Gulf war cease-fire goes into effect

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Hundreds of U.N. observers moved into position for a cease-fire this morning that will bring at least a temporary halt to an 8-year-old war that cost Iran and Iraq more than a million casualties.

Women dressed in abayas, the traditional Arab robes, sprinkled rose petals on the U.N. men in blue berets as their convoy left Baghdad. Their posts were on the 730 miles of border that begins in the southern marshlands and snakes north to the rugged mountains of Kurdistan.

Iran continued questioning Iraq's motives. Hashemi Rafsanjani, parliament speaker and military commander, said the Iraqis may not want peace but will find Iran much stronger if they renew the war.

Rear Adm. Mohammad Malekzadegan, the navy commander, said Iran will stop ships to search them for war materiel until a final peace agreement is reached. His comment was reported by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Cyprus.

Iraq's general command exhorted all Arabs to "express joy and celebrate the victory achieved by Iraq's sons" as the cease-fire took effect at 7 a.m. today (10 p.m. CDT Friday).

As night fell Friday, tens of thousands of people filled Baghdad's streets and public parks.

"It is the happiest day in my life" because he was due for conscription in January, said Alaa, an 18-year-old who gave free glasses of orange juice to passersby on Karada Street, a main boulevard.

The government of President Saddam Hussein said it was reopening the airport in the battered southern port of Basra, which was the target of repeated Iranian offensives that took tens of thousands of lives.

Officials said two Iraqi merchant ships would sail into the Persian Gulf, the first to do so since early in the war.

About 150 unarmed officers of the U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group fanned out along the Iraqi side of the border Friday. Tehran radio, monitored in Cyprus, said 200 U.N. observers were either on their way to the Iranian side or already there.

The Security Council authorized 350 truce observers from 24 nations and about 950 support personnel for an initial period of six months at a cost of $75.6 million.

Brig. Gen. V.M. Patil of India heads the group of U.N. observers in Iraq and an Irish officer, whose name has not been announced, will head the group in Iran. A Yugoslav officer, Gen. Slavko Jovic of Yugoslavia commands the entire operation and will shuttle between the two countries.

Panel differs on candidates

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

Despite presenting a "united front on energy issues," the four participants in the Permian Basin Petroleum Association's Congressional Energy Panel differed on which presidential candidate would most benefit the energy industry.

Not suprisingly, the congressmen split along party lines with the Republicans — Lamar Smith of San Antonio, Larry Combest of Lubbock and Joe Barton of Ennis — outnumbering the lone Democrat on the panel, Charles Stenholm of Abilene.

"There has been no presidential candidate in the history of the country who knows more about the industry than George Bush," said Smith.

"We don't know how any president will act once elected," said Barton. "But on the surface it seems obvious that Bush would be the better energy president."

However, Stenholm reminded the association members present at the afternoon session that many farmers felt the same way about a candidate in 1976 who made his living at peanut farming. "That was one time that background sure didn't work out," he said of agricultural policy under Jimmy Carter.

He also credited Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen with attaching the Windfall Profits Tax repeal to trade bill.

Combest was slightly more pragmatic: "A positive energy policy takes making it a top-priority issue." Whichever candidate is willing to do that, would likely have the best effect on the industry, he said.

Smith gave the 100th Congress, which has only 18 working days remaining, "a poor report card on energy issues."

The freshman representative from the 21st District recounted the few positive developments of the past two years: repeal of the Fuel Use Act; fending off the Environmental Protection Agency's attempt to classify drilling mud as hazardous waste; including repeal of the 15.1-cent-per-gallon off-road diesel tax as a part of the technical corrections tax bill; and repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax pending President Reagan's signature.

General says U.S. blind, deaf without space program

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

A veteran oilman with 66 years service to the industry and a five star general were the center of attention at the President's Banquet of the annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Friday night at Greentree Country Club.

The United States would be blind and deaf without its space programs, General John L. Piotrowski, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Space Command and the North American Defense Command, told almost 200 members and guests, many of whom had come to honor veteran oil man C.W. Brown of McCamey as the recipient of the association's prestigious Top Hand Award.

Mexico agrees not to increase oil exports

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The secretary general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries wrapped up a three-day visit here Friday by announcing Mexico had agreed not to increase its crude exports in a bid to boost oil prices on the world market.

OPEC head Ahmed Subroto told local reporters that "Mexico reiterated its collaboration with the petroleum cartel not to increase its production and to search for the stabilization of the market."

Also Friday, the government oil monopoly Pemex announced it will raise prices for crude exports to American customers on Sept. 1. Prices for Mexican crude exports to Europe will not be changed, Pemex said in a statement.

Subroto said he was "satisfied and convinced" of Mexico's commitment to work with OPEC members and that he hoped "soon the world petroleum market is stabilized."

Mexico does not belong to OPEC but closely follows that organization's pricing and production guidelines.

Subroto met with President Miguel de la Madrid and Pemex officials before leaving Friday for OPEC headquarters in Vienna. He said he plans to visit Iran Aug. 28 and Iraq Sept. 1 in an effort to persuade the two countries to reduce their oil production.

On Wednesday, Subroto said he expected Iraq to return to the oil cartel "with a reasonable quota" once a cease-fire takes effect today in its 8-year-old war with Iran.

"Peace in the Middle East will have to increase the price of oil, but it is necessary to effect negotiations," the government news agency Notimex quoted Subroto as saying.

Pemex said Friday it will increase prices for its light Isthmus and heavy Maya crude exports to the Americas by ten cents and 30 cents, respectively, on Sept. 1 because of a "technical adjustment in export formulas."

In July, Isthmus sold for $13.78 a barrel and Maya for $11.21 a barrel in the Americas.

Pemex said its Petroleum Foreign Trade Committee had authorized the price hikes "to align prices for exports of Mexican crude with those prevailing in the international market."

Quayle defends his service in National Guard

Associated Press

George Bush and Dan Quayle went back home to Quayle's Indiana on Friday where the young vice presidential candidate defended his National Guard service in a news conference amplified for an appreciative town folk.

The tougher the question, the louder the boos.

The more forceful the answer, the louder the cheers.

"I got into the National Guard fairly," he said. "I did not ask anyone to break the rules and so far as I know no one did."

The Indianapolis News had reported Thursday that its former managing editor, Wendell C. Phillippi, had been asked about entering the Guard by Quayle.

Phillippi was a former commander of the state National Guard.

"Wendell Phillippi knew that I wanted to get into the National Guard and I hope that he helped me and I think he did," Quayle told reporters. "I would hope that he helped me and I expect that."

But the 41-year-old, two-term senator said he saw nothing wrong with that and would do the same thing again.

With the Republican ticket riding a wave of optimism out of the just-ended GOP convention in New Orleans, the Democratic duo of Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen were going their separate ways before linking up today in Texas.

Bentsen said the GOP convention looked to him like a "Mardi Gras for the Moral Majority" that ignored the concerns of working people.

Dukakis, meanwhile, was playing a similar tune on a whistle-stop trip through the scenic hills of Missouri and Arkansas.

Before leaving New Orleans, Quayle joked about the controversy when he and Bush appeared at a post-convention meeting of the Republican National Committee.

Adopting a military posture, his shoulders sqaured, his back straight, Quayle shouted in a clipped voice: "I stand at attention. Name: Dan Quayle. Serial number: 303 50 4096. Indiana National Guard, six years and proud of it."

The audience laughed and cheered.

The conservative senator from Indiana, has been dogged by questions about whether he used family influence to get into the National Guard at the height of the Vietnam War, virtually assuring he would avoid combat.

Dukakis, on a whistle-stop train tour through Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas, lost no time jibing at Bush's performance in New Orleans.

"Last night we heard a lot of talk about missions," Dukakis said at a trackside rally in Belleville, Ill.

"He talked a lot about missions, but I must have missed a page," he said. "We didn't hear a word from the Republicans about the budget deficit or the trade deficit last night, or this week, and we know why. They don't know how to deal with them."

Conference continues

From Staff Reports

Members of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs will continue to host chamber members from across the state, as the fifth meeting of the Texas Association of Black Chambers of Commerce continues into its second day today.

Eighteen chambers have been invited, and members from Austin, Waco, Fort Worth, Lubbock, Abilene and Odessa are expected. Registration began Friday, and a reception was held from 7 to 11 p.m. at the Midland Hilton.

Today, a breakfast will be held from 8 a.m. to 9:15 a.m., featuring a forum entitled "System for Survival," according to Robbyne Fuller, president and chief executive officer of the chamber.

Breakfast speakers will include Dr. Joseph Baressi, superintendent of the Midland Independent School District, Dr. Duane Leach, president of the University of Texas at the Permian Basin, and Dr. Jess Parrish, president ot Midland College.

Keynote speaker for today's luncheon will be Walter Sutton, corporate legal manager for Texas Instruments and president of the National Bar Asociation. The luncheon will be from noon to 1 p.m.

Following the luncheon, there will be a ribbon-cutting for a trade show.

A banquet will be held at 6 p.m. tonight, with a continental breakfast set to wind up the meeting Sunday at 8:30 a.m.

Keynote speaker for the banquet will be IBM representative Jacquelyn Donald.

Saragosans say money for survivors misspent

AUSTIN (AP) — Saragosa residents on Friday alleged that the Reeves County Sheriff's Department apparently misspent more than $30,000 in private donations meant for survivors of the 1987 tornado.

In a report to the 143rd District Court in Pecos, the residents praised Sheriff Raul Florez's "tireless efforts" in the tornado's immediate aftermath, saying "many lives were saved and those in need received prompt and badly needed assistance."

However, the report said, problems began when the sheriff's department opened a temporary office in Saragosa and "expanded its activities to include the collection, administration and distribution of funds donated by private citizens."

The report is based on records of the department's administration of disaster relief funds, documents that were obtained under an Open Records Act lawsuit by the Saragosa residents, said attorney David Horton.

"I think Sheriff Florez is a very kind and generous and well-intentioned man," Horton, who is with Texas Rural Legal Aid, told a news conference. "I think the lack of accounting control here speaks for itself, and doesn't speak very well of the process, regardless of the personalities.

"No one's been sued for any damages or any misconduct," Horton said.

According to the report, the sheriff's department did not keep complete records of its receipt of cash and checks.

The report said of $51,213 spent by the department, only $20,700 was paid to disaster victims.

Of the rest, $19,952 was spent on a building designed to serve as a field house for a local baseball diamond, the residents said. In addition, $7,843 was used for sheriff's department overhead expenses, the report said, and $2,718 apparently was paid to individuals who were not tornado victims.

Florez did not immediately return a telephone call from The Associated Press.

Reeves County Attorney Scott W. Johnson said he had not had a chance to review the report and could not respond to whether the $30,513 was improperly spent.

However, he added, "I can say from the discovery done to date (in the case), there is no evidence whatsoever of any conversion or theft of these funds. Everything done by the sheriff's department was done in good faith."

Plaintiffs are asking the sheriff's department to refund what they say was improperly spent money.

The report also said plaintiffs might take legal action involving the Red Cross concerning money donated for the benefit of Saragosa residents.

David Townsend, American National Red Cross director of disaster services for a 17-state area including Texas, said in a telephone interview from St. Louis, Mo., that contributions the organization has attributed to the Saragosa operation total $991,169 to date.

Of that money, he said, $980,165 has been spent on or earmarked for Saragosa. The remainder is applied to the Red Cross's general disaster fund, he said.

The $11,000 balance occurred because the Red Cross has a standardized system of helping those in need, Townsend said. For example, he said, every person in the country who needs clothing because of a disaster would get the same allotment.

The report added that documents indicate the official Reeves County Saragosa Finance Committee "did an excellent job in administering $165,420 in private donations received for the benefit of the survivors of the 1987 Saragosa tornado disaster."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Weather to remain warm

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures will remain warm with a slight chance of thunderstorms predicted through the weekend, according to National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Today will be partly cloudy with a less than 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. The high will be in the mid 90s, with southeast winds expected from 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight, skies will be partly cloudy with a less than 20 percent chance of evening thunderstorms. The low will be in the upper 60s.

Sunday will be mostly sunny with a high expected in the mid 90s.

Friday's high of 93 was 10 degrees less than the record high of 103, which was set in 1977. The record low of 58, set in 1940, was 10 degrees less than Friday's low temperature of 68, according to the weather service.

STATE

Moist, unstable air, that hung over much of state producing showers Fr. lay, will continue to bring a chance of thunderstorms through today.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms spread across the greater part of Texas Friday, especially over the Coastal Plains and the northern sections of the state. Meanwhile, mostly cloudy skies prevailed in South Texas, the northern High Plains and sections of the low Rolling Plains.

Forecasters at the National Weather Service call for continued precipitation and partly cloudy skies throughout the state through Saturday, except in the Far West, where skies are expected to be fair.

NATION

A stationary front brought storms to parts of the Midwest and East on Friday, and much of the northeast quarter of the nation got a respite from high heat, but temperature records continued to fall in North Carolina.

The front, which extended from the mid-Mississippi Valley to the mid-Atlantic Coast states, had temperatures to the north of it in the 70s and temperatures to the south largely in the 90s.

Some of the thunderstorms that developed along the front produced heavy rainfall. Blinding rain was reported falling at Prairie City, Ind., the National Weather Service said.

Strong thunderstorms brought high winds, brief heavy rains and small hail to the Virginias on Friday morning. Thunderstorm winds blew down trees and power lines in a wooded area near Foster, Va., and trees were toppled by damaging winds in Tucker County, W.Va.

The forecast for today called for scattered showers and thunderstorms in the lower Mississippi Valley, the eastern and central Gulf Coast, the Tennessee Valley, the southern Ohio Valley, and the middle and southern Atlantic Coast states, Arizona, and the front range of the Rockies in Colorado and New Mexico.

DEATHS

Desiree Whittaker

Whittaker

CRANE — Funeral services for Desiree Anne Whittaker, 26, of Crane will be held at 11 a.m. Monday at Odessa Grandview Church of God with Rev. H.A. Henry and Rev. M. E. Harris presiding. Entombment will be in Sunset Memorial Gardens Mausoleum.

She was born April 23, 1962 in Odessa. She graduated from Calallan High School in Corpus Christi in 1980, and attended Del Mar College in Corpus Christi.

She was a member of the First Assembly of God Church.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winfrod N. Whittaker of Crane; a brother, William Whittaker of Crane; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E.S. Sides of Fort Clark Springs, Ark. and Mr. and Mrs. S.D. Whittaker of Kingsville, Ark.; a great-grandmother, Mrs. Marie Sides of Crane; one niece and one nephew.

Richard W. Box Funeral Home in Crane is in charge of arrangements.

Ruth Repman

Rosary for Ruth Repman of Midland was recited Friday night in the Ellis Chapel.

Funeral mass will be at 9:30 a.m. today at St. Ann's Catholic Church with Father Fred Nawarskas officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Miss Repman died early Friday morning in a Midland hospital.

She was born Feb. 25, 1922 in Cleburne and was reared in Clovis, N.M. In her teens her family moved to Slaton where she graduated from high school. In 1946 she moved to Midland and went to work for Arco Oil Co. for 12 years. For a number of years after that she was engaged in child care before going to work for her brother. She was a member of St. Ann's Catholic.

Survivors include her mother, Eleanor Repman of Midland; two brothers, Frank J. Repman of Midland and Joseph Repman of Big Spring; and two sisters, Mrs. Jude Ewen and Mrs. Van Smith, both of Austin.

Pallbearers will be Sean Ewen, Ronald Repman, Terry Repman, Chris Repman, Patrick Repman and Michael Smith.

Charlie Walker Jr.

Services for Charlie A. Walker Jr., of Midland will be at 11 a.m. today in the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of West Kentucky Baptist Church, officiating.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers will be Fred Dotson, Dickie Box, Jack May, Rudy Berg, Jerry Malone and Bernie L. Jennings.

Walker died Thursday morning at his home.

Three youths released from hospital

From Staff Reports

Three youngsters injured in the Midland Boys and Girls Club van crash have been released from Abilene and Lubbock hospitals, while three other persons continue to receive treatment.

Twelve-year-old Forrest Polk of Midland, who suffered chest injuries in the accident that killed five other children, was released Friday from Methodist Hospital in Lubbock, according to a nursing supervisor.

Polk's cousin and the van driver, Damon Polk, 23, remained hospitalized in Methodist in serious condition with spinal cord injuries, the supervisor said.

At Abilene's Hendrick Medical Center, the last of six children taken there after the Sweetwater crash were released, a spokeswoman said.

Meredith Johnson and Darren Polk, both 11, were discharged from the hospital, the spokeswoman said.

Two other children, 14-year-old Marvin Brown and Quincy Hubert, 11, remained hospitalized at St. Mary's of the Plains Hospital in Lubbock. Brown was listed in critical condition and Hubert in serious condition, a nursing service employee said late Friday.

Odessa girl dies when she ran in front of car

From Staff Reports

A 4-year-old girl was killed Friday evening after she apparently darted across a street in front of a car in far west Odessa, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Diana Najera, 803 Westcliff Rd., was pronounced dead at Odessa Medical Center at 8:21 p.m., the DPS reported.

She was struck about 7:40 p.m. by a 1979 Cadillac two-door sedan driven by Allison Garton. The Cadillac was southbound on Westcliff when the child ran in the path of the vehicle, according to the agency report.

PANEL

As for other issues which are awaiting congressional action, the quartet agreed that prospects are dim for such items as a variable import fee on imported crude; resortation of the percentage depletion or consideration of a balanced budget amendment.

Both Smith and Barton have sponsored versions of an import fee — both of which Stenholm has co-sponsored — but Combest is more reserved in his support.

He backs only an import fee which can be shown "to benefit the producers and not just generate revenue," he said.

The possibility of a gas excise tax proposal is very real, the lawmakers agreed, but added quickly that such a move could likely be defeated on the House floor.

An import fee's best chance of passage could be as an alternative to a straight gas tax. "With the import fee, you have benefits to the industry and national security arguments in your favor, which you don't have with a gas tax," Barton said.

"Two-hundred eighteen" is the magic number for convincing others of the merit of any given legislation regardless of how great the idea, Stenholm emphasized.

Bipartisan support is vital to any industry intiative's success, he said.

In other association business, at the membership luncheon, outgoing president Charles Perry presented the first-ever PBPA Press Award to John Paul Pitts, Business/Oil Editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

The award was given "in recognition of providing a fair and understandable appraisal of local, state, national and worldwide energy issues of concern to the domestic petroleum industry, our communities, businesses and the residents of the Permian Basin."

Pitts was singled out for the association's first award for his "support at association meetings, providing the PBPA outstanding press through numerous articles in support of the industry and the association."

Bentsen, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, was in Dallas where he said the Republican convention was dominated by the "hard right."

"What we saw was the Republicans putting on a convention for the far right," Bentsen said. "They had a Mardi Gras for the Moral Majority."

Bush and Quayle were ebullient when they showed up for the early morning meeting of the Republican National Committee.

"Now we start," said Bush. "Now comes the beginning of the end, and last night there was a shifting of the gears." The nominee said that he had received a congratulatory telephone call from President Reagan last night after accepting the GOP presidential nomination.

"We are going to win this election," he predicted.

Bush told the Republicans "You have given us a tremendous sendoff. I can't think of a better way to get out of town."

Republicans were generally upbeat and giving rave reviews to Bush's big speech.

"He hit it. He hit it out of the park," exulted Sen. Alfonse D'Amato of New York. "For me, it was (a question of) survival, the speech of his life and he did it." Massachusetts delegate Joyce Hampers called it "a grand slam."

Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr said: "It was a sensitive speech because he was so strong and yet so sensitive. He showed that he is attuned to the American people. I believe he revealed a George Bush people have not yet seen and had a chance to appreciate."

Receiving a medal

Congressman Lamar Smith points to the Bronze Star he is about to present to William Ford of Midland. Ford, a Midland oilman, finally received the medal Friday for his service as a U.S. Army rifleman with the 397th Infantry Regiment in France in 1944. He had received the Purple Heart and combat infantryman badge after he was wounded in battle. The latest medal was awarded in part through efforts of Smith's office.

WAR

The cease-fire process began July 18 with Iran's acceptance of the year-old Security Council Resolution 598, which calls for a truce, withdrawl to recognized borders, prisoner exchange, peace talks and an investigation of which side started the war.

Peace negotiations will begin in Geneva on Thursday, mediated by Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general

Rafsanjani said in a sermon at weekly prayers Friday: "We are facing two paths, war and peace. We chose peace but we are not sure about Iraq. If the enemy wants to continue the war, it will continue much more seriously.

According to the Iraqi command, Baghdad's forces will honor the truce "conscientiously and responsibly."

It said the cease-fire would open the way for a new relationship with Iran that would be "different from the framework of slogans of expansion, aggression, hatred and evil with which the Iranians ignited the war."

Foreign competition changing oil industry, says company CEO

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The downstream or refining and marketing side of the U.S. oil industry could become foreign dominated within a few years, says Ken Perry, president and CEO of the board of American Petrofina.

Speaking to the general membership luncheon of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association Annual Meeting Friday, Perry said intense competition from foreign competitors was bringing fundamental change to the industry.

The younger brother of Charles Perry, outgoing PBPA president, said that the downstream side of the industry had not been a profitable business for the past 23 years, and had been negative for the last five.

"This has caused many of the small, mom and pop refining and marketing enterprises to disappear," said Perry. He said the technology of the industry had expanded so fast that it now took "60 cents of every throughput dollar" just to replace obsolete equipment.

"This has caused the movement of the industry to become more consolidated with fewer refineries," he noted.

Because of the growing demand for petroleum products in the U.S., disappearing refineries and an increase in imported petroleum products, coupled with foreign ownership America stands to lose its refining capacity to foreign governments. He offered Texaco's sale of marketing interests to Saudia Arabia and Venzuela's purchase of interests in Citgo and Champlin as examples of growing foreign ownership in the downstream side of the industry.

The West Texas native said that conservation efforts launched shortly after the embargo of 1973 had virtually disappeared and that interest in building fuel-efficient automobiles appeared to have gone by the way side.

"Soon our demand will exceed our capacity," he warned.

Along with the disappearance of small refineries, Perry said we could look forward to the disappearance of small mom and pop service stations. "The trend now is for gasoline to be sold at convenience locations that sell milk and bread. There will be service stations, but most will be high-volume stations owned by major oil companies."

He explained the cost of building a service station in a metropolitan area now runs about $1 million and precluded small operations. "We actually have fewer service stations now than we did in 1929," he added.

Perry called petrochemicals the real money-maker on the downstream side, accounting for 13 percent of oil companies. He said the demand for disposable products was driving the petrochemical industry.

PBPA

The general told the group that the U.S. space program and satellite system helped the military to navigate, communicate with operations around the world and conduct surveillance around the world. "We can do it better, cheaper and faster from space than we can from the ground," he said.

"This is a good system," said Piotrowski, "It works. The Russians cannot make a missile launch of any kind without us knowing it."

He offered numbers to back his statement: "In 1986 there were 600 ballistic missiles launched in the world. In 1987 there were 700, and already this year 500 have been launched." He said more than 80 percent were launched by the Soviet Union. "They practice a lot," he said, "sometimes launching two or three a day." The U.S., he said, launched on missiles in 1987.

Putting in a plug for the Strategic Defense Initiative, he said that even though we knew they were coming (missiles) all the U.S. would be able to do was take a hit and retaliate. Without SDI, he said there was no defense.

He said SDI also offered a defense against madmen such as the Ayatollah Khomeini: "With enough money, a nuclear missile could be bought today. I won't say they could hit what they were shooting at, say Chicago or Washington, D.C., but they could hit North America."

Space is not something America cannot back away from, because of its vital link to national defense, says Piotrowski.

He said the Russians were so committed to space that they had 200 satellites orbiting the earth, compared to 100 for America.

"During the Falklands war, the Russians were so intense on keeping an eye on Britain that they launched 28 satellites within 69 days. It makes me nervous when a nation has that capability," he said.

He warned that our future lay in the hands of the Soviet Union, because they had the power to destroy our satellites with "killer" satellites and electronic beams.

He said it was pointless to think that space should not be used militarily, because it had been used militarily since the U-2 and the Spudnik.

Prior to Piotrowski's talk, Claude W. Brown, 84, was presented the coveted Top Hand Award commending him for 66 years service to the oil and gas industry.

Charles W. Perry, outgoing PBPA president, called Brown, also a member of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame, "an extraordinary oil finder and entrepreneur" who had excelled in the fields of pipelines, banking, real estate and oilfield service. Perry also read a personal letter to the McCamey resident commending him on his award from Brown's long-time friend Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Man sentenced to five years for attempted murder

From Staff Reports

A 20-year-old Midland man was sentenced to five years in state prison on Friday for the attempted murder of two Midland men during a brawl outside a Midland nightclub.

