Eichner pushes for more pride in plan

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The executive director of the Economic Development Strategy Council told members of the EDSC board Friday that local residents should take more pride in the group's Strategic Plan for Economic Development — as much pride as they are being given credit for having by persons outside the community.

"It has been good to get away for a while and be in a unique role where I can act as a cheerleader," said Phillip Niedzielski-Eichner, who has already started a new job in Washington, D.C., and is commuting from the nation's capitol to Hereford to complete his EDSC duties. "I am able to see what you are doing from a distance, and get to talk to other people. From what everyone I have talked to has said, you have to feel good about yourselves."

"You must realize that very few communities in this area, the state of Texas, the entire southwestern United States have done this much, and people outside the community have more confidence in this plan than does Hereford itself. They are very impressed."

"I would hope you take the time to make people understand that this plan is the future when you run into folks who have bad things to say about the plan — the community's plan."

"Be impressed with the work you have done, be proud of it. I am most concerned about the strong voices that keep nipping away at the plan. If they, instead, have to defend themselves, it takes their energy away."

"The community must be impressed with the work it has done to come up with this plan. It's a good product."

EDSC board members reviewed a revised draft of the plan Friday — more than 60 pages compiling the work that has been done by the EDSC board, a separate 70-member advisory council, and hundreds of local residents who participated in interest group discussions. The draft, which should be final by July 28, is broken into sections including:

—An overview that sets the stage for economic development;

—A perspective of Hereford and Deaf Smith County;

—A vision statement of what Hereford has been, is today, and wants to be;

—The goals and strategies devised by the community through the consensus-building process;

—Structure, funding, and implementation of the SPED;

—Public policy considerations.

"The goals and strategies make up the essential elements of the Strategic Plan," Eichner said in a quick review of the draft.

"Those are things everyone agreed to and can rally around. We attempted to take the work of Dr. Steve Murdock of Texas A&M, who headed the community survey and his economic survey, the work of the ACIR, the work of the EDSC staff, and the community's work, and pull it all together, put meat on the bones of the goals and strategies, and put it all into context."

The SPED will be incorporated with a complete version of the other works for four large volumes of documents.

EDSC board member John Perrin explained that the SPED is already being put to work with the primary formation of the Economic Development Council, which, along with a twin which will work on enhancing the quality of life, will carry out the SPED.

"The Economic Development Council will include (county commissioner) Troy Don Moore, (city commissioner) Tom Legate, (Hereford school board member) Raymond Schlabs, (chamber of commerce president) Larry Malamen, and at-large members including myself and Rocky Lee. We still need one more for the original seven-member board, but we feel it would be better to increase that number to nine so we get a bigger cross-section of the community while still keeping it small enough so we can reach a decision."

"We would like to begin advertising for a director in early August. There is an awful lot we need to do and a short time to do it. Essentially, what we want to get done is to perform the economic development (See EDSC, Page 2A)

Gotcha covered

Special Reaction Team (SRT) members scuttle to position in a mock barricaded gunman situation. Clockwise, from right, are Roy Rector, Kenny Sifford, B.J.

Reyes, Bruce Lee and Mike Ahrens each rely on the other SRT members for backup.

SRT They look like junior Rambos, but try not to emulate him

By ANDREA LAMB
Staff Writer

Patrolmen Esreal Silva and Kenneth Sifford both have wives and children waiting home for them, possibly eating supper or watching television before bed-time.

But as the primary search team for the Hereford Police Department's Special Reaction Team (SRT), family must wait because it's their duty to lead the team into the dark hallway and waylay the gunman barricaded behind that door.

Safely dissolving the situation is uppermost on their minds. The nervous sweat and dry lumps in their throats are barely noticed.

THE SETUP

The SRT (an acronym used instead of SWAT because of the bad connotations the television show brought about) is a finely-tuned group of eight police officers who are specifically trained to handle life-threatening situations where regular police tactics aren't sufficient.

"It's a real strange and scary feeling going through a door when it's dark and having someone behind you saying, 'Go up,' and you don't know what's there," said Detective Mike Ahrens, the team's leader who started 3½ years ago on the primary search team. "So now that I'm in a situation where I have to say 'Go up,' I know exactly what the lead guys are going through."

Sifford and Silva are always the first in line, then Ahrens is second with patrolman Bruce Lee coming in third as the gas man. Patrolman B.J. Reyes brings in the back as rear guard, police Cpl. Bennie Barrick serves as the negotiator, patrolman Roy Rector is sniper and police Capt. Ted Langgood commands the team from an outside position.

"We're a group of men that trusts each other and works with each other," said Langgood, who started the team in December 1985. "You never look back when you're on a mission. Your eyes are constantly looking forward and not on what the guys are doing behind you because you trust them that much."

Ahrens added, "You're counting on that person behind you to tell you what to do and you never have to say to a team member, 'Come with me.'"

As the first two in the door, Silva and Sifford coordinate the team's movement and secure the inside doors of a building before entry.

Lee, as gas man, is responsible for using chemical agents and serves as a backup while Ahrens carries an H & K MP-5 assault machine gun.

"With the machine gun, he could lay down a lot of fire if someone comes through the door unexpectedly," Langgood said.

Reyes, as rear guard, is one of the few SRT members to carry a shotgun, and he makes certain that no one sneaks up on the team.

As sniper, Rector stations himself in a tree or on a building roof in order to get exact aim on anyone rushing from the building.

Ahrens, who played the sniper in the past, said he hates this position the most.

"All you do is wait. You just sit outside waiting for something to happen and you never know what's going on. I like being where the action is," he said.

The best and first line of defense, said Langgood, is the negotiator. The team's negotiator, Barrick, can gather the tactical information such as what kind of weapon the gunman has, where he is located and who is in the house with him. This helps the team know how to position itself.

"The negotiator can make the situation easy or difficult," said Langgood. "Hopefully, through him we won't have to go through the door. We would much rather have him (gunman) come out."

If the situation ever peaked to gunfire, the SRT's first priority is to immobilize the person. The method to immobilization is shooting the person exactly above the upper lip because this destroys the motor functions, and the person slides to the ground, limp as a wash rag.

"You never want to shoot a person in the head because he becomes stiff and has control of his muscles so he can shoot another round at you. And you're probably gonna kill that person trying to immobilize him. You never plan on killing, but if that person is holding hostages or something, it may come to that in order to get those people out safely," Langgood said.

INCIDENT

Last year, the SRT's skill was tested when what started as a regular family disturbance call quickly erupted into an emergency situation.

A man was holding his wife hostage inside their home and shots were fired.

"The police called me, I called Mike (Ahrens), and he called Silva. That's the way we contact the team members, by chain calling — one person calls another person who calls another," said Langgood.

"I briefed the team on all the tactical information. Silva was acting as the negotiator on this one, but the guy (gunman) kept wanting to break off negotiations, saying he was going to kill himself, stuff like that."

"While he's negotiating, the police are on the outside perimeter keeping away traffic and we're on the inside (See SRT, Page 2A)

Local deposits slip in quarter

Money on deposit in Hereford's five major financial institutions totalled more than $257.7 million on June 30, 1988, according to totals reflected in statements and releases by local officials.

Despite a "soft" economy the past two years, the mid-year totals were not down much from a year ago. A decrease in total loans was also reflected in the mid-year totals.

Deposits at Hereford's two banks at the end of June totalled $132.2 million, compared to $135.6 million a year ago. First National Bank showed deposits of $75.6 million, while loans totalled $38.4 million. Last year at the same time, FNB had deposits of $79.8 million and loans of $41.9 million.

Hereford State Bank's deposits were $56.7 million at mid-year, and loans totalled $34.6 million. A year ago the figures were $55.8 million on deposit and loans of $31.6 million.

Hi-Plains Savings & Loan Association listed savings deposits of $88.5 million on June 30, compared to $75.8 million a year ago. Loans totalled $20.2 million, down slightly from the $24.2 million a year ago.

Deposits and savings accounts at Hereford Texas Federal Credit Union and at Security Federal Savings & Loan were both near the $18.5 million mark. Loans at HTFCU were listed at $9.7 million, while loans at Security Federal totalled about $17.5 million.

The mid-year figures are traditionally the lowest of the year, while money on deposit is usually the highest on Dec. 31.

Local Roundup

Police arrest six

Hereford police arrested six persons Friday, including four alcohol-related arrests.

Arrests included two men, ages 27 and 50, for public intoxication; a man, 33, for public intoxication and Class A assault; a man, 33, for driving while intoxicated; a man, 33, for Class A assault; and a man, 22, on outstanding warrants for criminal mischief and no driver's license.

Incidents included a husband assaulting his wife in the 500 block of Ave. G; illegal parking in the handicapped zone at Deaf Smith General Hospital; a wallet containing $470 stolen from a shopping cart at Save-N-Gain; theft of gasoline in the 300 block of N. 25 Mile Avenue; criminal trespassing in the 700 block of Stanton; and an argument in the 400 block of Ave. C between a husband and wife after the husband allegedly spanked the couple's nine-month-old baby.

Police issued seven citations and worked two non-injury accidents Friday.

Babbling Brooks

By JOHN BROOKS

The mailbag was beginning to stagnate, so I decided go through my mail and see what was in it.

Dear Blabbermouth:

Sometimes I don't know whether to strangle you or hug you. Some of your columns take a lot of courage to write. Some of them take a lot of stupidity.

Is there anyway you can label them in advance so we can see if we want to read them before we read them?

Sincerely (I think),
Perplexed

Dear Perp:

Now I know why I have nightmares of tug-of-war games, and my brain is the mud pit in the middle.

Thank you for your support.

Hey, Brooks!

I have a wonderful idea.

Some people want to get rid of Ed Roach at West Texas State University. They also need a new superintendent in Amarillo. Why don't they offer Ed the superintendent's job?

Ed could hire Horace Scott as publicity director for the Amarillo schools. Wouldn't that be keen?

Yours truly,
Rabblouser

Dear Rabble:

I suggested that to a person close to both situations. Have you ever tried to perform the Heimlich Maneuver over the telephone? It choked him up pretty bad.

I don't think it would work.

Brooks:

We wanted to know if you were a masochist? You work in the public eye in your job, you are a baseball umpire and football official, and you personally cover most of the board meetings of a certain public entity that has been in the news a lot.

Maybe you had an unhappy childhood? There must be some underlying cause.

Shrink-ingly yours,
Doctah Wooth

Dear Doctah:

*One thing's for certain: I know I like working in the public eye, and I enjoy being a baseball umpire and football official. I have loved covering the school board and EDSC meetings. Now, if I can just get the insurance company to pay that hospital bill...

Dear editor:

Do you think this "Boston-Austin" connection will work? I don't know anything about this Kennedy, but I know Johnson has done a lot of good things. What do you think about it?

I also don't know a whole lot about the vice president, but I know he hasn't done a thing in his eight years as vice president. And, for some reason, I just don't trust Nixon.

Signed,
Undecided

Dear Undecided:

Boy, the mailbag is getting behind! Jimmie Gillentine must have left this in here!

Dear Bablink Brukes:

Dear Fletch:

Yeh, me too. I couldn't remember even simple ones, like the guy at the WDIC/EDSC. I couldn't remember if his name was Smith or Niedzielski-Eichner.

An added bonus for all of you Scrabble fans. There's more than one way to skin a cat. You can also skin a qat. Look it up.

Dear Babbling:

Why don't they ever have easy puzzles on Wheel of Fortune? I watch it every night, and every day when it's on in the morning, and when they have it on the weekend, and I tape it when I can't be there to watch it.

They don't ever have any hard puzzles, even in the bonus round. The hardest one was "librarian," but I always thought it was "libarian." That's the way we always pronounced it. Learn something new every day.

Anyway, it's time for Vanna to pose nude again, and it's time for harder puzzles on the show.

Sincerely,
A Wishful Wheel Watcher

Dear Wheel:

I know whatcha mean. Why don't they make it a real challenge?

How about the Super Bonus.

"Okay," Pat says. "You won the Bonus Round, and you have $57,510 in cash. If you want to keep that much of Merv's loot, you have to solve the Super Bonus Puzzle. This is a person, place and thing, and instead of 15 seconds, you have 5 seconds."

"I'll have an X, a Y, a P, a D, a Z, and an O, Pat."

"Okay, Vanna, turn those letters! You have 5 seconds."

"Xanadu Xylophone Xenophobe."

"That's right. Not only do you get to keep the cash, but you get an unchaperoned weekend with Vanna, and Merv's paying!"

That's when I'll stop officiating, quit working overtime, delegate those night meetings to someone else, and watch Wheel of Fortune EVERY night.

perimeter."

Silva chimed in, "He knew we were there, surrounding the house."

"But then again he was always asking 'Are y'all out there?' because he was so nervous," said Ahrens. "If the team is any good the gunman should never know we're there."

After the gunman was captured, he stated that the tension was so high because he could sense the SRT was outside, but he couldn't see them.

This mission was a first for several SRT members and proved a good testing ground for what the members had learned in training.

"On the first one, you're always wondering if you have what it takes," Ahrens said. "After it's over with, you know you have the skill. On other missions to follow, the situation is so intense you don't have time to get scared. Only until it's over do you realize you could have been shot."

TRAINING

Proper physical and mental training are the keys to teamwork to getting everyone out alive, said Langgood, and the eight-member team makes sure they have plenty.

Each month, the team spends eight hours practicing military-like maneuvers and mind games. Their training ground includes two large barns, a two-story house and two smaller houses in the county, and the team frequently invites other police officers to act as guinea pigs.

In one instance, a deputy from Vega offered to stage a booby trap for the team.

"We started in the afternoon and went all through that night," said Langgood with a smile. "We ended up talking him out of two hostages, assaulted the building, immobilized him and none of the team was hurt. The guy said he never saw us until we got through the door and he was running all over the building looking for us outside. On our way home that night, none of us said a word because we were so exhausted."

The SRT members' eyes gleam when they talk of specific maneuvers they perform: the way to search a room, or how to attack a barricaded gunman.

"You're always keeping yourself protected and watching everything that goes on while performing these maneuvers," said Ahrens. "Like when I search a room, I get back as far as I can and barely look in with one eye. That way, I can probably see him before he ever sees me. Then I walk slowly to the other side so I can see all angles. Regular police officers don't know how to do a lot of this stuff."

Entering a room with an armed person requires two men and a lot of screaming to throw the person off-guard.

One man comes in low on one side of the room to distract the gunman while the other man rushes to the other side of the room, disorienting the armed person and delaying his reaction.

