Riders of storm

REVERE, Mass. — Thrill-seeking surfers eager to ride the Big Ones rarely seen in the Northeast risked the wrath of Hurricane Felix and swarmed to closed beaches for a board-snapping ride on the storm. "I heard the waves were good, and I itched all day to get out," said 23-year-old Steve Goozey, one of about a dozen surfers at a beach in Scarborough, Maine./7A

Literacy message

In a time when thousands of people surf the net on a daily basis, a short E-mail message from your dad might not seem like much. But for R.G. Grand jury indicts 3 in Whitewater probe

■ 48-page document charges the Clintons' business partners, governor of Arkansas with fraud, conspiracy.

Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President Clinton's Whitewater business partner and two others, including Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, were indicted Thursday by the Whitewater grand jury on fraud and conspiracy charges.

Whitewater partner James B. McDougal, McDougal's ex-wife, Susan H. McDougal, and Tucker were named in a 48-page indictment that included wire, mail and bank fraud charges.

The charges involve dealings through Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, which McDougal owned, and Capital Management Services Inc., a federally backed lending house operated by former municipal Judge David Hale.

Clinton has said he and his wife were passive investors in Whitewater, which was a real estate development in north Arkansas, and that they had nothing to do with the operation of the S&L.

Thursday's indictments do not charge criminal wrongdoing by Clinton or Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Tucker had previously been indicted on charges he lied about how a $300,000 loan from a federally backed lender would be used, and of con-

Ortiz murder trial selection of jury to open Sept. 28

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Jury selection in the capital murder trial of Henry Lopez Ortiz will begin Sept. 28, according to a court order signed Thursday by 238th District Court Judge John Hyde.

"The trial will begin as soon as 12 jurors and two alternates are selected," Hyde said.

Ortiz, 41, has been indicted on a charge of capital murder. He was arrested following the discovery of a girl's body in a laundry hamper in a spare room of his apartment.

He was indicted on a charge of capital murder in the Feb. 10 sexual assault, kidnapping and slaying of 10-year-old Julianne Powell.

The trial has been moved to Amarillo, county seat of Potter County.

Hyde said he hopes to qualify a panel of potential jurors on Sept. 28. There will be 140 people on the panel, he said.

Hyde said he will take much of that first day explaining the legal system to the panelists as well as informing them of their responsibilities as jurors.

He said each side will get an hour with the panel to ask them sweeping questions to eliminate some people from the end count. Hyde said this process should save time instead of having to repeat the same question for each potential juror.

1-time refund to jolt electric bills slightly

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

TU Electric residential customers will see a slightly lower bill in September as a result of an approved refund from the company that will total more than $89 million, according to TU Electric officials.

The refund, approved by the Public Utility Commission (PUC) Wednesday, will appear as a credit on customers' bills, said LuAnn Morgan.

The amount of the refund will depend on the quantity of electricity used. A customer with a September bill for 1,000 kilowatt-hours will receive a credit of about $9.

Ms. Morgan said the refund will be reflected only in the September bill. It is the first time this year the company has

Workers haul gravel at a site north of Midland College for the city's sealcoating project that is under way in portions of north central Midland.

Gravel, tempers fly in sealcoat season

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Motorists in north cental Midland will have a few more weeks to endure loose gravel that results from thecity's annual roadway sealcoat project.

Jones Brothers Dirt & Paving of Odessa — contracted by the city — began the project about three weeks ago.

A temporary work site has been set up off Garfield Street just north of Midland College.

"That was a good location for them to store their equipment and materials," said Midland College President David Daniel. There are no plans in the foreseeable future for use of the land after the work site is abandoned, he added.

Meanwhile, work crews continue to sealcoat roadways in that area.

Streets situated north of Golf Course Road between Midkiff Road and A Street are being sealcoated, which consists of putting down hot asphalt at a rate of 2/5ths of a gallon per square yard followed by a cover of about 3/8th inch of aggregate. Some streets outside the targeted area also will be sealcoated.

The work combats the deterioration of asphalt that becomes brittle from exposure to heat, ultraviolet waves and water, city officials said.

Meanwhile, drivers must put up with the necessary inconvenience. The yearly work usually brings with it citizen complaints of vehicle damage and driving instability from loose gravel.

Robin Eiland, who lives in the 2000 block of the recently sealcoated Humble Avenue, echoed the sentiment of many drivers.

"In addition to paying taxes for the sealcoating, we're having to pay the maintenance on our cars to grind the gravel in the streets," she said. "I think if someone looked into the (cost for) car repairs it might be astronomical."

"It seems like there must be a better way," Ms. Eiland said.

Officials say sealcoating is necessary to preserve the pavement and advise drivers to "use caution and drive slow" in areas recently sealcoated.

"There's no cost-effective alternative," said Harvey Hansen, the city's director of engineering and transportation.

Any alternative would cost at least double, he said. For example, sealcoating costs 67 cents per square yard compared with $3 per square yard for asphalt overlay.

Although many newcomers to Midland say they've never experienced

Bradley ponders independent route to White House in 1996

Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — A day after announcing he was leaving the Senate, Democrat Bill Bradley said Thursday he might make an independent run for president next year if the two parties remain out of touch with voters.

Bradley added to speculation about his plans by mentioning that he'd spoken to Gen. Colin Powell and put in a call to H. Ross Perot.

"My objective is to get the political process to focus on the lives of people who are now disconnected from it," Bradley told reporters.

He said an independent presidential bid was one possibility but would not give a timetable for a decision.

"I just simply said today that I have not ruled it out," Bradley said.

Bradley, 52, was seen as a possible Democratic presidential contender in 1988 and 1992, but never became a candidate.

Analysts said voters have become more accepting of an independent run. They said Bradley would face numerous financial and logistical hurdles if he wants to run next year, but

Fond farewell: Death of a hero can hit like family member loss

By June Naylor Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

F. Scott Fitzgerald once wrote, "Show me a hero and I will write you a tragedy."

The only feeling more intense than loving a hero is losing one. Try to look at a newspaper or television this week without being reminded how deeply the country grieves the losses of American icons, such as baseball's Mickey Mantle and rock music's Jerry Garcia. And there's yet another Elvis TV fest marking the King's death 18 years ago this week.

Shocked, disbelieving, mourning faces are commonplace now; woeful scenes have become familiar with the killings of President John F. Kennedy, John Lennon and Selena. Who can forget the suffering as Elvis, James Dean and Marilyn Monroe were killed by their own recklessness?

The intrigue about heroes, by definition already larger than life, is that they grow even bigger in death. Make that death untimely or sudden, and their mystique grows exponentially.

Never mind that Mickey Mantle and Jerry Garcia contributed to their own deaths. Fans were

Pentagon cites Iraqi threat, moves troop supplies closer to Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, concerned by what it calls an unusual stirring of the Iraqi military, is moving shiploads of troop supplies closer to the Persian Gulf and making other preparations for a potential U.S. military response.

U.S. military officials announced the steps Thursday and said that while President Saddam Hussein's intent is unclear, his armed forces are making moves "not necessarily immediately focused on Kuwait but focused in that direction."

To forestall what could develop into another U.S.-Iraqi military confrontation, the Pentagon said it decided to take some steps it hopes will deter Saddam and put American forces in position to respond quickly if the need arises.

The new steps are:

■ Moving ships loaded with weapons and supplies closer to the Persian Gulf. These ships — always on station at various places, including near Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean — can outfit one Marine expeditionary force of 17,000 men plus an Army combat brigade of up to 5,000 men. Another set of pre-positioned Army equipment for a U.S. brigade is in Kuwait.

■ Notifying an unspecified number of troops in the United States that they would be the vanguard of a sudden U.S. deployment to the Persian Gulf. They are being told to stay aware of developments but are not readying for a deployment.

Forces are not being put on alert, one official stressed.

■ Keeping the aircraft carrier USS Abraham Lincoln in the Persian Gulf longer than scheduled. It had been planning to leave this week, to be replaced later by the USS Independence. Instead, the Lincoln will remain in place until the Independence arrives.

These moves were outlined by two senior U.S. military officials who spoke at the Pentagon on condition they not be identified. They said they were concerned but not alarmed by the Iraqi military activity, which they said did not noticeably increase or decrease after the defections last week of top aides to Saddam.

No large military force has shown up on Kuwait's borders, one official said, adding, "Instead, the posturing of forces in the Baghdad area and south of the Baghdad area were of such a nature as to cause us concern."

As an example, he said Iraqi soldiers were moving out of their garrisons in convoy formations, something they don't usually do for training exercises. This is cause for concern because moving in convoy formations lets them travel greater distances in less time, thus reducing U.S. warning time if Saddam really plans to invade Kuwait or Saudi Arabia.

"We cannot afford to delay activity or action in response to what we perceive to be challenges by Iraq," one official said.

They said the Iraqi activity involves all elements of its armed forces, including the air forces, the regular Army and the better equipped Republican Guard. They said the activity began about five weeks ago and was continuing Thursday.

The United States already has about 20,000 troops in the Persian Gulf region, including 2,000 Marines engaged in a training exercise with Jordanian troops.

Responding to earlier U.S. warnings to Iraq, the Iraqi army newspaper Al-Qadissiya called U.S. leaders "riffraff" and dismissed their warnings as "hollow threats."

"The American despots have continued to nurse their fatal delusions regarding what military might can do, which will only backfire and finish off their arrogance, before anything else," the newspaper said, according to the official Iraqi News Agency.

Earlier, the Navy had moved the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt to an Israeli port and the commander of U.S. Central Command, Gen. Binford Peay, last Sunday visited Amman to discuss the military situation with Jordan's King Hussein.

President Clinton last week pledged to come to Jordan's defense should it be attacked by Iraq in retaliation for giving haven to the Iraqi defectors, who included a pioneer of Iraq's development of weapons of mass destruction, as well as two of Saddam's daughters.

In Amman on Thursday, Robert Pelletreau, the assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, met with the king, apparently to discuss stepping up economic pressure on Iraq.

Steamy sagas sweep readers across Russia

By Angela Charlton
Associated Press

MOSCOW — On Moscow's crowded subway, a woman sits reading intently, locked in "The Never-Ending Embrace." Nearby stands a teen-age girl, swept away in "A Hurricane of Temptation."

These absorbed readers have caught on to Russia's latest, if less than greatest, literary trend: the romance novel.

"We all need something sexy after hearing about (President Boris) Yeltsin or (Defense Minister Pavel) Grachev all day," said Natalya Volchkova, who sells dozens of the steamy sagas daily from her makeshift bookstall inside the Kievskaya metro station.

Wearied by recent years of economic hardship, Russian readers are snubbing weightier classics and happily abandoning themselves to a world of breathless beauties and cunning casanovas.

"He grabbed her, his lips caressing her face," reads a passage from "Enchanted Sunset" by Jo Colloway, the story of a handsome stranger who sweeps into an Oregon town and cures a heartbroken anthropologist.

"Leslie tried to pull away, but she caught his burning gaze, and realized she could never tear herself from this embrace."

The popularity of these novels, mostly Russian translations of Western titles, extends far beyond Volchkova's stall.

On a recent bestseller list compiled weekly, six of the capital's top 10 fiction paperbacks were romance novels. "Danielle Steele is becoming our new hero," says Gennady Kuzminov, who compiles the lists for the Moscow weekly Knizhnoye Obozreniye.

But enterprising Russian writers have tuned in to the widespread popularity of these formulaic, quickly written novels too, and are diving into the realm of unbridled passions themselves.

Aficionados of these amorous adventures are quick to emphasize that the books' appeal is romance, not sex.

"If we were sex-crazed, we would buy those magazines," said romance reader Vera Krylatova, referring to the pornographic publications that line kiosks across the country.

The primly dressed Krylatova waited for a subway train immersed in "Echoes of a Past Love," in which she said the heroes spend the majority of the novel thousands of miles apart, instead of in each others' arms — or beds.

"It makes me feel good. That's why I read it," the 55-year-old chemist said.

She's not alone. Six other people stood nearby on the subway platform nearby absorbed by romance novels — including one middle-aged man.

"It's something easy to read," said the bearded man, slightly embarrassed as he quickly stashed the love story in his pocket.

Titles lining passengers' laps in the subway reflect the shifts in Russia's literary marketplace.

Under the cold care of Soviet censors, readers were "protected" from such dangerous literature as Western thrillers.

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies with a high in the mid-90s and southeast to south winds at 10-15 mph. Tonight should fair with a low near 70, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be mostly sunny with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 70, Thursday's high reached 96, compared to the record high for that date of 106 set in 1969. The record low was 60 set in 1972.

STATE

High pressure brought mostly clear skies to Texas on Thursday. As a result, temperatures in many locations peaked in the 90s.

However, afternoon readings ranged from lower 80s in Far West Texas to 100 in Northeast Texas and 101 in Del Rio in the south.

Winds were out of the south with speeds at 10 to 15 mile per hour, spreading clouds across South Texas. A few thunderstorms were active in the west.

The forecast for North Texas is for clear skies in the western and central portions today and partly cloudy in the east. There is a slight chance of evening thunderstorms in the southeast. The highs will be in the mid 90s to near 100. The lows will be in the mid 70s.

South Texas is expected to be partly cloudy today with highs in the upper 90s and portions of the deep south breaking the century mark. South and southeast winds 10 to 15 mph. Lows in the mid 70s.

Forecasters said West Texas has a chance for showers and thunderstorms over the mountains and Far West today and tonight. Otherwise fair to partly cloudy at night and mostly sunny during the day through tonight. Highs today from near 80 in the mountains to near 105 in the Big Bend valleys. Lows in the 60s and 70s.

SEALCOAT: Drivers complain

sealcoating elsewhere, the practice appears widespread.

Odessa recently completed sealcoating a portion of the city's streets. "We get calls every year," said Van Hagan, Odessa city engineer.

"Down in the southern states, it's a common practice to protect the roadway," Hagan said.

This year's sealcoating in Midland is costing almost $1,080,000. In addition to the contracted work, city crews will sealcoat some of the "catch-up" roadways.

Each year approximately a one-sixth portion of the city — on a rotating basis — is targeted for the work.

Sealcoating generally prolongs the pavement about six years — hence the city's sealcoating schedule. The life of an asphalt road is estimated at 20 years if sealcoated every five to six years; otherwise, a roadway only lasts about 12 years. Some Midland streets paved 50 years ago remain in good condition due to sealcoating, officials said.

Next year, the area targeted for sealcoating generally covers northeast Midland.

Areas of town covered in past years include: northwest Midland, 1994; southeast Midland, 1993; south central Midland, 1992; and southwest Midland, 1991.

implemented a refund. TU Electric issued a similar refund last year, she said.

TU Electric originally requested approval of the refund on June 26, to be reflected on the customer's August bill. However, the PUC's approval on the refund did not occur until Aug. 16, making September the first month the company could issue the refund, Ms. Morgan said.

The refund includes the cumulative over-collection of fuel costs from July 1994 through May 1995, a fuel cost surcharge from June 1995 in accordance with a prior PUC order, and interest through August.

The over-collection was due to lower-than-expected natural-gas prices from July 1994 through May 1995, primarily because of mild weather. Also contributing to the gas increase were higher gas inventory levels, increased domestic production and increased imports of Canadian gas, Ms. Morgan said.

A utility company can file for a refund when it has over-collected on its fuel costs by four percent and the over-collection is expected to continue, Ms. Morgan said.

The refund will only be given to current customers, Ms. Morgan said.

Since 1986, TU Electric has implemented 10 fuel refunds, totaling $685 million, and two fuel surspiring to avoid taxes by hiding the value of a cable TV venture sold for millions of dollars.

McDougal had been informed that he was a target of the wide-ranging investigation into the Clintons' involvement in Whitewater, their relations to the McDougals and several related matters.

Tucker spokesman Max Parker said the governor had not seen the indictment and would not comment until he had. McDougal did not answer the telephone at his home and did not immediately return a message left on his answering machine.

Ms. McDougal could not be reached. Her attorney, Bobby McDaniel, was in court Thursday afternoon and did not immediately return a call to The Associated Press.

In addition to the fraud and conspiracy charges, the 21 counts handed down Thursday include fraudulent participation, making or causing a false statement to a financial institution and misapplying financial institution funds. Some of the charges related to a $300,000 loan that Hale has said Clinton pressured him to make.

Most of the counts are punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000.

Hale pleaded guilty in 1994 to two felony counts of defrauding the Small Business Administration by misrepresenting the amount of private capital in his company in order to get more federal funding.

FAREWELL: 'I listened to grown men crying'

saddened and outraged that death came with severity, rather than angered that their heroes had mortal weaknesses. If anything, heroes are excused for falling victim to vices because their stresses are magnified.

Grief's depth depends on a person's emotional investment, according to one expert on death's effects.

"The emotional impact a person has on an individual makes a difference," said Howard Clark, a psychology professor at Texas Wesleyan University in Fort Worth. "The loss of a hero can be as great as that of a family member."

Clark, a teacher at TWU since 1962, said he covers all aspects of loss and grief in his course called Death and Dying.

"The key is realizing that the person is gone, both emotionally and physically," he said. "The most difficult thing (for the bereaved) is putting the grief behind them ... the worst thing they can do is keep to themselves.

"Some people never get over a death. Some do, because they see it as a natural process."

Clark said emotions are harder to deal with if the death is sudden and there has been no time to prepare. He cited Kennedy's death as an extreme case where admirers were deeply shaken and had difficulty accepting the facts. In Mantle's case, there was only a little time.

Fans of No. 7, the Hall of Famer who died Sunday at 63 in Dallas' Baylor University Medical Center and was buried Tuesday, tearfully called talk radio shows to share their love for The Mick, to recall how awed they were watching him slam the ball and round the bases.

The devoted seemed to believe he would beat cancer with his mythical strength; Baylor's doctors and nurses also expressed wonder at his fighter's instinct. Heroic to the end, he sat shriveled and feeble before hundreds of cameras telling a stunned nation that he had wasted his talent and wasn't proud of his choices.

"God gave me everything.... For the kids out there ... don't be like me," he said.

Yet his fans loved him no less. Lisa Wren, a public relations staff member at Baylor, where Mantle spent much of his last weeks, was overwhelmed by the adoration.

Early in his initial hospitalization, Wren said, Mantle received about 100 flower arrangements, which he asked be distributed to senior citizen patients. In the end, more than 20,000 letters and packages were sent to Mantle at the hospital, and another 20,000 or so were sent to his office.

"This was a man who was so revered and adored by his fans that for them he will always be there," Wren said. "When things started looking grim, I listened to grown men crying on the phone. They just wanted to talk about their hero."

Because irony looms large in the lives of artistic folks, it's fitting that Grateful Dead guitarist Jerry Garcia died at 53 last week almost the moment he seemed to get serious about fighting his heroin addiction. He had used drugs for roughly 30 years.

Love of a hero transcends generations: A senator told Ted Koppell on ABC's "Nightline" how profoundly affected he was by Garcia's music; 20,000 Deadheads of all ages danced, cried and burned candles in a memorial Sunday in San Francisco's Golden Gate Park.

Such an event can aid the healing process after a hero's death, Clark said.

"You need a significant time to celebrate the person, then put it behind you and go on," he said. "Vigils are very meaningful, but sometimes people can dwell too much."

To help someone mourning an idol, Clark said, friends should encourage that person to share what was admired about the hero.

"Let's don't get maudlin. Just say, 'OK, he's gone but what have you learned? And then use that as (the hero) would want you to,'" Clark said.

As one fan at Sunday's San Francisco memorial said, "At some point, you have to let the Dead go."

ORTIZ: Jury selection expected to last 3 weeks

(From 1A)

A questionnaire then will be completed by the panelists and Hyde said he would allow the lawyers to have Friday and the weekend to look over the questionnaires.

He hopes to start individual questioning of the jurors on Monday. The judge said he expects to take Polaroid pictures of each person so the lawyers can remember them.

Hyde said he plans to maintain a steady pace during jury selection, working from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day. He said he hopes to qualify six people a day.

When the pool is down to 46 qualified jurors who have not been excused, each side will be permitted to issue 15 strikes — for a total of 30 possible individual juror disqualifications — from the remaining pool.

The judge said two alternates will be selected and each side can issue one strike at that point.

Several court orders also were issued in the case, including one that allows either side to seal a document from the public without the judge's prior approval.

"Many of the documents that will be filed ... contain information which, if made public, may potentially prejudice the right of the defendant to a fair trial," wrote Midland County Assistant District Attorney Ralph Petty in his motion requesting the approval of Hyde.

The sealing of court documents was spurred by a Reporter-Telegram discovery of a statement Ortiz made to police regarding the charges.

That statement was filed in court records in which both the state and defense file motions, answers to the motions and notices to the court. Those records are open for public inspection and publication by the media unless sealed by the court.

Court officials said they want to ensure a fair and impartial jury for Ortiz and are concerned that will not be possible if too much information about the case is released to the public.

The judge can unseal the documents if he deems it appropriate.

The defense filed a pretrial motion Tuesday requesting comparable funding and staffing or, alternatively, limiting the district attorney's entourage to Amarillo.

Defense attorneys H.W. "Woody" Leverett and Jacqueline Allen are the defense team for Ortiz.

In the motion, Leverett claimed the district attorney plans to take about seven people to the trial.

"In stark contrast to this throng, the defendant, who is on trial for his very life, will have the assistance of only two court-appointed lawyers without any support staff," the motion stated.

Leverett said the state will have clerical assistance and computers with research capability and lap-top computers while the defense has to resort to traditional searching in books.

He said the defense needs the full-time service of an investigator, a secretary with computer skills and a computerized legal research capability.

But, if the judge doesn't agree with that, Leverett requested the prosecution be ordered to take only two lawyers to Amarillo for the duration of the trial; which is expected to take three weeks for jury selection and two weeks for the trial.

In a response filed by Petty, he said the defendant has two qualified attorneys appointed to defend him as well as funding from the court for investigators and expert witnesses.

Petty said the defendant doesn't plan to take any clerical personnel to Amarillo or utilize the Potter County staff. He said the defense could get assistance in Potter County at the expense of the government.

He also pointed out that the burden of proof is on the state, and while the state has disclosed the nature and evidence of its case, the defense has not.

Hyde also has granted a defense motion regarding jury selection.

"The court thinks the request would fairly enable both sides to better evaluate (each potential juror on the panel) before making peremptory strikes and is calculated to make more effective use of court time."

The order said each side can question each potential juror, make challenges for cause and make the strikes only after at least 46 people are qualified for jury service.

The judge sealed the list of the state's physical evidence and the state also has requested that its list of extraneous offenses it intends to present at a punishment phase, if appropriate, be sealed from the public as well.

Prosecutors said they do not object to a defense motion unsealing excerpts of a statement made by a woman accusing Ortiz of sexual assault in 1990. The woman made the statement to a Reeves County judge. However, the statement will be sealed from the public.

The defense filed a motion asking the judge to order the prosecution to designate which photos they plan to use at the trial.

Petty filed a response saying the defense has copies of all photos available, adding that the state hasn't decided which photos it will use.\

Pretrial hearings have been scheduled for Aug. 24 on the defense motion to suppress photos of the defendant's body and evidence from the body search of the defendant and on the state's motion to determine if Ortiz's oral statements were voluntary.

The prosecution indicated in court records that it does not intend to use any statements Ortiz may have made unless they need to impeach Ortiz's credibility.

However, prosecutors requested a pretrial hearing on whether the statements were given freely, to prevent any court delays should the need to use the statements arise during the trial.

The defense has filed a motion to suppress all oral statements Ortiz may have made. He reportedly made four statements to police as well as speaking to the mother of Julianne during the mother's search for her missing child.

Ortiz has pleaded not guilty and has been held without bond since his arrest Feb. 10. The state is seeking the death penalty in the case.

BRADLEY: Senator weighs run as independent

(From 1A)

Bradley's supporters insist he will decide based upon his own instincts.

"I think what Bradley is really doing is being first in line if Clinton self-destructs," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political analyst. "Then, Bradley can say I'm tanned, rested and ready."

Bradley said he had spoken with Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and a frequent subject of presidential speculation, and tried to contact Perot, the 1992 independent presidential candidate. He said little about the Powell conversation beyond that it was among many calls he made to announce his intentions.

He also has spoken with President Clinton. Bradley refused to speculate on Clinton's prospects or whether he would support the president, whom he has criticized often on issues including the budget and Russian policy.

"I think President Clinton has done some good things," said Bradley, who ruled out a primary challenge. "I've also had my disagreements with him."

In announcing Wednesday that he would not run for a fourth Senate term next year, Bradley said he'd decided the Senate was not the only place to lead, or to make a difference in people's lives. On Thursday he said the presidency might not be the right place for him to do that, either.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, speaking in suburban Cincinnati, said he was surprised by Bradley's announcement, adding: "If you're a self-respecting person like Bradley and you think ideas matter, and you watch your party have no ideas, you lose heart."

Bradley said he realized both parties have lost touch with voters' worries about public safety and economic security as he spoke with people for a book he finished writing two weeks ago.

He likened his experience with the still-untitled book to the perspective he gained by publishing "Life On The Run" in 1976 at the end of his pro basketball career with the New York Knicks. Both allowed him to close a segment of his life.

"As I listened to these stories of the American people, I realized the political process was not connecting to their lives," Bradley said. "I realized I had to move on.

"I spent the bulk of my political life ... as if I were a John Philip Sousa march," Bradley said, seeking a metaphor for a clear direction. "I'm very much now in a jazz combo and you never know what's going to happen next."

Bradley stopped short of leaving the Democratic Party. But he said both major parties are stuck in ruts — Democrats too willing to seek solutions from Washington, Republicans trusting too much in the marketplace.

"He obviously understands the mood of the electorate — that people are distrustful of politicians and that people are willing to entertain a non-traditional alternative," said Stuart Rothenberg, who publishes a Washington political newsletter.

"The more interesting thing is what happens if he absorbs an existing organization," Rothenberg said, mentioning the cadres of supporters for Perot and Powell.

"But how much can you wait? We're in August of '95 and he hasn't closed the door on an independent bid," he said. "The door inevitably closes."

U.S. diplomats take peace plan to Serb president

■ Assistant secretary of state meets with Milosevic for five hours, expresses optimism.

Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — U.S. diplomats on Thursday brought their campaign to end the war in former Yugoslavia to the man widely accused of instigating it all, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic, who responded positively.

But ongoing fighting, expulsions aimed at creating ethnically pure areas, looting and burning of homes illustrated the hatred and desire for vengeance to be overcome.

"Today's talks were extremely useful, they were very frank and they clarified some issues," U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke told reporters after meeting with Milosevic for five hours.