Richard Rene Subia was sentenced to two concurrent five-year terms by the 10-man, two-woman jury that Thursday convicted him of the March 16 stabbings of Will Willmon and Alton "Zeke" Baker of Midland. He was acquitted of the attempted murder of another man, Vance Thurman of Midland.

The three men were seriously injured in a fight outside the New West Club, 1008 S. Midkiff Rd., according to testimony in the three-day trial in Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd State District Court.

Subia testified during the trial, and told jurors he grabbed a knife and started swinging it only because he thought his life was in danger. He was not injured in the fight.

Jurors also heard testimony from the three victims of the fight, and from several defense witnesses who claimed Subia and several of his friends were attacked as they left the establishment.

OPEC

Sales to American customers averaged 717,000 barrels daily between January and July, or 54 percent of total Mexican petroleum exports during that period, Pemex said.

The United States is Mexico's largest oil client, followed by Spain and Japan, whose purchases represented 16 percent and 14 percent of Mexican exports last month.

Correction

In coverage of the trial of Richard Rene Subia, it was reported that a dance floor confrontation between the defendant and 22-year-old Vonda Willmon may have sparked a fight which injured three men. The confrontation instead was between Subia and Alton "Zeke" Baker. Ms. Willmon was not involved.

Pakistani president to be buried near biggest mosque

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A grave for President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq was dug Friday in the lawn in front of the world's biggest mosque, and investigators continued the search for what caused his military plane to crash.

Police in two-toned blue uniforms, rifles slung at their sides, lined the broad boulevards of Islamabad as foreign dignitaries began arriving for Zia's state funeral today at the soaring, snow-white Faisal mosque.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz landed Friday night with Robert Oakley, designated to replace U.S. Ambassador Arnold Raphel, who died with Zia in the crash.

"This journey is a journey in sorrow," Shultz said. "I will be expressing the heartfelt sorrow of President Reagan and the American people for Pakistan's tragic loss."

The United States was one of the staunchest backers of Zia, who had allowed U.S.-supported Afghan guerrillas to set up camps in Pakistan for their war against the Soviet-backed government in neighboring Afghanistan.

Shultz called Zia "a steadfast champion of the Afghan cause."

Thousands of people poured into the mosque for prayers Friday, the Islamic holy day, and heard eulogies for their late leader as the notion of life without Zia began to sink in.

In the absence of any government statement on Wednesday's in-flight explosion that killed 30 people including Zia, Raphel, several Pakistan generals and other senior military men, the nation's newspapers were rife with speculation.

Their unattributed and undocumented theories ranged from deliberate sabotage by unspecified enemies to a time-bomb hidden in a basket of mangoes.

A Pakistani government information officer discounted all the press accounts. "Nothing is known yet," he said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "The investigators are still at the scene."

Zia's son said Friday he believed the plane was sabotaged.

"Some of the superpowers may be involved in it," businessman Ijaz ul-Haq said in an interview with Britain's Independent Television News. "Some of the local political terrorist organizations must have been involved. I won't name anybody because we don't know.

"Naturally, I would only think about the Soviets at this time," Ijaz said.

Pakistani workmen dig the grave Friday near the Faisal mosque where the official state funeral for President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq will be held today. Zia, U.S. ambassador Arnold Raphel and high-ranking military officials were killed Wednesday when the plane they were traveling in crashed shortly after takeoff.

Acting President Ghulam Ishaq Khan has said he would not rule out sabotage in Zia's death but would await a report from the military investigators.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a team of Americans was assisting in the investigation at the crash site near Bahawalpur, 330 miles south of Islamabad.

The silence by top officials reflected the military discipline by which Zia had ruled the country since seizing power in a bloodless coup in 1977.

Aslam Khattak, minister of communications and railways, said Thursday that sabotage was "a 1,000 percent certainty" in the explosion of the Pakistani air force C-130 transport plane. He did not elaborate.

Two Urdu-language newspapers said police had detained people for questioning about the crash, but a senior official police who spoke on condition of anonymity said the detentions were unrelated to the crash.

The mass circulation Jang newspaper said those detained were employees of Bahawalpur airport. Markaz, a smaller newspaper, said 16 people were detained near Bahawalpur but did not say whether they worked at the airport.

Nawa-i-waqt, an authoritative Urdu daily, said investigators had recovered the plane's flight recorder.

Zia will be buried today in front of the Faisal mosque, a modernistic edifice on the outskirts of Islamabad, a sprawling city built in the 1960s to replace Karachi as the Pakistani capital.

In addition to the police presence in Islamabad, similar security was in force in the adjacent, older city of Rawalpindi where Zia's remains reposed at the Combined Military Hospital until today's funeral cortege to Islamabad. His body was identified with the help of dental records, according to a source close to the proceedings who spoke on condition of anonymity.

West Germany dispatched Foreign Minister Hans Dietrich Genscher to the Zia funeral. Neighboring India, which has fought three wars with Pakistan since the nations were partitioned out of Britain's colonial empire in 1947, was to be represented by President Ramaswamy Venkataraman.

At the Faisal mosque, opened in June by Zia himself, four men in sweat-stained tunics and pants dug a grave for their late president.

"I am digging this grave with my heart," said 23-year-old Abdul Khalek, taking time out from the labor to lean on his shovel.

Inside the mosque, a sermon delivered in Arabic, the language of the Islamic faith's Koran holy book, extolled Zia as the "shaheed," or martyr, of the Moslems.

"It's difficult to imagine Pakistan without Zia," said a bearded army captain watching the crowd pour out of the mosque. "He was such a strong man." Like many Pakistanis, the captain, who refused to give his name, was unwilling to talk about the future.

Ishaq Khan, who succeeded Zia by virtue of his post as senate chairman, says he will carry out Zia's pledge to conduct nationwide parliamentary elections Nov. 16. But like Zia, he has not said whether the presidency also will be at stake in the voting.

The 73-year-old civilian leader spent most of Friday reviewing preparations for Zia's funeral and meeting Justice Ministry officials, according to a military aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Pentagon said the bodies of Raphel and the only other American killed in the crash, Brig. Gen. Herbert Wassom, would be returned to the United States Sunday aboard Shultz's plane.

A funeral service for Wassom was scheduled for Tuesday in Fort Myer, Va., with burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Lawmakers say government takes kickbacks

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Conservative government was stung Friday by allegations from two of its own Quebec legislators that kickbacks are routine in the present administration.

The government said the accusations were unsubstantiated.

The allegations from a disgruntled former Cabinet member and another Conservative member of Parliament were political fodder for the opposition parties because Mulroney is on the brink of calling a general election.

Polls show the opposition Liberal Party with a narrow overall lead, followed by the Conservatives and the socialist New Democratic Party.

Mulroney is expected to call an election next month, a year before his five-year term expires, because of Liberal plans to hold up ratification of the Canada-U.S. Free Trade Agreement, which is to take effect on Jan. 1.

The kickback allegations first appeared Thursday in the Montreal daily La Presse, which quoted Suzanne Blais-Grenier, a Conservative member of Parliament for Montreal Rosemount, as saying companies routinely pay kickbacks to get federal contracts in Quebec.

She later told Broadcast News, a division of Canadian Press: "There are people who told me...they were aware that when you receive a government contract from Ottawa, you have to return a certain amount to the kitty."

Ms. Blais-Grenier, who resigned as junior transport minister in 1985 in a dispute over aid to Montreal oil refineries, said she lacked the detailed proof for police charges. But she called for an impartial commission to investigate federal contracts.

Ms. Blais-Grenier is under pressure from party leaders in Quebec not to seek re-election. Other Conservative legislators from the province met in St. Hyacinthe Friday to consider expelling her from the caucus.

Another Conservative member from Montreal, Vincent Della Noce, was quoted in the Ottawa Citizen Friday as saying the most difficult part of his job was to "stay clean."

"I could put a dozen people in prison," he was quoted as saying.

On Friday, Della Noce claimed he also had no proof and said he had not expressed himself clearly in the original interview.

Mulroney was absent from the House of Commons in Ottawa Friday when opposition leaders hammered the government about alleged patronage.

Liberal Raymond Garneau, a leading Quebec legislator, said: "I've never seen such serious admissions on the part of a government."

But Solicitor General James Kelleher said: "We as a government have no information whatsoever to substantiate the allegations."

Police also confirmed they have asked the FBI to interview officials at Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. headquarters in New York in connection with a 2-year-old investigation of possible kickbacks in a $820,000 Canadian government contract to lease office space from the company.

Panel pledges to uncover Stalin's cohorts

MOSCOW (AP) — The head of a Politburo commission studying the bloody history of Josef Stalin's purges pledged in an interview published Friday to root out those who blindly carried out the dictator's wishes.

Mikhail S. Solomentsev told the Communist Party newspaper Pravda that since it began its work last October the commission had cleared the names of 636 people who were shot or imprisoned by Stalin.

He also revealed that an investigation was under way into the murder in December 1934 of Sergei Kirov, the popular Leningrad party leader who opposed Stalin's absolute power. Some Western historians believe Stalin was responsible for the murder but accused his political opponents in order to destroy them.

"Many people are guilty of abuses: some of them were named, some not," Solomentsev said. "The measure of the guilt of every one of them will be determined."

"The personal guilt of Stalin and the people closest to him before the party and people for the mass repressions and lawlessness is dreadful," he said. "But the guilt of the leaders does not relieve of responsibility the voluntary executors, those directly involved in the infringement of socialist law, those who supported and blindly fulfilled inhumane instructions, committed outrages."

Stalin ruled the Soviet Union from 1924-53, and some estimates say he was responsible for as many as 20 million deaths. Although the senior officials who helped him are nearly all dead, other officials who started their careers in Stalin's last years are in positions of responsibility throughout the country.

The issue of clearing the names of those who were repressed by Stalin and politically rehabilitating them is one of deep significance for Soviets.

For many of them, it means clearing a close relative.

Clearing Stalin's victims also gives Soviets an indication of what direction the leadership of Mikhail S. Gorbachev wants to take the country.

Soviets watch their leadership's evaluation of history closely because it very often is an indication of the party's goals. Gorbachev has said he wants to clear those purged by Stalin to show Soviets they have nothing to fear from speaking their minds.

Solomentsev, 74, is head of the party Control Commission, which reviews charges of misconduct within party ranks.

At a Communist Party conference in Moscow at the end of June, former Moscow party chief Boris N. Yeltsin accused him of tolerating corruption among party workers, and another speaker suggested he should retire.

After Stalin's death, Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev launched the first review of the repression, but Solomentsev said the work was not completed and did not cover abuses committed before 1934.

He said the commission is reviewing Soviet archives and appealed to the public for information to help complete a thorough review of the terror. It already has received 3,000 letters and applications from members of the public, he said.

"We are equally interested in the fate of prominent leaders of the party and the Soviet state and the rank-and-file citizens: workers, peasants, office workers, party, government and economic functionaries, intellectuals," he said.

Solomentsev said the commission had already cleared 636 people and that many other cases were still under review.

Among those whose names have been cleared this year of the criminal charges made against them by Stalin's prosecutors are prominent Bolsheviks Nikolai Bukharin, Grigory Zinoviev and Lev Kamenev. Each was a rival for the power that Stalin took for himself.

They and many other prominent figures were shot or died in prison camps during Stalin's purges of the 1930s.

Sixty-eight people have been readmitted to party rolls, including Bukharin, whose economic polices serve as a model for some of Gorbachev's reforms.

Restoration of party membership is the final act of rehabilitating those repressed by Stalin because it establishes not only that they were not guilty of criminal actions but that their political views were acceptable within the party.

Among Stalin's victims were hundreds of thousands of Balts, Crimean Tatars and ethnic Germans accused during World War II of collaborating with Nazi occupiers.

Stalin also ordered the brutal drive for collectivization of agriculture in the 1930s, when peasants who refused to leave their land for state farms were shot as examples to others and hundreds of thousands starved to death.

Hostage Chronology

Tuesday, August 16, 1988

Two armed robbers rush the Gladbeck branch of the Deutsche Bank, taking two hostages.

After daylong negotiations, police supply the robbers with approximately $225,000 and an Audi to be used as a getaway car.

The two robbers and their hostages drive through the Ruhr Valley area, switching vehicles and finally dodging police.

Wednesday, August 17, 1988

The gunmen reach Bremen and fire shots inside a vegetable market.

Accompanied by a woman accomplice, the bandits seize a bus and take the estimated 30 people on board hostage.

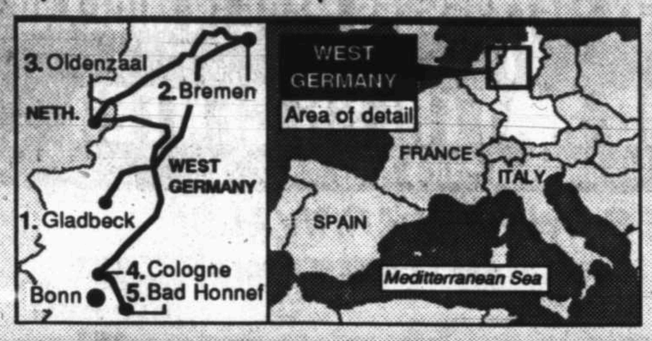

After freeing four elderly passengers and a child, the gunmen hold a pistol to the head of a child and threaten to shoot if their demands are not met.

Negotiations fail, and the bandits leave Bremen in the bus with hostages. A police officer is killed in a resulting car crash.

The two bank hostages are freed when the bus pulls into a rest stop on the autobahn for food and alcohol.

The robbers' female accomplice is suddenly seized by police outside the bus.

The gunmen shoot a 15-year-old Italian boy, who later dies, in order to force police to release their accomplice.

Thursday, August 18, 1988

The bus crosses the German-Dutch border and stops near Oldenzaal.

The gunmen demand a high-powered BMW and threaten to shoot hostages.

After receiving the BMW, all hostages except two women are freed. Heavy gunfire is exchanged between the gunmen and police, and the female accomplice is shot in the leg.

The two gunmen, the wounded female accomplice, and two female hostages cross over the West German border.

A journalist, who had gotten into the car in Cologne, as a third hostage, is set free on the autobahn near Bad Honnef.

On the autobahn outside Bonn, police stop the car and a gunfight ensues. One hostage is killed, the other injured. The two injured gunmen and their accomplice are captured.

Leaders say they'll defy committee ban

BEIT SAHUR, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Leaders of local committees said Friday they will defy Israeli attempts to stamp out the informal system of self-rule that has sprung up during the 8-month-old Palestinian uprising.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin declared the "popular committees" illegal on Thursday and threatened to deport prominent activists.

On Friday, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said: "These committees incited disturbances and brought a lot of suffering upon the (Arab) population. We had to stop their activities."

Palestinian intellectuals said the grass-roots organization is far too extensive to be broken.

"It's a way of life now," said Saeb Erakat, a professor at An Najah University in Nablus, which has been closed. "I don't think Rabin with all the military might at his disposal can do anything about it except cause more suffering."

Hundreds of committees have been formed in villages and towns of the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, and on almost every city block.

Organizing began last spring in response to leaflets issued by the clandestine United National Leadership of the Uprising, which is linked to Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

In the mainly Christian town of Beit Sahur, organizers said groups of 40 to 70 families sent one representative each to neighborhood centers. About 12,000 Palestinians live in the town near Shepherd's Field, where the Bible says the first word of Christ's birth was announced.

Neighborhood representatives elected committees of seven or eight members, but Israeli authorities arrested eight prominent Palestinians who tried to form an independent town council.

"The local committees provide an alternative authority to occupation, and their ultimate aim is to cut ties between the people and Israel's military government," said a 50-year-old teacher who has been jailed several times for political activism. He demanded anonymity to avoid arrest.

Support for local committees appears strong in Beit Sahur. It is fed by anger at Israeli soldiers, who are blamed for the death of a 17-year-old boy killed by a falling rock and the arrests of 120 residents.

Townspeople turned in their identity cards in protest after soldiers broke into living rooms to confiscate television sets and took cars from driveways in raids against delinquent taxpayers.

Strikes and refusing to pay taxes are two of the main non-violent ways to join the rebellion, in which at least 248 Palestinians have been killed since Dec. 8. Four Israelis also have been slain.

Soldiers shot and wounded at least two Palestinians in the West Bank on Friday.

A commercial strike was only partially successful Friday in the West Bank and was ignored in the Gaza Strip. The army delayed the opening of West Bank schools and universities, which it considers rallying points for violence, until at least Oct. 1.

Committees in Beit Sahur, following a pattern in the occupied lands, has mobilized Palestinians for such non-violent activities as:

— Planting gardens to reduce dependence on Israeli markets and to raise money for other activities.

— Organizing underground schools after Israel closed five universities and 1,500 elementary and secondary schools.

— Giving money and food to families who have quit jobs in Israel or whose breadwinners are in jail.

Snake disrupts Ugandan newscast

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Radio Uganda had a late-breaking development on its evening newscast, but the announcer didn't stay on the air to let his listeners know what happened.

Veteran newscaster Francis Bbaale was winding up the 10 p.m. news bulletin Wednesday when a five-foot snake slithered into his broadcast booth, the Ministry of Information said Friday.

"Oh my God!...Good night!" the excited newsman told listeners just before the radio station went off with air without explanation four minutes before the scheduled end of the 15-minute broadcast.

Station employees killed the snake. They did not say what kind it was.

Programming resumed Thursday morning, but officials didn't explain the interrupted broadcast until Friday, after newspapers carried reports on the incident.

Cornell ornithology center is nest of information for birders

By WILLIAM KATES

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Some professional birdwatchers look down on amateurs, but the legacy of America's first ornithology professor unites their work.

Cornell University's Laboratory of Ornithology, which owes its creation to Arthur A. Allen, contains millions of pages of behavior studies and photographs and the world's largest collection of birdsongs — more than 5,000 species.

Equally important, it links ornithologists and amateur birdwatchers. "The game is to position the laboratory between the professional community and the birding community, the amateur and the professional," said executive director Charles Walcott. "We are an information broker between the two."

"Cornell is synonomous with ornithology in the minds of birdwatchers," said Elsa Thompson, co-publisher of Birdwatchers Digest. "They are greatly respected as a technical and research facility.

"But Cornell has also managed to serve as a popular outreach, helping bridge the gap between professional and amateur."

Allen, an expert on red-winged blackbirds and pioneer in recording and filming wild birds, headed North America's only doctoral program in ornithology from the 1920s to the '40s. He fashioned a first-rate program at Cornell. But it was Lyman K. Stuart, a business graduate, who helped make the lab in Sapsucker Woods, a 180-acre sanctuary outside Ithaca, a reality.

Stuart, who won a "Life" magazine contest with the bird photography Allen taught him, financed much of the construction.

The main building holds the largest collection of works by bird artist Louis Agassiz Fuertes. A floor-to-ceiling window overlooks a 10-acre pond, so visitors can watch feeder birds and waterfowl and listen to sounds piped in by microphones installed outside.

During Allen's lifetime — he died in 1964 — the laboratory gained international recognition, but his continued connections with amateurs and volunteer conservationists were frowned upon by the new breed of professional ornithologists. In response, the university made the lab a separate department, but without professors or course offerings and with no students of its own.

It was expected to support itself financially, and generates money through dues and project fees, sale of publications and bird recordings, and home-study courses in ornithology and bird photography.

Membership dropped so low by 1980 that Cornell seriously considered shutting down the lab. Walcott, who earned a reputation as an educational promoter developing public television science shows like "Nova" and "3-2-1 Contact," has boosted its membership from 2,000 to 13,000 in eight years and rejuventated its home-study enrollment to about 9,000.

"Now that we have become stable again we are turning our attention to our research efforts and producing a tremendous scientific archive," he said. "Of course, all we do here has really one focus — conservation. The information we collect is highly useful as an environmental monitoring tool and we hope will serve as a biological early warning system."

Its foremost study is in bioacoustics, or bird communication. "With the help of computers we are making progress in finding out what birds say to each other, and they do communicate," said Chris Clark, head of the program.

The research has led to similar efforts involving whales and elephants.

The lab's 1-year-old Project FeederWatch last year paid 4,000 backyard birdwatchers to fill out a computerized form twice weekly recording the species that appear at their feeders. The goal this year is 10,000, and Walcott notes there are more than 82 million Americans who put out food for wild birds.

"We can only begin to guess at what we might have been able to accomplish if we had had this kind of information years ago," he said, "how many extinct species we could have saved."

"Cornell is synonomous with ornithology in the minds of birdwatchers... Cornell has also managed to serve as a popular outreach, helping bridge the gap between professional and amateur."

Schools receive grants to study deep sea drilling

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Texas and Texas A&M University on Friday won National Science Foundation grants that could be worth some $28 million over the next five years for research to help find and extract oil in extremely deep offshore waters.

Experts estimated that in the Gulf of Mexico alone, two oilfields in some 6,000 feet of water about 450 miles south of Houston could hold reserves equal to the 24 billion barrels of oil originally discovered in Saudi Arabia.

Technology, however, currently does not exist to produce oil and gas at those great depths, and the joint research project announced Friday — to be known as the Engineering Research Center for Offshore Technology — will attempt to come up with solutions to those deep-water problems.

"We believe the NSF decision to competitively award this grant here in Texas to establish this research center is a tribute to the capabilities to the University of Texas and Texas A&M University," Texas A&M President William Mobley said. "We believe it illustrates the leverage these institutions can bring to bear on state dollars to multiply them, bringing in additional resources in this case from the federal sector and private sector.

"This is an outstanding example of how collaboration between and among higher institutions of higher learning in the state can lead to very significant and positive impact."

Gov. Bill Clements called the grant announcement "wonderful news, not only for Texas A&M, but for the entire state.

"This type of oil recovery research is vital to a healthy petroleum future in Texas," he said in a statement.

Besides the federal science grant, the schools and 22 private companies — including the nation's six largest oil companies — are contributing to the project, officials said.

William Livingston, vice president and dean of graduate studies at the University of Texas, said the project also was another example of the state's two largest universities working together.

"The prospects of this venture are very great — not only for higher education but for economic health and deevelopment of Texas and the Southwest," he said.

"(The grant is) wonderful news, not only for Texas A&M, but for the entire state. This type of oil recovery research is vital to a healthy petroleum future in Texas."

— Gov. Bill Clements

"Texas A&M and UT have been in many things together and now we seem to be in deep water," he laughed.

Some $5 million of the money will go for a building in College Station and include a 100-by-100-by-12-foot-deep tank that also will have a 25-by-25-foot-square 50-foot-deep pit to be used to simulate the ocean so oil platform computer models can be tested. Wave-making machines also will be installed to simulate the forces that would be exerted on such structures.

John E. Flipse, an associate dean of engineering at Texas A&M who will direct the new center, said the short-term goal will be to develop systems that will permit economical ocean operations in depths greater than 4,000 feet of water.

"There is a prize down there for the United States but major advances in technology will be necessary to gain it," he said.

A more long-term goal will be to establish an engineering and technology base to ensure U.S. leadership in offshore energy activities, he said.

"It will hopefully become a worldwide center — if we are successful," Flipse said. "When the oil industry if ready, we will have the technology ready."

Pat Dunn, of Shell Oil Co., which is among the private firms contributing to the project, said drilling in the deep areas of the Gulf of Mexico would not be economically feasible if prices remained at the current levels of about $15 per barrel. He would not say, however, how high prices would have to go to make such an operation profitable.

Officials said terms of the federal grant require the center to be up and running without bugs in two years.

Dallas-based thrift merged with 7 other financial institutions

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas thrift hit with the largest first-quarter loss this year among the nation's savings and loans on Friday was consolidated with seven other Texas thrift institutions under one management to be controlled by federal regulators, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board announced Friday.

The FSLIC is assisting with a record $2.5 billion note to eliminate the losses of the consolidated institutions. The thrifts involved include Dallas-based Sunbelt Savings Association Texas, whose first-quarter loss of $1.2 billion made it number one among the nation's savings and loans in terms of first-quarter losses this year.

Also part of the consolidation are Western Federal Savings & Loan Association, a Dallas-based S&L which ranked 12th in losses for the first quarter, and Independent American Savings Association of Irving, ranked 20th in first-quarter losses.

George Barclay, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of Dallas, said the consolidation is "another FSLIC initiative to stabilize the thrift industry in Texas."

Friday's announcement was the second time in as many days that federal officials combined troubled Texas thrifts as part of their plan to rid the state of mismanaged and poorly operating Texas savings and loans.

Thursday, the FSLIC announced the consolidation of 12 troubled thrifts.

Barclay said Friday's action, the fifth consolidation under the so-called Southwest Plan, would bring about a significant reduction in institutions offering high-than-average interest rates for depositors.

