Jamaican violence spreads

By LLOYD WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Snipers and rock-throwers harassed police and soldiers overnight as they tried to clear roadblocks put up by demonstrators protesting increased fuel prices. At least three people were killed in violence that spread across the island.

Winter is peak tourist time in Jamaica, but authorities said none of the estimated 12,000 foreign visitors on the Carribean island were reported injured in any of the disturbances Tuesday. Police said the situation at most tourist resorts was close to normal.

Police said that officers killed one man in Kingston after he fired on police at a roadblock and that a motorist in Kingston was shot and killed by someone in another car. A third fatality was a man killed by gunfire from a van in Maypen, 30 miles northwest of Kingston, police said.

Unconfirmed reports said as many as six people had been killed and several others were hospitalized, including a small girl hit by rocks at a roadblock.

A police officer in Kingston, speaking on condition of anonymity, said hundreds of people spent the night at police stations because they were unable to get home.

Most roads in Kingston, the capital, remained blocked overnight. Protesters at some roadblocks offered to clear debris to allow motorists to pass if they paid small amounts of cash, such as $10.

Snipers and rock-throwers frustrated police. "As fast as we get one roadblock cleared away and move on, they go back and block it again," said a Kingston police officer.

Piles of burning tires and other barricades put up by protesters blocked most of the nation's main roads on Tuesday, and smoke from the tires clouded Kingston and other major cities.

Businesses, schools and government offices shut down and most international flights canceled. Rail service was halted after debris was piled onto tracks.

Jamaica Defense Force helicopters transported the injured as well as doctors and nurses to hospitals.

The protests, which apparently began spontaneously, came less than 12 hours after announcement of price increases; the latest in a three-year series of austerity measures by the pro-U.S. government of Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

Gasoline prices were raised from the equivalent of $1.80 a gallon to $2.19; kerosene from 74 cents to 80 cents, and a 100-pound tank of propane gas went from $20.10 to $23.30.

Prices for food and most other items have been doubled and tripled in the past two years, and Seaga, seeking to win approval of favorable loan terms from international lenders for his currency-strapped nation, has raised taxes and laid off 6,000 government employees. Unemployment in the nation of 2.3 million people is more than 25 percent.

Police used tear gas Tuesday to disperse hundreds of demonstrators who marched on Jamaica House, Seaga's office building. Police said the protesters threw burning debris over the gates.

Seaga's leftist opponent and predecessor as prime minister, Michael Manley, called on protesters Tuesday to respect "the property and lives of all Jamaicans," but he also urged security forces not to use violence against peaceful protesters.

Schools given power to search

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Teachers and administrators now have more legal power to attack what the Supreme Court calls the "major social problems" of drug use and violent crime in public schools.

The nation's highest court, in a 6-3 decision Tuesday, made it easier for public school officials generally to search students suspected of violating the law or some school rule.

To conduct such searches, the court said in a case from Piscataway, N.J., teachers and other school officials do not need a court warrant or the same justifications required of police officers.

At the same time, however, the justices made clear that public school officials, like police officers, must adhere to the Constitution's ban on unreasonable searches and seizures by governmental officials.

In other words, students do not surrender all their privacy rights when they walk into the schoolhouse.

The case involved the search of a 14-year-old freshman's purse after she was caught smoking. The search turned up rolling papers, and the girl later was found delinquent after admitting to police she had sold marijuana cigarettes to classmates.

The New Jersey Supreme Court overturned the delinquency finding, ruling that the search had violated the student's rights.

But the high court now has reinstated the delinquency verdict.

Led by Justice Byron R. White, the court said school officials do not have to meet the "probable cause" standard applied when judging whether a police search was reasonable.

The new standard for school officials: whether the search was reasonable under the circumstances.

White noted that "maintaining order in the classroom has never been easy," and that, in recent years "school disorder has often taken particularly ugly forms: drug use and violent crimes in the schools have become major social problems."

Tom Shannon, executive director of the National School Board Association, praised the decision.

"We think the court perceived the role of school people properly," Shannon said. "It'll shore up the confidence of school people that they're not looked upon in the same way as law enforcement officers."

Burt Neuborne, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union, said he was "quite relieved" that the ruling preserved the idea that "the Fourth Amendment (outlawing unreasonable searches) does apply to schools."

Midland school officials say court decision shows 'guts'

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland school officials Tuesday lauded a Supreme Court ruling no longer requiring public school teachers to have a court-ordered warrant to conduct searches of students suspected of violating the law or school rules.

Calling the ruling a "landmark decision," Midland trustee Joe Golding said, "I think it's unbelieveable. I can't believe they had the guts to do it. It's a step to give control back to the local school boards."

The 6-3 decision negated an earlier court position which held that teachers must have "probable cause" when conducting searches of students on school property. The ruling, however, does not strip students of their constitutional rights under the Fourth Amendment.

Skillern executed after plea to 'rejoice, forgive'

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Doyle Skillern asked his family to "rejoice and forgive," then was executed by injection early today for a killing in which the confessed triggerman may soon go free.

Warden Jack Pursley ordered that the execution begin at 12:18 a.m. Skillern coughed and retched seconds later, then lay still. Dr. Luther Masters, a prison physician, pronounced him dead at 12:23 a.m.

Skillern, 48, was "very much" resigned to his fate and was "cheerful all the time" he was with the Rev. Cornelius Ryan Tuesday, the Roman Catholic priest said immediately after the execution.

Phil Guthrie, chief spokesman for the Texas prison system, said that after prison officials informed Skillern that Gov. Mark White had declined to grant him a reprieve, Skillern responded "A lot of people will still have their troubles tomorrow, and mine will be over."

Industry quick to criticize drilling fee proposal

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Texas oil men says Gov. Mark White's plan to increase drilling permits by $56.3 million would be equal to drilling 230 new oil wells in the state's depressed oil economy.

Railroad officials and oil industry spokesmen were unanimous in criticizing White's proposal Tuesday to increase oil and gas drilling permit fees 800 percent.

"We don't need that extra money for operation of this commission," said Commissioner Jim Nugent.

"An increase of this magnitude would be unfair and could even endanger a drilling project in the case of some of our smaller operators," said Bruce Anderson of Houston, president of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association. "The risks involved in exploratory oil and gas drilling leave little room for non-productive costs."

In requesting the Legislature to approve $184 million in new and expanded fees for state agencies, White recommended that drilling permit fees be increased from $100 to $900.

White said $100 of the increase would be used to expand well plugging activity and the other $700 would go "to fund other agency programs," freeing the general revenue fund of an $49.2 million obligation.

"We do not need any increased fees to offset our agency funds," Nugent said. "We make money for the state."

Nugent said the commission collects about $47 million a year from the industry but uses only about $30 million in overseeing oil and gas operations in Texas.

"That leaves about $17 million a year we turn over to the general revenue fund," Nugent said.

A spokesman for Commissioner Mack Wallace said the commission formerly did not charge anything for a drilling permit.

"Then in the last Legislature, the legislators wanted to levy a $100 fee to clean up all these old leaking wells, and the commission agreed to it," said Pat Martinets, an assistant to Wallace. "The commission did not ask for any increase this time."

Anderson said the $53.6 million that White expects to gain from the oil permit fee hike "would be equivalent to the cost of drilling 230 oil wells and impose a significant cost burden on the very activity all Texans wish would be increased above current depressed levels."

Anderson said that since independent producers drill more than 80 percent of the state's wells the new fee would impact disproportionately on them.

Man's 'wish park' for handicapped children

By WILLIAM CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — No hair-raising turns or spine-tingling drops would lure riders to this roller coaster. But its gentle hills could keep children clinging to wheelchairs as it whooshed down the rails at an amusement park for the handicapped.

Welcome to the wish park envisioned by a Des Moines pressman who spends his free time making life happy for handicapped children. The merry-go-round will welcome wheelchair riders. Skycars suspended on cables will be programmed to halt at each stop long enough to let slower kids board.

David Steiner, 33, founder of the Kids With A Wish Foundation, unveiled a proposal Tuesday to build the nation's first amusement park designed for the handicapped.

"When I see a little girl get a smile on her face, I think how beautiful it would be to see a child go to an amusement park," Steiner said. "They can ride the merry-go-round, drive boats, play games. They can do anything you could do."

Steiner said he has already found corporate contributors in Des Moines, but wouldn't identify them, and he said a non-profit corporation is being formed to accept donations and run the project.

The foundation would like to purchase a 60-acre tract near the Des Moines zoo soon if there are enough contributions, he said.

Jack Krantz, president of Adventurelands of America Inc., which operates a theme park in nearby Altoona, said the idea was "honorable" but impractical.

"I don't see where it would be economically feasible to build anything for less than $20 million or $25 million," said Krantz. "Let's say a corporation were to give a ride or be involved in any way shape or form. They would have tremendous liabilities involved."

Adventureland was built on 164 acres at a cost of $27 million 10 years ago, Krantz said. He said a top-of-the-line park today costs more than $50 million.

Steiner said, however, that he doesn't want his park to be an imitation or a rival to Adventureland.

"Everybody who believes it cannot be done, I will make them retract their statement," Steiner said.

"Nobody's going to stop me because I believe in what I'm doing," he said. "I'm dedicating the rest of my life to helping people. I'm 33 now. I hope to live to 80 so I've got probably 50 years left."

Steiner founded Kids With A Wish more than two years ago. Starting with a $500 contribution, he developed a program for meeting the wishes of many critically ill Iowans.

Before 10-year-old Scott Osborn Jr. of Des Moines died of cancer, he got his dream visit to the circus, and Trisha Moore, a 9-year-old Clarinda girl with cystic fibrosis, got a trip to meet the country-rock group Alabama.

Steiner and his wife, Cathy, 32, have two girls, Staci, 10, and Cory, 6.

White calls for more efficient government without new taxes

Gov. White

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White's call for a more efficient state government without new taxes got a cautious reaction from lawmakers, with several saying it would be tough to achieve White's goals without more money.

White, in his state-of-the-state address to the House and Senate on Tuesday, said trimming the state workforce, reducing expenses and increasing user fees are better ways to deal with the state's financial troubles.

"We could raise taxes. But I think there is not a person in this room — myself included — who intends to do that," White said.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said White should be commended for seeking to streamline state operations.

"The thrust of his proposals, advocating cost-saving measures in state agencies, while augmenting health, welfare, corrections and higher education, sets the tone for austerity with compassion," Hobby said.

In his speech, White said years of prosperity have meant past budget surpluses for state government.

"Frankly, there was little incentive during those years to save. The bureaucracy has gotten a little fat. Well, now the time has come for diet and self-discipline," he said.

STATE

State Comptroller Bob Bullock has predicted that state income will fall up to $1 billion short of what currently is being spent on programs and services.

But White said an economy drive can keep the state out of the red as he submitted a budget to lawmakers totaling $36.1 billion for the 1986-87 fiscal year.

In his speech White called on every agency and institution to immediately begin cost-cutting measures, including:

— Reducing the number of employees when possible.

— Cutting rent, travel and other overhead expenses.

— Beginning energy and water conservation projects.

— Reviewing fee structures to make sure that those using services are paying for them.

White recommended fee increases totaling $184 million for such things as marriage licenses, park use and utility companies seeking rate increases.

While calling his budget plan "lean" and "austere," White did seek support for some new measures.

He said he wants lawmakers to enact a statewide water plan because past failure to do so means "Texas has continued toward a day of harsh reckoning with reality. Water resources are as important to economic development as they are to human survival itself..."

White said he wants a comprehensive program to deal with disposal of hazardous wastes and protect the environment.

He urged the Legislature to increase the number of law officers in the state Department of Public Safety, particularly in narcotics enforcement, and to enact a strong anti-racketeering law to combat organized crime.

Praising lawmakers for last year's public school reforms and road repairs, which led to a $4.8 billion tax increase, White asked them not to back down from either.

The governor proposed trimming higher education spending by $460 million, while increasing tuition for some students. He suggested raising tuition for non-resident students, foreign students and students in some graduate school professional programs.

To alleviate water shortages, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a bill Aug. 11, 1965, aimed at finding a practical way of desalting seawater.

Mary Poteet and Ronnie Pethridge of Houston take part in a candlelight vigil Tuesday night, minutes before convicted killer Doyle Skillern was executed by lethal injection at the Walls Unit in Huntsville.

Death penalty foe 'appalled at silence'

AUSTIN (AP) — Capital punishment foe Charles Sullivan thought he had come across a case that might shock officials into taking another look at the death penalty.

He was wrong, he acknowledged Tuesday night as he prepared to take part in a candlelight vigil to mark the execution early today of Doyle Skillern. Amnesty International and other death penalty opponents participated in the vigil on the Capitol steps late Tuesday.

"We, of course, are against every execution," said Sullivan. "But we were appalled by the almost total silence in regard to this one."

Sullivan, a former priest and now director of the prison reform group Citizens United for the Rehabilitation of Errants, hoped lawmakers and officials would be upset that Skillern, an accomplice, was executed while the triggerman is eligible for parole.

"However, most people did not want to think about this. If they had dealt with it, we think they would have tried to stop it," he said.

Sullivan collected only 15 legislators' signatures on a petition asking Gov. Mark White to stay the execution. White declined.

"I misjudged the outcry there would be. I thought there would be more," said Sullivan, adding that some lawmakers seemed afraid to sign anything that could be interpreted as anti-death penalty.

"The application of the death penalty is what brought it out of existance in the past. We are going down that same road now. It's so arbitrary the way it is applied.

"In many ways, a case like this is probably going to help bring about eventual abolishment of the death penalty. That will happen. I don't know if it will be in our lifetime," he said.

Triggerman 'bitter' accomplice executed

LOVELADY (AP) — The man who fired the shots that killed a narcotics officer says he doesn't think it's fair that he was sentenced to life in prison while Doyle Skillern, who sat in a car nearby during the murder, was sentenced to die.

But Charles Victor Sanne, 51, said he would not have traded places on Death Row with Skillern, who died early today for the 1974 slaying of Patrick Allen Randel, a Department of Public Safety undercover officer.

"The person ending up with the harshest punishment was not responsible," Sanne said last week. "It makes me bitter, but there is no one to be bitter at."

Skillern was convicted under Texas' "law of parties," which makes it unnecessary to demonstrate that someone accused of capital murder actually did the killing.

Sanne testified in their joint trial that he killed Randel. Despite that, jurors decided he did not constitute a continuing threat to society and granted him a life sentence. His request for parole is pending.

Skillern, who had a previous murder conviction, was considered a continuing threat and was given the death sentence.

Sanne, currently an inmate at the Texas prison system's Eastham Unit, said he and Skillern were trying to sell Randel about 1,000 Quaalude tablets. Sanne says he asked Randel if he was a police informant before making the sale and Randel pulled his gun and told him to shut up.

Sanne said he killed the agent when Randel was distracted by Skillern approaching the car from another vehicle.

"It was a bad situation," Sanne said. "It was either fight or flight and Randel came out second."

But prosecutors said Skillern and Sanne had planned to rob and kill the man, probably knowing he was an undercover agent. Prosecutors point out that the pair took Randel's ring and $850 from his wallet.

Former Gov. Shivers to be buried today

AUSTIN (AP) — The funeral for former Gov. Allan Shivers is scheduled for today at the First Baptist Church in Austin.

Shivers, 77, died Monday of a heart attack. Governor from 1949 to 1957, he held the office longer than anyone in state history.

Shivers' body lay in state Tuesday in his "favorite place" — in front of the Texas Senate podium where he once presided as lieutenant governor.

"Undoubtedly he could have lain in state in the rotunda if he had wanted to, but he preferred the Senate chamber," Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said after viewing the body. "It was his favorite place."

Burial is slated for the state cemetery in Austin.

The outpouring of praise for Shivers continued Tuesday.

Former Gov. John Connally, who was in London, said he was "profoundly saddened by the loss."

"Not only was he a great governor, but also an outstanding business and political leader of Texas and the nation," Connally said.

Former Gov. Price Daniel, who succeeded Shivers as governor, said, "He was not only a fine statesman but a Christian gentleman, being a long-time teacher of a men's Bible class both during and after his term of office.

"He was one of the strongest men ever to hold the office. He left an indelible mark on the pages of Texas history and he will be missed by all who were privileged to have known him," Daniel said.

A Lufkin native, Shivers was elected to the Texas Senate at age 26. His political career was interrupted by service in the Army in Europe during World War II.

In 1946, Shivers was elected lieutenant governor. He succeeded Gov. Beauford Jester, who died in July 1949 after both began their second terms.

Texas voters then elected Shivers to three straight terms in 1950, 1952 and 1954.

Shivers made a record of expanding state services in such fields as mental hospitals, prison reform, education and other humanitarian services. In the wake of veterans' land and insurance scandals, he pushed in his last term for reform measures in both fields.

Woman recalls visit paid her family by stabbing suspect

BEAUMONT (AP) — He came asking for a glass of water and treated Ruth and Terry Seymour's gift of socks as if it were a brand new suit. Bedraggled and poorly dressed, he made the Seymours nervous by saying things like "I don't beat Daddy anymore."

But Huy Nguong Duong seemed nice enough and later thanked them profusely as staff members of the halfway house from where he'd wandered came to take him away.

That was two days before Thanksgiving, and now the Seymours' visitor sits in a jail cell, charged with stabbing a 9-year-old Houston boy 20 times at a school bus stop.

The boy, Shane Smith, died Thursday.

"At the time (of the visit in November), he appeared to be someone that needed help," Mrs. Seymour said.

Once the family fed Duong, 25, and gave him a pair of old socks to protect his feet from the cold, she called Thi Phuong, Duong's sister in Houston.

Ms. Phuong said her brother first showed signs of mental illness in 1975 while a student in South Vietnam. The family fled to Hong Kong in 1979 and came to Houston in 1980, she said.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers, rain and snow from the Gulf through the eastern third of the country Thursday. Snow also is expected for the Dakotas and western Minnesota.

Sunny skies, warm weather en route to Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny skies and warmer weather are on their way to the Midland area, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters are calling for decreasing cloudiness tonight with lows in the upper 20s as skies become sunny Thursday. Highs will warm to the lower 50s. Tonight's northerly winds of five to 10 mph will shift to the southwest Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 47 was 32 degrees below the record set in 1935. This morning's low was 19 degrees above the record of 15 set in 1972.

STATE

Rain fell across much of Texas early today as a high-pressure system pumped Gulf moisture into most areas of Central and East Texas while a cold front in the southern Texas Panhandle pushed deeper into the state.

Widespread rain, numerous showers and a few thundershowers covered a major portion of Texas ahead of the front from the South Plains east through North Central Texas and on into East Texas.

Elsewhere, patches of rain, drizzle and fog dotted the lower valley, South Texas and South Central Texas. Outside of the rain areas, clouds covered the rest of the state.

NATION

Powerful blasts of wind combined with below-zero temperatures to produce teeth-chattering cold in the Northeast today, while South Dakota had heavy snow and snow or rain spread across several other sections of the nation.

Strong northwest winds and low temperatures produced dangerous wind chills in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Jane's details Soviet accidents

Associated Press

LONDON — Jane's Defense Weekly says hundreds of people were killed in an explosion last month at a Soviet underground ammunition research and production center in an old mine near Leninsk-Kuznetskiy in Siberia.

The three-paragraph report on the Siberian explosion was part of a column of news briefs in Tuesday's edition of Jane's. The Soviet Union does not provide information on accidents at its military installations.

The weekly is produced by Jane's Publishing Co., which issues military yearbooks and reviews considered reliable by the defense establishment.

Jane's said it did not know the exact death toll or date of last month's explosion, which it said did not involve nuclear or chemical weapons. The magazine said the accident was comparable to a blast that killed 200 people last May 13 at the Soviet naval munitions depot at Severomorsk, north of Moscow.

In another article Tuesday, Jane's said the Soviets are expected to begin flight-testing an "operational maneuvering re-entry vehicle" for its ballistic missiles within the next five years to counter the proposed U.S. space-based missile defense program.

The magazine said that maneuverable warheads aboard intercontinental ballistic missiles would "complicate" the so-called "Star Wars" program, officially called the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Soviet effort apparently gathered momentum after President Reagan in March 1983 announced the U.S. research project aimed at shooting down long-range missiles with space-based battle stations and air-launched anti-ballistic missiles, Jane's said.

In an article entitled "Soviet Submarine Accidents — New Details," Jane's reported there had been at least six accidents involving Soviet nuclear-powered ships in the past 20 years.

The report followed similar disclosures by CBS News that CIA papers showed six nuclear accidents aboard Soviet warships between 1966-1981 have gone unreported.

Jane's article said the "potentially most serious accident" was aboard a Soviet nuclear-powered submarine off the U.S. coast in December 1972.It said the cause was believed to be a radiation leak from a nuclear-tipped torpedo designed to destroy harbor installations.

Several men were killed, with most of the crew suffering radiation sickness, Jane's quoted the CIA documents as saying.

The weekly said a 1967 "meltdown" aboard the 17,280-ton icebreaker Lenin "ranks among the most serious nuclear accidents." It said up to 30 Soviet sailors were killed in the incident aboard the nuclear-powered ship.

It said information in the submarine article was based on CIA documents and other sources. The documents referred to the meltdown on the Lenin, which was commissioned in September 1959, as "a sudden catastrophic accident," the magazine said.

The Soviet Union and United States currently are increasing their nuclear submarine fleets and arming them with nuclear missiles.

Praise for decision almost universal

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

The U.S. Supreme Court has given what some regard as long-overdue relief to teachers, principals, parents and youths fed up with the drugs and violence in many schools: the right to search students without a court-ordered warrant.

A 6-3 ruling by the court Tuesday was almost universally praised by educators, and even by some civil liberties lawyers, as balanced and needed.

From the 1960s on, the high court expanded student rights in case after case. First it was the right to wear what they wished and say what they pleased. Eventually student rights extended to protection against personal searches unless school officials had a warrant from a judge.

Those earlier rulings, in the opinion of many educators, created a climate that invited a kind of lawlessness that some students couldn't resist and which principals and teachers often feared to combat because of the threat of lawsuits.

The result: In poll after poll over the last decade, the lack of discipline has consistently headed the list of what the public sees as education's chief failing.

Tuesday's ruling may give schools the legal ammunition necessary to regain control over troublemakers.

In a case involving a Piscataway, N.J., high school student who was found by a vice principal to have drug paraphernalia in her purse and was later convicted of selling marijuana to fellow students, the court ruled teachers and school officials do not have to have "probable cause" for searching a student and may now do so without a warrant.

The decision did not strip students of their Fourth Amendment right against unreasonable searches.

"We've had so many cases in the last 10 years increasing student rights. In practicality what they did was make many principals afraid because of the threat of civil suits. I think this ruling corrects the balance," said William Honig, California's Superintendent of Public Instruction.

A leading civil liberties lawyer found little fault with the ruling.

"The truth is, (civil libertarians) can't always play Chicken Little. This ruling is not going to change very much," said Burt Newborn, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union. "The point is that the special circumstances of the school setting requires some tailoring of the Fourth Amendment to students."

The case of the 14-year-old New Jersey girl, identified only as T.L.O in court records because of her age, drew national attention. The Reagan administration filed a brief last year siding with the vice principal who searched the girl's purse. Citing a "growing lack of discipline" in schools, the Justice Department brief urged the court to limit student rights in searches for drugs and weapons.

What the ruling will or won't change in school life isn't clear.

Some educators, including Honig and Sandra Feldman, executive director of the United Federation of Teachers in New York, said some school districts might be more likely to search lockers or use metal detectors to keep drugs and weapons out of school.

But few believe schools will take the ruling as a green light to return to the harsh, often arbitrary disciplinary methods that led to the Supreme Court's decision in favor of student rights 15 years ago.

"If anything," said Joseph Scherer, an official of the American Association of School Administrators, "administrators have become overcautious with respect to student rights. Even with this ruling, administrators will be very respectful of due process. Schools learned very hard lessons in the 1960s in dealing with students. We don't want to turn back the clock."

MISD

In addition, the courts held that a cause for search of students' possessions by school officials need not be so strong as the cause for search of individuals by law enforcement officers.

According to Garland Chapman, assistant superintendent for administrative services, the court decision probably will have no effect on the district's policy regarding student searches. The policy was based on an appellate decision upheld by the high court Tuesday.

Chapman said the district's policy for conducting searches of students prohibited administrators "from searching individual students' possessions without a reasonable suspicion that illegal or dangerous items are being concealed.

"Lockers and desks, however, remain the property of the school even though they are assigned to students for the students' convenience in storing legal, personal possessions. Lockers may be opened by school officials in a general locker search," he said.

Trustee Bill Jackson said, "It (the decision) sounds like they're giving us a little more leeway. But until we get a legal interpretation, I don't want to make any official comment."

When asked how the ruling would prevent administrators from conducting illegal searches, Golding said, "Drugs are still are a major problem in every school system in the United States of America. I don't recall the district ever infringing on anyone's civil liberties and I don't expect it will ever happen in the future."

SEARCH

"The point is that the special circumstances of the school setting requires some tailoring of the Fourth Amendment to students," he said.

The decision was praised a Reagan administration official who helped draft a White House report urging a stronger defense of the rights of educators.

The new ruling should thaw the "chilling effect" some of the past cases have had on teachers and administrators, said Gary Bauer, a deputy under secretary of education.

"There have been some well publicized cases in which teachers and principals have gotten into a great deal of trouble over good faith efforts to maintain school regulations," he said,

White was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Lewis F. Powell, William H. Rehnquist, Sandra Day O'Connor and Harry A. Blackmun.

Justices John Paul Stevens, William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall dissented.

The court did not answer whether materials seized from students in unlawful searches by public school officials may be used as evidence when the students stand trial.

The decision also left unanswered whether students' right of privacy extends to the contents of their desks and lockers, although under Tuesday's decision searches of desks and lockers at least would be lawful if "reasonable."

Search of girl's purse led to landmark ruling

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — The former vice principal whose routine check of a ninth-grader's purse led to a U.S. Supreme Court ruling broadening school officials' right to search students says the decision will mean safer schools.

"Obviously, I'm very happy," said Theodore Choplick, former vice principal at Piscataway High School. "I think it was a step toward safer schools, simply because (school officials) now won't be afraid to do the job parents want them to do."

In a 6-3 decision Tuesday, the nation's highest court ruled in the Piscataway case that school officials do not need a warrant or the same justifications required of police officers to search students suspected of violating the law or a school rule.

But the court said public school officials, like police officers, must adhere to the Constitution's ban on unreasonable searches and seizures by governmental officials.

Choplick said he was trying to carry out his responsibility on March 7, 1980, when he asked a 14-year-old student, identified in court records as T.L.O., to open her handbag after a teacher saw her smoking in a restroom.

"It wasn't like I grabbed the girl and attacked her and took the handbag from her," he recalled. "It was a reasonable search. ... I asked her and she opened it."

Choplick said he found a pack of cigarettes and rolling papers.The girl was found delinquent after admitting to police she had sold marijuana cigarettes to classmates.

The New Jersey Supreme Court overturned the delinquency finding, ruling that the search had violated the student's rights.

But the high court reinstated the delinquency verdict.

The girl has since graduated; her expulsion was put on hold by the litigation.

Boy fully recovered after underwater tragedy

By NICK GERANIOS

CHICAGO — Jimmy Tontlewicz, the 5½-year-old boy pulled from icy Lake Michigan after 20 minutes under water, missed a news conference to mark the first anniversary of the accident — but not because of poor health.

The youngster has recovered physically, but suffers from a short attention span, hyperactivity and some behavior and speech problems he had before the accident, said Dr. Robert Tanz, who has been treating the boy.

Jimmy was scheduled to appear at the news conference with his parents and Tanz, but at the last minute doctors advised against it, saying too much excitement was bad for the child.

"He's been interviewed on TV lately, and to see a mass of people is not what he needs," Tanz said.

Jimmy was sledding on the lake Jan. 15, 1984, when he fell through ice and stayed submerged about 20 minutes before divers pulled him out.

Reporters' only glimpse of Jimmy came after the news conference, when his mother picked him up from another part of the hospital and they walked to their car.

The youngster, laughing and pointing, waved to photographers.

Jimmy's mother and his father, Terrence, were at the news conference, but the couple is in the process of a divorce and Tontlewicz said he had not seen his son in two months.

Scientists say Jimmy may have survived his 20-minute submersion in 32-degree water because of a biological phenomenon called the mammalian diving reflex. That reflex, triggered by the shock of cold water, enables humans to live without breathing for extended periods.

Doctors said Jimmy speaks and walks as well as any hyperactive youngster with a short attention span.

"We can't tell how much of his hyperactivity is the result of the near drowning," Tanz said. "He was somewhat hyperactive before."

Urban League says blacks losing ground

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black America continued to lose ground economically in 1984, a year marked by greater racial polarization and heightened alienation among the poor, according to a National Urban League report issued today.

"That Black America is not worse off today than it is, is more of a testament to its traditional ability to survive under the most difficult of conditions than to anything else," John E. Jacob, president and chief executive officer of the Urban League, said in an overview chapter of its report, "The State of Black America, 1985."

"In virtually every area of life that counts, black people made strong progress in the 1960s, peaked in the 70s, and have been sliding back ever since," Jacob said, attributing much — though not all — of the decline to economic hard times.

As an example, he cited black unemployment, which stood at 16 percent at the end of 1984, more than double the 6.5 percent rate for whites.

President Reagan's "record is deplorable and includes continuing attacks against affirmative action, the unwarranted entry of the Justice Department into civil rights cases in an effort to turn back the clock," Jacob said.

He also cited the administration's efforts to grant tax exemptions to schools that discriminate, efforts to turn the Commission on Civil Rights into a "rubber stamp for administration policy," cuts in domestic spending, and "foot dragging" on extending the Voting Rights Act.

The Urban League's report is the 10th annual assessment of the status of blacks in America. It includes essays on various elements of black life, such as black families, computer technology in urban schools, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's campaign for president.

Since the first report was issued, the nation's black population — now 26 million — has become increasingly young and more concentrated in urban areas.

The report says that black families and black children are under tremendous stress.

Volcker: Spending cuts will lower interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker is trying to reassure Republican senators that action to slash government spending by $50 billion next year likely will be rewarded with lower interest rates.

Across the Capitol, Democratic and Republican House leaders appeared to agree that efforts this year to reduce federal budget deficits will not include increased taxes.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas is trying to build a consensus among GOP senators for a plan to achieve President Reagan's target of reducing the deficit to less than $100 billion by 1988 — a level roughly equal to 2 percent of the gross national product

Acknowledging that the budget Reagan sends to Congress on Feb. 4 will not meet the target, administration officials say they are cooperating with Dole's efforts to cut the deficit.

White House Budget Director David A. Stockman has estimated that without action, deficits will be $225 billion to $240 billion in each of the next three years.

Dole invited Volcker and business leaders to give senators private pep talks Tuesday as part of the drive to build momentum for quick action on reducing deficits this year.

"Fifty billion plus (in cuts) in a convincing way is what you need to have a psychological as well as a real effect over a period of time" on interest rates, Volcker said after he emerged from his meeting with senators.

