CAR CRASH ENDS RUNNING GUN FIGHT

Ouster of Electra Police Chief Upheld by High Texas Court

Faith

Pennant Fever—
Postal Holidays—
From Iowa Park—
News, Too—

IS WICHITA FALLS a baseball town?

It would seem so when a thousand or more fans turn out on short notice to welcome the Spudders home from a road trip.

Most of those at the union station Friday night probably missed a couple of hours sleep to be on hand for the occasion. They were in the majority business and professional men and women, mothers and housewives, who ordinarily find the day's business of more interest and importance than midnight pleasures.

They simply wanted to show the Spudders that Wichita Falls is solidly behind them in their pennant chase.

WICHITA FALLS will watch with interest and sympathy the experiment of Postmaster O. P. Maricle in giving carriers a half holiday on Saturday.

This plan is followed in many other cities, and has worked no hardship in the delivery of either business or personal mail. If the system proves successful here, and The Record News sees no reason why it shouldn't, all Wichita Falls will be glad to see this period of relaxation and rest for the men who serve our needs during the week with such efficiency and dispatch.

C. C. HUDSON, editor of the Iowa Park Herald, feels sure that Wichita Falls' neighbor town will send at least 20 persons on the Record News special train to the Dixie series.

This is the sort of friendship and support of which Wichita Falls can be proud. Iowa Park is one of the most progressive little cities in Texas and has ever been found ready to co-operate with Wichita Falls in all movements for the betterment of Wichita county.

STEALING news from the advertising columns, we see that cantaloupes from the Pecan-Fruit orchards just outside the city are now on the markets.

These melons, according to the announcement, were grown in hot beds, transplanted to fields, and pushed to early maturity through the power of Wichita's rich sandy loam soil and irrigation. Those who purchased some of the first melons can vouch that they are not surpassed by either California or the Magic Valley's finest.

Every day the power of this county's irrigation, the fertility of its soil and the enterprise of its agriculturists is revealed in some new product. Now it's cantaloupes early in July. Is there any limit to the productivity of Wichita county?

TWO HURT IN WRECK.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 9. (AP)—Two persons were slightly injured when the Californian, Rock Island, California to Memphis train was derailed at Goodwin, Ark., early today, according to reports to the railroad officers.

THE WEATHER

TAYLOR LOSES APPEAL FROM COUNCIL'S ACT

Police Head Will Remain In Office for Time, However

REHEARING ASKED

Fort Worth Appeals Court Upholds Authority Of Council

Holding that the City of Electra had authority to oust James T. Taylor as chief of police and fire marshal by a majority vote of the city council, the second court of civil appeals at Fort Worth Saturday dissolved an injunction granted by Judge W. W. Cook, of the 78th district court, restraining the removal of Taylor.

Following the dissolution of the injunction, Judge Guy Rogers, attorney for Taylor, stated to The Record News that a motion for re-hearing of the case would be filed immediately with the appellate court. What further action would be taken, Judge Rogers said, would depend upon the terms incorporated in the opiuion handed down by the court. Judge Rogers expects a copy of the opinion to be in his hands by Monday.

Taylor Retains Post.

Until the appellate court acts on the motion for a rehearing Taylor will retain his post as chief of police, according to Judge Rogers.

A motion for a re-hearing will be contested by the City of Electra, according to Raymon Allred, attorney for the city.

Taylor was removed from office by a vote of three to two in the Electra city council. After the removal order was issued by the council Taylor was granted an injunction by Judge Cook on the plea that a city ordinance prescribed that an official of the city could not be removed by a majority vote when no charges of disorderly conduct in office had been filed. No charges were lodged against Taylor and no reason for the council's action was announced.

Taylor contended that only by a unanimous vote of the council for his removal would it be legal.

In the appeal filed by Mr. Allred for the City of Electra it was set out that there was another ordinance which prescribed that officials could be removed by a majority vote when no charges were filed.

Council Has Power.

Both ordinances, according to the attorneys, set out that city officials during their term of office could only be removed by action of the council.

Taylor was appointed as chief of police and fire marshal during last December for a two-year term.

BRITAIN HEADS TEXAS BAR

Wichita Falls Man Named Association President

HOUSTON, Texas, July 9. (AP)—A. H. Britain of Wichita Falls was unanimously elected president of the Texas Bar association, succeeding T. W. Davidson, at the final meeting of the convention here Saturday.

W. M. Crook of Beaumont was unanimously elected vice-president, and according to custom, he will be the next president of the association.

The secretary, George C. Gaines Jr., of Houston and the treasurer Henry G. Evans of Bonham, were re-elected.

W. B. Cook of Houston and Harry B. Lawther of Dallas were the new directors added to the board composed of the new officers and the following former members: C. S. Bradley of Groesbeck, R. L. Ball of San Antonio and George E. Shelly of Austin.

Cook was elected to the board over the protest of Houston lawyers, who advocated the election of Judge W. C. Wear of Hillsboro on the grounds that the Houston bar did not want to be paid for their entertainment. A. H. McKnight of Dallas insisted on the election of the Houston man, however, and a little later it was made unanimous.

WICHITA DELEGATION RETURNS MONDAY

Wichita Falls attorneys attending the Texas Bar association meeting in Houston will return here Monday morning, according to word received by friends. They are Judge A. H. Britain, Judge W. E. Fitzgerald, Judge A. H. Carrigan, J. B. Hatchett and C. C. McDonald.

Judge Britain served this past year as first vice-president of the association.

TAX SURVEY PROPOSED IN C-C REPORT

Committee to Investigate Conditions Here Suggested

DISTRIBUTE BURDEN

Business in Sound Condition, According Report

Appointment of a committee composed of "the best minds in the community" to investigate the subject of local taxation; a conservative policy in promotion of new enterprises for the present; the organization of an industrial finance company, and a conservative policy in securing conventions comprise highlight recommendations of Hubert M. Harrison, general manager of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce, to the board of directors in the semi-annual report of all departments submitted this week.

The entire report was approved with the exception of industrial finance company, industrial area and tax committee recommendations, which were reserved for further study by the executive committee.

C.-C. May Lead.

It is believed that the chamber of commerce will take the lead in securing some readjustments of the taxation problem by insisting on economies and a more suitable distribution of the tax burden through a careful analysis of the situation and recommendations on relief measures.

In the report it is stated that the failure of the recent $1,110,000 road bond issue "does not reflect a lack of progressiveness on the part of our splendid citizenship but that the growing burden of taxation is being keenly felt by the average citizens."

Belief that the first step toward remedying the condition now extant will be "bringing them out into the open," was expressed by Mr. Harrison in the report. "The sooner we know of an ailment in the body politic the sooner we can try to correct it, for no good will come of criticisms and blame of public officials. Our officials have a serious problem in finding the money necessary to carry on the public wodk," the report said.

In the recommendation concerning the promotion of new enterprises at this time, it was noted that Wichita Falls is far ahead of most other cities of its size in this respect. That financial conditions now obtaining in the community

U. S. CITIZENS FACE DANGER

Chinese Strife Imperils More Americans

By Universal Service.

PEKING, July 9.—More than 150 Americans, mostly women and children from Shanghai and elsewhere who are summering in the beautiful Esingtao, China's Atlantic City, are having real war experience by hearing the distant booming guns between the mutinied northerners under General Chen Yi Yen and the Loyal Tsingtao garrison under General Chu.

The rebels have been driven back 25 miles.

An official dispach from the American subinarines at Tsingtao this morning says the city is quiet but uneasy. All Americans are safe. No American marines have landed or are expected to.

There are no marines in action in that vicinity but there are probably some on the American destroyers at Chefoo which with the Japanese forces are considered ample protection for the Americans who are bathing while the guns are booming in the distance.

The first Japanese troops arrived at Tsinanfu last night and four more trains full are expected today. While a formal protest has been made against this there is reason to believe that the Japanese have the tacit consent of Peking.

Minister MacMurray has taken no steps toward moving the American legation to the coast and is silent on his intentions. Those close to him say he is extremely unwilling to move and the general impression is that a new crisis will not arise before the first of August.

Texas Road Executives For Davis Mt. Highway

AUSTIN, July 9.(AP)—Highway commissioners on the West Texas "motorcade" tour, were favorably impressed with Senator Tom Love's proposal to build an 80-mile scenic highway loop in the Davis mountains, after looking over the contemplated site, R. A. Thompson, state highway engineer, said today.

TWO DIE IN CAR FLIP ON BOWIE ROAD

Mr. and Mrs. Houston Elmore Killed in Accident Saturday

CAR HITS DITCH

Woman Dies Instantly, But Husband Survives For Short Time

Special to The Record News.

BOWIE, July 9.—For the second time within a week death rode at the steering wheel of an automobile on the paved highway between Bowie and Wichita Falls Saturday and as a result Houston Elmore, 30, automobile salesman, and his wife, Mrs. Minnie Elmore, are dead. Mrs. Elmore was instantly killed and her husband fatally hurt when their car turned head over into a ditch along the highway four miles out of Bowie toward Wichita Falls. The injured man died an hour later in a Bowie sanitarium, the accident having occurred at 2:30 p. m.

Scene of the fatal accident Saturday was within a few hundred yards of the spot where on Monday Miss Ruby Kincer, 14, of Bowie, was killed and six companions hurt when their automobile overturned.

Mrs. Elmore's parents, it was learned Saturday night reside at Temple, Okla., and are now enroute to Burkburnett where the bodies of the two wreck victims were carried late Saturday. Elmore's father, George W. Elmore, resides at Randlett, Okla., and is also enroute to assist in funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmore had just passed through Bowie, where they stopped for oil and gas and inquired about the Wichita Falls road. There were no witnesses to the accident, but farmers along the road reported that they were traveling at a rapid rate. The accident occurred on a recently graded stretch of road, where there is loose gravel and it is believed that the machine skidded into the ditch and overturned.

Passing motorists found the bodies pinned under the wreckage. Mrs. Elmore was dead. Her skull was crushed. Mr. Elmore was taken to the Bowie Clinic hospital in a Burgess ambulance. He was suffering from a crushed chest and internal injuries and died within 30 minutes after reaching the hospital.

Identification was made by Masonic and American Legion cards which Elmore carried.

T. B. Mickey of the Colliers Undertaking company of Burkburnett went to Bowie for the bodies of the two victims Saturday night. Funeral arrangements will not be made until Sunday.

Mr. Elmore, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W Elmore of Randlett, Okla., was an automobile salesman with headquarters in Oklahoma City. His wife was an Oklahoma City girl.

Mr. Elmore's father is a retired merchant of Randlett.

RULE MAN DIES OF GUN WOUNDS

Wife Believed Dying In Double Shooting

Special to The Record News.

RULE, July 9.—J. W. Brewer, 47, shot his wife, 47, this morning at 6:30 o'clock with a 32 automatic pistol, the bullet entering the left breast and coming out in the back just missing the heart. Brewer then took a shot gun and shot himself, the discharge grazing his breast and entering his left arm. Both were rushed to the Stamford sanitarium about 7:30 this morning. Mrs. Brewer is not expected to live while Brewer died at noon.

Brewer made a statement that the shooting did not come up over a quarrel. Brewer's wife stated that Brewer had spells of temporary insanity and that was the reason for the shooting.

Brewer was a worker on the Humble pipe line which goes through Rule. The couple have four children ranging in age from 6 to 14 years.

Two Furloughs Granted By Moody at Houston

AUSTIN, July 9. (AP)—Two furloughs were granted to convicts today by Gov. Dan Moody by telephone from Houston.

Naval Conferees In Hot Meet at Geneva

GENEVA, July 9. (AP)—The tripartite naval conference almost broke up today. Reliable information concerning the happenings at a secret session of the executive committee this morning has it that Lord Cecil went so far in the course of the tumultuous discussion of the cruiser problem as to bang his fist on the table and exclaim: "This is perfect nonsense."

TWO HURT AS STOLEN AUTO STRIKES CAR

Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Fleming Escape Serious Injuries

THIEVES ESCAPE

Running Gun Fight Halted When Bandits Crash On Petrolia Road

As the result of a running gun battle between Ellis Sumners, city motorcycle policeman, and three men driving a stolen automobile, Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Fleming, 1800 Collins, were injured Saturday night when the stolen automobile struck a car in which the man and woman were riding.

After the collision the three men riding in the stolen car fled into nearby fields and escaped from city and county officers who were trailing them a short distance behind.

Running Gun Fight.

The gun battle and collision took place near the Spudder park, when the men in the car started shooting at Sumners who had commanded them to stop. Sumners returned the shots and hit the car four times by the time it had reached a point two and one-half miles from the city limits. Although several bullets singed Sumners by a hair he was not hit. Witnesses to the three men leaving the car said that they did not believe that any of the men were struck by Sumners' bullets.

The stolen car struck that in which Mr. and Mrs. Fleming were driving on a hairpin curve. Taking a wide turn the driver of the stolen car struck the automobile driven by Mr. Felming on the left hand side of the road. Mr. Fleming's car was knocked into a ditch while the stolen car straddled the road.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleming were taken to the Wichita General hospital where attendants said that neither was seriously injured and that both would be discharged Sunday morning.

Officer Watches Thieves.

The chase which resulted in the gun battle and the collision started in front of the Noble-Little Hardware company where the stolen automobile which is owned by Lotta Graham, deputy constable at Iowa Park, was parked. Mr. Graham was standing in front of the Hub Clothing company and saw the three men enter his car and drive off.

Graham started running after the car, however, after chasing it for about one-half a block, Syd Johnson, day county jailer, yelled to him to jump in his car.

The chase led over the railroad tracks on Seventh street, where Sumners was stationed on his motorcycle. Sumners joined the chase. When the chase neared a dance hall near Spudder Park a group of deputy sheriffs investigating the dance joined in.

Thrown Into Ditch.

About one and one-half miles out on the Petrolia road, Sumners got in front of the stolen car. The driver edged him into a ditch and the motorcycle turned over. The men in the stolen car shot at Sumners several times while he was in the ditch.

Sumners regained the mount on his machine and again joined the chase and returned the fire of the men in the stolen car and the chase went on.

Following the collision with the Fleming car all available city and county law enforcement officers were sent to aid in the search for the men who were in the stolen car, however, up to an early hour Sunday morning none of the men had been apprehended.

Graham's car was stolen one week ago at Lake Wichita and was found during the week by Waurika officers.

Deceased Oil Magnate Left $900,000 Estate

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—Henry Clay Pierce, financier, oil man and railroad executive of New York and St. Louis, who died June 27, last, left an estate of more than $900,000, but left no will, it became known today when Surrogate O'Brien issued letters of administration on the estate to the descendent's son, Clay Arthur Pierce, New York, and fixed his bond at $900,000.

Dixie Series Railroad Fare Cost Set at Approximately $55 Per

Iowa Park Promises to Send at Least One Coach Of Fans on Big Trip

A tentative estimate on the cost of round trip fare to the Dixie series on The Record News special train was placed at about $55 Saturday by railroad officials, who made the estimate at the request of The Record News. This figure may be revised either up or down, when officials of railroads have completed negotiations with other roads covering the entire route, it was said. The estimate is offered by The Record News in answer to a wide demand for some approximate figure on the cost.

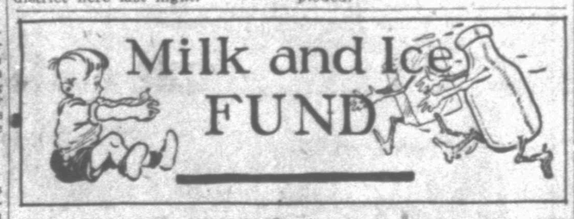

The $55 would cover round trip railroad fare and Pullman accomodations to either Birmingham or New Orleans. As an entire train is expected to be well in demand, the cost of the trip in part may also depend on the number making the tour into Southern League territory. Every accomodation will be offered travelers, and many from out of town are expected to make the trip, as well as from Wichita Falls. The train will probably come and go over different routes, thereby covering new territory on each journey.

C. C. Hudson, editor of the Iowa Park Herald, and loyal Spudder booster, Saturday told The Record News that at least 20 Iowa Park fans will go on the trip if the Spudders win. This number will be sufficient to place one Iowa Park coach on the train, and Mr. Hudson will aid in securing this number from Iowa Park.

Fans who are assured of making the trip are asked to file their names with The Record News, in order that an estimate may be made on the number to be accomodated. Detailed figures on the cost, route, facilities and services offered will be published as soon as they have been accurately compiled. While fans are asked to list their names if they plan to go to Birmingham or New Orleans, they are asked NOT to send any money until complete information is secured on the trip.

Thousands of Bogus Gold Coins Put in Circulation by Big Ring

By Universal Service.

LAREDO, July 9.—Hundreds of thousands of dollars in worthless coins are being put in circulation in the United States and Mexico, according to a statement issued today by W. B. Hamilton, vice-president of the First National bank, following the discovery of several counterfeit gold coins.

Five and twenty dollar coins are the most common in circulation, Mr. Hamilton said. The money is cleverly made and at first glance looks like the real thing but a second glance will reveal a lighter color, the banker added.

A considerable number of these counterfeit coins have been presented for exchange at the bank by Mexicans who said they obtained the money in Mexico.

Federal agents here are co-operating with Mexican secret police in seeking the source of the spurious money. American agents believe the coins are being made in Mexico and passed in the republic by agents to Mexicans enroute to the United States.

Brownsville and Del Rio bankers have reported finding several of the counterfeit coins.

SHERIFF WILL FIGHT OUSTER

Haskell Officer Refuses To Yield Badge

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, July 9.—Formal notice that he will not surrender his office as sheriff of Haskell county, from which he was ordered ousted by the county commission several days ago, without a fight was served here Saturday afternoon by Sheriff J. C. Turnbow in an address to 1500 Haskell county voters assembled on the courthouse lawn.

"You know J. C. Turnbow. I never resigned from a game of marbles even without a fight. They had to whip me and whip me right," Turnbow told his audience.

Cheers for Sheriff

Shouts of "Hurrah for Turnbow, stay right in there," greeted the sheriff as he appeared before the audience at 3 p. m. to present his side of the controversy with the commissioners' court as he had announced several days ago he would do.

"Pour it on 'em" shouted members of the crowd, distinctly favorable to the sheriff as he issued his defi to the ouster order of the county commission.

"I am not mad at anyone," Sheriff Turnbow stated in opening his address, "but I want to tell you that if you believe that J. C. Turnbow has resigned from office, you don't know J. C. Turnbow.

"A few gentlemen sent me word that I had better quietly resign. I sent word back for them to write down a single indictment against me, sign it by all who opposed me, and I would take my hat and walk out. They sent back word that they would not do it. Neither will I resign.

"I have never been arrested or indicted on a single charge in my life. They tried to get a charge against me several weeks ago and failed. I think it is the county judge who is at the head of this, and you know where he is this afternoon, and most of the time while I am trying to enforce the laws. On the golf links!"

Laughter greeted this sally by the sheriff.

"The next thing my opponents did," Turnbow continued, "was to cut my salary, but you fellows put me in office and I'll stick until I've been given a fair trial. They say my bond is not any good. Well, I can make any kind of a bond."

Much applause again interrupted the sheriff. He then continued:

Test Case In Court

"But listen, there is not a bond in that courthouse good, for they were all made 18 days before Dan Moody went into office."

Sheriff Turnbow concluded his address by thanking his audience for turning out to hear him.

Definite announcement by Turnbow in his address Saturday that he will not recognize the Haskell county commissioners' court order ousting him from office leaves the next move in the controversy up to that body. What action will be taken by Turnbow's foes in the effort to force him to yield the office was not stated late today. It was indicated however that quo warranto proceedings would probably be instituted before Bruce Bryant, district judge of the 39th district court, during the coming week.

Previous to Turnbow's formal announcement Saturday that he will not yield the sheriff's office, Wayne Perry, his proposed successor, stated that he would stand by and await the action of the county commissioners' court in the case. Perry stated Friday night that in the event of Turnbow's refusal to yield his office, the contest would likely be carried into the district court. He indicated that he would personally make no effort to take over the duties of sheriff until the legal tangles now existing had been straightened out.

Two Sheriffs

Meanwhile, Haskell county occupies the unique position of having two sheriffs, one elected by the voters of the county and the other by the county commission. Turnbow is now serving his second term, having been chosen on an anti-ku klux klan ticket in 1924 and benig re-elected in 1926. Perry was named sheriff of Haskell county on July 1 after the county commission had declared Turnbow's bond void and announced his office vacant. On Tuesday, July 5, Perry filed a $5000 bond which was approved by the county court and took his oath as Turnbow's successor. Turnbow however, refused to yield his office.

Legion Convention At San Antonio Oct. 1928

SAN ANTONIO, July 9. (AP)—Representatives of various departments of the American Legion today selected October 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 as the dates for the 1928 convention to be held here.

Walton Hood, commander of the Texas department; Wayne Davis, national committeeman from Texas, and Philip E. Stapp of Indianapolis, Ind., representing national headquarters made the decision.

Insulin Capsules Made

Insulin may now be taken in capsules, according to investigators at the University at Breslau, Germany, who claim to have found a substitute for the pancreatic insulin. Heretofore the remedy for diabetis could not be given in the form of drops, powders or tablets, but must be injected under the skin. Prof. J. C. Minkowiski, who conducted the investigations, says that the new method of giving insulin has been effective in a number of cases.

Mrs. Hallie Adams Hill Only Slightly Injured in Accident, Report Shows

Mrs. Hallie Adams Hill, daughter of T. P. Adams of this city who was reported seriously injured in an automobile accident in Chicago, is entirely out of danger with only a few bruises as a result of the collision, according to a report from her father Saturday night.

The first report that both arms were broken and both legs badly crushed was entirely errenous, Mr. Adams said. He had received no word to indicated that her driver was instantaneously killed, as was stated.

Mrs. Hill was going from Evanston, Ill., into Chicago on the elevated, when she decided to take a taxi on account of the rain, according to Mr. Adam's message. While going at a very fast speed the car collided with another automobile and was turned over, injuring both her and the cab driver, though not seriously.

Mrs. Hill is in Chicago studying music at the University of Chicago. She is well known in Wichita Falls as a soloist.

Kiwanian To Face Club Trial on Serious Allegation

Some member of the Wichita Falls Kiwanis club, whose name will not be revealed until the Monday luncheon, will be tried before a tribunal of 15 club members on that date on the charge of "not keeping his hat on while near the Kiwanis pigs," according to announcement from the program committee. The trial will be of the sort which ladies and innocent babies can attend, with the unusual part the fact that the defendant will be found guilty, according to the report.

Paul Pearson and Fitz Hurley are in charge of the program.

British Arms Stand Is Mystifying to U. S.

WASHINGTON, July 9. (AP)—Increasing mystification over the insistent British demand at Geneva for a cruiser tonnage of 600,000 as a basis for a supplemental naval treaty was evident today at the state department where it was said that Great Britain had approved at the Washington arms conference five years ago a proposal to limit all auxiliary craft to a total of 450,000 tons.

State Will Insist On Death in Lake Killing

FRANKLIN, La., July 9. (AP)—The death penalty will be demanded for Mrs. Ida Lebouef, Dr. Thomas Dreher and James Beadle, charged with the slaying of Mrs. Lebouef's husband, Emile Villemot, district attorney, announced today. A special session of the St. Mary parish grand jury will be called next Tuesday to look into the death of James J. Lebouef, Morgan City business man, whose body was found in a lake early this week.

Negro Boxer Guards Texas Death Cells

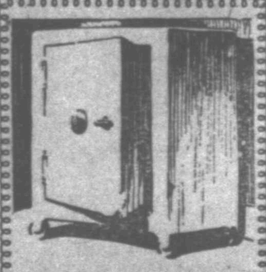

HUNTSVILLE, July 9.(AP)—Monk Haynes, negro, who is serving two life terms in the Texas state penitentiary is the caretaker in the death house, where condemned men are awaiting their day of execution.

Monk is six feet four inches, stocking feet, and weighs 250 pounds. He was a professional boxer before coming to the penitentiary, and since entering the walls he has never been defeated in any physical encounter.

BECKY ROGERS FACES COURT

Demure Maid To Be Tried As Bank Robber

By BESS CARROLL.
(Universal Service Correspondent.)

SAN MARCOS, July 9.—There's an unusual name on the theater of events, the headliner on a bill that varies from comedy to tragedy and all the way around again—the name of "Becky."

For on Monday morning at the rap of a judicial gavel Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, charged with holding up and robbing the Buda Farmer's National Bank of $1000 in cash, faces trial in the Hays county courthouse here.

"Becky"—They call her that. A thousand times a thousand of them have washed dishes, kept house, lived and died as "Beckys" do. Since the first Rebecca was Isaac's wife, mother of the great Jacob, this name has been listed on the calendar of the saints. For centuries it has symbolized the demure, the feminine woman—just as "Becky" Rogers is.

Waves Rusty Pistol.

It was in December last that the town of Buda and the whole Southwest found something new in what legal technique calls "bandits"—a very small "something," carrying a ridiculous little pistol that was too rusty to shoot.

And when Mrs. Rebecca Rogers enters court again, Monday, her audience will probably gasp as she powders her nose.

Exiled to Carlsbad, where the "white plague" of tuberculosis rules a forlorn little colony of doomed men, Otis Rogers, prominent young attorney of Amarillo, a short time ago, lies sick unto death, from reports current lately—dying.

Still further back in this tragic tale that stirred Buda out of its pleasant serenity into the front pages of newspapers—when a little coupe stopped at the Buda bank, at drowsy midday, and its occupant proceeded inside with a tiny gun hidden inside a purse. How that petite young woman herded bank officials into the vault will probably remain a classic of the rugged southwest for many a day. There was, for instance, the unusual question:

"Is there plenty of air in the vault? I don't want to hurt you."

Then came the startling arrest of "Rebecca Bradley," history professor and secretary of the then attorney general, Dan Moody. Following that, the hurried trip of Otis Rogers—and exposure, resulting so fatally—and the preliminary hearing co-incident with an announcement of their marriage.

Agree on Delay.

At San Marcos, county seat of the scene of the "hold-up," the first attempt at trial last spring resulted in a continuance granted by Judge George Jeffries after a "gentleman's agreement" had been made between defense counsel John R. Cofer and district attorney Fred Blundell—guaranteeing that the case would be brought to trial on July 11.

Although Mr. Cofer has indicated that important witnesses may be lacking, the prosecution has hinted that a fight will be made to bring the case to trial.

So it is that the demure name of "Becky" will be dragged into peculiar prominence once more, as the girl who looks so much like the name, stands a scant five feet tall to answer spectacular charges.

E. A. Bebb, Kenneth Bebb and E. Bebb of the Wichita Floral company are leaving today for El Paso to attend the state Florists' convention. They will be gone this week.

Judge Dismisses Bridge Fire Case

Owner of Devol Bridge Is Acquitted

Special to The Record News.

WALTERS, Okla., July 9.—M. L. Harris was cleared in district court today of charges pending against him in connection with the destruction by fire of the Devol bridge several weeks ago.

On motion of W. T. Powell and John Thomas, attorneys for Mr. Harris, charges of arson which had been pending against him were quashed by Judge E. L. Richardson presiding in district court here.

Judge Richardson upheld the contention of defense attorneys that not sufficient evidence could be presented to sustain the charge against the defendant.

Andrews To Leave U. of A. Post Here

Captain and Mrs. A. T. Andrews of the Volunteers of America organization of Wichita Falls will leave this week for Atlanta, Ga., where he has received orders to report from Regimental Headquarters, Southern Division, Volunteers of America. His successor has not been named by officals at headquarters.

Notice of the transfer was received by the local advisory board this week, of which Judge J. W. Akin is president. Captain Andrews expressed regret at leaving Wichita Falls, stating that he had received unusual co-operation and help with his work here.

RANGER FINDS BORDER 'TAME'

Texas Area Not So Wild As It's Painted

FORT WORTH, July 9. (AP)—The allegedly wild and wooly west in this state is a misnomer and really is the most peaceful section in all Texas, Ranger Captain Tom Hickman, who has quelled trouble in various forms through the state.

The real peace belt, he said, includes counties along the Mexican border and the Big Bend section.

Few Courthouses.

"There are fewer courthouses and officers in the Mexican border country than elsewhere over the them," he said. "One does not often hear of a murder or a robbery in the Big Bend country. Folks there really look with contempt upon a criminal.

"Their doors are not locked to keep out burglars, because there are none and ranchers on leaving home leave a note pinned upon the door advising a stranger to go in and help himself to food and bed, but to be certain to clean up afterward.

"Crime has increased in North Texas because its large cities draw the hijacker and robber from the criminal centers, Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis.

Texas 'Peace Belt.'

"It seems odd that so many Texans, including native born know so little of the far west and southwest Texas, the peace belt. There, high mountains, great open spaces and the old fashioned westerner who never locks his door are institutions which ought to be cultivated."

Clear, White, Smooth Hands Are Beautiful

Manicuring alone can not make the hands beautiful. The skin itself must be soft, firm, white, and youthful. The easiest way to do this is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, and massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach daily into the hands and arms. It will make even stained, toil-worn hands soft, clear, smooth and white.

SNAKE BITE TIP BY EXPERT

Whiskey No Good For "Bite," He Declares

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9—Whisky is no cure for snake bite; and, in fact, may do a great deal of harm, according to Dr. George H. Sherwood of the natural history museum.

If you are going on a holiday, therefore, you will not need bootleg product. But you might paste this in your hat. Dr. Sherwood has drawn up rules for snake bites, as follows:

1. Find the twin punctures from the snake's fangs, then tie on a tourniquet. If the wounds are in the hand, the bandage should be applied about the elbow, using a stick or other object, to tighten it. If on the ankle, the bandage should be placed around the upper leg; or, a general rule, around the first single bone between the wounds and the heart.

2. Suck the wound and speeze it to bring out the poison.

Open the wound with a knife or razor blade, first sterilized, on the side nearer the heart.

4. Wash the wound with a weak solution of permanganate of potash; or, better, shoot some into the wound with a hypodermic needle.

5. Inject, as soon as possible, anti-venom serum into the stomach wall or thigh muscles.

6. Release the tourniquet after about 20 minutes, and, later tighten it again—releasing it and tightening it at intervals.

CHINA SHIPS PIG BRISTLES

Scientific Method Used To "Gather" 'Em

By Universal Service.

PEKING, July 9.—Many Americans are employed in the export of pig bristles from Manchuria where the best grades are secured due to the fact that cold regions produce superior varieties. Bristles are always obtained in the winter season, between November and February when the coat of the pigs grows thickest.

Each Manchurian pig yields from three to five pounds of bristles varying with the method of gathering which differs according to the region. Inferior bristles are taken by scraping the pig skin in warm water after slaughter when they are damaged by immersion.

The most approved methods include pulling the bristles from living pigs and shearing or shaving them. In some parts, however, when the pigs are slaughtered, openings are immediately cut above the hoof into which pipes made of copper are inserted. The pig is then inflated and hot water poured over the carcass. The bristles are then removed by hand-pulling. The purpose of blowing up the pig is to enlarge the pores so that bristle pulling may be facilitated.

Conservative estimates place the number of pigs raised in Manchuria at 22,000,000 of which 800,000 are slaughtered annually. These pigs have black bristles and short legs and small hoofs. The breed has the chief fault of not easily fattening. A big living specimen will weight 325 pounds. However, on the side of the pig is its fecundity since a sow often bears a litter of 12 or 14 at a time.

The Manchurian breed of pig is fed on bean cake which is the residium from the mill after soya beans have been pressed of their oil.

New Faces $10 Each

A retail store expert has figured that "new faces," or new customers, are worth about $10 each to a store.

If that's right, then Saul's is some thousands of dollars richer than it was even several months ago.

For there are new faces in Saul's every day, more people finding out that they can buy good merchandise for less money at Saul's. And they are joining the thousands of old customers that save by trading at Saul's regularly.

Why are there new faces among Saul's customers? Value, for one thing, selling dependable, honest merchandise for as little as possible to still stay in business.

Confidence, for another, the trust that Customers find they can put in Saul's. Courtesy, for another, quick, efficient, cheerful service to everybody.

SHERIFF WILL FIGHT OUSTER

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, July 9.—Formal notice that he will not surrender his office as sheriff of Haskell county, from which he was ordered ousted by the county commission several days ago, without a fight was served here Saturday afternoon by Sheriff J. C. Turnbow in an address to 1500 Haskell county voters assembled on the courthouse lawn.

"You know J. C. Turnbow, I never resigned from a game of marbles even without a fight. They had to whip me and whip me right," Turnbow told his audience.

Cheers for Sheriff

Shouts of "Hurrah for Turnbow, stay right in there," greeted the sheriff as he appeared before the audience at 3 p. m. to present his side of the controversy with the commissioners' court as he had announced several days ago he would do.

"Pour it on 'em" shouted members of the crowd, distinctly favorable to the sheriff as he issued his defi to the ouster order of the county commission.

"I am not mad at anyone," Sheriff Turnbow stated in opening his address, "but I want to tell you that if you believe that J. C. Turnbow has resigned from office, you don't know J. C. Turnbow.

"A few gentlemen sent me word that I had better quietly resign. I sent word back for them to write down a single indictment against me, sign it by all who opposed me, and I would take my hat and walk out. They sent back word that they would not do it. Neither will I resign.

"I have never been arrested or indicted on a single charge in my life. They tried to get a charge against me several weeks ago and failed. I think it is the county judge who is at the head of this, and you know where he is this afternoon, and most of the time while I am trying to enforce the laws. On the golf links!"

Laughter greeted this sally by the sheriff.

"The next thing my opponents did," Turnbow continued, "was to cut my salary, but you fellows put me in office and I'll stick until I've been given a fair trial. They say my bond is not any good. Well, I can make any kind of a bond."

Much applause again interrupted the sheriff. He then continued:

Test Case In Court

"But listen, there is not a bond in that courthouse good, for they were all made 18 days before Dan Moody went into office."

Sheriff Turnbow concluded his address by thanking his audience for turning out to hear him.

Definite announcement by Turnbow in his address Saturday that he will not recognize the Haskell county commissioners' court order ousting him from office leaves the next move in the controversy up to that body. What action will be taken by Turnbow's foes in the effort to force him to yield the office was not stated late today. It was indicated however that quo warranto proceedings would probably be instituted before Bruce Bryant, district judge of the 39th district court, during the coming week.

Previous to Turnbow's formal announcement Saturday that he will not yield the sheriff's office, Wayne Perry, his proposed successor, stated that he would stand by and await the action of the county commissioners' court in the case. Perry stated Friday night that in the event of Turnbow's refusal to yield his office, the contest would likely be carried into the district court. He indicated that he would personally make no effort to take over the duties of sheriff until the legal tangles now existing had been straightened out.

Two Sheriffs

Meanwhile, Haskell county occupies the unique position of having two sheriffs, one elected by the voters of the county and the other by the county commission. Turnbow is now serving his second term, having been chosen on an anti-ku klux klan ticket in 1924 and benig re-elected in 1926. Perry was named sheriff of Haskell county on July 1 after the county commission had declared Turnbow's bond void and announced his office vacant. On Tuesday, July 5, Perry filed a $5000 bond which was approved by the county court and took his oath as Turnbow's successor. Turnbow however, refused to yield his office.

Legion Convention At San Antonio Oct. 1928

SAN ANTONIO, July 9. (AP)—Representatives of various departments of the American Legion today selected October 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 as the dates for the 1928 convention to be held here.

Walton Hood, commander of the Texas department; Wayne Davis, national committeeman from Texas, and Philip B. Stapp of Indianapolis, Ind., representing national headquarters made the decision.

Insulin Capsules Made

Insulin may now be taken in capsules, according to investigators at the University at Breslau, Germany, who claim to have found a substitute for the pancreatic insulin. Heretofore the remedy for diabetis could not be given in the form of drops, powders or tablets, but must be injected under the skin. Prof. J. C. Minkowiski, who conducted the investigations, says that the new method of giving insulin has been effective in a number of cases.

Mrs. Hallie Adams Hill Only Slightly Injured in Accident, Report Shows

Mrs. Hallie Adams Hill, daughter of T. P. Adams of this city who was reported seriously injured in an automobile accident in Chicago, is entirely out of danger with only a few bruises as a result of the collision, according to a report from her father Saturday night.

The first report that both arms were broken and both legs badly crushed was entirely erroneous, Mr. Adams said. He had received no word to indicated that her driver was instantaneously killed, as was stated.

Mrs. Hill was going from Evanston, Ill., into Chicago on the elevated, when she decided to take a taxi on account of the rain, according to Mr. Adam's message. While going at a very fast speed the car collided with another automobile and was turned over, injuring both her and the cab driver, though not seriously.

Mrs. Hill is in Chicago studying music at the University of Chicago. She is well known in Wichita Falls as a soloist.

BECKY ROGERS FACES COURT

Demure Maid To Be Tried As Bank Robber

By BESS CARROLL.
(Universal Service Correspondent.)

SAN MARCOS, July 9.—There's an unusual name on the theater of events, the headliner on a bill that varies from comedy to tragedy and all the way around again—the name of "Becky."

For on Monday morning at the rap of a judicial gavel Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers, charged with holding up and robbing the Buda Farmer's National Bank of $1000 in cash, faces trial in the Hays county courthouse here.

"Becky"—They call her that. A thousand times a thousand of them have washed dishes, kept house, lived and died as "Beckys" do. Since the first Rebecca was Isaac's wife, mothes of the great Jacob, this name has been listed on the calendar of the saints. For centuries it has symbolized the demure, the feminine woman—just as "Becky" Rogers is.

Waves Rusty Pistol.

It was in December last that the town of Buda and the whole Southwest found something new in what legal technique calls "bandits"—a very small "something," carrying a ridiculous little pistol that was too rusty to shoot.

And when Mrs. Rebecca Rogers enters court again, Monday, her audience will probably gasp as she powders her nose.

Exiled to Carlsbad, where the "white plague" of tuberculosis rules a forlorn little colony of doomed men, Otis Rogers, prominent young attorney of Amarillo, a short time ago, lies sick unto death, from reports current lately—dying.

Still further back in this tragic tale that stirred Buda out of its pleasant serenity into the front pages of newspapers—when a little coupe stopped at the Buda bank, at drowsy midday, and its occupant proceeded inside with a tiny gun hidden inside a purse. How that petite young woman herded bank officials into the vault will probably remain a classic of the rugged southwest for many a day. There was, for instance, the unusual question:

"Is there plenty of air in the vault? I don't want to hurt you."

Then came the startling arrest of "Rebecca Bradley," history professor and secretary of the then attorney general, Dan Moody. Following that, the hurried trip of Otis Rogers—and exposure, resulting so fatally—and the preliminary hearing co-incident with an announcement of their marriage.

Agree on Delay.

At San Marcos, county seat of the scene of the "hold-up," the first attempt at trial last spring resulted in a continuance granted by Judge George Jeffries after a "gentleman's agreement" had been made between defense counsel John R. Cofer and district attorney Fred Blundell—guaranteeing that the case would be brought to trial on July 11.

Although Mr. Cofer has indicated that important witnesses may be lacking, the prosecution has hinted that a fight will be made to bring the case to trial.

So it is that the demure name of "Becky" will be dragged into peculiar prominence once more, as the girl who looks so much like the name, stands a scant five feet tall to answer spectacular charges.

E. A. Bebb, Kenneth Bebb and E. Bebb of the Wichita Floral company are leaving today for El Paso to attend the state Florists' convention. They will be gone this week.

Judge Dismisses Bridge Fire Case

Special to The Record News.

WALTERS, Okla., July 9.—M. L. Harris was cleared in district court today of charges pending against him in connection with the destruction by fire of the Devol bridge several weeks ago.

On motion of W. T. Powell and John Thomas, attorneys for Mr. Harris, charges of arson which had been pending against him were quashed by Judge E. L. Richardson presiding in district court here.

Judge Richardson upheld the contention of defense attorneys that not sufficient evidence could be presented to sustain the charge against the defendant.

Andrews To Leave U. of A. Post Here

Captain and Mrs. A. T. Andrews of the Volunteers of America organization of Wichita Falls will leave this week for Atlanta, Ga., where he has received orders to report from Regimental Headquarters, Southern Division, Volunteers of America. His successor has not been named by officals at headquarters.

Notice of the transfer was received by the local advisory board this week, of which Judge J. W. Akin is president. Captain Andrews expressed regret at leaving Wichita Falls, stating that he had received unusual co-operation and help with his work here.

RANGER FINDS BORDER 'TAME'

Texas Area Not So Wild As It's Painted

FORT WORTH, July 9. (AP)—The allegedly wild and wooly west in this state is a misnomer and really is the most peaceful section in all Texas, Ranger Captain Tom Hickman, who has quelled trouble in various forms through the state.

