Reagan is jostled

LAS VEGAS — An anti-nuclear activist rushed a stage where former President Reagan was speaking Monday, grabbed a crystal statue Reagan had just been given and smashed it. Pieces of glass hit Reagan in the head, but he wasn't hurt. The man then tried to speak into the microphone as Reagan, appearing angry and startled, stood next to him. But Secret Service agents grabbed the protester, shoved him into the podium and tackled him. The 81-year-old Reagan was jostled during the scuffle./8A

Yeltsin's crisis

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin faces a showdown with parliament after Monday's session ended with name-calling, shouting and shoving. The worst political crisis of the Russian's presidency flared Monday when his entire cabinet threatened to quit unless the parliament backed down from a resolution that would cripple Yeltsin's economic reform program./5A

State arson rate

ARLINGTON — Residential arson cases across Texas have increased at an alarming rate in the past few years, and investigators say more people are torching their homes to get rid of crushing debt. Investigators say a continuing sour economy is forcing usually law-abiding residents to torch their homes, cars and boats to bilk insurance companies and financial institutions on loans and mortgages.

Princess Anne files

LONDON — Princess Anne on Monday filed for an uncontested divorce from Mark Phillips, more than 2½ years after they legally separated. Buckingham Palace, which made the announcement, would not comment on whether the 41-year-old daughter of Queen Elizabeth II would remarry. That is a personal and private matter, it said. The couple, who have a son and daughter, separated in 1989 after 15 years of marriage.

Bush, pro-Clinton labor organization square off

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The Bush administration clashed noisily with organized labor Monday, as the White House fired an election-year shot at unions' political activities and leaders of the 14.1-million-member AFL-CIO backed the presidential bid of Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

The administration took steps aimed at forcing unions to fully disclose the amount of dues and fees they spend on political activities ranging from voter registration drives to newsletter endorsements and telephone campaigns.

Unions already disclose direct help, such as campaign donations for federal elections,

Floodwater yanks plug on Chicago

■ City shuts off power, evacuates thousands of downtown workers as water cascades into tunnel system.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The city's downtown virtually shut down Monday when a leak in a tunnel under the Chicago River sent water cascading into the turn-of-the-century delivery system deep beneath the business district.

Workers dumped tons of dirt, gravel and cement into the river and plugged the hole late Monday, officials said, but not before thousands of people were evacuated and power was shut off to most of the Loop, the heart of downtown.

Traffic was snarled and commuters jammed trains and buses in an eerie, early rush hour.

Much of the area was expected to remain without electricity for another 24 to 48 hours until officials deem buildings safe to have power again, Fire Commissioner Raymond Orozco said Monday evening. Draining the flooded tunnels 40 feet underground was expected to take a couple of days.

Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley acknowledged at a late-night news conference that city employees knew about a leak for "a number of days or a number of weeks."

"Each and every of those persons who had information will be accountable to me and to the people of the city of Chicago," Daley said angrily. "Individuals did drop the ball."

The cause of the rupture wasn't immediately known. No injuries were reported.

Court authorizes opening bids for $2.5 million library project

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Midland County Public Library expansion-renovation project, now more than two years in the making, edged nearer to reality Monday when the Commissioners' Court authorized opening bids for construction.

Bids are due May 20. Groundbreaking is scheduled for 2 p.m. May 31 at the site of the expansion, south of the library.

The $2.5 million project, sponsored by community-spirited library patrons and the County Commissioners, is to be completed in mid-1993.

About half of the project's funds came from donations sought by the Friends of the Library.

"This is, indeed, a community project for the good of the community," Commissioner Durward Wright said.

Geologist: New technology to save oil, gas industries

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Technology will be the saving grace of the domestic oil and gas industries, predicts William Fisher, chairman of the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas at Austin.

Fisher was in Midland Monday to speak at a Petroleum Club luncheon of the Southwest Section meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

He credited advances in technology — such as advanced logging and three-dimensional seismic process — with significantly improving the discovery of oil and gas, even though national drilling activity hovers at record lows.

Discovery costs now are about a third of the level reached during the oil boom of the 1970s and early 1980s, he said.

Fisher also urged producers to concen-

Midlanders head to polls to settle run-off elections

Staff Report

With two local Republican runoffs still to be decided, including the tightly contested 142nd State District judge race, election officials here are hoping Midlanders will go to the polls in large numbers today.

Early voting, which ended Friday, resulted in 4,546 ballots being cast, "a very high number" for a runoff, said Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert.

The weather forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of late-afternoon rain. High temperatures should be in the lower 80s.

In the state district judge's race, George D. "Jody" Gilles and Robin Malone Sams face each other, with the winner being assured of taking the bench because there will be no Democrat on the ballot in November's general election. The current judge, Pat Baskin, a Republican, did not seek re-election.

WEATHER SUMMARY

FLOOD: Power to downtown's Loop is shut off

(From 1A)

There was no street flooding, although some buildings pumped water from their basements through hoses that emptied into the streets. But there was as much as 30 feet of water in basements and sub-basements in some buildings.

Only nine building basements flooded, but thousands of workers in the Loop were evacuated at midday. Thousands more were sent home at the fringe of the problem area as a precaution.

"I'm shutting down. I've got no choice," said John Catanese, who operates two popcorn and sandwich stores downtown.

Small fish were found in rising waters in the restaurant court at the closed State of Illinois Building by early evening.

The flooded tunnels, which run for more than 50 miles beneath downtown, were used for deliveries of coal, mail and merchandise via underground electric rail cars from 1906 to the late 1950s.

The network now houses optic cables and Commonwealth Edison's electrical wires. The utility shut power off to avert the possibility of electrical transformers in building basements exploding.

"Water and electricity don't mix, and we're doing this for the people's safety," utility spokeswoman Margaret Winters said.

Daley requested that the entire Loop be evacuated. Among buildings emptied were the Sears Tower, at 110 stories the world's tallest building, and the 80-story Amoco Building.

In those buildings, workers were sent home before power was turned off, sparing them from walking down tens of flights of stairs. But at some tall buildings, workers had to leave on foot.

The flooding closed the world's main futures and options exchanges — the Chicago Board of Trade, Chicago Board Options Exchange and Chicago Mercantile Exchange. That eliminated tens of billions of dollars in trades and contributed to the second slowest trading day of the year on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Board of Trade said it wouldn't reopen before Wednesday. The other two exchanges expected to reopen today.

Gov. Jim Edgar toured the scene in the afternoon, and later said state aid may be appropriate if a long shutdown causes economic devastation.

The tunnel breach was first reported at 6 a.m. It was visible on the surface only as a whirlpool in the Chicago River filled with debris.

City workers dumped tons of dirt, gravel and cement off barges into the Chicago River in the area of the tunnel breach, hoping to plug the funnel-shaped, car-sized hole.

At 8:30 p.m., the water level in the tunnel had gone down about a foot, said Bob Wysocki, a spokesman for the city Department of Streets and Sanitation. "This indicates there isn't any more water coming in right now," he said.

Wysocki said city crews will continue trying to form a dike around what they believe to be the hole's location. Then crews will try to seal the breach permanently.

On Monday evening, Fire Commissioner Raymond Orozco estimated the downtown power outage would last another 24 to 48 hours.

Chance of rain, 80s on tap

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high in the lower 80s with south to southwest wind at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the upper 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a high around 80.

After an overnight low of 52, Monday's high reached 80 compared with the record high for that date of 97 set in 1972. The record low for that date is 29 set in 1983.

STATE

Sunshine and warm temperatures got a late start Monday in most of the state as a frontal boundary kept hazy and partly cloudy skies in place most of the morning.

In West Texas, an isolated thundershower emerged over the Far West as mostly sunny skies were reported over the rest of the region. Temperatures in the West were mostly in the 70s and 80s.

Partly cloudy skies prevailed across South Texas as a weak high pressure ridge bridged into the area with readings mostly in the 70s and 80s.

In North Texas, low clouds and fog hovered most of the morning, breaking up as afternoon heating began across the area with highs in the mid-70s.

NATION

Temperatures reached record highs Monday in parts of the South and along the Rockies, but cold air over the Great Lakes dropped readings to record lows.

Light precipitation was scattered in the Northwest and Upper Midwest.

Denver warmed to a record high of 80 by early afternoon and Pueblo, Colo., had a record 84, the National Weather Service reported.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

which come from members' voluntary contributions and cannot be taken from dues or fees.

"Institutions of public life, whether the government, corporations, or unions, should be accountable to their constituents to produce results and respond to their needs," Bush said in a White House speech. "Working Americans should have the right to decide whether contributing to political parties or candidates at odds with their beliefs fulfill that principle and represent the institutional responsibility that we rightfully expect."

Bush is actually trying to hamstring unions' political activities, charged AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland.

"The president has given hypocrisy a bad name," Kirkland said, accusing the Republican incumbent of "obsequious pandering to the ultra-right."

"What the president did today ... will have little or no affect on our political processes or on our participation in the political process," Kirkland vowed. "We are not going to stop doing that and we are not going to diminish it in any way."

The labor federation's political work committee voted Monday to back Clinton as Bush's Democratic challenger. Approval is likely when its recommendation is brought to the executive council in May.

Clinton governs one of 21 so-called right-to-work states, where unions enjoy far less protection than in the other 29 states. But, said Kirkland, "I have no sense of there being some white knight out there that would lead us to the Promised Land."

"Governor Clinton has really been through the gauntlet," Kirkland said, referring to the heat of this season's Democratic primary campaigns. "And he's stood up extremely well under it ... and I think he has won, or deserves to have won, a great deal of admiration."

Unions represent dues-paying members. Sometimes they are required by law to represent non-members who work alongside their members, and sometimes those non-members pay fees.

Under law, unions can't use dues or fees to fund direct contributions to federal candidates, but must instead collect such money through voluntary contributions, explained AFL-CIO spokeswoman Candice Johnson. Those contributions are subject already to federal disclosure laws.

But unions can use dues and fees for some other political activities, such as operating the committees which collect those contributions.

The Labor Department announced Monday that it would propose new rules to require unions to file detailed reports.

TECHNOLOGY: There's potential, geologist says

(From 1A)

trate on reserve growth — increasing the amount of oil and gas produced from an existing reservoir — through infill drilling and recompletion of existing wells, activities that can be made more efficient through advanced techniques.

He said he expects oil and natural-gas prices to remain at current levels for the short term. "We won't have robust prices, but neither will we have robust costs," he said.

Oil and gas producers can expect little in the way of assistance from the federal government, particularly on ways to stabilize oil prices, Fisher said.

He expects more environmental regulations — though none as excessive as the industry anticipates. He said he doesn't believe the reauthorization of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act will have any major impact on the industry.

Neither does Fisher believe oil and gas frontiers such as the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, coastal areas and the Outer Continental Shelf — presently off-limits to oil and gas exploration by government decree — will be opened in the foreseeable future.

He does, however, expect some relief with modification of the Alternate Minimum Tax, which many producers have blamed for taking investors' money away from oil and gas and sending drilling activity to record lows.

He also called for modification of tax credits for enhanced oil recovery to allow their use in geophysical detection technology, such as 3-D seismic and advanced logging, a move that would offer a substantial boost to exploration activity.

He predicts that the major oil companies will come to the conclusion that opportunities lie in decentralization and will spin off divisions into smaller companies.

Independents — especially small ones — should take advantage of the promising oil and gas properties that may be coming on the market and that offer the opportunity to increase reserves, he said.

Fisher thinks independents will begin working together by pooling assets to make acquisitions and by taking advantage of advancing technology.

He said domestic demand for natural gas has fallen 20 percent since the mid-1980s and blamed the fall on utilities' preference of coal over natural gas and the more efficient use of fuel by industries and utilities.

Fisher believes in natural gas as a clean-burning, reliable fuel and sees a modest increase in demand and prices in the near future.

Recent moves by the state of Oklahoma and plans by the Texas Railroad Commission on natural-gas proration, while controversial, will have some positive results but won't result in a reduction of the oversupply of the fuel, he said.

Fisher said Saudi Arabia is able to maintain its desired market share while keeping oil prices stable. He doesn't see any incentive or necessity for the Saudis to engineer another market crash as they did in 1986.

"There is a process of transition in oil and gas," he said. "And there's a lot of pain, but there's a lot of potential. Things aren't as bad as they appear; neither are they as good as they appear. In the long term, there will be pain, but overall, the future (for oil and gas) is a bright one."

vote-getter, finishing with 44.9 percent of the vote. Gilles, 40, followed closely with 40.2 percent of ballots cast.

A third candidate, Tom Bruner, captured the remaining votes, which denied any candidate receiving a clear majority and, thus, causing today's runoff.

Both Ms. Sams and Gilles have cited their legal experience during the campaign. Ms. Sams, a prosecutor in the District Attorney's Office, has emphasized her trial experience.

Gilles, an independent attorney in general law since 1980, has said his varied legal background best qualifies him for the job.

In the County Commissioner Precinct 1 race, incumbent Durward Wright, a 60-year-old financial analyst, is facing a strong challenge from Henry Goulet, a 70-year-old furniture refinisher.

In the GOP primary, Wright narrowly led the balloting with almost 39 percent of the vote, followed closely by Goulet with 36 percent. A third candidate, Ron Harvel, a 43-year-old deputy sheriff, took the remaining 25 percent. Harvel has endorsed Goulet.

Only those residing in precincts 101, 101A, 102, 103, 104, 104A, 105, 105A, 106, 106A, 107 and 108 are eligible to vote in the commissioner's race.

The Wright-Goulet winner will be assured of taking office since there is no Democrat in the November general election.

about 54,000 square feet in two levels. The county's museum, now relegated to the library basement, will be a 3,600-square-foot addition to the library.

The public library is "one of the greatest educational assets that we have," Wright said. "When it was originally completed (in 1958), it was a fine structure, but our community has more than doubled since that time."

The $1.355 million in library expansion funds from donations and grants include $300,000 in an Abell-Hanger Foundation matching grant, its matching $300,000 plus $55,000; $500,000 in two anonymous gifts; and a $200,000 grant sought by commissioners Guy McCrary and Wright through the Library Services and Construction Act.

Max Perry, Friends of the Library expansion fund chairman, said he was "very pleased" with the progress of the project.

"The Friends of the Library challenged the commissioners to call a bond election in 1990 to start this (library expansion) project with the collection of enough signatures to call a bond election if necessary," Perry said.

Library expansion-renovation is to begin May 31; the project is to be completed by mid-'93.

"But we did not have to call a bond election due to the fund raising. And that way, we have not had to raise taxes to build the library. It is being done with private contributions and with what the county (commissioners) could raise without raising taxes."

The approximately $1.175 million the county is funneling into the library was raised through $2 million in 1990-issued certificates of obligation for expanding and renovating the Midland County Courthouse and the library.

The 27,000-square-foot, two-story addition to the library will be built before renovation of the original library begins, said Midland architect Lawrence Connolly, whose firm, Connolly and Co., is designing the library project.

Richard Schwope, the project architect, said the library expansion and renovation was "a very challenging project."

In the 1950s, when the original library was designed and built, planners "weren't really as concerned with the energy. Energy was a little cheaper," Schwope said. "It's a real big concern to the county to make the new buildings and the facilities ... as energy-efficient as possible."

Schwope said the ceramic mosaic art work on the Missouri Avenue side of the library will "stay in place and intact."

Of the project's allotted $2.5 million, approximately $550,000 already has been spent on acquiring land south and east of the library, re-roofing the old library, thermal-storage tanks for summertime cooling, air-conditioning equipment, and in sealing off asbestos.

County Librarian Sandra Wegner said the renovation-expansion "is radical change for the better" and includes:

- The library's entrance will be shifted from the north to the east.
- The first floor of the new addition will house the Children's Department and a story-telling area, circulation and cataloging.

Getting children interested in "enjoying the library and reading" and in winning their families to library patronage is important, Ms. Wegner said.

- The addition's second floor will contain reference, the main adult reading room, the adult nonfiction collection, including fine arts and business.
- The first floor of the original library will house ficton books, non-book items, such as videocassettes, public-use computers, compact discs and art works and petroleum and genealogical collections.
- The administrative offices also will be on the first floor.
- The second floor of the original library will feature periodicals and a cultural-educational meeting room.

(From 1A)

day morning until 5 p.m. Monday.

About 64 percent — or 274 of 431 callers — voted in favor of the pure feeder system, while 157, or 36 percent of the respondents in the unscientific poll, opposed it.

"I hope you are listening, Midland school board. A pure feeder system is imperative for our kids' survival in academics as well as athletics," one man said.

"A pure feeder system would benefit Midland," one woman said. "It's giving children one thing they don't have in the cluster system, and that is stability. Our children need to start school with one set of friends and finish with them."

Of the 64 people who left messages on Cityline — 33 men and 31 women — 47 were in favor of a pure feeder system, 11 were against and six were undecided.

Three people used the forum to complain about the cluster system and call for neighborhood schools.

Several callers in favor of the pure feeder system said it would only work if grandfather clauses were discontinued.

"A feeder system really wouldn't be bad," one man said. "But we have grandfather clauses that allow students to continue to go to one school rather than the other for band or football regardless of where they live in the town. ... Right now, the way the system works, one school is getting all of the band and football players and the other school is basically left out in the cold."

Several Midland High School supporters said a pure feeder system would give the Bulldogs a fighting chance.

One man, identifying himself as a longtime MHS supporter said, "I definitely think the pure feeder system will equalize Midland High School where we could be competitive with the rest of District 4-5A. Right now, the system is poor. Everybody on our side of town is frustrated and we think the feeder system will be absolutely great."

Another MHS supporter said, "It's very important (the feeder system) to give more focus to our academic and extracurricular programs. It would make it totally possible to make MHS a success. We cannot afford not to do this. We must do this. We must do this. We must do this!"

One caller who voted to keep the current system cited Lee High School's band and athletic program "as living proof that the system we have in place is working."

Several women said they wanted to know exactly how the feeder system would work. "I will continue to vote against the feeder system until we know which junior high will go to which high school," one woman said. "Midland High has been treated like a stepchild, and if you send Alamo and SJ (San Jacinto) to MHS it will be very unfair."

One woman said a pure feeder system would result in MHS being relegated to the level of Odessa High School in comparison to Permian High School. "That's wrong and unfair to our children," she said. "I hope Midland never goes to that."

One Odessan said the pure feeder system would benefit Midland. "I've been reading your paper and I think what you folks are trying to do is great," he said. "But it's going to be bad for Odessa. It won't be so easy for us to stay on top."

One male formulated his opinion in a rap song. "Yo, yo, yo, give the kids a chance, take a stance, put them in a pure feeder system."

Some callers said the pure feeder system would "combine limited resources, encourage students in the junior highs not to drop out of school, foster stability and six-year friendships, instill a hometown sense of pride," and "put our coaches on the same playing field as the other coaches in the district."

Those opposing it said the pure feeder system would be divisive and would remove the emphasis from education. "We don't need to be concerned about this," one man said. "We need to be concerned about reading and writing instead of tooting horns in band halls."

"We have to have a change," another man said. "Nothing is equal between Midland and Lee high schools now. The programs aren't equal; the schools aren't equal."

Another agreed. "If things don't change, a lot of people are not going to be moving to this town at all."

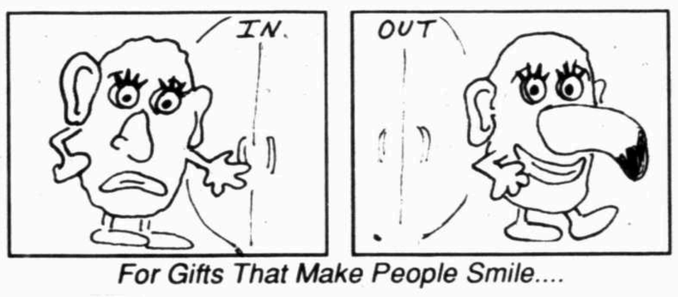

One man simply said, "The major question is: Why not? That question has not been asked. Why not a pure feeder system?"