"We use a lot of mental practices, too," Langgood stated, "putting guys in shoot-or-don't-shoot situations. In one exercise, the guys have a bunch of targets set up, and they have to pick out the right one and shoot it without shooting the others. This would be useful in a hostage situation."

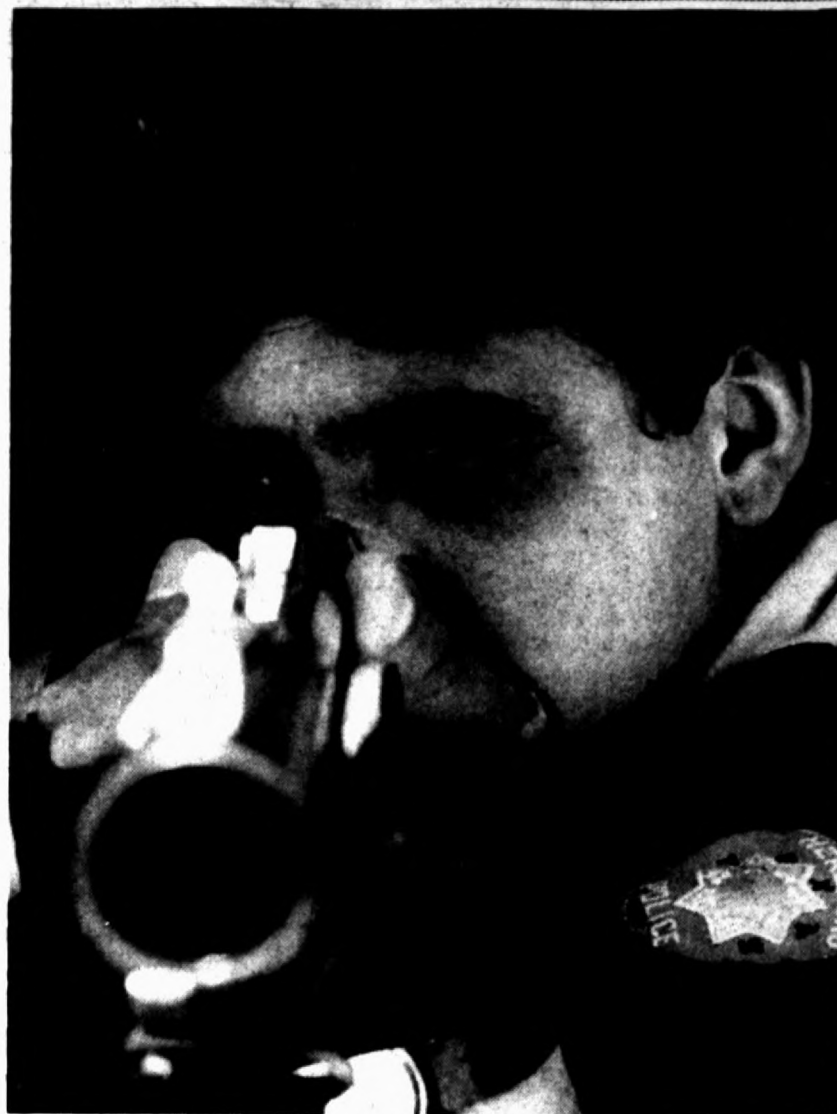

After 350 hours of training since the group began, the team commander proudly spouts off that it takes only 10 seconds to put six members over the top of a building and 15 seconds to put them through a window. And all this is done with each member wearing 35 pounds of equipment including a bullet-proof vest, rifle, gas mask and other paraphernalia.

"It's all tactics," said Langgood.

ATTITUDE

Clad in ragged headbands, black uniforms and combat boots, the SRT members appear to be junior Rambos. This, combined with the group's aggressive manner, might cause one to think the SRT considers itself an elite club.

But Langgood was quick to point out that the SRT "is not going around like a bunch of prima donnas. We get other guys (police officers) involved because the tactics we've learned can help them, too. These tactics are gonna save their lives along with someone else's."

Perfect aim

Patrolman B.J. Reyes, who acts as the SRT's rear guard, must have exact aim if the gunman were to surprise the team from the rear.

Teamwork, training and an element of surprise make the team as efficient as it is, according to Langgood.

"After a drug raid two months ago on east Third Street where a bunch of heroin was found, the guy that was nabbed said as he was being handcuffed, 'Who were those bad — guys? Are they from Metro (Amarillo's organized crime unit)??' Ahrens recalled with a grin.

Hereford's SRT is a fairly well-kept secret and the police department's vital weapon when a situation calls for an element of surprise.

One SRT member wears a T-shirt to every mission, aptly stating, "SWAT—the last thing on a terrorist's mind."

Dukakis, Jackson try to mend fences

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson edged away from the brink of a Democratic convention quarrel as words of discord were replaced by talk of reconciliation. Jackson said he harbored no "acrimony and hostility."

With his "Rainbow Express" bus caravan rolling toward Atlanta, the convention city, Jackson toned down talk of a challenge to Dukakis' choice of a running mate, Lloyd Bentsen. Jackson said Friday it was "a moot question" but added, "I have not encouraged or discouraged anyone about what they should do on Thursday" — the night convention delegates will ratify a running mate for Dukakis.

Dukakis, meanwhile, said he wants Jackson to be a player in Democratic affairs. "I want him involved, I want his staff people involved," the Massachusetts governor said in Boston.

Dukakis, the certain Democratic presidential nominee, and Jackson, the runner-up in the Democratic primaries, agreed to have their top aides meet in Atlanta tonight to discuss differences.

While Jackson arrives in Atlanta later today, Dukakis has put off his arrival until Sunday, the eve of the convention's opening. Dukakis planned a quick stop in Washington Sunday afternoon to pick up Bentsen, a senator from Texas, before the two headed on to Atlanta.

George Bush, certain to win the Republican nomination to face Dukakis in the general election, was heading to Wyoming today for a 4½-day fishing trip with his pal and political mentor, James A. Baker III, who is expected to give up his job as Treasury secretary to run the Bush campaign.

Michael Dukakis

REV. JESSE JACKSON

Bush does not plan to let the Democrats have the limelight exclusively next week. The vice president will come out of seclusion Wednesday and hit the campaign trail, competing for attention on the final two days of the Democratic convention.

Differences between Jackson and Dukakis have dominated the Democrats' pre-convention picture since Dukakis announced Tuesday that Bentsen would be his running mate. Jackson and his supporters were infuriated that they learned of Bentsen's selection from reporters and not from Dukakis.

However, with the convention fast approaching, the words of anger were losing their edge on Friday.

"We simply cannot win without each other," Jackson said at a news conference in Louisville, Ky. "We can only win with each other. It is in our distinct advantage to find common ground."

Jackson, whose staff had broken off negotiations with Dukakis' aides, called the governor on the telephone, saying later the two have no "acrimony and hostility" but only policy matters to resolve.

While Jackson said a convention challenge to Bentsen's nomination was a moot issue, his staff was getting conflicting advice on that very point.

Many Jackson supporters were calling the campaign offices in Atlanta with demands for him to fight for a spot on the ticket, aides said.

One of his closest advisers, former Carter administration official Bert Lance, said that would be a mistake.

"It would appear to be divisive," he said, adding that Jackson should embrace the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket after the Wednesday night presidential vote.

Beginning new ministry

Bill Devers stands beside the sign that will grace Sunshine Acres, a new ministry that will provide food and shelter in a family-type setting to homeless people.

New ministry will cater to homeless

A home-type form of ministry for persons in the Hereford area who for some reason are without a home has been started by a group of local citizens.

Named "Sunshine Acres," the ministry will have Bill Devers as its executive director. Devers recently resigned as executive director of Operation Good Shepherd to devote his attention to the new ministry to the homeless. Sunshine Acres will be governed by a board of directors composed of Hereford-area citizens.

"There's a great need to provide a constructive environment for these people, many of whom are indigent, down on their luck, or just victims of circumstances," Devers said. "One area we see particular need in is for folks without resources who have just been released from jail. With no better example to follow, they fall back into the bad living patterns that got them in trouble in the first place."

"The concept of Sunshine Acres is as an around the clock family living setting. Those in need can obtain food and shelter, and interrelate with others in a good Christian environment."

"It's in keeping with the old saying, 'Give a man a fish and you feed him for a day. Teach him to fish and you feed him for a lifetime,'" Devers said.

Sunshine Acres is currently making arrangements with a local person who has made a site southeast of Hereford available for the ministry's home. Plans are to renovate a building to provide a central kitchen-living room area with separate sleeping quarters for a number of people.

Shelter will be available for persons needing a place to stay overnight, or for a more-extended stay. Devers said the ministry hopes to eventually have a resident director also living at the home.

Funding for the new ministry is being sought from within the community through donations from individuals and churches. Devers said persons may contact him if they have donations of needed furnishings, including living room, bedroom, and kitchen furnishings and other needs.

Devers added that Sunshine Acres will be completely non-denominational, and help from the facility will be available to anyone in need.

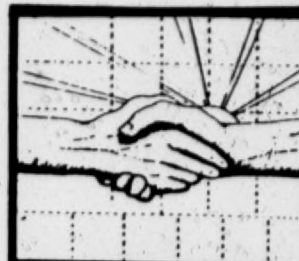

Rural hospitals call for help

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' small-town hospitals need more state money to keep operating, according to several lawmakers who say the gap between Medicaid payments to rural and urban hospitals is too wide.

"If one is treated for pneumonia at a hospital in Bellaire (near Houston), the rate of reimbursement is some $7,200. On the other hand, if you're treated in one of almost 100 rural hospitals across the state for the same disease the rate of reimbursement is something on the order of $2,200," said Sen. Richard Anderson, D-Marshall.

The formula for reimbursing hospitals for treating Medicaid patients is set by state and federal officials. Anderson called on DHS to increase the "standard dollar amount" it sets as part of that formula.

"We haven't had time to review it and it's a complicated, complicated thing. Rural hospitals over the state are having a tremendous time staying open. There is no question they are having financial problems," Johnston said.

HELPING PEOPLE
HELP THEMSELVES

The Hereford Center for PCS is pleased to share office space with the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). A variety of activities, geared toward developing the participant's potential for obtaining maximum employment, is provided by JTPA.

These activities include vocational assessment, job preparation training, pre-employment training, on-the-job training, occupational classroom training, and other work experience activities. There is no cost to the applicant.

In the last year, JTPA has spent in excess of $63,808 in Deaf Smith County and has served 114 individuals. To be eligible, a person must be 16 years of age or older, economically disadvantaged (receiving AFDC or SSI, receiving food stamps, income below federally established guidelines, or a foster child for whom state or local government payments are made); resident of one of the 25 counties in the service area; and registered for Selective Service if subject to current registration law.

This summer, JTPA has been involved in the implementation of the Summer Youth Employment Program. SYEP provides work experience during summer months to youths, 14 through 21, in governmental or private, non-profit organizations. The same eligibility requirements are applied as for the other JTPA services. Again, there is no cost to the youth for summer placement.

There are 57 young people in Deaf Smith County employed through the SYEP, with 12 employers involved. Our JTPA staff serves a five-county area (Swisher, Parmer, Oldham, Castro and Deaf Smith) and operates with a staff of three fulltime and two summer employees.

JTPA programs in the Panhandle of Texas are made available by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission as administrator.

Some people think the world owes them a living. The rest of us would settle for not owing the world.—I. Boyett

Last week, we wrote a column about statistics revealing that 53 percent of the effective buying income in Deaf Smith County is winding up in retail sales totals in other towns. We noted that spending just four percent more in Hereford would be equivalent to adding a $3 million payroll to the local economy.

Some other interesting figures can be gleaned from the survey of buying power listed in the Sales & Market Management magazine. For instance, the median age of the population in our county is 27.9. The 18-24 age bracket accounts for 9.7 percent of our population; 16 percent are in the 25-34 group; 18.3 percent is made up of persons 35-49, and 20.3 percent are 50 and older.

Retail sales figures for 1986 showed a total of $71.6 million, while the effective buying income was $153.1 million. That means that $81.4 million is being spent elsewhere.

The effective buying income for the median household in Deaf Smith County is $16,877. The percentage of households in four income groups looks like this: 32.9 percent are in the $10,000 to $19,999 bracket; 27.3 percent have incomes in the $20,000 to $34,999 group; 7.7 percent have buying incomes of $35,000 to $49,999, and 6.4 percent are in the $50,000 and over group.

A breakdown on retail sales in Deaf Smith County show that food takes the most dollars—32 percent of effective buying income. Automotive sales are next at 22 percent; eating and drinking places account for 8 percent; general merchandise is only 5 percent; furniture, furnishings and appliances reap 4 percent, and drugs and medicines 3 percent.

The survey lists Deaf Smith County with a population of 21,100 and the number of households at 6,600.

Hereford's Garth Merrick, owner of Hereford BiProducts, has expanded into the pet-food business and his "Beef 'n More" brand dog food is now available at Moore's Jack & Jill and a couple of other local stores. As advertised in The Brand, Beef 'n More is said to have more beef than any other dog food.

A number of readers have asked why The Brand hasn't had a feature on Merrick's new business. It's not that we haven't thought of the idea, it's just that Merrick has been too busy for an interview!

CLINT FOR V.P.

A year ago I vowed to never again blast Clint Formby in this column. I have kept the faith. It has not always been easy, since Clint tends to use me any time he runs out of soap for his morning show.

I have been silent through programs about my jogging from my office to the post office. I have said nothing in retaliation to the comparisons made between his grandchild (that is Alison with one l) and my grandchildren. I have nothing to say against his latest jab about me being a candidate for Vice President on the Democratic ticket. I remain true to my word.

I have nothing but praise for the man. Anyone who does not like broccoli and zucchini squash is alright in my book. Clint has a contest to name the vice presidential candidate. This is his latest effort to get someone to listen to his program, and it got me to thinking. I decided Clint would be the best possible Vice President of these United States. I am going to write Dukakis and tell him what he is missing if he does not dump Bensen and choose Clint.

Clint is a person of fame, not just a celebrity. A celebrity is someone whose face or name is recognized. Fame is when a person knows everyone in the world personally. Clint has had lunch with most of the people in the world. If a time ever comes when the president needs some contacts it would help to have a V.P. who had already spent a week in the islands with the person in question.

They say the vice presidency is not a meaningful job. The office consist of attending symbolic functions and going to the funerals the president does not care to attend. This will be no problem to Clint.

