Tornado claims one

FRITCH, Texas (AP) — A tornado ripped through an area near Lake Meredith early today, killing a 38-year-old woman and injuring her 73-year-old mother, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

The twister also destroyed two mobile homes, flipped over a tractor-trailer rig and damaged several houses, said DPS dispatcher Duane Barnett in Amarillo.

Killed was Paula K. George, 38, of Lake Meredith. Her mother, Sally Howell, 73, of Dimmitt, was treated for multiple lacerations and abrasions and released from North Plains Hospital in Borger, said emergency room supervisor Connie Fritz.

The tornado touched down in the housing development, located north of this Panhandle community, shortly after midnight, Barnett said.

A twister also touched down in nearby Sanford, but no injuries or damage were reported, according to the DPS.

The tornadoes were spawned by a line of heavy thunderstorms that moved through the Panhandle late Thursday and early today, the National Weather Service said.

The shower activity had decreased in severity and moved into the South Plains before dawn, the National Weather Service said.

Mostly fair skies were the rule across the rest of the state. Temperatures were mostly in the 60s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 60 at Amarillo to 74 in Brownsville.

Southerly to southeasterly winds near 10 mph were the rule.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies with warm afternoon temperatures through Saturday. Scattered thundershowers were possible in the afternoon hours.

TRAFFIC JAM — Residents of Austin used the honor system as they traveled city streets last night. Traffic lights across the city were knocked out due to a massive blackout which crippled the city. In other parts of the state, violent weather triggered a tornado in Fritch.

Austin suffers blackout

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In this Capitol city, like everywhere else, nighttime usually draws its curtain slowly and is replaced by the glare of manmade lights. Thursday was an exception.

A temporary power outage knocked out electrical service to Austin and several surrounding communities, blacking out traffic lights and most radio and television stations and forcing all air traffic to be diverted from Robert Mueller Airport to other cities for almost two hours.

Early Friday morning city officials said they still did not know what caused the massive power failure that began at 7:26 p.m. Power to about 90 percent of the area was restored by 10 p.m.

"We really don't know," Assistant City Manager John German said when asked about the cause. "The whole system was out. The whole utility system was out and it drew down power from other systems nearby. We don't know whether it was something related to their system that drew us down or vice versa."

On busy Lavaca Street near the sprawling University of Texas campus, bar patrons tried to beat the heat by nursing cocktails outside in impromptu sidewalk happy hours shortly after the outage began.

Atop Austin's swank Headliner's Club, the 21st floor of the gold-tinted American Bank building, about 35 restaurant and bar patrons befuddled by the sudden blackout found shrimp cocktails aplenty.

The club's refrigerators, of course, were knocked inoperable during the outage.

"We served a lot of shrimp cocktails in the bar, but we weren't giving them away," said night receptionist Valery Caselli.

Three persons, she said, were trapped for awhile in the building.

Murder defendant found guilty of involuntary manslaughter

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A Howard County jury today found a Big Spring woman, accused of murdering a 10-year-old girl, guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Nelta Thompson, 54, of 1609 Avion, charged with the May 17, 1980 shooting death of Michaela Marlene Reeves on Hilltop Road in Big Spring, sat expressionless as the verdict was read.

The jury delivered its decision about 11 a.m. after deliberating three hours this morning. The punishment phase of the trial was expected to begin this afternoon.

The eight-man, four-woman jury recessed last night after several hours of deliberation.

Prosecution witnesses have testified Mrs. Thompson was arguing with her daughter-in-law, Patty Howell, that night in May and was attempting to shoot her when the young girl was killed.

However, Mrs. Thompson said on the stand she was not arguing with anyone and the shooting was an accident when a pistol in her purse discharged.

Miss Reeves was shot in the back seat of a car through a windshield. Mrs. Thompson was looking through her purse on the hood of the car when her gun went off. The car belonged to H.E. McMahan who was picking up the woman at the Hilltop house.

After an hour delay yesterday, testimony resumed at 3 p.m. with Mrs. Thompson's son, Woody Howell, on the stand as an adverse witness for the defense. Howell of Sonora had originally been called to appear as a prosecution witness, but the state declined to call him.

Howell contradicted his mother's story during his testimony, saying Mrs. Thompson was arguing with the two of them that night. He also said she was intoxicated that night.

The defendant testified Thursday she was not involved in what she said was an argument between the couple. She also said she had only two drinks and was not drunk.

Howell said he heard the shot after he and his wife went back into the house. Under questioning from Assistant District Attorney Don Richard, Howell said he believed further gunplay might occur.

"You wouldn't be surprised if she had shot at the house?" Richard asked.

However, the former Big Spring resident said to a question from Defense Attorney Roy Ford they had never seen the gun during the argument.

"She threatened to shoot me, but I never saw a pistol," Howell said.

Patty Howell took the stand at 3:30 p.m. and also contradicted parts of Mrs. Thompson's testimony. Mrs. Thompson had said she slept for a period of time before leaving, but Mrs. Howell said she never took a nap.

Mrs. Howell testified she and her husband had walked back into the house and were standing in front of the house when the shooting occurred.

Hearing on quarantine block set

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A federal court hearing on the state's effort to block a threatened quarantine of Texas cattle is now set for next Thursday.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and cattle industry leaders are seeking a preliminary injunction to stop a U.S. Department of Agriculture quarantine that was scheduled to begin June 1.

The USDA ordered the quarantine after Texas legislators failed to adopt a new brucellosis-control program that would meet federal guidelines.

On May 31, however, U.S. District Judge James Nowlin granted a temporary restraining order requested by Mattox, Frates Seligson, president of the Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association and Houston cattleman Robert Mason.

Though Nowlin normally would preside at the hearing on a preliminary injunction, he will be on vacation next week. U.S. District Judge H.F. Garcia of San Antonio will travel to Austin to hear the case in Nowlin's absence.

Brucellosis, or Bangs disease, is a bacterial disease that predominantly affects cattle, swine and sheep. It can cause abortions, weakened calves, reduced milk production in cows and sterility in bulls.

Hise unsure of effect of reported loss of aid

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Big Spring's school superintendent said he does not know yet what effect the reported loss in state minimum aid during the next biennium will have on his local operating budget.

Findings published last week by the Texas Education Agency concerning state funding of local school districts showed Big Spring would lose about $360,000 in state aid over the next two years.

"It's a little early to tell," Superintendent Lynn Hise said. "We have not received a copy of the printout and we just don't know how accurate the figures are."

Hise said it would be about two weeks before finalized figures arrived at his office.

"That figure ($360,000 for two years) is not all that accurate. They (TEA) can estimate how each district will be affected in a general way, but there's no way they can know exactly with 1,100 school districts across the state."

TEA officials have warned that some districts may have to raise taxes or implement cutbacks in spending if a special session of the Legislature is not called to remedy the situation.

The officials said a special session will be called in time for second-year aid, but not for the first year of the biennium.

LYNN HISE
...unsure of effect

Big Spring stands to lose an estimated $177,800 the first year and $180,000 the second year, according to TEA figures.

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, said a special session might be called in "September, but not before."

Big Spring school trustees usually adopt the district's tentative budget by the middle of summer, possibly making a September special session too late to help first-year funding.

The TEA also said 162 other school districts would suffer for the Legislature's failure to update a formula distributing the funds.

As the law now stands, the formula is based on an automatic growth factor that keeps districts funded at minimum levels to maintain an educational standard across the state. The minimum aid keeps districts from having to raise taxes each year to keep up with educational costs.

The funding is primarily tied to increases and decreases in average daily attendance and increases in base pay for teachers.

The law, based on minimum standards of the 1980-81 school year, needed to be updated by the Legislature to 1982-83 levels. However, an attempt to change the base period was killed on a point of order in the Legislature the day before the session ended.

Because of the Legislature's inaction Texas school districts will only receive 9 million in funding rather than the $45 million they would have received under 1982-83 levels, according to the TEA.

Three of 'Algiers 7' Big Spring-bound?

From staff and wire reports
DALLAS — A federal judge recommended Thursday that three New Orleans police officers be assigned to the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp to serve their sentences for beating citizens during an investigation of a patrolman's death.

John E. McKenzie, 40, Dale Bonura, 34, and Stephan Farrar, 31, were each sentenced to five years for a felony civil rights violation and one year for a misdemeanor rights violation by U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer.

The sentencing to the Big Spring minimum security facility was only a recommendation, according to Judy Madden, a court coordinator for Buchmeyer. The final designation must be decided by the Federal Bureau of Prisons and by Big Spring prison Superintendent John Allman.

"No one has contacted me yet. All I know is what I have heard on the radio," Allman said this morning.

"They (the bureau of prisons) will contact me to see if it is safe for them to come here," he said.

The three remained free on personal recognizance bonds pending an appeal.

The terms will run concurrently. The three were convicted of beating black residents of New Orleans' Algiers neighborhood during an investigation of the 1980 killing of white officer Gregory Neupert.

Buchmeyer maintained "the loss of their jobs is not sufficient punishment."

Four people were killed in Algiers during a police crackdown after the shooting of the officer. Although no charges were filed in connection with the deaths, the New Orleans Police Superintendent James Parsons and his top lieutenant resigned amid the controversy.

A federal judge in New Orleans moved the case to Dallas.

Alleged victims of the beatings also have filed an $8 million civil rights suit against the officers.

Defense attorney Ralph Whalen asked the judge to sentence the officers solely on the illegal detention of Robert Davis, one of five people who claimed they were kicked, beaten and choked by the officers interrogating them.

"Assuming there was a mass roundup and civil rights were violated, this has nothing to do with these three individuals," Whalen said.

Whalen also said extensive media publicity surrounding the case and a "blasphemous" report on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" program might prompt the judge to make "an example" of the policemen.

Ralph Capitelli cited McKenzie's "spotless" 14 years as a police officer and said imprisonment for the three would harm the officers' families.

OFFICERS SENTENCED — Former New Orleans police officer Dale Bonura and his wife, Kay, followed by ex-officer Steven Farrar, enter federal court in Dallas Thursday to be sentenced for violating the civil rights of blacks during an investigation. The judge recommended three officers be assigned to the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp.

Governor wants comprehensive education plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White would like to see Texas' prime legislative problems solved in one special session but admits it may take two.

At the same time, White told a news conference Thursday he was trying to settle a controversy involving the Texas Employment Commission without including it in a special session.

"All of these factors — brucellosis, TEC, public school finance — I am going to try to settle in an orderly fashion so we can maximize the work we are accomplishing," he said.

"I'd rather for them (the Legislature) to do it all at one time but it may take two."

White did not set any dates for a special session.

He also said he thought public school problems should be considered in an across-the-board manner with an increase in teachers salaries just one phase of the solution.

"I am persuaded beyond any question that we can take any group of kids anywhere in the state, that you give them good instruction and motivation, I don't care if they come from a non-English speaking home or a low-income base, they can be well educated and they can move quickly upward," White told a news conference.

"It is just a question of commitment," he said. "We're fools if we don't accept that commitment. We have to do this job. The future is in our hands and if we were to fail at this time because of lack of dedication, it would be a terrible tragedy."

"Teachers salaries are just one ingredient in the entire package of excellence in education," White said in reference to a special study of public education authorized by the 1983 Legislature.

"If we can get improvements across-the-board, that will be very, very important," he said.

Police chief arrested

LONE STAR, Texas (AP) — The police chief of this small northeast Texas town gave an anonymous informant barbiturates to sell and paid him to break into a pharmacy to steal more drugs, an affidavit filed by a Department of Public Safety investigator says.

Charles Ray Wisdom, 46, was arrested at his office Thursday afternoon shortly after receiving the drugs he had asked for from the pharmacy, said the affidavit filed by N. Lane Akin.

Wisdom appeared before U.S. Magistrate Houston Abel in Tyler Thursday afternoon and was released on a $1,000 bond. Assistant U.S. Attorney Chris Harrison told Abel he would present additional charges to a grand jury later this month.

Houston woman dies in fire

HOUSTON (AP) — A 36-year-old woman was killed early this morning by a fire at a Northeast Houston apartment complex, according to a spokesman for the Houston Fire Department.

The blaze broke out shortly before 1 a.m. and gutted the apartment and two other units. Officials said the woman, whose name was not released, was found in an upstairs bedroom where she had been overcome by smoke and flames. No other injuries were reported.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

Injured woman gets award

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors who found a 1976 Pontiac Trans Am did not provide a 23-year-old woman sufficient protection have awarded her $750,000 in damages for the accident which left her paralyzed from the chest down.

Holly Shipp, a University of Houston student, was crushed between the roof and driver's seat of the car when the vehicle rolled over in 1980.

The jury, which returned the decision Thursday after deliberating for 20 hours, did not find that the car was defectively made.

Ms. Shipp's lawyer, J. Graham Hill, had asked for $3 million in damages from General Motors, claiming that the roof of the car was badly designed and contained defective welding.

U.S.-Mexico summit set

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico (AP) — Presidential aide Michael Deaver toured this Northern Mexico city with members of Mexico President Miguel de la Madrid's staff Thursday in preparation for a one-day mid-August meeting between the two nations' presidents.

Deaver, 10 Washington aides and three U.S. Consulate officers from Ciudad Juarez, across the border from El Paso, Texas, visited a half-dozen Chihuahua City area sites in advance of the conference, vice consul Stuart Speede said in Juarez.

Deaths

David Rucker

Services for David V. Rucker, 86, who died Thursday, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Nalley-Pickles Rosewood Chapel with Billy Hendrix officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

He was born Aug. 7, 1896 in Lingleville, Texas. He married Viola Massey on Nov. 5, 1932 in Clovis, N.M. They moved to Howard County in 1940 from O'Donnell. He farmed in the Knott Community until retiring in 1964, when they moved to Big Spring. Mrs. Rucker died on June 30, 1973.

He also was preceded in death by one brother and one sister. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Bob (Mary Lou) Brumley of Big Spring.

two of the towering structure's six elevators. All were freed before power was restored.

No one inside the club attempted to leave, she said, noting that "21 floors is a long way to walk."

There were numerous other reports of persons trapped in elevators. One person was trapped in a state-of-the-art building elevator for almost 20 minutes before being rescued, said W.L. Maugham of the Capitol Police.

On historic Congress Avenue, the city's main thoroughfare, cars observed intersection lights on an honor system. The Paramount Theatre apologized to its patrons for canceling Thursday's performance of "Giant."

At the posh Bradford Hotel, a pianist entertained guests in a candlelight atmosphere.

At 8:53 p.m., motorists on Congress Avenue honked their horns as electricity was restored on Congress Avenue. As electrical juice was restored, the rotating replica of a longhorn at the Maverick Steak House and lights at the Capitol rotunda magically came back to life.

In offices around the city, frantic managers hovered anxiously over fragile computer systems hoping sensitive memory disks would not be wiped clean.

