PRESIDENT REAGAN

Farm bill heads for veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite criticism that it is playing politics with the plight of the nation's farmers, Congress is sending President Reagan a farm credit rescue package that appears headed for the first veto of 1985.

The bill, passed by the House 255-168 Tuesday on a largely party-line vote, was being delivered today to the White House. Administration officials have labeled it a "budget buster" and more than what is needed to address the credit problems of farmers.

Reagan was expected to veto the measure, even though it includes authorization for non-food relief for drought-stricken Africa. Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan probably would "take action immediately" after the bill arrives on his desk. He indicated the president would invite reporters and photographers into the Oval Office to watch him sign his veto message as a demonstration of his determination to hold down spending.

Leaders of the GOP-controlled Senate have said they have votes to sustain a veto, which takes a two-thirds vote in both Houses to overturn.

But Democrats, who see the credit issue as a political boon for themselves, planned their own symbolic "bill signing" today, followed by a march up Pennsylvania Avenue to a park across the street from the White House for a rally.

The credit provisions are aimed at easing credit for farmers whose unmanageable debt loads are preventing them from getting new loans for spring planting.

Staff and bureau reports

WASHINGTON -- Farmers representing the cutting edge of the nation's farm crisis packed a hearing of the House Agriculture Committee Tuesday and told, often emotionally, of deep woes in the Farm Belt.

As the farmers moved their Washington rally indoors, after a low-key march to the White House Monday, the House passed the Senate version of an emergency farm credit bill and sent it to President Reagan, who has pledged to veto the legislation.

Such a veto probably would kill the emergency farm aid that many of the farmers said they desperately needed, although other farmers said they were equally concerned with long-term fairness in the pricing of agricultural commodities.

Travis Reid, a cotton farmer from Coahoma, accused the Reagan administration of attempting to wipe out family farming in favor of about 250,000 "super farms" that could survive the administration's farm proposals, which would cut federal farm supports and loans in half over the next four years.

Reid also planned to meet with Reps. Charles Stenholm and Kika de la Garza and Sen. Phil Gramm.

In the administration's farm bill, price support levels on such commodities as cotton and wheat would be almost eliminated as early as next year.

All Texas Democrats in the House voted in favor of the credit bill, which passed on a 255 to 168 vote Tuesday, and all Texas House Republicans voted against the bill, with the exception of Rep. Mac Sweeney, R-Victoria, who backed it.

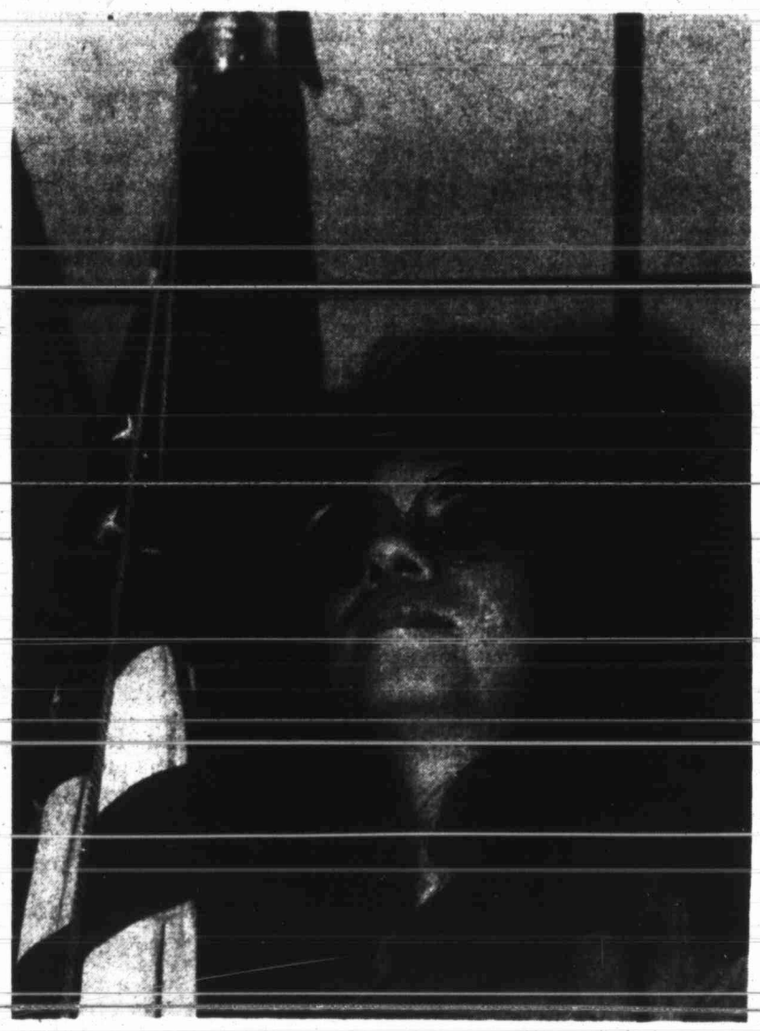

During the House hearing, several Texas farmers made clear that agricultural difficulties were not limited to the Midwest.

"When we sell everything that we grow in two counties, we cannot pay the interest on (farm loans)," said a West Texan, James A. Long of Paducah.

William Mooring of Clarendon said there was "not a farmer that produced cotton that made a profit" in his county in the Texas Panhandle.

Many of the farmers also asked the committee to consider replacing the administration's farm plan with legislation based on "parity," a federal policy from 1933 to 1952.

Homeowners angered at ordinance

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

A proposed zoning ordinance change that would allow manufactured housing into residential neighborhoods upset some Big Spring residents who appeared Tuesday night at a public hearing.

Opponents of the zoning change said they were concerned that the ordinance, which would allow a manufactured house to be placed next to a "site-built house," would lower property values of traditional housing.

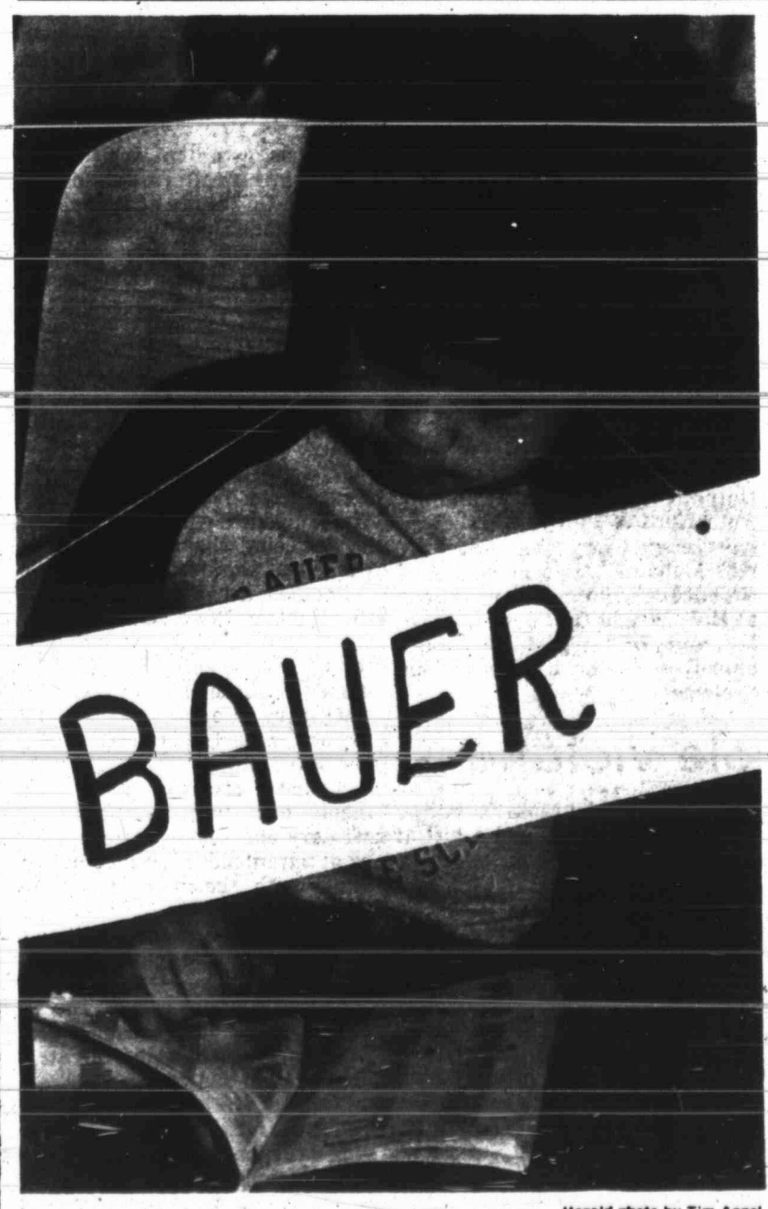

Members of the City Council and the Planning and Zoning Commission, however, expressed their support for the ordinance, saying it could attract new housing, particularly to the Monticello Addition.

Following the public hearing, the five planning and zoning commission members present unanimously approved the zoning change, and passed it to the City Council with their recommendation.

Council members took no action on the zoning ordinance, which will be placed on the agenda of their regular Tuesday meeting.

Councilmen, however, did voice their support of the ordinance, which requires manufactured housing placed in the city's residential neighborhood to meet size and aesthetic standards of the site-built houses in the area.

Bee-ing there

Goliad word whiz buzzes at spelling bee

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Marilyn Corwin, 13, outlasted a field of 12 contestants Tuesday through 237 words and almost 1½ hours of competition to win the annual Howard County Spelling Bee at the Howard College Auditorium.

Miss Corwin, a student at Goliad Middle School, correctly spelled "depository" to win the county title. She will now advance to regional competition in Lubbock March 23 at Moody Auditorium on the Lubbock Christian College campus.

