Pilot dies in warplane collision

Fighters crash 2 hours after Clinton, Blair press conference on Iraq

■ Clinton, Blair affirm willingness to launch strike against Iraq even without other nations' participation.

By Cragg Hines
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Two U.S. warplanes collided over the Persian Gulf on Friday as President Clinton and British Prime Minister Tony Blair affirmed their readiness to launch military strikes against the Iraqi regime of Saddam Hussein, even if other nations refuse to participate.

One of the pilots, part of an Anglo-American military force gathering in the region, died.

Clinton and Blair indicated that if diplomatic initiatives fail to gain access for U.N. inspectors in Iraq, the two leaders envisioned air strikes — but not land assaults — aimed against suspected nuclear, chemical and biological weaponry sites. Clinton and Blair said that their intent was not to kill Saddam or even necessarily to drive him from office.

Less than two hours after the Clinton-Blair press conference at the White House ended, the Defense Department announced the collision of the U.S. Marine Corps F-A-18 fighters on a training flight over the Gulf about 80 miles east of Kuwait City.

It was unclear if the pilot died in the collision or during the rescue operation. The other pilot was in good condition, according to

Outlook: annual progress report

Was 1997 a good year? What are the expectations for 1998? Outlook '98, the Reporter-Telegram's annual progress report, will answer those questions with three parts beginning Sunday and continuing Feb. 15 and Feb. 22. The Sunday and Feb. 22 editions will cover, among other things, education, real estate, tourism, retail, health care and banking. The Feb. 22 edition will deal with the state of the petroleum industry.

Economy

WASHINGTON — Robust job growth in January held the nation's unemployment rate near a 24-year low as America's vibrant labor market showed no sign of spillover from Asia's financial disarray. Wall Street applauded the employment strength, coupled with only a moderate hourly wage gain, and the Dow Jones stock average surged toward last summer's record.

Back in jail

SEATTLE — The former grade school teacher who had sex with a 13-year-old boy and gave birth to his child was sent back to prison for nearly 7 1/2 years Friday after they were caught apparently trying to run away together. Mary Kay LeTourneau, 35, and the teen-ager were found Tuesday in a parked car with the windows steamed up. Prosecutors said they had $6,200 in cash, men's and infant's clothing and her passport.

Cable car mood

ROME — Anti-Americanism and anti-military sentiment have boiled to the surface here since a Marine Corps jet brought down a cable car in northern Italy, killing 20 people. A RAI state television news program headlined the story "American Evil." Opinion-makers have cited the "arrogance of the world's only superpower." Talk show guests, particularly leftist party members, have demanded the closing of U.S. bases in Italy and an Italian exit from NATO.

Athletes from 72 nations to compete in last Winter Olympics of century

Clinton: 'I would never walk away' from presidency

By Stewart Powell
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — President Clinton said Friday he would "never" consider resignation in the face of allegations that he carried on an affair with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky and coached her to deny it.

Clinton, meeting reporters with visiting British Prime Minister Tony Blair by his side, declined to discuss the nature of his relationship with the 24-year-old Californian. He also turned aside a reporter's invitation for him to convey a personal message of empathy to Lewinsky via the nationally televised news conference.

Clinton has repeatedly denied having "sexual relations" with Lewinsky. He confined his denial on Friday to saying that he had "never asked anybody to do anything but tell the truth."

Asked if he would "consider resigning from office" in light of the "painful" questions into his private life, Clinton replied firmly: "Never."

Clinton added: "I would never walk away from the people of this country and the trust they placed in me."

Clinton, embarking on the sixth year of his presidency, said he would "keep showing up for work" to "do what I was hired to do" because he cared about ordinary Americans "whose voices aren't often heard here" in the nation's capital.

Of the 19 questions directed at Clinton and Blair during the 44-minute news conference, 12 focused on the allegations that surfaced two-and-one-half-weeks ago.

On several occasions, the president declined to respond to the question, saying he was "honoring the rules of the investigation" and could not comment.

"I have told the American people what I think is essential for them to know about this and what I believe they want to know," Clinton explained.

Blair rallied to the president's defense.

The 44-year-old Briton, who led the Labor party back into power last May for the first time in 18 years, said he has found Clinton to be "someone I could trust, someone I could rely upon, someone I am proud to call not just a colleague but a friend."

Clinton said he was "very gratified" by Blair's support, adding that "people who stand up and say things that they believe, when it would be just as easy to walk away, show a certain kind of character."

Clinton masterfully fielded questions, displaying neither strain nor anger. The

Oprah hauled her talk show to Texas to 'face courtroom, defend my name'

AMARILLO (AP) — Oprah Winfrey could have written a check for the $10.3 million Texas cattlemen are suing her for in a slander case the way most of us pay for groceries or a tank of gas.

But in three days of testimony that concluded Thursday, Ms. Winfrey attempted to show jurors why she didn't settle, why she hauled her talk show to the Texas Panhandle and made guests like Patrick Swayze and Garth Brooks fly to Amarillo.

"I felt it was important to be here to face this courtroom and the jurors and to defend my name," said Ms. Winfrey. "It's the most painful thing I've ever experienced.

■ Today in court/10A

"In the end, all you have is your reputation."

Ms. Winfrey, who invited poet and friend Maya Angelou to Amarillo to be "my rock" during her testimony, has wrapped herself in the First Amendment and proved to be an almost impossible witness for the cattlemen's attorneys to make points against.

Texas Rangers Capt. Barry Caver on Friday answered questions about the suspect in the robbery of Glasscock County Bank.

Officials search for bank hold-up suspect considered 'dangerous'

By Rick Lopez
Staff Writer

GARDEN CITY — Authorities on Friday continued their search for a Houstonian wanted in connection with a Monday morning hold-up at Glasscock County Bank.

Texas Department of Public Safety officials identified the man as 23-year-old Peter Howard Rasmussen III, who used to live at 12633 Memorial Drive in Houston. He is 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighs 235 pounds. He has brown eyes and brown hair.

Arrest warrants for Rasmussen were filed Thursday evening at the Howard County District Attorney's Office, Texas Ranger Capt. Barry Caver said. The suspect, he noted, is armed and dangerous.

Rasmussen is sought on charges of aggravated robbery and aggravated assault, both first-degree felony offenses.

The charges stem from a series of events that occurred Monday in this town with fewer than 300 residents. According to little head turns that made her shiny black hair bounce — a trademark of hers that gives the impression everything in life is a surprise — Ms. Winfrey looked directly at jurors the way she does her studio audiences while saying she didn't have an anti-beef agenda on an April 1996 show on mad cow disease.

"If I wanted to do an anti-beef show, as I'm being accused of, I didn't have to invite any guests" representing the beef industry on the show, she said. She invited two.

To stress her points, rather than raising her voice, she simply moved closer to the microphone on the witness stand. She said talk shows are forums for opinionated debate, not TV news magazines like "60 Minutes."

But mostly she expressed the self-confidence that some 20 million viewers of her talk show and audiences of her movies, such as "The Color Purple," have come to expect.

As her testimony wore on, it became clear that Ms. Winfrey struggled at times to separate her bigger-than-life persona as talk show host from that of a woman on trial facing her first slander lawsuit.

While Ms. Winfrey is aware that ticket lines to her shows in Amarillo begin forming at 4 a.m., she also has seemed to try to downplay her star status in front of the eight-woman, four-man jury plucked from a hard-working, pickup-driving, steak-eating town where the only bragging allowed is by Texans.

When a producer on her show testified about the hierarchy at Ms. Winfrey's Harpo Productions, he jokingly said the only person Oprah answers to "is God." Jurors responded with stone faces and the talk show host shrank in her chair in embarrassment.

When she first took the stand, she was tentative, thoughtful and her light moments seemed genuine.

When she acknowledged that Jerry Springer's talk show is beating her ratings in New Orleans, Coyne responded, "And you don't like that do you?"

"Well, Jerry has his show and I have mine," she said in an obvious attempt to bite her tongue.

As she gained confidence on the stand, she seemed to go into full talk show host mode, rebuffing Coyne and angering U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson by putting her hands on her forehead and saying things like "I've already answered that" and "that calls for speculation" — objections her attorneys should make.

On several occasions, Ms. Winfrey looked to the jury box for validation of her combative statements and found jurors unmoved and not looking in her direction.

Legal observers of the trial say Ms. Winfrey completely dismantled the cattlemen's lawsuit during her testimony and that there's a real chance Judge Robinson will dismiss the case after the plaintiffs finish their presentation.

But Ms. Winfrey, who unsuccessfully tried to have the case moved to Dallas, is in the heart of cattle country, leaving a dismissal or even a jury judgment in her favor in doubt.

"Cattle pays the bills around here and this jury doesn't look very starstruck," said one trial observer who asked not to be identified.

But the town does. Ms. Winfrey has been the hottest ticket and often the hottest topic in Amarillo. People have been sporting T-shirts, buttons, banners, and caps proclaiming "Amarillo Loves Oprah."

Other views have also been given voice on flashy caps and T-shirts that declare; "The only mad cow in Texas is Oprah."

If the jury finds against Ms. Winfrey, her attorneys will appeal, and some believe the case could determine the constitutional fate of so-called "veggie libel laws" in a handful of states, including Texas.

The statute, which Ms. Winfrey is being sued under, protects agricultural products from defamatory remarks.

INTERN: Clinton decries investigative leaks

(From 1A)

president jovially injected humor into the question-and-answer session on three occasions.

Clinton decried investigative leaks that have flooded the news media with daily reports based upon unnamed sources.

Barely five hours later, Clinton's personal lawyer, David Kendall, threatened to take independent counsel Kenneth Starr's prosecution team to federal court for allegedly leaking secret grand jury testimony.

Kendall, saying leaks had "reached an intolerable point," accused Starr's office of "selectively releasing both information and falsehoods in an attempt to pressure, manipulate and intimidate witnesses and possible witnesses."

Kendall said he would "seek judicial relief from these tactics, including contempt sanctions, as soon as practicable."

Kendall made his accusations after the Friday editions of The New York Times and The Washington Post reported that Clinton had summoned his private secretary, Betty Currie, to discuss his contacts with Lewinsky before Currie's appearance before Starr's grand jury.

Starr said he was "very concerned" over the apparent leak of grand jury testimony, adding: "If there was an act of unprofessional activity, I am confident we will find it out."

Food Bank gets $5,000 donation

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Texas Family of Philip Morris Cos. Friday presented the West Texas Food Bank with a $5,000 grant that will be used to purchase meat for hungry residents of the 22-county Permian Basin area.

West Texas Food Bank Executive Director Dolly Neff said the grant will be used to purchase 14,600 pounds of chicken, turkey and ham lunch meat. The food bank's receiving charities will take 20 to 50 cases of meat at a time, she said.

"Many of these agencies locally are providing meals for 35 to 100 to 200 families a week. The lunch meat is especially good for children's lunches or for children's' snacks after school because there's no (cooking) involved. And meat is a premium product as far as nutrition is concerned," she said.

The check was presented by Cliff Amos, manager of community affairs for the Texas Family of Philip Morris Cos. — which includes Kraft, General Foods, Philip Morris and Miller Brewing — on behalf of the company's Fighting Hunger in Texas project that was launched in 1996.

"We've been doing this program for a couple of years, though we've been contributing to food banks for a couple of decades," Amos said. "I feel these organizations are very special because I see volunteers and a small paid staff working effectively together in an efficient operation, putting food on the table of those who are hungry, and it doesn't get much more important than that."

He went on to note that a study in Texas found that 90 percent of the state's residents have confidence in a local food bank and at the same time underscored the need for communication and cooperation between the state's food banks.

Ms. Neff said the check from Philip Morris should come in time to qualify for a matching grant from the Feinstein Foundation in Rhode Island. The foundation has launched a "$1 Million Challenge To Fight Hunger" program, pledging to match — up to $1 million — donations collected by food banks, food pantries and soup kitchens across the nation between Feb. 4 and Feb. 14.

Philip Morris is aided in the program by the Texas Association of Second Harvest Food Banks, comprised of 22 major food banks across the state. Lori Kachner, with the association, said Philip Morris also gave identical grants to food banks in Laredo, which bought milk; in Tyler, which bought beef stew; and in Corpus Christi, which bought tuna and other canned meats.

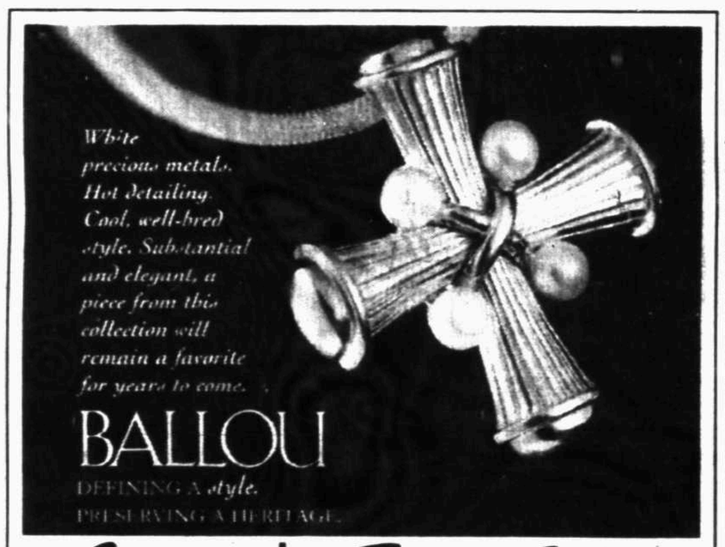

She added that Philip Morris also gave the association a $15,000 grant to help with its work with the food banks and other hunger relief programs, such as the Texas Fresh Approach program operated with the state's prison system. Under the program, prisoners grow produce on surplus prison land and ship the produce to food banks for distribution. The association also helps coordinate communication between its member food banks.

"We're there to do what we can to assist on a state-wide basis," Ms. Kachner said, and offered praise for Philip Morris' support. "Philip Morris actually has a lot of food products. People mostly associate them with tobacco, but they do a lot of good."

STRIKE: Air power would be central component

a statement from the U.S. Naval Forces Central Command at 5th Fleet headquarters on the Persian Gulf island nation of Bahrain.

Maj. David Lapan, a Marine Corps spokesman at the Pentagon, said one pilot was flown to the aircraft carrier USS George Washington, from which the planes operated, and the other was airlifted to the British carrier HMS Invincible.

The George Washington and Invincible are part of the force being assembled in the Persian Gulf region as Clinton and Blair await final diplomatic efforts to break a stalemate in which Saddam has refused U.N. inspectors unfettered access to what may be key weapons sites.

Lapan said there was no immediate explanation for the collision of the planes, which can perform air-to-air combat or ground attack missions and are part of the VMFA 251 fighter squadron based at Beaufort, S.C.

Air power would be a central, and perhaps the only, component of a U.S.-British military move against Iraq. Although some analysts have raised doubts about whether an air-only strategy could really dent Iraq's ability to manufacture weapons of mass destruction, Clinton expressed confidence.

"Could any military action, if all else fails, substantially reduce or delay Saddam Hussein's capacities to develop weapons of mass destruction and to deliver them on his neighbors? The answer to that, I am convinced, is yes," Clinton said.

Clinton seemed to rule out a broader assault designed to topple Saddam, as has been suggested by Republicans in Congress.

"I don't believe we need to refight the Gulf War," Clinton said. "It's history. It happened. That's the way it is. I don't believe we need to get into a direct war with Iraq over the leadership of the country. Do I think the country would be better served if it had a different leader? Of course, I do. That's not the issue."

Clinton and Blair stressed that even though China, France and Russia have raised objections to military action against Iraq, there is unanimity on the need for Saddam to comply with U.N. resolutions requiring his full cooperation with weapons inspectors.

Clinton made clear he was unimpressed by the objections to military action raised by Russian President Boris Yeltsin and French President Jacques Chirac.

"I will continue to talk with President Yeltsin and President Chirac and others, but consider the alternative," Clinton said. "After all, this man (Saddam) is the only repeat offender around with chemical weapons. He used them on his own people. He used them on the Iranians. And I believe it's a very serious thing. And I think that the American people will understand that."

OPEN: Midori Ito kindles flame to kick off Olympics country Japan entered last.

(From 1A)

The 50,000-strong crowd's applause rose when the U.S. team marched in, wearing long slate-blue parkas and dark brimmed hats — a good buffer for the 34-degree weather.

"It's just so exciting," figure skater Tara Lipinski said, smiling. "I hope I can remember it forever."

The Olympic flame, contained in a cauldron designed to resemble a traditional Japanese bonfire, was kindled by Japanese figure skater Midori Ito to the strains of "Un bel di" from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly." Relay runners carried the torch into the stadium and up the steps to Ito before an automatic platform lifted her to ignite the cauldron.

The opening of the 18th Winter Games blended the Asian classical with the global modern. A 17th-century bell tolled at Nagano's Zenkoji Temple. Traditional Japanese music melted into an Andrew Lloyd Webber composition.

Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, called on the nations participating to "observe the Olympic truce" and "foster international dialogue and diplomatic solutions to all conflicts, in an effort to bring human tragedies to an end."

"I sincerely hope that these games from the heart will achieve such splendid heights that they will ... be talked of for generations to come," said Eishiro Saito, president of the Nagano Olympic Organizing Committee.

The emperor, the son of a man who for many symbolized Japan's 20th-century war machine, joined the call for an end to global conflict and pronounced the games open.

But events elsewhere hinted at a harsher reality. Security was tightened around Nagano earlier this week after a terrorist attack on Tokyo's international airport. And in Washington, President Clinton mulled whether to use military force against Iraq — an option Olympic organizers have implored him to avoid while the 18th Winter Games are in progress.

The opening ceremony came 102 years after the first modern Olympics were held in Athens. The first Winter Games came 28 years later.

In addition to peace, the games offer several themes — banning land mines, showcasing technology and promoting environmental responsibility.

Japanese music wailed as eight two-ton wooden pillars rose to point skyward and purify the games. Sumo wrestlers marched onto the dais, chests bare in the February air. Leading them: Akebono, Japan's grand sumo champion, or "yokozuna," who performed a painstaking ritual designed to cast away evil spirits.

Children swarmed across the stage, dancing in brown straw gowns to mystical music before casting off outer layers for white tunics within and becoming "yukinko," or snow children. They sang Andrew Lloyd Webber's song "When Children Rule the World."

Technology was showcased during a performance of "Ode to Joy," from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. A system tailored to eliminate the moments-long delay typical of conventional satellite transmissions allowed Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor Seiji Ozawa to lead a real-time, intercontinental performance of choirs.

They sang from Berlin's Brandenburg Gate to Sydney's famed opera house, from the U.N. General Assembly Hall in New York to the gates of the Forbidden City in Beijing and the shores near Cape Town, South Africa.

At ceremony's end, just before five jets streaked crisply across the sky, dove-shaped balloons soared into the winter air, each carrying a message from a Nagano child.

OBITUARIES

Alonzo Galindo

Beloved son, brother and friend, Alonzo "Chango" Martinez Galindo passed away on February 5, 1998, in his home surrounded by his loving family.

Alonzo was born on October 19, 1956, in Ojinaga, Chihuahua, Mexico, to Rosa and Gaspar Galindo. One of nine children, he was nicknamed, Chango, as a child because of the many ways he used to climb on a horse. Alonzo attended Trinity School of Midland and graduated from Lee High School in 1976. His great love of horses and the guidance of his father led him into a career training and playing polo horses.

Alonzo's incredible talent with horses was recognized with the formation of the first polo team at Trinity School. He and his friends later formed the first Lee High School Polo Team. They went on to win the prestigious National Interscholastic Polo Tournament in 1974 and 1975. This was the first time the tournament had ever been won by a public school team. Alonzo also played with his brothers on a team known as the "Flying Galindos" and captured the elusive National President's Cup Trophy in 1981. In his lifetime, he played polo throughout the United States. Many of the horses that he trained have gone on to win Best Playing Pony honors in major U.S. tournaments.

Alonzo was an important fixture of the Midland Polo Club for over 30 years. It will never be the same without him. His talent with horses was matched only by his talent for working with people. His contagious smile and outspoken nature had a way of putting those around him at ease. He shared his love of horses with many, taking time to teach others how to ride and care for them. There was not a thing he wouldn't do for a friend, old or new. Those who were able to share part of Alonzo's life usually have a funny story to tell of this popular polo player.

Alonzo fought a long and courageous battle with cancer. At Alonzo's request, his youngest brother, Mario, returned to Midland to manage his health care for the duration of his illness. Alonzo lived much longer than had first been anticipated, aided by the love and support of his family (especially his mother; brother, Mario; and sister, Rosie) and many friends. The calls of support from friends and acquaintances across the country have been phenomenal. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

Alonzo and his family are indebted to Hospice of Midland, particularly Kenny, for the care and support they received. Donations can be made to Hospice of Midland in the name of "Galindo Memorial." The family hopes to initiate a hospice awareness program for the Hispanic community.

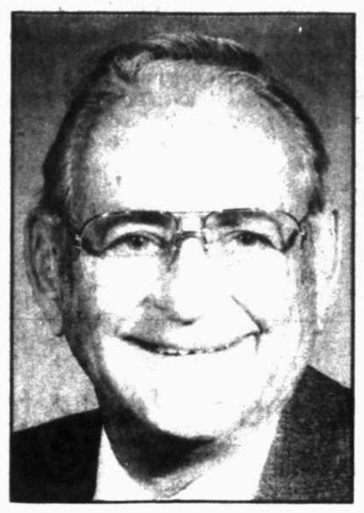

He was preceded in death by his father, Gaspar O. Galindo, in 1986.

He is survived by his mother, Rosa Martinez Galindo of Midland, Texas; brothers, Calletano M. Galindo and Mario Galindo of Midland, Texas, Carlos M. Galindo of Thermal,Calif., and Hector M. Galindo of West Palm Beach, Fla.; sisters, Marie E. Galindo and Rosa E. Valles of Midland, Texas, Irene Bustamante and Josie Melendez of Odessa, Texas; 17 nephews and nieces; and three great-nephews and great-nieces.

Mass will be celebrated by Father Jerome Burnet, O.M.I., on Monday, Feb. 9, 1998, at 10 a.m. at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery. Arrangements are by Ellis Funeral Home in Midland.

Pallbearers will be brothers, Calletano, Carlos, Hector and Mario; nephews, Eddie Valles, Steven Valles, Michael Bustamante; and niece, Amy Galindo.

He will be escorted by a Polo Honor Guard of close friends and fellow players. Wilburn Ray

Services for Wilburn Gerald (W.G.) Ray will be at 1 p.m. Saturday, at Midland Bible Church, North A Street, with Pastor Fred Lybrand officiating. Interment will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

W.G. died Thursday, Feb. 5, 1998, at the Red Rose Christian Home.

He was born April 3, 1919, in Livingston, Tennessee. He served in the Navy during World War II in the Pacific Theater and in Washington, D.C., with the U.S. Navy Hydrographic Office, where he met Ruth. They were married November 7, 1945. She preceded him in death in 1989. They moved to Midland in 1945, where he worked as a draftsman for Sun Oil Company for a few years and retired in April of 1981, after 15 years with Arco Petroleum.

