Budget battles postpone campaigns

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With lawmakers rushing to wrap up business and go home to campaign for re-election, President Clinton demanded Friday that Congress finance his proposals for hiring teachers, building schools and other education initiatives.

House Republican Whip Tom DeLay countered, "The American people don't want more spending."

Appearing on the White House South Lawn, Clinton and congressional Democratic leaders accused Republicans of spending the year killing a tobacco settlement, a higher minimum wage, campaign finance law overhaul and protections for managed health-care patients.

"This budget is purely and simply a test of whether after nine months of doing nothing we are going to do the right thing about our children's future," Clinton said.

The exchange, made at separate White House and Capitol appearances, intensified the political divide between Democrats and Republicans within the shadow of the Nov. 3 congressional elections. It was likely to help candidates on both sides frame contrasts with their opponents.

But it did little to change the likelihood that both sides will end budget negotiations in a few days having completed spending bills for the new fiscal year. Instead of going home to campaign this weekend after finishing the year's legislative business, lawmakers were expected to leave sometime next week instead.

Amid the pointed rhetoric, Congress approved a stopgap measure that would keep federal employees at work through Monday night while the two sides' bud-

Spending bill target for fights over tobacco, pensions, lake

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — From multibillion-dollar fights over tobacco and military pensions to spats over a Western lake and Mississippi duck hunting, the huge spending bill taking shape in Congress is becoming a last-minute magnet for legislative prizes.

It's an age-old legislative strategy, and it usually works. If you've been unable to push a project through Congress all year, try quietly attaching it to legislation that must become law.

On Capitol Hill, such a bill is referred to as the last train leaving the station. And according to documents obtained by The Associated Press and interviews with participants, the Clinton administration and lawmakers are all vying to get something aboard.

Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., concerned about problems the armed forces are having in retaining recruits, is fighting behind the scenes to make military pensions more generous by repealing bipartisan changes made in that system in 1986. That overhaul was aimed at a system under which people about 40 years old could leave the military after 20 years of service and immediately get pen-

Boys killed

Two Midland boys, who were in-line skating on North Midland Drive Friday night, died from injuries they suffered when they were hit by a car. The boys, 8 to 13 years old, were skating in the 6200 block of North Midland Drive when they were hit, according to Tina Sanders-Jauz, Midland Police Department spokeswoman. The 28-year old driver of the car told police that she was exiting the Green Tree Country Club area at about 8:30 p.m. when she saw something come toward her, but by the time she could put on her vehicle's high beams, she had already hit the boys, Ms. Sanders-Jauz said. The woman said she was traveling south on Midland Drive and the boys were skating north in the southbound lane, Ms. Sanders-Jauz said. The names of the boys and the driver had not been released at press time.

Stabbing

A woman was stabbed at Price's Bar on the corner of Lamesa Road and Illinois Avenue late Friday night. Two women got into a fight with a third, according to Midland police. The third woman, in her mid-20s, was stabbed across the chest with a box cutter, police said. One woman is in custody and police are looking for the second. The victim was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Mini Grand Prix

Race teams will "start their engines" this morning at Midland Park Mall for the first March of Dime's Mini Grand Prix. The racing will begin at 7 a.m. near the Sears parking lot. The championship finals will be at 4 p.m., ladies championship will be at 2:45 p.m. and the children's race will be at 3:30 p.m.

Coming Sunday

It has been called the untamed land of cowboys, Indians, crooks, killers, con men, oil men, boozers,rowdies and rattlesnakes. It has been the home of flim-flam artist Billie Sol Estes, eccentric millionaire prankster Stanley Marsh and bootlegger-turned-political kingmaker Pinkie Roden. But those aren't the only famous names. Sammy Baugh, Robert Strauss, Jessica McClure, Richard McClaren, Buddy Holly, Judge Roy Bean, Candy Barr. They all lived there at one time or another.

Where might this strange place be?

Why, it's West Texas, of course.

And in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram you can read all about this unique region of America and learn more about the colorful characters who make it so special.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE CHILDREN

Gov. George W. Bush visited with students at Hays Magnet School in Odessa on Friday. He was greeted by, from left, Brittani Brown, Anjannett Gonzalez and Victor Ramos.

Gov. Bush visits Odessa to promote education agenda

ODESSA — Gov. George Bush visited Hays Magnet School on Friday as his campaign for re-election winds down.

After visiting with teachers and students, he talked to the media.

The governor became flustered when an Ector County Independent School District school board member, Delma Abalos, shouted questions are him.

Ms. Abalos interrupted the press conference to ask him what he thought about a voucher system to allow students to attend private schools with taxpayer money.

"I'll get to you," Bush said as he was surrounded by reporters. Bush's security detail moved toward Ms. Abalos.

Bush said he'd be willing to try a pilot voucher program at least once.

"I think parents ought not to be trapped in failed schools," he said. "It ought to be tied into an accountability in the state of Texas."

He approached Ms. Abalos after the conference and she continued to press him about the voucher issue.

"I believe that a voucher bill can directly hurt public education in that you're taking money away from public education to give to private schools," she said.

In the press conference, Bush said he continues to push for money for education and for reading.

He said his opponent, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Garry Mauro, is not being realistic with the state budget surplus in his promise to raise the Man at center of right-to-die battle dies after feeding tube withdrawn

By Dale Hopper
Associated Press

MANASSAS, Va. — A severely brain-damaged man at the center of a right-to-die court battle died Friday, eight days after the feeding tube keeping him alive was removed at his wife's request.

Hugh Finn, a 44-year-old former TV anchorman in Louisville, Ky., died at Annaburg Manor Nursing Home, 3 1/2 years after a car crash left him unable to eat, communicate or care for himself.

His wife, Michele Finn, had said that he had once reported on a similar case and told her he didn't want to be kept alive under such conditions.

Finn's aorta was ruptured in the 1995 crash, depriving his brain of oxygen. He was diagnosed as being in a persistent vegetative state with no chance of recovery. Under Virginia law, food and water may be withheld from such patients.

Finn's brother, John Finn, went to court to prevent Mrs. Finn from having the feeding tube removed. But a judge turned the brother down, and the family dropped its legal fight.

But the state also stepped in and sent a nurse and doctors to see Finn. The nurse reported that Finn told her "Hi," prompting Gov. Jim Gilmore to go to court in a last-minute effort to keep Finn's feeding tube from being removed.

Circuit Judge Frank Hoss Jr. ruled against Gilmore, saying it wasn't a case of mercy killing or euthanasia because removal of the tube "merely permits the natural process of dying."

The feeding tube was removed a few hours later, but a conservative state lawmaker, Delegate Robert Marshall, stepped in on Thursday, asking a federal judge to order the tube reinserted. Marshall argued that depriving Finn of food and water violates Medicaid rules. But the judge said he had no jurisdiction simply because Finn was a Medicaid patient.

After Finn's death, the Prince William County health director ordered the body taken to a Manassas funeral home for examination and Finn's medical records seized, The Washington Post reported Saturday.

Student says Supreme Court action doesn't hurt his case

By Chris Newton

TULIA — Hollister Gardner was a strait-laced, straight-A teenager when he sued his school district last year for requiring him to take a drug test to participate in the National Honor Society.

Despite a U.S. Supreme Court decision earlier this week to reject the appeal of Indiana teen-agers and their parents in a similar case, Gardner remains confident his case will eventually set a legal precedent for the nation.

"I don't think it's going to affect my case," Gardner said of Monday's Supreme Court decision. "Each district stands alone."

Gardner's case, filed in Amarillo federal court, remains on the docket and could go to trial at any time.

Gardner, who is representing himself in the lawsuit, argues that the school has no probable cause to make him take a drug test.

He also says the Supreme Court precedent on the matter, a 1995 Oregon case in which justices condoned drug-testing of student athletes, doesn't apply to other extracurricular activities.

Tulia school officials say the high court's decision not to hear the Indiana case, which involved students in all extracurricular activities, confirms their similar policy.

Tulia Superintendent Mike Vineyard said the outcome of the Indiana case could help end Gardner's heavily publicized effort.

"I hope the judge will be attentive toward the Supreme Court's intent," Vineyard said. "We feel this is clearly constitutional and within the rights of the school district."

In his lawsuit, Gardner has asked for

OBITUARIES

Dorothy Mathews

Dorothy Mathews was born July 18, 1942, in Wichita Falls, Texas, to George and Edith Burch. She had been a member of St. Luke's Methodist Church since 1962.

She is survived by her sons, Mark Mathews and his wife, Linda, of San Antonio and Jeffrey Mathews and his wife, Tricia, of The Woodlands; her brother, Kenneth Burch of Wichita Falls, Texas; five grandchildren and three nephews.

Mrs. Mathews died at a local hospital Wednesday.

Funeral services have been scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Interment will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

The family will receive friends at the home of Mrs. Mathews.

The family request memorials be directed to: American Cancer Society, 2304 Wadley Ave., Midland, Texas 79705; or Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702

Honorary pallbearers will be her grandsons, Alex Mathews, Jacob Mathews, Tyler Mathews, Robert Mathews, and Nick Mathews.

Christopher Hodges

Christopher Duwayne Hodges, only child of Cheryl Pope Hodges and first grandson of Persia Hill Pope, died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in the early hours of Friday, October 2, 1998, in Dallas, Texas.

Chris was born March 26, 1979, in Houston, Texas, and graduated from WT White High School in Dallas in the spring of 1997. He was a member of the concert band and marched in the inaugural parade in Austin at the time Goerge Bush took office as the present governor of Texas. During his attendance at WT White, he worked as a shift leader for Jack in the Box Restaurant, a service manager for Tom Thumb Food Stores and was presently employed by his uncle, Jack Pope, at Kiwi Enterprises.

Chris is predeceased by his maternal great-grandparents, Isabell Hopper Hill and Cecil Hill of Dekalb, Miss., his maternal great-aunt, Modess Hill Snodgrass of Odessa, Texas, and his paternal great-grandparents, John Oakley Pope and Data Mae Pope of Midland, Texas.

He is survived by his uncles, Rodney Lynn Pope and wife, Liza, Jack Pope and Suzanne; cousins Stevie Nicole and Hunter Little of Dallas, and Ryan Lance King Pope of Midland, Texas and Paris, France; maternal great-uncle, Cecil D. Hill and wife, Belva; cousins, Christopher and Justin Hill, all of Clarksville, Tenn., Amelia Flores, Alice S. Ybarra, Amelia Ybarra and numerous other cousins all of Dallas; paternal great-aunts, Dale Pope Stone of Odessa, Texas, Louise Pope Patterson and paternal great-uncles, Donald Pope and Tom Canton, all of Midland; great-uncle, Benny Snodgrass of Odessa; numerous cousins in Midland, Odessa and Grand Prairie, Texas; and his paternal grandfather, Ronald Lee pope of Arlington, Texas.

Christopher had many wonderful and loving friends. His best friend, Eugene Dickson, was like a brother from the early years of Gooch Grammer school in North Dallas. There are so many more friends left to cherish this wonderful boy's memory. The Big Brothers of America gave Chris a wonderful gift in Jim Bridges.

This handsome loving young man wanted all life had to offer. He was never involved in drugs, alcohol or tabacco and trusted everyone, especially himself, to do the right thing. We know not why Chris chose to leave us and trust the Lord will be with him through all eternity.

Man gets 111 years for forcing women to molest their children

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A man who bullied and beat the five women he lived with, forcing some of them to molest their children while he watched, was sentenced to 111 years in prison, the maximum punishment.

Judge Rebecca Pilshaw called David Carroll, 25, a "despicable and depraved human being who doesn't deserve the gift of the children God gave you."

She also excoriated two of the women.

"I would take a bullet for my child. I would step in front of a moving train to save my child — not just my child but your child as well," she said Thursday, nearly shouting.

Carroll was convicted Sept. 25 of charges including rape, aggravated sodomy and aggravated indecent liberties against children.

Carroll lived in a three-story house in 1997-98 with five women — his wife and her sister, his mistress and her sister, and a roommate — along with five children under 6, two of whom were his.

He raped one woman and molested three of the children himself. Two other women were alleged to have participated in the molestations.

No charges have been brought against the women. The case remains under investigation.

VISIT: Bush hasn't ruled out running for president average Texas teacher salary to the national average.

(From 1A)

Mauro has criticized Bush for not pledging to do the same. Bush said it would easily take $10 billion to fulfill the promise.

"There is $6 billion to spend," Bush said of the surplus. "He's making a promise he can't deliver on. I don't think he's being realistic at all. Both Democrats and Republicans have said this is a fellow who is making extraordinary promises that we don't have the money to pay for."

Bush said he hasn't ruled out running for president. He recently said coverage of the White House sex scandal made him wonder if he wanted to expose his family to the stress of a life in Washington, D.C.

He said he's flattered people are mentioning him as a presidential candidate.

"I attribute it to the fact that I have a famous mother," Bush quipped.

'When I was a fourth-grader going to Sam Houston Elementary, in Midland, Texas, you know what I wanted to be? I wanted to be Willie Mays.'
—Gov. George W. Bush

He said he must focus on being a good governor first.

"After we get my legislative package in place, then I'll take a good look at other jobs," he said.

Bush said he's concerned that local school districts have responded to last year's state property tax exemptions by raising their local tax rates. He said he would send at least $1 billion to local districts for teacher salaries.

"I understand local school boards have to make the hiring," he said.

He said he's continuing to stress children reading on grade level.

"I've got $203 million in my budget that's going to help every student learn to read," he said. "I've got money in my budget for building schools all the way across the state of Texas."

Bush said the state has improved markedly on national test scores since implementing its accountability system and "campus report card."

In his visit with students and teachers, he said, "I appreciate very much your leadership at Hays Magnet School," Bush said. "I want to thank all your teachers for being teachers. You can never pay a good teacher enough money."

He told the students gathered at the auditorium that he wanted them to read.

"When you can read, you realize your dream. I hope I'm looking at another governor in this room. But you won't be a governor unless you read," Bush said.

He also told the children he wanted them to stay away from drugs and stay in school and get their education.

"I don't want some older kid saying to you, drugs are cool," he said.

Some child in the audience yelled something at Bush.

"That's right, the police will come. You don't want the police to come," he said as adults in the audience smiled.

He took questions from the children.

"Your dad said to say hello?" he said to one child. "You tell him 'hi'."

One child asked him if he grow up to be governor when he was in school.

"When I was a fourth-grader going to Sam Houston Elementary, in Midland, Texas, you know what I wanted to be? I wanted to be Willie Mays. I wanted to be a major league baseball player," he said.

CONGRESS: GOP blocks effort to force debate on HMOs get bargainers continue to meet. The House vote was 421-0, Senate passage was by voice vote and Clinton signed it Friday night.

The temporary bill was needed because only two of the 13 annual spending bills for fiscal 1999, which began Oct. 1, have become law. An initial short-term measure was to expire Friday night, and neither side seemed interested in allowing the crisis atmosphere that would accompany a closure of federal offices and parks.

"There's no threat of a government shutdown," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., adding, "We'll get it done before the day is done. Maybe not this day."

Also in Congress:

■ Democrats blocked Senate debate on a $27 billion measure financing the Treasury Department and other agencies. Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., was angry over GOP deletion of language helping many federal workers get prescription contraceptives. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., was objecting because Republicans dropped an item that would help many Haitians stay permanently in the United States.

■ Disagreement emerged between House and Senate Republicans over which expiring tax credits should go into a $9.2 billion, five-year tax package.

■ Senate Republicans blocked a final Democratic effort to force a debate on expanding the rights of Americans using health maintenance organizations.

■ Despite a White House veto threat, the House voted to overhaul bankruptcy laws to make it harder for people to erase their debts. Senate prospects were unclear.

■ The Senate voted 98-0 for a bill requiring the president to act against countries that practice religious persecution. House passage and Clinton's approval were expected.

■ The Senate voted to rename the Capitol Police headquarters after Officers Jacob Chestnut and John Gibson, killed in a shootout with an intruder in July, and Christopher Eney, a Capitol Police trainee who died in a 1984 training exercise.

In his budget in February, Clinton proposed a stack of education measures, about which Congress has done little. These include his proposals for $1.1 billion to hire additional elementary school teachers, $5 billion to help communities issue bonds for classroom construction, $260 million for a new program aimed at helping children learn to read.

"This Republican Congress is apparently where education initiatives go to die," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

GOP education proposals have instead featured proposals such as taxpayer-paid vouchers so low-income students can go to private schools and tax breaks to parents saving for their children's education.

"It boils down again to the money," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas. "They want to take this surplus and spend it and obviously in the end that's where we are going to have a big, big argument."

As it became clear that negotiations would last beyond the weekend, House Republicans met privately and agreed they would not go home for the Columbus Day weekend and its rich schedule of political events.

"Obviously, I'd rather be home," said Rep. Linda Smith, R-Wash., who is running for the Senate. "But obviously, we have to get this done."

Lawmakers bargaining over some lesser issues continued reporting progress. One participant said agreement was likely on $250 million to $300 million for the Legal Services Corp., which provides legal help for the poor. Clinton had wanted $340 million, but the House was initially willing to provide just $141 million.

Congressional leaders and administration officials met sporadically through the day at the Capitol, but were still divided over many major issues. These included disagreements over how the 2000 census will be conducted and whether to help 40,000 Haitians become permanent U.S. residents.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., said bargainers were "virtually done" with a pact that would provide the $18 billion Clinton wants for the International Monetary Fund, along with strict new rules for how the agency helps nations right their struggling economies.

BILL: About $360 million wanted to pay poultry exporters sions worth half their salaries while holding other jobs.

Murtha, a former Marine and ranking Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee's national security subcommittee, says going back to the old system would cost $12 billion over six years. Critics say it would cost far more.

"It's a lot of money," Murtha said. "But you're losing your people."

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, is trying to attach language that would prevent the federal government from grabbing a large share of the settlements a handful of states — including Texas — have reached with the tobacco industry.

At stake is billions of dollars tobacco companies have agreed to repay some states for Medicaid costs caused by smoking. Hutchison wants to limit the federal government's share to the $1.7 billion that it would collect five years from now. With the federal government generally financing around 50 percent of each state's Medicaid program, critics say the $1.7 billion is too low.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is seeking language ensuring that Lake Powell, straddling Arizona and Utah, will not be drained, as some Western environmentalists would like so the canyon that once existed there would be restored. The lake, created by the Glen Canyon Dam, is used for recreation while the dam is a power source for parts of the rural West.

And Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., is pushing a number of items.

One would allow Mississippi to push its duck-hunting season later into the year because now it is so early that "the ducks aren't there," Lott said in an interview.

Lott said he resorted to legislation in the long-running dispute with the Interior Department after he allowed the Senate to confirm an assistant secretary of that department with the understanding that the duck-hunting change would then be allowed.

The department balked anyway, he said; hence, the need for the legislation — which Lott emphasized would also affect Arkansas, President Clinton's home state.

Other items lawmakers are seeking include:

■ About $360 million Lott and Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., want to repay U.S. exporters of poultry and other products that have been shipped to Russia but have not been delivered because the importer there cannot pay for them. Mississippi is one of the bigger chicken producing states, and Gulfport, Miss., is a major port for shipping them overseas.

■ $6 million Lott wants for a public health program run by Georgetown University, of which $2 million would go to a branch of the program at the University of Southern Mississippi.

■ About $500,000 Lott wants to help repair the Archusa Dam in Mississippi.

■ $6 million Sen. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., wants to help start the Robert J. Dole Institute for Public Service and Public Policy at the University of Kansas in Lawrence. Dole, the 1996 Republican presidential nominee and former Senate majority leader, is from Kansas.

■ A $2 billion a year renewal of aviation grant programs, including permission for additional daily flights at Ronald Reagan National Airport in Washington and O'Hare airport in Chicago. The grants are popular, but so far, the House has balked at allowing the extra flights.

■ $102 million extra the Clinton administration wants for Army Corps of Engineers projects.

DRUGS: Gardner's sister had filed separate lawsuit compensation for being kept out of school activities, but he doesn't specify how much he is seeking.

The school district bases its drug policy on a 1996 U.S. Supreme Court ruling against a student football player in Vernonia, Ore., who refused to participate in drug testing. Tulia has simply expanded the testing to all extracurricular activities.

In his lawsuit, Gardner wrote that a major difference between Vernonia and Tulia is the Oregon school had drug problems known to be centered in athletics. Tulia, Gardner says, does not.

Vineyard sees no such distinction.

Although drug use in Tulia schools hasn't gone up in the 11 years Vineyard has been in charge, he believes the policy is eessential in dissuading students from drugs. Tulia is a town of about 5,100 people 66 miles north of Lubbock.

Gardner's father, the only Tulia school board member who opposed the testing policy, said the Supreme Court might be waiting for a better case before setting a precedent.

Monday's action does not preclude the possibility that the court will someday spell out more definitively the bounds of permissible drug testing.

"I've got a kid that's taking em' on," said Gary Gardner. "I think my boy has a strong chance of having his case go all the way. It is better-argued and there is more substance to it."

Hollister Gardner's sister, who goes to a different school in the Tulia district, has filed a separate challenge to the drug policy.

Her attorney, Jim Harrington, said the district is clearly ignoring students' constitutional rights.

"There is no probable cause in that there is no drug culture at this high school," Harrington said. "The school board decided that it would take this as a chance to teach kids about drug use but what they're teaching them is that the school has no respect for the Fourth Amendment."

Some Heinz baby food recalled over high lead levels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents nationwide who bought certain varieties of Heinz baby food are being warned about the possibility it may contain elevated levels of lead.

Heinz U.S.A. voluntarily recalled two varieties of baby food that were manufactured last year: 4-ounce jars of Heinz Vegetable Chicken Dinner and 2.5-ounce jars of Heinz Beginner Strained Carrots. Their product codes are P3117WB and P31176N respectively.

The recall, announced Friday night, inludes about 300,000 jars of baby food that were made on the same day in November 1997. Heinz officials said the source of the lead was a shipment of carrots from a supplier.

While most of the product has probably been consumed, Heinz officials said the traces of lead pose little health risk. Consumers can call Heinz at 1-800-782-8408 for additional information.

Ex-general named foreign minister, to head peace talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — After 15 years of disgrace and painstaking attempts at political rehabilitation, Ariel Sharon returned Friday to the center of power as Israel's new foreign minister.

