E. W. BROWNING AND 'PEACHES' JOINED AT LAST

Second "Cinderella Girl" Becomes Bride Of Wealthy Man

PARENTS CONSENT

Aged Man and 15-Year-Old Girl Are Quietly Married

COLD SPRINGS, N. Y., April 10.—(AP)—Edward W. Browning, wealthy 51-year-old real estate operator was married today to Frances (Peaches) Heenan, 15, his second "Cinderella girl."

Browning, Miss Heenan, her parents, William B. and Mrs. Caroline Heenan, accompanied by three men and two women appeared this afternoon at the plumbing shop of Gilbert Forman, town clerk of the township of Philipstown, Putnam county.

At their request, he issued a marriage license for Browning and the girl after Mr. and Mrs. Heenan had signed the papers necessary for the marriage of their daughter, who was too young to be married without parental consent.

Browning gave his age as 51, his residence as New York City and said he had been married once before. Miss Heenan gave her age as 15 and her residence as Cold Spring.

Justice Marries Them.

After obtaining the license, the party went to the home of Justice of the Peace Roy W. Christian of Cold Springs, who married them.

According to Town Clerk Forman, Miss Heenan had been living here for the past three or four days. It was learned that Browning has taken a year's lease on one of the largest homes in town, a 15-room building on a two-acre estate owned by a woman now living in California.

The clerk said that Browning had expressed the intention of living in the house with his wife. Forman in his capacity as plumber received the contract to repair the plumbing in the leased home, but said he did not know until he issued the marriage license that the place was to be occupied by Browning and his youthful bride.

Browning's engagement to Miss Heenan was confirmed by his secretary on March 31, when it was first learned that he had been seeing the girl frequently. He refused at that time either to confirm or deny it.

Miss Heenan, however, announced their engagement on April 2, and said they would be married after her sixteenth birthday in June. Several investigations were started. The children's society began an inquiry into Browning's relations with the Phi Lambda Tau sorority to which Miss Heenan belonged.

Police Investigate.

At the same time the police were investigating an attack on the girl March 27, when her face and neck were burned by acid thrown upon her as she slept in her mother's apartment. They were unable to discover who threw the acid.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children ordered Mrs. Heenan and her daughter to appear in children's court in an investigation of the fitness of Mrs. Heenan as a guardian for the girl. The case was adjourned for one week on the presentation of a doctor's certificate that Miss Heenan was unable to leave her room because of the burns.

Miss Heenan was Browning's "second Cinderella." In August, 1925, he had adopted Mary Louise Spas of Astoria to be a foster sister and playmate to Dorothy Sunshine Browning, 9, whom he had adopted six years before.

The adoption was annulled after an investigation had revealed that Miss Spas was 21 years old instead of 16, as Browning had at first thought.

$50,000,000 Suit Is Filed In Austin

AUSTIN, April 10.—(AP)—Reports of the quantity of oil extracts from the Humble oil field near Houston, involved in the state $50,000,000 suit against R. L. Blaffer et al during the past six months, are sought in a motion filed today by Mrs. Gertrude Goldman of Houston, by her attorney, William E. Hawkins of Breckenridge. Mrs. Goldman is one of the defendants and cross complainants in the case. Previous reports show that oil companies have produced oil valued at $8,000,000. The state claims that the 645 acres is a vacancy, not being in any survey. Trial is set for May 17 in the 53rd district court of Travis county.

Canadian Officials Say Return To Beer and Light Wines Helps Manitoba Province Temperance

Lawlessness and Crime Disappear With Bootleggers, Former Enforcement Chief Tells Senate Hearing

WASHINGTON, April 10.—(AP)—A week's drive against the Volstead act before a senate committee was wound up today by the wets with the testimony of former Canadian officials as to improved conditions in provinces which have turne daway from prohibition and with further demands of labor leaders for legalized beer.

Although the wets still have 11 hours of actual hearing time remaining in which to complete their case, they consented to give way Monday to the drys who desire to put on the stand a number of women in attendance at the Woman's National Law Enforcement conference which opens here tomorrow.

Sir William Stavert of Montreal, former member of the Quebec liquor commission, declared that province had "banished the bootlegger" by returning to restricted license and had increased temperance.

Describing conditions in Manitoba since prohibition was voted out, Francis William Russell, president of the Moderation league of that province, said there was an increasing purchase of beer and wine and a falling off in hard liquor consumption and that conditions as to temperance had improved.

Asserting that there never had been such a crime wave as that experienced during prohibition, Mr. Russell said Manitoba is rid of that 'now.

"It passed out with the bootlegger and the rum runner,' he said.

"The only people who are not satisfied with restricted license are the irreconcilable fanatics,' he declared, as the crowd which packed the committee room roared with laughter.

The spectators got another laugh when Mr. Russell declared that most of the sales of hard liquor were to visitors.

"We feel that our legislation is the best temperance legislation ever written," the witness said at another point.

Describing the operation of the Manitoba law, Mr. Russell said all sales were under permits issued to the purchasers whose character was investigated in advance.

"Is there any limit on the amount one can purchase?" asked Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri.

"Yes, you can get only one case of hard liquor a week," was the reply amid a gale of laughter.

ARMY TO LOSE INTREPID FLYER

Lieut. John S. MacReady Will Resign from Air Service

DAYTON, Ohio, April 10.—(AP)—Lieutenant John A. Macready, intrepid explorer of altitudes, trailed the white vapor of his ship's exhaust among the clouds today, fell short of the world's record, made a forced landing and announced he was leaving the army air service.

Fifteen times Macready has attempted to surpass the record set by Lieutenant Callizo of France of 39,586 feet. Today he doffed his helmet and left the mark for some other airman to strive for. The highest point he has ever attained was 38,740 feet Jan. 29.

The lieutenant, who in less than a decade rose from a buckprivate in the cavalry at Reno, Nev., to one of the world's best known and most daring fliers, said he was leaving the service for the more remunerative job of selling electric refrigerators.

McCook field officials withheld comment on the resignation awaiting its formal submission. Macready indicated it would be presented in a few days.

King Winter Makes Another Stand In Texas Panhandle

DALLAS, April 10.—(AP)—Snow in the Panhandle and rain and wind, punctuated by electrical storms and burning oil tanks in other sections, gave April in Texas anything but a spring appearance today. Half a foot of snow fell early today in the vicinity of Amarillo.

While the hosts of winter were battling spring in that section, moisture dripped from every other part of the state. The whole of East Texas, including Dallas, was drenched throughout last night and the rain continued intermittently today.

In the lowlands of this vicinity flood conditions prevailed as the Trinity river crept over its banks to cover the low ground. Houses in the outskirts had water over their first floors.

West Texas Mohair Brings High Prices

Ray Cunningham, representing the Ryder and Brown company of Boston who bought his mohair, said it was agreed that the price was not to be made public it was certain there would be no similar sales.

STORMS STILL PEPPER CITY

Heavy Rainfall Comes Late In Day to Flood Streets

A miniature cloud burst that left widely scattered sections of the city flooded momentarily, at least, came late Saturday afternoon as the most severe of several stormy invasions that kept Wichita Falls completely under raincoats throughout the day.

It was another day of dripping skies and overflowing gutters that gathered a deeper accumulation of mud as the showers, some brisk, some mild, peppered this territory almost without intermission.

The heaviest rain broke about 5 o'clock after a period of more or less aridity. It came down in torrents for a few minutes and left the lower depressions inches deep in muddy water. North Witchita, Scotland addition were especially hard hit, the North Broadway road, for example, standing half-a-foot deep in two or three places.

A maximum temperature of 61 degrees was recorded during the day, while the minimum was 48. The sun was unable to peep through the cloudy covering at any time and a northeast breeze with a 10 mile an hour average prevailed.

Burning Oil Tanks Create Vacuum in Atmosphere.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Sal., April 10.—(AP)—The mystery of just what caused the series of mighty air convulsions northeast of the burning Union Oil tank farm here last Thursday morning which left utter destruction in its path has emerged unsolved fo ma maze of opinions and cojectures.

Some oil men advanced the theory that the terrific snapping of the columns of flame and smoke in the air above the roaring cauldron probably created a vacuum in the air around which whirlwind developed and swept out over the surrounding lowland.

Lad Lost Near San Angelo Beaten to Death By Pellets

SAN ANGELO, April 10.—(AP)—Exposure while lost in a hail and rainstorm for six hours yesterday resulted in the death of Emmett White, 8, at Best Reagan, county today.

Three hundred people in the oil field had joined the search before his unconscious and almost frozen body was found at 9:25 o'clock last night. It lay face downward only three miles southeast of Best.

White, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. White of Best, had gone with three boys past the water tower south of town to look at traps. When the storm threatened two of the youths turned back and when it broke, White and an older companion were hurrying homeward. In the sudden semi-darkness, White, pelted by hail and rain, became confused and ran with the storm, unheeding and perhaps not hearing his friends entreaties.

The older boys reached home safely and search for young White began immediately. After he was found hospital physicians said his lungs were congested as if he had suffered several days with pneumonia.

AX TO FALL ON 9 FORCE MEMBERS MAYOR DECLARES

Commissioners Neither Deny Nor Affirm Rumon That Chief Hodgins Is Slated for Dismissal

Drastic reorganization of the city police department which, within the next 30 to 60 days, will involve discharge of from six to nine men now on the roll was definitely demanded by the city council at a lengthy executive session Saturday afternoon. The decision of the council was announced by Mayor R. E. Shepherd following the hearing from which press representatives were excluded.

Neither the mayor nor any of the commissioners approached after the session would either affirm or deny that the shake-up contemplated the ousting of Chief of Police George H. Hodgins. Neither were the names of the men slated for the official axe and who are presumed to have come under the council's disapproval made public.

For Good of City

In commenting on the decision Mayor Shepherd stated: "The council feels that in asking reorganization of the police department and the resignation of several of its members that it is acting in the best interests of the city. The action is taken as an aftermath of a thorough investigation of the department. No especial charges are made against any one member, or against any group. Cognizance is taken, however, of crime conditions in the city and the apparent futility with which they have been combatted in some instances. It is my belief and the belief of the commissioners that in asking what we do we may be acting in the best interests of both the department and the city itself."

Follows Long Discussion

Saturday's meeting of the council is the climax of some two weeks of discussion, pro and con, of the police department. It follows two meetings of business men of the city sponsored by the chamber of commerce, the meetings themselves the outgrowth of various safe-breaking jobs in the city two weeks ago, at which time resolutions were adopted calling for reorganization of the police department and branding it as inefficient. The council was denied immediate action following those meetings due to the illness of Frank Queisser, police commissioner.

In official circles it has been no secret for some time that a drastic revision of police department activity was to be demanded by the council in the near future. The nature of this, however, has been shrouded in more or less mystery since Mayor Shepherd and all the commissioners have remained silent. Police department executives, also, have had nothing to say about the situation, although they have consistently defended themselves with assertions that the local department was operating as efficiently as any that could be found; and that crime conditions in Wichita Falls were no worse than those to be found in any other city of similar size in the country.

It was learned Saturday, also, that within the past two or three days at least two members of the force have severed their connection with it—whether voluntarily or not it has not been revealed.

Plans Nearly Completed For Woman's Forum Club Home Drive

MEETING HELD HERE SATURDAY

$50,000 Campaign to Be Made in Behalf of New Building

Plans for promoting the drive for the proposed $50,000 club house for the Wichita Falls Woman's Forum were nearly completed Saturday night in a meeting of the finance committee held at the home of P. P. Langford when details of the campaign, which starts April 19, were outlined.

The Woman's Forum was organized a year ago, and during that time has reached a membership of almost three hundred while 22 affiliated clubs are the membership is made up of women connected with it. The personnel of in this city and in nearby towns—women who have been working for the advance of Wichita Falls.

The purpose and object of the Forum is far reaching and it has already outgrown its first object of self improvement, it is now looking toward the betterment of the city and the enriching and broadening the lives of others.

Same As The C C.

A well known busines man said in speaking of the proposed new club house that it would bear the same relation to the women of Wichita Falls that the chamber of commerce bears to the men of the city.

"The Forum is reaching the lives of many new women of Wichita Falls," Mrs. P. P. Langford said in speaking of the organization. "They come to the city and bring with them ideas that are good for us, and we have ideas that are good for them. Membership in the Forum is democratic. Any woman of good moral character, with a desire for self im- Wichita Falls is eligible for membership."

provement and the betterment of Mrs. Langford made the assertion that it is selfish just to "study to improve ourselves, but we must consider others as well. Today is the brotherhood of man and a woman does an injustice to herself and her family if she does not reach beyond her home.

To Aid Development.

"Those who are helping to build the club are considering the building of Wichita Falls, for they are building a place where its women citizens may have an opportunity for development.

The purpose and object of the Forum is to reach every woman; for those who are interested in the aesthetic and the artistic, there are the departments of music and art; the literature that appeals to the serious or non-serious; the homemaking instinct may find interest in the health department which includes homemaking; there is a creative side, especially for those who are interested in writing, the journalism department has been organized recently. The civic department will probably appeal to every woman who is interested in civic housekeeping, and the moral standards of the community in which she lives, Mrs. Langford said.

She reiterated that the club was not an exclusive club but had old fashioned ideals to be kept alive in Wichita Fals.

Educate the Mind, the Hand And The Heart and You Have a Man In Every Sense, Lee Tells U. Club

Famous Speaker Tells Members Here That a Three-Fold Training Is Necessary For Obtaining Best Results

Educate the hand only and you have a machine; educate the mind only and you have a villian; educate the heart and you have a zealot; educate all three and you have a man prepared to live and prepared to die.

So said Josh Lee, lecturer, humorist and soldier poet of Norman, Okla., where he is head of the public speaking department of the University of Oklahoma, who spoke before the University club Saturday at the noon luncheon at the Kemp hotel.

"Education is the process that prepares a man to cope with life's knitted problems," he said. "It is not only to buy a meal ticket but the preparation to live."

Mr. Lee who is a clever entertainer, opened his address on "Education" with a series of after dinner stories.

Quartet Sings.

Prior to the address of the luncheon, music, was furnished by the Commandery quartet composed of Misses Tillie Mae Schaefer and Mildred Martin, Messrs. Paul Van Allmen and William E. Young, with J. S. Pitman, accompanist. Two numbers, "The Winding Road," and "Sweet and Low," were sung.

J. H. Allison, president of the club, introduced Mr. Lee.

There are three parts in education, the physical, intellectual and the heart, the speaker stated, and he likened education of a man to a ship.

"The body is like the hull of a ship. We admire the beautiful lines of a ship, and so we admire a fine physique, so we believe in athletic training in the schools." To illustrate his point, the speaker told of a track meet when a runner won over his contestants, the victory was brought about not that day, but during those days of training.

"The main force that drives the ship is the intellect," and he pointed out how college men can concentrate on things, as a result of training.

The Heart the Rudder.

"The heart is the rundder of the ship, stronger than the driving force, and the ship is useless without the heart. We need not so much brains, but more hearts," Mr. Lee declared. "They are needed to bring in the millienium era."

In conclusion, he read several "attempts at poultry" to quote Mr. Lee, and he recited several poems, one "The Old Sod House," one on "Mexico," and a third, a scoldier rhyme, the true story of a rough and ready American soldier who saved a company from destruction by a German captain of artillery, a spy in the American army.

Mr. Lee was presented Saturday afternoon at the Wichita club by Mesdames Rhea Howard, Ed Howard and C. C. Cabiness.

"SEVENTEEN" TO BE CLASS PLAY

High School Seniors To Give Tarkington Production

Booth Tarkington's universal favorite of young people, "Seventeen," will be presented as the annual play of the senior class of Wichita Falls high school, at the Junior college auditorium, Tuesday, April 20. It is being directed by Miss Juanita Kinsey, director of dramatics and public speaking instructor in the Junior college and the high school, whose work as a director has been well known in the city for seven years. Proceeds of the performance are to go to the Coyote, high school annual, and to the purchase of an art gift for the Junior college, to be left as a memorial of the seniors of '26.

A Story of Youth.

"Seventeen" is a story of youth, depicted in the title of the play. It has long been known in novel form, being one of the books called for most often by pupils in the early grades of the high school for outside reading. Recently it has proved a splendid success in dramatic form also. It is a story of the youth who has just put aside his childhood bashfulness and has met a visiting young woman who smites his heart so strongly at the first meeting that he feels that he can live no longer without her. Many interesting tricks are played upon him by associates and life is a happy misery for him.

The two leading parts are played by Steve Ford, as Willie Baxter, and Frances Boyd, as Lola Pratt. Mrs. Baxter is played by Dorothy Dale and Mr. Baxter by Fred Couper. Others of the principal group are as follows: Mary Parcher, played by Wilton Wade; Johnnie Watson, by Reagon Dublin; Joe Bullitt, by Ford Chauncey; Genesis, by Willie Clark; Mr. Parcher, by Paul Sounamaker; George Crooper, by Paul Hull; and Jane Baxter, by Isabel Stone. Several lesser parts are yet to be assigned.

To Reserve Seats.

Rehearsals have been progressing for the past week, although slowed down somewhat by the demands made upon the director's time by the public speaking contests of the past week. A new plan has been evolved for ticket sales by J. W. Williams, faculty director of finance for the Coyote whereby seats will be reserved at no greater cost than the usual high school play. Reserved seat stubs may now be purchased from members of the senior class of the high school. Special sections have been reserved in the balcony and on the first floor for students of the Junior college, who will take a block of tickets for their group and friends.

Lakedale Club Meets Thursday

The Lakeside Home Demonstration club held an enthusiastic meeting at the home of the president, Mrs. Solon Downing, Thursday, when many interesting points were brought out in the discussion of the lesson on Home Beautification. The club was led by Miss Ethel Louise Webb, who illustrated her talk with pictures of the ideal home.

In a short business session the club voted to attend the style show to be held at Iowa Park May 1. Each member must wear a dress of her own construction the cost of which must not exceed five dollars. The dresses are to be judged according to style and suitability to wearer. The club voted to entertain Beaver Creek club in June.

During the social hour the hostess served refreshments to Misses Velma Entrekin, Jessie Miller and Mesdames Fields, Hall, Ayres, Crowell, Sr., Crowell, Jr., Entrekin, Broyles, Lybarger, McGrath, Trigg, Reed, Robinson and Downing.

Kiwanis to Smoke

"Every charter member absent Monday must send in a box of cigars with his excuse," is the report sent by J. N. Sherrill, secretary of the Wichita Falls Kiwanis club to the members this week in announcing the meeting honoring charter members to be held at the regular luncheon hour, Monday at the Kemp hotel.

Chicago Woman Speaks To Social Organization Here

Miss Mary Lindley of Chicago was the principal speaker at the Social Workers' club meeting Saturday at noon at the Y. W. C. A. when she discussed problems relating to social welfare and cited instances of work done in Chicago.

A suggestion was made that as a part of the programs, workers tell of the most interesting case that has come to his attention during the month preceding each meeting.

Frank B. Creighton, president, presided.

Other matters concerning local welfare work in the city were discussed by the members.

$6,000,000 LEEVES URGED AROUND DALLAS

Proponents Say $50,000,000 Would Accrue In Benefits to Land

AUSTIN, April 10.—(AP)—The benefits derived from the proposed $6,000,000 levee project in Dallas county, bearing on which will be held April 19, are conservatively estimated at $50,000,000, G. B. Williams, state reclamation engineer, said today. Williams declared that never before in the history of the state had the state as a whole undertaken so much needed reclamation work. Hundreds of thousands of acres of land will be reclamed this year in various sections of the state, which will be worth hundreds of millions of dollars.

Williams said that the city and county project, the only one which is proposed for other than cotton raising purposes, is the largest under way now. The district comprises 15,000 acres and lies along Trinity river from Mountain creek and Bachman's reservior to Elm Fork south to the Santa Fe tracks. A bond issue of $4,000,0000 is proposed.

Correct Mistake.

Price of cotton this fall will regulate the development of reclamation projects, Williams said. Many of the first levee projects, he explained, were faulty, being poorly located, thereby being washed out or preventing drainage from the land. But now nearly every early project has been rehabilitated and corrected and the land owners and bond holders have cometogether and recognized a common interest.

Inspections of projects under way are made by the reclamation department every 60 days, and the results of these inspections are certified to the board of supervisors. This is a new duty of the department, which was imposed by an act of the last legislature.

A 17,000 reclamation project is under way in levee improvement district 3 in Henderson county on the Trinity river from Trinidad to Wild Cat Ferry. Plans of which have been approved by the reclamation department.

Hearing will be held this month for formation of a district in Kaufman county for a levee district near Kent on Kings creek, proposing to reclaim 3,000. A project is under way on the Sabine river at Cowleach Fork, south of Greenville to reclaim 3,000 acres.

Hearings Set.

A hearing will be held before the county commisioners court of Lamar county at Paris, this month for formation of a levee improvement district on Sulphur river in Lamar and Delta counties, comprising 15,000.

Williams said that the engineers had been at work in Hidalgo county on flood control work for several months.

Water Softener to Be Included in Plans For Improvement Here

Assurance that a water softener apparatus will be included in a contemplated renovation and additions to the Wichita Falls water system, which will probably be projected within the next few weeks was made Saturday by P. B. Curd, utilities commissioner. According to Mr. Curd the city commissioners, the water committee of the chamber of commerce, and water plant officials have had the matter of a water softener for the entire city under consideration for more than a month, and that when the council is asked to decide on improvements to the water distributing system, the erection of a new pumping plant, etc., as was stated to be needed in a recent survey by Dean T. U. Taylor of the Texas university, it will also be asked to include the water softener.

The matter has been gone into thoroughly with John H. Gregory of Baltimore and C. S. Hoover of Columbus, Ohio, both nationally known water engineers, Mr. Curd stated. Both have professed their belief that water softening here was entirely feasible and practicable.

City officials refused to comment on the water situation other than in regard to the softener, stating that definite action by the council on the problem would be taken, probably within the next ten days. This action, it is understood, means the putting before the city of a bond issue to involve something like $1,000,000, perhaps a little less, to provide for the improvements and additions engineers have indicated is needed.

STRIKER DENIED BAIL

Leader Charged With Inciting Co-Workers to Riot.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 10.—(AP) Albert Welsbord, textile strike leader arrested today on a charge of inciting to riot, in connection with a demonstration of school children was denied bail today by Police Judge Davidson.

The police judge refused to arraign Welsbord before his regular court hour on Monday and said that Welsbord was charged with a high misdemeanor which did not permit release in bail before arraignment.

The meeting of the Wichita General hospital board scheduled for Friday afternoon was postponed until Friday afternoon, April 16, according to the secretary, C. W. Snider.

Marshall Elected As New Trustee

S. S. Marshal of commissioners' precinct No. 4 is the new member of the county board of trustees to succeed T. H. Barwise, retiring, as a result of last Saturday's school trustee election, it is announced by county superintendent Burl Bryant. The election of Mr. Marshall to succeed Barwise was only apparent Saturday after complete returns were in. N. B. Singleterry of precinct No. 1 was elected to succeed himself on the county board from that district.

C. F. Hartman and Floyd Halley were named as trustees on the board at Bacon, returns Saturday indicated.

At one box, Rocky Point, the election was held but nobody showed up to vote. The old board serves another term under the circumstances, it is stated. This consists of E. H. Hamilton, M. L. Pimberton and W. J. Tomlinson.

Rain No Damper On Crowds Out For Hogg Service

Despite Saturday night's rainy weather, 75 people "hit the line for God" in the revival services now being conducted by Dr. Will Hogg at the Floral Heights Methodist church. One of the largest congregations of the current series turned out for the meeting.

Sunday promises to be a heavy day for the evangelist. At 10:30 in the morning he will speak to the assembled Sunday school classes of the church; at 11 o'clock he will preach at the regular morning hour of worship; at 2:30 he will address a big gathering of men and boys; and at 7:30 in the evening he will speak at the regular hour of worship.

Valley View Boy Returned Winner In Declamations

Clovis Childress of Valley View high school was the winner of the senior boys' declamation contest in the county interscholastic meet held at Iowa Park Friday night. Ben Haynes of Electra was accorded second place while Sam McKinney of Iowa Park won third. These results were omitted by mistake in the Record News account of the meeting Saturday morning.

The Valley View victory gives that school a first, a second, and a third place in the declamation contests, it is stated. This is regarded as especially remarkable inasmuch as it is the shool's first year in the upper division of the league, it having been hitherto regarded as a rural school. The use of five teachers there, however, puts in the same class with Electra, Iowa Park and Clara.

COLLECT STATISTICS

Cards sent out by the census department and inquiring as to births and deaths in each family have been distributed by the route carriers of the post office department at the direction of the census bureau, vital statistics department. It is stated by Postmaster O. P. Maricle.

A card was left, so far as could be done, with each family in the city, Mr. Maricle states. Citizens receiving such cards are asked to fill them out and drop them in the postoffice box for forwarding to Washington. They are postage free.

SPEAKING OF SEARCH WARRANTS

NO SEARCH WARRANT is necessary for officers arresting a man transporting liquor plainly visible to everyone in an automobile. This is a ruling of District Judge Lewis H. Jones of Bell county. A Bell county constable arrested a man had 25 gallons of whiskey in his possession. It was the contention of the defense that the constable was not armed with a search warrant.

It was the contention of the prosecution that the car was not searched but that officers spied the liquor in plain view. The jury in the case returned a verdict of guilty and assessed punishment at confinement in the state penitentiary for one year.

A man who will load 25 quarts of whiskey into an automobile in plain view of the populace must be a man of collosal nerve but rotten judgment.

Now just why should one man be the possessor of 25 quarts of whiskey in a territory as Sahara dry as the commonwealth of Texas?

ONE OF THE OLD GUARD

BETHEL QUILLION EVANS is dead. He was a prominent member of the Hunt county for 40 years. He was a picturesque member of the 24th and 25th Texas legislature. He was a follower of James Stephen Hogg and Charles A. Culberson. When populism was in flower, Evans was one of the hot spurs of opposition. He was a conservative democrat at all times and fought for his convictions until the frost of time had whitened his locks.

There are democrats high in the councils of the democracy of Texas today who were populist leaders when "Brutus Quintus" Evans took delight in potshotting them on the stump years and years ago. He found time aside from his legal practice to publish a weekly newspaper, the Free Lance, which was as unique at all times and vitrolic most of the time, in the editorial handling of men and measures. "Brutus Qunitus" was a champion of the state rights dogma. He never waivered. And now the dogma is without a champion in Hunt county.

GEN. ANDREW'S NEW PLAN

GENERAL LINCOLN ANDREWS is the chief of the prohibition enforcement unit. He is a West Pointer and has been given a free hand. In a recent statement he said the federal forces are not concerning themselves much with distributors, leaving that task to the local police. Furthermore he said it was useless to arrest a bootlegger, because his uncle or his brother would take up the traffic where the arrested man left off.

Disclosing a plan for a patrol of 1,500 to 1,600 men on the Canadian and Mexican borders, General Andrews said he believed this course would break up any organized smuggling traffic. Smuggling from Canada and Mexico does not furnish the supply, according to this former West Pointer. Alcohol diversion, moonshining and smuggling from the sea furnish the real source of supply but conceded that he would have to have a largely increased force to do it. The late William Jennings Bryan, ever an ardent pro, insisted that the way to dry up the source of supply was to employ the army and navy to do the work. Would General Andrews countenance the Bryan proposition?

DEMOCRATS ARE GAGGED

IT IS awful, the humilating torture democratic members of the federal tariff commission are subjected to by their republican masters. This is an excerpt from a Washington dispatch.

"The gag rule is being used by Chairman Marvin in conducting debates on the tariff commission, Commissioner Dennis, democrat, charged before the senate tariff investigating committee. Under the present procedure, he said, two-fifths of the time alloted to debate is consumed by Commissioner Costigan, leaving only one-fifth for the other three members."

This is infamous. It is cowardly, it is demoralizing. It is heartracking. It is rank injustice to the donkey. It should be made the paramount issue in the campaign of 1928. On with the battle.

"THE RISING TIDE"

A RECENT series of articles on "The Rising Tide of Crime," written by Lawrence Veiller for World's Work has been attracting considerable attention over the country. It is regarded as one of the most authoritative discussions of the crime situation and has been copied widely.

Commenting on the articles and the author, The Houston Chronicle in a recent editorial remarked:

The views and conclusions of such a man are entitled to profound respect. Conditions as regards crime in this country have reached a point where they threaten to overcome the law and put the whole body of society in peril.

There is no precedent for present conditions in all the history of this nation.

England 70 years ago was cursed as this country by delays, technical forms of pleading and the escape of many guilty defendants upon the ground which had no relavancy whatever to the question of their guilt or innocence, but, as The Chronicle recently pointed out in this column, England, by the means of one short, simple act of parliament, reorganized her entire system of court procedure.

She made possible prompt, speedy trials, and while depriving no defendant of any right to England seven are hanged. Out of every 160 which he is legally and morally entitled, brought about vigorous, prompt, just enforcement of the law.

The result, as to England, as tersely stated by the home secretary of the Great Britain, is that, "Crime in England during the last 50 years has steadily decreased." Here in America it has rapidly increased.

For every 10 murders committed in London there are 100 committed in New York City, of the present situation if many of the senseless hampering forms of procedure in criminal tried in New York for Murder, one is hanged.

The situation is even worse in Memphis, St. Louis and Jacksonville. Chicago leads all American cities with the record of a murder a day.

The figures given above are taken from a full page advertisement carried as one of a series by the Brooklyn Eagle, which was paid for by a citizens' organization "to help put crime out of business."

There is no reason why the law should not be as speedily enforced in the United States as it is in England. If public sentiment was thoroughly aroused to the gravity of the danger the present situation, if many of the senseless hmampering forms of procedure in criminal cases were abolished, if the lawyers who make a specialty of criminal laws were held to a rigid moral and professional accountability and the construction was so changed as that bail would not be in all but a few cases a matter of right, and peremptory challenges of jurors were forbidden, the criminal law would be enforced here just as it is in England.

The only ground for reversal in England is the fact that the defendant's interests have been prejudiced by some omission in the lower court, or by admission of evidence or statements that should not have been made and that may have prejudiced his cause. Reversal there is ordered only upon the ground that a substantial miscarriage of justice has occurred, and on no other.

Mr. Veiller suggests the following remedies.