"The eight thrifts have the most complex and troubled assets portfolios in the state," said Mary Creedon of the Dallas office of the FSLIC.

The other institutions involved in Friday's action include: First City Savings Association of Irving; Federated Savings & Loan of Brady; Multibanc Savings Association of Alice; Texana Savings & Loan Association, Texarkana; and Summit Savings Association of Dallas.

The combined institution to be known as Sunbelt Savings FSB will be headed by forer Midland banker Thomas J. Wageman, who is director of Sunbelt Savings Association.

On Thursday, FHLBB president Danny Wall announced the government would spend $1.3 billion to assist the acquisition of 12 failed thrifts by an investor group led by Chicago banker William Gibson and Lone Star Technologies, Inc., a subsidiary of Lone Star.

The thrifts combined Thursday form the new institution of American Federal Bank F.S.B., which will be headquartered in Dallas.

Friday's announcement accounts for 32 of the 109 Texas thrifts that were insolvent when work on the Southwest Plan began earlier this year. Wall said Thursday the FHLBB expected to complete the plan at the end of the year.

The thrift industry continues to lose capital, although the decline apparently slowed down in the last quarter and officials have put the cost of restoring health to the industry anywhere from $26 million to $100 million as debate continues on Capitol Hill over whether a taxpayer bailout will face the next president after he takes office in January.

The FHLBB reported earlier this month that the industry's capital declined by $1.72 billion in the April-June period, compared with a dop of $3.51 billion in the first quarter and $4.68 billion the last three months of 1987.

H & R Block's 1988 Course Teaches Newest Tax Laws

The only sure thing about tax laws is that they seemingly change from year to year. That's why so many people annually enroll in the H&R Block Tax Course.

This year's classes will introduce participants to the latest tax laws. Students include homemakers preparing for new careers, retirees preparing for second careers, and people just interested in learning more about tax return preparation. Many professional tax practitioners were first introduced to their profession through the H&R Block Tax Course.

H&R Block has been teaching Americans how to prepare individual tax returns for 22 years. It's highly respected course provides successful graduates with Certificates of Achievement and 7.5 units of continuing education credit. Qualified graduates may be offered job interviews for positions with Block. Block is, however, under no obligation to offer employment, nor are graduates under any obligation to accept employment with Block.

This year's13-week course starts on September 6th. One low fee includes materials, supplies, and textbooks. Students may choose from morning or evening classes at 4 area locations.

Additional information and registration forms are available from the H&R Block office at 1307 E. 8th Odessa. The telephone number is 332-1040.

Minstrel 'spooning' way around world on three-year journey

ELMIRA, Ore. (AP) — Watch him now, this whirling dervish who gyrates in a cloud of sound and a gaggle of spectators at the Oregon Country Fair.

Arms fly. Fingers blur. Bare feet spin in the grass. And the sound rolls out in stacatto waves, now fast, now slow, now insistent, now elusive. Artis the Spoonman is at work.

At 39, he may just be the ultimate hippie street musician, a slightly bizarre combination of flash and humor and kinetic energy who's worked curbstones from London to Los Angeles.

He plays the spoons — yes, the spoons — as fiercely as thunder rolling on the mountain, as softly as raindrops pattering a meadow.

At this point, he's almost done it all. Played with the likes of Frank Zappa and Pete Seeger and some classy chamber music groups. Done radio's "Prairie Home Companion" and German TV and Irish pubs. Worked for some pretty respectable bucks on big stages and, more often, for pocket change on street corners.

Opportunity keeps coming his way and Artis — just Artis, the last name was abandoned years ago — accommodates just enough of it to survive. But never enough to risk being pried from the creative poverty of his life-in-a-schoolbus existence.

"I've never played just to get money together," he says. "I wouldn't play at all if that was on my mind. I've been broke and real happy lots of times. I've got $150 to my name right now and I don't know what's coming next. But once I commit myself to playing, it's a labor of love and the money doesn't count."

Next for the wayfaring minstrel is a try at spooning his way around the world on the cheap, a three-year trek. Asia, Europe, Africa and South America are on the intinerary. Those who know him aren't surprised.

"I've tried to tell people about Artis, but he must be seen to be believed," says Ron Snider, percussionist with the Dallas Symphony. "He is a virtuoso. For years, I've been telling percussionists around the nation, 'Someday, you'll see this guy and you will be blown away.'"

Fate and circumstance might well have led Artis far from that sort of acclaim. Growing up in Seattle, he was a cantankerous honor student who gave up school in the 10th grade. By his own admission, he's been a heavy-duty druggie and a thief.

But now, twice-divorced, he's a grandfather of two, a father of one and stepfather of four. And beneath the hip, flip exterior of the solo, footloose troubador who makes the world smile and laugh is a man who's sometimes troubled by the way he's handled heavier responsibilities.

"I have to deal with the fact that I've spread a lot of darkness," he says. "I've lived on ego. The spoonman and his travels. But when I look at me, sometimes I see an absent father who's never done anything for his kids."

Back in the '60s he tried the U.S. Navy, the U.S. Postal Service and marriage for a while. Then, for a year or two, he drew unemployment and lived in a cheap room in Seattle's Fremont district. He began working, without pay, at a nearby cafe.

"When I was a kid I'd had a toy set of spoons," he says. "But it was never anything serious. Then one day in that cafe I just picked up a pair of teaspoons and started playing.

"Pretty soon I was playing six, eight, 10 hours a day, doing it with music. I was just being the fool, but people were coming to listen."

Odd jobs and travel took him into the early 1970s. Always the spoons were with him and often he jammed with other musicians. He became a regular in some Seattle taverns, clattering his increasingly complex syncopations off ceilings, booths and customer's backs. He was invited back often but he never got, or sought, a dime for his work.

One day in 1974, he walked out of a California bar with $3 in tips. The next weekend, in San Francisco, he was invited to dinner with friends and was too broke to contribute even a bottle of wine.

"So I mustered up all my nerve. I went down to Chinatown and put my hat out and started playing. I made $10."

He turned to songwriting, mostly interesting social commentaries and wry observations that he did with his percussion. Paying gigs came his way. Folk and rock musicians sought him out. He did warmups and sit-ins and show-closers for some big names.

Over the past decade he's become a regular performer at Renaissance fairs and folk festivals from Dallas to Boston to Winnipeg.

He's never lived richly. The good-paying dates always were followed by small checks or time on the sidewalks, teaming with other roving musicians. More than once he went to jail for making music in the street.

Bentsen: Convention ignored workers

SHERMAN (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen said Friday the Republican National Convention was a "Mardi Gras for the Moral Majority" that ignored the concerns of working people.

The millionaire Texas senator, campaigning across his home state, also said there was nothing improper when his blind trust invested in a company owned by his son.

Bentsen told reporters in Dallas that George Bush had delivered "a well-crafted speech" accepting the GOP presidential nomination Thursday night.

But he said the vice president's speech did not deal with "how the Republicans are going to face some of the real problems" of America, including trade and budget deficits, as President Reagan prepares to leave office.

"The young couples married today, no matter how hard they work, how hard they plan, are finding it more difficult in order to buy a home," Bentsen said.

"If you're worried about health care for the elderly or for children, we didn't hear any of the specifics about how those concerns are going to be met," he said.

"Let's face some facts. What we saw was the Republicans putting on a convention for the Far Right. They had a Mardi Gras for the Moral Majority."

"The hard right drove the Republican agenda," Bentsen said. "There was no reaching out for the center as we have done in the Democratic Party."

Bentsen has spent the past week reaching out to Democrats who voted for Reagan in the past two elections.

In Wichita Falls on Friday, Bentsen told 400 supporters that when he was chosen as Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis' running mate, the Massachusetts governor showed he was moving to the center.

Contrasting Dukakis and Bush, he said, "the difference will be between a united America on the move and an eight-year photo opportunity."

In Sherman the senator met with employees at a Texas Instruments defense plant that produces parts for air-to-ground missiles and laser-guided bombs. Both armaments are in keeping with the Dukakis campaign's emphasis on conventional weapons over Reagan's Star Wars plan for a space-based missile defense system:

"Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen are strong for defense," Bentsen said, and Dukakis also "believes in a nuclear deterrent." But he said Dukakis also believed in getting the "the most sophisticated and sufficient in conventional weapons."

From Sherman, Bentsen was returning to Dallas for a reunion with Dukakis and a fund-raising event before traveling together today to the LBJ ranch for a visit with President Johnson's widow, Lady Bird.

Reporters questioned Bentsen on Friday about his blind trust, details of which were released earlier this week by his Washington office.

The senator confirming a Washington Post report that his blind trust invested in his son Lan's company, and that his wife, B.A., served on the board of a mutual fund affiliated with the trust manager, the Criterion Management Investment Co.

When his son asked him about investing in his company, Bentsen said he told him to see the trustee. "I told the trustee it was their decision," Bentsen said.

Mrs. Bentsen earned $60,000 in director's fees last year working on the mutual fund board. But Bentsen said that was unrelated to his trust and that his wife was a stockholder's trustee rather than a management trustee.

Asked if there was any conflict with the trust arrangement, he said, "No. Not at all. Absolutely not."

Mrs. Bentsen recently resigned from the board to join the campaign, he said.

Tower: If Dukakis wins Bensten's duty will be to preside over Senate

HARLINGEN (AP) — George Bush's Mexican-born daughter-in-law and a former judge toured the state Friday with former Sen. John Tower, who repeated the Republican contention that Texas voters would rather have a Texan as president than as vice president.

"If Dukakis wins, Bentsen will be sent down to the Capitol to preside over the Senate and will never be seen in the White House again," Tower told a crowd of about 200 Bush supporters at Valley International Airport.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen is a native of Mission in the Rio Grande Valley.

"That's the way the Boston-Austin axis worked back in 1961" when Texan Lyndon B. Johnson took office as vice president with President John F. Kennedy, Tower said.

Kennedy was from Massachusetts, the home state of Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

Tower said Bush, who has called Texas his home for the past 40 years, shared with Texans the same family values and "the same attitude toward drugs, law enforcement, the same attitude toward permitting citizens to keep their guns, all contrary to what Mr Dukakis believes."

Republicans will do well with Hispanic voters this year, Tower said, because "Mexican Americans are coming to realize that they have been exploited for a long time by a lot of (Democratic Party) gringo jefes (bosses) who speak Spanish, and they're not going to be exploited any more."

Tower said the controversy over Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle, having served in the National Guard during the Vietnam War, is a "non issue" that will go away in a few days.

"The National Guard in Indiana was under-strength at that time, and Dan Quayle joined the National Guard, which I think is a pretty darn good outfit," Tower said.

...Bush...shared with Texans the same family values and "the same attitude toward drugs, law enforcement, the same attitude toward permitting citizens to keep their guns, all contrary to what Mr Dukakis believes."

— John Tower

Roy Barrera, a former state district judge from San Antonio who ran unsuccessfully for Texas attorney general in 1986, said the majority of Americans support the Republican Party's conservative platform.

"Americans live in the Valley, Americans live in South Texas and we don't need to distinguish between a brown American, or a black American or a white American," Barrera said. "Patriotism, God, country, family virtues and values, the security of our nation — these things are important to everyone, whether we are brown, white or black."

The Bush campaigners also stopped in Victoria and Corpus Christi before Harlingen, then headed for El Paso.

Columba Bush, wife of Bush's son Jeb, appeared with their 11-year-old daughter, Noel, and described the campaign as "a family affair" with all of them getting involved.

"I am someone like you, who shares your feelings and hopes," Mrs. Bush, a native of Mexico, said in Spanish.

Home's resident takes ambulance to buy sandwich

CONROE (AP) — A nursing home resident who jumped in an idling ambulance and drove into a garage apparently took the vehicle so he could search for a sandwich.

Donald Edwards, 79, a resident of the Woodland Manor Nursing Home, was uninjured in the Thursday crash and faces no charges. He has been returned to the nursing home.

The pajama-clad Edwards sped off in the ambulance early Thursday morning, but he only managed to drive it for about a mile before running it into a garage.

"I guess my first thought was, 'Why is there an ambulance in my driveway?' The second thought was, 'This can't be the real driver.' I mean he looked elderly and a little dazed," said Margaret Hataway, who awoke about 3:30 a.m. Thursday to the sound of squealing tires and a revved-up engine.

The crash came a few seconds later. The ambulance demolished her garage door and the Cadillac parked inside was scratched from flying glass.

"He said all he wanted was a sandwich, and he couldn't figure out why no one would give him one," said Pat Pechacek, owner of the stolen ambulance.

The ambulance was called to the nursing home to transport an elderly woman complaining of chest pains. The woman was taken to the hospital by another ambulance, and she was doing fine, Pechacek said.

And Pechacek, who had gone to the nursing home with his partner to pick up the woman, said he now has a new policy for employees at the County Wide Ambulance Service.

"Turn the engine off, and take the keys with you."

'Blue eyes' finds her prince through personal ad

By JENNIFER LIEBRUM
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — Susie Sibley prayed for a little divine intervention last year before sitting down at her kitchen table and drafting an ad for the personals.

"I'm a 5'2," said the 125-pound, blue-eyed blond, 71. I play the organ and like doing things like traveling and dancing, not sitting around like an old lady. I seek a male companion who enjoys these things and will attend Sunday church services," the ad read.

In a rare moment, Bill Sharp scanned the newspaper personals. The ad jumped out at him. He liked blue-eyed women, especially active ones, and after 17 years as a bachelor, he was willing to take a chance on love. He drafted his own letter in response.

"Dear Blue-eyes," the letter began. It ended with a proposal for a date.

"I'm not much of a letter writer," Bill, 82, says. "It was short and to the point. I was interested."

The couple rendezvoused at an International House of Pancakes. According to Susie, "I looked him over, and I gave him my address and phone number. I never do that." Of 17 respondents to Susie's ad, Bill's was the only one she followed through on.

Several dates later, the couple were married in Susie's church. Mr. and Mrs. Sharp, after four months of wedded bliss, share a northwest Houston love nest. The rest is history to be made, they say.

Everyone should be so lucky with their advertising.

Susie doesn't understand all the fuss.

"This wouldn't be so unusual if more older people would give their lives, and love, a chance," she says. "Age is not the true gauge of how romantic two people can be. Whether we've got one week, or 100, I want to die as happy as I feel right now."

Bill echoes Susie's sentiment.

"No matter how old you are, if you can find someone who you can be happy with for the rest of your life, that's just wonderful."

According to Susie, she was smitten from the start, Bill on the other hand, "didn't even kiss me on the cheek until the third date! But when he did, pow! I like his kisses."

Bill, who was married for 48 years, says he hadn't given marriage much thought until he met Susie.

"Until, on one of our dates, someone stole all the hubcaps off my Cadillac," Bill jokes. "I had to get married. I needed a house with a garage."

The couple exchanged traditional marriage vows on April 9. The spring bride wore a white suit and clutched a bouquet of roses in her steady hands. She says she wasn't nervous; it was her third marriage.

The groom looked dapper in a blue suit with a rose in the lapel for his second marriage.

"He said I would have to have the real thing, and he delivered. That's the amazing thing about Bill, he promises me the best, and he delivers," Susie says.

Susie's younger sister, June Byers, 66, says she has witnessed a transformation in the newlyweds since their meeting.

"They look, and act, 10 to 15 years younger now than before they met," Byers says. "I haven't seen Susie happier in years."

Ms. Byers says she cried at their wedding, but they were tears of joy, and that family on both sides have been supportive of the union. Bill has one son, two grandchildren and five great-grandchildren from his previous marriage. Susie has four children, 14 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren from her marriages.

"They are pretty equally matched," Ms. Byers says. "They operate on the same speed — 90 miles per hour."

"He is everything I ever wanted. He treats me like a princess. He does everything I want him to do without me asking him to. And we've never had a fuss," Susie says with a laugh, knocking on the wooden counter.

Throughout this interview, Bill has been poling around their new house, looking for things that need fixing. Every few minutes, he passes through the kitchen where Susie is fielding questions. With every pass, he gives Susie a pat, squeeze or loving glance.

"She's a good kid, and a great kidder," Bill says, cuddling with Susie. "And that smile, it's beautiful. She loves people, and, best of all, she loves me."

The couple spent their honeymoon house-hunting but plan to go to Las Vegas once they are settled. Their new home needed a few repairs, and the couple's friends planned a painting party as a wedding gift. New carpeting is on the way, and Bill is making plans for a day of yard work.

The property was a foreclosure held by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

When the couple closed on the house last week, HUD's chief of property disposition, Louis Fought, was on hand to witness the signing. Staffers at the HUD-VA closing attorney's office supplied a cake and balloons. According to Fought, the couple are the oldest in his recollection to have secured a HUD loan and home.

"It was a real neat affair. I'm delighted that we could help them start their new life together," Fought says. "They've joined forces at an advanced age, under unusual circumstances. We were able to take a house that had suffered a foreclosure and turn it into a home for them. We were very pleased."

The new homeowners say they won't settle into any marriage-related ruts and will maintain a steady diet of nightclubbing, margaritas, movies and mall-walking.

Man exposed to AIDS virus given 99-year sentence for raping girl

HOUSTON (AP) — A man exposed to the deadly AIDS virus has been sentenced to 99 years in prison for sexually assaulting an 8-year-old girl and then stabbing her.

The girl, now 9, and her playmate, now 10, were raped at an apartment Jan. 22, by a man posing as a security guard.

Alphonso Percival Darden, 27, was given the 99-year term Thursday. He mumbled "it was a set-up" as he was led from the courtroom while angry relatives and friends of the victim watched.

Darden was charged with assaulting both girls, but he was tried only in the case involving the younger girl.

Prosecutor Pat Kelley had asked for a life sentence, saying it was necessary so "little girls in the future will be safe."

Darden claimed in a statement to police that the girls allowed him to enter their apartment and then seduced him.

Kelley said the statement was "so preposterous" and harmful to the defense that he read it to the jury during closing arguments.

The girls testified that Darden got into their apartment by posing as a security guard, sexually assaulted each of them while forcing the other to watch and then stabbed them both.

The girls said they escaped further injury by "playing dead."

Darden was arrested three days after the attacks, and State District Judge Michael McSpadden promptly ordered him to take the AIDS antibodies test and said the results would be released to the parents.

The case attracted a lot of attention when authorities revealed this week that although Darden tested positive for antibodies to the AIDS virus, the victims' parents were not notified about it until eight months later.

Police said Darden may have raped six other Houston girls whose parents also don't know he has been infected with the virus.

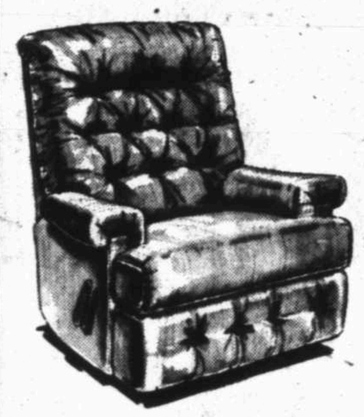

A person who tests positive for the antibodies is considered exposed to the virus. Many scientists think most people who test positive for the antibodies will develop the deadly disease.

Vague Texas laws have been blamed for the failure to notify the parents. Judges now may order rape suspects to be tested for the AIDS virus, but what action is taken concerning the results is not clear-cut.

Poor Chicago students meet less fortunate in Africa

CHICAGO (AP) — Carrying carved African walking sticks, 10 pupils from one of Chicago's poorest neighborhoods returned from a three-country African tour during which they met people "poorer than we are."

The Suder Elementary School students, ages 11 to 14, raised $30,000 in less than 10 months to pay for the two-week trip that took them to Senegal, the Ivory Coast and Togo.

"I remember last October, when they came home from school and said, 'Guess what? We're going to go to Africa,'" said George West, as he waited for his sons, Brian, 12, and Daryl, 11, to clear customs at O'Hare International Airport upon their return Tuesday night.

"I just said, 'Y-e-a-h...r-i-g-h-t,' but a couple of months later they told me they'd already raised a third of the money, so they made a believer out of me."

The truest believer was Suder Principal Brenda Daigre, who planned the trip after her own second visit to Africa.

Mrs. Daigre said her trip made her feel as if she had "come home," and she wanted her students, all of whom are black, to get a chance to discover their own African roots.

"I have traveled extensively, and nothing hit me as hard as when I went to Africa," she said before the students left. "There is a kinship that you feel, there is an openness that you feel."

Vernya Baines, whose 13-year-old daughter, Yo-seanda, was in the group, said before the trip she thought it would be a "beautiful experience" for her daughter, who had never been on airplane or out of Illinois.

"We're poor, but I think it'll give them a chance to see people that are poorer than we are," Mrs. Baines said. "Maybe she'll appreciate some of the things she maybe takes for granted."

By voyage's end, however, many of the students seemed too excited to dwell on moral lessons as they trooped off the plane while carrying African walking sticks and green knapsacks.

"We saw the slave houses where they kept the slaves. We saw the Senegal museum. It was wonderful," said Hardy Shorter, 12. "We saw the African sculptures from long ago."

Raising money for the journey presented problems since eight of the students live in the Henry Horner Homes public housing project, and two live across the street from the project, Ms. Daigre said.

Some of the funds came from churches and community groups, but the students raised much of it by running a candy store at school and by putting on a talent show and basketball and volleyball games.

"We taught them how to set long-range goals," the principal said.

Mrs. Daigre had the students write to African pen pals, take after-school classes in African culture and art, and study French for a year to prepare for their visits to the countries, all former French colonies.

Cowboys' Ruzek headed for Utah hunting, fishing

IRVING (AP) — Roger Ruzek is back at his Utah home to hunt and fish and the Dallas Cowboys are headed for Monday night's game against the Chicago Bears without their starting kicker from last season.

Talks Thursday between Ruzek's representatives and Cowboys vice president Joe Bailey did not end the kicker's 29-day absence from training camp. Ruzek says he's retired; the Cowboys say he's a holdout. There are no plans to meet again, although both sides say they are eager to end the impasse.

Ruzek, who had earlier rebuffed media contact, held an impromptu news conference outside the Las Colinas offices of his negotiating team, Steve Weinberg and Bucky Woy.

He said "it seems apparent" that the Cowboys have a personal problem dealing with Weinberg, who has had a history of troubled negotiations (the most celebrated of which concerned Everson Walls) with the Cowboys.

"It is personal from the standpoint of all the agents who utilize and advise players, under contract, to withhold their services for a better contract," Bailey said.

"What you have here is the case of an agent who is bitter toward the Dallas Cowboys," said Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

Ruzek said he tried to work out a multiyear deal or a one-year deal and was even willing to work under the same contract given to free-agent kicker Jess Atkinson, who, coincidentally, was released Thursday by the Cowboys.

Ruzek's team proposed a one-year deal worth $136,000 plus incentives. However, Bailey was not receptive to any of those possibilities, or that of a trade.

The Cowboys have been offering him a four-year deal that averages $128,000 a season.

"We met for approximately two hours," Bailey said, "Bucky, Steve, Roger and I. To me, there was no progress. I cannot categorize what happened the past two days as negotiations.

"There are two levels to look at this from," Bailey continued. "(Roger) is under contract and all we're asking the player to do is abide by his contract. If he does that, I feel very positive that an agreement, satisfactory to both sides, can be reached in a very short period of time.

"Well, there is a little bit of a dilemma here because he is under contract and there are principles involved in living up to that," Bailey said. "Until he makes up his mind to abide by his contract, we're not going to discuss specifics or negotiate specifics of a contract.

"If we were to do that, it would send a message to others that they, too, can negotiate based on a hold out, and theoretically obtain a better contract while they hold out," Bailey said.

Conversation between the two sides was in progress, Bailey said.

Woy, who said he was on vacation until last week and is attempting to serve as mediator of sorts, said both sides now understand each other's positions better and that was positive.

Woy spoke with Bailey on the phone after the earlier meeting, then spoke with Ruzek, who in turn talked with Baily on the phone.

And after it was all over, Ruzek said he was heading for Utah.

"I'm going to do what makes Roger Ruzek happy," said Ruzek, who said he came to the Dallas area to see friends and decided to call Weinberg and Woy. "I'm going to do some hunting and fishing and pursue what comes my way. I'll be happy with the decisions I make and I've made the decisions from the beginning."

Dallas not interested in talking to Septien despite kicking problems

DALLAS (AP) — Despite the apparent loss of holdout kicker Roger Ruzek for this season, Dallas Coach Tom Landry says the team is not interested in talking to former Cowboys kicker Rafael Septien!

Septien, who was released by the NFL team after he pleaded guilty to a charge of indecency with a child, told the Dallas Times Herald he has asked for tryouts with the Denver Broncos, Miami Dolphins and Phoenix Cardinals only to be told the teams are not interested.