In the State Comptroller's Office where computers house massive amounts of state tax and other financial information, a staff member reported that a safety system prevented any loss of the valuable data.

At Brackenridge Hospital, power from three emergency generators kept life-support systems operating, but some areas of the hospital didn't have power and systems had to be operated manually.

The hospital reported that Dr. Gerald Baugh finished adjusting a patient's pacemaker by flashlight.

television when the shot was fired. "I was terrified ... I thought she was trying to kill us," Mrs. Howell said.

Mrs. Thompson had been drinking continually that night, Mrs. Howell said. However, Mrs. Thompson did not threaten either one of them with a gun, she said.

Both witnesses testified they had not been fighting that night. Mrs. Thompson contended the two were physically beating on each other.

During final arguments, Richard reminded the jury about reasonable doubt in considering the elements of the offense. He said the jury could believe part or all of any testimony from the witnesses.

"Who was she shooting at? Mac, her friend? The little girl? Or someone she'd been arguing with?" Richard said. "Everyone has to lie to believe Nelta Thompson."

Ford said the state failed miserably to prove Mrs. Thompson fired her pistol with intent to injure anyone. Using a blackboard with the position of the house and where the shot was fired, Ford said the defendant would be a "superbad shot" to have tried such a shot.

He reminded the jury that the mental state of the other witnesses could have been mistaken at the time. Ford said the jury could not be blinded by compassion for the dead girl.

Texas, Oklahoma dispute flows

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Efforts by the Red River Authority to establish a new reservoir in the Texas Panhandle apparently have triggered yet another in a long line of water disputes between Texas and Oklahoma.

A Texas Department of Water Resources hearings examiner on Thursday postponed until mid-August further hearings on the Red River Authority's request to divert up to 21.4 billion gallons per year from a Red River tributary to the proposed Wheeler County reservoir.

Before recessing the hearing, examiner George Basham agreed to let Oklahoma, through its Water Resources Board, be included as an opponent to the project.

The proposed reservoir, sought by the Red River Authority for municipal and irrigation use, would be fueled by water from Sweetwater Creek.

The project would not affect any downstream users of the Red River, only those along Sweetwater Creek northeast of Wheeler County. That's what has Oklahomans concerned.

Texas, under the Red River Compact, gets 60 percent of the water from that tributary, and must let at least 40 percent flow into Oklahoma.

"We're concerned, basically, that if it's approved at the size they are seeking, there won't be enough water left to fulfill the requirements of the Red River Compact," James R. Barnett, executive director of the Oklahoma Water Resources Board, said in a telephone interview.

Granting the application, he said, could reduce Oklahoma's share of water from Sweetwater Creek below the required 40 percent, he said, adding his agency engineers are still calculating just how far below that mark it would be.

Oklahoma's share of the water is diverted to Lake Lugart in Oklahoma where it is used by the Altus-Lugart Irrigation District as part of the state's only federal irrigation program, Barnett said.

The irrigation district also has been accepted as a recognized opponent of the Red River Authority's project application.

The Red River Authority originally applied for the permit 17 years ago.

Winn-Dixie reports bogus buy

The management of the Winn-Dixie Supermarket at 2602 Gregg told police Thursday that a $250 check written on May 23 had been returned marked counterfeit. The check was for cash and groceries, police reports said.

Police reports also showed the following:
● John Davis, 601 Edwards, told police $746.33 worth of household goods were stolen from his locked haybarn at 701 S. Second sometime in December. The theft was reported Thursday.

● Eight-track tapes and cassettes valued at $75 were stolen from Frankie Bishop of 1803 Johnson Thursday. Bishop told police the theft occurred at his residence between 8:10 p.m. and 9 p.m. Thursday.

● Police arrested Walter L. Pearce, 44, no address available, on a charge of disorderly conduct. Police say they arrested Pearce at The Nashville Tavern at 112 Main at 6:55 p.m. Thursday.

Etnire found incompetent

Eric Etnire, charged with aggravated assault and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in connection with the April 5 robbery of Gibson Discount Center, was found incompetent to stand trial this morning.

A seven-man, five-woman jury met at 10 a.m. this morning before District Judge Jim Gregg. Etnire is represented by Big Spring attorney Roy Ford.

Etnire was indicted on May 11.

The 30-year-old New Mexico man was a patient at the psychiatric unit of the Veterans Administration Hospital here, police said.

Welch man found dead

LAMESA (SC) — A Welch, Texas, man was found dead from a shotgun wound to the head Tuesday at his farm 20 miles north of Lamesa.

Dawson County Justice of the Peace Fred Vera said 67-year-old Dock Baty had been dead four hours when officials found him at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

Vera is conducting an inquest into the death and expects to make a ruling Tuesday, he said this morning.

The death was believed to have been accidental, but Vera said he felt there were some questions that needed to be answered by the inquest.

Couple sues drug company

A Howard County couple is suing Johnson and Johnson Products, Inc. in 118th District Court for what could be as much as $3.3 million in damages.

Sterling R. and Lucille Whitefield are seeking the damages from the company. McNeil Pharmaceuticals and McNeilab, Inc., through their agents in Dallas.

The suit states Whitefield suffered an allergic reaction including kidney failure as a result of taking the pain reliever Zomax on June 15, 1981. The suit says the product was implied safe, and the defendants were negligent in not warning Whitefield of possible adverse reactions.

Since the suit is filed under the Deceptive Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act (DTPA), damages awarded by a jury would be tripled. Whitefield is seeking $1 million in damages while his wife is asking for $100,000.

Attorneys' fees are calculated at $35,000.

The Whitefields are represented by Elliott Mitchell of Big Spring.

'Geodesy' trips speller

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The word "geodesy" was the nemesis of a 14-year-old Lamesa boy at the 56th Annual Scripps-Howard National Spelling Bee here Thursday.

David Sorola, who won the regional spelling bee in Lubbock in April, was eliminated in the fourth round. The national title was won by Blake Giddens, 14, of El Paso.

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sorola of Lamesa.

Mental patient sought in case

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — California prison authorities had been warned that a man now charged with hacking four people to death and nearly killing a fifth at a hilltop ranch near Chino was a dangerous escaped mental patient, authorities say.

Kevin Cooper, 25, escaped a day after he was placed in the minimum security California Institution for Men at Chino — despite the warning — and two days before Sunday's slayings, prison officials said.

The suspect, described as black, about 6 feet tall, weighing about 155 pounds and with an Afro hair style, "is considered very dangerous," San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said. "No one should try to apprehend him."

The search for Cooper today was concentrated in the Mexican border area near Tijuana after authorities got several reports he had been sighted.

Tidwell said two dozen of his men joined officers from San Diego County and U.S. and Mexican federal agencies in the search.

Tidwell said Cooper is believed to be the only person responsible for the bloody slayings of Santa Ana chiropractors F. Douglas and Peggy Ryan, both 41; their daughter, Jessica, 10, and Christopher Hughes, an 11-year-old house guest, and the wounding of 8-year-old Joshua Ryan, the sole survivor.

Tidwell said officers have evidence placing Cooper at the murder scene, and a deputy said Cooper even made a phone call to a female friend in Pennsylvania from the blood-spattered house.

The sheriff declined to elaborate on the evidence, but noted that clothes, bloodstains, open cans of food and fingerprints had been found in an empty house 150 yards from the murder scene.

The coroner said the killer used a hatchet found near the Ryan home and a knife and a screwdriver or ice pick, which have not been recovered.

Meanwhile, a prison official said "negligence" may have allowed Cooper's transfer to the minimum-security prison.

Pennsylvania authorities had informed California prison officials that Cooper was wanted in a Pennsylvania kidnap-rape and was a high escape risk. Robert Bales, assistant superintendent at the prison, said Thursday night.

Bales said the information was never properly filed. "We probably have negligence," he said, adding that "five or six people" worked on Cooper's transfer from a high-security evaluation area to the minimum-security prison.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported Thursday that Allegheny County officials had been trying to extradite Cooper and had sent his photograph and fingerprints to the Chino prison May 4 — four weeks before he escaped.

JUBILANT PREMIER — Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher gives a victory wave from a window of Conservative Party headquarters in London early Friday, after defeating all opposition to win Britain's general election.

Prime minister claims victory

LONDON (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, declaring today, "My victory is greater than I dared to hope," romped to a second five-year term as her embittered election rivals split the opposition vote.

In the process, the socialist Labor Party suffered its worst defeat in 60 years.

"I have not been extreme for the last four years. I am not an extreme person and I am not extreme now," said Mrs. Thatcher, 57, in a television interview today as she pledged not to use her parliamentary majority to follow radical right-wing policies.

Her party, according to the latest results from Thursday's general election, took 42 percent of the vote — nearly 2 percent less than in the previous election in 1979 — but emerged with a stunning success, thanks largely to the strong showing of a new centrist alliance which eroded Labor's support. The projected Conservative majority of 148 seats in the 650-member

House of Commons would be the biggest mandate for any British government. In 1945 Laborite Clement Attlee defeated wartime leader Winston Churchill with a 146 seat majority.

By noon, results were available for 575 of the 650 seats up for election. Mrs. Thatcher's party had 354, Labor 200, the alliance 17 and others 4.

The results showed the Tories receiving 42 percent of the overall vote, Labor 29.3, and the alliance 25.6. In 1979, the Conservatives received 43.9 percent and Labor 36.9, while the Liberal Party, the only alliance partner then in existence, got 13.8.

"It's a tragedy," said Michael Foot, the 69-year-old Labor leader. He blamed the alliance for "giving a victory to a government I believe the country does not wish to see running our affairs over the next five years."

Air traffic controller avoids hero label

WASHINGTON (AP) — The air traffic controller who calmly talked down a burning Air Canada jetliner whose pilot was nearly blinded by smoke doesn't consider himself a hero.

Gregory Karam met reporters Thursday after the Federal Aviation Administration released air-to-ground radio traffic tapes of him reassuring and instructing the Canadian aircrew as they landed at Cincinnati's airport on June 2.

Learning of a fire on the plane, Karam told the Cincinnati tower to have fire equipment ready, then contacted Air Canada Flight 797. The first communication he had from them was: "Approach Air Canada 797, we're, uh, uh, May Day, we're going down."

Karam quickly and calmly read the flight's bearings and asked "can you make it to the airport?"

"Affirmative" came the response from Pilot Don Cameron. Karam asked about the fire and was told "we have a fire in the back washroom... and we're filling up with smoke."

Karam said he used procedures turned to when bad weather obscures visibility. In these cases, he said, the pilot has to rely on the radar skills of the controller.

"Continue left turn, we don't see the airport," the pilot radioed at one point.

"Understand sir, advise me when you're VFR conditions," said Karam, indicating that the pilot should let him know when he could see the ground well enough to land.

"We're VFR now, we do not see the airport," Air

Canada quickly answered. "Understand," reassured Karam, "I'm turning you to (toward) the airport."

Moments later Karam told the Canadians they were cleared to land, but got the answer: "Cleared to land? We don't see the runway."

"All right sir," he reassured them, "present heading is taking you to the field."

A minute later Air Canada asked again "where's the airport?"

And Karam answered "12 o'clock (straight ahead) and 8 miles."

Fifteen seconds later the Canadians confirmed "OK, we have the airport" and landed less than three minutes later.

Energy costs boost prices 0.3 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising energy costs boosted wholesale prices 0.3 percent in May, the first increase all year, the government reported today.

For the first five months of 1983, those prices fell at an annual rate of 2.2 percent. Prices were up 3.7 percent last year.

Largely responsible for last month's jump was a 2.2 percent advance in energy prices. Those prices, pulled down by the worldwide oil glut, had fallen for five straight months. They were off 2.8 percent in April.

Home heating oil prices soared 6.4 percent, the largest increase since March, 1981. Gasoline prices climbed 2.3 percent, the most since last July, the department said in releasing its Producer Price Index for finished goods.

Food prices fell 0.5 percent after rising the previous three months. It was the sharpest fall in those prices since last July when they tumbled 1.6 percent.

May's pickup in prices was forecast by economists who, however, were looking for a bigger jump than that reported by the department. They also were looking for further rises in the months ahead. The increases, though, were expected to be only temporary and not a sign of a fresh surge in inflation.

The new report supported analysts' predictions that inflation at the wholesale level will rise at least as slowly as last year. Indeed, one analyst is forecasting an increase of less than 1 percent, which would be the smallest since the mid-1960s.

The bright inflation picture has been widely attributed to the sharp recession and the worldwide oil glut which had sent gasoline and fuel oil prices tumbling.

In recent months, those prices have been stabilizing and starting to climb.

Reflecting that price reversal, the report said the increase in fuel oil costs was the first this year. Those costs had dropped 6.3 percent in April.

Gasoline prices had fallen for eight straight months before turning around in May, the department said. Natural gas prices were down 0.6 percent, less than the 3.5 percent in the previous month.

The department's energy price calculations actually lag a month, so today's results represent April prices. Energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most current monthly measure, department analysts say.

The report also said fresh fruit prices tumbled 9.6 percent in May, after soaring 15.7 percent in April. Vegetable prices rose 0.8 percent after climbing 5.6 percent in April. The earlier price boosts had reflected unusually wet weather in California and cold snap in the East earlier in the year.

Weather

Violent weather noted

Showers and thunderstorms swept over the central Plains, northern Rockies and Intermountain Region early today, threatening to become severe in the country's midsection.

A tornado ripped through a housing development in the Texas Panhandle on Thursday, killing a woman and injuring her 73-year-old mother at Fritch, the Department of Public Safety said.

The twister destroyed two mobile homes, flipped a tractor-trailer and damaged several houses near Amarillo, Texas.

Another tornado also touched down in nearby Sanford, Texas, but no injuries or damage were reported, according to the dispatcher. Officials said a tornado touched down in eastern Colorado, but no damage was reported.

The tornadoes were spawned by a line of heavy thunderstorms that moved through the Panhandle Thursday night and early today, the National Weather Service said.

Widely scattered thundershowers dotted the Pacific Northwest, parts of the Rockies, the Florida peninsula, upper Mississippi Valley and southern Plains.

Other strong cells moved through parts of Nebraska and Iowa and into lower Michigan.

West Texas — Scattered thunderstorms most sections through Saturday. Highs 84 Panhandle to 95 south and 105 Big Bend valleys. Lows near 60 Panhandle to near 70 south, except 55 mountains.

The scarcity shortage

The federal government has a new problem: Trying to decide what to do with several billion gas rationing coupons — more than 2,000 tons worth — it printed up during the 1970s. The plan was to pass them out during the next oil crunch.

Enter the Reagan administration, which deregulated oil prices in 1981 and thus ended the age of artificial energy shortage — but brought upon the coupon crisis.