The regional winner will advance to the Scripps-Howard National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C. in June.

The spellers were all winners from campuses around the county. Miss Corwin won the bee in the 54th round.

Runner-up is Sherrill West, 13, a Coahoma Junior High eighth grader. Miss West is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer West.

Miss Corwin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Corwin of 1200 E. 17th.

Miss Corwin and Miss West competed alone for 26 rounds after Benjamin Quoc Chau, a College Heights fifth grader, misspelled the word "lectern."

The two young women were spelling intermediate-level words when Miss West misspelled "lozenge." Miss Corwin went on to spell "lozenge" correctly, then spelled "depository" to win the bee.

> "I thought, 'Why would they put a stupid word like that in there'"

> Marilyn Corwin
> Spelling bee winner

Earlier in the bee, Miss Corwin was asked to spell the word "zigzagged." She repeated the word and spelled "zigzag." She was given another word to spell when judges determined she had misunderstood the word.

"At that point in the bee it was clear that there were two excellent spellers," said John Rice, managing editor of the Big Spring Herald, and a spelling bee judge. "It was clear the word was misunderstood. I didn't want the contest decided on a fluke."

After the competition was over, Miss West said she found herself "pretty relaxed" during competition. She said she has never had trouble spelling and that she studied very little for the bee.

"I studied Saturday, Sunday and Monday," she said.

Miss Corwin studied "a lot. My sister and my mom helped me. I studied on nights and during the weekends."

Miss Corwin's older sister Melinda advanced to the regional bee in Lubbock several years ago and another sister, Medina, was runner up at the Howard County Bee last year.

Miss Corwin said she was "scared" during most of the competition but relaxed toward the last rounds of the bee.

"I knew I'd be the runnerup or the winner. That eased a lot of tension."

Miss Corwin said her secret is plenty of studying and, "I always ask for a definition to make sure" of the word.

She said she hesitated on one word, "paleface," and started to spell the word "pailface" before reasoning out the meaning to herself.

She was also thrown by the word "donkey."

"I thought, 'Why would they put a stupid word like that in there'" she said with a laugh.

Salman Mistry, Runnels, was the only returning contestant to this year's bee. Mistry took fourth place in this year's bee.

Other contestants were Mary Kathryn Terrazas, Kentwood; Carvell Nguyen, Bauer; Lori Castillo, Washington; Ann Rivas, Marcy; Christopher Park, St. Mary's Episcopal School; Muffy Hollomon, Coahoma Elementary; Mary Ellen Franco, Moss Elementary; and Jennifer Dubose, Elbow.

Vietnam ceremony

Local VFW post inducts first woman member

By SCOTT FITZGERALD
Staff Writer

It was a historic moment last night for Big Spring's Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2013.

The post inducted two veterans who served the United States in the Vietnam War.

Anita Massey of Big Spring was the first woman war veteran to be inducted into the local VFW, Don R. Brooks said.

Also inducted in last night's ceremony was Billy H. Johnson of Big Spring who served in Vietnam from 1966 to 1968 with the U.S. Navy.

Brooks told the inductees as they were being sworn in that their purpose with the organization would be to preserve the strength of comradeship among VFW members and "to foster true patriotism."

Massey said she decided to join the VFW because she is still very patriotic and the military is still a big part of her life.

She joined the army after graduating from Big Spring High School in 1965.

She served in Vietnam with the Women's Army Corps for seven months in 1967 at Tam Sa New Air Force base near Saigon.

"I enlisted in the army because I wanted to further my education," Massey said.

She currently is a member of the United States National Guard and reports for duty each month with the engineer batallion in Midland Unit Company A 111.

Billy H. Johnson and Anita Massey touch the American flag while being sworn into the Big Spring Veteran of Foreign War Post 2013.

Johnson said he joined the local VFW chapter for the principals of patriotism that the veterans abide by.

"They're all veterans and they're interested in protecting our rights and benefits," Johnson said.

Johnson, a native of Pensacola, Fla., who now lives in Big Spring served with the U.S. Army in the Korean War. After a nine years with the Army, he joined the U.S. Navy and served in Vietnam from 1966 to 1968 as a heavy equipment operator with the Seabees unit.

He retired from the Navy on July 12, 1979.

Brooks said the local chapter is attempting to reach all Vietnam veterans in the area.

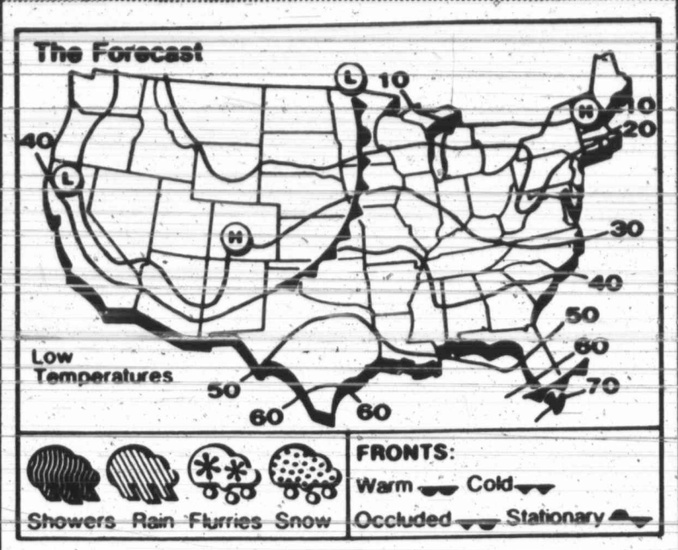

"We're attempting to help protect veteran's benefits," Brooks said.

Brooks served with the U.S. Army in World War II under General George Patton's Second Armored Division. Brooks said the unit was referred to as the "Hell on Wheels Division."

Big Spring's VFW chapter has approximately 70 members, Brooks said.

He urges other local Vietnam veterans interested in joining to contact him or post commander Jesse Hernandez.

Ordinance

Before the change will become law, the council must pass the zoning ordinance.

Saying the ordinance was more restrictive on building codes, size and aesthetic requirements than any other in effect, councilmen said the ordinance was necessary to avoid a civil lawsuit alleging discrimination.

"The Texas Municipal League has advised us we are liable if there is a lawsuit filed," Councilman Harold Hall said after the hearing. "It will be done (allowing manufactured housing into residential neighborhoods) eventually through a lawsuit against discrimination or we can do it now."

"This way we can hedge that off before it takes effect," he said, referring to a bill in the state Legislature that would require all cities to allow manufactured homes in residential neighborhoods. Presently, they are confined to trailer parks. "The Supreme Court already has ruled that it is discriminatory."

Earlier, Ron Howell of 2800 Coronado drew the only applause of the evening from the audience of about 30 people. "As a property owner, I oppose it....Don't bother to control it; let's keep them completely out (of residential neighborhoods)

"If we are going to be forced (to let them in), let's wait until we are forced," Howell said. "Let's go ahead and oppose it. We don't have to roll over and play dead."

Hall responded, "We've already been told we're going to be sued (if we don't pass an ordinance)."

Mary Sutter of 1014 E. 20th presented council members with a petition of those who oppose the ordinance, saying she was concerned it would allow septic tanks to be placed in residential areas and ruin wells.

However, staff members told her septic tanks could not be placed in the city unless the building was 200 feet away from sewer lines. Under the ordinance, manufactured housing would have to tie into city utility lines, Public Works Director Tom Decell said.

"I'm strongly in favor of the ordinance, regardless of lawsuits," Councilman Russ McEwen said. "Site-built housing is expensive.... I wouldn't want a corrugated metal mobile home moving next door to me. This isn't going to allow that."

McEwen said one of the main areas the manufactured homes are expected to move into is his own neighborhood, the Monticello Addition. "You can't accuse me of saying it's okay, but not for my neighborhood," he said.

Questioned by Ken Pope of 431 Hillside, City Manager Don Davis said the city had not done a study to determine the effects of such an ordinance on property values.

Contractor seeks council post

Big Spring contractor D.D. Johnston of 600 E. 16th became the 10th person Tuesday afternoon to file as a city council candidate.

The 65-year-old Johnston, owner of James & D.D. Johnston Construction and Paint Co., has lived in Big Spring for 54 years, according to the application he filed with the city secretary's office.

Johnston has served on the Howard County Tax Appraisal District board of directors, which overturned Chief Appraiser Gene Pereira's new and higher real estate appraisals last year.

The city council last fall rejected Johnston's company bid for the contract for the expansion of the Western Container Co. building. The council's action created controversy because the Johnston bid was several thousand dollars lower than the bid accepted.

Council members claimed the bid did not meet specifications.

Both incumbents, Mayor Pro Tem Jack Y. Smith and Councilman Russ McEwen, have filed for re-election.

Also filing as candidates for the three open at-large seats are: Texaco Oil Co. electrical foreman Dan Laws of 2524 Albrook; former Abernathy police chief Jim Hicks of 404 Dallas, now a nurse's aide at the Big Spring State Hospital; and former city water distribution supervisor D.W. Overman of 2719 Larry, now an employee of Sid Richardson Carbon Co.

Other candidates include: Dolphin Pools owner Johnny Rutherford of 3010 Rutgers; local hairdresser Gary Don Carey of 2501 Alabama; Micheal Russell of 603 Bucknell, director of operations at H.W. Wright Oil Co. of Big Spring; and Don Mobley, a 23-year employee of the Trailways Bus System.

2 jailed for parole violations

Two Big Spring men remain in Howard County jail following their arrests Monday for parole violations.

Juan Gustabo Rios, 27, of 404 Benton was arrested Saturday night by Big Spring police in the 500 block of Lancaster. He was transferred to county jail after being charged with driving while intoxicated and possession of marijuana.