The burly former general and war hero with a deep distrust of the Arabs is in charge of negotiating Israel's final borders with the Palestinians.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who once tried to keep Sharon out of his Cabinet altogether, made the appointment with his back to the wall. Netanyahu is under heavy U.S. pressure to conclude a deal on a West Bank pullback at next week's Mideast summit in Washington, but knows that hard-liners in his coalition may topple him if he does.

By signing up Sharon — who still refuses to shake Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's hand — Netanyahu assures the stability of his government. The 70-year-old Sharon is the only Cabinet hawk with enough clout to lead or stifle a right-wing revolt.

Netanyahu had been acting foreign minister since moderate David Levy vacated the post in January. Netanyahu described Sharon as the "most suitable" replacement, addressing his past by saying: "We shouldn't deal with bygones."

Hanan Krystal, a political commentator for Israel radio, said that in return for the appointment, Sharon may have had to agree to cooperate with Netanyahu in securing a troop redeployment deal.

Palestinian reaction to the appointment was guarded. When asked about Sharon's new role, Arafat said only: "It's up to them."

AP photo

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, right, looks at a map as he listens to Minister Ariel Sharon explain his proposed West Bank redeployment at the settlement in the West Bank in this 1997 file photo. Netanyahu appointed Sharon as Israel's foreign minister Friday, placing him in charge of the negotiations with Palestinians on a permanent peace agreement.

For the portly Sharon, whose style of political maneuvering has been likened to a bulldozer, the appointment caps a slow political comeback from the dark days in 1983 when he was forced to step down as defense minister.

At the time, an Israeli tribunal looking into the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon found he was indirectly responsible for a massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees at the Beirut camps of Sabra and Shatilla by Christian Lebanese militiamen.

The brilliant military tactician found himself disgraced and forced to abandon hopes of ever becoming prime minister. Over the next decade, he held only second-string portfolios, including infrastructure minister in the Netanyahu government.

Still, even in minor posts, his impact was always felt.

As housing minister from 1990-92, he presided over the biggest construction drive in Jewish settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip since Israel captured the lands in the 1967 Mideast war.

Trying to clear his name, Sharon filed two libel suits and gave countless lectures in which he defended his invasion of Lebanon — widely seen here as Israel's first war of choice that needlessly claimed the lives of hundreds of Israeli soldiers.

Among Palestinians, Sharon is reviled for waging war against PLO guerrillas, for Sabra and Shatilla and for the land grab in what the Palestinians see as their future state. However, many Palestinians also believe that once he negotiates a deal he will keep it, unlike Netanyahu who is not considered a man of his word.

Palestinian negotiator Nabil Shaath said that "what is important is the policy, not the personalities."

In his first assignment as foreign minister, Sharon will accompany Netanyahu to Thursday's summit at Wye Plantation outside Washington.

President Clinton hopes several days of intensive talks between Netanyahu and Arafat finally will produce agreement on an Israeli troop pullback from 13 percent of the West Bank in exchange for a Palestinian crackdown on Islamic militants.

If a deal is reached at the secluded conference center, Netanyahu is ready to immediately start talks on a permanent peace agreement that would set Israel's final borders with the Palestinians and determine the future of Jerusalem and the Jewish settlements.

Clinton's legal troubles could fill a law textbook

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's potential problems range far beyond the House impeachment inquiry. Prosecutor Kenneth Starr is still at work. There's no settlement with Paula Jones.

And if an independent counsel is appointed to investigate campaign fund raising, the president could well fall within the scope of the inquiry.

Clinton's legal worries could fill a law school textbook. And new ones keep cropping up.

For example, one of his private attorneys, Robert Bennett, had to inform a federal judge recently in the Jones lawsuit not to rely on what Bennett told the court last Jan. 17 when he introduced Monica Lewinsky's affidavit denying a sexual relationship with the president.

Clinton affirmed Ms. Lewinsky's affidavit as accurate when Bennett showed it to him during testimony. But now Ms. Lewinsky has acknowledged the affidavit wasn't true, and Clinton has admitted to having intimate contact with her.

"Pursuant to our professional responsibility, we wanted to advise you that the court should not rely on Ms. Lewinsky's affidavit or remarks of counsel characterizing that affidavit," Bennett wrote the court in a Sept. 30 letter disclosed this week.

Bennett and Mrs. Jones' lawyers continue to work on a possible settlement of her sexual harassment claim against the president. And U.S. District Judge Susan Webber Wright has hinted she could find Clinton in contempt of court for misleading testimony back in January.

The legal system has "more-than-adequate means to deal with lying because if you get caught lying, the price of the case goes way up," former Iran-Contra prosecutor John Douglass said.

In the Jones lawsuit, "Clinton is talking upwards of a million dollars for a bottom-of-the-barrel civil case and that's one of the ways the civil justice system appropriately reacts," said Douglass, a University of Richmond law professor.

Adding to the pressure to settle the case, Wright this week ordered the release of additional documents from the case starting Oct. 19. And an appeals court is set to hear arguments that same week on whether to reinstate the lawsuit that Wright dismissed.

Clinton has offered $700,000 to settle. Mrs. Jones is seeking $1 million. A New York developer is offering $1 million of his own money to induce the parties to settle. But so far, there's no deal.

Even if the case is settled, Douglass says Wright could still find Clinton in contempt of court.

Meanwhile, Starr's investigation hasn't closed shop despite sending a report to Congress last month citing 11 possible grounds for impeaching the president.

The rancor between Starr and the Clinton camp erupted anew Friday as the prosecutor issued a stinging response to an allegation by a lawyer representing the White House that Starr had misled a federal appeals court. Starr accused the lawyer who made the allegation, W. Neil Eggleston, of "misrepresenting the facts."

Eggleston said Starr on June 29 led the court to believe that no impeachment report was being contemplated. Starr sought judicial approval for an impeachment report a few days after the appeals court argument. Starr noted Friday that he had told the court his office was required under the law to report potentially impeachable offenses to Congress.

The grand jury that Starr used to investigate the Lewinsky matter met twice this week. Rather than questioning witnesses, Starr's prosecutors spent Tuesday and Thursday presenting evidence to the 23-member panel.

Grand jury sessions without witnesses could signal different things: Starr is wrapping up work, indictments are coming or prosecutors are delving into other areas.

"I cannot foreclose the possibility of providing the House of Representatives with additional substantial and credible information arising from these investigations," Starr wrote Congress this week in a letter that left Clinton supporters with a chill.

House Democrats starting to feel heat on the campaign trail

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — This should be a no-sweat situation for House Democrats, seeking re-election at a time when voters are happy with an economy that is still humming. Yet, many are feeling the heat.

Republicans are determined to sink their claws into increasingly conservative districts held by Democrats. Swamping incumbents with outside money and linking them to President Clinton, Republicans hope to pad their House majority by 20 or more seats.

Democrats say a small gain or loss is more likely Nov. 3. "The Republicans have a long history of inflating and distorting projections," said Dan Sallick of the Democratic House campaign committee.

Still, the GOP leadership is after the hides of lawmakers like Bob Etheridge and David Price, moderate Democrats serving adjoining districts in the Raleigh-Durham area. Both are favored to win re-election but it won't be easy: Etheridge has the harder district, Price the tougher opponent.

"They are in the second tier we hope to get to," said Rep. John Linder, R-Ga., chairman of the Republican House campaign committee.

"They're on the bubble, along with a few others," said Democratic Party Chairman Roy Romer, governor of Colorado.

Until the president admitted his affair with Monica Lewinsky, Republican leaders were predicting a gain of 10 to 15 seats in the House. If Price and Etheridge lose, it would signal an election night wave that could sweep 20 to 30 Democrats out of office.

Republicans currently hold 228 seats, Democrats 206 and there is one independent.

Substantial GOP gains on Nov. 3 would deepen the president's peril in impeachment proceedings and could cement the party's majority power for years.

The list of other Democrats riding the bubble include David Minge of Minnesota, Bart Stupak of Michigan, Charles Stenholm of Texas, Robert Cramer of Alabama, Bart Gordon of Tennessee, Julia Carson of Indiana and John LaFalce of New York.

Vic Snyder of Arkansas would give Republicans an additional symbolic victory: He is Clinton's congressman.

The campaigns of Price and Etheridge reflect the state of play in many of these other second-tier races. Turnout, for example, will sink or save the incumbents.

Price had that in mind when he voted against the GOP resolution for an open-ended impeachment inquiry Thursday. About 20 percent of his district is black, and polls suggest that minorities support Clinton and would be less likely to vote if their Democratic member of Congress sided with the GOP on impeachment.

Price's Republican opponent, Tom Roberg, was in a studio first thing Friday morning taping a new radio ad: "Congressman Price stood up for Bill Clinton and voted against an impeachment inquiry ... .," Roberg says in the ad.

Actually, Price voted for an impeachment inquiry — a limited model pushed by House Democrats to give them political cover. "Good point," Roberg said in an interview Friday, blushing when a reporter cornered him. "Do we have to recut the tape?"

Judging by his hearty laugh, the answer is no. "A limited inquiry is equivalent to no inquiry," he said later.

Etheridge voted with Republicans on the resolution. His district, which Bob Dole won in 1996, is slightly more conservative than Price's. Clinton backers told Etheridge to vote against the president if it would save his seat.

The decision may keep some black voters home. "What Clinton has done is done," said voter Yolanda Stewart, 26. "Leave him alone."

Etheridge is relying on an aggressive get-out-the-vote operation. Any white resident who voted in 1996 — but not in the low-turnout 1994 elections — can expect two mailings and two phone calls from the campaign. A black voter with a similar record will get three calls and at least one piece of mail.

Jim Duffy, a Washington-based Democratic consultant, said his party shouldn't lose more than five or six seats. Most incumbents will be safe unless the party's voters stay home, he said.

"What has to happen is, we have abysmal turnout, then a lot of big oak trees will fall," he said.

Incumbents generally raise more money than challengers, but the national GOP is helping opponents like Roberg and Page. Linder's committee has donated $68,000 to each of the North Carolina hopefuls, the maximum allowed under law.

The committee also has a $25 million national TV ad campaign. It includes new spots designed to inoculate Page, Roberg and other Republicans against traditional Democratic attacks on education and Social Security.

If those subjects are taken off the table, Clinton may be the only issue left in the North Carolina races, Republicans say. Page's new TV ads declare, "Character does count."

After the August free-fall in the wake of the quickening Clinton investigation, Democrats regained their footing by portraying Republican handling of the impeachment inquiry as partisan. Polls show the party's base is more interested in the elections, giving Democrats like Price and Etheridge reason to hope that the power of incumbency can save them.

As his opponent raced to the radio studio, Price rushed out a news release Friday to announce $900,000 in environmental grants for the district.

"Incumbency, a decent economy and so on are certainly going to help Price and Etheridge," said Ferrel Guillory, a University of North Carolina political scientist.

Pollster Neil Newhouse, who represents Republicans throughout the country, agreed that the "playing field has leveled off a little bit over the last three weeks."

"However, that still doesn't mean you can call these guys safe incumbents," he said.

Attack in Wyoming leaves gay man near death; 4 arrested

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — A gay University of Wyoming student was beaten, burned and tied to a wooden ranch fence like a scarecrow until a passerby found him a half-day later, near death.

Police arrested two men and two women. Police Cmdr. Dave O'Malley said that robbery was the chief motive but that the victim was chosen in part because he is gay and that the defendants made anti-gay remarks after the attack.

The victim, Matthew Shepard, 22, told friends he had suffered two other beatings recently that he attributed to his open homosexuality.

Some fellow students said they had no doubt the latest beating was also a hate crime.

"That has to do with the fact this is a cowboy place. People aren't exposed to it. They're too close-minded," said Alicia Alexander, a college sophomore.

Shepard was found Wednesday evening by a man on a bicycle who at first thought he was a scarecrow or a dummy because of how he was tied to the fence.

He was unconscious, and his skull had been smashed with a handgun. He also appeared to have suffered burns on his body and cuts on his head and face. The temperature had dropped into the low 30s during the more than 12 hours Shepard was left outside.

He was in critical condition Friday on a respirator at Poudre Valley Hospital in Fort Collins, Colo.

"He's a small person with a big heart, mind and soul that someone tried to beat out of him," said his uncle, R.W. Eaton. "Right now, he's in God's hands."

Russel Arthur Henderson, 21, and Aaron McKinney, whose age was not immediately available, were charged Friday with attempted murder, kidnapping and robbery. They were ordered held on $100,000 cash bond.

Chasity Vera Pasley, 20, a student, waived her arraignment and was ordered held on $30,000 cash bond on accessory charges. Kristen Leann Price, 18, was expected to be charged as an accessory next week.

Police accused the two men of luring the victim from the Fireside bar, a campus hangout, by telling him they were gay.

O'Malley said the three drove off in McKinney's truck late Tuesday or early Wednesday. He said the two men beat Shepard in the truck, then beat him some more after tying him to the fence about a mile outside Laramie. They took his wallet and shoes, O'Malley said.

Later, the two young women helped the men dump their bloody clothing, O'Malley said. He said the two men made anti-gay remarks to the two women, who told police about the crime.

Laramie, with a population of 27,000, is a Western-tinged college town about 50 miles west of Cheyenne, Wyoming's capital. It is nestled in a valley between the Snowy Range Mountains and the Laramie Range, and its downtown is dotted by small restaurants and shops selling crafts and Western wear.

Shepard spent some of his time growing up in Casper but studied around the world and had recently lived in Denver. His parents live in Saudi Arabia, where his father works as an oil rig safety inspector. They were on their way to Fort Collins.

"It's really hard to be gay and live in Wyoming because of the good-ol'-boy network. It's such a conservative state," said Kete Blonigen, a college junior. "I'm almost afraid and expecting someone to say, 'He was gay. What does it matter?' I can totally see that happening."

Efforts to pass hate-crime legislation in Wyoming have failed repeatedly because critics have said it would give homosexuals special rights. In the past three years, Wyoming lawmakers also have unsuccessfully tried to pass legislation banning same-sex marriages.

"More rural states are known for having a less tolerant, more aggressively hateful political structure and social structure," said Lester Olmstead-Rose, executive director of Community United Against Violence, a gay rights group in San Francisco. "If there's a feeling that you can get away with it, you might just try."

Report: Doctors transfer genes from egg to egg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers have used a gene transfer technique similar to the one used to clone Dolly the Sheep in the hopes of impregnating infertile women. If successful, the technique would, in effect, produce a baby with two genetic mothers.

The new laboratory method pioneered by doctors at New York University combines the genes from the egg of an infertile woman with an egg donated by a second woman who is fertile. Then the recombinant egg is fertilized with sperm provided by a father and the resulting embryo is transplanted into the infertile woman's womb, The Washington Post reported today.

It is not human cloning, scientists said today, although it borrows cloning technology to produce the embryo.

The method was not tested on animals prior to being tried in a pair of infertile women. A baby that might result such a high-tech union would carry genes from two women, raising questions of which woman is the mother, or both.

Some medical ethicists described the research as risky and "profoundly disturbing," but typical of the fast-paced and loosely regulated field of reproductive medicine.

"It's like driving down a road with no speed limits and asking if a person is driving too fast," said R. Alta Charo, professor of law and medical ethics at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. She serves on the National Bioethics Advisory Committee, which is investigating human cloning.

"There is no standard of practice here, and children could be conceived by this technology that is not well tested," Charo said.

The NYU researchers have tried the procedure on two infertile women so far with uncertain results. It failed in the first patient, who is 47; the second patient, age 44, is not scheduled for a pregnancy test until next week. Their names were withheld for privacy reasons.

Dr. Jamie Grifo of NYU described the process on Thursday at the annual meeting of the American Society for Reproductive Medicine in San Francisco.

Grifo and other members of his research team refused interview requests today.

The university's scientific review panel has approved Grifo's use of the procedure on up to five women.

In remarks reported by the Post, Grifo said he recognized the ethical implications of the experiment. He said his team does not have sources of private funding and a ban on federal funding of embryo research — a consequence of the nation's ongoing abortion debate — made animal experiments impossible.

"There are a lot of concerns about this. A lot of issues," Grifo told the Post. "It's not like we did this thoughtlessly."

The method is not actually cloning because it would not produce a genetic replica of a sole parent.

The technique follows the Dolly method of inserting the DNA from one cell into a single-cell egg for implantation. However, Dolly was created from the genetic material of an adult body cell provided by its mother, rather than combining genetic material from two different eggs.

It also marks the first time that significant amounts of DNA were mixed from two women into a single egg.

The procedure also raises kinship concerns among ethicists.

The infertile woman would be considered the child's biological mother because the embryo carries mostly her genes from the inserted nuclear.

But the donor's healthy egg also contains a fluid called cytoplasm, which surrounds the egg. Cytoplasm contains specific genes called mitochondrial genes.

Mitochondrial genes do not determine the appearance and other physical characteristics of a baby. But they play an important role in a person's metabolism. Problems with mitochondrial genes also may be implicated in Alzheimer's, Parkinson's and other neurological illnesses.

Grifo said he believes the infertile woman would be considered the biological mother of a child created by the NYU method because its genes would largely reflect that woman's genetic contribution.

However, the method is close enough to human cloning that it probably would be illegal to perform in California and other states with broadly written cloning laws.

Mitochondrial experiments have been conducted at other fertility labs with limited success. At the Saint Barnabas Institute for Reproductive Medicine in Livingston, N.J., researchers injected the cytoplasm donated by fertile women into the eggs of infertile women prior to in vitro fertilization.

Weston indicted in killing of two Capitol policemen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury charged Russell E. Weston Jr. on Friday with murdering two policemen and attempting to murder another at the U.S. Capitol last summer.

Weston, 41, who has a 20-year history of mental illness, was indicted on two counts of murder, one count of attempted murder and three counts of using a pistol during a violent crime. He could face the death penalty.

"It's definitely not a surprise," said Barry Boss, an assistant public defender representing Weston.

An arraignment was set for Wednesday, at which time the defense may begin unfurling an insanity defense. Weston was diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic years ago.

Capitol Police Officers Jacob J. Chestnut and John Gibson died of gunshots from a .38-caliber Smith & Wesson revolver fired by Weston during the July 24 incident, prosecutors say. A tourist, Angela Dickerson, 24, of Chantilly, Va., was slightly wounded.

Weston remains in custody without bond, hospitalized with gunshot wounds he received from Gibson, who blocked Weston's entry into a suite of offices occupied by Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Texas, the House majority whip.

The incident began when Weston burst through a metal detector at a door on the East Front of the Capitol. According to prosecutors, he killed Chestnut there with an execution-style shot to the back of the head as the officer was writing out directions for a tourist.

From that point, Weston ran down a first-floor Capitol hallway, where he fired on Capitol Police Officer Douglas B. McMillan before ducking through a doorway and confronting Gibson, prosecutors have said. The shots Weston allegedly fired at McMillan were the basis for the attempted murder count in the bare-bones, four-page indictment.

On Sept. 23, bandaged and appearing frightened, Weston was pushed into a federal courtroom in a wheelchair for his first appearance before a judge since the shootings. He was there to answer one federal murder charge, covering the deaths of both officers.

He did not enter a plea, although he could have done so, and neither his lawyers nor prosecutors raised the potentially central issue of Weston's mental status. The defendant said he understood the charge against him. Afterward, Weston's lawyers declined to discuss their legal strategy.

But a team of defense psychiatrists has been authorized to visit Weston, and their evaluations likely would form the basis for any insanity claim. Prosecutors have lined up their own doctors, but they have not yet been allowed to visit Weston.

Weston, whose family lives in Valmeyer, Ill., near St. Louis, remains under guard in a locked ward at D.C. General Hospital, where he has weathered at least five surgical operations. At last month's court appearance, he was still unable to walk, defense lawyer A.J. Kramer said.

Over a period of years, Weston wrote frequent letters to government agencies, complaining about grievances such as his belief that land mines were planted on the grounds of his Montana cabin, court papers show. He once drove up to the guard hut outside CIA headquarters and delivered a rambling discourse on President Clinton, Marilyn Monroe and cloning, government court filings have said.

Prosecutors have offered no suspected motive for the shootings.

If Weston and his lawyers make an issue of his sanity at next Wednesday's arraignment, Weston would likely be ordered to undergo a preliminary review by government doctors at a federal prison hospital.

Eventually, a judge would have to decide whether Weston is competent to understand a trial and whether he understood the difference between right and wrong at the time of the shootings.

Weston's parents testified before the grand jury in August. They have spoken about their son's 20-year history of mental illness and his fear of the government.

Unabomber's family: Reward should go to victims, not IRS

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The family of confessed Unabomber Theodore Kaczynski want to give his victims the $1 million they received for turning him in — without deducting the one-third or so the government plans to take in taxes. They're asking Congress to intervene.

"We would like every penny to go to help the people who were injured by my brother's crimes," said David Kaczynski.

The family pledged to donate the reward, after taxes and attorney's fees, to the victims and their families. But unless Congress enacts special legislation, the family will have to hand over $300,000 or more of the money to the Internal Revenue Service next year.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., has introduced a bill to exempt the reward from federal taxes. New York Reps. Amo Houghton, a Republican, and Democrat Michael McNulty, both members of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee, have similar legislation pending in the House.

With lawmakers hurrying to wrap up this year's session, chances were slim the exemption would be taken up this weekend. But Houghton said he was optimistic about next year.

"The critical thing is that it happens before April 15," he said. "It's a worthy cause. I can't imagine anybody not voting for this."

Theodore Kaczynski was sentenced in May to spend the rest of his life in prison for attacks that left three dead and 22 others injured.

David Kaczynski, a social worker who lives in Schenectady, N.Y., first raised suspicions about his brother, a hermit living in the Montana backcountry, and alerted the FBI after noting similarities between Theodore's letters and the Unabomber's published "manifesto."

When he turned in his brother, David said, he wasn't aware the Justice Department had offered the $1 million reward.

In recent months, David Kaczynski and his family have tried to come to terms with turning in Theodore and with the damage he did.

"This would be the last piece of work that we want to accomplish," David said of giving away the reward money. "It would certainly help us to feel we've done what we can for those who suffered."

House passes bankruptcy overhaul bill; Clinton may veto

'Congress is sending a strong message that no one should be allowed to act irresponsibly and simply wash their hands of the consequences.'
— House Majority Leader Dick Armey

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House passed legislation to overhaul bankruptcy laws Friday and make it tougher for people to erase their debts. But Senate prospects were murky, and the White House renewed its veto threat.