"If you're going to have a convincing program you're going to have to start with in the area of $50 billion...with some follow through," he added.

Volcker declined to say how large a drop in interest rates might result from passage of such a program, but said they would be "lower than they would otherwise be."

Volcker also said he "can't help but feel encouraged" by the Senate attempt to trim the red ink.

The senators also had a separate meeting with members of the Business Roundtable, an organization representing some of the nation's largest corporations.

After that session, Robert A. Beck, chairman of Prudential Insurance Co., told reporters that deficit reduction and action to lessen the U.S. trade imbalance were the most important domestic issues facing the nation.

"Thank you very much," Dole said as Beck left the news conference for another meeting. "See you at the next rally."

In the House, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, predicted that Congress will not raise taxes this year, but might consider a major overhaul of the tax system.

Gephardt said in an interview there is mounting evidence that work on the deficit will have to come quickly this year. "It gets more difficult the longer you wait," he said of efforts to cut spending.

An early vote on a package of spending reductions would be a change from the past three years, but Gephardt said it is possible.

On the other hand, he added, "if they see they're never going to get anywhere (on spending cuts) they may decide 'let's get it off the stage and...make tax reform the centerpiece'" of the year's work.

Gephardt said he doubted a tax hike would be part of the tax-system overhaul. "You don't raise taxes at all — it would be pure tax reform," he said.

He said agreement among Senate Republicans to virtually freeze defense outlays at current levels is crucial to any deficit-cutting package. Without that — which he conceded is a long shot — "it gets almost impossible to get the rest."

Meanwhile, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said moves for tax simplification should not be part of the budget process this year.

Meeting with a group of reporters, Michel said that tying taxes to the deficit-reduction efforts would lead to an urge to raise taxes as an easy method of trimming red ink. Thus, he said, any action on taxes may be delayed until next year.

Michel, meanwhile, floated a possible compromise that would safeguard the president's plans to deploy the MX missile in exchange for lower defense spending than Reagan would [illegible]

"Something like 4 percent (growth)," Michel said, suggesting he might contact Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the new chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, about his idea.

The House Republican leader also repeated his view that changes in Social Security should not be considered as part of this year's deficit-reduction efforts in Congress.

How will Reagan do the second time around?

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Based on his 49-state landslide, President Reagan will begin his second term with the kind of electoral mandate politicians dream of, but that presidents often find turns into a nightmare.

From George Washington to Franklin D. Roosevelt and Richard M. Nixon, American history offers plenty of examples of presidents who entered their second terms after landslide victories, then quickly saw those mandates turn sour.

The causes vary. In some cases, there were circumstances far beyond the president's control; in others, the incumbent was a victim of his own misjudgment.

"We feel we have a mandate, a mandate not simply for approval of what we have done in the past, but a mandate to continue to provide change," said Nixon, a few weeks after he carried 49 states to win a second term. Within months, Nixon's presidency was paralyzed by the Watergate scandal.

An Analysis

The morning after Reagan's victory, the president told reporters, "I feel the people of this country made it very plain that they approved what we've been doing. And we're going to continue what we've been doing."

While there are no early signals of trouble, it is easy to spot areas that could cause problems for Reagan's second term.

What if the pessimists the president denounced during his re-election campaign turn out to be right and the record budget deficits undermine the economic recovery? If interest rates and unemployment start moving up, public approval of Reagan policies is likely to head in the other direction.

The recent agreement to resume arms negotiations with the Soviet Union enabled Reagan to begin his second term on a highly positive note in foreign policy.

For good reason, Reagan took a cautious approach at his news conference last week. "These new negotiations will be difficult," said the president. While the superpowers are heading back to the bargaining table, the issues that stalemated them during Reagan's first term haven't gone away and some new ones, such as missile defense systems, have appeared.

The Middle East is a perennial source of trouble for American presidents, their political fortunes often affected by continuing tensions between Israel and the Arab nations and the ever-present possibility that oil supplies from the region will be interrupted.

But for Reagan, Latin America might be the region of greatest danger as he tries to pursue his policy toward El Salvador and Nicaragua.

The president can take some comfort if events turn against him by reading about the problems encountered by his predecessors.

One month after Washington began his second term, the aftermath of the French Revolution sharply divided the young nation between partisans of England and France.

By the time he left office in 1797, the president, who twice received all the votes cast in the electoral college, had grown bitter toward opposition politicians and newspapers that attacked him with a vehemence unknown today.

When Reagan received 525 electoral votes, he broke the record set in 1936 by Roosevelt, who carried every state but Vermont and Maine to win a second term.

Historians now speculate whether Roosevelt misjudged the strength of his mandate when, frustrated by Supreme Court decisions declaring some of his programs unconstitutional, he proposed enlarging the court in order to shift the balance away from its conservative majority.

What became known as his plan to "pack" the court failed when it drew strong public opposition.

An economic downturn clouded Dwight D. Eisenhower's second term. After serving the final year of John F. Kennedy's term, Lyndon B. Johnson was elected in 1964 by the greatest popular vote margin in history, but his mandate was undermined by the Vietnam War and growing domestic dissent about the U.S. role.

Man convicted of murder 20 years after the crime

CARIBOU, Maine (AP) — A prison inmate who said he had set himself up to be indicted so he could prove he didn't bludgeon a waitress to death in 1965 has been convicted of murder on the basis of testimony from his brother and daughter.

"We took a gamble and lost," said Philip L. Adams, found guilty Tuesday of killing Donna Mauch, 24, whose battered body was found in her apartment Feb. 24, 1965, in Fort Fairfield, a small town at the edge of northern Maine's potato-growing region.

"Round two is coming up," added Adams, referring to his intention to appeal to the Maine Supreme Judicial Court.

A jury in Aroostook County Superior Court deliberated less than three hours before finding Adams guilty in a case in which there was no murder weapon, witnesses to the crime or physical evidence.

John D. McElwee, county district attorney, said the strongest evidence against Adams included statements by Adams's brother and daughter implicating him in the killing, for which another man was acquitted in 1966.

"We're obviously pleased" the jury was willing to convict Adams on such old evidence, McElwee said.

Adams's attorney, E. Allen Hunter, said his client must now decide whether to be sentenced under the 1965 criminal code, which mandates life imprisonment with a possibility of parole, or under the revised no-parole code, which mandates a 25-year sentence.

Adams, 42, said he set himself up for the indictment that was returned last July so he could prove his innocence. He has served eight years of a 10- to 20-year sentence in Connecticut for assaulting a child who was choked, beaten and left in the woods.

Adams said he told his brother during a telephone conversation from the Connecticut State Prison that he killed Mrs. Mauch and that he thought his admission would lead to a trial that would give him a forum for clearing himself.

In an interview last week from the Maine jail to which he was extradited in September, Adams said that early last year he discussed Mrs. Mauch's murder with his daughter, and "at some time she divulged what we had talked about. It was confidential."

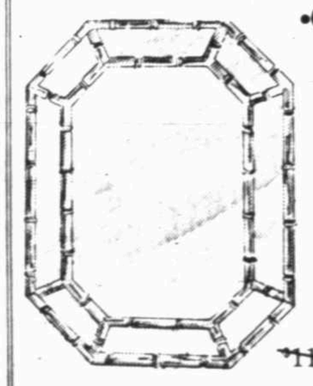

In closing arguments, Maine Deputy Attorney General Fernand LaRochelle asked the jurors to consider what "reasonable inferences" they could draw from statements by the daughter, Jodie Everett.

Dignity in death

The question of when a person should be kept alive by machines or permitted to die has perplexed modern man for several years — since medical technology gave physicians the capability of prolonging life beyond when vital human organs expire.

Resolving that dilemma may have moved a step closer — from a legal standpoint at least — with a decision by California's 2nd District Court of Appeals. The jurists held that a competent adult patient has a constitutional right to refuse medical treatment, even if such refusal hastens inevitable death by a natural cause.

Anyone who saw William Francis Bartling on the news program "Sixty Minutes" can appreciate the justice of the ruling. Bartling, 70, had emphysema, chronic respiratory failure, arteriosclerosis, an abdominal aneurism and a history of alcoholism. He was admitted to a hospital for treatment of depression. Then a lung tumor was discovered. A biopsy resulted in a collapsed lung, which did not reinflate. It was necessary to put Bartling on a mechanical ventilator.

Several times he tried to remove the ventilator, so his wrists were placed in restraints. He was not diagnosed as terminally ill. He said he did not want to die, but he also said he did not want to live in his disabled condition. His doctors said he was unable to make a meaningful decision because of his vacillation.

Bartling and his wife went to court and asked for an order restraining the doctors from administering any medical care without Bartling's consent. While the case was pending, Bartling died, despite the care he didn't want.

The court decision establishes the sound principle that doctors and nurses cannot force an alert, rational adult to accept medical treatment. Nothing in the oath of Hippocrates gives physicians a God-like right over life and death. The progress of medical technology has made it possible to prolong life and postpone death by heroic measures. That's wonderful in most cases, but in some rare exceptions keeping a patient alive by machines who otherwise would die amounts to inhumane cruelty.

Surely a hospital patient has rights and one of them must be to refuse such treatment and make a quiet and dignified natural exit.

Code upsets RV owner

RV OWNERS BEWARE! It has come to the attention of this writer through the newspaper and the recent experience of acquaintances that there is a movement afoot by "Big Brother", the City Code Enforcement Department, to force RV owners to move their vehicles from driveways at the front of their property. In fact, the department has, according to a tiny, obscure article in the MRT, hired two new employees to do nothing but drive city streets looking for junk cars and RV's. To my way of thinking, there is a vast difference between junk cars and an expensive RV. It seems to me that these new employees would better serve the taxpayers by looking for potholes in our streets.

Those RV owners who are found guilty of violating the city code by parking RVs in their driveways will receive a letter from the city advising them that they have 10 days in which to move their RV to a commerical lot or to a place behind the residence. Failing to do so will subject the RV owner to a fine of $200 per day past the 10-day period extended by the city. The Code Enforcement Department does not care that moving your RV to a commerical lot or to the alley behind your house will subject a large investment to vandalism and ruin.

Abilene and Odessa have both tried to enforce this obscure code and due to the response of RV owners, had their ears severely penned back. In Abilene the code was declared unconstitutional while in Odessa there was such a hudge turnout of RV owners in protest they threw out the code. I believe it is time for the RV owners of Midland to band together to get his bruhaha settled once and for all. After all, we pay taxes on our property, we pay taxes on our RV's and it is my understanding that the 9½ feet from the curb referred to in the newspaper article as being owned by the city is actually owned by the property owner and loaned to the city as an easement. Enough is enough!

If you are an RV owner and are concerned about this situation, please call 694-4157 to learn the details of a planned meeting to form a task force to look into procedures for accomplishing what Abilene and Odessa accomplished to protect the rights of the RV owners in those cities. Time is of the essence — don't wait for George to do it! Take an active interest today!

Schools rank low

The Jan. 2 edition of USA Today has a nation-wide composite ranking of public schools. The place of our state in the ranking ought to be food for thought by all serious-minded Texans.

The rankings were compiled from data gathered by the Department of Education. Six "quality index" categories were used in providing comparative ratings of each state. They were 1) admission test scores, 2) drop out rates, 3) pupil-teacher ratios, 4) per pupil expenditures, 5) teacher pay and 6) percentage of per capita income spent on education.

Four "hardship index" categories also entered into the ranking with scoring based on the significance of 1) per capita income, 2) financially poor students, 3) handicapped students and 4) minority students.

The results of the study, while not necessarily a ranking of the best school programs, doubtlessly have comparative value. And where does Texas stand? Forty-seventh place out of fifty-one, that's where. Not much to brag about, is it?

Could it be that Ross Perot knows what he is talking about? Of course he does and thank the Lord he speaks his mind. And isn't it about time we cut out all the superfluous frills of questionable educational value and got down to the hard work of preparing our children for an evermore competitive world? Think about it.

NSC resisted early famine help

WASHINGTON — As far back as 1982, the U.S. government was aware of the famine that was building up in Ethiopia. At top-secret sessions, the National Security Council was urged to head off the starvation with food shipments from America's overflowing bins.

Jack Anderson

Yet the NSC, citing strategic concerns, resisted the appeals. Not until it became clear that millions of people would die did the NSC soften its stand and permit some aid to be shipped to Ethiopia.

The suspicion is unavoidable that the Reagan administration considered its political hostility toward the Marxist government in Ethiopia more important than a humane concern for the wretched victims in the drought-stricken hinterlands.

Granted, Ethiopia's radical ruler, Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, deserves most of the blame for the tragedy. Because the hardest-hit areas were in the northern provinces where separatist rebels were operating, he showed little compassion for the starving populace.

And instead of asking his friends in the Kremlin for food supplies, he nagged them for military aid. He also wangled Soviet funds for a lavish 10th anniversary celebration of his Marxist revolution.

If the Soviets were indifferent toward famine victims, the U.S. government has no such record of past inhumanity. Republican and Democratic administrations alike have fed and clothed the needy — including political adversaries.

My investigation has established, however, that the Reagan administration knew for more than two years that a disaster was in the making in Ethiopia, yet did little to prevent it.

High officials told my associate Lucette Lagnado that private relief organizations and the U.S. Embassy in Addis Ababa were regularly and accurately reporting to Washington on the impending tragedy. The Ethiopian government itself had warned that famine conditions prevailed in some regions, and in November 1982 asked the United Nations for help.

The following month, Catholic Relief Services asked the U.S. government for emergency aid — a modest 838 tons of grain. The administration took six months to respond to the request.

By March 1983, Western European nations were shipping supplies to Ethiopia. A report by one relief organization pointedly noted that the United States had "refused" to contribute to the common effort.

By June 1983, the State Department had been told that as many as 100 children were dying every day of starvation or related diseases. Congressional delegations confirmed the reports of approaching disaster.

Even then the administration showed reluctance to help the Marxist regime's hungry people. In July 1983, it refused funding for the purchase of trucks and spare parts which were badly needed to haul food to the outlying areas where the famine was worst.

According to competent sources, the National Security Council was insisting on veto power over all decisions on aid to Ethiopia. Despite pleas from the embassy in Addis Ababa and sympathetic officials in Washington that humanitarian concerns should override political considerations, the NSC and its supporters insisted on using famine relief as a tool to extract political concessions from Ethiopia.

When the American people finally learned of the true horror, they responded quickly and abundantly with their customary generosity. Church groups, schoolchildren, pensioners of modest means — all over the country, people gave what they could to feed Ethiopia's starving millions.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Some readers have asked about ex-Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., a rock-solid conservative who regularly deplored government extravagance while he was in Congress. He's now drawing $83,300 a year as vice chairman of the taxpayer-funded Synthetic Fuels Corp. Oddly enough, Synfuels was a particular target of Corcoran when he was in Congress. He complained about the lavish salaries of its executives, among other things.

Corcoran's acceptance of the Synfuels post, which had never existed before, at a time when Congress is drastically cutting back on the agency's budget, brought a mild complaint from an ex-colleague, Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla.

"It is particularly troubling that in this time of severe fiscal constraint, the SFC has chosen ... the feathering of its already lavish payroll," Synar wrote to Synfuels boss Ed Noble.

— Has the government figured out a way to thwart the computer hackers who were breaking into military and intelligence computers? Apparently not. The computer whiz kids who do this sort of thing for kicks have their own "bulletin board," on which are listed the computer codes and passwords that have been cracked by fellow hackers. A recent list included the access password to an FBI computer: "Rocky and Bullwinkle."

An FBI spokesman expressed doubt that an agency computer had actually been violated by outside hackers, but acknowledged that computer burglars are a growing problem.

Trial in Torun

Those who are waiting to see the highest reaches of the Polish Interior Ministry exposed and condemned for the kidnap and murder of the pro-Solidarity priest, the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, will probably be disappointed in the end. And that includes much of the Polish people.

But if the criminal trial now being conducted in Torun, Poland, is likely to fall short of fully appeasing the sensibilities the Polish people demonstrated in the heyday of the Solidarity movement, it is remarkable nonetheless. Western experts believe it is the first open trial of state security officers ever conducted under a communist regime, and certainly it is the first time members of an internal security police were tried for crimes committed against a political dissident like Popieluszko.

That doesn't make Poland an open society. But it does make it a society in which the ruling regime feels compelled to explain itself to an aroused public, a society in which openness is understood by all sides to be the price of public peace. The tension is over how much openness will do the trick. And while that's no victory, it's unmistakable progress.

No doubt, the trial itself is being carefully orchestrated. It is highly unlikely anything will come out in it that the Polish regime does not want exposed. And it is almost certain that attempts to discredit Popieluszko himself will get prominent play in the proceedings. Yet in pre-trial testimony discussed in open court recently, one of the four lower-level security officers accused of the kidnap/murder implicated by name a Cabinet-level functionary, a deputy minister of the Interior Ministry.

He also spoke of maintaining radio contact throughout the kidnapping with superiors at state security headquarters in Warsaw.

That the same defendant partially retracted those statements under cross-examination is hardly surprising. What's surprising is that they were aired in public in the first place, that the defense attorneys in this case are pressing to blame higher-ups whom the prosecution never mentioned in its own indictment, and that in the process they are publicly examining at least some of the inner bureaucratic workings of the state security police.

One hardly imagines that will be allowed to get too far out of hand. But that it is happening at all is testimony of a different kind to the calculations of the ruling regime about how much dissidence and openness it will have to allow in order to survive.

— The Sacramento Bee

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

'Indoctrination' may be surprise

While college students are home over the holidays, parents would do well to inquire into what the young people are learning. In some cases, parents will be unpleasantly surprised.

I thought of this in reading an article entitled "Princeton's Biased Curriculum" published in Prospect magazine, a journal for alumni of Princeton University.

Anthony Harrigan

The author, Dinesh D'Souza, says that "It is nearly impossible for students to escape the partisan ideology which pervades the vast majority of courses in the humanities and social sciences at Princeton." He quotes author and economist Irving Kristol a saying that the Princeton faculty is "monolithically liberal." And Mr. DiSouza states, "I am hard-pressed to identify five conservative professors at Princeton."

Students at Princeton, who are interested in hearing more than one side of an issue, want more from the university. To this end, a group of Princeton students have founded The Princeton Story, a magazine of news and analysis which discusses academic issues from a responsible conservative perspective.

Mr. D'Souza charges that "Princeton professors promote socialism sometimes as an ideology, but more often as a tendency: stuents are counseled to move away from free enterprise and toward a planned economy. Princeton professors do not exalt the Soviet Union as a political ideal, but all criticism of it must be carefully qualified to avoid fueling 'Cold War Tensions,' and arguments proving that the U.S. and the Soviet Union are 'moral equals' are regarded as insightful."

Mr. D'Souza goes into great detail to substantiate his allegations. He reviews the texts required in the classroom. His comments on the methods of the faculty ideologies are especially instructive. "A professor," he observes, "will stack his course with textbooks promoting leftist ideology, and then require, for 'balance,' a single text purporting to represent the conservative or classical liberal view; but the representative for anti-socialist thought will be some ridiculous or disagreeable character."

Clearly, President Bowen of Princeton has a lot to account for. An accounting is owed to students, parents and benefactors of the university. However, it isn't Princeton alone that has a biased curriculum or a faculty dominated by left-leaning academics. This type of ideologue-dominated, herd education is commonplace at a wide variety of public and private colleges and universities.

Parents ought to inquire of their young people regarding the outside lecturers who are given a platform on camus during the year. They ought to ask: is there any intellectual balance? Are the students given the facts about radical speakers who attack American values and institutions? Mr. D'Souza rightly warns that "the values incalcated in students by family and church may be eroded by four years of faculty drumming, so that the students may enter a conservative and graduate a revolutionary." That can happen in many other places than Princeton. That's why careful parental evaluation is important. Parents are paying for education, not indoctrination.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 16, the 16th day of 1985. There are 349 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 16, 1920, America went "dry" as the 18th Amendment to the Constitution took effect and Prohibition became the law of the land.

On this date:

In 1547, Ivan the Terrible was crowned Czar of Russia.

In 1883, the U.S. Civil Service Commission was established.

In 1944, General Dwight D. Eisenhower took command of the Allied Invasion Force in London.

In 1957, conductor Arturo Toscanini died.

In 1964, the musical "Hello, Dolly!" starring Carol Channing, opened on Broadway.

In 1969, two manned Soviet Soyuz spaceships became the first vehicles to dock in space and transfer personnel.

In 1979, the Shah of Iran and his wife fled their country. The Shah would never return.

In 1981, Irish nationalist Bernadette Devlin McAliskey and her husband, Michael, were shot and wounded by Protestant gunmen at their home in Northern Ireland.

Ten years ago: Former CIA head Richard Helms told Congress the agency had become involved in domestic spying because of an upsurge of radicalism that started in the late 1950's.

Five years ago: In a sudden reversal, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi criticized the Soviets for invading Afghanistan.

One year ago: In a speech aimed at Soviet, European and U.S. audiences, President Reagan called on Moscow to return to the Geneva arms talks.

Today's birthdays: Author-editor Norman Podhoretz is 55. Opera singer Marilyn Horne is 51. Auto racer A.J. Foyt is 50. Singer Ronnie Milsap is 41.

Thought for today: "The truth is so simple that it is regarded as pretentious banality." — Dag Hammarskjold, U.N. Secretary-General (1905-1961).

White House, Washington prepare for inauguration

Nancy Reagan says 'there isn't any way' to plan family dinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan says the White House is going to be bulging with family members for her husband's second inaugural this weekend, but "there just isn't any way" to schedule a private dinner with all four children and their families.

In an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday, Mrs. Reagan said, "We've got a lot of our kids who want to go to different places," and she hasn't scheduled any time during the busy three-day period when they can all sit down together for a family gathering.

The White House, she said, is "going to be bulging" with the Reagans' two children, Ron Reagan and Patti Davis; Ron's wife Doria; the president's daughter Maureen by his marriage to actress Jane Wyman; Maureen's husband, and Reagan's adopted son Michael and his wife, Colleen.

Ms. Davis' husband can't be here because he is starting a new job teaching yoga on Monday, the day of Reagan's ceremonial inaugural, spokeswoman Sheila Tate said.

Asked if she and Michael will ever feel close after their public falling out at Thanksgiving, the first lady said, "No, I do not believe in talking about family matters in public. I never have. I never will. So everything is fine, and that's it."

It was Mrs. Reagan's comment in an interview with a Washington society columnist that Michael was estranged from his father and stepmother that focused on family differences. The first lady's remark prompted Michael's retort that she was just trying to excuse the elder Reagans never having seen their 18-month-old grandchild.

Asked if there would be a chance during the inaugural festivities for everyone to sit down together, Mrs. Reagan said, "I don't know. We'll just have to see what all works out."

But with all the events scheduled for Sunday and Monday, she said, "You know, there just isn't any way" to arrange a family dinner.

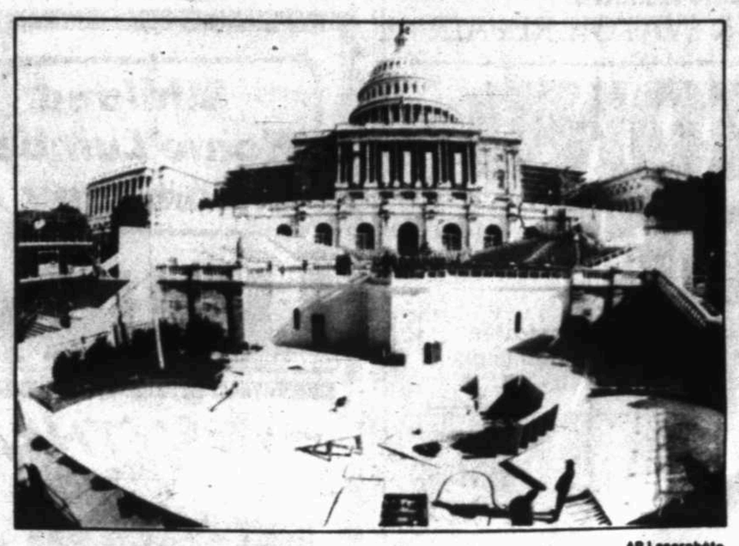

Although the first lady said she has been so busy with inaugural arrangements that "my lists have lists," there are no dinners on the first family's public schedule.

During the interview, Mrs. Reagan also admitted she is sometimes afraid when she goes out in public with her husband.

And she said she believes "being in the middle of decisions that are being made that will affect the country and possibly the world" have broadened her horizons and helped her grow during her husband's first term.

"It is fascinating," she said. "Frightening at times, frustrating at times, but fascinating."

But Mrs. Reagan, whose early White House years were marred by widespread criticism of her conduct as first lady, the traumatic assassination attempt on her husband and the death of her beloved father, said no one could ever have prepared her for the glare of publicity and the confinement of life.

AP Laserphoto

The stand for the inauguration of President Reagan continues to take shape on the west front of the Capitol in Washington, D.C. Bands and singing acts will perform in the plaza, foreground, and the oath of office will be administered on the platform, center.

Museum hands liberals another defeat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bounced from a museum where it planned an Inauguration Day bash for liberals with no place — and nothing — to celebrate, the Americans for Democratic Action says the party will go off at another location.

Ann Lewis, the liberal group's executive director, said Tuesday that politics apparently played a part in the decision by Capital Children's Museum to cancel arrangements for the ADA's party after President Reagan's second inauguration.

"We were told they were concerned that it would chill relations with the Reagan administration and with their fund-raisers," Ms. Lewis said in an interview.

But the museum executive director, Ann Lewin, denied any political motivation and said she never agreed to the party at all.

Pennsylvania Avenue spiffed up for Reagan's inaugural parade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania Avenue, once a sorry mishmash of dilapidated storefronts and massive government structures, has a new look for President Reagan's inaugural parade next Monday.

Gone is the ugly strip of souvenir shops, liquor stores and abandoned buildings that prompted President Kennedy to remark after his 1961 inaugural parade: "We've got to do better than this."

Gone, too, are most of the plywood fences that shielded the construction under way four years ago when Reagan took his first inaugural ride along the 1½-mile stretch from the Capitol to the White House.

Five buildings along the avenue have been completed since 1981. Six parks and plazas are now in use. Five hundred willow oak trees have been planted, and road and sidewalk construction is finished.

Three other buildings will be opening later this year, while four more are slated for completion in 1986.

Kennedy's complaint about Washington's ceremonial main street started the renewal effort in 1962, but years of debate among public officials and developers delayed construction.

Planners argued over how to maintain the avenue's ceremonial character, balance commercial and residential development and mix new designs with historic preservation, said James O. Gibson, former director of the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corp. The corporation was created in 1972 to oversee renovation.

His group used $100 million in public funds, which was to be repaid to the Treasury with interest, to spur private investment. The government spent another $100 million for streets, sidewalks, lighting, parks and historic preservation.

The government investment will generate at least $1.3 billion in private sector investment, according to Henry A. Berliner Jr., chairman of the development corporation.

As the parade makes its way down the avenue Monday, the results of much of that investment will come into view, including:

— $110 million restoration of the Willard Hotel, called the residence of presidents because Franklin Pierce, Calvin Coolidge and Harry Truman all lived there. Opened as a boarding house in 1850, the elegant Beaux Arts hotel that stands today was built on the site in 1901. It was vacated in 1968 and its renovation is considered the cornerstone of the plan to rehabilitate the avenue. It is expected to reopen by 1986.

— $145 million restoration of the National Place, a complex comprising the National Theater, J.W. Marriott Hotel, shops and offices. It opened in 1983.

— $75 million renovation of the National Press Building, where hundred of journalists covering Washington have their offices. Completion is expected this spring.

Thousands of people honor King's memory

By The Associated Press

Thousands of people nationwide marched, boycotted, rallied and attended religious services in honor of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., one of three Americans remembered with a national holiday marking his birth.

King, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968, would have been 56 on Tuesday. He was honored by blacks and whites, Southerners and Northerners, as a true American freedom fighter.

"George Washington began our American revolution," said Mayor Andrew Young, a lieutenant of King's during the 1960s civil rights movement, speaking at an ecumencial service in King's hometown of Atlanta.

"Abraham Lincoln continued the revolution and united us geographically. Martin Luther King Jr. continued the revolution and united us ethnically, across class lines."

City, county and state government offices were closed in many parts of the nation in observance of King's birthday. The federal holiday in honor of King, enacted by Congress last year, will be observed for the first time on Jan. 20 in 1986.

In the Atlanta neighborhood where King was born, marchers lined up 10 abreast for two city blocks and sang songs of the civil rights movement as they walked from Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King preached, through downtown to a rally at the federal building.

Other marches and observances were held in Savannah, New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, Olympia, Wash., and Birmingham, Tuscaloosa and Tuskegee, Ala.

In Alabama, where King first gained national attention in the 1950s, activities included a parade from the University of Alabama to Tuscaloosa City Hall. The march originated at the site of Gov. George C. Wallace's "stand in the schoolhouse door," where he attempted to block the admission of blacks to the state university.

In Chicago, the scene of King's first northern civil rights campaign in 1966, Mayor Harold Washington, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, entertainers Stevie Wonder and Pete Seeger and King's youngest son, Dexter King, led a day-long celebration of what would have been King's 56th birthday.

An unusual observance came in Atlanta, where 75 students at predominantly white Sandy Springs Middle School agreed to become victims of discrimination for a day. They ate in a segregated part of the cafeteria, used restrooms separate from the rest of the student body, entered and left school through a separate entrance and were segregated and discriminated against in class.

Galaxy's discovery may end astronomical debate

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The discovery of a galaxy that magnifies dim light from a remote quasar should make it possible to accurately weigh the galaxy and possibly resolve a controversy over the size and age of the universe, astronomers said in a report today.

The galaxy's enormous weight and correspondingly strong gravitational pull allows it to serve as a lens, magnifying light from the quasar behind it, said one of the astronomers, Marc Gorenstein.

"You can't put the galaxy on a scale, but you can see how it deflects light," said Gorenstein, of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass.

Jamboree decision expected

BOWLING GREEN, Va. (AP) — A decision is expected in about 10 days on whether to hold the 1985 Boy Scout National Jamboree at the Army post where dioxin contamination was found after the 1981 outing, a Scout spokesman said.

Raul Chavez said soil tests from Fort A.P. Hill were consistent with Army findings that contamination was confined to a fenced area around a shed where leaky barrels of the herbicide Silvex were stored.

The Army has promised to remove the soil and shed.

Spanking award 'fair'

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A $15,000 award to an emotionally handicapped fourth-grader who was spanked twice against his mother's wishes is "fair and reasonable," the family's lawyer said.

Attorney Don Nichols said Tuesday that Duval County school officials should have known that the boy, Christopher Cox, had letters in his records that prohibited corporal punishment.

The mother, Sonya Cox, filed a suit in October 1982 alleging that excessive force was used in spanking the boy in March and September of that year, despite recommendations against it from a child therapist and a doctor.

Joke costs man $1,900

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A self-styled "singing cowboy" will have to pay about $1,900 for using an Air California charter flight's PA system to joke that the plane was going to make a belly-flop landing.

