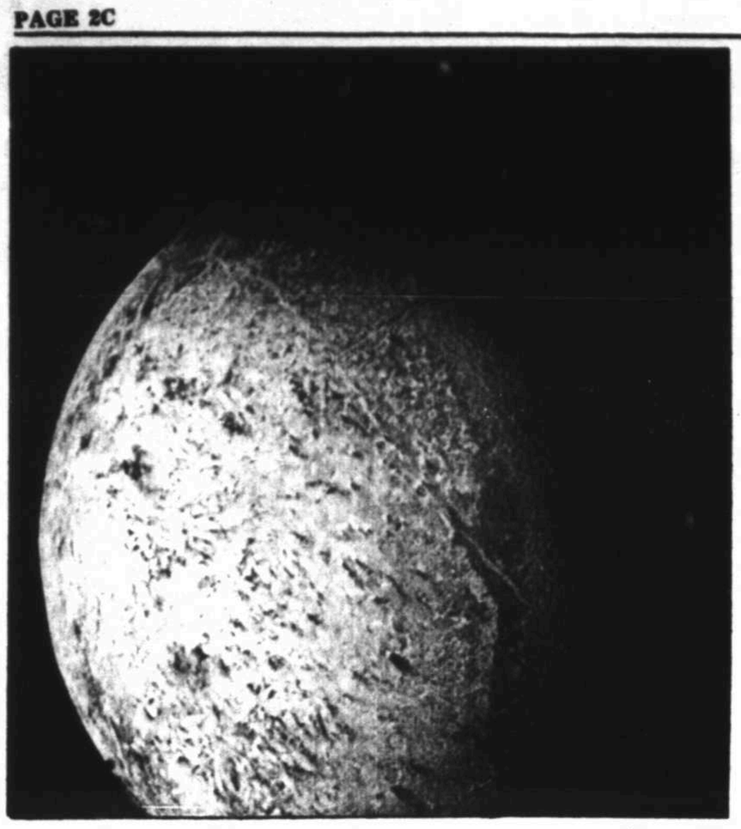

"It's unfortunate the public doesn't realize that in a sense these organizations are holding patients hostage," he said.

He said developments such as the polio vaccine, his heart-bypass and artery replacement procedures, and organ transplants would not have been possible without research on animals first.

He mentioned Orem's research, in which the Tech physiology professor is using cats to examine the neuromechanics of breathing during sleep. The research is intended to discover the causes of sleep apnea — a brief cessation of breathing during sleep — and sudden infant death syndrome, in which babies stop breathing during sleep and die.

"A mother who has a baby that suffers from this would tell you that's a more important problem from her standpoint than the liberation of some cats," DeBakey said.

Members of the Animal Liberation Front have not identified themselves.

20 watts of power travels billions of miles

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The conversion of whisper-faint pulses of radio energy from the outer reaches of the solar system into spectacular color pictures of Neptune have put communications technology to an extraordinary test that it has triumphantly passed.

The radio on Voyager 2 produces only 20 watts of microwave power — barely enough to light the bulb inside a refrigerator. A fundamental law of physics diminishes the strength of this radio signal proportionate to the square of the distance over which it travels — in this case, nearly 2.8 billion miles. The power of Voyager's signal reaching antennas on Earth is 20 billion times as weak as the power of a battery-operated watch.

The technical magic involved in exploiting this puny signal begins aboard the spacecraft itself. Voyager's two television cameras — one for wide-angle images and one for narrow-angle images — break up each picture they record into 800 horizontal scan lines. This provides much finer detail than can be shown on American household television sets, which assemble images from only 525 lines.

Each of Voyager's scan lines is then divided into 800 cells, called pixels. Sensors in the imaging system measure the light content of each pixel in each image, then record the result in terms of a numerical scale, in which 0 represents pure black, 255 is pure white and the intermediate numbers are shades of gray. The intensity of light in each pixel is specified as a binary number — a number made up of a succession of 0s and 1s.

Although the spacecraft's cameras can record images only in black and white, each camera is equipped with a set of color filters; by making and transmitting multiple images of the same subject as seen through different filters, Voyager 2 provides the information needed to reconstruct full-color images.

The spacecraft transmits this digital information in the form of "bits," 0s and 1s reminiscent of the dots and dashes used in Morse-code telegraph communication. Some 5.12 million bits are required to record each black-and-white image in digital form, and the transmission of this information takes time, especially from the great distance of Neptune.

To reduce the load of digital information and its transmission time, scientists in the Voyager project at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, in Pasadena, Calif., devised ways permitting the spacecraft to compress the data needed for each picture by up to 70 percent. To do this, the scientists reprogrammed Voyager 2's on-board computer by remote control.

One of the techniques they used was to break each scan line into five sections, measure the absolute brightness of the first pixel in each section in the conventional way and then measure the difference in brightness between this pixel and all the other pixels in the section. The number of digits needed to express the relatively small differences in brightness is much less than the information needed to describe each pixel independently.

Voyager 2's 12-foot dish antenna sends this stream of data toward Earth on the same microwave frequencies used for radar. The signal is received by a network of enormous antennas about four hours later, the time it takes light to travel from Neptune. Included in the network are four antennas in Australia that are 210 feet in diameter, one in Japan that is 210 feet in diameter, and other antennas in California and Spain.

The faint signals from Voyager 2 picked up by all of these electronic ears are combined and processed by special amplifying equipment, some of which is chilled to near the absolute zero of temperature to reduce electronic noise created by warmth and permit easier measurement of the signal against its noisy background. Earth's atmosphere does not appreciably interfere with the process, although high levels of moisture can degrade the signal.

Finally, computers process the digital information, building up signal strength and weeding out transmission errors in somewhat the way compact-disk music players eliminate numerical errors in digital recordings.

