Millionaires May Be Dime A Dozen In 70 Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — How far will your dollars go in the mid-21st century? Nobody knows for sure, but if the Social Security Administration's projections hold true, the average worker will be making $656,000 a year and millionaires will be a dime a dozen.

For those retiring in 2050, Social Security checks will average nearly $259,000 a year and some retirees will be pulling in a maximum benefit of $405,000.

Being a millionaire won't be nearly enough to keep you from paying Social Security taxes on part of your income. According to the projections, Social Security taxes in 2050 will be paid on wages up to $1.5 million a year.

The long-range look into the future was done by administrators for the Social Security trust funds.

A spokesman cautioned that "these are not predictions, but simply projections based on current trends. They are subject to re-evaluation every year between now and 2050."

In its long-term forecasts, the agency expects wages to increase at a 5.75 percent clip annually, while prices climb 4 percent. Both those figures are below current rates.

Social Security benefits are guaranteed by law to climb with inflation, but so will the taxes.

Currently an average worker earns $10,500 and, if he retires at 65, receives benefits of $4,600 annually. Taxes are paid on earnings up to $17,700, with the maximum benefit for an individual this year set at $5,700.

The higher payroll taxes that Congress approved last year have put the system back on an even keel into the 21st century, but projections indicate the retirement trust fund will run out around 2030 unless new taxes are raised.

The Carter administration has committed itself to rethinking some of the tax increases scheduled in coming years. By 1987, the payroll tax would be more than $3,000 annually on income up to $42,000.

The tax rate on both workers and employers, which is now 6.05 percent, would reach 7.15 percent by 1987 and level off at 7.76 percent in the 1990s.

In 1990 the average worker will earn $22,700, while the maximum taxable earnings for Social Security would be $52,800. The average benefit for a newly retired 65-year-old would be $8,900 and the maximum would be $12,000. In each case a spouse would be entitled to an additional 50 percent.

In 2000, the average yearly wage would be $40,000, the maximum taxable by Social Security $93,000, the average benefit $16,000 and the maximum benefit $23,000.

In 2010, the average wage would be $70,000 and the maximum taxable $164,000. The average benefit would be $28,000 and the maximum $42,400.

In 2025, the average earnings would be $162,000 and the maximum taxable $378,000; the average benefit would be $64,000 and the maximum $100,000.

Witness Tells Of Threats

By FRANK PATRICK

Mrs. Shirley Catherine Starr today said she decided to tell the truth about how her small son died when she gazed at his lifeless body in a funeral home.

"I believe it was the first time I believed it was really him," she said of the five-year-old boy. She had indicated earlier she had not believed it when a doctor told her the child was dead.

"I couldn't see him lying there like that and realize he really was dead and let it go like that," Mrs. Starr said.

The testimony concerning her thoughts at the funeral home took place outside the presence of the jury, as Mrs. Starr, 26, took the stand for the second day in Judge Robert C. Wright's 137th District Court.

The two reportedly lived together for more than two years.

Also today, testifying in the presence of the seven-woman, five-man jury the 26-year-old witness indicated the defendant had threatened her.

"He had said if I told what happened I would regret it, I would be sorry," she said.

It was brought out today that Mrs. Starr had given what she now says was a false statement to police only a few hours after her son died. The witness today said she decided to tell police what really happened after visiting the funeral home and after talking with her parents.

In testimony Wednesday, Mrs. Starr had said the child died after doing physical exercises imposed on him by the defendant and after being struck twice by an open hand.

A nightmarish series of events started, the witness indicated, when she returned home from work about 5:30 p.m.

Assistant District Attorney Cindy Miller asked what Quentin was doing when she got home.

"I believe he was doing the pushups at the time," Mrs. Starr said in a monotone.

She said the boy did not seem "exceptionally tired" and continued the pushups in the living room as her other child, a seven-year-old daughter, watched.

Mrs. Starr said Williams explained to her that Quentin was being disciplined for getting candy from the refrigerator.

"He (Williams) said Quentin could stop

Airmen Face Delay In Pay

By GERRY BURTON

A TWX is the most important single item at Reese Air Force Base today.

Unless a message comes over the telegraphic message machine in the communication nerve center, payday just won't happen Friday for 2,338 military personnel and will be slashed in half for 649 civilian employees.

Word that the $117.5 billion defense bill may not be signed by Friday threw emergency stop-gap measures into high gear at Reese, where $829,699.21 in military and $397,244.62 in civilian paychecks are awaiting an okay from Washington.

Should the okay not come, civilians will receive pay only for the last week in September, which is covered in the 1978 fiscal year.

With military pay running current with the calendar, the entire two-week paycheck for armed forces personnel hangs on congressional action.

"We have notified the Air Force Aid Society, credit union and finance institutions downtown that there is a very real possibility checks will not be coming," Capt. Bob Brus, chief of Reese information, reported.

Reese-connected financial institutions already are primed to handle the situation, Brus added.

The credit union has been alerted to the possibility of heavy withdrawals on savings accounts and a heavy request load for loans.

The Air Force Society, Brus explained, is a fund to which all military personnel contribute and from which all benefit in financial emergencies. Normally, it is geared to help the younger troops over the rough spots occurring regularly early in the military career.

All military checks have been printed, sorted and readied for the mails.

Wrong Getaway Car Picked For Holdup

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Things didn't come up too rosy for a robbery suspect police found hiding this morning in a flower garden at Hodges Community Center at 40th Street and University Avenue.

But what could the 17-year-old suspect expect when he allegedly picked for his getaway car a vehicle owned by the son of a Lubbock justice of the peace?

The holdup was reported about 5:20 a.m. today at Preston Milk Store at 2267 34th St.

The Lubbock high school student identified as the bandit was captured by police about 5:45 a.m. hiding in a rose garden at the community center.

Upon further investigation, it was learned that the suspect's white-over-blue Mustang had been stolen from in front of Justice of the Peace Charles Smith's house in the 4900-block of 49th Street.

Store clerk Jo Ann DeLeon said the suspect came into the convenience store brandishing a Mace gun. She said he ordered her to, "Open up the register and give me all your money or I'm going to kill you," then added, "I'm sorry but I need the money."

The clerk said she gave the teen-ager $139 and he left. Police said the vehicle was found abandoned several minutes later in the 2400-block of 40th Street with the sack of money in it.

Solons Approve Area Road Plan

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

House and Senate conferees late Wednesday approved construction of a 370-mile "Port-to-Plains" highway from Lubbock to near Kerrville, and all that could keep it from becoming a reality now is a veto by President Carter of the highway bill that provides for it.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Houston, who originated the proposal in his Senate transportation subcommittee and sponsored it as chairman of Senate conferees, told the Avalanche-Journal today that a compromise resulted in a second funding option to ease problems the State of Texas might have in paying its part of the project.

"Everyone has their particular projects they're interested in, and obviously you can't get them all, and it becomes a matter of bargaining and persuasion to see that your own projects prevail," Bentsen said. "I must admit, it helps to be chairman of the committee."

The senator said he was calling the president this morning to "tell him I think it's an excellent bill.

"It helps modernize our highway system, and it has some safety features built in. It's very necessary for our country."

The bill gives two alternatives for funding the possible $440-million, multi-year project: funding on a 90-10 basis with federal money being used for 90 percent of the cost instead of the standard 70-30 funding for state "primary system" — as opposed to interstate system — roads; and 75-25 funding with the federal money coming from a new "priority primary" fund from the Department of Transportation.

Richard Vander Straten, program engineer for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation in Austin, said the second option appears to solve the problem and that preliminary work toward building the highway probably will start immediately if the bill gets final approval.

He warned, however, that environmental statements, public hearings and other required procedures probably would delay actual start of construction "for years."

The earlier problem was that the state has committed all of its highway fund allocations to projects already laid out for the next 20 years and will have no extra federal money from present sources for the project.

The Transportation Department fund is a new source, however, and the highway bill specifically mentions the Port-to-Plains Highway and a 485-mile road from Amarillo to Las Cruces, N.M., as projects that would be eligible for funding from it.

"The people of West Texas have fought for the Port-to-Plains Highway for a long time," Bentsen said. "I am pleased that my proposal has been accepted and hopeful that this important transportation link will become a reality within the next few years.

"The highway bill designates it as a demonstration project for a new 'connector primary' highway program I have proposed. The program is intended to fill in some of the gaps left by our interstate system.

"The bill leaves it to the state, working with local government, to determine the exact route to be followed by the demonstration highway."

Israel, Egypt Open Parley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egypt and Israel began negotiations today to draw up a peace treaty that President Carter said must be the first step toward an overall settlement.

The goal, Carter said in an opening ceremony at the White House, is "to make peace and dignity a reality for all the people in the Middle East."

Carter invited Jordan, the Palestinian Arabs and "others" to join the process, which so far has drawn the condemnation of some Arab states and the disinterest of others.

"The United States is committed, without reservation, to seeing this process through," he said.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, in a brief statement, said his government hoped the stage had finally been set for concluding a peace treaty with Egypt.

Kamal Hassan Ali, head of the Egyptian delegation, emphasized, however, that a settlement must secure "the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people and enable them to play a constructive role in the Middle East."

Ali, the new defense minister in President Anwar Sadat's "peace" government, said Egypt would encourage other Arab governments to join in the quest for an overall settlement.

Egypt's evident willingness to conclude a treaty with Israel without resolving the Palestinian question has caused deep divisions within the Arab world. Carter's reassurances about seeking an overall settlement and Ali's specific reference to the Palestinians were intended to be conciliatory.

As he welcomed them to the White House Wednesday night, Carter promised the Egyptian delegates he would be "available any time I'm needed" to expedite the talks, taking place under a United Nations flag at Blair House across Pennsylvania Avenue from the executive mansion.

The Egyptian delegation is led by Ali and by acting Foreign Minister Boutros Ghali. The Israeli delegation is headed by Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

City To Hire Consultants On Rates

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council this morning authorized the city attorney to hire rate consultants to help with the Pioneer Natural Gas Company rate case pending before the council.

City Attorney John Ross Jr. said the cost of the experts would eventually be borne by Pioneer under a provision of the Public Utilities Regulatory Act.

Ross said the expert or experts would be called upon to give testimony for the city in the case to determine the rates charged to Pioneer's Lubbock industrial customers.

The council set a limit of $2,000 on the consultant cost.

Also this morning the council approved an Electric Utilities Board recommendation on the installation of street lights at Loop 289 frontage road intersections.

The cost of the lights would be paid by owners of property at the intersections.

In the same motion the council decided to continue negotiations with the state highway department on the installation of lights on some poorly lighted access roads to the loop.

The city cannot install additional lighting on the access roads because the right-of-way belongs to the highway department, which has indicated the loop lighting is sufficient.

The council approved on second reading the zone change request on property located at Loop 289 and South University Avenue, which clears the way for construction of a 100,000-square foot Target department store.

Council members debated whether to tie the site to a covenant to ensure the landscaping promised by developers actually is installed.

However, council members settled on tying the development to a site plan which requires certain landscaping and to a stipulation that the "landscaping be of sufficient size to break up the continuity of the building's wall."

Fire Zone 1 was eliminated by the council this morning, a move which should encourage more central business district development, city planning director Jim Bertram said.

The city's building code, which bases construction requirements on occupancy rather than location, will insure that downtown buildings have adequate fire protection, Bertram said.

Eliminating the fire zone will provide some "leeway to use some older build-

McCrory Denies Report Of Money Offer

HOUSTON (AP) — David McCrory, in a loud and angry voice, denied today he had ever told anyone he had been offered a sum of money to turn against his former boss, Cullen Davis, Fort Worth millionaire facing charges in an alleged kill-for-hire plot.

McCrory, appearing at a pretrial hearing in the Davis case in which he is the prosecution's chief witness, told chief defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, "No, sir, I didn't tell anyone such a thing and if you got someone to say that it is a lie."

McCrory also said Davis had once told him he wanted his brother, Bill Davis, killed.

"He told me to find someone to kidnap his brother and take him to another state where he did some scuba diving and make it look like he drowned," McCrory said.

Testifying under strict security provided by deputy U.S. marshals, McCrory said he had taken federal witness protection and was receiving $950 a month for rent and food until the Davis trial is over.

He declined to answer any questions that might lead to discovery of his new residence.

Marshals said McCrory wanted no courtroom sketches or pictures taken.

State District Judge Wallace Moore is conducting the pretrial hearing on a change of venue from Fort Worth.

Defense attorneys have spent three days going through about 90 motions and indicated that, through McCrory, they might obtain the release of more evidence prepared by prosecutors.

Judge Moore told The Associated Press that he is no fortune teller and had no idea how many witnesses would be called to the stand but, "In my opinion now, I don't think the case can start Monday."

Moore had set Oct. 16 as the tentative date for the beginning of the trial.

"There is really no way of knowing now," the judge said, "but it doesn't look like a trial starting Monday."

The defense Wednesday continued to crack the credibility of tape recordings allegedly linking Davis to a plot to kill Fort Worth Judge Joe Eidson. The judge had presided during the long and bitter divorce proceedings of Davis and his estranged wife Priscilla. Eidson recently removed himself as the trial judge.

Moore already has ruled that the tapes may be admitted into evidence when the trial begins.

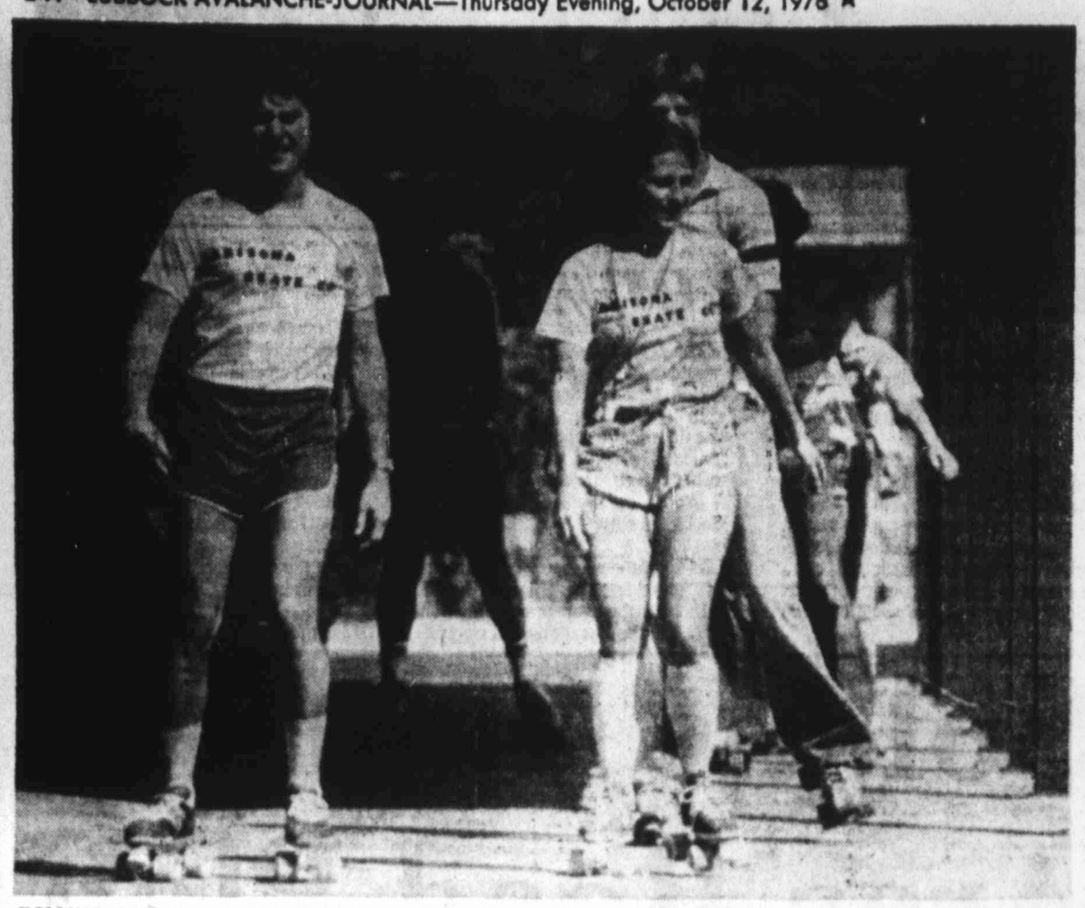

Chief defense attorney Haynes has insisted "there has been an ongoing effort to make some sort of case against Cullen Davis ever since he returned from Amarillo."

Davis, a 45-year-old industrialist, was acquitted in Amarillo late last year of capital murder in the slaying of his 12-year-old step-daughter.

Tolly Wilson said the defense was nothing more "than Haynes talk and was ridiculous."

Wilson later was called to the stand by Haynes and questioned about the investigation of John Thomas Florio, a convicted robber who once said he had information concerning Davis' request for a "hit" on several persons.

Wilson said his office had talked with Florio but dropped the case once the man flunked a lie-detector test.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 28-year-old man with a hiatal hernia that has been disturbing me for four years. Can this cause pain in the left side of the chest?

I have seen my doctor and she responded with a chest X-ray which was clear, and an EKG and a stress test which I passed. My blood pressure was 110/70. I would also like to learn more about hiatal hernia. Why is the operation so risky? Also, where can I get my hands on some good reading material about this condition?

DEAR READER — You are younger than most of the people who have a hiatal hernia. It is a very common problem in individuals past the age of 40.

In most instances, it is simply an enlargement of the normal hole in the diaphragm where the esophagus (food tube) passes down through the chest and goes through the diaphragm to join the stomach. This enlarged hole allows a small portion of the stomach to herniate or rupture through the diaphragm into the chest.

When this happens, the normal closure mechanism at the top of the stomach is disturbed. This will allow acid digestive juices and other stomach contents to literally spill back into the lower part of the esophagus. This may cause heartburn and other symptoms.

It may be associated with spasms of the esophagus. These muscular spasms may cause chest pains that even resemble heart attacks. Usually, there is no way to differentiate chest pains from esophageal spasm except by extensive testing and ruling out any major likelihood of underlying heart disease.

Your age, blood pressure and laboratory studies suggest that you do not have heart disease and, yes obviously, you could have chest pain from your hiatal hernia. That doesn't mean, however, that's the source of your chest pain as there are other causes for chest pain.

To satisfy your request, I am sending you The Health Leter number 4-8, Hiatal Hernia, Esophageal Reflux. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address you request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. This issue will provide you with information about diet, sleeping habits and other factors that are important in controlling symptoms caused by a hiatal hernia.l

Operating on the hole in the diaphragm to correct a hiatal hernia is major surgery. In addition, even when the hernia is repaired, it may not stop the leaky problem at the top of the stomach. A faulty closure mechanism may persist. That means burning in the pit of the stomach and esophageal spasm could continue.

For these reasons, surgery is usually not recommended unless there is a real opportunity to do something about the hiatal hernia.

Researchers Report Mumps On Decline

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mumps, once a common but painful childhood infection, is on the decline in the United States, according to researchers at the national Center for Disease Control.

The CDC said reported cases of mumps have declined sharply this year, reaching the lowest point since reporting of the disease began in 1922.

"Mumps cases have been dropping continuously since the introduction of a vaccine" in 1967, Dr. Stephen R. Preblud, a CDC immunization specialist, said.

"There have been dramatic decreases in reported mumps cases. There must be a large number of children with antibodies. And one would be inclined to think that there is some herd immunity."

There were 21,436 cases of mumps reported in the nation in 1977, a 44.3 percent decrease from the previous year and a 64.4 percent drop from the average annual total for 19721976.

The decline continued into 1978, with 13,471 cases reported so far this year, compared to 16,388 cases for the same period of 1977.

"Geographically, almost all areas of the country reported declining mumps activity," the CDC said.

The report of the sharp drop of mumps infections followed by a few days an announcement by Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano of a nationwide campaign to eliminate the domestic sources of measles by Oct. 1, 1982.

Preblud said there is some under-reporting of mumps, which is caused by a virus, and an estimated one-third of of all cases "may be inapparent or silent."

He called the sharp decline "very encouraging" and said he expects it to continue.

"But we need to continue to make sure young children are vaccinated."

Preblud said there is some complacency about the need for getting the vaccine, which he described as 95 percent effective in preventing the disease, safe and not accompanied by fever or local irritation.

The CDC said the 12 states with the highest average rates of mumps per 100,000 population under age 18 are Washington, Oregon, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Maine.

It said the seasonal pattern of mumps cases — a peak incidence in the winter and spring months — has remained unchanged. The highest incidence occurs in children in the 5-9 age group.

Economic Problems Hit Peru's Military Junta

By KERNAN TURNER

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Military men threw out a civilian government in October 1968 and launched a leftist revolution which they said would bring authentic democracy to Peru.

Now the military leadership — different from the one that seized power 10 years ago — says it is anxious to return to the barracks.

Hardly a week goes by without a strike or street demonstration by workers demanding higher wages.

The country is heavily in debt to foreign banks, inflation is expected to hit 70 percent this year, half the working force is unemployed or underemployed and prices are spiraling upward.

Gen. Francisco Morales Bermudez, chief of the present military junta, has promised a return to civilian government no later than 1980. He allowed elections last June for 100 representatives to a Constituent Assembly which is writing a new constitution to be followed by presidential elections.

Morales Bermudez said in a recent speech that the regime's departure is not a retreat, but a "culmination of a movement that ... had as its supreme goal the forging of an authentic democracy in Peru."

His regime has shied away from many of the socialist characteristics of the revolution begun on Oct. 3, 1968, when Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado toppled President Fernando Belaunde Terry.

Velasco, who was pushed aside by Morales Bermudez as president in 1975, described his regime as revolutionary, nationalistic, Christian, humanist and socialist.

It was committed to land distribution to the peasants, worker participation in the anti-U.S. rhetoric of the Velasco days, a new press law, state intervention in the economy and ownership of key sectors and a Third World foreign policy.

Opposed by the press and major political parties from the start, Velasco expropriated the major newspapers and television stations and sent critics into exile.

But his policies led to financial turmoil. Expropriations of U.S. mining, communications and petroleum companies scared away foreign and private investors.

The country's gross national product — the sum of its goods and services — was a minus 1.3 percent in 1977 and is expected to slump even more this year. Inflation will top 70 percent, experts say.

Heavy borrowing to support social and state-owned industrial programs has created an external debt of $8.27 billion. The repayment schedule, now being renegotiated, would absorb more than half the country's export earnings.

Morales Bermudez has replaced most of Velasco's chief advisers, returned the fishing industry to private hands, limited the power of workers within their companies and will return the newspapers to corporate ownership.

A series of negotiations with the International Monetary Fund has resulted in austerity measures intended to bolster the economy and gain confidence of foreign bankers.

But the measures have been hard on the everyday life of Peruvians.

The public displayed its anger at devaluation of the national currency, the sol, and government-decreed price rises with a bloody national strike in July, 1977.

New austerity measures last May resulted in street rioting and a state of emergency which suspended individual rights until shortly before the elections for the Constituent Assembly.

A series of strikes in the country's mines, banks, schools and public ministries have accompanied the assembly's beginning work on the constitution.

Prices this year have gone up 47.4 percent in the first six months. Real wages and salaries have dropped by 28.4 percent in Lima, where half the work force is underemployed.

The sol has dropped in value since the revolution from an exchange rate of 39.70 to $1 to nearly 180 to $1 today.

Prices have doubled in the past year for such items as bread, from one to 2.2 sols; milk, from 16.5 sols to 32 sols a quart; eggs, from 48 sols to 132 a dozen, and gasoline, from 50 sols to 125 sols a gallon. At the same time the minimum salary in Lima has risen by only 7 percent, from 5,600 soles to 6,900 soles ($32 to $39) a month.

The country's attention is focused on the Constituent Assembly, whose president is Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, 83-year-old founder and lifelong leader of the APRA Party, which he describes as "leftwing democratic."

It's an awkward moment in Peruvian history, since Haya de la Torre and the military have the same goal in mind: returning the country to democracy.

Haya de la Torre and the armed forces have been bitter enemies since 1930s when an APRA-led revolution was crushed by the military.

Haya de la Torre has been elected president several times only to be prevented by the military from taking office.

The Assembly is expected to complete the constitution next May or June. Morales Bermudez has promised to call elections as soon as the constitution is ready.

The government has insisted that the social changes initiated by the military be included in the constitution.

Haya de la Torre has declared the assembly is an "independent power, free and sovereign," but has conceded coordination with the government is "urgent and indispensible."

Filmways, AIP Reveal Plan For Merger

NEW YORK (AP) — Filmways Inc., a diversified publishing and entertainment company, has agreed to acquire American International Pictures Inc. (AIP) in a merger valued at at least $30 million.

The California-based companies agreed in principle to a merger in which AIP would be acquired through an exchange of Filmways stocks or debentures. Filmways executives said Monday that AIP would be operated as a corporate division and maintain its current top management.

AIP Inc. of Beverly Hills has emphasized low-budget horror movies or trend films such as beach party or motorcycle movies, but recently made an effort to move into more expensive "quality" films.

However, officials reported Monday that AIP lost $1.3 million in the second quarter ended Aug. 26. Its loss for the first six months of the year was $1.2 million. In the comparison 1977 periods, its earnings for the second quarter was $834,000, or 34 cents a share, and for the six months $1.3 million, or 34 cents a share.

Filmways of Los Angeles, which has interests in insurance, publishing, television, motion picture production and recording studios, had previously reported net earnings of $3.6 million or 86 cents a share in the first six months. That was up from the 1977 period profits of $2.4 million or 49 cents a share.

Under the merger agreement AIP stockholders would exchange their shares for either 20-year subordinated debentures in the principal amount of $12.50 at 11 percent or a combination of Filmways common and new preferred convertible stock.

Under the debenture option, the value of the exchange of 2.4 million AIP shares outstanding is $30.2 million.

Under the exchange involving shares of stock, AIP shareholders could trade each share for a package consisting of one-quarter share of Filmways common and three-quarter share of new preferred convertible Filmways.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Charity Begins At Form

THE BIBLE says charity "endureth all things." But that optimistic assessment was offered before the Treasury Department began promoting short form tax returns.

The ubiquitous 1040A for individual taxpayers allows a fixed standard deduction as a substitute for various itemized deductions available on the longer 1040.

Treasury and its tax-collecting cousin, the IRS, in recent years have waged a determined campaign on behalf of the 1040A.

In 1970, more than 52 percent of all taxpayers used the abbreviated form. But Treasury and the IRS weren't satisfied. They convinced Congress to sweeten the pot by increasing the size of the standard deduction five times in eight years.

LAST TAX YEAR, the news services report, 77 percent of all tax returns were submitted on the short form. But Treasury and the IRS still aren't satisfied.

Federal officials have a strategy designed to push that number higher—to 84 percent.

Now the benefits of 1040A are obvious. It greatly simplifies both the taxpayer's chore of preparing and the IRS' job of auditing. But that reform has produced an unhealthy side effect:

It has eliminated for many middle-income folks the tax incentive to make contributions to charitable organizations.

Martin Feldstein, a Harvard economics professor, told interviewers this week he estimates charitable giving would rise this year from $34.5 billion to $38.6 billion—an increase of $4.1 billion or 12 percent—if all taxpayers were allowed to claim deductions for their contributions.

Legislation authorizing itemization of charitable donations on the short form was introduced—and promptly rejected—in the House and Senate this year.

OPPONENTS ARGUE that the standard deduction already includes an allowance for charitable contributions. Moreover, they say, the additional line will complicate a tax form whose principal virtue is simplicity and set a precedent for the addition of other itemized deductions.

But the short form already allows itemization beyond the standard deduction, e.g., for political contributions, alimony payments and moving expenses.

For decades, much of the burden of alleviating the misery of those less fortunate has been borne by the United Way, Salvation Army and other privately endowed charities. If their financial base continues to be eroded, their responsibilities undoubtedly will shift to federal, state and local governmental agencies.

Already there exists a consensus critical of government for engaging in too much meddling in too many people's lives. Failure of Congress next year to pass remedial legislation can only exacerbate the situation.

ONE OF THE constitutional amendments you'll vote on come Nov. 7 would permit local governments to issue revenue bonds to attract industries.

Or, as the ballot actually will read, "to develop employment opportunities for its citizens."

Chambers of commerce here and elsewhere are supporting the proposition, especially since all five states that border Texas have this capability in competition with Texas cities.

City Finance Director Sterling Miller says the City could issue such bonds, if the amendment is approved, but its credit would not be affected.

In other words, the bonds would be retired from leasing out the facilities built with the money; the City's tax or other revenue sources would not be liable for the bonds in any way.

The Texas Municipal League has not been favorably disposed toward such bonds in the past, but has adopted a neutral position this year, I understand.

Since the facilities built from the revenue bonds would be subject to property taxes and since they'd help in attracting new payrolls to the state, it's difficult to oppose this amendment.

It won't be any shoo-in for adoption, however.

IF A POLICE chief or a fire chief is going to be held responsible for the functioning of his department, shouldn't he have the authority to pick his own top assistants?

The Lubbock City Council, and others across the state, think so. They'll ask the Legislature in January to amend the state Fire and Police Civil Service Law to that extent.

Some underling firefighters and policemen, especially those who are gung-ho for their "unions," will fight the proposal tooth and nail.

They'll argue that competitive civil service exams are the best, and only, way to fill the top jobs.

Lubbock faced this situation not long ago. C.G. Bartley became Police Chief J.T. Alley's top assistant because of his top test score.

A good officer, Bartley is widely considered to be the right man for the job of assistant chief. The experience, though, was enough to raise questions.

IF HIS TOP assistants do not serve at the pleasure of the chief, then the civil service bureaucracy can make the chief's position untenable. His orders can be carried out or they can be effectively shortstopped.

This can be done at lower levels of the bureaucracy, of course, but at least the "boss" of any department ought to have the right to surround himself with assistants who are loyal to him and will do their best to carry out his orders.

Then, if the department doesn't do a good job, the chief can rightfully be held accountable.

It'll have a greater probability, though, of functioning effectively and efficiently if the top assistants are not wrapped in a cocoon of job security so pervasive that they can all but tell the chief to go jump in the lake because there's little he can do unless they disobey a direct order.

Will Success Spoil Mr. Jimmy?

WASHINGTON—Nothing succeeds like success, but sometimes it brings out the worst in people.

No sooner had President Carter got his way at Camp David and brought Egypt and Israel to an agreement of sorts, than the tree of triumph began to put forth some poisoned berries.

I didn't take the trip with Carter into the Carolinas just after he won his big one by bringing Sadat and Begin together.

But reporters who went along told me Mr. Jimmy hardly got to the people because of the election-year politicians who came thronging to his suddenly-magic presence.

IN POLITICS, as in sports, you can be a hero one day and a bum the next. Too many misanthropes are awaiting the enjoyment of seeing the President fall on his face.

But he's a born-again victor, who knows that losing is only part of a cycle so long as you never quit. Success won't be good for the politicians who scrambled to Mr. Jimmy's coattails.

For one thing, it cheapens them as leaders suddenly to become hangers-on.

Never in recent times, even when LBJ was twisting arms and hand-feeding politicians for votes or barter, has the instruction of White House lobbying been so thriving an activity.

If this sort of fallout to politicians isn't corruptive, then neither is money passed under the table.

IT WON'T SPOIL Mr. Jimmy to have the gratitude of Israeli families who now can keep their sons at home instead of sending them out to capture more sand at the risk of their lives.

It means for the President that he can go to a pliant Congress which is less able than before to judge an arms deal on its merits. He can ask for weapons as he might ask for pieces of silver to drop in a beggarly hand abroad. It isn't as it should be.

His Camp David success also mean for the President that peaceniks may now argue that concessions are all the more acceptable in SALT II. What? If Arab and Jew will make compromises and sign a treaty, isn't it reasonable that the superpowers do the same?

Perhaps it is true, as all of us hope, that peace begets peace. Perhaps men can bury senseless quarrels over prejudices of race and religion. Maybe men can find ways to jaw-jaw and not war-war, in the Churchillian phaseology.

But the superpowers can't trade in ideology, as lesser tribes trade in acres and oil. No Congressman or diplomat would be trustworthy who didn't take into account the communist drive for total power.

It's going to require total and unselfish concentration to weigh each Defense Department decision on a weapons system, and to realize that there are no politics in the deal.

The danger that success might spoil Jimmy Carter lies in the opposition he may be able to buy off by winning in the Mideast. He may have melted the hardness in tough men. He may have softened legitimate criticism by a handshake at the ramp of a plane in somebody's home town.

We have a separation of powers in our American government. No President should become too successful.

Study Your Support To Pass IRS Test

(Fourth of 10 columns)

IF YOU ARE among the millions who are supporting an elderly parent in a rest home, you may get several tax breaks that can substantially reduce your tax bills.

(1) You can deduct part of the costs when a parent enters a rest home.

Say you support your mother who is about to go into a retirement home that requires payment in advance for her lifetime care.

A statement then provides you with a financial breakdown showing that a percentage of the fee is to cover future health care.

Can you deduct that amount now, even though the medical services won't be rendered until future years, if at all?

New ruling: the IRS says you can—if your prepayment is in exchange for your mother's lifetime medical care by the home.

The general rule is that a taxpayer can't get a current reduction for prepaid medical expenses.

FOR INSTANCE, you can't pay your physician this December for January's physical and deduct the fee on this year's return.

The required prepayment to an institution for lifetime medical care of a dependent is a major exception.

Allocation is a must: only the portion of the institution's fee that's allocable to medical care qualifies as a medical expense deduction.

New ruling: John Adams entered into an agreement with Sunny Hill Retirement Home, agreed to pay a founder's fee for lifetime services. The agreement also provided that if John decided to leave the home, a portion of the founder's fee would be refunded.

The home hadn't been in operation long enough to know how much of its fees were allocable, but it used long-term data from a comparable home to determine what percentage of the payments were for medical care.

Sunny Hill gave John a statement to that effect and the IRS agreed with the home's figures in allowing John a medical deduction for future lifetime medical care.

What this means to you is that if you provide more than half a parent's support and pay a lump-sum fee to provide that parent with future care in a rest home, at least part of the fee is a deductible medical expense in the year you pay.

But to be sure you get the full deduction, request an apportionment between medical and ordinary care services.

(2) YOU MIGHT GET a big head-of-household tax break for supporting a parent in a rest home, for both the IRS and the courts agree support of a parent in a home for the aged is similar to supporting your parent in a separate household.

For instance, if your taxable income is $20,000, filing as a single taxpayer results in a tax of $5,230. But filing as a head-of-household cuts your tax to $4,800.

(3) You can still get a dependency deduction for hospitalized parents who receive Medicare benefits.

The Tax Court recently gave back a dependency deduction many taxpayers thought was lost.

Medicare benefits are not taken into account when computing a dependent's total support, says the Tax Court.

The old rule was that they were, at least hospital benefits received under basic Medicare.

SAY YOU HELP support your mother with $4,000 a year, more than half her total support, and thus you have been claiming her as a dependent.

Now your mother is hospitalized and Medicare pays $10,000 in hospital bills for her—which plus her Social Security benefits—add up to more than what you provide.

Under the old rule, you lost your dependency deduction for your mother.

Under the new, you don't, for Medicare payments do not count toward "support," and you still meet all the support rules.

Keep track of the expenses that count in picking up a dependency deduction! Medicare benefits won't knock out the deduction but such items as Social Security might.

Make sure you contribute enough before year-end to meet the more-than-half support test.

X-Rated Marks The Smut Spot

WASHINGTON—Eight years ago last month, in a report that aroused bitter controversy at the time, President Nixon's Commission on Obscenity and Pornography examined a widespread assumption—that a causal relationship exists between pornography and anti-social behavior.

To that assumption the commission said, in effect, pooh-pooh.

"Empirical research designed to clarify the question has found no evidence to date that exposure to explicit sexual materials plays a significant role in the caustion of delinquent or criminal behavior among youth or adults."

The question is fundamental to the formation of responsible public policy in a free society.

IF EXPOSURE to pornography does no demonstrable social damage, as the commission insisted eight years ago, there is no rational reason for enacting or enforcing most laws on obscenity.

Constitutionally protected doctrines of free speech and free press, in this event, should guarantee the people a right to spend the rest of their lives watching "Deep Throat" or reading "Screw."

Though the commission's report was qualified with all the protective hedges so dear to the pedagog's heart, this was plainly the majority view.

Because it cannot be proved that pornography causes crime, the majority appeared to assume that pornography does not cause crime; and the majority happily cited statistics from Denmark to prove the point.

SUCH ALOOF AND disdainful urbanity sat poorly with a minority of the commission. The conclusion left many laymen dissatisfied as well.

Ordinary common sense, I remember suggesting at the time, should tell us that just as good books are known to have good social effects, so bad books may be assumed to have bad social effects.

Trouble was, such a relationship couldn't be proved. Possibly—just possibly—that situation is changing.

At the recent annual convention in Toronto of the American Psychological Association, several papers were presented that provided the kind of empirical evidence the commission couldn't find eight years ago.

IT NOW APPEARS that several scholars, working independently, have undertaken experiments that indicate there is indeed a significant relationship between pornography and aggression.

One paper was presented by Edward Donnerstein and John Hallam of Iowa State University. They set up a carefully controlled experiment involving 60 male undergraduate students.

By procedures fully described in their paper, but too complicated to be summarized briefly here, the subjects were first exposed to explicit films of sex and violence.

They then had an opportunity to vent their aggressions, if any, by administering mild electric shocks to ostensible victims.

The researchers concluded that aggression was significantly increased against females as a function of erotic exposure. The finding, they remarked, would have obvious implications.

Another psychologist, Robert Baron of Purdue University, had come up with similar data in research cited by Donnerstein and Hallam.

Baron also was at Toronto, where he presented a paper extending the inquiry into aggression by females against females.

Here, too, it appeared that after exposure to erotic stimuli, the 45 undergraduate women in the test responded with increased aggression against their sister subjects.