District Parole Officer David C. Harman said he contacted the Texas Parole Board in Austin after finding out about Rios' arrest. The agency issued an emergency warrant for another arrest. Harman said Rios had previously been convicted of burglary and was under investigation for an assault charge.

"He allegedly slapped a girl at the Last Chance Saloon," Harman said.

The parole board also issued an emergency warrant for the arrest of Willie Ray Myles, 24, of 1609 B Virginia. He had previously been convicted of possessing marijuana. Harmon said he was investigating charges that Myles had attacked Robert Walker of 907 W. Second with a claw hammer at a party last Saturday in the 1500 block of E. 11th Place.

Harman said the emergency warrants are non-bondable. Both suspects will be scheduled for parole hearings sometime in the future, Harman said.

Assault victim remains critical

An 81-year-old Big Spring woman remains in critical condition today at a Lubbock hospital after an assault at her house late Tuesday.

Maureen Terrell, 81, of 1400 Scurry was transferred to Lubbock General Hospital at 12:20 a.m. today from Malone-Hogan Hospital, where she was listed in critical condition, according to a Malone-Hogan spokeswoman.

She was treated by Dr. Don Crockett at Malone-Hogan Hospital, according to police.

Ms. Terrell was transferred because of the severity of the head injury she suffered in the attack, the spokeswoman said.

According to a spokesman for Lubbock General, Ms. Terrell came out of surgery at 10 a.m. She had a severe head injury and facial lacerations, the spokesman said.

Ms. Terrell suffered a "severe indented skull fracture" in the assault, Police Lt. Jerry Edwards said.

She was "struck repeatedly about her face and head with an unknown instrument," according to the police offense report.

Big Spring police officers Mike Pearson and Joe Russell found Ms. Terrell conscious and injured at 9:15 p.m. in her residence, the northside apartment of a duplex at 1400 Scurry. The officers were responding to a report of a burglary in progress, according to Edwards.

Her neighbor, Bernie Baker, who lived in the south apartment at 1400 Scurry, called police when he heard her banging on the wall for help, according to Police Chief Rick Turner.

According to the police offense report, Ms. Terrell was assaulted in her kitchen by someone she knows.

Police have picked up and interrogated a suspect in the case, but the suspect has not been formally charged, Edwards said.

A motive in the assault has not been determined yet, Turner said. Police do not know if anything was taken from the apartment in the incident, he said.

The case is being investigated by Pearson, Russell and detectives Erwin Ballarta and Victor Brake, Edwards said.

Deaths

Jack Douglas

Staff and wire reports

FORT WORTH — Jack Douglas, associate editor of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and former reporter for the Big Spring Herald, died Monday night at a local hospital. He was 64.

Douglas, former president of the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors Association, was found slumped at his desk in his newspaper office and died of heart failure a short time later, officials said.

Douglas came to work at the Herald in 1940 after he graduated from the University of Texas, said former editor Joe Pickle. He often visited the city after he returned from Army service in Europe during World War II, Pickle said.

"Jack Douglas was a dedicated journalist who loved the newspaper business and who made a lot of contributions," said Jack Tinsley, the newspaper's vice president and executive editor.

"His wife had kept saying he was doing what he wanted to do," Tinsley added. "So when he died, he was doing what he wanted to do, which was working at the paper."

Douglas, a two-time member of the Pulitzer Prize selection jury, was well known to readers throughout the area for his two columns, "Retirement and You" and "Military Focus," said Phil Record, Star-Telegram associate executive editor.

"I have received more comments both from people in the military and senior citizens about what a tremendous service he provided with these columns each week," Record said.

In 1982, the Senior Citizens Alliance of Tarrant County honored Douglas for the service he provided with the column. The Air Force Association also lauded Douglas, giving him a certificate of appreciation this year.

Douglas worked at the Star-Telegram for almost 40 years, serving as reporter, city editor, assistant managing editor and managing editor. Before that, he worked at newspapers in San Angelo and Houston following his employment at the Herald.

He is survived by his wife, Charlene Douglas; a son, Jack Douglas Jr., a reporter for the Houston Post; and a daughter, Laurie Douglas of Fort Worth.

Ross Paine

PERRYTON — Ross Paine, 71, died Feb. 27.

Services were at 2 p.m. Saturday in St. John Congregational Church near Follett with the Rev. Floyd Theissen officiating. Burial was in Lipscomb Cemetery. Services were under the direction of Boxwell Funeral Home in Perryton.

He was born in Lipscomb County. He graduated from Booker High School in 1932. He graduated from Canyon State Teachers' College in 1936.

He worked for White Auto stores from 1938 to 1973. He worked in stores in Amarillo, Abilene, Big Spring, Odessa and Midland. He was also a farmer.

He served in the Marines during World War II. He married Robbie Owens in 1935. He married Erlene Wright in 1950.

He had lived in Booker for the past eight years.

Man kills family, self

YONKERS, N.Y. — A Vietnam veteran who was hospitalized last week for psychological problems stemming from the war fatally shot his wife and one son and wounded another son, then shot himself to death, police said Tuesday.

The 3-year-old survivor, unable to "wake up" the rest of the family, treated his wound with a bandage and spent hours watching television and snacking until a neighbor entered the home through a window and saw the carnage.

"The 3-year-old was not totally aware of what had happened," police Capt. Owen McClain said. "He received what he considered a boo-boo and applied a Band-Aid."

McClain identified those killed as Jack Orgen, 33, Orgen's wife, Darling, 30, and their son, Jack Jr., 8. Jason Orgen was in satisfactory condition at Westchester County Medical Center with a gunshot wound in the chest.

Soap star convicted

LOS ANGELES — Christopher Brown Robinson, a star of TV's "General Hospital" soap opera, was sentenced Tuesday to four months in prison for income tax evasion.

U.S. District Court Judge Edward Rafeedie stayed the sentence for three weeks, however, so Robinson's lawyer might show the ill effects of imprisonment on his client's ability to repay money owed and on the ABC television series.

Robinson, 46, of Glendale, also was placed on five years' probation, was ordered to pay all back taxes for the years 1978-1982 and penalties for 1980 and 1982 and perform 200 hours of community service per year, Assistant U.S. Attorney Russell Hayman said.

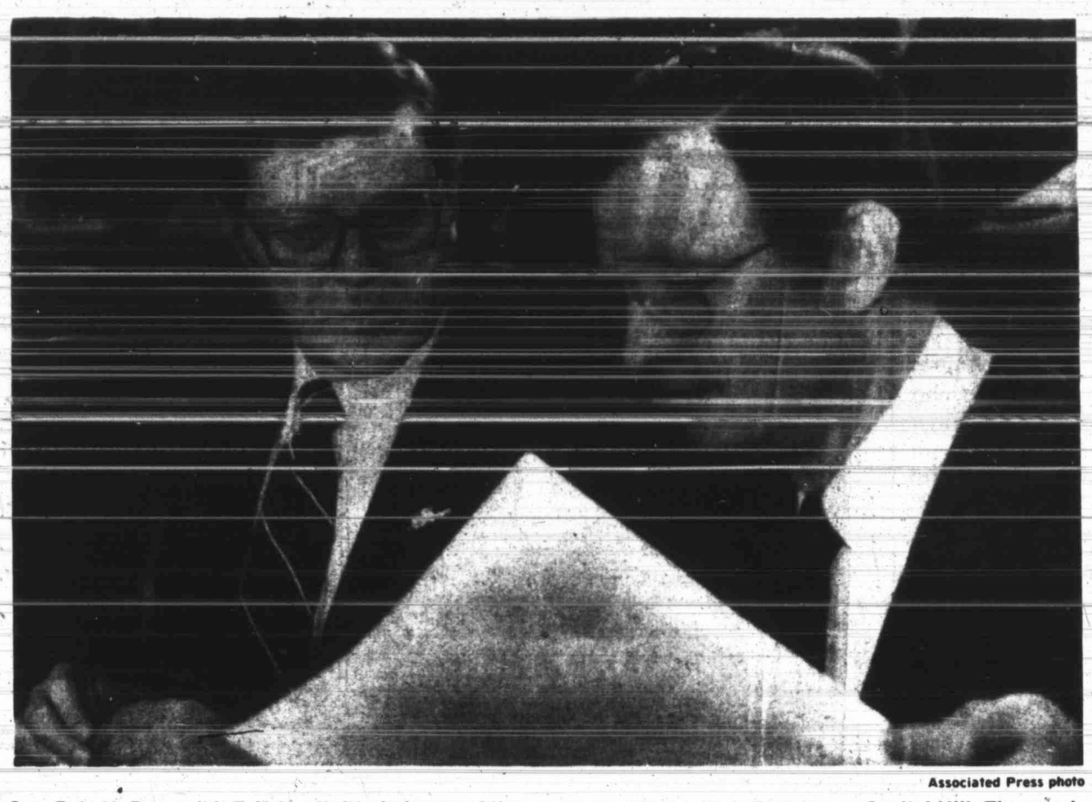

Robinson, who failed to report $490,440 earnings during the two years and failed to pay additional sums for the other years, regularly appears as Dr. Rick Webber on "General Hospital" and also appears on a cough syrup commercial.

Florida man executed

STARKE, Fla. — Former choirboy Johnny Paul Witt was executed today in Florida's electric chair for killing an 11-year-old boy he and another man then sexually abused and mutilated.

Witt, 42, convicted for the fatal assault on the son of a University of South Florida professor, died at 7:10 a.m. He was the 12th man put to death in the state's electric chair since capital punishment was reinstated by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976 and the 39th inmate executed in the nation since then.

Department of Corrections spokesman Vernon Bradford said Witt requested no final meal but that he was given an omelet, rolls and coffee before being taken from his holding cell to the nearby oak electric chair. "He kind of nibbled at" the omelet, Bradford said.