When the digital information has been suitably processed, blended, and filtered by computers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, an operator touches a key and the pictorial result begins to unroll, line by line, on the monitor screen. Mankind has sent its surrogate eye to a mysterious world at the edge of the solar system, and has seen the marvels that are there.

Voyager 2 scientists euphoric over data

By JIM TRANQUADA
New York Times News Service

LA CANADA FLINTRIDGE, Calif. — Voyager 2's close encounter with Neptune and its moons has been hailed by the project's tired-but-jubilant scientists as a triumphant climax to the space probe's 12-year, 4.4 billion-mile tour of the outer planets.

The one-ton space craft swept past Neptune's north pole and photographed volcanoes that once gushed ice lava on the frigid moon Triton, NASA said Friday.

"All we can say now is, wow! What a way to leave the solar system," said U.S. Geological Survey geologist Laurence Soderblum, deputy leader of Voyager's photographic imaging team.

Passing within 3,000 miles of the cold blue clouds of Neptune, Voyager's sensors worked without a hitch and beamed back streams of data to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in this city about five miles northwest of Pasadena.

The show-stoppers Friday included detailed photos of Triton, Neptune's largest moon, which showed that its flat surface is scarred with what appear to be the frozen remains of what scientists called "ice volcanoes."

"Even though Voyager has explored dozens of new worlds, without a question these images have revealed a world unlike any we have seen," said chief scientist Edward Stone.

Despite scientists' public confidence in the aging probe as it approached its close encounter with Neptune, there were some moments of anxiety Thursday night as it neared Neptune at 61,148 mph.

Although the flyby took place at 8:56 p.m., it wasn't until midnight when magnetic field data appeared on the monitors, informing the navigation team that the craft had passed through the debris of the planet's ring belt and was safely on its way over Neptune's north pole.

Because Voyager's photos and data must travel 2.7 billion miles, it takes more than four hours for the radio signal — traveling at the speed of light — to reach Earth.

"We were kind of worried about it," said trajectory engineer Steve Matousek. "After the plasma wave data came across, we all breathed a big sigh of relief."

Almost four hours later, when the first photos of Triton and Neptune's rings appeared, Matousek and every other Voyager scientist remained glued to their monitors, whooping and hollering with excitement.

"Every time a new frame was on the screen, you would hear these roars of excitement from these groups huddled around the monitors," said Dale Cruikshank of the infrared spectrometry team.

"It was spectacular, utterly spectacular," Cruikshank said. "It was beyond spectacular — it's a whole new world."

Added Matousek: "There's really no way to describe what the feeling was."

Fascinated with the new images from Voyager — which focused on Triton, some of the planet's seven other moons, and its two rings — Stone and other scientists were more than 15 minutes late for a 10 a.m. press conference.

"We couldn't resist watching each new image," Stone confessed.

Because the photos of Triton were only hours old, and because many more images and much essential data not due to arrive until later in the weekend, scientists were unable to explain much of what they were seeing.

"This is really just a gee-whiz day," Soderblum said. "It will take a day or two to sort this out. We haven't even begun to look at this stuff."

However, what the photos appeared to show were at least three "ice volcanoes," now inactive, that produced enormous flows of glacier-like ice — perhaps frozen natural gas or nitrogen ice, Soderblum said.

Also visible were large areas covered with smaller, bulbous eruptions of material of an unknown composition.

Alleged dealer held in Newton's murder

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A man described by police as a drug dealer was arrested for investigation of murder in the death of Huey P. Newton, but claimed self-defense in killing the Black Panther founder, police said Friday.

Tyrone Robinson, 25, of Oakland was arrested on a weapons charge around 7 p.m. Tuesday, hours after Newton's predawn murder on a west Oakland sidewalk, and investigators retrieved the weapon used in Newton's killing, police said.

Robinson "considered the murder a means to advance" in the Black Guerilla Family, a narcotics distribution gang, said Sgt. Dan Mercado at a early evening news conference at the Oakland Hall of Justice.

The Black Guerilla Family is a prison-based gang that operates in the state's maximum-security lockups, including San Quentin, where Newton has served time, authorities said.

Robinson admitted to the killing early Friday, Mercado said.

Mercado said Newton argued with Robinson over a cocaine deal and that Robinson then shot the 47-year-old former leader of the black militancy movement in the 1960s.

Robinson contended Newton had a gun when the two met at a street corner in the drug-torn neighborhood, but investigators said they found no evidence Newton had been armed.

Police said Robinson told them Newton demanded drugs and that he refused to sell them to him.

Police said Newton had "crossed" the Black Guerilla Family several times in the past. Investigators believe Newton stole drugs from the gang, including an instance earlier this summer when, Robinson said, he was robbed by Newton of 14 crack cocaine rocks valued at $160.

Mercado said a man accompanying Robinson witnessed the shooting, but police did not divulge whether the man, arrested Friday for investigation of auto theft, backed up Robinson's claim of self-defense.

Police said they had located several other witnesses who disputed Robinson's account of the killing. There have been no other arrests in the case, Mercado said.

Robinson was arrested Tuesday for investigation of felony possession of a firearm about a block from the crime scene. He was questioned about Newton's murder, but was not considered a prime suspect until Thursday.

Two other men were arrested at the same time on weapons violations, but are not considered suspects in the case, Mercado said.

Police denied a report published Thursday that three men had been linked to the killing, but acknowledged for the first time that the men were arrested on weapons charges one block from where Newton was slain about 12 hours earlier.

Lorenzo says he may sell Continental

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo said Friday he was considering a sale of Continental Airlines because the "noise" at strike-torn Eastern Airlines was hurting the sister carrier's business.