In a third paper, Neil M. Malamuth of the University of Manitoba summed up the increasing research in sex and aggression and suggested avenues for further study.

WITH FEW EXCEPTIONS it appears that scholars are finding significant relationships between sexual stimulation and aggressive manifestations.

A couple of weeks after the psychologists adjourned their convention, the FBI released its Crime Index for the first six months of 1978. The figures were gratifying save in one respect.

Of seven serious crimes reported by the FBI, all but two are declining.

At a time when anything goes in X-rated movies and adult book stores, we may wonder whether it is only a coincidence that the two crimes that are increasing are—aggravated assault and forcible rape.

Vance Dedicates School

SHINNSTON, W.Va. (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance returned to his native Harrison County to dedicate a new school and campaign for a senator, but the senator didn't show up.

Democratic Sen. Jennings Randolph was to accompany Vance to the dedication of the new Lincoln High School, but was forced to cancel because of a debate on highway legislation in Washington Wednesday.

Vance spoke of the need for teaching children leadership and said it is the community's responsibility to prepare the next generation to accept leadership duties on local and national levels.

Jarvis Attends Fund-Raiser

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — A five-piece band blared "California, Here I Come" and anti-tax supporters rang bells as Proposition 13 co-author Howard Jarvis arrived for a fund-raiser for United Taxpayers of New Jersey.

As he entered the Town and Country Restaurant, Jarvis said, "They need a whole new list of public officials in New Jersey." Supporters responded, "Go get 'em, Howard."

In an interview, Jarvis said New Jerseyans should demand the right of petition to cut state taxes. "The people of New Jersey are being denied half their citizens' rights," he said.

Bourne's Appearance Hit

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania House Minority Leader H. Jack Seltzer criticized officials for asking former White House drug adviser Dr. Peter Bourne to speak at a drug and alcohol abuse conference.

Seltzer said the Governor's Council on Drug and Alcohol Abuse was "setting a poor example" by inviting Bourne to speak at the conference, scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday in Hershey.

Bourne, a 39-year-old psychiatrist, resigned his $50,000-a-year post as President Carter's special health issues adviser in July amid allegations he falsified a prescription for an assistant.

Man Arrested After Threat

CHICAGO (AP) — A 26-year-old man angry because the Chicago Bears refused to let him try out for the football team faces charges of threatening the life of Bears running back Walter Payton.

Police said the Arlington Heights, Ill., man was arrested Sunday after they traced the license number of a car which circled Payton's home in the northwest suburb.

Police said the suspect later claimed responsibility for two threats on Payton's life. One threat, a call to a Chicago television station, included a demand for $100,000 to spare Payton's life, officers said. And the Chicago Park District later received a call from a man who said he would shoot Payton during the Bears' scheduled contest with the Minnesota Vikings, police said.

The suspect, who weighs 150 pounds, was quoted by police as saying he was angry because the team refused him a tryout.

Evel Knievel Hospitalized

ATLANTA (AP) — Daredevil Evel Knievel is in an Atlanta hospital for minor surgery to drain an abcess from his right heel, a hospital spokesman said.

"We don't expect complications," said spokesman Ron Wolff of Northside Hospital. He said Knievel was expected to be hospitalized for two or three days.

Knievel entered the hospital after the heel infection flared up during a visit to Atlanta, Wolff said.

Mrs. Carter's Winnings Exaggerated

NEW YORK (AP) — Lillian Carter says — with a big laugh — that Mayor Edward Koch "is the biggest liar I have ever seen."

President Carter's mother, in New York to campaign for a congressional candidate, was asked about a report by Koch that she won all the money in a 12-hour poker game on the flight back from the funeral of Pope John Paul I.

First, she said, it was only a six-hour flight, adding, "How could I play for 12 hours? He exaggerated about all the winnings. When I checked up, I found I had lost a quarter."

Happy, But De-Pressed

BRYAN (AP) — The Texas A&M Aggies have literally pressed Ron Vandiver into a corner.

So far this year, the sixth-ranked Aggies have defeated Kansas, Boston College, Memphis State, Texas Tech and Vandiver.

Vandiver owns the Coach's Shop and Fabric Care Center, and he's been discounting men's clothing and dry cleaning at a rate equal to the points by which the Aggies outscore opponents.

Thus, the Aggies' 38-9 victory over Texas Tech Saturday meant discounts of 29 percent for the week.

Vandiver has run the discount program the past three seasons, but this year's big-offense team proved too much. The program will end Saturday — before the Aggies clash with Houston in the Astrodome.

"We all have tired backs and our inventory is dangerously low," Vandiver said. "We quit. The Aggies are too strong."

Texas Dealers Promoting Ethics Code

A program promoting the adoption of a service code of ethics in franchised new-car dealerships will highlight the 1978 Texas Automobile Dealers Association workshop today at the Hilton Inn.

In an effort to establish a uniform service code throughout Texas, the association plans to explain in workshops around the state how dealers in Lubbock successfully instituted a similar program in conjunction with the association and the Better Business Bureau.

The Lubbock program will outline particular guidelines for mechanics to follow when servicing vehicles. It also stipulates that at least one person in each dealership serve as a customer relations representative to handle service complaints. Any complaints not resolved at the dealership level is forwarded to the association's Automotive Consumer Action Panel or the local Better Business Bureau.

The panel, founded in 1974, has a 74 percent customer satisfaction rate after handling more than 650 cases. Nationwide, the BBB has a comparable rate of mediation success.

Gene Fondren, association executive vice president, said, "The Lubbock dealers have a system that allows them to discover when a customer is unhappy and then solve his problem.

"We are urging others to adopt a similar program because it builds customer confidence rather than creating an adversary relationship like a city repair shop ordinance might do, and it costs less."

Other items on the program agenda are a discussion of the staggered registration system begun this year and changes in the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission Code.

Correspondent Has Visa Taken Away

MOSCOW (AP) — Erhard Hutter, the only Austrian correspondent in the Soviet Union, left for Vienna today after Soviet authorities withdrew his visa in a move that amounted to expulsion, an Austrian diplomat said.

The 41-year-old newsman, who reported for Austrian radio and television in Moscow for almost seven years, will join his Russian wife, who went to Vienna last week.

The Soviets told the Austrians that Hutter's visa was being withdrawn because he was involved in spreading anti-Soviet propaganda and in illegal business dealings.

But Hutter denied the allegations, contending the Soviet action was taken because of his reporting on and close contacts with dissidents, who have been the target of a Soviet police crackdown.

House Blaze Kills Five

BOSTON, N.Y. (AP) — A fire raced through a rural home in this upstate New York town early today, killing five children ages 7 to 14, state troopers said.

Authorities said the parents, Robert Clifford Sr. and his wife, Cynthia, were not home at the time of the blaze.

The victims were identified as Robert Clifford, 7, Casey Clifford, 8, Roxanne Clifford, 10, and their stepsisters Stephanie Hustead, 13, and Jacqueline Hustead, 14.

A passing motorist discovered the fire at about 1 a.m. and set off a nearby alarm, authorities said.

"There is no cause at the present time that we know of," said Trooper Joseph Kwiatek.

One of the children, whose body was found near the side entrance on the first floor, may have tried to escape, Kwiatek said. The other victims were found in the two upstairs bedrooms, he said.

The children were pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital. All died from smoke inhalation, troopers said.

The blaze caused extensive fire damage on the first floor and smoke damage throughout.

KHRUSHCHEV'S GRAVE — A few bunches of flowers lie on the grave of former Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in Novodevichy Cemetery in Moscow. The black and white tomb monument was designed by sculptor Ernst Neizvestny. Former Soviet Chief's Memory Tarnished

By NIKKI FINKE

MOSCOW (AP) — Some Russians still place small bunches of flowers on his grave, but time has not been kind to Nikita S. Khrushchev, deposed by colleagues in the Communist Party 14 years ago this weekend.

Visitors to the grave in a corner of Novodevichy Cemetery are quick to move on, almost embarrassed to be seen at the gravesite of the former premier and party chief whose memory has been tarnished and left bereft of all official tribute.

"The only thing I can say is that he left no one indifferent," Khrushchev's computer-engineer son Sergei said at his father's simple funeral in 1971. "There are people who love him, and people who hate him, but no one can pass him by without turning to look."

Khrushchev's widow, Nina Patrovna, now 78, lives on a small pension in a villa outside of Moscow. Their daughter Rada is still deputy editor-in-chief of the magazine Science and Life, the job she held when the other leaders of the party met secretly in Moscow on Oct. 14, 1964, to purge her father while he was vacationing on the Black Sea.

Khrushchev had been first secretary of the party since 1953 and premier since 1958. Leonid I. Brezhnev succeeded him as party chief and now has been in power three years longer than his predecessor lasted. The purged leader died in peaceful obscurity seven years ago at the age of 77.

Khrushchev's de-Stalinization program three years after the death of Josef Stalin in 1953 deserves remembrance from the historians, Soviet intellectuals say.

He dismantled Stalin's regime of terror that took an estimated 80 million lives through executions, concentration camps and famine resulting from botched agricultural planning. At a party congress in 1956 he denounced the old dictator and his despotism, and de-Stalinization spread to the rest of the Soviet Bloc.

"For that alone, the country should forgive him," one intellectual said.

But many Russians are slow to remember Khrushchev's achievements and quick to recall his failures.

"Khrushchev?" replied one woman when asked her feelings toward him. "That was the guy who wanted to plant corn everywhere, and then everything went to hell."

Most persons interviewed recalled him with a certain air of contempt, a man full of "hare-brained schemes" that never worked out.

Agriculture was his main domestic concern, and his campaigns to force farmers into unprofitable corn growing were bitterly resented. When he moved in, Brezhnev put the emphasis back on wheat and other traditional grain crops.

Some Russians recall the day Khrushchev disrupted the U N. General Assembly in New York in 1960 by pounding on the table with his shoe.

"It was the most embarrassing thing he could have done," said one Muscovite. "He was, in many ways, a crude man, and we Russians don't appreciate crudeness in our leaders."

Yet it was that very earthy quality that Soviet intellectuals point to when they say he was more sympathetic than the present leaders. He was certainly visible, appearing often in public and talking the ear off anyone who came close enough to listen.

Khrushchev also had a lasting effect on Soviet foreign policy. He marked out the current anti-China course that Brezhnev has carried out. And he initiated the policy of detente by touring the United States and meeting with President Eisenhower to seek peaceful coexistence, even though the idea didn't gather steam until the late 1960s.

Heroin Ring Leader Surrenders

CHICAGO (UPI) — The man drug agents say heads the nation's largest heroin smuggling ring — an enterprise whose estimated $100 million annual profits outrank 75 percent of the Fortune 500 corporations — has surrendered to authorities in Mexico.

Federal agents said Wednesday the arrest of Jaime Herrera-Nevarez, the godfather of the "Mexican Connection," could lead to more arrests in a year-old effort to break up the brown heroin smuggling operation.

"He is the patriarch of the largest known drug organization operating in the United States," said Vernon D. Meyer, regional director of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

"He is a very powerful man. You might say he's the corporation president."

Herrera, 51, who was arrested Tuesday, had been negotiating through his son, Jaime Jr., and a lawyer for terms of his surrender in Guadalajara, Meyer said.

The DEA has estimated the Herrera clan — comprised of 15 families and 1,000 employees, about half of them blood relatives — grosses $1 billion a year and profits in excess of $100 million annually. Such an operation would have placed 116th on the Fortune 500 corporation list in 1976.

The Herreras assumed the lead in smuggling brown heroin —street-named "Mexican Mud" — following the 1972 breakup of the "French Connection" that imported more potent Turkish poppies into the country. The DEA last spring predicted its efforts to break up the "Mexican Connection" would succeed within 18 months.

"We hope there will be more significant arrests," Meyer said.

For the past 20 years, the Herrera family has been known to agents as the major supplier in a pipeline from the poppy fields of Mexico's Durango State in the Sierra Madre mountains to Chicago. Herrera heroin accounts for 50 percent of the city's supply, selling for $1,000 an ounce wholesale and $5,000 an ounce on the street, officials estimate.

Heroin not sold in Chicago is smuggled, mostly on commmercial airlines, elsewhere in the United States, including distribution points in Los Angeles, New York and Boston, officials said.

Meyer estimated 90 percent of the heroin sold in the United States comes from Mexico, most of it hidden in cars crossing the Rio Grande into Texas. The smuggling increased dramatically with the shutdown of the French Connection.

He said the Herrera organization employes about 60 key leaders, many of them in Chicago who lead inconspicuous lives, driving run-down cars and living in impoverished Hispanic neighborhoods.

In June 1977, customs agents at Del Rio, Texas, seized $2.5 million worth of heroin hidden in the gas tank of a car driven from Mexico by Alfredo Alamo-Ramirez.

Replacing the heroin with dog food, agents followed Alamo-Ramirez to Chicago and arrested three important Herrera operatives. Their convictions and the arrests of two more family operatives one month later led Mexican authorities to indict Herrera, who fled the country.

Opportunities Jeopardized By Policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Levi Strauss would like to build a factory in Russia so the Soviets can make 3 million jeans a year. Ma Bell wants to take Big Brother up on a billion-dollar offer to modernize the Soviet phone system.

But those profitable undertakings, along with at least 26 others worth a potential $16 billion and 775,000 jobs, are jeopardized by the U.S. insistence on linking trade policy with Soviet human rights policies, says American industrialist C.W. Verity Jr., chairman of Armco Steel Corp.

As co-chairman of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, Verity told a Senate Banking Committee Wednesday trade should be expanded with the Soviet Union or lucrative contracts will go to other Western nations that don't care as much about trying to influence Soviet policy through trade limitations.

Verity bolstered his argument by recounting a conversation he had two weeks ago in Moscow with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev:

"During our conversation, he stated that the attempts of the United States to use trade as a lever for exercising political pressure on the U.S.S.R. introduces instability into the whole relationship between the two countries. He stated further that it raises questions of reliability of the United States as a trading partner."

Verity said later he was impressed with Brezhnev's "desire to improve relations with the United States, his clear desire for peace and his desire to increase trade with the U.S. But he made it clear we're becoming an unreliable trading partner."

Washington regulates exports if they have national security or political implications. A law passed in 1945 prevents U.S. Export-Import Bank credits for trade with Russia and requires presidential approval for selling certain products to Communist countries. As the Cold War eased, fewer and fewer products remained on that list.

But as the result of the conviction of Soviet human rights activist Anatoly Shcharansky, controversy arose within Congress and the administration over selling high technology energy products to Russia, although sale of drill bits finally was approved by the president.

The United States has stopped the sale of a computer system to the Soviet news agency, and a 1974 law ties export credits for the Soviet Union to its release of Jewish dissidents.

Annual Festival Marred By Rioting

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — At least five persons were reported killed after rioting and a fatal stabbing marred India's annual celebration of Dussehra, the Hindu festival depicting the triumph of good over evil.

One person was killed by police gunfire and another was fatally stabbed during Hindu-Moslem clashes that flared Wednesday night when a Dussehra procession of 10,000 Hindus passed a mosque in Adoni, about 900 miles south of New Delhi, United News of India reported.

"The processionists went berserk," and rock-throwing erupted after cattle in the street knocked over an effigy of a goddess being carried by the Hindus, UNI said.

Medical Team Attempts To Stop Disease

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — A medical team flew to a remote southern island today with an arsenal of antibiotics to try to contain a mysterious disease that killed 40 people in a small fishing village in 24 hours.

Authorities said the death toll could rise further in Pangil-Agan, a community of about 840 people 450 miles south of Manila, since a number of other residents have fallen ill.

The five-man team, headed by Health Ministry Director Edilberto Fernando, flew to Puerto Princesa on Palawan Island, where they were to travel by boat to Pangil-Agan, an hour's ride away across the Sulu Sea.

The medics brought with them a variety of antibiotics, remedies for dehydration and drugs used to treat malaria and diarrhea.

Military authorities on the island reported the disease to Manila. They could not specify the nature of the disease since there were no doctors there.

They cabled the Defense Ministry in Manila that 40 persons died Tuesday, the day the Pangil-Agan disease broke out.

The victims suffered from intense fever before they died, the telegram said.

"It's a mysterious disease," Fernando said. "We can't tell what this is all about, but we're anticipating it might be a viral disease."

A cholera outbreak was reported in the area last month. It killed 15 persons until it was checked by a medical team airlifted to inoculate residents.

Fernando said an unknown disease also was reported at Pangil-Agan two years ago. An investigation showed the affliction was a combination of malaria and gastroenteritis.

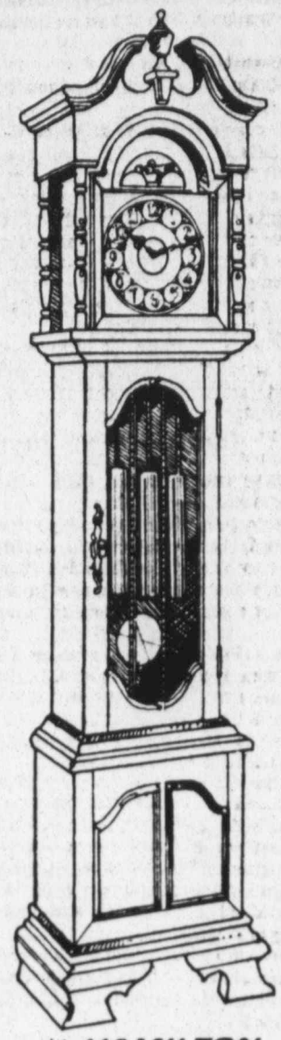

Viral diseases are prevalent in the Philippines during the monsoon season. These are particularly noted in rural areas, where lack of sanitation has contributed to their spread.

Fernando said his crew would look into the environmental sanitation situation on Pangil-Agan in their attempt to determine the source of the outbreak.

'Prof. Harold Hill' Alive In Wilson's Hometown

By RICHARD H. GROWALD

MASON CITY, IOWA (UPI) — Seventy-six trombones do not lead the big parade.

Eighteen trumpets do.

"If I had 76 trombones, I'd throw the rest of the band away," said Robert Dean, director of bands at Mason City High School. "Having only 10 trombones doesn't trouble me. Keeping them does."

This is River City. A dozen firms — selling land, concrete, glass and other elements of middle America — are named River City in this town of 40,000 and it was natural that hometown boy Meredith Willson set his musical "The Music Man" in a place called River City.

The main character of "The Music Man" was a seller of musical instruments named Harold Hill, a naughty fellow. He wooed Marian the Librarian and convinced townfolks that civic vice could be conquered only if youth was handed 76 expensive trombones and other of his music makers.

Hill spoke of there being trouble in River City. In the musical, virtue triumphed. In life, too. Mason City cleaned up its act recently and the Jaycees now occupy what once was something of a porno palace.

But, as Professor Hill was fond of singing, there is trouble in River City. The trouble, according to Music Man Robert Dean, is that keeping the band may become hard.

It is difficult to see the trouble.

At one end of Mason City's high school rises what in another town might be a basketball gym. Here it is a band room flanked by practice studios and equipped with glass walls and enough electronics to sate a rock group. It is a symbol.

As Massillon, Ohio, might be something of a high school football citadel — much as Cincinnati's Moller High School or the elevens of Texas' Goose Creek High might dispute that — Mason City High is the band champ.

The 100-member Symphonic Band of Mason City High conquers as did Genghis Khan. It wins the area, state and regional championships.

For four decades, under Gerald Prescott, now a Florida real estate man, under Carleton Stewart, now operator of River City's largest music company, under Paul Behm, now a retired teacher and active piano tuner, the school band won every ribbon.

Dean came in 1971. Mason City had chosen carefully, as other cities might scout a football coach.

In his past, Dean had turned the Wells, Nev., high school band from a vest pocket pickup squad into America's national champion school band. In 25 years at Spencer, Iowa, he won for that high school its class state championship 25 consecutive times.

In his office, with a wall-sized glass window facing the band room, Dean sat amid plaques and trophies and proclamations won in state and national contests since 1971. "This band has the longest national record of achievement of any high school band in the United States," he said.

But he frowned.

For the same economic pinch that has produced Proposition 13 in California and teachers' strikes across America has sounded oom-pah-blah in the band affairs of other school.

"Rockford, Ill., has abolished its school band," Dean said, in the basso profundo tones of an Irish-American priest beholding the end of football at Notre Dame.

"It's happening. Art, Health and Music are suffering in schools," he said.

Dean reached across his desk blotter, over the score of "Die Fledermaus" which his band will play this winter, and touched a silver clarinet mouthpiece, dented by years but polished by love.

At age 12 in his hometown of Kearney, Neb., Dean had taken up the clarinet and gone with the school band in 1928 to a contest in Holdrege, Neb. John Phillip Sousa, the El Capitan of American bandmasters, was the judge.

And Sousa judged the Kearney band the worst of the lot. "But then he came and sat down at lunch with us and joked with us and gave each of us a quarter" — and Dean keeps the coin as a treasure, such as former President Gerald R. Ford kept his Boy Scout Eagle badge in the top drawer of his White House bedroom dresser — "and I was hooked."

Dean gestured with a hand. "The science and math departments are having trouble getting the books they need. But over there a million dollars is being spent on a new stadium."

Through the glass wall he could see the girls and boys of his bands — he has a second band much as a coach might have a B-team football squad — unpacking popcorn kernels they are selling to pay for trips to their concerts. No athletes were building the new stadium.

"Music is as good for youngsters as athletics," he said. "We don't try to turn out professional musicians. We just expose them to good music."

Good music in Mason City includes the school fight song, "Mason City Go." But, more to Dean's liking, it includes Tschaikovsky, Hadyn, Strauss, Beethoven and Sousa. But not rock 'n' roll.

He quotes Benny Goodman, another clarinetist, on the unlasting value of rock. "The band does not play the Mickey Mouse music, those God-awful rock things. We have no 'Saturday Night Fever' in march tempo."

The director clasps his hands and talks of schools where there is no money for Wagner and the students are left to the Grateful Dead.

But he smiles now. The students are coming into his office, asking about sheet music and Brahms and lip exercises.

And it reminds Dean of the time his baton caught on his conductor's stand on the first note of one concert, of a husky cymbal player using so much zest that the leather handle snapped and a cymbal shot to the ceiling and came down "in a band that parted like the Red Sea," of the band member who was always out of step and marching the wrong way and now is in the Navy and "could be the ruin of the Navy band," and the time his bass drum — electronically fixed to sound the cannon shots in Tschaikovsky's 1812 Overture — boomed so loudly that then Secretary of the Navy John Mittendorf, entering the hall, ducked as if under shellfire.

Dean watched his students pluck up french horns, tubas, saxophones, trumpets and drums and smiled. "If Harold Hill came back to River City now, he'd have no market for selling musical instruments."

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

By INK DIPPER

A national effort to utilize CB as an educational avenue is getting under way. If some help comes through from Washington it will become a reality.

Clive C. Veri, dean of the College of Continuing Education at Northern Illinois University, at DeKalb, has advanced a proposal to both Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the National Endowment of Humanities that would create a nationwide "CB network" to function as a historical sightseeing guide throughout the century.

"There's no place in our country where something historical hasn't happened," says Veri, "but we drive through the area and never recognize its historical value. There are campers and truckers and vacationers who drive thousands of miles through the United States, all those miles loaded with history, and they never know about it except for the markers along the highway."

CBers we've spoken to think the idea is fantastic.

"I just finished a three-week trip with my family from Nashville to the West Coast and back," says insurance executive John Hardebeck. "We drove because we wanted the children to see the country. We had a CB because we thought it would be company on the long stretches between stops. Except for the calls on Channel 9 and the conversation on Channel 19, there was little to listen to. This plan would have been a worthwhile and production bonus to the entire trip."

Channing Hadlock of Towanda, Pa., who frequently travels northeastern Pennsylvania along the New York border, reacts: "I've never taken anyone along the highway and shown them Alozium — the spot where Marie Antoinette was going to establish a French village for the loyalists of the French Revolution — that they didn't say they'd never heard of such a thing. Yet the land was purchased and members of the government came here and surveyed the land and actually prepared plans for its development. Travelers don't stop and see it because they don't know about it."

Veri believes the Department of the Interior, which is responsible for the historic markers you see on the highways, has done a great job. But he feels that more people are tuned to listening than they are to reading, and that CB could make these historical points come alive.

His plan is somewhat complex, but it is certainly worth genuine consideration. The ramifications of it can blow a poor old CBer's mind.

Next week: details of the plan.

Two Doctors Link Analgesics To Kidney Disease

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Philadelphia doctors say overuse of common nonprescription pain-relieving drugs appears to be an important cause of chronic kidney disease in the United States.

It had been known for years that massive overdoses of some analgesics could harm the kidneys but up to a few years ago the problem was considered rare in the United States.

But Drs. Martin Goldberg and Thomas G. Murray of the University of Pennsylvania Hospital reported in 1975 that a study of kidney patients there suggested that 5 percent of all chronic kidney disease in the Philadelphia area might be caused by the pain relievers.

They followed the study with an informal survey of specialists at 38 kidney disease centers across the nation. The results indicated that the analgesic link to kidney disease in other areas was similar to the Philadelphia findings.

Goldberg and Murray reported their concern in an editorial in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

They said there is no reason to suspect that the problem has worsened in recent years. Instead, Goldberg and Murray said it appears this apparent link just was not recognized in the past.

"We have not been sufficiently conditioned to make the association between drug ingestion and renal disease," they said.

A proper diagnosis is important, the doctors said, because it appears that the damage can be stopped or even reversed if the patient stops taking the offending drug.

"Since it is one of the few causes of chronic renal failure that can be innocuously arrested or reversed, we should always suspect it and search for it diligently," they said.

"Patients who continue to use analgesics almost invariably suffer progression of the renal insufficiency."

They said the diagnostic difficulties are compounded by the fact that patients often deny or grossly underestimate their use of analgesics.

Goldberg and Murray said there is still some question as to which of the pain relieving drugs are responsible for kidney damage.

They said most patients with analgesic-associated kidney disease have taken mixtures of aspirin and phenacetin or phenacetin-like drugs such as acetaminophen. Animal tests, they said, support the idea that mixtures of aspirin and phenacetin are more likely to be toxic to the kidneys than either drug alone.

The dosage required to damage the kidneys also is unknown, but Goldberg and Murray said most patients they studied had consumed large quantities of phenacetin along with aspirin and other drugs. By large quantities, they meant on the order of 40 tablets daily, and from a total of 4,000 to 12,000 tablets over a long period.

Eighty-five percent of the patients studied were women over the age of 35 who had been taking the analgesics for recurrent headaches or backaches.

Carter Approves Susan B. Anthony Coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed a bill on Tuesday authorizing the minting of a new $1 coin bearing the image of suffragist Susan B. Anthony, the first time an American woman has appeared on a coin.

"The Anthony dollar will symbolize for all American women the achievement of their unalienable right to vote," Carter said in a statement, referring to Anthony's turn-of-the-century drive that eventually gave women the right to vote.

"It will be a constant reminder of the continuing struggle for the equality of all Americans," he added.

The coin, which will replace the larger Eisenhower dollar now in circulation, will feature the Apollo II moon landing on the opposite side.

Some 500 million Anthony dollars are expected to be produced before the coins are issued by the Treasury in 1979. The department estimates it will save $17 million annually by having the coin replace some paper dollars.

Carter said he was confident the bill will "substantially improve our coinage system as well as cut government production costs."

New Spy Book Features Real-Life Characters

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It is the stuff of James Bond novels — secret agents bugging each other's boudoirs, plotting with foreign governments, scheming better ways to kill.

But wait a minute. The new crop of undercover spies who leap at us from pages of a new book sound strangely familiar.

Robert Maheu. E. Howard Hunt. James McCord. Johnny Roselli. Sam Giancana. Robert Vesco.

Author Jim Hougan says these men and many more are private spies — or "spooks" — whose undercover escapades sometimes change the course of history.

Hougan's non-fiction spy expose, "Spooks: The Haunting of America — The Private Use of Secret Agents," talks of a netherworld of real-life intrigue more frightening than fiction.

Its message is that James Bond lives among us. But he is no hero. He works for the bad guys more often than the good. His tools are bugs, scramblers, wiretaps, codes, silent guns, exploding cigarette packs and bugged TV sets that watch you.

The private spooks, says Hougan, are former government spies, agents of the FBI, CIA or National Security Agency who use their clandestine tricks to make a fortune in private practice.

"Occasionally," writes Hougan, "their work benefits the public, although only incidentally. More often, the public is their target. And even when no laws are broken, justice is often undone."

Hougan lists dozens of "Mission: Impossible" schemes involving secret agents, episodes which he labels, "America's Secret History." Among them:

— A bungled effort by the CIA and underworld spooks to assassinate Fidel Castro.

— The use of spooks by McDonald's hamburger chain to guard against the takeover of franchises by organized crime.

— The pervasive role of spooks in Watergate.

Hougan, a Washington-based editor for Harpers magazine, says he stumbled on the proliferation of secret agents in America during an assignment to write about a company called Intertel.

"John Dean had mentioned Intertel at the Watergate hearings," Hougan recalls. "I asked what it was and one of the senators said, 'It's a typewriter identification company.'

"Later, I found out it was a very sophisticated private intelligence agency. It wasn't a bunch of gumshoes. ... These guys were free-lance spies!"

Hougan, a lifelong fan of spy novels was fascinated. "It seemed it would be interesting to find out about these spies," he says. "I promised to finish the book in a year. It took four years. ... The book has 600 to 700 names in it."

While researching, Hougan met spooks who were not delighted with his project. "I took the threat to bomb my house as personal," Hougan says with a nervous laugh.

"In a project like this, you deal with some people who are crazy," he concedes. "The guy in a trailer who says he's monitoring the Secret Service and believes Cyrus Vance is out to kill him. The guy who says he was involved in the Kennedy assassination.

"But nobody attempted to shoot at me or bomb my car," Hougan says.

In four years, Hougan met lots of spooks, some cold and calculating, others utterly charming. All had a common trait — a passion for danger and intrigue. "Psychiatry could add a new illness to its repertoire," says Hougan. "You might call it 'intrigueophilia.'

"It's an illness you see in all of these guys. ... You become spellbound — I'm talking about the spooks themselves. They do things that could not profit them in any way and might destroy them. They do it just for the intrigue.

"Fully half the names in my index suffer from that illness — the fascination with mysteries."

In his book, Hougan names spooks he says kill with impugnity, those who specialize in assassination weapons and many who use bribery, blackmail and electronic surveillance as routine business procedure.

Their employers, Hougan says, include the richest of the rich, whose names are cornerstones of big business.

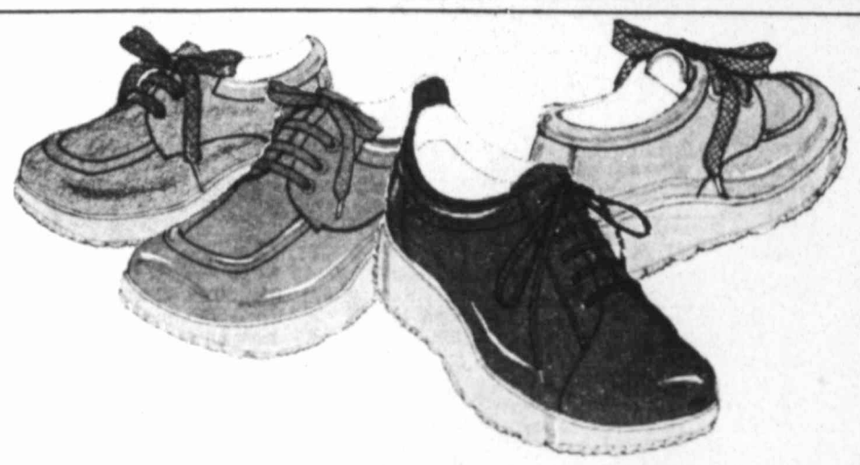

"America," he concludes, "has become a haunted place. ... "

MANY RETARDED ADULTS

About 3,400,000 of America's 11,200,000 handicapped adults are also mentally retarded. In addition, 1,500,000 are paralytics, 1,500,000 have heart problems, 1,500,000 are epileptics, and 1,000,000 are arthritics. Census Bureau figures further show 900,000 of these people to be deaf, 700,000 are blind, 500,000 have cerebral palsy, and 250,000 are amputees.

INLAND SEAPORT — An aerial view of Manaus, Brazil's thriving seaport on the Amazon 1,000 miles from the sea, shows the city's skyscrapers and domed opera house in the center and floating docks and ocean-going freighters on its river front. (Photos by Braniff International)

TOUCH OF CLASS — Manaus' magnificent neo-classic opera house fronting the Plaza of the Four Continents, recalls the rubber plantation boom days when this city in the heart of Brazil's Amazon region was one of the most affluent and progressive in the world. Manaus is presently going through another boom period as a business and resort center.

Manaus Becomes Travel Spot

RIVER ADVENTURE — Guides can take tourists by canoe or motor launch to primitive Indian villages and floating stores near Manaus, Brazil. The jungle, rich in flowers, butterflies and birds, can be explored for hours or days.

MANAUS, BRAZIL — Deep in the heart of the Amazon jungle basin, one of the most unique and unusual cities in the world is rapidly undergoing its third transformation in three centuries and becoming one of South America's major industrial and commercial centers and an important new travel destination.

The city is Manaus, Brazil, a seaport 1,000 miles from the sea which, on Sept. 1 received its first air service by a United States flag carrier, Braniff International.

Manaus is on the left bank of the Rio Negro, some eleven miles from where the black waters of this river meet the coppery-hued Amazon and surge side by side for many miles until they finally merge and empty into the Atlantic.

It was here near the confluence of these rivers that the Portuguese in 1699 built a fort to protect their newly founded empire from encroachment by other Europeans, and where local indians, missionaries, merchants and Negro slaves found subsistence in farming and in the medicinal products they extracted from the rich forests.

The city and surrounding area took on new importance at the beginning of the 19th century with the discovery and export of rubber, which was obtained from the soap of the local Heves Brasilensis tree.

But it wasn't until later in the century with the invention of vulcanization by Charles Goodyear and the rubber tire by John Boyd Dunlop that the demand for the Brazilian product became worldwide, and not only gave new impetus to the elastic substance but created enormous wealth for the country and immense local fortune for the rubber barons in Manaus.

The rubber boom brought the Amazon a wave of prosperity and with it new migrations of people from all over the world and all walks of life, including prominent physicians, lawyers, artistic, engineers and industrialists, and transformed Manaus into one of the most opulent and progressive cities in the world.

Eloquent vestiges of Manaus' "Golden Era" are seen today in the magnificent Teatro Amazonas opera house with its pink and white neo-classic exterior and art nouveau interior which was built in 1896, and which saw the likes of Jenny Lind, Sarah Bernhardt and Carvso but never staged an opera.

The impressive looking Customs House and the Lighthouse were both part of the English scenery before being brought over stone by stone, and several other historical monuments were also imported from abroad to make this one of the most sophisticated cities in the world complete with imposing buildings, electricity, telephone and modern dock facilities.

Unfortunately, the rubber boom days didn't last long following the end of World War I. And competition from new rubber plantations in Southeast Asia plus the use of synthetic rubber soon plunged Manaus into hibernation and decay.

But a new day is dawning for Manaus, with promises of even greater prosperity. The city's latest transformation actually began about 10 years ago with the establishment of SUFRAMA, a government agency which is responsible for planning, promoting, coordinating and executing all development in the area.

Its overall aim is to form a commercial nucleus that includes bonded warehouses and processing industries around which trade with the rest of Brazil and the world can develop.

Although Manaus is not situated at a busy crossroads of international trade, it is at the center of the vast region of Amazonia, an area of 2.2 million square kilometers, or roughly about a quarter of the entire territory of Brazil. As such it has become an important focal point for other parts of this vast area which can obtain from Manaus goods free of both local taxes and import duties for their own use.

The idea has worked well, and the traditional but fragile economic base of the region has been immeasurably strengthened. New investments from the rest of Brazil and from abroad have brought a better standard of living, improved communications and transport, and a mild tourist boom. Old ways are being replaced with a new dynamism which has made Manaus the center of Brazil's electronics industry.

The creation of the Free Trade Zone also generated rapid commercial development and created a building boom. There is new migration from other areas of Brazil, new trading concerns are opening new businesses in ever increasing numbers, and thousands of new firms have been established.

It also helped to start hundreds of cattle farms, several hydro-electric plants, and a mad rush to exploit the region's countless resources. One of the country's most ambitious projects is the construction of the Transamazonic and Northern Perimeter Highways, which also includes a colonization pan that will bring 100,000 families to towns and urban settlements alongside these major roads.

Among the main industries found in the Free Zone are construction, shipbuilding, metallurgy, jewelry, toys, electronics, foodstuffs, fishing equipment, optics, refrigeration, steel, textiles, food processing, tanning and timber.

Three basic sectors where growth is expected to be spectacular in the years to come are those which supply local and national markets, and promote tourism.

The Free Trade Zone is changing Manaus from a city which had been famous for its past to one that will soon be know for its prosperous future.

Visitors can buy duty free imported goods such as radios, tape recorders, cameras and other items at tremendous bargains, which often are about two-thirds cheaper than in other Brazilian cities.

The tourist will be fascinated to learn that Manaus was the first city in South American to have trolley cars, and surprised to see a dozen or more skyscrapers in the middle of the jungle, not to mention some fine hotels and some excellent restaurants and nightclubs.

The tropical Hotel Manaus, a monument to Brazilian ingenuity and hospitality, is a big, sprawling oasis on the banks of the Rio Negro just ten minutes from the airport and twenty minutes from the center of the city. It offers travelers 362 double rooms and 16 suites, its own beach, shopping center and zoo, and even its own fleet of boats for river and jungle excursions.

Manaus also has four television stations, and an airport that local people will be proud to tell you can accommodate the most modern airliners, including supersonic transports.

