An apology

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dave Durenberger apologized Wednesday to his colleagues and constituents, saying he takes "full responsibility" for ethical lapses even though he never set out to break the rules.

Durenberger

Shortly after he spoke, the Senate Ethics Committee abruptly ended its trial-like hearing into Durenberger's financial conduct and accepted 23 volumes of evidence against the Minnesota Republican.

Burning truck

WATERFORD, Mich. (AP) — An oil delivery truck exploded and burned at an oil distributorship Wednesday, injuring at least four people and destroying three other vehicles.

People living within several hundred yards of Viking Oil Co. in this town about 30 miles northwest of Detroit were evacuated immediately after the 1:40 p.m. blast, said police spokesman John McLain. They were permitted to return to their homes within half an hour.

Gone with ...

NEW YORK (AP) — The much ballyhooed sequel to Margaret Mitchell's classic "Gone With the Wind" is gone from Warner Books' fall lineup, the president of the publishing house said Wednesday.

But as Scarlett O'Hara said, there's always tomorrow — or next year, to be more exact.

Laurence Kirshbaum, president of Warner Books, said the new target date will be either May or possibly pre-Christmas 1991.

Out on bail

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cajun fiddler-singer Doug Kershaw spent a few hours in jail before posting $132,000 bail to cover alimony he allegedly owes his ailing ex-wife.

Kershaw

Kershaw, the 53-year-old "ragin' Cajun" best known for his 1961 song "Louisiana Man," was jailed Friday after performing at the Tennessee State Fairgrounds. A contempt hearing was set for July 18.

Kershaw's former wife, Elsie Griffin Kershaw, 72, is destitute and in ill health, said her attorney, Jack Norman Jr.

Kershaw was the featured entertainer at halftime during this year's Super Bowl in New Orleans.

Gasoline tax hike possible

■ To fund road building and repair, state highway officials will seek at 10-cent per gallon increase, raising the gasoline tax to 25 cents.

AUSTIN (AP) — State highway officials say they are doing less road building and repair because of a cash crunch and will ask the 1991 Legislature for a 10-cent per gallon increase in the gasoline tax.

Robert Dedman, chairman of the State Highways and Public Transportation Commission, revealed the proposal to raise the tax to 25 cents at this week's convention of the Texas Good Roads and Transportation Association.

His two colleagues on the panel, Commissioners Ray Stoker Jr. and Wayne Duddlesten, have endorsed the tax hike, which would raise $1 billion in new money annually.

Under the Texas Constitution, $750 million of that annual total would be dedicated to the highway department, which has a $2.6 billion annual budget. The remainder would go to public education.

Stoker said the 25 percent share for schools would help the state in its efforts to reform public school finance.

"The other 75 percent would enable us to go about our business of maintaining the present highway system, which is an integral part of the infrastructure of the state," Stoker said.

The call for new gasoline taxes comes just days after California voters approved fuel tax increases and after the Texas Legislature increased the sales tax, and cigarette and mixed drink taxes to increase school spending.

Lawmakers raised the gasoline tax in 1986, when they "temporarily" raised the levy from 10 cents to 15 cents. They made that increase permanent in 1987.

A Confederate Air Force North American B-25J Mitchell bomber makes a brief stopover in Midland Wednesday before moving on to an air show in Oregon.

B-25J makes Midland pit stop

■ A historic North American B-25J Mitchell "warbird" being flown to an Oregon air show stops off in Midland, future home base of its "flock," the Confederate Air Force.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

For many a warbird enthusiast, the sight and sound of radial engines cranking up and spouting smoke and thundering crackling noises stirs up flying fever, fervor and imagination.

"It's almost like hearing God Bless America or The Star-Spangled Banner," Bill Pounds, a Confederate Air Force (CAF) colonel, said while a twin-engine CAF aircraft, the North American B-25J Mitchell, was taxiing to take off at Midland International Airport on Wednesday.

The 1943 aircraft, painted in World War II battle camouflage colors as if preparing for another North African campaign, was flown to Midland International Airport to refuel in a Texas-to-Oregon flight to an air show.

The firing up of the CAF warbird excited Pounds' fellow aviator, George Coombes of Midland.

"They (the B-25s) are noisy and all of that other good stuff," said Coombes, a World War II naval aviator who flew carrier-based aircraft, such as the Grumman F6F Hellcat. "When we grew up," said Coombes, "they (aircraft powered by radial engines) were the real noise of the day. When they go (roar), there's nothing like them."

The Hellcat, like the F4U Corsair, the Wildcat, the B-25, the B-17 and the B-29, were powered by radial — round — piston engines.

"A lot of people, the younger sets, say that the sweetest sound in the world is a Merlin (in-line engine) in a Spitfire," said Coombes. "But to me, it's still a round engine, and they are the ones that did the real work" in World War II, which covered the 1939-45 period.

The Yellow Rose B-25, which is hangared at Hondo, just west of San Antonio, is maintained by the CAF's Yellow Rose Squadron. Approximately 140 CAF warbirds, including pursuit aircraft (fighters) and bombers, will be based at Midland International Airport when the CAF establishes its headquarters and Flying Museum here in 1991.

The CAF membership voted to moved out of the South Texas Gulf Coastal area to the relatively dry West Texas plains for the better preservation of the antique aircraft.

Defendants debate share of aquifer damage costs

■ U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton to determine what percentage of cleanup costs defendants must pay in two-year-old water contamination case.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Defendants in a groundwater contamination case feuded in federal court Wednesday over how much money each one owes to the government for cleanup of chrome in an Odessa aquifer.

U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Bunton ruled last fall that the defendants — John Leigh of Odessa, Bell Petroleum Services Inc. and Sequa Corp. — had contaminated the Trinity Aquifer.

The Environmental Protection Agency placed the aquifer and another chrome-contaminated site in Odessa on it's so-called Superfund waste cleanup list in 1984, Texas Water Commission records show.

Court documents indicate that the U.S. government is attempting to recover more than $1.6 million from the defendants pay for tests, investigations and an alternative water supply for residents.

It was not immediately clear whether the defendants would be expected to help pay for cleanup of the aquifer, scheduled to begin in 1995.

Between 1970 and 1978, the three defendants operated a chrome plating shop at 4318 Brazos in Ector County which was linked to the groundwater contamination. Contamination was discovered in 1978, TWC records show.

Wastewater from chrome plating operations at the site is believed to have been dumped and spilled onto the ground and allowed to migrate into the aquifer, records show.

Tests in 1985 showed at least 15 water wells in the surrounding area were contaminated with chromium. The EPA

City seeking bids on cleanup of barrels encrusted with paint

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The city of Midland is pricing the cost of cleaning up a tall stack of traffic barrels encrusted with lead paint, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said Wednesday.

It probably will cost about $20,000 to dispose of the barrels, which are lying inside a fenced area near the city's east Midland animal control center, 1601 Orchard Lane, McGregor said. It will cost an estimated $250 to $300 to transport and incinerate each barrel, he said.

The City Council on Tuesday appropriated using $20,000 from the city's general liability self-insurance fund for the cleanup project.