W.G. and Ruth were active in the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy Scouts of America, Texas Muzzle Loading Rifle Association, American Rifle Association. W.G. was a 32nd degree Mason and a member of the Shriners and Scottish Rite. He was especially fond of the Masonic and Shriner organizations in their care of children. His personal involvement in being instrumental in getting care for children meant a lot, but the two most special were his oldest granddaughter, Sherry, and his youngest granddaughter, Jadie.

Survivors include three sons, Dr. Bobby G. (Skipper) Ray of Midland, Kenneth G. Ray of Union City, Calif., Horace T. Ray of Petersburg, Va.; one sister, Sue Smith of Anderson, Ind.; four brothers, Clifford Ray of Bowling Green, Ky., Charles Ray of Livingston, Tenn., Terry Ray of Charleston, S.C., and Robert Ray of Cookville, Tenn.; six grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Children, 2222 Welborn, Dallas, Texas 75219 or Red Rose Christian Home of Midland, 712 West Dengar, Midland, Texas 79705.

Pallbearers will be Keith Wood, Bruce Moore, O.D. Bretches, Paul Harzke, Ray Allen and Don Fisler.

Honorary pallbearers will be Pat McMullan, David Holster, Johnnie Corter, Henry Patke, Thomas Smith, Paul Moore, Ray Terry, Kenneth Wood and Scooter Jenkins.

Amanda Martin

Funeral services for Amanda Renee Grimes Martin have been scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 7, 1998, at West Kentucky Street Baptist Church with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Interment will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Serving as pallbearers will be Ben Martin, Tim Martin, Blu Cartmell, Leon Coonce, Johnny Grimes and Kelly Williams. Honorary pallbearers will be Clarence Martin, Michael Lechwar and Christopher Lechwar.

The family requests memorials be directed to Amanda Martin Fund, c/o First State Bank, Midland, Texas.

DEATH NOTICES

Lottie Courtney

Lottie E. Courtney, 93, of Midland, died Wednesday, Feb. 4.

Services are to be 2 p.m. today, Feb. 7, at First Baptist Church in Wills Point with the Revs. Garland Whitmire and Donald Tisdale officiating. Burial is to follow at Rose Cemetery in Wills Point under the direction of Hershel LyBrand Funeral Home.

She was born Aug. 14, 1904, in Tennessee.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Albert Courtney, in 1959; one granddaughter; two brothers and six sisters.

Survivors include three sons, Dr. Albert K. Courtney of Midland, Maston C. Courtney of Amarillo and Jerry D. Courtney of Clarendon; a daughter, Elaine Paniszczyn of Midland; twin sister, Claudia Crates of Wills Point; five granddaughters, five grandsons, one great-grandson; four great-granddaughters; numerous nieces and nephews; and two stepgrandsons.

The family suggests memorials to be made to the Kelsey Logan Angel Fund, c/o Pam Logan, P.O. Box 5072, Midland 79704.

Russell Gifford

Former Midland mayor, Russell "Rusty" Gifford, died Thursday, Feb. 5, at a local hospital.

Services are to be 1 p.m. Monday, Feb. 9, at First Baptist Church with the Rev. Gary Dyer officiating. Burial is to follow at Resthaven Memorial Park with Masonic rites being performed by members of Midland Lodge No. 623. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Family visitation has been scheduled from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 8, at the funeral home.

He was born Feb. 27, 1911, in Hickman, Ky.

He joined the Texas Department of Public Safety after being with the Amarillo Police Department from 1941 to 1945. He moved from Pecos to Midland in 1945 and served as mayor in the late 1940s. He worked for the city of Midland in 1960 and for Grant Oil Tool and Tri-Service. He was a member of First Baptist Church, Midland Jaycees, Downtown Lions Club and was a lifetime member of the Midland Masonic Lodge No. 623, AF & AM.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Marie Sullivan, in 1970.

Survivors include his daughter, Phyllis Anne Gifford of Midland and several nieces and nephews.

Matias Ruiz

POLICE REPORTS

Accidental death

Autopsy reports from a Lubbock pathologist confirmed that a 22-year-old Midland man died Thursday from accidental electrocution, officials said.

The autopsy report on Roy Brito was delivered to officials Friday.

Brito, an employee of Lear Corp., 4 S. Industrial Loop, was repairing a 480-volt thermulator when he was shocked Thursday evening. A thermulator is used as a heating device in plastic-melting machines, explained Midland County Fire Marshall Dale Little.

"Somehow, he got crossed up in there and it electrocuted him," he said. "He could have got his hand caught on the fuse box."

Brito was taken to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, where he was later pronounced dead by Justice of the Peace George Zimmerman.

Little noted that Brito's death is an accidental death. The Occupational Health and Safety Administration will be conducting their own investigation into the incident, he said.

Drug sweep

LUBBOCK — A Midland man was one of 21 people arrested this week in connection with a three-year narcotics smuggling investigation.

Rudolfo "Rudy" Olivas, 30, was arrested and taken to the Midland County Detention Center Thursday in connection with the investigation. He was held there Friday without bond.

U.S. Customs Special Agents in San Angelo said Olivas was named in a nine-count indictment charging him with conspiracy to import narcotics and conspiracy with intent to distribute narcotics.

Most of the other people arrested in the same investigation are from San Angelo. A few others were from San Antonio and Dallas. Their ages ranged from 19 to 41, though most were in their 20s.

The majority of the suspects were scheduled to make an appearance in federal court Friday or next week, Customs officials said.

"Our investigation revealed this organization was responsible for smuggling multi-kilo loads of cocaine and multi-hundred kilos of marijuana into the United States from Mexico," San Angelo Customs Agent Mike Valva said.

Four guns and $6,000 in cash were recovered in connection with the arrests.

BANK: $5,000 reward offered for Rasmussen's arrest

(From 1A)

DPS officials, the incident started when the suspect abandoned a late-model pickup he'd stolen in Houston.

After ditching the vehicle, Rasmussen —who was armed with a sawed-off shotgun and stun gun — walked to the Glasscock County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, where he allegedly shot workers twice with a stun gun, Caver said.

The shock did not cause any life-threatening injuries, but it hurt the employees.

"It releases a high-voltage electric charge that temporarily paralyzes people. It's like sticking a finger in a electrical socket," Caver explained. "That's where the aggravated assault charges stem from. I took photographs of their wounds, and the shock caused welts. They all said they were hurting real bad."

The county employees were obeying all of Rasmussen's commands, but he shocked them anyway, Caver said.

"They were all laying flat on their stomachs, posing no threat to the guy at all," Caver said. "I guess he just did it out of meanness."

Then man stayed at the county office and waited for the bank to open. A few minutes after 9 a.m., he walked in, demanded money and locked the bank employees in a vault. He left the scene in a white 1996 Jeep Cherokee belonging to one of the customers.

Surveillance video shows the man leaving the bank in a uniform from Advanced Security of Houston. His former employers have provided authorities with his fingerprints, which they've matched with prints found at the bank.

San Angelo FBI instructed the bank and officers not to release the amount of money that was taken. The Associated Press received an unconfirmed report saying that the amount was close to $100,000.

On Thursday, witnesses and victims identified Rasmussen in a photo line-up.

Two Ohio men were suspects in the case at one time, but were dismissed from the investigation. They were also employees of Advanced Security, but officials aren't sure if they knew Rasmussen.

Officials with the Glasscock County Sheriff's Office, FBI and Texas Rangers have gathered more clues as the investigation unfolds. Authorities have recovered some of Rasmussen's personal belongings, but said they could not elaborate on what exactly was discovered.

"The items will tell us a little more about him. We're trying to locate some of his acquaintances in Houston. Hopefully they'll be able to shed some light on where he's going and where he's been," Caver said. "The Rangers in Houston are checking out different addresses (the suspect) has been staying at. We're assuming that the end of January was the last time anyone's heard from him."

Rasmussen is originally from Florida and moved to Houston in 1993, Caver noted. The suspect does not have a prior criminal history.

Why the suspect chose to commit the offense in Garden City — which is 35 miles east of Midland — remained unknown as of Friday.

"We're not sure if this is a random crime, or something that was planned. We don't know the motive at this point in time," Caver said Friday.

The getaway vehicle, which had not been located, could give authorities a general direction that Rasmussen was taking.

"I feel like he's out of the area, possibly out of state. There's also a possibility that he stole another set of license plates," Caver noted. "If someone recovered the vehicle some place, that would tell us where he moved."

A teletype message with the suspect's information has been sent to DPS offices across the state. The same information was also entered into a nationwide database, Caver added.

Meanwhile, the Texas Bankers Foundation in Austin is offering a $5,000 reward for Rasmussen's arrest and conviction, said spokeswoman Dawn Duplantier. Calls can be made to the Texas Ranger office at 681-1220 or to any other law enforcement agency.

"The foundation is offering this reward in an effort to deter criminal acts against Texas commercial banks and their customers," Ms. Duplantier said.

She explained that the Federal Deposit Insurance Company does not insure the bank's money if it is lost during a criminal offense. However, each bank has to purchase its own bank insurance policy for these situations, she noted.

At the time of the robbery, the Glasscock County Bank met security requirements under the Bank Protection Act.

"Bank have to do what they can to make sure that their customers and employees are OK," Ms. Duplantier said.

The number of reported bank robberies across the nation has increased over the last decade. Texas is one of the states with a growing number of hold-ups, she said.

U.S. concedes Marine pilot was flying below approved altitude

By Vanla Grandi
Associated Press

TRENTO, Italy — A Marine jet that brought down a cable car loaded with skiers was flying "well below" the approved altitude of 500 feet, the U.S. military acknowledged Friday — another day of clashes with Italians investigating the deadly accident

The Italian prosecutor leading the civilian inquiry complained the Americans waited two days before handing over a data recorder from the plane. He said some data may have been lost when the device was removed from the plane.

All 20 people aboard the gondola died Tuesday when the low-flying EA-6B Prowler sliced through the car's cable, sending them plunging about 300 feet to their deaths at a ski resort in the northern Dolomites.

Italian and U.S. authorities have been at odds over the jet's flight path and altitude, amid a public outcry over what one Italian newspaper called "Rambo" U.S. pilots.

Defense Minister Beniamino Andreatta told Parliament that the plane flew under the cable and was nearly six miles off its approved course. Prime Minister Romano Prodi was quoted Friday as saying the pilot had clearly violated Italian law.

The U.S. Air Force base at nearby Aviano issued a statement Friday saying the plane was "well below the approved minimum altitude" of 500 feet when it severed the cable.

It said the ski lift was within the plane's flight path, a corridor 10 nautical miles wide, but "not on the center line of the flight track."

Sgt. Tom Adams, a spokesman at Aviano, said that "an aircraft doesn't necessarily have to stay on the center line of the approved flight path. It can vary some, depending on the terrain involved."

Italian prosecutor Francantonio Granero said the plane's "mission data recorder" was turned over only late Thursday.

Granero said the U.S. military had been asked earlier for the "black box," the plane's flight data recorder, and was told it did not exist.

He said U.S. officials did not disclose that the plane had a mission data recorder; that was revealed by an American technician when investigators took another look at the plane Thursday night, Granero said.

A Marine spokesman at Aviano, Sgt. Tom Adams, said the device given Italian authorities is similar to a flight data recorder found on commerical airlines, and records some information about altitude, speed, headings and latitude-longitude.

It does not record conversations inside the cockpit or with the control tower. However, a control tower tape of communications has been turned over to Italian authorities, Adams said.

Granero said some data may be missing from the recorder.

"The pilot took it out of the plane before turning off an electrical circuit, so some data could be destroyed," he said, adding that he was told that was not standard procedure.

Adams disputed that account. He said maintenance workers, not the pilot, removed the device after the plane had landed and its crew had gotten out.

The workers "obviously knew the aircraft came in a damaged condition," Adams said. "They apparently did not know" about the cable car accident, he said.

Italian lawyers for the pilot, Capt. Richard Ashby of Mission Viejo, Calif., and his three crew members said Friday that Italian prosecutors had no jurisdiction to prosecute the four, under a NATO treaty.

Cable car accident brings out anti-Americanism in Italy

By Daniel J. Wakin
Associated Press

ROME — Anti-Americanism and anti-military sentiment have boiled to the surface here since a Marine Corps jet brought down a cable car in northern Italy, killing 20 people.

A RAI state television news program headlined the story "American Evil." Opinion-makers have cited the "arrogance of the world's only superpower." Talk show guests, particularly leftist party members, have demanded the closing of U.S. bases in Italy and an Italian exit from NATO.

Some observers have taken exception, saying that similar incidents involving Italians have not aroused the same ire. But that has done little to quiet the anger.

President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro, widely viewed as Italy's moral conscience, echoed the prevailing mood when he linked the tragedy to the execution of Karla Faye Tucker in Texas. Both, he said, pointed to a reckless disregard for human life.

Speaking Wednesday at a ceremony in Salerno, southern Italy, he said it would be "terrible" to think the pilot of the U.S. plane was playing a "game."

Then, with disgust in his voice, the Italian president said that television reports about Tucker's execution had noted that some spectators outside the prison had cheered after she was pronounced dead.

"And we are on the threshold of 2,000 years after Christ!" Scalfaro exclaimed.

The United States has its defenders.

Commentator Pierluigi Battista noted in Turin's La Stampa newspaper that Aviano air base, where the Marine EA-6B Prowler was based, also served as a vanguard for efforts by the United States and NATO to settle a a European war, in Bosnia.

Amid widespread cries to punish the pilot, the dean of Italian journalists, Indro Montanelli, said in Milan's Corriere della Sera that no Italian authorities suffered consequences after three Italian jets collided in 1988 at an air show at the U.S. air base in Ramstein, Germany, killing 69 people. The three pilots also were killed.

Others recalled that an appeals court cleared an Italian pilot whose fighter jet crashed into a school and killed 12 youngsters eight years ago.

The cable car deaths recalled other tense moments in U.S.-Italian relations.

After the Achille Lauro cruise ship was hijacked by PLO terrorists in 1985, U.S. warplanes forced an Egyptian jet to land in Sicily.

U.S. and Italian soldiers confronted each other on the air strip, and the United States eventually agreed to turn the hijackers over to Italy for prosecution. Italy then let the hijacking's reputed mastermind, Mohammed Abbas, slip out of the country. Washington was furious.

Also, feeling slighted in Western diplomatic efforts to bring peace to Bosnia, Italy barred U.S. Stealth bombers several years ago from the Aviano air base.

Italy has traditionally had a complicated relationship with the United States, its main liberator in World War II, a role model for popular culture and the promised land for millions of Italian emigrants.

Earthquake jolts northeast Afghanistan; high casualties reported

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A powerful earthquake touched off landslides and toppled mud and brick homes from hillsides in Afghanistan's remote northeast, officials said Friday. The death toll ranged from 2,150 to 4,000.

Reports emerging from the isolated northern province of Takhar indicated that the poor farming area lost as many as 15,000 homes in Wednesday's quake. The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colorado said the quake had a magnitude of 6.1.

"The hills collapsed into each other, making a huge crater in the earth," said Sher Mohammed, a spokesman for the military alliance that controls the area.

The greatest destruction was at a junction between the Hindu Kush and Pamir mountain ranges, he told The Associated Press by satellite telephone.

Rubble buried thousands of mud and brick homes perched on hillsides. Tremors rocked the area for hours and heavy snow hindered rescue efforts. Weather may prevent U.N. and Red Cross teams from reaching the devastation at the epicenter until Sunday — if at all.

Rescue teams pulled thousands of bodies from the rubble, and Mohammed said the death toll was expected to rise beyond 4,000.

Other officials and reports indicated the death toll was lower.

The International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies had a "very provisional" death toll of 2,150, based on ihformation from Red Crescent teams in the country, spokesman Charles Evans said from Geneva late Friday.

Radio Shariat — run by the Afghan government — reported the earthquake on television Friday and said 3,350 people were killed. Television reports from neighboring Iran put the combined death and injury toll at around 1,000.

Aid workers in neighboring Pakistan could not confirm casualty figures in the sparsely populated region. U.N. and Red Cross officials in the Pakistani capital, Islamabad, scrambled Friday to arrange relief teams to travel to the Rustaq district, 150 miles north of the Afghan capital, Kabul.

Relief efforts were further complicated by war for control of the region. The area is controlled by ousted Afghan President Burhanuddin Rabbani, who leads an alliance opposed to the Taliban Islamic army that governs the remaining 85 percent of Afghanistan.

The Taliban is locked in battles with the northern opposition alliance on at least three different fronts north of Kabul and in western Afghanistan.

Taliban jets dropped cluster bombs Friday on Tahkar's provincial capital of Taloqan, 25 miles south of the area hardest hit, Mohammed said.

Taliban supreme leader Mullah Omar ordered his troops to stop all fighting in the area, the state-run Associated Press of Pakistan reported from Islamabad.

Pakistani Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif said his country would mobilize relief supplies for the quake victims, a separate APP report said.

Planes are unable to land at the unpaved airstrip in the nearby provincial capital of Taloqan, and U.N. officials are considering flying in emergency aid by helicopter.

A team traveling by road is not likely to reach the area before Sunday and was uncertain whether they would be able to cross snowy mountain passes. Another U.N. team will embark simultaneously from the Tajik capital of Dushanbe, 110 miles to the north of Rustaq. The Red Cross was sending out a team from Kabul on Saturday.

In 1991, an earthquake with a magnitude of 6.5 killed an estimated 900 people in the remote mountainous regions of Pakistan and Afghanistan, causing hundreds of millions of dollars in damage.

Hundreds dead, thousands homeless from flooding, landslides in Peru

ICA, Peru (AP) — For a week, Miguel Eggart and his family have lived waist-deep in a foul soup of floodwater, sewage and floating garbage in their house in Ica, a desert city devastated by El Niño.

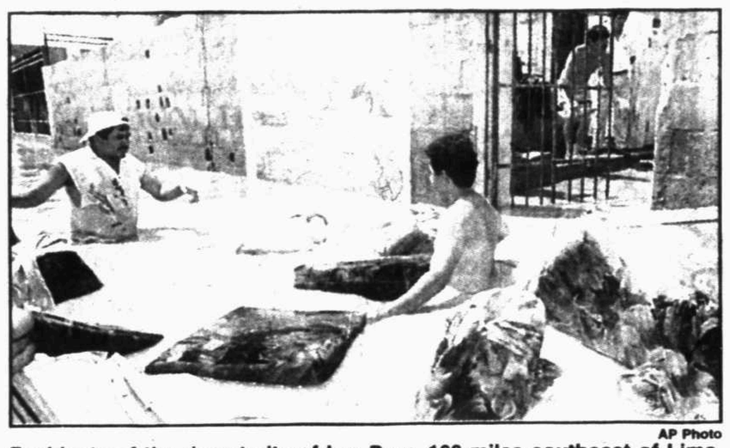

The Eggarts are not alone. Floods and mudslides brought on by the weather phenomenon have killed nearly 200 people and left tens of thousands homeless in Peru and neighboring Ecuador, the countries hardest hit by El Niño's onslaught.

Experts now fear an explosion of diseases, even epidemics, as mosquitoes and bacteria spread in stagnant floodwaters and destroyed towns.

In Peru, twin outbreaks of cholera and an unidentified fever in areas battered by El Niño have killed at least 27 people and infected hundreds, health authorities say.

In Ecuador, health officials say they fear a scourge of the bacterial disease leptospirosis, which thrives in stagnant water. In recent days, the disease has killed eight people and sickened 18 others in areas hit by El Niño.

"If the water is not cleared quickly, epidemics will come. The children are coughing and getting skin infections. A dead animal floated into our house the other day," said Eggart, a truck driver who lives in the middle-class Ica neighborhood of Santa Maria.

AP Photo

Residents of the desert city of Ica, Peru, 160 miles southeast of Lima, Peru, try to rescue furniture by pushing pieces to higher ground Wednesday. Torrential rains a week ago set off a series of floods and mudslides that submerged 90 percent of Ica. Health authorities fear epidemics as El Nino-provoked flooding and mudslides break sewage lines, force survivors into temporary shelters and make drinking water scarce.

The Eggarts's plight began when torrential rains brought by El Niño set off five successive mudslides in nearby mountains and caused the Ica River to burst its banks.

Floodwaters swept 90 percent of Ica, erasing flimsy shantytowns that had never seen heavy rain and, according to civil defense officials, destroying 14,000 adobe homes.

Four people died in this city of 160,000 people surrounded by desert and located 160 miles southeast of the capital Lima. Fifteen more residents disappeared and tens of thousands fled their homes, sometimes to bleak shelters without electricty or running water.

The flooding in Ica is the worst in the town's history, residents say. In 10 minutes the central plaza filled with muddy water up to waist level, the first time in 400 years floodwater reached the plaza.

Desperate residents grabbed what they could and fled to high ground. Looters sacked abandoned houses, leading many to stay in their flooded houses, waist deep in rancid water or eating and sleeping on their roofs.

Where the water has receded, Ica is coated with a thick layer of dried sludge that the wind sweeps up, creating billowing, blinding dust storms. People walk the streets with rags covering their noses and mouths.

"Thousands of people lost everything. They have no homes to return to when the water recedes. We don't know what to do," said Elka Villa, a volunteer running a shelter with 320 refugees in a dry neighborhood of Ica.

Villa, who has sores spreading on her face and arms that she contracted from the children she cares for, said government help is arriving but it is too little. Refugees have one meal a day and potable water is trucked in.

Eggart said he had to use a pistol to scare off a band of looters who attacked his home.

"We've reverted to the Stone Age in one week," he said.

El Niño is a vast swath of atypically warm water — the current one is one and a half times the size of the continental United States — that settles off Peru's coast every two to seven years, altering weather patterns around the world.

Peru's government has dragged its feet on providing details of damage and casualties, apparently in fear of the political impact on President Alberto Fujimori.

Accompanied by television cameras, Fujimori has raced from disaster to disaster, checking on relief efforts he has personally directed.

Fujimori was booed during a recent trip to Ica, and critics charge he has failed to consult with local authorities about civil defense projects, wanting to put his own stamp on them and take credit.

"It was only when the water was up to our necks that government officials started paying attention to what we said," said Piura Mayor Jose Aguilar, whose city on Peru's northern coast was flooded in January.

Government officials say they used the 1982-1983 El Niño, which devastated northern Peru, as their guide, concentrating El Niño prevention efforts in the north.

But El Niño confounded predictions, battering Peru's neglected southern mountains and deserts as well.

"It took us by surprise," said Energy Minister Daniel Hokama, who led early anti-El Niño civil defense efforts.

Peace Corps volunteer killed in Ivory Coast

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — A Peace Corps volunteer has been attacked and killed in his home, a month before he was scheduled to leave the Ivory Coast, American officials said Friday.