First—the organization of unofficial crime commissions in all cities for the purpose of studying crime, creating a public opinion for the suppression of crime, and for assisting and watching the official agencies charged with law enforcement, and the apprehension of criminals.

Second—Simplification of our trial methods so that criminals may be brought speedily to justice and reversals or technicalities may be less frequent.

Third—Make it more difficult for the criminal to be released on bail by employing some of the restrictions used in England where the amount of crime is infinitesimal, compared with the rising tide in this country.

Fourth—Let practice at the criminal bar be restored once more to respectability and divorce politics from the administration of criminal justice.

Fifth—The criminal must be deprived of his tools.

Sixth—Put an end to the present preposterous system of releasing hardened criminals on parole, and let a true probation system be established.

Seventh—Apprehend and punish the criminal.

That seems to be a common sense program. It suggests nothing unreasonable or impractical. All the things the author suggests, in fact, are little more than what should be expected for a common sense treatment of crime and the criminal.

ON THE FIRING LINE

STATE SENATOR J. ROY HARDEN of Kaufman county is close to the Ferguson administration. He is the editor and publisher of a weekly newspaper, he knows the value of publicity, he is bound to get his or know the reason why.

Editor Senator Harden visited the state capitol the other day. Before making his get-away to the wilds of Kaufman, he let it be known there will be no immediate special session of the legislature to validate road bonds and provide for new issues. Furthermore the editor-senator said if a session is called it will not be before election.

It is the contention of the editor-senator that there are not a dozen laweyrs in Texas who have agreed as to what should be done in regard to the roads, "and even the bond attorneys themselves are not agreed."

Now how would it be possible for the legislature of Texas to validate bonds declared to be invalid by the supreme court of the United States? How would it be possible for the tail to wag the dog?

Breaking the Camel's Back

The Call of the Great Out-Doors—By James J. Montague

A week ago I heard the old stirring call of the homing wild geese. It floated in through the window just at daybreak, as I was turning over to settle down for another nap. All day it rang in my ears, as it always does. I know of nothing which so kindles the dormant love of the open, which sounds such an imperative summons to leave the dirty city streets behind and go forth into the heart of nature, there to live, for a few weeks, one's boyhood over again.

For many years now I have resolved to be off into the hills or the woods in response to this call. I call it a call merely because that is the custom, for I cannot imagine any wild geese in his sober senses calling a man with a gun to come out and shoot him, or even his wife and relatives. But anyways the summons was there, and this year I prepared to heed it.

After work the next evening I stopped by a sporting goods store. The window was filled with fascinating shot guns and game bags and the little machines to pack shot and powder into paper cartridges, and shelter tents and camp stoves on which to cook the geese after they came tumbling from their flight.

Entering I fell into conversation with a salesman. He, too, had heard the call of the wild fowl, and while, owing to the duties for which he was paid he could not respond to it, he was full of helpful suggestions about what I ought to do to assure a big bag.

When I got out of the store I had ordered a shot gun, a rifle, a thousand rounds of ammunition for each, a shooting suit, a folding boat to use on the water in case the geese would not fly over the shore, a small tent, a sleeping bag, a trout rod, a book of flies and sundry articles of which I knew neither the names or the uses. Also he supplied me with the address of a man who had on sale on excellent retriever dog, thoroughly broken to the duties which were expected of him. The dog I ordered by telephone.

There was quite a little stir around the house when I got home. All my purchases were piled up in the front hall, still unpacked. The family had decided there must be some mistake, and were waiting the rightful owner of the things to come and claim them. I could hear the dog in the cellar, where he had been tied by the man who delivered him. From his observations I deduced that he was not altogether satisfied with his new home.

After some time I convinced the family that these things were really mine, and that I meant at last to carry out my long cherished desire to renew my youthful hunting days. I clinched the matter by exhibiting a ticket I had bought to points south, and informing them that I must be up by four the next morning in order to catch my train.

That was a happy evening for me—at first. I overhauled all the gear, admiring each article. I brought the dog up from the cellar and proved his qualities as a retriever by throwing a rubber ball across the room. Invariably he brought it back.

Then I sat down in a chair to indulge in an ecstasy of recollection and anticipation. It was at this point that matters began to be not so good. I had supposed through all these years that I enjoyed hunting, and had indulged in it frequently when I was a youngster back home. But as I began to recall my various goose hunting expeditions I could remember clearly but two of them.

On the first occasion I trudged ten miles to join some other boys who were encamped beside a pond over which an occasionally mallard flew. All the way I carried on my shoulder an old-fashioned muzzle loading shot gun, which must have weighed ten pounds. I remembered that when I reached my destination all the skin had been rubbed from large sections of both shoulders.

That night the ground on which I tried to sleep galled me and kept me awake. In the morning the other boys cooked a vile decoction of oatmeal, which I could not eat. When we started forth to hunt, I continually hopped up every time I heard a duck, and was berated for being an idiot and spoiling my friends' chances of killing any birds. They made themselves so disagreeable that, early in the afternoon I carried my gun back home again, and retired from the chase for another year.

The other adventure which came to my mind was when I took a dog and a gun and set forth alone on an afternoon's hunt. I took the dog with me in a boat which I had borrowed from a farmer's boy. The dog was not so much a retriever as a go-getter. As soon as he saw a group of geese swimming half a mile away he plunged over the side of the boat and swam after them. They waited till he got within a few rods of them and flew away, to light a little farther on. Undiscouraged he swam stolidly after them, while I rowed the boat frantically in his wake, trusting that he would flush them and I might get a shot.

But the geese, taking note of my gun decided to end the affair once and for all, and left for parts unknown. The dog returned to the boat and endeavoring to climb in, managed to upset it, both of us floundering in the icy water. At last I managed to get back into the craft, and scoop out enough water to enable it to bear me up. I let the dog get ashore as best he could.

I returned home that night without my gun or ammunition, and with a very shamefaced dog tagging along behind me. I was done with goose hunting for that year, and, as I now recalled, forever. All the thrill of the chase which came back to me with the cry of the geese had been inspired by memories of things that had happened to others, and which I had heard so many times that I imagined they had happened to me. Visions of sleeping on the ground, getting scolded for my clumsiness by other boys, and being spilled into a chilly lake floated before me.

I went out and looked at my gear. It was not invested with very different sort of memories. I managed to get the sporting goods man to take it back, though I still have the dog.

I was thinking over the whole matter last evening, and came to the conclusion that perhaps it wasn't the call of a wild goose I heard that morning after all. More likely it was a distant automobile horn.

LONG LOCKS ARE WINNERS.

Unshorn Tresses Over Six Feet Long Found in Unique German Contest.

BERLIN, April 10.—In contrast to the popularity of bobbed hair in other countries, the New World, an indoor amusement park of Berlin, had conducted a contest to find a woman with the longest locks.

First prize was awarded to a blonde Gretchen whose hair measured six feet, nine inches and exceeded her height by more than a foot. Second prize went to a brunette slip of a girl, whose tresses were six feet, seven inches long. A matron of 40 took third prize with a mass of hair six feet three inches long.

COBLENZ SHOULD BE KOBLENZ

Musty Archives of Ancient German City Show It's Spelled With "K."

BERLIN, April 10.—Coblenz, the Rhine city occupied by American troops after the armistice, has decided that the German spelling of the city's name should be with "K" and not with "C." It cost several thousand dollars to find historical basis for the change.

The decision is expected to end a controversy extending back several centuries. Experts engaged by the city delved into records dating back to the twelfth century and found that Prince Baldwin, one of the city's founders spelled it Koblenz.

NEW SHOES IN LEATHER.

Rare Reptile Skins Are Latest Fashion for Modish British Footwear.

LONDON, April 10.—Anaconda skins from Brazil, boa constrictor, iguano, shark and seal skins have all appeared in London among the uncommon leathers for smart spring shoes for women. Never have bird, beast, fish and reptile skins been in such a demand for footwear as this year, the dealers declare. Python skin, which requires a six weeks process of dressing to bring it to a state of perfection, is listed among the most expensive novelties of the season, as shoes of this kind retail at L6 to L7 ($30 to $35) a pair.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

ARIES.

Today's planetary aspects although benign are not actively favorable and while they would not augur well for any radical changes or new undertakings, they are particularly suitable for a Sunday, and its observances and recreations. Between the hours of noon and 2 p. m. there are indications that a nervous restlessness will be sensed and unless this is counteracted, there will probably arise some egree of friction, which might lead to regrettable results. On the whole, however, the day promises a great fund of quiet enjoyment and happy association.

A boy born today will be normally healthy during infancy, and only at the period of adolescense, is he destined according to the signs to suffer from any serious ailment. This may cause anxiety but need not give rise to alarm. A girl will be subjected to many infantile ailments, but she will successfully outgrow these and attain normal girlhood and womanhood. In character and disposition both boy and girl promise to possess great courage—mental and physcal. They will have very decided convictions combined with a keen sense of justice. At all times they will be amenable to suggestion, but will never do anything that is opposed to the principles in which they believe and to which they will adhere through thick and thin.

If today is your birthday, you do not possess that courage of conviction or tenacity of purpose that is so essential to success. You take serious matter slightly an rarely if ever, stop to weigh the consequences of either speech or action. In the former you are somewhat flippant. In the latter, indifferent. You show this same tendency in your affections, and are apparently incapable of a great and enduring passion. You are naturally flirtatious and while you believe in your sincerity others doubt it.

Your knowledge is superficial and by no means, profound. You are not a student but rather trust, in order to "get by" to a somewhat spectacular manner of treating subjects than to any intimate knowledge of same. You possess a certain degree of charm and capitalize this to nth degree.

In your home life your mate, if born in January or March, is rather dazzled by your surface brilliancy, and this makes for a great deal of happiness, although it would be better, for your own development, if the truth were hammered into you that "all that glitters is not gold."

Successful people born this date are:

Henry C. Marquand, philanthroplst.
William O. Partridge, sculptor.
Charles Evans Huges, ex-governor of New York state.

Ill Fortune On Trail of Wine Men

BERLIN, April 10.—(AP)—Ill fortune continues to follow the Moselle valley wine growers, who are waging a militant campaign for credit and tax relief from the government.

When water which had seeped into hundreds of wine cellars during the disastrous early spring floods, was pumped out, it was discovered that the labels had been washed off the bottles. Now the many wine growers have no means of distinguishing between wine ten and fifteen years old and that bottled last year. The loss is estimated at several hundred thousand marks. No one wants to pay a high price for wine merely on the guess of the grower that it is rare old stuff. It is feared that large lots will have to be sold at prices prevailing for one-year-old wine.

THEATRE HEADS TO MEET.

BERLIN, April 10.—(AP)—An international theatrical convention, with 14 nations represented, including the United States, France, Great Britain and Germany, will be held in Berlin in June. This was announced by Gustav Rickell, president of the German actors' alliance at a recent luncebon in honor of James K. Hackett, hailed as the dean of American actors, given by the American Luncheon club of Berlin.

The object of the convention will be to establish permanent machinery for co-operation between the theatrical profession of all countries.

The Married Life of Helen And Warren

"Dear, move back. You're scorching your shoes!"

Absorbed in the London Observer, Warren pushed back from the glowing grate.

"It's after four," Helen was distributing on the mantel her bought-on-the-Continent antiques. "Aren't you going to change your suit before they come?"

"What's the matter with this?" he grunted. "Now, I don't doll up for tea. Here, leave those alone."

"All over the place," picking up the Sunday papers. "And look how you've rumpled the rug. Lift your chair! Be careful, that stand—that china figure!"

"Wonder you wouldn't put away some of this truck? Can't turn 'round without knockin' somethin' off. Trust the English to clutter up with gimcracks."

"Yes, I'm going to put a lot of it away. I did last year—in the bathroom cupboard. But they're coming—I thought I'd leave it out today."

"Huh, one of your show offs, eh? Here, hand me that other paper."

"Dear, it is wonderful to have a London flat like this! I know they'll love it. They always stay at a hotel Yes, come in, Judkins."

"Shall I put on a bit more coal, madame?" the maid, in her crisp Sunday cap and apron, knelt by the fire.

"Yes, and brush up the ashes. We're expecting some American friends for tea. Dear, move back—you're in her way."

Cheerful open fire sounds. The clink of tongs and the hiss of fresh coal.

"Oh, that can't be the Drakes!" fluttered Helen. "It's not near five!"

Dropping the brass scuttle, Judkins hurried to answer the door bell.

Yes, the Drakes. Effusively apologetic because they were so early.

"We dined with the Kennerleys at Putney. Came back by the Tube—so much quicker than we expected."

"Why, it's nice to have you early. Is that chair too near the fire?"

"This dampness gets in your bones," shivered Mr. Drake, his back to the grate.

"James loathes fog," his wife stretched suede pumps to the fender.

"I love it!" glowed Helen. "Nothing's so fascinating as a London fog."

"Nor so raw," grumped Warren. "I'm like Drake—gets in your bones."

The London weather disposed of, after the manner of Americans abroad, hotels and prices were next assailed.

The Drakes were at a small, "smart," expensive hotel in Half-Moon Street. But never again! Hereafter, the big hotels—less exclusive but more comfortable.

"Yes, you pay more and get less in those small 'smart' hotels than anywhere in the world," shrugged Warren. "We struck one our first trip—'fore we knew the ropes. Trimmed us plenty!"

Helen awaited the expected laudations on their flat. But the Drakes dilated on the high prices and poor service of their hotel until the entrance of the tea-wagon.

A formal English tea. Ceremoniously served by an imposing waiter.

Dainty sandwiches of egg and mustard-and-cress. Buttered bread cut incredibly thin, strawberry marmalade, and the inevitable "Dundee" cake.

"I wish we could get this mustard-and-cress in New York," from Mrs. Drake.

"Don't you love it? Last year I took back some seed—but forgot to plant them," admitted Helen. "They say it's so easy to grow. Just in a box—or on a wet blanket. And the more you cut it, the more it grows."

"Yes, I've heard that. James, we must get some seed to take home."

"Comfortable outfit you got here," Mr. Drake was glancing around. "How many rooms?"

"Only two," Warren gulped another sandwich.

"Dear, three with the reception hall—and that huge bath," supplemented Helen. "It's Sir Robert Treadwell's flat—this's the third year we've had it."

"How do you work it? Sublet from him—or from the house?"

"Oh, from him. He's a friend of a friend of Warren's. He has a large country estate—so he's here very little. A member of Parliament," impressively. "He wrote us last year we could have the flat whenever we're in London."

"Yes, it's a cinch," Warren dug into the marmalade. "Once you're in tight with an Englishman—they're the finest ever."

"You have your meals sent up?"

"No, we go down. Warren likes their club restaurant. About twenty clubs here—the Authors, the Junior Army and Navy, the Golfers, the Lady Golfers, and the West Indian. This's one of the largest buildings in London."

"Yes, I know Whitehall Court—but didn't think they had apartments here."

"'Service flat'—they call them. And the famous people who've lived here! The booklet says Lord Kitchener, the Grand Duke Michael of Russia and I think, Gladstone, for awhile," boasted Helen.

"We noticed the names on the hall directory. They're almost all 'Sir and Lady' somebody. James, next time let's try to get in here. Would Sir Robert sublet to anyone else?"

"I doubt it. He feels he knows us now—though we've never seen him. This year he sent word they needn't even take an inventory."

"An inventory? Yes, thank you," Mr. Drake passed his cup.

"Never been up against an English inventory?" grinned Warren. "When you rent a furnished flat—they inventory everything down to the toothbrush glass. Then when you leave, they check it again. And soak you two guineas each way."

"No, no cake for me. Two guineas? Isn't that pretty steep?"

"That's the rake off for the agent. They send up two frock coated Johnnies. Ought to see 'em take it. Put down every scratch."

"Well, we've hit some funny holdups. The extras we're in for at our hotel! Had one on last week's bill—bet you've never struck that."

"Chimney cleaning?" chuckled Warren. "Thought so. That's an old one. Chargin' extras—chief indoor sport here. They ring in everything from brass polish to paper to line the drawers."

"Dear, tell about that lawyer," laughed Helen. "The bill he sent you."

"Huh, that was a hot one. Sent a bill a yard long. Total wasn't too much—but had itemized every minute, every letter, every telephone call. Only thing he didn't charge for was the thing for which I'd retained him—his reputation. Invited him out for a drink—and by George, even that half hour was on the bill!"

"That's English for you. But they're square."

"None squarer! Got these in Germany," Warren held out his cigar case. "Not bad."

"What a nice looking maid," Mrs. Drake glanced after Judkins, who had again come in to tend the fire. "We've such surly servants at our hotel."

"You're up against that in England now," Warren tossed his match into the fire. "The disgruntled working class. It's this dole. They don't want to work."

"Judkins has only two flgts and it takes her all day," explained Helen. "The way she wastes time! A whole afternoon to polish this brass."

"But it's beautifully done."

"Yet imagine a New York chambermaid doing only four rooms. And they've a man for the windows and the thorough cleaning. But she's paid so little—only three pounds a month. We tip her eight shillings a week—the valet five. But I don't think the English give that much."

"You bet they don't! Expect twice as much from Americans," grumbled Mr. Drake.

"Oh, look out on your balcony—pigeons!" Mrs. Drake turned to the windows.

"Aren't they cunning? I always give them crumbs," taking up her plate.

Out on the balcony, while Helen fed the pigeons, the Drakes admired the view.

The mist-hung river, the pencilled bridges. The grim turrets of Scotland Yard. And further on, the fog-veiled towers of Parliament.

"Yes, you can see four bridges from here—Blackfriars, Waterloo, Charing Cross, and Westminster. And at night it's wonderful—the lights along the river."

"Listen—Big Ben! Now-six? James, we must go," as they stepped back through the window. "What did I do with my bag? Oh, on that stand."

A crash! A scream!

On the floor lay the Dresden chins' figure—in two pieces!

"Jove, Marie, that's a shame," Mr. Drake grew more florid.

"I dragged it off with my bag! Oh, I'm so sorry What can I say?"

"If it were only ours," faltered Helen. "But I—oh, what will we do?"

"We'll match it up," Warren scowled her to silence. "Don't you worry, Mrs. Drake."

"I'll meet you tomorrow and we'll try to match it. Yes, I insist.'

"Nonsense. Forget it."

But it was an awkward leave-taking. Helen, anguishing over the broken figure was coldly unresponsive to Mrs. Drake's apologies. And her smiling goodbyes were plainly forced.

When the door closed after them, she dropped on the couch, her face in the bronze silk cushion.

"We'll never match it!" tearfully. "Oh, I wouldn't have had it happen for worlds!"

"Darned awkward," Warren reached for his pipe. "But you needn't have rubbed it in. They felt bad enough. Way you acted was pretty raw."

"I couldn't help it! The first time they didn't take an inventory. He trusted us—and now we have to report this. Oh, if I'd only put it away!"

"What'd I tell you? But you always have to stage a show off. Here's Judkins, maybe she knows where it came from. My bet's the Army and Navy."

"Oh, Judkins, look what happened! Have you any idea where it was bought?"

The maid, who had come in to draw the velvet curtains for the night, turned from the window, the red tasseled cords in her hand.

"Why, that was broke before, madame. Sir Ribert broke it himself, Higgins, the valet, had it mended."

"Great Guns, she's right!" he held it under the lamp. "You can see the glue. We are chumps!"

"It's cement! Yes, all the way along—the same break," joyously. "Oh what a relief! Higgins can have it fixed again—Sir Robert need never know."

"Well, that's that!" Warren dropped into the overstuffed chair before the fire. "Now, you put these gimcracks away 'fore you break somethin' else. And don't drag 'em out for any more showoffs. The way you ram this flat down everybody's throat! 'Sir Robert' and 'we take it every year'—and all that rot. Even had to lug in Kitchener and the Grand Duke!"

Then, stooping over to knock his pipe against the grate,

"Now, you ring up the Drakes. Tell 'em the darn think was broke before—same crack. And we'd have spotted it—if you hadn't pulled the hysterics!"

Next week—"An Unexpected Ordeal."

Dancing Thrives In London Society

LONDON, April 10.—(AP)—The London social season, now nearing its close, has been remarkable for the popularity of dancing and for the new innovations in dance floors and lighting effects which the dance vogue has introduced into the most select private homes of Mayfair. This is in part a result of the competition of fashionable night clubs, which hostesses have found they must meet in order to keep their guest lists filled.

The glass dance floor is the most popular novelty, and these have been laid in the ballrooms of many fashionable residences. The glass is treated so it will not be too slippery, lights are placed under the glass and the whole floor is laid on a thick white rubber cushion to give the desired resiliency. Mrs. Arthur J. Stanton of New York is one of the American hostesses to install such a floor.

Calve Protests M. Talley's Debut

PARIS, April 10.—(AP)—Mme. Emma Calve, the great singer, has broken the silence of her retirement on the Riviera long enough to protest against the system which has permitted 19-year-old Marion Talley to appear in a leading role at the Metropolitan opera house in New York.

"No singer should be subjected to such a test without at least ten years' preparatory work on other stages," Mme. Calve declared. "Singers must be moulded slowly and gently. Often such breaks into new atmospheres are ruinous. Those who criticized Miss Talley's performance forget what a strain she was under. I laugh now, but the night I first sang at the Metropolitan—after 11 years singing in the capitals of Europe—I was frightened almost to death."

"Too much publicity at an early age and not enough hard work are the ailments affecting the present generation of vocal students, Mme. Calve asserted."

ALLRED DENIES AIDING JACKSON

District Attorney Says He Wanted to Put Him In Prison

A statement that whatever others may have done in getting sixty-day furloughs from the penitentiary for Jack B. Jackson, he or his assistants, Sam Spence and Harry Bishop, were not involved, was made Saturday morning by Ben Allred, district attorney, following a published report in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram of Saturday that Jackson's furlough had been obtained as a result of intervention by members of the county attorney's and district attorney's office.

Jackson, under a 25-year sentence for murder in connection with a shooting at Iowa Park more than a year ago, is in jail at Graham now as a result of implication in a holdup at Holliday last Monday night. A sixty-day furlough granted by Mrs. Ferguson about a month ago has been revoked, and it is understood, that unless permission is obtained to hold him for trial in connection with the holdup he will be transferred to the penitentiary at Huntsville within the next few days. A letter to Mrs. Ferguson requesting detention until such time as he may be tried for the high-jacking has not as yet been answered, Allred stated Saturday.

No Criticism.

In his statement the district attorney remarks that "while I have no criticism for the officials who secured this parole I want it distinctly understood that neither myself nor my assistants, Sam Spence and H. D. Bishop had anything to do with the matter beyond opposing in every way that we could the granting of a pardon or other clemency to the prisoner. We have never requested clemency for any person who has been convicted of crime in this district, feeling rather that it was our duty to get criminals in the penitentiary and once there to keep them there."

Question.

The adult members of my family are fond of pies and rich cakes, yet I feel that the younger children should not have them. Can you suggest some simple desserts?" Mrs. R. A. H.

Answer.

This is a common question which is often answered wrongly. We have too many pies and rich cakes, and not enough simple, wholesome desserts. Children can not eat everything which appears on the table. They have not the sam power of digestion as adults any more than they have the same ability to think and judge as adults.

The easiest, as well as the best way is for the adults as well as the children, to eat simple puddings or fruit for dessert. The family meals should be adapted to the children's needs.

There are many varieties of the simple puddings that no one need tire of them. You can flavor your custard or cornstarch puddings with vanilla, nutmeg, orange juice, brown sugar, caramel, maple or chocolate. Bread pudding and rice pudding may be improced by the addition of raisins, cocoanut, chocolate, or by jelly spread over the top. The cream or the fruit tapioca puddings are good. There is no better dessert than a baked apple or any kind of fruit raw, cooked or canned with a plain cookie or small piece of plain cake. A gelatine dessert with plenty of fruit makes a pleasant change.

Perhaps at first you will not care for these as you do pies and cakes, but the health of the children is more important than indulging your whims or appetite.

Carnival Stays Another Week

The heavy wind which swept this city Friday night, causing some damage, has resulted in holding the George J. Loose canival attractions over for another week in Wichita Falls. This announcement was made Saturday while officials of the shows started the work of repairing damage done by the storm.

The carnival will reopen Sunday with all attractions in good shape, it was said, and will run the balance of the week.

CAR RAINED OUT.

Johnny Hines' famous driverless car which is making a transcontinental trip from New York to Califronia was scheduled to arrive in Wichita Falls Friday afternoon but owing to weather conditions and bad roads from Fort Worth to this city, information was received by the local management of the Dent Theatres that it would be impossible for the car to come here.

The machine which carries the names of Johnny Hines and First National pictures, is a decidedly unusual car which has traveled over 130,000 miles and will probably run another 150,000 miles before the tour is completed.

Advertising Starts for Rodeo

Bill posting paper and other advertising matter for the rodeo to be held at the fair grounds, April 30, May 1 and 2, is arriving from the eastern lighographing houses, according to the announcement made at roadeo headquarters Saturday. Twenty-four sheet billboards will proclaim the Tom L. Burnett Rodeo as Wichita Falls' biggest cowboy contest, as loundly and as forcibly as any circus ever heralded its coming.

Local automobile dealers have voted to hold their automobile show at the fair grounds in connection with the rodeo; the different carnivals are sending in their bids and there is every assurance there will be many attractions at the grounds.

The prize list announcing purses in the various cowboy contests and races have been distributed throughout the large ranches of the west so that they may send their crack riders, ropers and bulldoggers to enter and compete. It is expected that the largest field of expert cowboys will be on hand to compete for the big prizes.

Sam Bowden, a local oil driller at Hill Top, was in the rodeo office Saturday and paid his entrance fee in the bulldogging contest. Bowden is by no means an amateur in the rodeo game as he has been prominent in these affairs in the north and east. He was one of the four men who were able to moster all of their steers in the bulldogging contest at the worlds championship rodeo in Chicago last August.

Marriage License Business Falls To Low Level Here

Rain apparently dampened the ardor of matrimonial aspirants Friday and Saturday, both days passing without a single application at the county clerk's office. The failure of either day, or of two days in succession to produce an applicant for a license is pronounced very unusual and almost without precedent in the history of the office.

In the connection attention is called by J. W. Meadors, deputy county clerk, to what he terms the effect of weather on marriage licenses issued. There is usually a rush on week-ends, Mr. Meadors has observed. Excessively cold days do not bring many applicants, he says, this especially being true when there is either sleet or snow, or a cold rain. During the warm weather period license issuance is more evenly spread out over the various days of the months, he states.

Without a tally for either Friday or Saturday, however, the proportion between licenses issued and divorce petitions filed remained almost two to one in favor of the licenses issued, the figures showed, a total of 29 marriage licenses being issued to 16 divorce petitions filed. The figures cover the first ten days of April.

Appointed District Attorney

Mr. Allred was appointed district attorney in December, 1923, after having served as assistant district attorney under Bernard Martin. In July 1924 Allred was re-elected by an overwhelming majority and served until July, 1925, when he resigned to engage in the private practice of law here. He is now a member of the firm of Martin, O'Neal and Allred.

Born and reared in Bowie, Montague county, Allred was schooled in that community and in Cumberland university, Lebannon, Tenn., where he received his law degree. With the exception of the time spent in school, he has made Bowie or Wichita Falls his home. His record as prosecuting attorney was one of unusual success and in March of 1925 he leased into statewide prominence as head of prosecuting counsel in the Collier murder case. In the trial of Frank Collier in this city he headed the battery of attorneys representing the state, and later in the trial of Mrs. Collier in Haskell he also represented the state as chief attorney.

Help County Gratis

Since leaving office he has gone to considerable trouble and expense in briefing cases and arguing them before higher courts when appeals were heard on cases which he prosecuted while serving as district attorney.

Allred's campaign will be started in Wichita Falls this week, he announced, his friends here now being busy with preparations for a big rally to be held in a few days. He will also speak in Electra, Iowa Park and Burkburnett, and will later stump the entire state.

20-HOUR MAIL FOR CHICAGO

Planes via Fort Worth To Give This City Fast Service

Less than twenty hour mail service between Wichita Falls and Chicago will be possible on May 12 with the inauguration of air mail service between Dallas, Fort Worth and Chicago, it was stated Saturday by O. P. Maricle, postmaster. "Letters mailed in time for train 8 of the Fort Worth and Denver, south, at midnight, will arrive in Fort Worth to catch the early morning plane for Chicago," Mr. Maricle stated. "Such mail will arrive in Chicago at 7:20 o'clock the same evening. Returning mail will leave Chicago at 7:35 in the morning, arriving at Fort Worth shortly after 5 o'clock, and in Wichita Falls at about midnight."

To Start May 12.

Inauguration of the air mail service over "Route three" was announced by the government several weeks ago as probable for May, the actual date for starting, May 12, being only made public this last week. Planes, which will handle the mail on a contract basis, will also handle mail for Melina, Ill., St. Joseph, Mo., Kansas City, Wichita and Oklahoma City. The base will be at Dallas, all planes starting north from there.

Planes at Chicago will make connection with the air mail service from Chicago to New York and Chicago to San Francisco, letters on which airplane postage is prepaid for the entire distance thus effecting a great saving in time spent for transportation.

Prices Not Announced.

The prices to be charged for the air mail service from Wichita Falls north to Chicago have not been announced as yet, but are expected to be made public in a few days. It is expected to be somewhere between ten and twenty cents an ounce for first class mail.

The fastest train time possible between Wichita Falls is about 27 hours, leaving here at 3:30 in the afternoon and arriving in Chicago at about 6:30 the following evening.

Miss Mary Lindley of Chicago is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Curtis Atkinson and will be in the city for an extended visit.

Mrs. M. M. Montgomery has gone to Amarillo where she is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Ben Wrenn.

Civil Cases To Come to Trial

Trial of a number of civil cases before a jury will occupy the thirtieth district court most of the coming week, the trial of criminal cases not being scheduled to begin until the week of April 19. Six or seven cases of minor importance have been set for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, and a jury panel has been drawn to report Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

The grand jury will convene again at 9 o'clock Monday morning to finish its business, with the expectation that there will be enough there to keep it busy the first three or four days of the week. This body returned a total of 30 indictments in a partial report to Judge Wilson late Friday afternoon.

There will be no work in the eighty-ninth district court, Judge P. A. Martin being absent from the city on a trip to the east, while the usual run of jury civil trials have been set in the seventy-eighth district court before Judge W. W. Cook.