Clint has spent his life elevating the trivial. He could get a great deal of pleasure out of fussing about the weeds in Washington. He recently had a conniption fit about where the playground equipment was placed in the city park. This kind of dedication to issues makes Clint uniquely qualified for the job.

The Democrats chose Bensen, but the Republicans have not chosen their man yet. Does anyone know if Clint is a Democrat or a Republican? We need to start a grass roots campaign. Clint for V.P. has a nice ring, don't you think?

Gasoline tax hike not the solution

By Richard L. Leshar, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON—Without question the federal budget deficit is one of the greatest problems besetting our country, but a hike in the gasoline tax is not the solution.

When Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan recommended such a tax increase in May, the proposal acquired a level of credibility it does not deserve. Greenspan is an able man whose concern about the deficit is laudable, but higher taxes are not the answer.

To begin with, Congress has demonstrated several times in recent years that it is institutionally incapable of applying higher tax revenues to deficit reduction. In fact, tax increases have led consistently to even larger deficits.

But even if there were reason to believe Congress would actually use more revenue to reduce the flow of red ink, a higher tax on gasoline would still be the wrong way to raise more money for the government.

Greenspan suggested a hike in the federal gasoline tax of 15 cents per gallon which, he said, would raise $15 billion in taxes. Presumably, such a tax increase would also discourage consumption and perhaps lead to a marginal reduction in our use of energy.

But consider the downside. Recently, Wharton Econometrics performed an analysis of the probable impact of a 10 cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax. According to Wharton, such an increase would: reduce our Gross National Product by $10 billion in 1989, increase unemployment by 80,000 in 1989 and 180,000 in 1990, reduce personal savings by three percent, raise the consumer price index by 0.3 percent, reduce automobile production by 1.3 percent, reduce housing construction by 0.9 percent, reduce petroleum refinery output by 1.2 percent, and reduce tax revenues by $1 billion annually.

That's right—reduce tax revenues. The $15 billion increase in taxes collected at the pump would be more than offset by revenue losses resulting from the tax hike's overall impact on the economy.

And there are other good reasons to oppose such a tax increase. For one, gasoline is already heavily taxed. About one-third of the total prices is taxes.

Also, such a tax would fall hardest on lower income citizens who tend to spend a much higher percentage of their income on gasoline than do upper income workers. It would also impact disproportionately upon residents of rural areas and small towns who are required to drive about 40 percent more than their urban counterparts.

For most people, driving is not a luxury but rather a necessity. Few people enjoy the option of reducing their gasoline usage in response to higher taxes; they simply have to pay it. Also, keep in mind that fuel prices are one of the most critical leverage points in our economy. Virtually everything we use—consumer products, food, whatever—is transported by vehicle. A hike in the cost of vehicle fuel cannot help but be reflected in the cost of every item we use.

Congress should forget suggested tax hikes and concentrate instead on trying something new: cutting federal spending!

Ingratitude and Discouragement

"It may be said that a man's courage is proportionate to the amount of discouragement he can withstand without becoming discouraged."

—The Christian Science Monitor, Boston, Mass., Sept. 12, 1911.

"Courage is not blind endeavor to accomplish the impossible but the will to undertake that which is necessary if within the limits of human possibility of achievement."

—Scott County News, Oneida, Tenn., Nov. 2, 1928.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: A person's unhappiness is proportionate to his ingratitude. His ingratitude, in turn, is proportionate to his discouragement.

Discouragement is the cancer of self-depreciation which eats away the embryo of appreciation. Discouragement looks at the depth of impossibilities rather than the height of possibilities.

Discouragement is damnation in a pressure cooker. Discouragement is morale stuck in the mud, spinning its wheels. Discouragement is failure on a rampage. Discouragement is always within reach on the arm of procrastination.

It has been said that "Bravery is two-thirds fortitude, and fortitude is two-thirds patience." (Zion's Herald, Boston, Mass., Sept. 28, 1904.) The opposite of this is also true: Fear is two-thirds discouragement, and discouragement is two-thirds impatience.

Discouragement sinks into adversity, starves in the path of obstacles, eats on the corrupt fruits of laziness, and lies sleepless on the bed of worry.

A person who is discouraged all the time may be closing in on the absolute zero level of the thermometer of positive mental attitude. Discouragement is undisciplined fear.

The greatest source of courage is the Holy Spirit. Foundations of courage include a good self-esteem, spiritual motivation, the ability to make decisions and accept the consequences, self-confidence, and the efficient use of one's time.

Gratitude to God for one's opportunities is creative of initiative to utilize those opportunities and to create more opportunities.

ACLU Drug Test Reaction One More Example of What's Wrong

Objections raised by the American Civil Liberties Union to testing White House employees for drug abuse provide one more ex them.

If a White House employee wants to protect his "right" to refuse to participate in a random drug testing program, then the President has a responsibility to tell him that his services no longer are required.

A right to privacy does not carry with it a right to a job.

It should be quite obvious to everyone by now — even the ACLU — that drug abuse is a major national problem demanding tough attitudes and actions.

Crime — including both the white collar and the street variety — and other manifestations of a breakdown in the moral fiber of America can be attributed in large measure to the attitude that it is a violation of people's rights to subject them to screening, punishment or accountability measures.

No Fast Apology to Fanatical Iran

House Speaker Jim Wright and presidential candidate Jesse Jackson spoke prematurely in calling for President Reagan to make a direct apology to Iran and offer to pay reparations for one of our ships shooting down an Iranian passenger jet.

The president already has expressed regrets for the accident, and no reasonable person can doubt his sincerity. Further action should await the outcome of the investigation being conducted by the Navy.

Wright, who is visiting in London, reasoned that a direct apology might head off the retaliation that Iranian officials are threatening.

Jackson, who was in Boston, urged the president to go on television to apologize for the incident and offer to pay reparations to families of the victims.

The United States must not let the shock of the tragic mistake, in which 290 people aboard the jetliner died, stampede us into acting precipitously. Too many questions must be answered first. ... and extending his personal regrets. The United States has been generous in the past in compensating those we have wronged in error and compensation most likely will be considered in this case.

But it is too soon to do more than we already are doing.

— Waco Tribune-Herald, July 6

UN will compromise

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union and China criticized the United States for downing an Iranian airliner over the Persian Gulf, but the Security Council is likely to consider a compromise that distributes the blame.

Iran failed to get Security Council members to condemn the United States Friday for the July 3 attack that left 290 people dead, and most nations said the urgent priority is to end the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

The Soviet Union said the U.S. Navy must withdraw from the gulf in favor of a U.N. peacekeeping force.

"This tragedy has demonstrated once again that the U.S. naval fleet must leave the gulf without delay," said Valentine V. Lozinskiy, the deputy Soviet representative.

Iran had asked for the Security Council meeting on the shooting down of the Airbus A300 by the U.S. Navy cruiser Vincennes. The 15-nation Security Council adjourned the matter until Monday after debating the gulf disaster for a second day on Friday.

The council president for July, Ambassador Paulo Nogueira-Batista of Brazil, is trying to draft a document that would be acceptable to everyone and save face for Iran.

Iran's presence at the meeting was its first appearance at the council, which it has boycotted since the beginning of the Iran-Iraq war in 1980.

Diplomatic sources said council members feel Iran must achieve something at the meeting or it will continue boycotting the council and continue rejecting a year-old Security Council resolution that demands an immediate cease-fire.

On Thursday, Foreign Minister Ali-Akbar Velayati of Iran condemned the United States before the council, and Vice President George Bush said the Vincennes acted in self defense when fired on the airliner.

Pentagon officials said the cruiser's officers thought the Airbus A300 was an Iranian F-14 on an attack course.

Thirteen nations spoke Friday, including Britain, China, France, Italy, Japan, West Germany, Yugoslavia, Algeria and Argentina.

At a news conference Friday, Velayati said: "The attitude of the U.S. administration is similar to a rich man's son who drives when he's drunk. He thinks money can buy everything, and that is not true."

The Soviet speech, like others, was moderate, and Moscow sent only its second-ranking delegate to the debate.

In 1983, the Soviet Union vetoed a Security Council resolution condemning it for shooting down a South Korean airliner over its territory. That disaster killed 269 people.

All speakers Friday deplored the tragedy, but also said that the most important task is to end the war through implementation of U.N. Resolution 598, which calls for a truce, withdrawal to recognized borders, prisoner exchange and an investigation of who was responsible for the war.

Iraq has said it will accept the resolution if Iran does, but the Iraqis insist that Iraq be branded the aggressor before a truce. Iraq invaded Iran in September 1980 after several border skirmishes.

John Birch, deputy British representative, defended a nation's right to have its warships defend its shipping in international waters.

Pierre Brochand, the French deputy representative, said the international community "cannot pass judgment on such a tragic error without the results of an inquiry. We should take into account the conditions prevailing in the region ... fraught with insecurity because of the Iran-Iraq war."

WHAT'S SELTZER? WHAT'S SODA?

NEW YORK (AP) — Drinking seltzer to cut down on calories and sodium is not as crystal clear as it used to be.

According to Family Circle magazine:

— Seltzer is filtered, carbonated tap water.

— Club soda is filtered, carbonated tap water with added mineral salts containing sodium.

— Bottlers who add fruit and berry flavors are still selling a sodium-free noncaloric drink.

— If sweeteners are added, the product becomes soda.

Confusion arises when soda companies use seltzer in the product name yet produce sodas. Also, a claim of "no sucrose" is no guarantee that others sweeteners have not been used.

Ambassador out just in time

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was a close call, but Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnermann got out of town just ahead of a State Department-imposed deadline for his departure.

The expulsion order took effect at 5:30 p.m. EDT Friday, and Tunnermann left on a Continental Airlines flight with five minutes to spare.

To make sure the envoy got to his plane, about a dozen police officers were arrayed at the airline's gate at National Airport. Two police vehicles followed the jet out onto the taxiway, then pulled out to the head of the runway and waited for it to take off.

For Tunnermann, it was an unhappy ending to his 3½-year stay in Washington, in the somewhat lonesome role as the Sandinista government's chief defender in Washington.

Tunnermann served as both ambassador to the United States and the Organization of American States, and he maintained throughout that the United States had no right to expel him, citing guarantees contained in the OAS charter.

Shortly before leaving on his flight to Mexico City, he took a parting shot at the administration, insisting that the U.S. action threatened the independence of the OAS and saying his government would seek recourse through OAS legal channels.

In Managua, Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto issued a statement saying Tunnermann would remain as Nicaragua's ambassador to the OAS "until this controversy can be elucidated."

The statement reiterated the Sandinista government's position that Tunnermann cannot be prevented from being in Washington as the OAS ambassador, despite his expulsion as ambassador to the United States.

It called for the InterAmerican Legal Committee to resolve the dispute.

The OAS charter states that attendance at OAS meetings shall "not depend on bilateral relations" between any member state and the United States, which is host country for the OAS.

But the administration said a separate agreement between the United States and the OAS authorizes the U.S. government to order any OAS diplomat home.

The State Department ordered Tunnermann and seven diplomatic colleagues home after eight American diplomats, including Ambassador Richard Melton, were expelled by the Nicaraguan government on Monday for alleged interference in the country's internal affairs.

The administration described the U.S. response as retaliatory and said that in the case of Tunnermann and Nicaragua's military attaché, Major Pedro Sampson, the expulsion also was based on "abuses" of their privilege of residence.

Tunnermann repeatedly challenged U.S. officials to present evidence of the wrongdoing he and Sampson were alleged to have engaged in. The administration has steadfastly refused, saying it was under no obligation to provide details.

On Thursday, the U.S. ambassador to the OAS, Richard McCormack, said the administration had deferred expelling Tunnermann and Sampson earlier in order to avoid giving the Nicaraguan government a pretext for ordering home U.S. diplomats.

Tunnermann planned to fly to Managua today. His wife, Rosa, said she and the couple's seven children will remain in the Washington area, where they have a home in a fashionable section of suburban Maryland.

Pain Is The Signal: Bursitis Is The Problem

BY DR. GERALD GLASSCOCK
Doctor of Chiropractic

Recent sports stories have indicated that an everincreasing number of athletes have been sidelined do to bursitis. Is this a new disease caused by modern day diet or stress? Of course not.

For a long time baseball players, golfers, etc., have been taken away from their games because of 'sore arms,' 'frozen elbows,' and 'stiff knees.' Many of the difficulties were, in fact, bursitis. It's just that only recently the sportsmen have begun to call the problem by its right name.

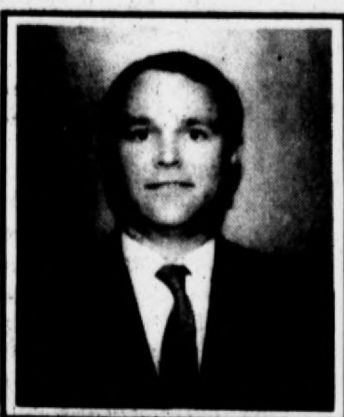

Of course, bursitis isn't a condition experienced only by athletes. Persons in their thirties and forties, especially the housewife, are particularly vulnerable to attacks.

And it isn't a condition that an individual can effectively self-treat through time and inactivity.

Left untreated, bursitis gets worse with activity and the pain can become so intense that throbbing discomfort can occur even when the lib is at rest.

When persons who are less active than athletes encounter the bursitis problem they are more prone to serious difficulty.

The long and short of it is that bursitis can affect almost anyone. And once it does, treatment is necessary. Untreated bursitis can affect almost anyone. And once it does, treatment is necessary. Untreated bursitis can lead to serious, permanent disabilities such as arthritis.

In other words, don't take a chance with bursitis.

Let the pain be your reminder that you need effective treatment. We urge bursitis sufferers to contact a Doctor of Chiropractic.

Hereford all-stars defeat Tulia, 10-2

By GARY CHRISTENSEN
Sports Editor

Hereford pitchers Chad Brummett and Jerry Rincon combined to strike out 12 Tulia batters, allowing just three hits in a 10-2 victory over Tulia Friday night in the Babe Ruth League 14 and 15-year-old district tournament in Hereford.

Brummett struck out six and gave up three hits in four innings of work, and Rincon pitched hitless ball the last three innings of the game, also recording six strikeouts. Both of the Tulia runs were unearned, off Brummett.

The victory put Hereford in the tournament championship game, which was scheduled for Saturday afternoon, plus a second title game if necessary.

Tulia score one run in the top of the first inning on an error which came after a pair of singles were hit.

