Carter Hints Peace Compromise Near

President, Begin Hold 'Frank' Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — President Carter, strongly hinting that a peace accord is nearing completion, carried Egypt's proposals to dinner and crucial talks Saturday night with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

The two leaders held "frank" talks for an hour and a half in Begin's home after dinner, according to an Israeli spokesman.

The president, Begin and their advisers scheduled a two-hour meeting in the prime minister's office today in addition to ceremonial activities.

Earlier Saturday, Carter made an optimistic statement upon arrival in Tel Aviv, then encountered hundreds of demonstrators on his motorcade route despite an official ban on protests. One pelted his car with an egg.

"I have good reason to hope that the goal can now be reached," the president declared of his quest for a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel. "I look forward to completing the urgent business at hand on this visit."

Carter spoke at Ben Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv before driving to Jerusalem for traditional Jewish bread-and-wine greetings from Mayor Teddy Kollek. Visitors usually receive a gift of bread and salt but wine is substituted on special occasions.

As he left Egypt, the American president asked Egypt's Anwar Sadat to pray for peace.

There were indications Israeli leadership was in no mood to make further concessions. Hardliners are convinced Israel has capitulated to American pressure. And American officials said that while Carter has strong hopes, he must be cautious.

Geula Cohen, the fiery Parliament member around whom hawks have rallied, said she would boycott all official ceremonies with Carter. "I will not shake the hand that puts pressure on Israel," she declared.

On the streets, hundreds of persons

PARADISE, Wash. (AP) — The bodies of mountaineer Willi Unsoeld and an Evergreen State College student, killed in an avalanche last Sunday, were recovered Saturday from the slopes of Mount Rainier.

Iranian Crown Prince's Departure Likely Today

CROWN PRINCE Reza Pahlavi, a student flier at Reese Air Force Base and Lubbock resident since last summer, today is to leave the Hub City for Morocco, where other members of his family are living in the wake of a religious uprising in Iran.

Prince Reza's departure has been rumored imminent since Thursday. Saturday sources that continued to ask anonymity reaffirmed that the youthful son of the shah will leave Lubbock sometime today.

The prince received his pilot's wings Friday in a private ceremony at Reese. An Air Force spokesman said the prince was able to complete the 50-week course in eight months because he already was an accomplished flier when he arrived for jet pilot training.

Plans for the prince's departure apparently have been in the works for more than a week. It is not known if the prince will make any stops between here and Morocco.

Girl, 13, Spelling Bee Winner Despite Crucial Missed Word

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A CHRIST the King Junior High School student walked away with the 1979 Lubbock County Spelling Bee championship after 3 1/2 hours of competition Saturday in Evans Junior High School Auditorium.

Hien Nguyen, 13-year-old daughter of Vuong Nguyen of 1918-D 6th St., won the title in the 19th round when she correctly spelled "hypochondriac."

The eighth-grader battled for the title with Sheldon Klock III during the last seven rounds of the bee. Sheldon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Klock Jr. and an eighth grade student at Smylie Wilson Junior High.

Fifty-four local school winners began the bee, but by the beginning of the eighth round, all but five spellers had dropped out of the contest. Hien and Sheldon were singled out as the top as the remaining spellers by the beginning of the 12th round of competition.

During the 17th round, Hien misspelled "hemophilia," spelling it "hemaphilia." Sheldon also misspelled it and Hien was given the word "herpetology." She misspelled it and Sheldon went on to spell it correctly.

The next word, "hesperidium," offered Sheldon the opportunity to win the spelling bee. But he spelled the word "hesperidian," and gave Hien another chance.

Hien correctly spelled the word and went on to spell "hypochondriac" to clinch this year's county championship.

Among the words correctly spelled by Hien were "corpulent," "delicatessen," "ebullient," "emaciation," "equestrienne," "fascism," "gaucherie," and "hagiography."

As winner of the county spelling bee, Hien will participate in the Lubbock Regional Spelling Bee March 31. That event will begin at 1 p.m. in Moody Auditorium on the Lubbock Christian College Campus.

Sponsored by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, spelling bee winners from 20 area counties will be involved in this year's regional bee. The winner of that contest will win an expense-paid trip to Washington, D.C., to compete in the National Spelling Bee June 4-8.

James V. Baker was this year's county bee director. Judges were Wayne Dickey, Clarence Priestly and Anita Smither.

Pronouncer was Sharon Harris. Drew Foster was dictionary judge and Drew Jackson was recording judge.

Lucy Gutierrez served as the stage hostess and Andy Turner and Joe Williams were audience hosts. The stage was decorated with a floral arrangement by Davis Floral Co.

Alien Arrests Spark Blockade Of Bridges

EL PASO (AP) — Hundreds of Mexican citizens, angered at a U.S. crackdown against illegal aliens, blocked three international bridges Saturday and tore down three American flags, casting them into the Rio Grande.

A 10-year-old Mexican girl was run down and killed at the "Bridge of the Americas" Saturday when two American women in a car allegedly tried to ram their way through the barricades from the El Paso to Juarez, Mexico, side of the international bridge.

One of the two women, a U.S. citizen who lives in Juarez, has been arrested in the death of Lara Patricia Favela-Chavez, according to Pedro Munoz, a radio operator for the Mexican Federal Highway Patrol.

The protest ended Saturday night, when the demonstrators withdrew, moving cars that had been blocking the bridges and allowing traffic to cross. Only one bridge into Juarez, Mexico was open during the protest.

At one point, an estimated 650 protesters were demonstrating at the three bridges. A few carried signs, some cheered, and some listened to speakers, but witnesses said the crowds were mostly orderly. No arrests were reported.

Auto traffic was blocked going and coming, but a few pedestrians with passports were allowed to cross. American officials feared the demonstration was not over.

"There are rumors that the protesters may try it again tomorrow," said Charles Perez, district director of the INS here.

El Paso Mayor Ray Salazar complained bitterly about the crackdown by federal border guards and fired an urgent telegram to Immigration and Naturalization Director Leonel Castillo, asking him to report to El Paso.

But Perez defended the arrests Friday of illegal aliens, blaming the trouble on bad timing.

"We returned about 150 people to Mexico that our criminal investigators had apprehended for being in the United

Lubbock Migrant Training Firm Stripped Of $1 Million Contract

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE GOVERNOR'S Office on Migrant Affairs, citing audit problems and management instability, has canceled its $1 million contract with Llano Estacado, a Lubbock-based organization that provides job training to migrants.

However, said Llano Estacado executive director Eliseo Solis, the approximately 200 clients now enrolled in training classes will not be affected by the termination, which becomes effective March 31.

He explained that another migrant agency, Motivation, Education and Training, Inc., will assume the contract for the rest of the fiscal year, so training will be uninterrupted.

Ralph Quintanilla, acting executive director of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs, told The Avalanche-Journal that because of Llano Estacado's recurring bookkeeping discrepancies, small area of influence and rapid turnover of directors, he decided to annul the contract six months before it was to end.

He explained that the Department of Community Affairs recently ordered the migrant affairs office to "clean up its act," meaning eliminate inefficient programs. Instead of subcontracting with nine agencies, as is done now, the office will use two, he said.

"I just didn't feel like they (Llano Estacado) were sufficiently qualified" to handle an expanded program, Quintanilla said.

Not only has the Lubbock agency no experience outside the immediate area, he explained, but its "lack of accepted accounting procedures" caused a total of $595,389 to be "lost" from 1975 through December 1977.

Quintanilla stressed he has found no evidence of fraud. "As far as I'm concerned, they (the funds) were spent on training, but it (Llano Estacado) cannot document it," he said.

"As far as (the U.S. Department of Labor) is concerned, the funds are not accounted for," he said.

The 1978 audit is not complete, he added.

Llano Estacado also has changed directors several times in the past few years, which is not good for the program, he said.

The Texas Migrant Council will join Motivation, Education and Training Inc. as a subcontractor for federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act funds, which are funneled through the migrant affairs office for migrant training.

Quintanilla said the Plainview agency will open a Lubbock branch. He said it "already covers most of the state with manpower services" and simply will combine the grant that was Llano Estacado's with the grant it already has from the Labor Department.

It will be a simple case of "administering another grant," Quintanilla added.

Solis doesn't believe the Plainview group is a good replacement for Llano Estacado.

"They don't have established contacts throughout the agencies here," he explained. "They will have to establish them. What we're saying is we are already established. We have the working relationships. They would have to do it from scratch."

Also, Solis said, "We are the only agency directly involved with the (migrant) farmworkers in the area."

If the contract sitution remains the same — and Quintanilla said he does not plan to change his mind about it — Llano Estacado will be left to operate on only one grant, which will mean a "significant staffing cutback," Solis said.

About five employees would have to be fired, Solis said, adding he would hope the new contractor would hire them for its Lubbock office.

The migrant affairs office contract, which Llano Estacado has had for four years, was the agency's major funding source, Solis acknowledged.

With it gone, the organization will have only a grant from the Colonias Del Valle for a nutrition and energy conservation program, he said.

That contract ends Sept. 31, and Llano Estacado, which Solis said serves a 10-county area, will have to find another funding source.

Midterm School Busing Switch Problems Cited

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE MIDTERM flip-flop of students, a controversial element of Lubbock's school desegregation plan, created more problems than school administrators like to admit, the leader of the local anti-busing movement says.

Dan Seale said many children who were required to change elementary schools in January found themselves far behind their new classmates and had to catch up fast or risk getting poor grades.

Other students, Seale said, found themselves way ahead academically and thus were held back during the early part of the second semester.

And some pupils also were confronted with having to adapt to different textbooks and different teaching methods, the president of the local chapter of the National Association for Neighborhood Schools added.

Seale detailed three such incidents, one involving his own daughter, in a written critique of the midterm switchover. But, he contends, school administrators have dismissed the problems as "isolated cases."

"Isolated instances? I say they're not. If I can document three just from casual conversations with parents, I know there are more out there," Seale said.

He said he is inviting parents who have had similar problems with the desegregation plan to contact local officials of the National Association for Neighborhood Schools. The chapter will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the First Federal Savings & Loan Association branch office, 2220 34th St., to discuss such complaints and map anti-busing political strategy.

At the elementary level, the court-ordered desegregation plan involves a cross-assignment between six minority-area schools and 18 white-area schools.

The minority campuses are busing each minority student every other year to one of six white schools; the white campuses are busing each white student for one se-

Sterilized Women Seeking Reversals

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE FIRST reverse sterilization operations on women at Health Sciences Center Hospital were performed in January, and though it will take at least nine months to see if the operations result in infants, the two women involved have a 50 to 60 percent chance of pregnancy.

Reversing a sterilization operation is never a guarantee to pregnancy, but the method of sterilization used on the woman can make a difference in the success rate for reversal.

Of the three methods of female sterilization, tubal ligation, laparoscopic sterilization and hysterectomy, the latter is not reversible.

Tubal ligation is reversible in 15 to 20 percent of cases, Dr. Wayne Heine, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine, said.

The fallopian tubes are either cut or cauterized in a tubal ligation.

"So much tube is destroyed there is only about one out of five cases that you can attempt to reverse," Heine said.

Success rates in reversing a laproscopic sterilization are higher. Often called the "Band-Aid" operation because it can be done without an overnight stay at a hospital and it requires only a small bandage to cover the incision, a laproscopic sterilization can be performed in one of two ways:

Sometimes the tubes are cauterized or the physician may use a loop, similar to a rubber band, to tie the tubes.

In either case, the physician inserts a scope through the navel and makes a small incision in the abdomen to implant the loop or perform the cauterization.

The loop method means that in 80 percent of cases there is enough tube intact to rejoin.

LISD Rises From Pay 'Cellar'

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Because of locally funded pay hikes last summer, salary levels of experienced teachers here have risen a few notches on the chart of wages paid career educators in other large Texas school systems, according to a Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) survey.

The Lubbock Independent School District moved from the bottom to almost the middle of the pack in what it pays its experienced instructors, the survey indicated.

However, Lubbock continues to lag behind other urban districts in starting salaries for teachers, the TSTA study showed.

The city's beginning teachers, who in 1978 were granted smaller pay raises than experienced educators, advanced only a few notches in the statewide salary ranking.

The vast majority of urban school systems continue to offer beginning teachers a higher salary than Lubbock offers, TSTA said.

Meanwhile, teachers from Lubbock and across the state were in Austin last week to show their support for the TSTA's proposed school finance bill. The Senate Education Committee held a hearing on the proposed legislation, carried by Sen. W.E. Snelson of Midland.

The Lubbock Educators Association and Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association each sent two members to Austin. State Sen. E.L. Short, who represents Lubbock, is a co-sponsor of the TSTA bill.

The bill would raise the state-mandated base pay for teachers by about $1,500.

Gov. Bill Clements wants to hold teachers' raises to about half of that. Clements says teachers should get the same pay hikes as regular state employees — a recommended 5.1 percent.

Teacher salaries in Texas are set by two mechanisms. First, the legislature — as part of a biennial school finance bill — adopts a base salary scale, representing the minimum local districts must pay. The ditricts then may supplement the base pay with local funds.

The state base pay for teachers with bachelor's degrees currently ranges from $8,540 for beginners to $13,380 for top experienced teachers. The minimum salaries for educators with master's degrees run from $9,110 for beginners to $15,090 for the most experienced instructors.

Those figures represent increases of $80 to $150 over the previous year's base salaries.

The Lubbock school district in past years paid a local increment — a supplement to the state base — of $500, $700 and $1,000, depending on experience and academic degrees.

For the current year, the district has increased the local increments to $700, $1,225 and $1,475 above the state minimums.

Consequently, Lubbock's ranking with other urban school districts has improved — because most of them did not boost their local supplements as much last summer, the TSTA study showed.

In the 1977-78 school year, Lubbock started baccalaureate-level teachers at $8,960. According to TSTA, that was one of the lowest salaries among the 39 Texas school systems enrolling 15,000 or more students.

Only Edgewood and Laredo (both at $8,460) paid beginning teachers less than Lubbock did in 1977-78, the survey indicated.

For the 1978-79 year, with the larger local supplement, Lubbock is offering beginners with bachelor's degrees $9,240. That's what Abilene, Corpus Christi and El Paso also are paying. And it's higher than four districts — Tyler, Ysleta (El Paso), Laredo and Edgewood.

Still, 31 of the state's 39 largest school districts continue to pay beginning teachers more than Lubbock does. They range from Goose Creek (Baytown) at $11,476, to Killeen at $9,250. Included in the group are Midland ($10,675), Odessa ($10,450) and Amarillo ($9,440).

Also on the baccalaureate scale, Lubbock last year paid its most experienced teachers $13,950. That was tied with Abilene, Amarillo and El Paso, was more than Conroe, Brownsville, Goose Creek and Laredo, but was less than the other 31 districts.

This year, Lubbock's salary for top experienced teachers with bachelor's degrees is $14,605. That is more than what 16 districts pay — Plano, Richardson, Harlandale (San Antonio), Garland, North Forest (Houston), Wichita Falls, Conroe, Tyler, Ysleta, Corpus Christi, Brownsville, Edgewood, Killeen, Abilene, El Paso and Laredo.

Twenty-two of the urban districts continue to pay most-experienced bachelor's-degree teachers more than Lubbock. They range from Midland ($18,150) to Arlington ($14,730). Included is Amarillo ($14,927).

Salaries for teachers with master's degrees follow the same pattern.

Last year, the Lubbock school system started such teachers at $9,520 — higher than only two of the 39 large school districts.

This year, Lubbock has raised its beginning master's-degree salary to $9,810. That's tied with two districts, better than four others, but still less than 32 districts.

In 1977-78, Lubbock paid most experienced teachers with master's degrees $15,380. That was the same as one other district, better than nine but less than 28.

In 1978-79, Lubbock pays its most experienced master's-degree teachers $16,565 — an amount higher than 16 districts but lower than 22.

The salary comparisons do not take into account some important factors, however. For one thing, per-capita income in Lubbock is generally lower than in other Texas cities.

Also, the Lubbock school district offers advantages many districts do not. Lubbock pays part of school employees' health insurance, and offers teachers a bonus for college credits beyond the baccalaureate and master's levels.

Armadillo Touted As State Mammal

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Former Rep., now District Judge. Neil Caldwell once drew a cartoon showing a scowling lawmaker looking down his nose and announcing that passing legislation is "serious business."

Usually, that's true.

But while there are (literally) life and death issues for the 66th Legislative to deal with, there also is a certain amount of, well, frankly, trivia — but interesting trivia.

Take, for instance, Houston Rep. Don Henderson's bill to name the nine-banded armadillo as the Official Texas State Mammal.

Texas already has a number of "Official" this-and-thats, including (if memory serves, one learned in elementary school), the Official State Bird (mimus polyglottos, or mockingbird); the "Lupinus Texensis and any other variety of bluebonnet"; the pecan tree; the motto "Friendship," and so on.

We have an Official State Stone — petrified palmwood — and an Official State Dish, Chili (which, properly made, should be capitalized), that latter courtesy of the 1977 Legislature (which saw some controversy arise over the proposal from gumbo-loving East Texans).

There's also an Official State Grass — sideoats gamma; and even an Official State Gem, topaz (which, incidentally, is found in the Llano Uplift area).

But, as Henderson notes, Texas lacks an Official State Mammal — and he argues the nine-banded armadillo is well-suited as that choice, citing its lack of identification with partisan groups, such as is the case with the longhorn and the horned frog.

Moreover, he contends, the armadillo is representative Texan in its toughness, durability and persistence.

Henderson is entitled to some poetic license, naturally, in representing his constituents in this matter.

The armadillo, admittedly, is a fairly Texan symbol — being celebrated with beer advertising, music, poetry (of a sort), jewelry, bumper and car window stickers, sweatshirts, and, an international "confab" (at least until recently) in Victoria.

It also, Henderson notes, contributes to research in leprosy.

It may be barbecued (and really isn't bad that way).

Armadillos have other uses as well — and if half the tales told about them are true, they've been valuable to Texans in unexpected ways.

One incident recounted to the writer involves an irritated editor who had been given (as a joke) a fictitious obituary by a funeral home director.

The editor paid to have an armadillo released in the loft over the funeral home during services — with the armadillo turning over chairs, while pursued by unhappy employees, to the consternation of those below.

A few years back, Jim Kaster, then an El Paso lawmaker and now an aide to Gov. Bill Clements, sponsored legislation to have the ladybug declared the Official State Insect.

The insect, Kaster argued, is useful, and really isn't as fearful of fires as the old nursery rhyme would have us believe.

Besides, he said, one of his elementary school constituents had asked him to sponsor the resolution, and he felt she was as entitled to representation as anyone else in his district.

Henderson is doing much the same thing for students in his district — and in a way, it speaks well for the legislative system.

Henderson also carrying his share of serious legislation — including such things as a self-insurance plan for worker's compensation insurance.

Years from now, Henderson probably won't be remembered for passing, or failing to pass, HB 438 — although that measure may affect the lives of many Texas workers.

But he is likely to be remembered by his young constituents as The Father of the Official State Mammal.

And, considering all the other possible things he and other lawmakers could be — or are — known as, that's not a bad deal.

Curious Weather Surprises Lubbock

The weather caught many Lubbock residents by surprise Saturday morning, with a combination of rain, sleet and light snow pelting the city overnight.

Lubbock International Airport reported a total accumulation of a half inch of precipitation, but late risers Saturday might have had no idea any moisture had appeared during the night as skies quickly cleared and the temperature rapidly moved into the mid 50s.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with highs in the upper 60s, as the weather continues to warm from the sudden cold snap of Friday. Lows tonight are expected to be near 40 degrees, with winds blowing southwesterly at 10 to 15 mph. No precipitation is expected at least through Monday night, according to the National Weaterh Service.

The rainclouds passed downstate late Saturday morning, blanketing a wide area of central and south Texas with light rain and a few isolated thundershowers. By the afternoon, clouds dominated the state's skies, except in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Rainfall amounts statewide generally were light, with Oak Hills in South Texas registering the highest amount, at .65 inches. The rain ended Saturday night, and the entire state should enjoy partly cloudy skies and warmer temperatures today.

Arkansas also had its hands full with raging waters Saturday as the Black River, White River and Ouachita River all overflowed their banks. The Black River exceeded its flood banks by nine feet at Black Rock, while the White River at Augusta and Ouachita River at Camden both rose about six feet over their flood banks.

The cold front which pushed through here Friday will is expected to continue its eastward march today, opening the way for a high pressure system in this region which should keep the weather for early next week fair and mild, and slightly warmer.

Moving Flagpole Confuses Cemetery

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — City cemetery clerk Betty Payne has a few problems. She's trying to determine who's buried in an 88-year-old graveyard. The confusion is caused by the lack of clear records before 1950.

"I've had so many people say, 'We just go down to the flagpole and turn left,'" she said. "Well, they moved the flagpole."

Some graves have been moved and others are unmarked. All easily-locatable owners or heirs to plots have been contacted.

"If they can prove their ownership, they can have them (unclaimed plots)," Mrs. Payne said. "Otherwise we want to sell them."

The city will accept old records or almost anything to prove a relationship to the original purchasor of unclaimed gravesites, she said.

Fire Fighting Mom Visits City

By NANCY ALLEN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Linda Eaton says she never intended to become a spokesperson for the women's movement, but inadvertently she seems to have become one.

The 26-year-old Iowa City firefighter was catapulted into the national spotlight in January because of her twin desires to retain her job -which entails 24 hour shifts -and breastfeed her infant son.

"It was a strictly personal decision," she explained in a recent interview with the A-J. "Other women have been forced to quit their jobs or quit nursing and I couldn't afford to do either. I'm a single parent and I have to work to support myself."

She made a visit to Lubbock for consultation with an attorney.

Miss Eaton said she was not trying to appear militant by insisting upon breastfeeding her child, rather she was guided by a desire to do the best thing for him.

She cited a recent published report by the American Academy of Pediatrics, which states that breastfed babies are physically and emotionally more healthy than bottle fed infants.

Miss Eaton maintains that in spite of all the excitement, five month-old Ian is better off than he would be if bottle fed.

"He's not suffering through this at all," she said, giving the baby a grin, "but he would be if he were on a bottle."

Through her lawyers, Miss Eaton has obtained a temporary court injunction which allows her to breastfeed her son two times during her 24-hour stint at the fire department.

A baby sitter brings him to her at feeding time, which coincides with time firefighters normally have more or less to themselves, she says.

Mother and son then spend about 30 minutes together in a private area of the firestation.

The arrangement has been working, according to Miss Eaton. "There have been two fire calls while I was nursing, but it really was no problem." She said the time an alarm caught her coming out of the shower was "much more difficult."

When she's nursing, she gives the baby back to the babysitter and responds to the call.

Her case has put a strain on relations with the other firefighters, Miss Eaton admits, but she is adamant that "when the fire alarm goes off, we have 110 percent cooperation."

Other firefighters do not go so far as to extend to her their personal support for what she is doing, Miss Eaton says, "but they go along with the court's decision, and the chief is cooperative."

She said it made her sad to think things around the fire station will never get back to the way they were before debate on her case became heated. "My batallion captain told me that," she said, "and I knew it was true when I heard it said out loud."

"I love and respect firefighting," Miss Eaton continued' "I'm not trying to infiltrate the fire department with anything that won't enhance it."

She believes it is "completely possible" to be both a firefighter and a breastfeeding mother, and in the long run her doing just that "only adds to the scope of firefighting."

Firefighters have a reputation for being both tough and compassionate, she said. And while mothering a baby certainly isn't tough, it is compassionate. "Life goes on in spite of all its changes," she mused, "and you just can't keep all the different aspects in separate little time slots."

Miss Eaton is receiving support from the La Leche League International, and the National Organization of Women. NOW has offered to help pay her legal fees.

In addition, she has received letters from women all over the country, sometimes as many as 200 a day.

Though she emphasized she is neither trying to be flagrant about nursing her baby nor speaking out for "all women's rights," if her case helps any mothers and their babes to a better relationship, then that's fine with Linda Eaton.

For herself, she's just determined to raise her son the best way she knows how.

BORN FIREFIGHTER — He may not be ready to man the trucks when they roll yet, but Ian Eaton is no stranger to the firehouse at five months. His mother Linda, is a member of the Iowa City, Iowa Fire Department, and nurses her baby during her shifts.

Gasohol Production Pushed In State

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

As the probability of an energy shortage looms larger every day, several state legislators are pushing for the production of gasohol, an alternative fuel they claim could be more efficient and less expensive than gasoline.

Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa, along with Reps. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale and Bill Keese, D-Sommerville, have introduced a series of bills providing for the construction and implementation of gasohol plants in Texas—possibly in the Panhandle-Plains area— as a partial solution to an energy shortage.

Gasohol, a hybrid blend of alcohol and gasoline, "would provide a major market for our farmers to funnel their agricultural products into," Price said as he presented three bills to the Senate. In addition to Price's suggestion of using the production to eliminate surplus crops, gasohol is being looked to for its ability to replace, to some degree, the gasoline used in farm equipment as well as automobiles.

Kubiak, who is co-sponsoring three bills in the Texas House, explained that the alcohol would be distilled from corn, milo stubble or other crops (including the feed grains) by the same process liquor companies use, then combined with gasoline to create the fuel. Gasohol burns more efficiently and with less pollution than gas, Kubiak said, stressing that cars currently on the road would not need adjustments to use it.

Producing alcohol in Texas, though, is called "moonshining" and is illegal — that's one of the wrinkles the lawmakers must iron out before full-scale gasohol production can take place in the state.

The trio of bills Price recently introduced all have been sent to subcommittees of the Senate's Natural Resources Committee. Even though hearing dates have not been set, Price is optimistic they would take place soon.

Entitled the Gasohol Pilot Project, Price's primary bill would call for the creation and operation of a gasohol plant to prove it could be done. Speculation has indicated that a plant would be located in Dimmitt, in conjunction with the Amstar corn processing plant there.

Price, who has pushed hard for the plant to be located in the High Plains, said no formal decision on the plant's location had been made, but reiterated that high West Texas would be ideal "because we have so much production from the agricultural land in our area. Corn and milo stubble are the two most economic crops to use, and we certainly have plenty of them," he said.

Should the Amstar deal be consummated, the gasohol production facilities would exist jointly with Amstar's present corn syrup and starch production operations, Price said.

The second of Price's bills, he explained, would exempt the gas used in gasohol from current motor fuels taxes in an effort to lower the gasohol production price and get the development projects off the ground.

The Gasohol Development Act, Price's third piece of legislation, would provide five separate grants of up to $4 million each to any individual, city, company or group which can show it can go into feasible gasohol production and distribution. "Like the tax bill, this is designed to act as a stimulus to get the ball rolling," Price said.

The first of the Kubiak-Keese bills in the House would eliminate the 36 permit regulations required by the federal government for permission to distill alcohol — moonshining would be prevented by forcing distillers to denature their alcohol, making it unfit for drinking, Kubiak said. Another co-sponsored bill would exempt the production of alcohol from the motor fuels tax, acting as Price's bill on the gasoline used would. A third bill would provide state loans for the development of gasohol production plants.

Kubiak said he already has secured an agreement from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms allowing farmers to get permission to distill alcohol fuels on their farms simply by written request to the bureau.

The bills are aimed at helping the farmers reduce their gas bills while creating another use for their surplus crops. "This way, the farmers can grow their own fuel supplies and probably have enough left over to sell for cash," Kubiak said.

Gasohol remains illegal in Texas, simply because of a state law forbidding the manufacture of alcohol in the state. "That is a matter of amending the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms regulations on a federal level," Price said. "It can be done, because Nebraska and Iowa, among other states, have done it already.

Kubiak pointed out that an alcohol fuel distillery, built on a Minnesota farm for $10,000, can produce 100 gallons of the fuel daily, and that Texas farmers spent $700 million on fuel in 1978.

The gasohol currently is being produced for about 45 to 50 cents per gallon, Kubiak said, adding that he feels "once we get into full production, we could hold prices at the pump at 50 to 55 cents per gallon."

Water District Members To Discuss Legislation

Committeemen for High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 will meet at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the district offices at 2930 Ave. Q in Lubbock.

The committeemen will discuss pending water legislation before the Texas Legislature, President Carter's water policies, U.S. Department of Agriculture policies and their own activities.

At 2 p.m. Tuesday the district board of directors will meet at the Lubbock headquarters to review salaries and fees paid to committeemen and staff and also discuss three water wells in violation of district regulations.

ALUMINUM PRICES RISE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Aluminum Company of America increased its prices Friday on unalloyed aluminum ingot and several of its mill products. The hikes boost combined ALCOA price increases to about 4.5 percent, a figure within the pricing standards established by President Carter's Council on Wage and Price Stability, the company said.

Teamsters Threaten Guidelines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Teamsters union, piqued by the government's refusal to bend its 7 percent wage standard, is threatening to bust the guidelines wide open as it enters the final three weeks of contract talks with the trucking industry.

Four months after President Carter unveiled his voluntary wage-price guidelines as a key prong in the anti-inflation battle, government hopes of getting the nation's largest union to comply seem to be crumbling.

"This ain't no bird's nest. We've got real big problems," one top Carter aide conceded after word leaked out last week that the union's initial wage demand for 300,000 drivers and other workers is twice what Carter's guidelines would allow.

So far, despite a gulf of disagreement among the government, union and industry, no one is predicting a strike April 1, when the union's current three-year pact expires.

But no one can rule out a strike, either, if the union is determined to break the guidelines and the 600 trucking firms represented at the bargaining table resolve to hold the line at 7 percent.

Because of both the size of the 2.1-million-member union and its influence on what other major unions do in labor negotiations later this year, the administration believes the outcome of these talks will weigh heavily on the fate of Carter's voluntary program.

Separate contracts covering another 200,000 Teamsters as well as pacts covering more than 1 million workers in the rubber, electrical, auto and other industries expire later this year. Those workers will be watching the outcome of these talks with great interest.

Bargainers for the Teamsters, who won wage and benefit increases of more than 11 percent a year in the current contract, are to resume talks with the industry Monday in Hollywood, Fla. The two sides plan to return to Washington March 19 to complete the talks.

Until this week, the administration had expressed confidence that the union would abide by the 7 percent standard, which includes both wages and fringe benefits.

But now government officials say it appears the union is trying to stretch the guidelines to fit their wage settlement rather than tailoring their settlement to fit the guidelines.

The government made a concession to the union last December by bending the guidelines slightly so that increased costs for some benefits would not be counted.

But the government refused last week to give the union other major concessions on the grounds that the administration would, in effect, allow a 14 or 15 percent increase but call it a 7 percent hike.

The union wanted pension plan improvements and a hefty cost-of-living raise based on last year's inflation rate exempted from the guidelines. The government's refusal angered union President Frank E. Fitzsimmons.

"Fitz is really p—d at us," said one administration official who has been trying to follow the negotiations. The official, requesting anonymity, said the administration feels it cannot stretch the guidelines any more and still maintain a credible anti-inflation program.

Sources close to the talks said Fitzsimmons was so angry at the government that he and other union officials refused to provide Carter aides with details of the Teamsters' initial wage demands, which were handed to the industry last Tuesday.

The 70-year-old union leader, who has been unavailable to reporters, has never committed himself to abiding by or rejecting the guidelines. But Fitzsimmons and other union leaders have warned that Carter's failure to curb inflation — which is running at about 10 percent a year — will make it very difficult for the union to comply.

Although the union has refused to disclose its wage demands, sources say it asked for a 25 percent wage increase over three years — 14 percent of it in the first year. That would boost the average base pay of a worker covered by the contract from a current $9.40 an hour to $11.75 by 1982. On top of that, the union wants full cost-of-living protection and major improvements in pensions, health insurance and other benefits.

The sources estimate that all of the union's economic demands work out to increases of about 18 percent a year.

Union officials note that the Teamsters always starts high and scales down its demands as the bargaining deadline approaches. But J. Curtis Counts, the trucking industry's chief negotiator, said he has seen no signs at this stage that the union "is trying to stay within the guidelines."

The government says it is unwilling to give up hopes for a Teamster settlement within the guidelines, but it acknowledges that the outlook is not promising.

"I think we're going to see three very tough weeks of bargaining ahead," said an administration official who declined to be identified.

Farm Union Rallies At Capitol

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Texas Farm Workers Union members and their supporters covered the Capitol steps Saturday afternoon at a rally celebrating the end of their 630 mile "March for Human Rights" that began in the snowy Panhandle town of Muleshoe January 27.

In ponchos, cowboy hats, and even plastic trashcan bags to word off a chilly rain, the farm workers heard speeches — mostly in Spanish — sang songs, and pledged to continue their fight for collective bargaining rights. Many chanted "Viva Texas Farm Workers Union, Viva Antonio Orendain."

"Our problem is not the government," Orendain said. "It's Forrest Green and Bill Clayton."

Rep. Forrest Green, DCorsicana, is chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee where the farm workers' bill, known as the Agricultural Labor Relations Act, has been sent. Orendain said Green has told the bill's sponsor, Rep. Tony Garcia, D-Pharr, he will not allow the bill to be heard in committee. Garcia could force the hearings by obtaining six votes from committee members.

"We have four members who say they will vote for the bill in the committee, and one maybe," Orendain said. "So if we can get that maybe and one other vote then at least will make it out of committee."

The union leader said the fight wouldn't stop there though, because Speaker Bill Clayton also opposed the bill.

"They are farmers, big farmers. They don't care what happens to us, the farm workers," Orendain said.

He said union members would ask Gov. Bill Clements Tuesday to support the bill. Orendain and Dr. Hector Garcia were optimistic Clements would use his influence for passage.

Garcia is founder of American GI Forum, a 31-year old organization of Mexican-American veterans from WWII, Korea and Vietnam. Speaking to the gathered farm workers, he pledged his group's support for the collective bargaining bill.

Garcia said he believed the bill would pass this session because of growing interest in the United States, and Texas in particular, for Mexican oil. The doctor said Clements and the Legislature were interested in Mexican oil trades, and good relations with Texas' Mexican American farm workers would help their bargaining position.

"Is the governor, is the Legislature, hypocrites?" Garcia asked the crowd. "I certainly hope not."

"I think Texas has come of age," Garcia continued. "Not because they wanted to, not because they cared one bit what happened to the farm workers, not because they cared about human rights, but because damn it, they were forced to. They were forced to for oil — Mexican oil."

Garcia and Orendain both said they opposed any type of bracero program which would allow Mexican nationals to live and work for a time in the United States under the direction of immigration officers.

"The bracero program has one intention. That is to exploit the farm workers and Mexican laborers," Garcia said.

Orendain said he and union members intend to stay in Austin and push for passage of the collective bargaining bill for the rest of the session.

"We've started a new kind of lobbying with this march through Texas — lobbyists without money," the union leader said. "We've tried to talk to the people in all the towns we've been through. We've tried to explain our position and what we are asking for. And most have been very friendly."

Orendain denied allegations by Green that the union was trying to undermine the legislator's popularity in his Corsicana district.

"We don't come to damage anyone's image, anyone's popularity," Orendain explained.

Live Fetus Taken From Boy's Abdomen

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese surgeons reported successfully removing an abnormal fetus from a cyst in the abdomen of a three-month-old boy, Peking's official news agency said Saturday.

The report, received here, said the baby was unusually large at birth. After six weeks, his stomach was observed to be growing abnormally and at three months it was the size of a volleyball, the agency said.

"The fetus lived upon the baby boy's liver and took nutrition from the boy through two blood vessels, so that it grew quickly," the report said. It said the boy is recovering well.

Hot, Cold Stock Market Shows Reheating Signs

NEW YORK (AP) — The hot-and-cold stock market of the past several months is heating up again.

After rising sharply in January and then slumping last month, stock prices have rallied strongly once more in early March.

Last week the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 27.11 to 842.86, for its best weekly showing since it gained 28.41 points early last September.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index chimed in with a 1.44 gain to 55.81, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was up 3.69 at 166.66.

Big Board volume accelerated to its heaviest levels since late January, averaging 28.90 million shares a day against 25.23 million the week before.

As the pace increased, so did speculative activity in such issues as the gambling stocks. Caesars World, for example, reached an all-time high of 63 on Thursday before slipping back a bit at the end of the week.

Since the start of the year, the Dow Jones industrial average has traced a sharp zig-zag pattern between 800 and 860. As Robert H. Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds put it: "The game is being played between the 20-yard lines."

Analysts were hard put to find concrete "reasons" for the early-March rally. Hopes apparently were high that President Carter might succeed on his Middle East trip in clearing away the last obstacles to a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

But some Wall Streeters were also fretting that the market might be vulnerable should the mission fail. And analysts also pointed out that, even with a treaty, other problems involving the Middle East — including rising world oil prices — would remain unresolved.

Another factor that has been mentioned is speculation that interest rates might turn downward before long.

Yet that hope is far from unanimous. Gabriel Hauge, chairman of New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., told reporters in London on Friday he expects a further rise in both long and short term interest rates.

Other observers cited the recent steadiness of the dollar in foreign exchange as a contributing factor to the improved mood. Said analysts at Bache Halsey Stuart Shields:

"The impressive staying power of the dollar in recent weeks does encourage the possibility of greater overseas participation in the U.S. market. The foreign investor has been interested in U.S. stocks, but constrained by currency uncertainties."

As Stovall said, however, "The weight of the evidence is negative, with inflation galloping ahead, and interest rates still high and perhaps headed higher."

So where is the market getting its support? Stovall suggested that one important factor might be investors' awareness of the large amounts of investable money currently building up in short-term investments.

This money, the optimistic line of thinking goes, could at some future point provide the fuel for a sustained bull market. If interest rates should decline substantially, lowering the returns available on money-market investments, stocks' relative appeal would theoretically be enhanced.

The strategy for investors subscribing to this theory is to get into stocks now before the presumed avalanche of buying hits.

Whether that will happen is of course an open question. In the meantime, alternatives to stocks like money-market mutual funds continue to boom.

Figures compiled by the Investment Company Institute showed that $2.5 billion flooded into money-market funds in January, bringing theirtotal assets to $13.4 billion.

"They're the most dramatic growth product we have," Stovall said. "There is no commission on them, so brokers don't push them. But they just sell themselves."

ORAL ROBERTS' SON DIVORCED

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The son and daughter-in-law of evangelist Oral Roberts have been granted a divorce, only one day after the petition seeking the divorce was filed in Tulsa County District Court. In a closed-door hearing Friday, Special District Judge Bert McElroy granted the divorce sought by Patti Roberts from Richard Roberts on grounds of incompatiblity. The couple was married for 10 years.

Foe Of School Busing Outlines Problems In Midterm Switch

mester of one or two grades to one of the minority schools.

The first semester of the 1978-79 school year, 680 minoritiy students and 1,050 white students were bused each day. (Another 150 children, mostly whites, are bused voluntarily to the "magnet" program at Iles Elementary.)

Minoritiy pupils stay where they are for the full year. But whites switched schools with the second semester, which began Jan. 22.

The whites who were being bused the first semester (last names A through L) returned to their neighborhood schools — except for the 270 such pupils who opted to stay crosstown. And a new group of whites (same grades, but last names M through Z) numbering about 850 started riding buses to non-neighborhood "sister schools."

Seale said the changeover caused "various problems which disrupted children's education."

At midterm, for instance, Seale's fourth-grade daughter Susan was reassigned from her neighborhood school, westside Stubbs Elementary, to a sister school, northside Guadalupe Elementary.

At Guadalupe, Susan "found herself 40 pages behind in her reading book, spelling instruction was different, and she was also behind in math class," Seale said.

Fortunately, he said, Susan was able to catch up by working extra hard and getting help from her "excellent teacher" at Guadalupe.

"But I'm afraid there may be many children in similar situations who were not able to adjust," Seale said.

Seale said he learned that "another student came back to his home school to find himself in the bottom reading group and half a book behind. At his sister school, he was in the top reading group. Is this another isolated case?

"A Williams Elementary student, on his first day at Posey Elementary School, found himself in a different part of his math book. The reading books were completely different! This problem was solved by having the Williams pupils read the same reader they had at their home school, and the Posey students used the same reader they had been using all along.

"School administrators insist that these things didn't happen — or if they did, that they were just isolated cases. Well, my question is, how many more isolated cases did we have?"

Seale said members of various Parent-Teacher Associations also have reported problems. "More than a few parents say their children were noticeably ahead or noticeably behind the rest of the class" immediately after the midterm flip-flop occurred.

Either way, it's disruptive, Seale said. The child who is ahead "has to wait for others to catch up," he said.

Seale said he realizes school administrators and teachers tried hard to make the switchover work. Preparations included numerous faculty meetings and an elaborate system for exchanging information on students' academic progress.

However, Seale said he questions "how smooth any midterm transition can be. Busing is bad enough, but it's especially disruptive when you're uprooting kids in the middle of the school year and sending them 10 to 20 miles across town."

Children changing schools aren't the only ones who suffer, he said.

Children who stay where they are but whose classmates change, must wait for their new classmates to get settled in before everyone can get down to work, Seale said.

Some parents and teachers estimate that students "lost about two weeks of instruction" at the start of the second semester due to the changeover, he added.

The National Association for Neighborhood Schools is against any busing, Seale said. But if the Lubbock school system must bus, "I think it would be better if we didn't have a midyear transfer...We're for quality education, and so far we haven't got it with a midterm transfer."

The midterm switchover is part of the desegregation plan that school officials proposed and U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward ordered them to implement last fall.

A major reason for the switchover, according to school officials, was to spread the busing burden as evenly and over as many students as possible.

In general, school administrators said, the January changeover went well. But they acknowledge some problems, as Seale described.

"There have been some rough spots" in the transition, said Ed Stokes, director of elementary education.

"We made careful, detailed preparations for midsemester, but perhaps all of us — parents, students, teachers and administrators — underestimated the task," Stokes said.

One problem is that teachers do indeed differ in "the way they teach and the pace they go," Stokes said. However, he believes the overwhelming majority of students and teachers adapted without much time or trouble.

School officials have learned much from the midterm switchover and can apply that knowledge in making future transitions smoother, Stokes said.

Texas Credit Unions Showed Composite Growth During Year

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN–State chartered credit unions in Texas had a composite growth rate, among the 100 largest, of 17.5 per cent for 1978, down 1.5 per cent from the rate for 1977, Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons reports.

Parsons says he feels the rate was "excellent," considering the high earning rates on savings elsewhere which caused "tight money" and produced disintermediation–movement of funds between different types of investments–in the industry.

Assets in three of the 100 increased more than 40 percent during the year, with seven having growth rates of 30-40 percent, and 20 growing at a rate of 20-30 per cent.

Six credit unions showed assets over more than $50,000,000 at year end, and posted a growth rate of 18.7 per cent.

Total assets for the 100 largest credit unions came to $1,655,001,591 at the end of the year–compared to $1,407,596,034 at the end of 1977.

The six largest showed a combined total of $737,177,592.

Ten largest credit unions were as follows: Government Employees, San Antonio, $268,958,100; Dallas Teachers, $112,438,779; Texins, Richardson, $111,966,712; Government Employees, El Paso, $102,204,398; Houston Area Teachers, $90,184,887; Exxon Baytown, $51,424,716; Educational Employees, Fort Worth, $37,339,017; Richardson, Richardson, $35,211,944; Texas Dow, Lake Jackson, $29,146,560; and Public Employees, Austin, $29,146,560.

There's some disagreement among two recent surveys on the largest savings and loan associations in Texas, but there appears to be agreement that No. 1 for the state is Gibraltar Savings Association, Houston.

A recent survey by the "American Banker" shws Gibraltar No. 17 nationally, while the League of Savings Associations places it No. 15.

The League survey shows Gibraltar with $2,399,437,224 in year-end assets, an increase (thanks to merger activity) of 109.8 per cent over 1977.

Other Texas associations making it into the League's list of the 200 largest nationally (with their national rankings in parentheses) include: Dallas Federal Savings and Loan, $1,249,229,244 (No. 40); United Savings, Houston, $1,100,000,000 (No. 53); Houston First Savings, $934,402,166 (No. 76); San Antonio Savings, $758,458,786 (No. 104); Texas Federal Savings and Loan, Dallas, $754,812,173 (No. 105); University Savings, Houston, $731,542,926 (No. 111); and First Texas Savings, Dallas, $647,323,887 (No. 129).

American Banker's list varies the national ranking of associations somewhat but shows them in the same order to one another–and includes among its 300 largest Guaranty Federal Savings and Loan Association, Galveston, No. 290, Austin Savings Association as No. 295.

The committee working on the new single policy to replace existing commercial and merchant's property policies has designated its proposal as the "commercial property policy"–and indicates work on revised rules relating to the policy is underway.

The committee reported on its progress to the State Board of Insurance at the SBI's property rate hearing.

Another session of the committee will be held in the latter part of this months, Chairman Reynolds P. Marvin report.

Texas Bankers Association has called on House and Senate legislative committees considering tax relief measures to repeal the capital stock tax, saying the banking industry is the only business in Texas paying such a tax.

Corpus Christi Bank & Trust Co. President Ivan Wilson told the House Ways and Means Committee that a survey of taxes paid by the 10 largest banks, five largest savings associations and four largest credit unions in San Antonio showed banks paying 85 times as much taxes per $1,000,000 in assets as the associations, and seven times the amount of credit unions.

Banks, he said, should be taxed under the corporate franchise tax as are other corporations.

Survey Shows Connally Leads GOP Hopefuls

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Former Texas Gov. John B. Connally emerged as the favorite of Midwest Republicans for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination Saturday in a CBS News survey of delegates to the Midwest Republican Leadership Conference.

Connally, one of six potential GOP presidential candidates at the gathering, was the choice of 29.1 percent of those surveyed.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan was the second choice of the Midwest party leaders at 21.3 percent.

Reagan had sent a telegram saying he was unable the attend the two-day meeting here, which took on the flavor of a mini-convention, complete with speeches and private meetings.

The conference, which had been advertised as an early measure of the presidential campaign, drew representatives of 13 Midwestern states. They will account for about 29 percent of the delegates at the 1980 GOP National Convention.

Former President Gerald R. Ford was not included in the survey.

The question of favorite candidate drew responses from 254 of the 600 conference delegates. About 40 percent of the delegates are from Indiana, but CBS said there was no breakdown on which states those responding to the survey represented.

Behind Connally and Reagan came former U.N. Ambassador George Bush at 17.3 percent; Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, 12.2 percent; Rep. Philip M. Crane of Illinois, 11.8 percent; Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, the 1976 GOP vice presidential candidate, 6.7 percent, and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, 1.6 percent.

Connally was an even bigger favorite in three other categories in the poll, which was released at the conference.

Of 278 delegates naming their choice of the candidate with the best chance of winning in 1980, 34.9 percent listed Connally. Reagan was second at 23.7 percent. And of 273 delegates responding, 22.3 percent said they agreed most with Connally on issues.

Reagan, who narrowly defeated Ford in the 1976 Indiana primary for his first victory in a northern industrial state, finished fifth in the issues category at 11.7 percent.

Connally was an overwhelming choice among the seven candidates as best speaker, pulling 53.2 percent of 295 responses. Reagan and Baker trailed at 35 percent and 30 percent, respectively.

Kemp, co-author of a bill to cut federal personal income taxes by one third, was last among the seven listed candidates in all four categories. He told reporters he is more likely to seek the Senate seat held by Democrat Jacob Javits than run for president in 1980. He said he accepted the invitation to appear as a prospective presidential candidate because he is "interested" in running.

Equity Prices Show Best Gain

THE MARKET METER
By J. L. Hutcheson
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Institutional investors joined forces this week with speculators who have been driving stocks up recently and the result was a broad, sharp gain in equity prices in the most active trading in several weeks. Most of the gain was in the Dow stocks, but the transportation and utilities average also managed to post modest advances.

The fact that institutional investors played a larger role in this week's really was evidenced by the number of big board block trades of 10,000 or more shares which showed a marked increase from the previous week's trading. The amount this week was not impressive by historic standards, but it was well above the levels investors had been seeing for some weeks.

Major stock traders reported frustration this week due to a continued shortage of sell orders. They attributed this problem to institutions that don't want to part with the stocks they hold. Supposedly, institutions are flush with cash and any stock sale only increases their cash reserves and presents the problem of where to put the money.

Nearly all New York Stock Exchange groups gained this week, however, the largest gains were recorded by the large-capitalization issues which are favored by the institutions. Financial services and gambling issues, which are attracting a great deal of speculative interest, also scored good gains.

Investor hopes were raised that President Carter's trip to the Middle East would result in the long-stalled peace treaty between Israel and Egypt, analysts said. News that Vietnam confirmed that Chinese troops were pulling out of that country and the announcement that Iran's resumed oil production is expected to reach three million barrels a day also helped to buoy the market.

GOP Contenders Using Carter Campaign Book

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential contenders haven't started running against Jimmy Carter yet, but they're already taking a few tips from his campaign notebook.

With the first primary still a year away and the general election almost two years in the future, nine stalwarts of the Grand Old Party already have announced — or are on the verge of announcing — their bids for the White House.

Only three of those are from the Senate, long considered the launching pad for presidential contenders. And five of the nine have no recent ties to Washington, although three of them served in previous administrations.

Carter, of course, laid the groundwork for his successful run long before other contenders began the race, allowing him to build name recognition. He offset his lack of experience in national politics by running against the Washington power structure, saying only an outsider could change its ways.

The earlier than normal start and the diversity of background among the candidates shows the impact Carter's bid has had on the nominating process.

Not all of the candidates are taking their cue from the Carter blueprint. Frontrunner Ronald Reagan, for example, may be motivated more by the better-known candidates Carter defeated.

And former President Gerald R. Ford, who says he is definitely not — at this time at least — a candidate for the nomination may be following a page from the strategy of the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who waited in the wings for a call that never came.

"We've got a lot of good candidates in the Republican fold," Ford said in New York City Thursday. "... I'm going to sit and watch it and enjoy it."

Ford, however, declined to rule himself out completely, as did Civil War Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman, whose classic refusal was: "If nominated, I will not accept; if elected, I will not serve."

"I don't think it's good to go that far," Ford said.

So far, four candidates — Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, former Texas Gov. John Connally, former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen and California businessman Benjamin Fernandez — have officially announced their candidacy.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee told an audience in Manhattan, Kan., Thursday that he intends to be a candidate, although he added "I don't plan to announce it here today." And Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut reportedly plans to announce on Monday.

In addition, former U.N. Ambassador George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas and Reagan all have formed exploratory committees in preparation for a run.

It is too early to tell which candidates will have the bankroll to back their bids. However, Reagan is known to have solid financial backing. Crane, aided by conservative direct mail fund-raiser Richard Vigurie, reportedly has raised about $1.5 million. And Connally is expected to gain strong financial backing from his friends in Texas and from friends he made while serving as treasury secretary under former President Richard M. Nixon.