Ballard Goes To Return Prisoner

Deputy Sheriff Ray Ballard left Wichita Falls late Saturday for Altus to bring back George Ballard, who has been arrested there and held on an indictment returned Friday by the grand jury of the 30th district court charging conspiracy in the holdup of P. P. Robertson at Electra recently. Named in the indictment with Ballard are Alberta Hill, and George Biggerstaff, both under four other indictments in connection with the holdup. Robertson is alleged to have had a Ford car, a $500 check, and other valuables taken from him some two weeks ago.

SON'S SHAME KILLS FATHER

Noted Actor Dies After Boy Is Sentenced On Drug Charge

SANTA ANA, Cal., April 18.—(AP)—Henry J. Miller, son of the noted actor, who died last night in New York, expressed the belief from a cell in the county jail here today that his own disgrace had hastened his father's death.

Miller, who prior to being sentenced in Los Angeles recently to ten months in jail for narcotic law violations, pleaded that his father be spared the shame which would follow a sentence in the penitentiary, wept bitter tears as he related to visitors how his first escapade had brought grief to his parents.

"It is a singular thing," Miller said, "that on the same day that I entered this jail I received a telegram from my father's agent advising me that he would not be able to open his new play, 'A Stranger in the House.' What a ghastly coincidence that the play should have such a name. I am the stranger in my father's house, but he never cast me out, despite long years of my social disgrace. God bless his soul!

"Father has not written me in many years, but he never lost interest in me for his remittances reached me every month. He told me once he felt like turning on the gas for being responsible for my coming into the world. Because of the remorse I had brought him, I decided to kill myself. I tried, but surgeons saved me. It would have been better for all concerned had I succeeded. I failed and here I am in jail. I am sure that my plight hastened the death of my father."

Miller declared he did not know whether his mother was living, but if she was he would approach her with his soul reborn at the conclusion of his jail sentence.

VISITING SON

Mrs. M. Mae Baldwin, mother of W. B. Baldwin, reporter for the 30th district court, has returned from a trip to St. Petersburg, Fla., where she has visited with her daughter, Mrs. Hoyt Mosher. She will remain with her son for several days before returning to her home in Long Beach, California.

One New Face In Manager Ranks

The major leagues start the 1926 campaign with but one really strange face in the managerial ranks. That belongs to Joseph McCarthy, pilot of the Chicago Cubs. McCarthy, manager of the Louisville American Association Club, was signed over the winter and will make his debut the opening day. Rogers Hornsby took charge of the St Louis Cardinals in midseason last summer. Here is the complete list of managers:

Big League Races Promise Real Thrills: Brown Lists Interesting Possibilities

BY NORMAN E. BROWN
Central Press Sports Editor

Baseball moguls, to the last man, are predicting that the season of 1926 will be the "best and biggest" in the history of the game. The wish is father to the thought, of course. Turnstiles were made to turn.

But this much can be said.

Conditions on the various teams, the introduction and discussion of the resin ball, the much talked of elimination of the "rabbit ball," the fact that it is "show 'em" year for Babe Ruth and many other angles indicate one of the most interesting seasons the game has ever enjoyed.

The rules committee, consisting of four members of each of the major leagues and Judge Landis as the ninth voting member, approved the open use of resin as an aid to the pitcher in drying his hands. The American league magnates hold that, while the committee approved it by a five to four vote (Judge Landis casting the deciding ballot) the four dissenting members were the American league representatives and the use of the foreign substance has not been allowed in the younger circuit and will not be.

Judge Landis recently threw a bombshell into the league by announcing that American league hurlers were free to use the resin bag legitimately, just as the National league hurlers.

"The rule does not let down the bars on the use of foreign substances as an aid in pitching," ruled the Judge. "It simply grants the hurler the privilege of using it to dry up his hands."

The conflict may develop into a real upheaval if the season ends and the world's series is thrust upon us without a decision as to a unanimity of opinion on the use of the ball.

The Pittsburgh Pirates, after a surprise victory in the National league last season, during which they apparently overcame the stage fright or whatever it was that caused them to weaken in the stretch in previous years, are out to repeat this season.

John McGraw has had to patch up his pitching staff as usual and plug a hole in his outfield and bolster his infield in anticipation of a bitter fight to regain the lost championship.

The St. Louis Cardinals grabbed off Bill Killefer, deposed pilot of the Cubs, in the hope of rounding their always uncertain pitching staff into shape.

Joe McCarthy, successful minor league pilot, left the Louisville club to enter the majors as pilot of the Cubs—and his efforts to raise the team from the National league cellar will draw much attention.

Rogers Hornsby, baby pilot of the league until McCarthy's entrance, is starting his first full year as manager of the Cards and as he and George Sisler gave the St. Lou fans the most brilliant pair of leaders in the history of big league ball in that metropolis said bugs are about to go wild with anticipation at least. Whether realization of their pennant hopes will come is another matter.

In the American league Stanley Harris labors diligently to hold a title that he won and held with the oldest baseball team in captivity. Can he keep his "old man's home" intact and in fighting trim through another campaign and turn back the Athletics, Browns, White Sox and others? Joe Bush, cast off by four big league clubs, is the latest addition to the "veteran's association." Will he live up to Harris' hopes and remake the pitching staff.

Connie Mack, after 12 years of effort, seems destined—at least he feels so—to win a pennant. He has employed one of the old masters of the game, a man rated as shrewd as John McGraw, to put into his club the thing it lacked last season—the ability to "fight to win."

He has waited a year for Lefty Grove, in whom Connie has $106,000 invested, to deliver some return on that investment in lefthanded strikes. Gleason is said to have remedied the pitching fault that has made Grove wild and uncertain for years. Has he?

The New York Yankees are in the process of rebuilding. Shorn of the glory that was theirs in 1921-22-23 and which clung to them a year or so afterwards, they are out to regain a place in the sun.

Babe Ruth starts out a repentant player, shorn too of much of his fame, with the announced intention of delivering the goods—in the hope that his new contract next fall will approximate in total the one he is now laboring under.

On that very same team is Tony Lazzeri, the "Babe Ruth" of the minor leagues and outstanding slugger of the Pacific Coast. Will he take Babe's place as the Gotham idol if Babe fails to hit his stride? Lazzeri is booked to play second and form part of a rookie infield. Eyes will be upon him there, as well as upon Mark Koenig, infielder purchased from St. Paul. These three men and Earl Combs, brilliant young centerfielder and .300 hitter, have it in their power to put the Yanks in the running.

The St. Louis Browns, as mentioned above, are aiming at the flag, the first (if it is won) to grace a St. Louis ball park.

The so-called "rabbit ball" is said to be a thing of the past, we are told. The use of resin was urged to help check the wave of batting which has threatened to rob baseball of its "inside" features and versatility in action. If the magnates counted on such a move why was the ball changed at the same time? Pitching and batting records of the first few weeks, in the National league, at least, may furnish some very interesting figures.

Material for plenty of fanning bees in these conditions mentioned. It ought to be a great year, if the quality of baseball is of the right kind.

Stecher-Santel Title Go Cancelled When Nursery Benefit Fight Date Moved

White Meets Hull April 20, Promoters Ask Ross to Postpone Champ's Appearance Here

BY BLONDY CROSS

Tommy White, the Texas City infighter, having tripped through his match of the past week with Wildcat Ewing unscathed, promoters of the already heavily advertised and muchly ballyhooed day nursery benefit fistic program originally carded in the legion arena April 16, are moving ahead rapidly with their plans for making the show a gala event.

Tommy White meets Clyde Hull, the St. Paul welterweight streak, over the 12-round route, a fight the ring population of Wichita Falls has been yelping for more than a year and six months. That's settled.

But the nursery outfit has advanced the date to April 20. That's Tuesday a week hence.

Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, was billed with the popular Ad Santel, light heavyweight king, in what was to have been the crowning event of the North Texas indoor grappling season April 19. The match had been scheduled for several months.

Ross Steps Out Gladly.

Strange to say, nursery promoters after shifting their date asked that the Stecher-Santel world's championship match be postponed.

Wrestling Matchmaker Ross, declaring that he is ever willing to help in the interests of charity, straightaway wire Stecher that the match would have to be called off unless the champion could come April 17. The champion replied to effect he is booked full for matches through into May.

Stecher, it is understood, may be able to come to Wichita Falls in the middle or late in May. Santel, who long has awaited the chance to get back onto the canvas with the heavy weight leader, again has been set back and may not be able to meet Stecher in May without cancelling a number of matches in larger cities with result he will lose quite a bit of money.

It is possible that Stecher may not be in a position to wrestle in Wichita Falls even during the month of May. In that event, since the wrestling season is to be closed here by June 1, Wichita Falls mat fandom will have missed the opportunity to witness the greatest heavyweight wrestling champion of all-time in action.

Mercy Montez, the San Antonio Mexican battler who developed many friends here in battle with Duke Trammel several months ago, has been signed for a ten-round bout on the White-Hull program, according to Matchmaker Jack Ercanbrack. Efforts will be taken to bring the clever Frankie Oaner in as Montez's opponent, said Ercanbrack.

Eddie Murdock has asked for a bout on the card. If a suitable opponent can be found for him, he will be listed in a feature event, it is understood.

WACO GOLFER WINS FEMININE LINKS LAURELS

State Championship Goes To Mrs. MaGruder, 12 and 11

GALESTON, April 10.—(AP)—Courage and confidence in her shots worthy of any golfer, man or woman, today carried Mrs. L. W. McGruder of Waco to the state golf championship.

She triumphed 12 up and 11 to play over Mrs. Rufus Fenner Scott, Jr., of Paris, 1924 champion. The match ended on the 27th green, when Mrs. Scott missed a 10-foot putt for a win. A remarkable niblick shot from a muddy trap that placed her within ten feet of the cup in four allowed Mrs. MaGruder to halve this hole.

Eight up at the end of the morning's round of 18 holes, Mrs. MaGruder won the first five holes of the afternoon's competition. Mrs. Scott did the inevitable by sinking an eight foot putt to win the eighth and two beautiful mid-iron strokes played her in position to win the 25th; but the miraculous recovery from the trap by Mrs. MaGruder ended the struggle.

During the morning's play, Mrs. MaGruder showed she is worthy of the crown which she captured in her first attempt. One up at the end of the first eight holes, the Waco star took a six to her rival's seven on the ninth. The large gallery and the players thought Mrs. MaGruder was two up; but Umpire Willie MaGuire, Houston country club pro, ruled that Mrs. MaGruder had forfeited the ninth and squared the match by smoothing with the back of her hand on the putting green, preparatory to running up a 20 foot putt dead to the pin.

Medal cards for the morning play:

Mrs. Magruder:

In ..... 563 555 646—45—94.

Mrs. Scott:

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 10.—(AP)—William (Bill) Tilden of Philadelphia won the singles championship of the western North Carolina open tennis tournament here today by defeating A. H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., 6-4, 4-6, 12-10, 4-6, 9-7.

PINE HURST, N. C., April 10.—(AP)—Page Hufty, 18 years old, of Washington, D. C., today won the north and south amateur golf championship by defeating Lawrence Sherrill of Tampa, Fla., 2 and 1.

MANTELL YAPS LUSTILY UPON ARRIVAL HERE

Monkey-Man Woofs About Matsuda and Sports Writers

By BLONDY CROSS

Al (Dutch) Mantell, the wild man of the welterweight wrestling division from Columbus, arrived in Wichita Falls late last night, popping off and exploding excess steam as usual, announced Matchmaker Alec Ross.

The boisterous Dutchman is carded with Matty Matsuda, world's welterweight champion, in return match at the Majestic theatre Monday night, two falls to a finish.

Blah! Blah! Blah!

When asked if he wished to visit with and talk to any of the sports writers of this city, Mantell is quoted as having shouted:

"Naw, I don't want to see either one of them bums! The hams won't give anybody a square deal but this Chink Matsuda here! And if that guy over there on The Record News makes any more dirty cracks about me I'm going over there and bounce him on his dome, as he puts it, 'outta self defense!'

"They said I was afraid of this Chink. But yuh see me here ready to muss him up don't yuh? Yeah, he goes down to El Paso and trains up especially for me. But I'll be there after he's quit!!!"

Very Smart Man, Dutch.

And that's that for Mr. Mantell, a rough and tumble wrestler, but a man who the writer believes is smart enough to stick to his knitting as a wrestler and forget about this stuff of "bouncing sports writers on their domes!" Forget about it "outta self defense!"

Matsuda, we are almost as sure as we are that molasses sticks, will flip Mantell flatter than a silver dollar!

Ernie Maddock and Yaqui Joe, originally billed in the feature match of this week's mat program, are both in the city and ready for their finish affair now listed as the first half of a double windup card.

Joe is expected to win.

PADDOCK BREAKS RECORD

LOS ANGELES, April 10.—(AP) Charles Paddock, Los Angeles Athletic club runner, broke the world's record for 150 meters in a race today that featured the triangular meet of the L. A. A. C., University of Southern California and Olympic club of San Francisco running the distance in 15.6 seconds.

HEYDLER OPTIMISTIC

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—Prediction that 1926 will be "the really great year of the national game," with five strong clubs fighting for the National league pennant was made today by John Arnold Heydler, president of the senior major circuit.

ARDMORE BUYS KAHDOT

SAN ANTONIO, April 10.—(AP) Ike Kahdot, shortstop, has been sold by the San Antonio Texas league base ball club to the Ardmore club of the Western association. Kahdot was bought from Dallas of the Texas circuit last season.

PHILS NOSE MACKS

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—(AP)—The Phillies defeated the Athletics today 8 to 7 in the last game of the baseball series for city championship, giving the National leaguers an even break on the contests played on home grounds, each team having won two games. The Americans, however, won two games of the series in the south and claim the title. The score:

Philadelphia (A.)	7	10	1
Philadelphia (N.)	8	15	0

Batteries: Rommel, Walberg, Gray, Pate and Cochrane; Mitchell, Maun, Baecht, Ulrich and Wilson.

OMAHA BEATS BUFFS.

HOUSTON, April 10.—(AP)—The Omaha Buccaneers evened the extended series with the Houston Buffs by winning today's battle, 4 to 1. Each club has won three times, with the seventh battle tomorrow.

Omaha (W.)	4	7	0
Houston (Z.)	1	7	1

Batteries: Malicky and Meyers; Stelly, Pipkin and Goff.

YOUNGEST JOCKEY

The youngest jockey in action on the American track is believed to be Robert Haviland, who is sixteen.

Ewing Tangles With Aguiler In Ten-Round Main Event On Legion Fight Card Thursday

Wildcat Ewing was outpointed the other night by Tommy White, but not whipped, if you get what we mean. Nossir, Ewing tried to fight Tommy at his own game instead of tying the Texas City miller up in the clinches and making a slow match of it. In other words, Ewing either hasn't learned yet never to play with a fellow at his own game, or instead served himself up as a sacrificial offering to Tommy rather than make a poor mill of it.

AGUILAR

But Ewing didn't lose any prestige in that bout. He stayed in there and pitched. Now he's matched with a bigger and harder hitting opponent, but the type he can slam too, something he couldn't do to White after the third round.

Vincente Aguilar, the Monterey Mexican pugilist, has agreed to meet Ewing over the ten-round route Thursday in the American legion arena at Twelfth and Ohio. Says Wildcat:

"I'm mad now, and I'm going to fight 'em all. If I beat this big Mexican decisively I want another whack at White, or, at least, at the winner of the White-Hull fight!"

Both Aguilar and Ewing are on hand training for the bout.

Pug Humphries of Lawton has been matched with Johnny Shrerrod, the fighting Fort Worth welterweight in an eight-round semi-final battle.

Efforts are being taken to locate a suitable opponent for Moco Carpenter, the China Springs light-heavy.

A four rounder will be added along with a five-man negro battle royal, according to Matchmaker Wofford.

SPUDDERS PLAY DEMONS, MAYBE

Rain again put the kibosh on the Spudder-Demon exhibition affair carded at the orchard yesterday, but members of both clubs were enabled to do a bit of classic calesthenics on a high, but not dry place out by the park.

The water god permitting, the three-game series will be condensed into one this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Thompson and Williams will be the opposing pitchers, maybe.

Ross Brainard intends starting Williams in the opener at Shreveport Wednesday, so it is more than likely that if Carl works today he will go only a few innings.

Dave (Muscles) Cochlin, husky backstop, was turned back to the Spudders yesterday by Des Moines. Now J. Will has to start figuring out how to feed another face.

The Spudders will be dined at a downtown restaurant by C. C. Hill and the Miller Drug company Monday night, the last night the squad will be in the city before jarring down in the Texas league opener Wednesday at Shreveport.

LONGHORNS BEAT OWLS

AUSTIN, April 10.—(AP)—While Leslie Cox was smoke-ing over a smart pitching and airtight defense, E. Pratt led his Steer teammates on a batting spree that completely submerged the visiting Owls this afternoon by 13 to 2.

This winter has caused particular anguish to promoters of rugby, soccer and racing in England. Fog, rain and frost resulted in many postponements.

FROGS NIP PORKERS

FORT WORTH, April 10.—(AP) Texas Christian university's Horned Frogs of the diamond kept their Southwest conference record unmarred with a 4 to 1 victory over the Razorbacks from Arkansas university Saturday afternoon at T. C. U. field.

Carson kept the Razorbacks well in hand all the way, whiffing six and allowing only two free passes. He also handled four chances perfectly. On his first time up he collected a single for his mates.

Wilkin's home run in the second inning was the only bright spot for the Porkers.

CATS PLAY STEERS

FORT WORTH, April 10.—(AP) Unless Juniper Aquarius again breaks loose with a flood of his fire plug stuff, the Fort Worth Cats will hustle over to Dallas along about noon Sunday and at 3 p. m. tackle the Steers in their stadium. It will be the last practice affair of the season. Hogsett will likely pitch for Fort Worth while Estill is booked for Dallas.

The game scheduled here Saturday between the two teams was rained out.

Wednesday the two teams will open the league season here with a game. It and all other league games here throughout the year will start at 4 p. m.

In Poor Condish But Still Chesty, Spudders Await League Opener

Brainard's Bludgeoners Cut Down At Shreveport In Title Drive Wednesday

Skipper Not Worried About Strength of Any Department, Williams Draws Pitching Assignment

By BLONDY CROSS

The only team in the league that boasts there is not a single weakness in any department!

The team that has had the smallest training camp preparation of any Texas team over a span of five or six years!

The one team on the circuit which is composed of tried .300 hitters starting behind the plate, around the infield and on through the outfield positions.

The fightin'est team in the league!

The only team that is not worried about its pitching strength.

That's the 1926 Spudder machine as it rests on its war clubs awaiting the starter's gun Wednesday at 3 o'clock.

Boss Brainard and his haughty Spudders, for they're a proud gang, are billed in two more exihibition games before the marathon is on, a tiff this afternoon at the Gardner plant with Collins' Des Moines Demons and a contest Monday with the Omaha Burchrods. Tuesday, the Wichita Falls outfit leaves the United States and sets sail for the foreign shores of Shreveport.

Power in Every Cog.

The most powerful club in the league man for man, but the poorest conditioned organization of them all, due to a dearth of good training weather this spring and an abundance of the rotten kind, the swashbuckling Brainard buccaneers tear away in the first of four sallies against the Shreveporters Wednesday. After having disposed of the Louisiana combination, the cocky Wichita Falls brigade storms the stockyards battlements of the one-time champion Fort Worth Cats Sunday and Monday, returning to their own moor Tuesday, April 20, for defense of the castle against advances of Tarleton's Sports in four drives, Sniper's phlegmatic Dallas Borines in three stampedes and Cowtown Jake's erstwhile Texas league menace in a trio of melees.

The Spudders after having chased the attackers from their premises, then make sorties against the Cowtowners and Steers in their own strongholds starting the attack at 4 o'clock, April 30. They return May 4 for another home stay which lasts until May 15, busying themselves with turning back invasion of the four South Texas detachments, Baumont, Waco, Houston and San Antonio.

How they open:
Wichita Falls at Shreveport.
Dallas at Fort Worth.
Houston at Beaumont.
San Antonio at Waco.

Carl Williams, the tried and trusted veteran right hander, is Brainard's tentative selection for the pitching task in the opener. In case of accident to Willard Carl, it is more than likely the Skipper will shoot either Martin or Fussell to the dome. The highly effecive Rip Wheeler and the siege gun of the Spud mound corps, Jim Roberts, both will see service at Shreveport, probably. Brainard has not divulged his full pitching plans yet; in fact, the boss isn't sure just what he will do. There is a possibility, if everything moves along in fairly decent order at Shreveport, Rip, the Cat nemesis, will not be hailed into service until the opener at Cowtown. Suds Sutherland stood the Felines on their fuzzy brows last summer during the few engagements he performed in against the 'Cats annoyance. It is possible, of course, always with that provision the going is fairly smooth in the Tarleton bailiwick, Suds will take a fling at the Cats.

The Battle Array.

Brainard will start the season with the following batting order:

Distel, ss; Fitzgerald, cf; Turgeon, 2b; Washburn, 1b Bodie, rf; Brainard, 3b; Lamb, lf; Lapan, c; Williams, p. There's not a man in that lineup who is not capable of slamming the agate to all sectors at a lusty clip. There's a drawback, however, the boys haven't had the chance to look at enough slant heaves this spring to enable them to level their sights to the correct range yet. None of the gang has been hitting anything like as heavily as he will after having looked at a week of two of Texas league pitching spirals. That's one advantage, one handicap the Spudders are spotting the rest of the league as they swing into the titular drive.

But, brother, when those boys do get started opposing hurlers are up against it if they haven't already made arrangement for steel armor plating fronts to their ball suits.

Should a breach be blasted through the Spudder inners works, Brainard has the versatile and stiffly clouting Tony DeFate to plug the gap with. If a leak is sprung in the outer defense, the youthful but boisterous Alex Metzler will receive the call.

POOR WEATHER ON FOR MAJOR START TUESDAY

But Owners Rather Buck Snow Than Begin Later

BY GEORGE CHADWICK
Special Correspondent

NEW YORK, April 10.—Big league baseball begins Tuesday but many a fan is confident he will wake up that morning to find the wind coming out of the north heavily scented with mementoes from Greenland and Labrador. And a lot of them probably are right.

The big league managers have been growling at the weather man for several days and looks as though the bad feeling will continue for some time.

It's an old storm. The teams train hard where the sun shines most of the year around, then venture north where Old Sol doesn't get into practice until late in April. Yet the baseball promoters don't seem to learn by experience. They cut short their good days before the end of September when there is some prospect of Indian summer and wonder why they have bad luck in the middle of April when spring is feeling skittish. Experience has shown they could continue to erect May 15 with more assurance of good weather breaks than by opening as early as April 13.

Should Play in "South"

The Yankees are billed to open in Boston. Snow has been on the ground there within the week. Once the Giants tried to open in Boston. They stayed there four days with 14 inches of snow on the diamond and they played double headers with Boston for most of the season thereafter.

It would be far better if the major leagues opened their seasons in the so-called "southern tier" of cities, but they persist in trying to nurse an iceberg.

The Giants are scheduled to open on their own little island, with Brooklyn as the invader.

The Boston Nationals will start at Philadelphia with the weather outlook promising. The Athletics are to open at Washington, the most seasonable of any city in the east.

The National league may have all the better of the weather in the west. A glorious ruction begins at St. Louis where the Cardinals and Pirates come together. There's the real prize package game of the afternoon. St. Louis may prove that it can be the probable undoing of the champs.

The Cubs go to Cincinnati and will stack their excellent pitching against the Reds, who can field better and are more likely to bat harder.

The American league has it rather severe in the west. Detroit will try to beat up Cleveland on the Detroit grounds, where the weather often turns from the north pole. St. Louis plays at Chicago. The Comiskeyites have been harded to the rigors of a late spring by seeing snow in Louisiana, which is something the Browns didn't see in Florida.

Those Winners ???.

Trying to pick winners for the opening games is one of the pleasant tasks of the season. If you want to guess the probable winners by spring training form, pick the Yanks at Boston, the Giants at New York, and Boston Nationals at Philadelphia and the Athletics at Washington. Then out at St. Louis if it isn't even Steven it is for the Cards, at Cincinnati for the Reds, at Chicago, the White Sox and at Detroit the home team.

One thing of interest on April 13 will be to note the pitchers who are started by the various managers, because any pitcher who gets the honor is quite sure to be a regular during the year.

At Boston the Red Sox may not venture upon Ehmke. He is a bit fragile. Ruffing is a hard weather chap. Walte Hoyt can start for the Yanks and not suffer much. The Giants may use Greenfield or Fitzsimmons, both of them thick skinned. Brooklyn will start Vance in response to general demand. Carlson might be set after the Braves and Jenewich or Benton after the Philadelphians. If Grove is ready he will start against Washington. Otherwise it is likely to be Harris. Walter Johnson may begin the league season and his 22nd season together. Cincinnati is likely to set out with Mays who is in splendid trim and Chicago with Kaufmann. St. Louis may pitch Haines or maybe Hallahan who is left handed and a bird. The Pirates will try to curve ball the Cards with Morrison or outguess them with Kremer. The White Sox may use Blankenship. The Browns probably will start with Davis. Detroit has Collins or perhaps Wells for a left hander. Cleveland would gladly pitch Shaute if he is right.

Electra Twilight To Open Monday

ELECTRA, April 10.—The initial game of the Twilight league season will be played at the Sunset park Monday, April 12, when the Texas Hardware and the Electra Lions club clash.

Just before the game a parade will march through the city and a general celebration in which all citizens have been invited to participate.

All teams of the Electra Twilight loop have been working hard for the past week preparing for their opening encounters, one team in the Sunset park and another on the sand lot where the teams fought for the high honors last season. The Twilight league is well organized this season and a great year is predicted for the amateur teams.

STRIB FIGHTS BRITTON

TOPEKA, April 10.—(AP)—W. L. "Young" Stribling of Atlanta and Billy Britton of Columbus, Kan., have been matched for a 10-round, no decision battle here April 24, it was announced today by the Capitol Post No. 1 of the American legion. The Georgia light heavyweight boxer already has engagements at Wichita and Kansas City this month.

Iron Champions of Present Day — By Robert Edgren

The past had its iron men in all lines of sport, but there is just as much iron in some of our modern champions. In the old days there was Lon Myers, the greatest runner of his time, Carter, Conneff, Kilpatrick—a long list of them. Bernie Wefers ran for years, an unbeaten champion. Iron Man Joe McGinnity pitched championship ball through two or three generations of ball players. Iron Man Austin Rice took the wallops of all the half-pint sluggers in his day. Iron Man Hogan played four years of Yale football without taking out time for an injury.

But how about Charlie Paddock, veteran now of seven years of record breaking on the cinder path, who is training right now for an attempt to put the world's hundred yard record down to nine and two-fifths seconds? Paddock has his record breaking streaks, and goes off a bit between times, which is natural. He needs a long siege of training to reach his top form, and unless he trains for a couple of months he isn't sure of a nine-three hundred.

Paul Berlenbach is another modern iron man. Berlenbach is the one champion now in the ring who will take any fight offered, no matter how tough his opponent may be. Berlenbach had knocked out a raft of fighters, and has been knocked out only once—in the famous upset handed him a couple of years ago by Jack Delaney. Berlenbach fights often, and would like to fight every week if the commission would let him take on matches and attend to his own business. Last week Berlenbach asked for a fight with Stribling—a champion asking for a match! The commission said he'd have to wait until June, when Delaney is to "have a chance." Paul tried his luck as a heavyweight against Risko, and lost a decision because he was knocked down in the first and second rounds. It may be noted, however, that there was iron in Paul. He was groggy for four or five rounds, and then in spite of a heavy battering he came back as strong as ever and had Risko weary and wabbly in the final rounds. As an iron man Berlenbach does fairly well.

Greb Keeps Going.

Harry Greb has been an iron man for years. He never did a lot of training, and perhaps that's why he has lasted so long. He didn't use up his vitality in the training camps, but kept it for the actual fighting in the ring. In this he is like the greatest iron man in all ring history—Battling Nelson. As Greb seems to be able to fight all the hard hitters, without showing any sign of being weakened or dazed by blows, he may be as tough as Nelson. In fourteen years of fighting, during which time he has fought any number of heavyweights, only one knockout has been chalked up against him. Joe Chip, middleweight, stopped Harry back in 1913, the year Greb began as a boxer. But Dempsey and many other great champions had that experience. Just now Greb is working hard to regain his title in a return match with Flowers and can be expected to put up the hottest battle of his life when he gets into he ring again.

Tilden There When Occasion Demands.

Tilden, the champion tennis player, is a real iron man. For three years, tennis sharps have been predicting that he is about to flop, but although he loses a match occasionally in smaller events, he is still invincible when any major title is at stake. No one has yet seriously threatened his supremacy. And tennis is a game that requires absolutely perfect condition, extreme speed, perfect eyesight and judgment of timing, and unlimited endurance.

Tennis champions are supposed to burn out at thirty, but Big Bill is quite a little over that age and still going strong. It is nothing unusual for him to outlast star players ten years younger, like Vincent Richards and George Loft. Tilden's recuperative powers have been a marvel to doctors and tennis experts. Frequently Bill looks "all in" at the end of the third set in a hard match, but comes out after a short rest so refreshed that he invariably sweeps his opponent off his feet. A glass of iced tea and a lump of sugar is Tilden's refreshment during the intermissions of a tough match.

In the recent indoor team matches between France and the United States Tilden gave a matinee performance of his play, rushed to the Seventh Regiment Armory to play what proved to be a three hour and forty minute match with Jean Boratra, which settled the series in our favor, and then after grabbing a sandwich rushed off to go through the night performance on the stage.

Walter Hagen is the outstanding iron man of golf. He is in continuous competition twelve months of every year, yet never seems to grow stale. In the pinch he can always play his invincible game. Leo Diegel tells me he has been forced to go to bed after the fierce nerve strain of tackling Hagen in a tournament, but that Walter comes out smiling the next day, quite fresh and ready to pick a new victim. In the recent 72 hole match with Bobby Jones in Florida, Hagen won by a wide margin, and Bobby, although ten years younger, puffed continually on cigarettes to bolster his nerve. Hagen's nerves never need bolstering.