Lorenzo

In an interview with The Associated Press, Lorenzo said the sale of part or all of Houston-based Continental was under discussion partly because of the negative impact from Eastern's bitter strike and bankruptcy proceeding.

"We have to be responsible to our shareholders," Lorenzo said in his New York office. "We have an obligation to look for alternatives ... (Continental) has been impacted by the noise level from all of our friends over in Miami."

He made the surprise announcement about Continental late Thursday in response to a question at a company meeting.

Miami-based Eastern has been under Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection since March 9, five days after pilots, Machinists and flight attendants walked off the job. Eastern has been reorganizing as a smaller carrier and has hired non-union workers.

The spillover from the Eastern situation has eroded bookings on Continental flights and cut into its profits in the second quarter, said Lorenzo, whose Texas Air is the parent of the two carriers. Continental showed a net profit of $32.1 million in the quarter, compared with a loss of $150.9 million a year earlier.

Continental could benefit from "distance" from Eastern, Lorenzo said. He cited the success of the Trump Shuttle, which enjoyed a sharp rise in passenger traffic as soon as developer Donald Trump bought it from Eastern in early June for $365 million.

Lorenzo stressed, however, a full or partial sale of Continental are merely being considered as possible options and a final decision hasn't yet been made.

"We have been approached" by parties interested in a possible sale, he said.

Despite the strife at Eastern and Continental's reputation as a fare-cutting carrier with inferior service, Texas Air stock has soared from around $9 or $10 a share at the beginning of the year to over $20 currently. It rose 87½ cents Friday to close at $20.75 on the American Stock Exchange, after jumping as high as $22.25.

Possible buyers of Continental could include Scandinavian Airlines System, which has a 10 percent interest in Texas Air, and Pan Am Corp., which has expressed a desire to merge with another airline.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Group passes 16 resolutions

The Anglican Orthodox Church meeting in General Convention this week in Statesville, N.C., addressed numerous issues and topics of business.

Five amendments to the Constitution and Canons passed a second reading and thus were approved. A tour of the church's properties was conducted and several seminars on the topic of the lay ministry were held.

Sixteen resolutions were passed which are now in public circulation. Resolution Three states opposition to abortion except in the case of medically verified threat to the life of the mother.

Resolution Six decries the situation of AIDS being the first politically protected communicable disease, and calls on the United States government to protect its citizens through strict medical measures and quarantine.

Resolution Eight calls for the federal government to stop all aid to and trade with Communist governments, including the provision of military technology and financing.

Delegates from across the United States as well as foreign countries were in attendance, were recognized, and gave reports on the work of the church in their areas.

The Anglican Orthodox Church was organized in 1963 by the Rt. Rev. James P. Dees, presiding bishop and metropolitan, when he broke off from the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Anyone desiring further information about the church may write to the Anglican Orthodox Church, P.O. Box 128, Statesville, N.C. 28677.

Scholars dispute Roman town's effect on Jesus' life, teachings

RELIGION

ZIPPORI, Israel (AP) — Rival U.S. archaeological teams are unearthing a major Roman-era city near Jesus' boyhood town of Nazareth, but scholars are bitterly divided over how it may have influenced his life and teachings.

James F. Strange, professor of religious studies at the University of South Florida in Tampa, said six seasons of digging show the ancient hilltop city of Sepphoris was a bustling urban center of 35,000 with colonnaded streets, a Roman garrison and a theater.

The city, he says, is certain to have had a major influence on Jesus, who grew up only six miles away, even though the New Testament makes no specific mention of Jesus visiting Sepphoris.

"The question is not so much whether he was here, but how many times?" said Strange, 51, as he rested under a fig tree near the ruins of an ancient Jewish villa that he had recently excavated by his 85-member expedition.

The conclusion he has drawn is that Jesus was influenced at an early age by a sophisticated Roman town with a signficant pagan presence. As a consequence, he believes Jesus' teachings were as attuned to urban audiences as to country folk.

"Does he presuppose an urban audience as much as a rural one? The answer seems to be yes. ... I think we have to give up the concept of a peasant Jesus," he said.

Jesus' exposure to a multicultural society also was likely to have had an impact on later teachings. "It helps us understand how it is that the ideas of Jesus took root so quickly in both gentile and Jewish cultures," he said.

Strange dates the 4,600-seat theater to the start of the first century A.D. and says it may well be the reference point of some of Jesus' sayings.

For example, the Bible says Jesus cautioned against acting like hypocrites by publicizing one's help to the needy and disfiguring one's face while fasting so as to look somber.

Strange said the references were puzzling until his team determined that in ancient Greek hypocrites were actors and Jesus had access to a theater.

Most of Strange's conclusions were disputed by Eric Meyers, an archaeologist from Duke University who heads a joint 5-year-old expedition with Hebrew University of Jerusalem. His excavations are often near but in different areas than where Strange is digging.

Meyers argues Sepphoris, located 75 miles north of Jerusalem, was a smaller city of about 15,000 to 20,000 at the time of Jesus. He also contends there is no evidence of wide colonnaded streets.

Rev. Krenke delegate to convention

The Rev. David Krenke of Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church was a delegate to the 50th biennial convention of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod (WELS).

The five-day convention was held on the campus of Martin Luther Preparatory School, Prairie du Chien, Wis. August 7-11.

During the week, Krenke and the other 433 voting and advisory delegates heard reports from the synod's five divisions concerning the church body's activity for the last two years. The delegates also considered proposals for new programs and adopted a $39.9 million budget for the next two years.

The convention established a $16 million special offering during 1990-93. This special offering will develop a gift trust fund for mission expansion and for the on-going work of the WELS.

The delegates adopted a "Vision 2000+" statement to direct the synod's plans and growth into the 21st century.