The early start already is producing fireworks. Crane, considered a strong candidate for the right-wing support that Reagan enjoyed in 1976, ran into sniper fire Thursday when New Hampshire publisher William Loeb charged in a front page editorial and in a set of stories that Crane concealed a playboy's fondness for women and whiskey.

Crane strongly denied the accusations and blamed the stories in the Manchester Union-Leader, which appeared just as the Illinois Republican arrived in the state on a campaign swing, on Reagan forces.

He asked Reagan to "investigate your staff to find the person or persons involved and dismiss them." Reagan, however, responded that his staff was not involved.

New Hampshire is the site of the first primary battle, and Loeb has been increasingly critical of Crane for seeking the 1980 nomination. The Union Leader has been supporting Reagan in his bid.

Youth Faces Trial With Adult Status

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — A Juvenile Court judge here has ruled that a 14-year-old youth charged with murder by arson should be tried as an adult for his alleged role in a Jan. 22 fire that claimed seven lives.

The teen-ager's lawyer, James E. Flynn, told Judge Leonard J. Hornstein that he will appeal the decision. Hornstein also sentenced the unidentified youth to six months at the Jamesburg correctional facility for violating probation on an earlier charge of larceny.

The youth was arrested for allegedly setting the fire in a four-story tenement. A co-defendant, Gary Willfass, 20, has been indicted on seven counts of murder.

JUDGE MOVES TRIAL

DEADHORSE FLATS, Nev. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Roger Foley moved his court to the Nevada Test Site in a multi-million-dollar nuclear accident suit. William Nunamaker and Harley Roberts died of acute myeloid leukemia after a December 1970 incident.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Two Men Murdered In City Saturday

Two Lubbock men became the city's fifth and sixth homicides of the year early Saturday when they were shot in separate incidents. Two other city men also were injured during one of the shootings.

Felipe Vega, 18, of 2636 E. Bates, died at West Texas Hospifal about 2 1/2 hours after he was shot twice when an apparently long-standing argument erupted into gunfire. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy ruled the death a homicide.

Police found Vega lying face up on the sidewalk in the 1700-block of E. Auburn Street at 12:49 a.m. Saturday. Witnesses told police Vega and three Mexican-American men had an argument earlier in the evening at a nightspot, and that the dispute had been going on for two months.

Also wounded in what witnesses said was an exchange of gunfire were Albert and David Gomez. Both men were listed in satisfactory condition Saturday night at St. Mary's Hospital.

Only two hours later, Ismael Ledesma Jr. was fatally wounded during a shooting in the 3100-block of Harvard Street. A 16-year-old youth is in custody in connection with the incident.

Ledesma was pronounced dead at 3:11 a.m., about a half hour after EMS technicians transported him to Health Sciences Center Hospital. Police said he suffered a .22-caliber gunshot wound to the left chest. LeCroy ruled the death a homicide.

Services for Ledesma, a Chicago native who had lived in Lubbock seven months, are pending at Rix Funeral Directors.

Survivors include his wife, Margarita; a daughter, Angelica; his father, Ismael Ledesma Sr. of Lubbock; his mother, Maria Rodriguez of Chicago; four sisters, Rose Mary, Anita, Adelita and Angie, all of Chicago and three brothers, Joe, Raymond and Joey, all of Chicago.

Rosary for Vega will be at 7:30 tonight in Henderson Funeral Home Chapel. Services will be at 4 p.m. Monday at St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Burial will be in Peaceful Gardens Cemetery under direction of Henderson Funeral Directors.

Vega was born in Dimmitt and attended Estacado High School in Lubbock. He was a member of St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Pentecostes Vega of Lubbock; a brother, Robert Jr. of Lubbock; five sisters, Mary Carrillo, Josephine Vega, Nancy Vega, Virginia Vega and Corina Rivas, all of Lubbock; and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Vega of Lubbock and Mr. and Mrs. Polcarpio Madrid of Hereford.

Don't Blame Your Age For Poor Hearing

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who have trouble hearing has been announced by Beltone. A tiny modern hearing aid often can help. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this non-operating model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It is not a real hearing aid, but will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 8827, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Rix has had the same family ownership and management since it was founded.

Uganda's Victory Claims Called False 'Radio War'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda's Idi Amin claimed new victories Saturday against an invasion force of Tanzanians and Ugandan rebels. But Amin's foes and other sources said they believed the Ugandan president might be waging a "radio war" bearing no relation to the actual fighting.

Amin's official Uganda Radio quoted him as saying his troops had pushed the enemy back "well over 70 miles" from Kampala, the Ugandan capital.

This came a day after a similar report by Amin of Ugandan successes, and two days after a Uganda Radio report that the invaders had suddenly driven to within 25 miles of Kampala.

Sound information about the conflict has been unavailable, but most independent observers in Nairobi said Saturday all of the Ugandan reports may have been false. Well-informed sources said the invaders apparently were still advancing slowly northward toward Kampala, but thus far have come no closer than 50 miles to the city.

The Ugandan broadcast, monitored in Nairobi, quoted Amin as saying the reported battle "has reached a climax." He claimed the Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles had retreated more than 40 miles since a Ugandan counter-attack began early Friday.

The sources here, including anti-Amin Ugandan exiles, say the invaders have been advancing two or three miles daily, hoping to pressure Amin into quitting without a major battle.

Ugandan exile sources said the invaders were meeting "some resistance but nothing serious" and there was no indication of Amin's promised counter-offensive.

Observers noted Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere and his military planners appeared to have learned a lesson from an abortive invasion that former Ugandan President Milton Obote launched from Tanzania in 1972 to try to oust Amin. That invasion, hastily organized and poorly armed, collapsed in a few days.

Some of the widely varied reports last week, including those from Uganda radio, had anti-Amin units near Mpigi, a village 25 miles south of Kampala. This suggested a decisive stage was at hand in the war, which began last October when Amin's forces occupied a section of northwestern Tanzania he contended belonged to Uganda. The Ugandan troops later pulled out.

Exile sources discounted reports that the invaders had advanced to Mpigi. They said the bulk of Tanzanian soldiers and anti-Amin Ugandans had gone no farther than Lukaya, a town 50 miles south of Kampala.

If Amin's victory claims were accurate, his soldiers would be south of Lukaya and near Masaka, an important transportation and administrative center 80 miles south of Kampala. The invaders took Masaka last month.

"The retreating Tanzanian aggressors are looting and destroying Ugandan property and are raping nuns," Uganda radio said.

It quoted Amin as saying the morale of Ugandan troops was very high. The president urged civilians to continue normal duties.

The radio also said Lt. Col. Farouk Minawa, Uganda's intelligence chief and internal affairs minister, told a group of Makerere University students in Kampala that Ugandan forces were in position to secure a complete victory.

Nyerere has seemed intent on letting the Ugandan exiles handle the major share of the fighting so it would not appear that Tanzania was responsible for overthrowing Amin, who is detested by Nyerere. Nyerere is a close friend of Obote, who lives in Tanzania.

Amin ousted Obote eight years ago in a military coup. Amin's regime has been accused of murdering thousands of Ugandans and committing other gross violations of human rights.

Scientists Ponder Einstein's Ideas

PALM COAST, Fla. (AP) — Although scientists at the Quantum Theory Symposium will honor the 100th anniversary of Albert Einstein's birth Wednesday, some developments here probably would not have made him very happy.

Einstein never was comfortable with the interpretation of quantum theory that is widely accepted now, even though his work at the beginning of the century helped create the theory.

Attempts to integrate quantum theory with Einstein's theories about gravity formed the central subject of an earlier session of the three-week meeting of scientists from around the world.

Quantum theory holds that radiant energy, such as light, is composed of finite quanta, or units, and applies to processes involving the transference or transformation of energy at the atomic level.

In a panel discussion on gravity, scientists described the relationship between Einstein's relativity theories and quantum theories as "a somewhat shaky marriage," "a long engagement" and "a one-night stand."

"You would like to show at least a consistency between relativity theory and quantum theory," said F.J. Belinfante, a professor from Purdue University.

Einstein spent most of the last 20 years of his life on the quest, trying to fit together all the known forces of the universe — gravity, electro-magnetism, the forces that hold atoms together and the ones that govern the interactions of the tiniest particles — into one all-encompassing theory.

The result?

"He stopped being a leader in quantum theory," said Joe Worth, a University of Florida physics professor helping host the conference. "He disappointed many young scientists who were looking toward him for leadership."

"Einstein always felt in his bones that quantum theory was maybe not wrong, but incomplete, though he couldn't prove it," said Worth.

What is called "modern quantum theory" was too full of probables for Einstein. The theory says you can't predict for sure what a specific particle will do or where it's going to be at a given moment.

Einstein's response to that was, "God does not play with dice." He felt it was a product of ignorance, not of nature.

Modern theorists disagree. In fact, Stephen Hawking of Cambridge, England, whose theories on black holes has shaken up the science of high energy physics, answered Einstein's quote wth one of his own:

"God not only plays with dice, He sometimes throws them where they can't be seen."

Dutch Clamor For Truth About Luns

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A political storm rooted in events of more than 45 years ago has blown up around Joseph Luns, the Dutch statesman who has been secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization since 1971.

Luns, now 67, has suddenly been forced to answer for what he did or did not do as a young man of 22, at a time when Adolf Hitler's Germany was arming and right-wing movements with strong Nazi tendencies were springing up around Europe.

In 1933, when Luns was a Roman Catholic law student in Amsterdam, he became listed as a member of the Dutch National Socialist Movement, an organization founded on Nazi ideology. The membership listed in his name, which terminated in 1936, was disclosed for the first time March 1 and since then Luns has come under steady political fire.

He has denied ever putting his name down for membership and said in a statement published last Thursday through the Dutch government that it was the work of one of his brothers, who later removed him from the movement's rolls.

But Luns' first denials, made the week before last in Brussels, headquarters of the North Atlantic alliance, did not mention a brother. A NATO spokesman at that time described the reports of Luns' links with a Nazi organization as "completely false."

This led Socialist Joop den Uyl, a former Dutch premier, to declare in Parliament Thursday that the credibility of the politically conservative Luns was "at stake," and he called for a full inquiry into the "exactness" of Luns' various statements. Although Parliament rejected this, doubts remained in political circles.

NATO officials in Brussels gave no indication that Luns' job as top civilian executive of the alliance would be affected. It has been known for months in Brussels, however, that Luns may be retiring this year, though no announcement has been made or date set.

Luns himself was personally unavailable for comment, but a NATO spokesman said the secretary-general was sticking by what he has already said.

Luns served as the Netherlands' foreign minister for 19 years before taking the NATO post.

He is regarded as one of the architects of post-war West European unity and a strong advocate of Atlantic partnership. He has struggled to push reluctant European governments, including his own, into a greater share of NATO's defense spending.

Luns once was a leading vote-catcher for the Dutch Catholic People's Party. He later voiced disapproval of what he considered to be leftist tendencies in the party's ranks and disaffiliated himself from it. He has not figured greatly on the Dutch political scene since going to NATO.

The report about his name appearing among the members of the Dutch National Socialist Movement in the early 1930s first came in the March 1 edition of the Rotterdam newspaper Algemeen Dagblad.

At its peak in 1936, the Socialist Movement had 55,000 members. More than 20,000 resigned as World War II approached and German Nazi excesses began to multiply. Luns was no longer listed as a member at that time.

Dutch legislators and newspapers tended to deplore Luns' handling of the disclosure, noting that his statements had failed to clear the air beyond all doubt over how his name got on the Nazi list.

The left-leaning Amsterdam newspaper de Volkskrant said in an editorial: "In itself, it is of little relevance for the present position of the secretary-general whether he fell, as a student more than 40 years ago, under the primitive enchantment of (National Socialist) ideas.... More important is whether Luns has categorically lied about his political past, for conscious lies are certainly damaging for the confidence which is placed in Luns' image."

The Amsterdam newspaper Het Parool said Dutchmen would have accepted his membership in the party if "Luns had confirmed the fact himself and at the same time pointed out its irrelevance."

The Christian Democratic government of Premier Andries van Agt expressed confidence in Luns. Van Agt said the government feels no obligation to take political steps against Luns.

Chinese Official Offers Self-Criticism

TOKYO (AP) — The first secretary of the Hebei (Hopei) provincial Communist Party committee made a "self-criticism" and admitted "delaying the modernization progress" in his province, Peking's official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency reported Saturday.

Xinhua, in a dispatch received here, said Liu Zihou acknowledged to a party conference he had "not handled ... a number of major problems in Hebei province well enough." The agency said he had been accused of slowness in carrying out party policy and in clearing up problems left over from the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution, when many of today's favored leaders were purged.

Liu promised "to improve things and bring about a shift in the emphasis of party work," Xinhua said.

HISTORIAN 'THRILLED'

CHICAGO (AP) — Historian John Hope Franklin says he was "thrilled beyond words at the news" that a professorship at Fisk University will be named for him. Franklin, who has taught at the University of Chicago since 1964, is a 1935 graduate of Fisk. He specializes in the history of the South, the subject of most of his nine books. He recently was elected the first black president of the American Historical Association.

Tech Course To Help In Combating Shyness

With four of every 10 persons classified as shy, it is small wonder that many college students do poorly in school because of social factors and pressures.

The department of home and family life at Texas Tech University is offering a social skills training course this spring to deal with problems of shyness.

Arthur W. Avery, Texas Tech home and family life professor and associate chairman, said Tech is one of the first universities to offer such a program.

Avery explained that developing certain interpersonal communication skills is important in any profession or walk of life, but some people lack the social skills necessary to keep the machinery of human relationships functioning smoothly. Some do not know how to start a conversation or ask for a date. And there are those without the self-confidence required for interpersonal relationships.

Shyness has many definitions. Common characteristics of shyness include reluctance to talk, little eye contact, quieter speech, less self-assertion, a retiring and reserved nature, an uncomfortable feeling with others, blushing and self-consciousness.

The social skills course will offer students an opportunity to identify interpersonal needs and reasons for inhibitions. Sessions dealing with how individuals can more effectively communicate, both verbally and non-verbally, will also be a part of the program.

Participants will practice changing aspects of their communication, broadening self-reinforcement, talking about feelings openly and developing greater self-confidence.

Many students have already registered for the course, which will begin the March 26 and last for four weeks. More information can be obtained by contacting Avery or Lynda Haynes at 742-3000.

TECH PRESENTS 'PALESTINIAN'

The Arab Students Organization will sponsor a showing of Vanessa Redgrave's "The Palestinian" Monday at Texas Tech's University Center. The film is based on a visit by Miss Redgrave to the Middle East. Tickets which are $1 are on sale for the 7 p.m. showing at the University Center ticket booth.

Heritage Society General Meeting Slated Monday

The general membership of the Lubbock Heritage Society will meet for the first time at 7 p.m. Monday at the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University Avenue.

Society President Ron Beard said the purpose of Monday's meeting is to recruit new members for the organization.

Three classes of membership are open, Beard said. The annual dues are $5 for active membership, $10 for associate membership (those who are not actively involved in the society) and $15 for business, institutional and professional membership.

The society now has between 35 and 40 members, Beard said.

A staff member from the City of Lubbock will present a program on architectural types and styles of construction in Lubbock at Monday's meeting, Beard said.

The heritage society is a non-profit organization which has the ability to acquire an historic structure in need of preservation and either renovate the structure or sell it to owners who will restore it.

Other officers of the society are Paul Nash, vice president; Paul Clover, secretary; and Callie Chalk, treasurer.

Quarterly general membership meetings are planned for May 21, Aug. 20 and Nov. 19. These meetings will be at 7:30 p.m., Beard said, but no meeting place has been established. The society's next annual meeting will be Feb. 11, 1980, he added.

Silkwood Testimony Continues

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A courtroom battle between nuclear industry critics and an energy industry conglomerate continues here this week in the first suit claiming a person was contaminated with plutonium outside a nuclear fuel processing plant.

The $11.5 million civil suit centers around the contamination of lab technician Karen Silkwood with plutonium, a highly radioactive element experts say can cause cancer. She died in an auto accident in 1974 and authorities say she fell asleep at the wheel.

Miss Silkwood has become a martyr to nuclear industry opponents, some of whom claim her death wasn't accidental. They say she was silenced en route to meet with a New York Times reporter to present him with documentation of poor safety practices at the plant.

At the time of her death, Miss Silkwood worked at the nuclear division of the Kerr-McGee Corp.'s Cimarron Facility near Crescent, Okla. She worked in quality control testing of the pencil-thin tubes filled with plutonium pellets that are made to fuel nuclear reactors.

Kerr-McGee Corp. and its subsidiary, the Kerr-McGee Nuclear Corp., are the defendants in the suit filed on behalf of Miss Silkwood's estate. The firm has more than $1 billion is assets and is one of Fortune magazine's top 500 companies.

A week before her death, Miss Silkwood and her apartment were found to be seriously contaminated with plutonium. Lawyers for her estate said in opening statements they will prove Kerr-McGee was negligent in allowing plutonium to be taken from its plant.

Kerr-McGee attorneys said in opening statements that, as an activist in the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, she may have purposely contaminated herself to embarass the company and draw attention to her complaints about safety. They also said they will prove the contamination was minor and that she wouldn't have suffered any lasting injury.

Two atomic scientists who have become concerned about the dangers of nuclear power were the first witnesses for the Silkwood estate.

Dr. John Gofman, described by Silkwood lawyers as the "Father of Plutonium," testified Thursday. The former Manhattan Project scientist said Silkwood had been exposed to enough plutonium to cause cancer. He said as little as one one-millionth of a gram of plutonium, comparable to one grain of pollen, may cause cancer.

He was sharply critical of Kerr-McGee's safety procedures and also had harsh words for federal regulatory agencies because of the radiation exposure standards they set for the industry.

Dr. Edward S. Martell, of Boulder, Colo., echoed Gofman's criticisms.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. PAUL E. RUBLE

Dear Dr. Ruble: What causes hiccups? I get them after I eat. I am 80 years old and in good health. — E.L.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I have had hiccups for about a month. Can you tell me what is causing them? It is to the point where I cannot eat a meal without throwing up. — W.M.

A hiccup begins with a sudden spasm (constricting) of the diaphragm. This sets up a chain of events. There is a sudden rush of air into the gullet. The glottis (a part of the vocal cord) closes in an attempt to check this inrushing of air. The clicking hiccup sound results. Prolonged laughing, fast eating and overindulgence in alcohol are common causes. E.L. should eat slowly, chew well and avoid animated conversation at meals.

W.M. is in a different category. A month of hiccuping requires investigation. The most serious and least likely cause is a brain inflammation or some other brain-related condition.

A more common cause is irritation of the long nerve network that serves the abdominal area, including the diaphragm and the digestive system (stomach, etc.). Interference of the nerve anywhere along its course can cause the spasms that result in hiccups. Often a combination of internal problems with the various organs and the nerve disturbance can cause persistent hiccuping. By internal problems I mean disturbance of the stomach (gastritis), of the liver, intestines, or the diaphragm itself. Inflammation of the pericardium (heart covering) may be an unsuspected source of hiccuping. Or the problem may be a local one, as in the nerve in the neck area.

For ordinary, non-disease related hiccups there are literally hundreds of cures, a few of which work for some. A favored one is breathing into a paper sack. Hiccups that can be stopped by such tricks don't usually represent a problem. They won't cure hiccups if there is a disease in the background.

For a month-long bout with hiccups a visit to a doctor is warranted. A neurologist may help launch the investigation.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Do you know about an operation to help emphysema patients? — B.G.

Treatment for emphysema (over-inflated and inelastic lungs) is almost always medical, which is to say non-surgical. We think more in terms of controlling allergies and treating infections early and aggressively. Cigarettes have to be avoided along with other pollutants. Weight reduction helps and some exercises may be beneficial.

Some surgical procedures have gained acceptance, including one to remove large bullae (lung cysts) that may be impeding the passage of air. If air becomes trapped in the space between the outer lung lining and the lining of the chest cavity (a condition called pneumothorax) it can be removed in a surgical procedure. Certain breathing emergencies may require a tracheotomy (an opening in the windpipe).

But from your letter I believe the specific surgery to which you refer involves certain nerves. In some parts of the country, surgeons have clipped nerves in the neck to assist breathing by relaxing certain muscles. However, since this may affect other important functions of those nerves the procedure is considered risky. For example, the nerve involved also detects low oxygen in the blood as a way of controlling breathing. Other nerve-clipping procedures have been tried but have no proven value.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Besides alcoholic drinks, what else must an alcoholic using Antabuse avoid in the way of food, etc.? — J.J.

Antabuse is a drug that causes a violent reaction in the body in the presence of alcohol. That is the basis of its use in alcoholism and why it is called an antagonist drug.

The list of foods to avoid is too lengthy to list here, but they include many medicines. Some may contain as much as 50 percent alcoholic content. The user has to read labels closely. For most products there are alcohol-free substitutes. Some toothpastes, for example, can be a hidden source of alcohol, and it takes only a minute amount to trigger the Antabuse reaction. To be on the safe side alcohol should be avoided for 14 days after the last dose of Antabuse.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Can the detectors through which airline passengers pass be harmful to a fetus in the womb? — L.B.

These devices merely pick up the presence of metal objects. They are not X-ray machines or anything like that. Harmless.

Emphysema can be controlled. To learn how to live with this serious lung problem, write to Dr. Ruble for a copy of his booklet on "How to Control Emphysema," P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Ruble welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Maryland Men Die As Result Of Fire

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — A 93-year-old man died Saturday when he jumped or fell from a second-story bedroom window, apparently while trying to escape from an early morning fire that killed his son, Howard County fire officials said.

John Esther Neal either jumped or fell 15 feet from his bedroom window, according to Gary Wood, a fire investigator. The elder Neal's body was found on the lawn of his wood frame house.

The body of his son, Clinton Esther Neal, 56, was discovered kneeling in the bathroom, Wood said. He suffered third-degree burns of the upper part of his body, but officials believe he died of smoke inhalation.

Hart Jury Selection Plods Into Second Week

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — Prosecutor S.M. Fallis planted an emotional charge in the plodding jury selection in the murder trial of Gene Leroy Hart Saturday, asking parents of two of three Girl Scouts Hart is accused of killing to stand.

"We have no way to have Lori or Doris or Michele here for you to look at," Fallis said, as he asked parents of the victims to stand in the courtroom to be identified by a prospective juror, as jury selection dragged into a sixth day.

Hart, 35, is charged with first-degree murder in the June 13, 1977 slayings of Doris Denise Milner, 10; Michele Guse, 9; and Lori Lee Farmer, 8, all of the Tulsa area, at a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp.

Attorneys appeared in no hurry Saturday to quicken the jury selection proceedings, and it appeared that a jury would not be seated until sometime early next week.

Garvin Isaacs, Hart's chief attorney, tried to block Fallis' new tactic of bringing more attention to what Fallis called "oftentimes ... forgotten" victims. However, District Judge William Whistler allowed the line of questioning to continue.

Fallis asked Dr. and Mrs. Charles Farmer and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Guse to stand briefly. He asked the prospective juror to remember that the Milner girl had been "brutally beaten, raped and murdered." Her parents were not in court.

Isaacs had asked earlier prospective jurors to look at Hart as he stood before them, wearing a suit and tie. "Would you promise us you can give Gene here a fair trail?" Isaacs had asked, resting his hand on Hart's shoulder.

Isaacs asked for a mistrial Saturday afternoon in a conference in Whistler's chambers. Isaacs said the Farmers had given a television interview saying they would only be satisfied by a death penalty if Hart is found guilty.

Jurors may chose between a death sentence or life imprisonment if they convict Hart of the murder charges.

Whistler turned down the mistrial motion but said he would permit Isaacs to submit it again if he could back up his contention that the Farmer interview would "enflame the emotions," of prospective jurors.

Whistler said he would not admonish the Farmers for giving interviews.

A procession of more than 50 prospective jurors had gone through a sometimes lengthy interrogation by Saturday afternoon.

Attorneys for each side had each used five of their nine peremptory challenges to remove panelists thought to be least favorable to their case.

Each attorney also has two challenges in the selection of two alternate jurors who will also hear testimony in what is expected to be a lengthy trial.

Whistler, who said Friday, the jury selection was the slowest he had witnessed in 10 years on the bench, said prospective jurors would be allowed to go home Sunday in anticipation of being sequestered for weeks.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR FRIENDS:

Poisoning is one of the major causes of accidents in the home.

To play it safe, first and foremost, put everything out of the reach of children — an ounce of prevention is worth a life.

But even though we think we do everything possible to prevent these things, accidents do happen.

The following is taken from the Council on Family Health, and we quote:

"In case of serious injury or illness:

"Call a doctor, a hospital, the police or other emergency service immediately.

"Keep calm, briefly explain what has happened and ask what to do until help arrives.

"In case of poisoning, take these steps:

"Call a doctor, hospital, poison control center or rescue unit promptly. Explain what unusual symptoms the patient shows and what substance may have been involved (trade name, manufacturer, label warning).

"Make patient vomit if so directed by health professional, but not if: patient is unconscious or is having fits; the poison swallowed was a strong corrosive (lye, acid, drain cleaner, etc.); the poison swallowed contains kerosene, gasoline or other petroleum distillants (unless also containing a dangerous pesticide which must be removed).

"Try to induce vomiting by tickling back of throat with spoon handle or other blunt object after giving water. Do not give salt or mustard-water to children. Do not waste time waiting for vomiting, but transport patient, if indicated, to a medical facility. Bring package or container with intact label.

"Inhalation poison (gas, fumes, smoke): Get patient into fresh air immediately. If breathing has stopped, apply artifical respiration and do not stop until patient is breathing well. Transport patient promptly to a medical facility or keep patient warm and quiet until medical help arrives."

Whatever you do, call for help promptly and stay calm — Glue all emergency numbers (doctor, fire department, paramedics) to wall above phone or on the side of the phone. — Heloise

LETTER OF LOVE

DEAR HELOISE:

Most of us are always looking for special gifts that do not cost too much. I do believe I've received one that every mother would appreciate.

During the summer my son and family unexpectedly came to see me. It was inventory weekend and, much to my sorrow, I had to work and could not be with them. Before the long trip home, my youngest grandson printed a couple of "I love you Grandma" notes and left them on my stove and refrigerator.

The idea appealed to the rest of the family and, even now, four months later, at least twice a week, I find a "Love You" note tucked in the most unusual place.

My cup runneth over! — Minnitta McWilliams

You are, indeed, fortunate. Just think of getting up on the wrong side of the bed and finding one of those delightful notes. All of a sudden the world looks much brighter. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

When my mother-in-law was in a nursing home, my sister-in-law suggested we have a guest sign-in pad (telephone message pad) for her bedside table. As each family member was not able to be there every day, we wrote messages to each other on the pad. Visitors also wrote messages that we would read to our mom.

Also the nurses wrote messages to us about needed items or on the condition of our mother.

It proved to be a helpful item for a person in a nursing home.

I really enjoy your column and look forward to reading all the helpful hints each day. Thanks! — Shirley Heisserman

Thank you, Shirley, for sharing with all of us. — Heloise

City Makes Splash In Water Business

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. (AP) — The city of Excelsior Springs has gone into partnership with a private firm in hopes of cashing in on the popularity of bottled water.

The city, which sprang up in the 19th century when its waters were reputed to have medicinal properties, has seen the sales of its water slip to $5,000 a year.

With the City Hall built over one of the town's springs, the municipal government has been selling bottled water for decades, but it has never been a big moneymaker.

"Carbonated water was not big until Perrier," Beecher said. "So I think now is a good time to do it. I think our biggest problem will be our ability to meet the demand."

Verdom and Co. will pay the city 40 cents a case and 2 percent of gross revenue. The city hopes to make $130,000 a year.

ALLEGED KIDNAPPERS ARRAIGNED

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Three men arrested in the kidnapping of the teenage son and daughter of a wealthy Burrillville restaurateur were arraigned Friday. Two of the men were arraigned in Woonsocket District Court and the third appeared in U.S. District Court after his arrest by the FBI in Swansea, Mass. Paul A. Plante, Woonsocket court clerk, said Allen R. Gomel, 42, of Cumberland, R.I., was charged with five counts of kidnapping with intent to extort money. Salvatore L. Savastano Jr., 18, of Bristol, R.I., was charged with a total of 12 counts, including kidnapping to extort money, assault with a dangerous weapon and stealing a car, Plante said. The third man, Michael A. Ballard, 36, also of Bristol, was being held on a federal complaint. Bail was set at $250,000 and he was jailed in Massachusetts.

Major Breach Revealed In Chinese Red Party

Hanoi Claims People Opposed Viet Invasion

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Peking's most important newspaper revealed Saturday a "major breach" in the Chinese Communist Party leadership, and Hanoi said it was caused by internal opposition to the Chinese invasion of Vietnam.

The remarkably candid Chinese article, which spoke of "struggles" troubling the party, did not say whether the war had provoked the new factionalism.

But Vietnam claimed that growing anti-war feeling in China had forced the government to announce the withdrawal of its invasion army last Monday. Hanoi also said a dissident radio station inside China has been making clandestine broadcasts against the war.

Atrocities Claimed

In their latest battle reports, the Vietnamese continued to insist that despite what was told to the Chinese people, Peking's troops were not pulling back across the border and were indiscriminately shelling Vietnamese cities and committing atrocities.

Western intelligence sources here said they were unable to say accurately how much fighting continued along the 450-mile front on the Vietnamese-Chinese border.

An article in Tokyo's Asahi newspaper Sunday quoted Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong as saying "China's rulers were forced to announce they would withdraw ... because of the firm struggle of the armed forces of the Vietnamese people" and the "Chinese people and soldiers were also opposed to their leaders' decision to invade Vietnam."

Viets On Full Alert

Vietnam is on full alert for any "new military adventures" by China, Dong was quoted by the newspaper as saying in an interview.

People's Daily, organ of the Chinese Communist Party and Peking's leading newspaper, disclosed the party bickering in an unusual front-page editorial entitled "Settle Grudges and Tighten Solidarity." The editorial was quoted in a dispatch of Japan's Kyodo news service from Peking.

"There are grudges among many comrades of the party that, in the worst case, led to the formation of a major breach," it said.

It said "contradictions" and "struggles" had developed in the party. "Nobody should treat their executive posts as personal property."

Form Exclusive Groups

The editorial said some Communists had formed exclusive groups, dealing only with those who shared similar views. The Japanese report gave no indication that the People's Daily editorial was any more specific in describing the issues and personalities of the disputes.

An editorial in Vietnam's Communist Party paper, Nhan Dan, said a "serious rift within the ruling (Chinese) circles had broken out since the launching of the aggressive war."

The commentary drew parallels between the current situation in China and the unpopularity of U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam conflict in the 1960s and early 1970s.

The timetable of the Chinese invasion and withdrawal has in part been determined by "the need to cope with an increasingly alarming situation in China itself caused by the Chinese people's opposition to the Vietnam invasion," Nhan Dan said. The editorial was carried by other official Vietnamese media.

Hanoi Radio said a clandestine radio station inside Chinese territory was making anti-war broadcasts. Independent observers were unable to pick up the station Saturday, although Hanoi provided its frequency and broadcast schedule.

Hanoi Radio said the station, whose location was not given and whose operators were not identifed, attacked Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping) for embroiling China in the war with Vietnam and said China was sending troops to Laos "to open a new war front."

The Vietnamese-dominated Laotian government also has charged China with massing troops along its border and supporting insurgents. Xinhua (Hsinhua), the official Chinese news agency, denied the charges.

The secret radio station also was reported to have said a new anti-war poster was put up on "Democracy Wall" in Peking Wednesday.

Japanese reporters in Peking have reported a handful of similar posters appearing since the invasion was launched Feb. 17.

both for and against Carter's peace efforts lined his motorcade route. Those shouting "Carter Go Home" were most prominent.

Members of the nationalist religious "Gush Emunim" movement captured the front row and waved banners saying "Welcome Billy's Brother." It was an apparent reference to a remark made by the president's brother when told that Jews might be offended by his friendship with Libyans. "They can kiss my ...," he replied. The remark was widely quoted here.

A police spokesman said 14 Gush Emunim demonstrators were detained and nine others at the movement's headquarters were taken in for questioning.

Carter, on the second leg of his peace journey that began Thursday in Egypt, said he would confer with Begin on the same "final details" he discussed with Sadat.

At the airport, Carter appealed for support, saying "it would be a tragedy to turn away from the path of peace after having come so far."

Arriving at the end of the Jewish Sabbath, Carter and his wife Rosalynn were greeted by Begin and President Yitzak Navon.

Navon declared Israel had made "enormous sacrifices far beyond what was expected" to achieve peace. But he said he prayed Carter's visit would remove Israel's concern about signing a peace treaty "liable to endanger our security."

Carter stood in the darkness with his hand over his heart while the U.S. national anthem was played.

Security was tight. Israeli troops trapped and killed four Palestinian guerrillas in a tomato field early Saturday before they could carry out a plot to terrorize Israel by seizing hostages, the Israeli military said.

Carter's Mideast mission was tentatively scheduled to end Monday, but U.S. officials acknowledged the possibility of a return visit to Cairo on Tuesday.

Carter and Begin last met on Monday in Washington, where U.S. officials presented new compromise suggestions to Begin in an effort to break the negotiating stalemate.

Those undisclosed terms were accepted by the Israeli Cabinet, but brought counter-proposals from Egypt that were discussed during the president's visit there.

With Sadat at his side in Cairo, the American president said they had resolved some difficult issues, but not others. "I am hopeful the differences which still remain can be resolved."

Sadat described their talks as "very fruitful." Then the two leaders took a quick tour of the pyramids and Sadat escorted his guest to Cairo International Airport.

Women Leave Jobs, Protest In Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Tens of thousands of women dressed in blue jeans and skirts walked off their jobs Saturday and rallied in the streets of Tehran to protest curtailment of their freedoms. Moslem zealots enraged by the unveiled protesters beat some, and at least one woman was stabbed.

The job walkout paralyzed the nation's banking institutions and most private business. Saturday is a normal working day in Iran.

Several women wearing the traditional "chador," a body-length black veil, joined the orthodox Moslems who attacked protesters near the British Embassy on Ferdowsi Street. Besides the woman who was stabbed, several others were injured in the brief clash. Militiamen fired into the air to disperse the attackers.

Women Harassed

In other parts of the city, zealots harassed women with a slogan roughly translating into English: "Either you wear a head wrap or you get a head rap!" There were reports that women demonstrators have been attacked at Tehran high schools in the past two days.

About 3,000 women went to the Justice Ministry on Saturday and complained to government officials about the violent harassment. A delegation of 20 women also went to Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan's office to present their grievances. The mass demonstration then broke up peacefully.

The women are demanding that equal rights' guarantees be written into the new constitution that is to be drawn up after a March 30 referendum on the question of whether Iran will be an Islamic republic. Such a religiously oriented society is the goal of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Moslem holy man whose revolution toppled the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi last month.

The growing feminist revolt is a direct challenge to the 78-year-old, white-bearded Khomeini, who has annulled a family protection law that allowed women to contest divorce actions without being present in court, has abolished co-education and has called on women to wear the chador in public.

The defiant, fist-waving women threatened further demonstrations against Khomeini and his government. An unidentified woman phoned The Associated Press and said members of a new women's group, which she did not name, were prepared to set themselves afire in Tehran's main square if Khomeini does not relent. She also said many woman may convert to Christianity.

"Save From Corruption"

While not addressing the women's specific grievances, Khomeini on Friday said: "We respect women, we want to save them from corruption. We don't want them to be toys in the hands of young rogues."

"We recommend to them (women), to divert from their old path, the path which was created by foreigners to lead them towards corruption," said Khomeini. "I am at the service of women."

Agriculture Ministry officials turned away women employees last Thursday when they showed up for work in boots and skirts. "Naked women are no longer allowed here," one official was reported to have said.

The proposed Islamic republic also is opposed by many liberals and intellectuals who fear the country's political system will be turned back at least 50 years.

Bazargan, appointed by Khomeini, was reliably reported Friday to have tendered his resignation because of harassment by Khomeini-appointed Islamic committees that have ordered executions without his consent and opposed his appointments.

Khomeini reportedly refused to accept the resignation and ordered his committees to support Bazargan. On Friday, he urged all Iranians to back Bazargan's provisional government.

Diplomatic Code: Frank Talks Mean Trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following the progress of the Middle East peace talks is like understanding the ebb and flow of an auction. You have to understand the way they talk.

Diplomats have developed a set of code words to describe what happens in their negotiations.

"Frank," according to the dictionary, means "open and honest." But when a diplomat like Secretary of State Cyrus Vance emerges from a meeting and says the talks were "frank," it means the participants were barely able to avoid coming to blows.

"Candid," is only slightly less disastrous. Generally, arguments between allies are "candid" talks. Arguments between foes are "frank."

Moving along the spectrum, diplomatic jargon comes to the terms "useful" and "fruitful."

"Useful" can be applied to almost any meeting that falls short of concluding a treaty and does not lead to war. In diplomatic terms, it is useful for two sides to sit down and politely air their differences.

"Fruitful" generally means that the two sides discovered some common ground. Exactly how much is not specified.

Another word that is deliberately vague is "progress." Almost anything qualifies as progress if the diplomat is determined to put the best possible face on developments.

For example, there was the disastrous Saturday morning in Geneva last December. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Vance were trying to wrap up a new strategic arms limitation treaty. (SALT II).

After a long session Friday night, American officials passed the word to reporters that the negotiations were successful, the treaty was set and the Saturday morning meeting would essentially conclude it.

Saturday morning dragged into Saturday afternoon. Something had gone seriously wrong. Finally, the two sides walked out into the sunlight to face the press with no treaty to announce. Vance looked pale and discouraged, and his brief statement was a classic of diplomatic jargon.

"We made," he said, "less progress than we had anticipated."

The reason for the jargon is that diplomats feel their job is tough enough without making statements that they have to explain later on. So rather than insult their adversaries by calling them obstinate or unreasonable, they publicly label the talks "candid."

Sometimes, for political reasons, they let a bit more of the truth slip out to the news media in a game called "backgrounding."

Reporters traveling with the secretary of state, for example, may write stories that recount the opinions of an anonymous "senior official." That is generally the guise the secretary adopts when he walks to the back of the plane to talk with the press. His aides are generally referred to as "American officials, who asked not to be identified."

Sometimes, even those disguises are too transparent for an official who nonetheless wants to get his point of view into the stories being written about a negotiation. Then he will insist on talking on "deep background."

"Deep background" briefings lead to stories attributed to "informed sources." Sometimes reporters simply use the information without saying where they got it, hoping that the official has been frank — meaning open and honest.

First Sterilization Reversal Surgeries Carried Out Here

a reversal operation is lower — at 50 to 60 percent, Heine said.

Fertility chances lower as age increases and genetic problems with pregnancies increase after age 35, Heine said.

Age isn't a problem for most women seeking a reversal operation, though. Heine estimated 87 percent of the women who seek reversals are under age 30 and most had sterilizations either after an abortion or childbirth.

Less than a generation ago, it was rare for women under in their twenties to have sterilizations. At one time medical schools preached the "120" rule in determining which women would be allowed to receive sterilization.

If the woman's age multiplied by her number of children equaled or surpassed 120, she was eligible for an operation. This meant that a 30-year-old mother of four could receive a sterilization, but that an unmarried woman or a woman without children would have difficulty persuading a physician to perform such an operation.

Heine attributed the old medical thinking to the concept of children being representative of a family's wealth, as in pioneer days when children contributed to the success of the family farm.

Now, he said, sterilization is easily obtained and is widely available on an outpatient basis.

"We have requests now from women with no children," he said. "And a number of them come in later for reversal.

One bride-to-be requested a reversal and didn't want to tell her fiance about the operation because he didn't know she had been sterilized a few years earlier.

Heine said he wouldn't perform a reversal in that case without first doing fertility tests on the prospective bridegroom.

"One in 20 males has a fertility problem," he explained. So if the groom had a low fertility rate, the couple might decide against a reversal operation for the bride. The normal 50 to 60 percent chance of pregnancy for the woman after such an operation would be much lower if the groom had a low fertility rate. The couple might decide that the very minimal chance for pregnancy was not worth the operation and cost.

While a sterilization can be obtained for as little as $750 for the "Band-Aid" method, the cost of reversing a sterilization is almost five times greater.

Medical sources estimated a seven-day hospital stay, anesthesia fees, physician's fees, lab tests and the operation would easily total about $3,500.

Heine said he receives about one request per week to discuss reversal, but only about one of five requests results in a reversal operation. After counseling on the costs and frank discussion on the chances for pregnancy, many women decide to remain sterile.

Nevertheless, although Heine has performed reversals for 16 years he said requests have increased recently and that 80 percent of the operations he has performed have been in the last five years.

Sterilization Increasing Societal Issue

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"I don't want any more children."

Those are the words physicians and family planning counselors hear from men and women seeking sterilization.

For couples who already have their desired number of children, sterilization may seem to be an ideal alternative to years of continued contraceptives.

But what if one or all of your children died? Would you still want to be sterile?

New regulations by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, effective since March 8, require family planning counselors in the Texas Department of Human Resources to ask such questions.

Although sometimes the sterilization operation can be reversed, HEW advises, "Sterilization must be considered permanent."

So counselors ask the questions that men and women may not have considered. Are you sure you would not want to have children if you divorced and remarried?

"Inflation is one reason that causes couples to limit the size of their families and also problems with side effects from temporary birth control methods," a family planning counselor said.

Whenever possible, counselors discuss sterilization with both the husband and wife, but a spouse's consent is not mandatory to receive the operation.

One counselor said men in their 20s often take the attitude that, "You've had the babies and taken the pill so it's my responsibility to have a vasectomy."

That sharing of the birth control responsibility is viewed differently by older men, the counselor said. "Men over 30 tend to prefer that the wife have a tubal ligation."

Sterilization operations funded by the federal government may be given only to persons at least 21 years old.

But decisions on sterilization made at such a young age are sometimes regretted later, a local physician noted.

Dr. Wayne Heine, chairman of obstetrics and gynecology at Texas Tech University School of Medicine, estimated that 87 percent of the women who seek reversal operations are under 30.

Until the 1970s few physicians would perform sterilizations on women who had never had children, but Heine said that philosophy has changed.

"We have requests now from women with no children and a number of them come in later for reversal," he said.

Other HEW rules for federally-funded sterilizations are:

— The 72-hour waiting period between signing consent and the surgery has been changed to a 30-day waiting period.

— The informed consent is valid for only 180 days.

— Sterilizations may no longer be performed on individuals in institutions whether or not they have been declared mentally incompetent by a court.

— Consent to sterilization cannot be obtained from anyone in labor of childbirth, under the influence of alcohol or other drugs or while obtaining an abortion.

— Interpreters must be provided when there are language barriers.

— Elective, non-therapeutic hysterectomy is no longer covered under Title XX. Neither Medicaid nor any other federal program will pay for a hysterectomy if it is intended solely for sterilization and there is no disease of the uterus.

Charges of coerced sterilization in a South Carolina case led to the rules revisions, as well as an Alabama case involving sterilization of adolescent sisters.

In some cases those sterilized believed federal benefits such as welfare, social security or other aid would be canceled unless the individual agreed to sterilization. It is illegal to threaten to cut welfare benefits in order to force individuals to be sterilized.

But a Texas Tech professor has noted that forced sterilization may someday be seen as a practical solution to protect those already living from the burden of overpopulation and increased energy shortages.

"What seems unthinkable today may be quite acceptable and appropriate in 20 years. Who knows what the future may hold?" observed Dr. Rodric Schoen, Tech law professor, at Tech's recent Bioethics Symposium.

The Supreme Court has ruled that procreation is a fundamental civil right, but Schoen noted this has not prevented the courts from allowing exceptions.

In 1927 the Supreme Court upheld a Virginia law that allowed state institutions to sterilize the "feeble minded." That case involved a retarded woman, mother of one retarded child and herself the daughter of a retarded woman.

Schoen said the court agreed to the sterilization to protect society from "undesirables" — a category that included the retarded, certain criminals, the insane and others.

Ted Howard, coauthor of "Who Should Play God?," who spoke at Tech last week on genetic engineering, said the 1927 Supreme Court ruling was in an era of the eugenic movement, when there was much interest in heredity control.

Both Howard and Schoen said the cruel Nazi experiments in genetics and sterilization illusrated the fact that those in authority can turn technology to abuse on minorities.

Schoen said that while the 1927 ruling came at a time of emphasis on heredity, courts today recognize that environment is a critical factor. And he said, "Ninety percent of retarded children are born to normal parents and the mentally retarded don't always give birth to retarded children."

While Schoen admitted that the prospect of forced sterilization in the future is more theoretical than real at this time, he again repeated its possibility.

Only a generation or two ago, he said, the atom bomb and test-tube babies were only science fiction.

If energy shortages worsen and threaten the existence of those already alive, the Supreme Court may someday regard forced sterilization as a rational measure.

"What seems unthinkable today may be quite acceptable some day."

States illegally," Perez said. "As luck would have it, about the same time they (border guards) revoked the (border crossing) cards of 11 people who were violators. They (the aliens) admitted to it.

"It just so happened they all were put back together at the same time, and one or two of these women incited a bunch of people there to riot."

Perez said the crowd grew Friday night and Saturday morning until the three main bridges linking this West Texas border city to Juarez, Mexico, were blocked by an estimated 650 protesters. The only bridge that was clear was the Zaragosa Bridge, which is the smallest of the four and the most remote from the downtown area.

Mayor Salazar said he would go all the way to President Carter if necessary. He was sharply critical of INS agents and said he wanted Castillo to come to this West Texas border city "because he could direct his employees who are misusing their authority."

Perez said the American flags were recovered from the river below. "They came up to the center of the bridge about midday today (Saturday) and tore down American flags and threw them in the river."

Perez said details were lacking involving the reported death of one of the demonstrators. "About midday two women in a car — and they were alleged to be Americans — but we don't know for sure, tried to run through the crowd below the Bridge of the Americas and ran into three young men. One of them was killed according to the report I got."

Witnesses said some Americans trapped on the Mexican side were lined up beside their cars near the bridges, waiting.

Lubbock Men Dead In Diving Mishap

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (UPI) — Two 22-year-old Texas men drowned Saturday while scuba diving at Blue Hole, a deep lake in the city, state police said.

Officers identified the victims as Jeffrey L. Hale and Kenneth E. Taylor Jr., both from Lubbock.

Another diver, Gary Fagner of El Paso, became concerned when the pair did not surface, police said, and dived to find both bodies about 75 feet down.

Officers said they did not know what caused Hale and Taylor to drown, but said they apparently were experienced divers who had been at Blue Hole in the past.

Greek Isles Odyssey Awaits Spring Fling Travelers

By TED SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

There are world capitals, sights and experiences, plus first class accommodations worthy of any grand tour of Europe for the Spring Fling '79 participants. On the 12th day of the 17-day excursion, the tour is already worth the budget price of $2,256.

How can the trip of a lifetime improve on such an itinerary for the price? By adding an odyssey every armchair traveler dreams of experiencing — a Greek Isles cruise!

Waiting to be discovered during the four-day cruise are the exotic ports of Mykonos, Ephesus, Rhodes, Heraklion and Santorini. It's the world of Onassis and Zorba and numerous treasures of the past.

Highlighting the fabulous itinerary are sites of two of the the seven ancient Wonders of the World, plus the oldest throne in the world.

It's time to unpack for more than three full days of luxury living that can only be found aboard a cruise ship plying the Aegean Sea. Most passengers immediately enjoy exploring the Atlantis itself from the comfortable cabins with private bath facilities to the sparkling pool on deck. Like an elegantly furnished hotel, there's wall-to-wall carpeting, air conditioning, television, in-cabin music, telephone communication, magnificent dining room, a fully equipped game room, and an orchestra for an evening of dancing. And at the end of a warm day, cooled by sea breezes, you'll always remember the glory of an Aegean sunset.

By the way, the Atlantis is equipped with modern stabilizers for full cruising comfort. One of the unsung attractions of a cruise is that the ship quietly transports you to your next port of call while you stroll along the promenade deck or enjoy a night of restful sleep. The "Odyssey of Homer" may have described the experience best: "So when the star came up, that's brightest of all, and goes ever heralding the light of early dawn, even then did the sea-faring ship draw nigh the island."

Mykonos with its quaint village and unusual windmills is the first port of call. Miniature chapels and hundreds of small white houses with charming arcades line the narrow streets.

Often overlooked by guide books and tour operators, because it holds no important role in history, the small island's charm is well worth a special visit. The seaside resort is a favorite for art students because of the island's school of fine arts.

A strong Turkish influence awaits the visitor to Ephesus, one of the greatest cities of ancient history. On the Anatolian coast of Turkey, the island contains the ruins of the Great Theater where both Saints Paul and John preached. Here too are the ruins of the Temple of Diana, one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. There is also a site named the House of Mary that is thought to be where the mother of Jesus lived following the crucifixion, and from which she ascended into heaven.

From the small Turkish port, the cruise ship heads for Patmos where Saint John the Evangelist wrote the Apocalypse while in exile. Although relatively small, the island of Patmos holds much natural beauty and is the site of an interesting hilltop monastery.

Rhodes speaks for itself while the visitor imagines the awesome statue that once stood astride the harbor entrance. Another of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, the 105-foot-tall Colossus of Rhodes stood for 56 years until it was toppled by an earthquake in 224 B.C.

Prominent Romans such as Brutus, Cato, Cicero and Caesar studied at the famous Rhodes School of Oratory.

Today's favored attraction for world travelers is the restored medieval city. Its thick walls tell of the crusaders that stayed there for medical care or joined the Knights of Saint John in the 14th century.

For 20th century there are many duty-free shops that offer both Turkish and Greek handmade crafts along with varied treasures from all around the world.

Largest of the islands in the Greek Archipelago is Crete. Its civilized history dates back to 5000 B.C. Spring Fling participants will tour Knossos, mysteriously destroyed around 1400 B.C. The palaces were designed with ventilation, plumbing, and indirect lighting. Here also is the oldest throne in the world, along with beautiful frescoes of intense colors and graceful lines.

The Spring Fling itinerary then takes you from Crete's mountains, beaches and flower-scented air to Santorini, an island of special beauty. The island is unique in that it is the remaining portion of an ancient volcano that blew its top 2,500 years ago. First time visitors marvel at the town that clings dramatically to precipitous cliffs.

Like a beautiful necklace, the Greek Isles have the appearance of sparkling jewels on blue velvet. Praised by Homer, the islands remain ports of call for travelers who appreciate a memorable odyssey.

Participants of the Spring Fling '79 tour of Europe will long remember the beauty of the Greek Isles they board their luxury liner and sail back to Athens for a full day of free time before the return jet flight to Lubbock.