The coupons carry a picture of George Washington so similar to his mug on the one-dollar bill that they could be used to trick automatic change machines. So they can't simply be thrown away.

They also have no serial numbers — so it will be virtually impossible to make sure that no coupons are pilfered en route to being destroyed.

Right now, the coupons, which cost $10 million to print, are sitting in an Army storage facility at a cost of $20,000 a year.

There's a kind of poetic justice to a government allocation program with no scarcity left to allocate. Still, prudence probably suggests that the Feds hold onto the coupons anyway. They'll all be ready to go the next time Congress decides to create a shortage of some other commodity by "controlling the price," an event that, if history is any guide, can only be an election or two away.

Convention

not a bad idea

Dear Editor:

Your editorial of Sunday, May 29th, entitled "Constitutional Convention Peril," was as scary as any I have ever read. I provoked me to read the Constitution again, because I had never believed it was possible for any single institution, even Congress, to amend our Constitution.

That part of our Constitution pertaining to amendments reads:

Article V
MODE OF AMENDMENT
The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution, or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

So, the Constitutional Convention, when requested by two thirds of the state legislatures, would have the power of proposing amendments, the same as Congress by two-thirds of its members approval. That's all.

Any amendment thus proposed would have no effect until approved by 38 states, three-fourths of them. We have the recent attempt to pass the E.R.A. amendment as an example of the difficulty any group has in having our Constitution amended.

I hope you will address this subject further, with factual justification of the seemingly ridiculous claims of peril as enumerated in your editorial.

A.G. BENNETT

Editor's Note: The "claims of peril" in the editorial were written with a generous dose of irony, a literary device which exaggerates for effect and is not meant to be taken literally. The English poet Jonathan Swift used irony when he wrote "A Modest Proposal," in which he suggested that slaughtering human babies for food would be a good way to prevent the children of poor people in Ireland from being a burden to their parents and country.

Around the Rim

By CAROL HART

Bargain basement

"Hey, lady," the street urchin chanted as he danced around me with his palms held up. He must have been about nine years old, with dark hair cut unevenly around his face. Dirty clothes hung loosely on his sturdy little frame. His bright brown eyes, a stark contrast to his dingy clothes, caught the light generated by the sweltering heat.

I held out my hands to show him I didn't have any change. He immediately turned to one of my companions, a little girl whose age and height matched his. To prove he could use some money he pulled down his jeans. The little girl with me politely turned away as he showed me his swollen side. She dug into her pocket and pulled out a quarter to give him. He had convinced us and, winning his quarter, ran down the street after giving us a big smile.

THE LITTLE boy was a resident of Juarez, Mexico. The border city is a little more than 300 miles away from Big Spring but is a world removed from the lifestyle here. I was struck with the flavors of Juarez — mixtures of poverty, pride, happiness and tragedy. The people I saw mirrored the problems of a country battling devaluation of its monetary system.

My companions and I journeyed into Juarez last week. Like any tourist who sticks out like a sore thumb with his Hawaiian shirt and camera, we were equally obvious in our West Texas attire. The street merchants were masters at bargaining with people such as us and we had to learn quickly how to play their games.

The shop owners were patient, crafty, and surprisingly, stern.

They were obviously tired of tourists trying to make ridiculous deals. We made offers and they made offers. We won some and we lost some.

IN ONE SHOP we spotted a doll dressed as a Spanish dancer. She was beautiful. We asked how much. An elderly shop owner gazed at us with tired eyes and took his time in answering us. A large fan whirled over his head as we stood there, anticipating an answer, readying our defense. He decided upon $10.

"We don't have it," I said, expecting him to drop the price on the spot. He said nothing, waiting to see what I had in mind. I offered $5 and he shook his head with an insulted air. I counter-offered with $6, but he wouldn't go under $8.50. Tired of bargaining with me, he turned away. I had lost out, but my little companion was more persuasive.

"All I have is $6.50," she said. He pondered for what seemed minutes as she watched him with wide eyes. Then he said "For you, I'll make a special deal. $6.50."

He took down the doll and wrapped it carefully in paper and placed it in a sack. I turned to walk out while she stayed behind to say "Thank you." He gave her a hint of a smile.

Later, when the sun was getting the best of us, we headed back for the United States with our goods. As we walked to the bridge, huge dogs, perched on the roofs of shops, barked down as we passed beneath. Merchants called to us, making sure we had everything we had come for. And a group of children sat along the sides of the road, watching everything and not saying a word.

Let the buyer beware

The Department of Agriculture has just reported that it will cost $80,260 to raise a child born this year until it reaches age 18.

This seemed like a lot of scratch to Carter Brown, a friend of mine, who is expecting a child very soon. So he went down to the Department to see what he was going to get for his money.

"Is it really going to cost me $80,260 to raise a child until it's 18?" he asked the man behind the desk.

"It's a bargain," the man told him. "Eighteen months ago we projected it would cost $134,414. But that was when we included an 8 percent inflation rate. Our $80,000 figure is based on no inflation dollars."

"What does the $80,000 cost include?"

"Just the bare bone items such as $17,000 for food, $27,000 for housing, $13,000 for transportation, and the rest for miscellaneous items such as medical costs and shoes."

"I don't imagine you included orthodontic work in your estimate?" Brown asked.

"You have to be kidding!" the man roared with laughter. "If we included what it will cost for serious dental work no one would have a baby."

"What other items did you fail to include in your report, so I won't be surprised?"

The man looked at his list. "Well, in the early years of the child's upbringing you'll probably be able to stay within the $80,000 figure. But as your offspring goes into its teens, you could get into serious financial overruns."

"Such as?"

"The Department did not include in its report the cost of such teenage necessities as hi-fi equipment, movie and rock concert tickets, sports equipment, computers, weekend parties, guitar lessons, Christmas, arcade games, and insurance."

"Why not?" Brown asked. "They seem to be as essential as food, housing and transportation."

"Because we have them down as options. Some parents prefer a stripped-down child and others prefer to add everything that's on the market."

"If I pay the basic price of $80,000 to raise a child for the next 18 years, plus all the extras that you've mentioned, is there any guarantee it will turn out all right?"

"There is no warranty with the price whatsoever. You pay your money and you take your chances. We don't guarantee any more that when it gets to be 18, it will be able to read and write. Frankly you'll be lucky if it volunteers to cut your lawn or do the dishes once a week. And if you think for 80 grand it's going to clean up its own room, you're living in a dream world."

"It sure seems like a big investment to get so little in return."

"The Department of Agriculture is not recommending you have a baby. Our job is just to report what it will cost you to raise one. The $80,000 is our official figure. The other items I tipped you off on are unofficial, based on my own experience as the father of three teenagers."

"I didn't include the price of collect long-distance telephone calls during the first 18 years because I didn't want to scare you."

"So if I add in all the extras I can easily wind up spending $200,000," Brown said.

"That's a good ballpark figure unless you or your wife have to seek psychiatric care while raising your child."

"Well, I guess $200,000 is not an unreasonable sum of money to invest until a child reaches 18 years old."

"It's actually a steal," the man from Agriculture said. "When your kid reaches 18, it's going to cost you that much just to send it to college."

Billy Graham

Prayer is a direct line

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think prayer really makes any difference about how things turn out? — G.B.

DEAR G.B.: Yes, I am convinced that prayer makes a difference. Let me let the Bible answer this question: "The prayer of a righteous man is powerful and effective" (James 5:16).

Does that mean we can ask God anything at all — no matter how selfish it might be — and he will automatically give us our request? No, what we should seek when we pray is God's will, not our own. (That does not mean, of course, that we are not to bring our own concerns to God in prayer — quite the opposite. But our desire is to see God work in accordance with his perfect will). The Bible says, "This is the assurance we have in approaching God: that if we ask anything according to his will, he hears us. And if we have that we know that he hears us — whatever we ask — we know that we have what we asked of him" (1 John 5:14-15).

We may not always understand how God answers our prayers — at times he says "yes" while at other times he answers "no" or "wait."

But one of the greatest privileges of the child of God is the privilege of coming directly to God in prayer. This is possible because Jesus Christ has reconciled us to God through his death on the cross. We are separated from God, but Christ took away our sins and when we come to Christ by faith we are united with God.

"Therefore, since we have been justified through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have gained access by faith into this grace in which we now stand" (Romans 5:1-2). Yes, we have access to God through Jesus Christ.

Is prayer a central part of your life? Pray for your own needs ...

pray for the needs of others ... praise God in prayer ... pray for his guidance in your life. "Devote yourselves to prayer, being watchful and thankful" (Colossians 4:2). Remember, Christ prayed repeatedly, and if he — the sinless son of God — needed to pray, how much more should we learn to "pray continually" (1 Thessalonians 5:17).

U.S. intelligence never trusted Einstein

WASHINGTON — Albert Einstein, the physicist whose genius led to development of the atomic bomb that helped his adopted country win the war with Japan, was never fully trusted by the U.S. government.

In 1940, the Army denied Einstein clearance to work on the Manhattan Project — which, ironically, grew out of his famous letter to President Roosevelt suggesting that a nuclear bomb was possible and should be built before Hitler's scientist developed one.

After World War II, Einstein was the constant subject of "internal security" investigations by the FBI, Army intelligence, the State Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In dealing with the man whose theory ($E=mc^2$, energy equals mass times the speed of light squared) was the fundamental concept of nuclear energy, the government gunshoes devised a formula of their own: D=as2, disloyalty equals association times suspicion squared.

EINSTEIN WAS both a pacifist and a "joiner." He lent his name to a number of groups and committees he believed were sincerely trying to promote world peace. Several were officially regarded as subversive, and his association with them was enough to arouse investigators' darkest suspicions.

The sordid, self-contradictory and almost laughable reports on Einstein comprise a file of some 1,800 pages in the FBI files. It took my associate Dale Van Atta more than three years to pry all but about 300 pages out of the FBI under the Freedom of Information Act. Here are some of the highlights of the Einstein dossier.

Eternally suspected of communist sympathies, Einstein in 1946 was offered a chance to work in the Soviet Union and have "whatever funds, laboratories, buildings, equipment, books and assistance he might need," according to a report from the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Einstein's response was a letter — in Hebrew — to Josef Stalin, expressing appreciation for the offer, but asking: "Why are Jewish scientists not permitted to hold prominent posts? Why are apparently unnecessary obstacles placed in the way of Jewish scientific and research workers? Why were certain Jewish professors of medical science... not elected to the recently created Medical Academy?"

The implicit charges of anti-Semitism were at first denied, and the Soviet repeated their offer to Einstein. But Stalin had his secret police investigate the scientist's charges, with astonishing results: "Certain high Soviet officials were discharged for anti-Semitism. The professors named by Einstein were elected to the Academy."

Another "Russian connection" set the FBI agents on one of their many fruitless Einstein trails in April 1949. An informant told the G-men that the Einstein family was "scared to death over the fact that a son is in Russia and may be held as a hostage to force some particular action of the part of Prof. Einstein."

This story was repeated in many FBI reports, and wasn't laid to rest until six years later, when the FBI learned that one Einstein son was in this country and the other was in a Western European mental institution. Neither had ever been to Russia.

Army intelligence agents dutifully ran down an accusation by a former Berlin dress shop owner who claimed Einstein was a communist. The agents reported that the woman "did not make a favorable impression as to her reliability." In fact, she was an "amateur mathematician" who was miffed because Einstein hadn't replied to her letter asking her help on a system that would enable her to win a Berlin gambling pool.

Another wild goose chase began when an informant told the FBI that "the Dr. Einstein of the theory (was) the brain that was setting up Hollywood in the 1930s for the big communist push." The best the G-men could produce on this was a 1954 report on Einstein's friendship with Charlie Chaplin and architect Frank Lloyd Wright.

It wasn't until July 27, 1955, that the FBI issued a final recommendation after "all logical investigation had been conducted." The recommendation: "Close case."

It was high time. Einstein had died three months before the age of 76.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Are the schemers in the Kremlin lying to their people about the weather? Voice of America officials evidently think so. They're considering signing up Washington, D.C., television weatherman Gordon Barnes to provide straight, non-communist forecasts for the Voice's listeners in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. A spokesman denied any such contract offer. Barnes did not. Staffers, citing budget cuts and antiquated equipment, say the money could be better spent elsewhere.

Hail and rain damage crops

Panhandle wheat withers under spring onslaught

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Scattered hail, heavy rains and high winds early this week caused severe crop damage in isolated areas of the Coastal Bend and South and Southwest Texas, officials at the Texas A&M University department of agricultural communications said.

Areas hardest hit were Zavala, Jim Wells, Bee, Nueces and Kleberg counties and in parts of the Rio Grande Valley, with severe losses to corn, grain sorghum, cotton and vegetable crops on a number of farms.

Isolated hailstorms also damaged some of the maturing wheat crop in the Panhandle late last week and damaged some rice in Jefferson County.

The thunderstorms that triggered the violent weather also brought much-needed moisture to southern and southwestern sections of Texas, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Parts of West Central Texas (San Angelo area) also received scattered rains, but much of that region as well as the rest of western Texas and parts of the Coastal Bend remained dry.

Farmers in some parts of West Central Texas and the South Plains are still waiting on rain to plant cotton, while some Rolling Plains farmers are waiting on fields to dry out so they can plant. Only 10 percent of the cotton crop has been planted in the Rolling Plains, noted Carpenter.

Peanut planting is active over central and eastern areas while farmers are still planting soybeans along the Upper Coast.

Harvesting of wheat and oats has been slowed in some areas due to the recent rains. Harvest operations are generally complete in southern and central areas and are just beginning in the Rolling Plains, where good to excellent yields are in the making. Early yields in some northern counties of the area are ranging from 55 to 65 bushels per acre, Carpenter said.

Onion harvesting is in full swing in Far West and Southwest Texas, and a good peach harvest is under way in southern, central and eastern counties.

Livestock and forage conditions are generally good over much of the state, with grazing continuing to improve due to recent rains. However, short ranges due to dry conditions are still plaguing most of Far West and West Central Texas and parts of the Coastal Bend, with ranchers doing some feeding and a lot of marketing of cattle and sheep.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: The wheat crop continues to move toward maturity, with generally good yield prospects. Some wheat was damaged by isolated hailstorms, and some of the dryland wheat remains under drought stress. Young cotton is off to a slow start due to cool, damp weather, but most other crops are doing well. Cattle are in excellent shape, with fair to good grazing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Many dryland farmers are still waiting on rain to plant cotton. Isolated hailstorms damaged some young crops in Lamb and Hockley counties. Early planted cotton is off to a slow start due to cool weather. Corn is making good progress under heavy irrigation. The first cutting of alfalfa is in progress. Ranges need rain.

ROLLING PLAINS: Wheat harvesting and cotton harvesting have been slowed by wet fields. Only 5 to 10 percent of the cotton has been planted. The wheat harvest is getting under way, with excellent early yields reported in Wilbarger and Wichita counties—55 to 65 bushels per acre. Livestock and forage conditions are good to excellent.

