Texans bet on lottery

Voters overwhelmingly OK state-run game

Midlanders narrowly defeat proposal

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midlanders shot down the lottery by a narrow margin, but gave a strong show of support for a bond issue to build prisons in Tuesday's constitutional amendments election.

About 30 percent of Midland County's 47,488 registered voters participated in the election, in keeping with the projections of Elections Administrator Bettye F. Calvert.

"The turnout was very good considering it was constitutional amendments," Ms. Calvert said. "It's always more glamorous when there are people on the ballot.

"We weren't as spirited about the lottery in this county as in some others," she said. "There was no big registration drive by any group — pro or con."

AUSTIN (AP) — Lottery hit the winning number Tuesday.

Texas voters overwhelmingly approved a constitutional amendment to lift a 146-year-old ban and allow the state to begin operating the gambling game.

Backers hailed it as a shot in the arm for the state budget. Opponents said it would encourage gambling and not prevent higher taxes.

With 83 percent of precincts reporting, lottery Proposition 11 had received 1,081,946 votes or 64 percent in favor, to 607,189 votes, 36 percent, against.

Comptroller John Sharp said instant games would start by July 1, 1992, with computerized "lotto" games beginning in January 1993. The lottery is estimated to generate $462 million for the current two-year budget cycle and $1 billion for the 1994-95 budget, he said.

Gov. Ann Richards, who had urged lawmakers to put lottery on the ballot, called its approval good news.

Gates gains confirmation as CIA chief

Gates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday overwhelmingly confirmed Robert M. Gates as head of the Central Intelligence Agency following a six-month ordeal that laid bare painful disputes within the spy agency.

The vote was 64 to 31, a strong margin despite the taint of the Iran-Contra affair that clung to Gates through much of the confirmation hearings and charges that he tailored intelligence reports to suit the political views of Reagan administration higher-ups.

Backed by a solid phalanx of Republicans, Gates benefited from a split within Democratic ranks to survive the longest and most controversial approval process ever for a CIA nominee.

Confirmation also reversed the sharpest setback in the career of Gates, whose swift rise up the CIA ladder was stymied in 1987 when President Reagan named him to head the agency but he was forced to withdraw under the cloud of Iran-Contra.

President Bush said in a statement issued after the Senate's action that the "vote is a confirmation that Bob Gates

Postal Service rejects stamp rate increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The governors of the Postal Service voted Tuesday to keep the price of a first-class stamp at 29 cents rather than raising it a penny.

But Postmaster General Anthony Frank said holding the line now means the next increase, possibly as much as a nickel, will probably come a year earlier than originally planned.

"America will likely see another postage rate increase in early 1994 — instead of 1995 — and another in 1997 or 1998," Frank said. "If we could have had a 30-cent first-class stamp we would have needed only one more rate change this decade."

Keeping the stamp price at 29 cents will cost the post office about $800 million annually, explained Frank.

Witness Rosemary Henley discusses the robber's actions.

Law officers hold suspect in bank heist

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

The search for a man suspected of robbing a Midland bank Tuesday lasted about an hour before a highway patrolman arrested him in Andrews County driving a vehicle matching the description of the getaway car, officials said.

Alvin Shinette Jr., 22, of Galveston, was charged with bank robbery. Two passengers in the car were detained and several hours later charged with bank robbery.

Witnesses said a man entered the Team Bank at 2301 W. Wall St. shortly after 1 p.m. and calmly waited in line with about 10 other customers. At 1:15 he approached the teller, motioned to a dark-colored revolver inside his leather totebag and quietly demanded money.

After stuffing the money into the bag, he ran out the bank's south doors. Federal investigators and bank officials did not release the amount taken in the heist.

Rosemary Henley of Midland was standing in line directly behind the robber. She said the man's behavior before the crime revealed nothing about his impending action.

"He was just waiting patiently with the rest of us, like a normal customer," Ms. Henley said. "I didn't suspect a thing."

Rural residents reject water annexation

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Rural Midland County voters on Tuesday rejected an offer to join the locally controlled Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District by casting 60 percent of the votes against annexation.

The vote, representing 28 percent of the 2,000 registered voters outside the city of Midland and south of Interstate 20, was 225 for annexation and 339 against joining the water district.

Mark Hoelscher, manager of the Stanton-based district that was formed in 1988 and which includes neighboring Martin County and a northwest quadrant of Howard County, was disappointed in the rejection.

"People react to volatile issues," he said, "and taxes is a volatile issue."

The district would have added a new tax — 2 cents per $100 valuation — to rural Midland County property owners.

But it was many of those large property owners, namely ranchers, farmers and other landowners, who had petitioned to join the water district and to partake of its services in fighting pollution of underground water.

"We are one of the most efficient forms of local government that you will ever find," said Hoelscher, who formerly managed the Glasscock County Under-

British publishing baron Maxwell dies in Atlantic

TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — Robert Maxwell, the flamboyant billionaire who built a global publishing empire, was found dead Tuesday in waters off the Canary Islands. He reportedly fell from his 180-foot luxury yacht.

The death of the 68-year-old publisher ended the reign of a contentious press baron who battled unions, barked out orders in eight languages and bullied editors as he built a $2 billion media conglomerate.

In the last chapter of his career, he was accused by an investigative journalist of having close links with the Israeli secret service Mossad, a charge he heatedly denied.

FDA proposes strict food label definitions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acknowledging Americans' intense concern about what they eat, the Food and Drug Administration has proposed detailed new food labels and the first strict definitions of such popular descriptions as "light," "calorie-free," and "low-cholesterol."

According to a summary of the new labeling regulations, obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press, "low-fat" means no more than 3 grams of fat per 100 grams of food — 3 percent, in other words.

The new labels will be on almost every can, box and bag of food sold by the spring of 1993 and will make it easier for consumers to find products that fit their health and diet needs.

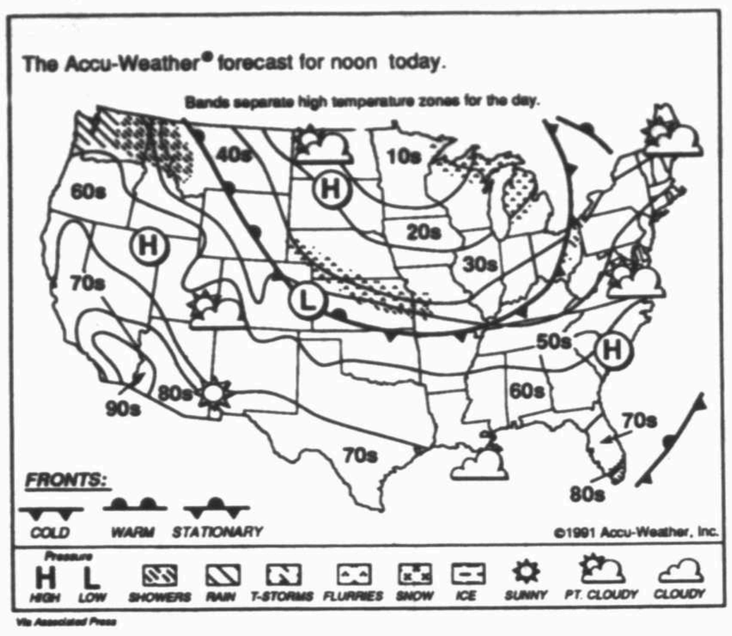
WEATHER SUMMARY



Via Associated Press

Sunny skies, low 70s on tap

The forecast for today calls for sunny skies with a high in the lower 70s and southerly winds at 5 to 15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the lower 30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be mostly sunny and cooler with a high in the upper 50s.

After an overnight low of 27, Tuesday's high reached 69 compared with the record high for that date of 83 set in 1955. The record low for that date is 21 set in 1959.

STATE

Cloudy skies covered most parts of Texas Tuesday, including almost all of South Texas, where the high temperature in Brownsville broke a record low for the third consecutive day.

Temperatures ranged from the mid-50s in the cloud-covered northern and central sections of South Texas. Some drizzle and fog remained along portions of the middle coast and in the lower Rio Grande Valley. Wind speeds were generally less than 10 mph.

The National Weather Service said the high temperature in Brownsville Tuesday was 60 degrees, breaking the previous record for Nov. 5. The lowest high temperature for this date had been 62 degrees, which was set in 1923.

It was the third consecutive day in which the lowest maximum temperature record had fallen in Brownsville, the weather service said.

NATION

Snow was scattered around the Great Lakes and northern Plains on Tuesday, the second day of a record cold wave over much of the nation east of the Rockies.

At midday, snow was falling across Upper Michigan, Wisconsin, northeastern Iowa, western and northern Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana.

A winter storm watch was in effect into today over northwestern Upper Michigan.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

CIA: Senate confirms Gates as agency chief has the professional expertise and experience to lead our intelligence community during these changing times."

Senate supporters campaigned for Gates on the ground that his background in intelligence work gave him the know-how to do the job and that he had overcome whatever past deficiencies he may have had.

"The last thing you want is someone at the helm of an agency who really does not have experience in that field," said Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., the most outspoken Gates booster in the Senate.

"If you're going to find someone who's never made a mistake, you've got to find someone who's never made a decision," Boren said.

But doubts lingered among many lawmakers. "I have an uneasy feeling about Mr. Gates, and I don't think we ought to have that uneasy feeling about whoever heads the CIA," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who voted against confirmation.

"I think we can do better in this country. I think we can find someone who would have the unanimous support of this body," Simon said.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., was typical of Gates supporters who qualified their endorsement.

The question "is not is he the best person in the world to fill this job, but is he qualified to fill this job," Lieberman said.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., called his decision to vote for Gates "a close call" and said he still had doubts about whether someone so closely tied to past problems can make the changes the agency needs for the future.

Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, who opposed Gates, said, "In my view, too many unanswered questions remain about this nominee's credibility."

Gates, 48, would become the 15th director the CIA has had since it was founded in 1947. The director heads not only the agency, with its spying and analysis missions, but also oversees other agencies that deal with military intelligence.

While the precise numbers are classified, sources have said America's intelligence apparatus has for a decade enjoyed huge budget increases.

MAXWELL: Flamboyant publisher dies in Atlantic well, who escaped the Holocaust and immigrated to Britain in 1940, personally ran his publishing empire, often making minute-to-minute decisions. His death raised questions about the future of his debt-burdened holdings, which include New York's Daily News.

(From 1A)

Maxwell's sons took over running the businesses Tuesday.

"He was larger than life," said British Conservative Party lawmaker Anthony Beaumont-Dark. "He was the Citizen Kane of his time. If you wrote a film about his life it would be rejected as unrealistic."

Maxwell's body was found 20 miles northwest of Grand Canary Island after an extensive air-and-search search, said Fernando Cano, spokesman at the Spanish rescue center in Madrid.

It was taken by helicopter to the Gando air base on Grand Canary and from there to a morgue in the town of Las Palmas, where Maxwell's wife, Elizabeth, and their son, Phillip, identified the body.

Spanish national radio said the body was unclothed and showed no sign of violence. It said an autopsy would be conducted today.

British Prime Minister John Major called Maxwell "a great character who will be missed."

"Maxwell was a passionate friend of Israel and we are sorry about this heavy tragedy," Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said. "God bless his memory."

Campbell Livingstone, the British vice-consul in the Canary Islands, said Maxwell's wife and son were somber but calm. He said he heard Mrs. Maxwell say something to the effect that her husband was "a colossus in life and a colossus in death."

Javier Herce of the Spanish merchant marine, citing police, said Capt. Gus Rankin reported that Maxwell was last seen by the crew at 4:45 a.m. (10:45 p.m. CST), and didn't answer a knock on his cabin door at 9 a.m.

LABELS: FDA proposes strict new regulations

(From 1A)

The summary says only nine terms should be allowed to describe nutritional qualities of foods: free, low, high, source of, reduced, light (or lite), less, more and fresh. Each has a specific meaning. For example, if something is called "calorie free" it can have no more than 5 calories per serving.

If one of the terms is used on a product that also has a nutritional downside, those detriments also must be noted. For example, if a food making a low sodium claim also is high in fat, the label must say "see back panel for information about fat and other nutrients."

And if a food that is inherently free or low in a particular nutrient makes the claim, it must embrace all foods like it on the label. For example, "Fresh spinach, a low sodium food."

The nutrient chart that manufacturers now voluntarily put on about 60 percent of of all packaged foods will become mandatory on all FDA-regulated products. That's about 90 percent of all the food sold in grocery stores.

The agency wants that chart to give data on total calories, calories derived from fat, total fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, total carbohydrates, complex carbohydrates, sugars, dietary fiber, protein, sodium, vitamins A and C, calcium and iron.

Thiamine, riboflavin and niacin would be optional.

STAMP: Governors reject penny rate increase

(From 1A)

But public watchdog Ralph Nader termed the action a "victory for consumers."

Tuesday's vote ended 20 months of haggling with the independent Postal Rate Commission, which last January rejected the Postal Service's request for a 30-cent stamp.

The Postal Service put the commission-approved 29-cent rate into effect last Feb. 3, under protest. Two subsequent requests that the commission reconsider its decision were rejected, putting the matter back into the hands of the postal governors.

They have the power to overrule the rate commission, but only if they vote unanimously to do so. When decision time came, the vote was 6-3 in favor of raising rates, effectively ending the rate case and keeping stamp prices at their current level.

"It is odd that it requires a 9-0 vote to adjust postage rates, when the Supreme Court can make life-and-death decisions with a vote of 5-4," said Frank after the meeting.

While the price of a first-class stamp is the most visible part of the rate process, it is only part of a complex series of rates.

When it turned down the request for a 30-cent stamp, the independent Rate Commission did suggest a series of other rate increases that it said would have raised about $330 million annually. These included an extra penny — to 24 cents — for the second ounce of first-class mail and several small changes for other classes of mail.

The postal governors voted 9-0 to reject that proposal, contending that it would have confused customers without raising enough money to make up for the loss.

Once in the past, in 1981, the board of governors overruled a rate commission decision. In that case, the commission approved an increase from 15 cents to 18 cents for a first-class stamp, and the board of governors later raised the rate to 20 cents.

WATER: 60 percent of voters reject annexation ground Water Conservation District that recently dropped its tax rate to 2 cents from 3 cents per $100 valuation.

(From 1A)

The Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation Water District operates a "tight, fine fiscal line."

But Hoelscher said that many people apparently were misinformed about who operates the district. It is not the state of Texas or its Texas Water Commission but West Texans on its five-member board of directors: John Campbell, board chairman who farms and ranches north of Tarzan in Martin County; Guy Mabee Jr., a Martin County rancher who lives north of Midland; Earl Dickenson, who ranches west of Stanton; Jimmie Sawyer, retired Stanton rancher and trucker, who lives north of Stanton; and Rufus Tom, who ranches south of Stanton.

Midland County landowners and ranchers, T.O. Midkiff III of Midkiff and Marvin Smith of Odessa waged a letter-writing, telephone-calling campaign to defeat the proposed annexation.

"I think people have all the taxes they want — not only all they want, but all the taxes they can afford," Midkiff said Tuesday. "Maybe some people read between the fine lines. People still listen. And one vote does make a difference."

As a result of the vote, Midkiff said that "maybe some of these other" governmental taxing entities will "take heed."

"We're taxed to death. Leave it to the individual. Maybe some of the representatives will listen," Midkiff said. Voters "are trying to tell the people that they don't want more bureaucracy and more governmental rules and regulations.

"Voting makes a difference. People pay attention to what goes on. A little work pays off," Midkiff said.

But Hoelscher said the water district had held public meetings to dispel rumors that the district would develop into a high-dollar taxing entity and that it would propose bonds.

Most "everyone who attended our public meetings was very much in favor" of the district, Hoelscher said. "Those who came opposed ended up in favor. We have a large plus vote that shows that."

"There was also a telephone campaign against us," he said. "It was not based on fact. And I challenge everything that was said in those telephone campaigns."

He noted the volatility of the tax proposal.

The Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District, which was formed by ranchers, farmers, homeowners and landowners in the rural parts of Martin County and northwest Howard County, was approached by Midland County landowners who wanted annexation.

"We had 131 landowner petitions," he said. "I do not understand why the vote turned out as it did."

Even so, he said, "We accept that. We will go on with our lives. We expect them to go on with theirs and wish them all the luck in the world."

The water district would not consider annexing Midland County again unless the district could be assured of "large support, because elections do cost money.

"And we will not go through one again until the people of Midland County assure the Permian Basin Underground Water Conservation District through large numbers and large petitions. We will not be back until that happens. And it's not because we are unfriendly, and it's not because we are upset. It's because it's a function of money."

SUSPECT: Heist is second of a city bank in two weeks

(From 1A)

"One of the tellers said, 'Can I help you?' and he went to her line, mumbled something and showed her his duffelbag. I guess there was a gun in it. She put some money in it and then he ran out," Ms. Henley said. "There was no panic at all."

Witnesses reported seeing a red vehicle driving by the bank at the time of the robbery but were unsure whether it was connected with the crime.

Law enforcement agencies were advised to watch for a red Chevrolet Caprice. The vehicle was stopped at 2:19 p.m. by a Department of Public Safety officer three miles south of Andrews on U.S. Highway 385.

Patrick Stiefel, 22, and James E. Dabney, 29, both of Hobbs, N.M., were taken into custody in Andrews along with Shinette. All three men were formally charged in connection with the robbery.

"I don't think everyone knew what was going on. He was so collected about it," Ms. Henley said. "A lady went around and told all the tellers to close down, and then they closed the bank."

Shortly thereafter, federal investigators arrived at the scene to question witnesses and secure the crime scene.

The robber was wearing a black sweatsuit, a black baseball cap with an unidentified white logo and mirror sunglasses with blue frames, witnesses said.

The three suspects were transported to the Midland County Jail Tuesday night and were expected to appear before a U.S. Magistrate today.

The robbery is the second of a Midland bank in the last two weeks, but federal investigators said they don't believe there is a connection between the two.

On Oct. 22, the Bluebonnet Savings Bank at 4300 N. Midland Drive was robbed when a masked man cut a hole in the bank's roof during the night. He painted the security cameras black and waited for employees to report to work. When the first worker arrived, he brandished a gun and forced her to open the vault. Two more employees arrived and he tied them up with rope and shut them in the vault. He then stole a vehicle from one of the employees and drove away.

Federal agents report no leads in the investigation of the Bluebonnet robbery.

tery proposal, Proposition 11. Slightly above 50 percent of voted against its passage and 49.37 percent voting in favor.

Precinct voting on the issue varied slightly, although precincts 209, 308 and 306 each differed from an almost city-wide pattern of opposition, casting votes in favor of the lottery by a two-thirds margin.

Proposition 4, a $1.1 billion bond issue to finance construction of new prisons, received strong voter support in the local area, with 62 percent voting in favor of the plan. Midland County Judge "Bro" Seltzer said he attributed the local vote to a high level of awareness.

"Local voters heard what the county commissioners and sheriff were telling them," he said. County commissioners supported the plan because it would offer relief for overburdened county facilities that now house state prisoners, including the Midland County Jail. Seltzer said the amendment will offer payment for the cost of housing those prisoners as well as construction of new state prisons to take over the responsibility.

