Baker on aid

BERLIN — Secretary of State James A. Baker III outlined a series of proposals Tuesday under which the United States and its allies could begin to help the Soviet Union out of its economic morass without the infusion of massive amounts of cash. Although Baker did not explicitly rule out the large-scale cash aid sought by Moscow, his remarks suggested the administration would lobby with its Western allies not to rush into cash aid programs. /7A

Tax: wrong idea

AUSTIN — One of the state's top Republicans, Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, Tuesday said a proposed state income tax is the wrong idea at the wrong time. Ms. Hutchison said such a levy would slow the economic recovery, scare away new business and strip the state of a key advantage in the competition for new jobs. /3B

Turtle timetable

WASHINGTON — Japan has agreed to a schedule of ending imports of endangered sea turtles and U.S. officials will not recommend trade sanctions, the Interior Department announced Tuesday night. The decision to end imports of the hawksbill turtle was announced last month in Tokyo, but the Japanese government did not give a timetable.

TV producer quits

NEW YORK — David Browning, executive producer of NBC's low-rated "Real Life With Jane Pauley," has quit the show and NBC News after one season, the network said Tuesday.

Pauley

NBC spokeswoman Peggy Hubble said Browning left word that it was an amicable departure, and that he was going off to work on other projects. Browning, a respected veteran of more than 20 years at CBS News, had moved out of his office and was not available to comment. His resignation came less than a month after NBC gave Steve Friedman, executive producer of the "NBC Nightly News," a second job as the executive in charge of Pauley's show.

Thousands pack base hearing in San Angelo

SAN ANGELO (AP) — The governor, city officials and thousands of residents packed into an auditorium at San Angelo City Hall to pledge their support for Goodfellow Air Force Base during a public hearing Tuesday.

Two members of the seven-man Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission listened to nearly two hours of testimony from state officials after touring the West Texas base.

Gov. Ann Richards told base closing commissioners Robert Stuart and Howard Callaway that San Angelo's economy would be crippled if the base were shut down as part of a national downsizing of the military.

"San Angelo has already lost 7,900 jobs since 1985," Richards said. "The loss of an additional 5,000 jobs would be

Texas to reap windfall in highway funds plan

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In the next five years, Texas will get a windfall $1.6 billion to improve its highways under a new plan for distributing federal highway booty approved by the Senate on Tuesday.

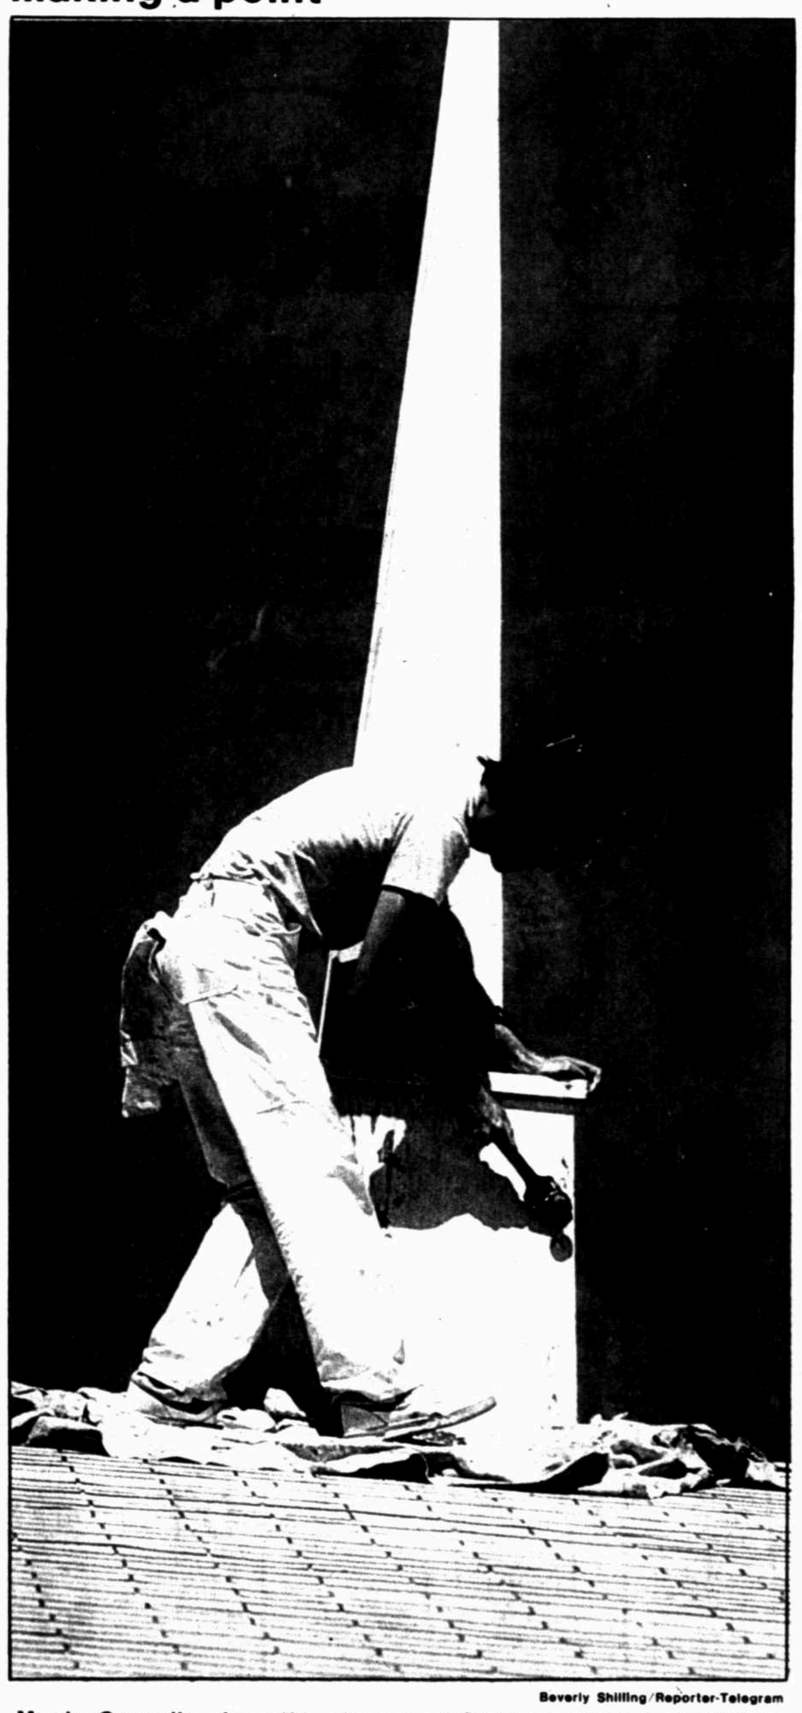

The measure is a boon to the Texas Department of Highways, which has a $25 billion backlog of highway projects and has long complained about what it considered an unfair distribution of federal dollars.

The plan, approved 89-9, is part of a compromise among warring states brokered by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who has been a leading critic of formulas that he said penalized Texas to the benefit of Northeastern states.

"This highway bill marks an historic change for Texas,"

■ Blue Cross-Blue Shield to cover tests aimed at preventive care.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a departure from longstanding practice in the health insurance industry, which has emphasized the treatment and cure of disease without paying for much preventive care, Blue Cross and Blue Shield offered Tuesday to provide insurance for periodic tests to detect medical problems in people with no symptoms of an ailment.

The Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association issued guidelines for a lifetime schedule of medical tests to detect adult diseases, including cancer and heart disease, and said it would offer coverage for these services. The U.S. Public Health Service expressed support for the guidelines.

Other private insurers have expressed a willingness to cover preventive services and are expected to use the guidelines.

The screening tests would add to overall national spending on health care at a time when the soaring costs of medicine have prompted a flurry of proposals in Congress for fundamental change in the nation's health-care system.

But the concern about cost usually fo-

State's firms drop workers' comp system

AUSTIN (AP) — Amid legal uncertainty and high premiums, Texas businesses and insurance companies are bailing out of the workers' compensation system at an alarming rate, the state's top insurance official said Tuesday.

"This is a dangerous trend," said Claire Korioth, chairwoman of the State Board of Insurance.

Without workers' comp insurance, employers "are risking their financial necks" as well as "endangering the well-being of their injured employees," she said.

Blacks across nation embrace Texas' bittersweet Juneteenth

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Juneteenth, the Texas holiday that marks the belated end of slavery in the state, is taking on new meaning across the country as a summertime celebration of black heritage and culture.

From Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., blacks with no ties to Texas are embracing the bittersweet anniversary as a chance to remember their past and contemplate their future.

The date — June 19 — marks the day in 1865 when word of the Emancipation Proclamation finally reached Texas. The news arrived in Galveston more than two years after Abraham Lincoln issued the historic declaration.

"It's become a major summertime cultural event," said Steve Newsome, director of the Smithsonian Institution's Anacostia Museum, which focuses on African American history. "It provides

Pentagon brass balk at women in combat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top military officials on Tuesday said they would be reluctant to allow women to fly combat missions, even though women performed well during the Persian Gulf War.

However, the Pentagon's top personnel official said the military would be willing to stop excluding women from combat flights as long as effectiveness was not impaired.

"I am not enthusiastic about increasing the exposure of women to combat," said Gen. Merrill McPeak, the Air Force chief of staff. He said he found "great comfort in the law" that bars women in the Air Force, Navy and Marines from flying combat aircraft.

The Army is not covered by the legal prohibition, but maintains an internal policy banning women from combat.

McPeak said that despite his "personal reluctance" to Bed, breakfast fate rests with Council

By Brian Pearson

Every house on the municipal prairie could qualify as a bed and breakfast establishment if a proposed ordinance makes it through the Midland City Council.

The proposal, approved in a 5-2 vote Monday by the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission, would allow small bed and breakfasts in all single-family dwelling districts.

City councilmen must approve the proposal on two readings before it becomes an ordinance. The council could review it as early as mid-July, planning officials said.

Opponents speaking at the Monday commission meeting said they would prefer not having a motel-like operation in their neighborhoods.

At start of tour, Yeltsin says Russia won't beg

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russian President-elect Boris N. Yeltsin, declaring that he has not come to beg, Tuesday invited investors to come to Russia, own and manage businesses and make profits that will benefit them and the Russian people.

Arriving in the United States in the afterglow of his triumph in the first presidential election in the Soviet Union's largest republic, the populist leader told a largely American audience at the Soviet embassy: "We have not come here begging, we have not come here hat in hand. We have come here to ... assure you we are working for a better future, one which we shall build with our own hands."

"We shall travel your road" toward a market economy and a free enterprise system, the outspoken ex-Communist told his first audience at the start of a four-day visit. "We believe that we have left behind the experiment that we had to go through, the one which was called Marxism."

Yeltsin said the Russian parliament will soon adopt legislation to open the republic to foreign investment.

"It will create a beneficial regime for all investors from all over the world to come and set up their enterprises in the Soviet Union, to own them and manage them as they see fit," he said. "And we want them to make a profit, and we believe the people of Russia will benefit because of that."

Apparently sensitive to U.S. concerns that his visit might embarrass Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Yeltsin paid tribute to his former mentor and erstwhile political rival, saying his own dramatic electoral victory last week was made possible by the reforms Gorbachev launched six years ago.

And he said the Soviet president has come through a dark winter when democracy was threatened by dictatorship but in April was persuaded — by Yeltsin and others — to return to the democratic path.

Gorbachev is going to London next month to meet the leaders of the seven major industrial democracies who gather once a year. He is expected to propose a massive western aid program to help convert the Soviet economy to a market system.

The Bush administration, wary of Yeltsin using his visit to challenge Gorbachev's leadership of the central Soviet government, was being careful not to make too much of a fuss over him.

The Russian leader, who won a decisive electoral victory last week over five other candidates, remains but one of 15 republic leaders, administration officials noted Tuesday. The United States recognizes the Gorbachev regime as the sole legitimate authority in that vast union.

Yeltsin landed at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., outside Washington and was welcomed by Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, who with his Democratic counterpart, Sen. George J. Mitchell, are acting as his hosts for the visit to Washington and New York.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Curtis Kamman was in the greeting party, but one U.S. official said privately no higher ranking member of the administration was on hand because "it's a private visit from the executive branch's point of view."

Yeltsin, in brief remarks at the airport, said he expects his visit to "launch a direct dialogue between Russia and the United States in the interests of stronger and stable interaction between the U.S.S.R. and the United States."

Dole told Yeltsin his meetings with President Bush and other top officials "demonstrate the new reality of the Soviet Union and the Russian republic, a reality that we are perhaps a bit belatedly coming to accept."

Yeltsin is scheduled to see Bush at the White House on Thursday, shortly before leaving for meetings in New York with business and banking executives.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater made clear the administration does not want Yeltsin's reception to be seen as a challenge to Gorbachev's leadership of the central government.

"President Bush has met with the presidents of the other republics, as well as the Baltic states, and we certainly are anxious to meet with President Yeltsin as well," Fitzwater told reporters Tuesday.

La. lawmakers override veto, adopt abortion ban

BATON ROUGE, La. (NYT) The Louisiana legislature adopted a law on Tuesday night that prohibits virtually all abortions in the state. Both houses of the legislature voted to override a veto by Gov. Buddy Roemer.

The legislation, which will likely face an immediate court challenge, outlaws all abortions except to save the lives of the mothers or when victims of rape and incest meet certain conditions. Doctors convicted of performing illegal abortions would be liable to prison terms of up to 10 years and fines of up to $100,000.

Supporters and critics of the measure said it was the most restrictive abortion law in the country. Unlike laws adopted in Utah and Guam over the past year, the Louisiana law makes no provision for allowing abortions when a woman's health is threatened by her pregnancy.

Kathryn Kolbert, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union, said opponents of the law would immediately seek an injunction from a federal judge blocking enforcement of the law until a hearing could be held to challenge it.

Roemer vetoed the law last Friday saying the bill "dishonors women, shows great mistruct of doctors and their professional judgment and unduly traumatizes victims of rape."

Last year Roemer vetoed two similarly restrictive measures and he was sustained in the Senate. But on Tuesday, the Senate voted with surprising speed to override the veto by a 29-9 vote, three more votes than the two-thirds necessary. The House then quickly suspended its rules and followed suit with a vote of 76 to 25.

It was the first time in this century that the Louisiana legislature had successfully overriden a governor's veto.

During the Senate debate State Sen.r Allen Bares, Democrat of Lafayette and a one-time ally of the governor, said, "My compelling reason, and I believe the compelling reason of the vast majority of the people of the state, is to protect the lives of unborn children."

Supporters of the abortion ban said their intention was to enact a law that the U.S. Supreme Court could use to overturn its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which made most abortions legal.

Opponents of the legislation said throughout the debate that they would challenge the measure in federal court as soon as it was enacted.

Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said in a statement Tuesday night: "Today's vote by the Louisiana legislature to override Gov. Buddy Roemer's veto is irresponsible, callous and exceedingly dangerous. This vote will jeopardize the health and imperil the lives of countless women. It gives Louisiana the dubious distinction of having the most restrictive abortion law in the nation."

COVERAGE: Huge insurer shifts focus to prevention

cuses on exotic high-technology procedures, not on simple screening tests, and Blue Cross officials described the coverage of preventive care as an investment that would yield economic gains, including higher productivity for workers.

The new coverage is envisioned as an expansion of existing policies. Blue Cross said it could cover the costs of insurance for preventive and screening services by charging additional premiums of about $90 a year for a family and $36 a year for an individual.

The guidelines come in response to a nationwide consensus of health policy experts that insurers should cover more preventive services.

That idea is backed not only by the Public Health Service but by the 70,000-member American College of Physicians.

The college developed the guidelines over several years in cooperation with the Blue Cross and Blue Shield system, which is the nation's largest private health insurer, covering 73 million Americans.

Health economists suggested that Blue Cross was also motivated by a sense of enlightened self-interest, because there appears to be a growing demand among employers and consumers for insurance to cover screening and preventive care, including health education and counseling to stop smoking.

The screening schedule specifies who should be tested when for high blood pressure, heart disease, cholesterol, diabetes, thyroid problems, osteoporosis and cancers of the breast, colon, cervix and lung.

Equally important, the guidelines say certain techniques, like exercise stress testing and tests for thyroid disease, are not recommended as routine screening procedures for people with no symptoms.

Dr. Paul F. Griner, chairman of the board of regents of the American College of Physicians, said that screening — the search for specific health problems in a person who has no known signs or symptoms — "has enormous medical value in finding disease early, when it can be treated most successfully and most economically."

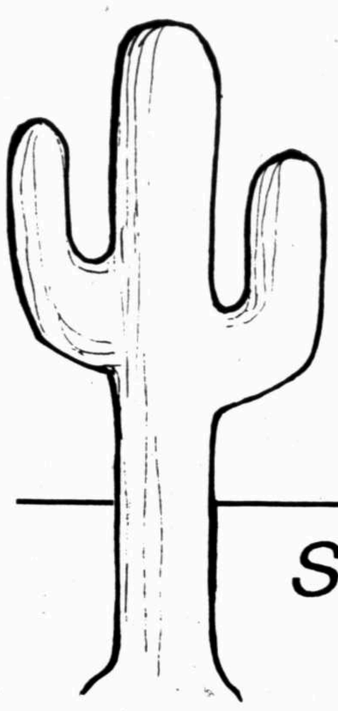

In the last year, many private insurers have quietly cut back coverage of small groups of beneficiaries on which they say they have lost money.

But Pam Kelch, a spokeswoman for Blue Cross and Blue Shield, said the medical tests included in the new benefits package would not be used to screen out people found to have costly diseases or a high risk of developing such illneses.

Bernard R. Tresnowski, president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, said the group's 73 local plans around the country could offer coverage of the recommended screening tests for "a nominal amount," about $7.50 a month for a family whose insurance coverage now typically costs $200 to $300 a month.

Dr. David M. Eddy, professor of health policy management at Duke University, who edited the guidelines, estimated that national spending on health care would increase by $2 billion to $3 billion a year if all adults complied with the screening recommendations.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny, high near 101 on tap

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies with a high near 101 and southeast winds at 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low near 70.

Thursday is expected to be sunny with a high near 100.

After an overnight low of 66, Tuesday's high was 100 compared with the record high for that date of 107 in 1951. The record low for today's date was 56 set in 1985.

STATE

Showers and thunderstorms developed Tuesday along the Texas-Louisiana border, spreading westward, and forecasters said more scattered rainfall was expected through midweek.

Storms were also occurring along the upper Gulf coast and in far South Texas, the National Weather Service said. Afternoon heating generated scattered storms east of a line from Longview to Lufkin.

Radar showed rainfall was heavy at times but not over reporting stations.

Skies elsewhere in the south were partly cloudy, and clear in West Texas.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from a rain-cooled 79 degrees at Brownsville and 80s in the Panhandle to 102 degrees at Laughlin Air Force Base in Del Rio.

Winds were light and variable in North Texas, and from the south and east at up to 20 mph in southern and western regions, with gusts to 25 mph.

Isolated to widely scattered thunderstorms were expected in North and West Texas, with a few possibly severe in the Panhandle, South Plains and Concho Valley.

NATION

Strong thunderstorms extended over portions of the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Northern Plains on Tuesday, pelting parts of Minnesota with baseball-size hail.

A tornado touched down north of Grove City, Minn., but there were no reports of injuries or damage, the National Weather Service said.

Four inches of hail fell south of Elrod, S.D. Hail 2 inches in diameter damaged an aircraft in Pennington, S.D., and baseball-size hail fell near the Minnesota towns of Dassel and Litchfield.