School-board trustees will vote on the action item "consideration of junior high student assignment pattern (feeder system)" tonight at 7:15, following the dinner break, in the MISD administration building, 605 W. Missouri Ave.

Foreigners scramble for flights out of Libya; sanctions deadline nears

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Hundreds of foreigners scrambled for seats Monday on the last flights leaving Libya as this radical North African Arab nation decided to shut down air transport one day before U.N. air sanctions go into effect.

Libya said Sunday it was cutting all international air, sea and road links today to mourn 41 Libyans killed in a 1986 air attack by the United States.

The voluntary 24-hour shutdown apparently went into effect as scheduled at 12:01 a.m. today. (5:01 p.m. Monday CDT). Repeated telex and telephone calls to Tripoli by the Associated Press bureaus in London and Cairo went unheeded.

Wednesday, the anniversary of the raid, is also the deadline set by the U.N. Security Council for Libya to surrender two men indicted for the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, which killed 270 people. If Libya refuses, U.N. embargoes of air traffic and arms sales to Libya are to go into effect.

Libya on Monday proposed turning the two over to Malta, a Mediterranean island nation with close ties to Tripoli. The Security Council is unlikely to approve the plan because British and U.S. officials claim the bomb-rigged suitcase that downed the Pan Am 747 was routed through Malta with Air Malta air tags. Malta denies the suitcase's journey began there.

Venezuelan Ambassador Diego Arria said of the latest Libyan proposal, "I don't think it will fly." He described the offer, made through the Arab League, "as a dilatory tactic to endlessly postpone sanctions."

At Tripoli airport Monday, hundreds of people lined up at counters for flights to Malta and Germany, the only destinations available.

No panic was apparent, however. Foreigners said they wouldn't be worried if they didn't get seats.

"If I can't go today, I'll go tonight, or next week via Tunisia," said Peter Heiloo of Austria, who was on the waiting list for an Air Malta flight.

The Security Council said it would meet privately today on the Libyan issue.

Mandela, wife to separate

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A shaken Nelson Mandela said Monday he was separating from his wife Winnie, but insisted the move was not linked to charges she lied about kidnapping and beating four black youths.

The African National Congress president did not say why he was living apart from his wife of 33 years. ANC officials had been pushing for the separation, fearing controversy over Mrs. Mandela could damange its efforts to become South Africa's first black government.

"In view of the tensions that have arisen owing to differences between ourselves on a number of issues in recent months, we have mutually agreed that a separation would be best for each of us," Mandela, looking tired and under great strain, told reporters.

Insisting he would stand beside his wife in her fight to avoid jail, the 73-year-old Mandela said: "I shall personally never regret the life ... (she) and I tried to share together ... I part from my wife with no recriminations," he said.

There was no immediate response from the 57-year-old Mrs. Mandela.

ANC officials would not say if she would stay on as the ANC's social welfare director and retain her seat on the national executive board.

Monday's announcement came one day after new allegations that she lied and indicated the ANC wanted to distance itself from Mrs. Mandela. While not speaking out publicly, many top ANC leaders see Mrs. Mandela as a major liability.

Mandela has praised his wife's place in the struggle against apartheid.

Yeltsin cabinet threatens to quit if parliament scales back reform

MOSCOW (NYT) — Boris Yeltsin faces a showdown with parliament after Monday's session ended with name-calling, shouting and shoving.

The worst political crisis of the Russian's presidency flared Monday when his entire cabinet threatened to quit unless the parliament backed down from a resolution that would cripple Yeltsin's economic reform program.

Yeltsin persuaded his cabinet to stay at least until Saturday, the scheduled end of the current full session of parliament, cabinet ministers said. Yeltsin wanted the time in order to convince the conservative legislators they must get out of the way of the free market, they claimed.

However, parliamentary leaders contended Yeltsin sided with them.

Yeltsin wasn't in parliament Monday nor did he make any public comments on the debacle.

Yeltsin, whose political savvy was greatly responsible for the demise of the Soviet Union, was expected to use every ounce of political strength to stop the battle between the two parts of his government.

Yeltsin might speak in parliament as soon as today in order to put an end to the crisis paralyzing the government, but there was no official confirmation of that or of Yeltsin's views on the crisis.

During an unusual and unscheduled speech on national television late Monday night, Parliamentary Speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov implied that Yeltsin sided with the legislators against his cabinet.

The president's chances to engineer a compromise between the two diminished rapidly Monday after Khasbulatov called the cabinet ministers

"kids who had lost their way."

"If they want to go, let them raise this question with those who appointed them. They should not blackmail us," Khasbulatov said.

Khasbulatov told TV viewers he never meant to insult anyone in the cabinet by his remarks to legislators earlier in the day, but he emphasized that the parliament would not back down from its Saturday resolution.

He said he and the parliament backed Yeltsin and economic reforms, but wouldn't put up with cabinet ministers trying to rule unchecked by parliament.

The cabinet submitted its resignations to Yeltsin Monday as a tactical ploy to pressure the lawmakers and bolster Yeltsin, Economics Minister Andrei Nechayev admitted.

Lawmakers Saturday passed a resolution forcing Yeltsin to step down as prime minister as soon as July and appoint a new cabinet in consultation with the parliament. The legislative body was only partly chosen by popular vote in 1990 and so has many conservative Communists who are dead set against Yeltsin's rapid plunge of Russia into a free market.

Yeltsin has insisted that he must stay as both prime minister and as president with the right to rule by decree without consulting them in order to make sure a free market has taken firm root. The president said he needed at least until December to do that.

His cabinet Monday said the legislature's Saturday resolution spelled the end of economic reforms, would lead to hyperinflation and cause the West to cut off billions of dollars in aid and credits. The result would be that Russians would be even poorer and once again isolated from the world, they said.

Deputy Prime Minister Yegor Gaidar, the 36-year-old architect of the economic reforms, said the cabinet would withdraw its resignations only if the legislators rescinded the resolution.

The fight between the parliament and Yeltsin's cabinet turned nasty at the end of Monday's session. Khasbulatov accused the cabinet of trying to blackmail legislators and spoke of the ministers as "scared."

Enraged, the ministers stormed out while some lawmakers drowned out Khasbulatov with booing and shouting. The speaker hurriedly called an end to the day's session, as legislators pushed and shoved each other at the podium to try to speak.

Many in the cabinet are at least 10 to 20 years younger than the average legislator.

The melee stunned and embarrassed many Russians when they saw it on the national news. The capital was abuzz with talk of the "scandal" in parliament.

Get tough with tyrant in Peru

It was a scene out of a fantastic film: In the wake of the coup in Peru, that poor, sad country's Congress convened secretly last week in a private house to impeach "the tyrant." That's what they bitterly, justifiably call President Alberto Fujimori, who last week used the military to take dictatorial powers.

The impeachment vote is a small, symbolic victory for principle, a beachhead for eventual return to rule of law. Now the rest of the Western Hemisphere needs to be just as forthright in standing up for democracy.

The Organization of American States met Monday to consider emergency action on Peru. Nations like Argentina see an urgent need to defend democracy. But the Bush administration has recently been sending dangerously mixed signals.

During the 1980s, Washington gave crucial help to Latin America's new democracies by plainly signaling that the United States was fiercely opposed to any anti-constitutional regime. In Haiti last September, the State Department at first stood firm. But the White House seemed to panic at the prospect of thousands of black refugees flooding into Florida in an election year. It looked for ways to compromise with a hateful regime.

While this bargaining proceeded, Venezuelan army units nearly overthrew President Carlos Andres Perez in February. Unrest there continues. Now comes Fujimori's coup. Three local situations, linked by Washington's half-hearted responses.

Last week, the administration halted most aid to Peru. On Friday, President Bush said he'd favor "some outside pressure." But some officials also express sympathy for Fujimori, noting Peru's many problems, and Washington seems reluctant to mobilize maximum hemispheric pressure.

Fujimori cites support from a frustrated public. But strong-arm rule is a notoriously failed medicine for Latin America's ills. In Peru, the military-backed governments of the 1970s nurtured the seeds of the horrific Shining Path insurgency. Corruption now compromises the army's effectiveness against drugs.

Democracy, drug control and the defeat of terrorism — every Latin American interest cries out for promptly returning constitutional rule in Peru. Peru's brave legislators stand up for that. The Bush administration and the OAS need to close ranks with them before the better part of a continent is lost.

ANOTHER VIEW

Japanese market fall sparks fear

When the Japanese stock market plummeted 10 percent last week, fear struck Wall Street. The Dow Jones industrial average plunged nearly 100 points in two days and Americans wondered whether Main Street would be next.

The answer to such fears, to use the reigning cliche from the movie "Wayne's World," is, NOT!

For starters, Japanese stock prices have been falling steadily since 1989 with little discernible impact outside Japan. Indeed, the Japanese economy continues to grow. And even if falling stock prices force Wall Street prices down, the impact on U.S. production won't be noticeable.

Think back to 1987. U.S. stock prices plunged 508 points in a single day, yet the economy grew steadily thereafter. The Federal Reserve knows how to insulate Main Street from Wall Street.

Even plausible worst-case outcomes shouldn't be nervous-making. Some observers fear that Japanese investors, especially banks, will replenish sagging domestic portfolios by "pulling their money out." That might sound worrisome, but it's not.

Suppose Japanese investors sell real estate and other U.S. assets. They'd first deposit the dollar proceeds in a U.S. bank and then sell the dollars for yen.

All that would do is drive the value of the dollar lower, making U.S. exports cheaper, and therefore more attractive, to foreign buyers. And that would be a welcome boost to a recession-plagued U.S. economy.

The United States might have little to fear from Japan's stock market meltdown, but neither does it have much to gain. Americans are often told that Japan's success threatens our own.

The truth is closer to the opposite: If the Japanese economy sags — which is far from certain despite the market decline — the United States is likely to lose export sales. And as Japanese banks are forced to retrench, they might withdraw loans from U.S. borrowers.

But neither of these impacts is likely to be large. Export and capital markets are worldwide.

If Japan stumbles, there are plenty of others to help pick up the slack. Stock market crashes can be traumatic. But, as events here and abroad in recent years have shown, they don't need to be economically crippling.

— The New York Times

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, April 14, the 105th day of 1992. There are 261 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 14, 1865, President Abraham Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth while attending the comedy "Our American Cousin" at Ford's Theater in Washington. Lincoln died the following morning.

On this date:

In 1759, composer George Frideric Handel died in London.

In 1775, the first American society for the abolition of slavery was organized by Benjamin Franklin and Benjamin Rush.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

April brings us down to Bush, Clinton

When the Democrats' likeliest presidential nominee can't attract but two votes out of five in New York, and a man who's not even running pulls three of 10, and total Democratic turnout drops 40 percent from four years ago — you know something is amiss.

Murchison

With the Democrats? Naturally. But also with government itself.

Situations like the foregoing don't happen accidentally: voters using one hand to punch their ballots, the other to hold their noses; a supposedly dead candidate — Paul Tsongas — threatening now to resurrect himself.

The problem isn't just the candidates who are actually running — Bill Clinton and Jerry Brown on the Democratic side, George Bush and, sort of, Pat Buchanan on the Republican. Who, among the non-candidates, looks all that irresistible? Mario Cuomo? Al Gore? Dick Gephardt? Who for the Republicans — Jack Kemp, Bill Bennett, Phil Gramm? It is hard to see any of these gentlemen taking the country by storm.

The New York, Wisconsin and Kansas primaries finished, we are down, for all practical purposes, to Bill Clinton and George Bush. Why? Because it's April, and well, that's what we are down to.

The basis of Tsongas' lingering appeal is that he isn't Clinton or Brown. This seems a feeble underpinning for the resumption of an expensive crusade that lack of money halted just a few weeks ago. Probably the most he could do is further cloud and confuse the Democratic race. He might dispose of Brown, whom he defeated in New York without even trying, but the laws of probability weigh against any greater achievement.

Even factoring in the wildness and craziness of this election year, the Democratic nomination probably has Clinton's name on it. The Republican nod obviously goes to George Bush.

Ah, but then what about Ross Perot, whose nascent campaign as an independent is drawing volunteers the way a honey tree draws bees? The sheer novelty of Perot is his long suit — that and his image of decisiveness and public spirit. No one, including the quasi-candidate himself, who, if he doesn't know everything gives a fair show of it, really knows how he would fare on the campaign trail. Reporters and rivals would spit-ball questions at him, forcing him to move from generalities to practicalities. Perot is a master salesman, the best I have ever seen in action. But salesmen, unlike politicians in this mass-media world, tightly control the message they put out. Non-politicians, however gifted, aren't necessarily well-suited to modern democratic politics.

This consideration draws us near the heart of the matter. Politics itself, as presently practiced, screens out the kind of leader for whom many Americans yearn. Government is so vast, and the process of running it so all-consuming, and its constituencies so various and contradictory, that few politicians can be accused of abstract devotion to the public weal. The interests of the givers (taxpayers) and takers (welfare recipients, subsidized businessmen, etc.) grow impossible to reconcile — even when these groups overlap.

Who ends up running such a show? Generally, two types: technocrats, who understand the workings of the system, and opportunists, who understand their own drives and necessities. Bush, the noblesse-oblige patrician, long on honorable instincts but short on identifiable philosophy, exemplifies the former category. Clinton, who seems to have spent his adult life making up for a miserable boyhood spent with an alcoholic stepfather, is the opportunist extraordinary.

Rather than the people being bigger than government — the basis of republican theory — government has become bigger than the people: a vast, voracious machine. Keeping its gaskets and cylinders pumping is the prime task of those who go to Washington these days. For fuel we shovel in money, as the Philistines once fed babies to Baal.

William Murchison's column is distributed by Heritage Features Syndicate.

CHARLEY REESE

Middle East peace faces many obstacles

The crux of the disagreement between the U.S. administration and Israel is the Jewish settlements in the so-called occupied territories.

The Bush administration, in the language of diplomacy, calls these settlements obstacles to peace. The Israelis accuse the Bush administration of trying to force it back to its 1967 boundaries.

Reese

So what's the deal?

The Bush administration is right. No American administration has ever agreed that Israeli settlements are legal. The United Nations flatly declares them illegal and the annexation of Jerusalem null and void. The United Nations has also declared that Israel must get out of Lebanon and must return the Golan Heights to Syria.

For domestic political reasons, the United States has always prevented the United Nations from enforcing its resolutions in regard to Israel. The Bush administration and a majority in Congress thought U.N. resolutions if directed against Iraqi were so sacred that Americans ought to die enforcing them. So, OK, it's a double standard.

The modern state of Israel came about in a two-stage process. First, the Zionists, the United States, and the Soviet Union rammed through a General Assembly resolution in 1947 that partitioned Palestine into Jewish areas and Arab areas.

The Palestinians, supported by the Arab countries, opposed partition on two grounds. One, the terms of the British Mandate promised that at the end of British control, Palestine as a whole would be granted its independence. At least that's the way the Arabs understood it. Secondly, they argued the U.N. Charter did not authorize the partition of a mandate territory.

The Arabs wanted to take the question to the World Court but the United States and the Soviets blocked them. In 1948, when the mandate ended, the Jewish Agency, which had been acting as a government, proclaimed the modern state of Israel.

The Palestinians resisted and when the fighting stopped, the new state of Israel had taken 22 percent more of Palestine than the U.N. resolution had allotted. That is the famous pre-1967 green line that Israel now says it cannot afford to live behind.

At no time, did the United Nations assign to the Jewish Agency the West Bank and Gaza, much less the Golan, which is part of Syria. All of this territory was seized by Israel in the 1967 War.

So this issue before us today is 25 years old. For 25 years, the Palestinians, whom the United Nations said in 1947 had the right to self-government, have been living under Israeli military occupation.

Worse, the Israeli government has decided it can simply seize the land. It goes in, takes land, builds houses and puts Jewish settlers in them. Thus, Palestinians, who in the beginning had a rightful claim to all of Palestine, now see the remaining 18 percent of it being systematically confiscated by the Israelis. The Israelis are taking their remaining land at a far faster clip than they are negotiating, so the longer the negotiations are dragged out, the less the Palestinians have.

And if you don't think that is an obstacle to peace, just stay tuned.

There are 1.7 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza. They are not going to vanish into thin air. They are not going to put up with another 25 years of military occupation.

The present attempt by the Israeli government and its lobby to paint Bush as a villain is flatly unjust. Bush and Secretary of State James Baker made more concessions to Israel than they should have. They are genuinely trying to broker a peace. The Israeli government, however, seems to prefer land to peace and views as enemies anyone who disagrees — which just happens to be the rest of the world.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Daniel Brantley's dream helps others see

MONROE, La. — Daniel Brantley is 15. He's been blind since birth. I met him a year ago in his home town of Shreveport.

I made a public appearance there. After the show, Daniel's mother brought him backstage.

Grizzard

I do not mean for any of this to be self-serving. It was just something about Daniel Brantley. He asked me questions about my work and my life I couldn't answer.

He wanted to know where I was when I put this book or that book on tape. He wanted to know who the announcer was on the tape.

He asked me about names and places from columns I'd written years before and had completely forgotten about.

Then, he wanted to know about my boyhood friend and idol, Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr., a great American.

"Mr. Lewis," he began, always the polite one, "is Weyman C. Wannamaker Jr. here with you ?"

I said , "I'm afraid not, Daniel."

"I really wanted to talk to him," he said.

"I'll say," added his mother. "For his birthday last year he invited his friends to come dressed like they thought Weyman might look."

I would have enjoyed seeing that. Weyman would have, too.

Where did Daniel get this interest in me and what appeared to be an interest in humor in general?

We cut a comedy album in Shreveport that night. We decided to dedicate it to him. "To Daniel Brantley, my No. 1 fan."

I saw Daniel again here in Monroe. Because of Daniel and his remarkable zest for life and laughter, despite his blindness, I did a thing here for the Louisiana Center for the Blind. I met another remarkable person named Joanne Wilson, who is the director of the center. She's also the mother of five and has been blind since she was 16.

"What we do at the center," she told me, "is try to change the image of blind people. The image we want to lose is that of the blind beggar on the street.

"The center teaches blind people self esteem, work skills and independence. We prepare them to live better lives, to be worthwhile employees," Joanne Wilson said.

"What we want to do is set them free."

Set them free.

The deal I did here was to raise money for the center's summer program for blind children. The center wasn't going to be opened for the children this summer because it couldn't afford it.

But a lot of kind people in Monroe came through for us. The reason I said, "us," is that they have named the summer program after me. I've never been so honored.

After the show, Daniel came backstage again and did his impressions of presidents Nixon, Carter, Reagan and Bush for me, and damned fine impressions they were.

Prediction: This young man will be on a stage himself one of these days.

I saw Daniel again and I met Roland and Andrea and Chico, and many others, all blind children who want what the rest of us want — a fighting chance.

Before Daniel left he asked me, "Are there any good eye doctors over there at Emory Hospital in Atlanta where you had your heart surgery?"

Amazing.

"I don't know," I said to him. "Why do you ask?"

"Well," he said, "maybe one day I can have an operation like you did on my eyes and be able to see."

I'll mention to Weyman to include Daniel's dream in his prayers, too.

Surgeon general renews attack on teen drinking, irritates industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general said Monday that alcohol is leading the nation's youth into emergency rooms and jails, as she cited statistics ranging from date rape to drownings to make her case.

It's part of a crusade Surgeon General Antonia Novello has been on for months, and the alcohol industry was clearly irritated after her news conference.

Jeff Becker, a spokesman for the Beer Institute, said the industry has been trying to get Novello to discuss the issue quietly.

"I think the answer was shown today," he said.

Novello cited figures to show the problems caused by young people abusing alcohol, including accidents, deaths, assaults, rapes, bad grades in school and dropouts.

She didn't offer much that was new; even the statistics she released were drawn from reports already published in newspapers, magazines and medical journals over the past 10 years.

Among the statistics:

■ About a third of the youths committing serious crimes consumed alcohol just before the offense.

■ More than 70 percent of teen suicides involved frequent use or alcohol or drugs.