Spring Fling '79 is a community service of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal and area travel agencies. Included in the budget priced fare of $2,256 are first class hotel accommodations with breakfast and dinner each day, baggage transfers, tour escorts, round trip jet transportation between Lubbock and Europe, and the Greek Isles cruise aboard the luxury liner Atlantis.

Almost completely booked, the second grand tour will depart Lubbock on May 13. Persons interested in touring Europe with neighbors and friends from the South Plains should contact a local travel agent as soon as possible. Information is also available by writing: The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal International Travel Desk, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas 79408.

JEWEL OF THE AGEAN SEA — Spring Fling participants will tour the island of Rhodes where they will see the medieval city of the Knights Hospitalers of Saint John of Jerusalem dating back to the crusades. Rhodes has been praised by poets as the "Bride of the Sun" and the "Island of Roses."

Sooners Shock UT 90-76

DALLAS (AP) — Sophomore guard Raymond Whitley shredded Texas' matchup zone defense with 25 points Saturday and the Oklahoma Sooners whipped the nation's 15th-ranked team 90-76 in a second-round NCAA Midwest Regional basketball game.

In the second game of the doubleheader in Moody Coliseum before a sellout crowd of 9,681 fans, the clutch second-half shooting of junior guard Darrell Griffith propelled the 18th-ranked Louisville Cardinals past scrappy South Alabama 69-66. Louisville will meet the winner of today's Arkansas-Weber State game next Thursday, and Oklahoma will play the Indiana State-Virginia Tech victor.

Whitley singed the Texas zone from the outside in the first half, then personally took charge when the Longhorns caught fire in the second half.

Whitley then triggered a seven-point Oklahoma surge, which he climaxed with a spectacular dunk shot with 3:50 to play and the Sooners leading 78-66.

Oklahoma is now 21-9 and the Big Eight Conference champions, and it connected on 16 of its first 22 shots in the first half against the Texas zone.

Whitley, forward John McCullough, guard Cary Carrabine, and Aaron Curry did most of the damage from outside. Whitley scored 16 of his points in the second half.

Other shooters in double figures included McCullough with 17, Curry with 14, Terry Stotts with 12 and Carrabine with 10.

High point man for Texas, which finished the year at 21-8, was Tyrone Branyan with 20, and John Moore added 18. Jim Krivacs pitched in 16.

Oklahoma shot a bristling 62.2 percent from the field, although the Sooners cooled off somewhat after a 66.7 percent first half. Texas shot a poor 39.2 percent on 31 of 79 field goal tries.

Oklahoma center Al Beal, who scored 10 points, was the leading Sooner rebounder with nine.

The Longhorns, who outrebounded Oklahoma 42-32, were led in the carom department by Phil Stroud, who had 12, and Branyan with 10.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons said, "I have never seen a team play so well. . .even the substitutes. They play like we do, only better. Nobody has a team with four perimeter shooters like they do."

Lemons, talking about the zone defense the Longhorns played against the Sooners, said, "We had a lack of communications and one side of our defense was not concentrating. The team that was out there for Texas I haven't seen for some time. We made a lot of scary mistakes. . .we made a nice comeback, but we burned out when we got it to five (points behind)."

The only Longhorn Lemons praised was senior John Danks. Lemons added, "We had two individuals who did not play well at all."

Oklahoma coach David Bliss said, "That's as good as we can shoot. We were playing on confidence and adrenalin after that first half. That first half was the best we've shot ever. When they (the Longhorns) made their run, it was because we mishandled the ball. But we were making our shots, and when we did that, it cuts down what Texas does best, which is break."

Whitley said of his clutch performance when Texas rallied: "I felt it was time to go ahead and put the game away. I was able to hit a couple of quick baskets."

He added, "I wasn't worried, because I knew we were a good team and could withstand the pressure."

Louisville, now 24-7 for the season, swept to a 33-28 halftime lead, then had all kinds of trouble putting the Jaguars away in the second half. South Alabama pulled to within a point 40-39 on a bucket by Scott Williams. Then Griffith took charge and a three-point play with 1:40 left to put the Jaguars on ice.

Freshman center Scooter McCray was high-point man for Louisville with 21, 15 of them coming in the first half.

The Jaguars, champions of the Sun Belt Conference who finished the year with a 20-7 record, were led by Dennis Still, who scored 18 points. Ed Rains added 15 points before fouling out with less than two minutes to play.

It was the first NCAA appearance for South Alabama.

AUSTIN (Special) — Hale Center's girls wrote an All in the Family script in bold, brilliant strokes here Saturday night, dominating Talco-Bogata Ricercrest from the second quarter on for a 46-29 victory and the Class A state basketball championship.

With the victory, Hale Center coach Babs Lombard was given a title to match the one her husband, Joe Lombard, had won earlier in the day. His Nazareth girls beat Weatherford Brock 46-43 for the Class B championshp, the Swiftettes' third in a row.

"We had dreamed as long ago as last September of two state titles," said Mrs. Lombard, whose Owlettes set the theme of the game by hitting 11 of 15 field goals and 10 of 13 free throws in the first half for a 32-14 halftime lead over Rivercrest.

Keyed by 6-1 senior post Terri Henry and frshman playmaker Kim Black, Hale Center then vaulted out to a 22-point lead early in the second half and was never headed. Rivercrest finished with only 12 field goals in 40 attempts, was five of 13 on free throws and was outrebounded 37-28.

"I didn't think it would be that easy," said Mrs. Lombard. "Rivercrest's little playmaker got into fould foul trouble," said Mrs. Lombard, and that hurt them."

Miss Henry, who hit eight of 15 field goal attempts and five of six free throw played exectionall well, Mrs. Lombard said..

"I can say it, now that the season is over," the Hale Center coach said. "I don't think anyone in the state can handle Terri Henry one-on-one. And as for Kim Black, nothing that she does surprise me."

AUSTIN — In a four-minute stretch of the second quarter, Slaton used the fury of a full-court defensive press to wipe out a 10-point Pflugerville lead, and the Tigerettes never looked back en route to a 68-54 victory for their second consecutive Class AA state schoolgirl basketball championship.

Pflugerville, behind the power of 6-2 past Karen Thompson, had gone ahead 19-9 in the opening minute of the second quarter, but Slaton, keyed by the quickness of Cynthia Robinson, Esoleta Whaley, Linda Lewis, Chris Kennedy and Debbie Bednarz, then forced 12 Pflugerville turnovers in the second quarter, cashing them in for 15 points and permanent victory momentum.

Both Slaton coach Cathy Wilson, a state title winner for the third consecutive year (1977 at Nazareth, 1978 and 1979 at Slaton) and Pflugerville coach Terry Szafranski agreed the second quarter defensive blitz set the theme of the game.

"I was concerned when Pflugerville had that 11-point lead, but I knew our girls wouldn't quit," said Miss Wilson. "Our game plan was to concentrate on stopping all the Pflugerville girls except Thompson and hold her down as much as we could. We alternated Bednarz and Robinson on her defensively."

Miss Thompson finished with 42 points, on 19 of 34 from the field and four of seven free throws, but 24 of her points came in the final quarter when Pflugerville, down three times by 20 points, closed to the final margin.

"We just turned over the ball too much (32 turnovers)," said Miss Szafranski of her team which closed its season at 37-2.

"We knew Slaton would press and we tried to work on coping with it in practice," the Pantherette coach added, "but it's difficult to simulate as effective a press as Slaton runs with your reserves.

"Too, Slaton is the first team to really press us that much, because we've been so far ahead in most of our games this year that other teams didn't try to press."

Pflugerville moved out to a 7-0 lead with 2:40 gone in the game as Slaton missed its first eight field goal tries.

Chaparrals Win Three Games

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Lubbock Christian College swept a tripleheader Saturday, but not without some effort.

The first two Chaparral wins, over Paul Quin College by scores of 8-0 and 6-2, were relatively easy, but the last, a 2-0 nail-biter against Jarvis Christian College, went down to the last out.

In that finale, LCC's Chris Cook (now 2-0) matched three-hitters with JCC's Bedford Hurst (now 1-2). Trouble with Hurst's was a homer by Chap second baseman Steve Brigante.

LCC's other run came in the sixth, when leftfielder Karl Mahan walked and Brigante singled to left. A wild pitch advanced both runners and then an error on the third baseman enabled Mahan to cross for the insurance run.

In the top of the seventh, though, that edge was slim indeed. A fielder's choice, a single and a walk combined to load the bases for JCC, chasing Chap starter Cook. Reliever Bob McNicol came on, and with the count full, forced Kelvin Johnson into an infield out at third.

Hurst and Cook each struck out five and each walked three in the contest.

The Chap starters, on the other hand, limited PQC to nine hits while striking out nine and walking only six.

LCC also got some bad news Saturday when it was learned that left fielder Tommy Inman, injured Friday while stealing a base in the first inning of the first game of a doubleheader, fractured his ankle instead of his foot as it was originally believed.

That injury necessitated surgery Saturday morning, and doctors now say that it will be six-eight weeks before he is able to walk again.

LCC coach Larry Hays is already seeking a hardship ruling for Inman which would allow him to retain this year's eligibility as he will be out for the rest of the season.

The Chaparrals, now 9-2 on the year, will take on JCC again today in a doubleheader beginning at 1 p.m. Incidentally, the Bulldogs are one of only two teams to knock off LCC this season and did it with the first 10-run "Mercy" ruling to go

Monterey Nine Wins Midland Baseball Crown

MIDLAND (Special) — Monterey won the fifth annual Tournament of Champions with a 2-1 victory over Duncanville here Saturday.

The victory gives the Plainsmen a 4-3 season record. MHS went undefeated in tournament play, knocking off Midland Lee 2-1 and shutting out Duncanville 5-0 Friday night.

Steve Coleman earned the win for MHS in the championship game with relief help from Stan Zelner in the seventh.

Four Plainsmen were named to the all-toutnament team. Kent Potts at first base, Ricky Pinkerton at third base, Tom Bevins as the designated hitter, and Bart Burgess in the outfield.

Pinkerton, who pitched a one-hit win over Duncanville Friday night, was named the tournament's most valuable player.

TOURNEY JOINS CIRCUIT

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The Philippines Open Golf Tournament in Manila last month has been accepted as the third leg of the Asian Circuit, the president of the Asia-Pacific Golf Federation, Justice Abdul Hamid, said Saturday. Hamid said the Philippines Golf Association also has agreed to pay the debt of $10,000 which it defaulted last year.

Toledo Upset Features NCAA Regional Round

By The Associated Press

Stan Joplin's 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer capped a 14-point comeback and gave unranked Toledo a 74-72 triumph over No. 14 Iowa Saturday, starting a day of upsets and sending the Rockets into the Mideast Regional semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

"I knew it was going in as soon as it left my hand," said Joplin, whose clutch shooting led to Iowa's downfall. Eleventh-ranked Georgetown and No. 15 Texas were other Top Twenty teams shocked Saturday as the tournament continued.

James Bailey and Daryl Strickland combined for 40 points as Rutgers upended Georgetown 64-58 and advanced to the East semifinals while Oklahoma shot 62.2 percent and got 25 points from Raymond Whitley to down Texas 90-76 and gain the Midwest semifinal.

The rest of the Top Twenty teams fared better, as ninth-ranked Louisiana State topped Appalachian State 71-57 in Mideast competition, 10th-ranked Syracuse held off Connecticut 89-81 in the other East quarter-final. No. 12 Marquette throttled Pacific 73-48 in the West after No. 19 San Francisco blasted Brigham Young 86-63, and 18th-ranked Louisville nipped plucky South Alabama 69-66 in the other Midwest clash.

Eight games today will decide the opposition for Saturday's winners. No. 1 Indiana State and Virginia Tech vie for the right to meet Oklahoma in the Midwest semifinal next Thursday; Southern Cal faces DePaul and Pepperdine plays second-ranked UCLA to decide the pairings for next week's West Regional.

Meanwhile, unranked St. John's meets Duke in the other East quarter-final, with the winner to meet Rutgers; Penn and No. 3 North Carolina grapple, with the winner facing Syracuse; Lamar plays No. 4 Michigan State and Eastern Kentucky battles No. 5 Notre Dame in the other Mideast Regional quarter-final.

Also today, Weber State and seventh-ranked Arkansas meet in the other half of the Midwest quarter-final.

"Toledo came out in the first five minutes of the second half and was ready to play," observed the Hawkeyes' Ronnie Lester. Toledo fell behind 45-31 early in the second half, but ran off 11 straight points and outscored Iowa 17-4 to pull within a point.

The Hawkeyes made 68 percent of their first-half shots, with Lester contributing 18 of his 23 points. But Toledo "went to a man-to-man defense at halftime because we were behind," said Iowa coach Lute Olson, and the strategy worked.

The game was tied at 53 before Toledo scored 6 straight points, then the lead shifted back and forth before Iowa's Vincent Brookins tied the game a final time at 72 with 11 seconds to play.

That set up Joplin's shot. "I gave it a little more wrist action than normal, but I had no doubt that it was good," said Joplin.

Toledo improved its record to 22-7, while Iowa finished 20-8.

Louisiana State, playing without their suspended leading scorer, DeWayne Scales, still manhandled Appalachian State behind 14 points by Rick Mattick and 13 more by Lionel Green. The Tigers built a 31-20 lead at intermission, then got the first basket of the second half from Jordy Hultberg.

Appalachian State, 23-6, never came within 11 points after that as the Tigers raised their mark to 23-5.

Syracuse got 19 points from Roosevelt Bouie and managed to withstand a determined comeback by Connecticut to move up in the East regional. The Orangemen amassed a 25-point lead in the first half and led 52-35 at intermission before the Huskies came back.

"We got very careless in the second half," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boheim.

"If we weren't champions tonight, we would have been blown out by 45 points before it was all over," said coach Dom Perno of the Huskies, who got 21 points from Mike McKay. "I've got to believe Syracuse knows they were in a ball game."

Pacific was never in its ball game with Marquette, 22-6. Sam Worthen and Bernard Toone collected 18 points apiece to sink Pacific. The Tigers were led by 12 points from Ron Cornelius and finished 18-12 — the worst record in the entire tournament.

"We had too much quickness for them. We had too many guns," said Marquette coach Hank Raymonds.

EHS, Coronado Tracksters Win

The Estacado Matadors got first-place finishes from Robert Humphrey, Kelvin White and Preston Davis Saturday in winning the Class AAA Division at the West Texas Relays in Odessa. And in Amarillo, Coronado made it two titles for Lubbock schools with a victory in the Amarillo Relays.

Humphrey won the 100-yard dash in a time of 10.1, while Davis captured the 440-yard dash in a time of 50.9. White, only a sophomore, was a first-place finisher in the 220 with a 22.7.

At the same meet, Monterey got a first-place finish from Chuck Perry in the high jump Friday night and a win by miler Curtis Conaway to finish fourth with 46 points. Midland Lee won the team crown with 141 points, Permian had 62 for second place.

Conaway, a winner last week in the 880-yard dash at Lubbock, won the mile going away in a time of 4:23.6. Conaway was a state competitor last year in the four-lap race.

Dale Candor of Lubbock Christian High took first place in the 440-yard dash by nipping Todd Smith. Candor had a 51.2 time, Smith a 51.7.

The Coronado Mustangs took first place at the Amarillo Relays, but James Gandy's crew had to win the mile relay before it could take home the individual crown.

Archie Moore, a regional competitor for the past couple of seasons in the 220, took the title in the 440 with a time of 51.8. He also placed third in the long jump with a leap of 20-0.

The Mustangs scored 103 points to narrowly defeat Midland, which had an even 100.

In a meet here, Amarillo High jumped out to an early lead in the Lubbock Girls Invitational meet at the Coronado track and then coasted on to an impressive victory.

The Sandies piled up 125½ points — nearly double that of the closest competitor. Big Spring was in second with 70 points and Amarillo Tascosa wound up third with 53.

Blake Claims State Crown

FORT WORTH (Special) — Robin Blake of Levelland, but representing the Lubbock region, defeated Pat Duran of Wichita Falls by a unanimous decision to win the state Golden Gloves championship in the featherweight division Saturday night.

Earlier in the night, Blake defeated two-time state chamion Dan Lavario of Odessa in the semifinals. That decision was unanimous, also.

Blake was Lubbock's only state champion in the tournament which wound up Saturday night.

ENMU GOLFERS SECOND

FORT WORTH (Special) — The Eastern New Mexico University golf team showed 10 other college teams that they know something about the game in scoring a 581 to take second place in the Southwest Recreational Golf Tournament. TCU was the winner with a 554.

Beene Hurls No-Hitter As Baylor, Tech Split

WACO (Special) — Andy Beene fired a no-hitter in the second game of a Southwest Conference doubleheader with Texas Tech Saturday afternoon to lead the Baylor Bears to a 4-0 victory.

Beene, a senior from Dallas, allowed only five Raiders to reach first base, all via the walk. In the process of handcuffing Tech, Beene struck out eight Raiders, while going the complete nine innings.

Chuck Johnson, the former Lubbock Coronado hurler, was the losing pitcher in the second game. He went only one inning before he was tagged for 4 runs — 2 earned — and chased from the mound. Steve Ibarguen relieved Johnson and gave up six hits but failed to allow a run.

The win upped Baylor's season record to 14-3. The Bears are 4-1 in conference action. Meanwhile, Tech dropped to 7-7 overall and 2-4 in league play.

It was also the second consecutive season the Raiders have been no-hit.

Fritz Connally was the batting leader in Baylor's win, going one-for-three and driving in a pair of runs. Brad Oliver and Greg Pennington also had RBIs for BU.

Mike Farmer and Larry Selby both had a pair of RBIs to lead the Raiders to their opening-game victory. The duo both went two-for-four during the seven-inning contest.

Randy Newton also held the hot hand for Tech, going 3-for-3 and scoring a pair of runs.

Shane Nolen was the loser for Baylor, giving up four hits and 1 run. Reliever Bill Cody was also socked hard, allowed six hits and 4 runs — al earned.

Nazareth Captures B Crown

It was Nazareth's third consecutive Class B title.

Brock trailed only 40-39 with 3:50 left in the game but Paula Phillips missed two crucial free throws and her twin sister Pattie missed a short jump shot. A field goal and two field goals by Lori Gerber clinched the victory for Nazareth.

Kay Hull had 14 points for Brock even though she sat out almost one-third of the game with fouls, and Pattie Phillips and Tina Procter each had 12.

Lori's sister, Colleen, scored four points, including two free throws with 12 seconds remaining. Glenda Gerber scored four and Sharon, another cousin, two.

Lucci Upset

Lucci, a 6-foot-2, 215-pounder, says the officers cuffed his hands behind him, "sat on my head and rubbed my face on the cement."

Andrews Whips EHS In Twinbill

Despite a stellar performance by Estacado fresham Hector Limon, the Matadors were defeated twice by Andrews in a high school doubleheader Saturday afternoon, 8-5 and 4-2.

Limon, the loser in the first game, ended the day by going 5-for-8 at the plate. He also doubled as the EHS catcher in the second game.

Estacado outhit Andrews 14-10 in the first game, but committed five costly errors — four in the outfield — allowing AHS to score 3 runs in the sixth inning.

In the second game, Andrews jumped out to a 4-0 lead before the Matadors could get their first run. Limon ended the second game by going 3-3.

Ponies Sweep Hobbs

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Munching on a candy bar, Coronado baseball coach John Dudley took a short break between games of a nondistrict doubleheader with the Hobbs Eagles. Dudley didn't realize it at the time, but it was going to be a long time until his next meal.

The Mustangs scored 20 runs on just 11 hits to sweep a twinbill 20-6 at the Coronado baseball field Saturday afternoon. The Mustangs took the opener 9-3.

"It's a good thing we had Segrest (Gene) in the second game," said Dudley. "Until he came in, we were having trouble getting the ball over the plate."

Segrest won his second game of the season without a defeat, fanning 12 batters in just four innings of work. He was one of two pitchers who came in to relieve starter Jim Wells in the third inning.

Wells and reliever Rick Powell were both have having control problems. Wells walked five before Powell inherited the mound duty. Powell only faced three batters and walked them before Segrest came on.

Segrest, however, was able to end the Eagles' 5-run rally by striking out the Eagles' Hub Perry, the first batter he faced.

The Mustangs took the lead for good in the bottom of the third frame, scoring 4 times off losing pitcher Bo Thomas (0-1) on just two hits..

Then rightfielder Donnie Arterburn came home with the fifth run when Thomas was called for a balk.

In the first game, Wells stifled any hope of an Eagle victory when he slugged a 3-run homer in the fourth inning to open a 4-2 Mustang lead.

Russell Johnson got the victory for the Mustangs, going the distance allowing 3 runs on only five hits. The Coronado southpaw struck out five batters.

The sweep gives Coronado a 5-2 record. Mark Beeson suffered the loss as the Eagles fell to 0-4.

Besides the home run, Wells was perfect at the plate, getting half of Coronado's eight hits.

The Mustangs will be back in action Monday afternoon at the Coronado field against Big Spring in a single game. The action is slated to get underway at 4 p.m.

CHS also won two JV games from Hobbs by 12-2 and 14-2 scores.

Galindez Stops Aquilar In Seven

Galindez weighed in at 184¾ pounds, nearly 11 pounds more than he did when his bout with Rossman in Las Vegas, Nev., two weeks ago was canceled at the last minute in a dispute over judges.

The light heavyweight limit is 175 pounds, but the scheduled 10-round bout, which started at midnight, was allowed to go on.

CONTEST WINNER — Avalanche-Journal photographer Paul Moseley won second place in sports photography for Region 8 (Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma) of the National Press Association January contest. More than 300 photos were considered. The panel of judges commented on his timing in getting the facial expression and body english. His shot captured Texas Tech high jumper David Wood clearing the bar at 6-4 during the Lubbock Christian College Indoor Track Meet in January.

SOC Upset By Victoria In 4A Finals

Both teams broke under pressure in the frantic moments of the rematch of the 1978 title game — which South Oak Cliff won — but Victoria regrouped with the pass to Miss Boldt for the winning goal.

Victoria's Rene Howell stole the ball from South Oak Cliff freshman Vicki Green, and Sheryl Hauglum intercepted a pass and tipped another pass to Miss Boldt to keep South Oak Cliff from scoring on three possessions in the closing moments.

Patricia Jacques' jump shot tied the game for South Oak Cliff at 41-41, after Miss Howell had missed two consecutive one-and-one free throw opportunities that would have clinched the game for Victoria.

Victoria called time out with 28 seconds left to set up a final shot, and 4,850 screaming fans knew Miss Hauglum — a great shooter who had hit baskets at the buzzer ending the first and second quarters — would take it.

Lamesa Drubs Dunbar Nine

Lamesa capitalized on nine errors to coast to a 14-1 victory over Dunbar at Mackenzie Park Saturday.

Three Dunbar errors in the second inning allowed Lamesa to jump out to a 3-0 lead and the Golden Tornadoes were never headed.

(Related Story, Page 10, Sec. B)

Dunbar is 0-5 this season and will travel to Andrews for a game on Tuesday before playing Lamesa again Thursday.

Nelson's Hot Streak Nets Inverrary Lead

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Larry Nelson, gunning for his first victory in six years of pro golf tour activity, birdied three holes in a row on the way to a 5-under-par 67 that lifted him into a 4-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic.

Nelson, 31, a consistent money-winner and a member of the PGA Tour's Policy Board, had a 54-hole total of 203, 13 shots under par on the 7,127-yard Inverrary Country Club course.

While the slightly built Nelson was taking apparent command in the chase for a $54,000 first prize, Jack Nicklaus shot an uninspired 73 and decided he needs some more work.

Nicklaus, unbeaten on this course in the last three years but well out of contention at 219, made a late entry in next week's Doral-Eastern Open, a tournament he originally planned to skip.

"I'm a little behind schedule," Nicklaus said. "My game isn't as sharp as it should be. It just needs more work."

Grier Jones, who lost this tournament a year ago when Nicklaus birdied the last five holes, and Hale Irwin shared second at 207. Jones shot a 69 and Irwin, who set the course record with a brilliant 62 Friday, went 10 shots higher to par 72.

"I knew I should have just kept playing yesterday," Irwin said. "I knew it would be difficult after yesterday. After having that much adrenalin, that much momentum, I knew it would be hard to shut down the engine and then get it started again.

"It's difficult to point to anything I did really well today. I certainly didn't putt like I did yesterday."

Ray Floyd came on with a 67 and moved into contention at 208. British Ryder Cup player Mark James and Tommy Aaron were next at 209. Aaron, who shared the second round lead with Irwin, was tied for second until he hit into the water and made triple bogey-7 on the 17th hole. He finished with a 74. James, who has played the par-5 holes 12 under par for the tournament, shot a 70.

It was another 2 shots back to the bulky group at 211. They were Mike McCullough, who shot a third round 67; Lee Elder, 68; DeWitt Weaver and Rod Curl, 69s; Curtis Strange and U.S. Open champ Andy North, 71s; Wayne Levi, 72; and Charles Coody, 74.

Nelson's background is one of the more unusual in the game. He didn't take up golf until the age of 21. Nelson, who once had some aspirations for a baseball career, was working as an illustrator for an aircraft company when his wife gave him a set of golf clubs. He began hitting balls on his lunch hour, liked the game so well he gave up his job and became an assistant pro. A few years later he joined the tour and has improved steadily.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Taiwan's Lu Hsi Chuen fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67 Saturday and took the lead in the $60,000 Malaysian Open golf championship.

Boating Week Brings Displays

Persons interested in any phase of boating (fishing, skiing, or family outings) will have the opportunity to see the latest in boats, motors, trailers and other marine accessories during the upcoming Let's Go Boating Week.

The three participating boat dealers here — Furr Marine, Inland Discount Marine, and Sportsman Supply — are extending hours of operation (weekdays 8 a.m.-8 p.m., Sundays noon-6 p.m.) through next Sunday for the special boating display.

Manufacturer representatives will be on hand to answer questions about various boating subjects and to help novice boaters find the right equipment for their particular boating requirements.

Next Saturday and Sunday, Bill Owens, a professional fisherman from Lowrance Electronics will present free seminars on electronic (depth finder) fishing at the three participating marine firms.

Furr Marine, Inland Discount Marine, and Sportsman Supply will have more than $1 million in new 1979 boats and motors on display during the event. Free refreshments will be served, and more than $2,000 in door prizes will be given away.

Record Brown Caught

AUSTIN (Special) — A 6½-pound German brown trout caught from the Guadalupe River below Canyon Reservoir has established a new category for that species in the state record book.

The catch, made by W.B. Trussell of Houston on Dec. 29, caused considerable excitement among Parks & Wildlife Department biologists and Trout Unlimited, Inc., members who have cooperated through the years in stocking browns in the river.

The Guadalupe Chapter of Trout Unlimited has purchased a large number of brown trout from northern states in the past five years, and the P&WD has assisted by rearing some of them at its San Marcos hatchery and by overseeing the stocking process, according to Bob Bounds, inland fisheries management coordinator.

Rainbow trout comprise the bulk of the P&WD's stocking efforts in the Guadalupe and at other locations across the state, because of their availability for a put-and-take fishery.

Trout Unlimited members have experimented with various techniques in efforts to help the brown trout reproduce naturally in the Guadalupe, but so far evidence of a spawn has been lacking.

Trussell caught the record brown on an ultralight spinning outfit. He said the lure was a "girdle bug," a black spider-like fly with rubber legs, fished under a small bobber.

Bounds said a trout of this size in the Guadalupe is unusual because summer water temperatures usually climb high enough to put any species of trout under stress. "That's why we consider the Guadalupe a 'put-and-take' operation," said Bounds. "And that's why it's unusual to find a big trout that has survived several summers as this fish obviously has."

Bounds said the department currently has 20,000 brown trout at the San Marcos hatchery to be stocked later. This past winter's rainbow trout stocking program already has placed 26,000 catchable-sized rainbows in the Guadalupe, with 12,000 yet to be stocked.

Outdoor Guide Readied

The 1979 edition of Outdoor Adventures, Braniff International's travel guide for outdoor sportsmen is off the press and available for distribution.

It is the only compilation of outdoor trips which covers much of the Western Hemisphere and which has been ckecked on the spot by members of the Braniff Outdoor Council of editors, broadcasters and sportsmen.

This year's publication contains more than 70 outdoor vacation tours for the active people who fish, hunt, photograph, and enjoy the out-of-doors.

Fishermen will find black bass in Florida and Mexico; the powerful peacock bass in Panama, Columbia and Brazil; giant trout in Argentina; salmon in Alaska.

Tropical angling adventures feature tarpon, snook and billfish throughout the Caribbean. Exotic species of fish such as picuda, dorado, and payara are highlighted in a dozen or more South American tours.

Hunters will find selected shoots for Scottish partridge, Mexican quail, and Argentine waterfowl. There are float trips on the White and Green rivers in the United States.

Public Hearings Slated By P&W Commission

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Department

All counties under the regulatory authority of the Parks & Wildlife Department are scheduled for public hearings across the state Monday and Thursday.

Citizens are invited to exercise their right to comment on the proposed changes at these public hearings.

As a result of the Texas Legislature, the P&WD has the regulatory authority in 237 counties. In others, game and fish laws are set by the state legislature. In a few counties, the P&WD has authority over either game or fish regulations.

Proposed changes recommended by the P&WD in northwest Texas will include:

- Making it unlawful to possess antelope with proof of sex removed;
- Prevent the use of a dragging device connected between vehicles to hunt pheasant;
- Close antelope season in 24 counties in the Panhandle and Permain Basin;
- Reduce the mule deer season to nine days;
- Extend the pheasant season from the second Saturday in Dec. to the first Sunday in January;
- Increase daily and possession limit of striped bass to five and 10 respectively;
- Reduce the minnow seine restriction from 40 feet to 20 feet in the Wichita falls area; and,
- Make it unlawful to possess furbearer pelts and/or carcasses in closed season.

If these proposals meet with the approval of the public and the P&W Commission, they will become law and will be listed in the new 1979-80 hunting, fishing and trapping regulations issued and effective for the fall hunting seasons.

The Lubbock County meeting will be Thursday at 10 a.m. at the courthouse.

The Power Streak 78 has been our best-selling diagonal ply tire for two simple reasons. Honest performance. And honest value. The durable diagonal ply body is built with individual cross-plies of polyester cord. You get dependable strength, as well as flexibility.

But you won't get any annoying "thump," even when starting out.

The Power Streak 78 also has a special six-rib tread, designed specifically for good all-around traction and cornering ability.

Wooden Claims Greed Behind League Tourneys

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

John Wooden didn't utter a word after he was asked by a newsman why more and more conferences around the country were going to post-season basketball tournaments. Instead, he just put his thumb and forefinger together and rubbed them together a few times.

It didn't take a translator to decifer what Wooden was trying to say, either: Money.

"If you have a tournament," said the man who guided UCLA to 10 NCAA basketball titles in 27 years, "why play the rest of the season? You always say you are giving the other teams another chance. Well, if they played 16 conference games, for instance, they had 16 chances. I don't like them at all."

JOHN WOODEN

Wooden, now warmed up on the subject continued: "But I know why they do it. I know why there are 40 teams in the NCAA this year. I know why the NBA plays 82 games and only eliminates a few from the playoffs — it's greed."

Pure and simple.

But even Wooden admitted maybe that wasn't so bad. After all, had it not been for last week's Southwest Conference's post-season event in Houston, Wooden — in town working as television commentator — would have been without a job for a couple of nights.

But, obviously, Wooden doesn't really need the work. After all, he still has his basketball camps — about eight weeks of them each year, in fact — and he speaks to 20 or so coaching clinics and on more than 30 college campuses each year. Add to that the 15 games he describes for the television networt and the speeches he makes to business conventions around the nation, and you have yourself a very busy man.

Standing in front of a small group of newsmen and looking more like an English professor than the man who won more basketball games than anyone in the history of the game, Wooden was quite candid during his hour-long talk.

"After all," he said. "I've never been considered a middle of the roader."

So, he added, pick a subject and he'd talk about it:

• The NCAA tournament: "Unquestionably, as far as sports is concerned, the NCAA finals is one of th most exciting events in the country. But I don't know if I like them raising the number of (tournament) teams to 40. I think they are just watering down the tournament. Yes, we have more good teams than ever before. But I'm not sure we have more great teams."

• Indiana State, currently the No. 1 ranked team in the nation: "They have taken a bad rap from some people because of the schedule they have played. But some overlook the fact that they beat Purdue at Purdue. They beat the Russians when a lot of supposedly fine teams could not. I know how it is to play at places like New Mexico State and Bradley and Southern Illinois."

• Larry Bird, considered to be the best player in college basketball: "I don't think you can argue with the fact that he is one of the top players in the country. I've seen him play only one time personally and once or twice on television. He can do things with the basketball that you want done. I don't look upon him as a tremendous individual defensive player, but he plays good team defense. He plays the middle very well."

• Three-man officiating crews: "I think it has some value. I know some coaches complain about the three officials, but they are the same who complain about two. They would complain if there were six-man crews."

• On the Southwest Conference's upswing in basketball: "Very frankly I didn't have respect for the SWC. But things are changing. There has been tremendous progress in the SWC. Texas gave it a boost by winning the NIT. And Arkansas did the game by going to the Final Four. By doing that it encourages other teams to build up."

• On the chances of another dynasty like his at UCLA: "Of course there's that chance. But I don't think it will happen in my lifetime."

• On the Interscholastic League's rule prohibiting summer basketball camps for high school players: "It's ridiculous. I don't see what their reasoning is. They can be very helpful if they are handled correctly. I don't think they are used as a recruiting gimmick, either. If they are, that's the fault of the management. Some say that it keeps the kids without money out. If a coach wants his youngster to go to a camp, he can get them in if they have a penny or not. I really don't like the all-star camps, though."

• On possible rule changes: "I've always thought they should eliminate the jump ball. There's no way it's fair. They should just alternate the ball. They should also eliminate baskets after offensive rebounds. That would eliminate the cheap baskets by the big man and it would also cut down on fouls. That would bring back great passing, one of the beautiful parts of the game."

• On the 30-second clock: It would be a travesty. I don't want to see a rule that would make a team play a certain kind of basketball. The 30-second clock wouldn't effect most styles of basketball anyway. Most teams get their shots off before then."

• On his relative calmness on the bench: "I told my players that outscoring a team in a basketball game is not that earth shaking a matter and that being outscored is not, either. I tried to reflect that on the bench. I worked hard at self discipline. If a coach loses his temper, chances are he'll be outcoached."

• On coaching: Contrary to what you hear there aren't that many great moves to make during a game. But there are some that like you to think so, especially the ones that call timeout with 10 seconds left and they're losing by 20. Many coaches should be in Hollywood."

• On illegal recruiting: "I think the NCAA is doing an outstanding job on policing recruiting. There aren't nearly as many violations as coaches and alumni imply. The people who are hollering are the same ones that aren't doing well. But, I think, most of the illegal things are minor." And, "The coach should be fired and not allowed to coach again. And I don't buy that thought that the athlete didn't know what he was doing. Just make the player ineligible. I guarantee that would solve the problem."

• On the reason he retired: "I had no intention of retiring. But at the end of the Louisville game, one of the best games ever, by the time I got the dressing room my mind was made up. After that game I didn't feel good and I had no reason to feel bad. So I felt it was logical to get out. And there were a couple of other reasons I'd rather not get into."

• And finally, the eventual NCAA champion: "I'd rather not say; that always gets you in trouble." What a time to hedge.

DHS Coach Sees Improvement

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The Dunbar baseball team may not have the best record, but the Panthers have lowest unemployment rate in town. In fact, the percentage challenges the national average.

Of an enrollment of 792 students, approximately 300 are involved in a work-studies program. That leaves doesn't leave too many to choose from as athletes.

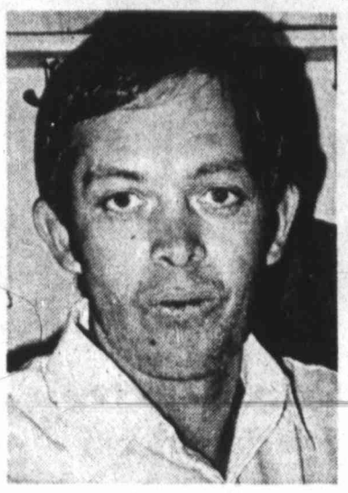
Thus, coach Kelly Rogers has had to plan his workouts around his players' work schedules.

"I don't know exactly how many of the kids on our team work," commented Rogers this week. "But I'm sure over 50 percent of our regulars do. There is a tendency for a little mental letdown by the kids towards the end of workouts, but that's no excuse."

Dunbar, which has not particpated in baseball since 1970, is playing like a team that's been away from the game for nine years.

In five outings, the Panthers have failed to post a victory. Dunbar has scored only 10 runs in that time — none in the last four games.

"We're not striking out that much," said Rogers. "It's just that we've been hitting the ball at people. We just can't find the holes."



KELLY ROGERS

Despite the Panthers' slow start, Rogers can see improvement.

"I'm not elated by what we've done so far," said the Dunbar baseball mentor. "But game experience has helped us become a better club. We've cut down on the number of walks allowed and fielding errors."

Rogers is carrying a 27-man roster. However, about a third of the squad has only been with him a couple of weeks.

"I had to wait for basketball and wrestling to end," said Rogers. "Since these kids have worked out very much, most are being bothered by sore arms."

Rogers claims there is no ace on the Panther pitching staff. The reason is that the Dunbar hurlers are putting too much pressure on themselves.

"Our pitchers have been trying to throw the ball around the edges of the plate," said Rogers. "Our pitchers know that our defense has been a little suspect at times, and they've been trying to take that burden off the infielders' shoulders. What's been happening is that, although we've cut down lately, we're still giving up walks."

"The field hasn't been graded and there is a lot of rocks, which causes a lot of unusual bounces," said Rogers. "Then during a game, when a ground ball is hit, our infielders really don't know how to react. We're going to try and eliminate the problem by practicing more on our game field."

In contrast, the outfield has played "real good in spots," said Rogers. "However, when we've gotten behind, they've tried too hard. Since our players haven't been together too long, the most consistent problem is that our cutoff men don't know where to play on relay throws. Thus, they've been overthrown which has caused runners to score."

Rogers, however, hasn't lost his enthusiasm for baseball. For a Saturday afternoon game against Lamesa, the Panther coach was at the school and dressed by 10 a.m.

"Our kids haven't lost their confidence," said Rogers "They know it's a building year. Next season, we're going to be an almost all-junior team."

THE SCHEDULE

Purdue, Dayton Follow Different NIT Routes

By The Associated Press

For college basketball fans who are fascinated by the eternal matchup of the immovable object and the irresistible force, the National Invitation Tournament offers a a tasty pairing for Monday night's second round.

The immovable object is Purdue, proud of its Big Ten-leading defense. The irresistible force is Dayton, which set a school record by scoring 105 points in the opening round. Ahead for the survivor of the confrontation is the next round of the oldest college basketball tournament in the nation.

The 42nd NIT has reduced its largest field ever from 24 teams to 12 with the next round of six games scheduled for Monday night. Besides Dayton-Purdue, the matchups are Ohio State at Maryland, Old Dominion at Clemson, Virginia at Alabama, Alcorn State at Indiana and Texas A&M at Nevada-Reno.

Four of Monday's survivors move into the quarter-finals Thursday or Friday at sites to be determined, with two others, in a blind draw, going directly to the March 19 semifinals at New York's Madison Square Garden. The finals are scheduled for March 21 at the Garden.

Purdue coasted to a 97-80 victory over Central Michigan in its NIT opener with reserves Mike Scearce and Neil Bemenderfer scoring career highs of 26 and 17 points, respectively. But coach Lee Rose warned that game wasn't typical of his 24-7 Boilermakers.

"I see they scored 80 points," Rose said of Central Michigan. "We're the best defensive team in the Big Ten. We were able to let the throttle out and make it a little more exciting for the fans.

"The fans saw us run a lot, but it's a format I wouldn't want them to get too accustomed to. If they get too accustomed to it, I'll move on," said Rose, who in his first year at Purdue has coached the team to its most victories in any single season.

Waiting for the proud Purdue defenders are the run-and-gun Dayton Flyers, who destroyed Holy Cross 105-81 in their NIT first-round game to run their season's record at 19-9.

"I thought we could play with this team (Dayton)," Holy Cross coach George Blaney said with a touch of admiration in his voice. "But they shot the eyes out of the basket."

We're a multi-national, multi-divisional Fortune 100 Company looking for a talented, energetic, self-starter who is qualified as an EDP Auditor.

Although Dallas based, your position will take you on the road 50% of the time to our facilities throughout the Western United States. You'll be involved in the auditing of critical financial systems using computerized techniques, including operational auditing to insure that controls are in place.

Most important, you will be dealing with all levels of management in our different divisions from computer operators to controllers, making judgements and evaluations, conducting debriefing sessions with divisional managers, and providing suggestions and guidance for improving the systems.

You must be an expert in computer operations with 2–4 years' experience in EDP and ideally with some accounting background and experience. Excellent communications skills, both technical and interpersonal are extremely important.

We offer excellent benefits and a starting salary commensurate with your experience. So if you like to travel and are ready to accelerate your career, send your resume with salary history and requirement in strict confidence to:

We asked people what they wanted in an apartment

This is what they told us:
- Close to Tech
- Clean and neat
- Economical
- Security Police
- Dead Bolts
- Plenty of Light
- A Manager who cares

It was a tall order...but, we did it!

DATSUN 210 HATCHBACK GETS 35 MPG*

THAT'S THE BEST EPA ESTIMATED GASOLINE MILEAGE

This year, Datsun's 210 Hatchback with optional 5-speed got a superlative 35 MPG* in the Environmental Protection Agency estimated gasoline ratings. And that's better than any 1979 gasoline car tested. So come on down and see for yourself how we are driven to improve your economy by stretching your mileage.

Standard equipment: ●Split fold-down rear seat to carry passengers and cargo in equal comfort ●Fully reclining bucket seats ●Cut-pile carpeting ●Walk-in seat back release (slides forward to allow easy access to rear) ●Electric rear window defroster ●Side window defogger ●And many other standard features!

*1979 EPA estimate for comparisons. Optional 5-speed. Your mileage may differ, depending on how and where you drive, condition of your car and optional equipment.

Cancer Society Adds Patient Aid Programs

Within the past year, the Lubbock chapter of the American Cancer Society has added two programs to its growing list of services for cancer patients. These latest additions are transportation and information and guidance for cancer patients.

The programs came out of an increasing need, as seen by the Cancer Society, to provide transportation for patients who had no practical means of getting to radiation treatments and for patients and families who needed information and guidance or for those who wanted to know more about cancer.

According to Alan Burns, supervisor of radiation therapy at Methodist Hospital and chairman of the transportation program, the Lubbock program is fashioned after the one in Dallas, where he worked until coming to Lubbock in May of 1978.

A volunteer gives one morning per week transporting a cancer patient to Methodist for radiation treatment. There is no remuneration to the volunteer but the cost of gasoline is tax deductible, Burns said.

However, Burns said, the volunteer drivers in the program are just as important as the physician. "They're working with the team. It's the team approach nowadays, they're a team member helping the patient get his cure.

"The majority of our patients, the public doesn't really realize, are in a curative bracket, so to speak, with a combination of different treatment plans — chemotherapy, radiation therapy and surgery — working together," Burns said.

Burns explained that the volunteers express a deep satisfaction in assisting the cancer patients and that they perform duties far beyond just that of chauffeur.

"Another thing the volunteer helps us with is the family picture. We (hospital personnel) only relate to the patient up here on a day-to-day basis for four to six weeks and we become very good friends with them.

"But the volunteer picks them up at their home and they get to know what kind of environment they're in. They more or less funnel information to us by being our eyes on the deficiencies the patient may be having at home."

Burns said if the patient is having some trouble in the home, such as doing laundry, buying groceries or housekeeping, other agencies may be contacted to fulfill their particular needs.

To qualify for the program, he said, the patient must show that he cannot get to his treatments without great stress — financial inability to afford a cab or having to call on a working relative to provide transportation. However, the patient must be ambulatory and able to ride a car. Also, the patient must be able to be managed by the volunteer.

Burns cited a need for more volunteers in the Lubbock area and also in the surrounding areas. The transportation program now has about seven or eight drivers and has assisted six patients, he said. He added that with more volunteers the program could be expanded to aid chemotherapy patients. Also, he said, persons living outside of Lubbock need transportation because Methodist is the only hospital in the area to provide radiation therapy.

The information and guidance service works mainly as a referral agency and communication center for cancer patients, their families and those wanting to know about cancer.

Sue Walraven, human services director at John Knox Village, organized the program last October when the American Cancer Society alerted her to the need for a program in Lubbock.

Calling the American Cancer Society her "pet organization," Mrs. Walraven recruited 10 volunteers from John Knox and went to work.

Mrs. Walraven said much of their referrals from the Cancer Society are people who want to talk about the disease and how to handle the situation.

"Our main purpose is to help people and be of assistance to people in great need, if just someone to talk to to ease their minds or provide them some sort of comfort.

"We have found as much as anything they need people to talk with that are not afraid to talk with them about it.

"Cancer still, to a certain extent, is shoved under the rug or put in a dark closet. This gives them more of an openness, as fas as the disease is concerned, and they can talk to us where they wouldn't a neighbor or church person or someone of that nature."

Mrs. Walraven said along with being a sounding board for cancer patients, her volunteers provide many other services. They can obtain equipment needed for some patients through the Cancer Society. Also, they have researched other agencies in Lubbock and can direct patients to them for aid and help patients find the best organization for financial assistance, if needed.

The information and guidance program also is called on to intercede with the patient's doctor if the patient wants to know more about his condition and, according to Mrs. Walraven, physicians in Lubbock have been very cooperative with the program.

Volunteers may sometimes work with other American Cancer Society programs. At Christmas, the volunteers made up 115 bags of information and aids for the "Reach To Recovery" program for mastectomy patients.

Mrs. Walraven said work done by her volunteers is richly rewarding. "I really believe the people who are working with this program are receiving as much as the people we reach. It is a great sense if accomplishment."

For further information on these programs or other cancer-related programs, call the American Cancer Society, 762-0825.

Guerrilla Squad Dies

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An Israeli army patrol trapped and killed four Palestinian guerrillas in a tomato field early Saturday before they could carry out a plot to terrorize Israel by seizing hostages in the hours before President Carter arrived, the military said.

A Palestinian group in Beirut claimed its "suicide squad" had killed many Israeli soliders before dying themselves. But an army communique here said there were no Israeli casualties.

The gun battle near the Jordan River's Adam Bridge occurred 20 hours before Carter arrived in Jerusalem, 30 miles to southwest.

Elsewhere in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, Palestinians defying a ban on demonstrations burned tires and stoned Israeli trucks to protest Carter's visit to Israel. There were no reports of injuries or arrests in the protests in Ramallah, the nearby El Am'ari refugee camp and Jericho.

The Israeli communique said the motorized patrol intercepted the four Palestinians at about midnight near the bridge.

The lieutenant who led the patrol said the Palestinians "opened fire on the command car. Immediately we opened fire and killed one of the terrorists. We chased the others into a field of tomatoes. We immediately opened fire ... and saw that we killed all three of them."

In Beirut, the Popular Struggle Front, the smallest of eight factions of the Palestine Liberation Organization, claimed responsibility for the operation. The group said four members of its "suicide squad" were killed and many Israeli soldiers died.

The raid was aimed at demonstrating "the Palestinian people's rejection of Carter's latest attempt to conclude a treasonous peace treaty between Egypt and Israel," the group's statement said.

An army spokesman said the guerrillas had planned to take hostages and try to exchange them for 21 Arab and pro-Arab terrorists held by Israel. Among the prisoners whose release they would have sought was Kozo Okamoto, the Japanese gunman who participated in the 1972 terrorist attack at Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion Airport in which 26 tourists and Israelis died, he said.

The spokesman said leaflets found on the guerrillas' bodies showed they hoped to negotiate for a plane to fly them to Damascus, Syria. He said the leaflets identified the guerrillas as members of the Popular Struggle Front.

The Israeli communique said there may be more Palestinian attempts to disrupt Carter's planned 44-hour visit. Palestinian guerrilla organizations have called on Arab residents of the occupied territories to go on strike and demonstrate against the Israeli-Egyptian peace efforts.

In June 1974, guerrillas tried to disrupt President Richard M. Nixon's visit to Israel, part of a Mideast tour. The guerrillas crossed the Lebanese-Israeli border and attacked Shamir, a farm settlement in northern Israel. Three women were killed before the four guerrillas were slain.

Israeli warplanes bombed Palestinian bases in Lebanon for three days after Nixon departed.

The last guerrilla attempt to infiltrate Israel by way of the Jordan River was in June 1978, when four commandos attacked the settlement of Mekhola in the Jordan Valley, about 18 miles north of Saturday's shoot-out. Israeli settlers killed one of the attackers and three escaped.

The last Arab guerrilla attack in Israel occurred Jan. 13, when three Palestinians broke into a guest house in Maalot on Israel's border with Lebanon. Troops on furlough killed the guerrillas, but one woman died when she leaped from a third-floor window and three other Israelis were wounded in the attack.

Burglar Makes Coffee, Eggs After Entry

A six-foot dinosaur, jewelry and television sets were reported missing in several burglaries Friday and Saturday and a hungry intruder at one residence took the time to make breakfast of eggs and coffee before leaving the scene.

Andrea Ann Duplantis told police when her two young sons arrived at their 4702 Fourth St., No. 194, after school Friday, the boys' green fiberglass dinosaur was there. After the boys went into the house, they said they heard a noise outside, became frightened and crawled under a bed to hide.

Mrs. Duplantis said that when she arrived home at about 4:30 p.m. the toy dinosaur, worth more than $200, was missing.

A burglary reported at 6004 Feoria netted the intruder only $4 in cash, but the burglar apparently took time to enjoy coffee and eggs before departing. Eula Mae Morgan said her residence was entered sometime between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Two television sets, two clocks and two cameras were reported stolen from 2419 E. Seventh St. Ruby J. Buckley said burglars entered her residence Friday by kicking open a rear door. She estimated the loss at $1,299.

Jewelry and watches, valued at $1,000, were reported stolen sometime between Friday night and Saturday morning by Richard Eugene Kilpatrick, owner of Gene's Watch Repair at 1211 Avenue G.

Oscar Andrade of 3306 Jarvis told police $1,465 in television and stereo equipment was taken from his residence while he was out between 8:30 p.m. Friday and 12:20 a.m. Saturday.

Sam Smith of 1909 26th St. reported to police that plumbing tools, valued at $600, were stolen from a pick up truck bed at his residence overnight Friday.

PYRAMID VISIT — U.S. President Jimmy Carter and First Lady Rosalyn enjoy a visit to the Great Pyramid of Giza, outside Cairo, with Egyptian President and Mrs. Anwar Sadat Saturday as they wind up a two-day visit to Egypt before flying to Israel. (AP Laserphoto)

Carter, Cheops Equated

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Carter's guide waved at the towering wedge of stone built by the venerable monarch Cheops and said, "This king, too, was a man of peace."