An upbeat-sounding Milosevic added, "We share views on the need for urgency, a greater urgency for finding a solution to the overall crisis in the former Yugoslavia, a solution that would bring about a permanent and just peace."

Lower-level delegations were to meet later in the evening, and Holbrooke and Milosevic were to continue their talks today. The Serbian president also met Thursday with the European Union's mediator, Carl Bildt.

Milosevic's nationalist rhetoric is widely blamed for instigating the Serb rebellions in Croatia in 1991 and Bosnia in 1992 as the old Yugoslav federation collapsed. He inspired the rebels with hopes of uniting all Serbs in one "Greater Serbia."

With support from the Yugoslav army, Serbs captured a third of Croatia and 70 percent of Bosnia, but they are now on the run. Milosevic, seeking an end to U.N. economic sanctions against his country, withdrew his support for the Serb rebels, and early this month, Croatian forces crushed Serbs in southern Croatia, leaving only a strip of land in Serb hands. Serbs also have been losing ground to Croats and the Bosnian army in Bosnia.

Milosevic was reported to generally favor the new U.S. plan. Bosnian Serbs, Croatia, and the Bosnian foreign minister all spoke positively of it on Wednesday.

Full details have not been released, but media reports have indicated it includes the following ideas: lifting economic sanctions against Serb-led Yugoslavia; swapping the Bosnian government-held Gorazde enclave in eastern Bosnia and land adjoining a Serb-held corridor in northern Bosnia for territory around Sarajevo; providing international aid to rebuild Bosnia; and threats of punishment if either side refuses.

If Bosnian Serbs refuse, U.N. soldiers could be withdrawn and replaced with NATO troops, the arms embargo against the Muslim-led Bosnian government could be lifted and NATO could provide air support for the Bosnian army. If the Bosnian government refuses, the U.N. peacekeeping force could be withdrawn and the arms embargo for all sides could be lifted.

Momcilo Krajisnik, a senior Bosnian Serb leader, told the news agency SRNA that the initiative allows Serbs contiguous territory, a wider link between Serb-held territories in the east and west, and sea access.

Several officials have said they expect a final plan within weeks. Russia and the United States are pressing for a summit meeting of the presidents of Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia.

The government has said it will not give up Gorazde, while Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic has said the plan must recognize independence for the Bosnian Serbs' self-proclaimed state.

Independent Belgrade media said Milosevic, although opposed to any threat of military force, was urging Karadzic to accept a deal as a last, best offer.

Increasing the pressure on Karadzic was Gen. Ratko Mladic, the Bosnian Serb military leader, who declared Thursday that Karadzic had lost the confidence of the army and the Serbian people.

Karadzic tried to demote Mladic earlier this month but backed down when high-ranking rebel Serb officers threw their support behind Mladic.

Karadzic, who lately has indicated he might be ready for a deal, told Bosnian Serb radio Thursday that all rebel goals in the war had been achieved and that the rebels now hold well-defended "ethnic borders."

Fighting persisted in spite of the diplomacy. Croat troops pushed toward the Serb-held town of Drvar in western Bosnia, and Serbs and Croats shelled each other near the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik.

Bosnian Serbs reported heavy fighting in the area, but the report couldn't be immediately confirmed. Croatia has sent thousands of troops to the Dubrovnik area, apparently preparing for an offensive to push Serb artillery out of range of the Croatian port.

The United Nations said more non-Serbs were being expelled from their homes in the Bosnian Serb-held town of Banja Luka to make room for Serb refugees. U.N. officials also accused Croats of looting homes and setting houses afire in territory they captured earlier this month in southern Croatia.

Bomb in Paris garbage can injures 17, raises fears

PARIS (AP) — A bomb stuffed with nails and chunks of metal exploded Thursday in a trash can near the Arc de Triomphe, injuring 17 people in a blast authorities said resembled a subway bombing last month linked to Muslim extremists.

The explosion, in which three people were seriously hurt, raised fears of a bombing wave at the height of the tourist season. Authorities closed subway lines and searched for more explosives. There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

Police detained two people in a gray Mercedes with Iranian diplomatic plates near the blast site, French media reported. The Iranian Embassy denied involvement and condemned the attack.

More than 100 police blocked off the area, a busy tourist site, after the blast blew out windows in nearby buildings on Avenue Friedland, a block away from the famed Champs-Elysees.

A Danish boutique was converted into a temporary hospital, where paramedics tended to the injured, many with cuts and bruises.

"This is my sixth visit to Paris, but I won't come back again," said a rattled Jan Dewit, a Dutch tourist.

A fire spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, described the bomb as a butane canister with nails and hex nuts — much like the one that exploded in a Paris subway station July 25, killing seven people.

That bombing, France's worst terrorist attack in nearly a decade, was blamed on Muslim extremists seeking to overthrow the government in the former French colony of Algeria and impose Islamic law.

Some of the insurgents accuse Paris of supporting Algeria's military-backed government.

Red and white police tape kept crowds from the Arc de Triomphe blast site, just outside a subway entrance, and traffic around the huge white monument was cut off. Dozens of police cars and fire trucks with lights flashing filled the streets, though the Champs-Elysees remained packed with tourists.

Prime Minister Alain Juppe visited the site and urged Parisians not to "lose our sang-froid."

"It's a second attack, less serious than the previous one, which unfortunately affected many tourists," Juppe said. "But I don't think we should give in to that psychosis."

Alain Marsaud, a member of the National Assembly and a former anti-terrorism judge, told French radio the two bombings "makes us think about the situation in 1986."

A wave of bombings in Paris in 1986 killed 13 people and injured more than 100. Responsibility for the blasts, which targeted department stores and City Hall and other public areas, was claimed by an Iranian-backed Lebanese group that wanted its jailed supporters released.

Journalist claims first-hand knowledge of POW deaths

JERUSALEM (AP) — In new disclosures about the treatment of Arab POWs, an Israeli journalist revealed Thursday he saw Israeli troops execute five Egyptian prisoners in 1967, including one who was forced to dig his own grave.

Gabi Brun's report was the latest account of atrocities to shock Israelis, who were raised to believe their citizen-soldiers held high moral values and set an example for conduct on the battlefield.

The revelations have strained relations with Egypt, which demanded an investigation after a retired Israeli general, Arye Biro, admitted earlier this month that he killed 49 Egyptian prisoners in the 1956 Mideast war.

Brun described his wartime experiences in the Sinai Desert town of El Arish in Thursday's mass-circulation Yediot Ahronot daily.

"I watched as the man dug a hole for about 15 minutes. Afterwards, the (Israeli military) policemen told him to throw the shovel away, and then one of them leveled an Uzi at him and shot two short bursts, each of three or four bullets," Brun wrote.

"Another prisoner was brought to the same hole a few minutes later, forced to enter and also shot."

Col. Elazar Stern, commander of the army's officers' school, reiterated Thursday that Israeli troops are taught to shoot only when their lives were in danger.

"We must kill only when we know that one mother must cry. In this situation, I prefer that my enemy's mother will cry, and not my mother or my soldiers' mother," Stern told Associated Press Television.

However, Yediot Ahronot said in an editorial that a thorough investigation was needed, not only to meet demands by Egypt, "but for our own sake, our conscience, our beliefs and our principles."

Still, some historians and senior army officers disputed the extent of the reported atrocities or said they were unaware POWs were killed.

Brun's commanding officer in the communications regiment, Lt. Col. David Eshel, said Thursday he was at El Arish airport at the time and didn't see any executions.

One target of criticism was military historian Aryeh Yitzhaki, who said Wednesday that some 1,000 Egyptians were killed by Israeli soldiers in several incidents during the 1967 war after they had surrendered.

Another military historian, Meir Pail, questioned Yitzhaki's credentials and alleged he was politically motivated.

Yitzhaki, a member of the far-right opposition Tzomet Party, acknowledged that he spoke out mainly to shift attention in the affair from Tzomet leader Rafael Eitan, a former army chief of staff, to leading government officials, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

AP Laserphoto

An Egyptian soldier surrenders to an Israeli army patrol in the Sinai Desert during the 1956 Sinai Campaign Nov. 1, 1956.

In 1956, Eitan was Biro's commanding officer. He has refused to comment.

For his part, Rabin issued a statement maintaining that "the Israeli Defense Forces earned their glory as a humane army whose soldiers are blessed with special moral values."

Yitzhaki said it was unfair to focus only on Eitan because Rabin, who was army chief of staff in 1967, received detailed reports about the killings of POWs then and kept the affair quiet.

However, Yitzhaki clarified one incident Thursday, saying that the 300 to 400 Egyptians and Palestinians he claims were killed by Israeli troops at El Arish on June 9, 1967, were not in custody when they were shot.

Yitzhaki said hundreds of Arab soldiers had thrown away their weapons and were on the run when they were hunted down and shot by elite Israeli troops headed by Binyamin Ben-Eliezer, Rabin's housing minister,

The commandos, backed by a helicopter and light plane, "didn't check if they had weapons or not, they shot everyone," Yitzhaki said.

"This is not exactly a massacre of POWs ... but with a little bit of good will, they could have taken them prisoner," said Yitzhaki, who was a researcher in the army's history department from 1965-68.

Colombian president Samper may be first to resign office

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — From a college campus scrawled with leftist graffiti to the tennis courts of an exclusive neighborhood, Colombians are discussing what was considered unthinkable just a few weeks ago.

Will, for the first time in history, the nation's president be forced to leave office?

Almost daily, Colombians are turning on their TV sets or opening their newspapers to see startling new revelations in the "narcoscandal," which had been bubbling along for a year before it blew wide open three weeks ago.

On July 26, President Ernesto Samper's 1994 election campaign treasurer, Santiago Medina, was imprisoned. Since then, Medina has testified that Samper and campaign director Fernando Botero accepted millions of dollars from the Cali drug cartel for the election bid. Botero resigned as Defense Minister on Aug. 2 and was arrested on Tuesday.

Many wonder if Samper will be next.

On Wednesday, the president declared a state of emergency, saying he needed extra powers to fight violence in Colombia. But many Colombians feel it is an attempt to divert attention from his troubles.

"It's hard to keep up with what's going on. But with all that's come out, I think Samper should resign," Juan de Dios Contreras, a bodyguard sitting in a pickup truck outside a kindergarten, said Thursday. "The president has soiled this country's image."

The opinion of Contreras, who was protecting children of wealthy families, is shared by most Colombians.

A poll says 48 percent believe Samper knew drug traffickers donated money to his campaign. Only 44 percent think he's innocent. If it's proven the campaign was funded by drug traffickers, 73 percent said Samper should step down.

At Bogota's National University, a hotbed of radicalism where slogans supporting Peru's Shining Path guerrillas and other leftist groups are spray-painted onto buildings, there has been no uproar about the scandal hitting the presidential palace less than two miles away.

Nestor Patino, a 23-year-old graphic design major, said he and many of his fellow students are fed up.

"There's a feeling that there is perpetual corruption in politics in Colombia and that nothing can be done about it," said Patino, wearing granny glasses and a gold earring and with his long hair in a ponytail.

Nevertheless, many students said they were closely following developments, including watching live televised discussions on the scandal in Congress.

Surfers risk killer waves, fines for wild ride ahead of Felix

REVERE, Mass. (AP) — Thrill-seeking surfers eager to ride the Big Ones rarely seen in the Northeast risked the wrath of Hurricane Felix and swarmed to closed beaches for a board-snapping ride on the storm.

"I heard the waves were good, and I itched all day to get out," said 23-year-old Steve Goozey, one of about a dozen surfers at a beach in Scarborough, Maine.

Felix's rough surf has been blamed for at least four deaths since the weekend and closed beaches up and down the East Coast. But that only made it more appealing to those in search of the big waves commonplace in California.

"I'm praying on bended knee every hour that Felix comes up to Long Island," said Ted Shepherd, 34, surfing at Long Beach, N.Y. "I will chase it up the coast — all the way up through Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Maine."

Most beaches from Maine to North Carolina remained closed to swimming Thursday, and violators risked fines. But in many places surfers weren't turned away.

Swimmers on the beach in Salisbury, N.H., generally disregarded lifeguard George Nigro's admonitions to stay at the edge of the water.

"People come down here and think that because they had three swim lessons at the YMCA, they can ride the waves," Nigro said. "People underestimate the surf. On days like this, it humbles us."

The body of a drowned teen-ager was found off a beach in Deal, N.J., on Monday, still strapped to his surfboard. In Ocean City, Md., a swimmer disappeared in rough surf during a post-midnight dip. Two fishermen drowned Monday off Rhode Island when their boats tipped over in large swells.

No matter. Surfers felt compelled to hit the water.

"You could die easily," acknowledged Bill Lewis, bodyboarding off Ruggles Beach in Newport, R.I., adding, "I love the water, getting a free ride."

Body-surfer Steve Anderson pronounced the waves at Revere Beach, the nation's oldest public beach, "the best I've seen in a long time" in the normally flat waters north of Boston.

Joe Farrar, 21, a college student from Stony Brook, N.Y., quit his summer job as a landscaper two weeks ago to take advantage of hurricane season and its promise of higher waves at Long Beach, where the rough surf snapped four boards Thursday.

"To me, it's spiritual," he said. "All you see is sky and water. It keeps you in your place."

In Old Orchard Beach, Maine, 20 people have been pulled out of the surf in the past few days, said lifeguard Jim Bergeron. Most were young surfers who drifted out too far.

"When you rescue them, their eyes are as big as softballs," he said. "They know they made a mistake."

In Nags Head, N.C., the closest coastal point to the heart of the storm, Dennis Dovle and Mike Hoffer stood on the beach squinting at the violent white chop served up by Felix.

"You don't want to get out in that," said Doyle, a 23-year-old waiter whose surfer-blond hair dangled over his eyes.

Doyle wasn't giving up on surfing the storm, though.

"Frisco — how about Frisco?" he asked, suggesting a south-facing beach near Cape Hatteras. "It'll be clean down there."

Reynolds campaign worker denies allegations

CHICAGO (AP) — A former campaign worker for U.S. Rep. Mel Reynolds denied Thursday that she ever had three-way sex with the congressman and his teen-age accuser.

Sophia Green also said she had never even seen Reynolds and the teen-ager, Beverly Heard, together, contradicting Heard's testimony that the three of them had sex.

Prosecutors responded with records showing Reynolds paid Green's apartment rent for nearly a year and sent her $550 last August, the same month he was indicted.

Green said she has been a good friend of Reynolds and his wife, Marisol, since volunteering for his campaign in 1991. She said she met Heard when Heard started volunteer work for Reynolds in 1992.

She repeatedly answered "no" and "never" when defense attorney Ed Genson asked if she had ever had sex with Reynolds or Heard.

Green claimed she broke off her two-month friendship with Heard after Heard made a sexual advance toward her. She also said that investigators tried to pressure her into testifying against Reynolds.

Heard, 19, testified last week that she and Reynolds had sex with Green in 1992 and 1993, twice at his Chicago office and once at a hotel. In addition, Reynolds talked to Heard about sexual encounters with Green in conversations recorded by police and played at the trial.

Reynolds, 43, is charged with having sex with Heard when she was underage — 16 and 17 — asking her to obtain child pornography for him and then having her leave the state and sign false affidavits recanting the accusations.

During Thursday's testimony, prosecutor Andrea Zopp suggested that it was odd that Reynolds or his campaign paid for Green's rent and sent her money if she was volunteering and running errands for her "good friends."

"You're turning it around, making it sound like they owed me something," Green responded.

Green testified that investigators badgered her and held her at the state's attorney's office against her will for an entire day last summer in an attempt to get her to testify against Reynolds. She said a police detective threatened to see her thrown in jail and her son taken away if she lied about her relationship with Reynolds.

Zopp pointed out Green was never jailed and her son was never taken.

Herbicides in Midwest drinking water soar in summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — During the peak growing season, concentrations of herbicides in Middle America's drinking water can soar to levels much higher than federal standards, according to an environmental study released Thursday.

The chemical industry and local water system officials say this does not necessarily mean the water is unsafe to drink. But the Environmental Protection Agency said the study is cause for concern.

"EPA believes that consumers should check with local water utilities to make sure standards for toxic pollutants are being met," said Dr. Lynn R. Goldman, EPA assistant administrator for pesticides. "In areas where standards are not being met, we are concerned about risks to health, especially for children."

The study by the Environmental Working Group, a nonprofit research organization, collected samples of tap water every few days in 29 communities from mid-May to July. The samples showed the presence of at least one weed killer in all but one city: Memphis, Tenn., where drinking water comes from deep wells.

The research focused on two of the most common farm herbicides: atrazine and cyanazine, millions of pounds of which are used annually to control broadleaf weeds on corn and sorghum fields.

Some samples disclosed the presence, however, of up to nine weed killers in a single glass of Midwestern water.

Concentrations of atrazine, which in high exposure levels has been linked to cancer in animals, were found to exceed federal standards at least once in 14 communities studied. Concentrations of cyanazine, another suspected carcinogen, were above the standards at least once in 18 communities.

But in some drinking water systems, the herbicides were repeatedly found in far higher concentrations than recommended by the EPA.

In Danville, Ill., 94 percent of cyanazine samples and 88 percent of atrazine samples were above federal guidelines from May to July. In Kansas City, Kan., 56 percent of cyanazine samples and 44 percent of atrazine samples exceeded EPA health standards.

"Federal health standards are routinely violated in drinking water consumed by millions of people across the Midwest," said Richard Wiles, vice president for research at the Environmental Working Group.

EPA enforcement standards permit water systems to exceed the maximum level for an herbicide — in atrazine's case, 3 parts per billion — for less than a year.

There are no EPA enforceable standards for some herbicides, such as cyanazine. Instead, the agency has issued health advisories recommending maximum levels in drinking water and food. For cyanazine, the number for water is 1 part per billion.

The Association of Metropolitan Water Agencies, which represents local water systems, said the study "incorrectly and misleadingly" failed to acknowledge that EPA standards are based on a running annual average, not single measurements.

But Wiles said the study raises questions about those standards and the impact of repeated, periodic exposure to higher concentrations of the herbicides, especially among children.

"Ho long can you do this and have the drinking water really be safe?" Wiles asked.

Heart attacks hit smokers five times more before 50

LONDON (AP) — Smokers are five times as likely to suffer heart attacks in their 30s and 40s than nonsmokers, according to a study released Friday.

Doctors have long known that several decades of smoking increases the likelihood of heart attacks in older people. The new study shows tobacco can wreak havoc much sooner, triggering heart attacks before age 50.

"Those who get addicted in their teen-age years are the ones who have the highest risk of having an early heart attack," said Richard Peto, one of the investigators at Oxford University.

Peto has published several studies highlighting smoking's ill effects. The latest, to be published in Saturday's British Medical Journal, will be presented Monday at a European cardiology meeting in Amsterdam.

Mitchell Zeller, special assistant for policy at the Food and Drug Administration in Rockville, Md., called the study "very significant," especially in light of FDA proposals announced last week calling for more stringent regulation of cigarette sales and advertising aimed at teens.

"I think most people associated the lung cancer and emphysema and cardiovascular disease with smoking but think it takes place much later in life," Zeller said.

Oxford investigators surveyed 13,926 heart attack survivors in Britain and 32,389 of their relatives. Most smokers, said Peto, smoked 10 to 30 cigarettes daily.

Among people between the ages of 30 to 49, the risk of heart attacks among smokers was five times higher than that of nonsmokers, researchers found. Smokers between 50 and 59 tripled their risk; those between 60 and 79 doubled their risk.

The increased risk is greatest among the youngest category not because cigarettes are more harmful at that age but because heart attacks are so rare among young people.

In other words, tobacco is to blame for the majority of heart attacks striking those younger than 50. But among elderly people, many other factors, such as years of a fatty diet or genetic predisposition, account for a substantial proportion of heart attacks.

Investigators also divided smokers into smokers of medium-tar and low-tar cigarettes. They found no major risk differences.

Judge issues order to end 10-hour strike by rail workers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A wildcat strike by railroad maintenance workers that began early Thursday stopped as many as 400 freight trains along a CSX Transportation route through 10 states, from Florida to Illinois.

Ten hours later, U.S. District Judge William Terrell Hodges in Jacksonville, Fla., granted CSX a temporary restraining order until an Aug. 28 hearing for an injunction to prevent a continued work stoppage.

Hodges said the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes had violated the Railway Labor Act's provisions for resolving minor disputes. The union's dispute over supervisors performing maintenance work and seniority issues could be resolved by interpreting the existing collective bargaining agreements, he said.

> Rail service was disrupted when employees of fellow unions honored picket lines of the 1,200 member BMWE.

Rail service was disrupted when employees of fellow unions honored picket lines of the 1,200-member BMWE. The union struck the portion of CSX that was formerly the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

The struck route runs through Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida. Freight trains carry mostly coal and auto parts.

"We've begun taking the pickets down," said Freddie Simpson, general chairman for the BMWE Southeast Federation, after the judge acted.

Marty Fiorentino, a CSX spokesman, said, "We are sorry the union chose to strike, as opposed to taking it to arbitration."

Although the union and company subsidiary have been negotiating recently for a new contract, Simpson said, "this strike has nothing to do with the negotiations."

The subsidiary, CSXT, provides rail transportation and distribution services over 32,844 track miles in 20 states and Ontario, Canada.

Bush correct to speak of Mexico

While no one doubts that illegal immigration has sparked monumental problems for states bordering Mexico, particularly Texas, it is no contradiction to say that Gov. George W. Bush was right when he spoke out on the subject of Texas-Mexico and U.S.-Mexico relations this week.

"I will speak out strongly at the convention and any chance I get if the Republican Party chooses to bash Mexico. I will use the bully pulpit of the second largest state in the United States to defend what is right," the governor said Monday following weekend remarks by GOP presidential contender Patrick Buchanan, one of the United We Stand America speakers in Dallas.

Call it just a political move to garner support among the state's huge Hispanic population if you wish, but Bush has a lot going for his views on the subject.

The United States shares an almost 1,000-mile border with Mexico. The United States can only gain if that country's economy strengthens and its middle class grows in numbers. And despite bad news from south of the border this past year in both its political and economic spheres, improvement has been made in Mexico. It is just that conditions were so bad as far as corruption, drug trafficking and inhumane treatment of citizens were concerned that progress was and is difficult to see.

We must work with Mexico to help it solve problems that not only undermine its own peaceful development, but which have an aggravating negative effect on this country.

The United States has given fortunes plus vast amounts of effort to help countries on the other side of the globe. How can we do that and treat our most important border neighbor with disdain?

Clinton crew working at odds on NAFTA

The Clinton administration is working at cross purposes with regard to the North American Free Trade Agreement. While attempting to promote more commerce with two trading partners — Mexico and Canada — the administration is hindering the flow of goods and visitors from those two important countries.

The White House will have to answer for border-crossing fees that the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service wants to impose on foreigners crossing Mexican and Canadian ports of entry. The fees, ranging from $4 to $32 for extended stays are scheduled to start Oct. 9. ...

The INS' proposal inhibits the free flow of trade, commerce and people — people who want to enter the United States legally to spend money or visit relatives. It's a troublesome precedent worthy of review by a president who so strongly supported NAFTA.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Aug. 18, the 230th day of 1995. There are 135 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 18, 1587, Virginia Dare became the first child of English parents to be born on American soil, on what is now Roanoke Island, N.C.

On this date:

In 1846, U.S. forces led by General Stephen W. Kearney captured Santa Fe, N.M.

In 1894, Congress established the Bureau of Immigration.

In 1914, President Wilson issued his "Proclamation of Neutrality," aimed at keeping the United States out of World War I.

In 1938, President Roosevelt dedicated the Thousand Islands Bridge connecting the United States and Canada.

In 1954, Assistant Secretary of Labor James E. Wilkins became the first black to attend a meeting of a president's Cabinet as he sat in for Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell.

In 1958, the novel "Lolita" by Vladimir Nabokov was published.

In 1963, James Meredith became the first black to graduate from the University of Mississippi.

In 1982, for the first time, volume on the New York Stock Exchange topped the 100-million level as 132.69 million shares were traded.

In 1983, Hurricane Alicia slammed into the Texas coast, leaving 22 dead and causing more than $1 billion worth of damage.

In 1987, American journalist Charles Glass escaped his kidnappers in Beirut after 62 days in captivity.

In 1991, Soviet hard-liners launched an unsuccessful coup aimed at toppling President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Ten years ago: Pope John Paul II, in Nairobi, Kenya, as part of an African tour, implored his audience to surmount tribal barriers, and urged countries engaged in the arms race to fight ecological and human crises instead.

Five years ago: A U.S. frigate fired warning shots across the bow of an Iraqi oil tanker in the Gulf of Oman — apparently the first shots fired by the United States in the Persian Gulf crisis.

One year ago: Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles declared an immigration emergency and demanded federal help to cope with the largest surge of Cuban refugees since the 1980 Mariel boatlift.

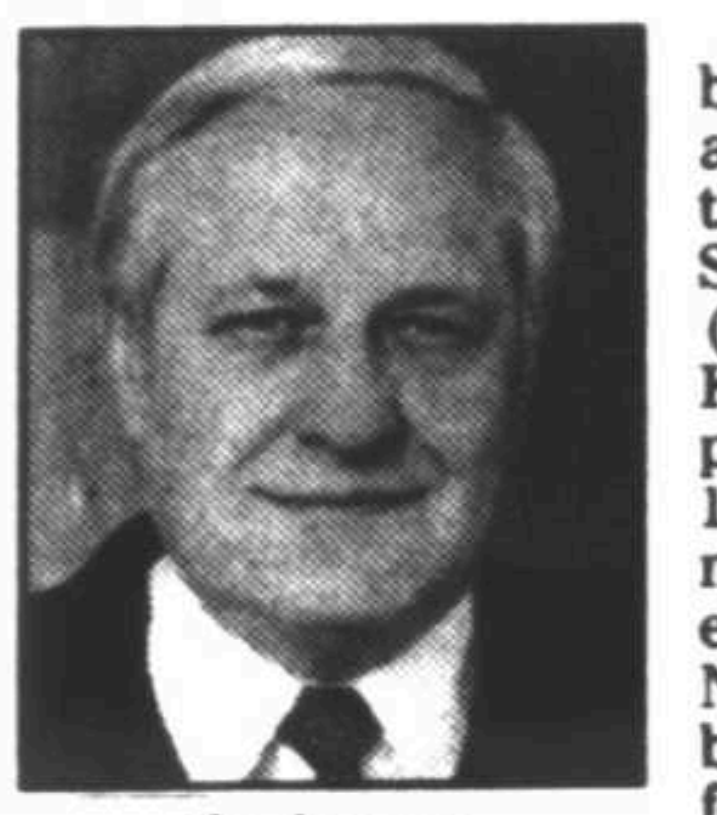
Suspicious slip-up closes Louisville base

WASHINGTON — An internal report by the U.S. Navy suggests that sloppy paperwork may cost nearly a thousand workers their jobs in Louisville, Ky. — while a company that once employed Defense Secretary William Perry stands to reap the financial rewards.