Kevin Leveille, 26, a native of Ventura, Calif., died Thursday in the town of Tanda, near the border with Ghana, said Tom Hart, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Abidjan.

Brendan Daley, a spokesman for the Peace Corps in Washington, D.C., said there had apparently been a robbery in Leveille's home, but it was not immediately clear if it happened at the same time as the killing.

Ivorian police could not be reached for comment.

Officials from the U.S. Embassy flew to the town Friday to retrieve Leveille's body and check on the status of the investigation, Hart said.

"Kevin was an extraordinary volunteer who represented the best traditions of peace corps volunteers — dedication, compassion and commitment," Peace Corps Director Mark Gearan said in a statement.

We want Pooh!

Comments from both sides of the Atlantic on whether the original Winnie the Pooh and his stuffed friends Eeyore, Kanga, Piglet and Tigger should stay in New York or be returned to England

- New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani
  "They are in the capital of the world. They couldn't be in a better place—terrific restaurants, great food, the best theater district in the world."
- Gwyneth Dunwoody, Labor member of British Parliament
  "We want Winnie the Pooh back—and all his friends. This is where they belong, not in some stuffy glass case in New York."
- Malcolm de Selincourt, cousin of the late Christopher Milne, model for Christopher Robin
  "Winnie the Pooh should be in England. His rightful place is here, in the House at Pooh Corner or under the pine trees."
- British Prime Minister Tony Blair
  "I'm sure they're perfectly well looked after where they are."
- Lindsey O'Neill, 5, a New York kindergartner who held the jar of honey that Giuliani brought to the library for Pooh
  Pooh should return to Britain "because it's a long trip. He started there and he came here and he should go back home."
- David Yelland, a Briton and deputy editor of the New York Post
  "I'm sure New Yorkers would happily return Winnie the Pooh if the prime minister agreed to take back the Spice Girls, Liam Gallagher and the Teletubbies."

Ex-teacher returned to prison after being caught with 14-year-old

LeTourneau

SEATTLE (AP) — The former grade school teacher who had sex with a 13-year-old boy and gave birth to his child was sent back to prison for nearly 7 1/2 years Friday after they were caught apparently trying to run away together.

Mary Kay LeTourneau, 35, and the teen-ager were found Tuesday in a parked car with the windows steamed up. Prosecutors said they had $6,200 in cash, men's and infant's clothing and her passport.

Mrs. LeTourneau had gotten out of jail just a month earlier, on the condition that she stay away from the boy, now 14. On Friday, Judge Linda Lau sent her back to prison to serve out the suspended portion of her sentence.

"Within weeks from your release from jail you purposely violated the terms of your agreement," the judge said. "This case is not about a flawed system. This is about an opportunity that you foolishly squandered."

Mrs. LeTourneau stared blankly upon hearing the sentence and said nothing as she was led away in handcuffs. She was under a suicide watch in jail.

Mrs. LeTourneau's lawyer, David Gehrke, pleaded for a six-month jail sentence and additional treatment for her, saying she is sick and "fixated" on the boy.

"Society does not need to be protected from Mary LeTourneau," Gehrke said. "The person who really needs to be protected from Mary LeTourneau is Mary LeTourneau."

Mrs. LeTourneau bit her lower lip and dabbed at her eyes as Gehrke spoke.

Mrs. LeTourneau and the boy met when he was one of her pupils. They began having sex in 1996 after he had advanced to middle school.

In August, she pleaded guilty to child rape and in November was sentenced to six months in jail. With time already served and good behavior, she was out by Jan. 2, on the condition she stay away from minors and undergo three years of sex-offender treatment.

On Friday, prosecutors told the judge that Mrs. LeTourneau apparently had met with the boy on other occasions after she was released from jail, and that they may have been preparing to run away — perhaps with their 9-month-old baby, who is being raised by the boy's mother.

Gehrke said Mrs. LeTourneau never intended to flee. He said she was keeping the $6,200, believed to be from the cashout of her teacher retirement account, because she feared it would be seized in bankruptcy proceedings.

Mrs. LeTourneau is the daughter of John Schmitz, a California state senator who was driven from office in 1983 after it was revealed he fathered two illegitimate children with his mistress.

A conservative who fiercely opposed sex education in public schools, Schmitz was a one-term congressman in the early 1970s.

Oregon homes are slipping into the sea; state won't help

OCEANSIDE, Ore. (AP) — With every wave that slams against the dune, Cheryl Wiley knows her luxury townhouse and dozens more hanging on the edge could go sliding into the sea. But the state of Oregon isn't about to lift a finger to help her or her neighbors.

The panicked homeowners have even offered to pay to have boulders piled at the base of the cliff to stop the erosion, but the state won't allow such measures. And people living outside the exclusive gated community have responded with a collective we-told-you-so.

"We used to think these waves were so beautiful," Wiley said. "Now we look at them in a different way."

Houses falling into the ocean would be a crisis by some states' standards. But Oregonians have been more likely to shrug than sympathize when people build at their peril along the rugged and unpredictable coast. The state for years has prided itself on keeping its beaches public and open, and has been hesitant to wall off one section for a privileged few at the expense of others.

"What did they expect?" asked Lori Carpenter, who lives near the threatened Capes development. "Those homes are built on the local garbage dump and a sand dune. We knew they wouldn't last."

The neat row of 30 threatened townhouses sits atop a huge, grassy dune, towering 150 feet above the pounding waves that are slowly eating away the base of the cliff.

Geologists believe the erosion began during the storms of 1996. When the high tides of El Nino moved in this year, it only compounded the problem.

As the base of the dune eroded, a 2-inch fissure opened up near the top of the bluff last December and quickly grew into an 8-foot gash.

"This is a landslide that has been moving for several hundred years," said Richard Rinne, an engineering geologist hired by Capes homeowners. "I wouldn't have bought on that bluff."

Homeowners agreed to assess themselves $650,000 for emergency measures that included putting up the wall of boulders and pumping water out of the saturated dune. But on Tuesday, the state refused to authorize the work.

Oregon law prohibits rock work on beaches to protect developments built after 1977. The laws came after a boom in beach development and shoreline fortifications simply shifted erosion problems elsewhere.

"It's grim," said Chuck Holliman, a board member with the Capes Homeowners Association. "If the state doesn't let us put in a permanent fix, every home on that bluff will be in danger."

Capes residents, who paid up to $400,000 for their townhomes, are now on their own, scrambling for solutions with no support in sight.

Those in neighboring Netarts and Oceanside who watched with disdain as the complex went up in the early 1990s said they tried to warn developers that the dune — a former landfill — had been shifting for years.

Many of the locals also fought the Capes for fear it would encroach on their cherished small-town charm and their self-proclaimed "land of cheese, trees and ocean breeze."

"It was a beautiful, quiet village," said Elki Powers, a clerk at the Tillamook Library. "The Capes never fit."

Franklin Piacentini, the project's developer, said there was no way to know that six years after the plans were approved by Tillamook County, the beach would be swallowed up.

"We abided by all the requirements," he said. "The county inspected and approved everything we did."

But some homeowners are now pointing to initial engineering studies on the project that said the slope was unstable.

A 1982 report from the developer's consultant recommended the homes be set back by at least 60 feet. The same consultant later changed the recommendation to 10 feet, which was approved by county planners.

"Everything we had told us that this was a very suitable place for building," said Piacentini, who owns a home on the threatened bluff.

Fur flies over Winnie the Pooh

NEW YORK (AP) — Stubbornly refusing to share their toys, politicians on both sides of the Atlantic lost their heads Thursday over a bear of very little brain.

Winnie the Pooh, the lovable, huggable bear whose adventures have delighted children for decades, is at the center of what is rapidly becoming an international incident.

In England, a member of Parliament is demanding the return of the original Winnie the Pooh, who with stuffed friends Eeyore, Kanga, Piglet and Tigger has been on display for years in the New York Public Library.

But New York's pugnacious Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said the stuffed animals, the inspiration for British subject A.A. Milne's children's books, are American now.

"Winnie the Pooh is an example of the very best in immigration," said Giuliani, clutching a jar of honey. "He's in about as nice a place as he can be."

Labor Party legislator Gwyneth Dunwoody, whose one-woman crusade to bring the toys back to England started the hubbub earlier this week, responded: "I am happy to do battle with the mayor of New York, any day he likes."

The gentle jousting spread as far as Washington, where Prime Minister Tony Blair said on ABC's "Good Morning America" that the issue would be "down the agenda" in his talks with President Clinton.

"I'm sure they're perfectly well-looked after where they are," Blair said.

Later, Blair's office issued the following:

"The government's position is we admire the president and the U.S. and we believe they will look after and care for these animals sufficienty for the British people to remain happy that they are well looked after."

Although President Clinton reportedly told Blair it would be "unbearable" to lose Pooh, the State Department refused to be drawn into the fight.

"Far be it from me to ever pooh-pooh an issue of this significance," spokesman James Rubin said. "The U.S. government takes no position on this issue, which involves privately owned assets."

Study concludes strokes are far more common than believed

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Strokes hit about 200,000 more Americans a year than commonly believed, according to a new study that tried to correct previous research by looking at black neighborhoods instead of just well-to-do white communities.

The study, and other research, suggest that about 700,000 Americans a year suffer strokes — or about 40 percent more than the usually accepted estimate — and that the figures could double over the next half-century.

The authors of the new estimate said it more accurately reflects the nation's ethnic diversity as well as the frequency of second and third strokes among stroke survivors.

The additional 200,000 stroke victims are "three to four football stadiums full of people who are having strokes in this country every year," said Dr. Joseph Broderick of the University of Cincinnati, who described the results Friday at a medical conference in Orlando. "That's a lot of people."

The current figure, adopted by the American Heart Association and others, holds that 500,000 Americans suffer new or recurring strokes each year.

This estimate is based on the Framingham Heart Study, which has followed the health of one virtually all-white, middle-class Boston suburb for almost 50 years. The only other long-running look at the incidence of stroke comes from Rochester, Minn., another affluent, overwhelmingly white community.

To come up with an estimate that more accurately reflects the racial and economic mix of the entire country, researchers from the University of Cincinnati looked at all the strokes recorded among the 1.3 million residents of the Cincinnati area in 1993.

The area's black population — 14 percent — and its median income — $31,000 — are similar to those of the United States as a whole.

The study found 288 first-time strokes for every 100,000 people among the area's blacks. When recurrent strokes were counted, there were 411 for every 100,000.

This compared with 179 first-time strokes per 100,000 people among the white residents of Rochester during the late 1980s.

Broderick said that when extrapolated nationally, his findings suggest that Americans suffer about 500,000 first-time strokes and 700,000 total strokes annually.

Another study presented at the meeting by Thomas Taylor, an economist from the University of Iowa, used census data and other studies to calculate the number of strokes likely in the year 2050.

Assuming 400,000 first-time strokes annually now — a bit below the Cincinnati estimate — this study projects that the total will more than double to just over 1 million during the next half-century, even though the population is expected to grow only about 50 percent.

Dr. Michael Walker of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke said the new estimate should be "a wake-up call" of stroke's importance. "I wouldn't be a bit surprised if these numbers are confirmed," he said.

While the risk of stroke is about the same for elderly blacks and whites, it is considerably higher for blacks than whites at younger ages. The reasons for this are thought to include more high blood pressure among blacks, as well as the effects of smoking, obesity, poverty and possibly genetic differences.

Reagan celebrates 87th birthday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan celebrated his 87th birthday Friday with his favorite meal — macaroni-and-cheese — a festive office party and a family gathering to watch the Olympic opening ceremonies.

Amid a cloud of red, white and blue balloons, Reagan was serenaded with a rendition of "Happy Birthday" by Girl Scouts who also gave him some thin mint cookies.

"Is this all for me?" Reagan asked.

Hours earlier, President Clinton signed a bill to change the name of Washington National Airport to Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport.

"As the nation celebrates President Reagan's 87th birthday, we wish him and his family well. He is in our thoughts and prayers," Clinton said in a statement.

Reagan had lunch with his staff and unwrapped a package containing the book "A Shining City: The Legacy of Ronald Reagan," a collection of his speeches that was published Friday.

"It was the first time he'd seen it. He was so excited," Reagan spokeswoman Joanne Drake said.

Reagan doesn't look much different today than he did during his eight years at the White House: the thick thatch of hair (although gray is taking over), the avuncular grin and the friendly wave.

Reagan goes to his Century City office each day and often walks in a park near his home. But he has rarely been seen in public since November 1994, when it was disclosed that he had Alzheimer's disease — the irreversible neurological disorder that destroys the brain's memory cells.

Women-only health clubs protected under new Massachusetts law

BOSTON (AP) — Women who want to tone their bodies without men looking on can now sweat in peace, thanks to a state law signed Friday by the governor.

Not everyone is hailing it as a victory for women, though. The law is opposed by an unlikely coalition of men rebuffed by all-women health clubs, as well as the National Organization for Women.

Gov. Paul Cellucci and backers of the law — which also legalizes all-male health clubs — argue that many women prefer to exercise in private, particularly if they have been physically abused or have had mastectomies.

"There are older women who feel embarrassed or uncomfortable exercising in the presence of men," said state Rep. Doug Petersen, a Democrat who sponsored the bill.

"After all, it's a fairly intimate environment, you're in a semi state of dress," he said. "You're in all sorts of positions that leave women, and men for that matter, that leave you vulnerable."

Massachusetts now joins a handful of states that protect all-female or all-male gyms.

But a lawyer who has been fighting to join the women-only Healthworks club near his home in the city's Back Bay neighborhood, says the club's large glass windows belie the cries for privacy.

And NOW says it works too hard to stamp out inequities to endorse such gender discrimination, even if it favors women.

"Essentially it legalizes discrimination based on gender," said Cheryl Garrity, president of the Massachusetts chapter of NOW.

She said women fought in the 1960s and early '70s to pass legislation to prohibit discrimination in public accommodations based on race, gender, sexual orientation or physical ability — and the new law goes against those efforts.

But Petersen said existing laws make exemptions for bathrooms, the YWCA and all-women institutions of higher education, so why not health clubs?

He said that it's not like when the "old boy networks" had to be broken up because men were making deals on the golf course or in country clubs.

"I don't think there's any evidence that women conspire to get a hold of the marketplace and make deals in the health clubs," he said.

Mark Harrington, co-owner of Healthworks, which has a combined 13,000 women at its four locations, said he thinks NOW betrayed its members by speaking out against the law.

"They need to listen to their constituency," Harrington said.

The industry says 40,000 women in the state belong to more than 30 all-female health clubs.

Women exercising on their lunch break at the Back Bay Healthworks on Friday said they were relieved when they heard the facility would not have to open its doors to men.

Two Missouri teens wanted for killings

VICHY, Mo. (AP) — Authorities searched nationwide Friday for two teen-agers suspected of killing a woman and her two children, dumping their bodies in a farm pond and fleeing in the woman's car.

Longtime residents and police in this tiny southcentral Missouri village say they can't recall another murder.

"Everybody knows everybody and this type of thing just doesn't happen around here," 67-year-old Bernice James said of Vichy, a village of about 120 people 40 miles southeast of Jefferson City.

Found dead Thursday morning in a pond a half-mile from their mobile home were Susan Brouk, 36; daughter Adrian, 12, and son Kyle, 9. The three were last seen Saturday.

Sheriff Doug DiNatale wouldn't comment on how the three died, saying only that "the wounds indicate a violent death."

Mark Anthony Christeson, 18, and Jesse Carter, 17, are charged with three counts each of first-degree murder and one count of armed criminal action. Police said they lived together with some relatives in Vichy and that neither had a criminal record.

DiNatale said "some witness statements" led him to the pair, but wouldn't elaborate. A television and VCR were missing from the Brouk home, but DiNatale wouldn't speculate that robbery was the motive.

Brouk, who was divorced, worked at an electronics manufacturer.

Students who went to school with Adrian and Kyle were meeting with counselors, said Superintendent Jim Porter.

"Some of the kids are afraid to go home tonight," Porter said. "It is very scary to them, because for many of them, this is their first experience with death."

$349 million settlement approved in secondhand-smoke attendant lawsuit

MIAMI (AP) — A judge approved a $349 million settlement of a landmark secondhand-smoke suit Friday, rubber stamping a plan for a medical foundation and opening the door to individual lawsuits by flight attendants.

"This is a turning point," said Stanley Rosenblatt, attorney for the nonsmoking attendants, who settled their class-action suit against the tobacco industry four months into trial last October.

The nation's four biggest cigarette makers must pay the first $100 million installment in April, and researchers at Harvard and elsewhere already have submitted unsolicited proposals for smoking-related studies.

The first individual lawsuit should be filed next week on behalf of the lead plaintiff, American Airlines attendant Norma Broin, whose lung cancer is in remission, Rosenblatt said. Attendants get no money out of the settlement.

Barring an appeal of Circuit Judge Robert Kaye's settlement order, attendants with illnesses blamed on the air they breathed on smoky airliners can sue any time in the next year for compensatory damages.

Smoking on domestic flights was banned in 1990, four years after the surgeon general warned that cigarette smoke caused lung cancer in nonsmokers.

The final settlement comes as the tobacco industry battles the state of Minnesota and Blue Cross Blue Shield in court and awaits congressional review of a proposed $368 billion national settlement of tobacco litigation. Separate settlements have been reached with Florida, Texas and Mississippi.

David Adelman, tobacco analyst with Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, considers the latest move in Miami "a non-issue."

"The industry settled that litigation to enhance the likelihood of there being a national agreement," he said. "If there's a national agreement, they won't face cases like this in the future."

The Clinton administration told Congress for the first time Thursday that it could support protecting cigarette makers from most lawsuits if necessary to enact the national settlement.

"You have to view it in the context of the tobacco companies apparently want to settle these things," said Emanuel Goldman, tobacco analyst with Paine Webber. "Why go through the hassle and the negative publicity? It's that simple. It really is."

Focusing on the terms of the settlement, the judge concluded objections filed on behalf of 35 attendants were "legally and factually insufficient."

In endorsing the agreement requiring payments by Philip Morris, R.J. Reynolds, Brown & Williamson and Lorillard, Kaye expressed doubts about the attendants' chances of winning the trial.

"Taken as a whole, the outcome of this case in this court's opinion was far less than 50-50," he wrote.

Scott Williams, a Washington-based spokesman for tobacco companies, said he had no comment on the approval of the settlement.

One of the primary objections was to a $49 million award to Rosenblatt for attorneys' fees and costs in the six-year case.

"At first blush, the figure appears extraordinarily high," the judge said. "It must be remembered that this was no ordinary case. To say the least, it was exceptionally extraordinary."

Plantation owner bars 'Yankees' from property

By Bruce Smith
Associated Press

HARDEEVILLE, S.C. — More than a century after Gen. William T. Sherman's troops burned every building on the property, Henry Ingram Jr. has vowed never to let his plantation fall into Yankee hands again.

Ingram went down to the courthouse Wednesday and filed deed restrictions barring the sale of the land to anyone from north of the Mason-Dixon Line and anyone named Sherman.

Ingram did not return phone calls to his home on Friday, but he told The Beaufort Gazette: "This is the prettiest piece of land in the county, and I want to keep it that way. I want to make sure no one has access to it that I don't want to be there."

The deed restrictions he filed at the Jasper County courthouse prohibit the "Yankee race" — those who were born above the Mason-Dixon Line or who have lived there for a year or more — from owning any part of the 1,688 acres.

Also, anyone named Sherman can't even set foot on the property. In fact, Northerners who aren't named Sherman but whose names can be spelled from its letters had better stay out, too.

The property, mostly wetlands and tall pines, is five miles north of Savannah, Ga. Ingram said he wants to put a motel, convenience store and restaurant there, along with homes for himself and family members.

South Carolina banker Langdon Cheves established the plantation in 1829 and it quickly became one of the largest rice operations in the area. It was destroyed in January 1865 as Sherman's troops crossed the Savannah River into South Carolina.

Ingram, who owns several video gambling parlors in the area, bought the property last month for $1.2 million. He lives on Hilton Head Island, a luxury resort area popular with Yankees.

"Slowly but surely they have taken over Hilton Head, they've taken over Beaufort County. They're infiltrating Jasper County," Ingram told the Savannah (Ga.) Morning News. "They're worse than fire ants."

Ingram said he and his son came up with the language and had a lawyer review it.

Bill McElveen, a Columbia real estate attorney, chuckled when told of the restrictions but said they might stand up. "I'd hate to be judge, though. I don't think you can win with this one," he said.

Federal laws prevent discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, handicap, marital status or national origin, but say nothing about geography within the United States.

"Someone would have to show (Yankees are) a class of people entitled to some type of protection under discrimination laws," McElveen said.

Ingram's deed restrictions say they should not be interpreted as discrimination against "Southern persons of African descent," and any Southern black can buy the property at a 10 percent discount.

Donors to parties to meet with top officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the Democratic and Republican parties will give big donors a chance later this month to meet with top administration and congressional officials. "It's business as usual," one critic says.

On Feb. 11, all of the leaders of the House Republican majority are scheduled to attend a fund-raising dinner for the National Republican Congressional Committee. Two days later, big Democratic donors plan to gather at the tony Fontainebleau Hilton Hotel in Miami Beach along with Vice President Al Gore, other White House officials and congressional Democrats for the fourth annual Democratic Business Council.

"They're providing the opportunity for access to large contributors," said Candice Nelson, an associate professor of political science at American University in Washington, D.C. "It's business as usual."

The efforts to reach out to contributors continues despite congressional investigations into campaign fund raising during the 1996 elections. The Senate is scheduled by early next month to consider legislation overhauling the way congressional campaigns are financed.

Democratic and Republican officials maintain that their contributors are motivated by a desire to help the party, not the chance to hobnob with an official who might be able to help them.

"People contribute to the Democratic Party because they believe in what we stand for," said Melissa Bonney, Democratic National Committee spokeswoman.

The National Republican Congressional Committee, which raised $27 million last year, expects to take in another $4 million at its first Ronald Reagan Awards Dinner. The award will go to House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga.

"We've had such a successful year," said NRCC spokeswoman Mindy Tucker. "The economy's going good, we've been able to balance the budget, we've been able to have tax cuts. These are all ideas President Reagan kicked off when he was president."

Last year, President Clinton and Congress agreed to balance the budget and cut taxes.

An estimated 1,200 guests are expected to attend the affair, as well as numerous House Republicans. Tickets are $1,000 for individuals and $2,000 for corporations or political action committees. Tucker said the NRCC will try to accommodate requests to be seated with particular lawmakers.

The Democrats won't be collecting money from participants at its gathering; they already have. Council membership costs $10,000 for an individual or $15,000 for a corporation or a political action committee. The council has 2,000 members in 47 states. One perk of membership is an invitation to the annual gathering in Florida, and more than 150 business leaders already have signed up.

"The last five years in this country have been some of the best years of our lives in terms of the growth and development of the business community," DNC National Chairman Steve Grossman said. "What people want to talk about is how do we continue to move forward. We can make a credible case to any business leader that being part of the Democratic Party and supporting the Democratic Party has been beneficial to their lives, to their bottom line and to their economic well-being."