Max Mungia singled, stole second base and scored on Amado Lopez's single for the first Hereford run, in the bottom of the first. Lopez went to second base on an error, stole third base and scored on Matt Bromlow's single to put Hereford on top, 2-1.

Hereford stranded two baserunners in the second inning, but took advantage of four Tulia errors and a wild pitch to score four runs in the third inning. Hits in the inning were singles by Mungia and Brummett, and a double by Petey Colvin.

Starting pitcher Brummett saw Tulia load the bases on him in the fifth inning, on a pair of walks and a fielder's choice. Rincon relieved Brummett and responded by striking out the first two batters he faced.

Rincon then got the third out of the inning on a ground ball hit to third baseman Ralph Martinez, for a force out at third.

The Hereford all-stars then scored a pair of insurance runs in each of the next two innings. In the fifth inning, Joe Riojas walked, stole second, advanced to third on a deep fly ball, and was driven home by Emmanuel Cepeda who singled.

Cepeda stole second base and went to third on an error. Cepeda took off from third base right when a throw was made from the pitcher to the third baseman, and he beat a throw home from third base to increase Hereford's lead to 8-2.

Lopez singled and stole a pair of bases in the sixth inning. Joel Gaytan batted in Lopez with a double, and Rincon added an RBI single to make the margin 10-2.

Pitcher Rincon struck out two of the first three batters he faced in the top of the seventh, and fielded a grounder for the final out of the game.

Catcher Lopez threw a runner out at first base in a first inning pickoff attempt, and also threw out a runner attempting to steal third base in the sixth inning.

Hereford had 11 hits in the game, including two each by Colvin, Brummett and Colvin.

But he needs good offensive linemen

Cowboys are now Herschel Walker's team

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — It's Herschel Walker's team now but don't expect him to get very far if the Dallas Cowboys' offensive line can't jell in training camp.

With Tony Dorsett gone to the Denver Broncos, Coach Tom Landry hopes to shift the primary work load on the muscular Walker.

Walker rushed for 891 yards on 209 carries and he wasn't a fulltime starter at tailback until his last seven games. He also had 715 yards receiving.

"If you project his totals in those seven games over a 16-game season, you're looking at over 1,500 yards rushing and 1,000 yards receiving this year," Landry said.

"Of course, our offensive line has to come through for Walker to be effective. Just based on the experience our young guys gained last year our line should be improved."

There are already potential offensive line problems for Landry as the veteran skill players — quarterbacks, receivers, running backs and centers — begin reporting Sunday.

Guard Crawford Ker is making noises that he might be among the missing when the balance of the veterans are scheduled to report on July 21. He is unhappy with his contract which would pay him $170,000 this year.

Also, there is Nate Newton's weight watch. He has all-Pro potential but also is blessed with a big appetite. He reported to camp early 35 pounds overweight (335) and was immediately banned to the "fat man's" table where he gets only fruit and vegetables.

Right tackle Kevin Gogan and guard Jeff Zimmerman also have weight problems and must eat low-calorie meals.

"If they keep their weight under control we could be pretty good," Landry said.

Landry plans to stay conservative on offense this year, feeding the ball to Walker and throwing low risk passes.

Quarterback Steve Pelluer was effective in this type of offense in the last two games of 1987 as the Cowboys ruined the playoff chances of the St. Louis Cardinals and the Los Angeles Rams.

"Steve won't have any guarantees going into camp although he is the starter," Landry said. "He's going to have to earn the job."

Veteran Danny White is waiting in the wings to wrest the job from Pelluer.

"There is still a question of whether Danny can be consistent in his throwing motion because of the wrist injury last year," Landry said. "We'll just have to see how the wrist holds up."

Landry said the Cowboys will have to develop a sharp passing attack to offset teams who load up to stop Walker. d "Herschel is going to be singled out as the guy you have to stop to beat the Cowboys and that forces you to throw the ball and that's why other players have to produce to take the whole burden off Herschel," Landry said.

The Cowboys hope they have signed the answer to teams loading up on Walker in wide receiver Michael Irvin, the Miami pass-receiving wizard.

"Michael should be good enough to force the defense to pay attention," Landry said. "He's fast and has tremendous hands. The threat of getting the ball to Irvin should help our running game tremendously."

The Cowboys' first preseason game is Aug. 6 in San Diego. The annual Blue-White scrimmage at California Lutheran College is July 30.

Dallas opens the NFL regular season on Sept. 4 in Pittsburgh.

Boys' major league all-stars to play in Bronco sectional

The Deaf Smith County boys' major league all-star team will play in the Bronco Sectional Tournament in Amarillo.

Hereford's first game will be at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday against the Amarillo Gold team. The other first-round game will be Amarillo Red vs. Amarillo Blue.

A victory by Hereford Tuesday would mean a 6:30 p.m. Thursday game. The sectional tournament games will be played at the Southwest Baseball Complex. The championship game is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Friday.

HHS rodeo club elects 1988-89 season officers

Officers for the 1988-89 season were recently elected in the Hereford High School rodeo club.

Toby Hill was elected president, Chris Northcutt was voted vice president, and Regina Lewis was elected secretary by club members.

The new year of the rodeo club begins with a team penning to be held in conjunction with the Cowgirl Hall of Fame Rodeo on Aug. 12-14. Club members voted in favor of the team penning and a jackpot barrel race as fund-raising activities for next April's Hereford High School Rodeo.

Club sponsors include Barry and Becky Smith, and co-sponsors John and Vicki Wilson. Anyone interested in joining the rodeo club should contact a club member or sponsor. The club will meet on July 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Center in Hereford.

Here are the members of the Hereford all-star team, the teams they played for during the regular season, and their coaches: Elias Reyna and Wade Backus, Braves; Chris Vallejo, Ray Hastings and David Torres, Cardinals; Ruben Ramos, Israel Martinez and J.J. Rico, Pirates;

Andrew Tijerina, Stacey Sanders, Michael Marquez and Jacob Lopez, Astros; Marc Haney and Ronald Torres, Yankees; Richard Wilbanks, Rangers; head Coach Joe Lopez, Astros; assistant Coach Joe Marquez, Astros; and assistant Coach Gary Ruckman, Pirates.

Trainer has seen baseball at its wierdest

By KEVIN SHERRINGTON
The Dallas Morning News
ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Bill Zeigler wrote a letter 18 years ago to his childhood hero, hoping for a job but willing to settle for Ted Williams' autograph.

He got both.
He soon discovered, however, it was more than just a two-for-one bargain. He eventually got 10 more Rangers managers, two ownership changes, and a franchise move.

As trainer for the Washington Senators-Texas Rangers, he also has wrapped an avalanche of ankles, taped a ton of knees and seen baseball at its weirdest and worst, on and off the field.

He wouldn't trade it for anything. "Basically," he said, smiling, "I'm still a fan."

The memory of 1972, the Rangers' first season in Texas after moving from Washington, was dampened by the players going on strike for the first time, he said. The Rangers' front office also sold one of his favorite players and the Rangers' only star, 6-7 slugger Frank Howard. It was one of nine deals made that season, not counting all the transactions in the farm system.

The team still lost 100 games. Times eventually got better and worse and better again, although Rangers observers say Zeigler has changed little, remaining unflappable, constant and interested, missing only two games in 18-plus years.

Zeigler's favorite Ranger in all that time was Williams, his Hall of Fame idol since Zeigler's days growing up in tiny Greencastle, Pa. His was not a casual worship. He named the oldest of his three sons Ted Williams Zeigler. Three posters of Williams are taped to a wall in the Rangers' training room.

What Zeigler liked most about Williams, besides his baseball ability, was his command of any subject, physically or mentally. He said

Williams once approached a bowhunting exhibit in an outdoor display in Chicago and, in 30 minutes, was shooting bull's-eyes, even though he had never used a bow before.

Williams resigned after one season in Texas, setting a one-year precedent that has proved to be a little less than the average term for Rangers managers.

Pitcher Gaylord Perry was another Zeigler favorite. One of Perry's quirks was to have his right arm, from shoulder to elbow, rubbed with a balm so hot that Zeigler had to wear gloves when applying it. Zeigler made the mistake of wearing only one glove once, and raised a blister over his upper lip merely by rubbing his mustache.

"Even if his shoulder was hurting him," Zeigler said of Perry, "that stuff burned so much he couldn't even think about it."

Perry, of course, had a penchant for anything that came out of a tube. He often was accused of throwing "spitballs" or balls that had been doctored with Vaseline. Zeigler said part of Perry's game was to make no secret of it.

He said Perry would act as if he were wiping his face with a towel while sitting in the dugout. Behind the towel, he would rub Vaseline on his neck. He did it in full view of the opposing team, Zeigler said, because he wanted them to be thinking about it, even though he says he didn't use the greaseball often.

"But, if he got in trouble, you bet he would," he said.

Perry worked through many physical problems, Zeigler said, but he rates the three toughest Rangers in his tenure as utility man John

Ellis: "You name it, he had a problem with it"; third baseman Buddy Bell: "He could hardly get out of a chair, his back hurt so bad. Then he'd go out and make diving catches"; and catcher Rich Billings: "He'd take a foul tip off his hand and you'd see him pulling his fingers back out, but he wouldn't say anything."

Zeigler says designated hitter Larry Parrish, who wears braces on both knees, falls into the same category. But advances in medicine and equipment have made it easier to treat players' problems, Zeigler said.

His field is certainly more advanced than it was when he left Florida State for a two-week trial with the Senators in 1970, an internship prompted by his letter to Williams and the recommendations of some friends.

He says the 18 years spent in his dream of major league baseball have been a collective high point. He made no mention of his 1986 duty as one of two trainers at the All-Star Game or his tour of Japan with a group of All-Stars after the season.

He admits, however, there have been a few lows.

"Some of the years here have really been tough," he said. "I feel like sometimes the Rangers have been a laughing stock in baseball, not just in the field, but in some of the things that had been done in the front office."

A few trades have bothered him. Bob Short, the first owner for whom he worked, was a "ruthless businessman," he said. And it always has been tough when the Rangers finished last.

7-year-old girl gets unassisted triple play

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — It wasn't the most pleasant experience, but 7-year-old Jessica Lafferty's reward for her pain was an unassisted triple play.

Jessica was playing shortstop for the Maroon team in Thursday's Chester-YMCA T-ball league game against the Royal Blues.

With runners on first and second, a Royal Blue batter hit a sharp line drive that struck Jessica in the chest. Jessica doubled over in pain, but in the process pinned the ball against her body for the first out.

Hurt and disoriented, Jessica stumbled toward her coaches, who were standing at second base. In the process, she recorded the second out by colliding with the Royal Blue runner who had strayed off second base.

Jessica, still cradling the ball and in obvious pain, eventually reached second, where she found the Royal Blue runner who had been on first. The player had not tagged out, and Jessica ran into him for the third out.

Jessica, flashing an occasional smile between sniffls, was able to stay in the game.

Veteran major league manager Dick Williams got into one World Series as a player. He batted .500 for the Brooklyn Dodgers against the Yankees in 1953, making one hit in two at bats.

Jean-Claude Killy, the great French skier, won a grand-slam in the men's division of the 1968 Winter Olympics. He captured gold medals in the downhill, the slalom and the giant slalom.

Sugar making comeback; use up in 1987

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar is making a comeback among American consumers after years of trailing other sweeteners and might be about ready to hold its own, says an Agriculture Department analyst.

Robert Barry of the department's Economic Research Service said that in 1987 Americans used more sugar, instead of less, for the first time in 12 years. Per capita consumption rose 3 percent to an average of 62.2 pounds for the year.

The deliveries of refined sugar to the food and beverage industries, and wholesale and retail markets, rose 5 percent from 1986 to more than 7.6 million tons.

Despite the increase, sugar still made up only about 40 percent of the 152.4 pounds average 1987 per capita consumption of all sweeteners, including those with calories and those without.

Barry said in the July issue of Farmland magazine that growth in the U.S. population and higher incomes have contributed to greater sugar use. But there are other reasons, and one of the most important involves HFCS, or high fructose corn syrup.

"After more than a decade of seizing markets from sugar in such diverse products as beverages, baked goods, jams and other processed foods, the cheaper to produce HFCS has come close to reaching its technical limit of substitutability," he said. "This has stanching the dramatic losses of sugar in the past 12 years."

Barry added: "Of course, there is the possibility of a technical breakthrough (such as) lower-cost forms of dry fructose or low-calorie sweeteners."

The sugar industry had been threatened by rival sweeteners for many years but suffered no major losses until about 1975 when HFCS emerged. Sugar prices were high at the time, and HFCS was cheaper to produce, an advantage it still holds.

At the time, in 1975, the beverage industry was sugar's largest single market, using 25 percent of the sugar available. By last year beverages used only 3 percent, turning to HFCS and non-caloric sweeteners for diet drinks. Sugar deliveries to the beverage industry dropped to 212,000 tons in 1987 from 2 million in 1975.

But in other industrial uses, sugar and HFCS are not always interchangeable, Barry said. For example, sugar deliveries to bakery and cereal manufacturers rose to 1.5 million tons last year from 1.2 million in 1975.

Candy makers increased sugar use last year by 9.1 percent from 1986. One reason is that HFCS, a liquid, is less adaptable in candy manufacture.

A big question for the future of HFCS involves federal sugar policy. Barry said that much will depend on whether sugar will continue to be supported by the government at current price levels, which encourage the development of substitute sweeteners.

The U.S. sugar policy also involves imports and measures used to protect domestic producers from cheaper foreign sugar flooding the market. Although there was some strengthening, in May the world price of sugar was still only 9 cents per pound, or only half of the U.S. support price.

Bills are in Congress which would lower the support levels, thereby reducing domestic output and boosting imports. That is the approach favored by the Reagan administration.

"Another initiative by the administration seeks to liberalize trade through multilateral trade negotiations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT)," he said. "The goal is to eliminate trade-distorting subsidies and allow better market access for sugar worldwide."

Barry said a freer world market could reduce sugar prices for American consumers but would probably also reduce the size of the U.S. sugar industry.

County approved for ACR haying, grazing

Deaf Smith County has been approved for haying and grazing of Acreage Conservation Reserve (ACR) and Conserving Use Acreage for Payment. Producers should check with the County ASCS Office for all the details. Producers will be required to sign a register in the County Office before haying and/or grazing ACR and CU/pay acreages. Producers will be allowed to sell the hay and charge for grazing on these acreages.