NORTH CENTRAL: Recent rains have delayed harvesting of wheat and oats but have given a boost to young crops and pastures. Peanut planting is under way. Early peaches are maturing and the pecan crop looks good. Pastures continue to improve.

Reagan congratulates Thatcher

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today congratulated Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on her "impressive" election victory and teasingly asked, "If in the future I should have any need ... how would you like to manage a campaign?"

Reagan called Mrs. Thatcher from the Oval Office at 10:20 a.m. and spoke for three minutes.

After hailing her victory as impressive, Reagan said he looked forward to "continuing the close relationship between the United States and Great Britain," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes, quoting the president.

Speakes said Reagan thanked Mrs. Thatcher for her "past support and counsel" and said, "God bless you."

Prison fight injures inmate

SANTA FE (AP) — State Corrections Department officials said a 28-year-old state penitentiary inmate remained hospitalized here Thursday for injuries he received during a fight at the prison.

Andres Gonzales was listed in serious condition Thursday at St. Vincent Hospital's intensive care unit, a hospital spokeswoman said.

WHEAT FARMER — John Wells stops his combine to take a closer look at his wheat crop in Plano. Agriculturists said this year's crop will reach record proportions.

Wheat bucks Bumper crop kills PIK plans

DALLAS (AP) — A federal program meant to bolster wheat prices by slowing production has been thwarted in Texas because of that proverbial foe of agricultural economic forecasting — the weather.

Texas agriculture analysts said Thursday this year's winter wheat crop will reach record proportions, with an average yield of 30 bushels an acre — compared with a usual good yield in the 20s — and possibly ranging from 40 to 60 bushels an acre in Central and North Central Texas.

Under a payment-kind program that went into effect this year, farmers are paid in grain for the acres they do not plant. But experts say a mild winter created a bumper crop from the acres that were planted and canceled the effect of the program.

"There's a mixed reaction, I suppose, from having an outstanding crop," said Roland Smith, a marketing analyst for the Agricultural Extension Service. "Your farmers like to do well in production and they like to have a top yield. But what's good for a farmer individually may not be good for farmers in the aggregate."

In the past, when Texas has had a good wheat year, Smith said, it has "out-produced the market," and that could happen again this year, with what he called "phenomenal yields" from Texas acres.

Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman Leland Beatty said although the number of acres planted was down more than 20 percent, production was only down 2 percent in Texas.

An already sluggish market will not be helped by a record Texas crop in combination with national production, which was down only 10 percent despite a reduction in planted acreage of 19 percent.

Beatty said a spot check of grain elevators showed wheat prices generally down 10 percent with operators reporting "considerably more grain" coming into elevators compared with last year.

He said labor problems in the southern hemisphere may slow the international grain competition giving American farmers, and meetings between U.S. and Soviet officials on a long-term grain deal are reasons for optimism.

PUC outlines fuel rule for utilities

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Utility Commission proposed a fuel rule Thursday that chairman Alan Erwin said should prevent drastic monthly increases in utility bills.

Erwin held an hour-long news conference to brief reporters on the 13-page proposal, which responds to a new law prohibiting automatic fuel adjustments for utility companies.

The law was recently enacted at the urging of Gov. Mark White, who made high utility bills an issue in his fall campaign.

White also appointed Erwin as chairman of the PUC and made a clean sweep of the regulatory agency with two other appointments.

Erwin said the proposed rule would apply to 10 investor-owned electric generating utilities and also the Lower Colorado River Authority.

He said the rule will be published for comment from utilities and consumers, with a public hearing tentatively scheduled for July 19 to adopt or revise the rule.

In prohibiting automatic pass-through of utility fuel costs, the rule states that any revision in billings to recover additional fuel costs requires a public hearing and commission order.

To obtain a "recovery factor" — or charge in addition to the base rate set by the PUC — the utility would have to show "volatility," or as Erwin phrased it, that the market was unpredictable and beyond the control of the utility.

Any "recovery factor" approved by the PUC would remain constant for a year, Erwin said, and would appear on the monthly bill.

"I predict it will be pretty difficult to prove volatility," he said.

WHEN ARE WE GOING TO ACT OUR AGE!

From Adam to the atom it has been a long process. But progress does not necessarily mean progress. Only when we recognize our need for God will we begin to come of age. Then, and only then, will process mushroom into progress.

Magnet school students score higher on tests

Students at Houston's magnet schools scored as much as a year ahead of their peers in regular classes on standardized tests this year, according to a Houston Independent School District report.

"Magnet schools are the finest education money can't buy," said Superintendent Billy Reagan, as he repeated the slogan used in HISD advertising in a speech before the Kiwanis Club of Houston Wednesday.

In grades 1-8, pupils enrolled in magnet programs scored above both the national and the district average on the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills.

In grades 6, 7 and 8, magnet students scored 1.1 years above their peers in neighborhood schools.

At the high school level, scores from campuses with magnet programs were above the district's average in grades 10-12.

As expected, students at all levels in the program for gifted students scored substantially above the district and national average, because high tests scores are a criterion for admission to the program.

Significantly, however, the report shows that students in some of the other magnet programs which don't require high test scores, such as a physical development program at one school and the music and science program at another school, also scored above the district and national averages.

More than a quarter of all students in HISD were enrolled in magnet school programs in the 1982-83 school year.

Computer firm founder killed

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Hours after his company's successful debut into the stock market made him a multimillionaire, Eagle Computer president Dennis Barnhart was killed in the fiery crash of his red Ferrari.

The 40-year-old executive was only blocks away from his office when his car, bearing "Eagle B" license plates, went out of control, hit a guard rail, plunged down a ravine and landed on its top about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday, police said.

DENNIS BARNHART
...killed in crash

Barnhart was killed and a passenger, Sheldon R. Caughey, 40, of Tiburon, owner and president of Pacific States Yacht Co. in San Rafael, was thrown from the car. Caughey was reported in critical condition Wednesday night at a Los Gatos hospital.

Barnhart's death came after the company's first day of trading on the stock market, a day that netted Eagle $37 million and put Barnhart's 592,000 shares at a value of more than $9 million. The initial public offering totaled 2,750,000 shares of common stock.

Eagle's board of directors hastily convened a nighttime meeting to discuss strategy for the company.

Eagle makes small business and personal desk-top computers. It has grown by 100 percent each quarter since it was incorporated in May 1982, reporting net sales of $17 million in the nine months ending April 2. The company employs 205 workers.

During the 18 months that Barnhart led Eagle, sales of microcomputers soared from 500 units a month to more than 12,000.

Officials said possible successors to Barnhart were Ronald N. Mickwee, 37, now executive vice president and chief operating officer, and chairman and founder Charles A. Kappenman, 42.

Mickwee joined Eagle in April after working as vice president and Atari program director for Synertek Inc., a subsidiary of Honeywell Inc., and a maker of semiconductors.

Directors were considering the possibility of naming Kappenman chief executive officer and Mickwee president.

De Lorean aid to plead guilty in cocaine case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man charged along with automaker John Z. De Lorean in an alleged $24 million cocaine deal will plead guilty next week to drug trafficking charges, the man's attorney said Thursday.

WILLIAM HETRICK
...to plead guilty

William Morgan Hetrick, 50, who operated a small aviation company in the Mojave Desert, had pleaded innocent to possession of cocaine, conspiracy to distribute the white powder and operating a continuing criminal enterprise of importing drugs.

But attorney Stephen Wilson said in a statement that the new plea will be entered Monday before U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi.

An 11-count indictment alleged that De Lorean, 57, conspired with Hetrick to sell the drug after it was flown in from South America. De Lorean has pleaded innocent.

"I have no comment except to confirm that a change of plea has been calendared" in federal court, said Wilson's statement.

"Any further questions will be addressed after the courtroom appearance on Monday," he said in a statement read by his personal secretary.

The woman, who declined to give her name, said Wilson would not discuss the statement with reporters. She said Hetrick would plead guilty.

It could not be determined whether Hetrick's change of plea comes in an agreement with the government or whether he would testify against De Lorean.

L.A. cops not banned from sex under cover

LOS ANGEES (AP) — Police Chief Daryl Gates says undercover officers cannot be banned from having sex with people they are investigating because it could risk revealing their identities.

The sworn testimony taken by the American Civil Liberties Union was submitted for pre-trial hearings on six civil suits alleging that the now defunct Public Disorder Intelligence Division used undercover officers to spy on peaceful organizations during the late 1970s and early 1980s. The suits, which are backed by the ACLU, have been merged into a single case.

The issue of sexual activity was raised by ACLU attorney Paul Hoffman, who told Gates: "I want to know whether or not the police department still permits that activity or not, and if it does permit that activity, I am going to go for an injunction to stop it."

Banning sexual activity would mean "seriously endangering" the lives of plainclothesmen because their identities might be revealed, Gates said.

"If I were to say that there is a flat prohibition against it ... there is no reason why every undercover operator would not be tested in that fashion," he said.

"Bring in a girl and say, 'Have sex with her, we know you are an undercover operator, and we are going to lop off your head.'"

"... I would have sex rather than lose my life."

Hoffman told the Los Angeles Herald Examiner that "there are at least two instances in our case where undercover officers were engaged in sexual relations in connection with their duties."

Serling's success mystifies

SHELDRAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Rod Serling's widow says the man who created the "Twilight Zone" more than 20 years ago never dreamed it would spawn an industry of books, magazines and reruns that continues to this day.

Serling, who sold his rights to the five-year-long TV series to CBS not long after it was canceled in 1964, enjoyed the show "but then moved beyond. He didn't live in the Twilight Zone all his life," said Carol Serling, who has a summer home in this Cayuga Lake hamlet.

"But the Twilight Zone was a sort of haven for him," she said in a recent interview, "because it helped him find the parameters of how he was able to deal with social issues and social ills that you couldn't do on straight TV."

The show's latest incarnation, the tragedy-scarred "Twilight Zone" movie, will have its world premiere Saturday at the Crest Theater in the small border city of Binghamton where Serling grew up. He died eight years ago this month.

The character of a teacher in one segment of the four-part movie has been named after Helen Foley, who was one of Serling's teachers when he attended high school and who still lives in Binghamton.

Mrs. Serling said that Serling began the "Twilight Zone" show after sponsors and networks began to alter his award-winning television scripts in the late 1950s. Instead, she said, he outwitted them in the realm of fantasy, where he could bend space, logic and time to his will and where his messages against nuclear weapons or for human rights could elude them.

"Once he got started, there really was very little network interference or sponsor interference. I guess they just figured he was in fantasy land," Mrs. Serling said.

She said the film, marred by the accident last July 23 that killed actor Vic Morrow and two Vietnamese children, "doesn't really deal with political issues."

"I would say the movie is pretty much straight entertainment. And then, things are looser now in many ways. We can deal with issues that were difficult to deal with in the 1960s."

Mrs. Serling, a consultant for co-producers Steven Spielberg and John Landis, also is associate publisher of The Twilight Zone magazine and a trustee of Antioch University in Yellow Springs, Ohio, where she met Serling.

The movie consists of a prologue and four separate stories with four different directors.

Landis, whose credits include "Animal House" and "The Blues Brothers," directed the first segment and wrote the prologue, a message which Serling worked into an art form for his TV shows.

"I think John just felt it was a little vignette that he had in mind and always wanted to do. It fit in beautifully; it's very good. His original sequence also is the most serious of the four," Mrs. Serling said.

In addition, Landis could face manslaughter charges for giving orders to the helicopter pilot.

Mrs. Speck gives program on driftwood

Mrs. Charles Speck of Ozona gave a program on driftwood and weathered wood during a meeting of the Judge's Advanced Study Club in the home of Mrs. Barbara Drake, 709 Harmony, May 19.

"Never throw away a piece of wood," Mrs. Speck, a master judge of Ozona, said. "You can always piece it together. Never cover up a piece of wood, make a lovely piece of wood the main feature of a flower arrangement."

During the program, "I Wood, Woodn't You", different methods used in cleaning, debugging, mounting and treating drifted wood was explained. There are several ways to bring out the beauty of the lines and color in a piece of driftwood or aged weathered wood. First, three processes you could try are to mount the wood on a base with screws; to mount it on a wooden dowel, or you can drill a hole in the wood and place it on the dowel.

One way to treat wood to bring out the color luster and lines, first, wash it well in water, scrub with a wire brush, use full strength bleach on the wood to bleach it, then clean it well with water.

Another way to bring out the beauty of the wood, is to use chalk, or may use resin, rub it into the grain of the wood. You may use shoe polish and rub it into the grain of the wood.

To add contrast in the colors, you can use a torch and touch up weathered wood or driftwood.

Some mechanics you can use in making your arrangements are oasis, styrofoam, pinpoint holder, placed in a cup if you need it to hold water for fresh flowers.

Wood represents several different designs, you may see a bird or an animal in the lines and the shape of the wood. Allgereta wood is good to use for arrangements. It has several curves and curls. Look for quality in driftwood with an emphasis on a specific area.

Mrs. Speck used dried materials and several wild plants, found in pastures, along streams, or in the mountains, in displaying eight arrangements. She also displayed several books on driftwood and weathered wood.

During the meeting, Mrs. J.K. Somerville announced the Southern Zone meeting will be held in Midland at the Women's club, Nov. 15.

The next study meeting will be June 23 at Big Lake with Mrs. Speck as hostess. Mrs. Lee Graves, a master floral show judge, will give a program on dynamic balance in floral arranging.

Dear Abby

Wife hesitant to leave husband

DEAR ABBY: I recently discovered that my husband of 38 years has been having an affair with a young woman of questionable character. She made sure that everyone in town knew about their relationship, adding to my hurt and humiliation.

Friends have rallied to my support. My minister, family physician and married children are all urging me to divorce my husband, but I am not sure I want a divorce. Like most women of my generation, I consider marriage a lifetime commitment.

I am by nature a very tolerant and forgiving person, and frankly, the thought of living the rest of my life alone frightens me. Also, I am home-oriented, with no skills.

With our present moral climate, I'm sure there are thousands of older women who find themselves in a similar position.

Is it better to keep my marriage vows and forgive a husband who has broken his, or face the future alone? What do you advise?

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE

DEAR FOR: Never mind what your friends, minister, family physician and married children say. As long as a shadow of doubt exists in your mind, stay married. (I would give a man the same advice.) Never cut what you can unravel.

DEAR ABBY: I am dating a girl who has a very irritating habit. She interrupts me in the presence of others to correct my pronunciation of words.

I wouldn't mind so much, but later when I check my dictionary, I learn that I was right and she was wrong.

How should I deal with this? No names or initials, please, as this is a very small town.

IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: If there are two girls in your town, date the other one.

