I Want to Know

By D. A. Davis

What is a "rubbing" board on a automobile and what kind of cars is it that that are equipped with rubbing boards?

I saw in one of our big metropolitan daily newspapers that a boy was sentenced to 25 years down at Austin for kidnapping and the reason he got 25 years was because he jumped on the rubbing board of a car that was occupied by a boy and girl student of Texas University and pointed a pistol at them and made them ride him all over East Texas. I robbed them of their money and taking their automobile away from them but it did not say what he did with the "rubbing" board.

After reading this news item and studying it out I came to the conclusion that the reporter in writing up this news very plainly wrote "rubbing board" and the bloomin' Lino-type (is that correct?) operator changed it to "rubbing board." And folks there is where us news reporters and columnist have a doggone good grievance with the Lino-type operators. No matter what kind of an intendant and properly spelled and worded article we turn in these Lino-type operators changes it all up to suit themselves. (The very idea of calling a running board on a car a "rubbing board") And now folks what in the world can we do? There is no chance whatever to get the last word because they have the edge on us. The only thing I see for us to do is to organize us a anti rubbing board organization or a anti Lino-type organization, apply to the president and have us a code made up that will grant us a fair and square deal. And right here I want to ask for a reviewing of my last week's article and wage a coke with the lady Lino-type operator that she either left part of my article out or could not read it because as I remember correctly my article read thusly. A old boy told me he left home with no money and ragged and came back with seven dollars and plenty of good clothes and he did not miss a meal or sleep cold a single night. And folks just imagine my surprise in reading my "I Want to Know" column when it came out that A old boy told me the other day he left home with plenty of good clothes and seven dollars in cash and he did not miss a meal or sleep cold a single night. Of course he did not miss a meal or sleep cold. Folks if any of us, boy or no boy had plenty of good clothes and seven bucks we would not miss any meals or sleep cold. Boy oh boy if I even had plenty of good clothes and seven dollars do you think I would leave home? Or would any body leave home with a flock of good clothes and plenty of money? Most all of us aint had plenty of good clothes and seven dollars so long we would feel like a million dollars if any such thing would happen to us.

What I am really trying to get you all interested in is to quit laying around home with nothing to do and no money to spend and get out with the rest of the folks and go to hitch hiking and begging and hitting Uncle Sam up for a nights lodging and if it is necessary to take a bath in order to get to stay all night with the old gentleman go ahead and take the bath it won't hurt much nohow and besides some day we are all going to have to go to work because this relief money is going to play out some of these days and another thing us autoest are going to get regusted with these highways being cluttered up with hitch hikers and quit hauling them and then this hitch hiking will stop all at once.

But folks what is worrying me more than anything else right now is what will I look like when Miss Eunice gets through throwing everything in the office at me when I hand this article to her and she reads it.

But before I get crippled up so bad I may not be able to properly defend her I want to inform you all that last weeks article was not typed on my typewriter but in my own handwriting and really folks I don't see how she got as much of it correct as she did.

Mrs. J. E. Lynch, Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, Miss Pearl Simmons and N. H. Greer visited Mrs. R. L. Appling at a Pampa hospital Sunday.

Southwestern Makes Lower Service Rates

The Southwestern Public Service Company has made a substantial reduction in electric rates for McLean, according to a statement by C. O. Greene, local manager.

New rates for residential service are:
First 50 KWH used per month @ 9c
Next 50 @ 5c
Next 100 @ 3c
Excess @ 2c

Commercial lighting service rates are:
First 100 KWH used per month @ 9c
Next 900 @ 5c
Next 1000 @ 3c
Excess @ 2c

These rates are not subject to discount, and the minimum charge will be $2.00 per meter.

When the Southwestern Public Service Company acquired the electric system at McLean in 1927, the top lighting rate was 20c per kilowatt hour. This rate was immediately reduced to 18c per kilowatt hour, and again reduced in 1929 to 15c. In 1930 the rate was further reduced to 13c per kilowatt hour, and in 1931 to 11c.

These rate reductions were made in spite of the fact that it was necessary during this period to rebuild and extend much of the original system and also provide the city with high line service of a modern character. During 1931 and 1932 the company's business suffered greatly in McLean, but during the past few months business has increased materially and the company now desires to reduce rates to residential and commercial lighting customers.

Reduction has been made in those rates which affect everyone, and the new schedules will be in line with those existing in the larger Texas cities. The top lighting rate of 9c per kilowatt hour is a reduction of 35% during the period of 1927 to 1934.

These revised rates should tend to encourage the people of McLean to make increased use of electric service in their homes and places of business.

CITY DRUG SNOWED UNDER WITH EGGS

Last week, Witt Springer, proprietor of the City Drug Store, advertised in The News to trade a cream cone for an egg all day Saturday, and by the middle of the afternoon he had all the eggs in town, some 37 dozen being brought in by the kiddies of the community.