Slashing the defense

Committee proposes cuts in Reagan budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lopsided Senate Budget Committee vote recommending a cut in President Reagan's defense spending proposal could pave the way for quick Senate budget accord, including a freeze on Social Security benefits, committee members suggest.

On Tuesday, the panel voted 18-4 to slash $79 billion over the next three years from the Pentagon buildup proposed in the president's $974 billion budget for fiscal year 1986 — including a one-year freeze in "real" spending discounting the effects of inflation.

The vote was only tentative, since the panel will get another shot at defense spending when it takes a final vote on the overall budget package. But committee leaders said they expected it to hold.

The proposal, a flat repudiation of administration policy, was supported by 10 Democrats on the panel and eight Republicans, including chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M.

"The defense number is pretty key to getting a consensus on the rest of the budget," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa.

Grassley and other members said it would be difficult to enact the kind of domestic program cuts recommended by the president without demanding spending restraint of similar magnitude in the Defense Department.

"This starts a pattern of across-the-board freezes," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., author of the plan adopted by the panel. "After setting the discipline on defense, we'll be following through on other programs. I think we will be freezing Social Security and other entitlements."

Reagan's budget, which calls for $40 billion in domestic cuts and $30 billion in defense increases in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, would leave intact cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients scheduled to take effect next January.

But there is widespread support in the Senate — as evidenced by Tuesday's vote — for freezing all programs, including Social Security.

Hollings, who was chairman of the committee before Democrats lost control of the Senate to Republicans in 1980, told reporters he doubted the action would send the wrong signal to the Soviets for the opening of nuclear arms talks in Geneva next week.

"Defense items are not successful as bargaining chips. The Soviets are very sophisticated and they know our capabilities."

The committee action would cut $10.9 billion from Reagan's defense budget request for fiscal 1986, $25.3 billion for 1987 and $43.1 billion for 1988.

Dollar rises; gold falls

LONDON — The dollar resumed its assault on record heights in early trading today as central banks again failed to follow through on last week's massive intervention against the U.S. currency.

Gold prices turned lower.

Last week, after the dollar soared to new highs against the currencies of Britain, Canada, France and Italy, central banks poured an estimated $4 billion on world foreign exchanges to halt the rally. But within days, the dollar was rising again, and economists and government officials were saying there was little intervention could do to reverse the trend.

This week, central banks have remained on the sidelines, and the dollar has renewed its climb in nervous trading.

Iraq vows retaliation

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq vowed to attack 30 Iranian towns today in retaliation for Iran's shelling of the border city of Basra. Iraqi authorities warned Iranian civilians to evacuate "to avoid Iraqi anger."

Iranian forces shelled Basra Tuesday evening, fulfilling a threat made the day before, and Iraq "responded less than a minute later with multiple rocket launchers," said a Basra-based reporter in a telephone interview.

Each nation accused the other of violating a June 1984 U.N.-mediated ban on attacks on civilian targets. The war began in September 1980.

The reporter said most of Iran's shells fell on the edge of the city, which has about 1 million residents and is the only major Iraqi population center within range of Iran's artillery.

60 killed in Thai attack

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand — Thai air force jets strafed three hilltops in Thai territory near the Cambodia border to flush out Vietnamese troops that intruded while attacking a Cambodian resistance camp, a Thai army spokesman announced today.

Sixty Vietnamese soldiers were killed in the air strike and a battle with Thai troops for the hills, he said.

Spokesman Maj. Gen. Naruedol Dejpradiyuth said Thailand struck Tuesday when Hanoi's forces tried to seize the hilltops in order to encircle Tatum, the headquarters of forces loyal to Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk. Sihanouk is a former Cambodian leader.

The Thai general said the intruders had killed two Thai soldiers and wounded another 13 in the assaults on the hilltops about four miles from Tatum and located in Surin province.

Pentagon halting payments to General Dynamics Corp.

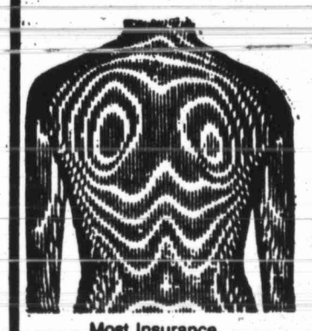

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is halting $40 million in monthly payments to General Dynamics Corp. while it probes millions of dollars in "improper charges" that Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger says benefit the defense contractor but not national security.

Some members of Congress say the probe should be broadened to include the billing practices of all defense contractors. Critics accuse contractors of using loopholes to add the costs of country club memberships, advertisements, promotional "giveaways," entertainment, and political and charitable contributions to the costs of the weapons they build.

Weinberger announced that in the future, all defense contractors will be required to certify, "under penalty of perjury," that their billings include no expenses "not made directly for the benefit of the government."

That requirement, he said, "will do a lot toward eliminating these improper charges."

Time for words is over on budget

President Reagan was elected to his first term on the platform of getting the government off the back of the American people. But his second term is beginning with a $200 billion deficit — a heavy burden on the back of the Treasury.

Bill Baxter, in his newsletter for investors, writes: "The public deficit now amounts to about 25 percent of private savings ... Ironically, the mushrooming deficits, accompanied by a rising interest rate burden, gobble up a larger and larger percentage of national income, so that when you review the entire picture, including the interest burden, you will find that the government's role in the economy has increased substantially rather than diminished."

Instead of getting the government off the backs of the American people, we have merely shifted the burden from inflation to deficit spending.

Maybe it's time to recognize that the burden cannot be shrugged off with words. It must be shouldered, through spending cuts and tax increases.

Big government and big deficits are two sides of the same coin. One side is stamped with a Democratic donkey; the other side, with a Republican elephant.

Alamo's defeat meant victory

To the editor:

This letter is in regard to the AROUND THE RIM column that appeared in the Big Spring Herald issue of Sunday, 3rd of March by Keith Briscoe.

I have a few points to make to you that I found in Dan Kilmore's HOW DID DAVY DIE? I found a few eye openers in Carl Von Clausewit's on ON WAR and a tidbit here and there in 13 DAYS TO GLORY By Lon Tinkle.

I am a sixty-three-year combat veteran of all of WWII and the Korean War or whatever Mr. Harry Truman wish it to have been called. Now, at sixty three years of age I should not be up at 1 a.m. in the morning; but you know Mr. Briscoe, the making of memorials to valor is not only human but is somewhat American. I like the habit. It sort of hinges on patriotism, doesn't it?

Besides the Texas troops in rebellion there were many, many Mexican loyalist who died there and let's mention the Mexican wo died in defense of the Mexican Constitution of 1824. Just maybe the Alamo should be a memorial to valor to both countries. Say, like the recent memorial to Iwo Jima.

You know, Mr. Briscoe, that first farmer at Lexington that pulled a trigger on his squirrel rifle was a non-military man in rebellion, but you and I are, in all probability the better for it.

The Artilleryman who pulled that lanyard that sent the first fateful shell into Fort Sumpter was not a trained soldier but was a man in rebellion. This, of course started a disaster that eventually caused a million casualties. It did one thing. It, with blood, anguish, steel smoke, destruction and death welded a group of states that was loosely knitted together by laws regarding separation of states to a closely weaved nation that has deep strength. You and I are probably the better for it. The men who spent thirteen days in the Alamo gave the fumbling attempt of the men who were trying to put together a Texas constitution to take the place of the Mexican constitution of 1824 the twelve more days they needed. This started a chain of events that eventually gave us approximately one sixth of our present national boundary.

Amtrak is derailing American taxpayers

Americans have a sentimental attachment to trains. Once the hated symbol of industrialization, they now nourish memories of a simpler age. But nostalgia has no place in the federal budget, particularly when it has a $180 billion deficit, which means Amtrak has no place. Ronald Reagan is the first president to acknowledge that.

Past budgets have trimmed the outlay for Amtrak, the federally financed passenger railroad; this one simply removes it. Reagan would get the federal government out of transporting rail passengers once and for all.

Amtrak's chief function is to illustrate why federal spending is so hard to cut. It adds little to the nation's transportation system, while extracting a handsome subsidy from taxpayers. Few Americans would suffer if Amtrak shut down tomorrow.

But neither do they notice its cost. At $684 million in 1985l, it is dwarfed by more expensive programs. Given Amtrak's value as pork barrel, plus the drawbacks of antagonizing the fanatical minority of train buffs, most members of Congress see the possible savings as insignificant.

What do taxpayers get for their dollars? Not much. Only one in 50 travelers takes the train, and they account for just one-third of 1 percent of all intercity passenger-miles. Small wonder: Trains combine with disadvantages of cars (like slowness) with those of airplanes (fixed schedules, lack of privacy).

Amtrak was originally supposed to turn a profit. In fact, since its creation in 1971, the corporation has lost nearly $9 billion. The Office of Management and Budget figures that, left alone, it will lose another $8 billion in the next decade. Amtrak's revenues cover just 52 percent of its costs. Taxpayers cover the rest.

Railroad fans retort that other types of transportation get federal help, too. Indeed they do. Washington provides funds for airport construction and air traffic control, besides helping to pay for the highways used by buses and cars.

Whatever the cost in nostalgia,, that's as it should be. If Congress can't muster the nerve to cut a program as wastefuls as this one, it can't hope to contain spending.

Probing the Poles' patriotism

WASHINGTON — Twice in recent months I've tried to get into Poland, but the country's communist military dictatorship wouldn't grant me a visa.

The Polish authorities clearly didn't want me to meet Lech Walesa, the dynamic leader of the outlawed Solidarity union.

The Polish government partially relented, however, and let my associate Lucette Lagnado travel freely through the country recently. Here is what she found:

● Even before arrival in Poland, a visitor is surprised to hear outspoken criticism of the communist regime from Poles flying home from abroad. These were Polish citizens who were among the most privileged and presumably trusted by the regime, having been allowed to leave the counry — and they made their remarks within earshot of other passegers who must have included secret police. One man, who told of involvement in the printing of illegal newspapers, was a factory manager.