DEAR ABBY: You asked how one may be certain his burial wishes will be carried out when the law provides that the next of kin has the final say.

A few years ago, an Arkansas man wanted his body cremated and his ashes scattered on the White River, where he had spent many happy hours fishing with his friend, the local undertaker. He had a lawyer draw up his will, leaving all his property to his next of kin, provided they followed his wishes. The will stated that if they failed to do so, everything would go to the undertaker. He gave an executed copy to the undertaker and then committed suicide.

The next of kin insisted on burial instead of cremation. The undertaker said, "If you want to make me his heir, I'll bury him, but if you want his property, you'd better let me cremate him and scatter his ashes on the White River."

No argument. He was cremated.

COUNTRY LAWYER
DEAR LAWYER: It should be stressed that the next of kin, the funeral director and all other concerned should be notified prior to death, since most wills are not read until after the funeral takes place.

Smith clan has reunion

Descendants of the late Mr. and Mrs. J.P. Smith of the Knott Community met at the Kentwood Senior Citizens Center, Sunday, for their annual reunion.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the parents of twelve children. The two surviving children are Lucille Sample of Big Spring and Daisy Caffey of Stanton. J.D. Kendrick presided. Bill Arnett brought the devotional, "The Meaning of Life and Being an Example to Other People". Ralph Caffey led the group in singing.

Margie Grissam was elected president, and Evelyn Kendrick was elected secretary and treasurer.

Plans are being made for the 1984 reunion, which will be held in the same place. The reunion will be held the first Saturday in June, instead of the first Sunday in June as done previously.

Unlocking cell sugar locks

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I wonder if you would write something about diabetes and use of the Diabinese pills? — Mrs. I.G.

The only thing left of your long letter, Mrs. I.G., is that simple question. And to answer it, we need to take a fresh look at diabetes itself. Most of your questions will be answered in what follows.

When you get down to essentials the cause of diabetes (high blood sugar) and its treatment involves a key and lock situation between insulin (the key) and certain sugar receptors (locks) on body cells. Insulin is made by the pancreas to unlock those receptors and permit sugar to enter. If there is not enough insulin, the system doesn't work and blood sugar levels rise.

A lack of insulin causes what is called Type 1 diabetes. Other names for it have included juvenile or insulin-dependent diabetes. And people with that type must have outside insulin in the form of injections to keep the insulin-receptor system working.

The other kind of diabetes is Type 2. Here, sugar levels are high, not because there is not enough insulin but because the cell doors have no key holes (insulin receptors).

There's plenty of insulin, but it can't work because there are too few insulin receptors on the cells. Blood sugar rises.

This Type 2 diabetes is approached in a different way. It can be treated without insulin injection most of the time. For example, because body fat is known to interfere with insulin receptors, losing this fat can help the situation and lower blood sugar. And this brings us to the Diabinese you mention.

That medicine (sulfonyleurea) can increase the numbers and activity of cell insulin receptors. With more keyholes, more sugar leaves the blood. Another way to treat this kind of diabetes is with a high-fiber diet. That prevents too rapid absorption of sugar from the intestinal tract to the blood. It's more of a gradual absorption.

So the answer to your question, in short, is that yes, your kind of diabetes (Type 2) can be controlled by diet, exercise, weight loss, fiber — and when necessary with the tablets (Diabinese).

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When a man has a routine annual physical, why does the doctor have him walk cross the room naked? What can he possibly learn from this? — Y.Z.

The doctor learns lots from watching you walk unclothed. He can see at a glance if, for example, there is an abnormal tilt of the pelvis, if you favor one hip over the other, or if all the muscles of your lower back and pelvic girdle are working together. If one hip is higher than another, that can tell him something that could not have been seen were you clothed. Many nerve, muscle or back problems can be detected that otherwise would remain hidden from view.

FOR MRS. T.T. — There's no evidence that ultrasound is harmful to the fetus. It's frequently used these days for such things as determining accurate delivery date when that factor is an important health consideration for mother or fetus.

Apartment living bothers pianists

CHICAGO (AP) — The growing trend among Americans to move into small apartments and townhouses, coupled with a revival of interest in playing the piano for pleasure, has created a need for a new urban skill: soundproofing.

"About two weeks after I moved in," says Carl Hunter, a Chicago architect who is a piano owner and highrise dweller, "I got a letter from the building managers. They asked me to look into strange noises that had been emanating from my apartment late at night. The worst part was that they didn't even acknowledge it was piano music."

To help prevent complaints such as this one, the National Piano Manufacturers Association, with headquarters here, asked several experts about ways to guarantee a harmonious relationship with the people next door, downstairs and upstairs.

Bob Russell of Mayfield Heights, Ohio, a piano technician and past international president of the Piano Technicians Guild, explains that sound travels down the piano through the floor, so apartment dwellers with pianos should always have at least one thickness of carpeting under their instruments to absorb sound.

Even if you have wall-to-wall carpeting, Russell says it helps to put a throw rug or a smaller piece of carpeting under the piano. Other sound-absorbing furnishing that he recommends are lined drapes and upholstered sofas and chairs.

Interior designer Joanne Good of Chicago notes that many piano owners run carpeting partially up the wall for both esthetic and sound insulation purposes. Designer Dorothy Collins of Sioux City, Iowa, says one of the latest techniques is to upholster the walls in fabric or even canvas, backed with Dacron padding.

Joanne Good recommends similar procedures — she has a linen-covered polyfoam wall behind the piano in her own apartment — but cautions that all materials should be properly fireproofed. For those who are wary of turning their apartments into padded cells, she advises that cork, available in sheets or tiles, is an attractive and effective sound insulator when mounted on the walls.

Chicago architect David Haid says sound insulation solutions must be more than skin deep. He blames sound problems on the construction methods of most modern apartment buildings, including the placement of vents, ducts and utility outlets.

"A 10-inch-thick masonry wall is good for well over a hundred decibels of sound insulation," he says, "but a very small hole in the wall, such as for an electrical outlet, can make the wall good for only about 25 decibels. Mass is the best way to eliminate problems, but few people want to build a concrete bunker in their apartments."

Haid suggests trying to plug up some of the holes between apartments, making certain the insulating material is fireproof (especially around heating ducts and electrical outlets). Because there are so many holes in the walls — for TV antennas, phone lines, and utility outlets — it may be impossible to fill them all, he admits.

"In some modern buildings, the floors sag enough that if you pull off the vinyl baseboard, you can actually push a pencil between the wall and the floor into your neighbor's apartment."

Cartons recyclable

NEW YORK (AP) — Though most consumers probably don't realize it, nearly half of the grocery and household items that come in paper cartons are packaged in recycled paperboard.

The American Paper Institute says this includes products ranging from cereals and instant soups to pet foods and facial tissues. All paper egg cartons, for instance, are made from recycled paperboard.

The key raw material in recycled paperboard is clean waste paper. Along with saving consumers money, recycling this material keeps it from being dumped into overcrowded landfills. Every ton of recycled paper saves three cubic yards of landfill space.

Decline in kids hurts candy sales

By The Associated Press

Hard candy has fallen on hard times. Sales have slumped, hundreds of candy makers have been laid off, and now Life Savers Inc. plans to close its oldest plant and allow the gargantuan rolls of mock candy that stand outside to be turned into park decorations.

To the government officials who monitor lollipops, lemon drops, sourballs and suckers, it's all a matter of demographics.

America's median age rose from 28 to 30 between 1970 and 1980, meaning half the population is now 30 or older. Neil Kenney, an analyst for the Commerce Department in Washington, said the changing population mix and the growing sophistication of adults have had an effect on candy sales.

"As the population matures, its taste preferences mature," Kenney said.

Americans are eating less candy than they were a decade ago. At the same time, hard candy's share of the market is shrinking while candy containing chocolate is increasing its market share, he said.

"Candy containing chocolate generally is a more complex taste sensation," Kenney said Wednesday in a telephone interview, "and, one might argue, a sophisticated combination of tastes and flavors."

Life Savers nevertheless have their adult admirers, such as Maryanne Morgan, who often eats them as she commutes to her job at a Manhattan credit union from New York's Dutchess County. She likes them because they're unobtrusive on the train.

"You just leave it in your mouth and it disappears," Ms. Morgan said.

"I like (chocolate) but it doesn't like me," she said. "It makes me fat."

At a press conference Tuesday in Port Chester, N.Y., Peter Rogers, president of Life Savers Inc., announced that the company will close its candy plant there in April after 64 years of operation. The shutdown will put 145 people out of work. In 1981, 300 employees were laid off because of slumping sales.

"Sugar-rolled candy consumption is down 35 percent in the past six years," Rogers said. After April, all Life Savers candies will be produced at the company's plant in Holland, Mich., near Grand Rapids.

The plant in Port Chester is the oldest belonging to the company, which has been owned by Nabisco Inc. for a year and a half. It is located within sight of the railroad tracks that carry commuters into New York City from Connecticut's Fairfield County, and the 10-foot-long rolls of Life Savers that decorate the building grounds have reminded more than a few passing commuters to pop candy into their mouths.

The building has been

In 1977, he said, 40 million boxes of Life Savers were sold, or 800 million packages. "This year we'll sell 29 million boxes," he said.

Kenney said the per capita consumption of all candy in America was 18.7 pounds in 1972 and had dropped to 16 pounds by 1981. Part of the reason was price, he said, as the cost of sugar soared. In 1980 hard candy represented 13.9 percent of all candy shipped for sale. In 1981 it represented 12.7 percent. In the meantime, chocolate was increasing its share of the market, he said.

There is no evidence that concern over calories or sugar intake have had a major effect on candy sales, he said, but some would disagree.

"People are becoming diet conscious, that's part of it," said Norman Hirsch, who runs a candy stand in Manhattan. "People are starting to read what the packages say. It's all from the diets."

sold and is to be developed into office space. Three of the giant Life Savers rolls will be shipped to other company plants, and two are being given to the mayor of Port Chester, Peter Iasillo.

"The mayor said he was going to put them in a park as part of the history of his town," said Barry Chapell of Nabisco, who is helping Life Savers Inc. with the phase-out.

NOW members picket insurance offices

In its first street demonstration since the defeat of ERA, the National Organization for Women picketed insurance company offices in cities across the country Wednesday, accusing the industry of overcharging women.

The industry replied that most women would pay more for insurance, especially for life and health policies, if a bill advancing through Congress becomes law. The measure prohibits distinctions based on gender in setting insurance rates and benefits.

In Washington, D.C., about 35 women and a man picketed the headquarters of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. at the foot of Capitol Hill.

"If insurance companies have their way, women won't get ERA," the demonstrators chanted.

NOW President Judy Goldsmith said that during the unsuccessful 10-year struggle to win ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment which ended last June, NOW lobbyists "found increasing connections between legislative opponents to the ERA and the insurance industry."

Duane Adams, president of Acacia, said he knew of no industry opposition to ERA and said he personally favored the amendment and could not understand why it had not been ratified.

NOW listed 27 cities where it said pickets would march. But in one of them, Chattanooga, Tenn., NOW leader Linda Lynn said her group did not participate.

"We're a new chapter and we're a small chapter also, and we thought it would be premature for us to picket the insurance companies here in Chattanooga without talking to them about their policies for setting rates," she said.

Scouts aid in 'sting'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Huntsville police used two 15-year-old members of a Boy Scouts organization to "sting" clerks at eight liquor stores.

Two members of a Law Enforcement Explorers post bought beer at eight stores with the blessings of police last week. Josh Silcox, a tight end for Huntsville High School's junior varsity football team, said the purchases were "just like going in and buying candy. It was that easy."

Roger Ohmsted, a Scout executive for the 14-county Sam Houston Area Council, said Wednesday he will seek disciplinary action against the post for allowing the scouts to participate.

"We will not condone a sponsoring organization that uses teen-age kids to accomplish its own ends by going outside the law," Ohmsted said. "Even though they were under police supervision, our principle is to teach kids to stay within the law."

He said he may seek to revoke the group's charter. At the very least, he said, the scout leaders will be instructed not to repeat the project using teen-agers.

Huntsville police chief David Farrar said Silcox and Ron Jewell, also a football player, went to 10 liquor stores.

One clerk lectured an undercover teen-ager.

"He said he had a wife and kid to support and couldn't afford to lose his job over something like this," Farrar said.

Both boys are stockily built. Jewell is 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs about 220 pounds. Silcox is 5 feet 8 inches and weighs about 215.

But Farrar said "neither of those two looked anywhere near 19."

Jewell said no clerk asked him for identification.

"A couple asked me if I was going to do some partying tonight," he said. "I said, 'Naw, I was going to take it in to the house.'"

The Huntsville Explorers post has about 20 members, all of them in high school, and stresses learning about law enforcement.

Three guerrillas hanged

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Three black-nationalist guerrillas were hanged Thursday morning for taking part in attacks to overthrow the white-minority South African government, authorities said.

Prime Minister P.W. Botha's government ignored worldwide appeals to reprieve the three men, who were convicted of killings that occurred during the attacks.

Coenie de Swart, spokesman for the Department of Prisons, said the men were hanged at Pretoria Central Prison, the first insurgents to be executed in four years.

Earlier, the government's Executive Council met to consider an appeal for clemency. The Council, which consists of Cabinet ministers and the president, said only that a final decision had been reached, but a well-placed Council source said it meant the hangings would take place.

State television also said the Council had rejected appeals to block the hangings, just a week ahead of the anniversary of the 1976 Soweto race riots and despite appeals from groups around the world.

The U.N. Security Council, the 10-nation European Economic Community and foreign politicians had joined numerous anti-apartheid groups in asking South Africa to spare the three.

Sentenced to die were Simon

Mogerane, 23, Jerry Mosololi, 25, and Marcus Motaung, 27, all members of the banned African National Congress, known as the ANC.

Motaung's lawyer filed a last-minute appeal for clemency before the Pretoria Supreme Court. But Judge D.J. Curlewis rejected the application.

Mogerane, Mosololi and Motaung were convicted of murder and high treason after a series of attacks on police stations and economic facilities between 1979 and 1981 in which four black policemen were killed.

They admitted at their trial that they took part in the attacks, but argued they should be treated as prisoners of war on grounds the ANC is battling to overthrow white-minority rule.

The voteless, segregated 21 million blacks in South Africa outnumber whites four to one.

Executing Mogerane, Mosololi and Motaung virtually guarantees increased racial friction in South Africa because many blacks view the men as heroes in the struggle for majority rule.

The ANC, the largest black-rights group trying to end white-minority rule, considers itself at war with the Pretoria government.

Its bloodiest strike to date came May 20 when a car bomb killed 19 people and wounded more than 200 on a crowded Pretoria street outside air force headquarters.

GUILLERMO VILAS
...missing year, fined $20,000

Pro tennis makes strong examples of Noah, Vilas

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The long-threatened and long-needed crackdown in professional tennis has finally come. And with it, two of the top five players in the world have been sent to the sidelines.