After a two-year study called for by the WELS 1987 convention, the delegates decided not to change the church body's name. The 139-year-old Wisconsin Synod has always had the word "Wisconsin" in its name. The 420,000-member WELS has congregations in all fifty states and three provinces of Canada.

The convention business included the election of the officers of the synod for the next two years. The Rev. Carl H. Mischke, Milwaukee, Wis., was overwhelmingly reelected to his sixth consecutive term as president.

Convention delegates heard the Rev. Gerhard Wilde, president of the Evangelical Lutheran Free Church of East Germany, express greetings from his church body. They also heard presentations from 15 overseas WELS missionaries representing 10 countries where the synod has developing mission churches.

Together with its 1,200 congregations, the WELS operates a school system of 370 Lutheran elementary schools, 20 high schools, three academies, three colleges, and a theological seminary. The synod does mission work in 12 countries located in Africa, Latin America and Asia.

Good Shepherd Evangelical Lutheran Church is a member of the Wisconsin Synod and is located at 3800 Bluebird Lane.

'Festival of Marriage' series begins

The Family Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ will begin a 10-week "Festival of Marriage" Sept. 8. The series, which continues through Nov. 8, will consist of two film series, both of which have been highly acclaimed by the Christian film industry.

The first, "Love is a Decision" is presented by Dr. Gary Smalley, author of such books as "Language of Love," "The Blessing," and "The Gift of Honor."

The six-week presentation begins with The Incredible Worth of Woman dealing with respect within marriage. The next, shown on Sept. 13, "How to Energize Your Mate in 60 Seconds" followed by "Five Keys to Loving and Lasting Relationships" Sept. 20. The final sessions are concerned with "The Tremendous Value of Man on Sept. 27, "Secrets of a Close Knit Family" Oct. 4 and concluding with "Finding Fulfillment" Oct. 11.

"Dr. Smalley is a popular Christian lecturer who combines humor with great Biblical insights in a concise manner," says a release from the church.

Each presentation lasts less than one hour. The public is invited to attend and classes for children are held concurrently with the video presentation.

Beginning Oct. 18, the "Festival of Marriage" will continue with a four-part series entitled "Maximum Marriage" hosted by Dr. Tim Timmons, pastor of South Coast Community Church in Newport Beach, Calif. and the author of nine books on marriage and family.

The first video, "Why Marriage When You Can Live Together?" addresses the oneness of marriage, intimacy, and responsibility. The second deals with the "Eleven Battlegrounds of Marriage" concerning contemporary problems of marriage.

Nov. 1 "Why Are Women So Weird and Men So Strange?" will explain differences in roles, personalities and expectations of marriage partners. The final film, shown on Nov. 8, "How Do You Spell Relief?" addresses stress, identities, and competition within marriage.

Child care is available and no offerings will be taken. For more information contact Gary Grady at 694-8836.

Visionary art expert to speak at service

Mary Ellen Conley, who specializes in visionary art, is the guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service Sunday at the Religious Science Church, 2311 Elizabeth.

Mrs. Conley, who holds a master's degree in fine arts from Penn State University, spent several years studying in Europe following graduation. She is now living in Houston.

"It's the experience of a reality beyond the ordinary, everyday life, a deep spiritual experience that is brought down through my brain, my hands and my heart and put onto canvas."

"This type of art has a characteristic signature of vivid, intense colors and the incredible brilliance of suns jewelling the deep darkness of space," says a release from the church.

Another facet of her works which has received attention is "soul portraits."

"In a meditative state she paints or sketches what she sees as the higher self of the person," the release says. "Ir the finished portrait, a sitter may see themselves as Conley sees them, without the mask of their defensive postures and worldly pain. In her mind, the soul is the repository of our special achievements and gifts, and it keeps them for us even though the world may try to tell is that we are bad or wrong."

Mrs. Conley is a member of the Religious Church in Houston and a featured speaker throughout the United States.

One of her more popular talks is "The Language os Angels," which she will present Sunday. This talk and slide show is the result of eight years of painting and research and consists of a collection of angelic art from the past to contemporary time and includes some of her own.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 27, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will find ways to change a job to meet your specifications. Your powers of persuasion convince others to do almost anything for you. Entertaining brings you new social success. Your love life picks up after a reconciliation in November. A financial respite allows you to put your funds in better order. You need to decide soon what is most important to you.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Mother Teresa, actress Barbara Bach, President Lyndon Johnson, the "Captain" Daryl Dragon, author Ira Levin, all-star infielder Buddy Bell, comedian Martha Raye, actress Tuesday Weld, singer-actor Tommy Sands, Cubs great "Peanuts" Lowrey, Hollywood producer Samuel Goldwyn.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Someone needs loving attention; give it in abundance. House-hunting could prove lots of fun, especially if you find your dream home. Curb a tendency to be sarcastic with family members. Show tenderness instead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid going to extremes. A theatrical display of emotion or secret tryst could push loved one too far. Being overly generous could land you in hot water financially. Plan ahead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Busy travel schedules could scatter family members. Mate may seem impulsive or too demanding. Try to change loved ones' attitudes by appealing to their sense of fair play. Avoid issuing ultimatums.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Today could mark the beginning of a new friendship, or the end of an old love affair. Either way, you will gain. Keep diet and exercise resolutions. Good health is linked to good habits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your sixth sense about people is right on the money. You get what you need from loved ones who put your interests ahead of their own. Show your gratitude in tangible ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your feelings may be hurt by someone's too-frank comments. Forgive an offense that was unintentional. Social plans change at the last minute. Give a teen-ager the benefit of the doubt.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A choice is in your hands, but you ought to consider the needs and feelings of others. A change of scene will rejuvenate you, giving you new enthusiasm for the week ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go out of your way to see someone who is confined to a hospital or nursing home. A backyard barbecue appeals to family and friends alike. Avoid bringing up sensitive or controversial subjects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Happy surprises could be in store for you and yours. You may be momentarily thrown by the unexpected. Share your good fortune with those who have helped you over the years.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A move or home improvement is expensive, but worth every penny. A change of lifestyle leads to new contentment and marital harmony. Do nothing to shake loved one's confidence in you. Keep your promises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An inspired idea, something progressive and original, will smooth any ruffled feathers. Sharing secrets leads to a happy surprise. Go ahead and wear your heart on your sleeve this evening. Be sentimental.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Home and family affairs merit top priority. Let nature take its course in romance. A telephone call brings welcome news. Get in touch with an older relative who feels left out.