Septien, who was paid $200,000 for his last season with the Cowboys, says he would be willing to take $100,000 if the team would sign him for this season. He had been the team's kicker for 10 years.

"I don't think it's fair to bring it up right now," Landry said Thursday. "I think he has been through enough pain."

Septien was charged with aggravated sexual assault, but pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of indecency with a child and was given 10 years probation and fined $2,000. He was released by the Cowboys five days later.

"Here is a guy who wants to kick and all he wants is a second chance," Septien said. "I am kicking better that I have before and my accuracy is tremendous."

Evangelist Bill Glass, who played 12 seasons with the Cleveland Browns, has been enlisted by Septien to help him find a job with an NFL team.

Glass talked with Phoenix Cardinals Coach John Gene Stallings, but the Phoenix coach would say only that he would "give it some thought."

"Rafael is ashamed, and this is just one of those horrible things," Glass said. "I will be honest with you, there are people in the league who have done worse things and got a second chance."

"There are a lot of drug addicts who came back and played," Glass said. "When a person is repentant and sorry, then God forgives. And fellow man should forgive us, too."

Glass admits it will be difficult for Septien to get a second chance, given the nature of his offense.

"This is one of those red flag things that society has trouble with," Glass said. "I understand that.

"I was in the league 12 years and I saw a heckuva lot worse than what he did."

"This man has been out of the league one year, he has lost his wife, and he has lost his ability to play," Glass said.

Angels fall out of first in TL West

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — History repeated at Dudley Field here Friday.

The Midland Angels, who have traditionally faltered in late-season games at El Paso, dropped out of first place in the Texas League West race with a 3-0 loss to the El Paso Diablos.

Friday's loss was the Angels' fourth straight defeat going into tonight's opener of a crucial five-game series against the San Antonio Missions at V.J. Keefe Stadium in San Antonio.

The Missions pulled to within a game of the Angels with a 3-2 win over the cellar-dwelling Wichita Pilots. Midland plays in San Antonio through Wednesday before ending the regular season with a five-game series at home against Wichita.

And that's where it will end for the Haloes unless they hit San Antonio and Wichita pitching better than they managed against El Paso fireballer Doug Henry on Friday.

Henry, who was promoted from Class A only in mid-July, had a no-hitter going until Midland's Tom Alfredson led off the eighth with a single. Jim McCollom had the other Midland hit with a ninth-inning single. Lee Stevens then walked, but Henry, 3-0, retired Jesus Alfaro and Dan Grunhard to end the game.

Midland hurler Mike Fetters, 7-8, also threw well after some early-inning woes. But those early lapses were enough on Friday.

The Diablos got the only run they needed with two out in the first inning on a walk to Greg Vaughn, a hit batsman and an RBI single by Todd Brown.

Friday was Midland manager Max Oliveras' first game back after serving a two-week suspension for bumping umpire Todd Freese, who worked Friday's game. There were no incidents, however.

Dolphins edge Broncos in OT

MIAMI (AP) — Fuad Reveiz kicked a 48-yard field goal with 4:10 left in overtime Friday night, capping a 52-yard drive and giving the Miami Dolphins a 16-13 victory over Denver in a preseason game.

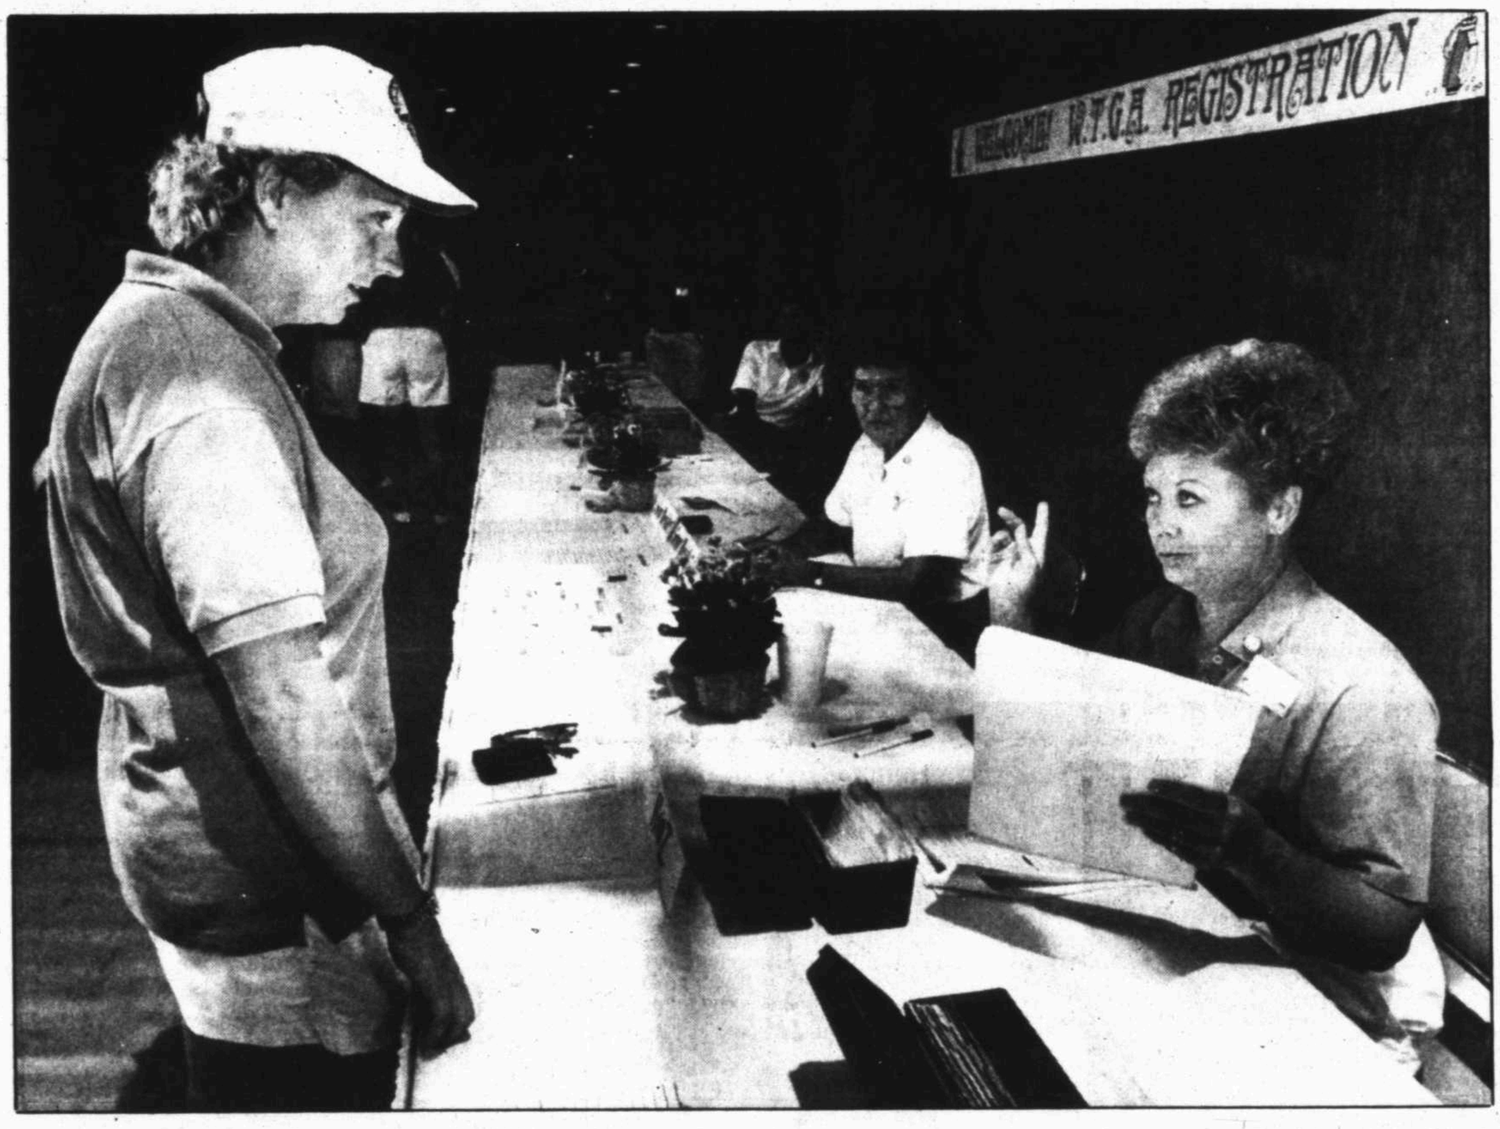

One play before the kick, James Pruitt fumbled after catching a pass, but two Broncos overran the loose ball, and Miami tackle Mark Dennis recovered at the Denver 32-yard line.

Denver received the kickoff to start the overtime, and Gary Kubiak quickly hit Warren Marshall for a 30-yard gain to the Miami 48. But three plays later the Broncos had to punt, and quarterback Ron Jaworski marched Miami to the winning score.

In the fourth quarter, Denver rookie David Treadwell kicked a 51-yard field goal with 1:01 left to tie the game 13-13. Treadwell slipped on the wet field as he kicked the ball, but it easily cleared the crossbar.

Jason Johnson's 44-yard kickoff return to the Denver 49 set up the score.

Dan Marino played the entire first half for Miami, completing 13 of 22 passes for 87 yards. Elway played through the first series of the third quarter, hitting seven of 13 passes for 65 yards.

Louganis, Bradshaw win U.S. diving berths

Kimball misses berth, but still has platform chance

Diver Bruce Kimball performs a dive in the U.S. Olympic diving trials. He is competing despite being charged with five felony counts for driving under the influence.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Greg Louganis, the defending Olympic gold medalist in springboard and platform diving, qualified for his fourth U.S. Olympic team and Mark Bradshaw won an intense battle for second place in the men's springboard competition Friday at the U.S. Olympic Trials.

Louganis scored 717.72 points in the finals to finish with 1440.60. Bradshaw battled Kent Ferguson for the other position on the U.S. team and captured it with 1,375.05 points, delighting a group of about 40 blue-shirted relatives that strongly cheered him after each dive.

Ferguson, who took a 18.06-point advantage over Bradshaw into the 11-dive finals, dislocated his shoulder on his first dive. The shoulder was quickly relocated by the medical staff and Ferguson continued to dive after saying he was experiencing no pain. He finished third at 1363.95 to become an alternate.

Ron Meyer was fourth at 1294.38, followed by Pat Jeffrey at 1240.77 and Bruce Kimball at 1227.39.

Kimball, whose participation has sparked some protests, still has a chance to make the Olympic team on the platform. Competition in the event begins today with the finals set for Sunday when the Trials conclude.

Kimball was involved in an auto accident on Aug. 1 at Brandon, Fla., in which two teen-agers were killed and six others injured. He has been charged with five felony counts of driving under the influence and is free on $10,000 bond pending an Aug. 29 court hearing.

A petition circulated outside the natatorium Friday asked that Kimball be barred from representing the United States in the Olympics.

U.S. Diving, the national governing body for the sport, has said it cannot ban Kimball from competing at the trials or in the Olympics if he qualifies.

Kimball won a silver medal in the event at the 1984 Olympics.

Earlier Friday, Olympic silver medalist Michele Mitchell scored 76.14 points on her final dive to take a slim lead over reigning national champion Wendy Williams after the preliminary round of platform competition.

Mitchell, 26, and a seven-time nation champion on the platform, scored 447.42 points for her eight dives. Williams, 21, survived a shaky start to score 444.21. Mary Fischbach, 23, overcame the disappointment of missing a a spot on the Olympic squad in springboard by less than one point Thursday to place third with 435.33.

Louganis, who has captured a record 47 national championships, was in command all night. Louganis, who won an Olympic silver medal in 1976 when he was 16, got four 9.0 and three 9.5s on his first two dives to turn the attention of the crowd to the battle for second between Bradshaw and Ferguson.

Carrying over a 1988-high 722.88 points from Thursday's prelims, Louganis had only one 10 in the finals. It came on his ninth dive, a reverse 2½ somersault in the pike position. The other six judges split with three awarding a 9.5 and the other three giving Louganis a 9 for an 83.70 total.

Louganis, who took the lead for good on the fifth of his 11 dives in Thursday's prelims, received 13 9.5s and 28 9s in the finals.

Bradshaw, 26, and Ferguson, 25, traded positions three times in the finals and were separated by less than a point with two dives remaining. Bradshaw then scored a 9, four 8.5s and a pair of 8s in the 10th round in accumulating 80.64 points. Ferguson scored 73.08 in that round and Bradshaw then received 88.11 on his final dive, which brought him five 9s.

Lewis may pull out of U.S. Olympic 400-meter relay team

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Carl Lewis cast doubts Friday on whether he will run the 400-meter relay at next month's Olympics while Steve Cram, Britain's 1,500-meter ace, swept away any doubts on his ability to win in Seoul.

Lewis, who easily dominated the 100 meters in 10.04 seconds, said Friday he was barred by U.S. relay coach Russ Rogers from competing in the 400-meter relay at the Van Damme Memorial track meet because "he had not proven himself."

Asked if he would still run the anchor leg in the Olympics after Friday's dispute, Lewis said:

"At this point, no. At this point, I am just going to focus on the three individual events, and not the relay."

On Wednesday, Lewis beat archrival Ben Johnson of Canada in 9.93 seconds, the best time of the season. He said that was proof enough he should be on the team.

Lewis said Rogers also told Joe De Loach he could not run in Friday's relays despite the assurances of U.S. head coach Stan Huntsman.

"Rogers was acting like a junior high school coach," said Lewis. He also had a conversation with his personal coach Tom Tellez, who told him "not to focus on the relay anymore."

Bypassing the relays would deny Lewis the opportunity to become the first man to win four gold medals in succesive Olympics.

Bell's bat keeps Astros in race

NL Roundup

PITTSBURGH — Danny Darwin pitched a three-hitter and Buddy Bell, taken off the disabled list earlier in the day, went 3-for-4 with a homer and two runs batted in Friday night as the Houston Astros beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1.

Glenn Davis and Bell hit consecutive home runs in Houston's three-run fourth inning off Mike Dunne, 6-10, who lost his third in a row despite a career-high eight strikeouts in 6⅓ innings.

Darwin, 6-9, won for the first time as a starter since June 7, allowing only an RBI grounder to Andy Van Slyke in the third. Darwin, who had lost his last four starts, struck out five and walked one.

Darwin made 12 relief appearances since his last start July 10. He did not allow a hit after Dunne's third-inning single.

With the Pirates leading 1-0, Davis led off the fourth with his 24th homer of the season. Bell, who been on the disabled list since Aug. 4 with a strained muscle in his left rib cage, followed by hitting a 2-0 pitch over the left field wall for his fifth homer.

Dunne then hit Kevin Bass in the right knee with a pitch and Rafael Ramirez doubled down the left field line, sending Bass to third. Alex Trevino's run-scoring groundout made it 3-1 before Dunne struck out Darwin and Gerald Young.

Terry Puhl doubled leading off the seventh and Pirates Manager Jim Leyland elected to walk Davis intentionally. Bell followed with an RBI single, and Davis added his second RBI of the game with a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

The Astros have won five of seven this season against the Pirates, who lost for the second time in six games.

Cubs 8, Braves 7

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson homered twice and knocked in five runs, including the game-winner in the ninth inning with a one-out, fly-ball single that gave the Chicago Cubs a victory over Atlanta.

A single by Mitch Webster and one-out walks to Ryne Sandberg and Mark Grace by Jose Alvarez, 3-6, loaded the bases for Dawson. His fly ball glanced off center fielder Terry Blocker's glove, but was deep enough to score Webster even if it had been caught.

Rich Gossage, 2-1, got the last out in the top of the ninth to earn credit for the victory.

Vance Law capped Chicago's three-run eighth inning with an RBI single that gave the Cubs a 7-6 lead, but the Braves tied it in the ninth on Ken Oberkfell's sacrifice fly, his fourth RBI of the game.

Atlanta took a 6-4 lead into the eighth, but the Cubs went ahead with five straight hits, four of them singles, to start the inning.

Sandberg doubled to lead off and Bruce Sutter relieved Rick Mahler before Grace singled, putting runners on first and third.

Dawson made it 6-5 with another single and Rafael Palmeiro tied it with Chicago's fourth straight hit. Alvarez then relieved Sutter and was greeted by Law's go-ahead single.

Dawson hit a two-run homer in the first inning and solo homer in the sixth, his 19th. Both of the homers came on the first pitch from Mahler, giving Dawson his 26th two-homer game of his career.

Oberkfell's two-run single in the fourth gave the Braves a 5-2 lead and knocked out Chicago starter Greg Maddux, who is 1-3 since the All-Star break after a 15-3 start.

Dawson's leadoff homer in the sixth cut the Braves' lead to 5-4, but Atlanta, which had no hits from the fifth through the ninth innings, scored an unearned run in the seventh on Dale Murphy's sacrifice fly.

After Dawson's two-run homer in the first, the Braves scored three times in the second on RBI singles by Terry Blocker, Mahler and Oberkfell.

Cardinals 10, Reds 4

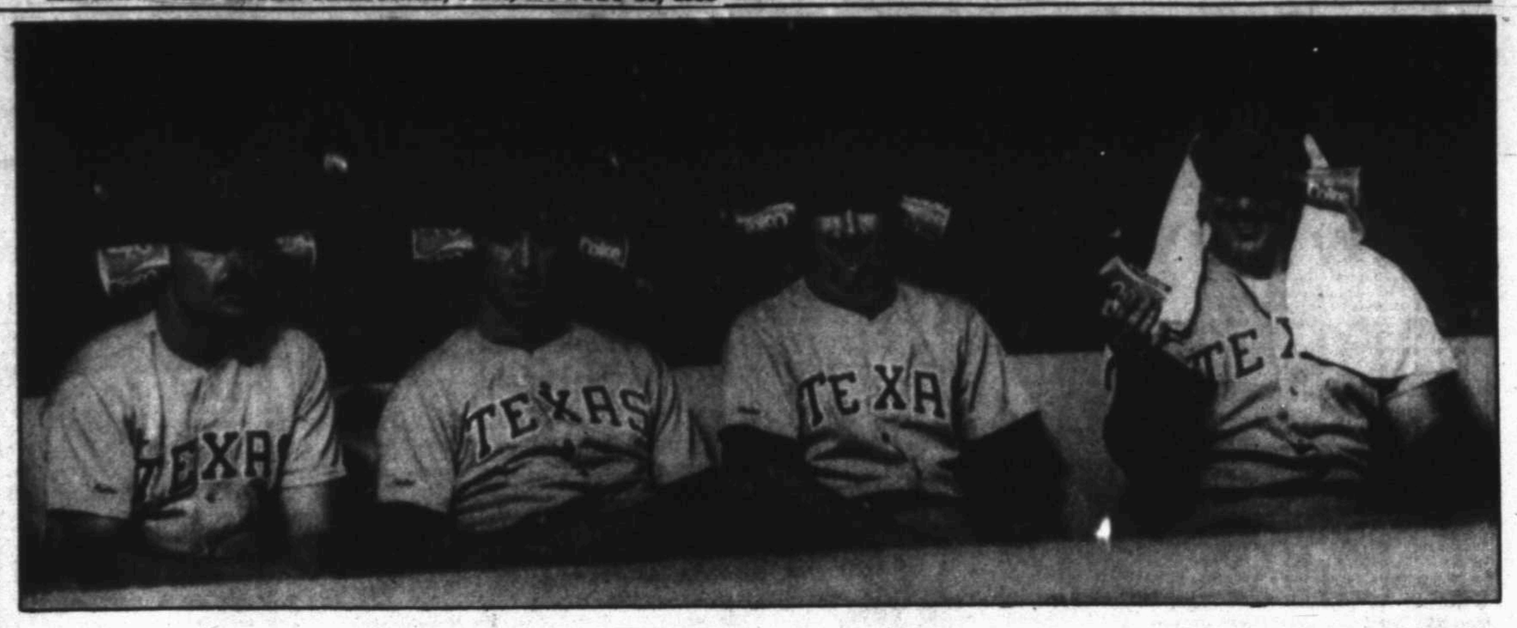

ST. LOUIS — Jose Oquendo homered and drove in four runs and Terry Pendleton went 4-for-4 with a two-run double as St. Louis beat Cincinnati.

The Cardinals, scoring their most runs since May 12, broke it open with five runs in the eighth inning. Oquendo hit a two-run homer, his fourth, and tied his career high with four RBI. Pedro Guerrero added a three-run triple off reliever Rob Murphy.

Reliever John Costello, 4-1, gave up one hit in 2⅔ innings. Todd Worrell, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, got the final four outs for his 24th save.

The Cardinals scored four times in the third for a 5-2 lead against Norm Charlton, who made his major league debut. Vince Coleman doubled and Pedro Guerrero and Tom Brunansky walked, loading the bases with one out. Pendleton's two-run double to left field put St. Louis ahead and Oquendo hit a two-run single with two outs.

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer, his 23rd, in the Reds' first. Kal Daniels drew a leadoff walk and Davis connected with two outs against Jose DeLeon.

Boston's Greenwell lands RBI lead

Associated Press

American League

BOSTON — Mike Greenwell took over the major league RBI lead by driving in three runs, including the game-winner in the seventh inning, to lead the Boston Red Sox past the Oakland Athletics 7-6 Friday night.

Greenwell finished the game with 96 runs batted in, two more than Oakland's Jose Canseco, who didn't drive in any runs for the American League West leaders.

With the score tied 6-6, Marty Barrett began the bottom of the seventh with a double and Gene Nelson relieved starter Dave Stewart, 15-11. Barrett went to third on Dwight Evans' sacrifice bunt and scored on Greenwell's single.

Tigers 5, White Sox 4

DETROIT — Dwayne Murphy, Darrell Evans and Lou Whitaker each hit home runs and Detroit held on to beat the Chicago White Sox despite a 5-for-5 performance by Carlton Fisk.

The Tigers led 5-0 after six innings, but the White Sox scored four runs in the seventh.

Fisk had four singles, a triple and two runs batted in, and it was the first five-hit game in his 18-year career. He also broke the American League record for games caught, appearing for the 1,807th time behind the plate. Rick Ferrell had held the record at 1,806.

Tiger starter Frank Tanana, 14-7, allowed four runs in 6⅓ innings, Mike Henneman went 2⅓ innings and Guillermo Hernandez got the last out for his sixth save.

Yankees 5-1, Mariners 3-6

NEW YORK — Mike Moore tied a Seattle record with 16 strikeouts and allowed five hits as the Mariners beat the New York Yankees to gain a doubleheader split.

In the first game, former Mariner Ken Phelps hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning to give the Yankees a 5-3 victory.

Moore, 7-13, won his third straight game. He walked two, both in the first inning. It was the most the Yankees have been struck out in any game this season and tied the major-league high for this season.

In May, teammate Mark Langston also struck out 16.

Rangers 5, Twins 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Bobby Witt pitched a five-hitter and struck out 10 en route to his eighth consecutive complete game and Pete O'Brien went 4-for-4.

Witt, 5-8, walked three as he threw his second shutout. The Texas record for consecutive complete games is nine set by Gaylord Perry in 1975.

O'Brien had three singles, a double, and scored one run. It's the fifth time O'Brien has had four hits in a game in his career.

Texas scored three times in the second off starter Fred Toliver, 4-3. O'Brien started the rally with a single and advanced to third on Pete Incavilgia's double. Geno Petralli then singled, scoring O'Brien and Incaviglia went to third.

With Cecil Espy batting, Incavilgia scored on Tim Laudner's passed ball. After a groundout, Steve Buechele singled scoring Petralli with the third run.

O'Brien's fourth hit was a double off reliever Keith Atherton in the seventh, scoring Scott Fletcher from first.

The Rangers made it 5-0 in the eighth on Oddibe McDowell's RBI single.

Toliver pitched six innings allowing eight hits and three runs and struck out five.

Indians 4, Royals 2

CLEVELAND — Tom Candiotti, making his first appearance in 23 days, allowed one hit in five innings as the Cleveland posted its fifth straight victory.

Candiotti, 9-8, didn't allow a hit until Bo Jackson's 440-foot home run over the left-field fence with two outs in the fifth. It was Jackson's 18th homer.

The right-handed knuckleballer struck out three, walked one and hit a batter. Candiotti was on the disabled list from Aug. 4 until Friday with stiffness in his right shoulder.

Scott Bailes relieved Candiotti and pitched three-plus innings and allowed three hits. Doug Jones got the last three outs for his 28th save.

Bret Saberhagen, 12-13, lost his seventh game in his last nine decisions. Saberhagen gave up eight hits while pitching his ninth complete game.