Midland voters opposed eight of the 13 proposed amendments, including Proposition 6, which called for the creation of the Texas Ethics Commission.

Other amendments local voters opposed included Proposition 2, a measure allowing newly created Department of Transportation greater freedom in funding turnpikes, toll roads and toll bridges. They opposed Proposition 3 as well, which expanded investment options for the Veterans Land Board.

Likewise, voters were against the "freeport exemption" offered by Proposition 5, designed to allow taxing entities to offer the exemption for certain businesses in an enterprise zone.

Investment freedom for public retirement systems, the subject of Proposition 7, got strong opposition from local voters.

Voters also came out against the tax exemption for non-profit water districts offered by Proposition 10, and opposed increasing bond revenues available to economically distressed areas in Proposition 12.

Supported amendments included Proposition 1, which allowed cities of population under 5,000 to amend their charters by popular vote. Likewise, voters ratified Proposition 8, to allow voter consideration of state debt questions without consitutional amendment.

Local residents approved Proposition 9, to allow ownership rights to persons who had lived on public land for at least 50 years without knowing they did not rightfully own it. Voters also supported Proposition 13, which would issue $300 million in bonds to fund student loans.

Following is how Midlanders voted on the 13 propositions:

Sen. Wofford upsets Thornburgh

■ Democrat Brereton Jones wins in Kentucky and Republican Kirk Fordice holds slim lead in Mississippi.

Associated Press

Appointed Democratic Sen. Harris Wofford upset former Attorney General Richard Thornburgh in Pennsylvania Tuesday night in a recession-shaped race with ominous overtones for President Bush. Democratic Lt. Gov. Brereton Jones was elected governor of Kentucky in off-year balloting.

Republican Kirk Fordice held a slim, steady lead over Gov. Ray Mabus in Mississippi in a surprisingly strong bid to become the state's first GOP governor in more than a century.

Washington state voted on imposing term limits designed to curtail the careers of House Speaker Tom Foley, other members of Congress and state officials. It voted, as well, on a first-in-the-nation plan to legalize doctor-assisted suicide for the terminally ill.

Wofford, a distant underdog when the campaign began last spring, had 1,040,311 votes, or 59 percent of the votes, to the Republican Thornburgh's 729,765 or 41 percent of the vote, with 60 percent of the precincts tallied. He will serve out the three years remaining in the term of the late Sen. John Heinz.

"I think I was just lucky to be the messenger of a message that was there," exulted the former aide to President Kennedy and Bryn Mawr College president, who campaigned as an advocate of nationwide health insurance, extended jobless benefits and middle class tax cuts.

In Kentucky, Jones was gaining 65 percent of the vote, to 35 percent for his Republican rival, Rep. Larry Hopkins, with 99 percent of the precincts tallied. The victory by Jones, a former West Virginia Republican, extended a 24-year Democratic hold on the governor's office.

In Mississippi, it was Fordice with 282,784 or 50 percent, to Mabus' 269,898 or 48 percent, with 81 percent of the vote tallied.

Independent Shawn O'Hara had the balance. The heavily Democratic state House picks a winner in January if no candidate gains a majority.

The Mississippi campaign was tinged with race. Fordice, 57, said he opposed racial quotas, pushed a voucher system that would allow a choice of schools, favored workfare and not welfare and in one survey said he favored repealing the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Mabus counted on strong support from black voters, who make up about a third of the state's estimated 1.6 million registered voters. He depicted Fordice as an outsider and former lobbyist who didn't understand the state's needs and wouldn't make education his top priority.

Republican state legislator George Allen was elected to the House from Virginia. He led Democrat Kay Slaughter, 63 percent to 34 percent, with 82 percent of the votes tallied. Allen, the son of the late football coach, replaces retiring Republican D. French Slaughter, Kay Slaughter's cousin.

In the other House race on the ballot, Democrat Lucien Blackwell won a four-way race to succeed former Rep. William Gray III in Philadelphia, gaining more than 40 percent of the vote in a four-way race.

Republicans seized control of both houses of the New Jersey legislature in a campaign that became a referendum on the $2.8 billion tax increase that Gov. James Florio won last year.

Democrat Ed Rendell was elected mayor of Philadelphia, succeeding outgoing W. Wilson Goode.

In Indianapolis, former prosecutor Stephen Goldsmith, a Republican, swept to victory in his race to succeed outgoing four-term Mayor William Hudnut III.

Kurt Schmoke won his second term as Baltimore's mayor, and Ray Flynn his third in Boston.

Waterbury, Conn,. had a mayoral race with the twist. Former Democratic Mayor Edward D. Bergin, acquitted in April on state bribery charges, ousted three-term GOP Mayor Joseph J. Santopietro, who faces 21 criminal charges.

Washington, D.C., voters voted overwhelming to make manufacturers and sellers of certain assault weapons liable for damage caused by their use. The city struggles perpetually with violent crime.

The Pennsylvania race was the crown jewel of off-year balloting, with the White House and the nation watching closely.

LOTTERY: State-run game hits a winning number in vote

(From 1A)

Texas wanted a lottery, and today they proved that," she said.

"The lottery will provide us with $500 million in the first year, and we badly need that additional revenue to educate our young, to fight crime and to bring jobs to Texas," Richards said.

Sue Cox, of the anti-gambling group Texans Who Care, said the results were bad news for Texas. "We regret that our state will never be the same," she said.

In the past decade, Texas has legalized charitable bingo games and pari-mutuel horse and dog racing. Ms. Cox predicted that lottery would bring added gambling problems. Texas was the nation's largest state without a lottery.

"We regret that there will be victims of gambling ... an increase in problems families will face when a parent, grandparent or teen-ager becomes addicted to the lottery," Ms. Cox said.

"We regret that the taxpayers will think that the serious funding problems of our state will have been met, then realize ... that they will have the worst of both worlds — higher taxes and a lottery," she said.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the comptroller, said preparations already have begun.

"The lottery task force has been at work for the last three months. They've traveled to other states. They have looked to see how lotteries are run in other states," Welch said.

He said some 500 people had applied to be lottery director.

Backers said a Texas lottery would be a bonanza for a state government forced to raise taxes repeatedly since the devastating oil and real estate busts of 1986.

But opponents, including such traditionally powerful gambling foes as the Baptist church, argued that state-sanctioned wagering is the wrong way to fund government services.

"A lottery is the one thing they do favor," said state Rep. Ron Wilson, the Houston Democrat who sponsored the lottery amendment.

"If you ask them how they feel about a sales tax, we'll get run out of the room. If you ask them about income-related taxes, they'll hang most of us," Wilson said.

The five Texas constitutions enacted since statehood, in 1845, have prohibited lotteries. Texas today is the largest state in the nation without one, while more than 30 states and the District of Columbia operate lotteries.

Lottery legislation died in 1983, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, and during the Legislature's regular session earlier this year. At the same time, major tax increases were approved in 1986, 1987, 1990 and this year.

The governor, who wound up signing a $2.7 billion tax increase to balance the 1992-93 state budget, pushed lawmakers hard to give voters a chance to speak on lottery.

"The public enthusiastically endorses a lottery," Richards said. "We ought to give them that right, to determine whether they'd rather have that than taxes."

Opponents called it a "sleazy" way to run state government, and said it teaches children to gamble, entices the poor to waste money and is an inefficient way to raise government funds.

Jude Filler, executive director of the Texas Alliance for Human Needs, accused state leaders of "hypocrisy and cynicism" in advocating state-run gambling.

Talks mark normalization of Vietnam, China's ties

BEIJING (NYT) — Top Vietnamese leaders arrived in Beijing on Tuesday for five days of talks that both sides said mark the normalization of relations between the former enemies and that pave the way for greater economic cooperation.

The visit by the Vietnamese Communist Party leader, Do Muoi, and Prime Minister Vo Van Kiet ends a rift of more than a dozen years between the two neighbors, who fought a brief border war in 1979.

"This is a meeting that concludes the past and opens up the future," the official New China News Agency quoted the Chinese Communist Party leader, Jiang Zemin, as saying. "The talks mark the normalization of bilateral relations and will have a profound impact on the development of such relations."

The announcement by Jiang and Tuesday night's national television news, which showed scenes of Jiang and Do Muoi walking happily side by side, suggest an effort to highlight the ideological camaraderie between the two countries.

China and Vietnam have been drawn together by the disintegration of communism elsewhere in the world, and in the last few months ties have improved with unusual swiftness. A major obstacle to normal relations was removed last month in Paris, when the four rival Cambodian parties signed an agreement to end the Cambodian war.

While territorial and border disagreements still exist, Chinese-Vietnamese relations have already warmed in a number of areas, like trade and economic exchanges.

During the talks, the two sides are expected to sign agreements covering trade, transport and communications.

Trade across the 625-mile Chinese-Vietnamese border last year was officially reported to be $35 million, but there has also been a vibrant underground business of smuggling goods across the border.

The two sides never officially severed ties and still maintained embassies in each other's capitals.

On Tuesday a group of boat people issued to the U.S. Congress a handwritten letter appealing for help. Deportation of the boat people is scheduled to begin Saturday, said aid workers in the Hong Kong camp. Top leaders in China and Vietnam announced Tuesday that relations between the two countries have been normalized.

Miyazawa wins prime minister post in Japan, appoints tainted Cabinet

TOKYO (NYT) — Kiichi Miyazawa became prime minister of Japan on Tuesday and immediately set off a furor by swearing in a Cabinet containing veteran politicians long frozen from power because of links to past bribery and sex scandals.

As expected, Miyazawa also named a longtime rival, Michio Watanabe, as foreign minister and deputy prime minister, putting in power an outspoken conservative who has had to apologize for past freewheeling comments that denigrated blacks and other groups.

The perception in Japan was that after two years of weak government under Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, Miyazawa might be more forceful in forging new policies.

Kaifu was once regarded as a virtual certainty to win re-election as prime minister. But Miyazawa, who has served in every top Cabinet post in the last two decades, had been assiduously courting party kingmakers and won their favor after Kaifu's base of support collapsed suddenly.

Included in Miyazawa's circle of advisers were no fewer than nine politicians tied in one way or another to the receipt of stock or payments by the Recruit Corp., the information services and real estate concern at the heart of the influence-peddling and bribery scandals of 1988-89.

It had been reported that Miyazawa would restore such people to power, on the ground that they had never been charged with crimes and had been rehabilitated by winning re-election to Parliament last year.

Indeed, Miyazawa's office had itself received payments from Recruit, forcing his resignation as finance minister in 1988. Watanabe's office also received payments.

Berlin court orders beheading of Lenin's statue

BERLIN (AP) — Caged by a cell of scaffolding, Vladimir Ilyich Lenin stood mute and emotionless in a blustery Berlin square on Tuesday as a court decided to let workers lop off his head.

Berlin city officials had planned earlier to begin dismantling the 63-foot statue cut from red Ukrainian granite, one of the most spectacular Lenin renderings still standing west of the Urals.

But a Berlin district court hearing on a lawsuit filed this week by the widow and daughter of the Soviet sculptor, Nikolai Tomski, offered a brief stay of execution.

Late Tuesday, the court threw out the claim on the grounds that Tomski did not bequeath the statue to anybody. City officials say they will go ahead with the removal today, starting with Lenin's huge, spheroid head.

Tomski, who died in 1984, used 125 granite blocks to create the sweeping, heroic image of the man who led the Russian Revolution. His family says to remove the statue would desecrate his art.

City officials have offered vague assurances that the statue may be reassembled later as part of a permanent exhibit of Communist icons.

A small but hardy group of statue supporters, many of them members of Berlin's anarchist scene, kept up their round-the-clock vigil at Lenin Square, which is to be renamed United Nations Square.

People who want their German history with a twist of Lenin say to remove the statue is to deny the past.

"How unfortunate," said Rudy Hintze, 60, a pensioner who signed the petition. "This was part of our past. What do they remove next?"

Friends loved, hated Maxwell

LONDON (AP) — Friends and colleagues of billionaire publisher Robert Maxwell remembered him Tuesday as a powerful man whose courage and determination inspired admiration, fear and hatred, sometimes in the same person.

"We live in an age of very small people, and we miss the big ones," said Mike Molloy, former editor-in-chief of Maxwell's Mirror Group Newspapers. Maxwell's death "is a huge loss to life," he said.

At newsrooms on two continents, a state of shock reigned.

On the steps of Mirror Group, Maxwell's son Ian, tears welling in his eyes, told reporters the moment was tragic not only for his family, but for Maxwell's thousands of employees.

"It's a particularly sad moment, because this paper has lost its publisher, and its chairman and its savior."

The most common words for Maxwell from his colleagues and opponents were "larger than life."

"He is a primal force who does not fit into conventional criteria. ... I think he had more courage physically and moral courage than anyone I have ever met," said Peter Jay, economics editor of BBC TV News and a former personal assistant to Maxwell.

"What normal people consider pressure was meat and drink to Robert Maxwell," said Charles Wilson, editorial director of Maxwell's Mirror Group Newspapers.

Prime Minister John Major praised Maxwell as "a great character."

"For the man himself, I am sure he would not want us to grieve at his loss but marvel at a quite extraordinary life, lived to the full."

Rupert Murdoch, Maxwell's main rival in the publishing world, issued a brief statement calling him "a remarkable man," and sending condolences to his family.

Molloy, who was editor of The Daily Mirror when Maxwell took it over in 1984, said working with the publisher "wasn't all a bed of roses. But I found him a powerful, extraordinary and interesting man. And I shall miss him very much.

"Some people liked him enormously and had great regard for him," Molloy said. "Some people hated him and feared him."

Maxwell was a loyal supporter of the opposition Labor Party.

Soviet Union officials agree to let spy planes fly over entire territory

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The Soviet Union, in a decisive break with its secretive past, said Tuesday it is ready to allow spy planes to fly over its entire territory to verify military activity.

The new proposal, which could take effect in 1993, marked a large step toward an "open skies" treaty that the 22 nations of NATO and the former Warsaw Pact have been negotiating since a conference in Canada in 1989.

To date, the Soviet military has jealously guarded its airspace and refused to allow flights over its installations, despite arms control agreements signed by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

In 1960, U.S. pilot Gary Powers was shot down flying a U-2 spy plane deep over Soviet territory.

In September 1983, 269 people lost their lives when a Soviet pilot shot down a Korean jetliner that strayed into Soviet airspace.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union have for years used satellites to spy on each other. But surveillance from high-flying jets is a more flexible and less expensive form of reconnaissance that produces more accurate intelligence.

The new proposal was unveiled at a Vienna session of the "open skies" conference.

Gaza election results suggest Palestinians favor peace process

By Clyde Haberman
N.Y. Times News Service

JERUSALEM — Results from a local election in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip suggested on Tuesday that Palestinians have begun to swing away from hard-line Islamic fundamentalists to favor relative moderates who support the Middle East peace process.

Voting on Monday for the regional Chamber of Commerce, the first election of its kind in Gaza since 1964, ended with mainstream supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization winning a surprising 13 of the 16 seats at stake. The fundamentalist Islamic Resistance Movement, or Hamas, captured only two seats, while an independent candidate won the remaining one.

Elections have only recently begun to be held in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank after 24 years of Israeli occupation, and so they may be imperfect guides, at best, to the popular mood.

Nevertheless, the results made public on Tuesday were widely interpreted as a pro-peace message from the streets. The triumphant mainstream Fatah faction of the PLO firmly supported the conference that just ended in Madrid while Hamas, which had been presumed to be growing fast in Gaza, joined two Marxist PLO factions in bitterly opposing Palestinian participation in the talks.

A Hamas leader and a losing candidate in Gaza City, Ibrahim al-Yazouri, acknowledged that the outcome was "a real shock."

Aoni Hasham, a furniture store owner in Gaza City, was one of many merchants who said he had rejected Hamas principally because "it did not offer an alternative to the peace process."

Crowded, poor and desperate Gaza has been torn to a greater degree than the West Bank by the PLO decision to endorse the Madrid conference. Hamas calls the peace process a sellout of the Palestinian dream of an independent state, while Fatah argues that it is time to become more practical and to settle for attainable goals.

In that sense, the election results "are a message from the Palestinian streets to the peace conference," said Mohammed al-Kitwah, one of the 13 victorious Fatah candidates.

Despite the lopsided distribution of seats, it was too early to say with certainty that the influence of Hamas had waned.

For one thing, a vote among generally conservative business owners does not necessarily reflect everyone's feelings. Also, Fatah won only 53 percent of the popular vote, compared with 40 percent for Hamas and 7 percent for the four independent candidates.

That obviously pointed to a closer race than the seat distribution would suggest, a discrepancy explained by the fact that many Fatah winners just squeaked past Hamas losers.

"If we have 40 percent of the vote, then we are still a big force in this country," Yazouri said.

Still, the vote reinforced the impression already long evident, not only in Gaza but also in the West Bank and East Jerusalem, that Arab business owners are weary of the endless strikes and other disruptions brought about by the four-year-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli domination.

Throughout most of the occupied territories, Hamas enforced a three-day strike last week.

Reagan's legacy communism's fall

That was quite a gathering in Simi Valley, Calif., on Monday — five American presidents congregated for the dedication of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library. History was made — and not only by the fact that five presidents gathered for the first time on the same platform.

President Richard Nixon, President Gerald Ford, President Jimmy Carter and President George Bush paid tribute to President Reagan for his leadership, his vision and his courage in the face of overwhelming odds.

But it was President Nixon who put Reagan's contribution to the free world in perspective.

Thirty-two years ago, when he was in Moscow, Nixon told those present, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev jabbed a finger in Nixon's chest and told him that his grandchildren would live under communism.

Nixon said he told the Soviet leader, "Your grandchildren will live in freedom.

"At the time," Nixon added, "I was sure he was wrong. But I was not sure I was right."

Today Khrushchev's grandchildren do live in freedom, Nixon noted, in great part because of the leadership of Ronald Reagan.

Nixon also credited Reagan with restoring the nation's military might, which had been allowed to fall into a state of neglect before he took office in 1980, and his steadfast adherence to lasting values. Reagan's restoration of the nation's military might gave the United States the capability of winning the Persian Gulf War during the presidency of George Bush.

But there is no question that history will bestow on Ronald Reagan the honor for waging a successful battle against communism during his two terms. A stalwart opponent of communism, the president known as the "Great Communicator" branded the communist state an "evil empire" at the start of his first term and maintained the verbal pressure throughout his tenure. Late in his presidency he helped Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev move his nation toward a free market economy.

Reagan's battle against communism will remain as his greatest triumph, the one for which he will be remembered.

Ridding the world of communism will not mean that there won't still be battles to wage or evil to be conquered. Other totalitarian regimes will undoubtedly arise. What it did accomplish, however, was to give the nations of Eastern Europe the opportunity to gain their freedom and the world the chance to overcome communism.

'Close-up' trip offers youths hope for future

To be nothing is to do nothing. From the beginning of my life I have strived to never let any opportunity to earn or make a difference in my world pass me by. My quest for knowledge has been a driving force in my schoolwork, church involvement, and place of employment. And, more importantly, when I have seen a problem in the world, I have done my best to set the wheels of change in motion.