Prince Albert scopes out Atlanta as possible site of 1996 Olympic games

ATLANTA (AP) — Prince Albert of Monaco and two fellow members of the International Olympic Committee are touring Atlanta to determine whether it should be host of the 1996 Olympic Games.

Beginning the four-day tour by limousine Thursday, the prince questioned Mayor Andrew Young about the city's recent FBI ranking as No. 1 in the nation for violent crime.

Albert

"I hate to bring up a negative point, Mr. Young, but is there a crime problem?" the prince asked.

"We catch criminals and we put them in jail," Young replied. "That makes our statistics high because we make so many arrests."

Prince Albert, citing Atlanta's economy, said the city "could certainly support a successful Olympics."

"Atlanta seems to have a very solid bid," he said.

The prince, Gunther Heinze of East Germany and Vladimir Cernusak of Czechoslovakia also met with Gov. Joe Frank Harris, who said the Democratic National Convention held in Atlanta last summer "came off without a hitch."

Also in the running for the 1996 games is Athens, Greece, home of the ancient Olympics, but Prince Albert expressed concern about the country's political and economic problems.

"Athens' sentimental popularity is going to weigh pretty heavily, but it's not going to be the only thing that we look at," he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor William Hurt used religious doctrine to induce his former lover, Sandra Jennings, to live with him in common-law marriage, Jennings' lawyer reportedly charged in a legal brief filed this week.

Hurt

Lawyer Richard Golub said Hurt used the phrases "spiritual marriage" and "marriage in God's eyes," New York Newsday reported Friday.

Jennings, 32, a former dancer with the New York City Ballet, is suing to have her relationship with Hurt, 39, declared a marriage based on four weeks they lived together while he filmed "The Big Chill" in South Carolina.

"There is no doubt that the defendant used the techniques of religious doctrine and argument to induce (Jennings) to marry him, common-law fashion," Newsday quoted Golub as charging in an 89-page brief filed Wednesday. The newspaper said it reviewed that brief and Hurt's lawyers' 54-page reply, though both documents were confidential because the case is matrimonial.

The Academy Award-winning actor's lawyers called Jennings' testimony a fabrication.

Hurt and Jennings began living together in 1981 but the case is based on the time between the day Hurt learned of his divorce, Dec. 9, 1982, and the day the couple left South Carolina, Jan. 19, 1983.

New York does not sanction common-law marriage but recognizes the legality of such relationships in other states.

The case, resided by State Supreme Court Justice Jacqueline Silbermann, is expected to be decided within 30 days.

Hurt has made voluntary payments to Jennings of about $65,000. They have a 6-year-old son, Alexander Devon Hurt.

NEW YORK (AP) — Geraldine Ferraro turns 54 today, but she's got more important things to think about.

"I'm going to be the mother of the bride!" the former Democratic vice presidential nominee told the Daily News.

Her daughter, Donna, 27, will marry Paul Ullman on Oct. 14. The two met at Salomon Bros., where both work.

As for turning 54, Ferraro says: "I feel better than I ever did. I'm walking two miles a day on a treadmill. I've taken up golf. But I'm getting a bit tired of lecturing. There's too much travel. So I'm going to settle down right here and join a law firm in New York in the next few months.

"For my birthday, I want a piece of jewelry from my husband to wear at my daughter's wedding."

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush and his wife, Barbara, called off a boating excursion Friday after he ran his 28-foot power craft over a submerged object and damaged the housing of one of the vessel's two propellers.

Bush was returning with his boat, Fidelity, after a fishing trip with two reporters when it hit either a board or a lobster pot. The boat was taken to a nearby marina for repairs.

The bad luck with his boat follows even worse luck with rod and reel. Bush has yet to catch a fish despite going out daily since he arrived at his summer home more than a week ago.

Bush Thursday blamed his bad luck on the commotion in the water caused by the fleet of seven or eight boats, many of them chartered by news organizations, that follow him.

Friday's fishing trip was to be the first under an informal agreement under which the chase boats were to keep farther away, at least while Bush was fishing.

"I'll try any technique that works," Bush said Friday.

PARIS (AP) — Americans can't make any more movies in Paris until French director Elie Chouraqui is allowed to shoot his film in Chicago and Kansas, Mayor Jacques Chirac said Friday.

Chirac's order threatened "Mr. and Mrs. Bridge," starring Paul Newman and his wife Joanne Woodward and directed by James Ivory, which began six planned days of shooting Friday.

Chirac said he would "suspend all authorizations for American films currently shooting in Paris" until Chouraqui and his crew were given visas to start work on his film "Miss Missouri."

Culture Minister Jack Lang said he found the U.S. treatment of Chouraqui "humiliating and unacceptable," but did not support blocking U.S. films being made in France because of assurances from American movie industry officials that the situation would be cleared up immediately.

Both Chirac and Lang said in their statements they had been trying to get action from U.S. officials since Monday, when Chouraqui had planned to begin work, but there apparently was opposition from the Directors Guild of America.

Lang's office issued the text of a message it said he received from Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, saying Chouraqui would have his visa "this weekend or Monday at the latest."