The returning Poles agreed that Solidarity is still alive and well, though forced underground by the authorities. The murder of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko by police agents invigorated the illegal movement, they said. The passengers denounced the economic system and urged visitors to see proof of its failure in shops that have little to offer.

● The volunteered complaints continued whenever Poles heard my associate speaking English. A young father told of low wages and generally difficult economic conditions. A poet bemoaned official censorship. Even employees of Inter-press, the liaison office between visiting journalists and government officials, complained of difficulties with the Polish bureaucracy.

● President Reagan is apparently as popular among Poles as he is among Americans. Several Poles said they had prayed for his re-election, and even while complaining about their economic hardships, they expressed hope that Reagan would keep up the embargoes that add to their misery. A surprising number of Poles still spoke of Yalta as if it had occurred yesterday instead of 40 years ago; they view it bitterly as the root of all their postwar troubles, a sellout of the Poles by their Western allies.

● Confirming the scarcity of consumer goods was no problem. The only well-stocked stores are the Pevex outlets that accept only hard currency. They offer beautiful sheepskin coats, choice liquors and French perfume. The stores that accept Polish currency have little to sell but shoddy goods. Black market trading for American dollars is ubiquitous. Meat is rationed and buying it requires standing in line for hours. Yet in the tourist hotels, fine cuts of meat are on the menu, along with such luxuries as butter, sugar and orange juice.

● Intelligence sources blame Poland's economic crisis not just on mismanagement by the communist regime, but on the refusal of the labor force to work as a result of the harsh crackdown on their union. One Pole, who claimed to be a Communist Party member, confirmed at least the part about the workers' lack of motivation to produce. And he hinted that the inefficiency of Polish industry was partly the government's fault. "Our factories cannot compete with yours," he said. "They are backward." Such heresy is not uncommon, apparently.

● The police-state repression, though not as overpoweringly obvious as inother Soviet-bloc countries, is nevertheless in evidence where it counts. Even on internal flights in small, antique, propeller-driven planes, security is tight.

Passengers and their belongings are carefully checked, and there is a minimum of two "anti-terrorist" security officers, armed with rifles and knives, aboard the plane. One officer sits at the back of the passenger compartment, the other in the cockpit. Their purpose is to prevent hijackings to the West. My associate was advised by the stewardess to signal her intentions before she tried to use the washroom during the hour-lorg flight.

● Despite the ever-present threat of official crackdown, Poles remaIn unregenerately candid in their criticism of the regime. As one man put it with a mixture of defiance and resignation: "I know I can be put in prison for what I say. But so what?"

The church where Popieluszko preached in Warsaw has become a flower-bedecked shrine visited by hundreds of pilgrims daily. Incense burns at his grave and Solidarity symbols cover the church fence.

STRONG IS BEAUTIFUL: The strength of the American dollar and the American economy has proved a boon to art lovers and speculators. American investors are picking up bargains in European antiques and art works.

The only caveat is to buy items that were certifiably painted or made before 1885. The Customs Service classifies anything 100 years old as an antique and therefore exempt from duty. Thus a Picasso would be less of a bargain after paying a huge import tax, while a Degas can come in duty-free if Customs experts are convinced it was painted before 1885.

The stronger economy, meanwhile, has led wealthy Americans to take a plunge in art futures. For example, a painting that sold for $150 in 1967 and was resold for $3,000 in 1981 brought $10,000 a few days ago — from a buyer who figures it'll be worth $20,000 in another five years.

Insight

Divad gun is a real troubleshooter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is buying its new Divad gun, even though tests show the weapon doesn't work, because the service thinks the problems can be corrected, top Army officials told Congress on Tuesday.

"I wouldn't characterize Divad as a lemon," Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham told the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee. "We've had problems and we're correcting those problems as we go along."

Wickham's defense of the weapon came in response to Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., who said, "You're buying lemons."

The Divad is "a textbook case of what's wrong in the field of defense procurement and budget management," Andrews told the panel.

Andrews released test results from the latest Divad examination, showing that last summer the gun failed to work as well as it should and didn't start in cold weather.

Divad is Army shorthand for Division Air Defense gun. Known formally as the Sergeant York, the weapon is a twin-barreled gun mounted atop a tank chassis. The Army says the gun will protect U.S. troops from Soviet helicopters and wants to buy 618 of the guns for a total cost of $4.5 billion.

Even though the gun hasn't performed up to the Army's requirements, the service is buying 4 Divads a month from Ford Aerospace because shutting down the production line would mean a higher price for the guns if the problem is corrected, Marsh and Army Secretary John O. Marsh Jr. said.

"We think the problems can be solved and it will work," said Marsh.

Two new series of tests will begin next month, Wickham said. One will involve tests of eight Divads to see if they can meet the Army specifications, and the other will involve use of the weapons in simulated combat to test whether they will knock down attackers.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger ordered the tests in the wake of earlier failures and has said the service might buy another type of weapon should Divad continue to fail.

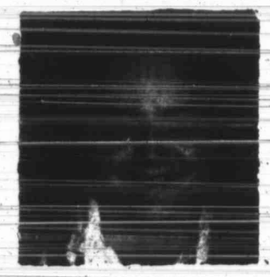

"We are looking at alternatives," Wickham told the subcommittee.

In predicting eventual success for Divad, Marsh noted that four years ago there was widespread criticism of the Army's new M-1 tank. But the weapon's problems have been solved and it is now the best tank in the world, Marsh said.

Questioned by Andrews about why the Army is still buying the guns if the ones it has won't work, Marsh said, "those that don't function will eventually go back to the contractor" to be fixed.

Divad is a good example of why the Pentagon ought to seek warranties on weapons to make sure they work, Andrews argued. He is the chief supporter of a two-year old law mandating such guarantees.

"Unfortunately, the Divad system was contracted far before this law took effect and the Pentagon's management of the procurement shows frustratingly little interest in enforcing warranties on its own," Andrews said.

Around The Rim

A serious addiction

By KEELY COGHLAN

He confessed his addiction to me on a warm, spring afternoon, a day more suited to pickup games of basketball and softball spring training than to tales of horror.

I was shocked. To think that he was under the grips of some dark demon, some flickering curse.... I stole a look at him and shuddered. He still appeared so normal, so carefree, his face unravaged by the violence.

But weekends, he went on the rampage. A weekend warrior, he watched Western after Western gallop across his television screen, while the sun set in the windows behind his back. Not for him the complex sub-plots of the daily soaps; give him a simple formula every week, and he'd be back for more.

What started as an innocent flirtation with the genre, an occasional glance at "The Monroes" and "High Chaparral," had become an all-day habit.

Yet no one at work knew about his closet addiction. He'd taken a lot of pains to keep it hidden, indulging only on the weekends, he said. But lately — well, he'd started slipping in an episode or two of "The Rifleman" after work each day, and he was talking about buying a video recorder to tape Chuck Connors' "sterling" performance.

He'd started to worry, though, about his sudden susceptability to watching Roy Rogers sing "Happy Trails" to his horse, Trigger. He didn't particularly like Roy Rogers' movies, he said, but he'd stopped turning them off the set.

He should have been scared, but he kept denying that he had a serious problem. Even Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie and the U.S.F.L. were having trouble luring him away from "those thrilling days of yesteryore," where Wyatt Earp ran roughshod over the West and the Lone Ranger, Tonto (the token minority) and Marshal Matt were the only law a man would find outside of his six-shooter.

"You know the part I really like? The part I have to at least hear every week?" he confessed. "Not the part about the silver bullet. I have to see the people stare off into the West and ask, 'Who was that masked man?'"

As you can see, this is serious. Any day now, he'll wake up thinking he's the Cisco Kid.

In 1834, the city of York in Upper Canada was incorporated as Toronto.

In 1853, Verdi's opera "La Traviata" premiered in Venice, Italy.

In 1857, in its famous Dred Scott decision, the U.S. Supreme Court held that Scott, a slave, could not sue for his freedom in a federal court.

In 1933, a nationwide bank holiday declared by President Franklin D. Roosevelt went into effect.

In 1935, retired Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Junior died.

In 1944, U.S. bombers staged a daylight raid against Berlin during World War II.

In 1957, the former British African colonies of the Gold Coast and Togoland became the independent state of Ghana.

In 1967, the daughter of Josef Stalin, Svetlana Alliluyeva, appeared at the U.S. embassy in India and announced her intention to defect to the West.

It's time for Girl Scout Cookies. For the thirty-third year, cookies are being delivered all over this area by the West Texas Girl Scout Council members. Cookies will be sold March 1-16.

For those who pre-ordered, the cookies you have waited for will be delivered during this time. If you did not pre-order, there will be some you can buy from your local Girl Scouts, says Page Hayes of the West Texas Girl Scout Council.

Seven varieties are available this year and sell for $2 a box. The cookies freeze well so they can be enjoyed year-round.

The Girl Scouts not only sell cookies, they have recipe ideas for the cookies that they have shared with the Herald Recipe Exchange today.

HEAVENLY CREAM CAKE
1 cup heavy cream
½ cup instant cocoa mix
Dash of salt
½ tsp. vanilla
18 Girl Scout shortbread cookies

Whip cream, adding cocoa mix gradually. Beat in salt and vanilla until mixture is quite thick. Using about half of the cream, spread some of the mixture on each cookie and stack together side by side in a roll, placing on a platter or serving dish. Frost roll with remaining cream covering all of the outside. Store in refrigerator several hours or overnight. (Dessert improves the longer it stands.) Slice diagonally. Serves about 8.