When I watched the workings of Congress during the Clarence Thomas confirmational hearings, I realized that I needed to do everything in my power to instigate a change in the operation of our government. I have certain attributes to my advantage: I am young, eager, and filled with determination to give every Midlander, and every American, a future to be proud of. It is the youth who hold the future of this country in their hands.

It is because of my desire that I have joined the Midland High School chapter of Close-up. Close-up is a program to give youth, such as myself, the opportunity to journey to Washington, D.C. and gain first-hand knowledge of the way our government is conducted. Hopefully, we will also acquire insight into how we can dispel the clouds of public distrust that plague out nation's capital. Unfortunately, experiences like this cost money, and my only hope to make this once in a lifetime trip, is to turn to the wisdom of my elders, in hopes that they will see my potential and render me their support. I can use my youth, determination, discernment of the problems, and the knowledge that the adults in this country are behind me 100 percent, to make the world a better place for your children, my children, and the thousands of people who are yet to come.

The best way to ensure a better future is to train tomorrow's leaders with the skills to turn our government around. If you feel that you want to make a difference and be a part of the rising generation, or wish to find out more about myself or the Close-up Program, please contact Deanna Krehbiel at Midland High (689-1100). All donations are tax-deductible. And who knows, you could just be helping a future president of the United States. Remember, the person who does nothing to make a change, has no right to complain.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 6, the 310th day of 1991. There are 55 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 6, 1888, Republican Sen. Benjamin Harrison of Indiana won the presidential election, defeating incumbent Democrat Grover Cleveland, 233 electoral votes to 168, even though Cleveland received a slightly higher percentage of the popular vote.

On this date:

In 1854, the king of American march music, John Philip Sousa, was born in Washington.

Deng pushes his way to top of China

BEIJING — The reclusive ruler of China, Deng Xiaoping, may be 87 but he is still as tough as a walnut, unstinting in his belief that the Chinese Communist Party will not give an inch to democracy.

Anderson

The diminutive Deng, whose 4-foot, 11-inch frame does not allow him to sit in many chairs with his feet on the floor, is China's ultimate survivor. He has been purged three different times in his political career, suffering imprisonment, internal exile and hardships for his family. In his mind, he didn't go through all that to see the party toppled by upstart pro-democracy types.

Deng is a complex character who has refused to write his own memoirs. Information about his early life is sketchy. We have pieced together a profile using Chinese and American sources and several top-secret Central Intelligence Agency documents on Deng.

In its classified reports, the CIA paints Deng as a man with a hunger for power, a single-minded man who is "often abrasive" in his dealings with others. "Deng has a well-deserved reputation as an efficient administrator, but he does not seem to possess (the late) Zhou Enlai's talents for conciliation and compromise," says one CIA report.

According to the CIA, Deng "still bears the political scars" of being purged and reviled during the Cultural Revolution of Mao Zedong.

His father was a prosperous landlord who had four wives in succession and 13 children. At 16, Deng went with a select group of boys on a scholarship to study in France. There he befriended Zhou Enlai, who was the editor of a Chinese communist periodical, "Red Light."

Deng went on to study in Moscow before returning to China in 1927 to fight with the communists in a civil war that continued for 22 years until the communists under Mao took over China in 1949. Mao had mixed feelings about Deng. He told Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that Deng was the only one of his comrades worth anything. One CIA report says Mao often called Deng "a man of extraordinary political insight."

But Deng had ideas of his own and tried to push Mao to decentralize the economy. Mao didn't like the rhetoric, but he mostly didn't like being treated poorly by Deng. Mao complained to friends that Deng treated him like a "dead ancestor" and would sit far away from him during meetings (Deng was hard of hearing) so he could not hear Mao's instructions.

During Mao's insane decade, Deng was removed from party leadership and paraded around Beijing in a jeep with a dunce cap pulled over his ears while the radical Red Guards jeered. He was imprisoned in solitary confinement for two years and then banished with his family to a southern province where, at 65, he was assigned manual labor in a tractor factory and served meals in a school mess hall.

Deng might have accepted that as the price one pays for being temporarily out of favor if his family had not been hurt too. One brother was purged from his job as deputy mayor of Chungking. Another brother was so hounded by the Red Guards that he killed himself. Deng's son, Pufang, was either forced to jump or pushed by the Red Guards from his fourth-floor dorm window and paralyzed for life because he was refused medical treatment.

Mao brought Deng back from exile in 1973, and since 1977, Deng has been China's "paramount leader." He has instituted economic reforms that have greatly improved China's lot.

Deng won't allow political reform. He unquestionably approved the massacre of students in Tiananmen Square in 1989. His latest pronouncements to the party are contained in secret directives that followed the overthrow of the Communist Party in Moscow in August. Deng has urged party leaders to show "tranquility outside, repression within," and "hide one's capacities and bide one's time," to "strengthen oneself."

Officials ignore White House, BCCI link

WASHINGTON — Relax, everybody — the White House counsel has "investigated" the case of the departing Sununu aide with no legal experience who was hired for $600,000 by a BCCI figure, and rendered this verdict: Nobody did anything wrong.

Safire

Influence peddling? An attempt by intermediaries to obstruct justice? Forget it. Sununu's man agrees to give back the money; case closed.

Much relieved, the Republican Justice Department hastily announces it accepts the predetermined result of the White House "inquiry" and will not investigate. To date, nobody has been asked a single question under oath.

Let's see what Sheik Kamal Adham, the ex-Saudi spymaster at the center of the huge BCCI conspiracy, thought he would get by hiring the person closest to Bush's chief of staff.

Since late spring, Plato Cacheris, Kamal's legitimate criminal defense lawyer, has been trying to get various prosecutors to move the mountain to his client — that is, to come to a place of the sheik's choosing, where he cannot be arrested and extradited, to listen to an unsworn proffer of evidence that will deflect prosecution from him.

Nothing doing, said Manhattan D.A. Robert Morgenthau, the only lawman getting real results in the BCCI swindle; bring him in — we'll get his story in front of a grand jury. Nor, for over three months, was the U.S. attorney in Washington inclined to kowtow to this witness or subject or target.

Then Sununu's right-hand man departs the White House and is immediately retained, reportedly paid $136,000 in advance. Justice suddenly has a change of heart; though Ed Rogers' hand doesn't show, David Eisenberg, an assistant U.S. attorney, is dispatched from Washington to Cairo to meet Kamal on the sheik's terms.

Did the longtime Sununu hatchet man, who has placed his political allies throughout the federal government, play a part in reversing the Justice decision? Nobody wants to know.

The White House counsel has found a loophole in the Ethics Act enabling him to place George Bush's ethical imprimatur on this sleazy deal: Rogers did not work on BCCI matters before leaving the White House.

From the point of view of Kamal, that immunity from Ethics Act reach is what made the Sununu aide especially valuable.

Bush's counsel, in dismissing the case, notes virtuously that "our review discloses no evidence that Rogers made any communication to anyone in the White House concerning BCCI."

Look: the pattern of the BCCI swindlers for a decade has been to buy high-level influence, to seek to avert prosecution and obstruct justice, to offer bribes. It worked around the world; why shouldn't BCCI fixers try it on the Bush White House?

The White House self-inquiry, as predicted here a week ago, was a sham; its avid embrace by Criminal Division chief Robert Mueller is typical of Justice's inexplicable ineptness in the face of a vast criminal conspiracy. Dick Thornburgh bobbled his Pennsylvania race partly because of his BCCI failure.

Because nobody has held out a bundle of cash and bluntly said "obstruct justice," the complaisant Mueller will not ask anybody embarrassing questions under oath.

When it comes to modern global corruption — legal fees, stock deals, intermediaries, cooperation with intelligence cut-outs for protection — this passive Thornburgh product just doesn't get it.

Last week the Justice Department again demonstrated its paralysis on BCCI. The cover-up is on; only a special prosecutor unconcerned with political fallout can stop it.

Nintendo plays games with parents' guilt

The good news is that Christmas is just around the corner. The bad news is that Japanese toymakers are pushing a new Nintendo set for $200. This is twice the price of the old one. Even worse news is that none of the games from the old Nintendo fits the new one.

Buchwald

Therefore, a new improved 1991 model with software will cost anywhere from $300 to $400, while last year's Nintendo will now be worth a pound of nuclear waste.

All this means that law-abiding citizens who are trying to make ends meet will either bow to the pressure of their loved ones and buy the 1991 model or declare to their children, "No Nintendo while I still have breath in my body."

There are very few recorded cases of parents saying no to their children when it comes to a Christmas request. But there has never been a test like Nintendo. How, one asks, is it possible to refuse a child a toy he has actually seen advertised on television?

Dr. Gross Varder, a toy therapist, is very concerned that if children are deprived of the new Nintendos, they will see this as a sign of rejection.

He explained, "No child can believe anyone really loves him if adults become churlish about the price of Japanese electronic games."

"Even if if costs $200, not counting the software that goes with it?" I asked.

"Children don't know what toys cost. All they know is that they cannot live in the world with an old Nintendo when a new one has their name on it. You can't expect a child to go to school without this year's Nintendo any more than you can ask him to go without any pants on."

"Is it possible that the only reason the Nintendo people have come out with a new model is to cash in on the guilt of American parents?"

"It would be wrong to think that. The purpose of the new Nintendo is to challenge the minds and dexterity of the nation's youth. It is also to make them stronger and better-educated people. The manufacturers felt that the old Nintendo was stifling the skills of the children and, therefore, it was time they upgraded their toys. Profit was never a factor in designing the machine. If it was, they would have charged $500 just to see what the traffic would bear."

"I have three grandchildren," I told Gross, "and they know they will not get the new Nintendo from me."

"I wouldn't take any chances," Gross warned me.

"I've seen children withhold their love from grandparents for far less."

"I refuse to get into a power struggle with my nearest and dearest."

"Everybody does. That's why the Nintendo people are predicting a banner year. I am not saying that you should or should not give your grandchild the game. But you're the one who has to look at yourself in the mirror every morning when you shave. You have every right to hold fast. But it will be just a matter of weeks until that darling little one rushes down the steps on Christmas morning and starts ripping open the boxes shouting, 'Nintendo, Nintendo, Nintendo,' and you'll think he is launching an attack on Pearl Harbor.

"When he doesn't find the game his heart will break. Years later the little boy will have become a man, and he will be lying on a psychiatrist's couch and he will say, 'And then when I was 8 my grandfather wouldn't buy me a new Nintendo, and from that moment on I never smiled again.' "

State officials can be sued for rights violations, court rules

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that state officials can be sued and found personally liable for damages for violating an individual's civil rights.

The 8-0 opinion was a restatement of a principle that most legal scholars and lower court judges had already assumed to be correct: that a state's own immunity from lawsuits of this type does not shield state officeholders who are sued in their personal capacity.

But a 1989 Supreme Court decision had created some confusion in what is inherently a complex and confusing area of federal law, liability for actions taken "under color of state law" that violate rights guaranteed by the Constitution or federal statutes.

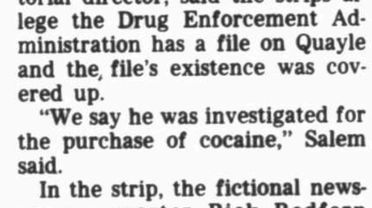
Different rules apply depending on whether the target of the lawsuit is a state or a municipality, on whether a state official is sued in his or her official or personal capacity and on whether damages or an injunction is sought.

The decision Tuesday, the first formal opinion of the court's new term, resolves the confusion but does not change the existing law in most of the country. Written by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, the decision affirmed a 1990 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 3rd Circuit, in Philadelphia.

The appeals court ruling permitted a civil rights suit to proceed against Pennsylvania's auditor general, Barbara Hafer, who was sued by 18 employees whom she dismissed after winning election to the office in 1988.

The employees sued Ms. Hafer in her personal capacity, alleging that she had violated their First Amendment rights of free speech and association by dismissing them in retaliation for their support of her opponent in the election. Ms. Hafer is a Republican and the dismissed employees are Democrats. They sought damages of up to $3.5 million apiece.

Under Supreme Court precedents, the employees could not have sued Ms. Hafer in her capacity as a state official. The court has ruled that suits against state officeholders in their official capacity are, in effect, suits against the state itself, and states are immune from damage suits under the 11th Amendment to the Constitution.



Paper won't run 'Doonesbury' about Quayle

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A newspaper said Tuesday it won't publish a series of "Doonesbury" cartoon strips suggesting that federal drug officials suppressed information about Vice President Dan Quayle.

Other newspaper editors questioned the cartoons by Garry Trudeau.

A Quayle spokesman said he wasn't aware of any such file or probe.

"I'm one of the staunchest and earliest admirers of Garry Trudeau," said George B. Waters, president and publisher of the Daily Sentinel of Rome, N.Y. His paper decided not to run the two-week series scheduled to start next week.

"There are times when he goes over the edge in taste and possible libel," Waters said of Trudeau.

Universal Press Syndicate in Kansas City distributes "Doonesbury" to nearly 1,400 publications.

Lee Salem, Universal Press editorial director, said the strips allege the Drug Enforcement Administration has a file on Quayle and the file's existence was covered up.

"We say he was investigated for the purchase of cocaine," Salem said.

In the strip, the fictional newspaper reporter Rick Redfern tracks down a tip on the unsubstantiated allegations.

Bush cancels Asian trip amid domestic criticism

WASHINGTON (NYT) — President Bush canceled plans Tuesday for an Asian trip amid a growing chorus of partisan complaints that he should be focusing on economic hardship back home.

The president, who last week inaugurated Mideast peace talks in Madrid, still plans to fly to Italy today for a long-planned two-day summit with fellow leaders of NATO, followed by a stopover to meet with European Community leaders in the Netherlands.

But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced Tuesday evening that Bush canceled his plans for a trip to Japan, Singapore, South Korea and Australia later this month.

"The president regrets this decision, but believes that uncertainty over the congressional calendar requires this change," Fitzwater said. Congress plans to adjourn before Thanksgiving, the day Bush's Asian trip was supposed to begin, but leaders aren't certain they can meet that deadline.

The two-day summit in Rome, the first meeting of the 16 NATO leaders since July 1990, will confront the changed political climate in Europe that resulted from the failed Soviet coup.

At his meeting in The Hague with leaders of the 12-nation European community, which is soon to merge markets with the seven-nation European Free Trade Association, Bush's primary concern will be to revive enthusiasm for a worldwide free trade agreement, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Tuesday.

The Asian journey that Bush canceled was the last foreign trip he had planned before next year's presidential election. Polls have indicated a sentiment among voters that the Republican president has concentrated too much of his energies on international affairs.

Baker said such attitudes would be justified only "if there were a failure on his part to address domestic concerns, and I don't think there has been a failure."

The Democratic National Committee reported brisk sales of a T-shirt declaring "George Bush went to Rome, and all I got was this lousy recession."

Efforts show no conclusive evidence on MIAs, Cheney says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — U.S. officials on Tuesday cast doubts on the possibility that Americans who served in the Vietnam War are still alive in Southeast Asia and said that a high-priority search for a missing Texas soldier may be running aground.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other Pentagon officials outlined the government's handling of POW/MIA cases as a Senate select committee opened the nation's 11th investigation in 18 years to determine the fate of 2,273 Americans missing in action from the Vietnam War.

U.S. forces withdrew from Vietnam in 1973 and the war effectively ended with the fall of Saigon to Viet Cong guerrillas and North Vietnamese forces in May 1975.

The Bush administration considers the return of any live Americans "our most urgent requirement," Cheney said, adding that intensified efforts by the U.S. government over the last several months have produced no conclusive evidence that Americans are still being held captive.

Cheney also reported that one widely publicized case involving missing Army Capt. Donald G. Carr stalled after the government's key source in the case — POW hunter Jack Bailey of Garden Grove, Calif. — failed to provide adequate information to Pentagon officials during a recent trip to Southeast Asia.

The defense secretary told senators that Bailey reneged on promises to link the investigators with a Laotian who took pictures purportedly showing Carr in a Laotian prison.

Baker criticizes latest Israeli settlement in Golan Heights

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Tuesday that Israel's initiation of a new settlement on the occupied Golan Heights could hamper the Middle East peace process.

"You know our attitude on settlements," Baker told journalists at a briefing. "And it's hard to see — hard for us to see how inaugurating a new settlement now can help the negotiating process that we've just finished launching."

Although the United States did not ask Israel to stop building settlements during the Madrid peace talks that recessed Monday morning, Baker and President Bush have called settlements in disputed territory one of the biggest obstacles to peace.

Israeli leaders ceremoniously initiated the latest settlement on the Golan just hours after other Israeli envoys closed their first ever round of talks with Syrians in Madrid. Israel captured the Golan Heights from Syria during the 1967 war, and Syria is adamant in demanding the land be returned.

Baker also said he hopes to see within two weeks some development affecting the latest stumbling block to talks, which is where to hold the next session. Israel wants meetings to alternate between Israel and Arab nations, and the Arabs want them held outside the region.

The secretary said two weeks is not "an ironclad deadline," but that it will give negotiators time to work on resolving the issue. Baker said he is optimistic that Israel and at least one of the three Arab delegations will reach an agreement.

"If there's no agreement ultimately, after we've had a chance to consult with them and they've had a chance to consult with each other, we will feel free to submit proposals," he said.

Regarding the new Israeli settlement, Baker said that what is needed now are steps creating a positive environment for the talks.

Agency pitches plan to solve housing issue

■ An official from Enterprise Foundation, a non-profit housing assistance agency, said Midland has the potential for more funding and a wider range of services for the needy.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Midland housing assistance agencies have the potential for more funding and a wider range of service to the community's needy, leaders learned Tuesday.

Peter Werwath, special projects director of the Enterprise Foundation, a non-profit housing support agency, said his organization has had great success coordinating affordable housing efforts in other cities, including Fort Worth and Dallas. He discussed the group's mission with about 40 Midland assistance agencies and church workers, county and city officials and business leaders.

A housing task force, organized after the United Way's Midland Introspective study, is considering a contract with Enterprise. The foundation would study the community's affordable housing crisis and coordinate efforts to relieve it.

"I would bet in Midland 25 to 30 percent of your population is priced out of affordable housing," Werwath said. "There's probably even more difficulty in the area of home ownership."

Enterprise has organized financial assistance, construction projects, rehabilitation efforts and innovative housing development work in 90 cities and counties throughout the country since its 1981 inception, Werwath said.

"Part of our work is offering planning assistance to other groups," he explained. "We define critical needs and identify new financial sources."

If Enterprise's help is requested by local agencies, the foundation would — upon approval of its own board of directors — create an in-depth study of Midland's situation. After an initial assessment, workers would come into the city to form a "blueprint" for solving housing difficulties.

Their work might include identification of federal grants, consolidation of agency services and support for home construction or rehabilitation projects.

Jerrie Westmoreland, director of the Midland County Housing Authority, said she recognizes the potential for more federal financial assistance.

"I know there are some things we haven't applied for in the past," she said. Her typical client is the head of a household who makes between $5,000 and $10,000 per year and can't keep an apartment or house.

"Rents are increasing, going up all the time," she said. "These people can't make ends meet as it is."

Ellen Smith, director of the Southeast Community Center, said there is a great need in that area of the city for assistance to elderly residents.