Anderson

Officials at Chicago-based FMC Corp. aren't hiding their joy at the demise of the Naval Surface Warfare Center (NSWC) in Louisville, Ky. The Louisville plant, where more than 1,000 civilians help make surface warfare equipment for the Navy, was one of the bases recently pegged for closure by the independent Base Closure and Realignment Commission (BRAC). With the Louisville base out of the way, FMC is now the only remaining source of this equipment for the Navy.

Perry sat on the board of FMC until February 1993, when he stepped down to join the Clinton administration. Pentagon spokesman Glenn Flood told us Perry had "no direct involvement" in the Navy's BRAC process and has performed no favors for FMC or any other defense contractor.

The Louisville base, also known as the Ordnance Center, was finally put on the closure list this year — which marks the final round of military base closings that began in 1989. BRAC was created by Congress in 1988 to take politics out of the base closure process by having an independent panel of experts choose which bases should close. The list is based on statistics submitted by the individual bases, which are then evaluated by each service branch before the list is sent on to the Pentagon. Once the commission submits its list, Congress must vote it up or down without amendments.

But an internal Navy report obtained by our reporter Aaron Karp found that "higher echelon" Navy officials altered some of the data submitted by the Louisville base "without appropriate justification and supporting documentation." According to the report, these changes appeared as if they were part of the original information submitted by Louisville officials. The report does not mention which officials were responsible for altering the original figures.

For FMC, the decision to close the Louisville base is a long-standing dream come true. For several years, FMC has lobbied hard for shutting down the Louisville operation, arguing that a private contractor like itself could do the work better. Yet those appeals fell on deaf ears within the Pentagon, as Louisville was spared during the 1993 closure process on the grounds that the numbers failed to justify closing the base.

At one point, a top FMC official became frustrated enough to invoke some Reagan-era vernacular in describing the competition. In a March 16, 1993, intraoffice memo, FMC employee Jim Orr referred to the Louisville base as the "Evil Empire":

"We have just lost round 1 of the 1993 Base Closure fight to the Evil Empire a.k.a. NSWC Louisville," Orr wrote. "It is certainly frustrating and discouraging for Louisville to have totally avoided the DOD list.... It is us or them! The market place is not big enough to sustain both of us."

A spokesman for United Defense, FMC's Minneapolis-based Naval Systems Division, told us that FMC did not try to influence the closure process this year, but that it did respond to the Navy's request for information and opinions about the Louisville base.

Nevertheless, some Louisville officials can't help but wonder what their fate would have been had there not been several cases of what the Navy referred to as "internal control weaknesses" in the closure process. Among them:

- Fifteen pages "from the NSWC, Louisville submission (were) removed and replaced with new page(s)."
- Louisville officials claimed the costs of moving the base operations would be either $62 million or $81 million, depending on which base the work was transferred to. "Higher echelon" officials changed the estimate to $18 million.

By the time Navy Secretary John Dalton found out about the changes, he was left with few choices. Had he decided to take Louisville off the list, regulations would have forced him to take all the bases off the list -- thus endangering the whole process.

That's small consolation to the 900 people who'll be left jobless thanks to some sloppy paperwork.

'Perotistas' get together for revival in Dallas

The third-party movement lives, breathes, eats, sneezes and scratches — but, in the curmudgeonly judgment of a desiccated old pundit, it lacks the legs to move forward in 1996.

Murchison

Which isn't to say there won't be a third party because there certainly could be. "I kind of have to stay around," says Ross Perot, host of the political rally cum religious revival cum family reunion in Dallas last weekend.

Many of those who attended the Sunday-morning workshops — by the way, where does H. Ross Perot get the moxie to schedule meetings opposite the Lord God Almighty? — seemed to want a third party without being entirely clear who should lead it or what it should do.

Some manifestly wanted Perot. Others didn't, reasoning that the Great Man's imperial temperament would likely get in the way of his performance. Programatically, the Perotians want clean government and a balanced budget — two unassailable objectives. But, beyond this, there is only haphazard consensus.

Equally worthy of mention as bearing on the prospects for a major grassroots uprising next year is that the Perotistas absolutely loved what they heard from the various Republicans who spoke in Dallas. Wave after wave of cheers greeted Newt Gingrich, with his vast good cheer and enthusiasm. Pat Buchanan carried and stroked them in the palm of his hand.

Alan Keyes, who is black, anti-abortion and a finer orator than Jesse Jackson, was received rapturously. Phil Gramm, who is white, generically conservative and, as a public speaker, won't ever be likened to William Jennings Bryan, was interrupted by applause almost three score times. Even Bob Dole, notorious as a practitioner of the old politics, got a nice reception.

This was a jubilantly conservative audience. Ronald Reagan must have gotten 95 out of every 100 votes in this hall. When Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle asserted that Clinton "has done a good job," there was only the lightest, politest applause.

Proving what? That the Republicans have the political wherewithal to stave off a third-party challenge, whether mounted by Perot or by his Myrmidons? Such a proposition isn't provable. What if the congressional Republicans falter or waffle in upcoming months? All bets would be off.

Yet, it is important to remember that in August 1995, the political dynamics are not those of 1992, when Perot elbowed his way into the presidential race. Conspicuously, there is no President George Bush to drive conservatives up the wall. Chores of that sort are presently the province of President Bill Clinton.

Perot isn't a conservative (or a liberal, for that matter). He's a Perotian. But if the majority of his hard-core followers — those who anted up for a trip to Dallas in August, of all godawful months — are of conservative persuasion, the grassroots will be harder to set ablaze, particularly if congressional conservatives tend to business. Gingrich asked: You want a third party? Consider the House's freshman Republicans.

And suppose the Perotistas are too impatient for that. Whom are they helping most? The Clintons, of course. If Ross Perot runs for president, we may assume he thinks Bill Clinton a more inspiring American than Bob Dole, Phil Gramm or Pat Buchanan because, as in 1992, it will be Clinton he is helping elect.

That is, if you concede Perot the power during this go-round to drain off 20 percent of the popular vote. I don't. I think '92 was, for Ross, the high-water mark. That doesn't mean the disaffection of '92 has gone away; it means that Republicans have moved with some success to channel it in their direction.

How successfully, and how determinedly, the Republicans play their chosen role will help determine whether there is another uprising in '96. The Perotistas are in no mood for nonsense. And neither, come to think of it, are some of us desiccated old pundits, content as we are for the Perotistas to keep the heat on — just not so hot as to produce a glow on President and Mrs. Clinton's faces.

Nuclear weapons create egalitarianism in world

It's a bit late, don't you think, to be debating the bombing of Hiroshima?

Reese

Most of the people arguing against the bombing 50 years after the fact are simply pursuing one of two political agendas. One, they have a Luddite fear of nuclear weapons period, or two, they are part of that hate-America crowd who will say anything to discredit the country.

It's all drivel.

Two bombs ended a war that had cost 55 million human lives. The two nuclear bombs killed a tiny fraction of those 55 million. The firebombing of Tokyo, which preceded Hiroshima and Nagasaki, had already killed more Japanese than would perish in Hiroshima and Nagasaki combined.

The historical evidence is clear that the bombings saved lives. Don't listen to leftist American professors, many of them aging leftovers of the Ho Chi Minh cheerleader squads that disgraced American streets. Read the works of Japanese authors. They had no intention of surrendering. There would have been enormous casualties. God bless Harry Truman.

Don't be one of those idiots who think the morality of killing is determined by the methodology. It makes no difference to a corpse whether he died from old-fashioned dynamite, or newfangled plastic explosives, or a can of black powder laced with nails or a nuclear explosion.

Heat is heat. Concussion is concussion. Overpressures are overpressures. Fire is fire. Falling debris is falling debris. Death is death. Killing is killing. And war is 100 percent about killing, death and destruction.

The only moral thing you can do about a war is end it as quickly as possible. That's what Harry Truman did. God bless him. God (expletive) his critics.

If you survived the Cold War, you can thank nuclear weapons for your survival. All baloney aside, the truth is that nobody can figure out how to make money off a nuclear war or survive to spend it.

If it had not been for the presence of nuclear weapons, the United States and the Soviet Union would have gone to war for sure — and millions would have died from plain, old-fashioned chemical explosions and bullets. The German army killed 27 million Soviet citizens — without nukes. And they didn't need a lot of high-tech gadgets to put a big dent in Europe's Jewish population either.

In this century, it is estimated that over 100 million people have been killed, but of those, only 114,000 (79,000 at Hiroshima, 39,000 at Nagasaki) died from nuclear weapons. What you ought to fear are human beings, not technology.

You ought to fear cruel or stupid human beings in positions of power, and you ought to fear people stupid, ignorant or apathetic enough to put dangerous people in positions of power.

As for nukes, I'm sort of fond of them. Anything which prevents bankers, munitions makers and their political lackeys of playing the filthy game of war for profit is OK technology in my book.

You might think of the old nukes as the most populist, democratic weapons in human history. Unlike conventional weapons, the nukes married to ballistic missiles will, if ever used, kill the elites on both sides as well as the common folk — usually the sole victims in the war-for-profit racket.

Hey, is that egalitarian or not? Isn't egalitarianism the big rage in America? What could be more egalitarian than weapons that will ensure that we will all die together, rich and poor alike? If ever it could be said of a weapon that it is of the people, by the people and for the people, it is surely your friendly neighborhood nuke.

Isn't discrimination a terrible thing? Well, by golly, you won't find a more nondiscriminating weapon in the solar system than the good old nuke. An egalitarian, populist, nondiscriminatory labor-saving device — that's what the nuke is. Ended one war, prevented another.

Optimism triumphs. You see, even a mushroom cloud has a silver lining.

Fuhrman suffered mental block, investigator says

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Detective Mark Fuhrman used a racial epithet in a "macho" bid to impress a screenwriter, but "a mental block" led him to testify that he had not uttered the word in the last decade, a spokesman said Thursday.

Anthony Pellicano, a private investigator hired by Fuhrman, called a news conference to give the former detective's side of an escalating controversy that has threatened the O.J. Simpson trial's conclusion.

While Pellicano was conducting damage control for Fuhrman, the Simpson defense was in court working out details of how the 12 hours of tapes of the Fuhrman interviews will be handled. They also presented testimony to occupy jurors, who were kept unaware of the explosive happenings outside their presence.

Despite the detective's use of the word "nigger," Pellicano and Fuhrman's attorney Robert Tourtelot, insisted that Fuhrman is not a racist and didn't commit perjury on the witness stand.

"Did you ever hear the term 'mental block?'" Pellicano asked as he discussed Fuhrman's testimony. "I mean, when someone asks you a question like that, sometimes you don't — you block out everything except what you think you hear. That's what happened."

He was referring to this exchange between Fuhrman and attorney F. Lee Bailey:

"And you say under oath that you have not addressed any black person as a 'nigger' or spoken about black people as 'niggers' in the past 10 years, Detective Fuhrman?" Bailey asked Fuhrman, who found the bloody glove on Simpson's property.

"That's what I'm saying, sir," Fuhrman replied.

Pellicano insisted that Fuhrman used the word and made other racial comments as part of an effort at "making himself look macho" to the North Carolina scriptwriter. Pellicano said Fuhrman forgot about the tapes when he was testifying in March.

> 'What he was doing was trying to create screen characters, and in his own words, he was talking a lot of trash.'
> — Anthony Pellicano, Fuhrman's private investigator

"What he was doing was trying to create screen characters, and in his own words, he was talking a lot of trash," the investigator said of Fuhrman's conversations with screenwriting professor Laura Hart McKinny.

"He wanted this woman to be excited about his stories ... and he was blustering and posturing and puffing himself up and making himself look macho and everything else that you could imagine."

Pellicano recounted Fuhrman's involvement with McKinny, which began in 1985, saying it was "a very, very bad time in his life. He was upset with his job, he was upset with the LAPD, he was upset with his boss, he was upset with a lot of things."

In court, jurors heard a fingerprint expert testify that Simpson's prints were not found at the crime scene, but nine unidentified fingerprints were.

The defense also fought to stop a planned nighttime jury tour of the crime scene and Simpson's estate Sunday, arguing it was too costly, unnecessary and misleading because the moonlight was different the night of the killings than it will be on Sunday.

Prosecutors argued it was essential for jurors to see the scene at the time of night the murders were committed. Superior Court Judge Lance Ito said he was inclined to allow the visit, though he would return to the scene one more time before making a final decision.

But Ito's mind clearly was on the tapes, the defense team's bombshell that threatened earlier in the week to derail the trial and force Ito off the case he has steered for more than a year. Attorneys have said that Ito's wife, Police Capt. Margaret York, is a target of Fuhrman's invective on the tapes, creating a potential conflict of interest for the judge.

Another judge is reviewing the tape sections involving the judge's wife and is expected to rule by Monday on whether she must be a witness. Ito said he would withdraw if that becomes necessary.

The tapes, recorded by McKinny for a project about the Los Angeles Police Department, haven't been made public, and only small portions have been recounted during attorney arguments. On Thursday, the defense tried to expose more material in a court filing, but Ito quickly sealed the defense offer of proof detailing the most incendiary of Fuhrman's remarks.

Ito has agreed to rule on how much jurors will hear of the tapes, which could undermine the prosecution case against Simpson by painting one of its key witnesses, Fuhrman, as a liar and racist. With Fuhrman's reported statements implicating other LAPD officers in brutality and evidence planting, experts have said it could cast doubt on all police evidence in the case.

Moderate quake rocks California

RIDGECREST, Calif. (AP) — A moderate earthquake struck the high desert in Southern California on Thursday.

No injuries or major damage were immediately reported.

The estimated 5.4-magnitude quake, which struck at 3:39 p.m., was centered 11 miles from Ridgecrest, about 100 miles north of Los Angeles, said Max Benavidez, spokesman for the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

"It was quite strong," said Capt. Richard Davis of the Kern County Fire Department. "We felt the initial shock and two aftershocks."

At a local grocery store, the effects were minimal.

"It was quick up and down motion. It lasted about 5 seconds," said Mark Russell, assistant manager at Albertson's in Ridgecrest, a city of about 28,000. "We had a few items fall."

> — Capt. Richard Davis, Kern County Fire Department

At the local newspaper, "there isn't any obvious damage at all, structural or otherwise," said Scott Farwell, managing editor of The Daily Independent. "We had minor shifting ... books moving around on shelves."

A magnitude-5 quake can produce moderate damage. Magnitude 6 can cause severe damage if it is centered in a populated area.

Researchers isolate third Alzheimer's gene among immigrants

People who inherit one of these three rare mutations develop Alzheimer's before the age of 65 and sometimes as young as 40.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mutation found only among some German-Russian immigrants has been identified as the third gene to cause the early onset of inherited Alzheimer's disease. Scientists say the discovery may speed development of drugs to combat the brain-destroying disorder.

Researchers isolated the gene by probing the chromosomes of a group known as Volga Germans, who have a very high incidence of Alzheimer's before the age of 65. The mutated gene was found on chromosome 1 and linked directly to causing the brain disease.

Two reports on the discovery will be published today in Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Rudolph Tanzi of Massachusetts General Hospital, a principal collaborator in the research, said the new Alzheimer's gene makes a protein that is closely related to protein produced by an Alzheimer's gene his team found earlier on chromosome 14.

This similarity, said Tanzi, puts researchers on a fast track for understanding what causes formation in the brain of amyloid-beta, a gluelike substance that is toxic to brain cells and is a primary feature of Alzheimer's. He said the two proteins may have common functions even though they are produced from different genes.

Once the function of these proteins is found, he said, researchers can develop a drug to block the disease.

"This is an incredibly important discovery," said Marcelle Morrison-Bogorad, a professor of neurology at the University of Texas, Southwestern Medical School in Dallas. "This means that genetics has pretty much solved the mystery of early-onset AD (Alzheimer's disease) and it clears a path for scientific research that wasn't there before."

With three Alzheimer's genes identified, she said, researchers are free to focus on specific molecular processes.

"The body makes about 100,000 proteins," said Morrison-Bogorad. "Now instead of having to study 100,000, we can concentrate on the three proteins expressed (made) by these genes."

Tanzi and his team in 1987 found the first Alzheimer's gene on chromosome 21. They isolated the chromosome 14 gene last June.

People who inherit one of these three rare mutations develop Alzheimer's before the age of 65 and sometimes as young as 40.

Alzheimer's is a progressive disorder that slowly disables the brain. It first erodes memory and eventually wipes out all brain function, causing death.

About 4 million Americans have Alzheimer's. It is the fourth leading cause of death, killing about 100,000 annually. More than 90 percent of patients develop the disease after the age of 65 and some studies suggest that about half of everyone over the age of 85 is afflicted.

But it was the early onset, before age 65, that led to discovery of a genetic cause.

Researchers found the mutations by analyzing the genetic makeup of family groups in which early-age Alzheimer's occurred in generation after generation.

The chromosome 1 gene was tracked down when scientists led by Gerard D. Schellenberg of the Seattle Veteran's Affairs Medical Center studied the genetic makeup of families descended from Germans who migrated to the Volga River area of Russia in the 18th century and then on to the United States in this century. Early Alzheimer's is very common in this small group.

Schellenberg's team determined that the Volga German families had a gene defect somewhere on chromosome 1. About the same time, Tanzi and his group found evidence of an unidentified gene that was similar to the Alzheimer's gene they had found earlier on chromosome 14.

Tanzi and Schellenberg pooled their early findings, which quickened the pace of research. Within days of each other, the two teams then isolated the new mutation.

About 70 percent of early-onset Alzheimer's patients are in families with the chromosome 14 defect, Tanzi said.

Senator rejects postponement of Ruby Ridge FBI hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate subcommittee chairman rejected a Justice Department plea Thursday to postpone hearings on the deadly 1992 FBI siege at Ruby Ridge, Idaho. Justice officials feared hearings could thwart their criminal investigation of an alleged cover-up by top FBI officials.

■ More national news/1D

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., chairman of the Judiciary Committee's terrorism panel, said a telephone conversation with Attorney General Janet Reno on Thursday left him "convinced we can proceed on Sept. 6 without impeding what the Justice Department is doing."

Specter said Reno "expressed reservations and wanted to know who we would call as witnesses."

To alleviate Reno's concerns, Specter said initial hearings would concentrate on early contacts between white separatist Randy Weaver and federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents and on planning by U.S. marshals to arrest Weaver at his mountain cabin on firearms-related charges.

It was not clear whether they also would cover an FBI sniper's killing of Weaver's wife, Vicki, and wounding of Weaver and a friend.

Weaver family members would testify, Specter said.

Reno had no comment on her talk with Specter. A senior Justice official, demanding anonymity, said a compromise was possible along the lines suggested by Specter.

The Justice Department opened a criminal investigation last Friday into whether five top FBI officials, including recently demoted Deputy FBI Director Larry Potts, covered up their approval of controversial "shoot-on-sight" orders given to FBI snipers.

In Iowa, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said, "I'd be willing to talk to the attorney general and to Senator Specter" about a possible delay. "Obviously, we're not trying to discredit anybody's investigation."

In a telephone interview from Portsmouth, N.H., where he was campaigning for the Republican presidential nomination, Specter said, "Phase one is not going to interfere with what Justice is doing."

"Even in phase two on the shooting incidents themselves, we can accommodate their concerns," Specter said. "And there is a line between the disagreement over who authorized the new shooting rules for the FBI and phase three which is whether anybody later covered that up."

Acknowledging that some witnesses might demand immunity before testifying, Specter said, "We're not about to grant anybody any immunity under any circumstances at this stage."

In a blunt letter to Specter, Deputy Attorney General Jamie Gorelick had said September hearings "could seriously jeopardize any subsequent criminal prosecutions."

"We strongly urge postponing the hearing and the attendant preparation until the investigations are complete," she wrote. The letter, written last Friday, was released Thursday.

The incident began as U.S. marshals scouted Weaver's cabin on Aug. 21, 1992. Samuel Weaver, 14, and deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan were killed by gunfire.

The FBI sniper who killed Mrs. Weaver the next day said he was aiming at Weaver's friend, Kevin Harris, who was armed and retreating to the cabin, and did not see Mrs. Weaver standing behind the cabin door, holding an infant.

The snipers were told they "could and should" use deadly force on any armed adult male spotted in the open. Longstanding FBI policy restricts the use of lethal force to protecting oneself or others from imminent harm.

Right-to-carry request cards go fast

Residents to receive actual applications from Austin in September

- DPS certified handgun instructors may begin offering safety courses Sept. 1.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Response to recently released concealed handgun application cards has been brisk locally and across the state, with Midlanders picking up hundreds of application requests.

Those cards are filled out and sent to Austin where the actual application packets are currently being printed. The application packets will be mailed out beginning Sept. 1 to all those who have mailed in their requests, a state official said.

Employees of the Texas Department of Public Safety office, at 2405 S. Loop 250, had numerous visitors throughout the day Wednesday and Thursday asking for the cards.

There is no way to calculate exactly how many Midlanders are requesting the packets, a local DPS officer said. One local gun store owner took 200 of the request cards for his customers.

The state has granted permission for unlimited photocopying and dissemination of the request cards, and most firearm-related businesses are stocking them, the officer said.

Most of the state's DPS offices are reporting similar enthusiasm for the request cards. One office in Tyler reportedly handed out 2,000 cards during the lunch hour Wednesday, a DPS official said.

The request cards are mailed to the Texas Department of Public Safety, CRS/Concealed Handgun Licensing Unit, P.O. Box 15888, Austin, 78761-5888.

Also on Sept. 1, DPS certified handgun instructors around the state may begin offering the 10-15-hour safety courses each applicant must pass before becoming licensed.

Several individual instructors and incorporated groups are advertising their certified courses around Midland. Flyers and further information on those courses is available from local firearm retailers.

Completion certificates from the instructors must be mailed in, along with the completed application packets.

The DPS-authorized courses will consist of both classroom and firing range instruction. All firing ranges must be registered with the DPS, although they are not subject to DPS regulation.

The DPS is currently registering ranges at no cost. Range owners or operators should call 512-706-7293 or 512-706-7294 to request registration of their facilities, the Austin spokesman said.

DPS officials will then contact the range owners or operators to complete the registration process.

According to the state law passed in the last legislative session, an adult Texan is

City internships offer inside look at government, chance to learn

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Tony Carrillo has been getting an insiders look at City Hall — as a summer intern.

"I feel it's going to be a good experience,'' the 24-year-old said. Carrillo plans to graduate with a degree in political science from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin next spring, then enroll in law school.

Carrillo has worked full time as an intern since the beginning of June. Today will be his last day.

He began the summer internship in the irrigation division of the city's parks department. The work included visiting parks, inspecting equipment and filing repair orders.

About a month later, Carrillo changed jobs to become a public information officer in the community services department. That position involves keeping up with departmental projects and writing news releases.

Carrillo pursued the internship this summer after finding the work fulfilling during the summer of 1993. That year, he worked in the purchasing department filing purchase orders and requisitions.

"It wasn't just tedious work. There's a lot to learn,'' he said.

Personally, Carrillo said, he's learned that the city operates like a business and involves more than outsiders may perceive. As a result, Carrillo is quick to recommend a city internship to other college students.

"It teaches people how to relate to persons in a professional setting. It's not all ball-and-chain labor,'' said Carrillo, who's also had a taste of supermarket, restaurant and department store work.

Students should take note that the city employs attorneys, accountants and

Hand-and-arm powered homemade ice cream is beyond good. And along with it comes the joy of socializing and delighting in friendships and fellowships.

Ice cream is a summertime treat if not the treat of all desserts.

"Of course, we made ice cream when we were kids,'' recalled Midlander Ed Brannon, who grew up in the Texas countryside around Waco. "We had two cows, chickens, plenty of butter. My grandmother bought sugar in 200-pound sacks. So we had all the fixings. In the summer, we had a lot of ice cream.''

Homemade ice cream, which is cooled, chilled and frozen in a crank-turned drum with a dasher in an old wooden bucket, was the focus, along with the fellowship, at Sunday's Ice Cream Crank-Off sponsored by the Midland County Historical Society to benefit the historic 1899-Brown-Dorsey Medallion Home in Midland.

Brannon, an old hand at turning the crank on multi-quart freezers, got to bask in seeing his 3 1/2-year-old granddaughter, Amber Kay Merket, turn the crank of an old-fashioned, two-cup freezer — a White Mountain brand — at the ice-cream social.

Back in his childhood days, Brannon said that he and his family "practically grew up on the stuff. And we would all fuss about whose turn it was to churn it. It ceases to be fun after so long a time. We had a lot of homemade ice cream. It was good stuff.''

Odessa College jumps on information superhighway with its Web homepage

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Odessa College passed another mile marker on the information highway Thursday with the introduction of its "homepage" on the Internet.

Now on-line computer users anywhere in the world can peruse the college's fall class schedules from their homes, read about the history of the campus or print out campus photos and maps.

"This will be available to anyone on the World Wide Web who has America Online, Compuserve or Prodigy. People will also be able to electronically request publications and other information about Odessa College," said Frank Wells, OC director of data processing.

Wells said the campus uses YAHOO, a seek-and-search software that allows net surfers easy access to more than 30,000 topic destinations. The college already is using the Web to access infor-

DAY WATCH

MC registration

Midland College has scheduled one day of arena registration next week for the fall semester. Registration times for students with time permits are 10 a.m.-1 p.m. and 4-8 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center. Open registration for students without time permits is 5:30-8 p.m. During the registration period students can get assistance with schedule preparation and advising at the same time. Students may select and reserve classes with advisers and then proceed to complete the registration process. Faculty, college counselors and financial aid personnel will be available to help students plan a schedule and enroll in classes. Classes for the fall semester begin Aug. 28. Late registration for fall classes will be offered through Sept. 7. For more information, call 685-4501.

New band directors

Two new band directors have joined the Midland Independent School District band program. Jim Cathey, a recent masters graduate of West Texas A&M University, will be the director of the San Jacinto Junior High School's Mustang Band; and Don Zurbriggen of Texas Tech University will be the assistant band director at MHS. The MHS Bulldog Band will have a new look with new uniforms, an expanded flag corps, and new percussion equipment. A public summer band performance will be presented at 7 p.m. Thursday on the MHS soccer field. No admission will be charged. Attendees are invited to bring lawn chairs and blankets to the performance, which will feature Goddard and San Jacinto junior high school, Midland Freshman High School and MHS bands.