Along with the approval to hay and graze ACR and CU/pay, Deaf Smith County has been approved for haying acreages enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). Interested producers must sign a request in the County ASCS Office prior to haying these acreages. Producers will have until August 5 to request authorization to hay CRP and harvest the hay from the CRP acreage.

Producers that hay CRP acreages may now leave 10 percent of a field in one area rather than leaving buffer strips throughout the field. Hay may be sold to other livestock producers, but may not be sold to hay traders. In return for haying these acreages, the next annual rental payment will be reduced by 25%. Under no circumstance should hay be harvested without approval from the Deaf Smith County ASCS Office.

Grazing of acreages enrolled in the Conservation Reserve Program is not permitted in Deaf Smith County or any of the neighboring counties.

TCFA meeting slated Oct. 9-11

The 1988 Annual Convention of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association (TCFA), carrying the theme "Celebrate," is slated for Oct. 9-Oct. 11 in Dallas, announced Charles E. Ball, TCFA executive vice president.

The convention, in the Dallas Hyatt Regency, will likely draw more than 1,000 cattle feeders to celebrate their role in America's beef production system, Ball said.

"We choose the theme, 'Celebrate' because the entire cattle industry, including cattle feeding, has a great deal to commemorate," Ball said.

"With the passage of the referendum on the $1-per-head checkoff and a rebounding market for cattle in spite of the drought, 1988 promises to be a very pivotal year for the cattle industry. We thought it was appropriate to use our convention as a platform to 'celebrate' the industry."

TCFA represents cattle feeders in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. Last year, this three-state region produced 6.1 million fed cattle—about 23% of the nation's fed cattle production.

Pasco joins Holly Sugar

Holly Sugar Corporation has announced that Brian I. Pasco has joined the Corporation as Assistant Factory Technical Services Manager at the Hereford, factory.

In this position, he will be responsible for the supervision and operation of the Taring and Testing Laboratory, the Soils and Petiole Laboratory and for assisting in the Factory Process Control and Quality Control Laboratories.

Pasco, a native of Glens Falls, N.Y., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Pasco of Newcomb, N.Y. He attended Adirondack Community College at Glens Falls from 1976-77 and received an Associate of Science degree in General Science from Clarendon College in 1978. Pasco received a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology and Agriculture in 1980 and a Master of Science degree in Biology and Education in 1986, both from West Texas State University in Canyon. He served a three-year tour of duty with the 101st Airborne Division of the United States Army at Fort Campbell, Ken., from 1972-75.

Prior to joining Holly, he was employed as a Metallurgical Laboratory Technician for NL Chemicals in Tahawus, N.Y., a Science Teacher for Lakeview, Tex., School District from 1983-84, a Refinery Chemist for IBP, Inc. in Amarillo, from 1984-86 and was an Electronics Technician for Bell Helicopter in Amarillo from 1986-88.

Pasco and his wife, Kerry, reside in Hereford with their four daughters, Christina, Brandy, Jennifer and Heather.

Knowing their herbicides may save producers...a lot of grief. Experts urge producers to spend the time and effort in getting to know the herbicides applied to crops. They believe tests have shown good weed control and crop safety are essential for getting the most out of a crop's return. Tests conducted by herbicide companies and universities both indicate trying to save money on initial herbicide applications can easily prove to be a crop's downfall. Cheaper herbicides may sacrifice the crop's safety while proper selection at planting time of the correct hybrid varieties may make the difference in a bumper crop. Agronomists support farmers in spending the extra dollars on quality herbicides to produce maximized yield and make every bushel count.

IS LABOR AVAILABLE?—

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The cost and availability of labor is one of the major factors a company planning to relocate should consider, says A.J. Christopher Wood.

Wood, executive director of the Richmond Metropolitan Economic Development Council, says a company planning to move should determine if the labor pool is large enough and if it's growing at a rate to accommodate future needs.

Other questions that should be asked, he says, include: How important are local labor leaders in setting wage rates? What is the degree of unionization? What is the quality of labor — is it trainable and does a good work ethic exist?

The styles at the market showed the industry is reading carefully and absorbing the lessons revealed in current books and articles on societal trends.

It has become an article of faith that Americans are returning to traditional values. Traditional furniture is what the industry served up for the coming season. The products retailers had an opportunity to see and order will be in stores this fall.

Though you might not think so as you attempt to get service in a crowded department store on a Saturday afternoon, in the land of furniture design, the customer is now king.

In the leading showrooms, more sophisticated copies of antiques geared to higher consumer taste and educational levels were shown. Continuing a longstanding furniture industry style preference (though one that has not been strong lately), French country appeared to have an edge.

In a manner of speaking, Louis XIV gave us the concept of keeping up with les Joneses by establishing a glittering court where courtiers could top one another in tasteful purchases. Louis XIV, under whom the ornate French style reached its zenith, contributed investment decorating. Now, Louis XV has given us the Pierre Deux collection. The 92-piece collection of pieces of mostly Louis XV walnut pieces is manufactured by Henredon in cooperation with Pierre Deux, a New York-based importer of French antiques, reproductions and fabrics. Distinguished by its use of fabrics (which will be available at the 20 Pierre Deux retail fabric stores around the country), the collection was one of the hits of the market. The public will get to see it first at Bloomingdale's this coming fall, and at other stores soon thereafter.

Although three pieces were copied in France, by far the majority are made in North Carolina. To create the models for the carvings, "we kept almost every master wood-carver in North Carolina busy for quite a while," said John Jokinen, vice president of Henredon.

Perhaps it was the proximity of the Academy Awards, but at the market, similarities between furniture and movies leaped out. Both are selling dreams that money can buy. Film-makers look for a bankable star for their projects. Now, some furniture makers are doing the same.

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

When we do any remodeling in and around our house, the preferences we make regarding the kinds of material and the manner of construction usually are a compromise between our wishes and our budget.

Refinishing an attic to add living space to a house falls into this compromise category. To guide us properly in our choices, there are two things that must be done before we cut or hammer anything. One is check the local building codes to determine what can and cannot be done, since an unfinished attic becomes the business of the community when it is to be lived in rather than used for storage. The other is to check wherever you can (the homes of friends and relatives and dealer displays) to see what is available and how much it costs. While you can do most of the work yourself, most building codes specify that the electricity and plumbing be done only by licensed professionals.

There was a time when 2-by-4 studs had to be spaced 16 inches apart on center, but now you usually can get by with 2-by-3s either 16 or 24 inches apart on center. That's a time and money saver. Incidentally, "on center" means the distance between the center of one stud to the center of the next, which is not the same as the distance between the studs. And a 2-by-3 actually is 1½ by 2½, the 2 by 3 being the measurements before the wood is planed and made ready for the market.

Anything can be used for the walls and ceiling that is used elsewhere in the house, but the big seller is gypsum board because it usually is cheaper. Like plywood, hardboard and the other materials, gypsum board is available with decorative finishes as well as solid white. It's a kind of gypsum plaster sandwiched between tough paper.

Attic ceilings usually are 8 feet. You can make them any height you wish merely by where you nail 2-by-4s to the rafters, but the collar beams or joists must be at least 2 feet below the highest point of the roof. All of this planning, including the location of closets, built-ins, etc., should be laid out on paper. It makes no difference how rough your sketches are as long as they can be understood. This is a sure way to avoid unnecessary cutting, which is inevitable if you haven't worked out everything ahead of time.

Let your plumber and electrician decide at which point during the construction they will do their work. Most of the time it is after the framework has been installed but before the walls are put up. Sometimes the plumber will want to get his job done before anything else. Try to get commitments from these workers, otherwise you may find yourself stalled for days or weeks awaiting their arrival.

The finished floor usually is left for last, but it depends on what kind of floor already is there. If the attic has nothing but a few walk-on boards, it will be necessary to put down a subfloor. Later, when everything else is done, you can lay the resilient floor tiles or whatever you are using. If you install the finished floor some time during the construction, it is likely to get damaged.

No matter what the climate of the area in which you live, you will need insulation in the attic.

Ventilation above the attic insulation is important. This can be provided with vents so that air can flow in and out of them. Vents at the eaves and gable ends will do an excellent job, but even better is a combination of eave vents and continuous ridge venting. This is not always practical when you get around to attic remodeling, but bear in mind you will save yourself a lot of condensation and mildew headaches if you make sure there is a continuous flow of air under the attic roof.

Q. — We have an old dining room table badly in need of refinishing. I assume the old varnish may have to be removed with a commercial remover, but can you tell me how to refinish the table without taking this step. I intend to use lacquer as the final coat.

A. — If the old varnish is in bad shape, you must remove the old finish. Sometimes varnish can be applied over varnish, but the surface must be in fairly good condition in order to do it that way. And, whatever you do, do not apply lacquer over the varnish. It will wrinkle it up, since the lacquer thinner acts as a sort of varnish remover.

Jessica's nurse being deported

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — Even being a nurse to Jessica McClure, the young girl rescued from an abandoned well, is not enough to impress the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Despite appeals from such influential friends as the McClures, Mavis Felix-Walton must pack her bags and be out of the United States by July 26.

Ms. Felix-Walton is a British citizen who moved to the United States four years ago. She says she is being held responsible for her ex-husband's actions.

Her ex-husband Ronny Walton withdrew his petition support for her applications for U.S. citizenship.

"I have a lot to offer this community. It just isn't fair. I haven't relied on this state or this country for support," Ms. Felix-Walton told the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Jessica McClure, 2, tumbled into an abandoned well in her baby-sitter's back yard and spent 58 hours there before her dramatic rescue that captured national and international attention.

Ms. Felix-Walton was Jessica's nurse after the toddler was released from Midland Memorial Hospital.

On Monday, Ms. Felix-Walton received a certified letter in the mail from immigration officials ordering her to bring no more than two pieces of luggage to El Paso for immediate deportation at month's end.

But she says she should not have to leave.

Because of the current nursing shortage, she should be allowed to attain U.S. citizenship, according to her attorney, Paul Douglas of El Paso.

Ms. Felix-Walton said she successfully completed a required exam to allow her to work as a registered nurse as well as apply for permanent citizen status.

But, Douglas said the INS denied the application stating Ms. Felix-Walton was a "nursing coordinator" and not a "hands-on" professional.

The McClure family wrote a letter on her behalf to President Reagan, but learned later Ms. Felix-Walton must reapply for citizenship outside the United States.

Ms. Felix-Walton, who is 37, has been undergoing chemotherapy treatment since learning in March she had breast cancer.

On Tuesday, her cancer support group made a similar plea to first lady Nancy Reagan. But they received no response.

Douglas says he's not certain what will happen, although he did request this week that her file be reviewed by the assistant district director of immigration.

"She's a very nice lady and a wonderful nurse ... we're hoping for the best," said Douglas.

It's been a frustrating experience for Ms. Felix-Walton, particularly with the immigration service, which first notified her of the deportation proceedings in May 1986.

Four years ago, she met her ex-husband Ronny through her brother Martin, who at the time was living in Midland.

Their marriage ended in divorce, and Walton decided to withdraw his support of her citizenship before re-marrying and moving to San Angelo, Texas.

Ms. Felix-Walton says her biggest fear is being told after she leaves the country that she can never return.

Officials fight for baby's custody

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A woman who secretly gave birth in an airliner restroom concealed the pregnancy from her husband after he raised questions about her weight gain while they were having marital problems, a lawyer said.

The husband, Louis Locasto, saw his 3-day-old daughter for the first time on Friday and said he would fight to gain custody of her. Social workers filed court documents seeking to keep the baby for another 10 days.

"We'll make allegations regarding the behavior of the mother that resulted in the need for us to intervene on behalf of the child," said Robert McMillan, head of San Mateo County's Children's Protective Services.

Those allegations, filed in court Friday, are confidential, McMillan said.

Christina Marie Locasto, 24, surrendered to police Thursday and was charged with felony child endangerment for leaving the newborn under the restroom sink. She pleaded innocent and was released after posting $50,000 bail.

Locasto appeared shaken at a news conference Friday. He did not speak, deferring to his lawyer, and Mrs. Locasto did not attend.

"We are going to request in court Monday that the child be released to him as its father, and there are no charges against him" as an unfit parent, said his attorney.

MRS. CHRIS WILLOUGHBY
...nee Lynn Walsh

Residents' grandson weds Friday night

Wedding vows were spoken early Friday evening in St. Mary's Catholic Church of Amarillo by Katherine Lynn Walsh and John Christopher Willoughby, both of Denton.

The ceremony was performed by Msgr. Francis Smyer and Fr. Ken Keller, both of the church, and Fr. C.C. Burleigh of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Church of Shreveport, La.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Eugene Walsh of Shreveport. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wayne Willoughby of Alpharetta, Ga. and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Willoughby of Hereford and Mrs. Ellwood Skypala, also of Hereford.

Decorating the church altar were large candelabra, trimmed with white flowers and ribbons, and ferns which also accented the sanctuary area as did large arrangements of lilies and roses.

Leslie Walsh of Shreveport served her sister as maid of honor and Scott Willoughby of Atlanta, Ga. was his brother's best man.

Bridesmaids included the bride's sister-in-law, Sheri Walsh of Dallas, and Michelle Raef of Amarillo and Lana Greer of Fort Worth. Groomsmen were the groom's brother, Eric Willoughby of Atlanta, Ga., and Terry Pepper of Amarillo and Huntley Valentine of Denton.

Guests were escorted by the bride's brother, David Walsh of Dallas, Matt Gohlke of Denton, Todd Addington of Dallas and the groom's cousin, Todd Reynolds of Kerrville.

Prayers of intention were read by the bride's uncle, Dr. Dick Walsh, and readings were given by Scott Willoughby and David Walsh.

Tiffany Carter of Amarillo lit candles.

Eric Willoughby performed "Trumpet Voluntary" and the Rev. Burleigh sang "Ave Maria." Dr. Kevin Raef also sang and was accompanied by Jim Gardner and violinist, Keith Riden.

OUTFOXING SKEETERS

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Down in the Florida swamps, legend has it that mosquitoes grow so big they're often mistaken for migrating waterfowl. Florida is also the home of skeeter expert Dr. Carl Schreck of the Agricultural Service in Gainesville.

Follow these tips from Schreck in Better Homes and Gardens magazine to beat the skeeters:

— Use a repellent containing DEET. The more DEET the better, up to about 50 percent. Fifteen percent is the maximum for kids, who have more sensitive skin.

— Choose a lotion, lightly applied, for bare skin. For clothes, sprays work best. Repellents can creep, so avoid putting them close to eyes, nose or mouth.