The real peace belt, he said, includes counties along the Mexican border and the Big Bend section.

Few Courthouses.

"There are fewer courthouses and officers in the Mexican border country than elsewhere over the them," he said. "One does not often hear of a murder or a robbery in the Big Bend country. Folks there really look with contempt upon a criminal.

"Their doors are not locked to keep out burglars, because there are none and ranchers on leaving home leave a note pinned upon the door advising a stranger to go in and help himself to food and bed, but to be certain to clean up afterward.

"Crime has increased in North Texas because its large cities draw the hijacker and robber from the criminal centers, Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis.

Texas 'Peace Belt.'

"It seems odd that so many Texans, including native born know so little of the far west and southwest Texas, the peace belt. There, high mountains, great open spaces and the old fashioned westerner who never locks his door are institutions which ought to be cultivated."

Clear, White, Smooth Hands Are Beautiful

Manicuring alone can not make the hands beautiful. The skin itself must be soft, firm, white, and youthful. The easiest way to do this is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, and massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach daily into the hands and arms. It will make even stained, toil-worn hands soft, clear, smooth and white.

All dealers have Orchard White.—Adv.

SNAKE BITE TIP BY EXPERT

Whiskey No Good For "Bite," He Declares

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9—Whisky is no cure for snake bite; and, in fact, may do a great deal of harm, according to Dr. George H. Sherwood of the natural history museum.

If you are going on a holiday, therefore, you will not need bootleg product. But you might paste this in your hat. Dr. Sherwood has drawn up rules for snake bites, as follows:

1. Find the twin punctures from the snake's fangs, then tie on a tourniquet. If the wounds are in the hand, the bandage should be applied about the elbow, using a stick or other object, to tighten it. If on the ankle, the bandage should be placed around the upper leg; or, a general rule, around the first single bone between the wounds and the heart.

2. Suck the wound and sqeeze it to bring out the poison.

Open the wound with a knife or razor blade, first sterilized, on the side nearer the heart.

4. Wash the wound with a weak solution of permanganate of potash; or, better, shoot some into the wound with a hypodermic needle.

5. Inject, as soon as possible, anti-venom serum into the stomach wall or thigh muscles.

6. Release the tourniquet after about 20 minutes, and, later tighten it again—releasing it and tightening it at intervals.

CHINA SHIPS PIG BRISTLES

Scientific Method Used To "Gather" 'Em

By Universal Service.

PEKING, July 9.—Many Americans are employed in the export of pig bristles from Manchuria where the best grades are secured due to the fact that cold regions produce superior varieties. Bristles are always obtained in the winter season, between November and February when the coat of the pigs grows thickest.

Each Manchurian pig yields from three to five pounds of bristles varying with the method of gathering which differs according to the region. Inferior bristles are taken by scraping the pig skin in warm water after slaughter when they are damaged by immersion.

The most approved methods include pulling the bristles from living pigs and shearing or shaving them. In some parts, however, when the pigs are slaughtered, openings are immediately cut above the hoof into which pipes made of copper are inserted. The pig is then inflated and hot water poured over the carcass. The bristles are then removed by hand-pulling. The purpose of blowing up the pig is to enlarge the pores so that bristle pulling may be faciliated.

Conservative estimates place the number of pigs raised in Manchuria at 22,000,000 of which 800,000 are slaughtered annually. These pigs have black bristles and short legs and small hoofs. The breed has the chief fault of not easily fattening. A big living specimen will weight 325 pounds. However, on the side of the pig is its fecundity since a sow often bears a litter of 12 or 14 at a time.

The Manchurian breed of pig is fed on bean cake which is the residium from the mill after soya beans have been pressed of their oil.

New Faces $10 Each

A retail store expert has figured that "new-faces," or new customers, are worth about $10 each to a store.

If that's right, then Saul's is some thousands of dollars richer than it was even several months ago.

For there are new faces in Saul's every day, more people finding out that they can buy good merchandise for less money at Saul's. And they are joining the thousands of old customers that save by trading at Saul's regularly.

Why are there new faces among Saul's customers? Value, for one thing, selling dependable, honest merchandise for as little as possible to still stay in business.

Confidence, for another, the trust that Customers find they can put in Saul's. Courtesy, for another, quick, efficient, cheerful service to everybody.

11 HOPS OVER OCEAN SPACES

Many Trans-Atlantic Air Journeys Planned

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Eleven flights from Europe to America are now actually in preparation or under consideration.

Plans are also under way for five flights from the United States to Europe.

A flight from Los Angeles to Tokio is scheduled to be attempted in a few months while a group of Detroit men will attempt to circumnavigate the globe in 15 days.

It is estimated that more than $2,000,000 will be spent in preparation for these 18 long distance flights.

U. S. to Europe

Projected flights from here to Europe are:

1. New York to Rome. Lloyd W. Bartaud, pilot.
2. New York to Paris. Capt. Rene Fonck, pilot.
3. New York to London (three hops). Laba Phillips, pilot.
4. New York to Europe (exact destination undecided). Gotthard Strohschein, pilot.
5. New York to Rome. Miss Gladys Roy, pilot.

Europe to U. S.

(The following flights from Europe to America are being planned:

1. Paris to New York. Charles A. Levine's Columbia.
2. Paris to New York. Lieut. Tarascon, pilot.
3. Paris to New York. Maurice Drouhin, pilot.
4. London to New York. Capt. R. H. McIntosh, pilot.
5. Paris to New York. Contes and Rignot, pilots.
6. Munich to New York. Commander Udet, pilot.
7. London to New York. Capt. F. T. Courtney, pilot.
8. Germany to America. Fraulein Thea Rasche, pilot.
9. Berlin to San Francisco. Otto Koennecke, pilot.
10. Prague to New York. Capt. Franz Malkovsky, pilot.
11. Ireland to New York. Unnamed Irish pilot.

Lindbergh to Tour

In addition to these flights, the Guggenheim foundation has announced that Col. Charles Lindbergh will tour the United States under its auspices. A report from Detroit says that Colonel Lindbergh will head a group of 12 planes which will tour Europe.

NO KID PANTS FOR OSCAR

NEW YORK.—Oscar Manullian is a shoemaker, who believes that two plus fours do not equal one pair of trousers.

Oscar selected a $26 suit in a store, left a $10 deposit and went back to his shoe-making shop. Shortly thereafter the suit was delivered, but, to Oscar's dismay, it consisted of a coat and two pair of knickers only.

Shoemaking in short pants does not appeal to Mr. Manullian, so he got a John Doe warrant and yesterday had the manager of the store before Magistrate McQuade in Jefferson Market court.

"What am I going to do with short pants? They are for boys. I'm a man now," said Oscar.

"What are you trying to do, make a golfer out of a shoemaker?" asked Magistrate McQuade of the clothier. "Give him back his money or I'll order a complaint against you."

Oscar got his money back.

NEW CITY IN PHILIPPINES.

On land donated by one of the largest sugar companies in the Philippines the new city of San Jose is to arise in the province of Mindoro. It will cover 250 acres, of which 25 acres will be devoted to municipal buildings and the remainder to the city proper, which is being subdivided into lots. Roads, canals and recreation parks will be provided. The lots are to be sold at prices sufficient to cover merely the subdividing and the improvements.

Baked Custard.

Three eggs, three tablespoonfuls sugar, salt, three cupfuls milk, one teaspoonful vanilla, nutmeg.

Beat the eggs enough to mix the yolks and whites and add the other ingredients. Pour into custard cups and set in a pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. This may be tested by trying with a knife, and if the mixture is jellied it is ready to remove from the oven. Set the cups where they will cool quickly.

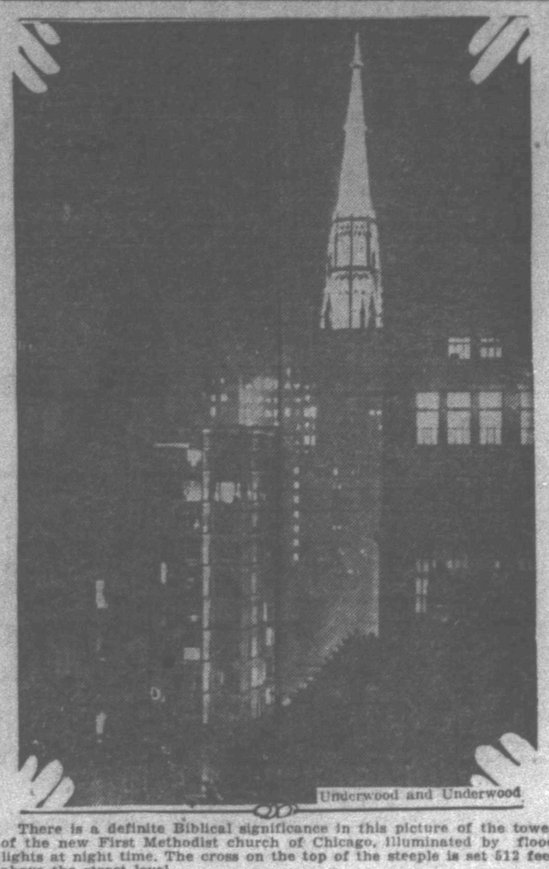

Tip for Worried Husbands

Reversing the usual procedure, Walter Brinkman of Chicago, is suing his wife for allmony. The couple are separated. Brinkman claims that he is invalided and cannot work, while his wife collects allmony from a first husband and earns $35 weekly as a clerk.

Underwood and Underwood

There is a definite Biblical significance in this picture of the tower of the new First Methodist church of Chicago, illuminated by flood lights at night time. The cross on the top of the steeple is set 512 feet above the street level.

Juarez, Once Haven of Criminals, Fast Becoming Well-Policed Town

By Universal Service.

JUAREZ, Mexico, July 9.—Known to every American police official as the "Port of Missing Men," Juarez, famous border resort city, is rapidly becoming as peaceful and civilized as any American city of its size, Chief of Police Valentina Onate declared today in denying charges made by a group of American clergymen that "Juarez is a den of infidels."

Tourists who come across the international bridge to quaff a few cooling beers or just to see the resort city, are guaranteed just the same protection as they receive in their home cities, Chief Onate said.

"Proof of that statement," the chief said, "lies in the fact that the military authorities are co-operating with the police in cleaning out what has been called the "hell hole" of the Mexican border."

Vice Dens Go

Juarez is being scrubbed inside and outside. A good many of the dives where fugitives from American justice sought refuge have been closed and in some instances, burned by court order. Gambling halls which once echoed the clink of American coins as they were tossed to the fate of the whirling roulette ball are now restaurants.

Only in a few places, and then between certain hours, can the prevolstead beverages be purchased. Of course there are bars in Juarez but they are not the bars of yesterday, when it was not an uncommon sight to see a body come hurtling through the swinging doors, quickly picked up and hustled to the adobe enclosure, there to await an early morning trial.

There Are Thieves

Tourists who report themselves as having been robbed here, Chief Ornate said, exposed themselves to the thieves.

"Juarez is not unlike other cities," he said. "There are dark alleys in this city as in any other, and in them lurks danger. If tourists keep to the main streets they won't be molested. But if they persist in courting danger, then it is their lookout."

Should an American find himself in the toils of the complicated Mexican law, the police chief said, he is treated with every courtesy.

"He is not held incommunicado as is popularly believed in the states," he said.

American officers in El Paso are also co-operating with the police of Juarez and according to Chief of Police Armstrong of El Paso, very few known criminals slip across the bridge.

Border Patrolled

The border patrol, both American and Mexican, are keeping a closer watch on the bleak stretches on either side of the two cities.

"It is the intention of the Juarez police to make Juarez a clean border city and the federal authorities have promised to deport every undesirable alien we arrest," the chief declared. "Juarez of tomorrow will be like any American city—except that it will be in Mexico," he said.

Shepherd, Bohmfalk To Join in Sing-Songs

Mayor R. E. Shepherd and E. F. Bohmfalk, choir leader of the First Methodist church, have been announced as "special attractions" at the community sing-songs scheduled for Tuesday and Friday nights of the coming week. Mayor Shepherd will sing several solos at Bellevue park Tuesday evening, and Mr. Bohmfalk at the Grant Street playground on Friday.

A harmonica concert has been secured as a feature of the sing-song at the Sibley-Taylor park Thursday night, according to announcement from C. C. Bunnenberg, superintendent of parks. Alva Willgus will lead the singing.

MEXICO SEIZES VAST ACREAGE

Over 9,000,000 Acres Given to Former Peons

By Universal Service.

MEXICO CITY, July 9.—Nearly nine million acres of land has been distributed under Mexico's agrarian laws and regulations during the last nine years and the distribution confirmed by presidential decree, according to official compilations.

Hundreds of thousands of additional acres, it is estimated, have been taken from the owners and given into the "provisional" possession of small farmers during the same period.

U. S. Rights Violated

In 128 cases, the alleged violation of the property rights of American citizens resulted in vigorous protests by the United States embassy on the ground that the property in question was being confiscated in violation of international law.

Although it is pointed out that the distribution made with presidential approval affect less than 2 per cent of Mexico's total area, it is also noted that the area involved is equal to one-half of the total of cultivated lands in the republic.

The best estimates are that the aggregate of cultivated lands is barely 17,000,000 acres, as against presidential distributions during the last nine years of approximately 8,500,000 acres. Much of the best land in the republic was included in these distributions.

Critics of the government's agrarian policy maintain that these distributions have demoralized agriculture.

Owners Fear Loss

The original owners, it is asserted, have hesitated to plant crops for fear of losing both the land and the harvest, and the new owners have been unable to cultivate the land to the fullest advantage.

The state of Chihuahua occupies first place with 2,500,000 acres distributed during the nine-year period. Yucatan comes second with 1,100,000 acres. The government's figures show that 1871 small towns and 875,762 persons were favored by the distributions.

HE GOT THE TRUCK BACK

ERIE, Pa.—County Commissioner Joseph Moorhead has his auto truck back, but his neighbor's cellar is practically empty. Moorhead reported the theft of his truck to the police. Twenty-four hours later he found the truck standing in front of his place of business, with a brief note of thanks. The police discovered that the vehicle had been used to cart away a load of choice wines stolen from one of Moorhead's neighbors. That the truck was returned to Moorhead doesn't help the wine owner's case a bit, he points out.

15 SUSPECTS IN RAID RELEASED

No Clues Discovered In Robbery Attempt

VERNON, July 9. (AP)—Finding no tangible evidence and being unable to secure identification of any of the 15 suspects arrested as the men who attempted to derail the northbound "West Texan" passenger train by an attack on J. D. Ferguson, aged towerman, early Friday morning, Sheriff W. Frank Edmonson and the special agents of the railroads last night abandoned the investigation of the case.

Negro Under Arrest In Assault on Girl

LUFKIN, July 9. (AP)—Clarence Fos, negro, was under arrest today for investigation in connection with an attack on Agnes Dorsett early Friday. The young woman told officers Poe was the man who attacked her and screamed "take him away" as she became hysterical. Previously she had said another negro taken before her was not the man. The investigation is being held up until the young woman recovers.

$10,000 SHARE OUT OF ESTATE

Woman Rewarded for Her Kindness to Beggar

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—A landlady who was hospitable to a beggar today was awarded $10,000 for her kindness, the money to be paid from the beggar's estate of $65,000.

Mrs. Ella W. Sloane, the landlady, claimed $10,000 when her boarder, John Armstrong, died last April. Armstrong accumulated the $65,000 by begging. He also begged Mrs. Sloane, she related, to take care of him in his last years promising her he would leave her $10,000 when he died.

Referee Jeremiah Connor recently awarded Mrs. Sloane the $10,000. Today Surrogate John P. O'Brien confirmed the referee's report. Fifteen nephews and nieces in England will get the rest of the estate.

18 Aliens Smuggled To U. S. By Cuban Vessel

FORT MYERS, Fla., July 9. (AP) Eighteen aliens who said they paid $50 each to four Cubans to be smuggled into the United States from Havana were being held here today for deportation. Following their arrest yesterday the aliens, all men, said three of their party who did not have the necessary $50 to pay the smugglers were not allowed to land, but were taken back out to sea where the smugglers said they intended to drown them.

GLIDER PLANE TO HOP OCEAN

Unique Flying Sled Now Under Construction

By Universal Service.

BERLIN, July 9.—Planning to rise to a great height over Germany and then coast and sail most of the way to New York with their meters cut off, Wilhelm Mejo and Anton Schievekampf, former German army aviators, told Universal Service today that they will hop off for America in a new type of gliding freight carrying hydroplane the first week in August.

Stay Up 70 Hours.

Mejo and Schievekampf declared their triple motor hydroplane, which is being constructed in Berlin by Engineer Max Schueler on a unique principle evolved after many years of experiments with motorless gliders, is able to stay in the air 70 hours—20 hours longer than the record set by Chamberlin and Acosta in their endurance test of 51 hours.

Mejo and Schievekampf say the plane is ready to fly but they wish to wait for the August moon. The machine which was secretly constructed, resembles a huge glider. It was built entirely of wood. It is a monoplane with motors totaling 450 horsepower and has a speed of 115 miles an hour and can carry seven tons of gasoline.

The aviators plan to carry 75 pounds of dead freight, chiefly samples of German manufactered articles and models of German patents.

Hard to Get in Air.

The first attempt to rise will be from the Rhine. If that fails they will try to rise from the sea. If they are unsuccessful in hopping off from the water the fliers will attach wheels to their hydroplane and take off from land and then drop the wheels. Once in the air they will also throw off their landing floats.

Experts here consider their chances excellent. Both are seasoned fliers. Mejo was the first man to tow a trailer airplane. Schievekampf lost an eye during an air battle during the war. The undertaking is being financed by the Ruhr Magnate Ernst Gebrecht.

22,042 Criminal Cases Tried in Texas 1926-27

HOUSTON, July 9. (AP)—During the past two years 22,042 criminal cases have been tried in Texas, in which convictions have been obtained in 19,560 cases Judge W. C. Morrow, chief justice of the court of criminal appeals declared in his report as chairman of the committee on criminal law and procedure, submitted to the Texas Bar association for consideration Saturday.

State Has $14,210,222 On Hand in Treasury

AUSTIN, July 9. (AP)—The state had $14,210,222.35 as a cash balance after spending $6,451,250.88 and taking in $4,012,875.42 during June, State Treasurer W. Gregory Hatcher reported today.

Estimated outstanding warrants are slightly more than $3,000,000.

WEST TEXAS TO GET NEW TOWN

Fuqua, Texas, Located Near Lockney, Floyd Co.

Special to The Record News.

PLAINVIEW, July 9.—Another new town to be located on the new line of the Fort Worth and Denver, South Plains railroad onto the plains will be launched soon, according to advices made public Thursday evening by the owner of the new townsite, Earl Fuqua, prominent panhandle banker of Amarillo.

The new town, which will possibly be called Fuqua in honor of the founder, will be located at the junction of the two lines of the Fort Worth and Denver on the South Plains, eight miles northeast of Lockney in Floyd county. At that point the main line of the new Denver extension from Estelline to Plainview intersects the branch line from Silverton to Lubbock, via Lockney and Petersburg.

This is the third new town for the Plainview section of the plains to be announced within the past 30 days. The other two are Hart, in Hale county, northwest of Plainview, and South Plains, in Floyd county, northeast of Plainview on the Floydad-Silverton highway where the new line crosses the highway.

Fuqua has signed a contract with T. C. Ward and Burton of Amarillo, who will develop his property on the junction in Floyd county, and place the town on the market. These men promoted the towns of Borger and Roxana in the north Panhandle oil fields.

Located as it is on the two lines of the Denver, and in the fertile shallow-water district of the plains where diversified farming is practiced to the most profitable extent found in Texas, the promoters believe with Fuqua, that the new town will grow rapidly. A grain elevator, cotton gin, and other concerns have already purchased locations for their business plants in the new town.

Fuqua is the owner of 960 acres in that part of the territory, and will use as much of it as is necessary for the townsite. Ward and Burton plan to work out of Plainview on the new proposition starting next week.

NEW OIL FLOW IN PANHANDLE

Strike Extends Field To Oklahoma Line

Special to The Record News.

AMBARILLO, July '.—The most northwesterly drilling well in Texas that of Wood and Wood geologists of Tulsa found an oil showing at 3370 feet and Dallam county Texas, Union county New Mexico and Cimarron county Oklahoma are as excited over it as when the Ramseys found oil in January in Cimarron county five feet of saturated sand was had in No. 1 Capital lands in section 1', block 17, of C. S. S. lands.

The Wood and Wood strike in connection with Ramseys find of January and A. D. Morton getting a 125 barrel well near Dumas in section 191, block 3 T. of T. and N. O. survey Moore county, a month ago definitely forecast a linking up of the Oklahoma and Texas Panhandle fields.

The Prairie Oil and Gas company today purchased 19,000 acres of the C. L. Kilgore ranch in Moore and Sherman counties for $140,000 and its yearly rentals for 10 years and other considerations makes the Kilgore income for 10 years reach $255,000.

The Prairie will also drill a well on the ranch early in 1928. Most of the land was bought to augment its gas acreage which is expected to furnish gas for Denver and Kansas City gas line now being built.

OUSTED SOLON TO FIGHT TRIAL

Ex-Rep. Moore Will Plead Former Jeopardy

AUSTIN, July 9. (AP)—H. H. Moore of Cooper, expelled from the house of representatives along with F. A. Dale of Bonham, will seek dismissal of the $1000 bribery charges against him, on plea of "former jeopardy," when the case is called Monday in criminal district court, it was learned today.

All state witnesses, about 15, have been summoned and the state will announce ready for trial of Moore, whose case was severed from that of Dale when first called a few weeks ago, District Attorney J. D. Moore said.

Witness Recovers.

Moore has been informed that W. W. Chamberlin, Houston optometrist, state's star witness, will be here, recovered from the illness which caused the initial postponement of the case.

Chamberlin told a house investigating committee that he gave Dale $1000 with Moore's alleged knowledge and concurrence to secure defeat of Moore's bill to tax stationary optometrists, then pending before a legislative committee.

Rangers Make Arrests.

Dale and Moore were arrested by state rangers after Dale had taken $1000 in marked bills from Chamberlin near a local hotel entrance.

Moore is expected to plead that since a jury was selected and four witnesses heard when the case was first called it would be illegal to conduct further trial.

Father Fined $100 For Abusing Small Child

AUSTIN, July 9. (AP)—A fine of $100 and costs was assessed in county court here today by Judge Matthews against A. J. Andrews on a charge of beating his three-year-old step son, Dewey Adams, after intervention of Humane Officer W. C. Russell in the case.

Andrew was remanded to jail on failure to pay the fine, and the child, bruised about the face and back was sent to his mother.

RUNYON SAYS

How It Can Be Told—
Rammel Wore Spats—
Comeback of St. Nick—
Nice Old Queensboro—

BY DAMON RUNYON

This Herr Charles Rammel, who is called the Austrian Brute by his sanguinary-minded manager, Mr. Mushkie Jackson, and who was punched quite googley-eyed by old Prod 'em Paul Berlenbach the other night, was engaged in his first real professional bout when he crawled into the ring at the St. Nicholas Rink.

It seems that in Austria, whence he hails, they do not tolerate the professional phases of the Manly Art of Scrambling Ears. However, they permit amateur bouts, and as an amateur Herr Rammel had about half a dozen scrambles. He is a piano mover by profession, and I am told that he is a very good piano mover.

He showed some pugilistic proficiency in the fungo hitting around the St. Nicholas gymnasium where old Prod 'em Paul was training for what the boys call a comeback, and Mr. Mushkie Jackson, functioning as manager of the Austrian Brute, began looking for a match for him.

Mr. Jackson peeped at old Prod 'em awhile and decided that he would be a first-rate trial horse for the Austrian Brute. He had Herr Rammel also take a few peeps, and it chanced that Herr Rammel saw Johnny Urban of Pittsburgh, belt old Prod 'em around the gym; so Herr Rammel gave Mr. Jackson the nod and said something in Austrian which Mr. Jackson translated as meaning, "Get that guy for me."

* * *

So Mr. Jackson made the match and put a pair of spats on Herr Rammels ankles and thrust a light cane into his hand and took the Austrian Brute out for air every day, impressing all beholders no little.

But I wish to say one thing for Herr Rammel. He showed in the brief flurry of gloves with old Prod 'em that there is no ki-yi in his makeup. He was in there letting. He was in there letting fly punches of such velocity that the very wind from them almost blew Prod 'em's hair loose from its skin. If any of them had connected with Prod 'em's chin I fear he would have sat down and said, "Well, boys, I guess I can't make it, after all."

Herr Rammel walked right into Prod 'em and pumped away and while he went down in a heap on one occasion he was still afoot when the kindly referee stepped forward and said "Desist." But for Herr Rammel giving Mr. Mushkie Jackson the nod that day, Mr. Jackson might have nursed him on milder pap than old Prod 'em and made him something of a sensation.

I cannot give Prod 'em more than about 65 per cent on his showing against Herr Rammel, and I still suggest that he had better content himself with counting the money he has made during his pugilistic career before they hand him a pair of scissors and a sheet of paper.

* * *

To me the occasion that night was not so much the comeback of the old Prod 'em Paul as it was the comeback of St. Nicholas Rink, although it took Prod 'em to bring it back. It was like the rare old nights to see the premises at Sixty-sixth street and Columbus avenue packed to the doors and the crowd showed that Berlenbach retains all appeal of his champion days.

There have been few greater pugilistic drawing cards in this town than Prod 'em Paul. The streets around the rink were packed with the autos of the members of the New York Athletic club who followed the ex-taxi driver from the time he was fighting in the armories to his rise and fall as a champion of the world.

The rink has always been one of my favorite arenas. It is easy of access, and there are few poor seats in the house. Since it's reopening for pugilistic purposes that attendance has been light and the pessimists said that you could never get the clients back there again, but Prod 'em Paul proved that a good card will take them there.

Paul walked into Herr Rammel with his old energy, pumping punches to Herr Rammel's somewhat protruding stomach, but I doubt if there was the same old steam behind Prod 'em's pokes. Anyway, Paul seemed to be shaken a couple of times by Herr Rammel's earnest but inept responses.

* * *

Speaking of arenas, the best spot in New York in which to view a summer pugilistic presentation is the Queensboro Arena, over in Long Island City, just about six bits, as the taxi flies from the heart of the Frantic Fifties.

The river breezes fan your feverish brow on the journey across the Fifty-ninth street bridge. And cooling zephyrs are nearly always stirring in the old pine bowel on the eastern bank of the stream. Moreover, from every one of the 16,000 seats it is possible to get a good, clear view of the ring and what transpires therein.

There is no such thing as a poor seat at the Queensboro. It was built for boxing, and the cheapest chairs in the place are reasonably close to the canvas. It is convenient to the subway. It can be emptied in a few minutes.

I do not know the owner or the promoters of the Queensboro, but I give them this mild ballyhoo because of the pleasure I have derived from the old arena when nights are warm downtown and a breeze is at premium. Business has been light over there this season, though they have offered good cards every week. Perhaps it is just the general slump in the manly art of Scrambling ears.

If I owned the Queensboro, I believe I would try the old time popular knife of prices, at, say $3 "tops," and put on strictly local cards. The plan succeeds nearly everywhere else, but no one has yet attempted it in New York. I am inclined to think it might go big here.

TOM ESTELL TAMES CATS ON HOME LOT

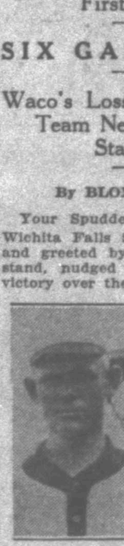

4000 Fans Roar Greeting To Spudders In First Game

SIX GAME LEAD

Waco's Loss Gives Home Team New Boost In Standing

By BLONDY CROSS

Your Spudders came home to Wichita Falls Saturday afternoon and greeted by a packed grandstand, nudged out a pretty 4-3 victory over the Fort Worth Panthers, made it 11 victories in 14 games with the Atzmen and jumped a full game ahead of the second-rung Waco team.

ESTELL

Houston trimed the Prattmen, 5 to 4, and drew to within a half game of second place, Wichita Falls' marginal lead over the Cubs now rests at six full games, the highest point yet attained this season by Carl Williams' warriors.

As 4000 loud-lunged fans roared their approval, the Spudders came back fighting in the very first stanze to overcome a three-run lead, abated in attack a few couplets and then forged ahead in the fifth while the sturdy Tom Estell, after an unfortunate initial frame get-away, held the tawny Panthers at bay.

Hectic First Inning

Fort Worth combined a couple of base raps with a pair of fluke hits and a base on balls that elicted a storm of protest against Umpire Gaddy, for three runs in the opening chapter.

The Spudders came tearing right back against Southpaw Jimmy Walkup in the Wichita Falls half of the first and deadlocked the score, Turgeon, Benton and Swenson hitting safely.

The rest of the route for the Atzmen was sweet, swift and scoreless. The Spudder saliva ball hurler was touched for a quartet of safeties in the opener. Sweeney tagged him for a bingle in the third and thereafter Tom Estell, who had tough luck in his last out against the Cats, allowed not even a scratch hit. Three men faced Estell in the second inning. Four stepped to the platter against him in the third. Including the fourth and through the ninth, 18 Panthers strode to the medallion, no more. Figure it out for yourself. six innings and faced by 18 men.

Walkup in Form

Walkup proved hardly a softer proposition than the unemotional Estell. The league leaders were forced to arise to the height of their fighting powers in order to score a victory, for after a poor beginning, the diminutive Cat portsider fork-handed the boys almost to a frazzle. Base clouts were a scarce commodity. Few of the Spudders could get well. Benton, Swenson and Estell himself carried the brunt of the attack, each sidewiping Walkup for a pair of blows. Nine hits were combed from the Walkuplan delivery. Five safe hits sprang from Cat bats.

Eddie Moore and McAuley touched Tom in the curtain raiser for infield bingles. Hunt bunted out with no scoring accomplished. Then Sweeney hoisted a mangy pop fly into short right just out of everybody's reach. The aviation was for two sacks, Moore and McAuley scoring. Holland bobbled out to the box. Smith walked when Estell thought he had him out, judging by the yap-yap of disapproval he, Lapan and Pilot Carl emitted. Bonowitz followed with a bingle to left center, scoring Sweeney. Lindimore retired with a fly to Fitzgerald in center field. That composed the Cat attack. Sweeney's hit and Holland's walk with one away worried momentarily in the third, but the alarm was false. Merely laid the plot for a piston-like double play movement on the Spudder infield, Smith's bounder at second going the Turgeon-to-Benton-to-La Fayette route.

After LaFayette had been snuffed out, pitcher to first, in the starting round, Turgeon slammed the egg up against the top tier of the left field boards. It was a full length two-bagger. Fitzgerald walloped a lusty bounder to first that was gobbled by Sweeney for an out, Turgeon chasing on to third. Lamble waited Walkup out. The portsider became unnerved or something. Couldn't get 'em over. Lucy was paid for his patience, drawing free transportation. Then the mighty Jenkins strode to the platter. A shout of approval went up from the stand. "Well, here's where get get a couple of those runs back," gleefully yelped a fan as Lamb caught Catcher Doc Smith flat-footed and absconded with the keystone. That was right and he was wrong. For WE didn't get those couple of runs right there. The swarthy Jenkins walked, also, and Doc looked appealingly to Manager Jake Atz on the bench. It remained for Stanley (Rabbit) Benton, the battling utility player who has been filling in at short ever since Johnny Mann went out more than a month ago with an injured hand, to get those couple of runs. Rabbit didn't waste any time. He pelted the second offering over second base for a single. Turgeon and Lamb sprinted home. Jenkins drew up at third base. Your thirdbasing friend, Wally (Swede) Swenson followed with the stick. He finished her off, dusting a single between first and second that scored Jenkins. When the throw looked like it was going to third after Benton, Swenson tore out for the keystone, but McAuley intecepted the outfielder's heave and chunked Wally away at first as he tried desperately to return to the bag.

Winning Run.

The Spudders menaced in the second round when with one out, Estell and LaFayette bingled but the next two hitsmen couldn't come through. Walkup had returned to form.

It remained for a pitching break to start the Spudders on victory's path in the fifth. Fitzgerald, first man up, was plunked with an truent toss launched by the sturdy little lefthander and thereby got his base. Lamb lined out to left. Jenkins knocked one at the box. The drive was deflected to short by Walkup and Old Dynamite was thrown out at first base, but Fitz went to second on the play. Stanley Benton came to life in the clinch again. He produced the money pouch, the clout that gave Carl Williams' and the assiduously toiling Tom Estell another notch in the upward climb on the championship ladder. Benton with still less ado than in the first stanze went he belated over two runs, slammed Walkup for a warm single between first and second bases. Fitzgerald, his head up and on his toes, grabbed at the opportunity and sped all the way from the keystone to the platter, lugging with him the ball game. The lone score sufficed. Estell was invincible. Spudder bludgeons practically were silenced the remainder of the way by Walkup.

RUTH SPANKS PAIR

DETROIT, July 9. (AP) — Detroit squelched the Yankees under a 4 to 4 score in the second game of a double-header today after being on the short end of a 19 to 7 score in the opening fray. The attendance war about 35,000.

The first game was a long drawn out affair lasting for three hours. Approaching darkness forced the termination of the contest at the close of the seventh inning.

Babe Ruth spanked out a pair of home runs in the opener giving him 29 for the year, four less than his club mate, Gehrig. The score:

BROWNS 7, ATHLETICS 5.

ST. LOUIS, July 9. (AP)—Milton Gaston held the Philadelphia Athletics to six hits while the Browns were garnering 11 safeties and the Browns won today, 7 to 5. Home runs by Gaston and Rice in the second inning, each with one man on, gave the Browns a lead which the visitors could not overcome. Sisler, the league's leading base thief, stole his sixteenth base of the season. The score:

BEARS 4, SHIPPERS 2.

SAN ANTONIO, July 9. (AP)—After Tommy Connolly tied up the score for the Exporters in the ninth inning with his third three-bagger in the game, Eddie Ollis came through with a hit in the Bear half after Elmer Hansen had filled the bases on walks to win the second game of the series Saturday for San Antonio, 4 to 2. Connolly scored both runs for Beaumont as the result of three baggers in each instance. Three double plays were among the fielding features. Joe Klein making the first to be completed in the fifth inning when with Smith on first, Robertson sent a line drive to right which Klein caught on the run and continued running until he reached the bench while Smith had gone to second on the presumption it was a hit.

Carrick Wins Canadian Title

LANCASTER, Ont., July 9. (AP) Don Carrick, youthful Toronto golfer, Saturday won the Canadian amateur golf championship for the second time, defeating Frank Thompson of Chicago, 7 up and 6 to play, in their 36-hole final match. Carrick won the championship for the first time in 1925.

FROM TEE TO GREEN

By BILL STRACHAN

Learn the value of ease in golf if you are to play with all the accuracy of a champion such as Tommy Armour. There is nothing sensational in Tommy's game except his straightness from the drive to the last putt. That, after all, is any golf game, whether the ball travels a mile or 200 yards. Tommy sacrifices all distance for the drive to the cup. He places his tee shot rather than get it out there a mile; then comes the judgment of the right club for the remaining distance and the way it is played.

TOMMY ARMOUR

TOMMY ARMOUR

Not only is Armour a fine iron player but he knows whether the ball should be played low on run-up or whether he must cut it to stick dead to the pin.

His variety in this department is uncanny.

Armour's game and Cooper's golf are two entirely different styles of golf. Cooper hurries around the course with all the confidence of a champion. There is practically no waiting or waggling of the stock.

Armour never lets the ball get away from him until he is fully convinced that he is ready to hit it, and hit it right. He stands over his ball wiggling back and forth probably longer than any other professional who played the Oakmont course.

Armour knows the value of the putt. It is his work on the greens that tied with Harry Cooper and finally won for him the title of the Open champion.

HEY, DOAK!

Evidence that Jake Atz, for six seasons heralded as one of the Texas league's most efficient umpires, has not slipped any over the fleeting years and still can call 'em was brought home strikingly to Spudder fandom Saturday.

Now, lissen, that rumor got out last year about Jake retiring from the umpirical role, is all wrong. Jake's still just as good an umpire as Doak Roberts has on the staff.

* * *

SMOOTH?

Jake struck out Pete Turgeon in the fourth inning just as neat as you please yesterday, whiffed him when it looked like Jimmy Walkup had issued a base on balls to the stalwart urchin. Anyhow, Umphs Gaddy, behind the plate, had called after a three-two tie up the next offering a ball and had sent Pete to the cushion. There's where Jake climbed back into the arbiting role. Waving Jimmy and Dock Smith away when they protested that Turgeon had swung at the apple, Jake approached Gaddy and explained the situation to him. The intercourse probably ran something like this with tears shaking Jake's voice: "Now, Mr. Gaddy, please remember that we're just poor, honest hard-working boys just trying to get along. Please treat us right. Because, honest now, maybe you didn't mean to do it; we all make mistakes and that guy really swung in all earnestness at the ball and missed. Honest he did. That's the way that guy hits 'em. Sure 'nough, Mr. Gaddy, he's got a habit of trying to fool the umpires and then laughing up his sleeve at them. I konw because I been watching him in this league for quite some years. He's trying to make a laughing stock of you. Now, c'mon, be right by us. Ask Sabrie or Cecil out there if that ain't true.

Whereupon, Mr. Gaddy, under pressure of such eloquence almost was moved to tears himself and immediately called Sabrie and Griggs into conference. Evidently, Sabrie and Cecil who, we have our suspicion were busier looking over the grandstand display than they were the hitter, agreed that Turgeon had swung on that last strike, swung at a bad ball and struck out instead of drawing a walk.

And Jake scored again as a better umpire from the bench than the Roberts man behind the plate, for Gaddy reversed his decision.

Ought to Take Lessons

When Jake can score plays like that with a team like he has this year, it's easy to dope out how with the team he once had he walked off with the race every season. Now, if Carl Williams could call 'em like that there wouldn't be any use worrying about who's going to cop the old rag. The Spudders would be so far out front there wouldn't be any need to talk about it. That's the only flaw, if any, this column has been able to uncover in Williams' makeup as a manager. He's not as good an umpire as Jake Atz. Or rather, he isn't quite as eloquent a public speaker.

* * *

Frank (Pug) Griffin, one-time stormy bludgeoner with the Dallas team and recently of the Des Moines Demons, blows in probably this Sabbath a. m. to join Mr. J. Gardner's Spudders. But that does not mean anybody blows out, at least, not out of outfield, and Mr. J. has no reason to send any other athlete away just because Pug's coming in. A .390 hitter or something in the Western league and ever a .300 or better swatsman when he scampered around in Texas league spangles, Griffin is expected to prove the needed cog or what have you to hold the Spudders at their pennant pace.

* * *

"We've lost several ball games because we didn't have a good right-handed hitter to send in there at the right time," explains Mr. J. "We don't intend to break up our winning combination when we bring Griffin, but want to have a good man sitting there on the bench we can use when we need him."

* * *

Griffin used to be a pretty wild sort of a young man, they say, at one time or another. Loved to fight and cut up and was a regular tough guy, but, oh, what a sweet ball player! They say these days Pug is still the ball player he was back in those days, but has changed in disposition and habits. Got married or something and the Missus took him in hand, making a model young man out of him.

* * *

NO, NO, WALTER

Walter Morris, the more or less colorful Dallas team business manager, has Wichita Falls figured as a sure flag winner. Even so much so does Walt dope it the Gardenr enterprise has the rag in the bag that he's made overtures for a Sunday Dixie series game in Dallas, guaranteeing 10,000 more fans would turn out to see the Spudders plays in the jobbing center than in Wichita Falls. Prez Gardner wagged a heavy negative at Walter, however, and declared he would stick to the home fans regardless of alluring offers made by other cities, figuring, of course, the Spudders cop the bunting.

* * *

That superstition of most ball players stays with the Spudders. Being on a victory march, each fellow is afraid to shift warm-up partners at any time. They won't break the combine. Lamb continues to limber up with La Fayette, Tobin with Jenkins, Benton with Swenson and on down the line.

* * *

Those Houston Cardinals

Waco means not so much in the lives of the Spudders. The club they look to for the most trouble wears Houston spangles. Waco, for one thing, has been overworking its pitchers and out of trick Brazos village park is expected to crack. Houston is coming great guns and boasts vast resources.

* * *

The gang was tickled beyond measure at the springthy reception given Friday night when Williams and his squad rolled in from Fort Worth. Hundreds of bugs turned out at midnight to greet the Spudders. "I played on the coast for several years," said Tobin, "and never saw anything like that. No band ever came up to meet us and we won the pennant in '24. It makes a bunch of fellows want to get in there and hustle mighty hard when the fans pull for them that way."