Eggs were brought in from all quarters. Roger Powers says he dreamed of eggs for two days. Chester Lander says that is one time they had a corner on all the available eggs. Spud Lynch says he learned there are just two kinds of eggs, but they took both kinds. Miss Smith says nothing bothered her except when some little fellow dropped an egg and broke it. But Mr. Springer was on hand to see that all had a chance at a cream cone.

The some proposition will be made next Saturday. The cream is made at the fountain and is something new for this community, being scientifically blended and strictly fresh, with a flavor seldom obtained here.

CORN-HOG CONTRACT SIGNERS TO VOTE

Corn-hog contract signers in Gray county will be asked to vote on the 1935 plan of the corn-hog section of the AAA, according to word received here by County Farm Demonstration Agent Ralph Thomas, from E. M. Regenbrecht, extension swine husbandman. The referendum is set for the first of the month of October.

The first question to be voted on by the corn-hog contract signers is whether or not there shall be any sort of adjustment program in this field, Regenbrecht stated.

The second point to be decided is whether the contract shall deal with corn only or hogs only, or be a joint contract as is 1934.

The third question will ask for preference on the type of contract which they wish to follow in the 1935 program. This refers to a possible unified contract for the six basis grains: wheat, corn, rye, barley, grain sorghums and flax. It would represent a shift from several single crop contracts to a broad program of developing better systems of farming through less intensive use of land, conservation of soil resources and use of land for those crops for which it is best adapted.

Meetings scheduled for Gray county are as follows: Thursday, Oct. 4, 9 a. m., McLean; 8 p. m., County court room, Pampa; Friday, Oct. 5, 8 p. m., school house, Grandview, and Laketon.

GROCERS PLEASED WITH ADS

McLean grocers were pleased with the results from last week's advertising in the home paper. Raymond W. Shannon manager of Standard Food Markets, said that their advertisement pulled better Saturday. John W. Cooper of the City Food Store said they had a good day. Lee Wilson of Piggy Wiggly said they were well pleased with direct results from their advertisement. Ed Webba of the O. K. Grocery and Market said their advertisement sold goods for them.

The News editor talked with a man from a nearby community who was mighty well pleased with grocery prices here and said he was going to investigate prices in other lines, and if in line with groceries, would do most of his trading here.

There are four grocery store advertisements in this issue of The News carrying real bargain prices on numbers of items. It will pay well to read these advertisements.

TAILOR SHOP MOVES

Merle Grigsby has moved his tailor shop from the rear of the News office to the building formerly occupied by the McLean Filling Station, just across the street from the Hindman Hotel, where he is better equipped to take care of his customers. Read announcement on another page.

Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lee and daughter were Shamrock visitors Sunday.

Tigers Lose Hard Fought Game Friday

The McLean Tigers lost one of the hardest fought football games seen here, to the Shamrock Irishmen last Friday evening, with a score of 6 to 0. Shamrock's sensational score came in the last quarter when Wallace Fields, Irish halfback, got away for a 55 yard run for a touchdown. Up to that time the teams plunged and fought to no avail on either side, nor was a score brought in after the run.

The Shamrock team was penalized four times, for 40 yards. The Tigers drew no penalties. The Tigers made 12 first downs, Shamrock 7; McLean made 4 twenty yard penetrations to Shamrock's 2; McLean completed 3 passes for 56 yards, Shamrock none.

Something between two and three thousand people witnessed the game, many being unable to see all parts of the field on account of the packed crowds.

Both the McLean and Shamrock bands played before and during the intermission of the game. Dr. C. B. Batson was presented by Supt. Cryer during the half period, and made an address to the crowd, standing on a table in the center of the field. Dr. Batson's speech was in the nature of dedicating the new lighted field, and his remarks were generously applauded.

Pep squads of both schools gave colorful exercises during the intermission and kept up a noisy demonstration all during the game.

The McLean squad made a hit with the crowd when they released a number of pigeons, carrying streamers in the Tiger colors, many of the birds flying over the field at times for the remainder of the game.

The Tigers made three substitutions, the Irishmen seven. Casualties included two from each team. Hancock of McLean was knocked out, McCarty suffered a wrenched knee, Little McIntyre of Shamrock a broken arm, and Big McIntyre a bunched up knee.

This represents the first loss for the Tigers of the three games played this season, tying with Erick, and winning from Miami 36-0. Members of the local American Legion Post policed the field and took tickets, assisted by the Junior Police Patrol from the McLean schools.

OFFICERS TAKE LARGE STILL ON McCLELLAN

Gray county officers captured a large still on McClellan creek, a little northwest of town, in one of the best layouts of the kind ever found here.

Some 47 barrels of mash was bubbling and a lantern was still hot when the officers arrived, but the owner was conspicuous by his absence.

No arrests have been made, but some good clues are being followed.