THE LIVENS LAW FIRM

cordially invite you to attend a free estate planning seminar

The Federal Government has recently changed the ESTATE TAX LAWS...Learn how the changes can affect you and your heirs.

If you own a home...or have assets worth at least $100,000...you owe it to yourself and your family to get the facts on living trusts. If you think you are protected by a simple will...think again...A Will guarantees that your estate will go through probate, which means your family may not be able to take possession of your estate for many months, or possibly years!

Plus, if your estate is over $600,000, your family may owe estate taxes which could amount to 37-55% of the value of your estate. This means that your family may have to sell some of the assets just to pay the estate taxes! A living trust avoids all of this by avoiding probate and minimizing estate taxes. Further, a living trust will protect your estate if you become incapacitated during your lifetime by avoiding a guardianship. This means your estate will be managed as you see fit, not as a court-appointed guardian sees fit.

To find out more about the benefits of living trust, attend one of these free seminars...

Zamora's calendar notes teen's death in former midshipman's trial

By Evan Moore
Hearst News Service

FORT WORTH — A calendar on which Diane Zamora had marked significant dates relating to the killing of Adrianne Jones was the final piece of evidence entered before prosecutors rested their case against Zamora on Friday.

The item, found in Zamora's room at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., was taken by the school's legal assistant, Jeffrey A. Alcorn, shortly after Zamora had admitted the killing to roommates at the school.

The most significant dates marked were Dec. 3 and 4, 1995, which were circled with the notation, "1:38 a.m. Adrianne."

Jones was killed in the early morning hours of Dec. 4, 1995, and Zamora has confessed that she and her fiance, David Graham, lured Jones from her home and killed her in retribution for a brief sexual encounter the 16-year-old Jones had with Graham.

Other dates marked included April 10, 1996, noted with, "I told mom," and May 28, 1996, noted, "Adrianne talk." Zamora has told others she had admitted the killing to her mother in April 1996 and that there was a family meeting attended by her parents and grandparents some weeks later during which they discussed the killing and prayed for forgiveness.

The calendar also bore a mark on the date Dec. 1, 1995, the day Zamora said Graham had confessed his tryst with Jones to her. Beside it was written, "David told me."

Before the state finished, defense attorney John Linebarger recalled John Green, a witness who had previously testified he was a friend of Graham and that Graham and Zamora had stopped at his home early on Dec. 4, shortly after the killing.

Linebarger used Green to give a glimpse of the defense's case, asking him if he had been present on occasions when Graham abused or terrorized Zamora.

Linebarger asked Green if he had been present when Graham had attempted to strangle Zamora with a belt, cut her leg with a knife, shoved her down on jagged gravel, bent her hand backward at a party, or "when he shoved a 9 mm pistol between her legs during sex."

The attorney then asked Green if he had heard Graham threaten Zamora over a rival suitor at the Naval Academy and had heard Graham state, "I'll fight for you. I'll kill for you. I'll die for you."

Green replied "no" to each question.

Linebarger is expected to raise those points again and to call Zamora, 20, to the stand at some point during the week after the defense presentation begins Monday.

Graham, also 20, will be tried separately.

Zamora was in her first year at the Naval Academy and Graham was a freshman at the Air Force Academy when they were charged in 1996.

In another development, the original suspect in Jones' death this week settled a civil rights lawsuit over his arrest. But Bryan McMillan's arrest still lingers in the mind of his family, said his attorney, Richard Price.

"A lot of people in Mansfield (near Fort Worth, Texas) still thought Bryan did it," Price said, "even after he was released."

Police arrested McMillan after Jones' boyfriend told them the girl had received a phone call from a person whose name may have been Bryan the night before she was found dead. Police found McMillan's name and number in Jones' phone book.

McMillan sued and a one-day mediation session ordered by U.S. District Judge John McBryde brought about the settlement on Monday, The Dallas Morning News reported Friday. Details of the agreement with the city of Grand Prairie, outside of Dallas, were not disclosed.

Judge chides attorneys in Winfrey case

AMARILLO (AP) — The judge in the Oprah Winfrey beef defamation case warned attorneys for both sides Friday to stop making faces in front of the jury during testimony in the case.

Shortly after dismissing the jury for the weekend, U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson told the attorneys she would no longer tolerate their smirks, grimaces and nods in front of the jury.

"It is actually unacceptable when counsel appears to laugh or make any display ... That is not acceptable, and I will not tolerate it," the judge said.

The judge had kind words for the courtroom audience, however, saying spectators and news media representatives had behaved well throughout the three weeks of testimony.

Area citizens have stood in line to obtain seats in the trial of the beef industry's defamation lawsuit against the talk-show host.

The judge's remarks came after the testimony of Dr. Lester Crawford, a veterinarian who told jurors that several comments made by a vegetarian activist on Ms. Winfrey's show about mad cow disease were false.

After a sidebar with the judge in which defense attorneys argued that Crawford was not a specialist on mad cow disease, the judge ruled Crawford could speak on veterinary medicine with some limitations.

Crawford explained slaughtering and feeding systems in the United States and Great Britain, where there has been an outbreak of mad cow disease. He also said several comments activist Howard Lyman made on the show were untrue.

Specifically, Lyman's comment that any animal "that's not staggering around" is slaughtered for beef was false, said Crawford, who has extensive veterinary experience with universities and the government.

He said cattle must meet several U.S. Department of Agriculture requirements.

Crawford also disputed Lyman's comment that ranchers were feeding dead cows to their herds, a practice linked to the mad cow outbreak in Britain.

"The animal byproduct is no more a cow than a leather coat is a cow," Crawford said. He noted U.S. cattle have eaten animal protein since slightly after the Civil War.

Texas cattlemen are suing Ms. Winfrey, her Harpo Productions company and Lyman for more than $10 million because they say the April 16, 1996, show violated a state law against disparaging Texas agriculture and food products.

The cattlemen allege Ms. Winfrey favored alarming statements by Lyman over pro-beef statements.

Lyman, a former rancher, said cattle herds were eating ground-up cattle parts, and that mad cow could make AIDS look like the common cold.

Earlier Friday, jurors heard videotaped testimony from beef industry spokesman Dr. Gary Weber that he signed a release saying his comments on the show could be edited.

But he added he did not read the release thoroughly, thinking it was merely a generic document. "I glanced over it," said Weber, a spokesman for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

Computer tariffs

WASHINGTON — The World Trade Organization ruled in favor of the U.S. in a dispute over tariffs imposed by the EU, U.K., and Ireland on U.S. computer networking equipment exports, the top U.S. trade official said.

"We are pleased the WTO panel has ruled these tariffs clearly violate WTO obligations," U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky said in a statement.

The ruling means California-based Cisco Systems Inc. and Bay Networks Inc. as well as New Hampshire-based Cabletron Systems will be able to sell their products at lower prices in the lucrative European market.

The EU market for such equipment totals more than $5 billion annually, and U.S. companies account for more than half the market, Barshefsky said.

Egghead reorganizes

Pummeled by competition from superstores, Egghead Inc. will close its 80 software stores, lay off 800 workers — or 80 percent of its workforce — and sell only via the Internet.

Egghead, which pioneered software retailing in the early 1980s and once had 250 stores, will take a $42 million charge to earnings in its fiscal fourth quarter, which ends March 28, to pay for the restructuring.

The Spokane, Wash., company will close a distribution center in Sacramento and about 15 California stores.

It is also changing its name to Egghead.com Inc. to reflect its new Internet emphasis.

The announcement illustrates how radically software selling has shifted in the past 15 years.

Once the dominant sales venue for software, specialty stores last year accounted for just 11.7 percent of domestic purchases, according to PC Data of Reston, Va.

Superstores such as CompUSA accounted for 27.3 percent of software sales, Wal-Mart and other mass merchants comprised 19 percent, and supermarkets, toy stores and other miscellaneous retailers sold 26 percent.

The Internet is the fastest-growing software sales outlet but still accounted for just 3.5 percent of 1997 software sales. Catalogs made up the remainder of domestic purchases.

Compaq prices

HOUSTON — Compaq Computer Corp. cut prices as much as 18 percent on its U.S. business personal computers, with five DeskPro models now costing less than $1,000 without a monitor.

The No. 1 PC maker said the price reductions were possible because of lowered costs of components, which the company is able to pass on to consumers more quickly because it's moving to a build-to-order strategy in filling orders.

Computer makers have been cutting prices as costs of disk drives, memory chips and processors have been falling due to excess inventory and weaker demand. Gateway 2000 Inc. cut prices as much as 18 percent last month, and Dell Computer Corp. cut prices as much as 15 percent in early January.

Compaq slashed the price of its DeskPro 2000 line as much as 14 percent, with three models selling for less than $1,000, including one with a 200-megahertz Intel Corp. Pentium chip. The DeskPro 2000 line ranges from $940 to $2,090. All prices exclude monitors, which start at about $300.

The company cut DeskPro 4000 line prices as much as 18 percent. Those machines come with Intel Pentium MMX and Pentium II processors and range from $920 to $2,450. The DeskPro 6000 series, featuring Pentium II chips as fast as 333 megahertz, were cut as much as 17 percent and now cost $2,040 to $3,220.

Plan to privatize Internet names lacks support

N.Y. Times News Service

The Clinton administration has released its proposal to relinquish government control of the Internet's centralized address system to a competitive market, seeking to privatize a crucial function of the sprawling network and formalize a system that rests largely on the technical community's personal loyalty to one of its founders.

The plan recommends the creation of a nonprofit corporation based in the United States to direct the expansion of the Internet's domain scheme, which sorts World Wide Web sites and e-mail addresses by a handful of suffixes like ".com" and ".org." The new organization, to be run by a representative group of the Internet's users, would also oversee the core computers that keep track of who lives where in cyberspace.

The goal, which has widespread support, is to lower costs and broaden consumer choice as thousands of businesses and individuals seek to stake out an identity within the fast-growing medium. But the long-anticipated plan — developed by the administration's top Internet adviser, Ira Magaziner, after months of lobbying by rival Internet stakeholders — met with a mixed response.

Corporations, fearing it will make protecting their trademarks more difficult, are critical of the government recommendation to add five new domains relatively quickly. But some entrepreneurs, hoping to build a business by creating domain registries, are calling for a more open and competitive system sooner rather than later.

Other factions contend that the government is providing little protection for consumers by advocating an open market for registries.

Jon Postel, the father of the Internet's address system, has expressed dissatisfaction with parts of the government proposal. Postel, who has been assigning addresses sin[illegible] the network's early days, is the sole member of the Internet Assigned Numbers Authority, which handles its technical underpinnings.

Postel has endorsed the proposal of an international group organized by leaders of the Internet's technical community to add more domain names and a swifter end to government involvement than the Clinton administration's proposal recommends.

Computer training

German Paniagua, left, and Clifton Walker, both 11th-graders, load software into computers being fixed by students at the Oakland Technology High School, in Oakland, Calif. Housing development wired for Internet

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Andrea Dunn chuckled as her fingers rattled over a computer keyboard, gleefully anticipating the day her building will be wired for the World Wide Web.

It was just a pose for photographers, but soon it will be possible to surf the Internet from her low-income housing development. And she already is savoring the notion of being able to log on to the world from her living room.

"Access to the Internet is going to be just nice," said Ms. Dunn, who lives with her two sons, Andre, 13, and William, 5.

The computers are coming via a $1.2 million project sponsored by the city, IBM Corp. and BRIDGE West Oakland Housing Inc., which owns the 206 units. Half of those are reserved for tenants receiving federal Section 8 housing assistance.

The city has raised enough money to buy the hardware and begin the project but still is working to raise about $1 million from government and private sources.

IBM is donating about $240,000 in discounts on products and services for the project. Pacific Bell Network Integration, which is installing the cables, is chipping in a $100,000 discount.

By March 1999, organizers plan to have a personal computer in each apartment, a computer training facility and job placement help for residents who successfully complete a training program.

Wiring the development for the Web will help residents learn job skills at home, proponents say. It also will help children keep up with classwork.

"Getting wired is just the beginning," Oakland Mayor Elihu Harris said at a news conference where insulation bulged through the unfinished walls of the future computer learning center.

Residents will get their computer know-how at the training center, which will be equipped with 15 PCs and two high-speed printers. Adults will learn word processing and spreadsheet programs. Graduates will be certified by IBM, and the city will work with private employers to help residents get jobs.

Internet users debate Clinton scandal online

N.Y. Times News Service

Opinions on recent sex allegations about President Clinton are all over the map, as most public opinion polls show. It's the same on the Internet, where those who have a point of view can send it worldwide, instead of being a tenth of a tick in a pie chart as conventional surveys do.

Anti-Clinton partisans have gathered for years in a Usenet newsgroups called alt.impeach.clinton, where one contributor posted this week, "I don't want to see Clinton impeached. I feel the good Clinton has done during his office outweighs his faults. I find it hard to believe Clinton would commit any serious crimes. If it turns out to be true he commited perjury then instead if impeaching him, why not prosecute him in some other way?"

"Yeah, I agree with you," another user said. "But I say, why prosecute him at all? If the man had sex, so be it. Let us as America decide to get over it... Besides, the womanizing thing was known before he was re-elected...."

"It may very well be the hard working people of this country who have made this economy good," a third user argued, "not some stupid lying, adulterous traitor in the White House. By the way, he is finished. He will not survive this!"

"Well then," the second contributor replied, "I believe that if he is impeached for an affair, we should invest our tax dollars investigating the private lives of every government official and then destroying their careers ... Is that the 'better economy' you were talking about?"

The Internet argument is hot. Some other Usenet newsgroups with postings on the subject include alt.president.clinton, alt.society.conservatism, alt.society.liberalism, alt.politics.clinton, alt.politics.usa.republican, alt.rush-limbaugh, alt.politics.libertarian, talk.politics.misc, soc.women and alt.feminism. Through a process called cross-posting, some contributors put the same opinion in many groups.

Other sample postings:

— Is there a parallel to the Richard Nixon case? "Yeah, Tricky Dick resigned," a contributor said. "But he was about to be impeached for his attempts to subvert the electoral process through political espionage (however unnecessary that might have been). Slick Willie may have been caught with his hand in the cookie jar, but that's not quite in the same league...."

— "People just want something to steam over... if its not Marv Albert or Frank Gifford, it's the president. The only thing is that neither of them is in any serious trouble for sexual escapades. As far as the Clinton issue is concerned, (Clinton and intern Monica Lewinsky) both were consensual adults, so whatever happened should be between him, her, and Hillary too I guess."

"I do tend to agree here. I mean, how many concubines was David supposed to have had? And the fundamentalists think he was a pretty peachy leader."

— From a non-U.S. computerist: "Speaking as one who is half a world away from this 'political problem,' I would like to know the real reason why these 'scandals' are continually cropping up. Who has Bill Clinton (angered) so much, that his political enemies are willing to do anything to remove him from office? If it is a morality question, where are you going to find a candidate who is squeaky clean these days?"

The Troop 9 Knots homepage will show you all of the essential knots, from the Figure 8 all the way to the Sheep Shank. Saddle up your favorite browser and lasso http://www.bsw.net/~bgibson/knots/someknot.htm to start learning now. Using cool animations and graphics, you'll be able to watch how these rope clusters are made, step by step.

IT TAKES ALL KINDS

The story of America is the story of many cultures. Lots has happened since the pilgrims first came to this continent, and nobody tells the story of America like Americans themselves. Learn what the American experience is really about from the people who are living here now. You can read stories about everyday people from many different American cultures at http://www.pbs.org/pov/learning

From teen-agers to adults, the stories of America come in all colors, sizes, religions and languages. What's better, you can contribute your own story. What does culture mean to you? What does it feel like to BE American? African American? Irish/Norwegian American? Dominican American? It takes all kinds to show what "American" really is —including you.

Dear Amy: I want to know: 1. How do cats purr? 2. How do you get tree sap off your hands? 3. How does rain develop?—Joanna, Lakewood, CO

Dear Joanna: When I read your e-mail and some other ones like yours, I thought, how am I going to find all the answers? :-) To find your answers, go to Yahooligans at http://www.yahooligans.com Always ask your parents' permission before using a search engine. Below are some more Web sites that answer all kinds of questions.

Dear Amy: How can you find out the current population of the U.S. or the world?—Jackie, Wattsburg, PA

Dear Jackie: For your answer, check out My Facts Page at http://www.refdesk.com/facts.html It's an awesome site for tons of information that can help you with your homework, too.

Dear Amy: I was wondering how tape recorders keep your voice on that plastic tape? Will any tape work?—Michael, St. Louis

Dear Michael: Boy, I don't know, but maybe the Web site How Things Work by Louis Bloomfield can help you find your answer. Go to http://www.phys.virginia.edu/Education/Teaching/HowThingsWork/ and see if your answer is there. Happy surfing!

Send your comments or questions about the WWW to Amy at: Ask Amy, 2021 Dole Center, Lawrence, KS 66045 or AskAmy@4Kids.org

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Crude oil prices rose for a second straight day Friday as traders, mindful of a possible U.S. confrontation with Iraq, adjusted their positions in advance of the weekend.

March crude rose 12 cents to $16.70 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. March unleaded gasoline rose 0.80 cent to 51.16 cents a gallon.

Prices had risen Thursday following several days of declines as President Clinton sent a third aircraft carrier and ships with 2,000 Marines to join U.S. Navy forces off Iraq.

The situation intensified Friday. Defense Secretary William Cohen headed to Germany to convince allies the Clinton administration is planning a major military strike unless Saddam Hussein agrees to allow U.N. inspectors free access to weapons sites.

The United States also was expected to send more warplanes into the region, and Britain said it would send planes to the area.

Meanwhile, Iraq rejected parts of a U.N. plan that would have allowed it to sell more oil on world markets.

In other energy futures, the March heating oil contract rose 0.12 cent to 46.33 cents a gallon and natural gas fell 0.24 cent per 1,000 cubic feet to $2.359.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against other major currencies Friday, spurred by a positive U.S. employment report showing growth in the construction and real estate sectors.

The dollar also was bolstered by the U.S. Treasury and stock markets, which also found the report positive. Meanwhile in Japan, the government issued the gloomiest assessment of its economy in two decades.

In late trading in New York, the dollar rose to 124.12 yen, from 123.43 yen late Thursday. The dollar also settled in New York at 1.8086 marks, up from 1.7867 marks.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Thursday: 1.4605 Swiss francs, up from 1.4428; 6.0611 French francs, up from 5.9854; 1.4315 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4413; and 1,788 Italian lire, up from 1,762.50.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6426, down from $1.6556.

Dow surges

NEW YORK — Stocks pushed further into record territory Friday as a robust employment report bolstered hopes that the financial mess in Asia hasn't yet inflicted any major damage in the U.S. economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 72.24 to 8,189.49, up 282.99 for the week and about 70 points shy of a new high. A midday gain of 95 points had put the Dow above 8,200 for the first time since it closed at a record 8,259.31, back on Aug. 6.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a 3-to-2 margin on the NYSE, where volume totaled 569.65 million — brisk, but the first tally below 700 million all week and the first below 600 million in nearly two weeks.

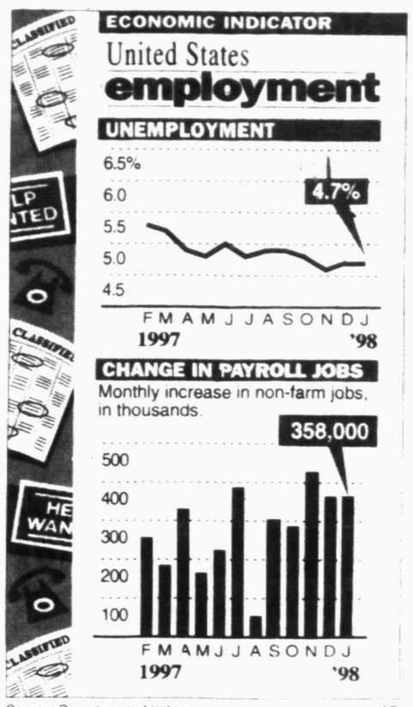

The Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 8.92 to 1,012.46, and the NYSE composite index rose 3.34 to 526.31.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 17.45 to 1,694.35.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 1.44 to 445.50, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.32 to 680.32.

Robust job growth cheers markets

Source: Department of Labor AP

Dow jumps 72 points, inches toward new record high

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robust job growth in January held the nation's unemployment rate near a 24-year low as America's vibrant labor market showed no sign of spillover from Asia's financial disarray.

Wall Street applauded the employment strength, coupled with only a moderate hourly wage gain, and the Dow Jones stock average surged toward last summer's record.

January's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate, 4.7 percent, was the same as December's and just a notch above the 4.6 percent rate in November, lowest since 1973, the Labor Department said Friday.

Employers created a greater-than-expected 358,000 jobs. Construction accounted for 92,000, the largest gain in nearly two years. It partly reflected unseasonably warm winter weather in many parts of the country and repair jobs following ice storms in the Northeast.

The job market isn't yet feeling the pinch of Asian currency devaluations, which are expected to slash U.S. export sales and trigger a torrent of newly cheap imports.

"This is as good as it gets," said economist Norman Robertson of Smithfield Trust Co. in Pittsburgh "The economy clearly is very resilient. ... Certainly the numbers coming in don't show imminent weakening."

Manufacturing, the economic sector most likely to first feel the impact of Asia, added 43,000 jobs, in line with increases the previous three months. Industries reporting gains included metal products, industrial machinery, electronic components, aircraft and plastics.

Real estate, computer and data-processing services, and engineering and management services all recorded rapid job growth. Department stores added jobs on a seasonally adjusted basis but miscellaneous retail establishments had larger-than-usual layoffs following robust holiday hiring.

Only 9,000 of the new jobs came in government.

"We have the smallest percentage of these new jobs in the public sector and the highest percentage in the private sector in the United States since the 1920s," President Clinton told reporters at a news conference with British Prime Minister Tony Blair.

Tim Loncharich, president of Snelling Personnel Services of Dallas, with 300 offices nationwide, said demand for labor is every bit as strong as it was in early fall when the Federal Reserve was poised to cool the economy with an interest-rate increase.

"In all sectors — retailing, services, manufacturing — I haven't seen any noticeable slowdown," he said. "Demand continues to increase."

Average hourly wages rose moderately in January, up 4 cents to $12.51. They're up 3.8 percent over the past 12 months, in line with last year's rapid improvement in productivity.

With that assurance, the big employment gain reported didn't send the usual inflation jitters through financial markets. Bond prices dipped then recovered. The Dow Jones average climbed 72 points to close at 8,189 — just 70 points shy of its Aug. 6 record.

Although January's unemployment rate was unchanged, there was some shifting among demographic groups. The rate for adult men fell from 4.1 percent to 3.8 percent, lowest since May 1979. It rose from 4 percent to 4.4 percent for adult women. The rate for blacks fell from 9.9 percent to 9.3 percent, lowest since December 1973. It edged higher for whites, from 3.9 percent to 4 percent.