Charlie Hoff of Norway, who has been the athletic sensation of the past three months, is another iron man, as he proved when he stopped breaking the pole vaulting record for a week and won in all-around athletes in America, then went back next week and pole vaulted 13 feet 7 1-2 inches for another new indoor world's record.

Nurmi, the Real Iron Man.

Nurmi is, of course, the greatest example of a modern iron man on the track. Winner of Olympic championships at Antwerp when he was only nineteen, he repeated by winning several events and breaking more records in the Olympic games at Paris. Visiting America he ran in races all over the country, breaking record after record with apparent ease, and going through a track campaign that never has been equalled by any other athlete. Nurmi expects to be at his best for the next Olympic meet, and plans to drop track running after that and go out to win a Marathon! That's an iron man program!

CUBAN TRACKERS LEAVE

ATLANTA, April 10.—(AP)—The track team of the University of Havana left for home tonight. The team is badly crippled, officials said, and all engagements have been cancelled, partly because of injuries to the athletes and partly because of a desire to reach Cuba for the Cuban national junior athletic meet April 12.

RENAULT MAY FOOL 'EM ALL IN WILLS TILT

Canuck Slumped, Got Fat, But Looks Lots Better Now

By SPARROW McGANN.
Special Correspondent.
Copyright, 1926, by the Consolidated Press Association.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Harry Wills vs. Jack Renault.

Strange as it may seem, here is a fight that may be held before the outdoor season closes.

Leo Flynn, Renault's manager is hitting his typewriter the way Paderewski hits piano keys in an effort to tell the world that Wills is not the black menace he is pointed and that he is pining to prove it by tossing the erstwhile Northwest mounted policeman into the ring with Harry. The scarlet jacketed tribe has the reputation of bringing down any man it goes after and Flynn has not neglected to apply this axim to the case of Renault and Wills.

This is not the first time Leo has tried to hook up his man with Wills. Two years ago he begged for a match and it was refused him. Last year overtures were made by the Wills crowd but Renault was nowhere to be found.

Renault Was Fat.

As a matter of fact Jack was not in condition physically or otherwise to take on Wills last year. Seemingly he had thrown away all his chances for matches against high class men. He was hog fat and indolent. He could neither be coaxed nor driven into training.

And he paid for his laziness. Starting off with big Joe Stoessel, who was then nothing more than an amateur, Jack let the big fellow stay the entire route. Then Bob Roper, Homer Smith and Quentin Romero did the same thing. Losing to Jack Sharkey and failing to bring down Johnny Risko, another graduate of the amateur ranks, was like plastering an also ran tag around his neck.

About this time Flynn began to be worried about his meal ticket. Why he had not started to worry sooner is hard to explain. Anyhow, he induced his charge to train seriously for a battle on the coast against Jimmy Dougherty's colored butler, Gawge Godfrey.

Renault floundered about the ring for ten rounds and lost the decision. Bear in mind that Jack previously had stopped the big dinge in 11 rounds. Winding up a disastrous year Renault was playing along with Marine Tolliver when the bout was stopped in four rounds.

All in all, a miserable showing for a man of his standing in the world of pugilism.

Jack and Gene.

With the new year and the big ballyhoo on for championship matches, and purses beyond his wildest dreams, Renault decided to settle down to business. Proceeding seriously to work himself into shape, he at length started on a tour through the sticks and a consistent run of knockouts seems to have restored his confidence.

In the course of his stay in Florida, Renault polished off Jack League, whom Jack Dempsey proclaimed as the next world's champion. If the ex-policeman keeps on, Paddy Mullins will undoubtedly stake him to a bout with Wills and Rickard is very likely to be interested in promoting the fight.

STRIB'S WIFE SAYS HE WILL BE HEAVY KING

Blue-Blood Belle of Macon Confident Hubby Can Beat Carp

By MILLARD FERGUSON
Special Correspondent
Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

ATLANTA, April 10.—"Young" Stribling's 19-year-old bride, the former society debutante and belle of Macon, Ga., wants her young pugilist husband to win the heavyweight crown, defend the title against all comers and then retire undefeated.

Most brides who have been married only four months would be so fearful of injuries to their husbands that they would not go near the ringside, but not so with Mrs. "Young" Stribling. She has complete confidence in her husband's ability to whip anybody in the world, even Jack Dempsey. She is an ardent fight fan and when Stribling follows up his recent decision over Jimmy Slattery in New York by fighting Georges Carpentier, France's "orchid man" in Macon three months hence, his wife will have a ringside seat.

She and Stribling's mother are the two persons most interested in the Carpentier bout, which is being promoted by "Pa" Stribling and Floyd Fitzsimmons.

"I get excited whenever I see Strib fight," said his bride, "but of course, I'm never afraid. The only thing I don't like about prizefights is the knockout. I just can't stand them. I feel sorry even when Strib is the one who is winning. There is something pathetic about a man who is lying on the mat, taking the count and trying so hard to crawl to his feet. You know that when he gets up all dizzy, he'll be knocked down again. And the more grit he has and the more times he gets up, the worse it makes matters."

Kind-Hearted Miss

"She's kind hearted all right," put in Pa Stribling, "but don't get the idea she's the chickenhearted type. She's the quietest thing you ever saw when Strib is in the ring—except at the Slattery fight. I think she would have liked to have seen a knockout that time."

"Well, yes I would," admitted Mrs. Stribling. "You see, I didn't like Mr. Slattery much anyway."

"Ma" Stribling says that six months before the birth of her pugilistic son she decided he was going to be the heavyweight boxing champion and that his life has been directed toward that end.

"It would be just too wonderful," exclaimed his bride, over the prospect of Stribling winning the heavyweight belt. Then she added:

"But every athlete has his prime, and then he starts on the downhill. When his best days are over, the thing to do is to quit, undefeated if possible. That's what I want Strib to do."

Bill So Nice

As Clara Kinney, society girl of Macon, before she chose a prize fighter for a husband, Mrs. Stribling knew all about afternoon teas and bridge parties, but next to nothing of boxing matches. She had never been within hailing distance of a prize ring up to the time Stribling came a-courting, and she regarded them as rather horrible affairs. But Stribling made all the difference in the world in her viewpoint.

This 21-year-old boy who may wear Dempsey's crown some day is not only quiet and gentlemanly, but actually bashful. After meeting him the young society bud was convinced that prize fighting couldn't be the brutal business she had imagined, because Strib was such a nice boy.

To make doubly sure, she went with "Ma" Stribling to see one of Stribling's bouts in Macon, and that fight made her fall all the more in love with him.

One of the interesting things about her is that she is the only person who can and does call Young Stribling "Baby." She weighs only 105 pounds and he is the huskiest light heavyweight in the ring, but he is her "baby", just the same and he never utters a murmur or protest.

Top 'O Morn Stuff

By "Blondy" Cross

Motto: "RAZZ THE RAZZERS"

PRACTICALLY SETTLED

Our noble Spudders have the flag tied to the mast, or, at least almost, one would gather from conversation with Lee Keyser, astute Demon boss.

* * *

Keyser has looked over every club in the Texas league other than Shreveport and Beaumont. The average intelligent fan will tell you it isn't necessary to watch the latter two—much. The Spudders, or words to similar effect, appear far and away stronger than Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston, Waco and San Antonio, avers Keyser.

* * *

Keyser has made a close study of the six Texas league clubs named. The Des Moines outfit trained at New Braunfels and has indulged in exhibition tiffs with a number of Texas teams.

* * *

Anybody Seen My Kitty?

Man for man and, above all, in the pitching department the Spudders stack up more powerful than the rest of the pack. Incidently, Brainard is the lone Texas league manager who has no worries about the strength of his spinning corps. Jake Atz is one of the hardest hit.

* * *

CAN MULE HIT?

Keyser has nothing but words of praise for Lamb, Washburn, Bodie and DeFate, former Western league performers. "Say, but that Washburn certainly can hit, can't he?" mused Keyser in a fanning session yesterday at ball headquarters. "He's an earnest, persevering sort of fellow and a fine man, too."

* * *

"You just want to remember when you feel like doing anybody any favors that I sent you Bodie! Look at him, one of the heaviest hitters in the league, and he'll tear 'em up this season, too!" said Keyser.

* * *

"I like this Lamb. He's a great outfielder. He's poison at the plate and he certainly can hound that agate!"

* * *

DE FATE ? ? ?

When told that DeFate looked like a mighty good utility man, Keyser shouted, "What!! Utility!! You take another look at him. You look at him about two weeks from now and you'll think he's a whale of a regular shortstop. You can't keep him out of there. If you've got a better shortstop than he is and the rest of your team compares favorably with that shortstop then you're too good for the Texas league!"

* * *

The flu epidemic has just about passed away, but another scourge has descended on Wichita Falls. Dutch Mantell is in town!

* * *

YAP, YOU YAPPERS!

That Kal Segrist incident the other day in Dallas is a delicate morsel a few of the wolves and heavy-skulled yap-yappers who will frequent the Spudder orchard this summer and bellyache every time somebody boots one or a pitcher finds the going a bit hectic, might chew on for a period. We repeat Manager Snipe Conley's words spoken at a banquet of Dallas rooters anent Kal Segrist who has been sold to San Antonio by the Steers:

"Dalles fans have finally driven one of the greatest baseball players in the Texas league from our team," said Conley, calling the hand of the woof-woof boys who have ridden Kal rather unmercifully.

"I've played with Kal Segrist five years and there is no better, cleaner and harder working player than Segrist. But he has played under inhuman conditions in Dallas, and now he is leaving, a victim of knocks.

"If you have to razz, then pour it on me and leave my players alone, unless you can boost," Conley finished. Brainard seconds the motion!

WATER MEN BUSY.

Doc Douglas, head of the Water department nine, new Twilight league entry this summer, has sent Anderson Martin to second base and named him player-manager. That settles the keystone worry. Leonard Moss has been added to the catching staff along with Shipley, Moore and Griggs. Moss hails from Waurika, coming to Wichita Falls highly recommended as a ball player. Evan Harris of last year's Junior college nine has signed up for an outfield berth.

* * *

Lawrence Medford speaks with high praise of Speck Roberts, American refiners' keystoner. Roberts, ever a good ball player, seems still better this year. Besides being a sweet infielder he's rated as one of the smartest all-around players in the Wichita Falls amateur realm, especially on the paths.

* * *

ELECTRICS PERK UP

The Electrics stacked up more or less as the weak sister of the Twilight loop last summer, but it's going to be a different story this season, say team officials. Kelly and Goodwin have been very busy already. They lined up a likely squad, practiced several times, then cut down to 16 players and still are liable to make more changes.

* * *

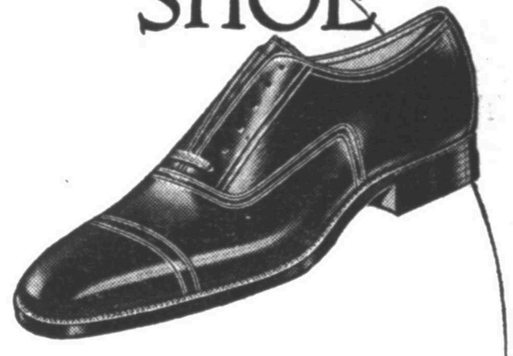

The Electrics' flinging corps appears exceptionally strong. The staff has three formidable flingers listed, Eddie Kollman, Everett Blue and Lee Courtney. Norwood and Stanfield are lined up for the catching.

* * *

THAT NO HIT GAME.

One of the most remarkable games of the 1925 season was playd by the Security Nationals and the Electrics. Gabe Harris was on the knob for the Cotner outfit. Blue hurled for the power and light boys. Gabe was the victor by a 1 to 0 score. But the real feature was the fact both side-armers spun no-hit stuff up to the plate. Not a batter of either club connected for a drive to safe territory. Courtney, then playing with the bankers, scored the winning run, but errors and infield outs sent him over.

Garber Field Celebrates First Anniversary Deep Sand Discovery

SINCLAIR NO. 1, BELIEVED A ONE-YEAR-O-LD

Total of 91 Wells Started Within Space of Twelve Months

TWELVE STARTING

New Noble County Pool May Eclipse Parent Area

TULSA, Okla., April 10.—Oklahoma's wonder oil pool, the Garber area of Garfield county, has just finished celebrating the first anniversary of the discovery of a deeper pay in the field that since 1915, has been in the producing columns of the Sooner state.

On Friday, April 9, the Sinclair Oil and Gas company No. 25 Belveal, in the northeast corner of 24-22-4w, was one year old. It was drilled into the Wilcox sand on April 9, 1925, the pay being from 4,360 feet. Later deepenings made its total depth at 4,425 feet.

The Sinclair Belveal 25 cost approximately $75,000 to complete, but its output kept increasing and for the 120 days that it was the only well in the deep sand it averaged 2,300 barrels daily. It had produced to April 2, this year, a total of 405,629 barrels of better than 40 gravity oil, which at prevailing prices netted the Sinclair company more than one million dollars. And it is still producing doing from 25 to 35 barrels a day on the swab.

Since the Sinclair Belveal came in a total of 91 deep sand wells have been started in the Garber deep area, at a cost of around $8,000,000 to the operators. Of the 91 starts, 59 are producing either from the Wilcox or from lime horizons. Twelve are still drilling; 14 have been plugged as rank failures, and 23 are drilling to shallower sands and 12 are ready to start.

Frank Belveal, owner of the 160 acres on which the Garber deep sand well was drilled, is an early day settler of Garfield county, and one of the foremost citizens of Enid. He retained all of his royalty and has reaped a large and growing wealth from the one-eighth royalty of all of the oil produced on his farm. His son-in-law is Dudley Brannon, first baseman of the Kansas City team in the American association.

Another Big Pool Nearby.

While the Garber area will be the scene of much drilling for many months to come, operators are seeking trends away from it in all directions.

Some miles to the east, a new pool appears to being opened by Elain Oil company and Reiter-Foster Oil corporation in their No. 1 Burke, in the center of the southeast of 33-22-2w, Noble county. At 4,375 feet, corrected depth, it is making occasional flows from the Bartlesville sand. Operators look for a big pool around this discovery well.

Billy Sunday and Son Buy Mining Property And Establish Town

BARSTOW, Cal., April 10.—(AP)—An American town in which the Rev. William A. Sunday has not conducted revival meetings has been called into existence and christened 30 miles west of here by M. Patrick, who said he represented the famous evangelist and his son, George Sunday, Los Angeles real estate operator.

Sunday and son quietly bought 160 acres of patented ground near the scene of the recent gold strike of Ed and John Herkelrath in the Kramer Hills, and the town of Kramer Hills officially took root in the Mojave desert with completion of a plat by Edward L. Haff, deputy United States mineral surveyor.

Last night the nondescript mining camp of tents clustered about the rich claim of the Herkelraths was moving to its new location seeking an outward expression of permanency and dignity.

The first lot was bought by George L. Keller of Los Angeles, who will open a mining exchange.

Oklahoma Panhandle Excites Interest With Increase of Boom Area To South

Navajo May Be Next Indian Nation To Reap Benefit from Black Golconda With Big Lease Sale Set for May 17

Large Tracts in Northwestern New Mexico May Be Opened For Exploration As Result of Bidding Expected to Take place Then

SANTA FE, N. Mex., April 10.—A sale of leases in the Navajo Indian reservation in northwestern New Mexico is expected to take place this spring under the supervision of H. J. Hagerman, Indian commissioner. As far as can be learned, no definite date has been set though a tentative date named in some quarters is May 17. Commissioner Hagerman is reported in Washington conferring with officials in regard to the matter.

The sale is expected to arouse considerable interest as geologists for a number of big companies have been working in the area recently and at intervals since the last sale took place Oct. 15, 1923. At that time leases were sold on the Hogback, Rattlesnake, Tocito, Table Mesa and Beautiful Mountain structures. The Hogback dome had been proven by the Midwest Refining company at the time of the sale. Table Mesa and Rattlesnake subsequently came in as producers and Beautiful Mountain and Tocito were failures though the Continental Oil company has taken over the Gypsy lease on this structure following a resurvey and is preparing to make another test. The Hogback leases were on the edge of the structure and two wells drilled failed to extend the proven area.

Several operators are preparing to drill in the territory and have been waiting until after the sale so as not to interfere with plans of the Indian department. There are several structures in the area which have not been tested. One of these is near the Arizonas line which offers favorable opportunities for a test to the Pennsylvania and it is expected that this kind of a test will be required in the terms of the sale. This is the Biltabito structure, 25 miles west of Shiprock, where the Dakota outcrops.

The four exploratory leases sold in 1923 were as follows: 4,000 acres on Tocito structure, Gypsy Oil company, for $46,000; 3,200 acres on Table Mesa structure, A. E. Carlton of Colorado Springs for $17,500; 4,800 acres on Beautiful Mountain structure, Neill B. Field of Albuquerque, for $1,000; 4,800 acres on Rattlesnake structure, S. C. Munoz of New York, for $1,000. The other sales brought the bonus receipts up to $88,000.

URGE SESSION TO VALIDATE ROAD BONDS

Fort Worth Delegation Asks Mrs. Ferguson to Call Legislature

AUSTIN, April 10—(AP)—Special session of the legislature to validate approximately $100,000,000 worth of Texas road district bonds was urged today by a delegation of Fort Worth citizens, who appeared before Governor Miriam A. Ferguson. The appeal was heard, but the governor did not indicate what action if any she will take.

The bonds are those affected by the recent decision of the U. S. supreme court in the Archer county bond case in which district road bonds were held unconstitutional and invalid.

State Senator R. A. Stuart of Fort Worth and Mayor H. C. Meacham of Fort Worth headed the delegation. They explained to the chief executive that the city of Fort Worth had lost $50,000 in discounts on city bonds sold in New York.

The Fort Worth bonds were not directly affected by the decision of the supreme court, but the effect was disastrous on the bonds, Senator Stuart said. In order to sell $2,500,000 worth of the city bonds, it was necessary to dispose of them at 4.60 per cent, although they are 4.75 per cent interest bearing bonds, resulting in the $50,000 loss.

More than $200,000 will be lost on the remainder of the Fort Worth bonds which aggregate $5,300,000, Stuart said. He declared that all Texas bonds offered for sale in the future will find close buyers, if at all, unless steps are taken to validate the district road bonds.

Other members of the Fort Worth delegation include Willard Burton, of the Burton-Lingo Lumber company, Ellis Johnson, corporation counsel of Fort Worth; Mark McMahan, attorney, and John King, president of the King Candy company and James Meercern, district judge.

ANCIENT LAWS USED TO STOP LIQUOR MAKING

Fair Sex Show Men Thing Or Two in Way Of Advertising

CHICAGO, April 10.—(AP)—A 69-year-old revenue law, more rigorous than the Volstead act, has been resurrected by district prohibition authorities for future onslaughts against the moonshine industry in the Illinois-Indiana-Wisconsin area.

Under the old law, passed in 1857, property upon which illicit distilling as been done and wall the equipment for the illegal manufacture can be declared forfeited to the government. It even provides that land over which the moonshine is conveyed may be taken, provided the landowners connived in the transfer.

Revival of the long forgotten statute will be tested in the prosecution of 11 pending wildcat distillery cases, Prohibition Administrator Yellowley has informed Chicago agents.

If Mr. Yellowley's plans materialize land and paraphernalia used for booze making will soon go under the auction hammer of United States marshal. Under the Volstead act the auctions have been confined to sales of seized automobiles and booze making machinery available for legitimate industry.

Padlocking for a year has been the extent of the Volstead law in handling real estate used in the illegal manufacture and sale of liquor.

The revived law, dug up by E. H. Loyd, legal adviser to Mr. Yellowley, is credited with crushing the moonshine industry which flourished in the reconstruction days following the Civil war.

Section 3281 of the United States revenue act of 1857 is the statute cited by Mr. Loyd. It provides fines of from $1,000 to $5,000 and prison sentences of from six months to two years for operating a wildcat still.

Wade said the reports were the most optimistic in years.

A man thought to have been Evers was slain near Gainesville last Monday. The manner of his death and other circumstances have not been learned here.

Total of Eight Rigs Up and Running From Forgan West

TULSA, Okla., April 10.—Due to its location due north of the great Panhandle of Texas oil field, and interesting developments in south central Kansas, Texas county, in the Panhandl of Oklahoma, is among th most activ wildcat areas in Oklahoma today.

Eight rigs are up there today and many others are planned. A prominent oil scout just back from Texas county, reports the following activty:

H. F. Wilcox Oil and Gas company No. 1 Zen, in the southwest corner of the southeast of 29-3n-13e, is drilling out cement at 2,223 feet, while its No. 1 Hovey, in the southeast corner of 21-4n-14e, is drilling in hard sand below 2,145 feet.

M. M. Valerius Oil and Gas company No. 1, in the nortwest corner of the southwest of 18-3n-12e, is shut down at 170 feet, waiting for rotary tools to be moved from the Wilcox No. 1 Hovey while its No. 2, in the southeast corner of 4-3n-12e, is starting up at 700 feet, after being shut down because of the late March and early April snowstorm.

Foster Reiter Oil corporation and others are around 300 feet in the northeast of the southeast of the southwest of 9-3n-15e, just one-fourth of a mile from the first hole in the southeast of the southwest of section 9. Their No. 1, in the northeast quarter of 10-2n-11e, in which E. R. Brann, is interested, is still a location.

Allison, Garber and Pulse in the southeast corner of 4-1n-12e, is around 725 feet.

Nichols and Hitch, who have a block in both Texas county, Oklahoma and south in Sherman county, northwest Texas, have let contract for a well to be drilled just south into Sherman county, Texas.

Attacker of Negro Girls Is Sought After One Slain

AUSTIN, April 10.—(AP)—Police were today hunting for the attacker of Margaret Standfield, 7-year-old negro girl, whose body was found last night in the rear of a residence in the white section of Houston. A physician said she had died of shock.

The girl disappeared Thursday night from the home of her mother who lives in a servant house in another section of the city. The owner of the premises where the body was found told police he heard a commotion in the rear of his home the same night. A superficial investigation, he said, revealed nothing. Last night, however, he said he found the body concealed in the brush in the rear of his home.

Reports have reached the police of attacks upon older negro girls in the same vicinity. Investigations today said the perpetrator probably was a maniac.

Men Marry Women With Best Paying Positions First

CHICAGO, April 10.—(AP)—Women who have jobs are the first to get husbands here and the women with the best jobs get married first of all, Judge William L. Morgan, domestic court, disclosed today. Many husbands complain in his court, the judge said, that after marriage their wives quit work—and then the husband quit the wives.

"I don't think women should work," said the court. "I think that men have no business getting married until they can take care of their wives. When there are children, a woman's business is with them, not out doing a man's work."

King and Queen To Give House-Party

LONDON, April 10.—(AP)—A flutter of excitement in high London society has been caused by the announcement that King George and Queen Mary are to give a house party at Windsor some time this spring. There has been much speculation as to who has been invited, but there has not even been an inkling as to who will be there besides the Prince of Wales. However, it is probable that the Duke of Connaught, the king's uncle, will be included if he returns in time from the Riviera, where he spent the winter.

Guests at the royal house parties may do as they please generally—play tennis, golf, ride horseback or play bridge—but the king reserves the mornings to himself, most of the afternoons and it is seldom that the visitors see his majesty after 8 o'clock in the evening.

JIM HOGG CO. LOOKED TO AS LIKELY AREA

New Wells There Give District New Aspect of Productvity

LAREDO, April 10.—Kitselman & St. Albans No. 27 Holbein, 210 feet from the south line and 150 feet from the west line of block 40, survey 11, Las Animas grant, in Jim Hogg county, south Texas, blew in for approximately 5,000 barrels initial late Tuesday from a total depth of 2,139 feet, says a telegram from Laredo.

The oil sand was unexpectedly topped and the first flow shot a stream of fluid over the top of the derrick.

The new well extends the Henne, Winch and Farris field two miles to the north, with only gas wells in between it and the field proper.

South Texas oil operators were greatl yexcited over the size of the well, and they predict that it will bring Jim Hogg county back into the limelight and be the incentive for considerable new activity along the Raynoso escarpment.

Kitselman & St. Albans are bailing No. 1 Weber ,and the No. 29 Holbein. Both are believed on top of producing sands.

While Kitselman and St. Albans had very little storage available for a big well, several pipe lines were nearby and the large production is being saved.

"Hades to Pay—And Plenty Of Hot Pitch Due"

The Democrats Are Going West—And Wait For July Ballots

DEMOCRATS are going west. They nominated James E. Ferguson in the city of El Paso in the year 1914. This year the state executive committee will hold its meeting as the law provides at Wichita Falls on June 14, and this will be the first time the committee has ever met in Wichita Falls or that far north. Arthur R. Edison of Hamilton is the state chairman, and the purpose of the Wichita Falls meeting will be to certify to county chairman the names of residences of all candidates for state offices to go on the official primary ballot, and also probably to name the place for the holding the state democratic convention. The first primary election is on July 24 and the state convention on September 7.

Chairman Edison, speaking for himself, says none but democrats have the right or should be permitted to participate in democratic primaries, or democratic conventions, or have any voice whatever in democratic councils. Article 3110, revised statutes, provides tests which the party executive committee shall require to be placed on all ballots and this test is, "I am a democrat and pledge myself to support the nominee of this primary" and the statute also provides that "any ballot which shall not contain such printed test above the names of the candidate thereon, shall be void and shall not be counted."

Chairman Edison again speaking for himself and not for the committee, makes his position clear in the following: "My construction of this statute, if a construction of it should be necessary, which I do not think so, is that the state executive committee is without authority to print or cause to be pringed, anyhing on the ballot in reference to the qualifications or eligibility of the voter to participate in the primary except this test. The committee when it meets may conclude differently, but I do not apprehend that it will."

The plain English of all this is visible to the naked eye and comprehensive to the unthought or unthinking. Democrats who voted for Dr. George Butte will not be barred from the primary. Of course, there is a test on the ballot, according to the statutes. A participant in the July primary, when he deposits his ballot pledges himself to vote for the nominee or the nominees of the democratic party.

Away back in 1892 more than a hundred and 50 thousand democrats bolted Hogg and voted for Clarke for governor. In the succeeding election they were permitted to return to the poll. In later campaigns more than a hundred and 50 thousand democrats affiliated with the populist party and voted the populist ticket. When Tom Campbell was nominated for governor by the democrats, these political mavericks were permitted to return to the old reservation and many of them captured front seats in the band wagon. It was the same with the prohibitionists. When they battled agains he liquor traffic was uppermost in Texas, thousands of pro-democrats broke away from the democratic party and voted for the nominees of the national prohibition party. Dr. J. D. Cranfill is a shining example. In recent years he has ben a leader of the democratic host.

Cyclone Davis is a populist example. He calls himself a democrat today, but he is just as strong in the populist faith as when that party terrorized the democrats in many southern states. Chairman Edison ran true to form in his interview from the days of Hogg to the campaign of 1924 bolting democratic nominees has been a time-honored custom, and the extension of the olive branch by the so-called regulars is another time honored custom. There should be 800,000 votes cast in the July primary by the democratic men and women of Texas. There is a dead sea calm now, but wait until the cyclone comes. Then there will be hades to pay and plenty of hot pitch.

CONTINENTAL STARTS LARGE PIPELINE, N. M.

Carrier Will Be 95 Miles Long, From Table Mesa To Santa Fe

FARMINGTON, N. M., April 10.—The Continental Oil company has commenced the construction of a 95-mile pipeline from the Rattlesnake and Table Mesa domes in the Navajo Indian reservation, in northwestern New Mexico to the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad at Gallup, N. M., and expects to commence running crude by July 1. The company has contracted for the sale of a part of the production to the Humble Oil and Refining company which will run the crude in its refinery on the Gulf coast. The pipeline, with three pumping stations to be constructed along the route, will represent an investment close to $1,000,000.

The construction of this line, which has been discussed for some time, means that an outlet to the markets will be provided for the production in northwestern New Mexico which has been shut in except for such quantities as were required to operate the refinery at Farmington the output of which is used to supply the local territory. The line will be constructed of four-inch pipe and will have a capacity of approximately 5,000 barrels daily.

Twelve wells have been drilled to production on the Rattlesnake dome and five on the Table Mesa. The wells are shut in and no prolonged test has been made for lack of sufficient tankage.

YOUTH TO DIE FOR SLAYING

Eighteen-Year-Old Boy Is Sentenced to Death in Electric Chair

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—Sentence of death in the electric chair will be imposed upon Herbert Koerber, 18-year-old leader of a youthful holdup gang kpown as the "Cake eaters."

A jury in the Queens county court deliberated forty minutes last night before returning a verdict of first degree murder against Koerber for the slaying of Angelo Mahairis, a Jamaica restaurant owner, three weeks ago. Koerber testified he shot Mahairis when the latter refused to sell him and his companions liquor.

Drink, bad companions and nights in Harlem negro cabarets after the loosing of home ties with the death of his mother were the features of the youth's career as outlined during the trial. Council for the defense appealed in vain to the jury for leniency because of the defendant's youthfulness and early environment.

"They were just a bunch of kids gone wrong, taking joy rides, drinking booze, singing and raising the dence generally," the defense lawyer said, describing Koerber and his gang. Four other youths, indicted with Koerber, will go to trial shortly.

There's a world of difference between riding on Dayton Stabilized Balloons and ordinary tires. They make an unmistakable difference in how the road feels in the new, delightful riding quality of your car, in how you feel at the end of a ride.

Their stretchiness gives you that stabilized, easy-riding comfort, and their sturdiness means miles and miles of untroubled service.

"Miles Per DOLLAR~Not Miles Per Gallon!"

Then Why Call Them Used Cars?

LOOK

An Investment in Mileage and—MORE!

When you purchase an automobile, whether high, medium or low in price, you invest in the mileage that car contains.

The mileage you receive, expressed in terms of dollars and cents, is the return on your investment.

Necessarily, the lower the first cost in comparison to the mileage your car contains, the greater your return.

Old ideas connected with the purchase of used cars have passed—for sound reasoning tells us that EVERY CAR ON THE STREET IS A USED CAR!

No longer is it necessary to approach the buying of a used car with fear and trembling—

It is "Miles Per DOLLAR—Not Miles Per Gallon" that is purchased in the motor, chassis and snappy general appearance of the used car bought today.

A local man buys a NEW automobile, drives it a year, and trades it in on a later model or another make.