TOLERANCE

By O. L. D. Timer

How much can you tolerate, bear, or endure? That amount is the amount or degree of tolerance or patience you possess. An intolerant person is a very contentious, unreasonable and trouble making person and generally a poor sport and can't take it on the jaw without flying off at a tangent and, or using some underhanded means of retaliation, and people soon learn to avoid and let that kind of a person very much alone. There are different degrees of tolerance, from putting up with a mere slight to taking a severe oawling out from an enraged, unreasonable woman.

The Jezebel type of femininity is the most severe and the most grueling test a man's tolerance is ever compelled to undergo, and this type of woman can come nearer adding insult to injury and making it stand up than any other specie of the human race. But woman is more tolerant of a man's fool habits such as smoking, swearing, drinking and violating marriage vows, since she is taking on those habits herself.

When you look around and observe closely what some men have to tolerate from their women, and see what some women have to tolerate from their men, and see what some parents have to tolerate from their children, and what children have to tolerate from their parents, and what neighbors have to tolerate from each other, it seems strange that we get along as well as we do. You have noticed that a man who drinks can tolerate a drunk man lots better than a man that never took a drink can put up with a drunk man, and most any person who has been guilty of foolish and indiscrete actions is more tolerant with people who do the same things.

Try as a person will, it is extremely hard to be tolerant and not be cynical and hard boiled with those who make a misstep, if you have not been in the same predicament yourself, but you notice how an accuser whines when you show that he himself has erred in the same manner. For instance, when Christ wrote in the sand he that is not guilty let him cast the first stone, and as he accusers sneaked away he turned to the woman and said, "Woman, where are thine accusers?"

Tolerance is a great thing in this world and eases the joits over life's rough pathway the same as a pneumatic casing eases the joits over a rough and rocky road. Tolerance is often conspicuous by its absence in religion and politics, and in national and international affairs and man is often more intolerant than the beasts of the field, which is greatly to his discredit.

If the powers that be were as intolerant with man as men are with each other this would be one cruel world and we would not have been taught to pray, "And forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us," in place of, "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth."

Although tolerance is one of the most admirable characteristics of any human being, it ceases to be a virtue when you have utterly exhausted your resources to get along with another person, and then, and only then, you are allowed the recourse of retaliation or any other mode of defense.

The most grand and sublime example of tolerance that was ever recorded on the pages of history, sacred or profane, is contained in the following saying, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

BUTLER SELLS MACHINE

John W. Butler, Goodyear tire dealer, has been using the advertising columns of the home paper for several years, and when he wanted to sell a second-hand washing machine promptly inserted a 25c advertisement in The News, with the result that the machine was sold within two days after the paper was printed, a direct result of the advertising.

It pays to advertise, if you use the right medium, and the home paper reaches the buyers each week.

Mrs. W. H. Floyd returned Tuesday from Topeka, Kans., where she recently underwent an operation.

FLAME OF THE BORDER

THE STORY

Chapter 10.—Sonya realizes she is in the hands of El Capitan Diablo. In his stronghold she is committed to the care of an elderly Spanish woman, to await the arrival of the chief. A younger woman, Concha, views with apprehension the arrival of Stone, whom she loves, evidently a prisoner with El Capitan Diablo.

Chapter 11.—At the Savarin ranch there is dire consternation over the disappearance of Sonya. Searching parties, working diligently, are unable to find any trace of the girl. With Serge, Marston visits the village store, the last place where Sonya is known to have been, but finds no clues. Her Navajo friends, remembering all they owe Sonya, take the trail.

Chapter 12.—Sonya bravely faces the bandit chief as he questions her concerning her knowledge of his opium smuggling activities. Stone is accused of 'double-crossing,' and denial is futile. Firm in their mutual love the pair listen to the pronouncement of their doom. Stone to a lingering death and Sonya to be the plaything of Manuel, Diablo's favorite lieutenant.

Presently the senora came padding softly to the door on heavy feet, for she was old and excellently fed, and entered to her kindly ministrations. Sonya whirled and faced her, her dark eyes burning in the shadows.

"Senora," she said desperately, "have pity on me! Can you not help me? A knife—senora—with my next meal—left on the tray? Please, senora!"

"I cannot, child," she answered gently. "Manuel would kill me. Come, let me wash your sweet white body with fresh water. And there is perfume, and a woman's clothes to dress you in—a scarlet dress, and golden shoes for your feet. Tonight you rest—Manuel's orders—but tomorrow you wear these things for him. You must forget."

Forget! Forget—the vultures and the wind! Forget the stars, the soft winds blowing, the creak of leather, and Starr Stone's hand on hers laid on her pommel!

"If you have within you, senora," she said piteously, "any remnant of a woman's pity for another woman lost to all the light of life, leave me to fight it out alone. Leave me now."

For a long time the other stood and watched her, calculating, then nodded and turned away.

"I have not forgotten—for thirty years," she said cryptically. "You shall have your night, senorita."