Meeting in Paris, the Men's International Professional Tennis Council banished fifth-ranked Guillermo Vilas of Argentina from all Pro Council-sanctioned events for one year — the strongest punishment imposed since tennis became openly professional in 1968 — and handed fourth-ranked Yannick Noah a 42-day suspension.

Vilas' alleged transgression — he has denied the charges and, under Pro Council rules, can appeal the decision — was accepting a $60,000 guaranteed appearance fee to play a tournament in Rotterdam, the Netherlands.

It's not as if Vilas needed the extra money to make ends meet. Last year, the 30-year-old left-hander had to make do with $932,150, bringing his official career earnings to slightly more than $4.2 million.

Then there's Noah, who on Sunday became the first Frenchman in 37 years to win the French Open. He was set down for skipping his final match in the Nation's Cup, a team competition in Dusseldorf, West Germany, in May after France no longer had any chance of winning the title.

"That's all behind me now," Noah said after the Dusseldorf fiasco which saw him fly back to Paris after each of his first two matches. "Now I can concentrate on tennis."

He did, winning the world's most prestigious clay court tournament. But now, he cannot play any tennis — not even an exhibition — until August 22, one week before the U.S. Open begins.

The suspensions could prove fatal to the Davis Cup hopes of both Argentina and France. In the quarterfinal round of the World Group July 8-10, France is at home to Paraguay and Argentina travels to Italy. Both teams, the two favorites since the United States and Czechoslovakia were eliminated in opening round play, now will be without their No. 1 players.

The Pro Council, composed of nine members, three each representing three groups — players, tournament organizers and the international federation — also fined the Rotterdam organizers $10,000.

The new hardball being played by the Pro Council — and already denounced by such luminaries as John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Ivan Lendl — is spearheaded by M. Marshall Happer, the Council administrator.

"The Council has given Marshall far more power to investigate rumors," says Jim McManus, director of player and tournament services for the Association of Tennis Professionals, the players' union. "He is finally getting the authority and the backing from the Council," to deal with those who break the rules established by the MIPTC.

Asked if the Noah and Vilas cases were just the tip of the iceberg, McManus says: "How big you'll never know. It may bring more things out or it may dry up the iceberg."

Ed Fabricius, public relations director for the U.S. Tennis Association, feels that "penalizing a couple of players isn't going to solve the problems. It's a start, however, and it's an indication that something's going to be done about it. This serves as a signal."

The rumors of "under-the-table" payments and guarantees is nothing new, as McManus notes, "It's been going on since the days when only amateurs played."

"It's always been there. It's been trying to get hard facts that has stymied us before."

And the man of the hour is Happer, a slow-talking Southern lawyer who is rapidly becoming the "strongman" of pro tennis.

Earlier this year, he suspended Van Winitsky for 35 days when the player charged into the stands after a spectator during a tournament in Antigua. A tournament in Stuttgart, West Germany, was removed from the Grand Prix tour for 1983 for giving inducements to players and a tournament in Stockholm, Sweden, was fined when it refused to allow several players to enter because they had been blacklisted for playing in South Africa.

"We really don't need any more rules," says Fabricius. "There are plenty of rules. They just need to be enforced. There's so much going on that it takes an army to police it."

Or at least M. Marshall Happer.

Texas bops 'Bama in 10

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — If it could have been written in advance, the script for the 183 College World Series couldn't have been any better for Texas baseball Coach Cliff Gustafson.

"This is pretty much the way I'd like to have it," said Gustafson after his No. 1-ranked Longhorns defeated Alabama 6-4 in a 10-inning winners bracket final here Thursday night.

"We really hope we can take back the championship. Nothing else really matters. I'm extremely proud of this ball club having won three games here and earning a spot in the championship game, but if we don't win that championship it won't matter," he said.

Texas, 64-14, won an automatic spot in the NCAA Division I title game. The Longhorns, making their 22nd appearance and having won the title in 1975, must face Michigan, 50-8, Friday at 8:10 p.m. (CDT), following Alabama, 45-10, against Arizona State, 44-23, at 5:10 p.m.

The winners will advance to Saturday's 7:10 p.m. contest, which could be for the title should Texas win Friday night. A Texas loss would match Michigan against Friday's first-game winner for the right to meet Texas in a Sunday title game at 7:10 p.m.

Texas pitching shut down the hot bats from Alabama in Thursday's contest of tournament unbeaten. The Crimson Tide had a .340 team batting average and the nation's leading hitter, David Magadan, coming into the CWS.

But Calvin Schiraldi, a 14-2 first-round pick in

HEY, EASY WITH MY TOE — Alabama pitcher Dean Hayes pushes Texas baserunner Bryan Burrows' toe into the ground to keep him from touching home plate Thursday night in Omaha. Burrows was out trying to score on a seventh inning wild pitch by Hayes but the Longhorns won the game 6-4 in 10 innings in the NCAA College World Series.

Monday's major league baseball draft, put the clamps on the Tide. He fanned 11 in 5 1-3 innings of relief.

Freshman second baseman Bill Bates sparked the Texas offense with his three runs scored and game-winning RBI with a double in the 10th.

Schiraldi had a 4-3 lead and had retired seven straight batters heading into the eighth when he faced Madagan, who had eight hits in nine at bats coming into the game. The Alabama junior hit a pitch over the left field fence to even the game.

"The first time I faced Magadan I didn't know what to throw him so I kept it low," said Schiraldi. "It (the homer) didn't upset me too much. What really made me mad was the next guy got the double."

After Rob Skates' double to left, Schiraldi struck out the side. He gave up another double and a walk to bring Magadan to the plate with two out in the bottom of the ninth.

"The next time I faced Magadan the coach said to keep it in and I kept it high," said Schiraldi.

He fanned Magadan to end the threat, then struck out the side in the bottom of the 10th to secure the victory.

Gustafson is not taking the title bid lightly. "There are four very good teams left in this thing," he said. "Any one of them is still capable of winning it. Michigan is a fine ball club. Arizona State has been there before. Alabama is an excellent hitting team. I still think we've got a difficult road ahead of us."

Michigan Coach Bud Middaugh, who watched Texas rally twice to beat Alabama, said the Longhorn pitching is simply "outstanding."

Large field in gates for 115th Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — In a year in which quantity has been mentioned more often than quality in connection with the 3-year-old division, 15 colts will contest the biggest and richest Belmont Stakes ever Saturday.

Asked why there have been so many different winners of 3-year-old stakes this year, trainer Woody Stephens said Thursday, "because none of them is worth much."

Stephens will saddle Caveat in a bid for a second straight victory in the 1½-mile Belmont. Last year, he won with Conquistador Cielo.

Also entered for the Belmont, which marks the 10th anniversary of Secretariat's 31-length victory which made him the first Triple Crown champion in 25 years, will be Deputed Testimony, the Preakness winner; Slew O'

Gold, a son of 1977 Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew, and High Honors.

Missing will be Sunny's Halo, the Kentucky Derby winner, who was sixth in the Preakness, and Desert Wine, second in both the Derby and Preakness. Sunny's Halo is the first Derby winner to miss the Belmont since Dust Commander in 1970.

If all 15 start, under 126 pounds each, the richest Belmont will be worth $358,500, with $215,100 to the winner.

Post time is 5:35 p.m. EDT, with CBS televising from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The most Belmont starters were 14 in 1875, when Calvin won. There were 13 horses each in 1877, when Cloverbrook won, and in 1977, when Pass Catcher won as Canonero II finished fourth in a bid for the Triple Crown.

Slew O' Gold, who was fourth in the 1¼-mile Derby and skipped the 1 3-16-mile Preakness, will try to duplicate the feat of his half-brother Coastal in 1979.

Slew O' Gold, ridden by Angel Cordero Jr., prepped for the Belmont with a sizzling 12-length victory in the 1¼-mile Peter Pan May 29 at Belmont.

That performance pushed the Equequity Stable colt, who drew the rail Thursday, into the early 2-1 favorite's role.

Second at 5-2 is Caveat, the Kentucky Derby third-place finisher owned by August Belmont IV.

Players voice opinions in favor of guarantees

LONDON (AP) — The first breeze of a tennis players' revolt over the Guillermo Vilas case is ruffling the leaves around the Queen's Club.

Stars competing in the Stella Artois tournament, a warm-up event on grass courts before Wimbledon, are lining up behind Guillermo Vilas and making unfriendly remarks about the Men's International Professional Tennis Council.

Vilas was suspended for a year and fined $20,000 because he is alleged to have taken appearance money for a tournament in Rotterdam, Netherlands, in addition to the approved prize money and expenses.

"What is wrong with paying appearance money?" said John McEnroe.

"The rules are killing tennis," said Jimmy Connors. "Why don't they let the players get on with the game?"

"To make an example of one man is ridiculous," said Ivan Lendl.

The last time anything like this happened before Wimbledon was in 1973, when Nikki Pilic was suspended because he refused to play for Yugoslavia in a Davis Cup match.

That sparked the bitterest row in tennis history and all but a handful of the top players boycotted. Connors, defending champion and top seed, beat Hank Pfister 6-4, 6-2.

McEnroe, seeded to meet Connors in Sunday's final, defeated Cassio Motta of Brazil 7-5, 6-2, while the third-seeded Lendl mastered Paul McNamee of Australia 6-2, 6-2.

Friday's quarterfinal play has Connors against No. 5 Steve Denton, Lendl taking on No. 13 Tim Mayotte, South Africa's Kevin Curren, the No. 6 seed, playing Australian Pat Cash and No. 8 Brian Gottfried meeting McEnroe.

Golf Roundup

Lively Hallberg leads by shot

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Gary Hallberg had two people to thank for helping him to a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $450,000 Manufacturers Hanover Westchester Golf Classic.

"Golf is fun again," Hallberg said after his 4-under-par 67 Thursday on the suddenly-difficult Westchester Country Club course. The suburban New York layout often yields some of the lowest scores on the Tour but allowed only six rounds in the 60s in the opening round.

"For two years, I didn't even want to play," said Hallberg, who broke a lengthy slump with a victory in San Diego early this season. "For two years I didn't want to play. I didn't want to practice. I didn't want to get out of bed."

"But now, golf is fun again. I can't wait to get started."

Responsibility for the change in attitude is divided. On a long-range basis, Hallberg cited Hank Haney, a Texas teaching pro who has helped him turn his game around, he said.

On a more immediate basis, there's Fuzzy Zoeller.

"I have a tendency to get up-tight," said Hallberg, who had the free-spirit Zoeller as his first round playing partner. "You know Fuzzy. He's a real loose kind of guy, always cracking jokes, making the gallery laugh all the time. He kept me relaxed."

"He doesn't know it, but he was instrumental in me having a good round."

The group at 70 included Jack Renner, Jay Haas, Gibby Gilbert, Mike McCullough, Keith Fergus and Bruce Fleisher.

Red Sox down Oilers twice

Home runs by Fernie Paradez and Jesse Olague keyed an 8-7 victory in the first game and the Red Sox went to sweep the Cunningham Oilers Sunday in a semi-pro baseball doubleheader.

The Sox ran away with the second game 15-4 but almost didn't pull out the opener.

Paradez blasted a grand slam homer and Olague a two-run shot to get the Sox started. The Oilers, paced by Joe Justice's two-run homer, chipped away until they put the tying and winning runs on base with one out in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Relays from outfielder Ernest Garcia to infielder Melchie Sarmiento cut down the tying run at the plate after a basehit and the Sox got the final out on a force play.

Adam Yanez had three hits for the Sox while John Carr had two safeties for the Oilers.

John Morelino, Steve Hedges and Abel Morelino hit home runs in the second game as the Sox won easily. Justice homered again for the Oilers while David Barbee had two hits.

Luis Rodriguez, 7-2, was the winning pitcher.

The Sox are now 13-4 for the year and host the Abilene Cardinals Sunday in a 1:30 p.m. twinbill at Anderson.

Pandas win a UGSA pair

The Purple Pandas won twice this week in United Girls Softball Association Division I games.

In a make-up game Tuesday night, the Pandas crushed the Angels 16-0 as Pam Gill tossed a two-hit shutout. Rhonda Latimer had two hits while Gill helped herself out with a grand slam home run in the third inning.

Terri Chester and Shawna Nichols had the two Angel hits.

The Pandas also won Monday night, outscoring the Angels 20-19. Gill and Jennifer Hernandez had two hits each among 10 for the winners. Gill's hit were both two-run homers.

Rosalyn Smith went 4-for-4 for the Angels while Sherrie Dolan had three hits and Jennifer Crawford two.

Y sets afternoon open swim

The Big Spring YMCA is hosting a youth open swim daily from 2:30-3:30 p.m.

A lifeguard will be on duty. Cost per child is 75 cents.

Pee-wees plan city tourney

A pee-wee baseball city championship tournament is in the works after the regular season ends June 11.

League champions from Big Spring will play in the tournament. Contact Zeke Munoz at 267-7124 or Joe Martinez at 263-8778 for more information.

Local tennis camp set in July

The annual summer tennis camp is scheduled in two sessions Big Spring High coach Alan Holliday has announced.

The camps are slated July 11-15 and again July 18-22 at the Figure Seven Tennis Center. Fee for the week-long session is $27. Registration begins Monday and runs through July 8.

Instruction will be given in fundamentals, emphasizing forehand and backhand groundstrokes and serving. A round-robin tournament will conclude each session.

To register, call Big Spring High at 263-7461 (ask for Mrs. Mathews) or go by the high school and fill out entry blank.

Club event starts Saturday

The annual Big Spring Country Club June Partnership is scheduled Saturday and Sunday.

The two-man, low-ball event begins with shotgun starts at 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. both days.

Semi-pro teams play Sunday

The Big Spring Cardinals and Red Sox semi-pro baseball teams are in town this weekend.

The Cards host the Hobbs A's Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at the Anderson Complex. On the adjoining field, the Sox test the Abilene Cardinals, also in a 1:30 p.m. twinbill.

Chicano golfers set tourney

The Chicano Golf Association is hosting a Louisiana Draw Sunday at the Comanche Trails Golf Course.

Entry is $5 plus CGA membership. Entry deadline is 10 a.m. with play beginning at 10:30 a.m. A barbecue will follow.

Jefferson, Snyder advance to finals

AUSTIN (AP) — Players from Port Arthur Jefferson and Klein sat on a dark field waiting for the lights to come on, and after they did, Xavier Hernandez of Jefferson turned out the lights again for Klein, 1-0.

Hernandez tossed a one-hitter, struck out 10 and walked only one to raise his season record to 19-1.

Only David Larson of Brazosport, who had 21 victories in 1966, has won more games in a single season in Texas schoolboy history.