From illiteracy to E-mail

77-year-old father sends first written messages to his daughter

By Tonya Solis
Longview News-Journal

> ‘It was remarkable to receive the E-mail. I'm 48 years old and I've never received any written communication from him. It was pretty touching.’
> — Dorothy J. Jones, R.G. Bouchum's daughter

LONGVIEW — In a time when thousands of people surf the net on a daily basis, a short E-mail message from your dad might not seem like much. But for R.G. Bouchum of Longview and Dorothy J. Jones of Fairbanks, Alaska, a recent message held mountains of meaning.

When Bouchum wrote to his daughter, it was the first written correspondence she had ever received from her dad.

Until about three years ago, Bouchum, 77, was unable to read and write. But studies at the East Texas Literacy Council changed that. The elderly man is now not only reading and writing but able to maneuver through the Windows and America Online computer programs.

"It was remarkable to receive the E-mail message," Ms. Jones said. "I am 48 years old and I've never received any written communication from him. It was pretty touching."

Bouchum said he chose that method of communicating with his daughter because it complemented her profession. She is associate professor of computer application at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks.

Mindy Beavers, a Literacy Council volunteer, said she suggested E-Mail to Bouchum one day and the next day, he eagerly approached her about sending a message to his daughter.

"He didn't even break a sweat," Ms. Beavers said. "He was down there the next day wanting to use the computer ... In three years, he has gone from the basics of literacy to using the computer."

Bouchum went to the Literacy Council at the urging of a friend.

"I couldn't read and so much is going on now that you need to know how to read," he said.

Ms. Beavers said when Bouchum began using the computer he was a beginner in every sense of the word. She said the computer is used in the Literacy Program as a tool to expand reading and writing skills.

She added that although Bouchum has learned a lot from using the computer probably the most important thing that has happened is that he can communicate with his daughter in a way he never has been able to before.

For his efforts, Bouchum was recognized with a reception at Bethel Baptist Church last month organized by Ms. Jones and her sister Bobbie Anderson of Houston.

"We also hope it will encourage other people," Ms. Jones said.

mation at other colleges and universities and from libraries, museums and other sites.

Further down the road, computer users will be able to register from their homes, according to Jess Whitfield, OC instructional computer specialist.

What, no more lines at registration?

"It's a generational thing," said Charles "Chuck" Everett, garnering laughter from fellow OC administrators. The OC senior systems analyst said OC students can already use a college computer to call up class schedules and see which classes have filled up. "Forgetting your catalogue of class schedules is no longer a problem," Everett said.

Electronic mail is available but limited for teachers on the OC campus now.

Since the OC homepage recently went on-line, OC information director Susan Hammons said a former student living in Washington state sent an E-mail message to OC expressing excitement about being able to read about the college on the Internet.

The OC homepage contains information about each department, descriptions of all courses offered, schedules of credit and non-credit courses and a calendar of campus events for the month.

"We are working on getting a broadcast listing of KOCV programs into the system," Everett said. The listing will be available through the Public Broadcasting System's homepage.

The OC homepage is available on the Web address: http: //www.odessa.edu.

"It can be accessed next week from education topics in YAHOO, which has an index of community colleges," Wells said.

SOCIAL: Homemade ice cream benefits historical home farm and married, he and his wife, Sue, "made homemade ice cream every Saturday," recalled Mrs. Brannon.

Their daughter, Sherri Merket, reflected on those days.

"We'd take the churn to church, and we'd just go to Fort Davis every year and make ice cream in the (Indian) Lodge," Mrs. Merket said. "My brothers would turn the crank, and I would sit on it (top of the freezer's wooden bucket)" to keep it from "bouncing around while they did the turning.

"And we would take turns turning," Mrs. Merket said. "It would take two of us to turn the crank when the ice cream got really hard."

Nancy McKinley, who heads up the Midland County Historical Society and who coordinated the Ice Cream Crank-Off, recalled making home-cranked ice cream in early-day Midland.

"Sure, I remember. Somebody always had to sit on the freezer while they were cranking," Mrs. McKinley said. "I always would do that because I was the littlest one. And then your reward was this: You'd get to lick part of the dasher" after the ice cream was made.

The historical society, Mrs. McKinley said, earned $312.30 in the crank-off.

Midlander Joy Butts is an aficionado of homemade ice cream and knows why.

"It's cold. It gets me through the summer. There is nothing that cools you down as quickly and as thoroughly as a bowl of good homemade ice cream."

"A freezer of homemade ice cream will draw a crowd of friends just like flies. It's not hard to draw a crowd."

Eating, devouring or otherwise savoring homemade ice cream is a summertime pleasantry.

"If it is a 110 degrees in the shade, I'd put on my sweater before I'd dish out my ice cream," Mrs. Butts declared, "because I am going to eat it until I am so cold that I just shiver. When I am eating homemade ice cream, this is serious business."

engineers among other professionals, and not just the workers normally visible to the public, Carrillo said.

"A lot of people know what type of work they want to go into but don't know a lot of career opportunities are available here" in the public sector, he said.

The city hires about six interns — largely colleges students — for 12 weeks each summer, said Beth Mosely, human resources coordinator.

Students are generally paid about $6 an hour and are assigned jobs that relate to their field of study. Past interns included nursing students assisting at the health department, criminal justice majors helping out at the police department and engineering students working in their future field.

"We feel like it gives the college students we hire a little hands-on experience," Ms. Mosely said. "I do think they get a lot out of it."

In fact, two city employees — Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca and Municipal Court attorney Novert Morales — are former interns, she said.

In addition to the summer intern program, the city has a 30-month management intern program typically for individuals with a masters degree in public administration making the transition from school to the work force, Ms. Mosely said. The city currently employs two such interns.

POLICE REPORTS

Marijuana arrests

CRANE COUNTY - Two Midland men were in jail Thursday after Crane County officials reported they found 320 pounds of marijuana in their vehicle, Wednesday.

According to a report, deputies saw a Mercury Tracer station wagon run a stop sign at the intersection of FM 1953 and Highway 329 at about 10: 20 a.m. Officials stopped the vehicle and detected a strong odor of marijuana coming from the vehicle.

Officials found 320 pounds of marijuana, valued at $256,000, inside the vehicle, the report stated.

David Tozar, 21, and Evaristo Cortez Galindo, 19, were both arrested and charged with possession of marijuana. Bond was set at $150,000 each.

"WHERE DID THE KIDS GO?"

Yep, they're off to school again! Most of them fussed a bit, and parents sighed. But how blessed we are to share in a country where the pursuit of an education is the right of every citizen. While much is learned in the family circle and daily social activities, the power of formal education in molding hearts and minds is vital and essential. And, each child is unique with those special talents and abilities. So, we tip our hats this day to those dedicated educators who give life and training to the work of educating our "moms and dad and leaders" for tomorrow.

Henry Ford is quoted as saying, "anyone who stops learning is old, whether 20 or 80!" Perhaps the call to learning needs to reach all of us. Proverbs 1 says, "A wise man will hear, and will increase learning; and a man of understanding shall attain unto wise counsels." Can you remember those teachers who gave you, and me, bits of guidance and wisdom that made a difference? Role models they were, in the strictest sense of the word. And, we are grateful.

Where did the kids go? Back to school to learn how to live in this world successfully. May God be a part of the plan.

Police charge mother, stepfather with abuse of girl implanted with Norplant

DALLAS (AP) — A woman had her 14-year-old daughter surgically implanted with a birth control device three years ago and police say it was done to help hide abuse by the girl's stepfather.

The girl told police that her stepfather had raped her when she was 11-years-old and that her mother took her to a clinic and had her fitted with Norplant rather than report the abuse.

In the three years since she was fitted with the device, her stepfather continued to rape her until she ran away in May, the girl said initially.

The parents say that's not true, that their daughter was sexually active and that the mother arranged for the implant because they didn't want her to get pregnant.

Both parents were arrested Saturday, and the couple's six children, ranging from 2 months to the 14-year-old girl, were placed temporarily with relatives in Corpus Christi or with state Child Protective Services, police said.

The 39-year-old stepfather was charged with two counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child, one count of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and one count of indecency with a child. He remained in jail Thursday in lieu of $105,000 bail.

The 29-year-old mother was released Tuesday on $500 bond on a charge of failure to report child abuse.

Both are unemployed, police said. To protect the girl's identity, their names were withheld.

The stepfather reported in May that the girl had run away from a fast-food restaurant in north Dallas. For the next three months she lived with her stepfather's sister in far northeast Dallas after telling the woman, "He's been messing with me."

The man's sister said the girl pointed to the device in her arm and said, "That's why I have this on — for him." The woman said she harbored the girl since May without reporting the alleged abuse because the girl told her, "I don't want to cause no problem."

But about 9:30 p.m. on Aug. 10, the stepfather went to his sister's house for the third time in as many days and this time tried to forcibly retrieve his stepdaughter, police were told.

The girl said when she would not go outside with him, her stepfather pulled a pocketknife and said, "Don't cause a scene, 'cause I will cut someone." She said she pushed him away, ran into a bedroom and shouted for help.

While the man's sister talked with him, the girl called 911, she said.

On Monday, two days after her parents' arrest, the girl recanted her story about her stepfather sexually abusing her and began thumbing through the Yellow Pages, looking for a lawyer to get the couple out of jail, the man's sister said.

"She told me ... 'It's not true.' She said 'I wanted to get away from there. I wanted to get out of the house. He cheats on her (the girl's mother). He beats her.'"

Child abuse experts say it's common for abused children to later change or recant their allegations.

The girl also said she wanted her mother to leave her stepfather so she and her mother could go to McAllen where they used to live, the man's sister said.

Wednesday morning, the girl and her mother left the residence of the man's sister in a van, leaving no word of their destination, the man's sister said.

Norplant consists of six matchstick-sized silicone rods filled with a synthetic hormone and implanted under the skin, usually in the arm. The device slowly releases the hormone to prevent pregnancy over several years.

"You could see the little tubes" in the girl's arm, police Detective Arleen Martinez said. The case left her "just disgusted," she said.

"I've never heard of anything like this," said Deborah Daro, research director of the National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse in Chicago. "It's a totally inappropriate reaction."

Health professionals say there are no age restrictions on Norplant use and that clinics are allowed to implant the device in minors with parental consent.

"That by itself would not constitute something that would have to be reported to us. Unfortunately, there are 11-year-old children who are sexually active with their peers," said Susan Watkins, a program administrator with the Child Protective Services' state office in Austin.

"We would certainly hope that a health provider would talk to a child that age and find out what was going on with the child, see if there was reason to be concerned about child abuse."

Morales announces task force to help fight telemarketing fraud

AUSTIN (AP) — On the heels of news about a stronger federal rule to combat telemarketing fraud, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales Thursday announced the establishment of a new state anti-fraud task force.

The Texas Telemarketing Task Force is a joint effort between the state and several federal agencies interested in fighting "the No. 1 consumer crime, not just in the state of Texas but indeed throughout our nation," Morales said.

On Wednesday, the Federal Trade Commission adopted a new rule boosting the power federal regulators and state law enforcement officials have against telemarketing scam artists.

The rule allows the FTC, beginning Dec. 31, to seek fines of up to $10,000 per violation against a company that breaks the commission's rules on telemarketing fraud.

It also gives state attorneys general the authority to go to federal court and seek nationwide injunctions against companies to keep them from engaging in fraudulent telemarketing.

Under existing law, an attorney general can seek a court injunction only to stop a company from operating within the state. But telemarketing fraud is generally an interstate business, Morales said.

He said most scam artists tell their callers to contact people in other states. That way, they can avoid being investigated by officials in their home state.

"Over the last decade, as the nation has been preoccupied with street crime, violent crime, white-collar criminals have become more sophisticated, more numerous and more entrenched than ever before," Morales said.

"In most of our telemarketing fraud cases, we usually discover that we are dealing with an out-of-state, out-of-jurisdiction operation," he said. "These telemarketers try both to avoid detection and to evade prosecution by using law enforcement jurisdictions as barriers."

Morales said law enforcement officials who track fraud list San Antonio, El Paso and Arlington as hotbeds of telemarketing fraud in Texas.

Often, the most susceptible victims are the elderly.

"These scam artists prey on those who are isolated, those who are too trusting and those who become too desperate as their fixed incomes fail to meet the rising cost of living," Morales said.

The new task force will join the attorney general's office with the Federal Trade Commission, the U.S. attorney's office, the FBI, the U.S. Postal Inspector, the U.S. Secret Service and others who will share information and resources to end the operations.

The task force's work will be modeled after previous cooperative efforts that have led to indictments and convictions for fraud.

One such effort led to the arrests and convictions of 104 people involved in a scam in Arlington between 1989 and 1990. U.S. Postal Service officials and investigators from several other agencies discovered that six companies had taken about $60 million from more than 200,000 victims.

"We saw how effective it was working with other agencies," said Steven Caver, postal inspector in Fort Worth.

Morales said he expected more investigations — both civil and criminal — and more arrests as a result of the task force, but he would not comment on which areas of the state would be targeted.

Tom Carter, FTC regional office director in Dallas, said starting a task force in Texas was the next logical step in a long-running effort to curb telemarketing fraud.

Similar task forces are operating in Louisiana, New Mexico and other states, he said.

Officials probe blood-spattered boat discovered in Gulf waters

FREEPORT (AP) — The FBI and Brazoria County sheriff's deputies on Thursday investigated the mysterious discovery of a blood-spattered pleasure boat in the Gulf of Mexico about 13 miles off the Texas coast.

Coast Guard officials said an off-duty Harris County sheriff's deputy who was boating in the Gulf notified them at 1:15 p.m. Thursday about an 18-foot boat that was anchored and had its engine running.

The boat was found about 13 miles off San Luis Pass, just north of Freeport.

There was nobody aboard the boat, and blood covered the windshield and forward part of the vessel, the Coast Guard said.

Crew members from the Coast Guard vessel Point Spencer boarded the boat and found a driver's license and car keys in a glove compartment.

The boat's owner was identified through the license and the boat identification number, but his identity was withheld pending notification of family members.

A Coast Guard helicopter, utility boat and two other vessels searched the area for two hours without result.

The boat was turned over to Brazoria County authorities, and the Coast Guard referred all further questions to sheriff's deputies and the FBI.

FBI spokesman Jim Conway confirmed that the agency was investigating the discovery as a "crime on the high seas" but could offer no further information on Thursday.

Brazoria County investigators did not immediately return telephone calls from The Associated Press.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Keeping a close eye on the competition will help you steal a march on them. Those who underestimate your tenacity are in for a big surprise. Approach influential people with a plan that will make them look good even to their critics. Your public relations skills are superb! A love you find early in 1996 could turn out to be the real thing. Plan for your future together.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: baseball legend Roberto Clemente, actress Madeleine Stowe, filmmaker Roman Polanski, actress Shelley Winters.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Resist the many temptations you encounter now and a wish will be granted before the month is out. Be careful about romance on the rebound. A relationship you think is over could be resurrected.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The less you are seen and supervised, the better you like it. Seek privacy when working on a complicated task. Take stock of your financial position and do what you can to strengthen it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An extravagant streak can cause trouble if you like to shop. Your main problem is knowing when to stop. Put those credit cards under lock and key.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The past could come back to haunt you this month. Refuse to let pride or prejudice stand in the way of a winning business proposition. Smarten up. Do what is right for all concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Wait until the smoke clears before announcing your plans. You can sidestep turf battles at work by being totally professional. Spend more time with trusted friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop hanging out in the wings, wishing you were center stage. Polishing your image will help you open new doors. Choose your companions carefully when dining out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Put your loved ones' needs first today. Avoid disappointing a child who is counting on your presence. Romance has its ups and downs. Search your heart. Play for time if asked to make a commitment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your powerful personality can be an incredible asset or a major liability. Know when to speak up and when to remain silent. A positive thinker, you rarely worry about things going wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An unexpected development could have you rethinking your goals. You may have to cut back your spending for a while. Be willing to make temporary sacrifices to help out a loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be vigilant or romance could pass you by. Someone may be keeping a protective eye on you. Finish work early so you can start enjoying the weekend. A family reunion patches up old quarrels.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Home life will become more rewarding if you stop trying to involve loved ones in activities they find boring. Let them do their own thing. Ask your mate's help in planning a realistic household budget.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Things go well as you make your daily rounds. New employment, housing or health benefits are part of the picture. It is possible to entertain friends without going into debt.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1 ♡	2 NT	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

To follow the concept of Gilbert and Sullivan and make the punishment fit the crime is well and good for normal human foibles. But to exact tribute when no ill was committed does not seem fair. Consider this hand.

Over South's one heart opening bid, West's jump to two no trump was unusual, showing length in the minor suits. North's jump to four hearts closed the auction.

West led the king and ace of diamonds and continued with a third round. With nothing to go by, declarer would have discarded the queen of clubs, drawn trumps and then tried in one of a number of ways to limit the spade losers to one. All of them were doomed to failure, and declarer would have ended up losing two diamond tricks and two spades.

Unfortunately, West's innocent action in the auction painted a picture of the defender's holding, and declarer was capable of taking advantage of it. A spade was discarded on the third diamond, trumps were drawn in two rounds and the ace and king of spades were cashed in case the suit broke 3-2. The 4-1 split did not faze declarer one bit.

Since the king of clubs was almost surely with West at this vulnerability, declarer was not tempted to try the finesse in that suit. Instead, declarer led a club to the ace and exited with the queen. On lead with the king of clubs, and down to nothing but minor-suit cards, West was forced to yield a ruff-and-sluff, permitting declarer to trump on the table while discarding the remaining spade from hand, making four-odd.

Several upscale department stores to boycott Liz Taylor's newest scent

Department stores are sending Liz's new scent downtown.

NEW YORK — Upscale department stores are sending Elizabeth Taylor's newest scent downtown.

The retailers won't stock Black Pearls when it hits the market this fall because Elizabeth Arden, maker of the perfume, is cutting the amount it contributes to the salaries of counter salespeople in department stores, The Wall Street Journal reported Thursday.

The companies boycotting the scent include Federated Department Stores Inc., which owns Macy's and Bloomingdale's; Dillard Department Stores Inc.; May Department Stores Co.; and Dayton Hudson Corp.

The fragrance will be found in some less elegant stores, including JCPenney Co. and Sears Roebuck & Co. Taylor's other scents include Passion, White Diamonds and Fragrant Jewels.

ROME — Former Parliament member Ilona Staller has returned to her roots — stripping.

But the one-time porn star only bared her breasts Tuesday during a performance before 2,000 people at a water park. She refused to take it all off.

"My public doesn't need to see me nude," the newspaper Il Messaggero quoted her as saying. They "know me by heart."

Staller, better known by her stage name Cicciolina, said she made her first stage appearance in several years because she needs money for lawyers' fees from her successful child custody battle with ex-husband Jeffrey Koons.

An Italian judge rejected the artist's claims that Staller was an unfit mother for their 2-year-old son because of her porn background.

NEW YORK — Tim Allen swears there will be no TV life for him after he hangs up his tool belt on "Home Improvement."

"I'll be happy to watch myself in reruns in the golden years," he said in the September issue of Cosmopolitan, vowing never to create another television character.

But Allen, 42, isn't pulling the plug on his hit ABC show just yet. It's gearing up for another season.

He likes the fact that his popularity keeps him and his wife, Laura, on the A-list for Hollywood parties.

"We go to these parties and see the stars, and we get catty and say to each other, 'God, they're so much shorter, or older, or plastic,'" Allen said.

"Sure, Laura grooves on some of the younger dudes, and I check out the hot starlets, but basically we don't take any of it seriously," he said.

NEW YORK — A word of advice from Gail Sheehy: Plan to have several careers and retire at age 75.

Gail Sheehsuggests you have several careers, retire at 75.

Sheehy, whose best-seller "New Passages" examines the lives of middle-age men and women, says a new outlook is needed because people are taking much longer to grow up and much longer to die.

"The Social Security retirement age should probably be increased in gradual stages to 75," she told Parade magazine in the Aug. 20 issue.

"In the meantime, people should plan on 'retiring' two or three times in their lives, each time phasing in a new career before they give up their old one."

NEW YORK — David Dinkins attributes his speedy recovery from triple bypass surgery to being 68 years young.

The former mayor returned home Thursday after undergoing emergency surgery in South Carolina.

He became faint while playing tennis in severe heat at a Hilton Head Island resort on Aug. 6 and was operated on four days later.

"Because I'm young, I'll progress more rapidly than most," the sexagenarian said as he left a Charleston, S.C., hospital. "I am a fortunate fellow. God is good."

Dinkins, who teaches at Columbia University, won't be on the courts any time soon as he continues to regain his strength, but he'll be in the stands when the U.S. Open comes to town in a couple of weeks.

Mantle family unveils 'organ donor' trading card

DALLAS (AP) — The family of Mickey Mantle on Thursday carried out his last wish, unveiling a new "organ donor" trading card with the baseball great's picture and autograph that will be passed out at major league stadiums across the nation.

"My father made this a personal issue. We want to keep his commitment and dream alive. There are thousands of people waiting for organs," Mantle's son, Danny, said at a news conference at Baylor University Medical Center.

He noted his Dad had given a slogan for the organ awareness program, "Be a hero. Be a donor."

Mantle died at the hospital Sunday from cancer that rapidly spread through his body following a liver transplant.

Up to 1 million cards will be handed out to fans attending major league games over Labor Day weekend.

The printing of the first million cards is being underwritten by the Baylor Health Care System Foundation. Further printings will be underwritten by the Mickey Mantle Foundation.

Acting Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig embraced the idea of distributing the cards at games.

"Major League Baseball supports this wholeheartedly, and we are excited to be part of such a worthy event," Selig said in a prepared statement.

Dallas attorney Roy True, a close friend of the Hall of Famer, said establishing the Mickey Mantle Foundation was one of Mantle's last wishes.

Mantle "was in awe, absolute awe," after receiving a successful liver transplant on June 8, that he and five other people got a second chance of life because one person agreed to donate his organs upon death.

"He said he felt God had a purpose in letting him live through this, and he wanted to do something about it. That evening was the beginning of the Mickey Mantle Foundation," True said.

Olympic sprint champion Carl Lewis was at the news conference, saying he wanted to become part of "Mickey's Team." Lewis presented a $25,000 check from the Wendy Marx Foundation, which he co-founded in 1989 after a close friend received a liver transplant that saved her life.

True said a donor organ trading card with Lewis' picture and autograph, will be printed and distributed by the Mantle Foundation next year, leading up to the Olympics, which will be in Atlanta.

Hopefully, other athletes will join the effort, Lewis said.

"We hope these are just the first two cards of many. We'd like to make this a worldwide project, absolutely, to spread the word about the importance of organ donor awareness," Lewis said.

"Mickey was a great baseball player. He's moved many people, and through this foundation, he will move many, many more."

Mantle's wife, Merlyn, said there was so much hope after the successful liver transplant. And then, before long, came the news that cancerous cells remained after the surgery and were spreading rapidly to other parts of his body.

"If I were him, I would have been so angry. But he wasn't, and he died with dignity," she said. "Now, we have to promote this; we want to carry this out, as Mickey wanted."

"The only goal we have" for the first year of the Mantle Foundation, True said, "is an absolute home run. Mickey absolutely hated to lose, and I don't think Mickey would be satisfied unless we eradicate organ shortages in this country."

The first of the Mickey Mantle organ donor baseball trading cards were passed out to Mantle's wife and three sons, who immediately volunteered their organs. Lewis, Mantle's doctors and others at the news conference also signed the cards.

Boone Powell Jr., president and chief executive officer of Baylor Health Care System, also announced the establishment of a Mickey Charles Mantle Endowed "Bench" in Transplant Surgery Research.

"In our world, when endowments are created, they are normally called chairs. Today, we are going to announce our endowment, but we are going to call it not a chair, but a bench" in Mantle's honor, Powell said.

FAMILY MATTERS

Clash over clothes causes continuing controversy

By Jim May, Ph.D.

May

DEAR FAMILY: I have just come home from shopping with my 16-year-old daughter, and for the fourth time this week, haven't bought her any school clothes. She insists on buying what I consider to be ugly and wrong school clothes. She wants these oversized clothes (baggy T-shirts and shorts) with these hiking boots! I just don't know what's come over her. She never used to dress like this. Always before she wore dresses and cute outfits to school.

Now she's furious at me again because I won't let her dress the way that she wants to dress. So we're not talking again! Her father and I both agree that she should wear clothes that we think are appropriate for her. We don't want her to go around looking like a slob and a bum. Why do girls do this? Is there something wrong with her? Is she using drugs and that's why?

I don't know what to do next. School starts next week and she doesn't have any new clothes to wear (of course she has plenty of clothes). I don't think we should buy her any clothes until she agrees to at least dress nicely to go to school. She says we're just a bunch of "preppies" and don't understand. She's managed to convince her father that she should be able to have some clothes like she wants, so now I'm fighting both of them.
HELP ME

DEAR HELP: Try to keep a sense of humor about all of this. If your daughter has and continues to perform in the major areas of her life — school and appropriate social relation — then try not to focus on her choice in clothes. As long as her dress choices are not clearly problematic — for example, satanic or "druggie" — try to give her some latitude. Her dress choices do not necessarily suggest that there is anything wrong with her at all or that she is using drugs.

Perhaps you and your husband could meet with her and discuss the possibility of a clothes budget that would include mostly clothes that she likes and a few that you like. Keep the lines of communications open, especially with teenagers. You want to have an opportunity to at least discuss a problem with her, instead of being shut out of her problem-solving process. Give her a sense of acceptance and respect for her opinions and feelings, even if you do not agree. Create a sense of openness and a willingness to listen and she will be more willing to actually discuss a problem with you.

This situation can be an opportunity to create more "adult" discussions with your daughter. As she embarks on the process of identifying her peer group and hence her identity, you have the opportunity to share your journey with her. There is certainly nothing wrong with your wanting her to dress nicely — translated as "preppy" — nor is there anything inherently wrong with her wanting to dress "grunge." The important thing to remember is that there is no single way to become a happy adult - there is a rich and diverse path. Join her on that journey. It can be fun and rewarding.

DEAR READERS: With the recent death of baseball great Mickey Mantle, let us discuss an aspect of alcohol abuse that is very real and deadly. While I certainly am very aware, both professionally and personally, of the emotional and psychological effects of growing up in an alcoholic home, the disease has devastating physical effects too.

The bodies of alcohol abusers are often ravaged by the effects of the toxic chemical ingested into the body. We tend to treat alcoholism as a "social disease," and forget that it can and often does have disastrous physical effects, including problems of the gastrointestinal tract, such as chronic inflammation and cancer. Alcohol abuse is also often associated with stomach and bowel disease too.