"It's more of our continuing effort to address our environmental obligations, McGregor said.

About 75 of the estimated 400 barrels at the site contain enough dried lead paint to warrant disposal by hazardous waste incinerator, he said.

The cleanup project should be completed as early as late July and no later

Capt. C.M. Mahidhara, left, and chief engineer Singh Balinder attend an investigation on the explosion of their ship, the Mega Borg.

Ship's oil spreading

GALVESTON (AP) — Oil from the burning Norwegian supertanker Mega Borg continued to spread in the Gulf of Mexico Wednesday as firefighters worked to put out the remaining flames on the crippled ship.

"A minimum of 3 million gallons has left the cargo tanks and I'm presuming that most of that has gone into the water," Coast Guard Capt. Thomas Greene said Wednesday.

But he said only 12,000 to 40,000 gallons remained in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico because most of the oil had burned off or evaporated.

"I don't see any risk of losing cargo from the other tanks," he said.

Greene said investigators had found a hole in a center tank in the vessel, which was carrying 38 million gallons of oil when its pump room exploded Saturday.

A board of inquiry was convened Wednesday by the government of Norway to interview crewmen to find out the cause of the explosion

Banks' loans, deposits up over last year

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

While most Midland banks' loan and deposit totals were down during the first quarter, those levels were up from a year earlier at the six local banks which make totals available.

Bankers said first quarter totals of deposits and loans normally tend to be flat from the previous year and lower than fourth quarter totals, but a few Midland banks defied the norm.

Midland American Bank presented the largest increase in loan activity with a 28.3 percent jump in its portfolio from March 1989 and a 1.7 percent increase from last quarter.

John Grist, Midland American Bank president said: "We had a good first quarter. We had anticipated some growth. We don't see economic growth at 28 percent for every quarter, but we should see a steady increase." Deposits also jumped 28.27 percent from a year ago and a 6.67 from last quarter.

United Bank totals also increased. Wayne Merritt, United Bank president said: "First quarter deposits were at an all time high, which is fairly rare. It's due to runoff from other banks, people getting cash to pay income taxes and increased economic activity." United Bank deposits were up 7.74 percent from last year and 5.77 from last quarter. Loans increased 0.76 percent from a year ago, but dropped 2.50 percent from year-end levels.

David Jones, ClayDesta National Bank president, said he has seen an increase in personal banking this year. "The high point is usually at year-end, but we are seeing renewed loan activity," Jones says. He attributes the increase to personal perception.

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high near 100, winds from the south at 10 to 20 mph and a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight is expected to be partly cloudy with a low near 70 and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Friday will be partly cloudy with a high in the upper 90s.

Wednesday's high was 99 compared with the record high of 103 for that date set in 1947. The overnight low was 70. The record low was 56 set in 1947.

STATE

Most Texans enjoyed sunny skies Wednesday, while a few scattered showers and thunderstorms developed along a West Texas dry line extending from near Amarillo to near Lubbock and south to the Big Bend.

It was partly to mostly cloudy along the Coastal Plains, and generally partly cloudy over the western parts of West Texas and elsewhere in South and East Texas.

Southerly winds were common statewide. Wind speeds were mainly in the 10 to 20 mph range, but southerly wind gusts to near 30 mph were noted in North Central Texas and parts of the middle coast.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 90s, with extremes of 85 degrees at Dalhart and 99 degrees at Wink in the Trans-Pecos.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms fell across the central United States from eastern Kansas to northern Lake Michigan on Wednesday, including a storm that downed power lines in an Illinois city. Summer snow fell in Oregon.

In the northern Illinois city of Belvidere, winds hitting 69 mph downed electrical lines and started a fire at a downtown building.

Up to 6 inches of snow fell overnight in some higher elevations of Oregon.

A few showers and thunderstorms developed along the central and western Gulf Coast. Dry weather prevailed across the rest of the nation, with clear skies across the southwestern quarter.

A storm system developing along the California coast generated strong, gusty winds in sections of Arizona and Southern California.

Temperatures dropped into the 40s in New England and the northern Plains. Readings were in the 30s and 40s in the Great Basin of Nevada and the northern and central Rockies.

It was an unseasonably cool 44 degrees at Atlantic City's airport, tying the record for the date set in 1980.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BANKS: Midland American leads

(From 1A)

"Increased loan activity comes from a perception that things will be better next year than they were last year and that communicates into economic activity. Single family home mortgages are up substantially and we are seeing movement in existing housing as well as new housing. People are selling and trading up," Jones said.

ClayDesta's deposits showed gains of 8.17 percent from a year ago, but dropped 4.66 percent from fourth quarter totals. Loan activity leaped 20.87 percent from last year and 8.77 percent from last quarter.

Ed Jones, president of Texas Commerce Bank-Midland, said banks are doing better and going forward. "While there is some fluctuation in oil prices there are a lot more investment dollars going back into the business than in years past. We process more loans for oil and gas acquisition and exploration than anything else," Jones said.

Although some banks nationally are tightening on lending guidelines, Jones said that's not the case in Texas. "We've lived through the bust and we're seeing a little less tightening as far as lending is concerned. The Texas market is more competitive," he said.

Texas Commerce's deposit totals were down 12.9 percent from March 1989 and 9.6 percent from last quarter. Loans saw an increase of 9.6 percent from a year ago and 2.7 percent from last quarter.

Bob Southerland, president of Community National said Midland is beginning to pick up in 1990. "We are doing about as good as we were in 1979, which was a pretty good year. Midland overbuilt in 1983 and we had to come down to earth, but now we are more realistic and that's why we're a more conservative lender."

Community National reported a 12.2 percent decrease in deposits from last year, but increased by 1 percent from the previous quarter. Loans fell 29.8 percent from a year ago and 1.8 percent from last quarter. "I think people are waiting to see what's going to happen with the savings and loan tragedy," Southerland says.

First City, Texas totals slipped. Deposit's were up slightly by 0.91 from last year, but dropped 6.42 percent from the previous quarter. Loans were down 0.48 percent from last year and 16.30 percent from last quarter.

Chuck Cowell, executive vice president of First City, Texas said: "There is typically a little decline from year end. Oil prices have been soft in the first quarter. This creates a little concern among the borrowing public not to be to agressive."

Cowell noted that the first quarter decline is seasonal. Busier times tend to come in the third and fourth quarter when businesses are borrowing for Christmas merchandise," he said.

Team Bank and NCNB Texas did not report first quarter totals for their local branches.

BIDS: City believes disposal of barrels could cost $20,000

(From 1A)

than the end of August, he said.

Odessa-based Texas Water Commission officials, after inspecting the barrels May 25, initially said any container with more than 1 inch of encrusted lead paint must be disposed of at a hazardous waste site, McGregor said.

Ralph Johnson, TWC geologist, said the city may be jumping the environmental gun by going out for bids on the cleanup.

"We're supposed to get together (with city officials) a little later this month," Johnson said. "Then we'll decide where they need to take the barrels.

"That type of paint in those barrels may not be considered toxic."

To be considered hazardous, the paint must contain five parts per million of either lead or chromium, he said. The TWC plans to analyze the paint later this month, he said.