Adeline Miller, 74, said she thought she was going to die when she heard the quip from Larry White, 35, and filed suit for $250,000 against the airline and White.

Super hype already out of hand

By BARRY Lorge
Copley News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — National Football League officials have revealed a surefire way for folks to tell if their tickets to Super Bowl XIX are genuine or fakes printed by a counterfeit ring. On the bogus ducats, the sky over the Golden Gate Bridge is blue. On the real things, it's purple.

Naturally.

Good heavens, the NFL never would portray the firmament over its super spectacle in a shade as ordinary as azure.

Purple is the color of the Super Bowl and so is most everything about it — including much of the prose produced in the two-week festival of hype and hysteria before anything actually happens.

GRANTED, THIS shapes up as a fascinating football game. The Miami Dolphins and San Francisco 49ers are unquestionably the best two teams in the NFL. Dan Marino and Joe Montana are quarterbacks with star quality.

This time, the contest truly promises to be super. But the preliminaries could put you in a stupor.

Mine eyes glaze over with bacchanalian bashes and Roman numerals.

I don't need a souvenir glass with my $5 Irish coffee, or an official NFL helmet to protect me from the gaiety in the streets of San Francisco.

Frankly, I could do without the intimate little fete that NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle is throwing Friday night at the Moscone Center for 3,000 of his closest friends and associates.

Lest the uninvited feel unwanted, the public can pay $35 per person and attend a super shindig at the same site on Saturday night, replete with music by the Pointer Sisters and a touch football game featuring NFL players, live commentary, instant replays and a miniature Goodyear blimp.

The Roman numerals belong on Super Bowls, because if you've got bread, they've got circuses.

Marino vs. Montana with space-age attacks and aerial weaponry isn't the star wars that Shultz and Gromyko were discussing at their Geneva summit, but you'd never guess that from surveying the Super scene. Hyperbole and inflated importance are the lifeblood of this exercise. The decor is modern American excess.

IN THE cavernous, 17-story lobby of the Hyatt Regency, the NFL headquarters hotel, a contest for high school placekickers was held Tuesday morning. Regulation uprights were set up. Zebras officiated. A sportscaster provided amplified play-by-play.

Believe me, you start to wonder what you did the night before when you walk out of your room for breakfast and see a kid in uniform shank a field goal attempt off a chandelier.

One of the glass elevators in the same lobby has been decorated as a pigskin. Souvenir stands are monitored by beefy young NFL security men who look like they've got shoulder pads on under their yellow vinyl windbreakers. Presumably, they make sure only authentic merchandise is peddled. Counterfeit T-shirts might not be purple enough.

Church services for Sunday have been re-scheduled to allow worshippers to pray and still get to Stanford Stadium in time to indulge. It would not be difficult to imagine some congregations replacing the customary hymns with the country and western tune, "Drop Kick Me, Jesus, Through the Goal Posts of Life."

The NFL prohibits abnormal price-gouging at hotels where teams and guests are housed, but other joints all over town have imposed exorbitant surcharges to lighten the wallets of Super Bowl tourists. This still is a city that can steal your heart, but if Tony Bennett came for the game, he'd also leave his change in San Francisco.

ENTREPRENEURS are making out like bandits, especially because a local team is in the Super Bowl for only the second time.

Miami mementos aren't selling briskly, and you don't see much acquamarine-and-orange around, but 49er red-and-gold glistens from Alcatraz to Pebble Beach.

And the demand for tickets is insane.

Each day, Bay Area newspapers carry columns of classified ads: "Tickets For Sale or Wanted." The sellers are asking as much as $750 apiece for $60 seats. The buyers are offering all sorts of exotic deals:

"Will trade '68 Pontiac Bonneville convertible, all power, for 2 Super Bowl tickets" ... "Superbowl tix wanted (2). Exchange 2-week vacation in Puerto Vallarta" ... "Trade quality dental services for your Superbowl Tkts" ... "Superbowl, 2 tix, Sec. L, want 2 round-trip SF-Dallas & rental car" ... "Will trade Cabbage Patch Kids for Super Bowl tix."

There were more than 200 such ads in Tuesday evening's San Francisco Examiner. If you had a spare pair, you could swap them for a '65 Mustang, concrete work, legal services, a season ticket to the 49ers, a $2,450 computer modem and software, a hot tub, 10 days in a plush Maui condominium, a contractor's license course, lithograph equipment, a restored slot machine, electrical work, a new Fisher video recorder or estate-planning advice from an attorney. Most of the sellers seemed more interested in old-fashioned cash on the barrelhead.

Personally, I've already had enough hoopla. I'm glad there's so much interest, but I'm ready for them to quit talking and start blocking, to cut the rip-off and proceed with the kickoff.

In the meantime, I have this friend — soon to be a former friend if he doesn't stop being such a persistent pain in the posterior — who calls and wakes me up in the morning, looking for tickets I don't have.

If he shows up at the Hyatt, I'd be tempted to throw him off the balcony outside my room, except he might fall on a high school place-kicker.

Or I could be really nasty and demand his first-born Cabbage Patch Kid, or stick him with a pair of tickets that have blue sky over the Golden Gate.

Super Bowl

And then there was one... Midland Lee

Rebs wipe out Permian

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee coach Paul Steuckler didn't want to get into a "windshield wiper" game with the high scoring Abilene High Eagles at Chaparral Center Tuesday night, but when his wiper blades took its last swipe, the Rebels owned a 91-74 victory and sole possession of first place in the wacky District 4-5A basketball race.

"Gosh, I didn't want this game to be a windshield wiper affair. I told our kids before the game that we needed to set the ball up and take the breaks when we get them. It didn't turn out that way, did it?" said Stueckler. "It looks like we beat Abilene at their own game. I guess we can play like that."

Derek Westbrook, who scored 14 of his 20 points in the third period when Lee began pulling away from the Eagles, chimed in from the wings, "But coach, it's hard to pass up those two-on-one situations."

AND LEE had a lot of those two-on-one situations as point guard Tyrone Thurman waltzed through the Eagle press like melted butter, dishing off to a Westbrook...or a Brian Marczynski...or a Raymond Morney...or a Anthony Dickens.

All contributed heavily on Thurman's 15 assists. Thurman had only eight points for himself, but he may be asking for the other to share some of their points before the week is out.

Marczynski scored 19 of his game high 25 points in the first half to keep the Rebels afloat. Then came Westbrook in the third period to hit on seven of eight shots from the field, mostly on that patented 15-foot jumper of his. And Morney came in to seal the victory in the fourth period with 15 of his 23 points, hitting nine-of-nine charity tosses in the period.

Then add in the 10 rebounds and 13 points from Dickens and you have an attack that scores 91 points, a season high from the Rebs.

IT HAS been the Eagles this season who have been noted for their high scoring offensive machine, averaging over 87 points a game coming in. Lee, on the other hand, is supposed to beat people with a patient offense that looks like dominoes rolling off a table. They usually take a shot when boredom sets in.

Here, however, the gunning Rebs burned in 37 shots from the field in 76 attempts and hit 17 of 22 at the charity stripe. One would think with 91 points scored by the winner, it would be Abilene High. But this was a Lee blitz with 55 points in the second half.

And to add to the oddity of the way Lee dominated this encounter with scoring punch, the Rebs came into this key meeting with the AHS in a four-way tie for first place and came out in sole possession of first.

Wacky business was taking place elsewhere as both Midland High and Odessa Permian were upset on road trips.

"Every game is a big one in this league," said Stueckler. "My throat was dry before we played Big Spring the other night and they haven't won a district game."

Abilene High coach Gerald Coppedge, who brought his Hobbs, N.M., basketball training to Abilene High, didn't have much good to say about the Eagle showing. "We were poor on the boards and we've had better shooting nights from the field (30 of 73) and we had a break down in our defense," said Coppedge.

"Lee is an outstanding club with great shooters. I don't know if we could have stayed with them even if we didn't have that defensive lag. I still think there is no clear cut district champion. There are five or six teams who can beat you. It's just a good thing we get to play everyone twice. It's tough playing road games on Tuesday and that's all we have."

LEE IS now 4-1 in league play, standing alone at the top, and 17-5 for the season. AHS slipped to 3-2 and 14-6.

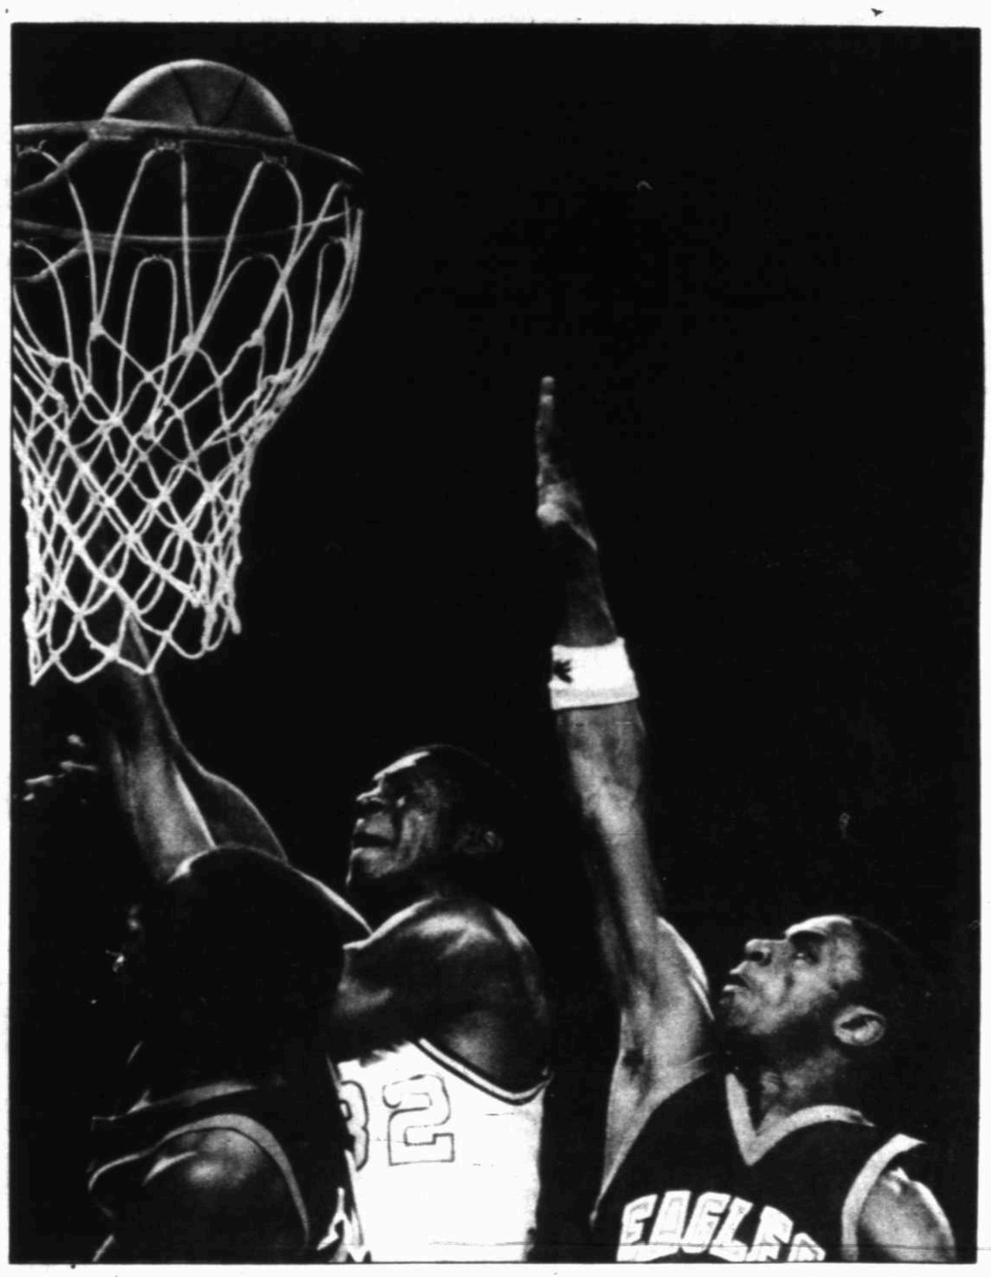

The Lee junior varsity ran its season record to an awesome 19-2 for the season and 5-0 in league action with an 81-58 win over Abilene's JV as Quintus Hampton hit for 19 points and Steve Tyler for 13. Abilene was led by tino Marquez with 14.

Lee will host 2-3 Odessa High Friday at the Chap while Abilene High faces Big Spring.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Nothing comes easy in District 4-5A basketball as Midland Lee's Anthony Dickens (32) finds out on his way to two points through Abilene High defenders Mickey Russell, left, and Kirt Robinson, right. Dickens was fouled and completed the three-point play.

MHS among 4-5A tenpins

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Strange and unexplainable happenings again rocked District 4-5A basketball Tuesday night as three of the four league leaders fell, including Abilene Cooper's 59-52 upset of the Midland High Bulldogs.

MHS entered Tuesday's game here against Cooper in a four-way tie for first place, but when games at four sites ended only Midland Lee was able to say it was in first place.

The Bulldogs are now mired in a four-way tie for second place in the league chase with a 3-2 district record with Abilene High, Odessa Permian and San Angelo.

In what Coach Jack Stephenson called, "the worst game in the last two years of Midland High basketball," Cooper jumped to an early 15-6 lead and later upped that margin to 21-10 before the Bulldogs could get untracked.

The 15-7 Bulldogs closed the gap to a meager three points by the end of the third period, but the Cougars had a 17-13 advantage in the final quarter to take the victory.

Cooper also used an effective "packed zone" to limit Darrell Davis to 15 points. It was the first district game that Davis has scored less than 29 points. Elvin Mackey tried to take up the slack with 19 points, but no other Bulldogs were able to come up with double digit efforts.

The one positive thing for MHS is the fact that the Bulldogs don't have to go to Abilene again this year. Both of their loop losses have been to Abilene High and Cooper.

However, MHS faces the task of hitting the road again Friday when they travel to Odessa Permian to meet a team that has already beaten the Bulldogs, 79-45, this season. And then Tuesday they face cross-town rival Lee, who has also beaten the Bulldogs this season.

But MHS is no worse off than their 3-2 league companions. Permian was upset 60-59 by San Angelo, which threw second place in the up for grabs category. Abilene High, of course, lost to Lee, leaving the Rebels alone in first place with a 4-1 mark.

San Angelo outscored Permian 23-9 in the second period and then hung on for victory. Permian's Jimmy Davis went to the line for two free throws with one second left in an effort to tie the game at 60-60. He hit the first one and missed the second one. Ottoway Perryman and Brian Ross both had 15 points to pace the Bobcats while Permian's Orlando Ontiveroz had a game high 19.

Moses charges dropped

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An hour after Edwin Moses, an Olympic hero set on defending his reputation, denied charges of soliciting and drug possession at a press conference, the charges weren't charges anymore.

Moses, reading from a prepared statement, said Tuesday "he was mortified by events the events of the last few days" and that he had strived to build a positive image throughout his life.

One of 82 people arrested during a weekend sweep of Hollywood by police, the two-time gold medalist also said he was confident that he will be cleared of criminal charges.

However, Deputy City Attorney Mike Wilkinson said just over an hour later that criminal charges in the incident that occured early Sunday morning had not yet been filed.

Wilkinson had announced erroneously Monday that Moses, 29, was charged with soliciting a female police officer for prostitution and for possessing a small amount of marijuana.

"As of now, the case is still being investigated for filing," and no decision has yet been made on whether to charge Moses, Wilkinson said Tuesday.

"CASES like this are generally handled in a few days from when we get them. We expect a decision (on whether to file charges against Moses) within a few days."

Explaining the decision process, Wilkinson said, "The prosecutor, in this case the city attorney, must feel convinced the person committed the act before filing criminal charges, since it's a serious matter for any person to be accused of a misdemeanor crime."

Of the 82 people arrested during the weekend sweep, approximately 35 were considered "customers" and the rest were arrested for prostitution, Wilkinson said. He said he was unsure how many of the people had been charged as of Monday, but there were some guilty pleas entered and he understood that approximately 20 or 30 of those arrested for prostitution had been charged.

He explained that their cases had to be handled rapidly, "since custody is involved."

Moses was booked and released on his own recognizance early Sunday morning after an incident in nearby Hollywood, where police were making their sweep of prostitution. The marijuana was discovered in Moses' car when he was arrested, police said.

Both offenses being investigated are misdemeanors.

Although Moses' agent, Gordon Baskin, had indicated the two-time Olympic gold medalist and his wife would talk extensively at the press conference about the events that led to his arrest, Moses merely read a brief statement and neither he nor his wife would answer questions.

"Due to the advice of my attorney, I can't say more," Moses said at his meeting with the media which lasted only a couple of minutes.

Saying, "I'm truly mortified by the events of the last few days," Moses added. "After an investigation, authorities will see they're mistaken. I've worked hard all my life to build a positive image and reputation . . . I know I've done nothing wrong."

Nellie Fox boosters ask some pointed questions

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Nellie Fox boosters are asking some pointed questions these days — some decimal-pointed questions.

For instance, did Ted Williams bat .406 or .4057 in 1941?

In 1968, was Carl Yastrzemski's American League-leading batting average .3005 or .301?

Was Jacob Nelson Fox named on 74.68 or 75 percent of the Hall of Fame ballots in 1984?

The answer to the first two questions is relatively easy. By all reckoning, Williams hit .406 and Yastrzemski batted .301, rounding off the fourth digit to the right of the decimal point as a matter of convenience.

ALL RECKONING does not, however, agree that Fox was named on 75 percent of the Hall of Fame ballots, the percentage necessary for election to the baseball shrine.

Balloting by 10-year members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America was announced one week ago. Lou Brock and Hoyt Wilhelm were voted in, but Fox came up two votes short of 75 percent. He was named on 295 of 395 ballots, and that's 74.68354 percent.

COMMENT

It was the last year of eligibility in voting by the writers for the former Chicago White Sox second baseman, who had 2,663 hits and struck out no more than 18 times in any of his 16-plus major league seasons. And that was what created the sense or urgency over the .31646 of a percentage point that has kept Fox out of the Hall.

LAST WEEK, Jerome Holtzman, columnist for the Chicago Tribune and a senior statesman among baseball writers, asked Hall of Fame President Ed Stack to change his ruling on Fox. Round it off to 75 percent, and let Fox take his place alongside Brock and Wilhelm, he said.

No, Stack replied. No concessions.

Then, Holtzman asked if Stack would at least bring up the issue with the Hall's 14-member board of directors on Jan. 28 when it meets in New York.

"He asked me if he wrote a letter, would I see that the board got it," Stack said. "I said I would but that I would not support any change in the interpretation of the rules."

The letter has since been published by several newspapers, but Stack hadn't received it as of Sunday. When he gets it, he'll read what Holtzman wrote, then give it to a board he says will "support my interpretation."

IN THE letter, Holtzman writes: "I am confident that thousands of baseball fans join me in challenging your decision. In baseball, as in general accounting practices, all figues are rounded out to the next fraction, providing that the fourth digit represents a minimum of five-tenths of one percent. Hence, 74.7 percent is, in effect, 75 percent."

Holtzman points out that concessions have been made in other areas for other players. For example, both Ross Youngs and Addie Joss were elected without serving the necessary 10 years in the major leagues. And neither Lou Gehrig nor Roberto Clemente waited the necessary five years after the end of their careers for induction.

"Mr. Stack," Holtzman concludes, "no such special considerations are being requested on the behalf of Nellie Fox. Only that he be given the customary mathematical reckoning: that 74.7 percent is 75 percent."

Stack still sees it as a concession and is not inclined to support it. He says "... the rule reads that a candidate must have 75 percent of the votes cast in an election. If you take that and do what it says, it's 75 percent of whatever the number (of votes) is. You come up with the number of votes needed for election, and Fox is two votes short.

"I'm interpreting it exactly the way the rule reads. It would be a concession, and I can't see them (the board) doing that, to be frank with you," Stack said.

STACK ALSO is hesitant to support recommendations that any former player who gets within a percentage point or so of election should be allowed to remain on the ballot longer than the maximum of 15 years. Such a move first would have to be passed by the baseball writers, then forwarded to the Hall of Fame's board of directors.

There is one way out for the boosters of Fox, who died in 1975. After a three-year waiting period, the Hall's Veterans Committee can consider Fox for enshrinement.

"We have a mechanism for handling players who might have been overlooked by the baseball writers," Stack said, "so I'm less than enthusiastic about that suggestion.

"If this was the end, if there were no recourse," Stack said, "then I might feel very differently."

Boston gets infusion of 'youth' from reject

Associated Press

The Boston Bruins have gotten an injection of youth from a 35-year-old reject.

Butch Goring, considered over the hill last week when he was waived by the New York Islanders, scored his second game-winning goal for his new club Tuesday night to spark Boston to a 3-2 victory over the New Jersey Devils.

"Tonight he played like a 21-year-old with the smarts of a 35-year-old," said Rick Middleton, who assisted on each Boston goal.

Goring got the final goal of the game with 38 seconds remaining in the second period when he flipped a shot over New Jersey goalie Hannu Kamppuri with the Bruins enjoying a two-man advantage.

Canadiens 2, Nordiques 1

Mario Tremblay's power-play goal midway of the third period allowed Montreal to snap a seven-game winless streak. The winner came when Tremblay deflected a shot by defenseman Rick Green past Quebec goalie Richard Sevigny.

Flames 5, Whalers 2

NHL

Third-period goals by Colin Patterson, Jim Peplinski and Hakan Loob lifted Calgary to victory in the 1,000th game for the franchise.

The Flames, who joined the NHL in 1972 in Atlanta before moving to Canada in 1980, snapped a 2-2 tie on Patterson's 22nd goal of the season at 1:53 of the third period.Peplinski and Loob added insurance goals in the final six minutes.

Al MacInnis and Carey Wilson had the other Calgary goals while Dave Lumley and Greg Malone scored for the Whalers, winless in their last three games.

Canucks 6, Islanders 5

Jere Gillis' 40-foot slap shot at 1:54 of overtime allowed Vancouver to salvage a game it almost blew. The Canucks took a 4-1 lead into the third period but New York scored four times in the period, the last with 28 seconds remaining on Denis Potvin's second goal of the game. Brent Sutter, Bryan Trottier and Mike Bossy also scored for New York in the furious final period.

Drug proposal action delayed

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Major-college football schools gained partial autonomy Tuesday but NCAA convention delegates delayed action on a controversial drug proposal for one year.

The measure on drugs, expected to be the most hotly debated item at the 79th annual meeting of NCAA schools, drew comment from only one delegate.

"The importance of this subject cannot be overestimated," said Wilford S. Bailey of Auburn, a member of the committee that wrote the measure. "But despite the efforts that have been made, it is obvious that there are serious flaws with the legislation as it is presented."

Without further comment, delegates almost unanimously approved Bailey's motion to table the proposal until it can be rewritten and presented to the 1986 convention.

The drug proposal had drawn sharp criticism in pre-convention meetings. Many delegates were concerned about the strength of drugs to be banned because it contained only performance-enhancing substances and not street drugs such as marijuana. The testing procedures were also questioned by some lawyers, who felt they could be in conflict with various state laws.

As expected, the convention overwhelmingly approved a measure to give Division I-A school broad legislative autonomy. The football powers will be able to vote independently on such issues as coaching staff size, number of scholarships and recruiting rules.

However, a companion proposal that would have given I-A schools greater control over financial aid was defeated.

"You could call it a partial victory," said DeLoss Dodds, Texas athletic director.

NCAA Convention

"We made some progress. It's a step in the right direction," said Carl James, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference. "It was nice that there was not a lot of bitter argument."

The convention was thrown into a confused uproar over an amendment to reduce the number of sports that a school must sponsor in Division I-A. The schools believed they were voting to require each institution to reduce the requirements to six men and six womens sports — or to leave the requirements as they are — eight for men and six for women, with the women slated to go to eight in 1988.

But NCAA President John Toner explained after the vote that the requirement would be eight men's and only six women's sports without a scheduled increase for women.

The error was finally reversed by jumping ahead 26 proposals and rewording a measure originally intended to deal only with women's field hockey and softball.

After passing that measure, delegates returned to the original question and Division I-A wound up committed to eight men's and eight women's sports, effective immediately. The episode angered many delegates.

"It does seem to me that this was not well handled," said one man from the floor. "We feel we didn't get what we voted for."

Division I-A schools could change the requirement at their legislative meeting next summer.

Earlier, delegates rejected a proposal to authorize the NCAA staff to make spot checks of athletes' academic records.

No more 'comp' tix for gridders

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — College football players will have to find a new source of "income" if NCAA member schools can enforce legislation that does away with complimentary tickets to athletes in favor of a pass list.

The NCAA passed legislation Tuesday that attempts to curb one of its most abused rules — players selling their complimentary tickets, often for outrageous sums.

Effective Aug. 1, an athlete must "designate family members, relatives or fellow students" who will receive complimentary admission through the use of a pass list.

The current rule permits a football player four complimentary tickets per game but prohibits him from exchanging them for any payment or any item of value.

Ten of the 59 charges in the recent probation handed the University of Florida involved the illegal sale of players' tickets and Frank Broyles, athletic director and former head coach at the University of Arkansas, said Monday that players at every major school probably violate the rule.

"I'm in favor of it, but I'm not sure if we have exactly the right piece of legislation to take care of it all," said Vince Dooley, head coach and athletic director at the University of Georgia and president of the American Football Coaches Association. "What if his girlfriend wants to come? We've still got some little-bitty problems to work out, but over-all it's good. In most cases when you've got serious violations you see that (selling tickets) come up."

Dooley rapped the current rule as being "ultra-extreme. They can't even sell their tickets for face value. At least this takes away that ridiculous rule."

Charlie McClendon, executive director of the AFCA, said the new rule "is a good idea if they can eliminate it (the abuses), but the feeling is the administrators are going to have a big problem in how to handle it."

The Question Box

By RAY CORIO
N.Y. Times News Service

QUESTION: Has a World Series inning of the seventh game striking out with a chance to change the outcome of the game? How many times has a home run by the final batter won the seventh game?

There have been five World Series in which the seventh and deciding game ended with a strikeout, none with the batter having a chance to win the game, but one with him having an opportunity to tie it. That came in 1965 when the Los Angeles Dodgers led the Twins, 2-0, in the bottom of the ninth inning of game seven in Minnesota. Harmon Killebrew singled off Sandy Koufax, bringing the tying run to the plate. But Koufax struck out Earl Battey looking and Bob Allison swinging, his ninth and 10th strikeouts of the game, to end the Series.

In 1925, Red Oldham of the Pirates got Goose Goslin of Washington on a called third strike for the final out of game seven in Pittsburgh, but there were no runners on base and the Senators trailed, 9-7, at the time. In 1956, Johnny Kucks of the Yankees, with a 9-0 lead, struck out Jackie Robinson of the Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field, ending their seven-game Series as well as Robinson's major league career, for he retired after that. In 1967, Bob Gibson fanned George Scott in Boston to preserve a 7-2 St. Louis Cardinal victory over the Red Sox and in 1982 another Cardinal pitcher, Bruce Sutter, struck out Gorman Thomas of the Milwaukee Brewers with the bases empty to preserve a 6-3 victory in St. Louis.

Only one World Series, 1960, ended with a home run in the seventh game: Bill Mazeroski leading off the Pirate ninth in Pittsburgh by rapping Ralph Terry's 1-0 pitch over the left-field wall to defeat the Yankees, 10-9.

QUESTION: Did the name Super Bowl originate with the first game between the American and National Football Leagues or was it adopted after Joe Namath and the Jets achieved the first AFL victory in 1969, which would make next Sunday's game actually Super Bowl XVII instead of XIX?

The championship game between the leagues has been popularized as the Super Bowl since its inception, Jan. 15, 1967. Credit for the term is given to Lamar Hunt, who helped found the AFL in 1960, then moved his franchise, the Dallas Texans, to Kansas City in 1963. Hunt derived the name from a toy his daughter owned called "Super Ball." There was nothing super about the ball Hunt's Kansas City Chiefs played in Super Bowl I, though, a 35-10 loss to Green Bay.

QUESTION: Has a member of the losing team ever been voted the most valuable player in a Super Bowl game?

It has happened only once in 18 games: Chuck Howley of the Dallas Cowboys in Super Bowl V in 1971. Howley, a veteran linebacker out of the University of West Virginia, forced a fumble by Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts early in the game, then intercepted a pass by Unitas midway in the first quarter and returned it 22 yards to the Baltimore 46. On the first play of the fourth quarter, Howley picked off a pass into the end zone by Unitas's replacement, Earl Morrall, to end a Colt threat. However, the Colts won the game, 16-13, on Jim O'Brien's 32-yard field goal with 5 seconds to play.

QUESTION: A player for Team A carrying the puck in a National Hockey League game is knocked down by a Team B player near Team B's blue line and not only loses the puck, but also falls so that most of his body lies in the attacking zone as he straddles the blue line. Can another Team A player pick up the puck in the neutral zone and skate into Team B's zone with it before his teammate gets up, or will an offside be charged against Team A for having a player precede the puck into the zone?

There is no reason for an offside in this situation as long as either skate of the fallen Team A player is making contact with any part of the blue line. Offside calls are based on the position of the player's skates, not of his body or even his stick.

BOXING— A Milan magistrate dropped charges against Italian boxer Maurizio Lupino, who had been accused of manslaughter after an opponent died from injuries received during a match. Magistrate Antonio Lombardi also decided not to take any action against organizers of the bout and to discontinue any further investigation about lawfulness of boxing. Such an investigation had been urged by several doctors and associations in the past few years as a result of casualties in Italian rings. The magistrate ruled that he could not pursue any charges against Lupino because the boxer did not violate rules of a sport in which "violence is necessary."...

SOCCER— Soccer players risk brain damage by too much heading of the ball, an American medical professor Vojin Smodlaka claims. "Professional soccer players may head the ball an average of five times a game which adds up to 5250 impacts to the head in a 15-year career," wrote the Yugoslav-born American citizen and professor at the State University of New York's College of Medicine in Brooklyn. "Heading the ball causes a significant blow to the head because the ball weighs 14 to 16 ounces and has a high velocity when kicked. "...the only protection is (for players) to decrease the number of headings — especially on those balls kicked from a short distance — and to use proper techniques and light soccer balls." ...

What do you do after you've done it all? Where do you go after you've got where you've always wanted to be? What do you climb after Everest?

Ordinarily, when you think of someone who's living life in the afterglow, you think of some burned out old star living amid yellowed clippings and faded photographs.

But what if you're looking back on the good old days – and you're only 20? Or even 30? What if your life is all nostalgia and you've only lived half of it?

Athletes, particularly Olympic athletes, live their lives backward. They go directly from birth to adulthood. They achieve their goals when most people are just setting out on theirs. Then they are treated as special people, somewhat like gifted children. Outside the main stream.

PATRICIA KELLER McCormick knows all about the afterlife of the big star. Pat McCormick is one of the larger-than-life stars of Olympic history. Her name comes up in any conversation of the super performers of that sporting lore. There are Jesse Owens, Jim Thorpe, Mark Spitz, Al Oerter – and there's Pat McCormick.