Mantle's battle to live has refamiliarized us with liver problems associated with alcoholism. Numerous liver problems are brought about by alcohol, including "fatty liver," alcoholic hepatitis and cirrohosis of the liver. Acute pancreatitis and chronic pancreatitis are often associated with alcohol abuse. Unfortunately, these diseases are especially painful and debilitating.

Other complications associated with alcohol abuse include toxic effects on the central nervous system (seizures and dementia), the peripheral nervous system (numbness and weakness), and the cardiovascular system (hypertension, palpitations, shortness of breath, cardiac arrhythmias and disease of the heart muscle). Cancers known or suspected to be related to alcohol abuse include mouth, oropharynx, esophagus, pancreas, colon, breast and liver.

If you know of someone who is abusing alcohol, encourage them to consider Alcoholics Anonymous — it might save their lives.

Stories of World War II are both cautionary, exciting

By James Schembari
N.Y. Times News Service

My father said he couldn't see a thing that day 50 years ago. He was too far away but knew that right across Tokyo Bay on the U.S.S. Missouri, World War II was coming to an end, and with it, the most exciting adventure of his life.

He still talks about it. He also talks about the kamikaze at Okinawa that slammed into his battleship, the U.S.S. West Virginia, and also about the one that missed. When the pilot pulled out of his dive, obviously with a change of heart, he smiled at my father and his gun crew as he flew by. Then they shot him down.

He has told me about the continuous thunder of the 16-inch guns during the Battle of Leyte Gulf, how he later almost went down in a stricken whaleboat during a storm and how he was wounded near the Philippines. He has even told me how much he enjoyed Navy food.

My experiences in Vietnam were benign by contrast, and I am thankful for that. But I went to Vietnam nonetheless, and it was my father's stories that took me there.

GROWING UP, I could never get enough of them. I remember being shooed into the kitchen to eat during big family dinners and hearing the grown-ups in the dining room talking about the war. Uncle Jimmy fought in France, Leo at the Battle of the Bulge, Harry at Guadalcanal. My father saw the flag go up on Iwo Jima.

My aunts worked in defense factories, Mom welded fighters for the Navy. My parents' stories came together when Mom took a room at a boardinghouse run by my father's mother. Dad, home on leave, fell in love.

The author Studs Terkel has called it the good war, the whole nation coming together to accomplish one great thing. My family had every reason to be proud of their roles in winning that war and every right to brag about it over dinner.

To a boy, it seemed like one grand event, a heroic battle against evil that the good guys won. So for me, when high school ended and with the draft in full gear, there was only one clear path and that was into the Navy, just like my Dad. Just like my Dad, I asked to be stationed on a battleship (although I didn't get my wish), as if I hoped to fight his war. I even left with one of his old uniforms folded in my duffel bag.

Vietnam was the wrong war for all of that. I came home knowing that I had not been on the side of the angels like my father, and was bewildered that my time had not been as rich as his. I felt I had wasted four years of my life.

A FEW MONTHS ago I stood with my children, 8, 5 and 3, at the Navy Memorial in Washington. We had been passing it and I asked my wife to pull over. "I just want to see it," I told her. "Just for a minute."

While my children played in the fountains, while my wife stayed in the car and read a book, I moved along the 22 bronze reliefs of naval history and relived my own. One actually showed a ship that looked strikingly like mine engaged in a supply operation at sea that I must have taken part in hundreds of times.

When you go to a national monument, you don't expect to see a part of your life up there in bronze. And suddenly, I wanted to talk about it.

I called my children over and knelt down beside them. Then for the first time in their lives, I told them what I had done in the war. My finger moved along the bronze as I explained what the ship was doing, how the supply lines were strung, how we would try to keep a steady 12 knots. I told them about the massive air war we waged and my place in it. I told them about exotic countries and people.

It felt good to tell them my stories, even though I had promised myself I never would. My father and I took home different things from our wars. I had taken silence. I could never imagine, after so lovingly nurturing their lives, squandering my children by giving them up to such insanity. For all the right reasons, my father was proud when I joined the Navy; silence was my way of keeping my children from ever wanting to join.

SO I HAVE kept my mouth shut around the dinner table. No romance, no adventure and, I hope, no longing to be like Daddy when they become old enough to put on a uniform.

After I finished my stories in Washington, instead of bolting back to the fountains to play, my children started asking me questions. Enough, I told them, we have to get back to the car.

But there is still one more war story I need to tell them. This one I'll have to make up because it comes not from the past, but now, from a father's fear.

I'll tell them I had never been more scared in my life, frightened that I'd never get a chance to meet their mother or ever get to hold them in my arms. It will be an exaggeration and a corny thing to say, but by the time they grow up, they'll know what I was really trying to tell them. And maybe it will have been enough to keep them safe.

'Junk food' part of computer programmers' world

By Evan Ramstad

NEW YORK (AP) — Software programmers can be as creative with food as they are with their work.

That doesn't always make for fine dining.

Pressed for time and lost in lines of complex code, programmers often order out or just grab whatever is in the fridge, throwing together enough spicy or sugary stuff to get by until the work dictates a break.

Jenz Johnson, who has been programming for 25 years, noticed this late one night when his dinner consisted of a bowl of refried beans, Cheez Whiz, green chiles and leftover Chinese food — scooped up with beef jerky.

A software-writing friend called and remarked about how good that sounded, leading Johnson to think there were probably many people who eat the same way.

So he wrote "Giga Bites: The Hackers Cookbook," a collection of fast, outrageous recipes he and other programmers developed. Giga means a billion in computer-speak.

The book is filled with simple foods that have a distinct taste: Spam, salsa, pretzels and Pop Tarts.

People worried about fat or cholesterol shouldn't even crack the cover.

There are recipes for Leftover Macaroni and Ice Cream Pie, Pretzel Lasagna and Hot Dog Stroganoff.

About one-third of the 90 pages are devoted to chip dips.

"When you're really coding and you're in the groove and you see the final product, it's just an amazing place to be," said Johnson, who lives in Tucson, Ariz.

"When you do eat, you want something that's fairly spectacular."

The "culture of extremes" represented by software writers — people immersed in solitary tasks for long periods with occasional breaks that involve garish behavior — is becoming more prevalent, Johnson said.

"It seems to present itself when there's not a whole lot of time, when you have some fanatical people working on something," he said.

"What's neat about these foods is they're also very quick," Johnson said.

"Cheez Whiz you only have to squirt. It's the height of efficiency."

His recipe for Twinkie Casserole, for instance, can be thrown together in minutes.

Put a layer of the golden cakes in a pan and ladle caramel syrup, miniature marshmallows, hot fudge, cinnamon and Oreo cookies on top.

Johnson uses the word "hackers" in its broadest sense, referring to anyone who writes software, not just those who try to break into computers.

"The fact of the matter, truly and honestly, is your dyed-in-the-wool hackers will eat fairly well most of the time," Johnson said.

"But I think you can tell a true hacker because they have fun eating these foods."

DEAR ABBY

Husband lounges in boxers while his wife is on the ropes

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Why do men think boxer shorts are appropriate attire for lounging? When my husband comes home, he takes his clothes off and hangs them up (after 18 years of marriage, I've trained him to hang them up) — then it's boxer shorts for the rest of the evening. If I'm lucky, he will also wear a T-shirt.

Once, 14 years ago, I mentioned how much this bothered me. He went upstairs to change and came down the stairs wearing only a necktie and a smile! (Nine months later, our third son was born.)

I'm writing now because all three of our sons are imitating their father. My female friends tell me I'm lucky; at least he isn't fat and paunchy. One of their husbands has a 44-inch waist and wears bikini underwear!

Abby, if you can tell us why men think it's OK to sit around the house in their underwear, we women will be most grateful. — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Perhaps most men feel that their homes are their castles, and once they cross the moat and hoist the drawbridge, they have the right to be comfortable. However, "comfortable" is not synonymous with sloppy. Buy him some nice Bermuda shorts.

DEAR ABBY: This past weekend, my husband and I went to a swap meet. Just as I was walking away from a stack of shirts, a lady tapped me on the shoulder and said, "Excuse me. I just want you to know that your purse is open and the man behind you had his hand in it." (I had swung my purse behind me so it wouldn't be in the way while I was looking at the shirts.)

Apparently, this man had unzipped my purse; fortunately, I had turned away from him in time to avoid losing my wallet, credit cards and cash. Abby, my heart was racing for the next hour.

I will never do that stupid thing again. I just want to say thanks so much to the lady who warned me. Abby, please alert your readers. — RELIEVED IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR RELIEVED: Thanks for the warning. I recently saw a woman walking down Rodeo Drive with her purse strap around her neck and the purse resting on her bosom. I can only assume that she had been the victim of a purse snatcher, and was now carefully protecting her bag.

DEAR ABBY: I have a big problem with my niece. It seems that every time I invite her and her husband to a party at my home, she says, "My husband has to work."

I have no problem with that, but when it's time to go home, she goes into my kitchen and fixes a big plate of food to take home to her husband, plus one for herself and her son.

I feel that if her husband and son can't come to my house, I am not obligated to feed them.

Abby, I could feed my own family with those leftovers, or give the food to my other guests. So what do I say to such a nervy woman? — STILL ANGRY

DEAR STILL ANGRY: How gracious of you to make your niece feel so comfortable in your home under these circumstances. Your anger is justified, but perhaps you are angrier at yourself for lacking the courage to tell your nervy niece how you feel. Tell her what you have told me!

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Special cleaning techniques keep leather clothing, accessories fresh

Associated Press

Chances are there is more leather in your wardrobe these days, with skins being made into all sorts of apparel and accessories.

And chances also are that you might not know what to do with it when it needs freshening up.

"While silks and wools need the care of a dry cleaner to keep them fresh, leather requires a special, professional type of maintenance unique to itself," says Roz Schott, executive vice president of Schott Bros. Inc., a company that has been producing leather outerwear since her grandfather founded it in 1913.

She has some advice for leatherwear owners:

■ If the elbows and cuffs on your leather jacket appear flat and dull, brush lightly with soft bristles over the flat-looking sections to restore the nap.

Test the brush on the underside to make sure it won't damage the garment.

■ White film often appears on wet leather after it dries; the "spew" is the skin's natural oil rising to the surface.

To remove it, rub the leather with a piece of chamois.

If this doesn't work, it may be the white spots are really mildew stains; if so, let a professional do the cleaning.

■ Use mink oil to keep leathers (except suede) soft and supple.

To maintain suppleness, store the garment at room temperature.

■ If you want to shorten a leather skirt, cut the length with sharp shears, allowing a hem. Apply rubber cement sparingly on the underside with a cotton swab and let dry.

When the glue is tacky, put the hem into position, then roll down smoothly along the hemline. Schott suggests using a rolling pin.

■ If your leather jacket smells funny after being stored in a closet, air it out on a clear day.

If the smell persists, take the jacket to a professional leather cleaner for deodorizing.

■ Check the instruction tag that came with your leather gloves to clean them without shrinking them.

If you can't find it or don't want to tackle the job, let the professional do it.

■ Also let a professional remove food and beverage stains, "season" handbags to restore their luster, or remove scratches.

Never use shoe polish to cover scratches; it will cover only temporarily and likely come off on other things.

Save Thousands When You Refinish Tub, Tile & Kitchen

Ron Tucker 570-7114 Tim Wooten

So your tub is chipped, the tile is dingy and you hate the bathroom color scheme. But the estimate for remodeling the bath is out of sight. Ditto on replacing your out-of-style kitchen appliances and remodeling the kitchen.

BUT - did you know that NASA space-age technology now lets you refinish your porcelain, fiberglass or tile bath and shower in six hours and in any color you choose...or redo your kitchen cabinets and appliances - at tremendous savings over replacement?

it's true, thanks to Tim Wooten who has brought Worldwide Refinishing Systems to Midland, a franchise established 25 years ago and rated number one refinishing franchise by Entrepreneur three years running.

Worldwide Refinishing (originally called Gnu-Tub) originated in 1970 in Pittsburgh by two partners who had purchased all the research material on catalized polyurethane, a material that came to the attention of NASA at a critical time of the development of space travel.

After the fire in the launching pad that killed three astronauts, NASA was looking for a coating that was totally non-toxic, non combustible and highly flexible when it comes to changes of temperature and pressure.

Our product is the same material that coats moonbuggies. It is acidproof and corrosion resistant, as well as high gloss, easy to apply and does not crack.

The material will refinish any surface (except soft plastic) including porcelain tubs and sinks, ceramic tile, cultured marble, fiberglass and acrylics. The substance also coats such appliances as stoves, refrigerators and dishwasher. You can choose a new color or two or go with the same shade. Worldwide has 54 decorator colors and we can mix and match for you.

We can refinish stainless steel sinks to make them look like porcelain, or refinish over wood and also do formica countertops in a high-gloss or a mate finish. We even put non-skids in the tub surface.

Our refinishing process and surface is environment friendly, EPA and OSHA approved. Some companies use a strong acid when etching the surface of porcelain tubs. To dispose of it, they dilute it and flush it down the drain. We use a substance called Etch No. 3, which acts like an acid but is milder and is neutralized so it is inert when going down the drain.

Worldwide offers a five-year guarantee on tubs and tiles that the surface won't peel or crack. It offers a life-time guarantee that the white color won't yellow and the colors won't fade.

People still remember the first efforts to refinish tubs that didn't use space-age materials and didn't last too long. We are a completely different product; entirely new process that does last...and last...and last.

The three-step process (with products available only to Worldwide) uses a high solid urethane glaze (not an epoxy) that is lead-free and easy to clean. This is the only bathtub refinishing process that has been tested and approved by the National Bureau of Standards.

What a list of services! Worldwide Refinishing can refinish antiques such as clawfoot tubs and pedestal sinks; matte finishes for formica countertops; installing non-skid finishes on tub bottoms; repairing chips and cracks in fiberglass tubs and showers; refinishing lavatories, fiberglass shower-tub combinations, toilets and tile; eliminating mildew forever.

Worldwide Refinishing Systems can be reached by phoning 570-7114. They give free estimates for all work; a warranty on all work done; and most jobs will be completed in one to two days.★

Volunteering opens doors of friendship

By Lana Cunningham

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Bea Matchus, facing camera, hugs, Betsy Ashley, an old friend. Ms. Matchus volunteers as a pink lady at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

"She's everywhere," one agency employee said in describing Bea Matchus, a 69-year-old whirlwind.

"How can I sit here all day long? There are too many things to do. I like people; I like being out. There are so many people who need help," she said in response to the depiction.

Staying on the go — even when at home — and helping people through a variety of volunteer jobs are just part of Mrs. Matchus' philosophy. In between all that, she also takes courses at Midland College. It all boils down into a pot where she helps people improve their lives while she is expanding her own.

Raised in Chicago and Michigan, Mrs. Matchus came to Midland 46 years ago soon after marrying Ed. "We had no family here, and we had to make friends with other people in the oil business." But that was no problem for the woman who was known in high school as "The Smiler."

With five children — Tom, E.J., Edith, Nancy and Sarah — the Matchuses soon became involved in the typical youth activities such as Boy and Girl Scouts and programs at St. Ann's School.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Matchus worked the night shift as a registered nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital. She could be home with her children during the day, her husband at night.

THAT CARING attitude she developed as a nurse carries through her volunteer work. In fact, she's back at the hospital, this time as a member of the auxiliary. "I just can't stay away from the hospital," she said with a laugh. "I still remember many of the doctors and I still have nursing friends there."

And for many years she has donated her nursing skills to Community Children's Clinic. "I assess the patient and do the preliminary work, like take temperature and blood pressure."

Reading was — and still is — an important part of the Matchus family's activities. Several years ago, Mrs. Matchus heard about Midland Need to Read, and volunteered her time to help open the world of books to someone else. "I've had five students, and I'm working with two right now. It makes me feel so good that maybe some of these people will go on to have a better life and to help their children. They're missing out on so much by not being able to read," she said.

In actuality, Mrs. Matchus is one of the few volunteers who has been in the program since it started 10 yeas ago, according to Patti Groce, executive director for Need to Read.

"Her students have enjoyed meeting with her," said Ms. Groce. "She's been very valuable in meeting with them on a regular basis, and she's willing to work with more than one student at a time. She also does more than tutoring: she works in our fund-raising and awareness activities and she's on our Speakers Bureau."

THIS FALL Mrs.Matchus will add another volunteer job to her list when she helps Midand Community Concerts with its membership drive. "I have met a whole new group of people there," she said, smiling.

"You don't have to have money to volunteer. In fact, you get a lot more back, and you didn't go looking for something to get back. I had these skills, and people needed them," she said. "I've canceled a lunch date because I would rather go and volunteer.

"I have a really good life. If I can help somebody else, that's fine. I have everything I need; there are so many who don't."

When the College Classics start up at MC, Mrs. Matchus will be enrolled. Her favorite classes are world history and economics. "In economics, the teacher explains what is happening in the world today and how it applies," she said. A student at MC long before it moved to its campus on north Garfield, Mrs. Matchus said she first started back to school to do further studies in nursing. Then she began taking other subjects, just for fun. "I have more credits and no degree," she said, laughing.

And when she's not busy volunteering, Mrs. Matchus and her husband spend time gardening, specializing in rose bushes.

THEY ALSO spend time at their cabin in the Gila Wilderness, built slowly over the years. (Part of the lumber came from the old Scharbauer Hotel which they purchased in an auction.)

"I don't stay in this house any longer than I have to," she said of her Midland home. "We got back Friday and I was ready to go again on Monday. I always keep my suitcase packed.

"There are so many people out here that you can meet and get to know. And there's so many older people who are so busy. It's a different way of looking at old age — although I'm not there yet," she added hastily.

"I can't remember how old I am. When it dawns on me that I'm 69, I think that's not how I thought you should feel. We just have so much left to do in life."

Scientists working on designing better aids for hearing

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Page

Now hear this! all ye 1.5 million Americans with learning impairments resulting from trauma, infection, aging or certain medications: There is no need for you to become withdrawn and grumpy, nor for your spouse to become frustrated, albeit you both must exhibit both cooperation and understanding, because modern science is coming to your aid. The basis for such optimism is as follows:

Grandma's ear trumpets are now passe and the wearing of a string extending from your ear to a breast pocket (so friends will shout, thinking that you wear an old fashioned aid) has become unnecessary. Now small, tiny devices containing microphones known as hearing aids have developed to such an extent that they not only augment sound, but also cut out some extraneous background noise. They even can be programmed to accentuate speech, music, the ringing of bells, environmental sound and low voices. Unfortunately these refinements come at a cost ($700-$2200) and probably are not available for insurance. For profound deafness, cochlear (inner ear) implants are surgically available, but as you may imagine, they constitute a highly sophisticated, specialized maneuver requiring post-operative special training.

Environmental hearing assistance devices continue to proliferate. For example, (1) sound from television set transmitted via infra-red beam to receivers worn on ears; (2) telephone amplifers; (3) caption devices for television to translate spoken words to written script at bottom of screen; (4) vibrating alarms such as devices under the pillow to awaken from sleep; (5) telephone and door bell indications causing house lights to blink.

Treatment of deafness depends on where and what constitutes the problem, such as outer ear (wax); middle ear (ruptured drum, fluid); and inner ear (stiff bones.) Now considering the latter segment, here is something to conjure about. The cochlea has 20,000 hair cells that swing and sway with vibrations, thereby aiding the hearing process. Researchers at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine have noted that when rat auditory hair cells were treated with retinoic acid (a form of vitamn A used for treating acne, etc.) up to 78 percent of them were regenerated. Could inner or middle ear deafness be helped by Tretinoin (retinoic acid) or by Rogain (grows fuzz on some bald heads)? Time alone can tell, but meanwhile during the interim, it would be prudent to avail yourself of the above noted constructive devices.

For now, follow the above advisories and avoid societies' extraneous sounds, such as din, clang, clatter, bombilation, cacophony and tintinnabulation. Maintain a sense of humor and think once again of the three Englishmen riding on a train pulling into a station. The first: " By jove, it's Wembly;" the second: "No, it's Thursday;" the third, "That's a jolly idea, let's all have a drink!"

Flat feet no joke for those who have them

By Dr. Phillip Evanski
Associated Press

Orthopedists call it pes planus. In everyday language it's flat feet. Most of the time it's at most a minor nuisance, but for some people it can be painful. We're all born with flat feet. Children don't develop a distinctive arch until age 2 or 3. But in some people, the arch remains flat, probably for genetic reasons. The condition is more common in some ethnic populations, such as African Americans.

There are two kinds of flat feet: flexible and rigid. Flexible flat feet often are painless and give no trouble for many years. The foot is flat, but it bends and flexes normally. For people with flexible feet, there is a possibility of trouble late in life, in their 50s and later. The tendon that holds up much of the arch of the foot, the posterior tibial tendon, can rupture causing "fallen arches". This is a painful and troublesome condition. Arch supports can help in some cases, but surgery is sometimes needed.

Orthotics — shoe inserts — can be beneficial for persons with the flexible kind of flat feet, because the inserts provide arch support. They don't help rigid flat feet, because the foot simply won't bend. It's the rigid form of flat feet that causes trouble earlier in life. Rigid flat feet may be produced by severe arthritis or an abnormal bone bridge. The formal term is tarsal coalition, a condition that can run in families. The abnormal bone growth is in the bones of the heel, below the ankle.

When we walk, our feet flex from front to back and roll from side to side. The tarsal coalition fuses the bones in the heel, preventing the natural roll from side to side making walking difficult and painful.

The remedy is surgery to remove the bony growth and allow the foot to develop normally, but it is effective only if the condition is detected in the early years, by the early teens at latest. Later, more extensive surgery may be required if pain is severe.

Parents should be alerted by complaints of foot pain when a child or teen-ager engages in physical activity. That's especially important if one or both parents have painful rigid flat feet because there is a heritable factor. Other causes of rigid flat feet are inflammatory arthritis (rheumatoid arthritis), infections and tumors in the joints below the ankle.

Tyson focused

LAS VEGAS — Iron Mike Tyson appears focused and physically ready. But just how ring rusty is the former heavyweight champion after being away from boxing for four years?

It's a question most boxing observers feel won't be answered when the 29-year-old Tyson fights Peter McNeeley Saturday night at the MGM Grand Garden.

"It's going to be two guys crashing in the ring," McNeeley said. "Somebody is going to be knocked out. Find a good seat and don't blink, baby."

"I'm going to knock out Peter McNeeley," said Tyson, a 17-1 favorite.

The over-under at the MGM Grand sports book was two rounds.

"Just watch. I'm sure you'll find it stimulating," Tyson said.

Watching Tyson prepare for his first fight since a 12-round decision over Donovan "Razor" Ruddock on June 28, 1991, has been virtually impossible. Only one of his workouts was open to the media, and he didn't spar on that occasion.

Tyson looks rock hard and appears anxious to resume his career.

"This is my calling from God," Tyson said. "This is what I do."

Rocket TV

HOUSTON — If the upcoming NBA season isn't canceled because of labor troubles, all 82 regular-season Houston Rockets games will be shown on local television, the team said Thursday.

The two-time defending NBA champions said Houston television station KTXH will carry 41 games, while cable outlet Prime Sports will show 36 games.

NBC is scheduled to televise five games with the option to add two more.

The NBA and two factions of players currently are fighting over a new collective bargaining agreement. NBA Commissioner David Stern has said the season will be canceled if agreement can't be reached.

Salazar's 66 leads by one

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — He is a man making the most of the situation.

After all it is quite a feat for Roger Salazar to even be at the Nike Permian Basin Open. So seeing his name at the top of the leaderboard is nothing short of amazing.

Salazar, who lives in Euless but grew up in Corpus Christi, shot a 6-under-par 66 on Thursday at The Club at Mission Dorado to take the lead by one over Frank Conner.

Salazar made the field Wednesday as a late alternate because of his past champion status (he won the South Texas Open in Corpus Christi in 1991). This appearance, however, is a rare one for Salazar, who has played in only three events this year after a six-month period where he gave up the game.

Salazar took the hiatus after a disappointing 1994 when he won $8,959, placed 111th and missed the last six tour cuts. Add all those together and golf became something that wasn't fun for the 30-year-old.

"I bent myself ragged out there," said Salazar. "I had a negative attitude and felt like if that's the way it's going to be I'll quit. If you don't feel you don't belong out there then you don't need to be there. If I am not having fun away from my wife and baby, then I don't need to be out there."

Salazar ran a soccer store during his absence from the sport. During that time he never touched a golf club. But Salazar, who attended Texas Christian University, did get the itch to come back and made his return to golf in May by qualifying for the PGA stop in Dallas, the GTE Byron Nelson Classic. He made the cut and took home $2,730 for his efforts, but more importantly got the fever for the game of golf.

"After working for a while and realizing what I had on the Nike Tour, it wasn't as bad as I was making it out to be," said Salazar. "I've heard, 'A bad day at the golf course is better than a good day at the office' and I got a taste of the other side. It was a slap on the face."

Salazar has come played in two Nike events up to the Permian Basin Open, getting his game ready for the 1995 Nike qualifying school and the 1996 tour.

Salazar, who is known as a good player in windy conditions and picked by Sean Murphy as a player to watch, was pleased with the round but knows that a first-round lead will get a pat on the back but not a trophy and check at tourney's end.

"You don't win a golf tournament in the

Murphy owns Nike Tour with six career victories

■ Sean Murphy is currently 10th on the Nike money list and closing in on a return trip to the PGA Tour.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Sean Murphy might be the closest thing golf has to the fictitious baseball character Crash Davis.

Like Davis, who becomes the all-time minor league home run champion in the movie "Bull Durham," the Nike Tour's career leader in victories with six is making the most of his opportunities and enjoying all of it in the process.

"I'm having the most fun I've had playing golf," said Murphy. "It's been easier for me, maybe its the maturity process. Five years ago holding the card (PGA Tour card) meant a lot to me, but I'm making a good living without one this year."

This year, Murphy is 10th on the 1995 Nike money list and won his record sixth tournament at the Nike Philadelphia Classic. The win puts him two victories ahead of the Mike Springer, Tom Lehman and John Flannery in that category. He said becoming the career wins leader was something.

"I think it is great," said Murphy, who lives in Lovington, N.M. "The tour is still pretty young and there is that chance to set some of the records. I like that part. It's not something I dwell on because there are some tournaments I still need to win."

If Murphy stays in the Top 10, he would qualify for the PGA Tour. That is something he did in 1993 as Nike's money leader with $166,293. That year he won four tournaments and took Player of the Year honors. But 1994 would not be as successful on the big tour, with Murphy taking home $97,597.