The Yellow Jackets, advancing to the tournament for the first time since 1956, will play free-swinging Corpus Christi Moody for the Class 5A baseball championship tonight.

Moody beat El Paso Burges 4-1, with Ricky Gomez knocking in two runs and Danny Aleman twirling a four-hitter.

The Class 4A title game was set up when DeSoto, a champion in 1979, edged Austin Westlake 3-2 and Snyder nipped New Braunfels 4-3.

A widespread power blackout that forced Jefferson and Klein to wait for two hours to start their Thursday night game cancelled the 3A semifinal games at another field, and they were rescheduled for today.

All five championship games were set for today, including the 3A title game, almost immediately after the second 3A semifinal contest. Kenedy and Alvarado and La Grange and Gladewater were matched in the 3A semifinals.

In 2A play Thursday, Pollok Central upset defending champion Southlake Carroll 5-1 on Charlie McLendon's five-hitter, and Gladewater Union Grove defeated Troy 8-2.

Cayuga beat Prosper 5-1, and Valley Mills eliminated Windthorst 6-1 in the Class A semifinals.

After the lights came on Thursday night, Jefferson scored the game's only run in the third inning on Trace Hammond's infield hit to third, which third baseman Stanley Chapman threw wild to first. Hammond went to second on the play, advanced to third on a sacrifice bunt by Mitch Gaspard and scored on a wild pitch by losing pitcher Kyle Atkinson.

Mariners finally score, top Texas

SEATTLE (AP) — With the Seattle Mariners going a long time between runs, relief pitchers like Bill Caudill can face a tough challenge every night.

Caudill met the demand Thursday night, yielding only a single to the first batter he faced and then retiring the remaining nine batters for his first victory after three losses as the Mariners nipped the Texas Rangers 3-2 in 11 innings.

While Caudill has made 13 of 15 potential saves, Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann has been concerned about his team's sagging offense.

Shortstop Todd Cruz, who had to talk his way out of being benched, ended two long dry spells for the Mariners with a home run in the fifth inning and the game-winning blow, a two-out single in the 11th.

Besides ending his own drought, Cruz's homer ended 23 scoreless innings and a three-game losing streak for the Mariners.

Tigers 8, Red Sox 2

Detroit's street corners will be buzzing with this one, Tigers right-hander Dan Petry says.

It will be a source of pride for a long time. The Detroit Tigers came into unfriendly Fenway Park four days ago at an even 500, 25-25. They left it with a record of 29-25 and their first four-game sweep of Boston at Fenway since 1973, knocking the Red Sox out of first place in the American League East.

The Tigers now have won five in a row and 12 of their last 15.

Petry, 6-3, capped the series with a five-hitter, beating Boston 8-2 Thursday night with the help of a six-run fifth inning. Kirk Gibson had a bases-loaded triple in the spree.

The loss dropped Boston into fourth, one game behind Detroit and four behind the division-leading Baltimore Orioles, who beat Milwaukee 10-8 despite committing a club record-tying six infield errors.

Orioles 10, Brewers 8

Leo Hernandez's three-run homer sparked Baltimore's seven-run first inning, and the Orioles blundered their way to a fourth straight victory, including eight-inning bouncer up the first-base line that turned into a tie-breaking triple when Chris Chambliss failed to short-hop the ball.

"It was cheap, but I'll take it," Yeager said. "I couldn't have placed it any better."

National League

Pirates 6, Expos 3

Tony Pena drove in three runs with a single and a double and Larry McWilliams survived 10 Montreal hits and hit a two-run double in Pittsburgh's romp against Steve Rogers, the ace of the Expos' pitching staff.

The Pirates raked Rogers for 11 hits and all of their runs in 4 2-3 innings, his earliest departure since Sept. 17, 1981. "I wasn't getting what I thought were strikes at the bottom of the strike zone," he said. "There was nothing wrong with me physically, so I guess it was a mechanical thing."

Phillies 6, Cardinals 5

St. Louis' hard-luck hurler, Joaquin Andujar, took a four-hitter and a 5-1 lead into the eighth inning. But Pete Rose doubled, Greg Gross and Joe Lefebvre singled for a run, then Joe Morgan hit his second homer of the game and fifth of the year to tie it up.

And in the 11th, Von Hayes reached base on a one-out error by shortstop Ozzie Smith and Rose singled Hayes to third. When Gross failed to make contact on an attempted suicide squeeze, Hayes was trapped and tagged out. But Rose took second during the rundown and raced home with the winning run when Bob Dernier singled up the middle.

Mets 6, Cubs 4

New York, limited to one hit through seven innings, woke up with four runs in the eighth. And after Chicago tied it in the ninth, the Mets won it in the 11th on Bob Bailor's two-out, two-run double.

Mike Proly retired the first two batters in the 11th before Mike Jorgensen, who had triggered the big eighth with a pinch-double, doubled again. Danny Heep was intentionally walked before Bailor delivered.

Dodgers 4, Braves 2

Steve Yeager drove in all of the Dodgers' runs, three of them with an

Gamblers sign Kelly

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly will be to the fledgling United States Football League what Joe Namath was to the American Football League, says the managing general partner of the team that signed him.

Kelly, a University of Miami athlete who signed a multi-year contract with the newly chartered Houston Gamblers Thursday, was the 14th player chosen in the National Football League draft.

Jerry Argovitz compared Kelly to Namath, who signed a $400,000 contract with the New York Jets in 1965.

American League

Royals 6, Twins 5

Pat Sheridan drove in Kansas City's winning run in the eighth inning with a squeeze bunt. Hal McRae led off the eighth with a single, but when Willie Aikens doubled, McRae came up lame at third. Onix Concepcion ran for McRae and scored on Sheridan's bunt.

The Royals started the winning inning against Twins reliever Rick Lysander, who lost for the sixth time in seven decisions. Kansas City reliever Rick Castro got the win, and Dan Quisenberry earned his 15th save by pitching the ninth.

A's 3, Blue Jays 1

Tom Underwood checked Toronto on four hits over 7 1-3 innings, combining with Steve Baker on a six-hitter, and Wayne Gross gave the A's an insurance run with a homer in the eighth inning. The victory was the sixth in eight games for the A's.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

Tommy John logged his fourth straight winning decision, scattering 10 hits in his sixth complete game of the year. John yielded only two unearned runs and, over his last 27 innings' work, has given up just two earned runs for an ERA of 0.67.

The Angels erased a 2-1 Chicago lead with two runs in the seventh, ignited by Juan Beniquez's third single of the game. Ron Jackson followed with a single, and Doug DeCinces walked to load the bases. Fred Lynn's grounder tied the score 2-2, and, after Bobby Grich was walked intentionally, Bobby Clark drove in the game-winner with a sacrifice fly.

Bench retiring this year

ATLANTA (AP) —

Johnny Bench, who built Hall of Fame credentials for 13 major-league seasons as a catcher for the Cincinnati Reds, will retire at the end of the 1983 season, a team spokesman said Thursday night.

Bench, in his 16th season with the Reds, has told club President Dick Wagner that he doesn't plan to play beyond this year, Reds publicity director Jim Ferguson said.

Bench, who was selected to the National League All-Star team 13 times, and twice was the league's Most Valuable Player, called a Friday morning news conference to announce his decision.

Bench, 35, is batting .283 with six homers and 31 RBI this season following his least productive year in 1982. He batted .258 with 13 homers and 38 RBI last season, when he switched to playing third base full time.

The Oklahoma native broke in with the Reds in 1967 and became their regular catcher the next year. He holds records for most career home runs by a catcher, 324, and equaled Bill Dickey's major-league record by catching 100 or more games in 13 consecutive years through 1980.

There was no immediate indication of Bench's future plans.

Bench, who is single and lives in Cincinnati, hosts a nationally syndicated television program called "The Baseball Bunch," which teaches children baseball fundamentals and has won programming awards. He also has part interest in a Cincinnati restaurant and does public relations for a local bank.

In 1970, he slugged a career-high 45 homers and drove in a career-high 148 runs — both tops in the league — and he led the Reds to the NL pennant, although they lost to Baltimore in the World Series. Two years later, the Reds also lost in the World Series to Oakland after Bench hit 40 homers and drove in 125 runs, again both league highs.

Bench led the league in RBI with 129 in 1974, and was a fixture on the team that won consecutive world championships in 1975-76. He batted .533 against the New York Yankees in the 1976 World Series, hitting two homers and driving in six runs to win MVP honors.

His retirement would further break up the "Big Red Machine" that included Pete Rose, Joe Morgan, Tony Perez, George Foster and Ken Griffey, all of whom are now with other teams.

During his 13 seasons behind the plate, Bench was known as a defensive as well as an offensive standout because of his strong and accurate arm and reliable glove. He won 10 consecutive Gold Glove awards between 1968-1977 as the NL's best defensive catcher.

Bench has suffered from numerous physical ailments in recent years, and he was asked to catch no more than two games a week following the 1980 season.

He hit .309 in the strike-shortened 1981 season, when he broke his ankle while sliding into second base, and was sidelined for several months.

Fratello named Atlanta coach

ATLANTA (AP) — Mike Fratello, who was an assistant with Atlanta for four seasons before leaving a year ago, was named Thursday as head coach of the National Basketball Association Hawks.

Fratello, who moved on to the New York Knickerbockers last season as an assistant under former Atlanta head coach Hubie Brown, replaces Kevin Loughery, who quit Monday to take the Chicago Bulls head coaching position.

Hawks General Manager Stan Kasten told a news conference that Fratello was signed to a three-year contract, but he declined to disclose the terms.

It will be the first head coaching job for the 36-year-old Fratello, who coached on the high school and college levels for 11 years before entering the NBA.

"I'm real happy to be back," said Fratello after being reintroduced to the media in Atlanta. "It's ironic that I left Atlanta and am coming back after only a year."

Loughery, who replaced the fired Brown at the start of the 1981-82 season, guided the Hawks to 42-40 mark that season and 43-39 record this past season. Atlanta made the playoffs both seasons but was eliminated in the first round.

Fratello said he interviewed for one other head coaching job, at San Diego, but the Hawks contacted him shortly after it appeared Loughery was leaving.

"I spoke to them on the phone, and the Hawks asked if I were interested in the job," Fratello said. "That was our initial contact, and then when Kevin decided to leave they got back to me and we talked."

Kasten said Fratello "is energetic, enthusiastic and a tremendously hard worker. This is a great moment for the organization, in that Mike entered the NBA with the Hawks and is now returning to Atlanta, the place where he started, as the head coach."

Fratello becomes the fifth Hawks coach since the club moved to Atlanta from St. Louis in 1968. He follows Richie Guerin, Cotton Fitzsimmons, Brown and Loughery.

Spurs look at McHone

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio assistant coach Morris McHone is a "serious candidate" for the Spurs' heading coach job, which should be filed by the weekend, the president of the National Basketball Association club says.

Former head coach Stan Albeck was hired this week by the New Jersey Nets.

Spurs president Angelo Drossos said Thursday that McHone is "someone who is very important to this franchise."

"Morris McHone will be with this franchise a very long time, in what capacity I cannot say at this time," Drossos said, refusing to elaborate.

San Antonio General Manager Bob Bass stopped short of calling McHone, who has been a Spurs assistant the past three years, management's No. 1 choice.

"I think he's a definite prospect," Bass said. "I'll give him one thing. He's got experience — not as a head coach — but he's got a good basketball background."

McHone said he felt "good" about his chances.

"I haven't been told yes, but I haven't been told no," McHone said. "If it happened fast, I think I would have the inside track."

Albeck, who left San Antonio after a bitter court fight with Drossos, made it plain he thought McHone should be named head coach.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

By Sherry Wegner

If you happened to have seen a red-headed sleepwalker carrying a briefcase, contact case, overnight case & a large purse, with straight or wet hair & no make-up on at 6:51 a.m., that was me going to work. If you noticed a dark red flash at 6:30 a.m. on the highway, that was me also, rushing my daughter to her "crack of dawn" Driver's Ed. class. If in the future you see a female carrying a large protest sign (outlawing D.E. classes that begin before 7:00 a.m.) that will probably be me, too!

If you see a lot of cars parked in front of Big Spring Seed & Chemical, 602 N.E. 2nd, that is a bunch of wise shoppers who know where to get quality feed & seed at a low price. We have a good supply of Red Top Cane, Milo, Pearl Millet & Hybrid Sudan grasses & Zipp fertilizer.

"The biggest goal for our church, I feel, is to strengthen our home and our family," said the Rev. Charles Jones, pastor of Airport Baptist Church.

"Right now in America, the divorce rate is 55 percent. The reason for this is that Satan knows if he can destroy the home, the churches will be weak and soon enough the country will be destroyed," he said. "God hates divorce."

"As far as the goal (is concerned), I'm praying that all pastors will preach in the same spirit and power that John the Baptist did," Jones said. "Part of his purpose was to turn the hearts of the fathers back to the children, and the hearts of the children back to their fathers."

"Parents need to start realizing their responsibility to their children and to quit being so selfish with their time and energy," he said. "If for no other reason than to keep their home together for the sake of the children because they are ruining their lives."

"Parents need to realize that if they just send their kids to church and don't go themselves that their actions are teaching their children that Jesus Christ is not very important and the church he died for is not worth going to," he said. "Actions speak louder than words."

Jones' parents took him regularly to church. "I know that had a real influence in my life, because they cared enough to take me to church instead of just sending me," Jones was so bad he would rather be at school than at home. "Another student, a year ago, went from an 'A' student to barely passing overnight, because his mom and dad got a divorce," he said. "He turned from a very respectful and courteous student to very rebellious and even hateful to all authorities."

From what Jones has seen in the school system, 70 percent of the kids, at least, come from broken homes. "In my oldest son's (8 years old) class, he is in the minority because he still has his original mom and dad."

What hurts is a lack of honesty in our society, Jones said. A yes should be a yes, and a no should be a no. It shouldn't be anything more or less.

"People promise to come to church, then don't. People say they will do something for the Lord; then they don't keep that promise," he said. "It's a lack of responsibility and a lack of commitment."

"People do what is most important to them," Jones said. "If anything better comes along, they will often put the church aside and will let their responsibility to Christ and the church be cast aside."

"My prayers are that everyone will start putting God first, their family second, their jobs third, and everything else in fourth place," he said.

Jones enjoys preaching. "I like preaching because God put that desire in me, and I'm not happy unless I do get to do it," he said. "I like knowing that my job counts for now and eternity, and that I have a real purpose for my life." Jones attended Howard College for two years and received a degree from Texas Tech University. Jones and his wife, Rhonda, have three sons, Andy, 8, Aaron, 5, and Adam, 2.

Pastors receive new posts

Fifty-nine new pastoral appointments for United Methodist Churches throughout Northwest Texas were announced June 2 during the Northwest Texas Conference's annual meetings at the First United Methodist Church in Lubbock.