■ Alcohol is a factor in more than half of the rapes among college-age students; 55 percent of the alleged rapists and 53 percent of the victims were under the influence of alcohol at the time.

■ Nearly 40 percent of drownings and 75 percent of fatal accidents with all-terrain vehicles involved use of alcohol.

"For every injury death, there are 16 hospitalizations and 381 injuries requiring medical care," she said.

She cited material published in a medical journal, the Journal of Counseling Psychology, in 1987 on alcohol's role in rape. "I was shocked by the data on date rape: Among high school female students, 18 percent — almost one in five — said 'it was OK to force sex if the girl was drunk,'" the surgeon general said.

She said some 350,000 children in the eighth grade are binge drinkers, and the number climbs to 690,000 for 10th-graders.

Just last month the surgeon general called on the alcohol industry to change its advertising, which she said glamorized drinking and played down its risks by showing people climbing mountains, racing cars or steering boats.

Police arrest suspect in New Jersey killings

NEWARK, N.J. (NYT) — A 25-year-old paroled rapist who had been in prison since he was 14 was charged Monday with five murders and four rapes in East Orange and Newark that the authorities said began in December, less than a month after his release.

The suspect, Jerome Dennis, was arrested Sunday morning before dawn at his home in East Orange. He was formally charged Monday, two days after law-enforcement agencies formed a task force to investigate the deaths of several women whose bodies were found in desolate parts of East Orange in the last eight months. Three bodies, including the most recent victim, a high school girl, were found Friday within a block of each other. A fourth was found Saturday afternoon.

At Dennis' arraignment Monday, an assistant Essex County prosecutor, Norman Menz, said the defendant had confessed to each of the crimes and had been identified by two East Orange women whom he is also accused of attacking. Menz said one of the women also identified a knife found near the body of the teenager, as belonging to Dennis.

But in a news conference called by the prosecutor's office before the arraignment and in Menz's brief remarks to the court, there was almost no information about what had led the authorities to their suspect.

Officials refused to comment on a motive or how the victims were selected. They also declined to discuss any possible links between Dennis and the women, or whether any witness to the attacks had come forward. And they would not discuss Dennis' early life or prison record.

Activist smashes statue near Reagan; former president escapes injury

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An anti-nuclear activist rushed a stage where former President Reagan was speaking Monday, grabbed a large crystal statue and smashed it. Pieces of glass hit Reagan in the head, but he wasn't hurt.

The man then tried to speak into the microphone as Reagan, appearing angry and startled, stood next to him. But Secret Service agents grabbed the protester, shoved him into the podium and tackled him. The 81-year-old Reagan was jostled during the scuffle.

Agents hustled the struggling assailant away while others rushed Reagan to the side of the stage at the National Association of Broadcasters convention.

Reagan returned to the podium moments later as the audience of several hundred broadcasters applauded. He picked up a piece of the broken statue, which the association had given to him minutes earlier. Then he finished his speech.

"I think I'm going to go out and see who that guy is," Reagan said. As he left the stage, Reagan pushed up his shirt and coat sleeves as if preparing to fight, then grinned broadly and waved to the audience.

Reagan later told reporters: "He hit me with a fist, but it just bounced off." Reagan spokeswoman Cathy Goldberg said he was unharmed.

The protester was Richard Paul Springer, 41, of Arcata, Calif., said Secret Service spokesman Carl Meyer in Washington.

Meyer said Springer wore a badge required to attend the convention, but he didn't know whether Springer had a legitimate reason to be there. Uniformed security workers had taken tickets at the doors, then left as the luncheon began.

Meyer said he didn't know how Springer got past Secret Service agents and onto the stage.

Springer was in Secret Service custody on a preliminary charge of assaulting a federal officer, a Secret Service agent, Meyer said. He said Springer would be brought before a federal magistrate once he gets a lawyer.

Springer founded the 100th Monkey anti-nuclear group.

Pennsylvania court allows women-only fitness clubs

■ More national news/8B, 3D

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A chain of women-only health clubs doesn't have to admit men, a Pennsylvania court has ruled. But the court's two female members dissented.

The decision overturned a state Human Relations Commission ruling that ordered several LivingWell Lady clubs to admit men. The chain had argued its members would be embarrassed to exercise with men.

Commonwealth Court's five-man majority said women's privacy rights allow men to be barred from women-only clubs.

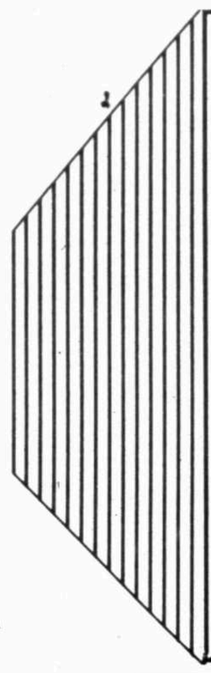

Judge Dan Pellegrini wrote in the April 7 decision that privacy interests are determined by "whether a reasonable person would find (them) legitimate and sincere."

But Judge Doris A. Smith said the ruling could compromise efforts to fight discrimination. And Judge Madaline Palladino, in a separate dissent, said it perpetuates "an antiquated notion" that women need to be protected by men.

Robert L. Waters, senior vice president of Houston-based LivingWell Inc., said the company was pleased by the ruling. Human Relations Commission spokeswoman Laura Treaster said Monday she didn't know if it would be appealed.

LivingWell, which hires men as instructors, has about 75 clubs in California, Florida, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington. About 85 percent are for women only, Waters said.

He said most of the other states specifically allow single-sex health clubs, but an administrative law judge in Washington state is scheduled to hear a similar attempt to integrate the clubs there in May.

Wrongful death lawsuit ends in settlement

Children of Alzheimer's patient close case against nursing home

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

An out-of-court settlement has been reached in the wrongful death lawsuit against a nursing home where a man with Alzheimer's disease wandered off in September 1989 and later was found dead.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

"It's all subject to confidentiality agreement between the two parties," said Don Dean, an Amarillo attorney representing the defendant.

The case had been scheduled to go before Judge Pat Baskin's 142nd District Court on Monday.

The lawsuit was filed in February 1990 by three children of the deceased man against Texas Health Enterprises Inc.; its parent company, HEA Management Group Inc.; and Terrace West Nursing Home, 2800 N. Midland Drive.

Family members had sought damages from the nursing home in connection with the disappearance and death of 75-year-old Edgar Bohling. On Nov. 17, 1989, Bohling was found dead in a field five miles west of Midland near State Highway 158.

No specified amount of damages were listed in the lawsuit.

Jim Osborn, an Odessa attorney representing the plaintiffs, said a settlement was reached Sunday evening.

"There was a settlement, and my clients are pleased with it," said Osborn, who abided by the confidentiality agreement not to reveal the terms.

"The only thing we can say is an 'undisclosed amount,'" he said.

Osborn added that his clients, Ann Bush, Robert Bohling and Jerry Bohling, "would like to have their dad back and never had a lawsuit, but that was not possible."

Had the case gone to court, the hearing would have lasted about two weeks, Osborn said.

During preparation for the trial, several pre-trial hearings were heard concerning the defendant's reported reluctance to disclose complete records of past incidents of wanderings from nursing homes.

Texas Health Enterprises owns 98 Texas nursing homes and is the third-largest nursing home operator in the state and ninth-largest nationwide. The company also runs nursing homes in Iowa, Oklahoma, Michigan and New Mexico.

In an unrelated case, Texas Attorney General Dan Morales announced on Friday that a Potter County Grand Jury returned criminal indictments against the owner and the chief financial officer of Texas Health Enterprises, charging misapplication of patients' money and tampering with government records.

In addition, the company, four of its corporate employees and four employees of an Amarillo nursing home were indicted in February on criminal charges related to the death of two patients there. One of those patients, Roy Sneed, 82, who had senile dementia, wandered from the nursing home in August 1991 and died of exposure.

Citizens grill candidates on concerns

■ Women's group hosts forum so political hopefuls can respond to community issues.

By Debbie Lincecum

Candidates for Midland city offices were grilled about taxes, accountability, economic development and responsive government Monday.

At a forum sponsored by the Top of the Town 21st Century Club — a new women's group organized to discuss issues — candidates for mayor and council Districts 3 and 4 responded to questions from invited guests.

Early voting before the May 2 election continues this week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the election's office, 709 W. Washington Ave.

J.D. Faircloth, at-large City Council member and candidate for mayor, led the discussion with the assertion that "the need for economic development" is the city's major problem.

He said he'll support a local businessman's plan that would focus development efforts on industries that are heavy users of natural gas and petroleum products.

"These are the kind of ideas we have to build on," Faircloth said.

"I think we could get more use out of the present (economic development) funds," challenger

Council to examine plan for water-tower slogan

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A water-tower slogan that could benefit the Confederate Air Force will come under the scrutiny of the Midland City Council at its regular meeting today.

The council meets beginning at 10 a.m. in the chambers at City Hall.

The council will consider a proposal from Coca-Cola about painting the water tower, located at Midland International Airport.

After negotiations that extended several weeks, city officials said their original understanding — that the soft drink company might reimburse the city for some of the painting costs in exchange for using its slogan or logo — was not the plan.

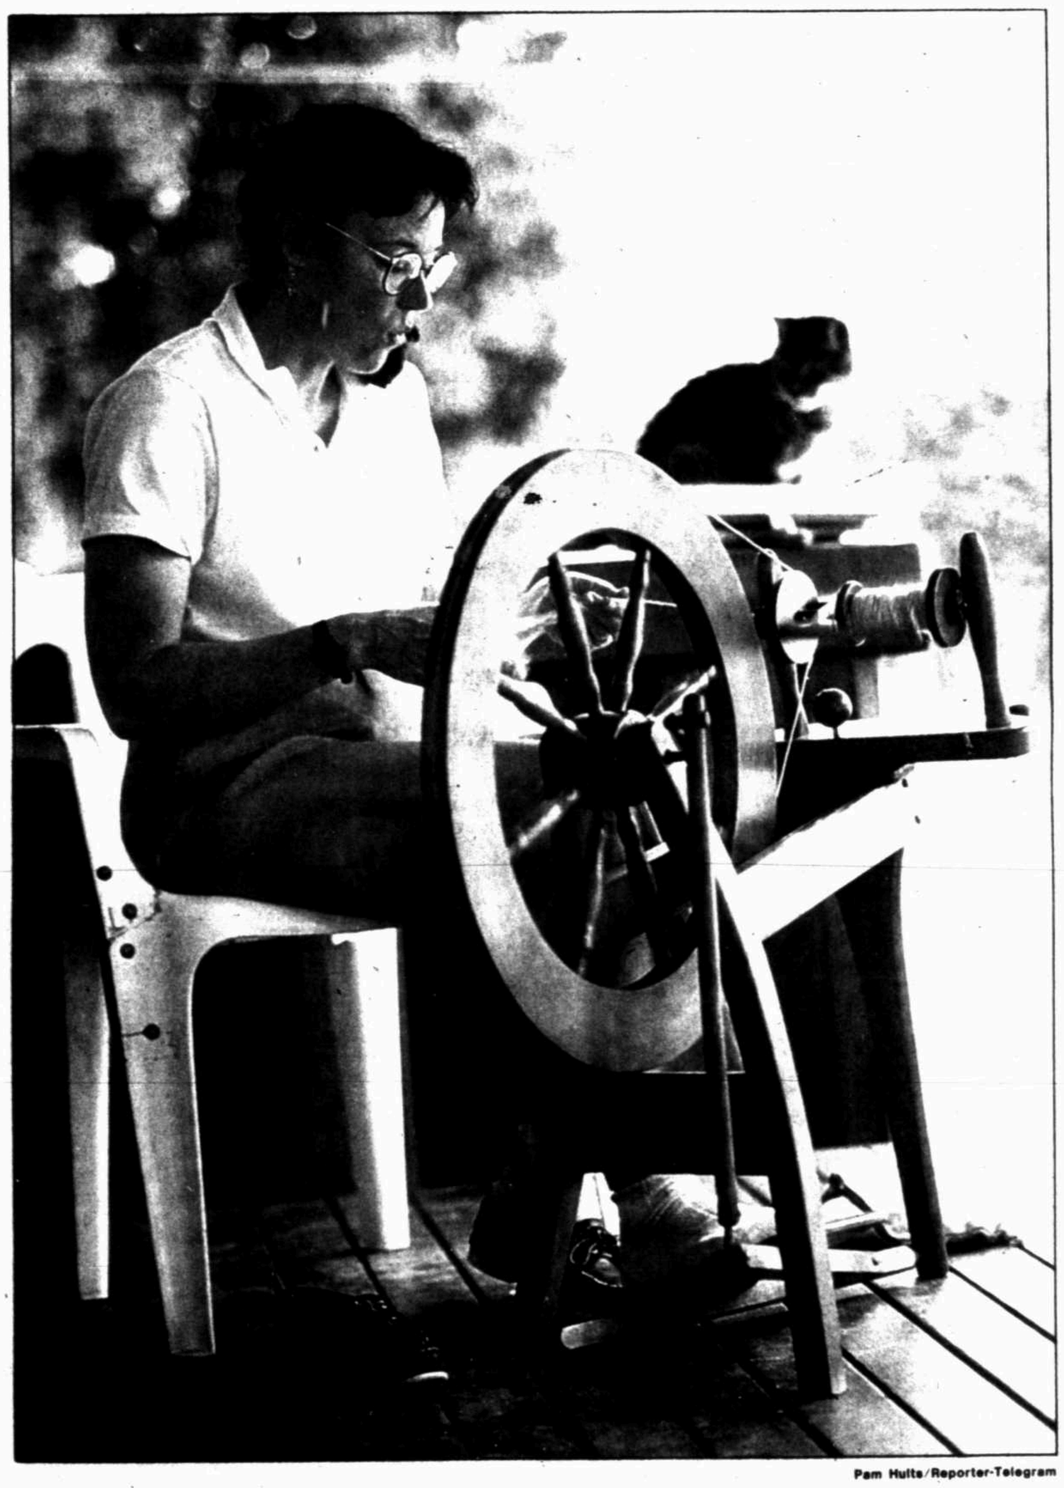

Rick Menchaca, assistant to the city manager, said the company is expected to propose giving $23,000 to the CAF in exchange for painting a slogan — possibly "Home of the Real Thing" — on the water tower.

No money would go directly into city coffers under the plan, Menchaca said.

Fibers weave stories

Artist puts her spin on history

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Spinning on a wheel is more than just a creative experience for Emmy Ulmschneider. "When I spin, I feel all of the women who have spun before me," she said.

The spinner, who is also a weaver, a knitter, and a collector of handicraft lore, has become a familiar sight to area school children at pioneer and early American celebrations.

As the wheel spins, Emmy weaves an oral tapestry with narrative threads describing the history of fibers, spinning wheels, looms and the women who operated them.

Displaying a collection of hand spindles, she picks up one with a metal crook and demonstrates how it twists fibers when she rolls it on her leg. "This is how Joseph's Coat of Many Colors would have been made," she said, noting some hand spindles date back to 12,000 B.C.

"Spinning is simply pulling and twisting fibers," she said. "All you need is a handful of fibers, such as a handful of goat hair."

Emmy, who spins on an upright spinning wheel, said she observed New Zealanders spinning when she lived in their country.

"I spent a year in New Zealand. There are more sheep than people there. It is a

Multicultural studies can unify, scholar says

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Multicultural studies will unify — rather than divide — cultures, according to James A. Banks, Ph.D.

"Saying that multicultural education is divisive is a misconception," Banks said Monday, addressing administrators and school board trustees from Midland Independent School District. "We are already divided. Multicultural education is about unifying us and bringing us all together.

"It's about a shared common goal. You can only create unity with a democratic process which people can be involved in to shape a union," he said.

Banks, an award-winning educator and the author of 14 books, conducted a workshop on multicultural curriculum at the Ramada Inn ballroom.

Commissioners open bids for county liability insurance

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The County Commissioners' appeal for bids on county law-enforcement liability insurance netted two bids on annual premiums for per-incident coverage of up to $2 million in actual damages and $1 million in punitive or exemplary damages.

"We are (currently) self-insured by default," Midland County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said on Monday after opening the bids from the Texas Association of Counties (TAC) and Texas Star Insurance.

At present, funds to satisfy any civil judgment adverse to the county would come from reserve funds or from raising taxes or floating a bond issue, Seltzer said.

While the Commissioners' Court is looking into outside insurance coverage, self-insurance by the county is a possibility, Seltzer said.

Depending on the coverage and the deductible — ranging from $2,500 to $25,000 — annual premiums would range from about $55,000 for $1 million in coverage to about $100,000 or $125,000 for $2 million coverage under the TAC plan. This plan includes $1 million in punitive damages.

The Texas Star proposal would include $1 million in punitive damages for a cost equal to 15 percent of a year's premiums.

County Attorney Mark H. Dettman is an advocate of self-insurance.

"I think that would be the best route to go," he said. "In the 10 years I have been here (in the County Attorney's Office), we have paid out $75 in law-enforcement related claims."

And that claim arose out of a lawsuit in which a Midland County Jail prisoner claimed that his constitutional rights were violated by then-Sheriff Dallas Smith's policy of not allowing him the right to read a newspaper.

The federal appellate court ruled that the policy was unconstitutional. The $75 in damages, paid by the county, was based on a year's subscription to the Reporter-Telegram, Dettman said.

COURT: Commissioners receive insurance bids

(From 1B)

Today, the county does not furnish newspapers to prisoners. "They can get their own subscription," Dettman said.

Dettman has proposed that the county establish a fund, perhaps $50,000 to $100,000 a year, for self-insurance. When the fund reached $500,000, it would grow dramatically through interest alone, he said.

"We would never have to put another dime into it," Dettman said. "I don't think our exposure (to serious lawsuits) is that great."

But neither the current nor the past Commissioners' Court, which was presided over by former County Judge Bill Ahders, adopted Dettman's plan.

"That's the nature of life," Dettman said. "Not everybody sees everything the same way."

Commissioner Durward Wright agreed with Dettman that the self-insurance plan is "the sensible way to set it (liability insurance) up . . . if you have the resources."

Sheriff Gary Painter seemed to favor Dettman's proposal: "I don't know why we should go against that."

Painter said he was surprised that only two companies turned in bids on law-enforcement liability coverage for the county.

"Insurance companies are hungry and want to make money," he said.

Meanwhile, the TAC and Texas Star bid proposals are to be reviewed by Kathleen Miller, an Austin-based insurance consultant and a former TAC agent, before the commissioners decide whether to adopt the self-insurance plan or to pay insurance premiums for liability coverage.

That coverage, which is separate from automobile-liability coverage, would tend to shield the county from financial harm should the county or one of its agents be sued.

In other business on Monday, the Commissioners' Court agreed to pay Dorothy Ann "Dot" Smith, a Sheriff Department's records supervisor, the equivalent of 289 hours of overtime pay at 1½ times her hourly pay and to negotiate with her to take time off to compensate her for an additional 240 overtime hours that she has compiled.

The 289 hours in overtime pay would total $4,852.31 at $16.79 per hour.

Her hourly wage of $11.19 and overtime pay of $16.79 was computed on her weekly pay of $447.69 on a 40-hour work week (or $23,280 annually).

The county attorney said in an opinion that Ms. Smith, as a supervisor, was not exempt from overtime pay.

Ms. Smith, whom the sheriff described as an "excellent" worker, was compelled to work overtime to compensate for two ailing coworkers.

Of the overtime pay's drain on the budget, Wright said that "Something has got to be done about this wound that's bleeding."

"My question is," Commissioner Louisa Valencia said, "when is this (overtime) going to stop?"

FORUM: Candidates respond to concerns

(From 1B)

Don Kyser said.

He said there must be "fat" in the city budget that can be trimmed, saving money without cutting services.

Mayoral candidate Robynne Fuller said taxes, a great concern of the audience, would not be such a burden if the economy were better. She said she'll focus on ways to expand the tax base and create jobs.

"I'm talking about getting the total community involved," Ms. Fuller said.

Challenger Michael Trost said the city and private industry should work toward development.