Racing toward the end of Congress' session, the House voted 300-125, with Democrats split and Republicans in solid support.

Alarmed by the rising tide of personal bankruptcies in a strong economy, lawmakers in both houses have been pushing for a crackdown on perceived abuses of bankruptcy court protection. The number of Americans filing personal bankruptcies last year jumped to almost 1.4 million, up more than 300 percent since 1980.

"Congress is sending a strong message that no one should be allowed to act irresponsibly and simply wash their hands of the consequences, leaving others to pay the price," said House Majority Leader Dick Armey. "If the president vetoes this bill, he is endorsing irresponsibility."

Big credit card companies, notably Visa and MasterCard, and retail business groups have lobbied intensely for stringent legislation. The companies have said their losses from forgiven debts have forced them to raise interest rates for consumers who handle credit responsibly.

Democratic opponents have denounced the measure as a sell-out to the credit card companies, and the banks that control them, that would plunge financially strapped people and families into debt for the rest of their lives. They insist that the credit card networks share the blame for mounting debt by aggressively mailing millions of solicitations to hook consumers.

"This legislation has been written by and for the big banks and the credit card industry," said Rep. Jerrold Nadler, D-N.Y., a long-standing critic.

Prospects were much less clear in the Senate, where GOP backers of the legislation have taken a more temperate approach than their House counterparts to making debtors shoulder responsibility. Talks between White House officials and Senate backers to seek a veto-proof compromise broke down Friday morning, and it wasn't immediately clear whether the Senate, which began debating the bill Friday evening, would vote on the measure before lawmakers adjourned for the year.

Even with such a huge margin of House support for the bill, Congress' imminent adjournment means it would have little chance to override a presidential veto.

The Clinton administration supports changes in bankruptcy laws but prefers the more moderate Senate approach over the House-passed version.

White House officials reaffirmed the veto threat and charged that the legislation as written favors credit card companies at the expense of families, especially single mothers. They cited a provision requiring full payment of credit card-account cash advances exceeding $250 that were taken within 90 days of filing bankruptcy.

That puts debt owed to credit card companies in unfair competition with payments such as child support, alimony, taxes and student loan installments, said White House Budget Director Jacob Lew.

The bill does give top priority to child support and alimony payments in bankruptcy cases, putting them ahead of credit card debt and other obligations, but Democrats fear that debtors still would be intimidated by more powerful commercial creditors.

The legislation, drafted by House and Senate negotiators in days of closed-door meetings, reconciles sharply different House and Senate bills.

Under the current bill, bankruptcy judges would be allowed to determine case-by-case a debtor's ability to repay. But in addition, an IRS standard would be used to estimate living expenses and calculate whether the payback could be 25 percent or more in three years, in which case the debtor would be forced into a Chapter 13 reorganization plan.

Under Chapter 13 of the bankruptcy code, people must repay their debts according to a court-ordered plan. Credit card companies complain that too many people take shelter under the more lenient Chapter 7, which erases debts, when they could afford to restructure debts under Chapter 13.

Senate Democrats try to revive health-care debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats made a last-minute attempt Friday to revive a politically charged debate over managed health care.

Republicans blocked the attempt and accused Democrats of grandstanding to voters dissatisfied over managed health care programs.

The motion by Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., to revive a "Patient Bill of Rights" proposal, intended to protect patients from cost-conscious health care plans, came as the Senate raced to vote on legislation to keep the government running.

Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., said Democrats were "just trying to play politics — they're not interested in passing good legislation."

But Democrats said they were forced to such "extreme measure" because Republicans have barred them from taking up an issue that Americans want addressed.

"They have effectively gagged the United States Senate from being able to debate it, just as so many of the HMOs gag their doctors," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. "The Republicans were quite prepared to put the profits of the industry ahead of the interest of the patients."

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said Republicans tried to debate the issue several times during the summer, but Democrats rejected the efforts.

Judge certifies black farmers as class in discrimination lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that black farmers suing the Agriculture Department for discrimination are a class, clearing the way for thousands of farmers to join the multibillion-dollar lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman issued the 26-page ruling just days before a scheduled status hearing on the case. He defined the class as black farmers who filed discrimination complaints with USDA between January 1983 and Feb. 21, 1997.

The trial is scheduled for Feb. 1, 1999.

"The court concludes that the class action vehicle is the most appropriate mechanism for resolving the issue of liability in this case," Friedman wrote.

Alexander Pires, the lead attorney for the black farmers, estimated the class could be as large as 4,000, almost 10 percent of the 50,000 black farmers in the country in 1983.

Black farmer advocates cheered the ruling as a breakthrough in their $3 billion lawsuit, which claims discrimination through denial of farm loans, crop subsidies and other benefits.

"Judge Friedman has come out and ... basically saying if you're the greatest, strongest federal agency you're not above the law and if you're the weakest minority farmer, you're not below the law," said Sam Taylor, a spokesman for the more than 600 black farmers now involved in the lawsuit.

John Boyd, president of the National Black Farmers Association, said, "This puts us in the driving seat. It would be to the government's best interest to go ahead and come to the table and settle this."

Tom Amontree, spokesman for Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, said the secretary has wanted all along to "resolve this painful issue as quickly as possible, ensuring that those with legitimate claims are justly compensated."

"If today's ruling helps move that ball forward, that's a good thing," Amontree said.

The lawsuit was filed last year, shortly after the Agriculture Department admitted its own process of resolving discrimination complaints had been in disarray and caused a huge backlog of cases. USDA has acknowledged there was past discrimination.

Just last week, the agency's own inspector general issued a report saying the civil rights office, which handles discrimination complaints, remains in "disarray" with a significant backlog.

Roger Viadero, the inspector general, recommended stripping the civil rights office of its jurisdiction and creating an outside task force to deal with the problem. Glickman chose instead to create a task force from within the department but promised to deal with the problem.

"In certifying the class, the judge recognized that this is a nationwide problem," said Rep. Bennie Thompson, D-Miss. "Now we can get relief for all those persons who have been discriminated against by the Department of Agriculture."

The judge's ruling comes as a provision waiving the statute of limitations for black farmers makes its way through Congress. The waiver is attached to the agriculture spending bill and could be passed sometime this weekend.

"It's a big victory," said Pires. "The black farmers are looking forward to trial."

Nutrition bill passes House, goes to Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would expand and renew various nutrition programs aimed at poor women and children was approved Friday by the House and now heads to the White House.

The measure, supported by the Clinton administration, was approved by a 422-1 vote. The Senate passed it by voice vote Sept. 17.

Under the bill, an after-school program that serves free snacks to children up to age 13 would be expanded to teens as old as 18 in hopes of keeping unsupervised teen-agers out of trouble.

The legislation also would authorize a 3-year pilot breakfast program to evaluate the effect of free breakfasts on a child's academic achievement, attendance and tardiness.

The current school breakfast program is available only to poor children, but some of them don't take advantage of it due to the stigma attached. Under the pilot program, certain states could get money to provide breakfast to all students, regardless of income.

Hatcher extension

DALLAS — The Dallas Stars announced Friday a four-year contract extension with team captain and defenseman Derian Hatcher.

Hatcher is now under contract with the club through the 2002-2003 season at a price of $18.6 million.

The 26-year-old Hatcher, 6-foot-5 and 225 pounds, is an anchor in the Stars' defense. He has been with the organization since being drafted in 1990, when the franchise was in Minnesota.

"This may be the best organization in hockey right now, and it's something I want to be a part of," Hatcher said during a press conference. "We have a good team. We're going to have a good team in the future.

"I always knew I never wanted to be a player that would travel around from team to team," he added.

The Stars had the best regular-season record in the NHL last year, but lost in the Stanley Cup semifinals to eventual champion Detroit.

Cooper's quick start buries Bulldogs

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

ABILENE — Midland High didn't solve the Abilene Cooper "Riddle" until the second quarter at Shotwell Stadium here Friday night and it proved to be too late.

The Cooper Cougars exploded with 17 first quarter points in its District 4-5A football opener with Midland High as the Cougars held on to a 24-13 verdict over the Bulldogs.

Cooper quarterback Dowell Loggains threw for 111 yards to wide receiver Adam Riddle and two touchdowns in the first quarter alone and that proved to be the demise of the hopeful Bulldogs. Loggains hit Riddle with TD passes of 79 and 9 yards.

"We talked all week about coming out and scoring some points early," Riddle said. "We got them down and I think we were so surprised that it came that easily that we kind of let up after that.

"That first quarter was exciting though. It was fun because Loggains was putting the ball right where I needed it."

M

Midland High	13
Ab. Cooper	24

And even when Loggains didn't throw where Riddle needed it, luck would take over. On the 9-yard TD pass, Loggains bounced a pass off of Mark Rau's hands in the end zone, but the ball nestled right into the arms of Riddle. TD No. 2.

Meanwhile, the Cooper defense had its best outing of the year, holding MHS' 1,000-yard rusher Shemond Davis to just 94 yards. It was only the second time this year that Davis hasn't had a 200-yard game and the first that failed to crack 100.

■ Tribe takes 2-1 lead in ALCS/2B

"I was so proud of our defense for not allowing Davis the big play," said Cooper coach Randy Allen. "We've been giving up big plays on defense this year and you hold your breath every time Davis touches the ball. We just didn't miss any tackles tonight.

"And that was the best first quarter of football we've played this year by a long shot. I was really pleased to see that."

MHS coach David Browning also felt the first quarter woes were the difference in the game.

"In the first part of the game we got physically whipped, but I was really proud of the way our defense responded and played a good game the rest of the way."

Lee wins with late clutch kick

Midland Lee linebacker Bobby Subia puts a hit on Odessa High quarterback Rick Leach during their game Friday at Memorial Stadium. Lee used a last-minute field goal by Michael Wynn to earn a 13-10 Homecoming victory

When the state's 10th ranked Midland Lee Rebels needed a hero the most Friday night against Odessa High, it was a kicker, make that the backup kicker, who came through with the biggest field goal of the John Parchman era.

Michael Wynn, the Rebels' kickoff specialist and backup kicker, knocked through a 44-yard field goal with 31 seconds left in the fourth quarter to beat the Bronchos 13-10 on District 4-5A's opening night at Memorial Stadium.

"I was psyching Matt (Segulja) to go out there and kick it," said Wynn of the moments leading to the kick. "Then (Parchman) called time and told me to go out there. I was like 'oh well, this is my big chance.'

"I was psyched for it and was ready. I was a little nervous but everyone is in a situation like that."

However not everyone comes through, but Wynn did to make the Rebels 6-0 overall. The field goal was his first on varsity. Last year as a freshman, Wynn said his best was 29 yards.

The kick also matches the longest field goal this season by a 4-5A kicker. Abilene Cooper's Ryan Shahan had a 44-yarder versus Waco High on Sept. 10.

It was the first time in the John Parchman era that the Rebels won with a last-minute field goal. It was also the first time that Wynn won a game with a kick.

Stanton rips Plains in 3-2A debut

STANTON — Different district, same results so far for the No. 1 Stanton Buffaloes.

Moving from District 6 to District 3, Class 2A's defending champion Buffs were looking for some new challenges. They didn't get one Friday night as they rolled over Plains, 40-6 in the district opener for both teams.

Herm

Hull

Big play after big play, the Buffs (6-0 overall, 1-0 in district) were able to put this game away by halftime with a 34-0 lead.

"We're dangerous. There's no doubt about it," said Stanton coach Mark Cotton. "This is three games out of six that our punt returns have been pretty damaging to other teams. We've got some big play capabilities. It's pretty evident."

The first big play for the Buffs came from the defense. On Plains' third possession of the evening, Cowboys quarterback Tanner Blount received pressure from Stanton's defensive line. Blount was forced to make a bad throw right into the hands of Stanton defender Sal Gonzales, who ran back the interception 60 yards for the first score of the game.

"I think Sal Gonzales running back the interception for the touchdown was a real key for us," Cotton said. "Ed Segura and Chad Smith put the pressure on the quarterback, and Sal picked it and went. I think that was a key play."

That play merely started a run of 40 unanswered points for the Buffs. Plains' Vincent Delgado spoiled the Buffs' chance for a shutout with a 44-yard TD run with 2:23 left in the game.

When mentioning big plays for the Buffaloes, it's almost a rarity not to mention the name of Stanton quarterback Kyle Herm, who had a Kyle Herm type of night. In one of his best passing games of the year, Herm was 9-of-14 for 144 yards and two touchdowns.

"(Herm) made some adjustments on his own and some audibles on his own in the passing game," Cotton said. "Kyle is on a high right now because Rice offered him a scholarship to play quarterback. He hasn't committed but not too many 2A players get offered a scholarship to play D-I football this early."

"It was an all right passing game tonight," said the modest Herm, who is still considering college options. "We all started off slow but we turned it up in the second quarter."

This was also one of the few times this year that Stanton relied more on the passing game to pace its offense. But you could almost guess it would happen eventually with Buffs possessing one of the best QBs in Class 2A.

"They came out defensively with an eight man front and they dared us to throw the football," Cotton said. "I hadn't planned on throw-

Mustangs maul Snyder, 35-7

By Dave Sager
MRT Correspondent

ANDREWS — Andrews Mustang fans couldn't have asked for a better homecoming victory Friday night by blowing out the Snyder Tigers 35-7 in the first District 5-4A game of the season.

"Getting started out in district right is critical. The first five games don't mean nothing," said Andrews head coach Mike Lebby of the win.

Two words can describe the win — Shaud Williams. Williams, a senior and arguably the best running back in the state of Texas, ran over, around and through the Snyder defense with 243 yards and four touchdowns on 29 carries.

For the season, Williams has 1,375 yards and 20 touchdowns. For his Mustang career, Williams is up to 6,691 and 75 TDs. Williams is 71 yards behind Corsicana's Ketrick Sanford, who rushed for 6,762 yards in 1993-95.

Andrews, who will host San Angelo Lake View next Friday, is 5-0 overall, and Snyder drops to 3-3.

The first quarter was all Williams with 120 of the team's 124 total offensive yards for the quarter and two touchdowns. His first TD was a 46-yard run with six minutes and 11 seconds left, and his second, a 20-yard scamper,

Big Spring romps to Homecoming victory

By Aaron Gutierrez

BIG SPRING — Homecoming night can turn an ordinary 1-4 team into an unbeatable football machine. Both Big Spring and Fort Stockton limped into Friday night's game with identical win-loss records, but the Steers were not about to let the Panthers spoil their big night in their stadium.

Big Spring destroyed Fort Stockton, winning the game in grand fashion, 56-14. The Steers started the game with an opening drive touchdown and never looked back.

The Steers were led offensively by sophomore fullback Colby Ford, who ran wild over the Panther defense by picking up a career high 260 yards rushing on the night.

Much of the credit has to be given to the overpowering play of the Steer offensive line, who often opened up holes big enough for half of the Steer team to go through.

"Our offensive line played great and opened up holes all night, but our coaches also made some great adjustments in calling the game depending on the situation we were in," said Ford.

The Steers (2-4, 1-0 district) were coming into the showdown with the Panthers after a much needed bye week. The extra time served well

Indians pound Pettitte, take 2-1 lead in AL Championship Series

By Tom Withers
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND — Two more October losses, and six magical months won't mean a thing to the New York Yankees.

Whatever went right for New York from April through September has disappeared. And now the Cleveland Indians are just two wins away from going back to the World Series after their 6-1 victory Friday night.

The Yankees spent all year breaking records, chasing history and drawing comparisons to baseball's greatest teams. But unless they start hitting, the only teams these Yankees will stack up against are the 1906 Chicago Cubs and the '54 Cleveland Indians.

Like the Yankees, those teams dominated during the year but fell short when winning and losing mattered most. New York suddenly finds itself down 2-1 in the AL championship series.

Behind is a foreign concept to this ballclub.

"We know where we are," New York manager Joe Torre said. "We know what we have to do. We weren't relaxed, but it's tough relaxing when you're in a series like this."

Jim Thome homered twice and Cleveland pounded Andy Pettitte for four homers — three in a 13-pitch sequence in the fifth inning — and Bartolo Colon pitched a four-hitter in Cleveland's second straight win of the series.

This one wasn't a gift from Chuck Knoblauch.

Cleveland, given little chance to stay with the powerful Yankees before the series started and even less after New York won the opener in a rout, is doing what many thought was impossible.

"I've proud of them, but I'm not surprised," Indians manager Mike Hargrove said. "We knew coming in we were underdogs, but we were underdogs last year. I've said it a thousand times. The postseason is a brand new deal."

Manny Ramirez and Mark Whiten also homered for the defending AL champs, who also turned three double plays behind Colon.

Meanwhile, the Yankees' storybook regular season, which included 114 wins and an AL East title seems like ancient history.

The Yankees aren't hitting in the clutch. Their owner, who stayed in the shadows all year when things were going well, is now everywhere. And for the first time since the first week of the season, New York is trailing another team.

"It's got to get going, we're too good not to get it going," said Pettitte, tagged for six runs and eight hits in 4 2-3 innings. "I hate to say we're putting too much pressure on ourselves. It's seems the other team has turned it up a notch. ... We might be pressing a little bit."

Torre had held a pregame meeting to focus his club after the events of Game 2, but even that didn't seem to help. And now Dwight Gooden, one of the most popular players ever in New York, will start Game 4 Saturday night against rookie Orlando "El Duque" Hernandez with a chance to push the Yankees a little closer to elimination.

Pettitte, who lost twice to Cleveland in last year's postseason, got rocked so badly in the fifth he appeared to be on the verge of tears as he staggered to the Yankees' dugout after the Indians were done with him.

Cleveland was leading 2-1 at the time on the strength of Thome's second-inning homer and rookie Enrique Wilson's RBI single when the Indians started taking some in-game batting practice with two outs.

After Ramirez hit his fourth homer this postseason and 13th of his career into the Yankees' bullpen, Travis Fryman walked. Thome then skied a ball toward right that finally came down over the wall in right.

Whiten, a former Yankee playing in his first playoff game this year, followed with a liner that scattered fans on the left-field porch and sent the 44,904 at Jacobs Field into a frenzy.

When he was finally pulled, Pettitte walked slowly toward the bench, and after setting down his glove, rubbed his hands on his head trying to figure out what went wrong.

Yankee fans everywhere were probably doing the same.

Knoblauch, the Game 2 goat for failing to pick up a ball that got away on a controversial call at first base, wasted no time in putting Wednesday's events behind him.

He was greeted with a sarcastic standing ovation in pregame introductions and before his at-bat in the first, but his single to left quickly quieted the crowd. He would later score on Bernie Williams' single.

The Indians stranded two runners in the bottom of the first against Pettitte, who was continually high in the strike zone and behind in the count.

Thome made him pay for just that in the second, driving a 3-1 pitch into the Indians' bullpen to tie it 1-all. Whiten didn't give the left-hander any chance to relax by following with a double.

Whiten moved up on Sandy Alomar's grounder to the right side, and with the infield in, Wilson, who scored on a mad dash around the bases when Knoblauch decided to argue with the umpires, bounced an RBI single through the middle.

Colon, who got 16 outs on grounders, pitched the first complete game in the ALCS since Wilson Alvarez for the White Sox in 1993, and the first for a Cleveland pitcher in the postseason since Bob Lemon in Game 1 of the 1954 World Series.

Notes: Gooden will be seeking his first postseason win. He lasted just 22 pitches before being ejected in his Game 2 start against Boston in the division series. ... Hargrove hadn't decided on a Game 5 starter by gametime, saying he was still checking his options. They include: Chad Ogea, Dave Burba and Jaret Wright, who didn't get out of the first inning in Game 1. ... New York starting pitchers entered the game 4-0 this postseason with a 0.97 ERA. ... Tino Martinez went 0-for-4 and is now 7-for-57 (.123) with zero RBIs in his last 14 career ALCS games. He is hitless in his last 18 ALCS at-bats.

Padres stay composed despite surprising 2-0 lead over Braves

By Bernie Wilson
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — The San Diego Padres aren't giddy just because they've outpitched the Atlanta Braves and taken a stunning 2-0 lead in the NL championship series.

Confident, yes, especially since those wins were on the road and they're back home for a weekend bash at Qualcomm Stadium, expected to be rocking with more than 60,000 fans for Games 3 and 4 on Saturday and Sunday.

Guarded, though, because these still are the same Braves who won 106 games in the regular season and still have Greg Maddux (18-9) and left-hander Denny Neagle (16-11) to go in their vaunted starting rotation.

"They're too good," Tony Gwynn said at the Padres' sun-splashed workout Friday afternoon. "You know that you have to fight for whatever it is you want. We want to go to the World Series. We want to win the World Series. That was our goal coming in.

"We won the first two games of this series, but you have to keep your wits about you. I'm sure they've been down 0-2 before. That's not going to faze them."

The Braves of the '90s have faced a 2-0 deficit just once, in the 1991 World Series which they lost to Minnesota in seven. They trailed St. Louis 3-1 in the 1996 NLCS and rallied to win.

Just two teams have rallied from a 2-0 deficit and won the NLCS, including Gwynn's Padres in 1984 against the Chicago Cubs to reach their only World Series.

But no team has won an NLCS after losing the first two games at home.

"We can't feel good about being 0-2, but we have the type of club and pitching that we could easily reel off four in a row," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said after Kevin Brown pitched yet another gem in the NLCS against Atlanta, winning 3-0 Thursday night with a three-hit complete game.

■ NLCS

Brown also beat the Braves twice last year while with the Florida Marlins.

The Braves didn't work out Friday. They flew to San Diego and arrived too late before the field was converted for a Hawaii-San Diego State football game.

Maddux gets the start Saturday, a week after he beat the Chicago Cubs 6-2 to close out a first-round sweep. The Padres counter with left-hander Sterling Hitchcock, who was brilliant in striking out 11 Houston Astros in six innings Sunday and outdueling Randy Johnson as the Padres finished their division series in four games with a 6-1 win.

John Smoltz and Tom Glavine pitched well for Atlanta in the first two games, but San Diego's Andy Ashby and Brown pitched even better. San Diego's team ERA is 0.95 after two games, compared to Atlanta's 2.84.

Maddux lost his only start against the Padres this year, 5-1 at San Diego on Aug. 12. He won his next two starts, but then went 0-3 with two no-decisions in his next five starts before winning his final outing of the season.