The message said officials of the directors' guild had agreed to end their opposition to a visa for Chouraqui and immigration officials had promised quick action.

Mazowiecki meets U.S., Soviet envoys

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki met Friday with emissaries from the superpowers, and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa called on workers to refrain from strikes to avoid worsening Poland's dire economic woes.

Mazowiecki met with Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, Senate Minority leader Robert Dole and three Democratic congressmen. He later met with the Soviet ambassador and West German envoys.

Mrs. Dole said after the meeting with the prime minister that Washington would consider new ways to aid the country, but would not say whether that included additional financial assistance.

Mazowiecki assumed office Thursday in a historic transfer of power from the Communist Party to a Solidarity-led coalition, the first government led by non-Communists in the East bloc.

Walesa, who convinced Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski to approve the Solidarity-led government, said in a statement Friday that Mazowiecki's selection was the "breakthrough" needed to stop Poland's economic decline.

Walesa said dramatic changes were needed by the government but called on workers to limit strikes to avoid causing further economic damage.

"In face of so critical an employment situation, radical actions of the government are needed. At the same, we must radically limit economic losses which are an obvious result of any strike struggle," he said in a statement.

"We must save Poland not at the cost of other people but together," he said.

In a rare show of support that would have been unthinkable only months ago, Communist Party chief Miezcyslaw F. Rakowski, who is on an official visit to Bulgaria, sent Mazowiecki a telegram Friday saying the new prime minister could count on the party's support "in everything aiming at leading the country out of the crisis."

Dole, R-Kansas, said Mazowiecki told him: "'He who helps early, helps twice.' In other words, this is very important now to keep up the momentum and let the Polish people see some change."

But Mrs. Dole was cautious about offering more financial aid to Poland.

"Obviously, we do have a budget deficit at home," she said. "We will provide aid as we can, when we can, but there is already a very significant program underway."

She was referring to Bush's $115 million aid offer made during a July visit. Solidarity leaders have been hoping for a $10 billion assistance package from Western countries.

Later, the Doles met for over an hour with Jaruzelski. Mrs. Dole said they delivered a letter from President Bush to Jaruzelski congratulating him "on his wisdom and his leadership in this difficult time, this time of transition and the progress that is being made in forming a new government, his cooperation in that process."

Tadeusz Mazowiecki

She said a similar letter was delivered to Mazowiecki.

At Mazowiecki's meeting with Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Brovikov, the ambassador congratulated Mazowiecki on his election and Mazowiecki sent greetings to the Soviet people, a government spokesman said.

Mazowiecki's election has brought reserved support from the Soviet Union.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh said Friday in Moscow that Soviet officials were "happy to hear" Mazowiecki's remarks Thursday about Poland remaining in the Warsaw Pact and Comecon socialist economic alliance.

"The sensible and constructive approach by the head of the Polish government to these issues, which have paramount significance for the peoples of the two countries, coincides with our wishes," Gremitskikh said.

Mrs. Dole said Bush would soon send a team of U.S. experts to Poland to study what priorities such aid would take.

Referring to unemployment that will result as inefficient industries are closed under economic reform plans, she said Poland would have to lay "a safety net for workers as they go through this transition, which obviously is going to produce difficulties."

Shops shipped snakes in promotional stunt

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of video rental shops Friday received promotional kits for a horror movie with live snakes inside the packages, and outraged animal protection officials called the stunt "cruel and irresponsible."

The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals called on Cinema International Corp. to take back the 700 reptiles.

The snakes were in danger because instructions accompanying the kits had incorrectly said they did not need to be fed for their planned month-long stay in the stores, the society said.

It said it was receiving dozens of calls from unhappy shop owners.

Paul Brett, CIC's marketing manager, said the snakes were intended to be kept in shops to promote a thriller about voodoo called "The Serpent and The Rainbow."

The snakes were bred domestically and the company began sending them out Thursday from its London headquarters, he said.

The snakes, silver with gray stripes, are not poisonous but might carry harmful parasites if they came from abroad, said RSPCA spokeswoman Diana Jones. They needed to be fed weekly, she said.

While admitting there'd been "some confusion," Cinema International denied the snakes would harm anyone or be harmed.

"We've sent out 700 in clear, plastic, aerated boxes as conversation pieces," Brett said. "Snakes make wonderful pets."

The 18- to 24-inch long snakes used in the promotion came from a company called Animal Actors, which assured Cinema International they did not have to be fed for three months, he said.

Superintendent Freddie Drew of Britain's Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals holds a Chinese rat snake in a plastic container Friday. Hundreds of video rental shops across Britain received promotion kits for a horror movie called "The Serpent and the Rainbow," each of which contained a live snake. The RSPCA called the stunt "cruel and irresponsible."

Lawrence Cane, Cinema International's marketing assistant, said: "Whenever we launch a new video title we normally send to our distributors posters, sleeves and cardboard cut-outs. With this film, we decided to send snakes. In marketing terms it's called live points of sale."

Some recipients weren't impressed.

"We felt complete and utter horror," said a London video shop manager, who refused to be identified to protect his relations with the distribution company. "I deplore any living creature used for advertising."

He said the snake, which "just appeared out of the blue," had been returned to the distribution company's animal supplier.

Brett said the snakes were hand-delivered in boxes marked "Live Animal," and claimed shop owners were warned by ads in the trade press and calls from sales agents.

At the end of the month, they were to be collected by the company, although if shop owners were unhappy, they could call an emergency number and have them picked up.

"I have spoken to three (shop owners) who were less than happy," Brett said. "If we find we were wrong about feeding, then obviously we will take action on that and pull them back immediately."

Ms. Jones said the RSPCA was urging unhappy owners to demand that the company take them back, and if they didn't, the RSPCA might take some.

"We don't have the resources to take care of hundreds of snakes," she said.

