Convenience Store Night Jobs Risky For Women

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

It was nearing 4 a.m. and business had been slow that night at the 24-hour convenience store when a man walked in.

What was to follow turned into a nightmare for the 22-year-old female attendant at the 7-Eleven Food Store at 82nd Street and Indiana Avenue.

She was soon to become the victim of several violent crimes. And the attacks were about to take place while the woman worked at what many consider a dangerous job — operating a convenience store.

Being a female and working alone during the late night and early morning hours makes the job even riskier, authorities here say.

The young woman was working alone that Oct. 16. In the two months she had worked at the South Lubbock store, she had been moved from the 7 a.m.-3 p.m. shift to the graveyard 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift.

Before it was all over, the clerk had been threatened with a .44 magnum six-shooter, sexually assaulted, kidnapped and robbed. Lubbock police found the frantic victim naked and screaming on the front porch of a house near where she worked.

"It was terrifying," recalled the woman, who asked not to be identified, in a recent interview.

The woman's account of what happened backs up the consensus among area law officers that working at a quick-stop store is dangerous.

The man entered the business, pulled a revolver from his coat and ordered the woman to drop all the money in the two cash registers and a counter drawer into a paper sack.

The bandit then took the attendant into a back room, told her to disrobe and forced her into a sexual act. The man then put the woman into his car, drove around and then parked near the convenience store.

There, she said he attempted to have sex with her.

She was lucky in a sense. The man — apparently too intoxicated to stay awake — passed out, enabling the woman to slip the weapon out of his grasp and escape.

The store usually had a heavy flow of customers on Monday nights. "That night I didn't," she said. "I was just sitting there. I heard the door open. The first time I knew something was going to happen was when he started fumbling in his coat.

"I was scared...nervous. I went cold all over. When I saw him pull out the gun, I didn't give him a chance to say a word. I knew what he wanted."

The clerk thought the bandit would take the money and leave without firing his weapon. But when the man did not flee after snatching up about $160, "I just knew he was going to shoot it. When I was that close to feeling like I was going to get shot, I began thinking of my little boy. What is he going to do? What is it going to feel like to get shot.?"

She said that after the robber sexually assaulted her and forced her into his car, "he started talking nice to me. He said if the gun scared me so much he would just put it in the back seat.

"If he hadn't had the gun, I think I could have handled it. I could have fought."

Asked if she had thoughts of taking revenge after she got the gun, she said, "I couldn't have shot him in cold blood like that. But if he had woke up while I was standing there with the gun, I probably would have shot him."

The attendant had two more nights to work at the store when she was assault-

Khomeini Calls Conflict 'Likely'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Strongman Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said today the U.S.-Iranian crisis "likely" could turn into military war and that Iran should be prepared for the possibility of an economic blockade.

He called the conflict "a struggle between Islam and paganism."

"Now we are at war, a political and economic war," Khomeini told members of an Islamic anti-drug addiction society. "It is likely that the military war will also come along."

Khomeini made the remarks in a speech about Iranian problems resulting from the country's association with "foreigners" and colonialism.

"Foreigners can easily make us surrender by just closing their exports to us if our economy is a dependent one," the ayatollah said.

"Now they have threatened us with an economic boycott. Many governments have approved this. But the peoples do not approve."

The United States is expected to go before the United Nations Security Council sometime in the next few days to request it impose sanctions against Iran.

"While, in my view, these noises have no reality, if we give a very weak probability to this, we should be equipped. You are in a war situation, an economic war which is in itself a struggle between Islam and paganism."

Khomini said drug trafficking and addiction were a plot by the "superpowers" against Iran. The West, he added, "made the Iranian culture a colonialist one and made our youth Westoxicated."

Earlier, three American clergymen met for more than two hours with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh following the emotional Christmas services they held for the U.S. Embassy hostages that raised questions as to whether 43 or 50 are being detained.

But the clergymen slipped out a back door of the Foreign Ministry, eluding reporters. Their spokesman, Warren Day, said they had been told they would meet with Iranian religious leaders this afternoon, but that details of that session and the meeting with Ghotbzadeh were not immediately available.

Day also said the U.S. clergymen were scheduled to give interviews tonight with each of the three major American networks. "They want to do something with television as a way of communicating visually to the (hostages') families as soon as possible," he said, without elaborating.

In addition to the embassy hostages, the clergymen met with three Americans held separately at the Foreign Ministry since the embassy was taken over 53 days ago — Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen, Michael L. Howland and Victor L. Tomseth — and reported they found them in good health.

The Revs. William Sloane Coffin, Thomas Gumbleton and William Howard met for five hours early Tuesday with separate groups of hostages at the embassy, praying, singing carols and talking about football. "There were tears in their eyes, there were tears in our eyes," Coffin said.

Howard said he met with 21 of the Russian Units Reach Kabul

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Departing air passengers saw more than a dozen Soviet transport planes land at Kabul Airport in Afghanistan today to offload armored vehicles and hundreds of Russian combat troops, eyewitnesses reported.

"I saw between 150-200 Russian soldiers armed with rifles walk past us and there were considerably more in the staging area," one passenger said after his arrival in New Delhi.

It was the first time outsiders saw a landing of Soviet combat troops whose presence has been denied repeatedly by Moscow and Kabul. Radio Afghanistan on Sunday called "baseless" recent statements by the U.S. government that Soviet soldiers aiding the Marxist government of the Central Asian country had increased to about 5,000

Witnesses at the airport said the sound of approaching aircraft began about 11 p.m. local time Tuesday, and continued until 9:45 a.m. today, delaying an Indian Airlines flight to New Delhi by 45 minutes and an Ariana Afghan airlines flight to Frankfurt by an hour.

"It didn't seem as if they were concerned about being secretive," another passenger told The Associated Press. The observation deck atop the airport terminal was crowded this morning with well-wishers who could plainly see the Soviet troops arrive, he added.

AN-12 and AN-22 transports with Soviet markings kept their engines running during unloading and took off immediately afterward, said an Asian passenger, who like others interviewed asked that his name and nationality be withheld.

"Afghans at the airport were shocked to see the Russians, arriving in uniform and toting weapons," he said. "I saw some weeping."

One passenger, a capital resident, said it was the first daylight landing of Russian troops at Kabul Airport.

A report received here from Kabul said the troops might have been brought in to take part in a planned offensive which was expected to be launched later this week against rebel strongholds in Badakhshan province, northeastern Afghanistan.

Ore Carrier's Crew Missing In Pacific

A-J News Services

Four large ships, including three in North American waters, were in trouble today and searchers were looking for the Taiwanese crew of an ore carrier found floating upside down off British Columbia.

The Chilean Navy rescued more than 100 persons from the Swedish cruise ship Lindblad Explorer, which ran aground in Antarctica while filming a science-fiction movie. A skeleton crew remained aboard the ship today waiting for salvage tugs to pull the vessel off a reef.

In Milwaukee, the E.M. Ford, a freighter carrying dry cement, was partially submerged after high winds pounded it against the dock and ripped a hole in its hull.

A Panamanian freighter with a crew of 14 arrived safely in Galveston early today after taking on water and listing 20 degrees.

In the Pacific off the coast of Canada, searchers spotted a life raft but saw no sign of the 30 crew members of the 741-foot Lee Wang Zin after the ore carrier was discovered floating upside down in the stormy, cold waters, officials said.

The search began Tuesday for the Taiwanese crew of the vessel, loaded with iron ore for Japan, when authorities here received a weak and garbled radio distress signal. The ship, its hull torn, was found in the debris-strewn waters of Dixon Entrance.

The search for survivors was suspended when winds rose to 45-60 miles per hour, pushing waves up to 20 feet, said Lt. Cmdr. Dick Pepper of the Rescue Coordination Center in Victoria.

At Prince Rupert, tugboats and Canadian Coast Guard cutters waited in port for daylight and a break in the weather to resume their search for survivors, Pepper said.

Dixon Entrance, known for its frequent storms, lies between Prince of Wales Island in Alaska and the Queen Charlotte Islands of British Columbia.

Pepper said a radio distress message was received at 9:25 a.m. from the Lee Wang Zin, owned by Japanese interests and registered in Panama.

The mayday consisted of the same message repeated three times — "SOS. SOS. Three Echo Sierra Sierra (the ship's call sign)," said Lt. Tom A. Nies of the U.S. Coast Guard in Juneau, Alaska. "That's all they were able to make out."

A U.S. Coast Guard helicopter spotted the vessel and a life raft about 23 miles north of Rose Spit, the northeasternmost point in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

Storm Builds Up Over Southwest

A-J News Services

A major winter storm moving in from the west is expected to bring the area's unseasonably warm Christmas weather to a chilly end tonight.

The storm, which was dropping snow in Arizona and New Mexico this morning, brings a chance of rain and much colder weather for the South Plains and a winter storm watch for New Mexico tonight.

Occasional rain will begin tonight over the area, forecasters said, becoming widespread on Thursday. Lubbock will have a 20-percent chance of rain tonight and a 50-percent chance Thursday.

A chance of snow for the Panhandle and rain mixed with snow for the South Plains will continue on Friday, according to an agricultural weather advisory.

Precipitation should end on Saturday, with clearing skies on Sunday.

Some thunderstorms may erupt in southern portions of West Texas tonight, forecasters said.

The New Mexico storm will bring moisture into the Lubbock area, a weatherman said, and will allow low-level cold air to drop in on a northerly to northwesterly wind today and tonight.

Temperatures will be in the mid-60s today, mid-30s tonight and mid-40s Thursday.

Northerly winds are predicted to blow at 10 to 15 mph today and 15 to 20 mph tonight.

"It's going to be messy between Christmas and New Year's," the weatherman said.

New Mexico will have widespread snow late this afternoon and tonight, its statewide forecast said this morning.

Temperatures there will in the teens and 20s in the mountains and 30s in the south tonight and mostly in the 30s and 40s Thursday.

Travelers to New Mexico were warned this morning that occasional snow flurries in the Cloudcroft area will make travel hazardous at times on U.S. Highway 82 from Alamogordo to Cloudcroft.

City To Start Absentee Vote Friday

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Absentee voting begins Friday at City Hall for the Jan. 19 special election to determine whether Lubbock firefighters will get a 15 percent pay hike and collective bargaining rights.

On Oct. 1, the Lubbock City Council approved a 7 percent salary increase for all city employees, including the firefighters.

However, the Lubbock Firefighters Association contends that with inflation climbing at an average rate of more than 13 percent, the approved 7 percent raise would result in a pay deficit for the year 1980.

The firefighters are pushing for a 15 percent salary hike and collective bargaining rights, backing up their requests with petitions signed by more than 7,000 local voters.

According to Assistant City Manager Jim Blagg, the wording on the ballot for the special election will call for an 8 percent pay raise. If the issue is approved by voters, the firefighters will receive the 7 percent increase set for all city employees plus the additional 8 percent raise, Blagg explained.

Absentee voting polls will be open from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday in the City Secretary's Office, Room 206 at City Hall.

City Secretary Evelyn Gaffga said absentee ballots can be cast in two ways.

Proxmire Critical Of Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, the Senate's self-appointed fiscal watchdog, said today the first session of the 96th Congress ought to get a grade of D-minus.

"It was guilty of acts of both omission and commission," the Wisconsin Democrat said. "In my 22 years in the Senate, there have been few more desultory sessions."

Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, said "the biggest act of omission" was the failure of Congress to balance the budget.

In a post-Christmas statement evaluating the first session, he said the inability to balance the budget in a year of soaring inflation makes it "almost a forlorn hope that Congress ever will."

"Even when Congress acted, which was seldom, it more often than not acted unwisely," the senator said.

He complained that Congress created a new Education Department "at time when the public clearly wants a smaller, leaner, more efficient government."

Proxmire criticized the lawmakers for approving $1.5 billion in loan guarantees for the ailing Chrysler corporation "in a period when public opinion, and especially business spokesmen, adamantly opposed government interference."

"In a year of a Democratic president and a Democratic Congress, the oil lobby has seldom been stronger, largely getting its way on the issues of deregulation, price rises, synfuels and limited taxation," he said.

Proxmire, who grants a tongue-in-cheek Golden Fleece award each month for the worst example of government waste, said "the few issues of substance where there was some success were seldom greeted with cheers.

"Implementing the Panama Canal treaty, passing the trade bill and voting standby gasoline rationing legislation brought no dancing in the streets," he said. "And the SALT agreement didn't even make it to the starting line in the Senate."

Action on the SALT pact will be one of the top priority items when Congress ends its long Christmas holiday next month. Carter administration officials are pressing for approval, despite strong conservative opposition.

Proxmire nevertheless expressed hope that the second session of the 96th Congress will improve on the "desultory and D-minus" performance of the first session.

"But it will take some doing to improve the congressional report card," he said. "It will take a massive effort to bring it up above the mediocre level."

Gold Prices Top $500

The price hit $501 an ounce just before noon, said a spokesman for Republic National Bank, a major gold trader.

The level was hit in slow post-holiday trading after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said the U.S.-Iranian crisis "likely" could end in war.

"The Iran situation is continuing to push up the price," said a gold trader. "There's not too much action," he added.

The price hit the $500 level on a day when gold markets were closed in Zurich and London. The price of gold had closed in New York at $486 on Monday, the day before the Christmas holiday.

The dollar was stable in the Far East and on French foreign exchanges.

10-Year-Old Sought For Armed Robbery

WHEAT RIDGE, Colo. (UPI) — Police are searching for a 10-year-old armed robbery suspect who held up a photoprocessing outlet and escaped with an undisclosed amount of cash.

Police spokesman Mike Haider said the boy approached the clerk at a Fotomat store recently, pointed a gray handgun at her, and demanded money.

"The girl was in the Fotomat doing paperwork, and he came up and knocked on the glass," Haider said. "He was wearing a motorcycle helmet with a yellow face shield. She asked if she could help him, and he said, 'yeah, give me all your money.'"

The clerk told police the gun the boy had may have been a toy, but she didn't want to take a chance.

GOP To Strengthen Philosophy

By DON PHILLIPS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Republicans have a problem. Nobody understands them.

Unlike the 275 House Democrats, the 159 House Republicans have been philosophically consistent. They tend to have a basically conservative voting pattern and vote as a bloc. They feel they reflect the true feelings of the country.

They favor tax cuts, and they believe if they were in the majority they could cut federal spending at the same time.

House Democrats are all over the lot philosophically, and tend to break down in confusion far more often.

Yet when Republicans go campaigning or when they commissioned polls, they got the same message: the voters think Democrats run the country better.

Except for the perception Democrats do a better job, voters didn't seem to see much difference between the parties. So far as they were concerned, Congress was Congress.

The GOP was exasperated. The country seemed in a mood for their philosophy, but the country didn't know there was such a philosophy.

After mulling the matter, House Republicans decided on a risky course: extremism.

"If the country didn't realize the GOP was espousing the very philosophy they seemed to want, the only solution was to hammer the message home by loudly and consistently opposing — as a bloc — any Democratic-sponsored legislation that even seemed to hint of liberalism or big spending.

There was one problem. It would be impossible to get a consensus of GOP members on all spending measures.

For example, one of the most outspoken foes of federal spending is Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio. Yet Latta voted for Chrysler bail-out legislation because his constituents were directly affected and there was a chance a wrong vote could cost his seat.

The solution was to pick big but relatively safe issues to make the GOP stand.

The federal budget resolution and legislation increasing the ceiling on the national debt were obvious targets.

Opposing the budget or trying to cut it was no problem, because it merely set ceilings for spending in various broad categories. Any actual cuts in specific spending programs would have to come in separate legislation.

Washington Window

The debt ceiling was even safer — merely a ceiling on the amount the Treasury can borrow to pay debts.

Each measure had to pass in some form, meaning the GOP could watch the Democrats stew while they hammered home the message the days of a free spending, big brother government were over.

Several times both measures were defeated, only to be brought back time and again until the Democrats could muster enough members to pass them over GOP opposition.

During this period several reporters sat down with a middle-level GOP leader for an off-the-record briefing. The subject of the pending debt ceiling bill came up, and the leader said — to everyone's surprise — "I sure hope that passes."

But didn't you vote against it last time? Yes.

Are you going to vote against it again? Yes, but I know it has to pass.

Republicans hope their strategy will work in the 1980 congressional elections, but it is far too early to tell.

A few days before Congress was to recess for the year, GOP leader John Rhodes of Arizona and Policy Committee Chairman Bud Shuster of Pennsylvania told a news conference their GOP colleagues had supported them overwhelmingly on 41 "key" votes during the session, some by 100 percent margins.

They said that the voting pattern showed that if Republicans had control of the House there would have been a $20 billion tax cut coupled with a $10 billion cut in non-defense spending; a windfall-profits tax with a plowback provision allowing oil companies to escape part of the tax if they used the funds for further energy production; and "probably" a constitutional amendment to halt forced busing.

This may very well be. But no matter what their minority record shows, the real test will come if they ever are in the majority.

Wrestling with the specifics of spending and taxation is always harder than dealing with broad but easy issues.

That's why one-third of the Republicans who voted on the Chrysler bill were for it. And it was obvious several other had "taken a walk."

Philosophy is fine — until reality hits your constituents in the breadbasket.

Experts Predict Uncontrolled Scramble For Oil

By EDWARD ROBY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Among those keeping watch on the energy dilemma, only the optimists still fret about such inconveniences as cold houses and empty gas tanks for the 1980s.

The rest — government and industry officials alike — now brood over potential economic decline, the unraveling of old alliances and an unspoken threat of war.

They fear that in the next decade, soaring prices and sporadic supply interruptions may become routine as consuming nations vie in a topsy-turvy international crude oil bazaar.

"You can see any imaginable kind of calamity — supply interruptions; large, potentially massive drainage of currency and funds out of this country for oil imports," lamented Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., a key energy legislator.

Although huge fuel inventories point to an encouraging oil supply picture in 1980, energy experts are almost uniformly pessimistic about the long-range trend.

Unable to fathom the outcome of Middle East turmoil or even predict how soon gas lines might return, they are starting to warn of an era of cut throat bidding for scarce supplies as orderly oil trade disintegrates.

"The elimination of major oil companies as a huge sector that keeps order and logistical integration will create chaos," said Walter Levy, dean of U.S. Oil analysts. "Every indication is oil supplies will be tight, the price will be high and there will be a great deal of confusion."

John Lichtblau of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation agreed "the evidence is everywhere" that the role of big oil is shrinking and normal supply and demand channels may be breaking down.

As Energy Secretary Charles Duncan put it: "We may reach a situation of an uncontrolled scramble for bilateral deals in a tightening market with every man for himself — a sellers' market where exorbitant prices, tied-in economic concessions and the temptation of political accommodations become the prevailing currency."

Even OPEC, a lonely oasis of market stability, is losing control as members disregard price ceilings and scrap export contracts to seek killings in the volatile spot market.

With recession slowing the economy and rising prices forcing conservation, Iran's cutoff of U.S. oil is expected to have minimal effect on the American consumer. But the impact could be dramatic if more large exporters followed suit.

Such a development would be a real test of solidarity for Western consuming nations that pledged under the International Energy Agency to share crude oil supplies with fellow members facing severe shortages.

"If it doesn't work, the whole Western alliance could break up," said Lichtblau.

Punitive oil interruptions would have to escalate well beyond the Iranian cutoff to provoke a military response, but analysts agree a potential for hostilities is there.

With luck and conservation, Americans may scrape through the coming year without serious shortages.

But officials believe our dependence on vulnerable foreign oil sources will continue to exact unforeseen economic, social and national security costs for the rest of the century.

"In terms of energy supply and cost to the country in imports, we're in bad shape," says Dingell.

Imports of oil, the premier fuel of our economy, has cost about $60 billion in 1979 and probably will cost much more in 1980.

The importance of oil to our society is a matter of simple arithmetic.

The United States, with only 6 percent of the world's population, produces about 16 percent of its energy resources while consuming 29 percent.

In fact, the total annual U.S. energy appetite of about 75 quadrillion British thermal units, is 25 percent more than that of Western Europe and Japan combined. And half of all the energy Americans use is oil.

U.S. oil production, currently about 8.5 million barrels a day, has been dropping for a decade. Imports, currently 8 million barrels of crude oil and refined products, have risen apace to meet almost half of our total needs, which now average 17 million barrels daily.

If the downward trend in domestic production continues, as geologists say it must, imports would have to rise to prevent unemployment and maintain some economic momentum.

But a new CIA study projects that dwindling reserves and decisions by exporting countries to cut back production will cause world oil output to peak in the mid-1980s. Several large export nations have announced cuts that could add up to 2.5 million barrels or more a day in 1980.

Analysts also say that any dip in OPEC production below the 1979 level of 31 million barrels daily will keep prices headed upward in 1980. But if OPEC's output falls well below 30 million barrels, shortages in the consuming countries are certain.

Despite the figures and the gas lines, Americans remain skeptical about an energy crisis.

Dingell said a consensus on energy policy is emerging slowly in Congress. But many politicians, labor spokesmen and consumer advocates like Ralph Nader and the Energy Action Foundation continue to oppose oil price decontrol. The industry has resisted the windfall tax that is to finance new programs like synthetic fuel development and energy efficiency.

Edwin Rothschild, director of Energy Action, believes it makes no sense for government to decontrol domestic oil prices so they can catch up with those set by a foreign oil cartel. Oil, which acts as a price magnet for lesser energy sources, must remain a regulated commodity, he said.

On the opposite side, Leif Olsen, chief economist of New York's Citibank, believes oil price controls and the windfall tax are misguided because they both prevent capital formation.

"When you do not allow income to flow to capital formation, you are benefitting at the expense of future generations," he said.

The wisest thing government can do is decontrol prices and leave the rest to the private sector; realistic prices would spur energy efficiency and production, he said.

That strategy was proposed by the Mellon Institute and endorsed by the natural gas industry. Roger Sant, author of the Mellon study, believes if society were forced to choose the least costly fuel for a job, use of electricity and oil would decline 50 percent and 30 percent and reliance on gas and conservation would increase.

Many politicians agree price decontrol may be the most important step taken so far to combat the energy crisis because it forces conservation.

"I think decontrol is going to do as much to move the United States toward conservation as anything else we're doing," said Dingell. "Conservation is the only thing we can do in the short term."

The Harvard Business School energy project reached the same conclusion in its best selling study, "Energy Future." Dan Yergin, co-author of the book, says cost-conscious industry has already reduced its growth in energy consumption to zero.

A hefty gasoline tax is one conservation tool used in Europe and recommended by Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., that has proven unpalatable to Americans.

Although dozens of officials, beginning with President Carter, call conservation the quickest, cleanest, cheapest and surest way to reduce imported oil, Dingell said it is not being adequately financed.

The payoff for solutions like synfuel is small by comparison and at least a decade away. Although atomic power is hobbled by political problems, fuels like coal and gas are showing immediate growth potential.

Unfortunately, nothing currently available can replace oil in the transportation area where half of it is used.

For two centuries, seemingly limitless resources of land and energy have fed an expanding U.S. economy and nurtured democratic institutions occupied with the pleasant task of dividing up growing wealth.

Former Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who calls energy an intractable problem and warns of a "revolution of declining expectations," thinks scarcity can stretch those institutions to their limits.

Although the long-range forecast is bright for a nation as blessed in resources as the United States, Schlesinger fears the near future may be a trying time, punctuated by supply crises and recessions.

Park Launches New Project

GRAND LAKE, Colo. (AP) — A one-year program aimed at curbing abuse of the outdoors has been launched in and near Colorado's Rocky Mountain National Park.

Named "Project Explore," the program emphasizes the preservation and protection of wilderness areas.

Founder of the project is Peter Simer, director of an outdoor leadership school at Lander, Wyo., who says he is trying to teach the skills required to use the wilderness and leave it unscathed for the next adventurer.

Support for the program is provided by Camp Trails, a national camping outfitter that set up a common pool of extra backpacks, sleeping bags, tents, outdoor clothing and other camping equipment for use during the one-year project.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

No Air Tragedy 'Rerun'

IN PUTTING the blame for the worst air disaster in the nation's history primarily on maintenance procedures followed by American Airlines, the National Transportation Safety Board in effect says that such tragedies need not be repeated.

After a seven-month investigation, the NTSB said a 10-inch gash in an engine mount led to the May 25 crash of a DC-10 in Chicago that killed 273 persons.

American's practice of removing the engine and pylon as one unit, rather than follow the manufacturer's maintenance manual, caused the rupture, the safety investigators concluded.

The board's staff also listed as contributing causes McDonnell Douglas' design of the engine mount, which the board said made it vulnerable to damage, and deficiencies in the Federal Aviation Agency's inspection and reporting systems.

IMPLICIT IN the board's finding of probable cause is that future crashes can be avoided if airlines are more diligent in their maintenance procedures.

This helps explain why the FAA already has cracked down on several airlines, including those that serve Lubbock, for alleged safety violations since the Chicago crash.

Even after the engine separated from the wing of American Flight 191 on take-off, however, the investigators determined that the DC-10 was not necessarily a doomed aircraft.

When the crack in the engine mounting gave way and the engine somersaulted over the wing, extensive damage was done to hydraulic fluid lines and electrical cables.

AS A RESULT, cockpit instruments failed to warn the crew that the plane was about to stall. Had he known that, the pilot could have put the nose down and exerted full power on the two remaining engines.

With that, the investigators said, the pilot could have picked up enough speed to circle back and land safely.

Thus, while the crew couldn't be blamed, the design made the craft vulnerable to damage and American's maintenance procedures resulted in that damage, the NTSB said.

As with the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island, this shows again that modern technology has produced machines that can be used in complete safety but that constant diligence is necessary to keep human error from leading to tragedy.

Judi Smith, during an evaluation of the Foster Grandparent program at the Lubbock State School, came across some written comments that reaffirmed that certainty.

"The reason I came to Lubbock State School was to meet some personal needs, such as to supplement my income and to fill a void spot in my life," Mrs. Myrtle Nesmith began.

She added: "Not knowing the needs of these children nor ever having visited a school of its kind, I met my need and found a whole new world of usefulness.

"I found a place where I could spend my elderly years being helpful to others and giving love to children who were so in need of love and special attention."

Foster Grandparents work directly with the students, giving "special attention and special love" which the workers at the school don't have time to give, Mrs. Nesmith said.

"I have seen in my (seven years of experience here) children rise from crawling on their stomachs to walking long distances across the campus. Talking when they never uttered a word before. All brought about by the concentrated efforts of the Foster Grandparents," she continued.

Mrs. Nesmith concluded: "If you could see the shining eyes and hear the laughter that comes from a twisted little body in a wheelchair and hear her screeching in a loud and happy voice the word 'Granny' as her Foster Grandmother approaches, you would understand why I think the program is so great."

By guaranteeing $1.5 billion in loans to Chrysler, Congress—Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock included—says in effect that no matter how much the company and its employes conspire to run costs up in excess of revenues, Uncle Sammy will be there to bail them out.

The public gets it in the neck both ways: Prices to them as consumers go up and away, then taxes on them as taxpayers get heavier.

ALL THAT CONGRESS should have done to help Chrysler should have been to repeal the overzealous portions of the environmental and other regulations it has slapped on the industry, running up prices, in recent years.

Congress failed in that responsibility, though. Instead, it rushed in with loan guarantees. This is a clear signal to management and labor in other industries to forget about cost controls and productivity and just gouge the public for all they can.

That, of course, will bring on wage and price controls and the socialists will be in full control of the economy, just like they've always wanted.

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Court Is Breath Of Stale Air

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court is reeling from the revelations of Bob Woodward and Scott Armstrong's "The Brethren." No need, just yet, for impeachment, or for citizen's arrests of the justices. The shock is of another order.

As with the (expurgated) Nixon transcripts, there is no overt breach of law—only a certain unedifying tone.

Its portrait of spite, deceit, waffling, collusion, sloth, pettiness, bias, incompetence, and don't forget senility assures the casual follower of the court that the decisions he didn't read are probably as bad as the ones he did read.

THE CRITICS HAVE presumed what the very fabric of this book seems to refute: that the court is fundamentally serious, if sometimes misguided, in its pursuit of constitutional meaning.

The joke's on us. "The Brethren" is a gossipy mosaic of the court's arbitrariness.

We should not be surprised, really, that a sequestered and secretive body of nine men should advance their own political prejudices while invoking the Constitution.

Many people like an "activist" Supreme Court, just as many have liked an "imperial Presidency."

It can't be wholly accidental that just as the one mystique died with a Nixon Presidency, the other is coming to an end with the Nixon Court.

THE ACTIVISM OF the Earl Warren era was not only tolerated but celebrated, like the Roosevelt Presidency.

Yet the rather obvious fact is that the court is our most authoritarian institution: a tiny elite of nine men, unelected, appointed for life, nearly unremovable, remote, not responsible to the people they help govern.

In recent years, however, the Burger Court has repeatedly offended liberal opinion. And so criticism of the court has moved from the recondite law journals to the front pages.

For a generation we have been told that the court should promote social change. Times change, the Constitution has to change, too. But in that case, why bother having a Constitution at all?

The whole idea of judicial review is that the court should act as a brake: representing a permanent law, it should restrain the whims of sitting legislatures.

Alexander Hamilton lays it out in Federalist No. 78: the point is not to give irresponsible power to the court as such, but to keep the legislative power in line with the people's original delegation of power to the federal government.

The will of a current majority must always be subordinate to the abiding will of the people as a whole.

The Supreme Court's specific function is to preserve the rationale of our form of government, not to make innovations of its own as if it were itself a legislative body.

Hamilton stresses that the court is to have "neither FORCE nor WILL, but merely judgment." Its decisions are only as good as the reasons it can advance.

This conception of the court's role is a far cry from the sloppy dogmatism, the oracular vagueness, and the secretive authoritarianism we have grown accustomed to.

As a practical matter we could open the institution up and air it out by limiting justices to a single term of, say, 12 years. This would humble the court without crippling it, and prevent the gathering of such misty vapors as have been released by "The Brethren."

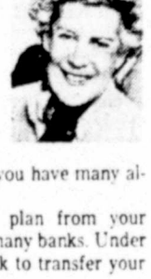
Sylvia Porter:

Payroll Deducts Solve The Secret To Saving



WASHINGTON—The only sure method I know to save from a weekly paycheck is to start out by considering saving as one of the "essential classes of outgo" in your budget.

Saving is, in fact, the least obvious—but among the most vital—of all your "expenses."

In your budget for fixed, unavoidable expenses, put down a total you can reasonably expect to save each month.

Treat savings as an expense and budget for savings as you budget for rent or mortgage payments, and you will discipline yourself into building a nest egg.

Pay yourself first—as soon as you get your paycheck—and your small monthly totals will become big totals over a period of time.

INCLUDE IN YOUR savings total an emergency fund equal to at least two months' income, to cover you should you be hit by big unforeseen expenses such as illness, unexpected home repairs, moving expenses.

Note: The emergency part of your savings fund should be kept in a readily accessible ("liquid") form.

As a starter, earmark 5 percent of your total monthly income for savings, and boost the percentage from there if you can swing it.

If you have already saved the recommended equivalent of two months' income, freeze this amount as your emergency reserve.

While you may want more or less than two months' income in reserve, be guided on this basically by the size of your other financial cushions:

THE AMOUNT OF unemployment compensation for which you are eligible in the event that you are laid off or fired from your job and cannot find another one; the amount of your disability benefits which would be paid under Social Security or by your employer or through your health insurance policies; other health insurance benefits due you in the event of a medical crisis; your nonworking wife's ability to take a job if an emergency arises or, if she has a job, to carry the family for a period; your credit-worthiness.

If you haven't the fund on hand now, figure how much more you will have to save before you reach the total.

Then decide how long a time you'll need to save the amount necessary to lift your fund to the proper level.

Don't try to save the extra amount too fast. Decide what you can put aside each month until the fund is assured and continue putting the funds away until your emergency reserve is equal to the suggested level.

Once it is there, keep it at that comfortable level.

AS FOR HOW you will save, you have many alternatives today:

(1) An automatic deduction plan from your checking account is offered by many banks. Under this plan, you authorize the bank to transfer your specified sum at fixed intervals.

You will receive the bank's stated interest rate on the amounts you accumulate in your savings account in whatever form is most favorable to you.