Thunderstorm gusts estimated at 60 to 65 mph caused damage in several towns in Minnesota and there was some local flooding in South Dakota.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

HEARING: Governor, residents support air base catastrophic. Four public schools would be forced to close. Small businesses would be devastated. And a few million dollars in federal adjustment aid cannot compensate for that kind of damage."

Military leaders, including Col. Charlie Powell, a former base commander at Goodfellow, defended the high-tech intelligence training at Goodfellow, which is one of the few bases in the country that trains personnel from all four armed services.

Powell said Goodfellow has the capacity to receive several future missions, including programs such as seismic sensor training and satellite tracking. Those missions were scheduled to begin at the base before the Persian Gulf War broke out.

"We have got plenty of acres out there to expand," Powell said. "The only thing we lack are defense dollars to initiate these programs."

While Stuart and Callaway said they were impressed with the city's charts and graphs supporting the future of Goodfellow, the commissioners said they were flabbergasted by the numbers of people who attended Tuesday's hearing.

More than 2,000 people packed into the auditorium carrying signs reading "Save Goodfellow" and "We Support Our Troops," and another 10,000 listened to the hearing on loudspeakers in 100-degree heat on the steps of City Hall.

The hearing was frequently interrupted with thundering applause.

"We are here because it's do-or-die," said 62-year-old San Angelo resident Melvin Jennings, who waved an American flag throughout the hearing.

"We do not want to lose one of our most beloved neighbors because of finances or any other reason."

Local residents lined the route of the commissioners with banners and balloons.

"This is the most vivid, striking example of community support that we have seen" on the tour of military bases being considered for closure, Stuart said. "It's extraordinary."

"If anyone questions the importance of community support for a military base, then they haven't been to San Angelo," Stuart said.

The commission placed Goodfellow on its list of candidates for closure three weeks ago as a possible substitute for Denver's Lowry Air Force Base. Several Colorado politicians suggested closing Goodfellow would be more cost-effective.

But state and city leaders said Tuesday the facts and figures support Goodfellow.

According to Air Force reports, closing Lowry would cost a little over $200 million, while shutting down Goodfellow would cost $160 million.

But Air Force figures show the government would cut more costs in the long run by closing Lowry, which would save $54 million a year. Shutting down Goodfellow would save $30 million annually.

"Those figures are the bottom line," said Gen. Larry Henry, who was on the Air Force committee that recommended to the Pentagon that Goodfellow remain open.

DROP: Employers drop coverage of employees

(From 1A)

attorney general and the Legislature to prop up the workers' comp market, which is the third largest in the nation with more than $4 billion in premiums paid annually.

Workers' comp insurance is purchased by employers to cover their liability when an employee is injured on the job.

Of the 320,000 employers in Texas, 40 percent do not have workers' comp coverage, insurance regulators said. In April and May, 2,600 employers reported dropping the insurance, and Ms. Korioth said that according to the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission, that rate has accelerated recently to 900 per week.

"Employers need to know that without workers' comp, the sky is the limit on jury awards if they are sued by injured employees," Ms. Korioth said. And injured workers not covered by their employers face years of legal struggle to recover benefits, she said.

She said legal uncertainty about the workers' comp law is causing some insurance carriers to stop writing coverage. This has forced many businesses to either drop coverage, purchase more expensive policies reserved for high-risk employers, or buy cheaper life, accident and health plans that fall short on benefits.

BRASS: Military opposes women flying combat allowing women in combat roles, the military will move toward "gender-neutral" standards for combat pilots if the law is changed.

McPeak's comments were echoed by Gen. Alfred Gray, the Marine commandant; Gen. Carl Vuono, the Army chief of staff; and Adm. Frank Kelso, chief of naval operations.

"We in the corps see no need to change anything. Things seem to be going extremely well," Gray said.

The service chiefs appeared before the Senate Armed Services Committee's manpower and personnel subcommittee, which heard testimony on the emotionally charged issue of whether to change the law excluding women from combat assignments.

Christopher Jehn, assistant secretary of Defense for personnel, told the panel that the military supports giving women more opportunities, but the Defense Department wants "maximum flexibility in regulating women in combat."

He added: "We must ensure there is no adverse impact on readiness or combat effectiveness."

McPeak, citing his "old-fashioned" view, said he would choose a male pilot over a female even if choosing the woman would result in more combat effectiveness.

"I admit that doesn't make much sense, but that's the way I feel about it," he told the subcommittee.

The military chiefs also raised the possibility that eliminating a combat ban might provide a legal opening to require women to register for the draft. Jehn, however, said there was "no relationship" between the draft and combat effectiveness levels.

Another panel of enlisted personnel and officers from the four service branches provided various reactions to a possible reversal of the combat exclusion.

"We do not wish to carry a rifle, lug a pack and live the way the grunts do," said Gunnery Sgt. Jean A. Amico, a Marine based at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

WINDFALL: Texas to get $1.6 billion for roads

(From 1A)

Bentsen said. "For the first time since the interstate highway system was launched in 1956, Texas will not be shortchanged."

The new allocation plan would, for the first time, guarantee Texas a dollar-for-dollar return on the money its taxpayers kick into the U.S. Treasury in federal motor fuel taxes.

From 1987 to 1991, Texas got $4.33 billion from the highway trust fund, an 86 percent return on what it paid in.

The plan approved Tuesday guarantees the state nearly $6 billion over the next five years, $1.64 billion more than it received over the previoius five-year period and $661 million more than it was expected to get beginning in fiscal 1992.

But it drew sharp criticism from senators of Northeastern states who pointed to the billions of dollars flowing into Texas to bail out its bad savings and loan institutions.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., said that if the same rules applied to the savings and loan bailout, it could be argued that Texas cheated Connecticut and other states out of billions of dollars.

Between 1988 and 1990, the bailout cost U.S. taxpayers $32.8 billion, about $22 billion of which went to prop up thrifts in Texas, he said.

"What if Connecticut had asked for a minimum allocation?" Lieberman asked. He said this demonstrates "how ridiculous this proposal is, and how fundamentally at odds with the notion that we are one nation."

Bentsen prevailed with help from Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the influential chairman of the Appropriations Committee who sponsored the measure, and from senators from 20 states that have traditionally paid more into the federal highway fund than they got back.

Under the plan, the federal government will take $8.2 billion from a surplus of highway funds that have been kept in the Treasury for several years to help mask the size of the federal deficit.

Half the money would be distributed to the states like Texas that have paid in more than they got back. The other half would be used to reward states that levy gasoline taxes higher than the national average.

While the extra cash won't eliminate the state's backlog, it will help the highway department do more road repairs and to reduce congestion with new interchanges and other improvements, said Bryron Blaschke, deputy engineer director.

"When we look at needs compared to current funding, $330 million more a year will permit us to do a heck of a lot more work," Blaschke said.

The new allocation system is an amendment to a five-year, $118 billion highway bill. The House is expected to take up its own version next month.

The bill calls for expanding the 44,300-mile interstate system to a broader 150,000-mile network of interstates.

The bill also provides federal highway funds for bicycle trails for the first time.

FATE: P&Z Board approves bed and breakfast ordinance want more in my neighborhood," said Judia Foreman, 314 S. L St.

Mrs. Foreman said bed and breakfasts would be especially detrimental in the historic district southwest of downtown. Supporters said that area would make an ideal bed and breakfast location.

Alton Moore, 1610 W. Indiana Ave, suggested that prospective bed and breakfast owners test the establishments in areas other than single-family dwelling districts.

"There is no need for these in our residential areas," Moore said.

Under current zoning rules, bed and breakfasts fall into the same category as motels and hotels, which are not allowed in single-family residential areas.

Richard Hennessy, planning and development director, said the proposal would allow single-family dwelling owners to buy a bed and breakfast permit for $15.

The owner would receive a 90-day temporary permit to operate the establishment. The application during that period would be reviewed once by commissioners and then by city councilmen.

Property owners within a minimum 200 feet of the proposed bed and breakfast would be notified of the application. The Planning and Zoning Commission and City Council each would hold a public hearing before reviewing a proposal.

The bed and breakfasts would be subject to the same fire, health, building and other municipal codes as hotels and motels, Hennessy said.

Owners could erect a 2-square-foot sign emblazoned with the homeowner's name, but the sign cannot advertise the house as a bed and breakfast, he said.

Homeowner Marilyn Johnson brought the lodging idea to City Hall in April, when she asked the commission for permission to convert her house into a bed and breakfast.

Ms. Johnson said the establishments would do a booming business after the Confederate Air Force museum opens here in December. They would provide a sorely needed alternative to hotels and motels, she said.

She likened the business to having relatives over for the weekend.

"It's not meant to be intrusive in the neighborhood," Ms. Johnson said. "Those people living in the neighborhood would not ever know a visitor was there."

The type of bed and breakfast that would be permitted in residential areas is known as a "homestay," which would have only one or two guest rooms.

Other types of bed and breakfasts, such as those having more than three guests rooms and others the size of hotels or motels, would not be allowed in single-family dwelling zones.

Hennessy said they would have to fall within a multifamily or less-restrictive zone, such as an office or retail district.

Patrick Aleman, one of two commissioners voting against the proposed ordinance, said bed and breakfasts have no place in a residential area.

"I think more people are not in favor of it than favor it," Aleman said. "I don't think there is a good enough reason to allow it."

Commissioner Evelyn Gould also voted against the proposed ordinance.

JUNETEENTH: Holiday takes on new meaning

the opportunity for families and communities to come together."

In Kansas City, Mo., the annual Juneteenth festival grew from about 500 people in 1980 to about 50,000 last year. Attendance at this year's event, which was held last weekend, was down to about 35,000 because of bad weather.

Other major cities with Juneteenth celebrations include Omaha, Neb.; Oakland, Calif.; and Buffalo, N.Y.

"This is one of the few holidays that we have a legitimate claim to as an ethnic group," said Renaldo Andrews III, assistant director of the Black Archives of Mid-America, the historical group behind the Kansas City event. "Is it not the time to rejoice when the last of your people finally get the word that they're free?"

Although Lincoln formally issued the proclamation on New Year's Day 1863, the document was virtually meaningless in Texas until the end of the Civil War two years later.

Gen. Gordon Granger, commander of Union forces in the region, arrived in Galveston on June 18, 1865, to reassert federal authority in the state's most important seaport. The next day, he repeated Lincoln's proclamation that Texas slaves 'are, and henceforward shall be, free.'"

From their first year of freedom, Texas blacks have celebrated Juneteenth with family barbecues and community festivals. The date became an official state holiday in 1980.

Other parts of the country have their own emancipation days.

Blacks in Ohio and Indiana tend to recognize Sept. 22, the day Lincoln first served notice that he would issue the Emancipation Proclamation. Some churches in the District of Columbia set aside a weekend in April to mark the date in 1862 when Congress freed blacks in the nation's capital.

But Newsome said the Smithsonian Institution is actively promoting Juneteenth as a day of celebration and remembrance. The museum complex sponsored its first Juneteenth celebration in 1989.

"What it does is provide a cultural grounding. The important thing is the coming together and the community spirit," Newsome said. "We really want to establish the event for the Washington area."

This year's Juneteenth celebration includes a free gospel concert Wednesday night as part of the Texas Festival at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts. The program features the Dallas Black Dance Theatre and the Bells of Joy, a pioneering gospel group from Austin.

The Anacostia Museum will celebrate the holiday Saturday with a day-long festival of dance, music and other entertainment. The festivities will include an appearance by Washington Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon and a re-creation of the 54th Infantry.

"I think this might be the beginning of a tradition here," said the Rev. Donald Vails, who will direct a special D.C.-Texas choir, consisting of Washington-area residents and transplanted Texans, at the Kennedy Center event.

"Anything that celebrates freedom, anything that celebrates unity, anything that celebrates togetherness, I think we have to buy into that," he said.

■ House OKs IRS audits of the wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, sensing a major political issue in "tax fairness" for the middle class, pushed through legislation Tuesday that would require the Internal Revenue Service to step up audits of corporations and the rich.

In fact, the idea sounded so good that Republicans eventually joined in — and the amendment was approved on a 411-1 vote. Only Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., voted no.

The amendment, sponsored chiefly by House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., requires that $13 million that had been intended for mail audits — whose targets are mostly middle- and low-income people — be used instead to increase face-to-face audits of businesses and high-income individuals.

"The examination (audit) rate for corporations is down 50 percent from a decade ago," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis. and a sponsor of the amendment. "The examination rate for high-income taxpayers is down 52 percent. . . . Yet, middle-income people are being audited at about the same rate as 10 years ago."

■ Rumors say Gray will quit Congress

WASHINGTON — Rep. William H. Gray III, the third-ranking Democrat in the House of Representatives, is expected to resign from Congress on Thursday to become president of the United Negro College Fund.

Rumors about his decision swept through the House on Tuesday night, as members speculated over why Gray, who serves as majority whip, would want to leave a job from which he might expect to advance to speaker of the House.

Gray's chief of staff, Jon Plebani, who has repeatedly denied the report in recent weeks, would neither confirm nor deny it Tuesday night. He said that Gray "hasn't accepted a job," and acknowledged that this statement fell short of his earlier denials.

■ Neil Bush to end fight over S&L case

WASHINGTON — After more than a year of legal haggling, President Bush's son Neil has decided to end his fight with federal regulators in his savings and loan case.

Neil Bush won't appeal the government's April order imposing mild restrictions on him if he again becomes a director of a bank or S&L, his attorney said Tuesday.

"He wants to put everything behind him," said the attorney, James Nesland.

Nesland said the final settlement Tuesday of a separate yet related lawsuit, in which Bush was one of the defendants, made his client decide not to appeal the conflict-of-interest order. Nesland has represented Bush in both cases.

In that settlement, a federal judge in Denver approved the previously announced agreement by which former directors and officers of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association will pay the government $49.5 million to settle a civil suit brought by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. That suit alleged negligence in the $1 billion collapse of Denver-based Silverado.

■ Fitzwater: Sununu's plane rides proper

WASHINGTON — There would be nothing improper about White House chief of staff John Sununu's solicitation of free rides aboard jets owned by American corporations, President Bush's spokesman said Tuesday.

"It's all fine according to the law, according to the rules and regulations," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

The Los Angeles Times reported Tuesday that Sununu has been soliciting free trips from corporations ever since Bush restricted his use of military aircraft for political and vacation travel.

Dependents flee Philippines for U.S.

McCHORD AIR FORCE BASE, Wash. (AP) — Air Force officials geared up Tuesday to receive as many as 20,000 U.S. military dependents fleeing from the deadly eruptions of the Philippines' Mount Pinatubo.

Base officials expect to handle up to 900 people daily in a round-the-clock operation, McChord spokesman Sgt. Jim Davis said.

The first planeload of 300 to 400 dependents was expected at the base near Tacoma late Tuesday night, Davis said. McChord is a frequent point of arrival for large-scale military flights from overseas.

At Anderson Air Base in Guam, Debbie Parker of Roanoke, Va., waited among the evacuees with her three young children, hoping to hear when her husband, Maj. Greg Parker, could join them.

"I've heard that my husband has evacuated and I don't know where he is," she said in a telephone interview. "I would love to know because that is the only thing that is bothering me right now besides wanting everyone out."

The Defense Department said all 20,000 U.S. military dependents from two Philippine bases would be evacuated. Most of them are relatives of U.S. personnel at Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay Naval Base.

Clark, about 10 miles east of the volcano, has been shut down since June 10 and is believed to be blanketed by more than a foot of volcanic ash. About 15,000 troops and their families evacuated Clark last week.

The evacuees were taken aboard U.S. navy ships to the Phillippine island of Cebu, then flown to Guam. They were to arrive at McChord aboard chartered, commercial jets after refueling in Hawaii, Davis said.

The Air Force planned to process them through U.S. Customs at the McChord arrivals terminal, then bus them to a gymnasium on the base where they will be able to talk with Red Cross workers, as well as financial assistance and family-support services workers.

Scores of public telephones were being installed so the evacuees could call their families.

The evacuees then were to be bused back to the air terminal and issued free air tickets on commercial flights to wherever they want to go in the United States, Davis said.

Finally, the military planned to bus the evacuees to Seattle-Tacoma International Airport to catch flights to their final destinations.

Sources: Administration may lift sanctions soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is prepared to lift sanctions on South Africa as early as next month, and remaining barriers to the action are little more than a formality, administration and congressional sources said Tuesday.

Three senior Republican officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the administration wants to deal with the matter quickly now that legislation repealing South African segregation laws has been passed in that country.

"The die is cast," said one congressional official, who said domestic U.S. politics was beginning to influence the timing of the action.

Bush's advisers want to dispose of the matter soon so it does not present a political target in 1992, when the president faces re-election, the official said.

Others said the administration would make soundings of sentiment on Capitol Hill and await the outcome of a major African National Congress meeting in July before moving to lift sanctions.

In an effort to mute congressional backlash, the administration was reminding lawmakers that even if sanctions are lifted, restoration of normal economic relations will not come immediately. For example, a law will remain in place requiring U.S. opposition to South African loans from institutions like the International Monetary Fund.

Iran is pushing economics now

The United States believes Iran is still an outlaw nation because the terrorism it has fostered includes the holding of hostages, six of them Americans, in Lebanon.

But the Tehran government is telling the world that economics, not its militant fundamentalist revolution, is the new force in Iran's future. Some Arab nations believe that and are now reestablishing diplomatic and economic ties with Tehran.

Iranian leaders openly tell anyone who will listen that economic considerations overshadow political priorities. The reason is that the country continues to have a hard time financially, with per capita income about half of what it was under the shah. The middle class and other segments of the population have lost their ardor for the revolution. To stem this uneasiness, the government has sold public shares in many state-owned firms, moved to eliminate price controls, begun more realistic foreign-exchange rates and increased imports. It is even trying to lure back Iranian business owners and others from exile.

In a highly significant gesture, Tehran renewed diplomatic relations with Saudi Arabia while American troops still stood on holy Muslim ground. It also restored relations with Egypt. The Iranians and Kuwaitis, long suspicious of each other, have signed an accord whereby Iranian technicians are helping Kuwait put out the oil fires set by Iraqi troops.

Another reason Iran is changing is that it wants a voice in the final Mideast peace settlement. With the longest coastline in the gulf, Tehran wants to help map security in these waters.

However, the government is still lukewarm toward Washington. And revolutionaries, like the son of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, still describe Amerucans as the personification of Satan. Yet, they are losing ground, and it seems likely that Iran will attempt to come to an understanding with Washington in the next year or so.

All of these new developments indicate a more peaceful future in the area. The United States obviously should encourage such initiatives. But Americans should not accept Iranian-sponsored terrorism or the holding of American hostages. There must not be any genuine accomodation between Washington and Tehran until these matters are settled.

ANOTHER VIEW

Yeltsin's victory is new revolution

Boris Yeltsin has not merely won the first competitive election in Russia's thousand-year history. The popular ex-Communist seems headed for a convincing first-ballot majority over his Communist opponents, and that would give him, beyond the new presidency of the republic, a mandate for radical reform.

The victory was expected; its magnitude constitutes a new Russian Revolution. As Russians bravely lead their Soviet compatriots toward pluralism and markets, they deserve the West's applause, and support.

The Communist Party fought hard to deny Yeltsin a first-ballot victory and force a runoff. It put up a favorite son — Nikolai Ryzhkov, the former Soviet Prime Minister — and three other candidates in an effort to prevent a Yeltsin majority.

The party also ran a scurrilous media campaign against Yeltsin, even trotting out psychiatrists to question his stability. And in company towns across Russia, party bosses used the tough tactics of Texas border towns, intimidating voters and stuffing ballot boxes.

Yet Yeltsin's blunt charisma and anti-establishment sentiments attracted and held a wide following.