He paid a New car price—yet used comparatively little of the mileage originally built into the job. NOW the car is offered for sale.

It is priced far below first cost—but the big majority of its mileage is still available to the second purchaser.

Greater returns on the investment—in mileage, quick, sure transportation, and happiness.

"Miles Per DOLLAR—Not Miles Per Gallon?" Exactly!

"Miles Per DOLLAR—Not Miles Per Gallon"

The Mileage Someone Else Wastes— Is Saved For YOU to Use!

Ready for the junk heap?

Emphatically, NO!

Just because an automobile has served a former owner faithfully for two or three years is no reason at all for casting it aside as worthless.

Traded in on newer models; reconditioned and repainted; such cars offer new owners hundreds of miles of service.

The fine displays of automobiles in the used car showrooms of local automobile dealers bear out any statements we make here—

And when you stop to figure in cold dollars and cents that the mileage you buy in a used car costs much less per mile because of the low first cost—

There's nothing left to do but turn to the Automotive columns on this and other pages of today's paper and select the automobile YOU wish to own and drive.

You are buying "Miles per DOLLAR—Not Miles Per Gallon"!

Every dealer has a car at a price that will suit you. Read today's paper.

ANOTHER BIG SALE

$13,000 in Unused Transportation

Ready to Move at Prices That Will Suprise You!

These cars are all standard makes, have good paint, tops and rubber and are completely reconditioned.

All are GOOD USED CARS, no junk is included in this sale.

The prices are right—the terms very liberal.

If—a man is a good judge of used car values—then he can get better value in a good used car than in a new car for the same price. We admit THIS.

Last fall in our November used car sale we sld to satisfied buyers over $11,600 worth of good used cars.

The cars now offered are as big if not BIGGER VALUES. See them and compare them.

The G. M. A. C. purchase plan offers the fullest protection to the owner at lowest rate of interest and is available to both resident and out-of-town buyers.

PAST WEEK'S BOND MARKET SHOWS POWER

Greatest Strength of The Year Revealed by Investments

BY BYRON SELLER.
Special Correspondent of The Record News. Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

NEW YORK, April 10—At no time this year has the investment market been so strong as it was this week. At no time has there been such impressive buying of high grade bonds.

The upward trend was in evidence all the week but it gathered momentum at the end when not only the so-called legal bonds but sound investment issues which do not qualify technically as savings bank holdings joined in the advance.

Even some of the foreign obligations, about the security of which there is no reasonable doubt, were in actice demand. The line was drawn only at the point where the speculative feature was involved.

The scope of the movement may be better understood if a few examples are used. Take three bonds which made new 1925 high records this week:

Atchison general fours, St Louis, San Francisco prior lien "A" fours and Commonwealth of Australia 5s.

The Highest Bond.

The Atchison issue represents the highest degree of security available in a railroad mortgage. It is commonly considered the leader in its group. It is a legal investment for savings banks in practically all the states. It sells to yield well under four per cent. Fluctuations in its market price are governed entirely by the current charge for money and the outlook for commodity prices, and not by the prevailing trend in the earnings of the Atchison railroad. Bonds of this type are always the first to respond in a generally advancing market.

The St. Louis San Francisco obligations is in quite a different class. The bond is well secured by property value, but it is only in recent years that earnings have become stabilized at a sufficiently wide margin over fixed charges to satisfy the requirements of exacting bond buyers.

It is only within a comparative short time that the common stock has been put on a dividend paying basis. In other words this bond is the obligation of a corporation with an improving financial outlook which gives every promise of being permanent.

High Foreign Security.

The Australian bond ranks high among foreign loans. The market rates it inferior only to Dominion of Canada and United Kingdom obligations. But interest and principal on an Australian bond are for all practical purposes just as well assured as they are on the obligations of the other two countries. Moreover, the Australian issue carries a five per cent coupon and sells below par and five per cent bonds below par as secure as these are no longer plentiful.

It will be observed that there is nothing of a speculative nature about either of these three issues. It is true that a good deal of the buying of this week probably came from dealers who expect to retail the bonds later to individual investors, but this does not take away any of the significance.

It is hazardous to forecast how far any such movement as this will go but at least it can be said that all fundamental conditions favor continued strength in pure investments.

The downward trend in commodity prices has been emphasized in this correspondence in previous letters. This week the influence which was most potent was the fall in rates for time money to the lowest since last autumn. Probably a contributing factor was the letup in stock speculation and the diversion of funds from that market to investment bonds. A change is possible in any of these quarters, or all of them, but at present it looks unlikely. Then, too, there is always the theoretical argument in favor of a long time advance in bonds founded on the historical precedent of what has always happened after great wars.

In the final analysis of foreign affairs the most interesting development of the week has been the statement of the American section of the international chamber of commerce on conditions in Germany as it affects dollar loans floated in the United States. It is estimated American investors have absorbed in the last year or so about $230,000,000 in German coporate and government offerings. The question is now raised formally as it has been casually for months past, how the exchange is to be secured for the service of these loans.

The problem will not become pressing until 1928 or 1929, when the German balance of international payments under the Dawes plan reaches the maximum. The market for German dollar bonds paid no attention to this analysis and, as a matter of fact, the economic situation in Germany in recent months has shown marked improvement. The chances are that long before the time comes this difficulty will have been surmounted.

New Financing

Two pieces of new financing this week have commanded unusual attention. One was the sale of $25,000,000 City of Philadelphia municipal bonds priced to yield the investor 4.175 per cent. This is slightly higher than the $75,000,000 New York City issue retired in February but it is favorable enough to the borrower to indicate the strength of the municipal bond market even under the reduced surtaxes.

The other was the $65,000,000 Associated Electric 5 1-2s which was largest electric light and power bond issue on record. Aside from its size the feature about this offering was the progress it showed toward a simplifying of the financial structure of large holding companies.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.
NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—(AP)—The cotton market was fairly active for a short Saturday session and prices scored a fair advance during the early trading owing to much better Liverpool cables than due and to the very unfavorable showing by the weather map. Rains were heavy in the western belt and the barometer lines warranted an official forecast for further unsettled weather and the extension of the rains to the eastern belt ovr Sunday. Prices gained 17 to 19 points in the early trading. Later prices eased off gradually on realising and week-end liquidation and about half of the early gain was lost the market closing at the lowest reached during the session but still six to eight points not higher for the day.

At the opening Liverpool was five to seven penny points better than due and the weather map showed general and heavy rains in the western belt. As a result first trades showed gains of 10 to 14 points and the market continued to advance after the opening call until May traded up to 18.37, July to 17.83 and October to 17.04 or 17 to 19 points above yesterday's close.

The market then started to ease off, the advance offering a temptation to realize and there was also the usual liquidation for over the week-end. Prices reached the lowest of the recession in th final trading with May down to 18.16, July to 17.73 and October to 16.92 or 10 to 12 points under the highs. The close was at the lowest.

There were reports during the session of a better demand locally for spot cotton and these rumors were later confirmed by the official report which showed sales for the day of 2,052 bales. Exports for the day totaled 19,246 bales.

NEW YORK FUTURES.
NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed steady at net advance of 6 to 11 points.

	High	Low	Close	Prev. Close

Opening: January 17.19; May 18.90; July 18.35; October 17.61; December 17.30.

NEW YORK COTTON.
NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—The cotton market was higher today on reports of further rains in the southwest and apprehensions of rain in the western belt tomorrow. After selling up to 18.40, July reacted to 18.31 under realising, and closed at that figure, the general market closing steady at net advances of six to 11 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of seven to 13 points. Active months sold 15 to 17 points net higher after the call on coverings by near month shorts, with trade and commission house buying of later deliveries. Buying on the unfavorable weather news was stimulated by the relatively steady showing of Liverpool which seemed to be influenced by the southern rain reports.

The advance to 18.96 for May and 17.67 for October brought in considerable realising for the over the week-end, and there were reactions in later trading. May sold back to 18.88 and October to 17.58, the market closing at about the low prices.

The weather news was regarded by local brokers as growing in importance with the advance of the season, but the disposition of longs to take profits on comparatively moderate advances was considered due partly to a feeling that there was still ample time to plant, and that the situation would not become critical until after the middle of the month.

Private cables reported trade calling with local and continental covering in Liverpool, despite poor business in the cotton goods market at Manchester.

The report on boll weevil to April 1 suggested rather an irregular emergence, and on the whol, appeared to be without any particular effect on the markets.

The amount of cotton on ship board awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 82,000 pieces against 109,000 last year.

NEW ORLEANS SPOTS.
NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—(AP)—Spot cottcn closed quiet and steady, 8 points up; sales 2,052 bales. Low middling 18.91; middling 18.41; good middling 19.26; receipts 4,074; stock 338,247.

NEW YORK, April 10.—(AP)—The irregular adjustment of quoted values which has been going on in the stock market since the drastic decline of last month continued today. No definite price trend was apparent although, in general, the industrials were inclined to yield and the rails to advance. Trading was again quiet, total sales for the two hours falling below 500,000 shares.

The principal news development of the day was the tonnage statement of the United States Steel corporation, showing a decrease of 236,857 tons in unfilled orders last month, which was made public after the market closed. U. S. Steel common closed a point lower at 120¼ but Bethelem and Crucible broke to new low levels for the year.

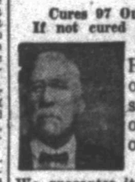

Gen Petroleum opened 1¾ points higher at 60¼ on the announcement that the directors of the Standard Oil company of New York had approved the plan for the acquisition of that company but it lost about half its gain on substantial profit taking. Although Refining dropped two points on a few sales and Pan-American Western B advanced 1¾, but most of the other oils moved within narrow and irregular limits.

Renewal of bear attacks on the motor shares was followed by extreme losses of about four points each in Hudson and Jordan. General Motors sagged 1⅛ points, but the net loses in most of the other active issues were held to fractions.

Marked heaviness also developed in General Electric, Gneral Railway Signal, International Combustion, Engineering and United States Cast Iron Pipe all off two to five points. California Packing, International Paper and U. S. Distributing were among the few industrial strong spots.

Early gains of a point or so in a number of the standard rails such as Atchison, New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio were not maintained. Delaware and Hudson, Missouri Pacific preferred, Texas and Pacific and "Nickel Plate" however, closed a point or more higher.

Foreign exchanges displayed a firm undertone with trading of the usual half holiday character. Demand sterling ruled just under $4.86 and French francs rallied four points higher around 3.88 cents. Polish zlotys scared 50 points to 12.25 cents. Japanese exchange continued its rise to higher ground in further reflection of gold shipments to this country.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.
CHICAGO, April 10.—(AP)—Wheat advanced today practically a from start to finish influenced among many things by prospects of more than 1,500,000 bushels decrease o the United States visible supply total on Monday. Closing quotations for wheat were firm, 1¼ to 2⅛c net higher, May (new) $1.60¾ to $1.60¾, and July $1.37 to $1.37¼, with corn ¾ to ⅞c up. Oats unchanged to ⅛c off, and provisions exactly the same as 24 hours before.

Corn sympathized with wheat strength. Better weather eased oats.

Provisions were steadied by the firmness of hog value and by purchasing on foreign account.

Reese, Guest, Grisham Party One of Season's Big Social Functions

The month of April has been busy with parties, programs and other affairs, but among them, one of the most elaborate of the spring functions was the reception given Thursday afternoon at the Country club when three popular matrons of the city were hostesses, Mrs. T. Some who were there remarked that the Country club had never looked more beautiful with its exquisite decorations of ferns and flowers and potted plants with the colors of orchid and yellow predominating. On entering the club house one saw the tables in the main room banked with spring flowers, and the big mantels at each end of the hall were covered with attractive pieces done especially for them in the vari-colored blossoms. Ferns and palms lent their foliage in harmony with the colors of the bridal wreath, hydrangeas, an Easter lilies.

Upstairs the dining room was decorated in cut flowers carrying out the scheme of orchid and yellow with the green vines festooned. Two tables each with lovely lace covers were attractive in orchid and yellow. Silver baskets held the flowers daintily arranged in the corresponding colors. The lights, shaded in orchid and yellow, were festooned with the green vines, and cast a shaded glow over the attractive setting. At the rear end of the dining room was a long table completely covered with spring flowers that banked the wall and nestled into the green vines. The alcoves on the mezzanine floor were filled with the gorgeous blossoms.

2 New Additions In Musical World Coming to City

Two additions to the musical world and the community life of this city will be welcomed in Wichita Falls during the week when Miss Mary Lavinia Young, mezzo soprano and director of voice in Susquehanna University, Selins Grove, Pennsylvania, will arrive here to become director of the choir of the First Christian church, and her protege, Miss Laura Bell Smith of South Carolina, who will be with her.

The First Christian church has been without a director for several months, and the committee has been searching the country for a leader. Through their efforts, Miss Young has consented to come to this city, the committee announced yesterday.

Native of Georgia.

Miss Young is a native of southern Georgia, and it is said inherited here magnificent voice from her mother. Since childhood, she has appeared before the public. She received her literary education in the State Normal and the University of Athens, Georgia. She has studied under many teachers and masters, and comes to this city recommended as a remarkable singer and artist of her chosen work.

She began her first real voice lessons under Maurice Seigler, a former Russian opera singer, who offered her instructions when he heard her sing. Later Miss Young continued her studies under Mme. Elda Lund who came to America from the Royal conservatory of Stockholm. Finally she received a scholarship from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music where she received her artist diploma under Dan Beddoe. She has studied in New York also with such distinguished masters as Mme. Delia Valerie and Frank La Forge, as well as in Volpe Institute.

Valuable Experience.

She has had valuable experience in private and choral directing. Miss Young has done considerable community work and was director of choral clubs and worked in community service of Cincinnati for a year.

Miss Smith is a native of South Carolina, and while teaching in her home town, Miss Young discovered the young woman had a voice of promise. The city offered to pay $5,000 for the training of her contralto voice, and she is with Miss Young at the present time, and will come with her to Wichita Falls.

The Polo Ball and Congressional Club Breakfast Gives Washington A Busy Week in Society Circles

Everybody From the Vice-President and His Wife on Down Have a Big Time When Ballroom Floor Is Transformed Into Polo Field

BY JEAN JARVIS.

Special Correspondent of The Record News. Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The polo ball and the annual fete day breakfast of the Congressional club were the high spots of this week's varied social program. Both events were colorful, with notables galore on hand to add distinction.

The vice president and Mrs. Dawes were ranking guests at the polo party where, by and large, everybody had a good time, including "Hunter" and "Spike," two very spiffy sorrel polo ponies brought over from the Fort Myer stable to add piquancy to the occasion. The ball room was laid out to represent a polo field, with goal posts at either end. The band was ensconced behind a picket fence and shrubbery adroitly arranged to simulate a hedge. Gayly striped lawn umbrellas topped the boxes, which were filled to capacity, and from their very nifty box statement "Hunter" and "Spike" looked out amiably on the kaleidoscopic picture.

Polo Toggery Worn.

Polo toggery was worn by members of the army teams and practically all of the naval and military attaches from the various embassies and legations wore dress uniforms. Baltimore sent a group of women poloists—white breeches, yellow jackets and snappy pith helmets—and these were augmented by the "capital polo team" whic hincludes Mrs. William B. Johnson (she was Helen Marye), Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Maude Preeze and Mrs. T. J. Johnson. They made a very dashing appearance in their snojw white riding togs.

Everybody was on hand, official and non-official, the diplomats arriving en masse. The gowns, my dears, looked just as though they had all come straight way from the modistes. There was a mighty lot of black in evidence but the new black gowns are very, very different.

Mrs. Henry Potter Russell's costume showed an inky black chiffon skirt and a flesh pink chiffon bodice, the two joined by glittering rows of rhinestones—'strasse' as the Europeans call this special sort of gorgeous trimming.

Mrs. Russell's mother, Mrs. Borden Harriman, wore a blue brocaded gown combined with lace and Mrs. Dawes was in smoky grey.

The polo ball brought in a lot of money which will go to carry on the sport hereabouts.

The Congressional club's breakfast had Mrs. Dawes at the right of the club president. Mrs. Lindley H. Hadley, and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth at her left. Next came Mrs. Kellogg, wife of the secretary of state. Everybody who is anybody in officialdom was in the party which found itself seated in gay little companies about circular tables set for six or eight.

All in Block.

Mrs. Dawes was all in black. A very demure personage, she has a knack of donning clothes which enhance this attribute amazingly. Mrs. Kellogg was in grey—and a very stunning matronly personage is the wife of the cabinet premier. All in black was Mrs. Longworth. A tight fitting little hat of black felt topped her simple one-piece tailored frock. Some how, "Princess Alice" did not look her old time gayly debonair self and it developed that this was one of her very rare appearances this season, having moved into a commodious home, she was all set for entering very heartily into her new role as "leading lady" of the house contingent, but almost continual illness during the winter prevented her from carrying out the program.

Little Paulina got through amazingly, escaping all the ills that sometimes beset one that is very young.

Altogether the Congressional club breakfast was a very genial sort of family party with just enough "outside guests" to give a fillip to the event.

Incidentally everybody is discussing Rebecca Dial's mission to New York. Rebecca, who has written several plays, has just completed "Undertow." She's off to New York to negotiate a sale of the drama.

Her first serious work, it is a tragedy based on the race question with her native state as its setting. Rebecca is one of three very talented daughters of the Senator from South Carolina and Mrs. Nathan B. Dial.

German Official Owns Large House

BERLIN, April 10.—(AP)—Members of the Dawes commission, foreign financiers, and even the many Germans who were the guests of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the reichsbank, at a smoker during the recent annual meting of the bank expressed wonder at the number and spaciousness of the rooms in Dr. Schacht's apartments in the reichstag building. This apartment is one of the finest official residences in Germany, not even excepting the palaces of the president and the chancellor.

Wonder concerning this luxury was removed, however, when it was explained that the first president of the reichsbank, Herr von Dechend, had thirteen children which made it necessary for an unusually spacious residence to be provided him. When Herr von Dechend was raised to noble rank in 1805, thirteen gold coins were added to his family coat of arms.

FORM HOT DOG UNION

BERLIN, April 10.—(AP)—Berlin's few remaining nocturnal purveyors of "hot dogs" have organized a union. The membership holds a virtual monopoly of the sale of the frankfurter and roll combination and will attempt to increase the outdoor sale of this staple.

Henceforth persons coming from theatres or movies will find vendors dressed in white near the entrances advertising that the sausages in the nickel kettle not only are stuffed with "fresh beef and pork," but that the vendors are members of the "union of night sausage dispensers."

IT SURVIVES—ONE YEAR

Paris Music Hall Exists and Prospers By Virtue of Vaudeville.

LONDON, April 10.—(AP)—The Champs Elysees Music Hall celebrated its first anniversary this week, although when it was opened as a vaudeville theatre in April, 1925, wagers that it would not last twenty weeks found no takers.

The theatre was built largely with American capital a score of years ago as a "temple of music" designed to depict the last word in theatrical architecture and to become the center for modern production of grand opera. Only a short time was needed, however, to demonstrate that Paris did not want a second house for grand opera, the famous Opera being sufficient.

WOMEN SMART AS POLITICAL CAMPAIGNERS

Yellowley Unearths Old Statute in Illinois Archives

CHICAGO, April 10.—(AP)—Women candidates for political office here are showing the men a thing or two in the way of campaign advertising.

While one woman candidate was sending a wagon load of empty beer kegs through the loop to advertise her stand for prohibition modification, another was tacking up a campaign slogan in which the more aristocratic beverage, champaigne, was given a word.

"Blue stockings and blue laws are out of style; public opinion is champagne colored," is the battle cry of Mrs. Laura Mullendore-Buchols, seeking the republican nomination for state representative in the fifth district.

Aristocratic Ward

The fifth district covers Hyde park, an ultra-aristocratic South Side residential neighborhood containing the University of Chicago. One of Mrs. Buchholz' opponents is Mrs. Katherine Goode, the incumbent and wife of J. Paul Goode, instructor in the University of Chicago. Mrs. Buchholz is a teacher of history in a high school.

"From the outset I have expressed myself unequivocally against professional reform and in favor of a congressional investigation into the failures of the Volstead act," Mrs. Buchholz said. "The act seems to be regarded as a joke and we cannot brook the failure. It is better to abrogate the law."

In another aristocratic neighborhood, the Gold Coast of the near North Side, the fight between Representative Fred A. Britten and Mrs. Bertha Baur, society woman, for the republican congressional nomination, is producing seas of lava-like language.

Beer and Baur

It was in favor of Mrs. Baur's campaign that the beer kegs made their ghostly loop pilgrimage bearing the legend "Beer and light wine delivered to your door. Vote for Bertha Baur for congress."

The Baur managers have just made public a letter attacking Mr. Britten's war record, written by William B. Austin. Britten immediately countered with a retort that Austin is a "social climber" who is seeking to use "Little Red Ridinghood's campaign as a social step ladder."

Concerning the beer wagon stunt the representative said:

"It now appears that this wealthy society woman is going into the saloon business by parading over the North Side a big beer wagon filled with empty beer barrels."

Town's Only Street Will Be Surfaced

WALLACE, Idaho, April 10.—(AP)—Burke, reputed the largest town in the United States with a single street, is to pave its lone thoroughfare.

The town, which has 600 to 700 inhabitants, has but one street because nature left room for no more. In addition to a highway, the street affords accommodations for no railroad lines and for a part of its distance for a two-foot sidewalk along one side.

Burke is situated in a deep canyon and the street has adapted itself to the room that is left by buildings that flank it, which are backed up to the mountains on each side.

The railroad companies and the Hecla Mining company, which affords the principal industry of the town, will help the country and the local property owners pay for the paving.

Peace in Morocco Now in Prospect

PARIS, April 10.—(AP)—Tempered optimism reigns here as to the prospects of an early peace in Morocco. Even admitting there is a genuine desire b yall concerned to attain this end it is asserted that divergence of interests of the various parties makes the undertaking one of the great difficulty and complexity.

A definite decision has been reached by France and Spain to invite representatives of the Riffian tribesmen to go to Oudja on the Moroccan-Algerian frontier April 15, to discuss peace with Franco-Spanish delegates. The Riffian tribes would be permitted to have independent delegates with the same standing as those of Abd-el-Krim, leader of the revolting tribesmen in Morocco.

Classes in Child Raising Now An Established Fad for Fashionable Mothers With Big English Titles

Viscountess Erleigh Leads Movement to Show Fond Mamas Where They Make Mistakes in Bringing Up Their Royal Youngsters

BY JESSIE HENDERSON.
Special Dispatch to The Record News.
Copyright, 1926, By The Consolidated Press Association.

LONDON, April 10.—Now that the dean of Westminister is all excited over the belief that the modern lipsticked girl can never become a good mother; and now that Greece is preserving the purity of womanhood by arresting flappers whose frocks are more than eight inches from the ground—though in Greece the mountaineers still frisk about in those intriguing ballet skirts now, in short since churchmen and statesmen view with alarm the mental and facial makeup of the lady of 1926 and wonder what in the world her children will be like, it's a good time to consider Eva, Viscountess Erleigh.

Lady Erleigh, daughter-in-law of Lord Reading, foremrly ambassador to the United tates, has fashionably short frocks and fashionably bobbed hair and an idea which never occurred to the churchmen or the statesmen, either. She also has three of the tiveliest and best mannered youngsters you ever saw. Whence the idea.

A Class for Mothers

For the idea is classes for educated mothers—and fathers— which will teach the parents something about the art of bringing up a child. Classes, it may be added, which are attended each week by a throng of the bobbed haired mothers on whom the men of church and state are at the moment looking askance.

In the apple green drawing room of her London house—a tint of green which beautifully sets off fair and fresh English coloring—Lady Erleigh explained her idea.

"There are all sorts of clinics and classes for slum mothers," Lady Erleigh explained, "but for educated and well-to-do mothers there are only—nursemaids. When I began to realize how many mistakes I was making in bringing up my own children I began also to wonder where I could learn how to avoid these mistakes.

"It's all very well to say that a mother knows by instinct how to bring up her children. Perhaps she does, on broad, general lines. But this saying was originated before the discovery of germs and the inferiority complex."

Hence Lady Erleigh set about the task of aiding the mother instinct with the best medical, psychological and educational advice to be obtained in London. She asked a few friends if they would like to attend a series of lectures by scientists on the child and child psychology. They responded with enthusiasm.

"It's so difficult," Lady Erleigh proceeded "for even the most sympathetic mother to understand what goes on in the mind of her child. Her sympathy needs direction from both physicians and psyhcologists. And if intelligent understanding is difficult for the mother, it is usually more so for the father.

"An eminent educator lectured to us on the psychology of the boy. We mothers decided that we would have the lecture repeated and invite our husbands to attend. The husbands came—very reluctantly. But to the husbands' astonishment they actually were interested in the lecture and now once a month we have a lecture to which fathers are invited. And they come!

"You see, the big trouble about bringing up children has always been that nobody thought this task— the most important in the world—required any special training. We demand specialists in all other lines. Why shouldn't a mother—and a father—have the benefit of advice from specialists in this vital and delicate duty?" referring to the question of discipline, she said:

A Thrashing Helps

"One physician who lectured to us said that he'd been sent to a school where boys were thrashed and that he was glad of it.

"He believed there might now and then be a boy of such sensitive nature that thrashing would be harmful to him, but he thought there were few such boys.

"Physical punishment, after all, is something which must be decided according to the individual child."

It looks as though Lady Erleigh had found the answer to the frantic question what in the world will the next generation be? The next generation, if the Erleigh idea spreads, will be a thousand per cent better than its grand parents.

THE WOODROW WILSON I KNEW

By MARY ALLEN HULBERT

Crowded Days in Bermuda.

The writer of these reminiscences enjoyed the friendship of President Wilson for a number of years, beginning while he was president of Princeton University. During the earlier of these years she was Mrs. Mary Allen Peck. Later her marital ties were severed and she resumed the name of her first husband, Hulbert.

In her previous articles, Mrs. Hulbert has given a picture of the war president such as has not before been presented to the public. In those articles Woodrow Wilson the man is seen, the veil of the academician dropped and the real Wilson brought into view.

With minds having much in common, a close friendship was established between Mrs. Hulbert and Mr. Wilson, which friendship finally became the subject of comment. In the meantime Woodrow Wilson had become president and Mrs. Hulbert gives some interesting sidelights on his home life in the White House.

In her relations with President Wilson, Mrs. Hulbert found him to be very human and not always the cold, self-satisfied, and austere scholar he was generally supposed to be; a man who felt it was his duty to become a national and political leader, however, opposed such a course was to his natural inclinations.

As for presidential aspirations, Mrs. Hulbert says Woodrow was not ambitious to become president and accepted the office as a matter of duty rather than preference.

Averse to meeting strangers, as a rule, President Wilson sometimes met a man in whom there was a kindred spirit, such as Lord Fisher, who was admiral of the British fleet at the time he and the then governor-elect of New Jersey became acquainted.

I had often spoken to Woodrow Wilson of Lord Fisher and had frequently expressed a desire to bring them together. They were quite opposite types but both supremely self-confident. But the presence of Lord Fisher in this country (this was in 1910, when he was here to attend the wedding of his son to Miss Jane Morgan of Philadelphia) was my opportunity to introduce the brilliant governor-elect of New Jersey and the old sea dog who had, by sheer force of character, risen to command the world's mightiest naval force.

It happened that I was a guest of Colonel and Mrs. Washington A. Roebling at Trenton on Thanksgiving day in 1910 when Mrs. Roebling told me that Lord Fisher was in America.

"Mary," she cried, "Lord Fisher is in Philadelphia for the wedding of his son, Cecil to Jane Morgan. Do ring him up."

"Is it r-e-e-a-ally you?" drawled Fisher over the telephone as I got the connection. "I say—where are you? Do come over. Come on at once and lunch with us—my hostess insists. It's awfully good to hear your voice, you know.

I explained that it was impossible for me to go to Philadelphia but that the Roeblings were glad to have him come over to Trenton for luncheon. And after a while he exploded the information over the wire that Mrs. Morgan was preparing to motor him over to Trenton.

"I say," he blurted when we greeted each other, "what's the matter with you? You're as thin as a herrin,' you know."

At the luncheon Fisher was Fisher. He was not the self-contained Britisher of the conventions but given to explosions and vivacious gesticulations. It was nothing at all for the man suddenly to leap to his feet and, deserting the food momentarily, illustrating his discourse with pantomime.

Once while thus depleting his thoughts at the Roebling luncheon he stopped short, glared at the table, and exclaimed to Mrs. Roebling:

"I say, what glorious china!"

Before Lord Fisher had departed for Philadelphia after luncheon, I invited him to have dinner, a night or two later, with Doctor Wilson and me at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. And there those two men met. Present also were Mrs. Gollan, wife of the Chief Justice of Bermuda, and her mother, Mrs. Norris.

A tremendous success, that dinner. Try as I will, I can not remember the conversation, but the two men were utterly absorbed in each other. It was midnight before we left the table.

Although I can not reproduce the brilliant dialogue of the two men at the dinner, I can still see them contrasted. There talked Fisher—vivacious, shrewd, able, almost wholly material and never for a moment forgetful of Fisher. And across from him Woodrow Wilson, calm, dignified, poised, canny, and then ready to set aside Woodrow Wilson for what Woodrow Wilson stood for.

Fisher: Enjoying hugley every fight he had ever had or seen. Man of the world. Loyal but lacking human tenderness.

Wilson: Suffering intensely in every fight yet resolving to fight desperately to the finish. Not the man of the world. A reasoned but never impulsive tenderness.

As we were dispersing, after dinner, Fisher drew me aside, saying:

"He's a big man."

"How big?" I asked, not so idly as it may sound, for Fisher was famous for his ability to pick men.

"I think he will be the next president of the United States if he wants to be."

A rare person, Fisher! A vain man. Vain of his "figgah, you know," of his dancing, of his progress. He was considered a dangerous man by the ladies, but really he wasn't. I, for example, was not at all afraid of him and failed to see him as a peril of any hue. You may know or not that he was called (behind his back, to be sure) the Yellow Peril. It was said by his enemies that his mother was a high caste Singalese, therefore that cast of facial feature which won him his nickname. It was because he and I were so frequently together in Bermuda that some of the ladies there would have it that I was by far too bold with him.