BROWNIE PIE
14 Girl Scout thin mint cookies
3 egg whites
Dash of salt
¾ cup granulated sugar
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped nuts

Roll cookies to crush. (If cookies are warm and chocolate soft, chill slightly before rolling.) Beat together egg whites and salt until soft peaks form. Add vanilla. Add sugar gradually, and beat until stiff peaks form. Fold in cookie crumbs and nuts. Pour in greased 9-inch pie pan. Spread evenly. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees) for 35 minutes. Remove from oven and cool completely. Serve with whipped cream garnished with chocolate bits, or shaved chocolate. Makes 8 servings.

PEANUT CREAM DESSERT
1 cup whipped cream
1 tsp. vanilla
2 Tbsps. sugar
24 Girl Scout peanut butter sandwich cookies

Whip cream with vanilla and sugar. Spread some cream on each cookie and stack cookies, side by side to form a roll. Cover roll with remaining cream being sure to cover completely. Refrigerate several hours or overnight. (The longer this dessert stands, the better it gets.) To serve, spoon some of th roll onto a dessert plate. May be topped with more whipped cream and crushed cookies. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

HERE MA'AM — Girl Scout Teri Chester delivers cookies to her customer Mildred McMahon. Girl Scouts are delivering cookies from March 1-16. Today's Herald Recipe Exchange features recipes that use Girl Scout cookies as ingredients.

ICE CREAM DELITE
Shortening
⅓ cup chopped almonds, toasted
1 cup chopped Girl Scout caramel deLite cookies
1 qt. vanilla ice cream, softened
½ cup nondairy whipped topping (thawed)

Generously coat inside of 5-cup mold with shortening; press in chopped almonds. Place in freezer. Meanwhile, stir chopped caramel deLite cookies and whipped topping into ice cream. Carefully spoon into prepared mold. Freeze. Unmold and ready to serve.

LAYERED LEMON PASTRY PIE
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup sugar
⅓ cup lemon juice
Dash salt
3 slightly beaten eggs
1 qt. vanilla ice cream, softened
1 9-inch graham cracker crust
1 pkg. Girl Scout lemon pastry creme cookies

In a medium saucepan melt butter or margarine; stir in sugar, lemon juice, and salt. Cook and stir until sugar dissolves. Add eggs. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened; chill. Place 1 pint ice cream in graham cracker crust. Spread half of the chilled lemon sauce and top with crumbled cookies. Freeze pie until firm. Repeat layers with remaining ice cream, lemon sauce and crumbled cookies. Freeze until firm.

SUNDAE TOPPINGS
Girl Scout thin mint cookies or peanut butter patties cookies

Coarsely chop one cookie and sprinkle it over a scoop of your favorite ice cream. Or chop 5 thin mint cookies and add to ½ cup chocolate syrup. Let stand awhile before pouring over vanilla ice cream. For a nut treat, chop 4 peanut butter patties and fold into ⅔ cup light corn syrup. Spoon over vanilla ice cream. This makes a thick topping.

BANANA PUDDING
Shortbread cookies
2 to 3 bananas sliced
1 pkg. 3 oz. instant vanilla pudding and pie filling
2 cups milk

Use enough shortbread cookies to cover the bottom of 9½ inch pie plate. Place instant pudding and pie filling in blender and add milk, blend on low speed until smooth. Spread part of pudding over cookie layer, and top this layer with sliced bananas. Alternate layers of pudding and bananas so that pudding is the top layer with shortbread cookies. Cover and chill 2 to 3 hours.

MINT ICE CREAM CRUNCH
1 qt. vanilla ice cream
8 Girl Scout thin mint cookies

Soften ice cream. Coarsely chop cookies. Fold into ice cream. Refreeze. Serve with additional cookies if desired. Makes 6 servings.

EASY PEANUTTY BRITTLE
10 Girl Scout peanut butter sandwich cookies
2 Tbsps. margarine
1½ cups granulated sugar
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla

Cut cookies into large pieces. Use a cutting board and cut each cookie into thirds and then into thirds again. Melt margarine in a heavy skillet. Add sugar, salt and vanilla. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sugar is melted and smooth. Sugar will turn a golden brown. Do not overcook. Remove from heat and add cut up cookies, mixing to coat them. Pour immediately into a well-greased 9 x 13-inch pan. Cool thoroughly. Break brittle into pieces.

CONFETTI FREEZE DESSERT
1½ cups finely crushed Girl Scout pecan chocolate chip cookies
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
1 (2-oz.) pkg. dessert topping mix
3 cups tiny marshmallows

Combine crushed pecan chocolate chip cookies and butter. Reserve 3 tablespoons crumb mixture; press remaining into 9-inch baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes; cool. Prepare topping mix according to package directions; fold in marshmallows. Spread over crust; sprinkle reserved crumbs on top. Freeze. Makes 8 servings.

Local resources have nutrition information

"How can I cut down on salt?" "Is it really cheaper to buy the larger size eggs?" "Exactly how does cholesterol function in the body?" For answers to these and other food and nutrition questions, you don't have to look any further than your own community.

Many people doubt what they read or hear about nutrition; especially when it seems designed to sell health products, vitamins, foods or fad diet programs, says Texas A&M Univerisyt Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Dr. Alice Hunt.

Others have specific questions, such as how food interacts with a medication or whether a certain food is appropriate for a diabetic diet, that aren't answered by nutrition articles in popular magazines.

Whatever type of nutrition information consumers are seeking, it should be available from reliable commuity resources, she says. These local resources include:

● The Count Extension Office. The Extension office will have free or low-cost publications and offer programs on nutrition, food preparation, purchasing, storage, handling and home canning. The county extension home economist can answer specific questions about food and nutrition. The office should be listed under county government in your phone book.

● Dietetic Associaitons. The American Dietetic Association operates a Dial-a-Dietitian service in many larger communities. It's staffed by volunteer certified nutritionists and dietitians to answer consumbers' food related questions.

The American Dietetic Association and its local affiliates are observing National Nutrition Month during March. Check with your local Texas Dietetic Association group for infomration on special activities.

● Local Health Department. This office may offer classes and health fairs on nutrition and other topics. It also handles food poisoning cases and monitors the sanitation of restaurants and food stores.

● Food Stamp Offices. These offices may have free nutrition and food cost publications in English and Spanish for food stamp recipients. They are designed to help low-income consumers in buying and preparing more nutritious, less expensive food.

● Local Libraries. The reference librarian can direct you to a number of books and other materials written by authoritative sources on nutrition and food.

The resources are available for consumers to have their nutrition questions answered quickly and easily by professionals in their own community.

Texas industries compete with Japanese appetites

Texas industries must compete with Japanese technology and now Texas meat consumers must also compete with Japanese appetites — for beef skirt steak.

The beef skirt steak now so popular for fajitas used to be thrown away by meat wholesalers or ground into hamburger, says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten.

But prices for skirt steaks have increased from 49 cents a pound in 1976 to between $1.79 and $2.79 a pound in 1985. One reason for the price rise is the fajitas craze in Texas and other parts of the country.

Sweeten says "inside" beef skirts from the hindquarter and "outside" skirts from the forequarter of the animal are distinguished in the wholesale meat trade. However, at the meat counter the cut is usually labeled as "skirt steak," and most sold in retail stores are inside skirts.

The outside skirt is usually the more palatable of the two cuts. Research at Texas A&M University indicates that the outside skirts are more tender and have higher overall ratings for flavor and tenderness than the inside beef skirts.

She advises compensating for a less tender inside skirt steak by cutting diagonally across the grain of the meat first in one direction and then the other, pounding it to break down the connective tissue.

Marinating the skirt steak in a food acid such as lime juice, lemon juice or vinegar for several hours or overnight also increases tenderness and enhances the flavor.

Manufactureres not required to give sodium amounts on labels

If you like to munch on chips or other salty snacks, you may want to know exactly how much sodium you're getting.

Some manufacturers list sodium amounts in milligrams per serving on food labels, but they are not required to do so, says Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten.

However, a recent study of 15 popular national brand snack foods, reported in the Journal of Food Science, provides some information on their sodium content, she says.

Researchers determined the average amount of salt in 100 grams — or about 3½ ounces — of the snack. A typical single serving size bag of chips contains one to two ounces.

Of the products tested, pretzel twists had the most sodium with 2370 milligrams per serving. But saltines with 1794 milligrams, puff balls with 1190 milligrams and some corn-based snacks with 1014 milligrams are also high on sodium, she said.

By comparison, Sweeten says that 1100 to 3300 milligrams of sodium is the recommended amount for daily intake.

"Even one serving of these snacks, assuming you can eat just one, provides a substantial amount of the day's allotment for sodium," says the nutritionist.

"Obviously, the salt content of different brands can vary, and the quantity of salt you eat depends on how much and how often you eat these snacks," she says.

She also explains that the researchers found a wide range of sodium levels within some of the individual products they tested, and snacks made by regional and local companies were not tested at all.

Salt, or more correctly sodium (salt is 40 percent of sodium), is important to the body, says the nutritionist. However, excessive salt in the diet has been linked with hypertension, or high blood pressure. High blood pressure, in turn, may lead to heart or kidney disease or stroke.

Program tells history of B&PW organization

Karen Ditto and Kathy Peters of Midland Uptown Business and Professional Women's Club presented a slide program to the local B & PW Club last week at La Posada Restaurant.

The slide movie complete with a narrative was about the history of Business and Professional Women's/ USA Clubs in America from its birth in 1919 to the present. The B&PW Federation has attained an international level and today is the oldest and largest organization of working women in the world.

The film titled "Old Memories — Young Hopes" paid tribute to the founders which has made B&PW a voice in promoting full participation in the work force, equity and economics, and self-sufficiency for America's working women.

It pictured the lack of interest by the public and now acceptance of women working and fighting for equality and equal opportunity with men in all areas of the world's work force.