"It's fine and dandy that they're going to handle the problem," Johnson said of city official's early efforts. "I appreciate the city being aware that should the stuff be hazardous, it must be taken to a toxic waste site."

McGregor said the only Texas companies capable of transporting and incinerating the barrels are Rollins Environmental of Houston, Chemical Reclamation Services of Avalon and Chemical Waste Management.

He said the approximately 325 barrels with less than 1 inch of encrusted paint can be dumped at the city landfill or sold for recycling purposes, he said.

The city started using plastic liners with the paint barrels a little more than a year ago, McGregor said. The liners, which are buried in the city landfill, leave the barrel free of paint when removed, he said.

The barrel site also is near a city-created tar pit found to contain mostly asphalt and traces of toxic materials — including chromium and lead paint.

City officials have said cleanup of that site may cost as much as $800,000.

paid about $159,000 to extend Odessa city water lines to the affected Ector County area, records show.

Odessa City Manager Bill Brown said the city began providing water to the affected area about 18 months ago.

"We do have some people already hooked up," Brown said. "It's a small percentage of those who could." The number of people in the affected area using city water was not immediately available.

Records show that the EPA filed its case against Bell Petroleum Services and the other defendants in June 1988.

Testimony indicated that Leigh opened the chrome plating operation around 1970 and was bought out by Bell in 1972, although Leigh continued to manage the business. Bell sold the business to Woolley Tool and Manufacturing, also known as Sequa Corp., in 1976, testimony showed.

Leigh's attorney, Mike Morgan, argued that his client was a minor contributor to the contamination problem and that he should be made to pay only a small portion of the damages.

Attorneys for Bell and Sequa, meanwhile, attempted to show through sales records and electric bills how much chrome each had used in their respective operations.

CAF: Historic plane en route to Oregon

(From 1A)

While keeping the warbirds flying, the CAF is working toward educating people, particularly younger generations, on the air power in World War II and the preservation of peace.

"Since the schools are not teaching much about World War II," said Pounds, "then, by golly, we are going to try to help them remember what preparedness is, what price you have to pay for liberty, and to see that we don't let this same thing (unpreparedness as demonstrated by the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor) happen to us again that happened in 1941."

The B-25 is the type of aircraft which was launched off of an aircraft carrier in the April 1942 Tokyo bombing raid, which was commanded by American flier Jimmy Doolittle.

"It's a forgiving airplane," said CAF Col. Jack Hart, who pilots the B-25. "It flies like most any other airplane, except it has two engines, and you can't steer the nose wheel. You steer this (airplane) with engines and brakes."

"It was a noisy airplane then," Hart said of the war years. "It still is. It's a very sturdy airplane."

Logging reductions announced

SEATTLE (AP) — A plan to reduce logging by 46 percent in Washington's largest national forest was announced Wednesday, and more drastic reductions may be ordered to protect the northern spotted owl, officials said.

Mount Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest supervisor Doug MacWilliams briefed a few dozen interest-group representatives on the 10-to-15-year plan for land and resource management.

He said it represents a major shift in favor of recreation and a "very severe" blow to the timber industry.

The proposed timber harvest reductions would cost about 1,800 jobs, MacWilliams said. "Every one of us in this room will feel it in some way or another," he said.

"When you go to buy a 2-by-4, you're going to be paying through the nose for it," he said.

The plan, replacing one dating from 1963, takes effect 90 days after publication Friday in the Federal Register and will remain in effect pending the outcome of appeals, MacWilliams said.

and fire on the tanker. Two of the 41 crewmen died, two were missing and presumed dead and 17 were injured, none seriously.

The captain of the 886-foot tanker, C. M. Mahidhara, told the panel Wednesday everything seemed normal before the explosion and he didn't know what sparked it.

Six fireboats aimed a dozen streams of water on the rear of the ship Wednesday, leaving the back of the ship shrouded in a cloud of steam and gray smoke.

Unlike previous days, however, the smoke hovered close to the surface of the Gulf and was not billowing into the sky, although an occasional puff of brown smoke gusted from the ship.

"There is still fire under the deck," Greene said. "It's not completely out."

A day after the fire was declared under control, firefighters on Wednesday afternoon tried using flame-dousing foam on hot spots in the engine room, Coast Guard officials said.

As was feared earlier, however, the fire flared again and crews returned to using water to try to extinguish the blaze, Chief Petty Officer Todd Nelson said.

"They had to layer a whole blanket down, they had a reflash and then they had to start using water," he said. "The reflash is a minor setback. There is very little fire left on the ship."

Officials explained earlier that heat from the blaze could re-ignite the flames snuffed by the foam.

"They were successful in knocking the flames down," Greene said regarding use of the foam. "The only flame seen was from a vent in the pump room. And about 3:45 p.m., the fire reflashed. Then they dropped back to regroup."

Selvage crews resumed spraying water on the interior fires late Wednesday and expected to continue using water through the night.

GAS: Tax last increased in 1986

(From 1A)

Texas highway officials said they have only enough money to build 43 percent of the projects on the drawing board. In recent years, that figure has been about 60 percent, but inflation and lower revenues from auto registration fees has driven that down, officials said.

State Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, vice chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said there will be a lot of competing needs for state money.

"It may be that we are going to go into the (1991) session with a $3 billion to $5 billion deficit. If I have to choose between a child's life and a new highway, I'll choose the child's life every time," Barrientos said.

Lawrence Olsen, a lobbyist for the good roads group, said, "Obviously, the Legislature is not going to do something that is not politically palatable. (But) I don't think it's an outrageous figure."

Flag-burning amendment clears first House hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reluctant Democrats pushed a constitutional amendment against flag burning past its first congressional hurdle Wednesday, just two days after the Supreme Court threw out the federal flag-protection law.

Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., complained, "It's unseemly that we're rushing to judgment" as the proposed amendment whisked though the House Constitutional and Civil Rights Subcommittee.

Supporters of the amendment called the flag a symbol of "all that America stands for" and deserving of special protection, while critics said that the plan would "mutilate the Bill of Rights" and the entire issue smacked of election-year politics.

Both sides said if the House were to vote today on the amendment it would be close. The proposal would have to win two-thirds majorities in both houses and approval by 38 state legislatures to take effect.

Wednesday's subcommittee session re-launched, in a fiery burst of congressional rhetoric, the proposed amendment that was set aside last year as Congress passed the statute overturned by the Supreme Court on Monday.

The House panel voted 5-3 to send the measure to the full Judiciary Committee with an "adverse" recommendation — a symbolic dark cloud that will have no effect on its chances of eventually being adopted.

The three Republicans on the subcommittee, all of whom favor the amendment, voted no on the roll call because they wanted a "favorable" recommendation.

"You don't see that very often," said panel chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., an outspoken critic of the plan.

American flags frame the U.S. Capitol dome in Washington Wednesday.

President Bush passed up a chance to restate the vigorous support of an amendment that he voiced on Monday — after the court ruling — and again on Tuesday. But his wife Barbara endorsed his views on the subject, saying "You're darn right, I'm always with the president."