A villian? Fisher? Once he made me a present—a somewhat battered and quite old Book of common Prayer. It had been his daughter's.

It occurs to me that my somewhat helter-skelter style of setting forth the Woodrow Wilson I knew and my occasional excursions into the careers of other notable men automatically prompt the question of my own origin. Nothing could be much simpler. It is quickly told—as it should be.

I was born Mary Allen in Grand Rapids, Michigan, just sixty-two years ago. How the mystery is vanishing. I shan't have a secret to gloat over when this series is done, and then I shall be poor, indeed. My grandfather, a surgeon of considerable note in his day, took upon himself in my tenderest years to give me a running start toward education. Among my most vivid recollections are those scenes when he took me between his knees and in a musical baritone declaimed for my benefit (or perhaps his own) addresses to young men about to start out in life.

My grandfather was connected in some visiting capacity with the public school system of Michigan, and I rather think that he was practicing upon me the speeches he was wont to make before boys about to be graduated. My grandmother Allen was a Vermonter, having migrated to that stern state with her mother and grandfather, Polly and Thomas Beach, from Long Island City, New York.

I married Thomas Hulbert of Middletown, Conn., in Duluth, Minn., and while he, a civil engineer, was engaged in trying to trace the veins of the Calumet and Hecla mines to the Canadian side of Lake Superior I spent a season with his parents in Italy. Allen Hulbert, my son, was born several years after my marriage.

Mr. Hulbert died as the result of an accident sustained while he was prospecting in Canada, and a few years later I married Thomas D. Peck, a manufacturer of Pittsfield, Mass. Then it was that I moved to New England, which my grandmother, exiled therefrom to Michigan, via a covered wagon train, in 1826, repeatedly had assured me was an earthly paradise.

It was after my second marriage that I began to spend winters in Bermuda, and there it was that I met most of the notables I have mentioned.

Winter after winter I visited the blessed islands, and it was but natural that sooner or later such a perennial should become sort of a link between the Americans and the British. For example, it was in my house that many Americans met the British government officials stationed in the archipelago. I confess I loved the position because it meant a more or less constant diversion.

Lord Fisher was, probably, the most colorful man I met. It might be said of him that he could make you angry many times but never for a moment would he bore you. His gestures were expansive, impulsive.

One day, incidental to his expected glorification of his hero—Admiral Nelson—he remarked that despite the fact that the admiralty had tabooed green paint for the navy, because it was so expensive, he was reviving it (Nelson's favorite color) and that he had started with his barge, which was lying off shore where I could see it.

"Like it?" he demanded.

"Not particularly," I replied. "It is rather good except for those hideous black funnels, though."

"What would you have?" he exploded, outraged, probably, because I had not enthused over Lord Nelson's favorite dress for his barge.

I told him that the perfect barge should have brass funnels and thereat dismissed the subject as somewhat foolish. Really, I didn't care one way or the other what color Fisher's barge was or whether it had funnels.

But this extraordinary man sent the barge to the dockyard and forthwith had new funnels made of brass.

Lady Fisher was a perfect balance for her somewhat furious husband—a calm, poised, kind woman and a very wise mother. He, adoring her, was wont to have a creamy rose in a little vase standing beside her picture.

"That's the way she looked the first day I saw her," he assured me. "Just like a lovely white rose. And I said, not knowin' who she was, 'That girl is goin' to be my wife.' And, she is."

And, apropos of this, I think he translated the motto on his coat of arms: "We fish Where We Like." In any case, it should have been that.

But Lord Fisher and Woodrow Wilson did not meet, as I have said, until that night in New York. I am rather sorry, because it would have been something of a treat to have had them together for a longer time.

If I am not mistaken, it was I who introduced Doctor Wilson to James W. Gerard, whom he afterward appointed ambassador to Germany. I can not recall the exact date or the specific occasion, because the Gerards were often in my house in Bermuda, as were the late Henry H. Rogers (grandfather of Millicent, who married Count Salm, much to the dismay of her parents), Mark Twain, and other Americans who were members of the winter colony. I am pretty certain that Doctor Wilson had not met Mr. Gerard until they came together in my house in 1909.

Shoreby was a very modern house with modern furnishings—most comfortable but without the charm of Inwood, where I first received Woodrow Wilson. Inwood has the mellow beauty of two centuries. The broad verandas and terrace of Shoreby, almost overhanging the water, made up for any lack, however, and it was a place where one could lie in the hammock, "looking lazy at the sea," vicariously enjoying all the thrills of a yacht race in a stiff breeze. One could see from that piazza the New York steamer nosing in through Two Rock Channel.

I can see it all now as though it were yesterday. I can see and hear those two old dears, H. H. Rogers and Mark Twain, sitting there frolickingly conversational, chuckling and gibing at each other—Mr. Clemens solemnly telling Mr. Rogers how fortunate he was in having for a friend a man, like himself, of "unblemished honor!"

And one day, when someone was expressing mock surprise that he should tolerate friendship with a man whose money was "tainted," he gave birth to that now ancient and honorable:

"You're right; you are perfectly right. It's doubly tainted. 'Tain't yours and 'tain't mine."

At least, I shall give Mr. Clemens credit for originating that.

That winter (1908) Mr. Rogers had some difficulty in walking and wore shoes rather large for his feet. Did his old friend, Mark Twain, sympathize? He did not. Instead he constantly jeered the Standard Oil man, making much of the "scows" Mr. Rogers wore. He assured Mr. Rogers that walking on the water should have no perils for him, equipped with such "barges."

But when Woodrow Wilson joined the circle at once the mental atmosphere changed. It wasn't that Doctor Wilson was not appreciative of humor, and it is certain that it was not that he was less witty, but they no longer lolled in their seats. Nor did they indulge in intimate personalities. It was out of mental dressing gowns and into collars, ties, and 'coats, so to speak.

I am sure that Woodrow would have loved to have slipped into such figurative dressing gowns, joining Mr. Rogers and Mr. Clemens in their good fellowish procedure, but he was never quick enough. They had seen him coming. There was that about him which made them snap into formality. He just couldn't help that.

However, the three of them seemed a quite happy combination despite the little fight Doctor Wilson always had with himself (he told me so) about any real contact with one whom he associated with the money trust, as he called it. He told me that he looked upon this "money-trust" as quite the most serious threat of the trust menace.

And Woodrow Wilson had no small talk. He could and did talk brilliantly and was amazingly quick at repartee when he was matched with a mind really struck fire. But as for managing the patter of light talk he neither would nor could.

The English manage this so well. They have, I think, a system of this sort: just take the last word of every sentence and make it the subject of the next. It works almost automatically and, beside levying absolutely no tax upon one's mentality, leaves one's thoughts quite free to wander wither they will. For example:

"Will you have tea?"

"Oh, yes, please."

"Righto. Very interestin' to see the tea growing in India. Of course, you have marvelous buildin's in America, but the Taj Mahal isn't half bad, you know."

"Not at all. Will you have sugar?"

"Yes; we like the coarse vacuum pan from the West Indies, you know."

And so on ad infinitum. Not the least of the system's beauties is that anybody can use it."

But to get back to my informal gatherings at Shoreby. Such meetings might be described in greater detail, but there were so many that none remains very vividly in my memory. I recall most clearly a luncheon when Mr. Rogers, Mark Twain, Doctor Wilson, and a few others were the guests.

It seems to be that the American consul, Will Allen, was there with Mrs. Allen. Also Colonel Stephen Frewen and his wife and the Hamilton Parrishes and Major and Mrs. Haynes.

At any rate, the inspiration came from Mark Twain, who once said, "Rogers, did you ever eat West Indian pepper pot?"

"Not knowingly," said Mr. Rogers.

"Mrs. Peck," said Mr. Clemens, "some day invite poor Rogers here to eat pepper pot."

It must be apparent that I was noted for this dish. I must hand the laurel to its rightful owner, Mrs. Sally Jones of Bermuda. It was her recipe. At any rate, I at once invited Mr. Rogers, who politely accepted, although I'm afraid he was not confident that it was going to do him very much good. I resolved to make a party of it and invited the others I have mentioned.

Woodrow Wilson accepted with cold politeness. His was sensitive digestion which was accustomed to rebel suddenly if displeased. However, I assured him that others had tried pepper pot without casualty. Poor man, he was so quiet at that luncheon. And he did try so hard to enjoy it. Bravely he ate, hoping that nothing untoward would happen to him.

But Mark Twain ate valiantly, as did Mr. Rogers.

"Seems to me," drawled Mr. Clemens, "that it's not as sharp as usual. Pot all right, but the pepper seems to have weakened."

"Not brisk enough?" I suggested.

"No. Hasn't the usual vim, so to speak."

"Do you see those dark, shriveled things?" I inquired, indicating chili peppers. "Chew one of them."

A bowl of flowers sat between Mr. Clemens and Mr. Rogers so that neither could see the face of the other distinctly without leaning to one side or the other. Mr. Clemens put one of the peppers into his mouth and, remarking that he Fletcherized everything he ate, chewed solemnly.

On his face came a look of consternation. A flood of tears welled from his eyes. Yet he gamely chewed on—and swallowed.

"Wonderful!" he cried. "Rogers, try it. Take three or four of them."

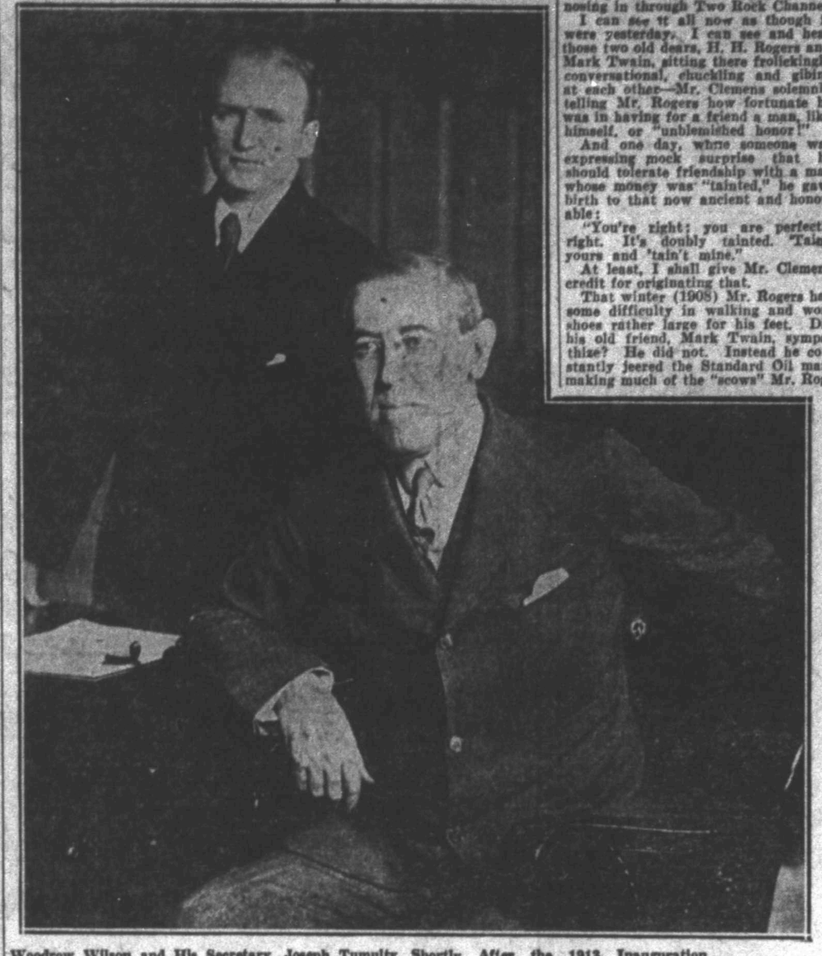

"I'll take two," announced the Standard Oil man.

Ah, I shall not forget that picture of Mr. Clemens and Mr. Rogers weeping copiously across from each other. I don't think Doctor Wilson enjoyed pepper pot. He had the Southerner's ideas of food. Nothing was so good to him as chicken and rice, corn, and spinach. When I had lunch with him when he was president-elect, we had chicken, rice, corn and spinach. The last time I saw him, in Los Angeles, we lunched on chicken, rice, corn and spinach.

He was no gourmet. Food was to him a necessity, not a luxury.

In our social precedure, we were still rather Victorian in Bermuda. For example, after dinner it was the custom of the men to remain in the dining room over their cigars and liquors while the ladies decently repaired to another room to await the coming of their lords. I never quite held with this custom, being of the opinion that it was a dreadful bore and vastly preferring the company of the men to enliven the gentler gossip of the ladies. But custom is an inexorable thing and must be bowed to.

Nevertheless, by keeping my ears sharply cocked, I did not wholly go without knowledge of what the men were doing and saying. A typical after dinner group of men would be, let me say, Doctor Wilson, Judge Gollan, Lord Frederic Hamilton, Will Allen, Sir Walter Kitchener, Major Haynes, and perhaps Mark Twain and Mr. Rogers. To be sure, this was not an arbitrary group.

There were others on occasion. Bruce Falconer, who is, I believe, a New York City alderman, was occasionally with us. James W. Gerard may have been a member of such a group. And—oh, there was James Otis, the author of the juvenile classic Toby Tyler, or Ten Weeks with the Circus. He called upon me one day to come to his rescue. He was a bachelor, and he pleaded not being skillful at arranging social affairs. The Bermudians and the Americans had been so nice to him that he wanted to repay, in so far as he might, by giving a part-. Yes, we gave parties in those days, and did not, as I am informed in the 1925 manner, throw them.

Of course, I helped him as best I could. He was quite grateful. He called me Mrs. Bunty, explaining that I pulled the strings so deftly. As a matter of truth, my house was the gathering place for so many of the British and the Americans simply because I was not a string puller in the accepted sense.

I had no favors to ask; no axes to grind.

At any rate, those after dinner hours for the men were broadly if not deeply educational. It would be, let us say, a coolish evening and cedar logs were cracking in the great fireplace. Woodrow Wilson would start the general conversation with remarks about life in Princeton as compared with that in Bermuda. As I have said, he had no small talk and it was almost certain that his comparisons would be of a most serious nature. And, of course, he would touch (at least touch) on American politics.

"I don't want to go back to Princeton particularly. Probably should not feel that way. But I do want to get back to work and fill my days with hard, necessary things. I miss the tonic of it. I feel rather side-tracked—rusticated and in danger of rusting."

A solemn shaking of heads. Colonel Frewen introduces the subject of banana planting. But Mr. Wilson is not through:

"That is what comes of having to work all your life. After a while it becomes so that you can not do without it. Insidious habit. After all, work well done is——"

Colonel Frewen is somewhat bitter in his arraignment of the American taste in bananas. He was raising the very finest of all bananas, he said; had fetched the stock from the best banana countries. But would Americans eat them? Never. They preferred the large, yellow, plantain-like affairs. Bah!

Chief Justice Gollan then makes his frequent but always unsuccessful attempt to have Colonel Frewen tell the story of a famous charge made once by the Sixteenth Lancers. The Colonel eyes Gollan coldly and addresses himself to another whisky-and-soda. Doctor Wilson is praising Bermuda for its lack of motor cars.

The Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York, Where Mrs. Hulbert Entertained Woodrow Wilson and Lord Fisher at Dinner.

"Speaking of the motor cars of Bermuda," breaks in Mark Twain, "reminds me of the chapter some explorer devoted in his biography to the snakes of Iceland. He said, 'There are no snakes in Iceland'."

But Woodrow Wilson is not to be put off.

"The country roads in the states," he says, "teem with them. They affect my imagination more than the trains do because, among other things, they contain the sort of people I like least—the restless rich, empty-headed people, the very sight of whom makes me cynical. They and their kind are the very worst enemies of Princeton. They are creating for me tasks which are likely to wear my life out."

And as Lord Frederic Hamilton solemnly nods his aristocratic head in acquiescence all the gentlemen—or almost all—take a drink. Woodrow Wilson, just to show that he is a good mixer, pours a centimeter of Scotch into his glass, promptly drowning it in a bottle of soda, and attacks it with all the avidity of a child taking raw castor oil.

Colonel Frewen introduces the subject of horses and asks Mr. Wilson to ride in the Hunt club's paper chase, finishing at Inwood. He replies by some sage observation about hobby horses and declines the paper chase, saying he hasn't ridden for so long that he fears to ruin the walls of Bermuda.

"A mere trifle and not to be considered for a moment," cried Colonel Frewen. "We have a regiment here which is wasting away for the want of work. They shall follow you, rebuilding where you lay waste."

But the president of Princeton is firm in his refusal.

But I would not have you gather from such a scene that Woodrow Wilson was a prig. Far from that, he was, as much as any man I have ever known, himself. He was Woodrow Wilson, first, last, and always. There was nothing of the chameleon in his nature. That, perhaps, was why his enemies hated him with such high power intensity. He was a statesman, but not a politician. As I know the man, humanity came first in his thoughts, the United States second, and Woodrow Wilson third. His political party was but incidental—a vehicle to carry him to those places where he might best administer his own, not the party's, principles.

It was in Bermuda, and, if I am not mistaken, as a result of my gibing at him a little for his lack of those small social graces which characterized the British, that he turned on me and said:

"Just what would you have me do—aped those to whom such mannerisms are natural? Recut myself to a pattern which has never been used in all my family history?"

"No," I laughed; "I would have you be loyal to yourself. You take me too seriously."

"Ah, you mention loyalty. I have come to feel that the finest word in the language is loyalty and the finest guide in life is courage. We must get our deepest satisfaction and all our strength out of loyalty and courage. Those two things must make life gallant and true for us, whatever happens. To lose heart or loyalty for a moment is to prove recreant and become unhappy."

Those words remained with me through all the years I knew the man. I am sure he meant all that he said about loyalty and courage, but there must have come times when something else intervened—something larger. Scan his life, and you will see that this must be so.

12,000 MUSIC LOVERS

That Many Now Residing in Paris, Expert on Subject Estimates

PARIS, April 10.—Gabriel Astruc, who has been making a calculation of how many real music lovers there are in Paris, reaches the conclusion that they do not exceed 12,000, which for a population of 4,000,000 he considers distinctly slender. M. Astruc speaks with authority, for 20 years ago he devoted all his energy and much American capital to providing Paris with a "temple of music." The temple is still visible—just off the Champs Elysee—and for the first time in its existence, is full every night, but that is due to its becoming a vaudeville theatre.

Even New York Takes An Interest In Forthcoming Political Battle When Ma and Dan Seek Leadership

Various Aspects of Texas Governor's Race Get Lengthy Discussion In Times; One Of "Hottest Fights" Is Brewing

AUSTIN, April 10.—Attorney General Dan Moody's race for the Texas governorship is "big news" in New York City.

Moody's announcement for governor, and his record as attorney general, were given nearly half a page in the New York Times of last Sunday. A special article by L. C. Speers, and carrying Moody's photograph, was published in the feature section of The Times, under the heading: "Ma" Ferguson and "Dan" Moody to Battle.

"Texas has gone into training for one of its hottest political battles—and hot political fights have been the rule there for three-quarters of a century," the article says. "The Texans are already digging the first-line trenches, and before many weeks the combat will be in full swing.

The Central Figure.

"Just now the central figure in the impending struggle is Dan Moody, the youthful attorney general of the state, who led the victorious onslaught that ended the rule of the ku klux klan in Texas.

"All Texas knows Moody . . . not since the days when Joseph Weldon Bailey was in his prime has Texas known a campaigner who could hold the crowds as can Moody, the fighting prosecutor."

The article then traces Moody's achievements as Travis and Williamson county district attorney, in his klan prosecutions; his road stills and battles "with various political rings," and closed by enumerating the twelve planks of the Moody platform:

"Expose and bring to justice those responsible for inroads on the public treasury.

Another Plank.

"Honesty in every branch and dealing of the government.

"Appoint honest and capable men and women to office.

"Uncover leaks of public funds; protect expenditures.

"Just and fair enforcement of the laws.

"Against crippling enforcement of law by wholesale pardons.

"Public roads maintained; no favoritism in contracts.

"Schools efficiently maintained.

"Support of higher education.

"Government not to be run by political machine, nor merchandise made of official power.

"Needed reforms in election laws.

"Judicial reforms; putting prison system on business basis and preventing waste, extravagance and graft."

CHILDREN GUESTS

The children of the Christian church were given an unusual treat Saturday morning in the park, when they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Jacks, evangelists in the Christian meeting.

An Easter hunt was the feature of the morning and was given as a reward to the children for their splendid work on program, which was rendered by them on Friday evening, directed by Mr. and Mrs. Jacks, and was the plan of Salvation laid at the Cross in pantomine.

A very appetizing lunch was served at the noon hour to the children, with Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Cogswell, Mr. and Mrs. Jacks.

Rosemont Burial Park

Perpetual Care Cemetery

A reserve fund set aside out of every sale of a lot is just as essential to perpetuate a cemetery as it is for a reserve fund to be set aside out of your premium to make good your life insurance policy.

It has been found by experience in old and settled communities that cemeteries operated by cities or individuals which do not have a reserve fund finally grow up in weeds, and in many places houses are built where the dead were formerly buried.

When you buy a lot buy in the place that gives you this protection. We will sell you a lot on easy terms to be paid for over a period of years.

Female Weakness

"MY HEALTH began to fail," says Mrs. W. C. Bridgman, 1005 North 18th St., Fort Smith, Ark. "I grew weak and pale. My sides and back gave me considerable trouble. At times I was forced to to go to bed and let my household duties go. I was very nervous. The least little thing upset me terribly. The cause of my trouble was female weakness, I knew, and I worried a lot over my condition. It seemed as if nothing would help me. For months I dragged around the house. Important things went undone, because I had not strength to do them.

"My mother told me to try Cardui. She had taken it herself and knew what a wonderful help it was for womanly troubles. I did as she told me. I soon found out what the real merits of Cardui are, for after a few months I was entirely well and able to enjoy life. I began to gain in weight until I had gone from 119 to 140 pounds. I slept fine at night and the old trouble of pains in my sides and back left me altogether. I felt like a different human being."

DOT MACKAILL "LUCKY STAR"

Film Beauty, Who Shows At Strand, Has Charmed Life

Dorothy Mackaill, beautiful blond screen star, who will be seen at the Strand theatre next Monday through Thursday in "Joanna," is what is known professionally as a "lucky star." Miss Mackaill's career is a story of brilliant achievement, with little or no set-backs.

Once she had persuaded her father that she was cut out for a stage career, he determined that no half-way measures would do and sent her to Thorn academy, in her native Hull, Eng., for a two-year course in dancing and elocution. Dorothy was an apt pupil and after a year's tuition decided to save her father further expense by going into the chorus of the Hippodrome fantasy, "Joybells." Soon she was leading the famous "chicken" number. Incidental to her work on this production she acted in her first picture.

When the Hippodrome closed, she went to Paris to fill an engagement with a French revue. She also did work in a motion picture for a French company.

She came to America the next year because she heard it was "a wonderful place." All by herself, with no influence and no letters of introduction, she got herself a place in the chorus of the Ziegfeld Follies. While dancing and singing in the Follies she attracted the attention of Marshall Neilan and he was her first film director in this country. He gave her a part with John Barrymore in "The Lotus Eater" and also in "Bits of Life."

Miss Mackaill appeared with Johnny Hines in the Torchy comedies, was in "A Woman's Woman," and also "The Isle of Doubt." Later she was featured in "The Streets of New York."

Edwin Carewe featured her in his First National picture "Mighty Lak' a Rose," and then Richard Barthelmess chose her for his leading lady in "The Fighting Blade" and "Twenty-One."

REPRESENT ALTUS

ALTUS, Okla., April 10.—Six Altus senior high school students, Albert Reid, Robert Clindsealc, Eddie Anderson, Agnes Berry, Maurice Cotton and Juanita Gary, will represent the Altus senior high school at the Southwestern Interscholastic meeting Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Weatherford, Texas.

April and "17" Lucky for 17 High Students

Coincidences sometimes prove lucky. The high school senior class is planning to present Booth Tarkington's famous story "Seventeen" in drama form Tuesday, April 20. Studying over the high school class rolls, Registrar A. K. Presson and J. W. Williams, finance sponsor for the Coyote, found the odd situation that exactly seventeen of the students now attending senior high school were seventeen years old in April, the month in which "Seventeen" is to be presented.

So struck were these officials by the oddity of the coincidence that it was decided to offer each of the lucky ones a reserved seat for the play complimentary. Seventeen years old in April, the month in which "Seventeen" is to be presented, the following seventeen students are to be so honored: Melba Anderson, Marion Barrett, Dale Carter, Sewell Cox, Ulysses Flatt, Vernon Flowers, Paul Gebert, Helen Howard, Lillian Jones, Dorsey Kownslar, Gordon Mankins, Fillmore Meredith, William Morton, Neal Prichard, Joe Rabinowitz, Bill Rogers and Louise Wright.

HOTEL FOR STUDENTS

PARIS, April 10.—(AP)—Not all students on the Boul' Mich, the main street of the Quartier Latin lead Bohemian lives. Work has just begun on a new student hostel, the gift of Mrs. Whitney Hoff of the United States, which will house one hundred foreign women students under a system similar to that of the Y. W. C. A. The new building replaces a structure for thirty students at 99 Boulevard St. Michel, known as the International Students' Home.

East Side Selects Its Film Favorite

The kids of New York's East Side have picked their favorite screen star. It isn't Mary Pickford or Norma Talmadge, either. It's little Edna Murphy, one of the all-star cast of the First National's comedy special, "Clothes Make the Pirate," starring Leon Errol with Dorothy Gish at the Strand today.

Edna was born and raised right in Harlem, in which is located New York's biggest film plant, the Cosmopolitan Studios, where "Cloths Make the Pirate," was produced. Edna has one of the feature roles with Nita Naldi, Tully Marshall, George Marion and James Rennie.

The throng of youngsters that loiters around the studio to glimpse the stars coming and going reserve their loudest shrieks of welcome for her. And many of the grown brothers and sisters of the neighborhood remember Edna as a playmate.

"Clothes Make the Pirate" was adapted from the Holman Day novel by Marion Fairfax, celebrated stage and screen writer. It was directed by Maurice Tourneur.

"Fighting Edge" At Mission Tuesday

"The Fighing Edge," the Warner Brothers classic of the screen which is opening Tuesday at the Mission theatre, is the first of a series of pictures in which Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller are to be co-featured. It is believed that this combination is destined to become as popular as that of the Marie Prevost-Monte Blue and Irene Rich-Huntly Gordon teams.

The story of "The Fighting Edge" concerns the smuggling of aliens into the United States and its desperate gang of smugglers who are outwitted by one Juan de Dios O'Rourke (Kenneth Harlan.) He has been employed by the government to capture the gang and falls in love with pretty Phoebe Joyce (Patsy Ruth Miller.) She is ignorant of his mission in the mysterious ranch house where she comes to find her father (W. A. Carroll.) They learn that their aim is a common one, to bring the outlaws to justice.

NAVAJOS TO MEET

ALTUS, Okla., April 10.—Members of the Navajo Mountain Area Council will select a delegate to be sent to the national meeting at Washington, April 30 when the conduct the area quarterly meeting of the organization Thursday evening in Hobart.

Reports of the Navajo delegate to the regional meeting at Dallas will be made at that time.

Richard Holt in New Melodrama, Mission Today

Richard Holt, who was recently seen in Wichita Falls as co-star with Ann Little in "Secret Service Sanders," a thrilling fifteen episode serial released through Rayart Pictures, has a prominent role in another Rayart release "The Midnight Limited," a dynamic melodrama of the railroads produced by Gerson Pictures which will be shown at the Mission theatre today and Monday.

It this pulsing story, of the lives and loves of the men and women whose destinies are controlled by the great network of railroads which spread their gigantic tracks over the lands of the Middle West, young Holt has the role of a night dispatcher, son of the general superintendent of the branch. Wanda Hawley, who will be remembered for her stellar work in a number of entertaining comedies made for the now extinct Realart, has the principal feminine role, that of the granddaughter of the agent at the lonely little station of Benbow, around which most of the action revolves. Gaston Glass has the third important role, that of a vagrant crook who arrives on a freighter at Benbow one dark night and stays to have his whole life changed by the girl he finds there.

Written especially for the screen by J. E. Natteford, it is said that "The Midnight Limited" presents one of the most absorbing dramatic themes ever translated to the screen. The startling climax comes when a freighter careens over a bridge which collapses and sends it crashing on to rock below, saving by a hair's breadth "the midnight limited" with its three hundred passengers. This stirring melodrama was directed by Oscar Apfel.

NEW TRADE FOR ROYALTY

Ex-Favorites in Old Courts Now Find Work in Paris Night Clubs

PARIS, April 10.—Former court ladies from many lands, victims of the ruins of dynasties driven to seek an asylum in Paris, the universal refuge of the fallen great, have found a new occupation. In return for a pecuniary consideration and a commission on sales, they attend nightly the more select of the Montmartre cabarets, ready to charm with their courtly graces and conversation such visitors as desire to avail themselves of their society.

Their presence has distinctly raised the tone of these establishments as well as the receipts and proprietors are delighted with the success of this new attraction.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—The bodies of four murdered women have been washed ashore on the Bosphorus within a week.

Tom Mix Again At Garden Today

In "The Lucky Horseshoe," which comes to the Garden theatre Sunday for a two days' run, Tom Mix will have a surprise in store for his legion of admirers. He will appear in a western picture that is decidedly "different."

For half of the picture Tom is in a dream—but while he is dreaming he is performing the most heroic feats in defense of his lady fair. He imagines himself to be Don Juan de Montoro of Spain and the girl of his dreams is Lady Isabel. He rescues her from Don Luis del Rey after a series of the most breath-taking fights—and fights—and then the dream dissolves pain into the western scenes wherein the story started.

Mr. Mix is ably supported in both the modern and medieval sequences by the same cast, including Billie Dove, playing opposite him; J. Farrell MacDonald, Malcolm Waite, J. Gunnis Davis, Ann Pennington, and Clarissa Selwyn.

Mission Shows Don Q of Zorro

The glory that was Spain's now belongs to Douglas Fairbanks who has captured it and put it into his new photoplay, "Don Q, Son of Zorro," which is the featured attraction announced for next Thursday and Friday at the Mission theatre.

Castles in Spain are things to look at, not to dream of in this appealing picture. The background of beautiful settings is gorgeous beyond compare.