A key matchup Saturday will be Gwynn versus Maddux. Gwynn has hit .455 lifetime against the four-time Cy Young Award winner.

"The challenge with him starts with the guys in front of him," Maddux said. "That's half the battle in pitching to Tony is getting the guys out in front of him. He handles the bat as well as anybody probably has."

The Padres know they're going to have to scrap for runs regardless of who's pitching for the Braves. That's what they had to do Thursday night, when even Brown got into the action with two singles and one run scored.

Jacks lose to El Paso

EL PASO — The Odessa Jackalopes suffered their first preseason loss of the season, falling to the defending WPHL champion El Paso Buzzards 9-4 Friday night.

The Jacks, 2-1 in the preseason, actually took a 1-0 lead on the first of two goals by Murray Sheehan, who was assisted by Rob Lukacs and Robert Ohlsson. After El Paso went ahead 2-1 at the end of the first period, Odessa tied the game on a goal by Martin Ohrstedt, who was assisted by Rob Rosati.

The Buzzards then scored three straight goals for a 5-2 lead and put the game away. Terry Flynn had a goal for the Jacks, who will end the preseason by hosting the Buzzards tonight at 7 p.m. at the Ector County Coliseum.

Arnold aces at Hogan Park

Kristen Arnold scored a hole-in-one Friday at Hogan Park Golf Course. Arnold aced the 135-yard No. 13 hole with a 6-iron. The ace was witnessed by Jo Sperry, Chuck Miller and Julian Brito.

Race scheduled for San Angelo

SAN ANGELO — Racing will start Sunday at 3 p.m. at the San Angelo Speedway in the four regular categories as well as a Powder Puff and chidren's bicycle race.

Local Volleyball Today

Odessa Permian at Midland Lee

When: 2:30 p.m.
Where: Lee gym
Records: Lee is 21-3 overall, 7-0 in District 4-5A. Odessa Permian is 14-11 and 5-2.
Coaches: Lee — Connie Alexander; Odessa Permian — Helen O'Neal.
Last action: In District 4-5A matches played Tuesday, Midland Lee defeated Midland High, 8-15, 15-6, 15-12, and Odessa Permian whipped Odessa High, 15-4, 15-7.
Notes, quotes: Lee won at Permian, 15-5, 15-13, the first time around the district schedule on Sept. 15... Lee is atop 4-5A with Permian two wins back in second place. A win would give the Lady Rebels a three-win cushion over the defending district champions with four matches left to play. "They're wanting to give us a loss and hoping other people will give us a loss so they can defend their title," Lee coach Connie Alexander said. "They're looking at it as a do or die situation. We've got to be ready." ... Permian is missing Miranda Moore, who is academically ineligible. Alexander said Moore hurt Lee with her serving in the first meeting... Speaking of serving, Alexander said her team's serving will be important to keep Permian's offense off-balance. "Most teams have one big hitter; they have two. They've got (Brianne) Fowler and (Jennifer) Brewer, and they can both put it on the floor in a hurry."
Next match: Lee hits the road to face Abilene High at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Midland High at Odessa High

When: 2:30 p.m.
Where: Odessa High gym.
Records: Midland High is 17-10 overall, 4-3 in District 4-5A. Odessa High is 9-3 and 1-6.
Coaches: MHS — Terri McCulloch; Odessa High — Diane Sandoval.
Last action: In District 4-5A matches played Tuesday, Midland High fell to Midland Lee, 8-15, 15-6, 15-12, and Odessa High bowed to Permian, 15-4, 15-7.
Notes: Midland High held on to third place in district despite a tight loss to Lee Tuesday as Abilene High slipped against Abilene Cooper. The Lady Bulldogs can move into a tie for second if they win and Lee beats Permian today... MHS won the first meeting with OHS, 15-5, 15-13, on Sept. 15 in Midland.
Next match: Midland High will host Abilene Cooper at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Trinity 58, Victory Chr. 6

The Trinity Charger football team routed Victory Christian from Carlsbad, N.M. 58-6 Friday in non-district football action.

Six different Trinity players scored touchdowns as the 2-4 Chargers racked up 256 yards in total offense and scored on every possession but one.

The game was stopped at the half after the 45-point rule was enforced.

"It was a good performance by our kids. They were wanting to redeem themselves after last week (a 32-6 loss to Ira)," Trinity head coach Carl Kitto said. "We got focused and came out to play today. We took it to them from the first kick off."

Nathan Pertile led Trinity with 765 yards rushing. He joined Matt Horne as the only Chargers with two TDs scored. Also scoring for the Chargers were Jesoung Yi, Michael Midkiff, Cory Mays and Clint Adcox.

Trinity will play Sanderson's junior varsity next Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

Collins deactivated for Cowboys game

By Paul Nowell
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kerry Collins, who stunned his Carolina Panthers teammates earlier in the week by removing himself from the starting lineup, was deactivated Friday for Sunday's game against the Dallas Cowboys.

"I felt it would be better for our football team to not have the distraction of having Kerry with us on the sideline after what transpired," coach Dom Capers said.

"When we go on the road, we talk all the time about eliminating distractions," he said. "This will help us keep our focus on Dallas."

Collins will remain in Charlotte when the Panthers head to Dallas for Sunday's game. He'll rejoin the team next week, Capers said.

With Tuesday's NFL trading deadline looming, Capers would not comment on the long-term future of his former starting quarterback.

"We'll think about that at the beginning of next week," Capers said. "Right now, the No. 1 priority is the game."

Collins, who practiced Friday with the team, did not argue with the decision to deactivate him for the Dallas game.

"He was fine with it," Capers said. "I met with him this morning and I told him he was being deactivated for this game."

The latest crisis for the winless Panthers began Wednesday morning when Collins came to Capers' office and told him "my heart isn't in it," Capers said.

When the players took the field later that day, Capers filled them in on what Collins had told him. He also told backup Steve Beuerlein that he would be starting against the Cowboys on Sunday.

Since then, the Panthers' front office has been trying to figure out what to do with the former star. He could be traded or released or simply remain with the club.

"We're not going to close the door on anything," Capers said Friday.

Capers briefly described his frustration with the ordeal, which erupted as he was trying to prepare for the Cowboys.

"We obviously felt strongly about Kerry," he said. "We felt things were very positive during the offseason. We installed a new offense and brought in a new offensive coordinator.

"He has done some good things, even though we are 0-4," Capers said. "That's why it came as a real surprise to me."

The Panthers have lost six consecutive games dating to last December, and they have surrendered the two highest point totals in club history in their last two games — 37 to Green Bay and 51 to Atlanta.

Collins, been a frequent target of criticism about the Panthers' poor start, has not spoken with the media all week.

Some Carolina players have criticized Collins for his decision, including veterans Eric Davis and Jeff Brady. Others have been more sympathetic.

"When you're in this kind of situation you find out a lot about your team," Capers said. "A lot comes out in times of adversity."

Asked what he learned about Collins, Capers searched for an answer.

"I don't know ... I was surprised," he said. "I can say I do appreciate that Kerry came to talk to me."

LEE: Wynn's field goal lifts Rebels to win stronger leg might be the thing we needed there," Parchman said. "He came through for us."

Wynn came through with the Lee's second field goal of the night and season. In the first quarter, Segulja converted on 32-yard attempt, which gave Lee a commanding 10-0 lead.

At the time, Lee looked to be in control, but after a fumble by Cedric Benson inside the Odessa High 30-yard line, the Bronchos held Lee within reach the rest of the way.

OHS (3-3) made the score 10-3 after a Jeff Marrs field goal in the second quarter. Then late in the fourth quarter, a 14-yard halfback option pass from Juan Gonzalez to Ivan Hernandez tied the game at 10-10 with just over four minutes to play.

That set up Lee's final drive which started on the its 19.

On the drive, Lee converted a third-and-16 situation as Jon Rogers hit Eric Clodfelter for 28 yards. It was only Lee's third conversion on third down of the game. For the night, the Rebels were 3 of 11 on third downs.

Following the conversion, running backs Cedric Benson and Clint McNutt combined for 32 yards on four carries to put the ball on the OHS 27. The rest was up to Wynn.

"This is 4-5A," Parchman said. "We have been saying all year long that when you get into district play, there will be a bunch of old warriors and everybody dies hard. They died hard and we were going to die hard if need be.

"Give a lot of credit to our kids. They have been holding us all half, and hell, we come down, drive down to get into position for a win. That is all we can ask."

OHS head coach Randy Quisenberry said the drive showed what kind of a team Lee is.

"There are a lot of teams that could have got into that situation and folded their tents," Quisenberry said. "They came right back down the field. We had them in a third-down situations and they converted. That is what great football teams do. That is what we need to do."

OHS held a Lee team averaging 43 points a game to 13 points. The Rebels were averaging 415 total yards. Friday, they totaled 177. Offensively, the Bronchos seemed to get better throughout the night.

However on their third to last drive, OHS made a critical error.

The Bronchos were on the 13th play of a drive and had a third and three with the ball on Lee's 4. First, the Bronchos were called for a motion penalty. Then Lee's Derrick Walker intercepted a Rick Leach pass in the end zone.

"Penalties hurt and there were things that we did to ourselves that we got to correct. We can't afford to do those things in the future," Quisenberry said.

Midland Lee will travel to Abilene next week to play Abilene High. Odessa High returns for another Midland homecoming to play Midland High.

HOMECOMING NOTES: Lee leads the series 20-18... It is Lee's fourth straight district win... Benson had 106 yards on 22 carries to become the first back this year to rush break 100 yards on Odessa High. Benson joins Permian's Koefie Powell and Abilene High's Sneezy Beltran as the only players in 4-5A to score TDs in every game...

No. 3 Midland High hosts AHS in tennis showdown

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Quite simply when the Midland High and Abilene High tennis teams battle at the Midland High Tennis Center today at 11 a.m., it will be the biggest team tennis match played in Midland this decade.

Abilene High ranked No. 2 in the Class 5A by Texas Tennis Coaches Association. Midland High is third.

Abilene High is 3-0 in district play. Midland High is 4-0.

"We have been looking towards this match as being potentially the match for the district championship," MHS tennis coach Tom Heiting said. "It is a big-time atmosphere, and with both teams being ranked (No.) 2 and 3, it makes it more special."

Also, today's winner is a victory over No. 12 Odessa Permian away from winning the district championship. The loser must contend with the 3-0 Panthers for the district's second seed and a berth in the region tournament.

"Now that Permian is undefeated and doing better than expected, we will look at that match once we get there, but we are going to keep our train of thought exactly the same for this one," Heiting said.

Another aspect that makes this match big for Heiting and the rest of the Bulldog netters is that Midland High is looking for its first team 4-5A title and postseason berth this decade. A win today will bring the Bulldogs very close to that.

"It is nice," Heiting said. "We haven't been 4-0 since I have been here. Everyone is excited and nervous at the same time."

Abilene High, on the other hand, knows very well what the playoffs is like. The Eagles have been to the regional tournament every season this decade and in 1992 walked away the state title.

The two teams have met one other time this season at the Abilene Invitational. In that contest, the macth score was tied when words were exchanged in a boys doubles match. The match stopped at that point. With so much on the line today, it could make this match a little more intriguing although Heiting says that incident is in the past.

"We wiped clean the slate and will have a clean match (Saturday)," Heiting said.

This district season, the Bulldogs have won 58 individual matches while dropping just 14. MHS has been especially strong in the doubles and girls singles, and that is a trend Heiting says needs to continue.

"Depth and Doubles is a key for us," Heiting said. "Our boys match up well, but I think our girls are stronger down low. We need to play well there."

The Texas High School Tennis Poll (class 5A only) as determined by the Texas Tennis Coaches Association.

MHS: Cooper scores 17 in first quarter

(From 1B)

Browning said. "We're still in the stages where we haven't won the big game and we've got to do what it takes to get the confidence to go out on the field and look the other team in the eye. That's not anything bad about our kids because they are busting their behinds to get there. It's just that we haven't done it and we have to look at that."

The Bulldogs turned the momentum around in the second period with an 83-yard drive that consumed most of the stanza. The big play in the drive came when quarterback Laynce Nix hit Raji Hickey wit a 34-yard pass to the Cooper 39. Nix ended the drive with a 2-yard score to cut the margin to 17-7.

MHS also got the ball to start the third period, but Nix fumbled the snap and Cooper's Rodrick Spurlock recovered to set up a short 30-yard scoring drive as Carl Bloom finally took it in from 16 yards out for a 24-7 lead.

Still in the third period, Nix found Hickey again for an 84-yard scoring strike with 8:02 left in the quarter. The Bulldogs were still in the game.

On the night, Hickey turned out to be the leading receiver with five catches for 145 yards as the Bulldogs shut down Riddle after the first period.

But down the stretch, the Bulldogs turned the ball over again on a fumble and delay and motion penalties always seemed to have MHS in first down or second down and 15 or 20 to go for a first.

"If you loose just one game, you aren't out of this thing," Browning said. "We've got to turn around and come back next week."

Cooper is now 2-3 on the year (forfeit included) and 1-0 in district play while MHS is 3-3 and 0-1.

"I'm surprised that Cooper has lost even one game this year," Browning said. "They have a lot of talent and they are physically imposing. But once we found out we could fight with them, we played them on even terms. We've got to learn from that."

After a bad start in that woeful first quarter, MHS held Loggains to a minus four yards passing in the second half.

BULLDOG PAWS: Lance King, who suffered a separated shoulder last week against El Paso Irvin, played and caught four passes... Zack Davis, who missed two games with a cracked vertebrae, also played and played well... Punter Justin Smith had a career high 72-yard punt... Weldon Cooks came up with his second interception of the year, the only two the Bulldogs have recorded thus far this season... MHS will host Odessa High next week in a Homecoming game at Memorial Stadium in a game that could get the Bulldogs back into the playoff fight...

STANTON: Buffs start off well in new district

(From 1B)

ing the football, but I'm glad we did. I've been wanting to throw the football more this year. I just took another coach to force me to do it."

"Why pass when you can run," Herm said. "Nebraska didn't win all those championships by throwing the ball. If you establish the run, the passing game will open up."

The Buffs' senior also added an 8-yard twisting and turning scoring run, and had a 58-yard punt return for a TD called back because of a penalty.

As Herm mentioned, the Buffs also established the run with 209 yards on the ground. Leading the running attack on this night was Jeremy Hull with 10 carries for 64 yards.

"We have great backs and we just do whatever helps the team," Hull said.

Hull's biggest plays came on a 41-yard scoring reception and a 91-yard electrifying kickoff return.

"I guess I was pretty nervous out there because I didn't catch it," said Hull talking about his return. "I just had great blockers down field. Everything happens because of great blocking."

With the resounding win, the Buffs felt like they made a statement to the rest of the district.

"We wanted to say we're a good football team, and they're are some good football teams in this district," Cotton said. "We've got the traditional district champion of this district next week in Seagraves."

"To get the first win under your belt is always good," Herm said. "We've got a tough one next week we better prepare for."

Seagraves also started district play with a convincing 40-0 win over Coahoma.

Permian 42, Abilene High 17

ODESSA — The Odessa Permian Panthers opened the 1998 District 4-5A season with a resounding 42-17 victory over Abilene High 42-17 Friday night at Ratliff Stadium.

Permian (5-1 overall) totaled 455 yards, including 337 yards on the ground to recover from a 14-0 deficit with a 42-3 run.

Koefie Powell was huge for Permian with 216 yards and one late touchdown on 28 carries while quarterback Leland Morris had three scored and 88 yards on the ground. Morris also hit Roy Williams with a 78-yard TD pass.

Permian had 118 yards passing. Williams finished with three catches and 91 yards.

For Abilene High, Sneezy Beltran scored one touchdown and was held in check with a season-low 126 yards on 23 carries. Beltran, a junior, passed the 1,000-yard mark for the second season, but trails Midland High's Shemond Davis by 91 yards in the district rushing race. Abilene High had 192 yards rushing and 103 passing.

Authorities want Gastineau

NEW YORK (AP) — A Manhattan judge has ordered the arrest of former New York Jets star Mark Gastineau for allegedly violating a court order to stay away from a woman he was accused of hitting.

Manhattan Criminal Court Judge Eileen Rackower revoked Gastineau's bail after he failed to show up in court Friday, with a prosecutor saying Gastineau violated an order of protection by visiting Patricia Schorr, and that he might have forced her to leave the state with him.

Gastineau, 41, was arrested Sept. 2 on charges of assaulting Schorr in her Manhattan apartment a week earlier. A court complaint accused him of slapping her face four or five times, throwing her against a wall, and choking her while threatening to kill her.

Gastineau was charged with misdemeanor assault, menacing and criminal possession of a weapon. The court complaint said the weapon was a glass cocktail table with which he threatened to hit Schorr.

ANDREWS: Mustangs roll to Homecoming triumph occurred with no time left on the clock. The Mustangs were nearly perfect except for two turnovers which, fortunately, led to no points for the Tigers. The defense was a dominant force allowing only one first down all quarter.

The second quarter, however, Snyder got its offense going. They were able to move the ball on the ground, as well as, through the air and scored with 8:15 left in the half. Snyder's defense awoke in the second holding Williams and the Mustangs scoreless and without a first downs. Midway through the quarter, Williams fumbled the ball away on Andrews' own 20-yard-line. Snyder, though, could not take advantage, attempting a field goal, but coming short.

The second half was all Andrews, scoring two touchdowns in a period of only 19 seconds in the third quarter. Williams scored on a 4-yard sweep with 6:49 left. On the following kickoff, Snyder fumbled the ball on its own 25-yard-line. The very next play Andrews scored on a 25-yard quarterback keeper by senior Daniel Kessler with 6:30 left in the third.

The fourth quarter was pretty much the same as the previous one. Williams scored on a 63-yard dash with 7:46 left in the game and the Mustangs never looked back.

Snyder looked worn down in the second half. It seemed nothing would work for them, offensively or defensively. They just could not stop the unstoppable Shaud Williams.

The Tigers started moving the ball again when second-string quarterback Sonny Crumble came in the game, but a 5-yard sack by Andrews and a fumble by the junior QB on fourth down in the same series summed up the Tigers' performance.

Both teams looked sloppy the entire game with a combined seven turnovers.

"We played good in the first quarter, but stunk it up in the second. At halftime I told the kids to work on blocking and tackling. They did and played real good in the second half. Snyder is a well coached, physical, fly-around team. It was a good win for us," Lebby said.

Murphy makes debut for K-State vs. Buffs

By John Mossman
AP Sports Writer

Frank Murphy finally gets to play for Kansas State.

Murphy, the 1997 national junior college player of the year, will make his debut Saturday night when the No. 5 Wildcats play at No. 14 Colorado in a meeting of unbeaten teams.

At Garden City (Kan.) Community College last fall, Murphy rushed for 1,376 yards and 26 touchdowns. But his start with the Wildcats was delayed when he was suspended by the NCAA for four games for accepting money from boosters to buy a used car.

Whether the school will face sanctions remains unclear, but Murphy's penance is over.

"Frank will get some time," coach Bill Snyder said. "Exactly how much time, I don't know. It's going to be by feel. I think he can help us in a variety of ways."

Of the 12 major statistical categories compiled by the NCAA, Kansas State (4-0 overall, 1-0 in Big 12) leads the country in eight of them, including scoring offense (62.3 points per game) and defense (5.3), total defense (205.5 yards per game), turnover margin (2.5 per game) and kickoff and punt returns.

"Kansas State has no weaknesses. ... It isn't by accident that they are where they are," Colorado coach Rick Neuheisel said.

The Wildcats have played mostly lesser competition (Indiana State, Northern Illinois, Northeast Louisiana), but they have dominated every opponent, including Texas, which it beat 48-7 three weeks ago.

Colorado (5-0, 2-0) has been less impressive, with two-point victories the last two weeks over Baylor and Oklahoma.

Kansas State ended an 11-0-1 run by the Buffaloes from 1985-96 with a 37-20 victory in Manhattan last season.

Another important Big 12 pairing will find No. 2 Nebraska at No. 18 Texas A&M.

In other top games Saturday, it's No. 1 Ohio State at Illinois, No. 3 UCLA at No. 10 Arizona, No. 4 Tennessee at No. 7 Georgia, No. 6 Florida vs. No. 11 LSU, No. 8 Florida State at Miami, No. 12 Wisconsin vs. Purdue, No. 13 Penn State at Minnesota, No. 15 Oregon at Washington State, No. 16 West Virginia at Temple, No. 19 Southern California vs. California, No. 20 Arkansas at Memphis, No. 21 Missouri at Iowa State, No. 22 Notre Dame at Arizona State, No. 23 North Carolina State vs. Georgia Tech and No. 24 Syracuse vs. Cincinnati.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Arizona-UCLA game is the first Pac-10 showdown between Top 10 teams in seven years. UCLA will be without its top runner, Jermaine Lewis, who has been suspended indefinitely after an alleged altercation last Saturday night.

"You'd like to have all the weapons you can," UCLA quarterback Cade McNown said. "It's tough, but we can reload."

Tennessee also will be missing its top runner when the Vols visit Georgia. Jamal Lewis is out for the season with a knee injury.

"We'll be back to more open sets and doing more things with the football," Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer said. "With our best player out on offense, we'll go to Plan B, which we practice every day. It's not like a sudden change of philosophy."

Ohio State quarterback Joe Germaine probably will pass the 4,000-yard mark for his career during the Illinois game. He has completed 61 percent of his passes this season and thrown six touchdowns, with just one interception.

Ohio State coach John Cooper said he won't have trouble getting his players fired up for Illinois.

"I've got the best ally that you can have, and that's the bench," he said. "So if our players don't practice, then they don't play. It's that simple. So we don't anticipate any kind of letdown whatsoever."

Georgia tries to end another losing streak

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia took care of one seven-game itch. There's still another to go.

Last season, the Bulldogs ended a seven-year losing streak against Florida with a landmark 37-17 victory, showing they were ready to reclaim a prominent spot in the Southeastern Conference.

On Saturday, No. 7 Georgia (4-0, 2-0 SEC) can establish itself as the favorite for its first league championship since 1982 when its takes on No. 4 Tennessee (4-0, 2-0) at Sanford Stadium.

The Volunteers haven't lost to the Dawgs since 1988, stretching their winning streak to seven in a row with a 38-13 victory in Knoxville last year.

"Guys like me who have been here for five years haven't beaten them yet," defensive tackle Paul Snellings said. "They're the only team we haven't beaten at least once. I don't want to get out of here getting skunked by Tennessee."