The sound of the bolt falling echoed in the empty passage.

And Sonya Savarin, who had guarded life so well, now stood at bay, holding her breath, pondering desperately how she might destroy it.

If only she had her bags! Her little case of instruments! But she had nothing—and Starr Stone was dying now, perhaps, or would tomorrow!

There was nothing left to do, no foes to face with lifted head, no schemes of hope to make, no one whom she might coax to help her.

And so at last, Sonya, having exhausted all her resources, scant at best in this terrible situation, made ready to bow in resignation. She knelt by the ancient bed, which had no doubt seen tragedies before, and folding her hands, addressed her soul to its Maker in sorrow and humility.

How long she knelt so she never afterward could recall. Sometimes she prayed, weeping, for that other soul which had so grievously mis-spent its days, and there were fervent prayers, abased and agonized, before the heavenly throne, begging for that mercy of the eleventh hour which has been divinely promised; sometimes for Serge and Lila and little Babs, even for Darkness. For herself she asked scant favor. It had been always so with her. Service to her fellow men, comfort for all suffering things, had been her passionate aim in life.

Of herself she thought last and least, of Starr Stone most.

If only they had met in those early days of which he spoke, before that one misstep had put him in El Diablo's power, made him an outlaw, a border renegade. When the sweetness, the kindness in him had been paramount. Before sin and wrong had put the leopard spots upon him.

But the spots were changed at last—when it was too late. To his face he had repudiated El Capitan, signed his own death warrant, for any man leaving the dark service of this monstrous bandit put himself "on the spot" as truly as any in more modern places.

And he had done it deliberately, to prove to her that he was changed, even to the death. The courage which had shone in his face at that repudiation had been magnificent. He knew, none better, the fate of El Diablo's double-crossers, and he double-crossed him high-handedly and with supreme finality.

"Oh, Starr!" wept Sonya with her forehead on her clasped hands. "Oh, my man of all men! My one and only love!"

In the warm dark silence the heart in her seemed to melt in anguish, the tides of life to run swiftly out.

For her it was the ebb of finite things, the last low hour before the end. In a dull coma of hopelessness, her face swollen with weeping, she sank lower and lower against the great bed, her lips apart, her black head disheveled.

And into this last deep abyss there dropped a tiny sound.

The outside bolt, huge and heavy, slipped slowly in its slot!

Instinctively the girl shrank back against the bed.

Manuel!

Manuel, her master!

She stifled a scream on her open mouth, her hand across it.

And then a voice, whispering into the darkness, a breath of a voice as lovely as music, said, "Senorita!"

"Si," said Sonya gasping, "I am here."

There was the murmur of a moving form, and Concha knelt carefully before her. Sonya reached out and touched her incredibly, but the girl drew sharply from the contact.

"Attend," she said, "if you are brave—are you so, senorita?"

"I am very brave," said Sonya simply.

"Then listen. You I hate from my soul's bottom—I could strike you now with my two hands—but there is another, whom I love. Oh, Mary Mother! Love!" she said as if to her inward self. She stopped a moment, then went on.

"If you can follow me without a sound there is—a hope. Can you walk so?"

"Without a sound," said Sonya, and bent forward to unlace her boots. Swiftly she took them off.

The Mexican girl reached out and took her by the sleeve. That hatred in her would not let her touch her flesh. Softly, step by step, the two young things crossed the silent room, listened at the partly opened door, and slid through it. In the long dark passage they listened again, then went

Through the door they listened again, then went south along the wall toward a door which also stood ajar.

Through this—and the night sky was above them, the tall cottonwoods against the stars. Like wraiths of the gloom they entered the grove, passed through it, came out on the open landing field.

Before the little hangar Sonya saw in the starlight the ghostly shape of a little gray ship. They made toward it swiftly, and as they reached its protecting wing a man-stepped out from the hangar behind; a tall man, naked to the waist, his head bare, his feet also, a man who was prepared for "spreading up" on the morrow. Starr Stone drew them both against the gray ship's side.

"Sonya!" he whispered. "Oh, Sonya!" Then, "Listen. We have one chance in a million. This plane is still warm from a trip Manuel took this afternoon. I heard it come in about dark."

"Yes," said Sonya, "so did I."

"It is fueled. They are always so. Thank God—and Concha—we are here. I have just disabled the other one. I think, though not as permanently as I could wish. We've got to take that one chance, Sonya. It's our only one. Get in, quick."

With his hands under her elbows Sonya went up along the side, dropped into the little seat, felt swiftly for the safety belt.

"Safe?" the man whispered tensely.

"Safe," she answered, pulling the buckle tight.

Then she saw Starr Stone turn to Concha and take her in his arms.

"Concha," he said softly but loud enough for Sonya to hear the whispered words, "I leave thee. It is fate. But never will I forget thee, nor this thing which you have done. Always while I live I will remember. Adios, little one."