But what is equally amazing are some of the spectacular sights to be seen here, like the floating docks which rise and fall with the tide of the river — a level of some 40 feet. Or the aquatic flower Victoria Regia, which is more than six feet wide and was named for the British monarch by an English naturalist who discovered it.

One of the highlights of any trip to Manaus is the riverboat cruise on the Rio Negro and its tributaries through the dense jungle. Bright colored birds and sprightly monkeys are everywhere to be seen, along with tropical fish that teem in these waters.

Another is the local zoo with its rare and impressive collection of the biggest and most deadly snakes to be found anywhere, and other strange denizens of the Amazon region including ocelots, jaguars, crocodiles, electric eels, 35-foot-long anacondas, and the strange prehistoric manatee.

Another is a swim in the Rio Negro, whose waters are insect free. Or a canoe trip through the maze of waterways in the Igapo, the flooded swamps that stretch for hundreds of miles.

There is also bountiful fishing in the waters of the Rio Negro and the Amazon as well as in the lakes and streams in the area for such exotic fish as tucunare, piraiba, pirarara, rays, surbim and the fighting dorado. Or hunting for wild duck, deer, paca, cotia and crocodiles.

And for a really relaxing evening, nothing can match a side trip to Lake January nearby where you can enjoy dinner and dancing in a floating restaurant.

Other tourist sights are the Municipal Market, designed by the French architect Eiffel, where you can buy some of the most exotic fruits in the world; the Indian Museum with a rare collection of tribal artifacts which is run by nuns from the Salesian order; and the Numismatic Museum which is said to have the fourth largest collection of coins in the world. Right across the street from the museum is an intriguing little souvenir shop which will sell you Macumba items that are guaranteed to drive evil spirits away.

It staggers the imagination when you realize that Manaus was, until some 30 years ago, only accessible by riverboat, and from then until recently only by plane or boat. No trains existed then or now, and only in the past few years have roads been built to unite some of the cities in the vast Amazon region with the rest of the country.

Today it is the aerial gateway to Northern Brazil and the major cities, of Recife, Fortaleza, Belem, Natal, Brasilia, and Sao Luis and San Tarem and is linked directly with Rio de Janeiro, Sao Paulo and other key cities in the country.

The Amazon is the largest river network in the world. Into it flow more than 1,100 rivers and millions of streams. The Amazon basin is the habitat for some 250 different animal species, 1,500 kinds of fish, and 1,800 kinds of birds.

It is also one of the most fascinating regions and the world's biggest tropical jungle, responsible for the renewal of half of the earth's oxygen, and its rivers hold one-fifth of the earth's fresh water reserves.

The Amazon is truly one of earth's last frontiers and Manaus is the gateway.

Manaus is the 13th city served by Braniff in South America as a result of President Carter's approval of a new route award by the Civil Aeronautics Board, and receive direct flights from New York, Miami, Panama and Bogota with connections available from all other areas at these gateway points.

This includes from Dallas-Forth Worth, Kansas City, Minneapolis-St. Paul and Mexico City where Braniff began its first through-plane flights to South America on August 16. Braniff's initial schedules to Manaus provide two roundtrip flights each week.

Manaus is a shopper's dream and a photographer's delight. The booming city is also in the heart of some of the most interesting hunting and fishing action to be round anywhere. There are jungle cats and the largest fresh-water fish (500-pound piracuru) in the world.

A passport, valid international smallpox certificates and a round-trip ticket are required for entry to Manaus. For more information pertaining to Manaus and South America, contact your local travel agent.

OLD AND NEW — New settlers quickly blend with hunters, Indians, traders and trapers in Manaus where modern buildings punctuate the interesting city initially built by rubber barons.

SWISS LAY IT AWAY

With an average of $8,000 in savings accounts for each person, the Swiss are the world's best savers, says the International Savings Bank Institute, Geneva. Second thriftiest are the Japanese, and the Belgians are third. Americans drag their feet on the way to the savings bank. Their average of $3,781 saved yearly is fourth.

STREET OF BARGAINS — In Brazil's only duty-free zone, Manaus has small shops and large stores packed with bargains from all over the world. Bargain hunters should especially take note of cameras and tape recorders.

Americans, Swiss Given Nobel Medical Prizes

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The 1978 Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded today to two Americans and a Swiss for research that developed a revolutionary new tool for studying the way in which genes determine heredity.

The winners are microbiologists Daniel Nathans and Hamilton O. Smith, both of Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, and Werner Arber of the University of Basel, Switzerland. They will share a prize of $165,000.

It was the fifth year in a row that Americans have won the medicine prize.

The Nobel Committee of the Karolinska Institute of Medicine cited the three for the discovery of restriction enzymes and their application to problems of molecular genetics.

Restriction enzymes, discovered by the 49-year-old Arber, provide "chemical knives" to cut genes into defined fragments.

Smith, 47, a native of New York, verified Arber's hypothesis and the 49-year-old Nathans, born in Wilmington, Del., pioneered the application of restriction enzymes to genetics.

"Holy cow! Are you kidding?" Smith exclaimed when reached at his Baltimore home and informed of the prize.

He said it was totally unexpected. "I had so little idea that it was in that.... I just didn't imagine it would be considered in that light. I'm flabbergasted."

Nathans, also reached at his home in Baltimore, said when told of the award, "I'm really delighted, especially to share the award with Hamilton Smith and Werner Arber, that's all I can say."

Arber could not be reached for comment and, in fact, may be one of the last to hear of the prize. A colleague said Arber took his family on a vacation in the Swiss Alps and "he left no address, and we just cannot find him."

Today's announcement puts the United States well on its way to dominating the prestigious awards for the third straight year. Last Thursday the Swedish Academy of Letters awarded the literature prize to Yiddish author Isaac Bashevis Singer, a New York resident.

Last year the United States had five out of 10 laureates. The medicine prize then was shared by three U.S. pioneers in the study of hormones, Drs. Rosalyn Yalow, Roger Guillemin and Andrew Schally. In 1976 Americans made an unprecedented sweep of all Nobel awards.

The institute said the discoveries by Arber, Smith and Nathans have far-reaching consequences for genetics, the science that seeks to describe and explain how genes, the basic units of heredity, are organized in cells and determine the characteristics of living organisms.

The discovery of restriction enzymes provided new methods for detailed chemical analysis of the mechanism of gene action, the institute said.

"Even though these enzymes have only been available for a few years, their application to genetics has already led to new and far-reaching results, in particular concerning the organization and expression of genes (DNA) of higher animals. All work in this area, carried out by many research groups around the world, is based on the discoveries made by these three laureates," the institute added.

DNA is the acronym for the giant nucleic acid molecules in chromosomes that contain the so-called genetic information code governing heredity in man and animals. Chromosomes are microscopic rod-shaped bodies in the nucleus of cells.

These enzyme "knives" are used to dissect DNA into smaller defined fragments. These may be used to determine the order of genes or chromosomes, to analyze the chemical structure of genes, or to create new combinations of genes.

The latter is the so-called "genetical engineering" process that in recent years has raised ethical questions about the possibility that scientists could arbitrarily fashion human beings according to their own designs.

"Increased knowledge in this area should help in the prevention and treatment of malformations, hereditary diseases and cancer," the institute said.

"We can now begin to answer questions of central biological importance in developmental biology — how do genes direct the evolution of a fertilized egg to a complete individual with many different organs? What determines that the cells within one organ normally retain their specialized functions?"

Smith studied at the University of Illinois and Berkeley and received a medical degree from Johns Hopkins. He was a medical officer in the Navy and worked at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit and with the U.S. Public Health Service in Michigan in the late 1950s and early 1960s. In 1964, he became a genetic researcher at the University of Michigan, and three years later returned to Johns Hopkins.

Nathans received his undergraduate degree at the University of Delaware and his M.D. from Washington University. In the 1950s he worked at Presbyterian Hospital in New York and at the National Cancer Institute and was a visiting researcher at Rockefeller University. He went to Johns Hopkins in 1962, becoming director of the medical school's Department of Microbiology in 1972.

Arber in the past has been a visiting researcher at medical institutions of the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

The Nobel Prize in economics will be awarded next Monday, and the physics and chemistry prizes next Tuesday. The 1978 Nobel Peace Prize, if any, will be announced later this month, but the date has not been given.

Larry Clark of 6016 Norfolk Ave. complained that $1,775 worth of goods was missing from his home. He listed as missing two diamond rings, two .12-gauge shotguns and a camera. Officers were unable to find any sign of forced entry to the home, and Clark said the items were taken sometime last week.

George T. Hobbs said whoever broke the glass in the front door of his painting business at 916 N. Ave. U made off with office furnishings, a stereo, electric typewriter, calculator, automatic telephone answering machine and two adding machines. He said all offices at the firm had been searched.

Pat W. Chawley said that someone pried the lock from the rear door of a vacant apartment at 1811-B 6th St. and took a dining room set and double bed frame, mattress and box springs. She set the loss at $300 and said it would cost $50 to repair the broken lock.

Ysidro Perez of 423 Ave. D said burglars who forced a screen door and entered his home through the unlocked inner door Wednesday morning took a .38-caliber revolver, valued at $138, a $105 television set, a $49 digital watch and a $35 radio.

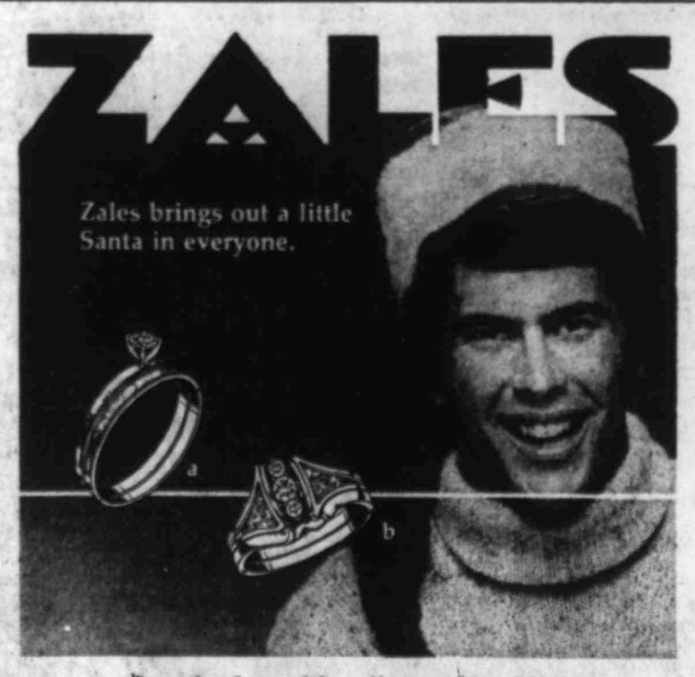

A $191 window air-conditioning unit was reported missing from a business at 2802 Juniper, No. 4, by the firm's manager, Curtis Johnson.

BEAT THE BUREAUCRACY

SBA Can Help With Dreams

By HOWARD K. OTTSTEIN

Have you always dreamed of opening a flower shop or ethnic restaurant of your very own? The Small Business Administration can help make that dream come true through counseling, workshops, publications and loans.

Your first step toward owning your own business might be a counseling session with one of the SBA's team of successful business owners and managers. Your adviser might suggest, for example, that you first take management courses at a local community college or work in a business similar to the one you wish to launch.

Eleventh In A Series

Nearly 120,000 Americans took advantage of this counseling service in fiscal 1976.

Courses, conferences, seminars and clinics are all offered by the SBA to potential small businessmen and businesswomen. The agency has also prepared a number of helpful publications on starting a business, which can be obtained at no, or minimal, cost from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington D.C. 20402.

Among these titles are "Checklist for Going into Business," "SBA Business Loans," "Management Assistance" and the comprehensive "SBA — What It Does."

With all this information under your belt, you can then seek one of the SBA's 16 types of small business loans. The agency may join with a financial institution in lending you money, guarantee up to 90 percent of a loan made to you by a bank or loan you the entire amount itself. During fiscal 1976, nearly 22,000 loans to small business owners were arranged by the SBA.

All of this valuable free help doesn't stop once your business opens its doors. The SBA will assign a member of the Service Corps of Retired Executives-Active Corps of Executives or a similar volunteer organization to your new enterprise. Such counselors can draw on years of experience in business to help get you off to a good start.

The federal government is probably the world's largest buyer of goods and services from the private sector. Federal law requires that a certain portion of those purchases be made from small businesses.

The SBA tries to insure that small businesses receive their share of government contracts. In fact, the SBA itself can contract with federal agencies, and then subcontract that work to small businesses.

In addition each major military installation has a procurement expert responsible for awarding a certain amount of business to small firms.

Consult your telephone directory for the location of the SBA office nearest you. You can also write the SBA, 1441 L Street N.W., Washington D.C. 20416.

City Baby Symbol Of 'Prayers, Hope'

It took a special team of doctors, sophisticated testing techniques, highly equipped facilities and thousands of dollars, but after the expectant mother spent 91 days in the hospital, Ricky and Claudette Johnson's baby was born — healthy.

Mrs. Johnson, who suffers a rare immunity deficiency, battled severe infections throughout her pregnancy that threatened to overcome her body and cause her baby to abort.

Doctors were forced to perform complicated tests to select a date for a caesarian section best suited for the health of both the mother and infant.

At last, on Sept. 26 at 2:16 p.m., Coletta Hope Johnson was born. Now the infant is a living symbol of "a lot of prayers and hope" the young couple at 2204-A 35th St. depended on before their 7 pound 1 ounce daughter was born, explains the mother.

"She's doing just fine," reports Mrs. Johnson. The new father, a second-year student at Sunset School of Preaching, however, is quick to point out that doctors adequately won't be able to determine for months if their baby also has the deficiency.

The woman's disease, mucocutaneous condidiasis, was discovered when she was only weeks old. Physicians, however, remain uncertain about the cause of the disease and have not ruled out the possibility of heredity.

The mysterious condition worsens during the pregnancy term, according to her attending physician, and created severe infection of the kidneys and urinary tract that threatened to cause the fetus to abort in Mrs. Johnson's case.

Semchyshyn further explains that Mrs. Johnson's condition primarily causes the body to be highly susceptible to yeast infections along such body surfaces as the skin, intestinal linings and mucous membranes. He indicates that one reason the special team performed a caesarian section was to prevent the baby from contacting those infections.

The infant remained under observation in the Intensive Care Baby Unit at Health Sciences Center Hospital several days as Mrs. Johnson recuperated.

Although the health of the baby and mother now is relatively certain, the young parents now face the problems of paying for the high costs of their medical services.

Friends have set up the Johnson Baby Fund at American State Bank to financially aid the family.

Sooners Unable To Hear Band

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (UPI) — Oklahomans have been able to drink Jack Daniel whiskey since the state's dry law was repealed in 1959, but they still can't listen to the Jack Daniel Original Silver Coronet Band.

That would violate state law.

The attorney general's office Wednesday ruled the band cannot appear at the Allied Arts Program at Northeastern Oklahoma State University because that would constitute liquor advertising, which is against the law in Oklahoma.

"We are disappointed that the Jack Daniel band will not be here tonight because the band represents a type of music which is uniquely American," said W. Roger Webb, NEOSU president.

The 14-piece, 1890s-style band specializes in playing the works of John Phillip Sousa.

The attorney general's opinion was sought by Richard Crisp, director of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, who had been asked about the Oklahoma law by a representative of the Tennessee distillery.

"It's not popular, I know that," Crisp said. "But I don't write the laws.

"A few years back, there was a band called the Teysila Band that was not allowed to play at the Oklahoma State Fair because they advertised a certain brand of tequila," Crisp said.

Policemen Suspended

Two Lubbock policemen are in jeopardy of losing their jobs following an incident Wednesday night at a local nightclub, The Avalanche-Journal has learned.

"They have been suspended," Asst. Chief C.G. Bartley said this morning.

"There was a disturbance at a nightclub last night and off-duty police officers were involved," said Lt. Ray Huffman of the police internal affairs.

Neither Bartley nor Huffman would give specifics surrounding the case. The assistant chief said the two officers involved, ages 26 and 27, were not on duty at the time, nor were they working as security police at the club.

"There was a question of whether a man was of legal age to be in the club," Bartley said. That question caused the disturbance which occurred about 11:15 p.m. Wednesday, Huffman and Bartley indicated.

The two officers, whose names were not released, were not with the man who was being asked about his age, Bartley said. It was later learned the man was old enough to be in the club.

Bartley, filling in for Police Chief J.T. Alley, who is out of town, would not say whether the officers were likely to be dismissed permanently.

"We're right in the middle of investigating it," Huffman said. "It is being investigated and investigated thoroughly."

Narcotics Busts Up In New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Narcotics arrests are on the increase in New York City for the first time since police manpower cuts in 1975, the head of the city's Bureau of Organized Crime Control reports.

Chief Joseph Veyvoda told the International Association of Chiefs of Police convention Wednesday that 1,149 felony narcotics arrests were made in the first six months of 1978. That was about the same number made before the city's fiscal crisis prompted reduction of the police force, he said. Asked if his officers were keeping up with the mob, Veyvoda responded: "I would say we're holding our own."

Moon Followers Charge Infringement

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Four followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon charge Minnesota's charitable solicitations law infringes on their religious freedom by favoring "local, established religions over newer, unconventional religious movements."

The Minnesota Chapter of the Unification Church filed a U.S. District Court challenge of a 1978 statute requiring most charities to report fund-raising activities to the state. The state attorney general's office said the law was aimed at controlling fund drives by groups claiming religious affiliations. The statute exempts religious groups which raise more than half their funds from members or take in less than $10,000 annually.

City Schools May Pay For Guards

If school attorneys agree with city attorneys that the school board legally can assume the cost of school crossing guards, the board probably will relieve the city of the expense of the guards, board president Charles Waters said today.

"We want to be reasonable, we want to get along with the city council," Waters said. "In my opinion, our only concern has been the legal aspect; can a school district legally pay for school crossing guards?"

School attorney Charles Cobb has answered that question with a "no." Reiterating a 1962 memo on the same matter, he believes the guards represent "general police powers" that only the city, not the school district, can provide.

On Wednesday, however, John Ross Jr., the city's attorney, issued an opinion that "it is within the school district's authority to pay the salaries of school crossing guards."

Ross said crossing guards are not vested with police powers and thus do not have to come under the city. He said many school districts in Texas pay for or share the cost of crossing guards.

Waters said he has received a copy of Ross' opinion and has asked Cobb to analyze it. If Cobb concurs with Ross, the school board "probably will consider participating in the cost" of the crossing guards, Waters said.

"We're not talking about a great deal of money. Besides, it's all coming from the pockets of the same taxpayers. All we want to do is be sure that whatever we do is legal," Waters said.

Salaries of the crossing guards run about $53,000 a year. The Lubbock City Council asked the school district to pay that tab when the council removed the guards from the city budget to cut taxes.

Mayor Dirk West said the city, through the police department, would continue to administer the crossing guard program, provided that the school district pays the guards' salaries.

Waters said the arrangement on the crossing guards may be discussed at next week's school board meeting. — JEFF SOUTH

Teen Detained In Connection With Beating

Dist. Judge Denzil Bevers Wednesday ordered the detention of one of three Estacado High School students apprehended by authorities in connection with Tuesday's death of a woman who apparently was beaten to death with a baseball bat during a gang fight.

Bevers, after a 72nd District Court hearing, ordered the detention of a 14-year-old youth for a period of up to 10 days in connection with the death of Marie Booker Lyons.

He left the other two youths, 16-year-old brothers, under the supervision of their parents. The judge, however, did require the two brothers to report to a juvenile probation officer at the conclusion of the hearing and imposed other supervisory conditions, including a 9 p.m. curfew.

Authorities said it appeared that Mrs. Lyons, 20, of 1807 E. 2nd St., was killed by a blow from a baseball bat.

According to reports, the young woman, of 1807 E. 2nd St., was injured when she became involved in a gang fight about 4:40 p.m. at the Alderson Junior High School baseball diamond.

Witnesses told police that the fight, which reportedly grew to involve as many as 200 persons, was initiated by a quarrel between two families. There were conflicting reports as to whether Mrs. Lyons was attempting to head off the fight or trying to get a relative out of the fracas.

Student Seeks Court Order

A member of the Iranian Student Association today asked for a temporary restraining order against Texas Tech University to allow association members to participate in a planned campus demonstration while wearing masks.

The campus protest is scheduled for Friday, but a spokesman said no definite time has yet been set.

According to an affidavit accompanying the suit, Tech officials authorized the demonstration with the condition that participants would not wear masks

The federal court suit contends the provision violates constitutional rights of symbolic speech and places demonstrators and relatives in Iran in danger.

The Iranians are being represented by West Texas Legal Services, a federally funded legal aid group.

Carter Draws Line On Tuition Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Russell Long said today President Carter seems flexible in his opposition to a capital-gains tax cut.

But he said Carter told him he would veto a tax-cut bill if it contains a rider, added in the Senate, to give an income-tax credit for college costs.

Carter met at the White House with Long and Rep. Al Ullman, who head a House-Senate conference panel that scheduled last-minute bargaining today to work out a bill before Congress adjourns on Saturday.

Carter has said he would veto the tax-cut bill unless it is scaled down from the $29.3 billion in cuts approved by the Senate.

Ullman, D-Ore., and Long, D-La., said Carter indicated he would accept a bill that grants cuts of between $16.4 billion, the figure approved by the House, and $21.9 billion.

"The president was concerned that the bill as passed by the Senate would cost far too much money, and he's right about that," Long, the Senate Finance Committee chairman, told reporters. He said the conferees probably would trim it to a figure Carter could accept.

But Long added that he thinks the conferees will press Carter on cutting taxes on capital gains, which are the profits from the sale of property such as stocks, bonds, or real estate. The president has said he would veto measures to grant large capital gains cuts because they favor the rich over the poor.

Long said, however, he believes Carter may give on the matter. "I think the president will be reasonable," he said.

Administration officials have criticized both Senate and House bills as being much too generous to the high-income investors who would benefit most from a big cut in capital gains taxes.

Long said the tuition tax credit was the only specific item whose inclusion the president said would prompt him to veto the entire bill. Carter has said he would veto the tuition tax credit as a separate measure, but the Senate added it to the tax-cut bill as a form of "veto insurance."

Long also said the president did not specifically discuss a bipartisan amendment that would cut federal income taxes by $164.5 billion over the next five years, provided spending is held in check.

Republicans were asking the House to instruct its members on the conference committee to endorse that provision.

When the House was debating next year's budget on Aug. 16, a similar proposal failed by only five votes.

Carter, viewing an economy struggling against inflation and unemployment, is said to oppose any action that would lock in tax cuts beyond 1979.

Long said Carter did express concern generally today about "out-year costs" of the bill, meaning tax reductions in years beyond 1979.

work reached at Camp David, they must agree on three lines through the Sinai's sands to achieve their goal of a peace treaty by Dec. 19.

The most difficult problems in achieving peace between Egypt and Israel were apparently solved at Camp David and immediately afterwards, when Israel agreed to a complete withdrawal from the Sinai, including the withdrawal of its settlements, in return for peace and normal relations with Egypt.

One of the lines is supposed to run roughly 30 miles east of the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Suez. It will mark the closest point to Israel at which Egypt can station military forces.

A second line, lying from 12 to 25 miles west of the 1967 border, will mark a demilitarized zone in which only U.N. troops and lightly armed Egyptian police will be allowed.

The third line, running through the middle of the Sinai from el-Arish to Ras Muhammad, will mark the point of interim withdrawal of Israeli forces. Their pullback is supposed to take place within three to nine months of the treaty's signing.

American officials, speaking privately, say they are confident the lines can be drawn. But they say additional snags are possible if either side attempts to delay an agreement.

There are still unresolved disputes involving Sinai oil rights, reparations each side claims it is owed by the other and the specific terms of "normal relations," such as whether the two countries will immediately begin commercial airline flights between Cairo and Jerusalem.

"These things will have to be negotiated, but I'm confident neither side will allow them to block a treaty," one official said.

More problems could arise over what link exists between the Sinai agreement and the more difficult issues involving the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

American officials say they do not know whether Egypt will insist on progress on the West Bank peace plan as a condition to going ahead with the Sinai treaty.

Carter said Tuesday he was sure the issue would arise. He added that there is no explicit connection between the two parts of the Camp David framework, but that a connection exists in his mind and in the minds of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

As at Camp David, the administration is clamping a tight lid on news from the talks, allowing only one press briefing a day by an American spokesman.

Military Pay Delay Faces Reese AFB

we have to do is take them to the post office," Brus said.

Checks which automatically go to a bank, he added, will be transferred electronically from Denver as usual, just as soon as the okay comes.

The military sendout from Denver will take four hours for the entire transmission, he has been informed.

The situation, Brus noted, is one a person thinks will never happen, but he said it is temporary and will pass.

"But, it will cause difficulties."

Cause of the "certain amount of disappointment" being felt by Reese personnel is a report that neither the House nor the Senate was expected to act on the defense bill or a $56 billion Health, Education and Welfare-Labor bill until today or later.

A Pentagon spokesman, asking to remain anonymous, said the defense appropriations bill must be approved by Congress and signed by President Carter by Friday if the pay deadline for 1.5 million military personnel and 466,000 civilian defense employees is to be met.

A Washington Associated Press dispatch also stated that 145,000 HEW employees were alerted to the fact that only half their two-week salary would be in the Friday pay envelope.

A resolution to continue the fiscal 1978 spending level until the HEW-Labor appropriation bill is passed began moving through Congress on Wednesday. There was speculation that a similar bill for Pentagon employees may be attached.

While the paper work grinds on in Washington, Reese personnel are preparing for a lean weekend at the least.

Highway Plans Gain Approval

cess road would be part of the primary rather than the interstate highway system in Texas.

Bentsen has said earlier that it probably would follow U.S. 87 and connect Interstate 27 in Lubbock with Interstate 10 16 miles east of Kerrville at Comfort.

Approval of the bill late Wednesday "means, in my opinion, that there will be no question about it," Bentsen said. "We'll get immediate approval by both bodies now."

The House and Senate now must act on the four-year, $51-billion bill, which combines the highway bill with a mass transportation bill.

A Bentsen aide said later today that it was "still up in the air as to whether he (Carter) will sign it or not.

"We understand that he has no problem with the highway bill, but there may be a problem with the mass transportation bill."

Carter has threatened to veto the legislation if he considers it inflationary.

The priority primary fund proposal came into the bill as part of the House highway bill. The House bill had no provision for connector highway projects. The inclusion of the fund with special mention of the Texas and New Mexico projects was a compromise between the two legislative bodies.

In Austin, Vander Straten said using the 90-10 option would mean "in effect we'd be dropping projects that are in the pipeline now to pick up this interstate extension.

"If this (the second option) is a new source, we can handle that (the 25 percent in matching money). Twenty-five percent is no problem. A state House bill in the last session provided a pretty good source of state money.

"Texas is one of the few states now that doesn't have a problem coming up with matching money. Whether it's 10 or 25, we can handle that."

Vander Straten said environmental statements, public hearings, right-of-way purchases and other details make highway construction a lengthy process even after funding is arranged, so it would be many years before construction started on the Lubbock project.

Even though the bill funnels only $125 million per year into the new Transportation Department fund, financing the job would be no problem because it would be completed and paid for in phases, the engineer said.

He noted that there is an average of seven to eight years between approval of a project by the Texas Highway Commission and the letting of construction contracts.

ings which we're not going to have to tear down," he said.

Also this morning the council:

— Appropriated $370,000 from bond funds for construction and equipment for the fire station to be built at 79th Street and Slide Road.

— Appropriated $22,800 to cover the costs incurred in the August sale of $2.4 million in bonds.

— Approved an agreement between the city and Honeywell Information Systems for the purchase of additional data processing equipment at a cost of $151,585 to come from federal revenue sharing funds.

— Decided to wait 60 days before placing a stop sign at 55th Street and Raleigh Avenue as recommended by the Citizens Traffic Commission.

Rebuttal Given In School Suit

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Plaintiffs in the suit against the Lubbock Independent School District's at-large election methods say school trustees do indeed have the authority to change their election process.

And, in their latest brief, the plaintiffs argue that the school board's failure to do so represents a form of racial discrimination — for which the board should be required to pay $31 million in damages to minority voters.

The brief is in rebuttal to school attorneys' assertion that there is no basis for such a claim of damages. The school board has asked U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward to issue a partial summary judgment denying the damages.

Eight minority voters, represented by West Texas Legal Services, submitted to Woodward a brief in opposition to the school board's motion.

"Plaintiffs have filed this class action and seek to recover damages because the voting strength of the plaintiffs and the class of blacks and Mexican-Americans has been diluted, minimized or canceled by the at-large voting system in the Lubbock Independent School District," the brief said.

In contrary to the school board's argument, the plaintiffs contend that at-large election of board members is "not required by law...Nowhere in this special act (creating the Lubbock school district) were the trustees of the school district commanded by the legislature to adopt an at-large system of election...

"It seems elementary that an independent school district that has the power to establish an at-large system would also have the power to change their election system if it was established in violation of the U.S. Constitution."

At-large elections mean citywide voting with no residency restrictions. The plaintiffs say such a system handicaps minorities and violates their civil and constitutional rights.

The plaintiffs want Woodward to order adoption of a single-member district system, by which certain seats on the school board would be designated for particular geographic areas of the city.

"In enforcing an at-large system which has the discriminatory effect of minimizing minority voting strength, the defendants are enforcing a state law which in effect discriminates against minorities, and therefore they are subject to damages under the 4th Amendment," the plaintiffs' brief says.

The brief also cited a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling which held that local governments are not immune from having to pay damages for civil rights violations.

Attorneys for the school system have argued that the reasons for at-large elections are "valid, viable and not racially motivated." They said minorities presently enjoy "full access" to electing school trustees — and that the school board is responsive and sensitive to minorities.

School attorneys further argue that "the plaintiffs have stated no basis for recovery of damages," because — in the school district's view — the law creating the district "calls for at-large elections."

Said the school lawyers: "The plaintiffs' claim for money damages is founded upon a failure by the defendants to institute a form of elections which the defendants did not have the power to institute and which would have been invalid if instituted."

Jury Hears Mother's Testimony

about eight o'clock," the witness said.

She explained that the exercise consisted of doing a pushup, then standing, then repeating the sequence.

Williams had been drinking beer, Mrs. Starr said. She said that he told her to go to The Strip to get some more beer and that Quentin could go with her.

Mrs. Miller asked if the child seemed tired. "Maybe slightly tired, but that was about all," Mrs. Starr, who has married since the incident, said. She said her son did seem "overwrought. He was not usually in trouble and he was upset about it."

Williams later that night said Quentin was picking at his food and ordered more exercises, according to the state witness.

Mrs. Starr said Williams told her the boy could quit doing the exercises in about an hour, at 10 p.m.

"What was he doing?" Mrs. Miller asked. "I believe he was doing deep knee-bends again," Mrs. Starr replied.

She said that at 10 she reminded Williams about the time limit and that an argument ensued.

"Could you not tell your son to stop without Mr. Williams' permission?" Mrs. Miller queried. "No ma'm," Mrs. Starr said.

Williams finally told the boy he could stop, and the child prepared for bed, according to the witness. But, she said, the five-year-old left the bedroom, saying he needed to go to the bathroom.

According to Mrs. Starr, that triggered a final series of exercises.

She said Williams accused the child of "stalling" in going to the bathroom. Mrs. Miller asked what exercise was then imposed.

"I believe it was the 'invisible chair'...it's kind of like you were going to sit in a chair but there is not one there really," Mrs. Starr said.

"You just hold it (the position)."

It was then that Quentin began to collapse, his mother said.

"Quentin couldn't keep the position and started — I don't know how you'd describe it — started sinking down on the floor."

The witness said Williams was not sober, that he staggered and that his words were slurred.

Mrs. Starr said Williams ordered the five-year-old to resume the position. "When he couldn't, he hit him from behind." She said the blow with an open hand landed on the boy's right shoulder.

The boy fell foreward, Mrs. Starr said, striking his head on the floor. She said Williams subsequently struck the boy in the stomach with an open hand, causing him to fall backwards.

"He tried to get up — it took him a minute or two," Mrs. Starr said. "He tried to (get into the position) but couldn't get into it.

"He just keeled over."

New Civil Service Reform Act Will Allow Sweeping Changes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 1978 Civil Service Reform Act, now awaiting a presidential signature, represents almost all the changes President Carter had requested — and a bit more.

The act will bring a sweeping reform of the federal civil service — for the first time protecting "whistleblowers," allowing workers to be fired for rudeness or inefficiency, and providing promotions for other reasons than length of service.

While seeking the presidency, Carter campaigned strongly on the need for changes in the civil service that operates — and sometimes stalls — the American bureaucracy.

He said when he became president he found the situation even worse than he had thought, and the bill was one of his top priorities.

Jules Sugarman, vice chairman of the Civil Service Commission, and Wayne Granquist of the Office of Management and Budget, spelled out for UPI Wednesday their assessment of the legislation.

At present, an employee can be fired only if the government proves with a "preponderance" of evidence that the dismissal would promote the efficiency of the service.

Under the new law, the government must have only "substantial" evidence that an employee was unsuited for his job — for instance, that he or she failed to perform a critical element, such as a secretary who couldn't take shorthand.

Or if a supervisor makes four reports in one year of an employee being discourteous or rude to a member of the public, the employee can be fired.

An employee would not necessarily be fired for receiving four citizen complaints. The supervisor would have to rule on the validity of them.

Carter got even more protection than he asked for "whistleblowers."

At present, a whistleblower is protected only if he or she reports a violation of law. Under the reform, the whistleblower will be protected for reporting gross mismanagement, waste or anything that "endangers the national health or safety."

The whistleblowers will be guaranteed anonymity and will be able to make their complaints either to the new Merit Systems Protection Board's special counsel or one of the new inspector generals.

A separate bill that Carter is signing today creates 12 inspectors general, one each for most Cabinet departments, the scandal-ridden General Services Administration and the Veterans Administration.

Carter's biggest setback in the legislation was Congress' insistence on retaining veterans preference in federal hiring, which means even World War II veterans can continue to use it.

He had wanted to limit it to one use during a 10-year period only, thus allowing the government to hire more Vietnam veterans, women and minorities.

Women and minorities have protested the preference is used more often for federal professional jobs, leaving open only the lower grade positions such as clerks or typists.

The government hires 157,000 new people each year, and about 10 percent use veterans preference.

The new law does, however, repeal the preference for retired military officers after 1980, and slows "double-dipping" by limiting to $47,500 the total pay retired officers can draw from pensions and federal civilian jobs.

Interest Rates Will Not Drop

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

Federal Reserve Board chairman G. William Miller, who keeps saying he "hopes" for a let-up in the interest rate spiral, is becoming part of a shrinking minority. Among most economists, even the hopes are disappearing.

The outlook, according to experts we've checked with, is for higher rates over the next month or two at least, and then, maybe, a leveling off. A downturn? Forget it.

Credit market analysts say the prime lending rate at the country's banks — the charge for loans to the biggest and best customers — will hit the 10 percent mark any day now and is odds-on to tack on a healthy fraction above that before the year is out. The banks themselves, now paying a little under 9 pecent for money themselves, can expect that cost (called the "federal funds rate") to climb by half a percentage point or more within the next few weeks. As for next year, Henry Kaufman of Salomon Brothers says the prime rate could be as high as 12 percent in 1979.

The analysts give a variety of reasons for their pessimism, ranging from changes in the banking business that take some of the sting out of Federal Reserve restraining moves to mishandling by the Fed itself.

(The rate discussions are about business interest charges. Consumer loan rates — except for home mortgages — aren't usually considered, partly because they're well above the rates charged business and they react more slowly to changes in Fed policy.)

Possibly most significant, few analysts are willing to predict the high point for interest rates. Some say the upward pressure could ease during the winter months, when loan demand normally slows, and that firm anti-inflation steps by the administraion would improve the picture. Up to now, the Fed has been left virtually alone to pull against the tide (which is picking up force again). It has only one weapon — the power to restrict the supply of credit, which forces interest rates higher — and so far that hasn't had much effect.

Leonard Santow of Schroder Banking Corp. told us he expects the Fed to increase its pressure on credit markets over the next few weeks. "They're probably disappointed over the results of past policy," he said, "and I think they've decided 'let do it hard for four to six weeks and maybe it will take hold." As a result, Santow looks for a "spike" — a sharp upward thrust — in rates very soon.

Irving Auerbach of Aubrey G. Lanston said Miller's hoped for turnaround in rates "seems premature at this stage." Auerbach says that credit tightening is "the only option the Fed has," but "there is a limit to how far they can go before you see a complete collapse of the financial markets."

At Morgan, Stanley & Co., Erich Heinemann says "the Fed's actions are working in the direction of pushing rates higher than they need to be." Heinemann, who says "Miller has made a tactical blunder in the past in making rate forecasts because not only have they been wrong, but it's improper for him to make predictions," thinks rates will continue to rise until the Fed moves harder to slow the growth of bank reserves (which are used to make loans).

The outlook for interest rates — and for economic growth — is tied to whatever steps the administration takes to rein in inflation. So far, President Carter has insisted he won't go beyond a strong but voluntary system of wage and price restraint, but the economists are increasingly doubtful.

According to Salomon's Kaufman, "The administration is backing itself into mandatory controls because it failed to assert itself last year when the time was right for firm action. Now there's nothing in the picture that suggests a let-up in interest rates and the prospect is that we face a very high rate of inflation over the next 12 months."