He thus demonstrates his mastery of the Soviet Union's new politics — establishing the right to rule through electoral appeal.

Meanwhile the Soviet president, Mikhail Gorbachev, remains master of the old politics, managing the bureaucracy that still runs the USSR — to the extent that anyone does.

If the country is to transform itself economically and politically, the two leaders must pool their power.

The future of the Soviet Union and of Russia are just as inseparable. Russia is by far the largest and richest republic, with three-fourths of the Soviet Union's land mass, half its population and the lion's share of its natural resources. If radical reform can triumph in Russia, it can transform the whole Soviet Union.

Yeltsin won't have an easy time propelling Russia toward pluralism and markets. The rights of minorities remain precarious. The space for opposition groups to exercise freedom of speech, press and association is still confined.

New laws to institute markets are promulgated by the elected parliament but are not enforced by unelected apparatchiks.

De Tocqueville once characterized elections as institutionalized revolutions. Elections are still a long way from being institutionalized in the Soviet Union, but with Russia's vote, comes the revolution.

Lithuania won't play by Soviets' rules

VILNIUS, Lithuania — Soviet army troops forcefully took over two Lithuanian airfields here recently. They said it was a defensive move against a potential threat. The airfields housed the only air force that the independent-minded Lithuanians could muster — crop-dusting planes and gliders.

Anderson

Mikhail Gorbachev and his soldiers continue to be bully-boys in this once-independent republic. They seize a bank here, an airfield there, always trying to provoke a response that would justify their moving in, en masse, to put down a rebellion.

But Lithuania refuses to play along. The republic's young Defense Minister Audrius Butkevicius told us that he recognizes the game, and he won't be pushed into playing it by Moscow's rules. As a result, some of his men are dying.

Butkevicius, 30, and a doctor in his civilian life, has 2,500 unarmed men working at 26 Lithuanian border posts. They are there to stop smuggling of high-quality Lithuanian goods into the rest of the Soviet Union, and to make a show of controlling a border that Lithuanians hope will some day be a line between separate nations, not reluctant republics.

Soviet troops have made sporadic attacks on these border guards, burning at least a dozen of their posts, beating the guards and killing at least one of them.

Butkevicius' defense department can muster not more than 10,000 soldiers, most of them unarmed part-timers. On the other side, the Soviets have at least 90,000 heavily armed troops, including paratroopers and special forces ready to strike at any time.

"Every day we have to face different provocations which are attempted by the Soviets," Butkevicius told us. "The aim of these provocations is to instigate military clashes between people which could serve as an excuse for the Soviets to use military force against Lithuanians."

The best Butkevicius can do in return is take a lesson from Martin Luther King or Mohandas Gandhi and throw up a human shield of unarmed people standing in front of buildings before the Soviets seize those buildings. That didn't work last January when Soviet tanks crushed demonstrators to take over a television tower in Vilnius.

One of the more secret and insidious methods the Soviets have used to foment discord and fear has been to allow hardened criminals to escape from the prisons that the Soviets still control. And, according to Lithuania's nascent intelligence service, the KGB is also working overtime to set brushfires across the country.

"Their main task is to destabilize and create tension in Lithuania," Butkevicius said, "to destabilize the economy and destroy the social aid system. They are stoking dissatisfaction within the society."

Vice President Ceslovas Stankevicius made the same point to us. "There's no question they're trying to incite all kinds of domestic unrest. They continue to bite off chunks of our territory."

Europeans have seen this ploy before, just prior to World War II. Adolf Hitler dummied up rumors of a planned attack on his own troops and used that as a pretext to invade Poland.

Lithuanian leaders expect it will be a long hot summer this year, and they will be working overtime to keep tempers from boiling and to keep people from organizing massive demonstrations that would be an invitation for the Soviets to crush them.

CASH IN ADVANCE — You know the recession is bad when advertising agencies begin asking for payment in advance. Ad agencies normally operate on a credit basis (except with political candidates). But they are tired of being stiffed by clients. So now, before they commit their time and talents to developing an ad campaign for anyone, many agencies are asking to see some green. There is another reason for advance payments. The ad agencies have cash-flow problems from the clients who can't pay or who have declared bankruptcy.

Read what the economists say and weep

You hear the figures being quoted by financial reporters. The economy is up — it's down — and the big turnaround will be on Babe Ruth's birthday. Where do the forecasts come from?

Buchwald

They are released by government economists like Jim Warner.

Warner works in a small windowless room on the third floor of the U.S. Bureau of Highs and Lows. He has been there for 20 years and has never seen the sun.

When I went to visit him, he was bent over his desk studying what appeared to be a printout.

"Warner," I said, "when will the recession be over?"

He blinked his eyes, "The recession IS over."

"Are you crazy? Have you been out in the street? Every other store has its windows covered with white paint, and there are Space For Rent signs all over the place. Half the buildings in Washington have For Lease banners hanging from the roof. Go out and see with your own eyes."

"I never leave the office," Warner replied. "It confuses me. We economists believe that what you don't see can't hurt you."

"So, if you won't look, how do you know whether there is a recession or not?"

"I pore over these printouts. A bottom line never lies."

"Today I read that 100,000 more people were laid off in the manufacturing arm of American industry. Doesn't that tell you something?" I asked.

"It wasn't in my computer," Warner said. "People have a strange idea of how economists work. We are in the business of collating numbers. The more numbers we collate, the more accurate are our predictions. Now you may walk down the street and see empty shops, or maybe your son can't get a job, and perhaps you are unable to get a loan from the bank. So you think there is a recession."

"What would you call it?"

"It's a slight misfortune, but it isn't a recession. The only device that can recognize whether it's a recession or not is this high-tech laser printer which can spit out 14 data sheets of bad news a minute."

"If the recession is over, why doesn't it show up in profits?"

"It takes time to pick up after a recession is finished — maybe two or three years. My job isn't to forecast the exact shape of the recovery."

"Whose job is that?" I asked Warner.

"Donna Hickman's, but she was laid off by Richard Darman in the OMB Monday Night Massacre. I hear it was a terrible blood bath, but I didn't see it because I have no windows."

"Why don't you come out with me for lunch and look at what's going on in the country?"

"I can't do that. I might see something that could affect my economic game plan. I am only interested in the evidence that's forwarded to me by all the other U.S. agencies."

"I'm happy that you're certain the recession has bottomed out," I told Warner.

"If I wasn't, the administration would find somebody who was."

Impregnate the pause with a few moments

Alcibiades, the ancient Greek orator whose name is pronounced Al Si-BY-a-deez, is quoted less often these days than Al Capone.

Granted, the gangster got off a great line, cited by eminent strategic planners as well as young punks: "You can get much farther with a kind word and a gun than you can with a kind word alone." Alcibiades, however, is best remembered for what he did not say.

Safire

Robert Byrd of West Virginia, guardian of the U.S. Senate's sense of history, rose in that body recently to call our attention to the lesson of the Greek who was the ward of Pericles.

"Alcibiades is not exactly a paragon of good living," the senator cautioned. That's putting it mildly: Alcibiades was the paragon of recklessness and treachery, who sold out his native Athens for a place in Sparta, and is remembered for opinions like "As for democracy ... nothing new can be said about an acknowledged foolishness."

But the man could speak, and he had a trick that caused audiences to hang on his words: "Plutarch tells us," Byrd said, "on the authority of the prince of orators, Demosthenes, that Alcibiades often hesitated in the midst of a speech, not hitting upon the word he wanted, and stopped until it occurred to him."

Why, the senator asked rhetorically, don't we do that anymore? "I think there can be an art in the use of a pause. And I find nothing wrong with a pause. It does not have to be filled in with you know."

This pestiferous phrase "betrays a mind whose thoughts are often so disorganized as to be unutterable — a mind in neutral gear coupled to a tongue stuck in overdrive."

Modern linguists led by Leonard Bloomfield in 1933 call these "hesitation forms" — the sounds of stammering (uh, stuttering (um, um), throat-clearing (ahem!), stalling (well, um, that is), interjected when the speaker is groping for words or at a loss for the next thought.

Similarly, I mean, as most frequently used today, has ceased to mean I mean — in its former sense of "for me, this denotes, expresses, represents," or "here is my import, sense, significance, message."

Ironically, often the new sense of I mean is no sense at all: it is intended to convey meaninglessness, a habitual, annoying filler phrase synonymous with the unknowing y'know.

All three of these staples of modern filler communication — I mean, y'know, like — can also be used as "tee-up words."

In olden times, pointer phrases or tee-up words were get this, would you believe? and are you ready? The function of these rib-nudging phrases was — are you ready? — to make the point, to focus the listener's attention on what was to follow.

That attention-impelling function, or "articulated colon," today belongs to I mean, y'know and like, as in "That girl is, like, kooky; that guy is, I mean, gnarly — y'know, far out to the point of spaciness." (Do not confuse this articulated colon with another interjection, known tentatively in the linguistic dodge as "the nail-nibbling self-reassurance"; in the 70s, OK? was interjected to mean "Are you listening? Am I making sense?" Today, y'know? with a rising inflection often serves this nebbishistic function.)

What motivates the speaker to fill the moment of silence with any sound at all?

Now we are back to the Alcibiadean pause. Did the sneaky Greek orator really pause because he was seeking the right word — or did he use that refreshing device, as Churchill later did, to pull listeners to the edge of their seats?

I recall a session that a roomful of image makers held with a presidential candidate before a televised news conference. The problem was that the candidate anticipated all the questions, knew all the answers and tended to pop out the reply the moment the question was asked; it made him seem like a smart aleck, too glib.

The sage advice was this: On at least one question, cross 'em all up with a pregnant pause. Stop. Pause a moment or two — like maybe three whole seconds, driving soundbite specialists crazy with the waste of costly network time — as if the question caused the interviewee to think his position over.

No need for well, y'know, I mean or any such filler, though a thoughtful hmmm might be permissible.

It worked. Attention was paid. The ghost of Alcibiades ... smiled.

Baker outlines proposals for Soviet economic aid

BERLIN (NYT) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III outlined a series of proposals Tuesday under which the United States and its allies could begin to help the Soviet Union out of its economic morass without the infusion of massive amounts of cash.

Although Baker did not explicitly rule out the large-scale cash aid sought by Moscow, his remarks suggested the administration would lobby with its Western allies not to rush into cash aid programs.

He included such proposals as support for Soviet associate membership in the International Monetary Fund, a program for encouraging American oil exploration in the Soviet Union and assistance in food distribution there. Baker's outline was part of a speech on European policy that he gave at the Aspen Institute in Berlin.

The question of how to help the Soviet Union has become acute because Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has been invited to meet with the leaders of the Group of Seven industrial democracies in London next month after their annual meeting is over. The allies are trying to come up with a consensus on dealing with Gorbachev.

Baker urged the peoples of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union to join the "Atlantic Community," which used to be thought of as embracing just the United States, Canada and Western Europe.

But to do so, Baker argued, the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe must first adopt systems of democratic pluralism and market economics.

He said the United States "has a special role to play in supporting the process of change in the Soviet Union."

"As the Soviets demonstrate the will to help themselves, then we can and should join them, step by step," Baker said. "I hope President Gorbachev now brings forward a new effort at serious market reform. The door to the Euro-Atlantic community is open. But only the Soviets can decide to step over the threshold."

The notion of step-by-step assistance has become the byword of the Bush administration when discussing economic aid to Moscow. It is in contrast to the notion of a "grand bargain" in which the West would commit a vast sum of money in return for, and to help cushion, specific Soviet economic and democratic reforms.

The administration, apparently feeling that if it does not like the grand bargain it had better come up with an alternative approach, began hinting a few weeks ago it was developing a package of step-by-step "supportive measures" for the Soviet reform effort, but did not spell them out.

Hussein calls for reform, new Jordanian cabinet

AMMAN, Jordan (NYT) — King Hussein has dismissed the Jordanian Cabinet and asked the foreign minister, a Palestinian who favors a negotiated settlement with Israel, to form a new administration, senior officials said here Tuesday.

The selection of the Palestinian, Taher Masri, who is well liked in Washington, is viewed as an effort to regain favor in the United States and bring Jordan out of the diplomatic isolation into which it fell for its support of Iraq during the Persian Gulf crisis.

The appointment, made without public notice on Monday, has not been formally announced. But already Masri is trying to cobble together a majority in Parliament that excludes Islamic fundamentalists who oppose any form of peace negotiations.

"Taher Masri is the new prime minister, and with him the king hopes Jordan can show more flexibility in the current situation," a senior government official said Tuesday.

Masri, who is 49, was born in the West Bank city of Nablus and educated at North Texas State University. He has served as a Jordanian ambassador to several countries and foreign minister under several administrations. He is known to be sympathetic to Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction, the main branch of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Masri is the first Palestinian to be appointed prime minister in more than 20 years. Jordanian officials said they expected him within a few weeks to secure a narrow majority in Parliament that excluded the Muslim Brotherhood movement.

The former prime minister, Mudar Badran, had been outspoken in his criticism of the United States and supportive of Saddam Hussein.

Soviet premier tries power play

MOSCOW (AP) — Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov asked the Soviet legislature for emergency powers Tuesday in what was described as a campaign to remove President Mikhail S. Gorbachev from power.

Pavlov said he did not consult with Gorbachev before asking for authority to issue decrees without the approval of the president or parliament. Since Gorbachev already holds emergency authority, Pavlov would not need those powers on his own unless he were planning to contradict Gorbachev's policies.

The Supreme Soviet, the national legislature, agreed to delay consideration of the matter at Gorbachev's request, the independent Interfax news agency said.

Emergency powers would allow Pavlov and his cabinet to "function without the president," reformist legislator Sergei Ryabchenko told Tass. "As a result, the president would remain in a vacuum while the cabinet would turn into a new center of political and economic power."

Pavlov's request, combined with a closed-door meeting of the ministers of defense and interior with the chief of the KGB amounts to "a coordinated campaign to remove the president of the U.S.S.R. from power," Tass quoted Ryabchenko as saying.

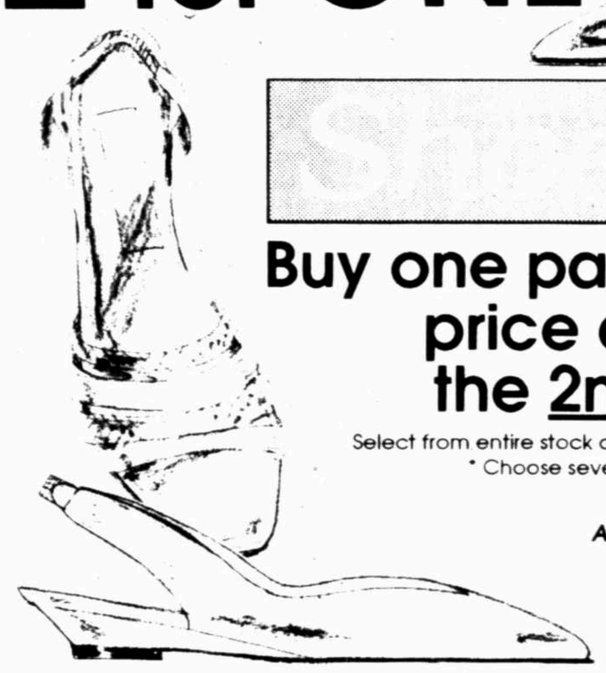

KGB Chief Vladimir Kryuchkov, Interior Minister Boris Pugo and Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov are considered the most hard-line members of the Gorbachev-Pavlov government.

Gorbachev has been under pressure on all flanks to choose a path of economic reform. Lawmakers on Tuesday said they wanted him to take a public stand on how he plans to integrate the Soviet Union into the world economy. He is likely to be asked the same question when he meets with the Group of Seven industrial powers at a summit in London next month.

American officials have been pressing Gorbachev to embrace a radical new plan drawn up by economist Grigory Yavlinksy. Gorbachev on Monday indicated he approved of Yavlinsky's proposal, which would transform the Soviet Union from a centrally planned to a market economy in 500 days.

In an interview with the evening newspaper Izvestia, Pavlov was quoting as saying he objects to Gorbachev's decision to seek aid from the West.

Sandinistas seize buildings in challenge to Chamorro

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Militants seized control of a radio station and the city hall Tuesday to protest a move to revoke laws that gave thousands of Sandinistas free property in the final months of their decade of rule.

No one was seriously hurt in the takeovers at Radio Corporacion, a rightist station, and at the capital's city hall. In both cases masked men identifying themselves as Sandinistas forced their way into the buildings and vowed to remain inside.

The takeovers were the latest in a series of Sandinista challenges to the authority of President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who is struggling to get Nicaragua's economy functioning again after more than a dozen years of war.

While the Sandinistas pressure her to leave intact the revolutionary changes they made, former Contra rebels and rightists are demanding Sandinista policies be overturned, pushing her government in conflicting directions.

The giveaway laws the Sandinistas were trying to protect were approved by the leftist government after it lost the February 1990 election but before center-right President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro took office two months later.

The measures specified that anyone using confiscated property became the immediate owner, and enabled city governments to give vacant property away to almost anyone who asked.

Sandinista officials and followers got cars, office supplies, computers and small farms or houses. Higher-ranking officials got luxurious homes seized from Nicaraguans who left the country after the 1979 revolution.

The National Assembly had scheduled a bill revoking the law for debate on Tuesday. With 39 Sandinista deputies absent in protest and three government legislators also absent, the 50 remaining deputies voted unanimously to send the bill to committee. It will likely be two to three weeks before it returns for a vote.

Sandinista leaders had warned of chaos if the giveaway proposal was questioned. The Sandinistas remain the country's largest party and control most labor unions, allowing them to force major concessions through devastating strikes.

Mrs. Chamorro has not stated her position on the assembly's plans to revoke the giveaway laws. However, one of her campaign promises was to return property "unjustly confiscated" to the rightful owners.

Salvadoran guerrillas free 131

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A guerrilla attack on the country's largest prison freed 131 prisoners and left 15 people dead, including nine prisoners killed in crossfire, authorities said Tuesday.

Justice Minister Rene Hernandez Valiente said 53 of those freed in the raid Monday night at La Esperanza prison were political prisoners.

The rebels blew a hole in the wall surrounding the prison and battled soldiers guarding it for more than an hour, the military said in a statement. It said four guerrillas and two soldiers were killed in the fighting and five soldiers, three guards and four civilians wounded.

The prison is six miles north of the capital and just south of a guerrilla stronghold on Guazapa Mountain.

Meanwhile, peace talks in Mexico between the guerrillas and the conservative Salvadoran government appeared stalemated Tuesday. A source close to the negotiations said "the overall view is not very positive."

The talks that started Sunday in Queretaro, 125 miles north of Mexico City, center on guerrilla demands for reforms in the Salvadoran army.

Government negotiators have said they want to skip the issue of military reform and first set a date and arrangement for a cease-fire, the source said.

The left will not agree to a cease-fire without reforms in the military, including dismissal of the worst violators of human rights.

United Nations mediator Alvaro de Soto told journalists that while this round in the talks "appears very complicated" he was optimistic.

The delegations said they expect this round of talks to end early next week.

Mudslide kills at least 64

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile (AP) — A mudslide slammed into hillside slums in this northern desert city early Tuesday, sweeping away scores of wooden shacks and killing at least 64 people, officials said. Another 48 were missing and feared dead.

About 750 people were injured in the disaster, which was triggered by five hours of rare torrential rains in this port in the Atacama desert, considered one of the most arid areas of the world.

As rescue crews searched though scores of leveled shacks on the northern edge of the city of 200,000, Interior Minister Enrique Krauss said 48 people were missing.

Belisario Velasco, Krauss' deputy, said at least 20,000 people were left homeless. He said the government had declared the city a catastrophe zone, a measure empowering authorities to release emergency funds.