Brewers 7, Blue Jays 4

TORONTO — Joey Meyer drove in four runs, including the a tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the 10th inning.

Duane Ward, 8-2, gave up a leadoff double to Robin Yount in the 10th, a ball that bounced off second base. Rob Deer followed with a single and continued to second on the throw home. Greg Brock was walked intentionally to load the bases and Meyer followed with a sacrifice fly to right field.

After another intentional walk to B.J. Surhoff, John Cerutti relieved Ward. Dale Sveum scored Deer with a bunt single and Jim Gantner scored the third run of the inning with a squeeze bunt.

Juan Nieves, 5-5, pitched four one-hit innings for the victory and Dan Pleasc threw the final inning for his 29th save.

Orioles 3, Angels 1

BALTIMORE — Dave Schmidt combined with two relievers on a four-hitter.

Schmidt, 6-3, gave up three hits in 6⅔ innings and won his third straight decision. Since moving into the starting rotation Aug. 4, he has allowed just four earned runs in 25 innings.

Mark Williamson, recalled from the minors Thursday, relieved with the bases loaded and two outs in the seventh and fanned Devon White on three pitches.

Chiefs battle Green Bay to 21-21 tie

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Green Bay quarterback Randy Wright led two fourth-quarter scoring drives as the Packers and Kansas City Chiefs played to a 21-21 tie in an exhibition game Friday night.

The Packers had three possessions and the Chiefs two in overtime. The deepest penetration came on the Chiefs' first drive, when they reached the Packers 32-yard line before a 10-yard holding penalty thwarted the drive.

The Packers trailed 21-7 entering the fourth quarter when Wright, their third quarterback of the game, led a rally.

He hooked up on a 43-yard touchdown pass to rookie Sterling Sharpe with 7:13 to go, getting Green Bay within 21-14.

After a two-yard Kansas City punt, Wright took Green Bay on a 62-yard scoring drive. Rookie Keith Woodside carried one yard for the tying touchdown on a fourth down with 1:20 left.

The drive was aided by two penalties on the Chiefs, one for a personal foul after a 12-yard reception by Woodside and another on a holding penalty.

Before the fourth quarter, Kansas City had rendered Packers quarterbacks Marc Wilson and Don Majkowski ineffective.

Raycom slates 11 SWC games

DALLAS (AP) — Eleven Southwest Conference football games are scheduled to be broadcast regionally this fall, SWC officials and Raycom revealed.

SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby said 10 of the syndicated broadcasts will air at noon (CDT) each Saturday, beginning Sept. 10 with the Baylor taking on Kansas in Lawrence, Kan. The 11th game has yet to be selected, he said.

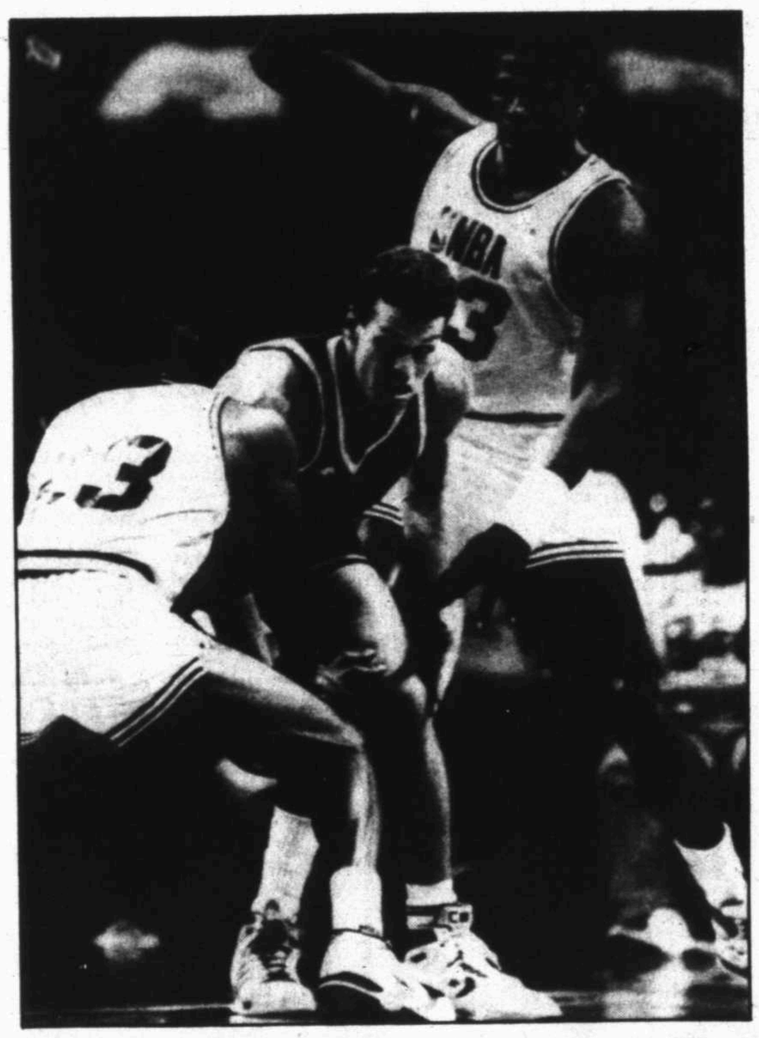

Baylor, which finished 6-5 last year, also goes against non-conference foe Iowa State on Sept. 17, and on Oct. 1 against Houston in Waco.

Texas Tech, with a corps of wide receivers selected as the nation's best in the pre-season Sporting News College Football Annual, makes its Raycom debut on Oct. 8 against Arkansas in Little Rock. Tech takes on Rice the next week, Oct. 15 at Rice Stadium.

On Oct. 22, Arkansas meets Houston on the Cougars' home turf, while Tech has its third TV game Oct. 29 against Texas when the two play in Lubbock.

Houston takes on Texas in Austin to kick off November games Nov. 5.

TCU plays on back-to-back weeks, Nov. 12 and 19, in a Fort Worth appearance against Texas and a College Station meeting with Texas A&M, respectively.

Olympians wipe out NBA stars

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Jeff Grayer scored 18 points Friday night to lead the U.S. Olympic team finalists to a 100-67 victory over a team of selected NBA players, their fourth win in as many games against the pros.

The 14-man Olympic team, which still has two players to be cut, will meet another NBA team in Auburn Hills, Mich. on Sunday. in Game 5 of the eight-game series.

The Olympic team took control of the game early, racing to a 49-33 halftime lead as Grayer, a graduate of Iowa State and a first-round draft choice of the Milwaukee Bucks, scored nine points in the opening 20 minutes.

The Olympians outscored the NBA team 23-8 in the opening six minutes of the second half to take a 72-41 lead with 13:47 to play.

Grayer scored the last seven points of that run, the final two on a dunk after a nice pass from Mitch Richmond.

Grayer was one of five Olympians in double figures. Richmond added 14 points, Willie Anderson had 13, Danny Manning had 12 and Hersey Hawkins added 10.

Chuck Person of the Indiana Pacers led the NBA team with 12, followed by Patrick Ewing of New York with 11 and Cleveland's Ron Harper with 10.

The closest the NBA team was able to get after the early second-half run was 72-50 with 11:18 left on a driving layup by Harper, the hometown favorite of the crowd of 12,504.

The Olympians increased the lead to 92-61 with 4:41 left when 6-foot Charles Smith of Georgetown scored on a driving layup over 7-0 Ewing, a fellow Hoya.

The final margin was the largest lead for the Olympians.

Olympic center David Robinson again was plagued by foul trouble. The 1987 college player of the year at Navy, who finished with six points, picked up three fouls in the opening 5:18 and did not play again the rest of the half. He picked up his fourth foul 29 seconds into the second half but was not called again.

Landry calls camp success

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — One day before the Dallas Cowboys were scheduled to break training camp and head to Texas, Coach Tom Landry declared the 1988 preseason camp a success but cautioned that injuries cast a shadow over the proceedings.

"I thought it was a very successful camp, from the viewpoint of players coming in with a good attitude, with good effort and with good conditioning," Landry said in his final training camp press conference Friday.

"We had one of our better camps. The injuries took away from some it, because we had so many injuries in one area, but I think overall, it was a very successful camp."

After looking at this year's team in camp, Landry said the Cowboys' strengths are at wide receiver and on the offensive line.

Seven healthy receivers remain among the 81 players on the roster, probably competing for five positions.

Eleven offensive linemen remain, vying for eight or nine spots.

Landry singled out second-year receiver Kelvin Martin, fourth-year defensive tackle Kevin Brooks and sixth-year defensive end Jim Jeffcoat as the most outstanding individuals at camp.

But he said his biggest disappointment was the wave of injuries that hit the linebackers.

Landry also told the writers that he plans to take a long look at his veterans against the Chicago Bears in an exhibition game Monday night at Dallas (7 p.m. CDT). Both teams will enter the game with 1-1 preseason records.

"They may play as much as a half," Landry said. "We'll still be looking at people, but less people. We are only suiting up about 68 (players) at this point, with all of our injuries, so you're not looking at too many players."

The Dallas offense has been extremely impressive during the pre-season. Aided by the unquestioned role of Herschel Walker at tailback and the development of Steve Pelluer as the No. 1 quarterback, the Cowboys scored 48 points in their two pre-season games, against the Chargers and the Raiders. The Cowboys scored only 36 points in four pre-season games last year.

Landry said playing against the Bears Monday night will serve as an excellent gauge to evaluate offensive progress.

The Bears will should help Dallas learn if its find out if its transition toward a more physical offensive style is succeeding.

"It's going to be a real test for us," Landry said. last couple of weeks, in the Chargers and the Raiders," Landry said. " What you've got in this team (the Bears), you've got so much more talent. These guys are tough anyway. But you're playing guys that move quick and fast, and have excellent escapes off of blocks. It's going to be a real test for us."

Other highlights from Landry's press conference:

— On Bill Bates and Vince Albritton: "Bill's had a good summer. He's working hard in there. I think all of our safeties are working hard. We're just sorry that Albritton is hurt (with a bruised thigh). We need Albritton to work. Do we try him at linebacker, or try to have him support us at that area? He's still out. He hasn't worked in some time. So I don't know when he'll be back."

— On Steve Pelluer: "I think Steve proved what we felt he would do, after the two games that he won last year at the end. I think he's confident that he can do the job. He doesn't seem to be flustered at all. When he makes a poor pass or make an error, it doesn't bother him much. He comes on back and plays well. So I think it's been a good camp for him."

Prime sports get Olympic TV time

Associated Press
By JOHN FREEMAN
Copley News Service

Every four years, we look forward to the Olympics, a time when we spend hour after hour watching sports we otherwise couldn't care a whit about.

When was the last time you actually watched a swimming or diving meet on TV? Or gymnastics? Or, to stretch the point, a team handball game or match or whatever it's called?

Somehow, the Olympics are different. And Michael Weisman, NBC's brash and savvy executive sports producer, knows it.

"The public isn't as familiar with a lot of Olympic sports as it should be, including the most attractive sports ... like swimming," Weisman told a group of TV writers recently at Universal City, Calif. "Even track and field. Track never gets (high TV) ratings, except during the Olympics."

But the Olympics includes a wide range of relatively minor sports — such as shooting, field hockey, water polo, equestrian events and archery, for example — that never receive coverage and probably won't see much airtime in the Olympics, either.

"We're sensitive to (those fans), but we only have 179½ hours and a lot of those so-called minor sports may not be seen in prime time in any great length," said Weisman. "We will have a chance to show the less popular sports during our morning and afternoon shows."

In contrast, volleyball, which only surfaces on ESPN as the pro beach variety, has emerged as a ready-for-prime-time sport and is Weisman's choice to be the surprise "hot sport" of the 1988 Seoul Games.

"It's a fast-moving sport, a team sport, a sport that most Americans are comfortable with," said Weisman.

In '84, most of ABC's coverage of volleyball came late at night, almost as an afterthought, even though the U.S. men's team won the gold and the women took the silver. Volleyball turned out to be one of the more popular sports of the L.A. Games — at least in person.

Same with soccer, which drew 100,000-plus crowds to the Rose Bowl for the finals. But ABC devoted only scant coverage to volleyball and soccer.

Soccer fans might assume that their favorite sport will draw increased coverage this time around. Not so, says Weisman.

"I'm sure soccer fans will be somewhat frustrated with our coverage," said Weisman. "I mean, even if we did five soccer games one after another, it wouldn't be enough for some soccer fans."

Instead, NBC's prime-time coverage will lean toward track and field, boxing, swimming, gymnastics and basketball — and volleyball.

You soccer and team handball fans out there, don't hold your breath.

Weisman, 38, has gained a reputation for doing the unusual. Remember the silent Super Bowl minute, the NFL game with no announcers and last year's debut of a female play-by-play announcer?

But he intends to restrain himself from the urge to glitz up his Olympic broadcasts. He will provide hundreds of prepackaged features and round-table groups of journalists for analysis, but he plans to avoid any self-indulgent technology that may detract from the Games themselves.

"There will be enough drama unfolding," he said. "You can't let NBC become the story of these Olympics."

Weisman's Olympic crew will include a staff of more than 1,000 — including some 500 engineers, 70 cameramen, 60 directors and 60 producers. NBC will bring 40 announcers, plus eight "hosts."

"We're keeping our fingers crossed," he said. "We'll all be tremendously relieved when the torch is lit." And after that torch is extinguished.

Of the thousands of problems that could arise between now and the close of the Games Oct. 2 — including acts of terrorism — Weisman cracked that he had only two main concerns:

"I just hope I don't lose my passport or lose my ticket home," he said.

Houston Oiler Mike Rozier makes yards against New England in exhibition game last Saturday before being brought down by Fred Marion. The Oilers are 2-0 and play the Rams tonight.

Oiler wins don't impress Glanville

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Houston Oilers are 2-0 in the exhibition season, but Coach Jerry Glanville isn't too excited about their record.

"You know, we went 4-0 my first year (1986) and I almost got fired," he recalled.

"In September, we're all going to be 0-0. If you win in the preseason, I think it helps you with your practices, people seeing that your schemes work and what you're trying to teach works. But if you end up 4-0, it means nothing.

"If you end up 0-4, it bothers you. It hurts your whole feeling about yourself as a team. I think they (exhibition games) are important only if you lose them all."

The Oilers play the Los Angeles Rams tonight at Anaheim Stadium in a 9 p.m. CDT preseason game.

The Rams assured themselves that they wouldn't go through the exhibition campaign winless when they beat the San Diego Chargers 27-6 last weekend, their first victory in three games.

The Oilers' defense has been a bright spot for them in their two victories, a 13-9 win over Buffalo and a 27-14 decision over New England.

Quarterback Warren Moon, who has played sparingly thus far, will probably see more action this week, Glanville said.

Moon has thrown just seven passes thus far, completing six in the Oilers' two outings.

"We'll play him more and see if we can keep our rhythm," Glanville said.

He said his staff has a checklist of certain things they want to see certain players do in an exhibition game, and Moon's playing time may depend on "how long it takes us to go through our checklist."

The Rams probably will be without starting tailback Charles White, who is suffering from bruised ribs. Coach John Robinson said he won't be certain until Saturday whether White will play or not.

Rookie Gaston Green, a first-round draft pick out of UCLA, will start and likely see extensive duty in White's spot.

A bright spot for the Rams during the preseason has been the apparent progress of their passing game. Third-year quarterback Jim Everett has completed 34 of 50 passes for 368 yads and three touchdowns, with two interceptions.

Everett has been suffering from the flu this week and missed some practice time, but is expected to be OK for the matchup with the Oilers.

Graf has sights on Grand Slam

MAHWAH, N.J. (AP) — The Grand Slam has become the grand obsession in tennis.

"It's hard to put out of my mind," said Steffi Graf, who can pull off the first major tournament sweep in 18 years with a victory in the U.S. Open.

"Everybody's thinking and talking about it, so it's hard to forget."

Graf, who is playing a warmup tournament here next week, held a news conference Friday to talk about the Grand Slam and her life as the world's No. 1 female player.

If she wins the U.S. Open, which begins Aug. 29 at the National Tennis Center in New York, Graf will become the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to sweep the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. championships in the same year.

Only three other players have accomplished the feat — Don Budge in 1938, Maureen Connolly in 1953 and Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969.

Martina Navratilova won the major four championships in a row, but the sweep didn't occur in the same calendar year and is therefore not recognized as a Slam by tennis traditionalists.

When Budge, Laver and Court won the Slam, the French was played on clay and the other three majors were grass

Low grid profile better than no profile for Earle Bruce, Dick Crum

By CHUCK SCHOFFNER
AP Sports Writer

Big-time college football meant big-time pressure for coaches Earle Bruce and Dick Crum. This season, the pressure is off and so is the spotlight.

Bruce has moved from perennial power Ohio State to Northern Iowa, a Division I-AA school that struggles for recognition in its own state. Crum has left sports-crazed North Carolina for Kent State, a school better known for its student protesters than its student athletes.

Both coaches received lucrative settlements from their previous employers, but they weren't ready to retire. They felt low profile was better than no profile.

"I could have gone to Florida and stayed for the rest of my life," said Bruce, who was fired by Ohio State last November despite an 81-26-1 record. "But I don't want to do that. I want to coach. I enjoy this game. I enjoy my job."

Crum, who left North Carolina under fire after coaching the Tar Heels to 72 victories in 10 years, also loves his work.

"I like being around those youngsters and coaching them," he said. "It never really entered my mind to just get out of coaching altogether.

Only a handful of Division I-A schools changed coaches this year, and most of the changes were related to Crum and Bruce.

Illinois, Tulsa and Southern Mississippi also have new coaches.

"Last year, if you really studied the job market in college football, it was almost nil — the worst in 25 years for opportunities as head coaches in I-A football," Bruce said. "There weren't any of them, whereas the year before there were plenty of openings."

Bruce and Crum have new jobs, but both are back in familiar territory.

Bruce coached at Iowa State — 75 miles southwest of the Northern Iowa campus — for six years before taking the Ohio State job in 1979. He also has been reunited with longtime friend Eldon Miller, who was hired by Northern Iowa shortly after being let go as Ohio State's basketball coach in 1986.

Crum grew up in Boardman, Ohio, which is about 35 miles east of Kent State. He also coached in the Ohio high school ranks and once was the head man at Miami of Ohio, which is in the same league as Kent State, the Mid-American Conference.

Although Bruce and Crum inherit teams that are expected to have good seasons, the pressure to win won't be as intense as it used to be.

Northern Iowa is favored to win the Gateway Conference championship for the second straight year after going 10-4 last season and reaching the semifinals of the Division I-AA playoffs. Former Coach Darrell Mudra, who retired last spring, left Bruce with 15 starters and 32 lettermen.

"I've learned not to go someplace where the cupboard is bare," Bruce said. "I would not have taken this job if someone had said, 'You can't go there. There aren't many football players.'"

Kent State, which has averaged only 2.5 league victories per season in 37 years in the Mid-American Conference, is favored by many to win the league this fall. The Golden Flashes were 7-4 last year and return tailback Eric Wilkerson, who led the nation in all-purpose yardage a year ago.

Winning the MAC might not be the same as beating out Clemson to win the Atlantic Coast Conference title, but Crum doesn't mind.

"It doesn't matter where you coach," he said. "Certainly you want to be where you can earn a living, but I coached 12 years in high school and was an assistant for five years in college."

Cooper steps into the hot seat at Ohio State after going 25-9-2 and winning a Rose Bowl at Arizona State. He knew college football was king in Ohio before he took the job, but he's learning that it's even bigger than he thought it was.

"I knew it was big in Columbus," he said, "but in some of the isolated areas of the state where I've been, it's almost life and death."

Bruce knows the feeling well.

"If he wins, he'll be God," he said of Cooper. "If he loses, holy hell for him."

Larry Marmie, who had been been Arizona State's defensive coordinator, was promoted to head coach shortly after Cooper accepted the Ohio State job on New Year's Eve.

Greg Davis, who had been an assistant, succeeded Brown at Tulane.

Former M-Cub goes to Chisox

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates obtained outfielder Gary Redus from the Chicago White Sox on Friday for outfielder-first baseman Mike Diaz, a former Midland Cub.

Redus, 31, was batting .263 with six home runs and 34 RBI in 77 games with Chicago this season. He had 26 stolen bases and two grand slams.

Diaz, 28, was batting .230 with no home runs and 5 RBI in 47 games with the Pirates.

Redus began his major league career in 1982 with Cincinnati and stayed with the Reds until going to the Philadelphia Phillies in 1986. He was acquired by the White Sox in March 1987.

Diaz had been with Pittsburgh since the start of the 1986 season. His only other major league experience was playing in six games with the Chicago Cubs in 1983.

Diaz was used primarily as a pinch hitter this season after tearing ligaments in his left thumb March 1 in a spring training intrasquad game.

He underwent surgery March 23 and was placed on the disabled list until May 7. He started games this season in left field, right field, at first base and as catcher.

Diaz's home run ratio of one every 15.1 at-bats last season was eighth-best in the National League.

The trade was the second between the two teams in less than a week. The Pirates obtained starter Dave LaPoint from the White Sox on Saturday for right-handed reliever Barry Jones.

Richardson back from dead end

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Micheal Ray Richardson, who was banned from playing in the NBA for using cocaine, said Friday he was happy to have overcome his drug problem "and to have avoided the same end as Len Bias."

Richardson, 33, arrived in Italy this week to play for Bologna's Virtus Knorr in the Italian major league.

Bias, a University of Maryland star who was a first-round draft pick of the Boston Celtics, died in 1986 from drugs.

Richardson, a guard who last played for the New Jersey Nets, was banned from the NBA in 1986 after testing positive for cocaine. Last month, the NBA restored his right to play in the United States or in Europe.

"The day I was kicked out of the NBA was the worst in my life. The most beautiful was the day my right to play was restored," Richardson told a news conference.

The first player banned under the NBA antidrug program, Richardson explained the ban "was a difficult period, because I was unable to do something which was fundamental in my life."

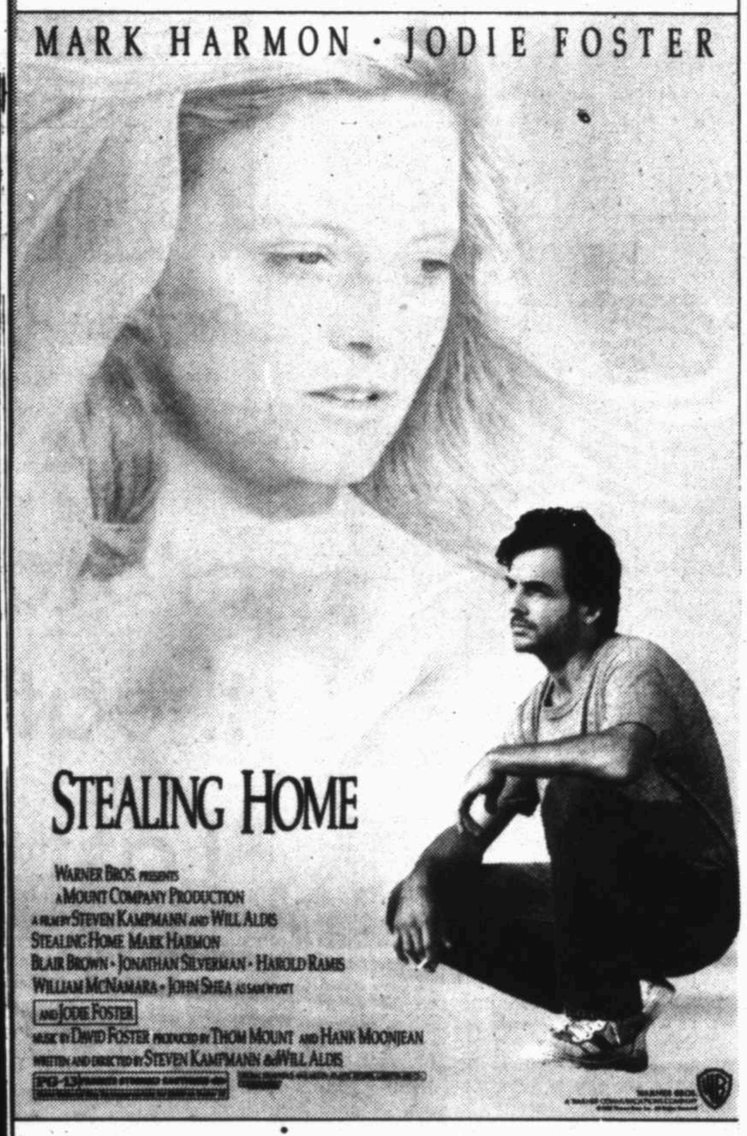

"It was difficult to escape from the drug. ... Now things are going very well, I feel good and I have no doubts about my qualities as a player."