"They don't want to pick up and move from their neighborhood," Ms. Smith said. Yet, federal funds from the office of Housing and Urban Development are restricted from use in that area, leaders said.

"A lot of the need is education," said Connie Glover, director of Community and Senior Services. "We have an excellent southeast center. Out of it can come a focus for service-providers. If we had affordable housing close to the center, it would meet the multiple needs of those seniors."

The Rev. Hadley Edwards said younger people with families need assistance available in their own neighborhood as well.

"Children need those yards to play in rather than an asphalt parking lot," he said. "Rather than just considering the elderly, we need to think of younger people with families. I can't imagine children living in apartments with no swing set, no play equipment of their own."

Werwath said the agency has had success in development of public housing that is not high-rise nor multi-family, but more like individual homes.

"There is not likely a demonstrated need for much new construction, but a great need for repair of substandard homes and to make existing houses more affordable," he said. "We find affordability is the major problem."

Such difficulties have existed in great number since the early 1980s, when the federal government reduced its public housing funds drastically, Werwath said.

"That retreat caused a tremendous housing crisis," he said. "Only one out of Murder trial to continue with 11-person jury

■ The trial of a Midlander charged with the death of his infant daughter will continue with an 11-person jury after a male juror passed out during testimony.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Testimony in the murder trial of a man charged with the death of his infant daughter will continue today with an 11-person jury after a 32-year-old male juror passed out during graphic testimony on Tuesday.

The trial of Jesus Manuel Vidana, 23, was recessed after less than 20 minutes of second-day testimony in Judge John Hyde's 238th District Court.

The juror lost consciousness during testimony by Dr. William L. McGavran III, a neurosurgeon who treated 9-month-old Maritza Vidana at Midland Memorial Hospital. The girl died Jan. 10 from severe head injuries incurred that day.

McGavran described to the jury the right skull fracture and brain swelling that the girl suffered. The infant, in a coma, was rushed to surgery, McGavran said.

During surgery "the entire contents of the right side of the brain came out of the skull fracture," McGavran testified. Surgery was subsequently aborted, he added.

Shortly after the doctor described the normal consistency of the brain — like three-day-old Jell-O — a snorting sound was heard.

In the middle of his testimony, McGavran alerted the court to the condition of the juror, who was passed out with his head cocked back and eyes and mouth open.

Acting on instructions of the doctor, fellow jurors laid the man down. The doctor then aided the stricken juror.

The man was revived and a recess called. Apparently, the man fainted as a reaction to the testimony, court officials said.

Judge Hyde later decided to excuse the man from jury duty and continue the trial, minus one juror.

Testimony will resume this morning, the third day of the trial.

The majority of Monday was spent in jury selection followed by brief testimony from the deceased child's mother, Maria del Carmen Castor, 20, who currently resides in California.

Ms. Castor told jurors that the infant and a 2-year-old female relative were left in the care of Vidana at a Midland home for about a half hour on the day of the death.

When Ms. Castor and Elvira Chavez, the 2-year-old's mother, returned, the infant was being taken to the hospital by paramedics, testimony stated.

Defense attorney Thomas Hirsch contends his client had been playing with the infant on a couch. Vidana then went to get a drink of water, heard a thud and discovered the girl on the floor, Hirsch said.

Testimony for the prosecution is expected to show that the injuries sustained by the infant were caused by something greater than a fall.

Hirsch said the trial, expected to last into next week, will be a "battle of the experts," because of anticipated conflicting medical expert testimony.

Banker presents gift to MHCC

By Mella McEwen

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce received a big birthday present at its seventh anniversary banquet.

Former Midlander Gilberto Riojas, now an investment banker in Austin, presented the title to 25 lots on Lamesa Road across from Martin Luther King Park to the MHCC Education/Development Foundation during the banquet and installation of officers Tuesday night at the Midland Hilton.

Riojas made the presentation on behalf of himself and his wife, telling chamber members that the gift was "for the educational needs of our children."

Roger Robles, chairman of the foundation, accepted the gift, saying there are plans to build a retirement community for low-income citizens on the site, that will hopefully generate revenue to be used for educational scholarships. Plans call for building 18 to 20 duplexes on the lots.

Two speakers issued challenges to chamber members at the banquet.

El Paso native Alan Kahn, chairman of the board of the Texas Department of Commerce, decried the current business atmosphere in the state of Texas.

He urged members to contact elected officials, from city councilmen to statewide representatives, and let them know "how difficult it is to do business in Texas, about the tax burden, and that businesses need help to flourish and grow."

He recalled how businesses used to be interested in Texas because

LHS inducts honor students

Staff Report

Among lit candles and solemn pledges, 193 Lee High School students were inducted into the National Honor Society Tuesday night.

Being inducted into the society is "a big honor," according to Ben Cason, one of the honor society's sponsors.

"Students are so tuned into TV now," Cason said. "Studying has a lot of competition. People don't realize all the competition students face for studying time. It wasn't like that when I was in school."

While scholarship and a 4.0 Grade Point Average (GPA) are essential to become an honor society candidate, Cason said

MC enrollment tops average

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Enrollment at Midland College grew by more than 3 percent this fall, an increase which topped state averages.

Enrollment at public junior colleges and public universities increased 2 percent overall, according to a report from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board.

"This one-year enrollment gain is larger than the individual fall 1991 enrollments reported by 28 out of our 35 public universities," said Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education. "Nearly 20,000 new students have been absorbed by our existing campuses, placing greater demands on faculty, libraries, campus facilities and financial resources."

Twenty-two institutions of higher learning reported a combined increase of 5,681 students statewide, the report said. Thirteen institutions — including Odessa College — experienced a decrease in enrollment, amounting to a combined loss of 3,675

Assistant District Attorney Robin Malone Sams Tuesday announced her candidacy for the Republican Party nomination for 142nd District Court judge.

"I am Republican. I am experienced, and I am ready to serve," Ms. Sams told about 50 people at the County Courthouse.

The position is currently held by Judge Pat Baskin, who will have served 12 years at the end of this term.

He will not seek re-election.

"I have just decided I would rather not run again. There's no real compelling reason," said Baskin, adding he was in good health.

Roy L. West

HOBBS, N.M. — Services for Roy L. West of Midland have been set for 3:30 p.m. (MST) Thursday at Bel-Aire Baptist Church in Hobbs with the Rev. Ben Condray, pastor of Alamo Heights Baptist Church in Midland, and Milo Arbuckle, former pastor of Alamo Heights, officiating. Burial will follow at Prairie Haven Cemetery in Hobbs with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

West died Monday at his residence.

He was born March 19, 1930, in Borger. He was reared in Skellytown and educated in White Deer. In 1950 he entered the U.S. Navy and was stationed in Japan, where he worked in the motor pool. He was a member of the Navy basketball and baseball teams.

Following his discharge, he returned to Skellytown and rejoined Northern Natural Gas. He was transferred to Hobbs in 1953, where he met Juanita Williamson. They were married there Aug. 13, 1954.

He was transferred to Midland in 1980. He retired in 1986.

West was a longtime member of the Bel-Aire Baptist Church and was a member of Alamo Heights Baptist Church at the time of his death.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Pam Stricker of Dallas and Debby Brewster of Midland; two brothers, Lynn West of Pampa and James West of Clear Lake, Calif.; one sister, Betty Glasscock of Fort Mojave, Ariz.; four grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to a favorite charity.

Leonard Johnson

Services for Leonard Johnson, 64, of Midland are pending with Baker-Jackson Funeral Home.

He died Monday at a Midland hospital.

Bobbie Wilson Naeb

Private services for Bobbie Wilson Naeb, mother of Marsha Wilson Samponaro of Midland, were held Oct. 28 in Palm Springs, Calif.

She died on Oct. 26 at her home in Cathedral City, Calif., following a lengthy illness.

Naeb

Mrs. Naeb was born Aug. 2, 1916, in Mount Vernon, Ala., to Joshua and Gladys Bryant. She was raised in Mobile, Ala., and spent her professional career as a buyer in a Mobile department store.

A longtime resident of Fort Stockton, she was an active member of the PTA, band boosters, ballroom dancing clubs, the Fort Stockton Water Carnival, Texas A&M Mothers' Club, the Pecos County Democratic Party, the Community Fine Arts Committee and the Bridge Club.

After leaving Fort Stockton, she resided in Denver, for eight years before moving to California. While in California, Mrs. Naeb was an active member of recreational vehicle travel clubs.

Survivors include her husband, Hal Naeb of Cathedral City; one son, Thomas Bryant Wilson of Virginia City, Va.; another daughter, Beverley Carole Wilson Thornburg of Phoenix, Ariz.and four grandchildren.

HONOR: Students need to be altruistic other factors are considered for induction.

"Character, leadership and service," are also considered, he said. "While a GPA and character are usually easy to assess, leadership and service are more difficult."

Cason said leadership qualities in a student may not be easy to discern since "everybody can't be president of a club."

"Some students just may not have had the opportunity to be a president," he said.

Because of that, some leeway is allowed in decisions of the committee concerning leadership skills.

However, community service is a factor which can be readily apparent in students' records.

In order to be a successful candidate, "students need to be altruistic," Cason said.

"We have community service opportunities for students," the sponsor said. "We visit a nursing home four times per year, and every student — who wants to — can help with that."

At Tuesday's ceremony, LHS senior and honor society member Howard Griffin served as master of ceremonies.

Griffin and fellow senior and honor society member Kim Brown gave the introductory remarks.

Vivian Moss played piano selections and the choral group Origins sang the national anthem.

LHS senior and honor society member Lisa Chochran gave the invocation and Bruce Peeler provided a musical selection.

Brian Abbey, honor society president, read the honor society pledge.

Guest speaker was Assistant District Attorney Robin Malone Sams.

Members of the candlelighting ceremony were National Honor Society officers Abbey, Monisha Poudyal, vice president; Kim Nichols, secretary; and Tiffany Henry, treasurer.

Other officers include projects chairpersons Erin Appling and Kim Brown.

Students on the projects committee are Jeb Honeyman, Stacey Stroman, Tammy Miller, Caryn Kelly, Paul Mansour and Ben Bacon.

Honor society sponsors are Cason, Lois McCarty, Connie Mendez and Alan Pitkin.

A reception followed the induction.

Seniors inducted into the society Tuesday night were Starla Adams, Jennifer Boyle, Darren Brown, Jason Brown, Ashley Burns, Stephanie Bushman, Michelle Butler, Melanie Carrizales, Emily Dugas, Randal Free, Jason Gahr, Cecily Green, Lori Griffith, Melanie Jones, Carla Lathan, Jennifer Quintana, Shelia Sims, Jennifer Snider, Kelli Spencer, Jennifer Spyres, Brandy Waldrep and Jorgee Woolard.

of its lack of an income tax and the work ethic of the labor force. Now, he said, companies considering relocating ask about the revamped franchise tax, costs of shipping within the state, and product liability.

"There are serious problems that need to be addressed by elected officials," beyond the Department of Commerce authorities.

Taxes are a major problem, he said, pointing out that 60 percent of Texas' revenues come from the business community. "It's the opposite in most states that are ahead of us, in that 55 to 60 percent of revenues come from individuals, the remainder from businesses."

Kahn acknowledged that when he took his position in February, the Department of Commerce had a reputation as one of the worst-run agencies in state government. "And when I started work there, I found the reputation was richly deserved."

While he found it was more difficult to run a state agency than a private business, Kahn said he believes he has already made substantial improvements. One change is a shift in focus from attracting out-of-state businesses to helping businesses within the state flourish.

Kahn said Gov. Ann Richards has called a meeting with state bankers to tackle the problems small businesses are facing in obtaining financing.

The department is establishing a database of businesses in Texas — what they produce and where they ship — which can be used to match companies and their needs.

Kahn forsees as crucial a partnership between the department and communities throughout the state.

The second speaker, Ernesto Chavarria, vice president for international affairs for the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce (TAMACC), issued a challenge of his own.

He urged bankers to provide financing to small businesses, and urged corporate America to take small businesses on as partners in franchises and joint ventures, especially small businesses owned by minorities and women.

"Hispanics played a major role in the fast-track agreement (for free trade negotiations with Mexico) and we'll play a major role in the final agreement.

"And we'll be playing a major role in banking. We want to increase the amount of monies going to small business. We've talked to bankers about the need to help finance small businesses and gotten nowhere. That's why I'll hand deliver a letter opposing a bank merger" to Washington, D.C., on Friday, he said.

He told the audience that as business owners, they need to make things happen and that the MHCC, Midland Chamber of Commerce and Texas Department of Commerce can represent the interests of small businesses.

He said small businesses need to be included by the government at the policy-making level, and by corporations in trade discussions and franchises and joint ventures.

"We decided we will not participate in the recession," he said. "We will be aggressive and assertive, and vigorously challenge and ask questions and bring business opportunities to small businesses and their communities."

"It's fine to recruit businesses from other states, but TAMACC believes Texas needs to support, nurture and help businesses already in our cities."

Chavarria had a role in the negotiations for a North American Free Trade Agreement and said it provides a number of opportunities.

He pointed out that Texas exported $14 billion worth of goods to Mexico in 1990, with an estimated $30 billion in goods and 300,000 newly created jobs in 1991.

A continental free trade agreement would put the United States in the middle of 360 million consumers with an output of $6 trillion, he said.

Still, the agreement is not without its concerns, he said, citing the environment, intellectual property and service industry as free trade issues TAMACC is monitoring closely. "We want to minimize the number of potential losers and increase the number of winners," he said.

Also of concern is the displacement of low- and unskilled-workers along the U.S.-Mexico border and training availability for them.

He said opportunities for foreign trade are not limited to Mexico but extend overseas to European and other countries. In fact, he said, "if you're not involved in international trade, you need to look at it. If you're not involved, by the year 2000, you'll be out of business," he warned.

At the installation banquet, Tony Valadez was installed as chairman of the board, succeeding Charlene Romero-Wurtz, the first woman to head the MHCC and who had served two terms.

Other officers are: Rick Menchaca, vice president, finance; Ricky Pena Jr., vice president, education; David Diaz, vice president, economic development; Mike Flores, vice president, networking; Luci Granado, treasurer; Celia Morales, secretary; and Jessie Silvas, parliamentarian.

Newly seated board members are Joe Amezcua, Olivia Farias, Lydia Massey, Alfredo Morales, Ruggero Provenghi, Adela Quiroz, and Ciro Sanchez.

MC: Enrollment grew more than three percent

The report indicated that MC experienced slightly more than a 3 percent increase in enrollment, amounting to about 123 more students. Its total enrollment is more than 4,100.

"This is in line with our long-term projections," said MC President David Daniel. "We do project moderate increases in our enrollment. This particular fall semester is in line with our projections. When we look into the crystal ball, however, we can't say what enrollment will be a year hence."

The University of Texas of the Permian Basin — which opened its first freshman class this fall — also experienced a 3 percent gain in enrollment, while its nearby neighbor Odessa College's enrollment decreased 3 percent.

"Enrollment fluctuates, and we don't have as many dollars to push hard for funding," said OC spokesperson Susan Hammons. "There may be several reasons for the decrease, such as increasing the tuition, the changes in the economy and UTPB accepting freshman."

Ms. Hammons noted, however, that a 3 percent change up or down was a typical trend with the college.

"It's a normal fluctuation for us to change from one year to the next," she said. "In fact, last year we had the second highest fall enrollment on record."

OC has more than 4,800 students this fall.

UTPB spokesperson Travis Woodard said that 179 of more than 2,100 students at the university this fall are freshman. "Although we added the freshman class, our upper level class of 2,046 students was down a little in the original package of students," she said.

"A number of our students are from out of the area," Ms. Woodard added.

Aside from taking on the new freshman, Ms. Woodard said the university's enrollment "is on par with other UT system components."

MC's Daniel said that a recent tuition increase at the college didn't impact enrollment. "Texas community colleges are among the least expensive in the country," he said.

As for UTPB taking on freshman this year, Daniel said, "research indicates that in credit programs at community colleges, when you go 20 miles past the point of instruction you lose 50 percent of the enrollment. With non-credit courses you only need to go 10 miles from the point of instruction to lose 50 percent of the enrollment."

Howard College in Big Spring experienced a 3.5 percent enrollment increase resulting in 2,424 students. Angelo State University had a 2.5 percent decrease resulting in an enrollment of 6,129.

The coordinating board's preliminary headcount figures were based on the 12th class day enrollments.

Parents face charges of starving 13-year-old boy

WHITE SETTLEMENT(AP) — A 13-year-old boy, who starved for months while chained to a cabinet, remained in a coma Tuesday as his parents were transferred to the Tarrant County Jail on child abuse charges.

Stephen Jay Hill was listed in "very critical" condition with "very minimal brain activity" at Cook-Fort Worth Children's Medical Center Tuesday, a hospital official said.

The boy's mother, Linda Hill, 37, and his father, Jay Hill, 42, an engineer at General Dynamics, were arrested and arraigned Monday night on charges of injury to a child.

The mother told authorities they had discipline problems with the 13-year-old, and kept him on a plastic chain and padlock out of reach of food.

When Stephen was found by police Sunday morning, he weighed 55 pounds, about half the normal weight for a boy his age.

The couple was transferred Tuesday from the White Settlement Jail to the Tarrant County Jail, where they both remain on $100,000 bond for one count each of child abuse, said Mike Nichols, an investigator with the White Settlement Police Department.

Hill declined comment as he left the jail in the Fort Worth suburb, but his wife broke down when asked by reporters what she would tell the teen-ager if she could speak to him.

"The same thing I tell him every day, that I love him," Mrs. Hill said as she was led in handcuffs to an awaiting police car.

The two managed Cherry Lane RV Park, where they lived for at least the last three years, Nichols said.

Stephen suffered full cardiac arrest Sunday morning, prompting his parents' first call for help.

According to police records, Mrs. Hill told them: "I'm afraid my husband and I are bad parents. We haven't been feeding the child."

"It appears to be ... a case of starvation," said White Settlement police Chief Richard Mills, "a systematic abuse over a period of months. I've just looked at the pictures and I'm sick."

The boy's 12-year-old brother, Douglas Samuel Hill, described as being in good condition, was placed in the custody of Tarrant County Child Protective Services, police said.

Gloria Corder, a supervisor at the protective services agency, would not comment on the case.

Police found the starving boy after his mother called 911 about 7:40 a.m. Sunday. The caller hung up, but a new tracing system tracked the caller's whereabouts, said police Lt. David Place.

Police called back and the mother told them her son was having trouble breathing.

Not much is known about the couple except they both belong to the Mormon faith. Hill is originally from Utah and his wife from New York State, Nichols said Tuesday.

The couple were not regular churchgoers, but did occasionally attend a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in White Settlement.

There was no answer at the only Mormon church listed in the White Settlement phone directory.

Neither of the Hill children ever attended local schools. Instead, they received instruction at home, Nichols said.

Police Lt. David Place said the family moved to White Settlement three years ago from the southwest Fort Worth suburb of Benbrook.

Neighbors said they didn't even know the couple had children because they never saw them.

Widows of plant accident victims testify before Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widow of a worker killed in a 1989 explosion at a Texas petrochemical plant testified tearfully Tuesday that tougher worker safety laws must be implemented to prevent further disasters.