* * *

Then We'll Present

Doak Roberts will be here Tuesday to present in behalf of the Texas league that attendance trophy won opening day by Wichita Falls. Perhaps, also, while attending to past due business, Mr. Roberts will present on behalf of the Texas league to official scorers here their checks for work during the month of June.

BUC SLUGGERS STILL IN LEAD

Gehrig, Simmons, Meusel Lead American

CHICAGO, July 9.(AP)—For four straight weeks now the three musketeers of the Pirate crew have dominated the hitters of the National league—the aged Joe Harris, the young Paul Waner and the newcomer, Clyde Barnhart, and this trio is still at the top today.

The d'Artnagnan of the three, Paul Waner, was the last to climb the heights, joining his pals the first week of June, but he has held up his end nobly ever since.

The batting figures of today, including Wednesday's games, show that these three alone of the top notch stickers of the National league have held their own against the hot weather pitching of the summer's first fortnight, the others in the first 10 doing a collective fadeaway like ten pins. Waner dropped two points and the other two stand on their same percentages.

Frankie Frisch and Rogers Hornsby slumped together, just back of the Pittsburgh trio, Frisch losing 16 points and Hornsby 12, with Frisch only five points ahead of his rival.

While Hornsby and Hack Wilson of the Cubs were marking time in their home run contest, Cy Williams of the Phillies caught up with them and all three are tied at 15, Cy scoring three drives. Frisch failed to add to his stolen base string for the first week this season and Sparky Adams, the Chicago shortstop, pilfered two to come up even with the Pirate champion, Cuyler. They have 15 apiece while Frisch has 22.

Meadows and Hill

On the mound, too, the Pirates are supreme. Their two bespectacled twirlers, Lee Meadows and Carmen Hill, top all the National league flingers, Meadows with a mark of 11 and 2 and Hill with a mark of 12 and four. Charley Root of the Cubs has 14 victories but six defeats charged against him.

Leading hitters of the national league: Harris, Pittsburgh, .395; Barnhart, Pittsburgh, .392; P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .388; Frisch, St. Louis, .368; Hornsby, New York, .363; Farrell, Boston, .361; Mueller, New York, .354; Harper, New York, .348; F. Scott, Chicago, .346; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .343.

The new home run king, Lou Gehrig, has just finished his biggest week with the war club and lacks only one point today of being the major leagues' only .400 batter. In the eight games over the holiday period Lou slammed 15 hits, including the four home runs which gave him a lead of two up on the king whose crown is slipping, Babe Ruth.

Out in the west another star rose over the horizon, Herschel Bennett of the St. Louis Browns. When his chance came to play in the outer garden regularly, the former Tulsa Western leaguer responded with an average of two hits per game, becoming one of the first 10 hitters in the league. Tradition has it that he once outran Loren Murchison in a 100-yard dash.

Hellmann Slumps

Ken Williams of the Browns, once wearer of the league batting honors, has made his debut into the first 10 this year, while Harry Hellmann's slump came back on him and he well back about seven places in the list of leaders.

The White Sox pitching team of Lyons and Thomas which ruled the circuit for a time has been broken up. Thomas has been jinxed by inability to chalk up his thirteenth victory, while Ted Lyons has gone on to his fourteenth and the league leadership. Willis Hudlin, the Indians' sensational youngster, is close behind in percentage, although he has but 10 victories, a mark reached by three others.

Leading hitters of the American league: Gehrig, New York, .399; Simmons, Philadelphia, .363; Meusel, New York, .373; Schang, St. Louis, .373; Dykes, Philadelphia, .371; Ruth, New York, .366; Bennett, St. Louis, .364; E. Miller, St. Louis, .362; Cobb, Philadelphia, .338; Williams, St. Louis .353.

Name It, But You Just Try To Take It!

Champions in another role The conquering heroes at play! Mermen (heh, heh)! Suit yourself about giving this picture a title.

Anyhow, who'd a thought it?

We have with us today, your noble Spudders in beach regalia snapshot taken when most of the gang chased over to Galveston from Houston while on tour of the circuit the other day and took a dip in the briny deep and all that sort of stuff.

Who ever would have imagined the proud Texas league leaders look so different in bathing suits? Some of 'em you hardly can tell who they are. But take our word for it, those guys pictured above really are most of our Spudders. All but two of the pitchers stayed out of the water lest the moisture cause a cold in the throwing whip, but the rest of the bunch including President Alvin Gardner and Sec Guy Airey hit the surf and gave the natives an aquatic treat.

The chesty guy on the left top row, is the Swedish Mr. Swenson, third baseman of some parts, next is the dynamic Mr. T. Jenkins, outfielder and bludgeoner of note. Then we have Frank Tobin, the husky backstop; Lyman Lamb, sand-topped outfielder; Prexy J. Alvin himself; Petey Turgeon, the keystoner deluxe and home run swatsman; Macon, the mascot; Herb Cobb, the fighting pitcher, and on the bottom row, left to right, the sturdy Pete Lapan, hindketch; Rabbit Benton, shortstop; Mr. Frank Tobin and Mrs. Ed. Kallin; George Lafayette, first sacker: Mr. Airey and Ed. Kallina, pitcher sent to Des Moines over the weekend in deal bringing outfielder Pug Griffin to Wichita Falls.

SAND LOT SLANTS

The Week's Schedule.

Today—Texas Electrics vs. Panhandle Longhorns.

Tuesday—Jackson Tire vs. Scotland Plumbers.

Wednesday — Continental Oilers vs. Muny Gassers.

Friday—Scotland Plumbers vs. Muny Gassers.

* * *

The Texas Electric Service company has hurled back a defy to the loud and long howls of Bill Hoehn in which he stated that he would make the Killowatts look like baboons. The whole Electric company team went up in the air over this and threatened to make things lively at the park Sunday afternoon.

* * *

"We'll dehorn the Longhorn." Is the official motto accepted by the Kilowatts for Sunday afternoon. With Jud Waller back in shape and the rest of the team looking like a million dollars the Electrics will be on hand with a full force.

* * *

Ticket sale has already started and tickets can be purchased for two bits from Bill Hoehn, skipper of the Panhandle Longhorns, Charley Spragins, boss of the Kilowatts, or from Leon Horn at the Electric company offices. Buy your ducats early and escape the rush at the ball park.

* * *

The Gassers and Jackson Tire team have postponed their tie playoff for a few more days. The Jackson club has a few minor injuries cropping out. Several of the Gasser players were to be out of town Sunday afternoon and it was very easy for the two to reach an agreement. When played off the game will be in Katy Park.

* * *

Wee Willie Lawson, 200-pound shortstop and skipper of the Jackson Tire team is hobbling on crutches from a sprained ankle received in the Gasser game.

* * *

Lawson tried an old trick on Bill Hoehn the other day, but the umpiring person at Katy Park, better known to the fans as "Old Blind Town" had his eye on the play and it failed to work. Willie has grounded to short and as he passed first base he hooked his arm in that of the first baseman and made him drop the throw. This might have worked in a close play, but it was not even close and Lawson's move was too plain even from the grandstands.

* * *

Bill had plenty of arguments among members of his team when he took the field to call the game, Johnnie McMahon, Bun Melear, Speck Roberts, Pee Wee Hinds and Skipper Simms, all of the Panhandle Refining company, gave him a loud and long raspberry greeting that was later picked up by Joe Randolph and Hubert Maddox. These seven made things pretty tough on the ump for a good part of the game.

* * *

One of these two mottos will fall Sunday. Take your pick: "We'll Kill the Kilowatts." (Panhandle Refining motto.)

"De-horn the Longhorn." (Texas Electric Service company motto.)

* * *

Dick Finn, Conocos' assistant field manager and board of strategy chairman, was one who got plenty of kick out of that 16 to 14 drubbing the Conocos gave the Panhandle Longhorns Friday afternoon. Dick, however, confided that he would be pulling for the Longhorns this afternoon so it would tie the Big Leaguers in the Twilight league all up in a knot.

* * *

Dick hasn't lost faith in the Taylor-Hieler combination. He still contends that they have the greatest pitching staff in the loop with such slab artists as Harris, Dickey, Forbes and Denny. It was with glee that Dick watched the only pitching staff that had been protested against him get the drubbing. McDuffy, Connally and Randolph failed to bother the Conocos.

* * *

The main trouble that has been holding O'Dell McDuffy back is that he has been given no chance to work out. Warming up before a ball game won't put a pitcher in shape to hurl winning ball. Mac says that he will get out every afternoon and gain back some of his lost control. Every follower of the game here knows that McDuffy is about the best pitcher in the league when he is in shape.

* * *

Johnny McMahon was strutting a brand new "shiner" at the game Friday afternoon. Johnny claims that a ball hit him while in the outfield, and a fly ball at that. The excuse sounds pretty slim for an outfielder of his ability, and Slim Horn is still wondering what the other fellow looks like.

* * *

Andy Taylor has a baseball cap that he would like to swap off. Andy has a cap that is too small or too large, just which he won't admit, but every time Andy goes after a fly ball that cap comes off leaving the hair to blow in all directions. Mrs. McDuffy says that she would get mixed up and grab the cap instead of the ball about the first time this happened to her.

* * *

There is one fan at the Twilight league games that all fans know, and she is one can be classed among the loyal fans. Mrs. Rawls is always on hand when the Panhandle plays and there is none on the field subjected to more cheers from her than Riley Rawls. Mrs. Rawls claims that she helps her boy swing. No wonder he hits them a mile and runs that distance in about 10 seconds flat.

Matthew Kimes Will Be Sentenced to 99 Years

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., July 9. (AP)—Governor Henry S. Johnston today ordered Matthew Kimes, Oklahoma outlaw, to be moved under heavy guard from the state penitentiary at McAlester Monday to Sallisaw to be sentenced for the murder of Perry Chuculate, deputy sheriff.

Kimes is to be sentenced to 99 years for the killing, which followed a bank robbery last summer.

Cigarette Advertisements Ruled Legal in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan., July 9. (AP)—Advertising of cigaretts in Kansas can not be prohibited, the supreme court ruled today, declaring invalid such a provision in the new law legalizing the sale of cigaretts.

Cotton - Oil Loop

Cotton Oil league teams square off in weekly play Sunday afternoon over the circuit with hopes of mixing up that four-way tie registered last week for league leadership.

The fast Frederick team invades Iowa Park this afternoon.

Davidson plays at Tipton.

Frandfield battles the Electra team at Electra.

The hard-fighting Burkburnett club plays Chillicothe at Chillicothe.

FRANCE BECOMES FINALIST.

EAST BOURNE, England, July 9. (AP)—France today became a finalist in the European zone Davis cup competition when the doubles team of Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon defeated the South Africans, Raymond and Condon, 7-5, 6-4, 8-6. This decided the series in asmuch as France had captured both singles matches Friday.

BOY DIES OF POISON

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 9. (AP)—Clarence Bennett, 17 months old son of a motorcycle policeman, died here yesterday as a result of eating a fire cracker given him by John Ray Billingsley, eight years old.

Nearly 9000 pairs of twins were born in England and Wales in the past year.

MATSUDA BACK FOR REED TILT

Kauffman Wrestles Blithe For Nothing

THE CARD.

Matty Matsuda, El Paso, versus Mike Reed, Los Angeles, welterweights, two falls to a finish.

Clete Kauffman, Columbus, versus Jimmy Blithe, Portland, Me., middleweights, two falls to a finish.

Spike Stewart, Wichita Falls, versus Olin Hearn, Wichita Falls, welterweights, four rounds boxing.

Harley Foster, Little Rock, versus Lee Voss, Wichita Falls, bantamweights, four rounds boxing.

Time: Friday night.

Matty Matsuda, at one time the outstanding Wichita Falls wrestling favorite, is coming back.

The little brown man of the mat returns Friday, July 15, to defend his championship claims against the assaults of Mike Reed, Los Angeles welterweight ,according to announcement by Matchmaker A. B. Ross.

Reed for several months has endeavored to get Matsuda into the ring with him, but ever the Nipponese sidestepped the issue, saying officials who would sponsor a Matsuda-Reed match were trying to slip him a cold package. But back in Texas, his home country, Matsuda showns no fear for Reed. If there is any short dealing, Reed will get it, not Matsuda. This Matty knows, and so, asking only for a fair and square finish match he has agreed to tackle the Californian.

Clete Kauffman, Columbus, middleweight who can lick Pete Brown in five minutes but didn't here two weeks back, returns gratis in match with Jimmy Blithe, claimant of the New England middleweight championship. Kauffman, according to the promoter, declares he put forth his best effort against Brown, contradicting story of the match carried in The Record News, and is willing to meet any middleweight selected for him in Wichita Falls free of charge just to show fandom of this city that he is on the square.

Four of the city's leading fistic lights tangle in preliminary bouts.

HOSIERIES SPLIT TWIN BILL.

CHICAGO, July 9. (AP)—Chicago and Boston divided a double-header here today, the Red Sox winning the first game 2 to 1, and being shut out in the second game, 5 to 0.

Ruffing held the locals to four scattered hits in the opener, the White Sox losing several opportunities to score through poor base running.

In the second game, Jacobs pitched fine ball while Wiltse suffered two assaults in the fourth and eighth innings. The score:

Texas League Hitting

Waco, lucking into many base hits in its bandbox park and according to many rival ball players, helped by a lax scoring system, leads the league in team batting with an average of .310 for games played through July 1. Wichita Falls is second with a .306 figure.

Ran Moore of Waco tops the hitters with .405 average.

Jenkins, Turgeon, Lamb, Fitzgerald, LaFayette and Swenson of Wichita Falls were among the batting leaders.

The following averages are compiled by the Texas statistical bureau from official boxes for all games up to and including Friday, July 1. The records are included of all players still in the league, and taking part in all or parts of 10 or more games:

READ THE WANT ADS

JUST TO KEEP THE RECORDS STRAIGHT!

The Saturday issue of the Wichita Falls evening newspaper carried a page advertisement containing figures to show the consistent circulation growth of that newspaper.

One statement in the advertisement was to this effect "—A GROWTH MADE POSSIBLE THROUGH EDITORIAL MERIT, WITHOUT THE INDUCEMENTS OF PREMIUMS, CONTESTS OR PRIZES."

Doubtless this statement was printed without desire to mislead local advertisers. For the records show that the Wichita Falls evening newspaper carried an advertisement as late as October 9, 1926, OFFERING A $1.25 CIRCUS TICKET FREE TO BOYS AND GIRLS FOR GETTING ONE FRIEND TO SUBSCRIBE TO THE EVENING NEWSPAPER FOR ONLY THREE MONTHS.

With the exception of an illustration of an elephant the advertisement which appeared October 9, 1926, is reproduced here.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS SOUND IN WICHITA, REPORT SHOWS

FARMS SHOW GOOD RESULTS

Diversification on Steady Growth Here

do not justify an aggressive stimulus i nthis direction was given as the reason for this recommendation.

Industrial Activity.

Mr. Harrison and chamber of commerce officials urge more interest in varied manufacturing enterprises and agricultural resources for Wichita Falls and county. The adjustment from an oil center to an industrial and farming country necessitates greater investment of local capital in small industrial enterprises, it was noted.

A recommendation that the traffic department of the organization be authorized to make a charge of 33 and one-third per cent of money actually paid back to shippers through the efforts of department heads on freight overcharges was among those in the report. This was approved by the executive committee and will be put into effect.

The report in full follows:

Gentlemen:

Reporting on the condition of affairs of the organization for the mid-year period, it is gratifying to note that in spite of the radical change that has taken place in general business conditions in this city and throughout this section since the beginning of 1927, our work is proceeding actively in all departments, and we are rendering a varied service to our members and to the community as well as to thousands of visitors to Wichita Falls.

The basic figures indicating business conditions for the first half of 1927 compared with the first half of 1926 are as follows:

	First Six Mons. '26	First Six Mons. '27	Increase
Building permits	$5,425,262	$2,082,736	*$3,341,526
Postal receipts	152,194	163,781	11,587
Bk. deposits June 30	25,631,874	23,736,172	*1,895,702
Phones	9,566	10,146	1,580
Electric meters	8,781	9,997	1,246
Water meters	9,325	10,701	1,476
Scholastics	9,369	10,479	1,110
Population	56,214	68,113	11,899

*—Decrease.

This shows that Wichita Falls is continuing to grow in spite of the depression in the oil industry.

A summary of our semi-annual financial statement shows the following figures:

Gross amount pledged for 1927	$61,284.75
Less cancellation	556.00	$60,434.75
Unpaid balance 1926 as of Jan. 1, 1927	456.25	5,629.78
		$66,064.50
1927 dues collected to July 1, 1927	39,581.73
1926 dues collected to July 1, 1927	705.45	40,287.18
1926 and 1927 dues outstanding		25,807.32
Dues delinquent as of July 1, 1927:
1927	6,107.57
1926	4,405.00
	10,512.57
During the first half of 1926 we collected in dues		43,705.86
Of which there was collected during the campaign		22,195.00
While during the '27 campaign there was collected		15,662.00

You will note that in spite of changed conditions our collections for dues up to June 30, 1927, are only $4,196.15 less than our total collections as of June 30, 1926. It is also gratifying to note that we have only $6,107.57 total dues delinquent as of June 30, 1927, out of a total subscribed budget of more than $60,000.

Industrial and Traffic

Our industrial commissioner has secured, or has in the process of location, nine industrial enterprises, as shown in detail by his departmental report.

He is now actively at work endeavoring to locate plants of five other important concerns and has eight other large enterprises on his list which will probably develop into new institutions for the city.

Our assistant traffic manager, in charge of freight rates, has saved in actual checks returned to shippers $2,040 in overcharges on freight rates. No charge is made for this service and no distinction is made between members. In some cases members have received several times more money in refunds on over charges than they have paid the chamber of commerce in a year.

Our traffic department has kept in touch with the important "Texas Common Point Rate Case" and has handled the interests of Wichita Falls shippers carefully and effectively so that we are now in a position to enjoy all of the benefits to be derived by Dallas and Fort Worth from the new schedule which will go into effect in December, 1927, and we have incurred none of the ill-will that these two cities have been subjected to by the smaller centers of West Texas.

In the industrial department we have kept actively in touch with all communities and practically all retail merchants of our entire trade territory through a traveling representative who spends five days a week collecting information for our annual industrial survey and also in selling Wichita Falls as a wholesale and manufacturing center to the retailers of West Texas and Southern Oklahoma.

This department has also been active in securing final approval of all railroads participating in the union terminal for needed improvements in the union passenger station, which probably will be begun within the next few weeks.

Publicity and Conventions.

In our publicity and conventions department we have issued 21,500 copies of our magazine, "The Community Builder."

This department has issued approximately 25,000 news stories to 240 daily and weekly newspapers in West Texas.

We have answered 1500 personal mail inquiries regarding this city and the irrigated valley.

We have distributed 7000 small folders.

We have prepared the photographs for the four-page pictorial folder for the sale of the Electric gas bonds, this company paying the expense of printing and circulating 100,000 of these folders. The chamber of commerce secured and is distributing during the year 10,000 of these folders.

We have maintained up to date a complete statistical file on Wichita Falls, Wichita county and the trade territory, which covers 50 pages of closely typed legal sized paper, bound for ready reference and which fills one entire drawer of a filing cabinet.

Distributed 3000 copies of special folder through South Texas in connection with the Lions' club trip to McAllen.

Personal representatives of this organization visited 37 cities and towns of West Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, attending meetings and furthering the interests of Wichita Falls. This in addition to the traveling representative of the industrial department.

We planned and carried out arrangements for nine conventions, with a total attendance estimated at more than 50,000.

We have also on our program for the remainder of the year the entertainment of the Northwest Texas Press association in August and the General Baptist convention of Texas in November.

We also are planning to lend our usual active cooperation to the advertising for the Texas-Oklahoma fair in October.

Our publicity department has mailed regular statistical reports to the federal reserve bank and Dun's Commercial Review.

They have written and contributed special articles for the Tulsa Oil and Gas Journal; the Oil Weekly, Houston; Nation's Business, Washington, and practically all of the daily papers of the southwest.

Convention Value.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention was a disappointment in only one respect—the attendance was not as large as was anticipated and many delegates did not buy registration badges, and the loss of revenue, which had been counted upon, together with some unauthorized expenditures in the enthusiasm of the occasion, caused the cost of this convention to exceed receipts by about $8000. All but $2750 of this loss has already been absorbed and paid. The balance can be easily absorbed during the next few months without any handicap to our regular activities.

While the failure of the members of the West Texas organization to support their own convention by registering has caused disappointment to all of us, it must not be overlooked that we used this convention to make Wichita Falls the talk of the southwest for nearly a year. We secured free publicity that could not have been purchased for many times the net cost of the convention. The entertainment of the visitors has created a good will toward Wichita Falls throughout our trade territory that will be felt for a long time to come.

Our merchants, generally, report no appreciable additional business during the recent convention days. Many of them report actual loss in daily sales.

It appears that it is not good business to spend very large sums of money in securing or entertaining conventions. Good business demands that chambers of commerce generally work out some sort of an agreement on the entertainment of conventions that will put all competing cities on the same basis and will force the members of organizations meeting in convention to defray their own expenses, or the major portion of them, by registration fees. The publicity value of conventions is second, but the cost of conventions throughout the United States is becoming too large to be justified in good business practice.

Agricultural Department.

Our agricultural department, with a director in charge of general activities, a specialist on dairy, cattle and poultry, and with the cooperative effort of the county farm agent and the home demonstration agent, has carried on a very active, aggressive and effective campaign for the promotion of better farm methods throughout this section, with particular attention to the irrigated valley.

Particular attention has been devoted to the promotion of greater interest in livestock. Increase in the number of dairy cows on the farm has been recommended up to the point where such increase might require additional labor, not considered profitable for the average farmer to engage in the dairy business on a commercial basis, but our department is encouraging in every way possible the idea that every farm should have some dairy cattle, hogs and chickens. It is reported that in the Iowa Park section the volume of cream handled has increased ten-fold within the past year. There is a growing interest in dairying, poultry and hog raising throughout this section.

Much attention has been devoted to egg marketing, potato marketing and other phases of the farm marketing problem.

Cultivation of spinach has been carried to the point of actual shipping of an appreciable quantity of this new crop.

Crop rotation has been fostered with the land-owner and the tenant.

The department has brought to the attention of large land-owners the need of soil building to get fertility. Sweet clover has been introduced into the valley and is meeting with success. At the present time, on about 500 acres of sweet clover there is being pastured about 1,000 head of sheep and 150 head of cattle. Another land-owner has purchased for delivery 100 brood sows to be fed on sweet clover and alfalfa pasture.

The problem of working out a systematic plan for listing and sale of irrigated lands continues to engage the attention of the development committee. In the face of difficulties there has been no lessening of effort to work out a plan that will enable us to do cooperative advertising to secure new settlers.

Highways.

In spite of the defeat of the recent road bond election, the highway committee has been alert to protect Wichita Falls' interests in competition with other cities in highway development. All persons interested in the commercial advancement of Wichita Falls should realize that competition between cities has now come to be very largely a question of facilities for highway travel and transportation.

The growth of the use of the passenger bus by sharp reductions in fares in the use of freight truck lines brings about a new era of trade competition. We must look to the south and southwest for trade that is being invaded by aggressive cities that have been alert along the line of highway development.

Our committee has co-operated with Archer county in their recent successful election, in which bonds were voted for a complete county highway program. Several members of our organization went before the highway department with citizens of Archer and Young counties to secure federal designation of the road from Wichita Falls to Graham. It now appears that our efforts will be successful.

Young county has voted bonds for a county highway system. This will connect with the pavement to Stephens county and will open up a trade territory that is now very difficult to reach and to hold because of unimproved roads.

The voting of bonds by most of the counties between Wichita Falls and Plainview brings nearer to realization a South Plains highway which will be probably as valuable in many respects as a new railroad.

Employment Bureau.

We have conducted a community employment bureau for thre months. A serious situation among the common laborers of our city was avoided and a large number of worthy men and women placed in gainful occupations through our efforts. During the month of June 116 were sent to jobs. Applications now average about three or four a day.

State Park and Fish Hatchery.

We have secured the approval of the state fish and game department to establish a fish hatchery and a state park at the Diversion lake. Contract for the fish hatchery is to be let within a few days. The 140 acre park tract will provide a delightful recreation spot for the average family throughout this section.

Summary.

While the organization is sound and collections indicate loyal support of the membership, general economic conditions force us to adopt conservative policies for the remainder of this year where such retrenchments will not affect the vital and efective program for the good of the city.

We have reduced our monthly payroll $225 a month, and on September 1 will have reduced it more than $500 a month. Every department has been instructed to exercise all reasonable economy in order that we may finish the year well within our budget. In this connection, I wish to call your attention to the condition of the budget:

Disbursements to date, budget for year, and budget balance respectively.

Administra.	$ 9,812.20	$20,000	$10,086.80
Industry	5,892.54	11,500	5,467.76
Traffic	4,035.29	8,500	4,464.71
Publicity and conventions	14,579.76	20,000	5,420.24
Val. Dev.	4,317.75	10,000	5,682.25
Miscel.	2,160.50	5,000	2,839.50
	$40,698.74	$75,000	$34,301.26

It will be noted that all departments, with the exception of publicity and conventions, are well within their budgets and this excess is chargeable to an unusual convention activity during the first half of the year. The money advertising the recent road bond election amounted to $580.50. This entire amount has been paid back to the chamber of commerce by personal donations of directors and other citizens. This department will be able to finish the year within its budget. The Community Builder costs about $500 a month. Contrary to the policy of the editor, I recommend skipping the July and August issues during the vacation term and during a naturally inactive period of business.

General Recommendations.

1. A very conservative policy towards expenditures, both in securing them and agreeing to entertain them, based on experience of the last eight years.

2. That the Community Employment Bureau be discontinued on August 1st and all applications for work that need be attended to should be handled by the Chamber of Commerce without the expense of a separate office and a separate employment man. This will save us about $200.00 a month.

3. The sale of advertising space in our City Manual and Market Circular, now being prepared for publication. The expense of printing and much of the expense of collecting material can be offset in this way by the sale of advertising to concerns that will profit directly thereby.

Industrial Exposition.

4. Financial conditions do not justify aggressive promotion of new enterprises at this time. Communications from other cities indicate that few new industrial enterprises are being launched, and only locally, is Wichita Falls far ahead of most cities of its size in this respect. It is extremely difficult to secure local capital for investment in the stock of small industrial enterprises. Our people are not industrially minded. In a section trained to invest in oil enterprises with the hopes of large returns, conservative dividends on small manufacturing propositions do not meet with a ready response among our men of means. This is a condition that should be recognized and gradually corrected for there will come a time when we shall have to depend upon a foundation of varied manufacturing enterprises and our agricultural resources. A recent analysis of the United States Chamber of Commerce of new industries in 87 cities throughout the United States for 1926 shows that 53 per cent of them were started with local capital and local men. About 20 per cent of them were started by local men with the aid of outside capital. Out of 618 plants reported on, only 98 were removals from other cities; 98 were branch plants of existing companies.

5. All leading industrial departments are convinced that most industrial expansion comes from local talent and local money, organized to fill local needs. With this condition in mind, I wish to recommend a plan similar to the one I recommended to the association three years ago—that is, a syndicate of corporation organized by the Chamber of Commerce to extend financial aid to worthy, sound, small industries in Wichita Falls that need more financial backing than they can get under ordinary banking rules or trust companies. This company could extend a real and definite, personal and timely help in building small factories that will grow into big institutions. I also wish to recommend again the establishment of an industrial area to provide for efficient plants and proper location because trackage is scarce and scattered.

6. I recommend that the Traffic Department be authorized to make a charge of 33 1-3 per cent of money actually paid back to shippers through our efforts on freight overcharges.

7. The overwhelming defeat of the recent road bond election indicates a general resentment against taxes. The Chamber of Commerce outlined and actively supported this road program, believing it to be in the interest of the general advancement of this city and section. The taxing of the people indicates that any bond proposition would meet with disfavor at this time. This does not reflect a lack of progressiveness on the part of our splendid citizenship. It indicates that the growing burden of of taxation is being felt keenly by the average citizen, and it is probably just as well to have this condition brought out in the open, for the sooner we know of an element of the body politics the sooner we can try to correct it. No good will come of criticisms and general blame of public officials. Our officials have a serious problem in finding the money necessary to carry on the public work.

Taxation Committee.

I recommend the appointment of a committee on taxation composed of the best minds we can summon to the task, which will be requested to go into the whole subject of taxation which now burdens concerns not only locally, but generally throughout the United States. It is entirely probable that such a careful analysis might bring about readjustments and more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

Wichita Falls has nothing serious in its basic situation to worry over. Our best business minds are convinced that agricultural products will bring a good price this fall, and those familiar with the oil industry believe within the next few months price readjustments will occur that will stimulate the usual activity in commercial lines.

Our general situation is not bad; it is merely not so good as it was last year. Last year was unusually active. Wichita Falls has enjoyed unusual prosperity over the period of the last several years and it has a good foundation that gives us faith and confidence that it will continue to grow along industrial and agricultural lines. This will be accomplished by a renewed interest in community affairs and a continued willingness of our business men to give time and thought and work to our program of advancement."

Healthy Manufacturing Condition In U.S. Indicates Continued Prosperity

By FRED R. RIPLEY

Continued prosperity for the balance of the summer and for early fall is indicated in a survey just made of manufacturing conditions throughout the country.

This analysis, which is made from reports of 2203 companies, shows that approximately 81 per cent of the maximum number of persons who could be put to work are now being employed.

When it is considered that the survey embraces manufacturers from coast to coast, in all lines, and employing from a dozen to 40,000 persons it is seen that a representative view of conditions is available. The average number on the payroll in the survey is 557 per company.

The association making the survey sent its questionnaires to 3000 members of its organization in pivotal sections throughout the country. Replies were received from 2203 concerns who reported that at present they were employing 1,227,325 people and that 1,509,920 employes were required to operate their plants at full capacity. The survey covered 36 classifications of industry.

Orderly Readjustment

Eight months ago the same association made a similar survey which indicated that there would be a slight shading off. This easing is reflected in the late reports but is considered merely a continuation of the orderly readjustment between production and consumption.

In fact the association views the decrease as an encouraging sign for this is the period of a natural slump in nearly all lines. But instead of this slump which is anticipated each summer, there has been only a falling off of less than 3 per cent.

There are some lines which report they are not doing as well as they had anticipated. But analysis of these concerns, it is believed by executives, would show that pessimism is based more on what had been expected for profit rather than on what might be considered a just and equitable profit for present conditions.

Textiles Improve

From more than a score of the plants reporting in various lines, there is information that they are operating three shifts. In the textile lines, reputed to be in difficulties in sections, 19 per cent of these reporting are operating full force and 29 per cent are running at 90 per cent of capacity.

Glass manufacturers, makers of pottery and clay products, chemical plants, manufacturers of printing supplies and printing appear in excellent shape with 50 per cent of those reporting in each line running at 90 per cent of their full capacity.

In the miscellaneous group, which is always considered a good barometer of business, and some of the concerns which employ as high as 30,000 men, 19 per cent report operating full time and 27 per cent with 90 per cent of full payrolls.

Farm Machinery Slack

Forty-two per cent of the makers of various instruments report they are operating with 90 per cent of their full forces. Agricultural machinery is the only industry in which a decided drop is shown, those concerns in this line reporting operating with less than two-thirds of their full complement.

The proportions in other industries that are operating with 90 per cent of their full forces are: 35 per cent of the manufacturers of builders' and plumbers' supplies and lumber men; 33 per cent of the manufacturing jewelers; 32 per cent of the clothing makers and in iron and steel; 26 per cent in machinery; 25 per cent in furniture and automobile accessories; 24 per cent in electrical; 22 per cent in automobiles, 21 per cent in food and leather; 19 per cent in hardware and tools; 16 per cent in rubber and music.

REED ASSAILS G. O. P. LEADERS

Fiery Missouri Senator Speaks at Houston

HOUSTON, July 9. (AP)—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri digressed at the convention of the Texas Bas association here today from his subject, the tendencies of the federal government, to pay his respects to Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, to Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania and to Harry Daugherty.

Mellon and Pepper with others he charged with "a damnable conspiracy against the rights of the average citizen."

Liquor Backing Charged.

He charged that Mellon backed by liquor and perhaps some predatory interests raised $2,000,000 for the election of Pepper and that "in spite of the utter corruption of the fund" recited that Mr. Mellon insisted it was as "honest and justifiable as any raised to carry on the work of Almighty God."

"When the members of the president's cabinet sanction such corruption," Mr. Reed shouted, "it is high time for the state of Texas to take back some of the power it has delegated to the federal government."

Harry Daugherty, former United States attorney general, Mr. Reed characterized as "the foulest insect that ever crawled across the page of time."

The Ku Klux Klan was not mentioned by name, but the senator asserted that he "did not want any appeals from the court of my land to the mob in the court house yard."

He Praises Moody.

Governor Dan Moody, he said in another part of his address, had "established a reputation throughout the country that is enviable and reflects credit on your state."

Mr. Reed was loudly cheered.

MANHATTAN ELECTRICAL SUPPLY COMPANY INC. Five-Year Record.

The Manhatton Electrical Supply company is distributor for all kinds of electric materials and manufacturers many types of electrical appliances including radio supplies. The concern formerly did a large business in dry batteries but in 1926 sold this section of its business to the National Carbide and Carbon company. New lines were added, however, including automatic machines for cartoning, wrapping and packing various materials and making and filling envelopes. These lines were acquired through purchase of E. D. Anderson Inc.

The corporation owns two large factories in Jersey City and two in Revenna, Ohio, owns real estate on which its retail stores in New York City are located and operates other stores in Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco. It controls a manganese producing subsidiary and controls other companies.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding consists of 100,000 shares of no par value. Dividends were paid on the old preferred issues. On the new no par stock dividends have been paid at varying rates since 1920, the present distribution being at the rate of $5 a share per annum.

In 1926 net income amounted to $882,126 including an extraordinary profit of $527,362. This compared with $487,326 in 1925. As of Jan. 1, 1927, total current assets were $2,335,785, current liabilities $458,545, net working capital $1,877,240 and book value applicable to the stock $37.29 a share.

Undertone in Wall Street Market Seems Firm During Short Session Trading Saturday

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, July 9.—While there was some evening-up of contracts during the two hours of trading today the undertone was generally firm with new high records established here and there. Business in bonds was quiet. Trade reports carried more optimistic views for business over the next few months. The biggest surprise Wall street received was the increase in the Steel corporation unfilled tonnage for June which totaled 2305 tons. The increase was contrary to all predictions and was a severe jolt to the bears short of stocks. A better market is expected next week as a result as the increase indicates orders are already being placed to meet the fall expansion in business now generally predicted by bankers and economists. It was the first time in six months that the big corporation announced an increase in forward business. The increase in Smackover Oil prices had no appreciable effect on petroleum securities. Trading in foreign exchange and commodities was uninteresting.

Cotton did not do much either way following publication of the government report which showed a drop of 12 per cent in the area under cultivation compared with the amount sown on June 25 last year. Acreage planted this year was placed at 42,683,000 acres, or 87 per cent of normal, compared with 48,730,000 under growth last year. The reduction in the flood states showed the extent of the damage to the crop caused by the rising waters.

Certain interests forecast a move in the low price issues. It will be a case of switching from some of the "Blue Chip" issues for the time being into cheaper stocks which are behind the list. While weak spots were again in evidence this occurence was offset by strength in specialties. Mathieson Alkali spurted nine points and there was a persistent demand for Nash and Jordan Motors. Important developments are understood to be pending in Jordan and Nash is expected to earn $3.50 a share in the next quarter. The company plans on aggressive sales campaign for its new cars. Automobile accessories continued in favor and both Gabriel Snubbers and Reynolds Spring reached new high prices. Both companies are enjoying good business in the cast of Reynolds, automotive engineers who have gone over the company's new springs for cars declare that they are the best on the market and sell for almost the same prices as inferior grades. Hudson was strong at times. General Motors closed above the 200-mark. Directors of this company will probably vote another split-up on a two-for-one basis but no change in the dividend rate. Short covering developed in Nash.

Commercial Solvents "B" and Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis scored the biggest advances. Commercial Solvents took a hop of 13 points and Nashville 10. The rise in Commercial Solvents is a bull card on Allied Chemical which is a large holder of the shares and is said to have a profit of 200 points on its holdings. Union Carbide, called to the attention of readers here several points lower, changed hands at a brand new high above 130. Union is the pet of Arthur Cutten along with Timken.

Heavy buying occurred in American Can which lifted that stock into new high territory. The buying of this stock has been for the account of loading banking interests and insiders who expect business to show a decided improvement in coming months. One of the biggest orders ever placed in the canning industry has been received from the National Biscuit company. Some of the tobaccos perked up. Tobacco Products "A" enjoyed an investment demand.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, July 9(AP)—The feature in the cotton market today was the government report placing the acreage in cultivation on July 1 at 87.6 per cent of last year's or 42,683,000 acres, compared with 48,730,000 acres under cultivation as of June 25 last year. These figures showed a greater curtailment than expected on the average, and were followed by active buying which carried prices for new crop months into new high ground for the season. December sold up to 17.68 or 32 points net higher and closed at 17.58 the general market closing steady at net advances of 19 to 23 points.

The market was quiet and rather irregular before the report was issued. The opening was steady at an advance of two points to a decline of two points, prices showing net gains of about three to four points shortly after the opening in response to reported Liverpool cables and reports of further rains or showers in the eastern belt. The bulge met considerable realizing, however, and before the report was issued, prices eased off to 17.10 for October and 17.37 for January. While the reduction of 12.4 per cent in acreage as indicated by the government report was within the range of recent private figures the market had probably been prepared for a decrease of around 11 per cent and the actual figures brought in active covering.

Private crop reporting agency was reported which appeared to be partly for foreign account and for a time the market was active and rather excited, October selling up to 17.48 and January to 17.72 or 24 to 33 points net higher on the general list. Offerings increased slightly as the market approached the 17.2-4-cen tlevel for January, and later prices showed reactions of seven to 11 points from the best.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, July 9. (AP)—The cotton market was extremely active for a Saturday session today and prices soared 25 to 35 points on publication of a government acreage estimate. October rallied from 16.99 to 17.35 but eased off a few points near the end and closed at 17.28, 24 points net up. The general market closed steady at net advances of 23 to 25 points.

The opening was firm, first trades showing gains of 3 to 4 points due to relatively steady Liverpool cables. The market gained a point additional in the early trading with October at 17.07 and December 17.28.

Realizing caused a recession of 7 to 8 points, but the report was issued and October dropped to 16.99 and December 17.21. When the government figures were issued the market rallied sharply and October soared to 17.35 and December 17.50.

The market reacted in the late trading on realizing and prices lost seven points, but the market closed steady at a net advance for the day of about 21 to 24.

Exports for the day totaled 6000 bales.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, July 9. (AP)—Increasing uneasiness over black rust in the northwest gave an upward trend today to wheat. Predictions were current that serious crop damage will appear about the middle of July in domestic wheat and during the last of July in Canada. If weather conditions are of a kind to promote rust development.

Closing quotations on wheat was unsettled ⅛ to ⅜c net higher, with corn showing no net decline to ⅛c gain, oats ⅛c off to ⅛c up, and provisions at a rise of 2 to 12 cents.

Corn prices were easier owing chiefly to scattered showers and warmer temperatures over the central west. Oats trade was light, with the market keeping to a narrow range of values.

Provisions reflected indications of improved demand from consumers.

FEW LOCATIONS ARE ANNOUNCED

Olney Drilling Permits Take Sharp Decline

By STEVE STEVENSON.

Curtailment of oil production continued during the past week to be paramount in the minds of the operators.

Very few new locations were announced and the main activities were centered on completing wells or perfecting those already drilled.

One of the principal items of interest during the week was a statement made by G. W. Tilley, deputy supervisor of the state oil and gas division, that applications for drilling permits in the Olney district has dropped from 200 a month to 50 during the past six months.

Pipe line reports issued the latter part of the week disclosed that runs had dropped 1524 barrels from those reported the week previous. The principal drop was in Young county while the largest gain was made in Cook due to new producers which came in during the week.

In the Seminole pool a new high peak for all time was set Thursday when 573 wells flowed 442,047 barrels. This was a gain of 10,845 barrels over the previous day's record.

Of considerable interest to oil men in the Wichita Falls district was the announcement made by the Wichita county commissioners court that assessments on storage oil in 1927 would amount to 80 cents a barrel. In 1926 the assessment was 90 cents.