Georgia also wants to prove it's not a fluke following a 28-27 upset victory at LSU last Saturday.

A year ago, after ending the losing streak against Florida, the Bulldogs reveled in the adulation of the fans, read all the headlines proclaiming their greatness and promptly were blown out in their next game by Auburn.

Since then, Georgia has won seven in a row.

"Coach (Jim) Donnan has expressed to us a lot about how to handle success," safety Kirby Smart said. "We didn't handle success after the Florida game."

It's the first time in 15 years that a pair of Top 10 teams have been on the same field in Athens. But the Vols won't be at full strength, having lost tailback Jamal Lewis for the season.

Lewis, who was the major reason Tennessee led the conference with 225.5 yards per game, tore a ligament in his right knee at Auburn last week.

Coach Phillip Fulmer was quick to remind everyone of another severe injury that failed to sidetrack Tennessee's season.

"In '85, we lost (quarterback) Tony Robinson and went on to win the SEC championship because a lot of people played really hard and together," Fulmer said.

The Vols will try to make up for one Jamal with two Travises. Travis Stephens will start at tailback, but Travis Henry also will get playing time. Together, they have rushed for only 156 yards.

"If one gets hot, he will stay in," Fulmer said.

The Vols should begin to find out whether Tee Martin can carry the team with his arm. So far, he hasn't played up to the standards set by predecessor Peyton Manning, ranking 10th in the SEC with an average of 127 yards passing.

The Bulldogs have no concerns about their quarterback, even though he's played only four college games.

Quincy Carter, a 21-year-old freshman who sat out the last two seasons to concentrate on minor league baseball, was honored as SEC offensive player of the week after a remarkable performance at LSU. He threw for 318 yards, ran for another 41 and slipped out of the backfield to catch a 36-yard pass, the longest of the game.

Texas-OU remains big for fans of both

By Wendell Barnhouse
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

Every player and coach who has taken part in a Texas-Oklahoma game at the Cotton Bowl say the same thing. The rivalry is unmatched in their experience in excitement, emotion and electricity.

"OU weekend is unique, and it's not comparable to any other games," Longhorns senior linebacker Dusty Renfro said. "It's a neutral site, and each team has the same number of fans. It's always such a battle because of that.

"Each team is going to play above their heads no matter what their records or rankings are."

Fair enough. But Texas enters today's game with a 3-2 (1-1 Big 12) record; Oklahoma is 2-2 (0-1). Neither team has received a vote in either poll this week, which reflects the lack of national clout.

Former Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer, who has been advising Sooners coach John Blake, won't make be makin' the scene today.

"It's not the same anymore," Switzer told the "Austin American-Statesman," when asked about the Texas-Oklahoma rivalry. "There was a time when one team would be No. 1 in the country and the other would be No. 2. Both OU and Texas had national prestige."

ABC Sports passed on carrying the game as a regional telecast, the first time since 1989 the game won't be televised by a national network. However, more people could see the game because it will air on the Big 12's syndicated regional network. That telecast will be available in 25.5 million homes, including markets such as Boston, Detroit and Los Angeles.

"I don't think the kids care about that stuff," Texas coach Mack Brown said of the TV situation. "When you get out there to play, the kids don't know who is watching it on TV. Our kids tried hard last Saturday night against Iowa State, and it was on pay-per-view.

"What does matter is that these kids were raised watching Texas and Oklahoma."

So, Texas-Oklahoma — or, if you prefer, Oklahoma-Texas — is still a Big Game around these parts, even if it doesn't have the sizzle in national circles. College football fans are more likely to ask about the outcome of the Tennessee-Georgia and UCLA-Arizona games before seeking a score from Dallas.

"I think anyone under 25 years of age has a very different view of Texas-Oklahoma," said Chris Fowler, host of ESPN's "College GameDay" preview show. "I'm old enough to know what that game means, and that's one of the games on my list that I'd like to see.

"On the national scene, Texas-Oklahoma is an afterthought. But I think things are cyclical and there will be a time when Texas-Oklahoma returns to national prominence."

And Texas-Oklahoma is not alone. The Florida State-Miami game is not one of the top five games on tap for today, either. "Who would have thought that possible?" Fowler said.

This decade has contributed to a drop-off in the national profile of the Texas-Oklahoma series. Counting today, the teams have entered the Cotton Bowl with a combined winning percentage of .631. In no other decade has that number been as low.

The best decade for the series was the 1970s. From 1970-79, the Longhorns and Sooners entered the game with a combined 62-4-1 record, a winning percentage of .925. In the '70s, on eight occasions both teams were ranked and six times both were undefeated.

"I know when I was at Texas in the early '70s, it didn't get any bigger than that," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "It was really a big deal. I think it's still a showcase game."

"It's one of those games you look forward to because it's been a rivalry for so long," Renfro said. It's probably the biggest game for each team every year. There's a lot of testosterone flowing. It's pretty intense.

"It's just going to be an all-out brawl for 60 minutes."

Brown was Oklahoma's offensive coordinator in 1984, so he will experience the rivalry from both sides when he descends the Cotton Bowl ramp shortly before noon.

"When Barry (Switzer) hired me, he said, 'You need to understand there is one thing that is really important at Oklahoma, and that's to beat Texas,'" Brown remembered.

Aggies still looking to beat Top 10 team

By Jimmy Burch
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

COLLEGE STATION — Never one to dawdle when finding a seam in an opposing defense, Texas A&M tailback Dante Hall is even quicker to cut short a line of questioning about the Aggies' recent struggles in high-profile games.

"Absolutely, we have to win a game like this to get over the hump," Hall said, providing the answer before a reporter could finish his query about today's matchup between No. 18 A&M (4-1, 1-0) and No. 2 Nebraska (5-0, 1-0). "I'll be glad when we do, so I can start getting some new questions."

Until that happens, a common theme will continue to be the Aggies' 10-game losing streak against top-10 foes they will carry into today's 2:30 p.m. matchup in Kyle Field. But only two of those losses occurred at Kyle Field and the Aggies had opportunities to win both games before falling to No. 6 Texas, 16-6, in 1995 and to No. 9 Arkansas, 23-22, in 1989.

Getting a chance to play the Cornhuskers in front of a pro-A&M crowd and on a grass field, where coaches believe option teams are less effective, has boosted the spirits of Aggies' players and coaches as they attempt to record the school's first victory against a top-10 opponent since knocking off No. 8 Houston, 17-13, in 1989.

"Coaches will tell you that option teams don't execute as well on grass as on artificial turf," said A&M coach R.C. Slocum, echoing sentiments expressed earlier in the week by Missouri coach Larry Smith. "They have more secure footing on turf. When you're making those tight, 90-degree cuts, that really helps."

For an 11-point underdog like A&M, a raucous home crowd also helps. A&M is 45-4-1 at Kyle Field during the 1990s. The .910 winning percentage at home that ranks fourth among Division I-A teams in this decade. To liven the mood for Nebraska, A&M officials have urged fans to wear maroon shirts as part of a "Maroon Out" promotion designed to inspire the home team.

"We feel like we shouldn't let anyone come in here and take a win from us at our home," Hall said. "We need to feed off the crowd and play with a lot of excitement. We've been playing hard. But the excitement hasn't been there."

It has returned this week, said offensive guard Cameron Spikes, a lifelong resident in the Bryan-College Station area who termed today's contest "the biggest game I can think of in A&M's history."

At the very least, Nebraska represents the highest-ranked opponent to visit Kyle Field since No. 2 Texas in 1983. The Cornhuskers, in the estimation of A&M wide receiver Chris Cole, arrive primed for a fall after struggling to beat Oklahoma State, 24-17, last week in Kansas City.

"The stage is set here for a big win and we're hungry for it," said Cole (23 catches, 387 yards), who has accounted for 59 percent of A&M's receiving yards, as well as all three touchdown grabs. "We've fiddled around with some of these lesser teams and didn't put them away like we should. But this week, focus won't be a problem. We need that big win to get into that elite class of teams, and we're in a great place to take advantage of this chance."

The place will be Kyle Field, where Slocum has a 2-2 career mark against top-10 foes. The field will be covered with grass, a surface that yielded close calls for the Cornhuskers last week against Oklahoma State and last season against Missouri (45-38 overtime win). The crowd should be loud.

Anything else you need, R.C.?

"A nice, soaking rain wouldn't be all bad," Slocum said. "Let's slow that thing down into a mudhole."

A higher authority has yet to rule on that last request.

TCU tailback tag team fuels Frogs' success

By Terrance Harris
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — Limping off the field in the second overtime Saturday against Vanderbilt, TCU tailback Basil Mitchell turned and pumped his fist in encouragement to his replacement.

Mitchell's running had put the Frogs at the Commodores' 8-yard line. But if TCU was going to win this game, it was going to come down to the work of LaDainian Tomlinson.

Tomlinson broke through for 4 yards up the middle. And then he steamrolled inside for the final 4 yards for the winning touchdown in a 19-16 victory.

And still pumping his fist on the sideline was Mitchell, who made the drive possible.

"I was just so pumped up for L.T.," said Mitchell, who gained 125 yards against Vanderbilt. "The thing is, I always want to see him do good."

That unselfishness has given the Frogs one of the most potent rushing attacks in the nation. The two have combined for 666 yards and eight rushing touchdowns this season.

TCU ranks second in the Western Athletic Conference in rushing (250.3 yards a game) behind Air Force and eighth in the nation.

"They're both very quality running backs who can just wear down a defense," said Fresno State coach Pat Hill, whose Bulldogs face TCU tonight at Amon Carter Stadium. "They can just put you in so many tough situations."

Mitchell, who has been the Frogs' leading rusher the past two seasons as a three-year starter, is more of an elusive runner. Tomlinson, on the other hand, relies more on power and often seems as inclined to run through a defender as he is to go around him.

But even with their varying styles, TCU coach Dennis Franchione says there isn't a situation where he would prefer one over the other. Since he switched Tomlinson from fullback to tailback three weeks ago, Franchione has allowed his two tailbacks to rotate themselves in and out of the game.

"If I didn't have that kind of confidence in those two, then there's no way I would allow them to handle the substitutions," said Franchione, who has the Frogs off to a 3-1 start this season. "But they are both good running backs and they are very unselfish. As far as I'm concerned they are both starters."

Both have already been named WAC Mountain Division player of the week. Tomlinson earned his honor after rushing for 99 yards and two touchdowns against Air Force. Mitchell earned his after rushing for 186 yards and three touchdowns in the season opener at Iowa State.

"I think that says it all right there," running backs coach Mike Schultz said. "Any time you have two different guys in your backfield receive that type of honor this early, then I think it tells a lot right there.

"But even more gratifying than the yards and production is to see how unselfish the two are. The only thing that really seems to matter to them is winning. And that is what makes it fun for me as a coach."

Former wrestlers meet on field at Cotton Bowl

Associated Press

When they were both Oklahoma high school wrestlers, Russell Gaskamp and Kelly Gregg never competed against each other.

They'll have their chance Saturday in the Cotton Bowl. The OU (2-2, 0-1 Big 12) vs. Texas (3-2, 1-1) contest at 11:30 a.m. is one of six Big 12 Conference football games.

Gaskamp, the only Oklahoman on the Longhorns roster, is a fifth-year senior center. Gregg, a defensive tackle, leads Oklahoma in tackles and has three sacks along with nine tackles for losses.

Gaskamp said he never got to wrestle Gregg because Gregg was in Class 5A from Edmond and Gaskamp was in Class 3A from Weatherford.

In the 93rd renewal of the OU-Texas series, this is only the 15th time in the 62 seasons of The Associated Press poll that neither team is ranked, and only the ninth time in 29 years that at least one of the teams isn't undefeated. Oklahoma has lost two straight games by a combined three points.

Longhorn running back Ricky Williams, who leads the nation in rushing, will wear No. 37 in honor of Doak Walker. He needs 19 yards to pass Herschel Walker and move into third place on the NCAA Division I career rushing list. He needs 841 yards this season to pass Tony Dorsett's record of 6,082 yards from 1973-76.

Four Big 12 teams (No. 2 Nebraska, No. 5 Kansas State, No. 14 Colorado and unranked Texas Tech) are still undefeated going into the weekend. At least one of those will fall away this week because Kansas State and Colorado play each other.

Other games on tap this weekend:

— Nebraska (5-0, 1-0) takes its nation-best 19-game winning streak to College Station for a 2:30 p.m. game against No. 18 Texas A&M, which is 1-0 in Big 12 play but only 3-2 on the season because of a forfeit that took away a victory over Louisiana Tech. Quarterback Bobby Newcombe has scored on six of his 39 carries and tailback DeAngelo Evans has scored on four of his 28 carries for the Cornhuskers. Aggies tailback Dante Hall rushed for 177 yards last week against Kansas.

■ Big 12 Roundup

— Oklahoma State (2-2, 1-1) is at Texas Tech (5-0, 2-0) at 6 p.m. Ricky Williams is the nation's second-leading rusher for the Red Raiders, and quarterback Rob Peters returned from a season-opening injury to throw for 226 yards and run for 106 more last week. Oklahoma State running back Nathan Simmons gained 114 yards last week, becoming the player in two years to gain more than 100 yards against Nebraska.

— Kansas (2-3, 0-3) is at Baylor (1-3, 0-1) at 6 p.m. The Jayhawks are 15 points away from two more Big 12 wins, and the Bears have dropped their last two games by four points. Statistics guru Jeff Sagarin has judged Baylor's schedule to this point the hardest in the nation. Kansas' defense or special teams have five TD's.

— Missouri (3-1, 1-0) at Iowa State (2-3, 0-2) at 1 p.m. The Tigers have been among the nation's top three in rushing all season, but Iowa State is more balanced while scoring 28.6 points per game. Cyclones quarterback Todd Bandhauer leads the Big 12 in passing on 94-of-180 for 1,232 yards and 11 touchdowns, but Tigers defensive back Harold Piersey has seven interceptions in his last 15 games.

— No. 5 Kansas State (4-0, 1-0) at No. 14 Colorado (5-0, 2-0) at 6 p.m. KSU leads the nation with 62.3 points per game and is outstanding on specialty teams. The Wildcats average 26.4 yards on punt returns and 33.7 yards on kickoff returns, and quarterback Michael Bishop has completed 49 of 84 passes for 902 yards, nine touchdowns and no interceptions. Colorado QB's Mike Moschetti and Adam Bledsoe have combined for 1,045 net passing yards and nine TDs. Wide receiver Darrin Chiaverini has 25 receptions for 317 yards and four TDs.

Michigan safety gets suspended

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan safety Marcus Ray will miss two more games of his senior season after the NCAA found a sports agent had given him free food, access to a stadium skybox and help with hotel rooms.

The school said Friday that Ray and his mother received tickets to a July jazz festival in Cincinnati from agent James Gould, including access to a skybox and food at Cinergy Field.

The investigation also found that Gould had helped Ray's friends with arrangements for hotel room payments. The total value of the tickets and rooms was $477.23. Ray will donate that amount to charity as part of his punishment.

"This experience has humbled me," Ray said at a news conference with coach Lloyd Carr and athletic director Tom Goss. "I have never had any intention to accept gifts or funds from any sports agent or representative.

"I love Michigan, and I never intended to embarrass this program."

The NCAA ruled that Ray, one of the teams three captains, should be suspended for a total of five games. He has missed three games since the investigation began, and will be eligible to play in the Wolverines' Oct. 31 game at Minnesota.

School officials had asked the NCAA to reinstate Ray immediately.

Injured Wildcat attends practice

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Defensive back Leland Gayles is back on his feet, and back on campus, less than a week after his frightening neck injury at Husky Stadium.

Gayles walked slowly out to Arizona's practice Thursday, his neck in a brace.

Gayles spent two nights at the University of Washington Medical Center after he was injured in a collision with teammate Marcus Bell during Arizona's 31-28 victory over Washington.

The game was suspended for several minutes while trainers and doctors cautiously tended to Gayles, fearing he might have suffered a paralyzing injury. Eventually, he was diagnosed with a bruised spinal cord.

He was released from the hospital on Monday after he regained feeling on the left side of his body.

Stars hope injury-free season helps them take Stanley Cup

By Mike Heika
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

You don't win a Stanley Cup without planning. Then again, it's difficult to plan for the unexpected.

That's the quandary facing the Stars as they prepare for the 1998-99 season, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. tonight when the Buffalo Sabres and goalie Dominik Hasek, the reigning and two-time MVP, visit Reunion Arena.

"We believed we had a pretty good chance at the start of the playoffs last season, but then the injuries got to us," Stars coach Ken Hitchcock said. "So it's hard to look that far in advance."

But obvious key moments await as the Stars try to turn a room full of talent into Stanley Cup champions. It won't be easy, with Hitchcock emphasizing that the team must remain one of the top defensive groups in the NHL, while acknowledging that the Stars' biggest problem in last season's playoffs was that the team didn't score enough goals.

Hitchcock said he knows there are issues, but he also said the team can't solve its problems without playing games.

"We never plan more than 30 days in advance," he said. "We take it month by month and week by week."

Here's how some of those months and weeks might unfold:

October

Key stat: Seven home games, two on the road.

Key dates: Stars raise Presidents' Trophy banner today. The first appearance of San Jose Sharks defenseman and Public Enemy No. 1 Bryan Marchment to Reunion Arena, on Oct. 24. The first rematch with defending Stanley Cup champion Detroit Red Wings, on Oct. 31 at Reunion Arena.

Key issues: Hitchcock has emphasized that if the line of Hull, Mike Modano and Jere Lehtinen isn't defensively responsible, he will break them up. Hitchcock's target date for the experiment is one month.

When does Joe Nieuwendyk return and will he be bothered by his injured knees? He said he wants to err on the side of caution, and he knows his body well. Nieuwendyk interacting with linemates Pat Verbeek and Jamie Langenbrunner, as well as with Hull and Modano on the power play, will be crucial to the team's success.

November

Key stat: Of 10 games in November, nine are against playoff teams from last season.

Key dates: Stars make first visit to Joe Louis Arena in Detroit on Friday the 13th — why does that sound bad? Brett Hull makes first return to St. Louis, on Nov. 21.

Key issues: In the Stars' trip to San Jose, tough guy Brent Severyn will likely be pushed to the wall by the Sharks and the rivalry. How Severyn reads his team's need for physical play and fighting will be a key. Timing his fights is as important as winning them.

The Stars have to win convincingly in Detroit to show they can compete with the Stanley Cup champions.

December

Key stat: 10 of 15 games on the road, including five-game trip sandwiched around Christmas.

Key dates: Four-game West Coast road trip to start the month tests the durability of Stars' television-watching fan base. Second and final trip to Detroit, on Dec. 18.

Key issues: By now, the Stars have likely suffered injuries, and the heavy road schedule will test that. By the end of the month, the Stars will have played the Sharks four times and will have played 10 games in their physical division.

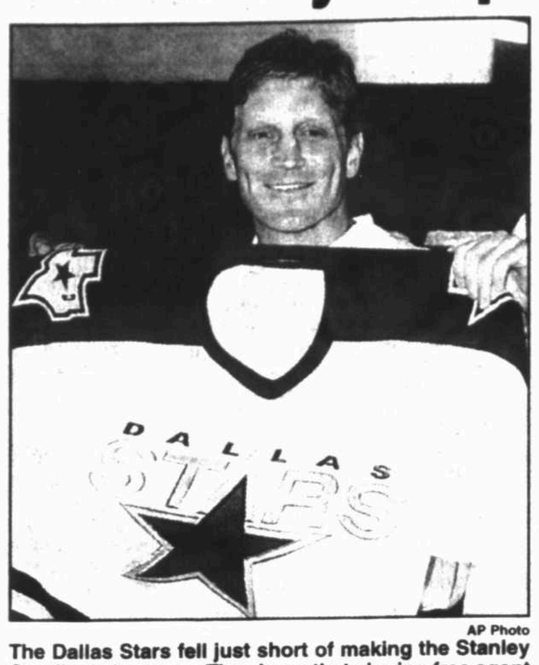
With games against Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Toronto and Nashville, the Stars need to prove they can beat lesser teams on a consistent basis.

January

Key stat: Eight of 12 games against nonplayoff teams from last season.

Key dates: Longest road trip of the season takes Stars to West Coast and Canada for five games Jan. 7-15. All-Star Game on Jan. 24 in Tampa, Fla. Make reservations early, Stars players could be filling hotels with friends and family.

Key issues: If the mental welfare of the team is an issue, this month could test it most severely. The Stars are loaded with potential goal-scorers in Hull, Modano, Nieuwendyk and Pat Verbeek — yet it's likely at least one or two will be left off the All-Star team. Does a potential slight harm the chemistry of the team?



AP Photo

The Dallas Stars fell just short of making the Stanley Cup finals last year. They hope that signing free agent Brett Hull will get them over that hump.

February

Key stat: Nine of 12 games at home.

Key games: Avalanche come to town for two Sunday afternoon games Feb. 7 and 21. Only visit of Pittsburgh Penguins and Jaromir Jagr, on Feb. 26. Don't get too excited, last season was a 0-0 tie.

Key issues: There is the chance that Roman Turek could be playing better than Ed Belfour at this stage, particularly in key games. Will the Stars test Turek's ability as a possible replacement for Belfour or do they quash a potential controversy by playing Belfour as much as he likes?

By this time, the Stars will have been taken a good look at rookie Jamie Wright and potential looks at Jason Botterill or Jon Sim with the Michigan K-Wings. If they hope to use any of the rookies on a regular basis, now is the time to start working them into the lineup.

March

Key stat: 10 road games out of 15, 10 games against playoff teams from last season.

Key games: Stars in a New York state of mind with road games against Rangers (second), Islanders (fourth) and Sabres (fifth). Stars' only game with Flyers this season is March 14 in Philadelphia. New schedule means Flyers don't visit Texas.

Key issues: It's hard to imagine that the Stars need anything to add to the mix, but the trade deadline in late March will provide interesting discussion. Do the Stars seek a guarantee for the Stanley Cup and spend more?

April

Key stat: Five-game homestand April 4-14.

Key games: Hull returns again to St. Louis. April 3. Stars play host to Red Wings on April 4. Wow, what a weekend. Wayne Gretzky makes only trip to Reunion Arena with New York Rangers, on April 9.

Key issues: Stars played near perfect in April last season and appeared ready to crush any opponent. With five-game homestand including meeting with Red Wings, they should again be trying to shape into form.