For one thing, she did something no one else has ever been able to do, win the platform and springboard diving events in two consecutive Olympics. In fact, very few have been able to win both those events in even one Olympics. Few people know Pat McCormick might have had a triple; she lost a place on the team in 1948 by 1/100th of a second.

Pat knows the Olympic experience as few do. From golden girl to life in the shadows. From victory stand to losers' row.

IT'S ALMOST like being a child star in the movies. If you can't move into grownup roles, it's over.

When the flags come down and the anthems die out and the Games go into history, some athletes are like exiles in their own land.

"I call them the post-Olympic blahs," explains Pat McCormick. "There's no depression just like them. I mean, they're bottomless if you let them.

"Consider that some athletes have never had a conversation in their lives that didn't have to do with swimming or diving, or running or jumping. They're interested only in their muscles, their times, their scores. They were conditioned from earliest childhood to point to a pinnacle of their lives occurring at age 20.

"It's scary. It's like you were suddenly dropped off in the middle of a desert. At night. With no directions, and the stars aren't out. I mean, you've got coaches for everything else. Lots of people can tell you how high to jump, how fast to run, how deep to dive. But nobody tells you how to fit into that larger world. A world you pretty much ignored. Or took to be unimportant.

"You lose your identity. You have no tools. Education was something you fit around your life in the water. It was, as they say so glibly nowadays, irrelevant. The hell it was.

"I think these blahs were what kept me going into a second Olympics. I think the sense of alienation was more profound after my first Olympics in Helsinki in '52. Life was simpler on the high board.

"It's an isolated, lonely feeling."

The pitfall, Pat says, is that the athlete gets so totally absorbed in his own world, his own event, that everything outside it seems trivial. To become the best in the world at what you do requires the kind of tunnel vision of a stalking beast.

"The stress of success is hard to handle. The stress of failure handles itself, by comparison.

"YOU SEE, all our lives we have had someone to tell us what to do, how to do it. Then, your whole life dissolves into that one moment. When you step up on that victory stand, you're going to be deserted. All the support systems you had are going after their next project. They can't tell you how to handle success, they can only tell you how to achieve it.

"The trick is to stay on that victory stand. Never step down from it.

"I would tell the young athlete today, 'First, never do anything impulsively. Don't get married right away, don't take that job that looks like you get paid for doing nothing. Weigh your options but set some goals.'"

Does this mean you should join a monastery or change your name and hide for the first year?

Pat McCormick, whose daughter, Kelly, won the silver medal in the '84 Olympics, and who conducts her own business of motivational lectures around the world, shakes her head.

"No! You can't withdraw from the world and say, 'Hey! I'm special, I got a gold medal.' That can be a key for you but not the whole opening. The worst thing you can do is wait for the world to come to you.

"You've got to say to yourself, 'OK, the drive and preparation and dedication got me my gold medal in the summer Olympics. Now, if I call upon the same sacrifices and concentration I can get up on a victory stand in the real Olympics, life.'"

USTA warns touring pros on behavior

NEW YORK (AP) — In the wake of disturbances by Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe during the Davis Cup finals in Sweden last month, the United States Tennis Association is reminding its players that rules of behavior must be obeyed.

"It is a reinforcement of the rules and of our position," USTA Ed Fabricius said of a letter signed by USTA President Hunter Delatour that is being sent to potential U.S. Davis Cup team players.

"We want the players alerted to what's expected of them," Fabricius said. "We want to remind them of the specific Davis Cup rules."

Connors was fined $2,000 for his actions during the United States' loss to Sweden in the Davis Cup finals, and McEnroe criticized the late-December date of the final and the playing surface used.

The two were further upset when Delatour publicly apologized for their behavior and The Louisiana-Pacific Corp. threatened to withdraw its sponsorship of the American team if displays of poor sportsmanship continue.

Connors said that Louisiana-Pacific President Harry Merlo shouldn't have addressed the matter in a public letter to the USTA and instead should have talked privately with the players. Connors added that he wasn't sure whether he would play for the American team next season.

WT enthusiasts get chance to polish skills

Fishing enthusiasts can polish their angling skills during the Bass Fishing Institute to be held at Texas Tech University.

Any angler, novice or experienced, can benefit from the information presented by America's top professionals during the four-session institute. Featured speaker will be Roland Martin, holder of 18 national bass fishing titles and host of the television series Fishing with Roland Martin.

Co-speakers at the institute will include Roger Moore, Bassmaster Classic runner-up and a member of the promotional staff for Lowrance Electronics and Evinrude Motors; Randy Fite, seven-time Bassmaster Classic qualifier and a member of Techsonic Industries promotional staff; and Bo Dowden, 1980 Bassmaster Classic champion.

Schedule for the institute will be: Feb. 4, Martin will discuss locating bass on strange lakes, finding fish during the four seasons and favorite lures and techniques. Feb. 11, Moore will explore how to select bass fishing equipment to locate bass and how to use the chart recorder; and Feb. 21, Dowden will discuss flippin' techniques, philosophy and presentation as well as the walk the dog topwater approach.

Sponsored by the Texas Tech Division of Continuing Education, the institute will meeet 7:30-9:30 p.m. in Room 202, Busines Administration Building on the Texas Tech campus.

Registration is $45 per person or $75 per couple; a special family rate of $85 is available and allows a couple to attend the Bass Fishing Institute with two children 15 or younger.

For additional information and to register, contact Helen Otken at the Division of Continuing Education, Box 4110, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, TX 79409-4110, or call (806) 742-1523.

Birding book buy

Serious birders or those considering taking up bird watching should get a free booklet form Texas Parks and Wildlife.

It's called A Checklist of Texas Birds. The 36-page booklet is designed for recording bird observations by location or in a diary fashion. It includes an accurate listing of Texas' birdlife with both scientific and common names.

For a a copy, write Park Operations, Texas Parks and Wildlife, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, TX 78744.

Cold dangers

While most drownings occur in the high-traffic summer months, your danger of drowning in the winter is greater.

The reason for the paradox is hypothermia, which in scientific terms means the body's core temperature drops too low, which in common parlance means freezing to death.

In its early stages, hypothermia causes a form of shock – with shivering, a lack of coordination and disorientation, among other symptoms.

One of the first symptoms of hypothermia is shivering. The body is burning up muscle fuel to create additional heat. The treatment for primary hypothermia is simple – get the shivering, afflicted individual away from cold and water. Warm drinks, such as coffee or tea, are helpful.

But don't give someone who's cold alcohol. Alcohol dilates, or opens, capillaries near the skin surface, releasing heat that could be used to keep the internal organs warm. A snort can only worsen someone who's too cold.

If someone shows the more serious symptoms of hypothermia – disorientation and uncoordination – it's imperative to get them out of the elements as soon as possible. They may say they're not cold, but that's another warning sign. Many hypothermia victims tear their clothes off just before they die, as their body sends one last rush of blood to the groin.

To warm someone who's unconscious, remove wet, cold clothes and concentrate on the center of the body. Warming the extremities first may send colder blood into the heart, liver and brain, shutting those organs down. By warming the most important organs first, usually by applying warm water or water bottles, a heating pad or body heat to the trunk, the risk of shock goes down.

Sportsman, buddy foresaken by gods of the chase

By NELSON BRYANT
N.Y. Times News Service

BRANFORD, Conn. — The gods of the chase have forsaken Bud Beckley and me.

Fifteen years ago, if we planned a shad-fishing trip on the Connecticut River, we caught all the fish we wanted in half a morning, and if we went waterfowling from his Branford home, which is on the rocky shore of Long Island Sound near the Thimble Islands, we returned with more birds than we cared to pluck.

Those invariably successful excursions ended about a decade ago, beginning with a January duck hunt for bluebills, when the bonus season for that hardy, fast-flying gregarious species was under way. Two days before I was due to arrive at Branford, a brumal wind howled down from Canada, the shore areas of the Sound froze over, and we spent our day feeding stale bread to ragged bands of disconsolate mallards standing on the ice in the cove near his house.

THE FOLLOWING summer I invited him and his son Hal to go surf casting for bluefish with me on Martha's Vineyard, but I had delayed my invitation until the blues were among the fish departed. My recollection is that in two 12-hour days of casting we caught one small blue that somehow hadn't realized its brethren had gone offshore. Undaunted, we planned another bluebill hunt for that winter, and that time a westerly gale made it impossible for us to go out on the Sound.

When I reached Branford on the afternoon before our most recent effort, I stopped at the fish market and tackle shop Beckley owns and operates with Hal, an endeavor he began after his retirement about eight years ago as chief of wildlife management for Connecticut's Department of Environmental Protection.

"Northwest winds from 20 to 30 miles an hour are predicted for tomorrow," he said. "I don't like a northwest wind. It limits where we can set up our rig... but don't worry, we'll find a spot."

After dealing with a customer who wanted to know how to cook a fillet of monkfish — also known as anglerfish or goosefish — so it would taste like lobster, Beckley introduced me to Babe, a 4-year-old Labrador bitch who lives in a kennel out back. She is a handsome animal and was quivering with energy and excitement.

This season in particular has been a bad one for most East Coast waterfowlers. Relatively few ducks have been present. The same has been true in such places as Stuttgart, Ark., one of the country's most famous and most productive duck hunting areas. One suspects that a major cause of this has been a winter that, until recently, had been exceptionally mild and apparently persuaded many waterfowl to cut short their southward migrations.

There was a dusting of snow that night. Before dawn, the temperature was below freezing and dropping rapidly, and the northwest wind came as predicted. The decoys, nearly 100 of them, were already in Beckley's big outboard-powered wooden skiff, nine to a basket in strings of three. All save one basket of four black ducks were bluebill decoys. Bluebills tend to fly in large flocks and one has little hope of tolling such flocks with only a few bogus birds. The large number of decoys required for bluebill hunting is one of the onerous aspects of such an endeavor. Setting them out in half a gale is cold work. Even more demanding is retrieving them and wrapping the lines around their anchors at the end of the day.

We went to one of the larger islands in the Thimbles (one large enough to have a summer home on it), got in its lee, put out our decoys and reclined on a shoreside ledge. When I first went bluebill hunting with Beckley, I was astonished that no blind is required for such shooting. One simply sits still when the birds are approaching.

WE WERE on the shore shortly after 7:30, waiting for ducks to arrive. The wind picked up, a pair of mallards hurtled past from behind us, paying the decoys no heed. A lone female goldeneye, flying out of range beyond the far edge of the spread, did the same. An hour went by during which only gulls and wheeling flocks of purple sandpipers were visible. My left foot began to ache with the cold.

Babe had been reasonably-behaved up to that time, but she suddenly lost all restraint. If Beckley and I tried to converse, she stationed herself a foot behind us and barked without respite. When we attempted to ignore the din, she approached me from the rear; put her front paws on my shoulders, licked one of my ears, and then snatched my woolen cap from my head and went racing across the snow-covered rocks with it in her mouth, shaking it savagely. Beckley persuaded her to give up the cap in exchange for a dog biscuit. She resumed barking, eyed my cap, then stole one of my woolen mittens, which I had removed in order to light my pipe.

Beckley caught up with her, retrieved the mitten and tied her to a rusting iron pin protruding from a boulder 20 yards away, where she shrieked her frustration to the lowering skies. The wind increased and the open water — which we would have to cross on our return — on the windward side of the island was a welter of whitecaps. A flock of perhaps 200 bluebills flew downwind low over the water nearly a half mile away. Until then, I had clung to the notion that a big flight would respond to our rig, but when my friend remarked that the weather was worsening and that it would be a nasty ride back at best, I suggested that we call it quits. It was not yet noon.

We had to ease our way through the rough water at half-throttle on the return trip, and Babe — apparently feeling a bit insecure — fell silent and essentially immobile, spending the roughest part of the journey with her back to the wind and her head in Beckley's lap. In retrospect, her antics added a certain piquancy to a hunting trip in which not a shot was fired.

In addition the numbers of mallards bred in Canada was down this season.

Changes in farming patterns have left flooded rice fields and plenty of leftover grain further north and ducks don't fly as far south to winter as they used to, unless driven by severe weather.

"This year we haven't had the kind of weather (in Northern states) to move the ducks down," said Steve N. Wilson, director of the Arkansas Game and Fish Division.

The ducks come from all the Canadian prairie provinces, and the United States' Midwest from the Great Lakes to Montana, according to a study done at Wingmede, the plantation and hunting retreat owned by Lyon.

The study fond one duck banded in The Netherlands. It was never learned how the bird made a transoceanic flight, Lyon said.

Despite protests of the poor hunting, more ducks fell to the hunters. The final morning of the season ended in style. The hunters fired up a charcoal grill mounted on the bow of an aluminum johnboat.

Duck breasts which had spent the early hours marinating in a tin can filled with chablis and liquor were piled on the grill.

Broiled with onions and bacon, they were a delicious late breakfast.

Duck hunting in Arkansas is something special.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, January 17, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor James Earl Jones, actress Betty White, Muhammad Ali, puppeteer Shari Lewis, the San Francisco Giants' Chili Davis and Cardinals catcher Darrell Porter celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: Benajmin Franklin, actor Noah Berry Sr. and Al Capone. Your popularity rises in the months ahead. Distant relatives help you expand a business or solve a financial problem. Take on new responsibilities. Spending more time at home will improve your relationship with mate. Look for recreational activities you can share. A child thrives on your encouragement. Your honesty makes you a valuable friend and critic. Do not let an unfortunate experience harden you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Secret transactions could come back to haunt you. Keep everything out in the open. Special circumstances make romance particularly exciting today. Do not make promises you cannot fulfill.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Those in sales should prosper now. Be willing to work long hours to achieve your goals. Lasting financial security is possible. Secrets are revealed. Do not betray a confidence.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The emphasis in business is on diversification. Look behind the scenes for the answers you need. A new product or project shows promise. Travel is favored for both business and pleasure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Cope as best you can with any problems that arise today. Those in authority will be impressed with your perseverance. Keep any diet or exercise resolutions. Self-improvement projects pay off royally.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A newcomer helps you cut through some red tape. Show your appreciation. This person will soon play a prominent role in your professional or personal life. Romance becomes more rewarding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a chance and seize an unusual opportunity. The friends you make while traveling could have a profound effect on your finances. Do not try to keep up with a big spender.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are bursting with bright ideas now. Offer them freely to higher-ups. Refuse to be discouraged if not all of your suggestions are accepted. Leaders are not afraid to speak up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You feel ready to tackle almost anything today. Others look to you for guidance. A friend could have a real talent for matchmaking. Say "yes" to a blind date.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may find it difficult to control your temper now. Bite your tongue if tempted to say something really unpleasant. Spill your troubles to a loyal and discreet friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A visiting friend could dent your budget. Do most of your entertaining at home and split expenses when going out. College students need to be especially thrifty. Write instead of calling home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Today is the day to ask for that raise or special favor. Look for new excitement in your love life. An evening social event introduces you to an attractive newcomer.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your friends are eager to help you now. Do not hesitate to call on them. Teamwork lightens a burden. Guard your cash and belongings, especially when in a crowd.

Opening lead: Five of ♡.

If you were to poll the cognoscenti for their list of the world's most imaginative players, Pakistan's Zia Mahmood would be high on every list. Here's an example of his expertise from the recent World Team Olympiad.

The contract of three no trump was normal, as was the opening lead of a heart. Despite the fact that North-South have 27 HCP in the combined hands, they have only seven fast tricks, and declarer must develop two more for his contract.

Declarer correctly ducked the first heart trick and won the second in hand. He cashed the king of spades and, in an attempt to keep West off lead, would certainly have continued with the eight or ten in an attempt to duck the trick to East. But something happened on the first spade lead—Zia followed with the nine!

Now declarer could no longer afford to duck a spade, for it looked as though East had started with a doubleton J-9 or Q-9. If that were the case and declarer passed a spade to East, West would control the fourth round of the suit. So declarer continued with a spade to the ace, and Zia jettisoned his queen!

This sequence of plays promoted the jack of spades in West's hand to an entry. West promptly drove out South's last heart stopper, and now declarer had to guess the location of the queen of clubs for his contract. Since the early play strongly suggested that there was club length to his right, declarer naturally finessed East for the lady. Down one.

To appreciate the depth of Zia's reasoning, let's follow what would happen had he routinely played a low spade to the second trick. He would be forced to win the next spade, and his only safe return is a spade. Now declarer has a third spade trick set up while he still has a heart stopper, and he can work on diamonds for his ninth trick. Eventually he sets up a long diamond for the fulfilling trick, because West is an entry short to cash his hearts.

Performers say cuts will hurt, but groups will survive

By DOLORES BARCLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Performers who count on federal largesse say President Reagan's proposal to slash funding for the National Endowment for the Arts would hurt, but they say they'll survive though some programs may not.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes confirmed Tuesday that Reagan will request $144.5 million for the arts agency in fiscal 1986 — $500,000 more than he sought for the current fiscal year, but almost 12 percent less that the $163.7 million appropriated by Congress.

Congressional support for the NEA may fade, however, amid efforts to reduce budget deficits that exceed $200 billion a year.

Smaller, experimental dance, theater, opera and music groups which in the past relied heavily on government grants say they would suffer in competition with larger, more established companies for competitive corporate and private funding. And big and small organizations will press Congress for more money.

"It's going to be a much tougher fight this year because everybody all across the country is biting the bullet," said William P. Wingate, managing director of the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles and a member of the board of the American Arts Alliance.

"In three years, we've dropped the grant program from over 260 theaters to fewer than 200 nationally. All of the theaters getting money and some of the theaters not getting money are deserving," he said.

Nicholas Grimaldi, executive assistant at the National Association for Regional Ballet, said government grants are more than money. "It's a validation of your worth in your field. It really is, in a way, akin to a 'Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval,'" he said.

Federal support "has been strongly successful in stimulating support from others — private, corporate," said Kenneth Haas, general manager of the Cleveland Orchestra. "A reduction can have a chilling effect on other sources."

There are about 400 dance companies in the United States, according to Carol Dioguardi, executive director of the Corporate Fund for Dance.

"Unless they are funded, they will not be able to perform," she said. "Maintaining repertory is most important. Major dance companies seek new choreography which comes from smaller companies that are trying to survive."

The arts community expressed great dismay in interviews with The Associated Press, but no one wrote off the arts in America.

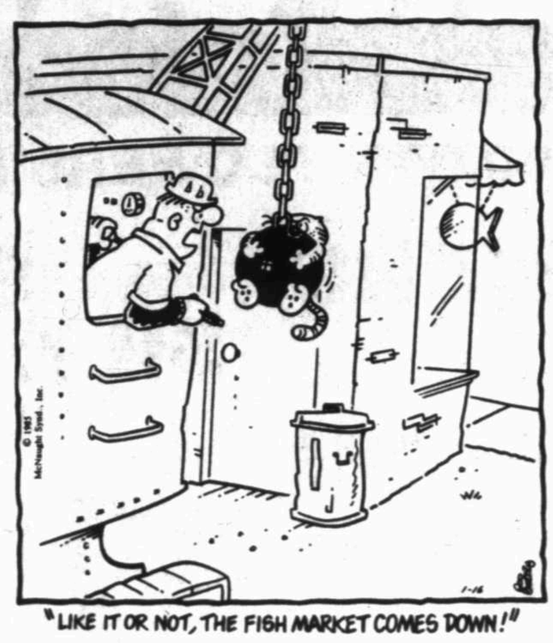

"It's mostly a point of view about the arts that seems to be lacking," said Joseph Papp, producer of the New York Shakespeare Festival. "They have points of view about various other things — Central America and so forth. But you have to have a philosophical attitude toward the arts in order to support it properly in a country this size."

Papp said the festival's 1984 budget is $10.6 million, including $437,000 from the NEA. The proposed cuts would not greatly affect his productions.

Illness keeps Nixon from attending inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Nixon will be unable to attend President Reagan's second inauguration because of a severe and painful case of shingles, a spokesman for the former president says.

"He finds it extra-uncomfortable to sit for so long," said John Taylor. Shingles is a viral infection of the nerves.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Bill Cosby's request to be dropped as a nominee for a Golden Globe Award has been refused by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association.

Cosby

Cosby, who stars in NBC's "The Cosby Show," was one of five actors nominated as best actor in a television comedy series.

But Cosby wired the association that "I am not interested in competing against my peers." Jorge Camara, the group's president, wired back Tuesday, "we don't view the nominations as a competition."

Other nominees in the category are Ted Danson of NBC's "Cheers," Robert Guillaume of ABC's "Benson," Sherman Hemsley of CBS' "The Jeffersons" and Bob Newhart of CBS' "Newhart."

The 42nd annual Golden Globe awards will be videotaped for syndication on Saturday, Jan. 26, at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dukes of Hazzard" star John Schneider and his wife, television newscaster Tawny Little Schneider, lost $36,000 in goods from a burglary of their home, and another burglary was reported at a nearby home owned by Michael Wayne, son of the late John Wayne, police said.

The Schneiders returned home Monday night and discovered the burglary at their Studio City home, 11 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles, police Detective James Gerardi said Tuesday.

Items stolen included a television, rugs and silverware, Gerardi said.

Tenants at Wayne's Toluca Lake home, about 10 miles northwest of downtown, reported Sunday that about $13,000 in stereo equipment, silverware, and other goods had been stolen.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Actor Eddie Albert played a farmer on the television show "Green Acres" for six years and worked on a farm when he was younger, but doesn't think he could own a farm today.

The only farming Albert does now, he said, is raising vegetables at his home in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

Farming is a "very rough" business, he explained Tuesday, saying the government should do more so farmers can get more money for their crops.

Albert said he occasionally meets with congressmen in Washington to discuss the concerns of farmers, but wouldn't call his activities lobbying.

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — Rock musician Bruce Springsteen may get a hometown street renamed in his honor, along with a Main Street parade and a key to the city where he grew up, an official said.

City Clerk Vivian Taylor said the borough council will consider renaming South Street as Bruce Springsteen Boulevard at its Jan. 28 meeting.

However, Mayor John G. McGackin said the honors would only be bestowed upon Springsteen if he'll accept them in person.

Springsteen might be available next month, when he is scheduled to take a brief respite from his U.S. tour before touring Australia and Japan in the spring.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Rodney Dangerfield finally got some respect. But respect like this — who needs it?

The comedian is rated the favorite on a dull group's list of "10 Dullest Americans of 1984," just ahead of actress Bo Derek and popcorn maker Orville Redenbacher.

"(Dangerfield) has the respect of dull people everywhere — he's the original dull guy who made good," International Dull Folks, Unlimited, says in a proclamation scheduled for release today.

It calls him America's "dean of low esteem."

Completing the yawn parade of Dull Lifestyle winners are ex-major league baseball player Bob Uecker, newswoman Barbara Walters, cartoon character Mike Doonesbury, television host Gary Collins and auto magnate Alfred Ford.

The group gave Dull Brain awards to the Rev. Jerry Falwell and Barbara Bush, wife of the vice president.

Bo Derek has drawn yawns before — her movie "Bolero" was honored recently by the Boring Institute of Maplewood, N.J.

Stephanie Smith, 15, of Greenwood poses with Baldy, her grand champion steer, a Chianina-cross calf, which, at $5.25 a pound, set a record champion-calf sale Tuesday night in the Midland County Livestock Show auction. The high bidder, RepublicBank First National Midland, paid $6,431.25 for the calf. With her are Karl Armstead, center, bank vice president, and Tom Wageman, bank president.

Champion calf brings record price

The grand champion calf in the 36th annual Midland County Livestock Show brought a record $5.25 a pound with the high bidding of RepublicBank First National Midland.

"That's the highest priced champion calf ever sold in Midland County," said the auctioneer, Tommy Marricle of Snyder.

The sale of 120 premium calves, lambs and swine in the show Tuesday night totaled a record $105,000. "It's the best one (sale) we've ever had," said Eileen Welch, treasurer of the Midland County Livestock Association, which sponsors the annual show.

The 1984 auction, which also set a record in sales, netted the youthful exhibitors $96,680.15. The 1983 sale totaled $72,000, and 1982's auction reached $94,000. The annual auction benefits Midland County 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America (FFA) chapter members.

The grand champion hog, a Hampshire, was sold for $5.55 a pound, and the three champion lambs were auctioned off for $8.75, $7.50 and $7.48 a pound.

The grand champion steer, a 1,225-pound Chianina cross exhibited by Stephanie Smith, a 15-year-old Greenwood 4-H'er, grossed $6,431.25 under Marricle's auctioneering.

"I was very thrilled," Stephanie had said of her Crosbyton-bred, white-faced black calf.

Tom Wageman, RepublicBank's president, and Karl Armstead, the bank's vice president and trust property officer and a director of the livestock association, attended the full-house bidding in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Treatment center seeks to open Midland office

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Representatives from Cenikor Foundation Inc., a treatment program for people with alcohol, drug and behavioral problems, held a public meeting Tuesday to stir up interest in establishing an office in the Midland-Odessa area.

"We hope to open an intake office in the near future," said John Miller, a night manager of Cenikor's Fort Worth facility.

The meeting, held at the Holiday Center in Odessa, attracted a crowd of about 100 people.

"Cenikor is a long-term, residential treatment program that helps prepare an individual for re-entry into the community as a responsible, successful member of society," said a report from the organization.

The program has several residences where participants live, eat and work together for 18 to 24 months.

"There, the person discards destructive patterns of thinking, personal values and styles of living," said the report. "Everything the individual needs during this time, including food, clothing, shelter, work, medical care, guidance and emotional support is provided by the Cenikor Foundation and its members."

The program is not easy.

"Cenikor uses many tools and strategies to help members achieve their goals," said the report. "A newcomer must sometimes experience the ruder forms of persuasion. Non-cooperation merits a dressing down. A persistently negative attitude or a serious offense against house rules results in a shaved head for men and a stocking cap for women."

The organization gets 50 percent of its funding from revenues generated by residents working in Cenikor-sponsored businesses or outside Cenikor under contract. It receives no federal, state or municipal funding.

The intake office proposed for Midland-Odessa would be the start of an eventual Cenikor residence.

"We opened an intake office in Austin recently with the thought of opening a residence there later," said Lonnie Heflin, public relations officer for Cenikor. "What we hope to do in the Midland area is similar — lay the ground work."

Cenikor's reason for wanting to open an office in the area is understandable.

"Sixty to 80 percent of our referrals come from Midland-Odessa, Lubbock, Amarillo and this general area," said Miller. "It has generated strong interest."

Some Midland County officials are aware of the organization.

"Judge (Pat) Baskin does refer people to Cenikor," said a spokeswoman at the Midland County Courthouse. "But it's a very individualized program. For some people it's great — it changes their lives around. For others, it doesn't work so well."

But for Miller and Heflin, the program has been a success. Both men have been in trouble with the law over drug-related thefts and were referred to Cenikor.

"They sent a person to interview me in jail," said Miller, 28. "It took a lot of hard work and determination. When I first went in, I just wanted to stay a short while, but the longer I stayed, the more I learned about myself and my problems."

Miller had been involved with drugs since age 10.

Heflin's story is similar. The 25-year-old was on probation when he was referred to Cenikor.

"I started out working in the kitchen like most do," said Heflin. "I just worked my way into the public relations job. I always had a big mouth and had the ability to talk to people."

Heflin spends most of his time dealing with the media and talking to students about the problems of drugs and alcohol.

"My actual title is prevention coordinator," he said. "I try to raise awareness about the problems so that people don't have to go through programs like Cenikor."

Both men will be graduating from Cenikor in a couple of months, but will stay on as employees.

MC trustees concerned with deficit

Board will meet with legislators

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A $1.2 billion deficit in the state budget has Midland College trustees concerned over the future financial state of the college and other institutions of higher learning.

Trustees are so concerned, in fact, they're making final preparations for a meeting with legislators next month in Austin to plea for sympathy in this year of belt tightening and budget cuts.

MC President Jess Parrish reported to the board Tuesday that a delegation representing the state's community colleges will meet in Austin for a legislative seminar Feb. 12 to discuss "the status of various bills" in light of the $1.2 billion deficit in the state budget.

The college is scheduled to receive an estimated $600,000 reduction in appropriations for 1985-86 based on recommendations by the legislative budget board, according to Parrish.

He noted, however, that the school could lose more than $872,000 if growth estimates are higher than anticipated.

"I don't know why higher education is bearing the brunt of it. We're probably no worse off than the major four-year universities. But it would be worthwhile for the good of the college to have that presence in Austin on that date," he said.

"I don't know what direction it's going," Parrish added. "We can make them (legislators) aware that there's an awful lot of people out here who are concerned about community colleges.

In other business, trustees appointed members to the foundation board for 1985. They are Robert Leibrock, William Marshall, Steve Davidson, Clarence Scharbauer III and Melba Trobaugh, who replaces the vacancy left by B.J. Pevehouse.

Four trustees also were appointed to the board's salary committee. They include Hoyle McWright, chairman; Fred Wright Jr., Jack Huff and Gloria Henojosa.

In addition, trustees accepted the resignation of Dr. Elise Brinkley, instructor in the associate degree of nursing program. She submitted her resignation for personal reasons. Trustees also approved the appointment of Dr. Julia Flaherty as substitute history instructor for Dr. Geraldine Box, who requested an extended leave of absence due to medical reasons.

Trustees also heard a division presentation from the college's communications department.

Presenting reports in the areas of speech communication, the Chap Comp Center writing and reading laboratories, foreign language and radio/television were Dr. Jack Schneider, chairman; Tyler Tindall, speech communications instructor; James Fuller, writing lab instructor; Mark Ahern, reading lab instructor; James Jones, foreign language instructor; and Jerry Watson, radio/television instructor.

An estimated 1,100 students enroll in courses within the department each semester, it was reported to trustees.

Ector crime rate down 1 percent from '83, report shows

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — While the murder rate was down in the city once known as the "homicide capital of America," it was reported five times as often in 1984 in parts of Ector County outside Odessa's city limits.

The end-of-year crime analysis released Tuesday by the Ector County Sheriff's Office shows a 400-percent increase in murder reports — from 2 in 1983 to 10 reported in the past year.

But the analysis notes a four-day period in June which accounted for three of the 10 reported — more than were reported in all of 1983.

During this same period, two 19-year-old Hispanics were shot to death on the city's south side as police and sheriffs found themselves in the midst of a summer crime wave.

Looking past 1983 when all crime was at a low ebb in the county, the analysis notes the 1984 figure was less than in 1982 or 1983, when deputies averaged one murder call per month.

"It should be noted that had it not been for the unusually low count of two for 1983, the 1984 murder rate would have been a more welcome figure as a lowering of long-term trends," states the analysis prepared by Lt. Larry Crawford.

Overall, crime was down 1 percent. While murder, burglary, forgery and narcotics and suicide were on the rise, a drop in the incidence of other crimes offset these 1984 increases.

Sexual assault was down 22 percent. Like murder, the total includes a large percentage reported in a short period.