Southwest may try for grounded carrier's fleet

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines Co. said it may try to buy or lease Western Pacific Airlines Inc.'s grounded fleet of 18 Boeing 737 jetliners in order to meet its growth plans.

Western Pacific shut down Wednesday after its major investor balked at spending more money to keep the airline operating. Smith Management Co. of New York has pumped $23 million into Western Pacific since December.

"Once the dust settles, we're going to take a look at those planes," Southwest spokesman Ed Stewart said. "We are looking worldwide when it comes to 737s."

The Dallas-based carrier might have to slow its expansion this year because it can't find enough 737s, the only plane it flies, Stewart said.

The U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Denver will either return the planes to the leasing companies that own them, including GE Capital Corp. and KG Aircraft Leasing, or allow Smith to sublease them.

After that, Southwest will determine if the planes are available or if the leasing companies already have assigned them to other customers, Stewart said.

Southwest had planned to add service to two new cities this year, but Chief Financial Officer Gary Kelly said two weeks ago that may not be possible.

"We have more opportunities for growth than we do airplanes," Kelly said.

The airline won't announce service to any new cities until at least the second quarter, he said.

Southwest is scheduled to receive 22 new 737-700s this year. Delivery of some aircraft has been slowed by production delays at Seattle-based Boeing

Hearst appoints vice president of newspaper unit

NEW YORK — Kirk MacDonald has been appointed vice president of Hearst Newspapers, a unit of The Hearst Corporation, it was announced by George B. Irish, general manager of Hearst Newspapers and vice president of The Hearst Corporation.

MacDonald, who resigned as executive vice president and general manager of the Denver Post to accept the position, will start his post at the Hearst Newspapers on March 2.

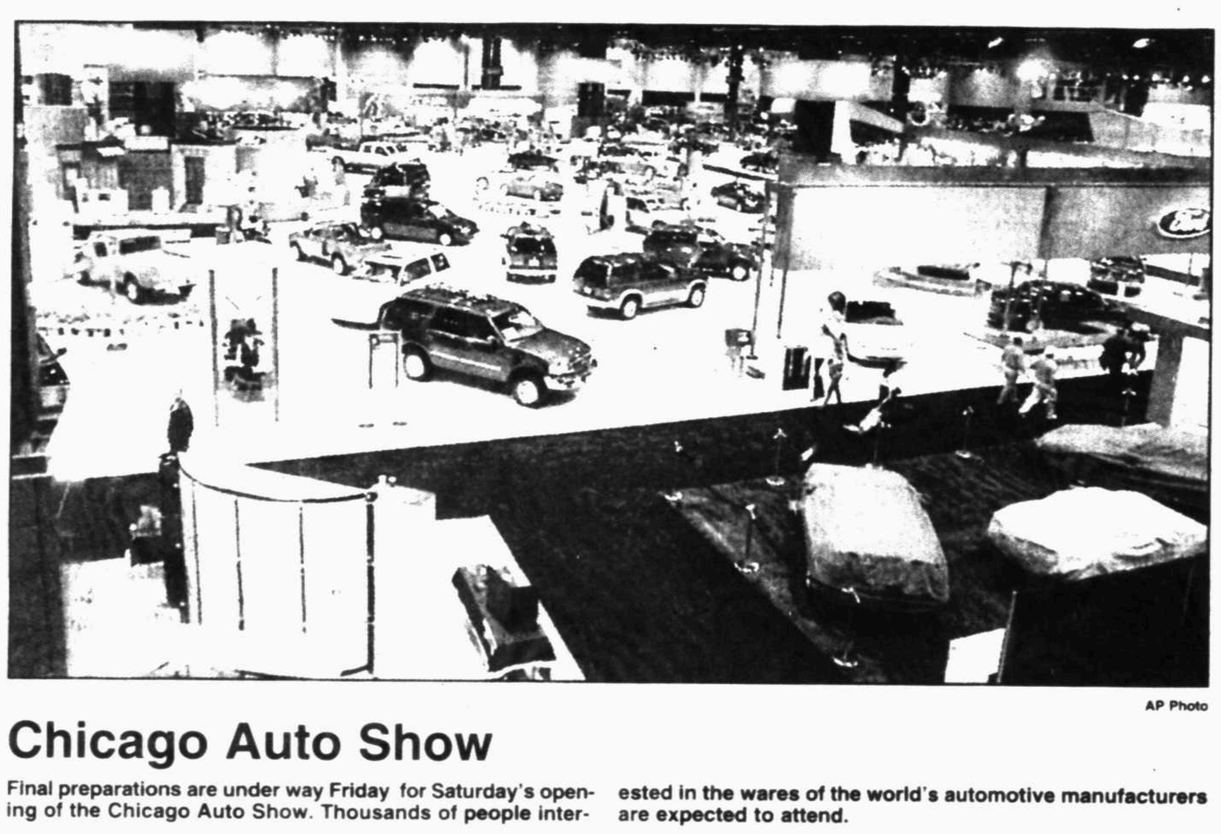

In making the announcement, Irish said, "Kirk MacDonald will be a valuable addition to the senior management team at Hearst Newspapers, following the retirement last month of Robert J. Danzig, Hearst Newspapers' general manager. Kirk will provide support in marketing, new media and financial services for each of our 12 daily newspapers. We welcome him back."

MacDonald is rejoining Hearst, where he worked in the late 1980s at the former Hearst newspaper in San Antonio, the San Antonio Light. He served as the Light's display advertising director from 1988 to 1989, and was its retail advertising manager from 1987 to 1988.

In 1989, he joined the Denver Post, where he held positions in sales, marketing, circulation and general management before he was appointed executive vice president and general manager in 1995.

Hearst Newspapers, a unit of The Hearst Corporation, is the seventh largest newspaper company in the United States, with daily circulation exceeding 1.3 million and Sunday circulation exceeding 2.5 million.

Hearst publishes 12 daily newspapers, including the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Final preparations are under way Friday for Saturday's opening of the Chicago Auto Show. Thousands of people interested in the wares of the world's automotive manufacturers are expected to attend.

Microsoft shifts Internet unit around

■ Move expected to raise eyebrows in Microsoft battle with government over its Internet browser.

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — In a quiet reorganization that is certain to raise eyebrows in light of Microsoft Corp.'s antitrust battle with the U.S. government, the software giant on Thursday moved the group that develops its Internet Explorer World Wide Web browser into the business unit that develops and markets its Windows operating system.

The issue of whether Internet Explorer is a separate application or an integrated part of Windows 95 is at the heart of a lawsuit filed by the Justice Department charging that Microsoft violated a 1994 antitrust agreement.

Thursday's move will shift the Internet Explorer group headed by David Cole, who testified as a Microsoft witness last month, into the company's Personal and Business Systems Group, which is headed by James Allchin.

Microsoft insists that it has the right under the terms of the 1994 agreement to add any new features it likes to its operating systems.

But the Justice Department asserts that browsers are distinct applications and that Microsoft is using its dominance of the operating system market to build a monopoly in the browser market.

In December, Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson of U.S. District Court in Washington sided with the Justice Department and issued a temporary restraining order that blocked Microsoft from forcing computer makers to include Internet Explorer as a condition of installing Windows 95 on their products.

Analysts said on Thursday that irrespective of antitrust arguments, the move made sense from a business standpoint.

"Internet Explorer is an integrated product," David Readerman, a financial analyst at Nationsbanc Montgomery Securities Inc., said. "You better integrate the reporting responsibilities."

Under the new organizational structure, three of Microsoft's product groups will report to Paul Maritz, the company's group vice president for platforms and applications. The three are the Personal and Business Systems Group run by Allchin, the Consumer Platforms Group led by Craig Mundie, and a new Applications and Tools Group, which is the responsibility of Bob Muglia.

A separate division, the Interactive Media Group, which is led by Frank Higgins, does not report to Maritz.

In the past, Brad Silverberg headed the Applications and Internet Client Group, which also reported to Maritz and which included Cole's Internet Explorer group. The Applications and Internet Client Group has been disbanded and replaced by Muglia's new Applications and Tools Group.

The reorganization affected several key Microsoft executives. Brad Chase, who was a key member of the company's Internet marketing effort, will move to Allchin's Windows group to become vice president of marketing. And John Ludwig, who had been heading some of the company's Internet and home-products groups, will move to Higgins' Interactive Media Group to run a business called Web Essentials.

Conspicuous by his absence on Thursday was Silverberg, the veteran Microsoft executive behind the development of Windows 95. Silverberg has been on leave since last summer, leading to speculation that he might leave the company. However he sent e-mail to various Microsoft employees on Thursday saying that he was still on leave and was waiting for the right job before returning.

Credit card debt grows at modest pace

■ Credit card use remained subdued during holiday season, rising at slower-than-expected pace.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Borrowing by U.S. consumers increased at a slower-than-expected pace in December as credit card use remained subdued during the holiday shopping season, Federal Reserve figures showed.

Borrowing rose by $3.9 billion for the month to $1.236 trillion after falling a revised $3.6 billion in November. Previously, the Fed said November borrowing fell $4.2 billion. Before Friday's report, analysts had expected an increase of $4.6 billion for December. While credit card use barely rebounded after plunging in November, the rate of auto borrowing was the fastest since October 1986, a Fed spokesman said.

Analysts watch the Fed's consumer credit statistics because it helps them gauge changes in consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of overall economic activity.

A subdued showing could point to a slowdown in economic activity in 1998, as the financial crisis in Asia inflicts damage on the U.S. economy. "We expect consumer spending to slow from its nearly 4 percent pace in 1997 to about 2.5 percent in 1998," said Bruce Steinberg, chief economist at Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York, in a recent report.

Even so, slower consumer credit growth may not all be tied to weaker spending or tougher lenders. Many consumers have taken advantage of lower interest loans secured by their homes, such as home equity loans, which aren't included in the Fed's monthly credit statistics.

"People are just paying off their bills," said Astrid Adolfson, an economist at MCM MOneyWatch in New York.

Even so, credit card issuers continue to face challenges collecting on consumer loans after a surge in personal bankruptcies in 1996 and 1997. "Banks are being more careful," said Peter Kreztmer, an economist at NationsBanc Montgomery Securities in New York. "There's a definite attempt on the part of banks to be More selective."

Retailer Sears, Roebuck & Co. recently warned its first-quarter profits will decline because more customers are falling behind on credit-card payments. Fourth-quarter results were also disappointing, prompting Sears to increase its reserves for bad debt by $244 million from $40 million in the third quarter. The reserve is for credit card accounts that Sears doesn't expect to collect.

Friday's Fed report also showed that the pace of consumer credit was rising at a 3.9 percent annual rate during December. That compares with a 3.6 percent decline in pace of borrowing in November.

By category in December, revolving loans, which include credit cards, increased $200 million, auto loans rose $5.5 billion, and other type of installment loans decreased $1.7 billion.

Investors showed little reaction to Friday's report, focusing instead on the Labor Department's employment report for January, which showed strong job growth with no sign of inflation.

Many believe all religions benefit from papal visit

By David Briggs
Associated Press

HAVANA — When Pope John Paul II came to town, the Rev. Hector Mendez switched Sunday services to the afternoon so members of the oldest Protestant temple in Havana could attend the pontiff's Mass on the Plaza of the Revolution.

Earlier that day, the pastor of First Presbyterian Church had joined other Protestant leaders in a meeting with the spiritual leader of nearly one billion Roman Catholics. And, for one week, as the pope shined a religious light on Catholicism in this isolated island nation, old ecumenical acquaintances were not forgotten.

Similar to Catholic leaders in the United States embracing Billy Graham revivals, many Protestant leaders here welcomed the pope. They hoped that the papal trip would not only boost the ecumenical movement in Cuba, but also would help them in their own evangelization efforts.

"I believe that when the Christian feeling is awakened, we all benefit, even those who are not believers," Mendez said. "The opportunity to have a number of religious symbols displayed in such a public way is already a benefit to our society."

Before Fidel Castro's 1959 revolution, Cuba was overwhelmingly Catholic. But today only about 40 percent of Cubans are baptized Catholics, and as few as 2 percent may attend Mass regularly. An estimated 2 percent of the population is Protestant.

Official figures do not exist, but University of Havana religion expert Enrique Lopez Oliva estimates 650 Catholic churches and 900 Protestant churches in Cuba.

In addition, he said, homes across the island are regularly used for worship, 2,500 for Protestants and 500 for Catholics.

Before the revolution, as a growing minority with a competing school system, Protestant churches did not have good relations with Catholic churches. During the uncertainty of the early days of the revolution, relations were especially tense, Mendez said.

But relations improved greatly in the 1970s. The Second Vatican Council encouraged Catholics to engage in ecumenical dialogue, and Protestantism was influenced by new theological concepts that, Mendez said, "made us see the church as Christ's body."

These relationships grew cold over time, Mendez said. "However," he said, "because of the pope's visit, we have begun to again strengthen relations."

Now, with the papal visit, both sides have tried to renew the sense of a common struggle for religious freedom in Cuba. The country was officially atheist until 1991 and still places strict limits on religious publications, new churches and outdoor worship.

In the month before the papal visit, Catholic and Protestant leaders held two joint services, one in a Catholic church and one in an Anglican church. The Cuban Council of Churches distributed 100,000 Bibles as gifts during the visit.

"I could not fail to have this meeting with you," John Paul told Protestant leaders Jan. 25, "sharing as I do your concern for the restoration of unity among Christians and for cooperation in favor of the overall progress of the Cuban people."

Later, in a meeting with Cuban bishops, the pope said the church should not demand a dominant or exclusive position in society, but should have the freedom to serve the faithful. "In this undertaking, and with ecumenical openness, seek the healthy cooperation of other Christian confessions," the pontiff said.

Each session wil start at 6 p.m. in the Parish Hall with a catered dinner and will end at 9 p.m.

"This course is open to anyone interested in finding out more about the Christian faith," said Bob Bledsoe, administrator for the program. "Adults of all ages and backgrounds are welcome."

Weekly topics will include who Jesus is, why he died, how to read the Bible, pray and overcome evil, hearing the Holy Spirit and does God heal today.

Alpha will bring people together for learning and laughter and to help each other in small group discussions.

"People can ask anything in this class," Bledsoe said. "Alpha is a place where no question is seen as too simple or too hostile."

For more information about Alpha or to register, contract St. Nicholas' Church, 694-8856.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7, 1998

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 7, 1998:
How you view life and your priorities radically shifts this year. With this internal revision come many external manifestations. Friends, and their role in your life, change considerably. You will become more focused and sure of yourself. Others challenge your decisions, and you change your values as a result. You have a tendency to spend a lot on health, work and daily life; you'll also earn a lot. If you are single, you throw yourself into work. If attached, try to operate more as a team. CANCER nurtures you.

BORN TODAY
Singer Garth Brooks (1962), Sen. Herb Kohl (1935), comedian Chris Rock (1966)

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Your intuitive senses are superb now. Zero in on a domestic issue, and solve it. You could amaze yourself and others as well. Someone in control allows you to flow with some of your ideas. Look for the unusual answer. Tonight: Invite friends over for a casual party.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Take the initiative, and start up talks. Your perspective changes when you get the scoop. A partner informs you of what is workable. Visit with neighbors and friends. You like what you hear, and love working as a group. Tonight: Ask, and prepare to receive.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ You are concerned about finances, but your work allows you to make changes for the better. You excel professionally. A partner starts free-associating, and you love the ideas that come up. A spontaneous outing proves to be an adventure. Tonight: Enjoy life to the max.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You are pleased by news that comes your way. Dance through ideas, and sort through opportunities. Expand, don't limit yourself. Getting away will help you gain perspective on life, work and a partnership. Accept a new offer. Tonight: You get what you really want.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Aim for the brass ring. You want to look at other approaches to get your way; different thinking and investigating proves unusually pertinent. Bring friends together for a fun, unexpected happening. It is a case of the more, the merrier. Tonight: Where the crowds are.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your determination is obvious, and you think that perhaps another approach could be implemented. Take the lead, be direct and consider what a partner wants. Discussions about the future and what is best for both of you is important. Tonight: Play the leading role.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Be adventurous, take responsibility and move with increasing clarity. You want to push a little more than you have been. You are in the spotlight; others look to you as a role model. Recognize that you are setting an example. Your communication style is changing. Tonight: Out and about.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You are energized, intuitive and on target. Now you need to go with the moment and your impulses; you will land on your feet. Do nothing halfway; touch on your deep well of emotions and sensitivity. You can't go wrong; just do it. Tonight: Rub your magic lamp.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ It's easy to accomplish what you want. But you don't understand what you need to do. Discussions with others, including a partner, ground you and help you feel loved. Reach out for another; be direct. You get much feedback and comfort. Tonight: The temperatures soar.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ Intuition proves 100 percent correct with money; once more, you feel secure and anchored. Others seek you out; you might have to screen calls and ignore immediate demands. Do what you choose, and what makes you happy. Tonight: Where you want, with whomever you want!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Take time off, relax and enjoy yourself. The pace has been demanding and hectic; you might wonder about your boundaries. A friend is interested in your opinions. Discussions are lively and energize you. You don't need to push like this. Tonight: Exchange foot rubs.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You understand exactly what is needed to comfort another. Be more nurturing and loving. A child is demanding. Keep pace with him, and explain your limits in terms he can understand. A new encounter could be romantic. Tonight: Add your unique personal touch.

Queen to give Bob Hope honorary knighthood for entertaining troops

WASHINGTON — Queen Elizabeth II will give Bob Hope an honorary knighthood, but the 94-year-old comedian won't be known as Sir Bob.

Bob Hope to be honored for years spent entertaining troops.

Prime Minister Tony Blair informed President Clinton on Thursday of the queen's decision to honor Hope for the years he spent entertaining the troops as well as his contributions to film and song.

The title "Sir" is reserved for British subjects.

"I'm speechless," Hope said from his home in Palm Springs, Calif. "Seventy years of ad lib material and I'm speechless."

He added: "What an honor and what a surprise for a boy who was born in England, raised in Cleveland and schooled in vaudeville."

PRINCETON, W.Va. — Gilligan got marooned again — this time on the top of a mountain.

Bob Denver, the star of TV's "Gilligan's Island," was snowed in for two days after a storm dumped 2 1/2 feet on his home Jan. 27.

Denver and his wife, Dreama, were without power for 17 hours, without phone service for five days and — gasp! — without television for a week.

"I got tired of feeding the fireplace and two potbellied stoves," Denver said Friday.

He and his wife have a weekly radio show, "Weekend with Denver and Denver," which they produce from a studio in their basement

It airs on 13 stations in West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky and is about to go national, becoming available to other stations via satellite.

PITTSBURGH — Tammy Wynette's daughter was standing by her man when she got into a fight with a police officer, authorities said.

Tamala Georgette Smith, 27, of Tuskegee, Ala., is due in court next Wednesday to face charges of defiant trespass, disorderly conduct and assault.

Smith is accused of fighting with Officer Vicky Mouser, who was providing security at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center on Sunday. The confrontation happened after Smith's boyfriend's put his feet on a chair.

Police quoted Smith as saying: "Who do you rent-a-cops think you are, telling my boyfriend to take his feet off the hospital chair? You're harassing my boyfriend."

Smith, the daughter of Wynette and country singer George Jones, pushed Mouser, authorities said. The officer injured her wrist and missed three days of work.

If convicted, Smith could get up to four years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Wynette, best known for the hit "Stand By Your Man," was released from the hospital Thursday after nine days of treatment for nutritional problems.

LONDON — A BBC camera crew's five weeks of work filming birds in Papua New Guinea was all for naught, apparently because of a state-of-the-art airport security scanner.

Upon returning home, crew members on David Attenborough's 10-part series "The Life of Birds" discovered their film was foggy.

Initial checks with its manufacturer, Kodak, revealed the film probably had been affected by X-rays from a new high-dose CTX 5000 scanner. Suspicion then fell on Manchester Airport, where the cameraman started his journey with the film checked in his luggage.

Airport spokesman Darren Roberts said that there was no evidence the film was actually scanned there, but that passengers are always advised to carry such material in their carry-on luggage.

Keith Scholey, acting head of the BBC unit, said the story has a happy ending.

"We put in an insurance claim because it was clearly an accident," Scholey said. "We invested the money in another film crew, and the results of the filming were better than the first trip.

"David Attenborough is certainly not jumping up and down wailing and gnashing his teeth."

CINCINNATI — Siegfried and Roy presented two white lion cubs to the Cincinnati Zoo on Thursday, and it was no illusion.

The cubs, named Sunshine and Future, will be on display indefinitely. The rare animals were born in Germany.

Siegfried and Roy, who perform illusions with animals in their Las Vegas act, are known for their efforts in breeding white tigers and lions.

"We're trying to make a positive impact on wildlife," Roy said. "We love the Cincinnati Zoo. We think that what the people are doing in Ohio and Cincinnati for animal husbandry is second to none, and that's why we're here."

Popularity of Community Bible Study groups continues to grow

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Every Wednesday morning, over 400 women and children attend the weekly Community Bible Study at the First Baptist Church sanctuary. The group seems to grow in numbers every year.

Marilyn Yates, teaching director for the CBS's Ladies' Day Group, attributes the course's popularity to the fact that it is "a Bible study that's a ministry. We reach out to our people. Our goal is to have every member called every single week by a core member. Then, they get to come in and share with other women the insight and discovery in the Bible."

The calls that Ms. Yates mentioned, are personal phone calls, designed to make everyone in the group feel the friendship and fellowship that the course offers.

The Midland Ladies' Day Group, which meets Wednesdays from 9:15-11:15 a.m., is one of four CBS courses in Midland. There is also a group for teens, held Tuesdays from 7-8:30 p.m. at Grace Presbyterian Church; a Men's Evening Group, held 7-8:30 p.m. Mondays at First Presbyterian, and a Ladies' Evening Group, also held Mondays from 7-8:30 p.m., at First Presbyterian.

Janice Henry is the teaching director for the teen group; Skip Hedgpeth and Linda Chaffin are teaching directors for the adult evening courses.

"I think what's unique about our groups," Yates said, "is that we represent a huge cross-section, we have women of all ages and backgrounds. You make friends at Community Bible Study that you would not find anywhere else. The people who come to the group have become my very best friends."

Two hundred sixty-five women are currently enrolled in the Wednesday morning CBS course; they bring with them 145 children, kids that comprise the weekly CBS course for youngsters. Karon Brown is the children's teaching director.

One of the advantages, thanks to the CBS philosophy, is that although it is large in numbers, the class is made to feel smaller.

"We can give that personal ministry and personal touch every week, and that is very important to me," Ms. Yates said.

According to CBS literature, the course is "every person's Bible study. Every man, woman, youth and child will be so cared for and loved that everyone will feel comfortable regardless of their background, education, church involvement (or lack thereof), race or economic status. Our desire is to build unity in the midst of the diversity of the community."