"We need to move it outside the city," he said. "I think we're doing it backwards."

The city needs to move "beyond the way it's always been, to the way it can be," Trost said.

Candidates pledged to cut or at least curb spending.

Buddy Sipes, hoping for re-election to the District 3 seat, described a plan to give departments more autonomy in budgeting. He said it would make them more fiscaliy responsible.

"The problem is that it's always been if you need more money, come back and ask," Sipes said.

Hugh White, challenging Sipes for the District 3 seat, said the current council acts too much like "social engineers."

"They think they know better how to spend your money than you do," White said. He said city spending has been wasteful and excessive.

District 4 candidates Claudia Egan and James Radtke, challengers for Tom Johnston's seat, agreed the council needs to be more responsive and accountable to citizens. Johnston did not attend the forum.

"People are angry, morale is low," Ms. Egan said. "We've got to do something."

"If I get elected, I may not make any difference," Radtke said. "But they're going to know I've been there."

Ms. Egan supported a restructuring of the city budgeting system. Radtke said fiscal problems should be handled by means other than taxes.

Trost and Faircloth butted heads on the issue of Mayor Carroll Thomas' new job. He's been appointed economic development officer at Midland International Airport, a post he'll take when his term expires in June.

Calling for Thomas not to accept the job until the city can advertise the opening, Trost said the hiring process in that case was flawed.

"Undoubtedably he was the most qualified," Trost said. "It's not personal, but it's the process I'm questioning." If elected, he pledged an open-door policy.

Faircloth agreed the process — which chose Thomas from a field of four city employees — was flawed. But the result, Faircloth said, was "totally correct."

Kyser said city leaders are out of touch, citing the failed January election for an economic development sales tax, which a majority of council members endorsed.

"I don't think they had the feeling of the people," Kyser said. He said he had predicted the election's outcome after making some random phone calls to local residents.

Ms. Fuller said to improve communication, council members should view themselves and the public as a team.

"Once we get that teamwork going, when people can voice their problems long before election time, we can work these things out," she said.

STUDIES: Multiculturalism can benefit all, scholar says

(From 1B)

must have equal status."

"And all of the people must have participation," he said.

"That multicultural education is something for blacks and Latinos is another popular misconception," Banks said. "It's for all kids. We are all one nation."

In the newsletter the "Multicultural Leader" Banks described a way to incorporate many cultures into one social studies lesson. He said social studies curriculum typically approaches events in history from the Western viewpoint. "When teaching a unit such as 'The Westward Movement' in a fifth-grade U.S. history class, the teacher may integrate the unit by adding content about the Lakota (Sioux) Indians," he wrote.

"However, the unit remains Mainstream Centric and focused because of its perspective and point of view."

The Lakota Indians were already in the West and consequently were not moving West. From the point of view of the Lakota, the unit would be called "The Invasion from the East," Banks wrote.

"An objective title for the unit might be, 'Two Cultures Meet in the Americas," he wrote.

Banks said to foster cultural pride within the school environment "youngsters should be free to publicly affirm their culture."

He said, "They should be free to transcend their cultural boundaries and participate in other cultural activities, and they should be free to participate in social and personal action."

"We also need to teach kids to know, to care and to act," he said. "Materialism is rampant. This is the 'me' generation. How are we going to teach these young people to care about others? A good measure of a human being is whether they have touched somebody's life, not how much they have achieved financially."

Patty Smith, social studies coordinator for MISD, said, "It took us two years to get Dr. Banks to come here. It is a wonderful triumph to bring him to Midland."

Several other administrators said they were inspired by Banks' address and "sense of justice."

"Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere, and we all are potential victims of injustice," Banks said. "And none of us are free until all of us are free.

"Our fates are intimately tied together. Multicultural education is an education for freedom. It is needed as much by white students as it is by students of color."

Banks is a professor of education and director of the Center for Multicultural Education at the University of Washington in Seattle.

His books include "Teaching Strategies for Ethnic Studies," "Multicultural Education: Issues and Perspectives" and "Teaching Strategies for the Social Studies." He is also author of the revised edition of "The World Around Us," the Macmillan/McGraw-Hill social studies program for grades kindergarten through seven, scheduled for publication this year.

Banks is past president of the National Council for the Social Studies. A former elementary school teacher, he was named a Distinguished Scholar/Researcher on Minority Education by the American Educational Research Association.

The MISD Language Arts and Social Studies departments sponsored Banks' workshop.

MEET: Council to study water-tower slogan plan

(From 1B)

er-Telegram on Monday.

Owned by the city of Midland and used mainly as a back-up to the regular water supply, the tower is already in the process of getting a new paint job.

Under consideration for the tower's face is the CAF's wing logo, a symbol Menchaca said might accompany Coca-Cola's proposed slogan.

Workers have already started painting on the inside of the tank. On the outside, a coat of lead-based paint will be partially scraped and then encapsulated.

Among other council questions to be considered today will be Community Development Block Grant money and the work it funds.

Street-paving work funded by the grant is ready to begin. The council is expected to approve the advertisement for bids on those projects.

Also, $15,000 in additional CDBG money may be allocated at the meeting. Forfeited by the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, the money is expected to be requested by at least two local social service programs.

SPIN: Midlander weaves science, art into work very big sheep-rearing area," she said. "I bought my wheel — an Ashford wheel — manufactured by a family there. The Ashford is like the Volkswagen of the spinning wheel."

(From 1B)

But spinning enthusiasts don't need to go to New Zealand for fibers, Emmy said.

"We are lucky in West Texas. We grow a large percentage of the world's mohair here," she said. "We have angora goats, angora rabbits, cotton, llamas in Garden City and a wool skeller in San Angelo. So we have sources of fibers here readily available."

One person who has a living source of fibers on hand is Kelly Gully of St. Lawrence, a town south of Garden City.

"I have a llama, goats, sheep and angora rabbits," Kelly said.

The two women met when Emmy purchased one of Kelly's miniature wire-haired dachshunds.

"I have been wanting to spin for years, ever since I saw a woman at a county fair spinning," Kelly said. "I didn't think I could learn how to do it, but Emmy said: 'Sure you can do it. Sit down.' And suddenly I was spinning."

Kelly has been spinning for almost four years.

"It's something that is easy to pick up. It's very relaxing and doesn't require any conscious thought," she said. "It's also fulfilling to see the fibers come off of the animal, made into yarn and then made into something else."

Kelly said almost any animal hair can be woven into yarn and knitted into hats, sweaters or other garments.

"I even know of a woman in Minnesota who spins dog hair and makes dog-hair sweaters and hats," she said.

Emmy said "dog hair is the fiber of the future" and poodles have the preferred hair for spinners. To prove a point, she reached down and grasped a handful of hair from her surprised — but obedient — dachshund and began twisting the hairs together.

While spinning outside, Emmy keeps on eye on lasagne cooking in a solar oven made from cardboard and aluminum foil.

"I have more hobbies than I have time," she said.

Kelly agrees. "She can do anything," she said, speaking of Emmy. "She is a wealth of knowledge. I'm a Girl Scout leader, and if we start to work on a unit on kites, I can call Emmy and she will know plenty about kites. It doesn't make a difference what (walk of life) you are in. There's something that you do that she knows more about and she is willing to share."

Emmy admits she has "quite a collection of books" and tends to research every topic that interests her.

For example, questions about weaving can lead to a discussion on Navajo folklore, or spinning, can lead to a discourse on pre-Columbian bead spindles, which fibers make the warmest garments, how to make dye from walnut hulls, or how to extract greases and lanolin from sheep's wool.

The artist said she gleaned some of her extensive knowledge from her scientific background that includes a career as a geologist and master's degrees in biology and geology.

So are the handicrafts Emmy practices an art or a science?

"The more I learn, the more I know there are little differences between art and science. There are no lines between art and science," she said.

And while she enjoys blending scientific fact with ethereal art, Emmy said she would like to see people express "more appreciation for what goes into clothes."

Her own daughters are learning to weave yarn on cardboard looms.

"I have an angora sweater — with shell buttons — which my grandmother knitted for my mother. Now my daughters will have it. It's rewarding to have a sweater passed down from generations," she said.

And then there is the satisfaction of carrying on a time-worn tradition practiced by generations of women who have lived before her.

Are you dreaming about an idyllic vacation but have no specific destination in mind? Or maybe you know exactly where you'd like to travel, but need to find the most efficient route along with the most cost effective accommodations. Perhaps you do a lot of business traveling and want quick efficient ticket service and a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week emergency travel number.

Whether you want to join a tour, travel solo, fly the skies or sail the seas, go for business or purely for pleasure, Travel Agents International (T.A.I.) is the answer to a traveler's prayer.

Besides professional service from friendly, experienced agents, T.A.I. offers the following:

■ The Fare Assurance Program. T.A.I.'s computer system checks all flights on all airlines within the parameters of a four-hour period of the time of departure, thereby guaranteeing you the lowest possible fare available on that date.

■ Insurance. T.A.I. offers a $100,000 flight insurance policy with each ticket purchased.

■ Discounted accommodations. Clients traveling on business have access to T.A.I.'s special hotel rate directory. It includes 14,000 hotels world-wide that offer corporate rates.

■ Emergency service. Corporate clients receive a 24-hour "800" emergency number. If a flight is missed, if there is a sudden change of plans and a business client has to be rerouted, it can be done by T.A.I. any time of the day or night.

■ Specialty tours. T.A.I. is now offering specialty tours that range from a combination of land and sea tours in Southern Europe; travel through New Orleans and the deep south; a fall foliage tour through New England and a Christmas jaunt through charming old Williamsburg, Va.

■ Extra Card savings. Extra Card holders save $50 per cabin on a cruise of seven days or longer.

Whatever your travel plans, you'll feel comfortable in the competent hands of agents Mary Dowdle Conder and Andrea Tillett. They have 18-years of combined experience in the travel business.

And besides their experience in the business, they're both seasoned travelers as well. Australia, Europe, England, Scotland, Canada, Mexico, Hawaii, Alaska and the Caribbean are not just airline destinations to them — they're areas that they have actually traveled. In counseling their clients, this experience gives them the added edge of having actually been there.

And as if all that weren't enough, T.A.I. is a member of a 325-agency network that provides their clients innumerable services.

"We want to fulfill people's travel dreams," said agency co-owner Robert Landreth. "And we want to help that dream come true at the best possible value for the money."

Whether your dream is to ride horseback through Ireland, tour the wineries of France, scuba dive in the Bahamas or shake hands with Mickey and Donald, T.A.I. is a good first step to making your dream trip come true.

T.A.I. is located at 4706 North Midkiff, around the corner from Walmart. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays. Ticket delivery is free. Evening hours are available by appointment. Call 689-3500 for more information.

Dunlaps offers selection, convenience and personal service

After five decades of operation in Midland, Dunlaps continues to grow and evolve to meet the needs of the people in our community. By offering quality merchandise and services, and becoming an example by buying locally, the store offers all reasons to buy Midland.

Park conveniently, only steps away from the doors. Then enter the realm of rich colors, exquisite fragrances and an array of name brands from Estee Lauder to Pendleton to Levi Dockers.

Not only does Dunlaps offer quality merchandise, but also quality personnel to make shopping easier and more enjoyable.

"You couldn't ask for finer quality people to assist you with your shopping. We have nearly 400 years of combined experience on the floor and behind the registers," said Bill Bartlett, Dunlaps' general manager.

"A lot of times when a customer says they have got to go out of town to find higher quality clothes, I think they've missed the fact that we and other local stores offer fine quality clothing. More importantly, we're family, friends and neighbors," he said. "If we don't have something you want, just tell us about it, and we'll do the best we can to get it for you."

"We're big enough to get all the price advantages, but we're small enough not to have to buy for 60 to 80 stores," Bartlett said. "We just have to buy for one. We can literally pick up the phone today and order something when we hear of a hot-selling item. We can do what the big guys can't. We can react quickly."

Swing into spring with delightful fashions from Dunlaps.

Bartlett sees another advantage of buying Midland — the financial advantage.

"It's hard to impress people in the world today with the fact that buying locally significantly helps their community" he said.

The Dunlap Company, which owns the Midland store and stores in seven other states, insists its stores buy in their own areas. Instead of running all of its stores from one location, the Company's philosophy is to support the community where the store is located by purchasing supplies there.

"We try to buy as much as we can right here because we are part of this community. It takes all of our combined efforts to be successful," Bartlett said.

Dunlaps has survived the ups and downs of the Midland economy. They consider the people in the store their family. They strive to treat all their customers with courtesy and efficiency — the way they want to be treated while shopping.

Right now, Dunlaps is all decked out for Easter and for spring. Lots of bright new styles, both trendy and classical, are displayed throughout the store.

The linen department has anything and everything you might need to beautifully freshen your home for spring. Look for items to brighten your kitchen, your bath, and everything between.

And don't forget, Dunlaps has a complete bridal registry.

Dunlaps is located at the corner of Midkiff anf Illinois. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through saturday. Call 694-8888 for more information.

Leak forces Odessa evacuation

Staff Report

ODESSA — About 30 people were evacuated from their homes Monday night after a valve at a water recovery plant sprung a leak, causing potentially dangerous hydrogen and sulphur fumes to spread through the area, fire officials said.

The leak occurred at 6:48 p.m. at the plant owned by Conoco Inc. in the 900 block of West Yukon Street, officials said.

City, county police dispatchers to compete in '911 Olympics'

Staff Report

More than two dozen dispatchers from city and county law enforcement agencies plan to test their work-related skills this week in three games that are collectively being billed by organizers as the "911 Olympics."

The competition will be held in the basement of the Midland Police Department at 601 N. Loraine St. and coincides with National Telecommunicator Week.

"There will be competitions measuring dexterity, speed writing and the multi-task capabilities of the dispatchers," said Eva Luna, local law enforcement communications director. "Trophies will be given for some of the categories and the grand prize is a weekend night at the Hilton and two tickets to Sea World in San Antonio."

According to Ms. Luna, the games will continue through Wednesday, culminating with an awards reception at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Police officers and city officials are invited to the ceremony, which also will be held in the basement of the Police Department.

Mayor Carroll Thomas is expected to sign a proclamation today for National Telecommunicator Week.

Houston admits error in razing building

HOUSTON (AP) — City officials said Monday they erred in issuing a demolition permit for a 124-year-old building that was razed during the night this weekend.

The John Baker Building in downtown Houston's historic Market Square fell in the early morning hours Saturday. It is the second structure in that square more than 100 years old to be destroyed this year.

Preservationists mourned the loss, while also expressing anger over the foul-up that led to its destruction.

A spokesman for the building's owner, K&P Realty Co., insisted Monday the structure could not be salvaged.

Although the building was covered under a moratorium passed by the city council to protect historic structures, a city employee issued a demolition permit last week, Karla Taylor, a city spokeswoman, said Monday.

"Apparently, a building demolition permit was issued on April 9 in error," she said.

Chaparral Wash & Lube gets vehicles all ready for spring

Spring is in the air. Flowers are blooming, grass is growing, days are warming. It's that special time of year of when just about everyone realizes it's time to have the car serviced.

Since its opening in 1984, a whole lot of Midlanders have been going to Chaparral Wash & Lube.

The Center has long enjoyed a well-earned reputation for the best car wash and oil change service in Midland. A strong commitment to meticulous attention to detail from long-time employees are Chaparral trademarks.

Skilled technicians not only perform an oil change and lube, but check the battery, power steering, transmission and windshield-washer fluids. As part of the service, these fluids are replenished, if needed. Technicians also carefully scrutinize hoses, belts, the air conditioning system and anti-freeze and freon levels. For an additional charge, technicians install transmission oil, freon, light bulbs and windshield-wiper refills.

One of these customers is Susan Atchinson. She's been bringing her car to Chaparral for about four years now.

"I like the fact that they do their job thoroughly and quickly," she said. "They're very dependable."

Chaparral carries major brands of oil, including Pennzoil, Quaker State and Havoline. Prices for the oil change and lube range from $18.50 to $23.50. (Synthetic oils, such as Mobil One, are $36.50.) And, a free car wash is included with each oil change. Those who are in a rush or notice threatening clouds overhead receive a car wash rain check for use at a later date.

All vehicles receive personal service from dedicated long-time employees like lube center technician C.C. Banks, car wash detail supervisor Guillermo Portillo and detail specialist Gilbert Guiterrrez.

These men have a combination of more than 20 years' experience with Chaparral.

A regular maintenance schedule is good insurance against expensive future car trouble. Chaparral Wash & Lube owner Leon Jeffcoat recommends a minimum maintenance schedule of every 3,000 miles or every three months.

A full-service car wash, which includes a wash by gentle cleansers, chamois brushes and soft water is just $7.95. Add wax for $2. Standard vans and Suburbans are $2 more. Vacuuming, hand-drying and window cleaning are included in the price.

Customers who have their car washed also can have the tank filled with Texaco gas at the same stop. More than 18 gallons means a free wash.

Chaparral also offers professionally administered detail jobs. It includes spraying the engine to remove oil and grime, a thorough cleaning under the hood, hand waxing, carpet and upholstery shampooing, interior dash and door treatment and tire treatment. Prices start at $59.

Chaparral Wash & Lube Center is located at the corner of Big Spring and Scharbauer. Texaco, Visa, MasterCard, American Express and Discover cards are welcome. Hours are 8 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays. Call 682-8013 for information.

Chaparral customers are repeat customers. Pictured (from left) are owner Leon Jeffcoat, customers Susan and Caroline Atchinson and service technician C.C. Banks.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An alliance you form during the next few months could mean greater business success and peace of mind. An old debt will be repaid in September. Fall heralds a return to school to acquire new knowledge or skills. The home front settles down by Christmas. You will know exactly where you stand in a romantic relationship early in 1993. Look for special deals and promotions next March. An expensive item or vacation may suddenly become affordable.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Julie Christie, actor Rod Steiger, pitcher Greg Maddux, actor Sir John Gielgud.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be money-wise today. Unpaid debts can cast a dark shadow. Romance looks more rewarding than in the recent past. Voicing an objective opinion to higher-ups could trigger a pleasant surprise at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Affairs linked to shared funds pose a danger — be skeptical. Team players will get the glory at work now, so do not try to run the show. An emotional storm quickly blows over.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Property and financial matters show promise, chiefly through your family connections. A romantic linkup takes you to new places. Get to the root of an old fear and it will go away.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A close friend seeks your advice. Be honest if you do not have an answer. Curb a tendency to be extravagant. A diplomatic approach enhances your personal and professional relationships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take care of paperwork concerning your home. Paying bills on time preserves your credit rating. Do not be tempted by a grandiose scheme. Practical techniques work best.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Check your messages carefully. A domestic adjustment is featured, perhaps a change of residence or marital status. You may decide to visit relatives while on a business trip.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Expert advice on investments is worth the cost. Keep in touch with overseas contacts. A heart-to-heart exchange produces immediate results. Be open-minded.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tying up loose ends now makes you feel more secure. Special home repairs are in the spotlight. A financial transaction is completed in record time. Focus on creative endeavors later in the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Concentrate on romance and making a fresh start. A new personal relationship could blossom into something big. A family situation will improve if you play your cards right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Defining your terms lets others know where you stand. Be open to suggestions for new creative projects. Change and variety are what you like best! Altering the status quo works to your advantage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Follow your instincts and you will not go wrong. Family concerns lessen as the financial picture brightens. Higher-ups are impressed by your insights.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Review lessons learned in the past before making some far-reaching decisions today. Reading between the lines of a message will help you become more independent. Forget old doubts and fears.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are born risk-takers, willing to put themselves and their talents on the line. Their driving ambition and willingness to work hard make these Aries successful at almost anything they try. Sensible and pragmatic, they quickly take charge in an emergency.

Opening lead: Ace of ♡

There's one ingredient in the makeup of the bridge expert that's impossible to teach—table feel. That's the ability to come up with an unusual bid or play based on what's going on across the green baize.