"Two years have gone by, but I still haven't gotten over my husband's death," Carol Arce testified before a Senate labor subcommittee considering overhaul of the 20-year-old law that created the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"Bert died earning a living, which is an honorable thing, but nobody ought to have to die to earn a living in this country," she said.

Mrs. Arce's husband was among 23 workers who were killed and another 130 injured in the October 1989 explosion at the Phillips 66 Co. chemical plant in Pasadena.

"All they found was half of a jawbone, some hand bones, part of his skull and a few bits of clothing," Mrs. Arce haltingly testified.

A chemist who also worked for Phillips, Mrs. Arce said she has not been able to return to the plant since the explosion.

"But people keep going back to these plants ... They go back because they don't have any choice. They go back because they have to earn a living," she said.

The blame, she said, must rest with the company.

"I don't blame OSHA so much. Who I blame is Phillips," she said.

But Michael Wright, a spokesman for the United Steelworkers of America, faulted OSHA for not increasing its surveillance of the Phillips plant following a blast in which two workers were fatally wounded — just two months before the October 1989 explosion. OSHA levied only a $720 penalty following its investigation of the earlier accident, he said.

"Why did OSHA not cite Phillips for the lack of an adequate training program," he asked.

A second widow, Bonnie Skala of Grand Island, Neb., also testified Tuesday that reform is urgently needed. Her husband, Richard, was killed in October 1990 when his head was crushed in a machine at the Monfort meat-processing plant in Grand Island.

"I believe in my heart that my husband's death could have been prevented if some form of the legislation currently proposed had been enacted prior to my husband's accident," Mrs. Skala testified.

"The question is, how many more widows, surviving family members and friends must appear before you, before something is done to help American industry and their workers," she said. "I hope my husband's death serves as a notice that worker safety regulations need to be changed."

In August, Sens. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., introduced legislation to strengthen OSHA's standard-setting and enforcement authority. The bill also would force employers to set up joint labor-management safety committees.

Metzenbaum, who chairs the labor subcommittee, criticized the business community for shunning an invitation to give its input at Tuesday's hearing.

tion. But prospective candidates have until Jan. 2 to file.

"Without an incumbent running again, it is highly likely I will draw an opponent," Ms. Sams said during an interview.

Ms. Sams said she had considered entering the race for approximately the last two years.

"Running for district judge seemed like a new opportunity and a way to stay in the courtroom," Ms. Sams said.

"I feel like I've got plenty of experience, and honesty and integrity to be a district judge," she said.

That experience includes seven years with the District Attorney's Office. Since June 1, Ms. Sams has been Chief Prosecutor for Narcotics Crimes.

Ms. Sams' professional background also includes serving as special assistant to Republican Secretary of State David Dean, and as legislative assistant to Republican Representative Ashley Smith of Houston.

A third-generation Midlander, Ms. Sams attended Lee High School, where she graduated ninth out of a class of 676. She received a Bachelor of Business Administration degree from Baylor University, and her Juris Doctorate Degree from Baylor Law School. Ms. Sams studied international law at the University of Durham in Durham, England, on a Rotary Foundation Scholarship.

During her announcement, Ms. Sams was accompanied by her husband, Lourcey Sams and their 3-year-old daughter, Ann Malone Sams.

Candidates must officially file for the position between Dec. 3 and Jan. 2; primaries are scheduled for March 10.

four people who is qualified for assistance actually receives it."

Financing homes in today's circumstances is often a matter of coordinating efforts between support agencies and financial entities, local governments and philanthropic foundations, Werwath said.

"Here you obviously need a fairly big-scale program," he said. "One of the issues might be if you need another organization or not, and if it would be a coordinating entity."

Attendees told Werwath they were very concerned about housing for the mentally ill, disabled, homeless and mentally retarded citizens of Midland. Other needs cited were transitional shelters for short-time occupation by homeless families, emergency housing and living quarters for drug and alcohol abusers in rehabilitation programs.

Don Hellinghausen, chairman of the Introspective task force, said the group's job now is to determine if Enterprise could help Midland.

"We don't want this to move onto the back burner," he said. "We want to get together as soon as possible and make a decision whether to have an initial visit (for the housing assessment)."

He said the discussion had been extremely valuable.

"If you looked around, all the key players in housing were here. That was what we needed," Hellinghausen said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Tremendous personal growth and business success are possible. Those contemplating a job change could see their dreams come true. Be patient. Jumping at the first offer would be a mistake in January or February of 1992. The family circle expands in spring. An enduring romance could lead you to the altar in June. Keep in touch with old friends, former co-workers and neighbors. Late summer is the best time for a vacation.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Sally Field, director Mike Nichols, musician Glen Frey, journalist Maria Shriver.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day for making a fresh start! Replace bad manners with good ones. You get support for a pet project that was rejected earlier. Evening will provide a happy romantic surprise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An excellent day for signing contracts and agreements. Legal matters are likely to be settled in your favor. You are practiced at getting your own way. Share the limelight with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A period of reflection produces a wise decision and inner peace. Your co-workers look to you for leadership. Do not let them down. Plan a dinner for two at your favorite restaurant.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Put a child's needs ahead of your own. Romance may have to wait. Your colleagues respect you but are afraid to hire you. They fear that you know more than they do!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Give generously of your time or money. A special favor will be richly repaid. Anticipate delays or foul-ups in a business transaction and be patient. A favorite hobby helps you relax tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): To keep the course of romance smooth, be patient. A verbal or written financial arrangement proves beneficial. Words bring change — make your views known to influential people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Ventures shared, either for profit or pleasure, bring tremendous satisfaction. Why not use a gift to say something nice? Your down-to-earth manner impresses a potential romantic partner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A good day to perfect both business and family plans. Pour your energies into a project already on the launching pad. A woman's ideas give your spirits a lift. Dine out tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A good day for instigating changes at work or home. Greater self-discipline will help you solve a tricky personal problem. Give a close friend a token of your love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those with tax problems should consult experts only. A lawyer or accountant offers excellent advice; follow it to the letter. Romance takes on exciting new overtones. A wedding date may be set.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Now is the time to make big changes! Creative and artistic pursuits deserve top priority. Career advancement is easier than in the past. An important event could take place this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The financial picture improves, thanks to a friend's behind-the-scenes maneuvering. Keep a promise to your loved ones. The more you give, the more you will receive.

Can a trick be won too cheaply? Judge for yourselves.

The feud that had developed at the club between Votmai Tinkinov, the Russian emigre noted for his rapid if inaccurate play, and Trump Coup Tommy, who played well only when declaring a hand with an awful trump break, grew more intense with time and this hand did little to ease the animosity. The Russian and his partner arrived at three no trump via an irreproachable auction—Votmai's rebid showed a balanced hand of 19-20 points and North had no interest beyond game.

Tommy, West, made the one lead that no sane defender would have found—a low diamond. Our choice would have been the nine of hearts. Dummy's five fetched the four from East, and declarer proudly placed the two thereon. Now Votmai had a situation he could boast about forever—he had won a trick consisting of the two, three, four and five of a suit to tie a world record.

A diamond to the king revealed the fact the suit was going to produce only three tricks. Declarer could count nine tricks, but there was no entry to dummy to collect the spades. So declarer cashed the queen of spades, overtook the jack and continued with the ace, in the hope of dropping the ten. When that did not happen declarer tried the club finesse. West won and exited with a heart, and declarer had to be satisfied with eight tricks.

As happens so often, careless play to the first trick had cost declarer the contract. Since West surely had not led a singleton diamond, South could have made sure of an entry to dummy by winning that trick with the king of diamonds. After cashing the queen and jack of spades, declarer can get to dummy by continuing with ace of diamonds and another. That way, South would score four spade tricks, three diamonds and the aces in the rounded suits.

Jermaine Jackson song assails brother Michael's altered looks

NEW YORK — Jermaine Jackson wrote a song attacking his brother Michael Jackson for altering his looks then softened the lyrics for a new album. The first version is airing, however, on New York and Los Angeles radio stations.

The original version of "Word to the Badd!!" was never officially released but it began playing last week on WQHT-FM in New York and its companion station KPWR-FM in Los Angeles.

The timing seems apropos: Michael Jackson's new single "Black and White" from his upcoming "Dangerous" album also was apparently leaked to radio stations last weekend.

Michael Jackson's song is about the irrelevance of skin color. Jermaine Jackson's tune accuses his superstar sibling of being ashamed of being black.

The softer version of Jermaine Jackson's song appears on his new album, "You Said," produced by LaFace and distributed by Arista records.

An industry source speaking on condition of anonymity, said the original lyrics were deemed too hard-hitting, so Jermaine changed them.

NEW YORK — A truck driver who nabbed a teen-ager charged with robbing Donald Trump's mother will get dinner at the Plaza with The Donald.

Trump

"We're going to have dinner soon," Trump said Tuesday.

Trump said "there are two lines of thought" on whether he can give a more substantial reward to Lawrence Herbert, who chased down the 16-year-old mugging suspect.

Some lawyers advised Trump could jeopardize a conviction by rewarding Herbert before a trial; others say it wouldn't matter.

"We want to find out which is right before we do anything more," the developer said.

Trump said his mother, Mary, remained in the hospital "but she's doing better."

Mrs. Trump, 79, was attacked Thursday as she walked along a small shopping strip in the Jamaica Estates section of Queens. Authorities said Paul LoCastro tried to grab her purse, which contained $14, and knocked her to the ground.

Mrs. Trump suffered broken ribs and severe face bruises and was taken to Booth Memorial Hospital. She was listed in satisfactory condition, said hospital spokeswoman Nancy Simington.

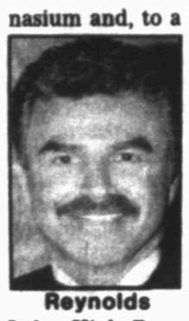
WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Burt Reynolds sauntered into his old high school gymnasium and, to a chorus of squealing teenage girls, wound up on memory lane.



Reynolds

"This town has always been very special to me," the 55-year-old actor said. "This is my home."

It wasn't pure nostalgia that brought him back Monday to Palm Beach High School, since renamed Twin Lakes High. Reynolds' return will be part of an ABC special, "Class Clowns," to air next February.

The show is about four celebrities who revisit their alma maters to encourage kids to stay in school. The others are Bill Cosby, Roseanne Arnold and Howie Mandel.

NEW YORK — John Heard, who played the father in the movie "Home Alone," was arrested for allegedly slapping the mother of his 4-year-old son.

Heard, 45, who lives in Manhattan, was arrested Sunday and charged with third-degree assault on his former girlfriend, Melissa Leo, 30, said police spokeswoman Sgt. Tina Mohrmann.

He was released on his own recognizance. A hearing was set for Nov. 25.

Heard and Leo are in a dispute over custody of their son, John Matthew. The alleged incident occurred when Leo went to Heard's apartment to take the boy home.

ATLANTA — The Rev. Jesse Jackson won't be running for president next year but he'll have a new job anyway: host of a talk show on CNN, Cable News Network said Tuesday.

"Both Sides With Jesse Jackson" will probably air Saturday nights and feature debate.

LONDON — Elizabeth Taylor said Tuesday that sharing information and ideas are crucial to finding a cure for AIDS.

"We can and must work closely together — whether in London or in Leningrad or in Los Angeles," the actress told guests at a celebrity luncheon to benefit the Aids Crisis Trust.

"No one person has a copyright on compassion," she said. "No one person has a monopoly on hope. But together we can and we will defeat our common enemy — the enemy that is AIDS."

Dining with Miss Taylor and her new husband, Larry Fortensky, were Elton John, Michael Caine and artist David Hockney, among others.

Medicaid cutbacks could cost $1.2 billion a year

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Bush administration continues to tighten the screws on Medicaid funding, dozens of Texas hospitals will close and taxpayers will bear a larger burden to cover health care for the poor, state and hospital officials say.

More stringent Medicaid requirements could cost Texas up to $1.2 billion a year in lost funding at a time when it can ill afford it, they say.

At least one Texas congressman is placing the blame squarely on President Bush.

"It's kind of like Bush's thousand points of light. He's just turned out the lights on a thousand hospitals," said Rep. Bill Sarpalius, D-Amarillo.

"You're saving money by closing rural hospitals and shoving people out in the streets," Sarpalius said Monday. "I think there are a lot of other ways in this country to save money."

Last week, the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), which oversees Medicaid, issued a rule clarification that would prevent states from getting extra Medicaid funds. HCFA objects to a practice by which states collect special taxes or "voluntary donations" from Medicaid providers such as hospitals and nursing homes and qualify for a federal cash match.

HCFA claims that many states are undermining Medicaid by getting the matching funds and then returning to the providers the tax and donations they originally paid.

Experts say the new rules could force the closure of some of the state's estimated 460 hospitals, while creating cutbacks at other facilities.

"There is a clear cliff that we're driving this freight train at high speed toward. Medicare, Medicaid, it's all going to fall apart," said Joe DaSilva, a spokesman for the Texas Hospital Association.

"The question is can we Band-Aid it enough that when it falls apart the leaders that we have are going to be willing to look at the problems," he said.

The tightened rules, scheduled to take effect Jan. 1, could spell doom for poor Texans, said Jude Filler, executive director of the Texas Alliance for Human Needs, a statewide coalition dealing with poverty concerns.

"We're so far down at the bottom of the barrel in programs and it's really only been in the last couple of years that Texas policymakers have understood the importance of taking advantage of matching monies to implement good programs. Now those monies won't be available," she said.

"This state does not have the resources or the philosophy really to take care of people. They will buck it to the counties ... and we'll have lots more people sick and dying and destitute because there's no more care for them."

The State of Texas Office of State-Federal Relations projects Texas would lose up to $813 million in federal funds if the rules are implemented, with another $400 million in state aid diverted from the state's $6.3 billion Medicaid budget.

Bob Hardy, a HCFA spokesman in Washington, said the agency cannot determine how states would be affected.

"The programs are varied and I don't think we are able to do such an analysis at this point," he said.

Sarpalius said dozens of hospitals, especially those in rural areas, could be driven out of business. DaSilva said the impact would mainly be felt by metropolitan hospitals that treat many Medicaid patients.

But the issue, DaSilva said, goes beyond finances.

"You hear the administration talking about dollars. You don't hear anyone talk about the patients," he said. "There are hundreds of thousands of people that are suffering."

Despite concerns that a special legislative session might be needed to address the looming crisis, a spokesman for Gov. Ann Richards said it's unlikely she would issue such a call. Lawmakers are not scheduled to meet until the regular session in 1993.

The state is forming a task force to examine health issues, said Richards spokesman Chuck McDonald.

Commissioner hesitates to regulate ground water

AUSTIN (AP) — State water officials said Tuesday they would regulate ground water only as a last resort, and added that they plan no immediate action against a catfish farm that is using more water than many cities.

Texas Water Commission Chairman John Hall said an opinion by Texas Attorney General Dan Morales allows the agency to limit pumping of ground water, but he added, "we believe very strongly that local problems are best solved through local solutions."

Hall said limiting the use of ground water would break a longstanding Texas tradition that landowners can do whatever they want with the water under their property. Such regulations would probably be challenged in court, he said.

But, he said, declining water levels in the Edwards Aquifer have reached a crisis, and that the agency is prepared to step in if factions continue to war over usage of the underground reservoir that feeds San Antonio and other areas.

"The midnight hour is approaching," he said referring to the Edwards Aquifer. "Those who depend on overtaxed water supplies must act to solve the problems they face. In absence of such action, it is our intention, and we are prepared, to exercise oversight."

Despite the urgency, Hall said the Water Commission would not use the attorney general's opinion to move against a Bexar County catfish farm that is using 43.2 million gallons of water per day. By comparison that is about one-fourth as much water as the city of San Antonio uses daily.

It would be unfair to single out the Living Waters Artesian Springs Catfish Farm, Hall said. He said a comprehensive conservation and drought management plan is needed for the entire aquifer.

He said if parties dependent on the Edwards Aquifer fail within the next three or four months to show a good-faith effort in resolving their differences, then the Water Commission could develop criteria for regulating water usage within 90 days after that.

Hall said the Water Commission would only propose regulating ground water in "those very serious cases where local solutions are not being developed."

He said water districts, such as the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District, would have nothing to worry about because they have effectively managed their water supply.

City sues homeowners in effort to close crack houses

AUSTIN (AP) — In an effort to shut down alleged crack houses, the city is taking the homeowners to court.

"These are going to be test cases. If we are successful here we are going to continue to use this law to close down crack houses," Assistant City Attorney Orlinda Naranjo said.

In the lawsuits, the city alleges the properties are a "common nuisance" and can be seized if the owner participated in or knew of alleged drug trafficking occurring there, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

"It's our position that we want the drug sellers and users to know that the city of Austin is going to use every method it can to make neighborhoods safe," Ms. Naranjo said.

"If we have to go after the owners and make them accountable, then that's what we have to do. We want to return the neighborhoods back to the neighbors," she said.

The owners of one house said they had no idea there was any problem.

Susana Wilson of Los Angeles said, "We moved to L.A. in '63." She said the house has been rented to the same person since the 1970s.

"We were just out here in the dark. We didn't know," she said.

Assistant City Attorney Bob Rose said the homes in question are "rather notorious."

'If we have to go after the owners and make them accountable, then that's what we have to do. We want to return the neighborhoods back to the neighbors.'

— Orlinda Naranjo, Assistant City Attorney

"The neighbors are also upset because the dealing is quite blatant," he said.

Other cities, including Houston, Dallas and Los Angeles have turned to civil lawsuits in the fight against drugs.

In Dallas, a task force was established last month to help investigate 300 cases in which the civil remedy of declaring crack houses nuisances might be used.

So far, Dallas judges have shut down two alleged crack houses, according to Dallas Assistant City Attorney Bob Davis.

Public Notice

On October 18, 1991, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas to add a new optional service offering called SmartTrunk℠ Service. The application has been assigned Tariff Control No. 10687.

SmartTrunk Service provides access between the customer's premises and the serving Southwestern Bell central office for circuit-switched voice and data communications. This communication capability is provided where facilities are available using Integrated Services Digital Network architecture. ISDN services available with SmartTrunk Service use Primary Rate Interface (PRI) technology. SmartTrunk Service requires PRI ISDN compatible Private Branch Exchange (PBX) customer provided equipment registered under FCC Part 68 Rules. SmartTrunk Service employs a 1.544 Mbps facility (denoted as SmartTrunk interface) typically divided into twenty-three B channels and one D channel. B channels are used for voice and data communications while the D channel provides out-of-band signaling.

If approved by the Commission, the rates for each SmartTrunk Interface facility will be $1,110 per month under a 36-month service contract or $1,010 per month under a 60-month service contract. The proposed rate for the use of the central office varies from $12.25 up to $18.90 per month for each B channel depending on the rate group classification which is determined by the customer's location. Southwestern Bell estimates revenue of $2.8 million from this offering during the first year.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should file comments regarding this application with the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at (512) 458-0256. The telecommunications device for the deaf (TDD) number is (512) 458-0221.

Student loans, ethics proposals win approval

AUSTIN (AP) — A plan to sell more state-backed bonds to finance thousands of student loans was approved Tuesday by Texas voters, who in August rejected the same proposed constitutional amendment.