During the week Archer county got in line to obtain a new oil pool when the Roxana company found a new sand in the John Harris subdivision. The sand was 10 feet higher than that found by the Consolidated Oil company's well in the same section which is pumping 35 barrels daily.

South Plains Residents Want Oil Play Credit

AMARILLO, July 9.—Because Panhandle oil geologists, scouts and operators have predominated among the visitors to the Hale Center well, in Hale county, and more accurate information on what the shallow well has done has come out of Amarillo than from Lubbock, Plainview, Tulia or Hale Center, those towns are inclined to think that Amarillo is attempting to claim the new play.

Such is not the case, for the Hale Center well, legally known as the Engle King No. 1 Mullican, in section 21, block B, of R. M. Thompson survey, in Hale county, is situated in a new district that will be called the South Plains. It neither belongs to the Panhandle or to West Texas, being the two and adds to the potential wealth of the western arena of Texas.

Amarillo-Panhandle oil men and supply stores will vie with those of San Angelo-Midland-Odessa, Peyote—Abilene - Sweetwater of West Texas for the business to be developed in Hale county and adjacent areas, if the shallow field develops.

Chicago and Dallas Spud in Crockett

SAN ANGELO, July 9.—Another well has been spudded in in Crockett county. It is being drilled by William McGinley of Chicago and George H. Anderson of Dallas, was spudded in Thursday, and is known as their No. 1 University. The location is in the middle of the southwest quarter of section 2, block 50. The well will be drilled down to the Big Lake sand, starting with a 15-inch hole, by William Shaffer.

The test is not far from the Shaffer and others' No. 6 University, which has just obtained a showing of oil in water sand at 1848 feet, 200 feet higher than the level at which oil was struck in Shaffer and others' No. 1 University.

Both tests are in section 9, block 47, No. 2 being 1500 feet northwest of No. 1. The first well was plugged back to around 2200 feet and shot and is estimated to be good for as high as 10 barrels a day. The well is about 15 miles east of the discovery well on the L. P. Powell ranch.

Steam Being Used To Fight Hutchinson Fire

Steam is being used to extinguish the burning gasser of Phillips Petroleum company and McMillen Oil corporation in No. 1, Sanford, in the southeast corner of the west 80 acres of the north 160 acres in section 82, block 46, of T. and T. C. survey in the Sanford-Paramount pool, south of the Canadian river, in Hutchinson county. This well was making 60,000,000 feet at 2725 feet when it caught on fire.

Body of Missing Man Discovered In Water

DANVILLE, Ky., July 9.(AP)—Charles L. Henderson's body was found today in Herrington lake, near here. Mr. Henderson, manager of a wholesale grocery company and prominent in business and civic affairs of the city, disappeared last December. An audit of his accounts at the wholesale grocery after his disappearance disclosed a shortage said to be around $25,000.

Jury Visits Scene Of Slain Girl's Death

MONROE, La., July 9. (AP)—The trial of ernon Scruggs, charged with the murder of Mildred Thomas, shifted from the court room to the open road today. The judge, the jury, the defendant and counsel boarded automobiles to follow the rote taken by Scruggs car the night of the tragedy and to visit the scene of the girl's fatal injury.

Federal Court Orders Release of Tulsa Man

KANSAS CITY, July 9. (AP)—An alternative writ of habeas corpus directing the release of O. O. Owens, Tulsa, Okla., oil man, who is serving a one-year sentence in the county jail at Oklahoma City for contempt of the state supreme court, was issued today by Judge A. S. Valkenburgh of the United States court of appeals.

Pipeline Runs Decline 1524 Barrels During Week

A decline of 1524 barrels from the previous week in pipe line runs in the Wichita Falls district during the past week was reported by W. G. Sinclair, production scout for the Gulf Production company.

The largest decline came in Young county where the runs dropped 1155 barrels. A part of the decline was offset by gains in Iowa Park, Cook county and Jack county.

The Young county drop came as a result of natural decline in production. The Cooke county increase was the result of new producing wells.

The field summary follows:

PLAN TULSA OIL EXHIBIT

Plans Call for Connecting State Buildings

Special to The Record News.

TULSA, Okla., July 9.—The plan for the new grounds of the International Petroleum exposition provides for the Oklahoma and Texas buildings, an immense arcade connecting the two, a great plaza in front, a band stand, walks and rest spaces. The general public space will be used for a giant derrick illustrative of the oil business, and for some of the general features. Transportation lines run to the front entrance, and parking space is all around. There are no spectacles or amusements in connection with the exposition itself. The buildings are now practically up and setting of the exhibits for the exposition—September 24 to October 1—may be starte dwithin two or three weeks. The grounds are within the city limits of Tulsa and accessible by several thoroughfares.

West Texas Gas Line Ahead of Schedule

The West Texas Gas company, a subsidiary of the Prairie Oil and Gas company, is pushing the construction on its natural gas line from the Amarillo gas field to South Plains towns and cities. Officials of the company report that the construction work is already "way ahead of schedule and gas should be in use by December 1."

Distribution systems are being built at Canyon, Plainview and Lubbock, the three large consuming centers, and smaller points are Happy, Tulia, Kress, Abernathy, Hale Center, Lockney, Floydada and Slaton.

On the Empire Gas and Fuel company's gas line from Panhandle to Wichita reports say pipe is being laid rapidly from Pampa northeast, and from Woodward, in northwestern Oklahoma, both to the southwest and northeast, and to the southeast out of Wichita, Kansas.

Surveyors are working on right of way for the Amarillo-Denver gas line.

The gas lines from Wheeler and Gray counties to Wichita Falls, Fort Worth, Dallas and intermediate towns and cities are reported about completed.

Air-Gas Oil Lifting Cause Oil Men Interest

The successful use of the air-gas lift in the Seminole area of Oklahoma and in California is causing oil producers in other fields to interest themselves in its further utilization.

Th efall meeting of the petroleum division of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers to be held at Fort Worth on October 19 and 20, will be given over largely to the air-gas lift and gas-oil rations.

E. O. Bennett, of the Marland Oil company, will discuss the Mechanical installations for air-gas lift, as applied in Texas fields, other than the Gulf coast. The Gulf coast phases will be by L. L. Brundred of the National Refining company.

Mr. Bennett will also discuss the relation of air-gas lift to gas-oil rations and the bearing on ultimate production.

W. V. Vietti will talk on problems of randling congealing oils and paraffin at the Fort Worth session.

One of the sessions will be given over to the use of electricity in the oil field operations.

Houston Gulf Company Builds Big Pipe Line

NEW YORK, July 9. (AP)—The Houston Gulf Pipe Line company has completed its 30-mile 16-inch high pressure gas line from the Refugio field in south Texas to the White Point and Corpus Christi fields. In these two fields and attached to the line are 11 large gas wells with daily open flow capacity of more than 600,000,000 cubic feet of gas.

15 Named for Attack On Youth by Floggers

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 9. (AP) Warrants charging 15 or more Jefferson and Blount county residents with being members of a masked and hooded band that flogged Jeff Galloway, 19-year-old orphan, at Oneonta June 16, were in the hands of authorities today as the result of extended investigation by county and state forces.

German Flier Claims New Climbing Record

HAMBURG, Germany, July 9. (AP)—Paul Baeumer, one of the best known German stunt fliers, claims to have established a new world's record for small flying machines, rising to 24,278 feet within one hour, 27 minutes.

CLEVELAND WILDCATS.

Four Cleveland county wildcats which are being watched with much interest, are progressing, two of them reaching interesting depths.

Mid-Continent Petroleum corporation is drilling below 4290 feet in its No. 1 Miller sw of 20-9-1e. This test is drilling with standard tools.

Galt-Brown company is standardizing at 3750 feet in its test in 7-9-1w.

Magnolia Petroleum company's test in the sw of 11-6-1y is drilling with standard tools at 3550 feet.

Wiser Oil company's test in the sw nw of 25-6-1e is cleaning out cavings at 4194 feet.

MARSHALL POOL.

In the Marshall pool of northwestern Logan county, Roxana Petroleum corporation's No. 1 McCully, sw corner ne se of 30-19-4w, flowed 2445 barrels the 24 hours ended Saturday morning. Its total depth remains the same at 3989 feet, lacking but 11 feet of being 6000 feet deep. Pipe line connections were made to the well Wednesday night by the Ozark Pipe Line company.

SPUD IN.

F. C. Baldwin, et al, spudded in Monday, their No. 30 Kennedy and associates, in the G. C. S. F. survey, Sunshine Hill, eight miles northeast of Electra. This is the first well drilled on the lease for several months. The test will be drilled with rotary tools and will be carried down to 1660 feet if oil is not found in paying quantities from the shallower sand.

MUSKOGEE COUNTY.

H. E. Williams No. 2 Sango, center east line ne nw of 17-15-17, in the Sommerville pool west of Muskogee, was making 8,000,000 feet of gas from 1080 to 1100 feet, which was bradenheaded, and the test drilled on to the sand 1437 to 1444 feet, and well is now making 5,856,000 feet of gas daily, with a rock pressure of 230 pounds.

GRAYCOUNTY.

Amos and others No. 1 Crews, new corner of section 9, block 25, H. and G. N. survey, Gray county, of the Texas Panhadle, had a slight show of oil in granite wash at 2625 feet, and had another slight showing of oil at 2700 feet. It is now drilling at 2752 feet, in what appears to be granite wash.

R. R. Clark, Charles Smith et al, all of "Deep sand" fame in the oil annals, who were so well known in the Sunshine Hill community during the summer of 1926 are again drilling, this time at the outer edge of their famous pool.

EASTLAND COUNTY.

McLester and others No. 2 Thorp, J. R. Stubblefield survey, in Eastland county, Texas, topped the pay at 3680 feet, where it is making 3,000,000 feet of gas daily, and made 20 barrels of oil per hour. This is in the Ransower pool.

CARSON COUNTY.

Marland Oil company's No. 4 Jordan, ne corner se ne of section 93, block 4, I. and G. N. survey, Carson county, Texas, made 222 barrels of oil from a lime formation 3144 to 3153 feet. Total depth of 3193 feet.

GRAY COUNTY.

Empire Gas and Fuel company's No. 1, Cubine, in section 36, block 25, H. and G. N. survey, Gray county, topped the granite wash at 2715 feet, is now drilling at 2815 feet, and bailing 15 barrels of oil per day.

Sanford-Paramount Area Enigma to Oil Operators

The Sanford-Paramount area near the town of Sanford, in southwestern Hutchinson county has proved an enigma to operators.

Early in 1927 the Paramount Oil corporation completed No. 1 Sanford, in section 82, block 46, of H. and T. C. survey, for a good oil well. It constantly increased until it was making 7500 barrels a day. Many tests started near it, but all ran into the big gas and difficulty after difficulty followed. Several bad fires have taken place there and operators are discouraged over the area.

Already there are some failures in the pool. The Paramount's No. 2 on the north side of the pool, is a failure, and due north of it the Phillips Petroleum company's No. 1, McMillen-Sanford, is a large gasser at 2765 feet. It made 60,000,000 feet and caught on fire.

DECREASE IN OKLAHOMA OIL

Production Falls Off 7187 Barrels

Oklahoma's new production for the past week totalled 46,030 barrels daily, which is a decrease of 7187 barrels as compared with the flush output for the previous week.

The Seminole field's new output for the week just ended totalled 41,145 barrels daily compared with 43,207 barrels for the preceding week. There were 29 new wells completed in Seminole county during the week, a gain of 10 over the previous week.

Pottawatomie county was second in new production, with 3195 barrels daily, and Creek county was third with 610 barrels. Grady county with 385 barrels was fourth followed by Kay county which had 325 barrels new output. Carter county had 285 barrels, Osage 60 barrels, and Stephens county last with but 25 barrels.

The state's new gas output totalled 214,000,000 feet daily, 125,000,000 of which was in Grady county; the balance divided between Creek, Kay, Muskogee, Pontotoc and Pottawatomie, the latter county having 21,000,000 feet.

Kansas had 785 barrels new oil production, Marion county leading with 500 barrels. Cowley county had 100 barrels, Russell 80 barrels, and Greenwood was next with 70 barrels. Butler county had 25 and Elk 10 barrels.

There was a total of 10,225,000 new gas in Kansas, 7,225,000 of which was in Cowley county and the balance of 3,000,000 feet in Greenwood county.

McMan and Marland Spud in Pecos Joint Test

SAN ANGELO, July 9.—A joint test was spudded on the Pecos county ranch owned by Ira G. Yates Wednesday by the McMan Oil company and the Marland Oil company. It is 330 feet north and west of the northeast corner of section 36, block 194, G. C. & S. F. Ry. Co. survey.

The test is about three and three-fourths miles from the Yates discovery well, which has been pouring liquid gold into the bank for the veteran West Texas cattleman. The test is on a narrow strip of land extending east and west that borders sections 34, 35, 36 and 37 on the north and sections 101, 102, 103, and 104 on the south.

The chief geologist of the McMan Oil company was to arrive in San Angelo this week from Oklahoma. He is G. C. Potter of Tulsa, who will visit the San Angelo offices of the McMan Oil company and make an inspection tour of that company's property in the oil fields, including a visit to the well spudded this week.

Shallow Production In Hale Attracts Attention

While the discovery will of the L. L. Donnell Petroleum Co., No. 1, Mullican, in section 21, block B, of R. M. Thompson survey, in Hale county, is figured as but good for 5 barrels from 407 to 423 feet, oil men are inclined to think that a shallow pool exists there. Much drilling is forecast, even with the oil situation upset as it is today.

E. C. Hofstra of Tulsa, head of the Donnell company is starting No. 2 Mullican, in section 25, north and west of the first test. He figures that when the No. 1 is tubed and put on the pump it may do as much as 25 barrels daily. Hofstra plans a test near Tulia, in Swisher county, due north of Hale county.

TEN DEAD

Mysterious Gas and Oil Fires Fatal in Panhandle

AMARILLO, July 9.—Ten lives have been lost in so-called mysterious gas and oil fires in the Panhandle oil field this summer.

The mystery element is because no accurate explanation is available as to the origin of the conflagration that claimed heavy toll of lives and property, and added extra expense to the usual heavy cost of completing a well in certain areas of the Panhandle.

Ed H. Maher, president of the Johnson Ranch Royalty company and also of the Board of City Development of Amarillo, and a practical oil and gas operator, ridicules the idea of a mysterious origin of the several bad fires.

"Use your eyes and wonder why more so-called mysterious oil fires have not occurred," he said. "If the oil field workers would use as much diligence to seeing that the ground around the rigs were kept clean and free of debris of all sorts, as they do in making holes the era of mysterious fires will be ended, or reduced to the minimum."

Magnolia Constructing Carbon Plant in Wheeler

Magnolia Petroleum company is building a carbin black plant in the southeast of the northeast of section 36, block 24, of H. and G. N. survey, in the heart of the Shamrock field of Wheeler county. It will handle residue gases from the gasoline and booster stations in that oil area.

Other carbon black plants in the Panhandle field are situated in Hutchinson and Gray counties.

Petroleum Industry Pays Tribute To Its Heroes

AMARILLO, July 9.—The idea may sound foolish to some, but as virtually every profession today seeks out and pays honor to its heros, it appears time for the petroleum industry to adopt the idea and pay honor to the scores of living heroes, men who have assisted the oil business in becoming the world's most essential industry.

Frank J. Rose, oil editor of the Trinidad Picketwire of Trinidad, Colo., in endorsing the above suggestion, proposes for a permanent niche in oildom's hall of fame, Bill Shroup, aged 30, of Branson, Las Animas county, Colorado. But allow Rose to tell the story of what Shroup did. It is an epic of the endless search for oil. Rose writes:

"Bill Shroup is only a roustabout on the crew drilling the Parker club well on the Verne Adams ranch, 10 miles east of Branson, and in 32-34-56. But Bill has absorbed all the fine tradition of the men who bring in oil wells and that is—personal risks mean nothing if the hole is to be saved.

"Bill Shroup's exploit last Saturday morning equalled in sheer courage the feats which made Tex Thornton of Amarillo famous. Blabing oil and gas wells have led Thornton into the jaws of death many times but he has never failed to conquer.

"After two months of wrestling with a bad hole, the Parker club well was cleaned out and straightened up. The hoodoo still prevailed when the big 24-inch bit snapped the cable and landed in the bottom of the hole at 227 feet.

"Every fishing tool on the location was used withgut picking up the bit and it appeared then that perhaps the only alternative was to abandon the hole and skid the rig.

"Bill Shroup volunteered for the job. In fact he begged to be allowed to do it.

"His insistance finally prevailed and he was lowered carefully through the 24-inch hole at the end of a sand line, carrying with him a heavy log chain. Pumps were run at capacity, but even so the water was up to Shroup's shoulders. He succeeded in working through cave-ins and fallen rock and lashed the log chain to the bit. It required 30 minutes of hard, dangerous work before the cable was hooked on and the bit brought to the surface."

Thornton, Fire Fighting King

Tex Thornton, king of fire fighters, who lives at Amarillo and has gained a nation-wide reputation for his daring in extinguishing oil well fires. The above pictures showing Tex in his asbestos suit, in which he fights fires, and before donning the suit, were issued by Editors Feature Service of Cleveland, one of the largest news syndicates in the world.

INVESTIGATE DERRICK FALLS

Ladders Object of Study By Safety Experts

During the past few years the derrick ladder has been the object of much study by those interested in the safety of oil workers, the United States Bureau of Mines points out. This interest was stimulated when complications of accident statistics showed that many of the accidents in the oil fields were falls from derrick ladders. The importance of good derrick ladders can not be emphasized too strongly. Poor ladders are worse than none at all, for a ladder, regardless of its condition, invites a workman to use it when he must climb a derrick. Ladders with loose or missing rungs, split stringers, or stringers insecurely fastened to the derrick, have no place in industry. Climbing derrick ladders is hazardous at best. Some men find it difficult to climb even good ladders to unaccustomed heights and fail because they lack confidence and a feeling of security when at any great distance above the ground. When experienced climbers fall, it is usually because they become careless or overconfident or because the ladders are in poor condition. A man should always make sure that a ladder is safe before using it.

Derrick ladders should extend from the floor to the crown of the derrick. When ladder sections are offset, it is necessary for safety to build railed platforms or landing places between the offset sections.

The frequent practice of running the circulating pipe up the center of the derrick ladder can not be indorsed. At the lower end, the circulating pipe is usually 6 to 8 inches in front of the ladders, and a person climbing the ladder has to straddle the pipe. Often, too, the top of the pipe leans to one side of the ladder and a man has difficulty in getting a foothold on that side. In many ladders the rung at the top of the pipe is cut out. Many men have been killed by falls from derrick ladders, and many more have been injured, some of them permanently. Theer is a good reason for placing the circulating pipe in the center of the side of the derrick, because the pumps are hooked up in pairs; but there is no reason for placing the lower section of the ladder in the exact center of the side of the derrick; it could just as easily be 1 or 2 feet to one side, and thus eliminate a hazard that is common in the oil fields.

GAS HAZARDS

Fire Protection Association Against Gas Use

The National Fire Protection association and the American Petroleum Institute are circulating a folder dealing with the hazards of using gasoline for dry-cleaning in the home. The joint effort is a part of the educational program of both organizations.

Facts set forth show that—

Eight hundred women lost their lives by using gasoline in home-cleaning.

Gasoline gives off 130 times its bulk in gas, and when vaporized will convert 1560 times its volume in air into an explosive mixture that will ignite with a spark. The rubbing together of silks or cloth causes a spark.

Carbon tetrachloride is suggested as a safe substitute for gasoline in home dry cleaning work.

PANHANDLE OIL BOOK SUBJECT

Geologist Cites Progress Of Section in 1926

The most notable and important oil development in Texas during 1926 took place in the Panhandle division, according to R. B. Whitehead of Dallas, chief geologist of the Atlantic Oil Producing company, in "Petroleum Development and Technology in 1926," published by the petroleum division of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

He shows that a total of 126,774,952 barrels of crude oil was produced in Texas, exclusive of Gluf coast district, in 1926. There were 46 new oil pools discovered in the year, and the production represented an increase of approximately 7,500,000 barrels over the same area for 1925, and of 18,500,000 for 1924.

The rank and production in million of barrels for 1926, is given by Mr. Whitehead as follows:

Field	Output (Barrels)
Panhandle	24,256,556
Reagan	12,827,260
Archer	11,662,733
Corsicana-Powell	10,216,178

Scurry county	15,534

In 1925 the Panhandle was in eighteenth place with a total of 1,240,375 barrels.

Mr. Whitehead showed that 7550 wells were completed, of which 4704, or 62.3 per cent was oil oil wells; 224, or nearly 4 per cent, were gas wells, and 2602, or 34 per cent were failures.

He made the forecast that West Texas would lead in 1927, and his picture is materializing. In 1926 this area maintained a monthly production of 1,378,696 barrels from 333 wells, or a daily average of 135.6 barrels per well.

The Panhandle in 1926 averaged 2,020,880 barrels a month from 483 wells, a daily average of 136.1 per well. As to its future, he said:

"The potentialities of the present Panhandle area are enormous. Prophecies have been made relative to the reserve oil now available from the present proven areas and the range of these estimates vary from 800,000,000 to 1,000,000,000 barrels."

More buildings were started in Canada in the first four months of this year than in the same period in the past seven years.

After two years of at least partial idleness, workers in linen mills of northern Ireland are being kept busy nearly all of the time.

PAN WILDCATS HOLD INTEREST

Production Continues To Slowly Decline

AMARILLO, July 9.—Wildcats scattered over the Panhandle field continue to hold the chief interest in the great plains oil territory.

With producers not attempting to swell production, the daily output of the Panhandle continues to slowly decline. The past fiscal week it averaged 120,570 barrels a day, a net loss of 481 barrels a day over the previous week.

Only eight completions were recorded, with an initial production of 2465 barrels, and this let-up also added to the net loss.

The Panhandle field summary follows:

Area	Daily Out'p't	Total Wells	New Wells	New Outp't	Well Avg.

Hot Areas Scattered

Gray county still leads the Panhandle in important drilling activity, many of them being extensioners, but otherwise the field reports show keenest interest manifest in isolated wildcats.

A. D. Morton in No. 1 Reeder, in section 191, block 3T, of T. & N. O. near Dumas, in Moore county, a semi-completion, is the most closely watched. It is to be shot after plugging back from 3424 1-2 feet, to shut off water. In the meanwhile it is averaging 100 barrels a day.

Southeast of it, the Moore County Oil company in No. 1 Sneed, in section 30, block 6T, of T. & N. O. survey, is starting up after being shut down at 2712 feet for a new band wheel. It found the gas high, and should find more from 2750 to 2760 feet, and officers of the firm believe it has an excellent chance of picking up production shortly.

Near Channing, in southeastern Hartley county, the Deep Creek Oil company and others No. 1 Lyman Balfour, in section 9, block 2, of G. & M. survey, is approaching an interesting depth. It had from 13,000,000 to 28,000,000 feet of gas from 3125 to 3185 feet, and is now below 3285 feet, and preparing to case off the gas with the 6 5-8-inch pipe and proceed ahead. It would open a big area if it found oil.

Dallam county has three very interesting wildcats now, due to the Oklahoma Panhandle activity, and the talk of a trend from the Texas Panhandle to a connection with the Sooner area.

Marland Oil company is starting up the Whitney, Crosbie and Grant No. 1 Capitol syndicate, in section 26, block 18, C. S. S. lands, after it had been shut down for months at 780 feet. It had gone through the Triassic horizon and was believed to have shut down in the Permian.

James and others are trying to clean up old fishing job at No. 1 Ree, in section 9, block 47 1-2, of H. & T. C. survey, north of Dalhart. Total depth is still 2870 feet.

Wood & Wood and Smith & Downey in No. 1 Capital syndicate, in section 19, block 17, of C. S. S. lands, was below 3121 feet at last reports. It is located on a regional high, that crosses into Oklahoma.

McIlroy Pool

The hope that the McIlroy pool of southeastern Hutchinson county may be extended into northern Carson county, received a dampening when S. D. and W. W. McIlroy in No. 1 Cockrell, in section 4, block B3, of D. S. & E. survey, got pay from 2980 to 3032 feet for 1000 barrels of oil and 450 barrels of water.

Cockrell-McIlroy Oil company No. 3-B Cockrell, in section 1, was shut down at 3068 feet, with but a small show of oil and no water. Elevation there was 3022 feet.

Due west, the Texas company in No. 1 Cockrell, in section 1, block Y, of M. & C. survey, was swabbing and flowing 75 barrels daily after cleaning out when shot from 2910 to 2945 feet. Total depth was 2995 feet. This well made only 200 feet of oil natural.

Gray County Area

An element of mystery has been added to the test of the St. Clair Petroleum company at No. 1 Crews, in section 9, block 25, H. & G. N. survey, northeast of Alanreed, in southeastern Gray county, by the building of a fence around it. It had a slight show of oil from 2620 to 2635 feet, and has had other showings since. The oil is black and appears to be inert. It also is making gas from the 2210-foot level.

Geologically the St. Clair well has been regarded as too far south of the granite ridge running from southeast to northwest through the Panhandle, but as the M. M. Travis well in section 40, north of McLean upset the below sea level theory, maybe St. Clair will bust up the idea that no oil will be found south of the granite ridge.

SCHOOLS HERE WIN PRAISE

Farm Magazine Tells Of Bryant and Wichita

In the June 11 issue of Farm and Ranch, leading agricultural periodical in the southwest, Burl Bryant, Wichita county superintendent of schools, was the subject of an article under the heading, "Educating the Children at Home," written by Una Pierce Kilpatrick, staff writer for the publication. The story follows:

It is with justifiable pride that residents point out the country schools of Wichita county, Texas, to interested visitors. It is with pleasure that these visitors note the excellence of the country schools and the completeness of their equipment. These schools have kept pace with the advances which the county has made in other lines.

School Record

According to Supt. Burl Bryant, whose seven years of able leadership have accomplished so much for the Wichita county schools, there were, in 1921, 34 rural schools. This number has been reduced to 20.

Mr. Bryant says: "There are now four accredited high schools in the rural districts of the county. Three of them are classified as four-year high schools. The three-year high school expects to become a four-year high school next year. In districts that do not maintain high schools, the tuition of pupils is paid to high schools, and in three such districts trucks are used to furnish transportation to high schools. Sixteen trucks were used in the county this year to transport children."

Most of the schools are spacious and splendid. Many attractive brick buildings surrounded by ample grounds are to be found. Thirteen districts have either new buildings or added to their old ones in the past five years. Three of these buildings cost more than $40,000 each. Four of these schools have auditoriums and gymnasiums to be used not only by the pupils of the schools but by the people of the communities for their meetings. Nine communities have built teacherages in the past five years, thus solving one of the greatest problems concerned with the holding of good teachers in the communities. Home economics is taught in Valley View, Ciara and Cashion schools. Next year Valley View will introduce vocational agriculture.

Only one school in the county has as low as a seven-months term. Fifteen of the schools have nine-months terms; all others have eight months. The lengthened school terms, good buildings, and modern equipment have drawn good teachers to Wichita county.

Want the Best

Mr. Bryant thus expresses the needs of the schools: "The rural schools of the county want the best teachers to be found. They are not satisfied just to take teachers who are looking for a little experience. They want teachers of character who have been trained. It has not been many years since half the teachers in the county were holders of second-grade certificates. Today all except one hold first-class certificates. All have had some college work; several hold degrees. The average time attended college is two years."

Examples of Progress

Located in the heart of the irrigated district is Valley View, one of the best examples of the progress of the schools in the county. In 1918, two small districts were consolidated. Four years ago this consolidated district employed three teachers. Due to the great increase of population because of the irrigation project, this district now has 413 scholastics and employs 11 teachers. In 1926 it erected a modern brick building. Most of these children live some distance from school, so the school trucks are used to transport them. Recently this school was classified by the state department of education as a four-year high school.

Ciara school is also in a consolidated district being composed of four or five smaller districts. It now has 249 scholastics, employs nine teachers, and has a four-year high school.

In 1927 Cashion and Cooper districts were consolidated. This will give the district over 200 scholastics. It now has six teachers in one school and one teacher in the other. Next year this school will have nine teachers. The Cashion school was recently classified in a three-year high school. It expects in another year to become a four-year high school.

Pleasant Valley is an example of the modern building for the smaller school. It is a three-room brick building, which was constructed in 1926.

Five years ago five schools consolidated to form the Fairview independent district. This district now has a first-class high school with 18 units of affiliation. Its building is one of which many town schools would be proud.

Equipment Is Sufficient

In this county the playground equipment is equal in all respects to that of most city schools. The children of the rural schools do not "stand around" at recess. The swings, horizontal bars, see-saws, volley balls, and such play material not only give the boys and girls a chance for wholesome exercise, but they help to develop the spirit of "give and take" which will make them better citizens of their communities. They will be good sports; they will be able to win or lose in the game of life without whining; they will be able to get along with their neighbors.

The notable progress of the schools of this county furnishes inspiration to others. Wichita county is giving all the children of all her people the right of an education at home.

Empire Gas and Oil Hits Pay in Carson

AMARILLO, July 9.—Empire Gas and Fuel company in No. A-4 Magnolia, in section 91, block 4, of I. and G. N. survey, in the Roxana-Bryan pool of northern Carson county, had a pay from 3135 to 3192 feet, and it was shot with 80 quarts, making 570 barrels the first 14 hours thereafter.

Vitek Oil corporation has shot No. 1 Jordan-Brown, in section 113, a third time, using 70 quarts from 2915 to 3052 feet, but it did not increase the output above 40 barrels a day.

Officers and Merchants Confer on "Hot" Checks

A discussion of the ways and means of relieving the "hot" check situation was held by a committee meeting of the Retail Merchants association Saturday morning at the City National bank, with W. H. Bailey in charge.

Suggestions by the merchants present were given during the round table discussion and it was agreed to bring these before the regular meeting of the association Thursday night for direct action.

County Attorney Wayne Somerville explained the handling of bad checks in the hands of county authorities when presented for collection. This suggestion was made by him for all merchants to refuse checks from out-of-the-county banks or out-of-the-state banks.

W. S. Abbott, W. G. Bralley, Harry Gray and a number of merchants expressed their agreement on the fact that the situation might be curtailed if a complete list of names of bad check givers was kept by each merchant, with the adherence in refusing to accept their checks, if others were presented. This plan will be taken up at the Thursday night meeting, it was stated.

Bank Clearings For Week Total $2,792,435

Bank clearings for the past week in Wichita Falls totaled $2,792,435.20, according to a statement issued by the Wichita Falls Clearing House association Saturday. Receipts for Tuesday and Wednesday were unusually heavy due to the Monday holiday.

Clearings for the week ending at the same period in 1926 amounted to $3,561,054.77, records show.

The clearing house report follows:

Monday	Holiday
Tuesday	$730,143.93
Wednesday	745,816.00
Thursday	536,797.77
Friday	430,714.92
Saturday	348,962.53
Total	$2,792,435.20

Work Progressing Rapidly On Improvements to Saul's Building

With concrete foundations for the two-passenger elevators laid, work on the improvements and enlarging at Saul's store is going ahead rapidly.

The second floor of the Saul's building, formerly used for storage for merchandise has been completely cleared and a new floor laid. This entire floor will be occupied by an improved and enlarged department of women's and children's ready-to-wear and millinery on its completion late in the summer. Equipment and display cases of the newest types have already been ordered and will do much to make shopping in Saul's ready-to-wear department a pleasure.

The elevators are being installed at the back of the main floor, next to the entrance to Saul's "bargain annex" from the main store. The McCall patterns department has been moved into the piece goods department to make room for the construction work.

A Lamsen change carrier system recently installed has been put in operation this week and has speeded up service more than ever. The system of having packages wrapped quickly at desks in each department has been retained.

The work of building the enlarged and greater store has in no way hindered regular trade, for provisions have been made for plenty of room in every department affected. An extension to the main floor balcony provides plenty of room for customers in the balcony ready-to-wear department.

WICHITA FALLS, TEXAS, SUNDAY, JULY 10, 1927.

Song Leader Tells How Magic Of Music Takes Crowd Away From Cares

"Get people to sing and you see the lines of worry drop off—you see a smile take the place of a frown—you see them forget themselves and where they are—and you feel a spirit of friendliness creep in that nothing creates so well as music."

In that sentence, Alva Willgus, known as "the man with the big singing smile" and Wichita Falls' community song leader, tells his first and foremost reason for believing that community singing has an effect and is worth all the work and enthusiasm he gives to it. And Alva Willgus ought to be the man to know, for he has led over eight thousand people in the community sing-songs at city parks this summer, and will lead several thousand more before the summer ends.

There are many reasons and many interesting stories this experienced leader of crowds in song could tell of why we should sing, and the point of it all, for him, focuses on the crowd itself.

Watching the Crowd

"There is nothing so intensely interesting as crowd psychology, for you can never tell what is going to happen next," he said.

"The whole success of a sing-song, as of any movement where many persons of varying moods and temperaments are involved, depends perhaps on one little detail. A song leader can rouse the animosity of his audience with one gesture—one false move—or he can get them into the spirit of the song and that spontaneity that is the whole secret of his success."

When asked what singing does to a crowd, Mr. Willgus gave an answer that seems to explain his knowledge and success with groups of people, for in the same way he makes an appeal to each one in his audience, his reply has a personal significance for all.

"You see, we all have about all the troubles we can stand. No matter who it is, I believe there are troubles unknown to anyone else that can be left behind and lost by singing. And when the crowd sings, it is this forgetting care and worry, opening the way to a better spirit of fellowship that is the real thing that happens.

Forget Troubles In Song

"Music will do two things. First, it brings back the memories that surround some other hearing of the song, and second, it throws the singer into the spirit of the song. You can't really sing without feeling the song, and no song-leader can get a crowd to sing who doesn't sing that way and really love doing it," he said.

Mr. Willgus declared that hundreds who never get a chance to sing except in church, and many not even there, take an integrest in attending the sing-songs because they find there an outlet for the impulse and enjoy the "thawing out" that is effected. He told of one man's coming to him after one of the affairs asking if he might "bring his fiddle and play with him."

Mr. Willgus granted permission immediately, and the man has not missed a time since, playing each song with unmistakable pleasure. And the man told the leader that he had not touched his fiddle for years, but just couldn't help wanting to when he heard such music!

That there is a definite technique to leading hundreds of people, or even a mere dozen, in a group of songs, Mr. Willgus readily admits. In a little booklet on military singing which he helped compile as a Y. W. C. A. song leader overseas and in the United States during the war, Mr. Willgus has placed the two main requirements as first, to keep the singers together and properly interpret the song, and second, to enthuse the singers so that they will want to sing and will do their best.

Further on, there is a more intimate requirement, which all who have seen him will at once agree that Wichita Falls' song leader possesses in rich measure—and that is "the smile." In the pamphlet there is the statement: "A good smile is more contagious than army measles. Almost anyone with a tolerably good voice, a strong sense of rhythm and a real smile can be developed into a song leader—but the greatest of these is the smile."

The smile of Alva Willgus has been given to thousands of people since the time when he was a kid—his smile and his singing. Following conservatory courses in Baker university at Baldwin, Kan., Moody Institute and the Chicago Musical college, he entered evangelistic work, singing with some of the most prominent evangelists in the United States. During the war he kept singing, was song leader for the southern department of the Y. M. C. A., comprised of six states, at Camp Travis, and then sang his way overseas.

Keeps Singing

Three years ago he came to Wichita Falls as business manager and choir director of the First Presbyterian church, and started the community singing which has proven such a success. At clubs, conventions and meetings of all sorts Mr. Willgus is in demand as the one to "break the ice," and many statements are heard on all sides concerning the palpable influence of this group singing.

"Music expresses every emotion of the soul," he declared, and it is bound up with the greatest events of every man's life. We sing when we are married, there is music when we die; there is the song for every occasion, and I believe that

Vanderbilt Scion Reveals 'Inside' Effort To Force Sister To Wed British Nobleman For His Title

BY CORNELIUS VANDERBILT JR.

(Copyright 1927, By Universal Service, Inc. and N. Y. Daily Mirror)

NEW YORK, July 9.—The elopement of my sister, Grace Vanderbilt and Henry G. Davis this other day may have been rather startling to those who follow the fortunes of so-called society people. Many were at loss to understand the circumstances which caused such a hasty marriage between two persons more or less in the public eye.

Much has been said in the public press about the fast lives that young girls of wealth lead. This is true of some sets. But many girls are brought up almost as strictly as a Hindu or Persian woman. They are never allowed anywhere without a chaperone, and not just a chaperone in name but one in fact. They are under surveillance, day and night. They can hardly say a word or make a gesture that their mothers do not find out about. Freedom of speech and freedom of movement is unknown to them. In the happy springtime of their lives, their souls and minds are as curbed and cramped as a Chinese woman's feet by her tiny shoes.

Regulated Life.

Everything about a society girl's life is regulated in order that she may make what the older women term "a proper marriage," one that will fortify and enhance, if possible, her family prestige. Everything else about the girl's life is subordinated to this marriage. There is a feeling among certain society members that the only desirable alliances for their daughters are with titled foreigners, particularly the British. And the very greatest happiness that several New York women can conceive of is to have their daughter wed to one of the princes of the English royal blood.

The amount of campaigning and planning that they will do to achieve this end is almost inconceivable, unbelievable. This certain set of older women think that all young Americans are common and vulgar and that the only real gentlemen are the foreigners of a certain breeding. Why they should adopt such an attiude is hard to understand, when they are of pure American blood themselves, and all their money and position come from American sources. They are really to be held in more contempt than the expatriates who are frank enough to say that they live abroad because they dislike America.

They Hold Silence.

But these certain ones who so despise Americans and American ways would never dare say so publicly. They only open up their hearts when they are surrounded by a group of intimate friends. This partly explains the troubles some of these poor girls have and how difficult it is for them to marry someone whom they really love. All foreigners more or less, in their innermost hearts, despise, or at least adopt a supercilious attitude toward American women. The main reason they marry them is for the material advantage to be gained. God help the poor American girl of sensitive nature who is married to one of these dissipated foreign noblemen! Her life is a continuous source of soul-pricks.

I have seen too many of these international-misalliances to have any false optimism about them. American girls are happiest with American men.

Snobbish Parents.

I am betraying no secrets or confidences when I mention the fact that certain misguided members of my family made strenuous efforts for years to arrange and force my sister despite her objections into a marriage with an Englishman of high rank. When she stubbornly turned down all the Britishers who were proposed she was asked what continental man she cared for. When she persisted in her intention to marry an American she was told that this was impossible, that there were no Americans at her age who were good enough for her. Besides, all

W. M. U. Convention At Graham Proves A Successful Meeting

Graham, Texas, was the setting last Thursday for the W. M. U. association meeting of organizations from the Baptist churches in Texas cities, with Mrs. Homer McGregor representing the First Baptist church here. She was accompanied by Miss Alm Lee Joiner, who represented Baylor college.

Around 75 delegates attended the meeting, Mrs. McGregor reported, with an enthusiastic business session and discussion of plans for the coming year. Plans were made to take care of the Baylor endowment fund and to participate in the Ruby jubilee to be held in May, 1929, which will be the 40th anniversary of the W. M. U. society. The association's aim for the period of time elapsing until then is an additional membership of 40,000 new members with an increase of 40 per cent in the number of societies and an increase of $4,000,000 in cash.

Mrs. J. C. Jones, wife of the First Baptist pastor in Graham, succeeds Mrs. Fox Clark of San Antonio as president.

A district encampment was also planned to be held in August at Aliasville, Texas.

Club Leaders Plan Fall Work As New Building Of Forum Is Completed

BY RUTH MORRISON

Women weary from standing—rooms cluttered with chairs—inadequate space for the business before the forum—each time a different place for their gatherings—such was the condition existing in the Woman's Forum of Wichita Falls from the time of its organization in 125 through the spring of 1927. Then, through unfaltering confidence and desire and hard work for a club house that they might truly call their own, a beautiful structure of Italian architecture gradually became a realization and this past week has seen the completion of the Woman's Forum club house in the Country Club estates.

Spacious grounds, ideal club rooms, ample accommodations for a meeting of five or six hundred women which does not quite cover the present membership of this organization, luxury and comfort—all this is embodied in the home of the forum. It will be, in reality, a "home." Within its walls, plans and improvements for Wichita Falls will be created by the homemakers of the city, united in one movement to bring something fine produce intellectual and moral good for the city, individually and as a whole.

Organized in 1925.

The Woman's Forum was organized by Mrs. Ola Hamlin in January, 1925, the charter membership including 174. During the second year, the membership list in the year book was increased to around 635. Departments have been segregated, until now there are group meetings for those interested most in art, civics, drama, health and the home, literature, music and writing or journalism.