— Stay in open areas away from trees and shrubs where mosquitoes rest.

— Avoid dark-colored clothing, which look like leafy pit stops to the myopic marauders.

Pregnancy workshop planned in Hereford

The West Texas State University Division of Nursing will sponsor a High-Risk Pregnancy Workshop at Deaf Smith General Hospital from 6-9 p.m. Monday, July 25.

The workshop is open to RNs, LVN, nursing students, allied health personnel, EMS personnel and other interested health care providers and community members.

Registration fee is $20 for health care workers and $10 for students at the door. Late registration and check-in will begin at 5:30 the night of the program.

Pre-registration fees are $16 for health care providers and $8 for students. Participants may pre-register by calling the division of nursing continuing education office at (806)656-2648.

Other workshops will be held Monday, July 18 at Dumas; Tuesday, July 19 at North Plains Electric Co-op in Perryton; Thursday, July 21 at Central Plains Regional Hospital in Plainview; Tuesday, July 26 at Childress General Hospital in Childress; and Thursday, July 28 at HCA Coronado Hospital in Pampa. All workshops will be from 6-9 p.m.

The program will focus on identification and current management trends of the high-risk client. Pregnancy-induced hypertension, gestational diabetes, preterm labor and teenage pregnancy are among the topics of discussion. Nursing implications for caring for clients with little or no prenatal care and factors relating to transporting high-risk clients will also be discussed.

The program will be presented by Nancy Lee Schnell, MSN, CNM, RNC, assistant professor of nursing at WT. Schnell earned a master's degree from Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., and a certification in nurse midwifery from Catholic Maternity Institute in Santa Fe, N.M. She has practiced as a nurse midwife at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md., and with the U.S. Public Health Service at the Navajo Indian Reservation in Shiprock, N.M. Schnell has taught maternal/infant nursing at WT For 10 years.

Red Cross Update

The Uniformed Volunteers met for their regular luncheon Thursday with President Ruth King presiding over the business meeting.

Plans for the Jubilee were discussed and plans for a game booth, food booth and splash time at the City Pool were made. The recent garage sale report was given and thanks extended to all of those people helping with it.

Those present for the meeting were Alice Gilleland, Bert and Mildred Brown, Laura Walker, Bertha Dettmann, Nell Culpepper, Mary Jane Burrus and Betty Henson.

An Adult Fitness Swim and a one week adult swimming class will begin Monday, July 18, at the City Pool. The Fitness Swim and the class will be held beginning at 6:30 p.m. and finishing by 7:30 p.m. Registration will be held at 6 p.m. Monday at the pool before the class starts at 6:30 p.m. Cost of the swim and the class will be $2.50 for the five evening classes.

The Water Safety Instructors class will begin with a meeting Monday, July 18, 6 p.m. at the City Pool. Debbie Black Davis will be the Water Safety Instructor Trainer for the class. Those interested in helping teach this lifesaving skill-swimming and water safety-are asked to attend this meeting.

The Board of Directors will meet Tuesday, noon, at the Red Cross office.

The Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross is a United Way Agency.

WORKING MOTHERS RATE
APPLIANCES HIGH

The Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers surveyed the readers of Working Mother magazine last year to gather information about the use of 16 major and portable appliances in dual-career families.

Some of the results were quite predictable and others a little surprising. Here are some of the conclusions:

—Ownership and use of a washer and dryer, dishwasher, garbage disposal and microwave oven saves working mothers 20.5 hours a week, the equivalent of a part-time job.

—Dads use microwave ovens more than any other appliance. Over 56% report using the appliance regularly.

—Over 60% of the women reported that their husbands help with the laundry, but only 23% of them do so regularly.

—Over 87% of working moms say ironing is done weekly in their homes, with at least 42% devoting an hour or more to the task each time.

Has the fashion trend to natural fibers created more wrinkles than the permanent-press generation can stand?

—Microwave ovens are used regularly by over 89% of mothers employed full-time outside the house.

—Ownership of slow cookers among working mothers was almost double the national ownership rate of 42%.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Summer readers

People of all ages have gotten involved with programs held each Tuesday at the Deaf Smith County Library in conjunction with youngsters' summer reading program. Some parents have been helping with the programs; among a few fathers assisting with last Tuesday's "Balloon Space Creature" session was Rupert Solis, shown with daughter Nicole in left photo. "Space Creatures and Paper Gliders" will be the featured theme of the July 19 program set for 10 a.m. Grand finale of this summer's reading club will be held July 27 at the library also beginning at 10 a.m. as a "Space Costume Party" is slated. Some of the children in the older age division are shown in the bottom photo as they compose creatures carrying out the reading club's theme of "Trailblazers, Stargazers."

A CHANGE OF HEART

Because I have always equated going to the dentist with unpleasant situations (going through labor or being made to watch 24 consecutive hours of football), I was thrilled to discover the perfect doctor for me.

With just one visit, this man, who is a combination dentist, Chevy Chase, Dr. Sigmund Fraud and Bruce Springsteen, alleviated all my fears while being very entertaining.

Before I became acquainted with my new friend, Dr. David, I would get so stressed out at the mere thought of just keeping a dental appointment that I began experiencing acute physical symptoms: insomnia, extreme nervousness, nausea and lack of concentration. I didn't want anyone sporting a mask and armed with a hand drill trying to pry my way into my mouth.

Once I made a dental appointment, I would go to great lengths to cancel using all sorts of ridiculous excuses like, "I can't possibly come in today, we have company from Africa" or "I have two flat tires and I'm too weak to walk the three blocks to your office because I'm coming down with double pneumonia."

If I finally did keep an appointment, my fears would be manifested after the initial examination when the dentist would gleefully announce (as he clapped his hands and grinned), "Looks as though we will be seeing a great deal of each other over the next several months!" (He didn't mean a tete-a-tete).

Dr. David and I finally crossed paths when my husband suggested that I have my teeth cleaned. How bad could that be? Surely the dentist wouldn't need his drill and besides I was long overdue for my check-up.

Unfortunately, several days after I had made the appointment, I began feeling the usual fears and called to cancel. Unknown to me, my husband had already warned Mary, the receptionist, that I might be cancelling, so she was prepared for anything I might say.

After listening to me babble for several minutes, Mary responded, "Your husband has already told us you might wimp out on us, so save everyone a lot of trouble and be here. Have a good day!! (how humiliating)

My appointment day arrived and I found myself reluctantly standing in the reception area with knees knocking and hands shaking. I spied a pile of magazines and had hoped to stall for time by reading but I was immediately ushered into the examination room. (This was the first time I have not had to wait in a doctor's lobby for at least two hours)

I was greeted by this very charming dentist and his eager-to-please assistant. I was offered a glass of water, had a choice of using the "laughing gas" (which I readily accepted) and then was asked what type of music I preferred to listen to while being examined.

During my hour-and-a-half session in the chair, I was perfectly at ease and had a great time listening to Dr. David tell corny jokes and humming a few Beatles' tunes.

It's been several months since my last dentist visit, but I'm looking forward to my next one. I hope to hear some Beach Boys medleys this time around and possibly some new joke material.

John Martel, a nationally acclaimed trial lawyer who has tried nearly every type of case from murder to antitrust, has written a book entitled Partners.

The law firm of S.P.&M. is on the brink of financial ruin and only the senior managing partner, Austin Barrington, knows of its condition. Barrington sees a chance to save the firm by taking the most sensational case in the firm's history. As the multiple plaintiff suit against a powerful corporation develops it is clear that Barrington will stop at nothing to win.

Kevin Stone, the "best and brightest litigator of the firm" finds his ethics and expertise strained to the limit. He also feels a growing attraction for his beautiful colleague, Rachel Cannon, who is desperately striving to become the first female partner at S.P.&M. Rachel knows this case can make or break her career.

Then there is Don Conti, a street smart homicide detective whose gut feelings tell him the violent death of a plaintiff in the case isn't the suicide it seems to be. Dan also cares for Rachel, and knows as he comes closer to finding the killer that it may cost her the partnership she has worked so hard to get.

Ban Marche' by Chet Hagan is a historical novel during the birth of the new nation of America. Charles Dupree has left the French fleet to witness the surrender of Cornwallis. As he begins his life in a new country Charles Dupree changed his name to Charles Dewey. When the westward movement begins, Charles Dewey joins in. Finally settling in Nashville, Dewey begins to build his dream, Bon Marche', an estate devoted to the breeding of race horses. This epic rich in historical detail is one you won't want to miss.

The bestseller The Mysteries of Pittsburgh by Michael Chabon begins "At the beginning of summer I had lunch with my father, the gangster, who was in town for the weekend to transact some of his vague business... That night he flew back to Washington, and the next day for the first time in years, I looked in the newspaper for some lurid record of the effect of his visit, but of course there was none. He wasn't that kind of gangster."

This is the story of Arthur Bechstein coming to terms with his father, the gangsters, and the mysterious death of his mother. This is a summer in which Art will discover the Cloud Factory, and become bewitched by Phlox and Arthur, his namesake.

The Breakthrough: The Race for the Superconductor by Robert Hazen is the firsthand account of a scientific search for a compound that could conduct energy without the loss of power in extreme temperatures. In February 1987, Robert Hazen, research scientist at the Carnegie Institute of Washington's Geophysical Laboratory, received a message from Professor Paul Chu at the University of Houston that put them both at the center of the scientific race of the century. By mixing three ordinary substances Chu had gotten alchemic results: a compound that was a perfect conductor of electricity at a much higher temperature than ever before. Chu needed Hazen to identify the precise compound discovered. Thus Hazen and Chu were forced to compress months of experiments into a breathtaking race against thousands of scientists worldwide.

Abundant Life

PERSONAL STRENGTH
By Bob Wear

Effective living requires great 'personal strength'; inner strength; mental, moral and spiritual strength. This is the strength essential to personal usefulness and well-being; the strength to cope with the various elements of the total living experience.

There is work to be done, and we want to do it well. There are good opportunities to be used; opportunities for self-improvement, for helping others, for serving the common good and other important opportunities. We need strength for making the best of these opportunities.

There will be trials to endure; trials such as illness, disappointments, failures, frustrations, and other trials which are part of the human experience. All aspects of the living reality require great 'personal strength', which can be developed by each one of us.

The strength we need will come from the wisely chosen value system; from our personal integrity; from diligent adherence to the best available guidelines or standards; from our respect for and our understanding of others; from the wise management of our personal business; from our willingness to do a little more than our share; from diligence in study and work; and from our acceptance of realities without resenting them.

We must guard against the loss of 'personal strength'. This means that we must be realistic in setting goals for ourselves. We must be sensible about accepting our personal limitations. We must not try to function in a state of anxious concern. We must not neglect our obligations, because, if we do, we create situations which will overload us and erode our strength.

Our strength will continue to increase, when we keep our lives clean; our goals sensible; our faith sound; and our hope realistic.

"There should be no embarrassment whatsoever about asking about prices for a funeral service."

"When you're my age, you usually have had to make funeral arrangements for someone who is near and dear to you. And I can tell you it's never an easy thing to do.

"You have so many decisions to make... the funeral services are involved in some of them. And most of the time you really aren't prepared to make those decisions, especially if it's an unexpected loss. In fact it's best to have a pre-need plan before you require these services."

The personnel at Rix can arrange the kind of service that you feel you can afford either at time of need or by having a Pre-need Plan before the inevitable happens.

Give Rix your ideas in this instance, ask for a price list and an explanation of services, then stay within the budget you set by selecting the services you want.

Pre-planning takes much of the pressure off you at the time when death does come to a member of your family. Let our professional counselors give you the experience that comes with years of service.

For more information on Pre-need funeral plans call us or fill in the coupon printed below and we'll be glad to answer any questions you may have.

Please send me information about your Pre-need funeral plans. I think this might be the answer of how to arrange a memorial service which would be in keeping with my personal desires.

Death Act guidelines available

You and your doctor work together to make important treatment decisions that help preserve your health. One important decision that you may want to discuss now with your doctor and family is the Texas Natural Death Act, says the Texas Medical Association.

The Texas Natural Death Act guarantees the right of individuals and families to direct the withholding and withdrawal of life-sustaining procedures from terminally ill patients.

A terminally ill patient is defined as one who has an incurable illness or injury, which is a physician's medical judgment will result in death despite life-saving procedures. The act does not condone, authorize, or approve mercy killing.

A form called a "directive" is one way for you to inform your doctor of your wishes not to use artificial methods to extend the natural process of dying. Your doctor will keep it on file if the time for such a decision ever arises.

In addition, terminally ill patients can express their wishes verbally, provided it is observed by two qualified witnesses and the patient's physician. These wishes also must be noted in the patient's medical record.

For persons under age 18, certain persons can carry out the wishes of the patient. These persons include the patient's spouse (if over age 18), the patient's parents, and the patient's legal guardian.

Also, an adult can designate a person to make a treatment decision when they are incompetent or comatose. In this case, the attending physician and the designated person make the decision to withhold or withdraw life-sustaining procedures.

The wishes of any patient who remains competent and decides to change the directive always override the wishes in a directive.

TMA advises anyone who wants to make the directive to talk it over with family members and with his or her doctor first.

For a Texas Natural Death Act guidelines and directive form, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Texas Medical Association, attention B. Nettle, 1801 N. Lamar Blvd., Austin, Texas 78701. No phone calls please.

The Texas Medical Association is a professional organization with more than 28,000 physician and medical student members. It is located in Austin, and has 116 component county medical societies around the state.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing in reference to the woman who wanted to have another baby but her husband said, "Three is enough." You suggested that her husband get counseling. You gotta be kidding.

Twelve years ago my wife wanted another baby and I said, "Six is enough." It's a good thing I was adamant. A few months later she decided that being a wife and mother was "too confining." She wanted to be a free spirit. The woman simply took off and left me to raise the six children, ages 6 to 16. I did a pretty good job of it, with the help of the older ones, but I am baffled by your answer, Ann. I don't believe it was one of your better responses.—A Different view in Long Island

DEAR VIEW: You weren't the only one. Read on:

Hello, Ann Landers: Are you there? I mean ALL there? You told that cuckoo lady who wanted a fourth child, "Women like you make wonderful mothers." Wrong! Obviously, she is compulsive about motherhood. Such women don't mother—they smother. You need a vacation, old girl.—Tulsa

From Dubuque, Iowa: The woman with three children who signed herself, "Empty Nursery, Aching Heart" sounds as if she has an empty head and no heart. I'd give anything

ALCOHOL HARDER TO HANDLE

NEW YORK (AP) — As we get older we become less able to handle alcohol, according to a recent study on the effects of alcohol on the aging.