With about 90 percent of the precincts reporting, there were 1,154,019 votes, or 65 percent, in favor of Proposition 13, and 619,592 votes, or 35 percent, against.

The proposal will allow up to $300 million more in general obligation bonds for loans to Texas college students. Voters narrowly rejected the proposal in the last election, but backers made a strong effort this time to get out their message.

The vote was close on another proposal on the ballot, which would put into the state constitution an ethics commission to investigate formal complaints against public officials and take action on wrongdoing.

There were 966,670 votes, or 53 percent, for Proposition 6, and 843,502 votes, or 47 percent, against.

State law creates an ethics commission even without passage of a constitutional amendment.

But Proposition 6 — besides providing the ethics commission with constitutional protection — also was designed to give it the authority to propose legislative pay raises to voters, and to increase the extra daily stipend that lawmakers receive while in session.

Voters also approved other proposed amendments on the ballot, including:

■ Proposition 1, allowing home rule cities to amend their charters regardless of population. With about 90 percent of the precincts reporting, the vote was 1,457,740 in favor, or 81 percent, and 337,850 against, or 19 percent.

■ Proposition 8, allowing creation of state debt through propositions that would be submitted to voters, but which would not amend the Texas Constitution.

■ Proposition 9, providing for qualified landholders, who in good faith purchased land dedicated to the public school fund, to obtain title from the General Land Office to that land. This may affect only one landholder. The vote was 1,071,352 in favor, or 64 percent, and 615,216 against, or 36 percent.

Voters turned down the following proposed amendments:

■ Proposition 5, to allow cities, counties or junior college districts to exempt from taxation "freeport" tangible personal property within an enterprise zone. The vote was 640,881 in favor, or 37 percent, and 1,078,594 against, or 63 percent.

■ Proposition 7, to permit the state Employees Retirement System and the Teacher Retirement System to invest assets in such a manner as their boards may consider prudent, opening up investment options that are not securities. The vote was 643,130 in favor, or 37 percent, and 1,103,777 against, or 63 percent.

The vote was running in favor of Proposition 3, to allow the Legislature to determine how to invest proceeds of Veterans' Land Board bonds, eliminating the constitutional limitation on board investments to U.S. bonds or obligations.

$1.1 billion prison bond proposal passes

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans adopted a $1.1 billion bond proposal Tuesday to cope with one of the nation's largest and fastest-growing prison populations.

With 58 percent of precincts reporting, Proposition 4 on the constitutional amendment ballot showed 665,833, or 66 percent, in favor and 343,272, or 34 percent, against.

"It's great. I'm elated," said Sen. Ted Lyon, who sponsored the proposed amendment.

"The overwhelming approval of Proposition 4 should send a signal to criminals that Texans want felons kept off the streets for longer terms," Lyon said.

"This is, perhaps, the beginning of the end of the drug problem in Texas," said Lyon, D-Rockwall.

Of the $1.1 billion in bonds, the Legislature has earmarked $672 million for new prison beds, $41 million for youth correctional facilities and $35 million for mental health and mental retardation.

The 1993 Legislature could determine how the rest of the money could be spent.

"Approval of the financing for this program will help safeguard our children and could stand for decades as the turning point in our battle against crime in Texas," Lyon said.

Gov. Ann Richards also had urged a favorable vote, and on Tuesday said "we have begun the process of making our communities safer places for our families."

The prison reform group CURE, or Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants, said the bond proposal over 20 years would cost $10.15 billion, including interest, inflation and operating expenses.

"We cannot build ourselves out of crime. Prisons are counterproductive schools of crime . . . not an effective tool for crime control," CURE said.

Texas ranked third in the number of inmates in custody at the end of 1990, and fourth in percentage increase — 13.7 — since 1989.

A survey by the U.S. Department of Justice showed that Texas' 50,042 inmates in custody were topped only by California's 97,309 and New York's 54,895. Of the 10 states with the most inmates, Texas and California had the fastest-growing prison populations.

The money would build 25,300 new prison beds — 13,300 maximum-security and 12,000 for drug and alcohol treatment, which is said to be unprecedented.

Texas for years has tried to improve a prison system bursting at the seams and causing backlogs in county jails, which led to a lengthy controversy between the state and certain counties that only recently was settled. Even tents have been used to house inmates.

Acting on a 1972 lawsuit by prison inmates, U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice found the Texas prison system unconstitutional in 1981. He appointed a special master in July of that year to monitor the state's progress in complying with court-ordered reforms.

Justice's ruling was largely upheld by the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in 1982.

In March 1990, the judge signed an order to end the special master's monitoring of the prison system.

Houston incumbent Whitmire loses; Bartlett leads in Dallas

Associated Press

Incumbent Kathy Whitmire's 10-year reign as mayor of Houston ended Tuesday when wealthy developer Bob Lanier and state Rep. Sylvester Turner won spots in a runoff, sending Mrs. Whitmire to a first-ever defeat.

With 98 percent of the vote counted, Mrs. Whitmire trailed both Lanier and Turner, who is attempting to become the city's first black mayor.

Lanier had 134,309 votes, or 44.1 percent, while Turner had 108,032 or 35.5 percent, and Mrs. Whitmire 61,487 or 20.2 percent.

Lanier and Turner will face each other in a Dec. 3 runoff.

Steve Bartlett, a Republican who resigned from Congress to run for Dallas mayor, appeared poised for an outright victory over five challengers in Tuesday's nonpartisan election delayed by a divisive federal lawsuit that led to an expanded City Council.

With 76 percent of the precincts reporting, Bartlett had 69,691 votes or 54 percent.

West Texans more leery of lottery, split votes on state Proposition 11

Staff Report

Midland area residents split their votes on the controversial proposal to authorize a state lottery.

While Texans statewide overwhelmingly approved the measure, West Texans were more leery of the proposition.

In addition to Midland County, other area counties opposing Proposition 11 were Andrews and Martin. Andrews voters defeated it by a 857-820 count, while voters in Martin County strongly defeated measure, 407-282.

Meanwhile, residents in Howard, Borden, Upton, Glasscock, Ector and Crane counties supported the proposition.

The vote totals in those counties were: Howard County, 2,337-1,931; Glasscock County, 150-84; Upton County, 464-280; Borden County, 126-96; Crane County, 418-346; and Ector County, 7,654-5,312.

Following is how voters in several area counties cast ballots on all 13 propositions:

Andrews County:
Proposition No. 1: For, 1,292; Against, 286.

Cowboys face biggest test

Dallas enters Astrodome as seven-point underdog

Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys coach Jimmy Johnson said Tuesday that Sunday's game against the Houston Oilers will be the biggest test his team has faced in his three years as coach.

Johnson

"It's a severe test because of Warren Moon, their quality receivers, all the No. 1 draft picks on their offensive line, their tremendous defense and their outstanding special teams," Johnson said. "You have to consider Houston's track record when it plays in the Astrodome."

The Oilers are 7-point favorites in the showdown at the Astrodome, and Johnson said that's about right.

"It's as big a challenge as our team could have," Johnson said. "The crowd noise will be tremendous, they'll be fired up from the opening kickoff, they'll be a fanatical crowd."

The Cowboys recently had problems with noise in the Pontiac Silverdome, blowing several snap counts against the Detroit Lions.

"The crowd noise limits our offense some," Johnson said. "Our offense will have to concentrate on every play; we can't have any false movements, linemen jumping. It limits our audibles."

Johnson said he will advise quarterback Troy Aikman to run the play despite the noise.

"The quarterback has to go ahead and snap the ball," Johnson said. "It really doesn't get any better if he backs out."

Johnson said despite Houston's advantages, the Cowboys won't back down.

"We played them in preseason and worked against them in training camp and that takes away some of the possible awe of playing them," Johnson said. "It's not an easy task. But we're not in awe."

Dallas holds a 4-2 regular season edge in the series with Houston, winning 25-17 in the last meeting in 1988.

■ Oilers sign kicker/2C

Johnson decided to start rookie defensive tackle Russell Maryland, a first-round draft pick, for the first time this year to beef up the pass rush.

However, Johnson concedes it's hard to get to Moon.

"Moon has had only seven sacks this season and you really can't get to him with their offensive line," Johnson said. "All you can hope is to throw him off rhythm. If you think you can get to Warren Moon, then you're definitely off base."

Johnson said he didn't consider the Houston game a rivalry, although both teams have training camp within 40 miles of each other and are in the same state.

"It's not a real rivalry," Johnson said. "There are feelings when the two teams play because the Cowboys had such success in the past while the Oilers were building."

Saints injured

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fullback Craig "Ironhead" Heyward has a hairline fracture of the foot and will go on the New Orleans Saints' injured reserve list this week, a Saints spokesman said Tuesday.

Heyward's injury originally was diagnosed as a sprained arch of his left foot. But X-rays revealed the fracture, so he will be out of action for the minimum four weeks after being assigned to the injured reserve list.

Tailback Dalton Hilliard went on injured reserve last week, and his replacement, Gill Fenerty, played only one play last week because of two sprained knees.

A&M in SWC hunt

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference Council of Presidents Tuesday voted to allow Texas A&M to participate in the league's post-season basketball tournament, despite a ruling by a NCAA committee that prohibits them from its post-season play.

The NCAA's Committee on Infractions placed A&M on two years probation Monday for what it called major violations under former coach Kermit Davis, Jr., now an assistant coach at Chipola Junior College in Marianna, Fla.

The Aggies will not be permitted to participate in NCAA post-season play this season. They also will be limited to two scholarships for the 1992-93 season and can have only eight instead of the usual 15 expense-paid official visits for the 1992 calendar year.

In addition, the infractions committee accepted the university's elimination of off-campus recruiting for men's basketball during this past spring.

The SWC presidents council late Tuesday afternoon waived a policy in the SWC Men's Basketball Sport Manual prohibiting teams subject to NCAA post-season sanctions from participating in the SWC Post-Season basketball tournament.

Knoblauch named top AL rookie

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chuck Knoblauch, a second baseman who made the jump from Class AA to the majors and helped spark the Minnesota Twins to a World Series victory, was chosen American League Rookie of the Year on Tuesday.

Knoblauch received 26 of 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Toronto pitcher Juan Guzman and Detroit outfielder Milt Cuyler split the other two first-place votes.

"Luckily I was a winning team, did some things well and had a consistent year," Knoblauch said from his home in Houston. "There's been a lot of people saying I was going to get it, but I didn't feel like it until I got the call."

Knoblauch got two second-place votes and finished with 136 points in the 5-3-1 voting system. Guzman got 20 seconds

Dowd leaves Midland Angels

Staff Report

Charlie Dowd, who spent last season as the assistant general manager for the Midland Angels, has been named general manager for the Salinas Spurs of the Class-A California League the team announced Tuesday.

Dowd, 29 and a member of the Angels front office for the past two seasons, served as the club's director of marketing in 1990. He succeeds Kevin Haughian in Salinas. Haughian is leaving Salinas to accept the general manager reins with the Palm Springs Angels.

"My experience in Midland taught me that good promotions, a clean ballpark and aggressive marketing make a world of difference," said Dowd, who was on hand as the Angels set franchise attendance records each of the past two seasons.

The Angels also announced Tuesday the addition of Scott Seator to their front office staff. Seator, a graduate of DePauw University in Greencastle Indiana, comes to Midland after completion of an internship with the NBC Sports Media Relations Department in New York.

Hadnot earns SWC honor

University of Texas running back Butch Hadnot sheds Texas Tech defender Mike Liscio for the touchdown that put the Longhorns ahead to in SWC action last Saturday.

■ A career-best 166-yard, two-touchdown effort against Texas Tech shows University of Texas running back Butch Hadnot is healthy.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Big Butch is back.

Texas running back Butch Hadnot, apparently recovered from a deep foot bruise suffered in the Auburn game Sept. 21, ran for a career-high 166 yards on 24 carries and two touchdowns in the Longhorns' 23-15 victory over Texas Tech on Saturday.

For his performance, the Kirbyville sophomore was selected as The Associated Press' offensive player-of-the-week in the Southwest Conference.

Baylor safety Michael McFarland, a junior from Jasper, was named SWC defensive player after intercepting two passes in helping the Bears beat Arkansas 9-5.

McFarland's second interception came at the Baylor 1-yard line with 3:01 left in the game. He also had six tackles, four unassisted.

The 214-pound Hadnot was Texas' leading rusher as a freshman last season with 541 yards but had only 200 through six games before Saturday. The touchdown runs of 26 and 34 yards were his first this season, and signaled a return to form for Hadnot, who had eight scoring runs in 1990.

"Welcome back, Butch," said Texas defensive end Shane Dronett.

Coach David McWilliams said, "I think he's been wanting to turn loose and have that kind of a game, and I think probably, too, he's one of those guys that's a little better the more times you give him the football."

Hadnot had minus 1 yard on two carries at halftime against Tech. "It looked like the more you got him the ball ... the stronger he got," McWilliams said.

Running backs Phil Brown and Adrian Walker had left the game with injuries, and it was up to Hadnot with Texas backed up to its 2 in the third quarter. On second down, Hadnot ripped off nine yards for a first down — "a real big run," McWilliams said.

"I think it just fires up the whole team. I think it helps (quarterback) Peter (Gardere) to know that we've got that."

Hadnot said, "It's good to be back."

When kids talk in 4-5A, it's just hot air

Kids talk.

PANTHER: I'm the king. I'm the king, again. I'm the meanest cat in the universe. I beat you guys fair and square. This is the year of my revenge and you guys paid the price for kicking me out of the brotherhood a year ago. Take it and like it.

Williamson

BOBCAT: (Whispering to the Rebel) — Yeah, he beat us Reb, but he really clubbed you a good one. I can still see the knot on your head. I scared the pants off him last week — and he's still talking that trash.

REBEL: Keep talking Kittie-Kat, you come to my place this week. They are saying this game don't mean nothing. I hope you believe that.

BOBCAT: Oh, I'm scared. What was that last week — 14-6 — against Abilene High? You oughta be ashamed of yourself.

REBEL: We wuz looking ahead to you, Kittie-Kat. Forget Abilene High.

BOBCAT: Sure. If you believe that, I've got this bridge...

REBEL: Wait a minute, Concho-Kat. How many times have you been in the state playoffs in the last nine years? Exactly twice and last year it was only because the UIL starting allowing three teams in from each district.

BOBCAT: Yeah? Well, you're going to be awfully glad the UIL has a three team rule after Friday night, or you'd be the one sitting home, playing tiddly-winks with your girlfriend — that is if she would still talk with you after missing the playoffs.

REBEL: I think you need a minor mind adjustment, Kat-Breath. When was the last time you beat us? 1983, that's when. You've had your tail between your legs 12 of the last 13 times we've played. We own you.

PANTHER: Oh, I love it when these guys talk dirty to each other. You'd think they were playing for the district championship. But I've got that in my hip pocket. All I need to do is beat Abilene High. I'm going to show old Reb how it's done. I just love showing old Reb how to play this game. It makes my year.

REBEL: I see what you mean, Bobcat. This guy really gets on your nerves. I'd go over and belt him in the nose if I didn't have this big knot on my head. The doctor says I'm allergic to Panther hair.

BOBCAT: To tell you the truth, I'm glad we've got a lot of students. I'm going to play in that Big School division and leave you guys to fight it out. I hope you and old Mojo meet in the Small School quarterfinals while I play some pansy. I just might win myself a state championship — if it don't rain or snow between now and Christmas.

REBEL: Panther thinks he's going to win a state championship, but whether you beat us or not, Bobcat, we just may be good enough to play old Mojo again. And he'll have to play No. 1 Arlington Lamar the week before us.

BOBCAT: Dream on Reb. You better listen to that doctor of yours. Getting undressed twice in one season by the same team — especially one as ugly as old Panther — isn't much fun. Anyway, I don't have to worry about that anymore.

PANTHER: (While snickering) They know I'm the baddest cat around. I just love it. I hope they tie because I can't wait to see what they have to say after next week.

REBEL: That guy really gets on my nerves.

Cavaliers upend Mavs, 112-101

Associated Press

DALLAS — Larry Nance scored 13 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter as the Cleveland Cavaliers won their first game this season, beating the winless Dallas Mavericks 112-101 Tuesday night.

Craig Ehlo added 22 points and Brad Daugherty scored 20 and had 12 rebounds for Cleveland, which had lost its first two games. Dallas, led by Rolando Blackman's 23 points, is winless in three starts.

The Mavericks made a late charge and got as close as 104-99 with 1:15 left on Blackman's two free throws. But Ehlo made a layup with 51.7 seconds to play to close out the Mavericks.

After leading by as much as 97-83 with 4:33 to play, Cleveland allowed its lead to dwindle to 98-91 on Terry Davis' three-point play and Fat Lever's 3-point shot with 2:52 left.

Rockets 106, Blazers 99

HOUSTON — Vernon Maxwell scored 24 points, including the go-ahead basket with 1:17 to play, as the Houston Rockets broke a two-year losing streak against Portland.

Maxwell's basket gave Houston a 98-97 lead, its first advantage since the first quarter, and the Rockets held on to snap a seven-game losing streak against Portland. Houston lost all four games last season and the final three the previous one, last beating the Trail Blazers 109-86 on Nov. 7, 1989.

Warriors 118, Bulls 110

CHICAGO — Chris Mullin scored 38 points and led a 20-2 fourth-quarter charge as unbeaten Golden State beat Chicago.

The Warriors have won their first three games for the first time since 1982-83. The Bulls fell to 1-2, despite 40 points from Michael Jordan.

In the fourth quarter, the Warriors rallied behind Mullin, who scored seven of their first 11 points to take a 98-94 lead. Rod Higgins also sparked the big final period by scoring 12 of his 16 points.

Charlotte's J.R. Reid is forced to pass around Bill Laimbeer as Detroit downs the Hornets.

Hawks 98, Jazz 94

ATLANTA — Blair Rasmussen hit shots from each corner in the final 1:42 and Dominique Wilkins scored 9 of his 25 points in the final 6 minutes as Atlanta rallied to beat Utah.

The Jazz, scoring only one basket and two free throws in the final 7:01, blew a 90-81 lead when Wilkins went to work late. He scored 7 points in a 9-0 run that got the Hawks even at 90-90 on his 17-footer with 3:03 to play.

Knicks 113, Bucks 85

NEW YORK — Pat Riley got his first victory as coach of the New York Knicks with big assists from Mark Jackson and Xavier McDaniel.

Riley, who compiled the best winning percentage in NBA history while he was coach of the Los Angeles Lakers, saw the Knicks lose their first two games in Florida over the weekend.

Pistons 117, Hornets 93

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Mark Aguirre scored 22 points off the bench and Bill Laimbeer led a decisive second-half surge as Detroit kept Charlotte winless.

Laimbeer scored 9 of his 16 points as the Pistons opened the second half with a 20-6 spurt, turning a 52-48 halftime lead into a 72-54 advantage with 4:50 left in the third quarter. Isiah Thomas added 19 points.

76ers 107, Bullets 106

LANDOVER, Md. — Hersey Hawkins scored the game-winning basket with 5.7 seconds left as Philadelphia won its first game this season.