It was a not unusual occurrence for these groups to meet in either private home, the Y. W. C. A. club rooms, or any meeting space that could be obtained. Nothing sufficed its needs as the forum grew. Its entertainments were staged in either a local club, hotel or the Junior College auditorium, whichever proved available. And this taxed both public space and the ambitions of the club members.

Gift of Site.

Then, the first step in the foundation of a club-house was laid with the magnificent gift of a beautiful site in the Country club estates, given by W. B. Hamilton and N. H. Martin. It was a gratifying gift. Undying effort and profitable results have become material in the building of a club house.

The club house will offer ample auditorium room for all attractions brought by the forum. Complete dressing rooms and stage equipment have been provided. The foyer library, the committee room the banquet room and kitchen are located on the first floor. Upstairs are the housekeeper's rooms, and three large club rooms. The entire interior decoration will carry out the Italian architecture of the building and the furnishings will harmonize throughout. A stippled tan will be carried out in the wall finishing. Wiring of the rooms is being completed and it is planned to have a formal opening early in the fall.

Much to the gratification of the forum, culinary equipment given by local firms so far has included a $350 refrigerator from the Peoples' Ice company and a gas range from the Maxwell Hardware company. Accommodations for dining service are estimated at around 200 and plans for private parties and informal luncheons are being made. An excellent catering service is being engaged for use after the opening. Valuation of the building and grounds will be around $90,000 and will be a source of just pride for the forum members as well as the city.

Good Programs.

Some of the finest intellectual attractions of the season were brought here last year by the Women's Forum. Charles Brandon Booth of New York, famed lecturer appeared in October; Ada Ward, English lecturer, was booked the following month and will be remembered as one of the most interesting speakers of the year. In December the Russian Symphonic choir was brought here and in the spring Rebecca W. Smith of the English department of T. C. U. talked on "Texas Legends."

It is hoped that the coming year will be marked with a membership of 1000. Non-resident affiliations, heretofore totalling around 25, are expected to increase also. Initiation fees, which have been $3 will be raised to $10 in October and membership dues will remain at $5.

Officers who have served loyally during the past year were Mrs. Ola Hamlin, president; Mrs. Ben G. Oneal, first vice president; Mrs. A. R. Bleakley, second vice president; Mrs. Bert Bean, third vice president; Mrs. T. M. Conrey, recording secretary, Mrs. Claude Woods, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Hubert Harrison, treasurer; Mrs. C. C. Cabiness, auditor; Mrs. Orville Bullington, parliamentarian; Mrs. F. P. Langford, club house chairman; Mrs. G. D. Anderson, affiliated club chairman, and Mrs. Fred Barron, extension chairman.

The year 1927 will be under the leadership of Mrs. Ben G. Oneal as president; Mrs. Ola Hamlin, first vice president; Mrs. A. R. Bleakley, second vice president; Mrs. W. P. Bolding, third vice president; Mrs. C. P. Burton, treasurer; Mrs. Hubert Harrison, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. M. Conrey, recording secretary; Mrs. G. L. Shapard, auditor; Mrs. P. P. Langford, club house chairman; Mrs. G. D. Anderson, affiliated club chairman; Mrs. Fred Barron, extension chairman, and Mrs. Carrie Joline, financial chairman.

Camp Fire Group Plans Ceremonial

Temskatawa Camp Fire group, of which Miss Edith Crump is guardian, met Thursday afternoon at headquarters with an interesting afternoon's work of symbol stencelling.

Plans for a ceremonial the first Thursday in August were made, when six girls will make their rank. Interest in camp fire work is evidenced by the regular attendance and unceasing activities of the members, it is reported.

Those present at the meeting were Misses Edith Long, Eunice Sommerville, Olive Humphrey, Imogene Kroeger, Nadine Loofbourrow, Alma Edith Naylor, Mildred Kent. Two new members taken in were Eugenia Edgar and Aprilla Moore and Ernestine Wilkerson was introduced as a prospective member.

The next meeting of the Temskatawa group will be devoted to work on bags for U. S. soldiers in foreign lands, which will be distributed through the Red Cross.

Flow of Gold Coins Greets Sale of Gallery of World-Famous Paintings

By Universal Service.

LONDON, July 9.—Art sales to the golden tune of $10,000 a minute for more than two hours was the classic opera staged at Christies', this afternoon at the greatest art sale of the season.

In a little less than one hour, 30 pictures from the wonderful collection of the late James Ross, brought from Montreal for the auction here, were sold for $680,055.

Rembrandt's famous portrait of Admiral Tromp set the record for the sale, realizing $157,500.

The day's total was only a little short of one million dollars, running $962,085.

Turner's Italian scene, Zvenice: the Dogana and salute, ran Rembrandt's portrait a close second for the record, bringing $152,250.

Sharp duels occurred during the bidding between the English firm of Agnew, and the American firm of Knoedler, but late in the afternoon the Britishers held a wide margin, with purchases aggregating $450,000, while the American concern's purchases were only $170,000.

The salesroom was crowded before the sale began by many representatives of the leading art firms in London, the continent and the United States. Owing to the enormous crowds, some of these had to be contented with positions near the jammed doorways. Some could not even see the pictures, but many bids of 50 and 75,000 dollars came from outside the sales hall.

A gretat thrill went through the crowd when Rembrandt's tromp was put on the stand for display, and there was a bid immediately of $50,000. Big dealers quickly leaped to the bidding, and the price soared by $5000 jumps. Only a little more than a minute was taken for the tromp sale, and there was a great outburst of applause when the picture went for the final figure of $157,500 to Agnew's.

Shortly after the same concern carried off Reynold's portrait of the youthful lady, Ann Fitzpatrick, for $97,125. Agnew also fought with the American firm over Turner's "Venice," and won.

There was a gasp of dismay in the salesroom when the bidding on a Turner started at $100,000, going up by five and ten thousand dollar jumps to $152,250. This is the highest price ever paid for a small Turner in the English auction rooms. Less than 30 years ago, this picture was bought by Ross of Montreal for $43,000.

Knoedler, purchased, among others, Romney's portrait of Lady Sullivan for $89,250, Franz Hals' portrait of a man in a black coat, with a big lawn collar, for $29,400, Raeburn's portrait of Miss Betsy Hume for $27,300, Romney's Miss Catherine Chichester for $21,600.

Other notable purchases included Patterson's purchase of Turner's seascape of battleships putting out to sea for $44,625, and Legatt's purchase of Romney's portrait of Lindy Clifford for $23,100.

everything in a community that ever went over big, went over with singing."

And for those from Missouri who want to see the thing done, there will be another sing-song at Bellevue park next Tuesday night starting just at dusk. If you don't know the songs, they are thrown on a screen—and there in the light of the slide machine will be Willgus and his smile, two things that have done no little toward cementing a spirit of true fellowship in the city of Wichita Falls!

Flying Boats Tour Orient

British Royal Aviators Pilot Aircraft

By Universal Service.

LONDON, July 9.—Four large twin-engined R. A. F. flying boats will begin in October or November the most ambitious formation flight yet planned—a journey of 23,000 miles, from England to the east, including the first air tour of the Indian coast and a complete circuit of Australia.

The expedition will be led by Wing-Commander T. R. Cave-Browne-Cave, with Squadron Leader G. E. Livock, leader of the flight of two flying boats which toured the Mediterrananean last year, second in command.

The route to be followed to Karachi, India, where the expedition will remain for a few weeks, is:

Felixetowe, down English channel, along west coast of France to Bordeaux by way of the Garonne valley to Marseilles, through Mediterranean to Athens, Alexandria, Bagbad, (flying along the river valleys), Persian gulf, Karachi.

Round Australia.

The first air tour in history of the Indian coast will be made by way of Colombo, Ceylon, and up the east coast to Madras and Calcutta. Thence the machines will fly to Rangoon and Singapore, the air base for the east, where the craft will be permanently stationed.

Australia will be reached by way of the Dutch East Indies, touching the Australian coast at Port Darwin. The circuit of the continent will be made in the anti-clockwise sense—Perth, Albany, across the Great Australian Bight to Adelaide, Melburne, Sydney, Brisbane, Rockampton, Cape York Peninsula, Gulf of Carpentaria, Fort Darwin. The fleet will then fly back to Singapore, whence a number of other long distance air cruises will be begun.

The projected flight covers a total mileage of nearly 23,000.

Weight Saving.

Each of the four air boats will carry a crew of four. They will be equipped with sleeping accommodations and sufficient food will be taken on board to make the fleet self-supporting for considerable periods should the need arise.

The craft chosen for the flight are Supermarine "Southampton" boats similar to those now in general use by the R. A. F., but with a hull of metal construction, which is 500 pounds lighter than a wooden hull, and has the further advantage of not absorbing water. They are driven by two 500 horsepower Napier "Lion" engines, and cruise with full load at nearly 100 miles an hour.

Waco Man Becomes "Hole-in-One" Golfer

WACO, July 9. (AP)—D. E. McGlasson of Waco, has become a member of the "Hole-in-One" club. Playing his ball into a rather high wind with a [illegible] iron, it dropped in front of the cup at the number five hole and while L. C. Lacy, W. G. Barrett and Paul Wilson, the other members of a foursome watched, it ambled slowly to the rim and dropped overboard for a singleton.

Argentinian Says His Country's Cattle Best

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Honorio Pueyrredon, Argentine ambassador to this country, on a visit in Chicago, expressed the opinion that Americans should devote more time to manufacturing than to cattle raising. He declared that Argentina cattle lands are superior to those of this country.

BISONS RAID VILLAGES.

Five bisons recently started on a raid of villages of India. In the first settlement, near Bijni, they were met by natives, armed with bow and arrow, who drove four of the intruders away. The fifth continued the tour alone. At Kakra he killed a woman working in front of her home, gored a young man and injured another who went to the victim's rescue. Continuing to Gangtat, the animal attacked a woman, seriously injuring her, and carried on his depredations until killed by four hunters.

GOAT OR HERO?

Anyhow, This Mascot Perhaps Held Down Both Roles

By Universal Service.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 9.—A lowly goat became a hero by giving its life that the crew of the disabled packet Matthew Greer, for which it had served as mascot, might eat.

The story was told here today by Capt. Joseph Perry of the Matthew Greer, which hobbled into port, towed by the coast guard cutter Marion. The cutter found the packet in great distress off Montauk Point.

The Matthew Greer had been on the seas 51 days en route from Cape Verde islands. The hull sprung a leak and the pumps were scarcely able to cope with the inrushing waters.

Four days ago the ship's rations ran out except for parched corn and coffee. As a last resort, the goat was killed. The flesh was eaten and the skin was used for repairing faulty pumps.

Vanderbilt Scion Tells The 'Inside'

young Americans, she was told, were hopelessly vulgar.

Liked Americans.

My sister had been several times attracted as any healthy, wholesome young girl would to one and another worthwhile, attractive young American, who would have made a desirable husband for any woman. She did not love any of them sufficiently, until she met Henry Davis. This took place last new year's eve, at the party given by E. B. McLean, the well known publisher, at his party in Washington.

To use a trite expression, it was a case of love at first sight. Their meeting is interesting. The hostess had asked Mr. Davis, along with several other young men, to be particularly nice to certain girls. Among the three girls that my brother-in-law was to take charge of, none of whom he had seen, was my sister.

But he did not meet her when she first came in. He saw a girl dancing with another man who was slightly under the weather from too much idulgence in a hip-flask. Wishing to rescue her from what was evidently an embarrassing situation, he cut-in, and danced with her.

Unconventional Meeting.

He told this young lady that he was supposed to look after three girls, but he hadn't found them as yet, and that he felt it would be a bore, and that he would much prefer to dance and talk with her. This girl was my sister, Grace.

As soon as it was evident that Grace was attracted by this excellent young man, much pressure was put upon her to give him up. But love always finds a way, and in spite of every obstacle they managed to see each other.

My sister kept me informed of the progress of their courtship. I was, of course, sympathetic, and did what I could to help the young couple along, because if there is any one thing that I believe in sincerely it is that persons should be allowed to love and marry whom they choose, without let or hindrance from anyone.

Hoped for Consent.

As I understand their plans, the marriage was to have taken place in late September when Mr. Davis returned from his mining trip to British Columbia. It was hoped that the consent of my family, reluctant or otherwise, could be gained by them. If it was not, they intended to marry anyway. Certain unfortunate occurrences on the family's yacht, the Atlantic, while anchored at New London during the Harvard-Yale boat races, precipitated events.

A couple of days later Mr. Davis was brave enough to appear at the house and beard the lion in his den, as he had done twice before. He stated his position plainly, told what their intentions were, and explained that he had ample means to take care of his wife, and there was no danger of her family being called on for funds.

The consideration he received was to be practically ordered out of the house. An attempt was made to browbeat him into agreeing not to see her any more. Things were made extremely uncomfortable for Grace that night and an effort was made to spirit her away on the yacht, and take her for a cruise in foreign waters, which had been done two months previously.

Girl Whisked Away

In March when the family were aware that the affair was of a serious nature, they whisked the poor child away on a six weeks' cruise in the Caribbean sea, which was the most unreasonable time to visit these waters. They ran into several hurricanes which endangered the life of all aboard, and most of the trip the heat was so intense that several members of the crew were prostrated. Grace returned to New York in bad physical condition, occasioned by the air, experiences and the torrid weather they had encountered.

This time she was not to be fooled by subterfuges. On Tuesday morning she managed to slip out of the house unnoticed. This was almost a miraculous feat, as every domestic in the establishment had been under strict orders for the preceding 24 hours under pain of losing their jobs to keep her under close surveillance.

They met, she and Henry, across the street in front of St. Patrick's cathedral, which has ever been a trysting place for society couples. They decided that the only course left was an immediate marriage, and the best place for that was the Municipal building.

Parents Notified

After the civil ceremony they dispatched a letter to my parents telling them what they had done, and inviting them to a religious ceremony later in the day. There was no answer to this note. After waiting as long as they could they were married, as they had planned, at the Little Church Around the Corner, at quarter to midnight.

They were going on a typical American honeymoon, and will wind up at his Uncle's mining camp in British Columbia a month hence, where they expect to remain most of the summer. They will probably make their premature home in Washington after he completes his mining training at Columbia university next winter.

I am very sure my sister will be as happy as is humanly possible. No finer type of young American man can be found than Henry C. Davis, who inherits the best traditions of a fine old southern family, the members of which have already contributed much for the public welfare and have been outstanding figures in the political life of our nation."

Mexico's War Head Forbids Naming Cities After Saints of Church

MEXICO CITY, July 9.—Use of the names of Saints to designate villages and ranches in Mexico is "antiquated and ridiculous" in a country which is following "a liberal, revolutionary and progressive path," according to Secretary of War Joaquin Amaro.

The secretary's official declaration of this effect is being used today as the basis for action by the National Congress changing the names of the various settlements so that they shall honor the memory of revolutionary heroes.

The region specifically affected by General Amaro's action is that known as Los Altos, in the state of Jalisco. The general asserts that one of the reasons for the activities of Catholic "fanatics" rebelling against the government in this region is "the ancient vice of giving the names of Saints to the different villages and ranches."

The Los Altos sector was the only one in which the Catholic rebels made considerable headway against the government, which was compelled to mobilize a large force of infantry, cavalry, artillery and airplanes to deal with the revolutionaries. It was here that Archbishop Orozcoy Jimenez was reported inspiring the rebels with his leadership.

In accohrance with the wishes of the general, all the settlements already are being re-named, and congress will be asked to make the new names official. If the Amaro policy were adopted in the United States, cities like San Francisco, San Antonio and San Diego would have to seek new names.

Pastor Says Dancing Up to One's Conscience

EL PASO, July 9.(AP)—Rev. U. S. Crowder, pastor of the Orchard Park Methodist church here, told his congregation in the course of a sermon that he personally did "not dance but believed that it is a matter which should be left to each individual's conscience and his God." Places of amusement, he said, are necessary but should be "so clean that I can take my daughter there or you can take yours in perfect safety."

Corpus Christi Gets Low Ship Freight Rate

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, July 9. (AP)—Figures compiled by the navagation commissioner at Port of Corpus Christi shows that a ton of steel can be shipped from Pittsburgh to this city as the same rate that it can be shipped to Galveston or Houston which are considerably nearer the point of origin. Business men and others are regarding this parity with considerable satisfaction.

Rumored Oil Strike Leak From Gas Tank

ABILENE, Texas, July 9. (AP)—Workmen engaged in excavating for a new building here at 14 feet struck a calcite formation bearing a distanct odor of crude oil and at once a vision of a forest of oil derricks in the center of Abilene. Investigation disclosed, however, that oil froma nearby filling station had penetrated through the soil.

Billion Dollars Spent For Highways in Year

WASHINGTON, July 9.—More than a billion and a half dollars was spent on American road building during the fiscal year ending June, 1926, according to a survey completed today by the National industrial conference board.

This sum amounts to one-sixth of the entire public budget for that year and was only exceeded by expenditures for education and protection, it was stated.

DAY

IT HAPPENS IN THE BEST REGULATED FAMILIES

That toast comes to the table:
1. Pale in color (scraped)
2. Stone cold
3. Or hard.

Now that the weather is warm and the kitchen far from alluring, such moments are doubly aggravating. Recruit a corps of inanimate servants to do your work. The latest convenience offered by the Texas Electric Service Company is the Toastmaster, an automatic electric toaster. The slice of bread is slipped in the hollow center and, after the proper time for toasting, automatically appears crisp, brown, golden! There'll be no agonizing moments when you "smell that toast burning" no failures, no flurry, if you use a Toastmaster. It's a pretty piece for your breakfast table, too—drop by the Texas Electric Service Company for prices and particulars.

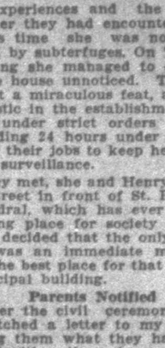

MARY ROBERTS RHINEHART'S new book, "Lost Ecstasy," is a trip down memory lane, refreshing to say the least, and if you wear Tillyer Lenses, they will take you back to the days of your youth, and the perfect vision you had. You will have found your Lost Ecstasy—they are truly a revolution in lenses. You can be fitted with these by Geo. W. L. Spencer, O. D., 705 Ohio Avenue. Phone 5645.

CHOOSE your negligee according to the type of trip you've planned. P. B. M. Company shows beautiful robes, some suitable for "roughing it," others which suggest luxurious staterooms on Atlantic liners.

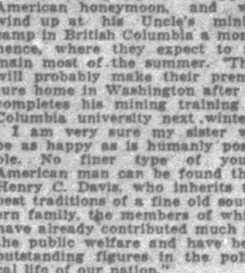

The Pullman robe is shown in shiny or dull satin with a long, graceful collar, usually faggoted on. Printed crepes made similarly are not too bright for the Pullman.

Now comes the Bizarre, bright and youthful Coolie Coat of many uses. Knee length, in vivid colors, decorated with Chinese motifs, the Coolie Coat replaces the vogue for the artist's smock. It may be worn as beach coat, lounge robe, porch coat and on the tennis court.

P. B. M. has the newest in boudoir slippers, too. Dainty quilted satins, white mules that may be dyed any shade, red kid, and soft pom-pomed black kid slippers that pack easily and are just the thing for the Coolie Coat.

THE midsummer season has possibilities as great as Eastertide. Be smart as well as comfortable on warm days. See Joan Dickson's new hats.

RECIPE FOR REFRIGERATOR COOKIES

½ cup of butter
2 cups brown sugar (cream the above)
2 beaten eggs
½ tsp. cream of tartar
½ tsp. soda.

Mix together and add gradually 4 cups flour. Knead like bread, add nuts,—roll in small roll and set in refrigerator over night. Slice in thin slices and bake in buttered tins.

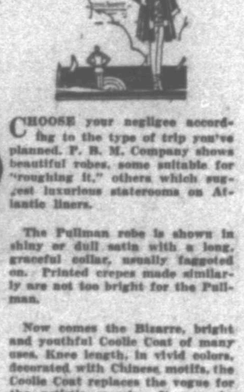

The above is only one of the many delicacies those with a full ice chest may have. Almost everything that tempts the appetite these warm days is dependent on ice, isn't it?—Frozen salad, home-made ice cream, ice cold watermelon, iced tea—on down the list!

There are other sides to the ice question. You can't have health without ice, especially during this hot season and, aside from health and comfort, it is really economy to take ice every day. It is many times more economical to buy ice than to allow food to spoil.

Did you know that the new service station of the Wichita Ice Company will be open in just a day or two now? It is most conveniently located at Ninth and Brook—just between home and town for most of us! When you see the cleanliness of the new station and have the satisfaction of being served quickly with clear, pure ice of full weight, with the friendliness of this company, you'll add your praise to that of many others for the new station. It is nice to know that the life saver (and surely ice has no rival to that title in this weather) is to be had at such a convenient location with the famous friendly service of the Wichita Ice Company.

MODERN vacations, when properly managed, entail absolutely no responsibilities and anxieties — travelers of today are truly Royal Vagabonds. I saw some representatives of this line of Royalty in the Wichita State Bank and Trust Company the other day, supplying themselves with A. B. A. Traveler's Checks. This is the most convenient way of carrying money without danger of loss. The A. B. A. checks are self-identifying and cashable anywhere. Get them at the Wichita State.

Mr. Micawber

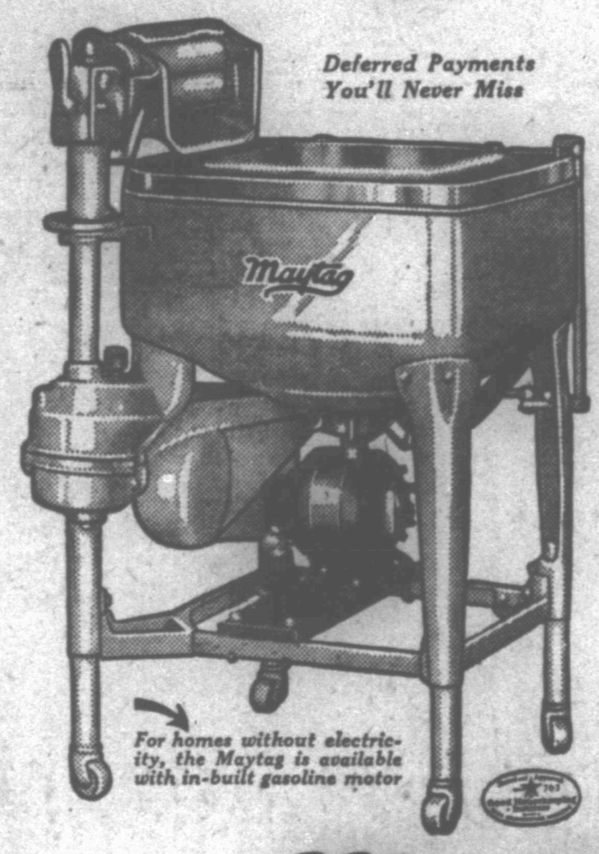

was always waiting "for something to turn up." Confidently expecting the best, he usually got the worst. In this character Dickens raised a monument to the futility of optimism without effort. Don't delay, take a definite step toward the fulfillment of desire and the realization of success by starting a savings account with the North Texas Building and Loan Association. Perhaps the oil slump has "hit you hard" and made the long-planned vacation trip impossible. That will never happen again if you invest your money where it is safest and brings in the highest interest, at the North Texas. Don't wait "for something to turn up"—act now!

LIKE a clap of thunder from a clear blue sky—that is the way the startling announcement of J. W. Ferguson's mammoth closing out sale struck Wichita Falls! This store has always been known as one of dependable merchandise truthfully advertised, and the present sale, the greatest event in its history, more than justifies the reputation. The first few days of the sale proved what drastic reductions have been made on the high-grade merchandise. Every item in the house is to be sold at an unbelievably low price. It is economy to attend such a sale, extravagant to neglect the opportunities it offers. Be one of those who saves and saves at J. W. Ferguson's tomorrow!

Money's No Worry For These Folks

By Universal Service.

MEICO CITY, July 9.—They are ignorant of money.

They have never seen an automobile.

They are happy.

Such is the description of the Tepehuanes Indians of the Durango and Chihuahua mountains given by Professor Manuel Morfin, edutational missionary assisting the government in its work of schooling the great illiterate native population of Mexic.

The Tepehuanes, according to to Senor Morfin, lie in an Alpine atmosphere in an area ten thousand feet aboe sea leel. There are wild animals a-plenty, particularly woles and bears; and the region also is the home of the monster eagle known to the Mexicans as the "carpenter bird," the largest bird known to man.

The Indians do not know firearms, but are marelous hunters with the bow and arrow. The majority of them live in caves, which they heat by great pine fires during the cold season.

Internal heat is generated by tesguino, or, in the language of the Tennessee mountains, "corn." The liquor is fermented from maize, practically the only crop that the Tepehuanes plant and cultiate.

The Tepehuanes also hae had their wars, their most historic clash being with the Apaches, who threatened them extinction. Apaches invaded the mountain fastness and for a time were victorius, but finally were put to flight by the bows and arrows of the Tepehuanes at the battle of Baborigame.

It is at Baborigame — "Big Stone"—that the Department of education is establishing a distribution center for food and clothing and eventually, education for the Tepehuanes.

Schools Will Replace Dilapidated Buildings

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—New York's traditional "Lower East Side" comprising hundreds of squalid tenements will be replaced by a $4,000,000 high school and other new buildings, Harry H. Schlacht, president of the e East Side chamber of commerce, said today. He added:

"The signing of the law exempting from taxation houses built to replace worthless tenements has made it possible."

Many men in Hungary who have been idle a long time, are returning to work.

Music And Musicians

BY CORBINA WRIGHT.
(Copyright, 1927, by Universal Service.)

NEW YORK, July 9.—A little friend of mine was taken some time ago by her mamma to her first symphony concert. After a few moments of awed silence while the musicians played, a tiny voice piped out, "mamma, what is the man with the beanstalk doing?"

Watching William Van Hoogstraten conducting on the opening night of the stadium concerts last Wednesday, I asked myself how many people merely look upon the leader of the symphony as "the man with the beanstalk" without realizing for an instant the terrific amount of nerve force and artistry pouring from the man into his orchestra?

I happened to be seated in the first row and since owing to a rainy evening, the initial concert had been transferred into the chapel of the city college, I viewed at unusually short range the progress of the musicians so that scarcely a moment of the band of players and their energetic leader escaped my eye.

Clad in the conventional white flannel and blue coat of the summer, Mr. Van Hoogstraten's tall, erect figure formed a distinct contrast to the mediaeval aspect of the hall, crowded with eager listeners. I watched Van Hoogstraten during his spirited and forceful rendering of Beethoven's fifth symphony, and the composer's mood triumphant, desparing, a peaceful interlude, or the fiery Allegro mirrored itself on the conductor's face, as he led his men to the big climax.

Oblivious of the audience, he threw himself heart and soul into Beethoven's music both spirtually and physically, carrying his hearers with him to a high pitch of genuine enthusiasm.

Ordinarily these concerts are held out of doors in the imposing stadium which Adolph Lewisohn so generously provided for this purpose, but on Wednesday night the moon and stars were clouded, and the staid old city college re-echoed the applause of an enthusiastic audience—an audience which in point of view of number and discrimination showed every evidence of appreciating the fine music provided for them at a nominal cost by a group of our philanthropic citizens.

In the outr' acte, Mr. Lewisohn made a brief speech in which he promised that conductors Monteaux and stock would be guest conductors later in the season. Only genuine music lovers flock to these concerts during the hot summer months. When the distractions of seaside and country lure thousands away from the city, and listening to the intelligent remarks and watching the happy faces at the end of the concert, I feel here indeed are people who really love and undersand music, who realize what hard work and sacrifice mean who guides his men unnerringly through an exacting program is something more than "a man with a beanstalk."

* * *

Arnold Bennett, the noted British author, has been putting his finger into the operatic pie, and I hear that he has revised the libretto of 'The Beggar's Opera" successfully revived in England, and which our astute Manager Arthur Judson promises as one of our musical treats next season. The English company, he tells me, will be brought over intact, and will add to its glories of a four year run at the Lyric theater in Hammersmith by a transcontinental tour of the United States.

Some seasons ago those who enjoy the quaintness of days gone by journeyed down to the Greenwich village theater to view a presentation of John Gay's opera, but the run was all too brief, but the present tour commemorating the anniversary of "the first and the best covers 24 weeks' bookings on the road followed by New York and Chicago runs. "The Beggar's Opera" with its broad and rollicking humor was written and produced by John Gay and John Rich at the Lincoln's Inn Field theater in London in 1728, and had what at that time was considered a record-breaking rub, playing for 62 nights. It first played in New York in the autumn of 1750 at which time Thomas Kean played Captain Mac Heath. Joseph Jefferson, grandfather of the Jefferson of "Rip Van Winkle" fame played the part of Filch later on in Boston, and the redoubtable Polly Peacham was enacted by Mrs. Marshall, greatly admired and praised by George Washington, and from time to time "The Beggar's Opera" has been revived with the same fervor as the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals of our later day.

Two conductors have been selected to fill Leopold Stokowski's musical boots during the year that he plans to absent himself from the helm of the Philadelphia orchestra concerts. They are Fritz Reiner, the popular conductor of the Cincinnati orchestra who will wield the baton during the early part of the season and Pierre Monteaux, joint conductor of the concert Bebouw with Willem Mengelberg of Amsterdam, for the latter half. Each Maestro already has a big reputation in his own right, Montreaux having headed the Boston symphony several seasons ago and the new arrangement will enable New Yorkers as well as Philadelphians to hear two of our leading musicians heard all too seldom in these parts.

AGED PIONEER DEAD.

ALVARADO, Texas, July 9. (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Ann Myers, 81, who came from Illinois on horseback with her stepfather in 1866 to Texas, is dead.

Nearly 1000 dogs were shown at Edinburgh's recent bench show.

CHILD'S BEST LAXATIVE—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

HURRY MOTHER! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, billous, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.—Adv.

Dr. Powers to Speak At Baptist Encampment

Dr. O. L. Powers, pastor of the First Baptist church, is programmed as the principal speaker for the Woodlake Baptist encampment, near Sherman, giving inspirational messages both Sunday morning and evening. The encampment is supported by churches in this section of the state, and the attendance runs into high figures.

Carefree Days!

Spend your vacation by the sea!

The long summer stretches hotly ahead—come to Corpus Christi where you can forget the heat! For forty years the average summer temperature has been 78.5 degrees... but the never-failing breeze that skims across 100 square miles of white-capped bay clips a full ten degrees from the official figure!

You can take a cottage at the water's edge... a downtown apartment.. or quarters in a fashionable hotel... you can fish, sail, swim, golf, or motor... or you can spend carefree days in comfort on the beach, where the tiniest tots are safe in the gentle shallows!

All around you are happy people, living, working and playing..in cool contentment... Come for the whole summer... with all the family!

ICE can be either crystal-clear, sparkling and solid or "dull," debris-laden and soft in spots.

Good, clear ice is not only more sanitary but it actually lasts longer.

And good, clear ice is the only kind we handle.

Our new friendly Ice Service Station will be open for business within the next few days. You may drive in from either of four streets. The most convenient ice filling station in North Texas.

The Name of This New Station is Good ICE Plus Good Service

WE don't sell "just ice." We handle the kind that is crystal clear and solid — the kind that's more sanitary to put in your refrigerator, and the kind that lasts longer!

And we're dependable. We don't serve you one day and fail you the next. And our men, you'll notice, are courteous and willing.

Special to The Record News.

RULE, July 9.—A surprise miscellaneous shower was given on Friday afternoon of last week at 6 p. m. for Miss Verna Cassie, whose marriage to Mervis Neal took place the following Saturday. Guests assembled at the Cassie home at 6 p. m. while the bride-elect was absent. In a short time Miss Cassie returned home and was showered with numerous beautiful and useful gifts by some 60 or 70 of her friends. Mesdames A. Buchtein, Claud Norman and Hubert Hines were hostesses on this occasion which was a surprise to the bride-elect. Refreshments were served to the guests.

Entertains at Bridge

On Thursday afternoon of last week from 4 until 6 o'clock, Mrs. E. B. Harris entertained with two tables of bridge, honoring Mrs. P. P. Simpson who has recently returned from Dallas to make her home on the Simpson ranch west of Rule.

The entertaining rooms were decorated in a profusion of roses and other summer flowers. On entering the guests were served with orange punch and at close of the games an ice course was served to the following guests: Mesdames L. L. Stewart, L. N. Stevens, John A. Lee, Server Leon, James E. Lindsey, Joe A. Jones and Mrs. H. F. Moore of Abilene and the honoree, Mrs. P. P. Simpson.

Birthday Party

There was a merry party on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. David Crockett's home Saturday, July 2, from 4:30 to 7 o'clock when 30 little girls and boys assembled in response to invitations from little Helen Ruth Crockett and Alva Salem. The occasion was in honor of Helen Ruth's fourth and Alva Salem's fifth birthdays. The cool, inviting lawn was just the place to play the many games so dear to the hearts of the children. Refreshments of lemonade, cake and were served and tiny American flags were given as favors. At the parting hour each little guest assured Helen Ruth and Alva of a most happy time, nor were the hours less enjoyable for the little celebrants for they were the recipients of all manner of gifts which will become treasures to perpetuate the memory of the happy date.

Tuesday Evening Bridge Club

A pleasant summer time hospitality of this week was the one on Tuesday evening when Mr. and Mrs. John A. Lee opened their beautiful new home to the members of their bridge club and a few guests. The pretty rooms were brightened with a profusion of roses, zinnias and shasta daisies which flaunted their colors from artistic baskets and vases, making the environment where in guests were one of rare beauty. An Independence day motif was used in the table appointments and also in tallies. Four tables were placed for the playing of bridge and during the games guests were refreshed with punch. The Independence day motif was further carried out in the refreshments served at the close of the games which consisted of red, white and blue cream and individual cake decorated with a tiny American flag.

Memphis Gets New High School Building

36 Recitation Rooms In Memphis New $125,000 High School Plant

Special to The Record News.

MEMPHIS, Texas, July 9.—The accompanying photograph is that of Supt. S. C. Miles and the $125,000 high school building of Memphis. This commodious building contains 36 recitation rooms, two study halls, splendid gymnasium, large auditorium and stage equipped with velour curtains and a $2000 Baby Grand piano, and is steam heated.

With the recent completion of the school census for this year it was found that there are 1305 scholastics in the Memphis schools, an increase of approximately 400 pupils in the public schools of Memphis the past three years. This 15 per cent a year increase has, of course, brought about difficulties and problems of supplying building and equipment.

The enrollment in the high school is 35 per cent of the total enrollment and this, without a doubt, is a splendid record. The high school, besides being affiliated with all the colleges and universities of Texas, is on the all-southern list and offers the usual required subjects, and in addition thereto, a liberal number of electives from which the student may select his course. The work will be extended the next term in chemistry, public speaking, home economics and commercial work. Seventy-five seniors were issued diplomas this last term with a prospect of more than 100 for next year.

Supt. S. C. Miles, who holds B. A. M. A. degrees, began his work three years ago with the Memphis schools, at which time he was assisted by corps of 30 teachers. The 1926-27 terms required 37 teachers and for the next term several more will be added to this large body of teachers.

Owing to continued increasing enrollment, it is now being planned to build another building this next year.

Fred Millard, teacher in the seventh grade the past year but now of Ada, Okla., was in town the last of the week greeting old friends.

The Fourth passed very quietly in Iowa Park. Happily there was no accident to mar the pleasures of the day. Everybody went fishing or on picnics with their families or friends. The town was pretty well deserted except for a constant stream of cars taking folks out on pleasure jaunts or bringing them home again. The Continental picnic at Coleman's brought in a large number of visitors, and some of our folks attended the ball games there in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott Ralston and two daughters, Fay Marie and Marguerite, and Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Richards and children and Miss Flora Cobb spent the Fourth camping at the Diversion Lake, going up Sunday night and coming back home Monday afternoon. They spent the time in fishing and row boating.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Bradford and Bobbie Jo, and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Galey spent the Fourth in Petrolia with Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Galey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Balsch. The Bradfords and Mr. Galey left Wednesday morning in their car for their new home in Panhandle.

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Hoge and Mrs. Hoge's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Andrews and two children who are visiting them from Olney, with Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hoge, Miss Mattie Bell Sullivan and Mr. Bedwick celebrated with a family picnic.

Grady McKenzie and Marvin Banks spent the Fourth with Grady's brother, Rev. C. E. McKenzie in Dallas.

A party composed of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Clark, Miss Mildred Denny, George Mills and Herman Mills spent the week-end at the Diversion Lake coming back Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Dickson and sons, Frederick and Kavanaugh, former residents of Iowa Park, but now living at Vernon were in town Tuesday morning on their way home after a trip to Denton, and a Fourth spent in Fort Worth.

Miss Bertha May Barker of Maybelle is the guest of Misses Anna Mary and Glenda Bevill. The three girls with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Bevill and Miss Hazel George spent Monday at Scotland Park and Lake Wichita, and had a picnic lunch at Haven Park.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sisk and Paul, and R. B. Sisk and family and Violet Shipman went fishing Monday on the river. The youngsters enjoyed boat riding and horseback riding.

Calomel Attacks the Bones and Deadens the Bowels

Never take calomel. It is mercury—a dangerous drug. If you are constipated, bilious, sick, headachy, stomach sour, meals don't taste right, hot days make you drowsy and lazy, take Dodson's Liver Tone. That's all you need.

Calomel salivates. That's why you have to take salts the next day to get it out of your system so it will not eat your bones. You have to stay at home a day to recuperate from the shock it gives you. No wonder Dodson's Liver Tone is so popular. All you do is take a spoonful at night. By morning you are cleaned out good, head is clear, you feel as light as a feather; you are not sick, no danger of salivation, and you can eat anything you want. Think of that.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.—Adv.

Enemies of Education

DR. HENRY SUZZALO is the former president of the University of the State of Washington. He was ousted from his position by the hand picked regents of the governor of Washington. Dr. Suzzalo was one of the prize orators who appeared before the National Education association convention in the city of Seattle.

What did he say? Well he said a plenty. This is a sample, "Educators must wrest the control of the public school system from politics, from the arrogant whom the accidents of politics have brought a transient power; the demagogue who has temporarily grabbed the public mind; the selfish who would sell the children into the half slavery of poor education and the ignorant who know not the truth or wisdom and yet assert it."

Blistering words? Yes. This governor of the state of Washington was a big lumber king while the world war was on. And the head of the University of the State of Washington was the chairman of the state committee on defense. There was a clash and the lumber king is said to have received the worst of it. He bided his time. He invaded the political arena. He became governor of his state. He named new regents but not a majority of the board. This in his first term. He was re-elected. He had more regents to appoint. His friends were in the majority and then the head of the president of the university rolled into the big wastebasket.

No doubt the governor chuckled. No doubt he said to himself, "He who laughs last laughs best." In hunting for big game the governor had brought down the president of a university. Now the former university president is on the trail of the governor. He hopes to get the scalp of the governor. Now just why should the politicians of a state dominate the public schools or the higher institutions of learning of the commonwealth?

Teachers On the Warpath

A LARGE majority of the members of the National Education Association of America are not afraid of evolution and they have no use for statutes which prohibit the teaching of evolution. In session in the city of Seattle the teachers declared their opposition to the Tennessee evolution law and other state statutes which forbid the teaching of certain subjects in the public schools.

They also protested against the passage of laws directing that specific subjects be taught in public schools.

This will lead to more talk. Away down here in Texas Dr. J. Frank Norris and Farmer Jim Ferguson, stern fundamentalists of ye olden time, are for anti-evolution legislation and the decapitation of all teachers who dare discuss the subject in or out of the school room.

This may be a burning issue next year. It is a great economic issue and concerns the pockets of the people.

New Jersey Democrats Vociferous

NEW JERSEY Democrats know what they want and they do not hesitate to speak out. In state convention assembled they demanded the modification of the Volstead act to permit light wines and beer. On the same day that all this happened the New Jersey Republicans held a state convention. They called for a state referendum on the act.

That is, they would submit the proposal of light wines and beer to the qualified voters of the state.

New Jersey has a Democratic governor and one Democratic United States senator. There is one Republican senator. He is a wet and tells it to the world that he is a wet.

Dry Republicans in New Jersey in recent years told it to the world that they were dry and the Republican wets voted for the Democratic nominee.

Will prohibition be alive or a smothered issue in the campaign of 1928?

Made a Billion Dollars For Texas

NOW that the Texas trippers headed by Governor Dan Moody are at home again, Chairman John D. Middleton of the ways and means committee has figured it out that the "Good Will" trip means a billion dollars for Texas. Money talks and a billion dollars is a huge pile. Cut the melon.