"There is a lot of friendship and joy and fellowship involved," said Yates. "I've seen lives changed through faith in Jesus as their Savior. I've seen people come in with brand new Bibles that had never studied the Bible before. I've seen people become believers, and I've seen people who have been Christian a long time come in and enjoy a fellowship and enjoy the lessons. And I've seen my own life change."

The Ladies' Day Group of Community Bible Study is conducted Wednesdays from 9:15-11:15 a.m. at First Baptist Church, Garfield and Louisiana. Pictured is the recently completed addition to the church on the north side of First Baptist.

Yates is assisted by Renee Baer, the assistant teaching director, and Edwina Roberts, the day group's administrative coordinator. There are two senior leaders and various children's directors as well.

The courses are 30 weeks long and roughly follow the school calendar. There are 14 different courses of study to choose from, but for the last few sessions the day group has focused to stay on the course that focuses on 1 & 2 Peter, Daniel and Colossians.

"One hundred of the women (in the current class) were not in CBS last year," Ms. Yates said. "We do no advertising. It's mostly learned about through word of mouth and personal invitation. people will hear from friends what a huge impact studying the Bible has had on their lives. It is that love, but it is also the study of the word of God. People hunger for it and they come back."

CBS is interdenominational and is not affiliated with any one church, although the groups say they owe much to the host churches.

Each session of CBS consists of a 45-minute small-group discussion followed by the large-group session. Homework is also given.

There are now 280 CBS classes in the United States. Internationally, the growth of CBS has been astounding, jumping from 14 in 1993 to 433 in 1997.

Ex-Dolphin injured

KALISPELL, Mont. — Former Miami Dolphins All-Pro defensive end Doug Betters was in serious but stable condition Friday after undergoing surgery for spinal injuries sustained in a ski accident a day earlier.

Kalispell Regional Medical Center said Betters' injuries were not life-threatening.

The operation by a neurosurgeon lasted at least five hours, and involved both a bone graft and decompression of the spinal canal, hospital spokesman Jim Oliverson said.

He said more time was needed to determine Betters' prognosis.

A friend of Betters told KOFI-AM of Kalispell that he fractured three vertebrae in his neck.

Officials at The Big Mountain resort said the tip of Betters' ski apparently became caught in the snow and he fell, hitting his head. Betters, considered an excellent skier, was flown from the accident scene Thursday afternoon.

NBA All-Star game in New York abounds with intriguing subplots

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

NEW YORK — This should be an All-Star game to remember, a crossroads event with subplot upon subplot in the media capital of the world.

Michael Jordan in his "last" All-Star game vs. Kobe Bryant in his first.

The league elders vs. the toddlers.

Grumpy George Karl vs. laid-back Larry Bird.

The slam-dunk contest vs. 2-ball.

It even has the David Stern vs. Latrell Sprewell sideshow.

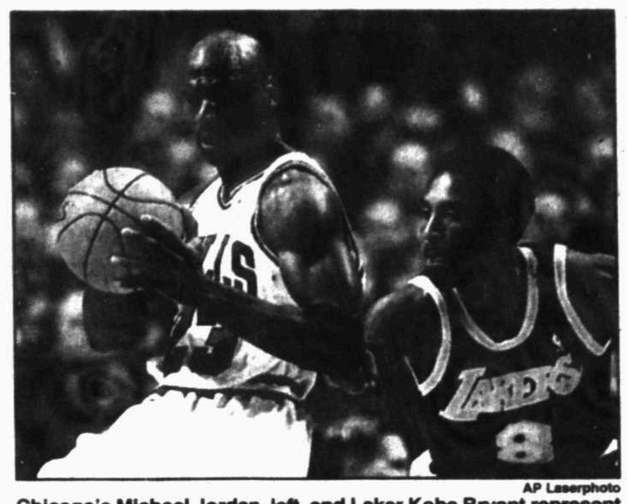

"It's going to be fun. I can't wait. Talk about your emotions and adrenaline!" said Bryant, the 19-year-old Lakers reserve voted by fans into the starting lineup for the Western Conference as the youngest NBA All-Star ever.

The game, which tips off Sunday at 5:38 p.m., looks like it may have some of the pizzazz that was missing the last couple of years in humdrum contests in the too-big Alamodome in San Antonio and the silent Gund Arena in Cleveland.

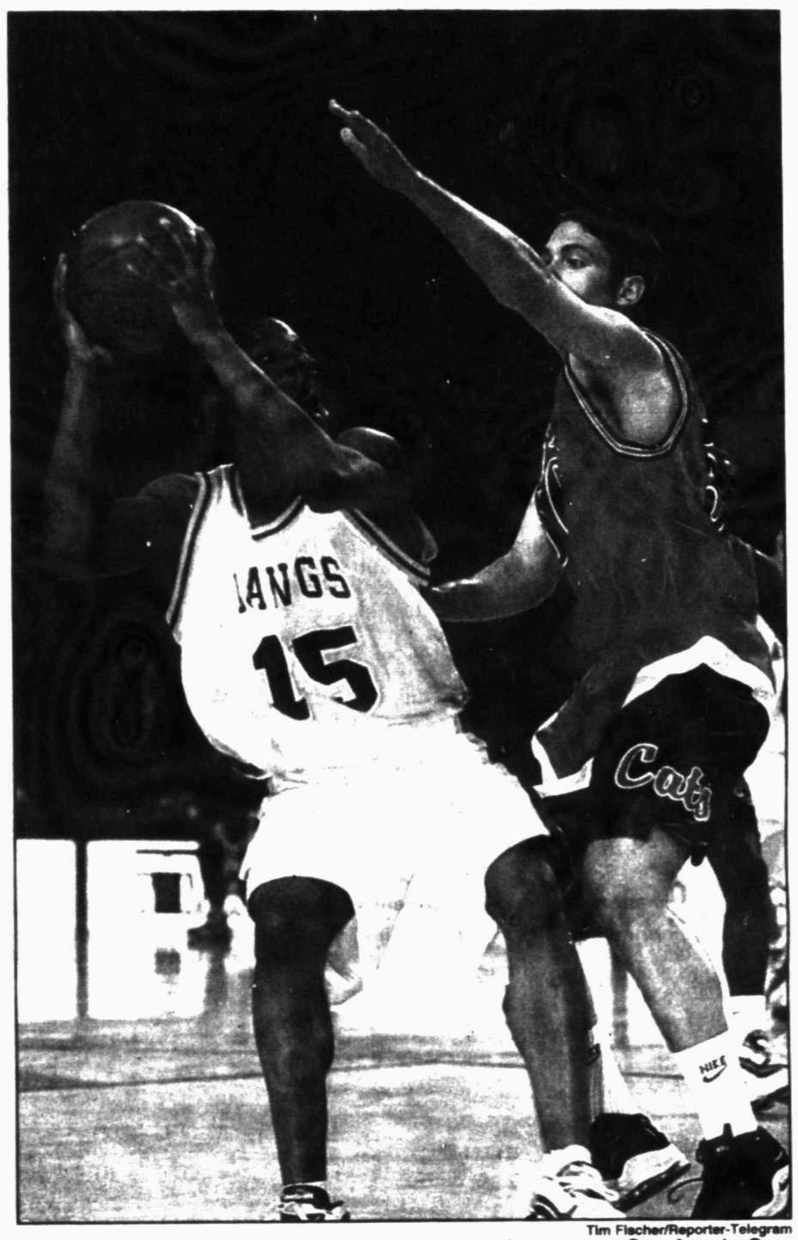

The New York Knicks' Madison Square Garden is known as the mecca of basketball and the game hasn't been in the Big Apple since 1968. Some 1,817 media credentials have been issued, scalpers have been demanding more than $1,000 for the best seats and even the players seem to be looking forward to it instead of secretly dreading the lost vacation time.

"It's going to be very exciting, given all the young players who have made the team," Jordan said. "Most of the old guys and some of the old

Bulldogs clinch district title by routing Bobcats

One day after officially having to forfeit a District 4-5A basketball game to Odessa Permian for playing an academically ineligible player, Midland High became the 4-5A champion for the second year in a row, dismantling the San Angelo Central Bobcats 90-55 at Chaparral Center Friday night.

As if these Bulldogs (9-1 in district play, counting the forfeit) needed any help in winning the loop title, they got some aid anyway from the Odessa High Bronchos. OHS defeated second place Abilene High, 69-66, Friday in Odessa as the Eagles fell to 6-4 and left with no hope of catching MHS for the league title since the Bulldogs have just two games left to play and a three-game lead over the field.

And if you were worried that these 26-2 Bulldogs could face the adversity of the week in dealing with a forced forfeit, you just have to turn over the problems to MHS' Big Three (Kirby Lemons, Jay Christian and Charles Tatum).

Each of the threesome pumped in 23 points, scoring 69 of Midland High's 90 and hauling in 18 of the Bulldogs' 32 rebounds. Christian turned the double-double, adding 10 rebounds to his 23 points.

"Having to forfeit a game and lose all our district streaks was a letdown for the team," Christian said, "but we decided that we won that Permian game easily and we have used this setback as a factor of motivation.

"It seems like we have some kind of adversity every year, but it always gets us going. This was it this year. We're like a Ferrari, slow starting and fast on the straightaway for the rest of the race. We still have some track left, but we're on the straightaway."

Tatum scored 21 of his 23 points in the first half, hitting eight-of-10 from the field, including five 3-point shots.

"I just knew something like this was going to happen," Tatum said. "I told (teammate) Melvin Jackson before the game that I was in a zone. Shooting the 3-point shot doesn't bother me at all. It's just like shooting a free throw or a jump shot. It's just concentration. I'll take that shot anytime it's given to me."

For Lemons, 23 points was only an average game, two points below his season average. He also had seven rebounds, which is below his season average. But this senior can play the game, always around 25 points and 10-15 rebounds. He has thundering dunks and plays the defensive court like he was a major league centerfielder.

"I feel very fortunate to have the kids I've got this year," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "It doesn't have much to do with me. I have great players and a great assistant coach (Craig Raughton) and if you can't win with that, you don't need to be in this business. Nothing bothers this team. They just love to play basketball. And some of our kids don't get to play very much, but they are over there yelling like cheerleaders. This may be the most fun group I've

Midland High star joins powerful A&M program

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

For three seasons, Jodie Mitchell's talents have made her a marked player on the two-time defending champion Midland High girls' soccer team. Now there is another reason other teams will take notice of her — she is a Texas A&M signee.

The senior put her name on the dotted line to play with the Aggies' nationally-ranked team.

"It is a great feeling," said Mitchell, who chose A&M over Texas Tech. "I had a tough decision but I think I made the right decision at the right time.

"It will be a new experience and will be a lot of fun."

Mitchell joins a program which is regarded as the top program in this part of the country and one of the elite programs in the nation. Texas A&M, the Big 12 champion, finished the regular season with a No. 4 ranking from Soccer America and the NSCAA and a No. 3 ranking from the Soccer News. Coach Gerald Guerreri's Aggies were upset in the first round of the NCAA playoffs, falling to SMU.

Guerreri, who was in town Thursday, said that Mitchell will be a great asset for his program and sees her playing a forward spot.

"The thing that stood out the most was the natural athleticism," said Guerreri, who has been with the team since its inception five years ago.

"She has a great burst of speed and good coordination with the ball. Technically, she is very strong.

"That athletic dimension is some-

Garden City girls pass test against Irion

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

GARDEN CITY — In District 30-A this season, the Garden City and Irion County girls basketball teams have found each other the true measuring sticks of their abilities.

Who stands tallest at the end still has yet to be determined, but Friday night Garden City showed that not having its best player isn't about to shrink its status.

Only 10 days after losing all-state guard Tiffany Maxie to a knee injury in a game against Irion County, the Lady Bearkats faced the Lady Hornets in a district rematch which they had to win in order to have any shot at a district title. Garden City showed it was more than one star player against first half district winner Irion County, pulling together with a team effort and outstanding team defense to roll to a 54-41 victory, which gives the Lady Bearkats a shot at making the playoffs.

If Garden City (22-4 overall, 4-1 in district) on Tuesday defeats Rankin — a team it crushed by 41 points over a week ago — it will clinch the second-half title of 30-A and force a one-game playoff to determine the district championship and district's first seed in the UIL playoffs.

A third meeting between the Lady Bearkats and Irion County, two members of last year's II-A tournament, would certainly be compelling. Garden City lost Maxie early in the first meeting between the two teams in Mertzon and ended up losing 39-32 in overtime. There was little doubt over the outcome this time.

"We were ready to play this time," said Garden City coach Michael Meek. "I think mentally when (Maxie) went down during the first game it affected us. I think I think we knew what we were going into this game with."

The Lady Bearkats didn't use one player to replace Maxie, but went with 11 instead. That's how many players on the Garden City roster saw action

Texan gets to Olympics by becoming bobsledder

By Mark McDonald
The Dallas Morning News

NAGANO, Japan - There are two home-grown Texans here at the Winter Olympics, one a miniature figure skater from Sugar Land, world champion Tara Lipinski, a high jumper almost certain to win a medal.

The other Texan is a square-jawed fellow from Del Rio, Todd Hays, a college linebacker-turned-martial artist, a Canadian Football League reject whose parents paid to send him back to Canada to take lessons in how to drive a bobsled.

Lipinski and her handlers have known all along her athletic destiny was awaiting her in Nagano. Hays, well, he's another story.

A polite, crewcut kid raised in the smelter-swelter of South Texas, Todd Hays says he often daydreamed about winter scenes and snowy storms. Until he got to college, he had seen snow exactly twice in his life.

He played football at the University of Tulsa, then took up martial arts and became a professional kickboxer. He got a tryout with the Toronto Argonauts of the CFL, but played in just one pre-season game before getting the ax. Dejected and jobless, he returned to the 110-degree furnace of Del Rio.

That same week - this was June of 1994 - Todd's older brother, Lee, was watching the 10 o'clock news and saw that the U.S. Bobsled Federation was holding a tryout camp up in San Antonio. Lee told Todd he'd make the perfect bobsled pusher - strong, fast, explosive, a natural.

"Yeah, right," said Todd just before he turned out the light to go to sleep.

MHS' Winchell stands in second place at San Angelo tournament

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — Midland High's Shelley Winchell stands alone in second place after the first day of San Angelo Invitational.

The Lady Bulldog shot an 89 at the San Angelo County Club and trails Permian's Jodie Duff by three shots.

In the team race in the Blue Group, Winchell's performance led MHS to its fifth-place standing while the Midland Lee girls golf team stands in third after Day 1. The Lady Rebs shot a 398 and trail El Paso Hanks, who lead the tournament with a 388. Permian trails Hanks by one stroke.

For Lee, Krystal Mehaffey and Amber Meyers each shot 95 and are tied for eighth.

In the Orange group, which is made up of schools 4A and smaller, Big Spring and Andrews are second and fourth respectively in the team race. Big Spring shot a 367 while Andrews had a 373. Snyder is running away with the team title after a 337 at Bentwood Country Club.

Dani Mallon of Justin Northwest leads the Orange group Medalist with a 78. Big Spring's Kathy Hollar is tied for fifth with a 84 and Ashlie Simmons fired an 87 and is tied for 10th. Andrews' Jessica Treadwell is tied for seventh with an 85.

Boys

Abilene High at Midland Lee

Where: Lee Soccer Field.
When: 2 p.m.
Records: AHS is 7-2 overall and 4-0 in District 7, Lee is 9-3 and 2-2.
Coaches: AHS — Mike Wiersema. Lee — John McCulloch.
Last Action: AHS defeated Odessa High 3-1. Lee was off on Tuesday. Lee defeated Cooper 1-0 last Saturday.
About AHS: Abilene High is not a high-scoring team, but it can control the game in the midfield on the defensive side. AHS has been involved in two one-goal games (wins over Central and MHS).
About Lee: This game is huge for McCulloch's team. Lee can take a big step in establishing itself as the top team in District 7. Lee, AHS, Central and Permian are the top four contenders for the three playoffs spots. So with AHS, Permian and Central as the next three teams on Lee's schedule, this game starts a big stretch.
"It is really a big game. We are treating the game in that way," McCulloch said. "We want to be on top going into second half of season. This can put us on top. It is like the winner is in first by themselves but there is still a long way to go."
Troy Henry will miss the game due to a soft red card he received at the end of the Cooper game. Jeremy Swanson, Justin Smith will start up front for Lee. Nils Baudiss and Kyle King are available to play if needed for the Rebs.

Midland High at Abilene Cooper

Where: MHS Soccer Field.
When: 2 p.m.
Records: MHS is 4-6 and 0-4. Cooper is 1-7 and 0-3.
Coaches: MHS — Tom Esikhati. Cooper — Eric Bengs. .
Last Action: MHS fell to Central 6-0. Cooper lost to Permian 6-0.
About Cooper: This is a game which could favor the Coogs because of the home field advantage. Cooper held Lee to just one goal on a soggy pitch at Lee Athletic Complex, and today's surface could be equally as bad.
About MHS: This game is really a battle to get out of the District 7 cellar, but for the Bulldogs, it is also a chance to end their four-game district losing streak and finally get into the win column.
Midland High got blown out by Central in a game which MHS shot the ball one time. The offense has to step up, and Jeremie Piette, in particular, must find the back of the goal.

Girls

Abilene Cooper at Midland High

Where: Lee Athletic Complex.
When: 2 p.m.
Records: Cooper is 5-4 and 2-1. MHS is 11-2 and 3-1.
Coaches: Cooper — Claudia Blea. MHS — Scott Hodkinson.
Last Action: Cooper defeated Permian 3-0. Midland High beat Central 2-0.
About Cooper: The Lady Coogs come to town in a game which will put the winner in an advantageous postion for when the second half of district begins. Cooper, whose three-year championship run was ended by MHS last year, will have some revenge on their mind.
"Cooper has been a big thorn in our sides," Hodkinson said. "We ended a big streak of theirs two years ago and I'm sure they would like to come in and end the (17-game home) streak we have going."
About MHS: The Lady Bulldogs, the two-time defending district champs, need this game to stay one game behind Lee.
"It is a game we need to win," Hodkinson said. "It is important to stay behind Lee by one game. That makes the game we play the next time in that much more important."

Midland Lee at Abilene High

Where: Lee Athletic Complex.
When: 2 p.m.
Records: Lee is 8-3 and 3-0. AHS is 5-6 and 0-4.
Coaches: Lee — Mike Simpson. AHS — Renee Barbee.
Last Action: AHS fell to OHS 2-1 in a shootout. Lee was off on Tuesday and defeated Cooper 2-1 in a shootout.
About AHS: The Lady Eagles are in a slump, having dropped their first four games. However, AHS is still a scary team especially in Abilene.
About Lee: This is a game Lee must win, because MHS and Cooper already have. Lee is playing good soccer and doing it defensively. However, this a game which Ritha Belizaire, Linsey Johnson and the rest of the Lady Rebs can get the offense going. Four might be a number for Simpson's team to shoot for. That is how many goals MHS and Cooper each scored.

Central knocks off Midland High girls; Odessa Permian takes care of Cooper

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High Lady Bulldogs nearly fell from the District 4-5A playoff race here Friday night with a 47-45 loss to league leading San Angelo Central, but Odessa Permian saved the day by beating Abilene Cooper, 65-54.

MHS fell to 6-5 in the league race, but Cooper fell to 7-4 with one game left to play and the Lady Dawgs travel to Cooper Tuesday to end regular season play. An MHS win over Cooper would force a district playoff for the third playoff berth from 4-5A.

The Lady Bobcats vaulted into the playoffs with the win as Kerry Hocker led the way with 17 points and Kanesha Randle added 14. Randle hit 10 of 12 free throws.

Midland High got 14 points from Morgan Kelley and 13 from Heidi Lange.

The Lady Dawgs dug a hole early, scoring only two points in the first quarter and trailed 20-10 at the half. However, MHS rallied in the game to tie it at 42-42 with less than two minutes left to play, but couldn't get a lead.

Odessa Permian clinched the second of the three 4-5A playoff spots and moved within a half-game of the district leader Lady Bobcats after its victory over Abilene Cooper.

Permian's Jennifer Brewer scored 17, Trineka Freeman 16 and Katrina Jordan 15 as the Lady Panthers improved to 20-7 overall and 8-4 in 4-5A.

Cooper, which fell out of a tie for first, drops to 17-11 and 7-4. Catherine Weir had a game-high 24. Ashley Varner scored 14, and Robin Pedgett added 10. Cooper can clinch a playoff spot with a win over Midland High on Tuesday.

The Abilene High girls used a 29-19 fourth quarter to defeat Odessa High 72-61 Friday at Abilene High.

Randi Williams scored 15. Sara Laster and Michelle Martin each added 12 for the Lady Eagles, who improve 12-15, 3-8. Odessa High, which falls two game out of third at 5-6 in 4-5A, received 17 from Chanie Sutherland and 20 from Shelby Fitzgerald.

Sonora gets by Greenwood

SONORA — A late 3-point goal gave Sonora a 57-54 overtime victory over Greenwood in District 4-3A action.

Fernie Emiliano's trey ended what was a strong battle by the Rangers at the home of the district-leading Sonora, who improves to 18-7 and 7-0.

Greenwood had held Ty Harrelson, West Texas's leading scorer, to just 15 points but an 8-for-21 performance from the free throw line hurt the Rangers, who fall to 15-11 and 4-3. Greenwood must now win out in its last three games to take second place from Crane and Colorado City.

The Rangerettes defeated Sonora to improve to 14-13 and 5-3, but Greenwood didn't call in a score or any details.

Andrews takes 4-4A lead

FORT STOCKTON — Shaud Williams' 30-point performance paved the way for Andrews' 77-68 win over Fort Stockton here Friday.

That win, along with a one-point Sweetwater loss to San Angelo Lake View, now puts the Mustangs in first place in the District 4-4A race.

Williams had 30 points, which included 16 free throw conversions in 16 attempts. The Mustangs' guard added seven rebounds, seven assists and eight steals.

Andrews found themselves down 10 at one point in the fourth quarter, but good defense and clutch shooting allowed George Byerly's team to recapture the 4-4A lead with a 7-1 record. Jacob Lopez scored 18 and Waylon Mayfield added 12.

MHS: Bulldogs clinch 4-5A

(From 1C)

ever worked with."

The Bobcats were hurt by the scrambling MHS defense which forced 29 turnovers. The Bulldogs also held the highly effective Terence Fields to only eight points and no rebounds. Jason Brumm and Ronald Rodgers had 16 and 14 points respectively.

From now on, MHS can sit back and gear for the state playoffs. The only danger now is losing this high-cut edge.

In junior varsity play, San Angelo got 34 points from Jason Swann to defeat MHS 83-70. Ragi Hickey had 16 points for MHS while Weldon Cooks added 12. The MHS JV is now 15-9 on the season, losing four in a row after its forfeit with Permian and is now 4-6 in league play.