Carter stared at the Great Pyramid of Giza, overlooking Cairo. His tour Saturday of Cheops' handiwork, splitting the Egyptian sky for 4,500 years, was a good opportunity for guide Shehata Adam to make a point: even presidents and kings must have faith.

Taking advantage of the humility nearly everyone feels at the feet of the pyramids, Adam, director of the National Antiquities Department, told his American guest it took 100,000 men 20 years to build the monument.

Twenty years, Adam repeated.

"I'm surprised that a government organization could do it that quickly," Carter quipped.

"Yes," Adam said, "it is government organization. It is skill. It is genius. And it is faith. It is faith in God, the God you spoke of today, your excellency."

Only a short while before, Carter had told members of the Egyptian parliament that he came to the Middle East to seek peace in the name of God.

Adam asked God to bless the U.S. president and declared that Carter and Cheops had two things in common. "Like your excellency, he (Cheops) was a man of peace, a man of human rights," the guide said. "May God protect you."

The president, a former Navy engineer, asked his guide a number of questions about construction of the pyramid. He was told laborers used 2.3 million blocks to build it and the blocks weighed from 1.5 to 15 tons each.

Pharoah Cheops, who ruled Egypt from 2590 to 2568 B.C., also built royal mortuary temples, three queens' pyramids, beautifully carved and painted tombs for eight of the royal children — and 64 large tombs for members of his court.

Tourists were barred all day from the pyramids at Giza and the Sphinx at the edge of the desert just outside Cairo.

A brown goat gazed, puzzled, as the presidential party passed: Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, their wives and a cluster of pushing and shoving photographers and security men.

Sentries and a few robed villagers stood nearby, scattered silhouettes against the darkening sky and the monochrome, sandy landscape.

The only native to get close to Carter was a yellow mongrel dog whose curiosity entangled him in the crowd of visitors. He brushed past Carter's trouser legs, then fled.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser, showed Sadat his new silver-colored worry beads — a kind of Islamic rosary that has a tension-relieving function in secular life.

"Who gave you those?" asked Sadat with a laugh.

As they neared a corner of the Great Pyramid, Carter turned to his wife, Rosalynn, and asked, "Think you could climb up that?"

Arab Press Doubts Carter Peace Initiative

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Newspapers in Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia expressed doubt Saturday that President Carter is seeking a full Mideast peace settlement and predicted he would settle for an Israeli-Egyptian pact.

Pro-government newspapers in the three Arab countries said Carter, at the outset of his current Mideast peace mission to Egypt and Israel, sent messages to Jordanian, Syrian and Saudi leaders assuring them he is seeking a full settlement.

The Damascus Daily Tichrin said President Hafez Assad of Syria, Israel's most militant neighbor, rejected the American president's assurances as well as "the entire American approach to the peace-making process."

In Amman, Jordan's semi-official newspaper Al Rai said King Hussein's government believed Carter should have addressed his message of assurance to Palestinian leaders also.

The issue of a homeland for Palestinian Arabs in Israeli-occupied territory has been a major obstacle to a Middle East peace settlement.

"The three messages, combined with Carter's talks in Cairo and Jerusalem, can never camouflage this insistence on ignoring the historic rights of the Palestinians to their occupied homeland," Al Rai said.

In the Saudi capital of Riyadh, the daily Al Jazira said it would believe in America's ability to bring about a comprehensive peace settlement "only when the United States declares full recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

BROTHERS COLLIDE

WAYNESBURG, Pa. (AP) — A man was killed on his 38th birthday after his pickup truck collided with one driven by his brother, state police said. Paul C. Tuttle of Waynesburg was pronounced dead shortly after the accident Friday night.

Cinderella Entries Sought

Young women wishing to enter the South Plains Cinderella Girl Pageant, scheduled for 7 p.m., March 31, in Coronado High School Auditorium, are encouraged to send in entry forms as soon as possible, according pageant chairman Maxine Caldwell.

The entry deadline for contestants in Lubbock and counties in the South Plains area is March 20. Complete details will be forwarded to contestants after entries are received, Mrs. Caldwell said.

Four age groups will compete: 3 to 6 for Cinderella Tot; 6 to 9 for Miniature Miss; 10 to 12 for Cinderella Miss; and 13 to 17 for Cinderella Teen.

Judges will select winners on the basis of close-up appraisal, sportswear and party dress modeling and talent presentation. Cinderella Tots do not compete in the talent category.

Entries are available at most Lubbock dance studios; Lue Ree's Briercroft Center; Sugar & Spice, Terrace Shopping Center; Art' Trim and Textiles, 3306 83rd ST..; Marcus' 3504 34th St., Buster Brown Shoes in South Plains Mall and the Gazebo Salon, 4437-B 50th St.

For entry forms or additional information, write Caldwell at 5404 32nd St., Lubbock, Tex. 79407, or call 806-793-5848. If no answer call 806-792-2282.

Blue Law Controversy Looms

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Local merchants may find themselves again embroiled in the continuing blue law controversy if members of the Chamber of Commerce Retail-Trade Committee decide Monday to take a stand on the issue.

Proposed legislation lessening the scope of the 1961 statute, which prohibits the sale of certain items on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, will be reviewed during a 2 p.m. committee meeting at the chamber office.

Chamber assistant manager Grey Lewis said committee members have not decided yet whether to make any recommendations on the four bills now before the Texas House Business and Industry Committee.

"Some members of the (chamber) committee suggested that, since these bills have been referred to committee in Austin, we review each one," Lewis said.

"It's possible that the Retail-Trade Committee members may make a recommendation on the current proposals to the (chamber's) board of directors," he added.

An official stand on the blue law and proposed changes then would have to be decided upon by the directors, he said.

City retailers' most recent skirmish in the blue law battle was during the December Christmas shopping rush, when merchants who operate Mondays through Saturdays threatened to file suit against blue law transgressors.

Irate merchants last year formed the Fair Trade Committee and created watchdog groups to monitor competitors' businesses on Sundays to see whether any of the 42 items banned by the law were sold.

Merchants who violate the statute could be fined up to $100 for the first offense. Subsequent convictions could get up to six months in jail and/or a fine up to $500.

Lewis said he does not know the local committee's feelings on the proposed blue law changes. However, Lubbock merchants generally have opposed elimination of the law, citing the increased pressure of competition businesses would face if the banned items were allowed to be sold seven days a week.

Some Lubbock critics of recent blue law monitoring claim most stores that are open throughout weekends face little pressure from other firms to comply with the law except during peak selling periods such as the Christmas holidays.

And city shoppers, on the infrequent occasions that their buying outings have been curtailed by strict enforcement of the law, have voiced strong resentment against the state regulation.

Because of many consumers' discontent with the law and its sporadic enforcement, four state representatives have introduced bills calling for repeal of the statute or reduction in the number of banned items.

Fort Worth Rep. Doyle Willis' House Bill 271 calls for repeal of the statute, while HB 264, sponsored by Bill Ceverha of Richardson, provides a list of items that could be sold on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays and that now are prohibited by the law.

El Paso Rep. Robert Valles' HB 593 would allow each county the local option of eliminating, altering or keeping the blue law.

And, apparently responding to the special needs of San Antonio, that city's representative, Frank Medla, has introduced HB 758, which would allow the sale of merchandise "principally of interest to tourists" on weekends by "tourist trade centers," defined as businesses that sell 50 percent or more of their goods to out-of-town visitors.

The bills are scheduled to go before the entire House for hearings next week.

DEMONSTRATION — At the Caprock ABC Vocational-Recreational Building at the Texas Boys Ranch, trustees Ken Thompson and Roger Kuykendall get a demonstration on the use of the table saw from ranchers Kevin Preciado and Luke Roy. The learning of vocational skills is an important aspect of the program for boys at the Ranch.

SADDLING UP — Ranchers Allen Pryton and Chris Hall get a helping hand up from Bob McKinsey, trustee, and John Crews, secretary of the board, during a recent visit to the Ranch. Helping hold the reins is Jamie Edwards, daughter of trustee Bill Edwards. Learning to ride and care for the horses provides recreation and training for the young ranchers.

Texas Boys Ranch Teaches Self-Reliance

Family News
Section D Sunday Morning, March 11, 1979

FAMILY NEWS EDITOR

Texas Boys Ranch was founded in Lubbock seven years ago to provide a home for homeless, neglected, dependent and predelinquent boys from the Lubbock metropolitan area.

A locally funded and directed program, the Ranch has grown slowly but steadily in its efforts to provide a place in this area where boys in need of special attention could grow and develop in an atmosphere which would encourage self-reliance and independence.

Recently the newly-elected trustees and board members of the ranch toured the facilities and were treated to a demonstration by the ranchers of the social, educational, and recreational facilities available to them.

At present two cottages, with quarters for about 20 boys, are provided at the ranch; future plans call for ten cottages and up to one hundred boys.

The Caprock - ABC Vocational/Recreation Building and the Vern Cone Recreational Hall provide facilities for a variety of activities by the boys. In the vocational building is equipment which is used to teach basic skills in a number of areas which will be useful to them in their future lives to the young men at the ranch. The recreation hall is a plesant, informal building where the boys can relax after a day of work and study.

An ambitious farm program provides a measure of agricultural technology for the residents as well as the opportunity to work in various farm-related skills.

The ultimate goal of all those who are involved with the ranch is to provide the boys who come there with the rehabilitation and counseling they need to return to their own homes and become good citizens of the community.

Although the ranch operates as a nonprofit organization, it does not necessarily confine the care to charity cases. Any boy who can benefit from the program can be admitted on a full or partial costs-of-care reimbursement basis, it being the primary purpose of the ranch to serve boys regardless of their ability to pay. Upon admission to the ranch, each boy is carefully evaluated as to his needs and a program which will best suit his interests is planned by qualified staff persons.

In the healthy, outdoor atmosphere of the ranch, the boys work and play and study together, growing emotionally, intellectually and physically under circumstances which are conducive to the healthy development of young men.

Boys are accepted without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. Ranging in age from 6 to 16 they are provided, at the ranch, with a variety of opportunities to increase their social skills, become trained in a vocation, and work out, if necessary, the problems that brought them there. Counseling is provided, where necessary, for the families of the boys.

The ranch is entirely privately funded, except for contract money with state agencies in some cases. Of the $165,000 budget of the Ranch, some $30,000 comes through support payments from public funds; the balance is raised in Lubbock. A large part of the donated monies are raised through the annual telethon and through the Christmas mailing.

The ranch is governed by a board of directors, which is responsible for the program and standard of service of the Ranch and the funding of its program. Les Murphy, administrator, is responsible for implementing the policies adopted by the board, the ongoing operations of the Ranch, and compliance with standards. A trained staff sees to the well-being of the boys in all phases of their lives.

Volunteers, such as sponsoring families, are welcome to participate in activities at the ranch and serve to enrich the program. Local organizations also provide many benefits for the boys, such as parties during the holidays, and the ranch welcomes suggestions and inquiries from local individuals or organizations wishing to adopt a service project.

An attempt is made to provide a daily schedule of study, work, play as balanced as possible to enhance the physical, mental, emotional and social development of the ranchers. Boys receive training in personal care, hygiene and grooming, as well as education in social living, sex education, consumer education and career planning through the ranch staff.

Ranchers attend Roosevelt School, and are encouraged to take part in school activities. They are given responsibilities for their own money and educated in its proper use. All boys at the ranch have specific duties to perform; the Ranch distinguishes between tasks which are expected as part of living together, jobs to earn spending money and jobs performed for vocational training.

The aim of the Texas Boys Ranch is to turn out well adjusted, self sufficient young men who are prepared to live healthy lives as citizens of the larger community.

TRACTOR LESSON — Jerry Lane, standing front, president of the board of Texas Boys Ranch and Ron Betenbough, left, third vice president, are given a tractor-driving demonstration by rancher Victor Lewis. Ricky Betenbough is seated on the tractor. All boys at the ranch have assigned chores and are encouraged to learn self-reliance and self-sufficiency.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

The Wicked Witch of the North has arrived.

Along about the first of the year, with Christmas over and the weather in Pennsylvania beginning its long, tedious march toward Spring, Dad gets the itch to get on down the road. Mama, however, finds one reason or another to delay the start of the trip from one week to the next.

The dog needs to go to the vet; a friend is having a checkup and Mama wants to know what the Doctor says; the church is having a covered dish supper; the attic needs cleaning.

Eventually, she will run out of delaying tactics and they will set off south, out of the snow belt, to visit their scattered children and grandchildren, leaving "the hobo" to look after the farm. His cryptic postcards will follow them: "20 below last night; packed snow; ate with Ralph; walked to church; Minnie eating; Brown's pipes froze."

Meanwhile, the grandchildren in South Carolina and Texas and Colorado will wait, poised, for word of their coming. If they are for some reason delayed calls will originate at one or another of the waystations along the way: "What have you heard?"

Eventually, one evening, the call will come.

"Where are you?"

"Oh, up the road a way."

This can mean anything from ten miles to fifty, so it is too late to start cleaning house.

Only a few years ago we formed a tidy line south from Pennsylvania: Washington, South Carolina, and Georgia, with just a day's journey between visits, and they were never too far from home to start back on a day's notice.

Then they would see spring come in the south, the dogwoods and azealas blooming along the Blue Ridge Parkway, and visit, on the way home, the little mountain valleys in Tennessee that they love.

Now it is further between visits, and our lives have become so complicated, with mothers working and children going in all directions that it is hard to find time to catch up on the news They were snowed in in South Carolina (Dad spent the week building cabinets) and driving across Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, they were assailed by thunderous rain, and had to pull off the road several times, finding themselves knee deep in water at the rest stops.

On one of their first visits to Georgia, when the call came from "up the road," Himself told his colleagues at the office that the Wicked Witch of the North was on her way, and the title delighted her.

It reminds us of his grandfather, who, when his mother-in-law came to visit, used to roll on the floor holding his stomach until someone asked what on earth was the matter.

"Oh," he would cry, "I have a terrible case of the muttinlaws!"

Whereupon that venerable lady would take the broom to him.

Himself and Mama are also the best of friends. When I used to bring him home to visit, Mama would prepare all the southern delicacies she could find at the local store: grits and blackeye peas and turnips, and see that the iced tea and hot bread were on the table.

We always save for them things that no one else can do as well; I have problems to discuss with Mama; there are projects around the house for Dad, and the children have a variety of things, from crafts to homework, they need help with. Mama, an old school teacher, can be counted on to straighten out their handwriting and their twice times, as well as to hear endless discussions about boyfriends and relationships. And, as always, she will ask, "what can I fix? " and we will each have our favorite dishes to ask for.

Dad will don his coveralls and, with his toolchest under his arm (he always threatens to leave it at home, but never does) find endless small chores to do around the house, which will make my life more comfortable and remind me of him in the months to come: turning on the light in the laundry room that he installed I will feel close to him.

Around the table at night, we sit, without television, to talk of home, old friends, who has married and who divorced and who died since last year. Himself and Dad will talk politics; Mama and I will discuss religion and family and the nature of reality. We will speak again of the nights the Princess and the Angel were born, and laugh over family tales and the stories, endlessly interesting to the children, of "the old days," when Mama was a child.

Their first visit west was a delight to them. They went from Lubbock into New Mexico and Arizona to see the sights that they had heard about all their lives, marvelling at the distances between places, the Grand Canyon, the Indian reservations. This year, with grandchildren in Colorado, they will see a new part of the country.

It is a hard part of modern life that our children are able to see so little of their grandparents, a development to which I am not resigned. Still I remind myself that in spite of the myths about the stable, close-knit families of the past, this country was settled by folks who said goodbye to familiar landscapes and loving faces and set out to seek a new life in a new place.

We have at least the advantage, until the oil shortage gets us, of being able to see them once a year.

Open House Benefits Crippled Children

Lubbock County Society for Crippled Children will sponsor a benefit open house from 3-4:30 p.m. today in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Durward Mahon. Cohosts will include Mr. and Mrs. Rex Dockery and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Myers.

The Lubbock County Society has been in operation since 1932 helping needy crippled children throughout the South Plains area. Money collected is used to buy braces, crutches, other orthopedic equipment and transportation to medical centers for crippled children whose parents cannot afford these expensive items.

Proceeds are also given to the Lubbock Cerebral Palsy and Neuromuscular Center which the society cosponsors with the Lubock Rotary Club.

The center, located at 3502 Ave. N, was founded in 1948. Over 3,000 children from nine states have used the services at the center. The clinic is staffed by physicians who are specialists in the various medical areas concerned with cerebral palsy and neuromuscular deficies.

All money collected remains in Lubbock. Contributions may be sent to Drawer 1121, Lubbock.

THOUGHTS ON HUMANITY

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: You constantly urge people to get counseling or therapy to help solve their problems. This might seem to be a cop-out to some, but I know how helpful it is.

At 14 my daughter was having problems. She wasn't popular, her grades were poor and we were constantly at each other's throat.

She threatened several times to run away, and I was worried.

Her teacher called me in and recommended a psychologist. My daughter agreed to go "just once." It worked out spendidly. It took only six months. (Both of us went so we could learn to understand each other better).

Today my daughter is the mother of two well-adjusted children. When they showed signs of emotional turmoil, she saw to it that they went to a professional therapist, just as she did, in order to understand themselves better. (Kids frequently need to talk to someone other than their parents because their parents usually are the problem).

Don't let up Abby. Mental health is the most important thing in the world. I dread to think of what might have happened had I been too proud, ashamed, or stingy or whatever it is that keeps so many people from seeking the help they need.

Thankful

Dear Thankful: Thank you for the testimonial. I know of no one who, at some time in his or her life, couldn't have used counseling. Not everyone needs years of analysis. But in times of stress, sorrow or indecision, a few sessions with a trained therapist can work miracles. Help is as near as one's mental health clinic. And the price is always right.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please find a nice girl for my son. Burton is 33, nice looking, plays the piano and is not dumb. He's had three years of college but he lacks ambition and drive.

He's gone out with lots of girls but he never calls them. If they call him, or if I arrange a date for him, he'll go. He has a few friends, but if they don't call him, he doesn't call them. I'm sure the right girl could motivate Burton to be a little more active socially.

His father and I would like to be grandparents, but Burton is our only child and he doesn't seem to be in any hurry to have a home of his own.

He lives with us, has an 8 to 4 job, and that's his life. Do you know of a nice girl for my Burton, Abby?

Worried In Patterson

Dear Worried: If Burton wants a girl he will have to find one himself. Perhaps one of his problems could be a mother who does too much for him. Burton sounds like a nice fellow. If he wants any help from me, I'll be glad to help him, but I can't intrude on a man's life because his mother asks me to.

DEAR ABBY: Can you give us a definition of "maturity" without going into a lot of detail?

You seem to have a gift for putting a lot into just a few sentences. Thank you for your time.

Sixth Graders

Dear Sixth Graders: Maturity is the ability to do a job whether you're supervised or not; finish a job once it's started; carry money without spending it. And last but not least, the ability to bear an injustice without wanting to get even.

ORANGE JUICE POACHED APPLES
(For Shortcake)

3 large apples, pared, cored and sliced
2 /3 cup orange juice
1 /3 cup sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg or curry powder
2 tsps. cornstarch
⅛ tsp. salt
¼ cup sugar

Combine orange juice and 1 /3 cup sugar in a medium saucepan. Cover and bring to boil; continue cooking and stirring until sugar is completely dissolved. Add apples and desired spice. Simmer until apples are barely tender. Remove from heat. Blend cornstarch, salt and sugar together in a medium saucepan. Srain syrup from apples and add to cornstarch mixture. Bring to boiling point and cook until clear. Add apples and serve over split, buttered warm shortcake biscuit. Top with whipped cream if desired. Makes about eight servings.

WHY DIAMOND PRICES VARY

Diamond Jewelry prices vary more than those of any other item I know. That's because there are so many factors to be considered in arriving at a value for this highly coveted gemstone.

The 4C's are most responsible for the variation. They are Cutting, Color, Clarity and Carat Weight of the stone.

The way a diamond is cut affects its beauty. If the stone is cut too deep, light entering from the top leaks out the sides, and the diamond appears black in the center. If the stone is too shallow, light entering the stone is not reflected at all, and passes straight through. When the stone is properly proportioned, light enters the stone, bounces around inside, and is releasd to the eye of the beholder, resulting in a display of brilliancy.

Most diamonds have a hint of yellow or brown in them, but if this color is too noticeable, it decreases the value of the stone. The complete absence of color is considered top quality.

Clarity is a judgment of the nature and number of internal and external marks in a stone. A few tiny inclusions are not visible to the naked eye and won't visibly affect beauty. The top clarity is flawless.

Carat weight is the final consideration in placing a value on a stone. Besides providing a figure to multiply by the per carat value arrived at after judging the other 3C's, the carat weight may place the stone in a different pricing category. In general, the larger the stone the higher the price per carat.

We at Anderson's know all about diamonds and are always willing to show and explain, to help you make a wise selection.

Asparagus Aids 'Bulge Battle'

Are you losing the battle of the bulge? If you are on a low calorie diet or just like the taste of fresh vegetables, fresh asparagus will be a welcome change to your menu.

As a child, asparagus may have been one of those vegetables that you had to eat before you could leave the table. It used to be the challenge of many a young boy to see how many he could stuff in his mouth without swallowing.

That bit of "diet discipline" you exercised as a child may now provide a great reward, if you're watching your weight. Six spears, about five inches long, have only 27 calories and contain many nutrients such as vitamins A,B and C and a wide variety of minerals. It is recommend for low sodium diets.

Of some 150 species of asparagus, the favorite strain used for producing California's large supply is "Mary Washington." The tight head of this variety eliminates the need for excessive washing to dislodge particles of sandy or silt soil it grows in, making it easier to keep fresh and damage-free for you.

You can find this flavor-packed vegetable from late February through June with supplies reaching their peak from April to June.

Look for smooth, closed, compact tips, round spears and a fresh appearance says USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service. A rich green color should cover most of the spear. Stalks should be tender almost as far down as the green extends.

When you begin to prepare the vegetables, bend the stalk so it snaps at the tender spot. Remove scales. Wash well and follow your favorite recipe.

Dieters may enjoy asparagus served plain. If you cook it upright in a double boiler in 1-1½ inches water, the stalks will boil in the bottom, and with the top inverted, the heads will steam cook.

You can add lemon juice, garnish with boiled eggs, or add cooked or raw spears to tossed green salad and still have a low-calorie dish.

If you're not dieting, prepare with butter and egg sauce on toast, au gratin, orientla style, with chicken a la king on toast, or in casseroles — a myriad of ways.

FRAGRANT AROMA

A fragrant "pineapple aroma" is a clue to goodness, if the pineapple is not too cold to impart an odor.

ITALIAN RIBS AND RICE

2 to 3 lbs. pork country style ribs, cut in pieces
1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
1 cup water
1 cup rice
1 small green pepper, slivered
1 small clove garlic, minced
1 tbsp. sugar
1 tbsp. salt
½ tsp. Italian seasoning
1 tsp. salt

Brown ribs in Dutch oven, reduce heat, cover tightly and cook slowly 1 hour, turning occasionally. Remove ribs and pour off drippings. Bring tomatoes and water to boil in Dutch oven. Stir in rice, green pepper, garlic, sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and Italian seasoning. Place ribs on top of rice and sprinkle with 1 teaspoon salt. Cover tightly and cook slowly 30 minutes or until ribs and rice are done. Makes 6 servings.

Do You HAVE THE DESIRE TO LEARN?

If so, you may wish to consider Lubbock Christian College's Secretarial Courses Division of the Continuing Education program.

The only prerequisite to our program is THE DESIRE TO LEARN!

Since the courses are self-paced, the student can progress as fast or slow as he/she wishes. In an effort to eliminate the student's anxiety, we begin with the basic course in all our programs.

There are six branches of the Secretarial Courses Division:

- Clerk typist/receptionist
- General Secretary
- Executive Secretary
- Legal Secretary
- Medical Secretary
- Medical Transcriptionist

Students may enroll in a course of study at any time. Classes meet from 8 a.m. -1 p.m. (morning) or 6-8 p.m. (evenings). Three hundred clock hours are required to complete the clerk typist/receptionist program; 600 hours for the general secretary and medical transcriptionist program; 600 hours for the general secretary and medical transcriptionist programs and 900 clock hours for the executive secretary, legal secretary and medical secretary programs.

Tuition is $200 per month per program — or $50 per month per individual course, plus a $25 registration fee ($5 for individual courses). However, financial aid is available to those who qualify.

COUPLE OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY — Mr. and Mrs. K.C. Preston of Wolfforth will observe their 50th wedding anniversary from 2-4 p.m. today in First Baptist Church Fellowship Hall. Children of the couple will host the celebration. They are Mr. and Mrs. George Watson of Waskom, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Preston of Goldthwaite, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Preston and Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Preston, all of Wolfforth, children of the couple. The former Cliffa Jean Linn and Preston were married March 8, 1929 in O'Donnell. The couple has 12 grandchildren.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D.

Question: Is carpeting practical in a kitchen?

Answer: Most housewives do more walking in the kitchen than any other room. Why not be comfortable? With the great improvement in fibers which are stain and soil resistant and waterproof enough to be used outdoors, there no longer is any reason to hesitate using them in the kitchen.

Question: How can a dull living room be brought to life?

Answer: Here's one suggestion: If floor coverings and walls are solid colors, how about a print fabric for draperies, sofa or chairs?

Question: Can you use two different patterns in the same room?

Answer: It can be done attractively if careful selection is used.

Question: How about a half-dozen suggestions on various things available to use on a blank wall behind a sofa?

ITALIAN POTATO PIE

2 large or 3 med. potatoes
1 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley
2 tbsps. finely chopped fresh onion
¼ tsp. dried leaf oregano
1 tsp. salt
Filling:
1/3 cup chopped fresh onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. dried leaf oregano
½ tsp. dried leaf thyme
2 large tomatoes, cut in ¼-inch slices
½ lb. mozzarella cheese, sliced

To prepare potato shell, cook unpared potatoes in boiling salted water for 30 minutes. Remove peel and place in a bowl with parsley, onion, oregano and salt. Mash until smooth.

Butter a 9-inch pie plate. Press potatoes over bottom and side to form a shell. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 15 minutes.

Cook onion and garlic in fat until tender. Stir in salt, basil, oregano and thyme. Fill potato shell with tomatoes, sausage and onion-garlic mixture.

Bake for 15 minutes, top with mozzarella cheese. Return to oven for 5 minutes or until cheese melts. Makes 6 servings.

DECORATED EGGS

If you want to keep decorated eggs from Easter to Easter, use shells that have the eggs blown out. Handle them carefully — they're very fragile. Use the inside of the eggs as soon as possible in fully-cooked dishes such as custards, quiches, souffles, omelets or cakes.

Trivia Quiz

1. What did a character called Messala do in a 1959 epic film?

2. He made it big on the big screen, but on the little screen well ... do you remember who starred in "East Side/West Side" back in 1963?

3. Richard Rodgers wrote the score for what special television series, later a movie?

4. Tell who played Ben Casey in the television medico-series that began in 1961.

5. And then choose Dr. Casey's specialty.

A. endocrinology
B. anesthesiology
C. cardiology
D. neuosurgery
E. orthodontics

6. "What symmetrical digits!" Who said it, about whom?

7. He was only a head of state, but you should have seen his wardrobe! What popular early-1960s item of clothing was named for a prime minister?

8. You have to go quite a ways back for this one: What radio newscaster was replaced by Lowell Thomas? (Hint: He wore a patch over one eye).

9. He played a radio detective named Pat Novak. Then he played a television detective named Joe Friday. Who was he?

10. That same man directed and starred in a movie, and then a doomed television series about the jazz world. Title, please?

(c) 1979 by Dan Carlinsky
Distributed by Enterprise Features

1. You remember the movie "Ben Hur." don't you? You remember the chariot race, don't you? Well, it was Messala who challenged Judah Ben Hur to that race.
2. George C. Scott.
3. "Victory at Sea," the first televised historical documentary series, about World War II naval battles. The year was 1952. (The movie version came three years later).
4. Vincent Edwards.
5. D.
6. Ah, yes, W.C. Fields said it about Mae West. (One of the few times he paid attention to her fingers).
7. The Nehru jacket.
8. Floyd Gibbon was the name.
9. Jack Webb. (The radio show was "Pat Novak for Hire"; the television show was "Dragnet," of course).
10. "Pete Kelly's Blues."

Sunday edition deadlines are 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday for articles with pictures and noon the preceding Wednesday for articles only. Only Friday and Saturday weddings will appear on Sunday; wedding announcements must run within five days of the event.

Engagement announcements must be submitted at least five weeks prior to the wedding date.

DIVORCE RATE

Since the late 1950's, the rate of divorce for couples with children is greater than for childless couples, reports Patricia Lamson, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

PEAK OF PERFECTION

Since a pineapple will not get any sweeter (ripen) after harvesting, fresh pineapples from Hawaii are picked and shipped at their peak of perfection and are ready to eat immediately.

THOUGHTS ON LOVE

What is important to a relationship is a harmony of emotional roles and not too great a disparity in the general level of intelligence.

MR. AND MRS. CARL WOOD
By A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wood will observe their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception from 2:30-5 p.m. today in the community room of Snyder Savings and Loan Association.

Hosts will be Mrs. Van Meador and Daryl Wood of Big Spring, children of the couple, and Billy Rinehart of Arlington and Wallace Rinehart of Lanham, Md., foster children of the couple.

The former Essie Bell Rinehart and Wood were married March 9, 1929 in Snyder.

The couple has 11 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

CHECK TEMPERATURE

It's a good idea to check the temperature in your refrigerator. The ideal temperature for keeping foods safely cold in it is 40 degrees. If the control is set for a warmer temperature or the gasket leaks, it is difficult ot keep milk, cream or yogurt at an ideal cold and they may start "turning" sooner than desirable.

The safe-way to get hi-quality foods

Now it is possible to save a bundle of money every day or every month and protect yourself against increasing food shortages and high prices.

An intensely interesting and helpful small book is now available for those concerned with inflation and the food problem. A copy will be mailed to you on request without charge. And there's no obligation.

Pat Walker's presents: the splendor of being slender.

Has to say about PAT WALKER'S

For several years I had slowly been gaining weight, thinking of course, I could lose it by myself anytime. BUT I found out it's not that easy to do by yourself! When my husband started making comments about my figure I knew it was time I found professional help. Having already read many things about the Pat Walker Program, the idea of being able to lose both weight and inches where I really needed them off, plus not even messing my hair or even having to change my clothes, while doing it really appealed to me. I am so pleased with the success I have had with the Pat Walker Program. Pounds and inches came off to give me a new figure I can be proud of! I can really say I'm glad I did it. VIVIAN RODGERS

CHEESY CREAMED GROUND BEEF

1 lb. ground beef
1 tsp. salt
½ cup chopped onion
4 oz. can mushroom stems and pieces
2 cups milk
¼ cup flour
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. paprika
¼ cup dairy sour cream
3 oz. cream cheese
¼ cup sweet vermouth

Brown ground beef over medium heat in a large skillet. Add salt, onion and mushrooms and simmer for 5 minutes. In a small bowl gradually add the milk to the flour, stirring well after each addition so mixture is smooth. Add pepper and paprika. Stir seasoned milk mixture into pan with ground beef. Add sour cream and cream cheese, stirring to blend as cheese melts. When sauce has thickened, add vermouth and simmer over low heat for 10 minutes. Serve over toast, biscuits or crisp waffles.

Local Police Dispatcher Prefers Night Shift To Other Schedules

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Mrs. Jettice Hodges is a dispatcher with the City of Lubbock Police Department, working a night shift.

Her job with the police makes it "all in the family" because husband David has been a police officer with the same organization for three years and is currently attending the Police Academy.

Mrs. Hodges' family also includes son, Quinn Martin, age 14 — who hasn't decided on his future career.

Mrs. Hodges has been in her present job for almost a year. She said, "I started working as a records clerk in 1967 and, except for two years, have worked in various areas of the department here ever since."

Does she like her job?

"It is hectic," she admitted, "but I love it."

"Basically," she said, "dispatchers answer police emergency lines. In addition, we have direct lines to the law enforcement agencies in Lubbock, direct lines to private alarm companies and to ambulance services."

Mrs. Hodges explained that dispatchers operate on different channels.

She added. "What we are doing is dispatching calls when the units go out and call '1023' (arrive at the scene). Normally, emergency traffic only is handled on Channel 1 but sometimes we have emergency traffic on both channels.

"But working at the console on Channel 1 is like working 'a hot seat' and we swap out so no one will have to work at that station all of the time."

Mrs. Hodges said that sometimes the night shift will handle 125 calls, most of them beween 10:30 p.m. and 4 a.m.

"What a dispatcher is confronted with is to suddenly see the board light up like a Christmas tree, and at the same time have an alarm go off on a back panel to signify that an alarm company is calling to report an armed robbery in progress."

"In many ways, the work is mind-boggling."

She said that when a citizen calls to report that his home is being burglarized, his car vandalized, he has been assaulted or his property damaged, he wants the situation handled immediately, and no one blames him. "But because of the lack of manpower," Mrs. Hodges said, "we have to take calls in order of seriousness. A homicide will rank in importance over something like criminal mischief, but it is difficult sometimes for the public to understand why they have to wait until someone can help them."

Mrs. Hodges added that working on Channel 2 is also hectic but ordinarily is used for secondary traffic — to keep all the other channels clear as much as possible.

She said, "My job isn't the easiest. In fact, it is a very emotional job. Sometimes it is so much that when I get off I just fall into bed exhausted. At other times I stay awake another hour, just to unwind before going to sleep.

"When I accepted my present position it was the only one available. But I preferred the night shift to all others.

"It may sound a little strange," she continued, "but I like working the hours I do, because whole types of different people come out at night. There are also many unusual situations occurring during these hours, and all have to be handled tactfully and with diplomacy. You'll have to admit that if you call someone at 4:30 a.m., tact is certainly called for. I have been a night person all my life, though. My mother says that from the time I was born I liked to sleep in the daytime and stay awake at night."

When asked how her schedule fits in with family life, she said as far as her son is concerned — with the exception of week ends — things go fairly well. "I take my son to school," she stated, "go to bed, get up and go and pick him up. Right now my husband is in the Police Academy and also attending college four days a week, so at times my husband and I just say 'Hi' and 'Goodbye' but this is only for awhile."

Her schedule does interfere somewhat with other activities, especially morning ones. Mrs. Hodges said, however, she copes with the problem by not making plans for mornings, instead doing what is necessary during afternoons.

"I have to have a certain amount of sleep to function," she admitted, "but if I get six hours of sleep, then I function well — I can exist on less.

"I do have some early morning calls. Close friends and family know my hours and avoid calling. Business calls can be annoying, because I sometimes am unable to go back to sleep, especially if I have only been asleep for several hours."

"At first," she said, "I had a hard time leaving my work and would bring it home and let it bother me. I do better about that now."

Does she have hobbies, with such a busy schedule?

Mrs. Hodges enjoys working with ceramics, painting, working crossword puzzles and reading.

Does she plan to stay in her job?

She said, "If they'll let me.

"I've been in the work long enough ... well, it is sort of like a policeman. Perhaps you may know a policeman who has worked several years here but for some reason has decided to move to another city. Invariably the policeman will again seek employment in law enforcement, and I think it is the same in my case — it gets in your blood.

"I still have the same feeling of excitement I did when I first started working but I also like to think I might be helping others by working where I do."

Sex Therapy Offered To Local Citizens

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

Sex therapy, like any other area involving delicate human problems, is a field in which misinformation or mishandling can be dangerous for the people involved.

According to Dr. Roger S. Greene, assistant professor of psychology at Texas Tech University, "A person in need of sexual counseling is faced with agencies that are, by and large, not equipped to handle such services.

"In some cases," he continued, "people without professional degrees advertise themselves as sex therapists. The result is confusion at best, and mishandling at worst, for the persons in need of help."

Dr. Greene is director of the sexual counseling program at the Tech Psychology Clinic, which has such a program, still in its early stages but now available to persons in the Lubbock area. The clinic is prepared to deal with individuals or couples who come for sex counseling and, like other clinic services, the counseling is free for University personnel and families or based on a sliding fee scale.

There is no clear definition of sexual dysfunction except in a few limited cases, Dr. Greene said. It is a subjective matter which only the persons involved can decide. If a couple feels that they have sexual problems, they would be wise to seek professional counseling, and a trained person will be prepared to advise them whether sex therapy would be helpful to them.

"The first question we ask ourselves," Dr. Greene said, "is: 'is this the problem, or is it something else?'"

Other than a few obvious functional or psychological problems, sexual maladjustment is defined as a problem when it interferes with the relationship, when it interferes with other areas of life, when the person himself is disturbed by it.

The problem is not confined, Dr. Greene pointed out, by class, income, standard of living, or education. "I think it is important to point out that anyone, from a college professor to a truck driver, can have a problem in this area and can, without hesitation, seek help for it."

The current frankness about sex has both its good and bad aspects, Dr. Greene said. On the one hand it often gives people unreal expectations, causes them to make comparisons, or to think in terms of performance, any of which can be destructive.

However, there is evidence that people are more willing to discuss problems in this area than previously. "We are having more people come into the clinic for sexual counseling right now than for marital counseling," he said. "Most couples, once they come to us, do not find it difficult to talk about this area of their lives; in fact it comes as a great relief to many of them to be able to talk about these things."

Once a couple comes for counseling, Dr. Greene says, the program has almost 100 percent success rate. The therapy, which usually requires ten sessions, follows a fairly standard outline, beginning with a get-acquainted session at which the therapist and the couple talk in an attempt to find out how they perceive the problem and how they relate to each other. If at this time it becomes clear to the counselor that the problem is a marital rather than a sexual problem, they are referred to the marital counselor.

The first two therapy sessions are devoted to taking an exhaustive sexual history of both partners. The therapists work as a male-female team and take turns talking with each partner. This enables the therapists to see how the clients relate to a person of the same and the opposite sex.

Once this background information is collected, the therapists and Dr. Greene go over the history to discover where the problem is and what should be done about it. Their plans are then discussed with the couple. "We ask ourselves, 'what is the problem, how did it develop and how do we treat it?'" Dr. Greene said.

Dr. Greene said that although they will "keep" the secrets of one partner from the other, if it would contribute nothing to the therapy or threaten the relationships, it is not usually necessary to do so. "Again, they are often delighted to be able to talk about these things," he said.

Unlike the Masters and Johnson program, which is almost entirely technique-oriented, the program used most frequently at the clinic may be said to be communication-oriented; it is designed to acquaint the client with his own emotions and enable him to communicate this knowledge to his partner.

Each week the couple is given a series of "exercises" to perform in the privacy of their home, and the next week they come back to talk with the counselor about the results. Beginning with an exercise designed to increase their knowledge of their own bodies, intimacy is increased gradually, along with communication and sharing. By the time the ten sessions are over, the problem, whatever it was, usually no longer exists, Dr. Greene said.

Dr. Greene said that the clinic does deal with individuals as well as couples. They will, for instance, treat single people who are dissatisfied with their sex lives, and are in fact trying to determine whether the counseling is as effective for them as for married couples. (No person coming to the clinic is ever used in a research project without permission Dr. Greene emphasized, and records are completely confidential.) In other cases, where one partner comes for counseling and the other refuses, the clinic will try to help the lone partner if possible. "Often in such cases the problem is one of communication in the marriage, and we refer them for marital counseling," he said. "But we do not want to withhold treatment from anyone who needs it, and we will try to help anyone who comes to us."

Dr. Greene emphasized the dangers posed by unqualified therapists. The field is a relatively new one; there are few clinics in this country dealing with sex therapy and few training centers for therapists. Nearly anyone can claim the title of "sex counselor," regardless of training.

"I would suggest that anyone contemplating this kind of therapy should not be afraid to ask questions," Dr. Greene advised. "He should ask about the background and training of the therapists, and find out where they studied and what methods and techniques were taught there. If he is in any doubt, he should seek another, qualified opinion."

REUBEN STYLE

Slices of ham belong between bread or rolls for sandwiches — plain or fancy. For a special treat, make a Ham Reuben by spreading rye bread with mustard and topping with sliced ham, sauerkraut mixed with a little Thousand Island dressing and finally Swiss cheese. When broiled until cheese is melted, flavor perfection results, says the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

Carob Provides Substitute For Chocolate

INDUSTRY, Calif. (Special) — Carob confections provide those who want a replacement for cocoa and chocolate with the perfect alternative. Made from the fruit of the Carob tree grown in the countries bordering the Mediterranean Sea, Carob comes in powder form as well as in candy bars, snacks, nuggets and cookies.

While the fruit of the Carob tree has provided nourishment for man and beast for thousands of years, it is only recently that companies have developed ways of making the fruit into a powder form to be used as a replacement for cocoa and chocolate in making a variety of food and beverage products.

The process of making the fruit into a powder begins when the long, flat, brown pods of the Carob tree are harvested and broken into small pieces called "kibbles." The finest kibbles then are selected, specially roasted and ground into a fine, quality powder with a unique and distinctive flavor. It can easily be blended with other ingredients to make unique baked goods and delicious drinks.

Products containing natural sugar have been growing in popularity. Carob, can be used as a sweetener and also serves as a wonderful flavoring ingredient for home-baked bread, waffles and crepes. Because it blends with orange, lemon, vanilla and almond extracts, it can be used in the baking of nutbreads and cookies.

Listed below are a few recipe ideas for those who want to surprise their guests with a unique carob masterpiece.

CAROB DATE BREAD

2 cups pitted dates
3 tbsp. margarine or butter
½ cup honey
1 tsp. vanilla
½ tsp. grated orange peel
¼ cup orange juice
¾ cup hot water
1 egg, beaten
2 cups sifted whole wheat pastry flour
2 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
1/3 cup carob powder
¾ cup chopped nuts

Cut dates into small pieces and combine dates, margarine, honey, vanilla, orange peel, orange juice and hot water in a mixing bowl. Set aside for 10 minutes. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, salt and carob powder. Stir beaten eggs into date mixture. Gradually add dry ingredients. Mix just until moistened. Stir in nuts. Pour into greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until bread tests done with cake tester inserted in center. Cool in pan for 10 minutes. Turn onto rack to cool.

HOT CAROB

2 tbsp. carob powder
1 tbsp. honey (or to taste)
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup water
2 cups milk
½ tsp. vanilla

Combine carob powder, honey, salt and water in a small saucepan. Bring to boil and cook one minute, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon. Reduce heat and add milk. Heat thoroughly, but do not allow to boil. Add vanilla. Serve hot with whipped cream. Or, refrigerate, beat until frothy and serve cold. Makes 2 servings.

HONEY CAROB BROWNIES

1 cup whole wheat pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup honey
½ cup carob powder
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup broken walnut meats
1 tsp. vanilla

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt and set aside. Melt butter in small saucepan over low heat. Add carob powder and honey; blend, and remove from heat. Add carob powder and honey; blend, and remove from heat. In mixing bowl, beat eggs well; gradually add carob mixture. Add sifted dry ingredients and mix well. Blend in vanilla and nuts. Pour batter into oiled 8-inch square pan. Bake at 350 degrees about 40 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean.

THOUGHTS ON WISDOM

She said that I must always be intolerant of ignorance but understanding of illiteracy.
That some people, unable to go to school, were more educated and even more intelligent than college professors. She encouraged me to listen carefully to what country people called mother wit. That in those homely

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Wally delivered his and Devon's baby girl, whom he doesn't want to put up for adoption. Brooke played up to an uninterested Mark during a ski trip with Ellen and Dan. Chris wrapped Jeff around her little finger impressing him to buy their own house. Mona was shocked that Erica is lining up disco investors who include Phoebe. Russ and Nancy dated. Billy and Edna joined forces to keep Estelle and Benny apart. Donna was haunted by Chuck's delirious declaration of love for Tara. When his condition improved he ordered Phoebe to begin accepting Donna as his wife.

ANOTHER WORLD: Elena got wise that Iris pushed Ted to seek a gallery job in order to split Elena and Dennis. Mac and Rachel had a blowup when he learned she'd used his money to pay off Blaine and Buzz. Blaine cried to Jamie that she was manipulated to accept Rachel's "leave town" money. Olive plotted to "get" Alice while Alice was at her and Dan's possible honeymoon cottage. Eileen rebuffed Ted's advances and said that Mike is her man. Roy told Scott that it was Angie's idea that he buy Willis' company. Rose was in the dumps that she's no longer needed by her children.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: No one believed Lisa's accusations against Tina when Lisa caught her leaving the house. Beau told Annie he'll seek a quickie divorce to marry Melinda. Grant blamed Lisa for driving poor sick Tina to a hotel, where he paid the bills. Doug consulted Grant and Sandy about the legality of returning his son to this country. Jeff zeroed in on Annie. Doug asked Bob and John to combine their cardiology projects. Hank was sent to Texas to face earlier woman-beating charges. Ralph believed Joyce is trying to be a good wife to Don.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Jeri goaded Trish to hire lawyer Jerry Rheinhart for a custody battle with David, who cooled it with Stephanie so there would be no proof that he's an unfit father. Linda tried to piece together her past by forcing Mary to confess Linda only married Bob for his money. Mickey was shocked that Linda remembers their affair as though it were yesterday. Laura learned she is suffering from slight anemia and needs total rest. Neil kept quiet that Dougie is Doug's son because of Rebecca's artificial insemination. Theresa split. Don and Marlena's family arrived for the wedding.

THE DOCTORS: Mike regained feelings in his legs. Doreen tried but failed to disconnect her life-support systems. Carolee consulted a rape counselor after telling Steve about Mel's rape. Nola put the pressure on to stop the search for Jason. Lee Ann was rushed to the hospital with a fever.

EDGE OF NIGHT: Wade was found dead after blackmailing Raven about Logan and after blackmailing Margo about her past, which she revealed to April, who is Margo's child. Margo had given April to the Cavanaughs as a substitute for their dead child, also named April, which explained April's tombstone. Winter and Tank also had sworn revenge on Wade for his dirty deed against Winter. Nicole and Miles learned that she had been set up in Chicago by Wade to make it look like hanky-panky. Elliott was arrested for being drunk and disorderly but was bailed out by Mike at Diana's urging. Draper blamed Margo for allowing April to think she was mentally unbalanced all these months. Margo took a gun and headed for Wade's.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Audrey told Jeff that Steve is his father, just as Steve's condition improved. Cal was wounded by Wallace's hitman, Delaney, who later died. Cal held Bobbi hostage while she treated his wound. The epidemic was halted when Mitch found Jeremy who was treated to rid his system of the virus. As the quarantine was lifted Rick and Monica realized they are tempted by each other. Laura confessed to Lesley that she had remembered pushing David during Les' trail but had kept quiet. Laura now fears that Les hates her. Jeff blamed Audrey for revealing the truth about his mother's affair with Steve.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger forced himself on Holly, who is fed up with his constant sexual pressures. Phillip returned from Europe with Justin, who has suspicions about the boy's parentage. Ben got the heebie-jeebies when Amanda returned to the Wexler house following Lucille's mild attack. Elizabeth's infertility was medically confirmed. Adam overheard Rita caution Hillary against dating Roger on the sly, but Roger became cool to Hillary. Lucille rehired Eve and Ben after he got bumped from his college post. Jackie and Alan returned from their honeymoon, and Alan approved Roger's attempts to acquire the Wexler property.

LOVE OF LIVE: Eloise and Ray's physician, Dr. Hall, were in cahoots to keep Ray immobile and locked in the hospital. Meg made time with new beau Scott Carmichael. Andrew performed surgery on Bambi, who had a ruptured spleen. Timothy escorted Betsy and Ben on dates. Van and Bruce argued about becoming involved with Ray because of his crime-connected past.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Mario played the judge tapes he'd received before Marco's murder which contained threats from Vicki. But Mario told Vicki and Tina he didn't think Vicki was the murderer. Brad played matchmaker for Gretel and Paul Kendall. Karen caught up with Katrina, who told her about a P.O. box which contains trail evidence. Then Kartina was killed by a hit-and-run driver. Brad borrowed money from Will to hide the fact from Jenny that he's in debt to loan sharks. Ed gave Carla the cold shoulder after realizing she was jealous that Jack dated his new secretary. Talbot was fretful about Katrina's knowledge of Marco's murder.

RYAN'S HOPE: Jill begged Seneca for pain-kiling medication. Ethel rescued Siobhan and Jack from a boilerroom explosion planned by thugs, but Siobhan suffered burns. Thatcher canned Mary for covering a Washington story against his orders. Rae sent Nancy to work in New York to get her out of her hair. Nancy is wise to Rae's manipulation of Frank, who told Rae he doesn't love her as he does Jill.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Antogonisms flared between brothers Nick and Marc. Mignon was miffed that Travis and Liza were crowned Mardi Gras king and queen, then Liza split, admiting she's afraid to love Travis. Ted assumed he'd won the rezoning battle by pitting Janet against Jo, and he ordered the evacuation of Julia Street. Laine was on the prowl for Gary again. Carolyn and Marc became chummier.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jill failed to get either Stu or Derek into the sack. Nikki ordered Casey to stop trying to get Nick to leave town. Lucas tried to make Leslie forget Lance. Liz was shaken by Stu's apology letter. Suzanne began giving Kay mind-altering drugs in a scheme to get Kay committed. Casey accused Nick of abusing her as a child, which he denied.

GENEROUS STORAGE SPACE — The crisp, clean lines and generous storage space of campaign chests have made them popular ever since the 18th century, when British officers packed their gear in them for travel to far outposts. Today, the same good design and practicality is offered in imaginative adaptations of the two-hundred year old form. These stacking units, with their inset brass pulls and protective corner plates are crafted in wormy maple English brown finish. The units come in six basic pieces — drawer chest, door chest, drop-front door and drawer chests with shelves.

Spiced Tongue, Cabbage Make Ideal St. Patrick's Day Dinner

NEW YORK (Special) — Irish or not, almost everyone feels festive on the day honoring Eire's patron saint. This year St. Patrick's Day comes on a Saturday, giving most of us plenty of time for celebrating. So plan a dinner with a menu featuring favorites from the Emerald Isle. Corned beef is the traditional main course but spiced tongue accompanied by cabbage wedges makes a pleasant change. Serve the tongue with Cumberland sauce, a piquant blend of port wine, red currant jelly and various flavorings. Potatoes, of course, are basic to every Irish meal — often as not plain boiled, or perhaps appearing as Potato Cakes, plump patties browned in bacon fat.

Another staple that is bound to appear on a true Irishman's table is a pot of hot black tea. Black tea, the type most widely use in the United States, makes a hearty brew, which most "wearers of the green" prefer. And, too, they take their tea with milk, not cream which masks the flavor, and certainly not lemon.