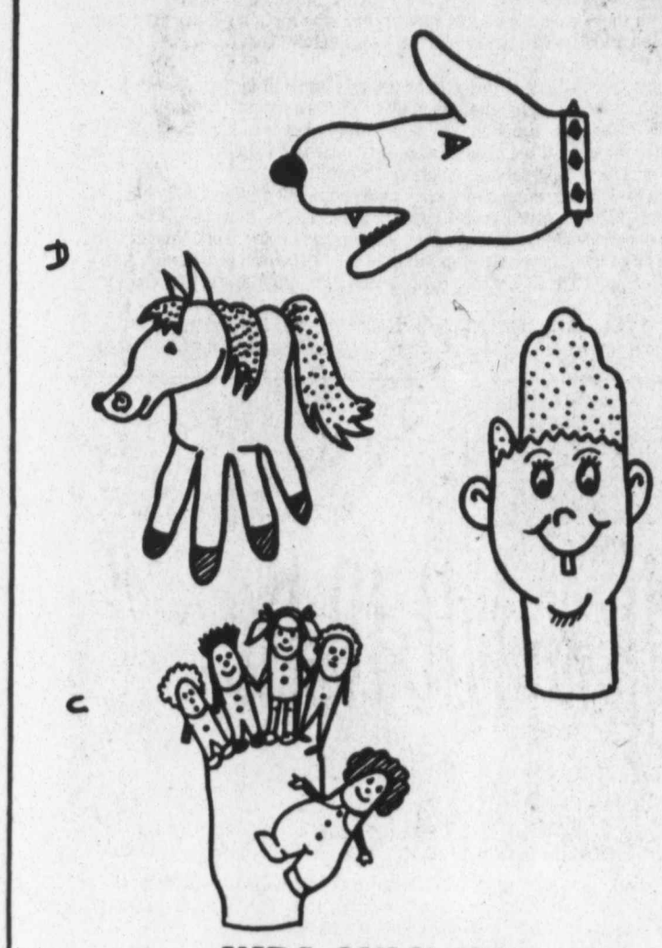

(A high inflation rate makes high interst rates less of a deterrent to borrowing.)

"Our feeling is that guidelines won't work," Schroder's Santow says. "Business will accept them, but labor won't. With the Teamsters Union contract negotiations coming up in January and February, there will be strong pressure for the administration to do something to hold back wage increases."

Santow, and others, say they expect President Carter to ask Congress for the power to impose mandatory controls some time early in 1979. If Congress goes along, most agree that the Fed could feel able to let up on the credit string.

'Noodle' Provides Fun

By SHARI LEWIS

When I was a kid, I loved to 'noodle.' No, I didn't cook 'em or eat 'em. I'd "noodle" with paper and pencil. Here's how:

I would trace all around one hand. Sometimes I'd hold my hand in an open position, and trace between my fingers. Sometimes I would only separate the thumb. Sometimes I would keep the whole hand together.

And then inside of the outline of my hand, I would draw a horse, a dog, a dopey-looking persons or a whole "finger family," they were really "HANDMADE!"

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Why does a faucet drip?

ANSWER: Because it can't sniff!

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: "That's a nice cup," said Doug. "And how interesting to have a saucer of a different color!" Ann laughed. "I chose them separately, and the cup cost a dollar more than the saucer. It was $1.50 for the two, so don't say I waste money." How much was the cup alone? Quick, now! Accused Submarine Thieves Face Trial

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Three men accused of plotting to steal a nuclear submarine face federal hearings this week.

Preliminary hearings will be held Friday in St. Louis for Edward J. Mendenhall, 24, and Kurtis J. Schmidt, 22. James W. Cosgove, 26, faces a preliminary hearing the same day in Rochester, N.Y. The men are charged with conspiring to steal the USS Terpang from its New London mooring, a scheme Navy officials have called "ludicrous." The FBI arrested Cosgrove in Geneva, N.Y., while Mendenhall and Schmidt were arrested in St. Louis.

Menu Items Misleading

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Nutmeg might be a sure thing in Connecticut, but the state says diners should be a little wary when they see Maine lobster, Virginia ham or Long Island duck on the menu.

Launching what she called a "Truth-in-menu" campaign, state Consumer Protection Commissioner Mary Heslin said surprise inspections by her department found 76 percent of the 200 eating places investigated in the "Nutmeg State" had misleading menus.

She said her department will give the eateries until March 1 to fix their menus.

The chief complaints found by inspectors were that some restaurants couldn't prove their Maine lobsters were from Maine, their Virginia ham was from Virginia or their Long Island duck had even flown by the peninsula that juts out from New York.

The list, compiled by about 400 claims inspectors, said fresh seafood and fruit was not always fresh and chopped sirloin was in some cases was ground beef or hamburger.

Pillsbury Will Aid Famed Music Hall

NEW YORK (UPI) — Looking for a way to enhance its national image as a public-spirited company, Pillsbury Co. of Minneapolis, the international food firm, has decided to try to help save New York's Radio City Music Hall.

The 3,900-seat motion picture and stage show house which was one of the prime attractions when the Rockefellers built New York's Rockefeller Center complex in the early 1930s, has been struggling for the past two years. Closing notices were actually posted last spring, but an effort by the city and state governments and the entertainment world brought a reprieve.

Nevertheless, the Music Hall's basic problems have not been solved, and if it is to be preserved as an entertainment and cultural center and as the architectural monument it is, a lot more will have to be done. Entertainment critics and leaders in the entertainment industry all agree to that.

"The basic problem is the vast changes that have taken place in motion pictures since the Music Hall was built," said Raymond F. Good, executive vice president of Pillsbury.

"These changes cut off the reliable flow of top-notch family entertainment feature films that were the Music Hall's staple fare. This happened at a time when inflation was running up the overhead cost of the big theater and the cost of its high grade stage shows."

Good said there have been signs recently that the motion picture producers may decide again that family pictures can be profitable. That could give the Music Hall a new lease on life.

What Pillsbury is doing is to try to help the Music Hall in the meanwhile by paying for a campaign to publicize the big theater as a national attraction.

"It really is such an attraction," he said. "More than 30 million living Americans have seen shows at the Music Hall at least once and since it opened early in 1930s, its audiences have totaled a fantastic 250 million."

Pillsbury is enlisting the nation's corporate community to lend its talent and financial support in a concentrated effort to preserve the showplace. The company will announce all its plans at a news conference in New York Nov. 27, but it already has agreed to cosponsor a salute to the Music Hall program on NBC-TV the evening of Dec. 14. This program will star Ann Margret and Gregory Peck.

Pillsbury also will pay for and produce an extensive series of television announcements urging the nation's populace in general to adopt the Music Hall.

Man Killed In Crane Accident

DALLAS (AP) — A Lewisville man was killed when a 10-ton construction crane toppled from a 30-story building into a busy downtown Dallas intersection Wednesday, missing the afternoon traffic rush by only an hour.

The 75-foot crane was lifting concrete to the top of One Dallas Centre, a high-rise building under construction, when it toppled and plunged to the ground, killing Kenneth Carl Branch, 37, its operator.

Witnesses said the massive apparatus tumbled end-over-end through the air before becoming entangled in a web of electrical wires. Firemen were unable to begin rescue efforts until Dallas Power & Light officials cut power to the lines.

Dallas Fire Department spokeswoman Janie Bryant said the falling crane caused some damage to the building, and flying debris knocked out windows in the Republic National Bank Building across the street.

The crumpled rigging fell within the construction site, but stretched across St. Paul Street, a busy thoroughfare during peak traffic periods. Mrs. Bryant said a taxicab and a private automobile were in the block as the crane crashed to the ground, but both "miraculously" avoided being crushed.

Dallas attorney Joseph Morris watched from his office on the 24th floor of the Republic National Bank Building.

"The crane swayed, then I noticed it's not supposed to do that ... in a surreal fashion it fell in almost slow motion ... and then it registered in my mind that there actually was a crane falling off that building. I couldn't get up fast enough to see it hit ... I just saw it cascade over the side," Morris said.

A security guard at the bank building also saw the crane fall.

"It did a 180 degree turn in the air ... then started crumpling up and falling apart. There was debris falling out of it — gears, parts of motors ..."

CRANE CRASH KILLS ONE — Workers begin to removed the twisted wreckage of a construction crane Wednesday afternoon after it crashed 30 stories into a downtown Dallas intersection. The crane's operator was killed when the 75-foot structure toppled from a 30-story building as it was lifting a load of concrete to the top of the building. The cause of the accident is under investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

George Bush Lists Noted Supporters

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Not only has Republican congressional candidate George Bush outspent and outsolicited Democratic opponent Kent Hance, but he has compiled a list of contributors that reads like "Who's Who."

Campaign contribution and expense reports filed this week show that during the past three months Bush has spent more than five times as much as Hance and has collected nearly three times as much as Hance for the November general election.

The reports show that between July 1 and Sept. 30, Bush raised about $207,560 and spent nearly $180,000, while Hance raised $74,822 and spent $36,100 during the same period.

On Sept. 30 Bush reported having $37,377 on hand, while records showed Hance had $63,100 in the bank.

Bush's report, which is as thick as a doctoral thesis, lists the names of about 2,000 contributors, most of whom contributed under $100.

Included in the list of 2,000 contributors are names such as Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, $100; former CBS president Frank Shakespeare, $50; former U.S. Ambassador to England Anne Armstrong, $100; former Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, $100, and baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn, $250.

Other notable contributors include Ford Motor Company vice chairman William C. Ford, $500; Frito-Lay executive Herman Lay, $250; Celanese Corporation president John Macomber, $250; Bristol-Myers chairman Richard Gelb, $1,000; Jerry Weintraub, manager for rock stars John Denver, the Eagles and Linda Ronstadt, $1,000; Pennzoil Inc. chairman J. Hugh Liedtke, $500; First International Bancshares chairman Robert H. Stewart III, $200; PEPSICO board chairman Donald Kendall, $150, and Los Angeles Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley, $250.

Also contributing were Haggar Company executives E.R. Haggar and J.M. Haggar, who donated $200 each; Dallas developer Trammell Crow, $250; Steak & Ale Restaurant owner Norman Brinker, $150; and Bank of America chairman Alden Clausen, $200.

Bush said most of the contributors are "friends of mine and friends of the family, as well as a lot of people who are concerned about the future of the country."

The Midlander held fund raisers in Washington, D.C., Houston, Dallas and Midland for the general election. His father, a former CIA director, Republican National Committee chairman, and now possible presidential candidate, attended all four events.

The 32-year-old Bush credited the national attention focused on the race to succeed 44-year veteran George Mahon in Congress with aiding the fund-raising effort.

Of the 299 contributors who donated more than $100 to the Bush campaign, 192, or 64 percent, live outside the 19th Congressional District. Midland residents account for 32 percent, while only 4 percent of the large contributions came from the rest of the district including Lubbock.

The 299 large contributors donated more than $130,000 to the Bush effort, over half of which was from out-of-district.

Hance received 11 out-of-district contributions from individuals, totaling $4,650 of the $35,699 he received from individual contributors.

Most of Hance's donations came from the Lubbock area, his report shows.

Bush listed 55 persons who gave $1,000 or more, while Hance listed only six such contributions.

Bush's report lists 58 Political Action Committee (PAC) donations totaling $27,875, while Hance reportedly received $21,025 from six PACs.

The National Republican Party gave Bush's campaign a $12,500 shot in the arm through three organizations, while Hance received $3,000 from Democratic

Fugitive Arraigned

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — An 18-year-old woman charged with kidnapping a young girl in Dallas in April 1977 was being held on $100,000 bond, according to court officials.

The woman, identified by U.S. Magistrate Court officials as Elizabeth Blanchard, was arraigned in Tacoma on Wednesday. A removal hearing was set for Oct. 20.

Mrs. Blanchard was arrested by a Washington State trooper Tuesday after being stopped for a minor traffic violation near Kelso, Wash., authorities said.

The trooper ran the woman's name through a routine check of the FBI's National Crime Information Center and discovered the outstanding federal warrant, FBI officials said.

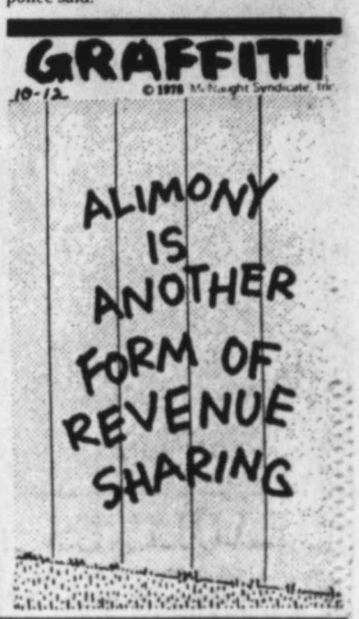

The kidnap victim, Shanita Michelle Perkins, who was 2-years-old at the time, has not been located, FBI spokesmen said, and Mrs. Blanchard has refused to talk to authorities about the case.

Dallas police said Mrs. Blanchard was babysitting for the young girl's parents on April 29, 1977 when she allegedly took the baby to see her common-law husband and pick up her paycheck. Neither the baby nor the babysitter were seen again, police said.

Montford Given Early Backing

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

There will be at least a few receptive ears to hiring more investigators when the criminal district attorney-elect takes his request for more funds to Lubbock County commissioners.

John Montford learned recently that his $57,000 grant application to the Criminal Justice Division to hire four more investigators may not be approved and said this week that he will ask the county to supply the money instead.

"The people of Lubbock County elected that old boy on his platform, and that was part of his platform, so it might be pretty hard to turn him down," said Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton.

"I don't know just what we'll do for him when we get to the table and talk about it, but we'll have to do what we can for him because the people tell us how to spend their money for them."

Among Montford's reasons for requesting the four additional investigators — for a total of seven — is that he intends to reopen several unsolved Lubbock County murder cases and he says he will need extra manpower for that.

Also, there are six district courts for the county, and he wants an investigator for each court plus a chief investigator.

Biggs said the commissioners court envisioned picking up the extra cost when the grant ran out anyway, "so really, we'd just be absorbing the cost earlier."

County Judge Rod Shaw, who sits as the fifth member of the court and has the tie-breaking vote, said the Criminal Justice Division often has more money left over at the end of the year than it advertises beforehand and may eventually be able to fill the grant.

The agency told Shaw in a letter that funding the Montford grant may hinge on local priorities. Montford said he assumed the $1.2 million county detention center which has been given top priority by the South Plains Association of Governments could kill his request for state funding.

He added that he is in favor of the center being the first priority.

Commissioner James Lancaster of Idalou also indicated he will be receptive to the budget amendment Montford plans to request.

"He has a real good point in that he feels like the investigators are essential to putting a case together," Lancaster said, "and if he's going to do the work he hopes he does, I think it would be important that he has the investigators to do the case preparation and background work.

"We assumed that we would have to pick up the tab two or three years from now. It's a little bit unexpected to take it up this soon, but I think it's essential to his program.

"I think this will complement his program, and we sure need to step it up, in my opinion."

The current budget for the office operated by outgoing criminal district attorney Alton Griffin is $389,353. The recently approved calendar year 1978 budget, including the $57,000 that was expected

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I'm a mature 15-year-old girl who struck up a friendship with a 29-year-old guy I'll call Lee. He works at a gasoline station near my girlfriend's house. I found him interesting to talk to. Then he started confiding his troubles to me. The poor guy has really had a messed-up life. He had to get married when he was 18, then his wife left him for another guy. He says he doesn't love her anymore, but he misses his son. I feel so sorry for him.

He says I've done him so much good just letting him cry on my shoulder. He kissed me once and held me real tight, and it felt so good I nearly fainted. He even said he thought he could love me, then he started calling me up at home. If my mother knew his background she'd have a fit. (I told her it was some guy from school.) I hate lying to Mom. I'm all mixed up and know I shouldn't see Lee anymore, but I hate to hurt his feelings. Please tell me what to do.

MIXED UP IN LONGVIEW, WASH.

Dear Mixed Up: Stay away from Lee. A 29-year-old man who would kiss a 15-year-old girl and suggest that he could love her is bad news. And never have anything to do with a fellow you can't bring home and introduce to your parents.

DEAR ABBY: My son is being married soon. Two years ago, his father and I were divorced, and my ex is now married to the woman with whom he had been playing around for the last five years.

Under the circumstances, I feel that my husband's new wife does not belong at our son's wedding.

My son and his fiancee feel that since his father has married this little home-wrecker, she should attend the wedding.

I am considering asking them to make a choice. If they want me at that wedding, father's wife can stay home. If they want her, I'll stay home. What is your opinion.?

BITTER IN BALTIMORE

Dear Bitter: If it's common knowledge, and not just your opinion, that father's wife is a homewrecker, she doesn't belong at your son's wedding. But don't punish the young couple by forcing them to choose between your presence and hers.

Go, and be a lady. If father's wife insists on attending, it is she who may have difficulty holding her head high.

DEAR ABBY: The public school my children attend has just built a swimming pool. The boys have certain hours to swim and so do the girls, and they are going to have regular swimming classes.

The boys have just been told that they are expected to swim in the raw! I don't know what the other boys thought of this, but my son didn't care for the idea as he isn't comfortable when he's nude with other boys. He didn't say anything to the coach because he didn't want to be ridiculed.

I think whether the boys should swim with or without swim suits should have been decided by the parents since this is a public school paid for by our taxes. I would like your opinion. My son is an average 14-year-old lad. Thank you.

ONE LAD'S DAD

Dear Dad: The parents should have been consulted. But your "average 14-year-old lad" had better overcome his shyness about nudity in the presence of other boys or he is apt to be uncomfortable much of his life.

LOW—CALORIE CHEESECAKE — Apple-Cinnamon Cheesecake is tailor-made for those who must watch calories. It offers generous amounts of protein and minerals and is low in sugar and fat. Dieters need not suffer any more.

Special Recipe Provides Tempting Dieters Dessert

NEW YORK (Special) — Denial of dessert is like punishment for dieters with a sweet tooth. But desserts can usually be justified if they offer considerable food value and low calorie count. The following recipe for Apple-Cinnamon Cheesecake is such a dessert.

The recipe calls for considerably less than a cup of sugar yet it serves 12 persons. Apple juice adds sweetness as well as flavor, and slices of fresh apples and walnuts on top provide delicious texture contrast. Three cups of low fat cottage cheese offer a considerable supplement of protein and minerals.

APPLE-CINNAMON CHEESECAKE

1½ cups apple juice
2 eggs, separated
2 envelopes gelatin
1/3 cup cold water
½ cup granulated sugar
3 cups low fat creamed cottage cheese
1 tsp. ground cinnamon
½ tsp. ground nutmeg
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
2 medium size red apples
½ cup chopped walnuts
1/3 cup brown sugar
1 tbsp. rum or brandy

In a medium saucepan, mix the egg yolks and apple juice. Sprinkle the gelatin over the 1/3 cup cold water and let stand until water is absorbed. Add the sugar and gelatin to the apple juice and heat until gelatin is dissolved, 3-4 minutes, stirring constantly. Set aside.

In a large bowl, beat the cottage cheese, cinnamon and nutmeg until smooth and creamy. Gradually add the gelatin mixture, beat until well blended. Chill in refrigerator or freezer until the mixture begins to thicken.

In a large bowl, beat the egg whites until peaks form. Carefully fold into the cheese mixture. Pour into an 8 or 9-inch spring form pan. Chill 3 hours before serving.

Topping:

Cut the apples in quarters. Remove the core and cut into thin slices, leaving the peel on. If the slices are large, cut them in halves. In a medium frying pan, melt the butter, add the apple slices and sugar and cook until the apples are soft, but keep their shape. Remove from heat and add nuts and rum or brandy. Let stand until juices are absorbed by the apples. When the cake is firm, spoon the topping over it, remove the spring form from the sides and serve. Serves 12.

MINERAL RESEARCH

Recent research in trace minerals has added to our knowledge of the role of chromium in human nutrition. Based on studies with diabetics, scientists believe that chromium may be related to the effective utilization of insulin. More research must be done before a Recommended Daily Allowance can be established for chromium, but it is believed that our daily needs can be easily met by a balanced, varied diet.

Strapped for entries to dummy, South found an intriguing way of overcoming his problem. A less skilled declarer might easily have overlooked the solution.

South showed his balanced hand of 19-20 points by opening one of a suit and rebidding two no trump. With 7 points, North had just enough to go on to game.

West made his natural lead of the top of his heart sequence, and declarer was less than enamored with dummy. He could count only seven tricks in top cards. A successful club finesse would yield one trick, and another could come from diamonds by leading twice up to the king-queen and finding the ace on-side. But to do all that declarer needed three entries to dummy, and only one was readily available.

However, the importance of the ten of diamonds in dummy was not lost on declarer. He realized that, if the jack of diamonds were with West, he wouldn't have to lead up to his K-Q twice in order to produce two sure diamond tricks.

As a matter of technique, declarer ducked the first heart trick and won the continuation. Now he led a low diamond from his hand! West had to go up with the jack to prevent the ten from winning the trick. Declarer won the next heart and forced out the ace of diamonds by leading low to the ten.

Eight tricks were now assured. West completed the defensive book by cashing his winning heart, then exited with a spade. Declarer took his three spade tricks, and he led a club to the queen. When the finesse succeeded, declarer had his nine tricks.

Questions Annoy Liz Taylor

By JURATE KAZICKAS

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Her famous violet eyes were hidden behind very dark glasses, but clearly Elizabeth Taylor Warner was annoyed.

Here she was, the wife of the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate from conservative Virginia, with the election little more than a month away, being asked whether the voters might be put off by her seven marriages.

"It's nobody's concern. I think it's fairly obvious why I was married. As strange as it may sound, I am a very moral woman. I was taught by my parents that if you fall in love, if you want to have a love affair, you get married. I guess I'm very old fashioned," said Elizabeth Taylor Hilton Wilding Todd Fisher Burton Warner.

Question like that aren't the only annoyance these days. So are questions like: Does Elizabeth Taylor mind trading Hollywood limousines for campaign buses? Does she miss her dressing room when she stops at filling stations for a quick change? Does she long for champagne and caviar instead of rubber chicken?

"If you're doing something you believe in, you don't complain about it. I'm enjoying it," Mrs. Warner said with exasperation during an hour-long interview at John Warner campaign headquarters. Her eyes were shaded because they were irritated by a long, black errant eyelash. Besides, she told a photographer, she didn't have her eye makeup on.

"Do I miss the glamorous life of a movie star? No way. Not remotely. Anyone who thinks making a movie is a picnic is out of their minds," she said. Pounding the political trail can't be much of a picnic either. Last year too many enthusiastic handshakers eventually popped a blood vessel in her hand.

But she insists:

"Campaigning is fascinating. You meet so many people and can get to know them on a one-to-one basis. Of course there are similarities between show business and politics. In both you're exposed to the public and don't have much private life. But the major difference is that show biz is fiction, fantasy. You're speaking someone else's words. Politics is real. You are expresing your own ideas on real life issues."

Nonetheless, she tries to avoid issues while campaigning.

"I am not John's surrogate. He can speak for himself," she said. "It's John's vote that is going to count in the Senate. My opinion of issues is of very little importance. That's why I stay out of them as much as I can."

Last year, when former Secretary of the Navy John Warner was "testing the waters" for a political career, Mrs. Warner, contrary to her husband, was a supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Now, she said, "I would never publicly go against him."

"There are a lot of women that don't want equal rights. I didn't know that last year," said Mrs. Warner. "I don't think the amendment is specific enough. I think it should be rephrased."

"I feel that I am equal. But I have been much more fortunate than a lot of women; I have not had to fight for my status as a woman. I worked for it. Women that want equal rights should do the same thing."

She twisted her fingers, bare except for the ruby-red, diamond-white and sapphire-blue wedding ring John Warner slipped on her finger when they were married two years ago at sunset on his farm, Atoka. Mrs. Warner calls it "the most beautiful place I've ever seen in my life."

The gentleman farmer's wife was her latest role until Republican candidate Richard Obenshain's death in a plane crash last August. Warner was chosen to replace him. Elizabeth Taylor has been a millonaire's wife, a showman's wife, a singer's wife, an actor's wife. Now, some say, she longs for a new life role whose stage will be the White House.

"No way would I like to see John as president of the United States. No way. No way," Mrs. Warner insisted. "John, since he was a little boy, has wanted to be senator from Virginia, and that's it. I am not politically ambitious. We care about people and if there's anything we can do to help people, that's why we are in politics."

Elizabeth Taylor is 46 now. Her hair, jet black without a trace of grey, is pulled back with a headband over a smooth, freckled brow. Wearing a billowing deep purple blouse over white slacks, she looked comfortably plump, but pretty too.

"I don't think about the way I look," said Mrs. Warner. She paused and smiled. "Obviously."

She said she doesn't worry about getting old. Although she once made a movie about a woman who had a face lift, and another Republican politician's wife, Betty Ford, recently announced her face lift to the world, Mrs. Warner said she would not consider having one.

Hoffa Knew Secrets, New Book Suggests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Organized crime chiefs ordered Jimmy Hoffa slain because they were afraid he might betray long-standing secrets of the CIA-underworld plots to kill Fidel Castro, the author of a new book suggests.

Hoffa disappeared without a trace on July 30, 1975, while a Senate committee was holding closed-door hearings on the CIA's recruitment of underworld figures to assassinate the Cuban leader in the early 1960s.

In his book "The Hoffa Wars," scheduled for publication this week, author Dan Moldea said six weeks before Hoffa's disappearance, Chicago mob leader Sam Giancana — also linked to the Castro plots — was murdered.

Moldea said Charles Crimaldi, a mobster contract killer who became an informant and was termed "absolutely reliable" by federal investigators, claimed both men were killed for the same reason — an attempt to prevent the CIA-mob link from being discovered. Hoffa, the informant claimed, was the original liaison between the mob and the CIA.

Moldea, 28, who spent four years interviewing Hoffa associates and writing the book, said the Teamster leader's contact with the underworld began in 1941 when he sought mob help to stop raids by a rival union on his Detroit local.

The book also suggests underworld figures wanted Hoffa dead because their status quo with the union would be disrupted if he regained the union presidency, which he gave up to get a commutation from a prison term he was serving for jury tampering and misuse of union funds.

The author recounts a Teamster-turned-informant's testimony that Hoffa once considered plans for assassinating his arch-enemy, Robert Kennedy, who led a government investigation of the Teamsters, but eventually dropped the plans.

And Moldea claims there is "solid evidence" that Hoffa once discussed plans with subordinates to murder John F. Kennedy, but admits suggestions of a connection between the union leader and the president's actual assassination are "highly speculative."

The book theorizes it was Anthony Provenzano, a New Jersey Teamster official and reputed Mafia figure, who got the contract to murder Hoffa from Russell Bufalino, another crime boss.

The book said after Hoffa was slain, his body was stuffed in a 55-gallon drum and taken in a Gateway Transportation Co. truck to an unknown destination, according to a government informant.

Moldea, who now lives in Washington, said he decided to write about the Teamsters when some cargo exploded while he was driving a truck several years ago, and eight Teamsters leaped out of their trucks to help him.

CRIME BEATS INFLATION

Despite an increase in violent crimes, serious crime in the U.S. declined 4% in 1977, according to an FBI report recently released. Property crimes were down 5%.

Treatment May Make Transplants Safer

CHICAGO (AP) — Dr. Thomas Starzl says a treatment he has developed could make human organ transplants much safer by reducing the need for dangerously large doses of rejection-fighting drugs.

The treatment calls for draining white blood cells and antibodies that fight foreign elements in the body, including transplanted organs, says Starzl, chief of surgery at the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver.

The treatment could advance Starzl's belief that surgery is becoming more an art of replacement than repair.

In the past, transplant patients frequently have been bombarded with drugs to fight off rejection. Such drugs often cause dangerous side effects when given in large doses, and many persons have not been given organ transplants because the side effects would kill them.

"The large reservoir of untransplantable renal (kidney) patients which have come to plague every major (transplant) center would become accessible to treatment," said Starzl, the first surgeon to successfully transplant a liver.

Starzl, who has performed about two-thirds of the world's liver transplants, said the treatment — called thoracic duct drainage — can "greatly enhance" liver, pancreas, heart and lung transplants.

He said the treatment does not eliminate the need for the rejection-fighting drugs, but allows doctors to reduce substantially the amounts given.

While the white blood cells are being drained, the patient receives injections of other antibodies to protect the body against infection.

Starzl, who presented a paper on the treatment to a world association of transplant specialists last month in Rome, said he first tried the treatment when he "faced seemingly insurmountable ... problems with one of our liver recipients." The drugs had made the patient vulnerable to an uncontrollable infection.

Starzl placed the patient on the new treatment for 71 days, beginning two months after his transplant, and the patient fully recovered.

Starzl said he has now used the treatment on a total of nine liver transplant patients. He said 20 kidney transplant patients also received the treatment and more of the kidneys remained functional than would have been expected under the old method.

TedKennedy Gears Up For Race

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK

Washington Window

If memory serves, the trick was positioning. Lane, a master at his trade, had an instinct for placing himself so that he could be where the football was going in time to stop a completion or better yet, intercept.

So it is in presidential politics, especially early in the game. For some potential candidates, it probably is more important to be in a position to run for president than to be actually campaigning.

An example is Sen. Edward Kennedy. It would be foolish for him to be openly running for the Democratic presidential nomination at this time.

Even when Jimmy Carter's poll ratings were sinking toward record lows, it would have been very risky for Kennedy or any other Democrat to be publicly seeking 1980 delegates. Camp David and the response of the polls is an example of why; presidents have enormous opportunities to recoup popularity losses.

So Kennedy is doing the right thing for a potential Democratic candidate. He is being seen at such places as the national governors' conference and the New Hampshire state Democratic convention; he is talking about issues that have the broadest reach, such as national health insurance.

Without committing himself to any course that could not be explained as the ordinary activities of a nationally-known lawmaker and committed party loyalist, Kennedy clearly is encouraging speculation that he is considering a campaign for the presidential nomination in 1980.

This keeps him on the high on the list kept by Morris Udall's wry invention, "The Great Mentioner" of potential presidential candidates. It also keeps some aspirants who would not want to compete with Kennedy out of the field and, without actually soliciting for help, it turns up prospective supporters across the country.

Kennedy can continue this position for most of 1979 if he wishes. Unlike political unknowns, such as former Gov. Carter of Georgia in 1975, Kennedy does not have to try to make an impact on the public consciousness. He already is there.

Nor does Kennedy have to worry too much about campaign organization for the time being.

One of the reasons it was always assumed that no one could successfully knock off an incumbent president was the myth that the man in office always would have the party professionals and machinery ready to bat down anyone audacious enough to challenge him.

Eugene McCarthy in 1968 and Ronald Reagan in 1976 demonstrated the fallacy of that assumption. If there is competition for the presidential nomination, the regular party organizations are not much help to the incumbent.

If the president has opposition approaching 1980, he will have to put a campaign organization into operation just like his challengers. And if Kennedy is one of those challengers, he will have an organization and a good one. Jimmy Carter can count on it.

Panel Unable To Decide On Effects Of Beryllium

ATLANTA (AP) — A panel of seven medical experts meeting here has offered no concrete answers to the question of whether the metal beryllium causes cancer, but the experts do agree that such a relationship is possible.

Beryllium is a metal used in the computer and aerospace industries. Based on the medical records of workers in Reading, Pa., researchers concluded in 1977 that there was a high incidence of cancer among workers who had been exposed to the metal.

Joseph Califano Jr., secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare asked the panel of experts to discuss the evidence in an effort to "solve any uncertainties that exist." The group met at the national Center for Disease Control here.

Some members of the panel, including University of North Carolina professor Dr. Carl W. Shy, said there are reasons to doubt the connection between beryllium and cancer.

But Shy added that the Reading study included enough evidence to show "a potential relationship between excess amounts of beryllium and cancer."

Another panelist, Dr. David P. Discher agreed.

"Reflecting on that in terms of the weight of evidence, I come to the conclusion ... that it (beryllium) is a carcinogen in man. How much evidence is the question," said Discher, who is with the Department of Industrial and Environmental Medicine at the San Jose Medical Clinic.

The results of the panel's discussions will be summarized and presented to Califano within two weeks, said William H. Foege, director of the Center for Disease Control.

He said the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration will use the panel's findings to help formulate safety standards for the use of beryllium.

OSHA began hearings last year on proposed standards to limit the exposure of workers to beryllium.

DJ Not Planning On Duplicating Feat

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A Tulsa disc jockey with a gift of gab said Monday his 250-hour marathon broadcast "was a great experience, but one I'm not anxious to repeat."

Robert Wilkinson, 30, of KWEN radio, said he was broadcasting almost continuously from Sept. 28 until late Sunday afternoon. He hopes his effort will be certified as the new world record, surpassing the 229-hour record listed in the Guiness Book of Records.

Wilkinson said he was allowed five-minute rest breaks every hour. He said he skipped some rest breaks and took naps when he'd saved enough five-minute periods. He estimates he slept 11 hours during the ordeal.

"Buy Something Original This Year"

Rader Emerges Winner In Church Power Struggle

By LINDA DEUTSCH

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Four months after the ouster of TV evangelist Garner Ted Armstrong, the troubled Worldwide Church of God has a new crown prince — a formerly Jewish lawyer-accountant who could inherit the rich religious empire of Armstrong's father.

Stanley Rader, smooth-talking adviser to ailing 86-year-old church patriarch Herbert Armstrong, has emerged as victor in an apparent power struggle that pitted father against son, with Rader in the middle.

The upshot was Garner Ted's "disfellowship" last June. Rader compares the father-son schism of Herbert and Garner Ted to the biblical story of David and Absalom:

"The son wanted to destroy everything the father had built."

Now, the mustachioed 48-year-old Rader occupies Garner Ted's former office, with its views of snowcapped mountains and the church's Ambassador College complex. He travels the world with Herbert and, by his own account, has taken Garner Ted's place in his father's heart.

"Mr. Armstrong has said publicly very often that I am a son in whom he is well pleased," says Rader. "The only other one he ever said that about was Ted Armstrong."

Rader, a convert, gave up a lucrative law practice in his rise to become general counsel and treasurer of the 75,000-member church.

In a four-hour interview, he lifted the secrecy surrounding the church, speaking of Garner Ted's alleged transgressions, his own conversion, the church's wealth and his role in its future.

He wore a pure white suit and dark glasses. There was only one question he declined to answer — the exact amount of his salary.

"My salary was always a little more than Ted Armstrong's," Rader says. It is known that the son received $85,000 a year plus such perquisites as private planes and trips abroad.

The Worldwide Church's lavish spending on its leaders has been a sore point with its ministers and members. Some have quit in protest.

"We're quite wealthy," Rader says. Last year, the fundamentalist sect grossed $68 million; this year it will be closer to $78 million.

Yet, the church spends more than it gets — last year $1.2 million more — but Rader insists it goes to the church's prime mission, to spread the word of a second coming of Christ.

Most money comes in tithes from members and "co-workers," non-members who contribute, as chess star Bobby Fischer did.

Outsiders are often shocked by the level of tithing — 10 per cent of a member's yearly income for the church, 10 per cent for religious festivals and another tenth every third year for the church's poor.

"Members can join the church without giving any money," says Rader. "But they are taught scripturally it would be a sin not to tithe. It would be stealing from God.

"What we generally find," he adds, "is that when they stop giving they stop believing."

Rader met Herbert Armstrong in 1956 when he came to California from White Plains, N.Y., as a young lawyer and began handling church legal matters. But he did not become a church member for nearly 20 years.

"My background was Jewish, but I was not in any religion," Rader says. "It wasn't something I thought about much."

By the middle 1960s he had become close with Armstrong, he recalls. "Mr. Armstrong asked me to give up all my commitments and devote my talent, energy and time to him. In 1969 I said yes."

At that time Garner Ted was the church's star, a radio and TV evangelist who drew millions in contributions. He was handsome, silken-voiced and the same age as Stanley Rader.

Two years later, there were murmurings of adultery and gambling involving Garner Ted. Rader says Herbert secretly cast his son out of the church in 1971 but then allowed him to return.

The "problems" never went away, however, and by this year excommunication was the only solution, Rader says. "We have never admitted the adultery allegation that was widespread. But his condition was contrary to the requirements of a minister."

Worse, Rader claims, when Herbert suffered a heart attack in 1977, Garner Ted tried to seize control by claiming his father was senile and dying. "I think he believed his father was so sick and so weak he would never return to an active role," says Rader.

"Where Ted made his crucial mistake," he says, "was he tried to run me down in the eyes of his father and that tipped his hand."

Now, Rader is in the church, baptized "in a bathtub at the Mandarin Hotel in Hong Kong" while on a world tour. And Garner Ted is gone, seeking converts for his own Church of God International and, he says, glad to be out of his father's "fear-ridden organization."

"Mr. Rader is very clearly the victor in what was a power struggle," Garner Ted says. "He moved into my office, into my desk; his secretary sits where mine sat."

On Rader's desk is a portrait of the grandfatherly Herbert Armstrong with the inscription: "I was shooting the moon on you."

Many — including Garner Ted — think Herbert eventually will tap Rader as his successor, but Rader shrugs this off. "I don't feel that is my calling. I don't want to be a minister," Rader says, then adds: "Of course, several letters have come in recently telling me that Christ was not a minister. He was a carpenter."

Although Rader leaves the impression that a divine summons might change his mind, he insists he only wants to be the chief lieutenant. He is sure any new church leader would want him as right-hand man.

"Let me put it this way," he says. "There are no bodies buried. "But if there were, I would know where they are buried."

NEW CROWN PRINCE — Stanley Rader, general counsel and treasurer of the 75,000-member Worldwide Church of God, is shown standing in front of a fountain at Ambassador College in Pasadena, Calif. Parents Protest Proposed Regulations

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Parents of children in local private schools are writing letters and signing petitions to protest racial quotas and other regulations the government has proposed.

Under an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) proposal, private schools would lose their tax-exempt status unless they take "affirmative action" to recruit more minority students and teachers.

Gayle Cunningham and Barbara Craig, leaders of the protest here, said the regulations would force many schools in Lubbock and across the nation to close — due to the loss of their tax exemptions, or the expense of complying with the IRS rules.

Another organizer, Ron Bailey, said the regulations also would "set a dangerous precedent. This could grow to be a monster that eats away at our individual rights and freedom."

Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. Bailey, parents of students at All Saints School, have distributed to private schools throughout the city form letters opposing the IRS regulations. They said hundreds of parents have signed the letters and mailed them, along with personal comments, to the government agency.

IRS is taking public comments on its proposed rules through Oct. 23.

The All Saints parents also are circulating petitions against the regulations, to be presented to various federal officials. On Wednesday alone, about 80 parents who have children in the Episcopal school signed the petitions.

Meanwhile, Bailey, who has a daughter attending St. Elizabeth-St. John Neumann School, is attempting to organize a citywide meeting of private-school parents to discuss the matter.

He said he hopes to arrange the session for early next week.

The protest against the IRS proposals has been endorsed by the boards of a number of Lubbock private schools, said Betty Snyder, principal of All Saints.

"I very seldom get mad," Bailey said. "But when I read about these regulations, I said, 'No way. The government has gone a step too far."

The proposed regulations would automatically revoke the tax-exempt status of predominantly white private schools founded or expanded during times of public-school desegregation.

Such private schools could regain their exemptions only by vigorously recruiting minority students and teachers, granting scholarships "on a significant basis" to minorities, using a "minority-oriented curriculum," and taking other "affirmative" steps to meet racial quotas.

Lubbock private-school officials and parents say their schools already have non-discriminatory, open-enrollment policies. A few even offer financial aid to minority or low-income families, and almost all private schools here have at least some minority students.

"We've always been integrated — our roster reads like the United Nations," said Kara Armstrong, a member of the All Saints board. "We are not an exclusive or 'snobbish' school."

She fears that the IRS regulations would result in a financial hardship — because of the scholarships to minority students and the salaries needed to draw minority teachers — that "ultimately would close us down."

Mrs. Snyder contends that the regulations "open the door" for the government to dictate private-school curriculum. Added Mrs. Craig: "Once they have their foot in the door, they'll be telling us what to teach."

"To me, the most alarming element is that we (private schools) would be presumed to be guilty of racial discrimination until we prove ourselves innocent" by adopting affirmative action programs, Bailey said.

Also, he said the regulations "someday could be applied to our churches. That may sound far-fetched, but no more so than applying them to Christian schools."

Dallas Chosen As Site Of UPI Computer Center

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — United Press International announced today it will locate a new $2 million worldwide communicaaions computer and research and development center in Dallas.

Rod Beaton, UPI president, said final agreement had been reached on the Texas site and the construction and purchase of a 27,000-square-foot building, the first of its kind for a news service.

Work on the facility is expected to start immediately.

The building will be located on slightly more than two acres in the Metropolitan Business Park just north of Dallas and will house a new generation of computers, which will triple UPI's present capacity.

Beaton made the announcement at a meeting of the UPI Newspaper Advisory Board, on the eve of the 19th annual UPI Conference of Editors and Publishers (EDICON) at the Del Coronado Hotel.

Concerned about the reliability of electric power in the New York area, UPI studied nearly a dozen alternate locations for the computerized hub of its worldwide communications system before choosing Dallas. The new location breaks from the historic practice of centering news service communication facilities in New York.

The new center, to be known as the UPI Technical Systems Center, will have battery and generator power backups, as well as sprinkler and Halon fire control systems to guard against disruption of UPI's news distribution.

In addition to the computer complex and research and development laboratory, the center will house UPI's manufacturing facility for photo equipment, a central video terminal maintenance shop and the news and newspicture headquarters for the southwestern United States.

About 100 persons will be assigned to the Dallas center which UPI is purchasing from the developer, Midway Development Co. Inc.

Darrell Fahler of Dallas is the architect of the center which UPI plans to occupy next May.

UPI will install two 90-80 Univac computers, valued at $6.5 million, in the center. They will replace existing computers located in New York, and electronically handle news copy from UPI's 200 bureaus around the world, as well as the distribution of copy to the news company's subscribers.

"With the continuing growth in communications technology, we felt a modern expanded facility located away from New York was the logical step in UPI's commitment to newspapers and broadcast stations," Beaton said.

"This new Dallas center will serve our needs well into the time in which the transmission of news will largely be by satellite. Future expansion is anticipated in the building design.

"We also will be able to concentrate our research and development work in all forms of communications, both for news and newspictures, and the Texas location will better serve the maintenance of the more than 400 video terminals in our bureaus, as well as other maintenance requirements.

Reservoir System May Aid Cotton Producers

A compartmented rainwater reservoir system reducing evaporative and seepage losses may provide a solution for West Texas' cotton producers who face water shortages.

Dr. C. Brent Cluff, Water Resources Center, University of Arizonia, told delegates at an international conference at Texas Tech University this week that this system can be easily adapted to the flat terrain of West Texas.

"The playa lakes around Lubbock will increase the cost-efficiency of the system because it is more easily installed than in some other areas," Cluff said in his presentation at the International Arid Lands Conference on Plant Resources.

He proposed use of salt-treated catchment slopes to increase available rain water by one-half. The salt treatment will last for about 10 years and prevent the growth of weeds in the catchment area.

Cluff has developed a computerized system capable of predicting the exact size of the compartments and furrows needed, depending upon the among of rainfall, crop variety and size of the farm.

"It is an economical system of water storage and one that can increase yields significantly in areas where dryland farming is practiced," Cluff explained.

Seepage control is achieved without any extra effort as a minimal amount of salt from the catchment slopes flows into the reservoirs and seals them. A reduction of area-to-water-volume ratio decreases evaporation losses by reducing both temperature and exposure of the water to the atmosphere.

The University of Arizonia professor urged West Texas farmers to contact him to find out more details of the system. Write Dr. C. Brent Cluff, Water Resources Research Center,. University of Arizona, Tuscon, Ariz. 85721.

The international conference was sponsored by Texas Tech's International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) and the Department of Biological Sciences, with financial support from several federal agencies and professional scientific associations.

More than 5,000 U.S. soldiers and their leader, Gen. George S. Patton, are buried in Luxembourg and Belgium. Their graves are carefully tended by the grateful citizens whom they liberated from the Nazis.

Texas Joins Pilot Program Designed To Save Energy

By STEVE DAUGHERTY

OELWEIN, Iowa (AP) — An eight-state pilot project designed to save energy in storing corn was announced Wednesday by Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

The program would place new crop high moisture corn under federal loan programs.

"It should benefit producers and consumers alike," he said. "I'm very excited about the project and while it's just a test, we expect it to be extended next year to more counties, or perhaps the entire United States."

Bergland said the program is two-pronged. He said it would save energy by allowing farmers to store high-moisture corn to use as animal feed. That would allow farmers to get into their fields earlier, eliminate the need the dry corn and the end product would be more nutritious.

The program is also designed as a test to see if the idea will work. If it does, the entire USDA system might be changed, Bergland said.

There are 25 counties in eight states in the pilot program. The states are Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas and Wisconsin.

Bergland — expected to announce set aside plans next week — made the announcement during an appearance OCCO Feeds with Rep. Mike Blouin, D-Iowa, in a campaign stop.

The pilot program represents the end result of a request from Blouin one year ago.

Bergland praised Blouin for instigating the program.

At present, farmers using high-moisture corn find themselves ineligible for federal loan programs. Much of the corn grown in the United States is used to feed livestock.

High moisture corn is more nutritious to animals.

The new program calls for storage in "oxygen limited facilities," loans on acid-treated corn and loans for solar energy drying units.

The acid treatment is used to prevent spoilage.

Bergland was questioned by farmers and reports on USA policies. He told them it has been announced the U.S. exports of feed grain had reached a new high of $27 billion.

He said that represents a new high in both value and tonnage. Bergland said he would meet Thursday with representatives of the Soviet Union on continued agricultural trade with that nation.

A Thursday night meeting is also planned for close scrutiny of the new crop estimates released Thursday as he prepares feed grain set aside program plans. Bergland will turn the set aside recommendation over to President Carter Saturday or Monday. The public announcement is expected shortly thereafter.

When pressed about the need for a greater 1979 feed grain set aside, Bergland said, "Everything rides on our exports.

Farm Demonstrations Began 75 Years Ago

TERRELL (UPI) — In 1903 when his neighbors were not quick to adopt new ideas, cotton farmer Walter C. Porter stood up in a crowded community meeting and volunteered 70 acres of land for a demonstration plot contingent upon a guarantee his income would not be reduced.

When local businessmen agreed to place $450 in a bank to cover any loss the Porter family might suffer, Seaman A. Knapp, special agent with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, initiated the historic project, which today celebrates its diamond anniversary in ceremonies attracting 600 national, state and foreign leaders.

On a farm planted to cotton and corn for 28 years without commercial fertilizer and without rotating crops, Knapp applied his idea that farmers would adopt new farming techniques if he could just "demonstrate results they could see with their own eyes on their own farms."

The 70-acre field on the Porter farm was divided into plots to demonstrate use of more intensive tillage, commercial fertilizer and crop rotation. Despite boll weevil damage to cotton in 1903 being the worst in 25 years, Knapp was able to demonstrate good results on Porter's test plot.

On one plot he produced 166 pounds per acre by planting and farming it the way Porter always had grown cotton.

On a second plot he produced 326 pounds per acre with intensive cultivation, application of 200 pounds of commercial fertilizer per acre and planting the cotton with 18 inches between the rows.

On a third plot, he prodced 414 pounds per acre using the same cultivation techniques but with the added benefit of growing the cotton in a field which had been planted to nitrogen-producing cowpeas the previous year.

Porter and his neighbors watched the plot all summer and were persuaded by the demonstration. As a result of the increased production from his 70-acre volunteer plot, Porter was paid $700 more than he normally would have received from the local cotton gin.

From that beginning on the Porter farm, Knapp's work spread quickly as private and local support provided funds for 33 "agents" to work with farmers in 1904 and 7,000 farmers planted "demonstration plots" on their farms so their neighbors could see the results.

Congress became interested in the technique and passed the Smith-Lever Act in 1914, establishing the Cooperative Extension Service which today has a staff of 16,000 professionals serving the public from approximately 3,150 county offices.

The 800-acre Porter farm is now operated by Walter's sons and grandson and still is visited regularly by county agents.

Approval Granted For Grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States, anxious to sell off huge supplies of wheat and corn, has given the Soviet Union approval to increase its American grain purchases.

However, the Soviets gave no immediate indication Wednesday whether they planned any grain buys above the minimum they are required to make under a purchase agreement now in its third year.

That pact calls for Russia to buy a minimum of six million metric tons of U.S. wheat and corn annually.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn prices rose slightly while soybeans and other grains were mixed Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Quiet trading on the Jewish holiday, plus some hesitancy in anticipation of the afternoon release of a major government crop report, yielded only small price changes.

Some buying in corn came from books squaring ahead of the report, which is expected to show record corn and soybean crop sizes only slightly smaller than predicted last month.

POLE PRODUCERS — Joe and Glenith Gray stand before their shop in Sargentville, Maine, directly across the street from the flagpole factory in which they used to work. The two produced the world's three largest fiberglass flagpoles back in the winter of 1974-75, when the nation was cranking up for the Bicentennial. (AP Laserphoto)

Smalltown Residents Make Big Flagpoles

By JULES LOH

SARGENTVILLE, Maine (AP) — Joe and Glenith Grey suffer visitors to their little town with the patience of those accustomed to living with greatness.

"That little white clapboard shed across the street," Glenith said. "That's where we made it. May I offer you a beer?"

What Glenith and Joe made in the little shed, which is shuttered now for the winter, was the world's largest fiberglass flagpole. In fact, the world's THREE largest fiberglass flagpoles.

That might not interest Guinness, and apparently doesn't, but to the 673 residents of Sargentville it was about the most exciting event since they built the Deer Isle bridge.

"Somehow we were able to get a big truck in here, somehow managed to get it turned around, and hauled the poles off in sections," Joe explained. "Each pole was in three sections. Took us all winter to make the things."

That would be the winter of 1974-75, when the nation was cranking up for the Bicentennial. The poles, for the record, are 100 feet tall, five feet thick at the bottom tapering to an inch at the top.

They now reside in Texas, which is not surprising. Would the Big-D Civic Center settle for less? What is surprising is the place of their origin.

Sargentville is not what you would call an industrial center.

"As you can see, it's just a little village," Glenith said. "I give the population as 673 because that's how many registered voters we have. I don't suppose more than 300 of us live here in the wintertime. Winters can be pretty brutal out here."

Getting out here, out on a coastal peninsula known locally as Eggemoggin Reach, is a navigating adventure along spidery blacktop roads blessedly uninterrupted by much civilization or many directional signs, an ideal place for, say, a boys' camp, not, for heaven's sake, a flagpole factory.

"Well, Camp Robin Hood is my first love," said F.B. Littlefield, who owns the flagpole factory. "I've operated the camp for 50 years. The flagpole factory came much later.

"I got in the flag business pretty much by accident.

"Back in 1939 I was in Cambridge, Mass., casting around for a likely business to start. I checked the yellow pages and discovered there were very few flagmakers.

"It has been a good business, steady. I ship to all parts of the country. If flags are a measure of patriotism, I would say it hasn't changed much in 40 years. The Bicentennial was an exception.

"Nine years ago I decided to make flagpoles as well. I didn't need a big shop or many employees. Joe and Glenith Gray were among the first.

"I put the shop in Sargentville simply because my family has been there 212 years. I wasn't expecting it to become famous, just a nice local business."

Famous it has become, though, and not just because of those Texas-size poles. It has another distinction.

"Six or seven years ago," Littlefield recalled, "I was asked to make a pole somebody could sit on for a flagpole-sitting record. It was some foolishness involving a radio station.

"I built a 25-foot pole with a six-foot-wide octagonal house on top. The sitter was named Gridge, I believe, from somewhere around Danvers.

"Never learned how he made out."

Judge Orders $400 Million To Islands

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge has ordered the federal government to repay $400 million in customs duties and excise taxes to the U.S. Virgin Islands, which have an annual budget half that size.

U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch ruled Wednesday that the Caribbean territory is entitled to about $250 million in taxes that the federal treasury has collected on gasoline refined in the islands and shipped to the mainland in the last 12 years.

And he ordered the government to turn over $150 million in customs duties on petroleum products transported from the islands to the mainland.

On Tuesday, Gasch had ruled that the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico was entitled to $105 million in gasoline excise taxes collected by the federal government over the last four years.

Lawyers for the federal government had contended that the Virgin Islands should be allowed to keep only those customs duties on goods imported into the territory.

But Gasch rejected this argument, saying "it would be surprising if Congress intended that only the insubstantial amount of duties collected on imports into the Virgin Islands" be sent to the territory's treasury.

The Virgin Islands have been negotiating a settlement with the Justice Department on the claims, and Peter Hiebert, legislative aide to the territory's congressional delegate, Ron DeLugo, said Gasch's ruling is expected to "strengthen our hand" in the bargaining.

Offenders Ticketed Under New Ohio Law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Persons charged with minor crimes may be given tickets instead of being hauled off to jail, under a new state law aimed at cutting the time police spend making arrests.

Crimes covered by the statute, which takes effect Oct. 25, include misdemeanors like loitering for prostitution, misconduct at an emergency, inhaling solvents, failure to obey an officer's directions and public gaming. Maximum penalty for the offenses is a $100 fine, and some offenders will be able to pay their fines without going to court. Use of the tickets is up to police, subject to court approval.

Hong Kong Airline Confirms 747 Option

HONG KONG (AP) — Cathay Pacific Airways has confirmed its option for the purchase of a second Boeing 747 and announced it has taken options with Boeing for another three 747-200bs.

Duncan Bluck, deputy chairman of the Swire group and managing director of the Hong Kong airline, said the board of directors confirmed its option for a second Boeing 747 for delivery in May 1980. Cathay is due to take delivery of its first 747 in July 1979.

Bluck said delivery of a third 747 has also been moved forward and, if confirmed, will now be delivered in September 1980.

Bluck said Cathay has taken options for another three 747-200b jets for delivery in March 1981, September 1981 and March 1982.

Assuming all options are confirmed, he said, the order for the 747s is worth in excess of $383 million.

Voters' Pocketbook Top Issue, Candidate Says

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The square-jawed Republican congressman from the Illinois prairie who wants to be president, Philip Crane, says American voters see their country's foreign policy like everything else — in terms of "me, here, now."

In other words, says Crane, the most important question for any individual is what impact an issue is likely to have on his or her personal life and, most especially, on the pocketbook.

Analysis

Americans may praise President Carter for achieving a Middle East summit agreement, he adds, but it isn't the sort of thing that will win votes while inflation remains the nation's most important problem.

"The viability of our economy is the No.1 issue, and it is intimately tied to national defense and our ability to play a strong leadership role in the world," Crane said in an interview.

"But even at the height of the Vietnam war, the war itself was never the main issue. Me, here, now — stick to that, and you will have the people's interest. Anything beyond our shores is an abstraction."

In a sense, it was an expression of the strategy Crane employs as he travels about the country, talking to businespeople, labor, students, retired persons and ethnic groups in pursuit of the Republican Party's 1980 presidential nomination.

This week, the 47-year-old lawmaker is embarking on another such trip, an 8,000-mile flying tour of the U.S. heartland and some Southern states where political conservatives like himself are seeking office at the local, state and national levels in the November elections.

Crane is a conservative ideologue, a former university history teacher and a writer of books presenting conservative views of the United States and the world.

The most recent was a lengthy condemnation of the Panama Canal treaties, which Crane opposed on grounds the documents would risk giving the Soviet Union eventual control over the waterway.

While his unsuccessful campaign against the canal treaties gave Crane some valuable national exposure, he has yet to be taken seriously as a presidential contender by many people except his own most dedicated followers.

Even so, his candidacy could pose tactical problems for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"Crane will make Reagan look like a moderate," said one of the Californian's campaign strategists. "If Crane stays in, Reagan could be forced into a position somewhat closer to the center."

While the Reagan followers don't believe Crane could defeat their candidate in a head-to-head race, there is concern that his youthful image could cause problems for Reagan, whose age — he will be 69 in 1980 — is certain to be an issue.

Crane says he is not making age an issue because he doesn't think it is important. Besides, his aides figure it will come up anyhow.

In Congress, Crane serves on committees that deal with government spending and the other "pocketbook issues" that he says are dearest to the hearts of voters. A keystone of his political philosophy is that there is too much government.

"Our institutions are working to deny individual fulfillment through confiscatory taxation and excessive regulation," he said in announcing his candidacy for president two months ago.

It is primarily in his other role, as chairman of the 300,000-member American Conservative Union, that Crane speaks on foreign policy, and his themes there are closely tied to U.S. security and military power.

Crane was featured in an ACU-produced television documentary condemning the Panama Canal treaties and in another dealing with the SALT negotiations. He says the United States must "continue to assume responsibility for free world leadership," and opposes all policies that tend toward a reduction or limitation of U.S. global influence.

Crane claims there is evidence already that he can be a credible presidential contender — 8,000 contributors who have, in all, furnished more than $100,000. That, aides said, "exceeds our expectations at this time."

THE WHITE HOUSE

President Escapes For Fishing Foray

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's secrecy-cloaked fishing expeditions may be taking him as far afield as southern Pennsylvania.

The White House, mindful of Carter's passion for privacy during weekend respites at Camp David, Md., won't say where he goes from there in search of fish.

But circumstantial evidence points to forays in both Maryland and nearby Pennsylvania.

Until last Friday, reporters were unaware the president was leaving Camp David unannounced to go fishing. On that occasion, however, a newsman saw Carter leave his Catoctin Mountain hideaway in a motorcade that included a Maryland state police cruiser.

Police from local jurisdictions normally participate in presidential motorcades in their area.

The next morning, after the White House press office had acknowledged that Carter had gone fishing for 2½ hours, reporters who went to Camp David to witness the president's helicopter departure for a festival at Elkins, W. Va., saw signs that seemed to point to a second fishing expedition.

At the camp gate were two unmarked Secret Service vehicles — the same ones used in Friday's motorcade — plus a Pennsylvania state police car.

This suspicion was reinforced minutes later when a government station wagon arrived at the gate. Its cargo area was loaded with fishing gear.

White House press secretary Jody Powell subsequently said Carter might indeed have gone fishing two days in a row. But where?

"The president never reveals his favorite fishing spots," said Powell.

Carter Fly Fishing

Angler Carter now is reported to be doing a good bit of fly fishing — something he did not do back home in Georgia, despite his devotion to the sport.

An informant said the president became proficient with a fly rod during three days of rafting down Idaho's Salmon River in August.

Motorcade Halted

Speaking of motorcades, Rosalynn Carter's highway travels during a current busy round of pre-election campaigning have not been as uneventful as her husband's.

One of her recent motorcades was halted when the lead car got a flat tire. And on three occasions in two days, she came to a stop for trains at grade crossings.

Today is Thursday, Oct. 12, the 285th day of 1978 with 80 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Saturn and Jupiter.

The evening sttars are Mars, Venus and Mercury.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

Elmer Sperry, American inventor and electrical engineer, was born Oct. 12, 1860.

On this day in history:

In 1492, Christopher Columbus discovered the New World known as "America." The first landing is believed to have been made in the Bahamas, southeast of what now is Florida.

In 1960, Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev removed one of his shoes and pounded on his desk with it during a speech before the United Nations General Assembly President Frederick Boland lost his Irish temper and split his gavel trying to restore order.

In 1973, President Nixon nominated House Minority Leader Gerald Ford for the vice presidency to replace Spiro Agnew who resigned two days earlier.

In 1976, swine flu inoculations were halted in nine states after three persons died shortly after taking the shots.

A thought for the day:

Texan Lashes Out At Incumbents

By TOM De COLA

FORT WORTH (AP) — Well, big government has gone and done it now—bureaucrats and politicians have made Eddie Chiles mad.

Chiles is chairman of the Western Company of North America, and he's the guy who buys televisison time to tell you that if you don't have an oil well, you should get one because you'll love doing business with the Western Company, an oilfield supply business.

But these days, he's putting a new message on about 280 radio stations in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana.

The message is simple. He wants you to vote, and if you don't like the representation you've been getting, he wants you to fire your representatives, be they federal, state or local.

"It's just over-frustration," Chiles said from his high-rise office. "Big government is destroying everything we've always loved and appreciated."

Chiles delivers his 60-second radio spots himself, and no one will ever mistake him for a professional announcer. Asked if he'd had any prior radio training, Chiles said, "No. Hell no. It scared me to death the first time."

The 68-year-old head of the $225 million-per-year company looks like the universal grandfather—white-haired and with an overall kindly countenance. But some excerpts from his scripts leave no doubt as to his position:

"I'm mad. I'm really mad," one script says. "I'm mad enough to scream from the top of our building. You bureaucrats stop pushing us around. We've had enough of your irresponsible government. You're over-taxing us. Way over-taxing us. Your reckless spending is ruining the country."

From another script: "I think every politician ... who doesn't tell us exactly how he stands on the vital issues should be fired. FIRE 'EM—They're nothing but tax-consumers."

Something a little more folksy? "We must put a fence between the hog and the trough. Politicians have to learn that they work for us. We don't work for them."

While Chiles delivers his message, a fife and drum theme plays in the background. It's a specially-commissioned piece of music, but it sounds quite a bit like the theme from the movie, "Patton."

The commercials are a production of Tyler adman Bill Finn "We started these with one station," Finn said, "but the reception was so good it grew. We'll continue 'em right up through Nov. 7 (election day.)"

Chiles has received about 200 letters from individuals praising the spots. One announcement that promised written evaluations of Congressmen and Senators by five diverse organizations prompted 2,000 requests for the material.

So far, the spots have cost the Western Company about $100,000 and Chiles said his directors went along with them 100 percent.

Although Chiles' announcements are non-partisan, he's registered as a Republican and the wall of his office sports a plaque from the Republican Party of Texas naming him a "key contributor."

He hasn't received any offers of monetary aid from like-minded business colleagues. "I don't need any financial help," he said.

Chiles founded the Western Company in 1939 at Seagraves. "I had the opportunity to start my own business and become a millionaire," he said. "And I'm proud of it."

Chiles said he's convinced the country "has gone a long way down the road toward socialism," but his politics are not extreme. The spots also inform listeners how to register and how to gain information about voting procedures. None of them recommends a candidate.

"I just hope we can do something about changing the direction we're traveling in," Chiles said.

He said he's been interested in politics since college days at the University of Oklahoma, but the commercials are his first mass-media venture.

Employees at his company all say the same thing: he's sincere in what he's doing. He said concern for his employees was probably the spur for his campaign. "They work harder, work faster and take home less, (due to inflation) Chiles said.

The walls of his office are filled with memorabilia, from a picture of his first office to sports-oriented items—autographed footballs from Oklahoma, two framed pat gin rummy hands and a picture of Ben Hogan swinging a golf club and bearing a personalized autograph from the sports immortal.

So far, there aren't any scalps of politicians "fired" by people who went along with Chiles' message. But then, it's not November yet, either.

CARTER TO KANSAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has announced plans for a campaign visit to Wichita, Kan., Oct. 21. The stop will precede a previously announced political appearance in Minnesota later that day. In Kansas, Carter will campaign for Democratic Senate candidate Bill Roy and gubernatorial candidate John Carlin.

China In Need Of Scientists

TOKYO (UPI) — China today is suffering from a crippling shortage of trained scientists and engineers as a result of Mao Tse-tung's cultural revolution that may slow its efforts to modernize for years to come.

"There are mountains of things we want to do, but in our country it is a question of lacking trained people," says Chou Pei-Yuan, vice-chairman of the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

Chou led a delegation of Chinese scientists to Japan in September to seek help in restoring China's disrupted system of scientific education.

He astonished his Japanese hosts by reporting that China had only somewhere between 300,000 and 400,000 trained scientific and engineering personnel. Japan alone has about 500,000, although its population is only one-ninth that of China's roughly 1 billion.

In public, the Chinese visitors don't discuss the reasons for the failure of the 29-year-old Communist government to train the technicians needed to modernize China's economy and military defenses.

In private, they tell the Japanese that scientific education was virtually shut down starting with the 1966 cultural revoluttion. Educational reforms by a now-disgraced radical faction known as the "Gang of Four," that included the wife of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, did further damage in the early 1970s.

"They have thrown away a whole generation of higher education," Edwin O. Reischauer, Harvard historian and former ambassador to Japan, remarked recently.

"Some people say that learning was delayed for 10 years," said President Ichiro Kato of Tokyo University, who toured China in late 1977. "Schools were run by revolutionary committees rather than academic administrators."

Chou said China now has embarked on a program to train 800,000 new scientists and engineers by 1985. He asked Japan to accept as many Chinese students as possible in its universities. There have been reports the Chinese have even sounded out the United States on taking as many as 10,000.

Mao had undisputed power in China until his death in September 1976, at the age of 82. His major interest was Communist ideology. Imitating and catching up with advanced Western countries in science and industry was not one of his high priorities.

In the 1966 cultural revolution, he turned Ctina's young radicals loose to bully and humiliate their elders in factories, universities and government offices.

Universities and scientific institutes were shut down for several years. Researchers in Westen science were branded "reactionaries" and "slavish followers of foreign things." When the schools reopened in the early 1970s, they were run by Communist politicians from the "Gang of Four" rather than academic administrators.

Standards were lowered to bring in more students from rural areas, whether they had the educational qualifications or not. Extrance examinations were abolished. Finally, all tests were terminated.

Chinese scientists have privately told Japanese that the quality of the graduates fell steeply. Many could not perform the jobs the universities supposedly had trained them to do.

All this ended with Mao's death in 1976. The so-called "pragmatic" faction of Premier Hua Kuo-Feng came to power. It is achievement-oriented, and now wants to make China a modern country by the end of the century.

In 1977, entrance exams, tests and grades were restored in the universities. The teachers were put back in charge. Bright young people denied a chance at higher education for up to 10 years got a chance to apply.

However, the schools could take in only a fraction of this backlog. For most, the chance to develop their talents perhaps has been lost for good.

Now Mao's successors face a long struggle to heal the country from its self-imposed brain drain.

American Businesses Seeking Arab Money

ATLANTA (AP) — Businessmen promoting a 3,000-pound breeding bull in the basement of an Atlanta hotel competed with American junk food franchisers, while a Canadian businessman extolled the virtues of a $100,000 drilling machine.

In each case, the sales pitch was directed at oil-rich Arab business and government officials in town for the "Petromarkets '79" conference.

More than 300 exhibitors were on hand for the five-day trade show, which began Monday. They are seeking a share of the billions of dollars the Arab world spends in the United States each year.

Enticing Arab shoppers were displays ranging from mundane machine tools to more exotic whirlpool baths, swimming pools and travel homes. One could also shop for a country estate or a land development project.

Food and agribusiness are among the fastest growing areas in U.S. trade to the Arab world, said Frank Lennon, a trade show official.

A LITTLE SNOWY BLEACHES LIKE A LOT OF CLOROX 2

The people who make Snowy—America's first non-chlorine bleach—have some rather interesting information for those people who now use Clorox 2.

Snowy costs less to use per wash, and still cleans just as effectively.

Amazingly enough, it actually takes over 87 ounces of Clorox 2 to bleach as many washes as effectively as one 40 ounce box of Snowy.

Critics Claim Oil Wells Damaging Texas Lakes

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas oil wells produce one third of the nation's oil, but also spew out increasingly large volumes of noxious brine that critics say is turning some West Texas lakes into death traps for migratory birds and contaminating underground water supplies in many areas.

The problem is graphically illustrated at a desolate salt lake three miles southwest of Frankel City in Andrews County, where the U.S. Interior Department contends oil companies are violating the Migratory Bird Treaty Act by failing to eliminate hazardous substances from oilfield wastes.

The Texas Railroad Commission — sole state agency with regulatory authority over petroleum producing operations — will hold a hearing Oct. 26 on the condition of Whalen Lake.

The 300-acre body of water is lined with an ugly black ring of oil sludge 2 to 4 inches thick, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials. Brine laced with oil and grease from 900 producing wells is dumped into the lake at the rate of 200,000 barrels a month.

Environmentalists, skeptical state officials will do anything, are considering filing suit to force a cleanup before the peak of the migratory season brings 500,000 to 1 million birds through West Texas.

Railroad Commission officials express doubts the "monstrous" clean-up job needed at the lake is worth preventing the deaths of a few hundred birds.

"The commission doesn't have any jurisdiction over birds," said Phillip R. Russell, director of RRC field operations. "The commission never had any idea that they were supposed to protect birds or wild oxen or billy goats."

Richard C. Endress of San Angelo, a special agent with the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Servie, took evidence of repeated bird kills at the lake to a federal grand jury last year.

"It's a classic problem," Endress said. "What is the value of a few migratory birds? Are they valuable enough to cause all these problems for the oil industry or energy production? I fall back on the law. The law says that it is."

The grand jury and federal prosecutors deferred action for the Railroad Commission to consider the situation.

The state agency held a hearing in April, 1977, and gave Whalen Corp of Dallas, a subsidiary of Triton Oil and Gas, and other oil companies dumping brine in the lake one year to clean up the problem.

Railroad Commission officials say conditions have improved in the past 18 months, but current tests indicate discharges into the lake still contain more than double the mount of oil and grease mixed in the brine that the state agency considers acceptable.

"We just told them the other day they were going to have to do better," Russell said.

The Railroad Commission, unlike other state agencies charged with pollution control, does not set specific standards for operators to meet in eliminating contaminants from waste discharges.

"It's against Texas Railroad Commission regulations to place hydrocarbons in open pits, it's a waste of natural resources. But it's being done," Endress said.

Russell, however, said "There's no real law on it (amount of hydrocarbons allowed in brine discharges). We have a sort of unwritten rule of 20 parts per million. It's acceptable to have 20 ppm oil and grease and that's just about as good as you can do.

"That much you can't even see. You've probably got that much (oil) in some of the water that you drink. To skim it any more than that would take forever. We really say no oil and grease, but 20 ppm is acceptable."

Russell said samples taken during a recent visit indicated the brine at two Whalen discharge points into the lake had 46.9 and 51.8 ppm oil and grease. Discharge from a Phillips Petroleum Co. pipeline was analyzed at 57.9 ppm oil and grease.

At last year's hearing, oil company experts reports on oil and grease content of brine discharged into Whalen ran as high as 115 ppm.

Discharge samples, however, do not indicate the oil and grease content in the lake where evaporation concentrates waste residues.

"After you put water in a playa lake for 10 years, even if it's only 1 ppm (oil and grease), it will probably accumulate somewhere. It won't go away. It won't disperse. That's what happened at Whalen Lake," Russell said.

Playa lakes, natural depressions in the ground that are drainage collection points for the surrounding countryside, have a high salt content ordinarily.

Industry experts reported the lake was six times as salty as sea water before the brine dumping began in 1967. Tests last year showed the lake was nine times as salty as the ocean.

Guard Investigates Fatal Boat Sinking

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Coast Guard is launching an inquiry to try and find out why the Lobsta I lobsterboat and its crew of five sank about 45 miles southeast of Montauk, N.Y.

One of the crewmen was Stephen Hoyt, son of Rosalynn Carter's press secretary, Mary Finch Hoyt. Lt. William J. Morani Jr. of the Marine Safety Office in Providence said Monday it is standard procedure for the Coast Guard to look into any "major marine disaster." The hearings start Thursday. A search after the capsized trawler was spotted Sept. 23 turned up no evidence of the crew.

Investment Analyst Says Banks Will Remain Strong This Year

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) — It's possible to put money into a bank without ever opening an account.

Like most other businesses, banks raise capital by selling stock. And like other stocks, bank securities are the objects of guessing games by brokers.

What kind of banks do Wall Street insiders currently think are good investments?

According to John J. Mason, an analyst for Loeb Rhodes, Hornblower Co., there are two answers to that question — the "economic cycle approach" and the "geographic-demographic approach."

"Our purchase profile uses both approaches, generally emphasizing the former when dealing with the larger New York City, the Chicago and the big California banks; and using the latter when trying to choose among the numerous regionals in attractive areas," says Mason.

As the economic cycle approaches the early stages of recovery, according to Mason, "it is generally advisable to stick to larger banks, particularly those with a strong retail posture, since most U.S. economic recoveries have been led by consumer spending in which the retail-oriented banks are best able to participate."

As the cycle progresses, Mason says, "a switch to the large New York and Chicago wholesale banks is appropriate."

Mason favors the smaller retail banks because in the long run he believes they will outperform the huge banks — although the giants may be more susceptible to quick, short-term gains. And he likes the wholesale banks — which do much of their business with smaller banks rather than with consumers — because they can be a bargain late in an economic cycle as wholesale loan demand falls off.

Analysis

Using Mason's other system — the geographic-demographic approach — investors should look for areas of the country "which are enjoying faster population and personal income growth and whose competitive conditions are also favorable. We then try to pick the better situated banks, particularly if prices are not too far out of line with banks in slower-growing areas.

"Thus our regional picks are heavily weighted toward the Sun Belt, from Florida through Texas and on to Arizona, where both local economics and competitive conditions are relatively favorable."

Mason says he expects banks in general to remain strong this year, particularly domestically, because of strong loan demand and higher interest rates. He expects those interest rates to stop rising soon but not to drop by much, and he looks for a continuing of the current gradual slowdown in the growth of the economy.

"In short, while the economic recovery is already old in terms of months, in our opinion it still does not show signs of maturity in character," Mason says.

Education Chief To Teach Class

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top education official hasn't taught a course in more than 15 years, but he's returning to the classroom to teach his own employees how to speak and write more clearly.

U.S. Education Commissioner Ernest L. Boyer, a speech pathologist before becoming a college administrator, has been a frequent critic of bureaucratic jargon. And he says he plans to use materials that pass through his office as case studies in class.

"It's my feeling that we use words very often to cloud rather than to reveal, and very often when we don't have an idea clearly in mind we use a smokescreen of words to conceal that fact, which, of course, it doesn't," Boyer said.

He will teach a course in communication at the new Horace Mann Learning Center, an institute within the U.S. Office of Education where employees may continue their own education.

"When I was asked, it was sort of a startling thought that I might teach again," the former president of the State University of New York said Tuesday. "But the area that I feel both is an urgent one and one that I feel comfortable with is the improvement of language, so I'll be teaching our own employees.

"I intend to use it not just as a theoretical course but as an occasion to talk about the work of this office," Boyer said. "I get so much stuff that I find is inadequate — written memos or even proposed regulations — and this will provide splendid material to talk about what I think are the strengths and weaknesses of communication."

The commissioner said he hopes a cross-section of employees, ranging from senior administrators to secretaries, clerks and typists, will sign up for the class, which is expected to begin in late fall.

Various professions, including education, have tended to develop their own terminology to give themselves "a kind of special status that made them professionally unique," he said. "I think sometimes professions are embarrassed if they discover they can be understood by anyone except those in the club."

During the interview the commissioner caught himself once when he referred to lawyers using "all sorts of curious circumlocutions" and changed that to say "all sorts of obscure ways of saying things."

In a speech some months ago, Boyer complained that in his office, "regulations and guidelines are gnarled and contorted and warped by legalese. Buzzwords fly about with abandon. Acronyms proliferate faster than cockroaches."

But his pet peeve is adding "ize" to the end of a word.

Once, he recalls, "I rejected a report and said I think it has to be rewritten so it can be understood, and the person said to me, 'Oh, you mean we're to laymanize the language.'

"I said, 'Yeah, I guess that's what I mean.'"

Asked if he plans to grade his new students, Boyer said, "Absolutely. You can't have education without evaluation ... but I don't think they flunk out of OE (the Office of Education)."

Texas International Chalks Up Record

HOUSTON (UPI) — Record traffic for September and the first nine months of 1978 for Texas International Airlines is being attributed to the popularity of its discount fares and to the strength of the economy of the market it serves.

TIA said Tuesday its September revenue passenger miles represented an increase for the 25th consecutive month and were 29.8 percent higher than September 1977.