4-5A Notes: Odessa High, which had won only one district game this season, shocked AHS as Fred Thomas led the way with 22 points. Nigel Butler added 18 points and Austin Mathis had 10 to aid in the shocker. Odis Dalton led the Eagles with 17 points while Jason Busch had 14 and Brad Massey 13. Odessa Permian moved into a second place tie with AHS by beating Abilene Cooper 56-54. The Panthers have made good use of the forfeit win gained from Midland High. Cooper fell into a fourth place tie with Midland Lee, both at 5-4, and both still owning chances to make the playoffs.

Coach Bird can't can't stay away from All-Star games

By Hank Lowenkron
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Those who laughed when the Indiana Pacers brought Larry Bird back to his home state as a coach aren't saying much these days — except perhaps to admit they were wrong.

In his first season coaching at any level, Bird has guided a turnaround that has put him back in the All-Star game, this time as coach of the Eastern Conference team.

"I knew Larry could coach and lead this team when I hired him," team president Donnie Walsh said. "However, I'd be a liar if I said I expected him to be so successful, so quickly."

Turning teams around is nothing new for Bird. He did the same in 1979 when he left Indiana State and went to the Boston Celtics, who were coming off a 29-53 season. He was rookie of the year and led the Celtics to a 61-21 record — one of the biggest single-season improvements in NBA history.

The man who became known as Larry Legend went on to win three championships, three league MVP awards and 10 trips to the All-Star game before ending a playing career that should put him in the Hall of Fame this year, his first year of eligibility.

But when Bird was hired to coach the Pacers, skeptics smiled and said he would be unable to work with players lacking the talent and dedication he had when he was draining jumpers or making sweet passes.

"I'm not asking for that," he said. "All I want is hard work in practice and for about 25 minutes in a game. ... If a guy can't give that, he doesn't belong in the NBA."

Bird earned the right to coach on Sunday at Madison Square Garden in New York because Indiana had the conference's best record going into the break, 33-13 after Wednesday's loss on the road to Seattle, the team with the league's best record (37-10). Sonics coach George Karl will coach the West's All-Star team.

Bird's guidance and easygoing demeanor have helped the Pacers get off to their best start since they joined the league in 1976. Indiana finished 39-43 and missed the playoffs last season. Now the team looks like it has a good shot at winning the Central Division crown over the two-time NBA champion Chicago Bulls.

The Pacers insist Bird's biggest attribute is allowing them to play the game.

"Who in their right mind wouldn't listen to what Larry Bird tells them?" said leading scorer Reggie Miller. "He knows what it takes to be a successful player, and he's letting us do the things to have the success."

NBA coaches often have trouble juggling players and their time on the court, but Bird appears to be doing a masterful job with a veteran-laden club.

He's been able to start the same five of Miller, Mullin, Mark Jackson, Rik Smits and Dale Davis nearly every game. His players off the bench have also been major assets.

AP Laserphoto

Larry Bird went to ten All-Star games as a player, and he's participating again in his first year as a coach. His Indiana Pacers have the best record in the Eastern Conference, giving Bird the honor of coaching the Eastern All-Stars Sunday.

"The guys know the playing time will be determined by how hard they work in practice, and how they perform," Bird said. "I can't say I'm happy with all of the things I've seen, but I'm real happy with the way everyone has worked.

"This is not my team, it is their team. I do know what it takes to win championships. I try to tell the players, and then it is up to them if they want to make the sacrifices necessary for success."

ALL-STAR: Game features stars of several generations

faces have gone. It's like the changing of the times."

The East and West rosters feature players from different generations. There are elders in Jordan, Karl Malone, David Robinson and Reggie Miller; youngsters in Bryant, rookie Tim Duncan, Kevin Garnett and Antoine Walker; and three generations of 'tweeners: the Jason Kidd-Nick Van Exel-Vin Baker types; the slightly older Grant Hill-Penny Hardaway-Shaquille O'Neal set; and the early 30s Shawn Kemp-Glen Rice-Mitch Richmond crew.

Among the "old faces" Jordan was talking about are Patrick Ewing of New York (an 11-time All-Star); Charles Barkley (11), Hakeem Olajuwon (12) and Clyde Drexler (10), all of Houston; John Stockton of Utah (9); and Scottie Pippen (7) of Chicago.

Injuries and diminished vote totals kept all of them from making this year's cut, leaving their formerly automatic roster spots open to some of the league's most exciting newcomers.

Jordan and Utah's Malone are the oldest veterans on the All-Star team, and the seven first-timers are: Bryant, Van Exel, Duncan, Walker, Steve Smith, Rik Smits and Jayson Williams.

"Charles is not there, Olajuwon is not there, Ewing's not there — all the guys who came up with me when we made the transformation from the Larry Birds and the Kevin McHales," Jordan said. "I guess I seem like the oldest one who is still around who made the transition."

The East brings a two-game winning streak into the game. Jordan needs to score 41 points to break Kareem-Abdul Jabbar's career All-Star game scoring record of 251 points. Jordan's average of 21.1 points in 10 All-Star games is the highest in league history.

It may be his last All-Star game. Jordan says he'll retire if Phil Jackson is not rehired as coach of the Chicago Bulls, and general manager Jerry Krause has said Jackson won't be back.

"This is it. I'm done," Jordan said Wednesday night. "It's totally simple. I won't play anywhere else. I won't follow Phil anywhere. I will totally retire. That clears up every question."

If everyone sticks to their positions, it means the NBA will lose the greatest player in its history at a time when the future is unsettled and the league is waging a campaign to keep its image shiny.

From enforcing rules on the length of shorts to handing former All-Star Sprewell the harshest non-drug-related penalty in league history, the NBA has been asserting its authority as labor troubles loom.

The league has the right to reopen the collective bargaining agreement with the players union, and many agents and team personnel expect a lockout to begin July 1 and carry into the fall, threatening the start of next season.

Perhaps not coincidentally, none of the league's troublemakers are around for the weekend's festivities.

Dennis Rodman, on his way to an unprecedented seventh consecutive rebounding title, was not voted in by the fans or the Eastern Conference coaches. He will be partying in Los Angeles and Las Vegas over the break.

Chris Webber and Rod Strickland of Washington, both of whom have been in trouble with the law, weren't voted in. And the All-Cornrow team of Allen Iverson, Rasheed Wallace and Sprewell will be elsewhere, too.

The biggest malcontent may be West coach Karl.

Despite winning an average of more than 60 games over the past four seasons, Karl has been left hanging by Seattle management in his quest to get a contract extension. Relations between Karl and the front office are so bad that the coach grew a shaggy beard and refused to cut his hair in a show of rebelliousness.

Bird backed off his earlier stance that he never wanted to be a part of another All-Star weekend; he didn't want to take anything away from what his Indiana Pacers have accomplished. The team has the best record in the East, earning Bird the coaching spot.

Many of the league's general managers are making the trip to New York. The game is being held just 11 days before the trading deadline, and there could be some movement in stalemated talks that have kept Damon Stoudamire in Toronto, Joe Smith in Golden State and Richmond in Sacramento.

"Any time you get this many general managers together with the trade deadline looming and guys rumored to be on the block, you're going to have a lot of trade conversations," Knicks general manager Ernie Grunfeld said.

Stern and union director Billy Hunter will have their gag order lifted over the weekend so they can discuss the Sprewell arbitration case, which has dragged on for two weeks and threatened to put a damper on the league's annual party.

On Saturday, an experiment in the assimilation of the WNBA into All-Star weekend takes place when a new skills event, 2-ball, replaces the popular but stale slam-dunk contest.

The rookie game, million-dollar shot and 3-point shootout remain in place for All-Star Saturday.

"The All-Star game hasn't been in New York for 30 years," Grunfeld said, "and we think it's going to be one of the best ever."

'Sheridan makes All-Star weekend debut

NEW YORK — Looking forward to the slam dunk contest? Don't hold your breath.

If you do, you'll turn blue watching eight NBA players and eight WNBA players hoisting shots, rebounding and passing in a game called "2ball" — the newest addition to All-Star Saturday.

"Myself, I was a little disappointed that we were replacing the slam-dunk contest," said Lisa Leslie of the WNBA's Los Angeles Sparks. "To add 2ball would have been great, but I don't know that we can live up to what the dunk contest has done for our country, the NBA and what it stands for."

Putting the dunk contest on hiatus wasn't a popular decision — especially among the NBA's younger players and fans.

But like it or not, the league is going ahead with its replacement and has lined up some pretty big names to help with the transition.

Leslie will be paired with 19-year-old All-Star Kobe Bryant for the 2ball competition, which will be the first event on All-Star Saturday night.

Each pair must alternate shots from seven designated spots on the floor, with different point values given for each shot based upon degree of difficulty.

A layup, for instance, is worth 2 points. An NBA-length 3-pointer is worth 8 points. A foul shot is 4 points.

Players must adhere to regular rules that prevent traveling, double-dribbling, palming, etc., and each team will have 60 seconds to score as many points as possible.

Points are deducted if a team does not shoot from all seven spots. A maximum of two layups are allowed per round.

"When Kobe and I practiced, we thought 'Oh, OK, whatever.' But we started to get into it and you get really fired up about making your shots and making as many as you can in 60 seconds. Then we were like 'Let's do it again, let's do it again,'" Leslie said.

"I don't know how exciting it is for the fans, especially if they're really bummed about the dunk contest not occurring. But I think the people in New York will appreciate good shooting, and hopefully our shots are on that day."

Also competing will be Glen Rice and Andrea Stinson of Charlotte, Wesley Person and Michelle Edwards of Cleveland, Clyde Drexler and Cynthia Cooper of Houston, Allan Houston and Rebecca Lobo of New York, Steve Nash and Michelle Timms of Phoenix, Mitch Richmond and Ruthie Bolton-Holifield of Sacramento and Karl Malone and Tammi Reiss of Utah.

The NBA players union voiced its displeasure after it wasn't consulted about replacing the slam dunk contest.

Pistons center Brian Williams said the contest sounds like "watching paint dry or grass grow," and other detractors complained that the WNBA is being forced down the throats of pure NBA fans.

Leslie understands the arguments. All she asks for is a look-see.

"It's not like (women) are asking to get in the NBA, assign one woman per team and allow us to play five minutes per half or per quarter — that would be forcing our game upon them."

Jordan skips All-Star media gathering again

By Tom Withers
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Like he's done the past few years, Michael Jordan was on a golf course while the other NBA All-Stars endured media day Friday.

Jordan, who has been fined $10,000 each year he has skipped the mandatory media session, was believed to be playing golf with buddy Charles Barkley at Steve Wynn's exclusive Shadow Creek resort course in Las Vegas.

And despite being thousands of miles away, Jordan was, as always, the main topic of conversation among his peers.

The NBA's biggest star is once again talking about retirement, meaning that this, his 12th All-Star appearance, would be his last. Earlier this week, Jordan reiterated his threat to retire if the Chicago Bulls don't rehire coach Phil Jackson.

"That's my guess," said Houston's Clyde Drexler, who'll participate in Saturday's 2ball event as part of All-Star weekend. "Michael has accomplished a lot in his career, and if that (retirement) is what he wants to do, he'll do it. It might be time for him to do something else."

With the prospect of this being a farewell party, Jordan, the leading vote-getter in fan balloting for the ninth straight year, may want to put on a special show on Sunday. And because the game is at Madison Square Garden — one of his favorite arenas — other players are expecting it.

"You know what Michael Jordan is?," asked the Nets' Jayson Williams. "He's a UFO. Have you ever seen a UFO? Well, you're going to see one Sunday."

Kobe Bryant, the Lakers' 19-year-old guard voted a starter even though he comes off the bench, is the latest young star to be labeled the "next Michael Jordan."

Scorpions sting Jacks in shootout

Staff Report

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Before Friday night, nobody would've given the Odessa Jackalopes much of a chance playing the New Mexico Scorpions on the road.

The Jacks made a late run at New Mexico but fell in a sudden death shootout 6-5. The Jacks don't come away empty handed as they pick up a pointy in the standings with the shootout loss.

Odessa trailed New Mexico 5-3 in the third when they came back with goals by Ryan Equale and Rodrigue to send the game into a shootout.

In the shootout, each team netted a goal, forcing sudden death. New Mexico's Eric Ricard was the only one to lit the lamp, giving the Scorpions the win.

The Jacks are off until Friday when they return to the Jack Shack to face Amarillo.

Kite, Love share Buick Invitational lead at rain delay

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The Spanish explorer Balboa clearly wasn't thinking about the PGA Tour's West Coast swing when he named the body of water off California the Pacific Ocean.

■ Golf Roundup

There has been nothing pacific, calm or tranquil about the last two weeks on tour. The West Coast Swing is now the Wet Coast Swing.

Just days after the Pebble Beach tournament was blown from February into August by El Nino, the second round of the Buick Invitational was washed out Friday when the greens at Torrey Pines became too wet to play.

Tom Kite, helped greatly in cold, windy rain by eye surgery that allows him to now play without glasses, was 9 under par through 29 holes, tied for the lead with Davis Love III, who had played 27 holes before play was suspended shortly after noon.

Steve Pate, Robert Damron and Jeff Sanday — playing in his first PGA Tour event — were at 8 under. Pate and Damron had played 28 holes and Sanday had completed 26.

Seven players, including Payne Stewart and Stewart Cink, were at 7 under. Tiger Woods, who started the day nine strokes back, got to 4 under through 30 holes to pull within five of the leaders.

Fuzzy Zoeller, who started the day one stroke off the lead at 9 under, was 4 over par for the 12 holes he played in Friday's mess and was 5 under through 30 holes.

The second round will be resumed at 9 a.m. PST Saturday then the cut will be made and the third round played. What's not clear, however, is if the storm will set up camp and stay around for a few days like it did at Pebble Beach.

Kite was perhaps the only player to find a silver lining in the rain clouds.

"I've got a whole different perspective on playing in the rain now," Kite said about the surgery that corrected his eyesight. "These days used to wipe me out."

Albus takes lead in first round of senior tourney

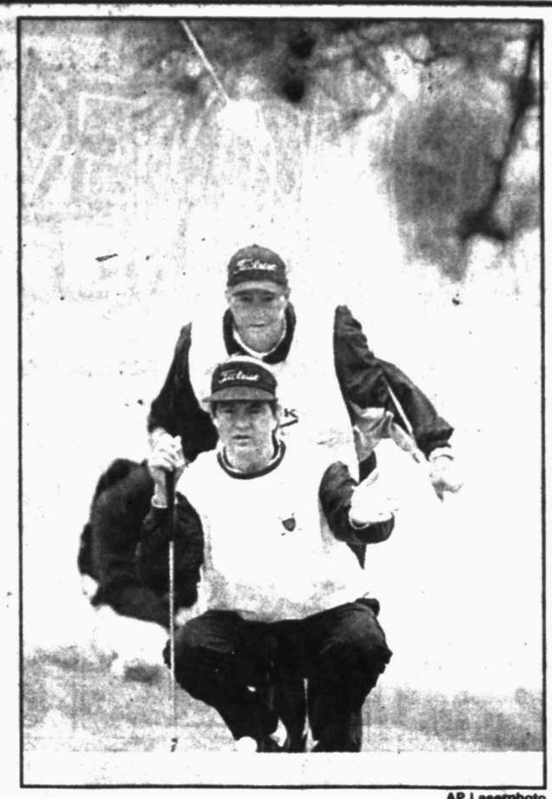

NAPLES, Fla. — Jim Albus shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday to take the first-round lead in Senior PGA Tour's LG Championship.

Tour rookie David Lundstrom birdied two of his final three holes to finish one stroke back at 68. Gil Morgan was third at 69, with Hale Irwin, Bob Murphy, Tom Wargo, Al Geiberger and Bob Eastwood tied at 70.

"That was the first good one in a while," Albus said. "It felt great. I hit the ball well and putted good, too. And it added up to a good score for a change."

Albus, 57, won five times in his first five years on the Senior Tour.

But in 1996, playing in pain, he dropped out of the top 50 money-winners. Off-season surgery on a blocked nerve in his neck fixed the problem, but his form never returned.

Olazabal leads Greg Norman International

SYDNEY, Australia — Greg Norman was upset by questions about his friendship with President Clinton on Friday, and the Australian's game suffered in the second round of the Greg Norman International.

Norman shot a 73 to drop seven shots behind leader Jose Maria Olazabal at 141.

Olazabal had his second straight 5-under-par 67 for 134 and a one-stroke lead over American John Cook, who had a 66.

Norman was asked about reports that independent counsel Kenneth Starr had subpoenaed television footage of Clinton's visit to Florida last year — when he also visited Norman's home — looking for possible footage of Clinton with former aide Monica Lewinsky. During the visit to Norman's home, Clinton stumbled down stairs and injured a knee.

"Let the thing go, guys," Norman said. "What he does in his private life is his business. I think he should just go on and run the country the way he wants to run it."

Frost takes South Africa Open lead

DURBAN, South Africa — David Frost of South Africa shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to move from seventh place to the lead after two rounds of the South African Open.

Frost reeled off four birdies on the front nine and three more on the back nine. He is at 134.

Countryman Ernie Els, who shot 64 on Thursday, had a par-72 Friday and is two shots back at 136. He holds two South African titles.

Tauruses go fast at Daytona

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — After months of speculation, rumor and innuendo, the wraps came off the new NASCAR Ford Tauruses Friday at Daytona International Speedway.

This time, it wasn't a midwinter test session, and the cars had to go through NASCAR Winston Cup director Gary Nelson's "House of Horrors," otherwise known as technical inspection.

So the Fords that took to the high-banked, 2.5-mile speedway oval Friday for the first day of practice for the Feb. 15 Daytona 500 were legal — and they were fast.

In fact, other than the Chevrolet Monte Carlo driven by two-time Winston Cup champion Terry Labonte, which led everybody with a lap of 192.193 mph, Fords were right near the top of the list.

Rusty Wallace was second-fastest with a lap of 190.686, followed by Chevy driver and defending pole winner Mike Skinner at 190.428, former Daytona winner Derrike Cope at 190.355 in a Pontiac Grand Prix, Jimmy Spencer at 190.299 and Greg Sacks 190.138, both in Tauruses, and defending race winner and Labonte teammate Jeff Gordon at 189.958 in a Monte Carlo.

"I just laid out everything I had a little while ago and, hopefully, we can find a little more," Wallace said. "We haven't done everything for the full blown qualifying package, but we're 99.8 percent of the way there.

"I'm shooting for the front row but that (No.) 5 car (Labonte) is just fast as lightning. He's way above everybody."

"We're good, and that's scary," said Labonte, whose Hendrick Motorsports team chose to sit out the last practice of the day. "We're ready to qualify. That's why we're afraid to run any more. We might mess something up."

Looking ahead to Saturday's scheduled pole qualifying for the season-opening 500-mile race, Labonte said, "We've got a few tenths (of a second) on on the field right now, but some of those guys could make up that difference between now and qualifying. We were in a qualifying mode and some of those guys weren't. It'll be close."

Since the announcement was made last August that the bulbous Taurus would replace the sleek-but-discontinued Thunderbird in NASCAR, Ford teams have complained of the short time to design, develop and build the new cars.

They also said the design of the first four-door model ever turned into a full-time entry in the stock car series gave them a built-in disadvantage because of too much drag and not enough downforce, a situation sure to cost precious miles per hour on the bigger tracks like Daytona.

Meanwhile, General Motors teams, showing little sympathy, have been saying that NASCAR gave the new Fords an aerodynamic advantage that will be particularly apparent at intermediate and short tracks.

Darrell Waltrip, who drives a Chevrolet, is disgusted by the many Ford complaints.

"They talk about they've only had it a few months," the owner-driver said. "They need to go find out what's been going on in Europe with the models and wind tunnels and all the other things that have been going on behind the scenes. They spent $2.5 million in Europe on wind tunnel models of the Taurus.

"They could easily have called that thing a Mustang. What difference does it make if it ain't going to look like nothing anyway?"

Felix Sabates, owner of a team that fields Monte Carlos for Sterling Marlin, Joe Nemechek and Wally Dallenbach Jr., said, "Those cars just don't look like a Taurus, and a Monte Carlo is a Monte Carlo. They cry wolf, wolf, wolf and they snookered everybody. I'm not worried about Daytona. I'm worried about when we leave here."

Wallace, whose Penske South team helped design the racing Taurus and built the first one, said, "When other teams start shooting bullets at it, it got you a little upset because you worked so hard on it.

"I think we've proved it's a good car right now, and everybody's had their opinion about it, what's right or wrong or different ways to do it. I'm not the expert at Daytona and Talladega but, for the moment, we're happy with our car."

Agent believes Elway will return

DENVER (AP) — John Elway will have at least one more more shot at being "king of the hill."

The 37-year-old Elway, who quarterbacked the Denver Broncos to their first Super Bowl title last month, plans to return for the 1998 NFL season, his agent, Marvin Demoff, said Thursday.

"My expectation always was that John would tell (owner) Pat Bowlen and (coach) Mike Shanahan a year in advance that I'm taking it one year at a time," Demoff told The Denver Post. "Well, John's giving them a year's notice on his locker starting now. He might end up renewing that lease after next season ...

"It fulfills his obligation to Pat to help him get a new stadium. It fulfills his obligation to Mike to get someone in place. And it allows John to tour the NFL at least one more season as the king of the hill, which is exactly what he is."

Team spokesman Jim Saccomano said Friday that Broncos' officials had not yet heard from Elway.

"In time, John is going to let us know ..." he said. "It's certainly very well known we love our quarterback, and want him to return."

Even before the Super Bowl victory over last year's champion, the Green Bay Packers, Bowlen had predicted Elway would be back at least one more season.

The two played golf last week in Hawaii and Bowlen said then he didn't get the feeling Elway was ready to quit.

"My impression is John is not going to retire," Bowlen said.

Knoblauch, Leiter move to New York

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

In a busy trading day for both New York teams, the Yankees finally got All-Star second baseman Chuck Knoblauch from the Minnesota Twins while the Mets acquired pitcher Al Leiter from the Florida Marlins on Friday.

The Marlins have now shed 12 players from their 25-man team that won the World Series. Florida got three minor leaguers for Leiter and infielder Ralph Milliard.

"It's unfortunate that so soon after winning the championship that they had to disassemble it," Leiter said. "It's just a real negative situation."

The Twins' trade of Knoblauch leaves only one player from the Minnesota team that won the 1991 World Series — pitcher Rick Aguilera.

Knoblauch, 29, hit .291 last season with 117 runs, a career-high 62 steals, 10 triples, nine homers and 58 RBIs. He also won his first Gold Glove award. He has a .304 average in seven major league seasons, with 713 runs and 276 steals.

"It's going to be a big help to us to get a solid leadoff hitter and a guy that controls the infield real well at second base," Yankees outfielder Darryl Strawberry said after working out Friday at Tampa, Fla. "He does so many things. He's a very versatile player. To get him to the ballclub is going to be a big plus for us."

Minnesota gets $3 million of Yankees owner George Steinbrenner's money and four minor league prospects: pitchers Eric Milton and Danny Mota, outfielder Brian Buchanan and shortstop Cristian Guzman.

"Until you see what these kids do you aren't going to be able to evaluate this trade," Twins general manager Terry Ryan said. "It might be five years. It might be three years. We do know what we traded."