Murphy came into this year, having no status on any tour, but he received spots in tournaments due to his performance in past years. He took advantage of those opportunities, and the result, like the Nike Tour's leading 69.65 scoring average, speaks for itself.

"I've been able to create my own opportunities this year," said Murphy. "I set a goal for myself before I came out this year. If I do that, finishing in the Top 10 will take care of itself."

Watkins may be top rookie

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Running back Sherman Williams may be the best known of the Dallas Cowboys' draft picks, but tight end Kendell Watkins will likely see the most playing time of any of the team's rookies this season.

The former Mississippi State star, who weighs close to 300 pounds, has impressed coaches and even Oakland Raiders defensive end Pat Swilling with his blocking.

With legs the size of oak trees, Watkins doesn't exactly run away from defenders when trying to get open on a pass route. But his low center of gravity is just what the Cowboys were looking for to clear holes for the running game in a two-tight end set.

"We don't really put too much emphasis on him catching the ball," said tight ends coach Robert Ford, who compares Watkins more to guard Nate Newton than to tight end Jay Novacek.

"We've got enough guys who want the ball in their hands. We need some guys who can open up the holes."

Watkins is making steady progress. He has been inconsistent, but has shown flashes of stardom in matchups against Charles Haley and Tony Tolbert. When scrimmaging the Raiders a couple weeks ago, Watkins lined up against Swilling.

Diablos take wild TL win

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

After a ho-hum series opener, Midland and El Paso got back into their normal routine on Thursday. But as these two teams have shown, normal for them is something a little left of center.

The Diablos survived two players and a manager getting ejected and two hit batters while Angels catcher Fausto Tejero was charged with two passed balls as El Paso came away with a wild 8-4 win over Midland at Christensen Stadium.

"Something always seems to happen when we play these guys," said shortstop Tim Harkrider, who went 2-for-5 and scored the Angels' first run. "One night it could be 16-15 and the next night 2-1. There is usually something strange that happens when we play them."

The loss dropped the Angels to 23-32 in the second half of the Texas League Western division standings, eight games behind Wichita. El Paso (27-28), which is chasing Wichita for the second-half title, moved to within four games of the Wranglers with 13 games remaining. Wichita lost to San Antonio 6-4 on Thursday to drop to 31-24.

Things started quite normally for the Angels as Harkrider jumped on El Paso starter Byron Browne's (9-4) first pitch, sending it off the wall in right field for a stand-up triple. He scored on a George Arias single with one out to give the Angels a 1-0 lead, their only advantage

From mountaintop to 'real' pressure

■ Texas Tech now has a conference football championship, but there is also that Cotton Bowl thing.

By Jean Pagel
Associated Press Writer

■ SWC Preview

LUBBOCK — The Texas Tech football program reached the mountaintop last season, joining the parade of other Red Raider teams to claim conference championships.

Now, the pressure's really on.

Fans, thrilled by Tech's Southwest Conference titles in baseball and women's and men's basketball last season, want duplicate glory from a football team that tied for first place but got crushed in the Cotton Bowl.

Whether the Red Raiders can deliver depends on what the young team learned from its 55-14 loss to Southern Cal.

Coach Spike Dykes considers the loss understandable. Acceptable? No.

But Dykes said Tech's first trip to the Cotton Bowl since 1939 embedded his players with maturity and their fans with elevated expectations. Recruiting got a shot in the arm, too, he said.

"When you get a taste of grandeur ... it whets your appetite," Dykes said. "It makes people more aware of what's at stake every Saturday."

Tech finished with a 6-6 overall record and a 4-3 standing in the SWC good enough to join a five-way tie for first place. In the eight seasons with Dykes as head coach, Tech has finished no better than 9-3 in 1989.

Momentum last year built with victories over Texas (33-9) and Baylor (38-7). But the Red Raiders also first round, but you can lose it," said Salazar. "There are more days. I will just try and do the same things I did today."

Behind Salazar is Conner, who shot a bogey-free round of 67. The 49-year-old, who will attempt to make the senior tour, jokes about the age difference between he and the younger players of the Nike tour.

"I might have dated some of their mothers," jokes Conner, who is one of two athletes to play in the U.S. Open tournaments on the tennis and golf circuits. "I have played with guys who will be super stars. It is a great way to keep my game in shape."

Chad McGee, 26, is alone in third at 4-under-par. McGee got off to a slow start but birdied three of the first six holes on his back nine to get his round going. He feels the conditions could be a factor later in the tournament.

"The wind is gusting out there," said the Tyler resident. "If it stays up it will be a factor."

Chris Smith and Texas A&M product Danny Briggs are among a group of nine tied for fourth at minus 3. There are 20 golfers tied at minus 2.

NIKE NOTES: Other notables from the first round of the Nike Permian Basin Open.

1994 champion Bruce Vaughan finished the first round with a 71. He is tied for 33rd.

1993 champion Franklin Langham is tied for 13th with a 2-under- par 70.

1992 champion Taylor Smith is tied for 79th after his first-round 74.

Mike Winfrey, assistant professional at Mission, is 2-over-par.

Midland's Terry Lester, head pro at Midland Country Club, shot a 75.

Mission Dorado club member Doug Bryant shot a 77.

MURPHY: Forget card, shoot for $36,000 check

(From 1C)

Murphy, who played in South Africa and on the California mini-tours before getting his PGA card at age 24, played on the tour in 1990-91. But golf would take him back to the Ben Hogan and Nike tours for the 1992-93 seasons. It forced him to make it back to "the show" with hard work, an advantage Murphy has over those who have never been there.

"I didn't spend a lot of time trying to get my card," said Murphy. "My card came to me. Take a guy whose goal is to play the tour and make it out here. I'll bet he wonders 'here we go again' and if 'I'm going to make it.'"

Murphy, who says he doesn't look at what other golfers are doing, said there are 15 players on the tour who can win week in and week out. So he will not worry about getting his card, but he will worry about winning tournaments and collecting the rewards that go along with them.

"Coming down the stretch, I'm not going to dwell on grabbing a card," said Murphy. "If I put my game together, there's no reason I shouldn't win every week. I'm going to still try to grab that $36,000 check."

So like Davis in "Bull Durham," the fire to play with the big boys is still there, but unlike the catcher, Murphy has the talent to get there again.

Bodine wins with Hoosiers

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — For Geoff Bodine, last year's Miller Genuine Draft 400 was a bittersweet affair.

Bodine drove his Ford Thunderbird to a hard-fought victory over Mark Martin and Rick Mast, getting a great performance from his Hoosier tires. Bodine, a driver-owner, was the Hoosier factory guy in 1994, but the small racing tire manufacturer has since withdrawn from the series and its bruising war with established Goodyear.

When Bodine got to Victory Lane last August, everyone was still stunned and disheartened by a crash the previous day in practice that left then-Winston Cup point leader Ernie Irvan in critical condition.

Now Irvan is well on his way to a miraculous recovery, hoping to get his driving career restarted before the end of the current season or the beginning of next season.

"That was a big win for us last year," Bodine said. "It had a little controversy behind it because of the tires, and it was really a bad weekend all the way around because that's when Ernie got hurt. The emotions were high.

"Every lap, when you went by the second corner, you'd see where Ernie hit the wall. That wasn't a pleasant race for any of us. The track was tearing up and Ernie was hurt and we had Hoosier tires. So we really need to go back under good conditions and prove we can do it again."

Actually, Bodine has a lot of prove since he has seen little success since that win at Michigan International Speedway last August.

Going into the weekend, with practice and top 20 qualifying Friday on the 2-mile, high-banked oval, Bodine is a very disappointing 16th in the season standings and has managed only three top-10 finishes and no top fives.

"We had a pretty good car up here in the first race (in June)," Bodine said. "But we ended up hitting the wall with five laps to go. We were trying to pass Mark, he got a little squirrely and I didn't see the wall.

"The windshield was all torn up because the new asphalt (track surface) really beat them up this year and it was hard to see. I just drove into the wall."

With only 11 of the 31 races left on the schedule, Bodine is still hopeful that he can get things going in the right direction.

"Last year, our first points win didn't come until the second Pocono race," he explained. "We're about the same in the points this year as we were this time last year. It took us a while to get going last year, too.

"We've got a lot of races left that I feel like we can win. We did last year. It took us a big part of the year to get our team, our cars, adjusted to the Hoosiers. It's taken time to do the same thing this year going back to Goodyears.

"We've had some good runs but a lot of bad luck. I think we can still turn it around. We can still win this year."

Dye resigns post

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Bobby Dye, the winningest coach in Boise State and Big Sky Conference history, resigned Thursday and was replaced by assistant Rod Jensen.

Dye, 58, retired with a record of 213-133 in 12 seasons at Boise State and 101-78 in the Big Sky. He was 373-221 in 21 years as a head coach at Boise, Cal State-Bakersfield and Cal State-Fullerton.

Dye did not attend the news conference.

Boise State athletic director Gene Bleymaier said no specific incident led to Dye's decision to step down, and retirement was something the coach had been talking about for several years.

Tysons weighs in at 220 pounds

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Mike Tyson weighed in officially at 220 pounds Thursday for his comeback fight Saturday night against Peter McNeeley.

McNeeley weighed 224 pounds.

It was Tyson's highest weight in five fights since he weighed 220 1/2 when he was knocked out in the 10th round by Buster Douglas on Feb. 11, 1990 in Tokyo.

In his last fight, he weighed 216 pounds when he scored a 12-round decision over Donovan "Razor" Ruddock on June 28, 1991.

The weigh-in took place before about 3,000 fans in the MGM Grand Garden, the site of the fight.

Tyson got a rousing cheer when he stepped onto the scales.

Bruce Seldon weighed 234 for his WBA heavyweight title defense against Joe Hipp, 233.

ANGELS: Ireland ejected in weird win of the game.

"We had a pretty good outing against him (six runs in three innings last week in El Paso) and he's got good velocity on his fastball and we were fortunate to get a couple of runs on him early," Harkrider said. "After that, he settled down and pitched a good game."

The Diablos came back to take the lead in the third when manager Tim Ireland was ejected by base umpire Jeff Patterson for arguing a call at first base which Patterson made a bad call on a ball hit by El Paso's Roberto Lopez.

Lopez grounded the ball to first baseman Leon Glenn and it bounced off his glove right to the Angels' J.D. Ramirez. Ramirez picked up the ball and tossed it to pitcher Korey Keling who was covering. Lopez made it to bag just ahead of Keling, but was called out.

"Leon dove for the ball, and it bounced to me, and by the time Leon got back there (first base), Korey was near there and stepping on the bag," Ramirez said. "The bunt was towards Leon, and Leon grabbed it, but the runner had passed."

The Diablos' bench immediately began to argue the call when Patterson threw out El Paso right fielder Geoff Jenkins. Ireland then got into it hot and heavy with Patterson and was thrown out seconds later. Ireland uprooted first base ond hurled it down the first base line as he was leaving the field.

The 10-minute break in the action seemed to help Keling (8-5), who got out of the inning, allowing only two runs and started a streak of four straight strikeouts.

The Angels tied the game for him at 2-2 in the bottom of the third when Glenn slapped a bunt single down the third base line, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a sacrifice fly by Emmitt Cohick.

Keling was moving along until the fifth when the Diablos took the lead for good, scoring once in the fifth and twice in the sixth with the help of a wild pitch and a passsed ball. Keling went six innings for Midland, allowing five runs — four earned runs — and striking out eight while walking four.

Gabby Martinez singled for El Paso, took second on Keling's wild pitch and scored on Tejero's first passed ball of the season. In the sixth, Keling walked Tom Nevers and Kenny Felder, then gave up RBI singles to catcher Bobby Hughes and Lopez.

The game took yet another turn in the seventh when El Paso's Frank Semarelli, who was making his first appearance for El Paso since being picked up from the Mexican League, hit Ramirez and was thrown out after facing only two batters. Arias had been hit earlier in the game by Browne, and a warning was issued to both benches.

"He wasn't trying to hit me, but the umpires said whoever gets hit next is going to get tossed," Ramirez said.

ANGEL DUST: Ireland's ejection was his sixth of the season... Semarelli is making his second appearance in the Texas League. He was once a member of the Arkansas Travelers in the St. Louis organization... Jenkins, Milwaukee's first-round pick in the 1995 amateur draft, was thrown out in just his ninth Texas League game. He started the season in Rookie ball with Helena, Mont., and has also played with the Stockton Ports of the California League...

Seles gets another break

Canadian Open

TORONTO (AP) — Monica Seles gave the Canadian Open a chance to catch its breath by taking a day off Thursday and without lifting a racket.

Her task, already eased by the first-round loss of No. 1 Steffi Graf, became even easier when No. 3 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario was upset by Helena Sukova, 7-5, 6-4.

Sanchez Vicario, the tournament's defending champion who played both singles and doubles matches the night before, was unable to make the quick night-day turnaround that Seles had handled easily a day earlier.

Sukova said the timing should have been no big deal for Sanchez Vicario. "She's used to that," Sukova said. "She's played so many tournaments."

"I finished late, but it was not that," Sanchez Vicario said. "I didn't play well enough to win the match. I made too many errors. When you don't play well, it's difficult to win."

"It was not such a big surprise to me," Sukova said. "I knew I was capable of being her. I finally played better than I played before."

A year ago, Sanchez Vicario used a victory in the Canadian Open as the springboard to the U.S. Open crown. Now her elimination seemed to simplify Seles' road to the final. Gabriela Sabatini, a 6-1, 6-0 winner over Yone Kamio on Thursday, is the highest remaining seed in Seles' half of the draw at No. 6.

Seles said she would have preferred to play after blowout victories over Kimberly Po and Nathalie Tauziat that were sepoarated by just 17 hours. Instead, she took treatment on a gimpy left knee, hit some balls and considered her next opponent, Anke Huber.

"I have to serve better against Anke," she said. "She has a great return."

The seventh-seeded Huber nearly missed her date with Seles. She fell behind early against No. 16 Irina Spiriea on Thursday, losing the first set decisively. Huber became so frustrated that on missed shots she shouted at herself, loudly in German. She survived, though, 1-6, 6-3, 7-5.

"I didn't play my best match ever," she said. "I didn't have too many chances to do anything."

Huber knew the tournament draw and admitted that she had Seles on her mind at the start of the Spiriea match.

Els strikes nine birds, but Norman still close

Associated Press

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Still reeling from his final-round flameout in the PGA championship last week, Ernie Els seemed determined to build a lead even he couldn't squander.

But Greg Norman wouldn't let him get away, whittling Els' lead to 3 points with a dramatic eagle on the last hole.

Els carded nine birdies, including four in a row, in a nearly flawless performance that carried him to the first-round lead Thursday in the International.

Els scored 17 points under the modified Stableford scoring system used in this unusual event. Among the early finishers, it gave him a 6-point lead — which would have been the largest first-round advantage in the tournament's 10-year history.

The Shark, however, was lurking just offshore. Playing in one of the day's final groups, Norman hit a 7-iron from 185 yards on the par-4 18th hole that bounced once and disappeared into the cup. The eagle was worth 5 points and vaulted Norman to 14 points.

Els might have needed his bigger advantage. He blew a three-stroke lead in the PGA on Sunday. He also was the leader midway through the final round of last year's International before taking a double bogey at No. 10, succumbing to winner Steve Lowery's closing charge.

British Women's Open

WOBURN, England — Defending champion Liselotte Neumann of Sweden finished with a birdie on the final hole Thursday for a 6-under-par 67 and the first-round lead in the British Women's Open.

One stroke back were Marie-Laure de Lorenzi of France, Shani Waugh of Australia and Marnie McGuire of New Zealand.

Nancy Lopez, playing in her first tournament in Britain in 14 years, was in at 71 and Britain's world No. 1 Laura Davies finished seven strokes back at 74.

This week's field is the best of the women's European events with record prize money of $576,000. Only one of the top 50 Europeans is absent for the tournament sanctioned by both the LPGA and the European tour.

A former U.S. Open champion and one of the world's top half-dozen women players, the 29-year-old Neumann hit the green on the par-5 18th with her second shot and rolled a long putt to within inches to set up her final and seventh birdie of the round.

"The course is very dry and I was capable of reaching the par-5s in two and getting some birdies down," said Neumann, who took the last several weeks off.

RAIDERS: Odessa's Daniels out for now got stomped 42-16 by top-ranked Nebraska and fell into some fans' doghouse by losing to Rice (24-21) and Texas Christian (24-17).

(From 1C)

What the 1995 Red Raiders lack in depth they offer in talent at some key positions.

Sophomore quarterback Zebbie Lethridge won honors as the SWC's newcomer of the year for reviving a nearly wiped-out offense. As a redshirt freshman he completed 132-of-261 pass attempts for 1,596 yards.

"I feel so much more confident and I have so much better of an idea of what to look forward to," Lethridge said. "There are no excuses about being young or new to the system. Most of the people coming back have experience."

Defense, however, is where Dykes will look for core strength. He identified seniors Shawn Banks, Marcus Coleman and Zach Thomas among the pillars.

Thomas, a 6-0, 233-pound middle linebacker, was the SWC's defensive player of the year with 116 tackles and 51 assists. Dykes described him as a smart leader and "tough as the back end of a shooting gallery."

But the Tech defense lost four linemen to graduation and likely must function for awhile at least without end Tony Daniels, a lifeguard who ruptured a tendon in his right knee on a diving board in June.

The 6-foot-5, 245-pound junior provided 13 tackles behind the line of scrimmage last year.

"When you lose a player like that, it really does hurt you," Dykes said. But "when you have problems, you can't just go in the tank."

Dykes said he plans to plug those five defensive holes with senior Sean Johnson, junior Anthony Armour and sophomores Corey Chandler, Jerome Lang and Cody McGuire.

The slate of non-conference opponents on the Red Raiders' 11-game schedule includes Missouri, Arkansas State and New Mexico. Their season opener: Sept. 9 at Penn State, last year's Rose Bowl Champions.

"It's just like playing any other team we have to face," Lethridge said.

Dykes described the opener as a proving ground that will benefit the Red Raiders no matter what the outcome.

As for the SWC, he said, Texas A&M has assembled "hands down the best team." Dykes already feels nostalgic about the conference's breakup as Tech, Baylor, Texas and the Aggies depart for the Big 12 after this season.

"I'm sick," said Dykes, SWC coach of the year in 1994. "When the last hurrah happens this fall, it's going to be a sad day."

Varsho's hit nails Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pinch-hitter Gary Varsho hit a two-run single in the eighth inning Thursday to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros, only their third win in 15 games.

With no outs in the eighth, Lenny Webster reached on a fielder's choice and went to third on a single by Kevin Flora. Flora stole second before Varsho singled off Todd Jones (6-3), his first hit in six at-bats since coming off the disabled list Aug. 7 with a strained right forearm.

Houston took a 2-1 lead in the seventh on Mike Simms' RBI double. Dave Magadan led off with a single off Tommy Greene and was replaced by pinch-runner Brian Hunter. Simms followed with a looping double into the left-field corner and Hunter scored standing.

The Phillies went ahead 1-0 in the first when Kevin Stocker doubled off Doug Brocail and scored Jim Eisenreich's infield single.

Reds 6, Dodgers 2

CINCINNATI — Pete Schourek became the NL's first 13-game winner, retiring the last 14 batters as Cincinnati beat Los Angeles Dodgers in a meeting of division leaders.

Schourek (13-6) gave up seven hits in his second complete game. He struck out six and walked none.

The NL West-leading Dodgers, in the middle of a three-game, three-day, three-city tour, lost for only the third time in 11 games. The NL Central-leading Reds won for the third time in eight games.

Rockies 12, Cubs 5

DENVER — Dante Bichette, Vinny Castilla and Andres Galarraga homered and Roger Bailey won his first major league start as Colorado defeated Chicago.

Bailey (4-5) gave up nine hits, walked two and allowed five runs in eight innings as the Rockies won for only the third time in their last 11 games. The victory pulled Colorado within one game of division-leading Los Angeles in the NL West.

The game opened a 10-game homestand, Colorado's longest of the season.

Rookie leads Rangers with home run in 10th

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Craig Worthington, called up from the minor leagues just before the game, hit a one-out solo home run in the top of the 10th inning as the Texas Rangers stayed ahead in the AL wild card race Thursday night by beating the Chicago White Sox 2-1.

Worthington, acquired in a trade with Cincinnati on Wednesday, drove a 396-foot homer to straightaway center off reliever Matt Karchner (1-1).

Karchner came on to pitch the 10th in relief of White Sox starter Dave Righetti, who allowed only five hits in nine innings, his longest stint since August 15, 1983. Righetti dueled Texas starter Roger Pavlik, who allowed only four hits in 8 1-3 innings.

■ AL Roundup

Red Sox 4, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Lee Tinsley doubled home the tiebreaking run in the ninth inning and Boston beat California for Its 14th win in 15 games.

Former Midland Angel Jim Edmonds, who leads the AL with 92 RBIs, hit his 28th home run for the Angels. He left the game in the eighth inning with a strained lower back.

Tim Naehring and Luis Alicea homered for Boston in the meeting of division leaders. Red Sox starter Roger Clemens struck out seven in seven innings, giving up three runs on seven hits.

Blue Jays 3, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Al Leiter allowed just three hits in eight innings and Toronto moved out of last place in the AL East with a win over Detroit.

Toronto moved a half-game ahead of Detroit into fourth place. Except for a one-day tie with the Tigers on Aug. 11, it's the first time the two-time World Series champion Blue Jays have been out of last since June 20.

The Tigers, only three games out of first place at the All-Star break, have lost 26 of 33 in falling out of contention.

Leiter (8-7) allowed singles to Travis Fryman and Chris Gomez in the third inning and Milt Cuyler in the eighth. He struck out four and walked four.

Royals 3, Orioles 2, 10 innings

BALTIMORE — Pinch-hitter Gary Gaetti led off the 10th inning with a home run, lifting Kansas City over reeling Baltimore.

The Orioles gave up two early unearned runs after Bobby Bonilla dropped a fly ball, stranded 11 runners and went 0-for-11 with runners in scoring position.

Brewers 7, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Backed by three home runs, rookie Jamie McAndrew pitched eight-plus strong innings for his first major league win as Milwaukee beat Cleveland.

Dave Nilsson, Jose Valentin and John Jaha homered for the Brewers, who kept themselves in the thick of the AL wild card race but remained 16 games behind AL Central-leading Cleveland. The Indians' magic number for clinching the division over Milwaukee held at 27.

Bengals lose to Lions as prized rookie falls

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Cincinnati Bengals lost prized rookie Ki-Jana Carter on their first possession and lost the game soon after.

Scott Mitchell guided the Lions to scores the first three times they had the ball and undefeated Detroit rolled to a 20-13 exhibition victory Thursday night.

Carter, who sustained a slight Achilles tendon strain during training camp, made his NFL debut against the Lions (3-0). But the No. 1 draft pick out of Penn State was tackled high by Robert Porcher on his third carry and went down with a twisted left knee.

Carter, who had zero yards on three rushes, was on the sidelines in street clothes during the second half. An announcement in the press box indicated Carter would be back for the final exhibition when the Bengals (1-2) play host to the New York Jets next Friday night.

Mitchell threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Johnnie Morton in the first quarter and a 13-yard scoring pass to Herman Moore in the second.

■ NFL Exhibitions

Mitchell, who missed the second half of the 1994 season with a broken thumb, completed 13 of 20 passes for 208 yards. Moore made five catches for 106 yards.

Eagles 31, Patriots 7

PHILADELPHIA — A good night for Boston College football turned into a bad night for Boston's pro football team.

Kelvin Martin returned a punt 83 yards for a touchdown and several other former BC Eagles lifted Philadelphia's Eagles to a victory over New England in an NFL exhibition football.

Mike Mamula, the former BC star whom the Eagles took with the seventh pick in the draft, and Bill Romanowski, BC class of 1987, keyed a Philadelphia defense that scored a touchdown on a fumble recovery and limited the Patriots to one touchdown.

Randall Cunningham, who played into the third quarter, was mostly effective running the Eagles' new "West Coast" offense, despite completing only seven of 20 passes for 104 yards and a touchdown.

Drew Bledsoe left the game after New England's first series, but returned and played until the fourth quarter, finishing 16-for-32 for 161 yards and a touchdown.

Each team moved down the field quickly on a touchdown drive in the first half. The difference in the half was that the Eagles (3-0) also returned a punt for a touchdown and added a 36-yard field goal by Gary Anderson.

Philadelphia went up 7-0 in the first quarter when Cunningham found Fred Barnett for a 39-yard scoring pass. Barnett beat New England cornerback Maurice Hurst badly on a flag pattern, concluding a three-minute drive.

The Eagles increased the lead to 14-0 when Martin, the former Cowboy and Seahawk, returned Pat O'Neill's punt 83 yards for a touchdown. Martin benefitted from a good block by rookie Fred McCrary, then deked O'Neill in the open field.

WATKINS: Dallas hopes talk is on field

(From1C)

Swilling later told Ford that Watkins was "an outstanding blocker" for a tight end. When Ford told him he was a rookie, Swilling didn't believe him.

"He is going to be a large contributor to our running offense," said Ford, who estimates Watkins will be on the field anywhere from 12 to 20 plays per game this season.

Watkins says he still has a long way to go but has learned quickly from facing his own defensive teammates.

"Haley is one of the best in the game and Tolbert is a great player," Watkins said. "Going up against them forces you to learn quickly. It's definitely making me better."

When wide receiver Michael Irvin was asked about Watkins, he said, "I don't think too many defenses will get nervous seeing him split out wide or going in motion with that size, but we needed a great blocking tight end and he is the man."

Ford said the soft-spoken Watkins needs to get a mean streak.

"He's a guy who if you put him in a corner with 50 people, he won't say a word," Ford said. "So we are hoping he'll get that nastiness when he stands next to Big E (tackle Erik Williams) and sees him start slapping a few folks around."

Watkins said he'll be more aggressive once he feels more comfortable with the playbook.

"I am just trying to get a feel for everything," he said.

Prices rise

NEW YORK — Oil prices finished slightly higher Thursday as wary traders kept an eye on developments in the Persian Gulf, where U.S. troops prepared for a potential response to Iraqi military movements.

West Texas intermediatefor delivery in September rose 11 cents per barrel to $17.66 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices held within a 14-cent range, moving to a high of the day at $17.68 on news from the Persian Gulf. Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16.25.

The United States has not put forces on alert, but some units have been told they would be at the forefront of any U.S. response, a senior military official told The Associated Press in Washington.

Natural gas prices rose 0.3 cent per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.530.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar slumped against most major currencies Thursday after a report showed the U.S. trade deficit ballooned to an unexpected $11.31 billion in June.