Burleson as An Oil Magnate

MILTON EVERETT is the editor and publisher of The Southwestern Resources, issued on the first of each month in the city of San Antonio. This is an excerpt from the current number:

Hon. Albert S. Burleson of Austin sends us a "postkarte" from Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia, where he is taking the cure in that celebrated resort, which says that his health is greatly improved and very nearly back to normal. This will be good news to the multitude of people who know the former postmaster general and congressman from the Austin district for many years. Mr. Burleson in recent months has also got additionally famous as the owner of some of the great oil producing lands in Upton and Crane counties. He was also the owner of the land on which the bustling new city of McCamey in Upton county is located. Former worthless Texas land which he has owned for some years is now bringing Mr. Burleson in a fortune in royalties from oil lands."

If Editor Milton Everett has his facts down straight, then Austin has at least one multi-millionaire oil magnate. It should be no trouble for an oil magnate to travel to Carlsbad or any other far away health resort to take the cure or to find the cure. Money is a loud talker.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE.

NEW YORK, July 9. (EFS)—Percy Hammond, the dramatic critic, has been driving his temperamental bus to the remoter hamlets of Long Island and Connecticut, in search of the elusive yokel, hick, rube or small-towner, a creature alleged by Broadway playwrights and Mr. Mencken to be found in plentiful numbers anywhere outside of the radius in which the Paramount building casts its irregular shadows.

So far, he reports, he has found no specimens. Spying upon the audiences in the stock company opera houses of tiny towns boasting populations of no more than 2000, he found no one chewing hay-straws or indulging in any of the other conventions of rube drama dear to New York. Instead he found himself surrounded "not by yokels, but by smart men and women of the world. The boys who were not in swallow tails were in plus-fours, and the girls smoked cigarets between the acts. The urban scene resembled that of Times square at its gay after-the-theater hour, except that it contained no flea circuses, toy balloonmen, shooting galleries, orange drink emporiums, Chinatown omnibusses, or vendors of the Birth Control Gazette."

Inquiring as to the reason for the disappearance of the rube, he learned that the motion pictures, the Saturday Evening Post, the American Mercury and the New Yorker had sophisticated the former yokel and had taught him how to dress, deport himself and converse in the urban manner. Mr. Hammond omitted for some reason the radio, which has had almost as much to do with the extinction of the yokel species as anything else.

Like Mr. Hammond, I, too, have done some research and exploring on the subject of yokelry. Not so long ago I toured the countryside of Oklahoma. One Sunday my father informed me that he had invited an Indian girl to dinner so that I might learn something about her people. I pictured her in my mind as a bashful and grunting squaw in Mother Hubbard, moccasins, and strings of 10-cent store beads. Instead there drove up to my father's house in the country a dark-skinned beauty, airily smoking a cigaret as she raced up the driveway, put on the brakes, switched off the ignition and bounded lightly out of the trick roadster.

She was dressed as though she had just stepped out of a dressmaker's on the Rue de la Paix. She spoke a beautiful and precise English, having, as I learned, been graduated from Vassar and having spent two years abroad. Her conversation at dinner was not of the Seminole tribe, although she answered questions intelligently about her race, but of modern books, modern music and modern drama. Later on in the afternoon she went to a room and emerged in a one-piece bathing suit, ran down to the lake, climbed to the highest diving platform and executed a graceful swan dive into the pool. And that evening she took me to a "country dance" at a farm house, where the young men were in country club tweeds or linen knickers and most of them had hospitable flasks.

* * *

On the opening night of the motion picture, "Old San Francisco," at the Warner theater, Miss Anna May Wong, the Chinese star, stood inside the theater autographing programs for the patrons. Her skin was stained very darkly brown, and Miss Wong spoke pidgin English.

Just why, I do not know. Miss Wong's complexion, though Oriental, is very fair. And she speaks English as well and as fluently as Ethel Barrymore.

The Harmless Necessary Worm -:- -:- by Montague

"I Ain't Got Nothing Against Fly Fishermen. They are Good Pay."

"I don't callate this here yowl about Cal using worms for bait is going to hurt him none," said the guide, meditatively. "There ain't no society for the prevention of cruelty to worms as far as I know. Most of the people who belongs to them societies is scared of worms anyway, and would stomp on one of them as quick as they would call a cop to take a stray pup away to be chloroformed. As fer these here fly fishermen—they'll make a lot of racket about it, but they ain't the kind of a votin' unit that has to be reckoned with, as the newspapers say, and besides what I got on them birds!"

"You see I've guided for a whole lot of 'em since I been in the woods and come to knew 'em pretty good. Not that they're worse than anybody else. The feller that said women was alike under their skins could have said it about men and told just as much or a little more truth. I ain't got nothin' against fly fishermen. In the first place they're good pay, and in the second place because of their views about fishin' they don't never exhaust the fish the state has planted in the lakes, at least not while they stick to their ideas.

"I've known some of the real good ones to come up here and cast for old Jake, the biggest trout in these parts with a six ounce rod and a thin silk line and a fly on a hook that you could hardly see. Jake must have thutty or more of them flies stuck into the sides of his mouth. As a matter of fact he would look like he had whiskers of the feathers didn't get kind of wet and messy on account of their being always under water. He's here yet, and will be until somebody angles for him with a rope and an iron hook with a bull frog on it. But the dudes with the ideas about the sanctity of angling are still after him, and probably will be as long as I am guidin'.

"But it ain't these fellers that is makin' the most fuss about Coolidge. It is guys like the one who was up here last week, with a whole outfit he'd got in the big town, and the longest set of rules and regulations for keepin' himself from catching too many fish that I ever heard of.

"Guide," he says the first day, 'I want you to understand that I am an ethical sportsman,' and then he explained what ethical meant. 'I believe in lettin' the fish have a chance,' he said. 'I shall fish only an hour an day, and only with the lightest tackle. So do not think that you need to take me to the good holes. I shall match my wits against those of the trout, and find out his favorite haunts for myself. Then I shall do battle with them on chivalrous terms, giving them all the best of the combat, and depending on my own finesse, and my own skill with the rod and reel to succeed.'

"'Sure,' I said.

"'Of course,' he contiues, 'being a total stranger to this lake it might save-ah-time, if you would indicate in a general way where-er.'

"'Where the holes is,' I says.

"'Yes, although you do not need to be too specific. Naturally I don't want you to divulge exactly where they are.'

"I know what he meant all right, so I took him out to a place where there was plenty fish if you knew how to get them. He worked for a co-ple of hours skitterin' a little fly along the surface, but he didn't get no rise.

"Then he said something about 'conditions of visuality' and put on another fly. After he had changed for three times he got a whale of a strike, and if the line handn't busted when it did, the rod would have been yanked out of his hand.

"He began tryin' to coax me to advise him to use heavier tackle, but I didn't say nothing, and pretty soon he got out a good solid built steel rod and a thick silk line. He put on the same fly, and no sooner had it struck the water than there was a swish, and the fly was bit off.

"Well the fish didn't rise no more that day. And they wouldn't rise the next although he tried 'em with all the flies in his book. He began to get glum then, and to say he had to leave that night and he would like to take a trout home to show the boys in the rod and reel club.

"I kept on saying nothing, and we went ashore. While I was cooking dinner I heard him slashing around in a little garden plat, I keep back of the camp. After he come in he told me he thought he would go out in the boat his self for a little while, and I could have the afternoon off. I lay down in the open camp while he made his preparations, and pretty soon when I wasn't looking, I seen him empty something out of his hands into a little can. Then he rowed off in the boat.

"By and by he come in, all excited. 'I hooked the biggest trout I ever saw out there,' he says. 'Not in the lake, but in a little inlet that runs from another lake. But he snagged the line, and I lost him.'

"'Did he rise to a fly?' I says.

"'Well, no, not to a fly exactly,' he answers. 'I thought inasmuch as the flies I have got ain't the kind that these trout like at this season and this time a day maby a-a.'

"'Worm,' says I.

"'Well, the best fishermen use them at times,' he says getting kind of red.

"'Sure,' I says.

"'But you see there wasn't room to play him in there, and I was wondering.'

"'Yeah,' I says, 'never dreamed what was coming next.'

"'Well—you know I am very liberal when it comes to expeditions of this kind, guide.'

"'Not at all needful,' I assures him. 'Us guides fixed rates.'

"'Well, I was wondering if, perhaps in that narrow stream, with the dip net you know—you see guide it is highly important that I make a catch, and the time is growing short.'

"'It would be agin the law,' I told him.

"'Would it be-er-illogal,' if we were to shut the upper gate and open the lower one and when the water ran out of the little inlet to.'

"'Pick him up by the tail?' says I.

"'Not by the tail necessarily. We should give him a sporting chance by picking him up around his middle. Does the law provide against that?'

"'Maybe not,' I says. 'Go aheadd and do it. It will be something to tell the next dude who comes up here.'

"Of course that settled the matter, and the only trout he went home with was the one I went out and caught for him with a worm. I don't know what he told the boys back in the club, but I got my ideas.'

"I don't say this here guy was a sample of the fellers who is making the war on Cal, but I do say that people who goes after trout likes to git 'em morn' anything else, even the ethics of angln.'"

Freak Oil Well In Hale County Puzzle

HALE CENTER, July 9, (AP)—Source of the oil in Hale county's lone oil well has geologists and oil men guessing. Some of them assert it might be what is known as migratory oil but the belief now prevails that it might be asphaltic oil with a small gasoline content. The well, which is 10 miles west of here, is making about 20 barrels at 414 feet. The oil tests 40 gravity at 80 degrees, corrected to be 38.

Rebel Suspect Freed On Bond By Court

LOS ANGELES, July 8. (AP)—Frank Thayer, said to be a wealthy oil operator, indicted with Adolfo De La Huerta, former provisional president of Mexico, and several others for neutrality violation was at liberty today after posting of $2500 bail with a United States commissioner.

And You Become King

By BRUCE BARTON

Illustrated by RAEBURN VAN BUREN

ONE of the first self-made men in history was Sargon I. His biography, carved on an ancient tablet, has been deciphered as follows: "Sargon, the powerful king, the king of Akkadia am I; my mother was poor; my father I knew not; the brother of my father lived in the mountains. . . . Akki the irrigator reared me to boyhood. Akki the irrigator made me a gardener. My service as a gardener was pleasing unto Istar, and I became king."

* * *

He claims no special genius, you notice. He was born poor; he started at the bottom; he worked hard and got to the top. Success stories differ in their details, but if you will compare Sargon's admirable paragraph with any page of "Who's Who," you will discover that the essentials have not changed.

* * *

I once was allowed to visit the office of a very great corporation. Its president and vice-presidents receive immense salaries and are popularly regarded as giants of the industrial world. Yet one of them said to me:

* * *

"There is not a single brilliant man in this organization." He was right. Fifty young men had exactly the same start with that company as the half-dozen who are now at the top.

* * *

Ten of the fifty lacked balance and wandered off into other fields. Another ten neglected their health and died young. Another ten got into domestic difficulties or let their living expenses run away with them.

* * *

So, year by year, the number of contenders in the race lessened, until finally the prizes were won—not by brilliant men, but by six substantial citizens who took care of themselves and kept plugging.

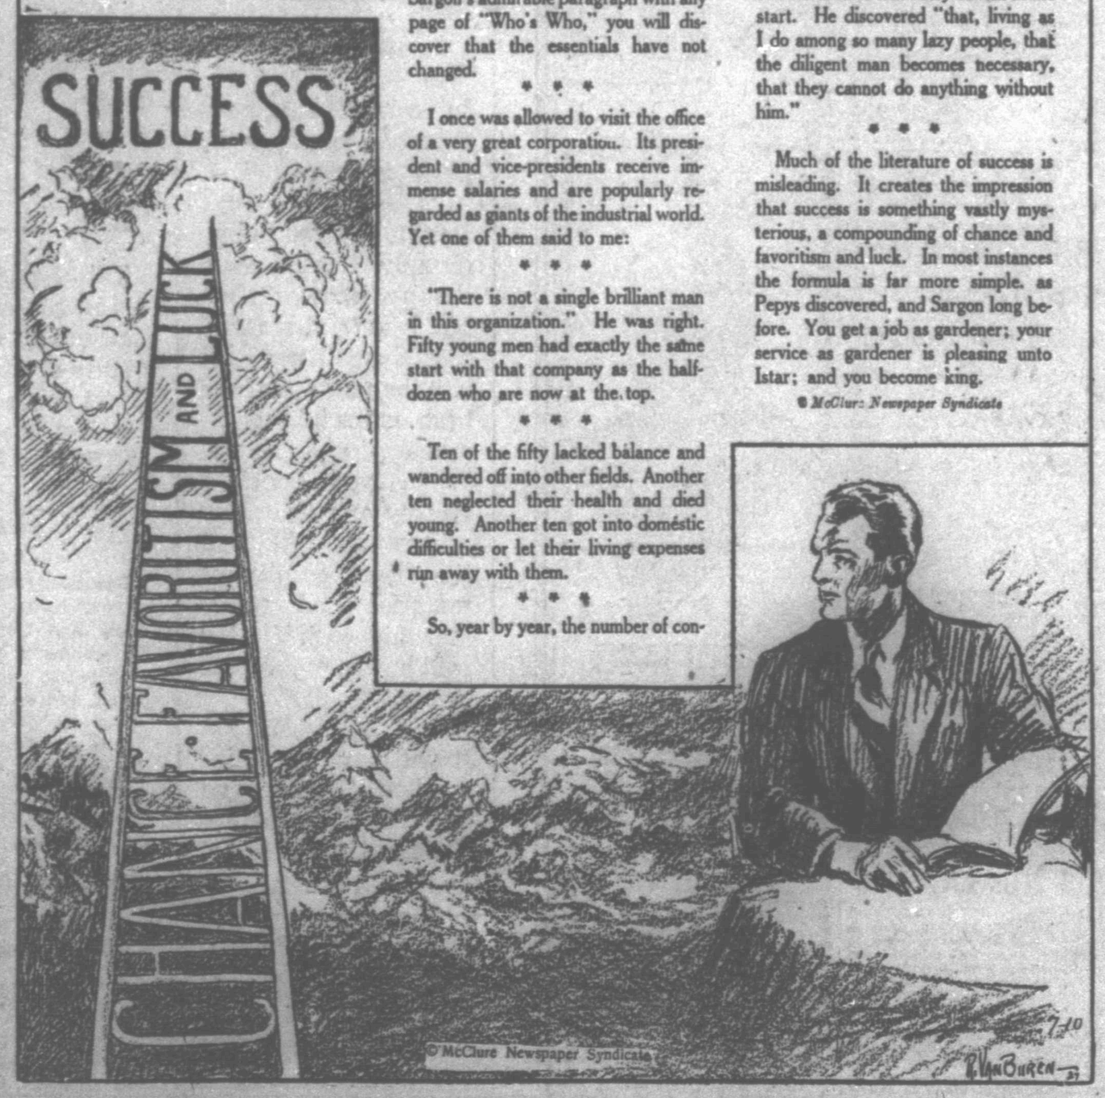

* * *

Samuel Pepys, who occupied an important office in the English Navy Department, was no business genius, but he outlasted a lot of competitors who seemed to have him badly beaten at the start. He discovered "that, living as I do among so many lazy people, that the diligent man becomes necessary, that they cannot do anything without him."

* * *

Much of the literature of success is misleading. It creates the impression that success is something vastly mysterious, a compounding of chance and favoritism and luck. In most instances the formula is far more simple, as Pepys discovered, and Sargon long before. You get a job as gardener; your service as gardener is pleasing unto Istar; and you become king.

NOCONA SOCIETY

Special to The Record News.

NOCONA, July 9.—A group of Nocona people enjoyed a most delightful weekend party at Lake Worth. Arriving on Friday they remained until Saturday afternoon. The greater part of Saturday was spent in the city shopping and at the Majestic theater. Returning to the lake swimming was enjoyed. Afterwards the evening was spent on board the Galvez where dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Those included in this party were: Messrs and Mesdames Frank Foster and daughter, Marcell; C. M. Utt; E. P. Daniel; T. B. Wilker and children, Josephine and Tommy; W. R. Bourland and son, Dan Ray; G. B. Cone and son, J. M.; Grady Foscue; N. T. Pribble; J. L. Geiser; R. W. Berry and daughter, Maxine; Misses Helen Cone and Anita Meiver.

Mrs. B. M. McNew Honored

At the pretty cottage home of Mrs. J. A. Messer, on June 23 from 5:30 until 7:30 p. m. a miscellaneous shower was given complimenting Mrs. B. M. McNew.

The rooms were beautifully decorated in spring flowers, the colors of black and gold combined with white were artistically used.

An interesting program had been arranged and was rendered by Mrs. T. T. Croxton, assisted by Miss Waldeen Cardwell. Mrs. R. L. Myrick and Mrs. J. A. Messer. "The Rocky Road to Matrimony," was carried out in full. The bride, gowned in white crepe with hat and shoes to harmonize, came in from the rear in a path strewn with flowers. The gifts were wrapped in brown paper and placed in the path to represent the rocks of life and the signs along the road were read aloud by the honoree as she picked up the gifts, placing them in a handsome rocking chair,a gift from Justin's Leather Goods company, while Miss Ruby Fay Myrick of Wichita Falls at the piano played "Here Comes the Bride." The many beautiful gifts were then opened to be admired by all.

Readings by little Misses Marie and Mildred Hoffman and Earl Frost Reed were given, several musical numbers on the piano by Mrs. G. W. Humphreys and a reading for the benefit hemmed tea towel were other interesting features of the evening. In the contest Mrs. J. D. Reed was awarded first prize and Miss Brown second. The prizes were presented to the honoree.

Mrs. C. W. Gill presided over the guest book which contained wishes for the bride.

PRETTY MISS LLOYD'S STAR

Newspaper Photo Attracts Eyes of Director

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Hot weather seems to have little or no effect on Harry Cohn's signing proclivities. He probably holds today the world's record for signing more Montmartre luncheres than any producer in captivity. The latest one to succumb to Columbia and Mr. Cohn's wiles is Ricardo Cortez.

Mr. Cortez had planned to go abroad wth his wife, Alma Rubens, this month, but he has postponed his trip in favor of starring in "By His Hand," a melodrama by Channing Pollock, to be directed by Walter Lang.

Perhaps Mr. Cortez' luck will change with his affiliation with Columbia. He has had more than his share of disappointments this last year. First, he was cast opposite Pola Negri, then after a few dozen scenes were shot, it was decided that he was too robust for the part of a man suffering with incurable tuberculosis. His experience as the prince in "Anna Karenina" was equally unfortunate. A complete change of cast and direction put him out in the cold world again.

Here's hoping that all goes well on Cortez's next picture. A man's luck must change.

* * *

Cruze to Direct Marie.

There is a strong rumor that James Cruze will direct Marie Prevost in his first Producers Distributing picture. Lucky for Marie if she gets Cruze, who knows his onions, if you will pardon my slang. Miss Prevost is back from the Shriners convention ready for work. I might add she is a little thinner, at least she looked so to me. "The Girl in the Pullman," her next comedy, is to be directed by Erle Kenton. After that she will make "On to Reno," and this is the "Opery" Cruze will in all likelihood direct. Marie's divorce comes up very soon and according to her close friends there is no hope of a reconciliation with Kenneth Harlan. So you see, "On to Reno" is not such a bad title for her.

* * *

Ann Christy—New Star.

Gaze upon the name Ann Christy and file it in your memory. You may be reading it often in the newspaper. Ann is to be Harold Lloyd's leading lady in his next picture and if history repeats itself she will make a name for herself. I thought it was all arranged for Sue Carroll, the society girl from the windy city, to play opposite Harold. But nothing in this world is as uncertain as a contract not yet signed. Now about Miss Christy. She is nineteen years old, five feet tall and has unbobbed tresses and blue eyes. She originally came to Hollywood to seek a business career. I am told, in the graphic description furnished me, that Miss Christy is a typical New York girl and, therefore, just right for this Coney Island comedy Harold is about to film. How come, if she is the New York type, her hair isn't bobbed? Just one more word, Harold chose Miss Christy from a newspaper photo of her—a bad precedent for the newspaper editors who will have every girl in the country trying to get her picture in the paper.

Clara Bow, Five Feet Three Featherweight and Red-Headed

Clara Bow is 5 feet, 3 1-2 inches tall, has fiery red hair, agate brown eyes and weighs 110 pounds.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Daughter of Robert and Sarah Bow. Mother died in 1923. Father lives in Hollywood. Father, English and Scotch. Mother, Scotch and French. Maiden name Sarah Frances Gordon.

Educated at Brooklyn. Was attending Girls' High school at Bayridge, L. I., in junior year, when she entered magazine beauty contest, of which the judges were Harrison Fisher, Neysa McMein and Howard Chandler Christy.

Forgot about contest after entering until she was called, and, with a few others, given a screen test. Contest closed in November, 1922 and shortly afterward she was subjected to three more screen tests.

She won first prize and, for her victory, received an evening gown, a screen contract which guaranteed that she would play in one picture and a beautiful silver trophy.

First Film a Failure.

William Christy Cabanne gave her a small part in "Beyond the Rainbow" featuring Billie Dove. Not knowing anything about make-up, when she was told to cry, the tears made a wreck of her appearance. When it was viewed on the screen, Cabanne cut the entire sequence out of the picture.

This caused Clara to give up pictures and enter business school. Three months later, Elmer Clifton telephoned, said he was about to make a picture, and that, judging from pictures he'd seen, imagined she might be the girl he wanted. Following a test, Clifton offered her $50 a week.

On strength of that work, Miss Bow was given the leading feminine role in "Grit" playing opposite Glenn Hunter.

Meanwhile, her talents had been recognized by B. P. Schulberg, who was producing independently and he placed her under a long term contract. She was still under contract to Schulberg when he became associate producer at the Paramount west coast studio late in 1925. He brought Miss Bow with him and she played in "Dancing Mothers," "The Runaway," "Mantrap" and "Kid Boots."

'Sorrows of Satan' On OlympicScreen

The premier showing of a D. W. Griffith production is always an event. The first screening of his latest Paramount picture at the Oyympic theater will be more than an event. It will be a phenomenon!

"Sorrows of Satan," Marie Corelell's famous novel could not have been given a fine representation. From the very first fade-in to the last fade-out, the film spells "Box Office." That—combined with the drama, pathos, spectacle and beauty which is Griffith, and which only a Griffith is capable of giving—makes "Sorrows of Satan" a picture to be remembered.

That most likable of thespians, Adolphe Menjou, gives his usual nothing-to-be-wished-for performance. As "The King on Main Street" and "A Social Celebrity," Menjou won tons of praise, but when placed next his impersonation of Satan, those characters fade into obscurity. Used as we are to the musical comedy version of a red-coated devil with horns and fork, Menjou makes Lucifer a modern man of the world and does it in an understanding manner.

Ricardo Cortez, Carol Dempster and Lya de Putti, the other featured players, are deserving of words of praise. Cortez, in blossoming out as a dramatic actor, gives a fine account of himself. Nothing more need be said of Carol Dempster's performance other than to write—the perfect Griffith heroine. And as for Lya de Putti—Lyra's like no one else—a revelation!

In adapting "Sorrows of Satan," John Russell and George Hull have laid the story against the background provided by a modern city. No review could be complete without making mention of the picture's marvelous photographic feats and dexterous lighting effects. Cameramen and technical experts have covered themselves with glory.

Forrest Halsey prepared the scenario. Other players appearing in the picture include Ivan Lebedeff, Lawrance D'Orsay and Marcia Harris.

Too Many Checks For Town's Banks to Cash

WEATHERFORD, July 9. (AP)—Banks and business houses here were confronted with an unusual situation when 125 Gulf pipeline employes presented pay checks representing $10,000 to be cashed. Unaware that it was Gulf pipeline pay day, the town was caught with insufficient cash to take care of the checks, and many men were unable to get any money. Others gave their checks as security for such advances as the town's cash permitted.

Ostrich Feathers Quite The Thing Paris Fashion Show Reveals

By Universal Service.

PARIS, July 9.—Fashion plays such an important part nowadays that the Duc de Cazes, one of France's most important sporting aristocrats, temporiarly has abandoned the turf to become the leader of a movement for better and richer modes, in partnersip with Charles Kurzman, of New York, well-known in Paris, Deauville and Cannes, as arbiter elegantiarum.

The sportinf duke personally sifted thousands of new models, allowing only a couple of scores to be worn at the two most fashionable garden parties of the season, both sponsored by him, at the Polo club and Country club near Paris this week.

Four noeltiies were fairly launched on these occasions, as ascertained by Harper's Bazar experts. First, tucks as trimming for afternoon frocks, but mostly arranged in complicated designs, interlaced, and with waved edges.

Lovely Baroness.

The lovely Baroness de Rothschild wore a gown by Vionnet, entirely made of waved tucks, in navy blue chiffon, at the Polo Club tea party last Thursday.

Second — Yellow is the color which is most popular just now, both for day and evening wear. Harpar's Bazaar experts noticed a magnificient example in new pale yellow, just launched, worn by Lady Mortimer Davis at the Country club.

Third—Feather boas, in light colors, were now in daily use by smart women, who also carry immense ostrich fans at evening functions.

The Duches de Cazes wore pale pink boas at Kurzman's party at Bazatelle.

Fourth — Inspired by Lindbergh's flight, new hats have been launched with the helmet forward, and some with plane wings' movement at the sides. Both models have caught the popular fancy, and are immediately promising to be the summer's best sellers.

Apart from these afternoon affairs, at the Marquis Casati's night fete at her country place at Vesinet, near Paris, on Thursday, another attempt to re-introduce the gorgeousness of past generations into present day modes was attempted. The guests were bidden to dress in the Louis XIV and XV periods, which kept Lanvin Louise, Boulanger, Patou and other prominent dressmakers working night and day, turning out magnificent reproduction of period gowns.

As Madame Du Barry.

The Marquise Casati herself personified Cagliostro, whose magic wand brought to life various historical figures.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst as Madame Du Barry, in a white taffeta gown, with immense skirt, tight-fitting bodice and tiny white wig, first appeared, followed by a tiny, colored servitor in red and black velvet, with plumed headdress, holding a minuscule fringed parasol.

Cardii de Rohan, impersonated by Baron de Meyer, followed in the heels of Mrs. Reginal Fellows as Minion de Lencios.

All the guests were ushered in by Cagliostro's wife, namely Ganna Walska MacCormack, in blue and rose velvet edged with gold, against which shone four necklaces of emeralds of record-breaking size. Her headdress was so immense that she had to ride in an open car, despite a torrential rain, while two lackeys, with powdered wigs, held a large umbrella

PRETTY MAID STEALS RIDE

She's Stowaway On Ship To Enter Movies

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Even if she hadn't been a beauty contest winner, Miss Rose Host of Brooklyn probably would have been listed as the prettiest 20-year-old stowaway that ever walked about an intercoastal liner with just the clothes on her back, 50 cents in change, and a volume of Shakespeare.

Steamship officials of the Panama-Pacific line took Miss Host off the liner Manchuria at San Diego after a 5000-mile voyage in quest of movie fame.

Miss Host went aboard the ship at New York ostensibly to bid farewell to friends. Several hours after sailing, Capt. W. J. Munro received the surprise of his life when the stowaway appeared on the bridge to announce that she had neither ticket nor passage money. He made her do clerical work for Purser Lea J. Gallagher.

Miss Host has three younger sisters and one brother in Brooklyn. Two years ago she won a beauty contest conducted by a New York newspaper and later played small parts in Long Island studios, but always she had Hollywood in mind.

"When the studios closed and moved out to the coast, there was only one thing to do and I did it I had no money and my only chance was to steal a ship ride," she explained.

Today Miss Host is in Hollywood and although her resources are as slender as her slim young person she feels confident that she will now get her big chance.

Acrobat To Take 'Gunpowder Ride'

Italian Daredevil Shot From Cannon

By Universal Service.

ROME, July 9.—Fantasies of H. G. Wells or Jules Verne will be outdone next Sunday when the "Human Cannonball" will be shot out of the mouth of a mortar in the Roman stadium.

Ugo Zacchini, a former acrobat, will be catapulted through the air for a distance of 150 feet to land safely in a net. Last Sunday an experimental performance was successfully given at Turin before the dukes of Pistoia and Bergamo, nephews of the king.

Zacchini crawls into the cannon which is charged with gunpowder. When the charge is fired Zacchini hurtles through the air, describing a parabola. The acrobat says he is merely in the experimental stage of his act, and hopes when has a perfected cannon he can be projected through the air for 40 or 50 miles.

WALSH TO ACT MARINE'S ROLE

Gloria Swanson's Director To Appear With Her

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Gloria Swanson has found her marine for "Sadie Thompson." After taking 99 tests of 99 different actors, Raoul Walsh, her director, in desperation, donned the uniform and faced the camera. Walsh was a very good actor in the days when he worked for David Wark Griffith.

"Your test is the best of any of them," said Gloria when the Walsh film was projected on the screen. "Please play the part." At first he hesitated. He did not approve of directors acting in their own pictures.

Then a compromise, he took a test of his brother, George, to see if the other acting member of the Walsh family wouldn't fit the role. "He is not the type," Miss Swanson decided. It was then that Raoul made up his mind to play the part. Few men could resist the subtle flattery of being told that he is the one actor who should play a part.

If Raoul Walsh is as good an actor as adirector, Miss Swanson is lucky. Only it would be unfortunate if he let his acting supersede his directing. There are many good actors, but few good directors.

Frog Legs Banquet For Crippled Tots

DENISON, July 9.(AP)—Crippled children at the Hella Temple Shrine hospital at Dallas and at the Masonic home for the aged at Arlington, have in prospect, a banquent of frog legs. George Shields of this city has a supply in cold storage which he is keeping until it reaches 400 pairs when he plans to forward them for the feast. Recently Mr. Shields in company with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brown, gigged 51 large frogs at a creek near here within a few hours.

ROSIE IS ROUGH AT MAJESTIC

Clara Bow Stars in Tense Drama

"Rough House Rosie" the Clara Bow starring picture that has made critics search for new superlatives, is the attraction booked for the Majestic, through Tuesday.

"Rough House Rosie" has more action, tense drama and clever comedy crowded into it than five average motion pictures. No word that can be said would speak too highly of it.

From the opening sequence at the amusement beach to the rousing pugilistic encounter at the end "Rough House Rosie" held its audience enthralled. Sandwiched in between are dances, gay parties, bathing pool bits and even one where the innocent and highly indignant Clara spends a night in jail.

Reed Howes gives a fine performance as Joe Hennessey while Doris Hill shows visual evidence of why she is a Paramount contract actress. Others in the supporting cast are Arthur Housman, Douglas Gilmore, Henry Kolker, the Leon Lambert of Bebe Daniels' "A Kiss in a Taxi" and John Miljan.

Frank Strayer, brilliant young director, transferred the story to the screen. It is an adaptation by Max Marcin of Nunnally Johnson's Saturday Evening Post success. The scenario was written by Louise Long and Ethel Doherty.

Picture at Mission Packed With Thrills

"Bulldogging a steer" was once the greatest thrill in the program of a Western rodeo. Most rodeos of the present time have eliminated the "bulldogging" number from their programs for the simple reason that it is too dangerous for the cowboys. It required a marvelous riding ability, together with super-strength, the eye of an eagle and the capability of timing moments to split seconds.

"Bulldogging," when properly done, consists of releasing a wild steer from an enclosed corral, with a mounted cowboy standing in readiness to follow the steer. The cowboy must jump from his horse alongside or atop the bull and throw the steer from his feet to the ground. In championship contests this takes anywhere from one to five minutes.

Ken Maynard set a record in "bulldogging" in "The Land Beyond the Law," his starring picture showing at the Mission Sunday and Monday. To make the stunt all the more sensational, Ken "bulldogs" a steer in this picture to rescue Billy Butts, who is in the path of the maddened "dogy" and does so from his feet—without jumping from a horse. A "dogy," by the way, is a maverick steer generally causes the most trouble in a roundup.

This is one of the thrilling episodes in "The Land Beyond the Law," which goes still further in establishing Ken Maynard as the greatest all-round Western screen star.

Tiny French Boy To Be Deported By U. S.

Confederate Flag Over Grave Of World War Vet Starts Probe

By Universal Service.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 9.—For what reasons or by what excuse was the flag of the Confederate States of America placed over the grave of Lieut. F. B. McConnell, a veteran of the World War, and member of the Tennessee aviation squadron, who was killed in a crash at Langley Field, Va.

That is the question which army ad national guard officers are asking following the military funeral held here for Lieut. McConnell, June 16.

Lieut. McConnell, killed when the plane which he was piloting fell in flames during U. S. army war maneuvers, was a world war veteran and an officer in the national guard. He was born nearly a half century after the Civil War and had no connection with the armies of the Confederacy or with the Union armies.

So for what reason was the flag of the Stars and Bars draped over his final resting place.

When brother officers bearing his bod up to the grave here last month approached the flier's last camping ground, they were astounded to see the Confederate flag draped over the grave. They bore a casket draped in the Stars and Stripes.

By what right should he be laid to rest under the Stars and Bars?

That was the question that puzzled them.

There was no time then to investigate. While the flag of the Lost Cause rippled in the breeze, the casket wrapped in the folds of the Stars and Stripes was lowered in the grave. After the funeral was over, the question of why the Confederate flag had been placed their was raised again.

No one could say definitely who had placed the flag there. Guards on duty said that a number of women, who said that they represented one of the organizations devoted to the care of Confederate veterans, had placed the flag.

But the United Daughters of the Confederacy and other organizations denied that they had anything to do with it.

The flag was there, as the picture of a detail of infantrymen from the 117th Infantry firing the last salute over the Stars and Bars shows, but who placed it there and for what reason are questions still unsolved.

HIGH COMPRESSION FUELS BRING CHANGES IN AUTO MOTORS

AUTO BUILDERS MAKE CHANGES

New Engine Models Add To Efficiency

BY RAY PRIEST.
Universal Service Automobile Editor.

DETROIT, Mich., July 9.—Steady but small increases in sales of motor cars are indicated by the somewhat advanced manufacturing schedules of virtually every automobile maker.

The body manufacturers all report larger orders for July and the Fisher Body corporation finds its capacity taxes for the manufacture of closed bodies at its many plants in the vicinity.

Reports from the Pittsburgh district state that steel producers have heavy contracts from such large manufacturers as the General Motors subsidiaries, Willys-Overland, Ford, Hudson-Essex and Dodge.

The new car announcement for this week is the Chrysler "62."

A prominent trade magazine in its current issue points out that high compression engines, more beautiful bodies and four-speed transmissions as the outstanding events in the automobile world this month.

High Compression.

The Chrysler and Hupmobile announcements of their motors designed to utilize to best advantage the present high compression fuels are being watched with much interest by at least two other manufacturers. John N. Willys with his three Knight motored cars, Stearns, Willys and Falcon and another maker that will soon announce a new car also have what might be termed "high compression" motors because of their employing a different compression ratio in the cylinder head.

The Chrysler high compression motor may justly be claimed a new discovery, engineers who have tried to solve the fact that a poppet valve motor's greatest efficiency is found at the point where the "ping" first develops have tried the use of larger ratio compression cylinder head to prevent this "ping." Their success was slight because the moving parts of the motor had to be changed proportionately and then in some way unaccountably lost the power gained by the larger rationed head.

The Knight motors use the larger ratio heads, engineers of the various factories state. They claim it is possible for them to use what might be termed a high compression head because the Knight engine with their sleeves have virtually the same degree of heat throughout the working parts and the cylinder block. The Knight engineers claim that the variation in cooling or heating on the various sides of the cylinder is responsible for the "ping" when too large a compression ratio is used.

Brighter Colors.

The several makers that offer more beautiful bodies in their cars are also employing brighter shades of color.

The new Chrysler "62" has more pleasing body lines and several different color combinations of a striking hue.

The prices range from $1095 to $1295. It is understood that the "62" will replace the "60" although the factory officials refuse to make an official announcement to that effect.

Paige is the first company to introduce the four-speed transmission. Its 6-55 sales are showing a steady increase, the factory claims.

Hupmobile Leaves Nothing to Chance

Nothing is left to chance in building cars at the plants of the Hupp Motor Car corporation. Every part subject to stress and strain in both the Hupmobile six and eight is checked and tested before being permitted to enter the construction of either car.

This process begins even before materials reach the Hupp plants. The company keeps its own inspectors in many of the sources from which it buys materials. Their duty is to see that these materials are made in strict conformance to its standards which are, in scores of instances, the highest in the entire automotive industry. To the obvious advantages of maintaining these inspectors at the source of supply, is the additional one of eliminating unnecessary shipping, further lowering costs.

Engineers long ago determined the individual stress on each part of the cars they build. Their next duty called for them to ascertain the proper factor of safety and, knowing that, to test and retest constantly the various parts to determine that this factor actually is built into each.

Here is where the physical test laboratory does its part in the Hupp plants. Material and actual parts are here tested for such elements as tensile strength, transverse deflections, ability to withstand torsional strain, ductility and the various other stresses to which the parts of an automobile are subject in actual use.

Characteristic of its policies for nearly 20 years, Hupmobile demands that every part of its cars be fully competent to withstand strains far greater than even abusive driving will probably ever heap on it. Real axle shafts in both sixes and eight cylinder cars, for example, must withstand tests up to 140,000 pounds per square inch of elastic limit. As the severest road stress on its real axle is less than 20,000 pounds per square inch, the company provides a safety factor of eight to one in this vital part.

Crowded Cities to Use Skyscraper For Schools

By Universal Service.)

CHICAGO, July 9. — Mayor Thompson favors a plan of school architecture designed to solve the problem of caring for rapidly increasing numbers of pupils in congested cities, it was disclosed here today.

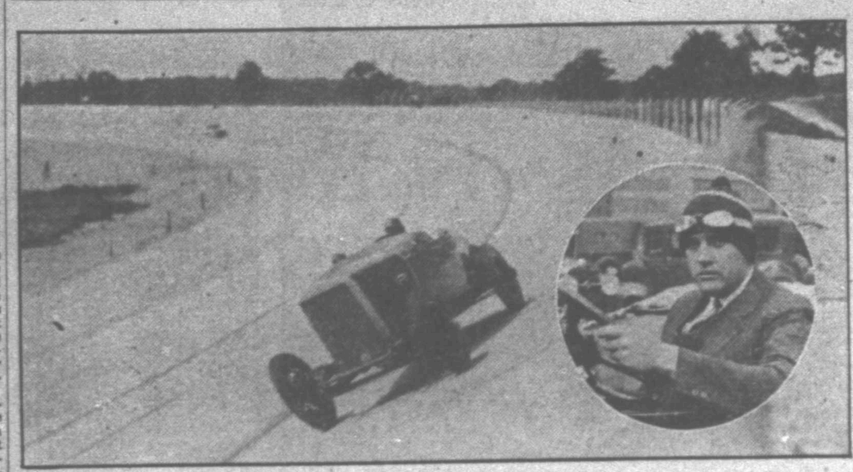

The plan is to replace comparatively low buildings with 10-story structures of compact design, affording elevator service, and housing many more class rooms than the average school building does today.

Ritchie Has Prexy Atmosphere

Whether or not Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland will receive the Democratic nomination for president in 1928, is a dark secret. But at least the governor rubbed shoulders with presidential atmosphere recently in Chicago when he was transported about the city in three Studebaker President sedans.

LaSalle Endurance Test

In an engineering test of durability held at the General Motors Proving Ground, Milford, Mich., July 20, this LaSalle roadster covered a 951.87 miles continuous run at an average speed of 95.3 miles per hour.

SLEEVE VALVE FOR RACERS

Pilot Predicts Adoption Of Knight Type

The adoption of the Knight sleeve-valve motor by builders of racing cars in the future is seen by one of America's leading automobile race drivers, according to a statement made by him to officials of the Falcon Motors corporation, of Detroit, builders of the new Falcon-Knight Six, the first Knight engined car to be built in America in the $1000 price field.

"Just as soon as the patent rights expire on the Knight engine in this country, I believe that many race drivers and builders of racing cars will adopt the Knight sleeve valve engine," this driver told the Falcon Motors officials.

When asked to explain his statement, this driver declared that with the use of smaller motors there is an increasing demand for the greater efficiency at high speeds to be obtained in the Knight engine and that "there is an advantage in having a motor that will stand the gruelling test of a 500-mile race without the hazards of breakdowns which come too often from the valve mechanism of the poppet-valve type motor."