By partnership agreement, North's jump to three clubs showed a strong minor two-suiter. That made South's hand in support of diamonds very powerful, and South was not afraid to show the suit at the five-level. We admire East's courage in deciding to defend—at this vulnerability we would have bid five spades without a moment's hesitation.

When partner bids a suit and you decide to lead something else, you had better be right. Therefore, we would have led an unimaginative spade and declarer would have had no problem making the contract with an overtrick.

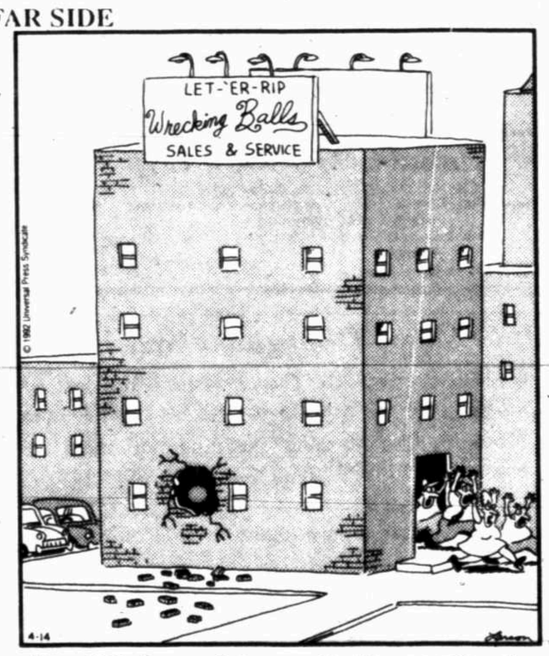

Our intrepid West found the opening lead of the ace of hearts. Even so, we hazard a guess that many declarers we know would still make their contract. East would win the second heart and be unable to get to partner to cash the queen, and declarer would score the rest of the tricks in comfort.

But look what happens when East jettisons the king of hearts under the ace! Now West can continue with the queen of hearts and another, and East ruffs the third round of a suit for a one-trick set.

Which leaves us to wonder: Was West an expert who felt that a heart lead was right, or a lunatic who blundered onto the only way to defeat the contract?

John Travolta's actress-wife Preston gives birth to a boy

LOS ANGELES — Actor John Travolta and his actress-wife, Kelly Preston, are the parents of a boy.

Jett Travolta was born early Monday at a Daytona Beach, Fla., hospital, said Paul Bloch, the couple's Los Angeles publicist. The baby weighed 8 pounds, 12 ounces and measured 20 inches long.

Travolta, star of such films as "Grease," "Urban Cowboy" and "Look Who's Talking," and Miss Preston, who starred with Arnold Schwarzenegger in "Twins," were thrilled, the spokesman said.

"They are already home and everybody's happy," Bloch said.

Travolta, 38, and Preston, 29, were married in Paris in September. They renewed wedding vows later that month in the United States. The couple live in Florida.

MILAN, Italy — Loredana Berte, pop singer and wife of tennis great Bjorn Borg, was released from a hospital two days after she was admitted for what her doctor described as stress and fatigue related to work.

Berte, 41, was taken to the Citta di Milano clinic Saturday after she was found unconscious on the floor of her apartment in the city.

Her physician, Dr. Roberto de Franchis, denied the Italian singer had tried to repeat an earlier suicide attempt by taking sedatives found on her nightstand.

"She had headspins and fainted. But she was already conscious by the time she got to the hospital," de Franchis said. Berte was released Monday.

Her new album is due for release in the fall.

A year ago, the singer took an overdose of sleeping pills after reports were published of problems in her marriage to Borg. The couple were married in 1989.

BRISBANE, Australia — Prince hit the right note with Down Under fans Monday, opening his Australian tour with a high-tech show that featured a flying saucer, explosions, ballet dancers, roller skaters and rappers.

About 15,000 fans at Brisbane Entertainment Center danced in their seats to hits from the American rocker's new album "Diamonds and Pearls."

The fusion of rock, jazz, techno-funk and rap featured Prince hits "Purple Rain" and "Nothing Compares 2 U" and a 25-minute encore that included the 10-year-old hit "1999" and recent chart single "Cream."

Prince and his band, New Power Generation, play a second Brisbane concert today and will perform in Sydney and Melbourne over the next two weeks.

DETROIT — Smokey Robinson was honored at the first Motor City Music Awards for lifetime achievements that include soul singing and founding Motown records. Rocker Bob Seger was named musician of the year.

Robinson

Nearly 2,000 musicians and fans packed the Music Hall on Sunday night for the show presented by the Motor City Music Awards Foundation, a non-profit group of promoters, radio stations, fans and civic groups.

"What happened in Motown in Detroit will never happen anywhere in the world ever again," said Robinson, whose fellow Motown artists included the Supremes and Mary Wells. "The music of Motown broke down so many barriers, and to be honored like this in Detroit means so much to me."

Howard "Louie Bluie" Armstrong, 88, whose string compositions gave birth to swing jazz, also received a lifetime achievement award.

JULIETTE, Ga. — Movie director John Avnet helped see to it that fried green tomatoes will be served this week at the new Whistle Stop Cafe.

An eatery by that name is opening in this mill town of 500 people made famous when the movie "Fried Green Tomatoes" was filmed here 18 months ago. The movie starring Jessica Tandy, Kathy Bates and Mary Stuart Masterson tells the story of two generations of Southern women.

The city, 70 miles south of Atlanta, looked more like the ghost town in movie's final scene until Avnet urged local folks to open a real Whistle Stop Cafe.

"The movie gave us a boost in the arm," said Robert Williams, one of three owners who will open the cafe Thursday.

The only problem is how to find cheap green tomatoes, which cost $2 each this time of year, said cook Marie Binion.

DETROIT — Jack Nicholson and the "Hoffa" movie crew left town last week after providing brushes with stardom for hundreds of extras.

For the 1957 Teamsters' union convention scene, there were 1,200 extras, film officials said. Extras usually earned $50 a day, said Borowski, who worked nine days. On one grueling day featuring a fight scene, he earned $65.

Nicholson plays former Teamsters' boss Jimmy Hoffa, who was alleged to have Mafia ties and disappeared in Detroit in 1975. He is presumed dead.

The movie will be released in December.

IRS uncovers 4,775 bogus tax returns

By Jim Luther
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Tax fraud is going high-tech.

The Internal Revenue Service this year has uncovered 659 schemes to defraud the government by filing phony tax returns in hopes of getting a refund. Two-thirds of the 4,775 bogus returns involved tax forms filed electronically.

"They're basically doing the same thing people have been doing for years with phony paper returns," IRS spokesman Don Roberts said Monday. "Electronic filing has just added an element of speed."

Under the electronic-filing program, which has been in operation since 1990, a person hires a professional preparer to transmit a tax return via telephone directly into an IRS computer. This results in a refund within two or three weeks, reduces errors and saves processing costs for the IRS.

Many taxpayers carry the hurry-up procedures a step further, signing up for a "refund anticipation loan" from a bank. Once the IRS signals electronically that the return has been received — often a day or two after filing — the taxpayer signs over rights to the refund to the bank and the bank hands over the refund, minus a loan fee.

In many of the schemes uncovered this year, scam artists have been using borrowed Social Security numbers, creating a W-2 statement of wages earned, filing bogus returns and quickly collecting fraudulent refunds by using electronic filing and anticipation loans.

However, they are not abandoning the old paper-return schemes, which are slower but still work in many cases. Roberts said that while most filing scams this year have involved electronic returns, most of the dollars claimed were on paper returns.

"The average so far this year is over $7,200 per paper return and under $3,200 on electronic returns," Roberts said. If all the phony returns had paid off before being intercepted by IRS, the losses would have been $10.3 million on electronic returns and $11.3 million on paper returns.

The latest IRS statistics, through April 3, showed 10.1 million electronic returns had been filed — one of every six returns filed so far this year. More than 47.2 million couples and individuals had received refunds averaging $976.

The IRS expects the total of electronic returns to grow by the midnight Wednesday filing deadline.

"It's not a new idea to" write a phony tax return to get a refund, Roberts said. "Prisoners have been doing that for years."

In fact, the IRS has been on to the scheme since at least 1977, when it set up special teams in each of its 10 regional service centers to detect questionable refund schemes.

This year, the IRS has boosted the staff of those teams by 75 percent, Roberts said. In addition, the agency has conducted seminars for return preparers, companies that transmit returns electronically, and lending institutions that make anticipation loans, trying to make them more alert to suspicious returns.

It is the responsibility of the Justice Department to determine whether people arrested in phony return schemes should be prosecuted. In 1991 the department charged 65 defendants with 319 counts involving $4.2 million of phony refunds through electronic filing. Twenty-three defendants were prosecuted in the Houston area; 20 in Los Angeles.

Of the 65, 29 pleaded guilty and three have been convicted so far.

The 'feminist Yankee'

Mrs. Clinton's outspokeness annoys some voters

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton once called his wife "one of the best arguments for re-electing me." Hillary Clinton also has set off some of the best arguments in Arkansas.

Clinton

Some annoyed Arkansans view Mrs. Clinton as a feminist Yankee who minds her husband's business and once refused to drop her maiden name. Others like her so much they urge her to run for office herself.

"I think we've elected the wrong Clinton," legislator Lloyd George said after Mrs. Clinton presented proposed education reforms to a legislative committee in 1983. The proposals became law, and George's quip lived on as well.

Mrs. Clinton, a 44-year-old attorney, jumped into Arkansas' old-guard political scene in the late 1970s with her sleeves rolled up, building a power base of her own.

She worked on children's issues nationally, became a senior partner in her law firm and spearheaded state education reforms while at the same time helping rear the couple's only child, Chelsea, now 12.

Mrs. Clinton was named by the National Law Journal as one of the nation's 100 most influential lawyers in 1989. She serves on the boards of directors for the Children's Television Workshop, Southern Development Bancorporation and Wal-Mart Stores Inc., among others.

"Like most American women, I have many roles in my life," she said in a letter she sends to voters who write her. "I'm a wife. I'm a mother. I'm a lawyer. I'm a volunteer."

While many people have been enthusiastic about Mrs. Clinton's role in her husband's presidential campaign — Clinton tells voters "you've got to get me in before I can get her in" — her outspoken manner and independence have rankled people at times.

"I suppose I could have stayed home and baked cookies and had teas," Mrs. Clinton said last month when questioned about a report that her law firm had received $235,000 in state business since 1985.

To many, the remark sounded condescending toward non-career women. Mrs. Clinton expressed regret that the remark had been misunderstood and said she had been referring to "the ceremonial role of the first lady."

Mrs. Clinton also said she made a mistake in telling Vanity Fair that she had heard unsubstantiated rumors President Bush had been involved in an extramarital affair.

Years earlier, she offended many Arkansans by continuing to use her maiden name, Hillary Rodham, after marriage. Her husband's 1980 re-election loss was blamed partially on that and she later took his name.

Mrs. Clinton was born in Chicago on Oct. 26, 1947. Her father, Hugh Rodham Sr., ran a drapery fabric business. He moved his family to the suburbs when she was 2.

She attended Wellesley College near Boston and in 1973 graduated from Yale Law School, where she had met the future governor of Arkansas. She and Clinton worked on George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign in Texas.

After graduating from Yale, Bill Clinton moved to Fayetteville, Ark., to teach law. Hillary Rodham worked for the House Judiciary Committee to help prepare the impeachment case against President Nixon.

She moved to Arkansas in 1974 to teach law and she married Clinton the next year. Her activities as first lady have gone far beyond what she calls the traditional "ceremonial role."

"To call her an adviser to the governor is both to acknowledge her role and shortchange it," Betsey Wright, a longtime Clinton aide who worked with the couple on McGovern's campaign, once said.

Clinton appointed her to chair the 1983-'84 task force that designed the state's landmark education standards, which required teachers to take basic skills tests. Many teachers still hold the test provision against her.

Mrs. Clinton's views do not always jibe with her husband's. She is a board member of the Children's Defense Fund, which was at odds in 1989 with 48 governors, including Clinton.

As a scholar-activist, Mrs. Clinton has written in favor of using state facilities to help parents achieve an education for their children. She has argued that the current presumption that children are incompetent denies them the "opportunity to mature into a responsible adult."

In "Children's Rights: A Legal Perspective," Mrs. Clinton wrote, "The first thing to be done is to reverse the presumption of incompetency and instead assume all individuals are competent until proven otherwise."

Perhaps to foster responsibility in competent youths, Mrs. Clinton supported a new state law that denies drivers' licenses to children who drop out of school.

Mrs. Clinton has toyed with the idea of running for public office. Her husband recently said he would like to give her a high-level job in the federal government if he were elected president. But she said later she did not want a paid post such as Cabinet secretary.

Short Term Medical Plans

There are over 3.1 million unemployed white collar workers.

There are 34 million people uninsured, of those, 22.2% or 7.5 million earn over $30,000 per year.

4.9 million people lost their job in 1991, and 1.2 million of those were due to layoffs.

811,000 people were classified as new entrants.

17 million, or 49%, of all those employed have some length of waiting period. Of that, 17%, or 5.8 million, have a 3 month waiting period.

Short Term Medical plans make sense. They provide coverage for a company's new and exciting employees, as well as for those who are laid off or between jobs.

Each year 1.5 million students graduate from colleges or universities in the United States. Upon graduation, most college graduates become ineligible for their parents health plan or their university health plan. Short Term Medical plans are an excellent temporary health plan for this situation.

Short Term plans can be purchased from 30 to 180 days and some companies offer extended days. Something to Consider!!!!!

Bulldogs need 4-5A win

■ Midland High plays host to Abilene High as Lee travels to meet league leading Abilene Cooper in a torrid District 4-5A baseball race.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Hanging on for dear life in the District 4-5A baseball race, the Midland High Bulldogs will try to even their league record when they host Abilene High at 4:30 p.m. today in Angels Stadium.

The Bulldogs are 3-4 in district play after dropping an emotionally draining 5-4, eight-inning affair to rival Midland Lee Saturday. MHS (7-13 overall) will now try to avenge a 17-16 loss it suffered at the hands of AHS March 21 in Abilene.

In other 4-5A play today, Lee is also seeking revenge when it travels to league-leading Abilene Cooper, and Odessa High visits San Angelo. Odessa Permian plays a non-district game against Class 4A Monahans.

Cooper (6-1 in district) demolished the Rebels 24-7 on the same day MHS lost to AHS. Lee (4-3 and 10-8), trails second-place Permian (5-2) by one game.

If the previous matchup is any indication, the keys for the Bulldogs to win today should certainly be holding the speedy Eagles to a minimum number of stolen bases while driving in their own base runners.

In the first game, AHS stole 17 bases while MHS stranded 16 runners. After that game, Bulldog coach Rick Wood placed the stolen base blame on pitchers not holding runners on base, not on the shoulders of catcher Mike Melzer. Melzer, a junior, is a natural second baseman and was forced in catching duties after two other receivers quit the team.

Now MHS, which made the playoffs last year with an 8-4 league record, must shake the loss to Lee and overcome any anxiety about playing the Eagles. AHS, also 3-4 after an 8-1 loss to Cooper Saturday, and MHS are, after all, still only two games behind second place and a playoff berth.

"When you're in a log jam like we are in the district standings, it hurts to lose a ball game like we did to Lee. But the way the district went in the first half, I can't believe we're out of it yet," Wood said.

For the Rebels, revenge is on the minds of one and all. In their first meeting with Cooper, the Rebels actually led the Cougars 5-3 before a 13-run Cooper fifth inning proved to be their downfall.

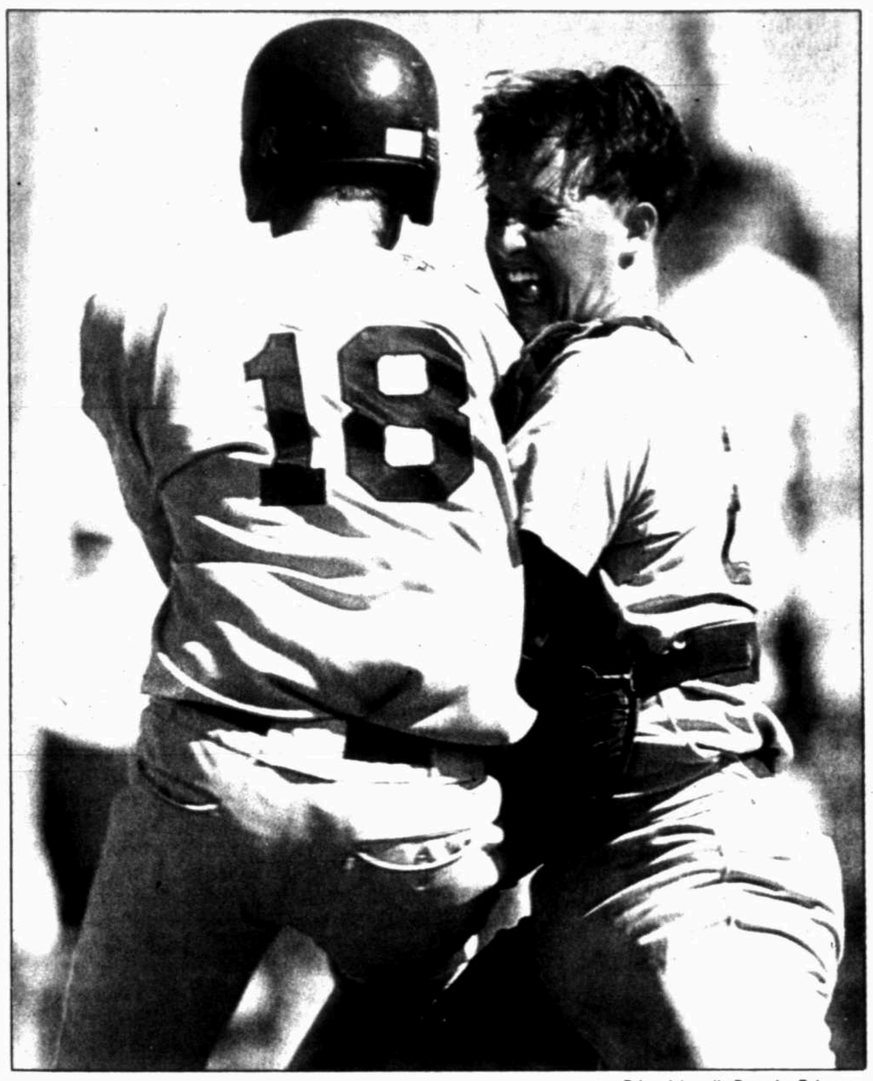

"The first thing I heard from the kids after the win over Midland High was 'we've got to have the next one,'" said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "We've just got to put that other game with them out of our minds and play like we're capable of playing."

■ 4-5A Standings & Statistics/3C

Win or lose Lee will face another tough test Saturday when the Rebels host second place Odessa Permian at 2 p.m. at Johnson Field. Midland High will travel to Odessa High Saturday.

Lee will try to unseat Cooper today with senior Jimmy Patton on the mound. Patton is 2-2 for the season. MHS will send senior Brian Rounding, 2-5 for the year, against the Eagles.

There are still five games left in the district campaign, but wins are now becoming crucial. MHS and Lee won both playoff berths a year ago and both would like to add another playoff trip to the record.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High's Adrian Mills tries to score a run, but is tagged out at the plate by Midland Lee catcher Brian Graham Saturday. Lee won the game, 5-4, in the eighth inning with a two-run homer by Sean McIntosh.

Two-week wait

CINCINNATI (AP) — Atlanta Braves outfielder David Justice could recover from his back problem and return to the lineup in two weeks, the team announced Monday night.

Justice had a magnetic resonance imaging test that found a "stress reaction" in the lower back, team orthopedist Dr. Joe Chandler said in a statement.

Justice was placed on the 15-day disabled list Sunday because of a strain in the right side of his lower back. He was just 1 for 17 (.095) with seven strikeouts last week.

The outfielder missed nearly two months of last season with a strained back. He hit .275 with 21 homers and 87 RBIs in 109 games.