And, bending his tall head, he kissed her on the lips.

"Ready," he said, and, pushing the girl beyond the plane's wing tip, he caught the propeller's blade.

Up and down he swung it—once, two, three, then a fourth vehement time, and came lithely up and over into the pilot's seat as the roar of the catching engine thundered into the night.

And Sonya Savarin, looking down with wide drawn eyes, had seen, just as they surged for the start, a long red spurt of flame where Concha stood in the shadows, heard, above the roar of the motor, the faint, sharp crack of a shot.

"Oh God!" she cried, a sob in her throat. "Oh, God! Conchita!"

Conchita, who, saving her lover yet could not save him apart from his, had made the last great sacrifice for love itself.

The pouring crowd that flowed along the field, lighted now, could wreak no vengeance on her, for Concha, too, was gone among the stars.

Newspaper advertising is one kind of advertising that does not offend the prospect.

It is all in the viewpoint; these are depression times or times of promise for better things.

If one believed everything some folks tell that others say of him, he would soon have no friends at all.

The need of a grandstand at the football field was apparent at last Friday's game, as many people could not see all of the plays on account of the dense crowd.

Whenever the government puts any industry out of business by substituting duplicate tax-exempt publicly-subsidized plants, taxes must be raised on all other property to make up the difference.

Due to the scarcity of feed, the question of the gins burning cotton hulls might have another good argument against the practice. Hulls are worth more to return to the soil than they are to burn, but they make a fair cattle food and should not be burned for that reason this year.

Deputy Sheriff Lindsey's warning to motorists passing school buses should be heeded by everyone. Lots of folks have not been familiar with the law governing school buses, but it takes very little thought to see the danger of passing buses that have stopped to receive or discharge passengers.

The Shamrock Texan was in error when it referred to "news-paper custom" as being universally the same. For Editor Cooper's edification, we might state that the "custom" he refers to has never prevailed at McLean, so far as school sports are concerned, an entirely different arrangement being made.

The News has never employed high pressure advertising salesmen, preferring to let results speak for themselves. And that this policy is appreciated may be judged from the firms who have never missed having an advertisement in the home paper for many years.

We want to help your business in a neighborly, live-and-let-live manner, and as we do not like to be "high-pressured" ourselves, we do not use that kind of methods to sell our services.

Our country is still responsible to the voters, and voters can make sure of reduced taxation by voting for men who will undertake to reduce taxes by spending less money, cut appropriations, stop issuing bonds, and save wherever possible. The spending spree at the expense of the taxpayers, must of necessity stop some time, and the sooner it is stopped the better chance all of us have to make a living. That high taxes hurt everyone, no intelligent man will deny, for the added expense is passed on to the consumer in everything he buys.

McLean merchants made a proposition some years ago that any school district needing a stage curtain would be furnished one, provided the merchants could buy the curtain and not be forced to take advertising spaces at a high price to enrich some outside promoter.

That this is a fair offer no one will deny, and any proposition of this kind should be taken up with a merchants' committee, or the chamber of commerce, before being launched.

Many different schemes will probably be offered the merchants this fall, and the chamber of commerce advertising committee can be made of value, if used.

Better times must be on the way. Public sentiment is changing, slot machines are being removed from all cities, and an almost unanimous demand to end horse race gambling is sweeping the state.

Not so very long ago it was claimed that the way to prosperity was to throw everything wide open, with a saloon in every cafe, filling station, drug store and grocery, with the government sharing in all forms of gambling, but such things have been tried at different times for thousands of years, and they only lead to disaster.

Right thinking and right living are bound to prevail in our country when we have time to adjust ourselves to changed conditions, always remembering that there are some fundamentals that never change.

Text: "And forgive us debts, as we forgive our debtors."—Matt. 6:12.

FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES—SINS—DEBTS

Much valuable time if often wasted by uninformed persons about the proper reading of the fifth petition of the Lord's prayer. Should it read: "Forgive us our DEBTS," "SINS," or "TRESPASSES"? Before we consider this question, let us acquaint ourselves with some facts. The Lord's prayer is recorded in two places in the New Testament. "The prayer recorded by Luke was delivered by our Lord at a time and under circumstances differing from those to which Matthew refers. The one was spoken in Galilee, the other in Judea. The one unasked for, the other at the request of a disciple. The one when He was preaching, the other after He had been praying." Some churches are accustomed to use the word "debts," while others "trespasses." We must remember that these English words are not the original words spoken by our Savior. They are translations of the original words which were spoken in the Greek language. The Authorized King James translation of the Bible, in Matt. 6:12, uses the word "debts." A former English translation, one that preceded the King James version now commonly used in the churches, which was called the "Great Bible," the word "trespasses" was used. This reading was taken over by the Anglican Church in England, and later, the Episcopal Church in America, into the Book of Common Prayer. This reading of the fifth petition of the Lord's prayer was retained by many other churches. What, then is the true meaning of the word "debts"? It is explained in Matt. 6:14, 15, where we read: "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." And in Luke 11:4a we read: "And forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." From the above passages we see that the word "debt" is an indication that we owe something to God. What do we owe Him? We owe Him complete fulfillment of His Holy Law. Every time we do not fulfill His law we commit a sin of omission. And every time we transgress His law we commit an actual sin of commission. Every transgression against the law of God is a sin. Every unfulfillment of His law is a sin, a debt, a transgression, a trespass. It is good to use this translation in the King James version, "debts," if each one praying is aware of the original meaning of the term and its significance. Yet we are not surprised at the translation retained in the "Great Bible," namely, "trespass," because it is clearer than the word "debts." Every trespass is a sin. But every debt, according to the wider and modern use of the term, is not a sin. If someone owes me two dollars which he promised to pay within a certain time but the time is not yet due, that person did not sin. It is not a sin to borrow money. Yet there is a debt in the meantime. That debt is not a sin. That is why the word "debts" in the King James Bible is confusing, especially nowadays. The sense of "trespasses" and "sins" is missing. That is why the term "trespasses" in the Great Bible is preferable.

We could go into a more detailed and technical discussion based on the actual Greek words, their meaning and derivations, but we hope this will suffice and clear many a misunderstanding. It is wrong for a person of one denomination to accuse one of another for misquoting the Bible in regard to this word in the Lord's prayer. Either word may be used as long as the original meaning of sin is held in mind. Let us remember that the English versions are but translations of the original Greek texts.

But most important of all, let us pray this prayer of prayers with a sincere heart and mean what we say. Let us forgive the transgressions of our fellow-men, forgive and forget, and then beg God to forgive us our transgressions, sins, which we commit against His holy laws each day. If we do not forgive our fellow-men but say to God: "as we forgive those who trespass against us," then we are not simply prevaricators but downright liars! Let us forgive others as the Lord Himself has taught us to forgive and as He Himself has forgiven those who sinned grievously against Him. O Lord, please forgive us our debts, trespasses and sins, and teach us daily to forgive others who have offended us and to forget past grievances!

BILIOUS

Condition Needs Double Action Treatment
Stimulation of liver bile flow is not enough for complete relief, but combined with intestinal stimulation that relieves temporary constipation, quick, soothing results are certain. Herbina, a combination of herbs, combines BOTH actions and so those dizzy, headachy, indigestion, gas, rundown feelings get relieved when both liver and bowels return to normal action. Get your bottle of Herbina from druggists.

You Can Buy New Lamps but Not New Eyes
Children never think about their eyes. Unconsciously, they abuse them. Any lighting, good or bad, suits them as long as they can possibly see. They don't know the difference. They expect you, the parents, to know. You must accept the responsibility for protecting their eyes during early life. Check the lighting in your home now. You, as well as your child, will benefit from the safety and convenience of proper lighting. Try the Better Sight Portable Lamps bearing the approval tag—you will find them best for reading and close visual work. Ask for "Better Sight" portable lamps by name. "Better Sight" on lamps means that the lamps are scientifically correct. The term does not denote a particular brand.

Life Is Like a Picture, So Paint It Well

Young people should go to high school with two ideals in mind: (a) to develop the individual to his greatest capacity; (b) to learn the responsibility of an individual to society. The four years which you may spend in high school have a two-fold value—a money value and a cultural value.

"To be at home in all lands and all ages; to count nature a familiar acquaintance, and art an intimate friend; to gain a standard for appreciation of others work and the criticism of your own; to carry the keys to the world's library in your pocket and feel its resources behind you in whatever task you undertake; to be leaders in all walks of life; to lose yourself in generous enthusiasm and cooperate with others for common ends; to learn manners from students who exemplify the highest ideals—this is the offer of the high school for the best four years of your life."—Sunshine and Shadows.

SENIOR REPORT

Last Thursday the committee from the senior class interviewed ring salesmen and looked at samples, then presented several specimens to the whole class. The ring that was selected will come through a local dealer. The senior class thinks these rings are the prettiest rings that any senior class has ever had, and they can hardly wait until the order is filled.

FRESHMAN REPORT

The freshman class selected the following room mothers to serve during this year: Mesdames Rish Phillips, E. R. Pickens and Scott Johnston of McLean; C. O. Wells of Gracey, Dewey Woods of Skillet, Ernest Dowell of Back and I. P. Sullivan of Heald. It was decided that three socials would be given this year: One Hallowe'en, one Christmas and one spring social. Miss Dishman, home economics teacher was selected as chairman of the social committee for the Hallowe'en social.

A business meeting was called by Miss Abbott to meet all freshman room mothers immediately after P. T. A. on Oct. 25. We hope to be well represented at this meeting.