The story is the graceful though swift unfolding of the adventures of a young Spaniard who is sent to his motherland from California, there to finish his education.

How he meets and woos a gorgeous senorita; how he captures a bull running rampant in the streets; how he fights a duel with the villian; how he performs astounding feats with a stock whip; how he becomes accused of the murder of a visiting archduke; how he then turns into the mysterious and much-hunted Don Q—these and innumerable other angles furnish a plot of many complicated twists that keys audience interest to a high pitch.

The climax of "Don Q, Son of Zorro," Fairbanks' latest United Artists corporation feature, is one of the most thrilling, unique, and at the same time humorous, that has ever been presented. As a matter of fact, were it not for the comedy relief furnished in the star's laughable pranks, the tension of the picture would be too great a tax on any audience.

A splendid program of added attractions makes this one of the best entertainments in town—in fact, one of the best that has come to town in many moons.

HONOR SHIELD AWARDED

"When the Door Opened" at Gem

"When the Door Opened" a story filled with action and thrills, adapted by William Fox from the James Oliver Curwood novel, will be shown at the Gem theatre Monday.

This picture was made under tremendous difficulties and at huge expense in the Canadian mountains. In one sequence a whole river had to be dammed and the shell of a huge old castle built in the middle of a dense forest so that the big wood scene—the thrilling climax of the story could actually be filmed.

In another place an exciting runaway almost proved disastrous and endangered the life of the two leading players, and the entire company spent days in camp in the mountains, far from any settlement, to get some of the most beautiful "shots" in the picture.

Jacqueline Logan and Walter McGrail are cast in the two leading roles. Miss Logan plays the part of a winsome little girl who has been reared in a massive old chateau by a crabbed grandfather. She has never been allowed to associate with any of the villagers and knows nothing of the world outside.

Cubist Paintings Replace Masters

PARIS, April 10.—A small landscape by Meissonier, who painted the famous "1814," a Napoleonic episode, was knocked down at the Hotel Drouot, the auction rooms of Paris, a few days ago for ninety francs (about $3) This trifling sum for anything from the hand of this painter is striking evidence of how his position in the world of art has changed in the last quarter century.

Far higher prices were bid at the same sale room for works by Picabia. This high priest of cubism, who does not limit himself to painting in making pictures, but introduces bits of metal and drinking straws still wrapped in paper, saw some of his cubist studies reach 650 to 4,500 francs ($25 to $165.) The initiated noted that the attendant who passed the pictures 'round for bidders to see generally had to scrutinize the signatures with care to help him to decide which way to hold them. One of Picabia's normal efforts, "Snow Effects," a picture in the orthodox manner, brought the highest price of all his works, 9,000 francs, about $350.

SKY SCRAPERS BARRED

BERLIN, April 10.—(AP)—The city of Cologne does not want another skyscraper, the city council has decided. One, a ten-story warehouse, is regarded as enough.

The majority of voters influenced the council in its decision. Skyscrapers, it was said, would obstruct the view of the famous Cologne cathedral, which towers above every building in the city and can be seen from a distance of several miles.

RURALITES MOVING IN

Migration From Country to City Grows Faster In French Territory

PARIS, April 10.—The flow of population from the country districts of France to the cities continue, despite all the efforts of the government to stem it. The general census just taken shows a declining population in the rural areas except those adjacent to large industrial centers.

The wine growing regions are particularly hard hit by the movement toward the cities.

C. B. Maddock Presents Al's Here, Summers And Hunt on Card

A revue, combining clever dancing and jazz technique; the master of "The Old Soak," in a new role; Estelle Hunt and the popular Sam Summers in "Giggles:" the Lorner Girls, known as vaudeville's sweethearts, and Jim Baggert with Rose Sheldon in "Enjoying Themselves," a clever comedy mixed with ambidexterous manipulation!

That's the Majestic theatre's vaudeville lineup for this week's three-day run of Interstate production starting at Wednesdays' matinee.

Goldie and Beatty Revue, in "A Laugh, a Song and a Step," with Al Newman, Dorothy Slane, Gordon and White and Roy and Raymond.

A revue that is 'difficult' in the true sense of the word is that of the Goldie and Beatty Revue a company of eight. Of course the feature persons are Goldie and Beatty, two songstresses of pleasing voice and figure, who have surrounded themselves with a young lady toe and jazz dancer and five trig boys of singing and dancing attainment. Mlle. Beatty has a sweet sympathetic voice and uses it to good advantage in singing a popular ballad. Her partner, Sally Goldie, is an excellent comedianne with a brogue all her own and handles several popular hot jazz numbers with a good jazz technique. With such voices as these two possess, there can not be but the finest of harmony rendered. Miss Dorothy Slane, premiere danseuse, has but recently arrived from Australia and displays some remarkable dance steps of originality. The five boys have been selected for their hoofing ability and they are there with the goods. A neat little plot serves as an introduction for the members of the company and from then on it is a rapid routine of songs, dances and humorous patter.

C. B. Maddock presents, "Al's Here," a scene of bygone days.

Everybody knows Al. Al has been an important character in cartoons and paragraphs for many and many a day. The Don Marquis wrote the clever comedy "The Old Soak" and now that "The Old Soak" has ceased its touring Al with Mr. Bates still portraying him has come to vaudeville. Here is a highlight comedy giving a scene of bygone days. The time is 1912 or that period before the eighteenth amendment. Mr. Volstead the new industry bootlegging and such has become a factor in our political, economical and social life. "Al's Here," is a bright, clever, clean comedy pertinent, pleasing and portraying imaginary character.

Sam Summers and Estelle Hunt in "Giggles."

"Giggles" is the title chosen by Estelle Hunt and Sam Summers which hardly describes the unique comedy offering this clever team of artists has contributed to vaudeville, as the act is brimful of hearty laughs from start to finish.

Estelle Hunt is undoubtedly one of the cutest bits of feminity on the stage and her quain and effective mannerisms and ways of handling refined comedy lines and situations has placed her in a class all by herself. Her unusual bubbling personality seems to fascinate you and makes you reluctant for her to leave the stage. Estelle is the niece of Gov. Geo. W. P. Hunt of Arizona and she has always been the clown jester of her family.

Sam Summers is a good looking boy who bears the brunt of Estelle's jokes and clown antics and has so far avoided leading roles in moving pictures. But they will get him yet. This pair has chased dull care away from the lives of thousands of theatregoers and will continue to do so for some time to come.

Lorner Girls, Marguerite and Rhea, vaudeville's sweethearts.

It's twins, said the nurse as she announced the arrival of the newcomers to the head of the Lorner home about twenty years ago. The two twins were reared as one. They enjoyed the same schooling and accomplishments and matured into young womanhood as much alike as two peas in a pod, not only in appearance but in temperament and ability, also. These two were the Lorner Girls, Marguerite and Rhea.

These girls are now repaying their parents for all they did for them. They have blossomed forth in the garden of varieties as two exquisite buds. Their off shots and songs, styles and grace and each is a beautiful flower. The twins are delightful entertainers and delightful women. They are not only a credit to their profession but a credit to the high circles they ornament. They have just returned from London where they starred in the "Mary" company.

Jim Baggert and Rose Sheldon, "Enjoying Themselves."

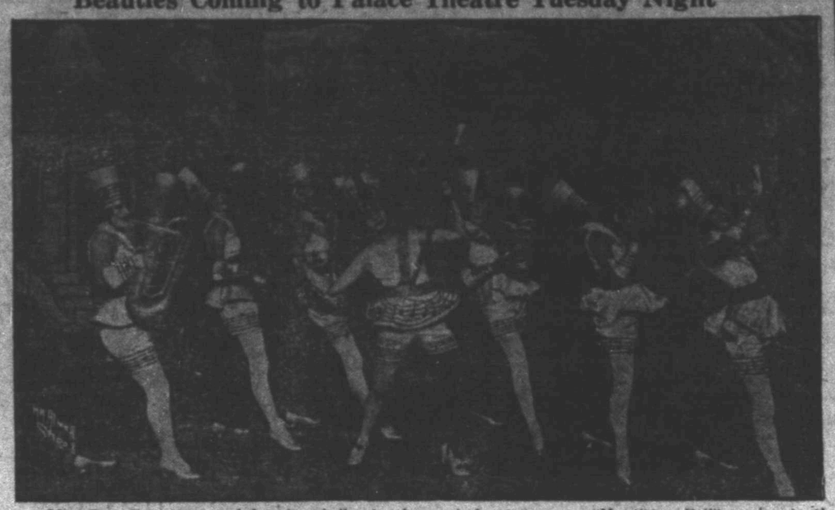

To be of the twentieth century is to be of the present day and to be of the present day is to be thoroughly up-to-date. Baggert and Sheldon are absolutely up to the minute. Their ambixterous manipulation of clubs and hats is nothing short of a science but unlike most scientists their work is full of fun. They combine cleverness and comedy with excellent results. Their work is play and so they call their working, "Enjoying Themselves."

Will the King And Queen Be There?

LONDON, April 10.—(AP)—The manager of Covent Gardens, London, some of the opera, are speculating anxiously about the frequency with which King George and Queen Mary will attend the opera season which will open within a few weeks. Upon the measure of the royal patronage, the success of the season largely depends.

Last year, their majesties attended only the performance of "Tosca," with Mme. Jeritza in the leading role. This year it is taken for granted that they will be present at Mme. Melba's farewell performance, which will be a program of selections for all her most famous roles. It is doubtful however, whether the sovereigns can be induced to attend any of the Wagnerian presentations which will make up a large part of the coming season as the lengthy performances of the Wagnerian "ring" are not much to his liking.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in DON Q, SON OF ZORRO

One Bobbed Head On Entire Isle

PARIS, April 10.—(AP)—The fortified island of Re, lying off La Rochelle, believes it holds the world's record for the scarcity of the bob among its female population—at least a record for that portion of the civilized world which has been swept by the mania for shorn locks. In a population of 11,000, there is only one bobbed female head.

Until four months ago, all the women of Re wore their tresses long. Then came Henri Barand, winner of the Goncourt prize for literature in 1923, and with him came Mme. Baraud with her hair modishly clipped. Her example, however, has not been followed by the women of Re, who, like their sisters of all the islands of the French Atlantic seaboard, are proud of their beautiful, long hair and would consider bobbing it a desecration. The trade of the barbers of Re is still limited to male customers, whose average is about one shave a week and a haircut every two months.

Counterfeiters Are Active at Riviera

PARIS, April 10.—Without a murmur of publicity and at the cost of 100,000 francs, the Riviera casinos have met and defeated the activities of a clever band of chip counterfeiters who recently threatened to upset the financial solidarity of the gambling halls.

Six weeks ago, counterfeit twenty franc and hundred franc chips began to make their appearance in three of the largest casinos. Efforts to discover their origin proved fruitless and the losses in one casino reached fifty thousand francs.

Instead of calling in the police, the casino directors called in the engravers. Soon players were surprised to find they were handling new chips, decorated with pictures of animals, birds and musical instruments. The directors affirm that these designs enable the croupiers to identify good chips more easily and make counterfeiting a great deal more difficult.

Royal Household Must Economize

LONDON, April 10.—Buckingham Palace and the other royal residences of King George and Queen Mary have come within the range of an economy campaign inaugurated by the sovereign himself.

The king, speaking at the opening of parliament, emphasized the necessity of "economy in every sphere" and has now brought his suggestion into practical effect. It has been announced that the upkeep for the royal palaces for the financial year will be L10,000 ($50,000) less than last year. The royal residences which are maintained out of the civil service estimates, include Buckingham Palace, Marlborough house, Windsor castle and Frogmore house.

In furtherance of the scheme for cutting down expenses, it was announced that the king had reduced the number of gentlemen-in-waiting to the royal household and had found other places for numerous servants.

BEAUTIES NOT SATISFACTORY.

British Film Producers Unable to Compete With American Types.

LONDON, April 10.—English film producers striving to make English films with English stars to compete with American pictures assert that they are handicapped by the English type of feminine beauty. The typical English girl, they say, is too tall to make a film favorite. The motion picture camera accentuates height and when the tall heroines of the British spoken stage are filmed, the results are not satisfactory.

STILL WORSHIP A QUEEN

German People Continue to Pay Tribute to Ruler Dead a Century

BERLIN, April 10.—The continuing devotion with which generations of the German people have worshipped Queen Louise, wife of King Frederick Wilhelm III of Prussia is reflected in the numerous floral tributes banked high about her monument in the Tiergarten in commemoration of the 150th of anniversary of her birth.

Among the flowers and wreaths were dozens of poetic tributes painstakingly written in pencil on notepaper of cardboard. One verse lamented "the depths to which your Germany has sunk." It urged the youth to arise and throw off the "crown of thorns"—the Versailles treaty and the Dawes plan—which has been placed on the country's once proud head.

O'BRIEN PLAYS "HAVOC!!" AT OLYMPIC TODAY

Lee's War Film Production Has Heavy Cast Of Notables

William Fox has selected an excellent cast for the screen version of "Havoc," the Rowland V. Lee production, which will open a four-day run at the Olympic theatre today. The play deals largely with the social side of the war and in casting the military characters Mr. Fox has selected some of the most athletic men in the motion picture world.

George O'Brien, the youthful Fox star, plays the lead of Dick Chappel. His work in "The Iron Horse," "The Roughneck," "The Dancers," and other big pictures last season has proven the fitness of this player for outstanding roles that call for physical prowess and dramatic ability.

Madge Bellamy and Margaret Livingston are cast in the two chief feminine roles of "Tessie Dunton" and "Violet Deering" respectively. Miss Bellamy's beauty and artistry are well known and both are called into use in her role in "Havoc." Miss Livingston's role is that of a selfish, cold society girl and in this type of part she has done some remarkable work in the past.

Walter McGrail, probably the most popular of the young type of screen villain, plays "Roddy Dunton," a highly dramatic and important role. McGrail's work in "The Dancers" and "Gerald Cranston's Lady," two other Fox successes, was among the best of his career and in "Havoc" he has even better dramatic opportunities.

David Butler is cast as "Smithy." An athlete in every sense of the word and an actor as well, he fits the part admirably. Butler will be remembered for his work in "Hoodman Blind" and "The Arizona Express."

Harvey Clark, a sterling character actor, takes care of the comedy in "Havoc" in the role of "Biddle," a cockney private. His inimitable work in "The Roughneck" and "The Fighting Heart," John Ford's new picture, is reflected in an entirely new vein in "Havoc." Others in the cast of "Havoc" are Leslie Fenton, well known English actor in the role of "Babe," Wade Boteler as "Sergeant Major" and Eulalie Jensen as "Alice Deering."

"Havoc," a tremendous stage success in England and America, was adapted to the screen by Edmund Goulding.

M. L. Cotton, superintendent of public schools, had charge of the meeting and was assisted by T. W. Alexander of Duke; L. R. Johnson of Olustree; Dr. E. A. Abernethy, J. C. Barnett, S. E. Hickman, Walter Ingram and T. M. Robinson.

"Transformation" Is New Dress Cue

PARIS, April 10.—The Monte Carlo "transformation costume," which may be changed in a minute or two, according to the occasion, from a street suit into a tea or garden party dress, is the latest invention of the Paris dressmakers.

The "transformation" ensemble consists of a coat, a skirt and a frock. The frock is made of crepe Bilitis in a dainty shade and is perfectly suitable for dinner wear in the city. The skirt and cape are carried out in English tweed, the skirt being buttoned over the dress, only the blouse of which then shows and which in turn is half covered by the tweed cape.

The wearer starts out on her shopping tour appearing soberly dressed in a tweed ensemble with a silk crepe blouse. As dinner time approaches, however, she goes to meet her friends at the restaurant or hotel and simply takes off both her skirt and cape to appear smartly dressed in her light dinner frock.

Royal Reception Hard to Manage

LONDON, April 10.—Obtaining a presentation to the king and queen is becoming such a task that even English folk of high rank have to resort to subterfuges to obtain a court presentation for their own children. So many foreigners are claiming the right of presentation nowadays that even though their majesties hold four courts instead of two in a season, the English born debutante has difficulty in getting into the presence of her sovereigns.

Hundreds of applications were refused by the lord chamberlain this year. Already the unsuccessful applicants are registering for next year. Many parents whose daughters do not reach the debutante age of 18 before 1927 and 1928 have made applications for the year in which their daughters shall be old enough. The lord chamberlain has received these applications but not accepted them, for he fears that if such a precedent is established such applications will be filed whenever a baby is born in eligible families.

American mothers have been quick to follow this lead. The embassy already has applications for the courts of 1927 and 1928.

PALACE CARDS MY CHINA DOLL TUESDAY NIGHT

Romance of Love Unwound In Novel Musical Numbers

Chinatown and its mysticism, together with Fairyland, has been called into the making of the tuneful musical extravaganza "My China Doll," which comes to the Palace theatre Tuesday, April 13.

Marbara Bronell, who is playing the part of "Peach Blossom," little Chinese girl, is a dancer of unusual ability and toured the world long before she was 20. She is ably supported by a splendid company of musical comedy purveyors, who have every opportunity, during the two and a half hours of entertainment to display their fun-making talents.

Scene in New York's Chinatown, Story Book Land, the Valley of Flowers, Melody Town in the Land of Music, and a palatial home in New York is what it offers from a scenic standpoint.

The story is a romance of love, unwound in a novel manner and the musical numbers which are in Charles George's best vein, ripple with catchy rhythms.

A. C. C. REPORTS MARCH RECORD IN AUTO SALES

Production of All Factory Output Increases For the Month

New March records in sales and output were reported to the directors meeting of the national automobile chamber of commerce held in New York, today. The production total based on individual factory shipping statements is estimated at 447,185.

While the figure reaches a new high, it is not out of line with the trend of growth, being close to the normal line. March is always one of the high production months. This year it is 18 per cent ahead of the average for March in the past three years, but this is not taken by the industry to indicate that 1926 will go very far ahead in 1925. It is felt that last year was an excellent business year and that a normal increase will be as much as can be expected.

Several companies reported in various sections that sales had broken all records during the past few weeks. February was virtually a closed month for the northern belt of the country due to the bad weather, with the result that stocks increased during this period and orders were delayed until March.

The government tax reduction on automobiles which has been credited to the consumer by the manufacturers is now in effect and is expected to have a healthy influence on sales.

While March was a new high for the third month, it was the second high for all time as October 1925 registered an output of 452,486.

Figures for this year are; January 315,802; February 375,332; March 447,185. March last year was 377,252. The three year average for March, 1923, 1924, 1925, was 378,166.

Midwinter Trip In Oldsmobile A Thing of Comfort

A midwinter trip from Toronto, Ont., to Vancouver, B. C., by automobile made via the Rio Grande river was the route selected by Reginald Key, of Toronto, to defeat the snow blocked mountain roads of the north. He traveled 6,702 miles in his Oldsmobile coach without the change of a tire, which in his own words "was no mean feat."

The certainty with which a person can start out on a long tour, regardless of the season of the year, with present day automobiles was demonstrated by Mr. Key, Describing his trip, he said;

No Anxiety.

"At no time throughout the whole trip did our Oldsmobile give us the slightest anxiety. Our average mileage per gallon was good. No trouble was experienced in conquering the various mountain ranges."

One o fthe worst spots Mr. Key encountered was on a detour near Cairo, Ky., where he found three state teams hauling stalled cars out of deep gumbo mud. "Our car was one of the few to make it without assistance. We sunk axle deep in the clay, which was a veritable sea, but our Oldsmobile went through it just like a tank at Paschendale."

Shifted Once.

On only one long climb during the trip did he find it advisable to use second gear. That was while ascending the 14-mile grade from El Centro to San Diego.

But the rough spots in the road were more than compensated for by the wonderful scenery encountered, which Mr. Key said, "baffles the power of description."

All Steel Bodies A Contribution From Dodge Bros.

The Dodge Brothers are known the world over for one contribution of immeasurable importance to the automobile industry—successful production of the first passenger automobiles fitted with all steel bodies and the first with all steel closed bodies, and the first with all steel closed bodies. The importance of this achievement will, in the future, be regarded just as much an epoch in the automobile industry as the successful building of the first steel passenger coaches is to railway transportation and all steel steamships to navigation.

The Dodge Brothers, according to Julian McFall, saw clearly the need for the all steel motor car. "And no wthe whole automobile industry," says Mr. McFall, "has begun to recognize that the all steel body is the automobile body of the future.

"It is entirely logical to look to Dodge Brothers motor-car—on which have been devoted over eleven years of constant effort toward improvement of this type—for the highest development of the art of building all steel bodies. The low graceful all steel closed bodies now displayed stand out as the crowning achievement. The slender steel pillars afford breadth of vision heretofore unapproached in closed car bodies, yet the strength and safety for which Dodge Brothers motor cars have become so well known are unimpaired. The method of welding and riveting the pressed steel body frame members and panels into one well-braced assembly insures absolute freedom from loose joints and squeaks throughout the long life of the sturdy body."

"Substantial reduction in weight, increased quietness, improved flexibility and smoothness, all the the results of adherence to the policy of constant refinement. All these improvements have contributed toward increasing the safety, driving ease and riding comfort of Dodge Brothers motor cars.

"Adoption of color, a recent innovation with Dodge Brothers, Inc., is the subject of favorable comment by all who see the new cars. The deep luster of the line and the gray lacquer contrasting with the high gloss of the baked enamel on the fenders, appeals to everyone. The enamel and lacquer with very little effort can be kept looking like new throughout the long life of the car."

Buddy of Eddie Chooses Rickenbacker

One of America's aces in the World war who served in the flying corps with Eddie Rickenbacker, is now the proud owner of a car of his buddy's name. While piloting his sight-seeing ship, "Miss Tampa," in the Florida Airways it was necessary to secure an automobile to convey his passengers to and from his ship. It was only natural that he would select a Rickenbacker. The above picture shows the American ace standing by his Rickenbacker sedan and his own aeroplane, "Miss Tampa."

Motor Owners of U. S. To Save $280,000,000 Yearly On Rubber Tire Bills

WASHINGTON, April 10.—A survey of current rubber prices and prospective tire costs made by the American Automobile association reveals that the motor vehicle owners of the country will save $280,000,000 on their tire bill alone during the year 1928 as a result of the campaign to loosen the grip of foreign monopoly on raw rubber.

This estimate is based on the differential between present prices of around 50 cents a pound and the price of $1.10 last November, when Secretary of Commerce Hoover launched the campaign to secure relief for the users of rubber in the United States.

Owe Hoover a Debt.

Acknowledging the debt that all motorists owe Secretary of Commerce Hoover for what he did to loosen the grip of the Stevenson restriction law, one of the first acts of the executive committee of the A. A. A. at its recent session here was the adoption of a resolution expressing gratification over the result of the campaign and giving unqualified endorsement to the policies and the methods advocated by Secretary Hoover.

"I doubt if the country at large and particularly the 20,000,000 owners of motor vehicles appreciate the debt of gratitude due the Secretary of Commerce for initiating and giving leadership to the campaign, the results of which are already apparent," said Thomas P. Henry, president of the A. A. A.

"Without analyzing all the ramifications of the situation caused by the monopolistic control of raw rubber and without going into the difficulties encountered, it is clear to me that we can already point to four distinct gains that have resulted from the campaign.

"First, even if raw rubber does not go below the present price, the car owners still stand to save at least $280,000,000 that they would have paid this year if monopoly had not been vigorously opposed and the stranglehold on the American consumer broken. The entire saving on the nation's rubber bill will be in excess of $350,000,000.

Shows Gravity of Question.

"Second, it has done a great deal to make the country see the seriousness, from the economic standpoint, of the United States being wholly dependent on foreign controlled sources for one of the basic raw materials of our great automotive industry. The fact that steps are being taken to cultivate our own supplies is an acknowledgement that we have at last awakened.

"Third, if prices had remained at the peak they reached last year or had continued to climb, the inevitable result would have been the undertiring of automobiles and in consequence a material increase in accidents.

"Fourth, not since the advent of the automobile has there been such interest in reclaiming rubber and the development of substitutes as there is at present. This is largely due to the nation wide interest created by a very intelligent campaign of education.

CHINA PLANNED LEAGUE

Historians Says That Country Conceived Such Idea 500 Years Ago.

LONDON, April 10.—Those who have been concerned over placing of the honor of having been first to conceive the idea of the League of Nations have been astonished by the suggestion of Prof. H. A. Giles of Cambridge, noted student of the culture and history of China, that China made an attempt to create such a league 546 years before Christ.

What is now China was then divided into a number of separate independent states, several of which were larger than France or Germany of today. A covenant was actually signed by representatives of various states, with a view to putting an end to war. But the two states held out and the league failed to come into existence. Three hundred years later, the states were brought together by war-like methods under the Ch'in dynasty.

NASH RECORD IN SALES BREAK IN PAST MONTH

Production of Nash And Ajax Cars Reaches Peak

Again the Nash Motors company sweeping forward on a country-wide wave of public demand, has shattered all previous sales and production records, March having hung up a new high record which establishes it as the biggest Nash-Ajax month in the history of the company.

Total Nash and Ajax shipments in March were 16,265 cars. This is the nineteenth consecutive month, with a single exception, that Nash business has shown an increase over the corresponding month of the previous year.

Exceed February Record.

"Nash and Ajax shipments of last month exceed the previous largest month—February, 1926—by 14.9 per cent," said E. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors company, "and even then production was not sufficient to supply 1518 additional bona fide orders. Export shipments, of course, are included in the foregoing figures and, while domestic sales were the greatest of any month, at the same time our biggest volume of export business was recorded during March.

"And not only was March the largest combined Nash-Ajax month, but taken individually it was the biggest Nash month and the biggest Ajax month. The total of Nash shipments alone exceeded the Nash shipments of March, 1925, by 50.2 per cent while the combined Nash-Ajax shipments last month were 108 per cent greater than the total shipments of Nash motors in March a year ago."

In the first quarter of the present calendar year Nash-Ajax sales and production have more than doubled the mark set by the corresponding period a year ago. Total shipments in January, February and March this year were 41,794 as compared with 20,560 Nash cars during the same months of 1925—a gain of more than 103 per cent.

Willys Adds New Sales Executive

Of interest to the automotive industry is the announcement by Willys-Overland officials of the appointment of Robert P. Aull to a sales executive position in charge of sales analysis with the Toledo company.

Aull, who was formerly assistant to the vice president in charge of sales for the Dodge Brothers Motor company, is known as one of the keenest thinkers among the young men of the industry. With extensive sales experience in the nalysis of both local and national markets, Mr. Aull will assume work of that nature with Willys-Overland, Inc.

In his more than five years experience with Dodge Brothers, Mr. Aull held various sales positions. In addition to assistant to the vice president in charge of sales, he was field representative and later statistician of Dodge Brothers. He was in charge of market research and various other sales capacities that acquainted him with every phase of activities in this direction. In analyzing sales markets and volume sales for both manufacturer and dealer, Mr. Aull became noted for his extensive study.

Mr. Aull will, in his present capacity, be in chargge of sales analysis for Willys-Overland, as well as the coordination of sales efforts in the field with those of the factory.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL, AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

To Those Who Judge Quality by Price

The quality of Ford cars cannot be judged by the prices at which they are sold—because Ford prices are made possible by conditions that are absolutely unique in the automotive industry.

From mine to market the Ford car is the work of a single organization. The Company owns and operates the mines and forests that furnish the raw materials for its products. This material is carried over Ford transportation routes, fabricated in Ford mills, manufactured in Ford plants—and the finished product is sold to the public through the Ford dealer organization. Thus there is but a single manufacturing profit on the car.

The following statement, previously made in an advertising message, is repeated here because of its great significance to the motoring public:

"If any other manufacturer endeavored to produce a car similar to the Ford, according to the high standards of quality in material and workmanship used by the Ford Motor Company and with the same tried and proved design, it would be impossible to offer it at any thing like Ford prices. And it is well to note that even with less costly design they have not been able to meet Ford prices."

If you contemplate the purchase of a motor car, go to the salesroom of the nearest Authorized Ford Dealer and get acquainted with the greatest automobile value of all time.

Indians for Whom New Car Is Named Hold Big Ceremonial

To express their deep gratitude on behalf of the American Indians for the signal honor of naming and monograming a motor car after one of their most illustrious leaders—Chief Pontiac—the Algonquin Indian nation capitalized on the occasion of A. R. Glancy's recent visit to the Pacific coast to make him a chief of their federation.

The suggestion of these chiefs came as a complete surprise to Mr. Glancy, who is president and general manager of the Oakland Motor Car company, which is producing and distributing the new Pontiac Six as a companion to the Oakland Six.

Only "Aboriginal Car"

It is a rather singular fact that th Pontiac Six is the only motor car to commemorate the aboriginal American. For some time before Mr. Glancy's visit the Algonquin Indian chiefs had felt that General Motors and the Oakland company had secretly honored their nation in choosing the name for their latest motor car.

Mr. Glancy was not only adopted into the 14 tribes composing this federation but also made a chief and given the name of "Chief Pontiac." He is the second white man ever to be honored by these Indians.

When the plan was first presented by the Indian chiefs, it was suggested that the ceremonies could be performed in the city park of Los Angeles. But the Indians would have none of it, stating that the whole ceremony would be one of profound secrecy and chose a secluded spot in Monrovia canyon.

Here amid a primeval background of wild and exquisite beauty, at the base of a mountain, blocked off and guarded by forest rangers to keep out all not connected with the secret rites, 11 Indian chiefs, many of whom had come from a great distance, marched solemnly around the ceremonial fire, calling on their warrior gods. This part of the dignified ceremonies lasted for a half hour.

Following this, Mr. Glancy was taken to the center of the circle where each chief performed the ceremonies of his tribe and presented him with certain gifts. One was a granite knife, symbolic of truth which was supposed to cut away all dishonest traits and to defend the possessor from enemies. Another was a beautiful beaded blanket to protect him from the cold. Other presents included a silver bracelet and personal tribal ornaments. After this he was adopted into the various tribes and then elevated to the position of chief. He was given the name of Chief Pontiac and presented a hand-worked parchment containing the record of the newly conferred honor.

After Mr. Glancy had taken the oath of the warrior, Mad Wolf gave him the pipe of peace and Chief Willow Bird placed on his brow the feather head dress. Mad Wolf then presented him with a granite knife.