(2) Payroll savings plans are offered by many corporations under which a portion of your paycheck is automatically deducted (by your authorization) and also is deposited in a savings account.

(3) Under other corporate employe savings plans now available to millions, a corporation may add its own contribution to the amount you authorize to be deducted regularly from your paycheck.

Your savings then may be invested in U.S. savings bonds, mutual funds or company stock.

YOU'LL FIND MANY other intriguing and important guides as you investigate on your own.

Whatever method you choose, these fundamentals will remain unaltered:

The "secret" to saving is to put aside little amounts regularly and let the little amounts mount up to big totals.

The great value of your emergency reserve is protection for you against the unexpected and thus preservation of your peace of mind when the unexpected comes.

John D. Lofton:

Feds Need Holiday Every Day

WASHINGTON—Virtually every one of my cost-conscious conservative cousins in the Congress have their hearts in the right place. They want to save the American taxpayer money.

But a few of these just haven't yet grasped what the problem really is. Take, for example, the recent House debate over Martin Luther King Jr. and whether his birthday should be made a national holiday.

Arguing against this idea, Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio—a man tighter than most with a federal buck—declared:

"We are talking about shutting down for one day the productivity of this country. Now, a lot of people say, well, it is not going to cost anything as far as the federal government is concerned.

"WELL, THEY ARE talking nonsense, because there is over $20 million that will have to be paid for premium rates or wages for people who work for the federal government during a legal holiday; you will have to pay the federal employes who do not work something over $200 million.

"This would be a cost to the federal taxpayers of this country at a time when they say you are spending too much already."

Latta said that maybe the best way to pay tribute to the late Dr. King would be for federal employes to work an extra day on his birthday, "thereby increasing productivity and helping lift the plight of the downtrodden by reducing inflation."

Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., a veritable Scrooge when it comes to spending federal tax dollars, agreed with his colleague from Ohio. He observed:

"In addition to the direct costs associated with this bill, I think it is important to recognize that the closure of federal offices for even one day would have an unnecessary adverse impact on the public.

"I am sure that we all have constituents with a variety of claims from federal agencies, such as Social Security, Workman's Compensation, and veterans' benefits.

"THERE ARE SO many different programs that the people of this country are involved in that one more day of closed doors for federal employes would be, I think, absolutely unacceptable to the people in need."

Fine. But I seriously question the premise that the best way to do this is to keep the federal government open for business.

Considering that which the federal government is most adept at producing—inflation and more red tape to further entangle the private sector—would the shutdown of the federal government for 24 hours—during which time it ordinarily spends about $1.5 billion—truly be as calamitous as my conservative brethren say? I think not.

Remember: Every harmful piece of legislation ever passed by Congress, every ridiculous new federal rule and regulation, was put into effect, not on a national holiday, but on a regular working day!

IF THE CONGRESS of the United States is seriously interested in saving federal tax dollars and increasing productivity, what is needed is not just one more national holiday, but 365 national holidays (366 during leap years)!

Impossible, you say? Not at all. Consider the following events, the anniversaries of which could have all been celebrated just this month:

The world's first drive-in gas station opened in Pittsburgh (1913); Edward G. Robinson (1893), Ty Cobb (1886) and Rudyard Kipling (1865) were born;

In 1911, Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen and four men reached the South Pole via dogsled; also in 1911, Russia was expelled from the League of Nations; both the Boston Tea Party (1773) and the Wright Brothers' flight of the Flyer (1903) occurred;

For the first time (1820), Missouri ordered a tax of $1 a year on bachelors between the ages of 21 and 50; in 1929, "Lady Chatterley's Lover" (the book, not her lover) was banned in Boston; James Nason of Franklin, Mass., was awarded a patent for his invention of the coffee percolator (1865);

SIX MEN BELONGING to U.S. and Russian Mennonite groups were injured in a riot over the ownership of a goose, at Tripp in the Dakotas (1888); chewing gum was patented by William Semple of Mount Vernon, Ohio (1869); and, last but not least, in 1891, in a prize fight in Indianapolis, a woman beat a man of some reputation as a pugilist, winning a $500 prize.

See, a national holiday for every day of the year wouldn't really be all that difficult, assuming, of course, that the Congress is truly interested in saving money—an assumption for which I see very little basis.

Lightly Speaking

He was not making a joke. The guy bought a house for $95,000 about 15 years ago and now finds it "worth" about $400,000. "It's really weird," he said. "Here I have this house worth three times what I paid for it but I can't sell it because I won't be able to buy anything half as good, and now it's falling apart because I can't afford to have it painted. Needs a new roof, too. But on paper, I'm loaded."

Maybe the older generation missed a lot of fun, but not very many of us ever threw our back out when we caught our beard in our stretch socks while tying our jogging shoes.

California High Court Upholds Libel Suit Against Club

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has let stand an appellate court decision that school teachers are not public figures and thereby may file libel suits.

The high court last week refused without comment to review an appeal by the national Elks fraternal order, which was sued for libel by a high school social sciences teacher who was criticized for using a book of radical writings in her classroom.

The Elks had asked the court to review a Court of Appeal decision that reinstated a complaint filed in 1972 by Virginia T. Franklin, a teacher at San Rafael High School.

A year earlier, Mrs. Franklin bought copies of the book "Movement Toward a New America" for use in an American government class.

According to the appeals court, the book was a "pistache of underground writings concerning revolution, sex and drugs, vividly illustrated and replete with vulgar language." The court said the teacher used the book to "expose left-wing propaganda and militant black rhetoric ..."

The Elks lodge in San Rafael and a number of parents protested, and the school board limited use of the book to selected excerpts.

The national Elks group was sent clippings and correspondence on the matter by the local lodge's Americanism committee.

The Elks Magazine published an editorial in October 1972 strongly criticizing the book. Court records show it also claimed Mrs. Franklin "had been relieved from teaching the same sort of rot in the Paradise school system" after complaints from parents and the American Legion.

Mrs. Franklin was a temporary teacher in Paradise, Calif., in 1967. The editorial claimed she had been rejected by 62 other schools before being hired at San Rafael.

Mrs. Franklin maintained that the editorial was erroneous and demanded a retraction. She denied ever being fired at Paradise or being turned down by other schools.

Marin County Superior Court issued a summary judgment in favor of the Elks, saying Mrs. Franklin could not meet requirements for libel actions. The court said she was a public figure and had not shown that the Elks used malice in publishing material she claimed was libelous.

The Court of Appeal said on Oct. 23, however, that Mrs. Franklin was not a public figure and could sue for libel.

Someone does not become a public figure by mere involvement in a matter attracting public attention, the appeals court said.

New Image Sought By Shippers

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek shipping fleet is trying to spruce up its image after coming under sharp criticism for a poor safety record and charges of modern-day "piracy."

The aging fleet, third largest in the world, has more than twice as many losses from shipwrecks as the world average. It has to pay special surcharges for insurance and has recently been the target of attacks in the West German and French press.

Greek shippers strongly defend their record and say competitors are trying to steal business by spreading bad publicity about them. But the government has recently taken several steps to control the less reliable members of the Greek shipping fraternity.

First, harbor officials have begun to make strict spot checks of Greek vessels to ensure they meet safety standards and have proper documents. They're enforcing a special rule, unique among major shipping nations, that bars a vessel from carrying the Greek flag if it's more than 17 years old.

In addition, parliament is considering a bill that calls for minimum jail sentences of two years for stealing cargoes. Greek shipowners, particularly smaller ones, have been widely accused of "vanishing" with valuable merchandise and then covering their tracks by changing the name and nationality of their boat.

In a recent article the German magazine Der Spiegel dubbed Greek shipowners the "Mafia of the seas." It described several cases of "contemporary ocean piracy."

Responding to the article, the Ministry of Merchant Marine said "the majority of the Greek shipping industry is in the hands of shipowners well-known to the international shipping world, and with a long family tradition in shipping."

Costas Carras, a leading shipowner, noted the true guilty parties in such crimes are often people who rent, or charter ships for periods of a year or more, and steal cargoes without the owner's knowledge. He said it isn't fair to blame the Greeks alone, because the charterers can be of any nationality.

The Greek-flag fleet is of 50 million tons and follows the fleets of Liberia and Japan in size.

Another major complaint by Greek shippers is an insurance surcharge of up to 50 percent on certain Greek ships imposed last year by the Lloyd's underwriting firm of London. The Greeks said their accident record wasn't exceptionally high when compared to the size of their fleet.

President Lets Merger Stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has approved the merger of Pan American World Airways and National Airlines, authorizing one of the largest mergers in U.S. airline history.

The Civil Aeronautics Board approved the merger in October on the condition that National's lucrative Miami-London route not be transferred automatically to Pan Am.

In a letter to Marvin Cohen, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the president said Saturday: "I do not intend to disapprove the board's orders within the 60 days allowed by statute."

William T. Seawel, chairman and chief executive officer of Pan Am, said he hoped the merger will be completed by mid-summer.

A CAB hearing is continuing on applications by a number of airlines, including Pan Am, which are seeking the Miami-London route.

Briton Cutting Stones For St. John's

NEW YORK (UPI) — Curious trade, stonemasonry. Not much call for it today. Mainly cathedrals, whose great gray stones erode. Not so the towers of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, which never were there in the first place.

St. John's ("the Unfinished," as it's sometimes called) does not appear from its west front to be the largest Gothic church in the world. Without those towers, it seems to lack the authority.

World War II ended the construction that began in 1892. A year ago, with fanfare, the cathedral announced a $20 million plan to build the towers. Each stone would be cut on the site, by hand. Only, whose hand?

"Cathedral Stoneyard" — Chris Hannaway always answers the telephone this way at his office in a steel-frame building on the north end of St. John's 13 acres in upper Manhatten, just below Harlem.

Hannaway arrived from his home in Liverpool, England, last June, bringing with him a wooden toolbox of implements 70-odd years old. "It cost me 50 pounds to have it shipped," the master mason said.

He was hired away from his job completing the Anglican Cathedral in Liverpool to train five young apprentices and supervise the cutting of Indiana limestone that will become the towers of St. John's.

In his office are hundreds of small cards with directions on how each stone should be cut. The plans were drawn by master builder Jim Bambridge at his home in Winterborne Stickland, Dorset, England.

"I could just as easily do the job on the moon," Bambridge once said. He leaves for New York next month to check progress on the stonecutting, which began last July.

Twelve-foot-long gray slabs of limestone, stacked inside the work building, are broken into thirds by use of mallet and points, then slid into a huge circular saw and and cut into workable sections. From here on, the work is by hand.

THE CAPITOL

Calendars Reported Missing

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — There must be a grinch prowling the halls of Congress, stealing Christmas calendars.

There hasn't been so much excitement on Capitol Hill at yuletide since Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W.Va., booted a visitor dressed as Santa Claus out of a closed-door energy conference two Decembers ago.

Rep. Beryl Anthony Jr., D-Ark., took to the floor of the House to reveal the dastardly calendar-theft to his colleagues.

"Mr. Speaker," he declared, "during the time of Christmas, when everyone is supposed to have the spirit, I would just like to announce that someone found this spirit, found my storage bin across from 506 Cannon Office Building, and ... they ripped me off of 700 historical calendars."

Several members seemed to gasp.

"I find it highly irritating that in the nation's capital we would have someone who would go around the halls ripping people off," said the congressman.

"I would challenge every member to inquire of his or her staff, if they have acquired additional calendars, wherein they received them," he roared.

Rep. Frank Thompson, D-N.J., chairman of the House Administration Committee, offered another possibility.

The House voted in 1978 to halt the practice under which each of the 435 House members get 1,500 free calendars each Christmas to give to constituents — a tradition that costs taxpayers an estimated $1 million a year.

Despite that vote, the calendars were issued again this year under a technicality that prevented the ban from taking effect.

So Thompson told Anthony:

"I might suggest that the gentleman looked at the list of those who voted against getting the calendars with the thought that perhaps some of them may have changed their minds and have gotten them surreptitiously..."

Anthony said he had notified Capitol Police of the larceny and officers were searching for the culprits.

Animals Cause Stir

The calendar grinch wasn't the only creature stirring in the Capitol.

Democratic Whip John Brademas, D-Ind., was holding an end-of-session news briefing in his Capitol office when first one, then a second mouse scurried across his carpet.

Or was it the same mouse just darting in and out?

Meanwhile, down the hall, in front of House Majority Leader Jim Wright's office, two pigs were oinking. Their squeals were carrying up and down the marble-walled first-floor main corridor.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. ambled out to find out what the racket was. Wright explained that his longtime aide, Craig Raupe, was retiring to a farm in Texas and that the two pigs — in wooden crates — were gifts, one from the Texas delegation and the other from the staff.

Wright boasted that it was probably the first time there had been pigs in the Capitol since the 1880s, when he noted it was not uncommon for barnyard animals to roam around on the ground-floor level.

"I don't know about that," said a less-than-impressed O'Neill. "But I do know that if those two are here long enough, they'll make this place smell like a barn."

Former Cambodian Ruler Maps Return To Power

By JOHN HEDGES

PARIS (UPI) — He has been king, president, prime minister, moviemaker, jazz composer and journalist. Now more than anything exiled Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk wants to be a savior.

"I am Cambodia's only hope," the 57-year-old prince said in a recent interview. "Only I can save my people from total extinction."

Sitting in a modest Paris apartment provided by the French government, the diminutive and portly Sihanouk sometimes broke into high-pitched, nervous laughter or bit back tears.

"I don't sleep well these days," he said quietly. "There is so much to do."

A decade ago, Sihanouk ruled Cambodia with a benevolent hand and deftly kept the Indochinese war from spilling into his sleepy country, balanced like a political tightrope walker between the United States and communist bloc.

Now he is "chairman of the Confederation of Khmer Nationalists," at the start of a worldwide tour to raise funds, seek arms and mobilize an army for a new liberation of Cambodia.

Sihanouk plans to spend a month in the United States in March and says he has been assured of a meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance.

Nearly 1,000 Cambodian refugees awoke before dawn to cheer the prince on his arrival in Paris, treating him more like a ruling head of state than an exile. His former subjects remember not only his peaceful regime but his non-political sidelines.

Earlier this year he put the finishing touches on his latest movie, "Rose of Bokor" — a World War II story about a likeable Japanese colonel, played by Sihanouk, who falls in love with a Cambodian beauty, played by Sihanouk's wife, Monique.

Once at a film festival in Phnom Penh he showed three movies, all with identical credits — Producer: Norodom Sihanouk; Director: Norodom Sihanouk; Script: Norodom Sihanouk; Music: Norodom Sihanouk; Stars: Norodom and Monique Sihanouk.

One of them won the festival's grand prize.

As a journalist he once served as the "royal correspondent" for the French satirical weekly "Le Canard Enchaine," reporting to it at length about the king's "follies and mistakes." In Cambodia he published, edited and almost entirely wrote three magazines.

Sihanouk — the-sports-fan — managed his government soccer matches in the same way he governed the country. The palace team played the National Assembly regularly, with Sihanouk as referee.

He says he has given up jazz, another of his passions, because he is "too old." Yet recently in Peking he hosted a birthday party where he composed a few ditties, crooned into the microphone and entertained guests with his saxophone.

Sihanouk's political career began when the French installed him on the Cambodian throne as king in 1941. He was 18.

Shortly after his country gained independence from the French, he abdicated in favor of his father, taking the post of prime minister. After his father's death he became president, but retained his princely title.

His 29-year rule of Cambodia ended in 1970 when Lon Nol, his finance minister, toppled him in a coup. He then began an ill-fated, five-year alliance with the Khmer Rouge against the American-backed Lon Nol regime.

Despite this alliance, Sihanouk became a virtual prisoner when Pol Pot's murderous rule began in 1975. Among the millions killed under the Khmer Rouge were 19 of Sihanouk's children and grandchildren. The prince and his wife narrowly escaped to China after the 1978 Vietnamese invasion.

"I will never, never, never support Pol Pot, who continues his genocidal policies even now," the prince said in an interview. "And I will not set up a government in exile. I will set up a govenment, but it will be from within Cambodia."

Both China and North Korea have tried unsuccessfully to convince him to again support the Khmer Rouge.

Earlier this year he broke up a Peking banquet given in his honor by Chinese Premier Deng Xiaoping by saying, "Let's not discuss the Khmer Rouge or we shall soon be throwing plates at each other."

But Sihanouk's search for support for a new liberation began badly. France, his "second country," rebuffed his proposal and Sihanouk left a Dec. 14 meeting with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing openly disappointed.

"If I do not succeed in my trip, I intend to return to Pyongyang, because you know my best friend, my only friend outside Cambodia, is (North Korean) President Kim Il Sung," Sihanouk said.

Since the Vietnamese invasion, Sihanouk has enjoyed a regal if isolated existence, shuttling from Peking to Pyongyang, North Korea's capital, where Kim had his army build the prince a palace within the space of a few weeks.

From there, indulged with fine imported wines and caviars, the prince was allowed to organize his Confederation of Khmer Nationalists in September.

His political program is clear. Sihanouk wants to assemble an international conference on Cambodia which would pave the way for a new government based on internationally supervised free elections.

Sihanouk hopes to mobilize Cambodian refugees around his Confederation. He will visit his countrymen living in Sweden, West Germany, Great Britain and Singapore as well as in the United States.

"I propose the press help me hold a referendum among Cambodians, in the West and in the refugee camps, to see exactly who they support," Sihanouk said. "You will see I have at least 80 percent of the support of those people."

Asked why Vietnam would withdraw from Cambodia and abandon its puppet regime there, Sihanouk said international economic and political sanctions against Vietnam and a military campaign under his command would force Vietnam to withdraw.

"We should imitate the Vietnamese in their fight against the United States," the prince said.

"The Vietnamese are our Americans. If allowed in Thailand I will lead an army against the Vietnamese and create the same difficulties they created for you Americans. The Vietnamese only understand the language of force."

Sihanouk's bitterness against the United States for the Nixon administration's decision to bomb Cambodia is strong. He vehemently denies he tacitly approved the 1969-70 bombings, as former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger contends in his memoirs.

"I have proof that I never approved the bombings. I will bring it to you," he said, striding out of a room furnished with inexpensive prints, a formica-topped coffee table and a plaster bust of Marie Antoinette. He returned with a batch of large white envelopes labeled with headings like "U.S. Aggressions" or "Vietnamese Aggressions."

"There have been so many aggressions against Cambodia, oh so many, that I have to mark these envelopes like this," he said, laughing.

Sihanouk drew from one envelope back issues of his "Cambodia" magazine in which photographs depicted the mangled bodies of bombing victims.

"Look at that, look at that," he whispered, pointing at a picture of a young woman dead in a field.

"If you were Sihanouk, you could not approve the bombing of your population," he roared with sudden force. "Kissinger is out to deceive the world in his memoirs by saying Sihanouk approved the bombing. I spoke out. Look at this magazine.

Officials Observe Golden Rule In Managing Georgia Town

THE ROCK, Ga. (UPI) — Mayor Clifford Clark says the Golden Rule way of running municipal government is alive and well in The Rock, but that a little dash of rigid law may be necessary to keep it that way.

Citizens of The Rock have enjoyed for decades what they think is the best kind of government — no local taxes or business licenses and no police force. Town projects are supported by donations from the residents, who pay what they wish.

Elections have been held only when the mayor and four city councilmen got tired of holding office.

It is, in effect, a town that orders its affairs mainly by the principle of the Golden Rule of "do onto others as you would have others do onto you," said Clark. But Clark now perceives the need for some uniform laws to protect the town.

The Rock acquired its name from a large rock that once jutted out of the ground along the old stagecoach road serving the community. Legend says people began leaving messages and letters at the rock for pickup by the stagecoach. A post office was established there in 1853 and the town was incorporated in 1877. The rock, however, was blasted out of existence in the 1930s to make way for a new road.

Clark, known as the "Golden Rule mayor," recently was re-elected by a one-vote margin, defeating Frank Holcomb, 20-19. All but one of the town's qualified voters cast ballots.

Prior to that, the mayor and council defeated a move by liquor forces to open a beer and wine store in the town limits.

Clark, who has been mayor for 13 years, said his victory means the citizens of The Rock, a town about 65 miles south of Atlanta, will continue to be free of local taxes and that as many disputes as possible will be settled under the Golden Rule.

"I believe in the Golden Rule 100 percent. If two parties are in conflict and we can't settle it, we'll go to the ballot box," said the mayor.

As for taxes, Clark said, "We need food, clothing and shelter first. We need to survive first. Until there is a surplus of money in the pockets of the people in the city of The Rock, we will not be throwing away money on neon street lights."

The move to get a beer and wine store in The Rock focused Clark's attention on the needfor some laws. The county is legally dry but Clark said there was nothing in The Rock's charter or other law to prevent the store from opening in the town limits.

The mayor hurriedly called an emergency meeting of the council and the town fathers passed The Rock's first ordinance in 30 years. It prohibited the sale of beer and wine.

Representative Requests Investigation Of NFL

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — All Walter E. Fauntroy wants for Christmas is an instant replay, live and with a different outcome.

Since he can't have that, he has asked for a congressional investigation of professional football, which he won't get either.

And all because the Washington Redskins' 1979 season was one second too short.

Fauntroy represents the District of Columbia in the House. He doesn't have a vote, but he does have a mimeograph machine.

He cranked it up after the Redskins lost to the Dallas Cowboys, 35-34, and left the field arguing that the clock should have been stopped with one second left, giving them a shot at a game-winning field goal.

It would have taken some kick — 59 yards to be exact. And it may be that the Redskins, Fauntroy and the rest of their fans may get more off-season mileage out of laments about the way they were short-timed than they would with the memory of a missed, marathon field goal attempt.

Of course it might have succeeded, in which case outraged Texans would be claiming that the officials let the game run a second too long.

Since Washington came up short of time and points, Fauntroy has taken his outrage to the House Commerce Committee, demanding an investigation of the National Football League and its officiating.

"I have become so disillusioned with the integrity of the National Football League that I cannot help but wonder if it was possible for the Redskins to win the game under any circumstances," Fauntroy wrote Rep. Harold O. Staggers, D-W.Va., the committee chairman.

Since the Redskins held a 13-point lead before they fumbled the game away in the closing minutes, that seems an overstatement.

Fauntroy said it wasn't sour grapes on his part because "similar controversies have occurred in virtually every NFL city this year."

But he wasn't moved until the 16th game of the season turned out to be the last one for Washington.

There was a time when almost any outrage, real or imagined, prompted calls for a congressional investigation. But the old investigation ploy was overworked. It got to be a cliche, and the more astute publicity-seekers devised other ways to get attention.

They sue, or convene unofficial hearings, or form lobbying groups.

Still, the demand that Congress investigate has its advantages. For one thing, the politician doing the demanding can say that he is not pre-judging the outcome.

"Some fans believe that the games are rigged, either to achieve fans' support or television revenue," Fauntroy said. "I am not prepared to take such a position at this time."

For another, it is possible to attack on more than one front. So Fauntroy said the House committee should look into the role of television in the NFL, and also should consider the impact of professional gambling.

"Millions of dollars are bet on professional football games every week, and certainly it would be naive to think that professional gamblers would not do everything possible to gain an advantage," Fauntroy said.

They probably do, but the gamblers got no edge on the Dallas-Washington game. The Cowboys beat the Redskins, but they didn't beat the point spread. Dallas was favored by nine, so a bet on the Redskins was a winner.

Which is more than you can say about the notion of a congressional investigation prompted by their defeat.

Bureau Of National Affairs Makes Large Profits

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Bureau of National Affairs in Washington sounds like just another government agency but it's a successful — and unusual — private business, owned entirely by its employees.

One of the most successful of the country's few worker-owned companies, BNA was created by the late David Lawrence, the Washington correspondent who also founded U.S. News & World Report.

It is a specialty publishing firm that grossed $62 million in 1978 and expects to do about $70 million this year. Its stock, issued at $10 a share in 1947, currently is priced at $600 but the only people that can buy it are BNA employees. It also pays very good dividends.

Although it issued stock until 1947, Lawrence founded BNA back in 1929 to push very specialized periodicals of interest to business firms.

The first was U.S. Patents Quarterly. To anyone not passionately interested in patents, it wasn't thrilling reading but it contained lots of useful information and that has been the tone of BNA publications ever since.

Now there are 50 of them, a few daily news letters and the rest weekly, monthly, semimonthly or bimonthly guides to a variety of more or less esoteric business fields.

Lawrence was one of those chaps who had to have as many irons in the fire as he had fingers and toes — a widely-syndicated newspaper political column, a radio program, two weekly general newsmagazines, which eventually were merged, and a lot of other things.

He decided in 1947 he could no longer give BNA the kind of management it needed and it wasn't making big enough profits in those days to set the world afire. So he suggested to some of the top hands that they buy the company.

This inner group insisted that everyone be given a chance to buy in. John D. Stewart, now president and editor-in-chief of BNA, was one of the original stockholders. He had joined the company as a writer in 1939. He became its president in 1964 and under his leadership it has grown until it now has 1,400 workers.

Sixty-seven percent of these own stock. Any employee can buy shares after one year of full-time service or five years as a part-timer. No one may own more than 5 percent of the company.

Not all the employees expected the stock to increase in value or the business to become so profitable. One veteran concedes frankly, "I expected to have to cash in my shares to pay living expenses. Instead, the dividends have enabled my wife and me to help our children buy homes. So I won't sell the shares. Why kill the goose that lays the golden eggs?"

As president, Stewart said, one great joy in running a worker-owned company is "that Wall Street isn't looking over management's shoulder and pushing for growth at any cost. The voting stockholders are around all year and they're in position to see that there are years when it is necessary to give up something in immediate profits in the interest of long term stability and growth."

The foundation of Switzerland was laid in 1291 when the free community of the valley of Schwyz joined with those of Uri and Nidwalden for collective defense, primarily against hostile German and French elements.

You and the Law

Presented by the State Bar of Texas

Q: There is a factory nearby that advertises for help claiming they offer paid vacations and pension plans and good working conditions. I know for a fact that they only allocate these benefits to those they choose and find loopholes to get out of paying others. Isn't there a law against such false advertising?

A: A Texas law forbids "false, misleading or deceptive acts in the conduct of trade or commerce," mainly in the sale of goods and services. A company legally may award fringe benefits, such as vacations and pensions, to particular employees — such as salaried workers or those with at least a year of seniority. It is illegal, however, for a company to use an employee's race, sex, religion or age to determine who receives fringe benefits.

Q: Is there a law in Texas excluding stocks and bonds as community property? If so, what legal rights would I have? My husband refuses to make a will and the stocks and bonds are in his name.

A: At your husband's death, everything owned by either of you would be presumed to have been community property. At such, one-half will remain your property. The other one-half would either pass under your husband's will, if he made one, or under Texas laws of intestate distribution.

Stocks, bonds, and other investments bought during marriage are treated no differently. They are presumed community unless either party can show they were owned before marriage, or were purchased during marriage by clearly separate funds. The name on the certificate does not determine ownership.

Q: My divorce will become final next week. Must I wait a certain length of time to marry after a divorce has been granted?

A: The parties divorced may marry each other at any time. However, neither party to a Texas divorce may marry anyone else for 30 days following the date of divorce. A marriage entered into during this time is voidable, which means it may be annulled by the innocent spouse within one year.

Q: I was married by a minister in 1976, lived with my wife for three weeks and separated. Now I want a divorce. I have been told I don't need a divorce because my legal name is not on the marriage license. Am I legally married and do I need to get a divorce?

A: The fact that you got married under an alias does not change the fact that you are married. If a marriage was performed, then you need a divorce or an annulment in order to terminate that marriage. The fact that you used a name other than your legal name on your marriage license is irrelevant. You can legally use any alias in Texas as long as you do not use it for purposes of fraud.

Q: My husband Tom and his ex-wife Mary were divorced in Louisiana after 30 years of marriage. Mary got all the furniture and Tom got all the debts, amounting to $25,000, plus alimony under Louisana law. Tom left Louisiana for Texas five years ago and he hasn't paid alimony since the first year. Now Mary is threatening to get a judgment against him. Since Texas doesn't have alimony, can it be collected through a judgment in Louisana? Can they put Tom in jail if he can't pay up?

A: Yes. A valid Louisiana judgment is enforceable in a Texas court upon compliance with proper procedure. Whether or not Tom would go to jail is a matter of Louisana law. In Texas he would not be subject to jail for non-payment of alimony.

Send your questions to "You and the Law," State Bar of Texas, P.O. Box 12487, Austin, 78711. Answers may appear in columns in hypothetical terms; personal answers not possible.

Woman Says Fight Not Fair

SOUTH WEYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Diana Peckham, whose father is an Olympic wrestling coach, says she didn't get a fair fight when comedian Andy Kaufman wrestled her down in a nationally televised match.

KAUFMAN

"I could have won legitimately, but it's his ballgame and we had to play under his rules, which were one-sided," said the 26-year-old physical education teacher.

Miss Peckham wrestled Kaufman, best known for his role on the television series "Taxi," on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" last week, answering his offer of $1,000 to any woman who could pin his shoulders in a three-minute match.

Miss Peckham, a 6-foot, 160-pound teacher at Norfolk County Agricultural School, said Kaufman used moves that are banned in amateur wrestling. She also said the mat was smaller than regulation size and the referee was Kaufman's manager.

Her father and coach, James C. Peckham, is athletic director at Emerson College and an Olympic wrestling coach. Her grandfather, Alex Peckham, 74, was a professional wrestler in the 1930s.

Probe Of Hansen Requested

NEW YORK (AP) — A New York congressman says he will ask the U.S. attorney general and the House Ethics Committee to see if Idaho Rep. George Hansen violated any laws or congressional rules in his visit to Iran.

Hansen, who startled the White House and State Department on Nov. 21 by flying to Tehran on what he called a "mission of mercy," left Monday on a second unofficial trip to help free the hostages held at the U.S. Embassy. He told an Idaho newspaper, however, that it was not definite he would be going all the way to Tehran.

Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., said the Idaho Republican is exposing the nation and the hostages "to real risks" by involving himself in the standoff.

He said he would ask for investigations to see if Hansen was violating any House rules or the Logan Act, which prohibits unauthorized persons from negotiating with foreign countries.

A State Department spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said Monday he was "unaware" of Hansen's trip or plans, and refused to discuss the potential impact of a return to Iran by Hansen.

Peyser charged that "with a few misplaced statements or acts," Hansen "could completely destroy" President Carter's efforts to resolve the problem.

Hope Moves Into New Home

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — It took eight years, but comedian Bob Hope has finally moved into his new home in the exlusive Southridge section of this desert resort.

HOPE

Family friends said Hope's wife, Dolores, moved into the modern, mushroom-shaped residence last Tuesday and that they were entertaining the families of their four adopted children over the holidays.

The house reportedly has 14,000 square feet of interior space over several levels and is covered by a 25,000-foot-square roof.

Construction began in 1972, but on July 24, 1973, the home was gutted by a fire ignited by sparks from a welder's torch. The $500,000 loss was covered by insurance.

The outer structure has been under reconstruction since 1977, when a new building permit was issued for repairs.

ALL ABOARD AMTRAK 200 — Passengers on the "200 Club" car of an Amtrak train between New York and Princeton Junction, N.J., don't have to fight for a window seat. They have reserved seats, attendants and a bar area. (AP Laserphoto)

Amtrak Operates Private Club On New York-Philadelphia Run

ABOARD THE AMTRAK 200 (AP) — Railroad buffs and commuters might like the ride aboard Amtrak's luxury "200 Club" car. It's got reserved, plush velvet seats, an attendant and a bar.

But most travelers don't qualify for the only daily private club car in the national Amtrak passenger railroad network.

You can tell by the sign taped to its glass door: "Reserved. Special Party. Private Car. 200 Club. Members Only."

Outside, conductor Vince Christmas stands guard.

"You can't go in there — that's a private car," he shouts over the roar of engines and swaying metallic train sounds.

Officials at federally subsidized Amtrak and members of the 200 Club don't like to talk about this country club of commuter cars, part of a regular Philadelphia-to-New York commuter train.

The first 200 Club passengers board at Princeton Junction, N.J., at 7:52 a.m. and arrive in New York at 8:47 a.m. They leave New York at 5:33 p.m. for the return trip and are scheduled to arrive in Princeton at 6:27 p.m., Amtrak officials said.