Mrs. Kitto said in spite of the many set-backs, B&PW has accomplished unbelievable success in the interest of women. The National Foundation, which was organized in 1956, is devoted solely to the education and training of women in unfortunate circumstances, to enable them to join the work force in the many fields of science, teaching, business, vocational activitites and other fields.

Through 20 years of experience, the Foundation has built an integrated program of research information and education that serves all working women. This helps the family, economy and society as a whole, she said.

Get out the quilts, it's festival time

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

American quilt-makers have a chance to win a cash award and a trip to New York in April, 1986, to participate in what is being billed as the largest quilt festival ever held.

The rules require each contestant to design and make an original quilt conforming to the themes of liberty, freedom and the American heritage. On the basis of color slides, between 500 and 1,000 quilts will be selected to be sent to New York next January. From this group, 52 semi-finalists will be chosen — one from each state, Washington, D.C., and U.S. territories, possessions and military bases.

A first- and second-place winner will receive $20,000 and $5,000 purchase prize awards, and their quilts will become part of the permanent collection of the Museum of American Folk Art in New York. All 52 finalists will receive air fare to New York for the festival and the two winners will recieve all-expense-paid stays.

The contest is sponsored by the museum and 3M Co. and is one of a number of activities being planned for the five-day festival which will take place April 22-27, 1986. The festival itself is a kind of opening salvo in the centennial celebration of the Statue of Liberty which is planned for the summer of 1986.

Before being sent on an international tour, the 52 award-winning quilts will be exhibited on Liberty Island, the home of the statue, between July 4 and October.

According to Dr. Robert Bishop, director of the Folk Art Museum, a quilt festival is particularly appropriate as a memorial to the Statue of Liberty — that most symbolic of American icons. Patchwork and pieced quilts are an indigenous American art form which is appreciated all over the world. In this country and elsewhere, enthusiasm for them is shared by art lovers, antiques aficionados and millions of quilt-makers.

Quilts figure in the lives of millions of Americans. Approximately 14 million were involved in quilt-making in 1983, according to a Daniel Yankelovich poll. Others attended quilt exhibitions, had an old family quilt repaired, or purchased a new or antique quilt.

Bishop, an authority on antique quilts and author of a number of books about them, has recently been studying the place of pieced quilts in contemporary life in preparation for the multi-faceted celebration the museum will orchestrate.

His travels have taken him to some of the scores of large quilt shows held each year in different parts of the country. Some of these shows attract thousands of visitors who participate in quilt-making workshops, look at exhibitions of exemplary quilts, and attend a trade fair where as many as 250 suppliers sell quilting materials.

Americans may not realize it but there is substantial international interest in American quilts and quilting. In Japan, for example, more than a dozen magazines are devoted to quiltmaking. In England, patchwork quilts are prized accessories in fashionable homes.

The museum festival will be a vehicle to bring together many in the quilting world, who usually have no contact with one another. For art lovers, there will be exhibitions and scholarly lectures. For quilt-makers, there will be workshops and quilting bees. For owners of old quilts, there will be repair clinics and appraisal sessions.

Among some special activities will be a fashion show of clothes made from quilted fabrics. Forty quilt dealers will sell their wares. An Amish quilting bee will be the centerpiece of a day devoted to Amish quilts and their role in the life of that community. A luau will be a feature on a day devoted to Hawaiian quilts.

Bishop expects as many as 150,000 to participate in the various activities. Organized tours will be arranged for quilting enthusiasts who live outside the New York area, he said.

To obtain a list of rules and an entry form, write to: The Great American Quilt Contest, One East Wacker Drive, Chicago, IL 60601. Or call toll-free 1-800-227-3800. For information on the festival, write the Museum of American Folk Art, 125 West 55th Street, New York, NY 10019.)

The nine to 11 year olds will begin with a clothing tour from 9:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. Following lunch at the Fair Barn and recreation led by Coahoma 4-H Club, a felt workshop will be led from 1 to 2:15 p.m. A modeling clinic will follow from 2:15 to 3:3 p.m.

Youths 12 years old and older will begin the day with the felt workshop from 9:30 to 10:45 a.m. and a modeling clinic from 10:45 to 12 p.m. Following lunch and recreation, they will take a clothing tour from 1 to 3:30 p.m.

Each youth participating in the workshop must bring a sack lunch and $1 to cover costs of supplies and soft drinks. Parents and leaders are needed to provide transportation and assist with the workshops. Any youth may participate in the workshop, even if he or she is not a member of a 4-H club.

Dear Abby

Hubby's magazines disgust his wife

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old wife and mother. A few years after I was married, I found some pornographic girlie magazines my husband had hidden. It hurt me to discover that he was reading such filth, and it hurt me even more to know that he tried to hide it from me. We discussed the matter and he promised never to read that trash again.

Well, you guessed it. Today I found some recent issues of that magazine hidden in a different place. I'm so disgusted and angry I don't know what to do. I happen to be a pretty good-looking woman, so I can't understand why my husband would want to look at filth like that. What should I do?

DECEIVED

DEAR DECEIVED: Please get over the notion that only men with unattractive wives read girlie magazines. What you look like has nothing to do with your husband's desire to look at what you call "filth."

You have much to learn about why men read girlie magazines. (It has nothing to do with you.) Please see a counselor. It would be better if your husband went with you, but if he refuses, go alone, because the problem is yours — not his.

No man should have to hide his reading material from his wife. And no wife should "make" her husband promise not to read what he obviously enjoys reading. He is a grown man, and you are not his mother.

DEAR ABBY: Tell the widow who found a whole bunch of keys in her late husband's drawer and was going crazy trying to find out what they were for, not to throw them away.

I also have a goodly supply of useless keys, and one day I plan to make wind chimes out of them.

MRS. P. IN SANTA BARBARA

DEAR MRS. P.: Before you make all those useless keys into wind chimes, if you have neighbors, please ask them how they feel about wind chimes. They may not share your enthusiasm.

★★★

DEAR ABBY: Apropos flat-chested women: I recall a lovely French poem set to music. The translation into English is: "Oh, you flat-chested femmes, I adore you. With you, I am closer to your hearts!"

Water helps prevent jet lag

DENVER (AP) — Drinking plenty of water before an airplane flight will help prevent fluid losses that contribute to jet lag, according to the American Water Works Association.

Medical experts tell us that a daily replenishment of two to three quarts of water is needed through food and drink to maintain our health. During an airline flight, dry air circulated at high altitudes can result in water loss — as much as a full quart of body water on a 3½-hour flight. The association recommends drinking more water before and during a flight.

Dr. Donohue

She gets conflicting eye diagnosis

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am concerned about some conflicting information about glaucoma that I am getting. One doctor diagnosed me as having glaucoma and put me on eyedrops and told me to reduce salt intake and drink plenty of water. The second doctor I saw said I had ocular hypertension. He took me off the drops and said salt had no effect on it, and that large amounts of water could increase the eye pressure for a time. What instructions do I follow? — Mrs. M.H.

Sorry to be so terribly late in answering. By now what I tell you probably will not be news, but you raise interesting questions. You really did get conflicting opinions. Part of the conflict arises over definitions, so let's get them straight first.

Glaucoma is defined as a rise in the pressure of eye fluid to the point where it impinges on the optic nerve and threatens visions. Ocular hypertension, which has nothing to do with blood pressure, means the eye fluid pressure is above normal, but not yet high enough to affect vision.

The question that arises is when to start using medicines to lower pressure. I can't resolve that for you. I trust that by now you have taken the sensible step of having a third opinion to settle things in your mind.

Now about salt and water. In bygone times, when there were no medicines to control pressure, fluid restriction was used, also salt restriction, for as you know, salt retains fluid in the body.

In fact, one test for glaucoma was to have the patient drink a quart of water in four minutes. If the eye pressure rose by a certain degree, glaucoma was diagnosed. So it is true that large quantities of fluid can cause a rise temporarily.

But no one drinks that amount of fluid. So fluid and salt restriction are not standard treatment these days for everyone with glaucoma.

Snyder nips Steers 5-2

SNYDER — The Big Spring Steers dropped a close non-district game to the Snyder Tigers by a 5-2 count yesterday.

Steers pitcher Tommy Gartman hurled four strong innings. Junior Mike Dodd went the remaining two innings. The duo allowed Snyder only four hits.

Outfielder Jay Pirkle was the leading hitter for Big Spring collecting two hits in three trips to the plate. Second baseman Jerry Anderson got a hit and drove in a run. In all, Big Spring got five hits while committing two errors.

The loss drops Big Spring's record to 1-3 for the season.

Big Spring will take on Snyder again Saturday at Steers Field at 2 p.m.

Harrah welcomes return back to Texas Rangers

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Texas Rangers' General Manager Tom Grieve may have put infielder Toby Harrah on a permanent emotional high.

It's been one week since Grieve made Harrah the happiest Ranger in camp by acquiring him from the New York Yankees in exchange for disgruntled outfielder Billy Sample.

Harrah's jubilation still hasn't subsided.

"I couldn't be happier," Harrah said. "I'm just happy to be back in Texas. That's my home and I like the people in the organization a lot and I think we've got a chance in the Western Division."

Harrah, 36, started his major league career with the Washington Senators and moved to Texas with the Rangers in 1971. He's wanted to return since he first reported to the Yankees last season.

"From the first day there I was looking forward to the last," Harrah said prior to Tuesday's workout. "I always felt more comfortable playing against them (Yankees) than for them.

"Playing against the Yankees for 15 years you develop that comfort. Just being with them for one year, I never got just real comfortable playing there."

In addition to feeling like he was in an enemy camp, Harrah felt the brunt of fan abuse during an off-year in which he hit only .217 and drove in 26 runs.

Harrah felt fans blamed him for the trade that sent Graig Nettles to the San Diego Padres.