Bush himself addressed a number of topics with a group of reporters but didn't bring up the flag.

Retired Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who often has cautioned against adding amendments to the Constitution, declined to give advice to his former colleagues or anyone else on the subject as he appeared with Mrs. Bush on the White House lawn along with students who won a poster contest honoring the Constitution.

Bush to seek special treatment for NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration will ask congressional negotiators at high-level budget talks to give special treatment to NASA, one of the president's chief domestic priorities, officials said Wednesday.

The officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the White House would propose that negotiators work out a specific spending figure for next year's NASA budget.

In budget summits of past years, administration and congressional officials have agreed to a single spending amount covering thousands of domestic programs, including NASA. The budgets for individual agencies were then determined by Congress during the regular legislative process.

President Bush would thus greatly enhance his role in determining NASA's budget if it is negotiated directly between White House and congressional negotiators.

That would be important to Bush and NASA because Congress does not want to increase the space agency's budget by as much as the president would like.

The administration's proposal to consider NASA separately would also leave the thousands of remaining domestic programs vulnerable to cuts that may be agreed to by budget bargainers. Negotiators, meeting Wednesday for a seventh time, are looking for ways to shrink next year's federal deficit by $45 billion to $60 billion.

Many lawmakers would be likely to reject Bush's proposal to negotiate separately over NASA, said aides who asked to not be identified.

They said Bush's idea would provide protection to his pet project while leaving their favorite programs exposed to potential spending cuts.

In his budget for fiscal 1991, Bush proposed giving NASA $15.2 billion, a 24 percent increase over this year's $12.3 billion. That was the largest increase Bush requested for any of the government's major agencies.

"The exploration of space has benefits for the United States that go far beyond the quantifiable," Bush said in his budget, which he presented in January.

Congress has so far been less generous with the space agency.

NASA would receive $13.4 billion next year under a fiscal 1991 budget approved in May by the House. A separate spending plan approved by the Senate Budget Committee last month would give the agency $14.2 billion.

Asked to confirm the administration's intentions, one official who spoke on condition of anonymity said, "You can say administration sources wouldn't deny it."

Animals die in transit

Copley News Service

Four San Diego Zoo animals shipped across the country in a truck arrived dead at their East Coast destinations in April because of dehydration, while another nine in the same shipment arrived dehydrated, a San Diego Zoo spokesman said Wednesday.

The four animals — a male fishing cat, a female sloth bear and two palm civets — died while en route to the Capron Park Zoo in Attleboro, Mass., said Georgette Irvine, a San Diego Zoo spokeswoman. The palm civet is a carnivorous mammal native to Southeast Asia.

"We blame the deaths on poor care by the transporter," zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said.

Baker urges Israeli cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will stop its efforts to set up Mideast peace talks unless Israel agrees to proceed without delay, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Wednesday.

"The phone number (for the White House switchboard) is 202-456-1414. When you're serious about this, call us," Baker said in comments directed to the Israeli government.

Baker, testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, urged the new government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to accept the U.S. plan for talks with Palestinians. Those talks could lead to elections among the 1.7 million Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

If the new government, which includes some of Israel's most hawkish politicians, puts unacceptable conditions for Palestinian participation in the talks, "there won't be any dialogue, there won't be any peace," Baker said.

The United States cannot get the talks going unless Israel shows willingness, he said.

Meanwhile, Shamir and Foreign Minister David Levy said they wanted American guarantees that Israel would not have to speak to the Palestine Liberation Organization or discuss any Palestinian state in U.S.-proposed peace talks.

"Deal with us as allies. ... First we have to reach an agreement on these things, and then other things can certainly be achieved," Levy said at a ceremony in Jerusalem formally installing him as foreign minister.

Baker's comments are expected to exacerbate tensions with the Israeli government, which already has embarked on a collision course with Washington by pledging to spend more on Jewish settlements in the occupied lands and by refusing to promise to refrain from settling Soviet Jews there.

That issue will be raised in the next few weeks when the United States begins discussions with Israel about implementing a bill granting the Israelis $400 million in housing guarantees for the influx of Soviet Jews.

Baker said he didn't know what assurances the administration would seek, except for the standard pledge to use U.S. money only in the lands it held before the 1967 Mideast war.

The United States does not recognize Israeli sovereignty over land seized during the war.

Shamir, in an interview published Wednesday in the English-language Jerusalem Post, denied his government would build new settlements in the occupied lands.

"The emphasis will be on the ... strengthening of the now existing settlements," Shamir said.

Baker's public lecture was met with dismay by the Israeli Embassy and the powerful Jewish lobby.

An embassy statement said the new government was willing and eager to promote the peace process, which it said was "best served by direct communications between the U.S. administration and the new Israeli government."

Seymour Reich, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, said Baker's remarks were both surprising and disturbing.

Baptist moderates weigh future

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

NEW ORLEANS — Defeated Southern Baptist moderates on Wednesday weighed an uncertain, perhaps separate future as a fundamentalist-dominated convention undercut a longtime religious-liberty agency in the nation's capital.

Unless the denomination's ruling bloc becomes more inclusive and "accepts the rest of us brothers and sisters," some are going to leave, said the Rev. Daniel Vestal, defeated moderate candidate for the denomination's presidency.

Similar break-away sentiments came from others in that camp, which charges exclusion from the vast ranks of denominational staffing on the basis of increased screening about beliefs.

Massed in Louisiana's Superdome, the convention slashed support of the Washington-based Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, the influential religious liberty lobby of nine Baptist groups for 50 years.

Vestal, soundly trounced in an election Tuesday in which Chapman took 58 percent of the ballots by more than 38,000 "messengers," said moderates soon would convene a meeting to consider their future course.

"Let me confess some mystery about that future," he told reporters. "It's premature to talk about separation." But he said there would be departures unless the current regime broadens its inclusiveness.

"A lot of people are now ready to do something tangible to express their dicontent and alienation," said the Rev. Stan Hastey of Washington, executive director of the Baptist Alliance.

Black candidates win in Arkansas, South Carolina

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A black businessman who gained the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor during a runoff against a Ku Klux Klan sympathizer said his victory shows how far the South has come since 1957.

Kenneth "Muskie" Harris on Tuesday drubbed Ralph Forbes, a former American Nazi who wound down his campaign with an appearance at a KKK rally Saturday.

Another black candidate, South Carolina state Sen. Theo Mitchell, soundly defeated state Sen. Ernest Passailaigue in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. Mitchell would be that state's first black governor, if he defeated popular Republican Gov. Carroll Campbell.

In one other election Tuesday with racial overtones, the first black mayor of Atlantic City, N.J., James L. Usry, was ousted by a white challenger in a runoff. Usry was recently indicted on corruption charges.

Voters also elected the first black mayor of Trenton, N.J., chose congressional candidates in Maine and rejected a sales tax increase in North Dakota.

After his triumph in Arkansas, Harris said: "Everybody wants to live in '57, but '57's dead. This is the 1990s."

Federal troops were sent to Little Rock in 1957 to ensure the safety of nine black students who were admitted to Central High School under a federal court order.