During September, the percentage of occupied seats was 55.6, a 1 point increase from a year earlier. TIA said it carried 286,565 passengers during September. The 9-month average of occupied seats on all flights was 60.2 percent.

The world population of green sea turtles, estimated at 600,000, was once 60 million in the Caribbean alone.

Women Pilot Trainees Making History At Reese

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Cockpits now and combat later —that's the attitude of our women entering the student pilot ranks at Reese Air Force Base today.

The lives of the families they may someday have will have to be changed by the roles they assume as pilots for the Air Force. Husbands will have to follow them, they say.

But, for now, each of the longer-haired new students at Reese is just one of the students assigned bachelor officers quarters like any other newcomer at Reese.

When the four young misses making history with Class 79-08 were in high school, there was no such dream as women in jet cockpits for the Air Force. So they feel that their future with combat will take care of itself in time, too.

"We receive as many benefits from this country as men, and have as much right to defend it," 2nd Lt. Cathy A. Caseman of Atlanta, Ga., who shed none of her femininity when she donned a green flight suit, emphasized at a Reese press conference Wednesday.

The four students, the first women student pilots at Reese, met the press for a special interview allowed for the milestone in undergraduate pilot training at Reese. Sixteen women pilots already are operating within the Air Force, from filling instructor pilot slots to flying the KC-135 Stratotanker.

First Lt. Beverly L. Esber of Tullahoma, Tenn., who would like to see all phases of the Air Force open to women, looks to the F-15 Eagle, the latest air superiority fighter, as her dream assignment.

The fringes of combat already were in the future for 1st Lt. Jane Karen Robinette of Costa Mesa, Calif., who wears the wings of an air evacuation nurse. She went into nursing because she couldn't fly, but the air-evac wings will will have to take a backseat now to the silver ones she is looking forward to on Sept. 21, 1979. Any Air Force plane is what she wants to fly, but first the Marine Corps brat wants to master the supersonic T-38 at Reese.

Rounding out the quartet is an Air Force brat; 2nd Lt. Linda L. Martin whose father, retired Lt. Col. Jerry Martin, won his wings at Reese in 1956 when his daughter was barely a toddler.

She would like to fly something light and fast so her globe-trotting will continue, this time with her in the Air Force cockpit not her father.

The other three entered the UPT ranks from active duty posts within the Air Force, while Lt. Martin came straight from ROTC ranks at Washington State University.

All went into the UPT program for one reason — a strong personal desire to fly, desires channeled elsewhere until the fetters fell off and women were accepted into pilot training.

"I want to do well for myself first," Lt. Esber answered to a query about pioneering the way for women in a new field.

For Reese's new students, getting the pilot training slots was the end result of a lifelong wish, a setting of personal goals and trying for them.

Lt. Esber has been aiming for the skies since the third grade when John Glenn made it into space. She comes to Reese after more than two years as an intelligence officer with the 474th Tactical Fighter Wing and the Tactical Fighter Weapons Center at Nellis AFB, Nev.

Working as an F-16 system program officer at Wright-Patterson AFB, Lt. Caseman was in touch with a former Reese commander, Brig. Gen. Edward Mendel, while working with the development of new weapons systems for the Air Force. The F-16 always will be her dream plane, but she would like an instructor pilot slot for a first assignment.

Since a pilot slot is more critical than most Air Force assignments, the new Reese residents are positive that any spouse lurking in the future will have to follow them on assignments.

Lt. Martin already has a tacit agreement with an Air Force member aiming for the law end of service to follow her where her jet takes her, and Lt. Caseman has a tentative "wait and see" understanding with a navigator "ready to go back into aircraft" from ground assignments.

There is no immediate marriage looming at graduation for Lt. Robinette who is confident that any future decision on her part would settle into agreeable lines since "you don't compromise a part of yourself."

Male members of their class on hand for the press conference had no frowns for the situation though one expressed a private desire not ever to have a woman instructor pilot.

In opening the session, Col. Charles E. Bishop, commander of the 64th Flying Training Wing, noted that it was about time that Reese got into lady pilot training business along with other Air lady pilot training business along with other Air Training Command bases.

The 50-week intensive training program will begin today with 40 students in Class 79-08 which will graduate Reese's first women pilots.

George Bush Lists Notable Contributors

party leaders, the candidates' reports show.

Bush's large expenses include $82,000 for media production, $11,672 for filming, $8,810 to an Austin advertising agency, $2,043 in expenses for the Washington, D.C., fund raiser, $6,739 for political consultants and $4,150 for surveys.

Hance's largest expense was $12,931 to political consultant Otice Green for consulting fees and advertising.

Hance had little to say about Bush's war chest except "I'm amazed that he's got three times the amount of money we have."

But the 35-year-old state senator said his opponents in three past races "always had more money." Hance said he believes "good organization and a lot of people working for you" can help neutralize the effect of a big-money campaign.

Bush said he was "very pleased" with the financial response his candidacy has received and noted more than 3,000 people and organizations have contributed to his campaign since it began.

He said he sees nothing wrong with receiving so many out-of-district contributions and said people aren't going to decide who to vote for based on who contributed to which campaign.

"People know I'm not being bought by friends and people interested in the health of the country," he said.

Bush isn't worried about his opponent's lack of money either. "Hance will have plenty of money to run a good campaign," he said.

Montford

from grant revenues, is for $489,654.

It provides the addition of a chief administrator to handle administrative details while Montford concentrates on prosecution and increases staff salaries.

Commissioner Alton Brazell, a leader in fiscal conservatism on the court, said he would vote for delaying action on the request until all budget amendment proposals are in after the first of the year.

"We can't do anything on next year's budget until next year," Brazell said. "This is the third or fourth request we have in to affect next year's budget.

"My position is that we will probably have to wait until the first of the year to see all the requests and see how much money we have, put priorities on them and see which ones we can pay for.

"We have six more in the tax office, a secretary for the J.P. (Charles Smith) and up to four here, so we're getting into some pretty sizable inroads in next year's budget.

"We need to get them all in and spend some time with the auditor. I'm not sure how much reserve we really have in next year's budget."

Montford said he will ask for a maximum of four investigators but wants a minimum of two to handle business crimes, which includes bad checks, and juvenile cases.

Commissioner Edgar Chance said he is withholding comment until he sees the request and talks with Montford.

"He hasn't said anything to me about it," Chance said. "I would hate to make a comment on it until I see what he has in mind."

Early Football Exhibit On Display At Tech

Football fever struck The Museum of Texas Tech University this week with a new exhibit, "When King Football Was Just a Prince."

The atmosphere and excitement of football is depicted from the early 1920s through the '40s, with some of the exhibit being on loan from the national Football Hall of Fame. Other items come from Texas Tech ex-students and former football players.

A "worried coach" sits on the bench visiting with a football player who is in the process of getting dressed.

Mrs. Betty Mills, curator of costumes and textiles at The Museum, explained that the protective gear that fits under the uniform is as interesting as the outer wear "and we wanted our visitors to see all of the uniform."

Spectators include a boy of the '20s and a little girl in a 1930s wool suit; a man in a striped suit and bearskin coat and a flapper in a red crepe dress and fox scarf of the 1920s; a woman in a wine velvet dress, matching hat and hand knit sweater from the 1930s; and a 1940s homecoming graduate wearing her tailored suit, fox jacket and the inevitable chrysanthemum.

On hand is a reporter-photographer, and the exhibit even has a concession stand with a replica of Cretor's "sensational popcorn" wagon. Pennants in the background represent a variety of colleges and high schools.

"We expect this exhibit to appeal to people from the ages of 50 to 95," Mills said. "It is filled with nostalgia-creating items, but it also is a reflection of the impact football has on culture and social customs."

The exhibit will be on display through the 1978-79 football season.

Vance Visits With Khaled

CLEVELAND (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said he didn't discuss the Camp David accord between Egypt and Israel with convalescing Saudi Arabia's King Khaled, but did talk about the cease fire in Lebanon with Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan.

Vance, who spent about two hours here Wednesday before flying back to Washington, said he brought only "the president's best wishes" to the ailing monarch.

"I thought the king looked very well," Vance said. "I was pleased at how he looked and his good spirits."

Vance, who said the Saudi Arabians have played a constructive role in Lebanon, said he talked with the prince about "what we can do to ensure that a cease fire is maintained and strengthened. All of us want to do everything in our power to see that the cease fire is not broken."

The 64-year-old Khaled underwent a double coronary bypass operation Oct. 3 at the Cleveland Clinic Hospital.

The king, reported by hospital officials in satisfactory condition, is considered a pivotal figure in gaining Arab support for Middle East peace efforts. Khaled and his retinue have been under tight security protection here.

PLOT LOTS LACKING

WENDELL, Mass. (AP) — This small Franklin County town has run out of cemetery space because of the growth in population, which has more than doubled inthe past two years. To solve the problem, the Cemetery Commission has announced plans to purchase between five and ten acres next to the town's Locks Village cemetery.

Command Performance
..."one of the hottest franchise deals going"
Wall Street Journal 5/8/78
We are the fastest growing company in a nine billion dollar industry with operations across the United States and Canada. Our business is all cash with no receivables or perishables—and virtually no inventory—a proven hedge against inflation. Unusually high pre-tax return on investment, with immediate cash flow and long term capital gains potential. We provide a complete turn-key operation—from site selection to hiring and training staff—and then support our Licensees with essential services on a continuing basis. Since only 8 to 10 hours weekly supervision is necessary, many of our Licensees retain their present employment.
Our Licensees must submit impeccable references—both business and character. A total investment of about $80,000 per location is required. Some financing is available for qualified individuals.

Armenian Plight Proves Maxim

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The plight of Beirut's Armenian community, sandwiched between Syrian and Christian guns in Lebanon's latest bloodletting, proves once again the validity of the maxim that innocent civilians are war's greatest victims.

Beirut's tightly-knit Armenian community, members of an automonous Christian church, remained neutral in the fighting between Syrian troops and Maronite Christian militiamen. But Armenian neighborhoods in predominantly-Maronite East Beirut were among the hardest hit.

About 90 killed and more than 500 wounded were reported in the Armenian community in the 10 days of Syrian-Christian conflict before the cease-fire last Saturday. Some of the Armenians openly blamed the Christian militiamen as well as the Syrians.

Because one Armenian enclave, in the Bourj Hamoud district, is built on marshland, its residents did not have the basement shelters that afforded some protection in other parts of East Beirut.

"We had to organize quickly and find interior shelters on the ground floor," said a spokesman for the Armenian Tashnag Party, which runs the district. "We put most of our top-floor residents in schools, which are more strongly constructed here than other buildings."

The northeastern suburb of Dora also was hard hit. "Fires were so bad that some people were incinerated in their cars as they were trying to escape," said John Sarkissian, a local grocer.

Tashnag Party officials, anxious not to make relations with the militias any worse, played down claims of damage by militia guns. But other Armenians were less tactful.

Suspicions between the two Christian communities stem from the Armenians' refusal to join the Maronites in the 1975-76 civil war against the leftist Lebanese Moslems and their Palestinian allies.

The Armenians defend their neutrality, saying they lost too many sons in the previous civil war in 1958. Armenians are particularly sensitive to survival since the Ottoman Turks massacred an estimated 1.5 million Armenians between 1894 and 1915.

Maronite extremists freely admit their anger. They say the Armenians enjoyed the fruits of the Maronite domination of Lebanon for nearly 60 years and they should have fought to preserve them.

"While we were spilling blood, they were making money," said one spokesman for former President Camille Chamoun's National Liberal Party.

The Armenians deny they profited from the civil war. They claim they suffered more than 500 fatalities and provided medical care, rescue services and shelter for both Christians and Moslems.

With their mercantile tradition and emphasis on higher education, the Armenians are an influential class in Lebanese society, but they have almost no power in the Maronite-Moslem political structure.

The civil war, the violence since the armistice and the bitterness between the two Christian communities has driven an estimated 50,000 of Lebanon's 200,000 Armenians to emigrate. They went to the United States, Canada, Western Europe, Australia and neighboring Syrian.

CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE — Khoren I of the Orthodox Armenian Church of Cilicia, center, and his Coajutor Karekine II, formerly of New York City, right, pray for dead and wounded congregation members at 40 Saints Church in East Beirut's Bourj Hamoud district. Cool Front Moving Into Area

A-J News Services

The difference between daylight and dark, besides the obvious dissimilarity, will be about 40 degrees today in Lubbock.

With a Pacific cool front moving in late this afternoon or tonight, weathermen predict a high today in the mid-80s and a low tonight in the mid-40s.

No rain is forecast, however.

A south to southwest wind of 10 to 15 mph will shift and become northerly at 5 to 10 mph tonight, the National Weather Service said.

The front had edged into the northern tip of the Panhandle shortly after daybreak today.

Fair skies are predicted for the Lubbock vicinity through Friday.

The high Friday should be near 70.

Texas weather was clear and pleasant during the night with cool pockets of air settled over the high valleys of Southwest Texas and warm temperatures elsewhere.

Overnight low readings included 56 at Lubbock, 47 at Dalhart, 70 at Fort Worth, 68 at Brownsville and 61 at Wichita Falls.

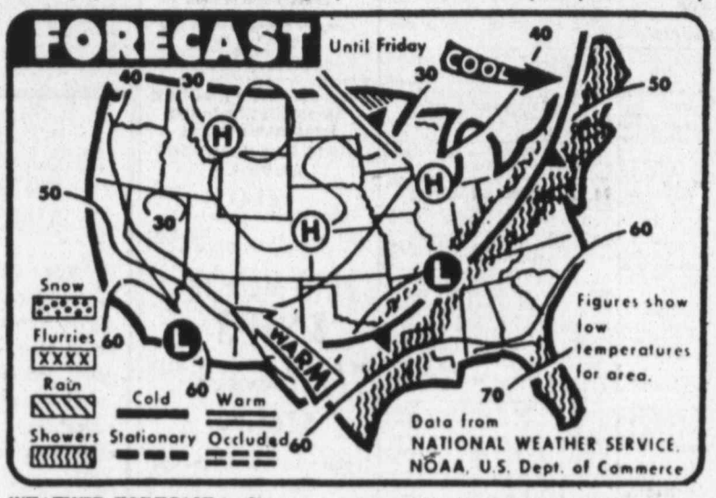

Thunderstorms soaked southeastern Florida and northern Missouri today, while milder rainshowers were scattered from the Great Lakes into the upper Ohio Valley.

Patches of fog enveloped portions of the Gulf Coast and a travelers advisory was posted in southwestern Louisiana.

Skies were partly cloudy over the rest of the nation and temperatures were near normal for this time of year.

Temperatures around the nation ranged from 35 in St. Johnsbury, Vt., to 78 in Blythe, Calif.

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday morning, from the western Gulf to the Northeast and for Florida. Warm temperatures are forecast for the Southwest but most of the country is expected to be seasonably mild. (AP Laserphoto Map)

LCC's Governors Slate Meeting For Saturday

The kickoff event for Lubbock Christian College's Board of Governors is scheduled for 7:30 Saturday.

The Board of Governors is a new support group established by a resolution fo the LCC Board of Trustees in April of this year. It will be composed of citizens from business, industry, church and civic affairs.

School officials said members will be men and women who are committed to the principles upon which the college is founded: spiritual development, high ethical values, character training, highest academic excellence, free enterprise and the American way of life.

Those who become members of the Board of Governors, by invitation only, will contribute $1,000 annually for the support of the teaching program at Lubbock Christian College. Each new member will be nominated by a member of the Board of Governors or one of the LCC trustees.

Privileges of the Board of Governors include access to college resources, such as athletic facilities and library, invitations to campus cultural events, free subscriptions to college publications, priority privileges for tickets to athletic events and invitations to special events held exclusively for the Board of Governors.

All members of the Board of Governors selected before March, 1979, will be designated as "Founding Members" and their names will be inscribed on a bronze plaque placed in the Administration Building.

Each year in March, a Governors Dinner will be held with an outstanding speaker and program, officials said. The goal is 300 members by March, 1979, 600 by March, 1980 and 1,000 overall.

Former Lubbock Mayor Roy Bass will be guest speaker Saturday night and his topic will be "The Value of Private, Church-Related Colleges."

Others on the program include Larry Roberts, LCC's vice president for development, who will give the welcome; Dr. Kyle Bartee, a trustee from Lubbock who will give a report on the Board of Governors; Lennis Baker, chairman of the Board of Trustees who will introduce the speaker, and Don Williams, associate professor of speech at LCC, who will serve as master of ceremonies.

Chess Masters Adjourn 31st Series Game

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi today adjourned the 31st game in their world chess championship match. Karpov sealed his 47th move, to be played when the game resumes Friday.

Each had a rook and six pawns left, similar to an earlier game that ended in a draw.

"I think Viktor has a winning chance," said British grandmaster Raymond Keene, the challenger's chief representative.

Karpov, from the Soviet Union, leads the match 5-4. The first to win six games is champion and takes home $350,000. The loser collects $200,000.

Dr. Max Euwe, former world champion and outgoing president of the International Chess Federation, agreed with Keene, saying Korchnoi, a Soviet defector, could have "a slight advantage and a chance to win the game."

Karpov led 5-2 but Korchnoi roared back with successive wins.

The Texas Education Agency announced her selection this week.

Austin Firm's Study Project Gets Underway

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Austin engineering firm chosen to head a 42-month, $8 million study of the economic future of the six-state High Plains region, which draws water from the Ogallala Aquifer, is making plans to begin its study.

Camp, Dresser and McKee, Inc., was awarded a $3,225,000 contract by the U.S. Department of Commerce for its effort as the general contractor in the study.

"Current plans are to have a detailed plan of study put together by Dec. 15," said Jean Williams of CDM.

Miss Williams says a meeting of representatives from CDM; the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Department of Commerce and others involved in the study was planned today at the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

Another $2 million will go to fund state activities, with $775,000 going to the Corps of Engineers.

Two other Austin firms, S. A. Garza Engineers, Inc., and William F. Guyton and Associates, are subcontractors for CDM. Also involved are the firms of Black & Veatch, which will carry out energy studies, and Arthur D. Little, Inc., which is to perform ecomonic studies according to Miss Williams.

Miss Williams sees the work of the general contractor as "the key to the success of the study," since that will involve bringing together the work of the six states and the subcontractors.

The other five state involved with Texas in the study are Colorado, New Mexico, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

The Department of Commerce notes that the High Plains area is "a major contributor to the agri-business economy of the broader region," and is a principal ranching and farming area.

Water Development Board Chairman A.L. Black of Friona, Texas' representative on the High Plains Study Council, was expected to attend today's meeting.

Tech Prof Joins Advisory Staff To Mideast

Prof. Lawrence W. Garvin, head of the Division of Architecture at Texas Tech University, has been selected as one of four U.S. academic experts to advise King Faisal University of Saudi Arabia on curriculum evaluation and development.

Garvin will visit the Riyadh campus of the Saudi Arabian university Oct. 20 to Nov. 5 on a trip sponsored by the U.S.-Saudi Arabian Joint Commission on Economic Cooperation.

He will be accompanied by Dr. James Bond Hensen, professor of veterinary medicine, Washington State University; Dr. Anthony F. Vuturo, associate dean of medicine, University of Arizona; and Dr. Gerald M. Burke, associate academic vice president, New Mexico State University.

The group has been selected from member-universities of the Consortium for International Development (CID). Texas Tech, through its International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS), is a member of CID. Garvin's participation is being administered through ICASALS.

The Texas Tech architecture professor will evaluate the present status of the King Faisal University curriculum and make recommendations for future planning in the division of architecture.

The rector of the Saudi Arabian university, Dr. Muhammad Al-Kahtani, visited the U.S. early this summer to discuss the project with U.S. government officials.

King Faisal University is a young institution seeking to develop its programs in agriculture, medicine, veterinary medicine and architecture.

Garvin is associate dean for architecture in Texas Tech's College of Engineering. Engineering Dean John R. Bradford said he expected the assignment to have broad benefits.

"The international experience, which Garvin will receive during his trip, will be of value of Texas Tech and its future development in international affairs," he explained.

Brown Officials Say Press On Way Out

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Brown University Press, a scholarly enterprise for 46 years, has had a deficit of $50,000 a year for six years and might be phased out, officials say.

Maurice Glicksman, provost and dean of the faculty, said Wednesday the press has only three projects, all scheduled for publication next year.

The press has published only one new work this year.

Healthy, Sick Babies Cared For At Clinic

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in a series of articles dealing with agencies supported by the United Way of Lubbock. Except for officials of the United Way agencies involved, names used are fictitious to protect the identities of those served. However, the stories reflect actual case histories here.)

For Mrs. Lynn Sanders her first trip to the Well Baby Clinic wasn't a crisis situation. Her 6-week-old daughter, Becky, was well and happy.

For Mrs. Sanders the visit was a routine checkup at that stage of the child's life. Like many of the other mothers who go to the Lubbock Well Baby Clinic, open since 1939, Mrs. Sanders was concerned more with preventive medicine, making sure her baby would stay well and happy. Now, five years and two children later, Mrs. Sanders still depends on the Well Baby Clinic for the care and health of her children.

The Lubbock Well Baby Clinic, a United Way Agency, will receive $99,140, its sole support, from the United Way's 1979 goal of $1,682,369.

Mrs. Sanders did have some problems, however, when her youngest child was only 4 months old. "I brought my baby over to the Well Baby Clinic. The nurse checked her and said she had a double beat in her heart. We took her to the doctor and found she had a hole in her heart. After that time I was really pleased with the Well Baby Clinic. My daughter will have to have an operation before she is 6, if the hole doesn't close, but it doesn't seem to bother her now. She does require some special attention, though."

Mrs. Sanders also has utilized many of the other services offered by the Well Baby Clinic. She said her oldest daughter is anemic and that she must take her for regular checkups. Too, Mrs. Sanders has taken classes in nutrition, learning to make healthy meals and snacks for her entire family. The Well Baby Clinic offers an immunization program of which Mrs. Sanders has taken advantage. The clinic keeps permanent records of each child's vaccinations and keeps them up to date.

According to clinic's director, Mrs. Sue Belew, the purpose of the clinic is "to promote good health in infants and children from birth to age 5 and also to serve as an immunization clinic." Mrs. Belew said the clinic provides counseling, immunizations, physicians' exams, a USDA-funded nutrition program offering formula and other supplemental foods rich in vitamins that are sometimes lacking in a child's or mother's diet and referrals for infants and children who need further medical or social services.

The staff of eight, including six nurses, had during the month of July an average of 116 clients daily and a total of 2300 for the month. Nurses at the clinic also made 500 to 600 home visits.

A physician volunteers his time one day per week at the clinic, beginning at 6:15 a.m. Thursday, and two Texas Tech University Medical School faculty and residents visit the clinic on two mornings per week.

The clinic also deals with the problems of the high risk mother and child, such as a very young mother or a child with a cleft palate, according to Mrs. Belew. The clinic also provides counseling for mothers with child-rearing problems, as in the case of a young mother or a mother who does not accept her new role in life.

The Lubbock Well Baby Clinic's services are free to the public. The clinic is among 34 United Way agencies.

Judge Dismisses Suit

U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward Wednesday ordered the dismissal of a suit against county officials brought by relatives of Severo Garza Jr., who claimed their rights were abridged because no autopsy was ever done on Garza's body.

The judge declared that although statutes authorize autopsies to be ordered by justices of the peace in the public interest, no citizen has a civil right to have an autopsy performed.

"This simply comes down to the fact that no relief can be granted under civil rights (provisions)," Woodward stated.

After hearing testimony put on by plaintiffs during the one-day federal court trial, Woodward noted that plaintiffs did not exhaust efforts to contract privately for an autopsy.

He also noted that any citizen could contract with a physician privately for an autopsy, but that, of course, the physician would be free to accept or decline the request.

Testimony in the hearing indicated that Garza's relatives, after being turned down on an autopsy request by Dr. Richard Keffler, a local pathologist, did not attempt to contact any other pathologist.

The suit was filed against members of Commissioners Court at the time Garza died, and against Keffler and Physicians Pathology Service. The dismissal was ordered in regard to all defendants.

Defense attorneys Don Hunt and Alton Griffin successfully argued there had been no violation of state or federal laws or of constitutional provisions.

Plaintiff attorney John Simpson argued that the Garza case was the only one of its type in which no autopsy was performed and said Keffler's refusal to perform the service upon the private request of the family was linked to a dispute with county commissioners.

The body of Garza, 31, was found Dec. 13, 1976, stuffed in the trunk of his automobile in a Slaton wrecking yard.

Little Change In Prices On Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were little changed today as the market absorbed the news of a prime rate increase by the nation's third largest bank.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had climbed 9.79 poins Wednesday to its first close above 900 in almost a month, was off .35 at 901.07 at noontime today.

Gainers held a very slight lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

As trading began today, traders were faced with the news that Chase Manhattan Bank of New York had raised its prime lending rate from 9¾ to 10 percent.

That marked the first time since the 1974-75 recession that the basic rate on blue chip loans had reached the two-digit level.

Analysts had attributed Wednesday's rally to strong third-quarter earnings reports from such leading companies as Eastman Kodak and NCR.

After chalking up solid gains Wednesday, Kodak shares slipped back ¾ to 64⅝ and NCR was off ⅝ at 66¾ in active trading today.

Brokers were watching the market's behavior closely with the Dow in the 900-910 range, where its last rally bogged down in early September.

The NYSE's composite index lost .04 to 59.25. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .32 to 172.33.

Volume on the Big Board accelerated to 14.04 million shares as of noontime from 8.07 million at the same point on Wednesday.

Rep. Byron Dies While Jogging

SHARPSBURG, Md. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Goodloe E. Byron, member of a Maryland Democratic political dynasty and considered one of the best athletes in Congress, died of a heart attack while jogging. He was 49 and was the second congressman in two days to die.

Byron would have been opposed in the Nov. 7 general election by Melvin Perkins, 55, a perennial candidate who got the Republican nomination because party leaders had not bothered to put forward a candidate of their own in last month's primary.

Perkins was released Wednesday from the Baltimore County Jail, where he spent 10 days charged with the assault and battery of a woman bus driver.

He was characterized in this week's issue of Newsweek magazine as a "skid row candidate," and had been given virtually no chance of defeating Byron.

The Democratic state central committee was expected to discuss at a meeting tonight the selection of a new candidate for the ballot.

Byron, a veteran of six Boston Marathons, had jogged 12½ miles of a planned 15-mile outling along the Potomac River when he was stricken Wednesday. Brenton Ayer, an aide who was with the congressman at the time said Byron had slowed down for a while, but resumed jogging just before he stumbled and collapsed.

Byron, represented Maryland's 6th Congressional District, which earlier had been represented by his father, William D. Byron, and his mother, Katharine. He lived in Frederick with his wife and three children.

Byron began his political career in 1962, when he was elected to the Maryland House of Delegates.

GSA Plans Changes For Handicapped

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amid the bad news about fraud and kickbacks, the General Services Administration says it has some good news for handicapped persons.

The scandal-scarred agency has announced all 2,100 of its government-owned buildings nationwide will be made accessible to handicapped people by the end of October 1979.

The agency that serves as the federal government's landlord, business manager and supplier, also reports that the 7,500 other buildings in which the GSA leases space will be converted to easy use by the crippled and the blind as new leases are negotiated.

The $25 million program to be completed by the end of the current fiscal year will cover 1,300 major "retrofit" projects to make every GSA-controlled building accessible to the handicapped in all essential respects, officials said.

The work includes lowering panels on elevators and equipping them with Braille markings, altering rest rooms, installing ramps, making alterations to some doors and lowering water fountains and telephones on buildings ranging from the sprawling Pentagon near Washington to tiny stations along the border with Mexico.

"The architectural barriers removal program brings many handicapped persons through the front door for the first time," said GSA Administrator Jay Solomon, who ordered the 10-year-old program accelerated in May 1977, in a statement.

Solomon also ordered the current sweeping investigation of fraud and kickbacks within that big agency that so far has resulted in 18 indictments and five guilty pleas. More are expected as investigators look into the operations of the agency that has a $5 billion a year budget.

Commenting on the program to help handicapped persons, Solomon said, "It will give them peace of mind to know they can go to any GSA-controlled federal building in the country, enter that building through the front door, operate an elevator, use a restroom, drink water at a water fountain and have access to a public telephone — things not always easy, or in some cases possible, before."

Solomon predicts the government program will start a trend that will be followed by private landlords throughout the country.

Dredged Up Bombs Prove To Be Duds

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Several World War II bombs dredged up from the past have proved to be duds. The military devices were found on two barges used in a beach replenishment project.

The devices, used for bombing practice, originally may have been dredged up three years ago in New York harbor, where the dredges were last used, an Army Engineers spokesman said.

Consultant Urges Expo '92 Study

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Could Columbus stage an exposition that would do justice to the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America?

Maybe, says a consultant, if it hurries.

More than 50 business leaders were told Monday by King F. Cole, who guided Seattle's "Expo '74" and became an exposition consultant, to study with caution the prospects for an "Expo '92," or something akin to that for the year 1992. He also told them to look more at results than dollars and to develop all the friendships they can because they will be needed to make a go of such a project.

Cole said a successful exposition is one that breaks even or loses only a few dollars.

And he said there are far more failures than successes among cities that consider such projects.

Cole envisions 1992 as "a maximum force year," with the western hemisphere focusing on the quincentennial theme and the world entering a time of contemplation over the approaching conclusion of the 20th century and anticipation for the start of the 21st century.

Cole didn't project costs in his four-month, $14,000 study but said costs for similar work have grown from $25 million for the Seattle exposition in 1974 to about $100 million for one planned at Knoxville, Tenn., in 1982.

And he suggested the west bank of the Scioto River near downtown Columbus as a suitable site. The 150 acres he has in mind includes Central High School, Veterans Memorial Auditorium, which he said needs renovation, and ancient Ohio Penitentiary, which no one can decide how best to use. The area is bisected by Amtrak railroad tracks that, he suggested, could offer a transportation advantage.

Factors favoring Columbus include time to plan, a good trade area, the basics for adequate transportation, leadership and name identification, he said.

Against this, he said, is a lack of a broad concensus among the community's leadership in favor of such a project, an approved site and lack of accommodations.

Childless Couples Need Help, Official Reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Family planning clinics that concentrate on helping women avoid unwanted pregnancies should also aid couples having trouble conceiving a child, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's new family planning chief feels.

A bill now before Congress to extend the government's $200 million family planning program would make infertility a target for the first time, notes Dr. Irvin W. Cushner.

Cushner took office last month as HEW's deputy assistant secretary for population affairs. The former and medical professor brings to the post a concept of "reproductive health" that sees three types of people in need of family planning services:

—Those who want a child and need health advice during pregnancy.

—Those who do not want a child.

—The estimated 1 million or more American couples who want a child, but have fertility problems.

Cushner, 54, was chairman of the board of directors of the Alan Guttmacher Institute — the research and policy arm of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America — when HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. tapped him for the post.

Cushner helped draft a Maryland law legalizing abortion a decade ago. Califano is personally opposed to abortion.

Cushner said in an interview that he does not feel the differences in their views precludes holding his present job of developing and coordinating HEW's family planning policy, programs and research.

"My reproductive health concept says loudly and clearly that abortion is only a part of a broader health picture," he said. "I'm a team player. Policy gets made at the top. If I'm asked my views, I'll state them ... but that doesn't interfere with my carrying out the law."

The family planning act, known as Title X, specifically prohibits using these funds to pay for abortion. Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., has said he will offer amendments to bar money for any clinic or hospital that performs abortions or refers women elsewhere for an abortion.

Dodgers Enjoy Ride With Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Young Bob Welch turned Mr. October into a pumpkin, tricking Reggie Jackson and treating the Los Angeles Dodgers to a cozy two-game lead as the 75th World Series jets here for Game 3 Friday night.

The Dodgers' pulsating 4-3 triumph Wednesday night gave them a 2-0 edge, and only five teams in history have come back from that kind of hole to win the best-of-seven Series.

To a man, the Yankees think they can rise to the occasion. They hand the third-game ball to left-hander Ron Guidry, the best pitcher in baseball this year, and they know they have overcome worse adversity before.

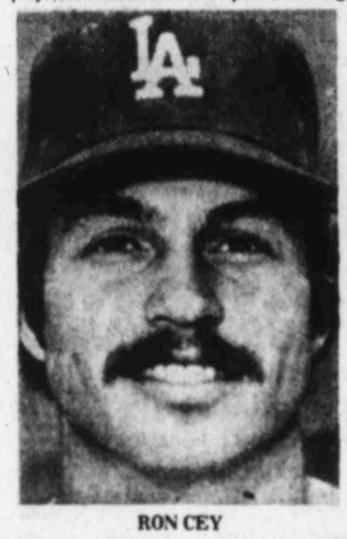

"I know where we're at," said Guidry, 25-3 in the regular season, plus a victory over Kansas City in the American League playoffs. "We've been against it before. We had to come back from 14 games out and then beat Boston and win a playoff (against Kansas City.)

"We've been down all year and fought back," said third baseman Graig Nettles, the main culprit in the Yanks' slew of missed opportunities in the heart-breaking second-game loss. "This is nothing new for us."

Right-hander Don Sutton, 2-0 in previous World Series decisions and 15-11 this season, admits he doesn't have Guidry's dominating power, but "on most game days I give a pretty good accounting of myself."

For the defending champion Yanks to regain the winning touch, they need a typical Guidry effort and some hitting from somebody besides Jackson. With starters Chris Chambliss, Mickey Rivers and Willie Randolph sidelined with injuries in Game 2, the burden falls heavier on Nettles.

The Yankee third baseman came through in the field, with two spectacular plays, but fell short at the plate, striking out feebly three times and leaving four New York runners on base, three of whom were in scoring position.

RON CEY

"Those two dives (on his fielding gems) on the cement infield really took it out of me," said the Yanks' leading home run hitter in the regular season who is 1-for-8 in the Series. "I've never had dives like that wear me out so much.

"I lost all my energy. I felt like I got hit by a truck. This freeway here isn't even listed on the map."

Jackson knocked in all three Yankee runs, and had a chance for more October heroics with two out and two on in the ninth.

Rookie Welch had just retired his first batter, Thurman Munson, when Jackson, the home run hero of last year's Series, strode to the plate. Welch fired nine fastballs, finally fanning the slugger on a 3-2 pitch.

In one sequence, the poised rookie pitcher shook off catcher Steve Yeager in an effort to make Jackson think the fastball wasn't coming.

"I told him to shake me off," said Yeager. "I touched my mask and shook my head. We did it to confuse Jackson."

After striking out, Jackson tossed his bat in anger and stormed off the field, bumping into Manager Bob Lemon in the dugout. Lemon turned around and pushed him back.

Asked about it, he said: "I can't tell you. I don't know. That's the way it goes."

He was, however, gracious about losing the one-on-one game with Welch.

"I didn't do the job," he said. "The man beat me fair and square. I'm not frustrated. I'm not angry. I'm not disappointed. I'm proud. I'm not gonna be down.

"I'm still a good player. He won. Give the man credit."

Dodger manager Tom Lasorda gives Welch lots of credit.

"One of the big reasons for us winning the pennant was bringing up Bobby from the minors," said the ebullient skipper. "We were 6½ games out when we called him up."

Flushed with the thrill of victory, Lasorda ran from the dugout to the clubhouse and shouted, "What an exhibition."

It certainly was an exhibition of poise by the 21-year-old flamethrower. "Certain pitchers have that attribute and others get tight," said Lasorda.

Facing Munson and Jackson with the tying and winning runs on base was quite a Series baptism, but Welch was not fazed.

"I just wanted to go after them and make them hit my pitch," said Welch. "That's why I went after them with my fast ball.

"I'm happy Tommy gave me the ball. I'm happy he stuck with me. I love him."

Ron Cey's three-run homer off Catfish Hunter in the sixth was the key blow for the Dodgers, who now have hit at least one homer in their last seven Series games, two short of the record.

Hunter had just retired the tough Steve Garvey when Cey slammed his two-out homer over the left field fence. "I was just looking for something I could hit hard," Cey said.

So now the Yanks go back home in a hole, but some longtime Yankee watchers were buoyed by the return of turmoil to the "Bronx Zoo."

Westerners Travel To Caprock

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Things have been going pretty well over on 19th Street the past couple of weeks for the Lubbock High Westerners. So well, as a matter of fact, Rusty Talbot has been getting more to eat at home than pork 'n bean sandwiches and buttermilk.

It seems that while the Westerners were in the midst of a three-game losing streak, Talbot's wife refused to feed him. Or so the coach says.

But now Lubbock High has won its last two outings, and the coach—and his stomach—are glad.

"For awhile there," said Talbot, "my wife stopped cooking for me. I had to go home and find a can of something. But not anymore."

If the Westerners can get by the Caprock Longhorns tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Dick Bevins Stadium, Talbot might just be feasting on lima beans and cornbread for another week or two.

A win would boost Lubbock High's record to 3-3, while a loss would put the Westerners at 2-4.

Two of the reasons the Westerners are on the upswing are: 1.) quarterback Larry Walker and, 2.) running back Rickey Moreno. In LHS's win over Ector last week, Walker hit 4-6 passes for 25 yards, while Moreno added 77 more steps on his own.

Prior to the start of the season, Moreno was listed as the starting quarterback. But a series of injuries—most notably one to Bobby Mitchell during the first game of the year—left the Westerners a might skimpy in the back department, forcing the move of Moreno to tailback.

"Ricky is a team player," said Talbot. "The switch has not hurt him at all. He's the kind of player that wanted to do what would help the team the most.

"And running back is where he's helping."

Filling in has been a specialty for Moreno. Last year, the versatile athlete had to step in against Monterey and replace injured starter Ernest Day at quarterback. Day has been injured.

But, according to Talbot, the real surpise may be the play of 140-pound junior Larry Walker.

"We always knew he could throw the ball well," explained Talbot. "But we weren't sure of the way he would react under pressure. He's done both very well so far."