While he wouldn't permit a visit, Christmas agreed to ask the club president to meet with a reporter to discuss the club and its car.

So here he comes, a handsome, well-dressed, middle-aged man who smiles and extends a handshake. He offers his name, but it's lost in the drone of train sounds.

"We pay $25,000 a year to lease this car before paying for tickets," he says. "Anybody can join by seeing me and we do have openings. But we don't want any publicity."

No, he doesn't want to be a spokesman for the club, tell how many members there are on the 41-seat car, identify any members by name or by job title.

And no, he won't repeat his name or say anything else, thank you. Still smiling, he lets the glass door to the car close between him and the reporter.

"This is a unique relationship," said Amtrak spokesman Brian Duff. "We're in the business to sell transportation and that car provides a substantial amount of income for Amtrak."

Duff wouldn't say just how much Amtrak makes on the exclusive car arrangement. Amtrak, the National Passenger Rail Corp. set up by Congress in 1970, received an estimated $610 million in federal operating subsidies this year, he said.

Duff said Amtrak decided to continue the long-standing practice of supplying a private car to the Princeton Junction-based 200 Club, which was set up after World War II by the Penn Central Railroad.

"If you've got the money to buy up a car and we have the equipment, we'll sell it to you," he said.

Conrail, a private rail corporation set up by Congress in 1976 with a $2 billion federal loan, also is involved in the private commuter car business, along with the state of New Jersey.

Conrail has three private commuter cars, all on the North Jersey Coast line from Bay Head to New York.

Conrail also was reluctant to discuss details. After several days, Conrail officials referred questions to the state Department of Transportation.

The Monmouth Commuter Club pays $8,000 annually for each of two cars owned by the Department of Transportation, said state spokeswoman Debbie Lawlor.

In addition, the Jersey Coast Commuter Club owns its own car, but pays the state $12,200 annually for services, she said.

Dolphin Gives Birth To Female In Niagara Falls Aquarium Tank

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — As excited human nursemaids outside the aquarium tank cheered, Gabrielle nudged her wiggling infant to the surface for that first breath. The dolphin mother's month in labor was over.

While dolphin pregnancies are believed to last about a year, officials at the Niagara Falls Aquarium had been saying "any day now" since October.

Aquarium staffers who had been keeping a 24-hour tankside vigil since labor began Nov. 14 were rewarded Christmas Day when Gabrielle gave birth to a 3½-foot female calf.

The baby was quickly named "Christmas" by the onlookers, but a contest will determine the permanent name of the young mammal.

"I'm very relieved and happy," said consulting veterinarian Shakeen Nakeeb. "We've been waiting for this a long time."

The first hint of Gabrielle's pregnancy came earlier this year, when she "quit working" an aquarium staffer said. In May, a fetal heartbeat was detected.

Heavy contractions began late Tuesday morning, and with the appearance of the calf's tail at 12:24 p.m. excitement began to grow.

As the moment of birth drew nearer, Gabrielle obliged her human wellwishers by hovering near the glass panels where they sat. The crowd greeted each contraction with cries of "Come on, girl!" and "You can do it!"

By 1:40 enough of the calf had emerged to make it clear that the tank's new resident would be a female. The calf's dorsal fin appeared 20 minutes later, the signal that the end of Gabrielle's long pregnancy was near.

Coasting slowly, Gabrielle rose to the surface for a gulp of air.

Then, as the fin emerged, followed by the rest of the calf, Gabrielle turned a quick somersault under her already swimming new-born to push it to the surface for its first breath.

On the other side of the glass, about 20 delighted surrogate parents clapped and cheered.

"I was very pleased to see she was not in pain or distressed," said Nakeeb. "It was an easy delivery, I'd say."

While births among dolphins in captivity are not unheard of, the chances of its happening are "pretty slim," John Nicholas, a marine mammal biologist at the National Marine Fisheries Service Laboratory in Woods Hole, Mass., said in a recent interview.

"If it does happen, I'd say it's pretty neat," he said, and the aquarium filmed the event for others who may need aid in a dolphin birth in the future.

The birth was the second for 22-year-old Gabrielle. Five years ago, when she was living at a Cape Cod, Mass., aquarium, she gave birth to Spray, who shares her tank at Niagara Falls.

Jovian Moon May Contain Life In Ocean

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Life may exist in a subsurface ocean on the pock-marked icy moon of Europa, one of the four moons of Jupiter visible to the naked eye, a space scientist said today.

Richard C. Hoagland said the moon of Europa may be the most likely place in the solar system to search for alien life beyond Earth.

"The Voyager 2 findings leave little doubt that Europa, Jupiter's second major satellite, is covered with a crust of ice perhaps five miles thick that envelops a global ocean possibly 60 miles deep," said Hoagland, a NASA consultant.

If water exists, life forms may also exist in a kind of "incubated" environment below the ice cover of Europa's cracked surface, he said.

Hoagland, who studied data sent back from Voyager 2's flyby of the Jovian environment last July, discussed his theory for life on Europa in the January issue of the astronomy magazine, Star & Sky.

The magazine's publisher, Terence Dickinson, said in a telephone interview from Ontario, Canada, that Hoagland's 8,000-word explanation, "The Europa Enigma," was one of the most dramatic ever published.

"It is the first time in nearly a decade that reasonable evidence has been presented suggesting a previously ignored world could be an abode of life," Dickinson said.

Hoagland said previous speculation of life on three other galactic bodies — Mars, Jupiter and Saturn's moon, Titan — is now doubted because of spacecraft investigation.

"Europa seems to have what these other worlds do not, an ocean of water — the prime prerequisite for life as we know it."

Hoagland said life in Europa's ocean not only could exist, but should exist because at one time — perhaps a billion years ago — conditions were suitable for the ocean to be free of ice.

"Jupiter was once a miniature sun according to our current concepts of solar system formation," Hoagland said. "It only lasted a short time — a few million years at most — but for that brief period, Europa probably basked in energy as rich as any streaming toward earth today."

Teens Give Conservative Viewpoints

DENVER (AP) — Outstanding teenagers today are more conservative than their counterparts from the early 1970s and, more often than not, want to be doctors or lawyers when they grow up, a nationwide survey shows.

Rand McNally & Co. surveyed 50,000 high school students included in "Who's Who Among American High School Students" for the 1978-1979 school year and found that only 8 percent said they smoked marijuana and 8 percent favored living together before marriage.

In 1972, about 27 percent of the "Who's Who" teen-agers surveyed said they smoked marijuana, and in 1971, about 47 percent said they supported cohabitation.

In addition, two-thirds of the students polled this year said that they favor censorship, but in 1971, most opposed any kind of censorship.

This year's crop of students opted for careers in professional fields when asked what they wanted to do. Forty-one per cent said they wanted to be doctors or lawyers, while 21 percent said they would choose business administration as their field.

"Who's Who" was created in 1967 to provide national recognition for outstanding juniors and seniors in the nation's public, private and parochial high schools. There were 355,000 students listed in this year's edition.

A spokesman for publisher Rand McNally said that the results of the survey of politics, morals and other contemporary issues has shown throughout the years that teen-agers aren't the activists they have been made out to be.

"What's been overlooked by the chroniclers of youth is a whole group of kids who never succumbed to the trends of the times, the nation's outstanding teens."

To illustrate this point, the publisher said that 78 percent of those surveyed from among current students in "Who's Who" said that they had not had sexual intercourse and 87 percent said they would not have a child without being married.

Other survey results:

—Three years ago, 43 percent of the students felt a woman should have both a career and be married to be fulfilled. In this year's poll, the number dropped to 32 percent.

—Three-fourths of today's survey group said that religion played a significant role in their lives. In 1972, 63 percent made the same statement.

—In 1971, about 85 percent of the students surveyed said they would pay additional taxes to support anti-pollution programs. Less than half of today's respondents said they would be willing to part with extra tax money for such an effort.

Joint Plan Sought For Chicago Schools

CHICAGO (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson doesn't want to meet with bankers and city officials about the school district's financial problem unless those officials are willing to participate in a funding plan, his spokesman says.

The spokesman, David Gilbert, refused to say Tuesday if Thompson would attend a meeting of bankers and city officials planned for today.

School board President Catherine Rohter invited Thompson to attend the meeting, aimed at trying again to solve the financial crisis which left the school system's 48,600 workers without paychecks last week.

"The state should not be the sole source" of bailout funds, said Gilbert, Thompson's press aide. He said the governor is ready to talk "as soon as there is some indication that there will be participants other than the state of Illinois. Now he's getting the door shut in his face."

Thompson was assailed by Mayor Jane Byrne and others for refusing to allow the state to loan the Chicago schools $50 million now and $50 million next month. Thompson turned down that plan last Friday and said he would be willing to help only if the city and local banks also would commit funds toward helping the schools. The mayor and the banks refused.

Gilbert said the governor still was hoping to come up with a joint plan.

He also said Mrs. Byrne should decide whether the schools are among her top priorities. If so, Gilbert said, she should look for ways to trim her city budget so that "the city can be a partner in any kind of financial bailout."

Thompson said last week he would be willing to allow the state to loan the schools $25 million if the city and Chicago banks would loan the schools $12.5 million each.

Wood Heaters Take Extra Care

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The increased popularity of wood-burning stoves as a source of winter het has brought increased concern about fire safety.

Experts say the stoves themselves generally are not dangerous, but improper installation and carelessness are causing problems.

"Wood heaters require much more human attention and humans always have and always will make mistakes," writes Jay W. Shelton, author of "Wood Heat Safety," a recently published book. "If you expect wood heating to be as simple and safe as an occasional adjustment of a thermostat, then stick to electricity, gas or oil."

If you are willing to take a few precautions, Shelton says, "heating with wood probably involves no more risk than do many other accepted choices and activities in life, such as living in a region with polluted air..."

Sales of wood-burning stoves have soared along with prices of conventional fuels. From 1972 — the year before the Arab oil embargo — to 1979, sales increased almost tenfold.

There are no national figures on the number of fires relating to wood-burning stoves. But the Insurance Information Institute, a trade association, says local statistics show the problem is growing.

In Oregon, for example, the institute said officials report that wood-heating units were the third most frequent cause of home fires during 1978. New Hampshire officials who investigated more than 750 fires involving damages of $5,000 each or more in 1978 found that nearly 15 percent of them were caused by improper installation, maintenance or use of wood-burning stoves.

The insurance institute has put together a fact sheet on wood safety. It is available, at no charge, from the institute's New York office, 110 William St., New York, N.Y. 10038. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Before you buy and install any wood-burning stove, check local building and fire codes to make sure you will be in compliance with the law. Shelton says it is also a good idea to notify your insurance company, in writing, of any change in your heating system so you are protected in case of trouble.

Select a stove made of a sturdy material like cast iron or steel. Look for stoves listed by Underwriters' Laboratories or other recognized testing services. If you are buying a used stove, check for cracks or other defects. Small cracks probably can be repaired with stove cement; larger cracks probably need welding by an expert.

Think carefully about where you want to install the stove. Avoid putting it too close to a stairwell; you could wind up losing most of the heat to the floor above.

Leave plenty of space between the stove and any combustible wall or ceiling surface. Standards developed by the National Fire Protection Association recommend a 36-inch clearance. If the length of the stove pipe prevents you from allowing that much distance, protect the combustible wall with a panel of fireproof material.

Lubbockite Dies In Shooting

By JEFF McCASLIN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 21-year-old man was shot to death shortly before midnight Tuesday in the parking lot of an East Lubbock nightspot after he had left the club to check on his automobile, police said.

Romero Viller Vargas of 1608 Broadway, No. 2, was found lying in a pool of blood between two cars in the parking lot of the Che Che Club at 1819 E. Broadway about 11:49 p.m. with a single gunshot wound in the head, according to police.

Justice of the Peace Charles Smith ruled the death a homicide at the scene and ordered an autopsy, which was being performed this morning at St. Mary's Hospital. It was the city's 31st homicide of the year.

According to reports, Vargas had told a woman companion that he was going to check on his car in the parking lot about 11 p.m. The woman told police that when he failed to return, she became worried and left to check on Vargas about 30 minutes later.

The woman found Vargas lying on his back between two cars in the parking lot. She told police she went back into the nightclub to get two friends and returned to the parking lot to check the vital signs of Vargas and then called police.

Preliminary reports indicate Vargas had no money in his wallet and police said they knew of no motive in the shooting. Detectives were still investigating the incident late this morning.

One witness told police of seeing Vargas' former girlfriend and her son in the night club. That witness said, however, that she didn't see anybody leaving the club with Vargas and that Vargas didn't appear to have any trouble with the woman or her son before the shooting.

Detectives said they had few leads in the incident, because Vargas was an alien and had no relatives living in Lubbock.

Denver City Man Held In New Mexico Killing

LOVINGTON, N.M. (Special) — A Denver City man was held this morning by Texas authorities on charges of murder and aggravated battery stemming from a Monday night hit-and-run incident outside a Lea County nightspot.

Jose Antonio Gutirrez, 30, was awaiting extradition to New Mexico following the incident in which one man was killed and four others injured.

Florencio Sotelo, 23, of Denver City was killed when a motorist ran over him twice in the nightclub parking lot, Lea County Sheriff's Deputy Dale Silva said this morning. Sotelo was pronounced dead at the scene by medical investigator Paul Mallory at about 10 p.m. Monday.

Injured, but reportedly not hospitalized in the incident, were Elisio Perez, of Plains; Raymond Flores Vasques, Ignacio Cardenes, and Ernesto Salina Barrientez, all of Denver City.

The victims reportedly had been fighting with Gutirrez and two other Mexican-American males, who also were in the white over blue Chevrolet used in the hit-and-run, Silva said.

Two material witnesses also are in custody, according to Silva.

Post Men Hurt In Shootout

POST (Special) — A Christmas Eve shootout here has left two local men in a Lubbock hospital and a third in the custody of the Garza County Sheriff's Office.

Pablo Soto, 34, of Post has been charged with aggravated assault in connection with a shooting incident that occurred about 8 p.m. Monday at a local nightspot.

Wounded were Antonio Sotelo, 50, and Lucio Rodriguez, 46, both of Post, according to Chief Deputy Donney Walker.

Sotelo was listed in satisfactory condition today at Lubbock's University Hospital with wounds in the chest, head and lower back. Rodriguez also was listed in satisfactory condition with a gunshot wound in the left knee.

Walker said two men armed with small-caliber pistols began shooting at each other at the club. Sotelo was also "pistol whipped," Walker said.

1980 Devoted To Space Shuttle

By Al ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The space agency is closing out a year of frustration in its effort to get its space shuttle orbital transport off the ground.

There is hope 1980 will be when everything comes together and the revolutionary rocket plane takes off from Cape Canaveral on the first of four test flights.

Serious new problems pushed the date for shuttle's maiden space flight from March to June to November — and finally into the new year. The date still is slipping, with September now considered the most likely date.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says there are four chances out of five that the shuttle will be able to fly before the end of 1980.

Program manager Myron Malkin said two major problem areas remain — the shuttle's big hydrogen-burning main engines that will push it into orbit and the thousands of silica tiles that will protect the ship from the heat on its return to Earth.

NASA is devoting most of its attention to the space shuttle program. It is the key to the nation's future in space and many of the spacecraft now on the drawing boards are to be carried into orbit by the shuttle.

Science Today

There are only nine other space launchings on NASA's 1980 flight schedule and all but one are missions of other government agencies and the International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium — Intelsat.

Up first, on Jan. 17, is the launch of a communications satellite for the Defense Department. It will be launched from Cape Canaveral by an Atlas-Centaur rocket of the type that has been flying for 15 years.

Next, on an Delta rocket that has even older origins, will be the launch of NASA's only unmanned scientific mission of 1980 — a satellite designed to study the sun at the peak of its sun spot activity.

The Solar Maximum Mission spacecraft is scheduled for launch Jan. 31 into a 310-mile high orbit where it will be able to watch the sun with a variety of instruments from above the obscuring effects of Earth's atmosphere.

The 13-foot long satellite will concentrate on solar flares, violent eruptions on the sun's surface that spew large amounts of radiation into space. The radiation bursts can disrupt communications, affect weather and threaten astronauts in space.

Scientists hope the observations will help them better understand what causes solar flares and how they might be predicted.

A second communications satellite is scheduled for launch in February on another Atlas-Centaur from Cape Canaveral and identical satellites — all owned by Intelsat — are scheduled for launch in May and August.

The first of two National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration weather satellites on the 1980 schedule is set for launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., in April. The second is set for flight in August from Cape Canaveral.

Also on the schedule are two Navy Transit navigation satellites to be launched by small Scout rockets from Vandenberg.

In 1963, the U.N. Security Council asked member states to block Portugal's purchase of arms for use in maintaining rule over African colonies.

Kansas City Snubs Amnesty Demands

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — About 40 firemen called in sick today and City Council members warned there would be no amnesty for those who defy a court order to end a five-day-old work slowdown.

John Germann, fired leader of the firefighter's union, responded by saying the firemen would not settle with the city until amnesty was granted those suspended or dismissed.

The court order was issued after firefighters refused non-emergency overtime work Christmas Day. The work slowdown was prompted by a stalemate in contract talks that have dragged on for months.

City Manager Robert Kipp told the council members at a special session called by Mayor Richard L. Berkley that there had been a "dramatic change," with an estimated 40 firemen calling in sick for today's morning shift.

Asked later why some of the firemen were calling in sick this morning, Germann said, "I assume they are sick of the whole situation and not able to come to work."

Germann said firemen and their families would rally on the steps of City Hall later today.

Kipp said 13 firemen had received three-day suspensions and four were dismissed, bringing to 16 the number dismissed since the work slowdown began last week.

And City Council member Edward B. Quick, a former fireman, warned that the citizens of this Midwest city of 507,000 "are going to pay a terrible price" for the troubles with the 900 firefighters.

The slowdown plan calls for members of International Association of Firefighters Local 42 to answer all fires and emergencies as usual but to perform no other duties, such as training and inspections.

"We cannot allow firefighters to arbitrarily determine when and where to work," said Berkley. "You can't have a judge issue a temporary restraining order and ignore it."

There were no major fires Tuesday, when police on 12-hour shifts covered six of the city's 33 fire stations.

The officers were concentrated at a handful of stations because in 1975, during a strike by firefighters, police and firefighters called to the same fire battled with hoses and the officers were heckled by pickets, officials said.

The firefighters have been negotiating for 10 months, and their contract expired on Friday.

The city last week offered a two-year, 15 percent wage increase costing about $5 million. The union is seeking a 20 percent raise when the department's work week expands from 40 to 48 hours under a new shift arrangement.

Starting pay for firefighters is $12,132, with a top base of $17,928.

The suspensions began Saturday in response to union president John Germann's announcement that the firefighters planned a phased showdown, beginning with the refusal to work overtime.

The City Council voted to suspend firefighters who refused overtime and to fire those who did so repeatedly. Germann said Tuesday the union is now demanding amnesty for these firefighters.

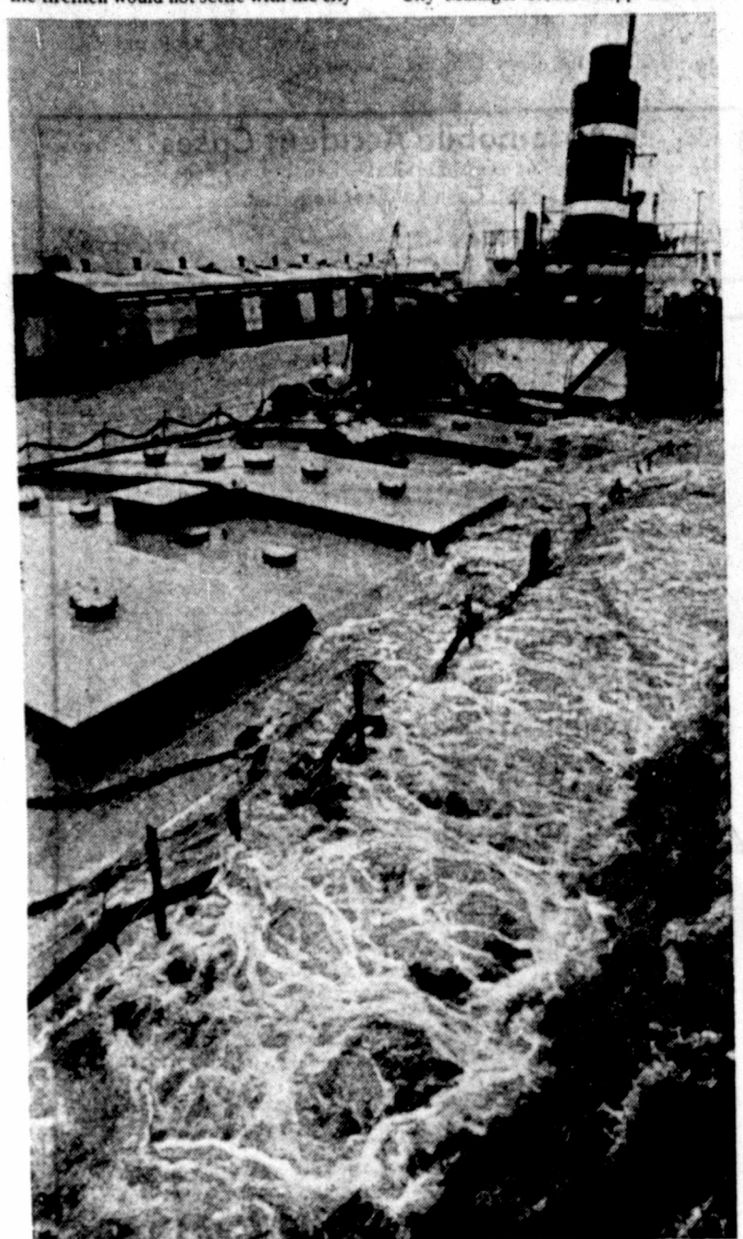
On Monday, Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Lewis Lombardo issued a temporary restraining order calling for an immediate halt to the job action. Berkley said the city may seek fines for the union's refusal to comply.

"We intend to prosecute violations of the court order," said Aaron A. Wilson.

But Germann said the slowdown seemed to be the only way to force the city to reopen negotiations. "Nothing else has been able to get them to the table," said Germann, who warned last week that the union might force the city to fire all union firefighters.

City officials have rejected arbitration or mediation. "That's the chicken way out," said councilman Joe Serviss.

But Quick, who has been critical of the city's handling of the crisis, said every avenue of reconciliation should be explored.



FREIGHTER IN TROUBLE — The E.M. Ford, a freighter carrying 7,000 tons of dry cement, is partially submerged in the Milwaukee harbor after high winds Tuesday pounded the vessel against the dock and ripped a hole in the hull. (AP Laserphoto) around the vessel and a life raft, but no bodies, Nies said.

He said the crew reported "a crack or gash in the starboard side (of the hull) about 6 to 10 feet long" and "a similar gash or crack in the port side."

Nies said there was no indication how the hull became torn.

"It is not inconceivable that she hit something and that caused the crack," he said. "It is not inconceivable that she ran into severe weather that caused the crack, either."

In the Antarctic, the Chilean Navy rescued more than 100 persons from the Swedish cruise ship Lindblad Explorer, which ran aground while filming a science fiction movie about the end of the world, and a skeleton crew remained aboard today waiting for salvage tugs to pull the vessel off a reef.

There continued to be conflicting reports on the exact number of people aboard the Explorer when it ran aground about noon Monday, and how many were evacuated.

The ship's radio operator said 70 passengers and 35 crew members were transferred in lifeboats to the Chilean naval vessel Piloto Pardo. They were expected to reach Punta Arenas, Chile, about 700 miles from the reef, late today.

But Chilean Lt. Cmdr. Rodrigues Solar said in Punta Arenas that 108 passengers and 34 crew members had been evacuated.

No Layoffs Expected After Refinery Fire

YORKTOWN, Va. (AP) — Amoco refinery officials say the fire that damaged a processing unit at the facility here will not cause layoffs among the 200 employees or disrupt operations.

Acting refinery manager Robert Wade could give no damage estimate in the fire that flared one day for about an hour before being brought under control.

Khomeini Warns Iran War With U.S. Likely captives, Coffin with 16, and Gumbleton with six, including two women hostages, Elizabeth Ann Swift, 39, of Washington, D.C., and Kathryn Koob, 41, of Jessup, Iowa.

Gumbleton, who was joined in conducting services by the French-born Algerian archbishop, Cardinal Etienne Duval, said the women captives were in "good spirits."

Coffin said the students who seized the hostages Nov. 4 in a bid to get President Carter to send the shah back to Iran told them the 43 captives they met with represented the sum total.

He said under the ground rules of the visit, which was filmed by the militants, that they were not allowed to ask the hostages or the captors about the State Department's contention there were 50 hostages.

The militants offered the film to ABC, CBS and NBC, but the major American TV networks turned them down because the captors wanted more than $21,000 from each and tried to dictate how the film would be shown.

Coffin, of New York's Riverside Church, Gumbleton, auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of Detroit, and Howard, a Baptist from Princeton, N.J., later visited the Americans at the Foreign Ministry for three hours, then returned to the embassy Tuesday night.

They said the student captors handed them photocopies of handwritten messages from 33 of the hostages to their families, and the clergymen telephoned them to unidentified colleagues in New York who were to contact the hostages' relatives. The clergymen also got at least six verbal messages from the hostages. Other captives said they had just written to their families.

Meanwhile, Tehran Radio reported one of the hostages, who was not identified, balked at shaking hands with Ayatollah Hossein-Ali Montazeri of Tehran, who went to the embassy in the evening to convey Christmas greetings to the captives.

"I am asking to shake your hand because we do not have any special animosity towards you," the broadcast quoted Montazeri as saying. "In Islam all human beings are free and equal. I hope Carter will exercise his mind in such a way that you may be released from here as soon as possible."

After his meeting with the hostages, the state radio said Montazeri told reporters: "It is not the hostages who should be tried, but the American government. If the hostages have not committed an offense, they will merely take part in the American trials as witnesses."

Khomeini and the students holding the hostages have said unless Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran that the captives will be tried as spies.

The Carter administration, which allowed the shah to undergo cancer treatment in the United States before the ousted monarch flew to Panama Dec. 15, has refused to pressure the shah to return to the country he fled in January. It also has maintained that 50 Americans are being held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

either by a personal appearance by the registered voter or through the mail. She said absentee voting by personal appearance will continue through 5 p.m. Jan. 15. Mailed-in ballots can be received at City Hall until 1 p.m. election day.

Any registered voter is eligible to cast an absentee ballot if he meets one of the following conditions: over age 65, plans to be out of the county on election day or is unable to go to the polls because of a physical illness or disability, religious belief, incarceration in jail or involvement as an election worker.

If a voter suffers from an illness or disability, he must provide a doctor's statement on his condition, Mrs. Gaffga added.

Voters planning to vote by mail must submit their applications to the City Secretary's Office. Included on the application must be the voter registration number, permanent address and the reason for absentee voting, Mrs. Gaffga said.

Any registered voter also can make an emergency application for absentee voting between Jan. 15 and Jan. 19, the city secretary noted. Conditions for an emergency application would be emergency surgery or hospitalization.

Paper ballots will be used for all absentee voting procedures for the Jan. 19 election because the county-owned punch card voting devices will not be available.

Security Tightened At Convenience Stores

ed. She had given notice because "I didn't like the hours, and I just wanted to find a daytime job.

"I never will work that shift by myself again."

Other convenience store attendants contacted at work expressed their concern about a possible holdup.

"There's always the tension," said one female attendant at an Avenue H convenience store which in the past has been a popular spot for bandits to strike.

"It's dangerous," said Capt. Wayne Love, head of the city police department's criminal investigation division. A criminal, he adds, usually is less intimidated in robbing a store attended by a woman, and the clerk could be subject to a sexual assault.

"I think women ought to know the danger of the job," Love said.

Authorities say an attendant should not resist a bandit's demands for money. Store supervisors say they give their employees the same advice. And a female clerk's attempts to fend off a sexual assault could result in her being seriously injured or killed, police said.

The number of convenience store robberies in the city is less than half the number reported in 1978. Store supervisors say it is because of stepped-up precautionary measures taken by their companies.

Love said "Crime Eye" cameras, recently placed in a number of stores within the city, have played a major role in thwarting holdups. So far, the city-owned, hidden cameras have caught on film two convenience store robberies. And pictures taken in one of the heists played a crucial part in the trial of a man who was subsequently given a life sentence for robbing a 7-Eleven Food Store on Avenue Q.

Jake Wofford, district manager of the 7-Eleven Food Store chain here, said that, while the cameras are useful in catching the bandit, they do not act as a deterrent against the actual crime.

On the other hand, Rex Johnson, director of security for the Handy Hut chain, said publicity of the camera's role in catching the crook will dissuade prospective bandits from striking at one of his stores. "One of the biggest deterrents is the threat of being caught," Johnson maintains.

The former attendant at 82nd Street and Indiana Avenue has not been the only victim of an assault this year.

A clerk at a Preston Milk Store on 34th Street said a man wielding a screwdriver robbed her store about 2:30 a.m. on Jan. 18, and then dragged her out back and raped her. At the end of last year, a 29-year-old female attendant at a convenience store on Avenue Q said a man robbed her about 12:30 a.m., and then forced her into a back room and raped her while holding a kitchen knife to her throat.

Still unsolved by the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department is the Jan. 15, 1978, slaying of a 19-year-old attendant at Vera's Grocerette on West Fourth Street, about three miles west of Loop 289.

Bruce Darrell Kelley, a Lubbock Christian College student, was on his fourth day at the job when he was gunned down about 10:30 p.m. during an apparent robbery at the store.

While the case remains open, Assistant Chief Deputy Alton Hobbs said recently there are no new leads in the killing.

He added that a convenience store robbery-killing is hard to solve unless the guilty party slips up and leaves evidence behind. "If you've got one person working there and they kill that person, you've got nothing," Hobbs said. "You've got a body and that's it."

With most holdups occurring late at night or early in the morning, there is less chance there will be witnesses who could lead authorities to a suspect. And if the clerk is killed or seriously injured, "Man, it might be the next morning before anyone finds out what happened," Hobbs said.

Authorities said they felt the safest conditions at a store would be to have more than one employee working. But store supervisors said they cannot afford to have more than one attendant during hours when business is the slowest.

Leonard M. Cook Jr. told deputies Dec. 15 he feared for his life when a man entered the Quick Shop convenience store on West Fourth Street about 10:30 p.m., placed the barrel of a shotgun between his eyes and demanded money from the cash register.

The bandit fled after taking the cash and ordering the 22-year-old attendant into a back room.

Executives of several convenience store chains who were interviewed by The Avalanche Journal said steps are now being taken to ensure the safety of their employees.

Cash registers are being placed in clear view from the store entrance. Fewer advertisements are being placed on a store's front windows so people outside — such as a passing policeman — can easily see inside the business.

Most store parking lots are well lighted at night. Attendants at many of the stores can see behind counters and shelves through mirrors placed on the ceiling.

Many of the stores have hidden cameras and closed-circuit televisions. Some have silent holdup and panic alarms. And many of the alert systems can be tripped by the attendant reaching for a particular bill in the register's till.

But the biggest hope store supervisors have is that bandits will begin to realize clerks no longer have a large amount of loot to hand over to them.

On the average, attendants are instructed to keep no more than $35 to $50 cash in their registers, and drop excess money in a safe. Many of the safes have double locks, with the clerk holding only one of the keys.

Seven-Eleven attendants are instructed to keep about $25 in their registers and drop the rest of the money in a contraption called a "Timed Access Cash Controller."

Wofford said if a bandit robs one of his stores and demands more than what is in the tills, he will have to wait 10 minutes for the attendant to warm up the TACC machine. And then no more than $10 can be withdrawn.

The computerized machine takes another two minutes for each additional request for money, and, again, no more that $10 each time there is a withdrawal. Wofford said he doubts a robber would want to wait around several hours.

"A professional robber will not rob a 7-Eleven store ...there's not enough money," the district manager said.

If a bandit strikes a Handy Hut store, "there's not really all that much to take, monetarily," said Bill McCrave, the chain's district manager. "It wouldn't be worth the risk."

Aggravated robbery is a first degree felony and conviction could result in life imprisonment.

Other convenience store executives said their attendants work with less than $100 and just enough to make change for their customers.