"To those people who are living the situation I have experienced, I can tell them there is always a way out, no matter how big the problem."

Richardson, who signed a two-year contract with the Bologna team, said he rejected recent bids by some NBA clubs.

IT'S 3A.M. DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR TV SPOT IS?

Face it.
Unless you're prepared to invest big bucks, television stations often relegate your commercial to the twilight zone of programming-that unique time slot between the 10 o'clock news and The Star Spangled Banner.

Fortunately there's a solution-newspaper advertising. Just one ad in The Midland Reporter-Telegram will reach 72% of all adults in Midland.

And take the affordable approach to advertising.

McWilliams places Texas Longhorns on rise again

AUSTIN (AP) — David McWilliams used to play and coach for Darrell Royal, and Texas Longhorn fans are betting that Royal's winning ways will rub off on his protege in his second year as head coach.

Royal was coach at Texas for 20 years, beginning in 1957, and won Texas' only national football championships in 1963 and 1969. A loss to Notre Dame in the 1971 Cotton Bowl broke a 30-game winning streak and cost the Longhorns yet another national title.

McWilliams was a 195-pound linebacker-center on the 1963 team, and has spent most of his adult life at the University of Texas, where he was an assistant from 1970 through 1985.

After one year as head coach at Texas Tech, McWilliams, 46, came back to Austin replace Fred Akers, whose 10 years without a national football championship ended in 1986 when Texas finished 5-6 for its first losing season in 30 years.

Akers' record of 86-31-2 was second only to Royal, but most Longhorn followers feel he was star-crossed.

Bowl game losses in 1978 to Notre Dame and 1984 to Georgia snatched almost certain national titles from Akers' grasp, and there was a sense that no matter what he did, it wasn't good enough, especially for those whose allegiance remained with Royal.

One insider who requested anonymity says McWilliams and Royal have almost a son-father relationship, and he recalled how spirits soared at a party following the announcement that McWilliams had been hired - "it was as if everybody was back together again."

McWilliams' first Texas team last season defeated Piitsburgh 32-27 in the Bluebonnet Bowl to close out at 7-5.

McWilliams himself believes that last year "put us a little ahead of where I thought we might be at this time."

This year ticket sales are good, and the schedule looks favorable. Non-Southwest Conference opponents include Brigham Young, New Mexico and North Texas. Preseason SWC favorite Texas A&M, as well as Arkansas, must play Texas on the Longhorns' home field.

"I really feel good about coming back into '88 because we are returning so many starters out of the offense, defense and kicking game," McWilliams said.

The 1988 Texas squad includes a Heisman hopeful, tailback Eric Metcalf, the son of former pro football star Terry Metcalf; all-SWC middle linebacker Britt Hager; 300-pound defensive tackle Ken Hackemack; punter Alex Waits, who once boomed a kick 84 yards in the air; and a safety named Tex Mercer.

Royal, at McWilliams' request, helps with recruiting, as does former Congresswoman Barbara Jordan and 1977 Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell, now a member of the university's staff.

This year Texas signed 19 prospects, 13 of whom were rated by one national recruiting service as "super."

Perhaps even more significant, two highly touted players — linebacker Brian Jones of UCLA and running back Lincoln Coleman of Notre Dame — are transferring to Texas, indicating that the football program is healthy.

Sports Information Director Bill Little said, "I think that the health of your program will be determined by the attitude of your players, because they are the ones, in the last analysis, who are going to recruit.

"When you get a kid to campus, the other players have got to convince him that it's worth his time to come to this school. I saw a great togetherness in our team — particularly after the Bluebonnet Bowl — in recruiting. Those kids wanted to convince the best high school players to come here with them."

McWilliams, who graduated with honors in math in 1964, stresses academics to his players, and apparently has great rapport with them.

"If Coach Mac had been the coach all along, Texas would not be in the position of a rebuilding period," senior quarterback Shannon Kelley said. "He is the kind of coach you love to play for because he makes you feel like you can win all the time, and he makes playing fun."

The Longhorns, it appears, are on the rise again.

McCarron, Forty Niner eye rich Travers Stakes

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — Woody Stephens, a trainer who has won just about everything thoroughbred racing has to offer, shoots for his first Travers Stakes victory today at Saratoga Race Course.

Stephens will send out Forty Niner against five other 3-year-olds in the 119th running of the 1¼ mile Travers. If all six start, the Travers will have a purse of $1,088,500, with $653,100 going to the winner.

Challenging Claiborne Farm's Forty Niner and jockey Chris McCarron will be early favorite Brian's Time and Angel Cordero Jr., Evening Kris and Jerry Bailey, Kingpost and Jacinto Vasquez, Seeking the Gold and Patick Day, and Dynaformer, with no rider named yet.

All entries will carry 126 pounds.

For Stephens, who has been coming to Saratoga for 60 years, a win in the Travers would be another feather in an already crowded cap. He has won more than 200 stakes races, including two Kentucky Derbys and five straight Belmont Stakes from 1982-86.

"It doesn't bother me any more," said Stephens, who turns 75 on Sept. 1. "They're all nice to win. I just hope my horse has a nice smooth trip, that's all I can ask. I think he'll be awful hard to beat."

Three of Stephens' horses have finished second in the Travers: Traffic Judge in 1955, Smarten in 1979 and Danzig Connection in 1986.

McCarron, who rode Danzig Connection to a win in the Belmont two years ago, was brought in from California to ride Forty Niner after Lafit Pincay was injured during a race.

"McCarron's a very smooth rider and that's what I wanted for this horse," the Hall of Fame trainer said.

Brian's Time, owned by James W. Phillips and trained by John Veitch, will have the services of Saratoga's hottest jockey. Cordero, 45, leads the meet with 25 wins, including six in stakes races.

Coming off a victory in the Jim Dandy, Brian's Time joins tough company in Forty Niner and Seeking The Gold.

"My only instructions going in to the (Jim Dandy) was to keep him clear and when he makes his run, be in a position where he's not going to be stopped.

Pryor motions return to ring

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Aaron Pryor, former junior welterweight boxing champion who has tried two unsuccessful comebacks since leaving the ring in 1983, plans to fight again next month.

Pryor, 32, who lived on the streets in Miami, snorted cocaine for two years and served a brief stint in jail after leaving boxing with a 34-0 record, has been in Rochester training since July.

He's scheduled to fight Paddy McWilliams of Toronto on Sept. 23 at Rochester's War Memorial Auditorium, said promoter Jim Cassidy.

"People are interested in seeing Aaron, how he's doing, what's he got left," Cassidy said. "He's pushing his effort up now in order to appear on this card."

The fight will be on the undercard of the Simon Brown vs. Bobby Joe Young fight for the International Boxing Federation welterweight title. Young is the only fighter who has beaten Pryor.

He did that in April 1987 in Miami when he stopped Pryor in the seventh round.

Brown, 25, a native of Jamaica who now lives in Washington, D.C., will be defending the title he won last April when he knocked out Tyrone Trice in the 12th round of a fight in Breck, France.

Brown, who has a record of 26-1 with 20 knockouts, has been compared to Sugar Ray Leonard — even by Leonard himself.

The fight, arranged by matchmaker Don Elbaum of New York, was scheduled for either Atlantic City, N.J., or Steubenville, Ohio, Young's hometown, Cassidy said.

However, when Pryor expressed an interest in appearing on the undercard, Pryor's longtime matchmaker, Elbaum, agreed to move the fight to Rochester.

Pryor had planned to return to the ring in October but decided to move that date up. He came to Rochester to work with veteran trainer Frankie Verna.

The boxer first tried to come back in 1985 and won two bouts, but didn't continue. He tried again in April last year when he lost to Young. His record stands at 36-1.

Pryor is best remembered for the pounding he gave Alexis Arguello in a 1982 title defense.

Bisons set turnstile record

Buffalo team sells more than million tickets

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Bob Rich Jr., whose family fortune has been estimated as much as $450 million, has put his money on the Bisons before and been a winner. Now, he's gambling the big payoff will come in the form of a major league baseball team.

The Bisons passed the all-time minor league baseball attendance record Friday night against the Omaha Owls, and Rich gets a little upset when he hears his team will have a tough time drawing these big numbers again.

"I'm going to challenge them to put some money up on it," Rich said.

WITH FIVE more home dates left, a sell-out crowd of 19,500 was at new Pilot Field for the game, giving the Bisons a total of 1,061,319 tickets sold. The Louisville Redbirds set the old mark with 1,052,438 in 1983.

A game paired with a Beach Boys concert Saturday sold out months ago and the team announced there were only 200 seats left for Sunday's game.

Clearly, the Bisons and Pilot Field, a $42 million downtown baseball stadium that some writers have said combines the beauty of Ebbets Field with the creature comforts of Kansas City's Royals Stadium, have been as hot as the unusually steamy summer weather here.

"It's got the attention of every baseball fan in the country," said Randy Mobley, administrator of the Bisons' league, the Class AAA American Association.

But undercurrents of pessimism persist. There are those who say it will be difficult to do it again once the novelty of the ballpark fades. Some wonder if the ticket count is inflated. Or say the push toward the record has been a little heavy-handed.

Rich is surprised at the criticism. "To me, this is an incredible feat on behalf of the city," he said. "It speaks for itself."

The Bisons have based their attendance figures on tickets sold, which is the guideline used by the American Association, according to Mobley.

But the team has not released a turnstyle count, saying it has not been kept.

When the Redbirds set the record, the attendance yardstick they used was turnstyle count plus any unused season tickets, according to Louisville General Manager Dale Owen, who said there really isn't much difference.

"I don't care what you call it," said Owen. "It might be comparing apples to oranges, but you're talking about the same thing in the end."

He added, "I was in Buffalo for a Monday night game (a traditional low attendance day in baseball) and they reported a crowd of 17,000 people and there were at least 15,000 in the stands."

What has surprised some baseball people, Owen said, is that the Bisons are counting two sellout crowds from the Class AAA All-Star game and the National Old-Timers Classic and that the team has had two split-admission doubleheaders.

In the year Louisville set the record, Owen said seven playoff games and seven games in the defunct Little World Series weren't counted.

Rich said he was directed by the league to include the two exhibition games, and added with the team on a course to sell almost 1.2 million tickets, "That's probably irrelevant."

As for the split doubleheaders scheduled because of rainouts, Rich said, "We've had so many sellouts (17) or close to sellouts that a cancellation automatically rules out from 17,000 to 19,000 people from seeing that game."

In Louisville, with a stadium that seats more than 30,000 people, "They never turned away one person," Rich said.

COMBINED WITH an aggressive, end-of-season advertising campaign with the theme of "Let's Bust It," the push to flood the ballpark has stricken some as a case of overkill.

"We made our (advertising) buys several weeks ago and now it's so much after the fact," Rich said. "We backed off on a couple of things we were going to do."

The year after they set the record, the Redbirds' attendance dropped to a little more than 800,000 and since then has stablized in the 600,000 range.

"If they do it (one million attendance) two years in a row, a big league team should relocate to Buffalo in 1990," said Owen. "If they can do that for the minor leagues, what could they do with an 80-game major league schedule?"

There are key differences between Louisville and Buffalo, Rich said: Louisville has a smaller metropolitan area from which to draw, the Cincinnati Reds play 100 miles away, and the city has no major league background. Buffalo has the NFL Bills and the NHL Sabres.

Manatees are likable creatures

The manatee, a placid elephantlike mammal that can reach a length of 14 feet and weigh more than a ton, inspires affection because of its "human" face and seeming lack of fear around people.

NORTHWESTERN BAPTIST CHURCH

Great Expectations

Too many Christians expect a million-dollar answer to a ten-cent prayer.

"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek and you shall find; knock, and it shall be opened to you. For everyone who asks receives, and he who seeks finds, and to him who knocks it shall be opened." Mathew 7:7-8 (NAS)

The Voice Of God...

Sunday Deuteronomy 18:14-22
Monday Exodus 15:1-18
Tuesday Deuteronomy 32:1-43
Wednesday Judges 5:1-31
Thursday 2 Samuel 22:1-25
Friday 2 Samuel 22:26-51
Saturday 1 Chronicles 16:8-36

Do you ever pause to listen to the voice of God? We hear it every day, wherever we may be.

In the whispering of tall trees . . . the music of rushing brooks . . . the songs of birds. . . the gay laughter of happy children. . . we hear the voice of the Creator. Through his infinite grace a bird is enabled to serenade his mate, a tiny cricket chirps its faint refrain. God is the bringer of all blessings to man and beast alike.

Let us give thanks to Him who has so enriched our lives. Open church doors beckon all over our land. Let us seek the House of the Lord, and enter in to pay Him homage. Here through prayer and with humility, let us re-dedicate ourselves to His service and glorification.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Christian rock band to perform Sept. 19

Petra, a well known Christian rock band, will be appearing at the Chaparral Center Sept. 19 as part of their "This Means War Tour."

"Petra is encouraging youth to take a stand against the problems, such as drugs and suicide, that are destroying America's youth," says a release from Street Level Ministries, sponsor of the concert. "Their concerts are a celebration — youths are encouraged to live good, wholesome lives and to put God first."

Petra has appeared in the past at the June Jam with Alabama and The Beach Boys.

Petra's lead singer is John Schlitt, who was lead singer for the rock group "Head East" from 1973 to 1980.

"Schlitt left the group with a terrible drug addiction and contemplated suicide," the release says. "He had a life changing experience when he asked Jesus Christ into his life."

Schlitt joined Petra in 1986 for their "Back to the Street" album.

Geoff Moore will be appearing with Petra. Moore is an artist recording for Sparrow Records and recently recorded Larry Norman's classic song, "Why Should The Devil Have All The Good Music."

Tickets are available at Scripture Shop in Odessa, Lighthouse in Midland, Sonshine Bookstore in Big Spring, Mary & Martha's in San Angelo, Loveliness in Hobbs, N.M., and from most area youth pastors, as well as Chaparral Center. For further information call 1-362-8195.

YSE seminar to begin

Midland-Odessa Youth Spiritual Enlightment Summer Session will be held Thursday through Aug. 28.

"YSE began in the summer of 1985 as a vision and God has made it a reality — a body of non-denominational believers working with teens ages 12 through 17," says a release from YSE.

YSE youth will be having a car wash today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Shamrock, corner of Lamesa Road and Cowden St. This event is to help defer expenses for the summer session, which teens can attend at no cost to them.

This year's event includes seminar classes on Thursday and Friday at Mt. Calvary Missionary Baptist Church, 303 E. Shandon St.; athletic competition Aug. 27 during the picnic; outreach activities and a Close-Out Explosion at Mt. Rose Baptist Church, 211 N. Tyler St, at 3 p.m. Aug. 28.

YSE will have classes for teen mothers and expected mothers ages 12 through 19 focused on "Survival, After the Baby Comes, Restoration and Pregnancy."

Greg Reid of El Paso will be holding a special session on the occult on Thursday and Friday evenings and adults are invited to attend.

Youth workers, teens and parents seeking more information are asked to call Wanda McGrew, 682-0041, or Rose Christian, 1-337-3668.

Spiritual Explosion ends

The Faith Temple Church, 1605 N. Terrell at Jax, the Rev. W.C. Kenan, pastor, is completing its week-long 14th Annual Spiritual Explosion Sunday.

The Explosion will be highlighted by a founder's banquet at 5 p.m. today at the Ranchland Hills Country Club.

The Rev. S. Allen of Fort Worth will preach at the closing service at 3 p.m. Sunday and the Shiloh Institutional of God In Christ Choir will be singing.

Guest speakers have included the Rev. Frank Smith of Dallas; Bishop W. H. Watson of Lubbock, the Jurisdictional Bishop of Texas Northwest Church of God In Christ; Evangelist Earl Carter of San Jose, Calif.; and Bishop A. LaDell Thomas of Waco, the Bishop of Texas South Second Jurisdiction.

The Explosion Mass Choir have performed nightly. Each night the Rev. Alvin Pope of Fort Worth has conducted the praise and inspirational service. The Rev. Lemuel Thuston of Lubbock conducted the Tuesday through Friday seminar.

The public is invited to attend all services.

'Book of Mormon' studied

August has been a special month for local members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as they share their testimonies with each other and their friends about the "Book of Mormon."

Since 1830, Latter-day Saints have been proclaiming that the "Book of Mormon," like the Bible, is the word of God as revealed to his prophets, but that the "Book of Mormon" prophets lived anciently on the American continents.

To help their friends and neighbors better understand the "Book of Mormon," local members of the church are sharing copies of the book and are inviting the community to attend the viewing of "How Rare a Possession," a special one-hour video presentation on the "Book of Mormon" to be held at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Gateway Chapel, 4805 Gateway Street, Midland.

Anyone desiring a copy of the "Book of Mormon" may write to LDS, 2511 Shell, Midland TX 79705.

Rev. Degrate to speak

The Rev. L.H. Degrate will be the guest speaker at the Bethel Missionary Baptist Church, 410 S. Calhoun St., at 3 p.m. Sunday.

While in the state of New Mexico, Degrate served as district evangelist for the Mt. Zion Baptist Association and also as state missionary for the General Baptist Convention of New Mexico. He is now pastor of the South Union Baptist Church, McCamey.

He is chairman of the Education Board of the West Texas Baptist District Association and vice president of the Sunday School Congress of Christian Education of the West Texas Baptist District Association.

Degrate works to help students with scholarship awards, conducts youth workshops and is an evangelist in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Oklahoma and California. He also conducts fund raising drives to send youth messengers to district, state and national conventions.

Church hosts musical

Macedonia Baptist Church, 201 S. Carver St., is hosting a musical featuring the Workshop Choir at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Mae Pearl Jackson of Lubbock has been leading the church's annual workshop, which began Friday. Ms. Jackson is the minister of music for both the Community Baptist Church of Lubbock and the Lovely Sunset District Association and Congress.

Rev. O. J. Archie, pastor of the Macedonia Baptist Church invites the public to come and participate.

The Workshop theme has been "Congregational Singing."

Joining the Workshop Choir will be choirs from both the Community Baptist Church of Lubbock and the Greater St. Luke Baptist Church of Odessa.

Sexuality class slated

A human sexuality study for high school youth from a Christian perspective is being presented by CLER Ministries, a local non-profit ministry, under the sponsorship of the Midland Association of Churches.

This 15-session Christian-based human sexuality course will be offered in local churches beginning the week of Sept. 11 and ending the week of Nov. 13. The classes, which are being offered to 9th graders, consist of 20 students per class and each class meets from 7 to 9 p.m.

Cost is $50 per student. The Midland Association of Churches has money available for those students who need assistance.

Enrollment is in progress. For more information call Linda Goddard, 697-5078.

Ms. Goddard, founder and president of this Midland-based ministry, has worked for the past six years with churches in Midland and surrounding areas. During that time, she has brought her Christian-based human sexuality education programs to more than 700 adults and youth.

Abortion to be discussed

Carol Everett, public affairs director for the Texas Coalition for Life, will speak on abortion at 7 p.m. Thursday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

She has appeared on "Focus on the Family" with Dr. James Dobson, "Point of View" with Marlin Maddoux and The 700 Club.

"Mrs. Everett has a unique perspective on the abortion issue," says a release from West Texans for Life.

"From 1977 to 1983, she owned two abortion clinics in Dallas where more than 35,000 babies were killed. Mrs. Everett assisted in numerous abortions, including those done in late pregnancy — 2nd and 3rd trimester. Additionally, she herself has had an abortion, experiencing the physical and psychological suffering of post-abortion syndrone."

The public is invited to attend.

Calvary hosts revival

Calvary Assembly of God Church, 908 S. Johnston St., is hosting a revival Wednesday through Aug. 28.

Special speakers are the Rev. Danny Williams, pastor of Lighthouse Assembly of God, Snyder, Wednesday and Thursday; the Rev. Phil Sanders, pastor of Hiway Temple Assembly of God, Odessa, Friday and Aug. 27; and the Rev. John Murdoch, district youth director, Lubbock, Aug. 28.

Service times are 7:30 p.m. Wednesday through Aug. 27 and 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Aug. 28.

Refreshments and fellowship will follow each service. The church's pastor, the Rev. Gayle Reeves, invites the public to attend.

St. John's to have fair

St. John's Catholic Church, 1008 W. New Jersey Ave., will have its annual Family Fair Sept. 3 and 4.

Food booths will serve meals of all kinds. Arts and crafts, white elephant sales, and games for people of all ages will be open during the two days.

A $1 ticket will give participants a chance to win $2,000 as first prize, a trip for two to Las Vegas as second prize, or $500 as the third prize.

Live entertainment and the coronation of a church queen will be the highlights of this year's family fair. Eight girls from the parish are vying to be crowned as queen. They are Tonya Marruffo, Ester Tavarez, Lori Perales, Sorena Lujan, Irma Villa, Sandy Marquez, Jessica Gomez, and Pristy Fino.

Seminary classes to begin

Registration is today for The West Texas Baptist Institute Seminary, which begins classes for the fall semester Tuesday at Tall City Baptist Church, 3500 Anetta Drive.

The Institute is a four-year school made available to all ministerial students, as well as Bible students who are interested in furthering their education in Christian education.

This is the second year of classes. There were 11 full-time and 17 part-time students attending last year.

For more information or to register for classes, contact Tall City Baptist Church today, 694-7515.

Today's issues discussed

Some of today's most prevalent and major societal issues are the focus of a 10-week series being presented by Donnie Brackens, pastor of the Shekinah Glory Church of Midland.

The series, which is being conducted each Sunday at 11 a.m., is highlighting specific issues such as family problems, drug abuse, suicide and economic conditions.

The public is invited to attend. Shekinah Glory Church is located downtown at 207 N. Main St. For more information call the church, 682-8400.

Covenant series begins

Paula Ramsey is teaching a six-week study on the "Character and Covenant of God" for the Working Woman's Bible Study at ClayDesta.

Those interested in attending are invited to do so.

The meeting is held at 11:30 a.m. and noon in the Twin Towers West, Room No. LL100.

WWB also meets Wednesdays at 304 E. Illinois Ave. Linda Chaffin teaches at 11:30 a.m. and noon.

Revelations class free

Ebenezer Seventh Day Adventist Church is presenting a 24-lesson course on the Book of Revelations from 7-8 p.m., Sunday, Tuesday, Thursday, from through Sept. 8.

Classes will be held at the YMCA, 1600 E. Wall. All materials will be provided including a Bible.

The class is free and everyone is invited to attend. A diploma will be issued on completion of the course. For more information call 697-0016 or 694-1135.

Revival begins today

Revival services are being held at El Calvario United Methodist Church, Garden Lane and Tyler, 7 p.m. today and from 11:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Sunday.

The Rev. Jesse Gomez, a native of Midland now pastoring in Wichita Falls, will preach at the services, and there will be simultaneous services for children during the sermons.

Special music will be provided by a newly formed Midland group. The public is invited to attend.

Power to have classes

The Rev. Dr. William Power, professor of Old Testament at Perkins Theological Seminary in Dallas will be lecturing at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity 10 a.m. to noon Aug. 27.

His topic will be the Psalms. At 10 a.m. Aug. 28 he will be speaking during church services and afterward at the Adult Education Hour. His subject will be the Book of Joshua.

The public is invited to attend.

Church celebrates 90th

STANTON — The First Baptist Church of Stanton, 200 W. Broadway, will observe its 90th anniversary Sunday.

All former members and previous staff members are asked to share in this celebration. For more information call 1-756-2831.

The church's pastor is the Rev. Dennis R. Tofano.

Sign classes planned

Golf Course Road Church of Christ's deaf ministry will sponsor classes for persons who want to learn sign language for the deaf and become informed on the world of the deaf.

Classes begin Sept. 11. For more information call Darrell Rhea, 694-4528 or 688-4110.

King to present book

ODESSA — Unity of West Texas is presenting Sue King, licensed Unity teacher, in a series of talks based on the book "From a Chicken to an Eagle" by Jerry Fankhauser.

The talks continue through August and are being presented at 9:30 a.m. at 810 Dixie, Suite 203.

Marriage sermon set

The Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road, is hosting a marriage presentation "The Bridegroom Cometh" at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The host pastor, the Rev. D.F. Johnson, invites the public to attend. A reception follows.

Church to honor Vestal

A reception honoring the Rev. Dr. Daniel Vestal and his family will be held from 2:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday in the Fellowship Hall of the First Baptist Church of Midland, Louisiana at Garfield.

Vestal has been called to Atlanta to serve as pastor of Dunwoody Baptist Church.

New York Times News Service

KENNEBUNKPORT, Me. — The Franciscan Monastery in Kennebunkport, Me., are relying once again on St. Anthony, the saint of lost articles.