Both will have their work cut out for them tonight against Caprock, a team which is almost a carbon copy of the Westerners.

For example, both are 2-3 for the season, both are averaging a little over 3

Dodgers Wary Of Yankee Stadium Fans

NEW YORK (AP) — A year ago in Yankee Stadium, fans pelted the Los Angeles Dodgers with balls, beer cans and assorted debris so it's natural several of the National Leaguers aren't enthusiastic about the return trip.

"The people are trying to distract you," said third baseman Ron Cey, who drove in all the runs as Los Angeles won World Series Game 2 by a 4-3 count Wednesday.

"They get nasty, but we have to face up to them. It's unfortunate fans have to be that way. We didn' like the treatment we got in New York. We think opponents are treated fair in Los Angeles and we didn't get that in New York."

Not only are the fans tough on Yankee opponents but the big park hurts the power hitters.

"I lost two home runs there last year and got one," Cey said. "You can's expect to hit to left-center and right-center and have them go out of the park."

The third game of the 75th annual World Series comes Friday night following a travel day. Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda said his club planned a workout on arrival in New York today.

First baseman Steve Garvey, the Dodgers' leading hitter during the regular season, said the New York fans don't bother him and added, "We have to take it positively."

Don Sutton, the starting Dodger pitcher Friday night, said that pitching in Yankee Stadium is not something new, "but something I've always wanted to do. As a youngster I always envisioned myself as a New York Yankee."

Still, he's spent his baseball career as a Los Angeles Dodger.

Lasorda downplayed the "hate Yankee Stadium" angle when he said, "Sometimes when a couple of fans throw things, it has a tendency to make a lot look bad. Our guys look forward to playing there."

But Reggie Smith doesn't look forward to being hit on the head with a ball thrown from the stands as he was a year ago. It remains to be seen if he wears a batting helmet while playing in the outfield.

One Dodger who looks forward to playing in Yankee Stadium is relief pitcher Terry Forster, who has appeared in both of the Dodgers two victories.

"During my six years in the American League, I think the adrenalin pumped a little more when I pitched in Yankee Stadium. Pitching in the World Series might make me pump up a little extra. This is a great pitchers' park.

"The fans don't bother me. Once I start warming up, a bomb might go off and I wouldn't hear it. But it does bother me when they throw things because that might end everything for you."

Bob Welch, the 21-year-old pitching rookie, wasn't worried about his first outing in New York. Pitching to two batters ending the game may have cost him a starting assignment in Game 4 on Saturday, but the dramatic relief appearance was worth it.

Welch, a 6-foot-3 right-hander, was called in with one out and runners on first and second in the ninth. He got Thurman Munson on a fly out and then encountered clutch hitting star Reggie Jackson.

The duel lasted four minutes until Jackson swung and missed a third strike.

"Tommy just gave me the ball and told me to throw strikes," said the youngster who pitched when the Dodgers clinched the National League West and turned in a winning relief performance in the opening game of the playoffs. "Against Jackson, I had to throw the fastball," he said. "I had to make him hit my best pitch."

Jackson swung from his heels on the first pitch and missed. Then came an inside pitch that put Reggie down. Then Jackson, who hit three home runs in last year's World Series finale against these same Dodgers, fouled off three pitches. Another ball, another foul and finally a swinging strike three.

"Yeah, I was excited," the pitcher said. "On my first pitch to Jackson, he had a chance to hit it but missed."

NY Boss Used To Comebacks

NEW YORK (AP) -New York Yankees manager Bob Lemon said what had to be said for a team down 0-2 in the World Series.

"We came from behind before. We have character. We'll bring it to the Dodgers before it's over," said Lemon.

But the florid-faced Lemon didn't sound too convincing.

The Dodgers are almost possessed with the need to win this 75th annual Series as a memorial for their late coach, Jim Gilliam.

Los Angeles won 4-3 Wednesday night, with little third baseman Ron Cey driving in all the runs with a single and a three-run homer.

Jackson struck out on 3-2 pitch in the ninth inning with the tying and potential winning run on base.

"We're not going to quit," Jackson said. "We're not going to give up yet. Champions don't quit."

But Jackson, a logical thinker, admitted that the job ahead was close to monumental.

"The Dodgers are going to be tough to crack," Jackson said as a mob of inquisitors huddled nearby.

Someone asked Lemon if he compared his team's position to what he confronted when replacing the resigned Billy Martin in July.

The Yankees were 10½ games behind when Lemon took over.

"In July I had two months to do something," said the Yankees' manager. "Now I have only three or four days. I'm limited."

Lemon expressed the hope that two injured regulars, center fielder Mickey Rivers and first baseman Chris Chambliss, would be ready for Friday night's third game of the best of seven Series.

Neither played in the second game. Rivers has a bad leg, and Chambliss is nursing an injured hand. Regular second baseman Willie Randolph already is lost with an injured leg.

Lemon said he expected Rivers to play in the third game, but wasn't as sure of Chambliss.

The second game hung in the balance in the hectic top of the ninth, with Paul Blair on first and Bucky Dent at second, two out and Jackson at the plate.

Jackson faced reliever Bob Welch, who was pitching in Albuquerque in July. The count went to 3-2, and the crowd of 55,892 waited for the payoff pitch.

Welch threw a fastall up and in and Jackson struck out.

Jackson was furious after swinging and missing. He stalked away from the plate, jerking his bat, finally tossing the wood into the New York dugout, where players still were filing into the runway to the locker room.

Jackson bumped against Lemon as he stomped into the dugout.

The Yankees' outfielder was an angry man.

He was asked if that wasn't uncharacteristic, since only the night before he made a point to say how unemotional he was when playing baseball.

"It was unlike me," he said, refusing to elaborate on whether there was something else disturbing him.

"I battled him as long and as hard as I could," said Jackson of his confrontation with young Welch. Jackson fouled off four pitches in the sequence before going down.

"He beat me on a ball up and in," Jackson said. "He's a good pitcher. If he got it out over the plate I'd of got him. I just got beat. That's the way I look at it."

Jackson was asked if he relished such a situation, the game on the line and he at bat.

"I don't want to be in those situations," Jackson insisted. "I want to be ahead 9-2. I just didn't do the job," said the man whose first-game homer set a record of six home runs in four consecutive Series games.

Catfish Hunter, making his 11th appearance in six World Series, said he wasn't bothered by his chronic sore shoulder. He said he made one mistake, the home run pitch to Cey.

"It was up and over the plate, a slider that didn't break but began spinning," Hunter explained.

Hunter through the first three innings, and even in the fourth when Cey drove in a run, worked the corners with his breaking pitches and changing speeds.

Ron Guidry, the 25-game winner who will pitch the third game for the Yankees, said he felt that getting back to Yankee Stadium would be a cure for whatever ails the defending champions.

"After all, people didn't even give us a chance to be here," said the little Cajun from Louisiana.

But he too sounded like a guy whistling past a graveyard.

Lemon was asked if perhaps he should have lifted Hunter for reliever Rich Gossage when Cey came to the plate. Hunter appeared to be struggling at that point.

But Lemon demurred.

"Gossage was ready, but Catfish pitched well to Steve Garvey and I thought he still had his stuff," Lemon said.

Tech JV Tries Nationally Ranked RJC

KENNETH JAMES

Texas Tech's junior varsity, which had a game called off a couple of weeks ago, will try again tonight to open its season. And it didn't pick on any patsy.

The Picadors will host powerful Ranger Junior College, the nation's eighth-ranked junior college, at 7:30 p.m. in Jones Stadium.

The visitors will come into the contest with a 3-1 record, the last victory having come over the New Mexico JV, the team which Tech was originally scheduled to play two weeks ago.

That Picador-New Mexico game was called off after several of the Picadors' walk-on players were found to be ineligible via Southwest Conference paperwork. The eligibility forms had not been dispatched to the SWC office.

But, last week, the New Mexico JV played, and lost 39-14, to Ranger in a game played at Midland.

The Picadors will throw a lineup consisting of both walk-ons and scholarship players at RJC.

Nine scholarship athletes will be starting offensively, but only five defensive.

A pair of walk-ons, sophomore Rex Jones of Anton and Jack Godfrey of Arlington Lamar, will be handling the uarterbacking duties for the Tech JV.

At tailback will be Paul Rodgers, a recruit from Daingerfield, with ex-Dunbar runningback Kenneth James at fullback.

Edwin Newsome, a trackster-footballer from Houston, will be playing at flanker and Kevin Kolbye, a recruit from Carrollton Turner, will be at split end.

Under revised regulations, an athlete can play in both a JV and varsity game the same week, with the only restriction being that he can not play in more than 11 games in a season. Thus, the players competing tonight will be eligible to come back and play in the Tech-New Mexico varsity game at Albuquerque next Saturday.

Jeff Hendley, who will open at defensive tackle tonight, played extensively in the Aggie-Tech game last week, and James returned the opening kickoff of that game.

TECH LINEUPS

The Picadors fell to Ranger 28-10 last season en route to a 2-2 record. RJC finished 9-1 for the year.

The Picadors tonight will be coached by graduate assistants Jerry Bomar and Jerry Kuykendall.

Leading the visitors will be 205-pound tailback Delbert Thompson of Hamlin who has rushed for 569 yards this season, including a 204-yard effort against New Mexico JV.

Alan Cartwright, a 220-pound transfer from Texas, is averaging 4.5 yards per carry.

The RJC wins have come over Northeast Oklahoma, Cisco JC and New Mexico JV. It lost 13-12 to the WT junior varsity.

Dockery Praises Johnson's Work

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

Rex Dockery walked through the forest of athletes that towered over him. One minute, he would shout a word of praise, both individually and collectively.

The next minute, his voice would bark with authority, wanting more concentration, better execution, more effort from his Raiders.

It was one of those yes-and-no workouts: Yes, at times it was good, but, no, not all the time.

"The last 20 minutes, the offense did a lot better," said Dockery, after the Raiders had headed forthe showers. "But, overall, it was just an average practice. . . very, very average."

But, the whys had escaped him.

"I don't know what was the matter. Some days it just goes good, and others not. Maybe they weren't concentrating, it's hard to tell.

"I know we have to be ready for New Mexico."

The readying will continues this afternoon, as the Raiders have their last work before flying to Albuquerque for Saturday night's (8:30 p.m.) contest. Even today's workout will be lighter, part of the tapering-off process.

In an effort to get as much work on his runningbacks, Dockery had freshman Phil Weatherall working against Tech's defensive unit. And running with the offense against the scout team was freshman Paul Rodgers, who is scheduled to start for the Tech JVtonight.

Mark Johnson, who a week ago was a quarterback, was running at tailback, and Dockery complimented his progress.

"For a guy who has been at the position only three days, I think Mark has really picked it up well. He's catching on every day.

"I don't know if he will play any at New Mexico or not. I'd rather give him another week of practice, but it's just hard to tell. We might use him. He's really quick."

Dockery remained concerned about his injury list, where defenders (end, linebacker, secondary) have popped up since the Aggie game.

Raider Reception Set For Saturday

Prior to the kickoff between the Texas Tech Red Raiders and the New Mexico Lobos, a pregame reception will be held.

The pregame reception will be held from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m. in the Boggs Garden room at the Albuquerque Inn located on third and Marquette.

The reception is sponsored by the ex-students association and will be hosted by the Albuquerque chapter of the association.

HERO — As he talks with reporters, Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Bob Welch sits in the locker room with his arm and shoulder packed with ice Wednesday after he struck out Reggie Jackson for the final out and preserved the Dodgers' 4-3 win over the Yankees. Mates Eulogize Gilliam

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jim Gilliam and his Los Angeles Dodger uniform were buried together Wednesday, after more than 2,000 people attended an emotional funeral for the longtime Dodger player and coach.

The services, coming between baseball World Series games between the Dodgers and the New York Yankees, were attended by many of Gilliam's teammates on championship Dodger teams in Brooklyn and Los Angeles in the 1950s and 1960s.

Also among the more than 2,000 people attending at Trinity Baptist Church were the present Dodger players, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, baseball executives and players from several other teams, and many of the fans who grew to know Gilliam as a totally dedicated and versatile team player.

Gilliam, 49, died Sunday four weeks after suffering a stroke and cerebral hemorrhage. The Dodgers wear black patches with the number 19 on their uniforms during the World Series to honor him.

"We wanted to do something special for Jim," said former teammate Don Newcombe, "And I suggested to Mr. O'Malley (Peter O'Malley, Dodger team president) that we put No. 19 in the casket with him.

"He and Edwina, Jim's wife, agreed," Newcombe said. The Dodgers retired the number but said it could be used again if Gilliam's son Darryl, now 14, were to play for the Dodgers.

"I miss him already, I miss him working with the ballplayers," Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda said. Then turning to Gilliam's widow, Lasorda added: "Edwina, you can hold your head with pride. You had a man who was truly great. The Lord has taken Jim Gilliam but he'll never take away his spirit."

One of the pallbearers, Dodger Capt. Davey Lopes, was able to say only a few words, calling Gilliam a "father, friend and locker room inspiration."

Walter Alston, longtime Dodger manager, recalled Gilliam when the young player came from the Negro National League to play for the Dodger farm team in Montreal.

"He didn't hit with power, he had no arm, and he couldn't run. But he did the little things that win ball games. He never griped or complained. He was one of the most unselfish ballplayers I know."

"He should have been a manager," the Rev. Jesse Jackson said in his eulogy, "He had discipline, daring and determination. But he was never a manager because of the color of his skin. No wonder he had aneurysm. He had to smile to keep from crying."

Reggie Jackson, representing the Yankees, also joined in the eulogy.

"When I learned of Jim's death Sunday I asked God through Jesus Christ to explain why he took Jim," Jackson said, "You (God) decided that now was the best time to take him, with the World Series and everyone watching and listening, so all God's children could take a look at Jim and see what his life meant to us all."

Westerners Try Caprock

And in another comparison, Lubbock High has scored 37 points, while giving up 78. Caprock, on the other hand, has scored 40 and given up 75.

"On paper, we're almost identical," explained Talbot. "Neither one of us have a great deal of speed or size, either."

If Lubbock High gets cut, Amarillo will bleed. They are that close.

Currently, the Westerners are led in the rushing department by Rudy Barrera. Barrera has picked up 211 yards on 75 carries. Moreno is right behind Barrera with 183 yards on the ground.

For Caprock, Bobby Short, who last year as a sophomore rushed for 675 yards, is the leader with 199 steps on 48 tries.

When it comes to comparing scores, things look like this: Lubbock High whipped Ector 17-8 but lost to Borger 14-6, while Caprock defeated Ector 10-7 and Borger 16-14.

"Mistakes will play an important role in this game," said Talbot. "The one that makes the least mistakes will win this one."

Series Almost Secondary To LA Souvenir Business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Buy me some peanuts. . ." and a hot dog, and a beer, and a Dodger T-shirt and a Yankee pennant and a World Series program.

Sellout crowds of nearly 56,000 fans attended each of the first two games at Dodger Stadium this week as baseball World Series fever hit Los Angeles. It was an epidemic, with tens of thousands taking their symptoms to the only place with a cure, the Dodger Stadium souvenir stands.

The Dodgers had the biggest attendance in baseball history in 1978, 3.3 million for regular season games. But that sales success is dwarfed by World Series games, which have a concession bonanza with the dimensions of a department store's Christmas season.

"Without getting into specifics, let's just say the Dodgers take in four times as much novelty revenue during a Series game as a regular season game," said Danny Goodman, the club's novelty sales director.

Reluctant to say just how much money the sales of Dodger caps, jackets, progams, pennants and even jogging shorts bring in, Goodman did disclose a few clues to the size of the pie.

The first two Series games, Goodman said, meant sales on the order of: 60,000 programs at $2 each; 80,000 Dodger caps and 60,000 pennants, each $5; and tens of thousands of T-shirts, sweatshirts and golfshirts at prices ranging from $8 to $18.

"Between the T-shirts, warmup jackets, beer mugs, inflatable Dodger bats and all the other stuff, we must have 230 different items for sale stamped with the team insignia," Goodman said.

Goodman states with pride that he almost singlehandedly launched the baseball souvenir business when he was with the Newark, N.J., Bears in the 1930s.

"When people buy souvenirs with the Dodger insignia — especially the stuff that says 'World Series 1978' — they're buying memories," Goodman added.

At the 29 Dodger Stadium food outlets, business was more routine, if 40,000 individual servings of hot dogs can be considered routine.

Like Goodman, Arthur declined to give any dollar figures on the total food sales. But he said ballpark visitors spend an average of $2.50 per game, and usually are through buying by the seventh inning. They eat more if the home team is winning and less when chewing fingernails during a loss.

"You give the crowd the basic four 'baseball foods' — hot dogs, peanuts, soda and beer — and you'll make out just fine," said Arthur, who also runs the Chicago Cubs' food concession.

The song "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," immortalized Cracker Jack as part of baseball's lure, but Arthur said it isn't a big seller. The concessions do keep an ample stock for the sake of tradition.

They can afford to.

Seaver's Expertise Spices Commentary

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

With one basic observation, Tom Seaver overshadowed all the banality, all the verbosity and all the gimmickry of NBC's World Series coverage and proved he is as capable behind a microphone as he is on a pitching mound.

Why, a lot of people were wondering, had Tom Lasorda, manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, opted for left-hander Tommy John as his pitcher in Tuesday's opener against the New York Yankees? Why had he bypassed the ace of his staff, Burt Hooton, who started Wednesday's second game?

Analysis

Seaver, a student and philosopher of baseball as well as the ace of the Cincinnati Reds, had the answer.

To set the scene, Seaver had literally groaned when a borderline low pitch to the Yanks' Reggie Jackson was called a ball. "Now that's a pitcher's strike," Seaver said. Then — Boom! — Jackson crashed his mammoth home run. Moments later, though, Seaver picked up the thread of his low-pitch thought.

"The primary reason that you see Tommy John opening the World Series instead of Burt Hooton is the National League umpire behind the plate, Ed Vargo," Seaver explained. "Tommy obviously is a low-ball pitcher and if he (Lasorda) had waited and had an American League umpire tomorrow (Wednesday) night, he wouldn't get many low pitches. I think that was the determining factor."

It had nothing to do with sentimentality or lefty vs. righty theory or past playoff performance or southpaws vs. the Yanks, etc. It was just another strategic case of getting the edge.

Seaver, who also hosts a syndicated sports television program, is a natural as a commentator, bringing with him not only a casual manner and breezy sense of humor but the background knowledge of a scientist of the sport — which he is.

Analyzing the composition and consistency of the dirt in front of home plates around the major leagues, for example, is not typical of your average pitcher or your average sportscaster (which, in each case, Seaver isn't.)

Compared to Tom Terrific, Joe Garagiola and Tony Kubek are mere sidekicks while Curt Gowdy, recognized by many as one of the nation's best sports announcers, has been relegated this time to a behind-the-plate seat and minimum participation in the game. NBC wants him around, perhaps because it seems he's always been around ("his historical perspective" one insider said), but the network apparently doesn't want him around too much.

Garagiola, also a talk-show host, game-show host and hawker of a variety of products when he's not enmeshed in baseball, has a penchant for telling anecdotes. . .and retelling them until they're committed to memory by the listener.

And Kubek has a habit of treating so many plays and incidents — even routine ones — as though they had occurred at Camp David or in the United Nations.

Further, NBC (and, for that matter, ABC in the league playoffs) seems to be swept up in a contest of which network can show the more replays from the most angles, sometimes on the most routine plays.

NBC proudly proclaims its "four-point isolation coverage," employing a whopping 11 cameras around the stadium. "With the cameras deployed both high and low at all key coverage positions, we're confident of capturing the revealing, conclusive look at the big play at any base," Harry Coyle, for many years NBC's baseball director, says in a pre-Series press release.

GENERAL

WASHINGTON — A bill to regulate interstate off-track parimutuel betting on horse races is on its way to President Carter's desk. The House gave the bill final congressional approval on a voice vote following Senate passage last month. The president's position on the bill was not immediately known. The bill would permit interstate off-track betting if the group operating the betting office has the approval of the host track, the host state racing commission and the off-track betting commission.

Prothro Received Help In Quitting

HERSKOWITZ

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. The stories out of San Diego all say that Tommy Prothro quit on his own. Isn't it true that the owner probably would have asked him to step aside anyway? Did anyone have an idea Prothro would be replaced by Don Coryell?

—Eddie Wellington, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

A. That's an intricate web the Chargers' owner (Gene Klein) spun, in a good cause, to allow Prothro the dignity of stepping down on his own. However, in the interest of accuracy, it should be noted that Prothro's decision was supposedly made in an 11 p.m. phone call to Klein that Sunday night. But 3½ hours earlie, St. Louis ownsr Billy Bidwill received a call inquiring about compensation for Coryell.

No one suspected Prothro's replacement by Coryell was that imminent, but this HOT LINE column had a Q and A for release Sept. 27, stating that Coryell would probably replace Prothro after this season.

Q. I read in the sporting News that Cleveland safety man Thom Darden wants fans to start calling the Browns' defensive team the Brown Bombers. This made me wonder what the origin of the Browns' name was. I have always assumed they were named for thsir coach, Paul Brown.

—K.C. Edwards, Cincinnati.

A. The fact is, the Browns actually were named the Brown Bombers when the team began in 1946.

Owner Nicky McBride staged a contest to have fans name the new entry in the new league, the All-America Conference. He offered a prize of $1500. The winning name was Those Panthers, but after McBride paid the winner, a semipro team in Cleveland protested that was its name. McBride happily started another contest, and because Joe Louis was sports' reigning hero of the moment, Brown Bombers was chosen. Newspapers shortened it to Browns.

Q. Who were the top scorers during the nine-year existence of the American Basketball Association, which folded in 1976?

—John McGowan, Monroe, Mich.

A. Since the ABA Guide was never published after the 1975-76 season, this was a tough one to research. However, Jim Foley, public relations man for the Houston Rockets, is a super trivia buff, and he had the figures, follows:

Louie Dampier (13,826), Dan Issel (12,823), Ron Boone (12,153), Mel Daniels (11,705) and Julius Erving (11,662). They were the all-time ABA top scorers.

Q. Why, oh why, was Bobby Bonds traded from the Texas Rangers, and from all those other teams?

—Joe David, Wichita Falls.

A. The Rangers imply privately that Bonds' post-game imbibing is a problem. Once this season, when a fly ball was hit to Bonds, a Dallas writer shouted from the press box, "Bobby, make like it's a V-O and water!"

The truth is, Bonds' high salary ($2.5 million, over five years, with four to go) made him very expendable. As far the other charge, as President Lincoln said of General Grant, perhaps management ought to send a case of V-O to the other Rangers hitters.

World Match Play Tournament Opens

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Andy North, John Mahaffey and Gary Player, who among them have collected the three big U.S. titles this year, teed off today at the start of a four-day campaign to wrest the world match-play championship — richest head-to-head title in the world — from Australia, where it has rested for the past two years.

The $260,000 tournament, staged each year on the Wentworth Club's 6,969-yard, par-73 "Burma Road" course, is worth $60,000 to the winner, who'll have to earn it the hard way.

There are 16 starters — six from the United States, three from Britain, two each from Australia and South africa, and one each from Spain, Japan and New Zealand. They were to battle it out over 36 holes in the first round today. The winner will have played a daunting 144 holes in four days before he picks up his check Sunday.

Joint favorites to take the title, won last year by Australia's Graham Marsh and the year before that by his countryman David Graham, are the 22-year-old Spanish whiz kid Severiano Ballesteros and Tom Watson, twice a British Open winner but never a winner here. They both rate 9-2 in the prematch betting, with Player of South Africa, the Masters titleholder, third favorite.

Player, king of the Wentworth course with a staggering five match-play wins since the tournament first started 14 years ago, is rated at 7-1 by the bookies.

Huntsville QB Features State Schoolboy List

By The Associated Press

Huntsville quarterback Lloyd Archie has been adjusting to position changes since the end of last season but so far opponents can't adjust to Archie — no matter what position he plays.

The Hornets, ranked No. 1 in Class AAA of The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll, trailed Houston Furr 7-0 until the final six minutes last week.

Then it was Archie's turn.

Archie engineered a two-play, 66-yard drive with a 26-yard pass to Larry Mock and on the next play ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Archie missed the extra point kick and Huntsville still trailed 7-6.

Moments later Archie returned a punt 42 yards and passed 23 yards to Charlie Williams for the winning touchdown and completed a two-point conversion pass to Mark Adams.

Tailback Kenny Jones added a security touchdown with 2:11 left in the game and Archie kicked the extra point to complete the 21-point surge and earn mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

Archie, an all-state receiver last season, had been ticketed for a move to wingback or tailback in Huntsville's power-I offense. But when the starting quarterback suddenly moved to Houston, coach Joe Clements didn't hesitate to fill the gap with Archie.

"He had never worked a down at quarterback until Aug. 14," Clements said. "I'd talked to him all summer about moving to either tailback or wingback. He's had to make a super adjustment in a hurry but he's managed it.

"I can't think of anyone I'd rather have back there than Archie."

In two seasons as a receiver, Archie caught 70 passes for 1,366 yards and 18 touchdowns. His top effort came last year against Aldine Carver when he caught seven passes for 245 yards and three touchdowns.

So far this season, Archie has rushed 85 times for 368 yards and four touchdowns and completed 21 of 47 passes for 328 yards and five touchdowns.

Archie also was an all-state basketball selection last season leading the Hornets to the state Class AAA championship, and qualified for the regional track meet in the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

Joining Archie on this week's Honor Roll is San Antonio Burbank quarterback John Zertuche, who rushed 120 yards on 17 carries including one touchdown run, and sompleted seven of 16 passes for 119 yards and two more touchdowns in a key 28-14 District 31-AAAA victory over San Antonio Highlands.

In other outstanding schoolboy performances:

• Aldine's Richard Hrozek scored touchdowns the first two times he carried the ball on runs of 16 and 84 yards and finished with 259 yards rushing on 19 carries and three touchdowns in a 38-21 victory over Baytown Lee.

• Asherton's Alvaro Zamora rushed 134 yards on 12 carries, scored three touchdowns and contributed 11 tackles on defense in a 26-6 victory over D'Hanis. It was Asherton's first victory over D'Hanis in 25 years.

• Van Hughes rushed 286 yards and scored four touchdowns in Axtell's 44-0 shutout of Itasca. Hughes had 210 yards at halftime.

• Senior halfback Anthony Hutchinson of Converse Judson rushed 18 times for 295 yards and scored on runs of 72, 73, 68 and 31 yards in a 48-0 victory over South San Antonio.

• Ray Scott and Wade Hunt of Amarillo Tascosa got twin 200-plus-yard performances in a 52-19 victory over Ysleta. Scott rushed 228 yards on 23 carries and scored four touchdowns and Hunt picked up 223 yards on 23 carries and scored once.

• Royce Coleman of Plainview rushed 188 yards on 28 carries and scored three touchdowns, returned two kickoffs 46 yards and caught one pass for 15 yards in a 35-26 victory over Clovis, N.M.

Lemon Slated For Half Share?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Lemon, who succeeded Billy Martin as manager of the New York Yankees on July 25 and led the team to a come-from-behind American League pennant, has been voted only a half-share of the prize money in the World Series, the Orlando Sentinel reported Wednesday night.

Larry Guest, Sentinel sports editor, said the secret ballot provoked some anger among the Yankee squad and at least two players walked out in anger. Lemon is credited as being a stabilizing influence in the Yankees' successful last-half drive.

Guest said Yankee players, asked for confirmation, were reluctant to comment, but third baseman Graig Nettles said: "It is our money. We can do with it what we want to."

Debate Continues Over Aggies' Use Of Wishbone

By GARY TAYLOR

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Unlike tall-talking fishermen, the followers of Texas A&M's football team do not have to stretch their stories about the big one that got away.

Here's some of the material with which they have had to work: In 1940, the powerful Aggies were beaten 7-0 and knocked from the No. 1 national ranking by a lowly Texas team, and in 1963 the Aggies had the chance of a lifetime to return the favor. Alas, A&M failed 15-13.

More recently, the woeful tales are more frequent due to the monstrously good athletes who head coach Emory Bellard has recruited to the blackland prairie campus by the Brazos River in his six-plus years there.

The 1975 team, for instance, had a 10-0 record before Arkansas crossed it off the Cotton Bowl host list by an embarrassing 31-6 score. Then in 1976, the Aggies won eight straight games and beat up Florida in the Sun Bowl after losing two early contests by narrow margins. And last season, while ranked in the Top 10, A&M tied on a 41-3 albatross at Michigan.

"The inability to win big games in recent years," said an Aggie faithful who is close to the A&M athletic department, "was, I believe, tied to Coach Bellard's stubborness to deviate from his conservative offensive game plan."

Although the problem is hard to categorize, the single-most painful irritant in the past four seasons has been A&M's reliance on the Wishbone offense, which pounds lesser opponents but is no vehicle with which to catch the strong and swift ones.

Bellard is touchy about the subject, even though the more explosive I-formation is 50 percent of his offense this season.

"Contrary to rumors, there's a helluva lot of football in running with the ball," Bellard said moments after his sixth-ranked team ripped a fourth straight lesser opponent (Texas Tech, by a 38-9 margin) Saturday and thereby increased its per-game numbers to 42.5 points scored and 5.2 points allowed.

Bellard admits his offense, featuring a 9.3 100-yard dash sprinter (Curtis Dickey) at runningback and trackman Mike Mosley at quarterback, is the best he's fielded. But this Saturday, it's time for the Aggies to go after another big one when they travel to Houston's Astrodome in hopes of beating the 16th-ranked Houston Cougars in an important Southwest Conference showdown.

Senior offensive tackle Cody Risien said memories of past disappointments have been on the edges of his thoughts this week.

"Maybe in the past the players on the teams were not as close as we should have been," Risien said. "That's the only thing I can think of. It was the players' fault, not the coaches.

"It's almost embarrassing the way we always come up a little short every year," he continued. "We don't talk about it a whole lot, but, yes, I think about it."

So far this season, the Aggies' offense has been successful running from the Wishbone and the "I." Last Saturday, however, when Texas Tech was able to limit A&M's effectiveness from the "bone," Bellard went to the "I" in the second half.

Dickey, the 205-pound sprinter, gained 127 rushing yards in the first 10 minutes of the third quarter from the tailback slot.

A performance like that in either of A&M's two close 1966 losses possibly would have allowed Aggie fans to lay to rest the what-could-have-beens.

"That's where the "I" comes in," Risien said. "In those two games. . ."

Although he said he was excited about the Aggies scoring potential, the left tackle said his job is made tougher by the "I."

"With the wishbone, you know the play is going to be a quick hitter. You can shoot out and pop the defender," said Risien, 6-7, 262. "With the I, the play takes longer to unfold. You have to stay with a block longer."

Despite the bad memories, Risien has evidence that A&M can win big. As a 10-year-old Aggie fan, he watched his favorite team beat Baylor in 1967, the last season the Aggies won a SWC title. He saved the ticket stubs and two blades of grass from Kyle Field that day.

"I've still got them," he said, "tacked to my bulletin board at home."

Irish Picked Over Pitt

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

With one eye on the World Series and the other on the pom pom girls, forgive us if we have Joe Montana completing a pass to Davey Lopes or Rick Leach leaping over Thurman Munson at home plate for a touchdown.

It should be a runaway day for such powerhouses as Oklahoma, Alabama, Texas and Nebraska; a stern test for Southern Cal and Notre Dame plus a shocker for mighty Michigan, our upset special.

Season score: 149-59, .711 (a good Las Vegas number).

Oklahoma 50, Kansas 6: Even with Tommy Lott ailing, the Sooners look good enough to play in the NFL.

Southern Cal 21, Arizona State 18: The Sun Devils' iron defense holds the Trojans for a while.

Michigan State 27, Michigan 20: A long-time enmity. The Spartans anxious to break the Michigan-Ohio State axis.

Alabama 38, Florida 7: Gator steaks instead of bear meat served at this Dixie picnic.

Washington 19, Stanford 14: The Cardinals are tough on their home field but lose by a Flick, named Tom.

UCLA 33, Washington State 10: Rick Bashore is a ball-faking Houdini but needs little magic here.

Texas A&M 23, Houston 14: The Aggies have too much ground punch for the improving Cougars.

Florida State 27, Mississippi State 17: Inconsistency is the name for Bob Tyler's Bulldogs.

Missouri 28, Iowa State 17: Call the team Big Mo. The tight end, Kellen Winslow, comes in at 6-foot-6, 240 pounds.

Navy 20, Duke 17: The Midshipmen loom as the best among the service academies.

Harvard 14, Cornell 7: The Crimson make a bid for honors in the Ivy League.

UT Goes With Trio Of Joneses

AUSTIN (AP) — The Jones boys — "Ham," "Lam" and "Jam" — may all play halfback when Texas tries to resume its victory march against North Texas State on Saturday.

Texas coach Fred Akers said Wednesday the twelfth-ranked Longhorns "are not ready to throw in the towel" after losing to No. 1 Oklahoma, 31-10, but two freshmen may start in the backfield to add zip to the offense.

It was Texas' first loss after three victories.

"We didn't play as well as we could, but we played as hard as anyone could expect. I know we can be better than we were."

Akers indicated freshman blue-chip halfback A.J. "Jam" Jones may start Saturday in place of Johnny "Ham" Jones, the team's leading rusher with 270 yards.

Another freshman, quarterback Donnie Little, played nearly three quarters against Oklahoma, and Akers was asked why he had substituted Little for senior Randy McEachern.

"We weren't moving the football," Akers said, "and we wanted to get outside (on the OU defense). "The best man to get outside is Donnie Little."

The Longhorns finished with only 191 yards total offense against Oklahoma.

Akers was then asked who would be in the starting backfield Saturday — an apparent reference to an injury to halfback Leroy King and whether Little or McEachern would start.

Akers said the backfield would include Kermit Goode — replacing King — and either "Jam" or "Ham" Jones.

He was silent on the quarterback position.

"Ham" started against OU but gained only 34 yards in 17 carries. Akers also has been critical of the blocking of the Texas' backs on the Oklahoma corner defenders.

"Jam" dashed 46 yards on a kickoff return against OU, and Akers said he is looking "better and better" although he has played sparingly.

He was highly recruited out of Youngstown, Ohio, with Texas winning a recruiting battle against Southern California. At 6-foot-1 and 195 pounds, he is four inches taller and 15 pounds heavier than "Ham" and has good speed.

Little, a blue-chip recruit from Dickinson, is bigger and faster than McEachern, who had off-season knee surgery. Akers said Little is "quick and strong."

Also, he said, "there is always the possibility" that "Lam" Jones, the Olympic sprinter who has been at wide receiver, may run some plays at halfback. He said, however, "Lam" was not being moved to halfback as a position change.

"Lam" scored Texas' only touchdown against OU, sprinting 25 yards on a reverse.

He also came close to breaking a kickoff. "We wonder when he's going to," said Akers. "We feel certain it's going to happen."

Government Now Coming To Aid Of Environment

Second In A Series

By EDWARD K. DeLONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Public outcry sparked the great environmental reformation that swept the United States eight years ago, but the federal government is the enforcer that has transformed demands into results.

Early governmental efforts often bore the stamp of a crisis response. They sometime were marred by a lack of technical and scientific information, by bureaucratic lethargy and infighting and by arbitrary decisions.

The most ardent protectors of the environment until last year were outside the government. That is changing now, and not without traces of irony.

Activists who once prodded the government for reform now guide federal programs from within.

Since President Carter put environmentalists in top federal policy jobs, business leaders say the environmental establishment has become perhaps the single biggest force shaping the way Americans will live and work.

But environmental groups, who pinned high hopes on Carter, have been dismayed by a new look in policy that includes relaxation of old cleanup standards. They have accused the administration of deserting them in such areas as water policy, nuclear energy and solar power.

The Seabrook, N.H., atomic power plant controversy offers a prime example.

Douglas Costle, chief of the Environmental Protection Agency and one of the activists brought into the government by Carter, ruled the Seabrook ocean cooling system was acceptable. He said he was not happy with his ruling, but had no other choice under the law.

Costle's ruling so outraged anti-Seabrook environmentalists, who fear the plant's cooling system will harm ocean life, that one thrust a dripping, dead fish in his face.

The incident illustrates the problems faced by former activists who find themselves forced, as federal regulators, to balance environmental ideals against legal requirements and practical economics.

In California, which led the nation in environmental protection, the loss of a big chemical plant last year due to air quality rules prompted the legislature to weaken environmental requirements for a liquefied natural gas terminal.

Howard Jarvis, author of California's Proposition 13, says economic concerns "unquestionably" have sparked an environmental backlash. But others, including officials of the utility industry's Electric Power Research Institute at Palo Alto, Calif., say it is too early to tell whether a true revolt is developing.

The federal government's new course includes shifting more regulatory burden to state and local officials, delaying some cleanup deadlines to make them more realistic and tightening others to take advantage of new technology.

Costle defends the policy changes as "a mid-course correction" rather than a fundamental shift or weakening of requirements.

The EPA, which Costle helped to plan under the Nixon administration, is one of two key federal environmental bodies. The other is the Council on Environmental Quality, which monitors environmental progress, advises the president on policy and reviews all environmental impact statements.

Other agencies play important supporting roles.

The Interior Department looks after public lands and is leading the controversial fight to turn one-fourth of Alaska into parks or wilderness areas. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus says he is determined to do whatever is necessary to protect unspoiled Alaska from "rape, ruin and run" exploitation.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department and the Labor Department have joined the EPA in placing increasing emphasis on the health aspects of pollution. They have touched off bitter fights with industry over such suspected workplace cancer-causers as benzene, asbestos and lead.

But the executive branch is not the only one involved in protecting the air, water and land. Congress has passed 13 major environmental laws in the past seven years, including the one that set up the EPA, and the courts have provided landmark decisions to put teeth in those laws.

"The programs that made EPA (in 1970) up were brought from the bowels, really, of other departments around town where they had gotten scant support," Costle said in a recent interview.