"We try to keep it down to $50," said Maxine Cheves, area manager of Lubbock's six Preston Milk Stores. "If a person comes in with a $50 or $100 bill, then we just have to miss a sale."

Despite police and deputies' fears for women working the stores late at night and early in the morning, supervisors interviewed said they made no effort to place their female employees on only the daytime shifts.

They said it would be a violation of equal working rights to have such a policy. Some expressed the feeling that it was no more dangerous for a woman to work the graveyard shift than a man.

Mickey Ham, president and general manager of Ham's Food Marts, said he has never had a female attendant hurt in a holdup, but admitted that the women get hassled more by some customers.

"When I hire a girl, I'll explain that just because she is a girl she'll get more of a hassle and question her about whether it bothers her to work alone in the store," Ham said.

Asked if he thought attending a convenience store was a dangerous job, Ham answered, "I don't in Lubbock. I don't think we have the crime element they have in larger cities. And in larger cities, it is a dangerous job."

Weather

ported 2 inches of new snow in the Clouderoft area.

New Mexico state police reported this morning that traffic was moving to Ruidoso and Cloudcroft, with light snow falling.

The winter storm watch is in effect for northern New Mexico late this afternoon and tonight and for the entire state on Thursday.

The extended forecast for the West Texas region calls for scattered snow in the north and mixed rain and snow in the south Friday and Saturday and calls for the precipitation to end by Sunday.

Lubbock had an unusually warm Christmas Day as the daytime temperature peaked at 73. The record high is 76 in 1955.

Elsewhere in Texas this morning, skies were mostly sunny, although a travelers advisory was posted along the upper Gulf coast because of patchy dense fog.

Cloudiness was expected to increase over the state today and tonight, with the state predicted to be mostly cloudy on Thursday. A chance of light rain is forecast for nearly all sections on Thursday.

Temperatures statewide were expected to be mild today, but should drop 10 to 20 degrees on Thursday.

Ex-Hostage Concerned About Friends In Tehran

PRAIRIE VIEW (AP) — Christmas was a difficult time for Staff Sgt. David Walker, a strapping Marine who was one of the 13 hostages released last month from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

His concern for the 50 remaining hostages made it tough to savor the joys of being home with his family.

"It's kind of hard for David. He left quite a few friends back there. When he's here with us we try to make him as happy as possible," his mother, Arie Ruth Walker, said Tuesday from the family home in Prairie View.

"We feel now he needs our love. When he leaves, we don't know when we'll see him again," said his brother, Bobby Glen Walker.

"Sometimes it takes something to happen to get people closer together. Until then, you never realize how much they mean to you. I'd say this is a gift to have him home for Christmas," he said.

Mrs. Walker said David got a watch, some expensive cologne and "a lovely blue velour shirt" for Christmas.

"We're having a beautiful Christmas. David and Diane (his fiancee) got me a negligee. It's burgundy, and oh, it's out of sight. Out of sight," said Mrs. Walker.

"Lord knows what else he got. Some things he hasn't opened yet. He hasn't been still long enough," Mrs. Walker said Tuesday.

Walker originally was scheduled to be in Okinawa for the Christmas holidays. But when he was taken captive with other Americans at the embassy in Tehran, six days before he was to go to Okinawa, all those plans went out the window.

Mrs. Walker said she is happy to have had all 10 of her children home for Christmas, but she also was conscious of David's dilemma.

"I still don't have the Christmas spirit. I feel uneasy just being home. It all goes back to my friends over there," he said earlier in the week.

"I said I wasn't going to leave the embassy. They said I had no choice. What a lot of people don't understand is, we Marines are really close. We live together, eat together, sleep together. We're just like a family. I feel like a part of my family won't be here."

Mrs. Walker said her son has been "very fidgety."

He watched television coverage, she said, of ministers holding Christmas services for various of the hostages.

Carter Tells Families U.S. Will Prevail

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter, who has stayed close to Washington for Christmas because of the Iranian crisis, has sent a message to the families of Americans being held captive in Iran, saying "we will prevail."

"This is a difficult time for you — perhaps the most difficult time that you and your family have ever experienced," the president said in a telegram.

But he told the families that their steadfastness and support during efforts to get the hostages freed have been "an inspiration to all of us who are making every possible effort to achieve the safe return of your loved ones."

The telegram was sent on Saturday and made public Tuesday by White House officials.

Carter also told the families he is convinced "the rightness of our position and the strength of our determination assures that we will prevail."

Carter, who usually returns to his hometown of Plains, Ga., for Christmas, spent a quiet holiday with wife, Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy, at the Camp David presidential retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

An aide said Carter opened gifts and called other family members on Christmas morning.

The president's mother said in a telephone interview from her home in Plains that Carter called her three times Christmas morning.

She added, however, that she felt "pretty bad" at not having her son and his family home this Christmas.

Asked whether she had considered joining the president and his family at Camp David, Mrs. Carter replied, "No. There are too many children here. I'm a homebody."

The president, who arrived at Camp David last Friday, has also worked on the federal budget and reviewed a preliminary draft of the State of the Union message he is to deliver to Congress on Jan. 23.

Networks Reject Iran Film

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major American television networks say they refused film of visits between American clergymen and the U.S. embassy prisoners in Tehran after the Iranian captors demanded more than $21,000 from each network and tried to dictate how the film would be shown.

ABC, CBS, and NBC reported Tuesday that film of the Christmas Eve services was offered by the militant students for the networks' Tuesday evening broadcasts.

They told the networks that all of the 50 minutes of footage — including a two-minute message from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini read by one of the students — would have to be shown, the networks said.

The networks were not permitted to preview the footage, which would have cost them $425 a minute, or a total of $21,250, spokesmen said.

The militants also demanded that the film be aired all at once or in installments within a week, and they later stipulated that there be no more than two half-hour installments if the film was used, the networks said.

"The conditions they demanded were not acceptable," said Lester M. Crystal, senior executive producer of NBC News.

Parents Learn Son Captive

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas-area family received a comforting surprise in their Monday morning paper. They say their son is in a picture released by the Iranians holding Americans captive in Tehran, the first evidence that Johnny McKeel Jr., is alive.

Johnny McKeel Sr., of the eastern suburb Balch Springs, saw the photo on the front page of the Dallas Times Herald. He says the fair-haired man in the center of the picture, shown reaching for an envelope, is his son, 26-year-old son, a Marine sergeant.

"When I first saw the paper, I knew it was him," the elder McKeel said. "To me, there's no doubt."

Until Monday, the McKeels were not even sure if their son was alive. He was stationed at the embassy when it was overtaken Nov. 4, but the couple had no evidence their son was one of more than 40 hostages.

"We didn't even know if he was in there (the American embassy)," McKeel said."

The photographs were arranged by the student captors and released to the Associated Press.

"He doesn't look like he's been mistreated, although mentally, I don't know," McKeel said.

Luncheon Invitation Nixed By Iranians

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Robert "Say" McIntosh, a Little Rock restaurant owner, had racks of sweet potato pies and several roasted turkeys to serve. But none of the 350 Iranians living in central Arkansas accepted McIntosh's luncheon invitation.

The community activist decided last week to invite the Iranians to be his Christmas lunch guests as a show of goodwill and friendship.

When he realized his invited guests were not going to appear, McIntosh went to the two bus stations in downtown Little Rock and invited the people he found there to lunch.

Editor Says World Almanac 99 Percent Accurate

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

At a bar or cocktail party sometime your fortune might depend on knowing what a joey is — or a Ramapithecus, or, for that matter, a quire.

Don't say never. When booze loosens tongues, arguments spring from all manner of subjects. Even a joey, Ramapithecus or quire — to name three admittedly odd ones.

George Delury, fact man extraordinaire, wouldn't rule the subjects out of any argument — knowing what he does as an almanac editor.

Take his words for it: A joey is a young kangaroo; a Ramapithecus, the first humanlike primate who emerged 12 million years ago; a quire, 25 sheets of paper.

Delury can tell you thousands of other bits of information, some old and some new. His answers come out lickety-split.

Samples:

Q. How many zeroes in a quintillion?

A. 18.

Q. What do the grizzly bear and cat have in common?

A. Top speeds of 30 miles per hour.

If the answers aren't on the tip of his tongue, he thumbs through his book — which a million people will buy this year, as they did last year.

Delury is editor of "The 1980 World Almanac & Book of Facts" (Newspaper Enterprise Association, $3.95). People have been buying the book for 112 years.

Aside from its use in settling barroom arguments, the World Almanac is a respected reference book of nearly 1,000 pages. Delury claims it is 99 percent accurate.

"I get paid to do what I like best," Delury says, "learning a little bit about a lot of things."

He knows more than a little bit about quite a few things, due to his academic credentials.

These include a bachelor's degree from Redlands, Calif., University; a bachelor's of systematic theology from Harvard Divinity School; a master's in modern European history from Stanford, passing orals for a doctorate in modern German history.

He won a Fullbright scholarship to study in Germany after that and upon completion of those studies went to Greece to write.

After that, he went into the real world of social work in Watts, Calif., and later in Brooklyn's Bedford-Stuyvesant community.

The real world of publishing followed, including a stint as editor of "Deadline Data on World Affairs," formerly a McGraw-Hill publication.

The three years he spent writing poetry, Delury said.

"It's a potato chip book," Delury said.

A what?

"Potato chip book," he repeated.

Flipping the pages and stopping at one is like eating one potato chip. You just can't stop at one. Instead of potato chips, in this case you're taking in facts — some you might want to know and some that you can't help absorbing due to their interesting nature.

Deciding what goes in and what can't go in due to limitation on pages is one of Delury's dilemmas each year. And it's some dilemma. What doesn't go in could fill three more books, he thinks.

In the front of the book, it says:

"The World Almanac does not decide wagers."

Delury said this is to prevent legal battles.

The Department of Agriculture reports last year's total of $140.2 billion in cash receipts by U.S. farmers was more than double the 1970 figure of $50.5 billion.

Letters to the Almanac office come from children or grandchildren of persons who set some kind of sports record in college. Call it family pride. They want to know why Great Grandpop So-and-so isn't listed in the sports records.

"We could fill five books with such sports records," Delury said.

An inmate from Leavenworth penitentiary wrote a while back that he should be in the book. His claim to fame? He had threatened the life of a vice president of the United States.

Trying to avoid bias is an aim of Delury and his staff. But it's not easy.

As an example, he cited the dilemma in avoiding bias when reporting on the women's movement.

"We refer to a number of advances in women's liberation but they are only advances to the women liberation people," he said.

Clerk Threatens Family At Store

A 35-year-old Lubbock man and his children reportedly were treated to a decidely uncheerful Christmas greeting late Tuesday afternoon when they were threatened by a clerk wielding a baseball bat at an East Lubbock convenience store.

Rejino Delgado told police he had taken his four children to the store about 5:45 p.m. to get some candy when he noticed the clerk hold up a baseball bat and tell his children to leave the store.

Reports state Delgado approached the clerk and asked him, "Did my children shoplift?" and the clerk just told him to get his children out of the store.

Neither Delgado nor his children were injured in the incident, but a witness who was in the store told police the man and his children were not disturbing anything.

Reports indicate that several other customers also were threatened but that no one was injured. No complaints have been filed in connection with the incident.

Reports state Strew was found slumped over in a pickup truck parked in front of the Dixie Drive residence about 2:40 a.m. today.

Investigating officers said an occupant of the residence reported hearing a shot but didn't see anything. Reports indicate Strew had told them at one point that the shooting was accidental but later told officers he didnt't know what had happened.

Upon inspection of the residence, police found a large pool of blood on the floor between the kitchen and a back bedroom.

Police said the found a shell loader with three .357 magnum shells, two .38 special shells and a .357 magnum rifle in the bed of the pickup.

Gilbert Galagos, 67, of 3202 Duke St. told police he was in a restroom at a local pool hall when two men came in, grabbed him around the neck and demanded his money.

When Galagos told the men he had no money, one of the men took his wallet from his back pocket, removed $165 from it and fled the pool hall, he said.

The owner of the pool hall told police that several customers told him who had robbed Galagos and police later arrested a suspect. Police today also are looking for another suspect in the incident.

In other activity Christmas Day, police were investigating the theft of $2,140 worth of stereo equipment and guns from the home of Eddie Lee Douglas sometime Tuesday.

Douglas, who lives at 5321 47th St., told police someone had entered his home sometime early Tuesday and took a Marantz stereo and several rifles, a pistol and two shotguns from his home.

Reports indicate entry was gained by prying open a back garage door and kicking open the garage door, which leads to the kitchen.

A 30-year-old Lubbock man was jailed Monday night after he allegedly assaulted city police officers who attempted to subdue him.

The man was arrested after police were called to an East Lubbock nightclub in reference to a man wielding a knife and threatening the manager.

When officers arrived at the scene, the suspect allegedly attempted to drive away, and the car he was driving collided with a police car.

When asked by the arresting officers to get out of his car, the man initially refused and then scuffled with officers when they attempted to remove him from the vehicle. Once inside a patrol car, the suspect repeatedly kicked a restraining glass, police said.

Michele Mason To Make Debut At KLLL West Texas Opry

Many singers admit their first musical discovery came in a church choir, and so it was for Michele Mason. Like other aspiring singers, Michele has not stopped in her quest to sing. But she has made her beginning at the age of 13.

Michele will be making her first performance at the KLLL West Texas Saturday Night Opry at 8 p.m. Jan. 12 in Municipal Auditorium.

Even before Michele began to sing in her church choir, she accompanied her father, who plays the guitar. It was her father who called and obtained an audition for her to appear on the opry. She made a tape and was interviewed at the Don Caldwell Studios, co-sponsor of the opry.

At school, Michele also has made an impact with her singing. She appeared in her school variety show in elementary school, after a teacher recommended her. At Mackenzie Junior High School she also performed in a variety show. Currently, Michele is a member of the all-region choir and is taking piano lessons to augment her singing.

Admitting she had an idol, Michele said she desires to be like Tanya Tucker. In fact, she has chosen Buddy Holly's "Not Fade Away," also recorded by Miss Tucker, for her performance at the opry.

"I want to be a singer. I don't want to be anything but that," Michele said. "I want to be known. I always watch the country music shows and wish I were there."

Her mother is excited about her daughter's success. "I think she's great," said Mrs. Mason. "But I can't get used to watching her on stage. I get so nervous."

The opry will provide the largest audience for Michele. But the size does not seem to lessen her enthusiasm. "It's going to be fun," Michele said, "this is a dream for me."

As far as any other music in Michele's life, there is none. "I haven't thought about any other music," she said. "All I care about is country."

Performing at the opry along with Michele will be Don Caldwell, Jim Fullingim, Cecil D. Caldwell, David House, Tommie Anderson and Zelda Ellison.

An appearance will also be made by South Plains Bluegrass, Curley Lawler, plus Buzz and Jewette James, with the music of Bob Wills.

Newcomers Rex Thomas, Wesley Putnam and Charles Terry also will perform.

In addition, on stage will be the Opry Stage Band and The Maines brothers, with Steve Sever of KLLL serving as master of ceremonies.

Tickets are available at Luskey's Western Store and at the two locations of Flipside Records.

Worms Don't Bring Riches

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) — If you have been thinking about investing in earthworms, the Securities and Exchange Commission warns that raising worms is not necessarily the way to instant riches. In fact, securities commissions in at least two states have brought criminal cases against sellers of worms as an investment.

Here is the reason for these cases: Sellers all over the country have been offering investors a starter supply of worms and a bin or bed they can grow in. The sellers guarantee to buy back all the worms that are raised. And all of this for a price of only $375 to $800 per bin, depending on size.

The hook is that you can generally buy the same number of worms on a wholesale market for less than $50.

Part of the bait to investors is the story about how practically anyone can earn thousands of dollars with very little money down. Beginning one year after you buy your worms, you'll start raking in the money.

The problem is that many sellers aren't telling the real story. There are allegations that they misrepresent the type of worm being sold, the market available, how much time and effort it takes to care for the worms, how they are harvested, the costs involved, and the speed with which worms become more worms.

So if some salesman comes around with the suggestion that you can get rich on worms, think twice. With worms, like any investment, you need to dig into the facts first so you won't be sorry later.

For suggestions on how to check out other investment offers, send for a copy of "Investigate Before You Invest." It's free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 534G, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

At the same time you will get a copy of the "Consumer Information Catalog" that lists more than 200 other free or low-cost federal publications of consumer interest.

Hugh Kelsey's books are not for the run-of-the-mill bridge player — his problems are tough. But if you enjoy a challenge, there are few better authors to read. This holds true for his latest book, "The Tough Game" (Faber & Faber, hardback, 190 pages, $13.50). The only drawback to this work is the price. (How are we going to afford bridge books if this trend continues?) But that's about the only problem to which the author doesn't have an interesting solution.

This book gives you a seat in a bridge match, and on each hand you see only your own hand and the dummy. If you want to see how testing this book is, cover up the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would tackle three no trump after the lead of the king of spades.

"There is a line of play that is almost completely safe. Win the first trick, cross to the queen of hearts and lead a low diamond. If East plays the ace, you have nine tricks, while if the king of diamonds is allowed to win, you can switch to clubs.

"The interesting case is when West captures the king of diamonds with the ace and continues with a low spade. Now you can be sure that East has the king of clubs (with K Q x x x in spades, ace of diamonds and king of clubs, West would surely have put in an overcall). You should therefore exit with your third spade and throw clubs from both hands on the long spades. You can win the eventual club switch with the ace, cash the queen of diamonds and the king of hearts, and lead a heart to your ace. East will have to come down to two cards, and the queen of clubs or nine of diamonds is likely to provide your ninth trick.

"On the line of play the contract is a risk only if West started with A 10 x x of diamonds as well as K Q x x x of spades (again unlikely in view of the bidding), and even then you may be able to read the position from the discards."

You can compare results with what transpired at the other "table." The 64 problems are all challenging, and will provide you with a lot of fun.

GET READY FOR The New Year (the easy way)

FLORENCE SUTTON LOST OVER 124 POUNDS AND 143 INCHES

Since I started Pat Walker's I have lost 124 lbs. and 134 inches.
A lot has happened since my first picture appeared in the paper. I have lost more weight and I have even lost a 1/2 size in my shoe size.
Needless to say, I feel and look like a different person.
I made a New Year's resolution to do something about my weight problem. I think I have kept that resolution. I have tried a number of diets but the Pat Walker routine is one I could live with the rest of my life.
The biggest thrill I get is shopping for clothes and being able to pick and choose. When you wear a size 24 1/2 you don't have much choice, but size 8 you have a better selection.

If you have a weight problem this is the place to come.

Dear Abby,

DEAR ABBY: My boss has a problem that is affecting me. He is a womanizer. He is married (for the second time) and is unfaithful to his wife. He insisted on his wife's having a child to keep her home.

I have heard telephone conversations my boss has had with his lady friends, and some of them even come to the office. Do I shut my eyes to all this? If I quit my job, I will need an explanation to my boss and his wife since I am friendly with both. She is a lot younger than he is and has confided in me that she married him for his money. She laughs at "rumors." Do I laugh it off, too?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: I think it would be better for all concerned if you quit your job. You know too much about your boss's private life to maintain a proper business relationship with him. And you know too much abut the boss's wife to be working for her husband. You don't have to explain why you're quitting. Just say you decided to make a change. Then make it.

DEAR ABBY: I've got a problem I have lived with for about as long as I care to. I am a 21-year-old male who is considered good-looking by many people, but I have a problem that is really giving me a bad complex.

You see, when I was about 13 or 14 I started to develop breasts like a girl's. Not really big, but big enough so that I was constantly aware of it and very much embarrassed. All through high school I was ashamed and tried to hid it the best I could. I wouldn't even tell my parents about it.

Well, I finally went to a doctor when I was 18. He's an old man who probably isn't up on all the new treatments. He said it looked like I had a hormone imbalance, but he couldn't help me. I pointed out that I had practically no facial hair and wondered if that couldn't be a related problem. All he said was, "If you feel like a man, then live like one."

I've got to find out what's wrong with me, Abby. Please tell me where to go.

GOOD-LOOKING FREAK

DEAR GOOD-LOOKING: I don't know what kind of doctor you went to, but you should see an endocrinologist. Contact your county or state medical society and ask them for a recommendation, and good luck. I'm sure you can be helped.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: There have been a lot of beefs about ill-mannered, thoughtless folks who fail to acknowledge gifts with thank-you notes. May I present a minority opinion:

How do you fancy being put on a duty list:

1) Dust venetian blinds.
2) Polish silverware.
3) Write 36 thank-you notes.

Do you really want a hypocritical letter from a teenager who was glued to his chair by parental command? "Thank you so much for the beautiful SCARF. Just what I've always wanted!"

Oh, it not the gift — it's the generous thought that is being acknowledged.

How much thought did Aunt Betty put into that purchase of perfume for her tomboy niece? Or that purple sweater for Susie who looks hideous in purple? Aunt Betty was just thinking that giving is "the thing to do" on certain occasions. And all she really did was grease the commercial wheels.

Me? I give my presents to the hungry and ill-clad of the world. They don't need to send me thank-you notes.

MINORITY IN CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: SOFT TOUCH, the mother who couldn't get her grown children to repay the money they borrowed from her, should have given them "soft terms." That's what we did.

When our two married sons needed grubstakes to buy homes, Dad and I gave them longer terms at lower interest than any professional lender would have given a couple of penniless kids.

We made them sign IOU notes, telling them that their notes were part of our estate, so that other heirs would not be cheated in case of our unexpected deaths.

Their payments to us are small but regular. We feel that this is as important a part of their character training as their Boy Scout days were.

BANKER'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to REALISTIC IN MASS. What gives her the right to be so critical of couples living together?

Don't get me wrong; I'm 24, single and living alone. But if "Mr. Right" comes along, I sure hope we live together before any final ties are made.

Six years ago I married a man I really thought I knew and understood. Six months later we filed for divorce.

If we had lived together for six months, a lot of pain and unnecessary expense could have been avoided.

I'm not thinking of myself; the "unnecessary expenses" came out of parents' pockets!

REMEMBERING IN PUEBLO

DEAR ABBY: I think I may have a "snappy" answer for the woman whose husband looks so much younger than she.

I am an older (37 and holding) woman who is fortunate enough be be loved by a younger man (20). When we first started going together, over eight months ago, I was somewhat self-conscious about the age difference which was obvious to most. So, just for fun, I had a couple of T-shirts printed up. His read, "NO, I AM NOT HER SON." And mine read, "NO, I AM NOT HIS MOTHER."

They are fun to wear now and then, and always elicit a comment or two wherever we go. Sometimes we even make a new friend!

ALL IN FUN
IN MONROVIA, CALIF.

DEAR ALL: If the essence of a good sense of humor is the ability to laugh at oneself, on a scale of 1 to 10 you rate a 10.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have always directed my Christmas column toward families who are caught up in a tinsel marathon of tree-trimming, stocking-stuffing, music-making, dog-barking and children-squealing.

They're so busy that sometimes I get only a glance before the garbage is wrapped in me. Occasionally, someone puts me on the back porch to catch the slush from boots. If I'm lucky I escape the licking flames when I get thrown into the fireplace with discarded wrappings and warranties.

So, I've decided to write to all of you today who have the time to read me...those who have just moved to an area and haven't made new friends...those who are alone because they can't afford the trip home...or those whose families have been splintered by distance or disinterest. And you are alone.

Let me tell you about my grandfather. He lived by himself in a little trailer in southwest Ohio until he died a few years ago. I always felt sorry for him when I visited at Christmas because he only had about five cards on top of the TV set, two or at the most three packages to open and a pitiful artificial tree with a single strand of lights that bubbled like they were going to boil over.

You would have thought those pathetic trappings were straight from the Sistine Chapel.

He'd pick up each card, trace the scene with his fingers and marvel, "This is pretty enough to put in a frame." Then he'd recite the message inside which he had memorized.

The boxes were another delight. He'd shake them and make a guess as to what they held and place them gently under the tree. Then he'd prime you for that big moment when he said, "I'm going to light the tree for you!" My sewing machine had a bigger light.

The year before he died when he spent Christmas in the hospital, he raved the entire visiting period over a favor on his dinner tray — a styrofoam Santa Claus with a red gumdrop hat held on by a toothpick.

Every Christmas since then, I have had to ask myself: "Can I quote a single line from the stack of cards I receive? Can I visit without keeping an eye on my watch? Can I become childlike with excitement over a box that obviously holds a handkerchief? Can I live with my solitude without self-pity?"

God help me. I think my grandfather felt sorry for me.

Specialist Gives Telephone Tips

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Guard against unscrupulous telephone solicitors with a little knowledge of how they operate, advises Claudia Kerbel, a consumer information specialist.

Many types of goods and services are sold by telephone — magazines, kitchenware, insurance and land — but some dealers may try to trick consumers into a purchase or contributing to a phony charity, she explains.

Miss Kerbel is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

She recommends following these tips:

1) Never agree to buy a product, let a salesperson come to your home or make a charitable contribution during the first phone call.

Tell the salesperson you will call him back if you decide to buy or let someone come to your home.

2) Call the Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce to check on the company, then call the salesperson back if you really need what he is selling.

3) If it is a charitable organization, ask them to send you information about the charity.

4) If the company represents itself as helping the handicapped, ask if the handicapped are employed by the company and how much goes to the handicapped.

5) If you are told that you have won a free prize or gift, find out what you have to do.

Often the prize is only given if you buy something, and frequently you will be overcharged for the item you are required to buy.

6) Be sure to ask if you have to listen to a sales pitch for a product or service.

Generally, the sales pitch will be high-pressured and intense.

New Blood Could Help Jehovah's Witnesses

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — For five years, Dr. Ron Lapin has been developing a most narrow medical specialty: surgical operations planned to be as bloodless as possible.

The majority of his patients are Jehovah's Witnesses whose faith forbids even life-saving blood transfusions. Lapin says he is not permitted even an emergency blood supply for patients "who say, 'I would rather die than have a blood transfusion, which God tells me is wrong.'"

Jehovah's Witnesses come to surgeon Lapin from around the country for surgery of all kinds. So, he said, development of an artificial blood substitute called Fluosol is exciting news for them.

But Lapin, who has done two transfusions with the experimental substance, cautioned against over-optimism until all the results are in.

"I want to be very cautious about this," he said in an interview. "No one really knows what this material will do (over the long term). We are going to have to follow these patients for a very long time to know if we should be using it at all."

But initial results, he said, suggest the blood substitute may buy enough time to save patients who would otherwise bleed to death. "I think we will continue to use it under a very limited, rigid approach."

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration considers Fluosol experimental and permits its use only on patients who have exhausted all conventional medical treatments. Witnesses automatically reject the conventional treatment of transfusions.

Fluosol was developed by Green Cross Corp. of Japan, where the product has been used experimentally on about 50 patients. A Green Cross subsidiary, Alpha Therapeutics Corp. of South Pasadena, Calif., manufactures it in the United States.

About five years of testing will be needed to win FDA marketing approval.

The blood substitute has been used only three times in the United States. The first time was last month in Minnesota. Lapin said he subsequently used it on two patients, one an elderly man who died five days later.

He said an autopsy showed Fluosol was not involved in the death — "The Fluosol was probably the only thing that kept him alive five days."

Lapin, an Israeli-born American and not a Witness, said all three transfusion patients were Witnesses.

The religious prohibition against blood transfusions is emphatic and total. It is a frequent cause of friction between members and doctors, for whom transfusions are a major medical tool.

Lapin contends doctors often refuse to operate on Witnesses, sometimes give unauthorized blood transfusions during surgical emergencies and have even filed suit to force transfusions.

But, Lapin said, "I am convinced that operations can be done without blood and they can be done successfully."

Lapin's techniques include large doses of folic acid, iron and vitamin B-12 to stimulate new blood production in the bone marrow.

Surgery itself, carefully planned step-by-step, usually involves electric cautery — sort of an electric knife that emits a spark to immediately close blood vessels as it slices through tissue.

Lapin does say artificial blood poses "a moral dilemma. If I have done an operation before without blood, can I now ask an individual to subject himself to something I'm not sure about?"

If the long-term safety and effectiveness of artificial blood is proven, Lapin said, it could prove invaluable for disaster victims, battlefield casualties and patients with rare blood types.

But until then, its use will probably be limited mostly to Witnesses, a group Lapin calls "nobody's people."

He said they are forgotten by politicians because they do not vote, demonstrate or serve in the military. They also pose "medical and emotional problems for doctors because nobody wants to have one of these patients die on his operating table" for lack of blood.

Lapin maintains a hot line telephone for Witnesses with medical problems and says it has rung almost 20,000 times in five years.

"What we mostly try to do is make peace between the Witness and the local doctor. We try to convince the Witnesses that doctors are not all ogres," he said.

"The main thing doctors are worried about is, are they going to get sued? The answer is no. Witnesses don't sue. We have never been able to find any case where a Witness has sued for not utilizing blood."

What a Witness will sue over is being given a transfusion during surgery, even if it saves his life. "They have sued for that," Lapin said. "They consider it a moral and a physical rape."

Lapin says much of his success with members of the religion stems from one thing: "I have never gone back on my word to a Jehovah's Witness. I don't have the right to tell them that what they believe is wrong. I practice medicine, not morality."

Airplane Crash Survivor Greets Rescuers With Yuletide Cheer

ESTES PARK, Colo. (UPI) — A 10-year-old girl who survived a plane crash and two nights of sub-zero temperatures in the Colorado mountains greeted her rescuer with a small but unmistakable cry of "Merry Christmas!"

"There I was trudging up the mountain to the plane, fighting my way through the snow, and I heard this little girl's voice cry out 'Merry Christmas'," Civil Air Patrol medical technician Steven Osborne said Christmas night.

"I'll never forget it."

Osborne, the first to discover the wreckage of the twin-engine plane on the side of 12,000-foot Mount Shipler, found Claire Krieger of Boulder, Colo.; her father, Barry, 41, and her two sisters, Kathy, 17, and Connie, 15, Tuesday.

Virginia Krieger, the girls' grandmother, died in the crash.

A CAP spokesman said Krieger's wife died two weeks ago, and the family was flying to California for the Christmas holidays.

The plane, piloted by Krieger, vanished shortly after takeoff from Longmont, Colo., Sunday. Reports of an emergency locator signal in northern Colorado prompted the CAP search Monday.

McDonald said the wreckage was spotted early Christmas morning near Milner Pass in Rocky Mountain National Park and two helicopters were dispatched. However, the steep terrain prevented the choppers from landing at the site.

Park ranger Larry Van Slyke said a KBTV helicopter was able to drop Osborne within a quarter mile of the crash site, then pick up Claire Krieger and take her to Longmont United Hospital.

"There are snow slopes there that can be very dangerous. The choppers just could not land up there," he said.

Van Slyke said the helicopter and an Army chopper shuttled a dozen members of the Rocky Mountain Rescue Group and the Alpine Rescue Group to the plane so the conditions of the three other survivors could be stabilized before they were flown out.

Flight nurses aboard the St. Anthony's Flight for Life Helicopter, which carried out Krieger and the othr two daughters, provided additional treatment, a CAP official said.

Seventh Grader Returns To U.S. After Egypt Visit

EASLEY, S.C. (UPI) — Sam Brown, 12, is back from six days in Egypt as the VIP guest of President Anwar Sadat. He liked the belly dancer, he said, but not the hot temperatures or the food.

"I'm glad to be home," he said Christmas night. "Maybe I'd like to take another trip, but not too close to this day."

The seventh grader, who was invited to Egypt on an all-expenses-paid trip after writing an admiring letter to Sadat, was more concerned for the moment with the two games and a football he received for Christmas.

He was disappointed, however, about not getting a bicycle, said Sybil Brown, his mother.

She had to wait five hours at the Greenville-Spartanburg Jetport Christmas Eve because of a three-hour flight delay, but "it was worth it when he came flying into my arms," she said.

He spent the next five hours talking about the trip. "He was all keyed up," she said. "I couldn't get him to bed."

He made it clear what he liked and disliked about the trip. He enjoyed the belly dancer and the "wonderful temples" but complained about the hot climate and the food. He dined on hamburgers, french fries and Cokes whenever he could.

In fact, Sam, a chunky boy with blond hair and blue eyes, lost a lot of weight while in Egypt and his mother said he looked much better. She added that he didn't ask for his usual seconds during the family Christmas dinner.