Harris, nonetheless, is an underdog in his effort to become the first black elected to such an office in Arkansas. His opponent in the Nov. 6 general election is Democrat Jim Guy Tucker, a former congressman and attorney general.

"I'm glad that the election came out the way it did," Tucker said. "We need to send a message that the vote for Mr. Forbes wasn't representative of the people of Arkansas, and that's good."

Two weeks ago, Forbes got 46 percent of the 71,000 votes in a three-way race. Harris got 36 percent to force a runoff and Robert Breaux of Little Rock got 18 percent.

The final breakdown Tuesday was Harris 27,548; Forbes 4,432. Harris gained 1,876 votes in 14 days; Forbes lost 28,753. About 38,000 fewer voters turned out for the runoff than for the May 29 primary.

"We have finally rejected the old tactics of the KKK and the neo-Nazis and white supremacists' effort to deceive the public," said Harris, who became the state's second black in the 20th century to be nominated for a constitutional office.

"I believe Arkansas' future is secure by the wisdom of her public, God-fearing people who understand that our destiny should not be dictated by hatred, power politics or one-party domination, but by the competent ideas of leadership," said Harris.

NATION IN BRIEF

Gas storage plant explodes

SWITZ CITY, Ind. (AP) — Explosions ripped through a gasoline storage plant Wednesday, injuring three people and prompting authorities to evacuate area residents, officials said.

State police were notified at 2:45 p.m. of the blasts at the Greene County Farm Bureau Co-op about four miles west of this southwestern Indiana city, said Cpl. Omar Davis.

One of seven or eight gasoline tanks exploded, and another explosion followed, Davis said.

Witnesses said they heard blasts and saw dark smoke up to six or seven miles away.

One person was in critical condition and two were in serious condition, hospital officials said.

Switz City is 75 miles southwest of Indianapolis.

Barry won't run again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry, struggling against drug possession and perjury charges, said Wednesday he would not seek re-election to a fourth term. "Now is a time for healing," the embattled mayor said.

Barry hastily summoned his cabinet to reveal his decision shortly before he told his constituents via a televised announcement.

His move was apparently part of an effort to rekindle plea bargain talks that broke down over a week ago.

Barry has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor cocaine possession charges, one misdemeanor cocaine conspiracy charge, and three felony counts of lying to a grand jury about his alleged drug use. As jury selection crawled along, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said he hoped to seat a jury on Monday.

Jury pool questioned

NEW YORK (AP) — About 120 prospective jurors in the trial of three teen-agers accused of raping and nearly killing a Central Park jogger were given questionnaires Wednesday asking their attitudes on race and crime.

All three defendants are black teen-agers who live in Harlem. The victim is a 29-year-old white investment banker.

The 54-question, 17-page form was handed to those from a pool of 382 who told state Supreme Court Justice Thomas Galligan they would be able to stay for a six- to eight-week trial.

The questionnaire asks if the prospective juror or his or her children attended an integrated school; whether the person has lived in a racially mixed community, and whether he or she has friends of a different race.

It also asks whether the individual would prefer help from a police officer of his or her own racial or ethnic group if in need of assistance.

The questions were agreed on by all parties in the case, said Michael Joseph, attorney for defendant Antron McCray, 15.

Members of the Guardian Angels community patrol group marched in front of the Manhattan courthouse, passing out leaflets that said the case "is not a question of black and white; it's about what's wrong and what's right."

McCray and five other youths are charged with gang raping and beating the woman as she jogged through the Central Park the evening of April 19, 1989.

Weed solution benefits city

Faced with the dilemma presented by overgrown vacant lots and a reduction in the city's clearing program for "weedy lots," Midland city officials have opted for a solution utilizing non-violent felons from the Midland Judicial District Community Supervision and Corrections Department. The idea is a good one.

Rainfall amounts larger than normal so far this year have aggravated the problem of weedy lots and with the city cutting back on its clearing program, the problem could become a serious one if not addressed quickly.

Overgrown lots not only serve as breeding grounds for insects and "cover" for snakes and other wildlife, they also constitute a definite fire hazard and make the city unattractive to residents and out-of-town visitors.

Clearing the lots isn't an inexpensive proposition. Last fiscal year the city spent $48,000 clearing lots, but only $15,000 was budgeted for this year.

A pilot program between the city and the Midland Judicial District Community Supervision and Corrections Department should provide the manpower needed to cut the weeds from vacant lots — and the price is right. The service is free to the city and the work will provide felons a means of making amends to the community for their crimes.

The program should prove beneficial in both regards — eliminating or reducing the weedy lots in the city while giving felons a taste of the community pride that other Midlanders feel for Midland.

There might even be some rehabilitative effect to the program.

Ed Armstrong, director of the restitution center, indicated that his staff is "anxious to get this city thing going."

Judging from the potential benefits to the city of a cleaner, more healthful environment, a reduced fire hazard, cost savings and the rehabilitative potential for the felons, this appears to be a good marriage of resources.

Klan pays to play its 'hating game'

It is not against the law to hate.

It is not against the law to spread hate.

But it is against the law to convert that hate into actions that injure property, threaten lives or deprive people of their civil rights. The Ku Klux Klan will pay for doing just that in the months ahead.

The Supreme Court recently upheld more than $800,000 in civil damages against the Klan for an attack on civil-rights marchers in Georgia.

The incident involved a demonstration by blacks in all-white Forsyth County, Ga., and a counterdemonstration by the Klan. The courts ruled that a speaker for the Klan had incited his followers to menace the blacks back onto their bus and pelt the bus with rocks.

The Klan said it was just exercising its First Amendment rights. The truth is just the opposite. The Klan was exercising mob rule to keep another group from exercising its right of free speech.

This is not the first time the Klan has paid for depriving others of their rights. In 1987 the Klan was assessed $7 million in civil damages for its members' role in a 1981 murder of a black man.

The message is this: If you preach acts of hate and someone takes your challenge, you might be held liable for its practice.

Texas must develop its Hispanic talent

The nature of America's burgeoning Hispanic population became evident again last week in a series of statistics released by the Census Bureau.

America's Hispanic population is growing four times faster than the nation's general population. There are now about 20 million Hispanics in the United States, which is up 38.9 percent from 1980.

This rapid Hispanic growth holds real consequences for Texas. Just over 4 million Hispanics call Texas home.

All of these facts and figures are an interesting point of reference, but what do they really mean? For Texas, it clearly means that a good part of its future has a young Hispanic face.

In a very real sense, this is what the Edgewood vs. Kirby case was all about. This historic lawsuit, which successfully challenged the way Texas finances public schools, was largely driven and inspired by South Texas school districts with predominantly Hispanic enrollments.

The Texas of the future will be driven by many different forces, and as the census figures show, Hispanics will certainly play a key role.

Hispanic Americans are not a monolithic group. ... But taken together, Hispanics represent talents and abilities that are woven into the American fabric.

Texas, as the census figures demonstrate, is in a great position to recognize and develop these talents. Sheer numbers tell Texas that it must do so.

NRC has strayed far from its mission

WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has strayed so far from its mission that a White House plan to put a fox in the henhouse isn't even ruffling feathers on Capitol Hill.