Whichever you prefer to put in your teacup, do be sure to make the tea properly. First, use a teapot and warm it by rinsing it out with hot water. Second, bring freshly drawn cold water to a full rolling boil. Third, put one teabag or one teaspoon of tea per cup in the warmed teapot. And fourth, pour the boiling water over the tea. Cover and let stand for 3 to 5 minutes. (Don't stint on the brewing time even if you like your tea less strong than do the sons of Erin. Let the tea brew for the stated time so the hot water can extract the full flavor from the leaves, then dilute with a little boiling water).

Hot Tea Accompanies Traditional Irish Meal

SPICED TONGUE

3 to 3½ lbs. smoked uncooked beef tongue
1 garlic clove
2 bay leaves
½ tsp. mustard seed
½ tsp. coarsely ground pepper
8 whole cloves inserted in small onion
½ cup chopped celery with leaves
Cumberland Sauce

Wash tongue and place in Dutch oven or deep kettle. Add seasonings and enough cold water to cover meat. Cover and simmer until tender when pierced with a fork, allowing 40 minutes per pound. Drain from hot stock; plunge into cold water for a minute to permit handling. (Save stock.) Remove skin, bones and excess fat; keep warm. Cut meat across the grain and serve with Cumberland Sauce. Makes about six servings.

CUMBERLAND SAUCE

1 cup tongue stock
1 cup port wine
Grated rind and juice of one lemon
2 tbsps. vinegar
½ tsp. tarragon leaves
½ tsp. instant minced onion
½ cup red currant jelly
1 tbsp. cornstarch

In saucepan, combine all ingredients except jelly and cornstarch. Boil 15 minutes, stirring often. Add jelly and cornstarch that has been dissolved in 1 tablespoon cold water. Simmer 2 minutes. Serve hot.

IRISH POTATO CAKES

3 cups (about 5 med.) sliced potatoes
3 tbsps. butter
1½ tbsps. chopped parsley
3 green onions with tops, sliced
3 tbsps. sour cream
Flour
Bacon fat or shortening for frying

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and mash. Beat in butter, parsley, onions and sour cream. Shape into 6 round patties. Dredge in flour. Heat bacon fat in large skillet and fry patties until browned on both sides, turning often.

SAVORY CABBAGE

1 med. sized head cabbage
Tongue stock

Wash and core cabbage. Cut into six wedges. Bring stock to a full boil. Add cabbage and cook until tender, about 10 minutes.

CAMP FIRE CELEBRATION — Dr. Wilkes Berry, president of the Camp Fire Council, joins members in the 69th celebration of the founding of Camp Fire. Camp Fire members include, from left, standing, Amy Vaughn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Vaughn; Stacy Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Long; and Sherri Lee, daughter of Mrs. Karen Lee and Charles Lee. Seated, from left, are Michele Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Budarf; Lori Axe, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Jim Axe; and Cynthia Ybanez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benito Ybanez. Camp Fire is now a co-educational organization.

Camp Fire Celebrates Birthday

A variety of activities — social and community — will unite Camp Fire members across the nation this week during the celebration of the group's 69th birthday.

According to Camp Fire tradition, Birthday Week is a time for Camp Fire groups to become visible in their commuity and each day of the week will be devoted to a specific Camp Fire value.

Camp Fire was founded in 1910 by Luther Gulick. Originally the organization was designed to teach girls the art of camping and American Indian cultures. Camp Fire is now a co-educational organization with a membership of more than 600,000.

Today, programs in leadership, sex education and drug abuse help mold individual character and provide young people with opportunities which help them grow mentally, physically and spiritually.

Adults who realize the nation's future lies in the well-rounded young people have joined the ranks of Camp Fire volunteer leaders. They help direct the energy and imagination of the youngsters to accomplish Camp Fire goals.

Camp Fire is a member agency of United Way. For more information about the organization call the Camp Fire Council of Lubbock, 765-6394.

BRAZILIAN CHOCOLATE CAKE

1¼ cup hot coffee
1 cup instant oats
½ cup butter
1½ cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
2 eggs
3 oz. unsweetened chocolate, melted
1½ cup sifted flour
1 tsp. soda
½ tsp. salt
1 cup (6 oz.) semi-sweet chocolate chips
Icing:
½ cup butter
2 cups powdered sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
Light cream

Pour hot coffee over the oats. Set aside for 20 minutes. Cream the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in vanilla, eggs, chocolate and soaked oats, mix well. Sift together flour, soda and salt. Fold into above mixture. Stir in the chocolate chips. Pour the batter into a greased and floured bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 to 55 minutes or until an inserted toothpick comes out clean. Cool in the pan for 10 minutes. Loosen edges and turn cake out on a rack to finish cooling.

For icing, cream butter. Add powdered sugar and vanilla and beat well. Stir in enough cream to make icing of spreading consistency. Spread on cooled cake.

RED DIAMOND

The mere mention of a tinge of color in a diamond can send gem fanciers into a tizzy. But when jewelers speak of the color of a "fancy" diamond, they're apt to be exultant, says the Jewelry Industry Council. "Fancies" are diamonds with a pronounced and attractive body color — so rare that they are almost priceless. Among the most famous colored diamonds are the deep blue Hope diamond, the apple green Saxony Dresden and the Earth Star, a warm glowing brown.

Cross-Country Skiing Offers Family Recreation

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. (AP) — One of the oldest forms of transportation known to man is now becoming one of America's fastest-growing sports, according to a recent Skiing magazine survey, which shows that more than 3 million Americans cross-country ski.

Cross-country skiing — or Nordic skiing — dates back thousands of years, says John Caldwell. A former member and former coach of the United States Ski Team, which has Eastern headquarters in Waterville Valley, he has done extensive research on the subject.

"Most people think of cross-country skiing as just a popular winter sport," says Caldwell, "but for thousands of years it was a practical form of transportation. Although there is no historical record of the earliest skiers, speculation is that skis were first made of whalebone, and that these skis were used to travel over snow in search of food."

Caldwell, who has taught cross-country skiing for 30 years, points out that history does record several cross-country skiing exploits, beginning as early as 2000 B.C.

Since then, he says, skis have been used for many purposes: American revolutionists in the 1700s used them for traveling to rally support for their causes, groups in Europe have protected heirs to the throne by skiing with them out of dangerous situations, hunters have continued to use skis, and battles have even been fought by ski troops as late as the 1940s.

Nowadays, a few mailmen still use cross-country skis to make deliveries, and in some countries border patrols use skis while making their rounds.

"Although cross-country-type skis have played an important role in history, they are basically used today for recreational purposes," says Caldwell, who serves as consultant for Fleischmann's grassroots cross-country ski programs.

Because cross-country skiing can be done almost anywhere there is snow — ski touring centers, back yards, parks and golf courses, for instance — it has become an ideal sport for families, says Caldwell, who points out children as young as 2 and adults in their 70s and 80s participate in the sport.

"If you can walk, you can ski," he says.

New Card Game Part Of Nutition Campaign

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — One of the hottest selling card games in France represents a plot by the health ministry with a formidable goal — to change the eating and drinking habits of the foodloving French.

The game, Mangez Juste (Eat Correctly), sells for $2.50 at newsstands. That is also part of the plot: if you give something free people might throw it in the wastebasket, whisper the plotters at the health ministry.

The game is part of a campaign launched by the health ministry last June to persuade the French to consume less fat and sugar and more vegetables and fruits, more bread for roughage and more water and less wine.

"Two out of three French people eat a bad diet, too much fat from meat, cheese, sausages, pates (meat pastes and loafs)," said Francoise Buhl, president of the French Committee of Health Education, a government branch assigned to carrying out the diet campaign of Health Minister Simone Veil, until now, at least, the most popular cabinet member in France.

"The French love to eat well, but they are badly nourished," said Mrs. Buhl. "One says the French dig their graves with their teeth. Overeating attacks as many victims as famines in past centuries.

"So we hit upon the idea of a family game that would teach people to eat something daily from each of the six groups of foods necessary for a balanced diet: meat-fish-eggs, milk-cheese-yogurt, butter-oil-lard, rice-pastry-bread, raw fruits-vegetables, cooked fruits-vegetables. Plus water. People play cards a lot in France and families like to play together."

When the card game, which uses two decks, first went on sale more than 115,000 were sold in one and a half months. An improved version goes on sale this month.

Next September the game, plus posters and pamphlets, will be installed in elementary and secondary schools.

Another measure of success is the 300-400 letters a week the health ministry receives about the campaign. Mrs. Buhl, a slender and healthy-looking blonde, says people ask for the game, plus diet pamphlets, advice on breakfasts and whether bread really is healthy.

The game calls for each player to draw a card representing a family eating a certain meal. Each player then is dealt seven cards. Through drawing and discarding, players try to collect cards showing foods corresponding to the family's balanced menu.

There are traps:

"You ate too much cake at your cousin's wedding," one card says. "You have the right to only one more card of a dish containing sugar."

"Your neighbor to your right has eaten too many potato chips," says another. "Draw a card from his hand and discard one of yours."

Players must avoid drawing more than six dishes with fat or three with sugar. The cards illustrate in living color a gourmand's dreams: stuffed hearts of artichokes, duck caserole, camembert cheese, for example.

The program emphasizes drinking water, even though a favorite expression in this winedrinking nation is "water is just to wash your feet."

Mrs. Buhl stresses that the program is not anti-alcohol, but condemns wine because of its sugar.

The program makes no attempt to correct what the English, Dutch, Americans and others think is an appalling mistake in the French diet: coffee and a roll for breakfast with no fruit, cheese, eggs or cereal. Mrs. Buhl's staff merely advises people if they want to eat a big breakfast, then they have to cut down on the usual copious hot lunch.

"It is premature to draw conclusions as to whether people are eating better," Mrs. Buhl said. "We will not know the results of consumption of bread or vegetables until a long inquiry can be made.

"Also, it may take several generations to change the habits passed on from mother to daughter."

Lubbock Arts Festival

A Celebration of the Arts

Children's Activities Slated For Festival

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

The special arts committee of the Lubbock Arts Festival is planning an exciting array of activities for the event at the Memorial Civic Center April 17-19.

Jeannie Patterson, chairman, says her committee, which includes persons from various backgrounds in the Lubbock community, is hard at work planning exhibits and activities for the festival directed especially at children and senior citizens.

The children's activity center will be an especially exciting part of the festival program, she said.

Two main exhibits are presently planned as part of the children's area. In one, various kinds of crafts materials will be available where children can, for a small fee to cover the cost, work under supervision in various craft media. The children will be able to take their finished crafts home with them.

Another feature of this area will be a "graffitti wall," where children can write on a fence to their hearts' content and leave their great thoughts for others to read.

In another area of the children's exhibit, space will be set aside for the performing arts. Various groups from the Lubbock area will give mini-performances in drama, music, and dance. Included will be participation theatre (in which passers-by may take part in the performance), puppet theatre, clowns, music, dancers, and other entertainers.

A video display, prepared by the Mass Communications Department at Texas Tech University, will also be part of the children's area.

Tentative plans are also being made for an area for senior citizens as part of the special arts division.

Working with Mrs. Patterson on this committee are Glynda Cobb, Camp Fire Director, graffitti; Jim Douglass, Big Brothers of Lubbock; Sandy Henry; Boots Muehlbrad, Lubbock Theatre Center, participation theater; Suzanne Murphy; Sharon Prather; John J. Maurer and M. Edward Styles, area plan development; Zonalyn Stevens, Lubbock Public Schools, craft area; Carol Swain and Joyce White, puppets; Stephanie Windham, program chairman for children's area; Betty Anderson; Dennis Harp, Texas Tech University Mass Communications Department, video.

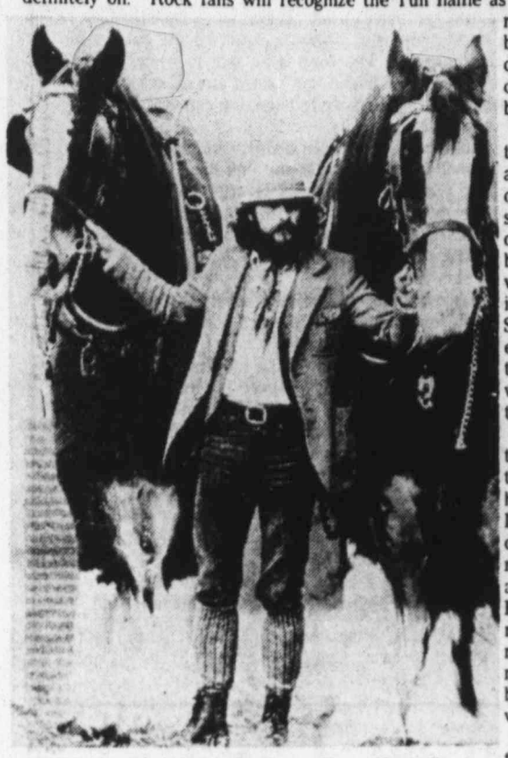
Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

A bit of this, a bit of that...

Just remember you read it here first: Jethro Tull has been booked to play the Lubbock Coliseum at 8 p.m. April 26. No front bands or ticket details have been announced for the Thursday night concert, but Coliseum officials say the show is "definitely on." Rock fans will recognize the Tull name as one of the hottest and most tenacious in the business. With over a dozen albums to its credit, the band is led by flutist Ian Anderson.



Jethro Tull's Ian Anderson & "Heavy Horses"
Tull booked for April 26 concert in Lubbock

I've seen the band twice, once in Denver and once in Dallas. Not only were both Tull shows outstanding in quality and excitement, but the front bands were also unique and inspiring. Now that Steeleye Span has parted ways, though, there's no telling who will come in to front the show.

Suffice it to say that the fact an act as prestigious as Jethro Tull has been booked in Lubbock says a great deal about how promoters view this area as a concert market. Especially with hard rock bands (since the more pop oriented Jimmy Buffett only drew a bit less than 3,400 last weekend).

For those who'd like to circle the days on their calendar even further ahead, The A-J has also learned that Bad Company will be returning to the Lubbock Coliseum on May 4. The British rockers drew over 8,000 for their last Lubbock engagement, and will be riding the crest of a brand new album when they begin touring in May.

Closer to hand, UFO, Judas Priest and Wireless will be featured in concert at 7:30 p.m. March 20 at the Municipal Auditorium. Tickets are already on sale at Al's Music Machine, B&B Records, both Flipside Records locations and the Music Marts in Brownfield and Levelland. UFO and Judas Priest both opened for Rush during an October 1977 concert on the same stage, and the fact UFO is now headlining small halls says a great deal for its development.

UFO guitarist Michel Schenker is one of the more exciting I've seen.

One wonders, though, why more country and easy listening concerts have not passed through Lubbock. Country acts seem to draw well at the clubs, but not in the major halls. That seems somewhat ironic in an area famous for its country music. As for easy listening, John Denver packed the Coliseum and so I wouldn't be surprised if we start getting other marquee names of his caliber.

Still on the subject of music, The Kingston Trio will be playing two concerts at the Country Squire Dinner Theater March 18. Reservations are now being accepted for both the matinee at 2 p.m. and the dinner show at 7:30 p.m. (with the buffet meal served at 6 p.m.). Matinee tickets are a bit less expensive, and students can also get a price break at the dinner show.

Country Squire manager Debi Chandler said the Trio sold out its shows quickly at an Amarillo Dinner Theater last year, and deseribes the act as "great Vegas entertainment." Asked if this sort of specialty act would become a regular attraction at the Lubbock dinner theater, she said, "Well, we'll have to see what the reaction is, and then wait and see who's available. I'd say we'll probably do this at least every four to six months."

To give you an idea what sort of acts are available, the Amarillo Country Squire recently featured the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra and a dinner theater in Dallas even brought in Chuck Berry.

A side note: Did you know that the actor Sam Shepard who plays the rich farmer in "Days Of Heaven" is the same Sam Shepard who has already achieved a goodly amount of success as a playwright? In fact, one of his more controversial efforts, "The Curse Of The Starving Class," will be staged at Texas Tech University's Lab Theater at 8:15 p.m. March 30 through April 4.

The Lab Theater, you may remember, was condemned by fire marshals not long ago and marked for destruction. But as it serves an important function in the Tech theater program, it was really impossible for administrators to destroy the building without first finding the department a new home.

Theater publicist Mona Brooks stated Thursday that no new site has been officially announced as yet, and added she doesn't expect the Lab to be destroyed "until next year." Asked how the theater is able to operate without passing fire laws, she said, "Until we move, we're just real careful with fire. We are very conscious of smoke and flammables."

Graduate students have already submitted applications to direct plays at the Lab Theater next year, and Miss Brooks indicated the play selection committee will probably select plays which can be performed on any type of stage, plays "that wouldn't require proscenium."

• • • • • • •

The Country Squire Dinner Theater is also combining efforts with the Texas Tech University theater department for a one-night production of "Absurd Person Singular" March 27. The show will be presented as a dinner theater attraction at the Country Squire, with direction by Richard Weaver. The cast includes Michelle Whitfield, Donna Dorsett, Diane Hosey, Bill Carter, Mark Walters and Jim Slauter. Slauter is currently delighting audiences as Felix in "The Odd Couple" at the dinner theater, and will be the only non-Tech student cast in the new production.

The Texas Tech University Theater has announced the three plays which will comprise its summer repertory season — and it is an impressive list. Plays to be performed include "Vanities," "The Shadow Box" and "Company." The plays will be performed on alternating nights June 29 through July 11. Theater publicist Mona Brooks said, "Season tickets will be put on sale before the current semester is over."

In case you musicians out there haven't noticed, there are a couple places in town where you can try out your new songs in front of an actual audience. The Blue Boar has initiated what it calls a "songwriter's corner" every Monday evening, described by management as a night when local composers can come up and try out their original songs.

The tunes don't even have to be new ones at the Hard Rock Cafe on Wednesdays. The Hard Rock, which has never featured anything remotely resembling hard rock, holds an open competition every Wednesday. The winner is booked to play the following Thursday.

Francis Ford Coppola's epic "Apocalypse, Now" — dubbed "Apocalypse, Never" by most film critics I've spoken with — has now been given a new release date. The beleaguered film has been delayed for years: by typhoons destroying sets in the Phillipines, by filmmakers going overbudget, by studios refusing to extend more money, by a director refusing to cut the film's length. Nevertheless, United Artists has announced the film will have its world premiere August 15 simultaneously at the Cinerama Dome in Los Angeles and the Ziegfeld Theater in New York.

The film was written by Coppola and John Milius and is set against the background of the Viet Nam war. The picture re-united director Coppola with stars Marlon Brando and Robert Duvall (they'd worked together in the "Godfather" films), and also stars Martin Sheen, Frederic Forrest, Albert Hall, Sam Bottoms, Larry Fishburne, Harrison Ford, G.D. Spradlin, Scott Glenn, Bill Graham, Tom Mason, Cyndi Wood Linda Carpenter and Colleen Camp.

Still, I wouldn't hold my breath if I were you. This is the third premiere announcement we've received in the past few months concerning this film. It's also been slated for April and December of this year. Now it looks like someone decided to compromise. But I wonder: Do you think the success of the current Viet Nam related "The Deer Hunter" has anything to do with the date change?

Mann Theaters, which already operates the Fox Fourplex here, has broken ground on yet another movie theater in Lubbock. It, too, will be a fourplex and will be located at the northeast corner of Slide Road at the intersection with South Loop 289. According to Fox Four manager Harold Lieck, the new theater should be open by mid-summer. Though the auditoriums will be somewhat smaller in terms of seating capacity than the present Fox Four, the new theater will have bigger screens.

I'm sure the new theater will also not give the viewer a shotgun effect. The pre-

Rock Band UFO Slates Concert

Rock band UFO will headline a concert at 7:30 p.m. March 20 at the Municipal Auditorium. The front bands are Wireless and Judas Priest. Tickets are currently on sale at Al's Music Machine, B&B Records, both Flipside Records locations and the Music Marts in Brownfield and Levelland.

Phil Mogg, UFO's charismatic lead vocalist, has never wavered in his belief that rock 'n' roll runs deep in his bloodlines. Born in the north of London to a working-class family, Mogg remembers with a wry blend of fondness and impatience that "they had the classic line: 'Get yourself a good job.' When I became a musician they thought I'd gone bleedin' mad. They never really thought I'd make a go of it, but they supported me anyway.

"But I was hooked. I started to go to lots of shows, you know, Clapton with the Bluesbreakers, The Yardbirds, The Animals. I was completely absorbed in rock. Pretty soon, I thought 'Hey, I can do that too.'"

And it wasn't long before Mogg did, joining forces with bassist Pete Way, drummer Andy Parker and an unending stream of guitarists to form UFO. By 1971, the band earned a recording contract. They cut an album — never released in the States — in all of three days, which turned out to be a huge success in Germany and Japan. There was just one hitch: Even though the record's sales were reported to be in excess of one million copies, the group could only collect a mere pittance of their royalties (Mogg swears they never saw more than $1,000).

To add insult to injury, the hard-luck group found themselves off on a tour of Japan. It was quite the low-budget excursion, featuring no record company support ("not even a road map") and a massive throng of Japanese fans unaware that the group's amps had blown out in the middle of their first set. Amazingly, the worst was yet to come. "Some clever Japanese fellow, unbeknownst to us, recorded the entire concert," Mogg reports, "and before we knew it we had a second record out."

"UFO Land In Tokyo" was not a memorable aural document. "We were all singing out of breath" Mogg complains. Justifiably discouraged, the group steered clear of recording studios for several years until they secured a deal with Chrysalis in 1974.

Shortly before this partnership began, the band's guitarist Mick Bolton called it quits, and on the eve of an important tour of Germany. Without gear or guitarist, UFO improvised, borrowing both from their warm-up act. They later returned the amps, but not the guitarist: Michel Schenker, a virtuoso musical craftsman, as much at home with thunderous power chords as intimate melodic textures.

"Even though Michel couldn't speak English, we only had 15 minutes to sort that mess out, so we ended up doing a 25-minute versions of 'I'm A Man' and 'Come On Everybody.' Everthing went so well as we asked Michel to join us," Mogg laughs. "He looked good too. Our previous guitarists wore baggy pants all the time."

Schenker, though he is now more fluent in English these days, still goes his own way. "He'll leave immediately after the gig and show up the next morning, and no one knows where he's been off to." Last year he disappeared completely on the eve of the group's most extensive American tour. The band quickly recruited the servicers of Paul Chapman, a former guitarist with Them, to enable UFO to complete the tour. Despite intensive searchings, and amidst many rumors, all attempts to locate Schenker met only with silence.

Several months later, Michel Schenker returned almost as quietly as he had left. "He didn't actually say much when he came back." Mogg confesses "We rehearsed for a day, then everything was fine. Everybody's a little mad, and Michel definitely got his slot in there." Asked if he would be surprised if Michel were to vanish again, Phil wrinkles his nose. "I've ceased being surprised actually; I wasn't surprised the first time."

Though the band deserves their full due for the success of "Lights Out," they were ably assisted by a new producer, Ron Nevison, who cut his teeth engineering for a formidable array of British rock royalty including The Who, Led Zeppelin and Bad Company. "There came a point when we felt we weren't progressing at the rate we should have been," says Mogg of the period following earilier LPs. "So we decided to take matters into our own hands and find a new producer. Chrysalis suggested a couple of fancy names, but they were busy on other projects. We came up with Ron because his name came up on most of our favorite records."

And did Nevison and his charges hit it off? "Right from the start," says Mogg. "We learned and developed a lot. We have our ups and downs, but it wouldn't be healthy if we didn't.

Their non-stop touring schedule and hard rocking stage presence has amassed them an incredible following and has made UFO a much "slighted" group.

Tech's Concert Band To Play Thursday Night

The Texas Tech University Concert Band will play at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the University Center theater. There is no admission charge.

The program will feature three soloists. Alan Shinn will perform a marimba solo during "Scherzo Caprice" by Clair Omar Musser. Sally Whitlock Bohls will perform an oboe solo during the first movement of a concerto for oboe by Arrigo Pedrollo. And David Lewis will perform the rondo movement of the "Second Horn Concerto" by Richard Strauss; the piece was transcribed for band by R. Mark Rogers.

Thursday's concert will also feature the Trombone Sextet, composed of Don Lucas, James Edwards, John Hering, Paul Schmidt, David Crowthers and Arbie Taylor. The entire program will include works by Berloiz, Holst, Arnold, Tull, Daniels, van Appledorn, Alford, Bennett, Granger, Beasley, Mailman and Hanson.

Trio Band Debuts Successfully With Album

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

New groups come and go. Usually, they go. A vast maturation in the written and stage performances of new groups has been seen in the '70s. That's why such a large number of impressive debut albums can be found on the record counters these days. It's not surprising anymore.

Take The Police, for example. The trio recently released its first album, "Outlandos d'Amour" (A&M). The album already is receiving a considerable amount of radio airplay in the United States and England. The Police have had two hit singles in their native England, both of which came in advance of the album.

More and more newly formed groups are gaining their successes by taking just such a path. But it's not new. That's how most of today's rock and roll "megastars" gained their security in the '60s. The hit singles preceded the albums. Hit singles hardly ever followed hit albums until the latter part of the decade.

The trend is reverting back to those days, which makes the whole idea of The Police a fitting one. The group is a product of the troubled '60s. But it doesn't try to copy '60s formula or decry the '70s for their apparent apathy. Instead, The Police document their upbringing, defy it (to a certain degree) and reflect upon the frustration they've met in the '70s.

Sound too theoretical? Perhaps. But somehow The Police's music defines more starkly and intelligently than ever the almost indefinable decade which is about to close.

People have been trying to discover the meaning behind the '70s since the middle of this ambiguous decade. Some songwriters have hit upon the right chord, but such is infrequent. Even our most prolific songwriters have had trouble wrestling with the question. Few have answered it.

Perhaps The Police are the first to do it as succinctly as they do on "Outlandos d'Amour."

The creative force behind the band's songwriting is a guy named Sting. His chilling vocals stick in the back of the mind while his lively bass lines underscore guitarist Andy Summers' diverse applications. Drummer and founding member Stewart Copeland punctuates the music with his rhythmic work.

The group's musicianship is the result of several years' experience with various groups and projects. Sting has been creatively involved with synthesizer player and writer Eberhard Schoener, and may someday sing an opera Schoener has written. He played a role in the Sex Pistols' obscure film and will be seen soon in The Who's in-production film version of "Quadrophenia."

Together, the three form one of the decade's most dynamic and imaginative trios. In fact, they don't sound like a trio at all. Their sound is alarmingly full, even though overdubbing doesn't play a prominent role in the substance of their first album.

The album conveys the disillusion and puzzlement which accompanies such philosophical reflection as the definition of one's time. "Born In The '50s" best exemplifies where the group is coming from.

"My mother cried when President Kennedy died," Sting sings vigorously, his voice capturing the essence of '70s schizophrenia. The song is an ode to young people who watched some friends get busted and others knocked around for their beliefs while television cameras recorded it all in living color.

The Police reflect the awkward juxtaposition of the generation I write about. On the one hand, there is the increasing pressure for financial security. Getting a job is too important these days. Then there are the demands to "be yourself," to be an individual in a world of individuals who look and talk like a mass.

It's all very confusing.

The Police capture this uneasy spirit. But they don't trap it into one song, they fill each song on the album with this dizzy kind of frustration.

Songs such as "So Lonely," the hit single "Roxanne" and "Truth Hits Everybody" deliver The Police's powerful message in a strong and convincing manner.

Then there are songs such as "Be My Girl — Sally" about a young man's demented desire to vent his mental and sexual anxieties on an age old toy: an inflatable doll.

The Police combine violence, passion, indecision, paranoia, self-preservation and indulgence into one neatly and artistically defined package. Even their name reflects a mocking need for security.

There ought to be a law. But if there was, there would be no need for The Police — an interesting band indeed.

LINER NOTES: Sting: bass and vocals. Andy Summers: guitars. Stewart Copeland: drums. Produced and arranged by The Police.

Kingston Trio Featured In Concert At Country Squire Theater

The Kingston Trio will be featured in afternoon and evening concert March 18 at the Country Squire Dinner Theater. Shows will be at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. The evening concert is preceed by a buffet dinner. Call the theater for ticket prices and further details.

In 1957, three young men — Bob Shane, Nick Reynolds and Dave Guard — decided to form a group called The Kingston Trio. They selected that title because their music had a calypso sound to it and the name "Kingston" evoked Jamaican vibrations.

They were playing night clubs in the San Francisco area and were booked at San Francisco's Purple Onion for a one-week stand. That one week turned into a standing-room-only, seven-month engagement. The Trio was the first group to perform popular songs in the folk style with strong rythmic background and their own unique brand of folk music and entertainment caught on quickly.

While playing an engagement in Hawaii, "Tom Dooley" hit. The Trio cut short their engagment and returned to the mainland to go on a nationwide tour. One of their stops was the famous engagement at San Francisco's Hungry i.

Their first LP on the Capital label was a huge success and the Kingston Trio was on its way to becoming a household word. "Tom Dooley" was one of the biggest record sellers of the year in 1958 and it was followed by hits like "Tijuana Jail," "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?," "Scotch and Soda," "Rev. Mr. Black," "Greenback Dollar" and "The M.T.A."

As the Trio's popularity grew, they appeared on the top network TV shows and performed to packed houses around the world. The Trio also were enormously successful on college concert tours.

Life Magazine honored them with a cover story and the title of "Best Group of the Year." They appeared in concert with Barbara Streisand, Henry Mancini, Dave Brubeck, Bill Cosby and Kelly Smith. In all, the Trio has no fewer than seven gold albums to its credit.

During the Trio's rise to the top, they met John Stewart, a performer and songwriter. When Dave Guard decided to go his own way in the spring of 1961, John joined Nick and Bob.

Finally, after years of overwhelming success, the three members of the Trio wanted to change their music style but discovered that they were confined by their own image. They decided to part ways. On June 17, 1967, exactly 10 years to the day after they had gotten together, the Kingston Trio broke up.

John Stewart is now performing as a solo artist. Nick Reynolds, who decided not to continue a career in music, is living in Oregon. And Bob Shane, after a few years as a single performer, decided that the Trio should not have ended. So Bob's back, with Roger Gamble and George Grove, to see that the Kingston Trio lives on.

Clay Club Holding Exhibition, Sale

The Texas Tech University Clay Club is sponsoring an exhibition and sale from noon to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday in the teaching gallery (room five) on the courtyard level of the campus architecture building.

Visitor parking is available in the art department parking area.

Exhibited works will include wheelthrown functional pieces, clay sculpture, paintings, drawings, prints and jewelry made by Tech art faculty and students.

Proceeds from the sale will go towards Clay Club programs, visiting artists and the National Invitational Exhibition to be held at Tech next January.

Estacado Students On Lunch Progam

Estacado High School students will read selections of poetry and prose at Tuesday's Lunch Bunch program.

Lunch Bunch meets at 12:15 p.m. each Tuesday in the Lubbock City-County Library, 1306 9th Street.

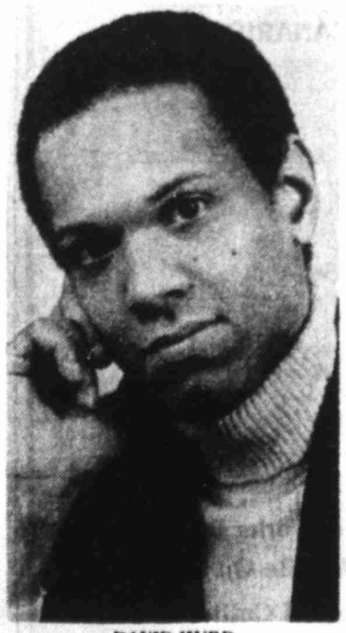
Recital To Feature Organist Hurd

Organist David Hurd will be featured in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday at the Texas Tech University Recital Hall. Tickets are currently on sale at the University Center ticket booth.



DAVID HURD

Hurd was the only organist to reach the finals of both the Improvisation Competition and the Organ Performance Competition held in conjunction with the 1977 International Congress of Organists in Philadelphia. Shortly after he was announced the winner, another panel of distinguished international judges, again operating in the blind, selected him as the winner of the Performance Competition as well.

This honor inspired the organists' professional journal, The Diapason, to call Hurd "a player whose name will soar in prominence."

Hurd is presently organist and assistant professor of church music at the General Theological Seminary in New York. He also served a number of years as music director at the Church of the Intercession in New York. A graduate of Oberlin College in Ohio, he pursued graduate work at both the Manhattan School of Music and the University of North Carolina.

While in North Carolina he also served as organ instructor at Duke University.

Hurd has performed extensively in the easter portions of the United States, and his current concert season marks his debut in this part of the country.

Works Of Jean Chardin To Be Seen In Cleveland

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The first comprehensive exhibition of the works of Jean Simeon Chardin, organized by the French National Museums, will be seen at the Cleveland Museum of Art June 6-Aug. 12.

"Chardin 1699-1779" — marking the bicentenary of his death — comprises more than 90 oils and pastels. It later will be seen at Boston's Museum of Fine Art.

sent fourplex on 19th Street was once a twin theater which had each theater sliced down the middle to create a fourplex.

There may be even more theater construction in September, although no one's commiting themselves. It's been mentioned in this column before that the Winchester and Cinema West will probably be cut into twin theaters. Video Theaters director Bob Scott, upon being asked where the expansion plans now stand, said, "I know of no definite commitment to it, but it (the idea) sure hasn't been dropped either."

If the theaters are twinned — and I would think they'd have to be — it won't be until September. Both theaters have booked films through the summer. The Winchester will open "The Champ" on April 6, and follow it with "Beyond The Poseidon Adventure" on May 29 and the new James Bond picture "Moonraker" on June 29. The Cinema West plans to open the film version of the off-Broadway hit musical "Hair" on March 28, and has three Disney films booked for the summer months: "101 Dalmations," "King Arthur In Outer Space" and "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again."

Wondering why the Golden Horseshoe Drive-In hasn't re-opened yet? My sources tell me the theater is being equipped with a brand new sound system and will have a grand re-opening in mid-April. We'll have more details as the opening nears.

If you're a Dallas Cowboy fan but can't afford to get any closer to an NFL game than the TV set, well, would you settle for BASKETBALL? The Dallas Cowboys have their own basketball squad called the Hoopsters, and they'll be in Lubbock playing at the Coliseum at 8 p.m. April 19. Tickets are now on sale at Hemphill-Wells at South Plains Mall, Furr's Family Center and B&B Records.

All proceeds will go to the rehabilitation center at St. Mary's Of The Plains Hospital.

Oh, you want to know who the Hoopsters are playing? Well, the opponents are called the Lubbock All-Stars and are composed of local coaches and a few Tech players. The All-Stars include Rob Knight of Monterey High School; David Thapford of Coronado High School; Craig Wells and Dale Gannaway, both of Lubbock High School; Joe McWilliams and Stanley Scott, both of Dunbar High School; ex-Texas Tech University basketball player Grady Newton; Tech defensive end coach Donnie Laurence; Larry Lawrence of Evans Junior High School and Tech's three 1978-79 seniors: Geoff Huston, Tommy Parks and Joe Baxter.

No word as to whether Fred Swearingen has offered to referee...

Jimmy Buffett's Coral Reefer Band has been together for four years. One doubts, however, that they'll reach the magic number of five. Rock writers Joe Frolik and Joe Nick Patoski reported in The Austin American-Statesman that blind pianist Jay Spell will leave the Reefers following their current tour to join Tim Krekel's band. (Krekel once played guitar with the Coral Reefers, but is now flying high as a solo act on Capricorn Records with an excellent LP called "Crazy Me.") The Austin paper also reported that Buffett is currently helping two other Coral Reefers, harmonica player Greg "Fingers" Taylor and vocalist Deborah McColl, work on solo LPs.

That has to leave music fans caught between the proverbial rock and a hard place. One wants to see talent succeed — but anyone at the March 2 Buffett concert at the Lubbock Coliseum can attest to the fact the Coral Reefers play very, very well together.

You may have noticed the pictures of the gang members have disappeared from the display ads for the movie "The Warriors." Paramount Pictures has ordered theaters to use only the title in their display ads while the research boys try to come up with less controversial artwork.

• • • • • • •

A final reminder: Take note that "Midnight Express" has returned to the city this week. Currently at the Backstage Theater, it is one of the five current nominees for the Academy Award for Best Picture of the Year. Its many nominations are well deserved, but an omission glares even brighter. Brad Davis, who stars as Billy Hayes in the powerful drama, was passed over when the nominations for best acting performance were handed out.

In my mind, Davis is the only actor who even came close to Jon Voight in the running for 1978's best performance. He's young and will no doubt be back. But it still hurts.

Photography Lecture Set Here

James L. Enyeart, director of the Center for Creative Photography, will present an illustrated lecture on his own photography and some of the Center's holdings and activities at 7 p.m. Tuesday in room 102 of the Texas Tech University art building.

An acknowledged expert on the history of photography and the photographic process, Enyeart appears through the sponsorship of the National Endowment for the Arts, which awarded the Tech art department a grant in the spring of 1978.

While in Lubbock, Enyeart will discuss building photographic collections with the Texas Tech Museum's acquisitions committee, and will appear as a guest critic in various photography classes.

Enyeart has previously lectured at California State University in Long Beach; the San Francosco Museum of Art; the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.; the University of New Mexico; the University of Exeter in England; the Minneapolis Institute of Art and the Smithsonian Institute.

His work is in such collections as the "Bibliotheque Nationale" in Paris, France; the George Eastman House in Rochester, N.Y.; the Sheldon Memorial Gallery and the University of Nebraska.

He has been the subject of feature stories in The Village Voice, The Los Angeles Times, The San Francisco Chronicle, The National Observer, Artweek, Popular Photography and England's Journal of the Royal Photographic Society.

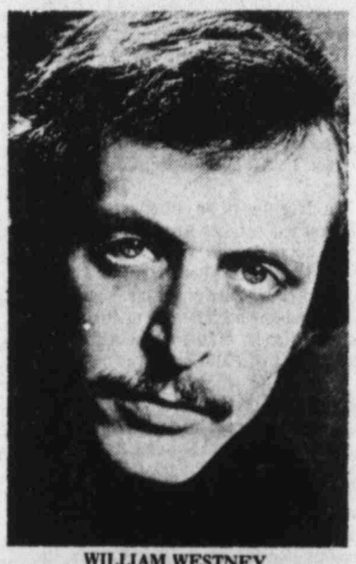
Pianist William Westney To Be Featured In Recital

Pianist William Westney, Browning artist-in-residence at Texas Tech University, will be featured in recital at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the campus Recital Hall. There is no admission charge.

Westney received degrees from Queen's College in New York and Yale University. The New York-born pianist has earned distinction as the top prize winner at the 1975 Geneva International Music Competition. Other awards have included a Fulbright grant for European study and first place at the 1973 Piano Teachers Congress competition in New York. He was also the only American winner in auditions helf by Radiotelevisione Italiana.



WILLIAM WESTNEY

Recitals in Geneva, Milan, Bologna, Turin and Genoa earned him high critical acclaim, as has his recording on the CRI label of the striking futuristic music of rediscovered American composer Leo Ornstein. This was singled out by one publication as "one of the 10 best American music records of 1975."

Westney's program will include works by Franz Schubert, Sergei Rachmaninoff, Moritz Moszkowski and Russian-American composer Leo Ornstein.

Ornstein, still composing at the age of 86, now resides in Brownsville. He came to America to flee the Russian revolution and became notorious as an avant-garde composer, gaining an international reputation. In the late 1920s, though, he suddenly dropped from view and many thought him dead. Only five years ago was he "re-discovered" by a colleague of Westney.

Ornstein was found in New Hampshire with literally a barn full of compositions. Two of these compositions will be played by Westney Tuesday, both drastically different. "Suicide In An Airplane" (1913) is regarded as a futuristic piece, representing the turmoil of America during the Industrial Revolution. In contrast, "Morning In The Woods" (1971) is very mellow.

EXHIBITION OPENS TODAY — An art exhibition featuring the works of Texas artists Mike Atkinson, Patti Canaris and H.A. Douglass will open at the Baker Gallery with a reception from 1 to 4:30 p.m. today. The above painting is a watercolor by Atkinson called "Stone Wall."

Three-Man Art Exhibition Set

Mike Atkinson, Patti Canaris and H.A. Douglass will be featured in a three-man art exhibition today through April 14 at the Baker Gallery, 1301 13th Street. All three artists will be present from 1 to 4:30 p.m. today to meet the public and answer questions concerning their work.

A Lubbock native, Atkinson began learning the fundamentals of the watercolor medium as a teenager. He continued to learn these fundamentals through his college education, as he studied toward a degree in architecture. He describes his painting philosophy with, "To paint what you see is one thing, but to feel what you see and paint that expression is my goal. I love to paint those things which are rarely seen, like the morning mist, or the streaks of sunshine through the trees or a silhouette in the fog.

"In painting, I try to create a center of visual interest and develop it, allowing everything else to blur and fade to the periphery of the painting. As a result, half of each painting of often left white, untouched paper. Yet the white is not empty. It is completely finished. The balance between details and white is very critical. What is not there is as important as what is there. The white areas allow the viewer to finish the painting in his own eye. In this way, the paintings are limited only by the viewers' imagination."

Atkinson's paintings are in collections in 11 states and two foreign countries. He has been invited to exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art in Mexico City.

The art work of Patti Canaris is a reflection of a fast attachment for nature and the outdoors. She grew up on a Montana cattle ranch and said, "Communication is important to me. I hope that people will see my work, realize the beauty of these intimate images and want to get involved in preserving such beauty before it's too late. The real creativity happens when I'm out in the woods: seeing, hearing, feeling, forming images in my heart.

"I come back to the studio and use my knowledge of the painter's craft to try to present visually what I have felt. It is a constant challenge."

Listed in Who's Who In American Art, Miss Canaris' work has been on the cover of such magazines as "New Mexico Wildlife" and "High Country Profile." In November of 1977, she was invited by Mrs. Jimmy Carter to participate in the "Blending Of The Cultures" held at the Chamizal National Memorial near El Paso.

Her paintings are in galleries and private collections in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Washington and Montana.

A Western artist working in oils, H.A. Douglass has a special insight for creating paintings of Southwestern subject matter. His interest in Southwest history was instigated by the stories of his grandfather, who took up ranching in Jack County when the Commanche Indians were still rampaging through the area, and his having seen the remaining evidence of the oldtime cowboy and the trails of the Butterfield Overland Stage Coach as it traveled across his grandfather's land.

Douglass has worked as an illustrator for a number of years in the Dallas and Houston areas.

New Books In Review

THE AFFAIRS OF THE GENERALS. By Hans Hellmut Kirst. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan. 253 Pages. $9.95.

Hans Hellmut Kirst returns to the nightmare world of early Nazi Germany in his 17th novel to tell a story he has obviously wanted to bring out for some time.

"The Affairs of the Generals" re-creates the insidious evil of Hitler and his henchmen as they remove the titular top of the old Prussian guard and grab control of the Wehrmacht.

It is a disturbing tale of a military and a society blinded by a demonic leader. With consummate ease, Hitler and Goering depose Field Marshal Werner von Blomberg, commander-in-chief of the Wehrmacht and war minister, and Gen. Baron Werner von Fritsch, commander-in-chief of the army. Their toppling is not done with a putsch, but with putrid rumor-mongering.

Kirst's novel shows how the Gestapo gathered and falsified information on the two officers. Even though Hitler and Goering acted as witnesses at Blomberg's marriage to young Eva Gruhn in January 1938, the field marshall was stripped of his rank two months later on the basis of trumped-up information that she was a prostitute. Gen. Fritsch was publicly pilloried as a homosexual and although he was acquitted in a trial, he never regained his military stature.

The Blomberg-Fritsch scandals have been mentioned in previous novels by Kirst. It is unfortunate that this book isn't as spellbinding as "The Night of the Generals," "The Wolves" or "The Night of the Long Knives." There is the impression at the end of the novel that Kirst — who was drafted into the Wehrmacht at 18 and served during the war in Poland, France and Russia — was compelled to write the book to set history straight.

Kirst has maintained in recent years that the chronicles of Hitler's years are "wrongheaded," omitting "the Nazi gangsterism. If we don't stop the Hitler histories, he'll soon have the stature of Napoleon," he wrote. This novel is one more block in Kirst's wall against that happening.

BEFORE THE SABBATH. By Eric Hoffer. Harper & Row. 144 Pages. $7.95.

"I am still looking for a wholly new train of thought. Actually, at my age, the mind is better elaborating and deepening the familiar than groping for a new beginning...Although I keep looking for something new, there is the conviction in the back of my mind that there is nothing new under the sun."

So writes Eric Hoffer about three-quarters of the way through his newest book, "Before the Sabbath." His assessment is not totally accurate; there are several honed and polished insights in this six-month collection of reflections set down in 1974-75.

America's self-made longshoreman-philosopher still has his criteria for the modern day — he values hard work and the basic goodness of the masses, the capitalist economy and the existence of Israel, to name a few. Hoffer despises Lenin, Hitler and Stalin, the "unintelligible" German philosophers, and the unmotivated British worker.

Begun as a test of his mental abilities just after he turned 73, Hoffer's book often testifies to his rational acuity: "Senility consists partly in not being able to take things for granted. The old are not sure that their legs will carry them, their arms will lift, their eyes will see, their stomach digest. Would this be true also of a society? Does a society become senile when it no longer can take familiar practices and attitudes for granted?"

In straining for a new thought daily, Hoffer covers a lot of familiar ground — ideas he has sown in his eight earlier books. But as the San Francisco resident continues his voracious reading — Hoffer was nearly blind until 15, after which he became a compulsive reader — he offers new perspectives. In an entry in this diary-like book, he notes the style of American military leadership after completing a biography of Admiral Spruance, the commander of the battle of Midway: "The practical, unmomentous style of American leadership has a special fascination for me... an unflustered, undramatic style of history making ... and, finally, an enormous capacity to learn from events."

That capacity seems to be what Hoffer holds highest, along with a free society.

LIVE BAIT. By Frank Tuohy. Holt, Rinehart & Winston. 181 pages. $7.95.

Not too many years ago the short story flourished, but, as its magazine markets dwindled, it had become in recent years a rather neglected literary form.

It is not dead, however. Far from it. Even though truly gifted short-story writers currently are rare indeed, they do exist, and Frank Tuohy is one of them.

Tuohy demonstrates his mastery of the form in the 12 fine stories collected in "Live Bait." Most of his tales are bittersweet, dealing largely with the little things that make up everyday life. This may not sound terribly important, and perhaps it isn't but Tuohy makes it seem so, and that's the mark of the true short-story writer.

In "A Summer Pilgrim," Tuohy touches with some humor and a good deal of irony on the awkwardnesses that occur between peoples of different cultures. In this case, a Japanese woman goes to England to pay homage to a British poet she greatly admires. But instead of treating her properly, the aging poet tries — in a fumbling manner — to seduce her while his wife unwittingly insults her.

A similar situation is presented in "The Potlatch of Esmeralda." In this case a woman is abandoned by a man she has supported, in favor of an older woman with money. The way in which Esmeralda gets back at her former lover is very funny and also very sad.

One of the best things about Tuohy is that he writes with a great economy of line but manages to load his words with much meaning. In "Windows," for example, he beautifully limns memory as being "like turning to the early pages in a family album, where the photographs are sepia and people seem to live in twilight."

Tuohy's next collection of short stories is eagerly awaited.

— PHIL THOMAS, AP

THE CUTTING EDGE. By Penelope Gilliatt. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan. 150 Pages. $8.95.

A reviewer must not gush over Penelope Gilliatt's new novel, "The Cutting Edge." She would wince. Perhaps one could suggest a discreet metaphor. In terms of literary value, the book is worth its weight in gold. It has only 150 pages, but not a wasted word.

Running deep and true through the work's pungently entertaining cavalcade of people and encounters is the theme of two brothers' love for each other. Brother A and Brother B, as their procrastinating father had called them temporarily as babies, become known to us as Peregrine, the elder by a few years, and Benedick Corbett.

The novel covers the first 40 years or so of their lives, with a varied series of scenes from their changing times, fast-cut, brilliant vignettes. Place and mood are conveyed, idiosyncrasies caught and character established with succinct description and sharp snatches of amusing dialogue.

Peregrine and Benedick are as close as if they had been twins. Peregrine is the one who has "a soft heart with a cutting edge." The cutting edge is in his dealings with the world at large, not with his equally soft-hearted brother. Their love is never possessive, never taken for granted, rarely directly expressed.

Born in England, they go their own ways after growing up but never stay apart too long, and write when they are apart, on travels in Turkey, France and Italy. At one point, "Peregrine left Istanbul for Paris, because he was aware that he was exerting too much influence on Benedick. For Benedick's part, he refrained from trying to prevent Peregrine's going. He thought he was in the way."

Benedick kept Peregrine's letters in a folder. "He had no notion that Peregrine had an equivalent brown leather-covered box where he kept every note and letter that Benedick had ever written to him."

They both love the same woman but even that brings them together rather than separates them. The book ends, amid laughter and tears, with the woman and the two men together, posing a question and a carefree answer that might contain the title of an undiscovered Shakespeare comedy: "But who will ever know which brother she was angry with and which she loved? Both, in both cases, it seemed, as is the way of things."

THREE DAYS IN NOVEMBER. By T.H. Althof. (St. Martin's Press, $10.95)

As a disaster novel, it's a disaster, although the premise on which the book is based is sound.

An automobile collision closes an important tunnel on a busy Pennsylvania turnpike just before a three-day blizzard stalls traffic from the Allegheny Mountains to the Ohio state line. This occurs on the Sunday night of Thanksgiving weekend, when half a million people are on the road in more than 132,000 cars.

Roughly the first half of Althof's first novel relies so heavily on direct quotes and CB and turnpike slanguage that it becomes boring and, at times, incomprehensible.

By the time real suspense begins to build, thenauthor has introduced such implausible characters as a turnpike executive tramping around in the blizzard for hours in sneakers without suffering frostbite; a hillbilly girl and a subteen boy who, as the blizzard winds down, walk for miles without apparet harm, despite inadequate apparel and carrying the boy's pet dog in a canvas bag.

There's enough plot material in this 412-page novel to fuel half a dozen or more TV sitcoms or disaster movies, any one of which might be better than cramming everything into a single book.

AMERICAN MUSICAL THEATER. By Gerald Bordman. (Oxford, $35)

For once a dust-jacket blurb is 100 percent correct: this really is "the definitive reference work on the American musical."

Bordman first lays the groundwork of the American musical comedy till 1866, when "The Black Crook" provided the essential features of what was to become a pure American art form.