He saw all the major tourist attractions in Cairo, Luxor and Aswan, but his big hope for the trip — a meeting with Sadat — never materialized. Sam had written Sadat, telling him how much he admired the president after he learned about his background on a television show.

The Egyptian government picked up the tab for the trip, and the airlines provided the transportation.

Someone gave the family a Christmas tree and a turkey so they could enjoy a traditional Christmas, Mrs. Brown said.

Exploding Gift Injures Couple

DUBLIN, Ga. (AP) — A 21-year-old paraplegic was hospitalized today as federal, state and local investigators tried to find out who sent the package, signed "guess who," that exploded in his face.

Laurens County Sheriff W.R. "Rock" Bussell said the Christmas Eve attack on Larry Swargert apparently was motivated by revenge. But officials refused to release other details of the case as they searched for a suspect.

County investigators refused to reveal where Swargert was being treated or to say what his condition was.

"If they tried to kill him once, they might try again," said one deputy sheriff, who asked not to be identified.

Police said Swargert and his 20-year-old girlfriend, Rita Cole, were injured when the package exploded as he opened it in the living room of his home Monday night.

A spokesman for Community Ambulance service in Dublin said Swargert appeared to be in critical condition when paramedics rushed him to Laurens Memorial Hospital where he was treated for injuries to his face, hands and chest. Miss Cole was treated for a cut on her chest, authorities said.

Revived Youngster Eager To Go Home

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis. (AP) — Eleven-year-old Darven Miller was considered clinically dead two weeks ago, after he fell through the ice on Duncan Creek and spent more than 15 minutes under water. Now he's eager to leave the hospital for good.

He left the hospital on a pass about noon Tuesday to go home for a Christmas visit with his mother, Darlene Minto, stepfather Donald Minto and the rest of the family.

"He liked being home a lot," his 10-year-old sister, Delores, said Tuesday night. Darven's gifts, she said, included a shirt, a racetrack game, socks and a new outfit.

By 8:20 p.m., he was back at the hospital.

"He was asking when he came back how much longer he'd have to stay," said Cheryl Stephenson, a nurse in the pediatrics department at St. Joseph Hospital. "Some of the clothes he was wearing were Christmas gifts, but he left his other things, the toys, at home."

When taken to the hospital Dec. 13, Darven's breathing had stopped, his pupils had dilated. His body temperature dropped to 82 degrees.

Doctors later said they had wondered how far the efforts to revive him should go.

"Our concern was, is he going to sustain himself and become an independent human being again?" said Dr. Bruno Rahn, the physician in charge. "When he came in, he was, by clinical evaluation, dead."

"He had been underwater anywhere from 17 to 30 minutes. He was not breathing. There was very little heart activity," Mrs. Britton recalled.

He had received mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and heart massage in the ambulance. At the hospital, doctors wrapped the boy in a heating device that circulated 105-degree water around his body. His temperature started to climb.

Using a breathing apparatus, adrenalin injections and electric shocks, doctors established an erratic heart beat. Then the boy's cardiopulmonary system started to work.

Rahn said reasons behind the resuscitation of cold-water drowning victims such as Darven are not fully understood, although one factor is hypothermia, when the colder body temperature causes the rate of metabolism and vital functions to slow down.

Less oxygen than is required for the brain, and the body also can cut off blood supplies to extremities while maintaining the flow to the brain. Until all the oxygen in the blood is exhausted, the brain may remain alive even though the lungs have become filled with water.

Tuesday, Ramona Britton, the hospital's patient care coordinator, said Darven was "doing real well."

"Really, the only reason he's hospitalized is for physiotherapy for nerve damage to his hands," Mrs. Britton said, and doctors feel the nerve damage will respond to the treatment.

Message Disappears When Paper Dries

By SHARI LEWIS

Here's a wet 'n' wild invisible writing method that doesn't use any kind of ink.

Dip the paper on which you want to put your message in water. Lay the wet paper on a smooth surface (such as a kitchen of bathroom counter or glass table top). Place a dry sheet of paper over the wet one. With a ballpoint pen write your message. Remove the dry top sheet of paper, and throw it away. Let your wet bottom sheet dry out. The secret message will be invisible, but take my word for it — it will be there!

To develop one of these wet 'n' wild message sheets, just dip the paper into water again. Now hold it up to the light. You will see the message you wrote, but it will be in lines of light. This is a watermark, and it's done in the same way that manufacturers mark their stationery so people will recognize their product.

By the way, when the paper dries, the message will once again disappear!

Carter Unveils Rural Proposals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's newly unveiled rural development agenda calls for reduced dependence on foreign oil, development of alternative energy sources and conservation.

Carter promised the administration would work over the next year to promote development of small-scale alcohol plants and small hydro-electric power generation.

He promised grants to community-owned utilities for development of unconventional gas, such as gas from coal or wood.

The policy also called for preserving farmland from development and controlling pollution from agricultural runoff.

Carter's rural policy was drafted after two years of consultations with rural citizens and groups and elected officials. It was intended to match an earlier urban policy.

Carter said each federal department and agency with any rural programs must have a rural advocate. A working group of officials from several departments — chaired by a new under secretary of agriculture and a White House assistant — will coordinate rural policies.

The policy, announced recently by the president, deals primarily with the quality of life in rural areas, focusing on education, housing, health care and jobs.

Those areas are expected to have an impact on the lives of farm families, but other areas in the policy agenda — energy, natural resources and transportation — will have the greatest direct impact on agriculture.

The president's rural energy goal is "reducing dependence on foreign oil through conservation while ensuring that necessary energy supplies are dependably available for agricultural production and marketing."

Carter said he supports direct and guaranteed loans to construct small alcohol plants financed from the pending windfall profits tax on oil companies and the extension of a gasohol exemption from the gasoline tax.

Commercialization of energy technology for wood products, wind, solar heat and small hydro-electric should be encouraged with federal funds, the policy said.

In the area of natural resources, the policy advocated "preserving agricultural land and promoting pollution-free land, air and water."

The agenda called for efforts to promote and demonstrate use of organic waste for fertilizer.

It advocated demonstration of the best ways to control pollution from agricultural runoff and full implementation of legislation to control agricultural runoff in areas where the runoff is greatest.

Federal officials were told to "move agressively" to complete a study of the effects of loss of farmland to development and measures to control such conversion.

In the field of transportation, the agenda said Congress passed an administration proposal which encouraged capital rehabilitation of railroad lines before they are abandoned and help in maintaining service on branch lines abandoned by private railroads.

Despite the goals and a list of more than 100 things the administration promised to do, the president's initiative did not address difficulties farmers face in getting crops to market when railcars are in short supply or railroads face bankruptcy.

It did not attempt to address how the loss of prime farmland might be stopped.

Detailed recommendations on the toughest issues are expected to be made by special panels, which are slated to issue major reports.

Grain Price Targets May Rise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Grain farmers — who are facing rapidly rising production costs — appear likely to get higher federal target price protection for 1980.

Legislation to raise wheat and feed grains target prices by 7 percent for the next crop was approved recently by the Senate. The bill was approved by voice vote without dissent.

The next step in the legislative process will be a House-Senate conference to work out differences between House and Senate bills.

The House earlier approved legislation raising target prices by 7 percent for the completed 1979 crop year. The Senate bill is expected to prevail in a conference committee.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Thomas Foley, D-Wash., immediately appointed House conferees so a conference will be ready to meet soon after Congress returns from its holiday break.

A conference compromise would face approval again by both houses and must be signed by President Carter.

The Senate bill would raise the wheat target price to $3.63 a bushel and the feed grains target price to $2.35 a bushel in 1980.

Targets for 1981 would remain at least as high as the 1980 levels. The agriculture secretary would have discretion to increase them further.

The administration supported a 7 percent target increase for feed grains and a smaller increase to $3.50 a bushel for wheat. A spokesman for the National Association of Wheat Growers predicted Carter would approve the Senate bill.

He said, "Farmers incurred heavy costs in 1979, and as they planted the 1980 winter wheat crop, they had costs 15 to 20 percent higher. This bill only reflects a portion of increases that farmers already have experienced."

He said they face even greater increases in energy and fertilizer costs next year.

If national average market prices fall below target prices, farmers are paid the difference between the target and the average price.

Woman Calls Recovery 'Miracle'

MONROE, Mich. (UPI) — The doctors said Jacqueline Fry would never walk again. With determination — and prayer — she proved them wrong.

She calls it "my miracle," because seven months after an auto accident left her paralyzed from the waist down, Mrs. Fry, 26, is walking with the aid of a cane — and even is able to drive her car.

On May 6, Mrs. Fry, her husband, Larry, and their 2-year-old daughter, Jennifer, were returning to their home in nearby Frenchtown Township after a visit with relatives when their car struck a bridge abutment.

Mrs. Fry was asleep in the back seat when the accident occurred. Her husband and daughter suffered minor injuries, but two of Mrs. Fry's vertebrae were fractured and a third was dislocated.

A few hours later, Mrs. Fry overheard her doctors saying she would never be able to walk again.

"I wasn't supposed to hear the doctors talking in the hallway outside my room at University Hospital," she said. "They thought I was still unconscious.

"I was just a mess when I heard them say I'd never walk again. For three weeks I didn't move anything, except my eyes and arms ... and lips," she said. "I prayed a lot."

Mrs. Fry said she was a woman of "average" religious belief prior to her accident, but "what happened has brought out my religion like crazy. It has made it all easier."

Mrs. Fry said her doctors told her she would be in the hospital nine months and "always be in a wheelchair."

"I told them I'd be out by the Fourth of July and that I would recover," she recalled. "I got out on July 3. And I walked out."

Mrs. Fry's recovery was no overnight miracle. It took time before she even was able to accomplish little things like just sitting up by herself.

"The first time I tried it myself, I thought I was going to fall in half," she said. "I didn't make it the first time, and there was a lot of pain. I cried a lot, mostly because I couldn't do it right away."

Then one day, Mrs. Fry said she "felt a little tingle in my toe. It was a flicker of hope."

She began to regain feeling in the lower part of her body after that and said she is confident now "I'll recover all the way."

Ralph Barwick, a therapist at Monroe Mercy Hospital, said Mrs. Fry's determination played a role in her recovery. Mrs. Fry said her good physical condition also helped.

But in the end, she said, it was "my faith in God" that did it.

BLUEMNER LANDSCAPES

WASHINGTON (AP) — An exhibition of 58 landscapes by an early 20th-century German-American artist, "Oscar Bluemner: The Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden Collection," will continue at the museum through March 2. Included in the exhibition are color sketches, drawings, watercolors and oil paintings. The display marks the first public showing of the museum's entire collection of works by Bluemner (1867-1938).

Beef Price Increases Expected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Beef prices will continue to rise next year as production declines, but plentiful supplies of pork and poultry will balance meat prices and supplies, according to the National Cattlemen's Association.

New figures from the association show U.S. beef production will fall to 20.4 billion pounds in 1980, down from 21.1 billion in 1979 and 24 billion in 1978.

The continued slide in beef production is expected to boost retail beef prices 10 to 15 percent above this year's average of $2.25 a pound, the association said.

The Agriculture Department's estimate for beef supplies and prices is slightly more optimistic. The department expects 20.9 billion pounds of beef to be produced next year with retail prices rising only 8 to 10 percent.

The association attributed only 5 percent on its projected 15 percent price increase to smaller beef supplies and the rest to inflation and rising marketing and distribution costs.

While smaller beef supplies normally translate into higher consumer prices, large supplies of other competitive meats will help temper beef price rises in 1980. And higher beef prices in 1980 will be good news in the long run for consumers as profits give cattlemen the incentive to increase cattle herds, thereby moderating beef prices in future years, the association said.

The nation's cattle herd on Jan. 1 is expected to be about 2 percent larger than the previous year, but the association warned in a statement, "It appears that the rebuilding phase of the cattle cycle in being slowed significantly by inflation, rapidly rising costs, the tight supply of money and higher interest rates.

USDA agricultural economist Ron Gustafson explained that 1979 was the low point of the normal 10-year cattle cycle. On Jan. 1, 1979, the size of the nation's cattle herd fell to 110.9 million head, down from the 1975 peak of 132 million.

He said in the past few decades, the cattle cycle usually peaked in years ending with five — 1945, 1965, 1975 — but in the 1980s it probably will peak later than 1985.

He said one reason for the delay is that many farmers are concentrating on grain production rather than cattle raising now that grain is a major export commodity. Also, the cattle herd liquidation rate in the 1970s from the peak to the lowest level was much sharper than usual, and therefore will take longer to rebuild.

Gustafson predicted, "We're going to see beef supplies and consumption increase in 1981 and gradually increase from there." Once production reaches its peak in a few years, prices will begin to drop, he said.

Gustafson said its hard to say if this year's projected decline in per capita beef consumption to about 103 pounds is strictly a factor of supply or is influenced by price and diet concerns.

Industry Forecast Predicts Rise In Coal Production For 1980

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. coal production will rise 2.6 percent in 1980 to a record 776 million tons, thanks largely to demand for western coal from electric power plants in the West and Southwest, the industry forecast today.

But the National Coal Association forecast said eastern coal production would stagnate at 1979 levels as quickened demand from industry and utilities is offset by a 1-million-ton dip in the use of coking coal for steel-making.

An unexpected increase in coal exports or electricity demand, however, could cause eastern coal output to top this year's 540-million-top level, the forecast said.

Coal production from mines west of the Mississippi — 216 million tons this year — is expected to grow to 236 million tons. The added demand will come mainly from new power plants in the Southwest and West.

Exports and domestic consumption of U.S. bituminous coal is expected to increase by 4.7 percent to 765 million tons next year.

Electric utilities will provide most of the 1980 growth for the coal industry, boosting their demand 4.9 percent from 529 million tons to 555 million tons.

Tony Anthony, spokesman for the coal trade group, said 271 new coal-fired power plants are on order and slated for operation between now and 1988 — a total of 55 percent of all planned new generating capacity.

Anthony conceded annual forecasts of electricity demand have widely overshot the mark in the past five years. But he said the lengthening time it takes to get a new coal or nuclear plant licensed has made up for overestimated needs for new generating plants.

"We believe that the country, because of the oil and gas situation, needsall the nuclear and coal plants we can build," said Anthony.

More than half the new coal-fired generating capacity coming on line is west of the Mississippi, he added.

Shrinking domestic coke oven capacity in the steel industry is expected to shave 1 million tons of coking coal from the 1980 coal demand forecast.

Industrial and retail coal use will rise from the current 67 million tons to 73 million tons in 1980 -- a 9 percent increase. Exports — 59 million tons this year — should reach 62 million tons.

The increase in exports is expected to come from overseas shipments, with exports to Canada remaining level at 18 million tons, the trade group said.

Haig Appointed Chief Of Technology Firm

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Alexander M. Haig Jr., who served as White House chief of staff in the final days of the Nixon administration and retired from the Army last summer as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, has been elected president and chief operating officer of United Technologies Corp., UTC announced today.

Haig succeeds Harry Gray, who stays with UTC as chairman and chief executive officer.

Haig, who over the weekend said he had decided against running for the Republican nomination for president, was also named to UTC's board of directors, Gray said in his announcement of Haig's new job.

Gray said that Haig, as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe, was responsible for the direction, planning, organization, administration and deployment of the integrated military forces of the 13-member nations to provide a common defense for the North Atlantic area.

"This wide range of management and administrative background, combined with Al Haig's extensive experience in world politics, diplomacy and international affairs, qualifies him as the best possible president and chief operating officer we could find for our rapidly growing international company," Gray said.

United Technologies designs, builds and sells a variety of high technology products, including Pratt & Whitney jet engines, Carrier air conditioning, Otis elevators and Sikorsky helicopters.

Gray, who had held the post of president since 1972, also announced that Robert J. Carlson and Peter J. Scott had been elected to UTC's board of directors. Both were recently elected executive vice presidents of UTC.

Attendance Down At Yule Dinner

Christmas dinner at the Salvation Army Lodge was not the event manager Danny Ketcham expected it to be this year.

Only 32 hungry mouths — down from last year's total of 69 — appeared at the evergreen-decked lodge for turkey dinner with all the trimmings, fresh fruit and gifts Tuesday, Ketcham said.

"We were anticipating up to 100," Ketcham said. He attributed the decrease in diners to $30 grocery vouchers distributed to needy families and singles by the Salvation Army.

"I think most people used the vouchers and cooked dinner at home," he said. Some 400 grocery vouchers were distributed this year, compared with 100 in 1978, according to Ketcham.

Although three families were among the diners at the lodge's Christmas celebration, most participants were single, Ketcham said. Children were given new toys, and everyone else got a gift and fresh fruit to take home, he said.

Flower Seller Gives Impression Of Nixon

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — On Saturdays, John Pecoraro's stage is one of the busiest street corners in this Phoenix suburb of 97,000. He plays Richard M. Nixon as a flower-seller.

Wearing a Nixon mask, he has the Nixon walk and manner down perfect. They are about the same build. He can change his voice to a better-than-passable Nixon imitation.

It's a good-humored spoof. Motorists, whizzing by or stopped for the traffic light, join in.

"Hiya, Dick!" they shout. They honk horns. They wave. They laugh. He waves, giving the Nixon double-V sign or holding a bouquet of flowers. Every now and then he gives exaggerated traffic directions, or shouts things like, "Four more years!" or, "I'm no crook!"

Many can't resist pulling alongside his stand.

Replied Pecoraro, in his Nixon voice: "Fifty cents each. But for, you, because you're my friend, $1.75."

She was still laughing as he escorted her to her car, opened and closed the door, and handed her two carnations for which she paid $1.

But Richard M. Nixon, the only man to resign as president, selling flowers?

Pecoraro said the idea is an excellent marketing tool. He hopes also to parlay it into a stage role playing "The Life and Times of Richard Nixon."

In real life, the 28-year-old Pecoraro is full-time membership director of the Chamber of Commerce in neighboring Tempe, population 100,000.

Some folks in Tempe didn't take kindly to his Nixon role at first, but recently he was elected president of the Tempe Exchange Club. Said Pecoraro: "They finally figured out who John is and who Richard is."

He said he admires Nixon, because Nixon believes in himself. He said he also thinks he knows what keeps Nixon going — the ability to laugh at himself.

Pecoraro was manager of a suburban branch of a Boston bank when he decided to return to Arizona's lifestyle. He has a degree from the University of Arizona and did graduate work at the University of Massachusetts.

"But I applied to 59 banks or savings and loans in the Phoenix area and I was either over-qualified or under-qualified for every job available," he recalled.

"In the 1930s, during the depression, bankers sold apples on street corners. That gave me an idea, since I was desperate. I answered an ad for a flower-seller. The stand's owner expected an attractive teen-age girl. I got the job when I told him about my Nixon idea, a take-off on the gag. 'Would you buy a used car from this man?'"

And what does flower selling pay?

"I'd rather not disclose that," came the Nixon-voice reply.

Grandmother Thankful For Cancer Operation

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Helen Young's food bill is running $600 a week, but she isn't complaining.

The 59-year-old grandmother underwent a 5½-hour operation to remove most of her cancerous small intestine last month, and lives on a highly concentrated liquid containing sugar, protein, vitamins and minerals that flows directly into her heart through a tube permanently implanted in her chest.

Mrs. Young said she was confronted with deciding on the operation, and taking on a whole new way of life, or enduring the stomach cramps that she had lived with for five years.

"I could have lived perhaps a year or so (without the operation), but the tumors were very large and choking my intestine," she said. "I was in a lot of pain ... every time I ate I'd suffer for it."

Every Monday, Mrs. Young goes to Baptist Hospital and picks up seven two-liter bottles of her liquid food. The week's supply costs about $600, which doesn't include related costs for medical supplies and sterilization equipment.

It takes about eight hours for her to ingest two liters of the syrupy food.

She said she hooks up every evening about 8 p.m. by connecting a tube from the bottle to the one in her chest, which runs beneath the skin from near her right shoulder to the heart. She said she has learned to sleep while being fed.

"This might seem strange, but I'm not hungry all the time," she said. "The only time I feel like I'm really hungry is, like, when I made hamburger and I smelled pickles. It's a glandular thing. So I put a pickle in my mouth and I didn't want the pickle any more."

She said she occasionally takes bites of toast and spits them out without swallowing. She also drinks tea and other liquids.

More Workers To Be Idled At Plants

DETROIT (AP) — Only four assembly plants will be idle when American autoworkers return Jan. 2 from Christmas vacations. But more workers will be on indefinite layoff and another plant soon will closed for good, industry officials say.

Some 7,000 workers will be on temporary layoff, about one-tenth of this week's figure, according to company announcements late last week. But the number on indefinite furlough will rise to more than 141,000, compared to the current total of 115,000.

Production and sales are now at their lowest point since the 1974-75 recession, when 300,000 workers were laid off. Inventories are high.

Ford Motor Co. said its Wixom, Mich., plant would remain closed until Jan. 14 to work down stocks of Lincolns. About 2,800 workers will be idled.

General Motors Corp. said its Janesville, Wis., light truck assembly line would not reopen until Jan. 7, idling 280 workers for three days.

As announced previously, Chrysler Corp. will close its St. Louis and Newark, Del., plants unti mid-month for retooling made necessary by the permanent closing of the Hamtramck, Mich., plant Jan. 4. About 4,000 workers will be idled in the two temporary shutdowns.

GM said it would drop one shift from the Pontiac, Mich., plant of the GMC Truck & Coach division, with 1,000 indefinite furloughs, and would cut the line speed at Norwood, Ohio, from 56 cars an hour to 42, putting 1,300 out of work.

Those actions add 2,300 to the 11,580 indefinite layoffs announced by GM for January on Dec. 4. When those are added to GM's current total of 45,560 indefinite furloughs, the company will have 59,440 idle workers.

Chrysler's Hamtramck closing will result in layoffs for about 3,000, to be called back to work at other plants when 1981-model production begins. However, no recall dates have been given.

At present, Chrysler has about 33,200 on indefinite layoff, which will climb to 36,200.

Ford put its current indefinite layoffs at 36,500 and American Motors Corp. has 1,200. That makes the industry total 115,260 now and 133,400 in early January out of a work force of about 758,000.

The layoff numbers are approximations of an actual count. Ford includes workers in its steel and glass operations, which have extensive sales outside the auto industry, but not its aerospace operations. GM said some layoffs in component plants have not yet been reported to headquarters. Canadian plants are not included.

Except for low-seniority workers at Chrysler who have exhausted their fund, laid-off workers get state unemployment benefits and company supplements designed to give them 95 percent of their base take-home pay less $12.50 a week for commuting expenses.

Group Cites Oil Waste

NEW YORK (AP) — With the price of imported oil soaring, a trade association says there is a way the United States can in effect buy a barrel of oil at least 25 percent cheaper than the going rate for imported crude.

When lead antiknocks are added to gasoline they not only boost the octane rating, but lessen the need for refining, according to the Lead Industries Association.

Werner T. Meyer, LIA president, says every pound of lead antiknock used saves about $21 on a barrel of crude. With lead antiknocks priced at less than $1 a pound, $5 in effect "buys" a barrel, he said. The going price is about $20 a barrel.

CHOW LINE — British soldiers of the Commonwealth Cease-Fire Monitoring Force line up for breakfast in a mess tent in Salisbury, Rhodesia, before being deployed to monitor guerrilla and Rhodesian assembly points and bases. The troops began moving out today and other members of the force will follow Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Guerrilla Officers Fly Home To New Camps

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — At least 100,000 jubilant, chanting blacks surrounded Salisbury airport today, and hordes of them tore down a barbed-wire topped fence and mobbed the first group of guerrilla officers to fly home under the Rhodesian cease-fire accord.

They also smashed the windows of the bus carrying the officers in a frenzy to reach them with hugs and kisses.

Police had closed the airport to all but passengers and reporters but black airport workers cheered wildly as Commander Mafela Masuku led his camouflaged, sidearm-carrying men off the plane.

Thousands of blacks surrounding the airport then broke down the six-foot-high security fence around the terminal, flooded in and cheered the guerrillas.

They chanted "PF," "PF" for Patriotic Front, and "Pamberi Ne Chimerenga," which means "Onward the Struggle!"

Scores of police reinforcements including the Salisbury Special Weapons and Tactics squad, were rushed to the scene. Police with dogs managed to force most of the blacks outside the airport perimeter but the crowd was expected to swell in anticipation of the arrival of the second guerrilla group from Mozambique.

"I'm very happy to be home even though I've been in and out of the country a lot over the years," said Masuku.

"All we want to do now is to sit down and discuss this whole thing and we will abide by the settlement," he added, referring to the London agreement for a cease-fire in the seven-year-old guerrilla war that has claimed more than 21,000 lives.

The cease-fire is to go into effect at midnight Friday, setting the stage for elections April 24 that will establish black-majority rule, a prerequisite for independence from Britain.

A black Rhodesian army sergeant, Herbert Matogo, who has lost five brothers in the war, said, "This is the only answer — for us to be brothers again. Brother has been fighting brother for too long and it's got to stop."

An elderly white, who arrived on a domestic flight moments before the guerrillas, vented the outrage many whites feel when he said, "There are a lot of blokes who would pay money to take that lot (guerrillas) out."

Officials fear possible attacks on returning guerrilla leaders, especially those of Masuku's Zambia-based Zimbabwe African People' Union. This group, led by Joshua Nkomo, shot down two Air Rhodesia airliners, killing 107 persons. Their relatives have sworn revenge.

Police Supt. Brian Marriott said security for the guerrilla leaders would be low key but "we'll certainly look out for them."

The Rhodesian army has staged dozens of cross-border raids on guerrilla camps in Zambia and Mozambique, where Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union forces are based. It was not known when Mugabe and Nkomo would return.

The guerrilla officers' first job was to persaude their troops, believed to number at least 16,000, to leave their hiding places and move to the assembly camps. The officers also will serve as liaison between the guerrillas and the British Commonwealth force that will monitor the camps.

Under the London cease-fire agreement, a 1,200-man Commonwealth force will keep tabs on the guerrillas.

Unwanted Nicaraguan Refugees Face Hardships In Honduras

TALANGA, Honduras (AP) — More than 3,000 persons from neighboring Nicaragua are living in refugee camps, hungry and unwanted, the victims of the civil war that toppled dictator Anastasio Somoza.

Most of them are young soldiers or low-ranking officers from Somoza's now-disbanded national guard that was his mainstay while he ruled Nicaragua. Only a few brought their families when they fled.

Somoza was overthrown by left-wing Sandinista guerrillas in mid-July after a year-long civil war that ended 43 years of iron-fisted rule by his family in Nicaragua. The Red Cross estimates that more than 45,000 persons died in the fighting between the national guard and the guerrillas, who now rule the country provisionally through a junta of four men and one woman.

At one time, close to 35,000 Nicaraguan refugees were living in Honduras, but most of them have either returned home or moved on to other countries. The core of 3,000 refugees, living in tents in hill country about 20 miles from the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa, get no sympathy from the Hondurans.

Many atrocity stories have been associated with Somoza's national guard during the civil war, and the guardsmen cannot find refuge in any other Central American country.

The rank and symbols are gone from the tattered uniforms of the guardsmen, but the refugee camps still reflect the military training they received. There is a lot of discipline.

Most of the refugees refuse to identify themselves by their real names. A young, sandy-haired former lieutenant who only calls himself "Chele" says the refugees survive mostly on food rations the Honduran government distributes every week.

They also get a little money working as handymen for farmers and coffee-growers in the area. "They get enough out of that to buy a few extra things," Chele said.

"This is all we want. We just want a chance to restart our lives. We have no intention of returning to Nicaragua and much less of attempting an invasion as some Nicaraguan officials have said," Chele told The Associated Press in an interview.

The refugees are afraid they may be arrested if they return to Nicaragua because of their association with the Somoza regime. The Sandinista authorities there have already arrested 7,500 former national guardsmen and Somoza government officials, and are trying them by special courts for murder, arson, torture and other war-related crimes.

Wrapped in a heavy overcoat to ward off a light drizzle, Chele pointed to two of his companions and said: "We were military. We fought and we killed because either we killed or we got killed.

"We lost the war. We recognize it. They won. We have nothing, but we have to go on living."

Chele said he walked for five days through mountains and hills to arrive in Honduras and the refugee camp after Somoza's overthrow.

"I have not seen my family since. They do not know if I am alive. I have a wife and two children and I still hope I can get together again with them and live somewhere, maybe here," Chele said.

Another ex-lieutenant, who called himself Luis, said: "Look, the national guard maybe did some bad things. But the Sandinistas were no saints. There was killing on both sides."

He claimed he was one of a group of 1,000 that fled Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, and was stopped at the Honduran border by Sandinista guerrillas.

"We wanted to fight our way through and could have done so. But a bishop interceded and convinced us to surrender. We were taken prisoner," he recalled.

"Many of the group disappeared in the middle of the night. The Sandinistas would come in and take those who had no relatives or had not notified their relatives. We never saw them again."

Luis said he was questioned and released a few weeks later with a certificate saying there were no charges pending against him.

"I got a job, but the Sandinistas would pick me up every time they felt like it for questioning."

"I returned to my town but they would not let me live in peace," he said.

Sinai Station Destroyed

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Army engineers have blown up a top secret underground early warning station in the Sinai Desert to prepare for handing over more territory to Egypt under terms of the peace treaty with Israel.

The $30 million station, built in 1969 atop the 2,425-foot Mount Umm Khashiba, had a 90-mile range and could monitor ground and air activity beyond the Suez Canal all the way to Cairo.

During the 1973 Middle East war, the station served as the major frontline Israeli command post.

After the war, the station remained in a U.N. buffer zone and was operated by Israeli and American technicians.

Mount Umm Khashiba is in the final chunk of the Sinai to be returned to Egypt next Jan. 25 at the end of a phased withdrawal that will place the Israelis east of the El Arish-Ras Mohammed line.

The Star Spangled Banner was first performed in Baltimore, Md., in 1814.

Death Sentences In Park Killing Upheld

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Death sentences for South Korea's former spy chief and six other men convicted in the assassination of President Park Chung-hee have been upheld by the nation's martial law commander, officials said today.

If the penalties are eventually carried out, six of the defendants would be hanged and the seventh, an army officer, would be shot by a firing squad, according to Korean law.

Martial law commander Gen. Lee Hui-sung, who also serves as army chief of staff and could have commmuted the sentences, also confirmed a three-year jail term for an eighth defendant found guilty of destroying evidence in the Oct. 26 slaying.

Lawyers for six of the seven condemned men, including Kim Jae-kyu, the former head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, said they would appeal the death sentences to a high military court.

The defendants have one week to file their appeals and the court was expected to open new trials by the end of January.

The confirmation of the sentences, which were handed down last Thursday, is required by South Korean law within ten days of sentencing.

The seventh defendant in the Park assassination is an army colonel who falls under military jurisdiction. He can only seek a retrial in the event of new evidence.

DR. LAMB

Alfalfa Tablets

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR.LAMB — I read your column about alfalfa tablets and you said they weren't of any benefit. I'm 72 years old and in good health so far. I haven't been to a doctor in five or six years and was in good health the last time I went.

Doctor, there are two things I want to know. I've been taking vitamins as well as alfalfa. Are all vitamins useless or are there some good ones? If you have a booklet on the good ones, plese send me one. I'm easy to be aroused sexually but lately it lasts just a few minutes. What is the cause of this? Can it be my age? Can medical treatment help? All the time I thought the mixture of vitamins that I was taking had something to do with my long healthy sex life. Please give me an answer.

DEAR READER — We all need vitamins. Without them, a person can develop a number of deficiency diseases. The point is we should get an adequate amount of vitamins and minerals by eating a well-balanced diet. An adequate amount of each of the four basic food groups and a variety of foods in each group assure you of the necessary vitamins.

People who don't eat properly or who have medical problems that interfere with a normal diet need vitamin supplements. Vitamins help you break down the food you eat, specifically the proteins, carbohydrates and fats. While vitamins don't provide energy, they're necessary to release the energy from your food. In this role, most of the vitamins are used over and over as a catalyst, somewhat like the battery in your car being used over and over to start your car and being recharged when the car is running.

Alfalfa tablets are commonly used by some health enthusiasts, but they really don't have any unique medicinal qualities. And they won't help your sex life.