Robert Cottrill, assistant manager at Video Palace shop in London's Soho district, said he didn't particularly mind the snake, whom the staff immediately nicknamed "Cyril," but thought the whole stunt was "cruel and crass."

"It's a pretty second-rate film," he said. "I think they knew full well that all this would happen."

Hungarians boost border patrols to intercept refugees

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungarian authorities stepped up border patrols, slowing the flow of East German refugees who they acknowledged Friday are fleeing illegally from Czechoslovakia into Hungary to reach the West.

In neighboring Romania, Yugoslav media reported authorities have extended restricted border zones and decreed border guards can use arms to stop Romanians trying to flee to Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Hungary's admission came in an MTI state news agency report that 14 East Germans were caught illegally crossing the border from Czechoslovakia, the only country East Germans can visit without permission from their Communist government.

East Germans who escaped have told Western reporters that some risked two illegal crossings — from Czechoslovakia and then into Austria — but there had been no official word before Friday.

MTI also announced that armed workers' militiamen have joined border patrols to stop the exodus.

Only 85 East Germans made it to Austria overnight, compared with hundreds each night earlier this week, said a West German diplomat in Vienna who asked for anonymity.

"Restrictions have been introduced along the border to cope with the chaotic situation there," said a spokesman for Hungary's border guards.

Hungarian officials declined to say whether they acted under pressure from their Warsaw Pact ally, East Germany.

MTI said 38 workers' militia squads have patrolled the border in recent weeks, while another 244 militiamen are helping guards in Gyoer-Sopron border region.

In West Germany, the Bavarian state government said Friday it opened a third reception camp for East German refugees because two opened this summer are overwhelmed.

Officials said Thursday they took 108 East Germans to the new camp.

HUMAN GROWTH and GROWTH DISORDERS

Saturday, August 26th
10:00 A.M.
Women's and Children's Hospital
Auditorium
Presented by
Dr. José Gonzales
Board Certified Pediatric Endocrinologist
Most children grow at their own normal rate. Usually there's nothing to be alarmed at if they're a little above or below their peers. For some children, though, it's different. For any number of reasons they don't grow like other children. What many parents don't realize is that these abnormal growth patterns may indicate a hidden medical problem. However, if discovered early and treated in time, many of these children can be helped to reach normal adult height.
Dr. Jose Gonzales is a specialist in children's growth disorders. He will be heading a discussion for parents to help them answer questions such as: What is normal growth? When should I be concerned about growth patterns? What are the options for a child with short stature? How can my family doctor help us? Interested parents are invited to attend at 10 A.M., Saturday, August 26th.
Please call for reservations at 334-8297 as space is limited.

Police shoot protesters

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Riot police using tear gas and shotguns clashed with anti-apartheid protesters Friday in townships near Cape Town. Police wounded three youths and rioters reportedly killed two black men.

The unrest is linked to a nationwide campaign to defy apartheid laws. As part of the campaign, dozens of blacks successfully sought treatment Friday at a whites-only hospital wing in East London and clergymen announced plans to defy bus segregation laws in the capital city, Pretoria.

In black and mixed-race townships near Cape Town, police and anti-apartheid militants have clashed almost daily for more than three weeks.

Friday, police fired birdshot to break up a protest at Mitchell's Plain toiwnship, wounding three mixed-race high school students. Another police contingent set up roadblocks outside the University of the Western Cape and fired tear gas at mixed-race and black students who had erected barricades on the campus.

Contras to be disbanded

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The disbanding and resettlement of the U.S.-supported Contra rebels who fought Nicaragua's leftist government for eight years will begin Sept. 6, officials announced Friday.

The secretary-general of the Organization of American States, Joao Clemente Baena Soares of Brazil, and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar agreed at a meeting Friday to begin the work of the International Support and Verification Commission on that date, a U.N. statement said.

De Cuellar also met with Miguel d'Escoto, the Nicaraguan foreign minister, about repatriating the 12,000 Contras now camped in Honduras with their families.

When he learned the demobilization date had been set, d'Escoto said: "That is very good news, we have wanted that for a very long time."

Search for plane suspended

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Rain and darkness forced rescuers to postpone their search Friday for a passenger plane that disappeared over the country's rugged northern mountains with 54 people.

The Pakistan International Airlines Fokker-27 took off early Friday on what should have been a 45-minute flight from the Korakoram Mountain city of Gilgit to Islamabad.

Kidnapped gold merchant rescued from village well

JERUSALEM (AP) — Security agents rescued a kidnapped Israeli gold merchant from a well on Friday, a day and a half after he was seized by masked Palestinians in the occupied West Bank.

Shaul Mishaniya was found after a huge search by helicopters and hundreds of soldiers. Officials said an Arab suspect captured Thursday led agents of the Shin Bet secret service to the well in the tiny village of Abush near Tukarem. Israel TV said three alleged kidnappers are in custody.

Army officials said the well was about 20 to 23 feet deep, but that Mishaniya's head was above water.

"I am healthy, thank God, and thank you to the Israeli army and all the soldiers who helped me," Mishaniya said on Israel radio.

Mishaniya, 47, was the first Israeli civilian abducted in the 20-month-old Palestinian uprising, stirring speculation that leaders of the revolt were stepping up the violence in their battle against Israeli occupation.

Israel television said security officials suspected Mishaniya's kidnapping was part of a hostage-bargaining operation.

It said Shin Bet apprehended one suspect hours after the kidnapping and described him as a wanted member of an underground Palestinian group in Abush.

However, officials also said they were investigating possible criminal motives for the kidnapping.

"The motive is not known. The investigation is looking into whether it is political or criminal or both," said Col. Renaan Gissin, deputy military spokesman.