Because of this, says AIMPUS magazine, many older people can become problem drinkers even if they don't increase the amount of alcohol they had been drinking previously.

Dr. David Bienenfeld says many of the symptoms attributed to getting older, such as insomnia, decreased sex drive and depression, might instead be caused by alcohol. Bienenfeld, director of the Division of Geriatric Psychiatry and director of the Center for Adult Development at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center, suggests abstaining from drink can be an effective way to eliminate many of the so-called "old age" symptoms.

to have a child. My husband and I would be wonderful parents, but after eight years of trying, I guess it was not meant to be. When I read that letter I was furious. I felt like a person who was starving to death watching someone consume a seven-course dinner and then complain because she was still hungry.

From Modesto, Calif.: A fourth baby? Is she nuts? Overpopulation has become a critical global problem. We are running out of ozone, clean air and drinking water. We are depleting our forests and our national resources. People are dying of starvation. Nobody needs a fourth child in light of these facts.

From New Haven: What a dippy answer! Don't you know that most women with large families are trying to compensate for their unsatisfactory marriages? My wise old grandfather had an expression for women like that: "All mother, not enough wife."

New Orleans: In my 15 years of practicing psychiatry, I have never seen a situation where everything was perfect except the one area that the patient focused on. It's like the battered wife who says, "Our marriage would be wonderful if my husband didn't beat me every night." Your correspondent claims that her life would be ideal if she had a fourth child. Can it be that the woman's self-worth depends on having someone young and helpless who is totally dependent on her?

Omaha: Your correspondent was mistaken when she wrote, "All he has to do is get me pregnant. I'm the one who must carry and give birth to the baby." There's more to being a father than impregnation. For the next 18 years he must feed, clothe, educate and nourish the spirit and soul of his children or he cannot consider himself a father. That female needs to take a second reading.

Rochester, N.Y.: Is it possible that she wants babies rather than children? Does she yearn to be a incubator or a mother? If mothering is her primary desire, she already has plenty of opportunity with three children.

Soo-o-o, dear readers, that was a sample of this week's Ann-bashing. Just pass the humble pie and I'll eat it.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. What's the secret to English muffins that look like the ones I buy at the grocery store? D.F., Justice, IL

A. Cook muffins in 3- to 4-inch circles on a hot, ungreased griddle. Turn once while cooking. Cool on a rack. Before toasting, separate muffins into halves using a fork.

Q. What do you suggest to grease baking sheets? R.C., Parma, OH

A. Use solid shortening. Butter and margarine tend to burn and food tends to stick when they are used.

Q. What's the difference between sour cream and dairy sour cream? B.M., Marshall, MI

A. Primarily the differences are consistency and who sours it. Cream is soured either by adding an acid or a bacteria culture. Dairy sour cream has been soured before you buy it. You can sour whipping cream by adding lemon juice or vinegar. Recipes normally call for dairy sour cream.

Cream that has soured over a period of days or weeks in the refrigerator is not recommended for cooking.

Do you have a question? Write Dear Betty Crocker, Box 1113, Dept. Betty, Minneapolis, MN 55440.

TIP OF THE WEEK: A slice of kiwi fruit rubbed on tough meat tenderizes it.

NEW YORK (AP) — The chicken industry is worried.

According to a study in Discover magazine, Americans ate an average of 402 eggs per capita annually in 1945. Today, that number is 262.

Concern over the ill effects of cholesterol is primarily responsible, and cholesterol-free synthetic egg products have flourished. One such product made from egg whites and tofu not only has no cholesterol but also fewer calories (50).

YOUR EYES

GLAUCOMA

Acute glaucoma is not a major cause of vision loss in the United States. Because this type of glaucoma attacks suddenly, accompanied by pain, headaches and often visual "halos," and reduces vision rapidly, it usually receives quick medical attention.

But chronic glaucoma, which is the leading cause of blindness in the nation, sneaks up on you. There is no pain, and central vision usually remains clear. Yet the vision loss sustained by the patient can be severe and irreversible. This loss of vision starts with the loss of peripheral vision and then progresses to the loss of central vision.

Picked up early, chronic glaucoma is controllable. And the best way to check is through routine eye examinations that include special glaucoma testing. Adults over 35 should have this glaucoma test annually, especially if there is any history of glaucoma in the family. Your optometrist can perform glaucoma tests and refer you for further treatment if necessary.

Miles, Bowles united in marriage July 3

Cassy Christine Miles of Ojai, Calif. became the bride of Michael Robert Bowles of Hereford during an afternoon wedding held July 3 in Oak Grove Park in Camarillo, Calif. Jim Short of Ojai officiated for the couple.

The bride is the daughter of Robert and Sandra Miles of Ojai and the bridegroom is the son of Mike and Juanita Bowles of 202 Northwest Drive.

Leslie Davis served as maid of honor and the groom's brother, Peter Bowles, was best man.

Bridal attendants were Kelly Dolan, Cathy Cluff, Meredith Washington, Melinda Scheid, Jennifer Perry and Michele Carnes. Groomsmen were the bride's brother, Robert Miles, and Steve Elkins, Kirk Washington, Tony Andrzejewski and Mariano Juarez.

Flower girl was Allison Walbridge, daughter of Allan and Dorothy Walbridge, and ring bearer was Jonathon Lunsford, son of Rick and Rhonda Lunsford.

Kirk Washington played the guitar during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white satin gown covered with delicate white lace. The fitted bodice formed a cameo lace neckline and the V-shaped back of the gown was created by matching scalloped lace. The long lace sleeves featured minicap sleeves and extended over her wrists. The full lace skirt, designed with two tiers, was tea-length in front and gently flowed to ankle-length in the back.

The three tiered veil of bridal illusion was edged in pencil lace and attached to a pouff at the back of a headpiece adorned with flowers. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and white roses accented with greenery and baby's breath. Her jewelry consisted of a wishbone pin.

Meredith Hanna invited guests to register at the reception held in Oak Grove Park. Therese Naylor served cake and was assisted by Cindy Carr.

The couple left for a wedding trip to Rosarito Beach, Mexico, and are making their home in Encinitas, Calif.

The bride graduated from Villanova Preparatory School and is currently a junior student at the University of California in San Diego, Calif.

The groom, a 1982 Hereford High School graduate, is now serving in the United States Marine Corps stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Hereford residents attending the wedding included the groom's parents, his brother, and Charlotte Lund, an exchange student from Denmark currently residing with Mr. and Mrs. Mike Bowles. Also, present was former Hereford resident, Jon Douglas, a student at the San Diego Golf Academy.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES JESKO

Anniversary celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. James Jesko celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with a Mass and reception Saturday evening. The event was hosted by their children.

Jesko married the former Beverly Thomas on July 13, 1948. They have resided in Hereford most of their married life and have been involved in the insurance business for 20 years. They are members of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and are active in the American Legion Auxiliary.

Children of the couple are Deborah Bullard, Becky Sanderson, Bernadette Wright and James R. Jesko, all of Hereford, and Karen Reinart and Jennifer Banner of Clinton, Clinton. They also have 21 grandchildren.

During the Middle Ages, the year began at various dates in different times and places. In England it was not until 1751 that January was restored to its place as first month, as it had been during the Roman era.

Social Security

QUESTION: I am confused about Medicare payment for dental care. What does Medicare cover?

ANSWER: Medicare medical insurance can help pay for dental care only if it involves (1) surgery of the jaw or related structures, (2) setting fractures of the jaw or facial bones or (3) services that would be covered when provided by a doctor. And if you need to be hospitalized because of the severity of a dental procedure, Medicare can cover your hospital stay even if the dental care itself is not covered by Medicare. Medicare generally does not cover care in connection with the treatment, filling, removal, or replacement of teeth; root canal therapy; surgery for impacted teeth; and other surgical procedures involving the teeth or structures directly supporting the teeth.

QUESTION: I was in an automobile accident 4 years ago which left me with a disabling injury. Since my condition has not improved

I have not been able to work. I'm thinking of getting some type of job because I need the extra income. If I'm able to get a job, will my Social Security disability benefit stop?

ANSWER: Not immediately. If you return to work before there is a significant medical improvement in your condition, you can be eligible for what is known as a trial work period. The trial work period, which lasts up to 9 months, allows you to test your ability to work. If you show you are able to work, you are paid benefits for 3 additional months after the end of the trial work period. But if your attempt to work is unsuccessful and you are still disabled, your benefits will continue without interruption.

What Does a typical Brand Reader Look Like?

The Hereford Brand

"We Reach Thousands Every Day!"

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!

"I back the family insurance I sell with good neighbor service. Call me."

Wopat enjoys much-different role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Wopat says after seven years on "The Dukes of Hazzard," with its good ol' boy stereotypes, working on his newest series seems like "the Promised Land."

Wopat stars in the CBS summer series "Blue Skies," in which he plays an advertising executive who gives up his career in San Francisco and returns with his new family to his hometown in Oregon.

"Blue Skies," half-way through an eight-week run, also stars Season Hubley as his wife, Pat Hingle as his father and Kim Hauser, Alyson Croft and Danny Gerard as their children.

"Dukes" was a great education for me," says Wopat, "but when I started working with Carol and Nigel McKeand it was like the Promised Land. The writing quality is so good. And after a few weeks they began writing to my personality, which they should. The attention to detail is so good."

The McKeands, who are the executive producers, also created "Family," a successful ABC series in the 1970s.

"I had no desire to get right back into another series," Wopat says. "But this show seemed like a wonderful opportunity to get back to the TV audience."

In "The Dukes of Hazzard," he and John Schneider played cousins Luke and Bo, who never seemed to have anything better to do than to tear around Hazzard County in the General Lee — a souped-up Dodge Charger — and foil the latest scheme of the corrupt county politician Boss Jefferson Davis Hogg and the dimwitted Sheriff Roscoe P. Coltrane.

After he and Schneider finished work on "Dukes" in 1985, Wopat resumed his musical career that had languished during his TV days.

"I focused all of my energy on musical pursuits, both in Nashville and in New York," says Wopat. "I'm pretty firmly established in Nashville now. My second album, 'Don't Look Back' from Capital Records, is coming out in July."

"When we finished the series I did a revival of 'Carousel' in Washington. Then I did an off-Broadway show called 'Olympus on My Mind,' which is based on a Greek legend. I played the god Jupiter. While I was doing 'Olym-pus' I got a call to do the 'CBS Morning News.'"

Wopat says McKeand, who was looking for a lead for "Blue Skies," happened to see the interview while he was shaving. "It was pure dumb luck," he says. The two-hour pilot was filmed on location in Ferndale, a picturesque little town known for its Victorian architecture near Eureka in Northern California. After he finished the pilot he went to Nashville to work on his new album. Then he came back to do seven episodes.

"I play Frank Cobb, who was a widower with two children who marries a woman with one child. There are some interesting conflicts with the children, hers and mine."

"I also have some conflict with my father, Henry, played by Pat Hingle. He's angry that I came back because he wanted me to rise above his humble beginnings. It's a matter of communication. The generation gap still exists. There's conflict, but also a lot of affection."

Last year Wopat was reunited with Schneider for a TV movie, "Christmas Comes to Willow Creek." It was an opportunity for them to work together again — this time outside their "Dukes" roles.

"I enjoy working with John," says Wopat. "We feed well off each other. But we're two completely different actors. I don't mind doing more work with him. But I think both of us want to show that we can do more than that."

Working on the railroad

Santa Fe Railroad workers look on as a machine lifts tracks out of the railbed near the Lawson Street crossing. A worker explained that the rails had sunk too deeply into the ground after the area's plentiful rains and had to be pulled up by the machine.

Winning designers

Deaf Smith County Library will offer bookmarks to the readers soon courtesy of Matt Artho and Israel Herrera, Jr., shown from left. The youngsters' designs were chosen by library personnel during a recent bookmark contest held in conjunction with the library's summer reading program. The winning designs are currently being printed on bright paper and will feature the names of their originators. Artho, age nine, is the son of Edward and Virginia Artho; Herrera, age 12, is the son of Israel and Hope Herrera.

Accent on Health

Wild Animals Are Main Carriers of Rabies

Summer in Texas usually includes increased outdoor activities. Fishing, camping and hiking, whether on public land or on private retreats, are popular both for native Texans and for vacationers from other states.

And besides the benefits of the fresh air and exercise, the outdoors offers an opportunity to watch abundant wildlife, including some species which are unique to this state.

Except in remote areas where one may glimpse a rare mountain lion, bobcat, or wolf, there are a few warm-blooded animals which are naturally threatening to humans.

But the Texas Department of Health (TDH) cautions that even a squirrel or raccoon can be dangerous, if handled. A bite or scratch from any animal can become seriously infected, but it is wild animals which are the primary carriers of rabies. When people or domestic animals contract the disease, it is usually through contact with an infected wild animal, according to Dr. Foy V. McCasland, Chief of the TDH Bureau of Veterinary Public Health.

TDH laboratories in Austin, Houston, San Antonio, and El Paso diagnosed 432 cases of rabies in 10,748 animal specimens during 1987. Only 69 of those cases (29 dogs, 19 cats, 13 cows, 6 horses, and 2 goats) were domestic animals. The remaining cases included 278 skunks, 66 bats, 15 foxes, three raccoons, and one armadillo.

There were no cases of rabies in humans reported during the year.

Dr. McCasland said, "Since there is no approved rabies vaccine for wild animals, and since these animals are likely to bite or scratch sooner or later, they should not be adopted as pets." He especially advised against handling wild animals showing abnormal behavior, such as those showing no fear for man and those observed in unusual places at unusual times. Such behavior is a clue that the animal may be rabid.

Pets should be vaccinated to protect them and their owners. State law requires that all dogs and cats four months old and older must be vaccinated annually against rabies.

"If you are bitten by a wild animal, it should be tested at TDH for rabies. If the animal is a dog or cat, it should be isolated and closely observed for ten days," Dr. McCasland said. Dogs and cats cannot transmit rabies more than ten days before they show symptoms of the disease. All bites should be reported to the local health authority, which will provide specific advice and assistance.

Card of Thanks

The outpouring of love from so many was overwhelming at a time when it was so needed. A special thanks to Dr. Perales for the excellent care he gave our mother and deepest appreciation to Bettye Powell, Helen Savage and Lydia Perez who so lovingly nursed her the last four months. Thanks to all of you beautiful people for the food, visits, cards and memorials.