I suspect your satisfactory sex life through all these years is related to your general good health and nutrition rather than any pills you have taken. If a person is on a deficient diet or has vitamin and mineral deficiencies which affect the normal health, that can decrease a person's sexual capacity. In that instance, providing the normal essential vitamins and minerals may restore the sexual functions and interest just as the other normal functions of the body are restored.

You shouldn't be too surprised that your sexual capacity is waning. About half of American men become impotent at about age 75.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-12, Impotence, to give you a general discussion of the problem. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Impotence is just a symptom and it's a much more common symptom than most men like to admit. It can be caused from anything from psychological problems, poor circulation, or damage to vital nerve fibers as can occur in diabetes or following certain surgical procedures. Decrease in the level of male hormones is seldom a significant factor.

Abandoned Baby Called Godsend By Clergyman

LONGVIEW (AP) — An abandoned infant is a reminder of the "real essence of Christmas" says the minister who found the 3-day-old child earlier this month near the manger scene at his church.

"I see this as a reminder of another time when another baby was brought into a cold, angry, hostile world," said the Rev. Charles Holland, pastor of the First Baptist Church here.

But the judge supervising the adoption of the child known only as Timothy Christmas strongly disagreed.

"There is a lot more bah humbug in this than there is merry Christmas," said State District Judge William C. Martin III, who terminated the mother's rights to the child.

Holland said "God was in the process" Dec. 3 when he found the crying infant wrapped in a dingy dishcloth, an orange flowered sheet and tucked inside a cardboard box that was left between the wise men and the sheep in the nativity scene.

"I'm Timothy .... please take care of me," said a note left behind with the child.

The pastor said he believes God used Timothy to focus attention "on all the little people of need, the abandoned people, the hated people, the hungry people, the forgotten people."

"There is nothing miraculous in human misery," countered the judge.

He said the child's mother was possibly the victim of a sexual crime that brought about the pregnancy, but he said there will be no criminal prosecution.

"From what we know, it would be the worst kind of cruelty to go into it any further. There's nothing of any social or political value or any lesson to be learned from exposure of the parents," said Martin.

The discovery also touched many local residents.

"It made us feel like we were special," said Mrs. W.O. Avery, 74, of Longview. "We all feel like God had a purpose in it. He wanted us to realize the real spirit of Christmas is humility and compassion."

However, the judge said he feared news of the event could have prompted other desperate new mothers to abandon their children at church nativity scenes.

Martin said the mother should have contacted the Texas Department of Human Resources or an adoption agency that would have kept her confidence, said Martin.

The judge became so concerned about publicity that he ordered all those involved with Timothy not to talk about the baby.

Holland said he thinks the publicity had a purpose.

"It reminded us again," said Holland, "that the real essence of Christmas is not dollars and cents and tinsel — but it's life."

Three Texas Prison Escapees Captured

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Three female escapees from a Texas prison were being held on $150,000 bonds each, pending delivery of federal warrants accusing them of kidnapping, authorities said.

The trio, arrested here Monday night following a high-speed chase, also were being held for investigation of aggravated robbery, auto theft, interstate transportation of a stolen car and escape from a penal institution.

Sylvia Jean Brown, 37; Patricia Ann Watson, 32, and Mary Lou Santellana, 30, were transferred Tuesday from the Pueblo City Jail to the County Jail.

Police said it was unknown if Texas authorities would choose to extradite the three women, or if the FBI might intervene. The fugitives were wanted by the FBI in connection with an Oklahoma City kidnapping.

Officials said they escaped from the Goree Unit of the Texas prison in Huntsville last Thursday. Miss Brown and Miss Santellana each were serving 25 years for aggravated robbery, and Miss Watson was serving 20 years for robbery.

Authorities began searching for the three women after the abduction of Regina M. Raymond, 21, and her 3-year-old son, Cameron, from a shopping center in Oklahoma City on Sunday. The victims were released unharmed about nine hours later at the Wichita, Kan., airport, the FBI said.

Miss Santellana also is wanted in the alleged robbery and stabbing of a 71-year-old woman in Enid, Okla. The victim, Leona McMillen, was hospitalized briefly after the incident.

The fugitives were picked up late Monday afternoon in connection with the robbery of a Pueblo woman.

Officers began the chase after Nita A. Valdez, 30, reported that she had been robbed of her purse by a woman wielding a screwdriver at the Northside Shopping Center.

New Savings Certificate Designed To Raise Funds

In the hopes of attracting more funds into housing, federal officials have authorized a new 2 1/2 year savings certificate.

The new certificate, according to Charley Pope, executive vice president of first Federal Savings and Loan, is tied to the rate being paid on 2 1/2 year Treasury Bills less one-half percent for savings institutions and three-quarters percent for less commercial banks. When interest is compounded, savers at savings and loans receive slightly more interest than they would on a 2 1/2 year Treasury security, Pope explained.

A series of regulatory moves designed to help the small saver — including the new 2 1/2 year certificate tied to the yield on Treasury securities — was announced jointly today by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the First Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve Board and the National Credit Union Administration.

The new certificate replaces the 4-year variable rate deposit that was established effective last July 1. All fixed rate ceilings remain in effect, however.

The changes, which will go into effect January 1, also will increase the ability of federally insured depository institutions to compete for funds with market instruments which are not subject to interest rate ceilings.

Cancer Society Slates 'Stop Smoking' Clinic

The Lubbock unit of the American Cancer Society will sponsor a "Stop Smoking" clinic from 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursdays, beginning Jan. 3. The program will include four consecutive weeks of sessions, according to cancer society officials. All sessions are free.

Persons may register for the program by coming to the ACS office, 1902 Ave. M, Room 101, on weekdays prior to the beginning of the course.

The program will instruct smokers on the positive ways to quit the habit, concentrating on incentives and motives not to smoke, and creating new desires to give up cigarettes.

The program encourages participants to give up smoking for a 48-hour period, then, through group discussion, relates the problems and successes in quitting.

In addition, a doctor and other health care professionals will lecture on expected body withdrawals and coping with them. However, no unsightly or distateful materials will be presented in its course.

Vacant Apartment Damaged In Blaze

A vacant apartment at 401 N. Boston Ave. sustained minor damage as a result of a fire early Tuesday morning which fire officials believe may have been caused by arson.

Firefighters were called to the apartment about 3:29 a.m. and quickly doused the flames. Reports indicate firefighters smelled a strong odor of kerosene when they arrived on the scene.

The apartment received minor damage to interior walls.

PERSIAN PAINTINGS

Store Clerk Threatens Lubbock Man, Children

Jail the suspect again refused to get out of the car and resisted officers who finally took him to the jail, reports indicate. One police officer was slightly injured when he was pushed into a parked car.

The club manager said the man had caused a disturbance and had threatened him with a knife.

In other activity, Rosa Rodriguez of 1809 6th St. told police she was sitting in the living room of her residence when two bullets were fired through the wall, one of which struck her in the left arm.

The incident occurred at about 10 p.m. Monday. The woman's wound was minor, police said.

A 29-year-old Oklahoma woman reported that her uncle had stabbed her left forearm several times as she was leaving a residence on 77th Street Monday, police said. The woman told police the stabbing occurred without any provocation. Charges had not been filed Tuesday.

George Karabinis, 26, of 1702 Ave. R, told police two men accosted him in an alley in the vicinity of 1800 17th St. late Monday night and took $140 from him. Karabinis said one of the men hit him in the face before the pair took his money and fled down the alley.

A 21-year-old city woman reported Tuesday a man with whom she is acquainted assaulted her and tore off her clothing near the intersection of 39th Street and Avenue A shortly before noon.

The woman told police the man had followed her when she left her 28th Street apartment in her car. She said the man forced her to pull over, got out of his car and attempted to pull the woman out of her car.

Unable to do so, the man reportedly beat her with his fists and kicked her several times in the face. Police said she received minor cuts on her face and shoulders.

Ricardo Aleman, 22, of 4111 N. Glove Ave., received a minor stab wound in the back when he was assaulted outside his home early Tuesday morning, police said.

The suspects in the incident reportedly had been in an argument with Aleman earlier in the evening at another residence.

Aleman's wife told police she, her husband and another couple had returned home after the argument when they heard someone kicking the front door of their home. Aleman was assaulted when he answered the door, police said. He was treated for the wound at St. Mary's Hospital and released.

Noerminia Basaluda of 1902 Sixth St. reported goods valued at $1,100 had been taken from her home between 7 p.m. Monday and 8 a.m. Tuesday. Items taken include a sewing machine, a television, clothing, linens and $200 cash, police said.

Stereo equipment, a television, several household appliances and clothing were stolen from the home of James Perea of 3722 26th St. between noon Sunday and 2 p.m. Tuesday, police said. The loss was estimated at $700.

Police Seeking Lamesa Man

Regional authorities this morning were still looking for a Lamesa man who surrendered himself to Slaton police after reportedly running a red light Monday, and then escaped from the police department booking room a short time later.

The 17-year-old was unattended when he slipped out a back door and garage door — left open by mistake — in the Slaton Police Department at about 5 p.m. Monday.

He reportedly was seen in Lubbock at 7 p.m. Monday near 24th Street and Avenue H.

The young man, who currently is wanted by Slaton police on charges of escaping custody and several traffic-related offenses, is believed to be heading back to Lamesa, police said.

When Christmas time comes rolling by,
They say St. Nick takes to sky!
But what have we, this snowy year?
He drives a car- not his deer!
And so, dear friends, 'tis this we pray...
That he drives with care his 4-Door sleigh;
that he doesn't skid when the sky is sleeting
So he may bring this Holiday Greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS, HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Is nuclear energy worth the risk?

Every year we need about 5% more electric power to keep the wheels turning, provide jobs for a growing population, and light our way.

Fossil fuels like coal and oil won't last forever. Where will we get our power? The oversimple answer is...from the atom.

Those in favor say we've got no choice. Solar energy, wind power, tide power are visionary options. Conservation alone can't do the job. If we're very careful, these voices say, we can have our nuclear power and safety, too.

Not a chance, say others. No human enterprise is free from human error. The mistake will be made; the explosion will happen; the results will be horrible. Also, the problems of disposing of the waste products from nuclear reactors are mindboggling. Many of these wastes will stay deadly for thousands of years. How do you store them? Is it right to leave our "hot garbage" for future generations to deal with?

What do you think?

Your opinion makes a difference, but to reach an informed opinion you need facts and viewpoints. That's where we come in. As your daily newspaper, we give you the information you need. Breaking news. Editorial opinion. Columns. Letters to the editor. We keep you on top of issues like nuclear energy—issues that affect your life.

So read us regularly. Don't miss an issue.

OVER THE LINE — Arizona fullback Hubert Oliver goes over the top of a Pittsburgh lineman for a yard and the Wildcats' touchdown in the fourth quarter of Tuesday's Fiesta Bowl contest at Tempe, Ariz. Pitt's Schubert Gets Kick Out Of Fiesta Victory

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — University of Pittsburgh kicker Mark Schubert said it was a thrill to be named the Fiesta Bowl's most valuable offensive player but thought it might mean even more to his parents.

"I hadn't done any Christmas shopping out here and this is going to be my present to my parents," said Schubert, who sandwiched a 36-yard field goal between a pair of 46-yarders as the 10th-ranked Panthers defeated the University of Arizona 16-10 in Tuesday's nationally televised game.

Dan Marino, Pitt's freshman quarterback, hit tight end Benjie Pryor on a 12-yard scoring pass in the third quarter for the Panthers' only touchdown in the contest, played before a crowd of 55,347 at Sun Devil Stadium.

Schubert's first field goal came with 10 seconds remaining in the opening period.

"You know, it was a funny thing about that," said Schubert, a senior who led the Panthers in scoring this season. "A friend of my girlfriend's mother has been sick and in the hospital, and I said, 'I'm going to kick it for this lady.'

"I usually don't do that, but my girlfriend asked me and I told her I would make my first field goal for Marita."

Marino, who completed 15 of 29 passes for 172 yards while giving up two interceptions, said Pitt had been helped greatly by Schubert all year. "In fact, we may have won this game because of him — because of his consistency," he added.

Pittsburgh, making its fourth straight bowl appearance, ended the season with an 11-1 record and a 10-game victory streak.

Winning coach Jackie Sherrill said he thought Arizona, which finished at 6-5-1, had an outstanding game plan.

"They threw the ball extremely well," said Sherrill. "When they were unable to run with the ball, they came out throwing it. It surprised me that they could throw the ball that well."

Sherrill was pressed on his feelings about how highly ranked his Panthers should be.

"I think we should wind up in the top

Duke Rules As No. 1; Ohio State Stock Falls

By The Associated Press

Duke, extended to overtime by Boston College and hard-pressed by Providence in winning the Industrial National Classic last weekend, maintained a firm hold on the No. 1 position today in a very scrambled Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Blue Devils collected 41 of 54 first-place votes and 1,064 out of a possible 1,080 points in the balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Bill Foster's team edged Boston College 70-64 in the first round of the tournament and held off a furious Providence comeback in posting an 82-79 win in the championship game.

But Duke wasn't the only member of the Top 20 which had its problems last week. There were many close calls, and some surprises.

Kentucky, which moved up a notch to No. 2 this week after collecting eight first-place votes and 991 points, scored a heart-thumping 61-60 win over Purdue in the championship of the Kentucky Invitational last weekend. The Wildcats also posted lopsided wins over Georgia and California during the week in running their record to 10-1.

Notre Dame, ranked fourth last week, also moved up a place while DePaul, Louisiana State and North Carolina, ranked sixth, seventh and eighth, respectively, last week, each moved up two pegs on the poll.

The Fighting Irish collected three first-place votes and 907 points after last week's win over Fairfield. DePaul, which captured the Chicagoland Classic last weekend, was tabbed on one first-place ballot and received 860 points. LSU was fifth with 815 points followed by North Carolina with 784 points — just three more than Ohio State, which plummeted from second to seventh after being upset 75-65 by Louisville.

Purdue, Syracuse and Indiana rounded out the Top 10. The Boilermakers were eighth with 624 points — 17 more than the Orangemen — while injury-ridden Indiana, No. 5 last week and a four-point loser to North Carolina Saturday, slipped to No. 10 with 532.

Celtic Turnabout

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ
And STEVE PERKINS

Q. I am amazed at the turnaround of the Boston Celtics from last season to this. I can't believe that Larry Bird, the rookie, is the whole reason for it. Or is this accepted as the case?

—Dale Colvin, St. Louis.

A. Bird is one added ingredient; so is the ebullient sixth man, M. L. Carr. But it is still center Dave Cowens' team, according to the man who is most responsible for the Celtics rejuvenation, coach Bill Fitch. Of Cowens, Fitch says, "I know how this car was put together."

But, in truth, Fitch himself is the source of all the Celtics' success so far, if you realize that also encompasses the man who finally had the authority to pick him, Red Auerbach. Part of Fitch's philosophy: "I've never known a good player who couldn't take a tongue-lashing — as long as it's about a basketball situation — then turn around and go to dinner with you 10 minutes later."

Q. Do you think that black quarterbacks are given an equal chance to play the big role in the pros?

—J.B. Terrell, Tex.

A. They are given the same chance as most white quarterbacks who come out of college — and from top rated teams — which is little chance at all. The Chicago Bears dealt honorably with Vince Evans this season before he was felled by illness. Remember white Jack Mildren of Oklahoma, a great college quarterback who got to run only half a dozen plays as such for Baltimore? College offenses that produce pro quarterback prospects are rare. When there is a black Marc Wilson (Brigham Young), he will step right in. As sportswriter David Klein of Newark says: "If Tampa Bay and San Diego get to the Super Bowl, and Dan Fouts gets hurt, you'll see Doug Williams vs. James Harris and they'll have to show the rest of the game in sepia color."

Q. I read that the WBC welterweight champ, Jose Cuevas, will fight Sugar Ray Leonard, the WBA champ, for a $12 million gate in the LA Coliseum. Is there anything to this?

—King Delucci, San Diego, Calif.

A. That story was a hype before Cuevas' recent title defense in LA. The proposition was that Leonard would get $2.5 million. Michael Trainer, the attorney who handles Leonard's affairs, asked a logical question: "Who gets the other $9.5 million?"

Cuevas (who he?) will have to stand in line. Leonard's plans call for a bout with Englishman David Green, then a rematch with Wilfredo Benitez, then a granddaddy of a bout with Roberto Duran.

Q. Is Porsche going to enter a car in next year's Indianapolis 500, as I have read? Who will drive it?

—Gates Vauthier, Mobile, Ala.

A. That's the plan at the moment. Danny Ongais will be behind the wheel. He recently turned a 199-mph lap in a Porsche at Ontario Speedway. The last German car entered at Indianapolis was a Mercedes way back in 1948.

* * *

Q. What has happened to John Cappelletti of the LA Rams? Has he quit football because of injury? How many years did he have in the league?

—Carol Hedley, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. Cappelletti, who would have been playing his fifth NFL season, was put on injured reserve at the start of the year, partly due to the shoulder injury inflicted by Dallas tackle Randy White in last year's NFC title game, but mainly due to a chronic groin injury.

Unlike quarter back Pat Haden, who has remained close to the team after being KO'd by a broken finger, Cappelletti has stayed far away from the Rams. "Maybe I should be more loyal to the team," he says, "but I'm not sure I'm still part of the team." Cappalletti is 27.

Buckeye QB Thinks Only Of Football Now

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Art Schlichter may have a rare opportunity for a big-time college athlete — play on national champions in football and basketball in the same school year.

But first things first insists the star sophomore quarterback of Ohio State's top-ranked football team.

"I just want to get the first one over with. And I don't even know that, if we beat Southern California, we're sure of being the national champions," said Schlichter.

After the Buckeyes play third-ranked Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day, the 6-foot-3 Schlichter will join Ohio State's basketball squad, ranked seventh in the country and among the Big Ten title favorites.

The son of an Ohio soybean farmer serves as a reserve guard in basketball.

But in football, he's center stage in the Buckeyes' bid for a third national crown. They were the Associated Press champions in 1954 and 1968.

Schlichter has broken the school's single season total offense record in his first two years. He accounted for 1,840 yards as a freshman; 1,955 in 1979.

His passing showed th most dramatic improvement. Schlichter threw 21 interceptions as a freshman, just five as a sophomore. His completions leaped from 87 to 94, his yardage from 1,250 to 1,519 and his air touchdowns from four to 13.

Development of more sophisticated pass routes under first-year coach Earle Bruce was one of the reasons behind Schlichter's stardom. But the all-Big Ten quarterback, fourth in the Heisman Trophy voting, offers another reason.

"I threw about the same number of passes," said Schlichter after a workout Tuesday at Citrus Community College. "But this year, we were throwing more on first down. The pass was more of a weapon than an alibi on third down."

Pass defense might be the weakest part of the Trojans' defense. They gave up 2,189 yards via the air, an average of 199 yards per game this season.

"I hope we can pass, but I think we have to mix it up — run and pass both. It's a great challenge. It's the biggest game of my life," said Schlichter.

While Southern California took Christmas off, the Buckeyes practiced two hours before spending the afternoon at a private yacht club along the ocean.

The team learned Tuesday that starting defensive tackle Luther Henson apparently will miss the Rose Bowl because he is still suffering from a stress fracture sustained late in the season. Henson did not participate in the team's first two workouts on the West Coast. Teammate safety Vince Skillings, another all-conference selection, aggravated a right leg muscle in the Tuesday workout, however, team officials expect Skillings to be ready to play against the Trojans.

Linebacker Immersed In Soap(ie)

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants middle linebacker Harry Carson managed to stay calm as the likes of Tony Dorsett, Ottis Anderson and Wilbert Montgomery came rumbling his way.

But the 26-year-old Carson met his match last week when he made a guest appearance on the soap opera, "One Life to Live," which airs today.

"I had a nice time. I was a little nervous at first but the cast members helped me out quite a bit," Carson said. "I played the part of Frank Sparrow, a linebacker for the Cougars. I was the defensive captain. It was rather realistic."

Carson is a devoted soap opera fan. After the Giants dropped a heartbreaker to Dallas, Carson trudged into work the next day and confided he would much rather be home watching, "The Young and the Restless."

So when ABC contacted Carson about making a guest appearance on its daytime serial it was your basic dream come true.

Carson made his debut despite a painful groin injury suffered the day before in the Giants season finale. He was selected for the part because news of his devotion to the soaps filtered to the ABC casting department. On the show, Sparrow is interviewed by the character Pat Ashley who "has a show kind of like Dinah Shore," Carson said.

A spokeswoman for ABC said Carson did a good job despite being extremely uptight. "He was so nervous," she laughed. "He didn't know what to do with his hands. He was tapping his foot while waiting for his cues. The other actors would come up and reassure him. He said he just felt out of his area of expertise."

Carson spent little time studying his five or six lines because he was busy preparing for the football game.

"It was kind of funny. Going to the studio I was reciting the lines and when I got in front of the camera, everything went blank," said Carson, who will appear in his second straight Pro Bowl next month. "I started very nervous, but once I got through the rehearsal everyone said I was doing great."

The one-time appearance paid $600.

Bench Troops Lead Way In 76ers' Forward March

By The Associated Press

Bobby Jones, Steve Mix and Henry Bibby sat on the Philadelphia bench and waited until they were needed. Once called upon, the 76ers trio responded — scoring all 25 of their team's fourth-quarter points in a comeback 95-92 victory over the Washington Bullets.

"We know for this team to win the championship, the bench has to do its job," said Mix, who scored six of his 12 points in that final quarter Tuesday as Philadelphia's reserves outscored the Bullets 25-21 in the last 12 minutes. "I enjoy this reserve role because Bobby (Jones) and I can team up and go all-out on every play."

That's just what they did Tuesday. Jones scored 12 points in less than nine minutes as the 76ers snapped a 77-77 tie and pulled to a 94-84 lead with 2:47 to play.

"Steve (Mix) and I have blended in very well. We gamble a lot on defense," said Jones, noting that the 76ers' rebounding strength enables the two to lead the fast break. The break led to five layups by Jones in that nine-minute span.

Bibby, meanwhile, collected seven of his 15 points in the fourth quarter as Philadelphia recorded its 13th victory in 16 games and pulled within 1½ games of first-place Boston in the Atlantic Division of the NBA's Eastern Conference.

In all, the Philadelphia reserves outscored the Bullets' bench 45-18 as Jones finished with 18 points. Elvin Hayes, who helped Washington to a 50-47 halftime, finished with a game-high 29.

Knicks 131, Nets 102

Bill Cartwright scored 33 points and Toby Knight added 25 as New York ran up its biggest winning margin of the season.

The Knicks amassed 70 first-half points and scored at least 30 points in each period.

"This time we walked away embarrassed," said Mike Newlin of the Nets, who had 19 points and shared team scoring honors with Calvin Natt. "Teams have been making mincemeat out of us."

Newlin had traded less-than-kind remarks with the Knicks' Michael Ray Richardson after an earlier meeting of the teams, but both claimed the matter was forgotten.

Cavaliers 111, Pistons 101

Mike Mitchell scored 23 points and grabbed a career-high 19 rebounds while Dave Robisch added 22 points in Cleveland's victory.

Detroit took a 94-91 lead midway through the fourth quarter, but the Cavaliers scored 20 of the next 27 points to hand the Pistons their fifth loss in a row. Eric Money had 22 points for Detroit.

Jazz 122, Nuggets 111

Terry Furlow piled up a career-high 37 points while Adrian Dantley contributed 27 as Utah humbled Denver.

The victory for the cellar-dwelling Jazz was only its 10th in 36 games. The Nuggets' Dan Issel matched Furlow's total to lead Denver scorers.

Trail Blazers 113, Warriors 91

Portland got 32 points from Tom Owens and 24 from Ron Brewer to hand Golden State its eighth loss in the last nine games.

The Trail Blazers led 66-48 at halftime, then boosted the margin to 84-55 with 6:47 remaining.

WHERE DID IT GO? — Philadelphia's Maurice Cheeks, the second-year guard out of West Texas State, looks for the basketball, but he dosn't know exactly where to turn, after the ball was knocked from his hands by Washington Bullet forward Elvin Hayes during Tuesday's NBA game at Landover, Md. Hayes recovered on the play, but Cheeks and his 76er teammates won 95-92. (AP Laserphoto)

Kicker Leads Pitt's Victory In Fiesta Bowl

six," he replied reluctantly.

Arizona strong safety Dave Liggins, the Fiesta Bowl's most valuable defensive player, picked off two Pitt passes, had one pass deflection and was credited with three unassisted and four assisted tackles.

"That trophy was in the back of my mind since Monday when I saw it," said Liggins. "I think defensively, we showed people we can play football. We never gave up. It was our best defensive effort of the year."

Tony Mason, in his third year as Arizona's head coach, was naturally disappointed by the loss.

"We've been underestimated all year long but we can play with anybody," said Mason. "That was a good football team out there, and I thought we should have won.

"But I won't make any excuses for our play. We did well but they were better."

Trailing 6-0 early in the third quarter, Arizona kicker Brett Weber cut the margin in half with a 38-yard field goal.

The Wildcats moved into position to make a game-tying field goal later in the quarter. But faced with a fourth-and-2 play from the Pitt 21, they elected to go for the first down. They failed by inches on a run by Larry Heater.

Asked why Arizona did not go for the field goal, Mason replied, "There is no game tomorrow. . .This was the Fiesta Bowl and we had to gamble."

Pitt then turned around and put together an 80-yard march than culminated with Pryor's touchdown reception.

Schubert added his third field goal in the final quarter, then Arizona fullback Hubert Oliver scored the Wildcats' lone touchdown with 5:02 remaining in the game.

Michigan Coach Silent On Quarterback Choice

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Michigan coach Bo Schembechler doesn't want to name his starting quarterback for Friday night's Gator Bowl game because he doesn't want North Carolina to know whether the Wolverines will come out running or throwing.

But the Tarheels, who will start Matt Kupec at quarterback, will have the same element of surprise without coach Dick Crum having to go through the cloak-and-dagger theatrics.

That's because North Carolina lets Kupec do the passing and leaves the running to super tailback Amos Lawrence and fullback Doug Paschal.

Under the Wolverines' option attack, however, the quarterback is called upon to do more than just hand the ball off. Unfortunately for Schembechler, he has one quarterback, junior B.J. Dickey, who is a superb runner and another, senior John Wangler, who is an excellent passer.

"Both John and B.J. did a good job for us during the season," Schembechler said during a break in preparations in Jacksonville. "But I don't want to say who will start. It will just give North Carolina something else to think about if they don't know which one of our quarterbacks they'll have to defense."

Kupec, who led the Tarheels to a 7-3-1 regular season record, has completed 305 passes in 552 attempts for 3,840 yards and 33 touchdowns.

The 6-foot-1, 193-pound senior from Syosset, N.Y. threw 18 touchdown passes this season alone — an Atlantic Coast Conference record.

"Kupec is good," said Schembechler, whose Wolverines compiled an 8-3 regular season record. "He's not a runner, but he's a good passer. He's a leader."

Friday night's game, to be televised nationally on ABC, will be Kupec's third start in a bowl game. The Tarheels lost to Kentucky in the 1976 Peach Bowl and bowed to Nebraska in the 1977 Liberty Bowl.

"We can win this game if Matt has a good game and if the rest of the team plays error-free football," said Crum, who moved the Tarheels from Daytona Beach to nearby Jacksonville Beach on Christmas Day.

Wangler and Dickey passed for 11 touchdowns this year — four by Dickey, the other seven by Wangler. Dickey, however, rushed for an additional 242 yards before suffering a separated shoulder against Indiana while Wangler, who started four games, ran for only 46 yards.

When both Dickey and Wangler were healthy, Schembechler started Dickey and generally stayed with the 6-foot, 188-pounder until the Wolverines ran into trouble or needed instant points via the Big Play. Chances are he will follow a similar strategy against North Carolina.

The Wolverines, who have been holding closed practice sessions since Friday on a nearby high school field, have a night workout scheduled tonight in order to get used to playing under the lights.

Both teams will hold light workouts Thursday night in the Gator Bowl.

Alexander Defeated In Aussie Net Meet

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Second-seeded John Alexander headed the list of seeded players eliminated Wednesday from the $362,000 Australian Open tennis tournament.

Alexander lost to relatively unknown American Rick Fisher in straight sets 7-6, 7-6, 6-4.

Alexander was one of three seeds to fall Wednesday, joining Australian Ross Case, the 14th seed, and Austrian Peter Feigl, seeded eighth. Case was defeated by former Australian Open champ Mark Edmondson.

On Monday, also a first-round day, the tournament lost No. 5 seed Balazs Taroczy of Hungary and seventh-seeded American Tim Wilkison.

While tournament sponsors were counting their headaches, New South Wales Open champion Phil Dent raced to a straight set victory over last year's finalist John Marks, of Australia.

Dent, another Australians, was beaten here in the 1974 finals by Jimmy Connors. Marks, unseeded here, was beaten in last year's final in four sets by this year's top-seed, Guillermo Vilas, of Argentina.

Vilas overcame first-set stubborness from young American Chris Lewis to advance to the second round 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

TRIPPING ALONG — South quarterback Charlie Trotman (11) of Auburn tries to hurdle a North defender, Notre Dame linebacker Mike Whittington, but trips and picks up only short yardage during Tuesday's Blue-Gray all-star battle at Montgomery, Ala. Stanford's Chuck Evans (72) comes in to try to stop Trotman, who was named the Gray's most valuable player. The North won 22-13. (AP Laserphoto)

Defensive Plays Lead To Blue's 22-13 Win

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Harvard coach Joe Restic says two fourth-quarter plays were the keys to his team's 22-13 victory Christmas Day in the 42nd annual Blue-Gray college all-star football game.

The first of the two came just as the quarter started when the Gray, down 14-13, faced a fourth down at the Blue 30-yard line and decided to go for it rather than try a field goal.

But the Blue defense stopped Rice's Earl Cooper for a one-yard gain, leaving the Gray two yards short of the needed first down.

"I didn't think we could kick that far," said Auburn coach Doug Barfield of his decision to let the Gray go for the first down rather than a field goal.

"Plus, with the wind at their back, we didn't want to give them the ball at the 30 if we missed," Barfield said. "That was definitely a big play because after that they took command."

Restic said the play was the turning point of the game, but he also cited a safety scored by the Blue team minutes later as "a big factor in our victory."

The safety came after the Auburn's James McKinney recovered a fumble by Yale's Ken Hill at the Gray two-yard line. The fumble ended a 69-yard march by the Blue after they had stopped the Gray offense on the big fourth-down play.

On the third play after the fumble, however, the Gray decided to gamble on a reverse and Alabama State's Terry Greer was caught in the end zone by Iowa's Jim Molini for a safety.

The Blue then took the ensuing kickoff and, led by their most valuable player, Syracuse quarterback Bill Hurley, marched 49 yards for a touchdown to seal the victory.

Ironically, that touchdown was scored by Hill, who had fumbled away another Blue touchdown earlier in the quarter.

Hurley, who hit 12 of 15 passes for 128 yards, provided the offensive spark for the Blue in the first half, engineering two touchdown drives to stake the North all-stars to a 14-0 lead.

Hurley scored the first touchdown on a six-yard run, then passed six yards to Oregon State wide receiver Steve Cury for the second score.

The Gray came roaring back in the second quarter behind Auburn quarterback Charlie Trotman, who was selected as the Gray's most valuable player.

Trotman moved the Gray from its own 22 to the Blue 25 before the drive stalled and John Roveto of Southwest Louisiana was called in to boot a 42-yard field goal.

The Gray then took advantage of an all-star game rule which permits a team trailing by 10 points or more to get the ball back when they score.

After receiving the kickoff, Trotman took only six plays to move the Gray 76 yards for another touchdown, with the Auburn quarterback scoring on a six-yard run. The big play in the drive was a 47-yard pass from Trotman to Vanderbilt's Preston Brown.

Baseball Surfaced On Christmas

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Christmas, 1979. Let's hope that among all the Star Trek and space-age gadgetry the kids found under their tinseled trees there were a few old-fashioned bats, balls and gloves.

It would be appropriate. After all, American baseball also was born on Christmas day — 358 years ago, shortly after the Pilgrims came over on the Mayflower.

In fact, the first Joe DiMaggio might have been a guy named John Alden.