This voluntary opinion expressed by a foremost racing driver is taken by Falcon Motors officials as a distinct tribute to the efficiency of the Knight sleeve-valve engine and cite the record breaking performance of a French Voisin racing car equipped with the straight-eight Knight Sleeve-valve motor. The Voisin recently lowered two world's records on the Montlherry track in France.

The Knight powered Voisin covered the 100 kilometers in 25 minutes, 13.8 seconds at an average speed of 127.5 miles per hour, and was clocked in 46 minutes, 49.4 seconds for the 100 mile distance at an average speed of 128.54 miles per hour. These notable track records were made from a standing start, shattering the mark formerly held by a straight eight Miller.

Falcon Motors officials declare that this outstanding performance is a marked indication of the power, speed, efficiency and stamina of the Knight sleeve-valve engine.

New Piston Feature Of Chrysler Development

One of the most important developments in the automobile engine was recently announced by the engineering department of the Chrysler corporation in their perfected Invar Strut Pistons.

This piston is said to be the only type of piston which combines the advantages of aluminum—(light weight and high heat conductivity, with lighter reciprocating parts and consequently less wear and vibration) — with the valuable property of cast iron—(practically no expansion under heat).

Invar, named from the first five letters of the word "invariable," is an alloy whose principal components are nickel and steel. It has the remarkable property of being so slightly affected by heat that there is practically no expansion or contraction due to temperature changes. Before its incorporation in the building of pistons its principal use was for standard measures and scientific instruments of precision.

In the building of the new Chrysler piston, a strut or brace of this special Invar steel alloy (which, incidentally, is quite costly) is built into the piston so as to form a rigid bridge connecting the head of the piston with the skirt. Thus it not only serves as a non-conductor, preventing the heat from passing directly from the piston head to the skirt—but also controls the expansion of the skirt.

Franklin Crankshaft Repairs Held Lowest

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 9.—A study of maintenance costs among owners of Franklin motor cars recently conducted by the engineering department of the Franklin Automobile company has disclosed the fact that crankshaft regrinding is practically eliminated in Franklin motors through the use of a casehardened steel in the construction of crankshafts.

Casehardening as a method for treating the crankshaft was introduced by Franklin in 1921. Up to that time crankshafts were made of heat-treated steel in accordance with the usual methods of construction. Heat treating is still the method employed by all but the Franklin, in the conditioning of passenger car crankshaft steel.

How great an advantage the casehardened process gives over the heat treatment can be seen from casual examination of the service records.

Regrinds on shafts returned to the Franklin factory for truing operations during the year 1920 numbered several score. In 1921 the figure had been increased 57 per cent. and by 1923 this total had more thand doubled.

Against this record E. S. Marks, chief engineer of the Franklin company, holds out the surprising performance of the casehardened crankshaft, which shows that although these shafts were put in production in 1921 the first casehardened shaft did not show up for regrinding until 1925 in which year only four casehardened shafts came back to the factory for regrinding.

In 1926 there were five so treated and in 1927 the number again dropped back to four showing the use of the casehardening treatment had practically eliminated this source of maintenance cost.

Franklin engineers point to this record as evidence of the internal quality which goes into the product they build and as a reason for the satisfaction which Franklin owners evidence in the cars they drive.

Graham Trucks Set New Record

Bearing out reports of good business activity throughout the country, Graham brothers, a division of Dodge Brothers trucks and commercial cars to customers in the United States and Canada during the week ended June 18 exceeded the corresponding week of any previous year in the company's history.

Not only does the record of 1,415 trucks and commercial cars delivered during this one week to domestic and Canadian purchasers exceed the corresponding week of the record-breaking year 1926 by a substantial margin but it is the biggest week so far in 1927, continuing the marked upward trend since last January.

"Equal Rights" Women Will Visit President

By Universal Service.)

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Plans to swoop in a body upon the temporary white house in the South Dakota Black Hills and demand of President Coolidge support for the "equal rights" amendment were announced today by the national woman's party.

The delegates will visit the president as soon as their convention closes at Colorado Springs, July 10.

YACHT-AIRPLANE.

A yacht that can fly has been invented in Germany. At a recent demonstration the schooner-like craft sailed into a harbor then was transformed into an airplane which flew serenely in the air. The duralumin masts are demountable for flying, and the craft has, beside the conventional sails and anchors, all necessary aviation instruments. Removable wheels for climbing to land from the water are placed under the airplane wings. The machine is of all-metal construction.

NEW SCHOOL BUILDINGS

CANYON, July 9.(AP)—Four new buildings will help house Randall county school children when the fall session opens. Bonds worth $24,000 to pay for construction will be sold June 30, B. F. Fronabarger, ex-officio county superintendent of schools, said.

CENT A MILE COST OF TRIP

Couple Travel Home For Small Sum

Less than a cent a mile for fuel was the cost to a couple who recently completed a trip from Los Angeles, Cal., to their home in Allegan, Mich. They drove their Oldsmobile landau sedan 2711 miles on the trip with a total gasoline expense of $24.51.

The trip was made by A. H. Foster, a seed and implement dealer of Allegan, Mich., and his wife. They left home last November, touring through the south and along the Pacific Coast. The small amount of expense for automobile maintenance excited the curiosity of Mr. Foster, and he decided to keep records on the homeward trip.

Leaving Los Angeles, the Fosters drove over the mountains at Raton Pass and continued over the Santa Fe trail through the midwest, meeting the various type roads to be encountered in a cross continental jaunt. They took eight and one-half days on the trip and their actual driving time was 93 hours, or four days.

Willys-Knight Sets New Popularity Mark

Showing a performance superior to any other motor car in its price class or near it, the "70" Willys-Knight continues to hold its position of leadership, according to a statement of Willys-Overland officials. They declare that the acceptance of this car by the motoring public is a recognition of its merits and cite the influx of orders from Willys-Overland dealers to support their claim.

With a type of design that embraces the best engineering ideas of two continents, the "70" Willys-Knight has reached a point of popularity never before attained by a car in its classification in its second year of production. The manufacturers claim that this strong position has been reached in a short space of time because of the outstanding success of the "70" from the time it was first introduced, less than 18 months ago. Since that time thousands of the "70" models have been placed in the hands of purchasers and the performance, reliability, economy and serviceability of these cars has become widespread knowledge with the resultant demand from all sections of the nation.

Dodge Scouts Visit Mystery Home Built Under Direction of "Spirits"

Strange as a dream, fantastic as a fairy tale, weird as a dwelling from some other planet is the spirit house built by the late Sarah L. Winchester at San Jose, Cal., which was recently visited by a touring party of Dodge Brothers and Graham Brothers dealers on the west coast, according to advice received by McFall Brothers, local Dodge Brothers dealers.

The builder, believing that she would die if she stopped construction, has left a structure that rambles grotesquely over six acres of grounds. Its roofs look like those of a city, and its interior arrangements are the vision of a disordered imagination made real in rare woods, fine marbles, priceless stained glass Tiffany windows, and silver and gold mouldings and fixtures.

Stairs that make nine turns to rise slightly over eight feet, doors that open on blank walls, suites of rooms that wander so aimlessly that a visitor walking 50 feet is as lost as if in the Mammoth cave.

With the immense Winchester fortune at her disposal, Mrs. Winchester had the menas to generously follow the spirit plans of her ghostly architects. Kitchens in unexpected places, glass doors in bathrooms, windows of every size and shape, in ceilings and even in floors, 47 fireplaces, as many as three in each room, mark the construction of this 160-room mystery mansion. There is a grand ballroom in birdseye maple so beautifully carved that the pattern looks like cobweb. Gold and silver chandeliers with rock crystal etched shades hang incongruously in pine finished rooms; hand rubbed mahogany joins with beaver board; blind chimneys repose in corners; constructed under the mystic directions of wraiths, which even in the spirit world must have been questioned for their sanity.

"This $3,000,000 jumble of architectural uselessness," commented one of the Dodge touring party "is one of the finest examples of what not to do with your money, even if you do have an income of $1000 a day.

167,382 RIDE IN MARMONS

Sales Boomed By Unique Demonstration Week

A compilation of results of the Marmon national demonstration campaign June 20 to June 30 just completed at the Marmon factory show that a total of 167,382 persons in all parts of the country were taken on demonstration rides in the Marmon Eight during the 10-day period. Reports were received by H. H. Brooks, general sales director of the Marmon Motor Car company, from more than 600 dealers, indicating that activity during the campaign spread over the entire country.

"Aside from the thousands of demonstrations in the Marmon Eight, it is conservatively estimated that the number of demonstrations in the large Marmon series 75 will bring the total to more than 175,000 during the campaign period," Mr. Brooks said.

"The record number of demonstrations in the Marmon Eight has been reflected in a sharp increase in Marmon sales during June. Advance retail sales reports from a number of the large cities as well as many smaller communities coupled with unprecedented shipments from the factory give definite assurance that June will set a new high record in sales."

NAUGHTY GRANDMA!

KANSAS CITY.—Well, it seems Hilliard Ransdell and Mary Miller, of this place, wanted to get married. So they went to Leavenworth and got married. Mrs. R. W. Lewis, who is Mary's grandmother, went right along and acted as best man, usher, bridesmaid and bestower of the parental blessing. Well, there's nothing to rave about in that, so far. But it seems Mary is only 15 and Hilliard is only 16, and it is against the law in Kansas to get married when you ought to be playing with dolls and bicycles. What's more, when the young couple stood up for their license, they gave fictitious ages, and Grandma Lewis didn't say a word about it. The judge gave her a sharp talking to about it. He said she'd ought to know better, at her age.

Delicatessen Kitchens Are "Horrors" to Men

CHICAGO, July 2.—"Delicatessen homes are horrors to men," declared Judge Joseph Burke of the Domestic Relations court today, in connection with his suggestion that public schools not only teach cooking to girl pupils, but conduct night schools for young women.

"Slip-On" Commercial Bodies Introduced in Pontiac Line

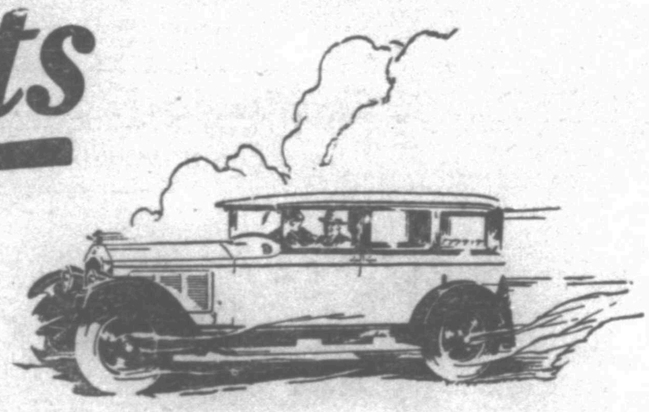

For the benefit of merchants and businesses that do not have a sufficiently large volume to warrant a special delivery vehicle, and traveling salesmen who must carry a large stock of samples, the Oakland Motor Car company now introduces two cars especially adapted to fit such needs—the Pontiac six coupe and roadster suitable for mounting two types of "slip-on" commercial bodies. The cars are ideal for combination business and personal use.

The open express body or the closed panel body may be slipped on either the roadster or coupe in a very short time; in the case of the roadster by simply removing the rumble seat rear deck cover, and in case of the coupe by removing the rear deck cover. Both these cars in the Pontiac six line are adapted to this purpose because the rear decks extend to the floor. Each type can be used interchangeably with or without the "slip on" bodies.

The inside dimensions of the open express body on the Pontiac six roadster are: width, 37 inches; length, 58 inches; height of panel, 10 inches. The roadster is finished in durable duco and has a folding top which is completely removable.

Small lots of goods and packages, requiring protection from dust and rain are conveniently carried in the closed panel body on the Pontiac coupe—although this body may also be used on the roadster.

WILLYS-KNIGHT GREAT SIX

300,000 owners acclaim the Willys-Knight! They praise the smoothness, silence and power of its incomparable sleeve-valve engine. The success of the Willys-Knight Great Six is striking proof of the nation-wide trend toward Knight-powered cars. Introduced only two years ago, the Great Six now ranks third in total sales of all cars in the $2000-and-up price class. Now, as a result of sweeping demand and increased production, new reduced prices are in order—making the Great Six more than ever the leader in fine car values.

BIRDS CROSS OCEAN SPACES

North American Denisens Found in Europe

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Reptiles, mammals and birds are in a riotous state at the New York zoo.

The reptiles are hissing indignation because of George Chapelle, a big heel and toe man from Paris, who wants the skins of American snakes to fashion smart shoes.

The birds are squawking and chirping because one of their number, the Gannet, has been pointed out as the one bird in the New York zoo who could cross the Atlantic, if permitted.

The mammals' chief difficulty is being out of things and are creating what amounts to a jealous disturbance. This is a dull time of year for the mammals. But, their ranks are to be enlarged very shortly by newcomers from the jungle lands. Not that it will quiet them, for new beasts mean new yowls.

No Snakes Escape

The snake house is, perhaps, the most popular offering of the zoo and quite definitely the most dangerous. But, in the history of the New York zoo there has never been an escape of a poisonous snake. The danger lies chiefly in the possibility of the small, venomous snakes escaping through an unseen hole in the cages. This possibility means that the snake house guards must be unfailingly on the watch and be thorough in their inspections. The attraction of the public to poisonous snakes is far in excess of its interest to the harmless reptiles, according to Dr. Raymond Ditmars, curator of mammals and reptiles at the New York zoo.

The views of Dr. Ditmars ought to assuage the outraged feelings of the reptiles who were on the war path, because of Chapelle's plot to collect American snakes. According to Dr. Ditmars, Chapelle will not consider the harmless snake, such as the black and milk species, for shoe patterns. These reptiles are the farmer's ally.

And, the diabolical species that are found in many parts of the United States, are not sufficiently plentiful to interest the Frenchman who wants to collect on a large scale. Besides, only the coral, a deadly poison specie, is vividly patterned, but its skin is too thin and small to be useful in the shoe business—unless to fill a special midget order.

Turtles Protected

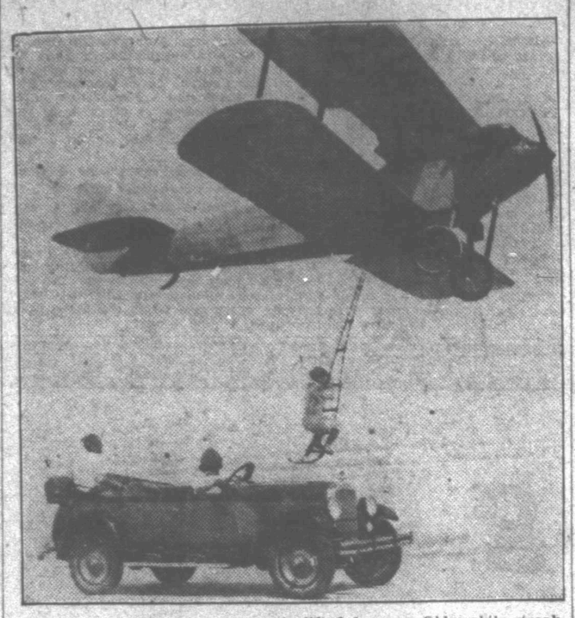

It is interesting to find that New York has a law against killing turtles, but no such legislation to protect the harmless snake. "Turtles preferred," is another circumstance that has created unrest in the snake zone.

This Gannet that has caused all the uproar in the bird department, is a much be-feathered and long-beaked type. Proud as a peacock and with the bearing of a duck, the Gannet gives the appearance of a bird more at home on the land than the sea.

But, according to Sam Stacey, head keeper of the birds who has been with the New York zoo for 23 years, the Gannet could make a trans-Atlantic flight in ten days. He would not be so much on altitude, but his endurance for long distance and his ability to go a week at the time without food are his greatest assets.

In discussing the Gannet's ability as a trans-Atlantic flyer, Stacey dispelled the idea that airmen are lonely in their long flights. There are many ocean birds to sing and hawk through the nights and days on the ocean. Many North American birds have been found in European lands.

85 Candles Gleam On Giant Birthday Cake

M'LEAN, Texas, July 9.—(AP)—A birthday cake two feet square and topped with 85 burning candles was one of the features of a birthday anniversary party at the ranch home of "Grandma" Rogers six miles west of here. Mrs. Rogers has spent most of her life on the southwestern frontier and shared in many of its dangers and adventures. Her husband, known as "Uncle Tom" Rogers, was a noted Indian fighter.

Pastor Would Raise Age For Marriages

HOUSTON, July 9.—(AP)—Laws should be enacted to prohibit marriage before men and women reach 25, according to Dr. Williams States Jacobs, pastor of the First Presbyterian church here. Young people are not grown until they are 25, he said in a sermon at his church. As long as marriage is as insecure as it is, he asserts, the morality of the race will gradually degenerate.

PAVED ROADS FOR ABILENE

Main Highway to Dallas Soon Complete

ABILENE, July 9.—(AP)—By September 15, or at the latest, October 1, there will be a paved road all the way from Abilene to Fort Worth and Dallas. This is assured with letting of a contract by the state highway commission to the McClung Construction company for surfacing 5.8 miles on state highway No. 1, east from Abilene to the Callahan county line.

Officials of the concern have announced they will have a force of men on the job within 10 days and they will be able to complete their work by September 15 if no unavoidable delays occur.

This strip of road was the last on the Bankhead highway from Abilene to Fort Worth to be contracted for. All the rest of the road is now hard surfaced or will be shortly. The McClung company is now on a short strip in Callahan county, which will be finished in a few weeks.

Concrete is to be used on the Taylor road. The Bates type of construction will be employed. The concrete is to be nine inches thick at the outside edge and six inches in the center. The road will be 18 feet wide.

Young Polish Prince, Heir To Vast Fortune, Buck Private in Army

By Universal Service.

CHOLODZIEJ, Poland, July 9. Prince Basile Switatopolk-Mirski, 25-year-old heir to a 42-room castle and an estate of 12,000 acres valued at $1,000,000, is serving as a buck private in the Polish army getting paid at the rate of about $8 a month and dragging himself out of bed like ordinary mortals when the bugle blows at 6 a. m.

Living an enforced social retirement for the last few months, Prince Mirski was found riding in a third class compartment of the Paris-Moscow express. The car smelled strongly of disinfectant He was sprawled out on one of the hard benches, his head sunk into a folded, half-blown up inner tube of his Locomobile, the only one in Poland.

"You can't travel high when you want to live within your income," he said in perfect English.

As the husband of Mrs. Alice Finnerty of White Plains, N. Y., the prince was loud in his praise of the much abused international marriages.

"If there ever was an international marriage, ours was," he said, "and after a whole year," (he emphasized the "whole year"), "we still consider ourselves honeymooners. Between us we have a tingling of all the bloods of Europe. The princess is part Irish, German, French, English and Spanish. I have Russian, Polish, German and Italian blood. It is a combination that makes for domestic peace just as it would international peace."

Wallet of Keepsakes.

In a wallet of keepsakes he carries five photos of the princess all the time. One shows her in a bathing suit as a mermaid with flowing golden hair, another as a child of three. There is another picture of the princess's six year year old son by a previous marriage. He still saves numerous clippings for mnewspapers about the wedding in the states last summer, where as a land poor prince whose estates had not yet begun to return a profit after the war, he earned his living driving a taxicap in New York Clay.

The princess is in a private hospital in New York. On the Polish estate she drank nearly a full glass of ammonia in the belief it was water. The alkali burned out the lining of theesaphagus, and stomach so that she may never be able to eat more than a few bites of sold food at a time. Polish physicians advised an operation, but she preferred to consult American specialists. The prince writes a four page letter to her every day. She always starts her letters "My dear Polski," he said, while he sometimes signs "Your adorable hubbyski."

Is "Strong" Man.

The strong man descendant of one of the oldest Polish and Russian noble families—he has muscles of iron—entered the army under the compulsory military service law of Poland. He was born a Russian citizen. Teh estates and Castle de Mir being within the territory which Poland obtained from Russia after the war, he had to become a Polish citizen and serve in the army to insure his inheritance. The estates are owned by his uncle, Prince Michael Mirski, Polish ambassador to the United States during President Roosevelt's administrations.

The prince has 16 months more to serve, and as an expert motor car driver and mechanic he has charge of the automotive section of the army, a job which would ordinarily go to a colonel.

Wearing a uniform is the real secret of his traveling in the cheapest coaches. In first or second class a buck private even if a prince must get up to give his seat to every officer who comes along—and no officers travel third class.

But when he gets out he won't be content to lead the life of a landed loafer. He said he was going into the billboard advertising business and make his own fortune. Outdoor advertising is virtually unknown in Poland. He has formed a partnership with Joseph J. Akston, an American. The big family automobile is to be used for taking customers on inspection trips of prospective sights for billboards. He got weeks furlough to run up to Castle de Mir to get the car.

Books For Blind Put In State's Library

AUSTIN, July 9.—(AP)—Sixty-eight books done in the Braille type for the blind have been made available by the state library at the capital as summer reading for students of the state school for the blind and others desiring them.

The volumes range from "Snow Baby" for the children to "Scaramouche" and "Moody Dick" for youths in their 'teens. No charge for use of the books will be made, nor is there any definite time limit for borrowers.

NEW CENTER FOR SYDNEY.

Sydney, N. S. W., plans one of the finest civic centers in the world. The buildings will surround a city square which will be made into a park. The city railway will erect an ornamental two-level station, capable of accommodating 200 trains an hour, and landing visitors for a pleasant first-view of the city. A large war memorial building, ornamental in design and to be used for national festivals, will be erected. Municipal buildings and a bridge over the river will harmonize with the general architectural scheme.

Billie Burke Will Adopt Abandoned Tot

NEW YORK, July 9.—Billie Burke, actress wife of Florenz Ziegfeld, is going to adopt a 14-months-old baby abandoned by its mother. In making this announcement today, Miss Burke said:

The Fable of the Veteran Club Girl And the Gentle Art of Man-Taming

By GEORGE ADE

Once there was a flock of Dolly Grays who had nothing to do in the Afternoon except look for Kitchen Help, so they organized a Club at which Macaroons Were served and Current Evils received many a Rap.

Several times they had settled all outstanding Differences between Capital and Labor, but they forgot to send Word to the Disputants.

One day they all took hold of a long Rope and pulled George Bernard Shaw down from his Pedestal. The only Thing that saved Shaw was that he did not hear about it.

But when they rallied around Home Topics, that was where they lived.

When it came to setting down Rules for repressing the natural-born Instincts of the Tots, they were Fine and Fancy.

Occassionally they took up Man and picked him to bits. One Week they proved that he was absolutely N. G., and at the next Round-Up they discussed Ways and Means of keeping him at Home.

A girl who had been on the Bargain Counter since the year of the Big Wind, arose and wanted to know why, if Man was such a Bunch of Tribulation, they were not willing to pass him up. She was hooted and the Executive Committee threatened to take her License away from her.

Minnie McGraw had a very snappy Essay, tied with Blue Ribbon, on how to make Home so alluring that the Bread Winner would not care to beat it into the Night Air. Min had just fluttered out of a School for Girls and she had a lot of fragile Theories that were simply waiting to be frost-bitten.

She allowed that if a Wife would put tissue-paper Shades on all the Lamps and surround the Sultan with plenty of Sofa Pillows, and permit him to Smoke, and then flit to the Piano and do a crooning Love Song, he would be so Charmed with his own Fireside that it would never occur to him to put on his Muffler and go Down Town for a little while.

Service Striper Starts Her Spiel

Min had it all figured out. She was for a Cheery home with an $80 Angora on the Prayer Rug and a glowing Bed of Coals in the Grate.

A reformed School Teacher with Moss-Agate Eyes took a different Tack. She never had been a Bird in the Gilded Cage, but she knew how to manage man because she had worked the Whole Thing out by Algebra.

She said that the boss Scheme for anchoring a Wage-Earner was to smother him with Atmosphere of Culture right at home. Then he wouldn't have to go to the Elks' Club in order to find Intellectual Stimulus.

She advised each Wife to back the Provider into a Corner at 7:30 p. m. and read to him about Psychic Phenomena. Later on, by the way of Recreation, they could take a couple of Leaves out of the Dining-Room Table and play Double Canfield.

Another Lady, who had been doing a Monologue for 40 odd years, cut in with a Theory that Home Life lost all Attraction because of the Evaporation of Love's Young Dream. She said that the Honeymoon ought to be made a Continuous Performance. Even those who had been roped together for Twenty Years ought to sit around on one another, talking Baby Talk and feeding each other marshmallows.

Then there arose a chunk of a Woman wearing Service Stripes. She had been to the Mill and got her Grist. She carried a line of Black Goods in Stock and was letter perfect on any Show that can be pulled off in a Church.

Four times had she looked the Preacher straight in the Eye and taken the tall Gamble. Of the Theories of Home-Making she knew precious little, but when it came to a working knowledge of Man, she was there with her Hair in a Braid.

"Men are roughly divided into two classes," she began. "We have those who love the Front Room so well that they cannot be dragged out after they are once curled up for the Evening. On the other hand, we have those who telephone ahead, so that it won't be too much of a Shock. I have tried both Kinds and you have my part of either one. My preference would be for the Boy that is around when he is needed, and keeps out of the way in between, but I never met that kind except in my Dreams.

China Breakage Precedes Get-A-Way

"I will say this much for all of them. For the first month they can't be shooed beyond the Front Door. The Wife who is not Wise to the habits of the Critter sees him planted there all Evening, surrounded by the Wedding Presents and reading a History of the United States presented by his Fellow Employes at the Wholesale House, and she tells herself that Domestic Life is a Pipe. But there comes an Evening when he lowers the Volume and listens for somebody to call him up on the Phone and say that Adams of Galesburg is waiting for him at the hotel. she never met Adams of Galesburg but she will hear about him now and then, also about Balancing the Books at the end of the Month, putting somebody through the Blue Lodge or the Consistory, and a Meeting of the Directors of the Business Men's League and the Committee on Street Improvement. Then the Time will come when no Alibi goes with the Dirty Sneak. She will go to the Kitchen to count up the Breakage and when she returns she will have the Battle Field all to herself, for he will have pulled the big Getaway. That is when she wants to join a Whist club and buy a Motto as follows: 'Absence makes the Heart Grow Indifferent.'

"Now, I love to hear the Bright Berthas get up and do their Solos at a Club Meeting, but I am here to tell them that when the Other Half of the Sketch wants to duck, he will get out if he has to carry a Window-sash with him and you can't hold him by playing on the Piano or reading Modern Verse. I've tried everything from putting Morphine in the Coffee up to Brute Force. Not a Chinaman's Chance! Now, when Number 4 begins to act restless about 7 p. m. I slip him his Lid and tell him to come in without waking up the Cat."

MORAL: True Happiness must be taken in Broken Doses.

"But there comes an Evening when he lowers the Volume of History and listens for Somebody to call him on the Phone and say that Adams of Galesburg is waiting for him at the Hotel."

Red River Gin Puts In New Equipment

ELECTRA, July 8.—Much improvement is being done at the Red River Ginning company plant four miles north of Electra. This week a second unit was added to their power to pull their "hulling machine," this being an engine costing between $6500 and $7000. After the engine is installed on its concrete form the engine house will be erected. This is being erected in order to take care of the bountiful crop expected this fall.

Protest Against Removal of Old Landmark in Austin Park Filed

AUSTIN, July 9. (AP)—Protest against the city council's proposed destruction of Austin's "leaning tower," a 70-year-old smokestack, which has served a flour mill, a distillery, machine shop and ice plant, since before the Civil war, has been made here by Col. Andy J. Zilker, pioneer resident, who presented the city with the stack six years ago as a land mark of the old slavery days.

The council has decided to demolish the stack, claiming that it is leaning "unsightly and out of harmony," with its Lamar park surroundings.

Colonel Zilker related that the structure was made of brick and stone which slave labor directed by the father of the late George Glasscock and a companion named Davis, and completed in 1958 as part of a flour and grain mill, to which Central Texas farmers within a day's ride brought their corn.

Some time after erection of the plant, Davis was killed when a beer wagon hit his wagon downtown.

After years' service as a flour mill, the plant was later said to have been a distillery and a machine shop, respectively. The Lone Star Ice company which Colonel Zilker headed, acquired the property in 1885 when the building was used as a machine shop. An ice factory opened later operated until six years ago when the Lone Star built a new plant.

The Old Gentleman - By FANNIE HURST

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

Author of "Lummox", "Humoresque"

THE Old Gentleman had a head like Chopin's.

White, square-cut, longish hair. A hooked profile. A thin body bent with years.

Once he had been first flutist in one of the finest symphony orchestras that had ever left melodic reverberations in the famous timbers of Concert Hall.

He still had his flute, a fine one with polished trimmings and a soft patine along the reed, that years and affectionate handling had laid on it.

To the Old Gentleman, the music of the flute was the bleat of the human heart. When he laid his lips against it his own heart seemed to swell with the burden and the beauty of some message he wanted the reed to convey.

For twenty-nine years, the voice of his flute sang through the superb ensemble of the symphony orchestra. His voice was only one of many; there were the violins, the violas, the oboes, the cellos, the clarionets, the drums, the trombones, even the cymbals. But the clear, singing quality of his tones was impeccable. For twenty of the twenty-nine years the Old Gentleman's position as master flutist was apparently unassailable. Directors came and directors went, and the personnel of the orchestra was changed to suit each leader's preference. But he was chosen to remain.

Then his teeth began to fail. Decayed and weakened front ones that somehow artificial sets would not replace.

That was the beginning of the end.

At the beginning of his twenty-ninth season with the Symphony, the Old Gentleman found himself not re-engaged.

It was a blow that was like cutting his heart in two.

Not so much for the living. The Old Gentleman had never married, had no family ties and had saved his little pile. But his place in the orchestra was taken by a young Pole, who played the flute with a singing insolence and shallowness of tone that, to the Old Gentleman who loved the tremolos that were going out of fashion, was nothing short of desecration.

Then, as luck would have it, adversities began to pile up. The troublesome teeth set up an infection in the Old Gentleman's system that resulted in a long siege of illness in a hospital.

The Musical Union meted out a few weeks' aid, his fellow musicians of the old guard called at the hospital two or three times and later at his boarding house when he was able to sit up and could be moved back there for more leisurely and less expensive convalescence, but after a time, as his recovery dragged on into months, the visits ceased. After all, these old musicians, what with rehearsals and the responsibilities of families, had precious little time for the amenities, even when they had to do with old friends of long and affectionate standing.

When the Old Gentleman was finally on his feet again—slightly shaky feet, to be sure—his nest egg was incredibly reduced. In fact so much so that, for the first time in his twenty-nine years, the Old Gentleman began to time his comings and goings with an idea of escaping the eye of his landlady.

She was a good enough soul and would probably have endured privation herself rather than subject him to embarrassment, but landladies must live. The Old Gentleman knew that. The knowledge made him tremble as he returned day after day, with nothing to show for his rounds to the orchestra leaders, the musical agencies, the employment bureaus.

Landladies must live. So must Old Gentleman out of work.

One fear lay uppermost in the melodic old heart. An Old Man's Home. The nest-egg that the year's illness had so ruthlessly gobbled up had seemed to insure him against that. But now, here he was suddenly, after all his years of precaution against it, weak, half ill, almost stony broke and jobless.

The fear bit him.

There had been an old harpist once who had fallen ill—become incapacitated for work—who had wound up in a Home for Old Men somewhere out on Long Island.

To the old gentleman the music of his flute was the bleat of the human heart. His own heart seemed to swell with the burden and beauty of the message he wanted the reed to convey.

And in the end the beloved flute helped him to vanquish his foe of fear—the beloved flute that was his companion through snow and sleet, heat and fatigue, his companion to a brave end.

The Old Gentleman had gone to see him a few times and taken him a bag of grapes or oranges on each occasion. For weeks after each visit, however, depression had lain so heavily upon him that finally he had been forced to discontinue these little errands of mercy. Then the old harpist had died and the men of the Symphony had "chipped in" and sent a wreath of carnations to his one-carriage funeral.

All that lay in the Old Gentleman's memory. It was not that the Home for Aged Men had been poorly conducted. On the contrary, it was a clean new building that overlooked Long Island Sound, and the corridors were fresh and white and clean-smelling, and each "inmate" had his room. Cubby holes of rooms, to be sure, but all with outside exposure and good light and air and, as the Old Gentleman and the harpist had agreed, far more comfortable than the furnished rooms in the house they had both dwelt in for so many years in New York.

But the odor of that Home was something to gnaw and to eat at the heart. The odor of poverty. The odor of sanctity. The odor of death of desire.

That was why, as the Old Gentleman tramped the streets in search of work, his naturally pale old face was even more blanched and drawn.

Drawn with fear.

His landlady, far from waiting for his return evenings, hid herself behind the window curtains as he approached, so that she might not have to see that blanched face as he entered.

She knew that without his room-rent she could not carry on.

And she knew that he knew that landladies must live.

The winter began to set in, and about the Old Gentleman's face, almost as if he had framed it, came a look of squareness.

The landlady thought she had never seen such a face of determination.

And it brought its reward.

After seventeen weeks of tramping, the Old Gentleman obtained a position as third flutist in a large Fourteenth Street continuous performance variety and picture theatre.

It meant longer hours than he had ever known in his life, trashy musical programmes, and lean wage.

In fact, it took quite a bit of manipulation for the landlady to figure out how she could keep him at all, unless she succeeded in getting a scrub-woman who went home to sleep nights, and gave the Old Gentleman the top-story cubby hole known as a servant's room.

This she finally succeeded in doing, carting up his luggage herself and decking the room out with a jonquil in a vase, so that her heart might break for him the less when he arrived home from his long day and evening to the dark little room that had for exposure a long, lean air shaft composed of four brick walls.

The Old Gentleman held the job. Through sleet, through rain, through sun, through gale he proved himself equal to the long daily grind. Twisted sometimes were his lips as he pressed them against his flute to emit sounds of tawdry syncopation that went against the grain of his very soul, but gallant lips, just the same.

The Old Gentleman, who loved the solemn grandeur of his Bach and his Grieg and his Wagner and his Handel, was now forced to press his flute for the buck and wing dancer and the whirl of feet to the music of the Black Bottom.

The landlady, who watched his face so anxiously, however, could only marvel at the great placidity that seemed to descend upon it after the obtaining of the position in the Fourteenth Street Variety Theatre.

There was almost a light across that old face.

Something had lifted.

The Old Gentleman, as nightly he wound up the five flights of steep stairs to his cubby hole of one lightless window, knew what had lifted.

The fear of the Home for the Aged.

The little cubby hole of a room was his palace.

He returned to it after his day's work with thankfulness for it in his heart.

An Artist's Conception of a Future Radio Power Transmission System, Based on Present Laboratory Experiments. High Power Beams of Short Radio Waves, Projected for Long Distance by Means of Huge Reflectors, Would Be Tapped by Receiving Apparatus Much as Broadcast Radio Programs Are Received Today.

How Homes Are to Be Heated and Lighted by Radio

POWER by radio is no longer a dream of scientists. In New York City recently a group of engineers watched a demonstrator raise his hand in which he held an electric light bulb. A few feet distant a radio tube was lighted and instantly the bulb in the scientist's hand broke out in a brilliant glow!

Such was the beginning of the transmission of power by radio, which leads to the prediction that tomorrow radio beams not only will heat and light homes and business buildings all over the country but furnish power as well for running all sorts of household devices and machinery. Powerful electric waves, it is predicted, surging through the air, will propel airplanes, motor cars, and even trains and ships! This wireless energy will be generated in monster stations and broadcast all over the country so that their power may be picked up by an aerial or grounded wire at any point. Thus every home, factory or mining camp, no matter how isolated, could, when properly equipped, pick its heat, light and power right out of the air. Such a scientific achievement is today well within the limits of possibility, for Dr. Phillips Thomas, research engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, has demonstrated before the New York Electrical Society how near scientists have come to the transmission of energy without wires between cities and across country.

These amazing experiments, according to Alden. P. Armagnac, writing in Popular Science Monthly, show that if the wave length were properly chosen, such a wave would have lost only a small part of its power by the time it completed its journey, and would continue its circuit many times. The broadcasting station would time its successive waves so accurately that the first one returned at the exact moment that a similar one was being sent out. The only additional power required, then, to keep the waves going would be to make up the slight loss in transmission as long as no power was being withdrawn. When some receiving station "tuned-in" to withdraw the wireless power, it would "leave a hole in the wave" that the broadcasting station would make up by supplying an additional amount. Many stations scattered over the world could feed power into the wave, each one carefully timed to emit its waves just as the main wave passed by.

With radio power in a test tube already achieved, will the next step be radio power in your home? Very likely, Dr. Thomas told the scientists who witnessed his demonstration of lamp-lighting by radio.

Already he can transmit power without wires over a short distance. With improved vacuum tubes and electric circuits, he said, he hoped to improve his power transmission until he produced a type of wireless wave that would yield a space-annihilating beam over which huge quantities of power might be sent.

Short radio waves, ten thousand times shorter than those used in broadcasting, are the means Dr. Thomas will use. His goal is a "beam radio" which will project, like a searchlight, to its destination. Such rays would criss-cross a city, and wires would become obsolete. Each home would have its own "rod receiver," a short copper wire, resembling the one Dr. Thomas used in his demonstration, with which you could tap the power flowing through the ether just as you now listen-in to music with your radio set.

The idea of reflecting radio waves with mirrors may seem a little startling, but your own experience will yield the evidence in its favor. The silvered reflector of your car's headlight concentrates its rays in a parallel beam. Light waves and radio waves are closely related to each other, differing only in their length; the waves of light are much shorter. Could radio waves, like light, be focused?

In between light and radio are heat waves—of medium length. Like light waves, they too can be reflected from a mirror as a beam—the polished copper reflector of your portable electric heater is for that very purpose. Thus you might expect with good reason that radio waves, at least the short ones that approached nearest to the character of heat waves, might be reflected in the same way. You would be right.

Heinrich Hertz, who discovered the existence of radio waves, succeeded years ago in focusing extremely short radio waves to a beam. In his laboratory he set up reflectors six feet in diameter, made of pitch and wax and modeled in the same parabolic or curved, somewhat cone-shaped, form used in the reflectors of automobile headlights.

Immediately he found he could project a six-foot-wide radio beam across his laboratory.

For radio power, then, it is readily possible to obtain a short wave capable of being shot as a straight, narrow beam from a parabolic mirror, as Dr. Thomas proposes. One remaining difficulty still stands in the way—the shorter the wave, the less power can be put into it! The very construction of the vacuum tube that generates the wave makes loss of power the inevitable result of an attempt to shorten the wave length, unless some way can be found to prevent the tube from burning out under increased current. This is the problem that Dr. Thomas faces, and that he has already gone far toward solving.

Dr. Thomas has substituted for complicated receivers an ordinary piece of straight wire, made possible by the short wave he has produced. To pick up power from any radio wave, the rod, Dr. Thomas found, must be exactly half as long as the wave itself. Collecting current from a broadcasting wave would therefore require a rod of unwieldly length. With Dr. Thomas' eight-foot wave, it need be only four feet long—a handy little rod to keep in your home!

The way that Dr. Thomas' "half-wave receiver," as he calls it, picks up power from the air might be illustrated by placing a hollow tube half an "ocean wave length" long in the breakers at the seashore, pointing out to sea. One end of the tube would lie in the crest of an incoming wave, the other in the trough of the preceding one, and water would surge through it in one direction. A moment later, the crest would have reached the other end, the first end would be in a trough, and water would rush through it the other way. In the same manner an alternating surge of current runs back and forth along the metal rod from the radio waves in the air.

One thing, Dr. Thomas says, is certain—with half the power of a modern broadcasting station behind it, a short-wave radio ray focused in a narrow beam of concentrated power would kill anyone who stepped in its way. Stray electric currents which it would induce in a man's body would instantly burn him up. Here, then, is a veritable "death ray"—not a fantastic dream, Dr. Thomas points out, but like radio power a sober scientific possibility. In time of war, this ray would prove a terrible and awe-inspiring weapon. Radio rays of overwhelming power turned upon an enemy army would cause it to disappear in smoke. Along the radio beam might course powerful electric currents to complete the destruction.

But in its peace-time uses it would be of greatest service to man. High towers could be used to keep the deadly beam where it could do no harm as it transmitted vast quantities of power across the earth. At night a bluish glow would surround the transmitting tower from leakage of the high-tension current, and perhaps even the beam would glow like a searchlight piercing faint mist.

Smaller beams, less dangerous to man, might distribute the power at the receiving station. This would correspond roughly to the present system of using transformers to change the dangerous high-tension electric current used in wired power transmission into low pressure current safe for home use.

Into your home, perhaps straight through the wall, the ray would enter, while the "half-wave receiver" would absorb power to light your lamps—not ordinary lamps, but a special type of electric light built like a radio vacuum tube—and run your washing machine and electric toaster.