HOME ECONOMICS REPORT

The home economics 1A classes are doing splendid work. Some of the students have completed one garment, others are working on related art work, and they have made color chart wheels.

In the second car class they have been studying marketing. They made a trip downtown last Friday to study the prices of various foods. The class appreciated the kindness of the merchants in allowing them to visit their stores.

Each girl in home economics 2 class is keeping a naccount of the family grocery bill at home for one month. Some of the girls have found out that their grocery bills have been greatly reduced by canning foods from the home garden, by raising their own chickens, and by having their own cow.

The third year class has enjoyed working on a class project book on "Family Relationships." This book contains the following topics: Appreciation of Home, Appreciation of Father and Mother, Appreciation of Children, Appreciation of Pets in the Home, Budget made out for a family of five, including mother and father, high school girl, boy in the grades, and a child of pre-school age; How the family may spend their leisure time, reading good books, enjoying music, good radio programs, family dinners; and the relation of the home to the community.

TIGERS LOSE TO IRISHMEN

The Shamrock Irishmen were victorious with a 6-0 score when they battled with the Tigers on Tiger Field before a crowd of approximately 3,000. The teams were evenly matched, and until two minutes before the game ended the score was 0-0. Wallace Fields, little Shamrock halfback, broke loose and raced 55 yards for a touchdown.

Starting line-ups:
 McLean Position Shamrock
 Stratton RE Williams
 Andrews RT Skidmore
 Woods RG Chance (c)
 G. McCarty C Young
 Greer LG Schoonover
 H. McCarty LT Trostle
 Cunningham LE Rainey
 Christian Q Mitcham
 Dowell H Fields
 Hancock H McIntyre
 Tolliver (c) F L. McIntyre
 Substitutions for McLean were: Jackson for Hancock, Ayers for Woods, Andrews for McCarty.

McLean had a total of 12 first downs to Shamrock's 7. McLean gained 171 yards from scrimmage and lost 33, while Shamrock had a total of 187 to 13. McLean attempted 17 passes, completing 4 for 60 yards, having 11 incomplete and 2 intercepted. Shamrock attempted 2 which were incomplete. McLean kicked 7 times for average of 29 yards. Shamrock kicked 12 for an average of 28 yards. Penalties for McLean, 0; Shamrock, 4, for 49 yards.

Four players were injured. Hancock's neck was hurt and George McCarty sustained a badly wrenched knee. Little McIntyre of Shamrock emerged with a broken arm and the older McIntyre with a bad knee.

The game was non-conference, but one of the high spots of the season in football. This is the first victory for Shamrock over McLean in four years.

TIGER FIELD NAMED AND DEDICATED

The McLean gridiron has been officially named Tiger Field. The contest closed on Thursday with Neva Flowers as winner. Her reasons for the choice are: 1. It has always been referred to, by McLean and other towns nearby, as Tiger Field; 2. The Tigers have never lost a game played on the field that is to be named; 3. The Tigers have worked hard to make the team what it is, therefore, their home field should carry the same name as the squad does; 4. It would be confusing to think of it by any other name than Tiger Field.

Dr. C. B. Batson made the speech of dedication between halves of the game with Shamrock on Friday evening.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT

The livestock team competed in the livestock judging contest in the Oklahoma state fair last week. The McLean team only had to compete with Texas teams. There was money offered for the high individuals and the high teams. McLean team expects to win their part of the money. The reports have not been received. The boys who competed in the contest from McLean were: Cecil Jones, Verne Harris, Arthur Ray Ledbetter, James Lee Rice, Joe Heifner and T. B. Masterson.

AN ODE TO OUR COACH

We have to play some sort of game, And football is our boys' fame. Tho for each flaw they get the blame They still continue just the same.

Some nights we win, some nights we lose;
 We lose because some fellow chooses
 To spoil the game by turning "goose";
 No wonder coach gets the blues.

But we're not scared of any team,
 Whether they are fat or lean.
 We play the game to win the fray
 For fear Coach Rush's hair turns gray.

—"Hy-Lyf."

JOKES 'N' STUFF

June—"What is the bump on your head?"

Paul—"Oh, that's where a thought struck me."

Visitor (noticing the mad rush in the halls of M. H. S.)—"The briskness of the students here is remarkable. They are not so quick in other schools I have seen."

Mr. Harding (shattering the illusion)—"They're on their way to lunch now."

Miss McCarty (in geometry class)—"Marie, what is an eight sided figure called?"

Marie—"I don't know."

Miss McCarty—"Well, what would you do with it?"

Marie—"I'd start a side show."

There doesn't seem to be any new major romances. Maybe the seniors and juniors are settling down for the benefit of the freshmen.

Why on earth should the floors be polished to such a high degree of slipperiness this year? Perhaps it was done to bring us back to the realms of thought. "One certainly has to use one's head to keep on one's feet." (If you don't believe it ask Miss Kennedy. She ought to know.)