A Gardendale man has been indicted for allegedly sexually assaulting eight girls at his stepdaughter's slumber party in June. Of the total number reported last year, seven were of adult women and 11 of girls.

The 1984 total is down from the previous two years. The highs of 22 in 1982 and 23 in 1983 (when reported crime was down 41 percent overall) coincide with the opening of a rape crisis center in Odessa and increasing awareness nationwide.

Law enforcement officials have theorized that rather than an actual increase in the number committed, the rising totals reflect a greater willingness to report sexual assaults.

Crawford credited a "robbery detail" set up by Sheriff Bob Brookshire's office in each of the last three years for the 58-percent drop in robberies reported in 1984.

Reserve and regular deputies volunteer to do extra patrol during the holiday season. No robberies were reported during the past two Christmas seasons, according to the report.

More county homes were burglarized in 1984. Crawford said he had recommended returning to helicopter patrols. When this airborne unit was employed after a record year in 1982, the total reported was cut nearly in half.

Business burglary was up only one from 1983. "Residential burglaries are harder to control," said Crawford, because of the need for more manpower to patrol and investigate burglaries committed in residential areas dotting the county.

The report calls the 50-percent jump in suicide "alarming."

Marital problems were the cause found in most of the 12 suicides reported last year and two years ago, when 14 were reported, said Crawford.

Study of the 1982 and 1984 suicide incidents found that males were more likely candidates. Otherwise, the analysis found no observable characteristic linking the suicides.

Stabilization of the local economy is probably responsible for the leveling of the crime rate, said Crawford. "If you have a fast shift in the economy either way, crime is gonna go up," he said.

In the boom-to-bust days of the previous two years, crime rose 62 percent in 1981 and 41 percent in 1982. It dropped 27 percent in 1983, as many people deserted the county after the bust.

VIEWPOINT

Some Midlanders divided on whether to build 'Star Wars'

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

President Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" defense system was a sticking point at the recent Geneva arms-control talks.

The Russians want a mutual agreement not to build the system, which involves setting up laser weapons on satellites to destroy nuclear-tipped missles in flight. Reagan would prefer to develop and build the system first and then negotiate from strength.

On Tuesday, the Reporter-Telegram stationed a reporter at the Main Post Office to ask Midlanders if they favored building the "Star Wars" system even if doing so would jeopardize arms-control talks. Of the 13 people who responded, eight favored building the defense system first and then negotiating, while four wanted to hold off on building the system in case negotiations rendered it unnecessary, and one person was convinced the system is already built.

"I think we should go ahead with it," said Doris Sadler. "You can't really put any confidence in what they (the Russians) say — it's all propaganda."

Distrust of Soviet motives was prevalent among those who wanted to proceed with the proposed system

Doris Sadler

"I think we should build it if we can develop the technology," said George Ulmo. "I don't know that negotiations are going to do that much anyway."

George Ulmo

Clariece Wallace

"I really think they should have it just in case the Russians do us like the Japanese did," said Stella Marshall.

The idea of a defense system which might eliminate the threat of nuclear destruction appealed to Midlanders such as Clariece Wallace.

"It sounds like a good idea to me to have a defensive weapon," she said. "But I don't know that it's possible to build."

Aquilla Watson

Phil Clymer would like to see the system built because "It's good as a bargaining position," and because of the technological advancements that would be required by its development.

But not all Midlanders were in favor of "Star Wars."

"I would hold off," said Aquilla Watson, who was afraid the system might be a waste of money. And Mark Leighty wanted to negotiate first:

"If we build one, then they'll build one, too," he said. "We've got enough the way it is now."

According to Jovita Alvarez, the question should be addressed by the United Nations.

"I think it's a very important question to our future. It's something that shouldn't be taken lightly," she said. "There should be a very cautious approach."

But according to P.A. Diltz, the whole question of whether or not to build "Star Wars" is really moot.

"They (the Russians) already have one. We've already got one," he said. "What we need to do is get rid of all of them."

The champion steer came out of Chianina-cross stock produced by Bill Boyd and his son, Byron Boyd, on their Crosbyton ranch near Lubbock.

"It's revolutionized the cattle industry," the younger Boyd said of the Chianina and another exotic (European) breed, the Limousin. "You're not going to win any major stock shows unless it's Chianina or Limousin. It's very rare (to do so)," he said. "It's just tough to beat those cattle. They seems to get a little bigger than the rest of these cattle at a younger age." Boyd said the exotics carry "a little more meat and a little more finish on them."

Brady rancher Andy Garner noted that the traditional champion English breeds, such as the Hereford, Angus and Durham, and a French breed, the Charolais, often are used for crossing with the meaty Chianina, an Italian breed, and the Limousin, a French breed.

"The Limousin is known as the 'carcass breed' because of its (high percentage of) red meat," Garner said.

Garner, who raises the Limousin breed, also is breeding Chianina for show calves.

Stephanie Smith's champion steer outpriced the show's 1984 grand champion, a 1,240-pound Chianina-cross steer, which brought more than $3,500 at $2.85 a pound, and the 1983 grand champion, a Maine-Anjou steer, which sold for $3.05 a pound. The 1983 and 1984 grand champions were exhibited by another Greenwood 4-H Club member, Mark Graham.

The show's reserve grand champion steer, a black Angus exhibited by Midland High School FFA member Chris White, 16, was auctioned off at $2.75 a pound for a total bid of $3,135 by Major Pipe & Equipment Co. Major had bid against Republic Bank for the grand champion calf but settled for the reserve champion.

Cattle in the marketplaces are bringing 60 to 70 cents a pound.

Sixteen-year-old Annette Beier's grand champion hog, a 214-pound Hampshire, was auctioned off at $5.55 pound for $1,187.70 to Western Bank. Tommy White Supply Co. made the highest bid — $3 a pound — for the 260-pound reserve grand champion hog, a Hampshire, exhibited by Pam Adams, 15, of Midland. Bid price was $780.

Last year, the grand champion hog sold for $5.75 a pound, and the runner-up swine brought $3.35 a pound.

The 120-pound champion medium-wool lamb, exhibited by Julie Driver, 12, of Greenwood, sold for $7.50 a pound for a total bid of $900. Buyer was Frank See Chevrolet. The 1984 champion was auctioned for $5.35 a pound.

Michelle Driver, 17, of Greenwood, showed the champion cross-bred lamb, a 101-pound lightweight animal, which sold for $7.48 a pound for a total bid of $755.48. Buyers were Jack Burkes Equipment Co., Robert Frazier and Royce Boyce. Last year's champion sold for $5.75 a pound.

Nine-year-old Clay Garner exhibited the champion finewool lamb, a 111-pound heavyweight creature, which First City National Bank bought for $8.75 a pound for a total bid of $971.25.

All told, 20 calves, 46 lambs and 54 pigs were in the sale.

"We've had an awfully good show," said Ted McVey, a show supporter. "I think they've got some good prospects to take down the road to major shows."

Another show booster, Earnest Kiker, the Midland County agricultural agent, said the the show was "excellent" and that "a fine group of kids" exhibited their livestock projects.

Sale begins crash

On Oct. 29, 1929, 16 million shares were sold on the New York Stock Exchange in a market collapse that was the first phase of the Depression of the 1930s.

Mother pleads no contest in daughter's death

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman whose infant died of malnutrition probably didn't realize her daughter couldn't live on a diet that consisted mostly of sugar water, attorneys said.

The mother, Charlene Mae Spoonemore Martinez, 28, pleaded no contest to a felony manslaughter charge and was sentenced on Monday by State District Judge I.D. McMaster.

Mrs. Martinez' attorney, Ray Montgomery, said the woman didn't know enough to feed the child.

The dead child, Rosa Linda Spoonemore, was born in October, 1982, and died in January, 1983. An autopsy showed she had no food in her stomach at death and a medical examiner ruled starvation as the cause of death.

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers said the child, who weighed less at death than she did at birth, was fed primarily sugared water and did not receive enough nourishment to sustain life.

But Beers said there was no malicious intent on the part of the mother.

"There was nothing to indicate that she tried to kill her baby or didn't want her baby," said Beers.

DEATHS

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Monroe (Bit) Roberts of Midland; and many neices and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland or St. John's Episocpal Church of Odessa.

No woman has yet applied to local Jaycees chapter, president says

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

The move that started last July to admit women to the Jaycees organizations throughout the country is taking on a broader scope during this week known as National Jaycee Week, with the exception of Midland.

The National Jaycees, based in Tulsa, Okla., announced this is the last year they will give awards to the 10 Outstanding Young Men of America. Starting next year, the award will be known as Outstanding Young Americans, according to an Associated Press report.

And the San Angelo organization, which was formed in May 1984, admitted its first woman member this week.

Glenn Jennings, president of the Midland chapter, said no woman has applied for membership in the 185 male-only organization. Jumper Davis, a member of the Midland chapter and regional director, said no woman has attempted to join any chapter in his region.

And if a woman does apply, he said, "We've got a fine woman's organization" in referring to the Jaycee Women. "I like it with two separate organizations," he said in supporting the theory of "separate but equal."

In July 1984, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the all-male Jaycees organizations would have to accept women into membership. The decision came on a case in which a woman was admitted to a Jaycees chapter in Minnesota and the U.S. Jaycees attempted to revoke that chapter's charter.

In August, the National Jaycees changed their by-laws to include women, but the Midland chapter refused to take action on a similar change proposed to them in September. At that time, the motion to change was tabled.

Jennings said a committee has been formed to study the issue "and see what our alternatives are. That committee should report back to the board in March."

Questioned about what those alternatives might be, Jennings said he didn't know until the report was submitted. "No one has suggested what our alternatives might be."

He said the chapter has to make a change by June if the group is to retain its charter from the state and national organizations.

In September, Jennings said the chapter wanted to table action to determine what other chapters were doing. When questioned about actions by the Odessa chapter, he admitted, "We haven't had any contact with the Odessa Jaycees."

Davis said if a woman applies for membership at one of the four clubs in his region, "she will be a test. I won't oppose it if a woman tries to join." His region includes chapters in Midland, Snyder, Lamesa and Martin County.

The president of the 89-member San Angelo club, Burk Young, said any other females who wished to join his group needed only to fill out an application, pay the membership dues and attend a meeting.

The name change by the national club on the awards indicates they are "keeping the spirit of the award alive and broadening the eligibility," said Jennings, but he didn't know if the local club would follow.

To recognize Jaycees Week, the local chapter held a membership night Tuesday and has scheduled a banquet Thursday to name the Boss of the Year and Distinguished Service Award recipient. To be eligible for the latter award, the nominee must be a male.

Woman reports theft of television valued at $1,000

From Staff Reports

A color television console valued at $1,000 was reported stolen to Midland police Tuesday.

Maria Ester Almager, 702 N. Lincoln, who said she had not been in her residence since Christmas Day, told police she returned home Tuesday morning to find the console missing. There were no signs of forced entry, reports said.

Mary T. Gonzalez, 1111 S. Camp St. No. 2, told police a $250 cable television converter box was taken Tuesday from her residence. The burglary occurred between 7:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., reports said.

Mindy Phillips reported Milam Elementary School, 301 E. Dormard, was burglarized between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tuesday night.

According to reports, the suspects entered Room 103 in the north wing of the building by breaking out a window. Chairs were overturned and drawers were emptied on the floor in Rooms 101-108. A $200 cork bulletin board was damaged and about $4 in change was taken. Cost of the window pane was placed at $20.

Gardendale man injured in automobile accident

From Staff Reports

A 27-year-old Gardendale man was listed this morning in fair condition at Midland Memorial Hospital after a three-car accident on U.S. Highway 80 Tuesday night.

Terry Argo suffered lacerations in the accident at the intersection of U.S. 80 and County Road 1290, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Reports indicate Argo was traveling east on U.S. 80 in a 1981 Ford pickup when he collided with a 1979 GMC van and trailer driven by Gary Abney of Odessa. Abney, who was northbound on County Road 1290 and had the green light, was not injured, according to the DPS.

Another eastbound vehicle on U.S. 80, driven by Theresa Mercer of Midland, then struck the rear bumper of Argo's pickup. Ms. Mercer was not injured, according to reports.

Knesset won't legally limit who's a Jew

By ALLYN FISHER
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Parliament today voted down a controversial bill aimed at narrowing the legal definition of who is a Jew.

The vote was 62-51 against the bill, which had been vigorously opposed by Reform and Conservative rabbis in the United States.

Six members of the 120-member Parliament were absent when the legislation presented by four religious parties was brought up, and one member abstained.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres, speaking against the proposal, argued it would divide the Jewish people.

"Who is a Jew was determined generations ago," Peres told the lawmakers. "Our goal here is to maintain the Jewish people in the face of great dangers."

Debate on the bill was stormy, with speeches frequently interrupted by arguments between leftist and religious lawmakers.

Israel's four Orthodox religious political parties with 12 seats in the Knesset, or parliament, demanded that pre-election promises to introduce the bill be fulfilled despite pressing issues such as the economic crisis and the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

If the bill had become law, Israel would have recognized only those conversions to Judaism conducted by Orthodox rabbis. This would have stigmatized all conversions conducted by the less orthodox Conservative and Reform movements in the United States and Europe.

If the bill had been approved, conversions conducted by Conservative and Reform rabbis would have no validity in Israel, and such converts would have no automatic right to become citizens of Israel under the 1950 Law of Return.

The law as it now stands says a Jew is anyone born to a Jewish mother or who has converted to Judaism. The proposed change would have required all conversions to be "according to Halacha," Jewish religious law codified more than 1,000 years ago.

Peres said he was concerned that tampering with the Law of Return would have a restrictive effect on immigration. "Let's not pass legislation that will place an obstacle to the ingathering of our far-away," he said.

He added that the government should not be involved in such religious questions. "Religion and politics are two neighbors who don't lie comfortably with each other," he said.

The bill had been given an even chance of succeeding.

Rabbi Richard Hirsch, an Israeli reform leader, said that Reform and Conservative rabbis converted at least 10,000 people every year in the United States alone.

Lebanese Cabinet discusses withdrawal

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Prime Minister Rashid Karami convened his Cabinet today to discuss Israel's planned withdrawal from south Lebanon and ways of preventing the departure from setting off a bloodbath.

One Cabinet member, Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri, has urged continued guerrilla attacks on Israeli troops until they withdraw, and the Islamic Resistance Movement, a Shiite group that has claimed many such attacks, vowed in a statement published today to keep on "chasing the invaders."

The statement, published in the independent An-Nahar newspaper, said the group's fighters would try to sabotage any security arrangements for Israel.

Israel announced Monday that within five weeks it will begin a three-stage withdrawal of its forces from southern Lebanon. It hopes U.N. peacekeeping forces and an Israeli-backed militia — the South Lebanon Army — will protect the northern Israeli border from Palestinian attacks.

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres says he hopes his nation's troops will be out of Lebanon by the end of summer. The first stage of the withdrawal would move troops back 17 miles, the second would be a pullback from eastern Lebanon and the third move would remove all remaining forces from Lebanon.

Israeli newspapers said today that the Israeli army could begin pulling back from its present front lines in two weeks, and that a complete withdrawal from Lebanon was expected by July.

The English-language Jerusalem Post the first stage of the withdrawal, from the front line along the Awali River north of Sidon, would take up to three weeks to accomplish. By Feb. 18, Israeli troops will have pulled back to a new front line running along the Litani River at the coast then northeast to the market town of Nabatiyeh, Israel television said Tuesday.

Berri, leader of the Shiite militia Amal, said in a statement carried Tuesday by Lebanon's state radio: "What concerns us, is the complete and unconditional withdrawal and ... supporting the Lebanese national resistance because it is still the only card in the land of the Lebanese until the departure of Israel."

National resistance is a phrase used in Lebanon and Syria to refer to guerrilla attacks on Israelis in southern Lebanon.

Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982 to drive out Palestinians launching attacks across the border. But the invasion has cost more than 600 Israeli lives, and the toll has mounted with almost daily attacks by Lebanon's Shiite Moslems in the south.

Uri Lubrani, the Israeli government's coordinator in Lebanon, said on Israel radio that Israel believed guerrilla attacks will increase. But, he said, the new deployment would make it easier to deal with them.

"Instead of the Israeli Defense Forces using most of its efforts to defend itself it will be able to use most of it efforts to hit terrorists," he said.

Peres said Tuesday the withdrawal could provoke a wave of violence and appealed to the United Nations and the Beirut government to move into vacated areas before fighting starts.

"There is indeed a danger of massacres in Lebanon," said Peres to high school students in the northern town of Yoqnam. He said Israel wanted to avoid bloodshed, but "I don't know if we will succeed."

At its meeting today, the Lebanese Cabinet today was considering ways of preventing a bloodbath among rival Moslem, Christian and Palestinian factions in southern Lebanon when the Israelis start leaving.

Also on the Cabinet agenda was the rash of bombings that hit banks, restaurants, bars and apartment buildings in the Moslem sector of Beirut in the past 10 days, Beirut radio said.

Police figures showed at least 16 civilians were killed and more than 125 injured in these bombings, the latest of which gutted a three-story apartment building in west Beirut's Snoubra neighborhood Tuesday night.

"Under-Cover Chili Bake" teamed with "The Cheerleader," iced tea and the "Black Forest Bowl," chocolate layered dessert is a winning combination for a spectacular superbowl party sure to score with fans.

Superbowl Menu:

Winning tradition recipes

As the Super Bowl kicks off, many football players huddle around the coach on the field as fans huddle around the television at home anticipating "The Big Game." When tackled by the question of what to serve these hungry cheerers, try this line-up.

Since this all-star menu is tough to match, don't be surprised is the fans vote to induct it into the "Kitchen Hall of Fame."

UNDER-COVER CHILI BAKE

2 pounds ground beef
2 cans (16 oz.) red kidney beans, drained
1 package (10 oz.) frozen whole kernel corn, thawed
1 can (4 oz.) chopped green chilies, drained
1/2 cup chopped green onions
3 envelopes instant tomato soup mix
5 to 6 teaspoons chili powder
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup water
Pastry for double-crust pie
1 egg, slightly beaten

Preheat oven to 350-F. In 13x9-inch baking dish combine ground beef, beans, corn, chilies, green onions and instant tomato soup mix blended with chili powder, garlic powder and water. Spread evenly into dish.

On waxed paper roll pastry into 15x11-inch rectangle. From center cut out and remove 6x3-inch football shape; reserve. Top meat mixture with pastry, sealing edges. To garnish, from reserved pastry cut out laces for center of football; then cut out mini footballs for corners. Brush with egg and bake one hour or until done. Makes about 10 servings.

THE CHEERLEADER

1/2 cup natural lemon-flavored iced tea mix with NutraSweet
2 quarts water
1 cup vodka
1/4 cup cherry liqueur (optional)

In large pitcher combine all ingredients; chill. Serve with ice and garnish, if desired, with lemon slices. Makes about nine servings.

BLACK FOREST BOWL

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup cold milk
3/4 cup milk, heated to boiling
1 cup (6 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate chips
1/4 cup cherry liqueur
1 cup ice cubes (about 6 to 8)
1 can (21 oz.) cherry pie filling
1 cup (1/2 pint) whipping or heavy cream, whipped

In five-cup blender, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over cold milk; let stand three to four minutes. Add hot milk and process at low speed until gelatin is completely dissolved, about two minutes. Add chocolate and liqueur; process at high speed until blended. Add ice cubes, one at a time; process at high speed until ice is melted. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon, about 30 minutes.

In 1 1/2-quart clear, straight-sided bowl layer 1 1/2 cups chocolate mixture, 1 3/4 cups pie filling, 1 1/2 cups whipped cream, then remaining chocolate mixture; chill until firm. Garnish with remaining pie filling and whipped cream. Makes about eight servings.

Chili powder not just for chili anymore

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Anyone who loves the flavor of a steaming hot bowl of chili con carne (or chili sans carne, for that matter) knows the value of chili powder.

This seasoning ranges in strength from relatively mild to the "Call the Fire Department, my mouth's on fire!" variety.

A lovely deep red-brown in color, chili powder contains the ground, dried pods of several types of chili (such as ancho and pasilla). The ground pods give chili powder its characteristic "kick," while other spices are used to balance the blend. These may include: cumin, oregano, garlic, coriander, cloves and allspice.

Whether you like yours "not-too-hot" or flaming with flavor, a heaping helping of chili powder is indispensable to a good bowl of chili.

But if you love it in chili con carne, why stop there? This hearty seasoning can be put to a variety of other uses, as well.

Try it in egg dishes to add "south-of-the-border" punch. Hot cheese dips and rarebits, barbecue sauces and marinades, meat loaf, corn and bean dishes all can benefit from a dash of chili powder — but remember to add just a little at a time or you may find that you've created a monster that's too hot to handle.

Many of today's recipes are microwave-easy, and feature the fiery flavor of this pungent powder. Hamburger Hot Dish makes a simple and filling meal to warm up a winter evening.

HAMBURGER HOT DISH

3 slices bacon
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 lb. lean ground beef
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
2 tbsps. flour
2 tsps. chili powder
1/4 tsp. each salt and pepper
1 (8 oz.) can stewed tomatoes

Chop bacon and place in 2-quart glass casserole. Add onion and microwave 2 o 3 minutes, until onion is translucent. Stir in celery, then crumble ground beef into casserole, mixing well. Microwave 3 minutes, stirring after 1 1/2 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients, blending well. Cover and microwave 5 to 8 minutes, until beef and vegetables are tender and cooked. Serve hot over rice or spaghetti noodles.

Serves 4.

SLOPPY JOSES

1 lb. lean ground beef, crumbled
1 (10 3/4 oz.) can condensed tomato soup
1/4 cup ketchup
1/4 cup minced onion
1 1/2 tsps. chili powder
1/4 tsp. each salt and pepper
6 hamburger buns, split
Shredded cheddar cheese, optional

Combine all ingredients except hamburger buns and shredded cheese in 2-quar glass casserole. Cover and microwave for 8 minutes, stirring and rotating dish every 2 minutes. Serve on hamburger buns heated in microwave for 20 seconds, and top with shredded cheddar cheese if desired.

Makes 6 Sloppy Joses.

Touchdown sandwiches

"Come on over and watch football on our big screen," a friend said recently. "We're having sandwiches."

"What kind?" I asked. I never did take kindly to luncheon meat or peanut butter slapped between two slices of white bread, which I remember being served for Sunday supper during a visit to my best friend's house in the Upper East Side of New York when I was a little girl.

"Meatball heroes," said my friend.

Then it all came back. The great sandwich favorites of my youth suddenly appeared like rotating Kodachrome billboards in my head. Or Orson Welles' reading of the Reuben's menu: "Meatball sandwiches. Hot pastrami on rye. Cream cheese and olive? A-vo-ca-do-wa-ter-cressss...."

SANDWICH ITALIANO

2 red peppers, roasted, peeled and seeded
2 zucchini, cut julienne
2 cloves garlic, minced
3 tablespoons rice vinegar
1/2 cup olive oil
Salt, pepper
3 to 4 pounds assorted cold meats: sliced turkey, mortadella, capocollo, ham, prosciutto, etc.
Sesame Bread
Butter or margarine, softened
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 bunch spinach or basil leaves, washed and dried
1 pound sliced provolone or mozzarella cheese
Black olives and-or cherry peppers

Cut roasted peppers into strips. Drop zucchini in boiling salted water. Let stand 1 minute, then remove. Rinse and drain well. Combine peppers, zucchini, garlic, vinegar, olive oil and season to taste with salt and pepper. Set aside.

Roll about 1/3 of meat slices. Slice cooled Sesame Bread in half horizontally. Spread bottom half with soft butter and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cover with spinach leaves. Arrange meat and cheese slices over spinach, brushing with olive oil marinade. Top with meat roll-ups, brushing with more marinade.

Remove peppers and zucchini from marinade and layer onto sandwiches. Cover sandwich with other half of bread and garnish with black olives and-or cherry peppers. Cut into 16 to 20 wedges. Makes 16 to 20 sandwiches.

Sesame Bread

3 (1-pound) loaves frozen bread dough, thawed
Cornmeal
Shortening or soft butter
1 tablespoon sesame seeds

Knead together 3 loaves. Shape into rope about 2 1/2-feet long. Press two ends together to form ring. Place on greased baking sheet sprinkled with cornmeal. Brush surfaces with shortening. Let rise until doubled. Using blunt edge of long knife or ruler, score top of bread into wedges. Brush top with shortening and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Bake at 375-F. about 45 minutes or until bread tests done. Cool on rack.

Spice up sandwiches for a winning superbowl party with sesame bread, peppers and other fresh ideas.

SANDWICH FILLING SUGGESTIONS

— Radicchio, sliced cooked beets, sliced onion, blue cheese dressing

— Green salad with nasturtium blossoms, cream cheese

— Lox, cream cheese, tomato

— Smoked cheese, fresh basil leaves, lemon-oil dressing

— Black Forest ham, Brie cheese, tomato

— Avocado, fresh basil leaves

Foods licensed for inauguration

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Admit it. Jellybeans have gotten a little boring. They're cute, they're sweet, they have friends in high places, but are they enough? Can the truly Washington-obsessed survive with only one officially sanctioned food?

No. Something had to be done.

Introducing the official inaugural line of edibles: mints, trail mix and champagne, and, of course, the ubiquitous Jelly Belly jellybeans, all approved by the Committee for the 50th American Presidential Inaugural. It's a Washingtonian's dream come true: snack food that's not only tasty, it's patriotic.

Take the trail mix — a combination of macadamias, almonds, cashews, dried bananas, papaya, apricots and a whole lot of other stuff manufactured and sold by the national chain Morrow's Nut House. The mix already has an impressive pedigree. This is not just any official food. This is the trail mix that flies with the astronauts on the space shuttle. Shuttlemix, they call it.

"We have a store just outside of Houston, and the astronauts would come in and buy the stuff," says Morrow's president, Howard Morrow. "They went to their food lab people and asked them if they could take it up with them. So the people from the laboratory came into the store, bought 30 pounds of it, tested — whatever it is they do to it. The next thing we knew, this stuff was up on the shuttle."

All of which intrigued the members of the Morrow family, who range, according to Howard Morrow, from "Republican" to "rabid Republican." Within six months, they were donating between 6,000 and 7,000 pounds of Shuttlemix to the delegates to the Republican National Convention.

"We became, if you will, the official snack of the convention," Howard Morrow says.

And now, the inauguration. After approval from the inaugural committee, payment of a "negligible" fee and agreement to hand over 15 percent of retail sales to the committee, Morrow's was licensed to display the official inaugural seal on the Shuttlemix. And now you, the humble inaugural fan, can purchase a box of "Morrow's Inaugural Nibbies" for $8 plus packing, shipping, insurance and sales tax.

The committee expects the licensed food and drink to bring in about $75,000. Korbel champagne paid $50,000 for the right to be the official bubbly, and that's where the real money is. The munchies are less lucrative, more public relations than anything else.

Inauguration aficionados have short memories, and no one is quite sure if Herbert Hoover, for instance, licensed anyone to sell official inaugural comestibles. But everyone agrees that the 1985 committee is pursuing the licensing market enthusiastically.

"It's a revenue item for us," says committee marketing director Douglas Blaser.

But for others, it's not just business. It's their moment in the inaugural sun.

"I think it's the most interesting thing that ever happened to me," says Guy M. Robitaille, whose company, Switzer's of Santa Barbara, Calif., makes the official inaugural mint.

Like the Morrows, Robitaille is not completely new to the political world of eating. His mints, which are described on the box as "creamy," are served in the White House, received raves from Queen Elizabeth and prompted a personal call from President Reagan.

"The president phoned me at home and he talked to me for about 12 minutes," says Robitaille. "He was so kind and so courteous and such a human being. It was beautiful, really."

The Reagans met Robitaille's mints during the queen's visit. After the mint maker's daughter read that mints were the royal visitor's favorite candy, Robitaille got to work.

"It's got to be cleared and cleared and cleared," he says. "It took two months." But finally, the mints got aboard the Britannia and into the Reagans' ranch, and the rest is mint history.

Robitaille says many people have asked if he's hoping his mints can compete with jellybeans for the president's favor.

"I think the president likes jellybeans and he likes my mints," says Robitaille. "They're two different candies, really. My mints — it's a gourmet item. You have them after a meal. Jellybeans — you can watch a TV western and eat them."

Robitaille estimates he sells the White House about 40,000 mints a year, and that official inaugural use and sales to the public will take about half a million mints. Eighty percent of them will be, naturally, red, white and blue.

"You know," says Robitaille, "it isn't often you see a blue mint. They're not easy to make."

Red mints are also quite a challenge.

"The reason I originally made a red mint was Nancy Reagan," he says. "I knew she liked red, and she liked my mints, so I said, 'I'm going to make her a red mint.' I worked and worked on the thing. I started two years ago on it and I finally completed it last Valentine's Day. These reds are really red, and the blues are as royal as you can get."

In addition to perfecting the red and the blue, official food purveyors have other problems to deal with. Robitaille employs only seven people in his candy factory (which also makes peanut brittle), and for the sudden inaugural rush he's had to pull in his entire family to help with the packing. But even with the extra help, he can only go so fast because the mints are hand-shaped by one mint-master wielding a funnel and spoon, and he didn't have time to train another.

"Right now, I'm spread pretty thin," he says.

Back at the inaugural committee, Blaser has only one regret. Someone suggested the committee license a product called Mom's Cookies as the official cookie of the inauguration, but the firm turned out to be too small to handle the demand.

"If we could have had Mom's Cookies, and then apple pie," says Blaser, "we would have had it all, wouldn't we?"

Expert wants to preserve pie-baking as national art

ROXBURY, Conn. (AP) — Ever since Susan Purdy made pies her kitchen specialty, she says her friends have stopped inviting her to dinner.

It's not that Mrs. Purdy's pies aren't tasty. On the contrary, her pies are exquisitely formed and filled, with nary a crack in the bottom crust or a blemish on the flaky top crust.

It's Mrs. Purdy's skill at making pies — and tarts and turnovers and tortes and quiche, pizza, cobblers, or anything with a crust — that has intimidated her friends. The advent of her latest book, "As Easy As Pie," was the icing on the cake — or, in this case, the crust on the pie.

"Since I began writing cookbooks, people are very intimidated by me," the Roxbury resident says. "It's really sad — it distresses me. I'm not critical of other people's cooking. I'd love to eat it, not review it."

Mrs. Purdy wrote "As Easy As Pie" to preserve what she says is a national art.

"Pies strike a chord in many people that brings images of motherhood, childhood and nostalgia," she says.

But pies are much more than apple pie on the Fourth of July or pumpkin pie on Thanksgiving, Mrs. Purdy says.

The advent of freezer pie crust, pre-packaged graham cracker crusts and even prepackaged frozen pies has made pie baking almost a lost art, she says. Her new cookbook's goal is to alleviate some of the fear associated with handling delicate crusts.

But the book is also a delightful diary of personal recollections about pie from the many people Mrs. Purdy met in her search for new recipes.

"The story behind 'four and 20 blackbirds baked in a pie' is fun," she says. "And it's true. It's a medieval pie, a huge pie that had live birds inside. The lord or king would cut the pie and the birds would fly out to amuse his guests.