"It wasn't too bad until they traded Nettles and once they traded him it made me look like I was the cause of it all and the fans didn't like that at all," Harrah said. "It was kind of an adverse fan reaction and I was kind of the focal point of the whole thing.

"It made things very uncomfortable to play ball there and enjoy it. The Yankees themselves, from Mr. (George) Steinbrenner to Yogi (Berra) and the coaches were fine people. They made it at the most bearable."

Grieve, a former teammate of Harrah's on the Senators and Rangers, said he made two players happy with the trade.

"Billy Sample didn't want to play for us anymore and therefore we didn't want him here," Grieve said. "As for Toby, he was so happy to get back here, I think he would have crawled."

But Grieve has more in mind than making players happy.

Tournament Time

SMU hosting SWC tournament

The pairings are now complete for Friday's SWC Post-Season Classic pairings in Dallas.

Texas A&M and Texas Christian will kick things off at 12:08 p.m. in Reunion Arena; champion Tech follows at 2:08 p.m. against Baylor; Arkansas, the No. 2 seed, gets into action at 7:08 p.m. against Texas; and SMU faces Houston at 9:08 p.m.

The semifinals will be held Saturday afternoon with the finals scheduled for 1:08 p.m. on Sunday. Raycom will televise all the games regionally.

Meanwhile, Tech Coach Gerald Myers was savoring his team's first SWC basketball title in 12 years.

Tech's 61-53 win over Texas Christian on Saturday produced an outright title and the Red Raiders' first 20-victory season since 1977, only the sixth in the school's history. Tech beat SMU in Dallas Wednesday night to set things up.

"I'm not even going to think about the conference tournament until Monday," said Myers. "We won our game against SMU (last Wednesday) and really didn't get to enjoy it becase we had this one (TCU) coming up and wanted to concentrate on it."

SMU finished the regular season by losing six of its last nine games.

In other games on Saturday, Texas A&M crushed Rice 79-62 to clinch the No. 4 seed in the tournament while Arkansas ripped Baylor 106-71.

The Red Raiders, picked in the preseason to finish fourth behind Southern Methodist, Houston, and Arkansas bounced TCU, then gave their coach a shower with his suit on.

Battle brewing in Big East

NEW YORK (AP) — The sixth annual Big East Conference postseason basketball tournament will begin tonight with a game involving teams that managed just 20 victories between them in 1984-85.

When the quarterfinal round starts Thursday, six of the seven teams that will join the winner of the Providence-Seton Hall game will have 17 or more victories.

"This is no Mickey Mouse conference," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca understated recently. He should know. His Redmen, 25-2 overall and 15-1 in the conference, are the top seed in the tournament that runs through Saturday night and has sold-out Madison Square Garden.

To back up the declaration by the coach of the nation's No. 2 team is the fact that the nation's No. 1 team, Georgetown, is the second seed in this tournament.

The only other conference that can boast of 17-game winners is the Big Ten, which has no postseason tournament. Those two conferences and the Atlantic Coast Conference are the only ones that have had five of its members attain ranked status this season.

In addition to Georgetown, 27-2 and 14-2, and St. John's — the only teams to hold the No. 1 spot all season long — Syracuse, 20-7 and 9-7, went as high as No. 5, while Boston College, 18-9 and 7-9, was as high as 12th and Villanova, 18-9 and 9-7, was 14th.

The top six seeds in the tournament finished with an out-of-conference record of 53-5. Villanova, the fourth seed after losing a coin flip to Syracuse, and Pittsburgh, the No. 5 seed, each was 9-2 out of the league, while St. John's was 10-1 and Georgetown, Syracuse and Boston College were undefeated in a total of 35 games.

Along with the Boston College-Syracuse matchup, the quarterfinals will have Georgetown facing Connecticut, 13-14 and 6-10, Villanova against Pittsburgh and St. John's versus the winner of tonight's meeting of No. 8 Providence, 10-19 and 3-13, and No. 9 Seton Hall, 10-17 and 1-15.

Bay Hill Classic kicks off today

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Watson and Lanny Wadkins return to action this week, but Jack Nicklaus is among those missing the $500,000 Bay Hill Classic.

Watson, who has taken a two-week break from competition, will be attempting to regain the form that last season produced a record sixth Player of the Year designation.

The five-time British Open titleholder used this tournament last year as the start of a major turn-around. In one of the worst slumps of his career, a solid ninth-place finish at Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club served as the stepping stone to another outstanding season.

Although it may not be as severe as last year, Watson is again off to a relatively slow start. The 1984 leading money-winner missed the cut in his last start and has been in title contention only once in four appearances this year.

"I've been working on some swing changes and it takes a litle time," he said before a practice round for the event that gets underway on Thursday.

Wadkins, a record-setting winner in two early season events, is returning from a four-week vacation during which his money-winning total was surpassed by Mark O'Meara.

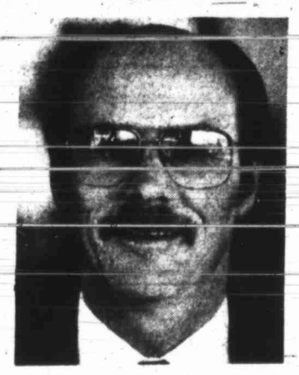

Greg Norman, the transplanted Australian who now owns a home at Bay Hill, also will be making his second start in American competition. Norman, a two-time winner in this country last year, lost the 1984 title at Bay Hill in a playoff and was sixth last season.

While the elite, invitational field of 107 contains most of the game's leading figures, Nicklaus and Tom Kite are not here. Nicklaus, who has played the last two weeks, is skipping this tournament and will play the following week in New Orleans. Kite, a former winner here, is taking the week off to move into a new home.

In addition to the host Palmer, Watson, Wadkins and Norman, some of the major figures are U.S. and British Open champions Fuzzy Zoeller and Seve Ballesteros, Masters titleholder Ben Crenshaw and defending champion Gary Koch.

Also on hand are Ray Floyd, Johnny Miller, Hale Irwin, Larry Nelson, South African Denis Watson, former Bay Hill winner Andy Bean, O'Meara, Craig Stadler and Curtis Strange.

Denver defeats Rockets in 133-131 OT slugfest

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

On paper, a Houston-Denver game should be a mismatch, with the Rockets sending 7-foot-4 power forward Ralph Sampson against 6-6 power forward Calvin Natt.

On the court, however, it doesn't work out that way, or at least it didn't in Tuesday night's National Basketball Association game, which saw Natt outscore Sampson 37-30 in Denver's 133-131 double overtime victory. Both All-Stars had 15 rebounds.

"Calvin Natt is just a horse," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "You try to tell him he's too small for those guys and he just doesn't believe it."

Denver scored eight straight points in the second overtime to lead 131-124, but the Rockets responded with seven in a row to tie the score before reserve guard Mike Evans hit the game-winning jumper with 44 seconds left.

Alex English led Denver with 39 points, while Rodney McCray had 25 for Houston. Evans had 20 points along with Houston's Akeem Olajuwon, who also equalled his own NBA season high for rebounds with 25.

In other NBA games, it was Boston 110, New York 102; Kansas City 134, New Jersey 113; Milwaukee 102, Seattle 87; Dallas 108, Indiana 102; Chicago 104, Washington 99, and Portland 100, Atlanta 91.

"It wouldn't have been easy on Denver if they had lost and it certainly wasn't easy for us," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said. "It looked like they had us buried when they got up by seven, but they made some mistakes that let us back in it. You saw two good teams going at it with everything they had."

Despite the victory, Denver's sixth straight and 19th in its last 23 games, Moe was stunned by the near-collapse late in the second overtime.

"Don't ask me any questions about what happened out there because I can't remember anything except for some missed opportunities," he said. "It was just another miracle win for the Nuggets."

Denver, which now leads the Midwest Division by 4½ games over the Rockets, fell behind 60-51 at halftime, but the Nuggets outscored the Rockets 37-27 in the third period, and the game was close the rest of the way.

"We just kept fighting back and coming at them," Moe said. "We haven't played well in the first half for the last two weeks, but we've had some incredible second halves, and Evans just keeps hitting big shots for us."

Evans, whose free throw with 43 seconds left in the first extra period tied the score 123-123, scored 38 points last Friday in a one-point overtime victory over Dallas.

Celtics 110, Knicks 102 ....

Kevin McHale continued his phenomenal shooting by hitting 15 of 21 shots and scoring 42 points for Boston against New York.

McHale, who set a Celtics record with 56 points against Detroit on Sunday, had 11 points during a 17-4 streak that wiped out a 47-45 Knicks lead and gave Boston the lead for good.

Bernard King had 38 points to lead the Knicks, who, because of injuries and illness, played without front-court players Pat Cummings and James Bailey the whole game and forward Louis Orr for more than half. Six New York players 6-7 or taller are now sidelined.

Larry Bird had 20 points, 19 rebounds and 10 assists for Boston, giving him seven triple-doubles this season, but his string of nine straight 30-point games ended.

Bucks 102, Sonics 87 ....

Milwaukee swamped Seattle in the first half behind the sharp shooting of Kevin Grevey and coasted to victory.

The Bucks outscored the Sonics 32-13 during a stretch from late in the first quarter to late in the second to lead 59-33. Seattle chipped away at the deficit in the second half, but got no closer than 10 points.

Terry Cummings led all scorers with 23 points for Milwaukee, while Grevey hit 5-of-6 shots for the game and scored 14 of his 15 points in the first half.

Bulls 104, Bullets 99 ....

Chicago got 37 points from rookie Michael Jordan and erased an 18-point deficit to defeat Washington.

The Bulls, down 38-20 in the second quarter and 64-49 at halftime, closed the deficit to 79-72 after three periods, then outscored the Bullets 32-20 in the final 12 minutes to win the game.