Hitchcock's philosophy is always to ask 100 percent from his players, but there will be questions whether he should rest players early in the month — or in late March — to get them ready for the playoffs.

Trade Balance wins Kentucky Futurity; Muscles Yankee misses Triple Crown

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Muscles Yankee's bid for the first harness racing triple crown in 26 years fell short Friday, as the winner of the Hambletonian and the Yonkers Trot was eliminated in preliminary heats of the $340,000 Kentucky Futurity.

Instead, it was Trade Balance who defeated Conway Hall in a two-horse race-off to win the 106th running of the Futurity at the Red Mile.

Muscles Yankee's hope of becoming trotting's first triple crown winner since Super Bowl in 1972 may have been literally choked off in the first of two preliminary heats. The colt was running second just past the half-mile mark when he was boxed in by then-leader Kick Tail and Trade Balance, who was swinging outside on the right.

Driver John Campbell said he had to pull hard on the reins to restrain his horse, apparently cutting off Muscles Yankee's airflow.

"I just didn't want him to be going that fast," Campbell said, adding that, after that, "The horse just wasn't himself."

"When he got parked down the backstretch, he just didn't race like I thought he would, that's for sure," Muscles Yankee trainer Chuck Sylvester said.

Muscles Yankee led briefly in the second heat and was a close second behind Trade Balance at the top of the stretch, but fell back when Conway Hall surged, finishing seven lengths back in third place — and out of the race.

Few expected Muscles Yankee to say his goodbye so early. The Valley Victory son had won easily in the first two legs of the triple crown. And he looked strong winning by six lengths in a tuneup race last Saturday.

The bettors sent Muscles Yankee off as a 1-9 favorite in the opening heat, and Trade Balance driver-trainer David Wade, whose horse was second to Muscles Yankee in the Yonkers Trot, may have been the only person convinced Muscles Yankee would not win the triple crown.

"I wasn't so impressed with him at the Yonkers Trot," Wade said. "He beat me because we were on a half-mile track and he got a jump on me at the head of the stretch.

"I thought I would get a clean shot at him here because of the big stretch and the long straightaway. We weren't going to get a cheap race out of this, that's for sure."

Skip Away sends owners running to bank

NEW YORK — Call it horse sense — the change of mind that led trainer Sonny Hine to purchase Skip Away.

Hine and his wife, Carolyn, were driving home after they and a partner had voided the $30,000 purchase of a 2-year-old because the colt had a chipped ankle.

The partner didn't want damaged goods. The trainer, however, was thinking about his wife wanting a horse for her birthday.

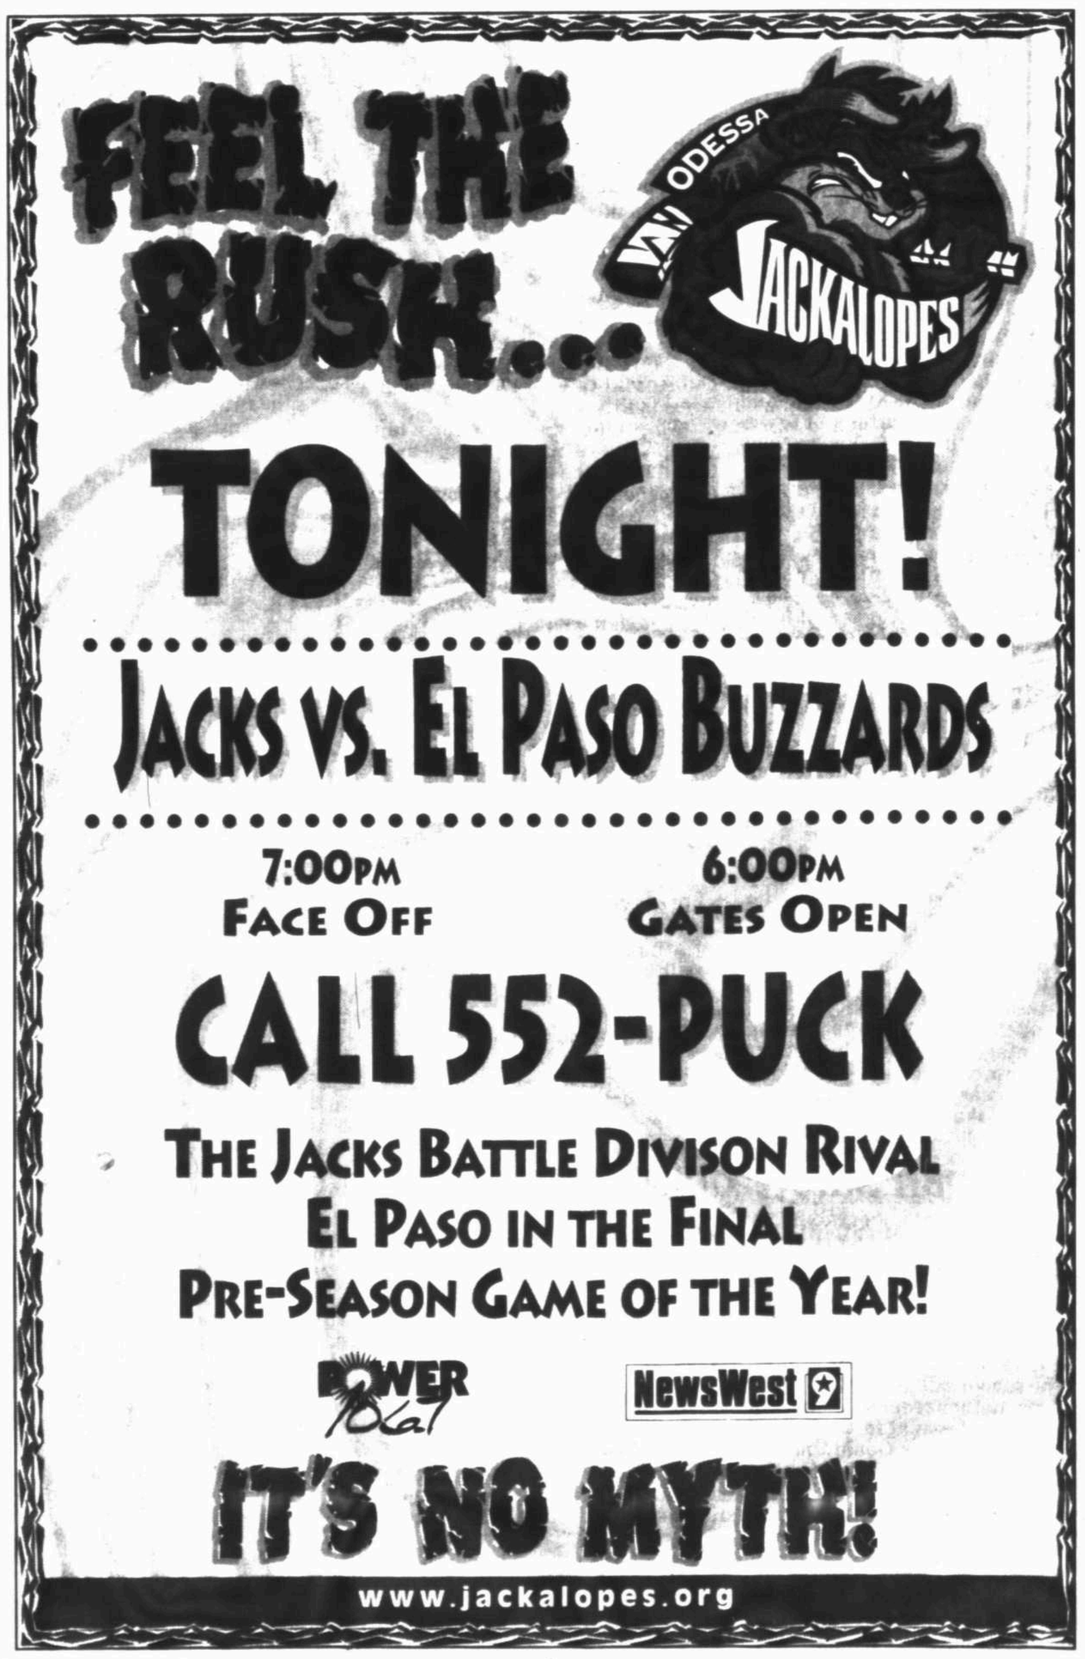
Besides, he thought, "I had the daddy (Skip Trial) and he ran with chips in his ankles. He ran 38 times."

So Carolyn Hine became the owner of Skip Away. And because of the ankle chip, $7,500 was chipped off the price.

"One of my best deals," Hine said at the draw for the $1 million Jockey Club Gold Cup on Saturday at Belmont Park.

No horse has been able to beat him in his last nine starts. And if he wins Saturday, the big, tough, gray 5-year-old will make history by breaking the $10 million earnings barrier.

The career money winner is Cigar at $9,999,815. Skip Away has earned $9,506,350 on 18 wins, 10 seconds and five thirds in 36 starts at 14 different tracks. Win No. 19 — 10th straight — would be worth $600,000.



Unbeaten Americans roll, face Swedish team next

By Robert Millward

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — They started in howling wind and driving rain, and finished in brilliant sunshine. In between, Tiger Woods, Mark O'Meara and John Daly maintained their mastery of the Old Course on Friday to set up a battle of unbeatens in the Dunhill Cup.

On a day when the weather was so fierce that one player, Zimbabwe's Tony Johnstone, took triple-bogey at two straight holes, the U.S. team of major champions stayed unbeaten with a 3-0 victory over Japan and posted scores more common in calmer conditions.

Woods, the world's top-ranked golfer and 1997 Masters winner, followed up his opening-day 66 with a 2-under 70 to beat Japan's Katsuma Miyamoto by 7, and O'Meara matched that score for a 5-shot victory over Hiroyuki Fujita.

"The true Old Course came out," said O'Meara, this year's Masters and British Open champion. "We had all four seasons — wind, rain, the cold, the sun came out and more wind. You can play the first five or six holes in one type of weather and within 15-20 minutes it can change."

Daly had trouble with the elements and the course where he won the British Open in 1995, but still beat Nobuo Serizawa 77-80.

The Americans have scored two sweeps in their search for a semifinal spot and next play Sweden, which also stayed unbeaten with a sweep of England.

Mathias Gronberg came back from 3 down with two holes to play to beat Lee Westwood in a playoff. Per Ulrik Johansson and Patrik Sjoland then both carded 70s to beat David Carter and Peter Baker by 3.

In Saturday's final group matches, Daly goes out first against Johansson. Woods faces Gronberg and O'Meara plays last against Sjoland.

"Mark said do you want to keep the same rotation as the first two rounds and it's been good so far," Daly said. "Mark's the captain and I do what he tells me."

Scotland and Spain, tied for first place in Group 2, also play Saturday after a pair of 2-1 wins.

The Scots downed Ireland, with Colin Montgomerie, a surprise loser on Thursday to China's Zhang Lian-wei, the only player in the match not over par.

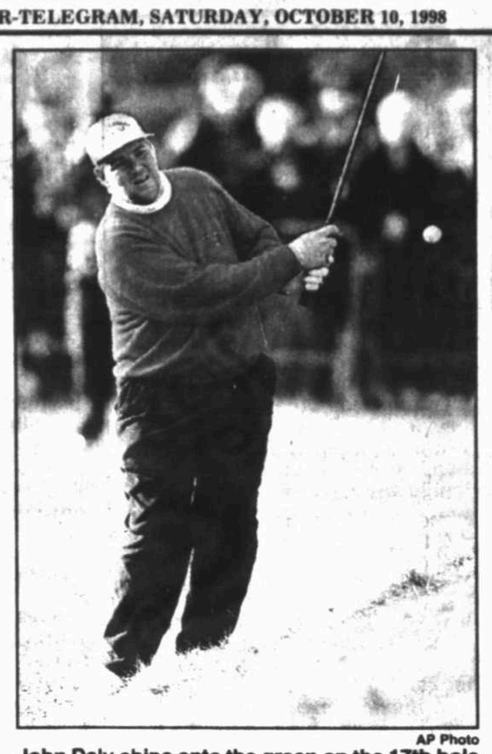
Montgomerie's 72 gave him a 6-stroke victory over Paul McGinley, while Gary Orr edged Padraig Harrington by 1. Darren Clarke gained Ireland's sole victory with a 73 and 2-stroke victory over Andrew Coltart.

Spain downed China despite Jose Maria Olazabal's 1-stroke loss to Wu Xiang-bing. The Spaniard was penalized a stroke for accidentally dropping his marker onto his ball on the green.

Zimbabwe, seeded third, meets South Africa for a place in the semifinal even though both were upset Friday.

Ernie Els, who was 2-up at the turn, lost to Sven Struver at the second extra hole after they each carded 4-over 76s in the atrocious conditions. That gave Germany a 2-1 win.

Zimbabwe's Nick Price scored a 2-under 70 to beat Frenchman Olivier Edmond by eight strokes. But Mark McNulty's 81 lost by 10 to Jean Van de Velde and Johnstone blew a 5-stroke lead after 12 to lose by 2 to Thomas Levet.



AP Photo
John Daly chips onto the green on the 17th hole of the Old Course at St. Andrews, Scotland, during Friday's second day of play in the Dunhill Cup. The U.S. team beat Japan, 3-0.

Johnstone was still four ahead before he went to 14 and 15 and triple bogeyed both. He finished with a 79 and an 8-over 44 on the back nine.

Australia beat South Korea 3-0 to stay unbeaten and New Zealand edged Argentina 2-1 when Eduardo Romero conceded at the 17th. Romero trailed by 5 strokes when he hit his approach out of bounds at the Road Hole.

Davenport takes over tennis' No. 1 ranking

FILDERSTADT, Germany (AP) — For so long, ever since she picked up a racket in Newport Beach, Calif., this is what Lindsay Davenport wanted.

She took over the No. 1 ranking on Friday, supplanting Martina Hingis at the top of women's tennis and ending her 80-week reign.

"I've dreamed of being the best ever since I was a little kid," Davenport said from the Porsche Grand Prix.

Her game — and her ranking — soared this year after she dropped 35 pounds. Last month, the 22-year-old captured the U.S. Open for her first Grand Slam title.

The daughter of a former U.S. Olympic volleyball player, Davenport becomes the eighth woman to be ranked No. 1 since the computer rankings started in 1975.

Besides Hingis, the others ranked No. 1 were Chris Evert, Martina Navratilova, Tracy Austin, Steffi Graf, Monica Seles and Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario.

Hingis became the youngest No. 1 in history when she took over the top spot on March 31, 1997. She replaced Graf, who was No. 1 for 377 weeks.

"It's no drama that I'll be the No. 2 for a little while. It's good for the motivation," said Hingis, who has not won a tournament since May. "But at the moment, Lindsay is simply the better player. She belongs at No. 1."

Davenport actually moved into the No. 1 spot when Hingis lost to Dominique Van Roost of Belgium 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4 in the quarterfinals of the Porsche Grand Prix. But Davenport would have claimed the top ranking later in the day anyway when she defeated No. 7 seed Nathalie Tauziat of France 7-6 (7-1), 7-5 in the quarters.

Hingis, slowed by an ankle injury, fought back from the brink of defeat several times, falling behind in all three sets, before Van Roost blasted a forehand down the line to win.

The Swiss teen-ager could regain her top position next week at Zurich, Switzerland, but the ankle may stop her from playing. After the second set she was treated courtside.

"I don't know if I can play or not, but certainly I should think about taking a long break anyhow," Hingis said.

Hingis' No. 1 ranking had been in danger for months with Davenport on a hot streak since Wimbledon. She won four titles and lost just twice.

Last year at this time, Hingis had a whopping 3,095-point lead over then-No. 2 Jana Novotna in the computer rankings.

Duval takes lead with 67 at Michelob

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — David Duval, much more relaxed and self-assured than the player who won here last year, shot a 4-under-par 67 Friday to take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the Michelob Championship.

Once most notable as the player who didn't win with seven runner-up finishes before his playoff triumph last year, Duval has won a tour-high six times in the past year and become a constant contender.

In 20 events this season, he's finished in the top 10 10 times.

"When you've done well and won some golf tournaments, it's a lot easier to go out and play like I have these two days," said Duval, who was at 10-under 132. He won last year with a 13-under total.

"I think the main thing is I've gotten a little easier going because I've proven that I could win. I don't have that burden. I don't have it being asked every week, so I don't have to worry about it."

First-round co-leader Phil Tataurangi and Frank Lickliter, who started the day one shot back, were tied for second at 133. Lickliter and Brian Claar both got to 10 under, but Lickliter bogeyed No. 18 and Claar made a triple bogey on the par-4 finishing hole on the 6,853-yard River Course at Kingsmill.

"I just picked the wrong time to hit a low snap hook," said Claar, whose tee shot landed in the pond to the left of the closing fairway.

"It's like taking a no-hitter into the ninth and losing."

Claar is one of five players three shots back and tied for fourth. Others in the group are Kirk Triplett, Gary Hallberg, Bradley Hughes and Steve Pate.

Lickliter tried to go at the stick on No. 18, but hit his 4-iron approach into the deep rough, left himself about a 10-foot par putt and missed.

"I made bogey trying to make birdie," he said.

Tataurangi, who shot a 68, stands 165th on the earnings list and needs a pay day of around $70,000 in one of the three remaining events to retain his tour card. He said it's hard to play without thinking about that, too.

"I've been thinking about it all year, really," the New Zealander said of the exemption that goes to the top 125 on the tour's money list. "If you haven't got exempt status and haven't gotten your money up early in the year, it's certainly on your mind. You have to go out and play and play well."

Duval never had to worry about his card. He finished 10th and 11th in prize money his first two years, but knows pressure from the questioning that dogged him everywhere until he finally got that first career victory.

"It's been a lot harder for him because of the position he's in," Duval said of Tataurangi. "There's a lot more riding on it. I don't know if he finished at nine under or 10, but what he shot was better than what I shot."

Pak takes lead at Tournament of Champions

OPELIKA, Ala. — Rookie sensation Se Ri Pak, despite making her first bogey in over 100 holes, shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a two-stroke lead over Helen Alfredsson, Kelly Robbins and defending champion Annika Sorenstam in the LPGA Tournament of Champions.

Pak, whose four wins this year include two major tournaments, was at 7-under 137 for two trips around the 6,300-yard Lakes Course at Grand National.

Pak overtook Robbins after the first-round leader double bogeyed and bogeyed Nos. 3 and 4 to drop to three under. Robbins got back to five under after nine holes but couldn't make up any ground after that and finished with a 73.

Sorenstam, who has also won four times this year, and Alfredsson, a two-time winner this season, each had a second-round 70.

Pak, who had four birdies in her round Friday, bogeyed No. 10, ending a string of 103 holes without going over par.

Johnson, seeking her first win of the year, went to the 18th tee one shot off the lead double bogeyed the hole for a 70, dropping into a tie at 140 with Sherri Steinhauer, who had a 70, and Juli Inkster, who had a 73.

The 18th hole shook up the leaderboard as none of the 13 players under par birdied the 388-yard par-4 with three bogeys to go with Johnson's double.

Leader John Morgan seeking first North American title

NAPA, Calif. — John Morgan, seeking his first North American title in a three-decade career that has included victories in Europe and Africa, shot a 5-under-par 67 for the first-round lead of the Transamerica seniors tournament.

Morgan used a run of three straight birdies starting at No. 11 at the Silverado Country Club to take a one-shot lead over eight golfers.

Morgan, an Englishman who played for 25 years on the European tour, has won tournaments in places such as Nigeria, Sierra Leone and Cyprus. He said a win this weekend would be "the highlight of my career."

"Winning a tournament over here would be bigger than those others because of the quality of players and quality of courses here," he said.

Morgan, whose best finish on the Senior PGA Tour this season has been two fourth-place ties, had a bogey on the first hole but then made six birdies. He is playing full time on the senior tour this year, which has made it tough to get home.

In fact, he bought a house in England last winter and hasn't even had a chance to unpack.

"The grass is probably about a foot high now," he said. "I'm missing out on tidying up at home. But I'm happier playing here."

Kenny Schrader signs autographs for fans Friday after his qualifying run for Sunday's Winston 500 at the Talladega Superspeedway in Talladega, Ala. Schrader claimed the pole with a speed of 196.153 mph.

Schrader claims top spot for Winston 500

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Ken Schrader put his "good little hot rod" on the pole Friday, taking the top qualifying spot for the Winston 500 at Talladega Superspeedway.

Schrader, who hadn't won a pole since September 1997 at Loudon, N.H., left the rest of the contenders in his dust with a lap of 196.153 mph in a new Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

"I knew the car would be good," Schrader said. "The guys told me it was a good little hot rod. They had to build me a new car because the one I drove here in April was in that big crash."

It is the 21st pole of Schrader's Winston Cup career and made him the 13th pole-winner in 29 events this season.

Schrader's speed was the fastest on the 2.66-mile, high-banked Talladega track since Terry Labonte's 196.532 in the 1995 spring race. In fact, it is one of the fastest at Talladega or Daytona, NASCAR two biggest and fastest tracks, since the sanctioning body began using carburetor restrictor plates in 1988 to slow the cars.

"Our restrictor plate program's been good. We qualified third at Daytona (in February). We know we've got a good car," noted Schrader, who has four victories but hasn't won since 1988. "Hopefully, we can turn it into a good finish on Sunday.

"Hey, everybody out there's hungry to win. I haven't won in forever and there's a bunch of cats out there who haven't won ever. The fact that you haven't makes you maybe hungrier, but not any hungrier than those other guys."

The two drivers at the top of the season point chase, Jeff Gordon and Mark Martin, also qualified solidly. Gordon, who leads by 174 points with five races remaining, will start sixth in a Chevrolet and Martin's Ford was eighth in Friday's session.

"Last week was pretty tough," said Gordon, who started 26th last Sunday in the race at Charlotte Motor Speedway and had to scramble for a fifth-place finish in a race Martin won. The results chopped Gordon's lead over Martin by 25 points.

"We knew we had a real good race car, but I wasn't comfortable starting 26th," the two-time and defending series champion said. "Now we're starting a little closer to the front and we'll see if we can stay there."

Martin, who generally has struggled to find speed in his restrictor plate cars, was excited by his top-10 effort, especially in light of the fact that he had to use a provisional start here in April after failing to qualify on speed.