Few Israelis now venture to the West Bank because of the uprising. Mishaniya reportedly went there to collect debts owed him by Arabs. News reports said he argued with an Arab merchant before he was grabbed Wednesday night by masked men carrying knives.

Mishaniya said on TV he was inside an Arab-owned taxi "when several youths came running. One sat next to me on the front seat, holding a big screwdriver in his hand."

He said the abductors blinfolded him and led him to hills where they walked for about three hours. The men "tried to put me on a donkey, saying: 'You are an old man, it's not worth walking,' but ... I thought they wanted me to fall down and die."

Israel denies ties to colonel linked to drug trafficking

New York Times News Service

JERUSALEM — The Israeli government is trying to distance itself from Israeli mercenaries who were reported to have been supervising Colombian drug traffickers' assassination squads.

A reserve colonel in the Israeli army, Yair Klein, who runs a Tel-Aviv based security consulting company, is believed to have headed a paramilitary training squad that supervised assassinations for Colombian drug traffickers. His voice was heard on a videotape provided by drug traffickers showing commandos apparently carrying out an assassination.

Klein returned to Israel Friday night and denied involvement with the Medellin cartel killers. Though he admitted that he had been in Colombia and involved in weapons training, he asserted that he was training private citizens to defend themselves against drug traffickers.

The government has not reacted to Klein's statements, made on Israeli television Friday night. But Israeli officials are known to believe that his reported activities are doing little to help Israel's international image.

Meir Amit, former head of Mossad, Israel's intelligence service, said of the Klein case: "The greatest damage is that, rather than being known as producers in agriculture, in genetics, in medicine, our trademark is now in the security business, whether it be weapons or support systems."

Since word of the possible involvement of Israeli nationals in the drug traffickers' hit squads became known early this week, the Foreign Ministry has repeatedly stated that the Israeli government has no connection with Klein or any other Israelis who may be working with drug traffickers. South African and British mercenaries are also reported to be in the drug dealers' employ.

The ministry added that no nation could control the activities of all its citizens living or traveling abroad. And the government officially notified Colombia Thursday that Israel was willing to do whatever it could to assist in its war against the cocaine cartels.

In a statement issued Thursday, the Defense Ministry said that Klein's security consulting concern, named Spearhead, had no government permit to work in Colombia, as required by Israeli law.

Colombian police claim arrest of drug baron's son

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Army officials disclosed Friday that they arrested the son of a reputed cocaine baron in a shootout and capture of a bunker that yielded piles of secret financial documents.

The White House said the Bush administration was sending $65 million worth of helicopters, weapons and other equipment to help Colombia in its week-old anti-drug offensive. Two more U.S. helicopters arrived in Colombia Friday.

The campaign was launched after the assassination of presidential candidate Luis Carlos Galan a week ago.

Thousands of students wearing black armbands paraded Friday through downtown Bogota to Galan's tomb at the Metropolitan Cemetery.

Hundreds of judges demanded more protection from drug cartel assassins and the cocaine barons said Friday they would kill 10 jurists for every suspect extradited to the United States.

Arsonists hired by traffickers set a country club outside Medellin on fire Friday, police reported, continuing attacks on establishment targets that began with bombings and arson Thursday. They said the fire damaged two rooms.

Army officials disclosed Friday the discovery of secret financial documents in a fortified rural bunker belonging to Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, reputed to be among the leaders of the Medellin cartel. They said his son, Freddy Rodriguez Gacha, was among those arrested in the raid.

The estate, called "Chiguagua," was seized Thursday by the military, which exchanged shots with Rodriguez Gacha's son, two nephews and seven bodyguards, the officers told reporters of the Bogota daily El Tiempo. The raid netted a wealth of documents detailing Rodriguez Gacha's financial transactions, they said.

A U.S. Air Force C-5 transport plane brought in two Bell 212 helicopters that were delivered to Colombian authorities. The White House said a $20 million aid shipment would arrive next week.

The copters, which add to six of the same type Colombian police already had, represent "an immediate, tangible response of the U.S. government to President (Virgilio) Barco's stepped-up war on the narcotics traffic," a U.S. Embassy press release said.

Anti-narcotics police of Bolivia and Ecuador received two helicopters each during the previous 24 hours, said diplomatic and government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity. They said it underscored U.S. determination to help Latin America fight drug traffickers.

Bolivia and Ecuador are two main sources of the cocaine processed in Colmbia.

Brazil said it had tightened security on its Amazon border with Colombia to prevent narcotics dealers from crossing it. Federal police spokesman Paulo Marra said there was no evidence Colombian fugitives had entered the country.

A Defense Ministry communique said said two tons of cocaine was in a raid Thursday on a clandestine airstrip, and that the offensive has netted six tons.

About 550 judges in Bogota and the surrounding province of Cundinamarca announced plans Friday to hand in their resignations to protest what they feel is insufficient security measures. In Cali, judges staged a two-hour strike.

Judge Omar Eduardo Garces Bueno of Cali told reporters he and other judges received threatening letters from the "Extraditables" — the name used by traffickers in their communiques.

In the letters, the drug dealers vowed to kill 10 judges for each suspected trafficker extradited.

Since 1981, 220 judges, magistrates and judicial employees have been killed in a campaign of terror aimed at intimidating the courts into dropping all prosecution of drug cases.

Since Aug. 16, when Bogota magistrate Carlos Valencia Garcia was gunned down, judges nationwide have been protesting for better security. They staged a strike that ended Wednesday.

BUICK LESABRE. THE MOST TROUBLE FREE CAR BUILT IN AMERICA.

Until now, this kind of quality was known to only an elite group, Le Sabre owners.

Great selections of New fully loaded LeSabres in stock now!

Prices starting at $15,295
(List $18,341, Stock#9228)

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December, 1988. Based upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.