Bah, humbug, you say? Every grammar school kids knows that the great American pastime came out of the head of a Civil War general named Abner Doubleday. It was he who conceived and played it around Cooperstown, N.Y. There's even a shrine up there to prove it.

Analysis

One apocryphal story is that Abe Lincoln, on his deathbed, called Gen. Doubleday to his side and, choking on every breath, beseeched him: "Our country has been divided by war and bitterness. We must do something to bring the people together. Invent baseball."

Now historians have learned that the Doubleday concept is purely a myth. In fact, there were two Abner Doubledays who lived in the Cooperstown area during the period that baseball was supposed to have emitted its first tortured gasps. If Abner Doubleday actually had a role in developing the game as we know it, it wasn't the general but a cousin — also named Abner — stemming from another branch of the family tree.

Baseball's true genesis is still clouded in mystery, but no one has traced its roots more carefully than the longtime author and authority, Harry Simmons — now an aide to commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"Baseball is a derivation of many games played with a bat, ball and bases," said the grandfatherly historian, who earlier this month was honored as the King of Baseball at the winter meetings in Toronto.

"It could be a distant cousin of English cricket. Research shows conclusively that the game traces back to the days of the Pilgrims."

Simmons has come across a yellowed, centuries-old volume, "History of the Plymouth Plantation," written by Gov. William Bradford of the colony that came over on the ship Fortune and settled in Massachusetts.

On Christmas Day, 1621, Gov. Bradford called the men of Plymouth "to work as was used." The deeply religious Puritans demurred, arguing it was against their consciences to labor on the Holy Day.

Returning to the plantation for lunch, the governor discovered the Puritans frolicking "at pitching ye barr, some at stoole ball, and suche-like sport." Angry, he gathered up the implements and broke up the game.

"Stoole ball was played with a milking stool, a crude bat and ball," says Simmons. "Any number could play. The striker (batter) stood at the stool to deflect the pitch. If the giver (pitcher) hit the stool, he got a point and positions rotated. As more players got involved, more stools were staked out and players progressed from stool to stool.

"Many variations came out of the primitive beginning. The Massachusetts game was called 'roundball.' In Philadelphia, it was 'town ball,' and in New York, 'base ball.'

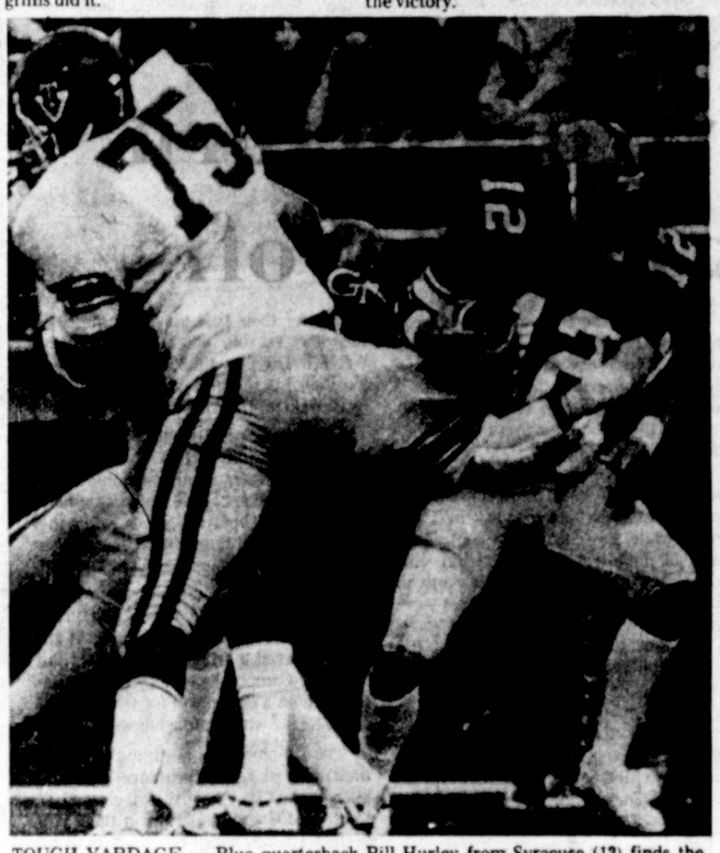
"The game spread westward, and then into Canada," said Simmons.

A special commission was set up by A.G. Spalding in 1885 to determine the origin of baseball. It attributed the game to Gen. Doubleday around the time of the "log cabin and hard cider" presidential campaign of Gen. William Henry Harrison, but subsequent documents have proved this a fallacy.

The theory is even disputed by the Doubleday family tree, dating back to Elisha, who came to Boston from England in 1676 and saw his descendants scatter to Connecticut and upstate New York.

When the general was supposed to have dreamed up the game, he was a cadet at West Point. Credit, if any, should have gone to a first cousin, Abner, son of Ulysses Doubleday.

But take it from Simmons, the Pilgrims did it.



TOUGH YARDAGE — Blue quarterback Bill Hurley from Syracuse (12) finds the yardage tough to obtain as he tries to break out of the grasp of Gray linebacker Henry Johnson of Georgia Tech in Tuesday's all-star game at Montgomery, Ala. Hurley led the Blue team to a 22-13 win and wes named the team's most valuable player. (AP Laserphoto)

Teams Arrive For Bluebonnet

HOUSTON (AP) — Athletes from Purdue and Tennessee were to arrive here today to prepare for Monday's clash in the 21st annual Bluebonnet Bowl, the last bowl game of the 1970s.

All-time Big 10 leading passer Mark Herrmann will lead Purdue, 9-2, against quarterback Jimmy Streater and safety Roland James, co-captains of the Tennessee Volunteers.

Coaches for both teams hope to heat things up during practice sessions, claiming their athletes play better under pressure.

The Boilermakers lost two of their first five games before coming together as a team.

"When we were 3-2, I told our players we had our backs to the wall," recalled Purdue coach Jim Young. "We came on to sweep the last six games, and in our last three games we were an excellent football team."

Tennessee played hot and cold for a 7-4 record, performing best when the odds seemed against them.

"I hate to say this, but it almost seems like we had to have a crisis to play well," Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said. "This team has played well with its back to the wall."

During the season, Streater rushed 377 yards on 82 carries and scored seven rushing touchdowns for the Vols and passed for 1,257 yards, completing 80 of 161 for nine touchdowns.

Hubert Simpson led the Tennessee rushing attack with 792 yards on 157 carries.

Herrmann completed 182 of 309 passes this season for 2,074 yards and 13 touchdowns to run his Big 10 total to 6,431 yards with still his senior season ahead to improve on his record.

With Herrmann overtaking the lead, three of the top four passers in Big 10 history are Purdue quarterbacks.

UNM To Go Outside For Scandal Monitor

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — University of New Mexico president William E. Davis has responded ethically, promptly and appropriately regarding the school's troubled athletic program, university regents say.

"It is the determination of the regents to protect and preserve the integrity of the university," Henry Jaramillo, president of the Board of Regents, said Monday.

The regents met with Davis in a two-hour closed session after Charles Coates, a journalism professor, said in a lettr that in 1978 he gave Davis information that credits were in effect being bought for UNM athletes from a California institution.

Davis earlier said the school administration had determined there were problems with the athletic program before the FBI announced last month that the program was under investigation.

"There was a growing and escalating interest in problems of the athletic department before the FBI wiretaps," he said.

The regents plan to appoint "a coordinator from outside the university to monitor progress on all investigations of the athletic programs, including that by the National Collegiate Athletic Association and any other outside agencies and the university's own internal investigation," Jaramillo said in a statement.

"Persons on the university staff having information pertinent to the investigations may report such information to the coordinator and-or to the president of the university," Jaramillo said.

Coates said he sent a letter to Davis early in October telling him that Larry Belin, a Lobos basketball player, was practicing with the team even though he had flunked Coates' summer course. Coates said he had been told that without the course, Belin would be ineligible.

Since the FBI announcement a number of developments have rocked the school:

- Six basketball players, including Belin, were declared ineligible because they had been given credits for a course offered last summer in California by Ottawa, Kan., University. The players said they had never taken the course.
- One player was declared ineligible when the FBI raised questions about his transcript.
- The school forfeited a basketball victory over West Texas State when the players were declared ineligible. The New Mexico team now consists of the four remaining players, walk-ons, and recruits from the football squad.
- Lobos basketball coach Norm Ellenberger was fired and an assistant, Manny Goldstein, resigned.
- New Mexico discovered that three football players had been given credit for a summer course offered by Ottawa and announced the school would forfeit its six 1979 football triumphs.

Coates said last Friday that he had passed along to Davis a 1978 student documentary in which persons identified as football players said grades were being bought. Davis said Sunday the alleged system of credits purchasing had been stopped in 1976 or 1977, a year before he was informed of it.

And Davis said that when Coates raised questions about Belin, they were referred to Tony Hillerman, an assistant to Davis, and former athletic director Lavon McDonald.

ROOKIE SIDELINED

SAN DIEGO (AP) — After their first Christmas Day workout in a decade, the San Diego Chargers were pronounced in good physical shape today, with the exception of rookie standout Kellen Winslow. The good news for Charger fans was that the NFL club's top wide receivers, John Jefferson and Charley Joiner, will be ready for the American Football Conference playoff game here Saturday against the Houston Oilers.

Colzie Set For Steelers

MIAMI (AP) — For inspiration, Neal Colzie is carrying around a black Oakland Raiders jersey with the number 32 and the name Tatum.

That's Tatum as in Jack, the hard-hitting Raider safety whose autobiography is titled: "They Call Me Assassin."

"That's my man," Colzie explained. "He knows how to play them."

Colzie was referring to Steeler wide receivers John Stallworth and Lynn Swann, the superb twin threats that Colzie and his Miami Dolphin secondary teammates must stop this Sunday.

Colzie believes they can be stopped. Now the Dolphins' starting free safety, he was a punt returner and reserve cornerback for the Raiders in the war-like Raider-Steeler AFC championship games of 1975 and '76.

"Both of them you have to play real close," he said of the Steeler receivers. "If you let them run loose, they beat you deep and they beat you outside. If you play them tight and tough, I think you can stop them real good, real good. We (Oakland) played them physical, and we had them looking around, coughing up some balls."

Colzie, acquired by Miami in an offseason trade, carries with him the "Winning Through Intimidation" philosophy that characterized the Raiders' playoff teams.

"I doubt you can intimidate Stallworth as much as you can Swann, but they can be intimidated. I'm going to play them tough.

"Stallworth — I rate him the No. 1 receiver, even when he was playing behind Frank Lewis. I was always more afraid of him than I was of Lewis. Stallworth can take a blow and deliver a blow.

"He's not always crying like a lot of other receivers," Colzie said.

Of Swann, Colzie said, "I think he can be intimidated. I'm going to try."

In 1976, Raider safety George Atkinson knocked Swann out of the game with a concussion and was branded part of the NFL's "criminal element" by Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll.

Atkinson was fined $1,500 and later filed a $2 million slander suit against Noll. Atkinson lost his suit, but in its wake, commissioner Pete Rozelle issued a league-wide warning that flagrant violence would not be tolerated.

"Those games were very emotional, very emotional. That's part of the game. People complain, but you have to have that tough attitude. You just have to go into it tough and physical," Colzie said.

The Cora Gables native was offered $1,250 in 1976 to play a role in "Black Sunday," a movie about a terrorist attack at a Super Bowl in Miami. Colzie turned it down because he was asked to wear a Steelers' uniform.

"That's because I was a true-blooded Oakland Raider," Colzie said. "I'm always against the team on top, because I want to be on top.

"I'm looking forward to playing Pittsburgh, because I like playing against the best. It seems to bring out the best in me, so I always like playing against Pittsburgh," he said.

CRIPPLED CHEERLEADER — Gail Spotts, center, doesn't let paralysis and a wheelchair keep her from high school activities, such as leading cheers at a recent Winnetonka, Kan., high school basketball game. Bingham 'Feels Good' About Making Big Plays

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler linebacker Gregg Bingham, often the forgotten man in the Oiler defense, always seems to know when to make his presence known.

"I'm just part of the woodwork," Bingham said last week prior to the Oilers in a 13-7 National Football League, first-round playoff victory over Denver.

If Bingham is indeed a part of the woodwork, he may have struck on an ideal camouflage for making key interceptions.

The seven-year veteran from Purdue came out of the woodwork in the fourth quarter Sunday to intercept a Craig Morton pass that helped seal Houston's victory over the Broncos.

Bingham stepped forth earlier, on Nov. 5, when he picked off a pass by Miami's Bob Griese at the Oiler 15-yard line to insure Houston's 9-6 victory.

Bingham and the Oilers returned to workouts today to resume preparations for Saturday's American Football Conference semifinal playoff game against AFC Western Division champion San Diego.

Bingham has been one of the steadiest Oiler linebackers. He led the team with 100 tackles during the regular season, assisted in 103 others, intercepted three passes and made seven touchdown saving plays. Yet, post-season recognition has been rare.

"It's a lot of politicking," Bingham said of post-season honors. "Look at the record and you'll see it's a helluva advantage to be a player rep. Check how many all-pros are player reps."

However, some are aware of Bingham's value.

"He's the type of player people take for granted," offensive coordinator Ed Biles said. "But you don't know how valuable he is until you don't have him."

That could be an insight into Bingham's lack of respect. The Oilers haven't had to do without him in 106 consecutive games.

Oiler coach Bum Phillips hasn't ruled them out yet. "I've always been an optimist, and I'm not going to say they won't play. We probably won't know anything until Friday for sure. Only time will tell.

"How do you treat a groin injury? Rest. But, it's hard to rest and play, too," added Phillips.

A victory over San Diego would send the Oilers to Pittsburgh or Miami for the AFC championship game, and a possible trip to the Super Bowl that they missed by only one game a year ago.

Quitaque Man To Join Panhandle 'Hall'

AMARILLO (AP) — Carl McAdams, a two-time all-America linebacker at Oklahoma University, will be inducted Jan. 27 into the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

Also being inducted will be Johnny Allen, longtime coach at Carver High School in Amarilo, and Gorge Ray Colvin, a former West Texas State University basketball great.

McAdams, who played high school football at White Deer, was all-America for the Sooners in 1964 and 1965.

Induction ceremonies will be at 2 p.m. on Jan. 27 at Amarillo College gymnasium. Athletes of the year and coaches of the year in each sport for the past year also will be announced.

Eligible will be outstanding athletes and coaches from the Texas Panhandle, as well as portions of New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Allen coached Amarillo Carver High School to the state football championship in 1952 and to state track championships in 1965 and 1966. He now is assistant boys' cross country coach for Amarillo's four high schools.

Colvin, who now farms near Quitaque, was an all-America basketball player for WTSU in 1934.

McAdams now farms and lives near Farris, Okla.

PRESSURED — Pittsburgh's freshman quarterback Dan Marino gets away a pass over the rush of Arizona defensive tackle Mike Robinson in the third quarter. This pressure was a constant thing in Tuesday's Fiesta Bowl game at Tempe, Ariz, but Marino was able to stay away from trouble well enough to guide the Panthers to a 16-10 triumph. (AP Laserphoto)

NFL Survivors Return To Work For Playoffs

By The Associated Press

Practice resumed today for the Philadelphia Eagles, Tampa Bay Buccaneers and six other National Football league teams with the Super Bowl on their minds.

The Eagles, 27-17 wild-card winners over Chicago in the National Conference opening round, and the Bucs, NFC Central Division champions, open the second round of action at 11:30 a.m. CST Saturday.

The AFC's second round follows at 3 p.m. with the walking wounded of the Houston Oilers, 13-7 winners over Denver in their wild-card game, visiting the San Diego Chargers, champions of the West Division.

On Sunday the remaining division winners play their first playoff games — Miami (East) at Pittsburgh (Central) in the AFC and Los Angeles (West) at Dallas (East) in the NFC.

As a team, the Bucs have never been in a playoff game (six of their 22 starters were in at least one with other clubs). In fact, in their previous three seasons, they never won more than five games. But this year they won their first five and finished at 10-6.

But they are an enigma. Most fans view Tampa Bay as a sputtering offense overshadowed by the league's best defense, while the Eagles are considered more of an offense-oriented team. But statistically Philadelphia was seventh in offense in the NFC — and the Bucs were sixth.

It's only the second meeting of the teams. Philadelphia won the first encounter 13-3.

And it's another meeting of two former collegiate coaching rivals — Philadelphia's Dick Vermeil (UCLA) and Tampa Bay's John McKay (Southern California).

In San Diego, the Chargers are preparing for their first playoff game since the 1965 season, when they won the Western Division title in the American Football League and were shut out 23-0 by Buffalo for the AFL championship.

San Diego and Pittsburgh tied for the NFL's best record at 12-4 (the Chargers, by virtue of their regular-season victory over the Steelers, have the home-field edge in all AFC playoff games) while the Oilers rode Earl Campbell's league-high 1,197 rushing yards to an 11-5 mark.

But Campbell may not be at full strength for Sunday's game — and quarterback Dan Pastorini may not play at all. Each suffered a groin injury against the Broncos, Campbell's coming just before halftime on a 3-yard run for what turned out to be the winning touchdown.

The Dolphins will be trying to repeat their last playoff appearance in Pittsburgh, when they beat the Steelers 21-17 for the AFC championship in their 17-0 perfect season, while the Rams will be trying to reverse the outcome of last year's NFC championship game, when the Cowboys shut them out 28-0.

Tampa Bay Must Face Eagles Without Top Offensive Lineman

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers say the chances of Charley Hannah being healthy enough to play by the Jan. 6 NFC championship are "50-50."

But the Bucs' chances of getting there were reduced by an injury to Hannah, their right offensive tackle called the "most valuable player" of the Tampa Bay line by coach John McKay.

"We miss Charley Hannah a lot," said McKay, whose Bucs must hold an experienced Philadelphia defensive line in this Saturday's playoff here.

Since Hannah suffered a knee injury three games ago, the Bucs' offense has averaged about one touchdown a game. Quarterback Doug Williams has had little protection.

In Hannah's place has been Darryl Carlton, a beefy Miami Dolphin castoff. Carlton didn't come close to stopping Kansas City defensive end Art Still in the Bucs' regular-season final, prompting McKay to snap, "Darryl doesn't get paid $70,000 for eating ham sandwiches."

The injury interrupted Hannah's remarkable development at a position he began learning only last winter.

"I'd never played offense at all, not even in high school," said Hannah. "The only time I ever played offense in my life was in Pee Wee Football when I was 12 years old. I don't think I used much technique back then — just going straight ahead."

McKay, desperately needing help for his leaky line and with no No. 1 draft choice ahead, decided late last season to make the unusual switch. McKay said he thought Hannah's size (6 feet, 6 inches; 255 pounds) and more importantly, his desire, would enable him to make the transition.

Also helping was Hannah's brother John, New England's perennial All-Pro offensive guard.

"In the offseason, we'd talk a lot about the position, but a lot of it went over my head. I couldn't relate to the importance of a lot of things. When he'd talk about putting your foot down here, it didn't mean anything to me.

"But after training camp started, I got an idea of the little things about the position. We talked every week, and I started getting something out of it," Hannah said.

Hannah said brother John is "more explosive" than he is. John is three inches shorter but outweighs Charley by 10 pounds.

Hannah learned with rookie Greg Roberts next to him at guard. Roberts, the nation's Outland Trophy winner at Oklahoma, was snubbed in the NFL's first round because of his inexperience at pass blocking.

"The disadvantage of us together was that neither one of us knew what we were doing," Hannah recalled. "But the advantages were that we were patient with each other, we weren't looking down on each other."

With the two "rookies," the Bucs' line improvement was obvious early. Rookie Jerry Eckwood set a team rushing record in the first game, Ricky Bell broke it later in the season, and Bell became the first Buc to rush for 1,000 yards, totaling over 1,200.

Quarterback Doug Williams was sacked only once through the first 10 games of the season.

Cager Takes Penalty

NEW YORK (AP) — Denver Nuggets' forward George McGinnis withdrew his request for a hearing on his suspension by NBA commissioner Lawrence O'Brien today and will begin serving a reduced penalty immediately, the NBA said.

McGinnis will be suspended without pay for six days and three games beginning today. That means the 6-foot-8 forward will miss Nugget games against Golden State tonight, Detroit on Friday night and Cleveland on Saturday night.

Overweight Cager To Face Bosses

NEW YORK (AP) — The fate of John Williamson, the New Jersey Nets' second all-time leading scorer, was to be decided today in a meeting with Nets' general manager Charley Theokas.

Williamson, just 13 points shy of Julius Erving's franchise-leading point total of 7,104, was told recenly to lose weight or face disciplinary action. The 6-foot-3 guard was reported to weigh as much as 229 pounds at one time, and Theokas and Nets' coach Kevin Loughery decided that he shouldn't play at a weight any higher than 210.

The Nets' third-leading scorer this season with an average of 17.5, Williamson has not appeared in the last eight games and only once in the last 12.

CHRISTMAS PRESENT FOR JAILED AMERICAN — Loretta Dooley, an American exchange student from Tracy, Calif., appears in court in Instanbul, Turkey, Tuesday, where the court ordered her released on bail pending her trial on drug charges. Transit Officials Suspend Driver

By United Press International

Of course, Van Ryswyk admitted he was a bit out of uniform in his red Santa Claus suit and fake white beard.

MTC official Gary Abel said Van Ryswyk was warned his attire had to go, but he showed up for his shift as the jolly old fat man from the North Pole.

Abel said MTC officials had a discussion in which Van Ryswyk used language not usually associated with Santa and he was suspended until further notice.

Abel said the MTC is afraid to allow exception to the dress code because: "What might happen at Halloween?"

Most Americans observed Christmas in more conventional ways and the Christian world's most celebrated holiday produced its traditional share of happy and sad tales.

In Albany, N.Y., Delia Mallory said she was happy to spend the holiday with her grandson — one of the 13 hostages released last month by the Iranian militants holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. But she said her Christmas thoughts were with the Americans still being held.

Mrs. Mallory is the grandmother of Marine Cpl. Westley Williams, who was among the 13 black and woman hostages released before Thanksgiving.

"We didn't plan no big nothing," Mrs. Mallory said. "We're still concerned about the other boys over there. We'll be praying and we'll be thinking about them."

Donna Mae Hollis, 40, robbed the First Minnehaha National Bank of $1,400 on Dec. 6, 1978. She said she used $700 to buy presents for her three children and paid off about $700 in loans.

She was sentenced to four years in a Kentucky federal prison. But before the holidays, a federal judge released her, gave her $15 to buy presents for her children and counseled her to stay away from banks.

Firefighters in Columbus, Ohio, felt sorry for the news people who had to work on Christmas Day so they prepared ham and turkey dinners for them.

Most prisoners in the Olmsted County (Minn.) jail were given a 30-hour leave over Christmas with the understanding they would return Christmas evening.

"I view Christmas as a time of reconciliation," Olmsted County Judge Daniel Foley said. "If the inmates can handle it, I like to give them a little furlough."

Christmas looked bleak for the Edward Kingsley family of North Java, N.Y., when they lost their home in a predawn fire Christmas Eve. Their belongings and ll their presents were destroyed. But friends and neighbors banded together to replace sadness with joy Christmas Day.

The family stayed at the home of a neighbor who spent the day with relatives. On Christmas morning there were presents supplied by neighbors.

Elderly Pair Takes Daily Trips To Jail For Failing To Pay Debt

SEATTLE (UPI) — Like most people, Josephine Wetherill, 70, and her husband Ernest, 66, had a couple days off for Christmas. But they have to go back to jail today.

The Wetherills, held in contempt of court as a result of a complicated legal battle with Rainier National Bank, have been spending 10 hours each day at the King County Jail, allowed to return home every night out of consideration for their age.

Superior Court Judge Arthur E. Piehler gave the couple Christmas Day and today off for the holidays. But he said they must resume their daily 7:30 a.m. trip to jail until they have paid the bank $12,000 as ordered by the court last winter.

"It's a hell of a thing to do to a senior citizen, putting us in jail like this," said Mrs. Wetherill.

But Robert J. Adolph, attorney for Rainier Bank, said the Wetherills are a pair who "spend their retirement hours seeing what fools they can make out of the entire court system — they're incredible people."

The Wetherills' problems began in September 1977 when the bank was awarded an $86,000 judgment against Mrs. Wetherill's son, Troy F. McCracken, who failed to repay a loan.

McCracken, however, had turned over a real estate contract to his mother, which she cashed in for $43,000. Mrs. Wetherill told the court she was given the contract in exchange for about $32,000 in loans to her son.

After a trial, the Wetherills were ordered to pay the bank $12,000 — the difernce between what McCracken owed his mother and the value of the contract.

Piehler found the couple in contempt of court earlier this month when they said they still were unable to pay the $12,000.

The bank has indicated it would drop the case against the Wetherills if they explain what they did with the $43,000. The couple said they spent it on vacations, gambling in Reno and normal living expenses but the court, and the bank's lawyers, have refused to accept that explanation.

American Student To Be Freed On Bail From Turkish Prison

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A court in predominantly Moslem Turkey gave an unexpected Christmas present to 18-year-old American Loretta J. Dooley, ordering her freed on $1,500 bail pending her trial on drug charges. She shouted "Hooray!" and her father, contacted in America, exclaimed, "It's a very merry Christmas."

Dick Higgins, U.S. vice-consul in Istanbul, said, "The money has been paid and we expect her release very soon. We had an advance (sum of) money deposited with us and our courier paid the amount this morning." Prison officials said Miss Dooley, an exchange student from Tracy, Calif., "may be set free either today or late tomorrow."

Miss Dooley is being held at Sagmalcilar prison. Her next hearing was set for Feb. 5.

"This girl is only 18 and came to Turkey as part of an exchange student system which requires high intelligence as a standard," Miss Dooley's lawyer argued Tuesday before Istanbul's three-member Second Criminal Court. "Furthermore, today is Christmas and it is an important day for Christians throughout the world."

The chief judge acceded to the plea. When an interpreter repeated the news in English to Miss Dooley, who was seated on a wooden bench guarded by two soldiers with submachine guns, she shouted, "Hooray!" and embraced friends and American officials who attended the hearing.

Among the well-wishers were Wesley Hogle, a 58-year-old contractor from Tracy who flew 19-hours nonstop to Istanbul "to do something for a friend," and Carol Flores, a 26-year-old industrial photographer, who accompanied Hogle and cried and cheered when the judge ordered Miss Dooley freed on bail.

"I was very upset when I heard she was involved in this, but now everything will be all right," Miss Flores said. "I don't know any better Christmas celebration than seeing a friend get out of trouble."

Miss Dooley's father, Vernon, said when contacted in Tracy, "It's a very merry Christmas," and that he was sure his daughter would be allowed to leave Turkey. Turkish legal sources also said Miss Dooley may benefit from a prisoner exchange treaty now before the Turkish Parliament.

Miss Dooley, who arrived in Turkey as part of an American Field Service exchange program, was arrested Aug. 1 with nine grams of hashish in spiked cigarettes. Narcotics police seized her after receiving a tip from the woman she was living with that she would attempt to mail the hashish in an envelope.

In previous testimony, she denied that she ever tried to smuggle hashish but said the spiked cigarettes were "for my personal consumption." She also claimed the cigarettes accidentally got into the parcel, which was addressed to her home in California.

Nonetheless, the prosecutor demanded a 10-year prison term for her on grounds she "attempted to smuggle," a charge that carries a heavier punishment than possession for personal use.

Miss Dooley already has spent almost five months in the women's section of 2,500-capacity Sagmalcilar prison complex on the outskirts of Istanbul.

In past interviews, she complained bitterly about conditions in her living quarters, and said she was approached by lesbian inmates at one time. But prison authorities said everything was being done "to prevent unhealthy relations."

Pope Dedicates Yule Speech To Children

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II dedicated his Christmas Day appeal to the children of the world, stressing the importance of human rights, the dangers of the arms race and the immorality of abortion.

Speaking from the balcony of St. Peter's Basilica to about 300,000 people gathered in the square below him, John Paul said he was dedicating his traditional Christmas message Tuesday to the world's children, in honor of the U.N.-designated Year of the Child.

"What better wish can I express for every nation and the whole of mankind, and for all the children of the world, than a better future in which respect for human rights will become a complete reality throughout the third millennium which is drawing near," the pope said in the "Ubi et Orbi" (To the City and the World) address.

And in a reference to the continuing construction of nuclear weapons, John Paul appealed in a firm voice, "Are the children to receive the arms race from us as a necessary inheritance?

"In this perspective we must ask ourselves whether there will continue to accumulate over the heads of this new generation of children the threat of common extermination for which the means are in the hands of the modern states, especially the major world powers," he said.

The pope also used the opportunity of his Christmas Day address to reaffirm the theologicl foundation of the church's opposition to abortion — the belief that life begins at conception rather than birth.

"The child is also a great and continuous test of our fidelity to ourselves, of our fidelity to humanity," he said. "It is a test of our respect for the mystery of life upon which from the very first moment of conception the creator places the imprint of his image and likeness."

John Paul delivered his "Urbi et Orbi" appeal after celebrating two pontifical high masses in St. Peter's Basilica, the high point of the holiday season that ends with a special mass Jan. 1 — a day observed each year by the Vatican as the International Day of Peace.

House Blazes Kill Six In Ohio, Florida

By United Press International

A husband and wife returning from a Christmas party found their three children dead in a fire at their mobile home in Florida, and three members of a family perished in a blaze in Niles, Ohio.

Authorities said Nathan and Sherrie O'Neal of Wellborn, Fla., were leaving a party when they were told by police that their house was on fire. When they arrived home, they were told their children — Nathan Jr., 11, Christina, 5, and Marion, 2 — had died in the fire.

"When I got there, they both were crying," said Suwanee County Sheriff Robert Leonard. "They didn't say much. They didn't say they wished they hadn't gone out. But surely they were thinking it."

Deputies said the fire apparently started just before midnight in a mattress in the children's bedroom. The cause was under investigation.

In Niles, a woman and her son and daughter were killed Christmas morning in a fire that swept through their two-ory frame home.

Officials said Sarah Davis, 58; her daughter Gail, 27, and her son Graig, 31, of California, were asphyxiated in the fire. Their bodies were found in separate bedrooms.

In Columbus, Ohio, a short in n extension cord leading to a Christmas tree started a fire early Tuesday that killed Myrtle Huff, 73, of Huntington, W.Va., officials said.

Fire officials said the woman, who was visiting at the home, was trapped in an upstairs room after the blaze broke out downstairs. Four other people in the house managed to escape.

Freda Wright, 30, and her children ages 5 to 11 escaped their flaming mobile home early Christmas Eve, but their home and all their belongings were destroyed.

The county agency that usually helps fire victims was closed for the holidays and had depleted its stock of clothes and food just before Christmas by giving it to charities.

But an appeal by radio to the town of about 17,000 resulted in the family's being inundated with gifts.

Woman Aware Of Husband's Infidelity

TOMS RIVER, N.J. (UPI) — Police say Vito Poliseno and his young girlfriend arranged to have his 53-year-old wife killed so they could collect her $50,000 estate. What they didn't know was that Mrs. Poliseno was leaving her husband $1.

Josephine Poliseno was beaten to death last week. Apparently aware of her husband's years of infidelity, she had changed her will last October, leaving him only $1. Vito Poliseno did not learn of the change until after her death.

A Superior Court judge ordered Poliseno and George Gill held in lieu of $100,000 bail pending a Jan. 28 hearing.

Veteran Creates Miniature Yule Gift

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Every Christmas for the last 27 years, Charles Bowdish has given Pittsburgh a giant gift in miniature.

The World War I veteran each year creates in painstaking detail a different railroad and village scene for display at the Buhl Planetarium and Institute. The exhibit drew 108,000 spectators last year.

"It's a holiday tradition in Pittsburgh," said Carl Wapiennik, the planetarium director. "You think you could shrink right down, become a part of the lifestyle of the people and just go visiting."

This year, Bowdish set his miniature Pennsylvania town in an autumn of the early 1900s. It contains about 1,500 intricately crafted figures scaled one-quarter-inch to one-foot and 65 animations, including a greased pig chase at a church picnic and a working saw mill.