"That's also the origin of the birthday girl popping out of a birthday cake today."

Mrs. Purdy includes in her book the modern-day version of blackbird pie — minus the live birds, instead made with game birds.

Among the dozens of other pies, there's milk pie, the custard recipe for which Mrs. Purdy received from a man with Pennsylvania Dutch roots.

Potatoes popular nationwide

DALLAS (AP) — A decade ago, casual theme restaurant chains helped to popularize fried potato skins topped with sour cream and cheese, and "spud jackets" have been a hit ever since.

But skins now serve as more than appetizers, according to Roger Zingle, vice president for the TGI Friday's chain, which serves more than 435 tons of potatoes each month in its 99 restaurants nationwide.

"Potatoes have become entrees, featuring unusual toppings such as crabmeat and shrimp stroganoff, and chicken parmigiana," Zingle notes. "Skins taste great and are nutritious," he adds. "They contain calcium, potassium, vitamins, protein and iron."

Italian wine maverick finds change difficult

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When Piero Antinori, the boyish 44-year-old general manager of the celebrated Tuscan wine firm of Antinori, assumed control in the late 1960s, there was local and national concern that this energetic Italian maverick would revolutionize centuries-old Chianti wine-making traditions. Fifteen years later the fears of hard-core Chianti traditionalists have been fully realized; more important, they may still be fearful of more change.

Antinori has found that changes do not come easily, particularly when it involves limiting the use of white grapes traditionally blended in Chianti and Chianti Classico. Under the old formula fixed by Baron Bettino Ricasoli, up to 40 percent white Trebbiano and Malvasia grapes were allowed in addition to red wine grapes, Sangiovese and Canaiolo-Nero.

Antinori, representing one of Italy's oldest and most famous of the world's wine-making families, lobbied for and was successful in elevating Chianti from Denominazione di Origine Controllata to Denominazione di Origine Controllata y Garantita status, Italy's highest legal wine designation, by establishing a white versus red grape change. (DOCG is an even higher and more restricted quality standard than the broader and simpler DOC.)

WHEN THE old Chianti formula was promulgated by Ricasoli, grape-growing circumstances were radically different from those of today. With today's overproduction of the white Trebbiano grapes, more found their way into Chianti wine than necessary. Flavor and style notwithstanding, the variety was favored in part because it is more productive and is more resistant to vine diseases than are other local varieties.

Ever flirting with change, Antinori produced a wine in 1971, Tignanello, which is not traditional Chianti Classico, but rather a red in a Bordeaux-style bottle. Essentially, his aim was to produce a full-bodied, aromatic, yet elegant and smooth wine utilizing Italian grapes and French wine-making techniques. That it has become successful is an understatement inasmuch as Italian wine authorities characterize it as the blueprint for the so-called new Chianti, and its DOCG status.

When produced in 1971, grapes for Tignanello were principally Sangiovese, supplemented with small amounts of Canaiolo and Malvasia grown in the Tignanello vineyards at Santa Cristina on the sun-drenched side of a hill about 1,300 feet above sea level. In later bottlings, Cabernet Sauvignon replaced Canaiolo and Malvasia, completing the blend of 80 percent Sangiovese and 20 percent Cabernet. Interestingly, up until that time, Cabernet was little used in the area. Even more revealing is the current belief of several major Italian authorities, including America's premier Italian guru, Darrel Corti, that this region may be one of the best for Cabernet Sauvignon, maybe even better than Bordeaux.

WHEN I tasted Antinori's Chianti Riserva 1979 and Chianti Classico, Santa Cristina, both fine Chianti representatives, I found that I preferred the firm's Tignanello, 1980. Here is an excellent flavorful blend of claret and Chianti, smooth with an already developing supple and nicely rounded body. It is an easy generous wine. Unquestionably, it is elegance that Antinori was striving for in his Tignanello and apparently he has achieved it.

Another goal is his desire to produce quality reds to compete with the great French wines, especially those of Grand Cru Classe claret. Like the Chateau bottlings of old, the wine is not produced every vintage, only in good years, such as 1971, 1975, 1977, 1978 and 1980.

While Tignanello's success succeeded in changing Chianti wine formulas, it is not ready to make wine lovers forget Bordeaux entirely. But it is my guess that within another decade, if not sooner, strong claret challenging will be at hand. Tignanello has also directed a challenge to other great red wines of Italy, such as Barolo and Brunello di Montalcino, which too, have eliminated white wine grapes from their respective wines.

STILL ANOTHER Antinori offering that will ruffle purists is his Solaia 1979, a new red produced from 75 percent Cabernet Sauvignon and 25 percent Cabernet Franc. Grown in the Solaia vineyards of his Santa Cristina estate, the wine oozes with supple, soft charm in a not overdone cherry-like style in nose and taste. There is no hard edge here, only a slight astringency in finish with a bit of wood showing. This is a remarkably good, flavorful red that is eminently drinkable even now, though several years of bottle age will help.

Production will be strictly limited to no more than 600 cases a year, although that number is likely to increase if its success matches Tignanello. Aged for 24 months in French and Slavonian oak, it is now being released with high expectations that it will soon qualify as Italy's best Cabernet, in spite of the fact that Antinori will continue to concentrate on preferred indigenous varieties, such as Sangiovese, that better reflect the enological character of his wine roots.

Today, Antinori's opinions are considered authoritative and sound and are not viewed as simply those of a maverick. Trained in economics and commercial sciences at the University of Florence, he is nonetheless an experienced wine technician.

Foods licensed for inauguration

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Admit it. Jellybeans have gotten a little boring. They're cute, they're sweet, they have friends in high places, but are they enough? Can the truly Washington-obsessed survive with only one officially sanctioned food?

No. Something had to be done.

Introducing the official inaugural line of edibles: mints, trail mix and champagne, and, of course, the ubiquitous Jelly Belly jellybeans, all approved by the Committee for the 50th American Presidential Inaugural. It's a Washingtonian's dream come true: snack food that's not only tasty, it's patriotic.

Take the trail mix — a combination of macadamias, almonds, cashews, dried bananas, papaya, apricots and a whole lot of other stuff manufactured and sold by the national chain Morrow's Nut House. The mix already has an impressive pedigree. This is not just any official food. This is the trail mix that flies with the astronauts on the space shuttle. Shuttlemix, they call it.

"We have a store just outside of Houston, and the astronauts would come in and buy the stuff," says Morrow's president, Howard Morrow. "They went to their food lab people and asked them if they could take it up with them. So the people from the laboratory came into the store, bought 30 pounds of it, tested — whatever it is they do to it. The next thing we knew, this stuff was up on the shuttle."

All of which intrigued the members of the Morrow family, who range, according to Howard Morrow, from "Republican" to "rabid Republican." Within six months, they were donating between 6,000 and 7,000 pounds of Shuttlemix to the delegates to the Republican National Convention.

"We became, if you will, the official snack of the convention," Howard Morrow says.

And now, the inauguration. After approval from the inaugural committee, payment of a "negligible" fee and agreement to hand over 15 percent of retail sales to the committee, Morrow's was licensed to display the official inaugural seal on the Shuttlemix. And now you, the humble inaugural fan, can purchase a box of "Morrow's Inaugural Nibbles" for $8 plus packing, shipping, insurance and sales tax.

The committee expects the licensed food and drink to bring in about $75,000. Korbel champagne paid $50,000 for the right to be the official bubbly, and that's where the real money is. The munchies are less lucrative, more public relations than anything else.

Inauguration aficionados have short memories, and no one is quite sure if Herbert Hoover, for instance, licensed anyone to sell official inaugural comestibles. But everyone agrees that the 1985 committee is pursuing the licensing market enthusiastically.

"It's a revenue item for us," says committee marketing director Douglas Blaser.

But for others, it's not just business. It's their moment in the inaugural sun.

"I think it's the most interesting thing that ever happened to me," says Guy M. Robitaille, whose company, Switzer's of Santa Barbara, Calif., makes the official inaugural mint.

Like the Morrows, Robitaille is not completely new to the political world of eating. His mints, which are described on the box as "creamy," are served in the White House, received raves from Queen Elizabeth and prompted a personal call from President Reagan.

"The president phoned me at home and he talked to me for about 12 minutes," says Robitaille. "He was so kind and so courteous and such a human being. It was beautiful, really."

The Reagans met Robitaille's mints during the queen's visit. After the mint maker's daughter read that mints were the royal visitor's favorite candy, Robitaille got to work.

"It's got to be cleared and cleared and cleared," he says. "It took two months." But finally, the mints got aboard the Britannia and into the Reagans' ranch, and the rest is mint history.

Robitaille says many people have asked if he's hoping his mints can compete with jellybeans for the president's favor.

"I think the president likes jellybeans and he likes my mints," says Robitaille. "They're two different candies, really. My mints — it's a gourmet item. You have them after a meal. Jellybeans — you can watch a TV western and eat them."

Robitaille estimates he sells the White House about 40,000 mints a year, and that official inaugural use and sales to the public will take about half a million mints. Eighty percent of them will be, naturally, red, white and blue.

"You know," says Robitaille, "it isn't often you see a blue mint. They're not easy to make."

Red mints are also quite a challenge.

"The reason I originally made a red mint was Nancy Reagan," he says. "I knew she liked red, and she liked my mints, so I said, 'I'm going to make her a red mint.' I worked and worked on the thing. I started two years ago on it and I finally completed it last Valentine's Day. These reds are really red, and the blues are as royal as you can get."

In addition to perfecting the red and the blue, official food purveyors have other problems to deal with. Robitaille employs only seven people in his candy factory (which also makes peanut brittle), and for the sudden inaugural rush he's had to pull in his entire family to help with the packing. But even with the extra help, he can only go so fast because the mints are hand-shaped by one mint-master wielding a funnel and spoon, and he didn't have time to train another.

"Right now, I'm spread pretty thin," he says.

Back at the inaugural committee, Blaser has only one regret. Someone suggested the committee license a product called Mom's Cookies as the official cookie of the inauguration, but the firm turned out to be too small to handle the demand.

"If we could have had Mom's Cookies, and then apple pie," says Blaser, "we would have had it all, wouldn't we?"

Expert wants to preserve pie-baking as national art

ROXBURY, Conn. (AP) — Ever since Susan Purdy made pies her kitchen specialty, she says her friends have stopped inviting her to dinner.

It's not that Mrs. Purdy's pies aren't tasty. On the contrary, her pies are exquisitely formed and filled, with nary a crack in the bottom crust or a blemish on the flaky top crust.

It's Mrs. Purdy's skill at making pies — and tarts and turnovers and tortes and quiche, pizza, cobblers, or anything with a crust — that has intimidated her friends. The advent of her latest book, "As Easy As Pie," was the icing on the cake — or, in this case, the crust on the pie.

"Since I began writing cookbooks, people are very intimidated by me," the Roxbury resident says. "It's really sad — it distresses me. I'm not critical of other people's cooking. I'd love to eat it, not review it."

Mrs. Purdy wrote "As Easy As Pie" to preserve what she says is a national art.

"Pies strike a chord in many people that brings images of motherhood, childhood and nostalgia," she says.

But pies are much more than apple pie on the Fourth of July or pumpkin pie on Thanksgiving, Mrs. Purdy says.

The advent of freezer pie crust, pre-packaged graham cracker crusts and even prepackaged frozen pies has made pie baking almost a lost art, she says. Her new cookbook's goal is to alleviate some of the fear associated with handling delicate crusts.

But the book is also a delightful diary of personal recollections about pie from the many people Mrs. Purdy met in her search for new recipes.

"The story behind 'four and 20 blackbirds baked in a pie' is fun," she says. "And it's true. It's a medieval pie, a huge pie that had live birds inside. The lord or king would cut the pie and the birds would fly out to amuse his guests.

"That's also the origin of the birthday girl popping out of a birthday cake today."

Mrs. Purdy includes in her book the modern-day version of blackbird pie — minus the live birds, instead made with game birds.

Among the dozens of other pies, there's milk pie, the custard recipe for which Mrs. Purdy received from a man with Pennsylvania Dutch roots.

Potatoes popular nationwide

DALLAS (AP) — A decade ago, casual theme restaurant chains helped to popularize fried potato skins topped with sour cream and cheese, and "spud jackets" have been a hit ever since.

But skins now serve as more than appetizers, according to Roger Zingle, vice president for the TGI Friday's chain, which serves more than 435 tons of potatoes each month in its 99 restaurants nationwide.

"Potatoes have become entrees, featuring unusual toppings such as crabmeat and shrimp stroganoff, and chicken parmigiana," Zingle notes. "Skins taste great and are nutritious," he adds. "They contain calcium, potassium, vitamins, protein and iron."

Italian wine maverick finds change difficult

By NATHAN CHROMAN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When Piero Antinori, the boyish 44-year-old general manager of the celebrated Tuscan wine firm of Antinori, assumed control in the late 1960s, there was local and national concern that this energetic Italian maverick would revolutionize centuries-old Chianti wine-making traditions. Fifteen years later the fears of hard-core Chianti traditionalists have been fully realized; more important, they may still be fearful of more change.

Antinori has found that changes do not come easily, particularly when it involves limiting the use of white grapes traditionally blended in Chianti and Chianti Classico. Under the old formula fixed by Baron Bettino Ricasoli, up to 40 percent white Trebbiano and Malvasia grapes were allowed in addition to red wine grapes, Sangiovese and Canaiolo-Nero.

Antinori, representing one of Italy's oldest and most famous of the world's wine-making families, lobbied for and was successful in elevating Chianti from Denominazione di Origine Controllata to Denominazione di Origine Controllata y Garantita status, Italy's highest legal wine designation, by establishing a white versus red grape change. (DOCG is an even higher and more restricted quality standard than the broader and simpler DOC.)

WHEN THE old Chianti formula was promulgated by Ricasoli, grape-growing circumstances were radically different from those of today. With today's overproduction of the white Trebbiano grapes, more found their way into Chianti wine than necessary. Flavor and style notwithstanding, the variety was favored in part because it is more productive and is more resistant to vine diseases than are other local varieties.

Ever flirting with change, Antinori produced a wine in 1971, Tignanello, which is not traditional Chianti Classico, but rather a red in a Bordeaux-style bottle. Essentially, his aim was to produce a full-bodied, aromatic, yet elegant and smooth wine utilizing Italian grapes and French wine-making techniques. That it has become successful is an understatement inasmuch as Italian wine authorities characterize it as the blueprint for the so-called new Chianti, and its DOCG status.

When produced in 1971, grapes for Tignanello were principally Sangiovese, supplemented with small amounts of Canaiolo and Malvasia grown in the Tignanello vineyards at Santa Cristina on the sun-drenched side of a hill about 1,300 feet above sea level. In later bottlings, Cabernet Sauvignon replaced Canaiolo and Malvasia, completing the blend of 80 percent Sangiovese and 20 percent Cabernet. Interestingly, up until that time, Cabernet was little used in the area. Even more revealing is the current belief of several major Italian authorities, including America's premier Italian guru, Darrel Corti, that this region may be one of the best for Cabernet Sauvignon, maybe even better than Bordeaux.

WHEN I tasted Antinori's Chianti Riserva 1979 and Chianti Classico, Santa Cristina, both fine Chianti representatives, I found that I preferred the firm's Tignanello, 1980. Here is an excellent flavorful blend of claret and Chianti, smooth with an already developing supple and nicely rounded body. It is an easy generous wine. Unquestionably, it is elegance that Antinori was striving for in his Tignanello and apparently he has achieved it.

Another goal is his desire to produce quality reds to compete with the great French wines, especially those of Grand Cru Classe claret. Like the Chateau bottlings of old, the wine is not produced every vintage, only in good years, such as 1971, 1975, 1977, 1978 and 1980.

While Tignanello's success succeeded in changing Chianti wine formulas, it is not ready to make wine lovers forget Bordeaux entirely. But it is my guess that within another decade, if not sooner, strong claret challenging will be at hand. Tignanello has also directed a challenge to other great red wines of Italy, such as Barolo and Brunello di Montalcino, which too, have eliminated white wine grapes from their respective wines.

STILL ANOTHER Antinori offering that will ruffle purists is his Solaia 1979, a new red produced from 75 percent Cabernet Sauvignon and 25 percent Cabernet Franc. Grown in the Solaia vineyards of his Santa Cristina estate, the wine oozes with supple, soft charm in a not overdone cherry-like style in nose and taste. There is no hard edge here, only a slight astringency in finish with a bit of wood showing. This is a remarkably good, flavorful red that is eminently drinkable even now, though several years of bottle age will help.

Production will be strictly limited to no more than 600 cases a year, although that number is likely to increase if its success matches Tignanello. Aged for 24 months in French and Slavonian oak, it is now being released with high expectations that it will soon qualify as Italy's best Cabernet, in spite of the fact that Antinori will continue to concentrate on preferred indigenous varieties, such as Sangiovese, that better reflect the enological character of his wine roots.

Today, Antinori's opinions are considered authoritative and sound and are not viewed as simply those of a maverick. Trained in economics and commercial sciences at the University of Florence, he is nonetheless an experienced wine technician.

Midland's Girl Scouts to begin selling cookies Friday

The 1985 Girl Scout cookie sale begins Friday, with cookie orders being taken through Feb. 3. Cookies will be delivered in March.

Proceeds from the sale help operate two camps at Mitre Peak and Hat-A; provide funds for council development, equipment, financial aid and services in the community; give girls the opportunity to attend national events; offer adult volunteer training; and provide scholarship money for camping.

Available in seven flavors — Pecan Chocolate Chip, Peanut Butter Patties, Caramel de Lites, Shortbread, Thin Mints, Peanut Butter Sandwich and Lemon Pastry Creme — Girl Scout cookies can also be a tasty ingredient in several recipes, provided by Famous Foods of Virginia:

LAYERED LEMON PASTRY PIE
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup lemon juice
Dash salt
3 slightly beaten eggs
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
1 9-inch graham cracker crust
1 package lemon pastry creme cookies

In medium saucepan melt butter or margarine; stir in sugar, lemon juice and salt. Cook and stir until sugar dissolves. Add eggs. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened; chill. Place one pint ice cream in graham cracker crust. Spread with half chilled lemon sauce and top with crumbled cookies. Freeze pie until firm. Repeat layers with remaining ice cream, lemon sauce and crumbled cookies. Freeze until firm.

SUNDAE TOPPINGS
Coarsely chop one cookie and sprinkle over scoop of ice cream. Or chop 5 thin mint cookies and add to ½ cup chocolate syrup. Let stand few minutes before pouring over vanilla ice cream.

Or chop 4 peanut butter patties and fold into ⅔ cup light corn syrup. Spoon over vanilla ice cream for thick topping.

BANANA PUDDING
Shortbread cookies
2 to 3 bananas, sliced
1 package (3 oz.) instant vanilla pudding and pie filling
2 cups milk

Use enough shortbread cookies to cover bottom of 9½-inch pie plate. Place instant pudding and pie filling in blender and add milk; blend on low speed until smooth. Spread part of pudding over cookie layer, top with sliced bananas. Alternate layers of pudding and bananas so pudding is top layer with cookies. Cover and chill 2-3 hours.

ICE CREAM deLIGHT
Shortening
⅓ cup chopped almonds, toasted
1 cup chopped caramel delite cookies
1 quart vanilla ice cream, softened
½ cup non-dairy whipped topping, thawed

Generously coat inside of 5-cup mold with shortening; press in chopped almonds. Place in freezer. Meanwhile, stir chopped caramel delite cookies and whipped topping into ice cream. Carefully spoon into prepared mold. Freeze. Unmold and serve.

PEANUT BUTTER CRUNCH
1 quart vanilla ice cream
6 peanut butter pattie cookies

Soften ice cream. Chop cookies coarsely; fold into ice cream. Refreeze.

MINT ICE CREAM CRUNCH
1 quart vanilla ice cream
8 thin mint cookies

Soften ice cream. Coarsely chop cookies; fold into ice cream. Refreeze. Serve with additional cookies if desired.

EASY PEANUTTY BRITTLE
10 peanut butter sandwich cookies
2 tablespoons margarine
1½ cups granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cut cookies into large pieces. (Use cutting board and cut each cookie into thirds and then into thirds again.) Melt margarine in heavy skillet. Add sugar, salt and vanilla. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sugar is melted and smooth. (Sugar will turn golden brown.) Do not overcook. Remove from heat and add cut up cookies, mixing to coat. Pour immediately into well-greased 9x13-inch pan. Cool thoroughly. Break brittle into pieces.

QUICK TORTONI
1 quart vanilla ice cream
2 cups non-diary whipped topping
12 shortbread cookies, crushed
½ cup chopped almonds, toasted
8 candied cherries, cut up (optional)

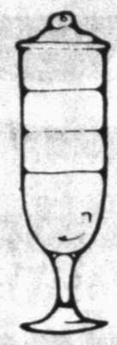

Soften ice cream. Fold in whipped topping. Add crushed cookies, reserving ¼ cup for garnish. Add almonds and cherries. Mix lightly to combine ingredients well. Mound into individual paper muffin cups or serving bowl. Sprinkle cookie crumbs on top. Freeze.

HEAVENLY CREAM CAKE
1 cup heavy cream
⅓ cup instant cocoa mix
Dash salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
48 shortbread cookies

Whip cream, adding cocoa mix gradually. Beat in salt and vanilla until mixture is quite thick. Using about half the cream mixture, spread some of mixture on each cookie and stack together side by side in a roll, placing on a platter or serving dish. Frost roll with remaining cream covering all of outside. Store in refrigerator several hours or overnight. (Dessert improves the longer it stands.) Slice diagonally.

CONFETTI FREEZE DESSERT
1½ cups finely crushed pecan chocolate chip cookies
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 package (2 oz.) dessert topping mix
3 cups tiny marshmallows

Combine crushed cookies and butter. Reserve three tablespoons crumb mixture; press remaining into 9-inch baking pan. Bake at 350 F. for 10 minutes; cool. Prepare topping mix according to package directions; fold in marshmallows. Spread over crust; sprinkle reserved crumbs on top. Freeze.

LEMON CREME PARFAITS
1 package (3 oz.) regular lemon pudding
½ cup sugar
1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice
1 egg
1½ cups water
1 cup non-diary whipped topping
1 pint fresh or frozen strawberries
12 lemon pastry creme cookies

Combine pudding mix and sugar. Gradually blend in juice, eggs and water. Cook and stir until thick and bubbling. Cool, stirring occasionally. Fold whipped topping into pudding mixture. Chill. Divide half pudding mixture among six parfait glasses. Chop six lemon pastry creme cookies and spoon onto pudding mixture in parfait glasses. Reserve six strawberries; mix remainder into pudding and spoon into parfaits. Top with remaining strawberries and cookies.

PEANUT CREAM DESSERT
1 cup whipped cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons sugar
24 peanut butter sandwich cookies

Whip cream with vanilla and sugar. Spread cream on each cookie and stack cookies, side by side, to form a roll. Cover roll with remaining cream, being sure to cover completely. Refrigerate several hours or overnight. (The longer this dessert stands, the better it gets.)

PECAN CHOCOLATE CHIP PIE
Crust:
1 package pecan chocolate chip cookies
3 tablespoons margarine, melted
Filling:
1 package (8 oz.) frozen non-diary whipped topping, thawed
1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
1 cup confectioners sugar
1 package (4⅛ oz.) chocolate instant pudding and pie filling
2 cups milk

For crust: Place eight cookies in blender, cover and blend until finely chopped. Empty into bowl and repeat until all cookies are finely chopped. Add melted margarine to cookie mixture and mix well. Firmly press mixture into bottom of 9½-inch pie plate. (Reserve two tablespoons cookie mixture.) Bake at 350 F. for about 5 minutes. Cool thoroughly.

For filling: Combine one cup whipped topping, cream and sugar; mix with electric mixer on medium speed until mixture is smooth. Spread evenly over crust. Combine pudding and milk in blender and blend on low speed until thickened and smooth. Spread evenly over cream cheese mixture. Spread remaining whipped topping over pudding. Sprinkle remaining two tablespoons cookie mixture over top of pie. Cover and chill overnight.

Restaurant shares cake recipe

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The Brown Derby Grapefruit Cake has been such a popular cake throughout the years, we included it in our "The Los Angeles Times California Cookbook" (Abrams, $25 hard cover; New American Library, $9.95).

BROWN DERBY GRAPEFRUIT CAKE
1½ cups sifted cake flour
¾ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup water
¼ cup oil
3 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons grapefruit juice
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
Cream Cheese Frosting (Recipe follows)
1 grapefruit, peeled and sectioned or 1 (1-pound) can grapefruit sections)

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt into bowl. Make well in center and add water, oil, egg yolks, grapefruit juice and lemon peel. Beat until very smooth. Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until stiff but not dry. Gradually pour egg yolk mixture over egg whites and fold in gently until just blended. Do not stir. Turn batter into an ungreased 9-inch springform pan and bake at 350 degrees 30 minutes or until top springs back when touched lightly with finger.

Invert onto rack and cool thoroughly. Loosen edges of cake carefully and remove from pan. With a serrated knife cut cake crosswise to make two layers. Reserve a few sections for frosting. Fill with part of Cream Cheese Frosting and grapefruit sections. Spread top and sides with frosting and decorate with additional fruit sections.

Cream Cheese Frosting
2 (3-ounce) packages cream cheese
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
¾ cup sifted powdered sugar
6 to 8 drops yellow food color, optional
Reserved grapefruit sections

Soften cream cheese at room temperature. Beat until fluffy. Add lemon juice and peel. Gradually blend in sugar and beat until well blended. Stir in food color. Crush enough grapefruit sections to measure 2 teaspoons and blend into frosting.

Greek pasta dish reheats well

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

One of the best pasta dishes I know of that can be prepared ahead of time and then reheated is a Greek dish called Pastitsio. You can prepare it well ahead of time up to the point of baking and refrigerate or even freeze it.

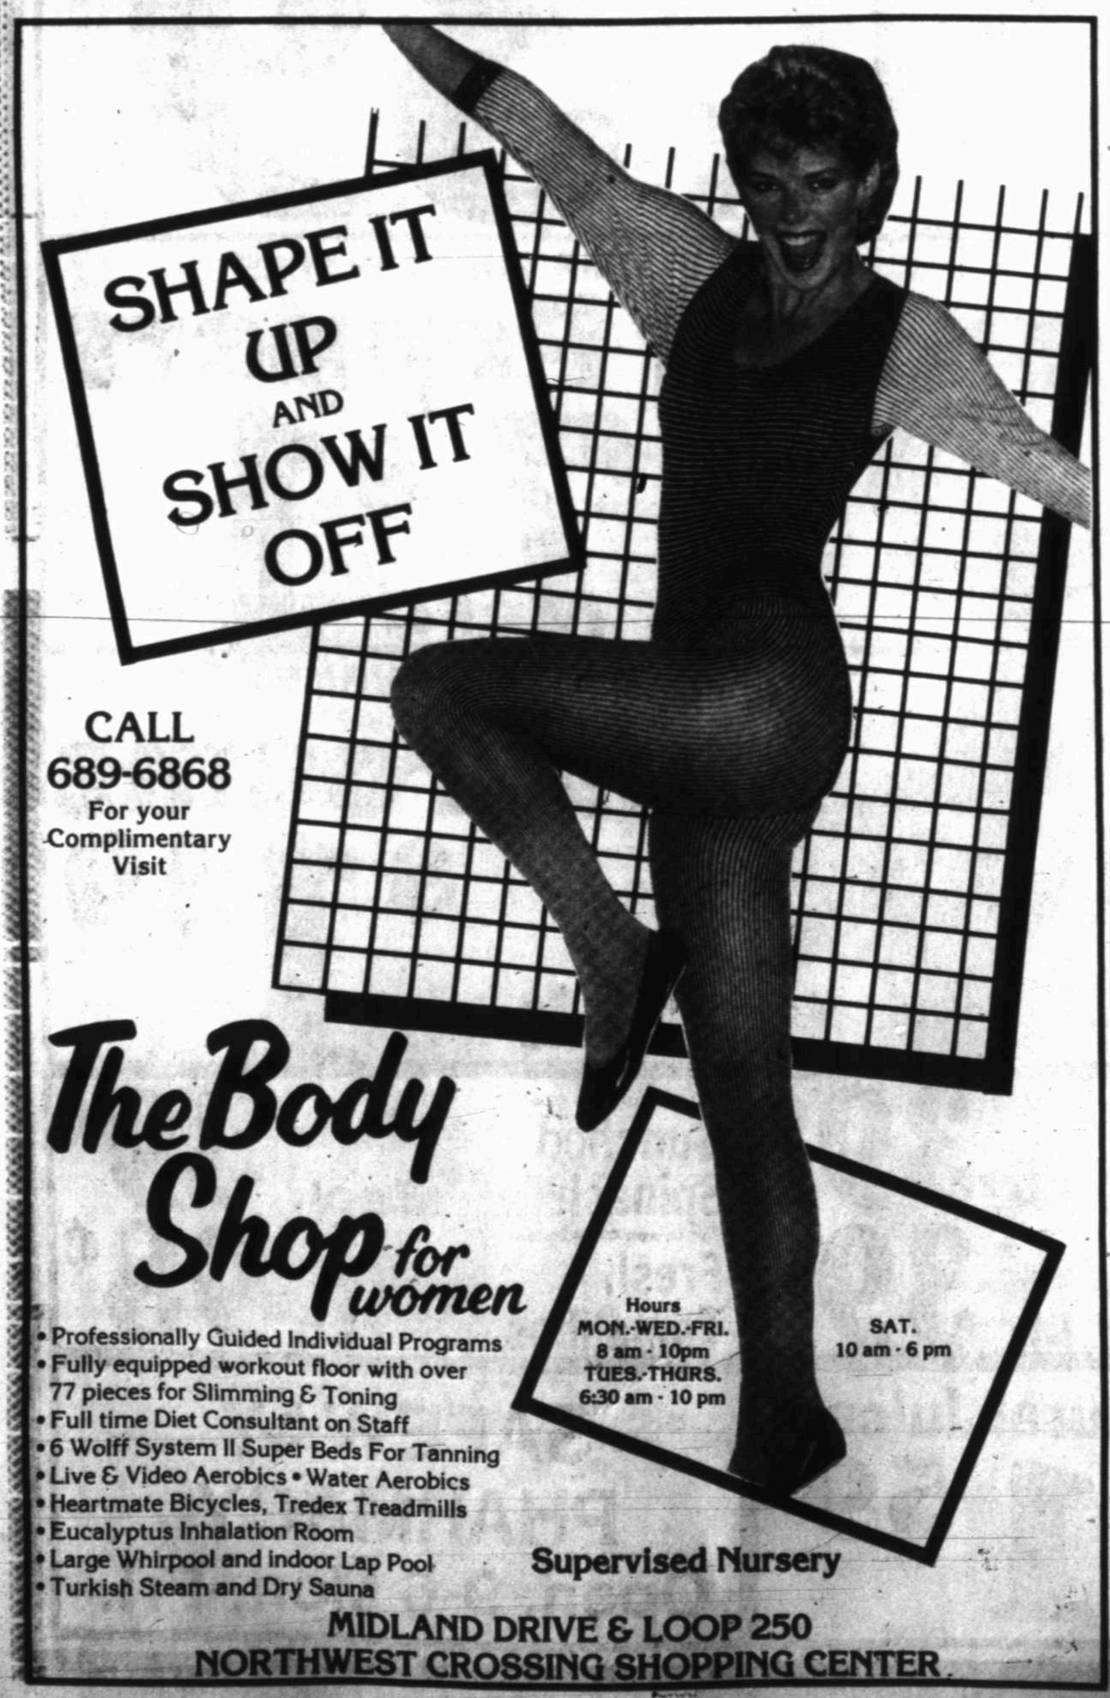

PASTITSIO
½ pound butter or margarine
2 pounds ground beef
1 onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Salt, pepper
½ cup white wine
1 (8-ounce) can of tomato sauce
1 pound macaroni (diagonally cut tube pasta, elbow macaroni or thick spaghetti)
3 eggs, beaten
Grated Parmesan cheese
4 cups white sauce

Heat 4 tablespoons butter in skillet. Add beef, onion, garlic and parsley and cook, crumbling meat with fork, until browned. Add cinnamon, nutmeg, salt and pepper to taste, wine and tomato sauce. Simmer 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, cook macaroni in boiling salted water until firm but tender. Rinse, drain and place in bowl. Add ¼ pound butter, melted, eggs and generous sprinkling of grated cheese. Mix well.