Pay-up game

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A woman who sustained head injuries in an alleged beating by Nebraska running back Scott Baldwin, will receive the proceeds of the university's spring game, coach Tom Osborne said Monday.

"We feel this is the right thing to do," Osborne said. "This money will go directly to her. We told the family two days after the incident that we'd do what we could to help."

Gina Simanek is making progress in her recovery, Osborne said, adding that she has returned to work on a limited basis.

Trial is scheduled June 8 for Baldwin on assault charges stemming from what police say was a random attack Jan. 18 on Simanek outside the woman's Lincoln apartment.

PGA golfer Fred Couples ...an act of confirmation

Masters puts Couples on new plateau

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Fred Couples won more than the Masters when he climbed that final hill at Augusta National.

He won more than a green jacket and huge check, more than wife Deborah and old friend Ray Floyd waiting to congratulate him when he stepped up the slope to the 18th green in the finest moment of his career.

Perhaps the moment would have been enough in and of itself; a triumph in the most cherished tournament golf can offer, cheers and congratulations, the approval and respect of his peers.

But for Couples, the circumstances were such that his weekend victory in the Masters was much more.

The climb up the lush green slope, with the white, colonial-style clubhouse in the background, was the final step in an affirmation of his new, elevated stature in golf.

It was an act of confirmation.

With the victory, coming as it did on the heels of a 10-month streak that has not been matched in more than a decade, Couples achieved a level reached by few men before him.

Floyd, the 49-year-old veteran who helped instill in Couples the confidence he needed, invoked the names of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer in his praise.

"He has the game to win this tournament as many times as a Nicklaus or a Palmer," Floyd said, citing two men who have 10 Masters' titles between them.

"I said Fred had one more plateau to reach. Now he's there."

It is a level that has not been achieved since the glory days of Tom Watson in the late 1970's and early '80s — a level at which he is fully expected to be in title contention in almost every important event he plays.

Just as Watson did in 1977, Couples took that last step up by answering the one, last, lingering question that remained: Can he win in the big ones?

Just as some doubts about Watson had arisen on a series of near-misses, of lost opportunities, so were there questions about Couples after he had embarrassed himself over the final nine holes of the 1990 PGA Championship at Shoal Creek.

Less than a year later, in the U.S. Open, Couples began his response.

In that tournament — following a lengthy break from competition and a weeklong visit with Watson — Couples started a run that has produced 20 finishes of sixth or better

Redmen lose Carnesecca

■ After 24 years, 526 wins and 18 NCAA tournament berths, Lou Carnesecca retires from St. John's basketball.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lou Carnesecca, known for his sweaters, success and sideline schtick, retired as coach of St. John's on Monday, a month before his enshrinement in the Basketball Hall of Fame.

The 67-year-old Carnesecca stepped down after 24 seasons at St. John's, a school he took to postseason play each of those years and the only college he ever worked at.

"It's going to be very difficult to put the ball down, but the time has come," he said at a packed news conference on campus. "There are two reasons, really. I still have half of my marbles and I still have a wonderful taste in my mouth about basketball. It's a difficult decision, but it's all mine."

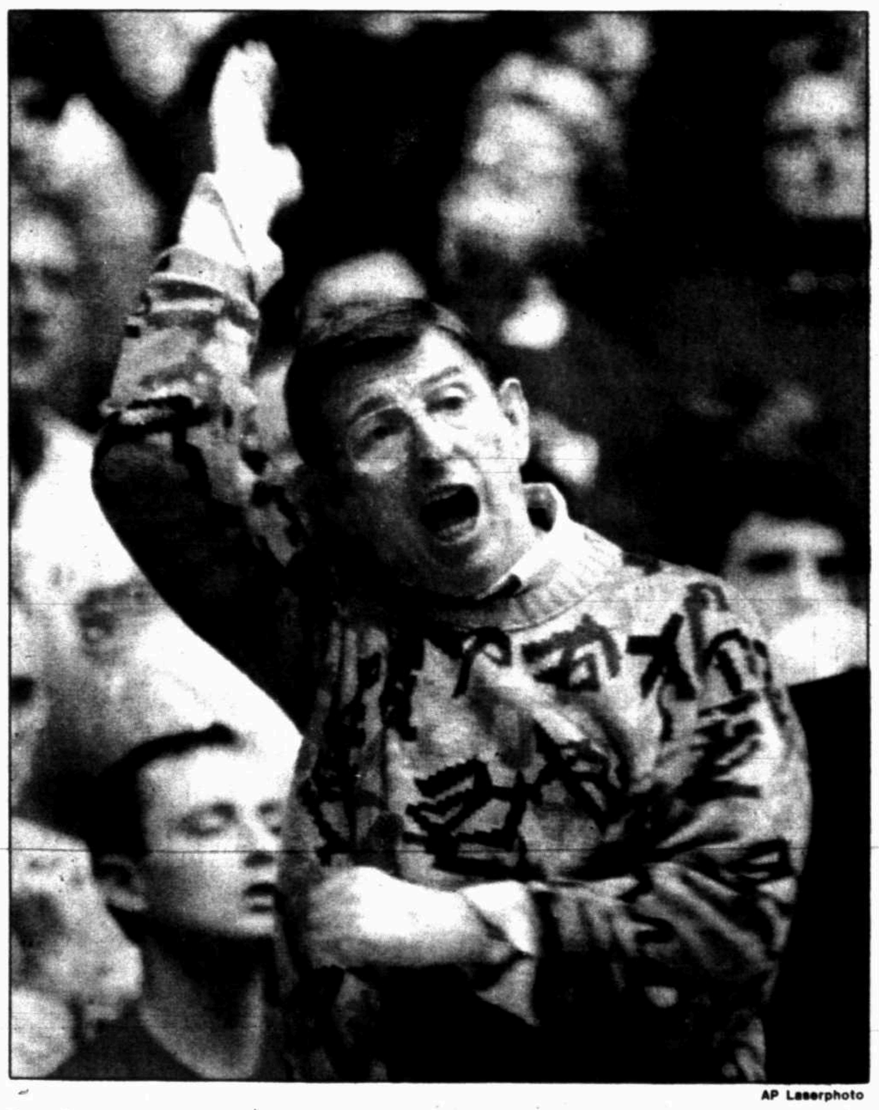

Like most Eastern basketball powers, Carnesecca jumped into the national spotlight with the creation of the Big East Conference.

His teams led by Chris Mullin and Walter Berry may not have earned him as much notice as did his penchant for sweaters, some rather gaudy, instead of the traditional jacket and tie, and his ability to run and jump on the sidelines like a man 20 years his junior.

Carnesecca, barely able to look his point guards in the eye, retired with a career record of 526-200. His teams produced 20-win seasons 18 times. St. John's reached the Final Four in 1985 when three Big East teams advanced to the national semifinals at Lexington, Ky.

Lou Carnesecca coaches the St. John's University basketball team from the sidelines during the 1991 season. Carnesecca retired Monday after 24 years as coach of the Redmen with a 526-200 overall record and 18 berths in the NCAA championship tournament.

Villanova goes with Lappas

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — Steve Lappas of Manhattan, who learned a few things about basketball coaching from Rollie Massimino, will return to Villanova and take over his old boss' job, a source said Monday night.

After a 13-day hunt and interviews with at least six coaches, Villanova scheduled a news conference for Tuesday afternoon to officially announce the selection.

Lappas, 37, was an assistant under Massimino from 1985 to 1988 and remains friendly with his former boss. He has only four years' experience as a Division I coach.

Lappas beat out Nick Macarchuk of Fordham. Four other coaches also had been interviewed.

Monday evening, Bruce Parkhill of Penn State followed Pete Gillen of Xavier of Ohio and withdrew his name from contention. According to reports, two other coaches interviewed — George Washington's Mike Jarvis and Vanderbilt's Eddie Fogler — also withdrew their names.

Lappas has strong ties to coach Mike Leonardo of Marist High in Bayonne, N.J., and could keep recruit Roscoe Harris in the fold. There has been speculation that Harris, Marist's 6-foot-4 all-state guard, might ask Villanova to release him from his national letter of intent.

On April 1, Massimino announced he had accepted a five-year contract to replace Jerry Tarkanian at the powerful but troubled UNLV program.

Missions nip Angels

Staff Report

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Angels dropped its third game in four outings here Monday night, losing to the San Antonio Missions by a 5-4 count.

The Angels trailed 5-1 in the game, but got a two-out, two-run single by Rod Correia in the sixth inning to cut the margin to 5-4, but the Angels could never wash out the margin.

Billy Ashley's sacrifice fly in the fifth inning brought home what proved to be the winning run for the Missions.

Dave Adams, 0-1, took the loss, allowing all five Mission runs, but two of them were unearned as Midland made two errors in the game. The Angels have also left 22 men stranded on the base paths in the last two games.

The Angels end a five-game stand with the Missions tonight before heading to El Paso for five games. Midland will make its home debut on April 20 at Angels Stadium against these same Missions.

The loss dropped the Angels into last place of the Texas League West with a 1-3 record. Wichita defeated El Paso, 15-5, Monday as those two teams split their first four Western Division games.

The Citadel names Dennis cage coach

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Pat Dennis, who for the past seven years was an assistant at Richmond, Monday was named head basketball coach at The Citadel.

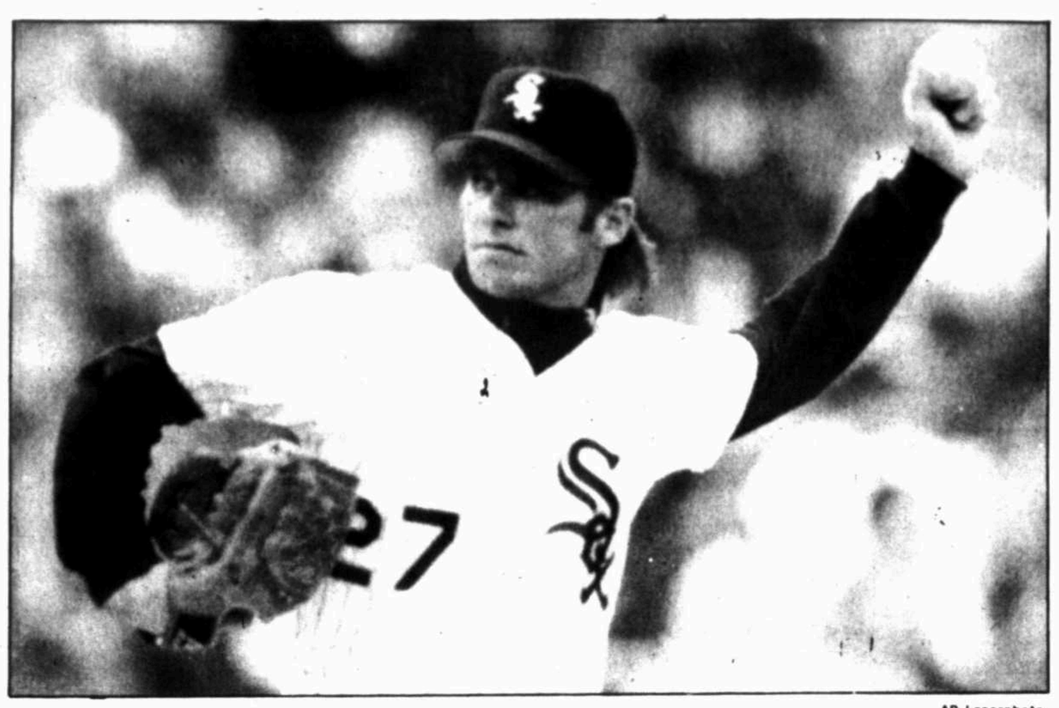

Dennis replaces Randy Nesbit, who was fired last month after a 75-121 record in seven years at his alma mater.

Richmond was 151-62 while Dennis was an assistant. Four years ago the Spiders made the final 16 in the NCAA tournament.

Dennis, 36, was selected from a field of 103 applicants.

"I felt this was a place I would want to pursue and look into as a place to start my career" as a head coach, he said.

Before going to Richmond, Dennis was an assistant at George Washington, Loyola of Maryland and Towson State.

Abbott blanks Texas

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Jim Abbott spoiled the hot-hitting Texas Rangers' home opener on Monday night, scattering six singles over 7⅓ innings in the California Angels' 3-0 victory.

Abbott (1-1) walked two and struck out four before being relieved by Bryan Harvey after giving up back-to-back singles with one out in the eighth. Harvey struck out Rafael Palmeiro and Ruben Sierra on six pitches to end the threat, then worked a perfect ninth, striking out two, for his second save.

The Rangers had scored 53 runs on 75 hits, including 35 for extra bases, in a club record-tying 6-1 start, which included a four-game sweep of Seattle and two victories over the defending world champion Minnesota Twins — all on the road.

But before 41,129 fans, the second-largest crowd for a home opener in Rangers history, starter Jose Guzman was failed first by his hitters, then by his bullpen.

Yankees 5, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO — The New York Yankees won a meeting of the last two undefeated teams in the majors, downing Toronto in the ninth inning on Mel Hall's RBI double and Danny Tartabull's home run.

Never before in this century have two unbeaten teams met this many games into the season. The Yankees improved to 6-0 and dropped Toronto to 6-1.

Only twice since 1900 have even a pair of 3-0 teams faced each other, the most recently on April 17, 1942, when the Yankees beat Boston 1-0, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. The other such matchup was on April 16, 1922, when Cleveland beat the St. Louis Browns 3-0.

Tigers 7, Indians 5

CLEVELAND — Left fielder Albert Belle dropped Tony Phillips' fly ball with two outs in the ninth inning, allowing two runs to score and giving Detroit its first victory of the season.

The Tigers' 0-6 start had matched their worst since they went 0-8 in 1952. They also were 0-6 in 1959.

With the score tied at 5 in the ninth, Detroit put runners at first and second against Rod Nichols (0-1) on a forceout by Milt Cuyler and Dan Gladden's fourth single of the day.

Phillips then drove a ball to deep left that turned Belle sideways, and it hit in and out of his glove for a two-base error, scoring both runners. Cleveland committed three errors in the inning.

American League

White Sox 1, Mariners 0

CHICAGO — Greg Hibbard and Bobby Thigpen shut out Seattle on six hits and Frank Thomas tripled home the only run in the third inning as the Chicago White Sox defeated the Mariners in their home opener before 42,290 fans.

A flood that virtually closed downtown Chicago seemed to have little effect on the crowd at Comiskey Park, located about five miles away. Streets and subways to the stadium were clear, although there were about 2,000 empty seats in the corners of the upper deck.

Attendance figures in the American League on based on tickets sold. The announced crowd for last year's first-ever game at Comiskey Park was 42,191.

Orioles 8, Red Sox 6

BOSTON — Randy Milligan doubled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning and Baltimore spoiled Boston's home opener.

After the Red Sox made it 6-all with three runs in the seventh, Brady Anderson opened the Baltimore eighth with a double against Tony Fossas (0-1). Reliever Danny Darwin retired two batters before Milligan lined his third hit and his second double.

Todd Frohwirth (1-0) got two outs in the seventh for the victory. Gregg Olson pitched two innings for his first save.

Boston starter Frank Viola was tagged for six runs on eight hits and three walks in three-plus innings. Viola, signed as a free agent for three years and $13.9 million, wound up with a no-decision in his Fenway Park debut.

Athletics 6, Royals 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Coming home didn't make a difference for the Kansas City Royals.

Jose Canseco hit a two-run homer and Oakland wrecked Kansas City's home opener, leaving the Royals as the only winless team in the majors at 0-7.

Astros extend Dodgers' skid

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Pitcher Darryl Kile's first major league hit highlighted a six-run first inning off Orel Hershiser and led the Houston Astros to a 8-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Monday night.

The Astros snapped Hershiser's (1-1) six-game winning streak and extended the Dodgers' losing streak this season to four in a row.

Hershiser, who hadn't lost since June 25 against the San Francisco Giants, gave up four hits and six runs and hit two batters in the first inning. He left after the sixth inning with seven strikeouts and retired 10 of the last 11 batters.

Kile (1-1), who entered the game 0-for-38 as a major league hitter, singled to left field just out of reach of shortstop Jose Offerman, driving home two runs. A third scored on an error.

Craig Biggio singled and Steve Finley walked to start the game and scored on Jeff Bagwell's double. After Hershiser hit Pete Incaviglia with a pitch, Ken Caminiti reached base on a fielder's choice, scoring Bagwell.

Eddie Taubensee singled and Hershiser hit Andujar Cedeno with a pitcher before Kile's hit. Caminiti and Taubensee scored on the hit and Cedeno also scored on Eric Davis' throwing error.

Reds 5, Braves 4

CINCINNATI — John Smoltz lost for the first time since Aug. 15 as Cincinnati rocked him for five runs in three innings.

Tim Belcher (1-1) struck out 10 to end another Braves' streak. Atlanta had won its last six games at Riverfront Stadium, going 8-1 there last year.

NL Roundup

Deion Sanders had the first four-hit game of his career for Atlanta, increasing his average to .433.

Smoltz (1-1) simply didn't have it, ending his streak of seven consecutive regular-season wins. The right-hander gave up five hits and three walks in just 2⅓ innings, his shortest appearance since last July 6.

Expos 3, Cardinals 2

MONTREAL — Montreal returned to Olympic Stadium after 32 consecutive road games and beat St. Louis for its fifth straight victory.

Montreal ended last season with 26 games on the road because of a concrete collapse at their ballpark, built for the 1976 Olympics. The Expos had not played at home since Sept. 8 against Cincinnati.

Mark Gardner (1-1) allowed one run and seven hits in the five innings, struck out seven and walked two before a opening-day crowd of 40,907. John Wetteland got five outs for his first save.

Phillies 3, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Rookie Ruben Amaro had two hits and scored two runs as Philadelphia beat New York, keeping the Mets winless at home.

The Mets' 0-4 start at home is their worst since going 0-7 at the Polo Grounds in 1962, their first season. New York went on to a 40-120 record that season, a major-league mark for losses.

Amaro, filling in for the injured Lenny Dykstra in center field, has seven hits in seven games.

Berbick breaks down in court

MIAMI (AP) — A judge on Monday ordered a mental examination of Trevor Berbick after the former heavyweight champion's arm-waving, raving outburst at his sexual battery sentencing hearing.

Circuit Judge Thomas Wilson postponed sentencing and ordered the exam after Berbick delivered a rambling, 45-minute speech marked by high-pitched proclamations of innocence. He said "secret agents" had manipulated his accuser and were behind her allegations.

Berbick, ignoring pleas from his family that he hush and sit back down, broke down several times.

"I'm innocent," he said. "Where is justice? I need mercy. I need more than mercy. I am innocent.

"This situation, all it amounts to is about money," said Berbick, lifting his arms and pacing across the courtroom.

Berbick was found guilty in February of assaulting the 26-year-old woman in the bedroom of her Miami apartment on Oct. 31, 1990, after he had driven her from his home near Fort Lauderdale.

He had testified that the woman, who had worked for his family as a baby-sitter, willingly had an affair with him.

Assistant state attorney Windy Johnston, who on Monday asked Wilson for the full 5½-year prison term called for by state sentencing guidelines, drew odd praise from Berbick.

"She could hypnotize any jury," he said. "The lady's got power. She's brilliant ... a super lawyer."

Wilson denied a motion for a new trial and postponed sentencing to April 28 after ordering examinations by two psychiatrists at Jackson Memorial Hospital.

Berbick, who lost his heavyweight championship to Mike Tyson in 1986, has had other run-ins with the law.

Last year, he was arrested in an alleged plot to stage a $95,000 mortgage fraud. He also has been on probation since last September for assault against his former business manager.

New no-hit rule leaves pitchers in baseball limbo

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

The definition of a no-hitter still seems to be a matter of opinion.

A committee on statistical accuracy, chaired by commissioner Fay Vincent, determined the meaning of a no-hitter last season. The group decided to define no-hitters as games of nine innings or more that ended with no hits.

But a lot of people at Cleveland Stadium thought they saw Boston's Matt Young pitch a no-hitter on Sunday. Young pitched eight hitless innings, but lost 2-1.