The 10 priests and 10 seminarians at the Roman Catholic monastery are praying for the safe return of a glass and bronze case containing some of St. Anthony's remains, which were stolen from the base of a statue of the saint in the monastery chapel July 30.

The friars said that if the case is found, it will be yet another in a long list of missing items the monastery has recovered after prayers to the saint.

The case was stolen once before, about 10 years ago. The police found it in the closet of a local youth a month after it was taken. A tapestry of St. Anthony, valued at $3,000, was stolen off the chapel wall and returned anonymously through the mail, postmarked Boston.

The Rev. George Gailiusis, the superior at the monastery, said that many people lose belongings, pray to St. Anthony and then get them back.

"Ourselves," he said, "we've recovered many things."

The friars receive hundreds of requests each year from people all over the country, asking them to pray to St. Anthony for help with difficulties and sickness, but most often for help in finding lost items, Gailiusis said.

Twice each Tuesday, the friars offer devotions to St. Anthony, who lived in the 13th century.

Gailiusis, 70, says he isn't sure why someone would want to steal the case, which is worth about $200 but holds great religious significance.

"Somebody could be drunk," he said. "Somebody hated his faith or somebody was sick and fanatically wanted to have it in his room to pray for help. But I am only guessing."

Midlanders Jack and Judy Stone plant a tree in the "Permian Basin Grove" at American Independence Park, near Jerusalem.

Basin grove dedicated

From Staff Reports

A Midland couple recently returned from Israel, where they attended a tree-planting and dedication.

Jack and Judy Stone helped plant trees in "The Permian Basin, Midland, Texas, Grove" of a forest in American Independence Park, near Jerusalem. The July 21 ceremony included a special prayer and the unveiling of a dedicatory plaque by the Jewish National Fund.

Residents of Midland and the Permian Basin contributed to the forestation project during "Night to Honor Israel" celebrations in May 1987 and May 1988. Both events were held at the Holiday Inn Convention Center in Midland.

"We were taken on a tour of several of JNF's projects near Jerusalem and were singularly impressed with the contrast of dark green forests full of tall beautiful trees with the barren and dry hillsides which had not been planted," Stone said. "...We felt that supporting the Jewish National Fund is certainly an excellent way for Jews and Christians to express their love for Israel."

"Planting trees in Israel is a wonderful way to celebrate a birthday or the memory of a loved one," Mrs. Stone added. Each tree costs $5 and gifts should be earmarked for the Permian Basin grove. For further information, call 697-3445 or 694-3090.

Bishop calls for study of female ordination

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Baltimore's Auxiliary Roman Catholic Bishop P. Francis Murphy says the Vatican should establish an international commission to investigate the issue of women's ordination to the priesthood.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21, 1988

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Handle agreements carefully, and the sky is the limit where your career is concerned! The labors of the next few months will pave the road to success for years to come. It is time to develop a new strategy and stick to it. Financial planning will give you greater freedom of choice later on. Think like an architect when making plans; do everything one brick at a time.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: Britain's Princess Margaret, illustrator Aubrey Beardsley, music great Count Basie, basketball star Wilt Chamberlain, singer Jackie DeShannon, country music star Kenny Rogers, sportscaster Chris Schenkel, India's Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Let your hair down and enjoy yorself today. Inspiration comes from an unexpected source. A family gathering will revive some happy memories. Romance becomes more meaningful. Be tender. Speak from the heart.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Try to get away today, either by yourself or with someone very special. Private time is more important now than ever. Your positive attitude rubs off on others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you feel left out today, you may have been too wrapped up in your own thoughts lately to know what has been going on. You have mixed feelings about a relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): For your own good, be consistent. Seek out someone you admire who is a real inspiration to you. Sort out fact from fiction in your personal life. A sad story may be phony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be more assertive in your relationships. Keep trying to convince partner how you really feel. Travel will bring new adventures, which suits you just fine. Invite new friends to meet your family.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Avoid talking shop at social gatherings. A long journey is best postponed. Strive to develop a closer relationship with mate. Listening to music can be therapeutic. Romance beckons.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Positive thinking will help you overcome any obstacles in your path. Romance will find you if you socialize more. The newspaper yields promising employment leads. Follow up early tomorrow morning.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rejoice when you receive payment on a debt you never expected to collect. You will be the center of attention at a family gathering. Romance is both exciting and fulfilling. Be considerate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Look inward. You perceive something that many people have failed to recognize. Someone may pressure you to keep a promise you made in a weak moment. Admit you made a mistake and stand tall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Set new priorities while keeping your family and career foremost in mind. Special skills can be learned at home. Read books by experts. Romance is fine. Do nothing to rock the boat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be prepared to change your schedule to accommodate other people's needs. Replace bad habits with good ones. When snacking, keep nutrition in mind. A telephone call brings welcome family news.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel, social contacts and glamorous events are in the spotlight. Enjoy seeing an old college friend. He/she could have new business alliances in mind.

Mr. Sears and Mr. Roebuck got together because of a classified ad!

In the late 1800's, Richard W. Sears had a pretty good business going selling watches and needed someone to handle his watch repairs. He placed a classified ad in the newspaper and Alvah C. Roebuck got the job. That's how the nation's biggest retailer got started... through a classified ad!

John Denver requests ride aboard Soviet space station

Denver

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Singer John Denver, who has sought unsuccessfully to be a passenger on the U.S. space shuttle, has asked the Soviet Union for a ride aboard its Mir space station, an industry magazine reported Friday.

Aviation Week & Space Technology said Denver had requested transportation to Mir aboard one of the Soyuz spaceships that regularly carry crews to and from the orbiting station.

"The Soviets," the magazine said, "responded with two conditions. They told Denver they would charge him $10 million for the ride and that he had to get permission from the U.S. government.

"The State Department took its customary cautious approach, advising Denver it was taking 'no position' on the matter — effectively putting it back into the hands of the Soviets," Aviation Week said.

The magazine quoted an unidentified American official as saying, "We very carefully did not endorse his going, but at the same time we can't prevent U.S. citizens from going to exotic places."

Denver has been a guest of NASA at several space shuttle launches and has asked several times over the years for a shuttle ride, saying he wanted to compose in orbit a song about space.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Singer George Jones was hospitalized for the fifth time in 13 months and was being treated for a severe sinus infection, a hospital spokesman said Friday.

Jones, 56, known for country standards such as "He Stopped Loving Her Today" and "The Race is On," arrived at University Hospital on Sunday and was listed in satisfactory condition Friday, said spokesman Hank Black.

"He said his head was hurting and his ears were ringing," said Black. "He told his wife he couldn't go on and had better go back to the hospital."

Jones, who has battled drug and alcohol problems, was receiving intravenous antibiotics to combat the "longstanding" sinus infection and likely will be hospitalized a few more days, Black said.

His string of trips to University Hospital started in July 1987 when he was admitted with a stomach ailment. In October he was hospitalized with severe nausea, and two months later he was treated for an unspecified problem, said Black. In May, Jones was hospitalized for several days for double pneumonia, said the spokesman.

Jones formerly lived in the north Alabama town of Tuscumbia but now lives in Texas.

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. John Kerry and his wife, Julia, have been granted a divorce under Massachusetts' no-fault divorce law, an aide confirmed Friday.

Final papers ending the 18-year marriage were filed late Thursday, said Adam Chase, spokesman for the Democrat's Boston office.

Kerry, 44, had lived apart from his wife since his 1984 U.S. Senate campaign. The couple have two daughters.

Since their separation, the senator has been linked to actress Morgan Fairchild, among others. Kerry has said his relationship with Fairchild, who is active in Democratic politics, was casual.

Kerry is serving his first term in the Senate.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore and Dick Van Dyke, a couple on a classic 1960s television series, will be back together briefly for the Emmy Awards.

The two, who played comedy writer Rob Petrie and wife Laura on the old "Dick Van Dyke Show," will help present Emmies on Aug. 28, as will Michael J. Fox and Danny DeVito, Fox Broadcasting Co. announced Thursday.

Other presenters for the three-hour telecast include the puppet Alf from the NBC comedy; "Star Trek" veterans Leonard Nimoy and William Shatner; comedians Garry Shandling and Tracey Ullman from Fox's own fledgling network lineup; Susan Dey of "L.A. Law"; Sharon Gless of "Cagney & Lacey"; and John Larroquette of "Night Court."

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Maria Cole, the 26-year-old daughter of Gov. Mario Cuomo, gave birth to a girl, the second grandchild for the Cuomos, the governor's office said Friday.

The infant, Emily Carrie Cole, was born at 8:16 p.m. Thursday and weighed 7 pounds, 11 ounces.

"The mother and child are doing fine," Cuomo said. "The father is doing even better."

The child is the first for Mrs. Cole, a partner in a public relations firm, and her husband, Kenneth, a shoe designer. They were married in October.

The hospital where the baby was born was not disclosed, said Cuomo spokeswoman Anne Crowley.

The governor and his wife, Matilda, also have a granddaughter, Christina, from their eldest daughter, Dr. Margaret Perpignano, 33. The Cuomos' three other children, Andrew, 30, Madeline, 23, and Christopher, 18, are not married.

Eastwood

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Dirty Harry's restaurant was a little too dirty, according to health inspectors who closed the kitchen at Clint Eastwood's Hog's Breath Inn.

Monterey County environmental health director Walter Wong said his inspectors found violations "too numerous to list" when they visited the restaurant Thursday.

The bar remains open.

Inspectors found inadequate refrigeration, unsanitary conditions, improper food storage, structural problems that made it difficult to clean the restaurant and an "extremely dirty" kitchen, Wong said.

"The dangerous part was the refrigeration was not working," he said. "Food is supposed to be kept at 40 degrees. This was at 68 degrees."

The restaurant's manager was in a meeting and was not available for comment on Friday, and Eastwood, who is part owner, also was not available, according to a woman who answered the phone at the restaurant.

Eastwood, best known as the tough-talking "Dirty Harry" of the silver screen, was as mayor of this chic hamlet-by-the-sea until April.

Wong said the restaurant has been cited before, but corrected the problems "enough to get by on."

'I really couldn't justify letting them remain open when I felt there wa a potential for people getting sick," said Updike. "I think they pretty much agreed with us."

Judge kills himself because of allegations

SEATTLE (AP) — A judge who killed himself in a deserted courthouse hallway after he learned details were being published about his alleged sexual misconduct felt hounded by the press and unable to bear it anymore, a friend said.

King County Superior Court Judge Gary M. Little was found dead Thursday night of a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, officials said.

He left a note saying: "I have chosen to take my life. It's an appropriate end to the present situation."

In the past six years, Little has been officially criticized or disciplined over improper contacts with juvenile defendants.

But rumors persisted of more serious sexual misconduct, leading a political challenger to raise those contacts as a campaign issue this year and reporters from several news organizations to pursue reports Little had used his influence to coerce young men into sex.

Little, 49, a judge since 1980, announced last month that he would not seek a third term, acknowledging that innuendo about his work with teen-age boys was the reason. He said he planned to move to California and work outside law.

Little, whose father committed suicide when he was 8, shot himself about an hour before the presses at the Seattle Post-Intelligencer started printing Friday's editions, which contained more than three full pages outlining allegations by five men — three of them former students of Little's — that he had coerced them into having sex with him.

The Seattle Times also reported Friday that it had been investigating Little, and had interviewed more than 80 people.

"He said he felt he'd been hounded by the press and he just couldn't take it anymore," said attorney Camden Hall, a friend of Little who spoke to him by telephone just minutes before the judge died. "It was too much pressure. The hounding wouldn't stop."

"He was not only driven into disgrace but to death," said Hal Foster, an art history professor and author who was interviewed from Paris by telephone by the Times.

Foster took Little's law class at private Lakeside School in the 1970s and said there was no sexual contact involving him and that he wasn't aware of any with his classmates.

"He was tried out of court on suspicions about his sexuality. That, to me, is reactionary. It's scary," Foster said.

Post-Intelligencer Executive Editor J.D. Alexander said in a news release that Little's death "is a tragedy that touches the community at several levels. Certainly the most tragic is the loss of a human life."

The newspaper's investigation was warranted, the statement said, because of a "conspiracy of silence" in "key levels of the community" about Little's behavior.

"There was no indication of relief; no indication that the system that had failed these victims would or could serve the public any better in the future," the statement said.

A janitor found Little's body. A .38-caliber pistol and a note were found with the body, said Vaughn Van Zant, an investigator with the King County medical examiner.

The one-page, handwritten note, addressed to no specific individual, was found on a hallway bench, Van Zant said. The medical examiner would not release its contents, but the Times reported the note said:

"I have chosen to take my life. It's an appropriate end to the present situation. I had hoped that my decision to withdraw from the election and leave public life would have closed the matter. Apparently these steps are not satisfactory to those who feel more is required, so be it. I will say one final time that I am proud of my efforts and accomplishments as a Superior Court Judge. I am deeply appreciative of those who have wished me well these past few weeks."

The judge was disciplined twice concerning improper contacts he had with youths who appeared before him in court.

In April 1985, after a complaint, Little was barred from the juvenile court bench by the presiding judge and the Superior Court executive committee because of such improper contacts, such as buying young defendants clothing and books.

In 1982, the state Commission on Judicial Conduct also privately admonished Little. The commission had received a complaint as early as 1981 from the King County prosecutor's office that Little was violating the Code of Judicial Conduct by having out-of-court contact with juvenile offenders, and the prosecutor's office followed up with a second report in 1983, The Times reported.

The commission's action was not made public until 1985; Little had been re-elected in 1984.

Two of the men who told the Post-Intelligencer that Little had sex with them when they were teen-agers said they gave long statements to the commission years later, one in 1981 and the other in 1985.

But the commission apparently never acted on those statements, because it had adopted a policy not to pursue allegations of misconduct that allegedly occurred before the commission was formed in December 1980.

The commission's chairman, Colfax attorney Wesley A. Nuxoll, said he thinks the commission's confidential proceedings are necessary to encourage people to come forward with complaints and speak freely about them.

Man says he never wrote to Reagan

SEATTLE (AP) — When President Reagan mentioned 200 flavors of ice cream on national television, it scooped up a memory for Mark Hawley.

Reagan, speaking Monday night to the Republican National Convention in New Orleans, quoted from Hawley's essay on "Why I Love America."

"I love America because you can join Cub Scouts if you want to," Reagan read. "You have a right to worship as you please. If you have the ability, you can try to be anything you want to be. I also like America because we have about 200 flavors of ice cream."

Reagan didn't mention Hawley's name, but said the words were written by "a young boy who wrote to me shortly after I took office" in 1981.

Not quite right, says Hawley, now a 28-year-old mechanic for The Boeing Co.

"I never wrote President Reagan," Hawley said in a telephone interview Thursday. "That (essay) was printed in Scouting Magazine in the fall of 1969.

Carlucci glad Vincennes report released

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci said Friday he is glad the Pentagon came forward with a detailed account of the July 3 Iran airline disaster on the day it occurred even though several key details were wrong.

A final investigative report released Friday found that inexperience and the stress of battle — "the fog of war" — led the crew of the Vincennes to reach several erroneous conclusions, which Carlucci and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in turn had reported as fact.

The conclusions included:

— The airliner was transmitting a signal identifying it as a warplane.

— The plane was outside a commercial air corridor.

— It was descending and accelerating as it approached the Vincennes, a flight pattern similar to that of an attacking fighter.

Those mistakes have been at the heart of the controversy over why the USS Vincennes mistook an Iran Air A-300 Airbus for an F-14 fighter and shot it down, killing all 290 people aboard.

Carlucci told a Pentagon news conference Friday that "on the day that the incident occurred, Admiral Crowe appeared before you and made available virtually every scrap of information that he had in our possession. This was a deliberate decision."

"And Admiral Crowe stated repeatedly that our initial information was preliminary and very likely to prove false in some instances. Nonetheless, we decided to go ahead with it, running the risk that there would be stories that the Pentagon had put out mistaken information," Carlucci said.

On July 3, Crowe told reporters that Iran Air Flight 655 was outside a commercial air corridor and was descending and accelerating.

The final report found that "IR 655 was not an the exact center of airway A-59, but was 3.37 nautical miles west of the centerline. However, it was in the assigned airway."

And it said that "at no time did IR 655 actually descend in altitude prior to engagement."

Crowe also said on July 3 that the airplane was emitting electronic signals that led the Vincennes to conclude that the plane was an F-14.

Several days later, Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard told reporters the Airbus had been broadcasting its position on a device known as an Identification Friend or Foe (IFF) transponder in Mode 3, used by both civilian and military aircraft, and in Mode 2, used only by military aircraft.

The final report said the Mode 2 reading was a mistake, and that human error apparently led operators aboard the Vincennes to receive an IFF signal from a military aircraft at the Bandar Abbas airfield, from which Flight 655 took off, and mistakenly conclude that the Airbus was military.

That initial error led to the identification of the airliner as hostile just over three minutes into its flight, and was not corrected during the remaining three minutes and 40 seconds before it was blasted from the sky by two SM-2 Standard missiles from the Vincennes.

Because the operator apparently failed to adjust the IFF receiver aboard the Vincennes to account for the approach of the aircraft, the report said, "the Mode 2 transmission from an aircraft on the ground would then be displayed" and "could have been generated by a military aircraft (C-130, F-4, F-14) located on the ground at Bandar Abbas."

The crew of the Vincennes may have made the mistakes, the report said, because they were fighting Iranian gunboats, were heeling over at a 32-degree angle while maneuvering to fight off the boats, and had in their minds the attack by Iraq on May 17, 1987 against the USS Stark in which 37 American sailors died.

...."On the day that the incident occurred, Admiral Crowe appeared before you and made available virtually every scrap of information that he had in our possession. This was a deliberate decision."

State of emergency declared after underground explosions

GLOUCESTER, Mass. (AP) — About 200 people were evacuated and the mayor declared a state of emergency Friday when a series of underground explosions ripped through this seacoast city. No injuries were reported.

"I heard a loud explosion. I looked out, the sewer manhole cover blew off the ground," said merchant Patricia Genest. "None of us knew what was going on at all. People were running away from sewers and manhole covers."

"It sounded like bombs going off. It was one manhole right after the other," said gas station owner John Curley. The explosions took place about a quarter mile from the city's downtown and not far from a famous statue of a fisherman.

The explosions apparently were caused by gasoline in the sewer system, said fire department spokesman Clarence Rudolph.

Mayor William Squillace declared a state of emergency at 5:30 p.m.

"They're going to call in everybody that they have — the rest of the fire department and the rest of the police department," said police Sgt. Jerry Cook.

"We had a series of underground explosions — about 10 right in a row — and now they're evacuating the area and it's causing a major traffic jam," said police Officer Merrill Newman. "The telephone just lit up like a Christmas tree and people were almost hysterical."

Gloucester Fire Capt. Louis Aiello said six trucks responded to the alarms.

The source of the gasoline suspected in the explosions "was definitely a business," Rudolph said, but he declined to name the company pending confirmation by investigators.

Smoke and some flames were visible after the explosions, but officials said any fires in the sewer system apparently extinguished themselves.

A strong smell of gasoline hovered in the area hours after the explosions.

While police earlier said hundreds of people were evacuated from a 10-block area to a school, Rudolph said only 200 people were evacuated from a four-block area near downtown.

Most of the people who were told to leave their homes went to the houses of friends or relatives, or stood by police barriers and watched, said Charles Thomas, a director of the local Red Cross. Only about a dozen came to the school.

By nightfall, people were being allowed to return to their homes behind fire officials who checked manholes for more flammable substances. The state of emergency was not lifted, however.

Gloucester resident Dana Blatchford, 38, said the first explosion "stopped me in my tracks."

Police watch as burglars return to scene of crime

NEW YORK (AP) — Police investigating a break-in at Kennedy International Airport watched a videotape of the crime — and then did a double take when the screen returned to live action and showed the burglars had returned.

The detectives captured one suspect but three others got away. They captured a second man at LaGuardia Airport as he tried to board a plane to Miami, Port Authority Police Capt. Frank Fox said Friday.

Both men were charged with burglary and possession of stolen property.

The caper, as outlined by Fox and Lynn Tierney of the Port Authority's information office, went this way:

Two men entered the Ogden-Allied Aviation Services warehouse at Kennedy Airport on Wednesday night and removed $20,000 worth of duty-free cigarettes, liquor and costume jewelry belonging to Air Egypt.

The theft, in a room monitored by a TV camera, was quickly discovered and Port Authority police were notified. Shortly after midnight, Ogden-Allied's manager, Richard Maumann, ran the videotape for detectives Ray Nafey, John Trotter and Charles Yeungst.

When the replay ended, the live scene returned to the screen, showing the burglars, this time with friends.

Once facing extinction, bison bred for low-cholesterol meat

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Modern pioneers of bison genetics are trying to bring back large numbers of the burly beasts as a source of low-cholesterol meat.

Using cattle as surrogate mothers, a Cheyenne-based group of scientists and ranchers plans to breed bison as the animal of the future for an increasingly health-conscious society.

"We see there is nowhere near the number of bison for the demand," said Paul Butler, manager of the group, Livestock Research and Innovation. "In order to make any type of dramatic increase you've got to use the new techniques."

Bison were on the brink of extinction at the end of the last century, when hide-hunters of the Great Slaughter reduced herds of millions to fewer than 300. Now bison are multiplying slowly, numbering 80,000 to 100,000, according to the Denver-based American Buffalo Association.

The animals also are arousing appetites in the meat market.

"Basically the meat's better," Butler said, referring to positive results in recent taste tests. "It's got more protein and less fat, and yet it's tender and flavorful."

LRI wants to capitalize by getting cattle to give birth to bison and nurse the calves until they reach the age of slaughter. With help from the University of Wyoming, researchers have been artificially inseminating female bisons treated with hormones. Fertilized embryos are flushed out of the bisons and implanted in cattle, allowing bison cows to produce more embryos without waiting to give birth themselves.

So far cows have rejected all implanted bison embryos, but the confidence of embryo transfer experts and interest expressed by the Wyoming Department of Agriculture have fueled optimism.

"We've got to perfect the techniques," Butler said. "There are certain adjustments we have to make when working with bisons. They are a big, strong, wild animal. They're not easy to handle."

Colorado State University professor George Seidel, a reproductive physiologist who pioneered embryo transfer techniques with horses, cows, sheep and rabbits, does not doubt the methods will work with bison.

"The technique is not too different from the test-tube baby," Seidel said. "I would expect it would work."

Similarly, University of Wyoming Animal Science professor Gary Moss, who is guiding the LRI project, said he is sure it can be done.

Butler has been talking with buyers in New Zealand and Australia. Besides bison he envisions selling frozen bison embryos guaranteed to grow for about $10,000 each.

Not everyone is so enthusiastic.

Embryo transfer proponent David MacKenzie, a Lousiana State professor of plant pathology, cautioned, "We've got to get smarter about how we do this."

And activist Jeremy Rifkin, president of the Foundation on Economic Trends, warned in an appearance in Wyoming that mixing breeds in high-technology projects can lead to an undesirable homogenization of species.

Nonetheless, a University of Wyoming marketing study suggested further uses of the bison.

"With bison, you can sell everything from the head to the tail," researchers wrote. "Bison by-products include heads, robes, skulls, leather goods, wood and jewelry made from their bones and horns."

Bison ranchers are quick to point out the profit potential of an enterprise that could dramatically increase the number of the species.

"There's an incredible market for it," said John Flocchini, who manages a herd of about 2,500 buffalo on the Durham Ranch near Gillette. "I wish we had about five or six times the number of animals that we have."

The Durham ranch sells bison meat in California, where Flocchini found "there's just way more demand than there is supply."

Moreover, Flocchini and others believe few animals are more suitable than bison for Wyoming, where harsh weather and predators pose problems for cattle ranchers.

Kenyan carver revives ancient wood craft

LAMU, Kenya (AP) — With every bite of his chisel into thick mahogany planks Said Abdulrehman revives a centuries-old tradition his craftsman father was forced to abandon.

The old Abdulrehman gave up the ancient art of carving ornate Arabesque patterns on wooden doors, tables and chairs for a more lucrative business making modern furniture more than 25 years ago.

But today his 33-year-old son devotes all his working hours fashioning wood in a renaissance of the craft on this tiny Indian Ocean island, Kenya's oldest town just south of the Equator.

Its revival comes at a time when the island's main historical source of support, the Persian Gulf, is convulsed by the Iran-Iraq war.

But well-heeled tourists from as far afield as Denmark, Japan and the United States have encouraged carvers like the young Abdulrehman to carry on the tradition.

Respect for the old ways seems appropriate on an island where there are no cars and where life revolves around the five daily muezzin prayer calls to 22 mosques.

Veiled women and men in Moslem prayer caps and kilt-like kikois squeeze by donkeys in narrow, winding streets.