Spread half of macaroni mixture on bottom of greased 13x9-inch baking pan. Cover evenly with meat sauce. Sprinkle with cheese. Spread remaining macaroni over meat and sprinkle with cheese. Cover with white sauce and sprinkle generously wth cheese. Dot with butter and sprinkle lightly with cinnamon, if desired.

Bake at 350 degrees 1 hour. Cool and cut into 3-inch squares. Makes 12 servings.

Picnic shoulder can be good buy

By MERLE ELLIS

"Fresh Picnic Shoulder — 94 cents per lb." That's a good pork buy. And that's what they were going for last week at one market in my neighborhood. Unfortunately, they weren't going very fast. Most people pass up fresh picnic shoulder even when it's on special.

The reason, I believe, is they don't know what to do with it. It is a big hunk of pork, usually four to six pounds, and most often perceived as a cut that must be roasted. It does, indeed, make a marvelous roast, but unless you are feeding a rather large family, it's going to leave you with an awful lot of leftovers.

If you are willing to do a little cutting up in the kitchen, you can turn a fresh picnic shoulder of pork into all manner of delicious dishes for even a small family.

The picnic shoulder is the front leg of the pig. They are, like the hind leg of the pig, often smoked to make picnic ham. A fresh picnis is (of course) not smoked and may be cut up to use in almost any dish calling for fresh pork.

The hock may be removed and used to flavor a pot of beans or greens or sauerkraut for a hearty meal. Simply find the joint with the tip of the knife, then cut through the joint to remove the hock.

The remainderof the picnic shoulder contains only the round leg bone. Simply cut down to and around the bone to lift it out. The meat then may be cut into any shape you like and cooked the way you want. All or part may be tied into a nice boneless roast. You can slice it or dice it as thick or as thin as you like.

The picnic shoulder often comes with some of the skin left on. That may be used to bard a roast or use it in your next batch of homemade sausage or pate.

Don't pass up a good buy on fresh picnic shoulder.

APPLE CIDER POT ROAST

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, minced
One 3-pound picnic shoulder roast
2 cups apple cider
3 onions, cut in wedges
1 teaspoon tarragon
2½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 bay leaves
4 carrots, cut diagonally
3 potatoes, peeled, cubed
½ head cabbage, cut in wedges
2 cups small fresh mushrooms
1 green pepper, cut in small squares
½ cup water
¼ cup flour
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet
Salt and pepper
Parsley

Heat oil in a Dutch oven and saute garlic in it for a minute. Add pork and brown well on all sides. Pour off the fat. Add cider, onions, tarragon, salt, pepper and bay leaves. Bring to a boil; then cover and reduce heat. Cook for 1½ hours, until meat is tender.

Add carrots and potatoes; cook for 15 minutes. Add the rest of the vegetables and cook until tender. Remove meat and vegetables to a warm dish and keep warm while you make the gravy.

Discard the bay leaves. Skim off the fat. Reserve 1¾ cups juices (add water if needed). Blend cold water with the flour and stir into hot reserved juices. Cook until thickened. Stir in Kitchen Bouquet. Season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle warm roast with chopped parsley and serve with gravy. Serves 4 to 6.

GINGER PORK

¾ pound boneless pork, cut in thin strips
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1½ tablespoons soy sauce
½ cup vegetable oil
¼ teaspoon sugar
1 tablespoon dry sherry
2 tablespoons shredded fresh ginger or 1 tablespoon powdered ginger
½ cup sliced green onions, tops included

Put pork strips in a small bowl and add cornstarch, soy sauce and 1 teaspoon of the oil. Stir to blend. Heat the remaining oil in a wok or large fry pan and add meat. Cook, stirring, until the pieces can be separated and the meat loses its color. Lift from the pan with a slotted spoon or skimmer and drain. Discard all but 2 tablespoons of oil in pan. Blend sugar and sherry; set aside. Heat oil and add ginger.

Cook, stirring about 20 seconds, then add meat and cook a few seconds longer. Add the wine mixture and stir to blend and heat through. Serve over hot steamed rice and garnish with the sliced green onions. Serves 4.

Sweet potato strips french-fried

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Interestingly enough, French-Fried Sweet Potatoes have never been well-known.

The trick in making them is to fry pared raw sweet potatoes, cut in ¼ to ½-inch strips, twice in deep oil in order to have them crisp. And crisp they must be.

However, the first frying may be done well in advance. Then, just before serving, the once-fried potato strips are lowered into hot oil again for a minute or two. This way they achieve their excellence.

FRENCH-FRIED SWEET POTATOES

4 medium (1¼ pounds) sweet potatoes
1 quart (about) corn oil

Peel sweet potatoes. Cut lengthwise into strips ¼- to ½-inch thick; as you do so, drop strips into a bowl holding 1 quart very cold water and 1 teaspoon salt. Soak 30 minutes.

Pour corn oil into a heavy 3-quart saucepan, filling no more than ⅓ full. Heat over medium-high heat to 375 degrees.

Meanwhile, drain sweet potatoes and dry thoroughly with a towel. Add about 1 cup of strips at a time to frying basket; do not overcrowd. Fry until tender but not brown — 1 to 2 minutes. This can be done several hours in advance of serving. Drain on paper towels.

At serving time, reheat oil over medium-high heat to 375 degrees. Place potatoes in frying basket. Fry until golden brown and crisp — 1 to 2 minutes. Drain on paper towels. If desired, sprinkle with salt. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Mexican 'moles' have exotic flavor

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

If you have a yen for spicy Mexican flavors but also an urge for something different, you have turned to the right page.

Although burritos, enchiladas, tostadas, tacos and other tortilla-based Mexican fast foods are readily available and easy to prepare, there are more-exciting and more-exotic dishes to be found in the cuisine of our southern neighbor.

Moles, for instance, combine chocolate with spicy chiles in smooth, thick sauces usually served with poultry — a taste that is decidedly not commonplace.

Moles have been popular in Mexico for centuries. Originally their unusual combination of ingredients meant much chopping and other preparation work and time.

But with the advent of the blender and the food processor, preparing a mole sauce has become a snap.

The chocolate flavor is barely discernible; yet it acts as a wonderful catalyst, melding the rest of the ingredients into a wonderful, smooth blend of flavors.

Chicken and turkey are the usual choices for a mole, but with duckling growing in popularity as a home-menu item, there's no reason why that can't be served with one of these rich, brown sauces.

Follow it with a dessert of a Mexican version of the English trifle, made with the unlikely — but delicious — combination of cinnamon-spiked jicama and carrots and layers of pound cake.

DUCKLING WITH MOLE SAUCE

Two 4- to 5-pound ducklings, quartered
Salt
1 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons oil
½ cup tomato sauce
¼ cup raisins
¼ cup creamy peanut butter
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
Dash ground cloves
½ ounce (½ square) unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups water
1 chicken bouillon cube
1 cup chopped peanuts, optional

Wash, drain and dry ducklings. Sprinkle both sides with salt. Place duckling pieces skin side up on rack in shallow roasting pan. Bake at 350 degrees until meat is tender and skin is brown and crisp, about 2 hours. Turn pieces several times during cooking period, ending with skin side up.

To prepare mole sauce, saute onion and garlic in oil until tender but not brown. Combine onion mixture, tomato sauce, raisins, peanut butter, sugar, chili powder, cinnamon, cloves, chocolate, water and bouillon cube in blender or food-processor container. Blend until smooth. Return mixture to saucepan, bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer 15 to 20 minutes, stirring frequently. Brush sauce liberally over duckling at serving time; sprinkle with chopped peanuts. Or serve sauce and chopped peanuts on side. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

JICAMA-AND-CARROT PUDDING

3 cups sugar
3 cups water
1 pound jicama, peeled and shredded
1 pound carrots, peeled and shredded
1 stick cinnamon
2 bakery or homemade poundcakes
Whipping cream, whipped
2 tablespoons sesame seeds, toasted

Combine sugar and water in saucepan and cook until sugar is dissolved. Place 2 cups syrup in Dutch oven, reserving remainder. Add jicama, carrots and cinnamon stick. Cook 1½ hours or until very thick. Let cool.

Trim crust from poundcakes and cut each cake into 9 slices. Arrange 6 slices in 1½- to 2-quart serving bowl and drizzle with 1-3 cup reserved syrup. Spoon half of jicama-carrot mixture over cake. Set aside some of mixture for decorating dessert. Top with another 6 slices poundcake. Drizzle cake with ⅓ cup syrup and spread with remaining mixture. Top with remaining poundcake slices and drizzle with remaining syrup. Top with whipped cream, arrange a ring of jicama mixture around cream and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Adults eat most crackers

NEW YORK (AP) — The national average per capita consumption of crackers is 10 pounds a year, and adults eat more crackers than young people do, according to a government survey reported by Pepperidge Farm's Cookie and Cracker division.

To help cracker lovers keep this food fresh and crisp, the baking firm offers these hints: never refrigerate crackers; keep them in a tightly closed plastic bag; crisp crackers in the oven before serving; do not let spreads or cheese sit on crackers longer than 15 minutes.

Tea-drinking brews up

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It's 7 a.m. Sharon Fraser, an Encino, Calif., financial planner, ignores the pile of market reports on her desk. She leans back in her chair, devoting her full attention to the fruity aroma of Ceylon Breakfast tea coming from the mug.

"My last civilized moment of the day," she sighed.

It's 4 p.m. Margaret Thurmond, an activity director for a counseling program, sits on a flowered apricot divan in the lounge of the Westwood Marquis Hotel on the west side of Los Angeles. She sips a steaming cup of Vintage Darjeeling and nibbles on cream cheese and watercress sandwiches. As a harpist plays, she talks "lighter things" with a lady acquaintance who is getting over a divorce.

Tea and and T-bills. Or tea and sympathy.

Whatever the occasion, consumers in growing numbers are finding that tea is their cup of tea. Nearly 200 million pounds of tea was imported into the United States in 1984 and more than $1 billion worth of tea was expected to be sold in this country during the year.

Across the country, tea lovers are lining up for the genteel afternoon teas being offered at the Westwood Marquis and Trumps in Los Angeles, the Fairmont in San Francisco, the Drake in Chicago, the Plaza and St. Regis hotels in New York City, Maison Gourmet in Atlanta.

TEA HAS become a staple on college football team training tables. Prominent charitable groups are opting for tea parties instead of cocktail hours. Classes on how to make good tea are repeatedly sold out. And some enthusiastic gardeners are even growing it in their backyards.

Grocery stores have expanded their tea sections to include bulk teas and exotic and expensive imported varieties. Retail stores report a brisk business in accouterments — expensive silver tea services, $60 kettles equipped with harmonicas that play tunes, designer tea cozies that look like cats, tea infusers shaped like gingerbread houses.

Not since Prohibition has tea been so trendy. Only Britain imports more tea than America does, and the Americans may surpass even the British in tea consumption by 1990, industry experts say.

Everyone seems to be jumping on the tea cart — such well-known figures as Carol Burnett, Shirley MacLaine, Jessica Lange, Sally Fields, Sylvester Stallone, Martin Sheen and John Travolta, and California's Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston, often take afternoon tea.

"Tea. It is good for the heart," said Jacques Camus, vice president of the Westwood Marquis, which was one of the first Los Angeles hotels to make afternoon tea a grand event.

CAMUS, LIKE many other tea lovers, said that tea not only brings people together, but is inexpensive, low in calories and has calming properties that are good for the mind as well as the body.

At one time tea was not looked upon so favorably, and in fact, was considered unpatriotic. When the colonists dumped 300 chests into Boston Harbor in 1773 to protest the British government's high tax on the commodity, they not only sparked the War for Independence, but gave coffee drinking a big boost.

However, in the last 20 years, coffee consumption in this country has declined, while tea has been steaming ahead.

Tea's popularity has accompanied that of the culinary arts in general. The same health-conscious urban dwellers who buy wines and fancy cheeses are also reaching on the shelves for tea.

One possible reason is tea's lower caffeine content. While coffee has 100 to 150 milligrams of caffeine per cup, tea contains only 10 to 50.

The Tea Council of the United States, believing that even more people would drink tea if they could make or get a good cup of it, recently began a nationwide campaign to educate the public, especial restaurateurs, on the finer points of tea preparation.

"The British weren't appalled because we dumped the tea into Boston Harbor. They were upset because the water wasn't the right temperature," said the tea council's executive director, Don Wiederecht.

TEA LOVER Helen Gurley Brown, editor of Cosmopolitan magazine, recalled her own struggle several years ago when she and her husband were invited to take tea with oil billionaire J. Paul Getty at his Sutton Place home in London.

She was asked to serve. "It was like figuring out how to run an Apple computer," she said. "There were dishes and flatware spread out endlessly. There was a silver urn for hot water, another with tea, another with coffee, another for who knows what, and little petits fours to be served. I was overwhelmed, and pretty proud of myself when I got through it."

These days, Brown prefers the tea served in tall crystal glasses at the Russian Tea Room not far from her Manhattan office. On a recent afternoon, she met with Ms. Magazine editor Gloria Steinem, another connoisseur who uses a bit of preserves to sweeten her tea.

The Dutch first brought tea to Europe from the Far East in the 1600s. Considered a luxury, it was taxed heavily, and at $100 a pound, only the royalty and rich could afford it. The lady of the manor kept the tea in elaborate locked caddies and carefully weighed out the servings. And out of their fear for their precious porcelain a custom was born — adding milk to the cups so that the boiling water would not crack the cups.

RICHARD DICK, a 70-year-old chemist who drinks tea for a living, is more concerned about ruined tea than ruined tea cups.

Dick, who tastes 100 teas a day as tea examiner for the Food and Drug Administration, is responsible for making sure that all the tea imported into this country meets minimum standards. That means all the tea we drink, since virtually none is grown domestically. About 70 percent of the tea Americans drink comes from Sri Lanka, India, Indonesia, Kenya, Malawi and Tanzania.

Importers provide Dick with samples of the cargo, which is tested against standards set down yearly by the U.S. Board of Tea Experts, a group made up of industry experts. If a tea is condemned, the importer can appeal the decision to another group, the federal Tea Appeals Board.

Last year, Dick said, several shipments of Formosa black teas were found to have a peculiar taste. The producers wanted a fine looking tea so they had been polishing it with limestone and marble dust, which got into the product.

TEA PRODUCERS several years ago attempted unsuccessfully to get the FDA to enforce an 1897 law that forbids beverages brewed from leaves of plants other than tea from being labeled "tea," Dick said. However, the agency has tended to ignore such transgressions, unless the packaging does not clearly state the contents.

Like wine enthusiasts who would not be caught dead sipping sweet fizzy pop wines, many tea lovers consider these herb teas merely "boiled weeds" because they do not contain any tea. (A member of the Camellia family known as Camellia sinensis, true tea is a hardy evergreen plant.)

But just as pop wines spurred younger consumers to try better wines, the herb tea boom which began as part of the health food and fitness movement in the 1970s has encourage many Americans to try other teas.

HOWEVER, HERB tea was first looked upon by the industry as an oddity and even New Jersey-based Thomas J. Lipton Co., which sells more than 50 percent of all the tea purchased in the United States, did not offer an herb tea line until 1981.

Calcium causes confusion

Hearst News Service

Americans are so obsessed with health that popping vitamins and visiting the nutritionist are perceived as fads not to be taken seriously. Often, health trends are just fads, but one recent trend — the popularity of taking calcium supplements — deserves serious consideration.

Most of the enthusiasm has come from women for what the World Book Encyclopedia describes as the "soft silvery-white metallic element that belongs to the group called alkaline earth metals and has an atomic number of 20 and is essential to all living things" — and for two good reasons. First, women are prone to osteoporosis, a weakening of the bones that occurs after menopause and is accelerated when women have calcium deficiencies. Second, there is some indication that calcium eases premenstrual syndrome and menstrual cramps. An additional argument for calcium for women and men is the possibility that calcium deficiency may cause high blood pressure.

Is there any reason to be wary of downing calcium supplements?

"Too much of anything is not good for you," says Tina Ponak, a San Diego nutritionist. "If you have kidney stones, calcium should be eliminated from your diet, or if you have hardening of the arteries. But if not, and if you are not taking megadoses, there shouldn't be any problem."

Ponak prefers calcium oratate, a powdered form of calcium, which she believes is the easiest to absorb. The greater the absorption, the more effective the calcium and the less chance there is of building up deposits.

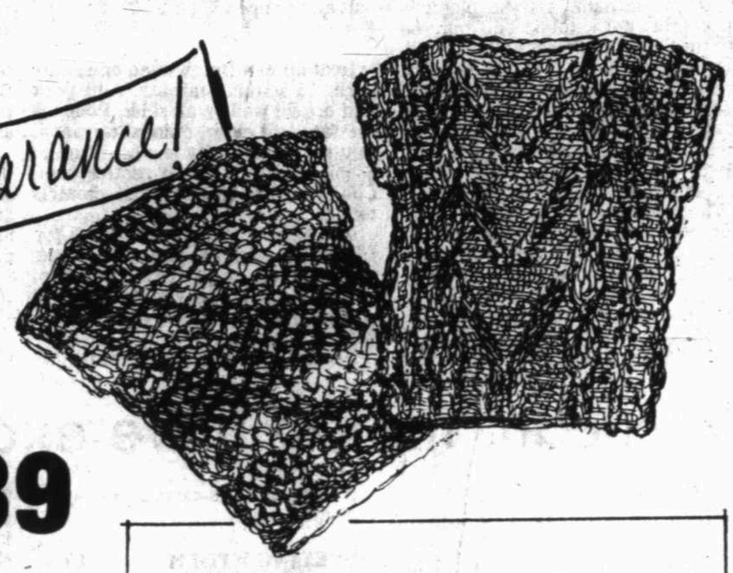

Doctors and nutritionists maintain that the average woman's diet doesn't come close to providing adequate calcium intake.

"You can get calcium from dairy products," says Dr. Alan Gaby, a Maryland family physician who specializes in nutritional therapy, "but you'd have to drink four glasses of milk a day to get what you need. Many people are allergic to milk, and I certainly don't think milk is an ideal food. I recommend that every woman who eats a typical American diet take calcium supplements."

Most menopausal women consume an average of 450 milligrams of calcium a day. The National Institute of Health recently suggested that 1,000 milligrams to 1,500 milligrams be the daily requirement instead of the present recommended 800 milligrams.

While young women are not as susceptible to osteoporosis, calcium supplements, according to Gaby, are important for building strong, dense bones at an early age in order to deter the onset of the disease as women get older. Osteoporosis strikes one woman in four over age 45 and is responsible for 200,000 broken hips a year. It's also the reason older people seem to shrink, and why some women develop a stooped posture known as a "dowager's hump."

Bread puddings retain popularity

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Puddings were once familiar desserts at old-fashioned tables. These days they are not served nearly as often as they once were. Yet, they can be delicious — and popular. One of New York City's best known restaurants has had a bread pudding on the menu for years. The owner says that if he stopped offering it, many customers would be tremendously disappointed.

Encouraged by this, a friend of mine evolved this Cinnamon Apple Bread Pudding.

CINNAMON APPLE BREAD PUDDING

3 large eggs
⅛ cup sugar
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 tablespoons butter, melted
½ teaspoon vanilla
2 cups cubed (½-inch), firm-textured dry bread (see Note)
2 cups peeled, sliced (⅛-inch) tart apples
Orange Sauce (recipe follows)

In a medium bowl beat together until blended eggs, sugar, milk, salt, nutmeg, cinnamon, 1 tablespoon of the butter and the vanilla. Add bread; mix well. Pour into a buttered 1½ quart casserole. Dip apple slices in remaining 1 tablespoon butter and arrange slices on top.

Set casserole in a larger baking pan and place in a preheated 350-degree oven. Into the pan pour enough hot water to come up ¾-inch. Bake, uncovered, until a knife inserted in center comes out clean, about 1 hour. Serve with warm Orange Sauce.

Makes 6 servings.

Note: To dry bread cubes bake in a shallow pan in a preheated 275-degree oven, turning occasionally, for about 10 minutes.

ORANGE SAUCE: In a small saucepan heat 1 cup milk until tiny bubbles appear around edge. In the top of a double boiler whisk 2 egg yolks. Gradually whisk in the very hot milk. Add 3 tablespoons sugar and 1½ teaspoons orange rind. Stir constantly over simmering water until thickened — 2 to 3 minutes.

DEAR ABBY

Rules ruin romance

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a very pretty, popular, 15-year-old girl I'll call Lucy. She's an honor student and has never been in any kind of trouble. Her father and I had a rule that she couldn't go steady until she reached 16.

Well, Lucy met a boy, 16, from another high school, and they really fell for each other. He asked her to go steady and she said yes. Two days later he came to meet us, and I decided to set the "ground rules." I thought if he knew the rules in advance he might not put any pressure on Lucy.

I told him they must be off the phone by 9 p.m. on school nights as she had to be up at 6, at school at 7, and she needs her rest. I told him she didn't drink, that I didn't care if he drank, but he was not to drink when he was with her. I told him that he should go out with his boyfriends and Lucy would go with her girlfriends — that they shouldn't be constant companions. End of conversation. Well, he immediately got up and left — mad.

The next night they had plans to see a movie. He called Lucy to say he would pick her up, but he wouldn't come inside the house. She felt bad. I told her to explain that we love her and are interested in her well-being. Well, he thinks I don't like him and that's not true.

He didn't call Lucy all week and she was heartbroken. She finally called him and asked what was wrong. He said he wanted to break up because he hadn't felt comfortable since meeting her mom. She hung up the phone in tears and went to bed.

Abby, I feel so guilty. Was I wrong to set the ground rules on our first meeting? Or did I just handle it wrong? How should I handle situations like this in the future? Lucy has been very cool to me, and I haven't slept in a week. — WELL-MEANING MOM

DEAR MOM: Setting the ground rules is an excellent idea, but you should have discussed them with your daughter privately, and asked HER to convey them to the boy.

From your description of the ground-rules briefing, you must have come off like a drill sergeant barking orders. The boy can't be blamed for wanting to break up with your daughter.

Well-meaning or not, you blew it, Mom. Apologize to Lucy and promise you will never repeat that performance again.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and his two sisters (all married with children) had a studio portrait taken of just the three of them for their parents' Christmas gift this year. Spouses and grandchildren were not included.

Why am I angry? — SEEING RED

DEAR SEEING: Don't assume that because "someone" decided to eliminate spouses and children from the family photograph that you are less valued by your in-laws. It's not necessarily so. Find out who made that decision before allowing negative feelings to develop. Get the picture?

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Hush puppies have new role

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Hush puppies, the old-time Southern hot bread, go on and on. They are made with cornmeal and deep-fat fried. Whether or not they should be flavored with onion is a matter of controversy. Traditionally, Hush Puppies have accompanied fried fish, but we have put them to new use.

Hush Puppies, we find, are excellent to serve for brunch with scrambled eggs and ham plus skillet-fried apples. We like the following recipe for this purpose because it doesn't call for onion — not always favored at a late-morning meal.

HUSH PUPPIES

2 cups stoneground white cornmeal
½ teaspoon salt
1/16th teaspoon baking soda
1 large egg
1½ cups buttermilk
1 quart (about) corn oil

In a medium bowl stir together cornmeal, salt and baking soda.

In a small bowl beat egg slightly; add buttermilk and beat to blend. Add to cornmeal mixture; stir only until blended.

Pour oil into a heavy 3-quart saucepan or deep fryer, filling not more than one-third full. Heat over medium heat to 350 degrees.

Using an oval serving spoon, scoop up about 1 tablespoonful of the batter. Carefully drop batter from side of spoon, without crowding, into oil. Fry, turning occasionally, until golden brown — 3 to 4 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Columnist conducts sex survey

CHICAGO (AP) — Tenderness and touching go a long way — in fact, they're better than going all the way, according to a sampling of American women conducted by advice columnist Ann Landers.

Three weeks ago, Miss Landers asked her readers if they would be content to forget "the act" if they were cuddled and treated tenderly.

More than 100,000 people, nearly all of them American women, have answered, said Miss Landers in a telephone interview. Seventy-two percent declared themselves willing to forgo intercourse for affection, she said.

Miss Landers said she was surprised at the overwhelming response to her unscientific survey, but less so by the results.

"The importance of sex is overrated," Miss Landers told The Associated Press. "Women want affection. They want to feel valued. Apparently, having sex alone doesn't give them the feeling they're valued."

As for men, she added, too many "are using sex as a physical release and it has no more emotional significance than a sneeze."

"There's a tremendous lack of communication," Miss Landers said. "It's troublesome."

What was most "astonishing," Miss Landers said, was that 40 percent of the women who said they didn't need the sex act were under 40 years of age.

Those who said they needed more than tenderness said they "needed the sexual climax to relieve physical tension. Almost as many said they wanted the ultimate in gratification — that anything less would make them feel exploited and used," Miss Landers said in her column.

The survey was initiated when Miss Landers published a letter from a reader responding to a man who wanted a penile implant because he said his inability to complete the sex act with the woman he loved was driving him crazy.

The woman wrote that she'd bet if 100 women were asked how they felt about intercourse, 98 would prefer tenderness.

Miss Landers then posed the question to her readers, "Would you be content to be held close and treated tenderly and forget about 'the act?' Reply YES or NO and please add one line: 'I am over (or under) 40 years of age.' No signature is necessary."

In an interview on NBC's "Today" program, Miss Landers was asked whether the women responding to the survey might be not "stimulating enough to inspire good love."

"I say to someone, look, ask what you want," the columnist replied. "For example, if your husband comes to bed and he's got a beard and he smells like a goat, say, 'Look, honey, take a shower. Let's have a really nice time tonight.' And then put some perfume on a nice nightie. She can do something to help the situation, too. I'm not laying all this on the backs of the men; it's a two-way street."

In the column, Miss Landers described the response without revealing the results. She said it was second only to the time she asked her 70 million readers worldwide to clip a column about nuclear war, sign it and send it to President Reagan.

"This sex survey," Miss Landers said in that column, "beats the meatloaf recipe, the lemon pie and the poll asking parents, 'If you had it to do over again, would you have children? (Seventy percent said no).'"

"This mail tells me that there are a lot of angry, unfulfilled women out there. There are some women who are missing it all. It's passing them by," she added.

But woman from Helena, Mont., disagreed. "To say that touching and tender words are sufficient is like settling for the smell of freshly baked bread and ignoring the nourishment it provides. Such people must be crazy," she wrote Miss Landers.

Dollar lower; gold same

LONDON (AP) — A cut in the U.S. prime lending rate helped push the dollar marginally lower on world currency exchanges early today. Gold prices were virtually unchanged.

The British pound, which sank to an all-time low of $1.10 on Monday in Far East trading, also was steady today. It was trading at $1.209 in London, compared with $1.205 late Tuesday.

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Nigel Lawson, who on Monday went to the pound's defense by authorizing the Bank of England to sharply hike interest rates, was among officials heading to Washington for a meeting Thursday of the so-called Group of Five, which also includes finance ministers from France, West Germany and Japan.

American interest rates, which have propelled the dollar to record heights including new marks against the French franc and Italian lira Tuesday, are expected to top the agenda.

On Tuesday, most large American banks cut their prime lending rates – charged their best corporate customers — to 10½ percent from 10¾ percent.

The comparable rate in Britain is now 13 percent, an advantage to potential investors that Lawson hopes will shore up the pound, which has been hit by falling oil prices that cut the country's North Sea revenues.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar edged up to a closing 254.93 yen from Monday's 254.55. Markets in Japan were closed Tuesday for a holiday.

Later today, in London, the dollar was quoted at 254.80 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Tuesday:

–3.1818 West German marks, down from 3.1875.

–2.6800 Swiss francs, down from 2.6837, a seven-year high.

–9.7535 French francs, down from 9.7745, a record high.

–3.5940 Dutch guilders, down from 3.6020.

–1,953.50 Italian lire, down from 1,958.75 and the all-time record 1,959.50 set at the Milan fixing.

–1.32505 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3241.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $303 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $302.25. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $302.45.

In Zurich, the bid price was $302.40, marginally down from $302.50 late Tuesday.

Automakers report sales up in January

By The Associated Press

The major U.S. automakers say the new year got off to a good start with a 2 percent rise in car sales in early January, led by Chrysler Corp.'s increase of nearly 30 percent.

The sales reports from the six automakers followed government reports on Tuesday that said retail sales slipped while industrial production rose in December.

And while the government was plugging two more pieces into the economic puzzle, the nation's largest banks cut their prime interest rate a quarter point to 10.5 percent. The prime rate is now at its lowest level in 17 months.

Among the automakers, Chrysler Corp. sales were up 27.6 percent and Ford Motor Co. sales were up 21.4 percent over the opening period of 1984. Sales by industry leader General Motors Corp. were up 7 percent.

In all, the six automakers sold 190,869 cars in the period, or 23,859 a day in eight official selling days. That compared with 149,136 a year earlier, or 21,305 a day in seven selling days a year earlier.

Analysts said the retail sales and industrial production reports spelled more relief for the economy.

The Commerce Department said despite the 0.1 percent decline in retail sales in December, sales were up 10.4 percent for the full year over the previous year.

The Federal Reserve's industrial production report, meanwhile, showed that output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities shot up 0.6 percent in December, the biggest increase in five months.

"The two pieces together are just confirmation of our view that the economy did touch bottom in October and has been growing at a pretty healthy rate since then," said Robert Wescott of Wharton Econometrics in Philadelphia.

Michael Evans, president of the Washington forecasting firm Evans Economics, said the December retail sales figure was better than it might look at first glance.

"This is more bullish than I thought we were going to get," said Evans. "The economy should move right along until interest rates start going up again, probably about the middle of the year."