In New York, the dollar was quoted at 97.05 yen in the late afternoon, down from its 97.78 late Wednesday. The dollar was trading in New York at 1.4728 marks, down from 1.4782.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.2205 Swiss francs, down from 1.2300; 5.0460 French francs, down from 5.0625; 1,622 Italian lire, down from 1,623; and 1.3603 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3587.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5475, up from $1.5435.

Markets mixed

NEW YORK — Stocks turned in a mixed performance Thursday, as blue chips languished amid worries about the U.S. dollar and a huge June trade deficit while technology issues continued to shine.

Both the Nasdaq Stock Market and American Stock Exchange had record-setting days.

Traders once again fled to technology stocks, which are alluring to investors jittery over how corporate earnings will fare if the dollar's recent rally turns into a prolonged rise.

U.S. trade gap widens to $11.4 billion

Another rise in nation's foreign oil bill helps fuel increase

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — America's trade deficit widened to $11.4 billion in June, the second-worst showing on record. Weakness in U.S. exports and another rise in the nation's foreign oil bill offset falling demand for imported cars.

Through the first six months of this year, the Commerce Department reported Thursday, the trade deficit in merchandise alone is running at an annual rate of $188 billion. The previous all-time high of $166 billion was set last year.

The Clinton administration insisted that the deficit would soon start shrinking, but some economists worried that the dollar's recent rise could make it even harder to cure America's chronic trade problems.

The Commerce Department said the monthly deficit in goods and services was 2.4 percent higher than a revised May imbalance of $11.04 billion. It was the largest trade gap since a record deficit of $11.42 billion set in April.

The new report caught economists by surprise. They had been expecting the deficit to narrow as a slowing U.S. economy cut into demand for foreign products.

Imports, which had hit an all-time high in May, did backtrack slightly, dropping by 0.6 percent. But exports, also at a record high in May, fell at double that pace, 1.2 percent.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for unemployment benefits edged up by 6,000 last week to 338,000. Analysts predicted claims would drift higher in coming weeks.

The decrease in trade imports reflected a big drop of $354 million in shipments of foreign cars and parts and a $367 million decline in demand for other consumer goods such as toys and televisions.

On the export side, U.S. sales abroad of autos were also down for the month, falling by $548 million, while big-ticket exports such as aircraft engines and factory machinery fell by $281 million.

"I think in the next few months we will begin to see an improvement in the merchandise trade balance," said U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor.

Kantor noted that U.S. export growth, despite sluggish economies overseas, had remained strong this year, up by 15.9 percent over the same period in 1994.

The trade gap has widened, however, because import growth has been even stronger, climbing by 17.4 percent in the first six months of this year.

The worsening trade performance represents a major political headache for President Clinton, who has emphasized trade as a top priority of his foreign policy.

Gordon Richards, chief economist at the National Association of Manufacturers, called recent administration dollar-buying efforts to support the U.S. currency "precisely the wrong policy. ... Sustaining the current expansion is dependent on export growth, and to this end, a lower dollar is absolutely essential."

Despite a number of market-opening trade accords with Japan and other nations, the deficit has continued to climb, giving ammunition to critics who charge the administration's trade strategy is a failure.

The deficit with Japan did shrink for a third straight month in June, dropping by 3.7 percent to $5.29 billion. U.S. exports to Japan climbed to the second-highest level on record while American imports of Japanese cars dropped.

But critics said part of the improvement reflected the bruising auto trade fight, which disrupted shipments of Japanese luxury cars until the threat of punitive U.S. tariffs was lifted on June 28. They said the imbalance with Japan still remained the highest for any country and was symptomatic of closed markets throughout Asia.

Adding to U.S. trade problems is a growing dependence on foreign oil. The bill for imported oil climbed to $5.09 billion, highest level in 11 months, although the price per barrel declined slightly to $16.81.

Turner bid drives up CBS stock

By Skip Wollenberg
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Westinghouse Electric Corp. has lined up more than enough financing commitments to complete its $5.4 billion purchase of CBS Inc., banking sources said Thursday.

But Wall Street is betting on CNN founder Ted Turner, who reportedly is considering a rival bid of $6 billion.

CBS stock rose $1.37 1/2 to close at $81.37 1/2 a share Thursday on the New York Stock Exchange.

"The Street thinks there is going to be a second bid," said John Tinker, media analyst for Furman Selz. "The issue then becomes does Westinghouse increase its bid."

One of the banking sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said banks have committed $12 billion in financing to the Westinghouse bid — far more than the agreed-upon purchase price.

Westinghouse will need $7.5 billion in financing to buy CBS for $81 a share, assure itself of adequate working capital, and refinance existing bank lending agreements, the sources said.

Westinghouse wouldn't comment on how much bank financing has been committed so far but spokesman Kit Newton said the effort was "going well, ahead of schedule."

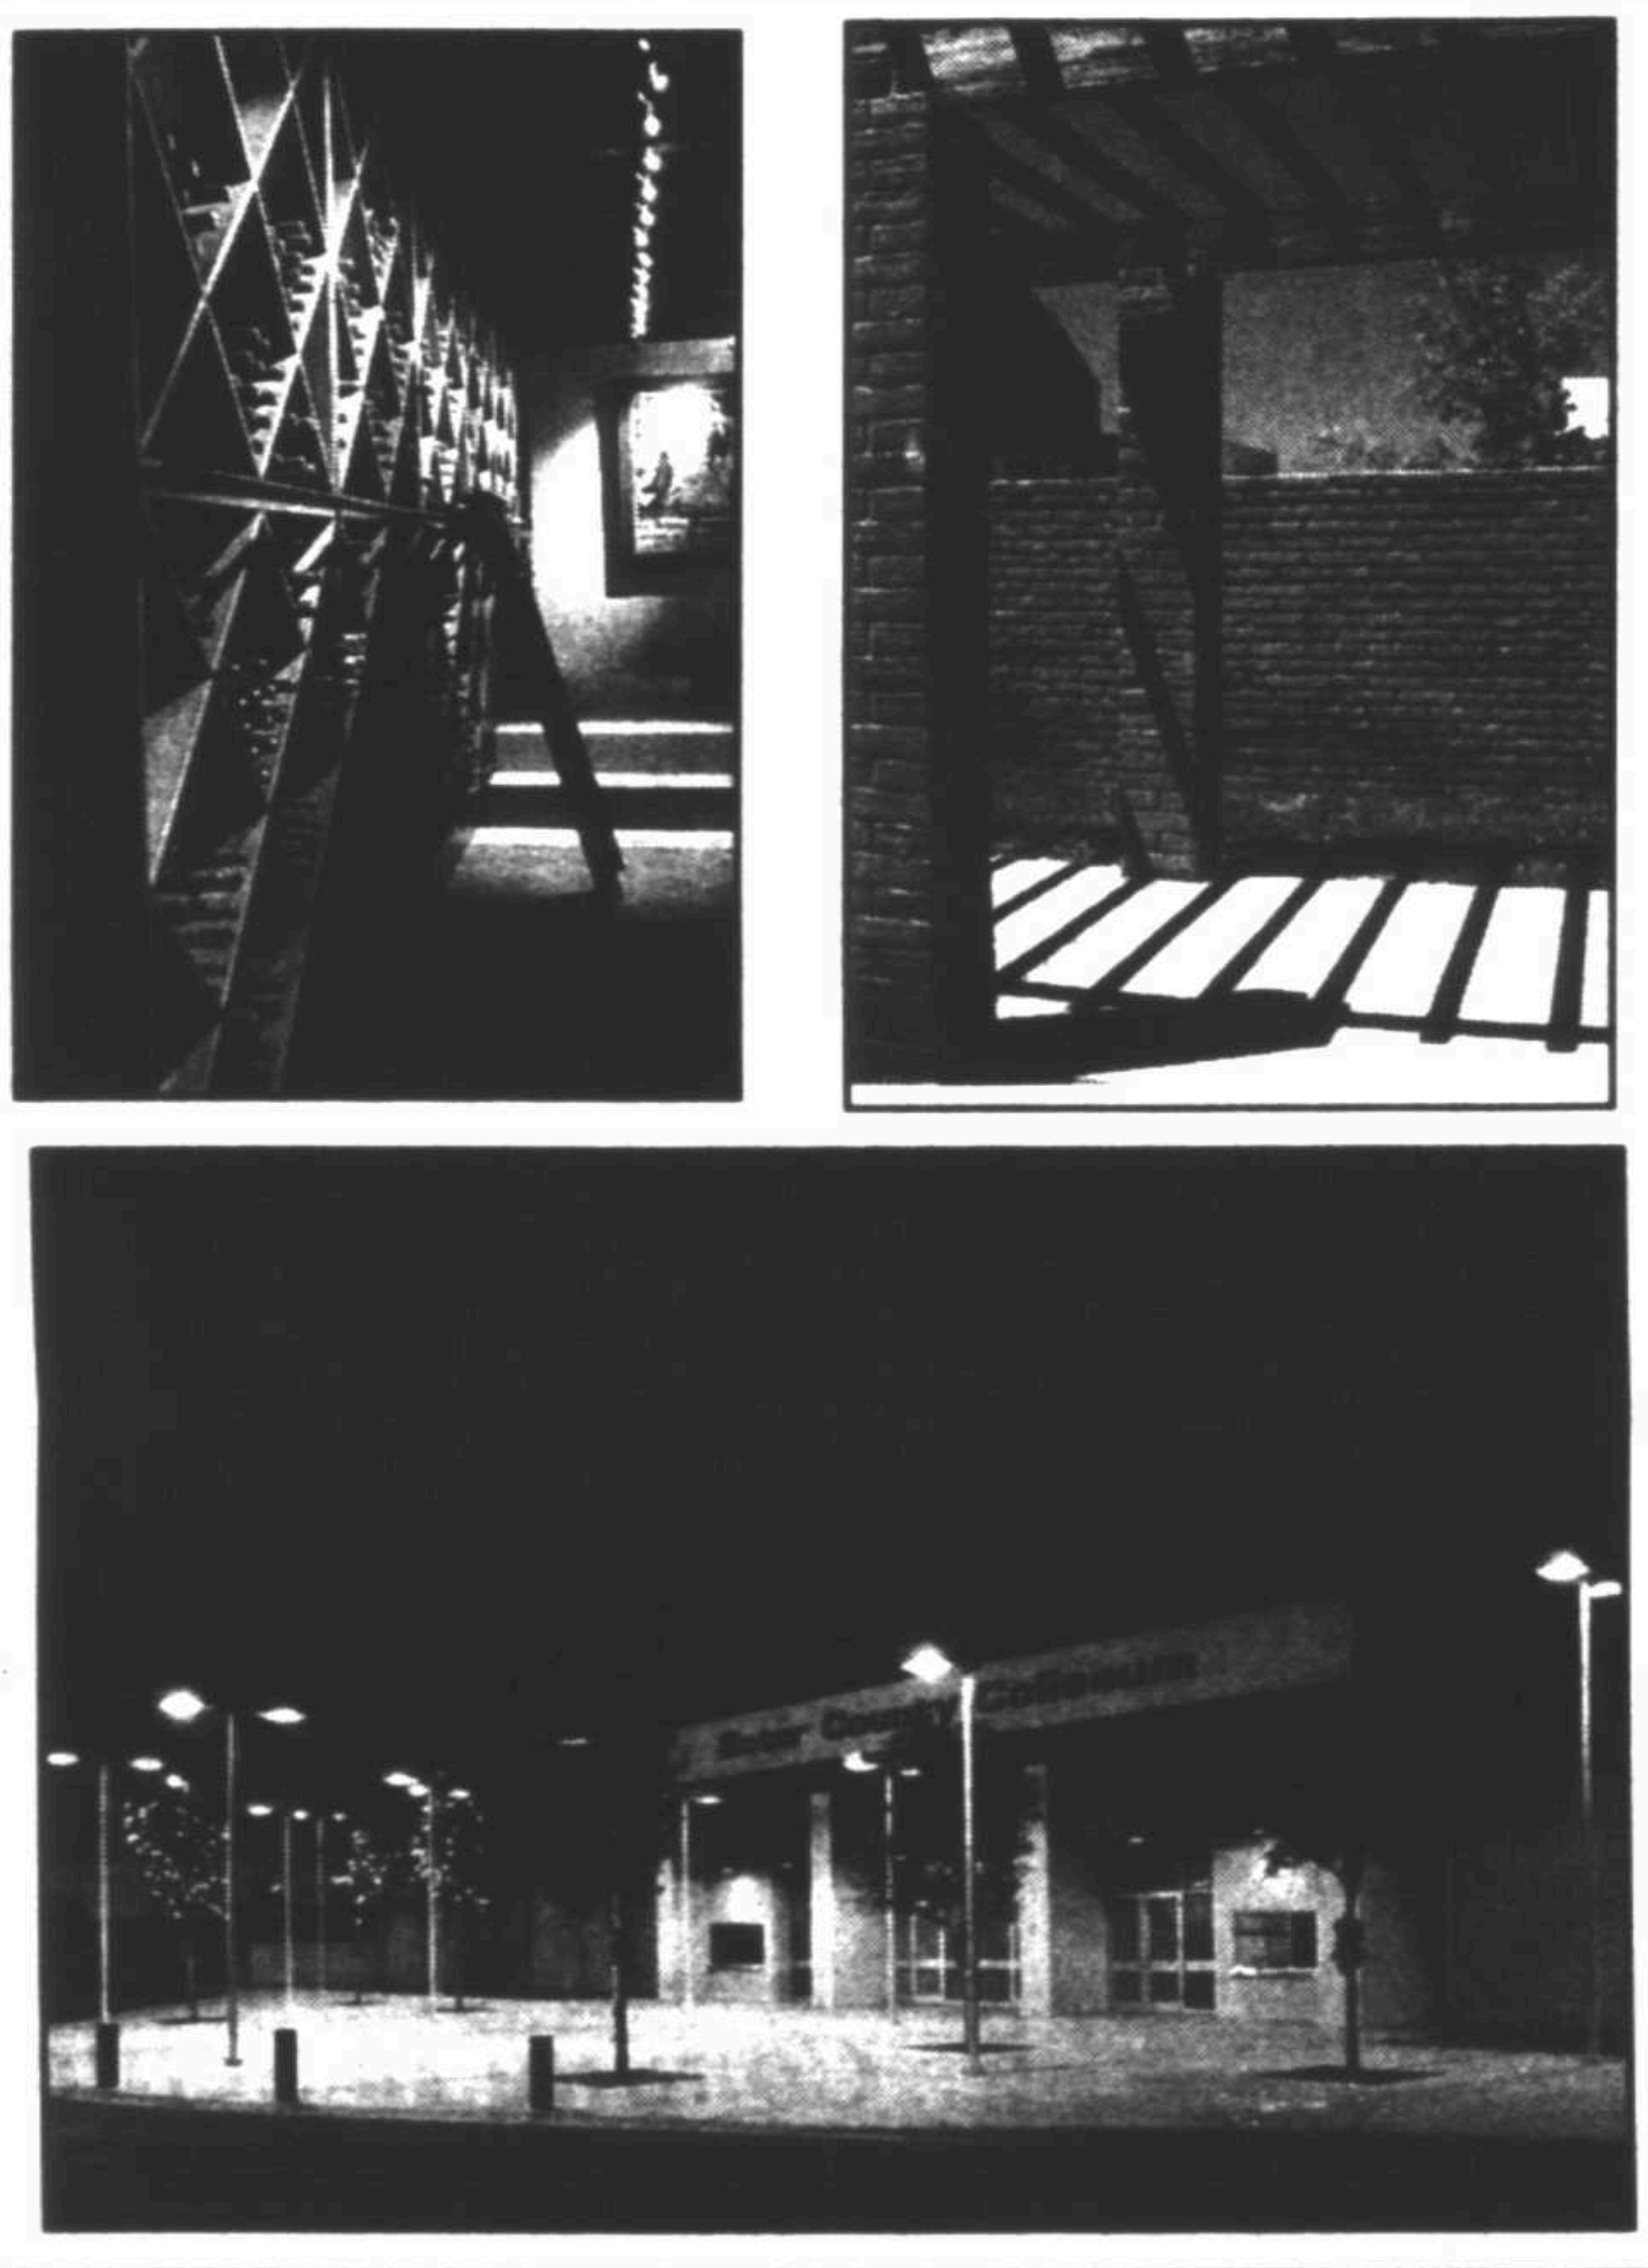
Turner Broadcasting System Inc. has called a special board meeting to discuss issues surrounding its chairman's efforts to arrange a bid for CBS, a source familiar with the situation said Thursday.

The Atlanta-based media and entertainment company wouldn't comment on a board meeting or on a report in the Los Angeles Times that Turner was assembling a $6 billion cash bid for CBS.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a phone meeting of the Turner board was set for Monday and CBS was the likely topic.

It is widely believed that CBS Chairman Laurence A. Tisch wants cash rather than securities for CBS, and it is considered unlikely that Turner could borrow the money needed. But Turner has other ways to raise money.

One option reportedly under discussion is Turner's possible acquisition of King World Productions Inc. through a stock swap.



Architectural design awards

The American Institute of Architects West Texas presented eight awards during their eleventh Biennial Design Awards Banquet. Receiving Honor awards were, top left, the Skylands Wince Cellar designed by Rhotenberry Wellen Architects of Midland and built in Seal Harbor, Maine. Also taking an honor award was the Junior League of Midland headquarters, top right, designed by Connolly Architects of Midland. Merit awards were presented to Connolly for the City of Midland Animal Shelter, to Rhotenberry Wellen for the Morgan Residence in Bayfield, Colorado, and for the Knife Fork & Spoon Table. Citation awards were given to Johnson Seefeldt Architects of Odessa for the Ector County Coliseum redesign, bottom photo. The other citation award went to Connolly for Connolly House. The highest honor, the Twenty-Five Year Award, went to Ireland Elementary School in Odessa, designed by Peters & Fields.

Dell Computer earnings soar 128 percent

AUSTIN (AP) — Dell Computer Corp., driven by higher sales to big companies, more than doubled its profit in the second fiscal quarter.

The personal computer maker said Thursday it earned $65.1 million, or $1.32 per share, in the quarter that ended July 30.

Dell earned $28.6 million, or 65 cents per share, in the second quarter of fiscal 1995. The year-ago results included a $6.2 million after-tax charge related to exposure in derivatives and other investments.

Sales rose 52 percent, to $1.21 billion from $791.5 million.

The results were released after the markets closed and exceeded consensus forecasts of $1.28 per share. Dell's stock closed up $1.25 at $74.25 on the Nasdaq.

"On balance we are very pleased with where we find ourselves," chief financial officer Tom Meredith said.

Sales grew the most to major corporations, government agencies and educational institutions, partly because the company expanded its field sales force, Dell said. Sales to major corporations in the Americas were up about 14 percent sequentially, the biggest driver in the sales increase, Meredith said.

Large and medium-sized companies make up about 75 percent of the company's business, with about 15 percent going to small businesses and 10 percent to consumers.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Lump sum distributions taken directly have penalty

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am 63 and will retire in about a year. My husband, who is 67, has been retired for quite some time. We presently have some investments, such as municipal bonds, etc.

I will get quite a large amount from my pension, which I would like to invest in something safe and good income-producing.

What type of advice can you give me?

Doyle

A: Two kinds — both having to do with that ol' devil taxes.

First off, if you will be in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket, as is the case for most retired folks, don't buy any more municipal bonds.

Because the interest from those bonds is free from federal income tax, "munis" usually pay lower interest than is available from bonds paying taxable interest. Here, we assume the munis and the bonds with taxable interest are of equal investment grade and have similar maturities.

As a result, you get more after-tax "keeping money" from munis only when you are in the 28 percent or higher tax bracket.

Secondly, roll over the lump-sum pension into an individual retirement account to keep it deferred from tax until you start making withdrawals. And be sure to have the pension administrator send the entire lump-sum directly to the IRA by way of a "trustee-to-trustee" transfer.

Do not take that money by check. If you do, your employer will be required to withhold 20 percent as income tax, giving you only 80 percent.

In that case, you'll still be able to put 100 percent of the lump sum into the rollover IRA but you'll have to come up with money to match the withheld 20 percent from other sources, such as your savings. Precious few retirees are able to accomplish that.

Of all the dumb things that were slipped into the Internal Revenue Code by previous Congresses, this ranks as among the worst. It's high on the list of provisions to be scrapped in the present Congress.

As for safe and income-producing investments, there are many different types available. If, by safety, you mean things that will absolutely never lose dollar value, stay with U.S. Treasury securities and/or Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. covered accounts.

But such rock-solid "safe" things do not protect against the rising cost of living. You'll need an anchor to inflation's windward. My suggestion is to put part, say, 30 percent, of that lump-sum pension money into a mutual fund holding common stocks as investments.

Because that type of mutual fund does not pay high dividends, your natural move should be to put the rest of your money into income-producing investments, such as Treasury securities, certificates of deposit and — if you are willing to take on a bit of risk — income mutual funds.

Q: Not being aware there would be a 20 percent mandatory withholding tax on the $214,500 in my retirement plan account, I requested that money and put it into a rollover IRA shortly thereafter.

Because $49,900 was withheld, the company check came to $171,600. Fortunately, I was able to get together $49,900 and put $214,500 into the IRA. This meant I had to borrow $36,000 from relatives and friends, with a promise to repay them when I get back the tax that was so unjustifiably withheld.

I'm getting the "hairy eyeball" from two other relatives from whom I did not borrow any money but who seem to doubt I will get $49,900 back from the Internal Revenue Service.

They both read your column. Can you help me?

A: Yes, if you followed the rules by getting the entire $214,500 into the IRA within 60 days of receiving the retirement plan check.

Assuming that is the case, there is no tax due on that money. The 20 percent that was withheld will come back to you as a refund after you file your 1995 federal income tax return.

Q: Based on a statement in your column that securities "payable on death" — registered in beneficiary form — "would avoid the probate process," my mother believes the Treasury securities she has registered this way will not be subject to federal estate tax. Is she correct?

A: No! Avoiding the often time-consuming and expensive probate process is one thing. Although related, "death taxes," are a different story.

As has been stressed in this space a number of times, avoiding probate does not automatically avoid federal estate tax and state inheritance and/or estate tax.

British bookmakers impressed with Seles' performance, cut odds from 7-2 to 9-4 after two victories

LONDON (AP) — British bookmakers, impressed with Monica Seles' performance in her return to competitive tennis, slashed the odds Thursday on her winning the U.S. Open.

Ladbrokes cut Seles' odds from 7-2 to 9-4 following her easy wins in her first two matches at the Canadian Open in Toronto. That makes her second favorite behind Steffi Graf at 4-5 in the year's final Grand Slam tournament, which begins Aug. 28.

"Seles doesn't look as though she has missed 37 days, let alone 837," Ladbrokes spokesman Paul Austin said.

Ladbrokes even cut the odds on Seles winning Wimbledon next year from 6-1 to 3-1, behind Graf at 4-6.

"We rated Seles as a 12-1 shot prior to her exhibition comeback against Martina Navratilova and already face a payout of over 50,000 pounds ($80,000) even though the Championships are over 10 months away," Austin said.

Seles is playing her first tournament since she was stabbed during a changeover in Hamburg, Germany, on April 30, 1993.

In her first match Tuesday night, she beat Kimberly Po 6-0, 6-3.

BUFFETT: Singer not concerned with airplay

eter Soup" — a scintillating collection of hooky pop-rock, swing and calypso — but there are hints that he's become a beach boy with more purpose.

"Once you've had a near-death experience, it does affect you," says Buffett, who headlines three sold-out nights at Great Woods in Mansfield, Mass. in late August. "I remember this one. I had another near-death experience when I was 19 and was at the bottom of the ocean, but I was too drunk to care about it."

The greatest difference, Buffett says recently from his Long Island home, is that he's learned to spend more time with his three children, ages 16, 3 and 1. This deeper appreciation of life is evident on the new songs "Barefoot Children" ("barefoot children in the rain ... no need to explain") and "Jimmy Dreams," which states that "he's a child to the end," then concludes: "Count all your blessings, remember your dreams."

As if to count his own blessings, Buffett, now 48, returned last winter to his old digs in Key West, Fla., to record the album. "It was nice to go back to Key West and make a record. As much as Key West has changed, there's still a lot of personal history there for me. It was nice to be back in my studio. We had it completely redone.

"I like this (new) record. We did it in January and February, but I still listen to it," says Buffett, who just finished a sailing vacation around Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket. "Someone described it as 'a new old Jimmy Buffett' record and I like that."

The new disc is Buffett's second in two years (after going six years without releasing an album of original songs). It has a deeper feel than last year's "Fruitcakes," but it still brims with the comic relief of the zany "Bank of Bad Habits," "Ballad of Skip Wiley" (with the verse, "You can rag on the Miami Dolphins, but you can't steal the Orange Bowl queen") and the title track, "Barometer Soup," where Buffett sings in his casual, post-grad-from-paradise style, "Come on, let's have some fun, seems our work is done."

"My personal favorite is the song 'Diamond at the Ritz.' It's based on an F. Scott Fitzerald story," Buffett says. The reggae-flavored song, which features the harmonica of longtime backup musician Fingers Taylor, states: "Who's gonna save you when you're a slave to a diamond?"

The new album is the 30th in Buffett's career, which dates back to the mid-'70s when the Mobile, Ala., native scored carefree, hedonistic Top 40 hits such as "Margaritaville," "Changes in Latitudes, Changes in Attitudes" and "Cheeseburger in Paradise."

Oddly enough, he's only had one Top 10 hit in his career ("Margaritaville" went to No. 8), yet he's become a perennial sensation of the summer shed circuit. "At this point in my career, I'm not making records to get on the radio. I get played on the radio sometimes, but I don't check much.'

"I'm just trying to make an album that Parrotheads can add to their collection," he says of the disc, which is again produced by Russ Kunkel.

GRISHAM: Hates cameras in courtrooms which debuts 8 p.m. CDT Sunday, Sept. 17, on CBS before moving to its regular 7 p.m. CDT Tuesday slot Sept. 19.

(From 12C)

"Last night was my fifth night ever to stay in L.A. ... There are no distractions where I live," he said. "I'm just not cut out for cities."

He's also tended to create a buffer zone when it comes to turning his best-selling novels, including "The Firm," "The Pelican Brief" and "The Client," into films.

"I've always had the attitude with movies that" — small laugh — "I get as much money up front as I can, I kiss it good-bye and I expect it to be different. And if I don't like it I don't have to sell the film rights."

He has somewhat closer ties to the TV series, which stars JoBeth Williams as Reggie Love, the big-hearted family law attorney played by Susan Sarandon in the film. John Heard and Ossie Davis co-star.

"I've been invited with the TV series to do anything I want to do, basically, except show up and tell 'em how to film it," he says in his soft Southern drawl.