Using beeswax, florist's wire, and yarrow or small flower tops, Bowdish handcrafted 25,000 individually planted trees and shrubs in brilliant fall colors.

"There's no end to what you can do with beeswax," Bowdish said by telephone from his home in Brookville in rural Jefferson County. "When you like to do the work, nothing is hard."

The project takes 10 months from start to finish. "I never keep track of the time," Bowdish said. "I just work."

This year a crew of six labored nearly five months to construct the scene from the craftsman's blueprints.

Six Lionel O-gauge trains run on 700 feet of track, with two elaborate trestles and five bridges on a 76-by-19-foot platform.

"Like anything mechanical, it breaks down once in a while. But we just repair it," said Roy Hughes, a Buhl technician running a panel of controls at the display, including one that turns a day scene to night.

The railroad and a river connect the main courthouse town with neighboring villages, rolling farm lands, mountainous forests, an amusement park and industrial sites, such as a working coal mine, a logging camp, a brick factory and an oil derrick.

Three boats pass one another on the river and dock with no apparent means of locomotion. There are no strings or visible motors.

"There's a railroad track underneath the river and a car with a motor and a big magnet," explained Bowdish. "There's magnets on the bottom of the boats. They work day in and day out."

If you look carefully, you'll see a hidden moonshine still, a beaver dam, a boy scout troop hiking towards a covered bridge, an acrobat doing stunts on a pole, a moving woodsman, children on tree swings and deer roaming hills above a hunting lodge.

Bowdish, who is in his 80s and spent 33 years working on similar displays his family made each year, said he is inspired by nature and an eye for accurate detail. A penchant for exhaustive research and a fondness for history help, too.

"Everything is changed yearly," he said. "Next year it will be spring. All the trees will be in blossom."

Irish nationalist Sir Roger Casement was hanged in London in 1916 after being convicted of treason. He had plotted to win Irish independence by revolution.

Roy Clark Pleased With Enthusiasm Of Fans

By JAY SHARBUTT

NORTH TONAWANDA, N.Y. (AP) — Roy Clark is dog-tired when he gets in the car. It's 1 a.m., an hour after the second of two shows he and his 11-member troupe have played at the Melody Fair Theater.

He's startled to see two elderly couples waiting outside in the cold night air. All the 3,400 country music fans who packed the little theater here have gone, all but these four who hope to meet him.

"They've been waiting all this time?" he asks, genuinely touched. "Let's stop a second." He gets out. Like an old-fashioned campaigner, he gives them a warm howdy, swaps small talk, hugs the womenfolk, poses with them for Instamatic history.

True, two of three flashbulbs don't fire. But the old folks are tickled beyond repair at meeting Roy Cark, the "Hee Haw" star, the frequent "Tonight" show guest, the headliner in Las Vegas.

"Can't believe it," the Roy Clark says later, gratified at their enthusiasm, as his car finally heads back to nearby Buffalo where he'll grab a night's rest before the next day's two shows at 2 and 7 p.m.

He still gets an obvious kick from such diehard fans, even though he's played professionally for 32 of his 46 years and now, despite his plain-folks style, is a wealthy man.

He owns a mansion in Tulsa, Okla., where he and his wife, Barbara, have lived since 1976. He flies his own twin-engine, nine-seat, $1.1-million Mitsubushi propjet from date to date.

And his varied business interests include real estate, cattle, horses, two radio stations and a minor league baseball team, the Tulsa Drillers.

But he never forgets that this two-way admiration, the fans for the star and the star for the fans, is the traditional way of country music, even up here in Yankee land. No matter that his music isn't pure country.

Sure, Clark, a short, good-natured man with a barrel chest and thick, muscular arms and wrists, is of sturdy country stock, born in tiny Meherrin, Va., midway between Richmond and Danville.

And, sure, he starts his show with the Hank Snow classic, "I'm Movin'On." But his "medley of hits" include "Yesterday, When I Was Young." Which is by Charles Azvanour, a good ol' boy from France.

Yes, he does "Dueling Banjos" with his sidekick, a brilliant picker named Buck Trent, whom Clark is wont to playfully penalize "15 yards for unauthorized messin'" with the melody.

But Roy also plays "Laura's Theme." And, after fiddling a bluegrass tune so briskly a rusty cloud of resin rises from his bow, he'll pick up his 12-string Ovation guitar for some fast, tough, flamenco work.

Country he is. Yet "Makin' Music," a new album he cut with bluesman Gatemouth Brown last year, includes "Caldonia," the old Woody Herman hit, and "Take the A Train," a jazz evergreen.

Something for everyone. It no doubt bugs the pure of music in Nashville. But it's nothing new for Clark. It began when he was a kid, when his father, Hester, moved the Clark clan to Washington, D.C.

It was there the senior Clark, a government worker who moonlighted on guitar and banjo at area square dances, bought young Roy his first guitar, a $14.95 Sears Silvertone, for Christmas in 1947.

In two weeks, Roy, already proficient on banjo and mandolin, was playing guitar behind his dad, working his first date for $1 (he now fetches up to $50,000 per gig). His memories of the early years:

"Washington then had as many good guitar players as any place I could imagine. And they'd all take time to help. They'd come from all over the world and this country to work for the government.

"They brought all the different cultures, the different tastes, and it was all there. That's how I started doing different things.

"I figured if I was going to make a living in music, why go with just one thing and say, 'Okay, this is what I do, like it or not.' If there's a guy from Ireland, you do an Irish song.

"If a guy doesn't know country music, we try something else. It was that way. I just grew into the music."

The growing includes twice winning the National Banjo Championship while he was still a teen-ager, a shot on the Gand Ole Opry and his first taste of the road — clubs, tiny theaters, even drive-ins.

And my, what memories. Such as the time at a Midwestern drive-in when "the weather was so bad we had to go inside and play through the P.A. system for the little speakers in the cars.

"When we finished a song, instead of applaudin', they'd blow their horns. And you'd have to crack the door to see how well they liked it."

An ulcer, of all things, drove the kid back to D.C. in 1951, when he cut his first record there, and in time even got his first royalty check. No matter that it was for exactly $1.98.

"I was going to keep it, have it framed and all that," he grins. "But times got so bad I had to cash it."

Times improved in 1954 when Jimmy Dean hired Clark as a sideman on Dean's local TV show in Washington. That lasted two years until Roy got fired for chronic lateness. Later, he got his own TV show.

In 1960, he played his first Las Vegas date, backing Wanda Jackson, one of the first country singers to make it in that high-roller heaven, "and that was just about when everything started moving for me."

It was the year he met Miss Jackson's Tulsa-based manager, Jim Halsey, who has guided Clark's career ever since, including the country "Laugh-In" show called "Hee Haw" that elevated Clark from minor celebrity to major star in the country constellation.

In 1961, Clark's first year with Halsey, he worked 354 days, rolling up to 1,100 miles a night to the next job in a 1957 Ford station wagon jammed with sidemen, guitars, amps and hope. A hard life.

But strong friendships were formed that still are visible today when Clark goes on the road for one and two-nighters in places like North Tonawanda, Greeley, Colo., Eugene, Ore., Princeton, N.J.

Buck Trent, of Spartanburg, S.C., has worked Clark's show the last six years. Another early road pal: Rodney Lay, a tall, lanky bass guitarist from Coffeyville, Kan. His five-man band opens Clark's show.

"We've been working off and on together since '61," Clark says. "Lay had a rock 'n roll band when we first met. I mean, real weird. They had sprayed silver hair and wraparound dark glasses.

When Clark hits the one-nighter road nowadays, which he does 190 days out of a year ("We've cut back some") he usually flies. Two TV and stereo-equipped buses, one owned by Lay, the other by Clark, follow him from date to date, carrying performers, instruments and sound gear.

They consist of Fanci, a three-woman vocal backup troupe; Jimmy Henley, a 15-year-old banjo virtuoso Clark discovered in Taos, N.M., and Jimmy's father, James, a tall, quiet, courtly guitarist.

Clark, who occupies the plane's left seat, the captain's seat, isn't a pretend pilot, a dabbler. He has an instrument rating and 4,500 hours logged, mostly twin-engine time.

"I was one of those kids who stood in a field and heard an airplane coming and watched it all the way out of sight," says Clark. Even so, he couldn't afford flying lessons until 1956.

In 1966, he was sufficiently in the chips to buy an old Piper Tri-Pacer, which he still owns. But he used it only for practice. In 1968, he bought a used single-engine Beech Debonair for his work.

He's aware light plane crashes have taken their toll of country music folk such as Jim Reeves, killed in 1964, and Hawkshaw Hawkins, Patsy Cline, Cowboy Copas and Randy Hughes, all killed in one crash in Tennessee a year earlier.

"Yeah, but you figure, well, it's either going to happen or not," he says. "You can't dwell on it.

Which is why he kept flying that Beech alone to dates, packing his guitar, some clothes and, on occasion in bad weather, some very unwanted ice on the wings. Bouts with bad weather and the fact just one engine kept him aloft, caused some thought.

So he bought a twin-engine Cessna 310. But he still flew alone — for a while.

Finally, in 1974, when he shifted from the Cessna to the heavier, faster, pressurized Mitsubushi — he's on his third one now — he hired a co-pilot, who doubles as aide de camp, on a full-time basis.

When Clark flies alone now, it's usually back home in Tulsa, in an old open-cockpit Stearman biplane he also owns. He takes it aloft for hammerhead stalls, loops, rolls and other such aerial gyrations.

This and even straight-and-level flight clears the head, he contends: "You don't think of all your problems. You can't afford to. That's one thing I love about flying: It takes all your thoughts.

"You're sitting up there, concentrating on nothing but flying. If anything music passes through my head, that's all it is, a passing thought. Everything else is total flying.

"That way, it also gives me a fresh approach to music. I'm not caught up in music, all the music all the time."

His propjet, which on long flights he'll take up to 28,000 feet and tool along at 290 knots an hour, is a stubby, compact bird with weather radar and a beige paint job. It's registered as N7RC.

"I'd say, 'Naw, this is Roy Clark,'" Clark says. He winks. "Takes just one, then it gets out through the ATC grapevine."

He told the tale while flying his plane on the relatively short run here from his last job, a one-night, two-show appearance at the Oakdale Musical Theater outside New Haven, Conn.

It was a lovely day for flying, up there in the cold bright blue at 16,000 feet, with 250 knots indicated, cruising serenely over a broken line of puffy gray and white summer clouds.

He'd be playing the guitar in a few hours, singing, working his tail off. But right then, Roy Clark, country music star, was keeping the instrument needles centered and grinning like a kid.

"The only way to go," Superpicker says.

Basque's Life Now Calm After War Adventures

WARDEN, Wash. (AP) — After hectic times as a Basque operative in the French Resistance during World War II, Miguel Etulain says he's satisfied with life as a feedlot manager and farmer.

Etulain cherishes a personal letter of commendation from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander, and an article about his World War II adventures which appeared in a national magazine's overseas edition.

He still shows traces of bitterness over the policies imposed in Spain during his boyhood years by the late Generalisimo Francisco Franco, who banned the teaching of the Basque language in school, the showing of the Basque flag and almost any gathering of Basques.

"During the Franco reign, police were brutal," Etulain recalls. "You couldn't have more than four people talking on the street."

He said his family had fled from violence that erupted between Basque nationalists and Franco's Falange, moving to the more liberal French part of the Pyrenees Mountains which his people inhabit.

"I was involved with the French Resistance when I was 12 years old in 1942," he said. "I would guide pilots through our area. I picked them up in St. Jean de Luz and took them to Urrugne."

Etulain's efforts enabled more than 50 Allied pilots whose planes had gone down in Nazi-occupied France to escape to Spain.

"What I did a lot was carry letters and documents through the line on bicycle to a farm in Urrugne," he said. "Then a guide would cross the border."

Such activity came naturally to a people accustomed to widespread smuggling, he said.

Before the war, he recalled, "they would smuggle anything — livestock, coffee, shoes, anything."

His small band during the war, codenamed "Comet" by U.S. forces, was the subject of an article, "Comet, the Heroic Life Line," which appeared in the European edition of Reader's Digest in 1969.

By then he had spent 17 years in the United States, where he moved to join some uncles who were working the Columbia Basin. Today he manages a feedlot outside Warden and owns a 65-acre farm, where he lives with his wife Prudy, also a Basque, and their three children.

"This is the land of opportunity here," he says. "We have kids and they're growing up.

"We like our country, but we like it here, too."

Schedule Changes Questioned

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last October, CBS programming chief Robert Daly proclaimed his belief in a faltering new sitcom called "Last Resort," and made this vow:

"'Last Resort' is going to be a hit and we're going to bring it back and it's going to be protected."

Sure enough, CBS has returned "Last Resort" to its schedule and the show is certainly well protected, placed squarely in the middle of the network's successful Monday night lineup. Whether it is going to be a hit remains to be seen, but with "WKRP in Cincinnati" in front of it and "M-A-S-H" following, its chances look good.

There is also the chance, though, that in its will to make "Last Resort" a hit, CBS is undermining its own purposes. To create room for "Last Resort" and a newcomer, "House Calls," on Monday night, CBS moved "White Shadow" to Tuesday and moved "WKRP" to an earlier timeslot.

"White Shadow" had shown strength against all odds on Monday, bucking NBC's successful "Little House on the Prairie" and "Monday Night Football" on ABC to gain a respectable, if not overwhelming, portion of the audience for itself.

In its Tuesday time period, "White Shadow" will be battling ABC's "Happy Days" and NBC's "Sheriff Lobo," the hit program of the year for NBC. If this doesn't kill "The White Shadow," nothing will.

And it is not certain that CBS' Monday night lineup, with its changes, will maintain the strength it has demonstrated so far this season. "WKRP" will probably do quite well in its new lead-off spot, but "House Calls," a mindless sitcom spinoff from the theatrical movie, may well ruin things for CBS.

"House Calls" features Wayne Rogers, the displaced "Trapper John" of "M-A-S-H," as a lusty doctor at a slapstick memorial hospital. The jokes are atonishingly awful, a fact evidenced by the volume and generosity of its laugh track.

A sampling:

"Howya doing, Charlie?"

"I'll let you know as soon as my body gets back from the cleaners." The laugh track loved this one from Lynn Redgrave, the hospital's cranky administrative assisstant:

"After three days at this hospital, I'm ready to join Christian Science." Oh, how it howled.

"The Last Resort," from MTM Productions, is much classier, if you don't mind another adolescent sitcom. But "House Call" may well gum up the works for CBS on Mondays.

The show leads into "Lou Grant," a fine drama that has had better than marginal ratings, but likely isn't strong enough to endure the mass evacuation that "House Calls" will excite.

So, "Lou Grant" and "White Shadow," two dramas that deserve better, could suffer in behalf of "The Last Resort."

There was a line in last week's debut of "House Calls" that should be replayed to CBS' brass. It came during an exchange between Charlie and one of his libidinous patients:

She: "It all happened so quickly — I was watching television and suddenly I felt nauseous."

"Well," replied he, "you could have changed channels."

STAR SKEPTICAL

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Star Trek — The Motion Picture" may be breaking box office records now, but it almost had to launch without Mr. Spock. Leonard Nimoy says when he first was asked to recreate his pointy-eared role, "I threw up." He says in US Magazine that after Christopher Reed did "Superman," Sean Connery advised him, "When they come after you for the sequel, be in Timbuktu. And if they find you there, kill your agent." Nimoy says that wisdom set him to checking his passport.

First Test Tube Baby Clinic Raises Hopes, Fears

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Armed with microscopes and elongated needles, researchers are ready to convert a storage room at Norfolk General Hospital into the nation's first test tube baby clinic.

As they await a pending state verdict on the proposed in-vitro (in glass) fertilization laboratory, debate over the revolutionary medical procedure grows — raising hopes and fears.

Proponents say the project, in which human eggs are fertilized in petri dishes, will provide thousands of women with damaged reproductive systems a chance to bear children.

Foes envision the facility opening another door for scientists to meddle with the conception of human life, possibly leading to made-to-order babies and destruction of fertilized human eggs deemed unfit.

Battle lines zig-zag across the medical, religious and private sectors and stretch to the state capital in Richmond, where a verdict is due by Jan. 1 on a state certificate of need.

Ten women have been chosen as potential candidates for medical history. If the certificate is granted, officials say the laboratory could begin operation within a month.

Opponents, who have been battling the project since it was first proposed in November 1978, vow they will go to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary, to try to stop it.

Norfolk General plans to use the technique pioneered by British doctors Robert Edwards and Patrick Steptoe, who performed the first in-vitro fertilization that resulted in a human birth — that of Louise Brown in Oldham, England, July 25, 1978.

Under the procedure, a human egg is extracted from an infertile woman, fertilized with sperm from her husband, then implanted in the woman's womb to develop naturally.

"In-vitro fertilization holds great promise and should be pursued," said Dr. Mason Andrews, chief of obstetrics at Eastern Virginia Medical School, which wants to operate the facility with the hospital.

"This is an area where science has the opportunity to help a group of people have children who otherwise wouldn't be able to," he said. "It is ethical and legal."

Charles Dean, president of the Tidewater Chapter of the Virginia Society for Human Life, disagrees.

"This project must be stopped," said Dean, whose organization has obtained an attorney and is studying possible legal action. "It would result in doctors playing God — something they have no right to do."

To the chagrin of project coordinators, the proposed laboratory has been widely dubbed "a test tube baby clinic," conjuring up visions of scientists brewing exotic potions to create a life in a test tube.

Actually, the in-vitro fertilization procedure is almost simple, with the main ingedients a man and woman.

It would be used on women with blocked fallopian tubes — tubes needed to carry eggs from the ovary to the uterus. Blockage renders women infertile — and there are an estimated 400,000 such women in the country.

"If the project was called a fallopian by-pass, we wouldn't have nearly so many problems," said Vern Jones, the hospital spokesman who fields phone calls about the project.

"'Test tube baby' gives people the idea we could create Frankensteins," he said. "This is not true. We would simply help women with blocked tubes."

Ted Howard, co-director of the Peoples Business Commission, a Washington-based organization that studies the impact of technology on society, doesn't like it — regardless of the name.

And he disputes pledges from project coordinators that no fertilized eggs would be discarded and that the laboratory wouldn't eventually begin genetic engineering.

"Whether you call it test tube or in-vitro fertilization, this would just be the beginning," said Howard, whose organization has joined the opposition. "It would be naive not to think this wouldn't lead to genetic engineering."

"We can't even build a decent car and people are talking about manufacturing people," he said, referring to ongoing research on animals. "What happens to the lemons?"

Norfolk General, a private 90-year-old hospital located in this city of 280,000 residents, announced plans last winter to open the lab in conjunction with EVMS, a six-year-old institution that shares hospital facilities.

The hospital asked Steptoe to serve as an unofficial advisor and requested a state certificate of need to convert a 120-square-foot storage room into an in-vitro lab.

The Eastern Virginia Health Systems Agency last fall recommended that State Health Commissioner James Kenley grant approval under the state's administrative review process.

But Kenley rejected the application Sept. 28, saying the project was of such significance it should be subjected to the more detailed standard review.

EVHSA again recommended approval under the longer review process after an Oct. 31 hearing attended by about 600 persons.

The project directors are two former researchers at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore, Dr. Howard Jones and his wife, Georgeanna.

In a recent letter to the editor of the local newspaper, a regular forum for the debate, Georgeanna Jones defended the project and again answered Dean.

"No fertilized egg will be destroyed or allowed to die and none will be frozen for scientific research," she wrote. "All fertilized eggs will be reimplanted into the uterus and have a chance to survive."

As for fears in-vitro would foster genetic engineering, officials say it won't happen at their facility, but concede it could somewhere else.

An unanswered question is whether in-vitro births would affect the chances of abnormalities, with opponents saying it could and supporters arguing it won't. Research is insufficient for a definitive conclusion and opponents, including some physicians, say more experiments with animals are needed.

Although it has been more than a year since Edwards and Steptoe received international acclaim for the first in-vitro birth, research has progressed slowly.

There have been only two additional reported in-vitro births, a second under Steptoe's supervision and one claimed by researchers in India.

The World Health Organization, France and England have refused funding of in-vitro, voicing many of the objections heard in Norfolk.

Last spring, an ethics advisory committee of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued a qualified recommendation that such research be carried out under limited circumstances.

Their report is before HEW Secretary Patricia Harris, who has made no decision on whether in-vitro research should received federal funding. HEW has received more than 10,000 letters on the subject, nearly all against it.

The American Medical Association earlier this year adopted a resolution in favor of in-vitro fertilization, concluding the procedure is ethical.

But Norfolk General has moved ahead alone. It hopes to open the clinic at an initial cost of $25,000, financed by private contributions and charges to patients, who will have to pay an estimated $3,000 to $3,500 each.

Andrews, who in addition to serving at the medical school is Norfolk's vice mayor, predicts victory for the clinic's supporters.

"I think the thoughtful and responsible people who will have the opportunity to influence this will make a judgement that is consistent with present law and ethics," he said. "There is no basis to deny it."

Bishop Walter Sullivan, head of the Catholic Diocese of Richmond, is waging his own campaign against in-vitro births.

In a letter to the diocese's 109,000 members, he urged them to oppose the project, saying doctors shouldn't "play God" and that adoption would be a more Christian response to infertility.

Kathleen Wheaton and her husband want their own child and are among the 10 couples chosen as the initial candidates for the proposed clinic.

"I have no fear that my child will be a freak nor that I'm tampering with God's work in achieving pregnancy in this manner," Mrs. Wheaton told the EVHSA during the October hearing.

"I'm simply engaging in a procedure that takes place of a part of my reproductive system that no longer works," she said.

Farmer Plans Methane Plant

SWANVILLE, Minn. (AP) — The ingenuity of two Minnesota turkey farmers in turning turkey manure to good advantage in energy conservation programs is helping provide some answers to the nation's energy crisis, it is reported.

According to Energy User News, one farmer — Frank Gessell of Swanville — has begun a study to build a plant capable of turning the 200 tons of turkey manure his farm produces annually to methane gas.

When the plant is completed, Gassell said, he will sell the methane to a local gas company and use the proceeds to purchase propane, which now sells for about 40 cents a gallon compared to 8 cents a gallon four years ago.

In nearby Mountain Lake, farmer Glen Harder has his own plans for turkey manure energy.

Linda Blair Blames Fame For Drug Bust

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Linda Blair, who at 13 played a girl possessed by the devil in "The Exorcist," is 20 now and has survived her own legal exorcism on drug charges.

Last September a Jacksonville, Fla., federal judge sentenced Linda to three years probation for a 1977 drug bust. She was ordered to make a dozen public appearances to warn young people to stay away from drugs.

Linda, who pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor charge of conspiracy to possess cocaine, also was fined $5,000.

The young actress sounds as if she thinks she took a bum rap.

"I took that tumble because I'm famous," Linda said. "Being on probation means I have to notify Los Angeles county authorities every time I leave to go any place — and I move around often.

"I've got to give four speeches a year to kids for the next three years. I haven't done any of them yet and I'm not looking forward to it.

"I get uncomfortable when I have to speak to a group of people, you know? But they wanted someone to set an example — and I guess that's me.

"Fame is what caused the drug bust. I was only convicted of conspiracy and that can mean almost anything.

"The bust may have hurt my career because people assumed that I was all screwed up. The arrest and the publicity hurt my pride. I was 18 when it all happened and it hurt my family, too.

"I like life too much to get involved with drugs."

Linda, blonde and full-figured, still has the pert, cute face of the youngster she chillingly portrayed in "The Exorcist."

Since her 1973 nomination for best supporting actress, Linda has appeared in 10 feature films and TV movies.

She reprised her role of the demoniacally possessed child, Regan, in "The Heretic" and shone in a pair of highly rated, highly praised TV movies, "Born Innocent" and "Sarah T.: Portrait of a Teenage Alcoholic."

Linda also appeared in "Airport '75." But in the last couple of years her assignments have been several cuts below "The Exorcist."

She starred in the movie "Wild Horse Hank" last year. It has yet to be released. She also stars in "Roller Boogie," due for release this month, and the recently completed "Ruckus."

Linda temporarily is living in the San Fernando Valley but still owns a home in Wilton, Conn. She brought her four horses to California to ride and train during breaks in her movie activity.

Not shrinking violent nor blushing innocent, Linda is a knowledgeable young woman who boasts of making her own decisions and going her own way for the past four or five years.

She lives with a stuntwoman friend in an apartment and is in the process of patching up an on-again-off-again romance with a traveling musician.

She hasn't been married but lived with her musician friend until last summer.

"My boyfriend is always on the road and I've been busy in movies," she said. "We are both involved with our careers and are being pulled on individually by our work and friends. But we'll get it together soon, I hope.

"I never really cared about acting, maybe because I've been doing it since I was a kid. But I put my best into each performance and I enjoy working with good people.

"What I really don't like is the fame and the celebrity. You lose all your privacy and people pull on you. But I've brought myself this far and I'll try to maintain my high level of responsibility."

Linda says she has tried to organize her life to enable her to work in a couple of movies a year in order to take off every other year to devote to horse shows.

"I have to keep working to support my horses," she said. "They eat me out of house and home. Of course, I'd like to get back to making better movies with people like Friedkin (Bill Friedkin who directed 'The Exorcist') and actors like Dustin Hoffman, Al Pacino and Jane Fonda.

"I'd done small parts in two pictures before 'The Exorcist.' The success of 'The Exorcist' really hit me in the back of the head. I was disappointed 'The Heretic' didn't do as well.

"Now I try to work in the best pictures that get offered to me.

"I had to learn muscle control to become a pretty good skater for the picture. I did a few stunts and I didn't fall down much.

"There was another skate picture, 'Skatetown,' which already came out and didn't do very well. It's funny, but I moved to California last February to star in still another skate picture which was never made.

"I hope to stay here only anothe year to two for movie work and then get back to Connecticut and take my horses with me. I'd much rather live back east."

Poetry Therapy Helps Mentally Ill Patients

CROWNSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Reading and discussing poetry helps mentally ill patients "assert themselves and say what they feel," a poetry therapist at a local state hospital says.

Eloise Richardson, the Crownsville State Hospital's librarian and poetry therapist, has been recognized and acclaimed nationally for pioneering the only rehabilitative poetry therapy program in Maryland.

Mrs. Richardson, who established the patients' library at Crownsville 17 years ago, began working with poetry therapy nine years ago.

"The program is successful because poetry is very powerful," Mrs. Richardson said. "It says things like no other kind of writing because it's written by people who are writing their feelings.

"It comes from their emotions, and therefore has a tendency to reach out to other people," she added.

The therapist says persons who enter mental hospitals "are sort of thrown aside by our society.

"They are mentally ill, and many so-called normal people regard them as worthless. Poetry therapy brings about communication. Once they can communicate, you can help them."

Patients in the program gather every week in the hospital's library, leaf through volumes of poetry, and select a verse that appeals to them. It is read aloud to the group and discussed.

Mrs. Richardson says the poems selected by participants offer a key to their emotions.

"Usually they choose something that is meaningful to them," she said. "It may mean one thing to one patient, and something completely different to another.

"But they have the opportunity to be spontaneous about their reactions to certain words and moods that a poem creates for them," she added.

Many of her patients have even become inspired enough to write their own poetry.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Famous "Man in the Middle" of the three Ritz Brothers, known to contemporary comics as the funniest man in the world and originator of imaginative comedy bits adopted by many other top comedians of his time, does a loner for the first time in the film "Love and Money." (One entrepreneur once billed the boys as "The Ritz Brothers And Harry Ritz!")

The Ritz Brothers, Broadway musical comedy and Palace vaudeville stars, provided competition to the zany Marx Brothers when they graduated from their plush nightclub activities to films.

Naturally the sight-and-sound trio captured more plaudits when they invaded television and starred in the now-memorable "Colgate Comedy Hour."

Their movies included "Sing Baby Sing" in 1936, "One in a Million" in 1937, "You Can't Have Everything" and "The Goldwyn Follies" both in 1938, etc., etc., etc.

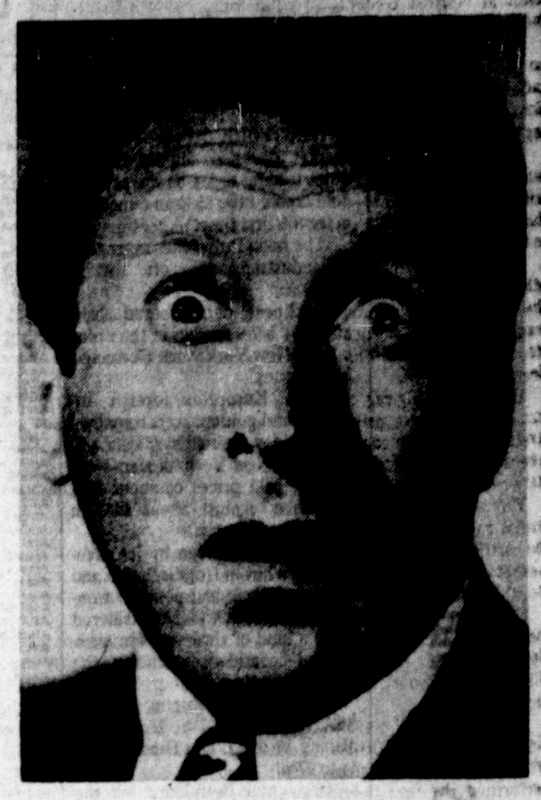
Irrepressible, loose-jointed, eccentric comedy dancers, delicious dialecticians, singers and semi-serious actors, the versitalented trio was active for almost 35 years — until one of the brothers passed away. The two survivors remained partly active until the ink was dry on Harry's new contract. They wouldn't think of even auditioning a third but phony "Ritz brother" (a showbiz practice), primarily for sentimental reasons.

To show how affectionately and warmly the Ritz Brothers are remembered, when Harry and brother Jimmy were introduced at a recent theatrical all-star benefit in Hollywood, they stopped the show with a standing ovation.

And, if "Love and Money" is the kind of move that plucked Harry Ritz from out of the past, the future will be just as bright.

Variety expects the film to be released next summer, probably by United Artists.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 19620, Irvine, Calif., 92714. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.



MAKING COMEBACK — Harry Ritz, shown here in an early '40s publicity shot, will be the "George Burns of 1980." He'll be making a comeback in the film "Love and Money."

Man Celebrates 110th Birthday On Christmas

DETROIT (UPI) — The Rev. Francis C. Stayton was 110-years-old on Christmas Day, an occasion he celebrated with his new 78-year-old wife.

Stayton, a full-blooded Cherokee, and Lula Archie pledged their love to each other recently in a marriage ceremony peformed at the LaSalle Nursing Home, where the couple met last June. It is the second marriage for both.

"It went beautifully," said a nursing home official at the ceremony performed by a local Baptist minister and attended by about 300 people. "It was something beautiful."

"He proposed to me at the dinner table," the new Mrs. Stayton said after the couple got their marriage license. Officials had helped the couple obtain a waiver of the usual three-day waiting period.

A nursing home spokeswoman said Stayton's daughter planned to take the couple on a "honeymoon" of sorts to Arkansas, where the bride has relatives.

Stock Mart Falls As Gold Rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly in very quiet trading today as the price of gold crossed the $500-an-ounce level for the first time.

But in New York, dealers were quoting gold prices of about $501 an ounce, against about $488 in London on Monday.

Since gold is seen by its advocates as a haven from inflation and other economic and political troubles, its price is widely considered to be a kind of reverse thermometer of confidence among the world's investors.

Among gold mining stocks, ASA rose ¾ to 37¼; Homestake Mining 1/4 to 47; and Dome Mines ¼ to 47⅜.

Occidental Petroleum led the active list, up 1 at 26¾. The company said it tentatively settled a contract dispute with Libya, and expected an amicable resolution soon of a similar situation with Peru.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .04 to 61.50. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .27 at 242.35.

Oil Search On Upswing

DETROIT (AP) — President Carter's decision last April to decontrol oil prices has triggered a boom in domestic oil exploration, according to geological and oil industry officials.

The number of geological crews searching for oil in the United States is at its highest point in 20 years, a spokesman for the Society of Exploration Geophysicists of Tulsa, Okla. said in today's editions of the Detroit News.

The American Petroleum Institute in Washington reported that more rotary drilling rigs are being used in domestic exploration now — 2,577 — than any time since 1957.