To Westerners, Lamu looks more like an exotic movie set than a home to 12,000 people. A distinctive feature is the wooden doors, usually carved by pairs of craftsmen for several months.

Prices vary by size and style, ranging from $10 for a wooden platter to several thousand dollars for a door or chest. The deeper the cut, and more time spent by the carvers, the more expensive the piece.

This painstaking craft developed in equatorial Africa from the beginning in the 9th century. When Portuguese explorer Vasco da Gama arrived in the Indian Ocean in 1498, the local skills had been honed to perfection.

Arab and Persian sailors arrived with the Kaskasi, the northeast monsoon, to pick up mangroves, coconuts, ivory and slaves. In turn, Lamu traders prospered from oriental silk, spices and gold.

When fleets of wind-powered ships sailed in from the Red Sea and Persian Gulf, the sailors brought their culture with them. Africans and Arabs intermarried to create the unique Islamic culture of the Swahili people.

With the end of the slave trade, the power of Lamu declined. Dhows that once ferried Africans into slavery now plied the Indian Ocean with merchandise.

The Gulf war has more recently forced many of the boat owners to stop serving Lamu, prompting local people to find new ways of making money.

The main new source of income is tourism, according to Sheik M. Abdulkadir, chairman of the Lamu Chamber of Commerce. Foreigners admire the handiwork of the past, and readily buy contemporary copies of serving platters and jewelry boxes.

Lamu residents, enriched by tourist dollars, purchase the larger pieces like the doors that Abdulrehman and other carvers make.

Like generations of woodcrafters before him, Abdulrehman is inspired by Arabic designs left in interior plaster walls over the centuries. He recreates older furniture models with local wood, so convincingly that tourists cannot always distinguish his work from antiques in the Lamu museum.

Although Abdulrehman's father shares his son's love of the older works, he had to turn to the new to make a living. The elder Abdulrehman, 58, works with plastics and Formica as well as wood in his "Modern Furniture" shop at the edge of Lamu town.

The younger Abdulrehman learned from his father but broke away nine years ago to concentrate exclusively on traditional pieces. His business has grown enough to support six workers.

Abdulrehman hopes his own sons will follow in his footsteps. His 15-year-old son Munib already works in the shop and Abdulrehman believes Midhath, 2, will join him in a few years. "Like me, his favorite place is the workshop," he said as his youngest frolicked in the wood shavings.

Just down the alley from Abdulrehman's "Lamu Craft," Ahmed Bereky, also 33, also keeps the ancient craft alive by carving doors for the Kenyan Parliament and a modern Nairobi office building, and for German and American tourists.

Migrant students launched imaginary space shuttle flight

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Children of migrant farmworkers, who often lag behind schoolmates because of continual uprooting, were given the satisfaction of seeing one class project through this summer: training to be astronauts.

Eighty children from grades five through seven spent six weeks on an imaginary space shuttle mission at Greenfield Community College, using an elaborate imitation spaceship with a cockpit, experiment station, bunks, galley and "hygiene room," all hooked up by computer to a ground control center.

"These students had a goal, for the first time in some of their lives," said Martha Kelliher, who teaches fifth-graders in the Massachusetts Migrant Education Program.

"When I first explained it, they were awed. A lot of them had never worked with a computer. Some can't speak English. There was a lot of hesitation and doubt in their eyes," she said Friday.

By the time the program ended this week, however, the children had learned enough astronaut lingo and computer tricks to take the imitation spaceship on four-hour flights, conduct studies on acid rain from outer space, radio an emergency message to mission control that their teacher needed her lunch and finish the job they had started.

The space shuttle simulator was built nearly 10 years ago by students at the two-year state college to teach appreciation for living with limited food, water and trash disposal and give students a better understanding of their role as global citizens, said Greg Vouros, who runs the orbiter program at Greenfield.

Vouros was looking for young would-be astronauts to train under a grant from the state Department of Education when he met with David Almeida, who runs the migrant education program in western Massachusetts.

Almeida said the program's aim is to give remedial help to youngsters after school and during summers school so they don't fall so far behind that dropping out of school and working as non-skilled laborers are their only options.

Many of the children are plunked into one school system after another as their parents follow harvests up and down the East Coast. The children may change textbooks and friends several times a year, Almeida said.

The space shuttle project, he said, showed them the importance of goals and teamwork, math and English, and opened vistas of opportunity.

"They realized, 'If I can't read, I can't follow the instructions on the screen and we may crash,'" Ms. Kelliher said. "They also learned that if one person didn't know his job, the whole success and life of the team was at stake."

Julio Correa, an 11-year-old mission commander whose father works in Connecticut tobacco fields, said he learned "respect for the nature and for other people and being a part of a team. It was kind of fun."

Ms. Kelliher said her class had prepared for the flight by borrowing library books on space, listening to a nurse explain how to take temperatures, blood pressure and pulse rates, and inventing tools they might need on a flight.

Vouros said children aged 9 through 13 are ideal for the simulator flights.

"They are sophisticated enough to handle them and willing to lose themselves in the dramatic play," he said. "When you get to the ninth grade, you're too cool to play the role in an uninhibited fashion."

Even though some children spoke little English, other children would translate. "I never noticed that we had any problem in communication," he said.

Officials concerned about isolated communities

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The bus that stops in Rushville five days a week is a lifeline for 72-year-old Evelyn Trenkle.

But she and the other 1,200 residents in the northwestern Nebraska town face losing their bus service and joining the ranks of thousands of rural Americans who live beyond the scope of scheduled bus, rail and air service.

"We're just so isolated out here, I don't know what we'd without it," said Mrs. Trenkle.

Rushville, near the South Dakota border, is 400 miles from Omaha and 30 miles from Chadron, the nearest community of any substance.

Arrow-Black Hills Stage Lines runs the bus that stops in Rushville. Two years ago, the company announced it would discontinue the route, from Rapid City, S.D., to Omaha, because of low ridership, said Jim Maly, schedule manager.

The bus is still running because towns along the route joined with the state and federal governments to work out a subsidy, but the bus could be threatened again when the subsidy runs out, Maly said.

The isolation of rural America concerns not only residents, but also the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"Too often, if you live in a rural community, the bus may no longer come to town, nor may rail or air service be available," said Martin Fitzpatrick Jr., administrator of the Agriculture Department's Office of Transportation.

"Many rural communities are now truly at the end of the line, with limited access to any form of public transportation," Fitzpatrick said.

His office, along with the U.S. Department of Transportation's Urban Mass Transportation Administration and the United Bus Owners of America, have spent a year studying rural transportation problems.

That work will culminate with a three-day conference beginning Monday in Omaha to develop a plan to "reconnect rural America." Among those scheduled to speak are Gov. Kay Orr, Sen. Larry Pressler of South Dakota, and Rep. Virginia Smith of Nebraska.

"During the last year, a new effort has begun to reconnect rural America. We hope this national meeting will consolidate those efforts for the future," Fitzpatrick said.

"We've learned that while service to rural communities indeed has been lost in many cases, there are a variety of ways rural transportation needs can be met," he said.

"For example, flexible point-to-point routes tailored to particular passenger needs are beginning to take the place of traditional, fixed-route systems. Also, rural passenger needs sometimes can be dovetailed with the shipment of goods in sparsely populated areas."

Steve Sprague, the United Bus Owners' vice president for government affairs, said the conference should provide a blueprint for both governmental agencies and transportation providers.

"We want to try to pick and choose the most appropriate way communities and states can begin to build that intercity transportation service," Sprague said. "When we walk away from Omaha we will know, hopefully, what are the best patterns to pursue."

While Sprague concedes that many see the 1,600 bus owners and operators represented by his group as part of the problem, he says the association's participation in the yearlong study proves the group wants to be part of a solution.

Federal, local or state subsidies for private carriers serving rural America can help solve the problem, he said.

"There is a middle ground somewhere between full public and fully private transportation that has not been identified for rural communities," he said.

But even with boosts like the subsidy provided to the Rushville bus route, service is far from guaranteed there. The $200,000 subsidy is a fixed sum, and Arrow-Black Hills will have to re-evaluate continuing the service when the money runs out, Maly said.

While many stranded by the loss of bus service stay home when they're lonely or ill, Mrs. Trenkle says she would move to a town with bus or rail service.

"I don't believe I would stay here; I just couldn't," she said. "I wouldn't be able to get anywhere. There are a lot of people like me who are elderly and can't drive too far."

Louisville now boats tallest floating fountain

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentuckians gathered for a party Friday and the dedication and first performance of the 400-foot-high Louisville Falls Fountain, billed as the world's tallest floating fountain.

"I don't think anything has ever been hyped as much as this," said Errol Frailey, president of the Louisville Central Area Inc., the downtown development group which promoted the event.

More than 60,000 people were expected to crowd downtown and line the banks of the Ohio River for the evening event.

It takes 20 minutes for the computer-controlled fountain's 41 jets and red, white, blue and amber lights to complete its program of patterns, which concludes when the fountain sprays a fleur-de-lis — Louisville's official symbol — about 400 feet above the river.

The fountain, on an octagonal barge 39 feet across, is a gift to the city from Mary and Barry Bingham Sr., who donated $2.6 million for its construction and maintenance for three years. Bingham, patriarch of a three-generation media family, died Monday at age 82.

Plenty of entertainment was planned, including dancers, singers, an orchestra and bands — the 100th Army Reserve Band, country music and rock 'n' roll.

"I think the whole city is planning a party," said John Richards, executive director of the Mary and Barry Bingham Sr. Fund.

The fountain, proposed almost 30 years ago, was built by Pete Serodino of Chattanooga, Tenn., a marine contractor who has built other floating fountains around the world. This one sprays the highest, backers said.

Sleeper ads wake up controversy for chain

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Eating breakfast may be good for one's health, but using a photo of a snoozing President Reagan to make the point is risky business, a fast food chain learned.

Full-page ads featuring the photo were pulled from five newspapers this week after the Burgerville chain received dozens of calls from people who thought they made fun of Reagan, said Pat Klinger, vice president of Burgerville USA's parent company, Holland Inc.

The ads depicted the president with his eyes closed and wearing headphones. The picture, obtained from NBC-TV, was taken when Reagan was attending a meeting at Bonn, West Germany.

"You can usually tell when someone skips breakfast," said the ads, which extolled the nutritional benefits of a breakfast like those available at Burgerville.

Twenty-five calls was all it took, said Klinger, who yanked the ad after a one-day run in the Columbian in Vancouver, the Oregonian in Portland, the Salem, Ore., Statesman-Journal and the Dalles, Ore., Chronicle.

Klinger managed to stop the ad before it ran in the weekly Monmouth, Ore., Sun-Enterprise.

Burgerville, with 31 outlets in Oregon and Washington, often uses eye-catching advertisements to compete with national restaurant chains, but Klinger said there were limits to the attention he hoped to draw.

"We're not in the business of offending or upsetting people," he said. "The ad became something we didn't intend. It became a political ad and we pulled it."

Ron Rasmussen was one of those newspaper readers who got upset.

"I was so mad, I could've spit bullets," said the former Clark County Republican chairman. "It was extremely discourteous to our president to put that ad in. I'm 58, and I could fall asleep in a meeting."

Scientists challege theory of life's undersea beginning

By PAT FLYNN
Copley News Service

Two University of California, San Diego, scientists have challenged a popular theory that life originated some 4 billion years ago in or near hydrothermal vents on the ocean floor.

In article published Thursday in the journal Nature, Stanley L. Miller, a professor of chemistry and biochemistry, and Jeffrey L. Bada, a professor of marine chemistry, argue that the super-hot temperatures and pressure at the vents are far too great for the fragile building blocks of life to withstand.

Bada said when the theory that life began at the vents first was offered in the 1970s, experts on the origins of life virtually ignored it.

"We said, 'Well, this is crazy. It just is the wrong environment because the temperatures are too high,'" Bada said. "But, unfortunately, other people continued on the bandwagon....All of a sudden the new edition of one of the textbooks I use in one of my undergraduate classes had a thing on the hydrothermal vent origin-of-life theory.

"That motivated Stanley Miller and I to get going on this."

Proponents of the vent theory argue that the hydrothermal vent system, through which all the world's oceans pass about every 10 million years, is favorable to life's beginnings because hydrogen, nitrogen, compounds of sulphur and carbon and several metals are present.

In addition, the heat from the earth's core would provide the energy necessary to assemble the components of life. It is also argued that the ocean's floor was the only place the fragile compounds could survive 4 billion years ago when the earth was relentlessly pounded by meteorites and lethal ultraviolet radiation was unfiltered by the atmosphere that exists today.

Bada said that he and Miller did a simple experiment to prove that life could not have started at the vents.

"The water in these vents is about 350 degrees Centigrade, and the pressure is about 300 atmospheres where these occur at about 3,000 meters (deep). If you look at the stability of things like amino acids, they're very unstable under these conditions," Bada said.

Amino acids break down in a matter of minutes under those conditions, and and peptides, the next link in the chain to living organisms, break down even faster, he said.

Miller said that although the vent theory has grown more popular, it is contrary to the more generally accepted view.

"The alternate theory is the conventional one," Miller said. "The processes (of life's beginning) took place in the atmosphere and oceans and on the beaches and in lagoons and things like that."

Miller and Bada said those who support the vent theory don't understand all the factors involved.

"The geologists for some reason seem to like the vents," Miller said. "But they don't appreciate that it's an organic chemical problem and that you'll destroy the organic compounds in the vents. And we just thought we'd point this out."

Some other scientists, however, aren't persuaded by the research of the two UCSD chemists.

"I think they're approaching it the wrong way," said Carl Oppenheimer, a professor of marine science and microbiology at the University of Texas. "The vents have a rather rapid temperature gradient. They have been measured as high as a meter will allow and that's 700 degrees Centigrade, but the surrounding water is 2 degrees or one-and-a-half degrees Centigrade."

Oppenheimer, who earned his doctorate at UCSD's Scripps Institution of Oceanography, also said Miller and Bada are wrong about the effects of the pressure at the ocean floor.

"I did my thesis on the effects of high pressure on marine micro-organisms," he said. "Micro-organisms exist clear down to the depths of the sea...And so pressure to me is not a factor at all."

Oppenheimer said that he does not believe that life formed in the vents.

"I agree that it could not have formed at the vents, but where the vent interfaces (with the rest of the ocean) is a very logical place," Oppenheimer said, adding that there are other logical places.

Carl Woese, professor of microbiology at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana, pointed out that when life was forming on the earth, conditions were different than they are now. .

It is believed that the oceans were more shallow and temperatures could have been different, he said.

"When they talk about vents, they don't necessarily mean that the life originated right down deep in the hottest part of the vent," Woese said. "They look at it as originating sort of in the niche created by the vent. So, it would be at high temperatures, but not the highest, necessarily."

Woese said he believes that life began in temperatures of 100 degrees Centigrade or slightly hotter.

"There are vents that don't come out at a full 350 (degrees)," he said.

Beachcomber takes to simple life

By TONY VINDELL

BOCA CHICA BEACH, Texas (AP) — Tom Houston has beaten the odds.

After going through divorce, losing his job, and being told he had six months to live, he decided to make the best of the time he had left. He moved to the beach.

Now, four years later, he lives on $87 worth of food stamps a month and the crabs, clams and fish he catches. He spends his time combing the beach looking for anything worthwhile, talking on any imaginable subject to whomever comes along, reading and just wondering what to do next.

The Brownsville native calls himself a good squatter who doesn't cause problems for anyone.

Of his lifestyle, Houston said he is simply living like his forefathers did for several hundred years except that he uses kerosene and also pumps up his own water from behind a sand dune at Boca Chica Beach.

"This is my baby," Houston said, while showing off his simple technique of pumping fresh water from a 6-foot hole he dug behind the shack he is still building near the south jetty. "This is nothing like Brownsville, Port Isabel or South Padre Island water."

Believe it or not, Houston said, rain water sets in the ground in between two sand dunes. All one needs, he added, is to find a way to pump it up.

A war veteran who joined the U.S. Marines at age 17, Houston said he fought in the Korean War against his own wishes. His parents signed up to enlist him in the Marines.

"I bet they probably signed up for me at least 50 times," he recalled. "From Korea I went to Japan and stayed at Fort McNair. Japan is a beautiful country but I wouldn't go back there now."

A handyman most of his life, Houston said, he can build an electrical plant, install whole plumbing systems and do his own carpentry work.

The four-year Boca Chica Beach resident, now 53, calls the beach a man's best friend.

"I'm three years overdue," he said, remembering the day someone told him at a San Antonio hospital he wasn't going to live much longer. "You know, my liver has been shot twice and, on top of that, I like booze."

Houston was wounded during the Korean War.

Houston said he started mailing "zillions" of resumes four years ago when he lost his job, but not a single job offer came through.

He then went to the Texas Employment Commission, filed an unemployment claim and has since been living on $87 worth of food stamps each month.

"A woman at the commission once asked me, 'Houston, why don't you get you a job? ' " he recalled. "Can you find one for me at age 50?" Houston said he responded.

"Do you want me to sell dope?" he told her. "Whenever I see young people driving those expensive cars I know they are in the wacky tobacky business."

Houston makes occasional trips to Brownsville to buy groceries.

He recalled a day when he ran out of cigarettes, walked to the nearest place off Texas Highway 4 and came back home angry.

The store was closed.

"You have heard the expression 'walk a mile for a Camel?' " Houston said. "Well, I walked 13 miles for nothing."

Houston's constant companion is Duchess, a black dog which he said is part cocker spaniel. A friend gave her to Houston despite his objections.

"I'm living on food stamps, let alone feeding a dog," he said he told the woman. "She promised to bring food for her every weekend."

"I am still waiting for that day," he said. "Duchess is a good dog but she is getting too spoiled. I know people out there feed her because she refuses to eat her own food."

Reports of bad weather seem to be more concern to others than to Houston. Anytime there are such reports, people stop by Houston's place and advise him to leave. •

University program seeks to spread peace

EDITOR'S NOTE — It runs on a staff of two, with a slender yearly budget of $52,000, and it's struggling to make ends meet, but Wayne State University's Center for Peace and Conflict Resolution thinks big — and in terms of pacifying high school kids as well.

By DAVID GOODMAN

DETROIT (AP) — It's a small step in a quarrelsome world, but Judy and Cassandra became best friends again after a bitter falling out over a ruined stereo speaker.

Chalk one up for the 10th-grader who mediated and the Mackenzie High School's Conflict Mediation Center — in turn an offshoot of the more formidably named Center for Peace and Conflict Resolution at Wayne State University.

Founded in 1965 when the Vietnam War roiled campuses, the university center then was all but alone in a field that now counts more than 100 such programs.

The center operates on a shoestring budget of $52,000 annually, with a staff of two. It has struggled to pay its bills, adapt to changing times and gain academic prestige. It offers undergraduate courses in areas such as dispute resolution, the physics of nuclear war, the Vietnam War and union-management relations.

Its faculty members are drawn from many university departments, including physics, law, medicine, sociology, history, education, criminal justice and theater.

Activities are divided into undergraduate studies, programs for kindergarten through 12th-grade students and the Council for World Affairs, which puts on programs for the general community.

Reaching out to schools like Mackenzie High is an example of how the center pursues its mission of promoting non-violent conflict resolution at all levels — from the interpersonal to the international, says Director Lilian Genser. She has worked at the center since its founding.

"Conflict is a natural part of life," Genser says. "Without conflict, you don't have growth. It's the way you solve conflicts that's important."

For high school students, solving conflicts without resorting to force doesn't come easily, says Betty Vereen, principal at Mackenzie. Students who tangle outside of school often bring their conflicts with them to class.

Typical disputes are over repeated gossip — "He said she said" — personal property, jilted love or even something as simple as one teen accidentally bumping another, Vereen says.

Since May, Mackenzie students have had an alternative — voluntary mediation by students and staff members trained in workshops offered by the Center for Peace and Conflict Studies.

In one month of operation, the school's Conflict Resolution Center has successfully mediated 27 disputes among ninth-graders, and the program will be extended to 10th-graders in the fall, Vereen says.

Cassandra and Judy, for example, tangled over who should pay for Cassandra's speaker ruined when Judy hooked it up to a defective stereo system.

The girls, whose names have been changed, were sent to the center after their hallway shouting match disrupted classes one morning.

"They came to school pretty hot, I guess," says Philip, who was assigned to mediate the dispute. "This was a tough one." After cooling down a bit, the girls agreed to split the cost of the speaker.

According to Marilyn Schmidt, director of the center's conflict resolution training program in the high schools, its goal goes beyond helping students get along better.

"We make the ties to a larger view of the world as a place where the same techniques of conflict resolution can be used," she says.

Some on the Wayne State campus aren't happy with the center's "view of the world" and its advocacy of what they see as a particular political position.

"At the time the center was founded, it attracted a number of the liberal and left-liberal faculty members," says retired geography Professor Fred Dohrs said.

"What the center has had ever since is a strong liberal bias," said Dohrs, who led a failed effort in the late 1970s to block creation of a peace studies co-major for undergraduates at Wayne State. The center's political bias, he says, has made it a "miserable failure" in pursuing open academic inquiry.

"There obviously is a good deal of suspicion here and elsewhere about the existence of peace and conflict studies centers," says Professor Melvin Small, a historian and adviser to students in the co-major program.

Small is author of "Johnson, Nixon and the Doves," a study of the effects of the anti-war movement on presidential decisions in Vietnam.

While faculty members' political views influence the topics they choose to study or teach, they strive for fairness and objectivity in their classes and writings, he says.

MOTHER KNOWS BEST.

Mothers across America help vote the Volvo 240 DL Family Circle's first "Family Car of the Year."

In choosing their first "Family Car of the Year," Family Circle magazine asked a group of expert judges to evaluate over 200 new cars, and narrow the field to sixteen finalists. Then, to help select the Grand Award winner, they went to an even tougher group of critics—housewives and other family car owners.

The result: based on safety, dependability, roominess and value, the Volvo 240 DL was the one car they would most want to raise their families in.

So if you're looking for the best all-around family car, do what Family Circle did:

Listen to your mother.

Get behind the wheel of a Winner!

There's a new car from Japan on the American road. Charade, by Daihatsu. An affordable car with the quality and elegance of much more expensive cars.

The car is Charade. The company is Daihatsu, pronounced Dī-hot-sue, a household name in over 130 countries. In Japanese, DAI means "Large" and HATSU means "Enterprise." Literally, Daihatsu means Large Enterprise. A BIG name for a GREAT company, in business for over eighty (80) years, since 1907.

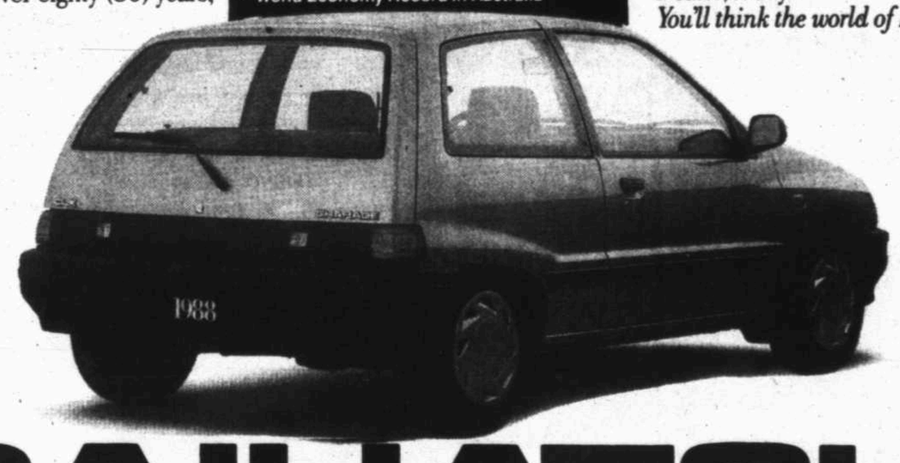

The amazing Charade has a track record of performance proven around the world for over a decade:

- Car Of The Year in Japan
- Car Of The Year in Thailand
- Most Popular Car in Australia
- Four-Time Rally Champion in East Africa
- Two-Time Rally Champion in Monte Carlo
- Rally Champion in Malaysia
- Rally Champion in New Zealand
- Rally Champion in Finland
- World Economy Record in Paris
- World Economy Record in Singapore
- World Economy Record in Australia

And now in America, Daihatsu's Charade has an EPA rating of 38 MPG city and 42 MPG highway. The interiors are perfectly color-coordinated. The quality of workmanship is impeccable. The elegant styling of its wide sculptured body is state-of-the-art in automotive design.

In fact, the critics are already referring to Daihatsu's Charade as the "class of its class."

Get behind the wheel of a Winner, at your nearby Daihatsu Dealer, today!
You'll think the world of Daihatsu.™