Anderson

The NRC mandate is to regulate the nuclear power industry. Common sense would dictate that one would not recruit regulators from within that industry any more than the Moral Majority would would hire Madonna to keep an eye on Prince.

But that is exactly what George Bush is planning to do. By all accounts, Bush's next nominee to the NRC will be Phillip Bayne, the president of the New York Power Authority. Those who watch the workings of the NRC have already abandoned any hope that it will be an adequate watchdog over the industry. But, if Payne is appointed, this would be the first time that the White House has blatantly called an NRC commissioner right out of the enemy camp.

In that respect, the nomination of Bayne may mark the nadir of the NRC, an agency that already "doesn't have a skeptical bone in its body," as one source close to the commission told us.

Critics have charged for years that the five-member commission is little more than an arm of the nuclear power industry. As we have reported in the past, NRC investigators working at the whim of the commissioners put their jobs in jeopardy when they actually attempt to get tough with nuclear power utilities.

Bayne's appointment could tilt policy even further toward the industry. But what is more troubling is that those in government who used to protest the tilt now seem resigned to this latest compromise.

So far, there hasn't been a whisper of opposition from Congress, which is already weary of bloodshed over presidential nominees. No one is willing to go to the mat to salvage an agency that has long since sold out.

"These people are all picked by the industry," one congressional source told our associate Dan Njegomir. Another source suggested that a presidential nominee would have to be an "ax murderer" to get turned down by the Senate. "People just don't want a tough (NRC), that's the bottom line here," said another discouraged congressional source.

Neither the NRC staff nor the White House will confirm that Bayne will be the nominee. Bayne told us he would like the job but said he hasn't lobbied for it, doesn't know who is pushing him and has no guarantee of getting the appointment.

He and others in the industry dismiss the talk of potential conflict of interest and insist that an industry veteran would bring the NRC some perspective. "I think it's very important to have someone knowledgeable (about the industry) doing some of the regulating," Bayne told us.

Perhaps Bayne hasn't noticed that the NRC already has enough of an industry "perspective" to make its regulatory efforts a joke.

The perspective that Bayne brings may be foreshadowed by his past criticism of federal safety inspections at nuclear plants. He has said that some of those inspections have gone beyond regulations.

THE COST OF AIDS: Since last summer, the Defense Department has tested 90 percent of its active duty personnel for AIDS, and plans to keep retesting them periodically. More than 6,000 of the tests came up positive. The mass testing is putting a severe strain on budgets and personnel at military hospitals. Congressional investigators believe more than $3 billion will be needed for testing and treating military AIDS patients. As a sideline, the Pentagon has to worry about its people becoming personae non grata in countries that don't allow people with AIDS to enter the country.

No one can really replace Jane Pauley

I have to be honest with you. I miss Jane Pauley.

I didn't know how much I missed her until I turned on the "Today" show the other morning, and they gave me Joe Garagiola instead.

Buchwald

I have nothing against Deborah Norville, but Jane and I had coffee with each other for 13 years. I'm just not used to having a strange woman watching me while I put on my shoes and socks.

Everyone at NBC now admits that they made a mistake taking Jane off the show. Jane was warm and loving and a credit to her sex. The reason she was so well-liked was because she wasn't a threat to our marriages. Not once during all the years she was on the air did I ever hear my wife say, "If Jane looks at you one more time, I'll scratch her eyes out."

Yet Deborah seems more like someone who might make a husband cut himself while shaving. I have never lusted after Deborah in my heart for only two reasons — one is because I've been true to Jane Pauley and, secondly, I never let anything interfere with my breakfast.

There were misgivings in the news department at NBC when they let Jane go, so the network vice presidents (with the economy drive, there are only 11,546 of them left) decided to hire Faith Daniels to read the news.

They hoped that Faith would help us forget what they had done when they hired Deborah.

This is hard to do because, although Faith is very beautiful, she looks a lot like Deborah. I can't tell the difference between them. As a matter of fact, there are some mornings when I can't tell the difference between Deborah, Faith and Willard Scott.

I know they're putting Jane on the evening news — but that isn't when the American people need her. They need her in the morning when her cheery smile and calm countenance are what gets the kids off to school.

The terrible thing about television is that when one network changes something, then all the networks have to change their shows.

Just at the moment when Jane Pauley bid us goodbye, CBS dropped the bomb on Kathleen Sullivan. How much can an early riser take in one month? I must confess that I liked Kathleen Sullivan very much. Whenever Jane went to the World Fair in Seattle, I watched Kathleen, who is sultry and sexy.

They took Kathleen away and replaced her with Paula Zahn. I have nothing against Paula. She can come into my home and interview Dustin Hoffman any time. But it's not the same. All Kathleen had to say was "Read my lips," and I broke my nose on the TV screen.

What I'm driving at is that NBC blew it with Jane Pauley, and I'm not sure Joe Garagiola will be able to step into her shoes. I'm willing to give him a chance.

But if he is going to win me over, the least he can do is wear one of Jane Pauley's dresses and high heels.

Morning TV is a dirty business, and the reason for this is that the networks are dealing with a tough audience. "Today" served divorce papers on Jane because some stupid research company claimed that "Good Morning America" had younger women watching it. What the research people didn't tell NBC is that if there is nothing wrong, don't try to fix it with two blondes and a bald guy who used to catch for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Court injures nation over flag-burning issue

WASHINGTON — No speech, however obscene or inflammatory, injures America as much as the Supreme Court does — all nine justices — when speaking about First Amendment protections of speech. It has done so again, concerning flag-burning.

Will

In 1984, a protester burned a flag in Dallas to express loathing for America. Convicted under a Texas statute proscribing desecration of the flag in a way that would give offense to onlookers, he appealed to the court.

Last June, it overturned his conviction, arguing that flag-burning is "sufficiently imbued with elements of communication" to be constitutionally protected "symbolic expression," which the court erroneously considers a synonym for "speech." The court held — it was correct about this, if only this — as follows: Texas intended to protect the flag as a symbol of national values; therefore by forbidding flag desecration Texas was proscribing political "expression."

Congress promptly passed the Flag Protection Act of 1989 criminalizing desecration. Protesters promptly burned flags to protest the act. Now the Supreme Court has agreed with the lower courts which said prosecutions would be unconstitutional. The court argued that there was no constitutional difference between Congress' and Texas' laws.

It was divided 5-4 but the decision is fundamentally uninteresting because the majority and the dissenters do not differ about fundamentals. All nine justices share the flaccid, false consensus about what the Founders meant by First Amendment protection.

Justice Brennan, a liberal, joined by liberals Marshall and Blackmun and conservatives Scalia and Kennedy, gave short shrift to the dissenters' (Stevens, joined by Rehnquist, White and O'Connor) lame contention. The dissenters argued that Congress intended to protect the flag as a symbol but did not intend to penalize the expression of particular ideas.

The dissenters argued that certain methods of expression may be prohibited if the prohibition is unrelated to the ideas expressed; if the prohibition does not interfere with other means of expressing those ideas; and if the prohibition serves an important societal interest.