How GRIT Gets Into PEARS

STONY or gritty particles, frequently found in pears, it has recently been discovered, are not inherent in the nature of this fruit, or even of certain species, but is due to an insect whose scientific name is Calocoris. This discovery was made by a French entomologist, Bernard Touvelot, the result of whose researches was recently laid before the French Academy of Agriculture. The report says:

"The larvae of this insect, which are hatched at the close of the vegetative season, feed upon the sap of the young leaves in the buds, no visible injury, however, being caused by this. But, as soon as the blossoms have formed, the larvae attack the newly set fruit, perforating it and feeding upon the juices.

"By the month of June they have ceased to attack the fruits, attacking the young shoots exclusively; by mid-July the Calocoris has reached the adult stage and disappears. At first the fruits which have been pricked exhibit, wherever the puncture has occurred, postules having raised edges with white granulations in the centre. In this manner there are formed little islands of hardened tissue, at whose level and immediate neighborhood the pulp undergoes scarcely perceptible growth, although it grows very rapidly all around them. Little by little these islets appear to be burying themselves within the fruit, though in reality it is the flesh of the fruit which grows and surrounds them.

"By patient research, M. Touvelot has learned not only the habits of this destructive insect, but that it is particularly sensitive to insecticides containing nicotin. He, therefore, recommends treatment with a solution of soap and nicotin, sprayed upon the budding leaves and the newly set fruit.

"In experiments in 1926 four applications were made in April and May to lots of from ten to a hundred trees. The liquid was sprayed plentifully so as to moisten thoroughly not only the young leaves and fruit but the old bark surrounding them.

"The results were quite interesting. The lots treated on April 22 and May 2 produced 50 per cent of uninjured fruit. The lots treated on April 15 and May 13 gave mediocre results, the first date being somewhat too early, and the latter too late."

ANTIDOTE for BITES of SNAKES

Crystals of Permanganate of Potash, for Neutralizing the Venom of a Snake, Are Contained in a Small Wooden Holder, the Cap to Which Has a Tiny Lance for Cutting the Wound Open to Make the Blood Flow Freely.

AS a precaution against the bites of venomous snakes, which are more plentiful in rural regions than most people suppose, the United States Forest Service recommends campers to provide themselves with a small emergency kit, purchasable at stores that deal in sporting goods.

It is a wooden holder, easily carried in a waistcoat pocket or a lady's bag, which contains crystals of permanganate of potash, a chemical that will neutralize the venom of a rattlesnake and of other kinds of poisonous serpents as well.

A cap on the other end of the holder, when unscrewed, reveals a tiny lance, which is a very important part of the equipment. For, if a person be bitten by a venomous snake, the first thing necessary to do, after putting a ligature on the arm or leg above the wound, is to cut into the latter freely and make the blood run.

This accomplished, the wound should be thoroughly washed with the permanganate, dissolved in water. The stronger the solution and the quicker it is applied the better.

A DOLL That Really Can KISS

ALTOGETHER novel is a kissing doll, patented by James A. Bolton, of Sayville, N. Y. Inside its chest is a rubber bulb, which is connected to the mouth of the doll by a tube. The body of the doll is of flexible material, so that, when it is pressed, part of the air in the bulb is squeezed out.

When the pressure is released, a partial vacuum is created in the bulb, causing air to rush into it through the tube. If, then, the doll is squeezed and its mouth is applied to the cheek of a child, release of the pressure will cause air to rush into the opening between the doll's lips, producing a sibilant sound like that of a kiss.

The inventor says: "This simulation of a kiss is particularly pleasing to the fancy of a child, and the doll thus constructed provides an attractive plaything."

Pneumatic Mechanism Within the Doll's Chest Imitates the Sound of a Kiss.

Weather SECRETS Held by the SUN

SCIENTISTS, and particularly meteorologists, are giving an increasing amount of study to the subject of solar radiation, which, as now realized, is the chief agent in the control of weather on the earth. Its study is, therefore, of utmost importance in relation to the atmosphere and its changes.

The "solarimeter" (or sun measure) is an instrument for determining the amount of energy delivered by the sun upon the earth. This varies with latitude, with the seasons, and with fluctuations in the sun's output of energy, which at some times is 10 per cent greater than at others.

Nevertheless, observations of this kind are made at very few of the thousands of meteorological stations scattered over the world, the apparatus heretofore used being bulky, complicated and expensive. Not until recently was an instrument devised that is cheap and portable, rendering it practicable to include solar radiation measurements in the daily routine of weather recording.

The instrument is a combination of a thermopile with an electrical measuring device, and its inventor is spending his entire time traveling with it to all parts of the world for the purpose of mapping the variations of solar heat-delivery.

Studies continued through a series of years have convinced the astro-physicists of the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, that the amount of heat—or perhaps it would be more correct to say energy—given out by the sun is constantly varying, and that at times it is as much as 10 per cent more than at others. They now claim that observations of what is called the "solar constant" makes it practicable to forecast weather long in advance. This, in fact, is the most important object of the inquiry.

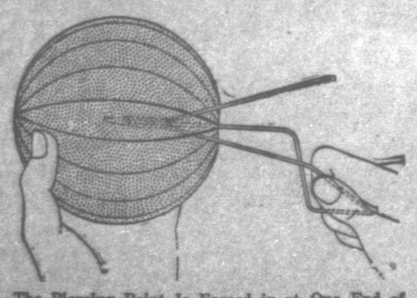

The "Pyrheliometer" Is the Chief Instrument Used for Ascertaining the Intensity of the Heat Which the Sun Sends to the Earth.

The chief instrument used for measuring the amount of heat delivered by the sun upon the surface of the earth is called a "pyrheliometer." An essential part of it is a disk with a black ring surrounded by a white ring. The black ring necessarily absorbs more of the solar rays than the white ring, and the difference of heat-absorption between the two sets up an electric current, the strength of which is a measure of the intensity of the radiation falling upon the disk.

Handy SCOOP for Citrus FRUITS

A NOVEL instrument for removing the "meat" from grape and other citrus fruits, accomplishing the purpose rapidly and getting out the pulpy segments whole and unmutilated, is the invention of William Barfield, of Clearwater, Fla.

Ordinarily the meat is separated from the fruit with a knife, the process requiring a number of cuts, always with a likelihood that some of the pulp segments will come out broken.

The Piercing Point Is Forced in at One End of the Core and the Wire Rips a Pulpy Segment Away from the Fibrous Partitions That Encase It. A Slight Pull and Out Comes the Segment Entire.

But the tool patented by this inventor is altogether different, being a wire doubled back on itself to form a piercing tip and bent into such shape as to function as a scoop. The wire extends from the piercing tip with one short stretch and one long stretch. The latter is looped for a a handle and then turns to join the piercing tip. Thus, in effect, there is at the piercing point a joining of three stretches of wire. But they are not in the same plane, one of them being offset in such wise as to form a scoop having the shape of the letter V.

In use the instrument is grasped in one hand and the pared fruit held in the other hand. The piercing point is forced in at one end of the core, and, following the core, the wire tool rips a pulpy segment away from the fibrous partitions that encase it. A slight pull and out comes the segment entire. Repeating the operation a few times, all the meats are neatly and easily removed without being broken.

The loop that forms the handle is offset to one side of the V-shaped angle between the wire stretches, so that the operator's hand does not touch the pulp segments as the latter are disengaged from the fruit.

New Inventions

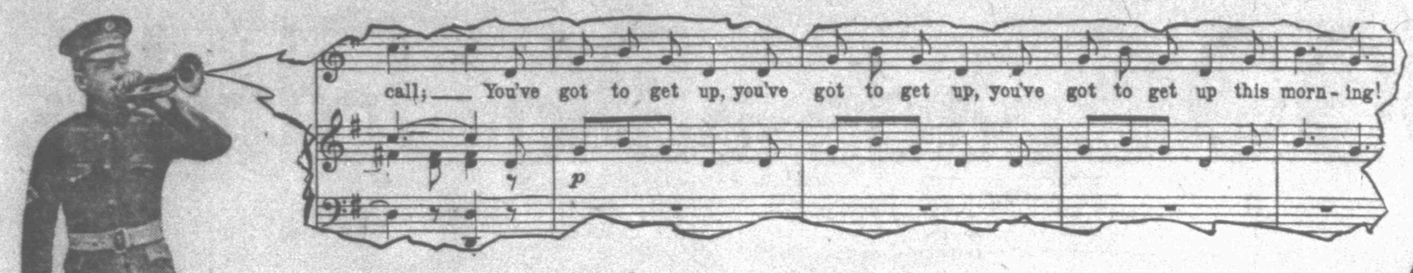

MICHAEL O'FLANAGAN, of London, has invented a pair of underwater goggles that fit water-tight and so hold an air space between the eye and the water. It is reported that objects can be seen quite clearly through the water with these goggles, provided there is sufficient light.

* * *

Because of its peculiar shape and diamond point, a new form of shovel is easy to shove into a pile of dirt, metal or rock.

Blocks having notes and parts of the scale printed on them, are now used to teach very young children the rudiments of music. The spaces of different notes are designated not only by a diagram but by a picture of an animal as "cat" for the note "c." The pieces thus teach a double lesson and afford much amusement.

Waked Up His Angry Bride with Bugle Calls

Surprising Wail of a Chicago Wife Who Fell in Love with Brass Buttons, but Fell Out When Her Military Hubby Got Musical at Midnight.

A Close-up of Mrs. Myrtle Stange, Who Adored Army Bugle Calls Before She Married and Heard Them Rehearsed at First Hand During the Wee Sma' Hours.

THE bugle has its place in the army and music is a delightful art, but when the twain combine to get a bride out of bed at hours unfitted to domestic schedules, then something should be done about it, in the opinion of Judge Joseph Sabath, Chicago's "divorce expert."

And something was done about it.

That something was a divorce, granted pretty Mrs. Myrtle Stange, 22, from her musician, bugler, top-sergeant husband. Furthermore, his honor threw in a parcel of alimony and a lecture of some asperity for the musically inclined and highly military Bridegroom Stange.

Time was, Mrs. Stange admitted, when a bugle call was the sweetest music ever to break upon her sensitive young eardrums. It thrilled her through and through. It caused little tickling sensations to pursue themselves up and down her spine, like a pair of playful squirrels on a tapestry of grapevines. It caused her toes to tickle and her heart to beat with unwonted vigor. In fact, it brought about a number of emotional manifestations, and all of them were easily explained.

The explanation was obvious in the person of Harold Stange. Harold was her sweetheart then, fresh out of the army, with the poise and bearing gained from daily drill, and a handsome Harold in his uniform if ever there was a handsome Harold. Not only that, but he was military and commanding—and how he could play on his bugle! Taps, reveille, retreat—they all sounded like Beethoven's First Symphony to the little blonde girl who figuratively sat adoringly at his feet and caught the golden notes as they fell from the magic instrument.

Sometimes Harold entranced her even more. He abandoned his bugle, with its gross limitations, and took up his cornet. And how he could play that cornet! Girls, girls! He positively made it talk, sing, croon, anything, and anything was all that was needed with the handsome Harold at the other end of the apparatus.

Now and then the neighbors emitted loud protestations against the Stange musical genius, at least against its exhibitions in their vicinity. Myrtle flew to Harold's defense and threatened to do something drastic by way of retaliation to such people as couldn't hear real music. She was that indignant.

Finally Harold proposed that Myrtle marry him and make a permanent thing of his music—have it about at all times, to fill her soul with pleasure and her heart with gladness—likewise the neighbors with notes of protest and the air with epithets, no doubt.

It didn't take Myrtle long to make up her mind. The handsome Harold, the natty uniform, the golden-throated bugle, the silver-valved cornet, the little home, the pretty kitchenette—one girl couldn't ask much more than that in life.

So she became Mrs. Harold Stange and took bugle, cornet, romance, hopes, ambitions, aspirations, dreams and Harold to a little flat all her very own—her own and the divine Harold's. There were the usual fixings, the usual difficulties and the usual joy at overcoming these difficulties.

Each night Harold took his pretty bride in his arms at bed-time and with one free hand to hold aloft the bugle, gently blew taps to close their perfect day. The music sent Myrtle into the arms of Morpheus, for whom Harold operated by proxy, with sweet tranquility in her heart and serenity in her soul. All the world was hers.

When morning came, or "came the dawn," if we would adhere to the romantic, Harold slipped quietly out of bed and obtained his beloved bugle. Ever so gently he blew reveille and repeated it until Myrtle awoke, a happy smile on her face and a song on her lips. Then Harold went his way to his round of duties with his little wife's blessing and Myrtle waited through the day for her charmer to return.

But the time came when the Stange fortunes were not all they should have been. Bills piled up and the task of making a comfortable living became more and more difficult. Harold began to worry, his once carefree and boyish face was lined with the liner of distress. He smiled all too infrequently and his conversations began to be of the short, crisp and half-sullen variety that betokens the man whose mind is not free to enjoy conversation.

Myrtle noted the change and began to worry, too. She feared her husband might be ill. She questioned him. He was evasive. Why should he distress her, a mere slip of a girl with no idea of the problems of life, with his troubles? She had enough to do to take care of the little flat, and to keep the grocery bills down.

The old, old story wore on a little longer. The troubles piled up and Harold Stange worried a little more each day. His smile was far more infrequent now and Myrtle's happiness was slipping away. Then, quite by accident, she learned the truth—that the family fortunes needed a little strengthening if they were to reclaim their happiness from the ever mounting yesterdays.

Myrtle volunteered to go to work. She overrode Harold's objections and got a job. She earned a little—not much, but something—and it all helped. But it didn't narrow the breach. If anything, it caused it to grow more rapidly.

Her efforts were honest enough and ambitious enough, but the results were not what she wanted. The following alleged developments came to light during her legal action:

Soon there were quarrels. She found it difficult to get up in time to get Harold's breakfast and get to work afterward. It became an effort to trudge to the job every day. She was tired when she reached home at night and Harold was tired. Both were worried, petulant, ill-tempered at times. Harold, she said, seemed more ill-tempered.

The "taps" custom stopped. No more entrancing music, and no more of the old fun. Just work and bickerings. But even that would have been bearable, Myrtle told the divorce judge, if Harold had forgotten his musical talent entirely while he was at home. But he insisted on bringing it right into the flat with him—at the most inopportune times. Early morning seranades are bad enough, as anyone will admit, but mid-morning bugle calls—well, it would be difficult to imagine anything more disturbing to marital equipose and family tranquility.

And, be it known, early or mid-morning bugle calls were precisely what Harold, in his gloomy state, went in for.

The first time Harold arose at 5 a. m. and blew reveille, Myrtle thought it was a joke. The second time she thought it was a mean trick and the third time she thought it was a habit and one of those habits that Harold should get over at once or suffer the consequences, which, she informed him, would be the loss of his wife and her once loving and adoring companionship.

These threats failed to restrain Harold. On the contrary, the reveille blowing became more regular, she said. No morning passed, Myrtle told the court, that did not see the dawn ushered in with the staccato strains of the army's most anathematized melody. Day after day, week after week Harold continued his practical joking and each day he blew a bit earlier.

Ultimately, Myrtle said, the bugle calls began coming shortly after she had fallen asleep. They would awaken her and then would come the long hours of torture before she fell asleep again. No sooner asleep again than another bugle call. So it continued, a systematic persecution, she said; a reveille far worse than any of Uncle Sam's conscripted soldiers of the late war ever imagined it.

That the court might better understand the cruelty of the persecution, she explained that her job demanded her presence at an early hour of morning while her husband was not obliged to reach his work as a musician until after noon. Hence his ability to remain awake and play reveilles without feeling the loss of rest.

When the case reached Judge Sabath, Myrtle was full of anger against the bugle, the cornet and all other forms of musical instruments capable of producing reveille calls. Furthermore, her love for her husband had been transformed, on a musical scale, into sharp displeasure, she said. She wanted a divorce and she wanted it quickly. Furthermore, she wanted alimony enough to impress upon Harold the seriousness of his offense against peace and comfort.

Judge Sabath, after hearing the evidence, upbraided Harold soundly. He charged him with being a bullying, domineering product of a brief war time authority. She called him an annoyer of a defenseless woman and declared that there was no torture more drastic than that which deprives a person of sleep and rest. Such persecution, he said, results in fraying the nerves and sometimes ends in a serious mental disorder and a complete physical breakdown. By taunting his wife as he did, Judge Sabath told Stange, he was subjecting her to the inroads of many disturbances and jeopardizing her health in a manner both cruel and dangerous.

Judge Sabath awarded Myrtle her divorce and alimony commensurate with her husband's earning powers which, if measured by his ability and enthusiasm in blowing reveilles, would be considerable, she declared.

"He couldn't believe the war was over," she said, after receiving her decree and the alimony order. After looking these documents over for a few minutes, she remarked with high acidity:

"Perhaps, by the time he rustles around a bit to dig up this alimony price and the court costs, he'll realize that war in reality is better than war in rehearsal."

Known as Chicago's "divorcing judge," antithetical to the city's many "marrying parsons," Judge Sabath has handled some of the most extraordinary complaints ever accepted as grounds for divorce action. Many of these he has cast aside, but the Judge took particular notice of pretty Mrs. Stange's petition and ventured a lengthy interview in which he went into some detail on freak divorces and their significance.

"Every day divorce complaints reach me that are ridiculous beyond imagination," he said. "I have discovered women seeking divorces because their husbands washed their hands in the sink; others who wanted to be free because hubby wouldn't wear a hat, but always wore a cap; others who believed they were entitled to the single state again because their husbands disliked some particular motion picture star and refused to take them to the theatre when that star was performing. Still others have asked for a separation because their husbands gargled.

"These things may sound ridiculous, and they are, but, just the same, they get into the divorce courts, and they stay there until some judge throws them out. And nine times out of ten, these wives are genuinely unhappy. They are miserable, do not love their husbands, and are injured by being forced to live with them without some adjustment of their troubles. But there is no adjustment. They come into court, their charges prove to be too petty to warrant a divorce and out they go, to live scrappily ever after, if I may be pardoned a bad pun.

"There is a way, of course, to eliminate all these things—to send these troubled brides and bridegrooms back to each other with their difficulties ironed out and a fresh start in life all mapped out for them. But the trouble is, we are not equipped with that means.

"A domestic relations counsel, with paid attorneys and sometimes even psychologists to weigh these problems and suggest ways and means of abating them, would eliminate much of this waste of effort, waste of money and waste of the court's time. Furthermore, it would give the warring folks a new lease on happiness, and a new chance to make good on their marital pledges.

"When every State in the country has such a bureau, there will be far fewer divorces and much more happiness. When they have such a bureau, there will be fewer shyster lawyers, outside the pale of the bar association, preying like vultures on the unhappinesses of others.

"Now as to this reveille case. It was 'different' in that it inflicted genuine physical punishment on the wife. I am not a strong believer in mental agony, except where a real bereavement or a real sorrow is concerned. These nervous women who are constantly being 'tortured mentally' usually have little mentality to torture, hence their suffering is certain to be a minor matter. But physical suffering is a different thing.

"Mrs. Stange, as I see it, was kept from her sleep, was forced to leave her bed at outrageous hours and go to work, while her husband, after tormenting her, went back to bed and enjoyed his sleep.

"The courts are ever ready to give relief where relief is genuinely and sincerely needed. Where it is not, where there is no emergency, they can only throw the case out and hope for the best—which seldom comes."

"He didn't seem to know the war was over," Mrs. Stange Told the Court in Describing Her Bugler Husband's Penchant for Awakening Her at Assorted Hours.

Divorced and Treated to a Sharp Denunciation of Her Former Husband by Chicago's Divorce Judge, Mrs. Stange Was Able to Smile Like This Once More.

A $1,000,000 Spade to Dig Up Italy's Sealed City

How Modern Engineering Will Give Back to the World the Priceless Treasures of Ancient Rome's Playground.

By RENE BACHE.

SEALED for two thousand years in an air-tight chamber of lava and cinders, Herculaneum, called the perfect city of the Roman Empire, is to be brought into the light of day again.

An appropriation of millions of dollars, made recently by the Italian Government, is to be used to clear away the sixty feet of matter that covers the ancient town, so that its architectural wonders may once more astonish their beholders.

For Herculaneum was the play city of the wealthy Romans, the beauty spot of the lovely southern peninsula, the Palm Beach or Monte Carlo of its time. It was a pleasure center, but it was not the tinseled play town of the modern day. Instead it was built with the primary purpose of stability and its structural wonders, or such of them as have been partly uncovered, reflect in a heretofore unknown measure the grandeur of the power-loving Romans combined with the artistic glory of ancient Greece.

Herculaneum was the chief artistic, literary and scientific center of Rome. Here were the great libraries, the great galleries, the great laboratories. Here wealthy Romans gathered to play—but their play was with art and science and literature, and occasionally the theatre.

As long ago as the early eighteenth century, and at various periods since then, attempts at excavation were made, shafts being sunk and tunnels dug. They were clumsily managed and unsystematic. But now modern appliances and engineering skill are to be employed, and before long a large part of the ancient city will be disclosed to view.

"Sappho," from the Famous Painting by Amanda Brewster Sewell, Gives an Insight Into the Herculaneum of the Pre-Vesuvius Days. Excavators Expect to Recover Much Information on the Life of Sappho, Now the Subject of Bitter Scholastic Argument.

Bronze Statue of a Mounted Warrier of Early Rome, Taken from Uncovered Section of Herculaneum.

It was a city beautiful with stately buildings, columned porticoes, a great theatre, public baths and temples; with wide, straight streets adorned by many fountains. Everywhere were statues of bronze and marble. Running water, to supply the houses and fountains, was carried through lead pipes from a main along the principal streets, upheld on tall columns.

The city was laid out on a rectangular plan, divided into exactly equal blocks of buildings. Its main street, paved with blocks of lava, ran parallel with the sea and not far from the shore line, the sidewalk of inlaid marble a foot higher than the roadway. Columned porticoes lined this avenue on both sides. The streets intersecting it at right angles were narrower. Surrounding the city was a high wall for defense. A mosaic found in one of the excavated houses represents a town with battlemented walls and four towers; very likely it is a depiction of Herculaneum.

The city was built of brick and volcanic tufa. Along the cross streets were dwellings, shops and barrooms for the sale of wine. One such barroom was found paved with marble and provided with large cupboards whose marble shelves were inserted in the wall. The marble counter showed green stains from copper coins flung upon it in payment for drinks. In the "till" were a number of such coins.

The earthquake of 63 A. D. did enormous damage in Herculaneum, and repair work was still in progress when, fourteen years later, the great eruption of Vesuvius occurred. That eruption buried Pompeii with ashes and cinders, but Herculaneum, eight miles distant, was overwhelmed by torrents of volcanic mud which leaped over the walls, choked the streets and flowing into the houses and other buildings filled them up.

Pompeii, built on a higher ground, escaped the river of hot mud which buried Herculaneum. Eruptions in later centuries spread further thicknesses of mud over the latter city, so that today it is overlaid by 60 to 100 feet of rock into which the mud has hardened.

Thus Herculaneum became a sealed city, the like of which does not exist anywhere else in the world. Barring the small portions that have been excavated, it is exactly as it was when the disaster of 77 A. D. overtook it. For the mud that flowed into its buildings, filling every crevice and cranny, prevented them from collapsing under the weight of the volcanic mass, incidentally preserving their furniture and other contents. Marbles were not calcined, glass was not melted; bronze busts and statues (many of which are now in the Naples Museum) were not injured.

Built directly on top of buried Herculaneum are two small modern towns, Portici and Resina. In 1713, an Austrian general bought a piece of land at Resina, for a villa, and the sinking of a well revealed an ancient structure which proved to be the back of the stage of the great theatre of Herculaneum. Further digging brought to light a number of superb statues, which were shipped to Vienna.

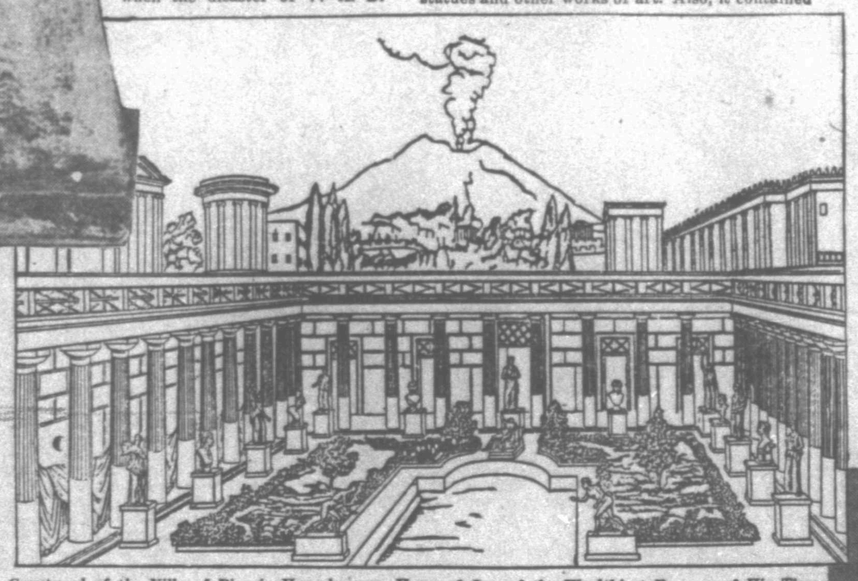

Twenty years later part of the eighteen tiers of seats in the theatre was brought into view. The stage, three feet higher than the orchestra, was broad and long, the wall behind it representing a royal palace, to serve as a background for the actors. At the rear was a narrow room, evidently used as a dressing room. The seats, arranged much like those of a modern playhouse, could accommodate an audience of 3,000. They were divided into wedge-shaped sections by seven flights of steps radiating from the orchestra and leading to seven exits.

It was a playhouse comparable in magnificence of the finest modern theatre. To the right and left of the orchestra, approached by separate stairs, were large boxes for the use of the imperial family and other important personages. Every part of the theatre, within and without, was adorned with statues. There were statues all around the top wall, of colossal size, six of them being equestrian and all of gilded bronze.

Much of our present knowledge of Herculaneum is due to Napoleon, who, early in the nineteenth century, during the French occupation, ordered digging to proceed. Exploration was renewed in 1828, in 1837, and in 1869, several buried streets being reached by shafts and tunnels. These excavations disclosed a temple of Isis, sumptuous private dwellings, and many works of art, including statues of Aristides, Agrippina, Demosthenes, and the famous Marble Faun.

There is evidence that the "princely villa" above mentioned belonged to Piso, the bitterest enemy of Cicero. It enclosed a garden 300 feet long and 100 feet wide, and was filled with statues and other works of art. Also, it contained a library which comprised 1,750 books written on rolls of papyrus.

Undoubtedly many other wealthy residents of Herculaneum possessed libraries, and beneath that sheet of volcanic mud is buried most of the literature of ancient Rome, only fragments of which have been preserved. There may be found the poems of Sappho, the lost books of Livy, the missing tragedies of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides; perhaps even records bearing on the origin and early development of Christianity.

Wide Streets, Paved with Lava Blocks, and Balconied Shop Buildings Mark This Shopping District in the Ancient "Sealed City" About to Be Restored.

The hot mud, which left unharmed the statues, or those that were not thrown down and broken, and much of the furniture in the houses, did dreadful damage to the papyrus manuscripts. Many of the rolls are charred, and even those that are best preserved can be unrolled and deciphered only by the most patient and painstaking labor.

Other things are marvelously preserved. Glass vases have been found still full of water. Eggs, cheese, honey and other foodstuffs are intact, though scarcely edible. The people of Herculaneum must have left the city in a hurry when the disaster arrived. The flow of mud from the crater of the volcano was preceded by a rain of hot cinders, which presumably gave them warning, enabling nearly all the inhabitants to escape. Only seven human skeletons have been found, and comparatively few portable articles, the latter fact suggesting that the people had time to gather together and carry away most of their small possessions.

The shops, inns and bars, opening directly upon the streets, are particularly interesting. An uncovered frieze of painted stucco shows the citizens of Herculaneum plying their trades and driving their bargains on what may very well be the wide colonnaded main street of the city. A smithy, with a large lamp for a sign, contains many tools evidently left for repairs. In one of the wine-shops the accounts of the bartender are scribbled on the walls, noting the names of customers who have deferred payment for their drinks, with the amounts due. Also on the walls of these drinking places are written the names of barmaids, with whom, it is supposed, the gay youths of the town had their flirtations.

One of the finest of the uncovered dwellings is called the House of Argus, because one of its admirable frescoes represents that mythical hero who had 100 eyes, only two of which were ever asleep at one time. The house contains a large garden, and at the front, facing the street, are several small rooms which may possibly have been shops. Next door is a house with several underground rooms, one of them containing a furnace.

Pompeii, as already said, was saved from the flood of hot volcanic mud by its location on relatively high ground. Naturally, the mud flow sought the lowest level, and Herculaneum was on the very edge of the sea, though the shore line has since moved half a mile out. Pompeii was all but destroyed by the hot ashes and cinders. Its housetops were visible after the eruption, and the inhabitants doubtless returned to dig for personal possessions of value. Presumably there was some looting. Hence it is easy to understand why that town, much of it long ago uncovered, has yielded comparatively few works of art. Nearly all of the fine bronzes and other art relics of the great eruption now in the Naples Museum have been derived from Herculaneum.

The roofs of the houses of Pompeii were broken through. At Herculaneum nothing of that kind happened; the city was simply sealed up, as if to be kept intact for the instruction of a later age. Sightseeing tourists are attracted in flocks to Pompeii because its ruins are exposed to view; few take the trouble to go to see what is to be seen of Herculaneum.

He thought he'd have some fun,
So he fired off a gun
And now in his bed does he lie.

A Coin Trick

HERE is a simple trick with which you can "blow" your money without spending it. All you need is a small coin (a dime serves the purpose) and two water glasses.

Place the two tumblers as shown in the drawing and then balance the coin on the edge of the glass nearest to you.

The trick is to blow the coin so that it will leap over the glass and land in the second tumbler.

You will find that much practice will be necessary before you can do this. You will have to put your mouth in a position that is exactly level with the edge of the coin and then blow just hard enough to make the coin fall in the second tumbler.

What Is Wrong With This Picture?

THIS scene in a happy home shows the members of the family enjoying themselves in various ways. Apparently the drawing is correct in all details, but if you study it closely you should be able to find that the artist has made as many as seventeen mistakes.

A Puzzle Problem

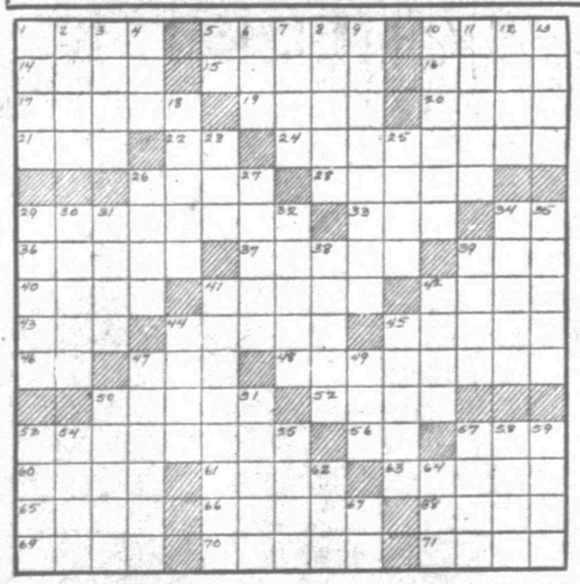

MR. WILLIAM WHOOZIS never told his wife just how much salary he is drawing as an employee of the Whizz Manufacturing Company. In answer to his wife's repeated request for this information, he finally said:

"Well, my dear, we've been married four years now, during which time we have paid out one-fourth of my salary for rent, one half for living expenses and one-eighth for miscellaneous expenses. Our balance in the bank today is exactly $5,000.

"From these facts you can easily find out what is the amount of our annual income."

Can you figure out the answer for Mrs. Whoozis?

"Queen of Hearts" Rich Lovers Bluffed By Her Bogus Baby

How a Low-Born Scotch Girl Used a Stolen Child For An Extraordinary Career of Crime For Which She Now Must Pay

Mrs. Jemima Aiton, the Scottish "Queen of Beauty," who is now serving a long jail sentence for stealing the baby with which she duped more than a score of rich admirers

But at last the police caught the clever "Queen of Beauty," who had robbed a mother of her child to play one of the most daring and diabolical games of blackmail on record, and put her behind prison bars to pay for her most unusual life of lawlessness

Little Andrew MacDougal, the innocent tool the "Queen of Hearts" used so effectively in her shameless career of crime and blackmail

Ellen MacDougal, the mother of the bogus baby Jemima Aiton used in her clever scheme for living a life of luxury at the expense of unsuspecting victims

LONDON.

A DOUR old Scottish magistrate glared angrily down upon pretty, wayward Jemima Aiton a few days ago, signed an ominous looking official document, and said to her: "They tell me they call you the 'Queen of Hearts' in the gambling dens of Glasgow. But to me you seem to be the very queen of clever, conscienceless, criminal schemers. Your crime is without precedent. Your plan was diabolical. It is with a clear conscience that I sentence you to prison."

And certainly no criminal of either sex has stood at the bar of justice in Glasgow in this decade for a more unusual crime.

Jemima Aiton, twenty-three, and the wife of a man she managed to mislay a few years ago, when she found his honest affection beginning to pall, was convicted of stealing a baby boy less than a month old. The amazing young woman took the infant, not to satisfy an overdeveloped mothering instinct, nor because she loved the babe. She stole him to use in her business—just as other adventuresses use compromising photographs and bundles of torrid love letters.

Representing him as her own, she wheedled, blarneyed, coaxed, bullied and blackmailed hundreds of pounds out of a score of men who knew her well. For lovers with whom she had been indiscreet (alas, there were several such!) she had one story.

"He's our bairn, lad," she would say to such a one. "Yours and mine. He's the very picture of you. And how in the world I'm going to bring him up, I don't know."

If that didn't do the business, she would burst into tears. But as a rule it wasn't necessary.

For elderly admirers who had restrained their ardor, and were not in her power she had another story, equally affecting: "Poor laddie," she would croon, looking at the stolen babe with an all but Madonna-like affection. "His father—my husband—is a drunkard and a wastrel, and I don't know where he is. And how in the world I'm going to bring the boy up, I don't know."

It always got back to that. To a question of how she was going to bring him up. Just how many slightly silly middle-aged men of affairs contributed to the exchequer of the tricky grass widow and her bogus baby the authorities don't pretend to know.

When the girl stood in the dock for sentencing, there was just one fact in her favor, and that was what prevented her from getting a much longer term than she did get. It was that she had not abused the child.

Jemima was born in a tiny Scotch hamlet on the moor, not a great way from Kilmarnock and Glasgow. Until she was married, she was never in a town of as many as 500 inhabitants. When twelve years old she was put out to service in the household of a prosperous farmer of the neighborhood, who worked her long hours and hard. Between that and her fifteenth year she saw enough hard work to become aware that she didn't like it and didn't intend to make her living by it. At fifteen she married Aiton, a good-looking, shiftless younger son of a fairly well-to-do family of the village, and escaped from the servants' hall.

Since then, Jemima has confessed she married Aiton because he represented her only possible mode of escape from the hamlet on the moor. The boy was without ambition, and having gotten the girl, he was prepared to settle down at home, but she "kept at him" until he moved away to Kilmarnock with her.

She was satisfied with Kilmarnock for a few months. After her native village, which was "just a wide place in the road," as an American would say, the larger town seemed a veritable metropolis. Inevitably, however, the day came when she demanded wider horizons, and the flustered and uncomfortable young husband shook himself out of his pleasant lethargy and raised the fare to Glasgow.

Once there, the sixteen-year-old bride left Aiton in no doubt as to the course she intended to pursue. She ran away from him their first night in the big city, and began to dance her way down that primrose path so many young girls have traveled.

Without any money when she cut herself adrift from Aiton, she became almost overnight a member of the "gay set" on the fringe of the half world, and a few weeks later a notorious gambler succumbed to the lure of her vivid, restless, disturbing beauty and set her up in a cottage in the suburbs.

Month followed month and Jemima followed her card sharper—sometimes playing cards herself, sometimes aiding him, sometimes tolling in victims to be fleeced, earning her title of "Queen of Hearts."

Constancy, though, was not in Jemima's make-up, and in time she tired of her gambling sweetheart, and his occasional periods of poverty. Thrown into association with gay young men of fashion, elderly playboys of social standing and business men sowing belated wild oats, she began to turn the acquaintance to financial advantage.

Once a young Scotch laird was her "protector," and squandered upon her the pennies and pounds wrung from the miserable tenants on his mountainy estate. Once a canny Glasgow banker set her up in a magnificent establishment, imported servants and furniture for her, gave her a splendid car of her own, and a little checking account. A crown prosecutor was an admirer once; a shipping magnate lavished a small fortune upon her.

Shrewd with a peasant shrewdness in matters of money, Jemima of the moors lost out with her various prosperous admirers because of a constitutional inconstancy in her, and because of common tastes which not even the best of clothes and the politest of surroundings could erase. In her heart, the country girl yearned for the tawdry crowds she knew as the card sharper's sweetheart, and even after she became the favorite of a succession of wealthy men she could not down her liking for the showy and the vulgar.

The banker heretofore alluded to concluded his liaison with the former servant maid when he found a dance hall dandy leaving the apartment early one misty morning. The shipping magnate quit in disgust when he found that his wild rose of the moors was stealing from his arms to meet a public house rowdy who had been a prize fighter.

One by one, the wealthy admirers of the girl began to drop away, and to leave the field clear for the strange young fellows of the underworld whose attentions she really craved.

With patrons vanishing, money going, and her beauty somewhat tarnished by the wild night life she had been leading, the canny girl from the country began to take thought of her predicament and to plan a coup that would make her financially independent.

Apparently she decided against further amours with elderly admirers well stocked with silver, reasoning that such affairs were too boring, and, besides, interfered with her freedom.

Just when the idea of using a baby to further her failing fortunes occurred to her, the police didn't establish clearly at the time of the Glasgow trial. One witness did say that he proposed marriage to her, not knowing that the absent Mr. Aiton was still her legal husband. He painted a glowing picture of the joys of motherhood, which made her laugh, at first, and then made her stop and look reflective and calculating.

It wasn't a great while after that, at any rate, that she began to scan the little personal advertisements in the Glasgow newspapers, keeping her own counsel while she did so. And one day her eye lighted on the following "agony item": "Young mother, unmarried, wishes to place infant son with kindly, respectable people. Child may be legally adopted. Mother is unable to support him."

The advertisement had been sent in from Kilmarnock, and after some red tape had been unraveled, Jemima Aiton journeyed to that town and met Ellen MacDougal and her small son, Andrew. One of those flighty after-the-war romances had ended tragically for Ellen, with a baby on her hands, and the shiftless, roving father in flight to avoid responsibility. The child was only twenty days old, and the young mother, "on her own," was obliged to go to work.

The fair but false Jemima professed the most unrestrained admiration for the baby, and assured the unhappy mother that she would love him and rear him as he should be reared. Also, that she (Ellen) would be permitted to see him frequently.

With that understanding, they started out for the parish council office of Kilmarnock to make the arrangements for the adoption. Of course the "Queen of Hearts" had no intention of effecting such a step. She had studied the lay of the land, and on the way to the office she gave the real mother of the puny infant the slip, and took him back to Glasgow in a cab.

The enterprising Jemima did not relish the care of the infant, which she had to undertake herself to make her plan stand up, and almost immediately she went to work upon the admirers mentioned at the beginning of the story. The first victim was a middle-aged draper, it has been learned. With a wife, and daughters almost as old as Jemima herself, he did not argue much, nor protest. When she told him the boy was his and she needed money to rear him, the indiscreet draper went straightaway to the bank and returned with close to a hundred pounds. A bank official, elderly, single, and of "unquestioned probity and righteousness" was the next. His guilty conscience made him a coward when she taxed him with paternity, and he made his contribution and slunk away.

With a few circumspect men who had been loitering around her little house in Glasgow without compromising themselves, the young woman was obliged to be more subtle, but her art was equal to the demands upon it. Knowing she had no hold over them, she told them she was a grass widow, that her worthless lout of a husband had left her as their child was coming and that she faced a bleak future unless she got aid from friends. The appeal seldom failed to work.

Having profaned mother love as she plucked her victims, Jemima Aiton was beaten by it in the end. Ellen MacDougal did not weep a little and forget when the schemer stole her baby. She began a search which finally led her to Jemima's Glasgow parlor—and her son.