From then on he details every "Broadway" musical, as well as many seen elsewhere in the country, puts them into perspective and introduces the principal writers, composers, producers and performers.

The book is divided into eras — such as The Golden Age, 1924-1937 — and concludes with Exhaustion and the Search for New Directions, 1965-1978.

"American Musical Theater" is an invaluable reference work, in which you can immerse yourself among its 688 pages for hours at a time.

INDIAN SILVER JEWELRY OF THE SOUTHWEST. By Larry Frank with the assistance of Millard J. Holbrook II. (New York Graphic Society, $29.95)

For a collector, an irresistible volume, even though most of the photographs by William J. Salman are in black and white. Happily the silver designs show up well even without color photography.

Frank writes that Mexican plateros (silverworkers) generally are credited with teaching the Navajos silversmithing. He adds that Indian silversmiths used exactly the same processes as Mexican blacksmiths to produce ironwork.

He also writes that "...most Indian jewelry caters to the average pocketbook." Obviously he is not thinking of such pieces as squash blossom necklaces and heavy concha belts, many of which sell for hundreds of dollars.

Nor can the average buyer afford, say, an Indian corn bracelet by Charles Loloma that sells for well over $1,000.

But many contemporary pieces in both traditional and contemporary designs are both affordable and attractive.

DAY OF JUDGMENT. By Jack Higgins. (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $8.95)

The latest Higgins suspense novel seems strangely dated. He is writing about the Cold War in the early 1960s. We are asked to once again confront the Berlin Wall and President John F. Kennedy's famous visit to beleagured West Berlin and take it all seriously. For some reason, it is hard to do.

World War II and the Nazis are the fictional rage today, as Higgins well demonstrated in "The Eagle Has Landed." Still, given the unpopular period, this book is a well-handled thriller despite a predictable plot. Its strongest aspects are its characters.

The daughter of an American scientist who turned traitor. An Irish American priest noted for his success in assisting refuges from East Berlin. An ex-American soldier who betrayed his country in Korea and has become one of Red China's practitioners of brain-washing.

Through a ruse, the girl lures the priest to East Berlin where he is captured by the Communists. The brain-washing specialist tries to persuade the priest to make anti-American statements and announce he was hired by the C.I.A.

The announcements are to be timed to embarrass President Kennedy when he arrives in Berlin. Officials all over the western world, from the Vatican to Washington, scheme to rescue the priest and abort the Red plot.

From here, the events fall patly into place. But Higgins is a smooth, skillful writer and his sense of narrative keeps the story alive.

BIRDY. By William Wharton. Knopf. 310 Pages. $8.95.

They are fast friends, even though their interests are miles apart. Al is the macho body-builder and girl-chaser, while Birdy devotes his spare time to breeding canaries. Birdy's hobby becomes an obsession, and he becomes so involved with his desire to be a canary and to fly, that he can no longer separate his fantasy from the real world.

Al and Birdy begin to tell us their story when we first meet them as grown men. It is shortly after the close of World War II, a war which has not been kind to either man. The taciturn Birdy is in an army psychiatric hospital, squatting in a cell and flapping his arms as though trying to fly. Al has been summoned from another hospital, where he has been undergoing plastic surgery on his war-torn face, in an attempt to spark Birdy back to humankind.

The reader is allowed to eavesdrop as Al begins to reminisce with Birdy. Although Al does not break through to Birdy until the end, Birdy gradually begins to write his own story and interweave it with Al's. The result is an engrossing and effective dual biography, contrasting but not conflicting.

"Birdy" is carried out beautifully in its unique format. It is sometimes charming and funny, and often disturbing. Despite a few flaws, such as the less-than-perfect ending, it is nearly always involving.

"Birdy" is author William Wharton's first novel, and with it, he has set a high standard for his subsequent works to live up to.

NATIVES & STRANGERS. By Leonard Dinnerstein, Roger Nichols, David Reimers. Oxford University Press. 333 Pages. $13.95.

"Our purpose in writing this book," the authors of "Natives & Strangers" note in a succinct preface, "has been to emphasize ... the role of blacks, Indians and immigrant minorities in the transformation of the colonial society into the nation of the 1970s.

"We have concentrated on the main theme of economic growth and how ethnic minorities played a role in that development."

Their theme stated, the authors pursue it from the arrival of the first colonists in America up to the present day and the result is a story with a panoramic sweep that deeply interests the reader while at the same time educating him in relatively little-known historical facts about this nation.

Agriculture was the nation's first absorption — leading to the use of slaves in some parts of the country — but it was not long before commerce and industry began to grow vastly, especially in the north.

To run the mills, to build the railroads, to put up the skyscrapers, and to do the jobs that many of the older settlers thought beneath them, hands and backs were needed.

The only place to get this necessary labor force was from overseas and, as an example, between 1819 and 1840 some "743,000 foreigners reached the United States." Most of these were Irish, but as the years passed millions of others from many nations — driven by famine, persecution, the desire to better the quality of life — flocked here.

The story of what happened to these many people and how they were absorbed is told carefully and well in this book.

BEAUTIFUL GIRL. By Alice Adams. Knopf. 242 Pages. $8.95.

Of the 16 included in this collection, not one can be singled out as being better than any other. Alice Adams has a fine, rare talent and she shows it off beautifully in these writings.

Three of the stories deal with one family, the Todds. The first "Verlie I Say Unto You," introduces the Todds when the parents are youthful and their two children are quite young. The time is the 1930s, and the story tells of love and of death.

"Are You in Love?" shows the Todds a few years later. The parents are older and less than satisfied with their marriage. The children are growing and Miss Adams captures the themes of aging and adolescence superbly. The final story, "Alternatives," deals with death and regeneration. The elder Todds are dead, the children grown and unhappy with their lives, but one survivor, Todd's second wife, is content with what has happened and what is to come.

"Beautiful Girl," the title story, deals with the theme of vibrant youth that turns etu as the years pass. The opening line sums it up: "Ardis Bascombe, the tobacco heiress, who 20 years ago was a North Carolina beauty queen, is now sitting in the kitchen of her San Francisco house, getting drunk."

Those who have not read Miss Adams should, and they would be making a wise move by starting out with this fine collection of stories.

THE LITHOGRAPHS OF R.C. GORMAN. By Doris Monthan. (Northland press, $35)

In an earlier book on Indian art, Doris Monthan singled out R.C. Gorman as one of the prime individualists in American Indian art, "the blithe spirit of the art world, jetting back and forth across the country, thriving on parties, exotic food, dramatic clothes."

Yet Gorman's art is as divorced from the social theatrics of the art scene as are the multicolored canyons of his native New Mexico from the urban artificiality of a Madison Avenue gallery.

In his lithographs, Gorman's subjects mostly are Navajo women and he catches them in all their aloof dignity. His careful, economical use of lines and a few broad colors suit his subject matter, giving the women earthiness and an air of brooding peace.

Gorman was famous for his linear portraits and individualistic paintings before he switched to lithographs in the lato. The medium is perfect for him.

THE CEMENT GARDEN. By Ian McEwan. Simon & Schuster. 153 Pages. $8.95.

In this thoroughly unpleasant first novel, Ian McEwan demonstrates that while he has a facility for writing well he has yet to master the craft of spinning an interesting story.

It's a dull book populated with a handful of dull characters, and the only thing that keeps the determined reader turning the pages is the desire to find out just what the author is trying to say. The effort, however, really isn't worth it.

"The Cement Garden" does remind somewhat of William Golding's "Lord of the Flies," but lacks the compelling power of that minor classic.

In McEwan's book four children are marooned — not on an island — but in a decaying house set in a devastated section of contemporary London. All the buildings which once surrounded their home have either been torn down or have fallen down.

At first the four — Jack, his sisters, Julie and Sue, and their young brother, Tom — have parents. But then the father dies. Soon afterward the mother takes to her bed and eventually she, too, dies. The children — Jack and the girls are in their teens. Tom is 6 — decide to conceal her death so that the authorities will not break up their family. They bury the mother's body in the basement.

Country Notes

By Bob Campbell

An important breed of local entertainer is the one who works as a single or in a duet in the small restaurants or bars that can't accommodate a full band.

NANCY and DON WHITE

Don, 37, a native of Brownfield, is like most Lubbock musicians in that he holds down a full-time job, selling security systems in his case, and plays music mostly on weekends.

But he is also a professional entertainer both in experience and ability.

He has missed only a weekend or two in the past four years, and he would play and sing sometimes for six hours a night at the Big Texan, Coppercreek Mine, the Villa Inn, the Hilton Inn, Buffalo Lakes Steak House and the Sand Trap at the Coronado Inn.

"I need the money, and I enjoy what I'm doing," he said. "I wouldn't do it if I didn't love it."

Asked how much effect audience response has on his performance, he said, "If you've got a good crowd, it's the easiest job in the world. If you've got one that's not very responsive, they can make it a long night.

"You're not nearly as good when you have an audience that's not responding. And they can make you about twice as good as you really are."

White said the reason he has been able to work so regularly is that people who have listened to him for years follow him to wherever he is playing.

He started playing guitar as a child but waited until he was in his 30s to perform in public because he thought he was not good enough, he said.

"Then I did," he said, "and I found out I expected more out of myself than what the public does."

Starting to play small clubs in Lubbock was not an entirely new experience, though. He had a band in the 1950s and played a few dances and talent shows — one, he remembers, with Waylon Jennings about 1955 at the theater in Anton.

He was playing a duet at the time, and he played guitar behind the youthful singer-guitarist from Littlefield in a band thrown together for the occasion.

"At that time, it wasn't any big deal," he said. "He won first place, and our duet won second."

WHITE TO SING — Tony Joe White, who used his sandpaper voice to etch his mark in country music with "Polk Salad Annie" and "Willie and Laura Mae Jones," will be singing at Cold Water Country Thursday night. Call the club for times and cover charge information.

Exhibit Features Texas Artist

Native Texas artist Carl J. Smith will be featured in a one-man exhibition from 2 to 5 p.m. today at the Country Framer, 4322 50th Street. There is no admission charge.

Smith is one of the nation's best known Western artists, and his paintings have been exhibited in many of the most popular galleries across the country. His show was the first one-man exhibition ever held in the Gilcrease Museum in Tulsa, Okla., a museum famous for its Western art. Smith's paintings have been seen at the Grand Central Gallery in New York City, and he has had yearly showings at the Pritchard Galleries in Houston and San Antonio and the Sagebrush Gallery in Amarillo.

Smith, a resident of Canyon, is the son and grandson of Plains pioneers. He was raised in the 1930s' dust bowl days. His work shows not only warmth and neighborliness among the early settlers, but also the isolation, loneliness and harsh conditions under which they lived. He paints the plains, the sunsets, the blizzards and the dust storms, depicting a realistic history as he knows it.

However, he purposely paints a "haze" into each painting which lends an expressionistic calmness. As one Eastern painter remarked, "The veil, rather than shutting out the viewer, invites him in, allows him to be a participant in the scene."

His paintings are said to have the feel of this country and an ability to reawaken memories in others.

Shirley Bredfeldt To Give Graduate Violin Recital

SHIRLEY BREDFELDT

Shirley Bredfeldt, graduate teaching assistant at Texas Tech University, will be featured in graduate violin recital at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the campus Recital Hall. She will be assisted by violinist Patrice Barnett and pianist Lora Deahl.

There is no admission charge.

Miss Bredfeldt received her bachelor's degree from Fort Hays State University in Kansas. She taught orchestra in the Dodge City, Kansas school system for three years and now assists with Tech's Suzuki string program. A student of Virginia Kellogg, she is active with the Lubbock, Roswell and Tech symphony orchestras.

Friday's recital will consist of works by Beethoven, Prokofiev, Ravel and Bach.

In 1699, Peter the Great ordered the Russian New Year to be reckoned from Jan. 1 instead of Sept. 1.

Tech Bands To Give Concert

Texas Tech University's two varsity bands and Brass Band will be featured in concert at 7:30 p.m. today at the campus Recital Hall. There is no admission charge.

The program will include music by John Philip Sousa, Claude T. Smith, Rimsky-Korsakov, Gustav Holst, Leroy Anderson and Ralph Vaughn Williams.

Band director are Richard Tolley, Brass Band; Anthony Brittin, Varsity Band II; and Robert Mayes, Varsity Band I.

Membership in the bands is determined by audition, but everyone who plays an instrument has a position in one of the three bands. The Brass Band is limited to brass players and percussionists, but the other bands are open to regular concert instruments. The bands involve students of all majors.

Humorist To Address Writers

Humorist, writer and after-dinner speaker Jean Burchett will address the South Plains Writers' Association at its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Garden & Arts Center.

There is no admission charge, and the meeting is open to the public.

Miss Burchett is the author of the column "Daze Of Our Lives" and several humorous articles which have appeared in the Amarillo Globe News, the Wichita Daily News and the Childress Index. Formerly the secretary to the city manager of Childress, she will conduct workshops this year on "How To Write Humor And Make It Pay" at writers' conferences at West Texas State University in Canyon and Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

David Shipley's Works On Display

An exhibition of paintings and drawings by David Shipley will be on display today through Saturday in the first floor teacher's gallery of the Texas Tech University art building. The artist will be present to meet the public at a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. today.

Shipley, a senior at Tech, describes the show as a combination of realism and abstraction, one which can be viewed as a new approach to the old concepts and symbolism relating to Christianity.

The show will consist of 10 drawings and 10 paintings.

Registration For Spring Art Classes Now Underway

Registration is now underway for the spring art classes held at Time Square Artist Workshop, 2539 74th Street. Classes begin March 26, with Peggy Benton Young as instructor.

Separate classes are offered in basic oil painting, drawing & oil painting and watercolor. Call the workshop for specific times and details.

Exhibit On Jewish Ritual, Life Shown In Museum

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Two hundred examples of intricate, colorful and historic textiles related to Jewish ritual and life will fill most of the third floor galleries of the Indianapolis Museum of Art until April 1.

"Fabric of Jewish Life" is drawn from the comprehensive permanent collection of the Jewish Museum in New York City where the exhibition was shown last winter and spring. Prior to that time, many of the pieces had not been seen by the public, and Indianapolis is the only other museum in the United States to exhibit the collection.

'GREASE ANNIVERSARY'

Surrealism To Be Subject Of Art Seminar

Surrealism as expressed by 20th century French painters will be the subject of an art seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Texas Tech Museum. Rabbi Alexander Kline is the lecturer for the art seminar series, sponsored by the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association.

There is an admission charge.

Surrealism is a word coined in 1917 by the poet Guillaume Apollinaire. It claimed a kinship with Freudinism and attempted to give expression to subconscious mental activity that is not controlled by reason.

In these paintings, dreams and erotic fantasies could take on major importance. Many of the century's leading painters worked with surrealism for a time, although their major contributions were in other forms. Pablo Picasso and Marc Chagall both had points of contact with surrealism.

Considered near perfect expressions of the form are some works by Max Ernst, born in Germany in 1891 but identified with Paris after 1922. His evocative paintings employed frottages, the rubbing of black lead onto the surface to create textures of cloth, the grain of wood or other textures. This technique lent an air of mystery and imagination to his works and gave new dimension to surrealism.

Typical of the movement are Ernst's "Painting Construction In Cork" and "The Elephant Celebes;" Joan Diro's "Woman And Bird By Moonlight;" Yves Tanguy's "Luke, The Cheat;" and Rene Magritte's "Threatening Weather."

'Norma' Headlines Opera Program

Vincenzo Bellini's three-act bel canto opera "Norma" will be broadcast live over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network at 1 p.m. Saturday. It will be heard locally over radio station KTXT-FM.

Singing principal roles will be soprano Shirley Verrett, mezzo-soprano Elena Obraztsova, tenor Carlo Cossutto and bass Paul Plishka. Peter Maag will conduct.

Rosa Ponselle, considered to be one of the greatest Normas of all time, will be interviewed by Boris Goldovsky during the first intermission.

ADOLESCENT COSTARS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Juvenile stars Tatum O'Neal and Kristy McNichol will play the title roles in "Little Darlings," for producer Stephen J. Friedman at Paramount Pictures. Tatum, youngest performer in history to win an Academy Award — best supporting actress for "Paper Moon" (1973) — and Kristy, who won an emmy for her role in the "Family" TV series, will be directed by Ron Maxwell.

LEAVE IT TO GEORGE — The name of the actor is George C. Scott, one of the most versatile male stars in Hollywood today. He is shown as he appeared in seven films. Scott has now been cast in a particularly unique role in "Hardcore" (now playing at the Fox Fourplex), playing a deeply religious Midwest businessman who infiltrates the pornography underworld to search for his missing teenaged daughter. The film, written and directed by Paul Schrader, is a Columbia release. The above photos are: top row from left, "The Hustler," "The Bible," "Dr. Strangelove" and "Anatomy Of A Murder" — and bottom row from left, "Hospital," "Patton," "Hardcore" and a snapshot of Scott off screen. Scott won the Oscar for "Patton" and further nominations for "Anatomy Of A Murder," "The Hustler" and "Hospital."

Amateur Literary Contests Set

COLUMBIA, S.C. — American Literary and Creative Arts Associates, Inc. is sponsoring national contests for amateur poets, prose writers, photographers and artists.

Dr. Hubert M. Clements, president of the non-profit organization, said an amateur is defined as one whose total income from his or her talent area has not exceeded $1,000.

Ten cash prizes will be awarded in each of the four areas: First place $200; second place $100; third place $50; fourth place $25; fifth place $15; and five honorable mentions $10 each.

Multiple entries in one or more talent area are invited. Entries must be postmarked on or before midnight March 31, 1979 to qualify. A $3 fee must accompany each entry.

Clements said there are no limitations on style or subject matter. Works must be original and never before accepted for publication or entered in a contest.

Poems may not exceed 300 words and prose entries may not exceed 1,000 words. Two copies of each poem or prose entry are required. These should be typewritten and double spaced on one side of 8 1/2" X 11" paper with multiple page entries stapled in the upper left corner.

Only black and white photographs and art may be entered. These should be no smaller than 5" X 7" and no longer than 8" X 10". Each work must be permanently mounted on an 8" X 10" mat. Art entries can be in any medium including pencil, charcoal, pen-and-ink sketches or drawings, lithographs, and etchings.

Contestants should put their full name, address, telephone number and title of work on each page of poetry and prose. This information should be affixed to the back of the photography and art.

Mail entries to: American Literary and Creative Arts Association, Inc., P.O. Box 21641, Columbia, South Carolina 29221. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for return of entries and with requests for additional information.

Archaeological Meeting Features Japan Lecture

Members and guests of the Lubbock Society of the Archaeological Institute of America will meet at 3 p.m. today in room 102 of the Texas Tech University art building.

Sara Miller of the Tech art department will present an illustrated lecture about Japan entitled "Capitol For 1,000 Years: Kyoto."

JULIE'S ROLE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Julie Andrews will join Walter Matthau in Damon Runyan's "Little Miss Marker," a remake of the 1934 box-office hit that made a star of Shirley Temple. Julie will play Amanda, an heiress who fronts a gambling operation to regain the estate her father lost. Matthau plays Sorrowful Jones, the dyspeptic bookie who takes a little girl as a "marker" for her father's bet.

Herbie Geared For Stardom In 'Love Bug'

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (Special) — There are infinite means by which a star is born. Some emerge from beauty contests and Olympic games. Others are found on soda fountain stools, or in the realm of fashion. Herbie, the world's most talented Volkswagen, had an especially exciting "brake." Veteran Disney producer Bill Walsh recounted the story at a press conference following the initial release of "The Love Bug" in 1969. Herbie's success story is just as popular as the film, which was the highest grossing movie of 1969 and Disney's most successful comedy feature ever.

"We need a little car for 'The Love Bug,' so we lined some up in front of the animation building at the studio," said Walsh.

"We had a little Toyota, a little Fiat and a little Morris Minor. And we had a little Volkswagen. As the studio people went by on their way to lunch, they all looked at the little cars, and they would kick the tires and reach in to see how the steering wheels worked.

"But everyone who went by patted the Volkswagen. They didn't pat the other cars, and that was indicative. The VW had a personality of its own that reached out and embraced people. Thus we found our star."

Herbie was a 1963 Sunroof model known as the "1200." During the course of the movie he had to perform stunts that cost him wheels, fenders and numerous vital parts.

"The Volkswagen people were not too pleased when they heard about that," Walsh continues. "They didn't like to see their cars falling apart, or turning over. So every little while they would come by the studio and drop off lawyers like they were paratroopers, saying 'cease and desist.'

"One gentleman finally arrived who was head of Volkswagen. I showed the picture to him and he didn't smile very much until I said 'Sir, this is the first picture in years where the Germans have won in Hollywood. You are beating the Ferraris, you are beating the Renaults, you are beating the Austin Healeys.' So then he started to smile."

The Volkswagen's success is now in Hollywood legend. "The Love Bug" proved so popular that it was named the biggest grossing film of 1969 by "Variety," Hollywood's famous trade paper.

Disney acknowledged Herbie's talent by signing him to a long-term contract. "Herbie Rides Again" (1974) and "Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo" (1977) confirmed the lovable bug's superstar status, and the studio recently announced plans for a third sequel, reportedly to be set in another exotic locale.

Herbie is a bona fide American hero: on August 11, 1977, his tireprints were placed in cement in the forecourt of Hollywood's famous Mann's Chinese Theatre. The Volkswagen might not be able to answer call hs fan mail, but he always manages a cheerful toot to fans on the road.

Americans Outscreen Chinese Counterparts

NEW YORK (UPI) — The population of the Peoples Republic of China tops that of the United States by nearly four to one, but Americans outscreen their Chinese counterparts in television sets by about 70 to one, according to an RCA survey.

There are some 140 million TV sets in American homes, the report shows, compared with an estimated two million for mainland China, with approximately 700,000 of these centered around Peking.

JAMES MASON

NEW YORK (UPI) — James Mason hopes to return to Broadway for the first time in 32 years in "Faith Healer," scheduled to open April 5. His costar in the Brian Field play about a British faith healer, will be Clarissa Kay, Mrs. Mason in private life.

List Of Declining Birds Given

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Birds, the ornithological journal of the National Audubon Society, has released its 1979 Blue List of declining bird species. The total amount this year reaches a new high of 63 species, with four new additions.

The four newcomers to the list are the Least Bittern, whose population in the eastern United States is probably suffering from marshland destruction; the Roseate Tern, a coastal-nesting seabird whose colonies from New England southward are suffering serious declines; the Short-billed Marsh Wren, declining in the eastern United States, and the Black-billed Cuckoo, a species with cyclical population characteristics.

Consumers 'Foot Bills' For Recalls

By DONALD WOUTAT

DETROIT (AP) — As the federal tax people say, recalls are an "ordinary and necessary" cost of doing business. Thus the recall is a tax deduction.

And while a recall campaign forced one company into bankruptcy several years ago — the maker of Bon Vivant soup found contaminated with botulism — most companies roll with the financial punch.

But an expert on recalls warns of a "legal time bomb" ticking away that could send the cost skyrocketing: the concept of reimbursing consumers for their time and trouble.

"One can argue legally that a consumer is entitled to reimbursement if he has to rent a car while his is being fixed, or for his time spent bringing it to and from the dealer," says E. Patrick MacGuire of the Conference Board in New York.

"If we ever get a class-action suit, you're going to multiply the cost of a recall by two or three times."

Ultimately, of course, consumers foot most of the bill for recalls and all other "costs of doing business" in the form of higher prices. Shareholders are also paying, as reflected in today's smaller corporate margins compared to the pre-regulatory days of the early 1960s.

Companies are also spending more money to test products. Ford Motor Co., which was hit especially hard by car defects in 1978, recently announced a $200 million, five-year quality improvement program with the slogan "Do It Right The First Time."

The cost of recalls to business is normally a closely-held secret, though companies have disclosed the tab for exceptionally costly ones.

The biggest bill to date is thought to be the current recall of 10 million Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. "500" radial tires. Firestone said it set aside $147 million after taxes to pay for it, figuring about five million tires would actually be returned.

T-Shirt Gallery Enjoys Success

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) — Art for art's sake it is not — but what might be the world's first T-shirt gallery in Hamburg seems to be catching on anyway.

Erwin Schulz, who opened the gallery about a year ago at Eppendorfer Weg, now hold chamber music nights and discussion sessions in the surroundings of T-shirt paints ranging from the Beattles to Kojak and Mickey Mouse.

T-shirts, says Schulz, can tell you a lot about the psychological make-up of the wearer, but they also provide clues to contemporary political, consumer and art trends.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL

TRAVEL WITH FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS OF THE SOUTH PLAINS AREA

ITINERARY

COLOGNE

After DAY 1 of travel from Lubbock you'll be welcomed and assisted upon arrival. On DAY 2, transfer to your hotel for check-in and registration. Balance of the day is to rest up and to acquaint yourself with the hotel and the city of Cologne.

DAY 3 — Today we have a morning city sightseeing tour of Cologne which includes the Roman ruins, the Town Hall, the Guerzenich — a medieval meeting hall, the ultramodern Opera House, the priceless Dionysus Mosaic, and a famous visit to the famous gothic cathedral.

RHINE CRUISE

DAY 4 — Transfer to the pier and board a gleaming white Rhine Steamer. Cruise on the most scenic and legendary part of the Rhine; past famous vineyards, quaint wine towns, towering castles and the famed Loreley Rock. Disembark in St. Goarshausen. A motor coach will drive you to your hotel in Luxembourg via Trier.

LUXEMBOURG

DAY 5 — Morning city sightseeing of Luxembourg will include the Citadel, the Promenade De La Corniche and if open, parts of the 16 mile tunnels and casements connecting the 53 forts. Leave Luxembourg and drive to Bastogne where the big battle took place after Christmas, 1944. Continue to Brussels and your hotel.

BRUSSELS

DAY 6 — Brussels, capital of Belgium and headquarters of the European Common Market, its modern buildings punctuate the skyline, smart shops and elegant restaurants line the streets. Tour includes the Grand Place, the Clock Tower on the Palais de la Dynastie; and the notorious Mannekin Pis Fountain. Your route today will show you the famed attractions that have made this part of Europe so magnificent. Your accommodations await you as you arrive in Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM

DAY 7 — Amsterdam: Morning city sightseeing tour of Amsterdam, will include the Rembrandt House, where the great artist lived; Queen's Palace, The Stock Exchange and the famous Rijksmuseum, with its outstanding collection of Dutch and Flemish art. En route you will have ample opportunity to glimpse Amsterdam's unique canals, and street life.

LONDON

DAY 8 — London: upon arrival you will be met and transferred to your hotel. Balance of the day free to acquaint yourself with the city.

DAY 9 — Sightseeing tour of the city includes the West End of London, a view of Oxford Street, Piccadilly Circus, St James' Palace, Buckinham Palace and the changing of the Guard, a visit to Westminister Abbey, Knightsbridge, Kensington, the Houses of Parliament and Regent Street. Afternoon set aside for shopping. Evening free.

DAY 10 — Transfer to air port in time for departure to Athens.

ATHENS

DAY 11 — Athens: sightseeing tour of Athens includes the Acropolis, site of the Parthenon, Erectheum and Propylaea ruins; the Agora, recently excavated market place; a reconstruction of the Olympic Stadium; the Temple of Zeus; and the Archaeological Museum.

DAY 12 — Cruise: Morning transfer from the hotel to Piraeus Pier in time to board your cruise ship the MS Atlantis.

GREEK ISLES CRUISE

SPRING FLING CRUISE SCHEDULE: on the MS "ATLANTIS"

DAYS 13/14/15 — During your four day cruise you will visit the following ports: Mykonos-Ephesus-Patmos-Rhodes-Heraklion and Santorini.

MYKONOS:
Called the "Capri of the Aegean", this island has more than 350 small chapels built within its hilly, rocky 29 square miles. Greek music and handcrafts abound in this world-known international resort. Visit its beautiful beaches, see its churches, windmills, and village of houses along narrow, winding paths. A "Must" isle to visit.

EPHESUS:
Site of the great Temple of Artemis (Diana) one of the 7 Wonders of the World. See the mile-long Marmorean and the Arcadian Way, paved in marble. Visit the theater, the agora, and the baths. Also, the Cathedral of St. John, Temple of Serapis, and many new excavations.

PATMOS:
An island of extraordinary natural beauty, rich in its Christian tradition and Biblical history, Patmos has a hilltop monastery overlooking a landscape of superb scenery. It was here that St. John the Evangelist wrote the mighty Apocalypse while in exile.

RHODES:
Where the huge Colossus of Rhodes, one of the 7 Wonders of the World, once stood astride the harbor entrance. Just 10 miles from the Asia Minor coast. Rhodes has all nature's most lavish blessings in its scenic splendor.

HERAKLION:
The capital of Crete, largest of the Greek Isles, Heraklion is Crete's largest seaport. A short tour takes you through unspoiled Old World countryside to Knossos, capital of the 4000 year-old Minoan civilization, oldest in all Europe.

SANTORINI:
An island of exquisite natural beauty, Santorini is the crescent-shaped rim of an ancient volcano. Legendary site of Atlantis, lost kingdom beneath the sea. Ride muleback up a zigzag path carved out of cliff rock 1200 fee above the ocean.

DAY 16 — Returning to Athens early in the morning from the cruise. This day has been set aside for last minute shopping, recuperating or sightseeing on your own.

DAY 17 — Filled with fond memories we depart in the morning for the airport to board your jet flight back to the U.S.A.

Stamp Proposed To 'Honor' W.C. Fields

Film comic W. C. Fields will be immortalized on a United States postage stamp next year if a group of dedicated fans has its way. The proposed stamp design was unveiled January 29 at Movieland Wax Museum in Buena Park, California, with the plea that the Postal Service honor the request and issue a commenorative stamp by January 29, 1980—the 100th anniversary of the late comedian's birth in Philadelphia.

The stamp pictures Fields in his classic role as cardsharp Cuthbert J. Twillie in the 1940 film, "My Little Chickadee". The fans have suggested that the gum on their hero's stamp be martini-flavored and the stamp itself be printed in olive-green ink in memory of his reputed favorite libation. The W. C. Fields fan club, known as "The Bank Dicks," feels that people wouldn't mind paying 15 cents for a stamp if they were to get a little buzz out of licking it!

Honored guests at the Movieland Wax Museum unveiling of the design included Mrs. Ruth Fields, widow of the actor's only child, W. C. Fields Jr., and three of her sons, Allen Fields, Everett F. Fields, and Ronald Fields. Ronald is the author of the best-selling biography, "W. C. Fields By Himself" and is soon to release his first Broadway play.

Hector Godinez, district manager of the United States Postal Service in Southern California, was present and, although he couldn't offically endorse the stamp, he saw the enthusiasm behind the quest for official Washington sanction of the stamp.

Movieland Wax Museum was chosen, according to fan club president Vick Knight, "Because our shrine is located here. The Fields wax figure at Movieland is just the best there is. The costume he is wearing and the set are both authentic. It's from his 1936 film, "Poppy", and his nose is exactly the right shade of red!"

The stamp was created by Bill Taylor Design of Santa Ana, California, and illustrated by Michael Hobson. It bears a motto which was also the title of the 1939 Fields film, "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man."

A petition endorsing the proposed stamp is on display at Movieland Wax Museum for signatures by other fans. It will be relayed to the proper authorities later this year.

'VANITIES' BIRTHDAY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jack Heifner's comedy "Vanities" celebrates its third birthday at the off-Broadway Westside Theater on March 22. The play has had dozens of other productions round the country and overseas.

ART TALK

Children's Art

By LA WANDA MURFEE

"Tell me about your drawing," the instructor said to the usually quiet, withdrawn child.

His eyes lit up as he pointed to the brightly crayoned paper, now eager to talk. "Well, you know how fast a race horse can run? I thought a fire engine goes faster than anything, so I painted the horse red like a fire engine, and added another leg so he could run still faster."

After hearing a story about butterflies in the woods, one young girl covered a paper with bright blues and greens, applying the crayons heavily until they appreared waxy. Over this she painted Indian ink. With several blunt and sharp instruments she drew through the ink into the colors, releasing shaped of her ideas of migrating butterflies. I wanted to keep the charming drawing, but so did her proud mother, who never dreamed her child could 'paint.' Another child saw the same subject in an opposite manner. She exaggerated the drawings of various animals in many reds, making each appear like prehistoric swamp beasts, each with butterflies swarming around their heads. Working quickly, the hyper-active child painted two pictures while the others carefully finished one. The ultimate result was the same; each child released and sought approval of a fantasy, a fairy tale in living color.

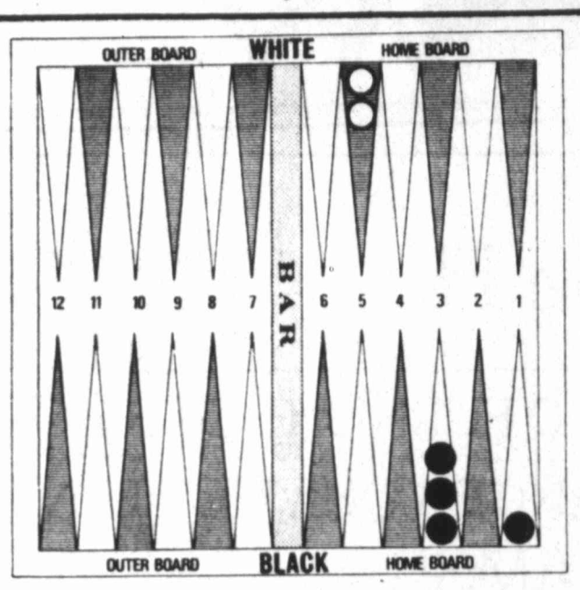
A small boy took a piece of charcoal, laid it on its side and began to draw sensitive, whispy shapes that could have been birds and trees. Although he had never seen Oriental paintings, he exhibited a very definite feeling of sumi drawing. I wanted to keep each little treasure he quickly finished. His parents could not see anything in the 'scribblings.'

Jackie Onassis has an outstanding collection of children's art from the Orient and Africa. When aligned with American childrens' paintings, there is unanimity of interpretation of nature at a given age, regardless of cultural exposure, until the age of ten. The youngest children drew lollipop trees, people with large heads while the small torso supports spindly limbs. Trees and flowers grow out of the bottom of the paper; the sun is forever yellow or orange, placed in one corner.

In their vivid imagination children can be startlingly truthful about what they see around them. Through the art of drawing, painting or sculpting, they relate some of the sights they see or imagine. Art for children is not simply putting their ideas onto a graphic form, but it is a training for thinking, making decisions, a forum for expanding thoughts, and enjoying an experience. It is observance of life, that gift of seeing what is visually apparent.

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif



Black, who owns the doubling cube at 2, to roll. Should he redouble?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

The American Backgammon Championships, recently held in Las Vegas, attracted the largest entry in the history of the game, with almost 750 players competing in an Open and an Amateur event for large prizes. The winner of the Open was a young New Yorker, Jason Lester. This position cropped up in one of the early rounds.

Black is certainly a favorite to win the game. If he does not roll a 2, he will be off in two rolls. White needs 6-5, 6-6, 5-5, 4-4 or 3-3 to get off in one roll, and there are quite a few combinations where he will need two rolls to clear both his men from his 5-point. Therefore, it would seem that Black should redouble now.

But backgammon is a perverse game. Strangely enough, Black is a strong favorite only if he does not give up ownership of the cube by redoubling! Let's look to see why this is so.

White is not a 3-to-1 underdog, so if Black redoubles, White will accept. Let us suppose that at this turn Black rolls a combination that includes a 2, so allowing himself to bear off only one man and leaving himself with three men still to clear. Now White will redouble, increasing the stake in the game to 8, and Black cannot accept — he must concede the game and lose 4 points!

If Black does not redouble and retains possession on the cube, he will give himself at least one extra roll, perhaps two. Even should he roll a 2, his game is not yet lost. White cannot double again, and can only continue rolling one of the six combinations that allow him to bear off both men. Black gets another turn.

Housing Prices Up 22 Percent For New Homes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the fourteenth in a series of periodic articles entitled "The Business Indicator," written by Dr. John T. Sennetti of the College of Business Administration at Texas Tech University. These articles discuss statistics used in business forecasting and will be published on the second Sunday of every month. Dr. Sennetti also is a columnist for Texas Business Magazine.)

By DR. JOHN T. SENNETTI
Texas Tech University

YOU AND I MAY be feeding on the lotus blossom of inflation. According to the Federal Home Loan Board, the average price of a new home went from $58,000 to $70,900 from January of 1978 to January of 1979. That is a 22 percent increase and no organized band of home buyers (not to mention you and I) have marched on Washington.

Homer's Illiad tells us that Ulysseus' men, upon eating the fruit of the lotus flower, were hence drugged and later forgot about returning to their original mission.

DR. JOHN T. SENNETTI

A return to the "high" rate of 6 percent inflation of pre-1973 seems unlikely and, despite the rhetoric, we, the people may have forgotten our mission. Inflation has become too comfortable.

Variable (and graduated) mortgage rates are currently adding to this comfort. The pay-less-now-more-later concept works like this. A home buyer with a $50,000 mortgage at 9.5 percent for 30 years would make monthly payments of $420 (ignoring taxes, insurance) under a standard mortgage. But with a graduated system the initial payments are lowered to $318 a month for the first year. Then gradually increased. By the fifth year the mortgagee pays $457 a month for the next 25 years.

VARIABLE RATES WOULD vary payments from perhaps the $457 to the $318 a month depending on current interest rates. The Achilles heel of this latter plan is the understanding that interest rates actually would decrease. No evidence exists to support a long term significant drop in rates.

Even in spite of the highest rates ever and even without the comfort of graduated mortgage rates, the number of houses sold in Lubbock in 1978 almost equalled that of 1977, a record year. Mr. Brownee Brownlee, Executive Director of the Lubbock Board of Realtors mentioned at an Economics Council meeting recently that "multiple listing sales and dollars is expected to exceed that of 1977," in spite of the forty-five percent decrease, in 1978, of new houses built.

In 1978, Lubbock home buyers didn't find current rates (plus points) too uncomfortable not to buy.

So has inflation become to comfortable? The famous Phillips curve of British economists, were discussed by Professor John Tukey at an annual meeting of the American Statistical Association (the good guys). The curve agrues that 4 percent inflation is necessary for an optimum 4 percent inflation. Professor Tukey argued that the curve was simply out of phase. Perhaps at least 8 percent inflation is necessary for 8 percent umemployment, he said, since the cost of being unemployed no longer is as serious as during the depression of the 1930's. Social Security payments, welfare, and unemployment checks have provided some comforts, but in a small way, guaranteed inflation.

College of Business Administration
Texas Tech University

BEFORE 1978, EVENTS like the Korean War, the Vietnamese War, the quadrupling of oil prices by OPEC were catalysts to 9 percent inflation. In 1978 we suffered such inflation without such major events, and our return to 6 percent high inflation rate of 1973 has gotten lost in the cherry blossoms now blooming in Washington, D.C.

Politically, there are some reasons for you, the consumer, to get "fighting mad" as Peter Finch proclaimed in his Oscar-winning role of the movie Network. Every business firm large and small has a stake. Even the oil companies.

As Dr. Robert Koester, Associate Professor of Accounting here at Texas Tech points out, upon inspection of Exxon's liabilities and current costs, including the removal of oil wells in the North Sea, the eventual removal of the Alaskan pipeline would change Exxon's reported liabilities. This directly effects the current valuation of Exxon's stock and its present financing agreements.

The valuation of any international firm is at stake. FASB Statemet No. 8 — issued by the Financial Accounting Standards Board in October 1975 — raised the inflation issue for all international firms. Reporting on a quarterly basis, how should one firm adjust for the devaluation of the dollar? Under this rule it seems one firm sunk 60 million into a Canadian investment. Only now because of inflation, since the U.S. dollar has lost ground against the Canadian dollar, its liabilities exceed its original costs (assets). This firm has had to sell these assets, is indeed "fighting mad", and has asked other large international firms to also show some concern.

There is one group of small businessmen who have shown the world that inflation to them is not just a mile wide concern of two-inch depth. After investing their time, funds, and tractors, the farmers seem to have gained just a little more than personal satisfaction from their raid on the banks of the Potomac. But area farmers who participasted at least can say that the bloom around Lubbock will be from cotton, not lotus blossoms.

Levelland Bank Reports Growth

The ratification of a 40-percent increase in capital accounts and a progress report on a $250,000 building expansion highlighted the annual stockholder's meeting of the First National Bank of Levelland.

Total capital accounts exceeding $3,000,000 as of Dec. 31, 1978, was reported to the shareholders by W. K. Barnett, chairman of the board.

"As the only independent bank in Levelland, we are proud of our continued growth generated solely by local business," Barnett said. "Levelland's growth is reflected in our growth, and we are pleased that we continue to expand to take care of the needs of our local customers and neighbors."

This figure was reached by injection of new capital stock of $500,000, paid in by The Levelland Co., a locally-owned bank holding company which is the parent corporation of the bank.

Construction of the new mini-bank and automatic 24-hour teller and interior remodeling of the bank building was reported on schedule by President Charles R. Battin.

This project is being completed on the northeast corner of the block which the bank presently occupies. Off-street parking facilities, 24-hour lighted lobby with full deposit and withdrawal facilities will be available to the public in the near future.

The present bank lobby is being remodeled to include private offices for the loan officers, expansion of bookkeeping facilities, permanent transfer of the trust department to the first floor of the bank building, and movement of the note department to the north side of the building. This latter movement coordinates customer deposit and withdrawal facilities.

In other action, the following directors were re-elected: W. K. Barnett, Charles R. Battin, E. D. Barnes, M.D., W. L. Goble, M. D. Kennedy, Nick Lanotte, and R. B. Taylor.

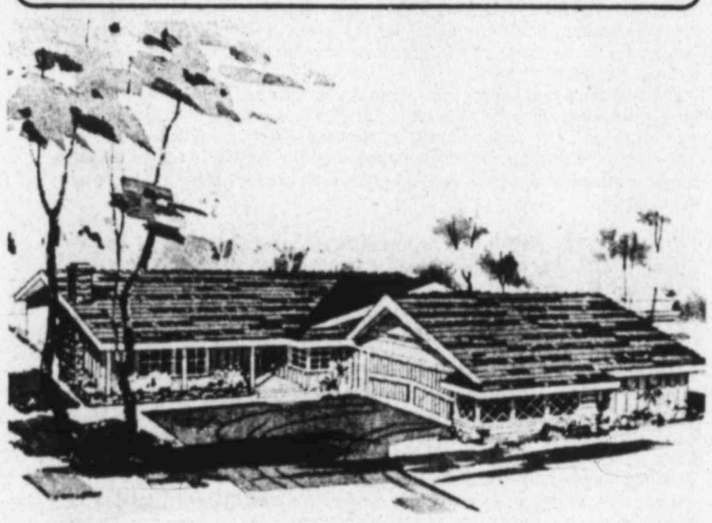
At the first board meeting, the board of directors declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 25 cents per share, making the 10th consecutive year of semi-annual dividend policy since the bank was purchased by The Levelland Co.

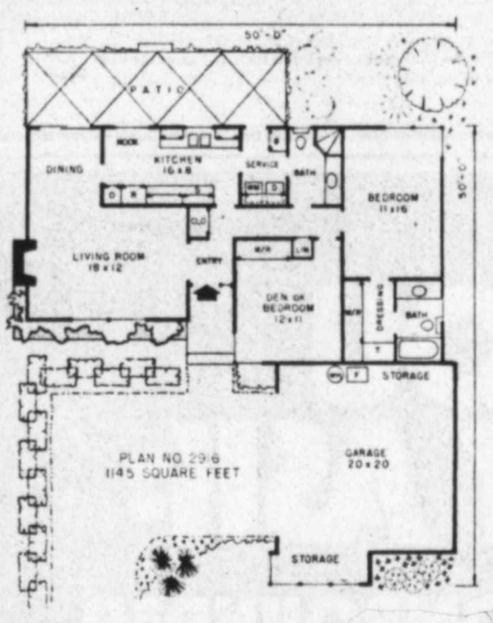
TOO LITTLE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The average American family owning life insurance last year had about $39,500 in protection, compared with $36,900 for the previous year. Despite the increase, the 1978 figure was still less than family economists recommend, says the American Council of Life Insurance. Most financial experts suggest life insurance equal to four or five years of disposable personal income.

TONY SHOW

NEW YORK (UPI) — The 1979 Tony Awards for excellence on Broadway will be telecast live Sunday, June 3, by CBS from the Shubert Theater, 9:30-11 p.m. EST. Shows must officially open on or before May 6 to be eligible for the Tonys.





Compact Home Design High In Livability Despite Size

By HIAWATHA ESTES

This compactly designed two bedroom home is moderate in size but high in livability. Its layout is a little deceptive because of the amount of living space it offers in so little footage. By eliminating a partition between the living and dining, both areas appear larger. Additional outdoor living space has been obtained by the use of sliding glass doors between the dining and patio. Since this patio is also convenient to the kitchen, it can double as an outdoor dining and family room.

A quality home reflects attention to detail. For instance, the fireplace has been located on an outside wall so as to occupy a minimum of interior space. A small hall provides an efficient center hall plan and excellent circulation. Traffic from either the front entry or the service prompt access to the center hall.

The plush master bedroom suite consists of a generous size bedroom, a dressing area and a master bath. The dressing area has both a wardrobe and dressing table. The bath has an enclosed tub with overhead shower. Both baths feature pullman lavatories.

There is an abundant amount of storage included in this design. Besides the wardrobes, a guest and linen closets open to the hall. A broom closet and wall storage above the laundry facilities are in the service. A large amount of both wall and counter storage is available in the kitchen.

The roof lines of this snug home hug the ground and compliment the exterior of the rustic, ranch exterior. The group of windows at the corner of the garage especially enhance the overall appearance of the design.

Complete working drawings for plan 2916 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until July 11, 1979. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $9.75 value — for only $7.75 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, California 91328.

NEW DOMINICA AIRPORT

ROSEAU, Dominica (UPI) — A new airport is under construction with British aid funds near Roseau, the capital of the newly independent Caribbean nation of Dominica, but it'll be able to handle only small aircraft. The 48-seater Avro jetprop planes of the regional airline LIAT, which provide the island's link with the outside world, will continue to land at Melville Hall airport, all the way across the island from the capital city and a hair-raising, two-hour mountain ride away from Roseau.

Holeman Named To Manager Post

Randall Caviness, general sales manager of Pioneer Lincoln-Mercury, has announced the appointment of Gene Holeman as used car sales manager.

The company has opened its used car facilities on the nine-acre tract at Utica and Loop 289, where the dealership has been located for the past three years.

Holeman joined Pioneer Lincoln-Mercury in December, 1978, and comes to Lubbock from Hurst, where he was connected with the used car industry. He is the former owner of an automobile dealership in San Angelo.

Holeman is a native of Lubbock and a graduate of Lubbock High School. He attended Texas Tech University, where he majored in business administration. He and his wife, the former Kathy Pharr, also a native of Lubbock, have two daughters. He is a member of Lubbock Lions

SHORT BREAK

HOW ABOUT ONE FULL HOUR OF RACHET JAWING RECORDED ON INTERSTATE 90, WESTERLY BOUND OUT OF THE 'WINDY' AT 5 PM IN A SLEET STORM?

Readers' CB Inquiries Answered

By MIKE WENDLAND

We've been getting a lot of reader questions over the past few months that should be answered. So this week we'll attack the mailbag.

Q. Explain the advantages of a power microphone in a mobile operation.—K. R., Akron, Ohio.

A. In most cases, I don't think there are any. Power, or amplified CB microphones, tend to pick up all background noise, as well as the words of the operator. In a mobile, that noise is intolerable.

CB Break

I've heard few power mikes in a mobile that don't sound distorted. Instead, I recommend standard mikes.

Q. Please outline the requirements for operating my CB in Canada.—M. W., Buffalo, N. Y.

A. You must have a Canadian permit. To get the application form, write the Regional Director, Department of Communications, at whichever of the five Canadian offices is closest to you:

1. Terminal Plaza Building, 7th Floor, P. O. Box 1290, Moncton, New Brunswick, ELC 8P9.
2. 9th Floor, 55 St. Clair Ave. E., Toronto, Ontario M4T 1M2.
3. 20th Floor, 2085 Union Street, Montreal, Quebec H3A 2C3.
4. 2300 One Lombard Place, Winnipeg, Manitoba, R3B 2Z8.
5. 325 Granville Street, Room 300, Vancouver, British Columbia V6C 1S5.

Q. Does the FCC have a system of giving out callsigns or does it issue them at random?—F. C., Allentown, Pa.

A. The FCC issues them by computer, allocating callsigns sequentially as the applications—about 100,000 every month—roll in.

Q. Will you give us some idea how to interpret gain figures used by those who manufacture antennas and speech processors?—N. B., Naples, Fla.

A. Doubling 4 watts to 8 watts output gives you 3 Db gain. Doubling again to 16 watts is 6 Db gain over 4 watts. In general, to move your S-meter one unit requires a signal increase of 6 Db in gain, or the same as doubling your output. Therefore, if a manufacturer claims his processor gives you 6 Db gain, he's saying that, with the processor on, the same improvement will occur as if you doubled your output power.

Q. What is a slider? I keep hearing people on sideband who say they are using one.—E. B., Santa Barbara, Calif.

A. A slider is an illegal add-on device to a CB which permits the operator to move his transmit frequency to unauthorized channels. By law, CB is limited to 40, crystal-controlled channels. Sliders let you operate above, below and between the legal channels.

(THE WENDLAND CB GLOVE COMPARTMENT BIBLE has been especially designed for the CBer in his car. Only $3.95 for this 180-page book. Order CB BIBLE, Andrews and McMeel, 6700 Squibb Road, Mission, Kan. 66202.)

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: My gripe is against the operator who continually calls and calls the same station time and time again. If he calls once and can't connect, he should clear out and give the channel to someone else. Repeated calls only tie up the channel.—B. L., Blackstone, Va.

Dear CB Static: Everyone is yelling and screaming about the skip interference. Well, just as it came, it will go away, leaving us in relative quiet for almost a decade. Skip comes in 11-year cycles, and this one should start diminishing in 1982. —H. F., Detroit.

Dear Mr. Wendland: I heartily endorse a no-code amateur (ham) license. Millions of CBers would be willing to study and learn electronics theory to get such a license. They just don't want to learn something as useless and out-of-date as Morse Code, as they presently must do to become a ham.—H. T., Albany, N. Y.

(Got a CB gripe? Write Mike Wendland, CB STATIC, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201.)

THE U.S. AND YOU

William Steif

THE REV. HAROLD DEILY, 61, a Presbyterian minister of Peculiar, Mo., has begun a new career. So have Shirley Cles, 53, a registered nurse from Casper, Wyo.; and Eleanor Hoag, 68, of Fort Collins, Colo., for more than 30 years a college English teacher.