As a chief in the Algonquin nation, Mr. Glancy has the honor of being a member of one of the greatest confederation of Indians that ever roamed the continent and the only such existing today. This Indian confederation, according to historic information, has a noteworthy record of honorable dealings both with white men and other Indian tribes.

Look-Out Mountain No Terror For Rickenbacker Motor Or 4-Wheel Brakes

DETROIT, Mich., April 10.—To make a record up Look-out mountain once in its lifetime is enough for any ordinary automobile.

It is a feat to be performed once and talked of forever after.

This proof of prowess is generally attempted only by a car that has been specially prepared for the stunt—and it goes directly back to the garage for a general over-hauling.

Don Hogan of Denver changed all this.

"At the stroke of ten, every Sunday morning," he advertises "two Rickenbackers, a six and a Vertical eight, will leave for a demonstration drive to the top of Look-out mountain and return."

And he invites any who desire, to phone and reserve a seat for the trip. "Get that—'and return'"—says Hogan. "The way a Rickenbacker goes up is a revelation to anyone, but the trip down is most amazing. Here is where I demonstate the smoothness and sureness of Rickenbacker 4-wheel mechanical brakes as it can be done only on such grades, with such sharp curves and at high speeds on the declines.

"To persons at a distance, Cannon Ball Baker's famous feat, when he ascended Look-out mountain in 10 minutes 31 2-5 seconds, made a greater impression than his downward flight in which he made the 6.2 miles in exactly one minute less. "To us Denverites who know this road, his descent was ten times as thrilling as the climb.

"I confess, when I saw Baker do it I believed no other driver in the world could accomplish the feat.

"Then I tried it myself—and found it was the car with its marvellous engine and matchless brakes, rather than the driver.

"So now we do it as a regular thing once a week at least; and as many times more as prospective buyers ask to see and are willing to take the ride."

WALES TO VISIT IRELAND

Prince Will Include Erin In List Of Coming Official Visit.

LONDON, April 10.—A visit to Ireland in 1927 is known to be on the program of the Prince of Wales. Irishmen who met the prince in London at St. Patrick's day celebrations have confirmed rumors to this effect.

The prince has been invited to Ulster for an official visit next year but he is understood to be anxious to extend his visit to southern Ireland, mainly for reasons of sport. Whils there is believed to be no chance of his making a visit to the free state, it is expected an official journey there may be arranged. The prince is personally popular in southern Ireland.

Gardner Head On West Coast

Completing a 15,000-mile inspection trip of the United States from Maint to California and from Canada to Mexico, Russell E. Gardner Jr., arrived in Lost Angeles last Thursday.

Mr. Gardner is the president of the Gardner Motor company of St. Louis, manufacturers of the six and eight-cylinder cars bearing his name. The purpose of his trip was to personally obtain information as to business conditions from all parts of the nation, and to compile statistics which will enable the Gardner factory to closely estimate the possible production for the forthcoming period.

"The fundamental foundations of the American business structure today, Mr. Gardner told J. S. Woollacott, head of Southwest Motors, Gardner distributors, "are sound, and as far as one can judge into the future, there seems to be no reason to anticipate anything but prosperity and good times. The farmers, the railroads, and the industries are equally busy and prosperous. Money is plentiful and the political situation looks safe. There has been some comment upon the recent deflation in prices on the New York Stock Exchange, and there has been some question as to whether or not this decline in security values is anticipated as a slump in general business.

"As far as I can find out, this is not the case, but simply a normal reaction necessitated by inflated and topheavy values, resulting in most instances from pool operations. As a matter of fact, I believe that now the market has been well shaken down, business will proceed in a normal manner."

Star Motor Gives Full Satisfaction

While the Hollywood movie colony is giving the flapper pointers in the latest style to bob her hair and showing the would-be sheik the proper width of his leg tubes, it is also having a marked influence on the public in general in many ways. The silvery screen has made the interiors of mansions such as no millionaire is able to possess a matter of common knowledge, oreign lands are pictured within the city limits of Los Angeles and Sahara Desert is filmed at El Segundo, but when it comes to automobiles the real thing prevails.

Choosing from the world's best automobiles the lots of some of the studios rival a de luxe motor car salon when the stars are at the studios and their motors are parked near by. During the past year there has been an ever-increasing representation of locomobils at the studios and the choice of the stares of this well known make has had its effect on the buying of the general public, according to the statement of Rene Marx, manager of the locomobile organization of Los Angeles.

One of the recent sales of a locomobile junior eight was made to Joseph Schildkraut, who is a late acquisition to stardom at the De Mille studio.

Dodge And Graham Cars Hang Up New Record For Sales

Retail deliveries of Dodge Bros. Motor cars and Graham Bros. trucks in the United States during the week ending March 27 again established a new high record. Sales the previous week far surpassed the highest week in Dodge Brothers' history only to be eclipsed by last week's astonishing high record of delivering at retail in the United States alone 8202 new passenger and commercial vehicles.

Compared with last week's high record the gain in 979 units, and with the corresponding week last year, the gain in 2056 cars and trucks or 33 1-3 per cent.

New orders for future delivery of motor cars and trucks taken by Dodge Bros. dealers in the United States during the week ending March 27 amounted to 8563, a gain over the previous week of 636 and over the corresponding week last year of 1601 units or 23 per cent.

"This record is a revelation to the entire industry," says Julian McFall of the McFall Bros. local Dodge Brothers dealer, "inasmuch as the usual time for the peak of spring business is still several weeks in the future."

All America Has Taken The Incomparable Chrysler To Its Heart

The Chrysler "70" sells itself every time it exhibits its dashing appearance on road or highway. The contrast between it and other cars is so marked that the desire to own one is bred then and there.

But that desire is as nothing compared to the delight induced later on. For the Chrysler is just as far beyond comparison in performance, roadability, ease of handling and durability as it is in looks.

That the American people have taken the Chrysler to their hearts is no surprise at all—it is a very natural thing.

They are almost extravagantly enthusiastic about the Chrysler because the Chrysler has shown them long-lived motoring delights beyond all comparison.

We are eager to demonstrate the Chrysler's many advantages.

Ready—for any road

The Sealed Chassis "Shower Bath," displayed last week in many Buick showrooms, furnished striking proof of Buick dependability.

It may be difficult to believe that any motor car chassis could run under its own power for a solid week, with water hitting it in a drenching shower.

But the Buick chassis did it. Water cannot get in, dirt cannot reach Buick operating parts. Even the electrical wiring is sealed inside water-proof, fireproof, flexible tubing.

Buick is ready for any road and any weather, thoroughly prepared to give Buick owners thousands and thousands and thousands of care-free, trouble-proof miles.

Only a Buick could possibly stand the "Shower Bath" test. Buick, alone, has the Sealed Chassis with the Triple-Sealed Engine!

PONTIAC CHIEF OF THE SIXES — PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

At the New York Automobile Show—a spectacular triumph! Wherever it has since been presented—a brilliant success! Here in town, a conquest of public opinion which excited interest to fever heat!

Three years ago General Motors determined to develop a Six, so high in quality and low in price, as to win instant public acceptance. To that end were devoted the unlimited resources of the corporation.

As a result, the Pontiac Six introduces into the field of low-priced sixes, features so new and unique, that a radical revision of the national idea on motor car values is already under way.

Sensible investors, the country over, are turning to a Six that offers beauty, bigness, comfort, stamina, quality and thrilling big-engine performance, for only $825—less than the cost of some four-cylinder cars. And there can be but one result—not enough cars to go around.

Arrange to place your order now. Assure yourself of getting delivery when you are ready to take it. Hundreds are going to be compelled to wait this spring. Now is the time for you to act!

AIMING PLAYS MAJOR PART IN AUTO LIGHTING

Proper Direction of The Head Lamp Insures Illumination

(The fourth of a series of articles dealing with the operation and care of headlight equipment which has been prepared especially for Texas motorists by the State Highway Department.)

Aiming.

The second and third articles of this series dealt with two of the fundamental operations necessary to secure good headlighting, that of focusing, and of equipping the headlamp with certain devices which mould the beam into the desired shape. The last operatio necessary is to properly aim the headlamp beam. As has been pointed out, these three operations are dependent upon each other, neither one or two of them being effective without the three together. It is assumed then that the headlamps to be considered are properly focussed and equipped and all that remains is to properly aim them.

Let us consider first the headlamp shown in Figure 8, which consists of a plain reflector and a bulb, and which is mounted with its front in a vertical plane, that is, it has not been tilted forward or backward.

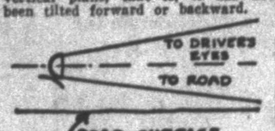

Fig 8 Showing how a portion of the light in a headlamp beam is lost, so far as reaching the road is concerned, if the headlamp is improperly aimed. The lamp is set vertical, and all the light above the center line shown is wasted. It is this part of the beam that blinds an approaching motorist.

Although focused, it will be noted that the beam has a slight divergence, that the rays do not go out absolutely parallel as has been shown they would do when the bulb is focused. This condtion is characteristic of all headlamps, and is due to physical limitations. Consequently unless this beam is properly aimed, practically all of the light above the center line shown will be lost, so far as reaching the road is concerned, and will produce head glare in the eyes of the approaching driver. If, however, the headlamp is tilted forward until the upper edge of the beam falls along a horizontal line as shown in Figure 9, practically all of the light will reach the road, and only a small amount, comparatively, will reach the eyes of the approaching driver.

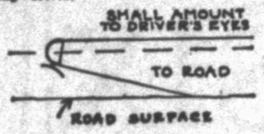

Fig. 9 Showing the proper way to aim the headlamp beam. In this condition practically all of the light reaches the road, and only a very little goes into the eyes of an approaching motorist.

Of course, beams are not as well defined as has been indicated in the figures, but when headlamps are properly focused the high intensity portions of the beams are fairly well defined.

The case of the bare reflector has been chosen to illustrate the principal part of the aiming operation, i. e. tilting, for the reason that with either a spreading lens or a spreading reflector, tilting is necessary, since the spreading action is only lateral. With lenses that employ horizontal bending prisms and certain types of special reflectors, the headlamps need be tilted only very slightly, or not at all. The other part of the aiming operation is simply to aim each headlamp so that the projected beam will be straight ahead. This apparently is of small importance, but when it is realized that the resulting beam is the product of the two independent beams, it is readily seen that for even road illumination, the two headlamps must be properly set with reference to each other.

Chevrolet Shows Inner Workings Of Car And Body

Recognizing the intense interest of the motorist in details of automobile construction which are ordinarily visible noly during building processes, the Chevrolet Motor company has prepared a coach with both body and chassis cut completely in two.

Real "inside information" regarding the improved features of the new Chevrolet is obtained by a glance at the new cut-away model. Contrary to the practice of the old-time merchant who used to "put the best apples on top" this model exemplifies the policy of the motor car industry in seeking to give as full information as possible to the non-technical motorist who insists on knowing what is underneath the surface.

Interiors Revealed

The interior of the motor and chassis are laid bare in every detail and every feature of the body—upholstering, seat construction, top, windshield and floor have been cut through, presenting a complete picture of materials and methods used in building the car. How durability and comfort are built into the modern automobile are graphically shown.

Cylinder walls and housings covering various moving parts have been cut open permitting a full view of the ne wlight skeleton pistons, the improved lubrication system, advanced rocker arm mechanism and added cooling surface afforded by the new cylinder head construction.

Coach Body Dissected

The standard Fisher coach body has been ingeniously dissected, exposing the strong construction and artistic fittings of the closed car. Body-building, an art for centuries demanding the highest degree of skilled artisanship since the early days when craftsmen gloried in the title "Coach-builder to the King" is here exemplified in the minutest detail of modern perfection. Ingenuity of the builder is shown to have kept pace with the latest advances in chassis engineering.

The cut-away model is to be shipped to various dealers for display throughout the country.

Chirysler Safeguards A New Innovation Proving Value To Auto Owners

That there has at last been devised a system of automobile theft prevention and detection which proves the basis for the development of an organized attack on automobile thieves is the belief of W. Sherman Burns, of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency.

The Burns Agency has recently completed an investigation of the influence on Chrysler cars of the Fedco system of theft prevention and detection adopted in July 1925 and has found a marked decrease in the number of stolen cars and an increase in the percentage of recoveries compared with the previous experience on Chrysler cars. In connection with its report Mr. Burns says, "Our investigation of the actual workout of the system on Chrysler cars during the latter part of 1925 has confirmed ou judgment of its practical value. We are convinced that the Fedco system provides the basis for the development of an organized attack on automobile thieves."

Remarkable Results.

Mr. Burns states that this favorable showing is remarkable when it is considered that the system was new and comparatively unknown during the period under survey. Furthermore, the nation-wide field service now provided by the Burns organization was not then in operation.

"When the full effect of the organization of the field service has been developed," continued Mr. Burns, "and as adoption of the system by other manufacturers brings a general understanding of the operation of the system, it is believed that the thieves will find it decidedly unprofitable to steal cars protected by the system.

Alarm Broadcast.

"Under the system every car owner receives with his new car instructions in the use of the system, directing him, if his car is stolen, to communicate not only with the police and insurance company but also with the nearest office of the Burns Agency. As soon as this is done, an alarm is broadcast to the municipal police departments, state troopers, and federal operators, as well as to an extensive list of filling stations, garages and service stations. A reward is also offered to bring out further information."

"Mr. Burns continued, "Our men know that they have located a stolen Chrysler if they find a car bearing a Fedco plate with one of the numbers bulletined as stolen; a car bearing a plate mutilated in an attempt to change the number; a car bearing an imitation of such a plate, or a car from which the plate has been removed."

Heretofore, the detection, and especially the identification of stolen cars has been an exceedingly difficult thing because of the ease with which a thief can change a car's identity. This is shown by the estimate that cars valued at $150,000,000 are stolen every year from $3,000,000 worth of cars left unguarded each working day on the public streets of the nation. It was to meet this situation that the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Society of Automotive Engineers, and others, called upon the inventive genius of the country to produce a car numbering system which would be difficult if not impossible, to defeat.

Walter P. Chrysler and the Chrysler corporation, following out their policy of reaching beyond the salesroom door to serve car owners every possible way, recognized the Fedco system as a protective measure of fundamental value to every Chrysler owner and have again shown their leadership in the industry by pioneering this feature.

A. C. C. Directors Are Still in Favor Of Red Lights

Supporting the stand of the motor clubs in favor of the red tail light on automobiles and believing that the current practice in this regard is sound, the directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce yesterday went on record opposing the move in some quarters for yellow tail lights.

The issue was introduced at the recent convention of the American Automobile association representing the automobile clubs, and red as the proper color for automobile tail lights was overwhelmingly endorsed.

While various theories have been propounded in favor of yellow, the automobile manufacturers feel that common usage and practicality are in favor of maintaining the present system. The reasons in detail for their stand are stated as follows:

1. It is now in use on 20,000,000 vehicles.

2. The extent of such use creates a public tradition and familiarity to a much greater degree than any one lighting tradition that may obtain.

3. To change forty-eight state laws, and the habit of the motor traveling public in this particular is an unwarranted interference unless its value as a safety measure can be thoroughly demonstrated.

4. There is no extensive or conclusive data to indicate that the red taillight is the cause of accidents.

5. Railroad officials have stated that motorists have run around red lights at crossing gates thinking that the light has indicated an automobile.

This could be remedied by putting more lights on the crossing gates, and in ny case the motorist who would cut around any light without seeing where he was going would probably not be affected by the matter of color.

6. Yellow light is regarded by many as confusing. With eyes trained to a red light as tail light, the presence of the yellow light in that capacity gives the impression of a parking light or of some other signal which is confusing to the driver.

BANANA BOOM COLLAPSES

Popularity of Tropical Fruit Now On Wane After Song Dies Out.

The banana boom brought about in London by the popularity of "Yes, We Have No Bananas," has collapsed and banana dealers are seeking a new slogan with the hope of reviving trade. When the song was at the height of its vogue the banana business did very well, but the trade has been slipping of late and has almost reached the doldrom stage.

A. H. Stockley, director of the largest tropical fruit shippers in England, says reports of enormous profits made here are entirely untrue.

BUICK BREAKS CAR RECORDS

Production Climbs Steadily During 8 Month New Model Is Out

In the eight months since the current series was introduced, the Buick Motor company has broken by 1,000 cars its highest previous shipment record for an entire fiscal year.

During this period Buick has also smashed practically every production and shipment record made since its founding 23 years ago.

The monthly average for the past eight months is better that the highest previous single month in Buick history.

The climax of this most active period was reached in March when 25,303 cars were shipped. The previous high mark prior to 1926 was made in October, 1925, when 22,850 cars were loaded and sent out. This record, however, was broken in each of the first three months of this year.

In January the shipments set a new record of 23,265 cars, which is 415 better than the mark of last October. In February the record of the previous month was beaten by 29 cars. The March record smashed that of February by 2,011 cars.

In addition, the average shipments for the eight month period was 22,865 cars. This average also breaks the single month record made last October. Production to date of the current series is 182,923 cars, all of which have been shipped from the factory.

Auto Makers Now Narrow Down To Industry Leaders

That the automobile business is rapidly becoming the industry of leaders, a development that is a most favorable one from the standpoint of the buyers, is the opinion of William E. Bush, Pierce-Arrow distributor for Southern California. He points out that a few years ago the buyer, regardless of the price he wished to pay, was confronted by a fairly large array of different makes and it was difficult to determine the one that represented the most in value in that particular price classification.

"But, today," continued Mr. Bush, "we find in each price classification a group of leaders. The buyer has confidence in these leaders and can make his choice without hesitation. When Pierce-Arrow began building automobiles twenty-five years ago, the founders established a policy of perfection in design, materials and workmanship. The lengths to which Pierce-Arrow went to insure perfection were the subject of wide comment throughout the industry. Many shop executives today can recall when, in their early days, they were compelled to do a job over three or four times before it would pass the exacting inspection requirements.

"This habit of painstaking workmanship became deep-rooted and was communicated to every workman added to the organization. It was a slow process, but it developed a body of men whose training was different from that of any other workmen in the industry.

"Other long-established manufacturers have a background of experience which has won public confidence and entitles them to leadership in their respective fields."

Factory Drives On In Earnest Now

Signs of spring in Syracuse, N. Y., include along with the traditional robin, the sight of motorists driving away Franklin cars from the Franklin Automobile company factory. And when owners from distant points like California begin the drive-away practice, it is safe to expect that the roads as well as the season for touring—also the annual rush to obtain delivery of new automobiles—are open.

J. E. Bell of Beverly Hills holds the distinction on Franklin sales rolls this year of driving away the first new car bearing license plates of a state west of the Mississippi from the Franklin factory this spring. He obtained his car at the plant on a Monday and left the following day on the 3,400-mile transcontinental trip which takes him through Chicago. In Syracuse he was the guest of W. B. Jones.

Franklin factory executives report that factory drive-aways for the year have commenced in real earnest. One caravan of five cars left last week for Williamsport, Pa. From a business standpoint, the increasing drive-away tendency indicates enlivened retail activity.

How Much of Your Comfort is Due to These?

When one looks back over the way our fathers lived he must be impressed by the greater comfort of the present day. Any consideration of this will show that a great part of this comfort is due to those organizations known as public utilities. Contrast these:

Father pumped the water he used from an old-fashioned well.

Today we turn the tap and get all the pure water we want at once.

Father lighted his home with dim and smelly kerosene lamps that had to be filled every day.

Now we turn a button and have a flood of electric light that requires no further attention.

Mother built up a roaring fire of wood or coal on washdays or whenever she needed warm water.

All we do is turn the tap, and the natural gas under the boiler in the cellar does the rest.

Somebody—perhaps you—chopped up the kindling and carried in the coal, and then emptied the ashes every day in cold weather.

With natural gas for heating we apply a match when we want heat, regulate the amount exactly, and escape all dirt.

We might go on and tell of the telephone and the street car, the telegraph and the railroad, but enough has been said to prove that a great part of your comfort—and we might add your prosperity—is due to public service companies. Surely these companies, essential in our modern life, are worthy of your consideration, co-operation and good will in their efforts to add to your joy of living.

MORE THAN EVER THE WORLD'S GREATEST VALUES

I Will Decide For Myself

When I am aggravated with my old automobile . . . and wonder how I ever came to buy this iron horse . . . I recall that I let others decide this important matter for me . . . I relied on the judgment of friends . . . and finally let a clever salesman slip one over on me.

Not the first time, either . . . happens about once a year, to me.

A car is such a personal thing, too . . . why, one lives in it more than he does in his home . . . every person should own a car which will answer to his own moods . . . his needs . . . and his peculiar kind of driving.

Had my heart set on a Rickenbacker last year . . . never have been able to get it out of my system.

Every time a Rickenbacker passes me on the open road . . . or jumps away from me at a traffic signal . . . I cuss myself for my weak-mindedness . . . and resolve that next time I buy a car . . . I shall decide for myself.

There is only one way to do that deciding . . . drive the car with my own hands.

I am going to drive a Rickenbacker . . . nobody is going to sell me any car until I do.

Friendly advice is all right . . . sincere for the most part . . . I know my friends mean well when they tell me they are sure the cars they drive are "just as good" as a Rickenbacker . . .

But their tastes are not my tastes . . . I want a car that is made to measure for me . . . and that Rickenbacker they tell me is Custom-Built, so to speak, for car-connoisseurs . . . That means me.

I've owned a lot of cars . . . have bought my experience . . . and even if I don't know all there is to know about automobiles . . . I sure do know what I want.

Those "advanced engineering features" . . . which, I am told, are to be found only in a Rickenbacker . . . intrigue me . . . I admit I'd like to own a car that has every last one of them!

Tandem Fly Wheels . . . Dilutioniser . . . Double Depth Frame . . . Cradle Springs . . . Air Cleaner . . . Mechanical Four-wheel Brakes . . . Custom Built Body . . . every one of these . . . and all the others.

I confess I don't know just what all of them are . . . Last year I was persuaded that some were only useless "talking points" . . . put in to make Rickenbackers sell easier.

But at this year's shows I noticed that those very makers who then flouted the idea, have since copied those features . . . must have been right . . . must have been better.

I am going to know about all these things . . . I have an ordinarily intelligent mind . . . an average amount of mechanical acumen . . . and, even if I don't quite understand when a salesman tries to tell me . . . I sure can when I see for myself.

And that is just what I am resolved to do . . . see with my own eyes . . . decide for myself.

Then I am going to take a Rickenbacker car and drive it with my own hands . . . going to take Rickenbacker's word for it that the car is its own best salesman . . . let the eloquence of that super-performance . . . about which I hear so much . . . tell its own story.

Don't want any salesman or expert driver along . . . going to do my own driving . . . uninterrupted by any sales talk.

Going to decide for myself . . . this time.

And if I don't buy a Rickenbacker . . . I will have no one but myself and Rickenbacker to blame . . . I have a hunch I will own a Rickenbacker by tomorrow night.

Let's see . . . VICTORY MOTOR CO., is Rickenbacker distributor here . . .
517 Indiana Avenue . . . phone is 9150

The Return of Blue-Bell — By FANNIE HURST

Blue-Bell was her name. Blue-Bell Sippy.

Poor John Carraway was bewildered when Blue-Bell left the valley. So was the rest of the valley. Bewildered and a little resentful. Blue-Bell had become a personage. The valley was afraid of her.

And the valley stiffened and set its lips against the homecoming of Blue-Bell.

A lovely Blue-Bell, simple, sweet, with tears in her eyes.

BLUE-BELL was her rather ridiculous name.

Well, the day that this particular baby opened her very blue eyes in a valley that nestled in a circle of blue-ridged mountains, the terrace outside her mother's windows that led straight down to the waterfall that turned her father's mill was smothered under blue-bells.

The identical blue of the new baby's eyes.

Blue-Bell's mother, who was to die four days later without ever rising from that bed, looked down at her armful of new little girl and with a sentimentality that had characterized her happy lifetime in the Carolina valley, kissed the name Blue-Bell against the tiny eyelids.

Six weeks later, in a robe three yards long that had been worn by three generations before her, and with her newly widowed father standing beside her and her Aunt Susan Sippy holding her, and all the Sippy cousins and the Treadwell cousins lined up, the new young one in the family was duly christened Blue-Bell.

And as Blue-Bell Sippy she grew up in the neighborhood, the flippest, prettiest, gayest girl in all of Hominy Valley.

Zacharias Sippy's house stood on the crest of a little mountain shaped liked a cone. It had a view of hill and dale, water-fall and stream, pine-forest and zig-zag dirt road from every window.

For the first seventeen years of her life, Blue-Bell lived alone in that hundred-year-old Colonial farmhouse, with her father and an old negro man-servant named "mammy". And then the back-water land-boom from Florida began to flow over the peaceful valley and suddenly Zacharias Sippy, from a land-poor miller with holdings all over the state that had never even justified their taxes, found his land leaping into hundreds of dollars the acre and Blue-Bell, who had never in her life worn other than homespun done by hand by a Sippy or a Treadwell aunt, blossomed out one day down at the Valley Post Office in a cream-colored taffeta with bow knots.

Overnight, as it were, Zacharias Sippy, the very year that Blue-Bell became engaged to young John Carraway, whose family had cultivated vine-yards in the Valley for generations; Zacharias Sippy became a rich man.

Almost a millionaire.

The Valley gasped! Zacharias Sippy gasped, too. So violently, that one night, sitting beside the stove in the kitchen of the old farmhouse on the hill, and trying to figure out for Blue-Bell some of the miracle of the thing that had happened to them, he fell over, toward her, dead.

Blue-Bell was an heiress! Blue-Bell was the richest girl in ten valleys!

Verily, it was to gasp.

And out of it all, as the sorrow of her loss subsided and youth took up its flow again like sap in her veins, one great desire began to lay hold of Blue-Bell. The desire for schooling. The desire to tone down the mountain patois that lay rich and slow on her tongue.

Poor John Carraway, he was too bewildered by the miracle that had come to this Blue-Bell of his heart's desire, to remonstrate much. The strange new fortune seemed to have created a sudden, a new, a terrifying barrier that made him seem cold and distant, where actually his youthful heart was pounding of desire.

A mood, by the way, that spread itself over the mountainside and down to the floor of the lovely valley. Blue-Bell was suddenly a personage. Blue-Bell was some one now to be treated with deference. Blue-Bell was a million-dollar heiress.

It was a heart-hurting young girl, in an ill-chosen white taffeta traveling frock who finally departed from the Valley for a young woman's school in Georgia. John was at the little old one-horse station, where the train had to be flagged, and the cousins and aunts and the old inhabitants were also about. But something had died. The old cordial cameraderie. Blue-Bell was a personage. The Valley was afraid of her. Most of all John, who said good-bye with a hand shake, shifting feet and quid and looking off the other way as her train wound her slowly around a mountain bend from his tear-blurred sight.

That was the end of Blue-Bell in the Valley for the next three years to come. Summers she remained right through at the seminary doing extra work, to give her a more equal standing with girls of her own age who were far ahead of her in their knowledge of history and literature and languages.

At the end of the third year, in one of her more and more desultory letters to John, Blue-Bell announced that she was coming home.

The Valley stiffened. Well, if Blue-Bell was coming home she must work it out her own way. There had been a young woman from that same seminary one summer a good many years before, who had brought in her reform spirit.

It must have been she who had given Blue-Bell the idea. A smooth-haired young woman in horn-rimmed spectacles who had come to teach at the mountain school and had attempted to put the children into shoes and stockings and instill a joyless kind of spirit of industry into the younger boys and train the girls into a sort of parlor prim-ness that simply would not coincide with the wild sweet life of the Valley.

The Valley remembered. The Valley stiffened. The Valley set its lips against the home-coming of Blue-Bell.

Just the same, there were the cousins and the aunts and the old inhabitans to meet her train as it rounded the curve.

And there, sure enough, out stepped a new Blue-Bell. A trim, a tailored, an incredibly lovely Blue-Bell. Not in spectacles. But in a blue little hat that resembled a glorified sunbonnet. And in something simple and blue that matched her eyes and a much prettier hand-bag than she had gone away with, and her initials on one end!

The Valley prepared to be defensive. The women stood about stiffly. And the men, ostentatiously chewing their broadest and spitting up the floor of the platform, shuffled feet, and John with his face set with the intention of being grim, budged not at all.

Poor Blue-Bell. She was so disgusted with herself. She didn't want to come home messily, that way. But she couldn't help it. Her very first step to the platform, out gushed the tears. The warm, thankful tears of being among her own once more. Her own Valley. Her own dear faces all about her. Her own John, in the same dear old hip boots, standing off there with his face turned away.

She hadn't planned to return that way. So sillily tearful. Blue-Bell had planned herself a grand little triumphal entrance, and here she was snuggling up into the arms of the mountain-women she loved. And the mountain-men who had dandled her on their knees.

Her own dear, adored people. Her people. The people among whom she belonged. The people to whom she had returned to spend the rest of her days. To help them. To improve their conditions with her vast fortune. Not to change them. To aid and abet them. To live and love among them. Dear John—dear John there waiting with the dear red clay of the mountainside up his hip boots.

She wanted to kiss them all. At once. To embrace them. To give them her all out of the fullness of her heart and her love.

Dear waiting Valley—

Thus was the Valley disarmed at the very beginning, as hungrily, and a little emotionally, it took back its child unto itself.

Lyrics of Life

BOYS TOGETHER

He's rather poor, and rather plain,
And not a fancy neighbor;
He's winnowed mighty little grain
From all his life of labor.
He's somewhat out at elbows, and
The world moves on without him,
And Daughter can't quite understand
What I can see about him.
No daughter ever yet could see,
I really question whether They ever will. But I and he
We once were boys together.

They've had him up in court a bit,
For taking too much toddy.
I sort of hate to speak of it,
To you, or anybody.
And Son has never understood,
He says it's mighty funny—
A month in jail would do him good,
Why lend him any money?
But friends who have been friends so long,
They hate to break the tether;
Perhaps it's foolish, maybe wrong,
But we were boys together.

I know a lot of other men,
Fine fellows, good and hearty,
But not a one remembers when
We had a sleighing party.
Of course, we have some parties now,
And many a fancy dinner,
But I just slip away somehow
And hunt up that old sinner.
And sit and talk about old ways,
Old folks, old fashion weather,
The girls and teachers of the days
When we were boys together.