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige noted that retail sales rose at an annual rate of 10.5 percent during the last three months of the year, but he acknowledged that pace might not be sustained.

"Continued growth in incomes indicates another good year ahead for retail business, but gains will be slower than in 1984," said Baldrige.

The Commerce Department said December sales totaled $110.8 billion, with the slight decline the first since a 0.8 percent drop in August.

The Fed's industrial production report said gains were widespread in various industries. In contrast to the retail figures on autos, the production report showed a 2.6 percent jump in the manufacturing rate of cars in December.

Two killed in North Sea oil rig blast

LONDON (AP) — Two men were killed and two injured in an explosion on the Phillips Petroleum oil rig Glomar Arctic II in the North Sea, the U.S. oil company reported today.

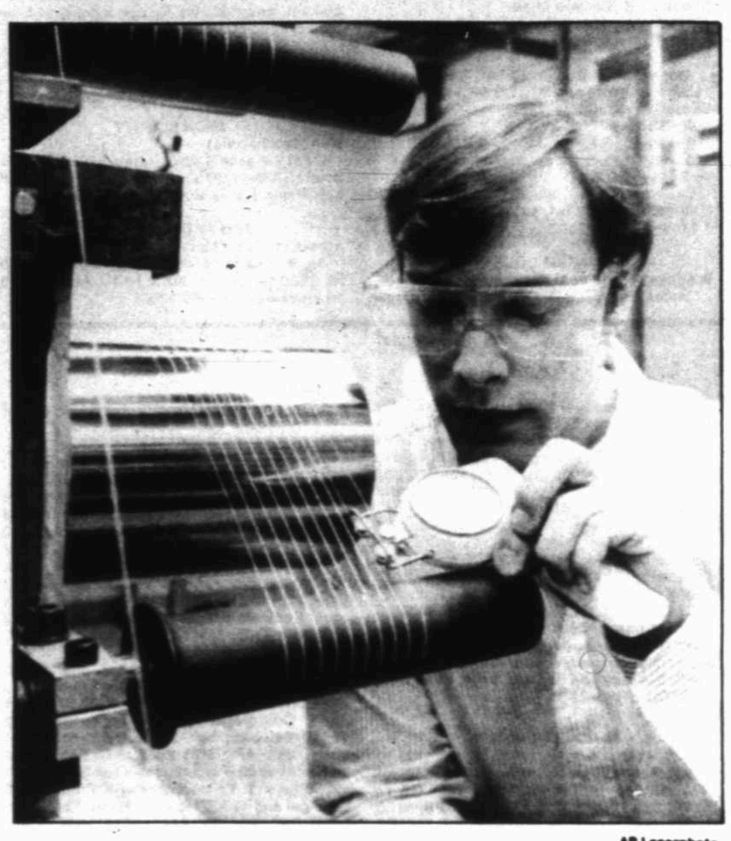

Phillips, in a statement issued in London, said the explosion occurred Tuesday night in a ballast pump room where the men were working. A fire that broke out after the explosion was extinguished, the statement said.

The company said the two injured men were flown by helicopter to a hospital in Aberdeen, a port in eastern Scotland, after getting first aid treatment from a doctor on the rig. It said they were in a stable condition but that no immediate details were available on their injuries.

The names of the victims were being withheld until their relatives had been informed.

The rig, in the Joanne oil field about midway between Britain and Norway, was working on a test well which was closed down after the explosion. The statement said the well was secure and the rig, although damaged in the blast, was in no danger.

The statement said 43 of the 84 crewmen were taken off the rig by two Royal Air Force helicopters and by a third helicopter from Norway's Ekofisk North Sea oil field, and flown to a rig four miles away.

Steelworkers say wage proposal "insulting"

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Kennecott Corp.'s proposal to cut wages and benefits of union employees by $6 an hour "is insulting to the unions," says a United Steelworkers of America official.

"I feel (the company has) gone way, way beyond what we expected them to do," said Bob Petris, who also is director of Kennecott's coordinated bargaining committee.

Officials from Kennecott and other copper companies met for the second day Tuesday with union representatives. The companies outlined proposals for trimming labor costs and other factors contributing to the depressed copper industry.

Kennecott's proposal "was personally embarrassing to me because I was the one who was pushing for the meetings," Petris said.

The unions probably would reject the proposal, he said.

Ken Hochstetler, director of communications for Kennecott, said the company proposed reducing hourly wages by $3 across the board, eliminating annual cost-of-living adjustments and cutting or eliminating some employee benefits.

The net effect would be to reduce by $6 an hour the total package of wages and benefits, which now averages about $23 an hour, he said.

Hochstetler said Kennecott officials also discussed provisions in Kennecott's labor contracts that make its labor costs higher than those of any other U.S. copper producer.

Kennecott has blamed high costs and a depressed market for the layoff of about 7,700 workers from its operations in the United States.

Members of the New Mexico Rainbow Coalition conducted a protest Tuesday outside the building where most of the meetings were taking place.

The members were protesting apartheid in South Africa, which they contended was supported by copper companies and other industries.

George H. Anderson, chairman of the coalition, said Kennecott, Phelps Dodge and other corporations have driven down the price of copper by paying "slave wages" to South African workers.

Cheap labor resulting from apartheid practices has caused thousands of New Mexicans to lose their jobs in the copper industry, he said.

Hochstetler said Kennecott has no direct investment or involvement in South Africa.

Richards Bay Minerals, a former Kennecott subsidiary, has mining operations in South Africa. Hochstetler said Kennecott relinquished control of Richards Bay when Kennecott merged with Sohio in 1981.

Richards Bay now is operated by another branch of Sohio, Hochstetler said.

PREPARING YOUR INCOME TAX

Taxpayers find simple ways to cut income tax bills

EDITOR'S NOTE: This second article in a series of five on preparing 1984 income tax returns deals with charitable contributions and IRAs.

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 23 million couples and individuals found a simple way to cut their tax bills when they filed returns last year and they didn't have to itemize deductions to do it. The saving this year can be even greater.

If you are among the 64 percent of taxpayers who do not itemize, you still may write off part of what you give to charity. A couple filing a joint return or a single person may deduct 25 percent of the first $300 contributed, or $75. For a married person filing a separate return, the limit is 25 percent of the first $150, or a maximum write-off of $37.50.

The deduction may be claimed on either the long Form 1040, Form 1040A or 1040EZ.

You will have to file the long form and use Schedule A if you made a larger contribution to a charitable organization in 1984 and want to deduct it. Contributions may be in cash or property; you may also deduct some of the expenses of doing volunteer work.

If, for example, you work four hours a week for the Red Cross, you may deduct unreimbursed expenses of getting to and from the work but not the value of your time. If you drive to your charity work, you may deduct 9 cents a mile or the actual cost of gas and oil. In either case, you may add the costs of tolls and parking.

The Internal Revenue Service will not allow a deduction for the portion of a contribution that benefited you. If you pay $3 for a box of Girl Scout Cookies and the cookies are valued at $2, you may deduct only the $1 that is an actual contribution. No charitable deduction is allowed for political contributions (although you may claim a credit for some of those), or for raffle tickets.

You must include a statement describing how you valued property donated to charity. IRS Publication 526 is free and probably will answer any question you have about contributions.

There's also a big tax benefit for giving something to yourself — setting aside part of your current earnings in an Individual Retirement Account. The rules on this year's returns are basically the same with one exception: You must make your 1984 IRA contribution by April 15, 1985, regardless of when you file your tax return. The IRA benefit may be claimed by filing Form 1040 or 1040A but not 1040EZ.

A worker may contribute up to $2,000 of 1984 earnings to an IRA and avoid paying tax on that money or the interest it earns until it is withdrawn at age 59½ or later. If a worker has a spouse with no job outside the home, the couple may contribute a total of $2,250 divided between two separate accounts any way they see fit so long as neither claims more than $2,000. They must file a joint return. A two-earner couple may set aside up to $2,000 per spouse if each earned at least that much.

You risk stiff penalties from the IRS and bank or other institution that holds your IRA if you withdraw it prematurely. For example, if your IRA is in a 36-month account and you withdraw the money before that time is up, the bank might penalize you several months' interest. The IRS would tax the full amount withdrawn and add a 10-percent penalty.

However, there is no IRS penalty for a "rollover" from one IRA account to another. Thus, if your IRA in a 36-month certificate of deposit is maturing and you discover a more lucrative investment, you have 60 days from the time you withdraw it to put it into a new IRA. You may use the money any way you see fit during that 60 days but you may make such a rollover only once a year.

Whatever form your IRA takes, you may not use it as collateral for a loan. And the money may not be invested in such collectibles as stamps, coins or art works.

Anderson says benefits can come from Bhopal tragedy

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Two thousand people are dead, his company faces billions of dollars in liability claims, its stock has dropped 10 points in barely a month and the public's confidence in his industry is waning.

Yet, Union Carbide Corp. Chairman Warren M. Anderson insists there are benefits to be realized from the sudden leak on Dec. 3 of deadly gas from a company pesticide factory that borders a slum in Bhopal, India.

Official tallies list at least 2,000 people dead and 50,000 others injured from exposure to methyl isocyanate gas. The accident, still unexplained, caused what is believed to be the worst industrial poisoning in history.

"People look at me and think I'm out of my mind to say that this may be a good event, because you know it's a tragedy," Anderson said Tuesday in an interview with The Associated Press.

Warren Anderson

"But if you don't come out of this with positive programs ... then you've got a double tragedy," he said. "Not only do you have Bhopal, but you've missed the opportunity to do something good."

The crisis will not only spur chemical companies to be more careful and accountable for their actions, it will motivate regulatory organizations such as the Occupational Safety and Health Administration; the Environmental Protection Agency and Congress to reassess their approaches to the industry, he said.

"What was the right thing to do two months ago is now questionable," he said. "But what's wrong with reassessment — just as long as you don't act irresponsibly, emotionally, under the wrong conclusions."

Anderson repeatedly stressed during the interview that the financial costs of the tragedy to his company — be they in the form of compensation to the Indian government or the settlement of victims' claims — will have little effect on Union Carbide's ability to conduct business.

He said the 25 class-action lawsuits, nearly all of which seek $50 billion in damages, filed as of Tuesday will never be settled at their claimed values. He also maintained that Union Carbide is adequately protected with insurance and has managed its cash flow well enough to "put us in pretty good shape financially."

He refused to project the company's fourth-quarter earnings, which are to be publicly reported in February.

Union Carbide has characterized Standard & Poor's recent substantial lowering of its long-term debt ratings as "excessive" and rejects the rating firm's argument that Union Carbide's access to capital markets will be constrained. The company accepts, however, the firm's contention that "management will be diverted to defend the company against lawsuits."

The effects of Bhopal will be felt more on the chemical industry as a whole and on the government bodies that regulate it than on Union Carbide itself, he said.

"We're looking at this as an industry issue, not only as a Union Carbide issue, because it does affect other chemical companies," he said. "How we respond and how we behave will be important."

Anderson predicted that many chemical companies, his own included, "will have to sit back and re-evaluate a whole host of things. What kind of businesses do you want to be involved in overseas? What kind of procedures do you establish in terms of relationships with local communities? You have to look at it now in maybe a different light."

He said his company has no intention to abandon operations in Third World countries, but that it may, for example, look at ways to quickly process hazardous chemicals rather than keep large inventories for future use.

Teamsters pact could produce pay hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The newly opened set of national Teamsters union negotiations could produce the first wage increase for some 200,000 drivers and freight handlers in three years.

But both Teamsters President Jackie Presser and trucking industry bargainer Arthur H. Bunte Jr. sounded a note of caution as talks began Tuesday on a new national freight contract.

The Teamsters distributed information showing that since the industry was deregulated more than four years ago, 55 major trucking companies employing some 70,500 workers have ceased operations.

Presser declined to specify whether seeking a substantial pay increase or boost in pensions would be a top priority.

Instead, he said that deregulation has resulted in price-cutting because of increased competition. Layoffs and bankruptcies have resulted, said the union leader.

"We just can't keep letting all these people (trucking companies) get all of the territories and districts that they want simply by buying a $10 license," Presser told reporters. "We think that it's an erosion of the industry. We think that price-cutting in the industry has hurt many of our working membership.

"They haven't created more freight in the United States, they've just created less jobs."

The industry wants a contract "which will recognize today's competitive realities in the marketplace for trucking services," Bunte said in a statement.

Teamsters union drivers and freight handlers are paid an average hourly wage of $13.26 under the national master freight agreement.

The current contract contains a wage freeze. Two cost-of-living increases under the current agreement totaled 68 cents and were allocated to health and welfare and pension plans instead of to workers' paychecks.

Mill employment hits new low

WASHINGTON (AP) — American steel mill employment continued to decline in November, reaching a new low since monthly records were first compiled in 1933, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

An average of 218,700 people were employed in the domestic steel industry last November, compared to 219,100 in October 1984 and 243,600 in November 1983, the Washington-based group reported Tuesday.

During 1975 to 1979, an average of 453,000 people were employed in the industry, according to the AISI.

The number of hourly paid production workers remained stable at 156,400 people between October and November, compared to 173,300 in November 1983, the AISI said in a prepared release this week.

The gradual decline in employment levels since mid-1984 reflects the lower production level in the second half of the year, which, in turn, resulted from record-high steel imports, the group said.

Foreign steel claimed nearly 30 percent of the U.S. market in November, according to the AISI.

OILTEX drilling Duval County confirmer

AUSTIN—OILTEX International, Ltd. has announced that the Forney No. 1 Gruy Estate well has been spudded in Duval County, Texas, and is currently drilling at 4,950 feet.

The new well is on a 640 acre lease adjacent to the prolific Guerra gas field which was discovered on a prospect developed by OILTEX Principals. The company hopes that this well will extend the field, which is estimated to hold proved and probable reserves in excess of 70 Bcf.

Goldhirsh: From basement to Inc. business magazine

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Goldhirsh knew little of the business when he started out in a Boston basement 15 years ago, but his fast-growing publishing empire now produces the nation's fourth-ranked business magazine — Inc.

Goldhirsh, 44, is a gentle-mannered and earnest nurturer of entrepreneurship — his own and others'.

"What children are to a society, an entrepreneur is to an economy," Goldhirsh said during a recent business trip. "Some little companies grow up and become great companies. Others don't make it to adulthood. It seems very important to me that we have a very fertile environment for that process to continue."

The elfin publisher — who has dark brown hair, is dimpled and wears round glasses — said Inc. was intended to help people who launch new ventures.

"The main thrust of the magazine was to share experiences," said the Brooklyn, N.Y. native, adding: "The magazine was to have an advocacy role, particularly in Washington," because entrepreneurs do not have the lobbying clout of large companies.

Before becoming a publisher with a calling, Goldhirsh, who graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1961, ran a high school science department.

He also ran a cultural exchange program on a school boat that visited countries in the Caribbean. And, he taught celestial navigation to sailors planning offshore voyages.

In 1967, in that Boston basement, he began publishing an annual directory of sailboat designs and a series of single-subject booklets on sailing.

He then borrowed $20,000 from friends to put out the first issue of Sail, an education-oriented, consumer publication.

He then introduced Motorboat, a how-to magazine, in 1973. In 1978 came Marine Business, a trade journal for boat equipment manufacturers, distributors and dealers.

"I had no publishing background and it was all figure it out as you go," Goldhirsh said. "I found myself managing a small growing company. I didn't know anything about managing a company.

"And as I read the magazines, I realized they weren't editing the magazines for people like me. I wanted to know how you build a company. You have to learn to deal with banks, with the market. It's a rocky voyage."

So, he decided to publish the very kind of magazine he himself felt he needed.

"Once you get an idea you have a very strong passion to create it. It's almost as if you don't have a choice," he said. "I did it with a feeling, a real sense of mission. I felt that the entrepreneur was sort of the artist in the world of business. They were the asset creators rather than the asset manipulators."

The magazine, targeted at businessmen whose companies have annual sales between $1 million and $25 million, was introduced in 1979.

Within two years, the "Magazine for Growing Companies" turned a profit and its average paid circulation has skyrocketed to 600,000, the company says.

Inc. says it ranks fourth behind Businessweek, Forbes and Fortune.

Goldhirsh sold his marine magazines in 1980.

The following year, his company, the Goldhirsh Group, bought High Technology, which claims 300,000 subscribers. At the end of 1984, the publisher bought World Executive's Digest, a Hong Kong business monthly magazine.

Goldhirsh has had his setbacks. His Technology Illustrated magazine failed and he was unsuccessful in a bid to buy U.S. News & World Report.

But the privately held Goldhirsh Group says it enjoys $50 million in annual revenues, which is being reinvested in the company.

Goldhirsh, who still lives in Boston, is married and has two children, also is involved in a general partnership called Claflin Capital, which places seed money in technology-oriented new businesses.

The publisher said he is heartened that entrepreneurship is enjoying a boom now.

"I find a lot of interest among young people in entrepreneurial business," he said.

And large companies are breaking themselves up into smaller units, he said. "It's easier to be creative in a smaller unit."

The surge in two-worker families has helped, too.

"There's somewhat of a safety net now that one can go out and fail because the mate or spouse can carry the ball for a while and support the family," Goldhirsh said.

In addition, "There's less obstacles for women to make a contribution in the entrepreneurship sector than in the large corporate environment."

"If the world is changing rapidly, maybe you need entrepreneurs to provide a new services," he said. "If there are needs to be filled, the entrepreneur can fill it better than anybody else."

Three programs receive fuel overcharge refunds

AUSTIN (AP) — Three conservation programs are receiving about $1.1 million in fuel overcharge refunds from producers and refiners of petroleum products, the governor says.

Producers and refiners of petroleum products who allegedly violated federal price and allocation controls in fuel overcharge and the U.S. Department of Energy agreed to the amount of the refunds, Gov. Mark White said Monday.

A settlement calls for $1,103,255 to be dispensed to the Texas Department of Community Affairs for the programs.

An Overweight Truck Enforcement Program will use nearly $700,000 for a three-part program which includes the purchase of electronic portable scales to enforce weight restrictions on commercial trucks.

The program also calls for Department of Public Safety troopers to spend more hours enforcing weight restrictions and to seek damages and injunctive relief against repeat violators of the statutory weight restrictions.

A Child Passenger Safety Seat Education Program will receive up to $134,502 for public service announcements, informational brochures and notices to parents of newborn infants.

The Energy Conservation Education Program will get up to $206,753 to educate the public on energy saving practices through brochures, workshops and by conducting energy audits.

OILTEX drilling Duval County confirmer

AUSTIN—OILTEX International, Ltd. has announced that the Forney No. 1 Gruy Estate well has been spudded in Duval County, Texas, and is currently drilling at 4,950 feet.

The new well is on a 640 acre lease adjacent to the prolific Guerra gas field which was discovered on a prospect developed by OILTEX Principals. The company hopes that this well will extend the field, which is estimated to hold proved and probable reserves in excess of 70 Bcf.

Goldhirsh: From basement to Inc. business magazine

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Goldhirsh knew little of the business when he started out in a Boston basement 15 years ago, but his fast-growing publishing empire now produces the nation's fourth-ranked business magazine — Inc.

Goldhirsh, 44, is a gentle-mannered and earnest nurturer of entrepreneurship — his own and others'.

"What children are to a society, an entrepreneur is to an economy," Goldhirsh said during a recent business trip. "Some little companies grow up and become great companies. Others don't make it to adulthood. It seems very important to me that we have a very fertile environment for that process to continue."

The elfin publisher — who has dark brown hair, is dimpled and wears round glasses — said Inc. was intended to help people who launch new ventures.

"The main thrust of the magazine was to share experiences," said the Brooklyn, N.Y. native, adding: "The magazine was to have an advocacy role, particularly in Washington," because entrepreneurs do not have the lobbying clout of large companies.

Before becoming a publisher with a calling, Goldhirsh, who graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1961, ran a high school science department.

He also ran a cultural exchange program on a school boat that visited countries in the Caribbean. And, he taught celestial navigation to sailors planning offshore voyages.

In 1967, in that Boston basement, he began publishing an annual directory of sailboat designs and a series of single-subject booklets on sailing.

He then borrowed $20,000 from friends to put out the first issue of Sail, an education-oriented, consumer publication.

He then introduced Motorboat, a how-to magazine, in 1973. In 1978 came Marine Business, a trade journal for boat equipment manufacturers, distributors and dealers.

"I had no publishing background and it was all figure it out as you go," Goldhirsh said. "I found myself managing a small growing company. I didn't know anything about managing a company.

"And as I read the magazines, I realized they weren't editing the magazines for people like me. I wanted to know how you build a company. You have to learn to deal with banks, with the market. It's a rocky voyage."

So, he decided to publish the very kind of magazine he himself felt he needed.

"Once you get an idea you have a very strong passion to create it. It's almost as if you don't have a choice," he said. "I did it with a feeling, a real sense of mission. I felt that the entrepreneur was sort of the artist in the world of business. They were the asset creators rather than the asset manipulators."

The magazine, targeted at businessmen whose companies have annual sales between $1 million and $25 million, was introduced in 1979.

Within two years, the "Magazine for Growing Companies" turned a profit and its average paid circulation has skyrocketed to 600,000, the company says.

Inc. says it ranks fourth behind Businessweek, Forbes and Fortune.

Goldhirsh sold his marine magazines in 1980.

The following year, his company, the Goldhirsh Group, bought High Technology, which claims 300,000 subscribers. At the end of 1984, the publisher bought World Executive's Digest, a Hong Kong business monthly magazine.

Goldhirsh has had his setbacks. His Technology Illustrated magazine failed and he was unsuccessful in a bid to buy U.S. News & World Report.

But the privately held Goldhirsh Group says it enjoys $50 million in annual revenues, which is being reinvested in the company.

Goldhirsh, who still lives in Boston, is married and has two children, also is involved in a general partnership called Claflin Capital, which places seed money in technology-oriented new businesses.

The publisher said he is heartened that entrepreneurship is enjoying a boom now.

"I find a lot of interest among young people in entrepreneurial business," he said.

And large companies are breaking themselves up into smaller units, he said. "It's easier to be creative in a smaller unit."

The surge in two-worker families has helped, too.

"There's somewhat of a safety net now that one can go out and fail because the mate or spouse can carry the ball for a while and support the family," Goldhirsh said.

In addition, "There's less obstacles for women to make a contribution in the entrepreneurship sector than in the large corporate environment."

"If the world is changing rapidly, maybe you need entrepreneurs to provide a new services," he said. "If there are needs to be filled, the entrepreneur can fill it better than anybody else."

Three programs receive fuel overcharge refunds

AUSTIN (AP) — Three conservation programs are receiving about $1.1 million in fuel overcharge refunds from producers and refiners of petroleum products, the governor says.

Producers and refiners of petroleum products who allegedly violated federal price and allocation controls in fuel overcharge and the U.S. Department of Energy agreed to the amount of the refunds, Gov. Mark White said Monday.

A settlement calls for $1,103,255 to be dispensed to the Texas Department of Community Affairs for the programs.

An Overweight Truck Enforcement Program will use nearly $700,000 for a three-part program which includes the purchase of electronic portable scales to enforce weight restrictions on commercial trucks.

The program also calls for Department of Public Safety troopers to spend more hours enforcing weight restrictions and to seek damages and injunctive relief against repeat violators of the statutory weight restrictions.

A Child Passenger Safety Seat Education Program will receive up to $134,502 for public service announcements, informational brochures and notices to parents of newborn infants.

The Energy Conservation Education Program will get up to $206,753 to educate the public on energy saving practices through brochures, workshops and by conducting energy audits.

Services commemorate Wallenberg disappearance

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — From Australia to Israel, services this week are marking the disappearance into Soviet hands 40 years ago of Raoul Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat who risked his life to help thousands of Hungarian Jews escape from the Nazis.

Despite claims by former prisoners that they saw or met Wallenberg in various Soviet prisons as late as a few years ago, the Soviet government has repeated its claim, first made in 1947, that the diplomat died of illness in notorious Lublyanka prison, which is near the Kremlin and the Swedish Embassy in Moscow.

Wallenberg was last seen on Jan. 17, 1945, on a mercy mission that first took him to Budapest, Hungary. The young diplomat, carrying large sums in valuables, was arrested that day by Soviet Red Army troops after their liberation of Budapest from its German occupiers.

"I don't know if I go as their guest or their prisoner," Wallenberg told a friend 40 years ago, taking only a sleeping bag, a rucksack and a briefcase when he left Budapest in his car escorted by Soviet soldiers to go see Soviet Marshal Rodeon Malinovsky and the new Hungarian government in Debrecen.

It is not know if Wallenberg ever arrived in Debrecen, some 120 miles to the east of Budapest.

On Jan. 18, 1945, a Soviet deputy foreign minister told worried Swedish officials that the Red Army "had taken measures to protect Wallenberg and his property after finding him in the street."

Wallenberg was seeking continued assistance to Hungarian Jews after the Soviet liberation of Budapest.

His efforts to save Jews had the financial backing of the U.S. State Department and Jewish agencies.

"We continually receive new information about Raoul but we have not yet been able to verify them," his sister, Nina Lagergren, told The Associated Press recently.

"We can't reveal the sources as those who have volunteered these reports may risk repercussions," she said.

Secret government files released in 1982 revealed that Wallenberg saved tens of thousands of Hungarian Jews from the hands of the Nazis during a six-month period in 1944 in Budapest, risking his life in the chaotic closing months of World War II.

Bells in the United States, Israel and Sweden were to strike 40 times, once for each year Wallenberg has been missing, organizers of commemorative servives said this week in Stockholm. Other commemorations were planned in Australia and West Germany, they said.

Stockholm planned a service in his honor in the city cathedral.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.S. to establish military ties with Mozambique

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States plans to establish military ties with Mozambique's Marxist government for the first time, reflecting what officials call steady improvement in relations between the two countries.

According to the officials, the United States expects to allocate $1 million in non-lethal military equipment for Mozambique and another $150,000 for the training of Mozambican military forces.

The type of equipment was not specified but it could include such items as uniforms and communications gear, said the officials, who insisted on anonymity.

Since winning independence from Portugal a decade ago, Mozambique has been closely aligned politically with the Soviet Union and Cuba. But President Samora Machel has been quietly bolstering his ties with the West recently.

Fires reach Melbourne

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Dozens of brush fires blazed out of control across southern Australia today, burning farmland and igniting homes in a Melbourne suburb. Authorities said five people and 30,000 head of livestock have been killed.

More than 100 people, including many firefighters, have been injured since the bulk of the fires broke out Monday, and thousands of wild animals, incliduing kangaroos and koalas, were believed to have been caught in the fast-moving flames.

Two killed in Brussels

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Two people died today when a gas explosion collapsed four houses and set two others afire, police said. Eight people were injured.

A police officer of Evere, a suburb on the northeast edge of Brussels, said the bodies were recovered from under the debris. He spoke only on condition he not be identified.

The victims were a 3-year-old child and a woman in her 50s who lived in the house where the explosion occured, he said.

Taiwan official arrested

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The deputy chief of Taiwan's military intelligence has been arrested in connection with the slaying of a Chinese-American journalist in California last year, the government said today.

The Government Information Office identified the arrested man as as Col. Chen Hu-men, deputy head of the Defense Ministry's intelligence bureau.The government on Tuesday announced the dismissal of the head of the intelligence bureau, but no reason was given for the ouster.

Henry Liu, 52, a political writer for the Chinese-language San Francisco Journal, was gunned down by three assassins in the garage of his home in Daly City, Calif., Oct. 15.

Liu was reported to have revised, shortly before his death, a muckraking biography of Taiwan's president, Chiang Ching-kuo. The slain journalist's widow, Helena, has called his killing a political assassination.

Honduras levels charges

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — U.S.-aided Nicaraguan rebels working with an intelligence battalion of the Honduran army have kidnapped and killed leftist activists in Honduras since 1980, Honduran sources close to a military investigation say.

Col. Cesar Elvir Sierra, military spokesman, said he had no comment on the allegations. Frank Arana, spokesman here for the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the rebel group allegedly involved, denied the charge.

A military commission is investigating what human rights groups here say are more than 250 unresolved killings and kidnappings since 1980.

Suicide squads prepared

LONDON (AP) — The London Times reported today that Iran has set up a special military unit to prepare suicide squads to launch terrorist attacks in countries unsympathetic to its Islamic revolutionary regime.

The newspaper said documents obtained by an Iranian opposition movement identify Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Jordan and France as prime targets.

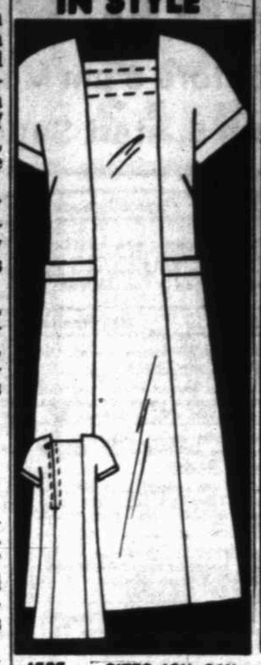

Japanese couple held

TOKYO (AP) — Police said today they had arrested a couple in Tokyo on charges of trying to extort $400,000 from Sapporo Breweries by threatening to poison its product.

Terukuni Nakano, 46, former owner of a waste water disposal company, and his common-law wife, Michiko Hiroshima, 34, threatened in a note dropped off at the brewery president's house on New Year's day to "distribute poisoned beer" unless Sapporo paid the money, a Metropolitan Police Agency spokesman said.

Has Your Newscarrier Earned The Right To Be The Midland Reporter-Telegram's CARRIER OF THE MONTH?

Judge Your Carrier On These Points—

- Delivered On-Time?
- Delivered Every Day?
- Timely Collection?
- Neat In Appearance?
- Courteous?

If you feel your Newscarrier is deserving to be Carrier-of-the-Month for these or any other reasons, please let us know. Only YOU can truly judge the quality of our service. We would appreciate YOU being the determining factor in our Carrier-of-the-Month selection.

Please return the form below after completing the comments about your Newscarrier. Let us know if your Carrier should be Carrier-of-the-Month.

If you are having a problem with delivery, we want to know that, too. Again, only YOU can attest to the quality of our delivery service to you home or business.

BEFORE YOU BUY A GERMAN IMPORT, TAKE A LOOK AT THE IMPORT GERMANS LIKE BEST.

Every year, West Germany's leading automotive journal, Auto Motor und Sport, invites its readers to vote for the world's best cars.

For each of the last three years, they've named the Saab 900 Turbo "the best imported car . . . under 2,500 cc." Each year, Saab's margin over the nearest competitor has been enormous.

Beste Limousine bis 2500 cm³ Saab 900 Turbo

Beispielsweise setzte sich der schwedische Front-triebler Saab 900 Turbo, der zu Erscheinungs-

We're deeply gratified at such high praise from drivers who constantly deal with high-speed autobahns, alpine switchbacks and $2.00-a-gallon gasoline. And we're pleased to be so highly regarded in a country that produces some of our nearest competitors.

So, if you're considering buying one of the cars that Germany exports, you should have a look first at one of the best cars Germany imports.