"The intellectual bank account of what you do about these problems — how do you clean up the water, how do you clean up the air — was pretty thin. And yet ... reorganization usually occurs on the heels of a demand for action, at the time that a crisis is perceived. (There was) the expectation of immediate solutions, immediate progress.

"So the initial reaction of the agency was: 'Whatever we've got on the shelf, ready or not here we come to do that.' The demand for 'action now, action now' was so intense that they went with whatever they had on the shelf."

Now, Costle says, the EPA is "showing some signs of post-adolescent maturity." He says Congress has gone through much the same process, moving from passing a host of new environmental laws to revising old ones like the Clean Air Act that "forced people to do some arbitrary things."

"I think the legislative era in the environment reached its watershed mark with the passage of the Toxic Substances Control Act and with the first major rewrites of the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts, all of which was accomplished last year and the year before," Costle said.

Air and water laws are among the EPA's most powerful tools.

The Clean Air Act was passed in 1963, changed in 1970 and 1977. It limits emissions from cars, factories, power plants and other sources.

States must comply with EPA air purity standards by 1982 in most cases and by 1987 in the worst spots. New factories can be built in badly polluted areas only if they meet "the lowest achievable" pollution levels and if existing industries clean up enough to offset any new emissions that are produced.

Limits on auto use may be imposed in areas that fail to meet the standard.

The 1982 and 1987 clean-up deadlines represent a case of "more realistic" regulation, Costle says. Before Congress changed the law last year, the deadline was 1977 and industrial growth would have been barred in some areas.

Some states are making good progress in cleaning up their skies — the CEQ estimates that only southern California, Houston and Philadelphia will exceed the ozone standard by 1990, for instance — but others such as Ohio face a potential economic pinch because they have not developed clean-up plans.

"The states that are enjoying the least amount of environmental-economic conflict are the states that early on took a tough line about cleaning up," Costle says. "Now they've got a margin of (industrial) growth to work with."

States must comply with EPA air purity standards by 1982 in most cases and by 1987 in worst spots. New factories can be built in badly polluted areas only if they meet "the lowest achievable" pollution levels ...

Auto makers reluctantly have met interim standards, cutting carbon monoxide emissions 82 percent, hydrocarbons 86 percent and nitrogen oxides 51 percent at a cost in control equipment of about $400 per car since 1968. They question whether the next step — to a 96 percent reduction of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons and a 76 percent reduction of nitrogen oxides — is worth the added $350-400 it would cost.

There are two main water laws, the Clean Water Act of 1972 and the Safe Drinking Water Act of 1974.

Slowly but surely, the EPA is using the Clean Water Act to make America's waters safe for fishing and swimming by 1983 and to halt all discharges of pollutants into navigable waters by 1985.

Private industry is outshining the nation's cities in complying with those goals, despite an $18 billion federal grant program to the cities, the EPA says. It says only 30 percent of 13,000 municipal sewage treatment plants met a mid-1977 interim deadline, while 85 percent of 4,000 major industries did so.

The 1983 goal may be hard to meet because so much water pollution comes from runoff from agricultural or urban land, says the CEQ. But it reports major improvement in 50 bodies of water including the Ohio River, the Houston Ship Channel, Pearl Harbor, the Detroit River and the Savannah River.

Costle says the program offering cities federal funds for 75 percent of the cost off building new sewage treatment plants is an example of how the EPA is shifting responsibility to the states.

"I (recently) delegated the management of the construction grants program in Illinois to the state of Illinois," he says. "We will now go in on a selective audit basis only, instead of reviewing and approving detailed plans for every project. We're going to be doing that with a number of states this year."

The Safe Drinking Water Act was passed in response to a 1970 study that found city water supplies threatened by chemical contamination. One of the suspected culpris is chlorine, put in water 70 years ago to kill bacteria, which can turn into chloroform that in large amounts produces cancer in laboratory animals. Every city water supply examined in a 1975 study contained small amounts of chloroform.

Last year the EPA launched history's first major campaign to rid drinking water of chloroform and other potentially hazardous organic chemicals, including a requirement for the use of activated charcoal filters.

Water companies are fighting the program, which could cost $831 million or more — boosting annual home water bills as much as $23 by EPA estimates or $100 according to industry figures. Industry officials decry the program as a series of needless, costly "perhaps" measures applied against a "maybe" threat.

The EPA wields similar clout under other laws such as the Ocean Dumping Act, being used to halt sewage sludge dumping in the Atlantic by New York and Philadelphia, and the Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, used to limit DDT spraying and to ban Mirex as a weapon against the fire ant.

The CEQ has its greatest impact under the National Environmental Protection Act, which requires every federal agency to prepare an environmental impact statement on projects that have a major environmental effect.

Like the EPA, the CEQ is trying to streamline its operations. At the same it has gained a more militant voice in the form of Carter appointee Gus Speth, who has challenged the administration's commitment to solar energy programs as inadequate.

If the EPA and other agencies are the enforcers, it has been the Congress that gave them their weapons. Battles over new laws have lasted for years, produced major compromises by both sides and, in the view of many environmentaists, led to the defeat of lawmakers who voted against the environment.

"There is now a good, hard bloc of about 75 members of Congress who are very dedicated conservationists or conservation-minded voters," says Brent Blackwelder of the private Environmental Policy Center.

The "Mr. Clean" of the Senate long has been Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, who heads the Environmental and Public Works pollution subcommittee. Another key environmental leader is Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., author of the National Environmental Protection Act.

In the House, environmentalists say much of their best support comes from Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the Interior Committee. Others with high ratings include Reps. John Seiberling, D-Ohio., Paul Rogers, D-Fla., John Murphy, D-N.Y., and four California Democrats — George Brown, Phillip Burton, Robert Leggett and Leo Ryan.

States have largely followed the federal lead. Many states now require their own environmental impact statements, and in the past year have focused on mining, air and water quality and waste disposal.

California has long been several steps ahead of federal requirements. Now, some say, it is showing the first signs of a potential environmental backlash.

The state has the nation's toughest auto pollution laws. It has banned new atomic power plants until nuclear waste problems are solved, passed strict air and water pollution laws and created a commission to control coastal development.

But last year Dow Chemical dropped plans for a big styrene plant near San Francisco, saying it could not meet air standards. Amid predictions other industries would be lost, the legislature softened environmental requirements for a proposed liquefied natural gas terminal on the coast.

Evelle Younger, the state attorney general and Gov. Jerry Brown's 1978 epublican opponent, charged the California Energy Commission was anti-nuclear and said his office will no longer aid the commission in atomic power matters.

"California politics has not yet seen the last of the Dow affair," said John Zierold, a Sierra Club's representative in Sacremento.

People Brought Pollution Problems To California

By JACK V. FOX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — California used to be a land of unspoiled beauty.

Then people moved in.

Now it has more people than any other state. More cars. More roads. Its great city of Los Angeles is synonymous in the minds of many Americans with smog and freeways.

Next to Texas it is the biggest oil producer. That has meant thousands of wells pecking away like iron grasshoppers along magnificent beaches. Drilling towers sprouting from the the ocean. Giant refineries exuding toxic gases. Tankers the length of three football fields.

Southern California is really a desert. So they built an aqueduct running 500 miles to bring water from the rainy forests in the north to the parched valleys.

The 120-mile coastal strip from Los Angeles to San Diego in the past 10 years has grown so with residential tracts that, except for the 30-mile stretch of the Marine Corps' Camp Pendleton, it is almost like driving through an unending city comparable to the routes from New York to Washington.

One of the world's greatest sights is flying into Los Angeles on a clear night and looking down on a carpet of sparkling lights that reach the horizons on all sides.

The loggers have bit into the solemn redwood forests of the north. Famous Yosemite Park has so many tourists in the summer months it looks like Christmas in Gimbels' basement. On the dunes and desert floors of Death Valley the tire tracks of motorcycles, four-wheel drive vehicles and dune buggies have carved insane doodles.

The marine, fowl and animal wildlife shrink. There are only a few dozen of the giant California condors left. The salmon in the northern rivers grow fewer every year. So do the bears in the national forests.

With the city folk flocking to the wilderness and carelessly discarding cigarettes, failing to put out campfires and, in some cases committing arson, the brush-covered foothills and lower mountains are ravaged by fire.

The astonishing thing is that with all this, California is still a land of breathtaking beauty. There is so much of it that for years the attitude was one of indifference because the environmental frontier seemed almost endless.

But now California, probably more than any state in the union, is caught in the crunch by the late perception that its ecology is not impregnable and the practical needs of its 21 million people for jobs, energy, water, homes, recreation, food.

And into this situation has stepped the state's youthful and enigmatic governor, Edmund G. Brown Jr., whose overall attitude of siding with the environmentalists is viewed variously as magnificent, naive and opportunistic.

Exhaust emission control requirements for new automobiles in California are considerably stricter than federal standards or for any other state. One result has been that cars cost more than anyplace else.

Brown's chief lieutenant in this field is Tom Quinn, head of the Air Resources Board and, not coincidentally, Brown's campaign manager in the last election.

Quinn is now turning his concentration on industrial pollution including sudden inspections of oil refineries and other plants such as the big Kaiser Steel works in Fontana.

There are three particularly hot subjects.

One is the location of a Liquefied Natural Gas terminal on the Southern California coast to unload tankers coming from Indonesia. The program is tied up until the decision is made. The state coastal commission recommended against Point Conception near Santa Barbara but the state Public Utilities Commission ignored that advice and tentatively approved it.

The second is a pipeline to ship Alaskan oil from Long Beach to Midland, Tex., for distribution in the middle west. That also would require a huge crude oil terminal in the Long Beach harbor.

In one of the weirder demonstrations of lack of longterm planning, the pipeline from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez was finished and put into operation. But California has a glut of oil and no way to ship it east. Now tankers pass the California cities and, depending on size, either go through the Panama Canal or around the tip of South America to reach the Gulf of Mexico or Atlantic ports.

A compromise apparently has been reached by having Southern California Edison cut down its pollution in the Los Angeles basin in a trade-off so that SOHIO (Standard Oil of Ohio) can start up the Midland pipeline.

The third area is nuclear energy. Brown has opposed developments unless some way is found of safely disposing of nuclear wastes. As a consequence, two proposed nuclear plants, Sun Desert near Blythe and Wasco in Kern County, appear to have been abandoned.

A third at Diablo Canyon has been built but not put into operation. The biggest nuclear plant in the state is at San Onofre, a few miles south of former President Nixon's home, where two additional reactors are nearing completion.

Brown's stand has drawn bitter criticism from corporations, particularly after the decision by the Dow Chemical Co. to abandon a proposed new facility in the San Francisco Bay area. The legislature has moved toward what some view as an environmental backlash, easing environmental requirements for the LNG plant.

The state has not been alone in the field. The Sierra Club fought and apparently beat a plan by the Walt Disney corporation to build a $35 million winter playground with 22 ski lifts, hotels, restaurants and shops in the isolated Mineral King area of the Sequoia National Forest.

But the smog seems just as thick as ever over the Los Angeles basin. The real estate developers move tenaciously into the choice hills along the Pacific. The oil rigs multiply off the coast.

And the people still pour in. California here they come!

Rock Creek Now Clean

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The sylvan creek that inspired the modern environmental philosophy — that efforts to protect the water, air and earth all are related — stands today as a monument to America's clean-up achievements.

Rock Creek was a pristine stream flowing through a park in Washington when Gifford Pinchot, riding horseback near it at the turn of the century, realized the environment should be viewed as a whole.

But by the early 1970s, the creek had become too polluted for wading and swimming. The National Park Service posted signs on its banks warning people to keep out of the water.

Today, the creek flows clean and clear again — evidence of the progress that has been made in the eight years since Earth Day, when the nation adopted Pinchot's philosophy and set out to clean up the air and water.

Groups Try To Save All Life

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here is a cross section profile of groups in the environmental movement:

Environmental Defense Fund

Perhaps the most succesful of the groups concerned primarily with taking issues to court, EDF has been involved in everything from DDT to drinking water and hair dyes.

It counts 45,000 members and operates on a $1.8 million annual budget. Bill Butler, long-time EDF lawyer, says "the opposition has become more sophisticated both legally and scientifically and the issues have become more difficult." He believes the movement must "fight fatalism and apathy" because "people have gotten to the point where they believe that so many chemicals cause cancer that they just don't want to bother trying to eliminate them from the environment."

National Wildlife Federation

There are 7,000 groups affiliated with the federation, which was founded in 1936, claims a membership of more than 3.5 million and operates on a budget of $22.6 million.

Federation chief Thomas Kimball believes the ardor of the environmental movement "has cooled somewhat — there's no longer the massive let's get things done" attitude. But he said the movement's goal is still "survival with style, in an environment that makes the quality of life enjoyable. So many things are possible there could be some truth down the line in what the doom sayers have predicted."

Sierra Club

Founded in 1892, the club was the nation's first conservation group. It has a membership of 178,000, a yearly budget of $7.5 milion and a reputation for hardcore wilderness conservation.

Executive director J. Michael McCloskey says "the signs are that the fish are coming back ... the air quality is a third better in many cities than it was in 1970. And despite all the attacks, the basic scheme of air and water regulation remains intact." A key issue in coming years, McCloskey believes, will be efforts to better understand the relationship btween environmental management and the economy, particularly where inflation is involved.

Clamshell Alliance

Typical of groups which form to confront a specific issue, the alliance dates from the summer of 1976 when people opposing the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant pooled their efforts. The "Clams," as group members call themselves, and their allies are about the only members of the environmental movement who still practice civil disobedience. There are no membership cards or fees, but the group has a budget of $32,000 for the first half of this year, most of it from donations. It operates a six-person office, whose employes get paid only for a three-day week, and has drawn thousands to its protest demonstrations.

Chuck Matthie, 30, an alliance leader, says the nuclear power issue "is symptomatic of a category of problems concerning the meaning of democracy. Never before in our country's history has the potential for influence and power been in the hands of so few."

Automakers Facing Stiff Emissions Standards

By JEFFERY L. SHELER

DETROIT (UPI) — The American automobile, a key target in the war against air pollution, has undergone a multibillion dollar transformation from the fume-spewing machine of the 1950s.

But the massive government-ordered clean-up job that has reduced noxious auto exhausts nearly 80 percent in the last decade may be just a warmup for U.S. automakers who face even stiffer emissions standards during the next three years.

By 1981, the auto companies are required under the federal Clean Air Act to reduce exhaust pollution levels another 10 percent — a task the companies say will be difficult and costly.

The Environmental Protection Agency also is taking another look into diesel emissions to determine if increasingly popular diesel engines should come under stricter regulations.

The Big Four automakers say they have spent billions of dollars since 1968 on research and production of devices to make cars run cleaner and — under other federal mandates — burn less gas.

As a result, cars have become smaller and more complex, utilizing advanced electronics, on-board computers, sophisticated combustion and filtering systems and other technology to cut down on pollution while minimizing the loss of fuel economy that automotive engineers say is a byproduct of emission controls.

Most of the expense has been passed along to consumers in the price of automobiles. Industry figures show emission control devices have added about $400 to the price of an average car since 1968. The companies say the next phase of standards will add another $350 to $400 to a typical car.

In 1977, Congress set a timetable for reduction of emissions of three major contaminants in vehicle exhausts: carbon monoxide, oxides of nitrogen and hydrocarbons.

Despite kicking and screaming, the manufacturers met the standards, reducing carbon monoxide levels by 82 percent, hydrocarbons by 86 percent and oxides of nitrogen by 51 percent when compared with uncontrolled levels.

But within five years, the law requires a 96 percent reduction of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions and a 76 percent reduction of oxides of nitrogen exhausts.

"From our point of view, the additional increments are not that valuable to society that they justify the costs and penalties involved," one industry spokesman said.

Besides the costs of developing and equipping cars with catalytic converters — the most widely-used device for scrubbing auto exhausts — industry officials say emission controls result in about an 8 percent "penalty" in gasoline mileage.

Few auto executives deny that without pushing by the government, the industry never would have spent the time and money it has in cleaning up auto exhausts.

"The industry simply did not respond quickly and effectively enough to the harmful side-effects of vastly increased automotive usage in highly populated areas," Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford said at a recent White House seminar.

The argument remains whether the cost of making an 80 percent pollution-free vehicle into a 90 percent pollution-free car is justified.

"Twenty-five years ago, there was a justification for immediate action, and I was among those urging it," said C. M. Heinen, a Chrysler Corp. engineer and head of the firm's emissions projects.

"After all, no one wanted to wait until we could count the corpses in the street. But there has been a lot of action taken, and the hunt for corpses has changed into a frantic search for some, perhaps, mythical individual who is ultra-sensitive to some vaguely defined atmospheric insult."

The extent to which auto exhausts constitute a health hazard remains a matter of disagreement between the industry and government environmentalists.

One industry publication recently reported a study funded by the EPA found that large amounts of air pollutants, usually associated with auto exhausts, come from natural sources.

The Automotive Information Council said the study found "photochemical ozone" emitted from natural vegetation contributes four times the amount of man-made pollutants found in urban smog.

The council also reported another study showed that even before government-ordered emissions controls took effect, automotive exhausts accounted for only about 4 percent of toxic air pollutants.

Major Environmental Regulations Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Major environmental laws at a glance:

Clean Air Act: Passed in 1963. Strengthened in 1970 and 1977. Gives EPA power to say how clean the air should be. States draft own plans for meeting federal standards. EPA sets pollution levels for new power plants or factories and new cars. More drastic measures to discourage use of cars are possible.

Clean Water Act: Passed in 1972. Lets EPA determine how to meet 1985 congressional deadline for halting pollution discharges into navigable waters. Sets July 1, 1983, as date for making water clean enough to protect fish, wildlife and humans who wade or swim.

Toxic Substances Control Act: Passed in 1976. Gives EPA power to control introduction of new chemicals into environment. About 30,000 chemicals now are produced commercially and list grows by 700 to 1,000 a year. EPA can require testing of new chemicals and EPA may regulate use, manufacture and disposal of harmful chemicals.

Noise Control Act: Passed in 1972. Allows EPA to set noise limits for trucks, motorcycles, home appliances and other noise sources. Directs EPA to recommend noise limits for aircraft, although those are set by Federal Aviation Administration. Makes it U.S. policy "to promote an environment for all Americans free from noise that jeopardizes their health and welfare."

16 Groups Have Big Incomes

By DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 16 largest environmental groups in the United States have a combined income of nearly $69 million a year, with four of them accounting for 81 percent of the total.

Most of the money comes from dues, contributions, grants and the sale of literature and other promotional products. Professional fund-raising efforts have sharply increased revenues to these organizations.

Preliminary results from one survey found that between four and six million Americans belong to an environmental organization of some kind.

The four organizations whose budgets account for the bulk of this total are the National Wildlife Federation (23 percent), the Nature Conservancy (23 percent), the National Audubon Society (15 percent), and the Sierra Club (10 percent).

Resources for the Future, a Washington-based environmental research group, estimates there are 10,000 to 15,000 environmental organizations in the United States, including some 7,000 affiliated with the National Wildlife Federation. Other estimates, counting more purely local groups, run as high as 20,000.

While the 16 largest national groups devote a relatively small share of their budgets to lobbying in Washington and the state legislatures, there are no complete published figures a total.

Lobbying disclosure laws require that Washington lobbyists file revenue and expenditure statements, but an examination of a half dozen groups shows the figures often do not reveal full lobbying expenditures.

While lobbyists employed by the groups did file salaries and expenses with the House, this did not fully reflect the support costs of organizations employing them. Many groupssaid they did not separate lobbying costs from their overall budgetsf educational activities.

Brock Evans, director of the Sierra Club's Washington office, said the 180,000-member organization spends $830,000 a year for Washington and San Francisco offices and field operations.

Evans estimated that about two-thirds of that sum supported lobbying activities. The club has six lobbyists in Washington, nine in the field, and one who specializes in international issues.

The club, supported by income from dues, contributions and its publications, employes 110 people under a total annual budget of $7.5 million, one-third of which pays for publications, outings and conservation programs.

The estimate that $68.5 million was raised by the 16 largest environmental organizations was computed by Resources for the Future, which recently conducted a survey of the groups' membership growth and financial resources.

In addition to the big four, others in the top 16 include the Environmental Defense Fund, the Natural Resources Defense Council, Environmental Action, Friends of the Earth, Izaak Walton League, National Parks and Conservation Association, Cousteau Society, Defenders of Wildlife, New Directions, Union of Concerned Scientists, the Wilderness Society, and the Environmental Policy Group.

Robert Mitchell, who conducted the survey, said: "I think this would be the major chunk of the money among environmental groups. Others would have budgets of various sums, but they would be relatively small."

The largest environmental group, the National Wildlife Federation, last year had a budget of over $22.6 million. Its annual reports says $105,000 of that was spent on all its lobbying activities.

The Federation said this represented "a miniscule sum compared to the funds spent by opposing special interests and barely one-tenth of what NWF could have spent under the new tax law without endangering its tax (exempt) status."

Firm Has Special Rules In Incorporation Papers

NEW YORK (AP) — No other company or predator investment group is likely to attempt seizing Control Data Corp., the electronic computer company, as they have some other companies recently.

If they do, they're liable to run into a time-consuming snare, with angry stockholders ganging up on the predator and sending it away, tail between its legs and maybe some of its financial fur ruffled.

Analysis

Control Data believes in permanence, commitment, and long-term profits. It disdains the quick buck now that usually leads to problems later. It likes profits but maintains there's a lot more to a company.

But what makes Control Data special — among other things, it would say — is that it ammended its incorporation papers to include such notions, and to protect shareholders, employees and even the community.

The first amendment would require directors to measure any acquisition proposal in light of "the expected social and economic effects ... on noncontrolling stockholders, employees and other constitutents."

The other prohibits anyone who gains control from completing a merger or other transaction unless a two-thirds majority is obtained, or unless opposing stockholders obtain a minimum price, set by formula.

While the amendments themselves are believed to be unique among companies with multibillion dollar sales, the philosophy behind them is probably of even greater consequence.

William Norris, who founded and heads Control Data, is a man of sharply defined interests and concerns, and sometimes he expresses them as quickly and precisely as data being snapped out by his computers.

At the annual meeting last May, for example, he scolded some economists, security analysts and investors for believing "the business of business is to maximize short-term profits."

Innovations and policy decisions might take years to prove themselves, for example, and so might company efforts to attack social problems. And yet both, he maintains, might eventually return greater profits.

"Serving a major need of society will generally result in products and services that enjoy a more lasting demand than do those that merely satisfy the whims of society," he told shareholders.

There are other reasons too. A company, he maintains, has an obligation to employees, community and other constituents, and its social contract is expressed in the company's ethics policy.

Management, it says, is obligated "to preserve the job environment in which each employee is encouraged to achieve his or her highest level of productivity, personal satisfaction and quality of life.

"Uninvited attempts on the part of outsiders to take over control of the company may place in jeopardy these employee goals, and in turn jeopardize company and shareholders goals."

An unwanted takeover, the policy continues, "can violate the mutual commitment between employer and employee, crippling productivity and eventually causing social injury and loss of economic vitality."

Very little comment or inquiry on the amendment of Control Data's incorporation papers has so far been received from other companies, according to Ben Kilgore, vice president for investor relations.

But there will be, if only because one major company has so positively described the role, goals and obligations of the modern company as an institution ....

... when so many people, small investors, institutional investors, takeover artists and even some corporation executives, view it solely as a short-term money machine.

Fledgling 'College' Prospers

HOUSTON (UPI) — Donna Gerdin decided to start her own "college" last January.

It was especially difficult because:
—She was a newcomer to the city;
—She had no campus;
—She had no faculty;
—She had no students.

So, after incorporating as Class Factory Inc., Mrs. Gerdin, 29, began looking for the necessary ingredients.

"It didn't go too well at first," she said.

"I taught a couple of cooking classes," she said.

Her campus was to be the homes, offices and places of business of her teachers.

Having decided who would teach what and where, she printed and distributed a small eight-page catalog listing 24 courses and placed small ads in the newspapers. One-hundred and forty seekers of knowledge responded.

With the spreading of the word, the help of new acquaintances and more advertisements, Mrs. Gerdin attracted more students and more teachers so that this fall 500 students are taking 53 classes.

The prices range from $5 to $45. The lengths and time of meetings vary, although Mrs. Gerdin said the most common is two hours once a week for four weeks.

Working Moms Lack Job Skills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of American women make up a "hidden subculture" of workers who need jobs to survive but haven't the education or training to compete successfully, says a presidential advisory council.

In a report titled "Neglected Women," the National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs recommended federal help for such women, particularly for the divorced or widowed mothers it called "displaced homemakers."

These women may be good mothers and housekeepers but often are lost when spouses divorce them or die, forcing them out into the job market.

The report, released Tuesday, said 26 million American women lack basic educational or job skills for working outside their homes.

Not all of them want to or need to, the report pointed out. The number includes several million women over 60 who would be unable to work no matter what their background.

But many do need to work to support families or themselves, and the council said they need "access to financial aid for tuition, child care, transportation, clothing and, frequently, living expenses." The report recommended financial assistance for education programs and tax incentives for career training for such women who "are the products of past educational and social patterns which do not apply to today's reality."

The Census Bureau does not have a category for "displaced homemakers," but 1977 census figures show there were 10 million widows and 2.8 million divorced women in the 35-to-64 age group. The figures also show single women heading 4.7 million households with children under 18.

Their business is starting your day.

They may look like a bunch of kids to you. But these young men and women run their own business. They all have the same problems that any businessperson has. They sell, service, and collect. They also need a pat on the back now and then.

How would your day start without them?

Rob Reiner, Wife Star In Movie

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last summer, Rob Reiner wrote, produced and starred in a family comedy show, "Free Country," his first work for ABC since exiting Archie Bunker's famous tribe at CBS.

Alas, his series about an immigrant family from Lithuania got low ratings in five tries. It wasn't renewed. Undaunted, Reiner is trying again, this time with a TV movie ABC will display Oct. 20.

"More Than Friends" is the title. It concerns what happens when a boy and girl who fell in love in high school in the 1950s grow up and face separation and separate careers in later years.

Reiner plays the boy and his wife, Penny "Laverne and Shirley" Marshall, the girl. He wrote "Friends" with his scrivening partner, Phil Mishkin. As might be expected, he's proud of the film.

As might not be expected, he still likes to talk about his first ABC venture, despite its death in the ratings this summer.

"It's my favorite subject and I'm very proud of that program," said Reiner. He didn't berate ABC for axing "Free Country," but attributed its demise to a common network ailment called quick-hit fever.

"What went wrong is very simple," he said. Nowadays, "you have to have an instant success or they yank you off the air. I can understand that.

"Because networks are mostly interested in ratings, which mean higher advertising dollars for them. However, there's one little grey area they don't really get into.

"And that is: A show that has substance to it, quality to it, if it's different than other shows, it needs time for the audience to acclimate itself to what you're doing.

"History has shown that any program that departs from the norm takes a while for the audience to understand."

He cited "All in the Family" — which he left after its eighth season but will visit at least once this season — as a prime example.

When it began in January 1971, he said, "it was a (ratings) disaster. We did 13 shows and nobody saw them. But we repeated them in the summer. Eventually, the audience began picking up on it."

He said he tried to get such audience-building time for "Free Country" from ABC, but had no luck, although they did live up to an agreement with him to do five episodes and air them this summer.

What he'd sought, he said, was for ABC to change its plans, order 13 shows, start the series in January and repeat it in the summer in the "Family" manner to see if TV history would be repeated.

"It might still have been a failure," Reiner conceded. "But at least I would have had the chance to say, 'Yes, we had 26 weeks and the audience didn't like us.'"

He rued that networks, which used to order 13 episodes of a new series and stick with it at least that long, now usually order just five or six and chuck the series if it doesn't hit right away.

"But the competition now is enormous, which I don't understand at all," he said. "Because regardless of whether they come in first or third in ratings, they still make a ridiculous amount of money.

"To me, there are two aims in telvision: To put on entertaining, informative and provocative programs, and also to make money.

"They're certainly making money, so why shouldn't they want to take a shot with a few different things?"

Vinton, a 1956 graduate of the Pittsburgh school, was awarded the degree for his "rare and needed gift, the gift of self-affirmation," according to university president Rev. Henry J. McAnulty. ABC Leads TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite some schedule-juggling brought on by the major league baseball playoffs, ABC tore through the prime-time competition for the third week in a row, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC's manuevering to accommodate its baseball programming was a rousing success. The network switched "Happy Days," "Three's Company" and "Taxi" from Tuesday to Thursday night, and proceeded to swamp the opposition.

"Three's Company," broadcast at 9, was the top-rated show for the week ending Oct. 8, and "Happy Days" finished third. "Mork and Mindy," a new ABC Thursday night regular, was No. 2 for the week.

ABC, in all, had seven of the week's 10 most-watched shows and finished with a rating of 22.1. NBC was second at 19.1 and CBS third at 17.8. The networks say that means that in an average prime time minute during the week, 22.1 percent of the homes in the country with TV were watching ABC.

With the fall season three weeks old, ABC has yet to lose its grip on first place.

Fred Silverman Orders Change For 'Who's Watching The Kids?'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joe Namath has been dumped and his "Waverly Wonders" permanently benched by NBC.

"Who's Watching the Kids?" Fred Silverman, who has ordered the show reworked before it returns to the air after a series of pre-emptions. Since the NBC chief is known to have faith in teen star Scott Baio, who he brought into "Happy Days" as Fonzi's nephew, best guesses are that the show will slant increasingly in his direction.

"Diff'rent Strokes" will replace "Wonders." It stars Conrad Bain (Arthur on "Maude") as a millionaire whose housekeeper has wrung from him a promise on her deathbed that he will adopt her two sons.

The streetwise Harlem boys, ages three and 12, are played by Gary Coleman and Todd Bridges. Bridges was a regular on "Fish." Also on hand is talented Charlotte Rae as the housekeeper's replacement who threatens to quit because, "I don't do windows and I don't do boys."

The reason why "Wonders" went off and "Kids" needs revising are to be found in the Nielsen ratings — at the bottom.

In the Nielsens for the week ending Oct. 8, the already cancelled "W.E.B." was in last place. "Who's Watching the Kids" was tied for next-to-last with the Ford anniversary "Salute to the American Imagination," and that duo was preceded by "Waverly Wonders."

NBC is in pretty good shape in the ratings, in second place for the season (nobody figured to beat ABC), and with the World Series coming up could wind up the top network for this week in the Nielsens.

Of course, that leaves CBS at the bottom, where they have been for the last couple of weeks even without the competition of the Series on NBC.

In sports, ABC's baseball playoff games played only fairly well, with the Yankees vs. the Royals pulling better than the National League Dodgers vs. Phillies. As a matter of fact, the Yankees had a hard time out-rating "Little Women" on NBC, while the champion Dodgers did even worse, edged out by "Dick Clark's Live Wednesday."

The big sports winner was ABC's NFL Monday night football, with the Dallas vs. Washington game the fourth most popular show of the week and the highest rated game in the nine-year history of Monday football.

Speaking of ABC, rumor has it that "Welcome Back, Kotter" and "Operation Petticoat" might be yanked from their Monday night ratings low. "Kotter" could be switched to Saturday, combining with "Carter Country." "Apple Pie" would be junked — it's only a matter of time — and "Petticoat" also could be dropped.

The ten top network programs for the week ending Oct. 8, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1: Three's Company; 2: Mork & Mindy; 3: Happy Days; 4: NFL football, Dallas vs. Washington; 5: (tie) BJ and the Bear (NBC Wednesday movie) and Taxi; 7: Barney Miller; 8: American League Championship, game 4; 9: Carrie (CBS Tuesday movie); 10: 60 Minutes.

Runaway Tire Causes Ohio Girl's Death

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A first-grade girl has died after being struck in a school playground by a tire that flipped off an 18-wheel tractor-trailer rig and rolled 400 feet.

Kelly Beth-Ann Hudson, 7, of suburban Forest Park, died Monday at Children's Hospital after being struck by the runaway tire Oct. 2 at Tri-County Christian Elementary School in Fairfield.

The tire came off the big tractor-trailer rig traveling on nearby Ohio 4.

Agency Plans Study Of Offshore Tracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — An intensive environmental study will be made of 243 tracts off central and northern California for possible oil and gas leases, the Department of Interior announced today.

"This decision does not mean that any of these tracts ever will be offered for lease sale — or even that there will be a lease sale," the department emphasized in an announcement.

Instead, the department said, the study to determine the environmental impact of offshore drilling will be made so an "informed decision can be made" on future actions.

The tracts, comprising 1.3 million acres, range seaward from the mainland as far as 27 miles. None is closer than three miles from shore, the department said, adding that the water depth of the tracts ranges from 162 feet to 2,437 feet.

The tracts are clustered in five geologic basins: Eel River Basin off Eureka; Point Arena Basin off Mendocino County; Bodega Basin off Sonoma and Marin counties north of Point Reyes National Seashore; Santa Cruz Basin north of Monterey Bay; Santa Maria Basin off northern Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo counties, Interior said.

The tracts comprise about one-sixth of the 8.4 million acres industry nominated for study.

PBS Offers Alternative To Mediocrity On TV

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It would seem American culture has reached its nadir with "Laverne and Shirley," "Three's Company" and "Charlie's Angels" at the top of the TV ratings heap, each with scores of millions of viewers every week.

But there is an alternative to jiggle shows, sitcom banality and formula adventure drama. It is the Public Broadcasting Service which runs dead last in the ratings to commercial TV provided by ABC, CBS and NBC.

PBS, a loose confederation of 170 licensees representing 250 stations, would be the largest "network" in the country if, indeed, it were physically hooked up to present its shows at coordinated times throughout the nation.

Stations affilated with PBS can, and do, use its programs at whatever time they please. Some are UHF stations and not all sets are equipped for UHF.

PBS doesn't compete with commercial TV on an entertainment level, which is to say it eschews the panorama of comedy and drama which crowds most of network prime time.

This year PBS has adopted the slogan "A World of Difference" in an effort to draw more attention to its schedule of programs from dozens of sources. Unlike the commercial nets, PBS is not Hollywood-New York oriented. It deals more or less with the real world, often with boring interview shows.

Ron Devillier, director of programming administration for PBS, gathers material from independent producers, universities, production houses and such PBS bastions as WGBH (Boston), WTTW (Chicago), WETA (Washington) and WQED (Pittsburgh). It also relies on KCET in Los Angeles and WNET in New York.

Devillier, based in Washington, says, "We are always looking for the highest quality program we can find. We tend to develop and involve ourselves in drama, dance and theater. We look for things that are not shown on commercial TV.

"We believe the public should have an option to network programming. We're trying to find shows that will capture viewers' imaginations and we are gradually gaining ground.

"I think our improved viewership is attributable to the higher quality of our shows and that PBS is a recognizable institution at last."

Among the programs being presented by PBS this season are "California Reich," a documentary on the Nazi party; "Opium", on world opium traffic; "The New Klan," an expose on the Klu Klux Klan; and "The Energy War."

The most popular PBS programs have been National Geographic specials, Jacques Cousteau documentaries, "Nova" — a series of science specials, England's "Masterpiece Theater", and opera presentations.

"This year we are bearing down on the Sunday night slot at 8 o'clock," Devillier said. "It is the strongest position in the week. It's a hot spot in terms of the largest number of sets in use.

"The networks load up on that hour to promote their entire week's schedule. So we're scheduling the toughest, hardest-hitting documentaries available to us.

"In November we're clearing our schedule for live coverage of critical elections issues, something the commercial networks couldn't afford to do. But we're unhampered by sponsor or rating pressures.

"We'll have live coverage beginning at 8 p.m. every night Monday through Friday from California, Texas, the Midwest, the South and New York State, using those areas as microcosms of what is happening with vital election issues.

"We're trying to open up new areas not touched by the networks. We simply can't compete financially with their entertainment shows. A top budget for us would be $250,000, a major investment. But the first episode of 'Battlestar Galactica' cost more than a million. You can see what we're up against.

"There is no simple answer to funding. Some state boards of education fund PBS licensees."

Because there are no commercials on PBS, funding for shows and individual stations are scrounged from a variety of sources — state and federal government, corporate donations, private subscription and universities.

One spokesman for PBS said the organization is looking for the sort of audience that tunes in regularly to "60 Minutes," people who "can stand to have their minds awakened rather than just jiggled."

Once such show scheduled for the next three years is "The Global Papers," a series of six programs dealing with major worldwide issues.

Thanks to the satellite system PBS is offering more live programming, both cultural and current affairs as evidenced by "The Turk In Italy," "Segovia Live at the White House" and last summer's "Live From Wolf Trap" series.

PBS isn't solely dedicated to current affairs and culture per se. Its "Cinema Showcase" will bring 10 movies to the screen this year, among them "Distant Thunder," "Harlan County, U.S.A." and "Monty Python and the Holy Grail."

Additionally, PBS will offer such diverse artists as Pete Seeger and Chuck Mangione along with Leonard Bernstein, Leontyne Price and Mikhail Baryshnikov in its quest to please viewers.

Public television executives are aware that "Laverne and Shirley" isn't threatened by PBS programming. But they are determined to provide Americans with alternatives to inanity.

Paper Plant Will Close

SPRINGHILL, La. (UPI) — An International Paper Co. pulp and paper plant opened 40 years ago will shut down early next year, possibly putting 1,000 employees out of jobs.

The planned closure of the Springhill operation was announced Tuesday by company spokesman James J. Piver. The company simultaneously announced intentions to build three wood products facilities and a containerboard complex in north central Louisiana and east Texas.

The $550 million containerboard facility will be located in De Soto Parish near Clear Lake and one of the wood products plants will be in the Springhill area and will have jobs for 385 people.

Piver, corporate and project management officer in Springhill, said the decision to close one of Webster Parish's biggest industries resulted from a "cost problem, not a people problem."