The mudslide cut off the Panamerican Highway, which runs along the Pacific coast of this South American nation. Antofagasta is 900 miles north of Santiago, the capital.

The local government in Antofagasta said the avalanche was swollen by the water of four large water storage tanks that were swept away by the mass of mud.

"There was a deafening noise, and water and mud covered everything," an unidentified woman told Channel 13 television.

Water and power supplies were cut off in several neighborhoods, and roads to the city were blocked.

The mud spread to other parts of the city, including the downtown area, where vehicles were seen stuck in the streets, partly covered by up to two feet of mud.

The government's National Emergency Office reported that shelters for the homeless were being set up in schools and other government buildings. Authorities suspended classes.

Principal: Idea of summer school changes

■ More than 700 MISD students are attending summer school.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Friday is officially the first day of summer, but summer school is already in session for 751 Midland students.

Secondary summer school and elementary summer school began Monday at Lee High School and Emerson Elementary School, respectively.

Students are enrolled in summer courses for everything from enrichment to preparing to take the TAAS (Texas Assessment of Academic Skills) exit level test in order to graduate.

Being in school during the summer no longer has a negative connotation, according to Mary Smith, summer principal at Emerson.

Ms. Smith said the traditional perception of summer school being for students "who flunked" is no longer the case.

"Many of the kids here at Emerson have not failed, they just need that extra time in the classroom," she said, noting that pupils in summer school have the additional benefit of smaller class sizes, about 17-18 pupils per teacher.

Ms. Smith said 335 pupils in grades 1-6 are enrolled in the elementary summer school. "This is a high enrollment, higher than last year," she said. "Each year we have progressively enrolled more students."

Aside from Midland's student population increasing each year, the principal attributes the summer school's increasing enrollment to other factors, including expanding the summer programs, transportation being offered and parents recognizing the needs of students for getting education beyond the school year.

LHS summer principal Don Mason said 416 students are enrolled in the secondary summer school. He said the number of students enrolled this summer is "about average."

One of the courses offered at LHS is funded by State Compensatory Education (SCE). The SCE summer course is for students who failed the TAAS or TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) exit-level tests.

The SCE funds the course as long as students deposit $35, a fee which will be refunded if students attend at least 90 percent of the course and make a strong effort to achieve the objectives being taught for test preparation.

Only 15 seniors in the Midland school district failed to pass the TEAMS test, delaying their graduation, according to Joe Cummins.

Cummins, executive director of testing for the school district, said that the 15 who failed to pass the TEAMS test was "a very small percentage of the 900 or so graduates."

About 6 percent of seniors statewide failed both sections of the test, according to Joey Lozano, director of public information for the Texas Education Agency.

"About 37 percent failed one section and about 57 percent passed all tests taken," Lozano said.

Students who failed the exit-level test may take it again in July, Cummins said.

Wife says she saw husband stabbed

■ Woman who was beaten and stabbed testifies she witnessed defendant kill her husband.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The wife of Abel Tucker Hernandez testified Tuesday that she saw Ivy Ray McGruder stab her husband to death in the kitchen of her Midland home last December.

Antricia Bedford Shaw said that after McGruder killed 23-year-old Abel Tucker Hernandez, he beat her with a metal club and stabbed her in the neck.

Her testimony came on day two of McGruder's jury trial on murder and attempted murder charges before Judge John Hyde in 238th District Court.

McGruder, 27, pleaded innocent to the charges Monday. If convicted of murder, he could face up to 99 years or life in prison. Attempted murder carries a maximum punishment of 20 years in prison.

Testifying from a wheelchair, Ms. Shaw told the five-man, seven-woman jury that she and her husband had smoked several rocks of crack cocaine with McGruder on Dec. 21, 1990.

McGruder wanted Hernandez to accompany him to the "flats" in southeast Midland to buy more crack, Ms. Shaw said, but Hernandez wanted to wait until the next day. She said she and her husband invited McGruder, who didn't have a car, to stay overnight at their house, located at 3411 Park Lane.

McGruder accepted the invitation, but called Hernandez out of bed later and asked to talk to him in the kitchen, Ms. Shaw said.

"All of a sudden, I heard my husband scream," she said.

She said she ran into the kitchen, where she saw McGruder attacking her husband.

"I saw Ivy stabbing Abel with a knife," she said. "Abel was up against the kitchen sink trying to get away from Ivy, but there was nowhere to go."

Recent hot days, in some cases with temperatures hovering near the 100-degree mark, have made outdoor activities involving water popular with Midland youngsters. Four-year-old Matthew McCoy races toward a large bucket of water on the grounds of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Texan gets nation's top score on Russian test

McALLEN (AP) — Sitting alone in a run-down, three- room apartment, 17-year-old Joey Flores reads his favorite book — a Russian language textbook.

After two years of hard work, Flores has been selected one of four high school graduates from 23 states to participate in a three-week Russian language camp in Moscow July 11.

"I'm trying to increase my vocabulary (in Russian) and my knowledge as much as I can," said Flores, who was an honor student at McAllen Memorial High. "I'll spend the whole summer on it."

However, his dream of going to Moscow may not be realized because his parents, Pablo and Lorenza Flores, cannot afford to come up with his share.

The invitation was extended by the Satellite Educational Resources Consortium to the top four students involved in a Russian language course.

Of 200 students involved in 23 states, Joey scored the high-

MHCC looks for few good cooks

■ Chamber's annual cook-off and festival set for July 12-14.

Staff Report

Preparations are well under way for the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's Fourth Annual Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off & Family Festival July 12-14.

But the hunt is on for amateur and professional cookers for the event's three main culinary categories — menudo, fajitas and chili, according to chamber president Elvia Hernandez.

Trophies will also be offered for showmanship in the CASI-sanctioned chili cooking contest and for the cook in any category who has traveled farthest to compete.

Recruitment is also under way for entrants in the Senorita Hispana del Permian Basin scholarship pageant for young women between 17-23 and for the Nina Hispana beauty pageant for girls ages 4-7.

Talent and swimsuit competitions for the Senorita del Permian Basin will take place during the MHCC Family Festival, with evening gown competition and final interviews at a later date.

Other attractions for the three-day cultural celebration will include a parade, carnival, a charreada Mexican rodeo, food and game booths, contests, live entertainment by more than one dozen bands and a pinata party with a seven-foot custom-made pinata.

Festival organizers expect to top last year's attendance total of 23,000 for the affair. "25,000 is the goal, but maybe 30,000," Ms. Hernandez said.

To encourage participation by non-profit organizations, the MHCC is offering booth price discounts from the regular cost of $200 for a food booth, $100 for an arts and craft display and $75 for a game booth.

"We have built 30 new additional booths for this year," Ms. Hernandez said.

Hours of the festival are 6 p.m. to midnight on Friday, July 12, noon to midnight on Saturday and noon until 9 p.m. Sunday.

Chili and fajitas cooking competition will be on Saturday, with the menudo contest on Sunday.

Chamber honors Fannin kindergarten teacher

Staff Report

Kindergarteners who returned home happy from school prompted their parents to nominate Rhonda Lacy as Teacher of the Month.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce agreed with the parents and honored the teacher with its award recently.

Ms. Lacy taught kindergarten at Fannin Elementary School during the 1990-91 school year. She has been employed by the Midland school district since 1975.

Barbara Dennison, mother of kindergartener Heather Dennison, wrote in a letter to the chamber that she was grateful for Ms. Lacy's efforts each day when she heard her daughter say, "I love school!"

"Miss Lacy is really loving and patient with these children and what they have learned this year is truly amazing," said Teresa Wright, in a nomination letter to the chamber.

Another parent, Mary Collier commended Ms. Lacy for providing "a warm atmosphere of hugs and self-motivation which enhances the children's learning capabilities. One of the most important attributes she gives the students is a positive attitude toward school and learning."

Stenholm justifies travel

ABILENE (AP) — A West Texas congressman who led the Texas delegation in the number of trips paid for by outside organizations said his travel was justified.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, who also led the delegation in the amount of speaking fees collected in 1990, said Tuesday the fees and trips did not influence him.

Stenholm collected $46,250 in speaking fees last year, of which $19,473 was donated to various charities. Twenty-eight of his trips were paid for by lobby groups and other organizations in 1990.

"That makes a basic assumption that my vote is buyable," Stenholm said. "If you look at the list of the trips, the speeches I made, anybody who believes that wasn't work, they just ought to come and fly. I look at it as part of my work."

Stenholm said the criticism "kind of rankles the hair on the back of my neck."

Most of the speech-related payments were from groups interested in legislation before the House Agriculture Livestock, Dairy and Poultry Subcommittee, which Stenholm chairs. They came during a time when Congress was debating the latest farm bill.

Stenholm's destinations included Taiwan; West Palm Beach, Fla.; San Diego; Boca Raton, Fla.; and Hilton Head, S.C.

"Sure, you can pick out some fun trips in there. But most of them were in, make a speech, and out. I look at it as part of my work," he told the Abilene Reporter-News.

Groups such as Common Cause and Public Citizen have criticized honoraria and travel practices, which they say are aimed at influencing votes and legislation.

The practice of collecting honoraria came to an end this year.

TRIAL: Victim testifies

(From 1B)

She said she ran into her bedroom to get a metal club to give to her husband to use against McGruder. By the time she returned, however, McGruder was carrying the limp Hernandez into the living room, she said. She said he dropped Hernandez on the floor and she and McGruder knelt beside him.

Ms. Shaw, 20, said she begged McGruder to get help, to no avail. She said McGruder then followed her to the bedroom and began to hit her on the head with the metal club, which she'd handed to him moments before.

McGruder then dragged her into the kitchen after clubbing her and stabbed her in the neck, she said. He left her lying in a pool of blood, she said, but did not harm her 2-year-old son or her 18-month-old daughter.

Although the attack left her partially paralyzed on her right side, Ms. Shaw said, she is able to walk short distances.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Tom Hirsch, Ms. Shaw said she didn't know who started the fight between her husband and McGruder.

Hirsch suggested that Hernandez may have attacked McGruder and that McGruder stabbed him in self-defense.

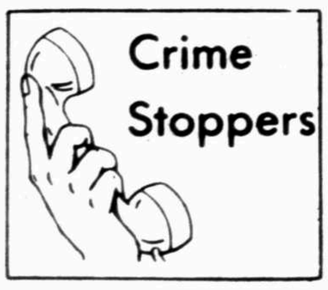

In support of this contention, Hirsch pointed to testimony from the pathologist who performed the autopsy on Hernandez.

Dr. Ralph Erdmann of Lubbock testified that cuts on McGruder's hands were consistent with those typical of wounds received in warding off a knife attack.

But Hernandez also suffered such cuts, Erdmann said, along with stab wounds to the heart, neck and abdomen.

Midland District Attorney Al Schorre rested the state's case Tuesday afternoon. The defense will have the opportunity to present its case beginning today.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Man stabbed

Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 16-year-old man was taken into custody in connection with the stabbing of another man Monday night at Woodson Park, 1001 E. Murphy St., police said.

Derl Dewayne Justice, 19, of Odessa was listed in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital Tuesday after sustaining a punctured lung from a stab wound to the left side of his chest.

Police discovered the wounded Justice in the 1900 block of E. Murphy St. about 9:20 p.m. Monday.

An investigation revealed that Justice allegedly was stabbed with a large lock-blade knife by a 16-year-old man following an argument at the park, police said. The nature of the argument, which had been going on for a couple of days, was not reported.

The youth turned himself into police Monday evening and was taken to the Ector County Youth Home, police said.

Armed robbery

A man armed with an automatic pistol robbed a closed convenience store Monday night after he told the clerk there was an emergency, police said.

An undetermined amount of cash and two packs of cigarettes were taken from the Merit store, 1800 N. Big Spring St., about 11:15 p.m., police said.

The clerk told police she was counting money when the robber appeared and said there was an emergency. She unlocked the door for him and was subsequently robbed.

The man was described as black, in his 20s, about 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighing about 145 pounds. He was wearing a light-colored shirt with a stripe, light blue pants and a cap.

Suspect arrested

Police, responding to a burglar alarm at a local business, arrested a 33-year-old Midland man for theft over $750 about 11 p.m. Monday.

William Robert Wise, 1510 Washington Ave., remained jailed Monday in lieu of a $7,500 bond set by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, jail officials said.

Officers apprehended Wise inside a locked fence at Winn Electric, 1811 W. Industrial Ave. Police said the suspect had allegedly thrown several spools of insulated copper wire, valued at $1,700, over the fence.

Store robbery

An undetermined amount of cash was taken during a robbery of a convenience store at a local truck stop early Tuesday morning, Midland County Sheriff's Office officials said.

The Gas Hut at the Warfield Truck Terminal, 10400 W. Interstate 20, was the site of the strong-armed robbery about 4:46 a.m., officials said.

The robber was described as black, and about 30 years old with a slender build. He was last seen wearing a white T-shirt with a yellow stripe and light blue shorts.

Fire update

LUBBOCK — An Odessa man burned during a propane truck fire in Midland on Monday remained in serious condition at University Medical Center on Tuesday, hospital officials said.

Tuitt Woodall, 61, sustained second degree burns over 38 percent of his body during the fire at Friday's Welding Suply, 2324 Farm to Market Road 715, officials said.

Woodall was transported to Midland Memorial Hospital before being transferred to Lubbock.

Cause of the fire was still under investigation on Tuesday, Midland County fire officials said.

Grass fire

ODESSA — Firefighters battled a grass fire just outside the city for more than six hours Tuesday, fire officials said.

Five units from the Odessa Fire Department responded to the blaze about 1:45 p.m. It was located south of Interstate 20 near South Highway 385. The fire — which consumed grass and trash — covered an area about two by three miles, officials said.

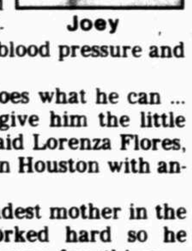

Cause of the fire was unknown, officials said.

est marks with a final grade of 104.

SERC awarded students $500 toward the trip, but they must each come up with $1,900, said Monica Gonzalez, director of University Outreach in McAllen.

Joey

"There's no way he can come up with that kind of money. His financial situation is very poor, to say the least," she said.

Joey' father is a musician and his mother suffers from high blood pressure and cannot work.

"His father does what he can ... and we try to give him the little that we can," said Lorenza Flores, who now lives in Houston with another son.

"I'm the proudest mother in the world. I've worked hard so he could at least have a few things ... but now, the situation is difficult," she said. "But one has to get up and have energy to go on."

Joey, who was born in Reynosa, credited his mother's example of hard work for his success.

"She has always worked so hard. She worked for 14 years...but then she got sick from her leg ... and had to stop," he said. "But she's not the type of person to just do nothing. And she always told me to study hard. It's always been her behind me."

Her aim was to instill a sense of self- worth and commitment to education, regardless of adversity.

"Poverty is not embarrassment. You have to have a goal and say you can do it ... Thank God, my son has always listened to me."

Because of his job as a musician, Joey's father spends little time at home and consequently, he spends much of his time at home alone.

"At times, I kind of felt depressed because of the situation I was in," Joey said. "I would look at other kids in school and say, 'Why isn't it like that for me?' But I always thought, I can't let it stop me. Forget about that part and concentrate on school."

His outlook has paid off.

Taking all advanced honors courses in high school, Joey ranked in the top 10 percent in a graduating class of 500 students.

He is also fluent in German, Spanish and English.

"I just love it," he says of learning new languages. "I really don't know why ... sometimes you just like things and you can't explain it. That's the way I feel about languages," he said.

Joey founded Memorial High School's first Russian Club and actively recruited and tutored other students in the language.

His father's love for music has apparently influenced him.

Joey has played in the band, mastering the tuba, clarinet, bassoon and euphonium.

Awarded the $10,000 Texas Achievement Award from the University of Texas at Austin, Joey will study Russian language in the fall.

His goal is to become a translator for the United Nations.

Dr. Tomas Garza, a UT-Austin associate professor of Slavic languages and department language coordinator, said Joey's raw talent and individual determination are rare for a teen-ager.

"I went to McAllen and had a three-hour conversation with him in Russian. I was impressed by his natural ability," Garza said. "I came back and said to our (department) chair, 'This student is special.' "

Garza, who is one of two Hispanics in the country to specialize in Russian, said Joey could soon join that list.

"He's definitely got the raw talent ... and he's got that kind of humble quality about him," Garza said. "It's as if he doesn't realize people find him highly intelligent and think he's great. I can't wait to have him in my class."

Hutchison: Income tax wrong idea at wrong time

By Michael Holmes

AUSTIN (AP) — One of the state's top Republicans, Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison, Tuesday said a proposed state income tax is the wrong idea at the wrong time.

Ms. Hutchison said such a levy would slow the economic recovery, scare away new business and strip the state of a key advantage in the competition for new jobs.

"The mere mention of an income tax probably has scared off some businesses considering a move to Texas. It's time to halt this runaway train before it does irreparable damage," Ms. Hutchison said.

"The fact that Texas has no state income tax is one of the few state policies that sets us apart. It's our major drawing card in the area of economic development. Let's not give it away," she said.

The treasurer's remarks were made in essays authored for distribution to Texas newspapers.

Democratic Gov. Ann Richards has called the Legislature into special session July 8 to write and fund a 1992-93 state budget, work left undone in the 140-day regular session that ended May 27.

Revenue for the two-year period is projected to total $52.3 billion, but legislative budget analysts have forecast a $4.7 billion deficit if all programs are funded at current levels.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, both Democrats, have proposed instituting state personal and corporate income taxes to help balance the budget and provide local property tax relief.

Former Gov. John Connally, a Republican chairing Richards' special tax committee, has recommended increasing the motor fuels tax and instituting a tax on businesses gross receipts to raise additional revenue.

Ms. Hutchison said the Treasury's forecast indicates that state government should end the current, two-year budget period Aug. 31 with a $300 million surplus.

In addition, she said, total state government income for 1992-93 is projected to increase about 7 percent over current spending levels.

"If we don't cut the waste now, we will experience the budget creep that is strangling other states, like California, Massachusetts and New York," the treasurer said. "Texas must begin serious debate on real budget cuts and tough spending controls."

Ms. Hutchison acknowledged that spending must rise in several areas — including criminal justice, mental health, public education, welfare and higher education.

However, she said, the state could stretch its dollars by boosting prison capacity to 100 percent. Currently, a federal court decision has capped prison population at 95 percent.

She also proposes using money from the state "rainy day" fund, increasing fees for permits and licenses, consolidating unspecified services and requiring new investment policies for retirement systems to reduce state contributions.

"Spending increases must be tightly control . l or our state will be facing p tential deficits throughout this decade," she said.

In another budget-related development, the Houston Post reported Tuesday that Comptroller John Sharp is expected to recommend next week that the Texas Education Agency be dismantled and rebuilt under incoming Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno.

The newspaper, quoting unnamed sources close to the audit team being led by Sharp, said the plan would include firing all 1,100 TEA employees and allowing them to reapply for jobs in a revamped department.

Gov. Richards, who appointed Meno and told him she wants major changes at the TEA, told the Post she favored giving him "extraordinary powers."

"There is no way you are going to clean it up until you do that," she said, acknowledging "radical" changes are needed.

■ TABC supervisor charged with DWI

FORT WORTH — An area supervisor for the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission probably won't be prosecuted after being arrested June 1 on a charge of driving while intoxicated, officials said.

Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Currey said Chris Lucio, assistant district supervisor of the TABC's Fort Worth district office, suffered an unexpected drug reaction after taking a medication that was not to be used with alcohol.

A pharmacy did not include the warning on the label, said Curry.