But the dissenters share the majority's mistaken belief that "symbolic expression" is tantamount to speech. And the dissenters agree that Congress values protecting the flag as a symbol of nationhood. So the dissenters are left with the limp argument that such symbolism implicates no particular ideas.

The entire court, and probably all of Congress, operates within the incoherent consensus about the First Amendment.

If you agree, as all nine justices do, that the amendment forbids limiting particular forms of expression to protect particular ideas the court's decision is logical. But did the founders mean to forbid such partiality toward particular ideas? They did not. That they did not is, we may say, self-evident.

Sufficient proof is that the Constitution guarantees the supremacy of certain political ideas. The Constitution forbids the establishment of a particular religion but requires the establishment of a particular form of government. It does so by guaranteeing to each state "a republican form of government."

Furthermore, the First Amendment explicitly distinguishes religious speech from other kinds by proscribing "establishment" of (government partiality toward) a particular religion. Why? Walter Berns of Georgetown University argues that the founders believed religious truth may be unknowable, and, so far as government is concerned, there is no such thing as religious truth. But they believed that fundamental political truths are not merely knowable, they are "self-evident."

By forbidding "establishment" of religion the Constitution mandates illimitable pluralism and government impartiality among religious ideas. But it mandates agnosticism only about religious, not political, ideas.

The First Amendment amends a political document and takes its meaning from the context of the document's language and structure, including the proclamation of national political orthodoxy (the guarantee of a republican form of government). This is why the word "speech" should be taken seriously, not supplanted by "expression."

The Founders, sharing Aristotle's definition of man as a language-using animal, specified protection of "speech." They did so because speech is intrinsically connected with the distinctive human capacity, reason, by which individuals govern themselves.

After many years of miseducation the court is convinced of, and the country is committed to, this proposition: The Constitution mandates protection of any behavior that "expresses" a politically tinged attitude.

Romanian soldiers shoot demonstrators

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Soldiers shot demonstrators outside the Interior Ministry on Wednesday night after anti-government protesters stormed state TV offices and burned police headquarters, witnesses said.

State radio reported four people killed and 93 hospitalized, four in a very "grave state." Two of those killed were shot to death, the broadcast added, quoting the Health Ministry.

The Soviet news agency Tass, in a dispatch from Bucharest, said "many cars" near the Interior Ministry and police headquarters were overturned and set ablaze and two buildings nearby were also on fire.

The violence was the worst since the December revolution that ousted Communist dictator Nicolai Ceausescu, who was executed with his wife on Christmas Day.

President-elect Ion Iliescu accused extremist elements of organizing an "Iron Guard rebellion" and trying to overthrow the government — a reference to the pre-World War II Iron Guard party that supported the Nazis.

The violence was touched off by a pre-dawn police raid that ended a 53-day anti-communist protest in University Square in downtown Bucharest. Police clubbed and dragged away protesters.

The protesters were demanding that former high-ranking Communists like Iliescu be banned from holding public office for 10 years and that independent television stations be established.

Militant black group accuses ANC of 'selling out'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A black militant leader on Wednesday called African National Congress talks with the white-led South African government premature and a "sellout."

Bennie Alexander, general-secretary of the Pan Africanist Congress, said the government must agree to a one-person, one-vote democracy before meaningful discussions can take place.

"If the government says it is against the principle (of majority rule), then there is no basis for talks," Alexander told a group of foreign journalists. "We do not see a democractic solution in the very near future."

President F.W. de Klerk's government held preliminary talks last month with the ANC in a bid to resolve obstacles to full-scale negotiations on a new constitution and ending apartheid. The ANC is country's leading black opposition group.

"There is a perception among the masses that to talk to the government now is selling out," Alexander said. "The radical youth consider it a sellout."

Asked if he agreed, Alexander said: "Yes."

De Klerk says he wants the 5 million whites and 28 million blacks to share power. He opposes outright black majority rule, saying it will replace white domination with black domination. He envisions a mechanism that will give whites veto power on major policy decisions.

The government has said it is ready to negotiate a new constitution with the ANC and other black opposition groups.

However, the ANC has set pre-conditions for formal negotiations that include the release of some 3,000 activists convicted of politically motivated crimes and the return of an estimated 20,000 exiles.

The Pan Africanist Congress broke away from the much larger ANC in 1959 and is considered more militant and ideological.

Public Notice

TO ALL FORMER AND CURRENT INTRASTATE WIDE AREA TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE (WATS/800) SUBSCRIBERS:

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has instituted a Class Action Lawsuit seeking judicial approval of a settlement reached in Docket No. 7297, an inquiry of General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission of Texas into possible overcharges which occurred between September, 1976, and February, 1987, due to rounding practices, on bills of intrastate WATS/800 customers sent by Southwestern Bell and other telephone companies which concur in Southwestern Bell's tariff. The suit is styled "Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Plaintiff, vs. MCI Telecommunications Corporation, A Member of the Class of Texas Intrastate WATS and 800 Service Customers Who Paid Overtime Charges From September 1976 Through February 1987, Defendant," and identified as Cause No. 471,460 in the 126th Judicial District Court of Travis County, Texas.

Pursuant to the settlement, while not admitting liability, Southwestern Bell, the other local exchange telephone companies in Texas, and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. have agreed to pay refunds to those WATS/800 customers who paid overtime charges attributable to the rounding practices for intrastate WATS/800 services at any time between September, 1976, and February, 1987. The refunds will be based upon either the actual or estimated amount of overtime charges attributable to such rounding practices. An exact refund will be determined for customers able to produce copies of their WATS/800 service bills. For customers who do not have copies of their WATS/800 service bills to establish actual overtime charges paid, an average refund of $4.53 to $5.95 per WATS/800 service line per month will be applied. All claims will be subject to verification. The refunds will also include interest at the rate of 7.80% per annum.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Bread price rise delayed

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet legislature voted to further speed the nation toward a market economy Wednesday, but a government official told lawmakers that an threefold increase in bread prices would be delayed.

Panic-buying has emptied many store shelves since late last month, when the Communist government proposed to cut many price subsidies by January.

Prices on bread, the main staple of the Soviet diet, also will be raised eventually, but "of course, not by July 1," said Yuri Maslyukov, chairman of the government agency that runs the centralized economy. Bread now sells for less than 30 cents a loaf.

The Supreme Soviet, ordering the fine-tuning of a plan that drew widespread criticism as being too vague and tentative, instructed the Council of Ministers to have drafts of all the laws needed for the switch from a planned to a market economy by October.

The measure also instructed President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to issue a series of presidential decrees beginning July 1 to speed up progress on bringing new laws on ownership, leasing, farming and other key elements of a market economy into effect.

U.S. descendants flee homes in Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Hundreds of descendants of the freed American slaves who founded Liberia fled their suburban homes Wednesday for Monrovia. A military trial began of three soldiers charged with killing three civilians.

Although hundreds of civilians are believed to have been killed by soldiers in a rebel insurgency, it was the first known prosecution.

Also Wednesday, delegations representing President Samuel Doe's government and rebels began a second day of church-mediated peace negotations in Freetown, the capital of neighboring Sierra Leone.