Since the Indians were the home team, Young didn't get a chance to pitch the ninth.

Young gets credit for a complete game. But he doesn't get official credit for the no-hitter, according to Major League Baseball.

"They didn't get any hits. Game's over," Young said. "People can make rules all they want. But I look at seven walks and I don't feel I pitched that well. Sure, there were no hits, but I still put seven guys on base. It's kind of anticlimactic."

The statistical accuracy committee met late last season mostly to strike the asterisk next to Roger Maris' name in the record books. But they also were asked to decide whether Montreal's Mark Gardner should get credit for a no-hitter.

Gardner pitched nine no-hit innings against Los Angeles on July 26, 1991. But in the bottom of the 10th, Lenny Harris and Eddie Murray singled.

Some recordkeepers said it was a no-hitter, others said it wasn't. The committee decided it wasn't. But they didn't stop there.

The committee's definition stripped 50 no-hitters from the list, leaving 225 in major-league history. They got rid of rain-shortened no-hitters and the no-hitters broken up in extra innings — like Harvey Haddix's perfect game. Haddix pitched 12 perfect innings for Pittsburgh against Milwaukee on May 26, 1959, until Joe Adcock's double in the 13th scored the winning run.

"It was disappointing to find out it wasn't a no-hitter, but it's still the record," Haddix said. "Most consecutive perfect innings, most consecutive batters retired."

Some people think the committee may have gone too far.

Like Young, Andy Hawkins of the New York Yankees pitched eight no-hit innings but lost 4-0 to Chicago at Comiskey Park on July 1, 1990.

Officially, they are not credited with no-hitters. But there's still room for interpretation.

"You can call it anything you want. Everybody has a right to an opinion," said Seymour Siwoff of the Elias Bureau, a member of the eight-man committee. "I'm not ignoring him. Hawkins is in the record book. Years from now, he can tell people, 'I'm in the record book, I'm in the no-hit section.'"

But Young and Hawkins are also in a sort of no-hit limbo, too. They are not listed among the "official" no-hitters.

Among the other pitchers MLB does not credit with no-hitters is Jim Maloney. On June 14, 1965, Maloney pitched 10 no-hit innings against the New York Mets at Crosley Field before Johnny Lewis led off the 11th with a home run. Later in the season, just in case a committee came along someday, Maloney pitched a 10-inning no-hitter to beat Houston 1-0.

Read almost any bio on Maloney and it will say he pitched three no-hitters in his career, not two no-hitters and 10 innings of no-hit ball.

The Sporting News record book and Baseball Encyclopedia differ from the Elias Book of Baseball Records on what a no-hitter should be.

The Sporting News record book lists Haddix with the other pitchers who have tossed perfect games and count Maloney's 10-inning gem against the Mets as a no-hitter. They also count Gardner's game as a no-hitter.

When The Sporting News book comes out in 1993, Young's name will be among those who pitched no-hitters with a notation that he pitched eight innings of a nine-inning game.

After the game at Dodger Stadium, Gardner was told he would not be credited with a no-hitter. He was told he would be credited with throwing nine no-hit innings. But Gardner already knew that.

The no-hit reformers even wiped out an entire family.

The Perez brothers, Melido and Pascual, each had tossed rain-shortened no- hitters. Melido's came in 1990 and was part of a record nine no-hitters — until the ruling reduced the number to seven.

"I don't know why the commissioner took away my no-hitter," said Melido, who pitched six hitless innings for the White Sox at Yankee Stadium on July 12, 1990. "It doesn't make sense."

COUPLES: PGA star rises

in 25 starts. In that 10-month period, he now has won six tournaments around the world and more than $2.66 million.

And in that stretch he almost single-handedly shifted golf's balance of power from Europe back to the United States.

The much-discussed European domination of world golf was built on three principal points — a six-year possession of the Ryder Cup; an unbroken hold on the No. 1 spot in the Sony world rankings, and a mastery of Masters that included four consecutive victories and six of the last nine titles.

Last fall Couples was the outstanding individual player as the United States regained the Ryder Cup.

A month ago, he became the first American to reach the No. 1 position in the rating system that now is accepted around the world.

And he won the Masters on Sunday, changing his success string from a hot streak into the introduction of a major force in the game.

While press and public may make much of the beating-the-British aspects of Couples' exploits, Couples was having none of it.

"I didn't win the Masters for the United States of America," he said, a slightly puzzled, quizzical expression on his face. "I won it for myself."

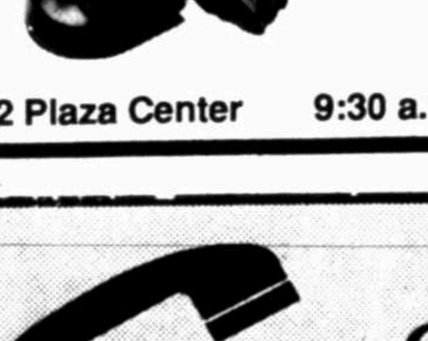

In the comment could be found the kernel of his overall approach to the game, an outlook that could serve him well in his new position.

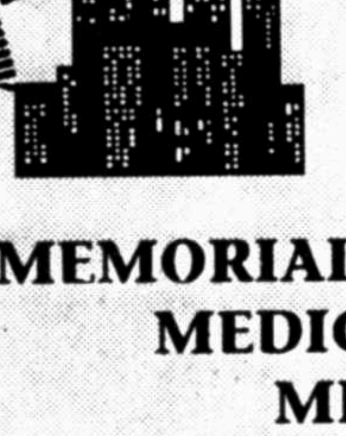

Couples does not let himself be influenced by outside interests or pressures.

NBA Roundup

ORLANDO, Fla. — Drazen Petrovic scored eight of his 29 points in the final three minutes Monday night as the New Jersey Nets took another step towards their first NBA playoff berth since 1986 with a 110-104 victory over Orlando.

The Nets (38-41) pulled into a tie with Indiana for sixth place in the Eastern Conference with the victory. Their next two games are against other teams trying to make the playoffs: at Miami on Tuesday and at the Meadowlands against the Pacers on Thursday.

The Magic were led by Anthony Bowie's 24 points and 23 from Terry Catledge. Chris Morris scored 17 points for the Nets.

Petrovic hit a short inside jumper with 7:44 left to give New Jersey its first lead in the second half, 89-88. After that, the lead changed six times and there were three ties before Petrovic hit two free throws and added a field goal in a 26-second span to give the Nets a 100-99 lead.

New Jersey then scored on its next four possessions, including a jump shot and two free throws by Petrovic in the final 31 seconds.

The Nets, who trailed by 10 in the first half, had eight offensive rebounds in the fourth quarter as they outscored the Magic 31-20 in the period.

New Jersey, the best offensive rebounding team in the NBA, outrebounded Orlando 23-14 on the offensive end. Morris and 6-foot-1 point guard Mookie Blaylock each had five offensive rebounds.

Bulls 100, Hawks 93

CHICAGO — Chicago, with Michael Jordan resting for more than half the game, dealt Atlanta's playoff hopes a setback.

The Hawks (37-42) started the night tied for seventh place in the Eastern Conference with New Jersey. But the Nets (38-41) moved into a tie with Indiana for sixth with a 110-104 victory at Orlando while Atlanta fell into a tie with Miami for the eighth and final playoff spot in the conference.

Scottie Pippen scored 16 points and reserve guard B.J. Armstrong 15 in a game in which Bulls coach Phil Jackson rested his regulars for long stretches.

Jordan, the league's leading scorer with a 30-point average, played just 23 minutes and scored a season-low 12 points.

Jazz 138, Warriors 99

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 26 of his 42 points in the first half as Utah routed Golden State moved into a tie for the Western Conference's second-best record.

Blue Edwards scored 19 points and John Stockton had 16 points and 14 assists for the Jazz, who matched the Warriors' 52-27 record. Utah won the season series with Golden State 3-1 and will gain homecourt advantage in the second round if the teams finish tied.

Malone, who also had 12 rebounds, hit 11 of 19 field goals and was 20 of 24 at the foul line. David Benoit had a career-high 15 points for the Jazz, hitting all seven of his shots.

Tim Hardaway, benched in the second half by coach Don Nelson, led the Warriors with 13 points. Chris Mullin and Vincent Askew added 12 each.

Stars & Stripes gains defender finals spot

America's Cup

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dennis Conner wasn't about to surrender his title of Mr. America's Cup.

Conner, in a hole since the regatta opened three months ago, masterfully sailed Stars & Stripes to victory in a sudden-death sail-off over Bill Koch's Kanza on Monday to earn a spot in the defender finals.

Conner kept alive his chance to sail in five straight America's Cup finals, leading wire-to-wire to beat Kanza around the eight-leg, 20.03-mile course by 2 minutes, 12 seconds.

Conner's victory also guaranteed that the best-of-13 defender finals, beginning Saturday, will indeed be a battle.

Had Koch succeeded in locking out Conner, he planned to use the defender finals to test keels and sails to optimize either Kanza or America3 (America Cubed) for the America's Cup match.

Koch, the president and skipper of the America3 Foundation, must decide by noon Friday which yacht he'll pit against Stars & Stripes, which was launched a year ago and is the oldest hull in the regatta.

Koch, who is outspending Conner $55 million to about $20 million, was guaranteed one spot in the defender finals because he entered two yachts to Conner's one. America3 clinched that spot by winning five straight races at the end of the semifinals.

Early baseball season tale of hot and cold

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

The baseball season is only a week old and already the Detroit Tigers are in danger of falling out of the race. The first week of the season was a tale of hot and cold for teams and players.

Bill Gullickson, one of four 20-game winners last season, is 0-2 for the Tigers (0-6). He's given up nine runs on 15 hits in 10⅔ innings. Detroit starters have a 9.24 ERA.

In 1959, the Tigers also started 0-6, en route to a 2-15 record that saw manager Bill Norman fired and replaced by Jimmy Dykes.

"The fact that we are 0-6 is no big deal," center fielder Milt Cuyler said. "We're not pressing any more than we would if we had a win. We always want to win."

Kansas Cjty, revamped after trading Bret Saberhagen to the New York Mets for Kevin McReynolds, Gregg Jefferies and Keith Miller, is also 0-6. The Yankees and Blue Jays, meanwhile, entered Monday night's game in the SkyDome as baseball's only undefeated teams.

New York improved to 5-0 with a 5-1 victory at Detroit, the Yankees' best start since 1988. The Yankees' best start ever was 7-0 in 1933, when Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri and Bill Dickey were on the team.

"We've got to be happy about this, but we can't dwell on it," Yankees outfielder Mel Hall said. "We are just doing what we knew we could do, and we're having fun."

The Blue Jays' 6-0 start is the best in team history.

"We've got to keep our heads on straight and keep on playing smart ball," Toronto center fielder Devon White said. "As soon as you start looking too far ahead, you lose sight of what you're trying to do, which is win the next game."

While the Yankees are a big surprise in New York, the Mets have been a big disappointment. New York dropped to 2-5 Sunday after being swept at Shea Stadium by the Montreal Expos.

Not since their first-ever season at the Polo Grounds, during which they lost a record 120 games, had the Mets dropped their first three at home.

Saberhagen, the two-time Cy Young Award winner, allowed seven runs and six hits in 4 2-3 innings in an 8-2 loss Sunday. He walked four and struck out seven in his second NL start.

Saberhagen was pounded by St. Louis in his Mets' debut, giving up seven runs on nine hits and three walks in 2⅓ innings.

"Sooner or later I'll win, but I hope it's before I get chased out of New York. The fans are tough, and expect you to perform up to your capability. I haven't," Saberhagen said.

Oakland's Mark McGwire, who slumped to .201 with 22 homers last season, already has five homers.

Bill Swift (2-0) of San Francisco pitched a six-hitter Saturday for his second career shutout.

Delisa Floyd could be reinstated for 800 meters

HOUSTON (AP) — Delisa Floyd, the 1991 national champion at 800 meters who received a four-year suspension after a positive test for amphetamines at the World Championships last summer in Tokyo, could be reinstated next month.

The Executive Committee of The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, voted Sunday at Columbus, Ohio, to accept the recommendation of a three-member National Athletics Board of Review hearing panel which recommended that Floyd be reinstated.

She was suspended by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body. She was the first athlete to be banned for four years under the tougher IAAF rules against drugs. Previous drug suspensions were for two years.

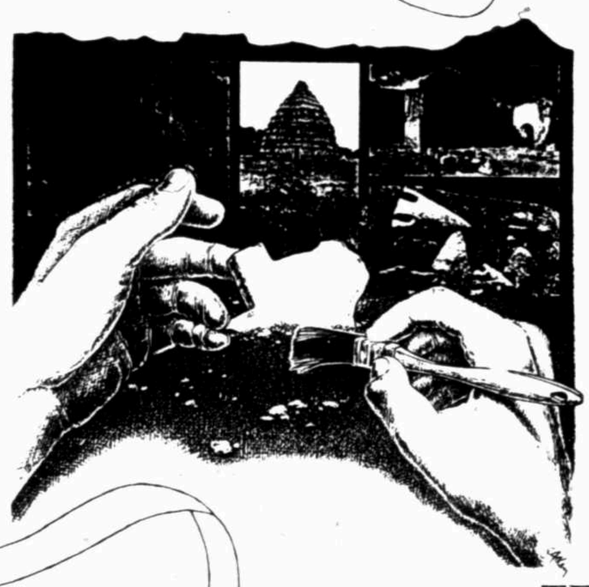

Her case will be considered by the IAAF at its meeting May 29-31 at Toronto.

"It has been a long, hard fight that was at times frustrating," Floyd told the Houston Chronicle in today's editions.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices ended lower Monday in seesaw trading that was influenced largely by technical forces within the petroleum market rather than outside developments.

Traders said the market's behavior was disconcerting partly because it was unexpected, since prices had strengthened considerably late last week and were widely expected to rise further this week.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate settled at $20.22 a barrel, down 22 cents from Friday.

Natural gas for May delivery closed at $1.270 per $1,000 cubic feet, down .24 cent.

Lower-grade sour crude for May delivery fell 24 cents a barrel to $17.80.

T-bills fall

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest level in 20 years.

The Treasury Department sold $11.4 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.60 percent, down from 3.95 percent last week. Another $11.4 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 3.73 percent, down from 4.02 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 3.46 percent on May 8, 1972. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 3.51 percent on Feb. 18, 1972.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose Monday following reports that senior Russian government officials had offered to resign.

In late trading in London, the dollar closed at 1.6550 German marks, up from 1.6375 late Friday.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.7630, down from $1.7655 late Friday.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 133.30 yen, up 1.11 yen from Friday's close.

Market rises

NEW YORK — The stock market settled higher Monday after a late buying spree capped an otherwise dull session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials added 14.53 points to close at 3,269.90. Much of that gain, however, was attributed to sharp rises in two stocks that comprise the index.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by about 11 to 9 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Chemical cuts prime to 6.25 percent

If nation's other banks follow suit, rate would be at lowest since 1976

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chemical Banking Corp. on Monday lowered its prime lending rate one-quarter point to 6.25 percent, but analysts were not sure if the cut would prompt more businesses to take out loans.

Other major banks did not immediately copy Chemical's action, which is effective immediately for both Chemical Bank and Manufacturers Hanover Trust, the big New York bank Chemical acquired last year.

If the other banks follow suit, the prime would be at its lowest level since Dec. 13, 1976.

The Federal Reserve Board decided Thursday to cut short-term interest rates.

Consumers and businesses have shied away from taking out new loans in recent months. Several economists and bank analysts agreed the lower rates probably won't increase loan demand.

"Credit quality is the primary consideration in lending money right now," said Sung Won Sohn, chief economist for Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis.

The Federal Reserve reported business loans by major New York banks fell by $565 million during the week of March 9 from a week earlier.

And a survey of 60 major domestic banks showed "a significant minority" reported business loan demand weakened between in November-January compared with the previous three months, the Fed said in a February report.

Financial markets had a subdued reaction to the move by Chemical, the nation's third-largest banking company.

The last cut in the prime rate, which is used to set interest rates on a wide range of business loans as well as adjustable rate mortgages, was on Dec. 20, 1991, when banks lowered the prime a full point to 6.5 percent.

Sohn said banks may delay cutting their prime rate until the Fed cuts its interest rate once more. Other economists said conditions are ripe now for others to follow Chemical.

"With the lower short-term interest rates and lower (certificate of deposit) rates, banks might be in little bit better condition, profit-wise, to swallow a reduction in the key rate," said Carol Stone, senior economist for Nomura Securities International Inc.

Officials tout alternative fuel at two-day fair

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials Monday opened an alternative fuels fair, saying development of vehicles powered by fuels other than gasoline or diesel is crucial to reducing pollution and boosting the Texas economy.

"Alternative fuels must be increasingly significant for the health of our economy, and for the health of our environment, and for the health of our children," Gov. Ann Richards said.

About 1,500 people were participating in the two-day Alternative Vehicle Fuels Market Fair and Symposium.

Richards, whose official car was converted to run on compressed natural gas, said that the use of cleaner burning fuels makes good environmental and economic sense.

The fair, sponsored by the Texas General Land Office, features numerous workshops and exhibits of alternative fuels, such as vehicles that run on propane, compressed natural gas or even electricity.

In opening remarks at the symposium, Richards also criticized federal officials for failing to put together a national energy plan to make the United States less dependent on imported oil.

"One year after we sent American troops to defend Kuwait and its oilfields we are not one step closer to that energy policy," she said.

Ford to spend $3 billion, add 1,000 workers

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. today announced about $3 billion worth of plant improvements and a net gain of about 1,000 jobs at plants in Kentucky and Ontario, Canada.

The announcement by the No. 2 automaker was hopeful news for the beleaguered American auto industry, which lately has been more accustomed to announcements of profound cutbacks, closings and sales slumps. The Big Three lost $7.6 billion last year, a record.

Ford said its plans include investing more than $900 million to retool and reequip its Oakville Assembly Plant near Toronto to produce a new minivan beginning in late 1993.

About half that amount already has been spent on a new paint facility.

Pizza Hut, franchisee agree to end dispute

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Pizza Hut Inc. has confirmed it will buy 236 Pizza Hut restaurants and delivery businesses from Texas franchisee Pizza Management Inc., ending years of legal wrangling.

Pizza Hut, in a statement issued Monday from its headquarters in Wichita, Kan., said details of the transaction with San Antonio-based Pizza Management would not be disclosed.

But published reports last weekend said Pizza Hut would pay approximately $125 million for the Pizza Management restaurants.

The San Antonio Light reported Pizza Management chairman Arturo Torres would keep $5 million in property and a $10 million toy division.

And The Wichita Eagle reported the deal involves cash and stock in Pizza Hut's parent company, Pepsico, worth a total of about $125 million.

"We are pleased to have resolved this situation with Mr. Torres in a manner acceptable to both parties. We wish Arturo the best of luck in his future business endeavors," Pizza Hut president Steven S. Reinemund in the Monday statement.

Pizza Management, one of Pizza Hut's largest franchisees, is the fifth-largest Hispanic-owned business in the United States, with sales of $150 million for the fiscal year that ended July 3, 1991.

Torres, a 55-year-old Cuban immigrant, started with Pizza Hut as a dishwasher at an Amarillo restaurant.

Pizza Management, which also owns 12 Taco Bell shops, has restaurants in Texas and five other states, plus the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and Spain. The company employees about 5,300 people.

The dispute with Pizza Hut centered around the franchise's attempt to sell a majority share of the company to the public in a stock offering. Pizza Hut blocked the move, leading to lawsuits from both sides.

Pizza Management's battle with Pizza Hut had gone on more than five years, during which time Torres accused Pizza Hut of being insensitive toward Hispanics.

"Our real measure of success will be the many Hispanic businesses and job opportunities that will flow from PMI's roots," Torres said. "I am happy that steps are being taken to increase Hispanic participation in the Pizza Hut system."

As part of the agreement, each side agreed to put up $5 million to help Hispanics buy Pizza Hut franchises, said Larry Klenda, an attorney for Pizza Management.