"The credit goes to the guys in the engine room and the guys in the body shop," Martin said. "Ever since July, whenever we knew we were going to have these (restrictor plate races at Talladega and Daytona) back to back, (crew chief) Todd Parrott went to work and knew he could do a little bit better with our cars."

Gordon goes for another big bonus

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Jeff Gordon will be aiming at a third straight $1 million bonus Sunday in the Winston 500, the last chapter of the series sponsor's No Bull 5 promotion in 1998.

Five of NASCAR's biggest events this year offer the big bonus if the winner is one of the drivers who finished in the top five at the previous No Bull 5 event. The program replaced the Winston Million, a promotion that paid $1 million to any driver winning three of four major Winston Cup events in a single season.

Bill Elliott won it in 1985, the first year it was offered. The bonus wasn't won again until Gordon did it last year by winning in Daytona, Charlotte and Darlington.

Dale Earnhardt was not eligible for the No Bull 5 money when he won the season-opening Daytona 500. Those eligible had finished in the top five in the DieHard 500 at Talladega Superspeedway last October.

Gordon again won the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte in May, but had not finished among the top five in Daytona. Since then, though, he has cashed in by winning both the Brickyard 400 in Indianapolis and the Southern 500 in Darlington.

The Winston 500, which has moved from May to October this year, is the last race of the year that is part of the Winston promotion.

The drivers eligible to win the $1 million this week are Gordon, Earnhardt, Jeff Burton, Dale Jarrett and Jeremy Mayfield.

"Look at the five guys who are in this," Gordon said. "Any of them could win on Sunday."

Gordon goes into the race holding a 174-point lead over Mark Martin as he chases his second straight Winston Cup title and third in four years.

"That (the money) is not a priority for me this week," Gordon noted. "I'd like to just come out of here with a top five. If we can be in the top five at the end, then I think we'll have a shot at winning it."

■ NASCAR Notebook

MO' MONEY: Gordon has the opportunity to win another $50,000 from Winston if he can win on Sunday.

The Winston Leader Bonus, which rolls over at $10,000 each race until it is won, is up to $50,000 going into this race.

The money goes to a driver who wins the race and also winds up the day first in the season points. Gordon has already won the money eight times this season, toting up $200,000, including $110,000 at Charlotte.

The only other bonus winner this season was Mayfield, who picked up $40,000 for his first career win in June at Pocono International Raceway. It has not been won since Gordon got $10,000 for his 10th win of the season at Darlington on Labor Day Weekend.

IROC RETURNS: Part of Talladega Superspeedway's 30th anniversary celebration next season will be the return of the True Value International Race of Champions series to the 2.66-mile oval.

IROC is a four-race, all-star series matching 12 of the top drivers from NASCAR, CART, the IRL and road racing in identically prepared cars.

The 100-mile race will take place on April 24, 1999, as part of the DieHard 500 weekend. The IROC series last raced at Talladega in 1996, when Al Unser Jr. nipped fellow CART star Robby Gordon by less than one second.

BODINE MILESTONE: Sunday's race will be the 500th career start for Geoff Bodine, making him only the 19th driver in NASCAR's 50-year history to reach that number.

"I'm very proud to be part of this and to have survived this long and made it this far," Bodine said. "If you see our press kit, on the cover is a picture of me in my first little go-kart my father built me when I was 6 years old.

"It was that little kid in that go-kart who had this dream to do this and be in this sport."

SOLD OUT: For the second year in a row, and only the second time in its history, Talladega has sold all of its grandstand seats for both Winston Cup races in a season.

The track now seats about 145,000, with another 40,000 or so expected in the infield for Sunday's race.

Honda's new minivan delivers features consumers desire

BY BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

STAUNTON, Va. — Plowing over plush ridges and swooping through deep dips during a drive across the Appalachian Mountains on Route 66, the Virginia Byway, a new edition of Honda's commendable Odyssey minivan traces a tight line around countless curves and hunkers firmly on the straights, acting in virtually all aspects like a well-heeled sedan.

An extended chassis, derived from Honda's popular Accord sedan and coupe with car-like independent suspension and steering mechanisms, serves as Odyssey's foundation.

The longer platform — stretching the former Odyssey's wheelbase by 6.7 inches and adding 13.6 inches in overall length — sets up a smoother and more stable ride quality, while also enabling a larger passenger compartment which expands by significant dimensions in all directions.

Odyssey looks crisp and clean in new form with keen sheetmetal styling on the outside and a new interior scheme laced with appealing flourishes that emphasize comfort and convenience in the Honda tradition.

Check behind the two front hinged doors and you'll find two sliding doors for easy passenger access to second and third tiers of seats.

Honda's design also lowers the floor of Odyssey so you may easily step inside — much like you would slip into a family sedan — thereby removing the need to hoist your body aboard as station wagons require.

Making a van more like a car has always been the big idea behind a minivan, of course, but until this design no one dared equip a minivan with so many car-like comforts.

Actually, the concept behind Odyssey's interior comforts comes from commercial airliners with what Honda designers imagine is the environment of a first-class cabin. Each passenger receives a form-fitting seat with 3-point safety belt and individual controls for functions like seatback tilt position as well as overhead buttons to manage air conditioning and lighting.

The idea to add these individual controls came about through surveys of minivan usage during a road show with members of Honda's research and development team packing in a fleet of Odysseys and driving to malls, parks, schools, shopping centers, campgrounds and tourist areas — sites usually with a concentration of minivans.

Survey conclusion: Give us more comfortable space in a minivan, more car-like amenities, and a more sophisticated vehicle cast with aggressive and powerful imagery.

New second generational editions of Odyssey reflect these consumer desires, plus opinions expressed through other market research. As a result, Odyssey gains strength in engines and chassis to improve performance and ride quality, then applies so many perks inside.

Several variations in Odyssey's second-row seating create interesting options for hauling people and cargo.

Two captain-style chairs in the second row will slide together to convert into a bench when more floor area is needed on the right side. These seats also can be removed quickly by merely flipping a latch or two — and one person can do that job, thanks to light-weight frames.

Reaching the second-row seats is easy: Just open a door, slip aboard and buckle up. Access comes from either side due to the new twin doors, and without bending and scooting or crawling.

Reaching the third tier's 2-person bench does take more work, but not so to fold it flat into the floor because this thing flips and ducks in a neat disappearing act.

Stand at the rear of the vehicle, reach through the back gate and remove both head restraints, which store in a handy side pocket, then twist a release knob on the back of the seatback and fold it forward. Next, twist a second knob on the cushion's spine to unlock the bench. It will flip with only a slight touch and slip into a floor well.

No other minivan makes rear seat removal this easy.

As a secondary trick, the third bench also flips down and back to the floor so the seatback becomes the seat and seat is the back, all facing rearward as a handy new seat for use at a tailgate party. The top-hinged lift gate swings up so you can stand beneath it in shelter.

Behind the third tier is more than adequate storage space, including additional room in a well.

A spare tire, removed from the passenger compartment to make way for people and gear, stows in its own well located mid-ship below second-tier seats.

Also, the floor of Honda's minivan is perfectly flat, so with second and third rows of seats out of the way, there's a vast cargo bay that will accommodate even big items like that proverbial 4x8 sheet of plywood.

Up front, Honda provides two individual captain-style bucket seats in a cockpit outfitted with dual airbags and all of the features you would expect to encounter in a fine luxury sedan.

Actually, all aspects of Odyssey's interior orient toward comfort — from power windows and door locks along with other power-assisted controls such as cruise control to assets like front and rear air conditioning with the individual controls at each seat, plus rear heat ducts.

Top trim level, Odyssey EX, adds power motivation to open and close the dual sliding rear doors. And the system has a safeguard device to stop moving if a rider's hand ends up in the path of a closing door.

Visibility from inside Odyssey appears superb, but particularly from the driver's view. Tall windows and thin roof pillars create a virtually uninterrupted field.

The chassis, with low center of gravity and wide track, applies 4-wheel independent suspension components and speed-sensing power rack and pinion steering. Brakes, with front discs and rear drums, tie to anti-lock controls as well as an electronic module which can optimize braking force in response to weight and placement of various cargo loads.

To power Odyssey, Honda designed a new 3.5-liter V6 engine and 4-speed electronic automatic transmission. The new V6, displacing 3.0 liters with single overhead cam and the wizardry of Honda's VTEC valve control applied, boosts output to 210 hp while elevating fuel economy numbers too. ■

1941 PLYMOUTH PICKUP

BY TAD BURNESS

Chrysler Corp. has been building Dodge trucks since the late 1920s. And up until the mid- 1970s, Chrysler Corp. also built Fargo trucks for the Canadian and export market.

However, since Plymouth was Chrysler Corp.'s top-selling car not long after its mid-1928 introduction for the 1929 season, it was decided by the mid- '30s that Plymouth trucks should also be offered.

The first commercial Plymouth (other than a taxi) was the 1935 three-door sedan delivery car, which had a door at the rear and blanked-out rear side windows. The 1936 version was larger and longer and was a genuine panel truck. In 1937, the Plymouth pickup was added to the commercial line. Plymouth pickups had grilles similar to those on the Plymouth automobiles until 1939. The 1941 Plymouth utility sedan and panel delivery had the typical 1941 Plymouth "banner-style" grille, but not the pickup.

A few early 1942 Plymouth delivery cars were built, but it's generally believed that no Plymouth pickups were built after the '42 season began and any pickup sold as a '42 was probably a leftover '41. However during the years of World War II, especially in 1944 and 1945, some other brands of pickups were built! (Later in 1945, cars began to return to the production line, for the 1946 season.)

Following World War II, no other Plymouths in the truck classification appeared until the 1974 Trail Duster and 1974 Voyager vans bearing the Plymouth nameplate. Dodge's counterparts were the Ramcharger and the vans (Sportsman series).

Plymouth pickup trucks of 1937 through 1941 are extremely rare, and most readers have probably never seen any. Fortunately, a few have been rescued by collectors.

"Encourage your children to read a newspaper every day. Who knows, one day they could reach the top of the charts."

As a kid, I wasn't sure whether I wanted to be a baseball player or an astronaut or a rock star. My parents said, "Whatever you do, get into the habit of reading." Encourage your kids to read – especially newspapers. Reading newspapers will bring the world to their door. Who knows, one day they could reach the top of the charts.

–Jon Bon Jovi, Musician/Actor

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Inspiration

"We are each of us angels with only one wing, and we can only fly by embracing each other."

— Luciano de Crescenzo taken from the book, "God's Vitamin C for the Spirit."

Today

✔ Family fair

Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road, is holding a Christian Family Fair from 2 to 6 p.m. today. The free fair will highlight the church's many activities as well as offer family entertainment and fellowship. The events include a concert by the Lone Star Brass Quintet, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.; and several children's activities including a moon-walk, face painting, fishing game and Truffles the Clown. Hot dogs and lemonade will be offered throughout the event.

✔ Blessing of animals

The annual "Blessing of the Animals" is set for 9 a.m. today at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1400 W. Illinois Ave. Special guests include some of Midland's K-9 Unit, Permian Basin Golden Retriever Rescue, the Sheriff's K-9 Unit as well as local seeing-eye dogs. Contributions will be to the Animal Outreach Association. Refreshments will be served for the animals and their human companions. For more information call 683-3428.

✔ Hopson concert

Church musician and composer, Hal H. Hopson, is to present a workshop 9:30 a.m.-noon today at Trinity Presbyterian Church, Andrews Highway at Louisiana Avenue. The workshop, "Congregational Song: Ways to Enrich the Participation of the Greater Choir of the Congregation," is designed for choir directors, choir members, pastors and educators. Hopson's compositions are included in the repertory of church choirs across the country. The workshop is open to the public. Story/2E

Spiritual freedom from behind closed doors

Diakonia Ministries attempts to reach out to those behind bars

" ... where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is freedom."

— II Corinthians 3: 17

By Amy Brasher
Staff writer

There are perhaps two types of prisoners — those locked behind bars in a four-wall cell who lack physical freedom, and those walking the streets who lack spiritual freedom. And whichever type of freedom they might lack, prison ministers open the door to a Christian foundation, hoping to lead them toward a brighter future.

John Schmidt, jail chaplain, devotes most of his week counseling the men and women behind bars in Midland County. As president of Diakonia Prison Ministries, he visits those incarcerated to try and reduce the recidivism rate through spiritual and personal counseling.

"Through counseling and Bible study, there are many local inmates who have refocused his or her

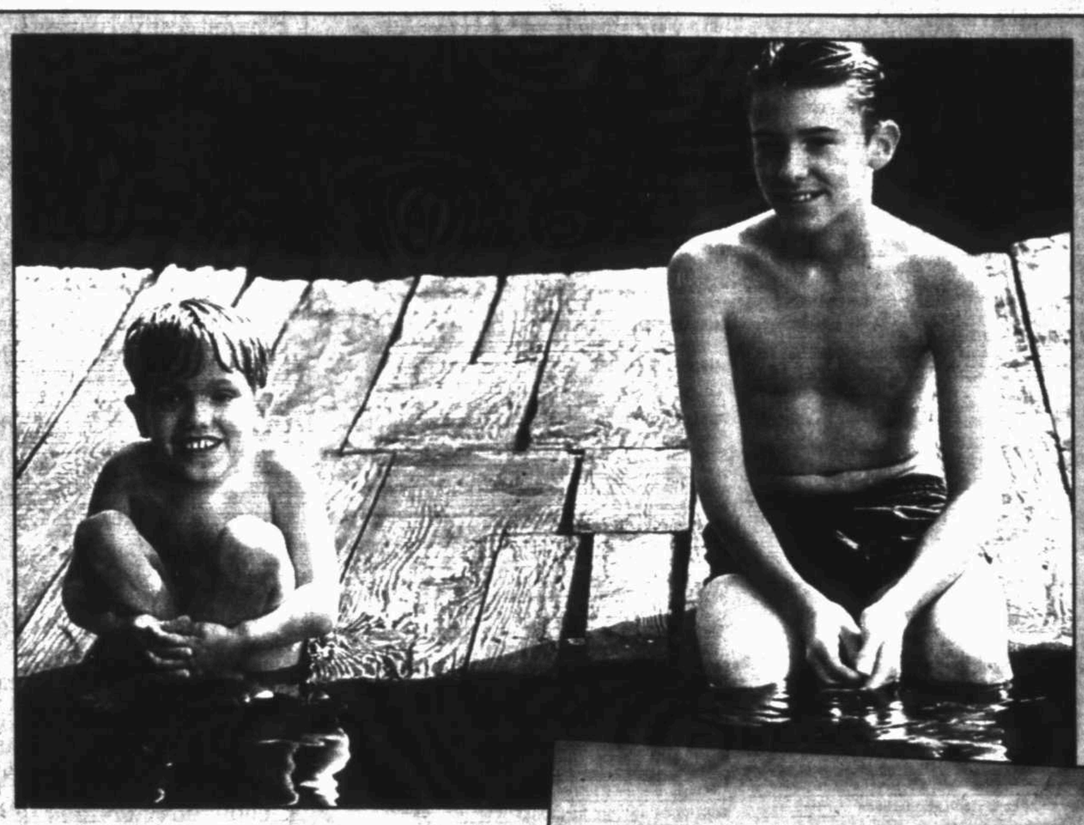
HOLLYWOOD GETS RELIGION



Recent movies where spiritual overtones are prevalent include, clockwise from left, "The Truman Show," "Simon Birch," and "The Prince of Egypt," a Dreamworks' animated film about the life of Moses, to be released in December.

Spate of recent movies indicates Hollywood growing fond of spirituality

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

There is a scene in Robert Duvall's movie "The Apostle" when the high-spirited, flawed but faithful Pentecostal preacher watches a ceremonial Catholic processional.

As the robed priest sprinkles incense on the crowd, Duvall's character smiles and says to himself, "You do it your way, I do it mine ... but we both get it done."

It is an obvious reference to the disparity of religious styles — and a reminder of the need for religious tolerance in today's world.

The same Duvall line could very well apply to what seems to be happening in the film world today. Hollywood is apparently developing quite a fondness for spiritual themes, as is evidenced in a spate of recent releases.

"Simon Birch." "What Dreams May Come." "The Apostle." And any number of what sometimes seems like a never-ending stream of movies with angels playing a central role.

From a darkened theater seat, though, it is often obvious that Hollywood's way of ministering is often a tad more unconventional than what a congregant would typically hear while sitting in a comfortable

Is 'E.T.' a retelling of the Christ story?

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Dr. David R. Allen, new head of the theater program at Midland College, has a rather interesting, but not unique, theory about the meaning of "E.T.," the 1983 film from Stephen Spielberg that has firmly entrenched itself in American culture.

Speculation has always held that the film is a retelling of the Christ story, and Allen buys into that notion.

"E.T. comes from above, is left behind, is given shelter by Elliott and, while he is with Elliott, brings plants back to life," Allen

The Good Book: Ruth (Part 8 of a 52 Part Series)

Overview:

The story takes place during the period of the judges, before the rise of the Israelites' Monarchy. A famine in Israel forces Naomi to leave her homeland and move to the despised region of Moab, where her husband and two sons eventually die. Naomi returns to Israel with her Moabite daughter-in-law, Ruth. Ruth pledges faithfulness to Naomi and her people and eventually becomes the great grandmother of King David.

Theme Passage

Ruth 1:16 — Ruth said, 'Where you go, I will go; where you lodge, I will lodge; your people shall be my people and your God my God.' "

'W.W.J.D' must be lived — not just worn

By Mark Leaverton

You may have seen bracelets being worn by many across the city. Little kids, big kids, adults, dads, moms. Police officers, postal workers, pastors, homemakers, government workers. People of all ages and from all walks of life have donned this unique fashion statement. They're usually made out of brightly colored cloth and are marked with the initials, "W.W.J.D." I think when we see some sort of mysterious code like that, we become at first very curious. But, there's just enough cynicism or indifference in most of us that we really don't want to ask the wearer what it means. We're afraid that he or she just might tell us more than we wanted to hear. Spelled out, W.W.J.D. means, "What Would Jesus Do?"

Kind of catchy, isn't it?

It's become so popular, much like those little fish symbols you see on automobile bumpers, that all sorts of people are seen wearing the bracelet. Many of whom, I imagine, don't really appreciate its true meaning or its inherent challenge. Some merely wear it because it's "the in thing" to wear.

So, what is this W.W.J.D. really all about? Why the question, "What Would Jesus Do?" And, why is that an important enough question to Building shrines and monuments in our hearts

Pharaohs built their own memorials, the glamorous pyramids and tombs. Other people memorialize their loved ones who have preceded them to their final home by building monuments or shrines. These buildings and epitaphs are beautiful, but impersonal. It is the privilege of memory and the opportunity of sharing it with others that gives us a unique common denominator. Each person, before he or she passes on, spends life preparing personal memorials, and these memorials are principally in our hearts.

Kituku

Memory, the treasure and invisible guardian of all human beings, equips those who have lost loved ones with the gift of lessening the pain of those grieving at the moment. From the storehouse of memories, we gather inspiration, lessons in living, feel connected, acknowledge our vulnerability and redefine the essence of living. Memories connect us to the other world, where our loved ones are residing, affirming that death only helps in changing our "address."

Death is not final. It is just a step within the eternal journey, a door to a more comforting and strife-free life.

None of my fallen ones was a war hero. Some were severed from the agonies of life by being called for their crowns too soon. But they, too, were heroes. They brought joy to our lives by being there, caring and giving us hope.

Even so, their deaths were lessons. Their departures revealed that a loss is always shared, thus lessening the pain of the grief. The phone calls, cards, visits by neighbors and friends were additional memoirs of a life well-lived and a heritage with lasting significance.

It's those dear ones with whom we share the memories of our departed loved ones I am indebted to honor. Somebody said they are like flower plants, grasses and shrubs planted around the hole where a front yard tree has been uprooted. Their roots grow where the tree's roots once were. Their presence reduces chances of seeing the empty hole. Their beauty keeps one looking at them rather than at the empty hole. These plants are nourished, weeded and watered with the same intensity of care as was provided for the tree.

Relatives and friends from different walks of life are those flower plants, grasses and shrubs. They cover the emptiness created by memories of loved ones. They make that which is bitter to endure to be possibly sweet. Relationships need to be nourished, weeded and watered, and not with leftovers of life, or trying to weed in the eleventh hour or with polluted water, but with the best of our resources.

The privilege of memory provides us with the opportunity of building lasting "shrines and monuments" in our hearts.

The privilege of memories is echoed in the of words of Prof. Morrie Schwartz, on his deathbed: "As long as we can love each other, and remember the feeling of love we had, we can die without ever really going away ... All the love you created is still there ... All the memories are still there ... You live on in the hearts of everyone you have touched and nurtured while you were here ... Death ends a life, not a relationship. (From Tuesdays with Morrie by Mitch Albom).

Noted composer Hal Hopson to give workshop, concert

From Staff Reports

Noted church musician and composer Hal Hopson will conduct a workshop today from 9:30 a.m.-noon and will then lead a hymn festival Sunday during the 10:55 a.m. morning worship service at Trinity Presbyterian Church, 2800 W. Louisiana, at the corner of Andrews Hwy., and Louisiana.

Hopson, a native of Waco now living in Dallas, has published more than 1,000 works, including compositions for organ, harpsichord, congregation and anthems for children's youth and adult choirs. His compositions have been featured at many national music events, and his cantata, "God With Us," has been performed on National Public Radio.

In the workshop, "Congregational Song: Ways To Enrich the Participation of the Greater Choir of the Congregation," Hopson, using an ecumenical approach, will work with pastors, educators, choir directors and choir members to help develop better congregational singing. Lunch is included. There is no charge for the workshop, however, donations will be accepted for the meal.

Hopson's hymn service Sunday will also feature a choir commissioning and will include combined choirs, brass and timpani, organ and congregation singing favorite hymns of history. The public is invited to attend the service.

Hopson has served on the church music faculties of Westminster Choir College, in Princeton, N.J., and Scarritt Graduate School, Nashville, Tenn.

An active clinician and conductor, he has led choir festivals and workshops throughout the United States and in Europe. His biography is included in "The International Who's Who in Music (Cambridge, England)" and he is a member of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Active in several professional organizations, Hopson has served on the national board of the Presbyterian Association of Musicians and Choristers Guild.

Many of Hopson's compositions appear in the Presbyterian Hymnal, the Book of Common Worship and the Psalter.