They and 34 others are bound together in an effort to improve the lives of 1.2 million patients in the nation's 24,000 nursing homes. They are new recruits for Volunteers in Service To America, the federal VISTA program. They have just finished an intensive training course at Mariottsville, Md., and have returned to 11 states and the District of Columbia to mobilize grass-roots support for bettering life, or what remains of it, in nursing homes.

Elma Griesel, 37, a mild-mannered native of Yukon, Okla., is determined to do something about the situation. She is executive director of the National Citizens' Coalition for Nursing Home Reform, which has 40 local groups affiliated throughout the nation and is "in contact" with public health and worked in Oklahoma's nursing home licensing program for years. She says:

— 60 percent of nursing homes are supported by Medicaid.

— But two-fifths of the Medicaid-supported patients enter nursing homes paying their own way "and end up impoverished."

That, she says, "is a tremendous blow. They go in on their own initiative and all of a sudden become part of the welfare system."

THE COALITION, and its local affiliates, have found federal nursing home standards don't work, although the homes are supposed to maintain federal standards to be eligible for federally supported patients. The Health Education and Welfare Department virtually admitted as much when, last June, it proposed that nursing homes conduct "self-surveys" on how they're meeting federal standards.

State standards, and enforcement, vary wildly. Yet the $13 billion-a-year nursing home industry is the fastest-growing part of the economy's increasingly expensive health care sector. Nursing homes are profit-oriented: four out of five are run for profit while only one hospital in seven is. Much of the profit comes from tax dollars, and not just Medicaid. Medicaid and federal construction subsidies also have aided the industry.

What this means, says MISS Griesel, is that "unless a patient has money, he gets only room and board in many nursing homes. That's all. No therapy, no recreation, no attention, no real possibility of getting out, no say in how he's treated. Just insensitivity."

The coalition began to peck away when it was organized in 1975. But it's noW been given a big boost by a one-year, $241,000 "national grant" from VISTA, part of the ACTION agency headed by one-time anti-war activist Sam Brown. The new volunteers are not fuzzy-cheeked kids; they're mostly retired people, teachers, nurses, school principals, a lawyer, even two former nursing home administrators.

THEY LIVE IN THEIR own communities and are paid an average monthly stipend of $317, plus $75 a month banked for them until their year-long service ends. They are organizing local support for nursing home reform in a nation whose population, itself, is aging. And they're trying to bring hope to the isolated hopeless in the homes themselves. One of their first tasks is to create residents' councils in the home.

Miss Griesel stresses that not all nursing homes are badly run. "We're encouraging the volunteers to work with providers doing good jobs, and to pull in as allies the administrators of good nursing homes," she says.

But plenty of the homes are run on the cheap. Harold Deily, working near Kansas City, and his new friends in places like Jackson, Miss., Salem, Ore., New York and Nashville, Tenn., have their hands full.

If you want to help them, write Miss Griesel, National Citizens' Coalition for Nursing Home Reform, 2000 P St., NW, Washington, D.C. 20036, or phone her at 202-872-0655. And if you want to volunteer, write VISTA, Washington, D.C. 20525, or phone the agency's toll-free number, 800-424-8580, for details.

The Voice of Business

WASHINGTON — As a taxpayer, do you know what ballet, street theater, pottery, information about gay people, basketball, advocacy of communism and nude body sculpting workshops all have in common? Probably not, but you should. For each one, and many like them, have been legitimate tax-supported activities within the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, or CETA — the federal government's largest employment program.

Congres became so incensed with these activities and other abuses that it insisted CETA begin to devote a greater share of its budget to the training of hardcore unemployed for real jobs in the private sector. Unfortunatley, the President is now under pressure to keep CETA budget for so-called public service jobs at a very high level. I believe that would be a mistake. To understand, let me explain why CETA has failed so badly.

Rather than provide the poor with temporary work and training needed for eventual productive jobs, many local governments have used CETA money to pay for old jobs previously funded by local taxes. One city is so "hooked" that up to 30 percent of its employees are on the CETA payroll. By some estimates, CETA subsidizes four existing jobs for each new job it creates. So it is usually the educated with political influence, rather than the truly needy, who are getting most of the jobs.

With control of CETA funding so dependent on the whims of local politicians, the program now resembles an assortment of "goodies" regularly doled out as political influence, rather than truly needy, who are getting most of the jobs.

With control of CETA funding so dependent on the whims of local poltitians, the program now resembles an assortment of "goodies" regularly doled out as political patronage. Abuses are commonplace, adn many national publications—in particular Readers Digest in August, 1978 — have begun to expose the waste and fraud.

In Buffalo, millions of dollars were mismanaged because of sloppy auditing, payments to ineligible participants and illegal political activity. In New York, someone took a bite out of the Big Apple when $500,000 in "expenses" mysteriously disappeared from one summer youth program. In Washington, D.C., where big government is the home team, they've really learned how to play the game. The D.C. City Council amassed one of the largest staffs in the country, actually paying 56 of its 126 employees with CETA funds. Poor people were still hoping for work in Baltimore, while CETA jobs were found for the wife of a state supreme court judge, the daughter of a United States Court of Appeals judge, as well as the sons of a vice president of a large brewing company, a city public works superintendent, and a member of the Maryland House of Delegates. Had enough?

There's more, much more, but the key point is: CETA has been a cruel disappointment for the poor whose dreams of acquiring training skills, productive jobs and a better life are being frustrated; for the taxpayers whose money is being squandered, and for our economy where billions of dollars are being diverted from tax producing, growing-oriented jobs, to tax consuming aetivities which can only lead to higher inflation.

Congress was right when it recognized CETA must begin preparing people for the world of work, instead of paying them not to work. For that to happen, proposals like the Private Sector Initiative Program, (PSIP) to increase business involvement in CETA must be sharply upgraded. This program establishes local industry councils, composed of business and labor representatives, to coordinate the training and eventual employment of the hardcore unemployed. The councils should grant top priority to on-the-job training which results in higher rates of employment retention. CETA has almost totally neglected this approach.

The PSIP effort will be even more effective if it is properly coordinated with the work of coummity-based organizations, which are attuned to the needs of local areas. One such community group is OIC — Opportunities Industrialization Centers — which has combined the philosophy of self-help with acquired skills and positive work attitudes to fashion many successful training programs.

In the name of compassion, CETA's subsidized jobs program has demeaned individuals with hand out work. Businessmen and women know what real compassion is all about — helping people to help themselves. That's why I want to urge them to exercise leadership, get involved in the PSIP program, and turn CETA around. Clearly, business people are the only ones who can. And if they do, look what will have been gained. People now living without hope will have an opportunity to make it, to be somebody, to have character, dignity, and to be self-supporting and free. That's a goal worth working for.

BETTER LIVING THROUGH Improved Housing

By CHRISTINE F. SALMON
Oklahoma State University

IT IS PROJECTED that in the year 2020 there will be over 40 million persons over age 65 living in the United States. The projection has not been made as to how they will be housed. There are more than 22 million persons age 65 or older in this country today. At age 65 -75 -or 95 we are the same person that we were at five or 25 or 45 — We are the same person, only more so! This realization can give us some important clues as to the type of housing we as elderly might enjoy.

Aging is part of the developmental process of living that has brought us to whatever age we find ourselves to be. It is a process of change: today's aged are the children of yesterday and tomorrow's aged are the children of today and older persons need to be thought of as individuals rather than as a category.

Housing for the elderly must provide the best possible environment for individuals in their later years. It must provide a physical, social, safe and rewarding environment that extends the time during which older persons can develop and progress toward their best utilization of all capabilities. Such an environment extends the time during which the elderly can continue to live independently without conveying an association with the "ill or infirm". Appropriate housing for older persons helps stimulate interest in and zest for life.

DESIGNERS MUST consider the people who are to occupy the spaces they create. The comfort and well-being of older individuals are particularly dependent upon the functional and aesthetic qualities of the spaces they occupy. This is due partially to the effort aging has on one's senses.

Senses: Decline in the sense of sight frequently occurs with advancing years. Poor vision is often accompanied by deterioration of psychomotor functioning and uncertainty in adjusting to new environments. Inability to adapt from light to dark and dark to light is a concern as well as inability to see changes in floor or ground levels. Light requirements for older persons is virtually double the normal amount of light required because of failing vision.

Sound: Perception of sound decreases as age increases and alarms and signals need to be not only louder but also lower in pitch. Housing should be well insulated to prevent transmission of sound. Older people frequently talk loudly or need more volume from radio and television.

Smell: The sense of smell may also deteriorate with age making it more difficult for the elderly to detect gas fumes or smoke. Furnace, chimney and flues should be inspected regularly; automatic shut-offs and alarm systems should be installed. Throughout the house, odors should be pleasant; mustiness is depressing.

Touch: The sense of touch becomes less acute for the elderly. Steam or hot water pipes must be insulated to prevent burns and it is recommended that domestic hot water be set at 110°F (43°C). Changes in testure of materials are helpful as clues for changes in elevations such as steps or ramps as well as turns in corridors. In this way one's sense of touch can aid one's failing viosion in the housing environment.

Mobility: The aging may vary in mobility from a slight loss of agility to complete dependence on a wheelchair. Paths for wheelchairs must be simple and direct with space to turn a chair 180 degrees. Doors should be at least three feet wide. Floor surfaces should be smooth and scatter rugs eliminated. Carpeting makes it hard to maneuver wheelchairs but it cushions falls and provides sound proofing.

RAMPS SHOULD HAVE a pitch of one foot for each 12 feet, stairs should have adequate railings, steps should be devoid of nosing or projections and doors should not swing into passageways or corridors. Designers must also consider limitations of reach of the elderly. Electric outlets placed high above baseboards and light fixtures that permit easy replacement of light bulbs are important considerations.

Sofas and chairs with seat heights of approximately 20 inches provide easy access; kitchen counters 32 to 34 inches in height, shallow sinks, under-counter openings to accommodate a seated person in a wheelchair are all desirable considerations. Sturdy grab bars at tub shower and toilet are important design decisions.

In the year 2020 there will be many elderly who will have, hopefully, some choices as to how they will be housed. We will have poor housing for the elderly just as long as we permit it. Housing can only be improved by a caring society. The most important design decision to insure better housing for older persons is to decide to care.

Five City Toyota Salesmen Cited

The Toyota Sales Society has announced that 1,200 salesmen throughout the nation qualified for the society's awards in 1978, including five Lubbock residents.

Sixty of these certificates went to salesmen in the five-state area, including Texas, covered by Gulf States Toyota..

Gerry Landrum, general manager of Brunken Toyota Inc. in Lubbock has been notified that five of the firm's salesmen have qualified for the prestigious award.

In order to qualify for the Toyota sales society, a salesman must sell over 175 cars annually, and attend two sales seminars within the year. Cliff Cole has qualified for the honor for the past five years. Other 1978 recipients are Othman Ghneim, Jerry Etter, John Carner and Robert Strong. They will be honored at a dinner in Houston this month.

The dealership has been in operation for eight years and has experienced tremendous growth. With the efforts of the sales staff, Brunken Toyota Inc. has become the largest import dealer in West Texas.

Three Added To Market Media Staff

MIKE OGLETREE

Market Media Advertising has announced the addition of three personnel members in order to continue the regional growth of the agency. The company is presently serving accounts in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Mike Ogletree, a 1972 graduate of Texas Tech University, holds a B.B.A. degree in marketing. From 1973 to 1977 he served as production manager for KMCC Television in Lubbock. For the past two years, Ogletree represented a national carpet manufacturer in the Southwest. He will serve as an account executive with the agency and specialize in television production as well as marketing and account services.

Steve Andrews, a long-time Lubbock commercial and illustrative artist, will fill the position of creative director for the agency. Andrews holds numerous Addy awards in local LAF competition and the International Meade award for graphic design. In addition to being on the board of directors of two Lubbock civic organizations, he also serves on the Advisory Committee of South Plains College in Levelland.

Johnny Aleman has been promoted to account services from assistant layout manager of the agency where he has served for the past year. Previous to his present employment, Aleman was in charge of advertising for Gibson Discount Centers in Lubbock.

According to Robert Tong, director of Market Media, the reason for the rapid growth of the agency is the region's demand for full service marketing and promotional efforts.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

1980--Test Is Yet To Come

OUR SYSTEM is more vulnerable in this decade than it has ever been. One of the principal challenges arises out of the fact that we have now had more than three decades of rising inflation.

The search for solutions can no longer be postponed. Inflation cannot long be tolerated in a society predicated upon private investment and individual incentive.

But the treatment is politically perilous, too. We have several problems whose solutions must preempt the use of such new wealth as we may generate in the 1980s.

FOR EXAMPLE, we must find the means to pay back for the erosion of our capital base—pay back for what we did not do for it during the steadily rising inflation of the late 1960s and early '70s.

Second, we have got to pay back for the environmental degradation which we permitted over several prior decades.

Third, there are the problems of energy availability. For several decades, governments of both parties have priced energy below what it should have been, causing us to use it as we shouldn't have.

The price had to go up.

It is going to have to go up even further if hard-to-find sources are to become economically usable. It is going to have to go up further still in order for the market to ration its use in the most economic way.

"WE ARE NOW dependent upon the rest of the world, almost for the first time, for a major portion of our resources and our energy," writes Heath Larry, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"It has upset our trade balances and added very strongly to inflationary pressures," Larry asserts in the current issue of Enterprise, NAM's monthly journal.

We in the U.S., he explains, must move forward if we're going to enable our society to continue to be one of growth. Growth is important. Yet we're going to have real trouble getting what we need of it, because of our need to "pay back."

THAT PAYBACK is going to preempt most of whatever wealth can be generated by whatever rate of productivity we can develop in the decade ahead.

What's that going to mean? For a period of time, it's going to mean, unavoidably, slower growth.

We have come to expect an increase in real earnings, both for people and for capital, every year. Can a free enterprise system survive without it?

"I think we can," says Larry, "but it's going to take more dedication on the part of business than we've seen for many years.

Lately it has become unfashionable even for many liberal academics to decry the capitalistic system in favor of socialism. They've had to give up their dreams because, after four decades of preaching the socialist gospel, they've found no successful models.

But since imperfections in others must be complained about by the liberal elite, as long as our system permits criticism, they have become less inclined to attack the system head-on than to attack it from the flank.

By "our system", we mean something very simple. That is the private ownership of the means of production, open markets and the freedoms to criticize government, to print, to teach, to believe.

All of these characteristics are of one cloth.

AND BY FLANKING attack, we mean the assault no longer is head-on, because the critics know everyone loves his freedoms. Yet because of those very freedoms, the system is vulnerable because its leaders are people who can make mistakes. Consequently, they can be attacked for those mistakes.

And justification can be found to turn to government in order to eradicate problems and, in their view, in order to permanently correct the failings of all mere mortals. The attack occurs, no doubt, out of righteous belief in the worth of what they're doing for society.

But each time they achieve success, they're just like the Lilliputians putting strings across Gulliver's body. They disable the system just a little bit more until it is no longer able to do what it ought to do.

Then it can real-l-ly be criticized.

MANY ARE familiar with a document issued in 1974 by the United Nations—its recommendation for a New International Economic Order.

It was promoted by a Group of 77, predominately socialist countries. They seem convinced that the rest of the world owes them whatever it has, and they owe nothing in return. This really puts competition between the socialist and capitalist systems into focus.

Russia never has relented in its missionary-like zeal to prove its system superior and to overcome all other competing systems. For some years we could afford to take this somewhat casually, embracing a live-and-let-live attitude.

But can we afford to any longer? We don't think so.

Unless we believe firmly in our own system and can persuade others—by example—that it is better than any others, we're going to fall by the wayside. We're going to become an economic island completely isolated from the rest of the world. Culturally, we're going to perish. For nothing.

ART BUCHWALD:

Khomeini Hands Down Offer Hard To Refuse

WASHINGTON—With the change of government in Iran there are many companies in the United States which are having a very difficult time collecting on their bills for goods and services provided the Middle East country when the shah was in power.

Their requests for payment from the Ayatollah Khomeini's provisional government have gone unanswered, so several companies have turned the matter over to American collection agencies who are ruthless in collecting unpaid bills.

One company, the Rugged Aviation Corp., hired the Chicago-based Threatening Collection Agency to see if it could get the Ayatollah to come up with the $956 million and 35 cents that Rugged claimed Iran owed it for 50 of its latest jet fighter planes.

THE FIRST thing Threatening did was send the Ayatollah a strong letter which went as follows:

"Dear Sir,

"The Rugged Aviation Co. has turned over your delinquent account to us for payment. According to their files you owe them $956 million and 35 cents, plus an 18 percent penalty for late payment.

"We're sure this has been an oversight. We will expect your check within 10 days or will take further action which, we hasten to mention, will cause great embarrassment to you and your family."

A few days later Threatening received a postcard with the Ayatollah's picture on it and the words, "Allah be with me. I'm not paying one rial for anything that the shah ordered."

THREATENING FOLLOWED up with its second letter.

"Dear Ayatollah,

"Your cavalier attitude toward this obligation leaves us no choice but to inform you that unless you make partial payment on your debt to Rugged Aviation (we would consider $500 million a show of good faith), we will report you to the Retail Credit Association, where you will be listed as a bad credit risk.

"This means that your American Express, Visa, Master Charge and Diner's Club cards will be considered invalid and will not be accepted by any restaurant in the Free World.

"We will also notify Sears Roebuck, Radio Shack and Bloomingdale's that you are a four-flusher and should not be permitted to buy anything on installment unless you first settle your outstanding debt for the fighter planes."

THE AYATOLLAH sent another postcard which read:

"May you suck sand in your mouth for the rest of your life."

Threatening sent its third letter.

"It is obvious you are not familiar with American collection agencies in this country so let us inform you that we will stop at nothing to collect the money you owe our client.

"Suppose we got a court order which gave us permission to garnishee your pay to the tune of $25 a week until the $956 million and 35 cents debt is paid in full.

"WE ALSO have the power to repossess your car, and will do it in broad daylight in front of all your neighbors. This is your last warning, Mr. Khomeini."

The Ayatollah did not even bother to reply to this letter, so Threatening sent over two of its toughest collectors with baseball bats.

A week later the president of Threatening in Chicago received this cable:

"Khomeini says if we show up once more at the palace he will cut off our right hands (Stop) Suggest we offer to settle with him for two cents on the dollar."

Writer Takes Issue With Sterner Court Sentences

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Your article on Sunday, Feb. 25, "Police Morale Boosted by Sterner Sentences," and your recent editorials calling for such sentences, prompt me to write. You are misinformed if you believe longer sentences will deter criminal activity, and you are indulging in wishful thinking if you think longer sentences will even keep particular offenders incarcerated longer.

John Montford was a director of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association at the time he ran for District Attorney. He knows, as does any defense attorney, that swift and certain punishment, and not the length of the sentence, is the best deterrent. His appeal for longer sentences, then, is nothing more than an appeal to the prejudices and misconceptions of the voters (and editorial writers).

Texas, along with Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, the Carolinas and Louisiana, have the highest per capita prison populations of any of the states. If incarceration were a deterrent, then we should have the lowest crime rates. We have the highest. We also have the weakest gun control laws, and the most handgun violence. Indeed, according to FBI statistics, the homicide rate is higher in Lubbock than in Houston, and it is higher in Houston than in New York City.

Our prisons are horribly overcrowded, mostly with the racial minorities sent there by white majorities on our juries, I might add. This overcrowding requires officials to parole prisoners just to make room for new arrivals.

If we want to cut down on criminal activity, there are a lot of changes that must be made, not the least of which is giving kids a chance before they become criminals.

Print this prediction if you dare: Juries will give longer sentences in Lubbock County, but the criminal activity here will not decrease. I wish I might be wrong, but I won't be.

Ace Doesn't Give A Hoot For Switch Engine's Toot

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I was rudely poked in the rib cage at approximately 2 a.m. the other day when this fella in the Santa Fe railroad yards who runs the switch engine down there suddenly brought his vehicle to a clanging, screeching stop and proceeded to blow his air horn a half-dozen times or so in rapid succession.

He appeared to be unmindful of the rights of the citizens in the neighborhood snuggly asleep in their beds after a hard day's work in the salt mines.

After duly picking my carcass up off the floor—where I had landed after this senseless outburst of tomfoolery—I checked my body for fractures. Then, lo, this fella cut loose again on the horn with such aplomb it loosened the filling in my teeth and I had to laugh in spite of my flustration, concluding that, well, goodness, chum, the fella is merely having some fun with his little red wagon.

To Vote Or Not To Vote?, That Is Question To A-J

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I was surprised to find your newspaper editorially critical of a recent position of the Lubbock County Bar Association.

That criticism was directed toward the Bar's insistence that any Municipal Court of Record be presided over by Judges elected by the people rather than appointed by the City Council. You took the position that the people should vote on whether or not they want to vote on these judges.

A prior editorial of Dec. 15, 1977 had boldly stated: "Voters Should Pick Judges". The editorial recited your happiness with the election of trial judges, as opposed to their appointment. It contained some very good reasons for that position and concluded:

"At least if the voters make a bad choice now and then, they can't blame anyone but themselves and they can correct it themselves next election."

In your more recent pronouncement, however, you make no attempt to explain your apparent redirection, if not reversal, of position.

You were, of course, consistent in both cases of grasping the opportunity to be critical of lawyers, in the latter case for agreeing with your former position.

Should the Bar Association later choose to agree with you that the people should vote on whether or not to vote on judges, I suppose the next logical step on your part would be to insist that the people should vote on whether or not they want to vote on whether or not they want to vote on judges.

Focus On Domestic Violence Amplifies Community Problem

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I would be remiss if I didn't express appreciation for the great publicity which all the Lubbock media—newspaper, television and radio—gave to the Family Violence Conference.

You can all take credit for the fact that the attendance, approximately 300, exceeded our fondest hopes.

We have every intention of capitalizing on this momentum, which you have done so much to create, in order to make a genuine impact on a serious community problem.

Montford Deserves Support From Electorate, 'Almighty'

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I hope the article in The A-J March 2 involving the "contract" on District Attorney Montford's life will sufficiently arouse the law-abiding public to existing conditions in crime and encourage them to take steps to stop the fantastic growth of crime in Texas.

Let us, the law-abiding citizens of Texas, get behind DA's and judges of Mr. Montford's determination and make it darn unhealthy and unprofitable for the criminal element to use such tactics.

Also let all prosecutors and judges know that if they do not stand up against the criminal element, their terms on the pocketbooks of the taxpayers will be very short-lived. They might remember that out of office they are of no value to the criminals.

We desperately need some changes in the Texas Criminal Code. First, we need to take the handcuffs off our officers. Second, we need changes in the juvenile code. Third, we need to change our jury system to majority rule. Do you realize how hard it would be to pick 12 people none of which could be threatened or bribed by the criminal element?

My congratulations to The A-J on its fight against crime. Also my congratulations to DA Montford. May the Almighty give him and his family the courage and determination to finish what he has started.

Fellow law-abiding citizens: how about 100 letters in The A-J to let Mr. Montford and the criminal element know how we feel?

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Turkey In Stall

TURKISH PREMIER Bulent Ecevit, fearing the chaos in bordering Iran, has declared martial law in 13 provinces, including Istanbul and Ankara, the capital. Turkey anchors NATO's southern flank and, at the same time, borders on the Soviet Union.

President Carter sees looming the specter of another NATO power trembling on the abyss.

Today our great U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean cannot go to Turkey—a strategic imperative for us—without provoking street riots, protest bombings and contrived strikes.

With the exceptions of Israel, Lebanon and Egypt, the entire southern rim of the Mediterranean is hostile to the U.S. Thanks to the Soviet fleet, if the truth be known we are bottled up in the Mediterranean.

MEANWHILE, ECEVIT faces grave internal problems. More than 42 million people live in Turkey, twice the size of California. Brutal assassinations, kidnappings, etc., plague the country.

Rival Leninist and Maoist factions there are increasingly violent. An estimated 15 percent of the student body and faculty at Turkish universities are Marxists.

Reflecting an energy shortage and the lack of foreign exchange to buy oil, public services are declining.

Last December Mara Province saw an outbreak of religious warfare between rival Islamic sects. It took 102 lives. Although the Turks are Moslems, it is a secular state.

THE U.S. AND both Iran and adjoining Pakistan are partners in the Central Treaty Organization (CTO), intended to stabilize the strategic region.

The National Assembly in Ankara has 450 seats. The National Salvation Party is the Islamic revolutionary movement. But at the 1977 elections it achieved only 8.5 percent of the national vote, falling from 48 to 24 seats in Turkey's parliament.

But President Carter is plagued by NATO's potential disaster in Turkey. He has always viewed the ancient country in strategic military terms, but with minor presidential attention to Turkey's economic needs.

Already, financially troubled Turkey has received more than $1 billion in new loans from foreign governments and private banks. These require Turkey to adopt more astringent economic policies. Her foreign debt totals more than $12 billion.

ALSO, PREMIER Ecevit is caught with a dangerous drift towards neutralist and away from NATO. He rejects abandoning NATO, saying that Turkey will remain in NATO.

But, clearly, Turkey does not have either the money or skills to help itself—without the U.S.

Accordingly, Ecevit has moved toward better relations with the Soviet Union and has sought treaties with the Arab and non-aligned states.

Turkey traces much of the bitterness to the U.S. In 1974, with Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, we placed the arms embargo.

Ankara retaliated by hoisting the Turkish Star and Crescent flag over our U.S. bases. Also, the American flag came down over our installations in Turkish-held Cyprus.

OUR STATE Department has tried its best to tell President Carter that Turkey may well be in the condition of Italy. But the President turns a deaf ear to this insistence.

Nevertheless, the question remains as to how much chaos Turkey can stand and still remain a developing democratic society.

Turkey is one of the few nations that can feed itself. It has the resources to be developed by the U.S., other countries, and even Japan.

Turkey has a hard-working people, gruff but exceedingly able. And President Carter should know more about their anxiety not only to succeed, but to be an integral part of NATO.

...Pass It On

THE GIRL born into a poor family is more likely to get married than is the girl born into a rich family, surprisingly. The statistics prove it. They show that more rich than poor women remain single. Not just remain single longer. But for their entire lives.

Our Love and War man is analyzing the experts' explanation. They say men of means willingly "marry down," meaning they go to the altar with romantic partners from more modest backgrounds. But women of means rarely do that. If those high-society ladies can't find matrimonial mates of suitable affluence, they tend to give up, refusing to compromise.

Q. "What's the most common tattoo?"

A. Can only come up with most common tattoo among servicemen and women. With the men, it's the word "Mom" on the upper forearm. With the women, it's a red rose on the bottom of the big toe.

That word "delirium" may mean a confused mental state now, but it started out in old Rome to describe a man who couldn't plow a straight furrow.

High School Swimmers Compete Without Home

Collette Matticks, 16, a Monterey junior, comes up for air during a butterfly drill

"Aaaalll right!" booms their coach's voice, echoing through the otherwise empty building. "Free sprint! On 60! GO!"

And they respond. Off in a collective splash, to the voice and the piercing whistle commanding each new wave of bodies to "GET MOVING!!"

Before the workout ends, they will have swum two and a half miles. All of this comes, too, before a normal day of school and activities for the swimmers, training for Monterey and Coronado High Schools' swim teams.

Though all Lubbock District high school students are eligible for swim competition, only Monterey and Coronado participate.

There are 32 of them in all. Monterey boasts a girl's team of 11 and a boy's team of 10. Coronado swimmers number seven on the boy's team and four on the girl's.

Though they train together, sometimes five days a week from 7 to 9 a.m., the teams compete against each other in meets around the district and the state.

And the irony of it all is, they don't even have a pool they can call their own.

SINCE NONE OF Lubbock's high schools includes a natatorium in its physical education facilities, swimmers use the YWCA pool at 36th and Flint Ave.

Coach Craig Wilkinson thinks the lack of a pool hurts swimming participation. "Heck, lots of people don't even know these schools have teams," he said." Swimming and water safety could be integrated with the physical education programs if there were a pool," Wilkinson continued. "It would help the schools tremendously."

He cited the program instituted at Monahans High in Monahans. "They have their own pool so they can work out twice a day. They also have a weight lifting program."

In short, he said, "they've got what everyone wants."

With indoor swimming pools at a premium in Lubbock, the school district must rent the YWCA's facility, the only two hours it's available each day.

This does put the teams at a disadvantage, according to Wilkinson, since the competition generally gets to work out half again as long every day — at least.

WILKINSON CALLED the YWCA pool an "excellent facility. It's adequate for our needs right now," he said, adding "they help us out a lot with timing meets and storage space."

In spite of the swimming pool shortage, the coach says team morale is high. "We're having a good year all the way around."

Regional competition was held March 2 and 3 in Midland. Monterey's girls' team finished highest of the four representing Lubbock, at 10th in 28; the Coronado boys' team was right behind them at 11th and Monterey's boys finished 12th in 28. The Coronado girls' team did not place in the top 12.

Wilkinson was enthusiastic about the results of the regional meet, though no Lubbock swimmer qualified for the state meet to be held in Austin later this spring.

The results of the Midland meet were "excellent," he said. "It was a very very hard meet and the kids were prepared. We placed right about where we expected to, though of course we'd hoped to place higher," he added.

Second Bach Month Concert Features Sue Arnold, Shin

The Chancel Choir of Forrest Heights United Methodist Church with soloists Sue Arnold and Kyung Wook Shin is presenting the second of the church's Lenten Bach Month Concerts at 7 p.m. today.

Two solo cantatas of J.S. Bach (1685-1750) will be performed.

Shin, a baritone, is singing Cantata No. 82, "Ich Habe Genug (I Have Enough)" and Miss Arnold and the chancel choir are singing Cantata No. 169, "Gott Soll Allein Mein Herze Haben (God's Self Alone My Heart Possesseth)."

The program is free and open to the public in the church sanctuary, located at 33rd Street and Elgin Avenue.

Johann Sebastian Bach was a Lutheran organist choirmaster at St. Thomas Church in Leipzig, Germany (1723-1750), where a cantata was expected at the principal service every Sunday and feast day in the church year. Bach composed five sets of cantatas based on the scriptures for each Sunday. Now only 190 cantatas are extant.

Cantata No. 82 was composed for bass soloist and an orchestra of strings, one oboe and organ (or harpischord). The orchestration reflects the instruments that were available to Bach at that time. The bass soloist sings arias and recitatives.

An aria is a solo with a few lines of text embellished to make a long composition. There is much repetition of individual lines of the text with long melismas (many notes per syllable of text). A recitative is a solo with many lines of text rather quickly sung so the composition will not be inordinately long.

The arais and recitatives in Cantata No. 82 are being sung by Shin, a Korean bass who has lived in Lubbock the past six years. He has sung in cantatas, opera, recitals and bass solos with symphony orchestras in the United States and the Orient. He also conducts orchestras and choirs.

Shin recently returned from Korea where he conducted the Seoul National Orchestra and Opera company. He recently sang with the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra and is the musical director for the operas and musical comedies produced by the Department of Music at Texas Tech University. He is on the voice faculty of Texas Tech and directs the choir at Covenant Presbyterian Church.

Cantata No. 169 was composed for alto soloists, strings, three oboes, organ and choir. The alto soloist, Miss Arnold, is an assistant professor of voice at Texas Tech.

She has a bachelor of arts degree from Campbell College, a master of music degree from the University of Illinois, and has done post-graduate work toward a doctorate of musical arts degree at the University of Illinois.

She was named one of the "Outstanding Young Women of America" in 1972. Miss Arnold has soloed with Robert Shaw at the Blossom Festival and done summer stock at The Last Colony Outdoor Drama in North Carolina.

She is well-known as a recitalist and has performed in such oratorios and operas as "The Messiah," "Madame Butterfly," and "Amahl and the Night Visitors." She also has performed "The Hanging Garden" by Arnold Schoenberg, performed with pianist John Wustman.

Mission Conference To Start At Tabernacle Baptist Church

The 18th annual Mission Conference is being conducted by Tabernacle Baptist Church, 1911 34th St., Wednesday through March 18, according to Rev. E.L. Bynum, pastor.

The event has been an annual one since March, 1962.

The conference begins at 7 p.m. Wednesday with a missionary speaking and showing slides of the mission field. A visiting pastor will speak at 7:45 p.m. Wednesday.

Services will continue at 9:30 a.m. Thursday and continue until 12:30 p.m. with various missionaries and pastors speaking.

The afternoon services Thursday begin at 2 p.m. and continue until 4 p.m. Evening services begin at 7 p.m. Thursday with a missionary speaker, followed by a visiting pastor speaking.

Services Friday will follow the same schedule as Thursday's.

Services Saturday begin at 7 p.m. with a missionary speaking, followed by another missionary speaking at 7:45 p.m.

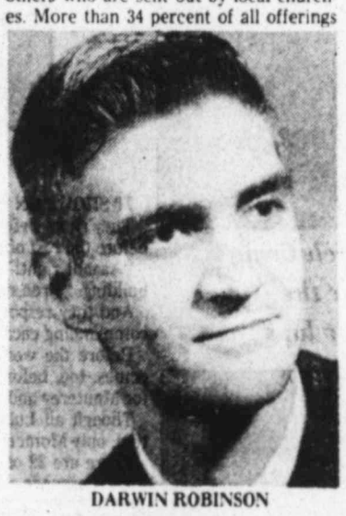
There will be special music during all the services, including the services during the day. All music will be under the direction of Floyd King, assistant pastor and music director of Tabernacle Baptist Church. The church choir has prepared special music especially for the mission conference.

Services March 18 begin with the Sunday School classes at 9:45 a.m. Missionaries will be speaking in the Sunday School departments. The morning worship service at 10:45 a.m. March 18 will feature a missionary speaker. Missionaries will speak at the Bible Training Hour at 6 p.m. March 18. The conference will conclude with the Sunday night preaching service at 7 p.m. March 18.

Tabernacle Baptist Church is an independent, fundamental church and is not affiliated with any organization. The missionaries are sent out directly by the church, rather than through a mission organization. One hundred percent of all monies given for missions goes directly to the missionaries. The church presently has three missionaries on the foreign field and is helping with the support of 25 others who are sent out by local churches. More than 34 percent of all offerings received at Tabernacle Baptist Church is sent to missions.

Missionary Darwin Robinson of Tampico, Mexico, who is from Lubbock and the Tabernacle Baptist Church, will be one of the missionary speakers. He is presently directing a correspondence school with students from many states in Mexico. He also has a training school for native preachers in Tampico and has an extensive literature ministry.

Another missionary speaker will be Errol C. Fowler, missionary to Germany.



DARWIN ROBINSON

RELIGION NEWS

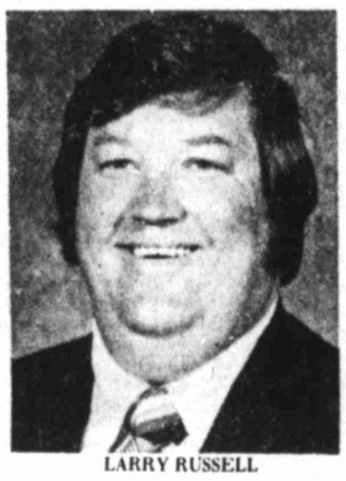
He has made a number of trips behind the Iron Curtain into Communist countries, and helps to make Bibles available to these people.

There will be a number of other missionaries present, representing a number of other fields. Pastors and laymen are expected to attend from Colorado, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Arkansas.

This event also will mark the 25th anniversary of Rev. Bynum at Tabernacle Baptist Church. For seven years he served as assistant pastor and has been pastor for the past 18 years. This last year the church paid off all indebtedness on the church building and lots and the property is now debt free.

Larry Walker To Lead Revival Meet Here

LARRY WALKER



LARRY RUSSELL

Larry Walker will be the preaching evangelist for a revival at Southcrest Baptist Church, 4810 Ave. P, March 25-30.

Services are scheduled daily at 7:30 p.m. March 25-30, with a free luncheon and Bible study for workers and businessmen from 11:45 a.m. to 12:50 p.m. March 26-30.

Larry Russell will be music evangelist for the revival.

Special Emphasis Nights are planned for the revival, including Battle of the Banners (Sunday School), March 26; Deacon's Night, March 27; "Tube Steak" Supper for all youth first grade to sixth grade age levels, March 28; "Youth Taco Supper" for all youth seventh grade to college age level, March 29; and Senior Citizens, March 30, featuring an old fashioned pie supper.

Walker, a graduate of Baylor University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, is presently evangelist-at-large from the First Baptist Church in Dallas.

Russell, a graduate of Midwestern State University, is minister of music and youth at the First Baptist Church in Dalhart.

Floydada Revival Led By Dr. Dudley Strain

FLOYDADA (Special)—Dr. Dudley Strain, pastor of Lubbock's Westmont Christian Church and pastor emeritus of First Christian Church in Lubbock, is leading revival services Thursday, March 16 and March 18 at the First Christian Church in Floydada.

The services Thursday and March 15 will be at 7:30 p.m. and the service March 18 will be at 7 p.m.

Dr. Strain is a native of the Northwest and a graduate of Butler University in Indianapolis, Ind. He holds a master of divinity degree from Yale Divinity School and has done graduate work at Union Theological Seminary in New York.

He also has received an honorary doctor of divinity degree from Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. He was pastor of First Christian Church in Salem, Ore., before being called to Lubbock's First Christian Church, where he served for 23 years.

In his "retirement" Dr. Strain is serving Westmont Christian Church in Lubbock and is associated with Lubbock National Bank in a public relations capacity. He also remains active in the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, the Boy Scouts, the South Plains Association of Governments' Advisory Committee on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, the Lubbock Crippled Children's Committee and several other community service agencies.

Dr. Strain's time with the Floydada congregation will be a kickoff event to a period of analysis of needs and a goal-setting process by the local congregation, according to a church spokesman.

Baptist Fellowship Meet Slated At Slaton

The monthly Fellowship meeting of the Lubbock Baptist Association will be held Monday in Westview Baptist Church at Slaton. Rev. Jim Wilkerson Jr. is pastor.

The inspirational speakers for the evening are Randy Johnson, minister of youth at Monterey Baptist Church, and Wilburn Coffman, minister of evangelism and outreach at Southcrest Baptist Church. The music will be led by Steve Akin, minister of music at Monterey Baptist Church. Special music will be given by Noelia Padilla, a member of Temple Baptist Mission.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Monday in the Slaton church for the fellowship program, followed by the executive board meeting and a time of fellowship. Refreshments will be furnished by the host church.

Johnson is a native of Fort Worth. He is a graduate of Howard Payne University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. Before coming to Monterey Baptist Church in February, 1975, he served churches in Odessa, Memphis, Tenn., and Voca. He also has served as the director of youth work for the Lubbock Baptist Association the last two years.

Coffman began serving on the staff of Southcrest Baptist Church in May, 1978. Before coming to Southcrest Baptist Church, he served churches in Stockton, Calif., Lubbock, Memphis and Amarillo. He attended Texas Tech University and is a graduate of Bible Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth.

Church Slates Gospel Concert

J.B. Mann of Lubbock is featured in a gospel concert at the Central Baptist Church, beginning at 6:15 p.m. today. The church is located at 18th Street and Avenue M.

Mann, who is well known in the Lubbock area as a Christian singer, is being accompanied by Mrs. Jack (Sue) Dale on the piano.

The film was produced by Underground Evangelism of Glendale, Calif. It is an unusual production from a Japanese news agency. The background music was created by Chinese people themselves and has been adapted for the motion picture.

Church Hosting Seminars On 'Marriage And Home'

Grace Baptist Church is hosting two nights of seminars, Friday and Saturday, on "Marriage and the Home," led by Rev. A.B. Black, pastor.

They will be held both days at 7:30 p.m. at the local church, located at 3600 Frankford Ave.

The book, "The Act of Marriage" by Tim LaHaye, will be given to one of the couples attending Friday night and a set of cassette tapes by Dr. Ed Wheat will be given to one of the couples attending Saturday night. Dr. Wheat, a Christian doctor, gives information on "Sex and Marriage."

Subjects to be discussed Friday night, "Marriage and the Home," include "Things That Cause The Breakdown of Marriage," and "How To Build and Enrich The Marriage Relationship."

Subjects to be discussed Saturday, "Sexual Fulfillment in Marriage," will be "A Normal Sex Life Is Essential," and "What The Bible Says About Sex Life In Marriage."

A nursery will be available for the two-night event.

Coy Edwards Family In Free Gospel Concert

The Coy Edwards Family of Bakersfield, Calif., will be appearing in a free gospel concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Southside Foursquare Church, 58th Street and Avenue H.

The Edwards family has appeared in concerts across the country with the Blackwoods and other groups.

The public is invited to attend the concert Tuesday night.

The church also is sponsoring a Second Sunday Gospel Singing from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. today, featuring local talent and congregational singing.

ALIDA ADDS FLIGHTS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alia, the Royal Jordanian Airline, has been granted authority by the U.S. government to add two flights to the current twice-weekly service between Amman and New York, the airline announced. In addition, it said, all four flights may now be extended beyond New York to Houston.

Religion News Deadlines Set

The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal publishes three pages a week for religious news, Friday evening, Saturday, and Sunday.

The deadline for all articles of a religious nature is before 5 p.m. Wednesday. Information and articles may be mailed to Religious News Editor, Care of Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock, Texas, 79408, or brought by The Avalanche-Journal building, 710 Ave. J.

Photographs submitted with articles must be black-and-white glossy prints. Photographs from an instantly-developing camera or from posters or advertisements are unacceptable.

Hardeman Nichols Leads Idalou Meet

IDALOU (Special)—Hardeman Nichols of Dallas is leading a series of services, Sunday through March 16, at the Idalou Church of Christ.

The objective of the services is "Seasons Refreshing," according to a church spokesman.

The area congregation is conducting regular Sunday worship services with Bible study for all age groups beginning at 9:15 a.m. and morning worship at 10:15 a.m. Sunday evening services are at 6 p.m.

Monday through March 16, morning services will be held at 8:45 a.m. with lessons centered around the Christian's personal spiritual growth and evening services at 7:30 p.m.

Young men of the congregation will conduct "devotional" type services Monday, Wednesday and March 16 from 7:10 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. The young men have been in training for the services for several weeks.

Nichols has more than 35 years of preaching experience. He comes from a family that has more than 21 gospel preachers in various areas of the United States. He was educated at Freed-Hardeman College and West Virginia University.

He has preached gospel meetings in more than 34 states and several foreign nations. In 1973 Nichols was among 10 evangelists who baptized more than 1,000 persons in India. In addition he has spoken at numerous college lectureships and has served as minister of churches in Lubbock, Dallas, Midland, Garland, and Cordova, Ala.

Baptist Temple In Wolfforth Plans Groundbreaking Today

WOLFFORTH (Special)—The Metropolitan Baptist Temple in Wolfforth is having a groundbreaking at 2 p.m. today for its new location.

Metropolitan Baptist Temple is an independent, pre-millenial, fundamental, missionary Baptist church fellowshipping with the Baptist Bible Fellowship of Springfield, Mo.

The church was organized Oct. 8, 1978, under the leadership of its present pastor, Dr. Donnie E. Miller, with eight charter members and now has a membership exceeding 30.

The church is presently contributing to the support of eight missionaries and colleges.

Rev. Joe Scott is associate pastor working with the music and youth of the church.

Sunday service hours are Sunday School, 9:30 a.m.; morning worship, 10:30 a.m.; evening worship, 6 p.m.; and Wednesday evening services 7 p.m.

Child Should Be Prepared For Trauma Of Death Long Before Event Itself

Death & Dying: Challenge & Change

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eighth in a series of 15 articles exploring "Death and Dying: Challenge and Change." In this article, George E. Williams of the University of Minnesota suggests how to teach children abouf death. This series was written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.)

Copyright (c) 1978-79 by the Regents of the University of California

By GEORGE E. WILLIAMS

THE TIME TO PREPARE a child for the trauma of another person's death is — as for all of us — long before the event itself.

Death is a normal part of the child's environment. By the age of three most children have seen flowers die; many have also seen a dead bird or animal in the street or yard, or perhaps they have had a pet die.

The young, curious mind will be prompted to ask, "Where did it go?" "Who made it?" "What about me; can I die, too?"

The failure of parents to respond to questions about death or a negative response from them may cause a child to feel that "nice" boys and girls do not ask about such "bad" things. When this happens, a child's questions about death will remain unasked and therefore unanswered.

If, on the other hand, death is explained as a natural part of living, as part of the life cycle, a child will begin to develop an intellectual understanding of the concept along with the feeling that death is normal.

SUCH AN OPPORTUNITY to explain death to a child comes, for instance, when his or her pet dies. Although possibly time-consuming for the parent, the experience of holding a funeral or burying a dead pet can be very valuable for the child. The child gains some knowledge about what death means and of the mechanics for dealing with death, such as burial, as well as an understanding of his parents' attitude toward death. Since play is one of the principal ways in which children learn, the drama of burying a dead pet naturally produces questions that should be answered directly, honestly, and simply.

Many times a child will dig up a buried pet, either to deny the fact of the pet's death or to satisfy a curiosity as to what really happened to it. The need to deny is strong because death means separation and represents a finality that the child finds difficult to understand.

But if a child's attitudes toward death are built gradually through experience with birds, flowers, and family pets, and are reinforced by good examples on the part of adults, he or she will be prepared to deal with the death of a loved person when the time comes.

IN THE PAST, children under the age of nine in our culture were often regarded as too young to understand death or to experience grief and were therefore excluded from demonstrations of grief as well as from the funeral. As a result, the child often felt left out and rejected, unable to comprehend his or her own emotions and physiological reactions to grief.

Although children are now often included in the family's mourning, many people still say, "The child is too young to understand" or, "The child is too young to remember the deceased."

On the contrary, when a loved person has died, a child needs to participate with the rest of the family in the mourning rites and to learn that grief is a natural reaction to death, one in which he or she is involved.

Adults often have trouble helping children handle their grief because of their own unresolved feelings about death or because they are enmeshed in their own sorrow. Evading the issue with remarks about children being "too young" may bring a degree of false comfort to adults, but refusing to answer a child's questions or failing to deal with a child's feelings can cause unnecessary pain if not emotional damage. The child must be allowed to talk openly and honestly about his or her feelings and be permitted to express emotions appropriate to grief.

CHILDREN COMBINE THEIR own defense mechanisms with what they are told by parents and friends to arrive at ideas about death, dying, and afterlife that are comfortable to them. Ultimately, the child plays the game of pretending to understand death so that face can be saved, sophistication can be assumed, and support can be obtained from the peer group. The child's degree of comfort with this type of resolution depends upon feelings about himself or herself as a person and the support obtained from family members.

The mourning that accompanies death focuses on one of the commonest fears of childhood: separation. To a child, separation means there will be no one to take care of him or her or to provide not only physical needs but also emotional needs. Fear of separation is tied to the fear of being hurt and becomes part of the complicated reaction to loss that a child experiences.

In children, this reaction to loss normally has five facets. The first is denial and isolation. To avoid facing the pain of separation, the child says, "No, this didn't happen," and, "If I isolate myself from people who are talking about this terrible thing, it won't have happened."

ONE ASPECT OF DENIAL is the frequency with which children claim to have seen a dead relative. If they have "seen" the person, there is no need to grieve. While children talk about this phenomenon quite readily, I suspect it occurs just as frequently in adults; adults, however, are unwilling to admit it.

The second facet is anger: the child is hurt by the separation and extremely angry. After his father's death, one young boy displayed his anger and confusion by saying that his father "had never done this before."

Anger may cover up guilt feelings resulting from a child's ordinary and very natural acts of thoughtlessness or rebellion. The child may feel that his thoughts helped to cause the death and that therefore he or she is responsible for it. The child is afraid that if people "really knew the truth" they would blame him for the death.

Most children cannot understand their ambivalent feelings nor do they know that such feelings occur throughout life normally. Their anger is a defense against these complicated emotions as well as against the confusion and anxiety they feel in connection with the death.

The third facet of reaction to loss is bargaining. The child tries to change the painful reality by making promises such as "I will be very, very good," in the belief that somehow this will bring the dead person back to life.

THE FOURTH FACET is depression: anger turned back on the self. Perhaps the child was angry at the person who died; now, with the person gone, the child turns this feeling inward. Or the depression may stem from an attempt to handle guilt. Children often think, "If I had been the right kind of person, this would not have happened."

Grief and mourning — particularly in the depression stage — are frequently accompanied by pains in the chest or throughout the entire body. One of the commonest physical symptoms is throat pain, which can be a defense against talking about feelings and is usually related to an inability to share with, and feel comforted by, supportive people.

The various facets to grief in children do not necessarily occur in a set order, nor do they occur in the same way in every child. In most instances, however, they do culminate in a final stage, resolution: the acceptance of the death.

Like older people, children may appear to have accepted a death intellectually, but psychologically and even physiologically, painful feelings can continue. Resolution may take considerable time, but the beginning of the resolution phase is apparent when the grieving child starts to recall and talk about pleasant and happy memories of the loved one who has died.

QUESTIONS:

1. By what age have most children had some contact with death?
2. Basically, how should the occurrence of death be explained to the child?
3. Why should a child participate with the rest of the family in mourning rites of a loved one?
4. What fear complicates a child's reaction to the death of a loved one?
5. What are the five facets of grief frequently seen in children?

ANSWERS:

1. Three years.
2. As a normal part of the life cycle.
3. So the child may learn that grief is a natural reaction to death that is shared by others.
4. Fear of separation.
5. Denial, anger, bargaining, depression, resolution.

Gospel Music Show Slated On KTXT-TV

A two-hour show of gospel music, entitled "That Great American Gospel Sound," is being shown at 8 p.m. Tuesday on KTXT-TV Channel 5 station.

The show is hosted by Tennessee Ernie Ford and features such participants as special guest star Della Reese, The Happy Goodman Family, The Jordanaires, Micki Fuhrman, making her national television debut, and the Fisk (University) Jubilee Singers under the direction of Matthew Kennedy.

The show, recorded live before a near-capacity house at Opryland, U.S.A., in Nashville, Tenn., is a production of KOCE, Huntington Beach, Calif., in association with Two Feather Productions of Hollywood.

The program opens with the entire cast singing a version of "Put Your Hand in the Hand," followed by the Fisk Jubilee Singers in a brief a cappella rendition of "Good News."

Miss Fuhrman, a 19-year-old discovery from Coushatta, La., then presents some of her original compositions. Currently starring on the "Louisiana Hayride" broadcasts out of Shreveport, she sings "Here He Comes," and "Closer To Jesus."

The Happy Goodman Family then sings "I Wouldn't Take Nothin' for My Journey Now," and "I Believe He's Coming Back," before being joined by Tennessee Ernie for "John the Revelator," a Rusty Goodman composition.