Raul Yzaguirre, president of the National Council of La Raza and a representative for Torres, helped negotiate the agreement and confirmed the settlement Friday to the San Antonio Light.

Yzaguirre said Pizza Hut will attempt to sell the franchises to Hispanics while also trying not to fire present employees.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Check risk, rates of Treasury securities vs. CDs

By Bill Doyle

Q: To increase our income, a friend and retired banker has recommended we replace our certificates of deposit with U.S. Treasury bonds and notes when the CDs mature. My wife doesn't want to do this, because these are "bonds." She is afraid we would lose the principal.

Doyle

Are bonds of this type good investments? Most importantly, are they safe?

A: If, by "good," you mean how much income a particular investment produces, your retired banker friend is off base. Although rates vary a bit from bank to bank, many CDs pay higher interest than Treasury securities with similar maturities.

As I pound out this column, the Treasury note due to mature in April 1997 is yielding 7.01 percent. You can get a higher rate than that on five-year CDs without too much shopping around.

However, your wife's worries are completely unfounded. Assuming she considers CDs safe, as she should, she can count U.S. Treasury securities supersafe.

Treasury securities are direct debt obligations of our federal government, which guarantees payment of interest and principal. Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. coverage of CDs and other deposits, while safe, is one step removed from that.

Treasury securities have other advantages over CDs. You can safely invest unlimited amounts in Treasuries, and you needn't worry about delays in receiving your money, as sometimes has happened with CDs when banks go bust.

Treasury securities are easy to buy. Using the "Treasury Direct" system, you make your purchases by mail. There are no commission charges or other fees. Your interest, as well as "discounts" on securities bought below face value, go by wire to your account at the local bank you designate. So do the face values of matured securities.

Q: When buying Treasury securities, how does one select the year and interest rate?

A: You can pick the year and often the month in which a Treasury note or bond will mature to coincide with the time at which you will need the money.

Through its auction process, the Treasury Department usually sells two-year and five-year notes every March, June, September and December; three-year notes every February, May, August and November; and seven-year notes every January, April, July and October. Treasury bonds of various maturities from three to 30 years are normally are sold every February, May, August and November.

You participate in a Treasury Department auction by submitting a "tender" – an offer to buy.

You can try to select the interest rate by submitting a competitive tender, in which you name the price you are willing to pay and the interest you are willing to accept. But that can backfire. If you bid too low a price and a correspondingly high interest rate, your tender will be rejected. If your bid is very high, you will get the securities but you will pay too much.

That's why it's smart for an individual investor to submit a non-competitive tender, which does not name a price or interest rate. Non-competitive tenders for amounts up to $1 million are automatically accepted at an auction's average price, determined by bids from large institutional investors.

Q: What address do I deal with when purchasing Treasury securities through the Treasury Direct system?

A: That depends on where you live. You open your Treasury Direct account through the Federal Reserve Bank or branch serving your area. Because there are 12 Federal Reserve Banks and 25 branches around the country, the list of addresses is too long to be printed here.

Your local bank or savings and loan association can give you the name and address of the Fed bank or branch with which it deals. That's the one for you.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

"I thought hard about it the last couple of weeks. I had to give it serious consideration," he said. "Hey, I'll still be here. I'm just going across the street."

Carnesecca will stay on as an assistant to the President for community relations.

"We hope Lou will serve as our ambassador to New York City," said Rev. Donald J. Harrington, the school president.

Carnesecca becomes the second longtime Big East coach to leave in the last two weeks. Rollie Massimino left Villanova for UNLV.

"Things can't last forever," Carnesecca said. "The league will go on and prosper. Why? Because of the players and the special relationship the schools have with each other."

Vandals plunder nation's library books for valuable prints, photos

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Rare collections of some of the nation's great treasures — hand-colored centuries-old prints, detailed architectural drawings and fine early photographs — are disappearing from library books across the country, pages simply sliced out of their bindings, the empty covers left behind by thieves plundering the easy pickings.

But even as these treasures slip away, the nation's library associations are just beginning to recognize the enormity of the problem.

Still, no one seems able to say how much irreplaceable material has been stolen, much less how the problem can be fought.

One reason for this is that in libraries with thousands, or even millions, of volumes there is not enough staff or money to examine books that have laid on shelves for decades. So damage is often undiscovered until someone asks to see a book.

But now some libraries around the country have begun random checks of their rare book collections, and nearly every time they find something heartbreaking.

At the Library of Congress last year, librarians did not know that a volume of rare early photographs was missing until an art dealer offered to sell them a copy.

Librarians knew the book was so unusual that they went to check their copy. They found its binding, but the photographs had been cut out.

Once library officials began to investigate last year, they discovered tremendous theft and mutilation of valuable books.

So last week, for the first time in its history, the Library of Congress announced it was permanently closing its stacks to the general public.

Outside Jane Van Nimmen's office at the Library of Congress, rows of book carts hold aged volumes; a tag marked "mutilated" sticks out of each.

Mrs. Van Nimmen, a fine arts bibliographer, leafed through a book printed in 1852 containing brilliant color plates showing the Aya Sofia mosque in Constantinople and another on Navajo blankets.

The mosque book had been used to hide 19th-century maps of California cut from another book. The Navajo and French photographs books were just empty bindings.

"This is a tragic loss to the country," she said.

Librarians maintain that the thefts rose dramatically in the 1980s at the same time as the prices of painting and other fine arts skyrocketed.

"These thieves have no overhead," Mrs. Van Nimmen said. "It's extraordinary profit for them. The more people will pay at auction, the more it encourages thieves to rip us off."

Besides closing its stacks, the library is also building cages around its fine-arts book collection. But Library of Congress officials have discovered that they are not the only target for theft.

Diane Kresh, the library's manager of general collections said in an interview, "We have been talking to other libraries, and realized we're not any worse off than others, or any more behind in what we are doing to stop it."

Thieves are also stealing popular magazines, current fiction and reference books from public libraries across the country.

But more damaging to national culture are thefts from state archives, research and university libraries. These institutions rarely look to see how much of their collections have been stolen.

"Librarians do pursue research, but for whatever reason, I am not aware of anyone pursuing this issue," said Susan Allen, head of the special collections at the Claremont Colleges' Honnold Library in California. Ms. Allen is chairwoman of the American Library Association's security committee.

So no one can place a dollar figure on the losses, or say what percentage of stolen items are eventually retreived.

"The losses are in the millions, easily," said Katherine Leab, a publisher who runs the nation's only database for stolen books, called Bookline Alert: Missing Books and Manuscripts.

DEAR ABBY

Old friends can't find words to console convict's parents

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The son of our former neighbors died recently. I'll call him "John." There was no funeral service, no memorial service, and no obituary in the local newspaper.

Van Buren

My heart aches for John's parents. I didn't send a sympathy card, or even make a telephone call, because I was confused as to the "right" thing to do. Let me explain:

John was found guilty of murder, and he was executed by the state. I never knew him as an adult, but I remember him as a little boy who came to our house to play with our children. He was a lovable child who sang songs with our daughter and made her laugh. John's parents were decent, churchgoing people, and no one could have asked for better neighbors.

What happened later in John's life, we do not know. But I do know that his parents must have died a thousand deaths before their son was put to death.

And so, to all parents who have lost a child in this tragic way, and to all their friends — like me — who said nothing because we didn't know what to say, I'd like to tell you now, "I'm sorry." — OLD NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: You are a kind and compassionate person. Thank you for a very moving letter. Many parents will identify with it and find comfort and consolation in your words.

It is not too late to share your happy memories of long ago with these bereaved parents. Do not hesitate to write them a message of condolence. They need to hear what you want to share.

DEAR ABBY: I thought I'd seen everything in your column, but this problem is unique.

A little background: I'm a 48-year-old man with a 22-year-old son, whom I raised as a single parent. I thoroughly enjoyed being a parent and doing domestic chores, so I went to school last year to get my certificate as a "child care specialist" — otherwise known as a "nanny."

Frankly, I think the $2,000 in tuition was wasted. Since I graduated, I've sent out 50 resumes and made 10 to 20 phone calls a week. So far, only one person has called back. When I do get a live person instead of a recording, it's always, "Oh, we wanted a woman!" Or, "If we didn't have daughters, we might consider you" — despite the fact that the three families I've worked for have all had girls.

Abby, if women want to eliminate sexism in our culture, I think they should start at their own doorsteps. If we want our nation to become kinder and gentler, we have to accept men as caring and nurturing individuals.

I know you can't do anything about society's attitudes, but I feel better just being able to unload this. Thanks for listening. — GARY JONES, BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

DEAR GARY: Your situation is a new twist, but "society" and our culture do not easily accept male nannies. (They should be called "mannies.") I have no doubt about your being every bit as qualified as a female for that position. Let's hope that silly prejudice is done away with soon. Tomorrow is not too soon.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Video dashboard will drive me from car

By Erma Bombeck

No matter how technology threatened other professions, I always knew my job was safe.

I alone was the one who could help my husband drive a car. If it weren't for me, he wouldn't know where to turn, what lane to switch to, how low we were on gas or when we were lost. I was the only one he could turn to.

Bombeck

Until last week. Now my very existence is being threatened by a group of test rental cars (Oldsmobile Toronados) with a video dashboard that does all of that and more. Push a button, and it will show fuel consumption, flash alternative routes and maps, travel times and locations of highway tieups. It will tell you how to get to your destination and provide your arrival time with turn-by-turn directions along the way. When the car is parked, it will even offer information on tourist attractions, hotels and restaurants. There is a cellular phone programmed to call these attractions.

It's only a matter of time before these features become standard on automobiles.

I don't want to burden anyone with my problem, but what am I supposed to do now in a car? Just sit there? You might as well put a sign on the rear window, "BORED ON BOARD."

We were just getting to the point where our respective duties in a car were becoming automatic. My husband was in charge of steering, working the brake and accelerator and the windows. That sounds like a lot until you consider that I had considerable input into when he worked the brake and the accelerator and was the adviser on when the windows should be up or down. I assumed complete charge of directions and did colorful commentary on what he was missing by keeping his eyes glued to the road.

I had charge of the radio dials and grabbed his foam cup of hot coffee from his hands when he made a left turn. I made sure he got in the left lane the minute he left our house so that he could make his turn onto Lincoln. I made judgment calls on crummy drivers and blew the horn to let them know they had just pulled in front of us. The heater and the air were under my jurisdiction. I told him when he was hungry and when he had to stop to go to the bathroom.

Now all I'm left with is a dashboard computer satellite to punch out and whine, "Stop the car: It's blinking 12 again!"

Agents find cache of phony art after gallery arrest

By Jim Doyle
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA ROSA, Calif. — Federal agents pursuing an international art fraud case have uncovered a cache of apparently bogus lithographs and other prints of 20th century masters inside two storage lockers.

Authorities say the art collection belongs to Ted Robertson, 46, a former Calistoga gallery owner whom U.S. postal inspectors have described in court papers as a "major dealer of counterfeit art."

On Wednesday, U.S. postal inspectors found hundreds of images purportedly created by Marc Chagall, Pablo Picasso and other modern artists in two padlocked storage areas that were rented by Robertson and his associates in Santa Rosa.

Agents also carted away business and computer records from Robertson's defunct Calistoga, Calif., gallery.

Acting on a U.S. warrant, Robertson was arrested by French police and Interpol agents last month in Paris. He had moved to France a year ago after closing his gallery in Calistoga.

During a search of his home in Paris, authorities seized five paintings including works purportedly by Picasso and Joan Miro.

Robertson was charged in February in a criminal complaint in Brooklyn, N.Y., with trying to sell phony artworks to an undercover postal inspector posing as an art dealer.

The Robertson case is part of a probe of an international counterfeit ring that allegedly has sold millions of dollars of counterfeit art.

In a related development, postal inspectors in January seized a warehouse on Long Island that was filled with 75,000 fake prints of modern masters. The collection belonged to Hilda Amiel, the widow of a deceased art dealer.

Postal inspectors have interviewed 11 art collectors in the United States and abroad who lost a total of "more than $500,000" in purchases of counterfeit artwork from Robertson, according to affidavit that was made public Thursday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco.

According to the affidavit:

Ted Robertson, and his wife, Elizabeth Quinn Robertson, owned an art business in the 1980s known as Vest-Art and Roma Editions in Laguna Beach, Calif. They moved their business to Calistoga in 1990 and called their new gallery Art of the Century.

In one meeting with an undercover agent, Robertson allegedly said that he had paid counterfeiters $10,000 to forge two Chagall drawings. In another meeting, he said he had obtained counterfeit Picasso prints "from an individual who had invented a machine capable of reproducing high-quality fake prints."

Authorities began to investigate Robertson a year ago after Larry Steinman, owner of the Carol Lawrence Galleries in Beverly Hills, alerted police that Robertson and another New York art dealer had sold him a counterfeit image of Chagall's "Le Grand Voyage."

"He's obviously connected to some good forgers," Steinman said. "This piece was an excellent, exact copy of the original. It was so good that it would defy an expert."

Steinman described Robertson as a "very nice, easygoing, distinguished guy who seems to be very knowledgeable about the art business."

Steinman had bought the pen and ink drawing — an impressionistic image of Christ on the cross — for $11,500. He then resold the drawing to Jacques Levy, a French citizen who runs an art brokerage in Tokyo, who determined that it was a counterfeit.

Levy and Steinman are in a legal dispute over who must absorb the loss.

Hollywood goes to the dogs

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — In these dog-eat-dog times, some people are teaching their pooches to bring home the bacon — by barking on cue, wolfing down pet food or just looking cute in front of a camera.

The owners of more than 20 pets spent Thursday night learning tips that might get their dogs and cats into TV, theater or advertising jobs.

For three hours, animal talent agent Barbara Weir put the animals through the paces of how "Your Pet Can Be a Television Star," at $29 per furry participant.

"Don't take the dog to anyone until it can sit still for five minutes in any situation," Weir told the class.

But how much can Fido earn for sitting still?

Not enough to ride in a limo. A champion white Bichon Frise lapdog once earned $30 for posing near some expensive luggage — but owner Judith Greer spent $70 on grooming and cab fares.

For a basic two-hour stint for a magazine ad an animal generally can earn about $100, Weir said, and for a daylong TV commercial, no more than $500.

"There's no union, no residuals. So don't quit your day jobs," the agent told her students.

"You can't do much with cats. They do what they want to do," Weir added.

But you can do plenty with rats. One such client of her All-Tame Animals agency was hired to faint on cue for a cleanser commercial, said Diane Kossover, associate director of All-Time.

Beauty is a must for human models, but not for beasts.

"It doesn't matter how attractive the dog is, it's what's marketable," said Weir. These days, what sells are Dalmatians, golden retrievers and just plain mutts.

Olive was a stray dog with a pellet gun wound when Megan Whiting rescued her. Now she can turn the television on and off on command and fetch a can of soda from the refrigerator.

"I would take a day off from work if she got a job," said Whiting.

Weir's shaggy 10-year-old mixed-breed, Fancy, whose credits include the "Cosby" show and "Sesame Street," starred this season in Act I of Mozart's opera "Don Giovanni" at the Metropolitan Opera.

All-Tame also manages the horse that carries tenor Placido Domingo onto the stage of the Met in this month's production of Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West."

Courts should not use DNA typing, report says

By Gina Kolata
N.Y. Times News Service

A long-awaited federal report on a powerful new genetic technique for identifying criminal suspects says it should not be allowed in court in the future unless a more scientific basis is established.

In principle, the technique, known as DNA fingerprinting or DNA typing, allows a person to be identified from the tiniest scraps of body tissue at the scene of a crime, whether a drop of dried semen, a strand of hair or a spatter of blood. The technique relies on the fact that each person's DNA, the genetic material, is unique.

The new report, by the National Academy of Sciences, says courts should cease to admit DNA evidence until laboratory standards have been tightened and the technique has been established on a stronger scientific basis.

The report says though the forensic technology is valid in principle, serious questions have been raised about the way it has been used. It adds the method is potentially too powerful and too important for its development and use to be left solely in the hands of prosecutors and law-enforcement officials.

Instead, the report says, it must be regulated and controlled by scientists and federal agencies that have no stake in the method's success or failure.

The report, by a 12-member panel of scientific and legal experts, is to be issued by the academy on Thursday.

Ever since DNA typing was introduced in American courts in the late 1980s, it has been the subject of bitter disputes. The technique has been vigorously embraced by some prosecutors because of its scientific basis and persuasiveness to juries. But defense lawyers have often fought it because they fear it could persuade jurors to overlook any other evidence.

Most courts have agreed to admit DNA evidence and hundreds of cases that relied on DNA fingerprinting have been tried. But critics have argued the method is not as conclusive as it appears and it is not yet ready to serve as evidence in court.

Some legal experts said the report would have an immediate impact. "Any defense lawyers who are worth their salt will ask appellate courts to take a look at this," said Dr. William Thompson, a lawyer and molecular biologist at the University of California at Irvine. He said the report "raises serious concerns about whether DNA tests as they are currently done meet the standards for admissibility in court."

Thompson, who has testified for the defense in cases involving DNA, added although the committee carefully avoided commenting on DNA cases that had already gone to trial, the recommendation that courts in the future insist on strict scientific standards "is a very subtle and cautious way of saying we were too hasty."

Peter Neufeld, a New York lawyer who has opposed DNA typing, said many courts had allowed the use of the technique on the basis of state court rulings that have held that there is a consensus among scientists that it was valid. He said the new report would reopen those decisions.

Rockne Harmon, a prosecutor in Alameda County, Calif., who has handled DNA cases, agreed defense lawyers would use the report to attack DNA typing evidence, but described the report as "irresponsible" because it did not take a stand on the DNA evidence that had already been used in court.

The FBI refused to comment on the report, as did the two leading laboratories that undertake DNA typing. Half a dozen proponents of DNA typing either refused to comment until they had read the report or did not return telephone calls.

Studies debate sex bias in heart care treatment

DALLAS (AP) — Women with heart trouble are treated less aggressively than men because they often are too old or ill for risky procedures, not because of sex bias, suggest two studies released Monday.

However, two other studies came to opposite conclusions: Even when they are the same age and condition as male heart victims, women are less likely to receive the most up-to-date care.

Statistics clearly show women are treated less aggressively for heart problems. The question is why. And the conflicting results of the latest round of studies demonstrate the difficulty in sorting this out.

The subject received prominent attention at the annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology, which began Monday.

Among those who believe sex bias is a factor include Dr. Bernadine Healy, a cardiologist who heads the National Institutes of Health. She has called it the "Yentl syndrome," a reference to Isaac Bashevis Singer's short story about a young woman who had to disguise herself as a man to study the Talmud.

Women are less likely than men to receive one of the most important heart tests — the angiogram. These X-ray movies, taken by releasing dye into the heart, are used to determine whether blockages in arteries need to be fixed. When serious blockages are found, people often undergo angioplasty, which uses a balloon to clear the arteries, or coronary bypass operations. Women are less likely to receive either of these treatments.

However, people who are older or have severe heart disease or complications are also less likely to have these demanding tests and procedures. All the studies asked whether factors of age and complications could explain the differences between men and women.

Women who suffer their first heart attack are typically 10 years older than men.

"It's a truly complex issue," said Dr. Bernard J. Gersh of the Mayo Clinic, coauthor of one of the studies. "We are not ready yet to make an indictment."

Among the studies presented:

■ Dr. Vivek K. Varma and colleagues from the University of Alabama reviewed the records of 1,012 men and women hospitalized with heart attacks. While the women received fewer procedures, the difference could be explained entirely by their greater age, more severe heart disease and complications such as diabetes and high blood pressure.

"We found no difference between men and women," Varma said.

■ A similar but larger study, conducted by Dr. John B. Kostis of Robert Wood Johnson Medical School in New Brunswick, N.J., reviewed 42,595 heart attack victims in New Jersey over a two-year period.

While complications and age were important factors, he found that when these were taken into account, men were still about 25 percent more likely to be given high-tech procedures.