"Ideally, I would suggest stories. Ideally, I would watch each week and if I didn't like something be able to talk to somebody about it."

There is another legal drama playing out on television that Grisham is willing to critique: the double-murder trial of O.J. Simpson.

"It's awful. It makes everybody cynical about the law. It portrays everything in our judicial system in the worst possible light," he said.

Courtroom cameras are the problem: The Susan Smith murder trial could have been as sensational as the Simpson case but wasn't — because cameras were barred, he argues.

"I hate cameras in the courtroom because it makes fools out of lawyers and judges and everybody else," Grisham said.

"Everybody's a star. You take a sensational case like that, throw it here in Southern California, the center of the celebrity culture, and everybody wants to be a star."

Yet he admits the trial will be fodder for his writer's mill.

"In the long run, the Simpson case will be good for me because there's been so much bizarre behavior in and out of the courtroom," he says.

Grisham knows the arena firsthand, of course: he spent more than a decade as a criminal defense and personal injury attorney.

His lawyer days are essentially behind him. Why toil in the courtroom with book sales in the neighborhood of 3 million copies for his hardcover novels and 10 million copies for paperbacks, not to mention the movie deals?

That success, however, has not come without critical prosecution.

Grisham's novels, which are solid page-turners lacking a literary pedigree, have come in for some harsh reviews. The writer is a bit peeved at just how harsh.

"The first couple or three books, some of the reviews, even if they were unkind, were intelligent. They pointed out legitimate flaws. Now they're so mean and nasty, all they talk about is the fame and the money and the movies.

"I try to write, hopefully, a high quality of popular fiction. That's all I aspired to do; there's nothing pretentious about (the books)."

That is perhaps why he notes, with a touch of relief, that his best-selling streak must someday snap.

"It's not gonna go on forever, not at this level. When it's over, I'll say it was a whole lot of fun, I didn't change, I kept my feet on the ground. And I'm still where I was where I started — just with a whole lot more money in the bank."

ROCK: Diversity a 'valid part of the genre'

(From 12C)

"What we have is an audience who believes they know the subject matter, because they've loved it, they've purchased it, they've danced to it, they've sung along with it, they've had a beer with it," Barrie said. "What we try to give them ... is some understanding of where the music came from, why this artist was important, how she influenced someone else — the kind of thing they may not know."

Technology makes that job easier.

"You will see a screen of Bob Dylan saying how much Woody Guthrie influenced him, and you'll push his face and hear Guthrie singing, and you'll say, 'Wow, he really did influence him!' " said Peter Arendt, design and construction director. "I don't think people are prepared for it."

The concept of a museum dedicated to rock 'n' roll had been floating around since at least the early 1980s. Atlantic Records chairman Ahmet Ertegun headed creation of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Foundation in 1983, after getting the idea from a company that wanted to put the annual induction ceremony on pay-per-view television.

"We got them to agree that we wouldn't do a television show, for starters," Ertegun said. "The kind of event it turned out to be, the induction ceremony, everyone liked and came to because it was not commercialized."

The foundation, comprising record company executives and other music industry professionals, began choosing Rock Hall inductees in 1986. The class included some of the biggest names of 1950s rock: Elvis Presley, Chuck Berry, Fats Domino and Jerry Lee Lewis.

This year's inductees — The Allman Brothers Band, Al Green and Martha and the Vandellas — represent several rock 'n' roll styles.

"I like the diversity," said Allman Brothers drummer Butch Trucks. "It's a broad spectrum, and it's a valid part of the genre."

Trucks recognizes that some of what passes for rock 'n' roll is, and always has been, bad. The part that qualifies as art is rare.

"As H. L. Mencken said, you'll never go broke underestimating the taste of the American public," he said. "The more inane you make it, the bigger it gets."

At the time of the first inductions in New York in 1986, the Hall of Fame had no permanent home.

Later that year, the foundation picked Cleveland, partly because of its history as an influential radio market but more importantly because residents, city and state officials lobbied so hard.

GUMP: Book not fair to Forrest's spirit

(From 12C)

I may jus' be an idiot, but I gotta say all these biographies have got me mighty vexed. Mr. Winston Groom says in his first book that I'm something he calls an "idiot savant," which I guess is some fancy way of sayin' I'm good at math and number stuff like that, but awful slow at jus' about everythin' else. Those movie people, they didn't say nothing about the "savant" thing, though; they jus' made me out to be this nice dimwit who goes around sayin' things like "life is like a box of chocolates" and "stupid is as stupid does." I don't know what any of that means exactly, and when people come up to me on the street now and repeat them words like they're some kind of wisdom or something, I have to say you could knock me over with a feather.

It's funny how things work out. In the movie, them fellers made a whole lotta of other changes to my story too. As Mr. Groom tells it, I'm this huge feller: 6 foot 6 and 240 pounds, but then those movie people go ahead and have that talented but real normal-size Mr. Tom Hanks play me, instead of Arnold Schwarzenegger. Which maybe has somethin' to do with the fact that Mr. Groom also says in that first book of his that Jenny didn't even love me in the beginnin' but was more interested in my body, and then went off and married this other feller by the name of Donald anyways. I have to say I personally like the movie version better.

The other thing that sets me to wonderin' is how them Hollywood fellers had me meetin' all these famous people. Oh, Mr. Groom, he had me meetin' President Nixon and Raquel Welch and goin' to Vietnam, of course, but Mr. Tom Hanks, he got to meet Elvis and John Lennon and President Kennedy and Governor Wallace and actually affect how things went down in history. Now, even I knows that changing history has got to be harder than that.

But maybe this is where Mr. Groom got his idea for his new book, cause this new book, it's just chockfull of stories 'bout me hookin' up with one famous person after another. Like I've said before, everybody makes mistakes, which is why they put a rubber mat around spittoons, but for the life of me I can't see myself associatin' with some of the nasty folks Mr. Groom says I do in "Gump & Co." I mean I may be a idiot, but most of the time, I'm jus' tryin' to do the right thing.

Sometimes, readin' this new book, I think Mr. Groom is mad at me for something or is in such a hurry to make hisself some more money that he's gone plumb outta his mind. He writes like I would leave Little Forrest at home in Alabama, while I went gallivantin' around the world with all these high muckety-mucks, that I would actually pal around with fellers who talk 'bout "meanness, dirty tricks an stuff." I don't know what I did to make Mr. Groom say such things 'bout me: so far all's my story done for him is brung him his picture in People magazine.

According to "Gump & Co.," a Mr. Oliver North, a genuine colonel, recruited me for something called Iran-Contra, and took me off to Iran where we met this old feller with a beard who we done made a business deal with. Mr. Groom, he says Mr. North tried to blame me for the whole mess when things didn't turn out so good later on. And then, says Mr. Groom, this other feller named Mr. Ivan Bozosky hired me for his company and tried to make me take all the blame when things began goin' south. Seems like I musta spent most of the 80s and 90s — most of "Gump & Co.," anyways — gettin' throwed in jail, gettin' rescued and gettin' throwed back in again. Just thinkin' about it is enough to make my stomach do a flip-flop.

Now my mama always said people should try and avoid gettin' a swelled head, and I have to say here that those Hollywood folk and especially Mr. Groom in this here new book seem to have blowed up my importance. So, if I ain't oversteppin' my bounds, I wanna say that this new book "Gump & Co." is stupid. Well, stupid is as stupid writes. And that's all I have to say about that.

HARTMAN: Star's show up against 'Improvement'

(From 12C)

Like John Candy, Dan Aykroyd, Martin Short and numerous other comics, Hartman was born in Canada. Unlike the others, he grew up in the United States — Connecticut and Southern California (only the way he says "oot" instead of "out" betrays his birthplace).

"My first two years in college were at Santa Monica City College, which is now Santa Monica College," he says. "I left school in 1969, and I was a roadie for a rock band, traveling around the country. Because I had been an art major in college, I designed my first album cover.

"That got me interested in graphic design, and I want back to school at Cal State Northridge. I left school in my senior year because I got a job offer to work in an advertising agency. Eventually, I had my own design studio, designing album covers for rock bands, as well as ads, posters and whatever else I could scare up. I did that for 10 years."

It was that fateful night in 1975 that changed his life. He was overwhelmed by the inventive comics who called themselves the Groundlings. He joined their workshop and later became a member of the company.

Did fame come pounding on his door?

Not yet. After 10 years, Hartman had picked up only a few bit parts in movies. He did have success as a screenwriter, collaborating with fellow Groundling Paul Reubens on the script of "Pee-wee's Big Adventure" (Reubens was Pee-wee).

"I was 36, and I had decided to quit acting because it was so disappointing," Hartman recalls. "'Pee-wee's Big Adventure' was relatively successful, and if you can be associated with a hit, a lot of doors open. I found the writing arena to be much less competitive.

"As an actor, I felt I couldn't compete. I wasn't as cute as the leading man; I wasn't as brilliant as Robin Williams. The one thing I could do was voices and impersonations and weird characters, and there was really no call for that. Except on 'Saturday Night Live.' "

In 1986, he joined what would become the second flowering of "SNL," a cast that included Jon Lovitz, Dennis Miller and Dana Carvey. Hartman scored with his amazing skill at impersonation. During his seven seasons, he mimicked upwards of 70 famous people, including Ed McMahon, Jimmy Swaggart and Phil Donahue.

"Even at Westchester High in West L.A., I was class clown," he remembers, "because I could do John Wayne, Jack Benny, Jack Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson and entertain my friends on the senior lawn. But I never seriously considered it as a career choice."

During the summer vacations from "SNL," he managed to knock off some movies. "Greed," with Michael J. Fox and Kirk Douglas, managed to get good reviews for Hartman, if not the movie. After leaving "SNL," he drew his first co-starring billing, with Sinbad in the modest hit, "House Guest."

NBC financed development of his own variety series, "The Phil Show." When the variety shows of Carol Burnett, Dave Thomas, Robert Townsend, Martin Short and others tumbled, the project was abandoned.

Then, "Newsradio" came along.

Hartman plays anchorman Bill McNeal in the fast-paced sitcom, which appeared for seven episodes last mid-season and is guaranteed 13 episodes starting this fall. Even though the show faces "Home Improvement" on Tuesday nights, Hartman is hopeful. That's because "Newsradio" is sandwiched between two stalwarts, "Wings" and "Frasier."

Although he was a latecomer to performing and at 46 hasn't yet reached the top rung, Hartman expresses satisfaction.

"One of the remarkable things about my career is that it has been marked by steady, incremental progress. No sudden spikes up, and no sudden downfalls, either," he said.

"I haven't really been slammed, like some of my buddies. I can't imagine that I'm going to avoid that in my career. Because I came into it so late, after working in the corporate world of advertising and graphic design, I know how hard the average person works, because I've been there.

"I've succeeded beyond my wildest dreams — financially and the amount of fun I have in my life."

Novelist John Grisham has chosen the simple life of his native Oxford, Miss., to the hustle and bustle of Hollywood, part of the reason he has remained humble in the face of his wild popularity.

■ With six bestsellers under his belt, maybe John Grisham's next book should focus on how to keep a level head in the face of immense fame and success.

By Lynn Elber
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — Don't hate John Grisham because his legal thrillers have sold enough copies to break the blindfolded lady's scales. Don't hate him because he's conquered movies and is advancing on TV with CBS' "The Client," based on his book-turned-film.

Don't scorn him on general principle because he is, after all, a lawyer.

That would be wrong. But you can get just a trifle annoyed with the man for this: He appears to have remained rational about his enormous success and — to a degree — his rabid literary critics.

His M.O.: staying close to his small-town roots in his native Oxford, Miss., population 10,000. Keeping the focus on his wife and two children. And limiting his personal contact with Hollywood.

Grisham, it turns out, knows it's smart to take the money and run.

"I cannot imagine living here," he said during a recent visit to promote "The Client,"

'I Gotta Do This!'

Patience, persistence pay off for Phil Hartman

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — If Phil Hartman hadn't dropped in at an improvisational comedy club in 1975, he might still be operating a graphic design company.

AP Laserphoto
SNL graduate Phil Hartman's new show, "Newsradio" has been guaranteed a 13-week run this fall season by NBC.

Fact is, he did drop in, saw the fast-witted comedians and was conquered.

"I gotta do this!" he proclaimed.

The results of this revelation are readily available. Distinguished alumnus of the "Saturday Night Live" college of comedy. Currently seen in a new and promising sitcom, "Newsradio." Coming to a theater near you: "Sgt. Bilko," starring Steve Martin, Dan Aykroyd and Phil Hartman.

"I've got the best part — I'm the villain," he announces proudly.

For a guy who has played smarmy villains and impersonated everyone from Frank Sinatra to Bill Clinton, Hartman seems like a remarkably normal citizen. He lives with his wife and two children in a sprawling, tree-shaded house in deepest Encino in the valley northwest of downtown Los Angeles. With his bland looks and easy manner, he could be anybody's favorite neighbor.

The cast of "Baby-Sitter's Club," a modern day "Little Women" for the pre-teen set.

A true-to-life tale for '90s girls

American girls, who constitute the most neglected segment of Hollywood's mass audience, [illegible] rare respectful acknowledgment with "The Baby-Sitters Club," a snug and reassuring adaptation of a series that has found a lasting following in books and television.

A solid hour and a half of lifelike schoolgirl antics with some serious concerns thrown in for good measure, "The Baby-Sitters Club" is a "Little Women" for the present day — a vibrant, good-humored collection of day-in-the-life vignettes about matters to which modern youth can relate wholeheartedly.

Dalene Young's screenplay concerns a campaign t[illegible] care center. Th[illegible] sters wh[illegible] [illegible] ains as [illegible] distracted from the main project by problems ranging from puppy love to fashion crises to family estrangement.

Schuyler Fisk is a standout as Kristy Brewer, the club president whose life is complicated when her absentee father (Peter Horton) moves back to their Anytown, U.S.A., community but insists that she keep his return a secret. The tense moments caused by this situation put an ironic edge on Larry Fulton's neat-as-a-pin production design, arguing subtly that despite all life's complications, one can always present a confident face.

Director Melanie Mayron is largely responsible for the perky confidence of the film itself — for making such modest tribulations and quiet joys seem as important to the viewer as they must feel to the characters in the story. The young ensemble cast shows vivacity and promise, and such veterans as Peter Horton and Ellen Burstyn lend dramatic ballast.

For Jimmy Buffett, all well in paradise

By Steve Morse
The Boston Globe

Rock 'n' roll court jester Jimmy Buffett had a rude awakening when his plane failed on takeoff last summer, forcing him to crash in the seas off Nantucket Island. The near-tragedy made headlines around the country.

These days, Buffett is back to his jovial self with a new tour and a new album, "Barometer Soup," yet it contains a couple of deep-meaning songs that suggest he's truly glad to be alive.

"I'm still flying, but I have a safer plane now," says Buffett. "For a while I got introspective about it, but you've got to get back up. I called a therapist I'd seen off and on in California to tell him about it — and to say I was having flashbacks — but the week before, the therapist had also ditched his plane. Boy, did we have one heck of a therapy session!"

Buffett is back to his eternal beach-boy form on "Barom-

'Gump & Co.': Stupid is as stupid writes

By Michiko Kakutani
N.Y. Times News Service

Hello, my name's Forrest, Forrest Gump. People call me Forrest Gump. Maybe you've already heard of me. More and more people has, ever since all these fellers come along to tell my life's story.

First there was that writer feller, Mr. Winston Groom, who way back along there in 1986 wrote this book with my name on its cover jus' as plain as day: "Forrest Gump." And then there was all them movie people who made themselves a movie 'bout my adventures. They got that nice actor, Mr. Tom Hanks, to play me and that pretty lady, Miss Sally Field, to play my mama. I reckon that movie was some big success, cause Mr. Winston Groom has now gone and wrote another book called "Gump & Co.," which is supposed to tell you even more 'bout my life. As if you folks didn't already know more 'bout my past than my poor ole pea brain can recollect.

Long live rock

Museum devoted to art form set for September opening

By Chuck Melvin
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND — It is the soundtrack of the 20th century, music so tightly entwined with society that the story of our times could not be told without it.

Rock 'n' roll has endured long enough to deserve a museum all its own.

And now it has one.

"It's art," said Jann Wenner, publisher of Rolling Stone Magazine and vice chairman of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. "And like all art, it evolves, and the older art gets put in a museum, which is great and natural."

But when the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum opens on Labor Day weekend, visitors won't mistake it for any art museum they've seen before.

Outside, the building designed by I.M. Pei looks as rebellious as the music it celebrates, with bold geometric shapes flanking a glass, pyramid-shaped central structure. Portions of the $92 million building are anchored in the waters of Lake Erie.

Inside, the collection of rock artifacts will be brought to life by interactive exhibits featuring films, video, audio and computer displays.

Little Richard, one of the first rockers to be inducted in 1986, will perform Sept. 2 in the hall's grand opening concert.

Time in a Bottle

Visitors to Cleveland's Rock and Roll of Fame and Museum can see an array of rock artifacts on display. They include:

- Buddy Holly's high school diploma.
- Grace Slick's dress from Woodstock.
- Wilson Pickett's guitar and jumpsuit.
- Keith Moon's report card (the future Who drummer "shows promise in music").
- John Lennon's Rickenbacker guitar.
- Jimi Hendrix's handwritten lyrics to "Purple Haze."

The museum, he said, "is going to let them see the roots and where it came from. I say that as an originator who played with all of these guys. I'm the architect of rock 'n' roll.

"It's going to humble a lot of people. It's going to give respect and credit to the originators of rock 'n' roll."

Part of the challenge, museum Director Dennis Barrie said, was to make the museum interesting enough to attract fans who already know the material intimately. Patrons of an art museum, for example, may never see an original Rembrandt or Picasso anywhere else; patrons of the Rock Hall, in contrast, may be familiar enough with the music to recite the lyrics word-for-word.

Energy Department doubles its estimate of those involved in risky experiments

AP Laserphoto

This photo released by the Energy Department Thursday shows a respiration analyst using injected radioactive tracers at the Donner Laboratory in California in 1968.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a final tally, the Energy Department said Thursday that 16,000 men, women and children — nearly double the department's earlier estimate — were used in radiation experiments from World War II to the mid-1970s.

Though questions remain about the ethics of the experimentation, Energy Department officials said their inquiry has shown that most of the research with humans was for useful, even "heroic," medical purposes.

"Much of it was to go after breakthroughs on the medical front," Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary told a news conference. But, she added, "There is a dark side," too.

The department over the past 18 months has documented 435 experiments in which humans were used in radiation research conducted or sponsored by the Energy Department or its predecessors since the 1940s, she said.

It remains an open question whether the people used in the experiments gave their consent, and whether, in cases of volunteers, they knew the health risks.

Ellyn Weiss, director of the department's Office of Human Radiation Experiments, said the available documents left unclear the extent of subject consent.

Department officials declined to discuss the ethics of individual experiments. They said that issue — and whether subjects or their families should be compensated — was up to a presidential advisory committee that is reviewing all human radiation experiments, including those done by the Pentagon. The presidential panel is to make its recommendations in September.

Tara O'Toole, the assistant energy secretary for environmental safety and health, said that in her view, about 10 percent of the 435 confirmed experiments "raise some troubling ethical questions." She cited three main concerns:

■ Some of the subjects were children, mental patients or prison inmates.

For example, at the University of Arkansas Medical Center in Little Rock in the early 1960s, mentally retarded children as young as 13 who were wards of the Arkansas Children's Colony were given small amounts of iodine-131 in a thyroid study. A similar University of Arkansas study in the 1950s used infants as young as nine months. A University of Washington study in 1954-58 used mental patients at Northern State Hospital in Sedro-Woolley.

■ Some people were given very highs doses of radiation.

In experiments at Harvard Medical School in the early 1960s, for example, one patient received 650 rads of X-ray radiation over the whole body. Today's established safety limit for whole-body exposure is the equivalent of 2 rads per year. The unidentified Harvard patient died 28 days later; death was attributed to the radiation.

■ Aborted fetuses were used in some cases.

In 1947, for example, two Massachusetts hospitals and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology collaborated on an experiment in which nine pregnant women were injected with small amounts of iodine-131 before undergoing scheduled therapeutic abortions. The thyroids of the fetuses were measured for radioactivity.

Hurricane Felix stalls off coast of North Carolina; many relax

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — With a collective sigh of relief, residents along the North Carolina coast began to unbatten the hatches Thursday as Hurricane Felix appeared to be skulking away into the Atlantic.

Hurricane warnings were dropped for North Carolina and Virginia, and authorities lifted an evacuation order along the Outer Banks, the thin crescent of islands that had been most directly threatened.

People began trickling back to the Outer Banks by ferry and bridge.

"It's dying down," said a jubilant Bill Tarplee, an employee of [illegible] Bar-b-que in Nags Head who was ripping the plywood off the restaurant's windows. "There's blue sky, sunshine. I don't see a hurricane."

Although the storm was still considered potent, its winds had slowed to 75 mph — just 1 mph over hurricane strength.

As of 8 p.m., it was about 260 miles east-northeast of Cape Hatteras, drifting slightly out to sea. The National Weather Service expected little movement through Saturday night.

The danger, however, was by no means over. Forecasters warned there is no guarantee the storm would continue on the east-northeast track carrying it slowly back into the Atlantic. "Felix may just be executing a clockwise loop," the National Weather Service said.

Felix could still cause damage by continuing to pound the beaches with waves, and much of the coast from North Carolina to Delaware was under a tropical storm warning. But it appeared unlikely that this section of mid-Atlantic coast would see a direct hit.

Felix was a bust for both wind and rain on the Outer Banks, with gusts Thursday near 30 mph and rainfall of just two-hundredths of an inch.

James England, a National Weather Service forecaster in Buxton, said he had to call his wife to remind her to water the garden. "Usually in this kind of situation, you're not thinking of watering," he said.

But the storm blew by during one of the peak weeks of the summer season, costing businesses in the area an estimated $4 million a day in lost revenue.

At the 88-room Sanderling Inn Resort, general manager Tina Burger said losses were running $30,000 a day. "It's extremely frustrating," she said. "Because you have no way of making up the lost revenue."

Still, business owners did not fault county officials for evacuating the area of its more than 200,000 tourists — a huge undertaking that snarled roads for hours on Tuesday.

"It was a good drill," said Tim Lehman, the manager of a pinball and pool arcade at the Avalon Fishing Pier in Nags Head. He stood behind the counter folding freshly printed T-shirts that bore the slogan: "Hurricane Felix. You should have been there."

There were few signs of damage. Even the most vulnerable homes, those built on stilts along the beach at Kill Devil Hills, seemed to have withstood the continuous pounding of waves against their pilings.

What was not yet clear, however, was how much damage the waves caused on the beaches themselves. Experts said the hurricane-churned surf could end up doing more damage than a direct hit.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION
FOR OIL AND GAS WASTE DISPOSAL WELL PERMIT

Parker & Parsley Development LP, P.O. Box 3178, Midland, TX 79703, is applying to the Railroad Commission of Texas for a permit to dispose of produced salt water or other oil and gas waste by well injection into a porous formation which is productive of oil or gas.

The applicant purposes to inject oil and gas waste into the San Andres (Formation), Spraberry Driver Unit (lease), Well Number 1021D. The proposed disposal well is located 13 mi. W. from St. Lawrence, Texas in the Spraberry (Trend Area), in Reagan County. The waste water will be injected into strata in the subsurface depth interval from 3950 to 4950 feet.

LEGAL AUTHORITY: Chapter 27 of the Texas Water Code, as amended, Title 3 of the Natural Resources Code, as amended, and the Statewide Rules of the Oil and Gas Division of the Railroad Commission of Texas.

Requests for a public hearing from persons who can show they are adversely affected, or requests for further information concerning any aspect of the application should be submitted in writing, within fifteen days of publication, to the Underground Injection Control Section, Oil and Gas Division, Railroad Commission of Texas, Drawer 12967, Capitol Station, Austin, Texas 78711 (Telephone 512/463-6790).

CONSTRUCTION PERMIT

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES:

You are hereby notified that BAKER PERFORMANCE CHEMICALS, INC. has applied for Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC) Air Quality Permit No. 29414. this permit, if approved, will authorize construction of a Store Oil Field Chemicals Facility in Midland, Midland County, Texas. The location of the proposed facility is 8004 West Highway 80. This facility will emit the following air contaminants: hydrocarbons including (but not limited to) solvents, cumene, isopropyl alcohol, naphthalene, methanol, alkyl pyridine, ethylene glycol, monoethanolamine.

A copy of all materials in the public file is available for inspection and reproduction at the TNRCC Odessa Regional Office, Air Program, located at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762, telephone (915) 367-3871, and at the TNRCC Central Office, 12124 Park 35 Circle, Austin, Texas 78753, telephone (512) 239-1000. The facility's compliance file, if any exists, is available for public review in the regional office of the TNRCC. Inquiries about the permit application and any information concerning any technical aspect of this application can be obtained by writing Mr. Tony Ionescu, TNRCC Office of Air Quality, New Source Review Division (MC-162), P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711-3087 or the TNRCC Odessa Regional Office.

You may submit written comments concerning the permit application to the Office of Air Quality, New Source Review Division in Austin. All written comments received within 30 days after the second publication of this notice shall be considered by the Executive Director in determining whether to issue or not issue the permit. All written comments will be made available for public inspection at the TNRCC Central Office in Austin. this notice is to be published August 17 and August 18, 1995.

Any person who may be affected by emissions of air contaminants from the proposed facility may request the Commission to hold an informal public meeting and/or contested case hearing on the permit application pursuant to Section 382.056(d) of the Texas Health and Safety Code. The Commission is not required to hold a contested case hearing if the basis of a request is determined to be unreasonable. All requests for a contested case hearing must be received in writing with the 30-day comment period regardless of whether an informal public meeting has been held or scheduled on this matter. If you wish to request a public hearing, you must submit your request in writing. You must state (1) your name, mailing address and daytime phone number; (2) permit number or other recognizable reference to this application; (3) the statement "I/we request a public hearing"; (4) a brief description of how you, or the persons you represent, would be adversely affected by the granting of the application; (5) a description of the location of your property relative to the applicant's operations; and (6) your proposed adjustment to the application/permit which would satisfy your concerns and cause you to withdraw your request for hearing. Requests for a public hearing on this application should be submitted in writhing to Office of the Chief Clerk (MC-105), Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711-3087, telephone (512) 239-3300.

Before a permit can be issued for this facility, the applicant must demonstrate that all emission sources are in compliance with all TNRCC air quality Rules and Regulations and all applicable Federal Regulations. this includes the application of "Best available control technology" to each new or modified emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.