We wonder if Mr. Rush ever saw a class as dumb as his bookkeeping class. Have a little patience, Coach, maybe they will come to after while and find out what it's all about.

SOPHOMORE REPORT

Wednesday evening of last week the sophomore class enjoyed a werner roast at the home of Mrs. S. W. Rice, room mother. After playing a few games they roasted their weners and ate supper. Everyone had a good time and hope that we get to visit Mrs. Rice again.

TIGERETTES

During the half of the football game last Friday night, the pep squad from Shamrock, in green and white suits, formed the letter "M" for McLean, and then spelled I-R-I-S-H for Shamrock. After they had finished the black and gold Tigerette Club of McLean formed an "M." After giving several welcome yells for Shamrock, they turned and formed another "M" and turned loose a great many piogons with black and gold streamers tied to their feet. This made a beautiful spectacle with school colors flying high.

Both pep squads were assisted by the bands from their schools.

S. S. LESSON

By Rev. Cecil G. Golf
Pastor First Baptist Church

FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST

Lesson text, John 15:1-16. Golden text, John 15:4.

The discourse of the Master at the words of today's lesson were a very grave one. He was speaking to His eleven disciples who remained in the upper room of the last Passover and the Lord's supper. The one, "a devil from the beginning," had gone out before this discourse. Jesus was facing the Garden of Gethsemane, and speaking to His true disciples. Their minds had, no doubt, been disturbed by the possible separation from their Master. It may have been this distracting thought, along with others, that separated them from the Master's message of the vine and the branches. Jesus compared Himself to the true vine, the Father to the husbandman, and the disciples to the branches of the vine that bore the fruit. He describes the close fellowship that is to exist between Himself and His true followers. Branches that were not bearing fruit were to be cut off and cast into the fire, as was easily discernable to the disciples since they had just witnessed the leaving of Judas, and had the word of their Master that he had attached himself to Him without that personal attachment and rebirth which the rest had. He was not a true branch, and had been detached.

The attachment of the true branch is an everlasting attachment, and is a fruit bearing attachment. Jesus said heretofore that the disciples who followed Him should be known and recognized by the fruit they bore because of their attachment to Him. Here He says that a branch cannot bear fruit unless it is abiding in Him, and He in it. He continues to say also that outside of Him, one can bear no fruit. It is necessary that we must bear fruit in order to evidence His true relationship with Christ. If a man claims a relationship to Christ and is not bearing fruit to evidence that relationship it is high time he was seeking to find just what the status of his Christ-relationship is. It might be of similar nature to that of Judas. Every man is responsible for his own relationship to Christ. No man is left in doubt as to how to know concerning that relationship to the Master.

But had the Master stopped here the message might have left some in doubt. There might have been a man who had attached himself to the Master as did Judas. A man who lays claim to Christ, a man who characterizes as his duty certain nominal Christian tasks, and very religiously carries them out from year to year. The Master goes on to say that if we expect our prayers to be answered we must abide in Christ and His Word in us. He explains this to represent love in the human heart. Duty without love is not Christian. Duty because of love is an eternal Christian principle upon which Christ expects us to serve Him. We are to keep His commandments, abiding in His love, even as He kept the commandments of the Father, abiding in the Father's love. That love is not only to exist as our relationship to the Master, but it is to exist as to our relationship to our fellow brethren.

Our love for Christ because of what He did for us in the laying down of His life for us is to permeate and vitalize our lives and our deeds so that they may bear fruit which will glorify the Father. In the eighth verse He says that such fruit bearing is the means of our glorifying the heavenly Father. In the last verse of the lesson text He says that He has chosen us and ordained us that we should bring forth fruit. We with our natural minds cannot know the things that are best for us at all times. Jesus knows. He has sent His Spirit to divinely guide and direct us that we may follow Him in the type of living that will bring from us the most service that will glorify the name of the Father.

Jesus expects us to lift Him up before the world that the world may see Him, and that He in turn may draw all men to Himself. This fruit He is talking about, from a practical standpoint, is the uplifting of Christ to the world. There are too many of us that go on living in our own little selfish realm performing certain duties from time to time because of various reasons known best to ourselves, whose lives are never vitalized by the great love principle set forth by the Master. We are setting a lot of things down to our credit that God never records at all. Our lives never get up on the plain of spiritual sacrifice. They are lived in a shadowy realm that is hidden from God by its littleness and selfishness. Christ is the vine. God is the husbandman. We are the branches. It is our business to have such a spiritual and vital relationship with the vine that we will live to the approval of the husbandman who knows our living. Such living must be unselfish, sacrificial, loving, and Christ-like. Many of us are fooling ourselves and our fellow men, but none of us are fooling God. He knows and records according to His righteous knowledge. Let us take note lest we be the superficial "Judas" branch without a vital spiritual relationship to the True Vine.

Further complaints may lead to arrest and punishment, so motorists are urged to be careful in this matter.