The trade had been in the works for months. The teams agreed on the players earlier in the week, but could not announce the deal until they got the approval of acting commissioner Bud Selig because of the cash involved.

Leiter, 32, was 11-9 with a 4.34 ERA in 27 starts last year. The left-hander was 0-1 with no saves in the postseason. He made two appearances in the World Series, going 0-0 with a 5.06 ERA against Cleveland.

Since beating the Indians, Florida has shed nearly half its roster either by trade, release or the expansion draft. The salaries of those dozen players accounted for $29.34 million of the Marlins' $53.54 million payroll last season.

Florida previously traded pitchers Kevin Brown (San Diego), Robb Nen (San Francisco), Ed Vosberg (San Diego) and Dennis Cook (Mets); outfielders Moises Alou (Houston) and Devon White (Arizona); infielder Kurt Abbott (Oakland) and first baseman Jeff Conine (Kansas City).

In addition, pitcher Tony Saunders was taken by Tampa Bay in the expansion draft, first baseman Darren Daulton became a free agent and retired, and infielder Alex Arias was released.

Biathletes enjoying culture of real Japan

By Denis D. Gray
Associated Press Writer

NOZAWA ONSEN, Japan — Away from the McDonald's outlets, futuristic stadiums and cookie-cutter dorms, some Olympic athletes sleep on tatami mats, soak naked in public baths and try to communicate in sign language.

Most love it.

An hour's drive into the mountains from Nagano — a modern, undistinguished city serving as the Olympic hub — this quaint village is host to just one sport, biathlon.

Biathletes don't usually capture the international limelight, but they will deserve medals for cultural immersion at these games.

Nagano is a sprawling place with the blockhouse skyline that has sapped most Japanese urban centers of traditional flavor. Olympic stadiums like the M-Wave speedskating arena have added a 21st century look.

Nozawa Onsen, a village of fewer than 5,000 nestled on the wooded slopes of Mt. Kenashi, is a throwback to traditional Japan. It boasts two street lights, 13 wooden public bathhouses and culinary specialties like cold buckwheat noodles and nozawana, boiled and pickled turnip leaves.

"We were worried at first, but they're really into it," says Chuck Lyda, a coach of the American biathlon team. "They sleep on the floor and eat three Japanese meals a day."

Staying at Nozawa, athletes miss the usual "Olympic experience." Coaches don't mind, since the experience is defined in part as energy-draining disco nights and occasional sexual dalliances.

There are few distractions in Nozawa, and the biathlon course is a short bus hop away. So far the only complaints have been minor: A Slovenian biathlon man can't quite stomach raw fish, and some central Europeans pine for more red meat.

True, most locals have mastered no more than a few words of any foreign language. But they compensate with what Canadian team leader Terry Sheahan describes as "absolutely bend-over-backwards hospitality."

"It's a great honor for us," Nozawa Mayor Kubota Tetsu enthused in an interview. "We like to say that in Nozawa the springs are hot and the people are warm-hearted."

There's little fanfare save for some flags and welcome signs. Nozawa is being itself, and that's part of the charm.

Many businessmen, in fact, wanted no part of the Olympics. They feared losing money, since the ski area abutting the biathlon course would have to be shut down for safety reasons (biathlon combines cross-country skiing and shooting).

But the mayor says about 90 percent of the village folk now understand that in the long run, the Olympics will put Nozawa on the world map for everyone's profit. In any case, he says, the ski runs will be closed only during actual competition hours.

Already some Olympians in Nozawa are showing a dash of disdain for Nagano, calling it a "Little America" where their comrades dine cafeteria-style with plastic forks and plates.

"We're getting to experience the real Japan," says Kristina Viljanen-Sabasteanski, 28, of Richmond, Vt., sipping green tea as teammates pad by in yukatas, the loose, belt-fastened robes that serve as apres-ski wear.

Japan formally asks United States to hold off on attack

TOKYO (AP) — Japan has asked the United States to refrain from taking any military action against Iraq during the Winter Olympics, "the last sports festival of peace this century," the Japanese Foreign Ministry said Saturday.

In a telephone conversation Friday night with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, Foreign Minister Keizo Obuchi expressed Japan's concern about the possible outbreak of hostilities during the games, according to a statement released by the Japanese Foreign Ministry.

Albright said that she understood Japan's position, but asked for Japan's full support in backing a U.S.-led effort to force Iraq to abide by a U.N.-directed weapons inspections, the statement said.

Kyodo News reported Saturday that President Clinton sent a letter to Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto earlier this week that stated the United States would not waver in its resolve to open Iraq to weapons inspection teams. Hashimoto, in return, sent a reply Friday, the contents of which were not disclosed.

Japan wants its allies to respect a non-binding resolution the United Nations passed in November urging countries to avoid any hostilities with one another during the Olympics.

BOBSLED: Texan may not be able to compete

(From 1C)

The next morning, however, Lee was banging on Todd's door. "Sure enough, at 5 a.m., he woke me up," Todd says. "Drug me up to San Antonio. He didn't exactly ask me. He kinda demanded."

Todd's results in the fitness tests at the tryout were off the charts, and he was immediately invited to a bobsled camp in Lake Placid, N.Y. He took to sledding right away and found work as a brakeman on veteran driver Tuffy Latour's two-man sled. But Hays, 28, quickly came to understand any future he had in the sport would be in driving, not pushing. There were too many other prospective pushers out there who were bigger, stronger, faster.

Financed by his parents, Hays went to driving school in Calgary but did not have the money to buy a two-man sled of his own. So he entered a martial arts tournament in Japan - one of those anything-goes spectacles - and knocked out the Japanese champion in his first fight. His prize money amounted to $10,000 - precisely the cost of a used two-man sled.

"I guess you could say I got some sense kicked into me," Hays says of his subsequent retirement from kickboxing. "I decided I'd rather be able to walk and play with my grandchildren."

Hays honed his driving skills in that original two-man clunker, then sold it to an All-Star Cafe, making enough on the deal to buy a four-man ride.

Hays raced in the United States and Canada this season while the more veteran U.S. drivers - Brian Shimer, Jim Herberich and Latour - were getting crushed by the Germans, the Swiss and everybody else. The North American tour is like Class AA baseball, but Hays' success on that circuit entitled him to the use of one of the bobsled federation's sophisticated Bo-Dyn sleds, the ones engineered by Bob Cuneo, the mastermind behind Todd Bodine's NASCAR machinery.

At the '98 Olympic Trials in Park City, Utah, after months of practice on the bob run there, Hays knew its every curve and turn as surely as he knew every back-alley shortcut in Del Rio. He demolished Latour - his former pilot - and earned himself a place on the Olympic team and a trip to Nagano.

"I've told him since he was a little boy that he was going to the Olympics," says his father, Jack Hays, a retired Marine combat veteran and Purple Heart winner who now lives in Cloudcroft, N.M. "I didn't know if he'd be going in curling or whatever, but I knew he'd be going. Bobsled is fine."

It is unlikely, however, that Hays will drive in the Nagano competition. The United States can race two sleds - one is Shimer's, and the original plan was to have Herberich and Hays race off for the second spot. But one of Hays' pushers is Mike Dionne, who is currently embroiled in a dispute over a positive drug test. Dionne's case is to be heard, probably this weekend, by the International Court for Arbitration in Sport. Until then, however, he is banned from even practicing. That leaves Hays in a bind, with no replacements allowed.

"Todd has taken his bumps and bruises, and he just dominated (the U.S. tour last season)," says Steve Maiorca, the Olympic bobsled coach. "Next year he'll be on our World Cup team. He's going to be one of the greats. He's just here (in Nagano) soaking it all up. We've had a talk, and most likely he's not going to be competing."

Hays, meanwhile, seems remarkably relaxed amid the swirl of his first Olympics.

"When you have 15,000 Japanese martial arts fans screaming at you, this bobsled thing seems like a very easy event," he says. "I'm just the guy from Texas that nobody thought would be here."

Todd Hays will almost certainly be at the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, driving USA I down the Park City run that has become his home course.

And on Wednesday, his father, Jack, called a real estate agent to see about putting the Cloudcroft house up for sale. Jack says he and his wife, Marlena, want to get a new place, maybe a condo, high up the mountain in Park City - "as close to the bobsled run as we can get."

Heloise Classified Hints!

Heloise Hint: Brakes squealing? Take your car to a repair shop immediately and have them checked. It indicates a problem. A good rule: If you put your foot on the brake pedal and it just doesn't feel normal or right, have the brakes looked at. Send your car story to Heloise, PO Box 795000, San Antonio TX 78279-5000.

Big and Beautiful: '98 Ford Crown Victoria sedan

By Ken Chester, Jr.

The Ford Motor company now enjoys an exclusive franchise as the only domestic manufacturer of the large, traditional rear drive American sedan. Since General Motors discontinued production of its last rear-drive sedans (Buick Roadmaster, Cadillac Fleetwood/Fleetwood Brougham, and Chevrolet Caprice/Impala SS), during the '96 model year, there was talk earlier this decade of the demise of the big Ford by the '99 model year. However, the folks at the blue oval saw fit to continue its improvement and evolution. I recently drove a new '98 Crown Victoria to see how far it has progressed.

Just the Right Refinements

Built in St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada alongside its mechanical twin, the Mercury Grand Marquis, the large Ford boasts new sheetmetal and a host of improvements for the 1998 model year. The handsome Crown Victoria is available in base and LX models, powered by the refined 4.6L SOHC V-8 engine bolted to the AOD-E four-speed automatic transmission. On the road, the large Ford was nimble and responsive due in part to the new Watt's linkage rear suspension. This new system is specifically designed to provide more direct, and therefore stiffer, lateral location of the rear wheels. The result of this improvement is the increase of lateral stiffness nearly 300 percent — greatly reducing the sedan's body motion in cross winds and over jarring roads. On center feel is also improved, reducing the amount of steering corrections necessary to maintain a straight, stable path. The Crown Victoria exhibited world class handling and control — even without the optional all speed traction control in the slippery conditions that I drove. Inside the cabin, layout of displays and controls are excellent and the driver's view of the road is one of the best that I have experienced. At speed, the cabin was very, very quiet, coddling driver and passengers in a secure and safe environment. Seating front and rear is very comfortable as well, with plenty of room for all. The trunk is huge, with a low lift-over height. Underhood fluids are easy to reach but not clearly marked. I have just a few gripes: no cupholder for rear seat occupants and traction control and anti-lock brakes are not standard equipment for this sedan.

By the Numbers

Standard safety features include: dual airbags, dynamic side-impact protection and SecuriLock© anti-theft system. Optional safety features includes four wheel anti-lock brakes w/traction assist ($775). EPA fuel economy for the Crown Victoria is 17 city/24 highway. Retail sticker prices range from $20,935 to $23,135 for the LX model. Destination charge adds $605. Those of you that are into alternative fuels can shell out an additional $6,165 for a natural gas version (NGV) of the 4.6L V-8 engine, an option that has been available to consumer since the '96 model year. Although production is up to speed at the plant, you may have trouble locating a new Crown Victoria. Remember that patience now will reward you later. The only rebate currently available is $1,500 in customer cash for the natural gas version of the Ford Crown Victoria sedan! There is no expiration date for the rebate.

Chevrolet C/K to be replaced

The Chevrolet C/K full size pickup truck will be replaced by the new '99 Cheverolet Silverado, which is slated to go on sale this fall. The C/K was rated the best full-size pickup in initial quality by J.D. Power and Associates in 1997. Its third door, which is located on the passenger side, also won a Design and Engineering award from Popular Mechanics magazine. The C/K, introduced in 1988, is Chevrolet's most popular truck, delivering the highest resale value among full-size pickups.

Ford recycles carpet

In a time when the focus keeps turning back to the ecology, Ford Motor Company has taken a unique tack on recycling. Ford plans to recycle the carpet they used in their corporate press conference earlier this year at the Detroit Auto Show. The 4,200 square feet of nylon carpet will be turned into nylon pellets and shipped to a plant in Sandusky, Ohio. Once it arrives there it will be recycled into air cleaner housings. Ford recycles twenty seven million square feet of nylon carpeting in this way annually, producing three million air cleaner housings.

New Chrysler 300M goes on sale in spring

The all-new Chrysler 300M sedan will begin to arrive at Chrysler dealerships in late spring according to Ron Boltz, general manager of large car operations at Chrysler. The 300M comes standard with the Auto Stick transmission which allows the driver to shift gears manually or drive in automatic. It also boasts an all-new 3.5-liter V-6 aluminum engine that generates 253 hp which is also available on one other model, the all-new Chrysler LHS. A price has not yet been announced for the 300M but Mr. Boltz estimated that the retail sticker price will range from the high $20's to the low $30's.

Big Three lock up top ten

A magazine published for people with disabilities, WE, has named its top ten cars for the 1998 model year. The Big Three automakers were awarded the top six positions. The winners are: Cadillac Seville, Chrysler Concorde, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, Dodge Durango, Dodge Intrepid and Ford Taurus. Vehicles were awarded based on their inclusion of necessary features such as low step-in heights, wide doors, shift levers and operating controls which are easily engaged, and large, highly visible dark print on gauges.

'98 Regal buyers get more than just a car

If you should decide to buy a 1998 Buick Regal, the dealer will hand you something else along with the keys to your new car. You will also receive a Regal Performance Card which entitles you to a wide variety of discounts. Discounts include ten percent off at National Car Rental, ten percent off the Sheraton bed and breakfast rate, ten percent off of 1-800-FLOWERS, ten percent off of One Hour Martinizing Dry Cleaning services and up to $125 off Continental Airline flights. Buick dealers will also offer free roadside assistance, one free oil change and two free service loaners annually.

Corvette named Car of the Year

The 1998 Chevrolet Corvette was named Car of the Year by a panel of forty eight independent journalists in January. The Corvette, a forty five year-old American legend, brings a second win in the contest's five year history to Chevrolet whose Blazer previously won the North American Truck of the Year. The journalists cited improvements in interior design, acceleration, ride and handling, which were redesigned for the first time since 1984 last year. The journalists reviewed twenty four cars and nine truck for the award.

Toyota Avalon sedan gets a fresh face and more safety assets

By BOB PLUNKETT
SPECIAL REPORT

Once upon a time in America, a big sedan with four doors and the capacity for hauling all in a family happened to be the typical car on the street — but that was before the invasion of miniature imports and subsequent escalating gasoline prices or the invention of the minivan and sport-utility wagons.
Today, a big sedan has become that rare vehicle in America, appearing mainly in the luxury market where exotic price apply.

So it was with some surprise in 1995 that Toyota, which spent decades championing the merits of small cars, became the first Japanese automaker to roll out an affordable full-size sedan built exclusively for an American audience.

Called Avalon, the big Toyota wore smoothly rounded exterior forms vaguely similar to those of the mid-size Camry, which served as the larger car's foundation.

Avalon rode on a stretched version of Camry's chassis. It packed an enhanced Camry engine and came off a Kentucky factory line staffed by the same people who put together the Camry, most popular car label in the country.

Building a bigger Camry was an interesting idea because Camry has propelled Toyota to the top of the customer satisfaction charts while forcing other manufacturers to emulate Toyota's lead with V6 engine options and exacting attention to such considerations as quality control and user-friendly comfort and convenience features.

The original idea for Avalon, according to Toyota's marketing wizards, was to provide an incremental shopping step above Camry, in size as well as price, for those who desire more room, more power, and yes, more pizzazz.

And Avalon quickly became another popular Toyota.

Now, in the first overhaul for the original Avalon, Toyota's full-size sedan gets a fresh face for 1998 models, along with revised interior features and more safety gear.

New issues wear multi-reflector headlamps flanking a new chrome-ringed grille to give Avalon the jewel-like eyes of deluxe luxury imports. The look moves Avalon up a notch in tone, seeming classy and subdued like the elite LS 400 sedan by Lexus, Toyota's exclusive spin-up brand. Inside, Avalon now provides seat-mounted side-impact airbags and anti-lock brakes as standard gear.

Both of Avalon's trim levels, XL and XLS, may be equipped with either twin front bucket seats or a 3-person front bench whose seatback splits in 50/50 ratio. When you combine the 3-person front bench with a 3-person rear bench, the result is a 6-passenger automobile that measures full-size for interior volume.

Avalon's wheelbase, on the other hand, falls a little short of full-size dimensions, which means the car functions like a mid-size model in the handling department to maneuver easily on crowded parking lots or traffic-clogged freeways.

Toyota's technical designers in Michigan, California and Arizona conspired on Avalon's design, beginning with the Camry chassis and adding inches in length to create more rear seat legroom and engineer a smoother ride quality.

The exterior form actually looks like a cross between bodies of Camry and LS 400.

Everything seems fluid and curvy, like a Camry, only bigger and more sophisticated, like the Lexus.

Recent time driving revised Avalons included a series of tests conducted over loops of freeways and secondary routes stretching west from Lake Michigan at Sheboygan and across Wisconsin's rolling prairie to Elkhart Lake and back.

That experience, combined with subsequent extended drives in a deluxe Avalon XLS, formulated some observations about the car's performance and personality.
First impression: It feels as refined as a deluxe luxury import, and without prior knowledge of brand and model one could easily mistake this car for something in the Lexus line.

Second impression: Avalon rides in a plush and smooth manner and from driver's view seems uncommonly quiet, which is another trait of a fancy luxury car.

Then too Avalon impresses and delights with the action of its powertrain.
It draws from an all-aluminum 3.0-liter Toyota V6 engine rigged in 4-cam configuration and 24-valve format with multi-point fuel injection.

Output bumps six horsepower above Camry's to reach 200 hp, with 214 lbs/ft of torque skewed low to strengthen the pedal action in lower gears.

The 4-speed electronically-controlled automatic transmission feels effortlessly smooth and will also satisfy the shift-it-yourself driver. A button on the floor shifter in Avalon's bucket-seat version allows you to thumb a downshift to third gear, then pull the lever back to second.

Another high point: For a large car, Avalon acts surprisingly crisp in hanging through a series of curves.

Reinforcements for the chassis of new editions make the platform more rigid and strong, which provides more structural integrity in a crash and also helps to reduce vibrations and noise when in motion.

All Avalons contain independent suspension elements in front and back, plus power-assisted rack and pinion steering. All also employ a big disc brake at each wheel with the link to computerized anti-lock controls.

FAST FACTS

1998 TOYOTA AVALON SEDAN

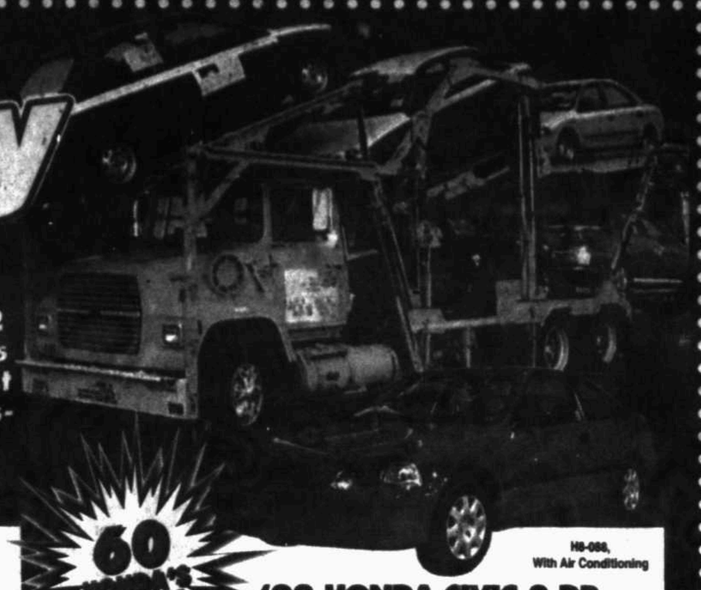

Description	Full-size sedan

Price range	$ 24,280 to $ 31,000

The Avalon XLS test car, trimmed to the hilt, stocked leather-wrapped bucket seats, a power moonroof, keyless entry system and premium sound with compact disc changer. It listed for $31,803 to define Avalon's ultimate price, but the bottom line of a base XL drops to virtual bargain level for a big car, beginning below $25,000.

Standard items on Avalon XL include air conditioning, power windows and door locks, heated power mirrors, tilt steering wheel, cruise control, tachometer, plus the 4-speed automatic transmission, power steering and power brakes. The upgrade to Avalon XLS adds automatic climate controls, fog lamps, keyless entry and theft deterrent system, a leather-wrapped steering wheel and big alloy wheels. ■

590 Legal Notices

Pursuant to Transportation Code, §201.602, the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) will conduct a Public Hearing to receive data, comments and/ or views concerning the proposed Texas Trunk System Priority Corridors and proposed project selection process. TxDOT will present information on these proposed corridors located in five (5) regional area of Texas, as follows:

SH 31/ IH 35 from Tyler to Austin
US 69/ US 380 from Tyler to Decatur
US 277/ US 83 from Wichita Dallas to Abilene
US 59/ SH 44 from Laredo to Corpus Christi
US 83 from Laredo to McAllen
US 175/ US 69 from Beaumont to Dallas/ Ft. Worth
SH 105 from Beaumont to US 290
SH21/ US 290 from Bryan/ College Station to Austin
US 287/ IH 27/ US 87/ US 83/ IH 10 from Oklahoma to San Antonio
SH 158/ US 87 from Midland to San Angelo

The Texas Trunk System is an extensive system of future four-lane highways which has been designed to effectively and efficiently move people and goods. Proposed Priority Corridors are based on several criteria including traffic, remaining gaps to be completed, Mexico border access, and bypasses of metropolitan areas.

The public hearing will be held on Thursday, February 12, 1998 at 2:00 pm, in the first floor hearing room of the Dewitt C. Greer Building, 125 E. 11th Street, Austin, Texas. The hearing will be conducted in accordance with the procedures specified in §43 TAC 1.5. Those desiring to make comments or presentations may register starting at 1:00 pm. Any interested person may appear and offer comments, either orally or in writing, however, questioning of those making presentations will be reserved exclusively to the presiding authority as may be necessary to ensure a complete record. While any person with pertinent comments will be granted an opportunity to present them during the course of the hearing, the presiding authority reserves the right to restrict comments in terms of time and repetitive comment. Organizations, associations, or groups are encouraged to present their commonly held views and similar comments through a representative member where possible. Presentations must remain pertinent to the issue being discussed. A person may not assign a portion of his or her time to another speaker. A person who disrupts a public hearing must leave the hearing room if ordered to do so by the presiding officer. Persons with disabilities who plan to attend the hearing and who may need auxiliary aids or services such as interpreters for persons who are deaf or hearing impaired, readers, large print or braille, are requested to contact Eloise Lundgren, TxDOT, Public Information Office, at 125 E. 11th Street, Austin, Texas 78701-2483, (512)305-9196 at least two workdays prior to the hearing so that appropriate arrangements can be made. Any questions or written comments on the proposed trunk system corridors or project selection process should be directed to your local TxDOT district office.