Charles Barkley scored 33 points and grabbed 19 rebounds for Philadelphia, which narrowly avoided going 0-3 for the first time since 1972.

Celtics 93, Heat 89

MIAMI (AP) — Free throws kept Miami in the game, then beat the Heat as the Boston Celtics made six straight in the final 63 seconds.

Rick Fox hit two free throws to put the Celtics ahead for good at 89-87. Robert Parish added two with 10 seconds left for a 91-88 lead, and Larry Bird clinched the victory by making two with 3 seconds to go.

and three third-place votes, finishing second with 68 points. Cuyler got two second-place votes and 11 thirds and was third with 22 points.

"It's the same like the World Series, it won't sink in for awhile," Knoblauch said.

He was drafted by the Twins in the first round in June 1989 after making second-team All-America at shortstop in his junior year at Texas A&M. He hit .286 in 51 games at Kenosha of the Midwest League and .364 in 18 games at Visalia of the California League.

The following year, he was promoted to Orlando of the Southern League and hit .289 with two homers and 53 RBIs. That earned him an invitation to spring training as a non-roster player.

"Our feeling was that we would more or less hold an open and even tryout at second base between (Nelson) Liriano and Knoblauch, and whoever had the better spring would make the club," Twins general manager Andy MacPhail said Tuesday. "We had decided not to arbitrarily sent him back to Triple A and held the position open."

Knoblauch hit .388 in 20 spring games, going 26-for-67 with six RBIs. He impressed the Twins enough that Liriano was released six days before the season started.

He made a quick impression, going 25-for-75 on April with nine RBIs. He wound up at .281 with 24 doubles, six triples, 50 RBIs and 25 steals in 30 tries.

Del Greco replaces Howfield

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Place kicker Al Del Greco, an eight-year veteran who last played for the Phoenix Cardinals, signed a two-year contract with the Houston Oilers Tuesday, replacing Ian Howfield.

Del Greco, who lost his job with the Cardinals in preseason to Greg Davis, was the winner of a four-man tryout conducted by General Manager Mike Holovak. The others were Charlie Baumann, David Browndyke and Bjorn Nittmo.

Howfield missed a 33-yard field goal with one second left to play Sunday in Washington's 16-13 overtime victory over the Oilers. He was waived on Monday.

"Al has more experience," Holovak said. "If Ian had made that field goal then we would be set for the year. Al kicked better today indoors than outdoors. He's a good kicker."

In eight seasons, Greco has converted 101 of 154 field goals and 221 of 227 extra points.

"I've always wanted to kick in a domed stadium, No. 2 I've always wanted to play on a winning football team and I've got that," Del Greco said. No. 3, I've wanted to play on a team with a chance of going to the Super Bowl and I've got that too.

"There is no reason for me not to be excited about getting a chance to kick."

Del Greco said he was about to take a sales job when the Oilers called. He said his boss took the news well.

"He said if we got to the Super Bowl he wanted tickets," Del Greco said.

Howfield had only semi-pro kicking experience when he beat out Teddy Garcia in training camp. He converted 13 of 18 field goals and 25 of 29 extra points.

He missed three extra points two weeks ago in a 35-3 victory over Cincinnati and he had converted two field goals against Washington before his crucial miss at the end of regulation play.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 224

To express the sense of the Congress that the President should recognize the independence of the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia.

Whereas in the absence of an acceptable negotiated settlement between the federal government of Yugoslavia and its republics, the democratically elected government of the Republic of Croatia and the democratically elected government of the Republic of Slovenia voted to declare their independence on June 25, 1991;

Whereas military forces of the federal government of Yugoslavia, allied with Irregular Serbian forces, have carried out armed aggression against the citizens of the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia, resulting in innocent civilian deaths and the damage or destruction of property, including ancient churches;

Whereas the cease-fire agreements negotiated between the conflicting parties through the European Community have been repeatedly violated; and

Whereas it is a cardinal principle of the foreign policy of the United States to recognize and support democracy in the world. Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That is the sense of the Congress that the President should-

(1) condemn the use of force in Yugoslavia in lieu of political negotiations;
(2) recognize the independence of the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Slovenia; and
(3) work for the cessation of hostilities leading to a negotiated settlement and peace in the region.

FERC reviews gas industry rules

Reform deals with natural gas transportation rates, charges

■ Visiting FERC commissioners give overview of impact on producers of Mega NOPR.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The U.S. natural gas industry is now undergoing the most comprehensive rule review in decades and two members of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission were in Midland Tuesday to inform local producers of its consequence.

In an interview, FERC commissioners Jerry Langdon and Branko Terzic explained ramifications of the regulatory reform which will cover natural gas transportation rates and charges.

"We have closed the comment period on the hearings and to date we have 350 responses that are over five feet tall," said Langdon.

A decision on the Notice of Proposed Rules (NOPR) process which has been termed, "mega" NOPR by the press, is expected by the end of the year. "It is a very complex issue with components liked by some factions and not liked by other factions," Langdon said.

He said the final rules would not make anyone completely happy.

Langdon, a former Midlander appointed to the Commission by President Reagan, said the in-house word for the rules was NOPR Comparability.

"The entire effort is to come up with rules that will give users of a pipeline advantages comparable to the ones pipeline enjoy for themselves."

Terzic, who was nominated to FERC by President Bush on Sept. 20, 1990, said he and Langdon were in Midland to inform local producers about the new markets they would be selling into.

Said Terzic: "There are lots of constraints upon the distribution companies to which producers will be selling, and producers need to know what those constraints are. It will help them in negotiations."

Langdon noted that most utilities are not allowed by their state commissions to take price risks, and that producers should be aware of that fact. Terzic noted that in some cases third parties could be brought in to handle the risk factor.

Langdon also said the scope of the proposed rule making would put expertise in the natural gas industry at a premium and would enhance the third-party layer in the industry.

In the end, when the "mega" NOPR prrocess is concluded, Terzic said he was hopeful there would be a document all five FERC commissioners could vote on that would make it easier to get gas to the market, result in better pricing in the transportation sector and offer more services.

He noted that it was already getting easier to get gas to the markets because of all the proposed pipeline expansions. "In the last 36 months, we have certified $10 billion of pipe and 9,000 miles of pipeline construction. If all the pipelines certified are built it will double present pipeline capacity."

Langdon said the market place would decide which pipelines would be built and which would not. "We approved both Wy-Cal and Kern River, but only Wy-Cal was built," he added.

Both commissioners agreed that the new proposed rules would put the United States on an equal playing field with Canada in terms of transportation and rates.

"Of course, there is nothing we can do about subsidies by the Canadian government," said Langdon.

Prices slip

NEW YORK — Oil prices showed little change Tuesday, but refined petroleum products futures rallied amid scattered refinery troubles and speculation that the nation's gasoline supply still was falling.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $23.78 per barrel, down 2 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

In addition, traders were anticipating that the American Petroleum Institute's latest supply statistics would show that the U.S. stockpile of gasoline had fallen to below 205 million barrels, considered by the government to be the mininum operating level.

Indeed, after the oil market had closed for the day, the API reported that the gasoline supply had fallen 1.4 million barrels, to 204.3 million. If the supply stays below 205 million barrels, oil experts believe, isolated supply problems can be expected.

Dollar stable

NEW YORK — The dollar was little changed Tuesday as the expectation of lower U.S. interest rates cast a pall over the foreign exchange markets.

The dollar rose to 130.025 yen in New York from 129.185 late Monday.

The British pound fell against the dollar. In New York, sterling edged down to $1.7725 from $1.7740 on Monday.

Stocks fall

NEW YORK — Stock prices fell for the fourth straight session Tuesday after the Treasury disclosed disappointing results from the first phase of its quarterly auction to replenish government coffers.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 14.31 points to 3,031.31.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by more than 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 742 up, 853 down and 562 unchanged.

Omniport files

HOUSTON — The owner of Houston's defunct Omniport Terminal has filed for protection under the bankruptcy code and began seeking a purchaser for its Houston Ship Channel terminal.

Houston Transmodal Owning Co., the San Francisco-based consortium set up to run the computerized cargo handler, sought protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code Friday in San Francisco.

"We will be looking for a buyer" for the facility, said Mark Nielson, Houston Transmodal's general manager.

Productivity jumps by 2.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Productivity climbed at an annual rate of 2.4 percent over the summer as American workers turned in their best performance in three years, the government reported Tuesday.

But analysts called it a short-lived blip and a grim reminder that the recession has left fewer workers to churn out the nation's goods.

"The gain was one of these short-term quarterly phenomena that won't be repeated again," said Michael Evans, who heads an economic forecasting firm in Washington. "We all know that the economy is going to slow down. It already has slowed down."

From July to September, non-farm productivity, defined as output per hour of work, rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent, the biggest advance since productivity increased 2.7 percent in the third quarter of 1988, the Labor Department said.

Increased productivity, or getting each worker to do more for each hour of work, is considered vital to improving Americans' standard of living without increasing inflation.

During the third quarter, output rose faster than hours worked, meaning that the country's productivity grew since there were fewer hours required to produce more in goods and services.

There were fewer hours worked, analysts said, because recession-induced layoffs left fewer workers on payrolls. That makes the productivity advance a mix of good and bad news, said Irwin Kellner, chief economist at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

"The bad news is that people continue to lose their jobs. The good news is that those who are working were more productive and their living standard will go up. Their companies can earn more without having to incur more in labor costs," Kellner said.

Lawmaker may seek fuel bill vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief sponsor of legislation to force a drastic improvement in automobile fuel efficiency says the recent defeat of a major energy package helps his plan, and he'll likely seek a vote early next year.

Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., said his plan can now be considered on its own merits without links to other controversies such as oil drilling in an Alaskan wildlife preserve. That was the main sticking point that led to the Senate's defeat of the energy bill last week.

"We think we've picked up some momentum," Bryan said.

His bill would require domestic and foreign automakers to improve the overall mileage of their new-car fleets by 40 percent within a decade. The Senate Commerce Committee approved it earlier this year.

Bryan was prepared last week to offer it as an amendment to the energy legislation sponsored by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., which dealt with fuel economy in a manner favorable to industry.

But the Senate came up 10 votes short of the number required to halt a filibuster of the energy bill, in effect killing it for this year.

Bryan said in an interview Monday that he's debating whether to push his bill separately or make it the centerpiece of an energy package more to environmentalists' liking than Johnston's, emphasizing conservation and renewable resources.

He says he may seek a quick vote on his bill before Congress adjourns in a few weeks, but probably will wait until 1992.

Environmentalists who want a broader package favor a delay.

"People are exhausted and they don't want to fight about energy anymore for now," said Daniel Becker of the Sierra Club. "But what's important is the Senate has repudiated the failed energy policies of the past. The people who brought down Bennett Johnston will bring up the next energy bill."

Opponents say they'll be ready no matter when the vote occurs. The Coalition for Vehicle Choice, founded by the auto industry to battle the Bryan bill, said that last week's action wasn't significant.

"It was kind of a procedural matter," said Diane Steed, the group's president.

Shares of Walt Disney Co. stock fall sharply

N.Y. Times News Service

Shares of Walt Disney Co. fell sharply after Goldman Sachs & Co. took the Burbank-based company off its list of recommended stocks.

Disney closed at 113¾ Tuesday, down 4⅝ or 4 percent.

In a morning report to brokers, Goldman Sachs downgraded Disney's projected earnings for fiscal 1992 from $6.60 a share to $5.95 a share and for fiscal 1993 from $8.25 a share to $7.70.

Disney spokesman Mike Ferguson declined comment on the report or on rumors that the company is close to acquiring an equity interest in a major record company or television network.

RXPLUS, formerly Revco, has unveiled its new name and several new customer programs. There are two stores in Midland, 3464 W. Illinois and No. 7 Plaza Center.

Among the new programs are 50 Plus, a discount plan for customers over 50 and Kids Plus, a svaings plan for families with children under age six. A third program is Guaranteed Satisfaction Plus, where the company will exchange or issue a refund plus a coupon good for a 5 percent discount on the next purchase to a customer who returns an item with a receipt.

RxPlus operates 159 stores in Arizona, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado and is based in Arizona.

Mella McEwen is a business/oil writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Bush's veto of abortion bill could hurt rating with women voters

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Just as President Bush and Congress seemed to exhaust themselves on the issue of sexual harassment, the House is expected to pass an abortion measure today that could drive another wedge between the president and women.

The proposal neutralizes the so-called "gag rule," a Supreme Court decision that upheld federal regulations prohibiting doctors at federally funded clinics from informing patients they have a right to an abortion.

Bush has vowed to veto the proposal, but he is facing increasing pressure from fellow Republicans who are worried that a weak economy and an anti-abortion position could spell disaster at the polls next November.

"He'll pay heavily if he vetoes this," said Rep. John Porter, an Illinois Republican who is co-sponsoring a measure overturning the May court ruling.

Bush caused a stir when he sent a personally signed memorandum Tuesday to Health and Human Services Secretary Louis B. Sullivan to "clarify" the intent of the regulations.

The memo initially was mistaken as a last-minute effort by the White House to reach a compromise. Bush already has rejected one compromise in private negotiations, Porter said.

After being shown a copy of the memo by a reporter, Porter concluded that it included no new information or shift in the White House position.

"I think they are very, very worried they are going to lose the vote on the gag rule tomorrow," Porter said. "The memo attempts to bring back aboard the people that they know they are losing."

The memo did emphasize Bush's desire to allow abortion counseling when a woman's life is endangered.

Although that remedied "the most egregious oversight" in the regulations, Porter said, "it certainly doesn't take care of a person who ought to be told their constitutional rights."

Support for overturning the gag rule has grown as advocates successfully broadened the discussion from abortion rights to patient-doctor relationships and free speech.

"There is overwhelming support all across the country for the idea that government must tell the truth and the whole truth," Porter said.

Using a federal program as leverage "to further a particular view about abortion is beyond the pale and is conduct that no government should be engaged in when it comes to any individual rights," he added.

The measure before Congress Wednesday does not specifically overturn the Supreme Court ruling, but it does prevent funding for implementation of the regulations. House and Senate conferees also stripped the bill of a Senate-passed requirement that minors receive parental consent before obtaining abortions.

The provision is buried in a conference committee report on the $204.9 billion appropriation plan for the departments of labor and of health and human services.

MacMurray dies at 83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred MacMurray, who played the wise, pipe-smoking father on television's "My Three Sons" and starred in dozens of films including "The Absent-Minded Professor," died Tuesday of pneumonia. He was 83.

MacMurray died at St. John's Hospital and Health Center in Santa Monica, said Sarah O'Meara, a family friend. He was admitted to the hospital Monday afternoon, she said.

MacMurray's stage, film and television career spanned more than 50 years and included more than 80 movies. He made films at a hectic pace, generally playing a genial, persistent leading man, opposite most of the leading actresses of the day.

He is perhaps best known for his role as Steve Douglas, an aerodynamics engineer trying to raise his children in "My Three Sons." The show ran from 1960 to 1972, second only to "Ozzie and Harriet" as network television's longest-running situation comedy.

At Lambert's, flying food is main attraction

By R.B. Fallstrom

SIKESTON, Mo. (AP) — From across the country they come to Lambert's Cafe, in search of good food and bad manners.

Mostly, the bad manners.

You don't have to be hungry to stop at this popular southeast Missouri restaurant. The servings are plentiful, the food is top-notch Southern fare and the prices are right, but the main attraction is the dinner rolls that come flying through the air.

Lambert's calls itself the "home of the throwed rolls," and it's a must stop for tourists on Interstate 55.

Douglas Benjamin's family from Greenwood, S.C., on their way out West, went 100 miles out of the way to eat there.

"It's definitely worth the trip," Benjamin said. "It's a lot of fun and you can get stuffed, too."

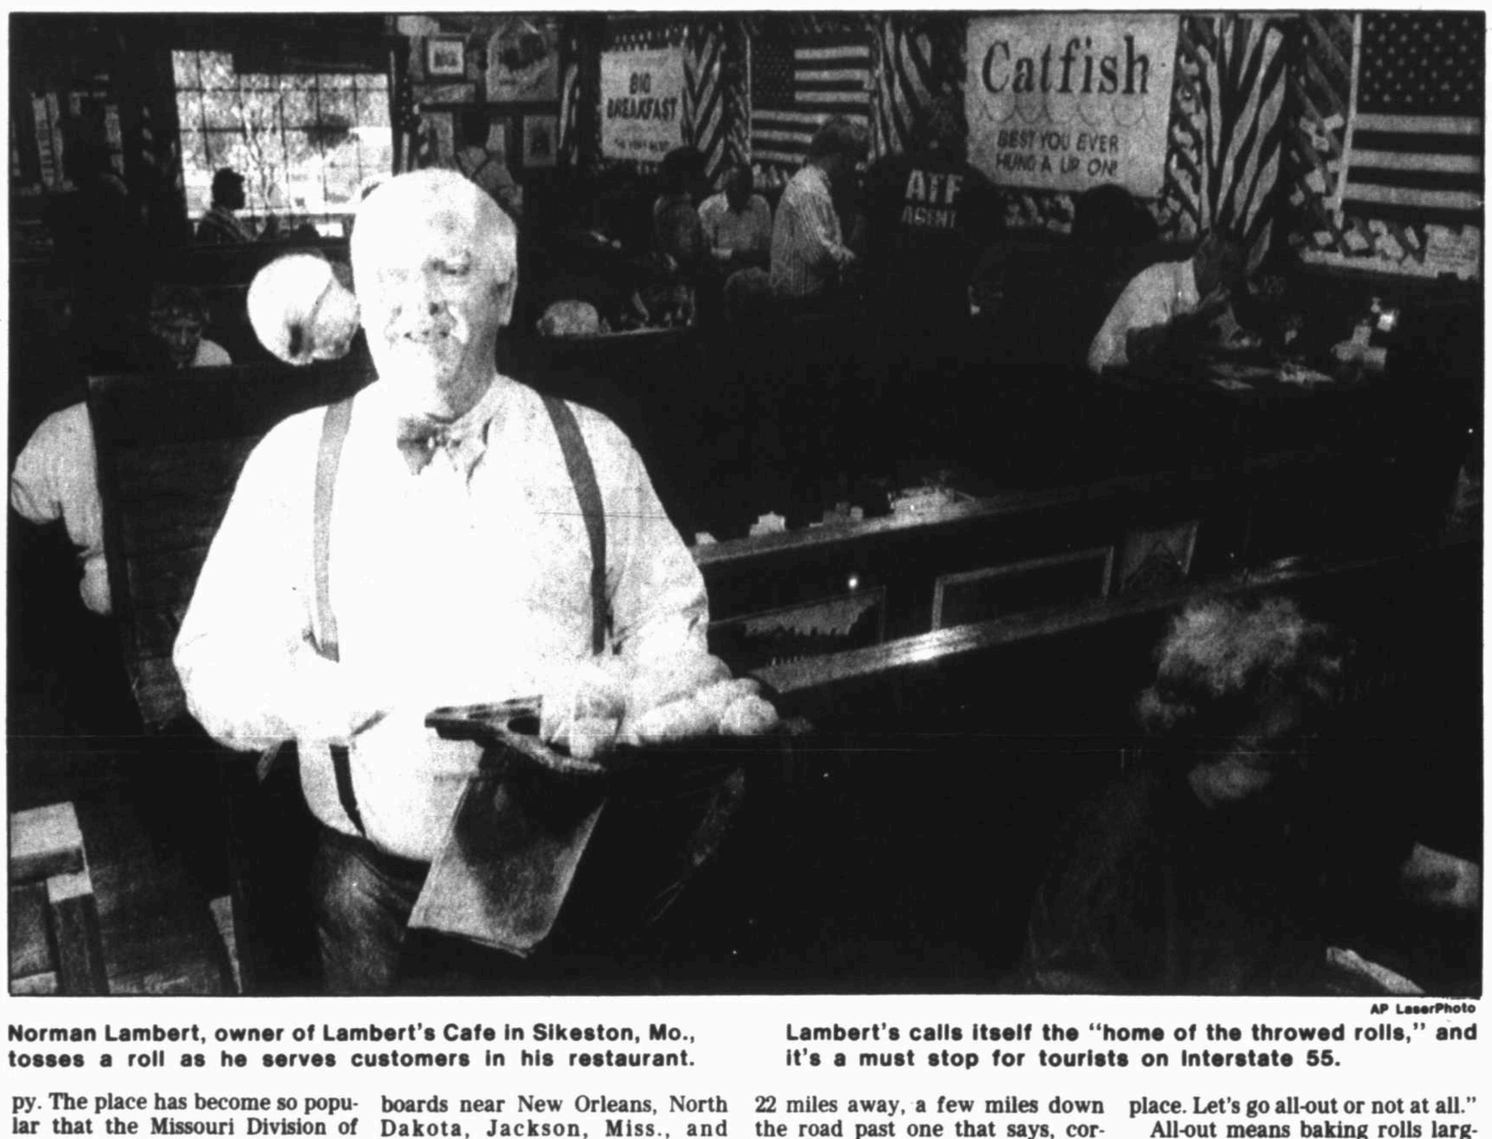
THEY'VE BEEN throwing rolls at the customers since 1976, when restaurant owner Norman Lambert found it difficult to wade through a heavy lunch crowd and ended up airmailing one to a customer. He says last year the restaurant baked more than 2.2 million yeast dinner rolls, which are five inches in diameter.