However, even if Lucio does not go to trial on the DWI charge, the agency's internal affairs division will investigate the incident, TABC attorney Joe Darnall said Monday.

Lucio, who remains at his post pending the outcome of the investigation, declined to comment on the matter.

■ Richards sets King bill-signing ceremony

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards will have a bill signing ceremony for a measure that will make the third Monday in January a paid state holiday in observance of the birthday of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Richards signed the bill June 12, but plans to have a bill signing ceremony Wednesday on the lawn of the Governor's Mansion.

Martin Luther King's birthday has been an optional state holiday, meaning state employees can take the day off but are not be paid.

■ Elementaries adopt videodisc program

AUSTIN — The nation's first videodisc science program to be approved for use as a textbook has been adopted by 65 percent of Texas elementary schools, the program's publisher said.

William Clark, president of Optical Data Corp., said Tuesday that "Windows on Science" will be used at 2,200 of the state's 3,400 elementary schools. Optical Data produces, publishes and distributes the program.

The videodisc course represents 35 percent of the state's $36 million elementary science textbook adoption, Clark said.

The El Paso and Ysleta school districts, the state's fifth and eighth largest respectively, have decided to use videodiscs instead of textbooks in all their elementary schools, he said.

■ Alleged head of smuggling ring convicted

EL PASO — A federal jury convicted a man portrayed by prosecutors as the overseer of a major cocaine smuggling organization operating from El Paso.

Jesus Armando Flores, 33, was convicted Tuesday of continuing criminal enterprise. He faces life in prison without parole. Sentencing was set for July 31.

In closing arguments Monday, prosecutors portrayed Flores as a man who went from being a small-time cocaine distributor to a major dealer capable of arranging multi-ton shipments from Colombia.

The defense said three major witnesses, all former drug dealers who agreed to testify in exchange for money or reduced sentences, lied about Flores.

When man applies for shelter, arrest warrant discovered

ARLINGTON (AP) — John Olguin would like to just be left alone, but his past continues to haunt him.

After his arrest in 1974 for the armed robbery of a Dallas convenience store, Olguin spent 16 years bouncing around the Texas Department of Corrections. He was paroled last January.

"They gave me three choices, and I picked Houston, Dallas and Fort Worth," Olguin, 60, said.

But Texas officials didn't know at the time that he had walked away from a work farm in New Mexico a month before he got in trouble in Texas in 1974.

That fact came out last Thursday, when he applied for space in a homeless shelter and had to submit to a police background check.

The investigation turned up a 1974 New Mexico fugitive warrant issued when he skipped out after serving 10 months for parole violation.

"I don't know why they want me back — I'll never know that," Olguin told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"I'm trying to get my life together," he said.

A spokesman for the New Mexico Department of Corrections said paperwork was being prepared for Olguin's extradition.

"New Mexico takes a very dim view of escapes, and to my knowledge we always extradite and bring them back," spokesman Don Caviness said.

If convicted of escape in New Mexico, Olguin could receive another nine years in jail, in addition to what was remaining on his sentence for parole violation in 1974, Caviness said.

Olguin is expected to be transported to New Mexico by Monday.

He was arrested in Albuquerque, N.M., in 1960. He and a brother-in-law were sentenced to three to 25 years on an armed robbery conviction.

Olguin was paroled 11 years later, but less than 2 years after his release he was re-arrested for failing to keep in touch with his parole officer.

Then in 1974, in New Mexico, another inmate gave Olguin, who was a trusty, money to buy liquor from a bar about a mile from the Los Lunas Correctional Center.

Deputy thinks escapees in Mexico

CRYSTAL CITY (AP) — A Zavala County official helping coordinate the search for three jail escapees said Tuesday that although he fears the men have crossed the border into Mexico, the search will continue.

The trio escaped from a Zavala County jail Sunday by beating and stabbing a guard and stealing his pickup. Among the three was Jose Garcia Briseno, 33, of Carrizo Springs, who is charged with capital murder in the January stabbing death of Dimmit County Sheriff Ben Murray.

Also being sought were Ricardo Perez Basaldua, 21, of Batesville, who recently was sentenced to 40 years in prison for murder, and Rogelio Mendoza Garcia, 23, of Crystal City. He was being held for a parole violation, police said.

The escapees were believed to be armed with a 9mm pistol and a .22-caliber rifle, both of which belong to the guard and were in his pickup truck.

Officials believed the trio might have headed to Piedras Negras, Mexico from Eagle Pass.

"I think they're in Mexico," Zavala County Chief Deputy Ruben Gonzales said Tuesday.

"They might still be here. I really kind of doubt it, because the intense search in this area and the surveillance has not really shown any indication that they're here," he said.

The Texas Department of Public Safety, Texas Rangers, Border Patrol, and virtually every police department and sheriff's department in the region had officers involved in the manhunt, which included helicopters and fixed-wing planes.

The search had been concentrated in an area between Crystal City and Carrizo Springs, 10 miles to the south, and west toward Eagle Pass, 45 miles away.

Officials so far had met with frustration, Gonzales said.

"We're kind of upset," he said. "The other escapes we've had in the past ... we would always get some kind of phone calls from people, some kind of information that they saw the escapees or whatever. But this situation is totally different. Nothing," he said.

"We were hoping they abandoned the pickup somewhere so we could at least find the pickup," he added.

Gonzales said he would direct about 20 officers Tuesday in searches concentrating on a region southwest of Crystal City and the Eagle Pass area.

Mexican authorities had been notified of the jail break and told where some of the escapees' relatives live, Gonzales said. He said he expected they would be "very supportive" in the hunt.

'We're not going to give up. We've got to catch that guy (Briseno) somehow.'

— Deputy Ruben Gonzales

"We're all standing by pretty close, and keeping our eyes and ears open," Gonzales said.

"We're not going to give up. We've got to catch that guy somehow," he said of Briseno.

Gonzales said he discovered the escape Sunday night when he went to the jail to investigate why no one was answering the telephone.

The three men had persuaded guard Osvaldo Lopez of Eagle Pass to open a cell by saying that they needed to do laundry, then jumped him and locked him in the laundry room, Gonzales said.

Lopez, 23, was in stable condition Tuesday at Dimmit Memorial Hospital, hospital officials said.

Chef creates hot new cuisine

By Teresa S. Johnson

WACO (AP) — Growing up, Stephan Pyles furiously fought against his upbringing as the son of the owners of a West Texas truck stop.

But it was those roots in down-home cooking that helped boost Pyles' reputation as one of the top chefs in the country and a major innovator of Southwest regional cuisine.

Pyles took such truck stop fare as sweet potatoes, tamales, peppers and pinto beans, prepared them with classic French cooking techniques and turned them into one of the hottest food trends in the country.

His version of Southwest regional cooking includes dishes like Tamale Tart with Roasted Garlic Custard and Crabmeat Topping, Shellfish-Sweet Potato Tamale with Ancho Pepper Cream and Veal Chop with Pinto Bean-Smoked Corn Ragout. The Dallas chef will demonstrate his style of cooking at a symphony fund-raiser here next month.

"I was born in the restaurant business," said Pyles, whose parents owned the Truck Stop Cafe in Big Spring. "I always viewed it as something to escape from."

But he found he couldn't escape, he said in a phone interview.

After graduating from college with a degree in music in 1974, he traveled to Europe, where he fell in love with the French culture and French food, in particular. Realizing his true calling was cooking, he studied with French chefs and worked in French restaurants, all the while refining his classic cooking techniques.

But his Southwestern roots never left him.

"I never would have thought after working with French chefs that I would go back to my roots and use ingredients I grew up with," said Pyles. "But really it was the natural thing to do."

And he did it just at the right time.

In 1983, Pyles opened the Routh Street Cafe in Dallas. At a time when all the top restaurants in that city were French continental, he decided to be different.

"I took a gamble and used the classic techniques I had been trained in to make a menu with regional ingredients. My goal was to use down home flavors to produce food as good as you could get anywhere in the country," said Pyles.

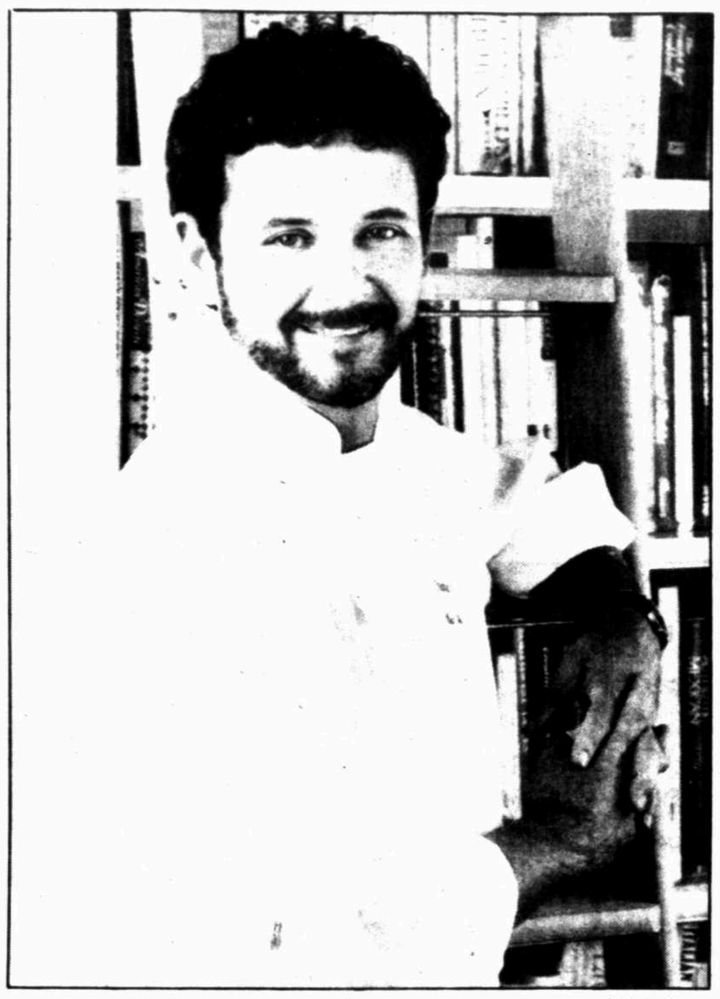

At the same time the trend in American regional cuisine, which uses indigenous ingredients in innovative ways, was moving in Pyles' direction.

California cuisine was firmly established and the creole and cajun trends had taken hold. Within six months of the opening of Routh Street, the food scene shifted to the Southwest and Pyles began getting calls from national magazines, food columnists and television shows wanting to know more about foods like smoked tomatoes, cranberry-serrano salsa, sweet potato tamales and others of Pyles specialties.

"I'm the first to admit I was in the right place at the right time," Pyles said. "I made the right choice to make a statement to showcase foods of the Southwest at a time when most people didn't know what those foods were."

Pyles' creations begin with many of the same ingredients his parents used at their truck stop — chiles, cilantro, game, catfish, barbecue. Pyles said he takes standard cafe dishes, refines and recreates them.

"All my dishes have a classical basis," Pyles said. "I can't get away from my French training. I drive my staff nuts because everything has to be perfect. When someone is dicing peppers, all the pieces have to be the same size."

AP LaserPhoto

Stephan Pyles has come to the forefront of American cooking by combining his southwestern roots of with classic French cooking techniques.

While his techniques follow classic French form, the ingredients he uses feature down-home flavors.

For example, he created a tamale tart about four years ago, he said. It uses tamale masa that is pressed into a pan, filled with a garlic custard then topped with venison chili or, for a lighter touch, crabmeat.

"It's the same idea as the tamale, it's just a more refined taste and presentation," Pyles said.

Where does he come up with such ideas as a tamale tart?

"It's a matter of tasting, eating and seeing what other people are doing, watching trends, getting ideas, then evolving those into something typical of my style," Pyles said.

Of course, Pyles doesn't expect food trends to remain static, and he expects regional cuisine to keep evolving.

"We are at a strange crossroads," Pyles said when asked about current trends in food. "For so long, trends have stayed along regional lines. First there was the California cuisine, then creole and cajun, then Southwest, New England and now Mid-West.

"Now I think we will see American regional cooking being influenced by other parts of the world," Pyles said.

For instance, Thai, Vietnamese and other oriental cooking styles are being incorporated into the cuisines of regions where these immigrants have settled, he said.

Pyles said he enjoys spending time in the Caribbean and has noticed that influence creeping into his cooking.

"I like that move to cross-cultural cooking," Pyles said.

TAMALE TART WITH ROASTED GARLIC CUSTARD AND CRABMEAT TOPPING

1 large red bell pepper, seeded and chopped
½ cup water
2 dried ancho chiles, seeded
1¼ cup masa harina
¾ cup yellow cornmeal
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon cayenne
2 teaspoon cumin
½ cup plus 2 tablespoons shortening
Roasted Garlic Custard (recipe follows)
Crabmeat Topping (recipe follows)

In saucepan, cover bell pepper with water and boil until soft. Place pepper and water in blender and puree. Set aside. Sear chiles in 450-degree oven for 1 minute, then cover with warm water and soak for 20 minutes. Puree chiles and water. Set aside. Combine masa harina, cornmeal, salt, cayenne and cumin. Set aside. In bowl, beat shortening until fluffy. Add dry ingredients and slowly whip until smooth. Beat in 2 tablespoons each of bell pepper and ancho chile puree. Shape dough into a ball and pat into 9-inch false-bottom tart pan. Fill with Roasted Garlic Custard and cover pan completely with plastic wrap. Place in bamboo steamer over boiling water and steam 25 to 30 minutes.

Spoon Crabmeat Topping on top of tart. Slice and serve immediately. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

ROASTED GARLIC CUSTARD

1 tablespoon olive oil
6 large garlic cloves, peeled
2 cups heavy cream
4 egg yolks
1 whole egg

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Heat olive oil in small roasting pan over medium flame. Add garlic and bake 15 minutes or until garlic turns golden brown. In saucepan, bring garlic and cream to boil, then puree in blender. In bowl, beat eggs. Then whisk in garlic puree a little at a time. Season to taste.

CRABMEAT TOPPING

2 tablespoons olive oil
¼ cup diced onion
10 ounces lump crabmeat, picked over
¼ cup diced red tomato
¼ cup diced yellow tomato
2 tablespoons chopped cilantro
2 teaspoons diced serrano chile
1 teaspoon lime juice

In saute pan, heat olive oil over medium heat until lightly smoking. Add onion and saute for 1 minute. Add crabmeat, tomatoes, cilantro, serrano and lime juice. Cook until warmed, about 2 minutes. Season to taste.

Whole grain biscuits receive mixed reviews

By Linda Anderson

Ever since I can remember (and I'm not about to say how long that is), Roman Meal bread has been synonymous with whole wheat goodness and flavor. Of course, it is more expensive than store-brand white (or even wheat) bread, but Roman Meal is supposed to be one of the best. I know I always liked it.

Anderson

Now, it seems, the company is branching out a little — into the canned biscuit market. If you want hot, fresh baked Roman Meal biscuits, all you have to do is buy a can at the supermarket.

Even though my children don't always appreciate the assets of whole wheat bread (or hamburger buns, hot dog buns, pancakes and waffles, bread sticks, toast or, for that matter, biscuits), I bought a can of Roman Meal biscuits and baked them so we could try them for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A 12-ounce can of the biscuits, containing 10 biscuits, cost $1.22, which is pretty expensive by canned biscuit standards (although some of the more recent, and fancier, additions to supermarkets' stock of canned bread items cost more than that).

Label advertising is pretty sparce. After you get past the claims of "natural whole grain goodness" and "no cholesterol," the advertising pickings are slim. However, the company does invite consumer comments, which is always a nice touch: "If you have any comments or wish additional information about this product, please write Roman Meal Company, Consumer Services, P.O. Box 11126, Tacoma, Wa, 98411-0126."

Nutrition label is a little more informative. Each two-biscuit serving is supposed to contain 180 calories, 4 grams protein, 32 grams carbohydrate and 4 grams fat.

The biscuits turned out to be bigger than regular canned biscuits, which i expected, but the taste test itself had unexpected results. I, as the resident whole-wheat fan, was disappointed in the taste — they didn't have enough of a whole wheat flavor and in fact tasted more like ordinary canned biscuits than I thought they would. The young taste-tester, a non-whole wheat fan, ate four of the biscuits and enjoyed them. And then later, she heated up the leftovers for a snack.

Will wonders never cease.

DEAR ABBY

Golden anniversary present glitters more than it should

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband's parents will soon be celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. My husband has two brothers and two sisters. His sisters decided, without consulting us, that all the children would chip in and send their parents to Hawaii as their anniversary gift. They have already told their parents, who are thrilled about it.

Van Buren

The problem is, the sister whose idea it was is the only one who can afford such an expensive gift. The rest of us are barely making it from paycheck to paycheck.

My siblings and I bought our parents a set of dishes for their 50th. We would have loved to send them to Hawaii, but we knew they wouldn't enjoy it knowing we would have to take out a loan to pay for it.

I am more than a little resentful that my parents got dishes while my in-laws will get a trip to Hawaii. (My parents are no less deserving.)

I have polled my friends and coworkers from all levels of income, and they agree that a trip to Hawaii isn't a typical anniversary gift — it is excessive. — BURNED UP AND BROKE

DEAR BURNED UP: A trip to Hawaii is not an excessive anniversary gift for people who can afford it. However, one or two members of a family have no right to decide on any gift "from all the children" without having consulted all of them. And to have told the parents before discussing it with all the siblings was inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: My father sent for your booklet "What Every Teen Should Know," and asked me to look it over to see if it would be helpful to my 12-year-old daughter. (She is his granddaughter.)

I read the booklet and thought that the way you approached all of the subjects was just great. I decided not just to hand her the booklet, but to read it with her so we could discuss it. Now she feels very comfortable talking with me about all the subjects that young girls wonder about, but are afraid to bring up. It broke the ice.

Now my daughter will always come to me with questions because she knows I will always be there to listen to her and guide her. Thank you from the bottom of my heart for caring about our young people. — GRATEFUL MOM IN LYNN, MASS.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I, too, am grateful. Thanks, Mom; your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: To those who are in the habit of putting on their glasses when they answer the telephone, the following true story may shed some light:

At the University of Illinois Medical School, our ear-nose-and-throat professor demonstrated a simple hearing test. He asked for a volunteer; Aaron Hilkevitch responded.

Hilkevitch sat down facing the class in the amphitheater and his glasses were taken away. The professor approached him from the side and whispered, "One, two, three." Hilkevitch couldn't hear. So the professor approached him again and whispered, "One, two, three" a bit louder. Again, Hilkevitch couldn't hear. Then he blurted out, "Give me my glasses so I can hear you better!" This brought down the house; the class roared with laughter.

Later, of course, we learned that improving one sense organ enhances the perception of other sense organs. The opposite is also true — that on the loss of a sense organ, other sensibilities become more acute, as a person with impaired vision develops other compensatory skills. — SELIG J. KAVKA, M.D., CHICAGO

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.

Vinegars make a comeback

Associated Press

Flavored vinegars are making a comeback. Why? Because they zip up salads, sauces, marinades, soups and stews, and add pizzazz to your favorite dishes without adding fat.

Look for your favorite flavored vinegar in your supermarket, or be a money-wise gourmet and make your own. Package your homemade vinegar attractively and you've got a gift-giving idea.

Distilled, cider and wine vinegar are the three most common vinegars.

■ Distilled or white vinegar is a colorless vinegar made from grains. The distilling process removes any flavor and leaves only an acidic taste.

■ Cider vinegar, made from apples, is a golden-brown vinegar with a slightly fruity flavor.

■ For wine vinegars, the color and flavor of the vinegar depend on the type of wine used. White wine produces a lighter-tasting vinegar than does red wine.