Create seasonal salads, dessert using pasta

Pasta and chocolate, two of America's favorite foods, combine to create an undeniably scrumptious dessert. Chocolate-flavored pasta, the newest dessert trend, is even showing up in some pasta markets.

Satisfy your craving for pasta and chocolate with this delightful Rotelle Kugel, Au Chocolate, or discover cool pasta salad potential with these unique recipes:

ROTELLE KUGEL, AU CHOCOLAT (Makes 12 servings)

3½ cups uncooked rotelle
2 cups half and half
5 whole eggs
½ cup granulated sugar
3 teaspoons unsweetened cocoa
1½ cups chocolate wafer crumbs, crushed fine
7 tablespoons butter
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ cup mini-chocolate chips
Cook rotelle according to package directions, reducing cooking time by 2 minutes. Drain, cool and set aside. Using 1 tablespoon butter, thoroughly coat inside of a 2½ quart baking dish. Combine crushed chocolate wafers with 6 tablespoons melted butter and press into bottom of baking dish. Chill. Meanwhile, beat eggs, half and half, and all remaining ingredients well, except mini-chocolate chips. Toss mini-chips and rotelle together and arrange evenly in baking dish. Pour liquid slowly over rotelle mixture. Bake, covered, in a preheated 350 degrees oven for 1 hour. Remove cover and continue to bake for an additional 15 minutes. Cool 30 minutes before cutting. Serve warm topped with whipped cream.

CHICKEN AND SNOW PEAS WITH FRUIT AND PASTA (Makes 6 servings)

Serve this refreshing and unusual combination on a warm summer evening to your weekend guests.)

8 ounces uncooked spaghetti or fusilli
1 whole chicken breast, boned and skinned
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
5 or 6 nectarines, depending on size, pitted and sliced
4 red plums, pitted and sliced
¼ pound fresh snow peas or 1 10-ounce package frozen snow peas, thawed
6 green onions, sliced
1 cup walnut pieces, chopped
8 ounces uncooked spaghetti or fusilli
Dressing:
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup white wine vinegar
1 tablespoon crumbled fresh rosemary or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary
1 teaspoon salt, or more to taste
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Mix dressing before preparing other ingredients. Set aside; do not refrigerate. Cook pasta according to package directions, drain, rinse with cold water and drain again. Toss with ¼ cup dressing. Do not refrigerate. Melt butter in olive oil; saute chicken breast in the oil mixture until just done; do not brown. Cool, slice into thin strips.

Pour boiling water over pea pods; do not cook. Drain. Combine chicken, nectarines, plums, snow peas, onions and walnuts. Toss gently with remaining dressing. Chill. At serving time, add chicken mixture to pasta and toss thoroughly but gently.

SPAGHETTI AND MOZZARELLA SALAD (Makes 6 servings)

Pasta with a creamy texture and a tangy taste. This is a nice side dish with any broiled or sauteed meat).
16 ounces uncooked spaghetti or fusilli
1 tablespoon olive oil
8 ounces mozzarella cheese, shredded
3 tomatoes, chopped
½ cup watercress, chopped
½ pound fresh snow peas, blanched, or 1 10-ounce package frozen snow peas, thawed
1 cup frozen tiny green peas, thawed
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Dressing:
¾ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons herb vinegar
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
Cook pasta according to package directions; drain well, and toss with 1 tablespoon olive oil. Add the shredded cheese to the hot pasta and stir over very low heat until cheese melts. (Don't worry if cheese seems gummy—it will separate when the other ingredients are added.) Remove from heat and toss gently with the remaining ingredients except dressing. Combine dressing ingredients and toss with pasta mixture. Pass the Parmesan separately.

ANY SEASON SALMON AND SHELL SALAD (Makes 6 servings)

(You probably have the makings for this salad in your cupboard or refrigerator right now. If not, substitutions are easy.)
8 ounces uncooked shell pasta (or other macaroni type)

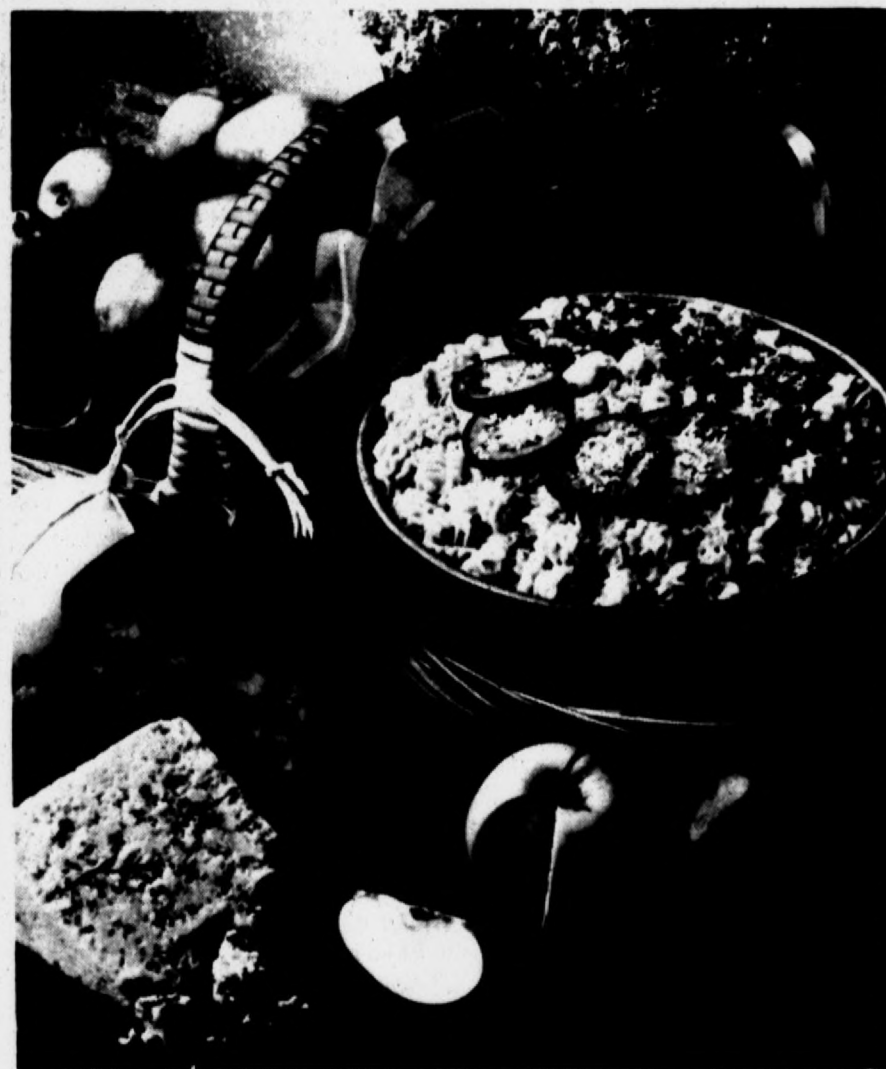

1 16-ounce can red or pink salmon, well drained, skin and bone removed
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup pimiento stuffed olives, halved
1 cup frozen peas, thawed
½ cup chopped fresh parsley small onion, chopped or 4 green onions, chopped
½ red or green pepper, julienned
Dressing:
½ cup salad oil, or half salad and half olive oils
3 tablespoons lemon juice

1 tablespoon vinegar
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dried dill weed, or to taste
½ teaspoon salt, or more to taste
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Cook pasta according to package directions; drain well, mix with 1 tablespoon oil and refrigerate. Whisk all dressing ingredients in a small bowl or shake well in a covered jar. Add salmon, vegetables and almost all the dressing to the chilled pasta. Chill another ½ hour before serving. Taste for seasoning and add more dressing if needed to moisten.

The tallest woman basketball player was Juliana Semenova who played on the 1976 Russian Olympic team and stands seven feet two inches tall.

Sawyer eyes winners, losers

EDITOR'S NOTE — He's a seasoned practitioner of a relatively new, steadily booming and widely mistrusted profession in America. David Sawyer, political consultant, didn't have an entry in the recent presidential primaries, but he has some definite views on why the winners won and the losers lost.

By JULES LOH AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — David Sawyer sat on the sidelines during the presidential primaries just ended, an unusual place for him in a hot election campaign. But there he sat, like a maestro in the audience, enjoying it, making notes.

"Dole," he says, reflecting on the campaign that one writer likened to a demolition derby, "made some errors that hurt him, ruined him. So he lost. Bush won. Bush made few errors. Dukakis, on the other side, made few errors and Dukakis won."

David Sawyer is a political consultant.

He is a Democrat and works only for Democrats. He also is a seasoned practitioner of a relatively new, steadily booming and widely mistrusted profession in America.

One popular perception of a political consultant is that of a modern-day Machiavelli who knows how to use electronic guile to manipulate a benighted electorate into mistaking form for substance.

"Nonsense," says Sawyer, but it is obvious that he feels some of the skills that good political consultants do bring to a campaign were lacking in some of the races this spring.

Robert Dole's, for instance. The Republican senator, in Sawyer's view, "failed badly in organizing his campaign and developing his strategy. He didn't appoint a strong team. He tried to run it all himself, and you can't do that." Dole, he feels, would have made a more formidable opponent for Dukakis.

"George Bush, on the other hand, put together a superb organization. The campaign carried the candidate. People who run a good campaign have the edge."

Michael Dukakis? Dukakis enters the fall campaign much less damaged than Walter Mondale was when he entered the '84 campaign. Dukakis is beholden to none of the special interest groups that Mondale was identified with. Dukakis ran a simply fine campaign and it paid off."

David Sawyer is 52, trim, with thinning gray hair and gray eyes. Whatever it is that he and his partner, Scott Miller, do to gain that edge they are apparently financially successful at it. Their well-appointed suite of offices overlook Central Park in one of Manhattan's classiest midtown neighborhoods.

In the past five years the Sawyer-Miller Group has doubled in size from 20 to 40, reflecting the meteoric rise in America of the political consulting trade.

They even have a trade association, and it has grown from 75 members 10 years ago to 650 today. Its president, Brad O'Leary, estimates that as many as 3,000 professionals in America may be considered political consultants.

The consulting fraternity had its origins in the advertising agencies summoned off Madison Avenue by politicians, a practice roundly criticized in the 1968 book, "The Selling of the President."

In an ironic turnaround, Sawyer has expanded into the commercial field using techniques learned in political campaigns. He represents political candidates but also Coca-Cola, Apple Computer and a dozen or so others, mainly those dealing with unexpected market changes and stiff competition.

Political campaigns require his company's complete attention, Sawyer says, and mainly for that reason he sat out the primaries. "We felt we wouldn't be able to give our commercial work all it deserves. If we do any political work this year it will be in the general election campaign."

This election year an estimated $1.8 billion will be spent on politics with $500 million going for TV ads and $100 million for political consultants. For that kind of money, politicians must consider a consultant's service as something more than that of a debating coach.

True, says Sawyer, but hardly more sinister.

"A political campaign is like a war," says Sawyer. "In a limited period of time you have to seize certain territory and hold it. It involves strategy and tactics. I work on both levels."

"The strategic team, about 10 people, are experts in various categories who determine how the candidate positions himself, how he contrasts himself with his opponents, which issues in the array of issues he believes in should be the key issues of the campaign."

It was on the strategic level that Albert Gore stumbled, according to Sawyer.

"Although he was very attractive, he began to be seen as opportunistic, changing his strategy. He ran as a defense candidate, then as a Southern candidate, then as a Jewish candidate, then as an economic populist candidate."

"It is very important to develop a single-minded, clear strategy. Gore ended up with four or five different strategies which made it difficult for any one of them to be heard."

Dukakis, for his part, Sawyer says, "had such great strength in terms of money, credibility as a sitting governor, and such a first-rate campaign organization it was tough to compete against him." Of all the contending Democrats, Dukakis emerged in Sawyer's view as the most electable in November.

The tactical team's job, says Sawyer, is to figure out how to communicate a candidate's complex agenda, often in 30-second bites.

"Not just for TV spots; the nightly news is done in 30-second bites as well, or less. It's the nature of the business nowadays and it isn't all bad. You can express your position on some pretty complex issues in 30 seconds."

"The reasoning, the subtleties, come out in the formal debates and the print media. The electorate, in my opinion, has never been better informed about the position of the candidates on any issue and on his or her character."

The tacticians' techniques, helped along by advanced technology including instant polling, videotape and Federal Express, are where consultants show their battlefield savvy.

"You have to be able to take advantage of every opportunity, change your strategy on a moment's notice. Often it's a matter of timing."

Sawyer demonstrated this last year in the Kentucky Democratic primary. Sawyer's firm, like nearly all consultant firms, represents candidates of only one party. That race put him up against two others with similar reputations as heavy hitters among Democrats — Bob Squier, representing former Gov. John Y. Brown, the early favorite; and David Doak and Robert Shrum, representing then-Lt. Gov. Steve Beshear, the leading challenger.

Sawyer's candidate was Wallace Wilkinson, a political unknown who registered only about 5 percent in the polls and was given little chance to improve.

Little chance, that is, until the last two weeks of the campaign.

"Our two opponents began attacking each other with spots accusing each other of all sorts of things, and both advocated a tax increase."

"We discovered, through polls, that the voters disapproved of the negative campaigns they were waging against each other. So we moved in quickly. We said in effect that they were both right in their accusations, and we pushed for a lottery that we had advocated all along instead of new taxes."

"We had the overall strategy but we needed an opening to execute it and that gave us the opening. We exploited it. Call it guerrilla tactics."

Whatever you call it, Wallace Wilkinson is now governor of Kentucky.

Could any campaign consultant's tactics have saved Gary Hart?

"Absolutely not. Hart was doomed as soon as the Donna Rice episode came out. The most important thing people need to have is trust in their leader, trust in his judgement and his character. Hart sacrificed any trust the people could have had in him."

Sawyer was lured into politics from a career as a producer of documentary films in 1970 when he was asked to do some film work for a candidate for governor of Illinois. By 1974, he was into political consulting with both feet.

His batting average has stayed at about .750, good enough for the big leagues (clients include four sitting senators and six governors) and for an expanding foreign trade as well. His clients also include Corazon Aquino, president of the Philippines, and Israel's foreign minister, Shimon Peres.

An old superstition had it that a newborn baby must be carried upstairs before it is carried down. This act supposedly guaranteed the child would rise in the world and have a successful life.