The delivery varies with the clientele. Sometimes the rolls find their mark quite briskly, but a recent Tuesday was not one of those times. A tour bus from St. Louis populated mostly with gray-haired ladies on the way to a nearby outlet mall filled much of the 300-seat restaurant, so the tosses were light and easy.

"On weekends we really get going, but you've got to be careful with the older folks," Lambert said.

His point was illustrated when one woman unaccountably muffed a short underhanded delivery from Lambert and walked to the cash register shaking her hands as if the hot roll had burned her.

Most of them go away very happy. The place has become so popular that the Missouri Division of Tourism is using it this year, featuring actor John Goodman in a television ad that touts Lambert's low-brow charm.



AP LaserPhoto

Norman Lambert, owner of Lambert's Cafe in Sikeston, Mo., tosses a roll as he serves customers in his restaurant.

Lambert's calls itself the "home of the throwed rolls," and it's a must stop for tourists on Interstate 55.

OF COURSE, most patrons first learn of Lambert's from highway signs. The Benjamins got wind of it in, of all places, Colorado.

That's one of Lambert's secrets to success, hooking the travelers early. He's also got roadside billboards near New Orleans, North Dakota, Jackson, Miss., and Brownsville, Texas. Only 900 miles or so and you're there.

On the 140-mile trip south from St. Louis on Interstate 55, Lambert's has nine such reminders. The first is 78 miles away, and the rest are in the last 30 miles past Cape Girardeau — one upside down, one touting the restaurant's appearances on "national television," and a couple teasing travelers, announcing that Lambert's is 22 miles away, a few miles down the road past one that says, correctly, that it's only 20 miles away.

Overkill? Hardly, according to Lambert, 57, who feels he's got to be a little outlandish to compete with the national chains. Especially since he's in the middle of nowhere between St. Louis and Memphis.

"It's really kind of a matter of survival," Lambert said. "That's our trade, people on the road, and this has turned into sort of a fun place. Let's go all-out or not at all."

All-out means baking rolls larger than Mike Tyson's fists, flipping them to diners, filling them with sorghum molasses and then asking a few minutes later if they want another. It means parading around the restaurant offering free appetizers such as fried potatoes, fried okra, white beans and red pepper relish, and macaroni and tomatoes from large metal bowls, and serving the coffee in 20-ounce mugs.

THE EMPHASIS is on food and fun, not frills. There are no table cloths, no cloth napkins, and the drinks are served in plastic glasses with straws.

"This is not a high-class restaurant or a 'Would you care for another roll, sir?' place," Lambert said. "It's a 'hey bud,' 'hey dude' place. Bottom line, there's a lot more Chevys out there than there is Cadillacs."

And there sure are a lot of them. In the parking lot on a slow Tuesday, there were vehicles from Minnesota, Tennessee, Indiana, Texas, Illinois, Iowa, Oregon, Kentucky, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Lambert's is in its 50th year of operation; the new restaurant just off the interstate has been open since 1988 and has 120 employees, but it wasn't always such a big-time concern. In the building that used to house the restaurant, there was a small room in back that provided "banquet facilities for four," and an early slogan was "We gots a maitre d'."

These days, the atmosphere is comfortable. The walls are covered with collectibles, a piano player belts out honky-tonk tunes nonstop, a model train chugs high around the restaurant perimeter and in an area near the cash register is a miniantique store with old Coke machines, Prince Albert in a can and cigar-store Indians.

There are jokes galore. The bathrooms have small plastic bottles soliciting tips and a couple of parking spaces out front say they're reserved for airport vehicles only.

LAMBERT HAS a way with words. The way he sees it, correcting the restaurant's grammar — from throwed rolls to thrown rolls — just wouldn't draw them in the same way. And he often serves a complimentary plate of fried bologna to large groups; he calls it "Missouri round steak."

"It's not hard for me to be silly, because I'm closer to that than I am to smart," Lambert said.

Pumpkins are fun to look at but better to eat

By Monica Coulter

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — At this time of year, it seems like pumpkins are as everpresent as falling leaves. But the big gourds are much more than scary-faced jack-o'-lanterns or Thanksgiving centerpieces. They are a rich source of vitamins.

The vitamin A in pumpkins comes from carotene, the pigment in deeply colored fruits and vegetables like carrots, cantaloupes, broccoli and spinach. This vitamin is important to our bodies, helping our eyes see in dim light, skin stay healthy, bones grow, and lungs and digestive tract stay fit.

Long before pumpkins were recognized for their nutritional value, these large, round and orange members of the gourd family were popular with Americans for their taste.

Our appreciation of pumpkins dates back to colonial times, when English settlers found native Americans using the fruit extensively. A wide variety of early uses included roasting the seeds, which have a nutty flavor, and frying the blossoms. Both are still popular.

Most people know the mild, slightly sweet flavor of pumpkin when it is prepared as pumpkin pie, a traditional Thanksgiving treat. Our forefathers' version of pumpkin pie was made from a custard filling poured inside a cleaned pumpkin shell, which was baked and brought directly to the table.

FRESH PUMPKINS are available in fall and winter. Though some can weigh more than 100 pounds, smaller pumpkins are more tender and tasty. Select a pumpkin that is free of blemishes and is heavy for its size. Don't worry about storing it, as pumpkins will keep for 30 days at room temperature and 90 days if refrigerated.

The following recipes are from the Culinary Institute of America's St. Andrews Cafe, which features nutritionally sound meals that meet today's dietary guidelines. The pumpkin glace is lower in fat than traditional ice cream and offers a nice change from the usual pie. Serve the bisque as an appetizer or with a salad for a nourshing fall luncheon.

PUMPKIN BISQUE

1 quart chicken stock
1 teaspoon minced garlic
⅔ cup diced celery
½ cup diced onion
2½ cups pumpkin puree
1 cinnamon stick
¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons maple syrup
1 teaspoon salt
1½ cups evaporated skim milk
FOR THE GARNISH:
¼ cup heavy cream, whipped to stiff peaks
2 tablespoons dried currants
2 tablespoons toasted almonds or pumpkin seeds

Heat 2 tablespoons of chicken stock over low heat in a soup pot. Add garlic. Cover pot and cook until garlic softens and begins to release moisture, about 1 minute.

Add celery and onion. Cook until the onions are translucent, stirring occasionally. Add the pumpkin puree and rest of the chicken stock. Bring to a boil over high heat; reduce heat and simmer until flavors are blended, about 20 minutes.

Add the cinnamon stick, nutmeg, maple syrup, salt and milk. Return to a boil. Thin soup with stock or water if necessary. Remove and discard cinnamon. Serve soup in heated cups or bowls. Garnish with cream, currants and almond or toasted pumpkin seeds. Makes 10 servings.

PUMPKIN GLACE IN CHOCOLATE ALMOND TUILES

FOR THE PUMPKIN GLACE:
2½ cups low-fat yogurt
1¾ cups part-skim ricotta cheese
1 cup maple syrup
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
1½ cups pumpkin puree
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon cloves
1 tablespoon brown sugar
FOR THE CHOCOLATE ALMOND TUILES:
Oil as needed
½ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup almond paste
¼ cup all-purpose flour
2 eggs
2 tablespoons heavy cream
2 tablespoons skim milk
3½ teaspoons cocoa powder
Pinch cinnamon
Pinch salt
FOR THE APPLE BOURBON SAUCE:
2 tablespoons arrowroot
1½ cups apple cider
1 tablespoon bourbon
1 apple, diced

FOR THE PUMPKIN GLACE: Puree yogurt and ricotta cheese in a food processor with a steel blade until very smooth. Add the maple syrup, vanilla, pumpkin puree, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and brown sugar. Mix thoroughly and pour the mixture into an ice cream freezer. Freeze the glace according to manufacturer's instructions. Serve the glace or place in a tightly covered container in freezer.

FOR THE CHOCOLATE ALMOND TUILES: Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Lightly oil cookie sheets. Puree all ingredients in a food processor until a smooth batter is formed. For each tuile, spread about 2 tablespoons of batter into a 5-inch circle on the prepared cookie sheet. Bake in a 375-degree F oven until the edges begin to look dry, about 2 minutes. Remove the tuiles from the baking sheet and mold into cookie "cups" by placing them over a rolling pin. Allow to cool.

FOR THE APPLE BOURBON SAUCE: Dilute the arrowroot in a small amount of apple cider; reserve. Combine remaining apple cider with bourbon and diced apple. Bring to a boil and simmer until apple is thoroughly cooked. Stir in the cider-arrowroot mixture and cook until thickened. Cool mixture to store; reheat before serving.

TO SERVE: Place a scoop of the pumpkin glace into the tuiles. Ladle a little of the heated apple bourbon sauce over the glace and serve at once. Makes 10 servings.

Cook fresh pumpkin at home

Associated Press

■ TO BAKE PUMPKIN: Pierce it in a few places so the steam will escape. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F and place the pumpkin in a baking dish. Bake the pumpkin in a 350-degree F oven about 45 minutes until it can be easily pierced with a paring knife. Time will depend on the size of the pumpkin. When the pumpkin is cool enough to handle, cut it in half, and scoop out the seeds and the flesh. Reserve the seeds to toast later for a soup garnish. Push the pumpkin flesh through a sieve or food mill to puree it. Any extra puree can be stored in the refrigerator or frozen.

■ TO STEAM PUMPKIN: Cut away the outer rind, scoop out the seeds and dice the flesh into large pieces. Reserve the seeds to toast later for a soup garnish. Steam the pumpkin pieces. Or cook the pumpkin pieces in the microwave oven on high (100 percent power) for 10 to 15 minutes or until the pumpkin can be mashed easily. Time will depend on the size of the pumpkin. When the pumpkin is cool enough to handle, push the pumpkin flesh through a sieve or food mill to puree it. Any extra puree can be stored in the refrigerator or frozen for later use.

DEAR ABBY

No news can be bad news where cancer is concerned

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I read a letter in your column in the Oregonian that shook me up. It was from a woman who said that her husband had had a physical every year since 1971, checked out 100 percent — then out of the blue he was diagnosed as having inoperable prostate cancer! No one had told him that if his father or a brother had had prostate cancer, he should take a P.S.A. blood test. After I read this in your column, I wrote "GET THIS" on the column and handed it to my husband, because his brother has had prostate cancer. So with no symptoms, my husband took the P.S.A. test and was found to have early prostate cancer!

Van Buren

Thank God for that letter — and thank you, Abby, for publishing it. I had copies made and sent them to all my male relatives. I even posted one on the bulletin board at our club. You may use my name. — BOBBI (MRS. FRED) JACKSON, SOUTH BEACH, ORE.

DEAR BOBBI: Thank you for permitting me to use your name. For those readers out there who want to know — the name of the blood test is "Prostatic-Specific Antigen." And for those who need a nudge in the right direction — read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is a story about two men. One of them is my friend who went to his doctor for his regular physical examination. An elevated blood count indicated that he needed further testing and, as suspected, it was found he had two cancerous polyps on his prostate. They were removed by a simple surgical procedure. Prognosis: He will probably live a normal life.

The other one is my brother, who had ample warning of the same problem for a year, but who kept putting off a visit to the doctor until it became absolutely necessary. By then, the cancer had spread through his system and he required radical and painful surgery. Prognosis: We buried him last week, and it was so unnecessary! Please excuse the tear stains. I miss my brother. — GRIEVING IN THE OZARKS

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I went camping with my family and a friend. I met a really special guy who I fell for right away. The problem is, I told him I was 17 (I am 15).

He is 17. Now I am worried that he will be mad at me for lying and think I am too young. The reason I told him I was older is because a lot of guys think I'm too young even before they get to know me. I look 17 and am very mature.

I don't think age should matter if two people really like each other. How do I convince him that I like him so much, and that I'm sorry for lying? — SORRY I LIED IN YUBA CITY, CALIF.

DEAR SORRY: Age does matter during the teen years, and so does the degree of maturity. Some 17-year-old "boys" are men — and much depends upon his degree of maturity at age 17. Liking him so much that you lied about your age is not much of a defense, but my advice is just to be straightforward and tell him what you've told me. Lying about one's age is, in itself, immature. But if he likes you enough, perhaps he'll be forgiving.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Description of fruit snacks 'gushes'

By Linda Anderson

Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the supermarket's cereal/breakfast food aisle, food manufacturers start producing even more "fruit" snacks guaranteed to make your kids beg and plead you to buy. There's never been so many dinosaurs, sharks, letters and other shapes in bright "fruit" colors and flavors running rampant in the supermarket. And they all are claimed to be "made with REAL FRUIT" or something like that.

Anderson

Gushers from Betty Crocker is one of the newest of these snack foods. Of course we had to buy a box ("Gushin' Grape" in fact. The other flavor available is "Strawberry Splash.") to check out for taste, price and advertising accuracy. Grape is the youngest taste-testers favorite artificial flavor.

A 5.4-ounce, six-pouch box (each pouch is supposed to be a single serving) of Gushers cost $2.09, or roughly 35 cents each serving.

According to information on the box, Gushers (which are also "made with real fruit") got their name because they are "fruit snacks with juicy centers." The back of the box shows a bunch of kids getting "gushed," and reads: "The one-of-a-kind fruit snack with a burst of real fruity juice in the middle! Bite through the chewy fruit snack outside and wet your mouth with a gushin' rush of real fruity juice fun from the inside!" Sounded disgusting to me, and of course the young taste-tester thought they sounded delicious. The generation gap rears its ugly head in the supermarket aisle.

I have to admit, I was surprised to see that grapes from concentrate and pear puree concentrate are listed first and second on the ingredients label (ingredients are listed in order from most to least on labels). However, I was not surprised to see, listed third, fourth, fifth and sixth, were sugar, corn syrup, dried corn syrup and fructose — all of which are forms of sugar.

At least Gushers are low in fat. A single serving is supposed to contain 90 calories and only 1 gram of fat — or nine calories from fat. The other 81 calories are probably mostly from all that sugar.

The taste-testers were kind of disappointed in the taste. They both said Gushers would taste a lot better if they'd lose the "gush" in the middle. I just thought they tasted like chewy purple plastic.

I have never understood why, just because something is made with real fruit, it's supposed to be terrific. One rule of thumb I have learned is, in general, the more a food is processed, the more nutrition is lost. If you want something that's "made with real fruit," nothing beats real fruit.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Price at other locations may vary.

Creator of appetizer recipe can win $5,000

Staff Report

The holidays call for delicious appetizers that are fast and flavorful. This season, you could win $5,000 by entering your favorite easy-to-make appetizer recipe.

The Underwood "Ultimate Appetizer" recipe contest is seeking original, great-tasting appetizer recipes — anything from hearty deviled ham and spinach-filled phyllo triangles to refreshing vegetable kabobs served with chicken-vegetable dip are appropriate ideas. Just be sure the recipe uses at least one package of Underwood product (including chunky chicken, roast beef, liverwurst or deviled ham).

Eligible entries must be accompanied by a proof of purchase. Only original recipes — those not previously published or entered in another contest — will be considered.

In addition to the $5,000 grand prize, a beautiful five-piece silver-plated tea and coffee service and a food processor will be awarded to the first and second prize winners, respectively, in both the Hot Appetizer and Cold Appetizer catgories.

To enter, send your recipe to Underwood "Ultimate Appetizer" Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 1370, Barrington, Ill., 60011. Enter as often as you wish but mail each entry separately. Entries must be postmarked and received no later than Jan. 31, 1992.

For complete contest rules, send a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope to the Contest Rules at the previous address.

Contest adds 'Accent' to holiday turkey tidbits

Staff Report

Holiday season is here. Once again, it's time for turkey dinner — and the Accent Day After Delicacies Recipes Contest.

When the holiday meal is over, create a tasty recipe with the remaining turkey tidbits and you could win a prize. A food processor and gourmet knife set will be awarded to the first and second prize winners respectively in each category — sandwich, microwaveable and casserole — and the overall best recipe wins $5,000.

Last year, winning recipes scored high in taste, ease of preparation, appearance and originality. The grand prize winner, Oriental Enhanced Turkey, featured turkey topped with a flavorful curried chutney sauce in a quick-to-prepare microwave main dish. Other 1991 winners used cooked turkey to streamline preparations for favorite recipes like chili, pasta casserole and a hot sandwich.

To enter, create an original — not previoulsy published or entered in another contest — that includes cooked turkey and at least ½ teaspoon of Accent Brand Flavor Enhancer per 4 to 6 serving. Send your recipe to Accent 2nd Annual Day After Delicacies Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 530, Barrington, Ill., 60011.

Entries must be received by Feb. 15, 1992. Enter as often as you wish, but mail each entry separately. Be sure to include a proof of purchase.

For a complete contest rules, check your local supermarket, or send a self-addressed, stamped #10 envelope to Recipe Contest Rules at the previous listed address.

MOONLIGHTING! The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:
Is it worthwhile for adults also? Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
• ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
• MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
• COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
• SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.
How much money can I make as a distributor?
Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!
How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?
The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