To make flavored vinegars, start with a base of cider, distilled or wine vinegar. Your choice of a base depends on how you plan to flavor your vinegar. Wine vinegars are a good match for herbs and spices. Cider vinegar can also complement spices. Fruits and edible flowers go well with distilled vinegar.

Flavored vinegars can be prepared in two ways: For the quickest method, heat the vinegar in a stainless steel or enamel pan until hot, but not boiling. (Do not use aluminum as it could react with the vinegar.) Pour the hot vinegar over the herb, seed, fruit, or spice and cover with cheesecloth. Let it stand in a warm, dark place for one to two weeks to mellow the flavor. Then filter the vinegar through several layers of cheesecloth and pour it into bottles.

For the second method, pour the vinegar directly over the flavoring ingredients and let the mixture stand for a month before filtering.

When sampling vinegar, trust your taste buds. If the flavor of the herb or fruit is too strong, add some plain vinegar. If the flavor is too weak, add more seasoning. Once you've tried a variety of vinegars, try combining flavors. Mix two or three ingredients, such as raspberry and mint, lemon and garlic, or peaches and cloves.

RASPBERRY WINE VINEGAR

2 cups fresh raspberries or 2 10-ounce packages frozen raspberries, thawed and drained
4 cups cider vinegar
2 cups dry red wine

Rinse fresh raspberries with cold water and drain well. In a large bowl combine raspberries, cider vinegar and wine. Cover and let stand overnight. In a stainless steel or enamel saucepan, heat vinegar mixture to boiling; reduce heat. Boil, uncovered, for 3 minutes. Cool.

Strain mixture, discarding solids. Pour into bottles; cover tightly. Let vinegar age for 2 to 4 weeks before using. Store in a cool, dark place. Makes 6 cups.

Watermelon salsa runs hot, cold with melons, peppers

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Salsa doesn't mean just tomatoes anymore. Chefs have expanded the definition of the Southwest's favorite dip to include every flavor of fruit, including watermelon.

Jalapenos add a bite to the cool crunch of watermelon in the following recipe. For a festive presentation, serve the dip in a hollowed out melon (making sure to cut a thin slice off the bottom of the melon so it will sit firmly).

WATERMELON FIRE AND ICE SALSA

3 cups seeded and chopped watermelon
½ cup chopped green bell pepper
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoon each chopped cilantro and scallion
1 to 2 tablespoons (2 to 3 medium) jalapeno peppers
½ teaspoon garlic salt

Combine all ingredients; mix well. Refrigerate at least 1 hour. Serve on sliced oranges or cheese-filled manicotti or with corn or potato chips. Or, top 1 cup sour cream with 1 cup salsa and serve with chips.

Dravecky loses arm

■ San Francisco Giants' president Al Rosen confirms that his former pitcher had his left arm amputated during surgery in New York Tuesday.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Dave Dravecky, the pitcher who made a brief, dramatic comeback after surgery for cancer in his left arm, Tuesday had the arm amputated, according to Al Rosen, president of Dravecky's former team, the San Francisco Giants.

The surgery was performed in New York at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. The hospital said it was withholding comment until a 9 a.m. CDT news conference Wednesday. Rosen, speaking from San Francisco, said Dravecky was in surgery about four hours and that the Giants' chaplain and at least eight friends and relatives were at the hospital.

Rosen described Dravecky, 35, as "sort of a folk hero for the comebacks he made."

'In as much as there is a certain amount of fear involved in losing my arm, reflecting upon my past eight or nine months, it is a sense of almost relief that I feel. The pain and discomfort of that time is now about to end and I look forward to once again doing the things I enjoy.'

— Dave Dravecky

Dravecky was a compelling and sympathetic figure in 1989 when he mounted a return 10 months after an operation to remove a malignant tumor, and part of the deltoid muscle, in his throwing arm. It was the first of four operations.

In his return he hurled seven shutout innings in beating the Reds. But in his next start, he heard a snap as he was pitching against the Expos.

The arm was broken. While recuperating, he went on the field to celebrate when the Giants clinched the division title, a teammate jostled him, and he again broke the arm.

It was announced last week that Dravecky's arm, in which cancer was diagnosed in 1988, would be amputated at the shoulder.

The surgery, the fourth on Dravecky's

Dodson honored

Staff Report

Midland's James E. "Doc" Dodson was recently named the winner of the Distinguished Service Trainer Award by the American Orthopaedic Society for Sports Medicine.

Dodson was presented an engraved certificate and an AOSSM donation of $1,500 in his name to the National Athletic Trainer's Association Endowment Fund during NATA's annual meeting in New Orleans, La.

The national honor came after Dodson's was nominated for the award out of NATA's District VI. Dodson previously had been named to NATA's Hall of Fame "making contributions that resulted in recognizable improvements in the quality of professional practice in athletic training and have had an impact that is national in scope."

Dodson was athletic trainer at Midland High for over 40 years prior to retirement a year ago. He is now working with Dr. Don Floyd as director of rehabilitation.

Berbick busted

MIRAMAR, Fla. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Trevor Berbick was arrested Tuesday and jailed on a sexual battery charge in the alleged assault of a baby sitter last October, police said.

Berbick denied the allegation as he was led to the Broward County Jail in handcuffs, saying his estranged wife, Nadine, had made up the story in the heat of emotion over their pending divorce.

"Hey, I'm not an abusive person. I didn't hurt that girl. She knows this," Berbick said. "My wife got upset and didn't know what she wanted to do, so she told a lie."

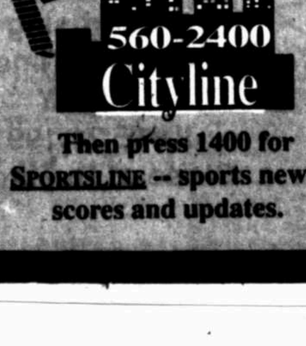

Berbick was arrested Tuesday at his Miramar house on a warrant filed by Miami police charging him with one count of sexual battery, said Miramar Police Sgt. George Pierson.

"He wasn't expecting us, but he was totally cooperative," Pierson said.

The Dade County warrant says Berbick is accused of going to a former baby sitter's home in Miami in October 1990 to pay her some money, and then raping her.

USGA stands firm on format

■ Golf's ruling body refuses to change its way of thinking regarding 18-hole playoffs, saying 'inconvenience' is an insufficient reason to change to sudden death.

Associated Press

CHASKA, Minn. — The U.S. Golf Association is considering modifications to the U.S. Open, none of which include dropping the 18-hole playoff format.

"An 18-hole playoff is the fair and sensible way to determine the national championship," USGA president Grant Spaeth said Tuesday, the day after Payne Stewart's playoff victory over Scott Simpson — the 30th playoff in 91 Opens.

Spaeth added that inconvenience "is the most compelling reason to wrap it up ... but we don't think it's a good enough reason to change. Every golfer in the world understands that the best test of golf is 18 holes. It's like taking a full examination."

The U.S. Open remains the only major golf tournament that retains the 18-hole playoff format.

The USGA, however, is considering several other changes, including the possible return to playing 36 holes on the final day of the Open.

"Possibly for our centennial championship," Spaeth said during the the Open. The USGA also sponsors the Senior U.S. Open and Women's U.S. Open.

The protests, arguments and complaints about the 18-hole playoff were renewed Sunday when the Open was decided in overtime for the third time in four years.

The USGA is aware of the arguments to get rid of the format. And Spaeth even agreed an 18-hole playoff may be inconvenient, particularly for the thousands of volunteers necessary to stage a tournament of this magnitude. But he repeated it's "the fair and sensible" way to go.

Stewart family a proud bunch after win

Stewart

Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Friends and family of Payne Stewart rejoiced after the Springfield native won the U.S. Open in a playoff with Scott Simpson.

"Payne's always wanted to win this one. This is the biggest one," said his mother, Bee Stewart, who hugged daughter Lora Thomas after her son's victory Monday at Hazeltine National in Chaska, Minn.

Mrs. Stewart said she had a good feeling Sunday, when Stewart forced an 18-hole playoff with Simpson. "I said, 'It's in the bag now.'"

However, that feeling began to trickle away Monday when Stewart three-putted No. 15 for a bogey that left him two shots behind Simpson with three holes to play.

But Stewart, 34, who now lives in Orlando, Fla., made birdie to Simpson's bogey on the next hole to forge a tie. He took the lead on 17 and clinched the title with a 4-foot putt for par on the 18th, sending friends and relatives back home into a frenzy.

Mrs. Stewart said her late husband, Bill Stewart, a former Missouri amateur golfing great who died of cancer in 1985, would have relished his son's triumph.

"You couldn't have talked to him right now — he'd be bawling, too," she said. "In fact, he's probably crying right now."

Said Lora Thomas: "Daddy is turning over in his grave right now."

Wheat takes Rebel reins

■ Elise Wheat gets an early wedding present from Midland athletic director Jack Tayrien after being named head basketball coach for Midland Lee's Lady Rebels.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

It's been a big week for Midland Lee's Elise Wheat — and she didn't even have to eat a raw egg.

Wheat

Jack Tayrien, Midland athletic director, named Wheat as Lee's head girls basketball coach Tuesday, replacing Shirley Stephenson, who took retirement at the end of the school year.

On top of that, Wheat will become Mrs. Nichols Shane Kail on Saturday when the two exchange marriage vows in Big Spring. To say the least, it's been an interesting week for Wheat, Kail or whatever is appropriate at this current time.

"Needless to say, I'm excited — about both," Wheat said. "The basketball job is something I really wanted and feel comfortable with. I played basketball in college."

Wheat came to Lee as the head volleyball coach in 1989 from Liberty Hill. She was also head volleyball coach in Liberty Hill, where she guided a team to the state playoffs in three seasons. But now she gets her first shot at a head basketball position after being an assistant at both Liberty Hill and Lee the past five seasons.

Angels' Todd James wins 6th straight

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — There is no question that the Midland Angels have been ailing the last two years here at Lawerence-Dumont Stadium, but they found a healer in one Todd James Tuesday night.

James won his sixth consecutive to raise his season record to a gaudy 8-2 with a complete game 10-2 victory over the Wichita Wranglers.

Jordan collects another award

■ The Most Valuable Player of the NBA Championship Series says his only goals for the off-season are playing golf, relaxing, and enjoying his team's win over the LA Lakers.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan received the NBA championship series MVP award Tuesday for leading the Chicago Bulls to victory over the Los Angeles Lakers, but he's already facing another challenge.

"I'm going to find a street where no one knows me," Jordan said after receiving the MVP trophy and a car.

But does such a street exist?

"We'll find it on the map," he said.

And no, he's not saying what map he's looking at.

After a season in the fast lane, Jordan is ready to travel for pleasure and to take it easy.

"I'm just going to relax," he said. "I've been playing my golf every day."

He's also got to take care of some endorsements. Jordan said he hopes the Bulls' championship leads to more financial opportunities for his teammates.

"I'm going to fulfill some obligations," he said. "Things won't change much for me. But it might for the other fellows."

One thing Jordan said he wants to do on his summer vacation is enjoy the Bulls championship, won in five games over LA. Jordan, 28, averaged 31.2 points for the final series.

"It still hasn't sunk in," he said. "I can't believe we're the world champions."

With the title, Jordan said he has reached all of his basketball goals, both team and individual. "Now it's just a matter of duplicating," he said.

He's not making any predictions, though.

Next season, he said, "I'm pretty sure everyone's going to be shooting for us."

He thanked his teammates in accepting the MVP trophy and the Jeep Cherokee which goes with it.

"I'll think of this as a team award," he said. "But I don't know if I'll let anybody borrow the Jeep."

mance. He has given up only two earned runs in his last 42 innings of work. He has now had three consecutive complete game victories.

James' performance also ended a string of woes against the Wranglers in this stadium. The Angels had lost seven consecutive games without a win at Lawrence-Dumont and were 3-20 over the past two seasons here.

Ironically, James got only seven hits of help from the Angel offense, but they were good for 10 runs.

Mark Howie gave the Angels a 1-0 lead with a solo homer in the first inning. Howie now has seven homers in his last 13 games. He had had only two dingers in his previous 48 games.

Wichita got to James for two runs, one unearned, in the third inning and that was the only damage of the night by the Wranglers, but it gave them a 2-1 lead.

Walt McConnell, who was mired in an 0-for-14 slump, turned the game around in the sixth inning with a two-out, three-run homer, his first of the year.

The Angels put the game away in the eighth with a six-run outburst, highlighted by a two run single by Howie and a two-run triple by Kevin Flora. Howie had two hits, three RBIs and scored three times in the game.

Flora made an error in the game, ending a 21-game streak without a miscue at second base.

In addition to ending the seven-game slide here, the victory ended a three-game Midland losing streak with three more to go in this series before heading to El Paso for six games. Wichita and Midland play again today at noon.

Valenzuela won't need surgery

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — California Angels left-hander Fernando Valenzuela underwent an angiogram Tuesday which revealed no narrowing or hardening of the arteries in his heart and he won't need surgery.

Dr. Larry Santora, who performed the procedure at St. Joseph's Hospital in nearby Orange, described Valenzuela's rare condition as a myo-cardio bridging of the left descending artery that supplies blood to the heart muscle.

"When the heart muscle contracts, the vessel is 'crimped' periodically," the Angels said in a statement. "This condition explains the changes in previous cardiograms and treadmill findings."

Santora said that an angioplasty procedure would not be beneficial and Valenzuela's condition would be re-evaluated "from time to time," the Angels said.

WHEAT: Plans a return to basics

(From 1C)

"I have an advantage in taking the Lee job because I already know the kids. I've coached with Shirley the past two seasons and have had the opportunity to work with the kids at the junior high and freshman levels," Wheat said. "Also, we have seven kids who overlap in volleyball and basketball."

Tayrien didn't say how many applications he received for the Lee position, but "we had some good applicants, but Elise is our choice. She has a good playing and coaching background and has worked under some good coaches. Elise has really been involved in the athletic programs at Lee and we feel this will have tremendous carry-over value."

Wheat said she will remain in volleyball as an assistant, but the head volleyball coaching job is now open.

Wheat has already shown her knack for motivation. She promised her volleyball team last fall that she would eat a raw egg if they beat the favored Midland High Bulldogs. Lee won and Wheat ate the raw egg.

Still, Wheat insists that gimmicks aren't the crux of the program she envisions at Lee.

"We're going back to fundamentals and defense in basketball," Wheat says. "I like a team that knows the basic skills and I like a defense that drives you crazy.

"I've coached under two completely different styles and it has helped me to form my own coaching philosophy," Wheat said. "At Liberty Hill, I coached with Tonya Light, who was a do it this way or else type of coach. Shirley was a little more laid back. And both had successful programs.

"It was really strange coaching with Shirley because I played against her teams when I was in high school."

Wheat played volleyball, basketball and ran track in Big Spring. She played basketball at Angelo State. She got her masters degree in education at the University of Southern Mississippi.

Wheat becomes only the second girls basketball coach in the history of the school, following Stephenson, who started the program.

She has only until Aug. 12 to enjoy the two new situations in her life before volleyball cranks up. Then — it's back to the raw eggs.

OPEN: Plans change for Monday playoff

(From 1C)

ons. The PGA Tour uses a sudden-death format for its events.

The British Open, the oldest of them all, abandoned the 18-hole playoff in the mid-1980's and now uses a four-hole, total score playoff format.

The arguments against the 18-hole playoff revolve around the inconvenience of an extra day being added to the tournament schedule.

"The fans want to see a champion crowned on Sunday," said Stewart. "The fans deserve to see a champion crowned on Sunday."

Simpson agreed that another playoff format would be preferable to adding an extra day of play.

The extra day forced Simpson to cancel a charity outing and Stewart to rearrange a flight to Ireland for the Irish Open. Also, network TV programing underwent last-minute changes to accommodate Monday's telecast.

Tournament volunteers, many of whom took a week vacation or unpaid time away from their jobs, suddenly found their Open assignments had been extended into another week.

Still, the USGA won't budge.

"A game of golf is 18 holes. That's our tradition," Spaeth said. "There is no compelling reason to alter something that's part and parcel of the USGA from the very beginning."

DRAVECKY: Pitcher refuses to quit arm since the cancer was detected, began at 1 p.m., according to Yates. The operation lasted more than five hours and was performed by Dr. Murray Brennan, chairman of the Department of Surgery at the hospital.

(From 1C)

Yates was unavailable for comment after the surgery ended.

Dravecky, in a statement last week, said he was resigned to having the arm amputated.

"In as much as there is a certain amount of fear involved in losing my arm, reflecting upon my past eight or nine months, it is a sense of almost relief that I feel," Dravecky said. "The pain and discomfort of that time is now about to end and I look forward to once again doing the things I enjoy."

"I want to thank all of the many people across the country who have graciously expressed their concern for me and my family ..." Dravecky said in a statement. "As we face this latest trauma in my life ... I am as prepared as one can be to face the loss of my arm."

Dravecky is expected to remain hospitalized 10 to 14 days, then recuperate at home for 10 days before returning to Sloan-Kettering for examination.

Dravecky, 35, underwent his first operation Oct. 7, 1988, after a cancerous tumor was diagnosed in the primary throwing muscle of his left arm. Doctors conducted an eight-hour operation to remove a malignant tumor and nearly half the deltoid muscle, and told him he never would pitch again.

Ten months later, on Aug. 10, 1989, Dravecky was back on the mound and pitched seven shutout innings for the San Francisco Giants in a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

But five days later, while pitching against the Montreal Expos, his left arm snapped and he collapsed on the mound in agonizing fashion.

The bone healed and Dravecky was considering another comeback when the arm was broken again, this time during a freak on-field celebration with his teammates when the Giants clinched the 1989 National League pennant with a victory over the Chicago Cubs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your sense of honor commands widespread respect and helps you to advance your professional goals. A natural sense of thrift aids your efforts to accumulate capital. Although you are a good mixer, you are also a highly private person who enjoys regular periods of solitude. A reputation for thoroughness and reliability could result in your being offered a prestigious executive position in early 1992. Do not let pride keep you from accepting a favor from a friend.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Kathleen Turner, dancer Paula Abdul, author Salman Rushdie, actor Louis Jourdan.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to discuss your career goals with someone in a position of influence. Planning ahead will help you avoid time-consuming mistakes. Your mate needs to be kept informed.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Trustworthy and considerate, you draw generous people into your sphere. Good luck follows you in financial transactions. Favors can be won with a meaningful gift.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep tension to a minimum by avoiding any risky business. Guard against rash behavior, jealousy and resentment. Lie low today, but not tonight when you can win rave reviews.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The urge to take off for a distant locale grows stronger. Heed your instincts. An unexpected windfall or favorable verdict sets your mind at ease. Pick up some travel brochures this afternoon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new associate or organization could help you advance a special cause. Reach out to people who share your concerns. Water sports like swimming and canoeing may hold new appeal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Beware of strangers today; they could be wolves in sheep's clothing. A longtime alliance is solid gold. Both parties will reap new benefits in the near future. Start reading a best seller tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Valuable information surfaces today. Do everything you can to protect your source. Satisfying business agreements await — spell out your terms. It is time to expand your circle of allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Brace yourself. You may have to take charge at a social event or deal with demanding VIPs. This might go into extra innings, so hang loose. A romantic encounter is best postponed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exuding charisma from every pore, you are a sure bet to win friends and influence people today! There are seeds to be sown and favors to reap — pastures of plenty lie ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You ought to be able to earn some extra cash now. Bring bills up-to-date. Your co-workers share your desire to get back on schedule. Attend a glamorous social gathering tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This can be a happy day for romance. Resist the temptation to point out other people's shortcomings. It is time to concentrate on completing a personal project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Self-control is essential if you are to emerge unscathed from a confrontation. Someone with a daring outlook can help you to solve a troubling business or personal problem.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are fiercely independent and do not respond well to criticism. Setting a good example for these youngsters will do more good than all the lectures and scoldings in the world. They are happiest when solving a problem or uncovering a mystery. Science will probably be their favorite subject. They will enjoy going on field trips and should visit museums as often as possible. Their intellectual interests make them seem older than their peers.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠

Some contracts are often a race between declarer's high-card superiority and the tempo the defense gains because of the opening lead. One must be careful how to go about countering the defenders' head start.