MOVIES: Hollywood's methods sometimes unorthodox

(From 1E)

pew. Still, film producers are often getting their messages across that a higher power is in charge.

Take "Simon Birch." Based on John Irving's novel, "A Prayer for Owen Meany," it is the story of a small boy, big on his faith and with an unending belief that God has a special plan for him. Simon also has a breast fetish. Instances of dialogue as conflicting as "God is gonna make me a hero" and "Your mom has the best breasts of all the moms" are common.

In "What Dreams May Come," Robin Williams' character has such an undying love for his wife, Annie, that he will go to whatever lengths necessary — from trudging through dusty corners of heaven to bravely exploring the depths of hell — in order to be reunited with her. The book, now a movie, provides an interesting and often beautiful vision of heaven and a terrifying view of hell. Then at the end, the viewer or reader is hit — quite unexpectedly — with the writer's beliefs on reincarnation. And so both the book and the movie turn out to be little more than a podium from which the creator, Richard Matheson, pushes his agenda of the afterlife, or, rebirth, in his terms.

Regardless the final message or the means used to arrive at a movie's central theme, Hollywood is at least finally giving us films without car chases, hostage situations, exploding jumbo jets, doomed teenagers and steamy sex sagas. And that, in and of itself, is worthy of noting.

But the question still begs an answer: Why the sudden fixation on the hereafter?

Dr. Randall Balmer, a religion professor of Barnard College-Columbia University in New York, said Hollywood has found a market and has honed in on it.

"I think it is Hollywood's recognition of a niche market that they can tap into," Balmer said. "It's probably significant also that most of these spiritually based movies are made by smaller production companies."

Balmer refused to guess if this was the film industry's attempt to placate a disgruntled religious right or to deflect some of the criticism the movement "hurls toward Hollywood," but did say the fundamentalist movement's refusal to put its support behind certain films that are clearly spiritual in nature is "distressing."

John Wilson, Books and Culture Editor for Christianity Online (www.christianity.net) said a return to such religious themes was bound to occur, especially after having been suppressed for so long.

"There is no single cause for this interesting trend. In part it reflects the much ballyhooed return to the spiritual in America, itself a phenomenon with many 'causes,' " he said. "In part it reflects the internal dynamics of the art form: the 'return of the repressed.'

"There remains enormous hostility to Christianity (especially of the orthodox variety) in Hollywood and in the culture industry generally. There are also people who are not at all religious but who are appalled at the drift of things in America and who are tentatively at least willing to make common cause with believers in a way they would never have considered a mere 10 years ago."

Dr. Mark Wildermuth, an English professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin who teaches classes in both 18th century literature and modern film, says the movement toward spiritual matters is not in the least surprising to him.

"You expect this kind of thing to happen at the end of a millennium," Wildermuth said. "There are always hopes and fears at the end of a century. There are always concerns that as you come to the end of a 100- or 1,000-year period that the end may be near, so it is quite natural to focus on spirituality."

Such end-of-century focusing is not without precedent, Wildermuth said, pointing to earlier century works like "The Fairy Queen" and Milton's "Paradise Lost," both of which were published in the latter parts of the 16th and 17th centuries.

Skeptics would likely suggest that such films are merely driven by a bottom line mentality. Hollywood sees that God is profitable so it responds in kind with artistic endeavors about the subject. How much it is profit-driven is purely relational to just how skeptical the critic, said Midland College theater professor Dr. David Allen.

Spiritual themes in movies are nothing new, Allen said. They're as old as Hollywood itself.

"It's been a very common theme," Allen said. "Movies like 'It's A Wonderful Life,' 'Pale Rider,' any of the spaghetti westerns, they were all speaking to what man's place in the world is. And we often have movies with God or angels coming down to intercede on our behalf.

"What has changed is the general public's interest, which has cycled back around to where we seem to have a greater fascination with the subject than before. And we're seeing it more than before. Hollywood sees this as a trend."

Allen speculates that the large-budget action films, while they did well this summer, did not quite meet previous expectations, perhaps another reason for the pendulum swinging back toward more sedate, heavenly topics.

"The audience may be getting a little tired of (action thrillers)," he said. "That market is still there, but the older baby boomers ... are certainly growing more interested in where they are in the world, their spirituality and religion."

So is all of this Hollywood-sponsored debate over matters spiritual a good thing? A revenue generating tactic? A passing fad?

"I guess we won't know until we're into into the 21st century," Wildermuth said. "In the case of past periods, it's been a good thing. It has helped people prepare for large changes right after we shift into a new period. It gets people in gear to face changes. In that respect it can be good, but it can also be bad if you're preparing so much for the end, you may be preparing for the wrong thing."

DIAKONIA: Ministry shares power of God's love with prisoners, families life for the future and reentered into the community as a productive citizen," Schmidt said.

The Diakonia Prison Ministry (Diakonia, Greek for "minister") recently organized the non-profit ministry, offering referral services to local inmates, parolees and their families. By utilizing Permian Basin agencies, the ministry is able to provide food, clothing, housing and employment to recently released inmates. In addition, it also provides donated religious and inspirational materials to the two Midland County Detention Centers.

Schmidt, who has been ministering to inmates for 16 years, said, "It is important if we can follow them through the system and help the families at the same time — then they will have something to go home to. The whole idea is to keep the family together while one of the family members is incarcerated."

Prison was an area overlooked by churches for many years, he added. "There are so many whose lives have been turned around."

Throughout the years, many of the inmates have completed several stages of a Bible study course. Most ended up requesting a single cell in order to quietly study, Schmidt said.

"There have even been those who hang the diploma in their cell after each course. Sometimes this is the only recognition they have ever had in their life, so it motivates them."

Schmidt and other members of the Diakonia Prison Ministry work on a volunteer basis, providing diverse religious backgrounds. The services are strictly voluntary. Each time the staff visits, those who want to be involved have the choice of which denomination they would like to attend.

Each of the four board members have different religious backgrounds and volunteer as prison ministers: Clyde Brown has been active in "Soul Patrol"; Jessie Guajardo is a deacon at Our Lady of Guadalupe; Jerry Jones has been active in Gideons and Jack McGraw attends Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

Another prison minister, although not affiliated with Diakonia Prison Ministries, believes in sharing the power of God with prisoners whether they lack spiritual freedom or physical freedom.

Freddy Haltom "hangs out at restitution centers and visits with those who are searching to find God in their hearts."

Haltom described his way of ministering differently than Schmidt's in that he "plays pool with the prisoners and talks about their relationship with God." In addition to a game of pool, Haltom has "Christian movie night," where he and the inmates "have some popcorn, drink some cokes, watch a Christian movie, and then talk about the movie."

Because prison is a reward system, Haltom said the prisoners gain privileges to go to church with him. "They want to be there. They are sincere."

By sharing the power of God with them, he said, "they go from saying 'This is my life — prison' — to 'Hey, there is hope for me.' "

Even though they are locked up physically, "there is freedom in Christ," he said. "We talk about being in prison, and I tell them that even those who walk the streets everyday are in a bigger prison. It's what's going on in your mind and your heart."

E.T.: 'Truman Show,' 'Shawshank Redemption' other spiritual films

(From 1E)

said. "He can communicate on a non-verbal level and he heals people. He is chased by the authorities, captured by the authorities and then dies. After his death, Elliott goes to him and he lives again and then Elliott takes him back to his space ship and he returns to heaven."

A simple translation with one further parallel: The last thing E.T. tells Elliott: "I'll be right here," the alien says, placing a finger on Elliott's heart.

There are overriding messages of faith and spirituality throughout many of the films of Spielberg, who is of the Jewish faith.

"Every single one of them," Allen said. "If you look at a lot of his films, you will see a recurring motif is light and moving toward the light. That is his sense of the spiritual. During a scene in 'Amistad,' the camera pans up a slave's body and he is holding his hand up to the sky and to the light of the stars. Throughout the film, there's a sense of moving toward the light."

"Close Encounters of the Third Kind," one of Spielberg's early films, dealt with "moving toward a greater understanding and of our place in the world," Allen said.

"Star Wars" is another example of a film that offers a "clear sense of spirituality with 'The Force' and (producer) George Lucas' pop take on that."

More recently, this summer's "The Truman Show" had clear religious overtones.

"One might be able to say that 'The Truman Show' is a feminist retelling of the story of Eden. And I'm not talking in terms of feminist being women's power, but in the philosophical sense of a different point of view than the masculine telling of the story that came before it: that men were everything and that everything was done for the man. The feminist meaning is that neither man nor woman is the most important, but that we are of equal value.

"If I look at it that way, I see the retelling of the Eden story (in 'The Truman Show'). The character Christof is God, Truman is Adam. As Truman goes through his world he is happy but dissatisfied, and then along comes Eve. One of the actresses in the movie, Lauren, gives him the knowledge that his world is a setup for him. He then becomes extremely dissatisfied and leaves Eden of his own accord. Lauren gives him the knowledge by which he can have a better life, and then he takes it on despite all the problems that may come with it."

Other recent movies with clear religious themes include "The Shawshank Redemption," "Dead Man Walking" and "The Spitfire Grill."

Pastor resigns amid allegations

FORT WORTH (AP) — The board chairman of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary has resigned amid accusations of sexual misconduct involving two female parishioners.

Ollin Collins, 47, a pastor at Harvest Baptist Church, stepped down a day after the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported that two women planned a lawsuit against him.

The women said they had sexual relationships with Collins during the time they sought counseling from him for personal problems.

"It is a breach of a confidential relationship — a special relationship of trust and confidence," said their attorney, John Holland. "He abused his power. He abused his relationship."

On Monday, church administrators indefinitely suspended Collins pending an investigation. Officials at the church in the Fort Worth suburb of Watauga declined comment Tuesday.

Mormon president denounces polygamy among schismatics

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Breaking with the usual practice of avoiding embarrassing topics at the Mormon Church's semiannual conferences, President Gordon B. Hinckley condemned the practice of polygamy among schismatic groups

"I wish to state categorically that this church has nothing whatever to do with those practicing polygamy," Hinckley said. "Not only are those so involved in direct violation of the civil law, they are in violation of the law of this church."

Child abuse and incest charges, filed last summer against two Utah polygamists, brought national attention to the continuation of the practice by splinter groups despite the opposition of the Mormon Church opposition and a ban in the state constitution.

The church's founder, Joseph Smith, announced the modern-day revival of polygamy as divine revelation, but the church officially abandoned it in 1890.

Hinckley's sermon also denounced homosexuality as a sinful violation of "God-sanctioned marriage." The church recently donated $500,000 to an initiative campaign designed to prevent legalization of same-sex marriage in Alaska.

Mormons expect to meet goal of 100 temples by 2000

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Apostle M. Russell Ballard told the church's semiannual conference that the goal of building 100 temples by the end of the century will be met and possibly exceeded.

The church currently has 53 temples around the world. The major expansion program was announced in April by church President Gordon B. Hinckley. Most of the new temples will be smaller than previous structures.

Ballard said the temple building program was prompted by worldwide growth of Mormonism, which now has 10 million members. Many new converts are in remote areas far from existing temples.

Hinckley told the conference that another construction project — a new assembly hall to seat 21,000 — should be completed by the April 2000 conference.

Delivering Democracy

"Liberty of circulation is as essential to that freedom [freedom of the press] as liberty of publishing; indeed, without the circulation, the publication would be of little value." Ex parte Jackson, 96 U.S. 727

Freedom of the press. It's one of the most precious rights of a democratic society.

Newspapers are democracy in action. And 30,000 times every minute of every day—from doorstep to doorstep, neighborhood to neighborhood, north to south, east to west—all across the USA, newspaper carriers deliver democracy.

That's why it is with pride and appreciation that Newspaper Association of America® and the Midland Reporter-Telegram

mark October 10, 1998 as International Newspaper Carrier Day.

We salute our carriers and thank them for helping us exercise our First Amendment right to freedom of the press.

Russians still stand-offish to World Council of Churches

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Konrad Raiser, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, expects the Russian Orthodox Church to take part in the organization's 50th anniversary assembly in December. But delegates are expected to be lower-ranking staff from the church's ecumenical department.

Raiser, speaking at a media luncheon, said no members of the Russian hierarchy are likely to attend the meeting in Harare, Zimbabwe. Still, that anyone is coming is a gain for the council, since Russian comments last year led to speculation that the huge church might quit the council.

The Orthodox churches are upset with liberal trends on homosexuality and other matters among some in the council's Protestant majority. The Orthodox Church in the Republic of Georgia has quit the council, and the Bulgarian Orthodox Church has announced plans to withdraw though Raiser said the council has received no official notice.

Raiser estimated the constituency of World Council member churches at 400 million to 450 million. He said the Orthodox represent at least one-third of that total, including 80 million to 100 million from the Russian Orthodox Church.

Pastor charged with arson in church fire

HARTFORD, Ga. (AP) — A pastor has been charged with deliberately setting fire to his rural church.

A Pulaski County grand jury indicted the Rev. Felton York in late September on charges of first-degree arson, vandalism of a place of worship and second-degree criminal damage to property in the Jan. 8 fire at Hartford Baptist Church.

The fire gutted the sanctuary and heavily damaged other parts of the red brick church in Hartford, 40 miles south of Macon. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

York, who has not been arrested, said he learned of the charges when the indictment was published in the local newspaper. "It was some surprise to me, and I don't want to talk about it," he said.

James Turk, an assistant district attorney for the Oconee Judicial Circuit, said he will seek an arrest warrant before the next term of Superior Court, which begins Dec. 14.

York has been part-time pastor at Hartford Baptist for more than five years.

WWJD: Initials in popular bracelet must be adhered to, not just worn ask that one would wear a bracelet bearing the query? What many people don't know about that question is, well ... the rest of the story.

W.W.J.D. actually has its origins from "In His Steps," a book written by Charles M. Sheldon. The book has sold more than 60 million copies and has been translated into more than 20 languages. It focuses on a man named Henry Maxwell who pastored a church in the late 1800s. The pews in his church were filled with the most socially prominent, wealthy and aristocratic citizens of his town. His own life was comfortable. He was highly educated and was respected by all of the really important people in town. He knew how to give the kind of sermon that would intellectually challenge, but was always careful not to make anyone feel uncomfortable. But one Sunday morning, his life and the lives of many of his parishioners were changed forever.

An unemployed printer, who had just lost his wife and only child to the ravages of poverty — grief stricken, without hope, and filthily dressed —burst into the morning service. He was at the end of his rope and very near death himself. As he surveyed the crowd that morning, all adorned in the finest clothes and hats, he vented his frustration at their hypocrisy. Hadn't Jesus implored His followers to take care of the poor, the hungry, the widows, the orphans? Why, with all their wealth and influence, could there exist a man like himself? If they claimed to follow Jesus, he asked, then what does following Jesus mean? In the face of all this great suffering, if the Savior Himself were sitting in those same pews, "What would Jesus do?" At that moment the sad shell-of-a-man passed out on the floor and died soon thereafter.

The question he had asked, however, continued to ring loudly in the ears of Henry Maxwell. Indeed, he asked himself, "What would Jesus do?" If Jesus were the pastor of First Church, what would He be doing in the face of all this poverty and suffering? As the following days passed, He could not rid his mind of that question.

After fretting, then praying, it became clear to Reverend Maxwell. He knew that in his position as a pastor, as a husband, as a citizen, yes, in every area of his life, he must commit himself not to do anything without first asking the question, "What would Jesus do?" As he made his pledge to God, everything about him began to change and he knew that this same challenge must be given to his flock. But, how would they react? Would they ignore him, laugh silently at him, or, maybe — just maybe — would they actually listen? He found out that very next Sunday morning when he challenged them to take a pledge, for an entire year, not to do anything without first asking the question, "What would Jesus do?"

To his surprise over 50 of his parishioners stayed after the service and took the pledge! Lives were changed, both inside the church and in the poorest areas of town. In the year that followed, the pledge-takers gave of themselves, many times at great personal cost, as instruments of God's love to the oppressed, the downtrodden, and the lost. They gave, not out of their abundance, but according to their abundance. Indeed, they gave till it hurt.

As we face a new century, as did those in Henry Maxwell's church, dare we consider taking that same pledge to not do anything without first asking, "What would Jesus do?" I've asked myself whether I would be willing to take that pledge. To be honest, it scares me to think about all that I might lose if I really meant it. I bet you feel the same way, too, as did those Christians of the 19th century who became broken bread and poured-out wine so that the forgotten would know first-hand the mercy and love of Jesus.

Sadly, for the most part, the typical churchgoer of today attempts to "pick up the cross of Christ" — to suffer loss for the benefit, both worldly and eternally, of others — by proxy. Giving a little money, but not self. The words of Henry Maxwell are directed to you and me: "It is the personal element that Christian discipleship needs to emphasize. 'The gift without the giver is bare.' The Christianity that attempts to suffer by proxy is not the Christianity of Christ. Each individual Christian ... needs to follow in His steps along the path of personal sacrifice to Him. There is not a different path today from that of Jesus' own times. It is the same path."

Are we willing to really give of ourselves to others, both inside and outside the church, to truly suffer loss for the gain of someone else? Are you willing to take the pledge and live your life according to this challenge? Am I willing? Although I don't wear a W.W.J.D. bracelet, still each day that question never seems to be far from my mind: "What would Jesus do?"

Each year, close to a million Americans experience a heart attack. Memorial Hospital is nationally recognized for providing timely, high quality care to patients experiencing heart attack.

Memorial Hospital participates in the National Registry of Myocardial Infarctions. Out of 4,000 hospitals participating in the study, Memorial Hospital has one of the fastest rates in the nation for giving thrombolytic, or clot-buster therapy, to heart attack victims. Memorial's success in timely treatment of heart attacks is due to the collaborative efforts of our local cardiologists, physician, nurses, Emergency Department personnel, EMS, and support staff.

Memorial Hospital has joined forces with Midland's cardiologists to educate health professionals throughout the region on improving cardiac care. The American Heart Association has designated Memorial Hospital as the community training center for Advanced Cardiac Life Support, Pediatric Advanced Life Support, and CPR.

Through education, we are not only improving the lives of Midland residents, but also improving cardiac care for patients throughout West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Memorial Hospital is proud to announce the second annual "Clinical Rounds in Cardiology in the Permian Basin" which is being held on Saturday, October 10. Over 500 health professionals, including physicians, nurses and paramedics, will be attending from cities in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico to learn about current trends in acute MI management and cardiac emergencies.

Memorial Hospital would like to thank the following physicians for providing this conference for the Permian Basin:

Ravi Patel, MD, Program Director
Michael Miller, MD, Program Director

Vonnegut revisits camp where he was POW

DRESDEN, Germany — Kurt Vonnegut was visibly shaken as he revisited the eastern German city where he witnessed Allied air raids as a prisoner of the Nazis during World War II.

Standing in the camp where he was a prisoner of war during the February 1945 raids, Vonnegut pointed to spots on the walls where warning signs hung.

The smallest rules infraction, they read, was "punishable by death," Vonnegut recalled, repeating the phrase several times in German.

The scenes of Dresden's terror were replayed in "Slaughterhouse Five," the 1969 novel that helped make Vonnegut famous. It describes the attacks that left the city in flames and killed tens of thousands of people.

Kurt Vonnegut was a prisoner of war during Allied bombing raids.

Vonnegut survived by hiding in a cellar. He and other prisoners were detailed to carry the dead out of the city's rubble after the bombing stopped.

Vonnegut, 75, visited Dresden on Wednesday as part of a book tour for "Timequake."

ARLINGTON, Va. — A judge has cleared Marv Albert's record of an assault conviction more than a year after he pleaded guilty to biting a former lover during a sexual encounter.

Judge Benjamin N.A. Kendrick issued the order Thursday without a hearing after determining the sportscaster had "been of good behavior" and complied with the court's conditions.

"Marv is extremely pleased," said his lawyer, Peter Greenspun.

Albert admitted in September 1997 that he bit his former lover on the back in an Arlington hotel room but denied her claims that he forced her to perform oral sex. Albert's plea prompted prosecutors to drop a felony sexual assault charge.

NBC fired Albert as the network's lead NBA play-by-play announcer the day he pleaded guilty. He has since married and accepted a job doing radio play-by-play for the NBA's New York Knicks.

LONDON — The Spice Girls' secrets are safe, at least for now.

The group's former chauffeur, Paul Attridge, lost his bid Thursday to overturn a gag order preventing him from disclosing information about the pop group in a spicy book he wants to write.

Band members got an injunction in June following a newspaper story in which Attridge speculated about why Ginger Spice Geri Halliwell left the group.

Attridge, 31, was ordered not to release any details about the Spice Girls' love lives, business affairs or spending habits. He went to court to overturn the injunction so he could write his book.

The Spice Girls and Halliwell sought jail time for Attridge for violating the gag order. The High Court ruled Thursday that the injunction should stand but that it was unnecessary to jail Attridge, who apologized and agreed to honor the gag order.

After the ruling, however, Attridge said he would "fight on" and write his book.

LOS ANGELES — Real life imitates reel life for Kieran Culkin and Elden Henson.

Culkin, 16, and Henson, 21, became fast friends working together during filming of "The Mighty," their new movie that opens today.

"Once we started working together we clicked," said Henson.

That didn't go unnoticed by the cast and crew of the movie based on Rodman Philbrick's book "Freak the Mighty."

"They'd laugh all day," director Peter Chelsom said. "They were great fun."

Culkin plays the brilliant, disabled teen-ager Kevin, who befriends a tough but slow-witted classmate, Max. The hulking boy hoists Kevin, who has a curved spine and leg braces, onto his shoulders, and the two become "Freak The Mighty."

NEW YORK — Harvey Lichtenstein, who helped make the Brooklyn Academy of Music an internationally known center of avant-garde music and dance, will step down next summer after 31 years as president.

The Brooklyn-born Lichtenstein, who began his career as a professional dancer, took over the academy in 1967, when the city owned it and sometimes rented space to karate classes and a private high school.

He focused on avant-garde dance and music, bringing in Merce Cunningham's dance company and later nurturing such artists as Laurie Anderson and Philip Glass. He established the Next Wave Festival in 1983.

"I feel great that the institution has reached the level it has," he said Thursday. "We both learned a lot during these past 30, 31 years."

Executive vice president Karen Brooks Hopkins will become president and producing director Joseph Melillo will be made executive producer when the 69-year-old Lichtenstein steps down on July 1.