Miss Reese then sings "I Knew Jesus When," (i.e., before He was a superstar) and "Stop and Smell the Roses," by Mac Davis and Doc Severinson. She then sings "Bye and Bye," before teaming up with Tennessee Ernie for "When God Dips His Pen of Love in My Heart."

The Jordanaires then sing a medley of "Dig A Little Deeper," "You Better Run," "Peace In the Valley," "Search Me Lord," "Swing Down Chariot," and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." Tennessee Ernie then joins the group for "Just A Little Talk With Jesus," "No Tears In Heaven," "Life's Railway to Heaven," "An Empty Mansion," and "I Like The Old Time Ways."

The young singers from Nashville's Fisk University, guided by Kennedy who has led the choir for the past 25 years, then sing two spirituals, "Deep River," and "His Name So Sweet."

Tennessee Ernie then teams up with musical director Bill Walker's piano for a medley of "What A Friend We Have In Jesus," "Others," "In The Garden," "My Task," "Come On Down," and "The Old Rugged Cross."

The final segement of the show, a joint performance by all the participants, combines three well-known inspirational songs in a special blend that Tennessee Ernie constructed just for the program.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

NINO IS A TAXI driver in Rome. We first met some years ago when he drove us throughout Europe before we had discovered the fun of drive-it-yourself.

Now we were back in Rome for just three days and another friend, Giulio Rossi, who runs a garage in the Via Purificazone, met us at the airport. He told us that Nino's wife had died, and that Nino could no longer drive for him since that required trips away from Rome. Now Nino was driving his own cab, but, even so, he would love to take us for an afternoon in one of Giulio's cars.

The Lord blessed Nino with one of those glorious personalities for which radiant is the only word. He gets all tied up in his English, so excited is he about everything. He threw up his arms in a gesture of welcome when he saw me, and embraced me with such outgoingness that I just knew he loved me. It's a wonderful thing to know that someone really loves you just for yourself.

"I'm so sorry about your dear wife," I said. Nino fumbled with his wallet and pulled out a rather soiled and battered mourner's card such as are given out at funerals. It told about what a kindly, good woman she was. My friend stood pathetically looking at her picture. "I must care for the children alone....be mother and father," he said bravely.

"IT MUST BE AWFULLY hard to carry on without her. She was indeed a beautiful soul," I said.

A strange look of peace came over Nino's face. "It is God's will," he replied with deep feeling. "God gave her to me, then He took her to Heaven. God helps me. I shall meet my angel again. God, He is very good."

Of course, this was a simple and not at all unique conversation, but suddenly I felt a strong sense of fellowship for this swarthy, genuine hearted man. He is Italian, I am American; he a Catholic, I a Protestant; he a taxo-driver, I a preacher and writer. But what difference is there between us? Love made us brothers. He is my friend and I his, and I learned deeper faith from him.

It's rather amazing how some people are always wanting to meet so-called VIP's, celebrities, big shots, well known names. Many famous personalities are indeed fine persons, brilliant and interesting. And of course we can learn much from those who have done so much. If you expose yourself to such people, some of what they have may rub off. But not everybody associates with the well known for that purpose, but rather to bask in so-called celebrity glory. In my own experience rich values have been given me by those who are not known to fame or furtune. I think gratefully of them and prize their friendship.

NEVER UNDERESTIMATE what you can learn from any person. From them you can pick up some real gems of wisdom. For example, I was talking with a woman who had gone to work following the sudden death of her husband. "You are very wise," I said, "to take a job and keep yourself busy."

And I commented on the value of hard work in assuaging sorrow. I told her about an old country doctor of my youth who once advised a broken-hearted woman: "The best cure for a broken heart is religious faith and to get down on your knees and scrub a floor."

The lady smiled gently, "Yes, of course, but I've found that work is a drug and not a medicine. Work desensitizes, but does not heal. Faith is the real healing medicine." Believe me, there is wisdom in that remark. You can indeed learn from people.

Pupils On Hymn Playing Auditions Program Today

Several pupils participating in the third annual Hymn Playing auditions are playing on a program at 2:30 p.m. today in Trinity Baptist Church.

The pupils playing today are in levels IV, V, and VI who received a Superior rating in the Hymn Playing auditions.

The Hymn Playing auditions are sponsored by the Lubbock Music Teachers' Association. Auditions were held at the church Friday and Saturday.

Dorothy Matthews of Midland served as examiner of the 150 pupils in the auditions. She is well-known as an adjudicator and piano teacher.

Rube Goldberg, cartoonist-inventor, died in 1971.

Pastoral Care Seminar Set

A West Texas Seminar on Pastoral Care will be held Friday and Saturday at Trinity Baptist Church.

Speakers will include Dr. Hardy Clemons, pastor of Second Baptist Church; W.E. Burns, Texas Tech University School of Medicine; Paul Gordon, director of social service, Buckner West Texas Center in Lubbock; Pat Gotcher, president of Systematic Health, Inc.; Roger Hawley, director of counseling at Lubbock Christian College; Mike Horton, minister of family life at First Baptist Church; and Tom Kennedy, minister to single adults at First Baptist Church.

Rev. Bob Utley is pastor of Lubbock's Trinity Baptist Church.

FOURTH STREET MISSION TEAM

Team In State Tourney

Patrick Boateng, pastor of the Fourth Street Mission, took his Royal Ambassador boy's baskteball team to a state tournament in Abilene this weekend.

The Fourth Street Mission team won the right to go the tournament by defeating the team from the First Baptist Church of Lubbock March 3 in the championship game.

A total of 32 teams including more than 300 boys from age six years old to 18 years old competed in the Lubbock Baptist Association Royal Ambassador Basketball League.

Ron Steffen, R.A. director for the association, supervised the league. Games were played in the Highland Baptist Church Activities Center Gym and the Bellaire Baptist Church Gym.

Steffen is organizing an R.A. Track Meet March 24 at the Texas Tech University Track.

Full Scale Vegetable Planting Near On Plains

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Planting of early vegetables and the sugar beet crop should get into full swing here over the next week or so, while farmers in the Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer county areas continue spring land preparation at a hectic pace after a long weather delay.

And while all preparations are underway for getting another crop in the ground, the wheat crop sown in the area last fall has posted good recovery with recent favorable weather, and still appears headed toward summer harvest in excellent condition in many areas, particularly if favorable spring rains should lend assistance.

"Overall, we still have excellent subsoil moisture in Deaf Smith County. A good inch of rain and the wheat would really be going strong. We're running a little late with our farming right now, but with the type of equipment we have today, a lot of catching up can be done in a hurry. Although pre-plant irrigation is also lagging behind, the good subsoil moisture level should allow us to move ahead with it more rapidly," commented John Fuston, Deaf Smith County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service executive director.

"I'd say maybe 15 to 30 percent of the wheat will be grazed out, depending mostly on whether we get a haying and grazing program for wheat. But I think we'll have a lot more grazeout on wheat than normal," Fuston continued.

The ASCS executive pointed out that corn acreage will be down here this year, and cotton, a crop traditionally considered a poor risk in an area this far north, will also increase in acreage.

"Our declining water table is a factor in more cotton. Our weaker water, in many instances, is in the southern end of the county anyway, and farmers are looking at a maximum of two waterings on their cotton. That and the fact that the price outlook is reasonably good at this time may serve to boost us up to 6,000 acres of cotton in Deaf Smith County this year," Fuston reported.

Corn, which has proven particularly susceptible to shortages of irrigation water and attacks of spider mites over the past two years, will show a major decline here in 1979.

Land preparation for vegetable planting was delayed by a prolonged period of inclement weather over the past two months, and weather that kept local vegetable farmers out of their fields also resulted in heavy damage to onion sets in the Rio Grande Valley region of Texas, which supplies the majority of onion sets used in the area.

"There's going to be a real shortage of onion set's this year because the cold weather in the Valley really thinned out the crop. We could be down 4 percent from last year. We're already late in land preparation, and those sets which are available are going to be late arriving as well. We would like to be setting onions right now, but we're not ready, and the plants aren't either," reported Albert Maxwell of the Hereford office of Dimmitt-based La Mantia-Cullum-Collier & Co.

According to Maxwell, onion setting should be started by Monday with potato planting to follow close behind.

"Potato planting, weather permitting, will be pretty well on schedule. There's a surplus of seed potatoes, and we'll start cutting seed pieces for planting in the Dimmitt, Hart, Hereford and Lazbuddie regions about Monday," said Maxwell.

Availability of field labor has been a problem with recent vegetable planting campaigns, but Maxwell indicated the problem may not be a severe this year.

"We think we'll have the field help we need. A lot of folks are looking for work, and with the decrease in available onion transplants, we'll hopefully have plenty of help," he said.

Wes Fisher of Barret-Fisher Produce Co. of Hereford reported that some potato planting may get underway on sandyland near Springlake as early as this week, and that potato planting in the immediate Hereford area should probably begin at mid-months.

"Pre-irrigation is notably behind this year. Many farmers were unable to start field preparation work as early as usual, and our onion setting in the Hereford area is going to run late," said Fisher.

Farmers are still signing up to plant sugarbeets as field preparations continue for that crop as well, according to Calvin Jones, agricultural manager for the Holly Sugar Corp. Hereford plant.

"Beets should start going in the ground around this weekend or next week. The cold winter weather dropped our soil temperatures, so there's no hurry on it.

"Right now, we have 20,000 acres contracted and expect another 10,000 acres as growers get their financing lined out. We've received a clearance for the use of Nortron on beets, and growers will get a lot of their pre-emergence herbicides on for the beet crop now. There's some pre-plant irrigation going on right now, and overall, I'd say we're running pretty well on schedule," the Holly spokesman commented.

Further irrigation and land preparation for grain crops will also proceed this month, as farmers look toward corn and sorghum planting dates, which are virtually just around the corner for some varieities.

Corn will be among the earliest of the grain crops to go in the ground in the region, with sorghum and soybeans being planted slightly later.

DEEP-BREAKING LAND — Farmers in the Hereford area are conducting land preparation at a hectic pace after having been delayed earlier this year by inclement weather. Deep-breaking has been proceeding on some land to be planted to grain crops, while many farmers have been bedding up land for vegetables and sugar beets. Pre-planting irrigating also is proceeding. PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

CARTER ADMINISTRATION OFFICIALS last week denied there is any serious possibility that soybeans will be allowed to be planted on 1979 crop set-aside acreages.

Officials within the USDA and the White House confirmed, however, that the U. S. Department of Agriculture was preparing a contingency analysis at the request of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and chief inflation fighter Alfred Kahn.

A White House source said the CEA and Kahn asked USDA to look at the possibility of soybean plantings on set-aside acreage as one option in fighting food inflation.

The source, however, said he did not see soybean plantings on set-aside acres as likely.

HOWARD HJORT, THE USDA'S ECONOMICS director, confirmed the department is working on an analysis of the subject but said flatly the plan would not be adopted.

The White House source said the CEA and Kahn are trying to determine what might happen to soybean meal and soybean oil prices if there were a further deterioration in the Brazilian soybean crop.

Hjort said the USDA study is part of a series of analyses the department is conducting on various uses to which set-aside acreage could be put.

For example, he said, the USDA recently asked for public comment on whether a grazing and haying program should be allowed on 1979-crop wheat set-aside acreage.

There also have been requests made by some groups that other commodities, such as triticale, a hybrid grain, and guar, a bean, be allowed to be grown on set-aside acreage.

THE AMERICAN SOYBEAN ASSOCIATION has voiced strong opposition to the growing of soybeans on set-aside acreage.

"Soybean farmers believe this action would be counterproductive to the interests of farmers and consumers because in the long term it would add to the problems of inflation," said Merlyn Groot, ASA president.

"If soybeans were planted on set-aside acres, the resulting lower bean prices actually would lower soybean production. As a result, the lower supplies would increase prices in the future."

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has said U. S. soybean acreage in 1979 already will be 4 million to 6 million acres more than a year ago. He said USDA estimates indicate more U. S. cropland could be planted to soybeans this year than to any other crop.

"The soybean market looks very bright," he said, "and soybean export demand looks very strong."

Bergland has said that 2 million to 4 million acres of corn cropland would be switched to soybeans in 1979.

MEANWHILE, INFLATION FIGHTER Kahn was quoted last week as saying he hopes the administration can take action within two weeks to fight food inflation, but he ruled out price controls.

Kahn, appearing before the Senate Budget Committee, was asked about rumors that he had met with Bergland on controls on beef.

He said he had met with Bergland twice in the last several days and they discussed not just beef but all food prices.

Kahn said the administration is "absolutely not" considering price controls on beef but added that raising import quotas on beef was "something worth considering."

Kahn indicated there would not be much effect in raising quotas but did not say specifically whether quota raising would be part of the administration's action plan.

He did not say specifically what the administration would do to fight food inflation, though he said a large number of things were explored with Bergland, some of them suggested by the secretary himself.

Judging To Open Here Monday At Annual Junior Stock Show

More than 2,000 animals have been entered by Future Farmers of America and 4-H club members from 29 counties on the Texas High Plains and eastern New Mexico for the 46th annual Southwest Junior Livestock Show.

This year's show is dedicated to the memory of Dean W. L. Stangel and W. C. Mauzey, longtime supporters of the show.

Judging will begin Monday with lambs being placed at 9 a.m. in the Hog Barn of the South Plains Fairgrounds. Steer judging will get underway at 1 p.m. and Berkshires, Yorkshires and Crossbred barrows will be judged at 5 p.m.

Placement of Chester Whites, Durocs, Hampshires, Poland Chinas and Spotted Poland Chinas will begin Tuesday.

The annual livestock exhibition, the largest regional junior show in the United States, according to officials, will conclude with the sale of prize winning animals at 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Livestock Pavilion.

Entries total 2,032 animals compared to 1,866 last year. A total of 1,072 barrows, 800 lambs and 160 steers have been entered.

Dawson County 4-H members entered the largest number of animals among 4-H clubs, registering 41 barrows, 57 lambs and 21 steers for a total of 119 entries.

The Bovina FFA group had the largest number of entries among FFA chapters with a total of 56 including 41 barrows and 15 lambs.

Showmen are expected to pocket about $45,000 in premium money, according to Bob Etheredge, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce agriculture department manager.

A pair of stock show princesses, one representing FFA and the other representing 4-H, will be selected at 2 p.m. today in the Fairpark Coliseum. The two girls, who will serve as official hostesses during the show and sale, will be chosen from 26 FFA contestants and 27 4-H entries.

Herdsmen awards will be presented to FFA and 4-H clubs with the neatest, most attractive lamb, steer and barrow exhibits by the Lubbock Kiwanis Club.

The Lubbock Agriculture Club will present awards for showmanship in the three divisions.

Paul Gross, District I extension agent from Amarillo, will judge the swine and Richard Powell, vocational agriculture teacher at Alpine, will place the lambs. Judging the steers will be James Heath of Lamar Community College in Lamar, Colo.

Superintendent of the barrow division will be Joe Wise of Lamesa. He will be assisted by Bill Gregory of Spur, Chris Kountz of Lubbock and Ed Smith of Brownfield.

Dr. Jerry Stockton of Lubbock will serve as superintendent of the lamb division assisted by Walter Cox of Abernathy, Bill Roach of Snyder and Stanley Young of Tahoka.

Steer division superintendent will be Syd Conner of Post. He will be assisted by F. J. McCauley of Welch and Kyle Smith of Seminole.

Clerk of the sale is Raymond King, assisted by Cliff Bloodworth, Curtis Barrett and Waylon Carroll.

The show is open to 4-H and FFA youths from Bailey, Borden, Briscoe, Castro, Cochran, Cottle, Crosby, Dawson, Dickens, Floyd, Gaines, Garza, Hale, Hockley, Kent, King, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Motley, Parmer, Scurry, Stonewall, Swisher, Terry and Yoakum counties in Texas. New Mexico counties eligible for entry are Curry, Lea and Roosevelt.

Snowbelt Raises Fresh Salad Vegetables With Hydroponics

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (UPI) — A "total control" growing system that produces salad vegetables year-round for consumers in this upstate New York city, is usually buried under snow from November-April.

Most Americans probably would associate General Electric with light bulbs and home appliances but it has been in the vegetable business for several years and has developed a hydroponics system of raising plants and vegetables indoors in liquid mineral solutions.

Navy personnel in Argentia, Nfld., are recipients of GE's research, too. Three 12-by-42 feet trailers, using the GE developed system, provide them with their oversized "military" salads all year-long.

Officials say the process may revolutionize vegetable production.

"This has fantastic potential," says GE engineer Lewis Fogg, "particularly in countries where there are problems with plant disease."

Hydroponic vegetables mature in less time than greenhouse-grown, or field-grown crops. Tomatoes go from seeds to harvesting in 10 weeks and continue to produce for 14 to 16 weeks.

Compared with greenhouse crops, GE officials are getting 20 times as much lettuce, nine times as much tomatoes, and six times as much cucumbers, measured in pounds per square foot of growing area.

The comparison with fieldgrown crops is perhaps even more startling: forty times greater for lettuce, 30 times greater for tomatoes and 50 times greater for cucumbers.

"They taste just as good, if not better, than anything grown in the garden," said Fogg, manager of the controlled environment agriculture operation.

The project was developed in the corporation's Electronic Systems Division in 1972 when certain government contracts became limited.

"The division had been doing military systems work for many years," Fogg said. "Starting in 1972-73, government contracts for radar and sonar became rather scarce. A task force was organized to look at the possibility of taking the systems approach to solving some problems in agriculture."

The first production module, a growing chamber 14 feet by 20 feet by 13 feet, was completed in March 1973. A series of growing tests were conducted on tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers and radishes, in which electric lamps were used as the prime energy source. The lamps were placed outside clear plastic, but engineers discovered the plastic reflected 30 percent of the light.

"We found the rooted crops, such as radishes, weren't helped by the controlled environment," Fogg said.

The engineers redesigned the facility, put the lamps inside, covered them with thicker, but highly reflective plastic and stopped growing rooted crops.

In December 1973, GE began feasibility tests on salad vegetables and ornamental plants, such as geraniums and ferns. About three years later, GE began studying the economics of each crop and decided to build four production modules, 50 feet by 80 feet.

Construction was completed in December 1977 and the planting began.

GE began marketing Geniponic tomatoes in various supermarkets and "better restaurants" in the Syracuse area in March 1978.

"We found that housewives were totally dissatisfied with tomatoes in winter because they're shipped in from California, Mexico and Florida and they're picked green," Fogg said. "They don't have a chance to formulate vitamins and taste.

"We pick our tomatoes red ripe and deliver them in three hours. The response has been very favorable. They're decidedly better than the ones shipped in."

The plants are grown in open-topped troughs without soil. A thin film of recirculated nutrient fluid trickles through their roots from one end of the trough to another. The troughs are mounted on five-tiered, Christmas-tree type racks so that the vertica as well as the horizontal dimension is filled, to take advantage of all the carbon-dioxide enriched atmosphere.

Since the racks are moveable, space for only one aisle is needed. Workers enter the facility through airlocks.

The crops are of uniform quality since they aren't subject to the stresses of weather. The system can be adjusted to produce varying tastes.

Geniponic tomatoes are priced "about 30 cents over whatever else is on the market," Fogg said. Prices ranged from $1.59 a pound in November to 69 cents a pound in summer.

But Fogg believes the quality more than makes up for the cost to consumers.

"I know the consumer is willing to accept the higher price," he said.

Considering higher quality and including energy requirements for the lights, Fogg said the tomatoes are cost-competitive with those shipped in. He said this is because "you can produce seven crops of tomatoes in a year compared to two crops in a greenhouse and one for a farmer working in the fields.

"The yield is higher, too. We can grow nine times as many as a field farmer and we've increased the Vitamin C content by 30 percent."

Though GE has marketed only its Geniponic tomatoes, the company also grows cucumbers and lettuce in the four modules located in the 16,000 square foot area.

GE is spending the first eight months of 1979 studying its growing and marketing methods and will conduct a series of experiments.

"What we're trying to do is pin down the production cost," Fogg said. "We know it will be economically viable in the Northeast and North Central part of the country."

Fogg said similar systems exist in Alaska and Sweden, there is interest in them in Middle East oil countries and Canadian representatives are expected to come to Syracuse this year to discuss hydroponics.

Adequate Overall Funds Seen For Farmer Loans

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Rising interest rates and a brisk demand for credit may cause some farmers and ranchers to seek service from lenders other than banks during 1979, says a marketing economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

This is because production credit associations and federal land banks obtain funds through national money markets. Anderson predicts average interest rates for 1979 will be higher than a year ago.

Government lenders are playing an increasingly important role in lending to farmers and ranchers. Repayment of loans has been helped by increased lending from the Commodity Credit Corp. (CCC), Farmers' Home Administration (FmHA) and Small Business Administration (SBA).

The FmHA received new lending authorities with the passage of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978. The legislation increased lending limits on both farm ownership and operating loans.

The FmHA will give more emphasis to economic emergency loans this year. These loans can be used to pay installments on existing debts and to pay expenses for farm operating purposes.

Agricultural lenders will encourage year-round marketing plans and forward pricing of commodities, Anderson says, adding that it is much easier to get adequate financing if the lender has assurance that a reasonable price has been established for at least a part of the crop.

Good records, appropriate financial statements and cash flow statements are necessary parts of financial planning from the standpoint of both lenders and borrowers, emphasizes Anderson.

With net agricultural income during 1979 expected to be near last year's level, a substantial number of producers will continue to be concerned with repaying old debts, financing new acquisitions and paying for operating expenses, he says.

Greatest financial stress will likely be on middle-sized farming and ranching operations, says Anderson. These operations, he says, are too small to make efficient use of labor and modern equipment. On the other hand, they are too big to depend on off-farm employment to supplement their income.

More and more producers are having difficulty obtaining farm and ranchland to expand their operations. Current incomes usually fall short of meeting payments on money borrowed to finance land purchases.

As a result, such purchases are more easily handled by individuals or firms with a large financial reserve or with substantial income flow from off-farm sources.

Overall, financial conditions of agricultural borrowers are expected to hold stable in 1979, believes Anderson. Marked improvement is expected for cow-calf, dairy and poultry producers.

Cotton, grain, soybean and hog producers will likely maintain their present financial position. Cattle feeders will be under considerable pressure to maintain their financial position as profit margins may be slim most of the year.

Testing Change Looming For Red Winter Wheat

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) will stop testing hard red winter wheat for DHV (dark, hard and vitreous) kernels by May 1 under a proposal announced by a department official.

Since May 1978, USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) has been testing for protein content, which is a more reliable indicator of baking quality than DHV percentages, FGIS administrator Leland E. Bartelt said.

All references to subclasses in hard red winter wheat based on DHV percentages were deleted from the U.S. Grain Standards May 1, 1977. However, FGIS continued testing for DHV kernel when asked to do so, to give producers and buyers time to become accustomed to the change.

"We are now testing for protein content in wheat using instruments recently developed for this purpose," Bartelt said. "At the time DHV was deleted from the grain standards, these instruments were not widely available, and other methods of testing for protein content were too time-consuming to be used at export elevators on a large scale.

"Now that we are using instruments which test for protein more quickly – and since protein content is a better indicator of baking quality than DHV – we feel the effects of this change on the grain industry will be minimal," Bartelt said.

He said the test for protein content is more objective than testing for DHV, since DHV analysis depends more on human judgement.

Petroleum Resources Considered Adequate

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — P. W. J. Wood, a geologist who has participated in oil explorations around the world, says petroleum resources still to be discovered probably are several times as large as all the oil found to date.

"There are ample resources of petroleum in the world, still undiscovered, which should permit an orderly transition from our present petroleum-dependent civilization to a society based on alternate energy sources during the next 50 years," Wood said.

"The price to the public of this undiscovered petroleum will continue to be a factor controlled by the 'government take', as that price is now, rather than what we in industry call the technical cost of finding and producing oil and gas, although that cost will increase."

Wood, executive vice president of Cities Service Co., Tulsa, Okla., said a lot of the undiscovered oil is economically recoverable.

"To get the job done within a reasonable time, we must accelerate our exploration efforts around the world and, incidentally, when those efforts yield success, we must reduce the time now wasted in bringing new discoveries to production," he said.

In a report presented at a London conference on world energy economics, Wood said the key to such explorations will be the political and economic climate.

"If there is to be a widespread petroleum shortage before the end of this century, it will not be because reserves are not available to be found and developed," he said.

"Neither will it be because the petroleum industry lacks the technology to perform the task."

Wood said the United States, excluding Alaska, is the most densely explored region in the world.

"If technology and economic incentives advance sufficiently the world as a whole should attain a drilling maturity approaching that of the United States," he said.

"The majority of the world's prospective area is non-productive to date. Most of it is relatively unexplored."

Wood said present studies indicate from 145 to 155 major basin and sub-basin areas are virtually undrilled at this time and that an equal number of large basin areas are considered to be semi-frontiers in early exploration stages.

"Of the 145-155 true frontier basins the vast majority are in harsh exploration climates of the Arctic, deep oceans, jungles, and in areas of extreme logistical difficulty," he said.

"The geographic size of the relatively unexplored areas gives credibility, I believe, to the idea there is still as much petroleum to be found as we know about already."

Wood said statistics on exploration drilling density versus prospective areas are not readily available.

"Rather they have been compiled with reference to political units," he said.

"Perhaps that is appropriate as it is political factors rather than technical ones which determine whether any work will be done or not, and ultimately whether or not enough petroleum will be found to permit an orderly transition to the 21st century."

Wood said that although they did not result in increased operating revenues to the oil industry, the OPEC price increases of 1973-74 did have the effect of stimulating exploration activity in the United States.

"It was assumed by U.S. industry that U.S. domestic prices would ultimately rise to world levels, that producers would ultimately receive increased revenues, and that therefore some areas previously considered to be uneconomic for exploration would become attractive," he said.

Wood added that the United States is doing as much within its borders to find new petroleum reserves as is the rest of the free world put together.

But, he said, most of the large quantities of oil yet to be found are in areas outside the United States and that explorations in those areas are woefully inadequate today.

"If there is going to be a petroleum shortage it will not be caused by the world running out of oil, but rather by our own political unwillingness to go and look for it," Wood said.

Independents Given Roadblocks Instead Of Offshore Incentive

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -U.S. independent oil companies say the government has provided more roadblocks than incentives in its efforts to involve small operators in Outer Continental Shelf exploration.

Those hurdles range from a $35 million oil spill liability provision in the OCS Lands Act Amendments of 1978 to an aggravating Department of Interior habit of rejecting their high bids for offshore tracts, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

Some independents find those disincentives coupled with the traditional high costs of offshore operations bar them from the OCS—Particularly frontier areas.

Under the circumstances, "there just aren't any bargains left on the federal offshore," one independent claims.

Instead of plunging big on OCS tracts, most independents are making prudent part-interest investments in federal leases in the mature Gulf of Mexico areas or sticking to state tracts off Texas and Louisiana. Bidding and leasing terms are more hospitable and the drilling environment less demanding on the state blocks, independents say.

They add they're skirting high capital costs in those regions through farm-ins or by purchasing joint-venture interests. Few are seeking the role of operator. Most still are in the red or only now nearing the break-even point for their offshore investments.

Independents probably are responsible for about 10 percent of industry's total investment offshore, one operator estimates.

Industry has paid total bonuses, royalties, and rents of $25.4 billion as of Jan. 1 for OCS acreage alone, according to the U.S. Geological Survey. USGS says total value of OCS production reached $33.3 billion on the same date.

About 76 percent of the revenue went to the government and 24 percent to the operators, USGS says.

Less than one percent of roughly 10,000 independent operators have the economic resources to go offshore, estimates Lloyd Unsell, executive vice president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

He says IPAA isn't pushing any program with Congress to ease conditions for independents on the OCS. In fact, IPAA's offshore-leasing committee issued its last report in May, 1971.

"None of the average independents I know expects to or wants to compete out there (OCS)," Unsell says.

Meanwhile, the government continues its attempts to attract more independents into competing for OCS tracts.

Recent efforts to attract independents offshore have included experiments with royalty and sliding-scale royalty bidding. Sequential and oral auction bidding methods, permitted under broad language in the OCS amendments, also are being considered to stimulate participation by independents.

In one older move, the Department of Interior banned joint bidding on the OCS by major companies producing more than 1.6 million barrels per day of crude, natural gas, and gas liquids on Oct. 1, 1975.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE reports that the cost of drilling and equipping wells during 1977 increased more than 30 percent over the previous year.

A joint survey on costs for that year—the latest for which comprehensive figures are available—was compiled by API, the Independent Petroleum Association of America and the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association.

The organizations found that the total cost for oil and gas wells, and dry holes, amounted to about $10 billion, an increase of 33.4 percent over 1976.

The total number of wells drilled that year were up 12.5 percent, from 38,941 to 43,826.

The cost of offshore wells completed in 1977 rose 39.4 percent to approximately $2.1 billion.

FEDERAL INCENTIVES to stimulate energy production, from 1918 through fiscal year 1977, may have totaled as much as $217 billion, according to a recent report prepared at the Department of Energy's Pacific Northwest Laboratory.

Conducted by Dr. Bruce W. Cone of Battelle Memorial Institute, the study analyzes the history of federal energy incentives.

Cone estimates that, in 1977 dollars, past support from such incentives for each major energy source, includes: coal, $9.7 billion; hydropower, $15.3 billion; gas, $16.5 billion; nuclear, $18 billion; oil, $101.3 billion; and electricity, $56.6 billion.

DOW CHEMICAL has compiled some statistics relating to the cost of compliance with federal regulations for 1977.

The firm found that complying with federal regulations increased by more than 44 percent from the previous year and 82 percent in two years.

Total compliance cost for 1977 was $268 million, up 82 percent from 1975's $147 million, according to Dow.

The company indicated that a breakdown of regulatory costs for 1977 by impact area showed at least $129 million was "questionable or excessive," for an increase of 115 percent in two years.

Paul F. Oreffice, president and chief executive officer of Dow, said, "Clearly, there is no faster rising cost of business than expenses related to governmental regulations.

"If the trend isn't reversed, the U.S. government will have become highly successful at exporting U.S. jobs to foreign competitors."

Oreffice said, "Obviously, there are many regulations with which business should comply, but what's most objectionable are the excessive costs business incurs through needless and duplicative government regulation."

THE STUDY REVEALED that Dow must follow rules imposed by more than 80 federal regulatory agencies.

"Excessive and highly questionable regulations are strangling American business, stifling American product innovation and making American businesses less competitive in world markets with a resulting loss of American jobs," Oreffice said.

"Congress must accept the fact that these excessive regulations are the primary cause of America's inflation, and only Congress can do something about it by limiting the power available to these regulators."

Dow spends approximately $20 million per year to complete various government reports and forms.

"American consumers are being cheated as as result of the extra costs they have to pay for products subjected to excessive regulations which cost more than they should," he said.

"These costs all eventually translate down to the consumer, who ends up paying what is in effect a mandated, hidden tax as a result of excessive regulations affecting nearly every U.S. business."

THE DOW OFFICIAL said, "Imagine what the total effect would be of excessive regulations on all business and industry in America. Our 115 percent increase in excessive and questionable costs over two years, multiplied by hundreds of businesses in other industries experiencing similar excessive costs represent the greatest threat to America's economic well-being."

The regulations examined by Dow from the 80 federal agencies ranged from specific equipment requirements for pollution control to the determination of wording that would be acceptable in new product use labels.

Because of the volume of detail involved, nearly a year was required for the study itself.

Operators May Be Abandoning Offshore Area

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Most U.S. operators appear to have written off—at least for now—the Baltimore Canyon Trough as a major offshore U.S. oil and gas province.

The canyon's active operators underscored this decision by not bidding or contributing only bare-bones offers at OCS Sale 49—the second U.S. mid-Atlantic lease sale.

Only 16 of the 45 companies which qualified for the bidding participated. Their apparent high bids totaled only $41,720,618 for 44 tracts. More than half of the 109 blocks offered drew no bids.

Total money exposed in 74 bids was $66,005,881. Total money left on the table—the difference between the high bid on a tract and the second highest—was a slim $15,313,317.

By comparison, companies offered high bids of $1.1 billion for 101 tracts in OCS Sale 40, the first offering of canyon acreage. They exposed $3.5 billion.

The results from Sale 49 were the lowest since the Department of Interior began offering frontier OCS acreage in December, 1975, according to the Bureau of Land Management—even lower than the second Mississippi-Alabama-Florida area sale.

Gulf Reports Increase In 1978 Revenue

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (Special) -Gulf Oil Corp. has reported earning $791 million, or $4.06 per share, in 1978, an increase of 5.2 percent over the $752 million, or $3.86 per share, earned during 1977. Revenue rose 1.4 percent to $20.1 billion from $19.8 billion.

Earnings for the fourth quarter were a record $253 million, or $1.30 per share, compared with earnings of $175 million, or 90 cents per share, in 1977. The 44.6 percent gain reflected both an improvement in operations and the adverse effect in 1977 of a year-end tax adjustment. Revenue in the quarter rose 6.9 percent to $5.5 billion from $5.1 billion.

"An exceptionally strong market for gasoline in both the United States and Europe, substantial benefits from coal and uranium operations, and a reduction in exploration expenses were the principal ingredients in our improved performance," said James E. Lee, Gulf's president.

In announcing earnings at a meeting of the St. Louis Society of Financial Analysts, Lee cautioned, however, that the fourth quarter should not be used as the base for forecasting 1979 results. "Earnings began on a low note in 1978 and improved in each succeeding quarter, a trend we found very encouraging. While we expect to see continued improvement during 1979, the cyclical pattern of the past year is likely to be repeated."

The oil strike in Iran, which is Gulf's second largest source of foreign crude, and the impact of the latest OPEC price increase could also hold down earnings during the early months of the year, he noted.

U.S. net income in 1978 was the highest in Gulf's history, reaching $514 million, or 10 percent above the $468 million earned in 1977. Canadian net income climbed 29 percent for the year to $138 million. As a result, Lee said, 82 percent of Gulf's 1978 earnings were generated in North America. Foreign net income declined 21 percent to $139 million.

In reviewing the performance of the company's principal business segments, Lee said that operating earnings attributable to worldwide petroleum activities increased 2.5 percent to $1.17 billion during the year with fourth-quarter petroleum earnings up by 12 percent.

"The largest single factor in this improvement was the turnaround in our U.S. refining and marketing operations," Lee said. A 13-percent increase in gasoline sales to 520,000 barrels per day, coupled with improved prices, enabled these operations to double their earnings contribution in the final quarter to $99 million. Full-year earnings of $234 million were 12.5 percent ahead of 1977 as a three-percent increase in gasoline volume more than offset a decline in distillate sales.

The production of crude oil and natural gas in the U.S. generated operating earnings of $559 million in 1978, a nine-percent increase from the prior year. Wellhead prices for both oil and gas were approximately 10 percent higher than during 1977, Lee noted, while geological, geophysical and wildcat drilling activity was reduced by $68 million.

Engineering Group Schedules Meeting

The South Plains Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers has scheduled a dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Gridiron Restaurant.

Marvin Misak, of Halliburton, will speak to the group on the topic, "Density Control Fracturing."

Cost to members and non-members for the program will be $8.50, with students admitted for $2.50.

Company Signs Oil Agreement

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (Special) -The Moroccan government and Occidental Petroleum Corp. have signed agreements providing for a thorough effort to develop Morocco's extensive oil shale deposits.

The first specific agreement calls for a technical and economic evaluation to determine the viability of commercially developing Morocco's oil shale deposits using Occidental's in-situ technology. This evaluation would be the first phase of a four-phase program that could be complete by mid-1985. Successful completion of all phases would result in the construction and operation of a 50,000 barrels-per-day modified in-situ oil shale facility.

An Occidental spokesman noted that the first phase would be funded by the Moroccan government and performed by both Occidental and Moroccan personnel. The work would be in addition to the programs being carried out in the United States by Occidental, directed at commercializing its in-situ process on a Colorado shale tract leased from the U.S. government.

Annual Award Announced By Organization

DALLAS (Special) -George M. Pavey Jr., board chairman of seismic Engineering Co., has been named recipient of the 1979 Offshore Technology Conference Distinguished Achievement Award for individuals. The presentation to Pavey will be made during the organization's Awards Luncheon May 1, in Houston.

Honeywell Inc., because of "distinguished contributions in applying advanced technology to remedy offshore petroleum problems," is the recipient of the 1979 Offshore Technology Conference Award for companies, organizations and institutions.

Pavey's numerous inventions and contributions to marine geophysical technology have become fundamental to the present day offshore oil exploration industry.

"The impact on the marine seismic industry was that geophysical exploration could be successfully carried out at high speed, not possible before, and at a reasonable cost," according to Pavey.

Pavey is responsible for designing and implementing seismic prospecting. That process includes "the detection of acoustic waves generated by some controlled means at the water surface, transmitted through the water and several miles of earth layering, reflected back to the water surface, and detected by a towed array of hydrophones."

The sound waves are then analyzed to determine whether the ocean floor contains any oil-bearing properties.

Pavey later applied the marine geophysical technology to solve certain anti-submarine warfare issues for the Department of Defense.

The award to Honeywell will be accepted at the luncheon by Dr. James J. Renier, president.

"Honeywell Inc. is extremely pleased to receive the 1979 Distinguished Achievement Award conferred by the sponsoring organizations of the Offshore Technology Conference. The advanced technology which has been applied to deep water drilling is an integral part of our broad-based activities," Dr. Renier said.

To extract petroleum from the ocean floor, a ship must remain positioned over the work site no matter how rough the seas. Ships have used long cables anchored to the ocean floor, but this proved impractical for deep water drilling.

$1,073,450 In Permits Approved

The Lubbock Building Inspection Department has issued permits for $1,073,450 in future construction activity, according to city records.

Residential programs accounted for $1,055,450 of the total, with commercial projects making up the balance of $18,000.

A duplex is scheduled to be built at 9705 Ave. X by Gene Turner. Expected cost is $69,000.

Two single-family homes have been scheduled in the 4900 block of 63rd St. by Norman Hargis, at estimated costs of $50,000 each.

Bobby Day will build homes at 6120 and 6428 38th St. for $38,000 each.

Ken Flagg has scheduled new homes at 5903 and 5909 13th St. Expected cost for each is $37,900.

Other single-family homes, with estimated cost and contractors, include:

La Quinta Adds 32 Rooms

Thirty-two rooms have been added to the existing 106-room La Quinta Inn-Civic Center in Lubbock at 601 Ave. Q, making a total of 138 rooms, the firm has announced.

The inn is managed by John and Maybelle Utt who have been with La Quinta for one year. They managed an inn in San Antonio before coming to Lubbock last fall.

Permanent financing for the project was provided by South'and Life Insurance Co. in Dallas. Interim financing was provided by Frost National Bank in San Antonio. General contractor for the project was Koehler Construction Co. of Seguin.

La Quinta defines its primary market segment as business travelers rather than tourist or convention groups. This eliminates the need for elaborate and costly public areas, banquet and convention facilities and allows for moderately priced rooms, typically as much as 20 percent less than its direct competition.

La Quinta has averaged above 80 percent occupancy each of the last six years in properties in which it has ownership interest as compared with industry averages of 65-70 percent. In fiscal 1978, La Quinta averaged 88.6 percent occupancy.

La Quinta Motor Inns Inc. presently has 74 properties open, with 22 properties under construction.

Realtors Set Sales, Finance Seminar

The Texas Association of Realtors (TAR) has scheduled a sales and financing seminar March 23 at the Lubbock Civic Center.

All real estate agents and brokers in the area are invited to attend the special program, according to Darryl Berry, president of the Lubbock Board of Realtors.

Berry said the West Texas seminar is one of five stops that the sales caravan is making during the Week of March 19. The Kennedy team will also visit Corpus Christi, San Antonio, Houston and Arlington.

Sam Young, a Houston realtor, author and lecturer, will lead a segment of the program.

"After a record-breaking year in home sales, the industry is facing new challenges because of the mortgage money crunch," Berry said. "Many sales will depend to a large extent on what kind of alternative financing a broker can locate. A good portion of the seminar will be devoted to the subject of financing in today's market."

Locating the right home for the prospect, use of showmanship, closing techniques and the use of questions in the presentations are topics to be covered in the seminar format.

Robert Stern To Head Architecture Program

Robert A.M. Stern of Robert A.M. Stern Associates of New York City will be guest lecturer Tuesday and Wednesday on the Texas Tech campus in discussions of interest to architecture students and any others wishing to attend the sessions.

Stern's appearance is sponsored by the Tech student chapter of AIA (American Institute of Architects). Stern has been involved as a member of the New York Chapter of AIA, the Architectural League of New York, and the Society of Architectural Historians.

He is currently director of Undergraduate Studies in Architecture at Columbia University and a visiting critic at several other universities. He also participated in the AIA National Convention panel discussions in Dallas last May.

Stern will appear at a barbecue dinner at the Ranching Heritage Center at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday and again at 8:30 p.m. at the Biology Auditorium (room 100). Wednesday lectures will be in the University Center's Coronado Room. A residential lecture will be given at 8:30 a.m. followed by a city planning lecture at 11:30 a.m.

Tickets for the lectures will be available at $3.50 each on the Architecture Building ground floor from 11:30-2:30 p.m., Monday, March 12.

Among groups in the festival will be a Kabuki version of "Sleeping Beauty" by the Empire State Youth Theatre Institute of Albany, N.Y., "Folk Tales of the World" by the Atlanta Children's Theater, and the New York City Opera Theater Young People's production of "The Toy Shop."

Commemorative Stamps Hail 'Year Of Child'

NEW YORK (UPI) — With the United Nations designating 1979 as the "International Year of the Child," many countries are expected to issue special stamps commemorating the period, with Great Britain and the United States leading the way, according to Alain de Cadenet, consultant to the British Post Office.

The BPO also will mark the 100th anniversary of the death of Sir Rowland Hill, "father" of the postage stamp, with a set of four commemoratives, de Cadenet said.

The London International Stamp Exhibition is scheduled for May, 1980.

PROBLEM
By G. Kodes, Hungary

White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

WHITE: "Blitz"
BLACK: "Belle"

1.P-K4	P-K4
2.N-KB3	N-QB3
3.N-B3	N-B3
4.B-N5	N-Q5
5.B-B4	B-B4
6.NxP	Q-K2
7.BxPch	K-B1
8.N-N6ch	PxN
9.B-B4	NxKP
10.0-0?	RxP(a)
11.KxR	Q-R5ch
12.K-N1	N-KN6
13.Q-R5	PxQ
14.PxNch	N-B6 d.ch and mate

(a) A tremendous move, which the audience enthusiastically applauded. If 11.NxN, Q-R5; 12.N-N3, QxN; 13.PxQ, N-B6 mate. Blitz gets blitzed!

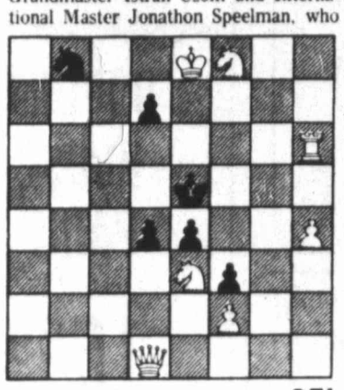
THE 54TH HASTINGS INTERNATIONAL CHESS CONGRESS
By Grandmaster Larry Christiansen

The 1978-79 Hastings International Chess Congress was won by the Swedish Grandmaster Ulf Andersson. Andersson was never really close to losing as he finished a full point ahead of his nearest rivals.



251

Behind Andersson at 8½ points were two Soviet Grandmasters, Evgeny Yasyukov and Alexander Kochiev, Hungarian Grandmaster Istran Csom and International Master Jonathon Speelman, who proved to be the top British player in this 54th Hastings event.

On their heels with 8 points were Grandmasters Larry Christiansen and Anatoly Lein of the U.S. and International Master Jonathon Mestel of England. At 7q4 points and just out of the prize money were Canadian Grandmaster Peter Biyasis and British International Master William Hartston. The fact that ten of the fifteen players managed to score beyond the break-even point is an indication of the tough competition of this year's tournament.

Other scores were: Shaun Taulbut at 5q4 points; George Botterill and Rumanian Mihail Suba at 5; US Master Jack Peters at 4 and M. Balsham of Isreal at 3.

This year's tournament was sponsored by International Computers, Ltd., in cooperation with the British Chess Federation. Here is an illustrative game from the tournament (my notes).

OLD INDIAN DEFENSE
WHITE: Larry Christiansen
BLACK: M. Balshan, Isreal

1.P-QB4	P-QB3
2.P-K4	P-K4
3.N-KB3	Q-B2
4.P-Q4	P-Q3
5.N-B3	B-N5
6.B-K2	N-Q2
7.0-0	N1-B3
8.B-K3	B-K2
9.P-Q5	0-0
10.N-Q2(a)	BxB
11.QxB	N-K1
12.P-QN4	P-QB4
13.PxP	PxP
14.QR-N1	P-QR3
15.P-B4	P-B3
16.P-B5	N-Q3
17.R-N3	QR-N1
18.P-QR4	B-Q1

24.PxP e.p.	PxP
25.N-Q1	N-KB1
26.R-KR3	K-N2
27.N-K3	K-B2
28.N4-B5	K-K1(c)
29.NxNch	QxN
30.N-N4	K-Q1
31.K-R1(d)	K-B2(e)
32.B-K1	N-Q2
33.N-R6(f)	KR-KB1
34.Q-N4	P-B4
35.PxP	Q-KB3
36.B-R4	P-KN4
37.B-N3	R-KR1
38.Q-R5	B-B1
39.P-Q6ch	K-B1
40.Q-K8ch	Resigns

(b)With the threat of 24.N-N6ch.
(c)If 28...PxN?; then 29.Q-R5ch, N-N3; 30.PxP, etc.
(d)A wasted move.
(e)Looks like he has castled again, Queen's side this time!
(f)Drifting into time pressure. Better is 33.N-K3.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

ARIES (Mar. 12 to Apr. 19) Attend a group meeting where lofty precepts are taught that help you handle problems more wisely. Evening can be a very happy one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use your best judgment today since your hunches are not very accurate or helpful. Day hours could be tense, but evening is placid and happy for you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Think out how to improve a close association and then put plan to work. Study the situation carefully. Evening then brings good results and you are happy. Think constructively.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to get those problems with others nicely ironed out during day. A loved one poses a question that you have to answer quickly. Be prepared for such.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Organize personal affairs better and then later you can be with good friends. Work to get rid of a fault which deters your progress. Avoid one who is jealous of you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good day for meditation and knowing how to make your life richer and more rewarding in the future. Being objective helps you get rid of problems you may have. Being social in the evening is fine.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You think it is impossible to gain your personal aims early, but if you are more objective, you find they are easily attainable. Daytime is not for partying. Be charming with others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Figure out how to gain more prestige in the outside world, which you feel is lacking now. Meditate and then contact the right people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get in touch with wise persons you know and get the advice you need now. Plan how to become more prosperous by your own good ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan how to have better relations with others, especially in business in the future. Don't take anything for granted. Doublecheck all facts and figures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care not to annoy a close tie during the day and then all works out fine in the evening. Plan time for civic or volunteer work before you go out for social pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A fine day to do favors for others who have been good to you in the past.

the COIN Box

By NORMAN DAVIS

"PAPER MONEY of the United States," by Robert Friederg, is in its 9th edition; Arthur and Ira Friedberg have revised this valuable reference book.

The 252-page volume is published jointly by the Coin and Currency Institute (New York, N.Y.) and Krause Publications (Iola, Wis.); the price is $17.50.

This catalog lists average retail prices for notes ("bills") in various grades, such as Very Fine and Uncirculated. For small-size paper, the number of notes printed also is shown.

Next coverage of modern small-size paper. This was first issued in 1929 (in the Series 1928).

Another short section lists encased postage stamps. These were protected by metal cases, and served as substitutes for coins. This is possibly the most detailed listing yet, and it's certainly the most easily available to collectors.

I think the publishers stretched things by claiming to give "detailed information" on every series. However, facts at the start of each series, and with illustrations, do provide a reasonable amount of basic information.

Paper money specialists won't need much urging to get this. For others, my usual advice holds true: examine the book in a library before you invest money in it.

In a general area, 192 pages of valuable facts make up "Coins Questions and Answers," by Carl Allenbaugh (Iola, Wis.: Krause Publications, Inc., 1978).

Information here ranges from basic (value of a 1964 Kennedy half-dollar) to advanced (probable fate of 12,000 silver dollars dated 1895).

Non-collectors will learn a great deal about our coins — and collectors can pick up surprising facts.

Next week: "Gifts For Collectors" — What to give and how to choose it.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

King Frederick IX of Denmark was born March 11, 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1888, more than 200 people died as a four-day snow storm crippled New York City. It was the blizzard of '88.

In 1930, William Howard Taft became the first president of the United States to be buried in the National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

In 1959, the Senate approved Hawaii as the 50th state of the Union.

In 1977, Hamaas Khaalis, the leader of the 12 Hanafi terrorists who took 100 hostages in Washington, D.C., two days earlier, was freed without bail on kidnapping charges but the 11 others were arrested and jailed. The hostages were released.

A thought for the day: American author Christopher Morley said, "If you have to keep reminding yourself of a thing, perhaps it isn't so."

just pick up the phone and

Plains National Bank has streamlined its installment loan department to save you time when you're shopping for a new car. We call the service Dial a Loan.

Here's how it works. Call us to say what you need and who you are. We'll check your credit and get back to you (usually on the same day). Then we'll prepare all the papers so that when you come in, all you do is sign. No waiting to see a loan officer. And no waiting for processing.

Next time you need a car loan, call Dial a Loan. Next time you need a bank, come to Plains.

THOMAS GONZALES

Gonzales Cited For Outstanding Ford Sales

Ford Division of the Ford Motor Co. has announced that Thomas Gonzales has attained membership in the Ford Society of Professional Sales Counselors for 1978.

Gonzales is employed by Gene Messer Ford at 19th Street and Texas Avenue, and has been a member of their sales staff since 1977.

He and his wife, Janie, have three sons and have lived in Lubbock for the past nine years.

City Woman Gets Honor

Audre Lipscomb, owner of Airways Advertising of Lubbock, has become the 13th annual Silver Medal Award recipient, the second woman to be so honored in the history of the 30-year-old Lubbock Advertising Federation.

Mrs. Lipscomb, who co-authored the college level text, "Radio and Television Continuity Writing," published by Pitman Publishing Corp., has worked for many years with several groups and individual students in the Journalism and Mass Communications Departments at Texas Tech. She also assists with publicity for the annual seminar sponsored by the Mass Communications Department.

Currently serving on the board of directors of the Lubbock Advertising Federation, she is also a member of Women in Communications Inc. and Zeta Tau Alpha social soriety.

The Silver Medal is given each year to the person deemed most contributory to furthering professional, ethical advertising in the Lubbock market and to helping university students achieve experience in the field of advertising.