With 16 points opposite 12 in two balanced hands, three no trump was a logical and seemingly simple contract. Declarer's technique in trying to collect nine tricks might have been admirable given another distribution.

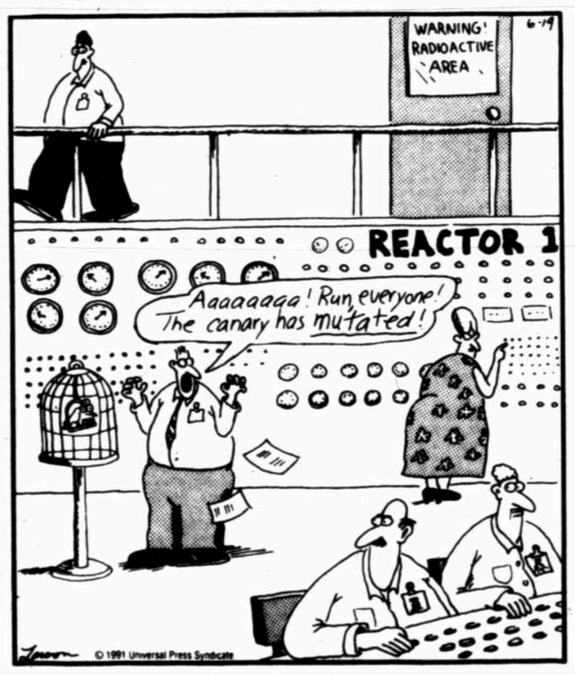

West started with an old-fashioned fourth-best spade to partner's king. With only eight fast tricks in sight, declarer held up the ace, and ducked again on the spade return. South won the spade return perforce and, in an attempt to keep the danger hand, West, off lead, finessed the jack of hearts. East won and returned a diamond. Forced to finesse, declarer went down two when West turned up with the king.

There are many hands where South's line of play would have been a model of correctness. Here, however, it did not allow for the chance offered by the two-way heart finesse and the positional factor of the diamond tenace.

Let's suppose that declarer were to win the ace of spades on the second round and then test clubs by leading a club to the king and a club back to the ace. When both defenders follow, declarer continues with a third round of clubs to the queen, and then exits with a spade. If that suit is 4-3, declarer can establish an extra diamond trick at his leisure. As the cards lie, West can cash two more spades, on which declarer discards the queen and seven of diamonds from dummy and a club and a low diamond from hand.

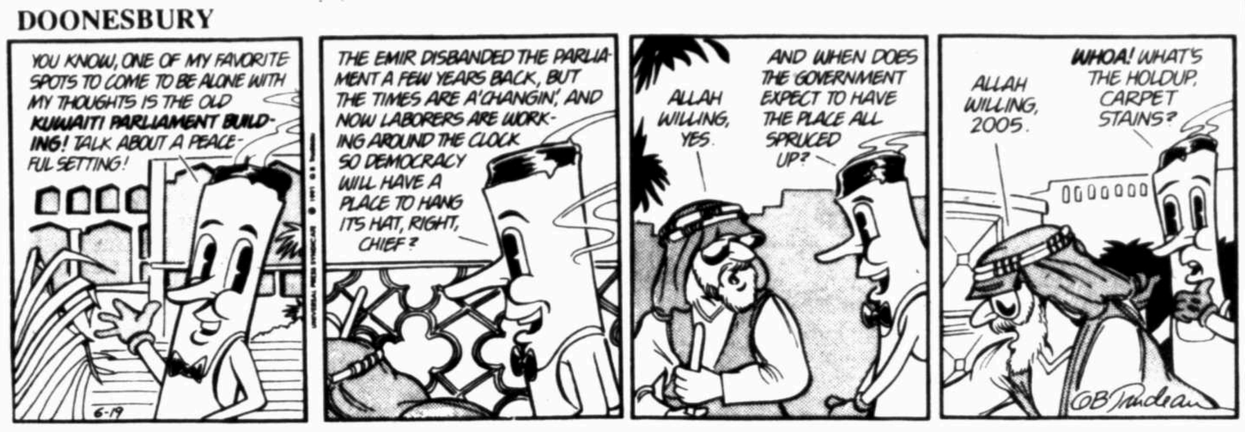

Now West must do declarer's work for him by leading a red suit. That presents declarer with a ninth trick in whichever suit West chooses.

'Today's' Katie Couric to begin maternity leave; Daniels to fill in

Couric

NEW YORK — "Today" co-anchor Katie Couric will begin a 10-week maternity leave on July 1, and news anchor Faith Daniels will fill in for most of that time, NBC said Tuesday.

Except for the last two weeks of August, Daniels will substitute for Couric until her return on Sept. 9. She will continue as host of NBC's "A Closer Look" daytime series.

Daniels

Correspondent Margaret Larson will substitute for Couric the weeks of Aug. 19 and 26, NBC said.

Couric and her husband, Washington attorney Jay Monahan, are expecting their first child. She was named permanent co-anchor of "Today" when Deborah Norville left the show in April.

FORK UNION, Va. — A Disney movie, "The Rocketeer," could blast little-known actor Bill Campbell into stardom, but he says he'd prefer to remain just another guy on the street.

Campbell, 32, who grew up near this town, plays a stunt pilot who discovers a rocket pack that turns him into a superhero. The movie premieres Friday.

The only thing that bothers him about potential fame, he said, is losing his anonymity.

"The more I think about it, the more it worries me," Campbell said. "I have yet to be recognized by anyone on the street, and I'm thankful for that."

Maybe it's too soon to start worrying.

"You know, the movie could be a flop. I don't really feel the pressure that everyone is saying I should be feeling," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — An auction of Dottie West's valuables brought $86,102, but a trustee claimed Tuesday that the Grammy-winning country singer may be hiding silver and other high-priced items.

Bankruptcy trustee John McLemore said West apparently gave valuables to her children and a former spouse before she filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection last year. The alleged gifts would be illegal.

"She has not dealt fairly with us," McLemore said. "We believe we're missing some of the really nice things — silver serving pieces, her finest china."

West still owes the Internal Revenue Service about $1.7 million and about $900,000 to creditors, he said.

West's attorney, James Harris III, declined to comment on the trustee's claim.

West's hits include "Here Comes My Baby" and "Country Sunshine."

HOPE, Idaho — Gerald Ford plans to spend a few days fishing, golfing and playing tennis at an Idaho estate next week.

"A very good friend of ours from Germany has a place there and has invited five or six couples to spend a few days relaxing and enjoying that beautiful part of the country," the former president said Monday from his office in Beaver Creek, Colo.

Ford, 77, and his wife Betty will be the guests of Klaus Groenke, a German businessman who owns an estate in Hope, a town in northern Idaho.

Other guests include former British Prime Minister James Callaghan, Ford said.

SAN DIEGO — Ruben Dario Padilla Sr., who portrayed Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna in John Wayne's 1959 film "The Alamo," died of cancer at his home Sunday night. He was 81.

Padilla, who also served as Baja California's first tourism director in 1953, became well known on both sides of the border for his work in politics, tourism and promotion. He held the post for six years.

Padilla also was a promoter of bullfighting and helped Wayne arrange for bullfighters for the 1951 movie "The Bullfighter and the Lady." He landed a small role in the film and he and Wayne remained friends until Wayne's death in 1979.

Wayne called on Padilla to portray Santa Anna, the conqueror of the Alamo, reportedly after Marlon Brando turned it down.

"They wanted someone visually impressive who had an authoritative voice," Padilla said in a 1960 interview. "Also, the uniform fit."

A California appeals court upheld a $5.5 million award on Monday to Marc Christian, who was Rock Hudson's lover for two years. In 1989, a jury awarded him $21.75 million in damages from the Hudson estate because Hudson had concealed the fact that he had AIDS. A Superior Court judge later cut the damage award to $5.5 million.

"We deal with the ultimate in personal horror: the fear of a slow, agonizing, certain death," Judge Robert Devich of the California 2nd District Court of Appeal in Los Angeles wrote in upholding the $5.5 million award.

Christian has tested negative for the AIDS virus.

Montreal pitcher Brian Barnes, left, drops the bat on his way to first after laying down a sacrifice bunt to advance teammate Tom Foley from second to third; Houston catcher Carl Nichols sprints for the ball.

Expos down Astros for fifth straight

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Tom Foley's two-out RBI single in the 12th inning gave Montreal a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros, the Expos' fifth straight win.

Mike Fitzgerald drew a one-out walk from Jim Corsi (0-4), stole second and scored on Foley's line-drive single to right field. It was only the fourth hit of the game for the Expos, who won a 3-2, 16-inning game on Monday night in which they were outhit 12-6.

Bill Sampen (5-1) pitched two scoreless innings and survived two Houston scoring bids in the 12th for the victory. Right fielder Dave Martinez threw out pinch-runner Mark Portugal at third base and gunned down Craig Biggio, who was trying to score on Gerald Young's single, to end the inning.

Mets 7, Reds 5

NEW YORK — Howard Johnson hit a grand slam and Kevin McReynolds singled home the go-ahead run off Rob Dibble in the eighth inning as the New York Mets beat the Cincinnati Reds.

Johnson's sixth career grand slam gave New York a 5-2 lead in the third inning against Tom Browning, but the Reds came back on Barry Larkin's run-scoring single in the fifth, Bill Doran's RBI single in the seventh and Chris Sabo's sacrifice fly in the eighth off Alejandro Pena (3-0).

NL Roundup

Randy Myers (3-5) walked Johnson to open the bottom of the eighth and Rick Cerone hit a one-out double. Kevin Elster was walked intentionally and Dibble relieved Myers. But McReynolds, in a 3-for-16 slump, pinch-hit an RBI single to right through the drawn-in infield to break the tie.

New York, which won for only the third time in seven games, got another run when Keith Miller flied to Chris Jones in short right-center and catcher Jeff Reed dropped the throw, allowing Cerone to score.

Phillies 8, Braves 4

PHILADELPHIA — Wally Backman, playing in his 1,000th game, tied a career high with three doubles and John Kruk drove in three runs as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated Atlanta, the Braves' fifth straight loss.

Former Atlanta star Dale Murphy added a two-run homer for the Phillies. It was the 389th of his career, tying him with Johnny Bench for 26th on the all-time list, one behind California's Dave Winfield.

Jose DeJesus (4-2) allowed four runs and seven hits in 7 1-3 innings for the victory. He struck out five and walked four before Joe Boever pitched the final 1 2-3 innings.

Timlin loses, Velarde scores

Midland graduates figure in Yankee-Blue Jay outcome

Associated Press

TORONTO — Midland High graduate Mike Timlin gave up three runs on seven hits in 3⅔ innings Tuesday night as Toronto fell to the New York Yankees, 4-2.

Timlin fell to 5-4 with the loss.

In the same contest, Midland Lee graduate Randy Velarde, a third baseman for the Yankees, doubled in the eighth and scored on a sacrifice fly by second baseman Steve Sax.

Scott Kamieniecki won his major-league debut for the Yankees, who stopped a six-game losing streak.

Kamieniecki gave up two runs on nine hits in six innings. He struck out six, walked four and helped himself by picking off two runners.

The Blue Jays got three runners picked off in losing their third straight game.

AL Roundup

Kamieniecki, 27, gave up a single to Devon White to lead off the game, but then picked him off. In the fifth, Kamieniecki trapped Joe Carter off second base with the Yankees leading 3-2.

Tigers 2, Athletics 0

DETROIT — Frank Tanana shut out Oakland for 8 2-3 innings and Cecil Fielder hit a run-scoring double as the Detroit Tigers beat Bob Welch and the Oakland Athletics.

Tanana (4-6), bidding for his third shutout of the season, took a two-hitter into the ninth. He left after Terry Steinbach and Harold Baines hit two-out singles, and Mike Henneman got Jamie Quirk on a grounder for his 10th save.

Welch (6-4) lost despite a three-hitter, and had his streak of 13 consecutive June victories stopped. Fielder's double broke a scoreless tie in the seventh inning.

Royals 12, Rangers 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — George Brett hit a three-run homer and the Kansas City Royals beat Texas, ending the Rangers' seven-game winning streak.

Brett hit his 283rd home run, and 31st lifetime against Texas. Brett has homered more against the Rangers than any team, and is second on Texas' all-time opponents list, trailing only Reggie Jackson's 45.

Brett's second home run of the season put Kansas City ahead 8-5 in the fifth inning. He drove in four runs as the Royals won for the sixth time in eight games.

Brewers 10, Angels 6

MILWAUKEE — Paul Molitor homered to ignite a seven-run first inning and Jim Gantner drove in three runs Tuesday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the California Angels 10-6.

White Sox 6, Indians 5

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura's grand slam in the sixth inning carried Charlie Hough and the Chicago White Sox to a victory that extended Cleveland's losing streak to six games.

Ventura hit his third home run of the season and first career slam off Tom Candiotti (7-5). All four runs, however, were unearned.

Mariners 2, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Dave Cochrane singled home the go-ahead run as the Seattle Mariners scored twice in the ninth inning and stung the Boston Red Sox.

Twins 9, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Scott Erickson won his 11th game and lowered his ERA to 1.51, both best in the majors, as the Minnesota Twins rebounded to beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Bo shows he knows a little about rehab, too

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Bo Jackson has made "significant progress" recovering from a severe hip injury and is on the timetable set for him by Chicago White Sox doctors.

Jackson injured the hip while playing in a January playoff game with the Los Angeles Raiders of the National Football League and has been on crutches since.

"Bo has made significant progress and his healing is in keeping with our time schedule," said Dr. James Boscardin, Chicago White Sox senior team physician.

Dr. James Andrews, who also examined Jackson, said the outfielder would be able to "begin to discontinue his use of crutches."

Boscardin said Jackson will step up his rehabilitation exercises and be re-evaluated at the All-Star break.

The White Sox signed Jackson this spring after he was released by the Kansas City Royals after team doctors expressed their opinion that the injury would keep him from ever playing baseball again.

Jackson's contract with Chicago guarantees him $700,000 whether he ever plays another game. He could earn as much as $8.15 million over three years plus award bonuses if he comes back.

In addition to the guaranteed money, Jackson can make an additional $10,000 for each game he is available to play this year, up to 80 games.

In 1992, the Sox would pay him his 1991 salary minus $100,000 plus $10,000 for each game available up to 150 games.

In 1993, he would make his 1992 salary plus $10,000 for each game available up to a maximum of $3.75 million.

Author remembers her school years in 'Black Ice'

By Hillel Italie

NEW YORK (AP) — When Lorene Cary arrived at St. Paul's boarding school 20 years ago, she found signs over the doors that read, "No boy shall leave here unimproved."

Cary

Not an inspiring message for a 15-year-old who was neither a boy nor looking to be "improved." Cary was a black teen-ager from suburban Philadelphia, a scholarship student recruited by an elite institution that had been all male and all white for more than 100 years.

"The stillness did not quiet me; I disturbed it," she later wrote in "Black Ice" (Alfred A. Knopf, $20), a memoir of her two years at the Concord, N.H., school.

The green fields and amber-colored ponds were not about to settle the working-class teen-ager. Cary was there to study and move on. She also was intense and outspoken and anxious to stay that way.

"I didn't go there with any expectation it would calm anything in me, that it would be a nice, quiet place," Cary, a former writer for Time magazine, explained during a recent interview.

"In fact, I was very worried that it would change, mess with, my racial identity. I don't think I had words all formed for it at the time, but I was worried they would try to take something away."

Cary's time at St. Paul's was difficult, but not for the obvious reasons; there was no overt racism, no violence or ugly words. What she felt instead was the dull, silent pain of being alone, estranged from all races, unsure of who she was.

She would sit in a circle of white girls, listening to their talk of foreign countries and expensive cars. She wondered about her black friends at home, if they'd ever be close again.

Incapable of expressing her anxieties, she dreamed about them instead. She dreamed of bears that danced and cuddled her before turning cold and malicious. She dreamed of her own funeral. She dreamed the sidewalk opened under her feet.

Revelations came to Cary as mysteriously as anguish. One cold night, she snuck off to Lower School Pond and walked on the ice, slipping at first on the slick surface but quickly finding her balance.

She moved further and further from the bank. Cary was looking for black ice, a phenomenon that was said to occur when the dark water of the lake first freezes, its surface so smooth the hockey team would pray for it.

Cary eventually sat down, her thoughts drifting. She remembered her grandmother's fish stew. She imagined running with her sister and younger cousin, escaping to the woods where they could grow up together.

"Comforted by the old, familiar fears," Cary got up, walked around the pond and headed back from the bank. She was confident about new challenges, rebellious in her sense of direction.

Pam Tillis gets off to a blissful start

By Joe Edwards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It happened on her honeymoon.

The telephone rang. Pam Tillis' young and energetic manager, Mike Robertson, had urgent business — enough to interrupt the first day of wedded bliss.

His pressing message: her sassy song, "Don't Tell Me What to Do," had reached No. 1 on the country music popularity charts.

"You can't have a much better wedding present than that," Tillis recalled weeks later.

It marked a dramatic surge in the adventurous career of the 32-year-old Tillis, the daughter of country veteran Mel Tillis.

She has spent most of the past 10 years as a background singer, songwriter and performer in local nightclubs. The emphasis here is on LOCAL — singing through the smoke for maybe $100 a night for a few hundred people, many of them staring into a glass of inspiration.

Now she has a national following, and it's left her slightly dizzy.

"Six months ago I was playing with pickup bands," she reflected.

She now rests on a higher plateau, relishing the security of a recording contract with Arista Records.

Her first album is "Put Yourself in My Place," a collection of intimate songs.

Tillis sings at the flash point with compelling turns of phrase — like trying to "outrun the emptiness inside me." She has described the LP as about the weak and strong sides of love, about the hurting and hope.

"A lot of the album has songs that are neither black nor white," she said as she sipped coffee during an interview. "They are songs about those in between times and the strength it takes for everyday coping."

The second song released from the LP, "One of Those Things," is about the beginning of healing from hurt emotions.

Her success has been greeted warmly by members of the Nashville music community who put a premium on paying dues. Her dues were paid off years ago. She's no turncoat who breezed in from outside and turned heads with help of reputation.

Her first public performance was at age 8 when she sang with her father on the Grand Ole Opry country music show. She made a living singing and writing throughout her 20s. She was signed to a pop recording contract in the mid-1980s, but her only album fizzled. It was called "Above and Beyond the Doll of Cutie."

"It's one of the worst album titles in history," she confessed.

Tillis recalled that another singer came along at the same time: Madonna. She was not impressed.

"I remember listening to her album and thinking that she can't sing too good and that not much would happen to her. Then mine faded into oblivion and she started making millions of dollars a year."

But Tillis persisted in writing songs. Her tunes were recorded by pop-country singer Juice Newton and such country performers as Conway Twitty and Ricky Van Shelton.

Another of her songs, "So Close Yet So Far," was on the LP "Destiny" by soul fireball Chaka Khan.

Eventually, Tillis got another chance to record herself when Arista Records opened a Nashville office and signed her last year. This time she's singing country.

"I've gone through a lot of musical changes and experimented with this style and that style. It's sort of been full circle."