Sixty-four churches will be receiving new pastors and associate pastors as a result of actions taken by the Conference's Cabinet and Bishop Louis W. Schwegler, who presided over the meetings.

Some of the changes in the Big Spring District were: Gene B. Louder of Darrouzett will replace Roy Havens as the pastor of Ackert United Methodist Church in Anton.

Noble R. Wiltshire of Eunice, N.M. will replace James Taylor as pastor of the Wesley Methodist Church in Andrews. Taylor will pastor at the church in Kress.

Loren W. Gardner of Roby is the pastor for North Birdwell Lane UMC and Coahoma UMC. He replaces James McWilliams and Lou Anne Wise who are taking leaves.

John T. Robertson of Lubbock succeeds W.O. Rucker as pastor of Wesley United Church. Rucker is taking a disability leave.

L. Henry Salley succeeds M. Ronald Hamby as pastor of the First UMC of Colorado City.

James J. Bryant succeeds Hazel House as the pastor of the St. Luke's UMC and Dorn UMC.

Alvareta G. Richards of Jayton will replace Charles Lummus as pastor of Loraine/Westbrook UMC.

Elmer E. Ward of Aspermont will replace Michael Hinton as pastor at the O'Donnell/Draw UMC. Hinton will pastor at Vega UMC.

At the conference, two Big Spring men were chosen as delegates to represent the NWTC of United Methodist Church at the South Central Jurisdictional Conference in Lubbock in July 1984.

Rex Mauldin, superintendent of Big Spring District of the Northwest Texas Conference, was one of nine clergy delegates elected to attend from the NWTC of the United Methodist Church.

Bob Crowell, a member of the First United Methodist Church, was elected as an alternate for the lay delegates.

School ends tonight

The First Church of the Nazarene will conclude its vacation Bible School, tonight. Darlene Laws directed the Bible school. "The Family of God" was the theme. Activities included Bible study, music, crafts, scripture memorization and a night visit from "The Brown Family" puppets.

VBS students will present a program at 10:45 a.m., Sunday, in the temporary sanctuary. Following the presentation, Dr. Carl Powers, pastor, will give a sermon especially for children.

"Sunday Night Live" with music directed by Jerry McGuire and featuring various members of the congregation will begin at 6 p.m.

Bible school slated

Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2107 Lancaster, will have a vacation Bible School, June 13-17, from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. Classes from nursery to sixth grade will be offered.

Mabel Kirkland is VBS director. For bus rides, call 7-2304, 3-2997 or 7-4609.

Church has carnival

College Baptist Church, 1105 Birdwell Lane, will have a carnival, Saturday from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m., to raise money for a mission trip.

Tickets will be 25 cents for each booth. Examples of booths are a dunking booth, a kissing booth, a car wash, and a jail house. Refreshments will also be on sale.

Convention to be held

The Great Plains-Cap Rock Gospel Singing Convention will be held at the Cap Rock Auditorium in Stanton, Saturday and Sunday. The convention is set for 7 p.m. Saturday and 10 p.m. Sunday.

Officers for the convention are Woodson Campbell, president, Grady Standefer of Stanton, vice-president, and Verla Doggett of Stanton, secretary.

The annual convention draws gospel singers from Stanton, Lubbock, Dallas, Big Spring, Midland, Abilene, Levelland, Fort Worth, and all parts of New Mexico. The gathering of gospel music buffs is free and the public is invited to attend.

Cook out to be held

Immaculate Heart of Mary Singles Support Group is sponsoring a cook out at Moss Creek for singles of all faiths, Sunday at 3 p.m. Those going are to meet at the Ranger Station and bring meat. RSVP will be appreciated. Call 7-7104 before noon Saturday or Sunday.

Program presented

Virginia Chapell, stewardship director, presented a program at the monthly meeting of the Women of the First Church of God, June 6, in the church sanctuary.

The program, a pictorial review of "God's Creative Wonders About Us," was to inspire each woman to "recycle" her own concern for stewardship. The Christian woman is aware that God is the Planner and Designer of this world which bears the stamp of his craftsmanship.

Betty Reagan presented the worship. Anna Smith, Texas president of Women of the Church of God, will attend the National WCG board meeting during the International Convention in Anderson, Ind., June 11-20. The next meeting will be July 5 in the sanctuary.

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 11, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to spend planning various outlets of a broad and comprehensive nature. Afterwards, go shopping and do errands which should claim some of your time and attention.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Converse with allies about new enterprises. Pay calls on key persons and get right results. Contact friends this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study work ahead and figure out where co-workers can fit in best for efficiency and harmony. Be clever.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan sports activities to help you have a fine, trim figure. A friend or two around can make the day more enjoyable.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Talk over with kin how to make the future more secure. Later, spend time at some form of recreation to relieve tension.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show that you are willing to cooperate more in the future. Get together with friends in the afternoon. Drive carefully.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get in touch with powerful people who are difficult to reach during the week. Get busy on outside tasks awaiting your attention.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try a new tack where personal goals are concerned. A current project could spell success or failure. Be careful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make secret plans to produce fine results in your career. Solve problems wisely. Go out and enjoy yourself tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Give a helping hand to those who have done you favors in the past. Express your gratitude through generosity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Look to experts for ideas so you can produce more work in the days ahead. Get busy with the paint brush and bucket.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are highly inspired today. Contact people who can help you. Go to see them, but take care while driving.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Improve your work situation and plan for the future. Find a way to improve your relationship with your loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will view situations from the broadest angles. Plan for an education that will equip your progeny for a big job and much success. Stress study in foreign languages. Spectator sports will be of much interest.

Pryor back on top after fire

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In June, 1980, Richard Pryor's life almost ended in an explosion of "free-base" cocaine he was mixing at his San Fernando Valley home.

Three years later, the comedian-actor seems finally to be at peace with himself, his recovery signaled by a new $40 million contract that makes him the virtual king of the movie business.

Columbia Pictures has signed Pryor to a deal that seems unmatched in the film world, now or in the past. During the next five years, the new Pryor Co. will make four movies with creative freedom — as long as they remain within the $5 million to $6 million budgets.

Pryor does not expect to appear in those films, but he will star in three Columbia films, reportedly at his regular film price of $5 million plus a percentage of the profits.

Three years ago, Pryor suffered third-degree burns in an explosion and fire from the mixing cocaine and a flammable liquid. The fire melted his polyester shirt over the upper half of his body and burned his face, and he was given a one-in-three chance of survival.

However, after receiving skin grafts, he walked out of a hospital six weeks later. It was a time when Richard Pryor seemed intent on destroying himself with dope and liquor.

"I never liked myself," he recalled. "You know the saying that 'People who are loved don't love themselves.' That was the way it was with me. My work was being accepted, but I was the last person in the world to realize it. I continued driving myself until I worked myself into the ground."

"Now I'm saying, 'Stop the train.' I'm the engineer, and I'm telling the passengers, 'Sorry, folks, we're going to make an unauthorized stop. We'll get going again, but not right now.'"

"If they don't want to wait, let 'em take off. But right now I'm setting the schedule, and I'm not gonna hurry. It takes time to break old habits."

On the eve of the release of his latest film, "Superman III," Pryor, 42, sat down for an interview in the suburban Los Angeles home where he almost burned himself to death. He uses the place as the base for his business, but he obviously prefers his other home, at Hana on the Hawaiian island of Maui.

"I fell in love with the place, bought some property and built a house that was finished in 1980; thank God I lived to see it," he said.

"What do I do there? I fish and I don't think. The locals are wonderful, they have accepted me. I'm not 'Richard Pryor' there. I don't feel like a movie star. I feel like myself, and I feel loved."

Columbia has proposed three films for Pryor: "The Charlie Parker Story," biography of the great jazz saxophonist; "Double Whoopee," a re-teaming with Gene Wilder; and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles."

Although his one-man concert films have been big moneymakers, Pryor has decided to eschew standup comedy for the present.

"I've been working at the Comedy Store (nightclub) for the past month and a half," he remarked, "and it has been a hard process. I tried to do material I had never done before, but it was difficult because of what I am. I found myself just going for the laughs, like a comic or something. I finally said, 'Stop this! I'm not going back until I've got something to say.'"

Pryor observed that he had used liquor and dope because "I was not man enough to face myself; I was frightened, afraid to tell the truth.... I made a lot of mistakes, but I also made a lot of right decisions. I'm just lucky to be able to look back at it now."

FDA called upon to prove contraceptive sponge is safe

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has failed to prove that a new contraceptive sponge will not lead to cancer or toxic shock syndrome, a consumer group charged today.

The Today sponge, made of absorbent polyurethane impregnated with spermicide, has received FDA approval to be sold nationwide this summer by VLI Corp. of Costa Mesa, Calif.

The Empire State Consumer Association said today that some types of polyurethane have been shown to cause tumors in laboratory animals, and that the absorbency of the sponges might lead to toxic shock syndrome in women who use them while menstruating.

Toxic shock occurred in large numbers of women who had used extra-absorbent tampons.

"We want the FDA to prove without a doubt that this is not dangerous to human beings," association president Judy Braiman-Lipson said.

Mrs. Braiman-Lipson said her organization sent the FDA a petition May 31 asking that approval for the sponge be withdrawn.

In Washington, FDA spokesman William Grigg said today his office had not yet received the petition and he could not comment on it.

Dr. Bruce Vorhauer, inventor of the sponge, dismissed fears that the polyurethane might cause cancer. "We've passed every single test," Vorhauer said by telephone Wednesday from his California office.

The consumer association said an FDA statistician testified in a hearing that the number of women in a VLI study on the potential for toxic shock syndrome was too small to draw any conclusions.

"Based on the results of the study, we really don't know because the number of women in the study was small," Dr. Hoi Leung told a fertility and maternal healthy drugs advisory committee, according to a transcript obtained by the consumer association.

The company also failed to complete animal tests that would have shown whether the polyurethane might disintegrate in the vagina and cause tumors, said Dr. Armand Leone of the Washington-based Associated Pharmacologists and Toxicologists, a non-profit research and education group.

Leone said today that VLI Corp. argued that the sponge's spermicide would kill any bacteria that might lead to toxic shock syndrome. But he said the experiment — involving a sponge and bacteria in a laboratory beaker — was invalid because "the sponge is not going to be placed in a clean beaker."

The sponge must be left in the vagina for six hours after sexual intercourse and may be left in for as long as 24 hours. Mrs. Braiman-Lipson said the long period increases the possibility of injury, particularly if women begin menstruating soon after intercourse.

But Dr. Ruth Schwartz, an obstetrics and gynecology professor at the University of Rochester, told the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle the sponge was soft so it should not irritate the vaginal walls the way tampons do, and she said it normally would not be worn during menstruation.

Older women take time for families

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who postponed starting families for college and career are taking time out to have children in sharply higher numbers, a new Census Bureau study discloses.
 On average, there were 73.5 children born for every 1,000 American women aged 30 to 34, the new fertility report shows. It covers the year which ended last June.
 By contrast, two years earlier the same age group averaged only 60 births per 1,000 women.
 Carolyn C. Rogers of the Census Bureau's population division observed that the birthrate increase among women over 30 seems to be a result of females, now secure in careers, who feel they are able to take time out to have a child.
 In the past two decades a growing number of women chose to attend college and begin careers, postponing marriage and families, she commented, "motherhood wasn't the only career available."
 Now they are established in jobs and can begin families. She noted that a large proportion of the newly arriving children of women aged 30 to 34 are first births.

 Also a part of the trend, Ms. Rogers added, is a fear by some women that they will become too old to have children.
 Observing that there has been a basic pattern of social change affecting women, she said it seems likely that the trend toward childbearing among older women will continue, as college and career come first.
 The jump in births among women over 30 came as the overall fertility of American women dropped slightly, from 71.1 to 70.5 children per 1,000 women.
 And a sharp decline in birth rates was posted by women aged 18 to 24, whose fertility dropped from 96.6 children per 1,000 women in 1980 to 88.3 in 1982.
 The new study showed that black women had a higher fertility rate than whites, 83.6 out of every 1,000 black women having had a child in the past year, compared to 68.1 for every 1,000 white women. Hispanic women averaged 97.9 births per 1,000.

 Currently married women had 95.1 births per 1,000, with 30.9 births per 1,000 single women and 26.3 for every 1,000 who are divorced or widowed.
 Under educational attainment, women who had not finished high school had the highest fertility rate, with high school graduates second and college graduates third.
 Unemployed women were more likely to have had children in the previous year than working women. But among working women, blue collar workers had the highest fertility rate at 48.4 births per 1,000. Sales workers had the lowest rate, 30.5.
 Regionally, residents of the West had the highest fertility, having 75.9 babies per 1,000 women. They were followed by the North Central states, 72.5, the South, 71.9, and the Northeast, 60.8.

Cocaine's price stops some users

SUMMIT, N.J. (AP) — Cocaine's price, not its harmful side effects, is the primary deterrent to further consumption among young, upwardly mobile users, says a physician who runs a national cocaine telephone hotline.
 Dr. Mark Gold, who directs research at Fair Oaks Hospital, said he drew his conclusions from interviews with 150 callers to the cocaine hotline, dubbed 800-COCAINE for its toll-free number.
 Only the price of cocaine consumption — ranging from $50 to more than $8,000 a week — seemed to serve as a deterrent, he said Thursday.
 "The majority of cocaine user callers suffer physical and psychological problems which they attribute to the drug, but this recognition does not make them stop using it or prompt them to seek treatment," Gold said.
 Fair Oaks, a private psychiatric and drug rehabilitation hospital, started the around-the-clock hotline after receiving an "unbelievable" number of inquiries from users around the country, said Jeffery Shore, who supervises the 12 hospital counselors staffing the hotline.

 The service, which provides information and referrals, has received more than 30,000 calls since it began May 6, Gold said.
 Gold said the interviews indicate that cocaine is an addictive drug, although many in the medical community dispute that finding.
 "The research thus far has been very extreme," he said. "The single dose given in research is on one side of the spectrum and on the other side are the coroners (who report on overdose victims). In the middle is where all these people are and that is totally uncharted territory."
 "We have found that these people are falling apart. They are attempting to keep themselves afloat. They know they are going downhill, but they can't stop themselves. That's the closest evidence for this drug being addictive as anything."

 Based on interviews, Gold described the typical cocaine user as a 30-year-old male professional, college educated, with little previous drug experience "who found cocaine was useful as almost a self-medication for giving a sense of confidence, enthusiasm and energy."
 Spontaneous attacks of remorse, depression and fearfulness were reported by the largest number of respondents, and almost half those surveyed considered suicide, he said. Callers also mentioned memory loss, problems with concentration, headaches, nose bleeds, insomnia, loss of energy and reduced sex drive, Gold said.
 "Loss of concentration and memory were of most concern to attorneys, financial experts and