She has a four-piece band with the intriguing name "The Mystic Biscuits." The name was taken from her mother's kitchen exploits because "she's always cooking up biscuits."

Husband Bob DiPiero, a songwriter, sometimes joins the band.

"They say there was a fifth Beatle," Tillis said. "Well, Bob is the fifth Biscuit."

She's had no special advantages because her father is in the music business. It's the way she wants it.

"He gave me a bus for a wedding present — the most generous thing he's done since he gave me a car in high school. This is the first thing I've allowed him to do for me. I've always been very independent."

Tillis said that having one hit record doesn't mean she's established.

For the good of all men, and the love of one woman, he fought to uphold justice by breaking the law.

Buddies retrace Colorado River trip

By Bill Whitaker

ABILENE (AP) — When longtime chums James Pickard, Winfield James and Harry Caldwell decided to retrace a canoe trip down the Colorado River they made as Abilene teen-agers 54 years ago, they resolved to be lots smarter about it.

You might expect them to be smarter anyway, since the men are all in their early 70s.

"Last time we didn't take any shirts or hats and didn't know what we were doing," said James Pickard, 72, a retired nuclear engineer now of Chevy Chase, Md., recalling the blistering, mosquito-infested trip they made to the Texas coast in 1937. "We were a mess when we got there."

Which makes one wonder why three men — senior citizens all — would want to go through any such hardship again, even with a good supply of bug spray and sunblock at their disposal this time.

"Well," said Caldwell, now 73 and founder of a repair shop and music store in Abilene, "you've got to do something."

Their partner, Winfield James, 72, of Larchmont, N.Y., is retired publisher of the New York Daily News.

THE TRIP THESE gents began Tuesday — with a brief spill of their canoe in swift-running water — has attracted attention all the way down the Colorado, even garnering the cooperation of the Lower Colorado River Authority and the Colorado River Municipal Water District, longtime rivals in the water business.

LCRA officials are tagging along in a second canoe to film the trip. The Reporter-News is covering it by canoe as far as the new Ivie Reservoir. In addition, homeowners along the river — among them Dudley Fowler, nephew of late great chili fancier Wick Fowler — have offered the trio food and lodgings.

However, James Pickard says they will be wary of accepting invitations for fear it will stretch their trip down the Colorado beyond four weeks.

The trip, which began in Ballinger where the trio launched their earlier outing, will find Pickard, James, and Caldwell traveling 659.4 miles to the gulf. That includes some fierce paddling across Lake Buchanan and other vast bodies of still water — not always easy in canoeing.

Paddling down the Colorado River was not the first notion the three had back in 1937, Winfield James recalls.

"OUR FIRST notion was to go down the Brazos," said James. "My father thought we were crazy, but he said, 'If you've really got to go down a river, go down the Colorado. There aren't as many shoals and it doesn't wind as much.'"

Thus the trio decided — and with very little planning, Caldwell stresses — to canoe down the Colorado.

'Last time we didn't take any shirts or hats and didn't know what we were doing. We were a mess when we got there.'

— James Pickard, 72, Retired nuclear engineer now of Chevy Chase, Md.

It began June 23, 1937 and finished July 20, he said.

"Our 1937 trip was begun on the spur of the moment, without much planning, with only primitive camping equipment and was pretty much catch-as-catch-can. While we expect the traveling to be somewhat easier this time, we've had to do a bit of 'muscling up' in preparation for this."

A journal kept by the boys on their first trip reveals the woes they encountered — mosquitoes that broke through netting, sunburns "painfully prevalent" by the third day, exhaustion brought about by vigorous paddling, serious damage to their 16-foot canoe and the usual bouts of illness.

ON THE FOURTH day of the trip, while Caldwell was making camp and performing his dubious duties as cook, James and Pickard went strolling toward the little community of Stacy, now all but vanished. The trek in the hot summer sun saw them pick "through fields, creeks and everything."

"I got sick on the way back," Pickard wrote in his journal that day, "and damn near didn't make it."

But the trip 54 years ago also yielded fine memories — everything from rescuing a goat stuck in mud near San Saba to chatting with an old farmer by the name of Clem Creswell who'd lived along a bend named for him. He assured the boys, too, they wouldn't be overtaken by sudden "walls of water."

During the trip, area newspapermen kept tabs on the trio. O.A. Zumwalt, an Associated Press correspondent, hung a large banner below a bridge in Columbus that read: "Abilene Boys — Report to O.A. Zumwalt." The boys did so when they spotted it.

A photograph of the boys holding the banner wound up on Page One of the Abilene Reporter-News.

IN ANOTHER Reporter-News story about the "three Abilene Tom Sawyers," written when they were 23 miles above Buchanan Dam near Llano, Winfield James' father, Winfield S. James, told a reporter the boys were doing fine and even gaining a little weight.

"The boys have worn out their shoes," he noted, "but they're going barefoot and living like Indians."

"We still find evidence that the news of our trip precedes us," young James wrote in his river journal at one point. "People have gone so far as to estimate and expect us at certain places. One party wanted to take pictures of us for the San Angelo paper but was without a camera."

The day before the trio arrived at Matagorda Bay, their journal reflected the utter exhaustion they felt. Although they wrote they pretty much "felt like hell," they also expressed happiness to find their story was known all over.

No wonder — the boys' canoe trip down the Colorado captured the fancy of a proud state laid low by the Depression.

JAMES PICKARD says the current trip divides itself into three parts, with the first phase starting in West Texas and running to Lake Buchanan. Except for the Stacy area, the men expect to find the Colorado "very close to the way the river was before — pretty difficult."

Up till last week's rains, the trio expressed concerns about the level of the Colorado in West Texas being too low in stretches, meaning they'd have to get out and carry the canoe — not a hardship, considering their 17-foot canoe is lightweight, but definitely something they'd prefer to avoid.

"We had enough trouble with that part of the river back in 1937," Pickard recalled.

Too, past what local folks call Stacy Dam but state officials call Freese Dam, federal requirements insist the Colorado River not be too deep, thus accommodating the Concho water snake, a small reptile whose endangered status briefly threatened the dam's very construction in the mid-1980s.

When CRMWD officials explained to the trio they could only release so much water to ensure the snake's survival in shallow waters, Pickard replied: "Why don't you consider us endangered species at our age and let out twice as much water?"

The second phase of the trip involves the Hill Country, where the old riverbed has been replaced by large lakes, James says, "and where a head wind is not a godsend."

AFTER THE HILL Country, the Colorado River would appear to promise smooth travel and, James says, "If we haven't beat ourselves to death, it ought to be pretty easy."

Easy or hard, the trio is at least undertaking the trip with more planning.

"This time," Pickard said, "we at least have a gas stove. We won't have to hunt for firewood. And we have dried food that all you have to do is add warm water. But now we have to purify the river water. Back in '37 we just drank the river water.

"No telling what kind of bugs we picked up," he said.

As far as where they'll camp at night — well, that'll be an adventure. Sometimes a clearing will suggest itself. Other times, especially in areas heavily developed down in the Hill Country, they say they'll have to go up to whatever farmhouse is nearby and ask for permission to camp.

They all remain optimistic and confident — not just about the trip but about themselves.

"They say three is a bad number because two gang up on one," James remarked.

"But," Pickard added, eyeing Caldwell, again appointed cook on this expedition, "we think it's necessary to keep one in line."

Asian Americans raise their voices

N.Y. Times News Service

The spring and summer book seasons have brought forth an impressive stack of works from what's been called a new wave of Asian American authors.

Amy Tan is at the wave's crest, but Gus Lee of Sacramento doesn't appear far behind. Lee, director of attorney education for the State Bar of California, has drawn raves for his first novel, "China Boy."

While many industry observers credit the growth of the Asian population for the so-called "wave," some credit the success of "The Joy Luck Club" for opening publishers' doors. Tan herself rejects any path-blazer's role.

"These writers have been writing fiction long before anything happened with my book," she says. To credit her, "ignores the fact that the writers are all very different writers, very unique voices."

Can You Find The Drug Pusher In This Picture?

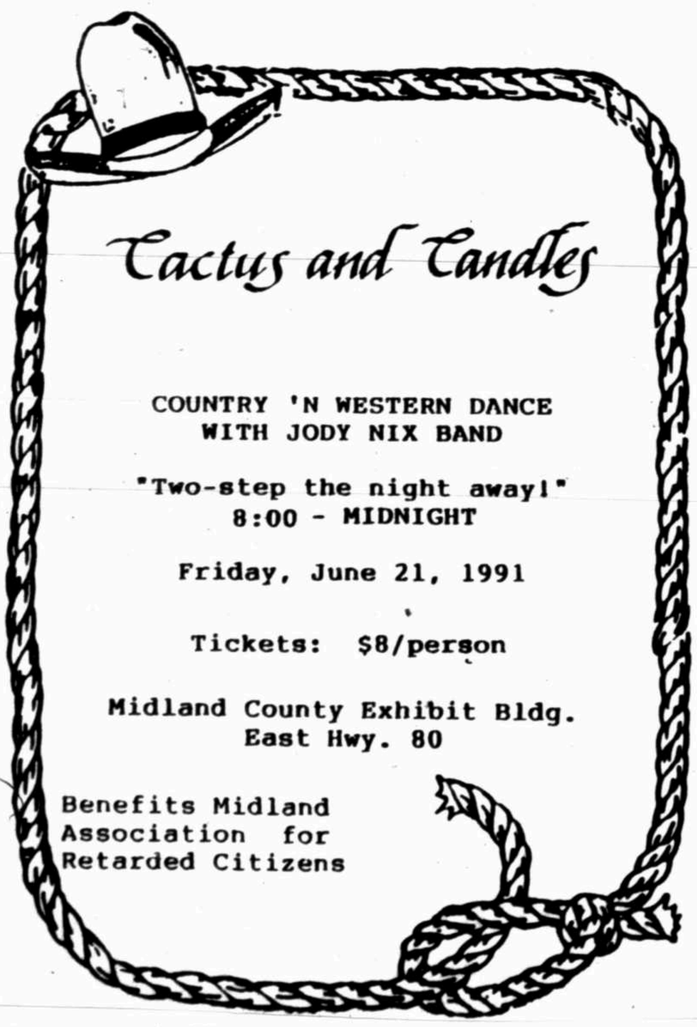

We all know what drug pushers look like. We've seen them often enough on television. But the frightening thing is, a kid is more likely to be pushed into drugs by some innocent-looking classmate.

Studies show that kids are eight times more likely to use drugs if their friends use drugs. As a parent, how do you beat odds like that?

First, realize that your preteen children are at risk. Then, find out everything you can about drug abuse. Next, talk to your kids. Let them know how you feel about drugs. Find out how they feel. Then, and this is very important, get to know your kids' friends – and their parents.

In other words, if you're in the picture, chances are a pusher won't be.

Greenspan: Bottom's past

Federal Reserve chief sees no measurable thrust

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent economic data indicate the economy has hit bottom but any renewed expansion so far is too small to measure, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Tuesday.

Greenspan, testifying before the House Ways and Means Committee, said statistics "over the last several weeks strongly suggested that the bottom is somewhere in the second quarter," ending June 30.

However, he added, "we see no measurable upward thrust" and said employment is likely to remain sluggish for a while even when recovery begins.

"It's a matter of a few months at most" between the time recovery begins and the jobless situation shows significant improvement, Greenspan said.

He refused to be more specific about when he expects the economy to resume growing and the unemployment rate to drop. But the number of jobless workers who exhaust unemployment benefits "should start to become less onerous relatively soon," he said.

The recession began in July, ending a record eight-year peacetime economic expansion. Recent signs of a rebound include a decline in new claims for unemployment insurance and increases in May in retail sales and industrial production.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that housing starts in May edged up 0.1 percent, the third increase in four months. Builders started construction on new homes and apartments at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 982,000 units. Analysts said the report confirmed their view that the housing recovery would be slower than normal.

Greenspan appeared before the House panel to discuss improving the ability of the United States to compete with other nations. The top priority should be to increase savings and investment and to cut the budget deficit, he said.

Meanwhile, Fed board member David W. Mullins Jr. offered a similar assessment in an appearance Tuesday before the Senate Banking Committee, which is considering his nomination as Fed vice chairman.

Bash marks Southwest's anniversary

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Southwest Airlines threw itself a birthday party Tuesday in each of the 32 cities it serves, marking the 20th anniversary of its first flights between Dallas, Houston and San Antonio.

At Midland International Airport, Odessa Mayor Lorraine Bonner read a proclamation declaring Tuesday "Southwest Airlines Day," a proclamation shared by the city of Midland.

James Parker, vice president and general counsel for the Dallas-based airline, noted that "We're proud to be a vital part of the communities of Midland and Odessa." He added that "Texas is our home base, and Midland and Odessa are a vital part of that home base."

In celebration of the anniversary, the Southwest ticket counter was decked out in birthday finery and visitors were offered goodies such as heart-shaped cookies. The interior of each of the airline's 112 Boeing 737 aircraft were also dressed in their birthday best and passengers were being offered free champagne and cocktails on each flight.

Southwest began flying out of Midland International in 1977, starting out with 43 weekly flights. Currently the airline has 111 weekly flights out of Midland International.

Parker credits Southwest's low fares and customer service for the airline's success, as well as the dedication of its employees and their productivity. "We expect 60,000 applications this year, and we'll probably hire around 2,000 of those," he stated.

Any future expansion in Midland/Odessa, he said, "will be consistent with our overall strategy of conservative growth." He added that the airline is watching Midland's plans for a new terminal carefully, pointing out that "You have to be careful not to overbuild." He explained that the concern is that a new facility might raise costs to a point where the airline would feel it necessary to cut back flights, or leave the market. "What attracts air traffic is passengers," he observed. "You have to walk that tightrope between a facility and traffic."

Southwest, founded by Rollin King and Herb Kelleher, began 20 years ago with four airplanes, 195 employees and made 42 daily departures. Today, the company has 112 aircraft — all Boeing 737s — employs 9,027 in 32 cities in 14 states and makes 1,173 daily departures throughout its system. In 1990, the airline earned the major carrier designation from the Department of Transportation when its operating revenues exceeded $1 billion. Currently Southwest is the nation's seventh largest carrier, based on number of passengers carried.

Merritt elected to chair ClayDesta's board

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Merritt

Wayne Merritt was elected chairman of the board of ClayDesta National Bank by the bank's directors Tuesday. He succeeds Paul Latham.

Merritt will also continue to serve as the bank's president, a position he assumed last November. Latham, who is president of ClayDesta Corp., will remain on the bank's board of directors.

Latham said he was delighted with Merritt's expanded responsibilities. "This bank has made remarkable progress during the last few months under Wayne's leadership. Deposits have grown over 30 percent since November of last year. That growth is clear evidence of the community's confidence in Wayne and his team of experienced bankers."

Merritt's professional experience spans 20 years of community banking in Midland. He began his career in 1971 after earning both bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Christian University. Prior to joining ClayDesta, he served as president and chief executive officer of United Bank from 1983 to 1990.

A native of Midland, he has been active in both civic and professional organizations, serving as president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Midland Industrial Development Corp., director of the Midland Junior Baseball Association and of Forward Midland. In 1988, he received both the community Distinguished Service Award and the Boss of the Year recognition from the Midland Jaycees.

Within the banking industry, he is a director at the Federal Reserve Bank of El Paso and also serves on the board of the Independent Bankers Association of Texas.

"In the coming weeks and months, our bank will be announcing several significant changes — all of which will mean improved service for the business people and consumers of Midland," Merritt promised.

Home starts gain slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Builders boosted construction of new homes and apartments just 0.1 percent in May, the government said Tuesday in a report supporting analysts' forecasts of a slower-than-normal housing recovery.

"We're not expecting an increase in housing starts at the torrid pace of past recoveries," said economist Richard Peach of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

The 8.2 percent gain in April was even stronger than the 6.2 percent originally reported.

Crude climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil futures finished mixed Tuesday in advance of an industry report showing that supplies of crude fell last week while the nation's stockpile of refined petroleum products grew.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July settled at $20.13 per barrel, up 19 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline futures finished lower, with contracts for gasoline to be delivered in July settling at 62.80 cents a gallon, down .17 cent.

Natural gas prices kept plunging amid sluggish demand. Gas for delivery in July settled at $1.245 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.7 cents.

After energy futures stopped trading for the day, the American Petroleum Institute released its latest figures on U.S. oil supplies, showing that the nation had less crude oil but more refined products on hand for the week ending Friday.

Crude oil supplies were at 352.3 million barrels, compared with 353.2 million a week earlier and 384.4 million a year earlier.

The gasoline supply was at 218.2 million barrels, compared with 215.6 million a week earlier and 216.6 million a year earlier.

Strike offer

DALLAS (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. wants its striking drivers to accept $12 million to settle a back pay claim, bankruptcy documents showed Tuesday.

The amount is one-tenth what drivers backed by the National Labor Relations Board say they are owed and slightly more than one-third the amount a bankruptcy judge declared to be Greyhound's maximum liability.

"We don't consider it a good faith proposal," said Earle Putnam, attorney for the Amalgamated Transit Union, to which Greyhound's 6,300 drivers belong.

"This was simply something that was put forward in the context of a bankruptcy court hearing," he said. "It was not a document proposed to the union on which negotiations can take place."

"Mr. Putnam is totally wrong," said Liz Dunn, spokeswoman for Dallas-based Greyhound. "We have in all our past disclosure statements included information about our proposals to the ATU."

Dollar gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar advanced Tuesday after Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan said the economy is likely to bottom out during the current quarter.

The British pound, which has been weak recently, continued its slide against the dollar. Sterling fell to $1.6100 in New York from late Monday's $1.6265.

New gym to feature personalized training

By Mella McEwen

A new fitness center is in the works for Midland.

A group of Midland investors is putting together Brickhouse Gym Inc., which will be managed by Victor Patton.

McEwen

"This gym is going to specialize in personal training," Patton explained. "I think for too long Midland has seen the sour side of health clubs. I think it's time to get a true perspective on health clubs."

He is about to sign a lease on the former Texas Tumbleweeds restaurant in the Courtyard at Midland Park shopping center — a 13,000 square foot facility that he said will soon be filled with weight machines and free weights, aerobics classes and tanning beds. He also plans to offer bio-analogic testing, diet plans and a variety of seminars ranging from nutrition to food preparation, stress management to self-defense. He anticipates opening Brickhouse sometime in August.

"I figure last year between strokes and heart attacks, they claimed over 66 million lives. That's too big a number, especially when you can do something about it. I may not save the world, but I can do my part."

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices moved lower today in what analysts described as a lackluster trading session that failed to support earlier gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 5.81 to 2,988.15. Volume on the Big Board totaled 116.40 million shares as of 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Declining issues led advances by a ratio of about 4 to 3, with 826 down, 597 up and 557 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market headed higher early in the session, boosted by rising bond prices and renewed predictions of the recession's demise. Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, in testimony before Congress, said he believes the economy will reach the bottom of the recession during the current quarter.

His comments echo those of many economists who believe the 11-month-old recession is coming to an end.

The Commerce Department today offered further evidence of this trend. It reported construction of new homes rose 0.1 percent in May to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 982,000 housing units.

Stock prices turned the corner and headed lower after traders realized the market's gains were narrow and there was a lack of technical support for further advances, analysts said.

Analysts attributed the light volume to the so-called "triple witching" on Friday, or the expiration of futures and options contracts on stock indexes. Many traders are making technical trades in order to protect their investments in advance of the triple witching.

The most active issue was PepsiCo, down ⅜ at 30½ following an unfavorable analyst's report. It was followed by American Telephone & Telegraph, up ⅜ at 37¾.