The talks are aimed at finding a settlement to this West African nation's 5½-month-old civil war.

The Americo-Liberians who fled said soldiers had accused them of being dissidents and supporting rebel leader Charles Taylor.

Tamil Tiger rebels ignoring cease-fire

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil guerrillas battled government troops in northern and eastern Sri Lanka on Wednesday, ignoring a cease-fire, residents and military officials said Wednesday.

Unconfirmed reports reaching Colombo said the Tamil Tiger rebels massacred at least 125 policemen who were among 600 officers captured when the Tigers overran 11 police stations Monday.

Deputy Defense Minister Ranjan Wijeratne said the report "seems to be authentic, but we have to double-check." He characterized the situation as "war."

In addition to the reported massacre of policemen, as many as 90 government soldiers, Tamil Tigers and civilians may have been killed since Monday, according to reports compiled by residents, military sources and the Tigers. Officially, the government has confirmed only the deaths of 16 soldiers.

The violence is the most serious since Indian peacekeeping troops left Sri Lanka in March after an unsuccessful, 32-month-long effort to disarm the Tamil Tigers.

It also raised the specter of a return to the all-out war between the Tigers and government forces that prevailed before the Indians' arrival on July 30, 1987.

Wijeratne said reports of the police massacre came from one policeman who survived and escaped. He quoted the policeman as saying the Tigers killed 150 of his colleagues.

Taiwanese military involved in scandal

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Authorities detained four people, including a relative of a presidential aide, in an alleged bribery scandal involving the sale of 2.5 million black socks to the army, officials said Wednesday.

Another of the four detained, socks supplier Hsiao Chun-liang, claims he paid $190,000 in bribes last year to win the $1.82 million contract, authorities said.

Hsiao also told investigators he paid about $218,000 to three officers of the Combined Service Forces, an agency overseeing military purchases, to accept a shipment of inferior socks.

Hsiao claimed it is difficult for Taiwan factories to meet some military standards, including one that requires black socks not fade after soaking in hot water for 40 minutes.

In addition to Hsiao, authorities have detained Chiang Chung-lien, a cousin of the chief of staff to President Lee Teng-hui, and Chiang's son, Ching-hsiung. Also taken into custody was Tsai Hsiung, head of the National Assembly's public relations.

■ Law enforcement agencies say they don't plan to crack down on sale of 2 Live Crew's controversial album.

Rap group 2 Live Crew's album, "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" is too nasty for record stores in Midland and Odessa, according to an informal survey of store owners.

Representatives of nine out of 10 record stores contacted said they voluntarily have removed "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" from their inventories in the wake of controversy about its lyrics.

Rap fan and Midland High School student John Coldwell, 18, said the lyrics were "definitely worse than average."

"They're very profane — sexually profane," Coldwell said. "It's the kind of tape you can't take to your grandmother's house because it would get you lectured, grounded, the whole package."

Midland High School student Matt Hopkins, 18, another rap fan, described the music as "graphic."

"What they put in words is like what you'd see Eddie Murphy doing on stage," Hopkins said.

The album was banned in San Antonio Tuesday after Bexar County Assistant District Attorney Mike Schill determined that its words violated the state obscenity law, the Associated Press reported Wednesday.

Law enforcement officers are warning San Antonio record stores owners to pull the album from their shelves or risk arrest on obscenity charges, said the AP article.

Concern about the possibility of employee arrests was one of the reasons given for removing the album.

The penalty for conviction on the class A misdemeanor of selling obscene material in Texas is a maximum of one year in jail and a maximum $2,000 fine.

Rachel Pierce, manager of the Midland Hastings Books, Records and Video store, said Hastings' national management had asked the chain to pull the album from the shelves Wednesday morning.

"They don't want to put the associates or the chain at risk," Ms. Pierce said. "We have to keep our people from going to jail."

She said the obscenity issue was less important to the company. "Hastings has always been one of the most liberal chains censure-wise," Ms. Pierce said.

Ms. Pierce said the store still carried other albums by 2 Live Crew and had tapes of "Clean As They Wanna Be," the group's self-censured version of the album, in stock.

Jackie Brown, public relations director for the Record Bar chain, said the company had revised its policy six weeks ago to cancel distribution of the album to its 175 outlets, including ones in Midland and Odessa.

"It was before all this publicity;

Juneteenth events begin today

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Juneteenth Celebration, sponsored by the Tall City Lions Club, is scheduled to begin today and continue through Sunday.

Juneteenth is a celebration of the Texas emancipation of blacks that occurred in 1865 and is honored on June 19.

A highlight of the event is a parade on Saturday. The parade will begin at the North Gate parking lot at Nobles Avenue at 10 a.m. and proceed down Lamesa Road to Indiana Avenue where it will continue west to Washington Park.

Mary Brown, parade marshal, said the parade in Midland is an annual event sponsored by the Lions Club since 1975.

Trophies and prizes will be awarded for the most decorated and original entries in the parade. Those wanting to participate should be at the parking lot at 8 a.m.

In addition to the parade, a variety of events are scheduled at Washington Park for the four-day celebration.

"Everybody is excited about it," said Ralph Hanson, president of the Lions club. "I think it will be a real good celebration. Last year we had about 2,500 people and this year we are looking at hopefully 3,000 people or more."

Booths offering a variety of foods, including barbeque, fish, and hamburgers, will be available every day of the celebation. Game booths for children will also be set up.

Tonight, a "get-aquainted" party will begin at 7 p.m. "A lot of people go out to visit and see who's in town and just get aquainted," Mrs. Brown said.

A Walk-A-Thon to help support the Freewill Foster Home will also take place tonight.

On Friday, the celebration, which will begin about 10 a.m., will include a volleyball tournament, a rapper's contest and music.

In addition to the parade on Saturday, a barbeque contest, dance contest for youngsters, a coloring contest and more music are scheduled.

The celebration will wind up on Sunday with a "Gospel on the Park." All choirs as well as soloists are invited to take part. Those wanting to participate can call Mark Hall at 684-4001 or Angie Henry at 683-8609.

This year's celebration hopes to attract more youngsters than in the past, Mrs. Brown said.

"The younger people don't know what the day means so we've included things like the volleyball tournament to bring the young people out," Mrs. Brown said.

Disaster drill meets goals

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

An imaginary mile-wide tornado cut a swath of death and destruction through the heart of Midland on Wednesday, killing top school and police department officials.

Despite some communication and equipment problems, Midland Local Emergency Planning Committee members reacted well to the bogus catastrophe, said Bill Shipman, emergency management coordinator for the city and county.

Schools, shopping centers, houses and a number of other structures were hit by the twister, leaving countless dead, including school children, Midland Police Chief Richard Czech and Superintendent Joe Baressi.

Representatives from Midland Independent School District, the city, Midland County Sheriff's Office, TU Electric, Southwestern Bell and other entities gathered in the City Hall basement and coordinated disaster response.

Meanwhile, Shipman and other drill coordinators phoned in gradually unfolding scenarios in the wake of the imaginary disaster.

Mayor Carroll Thomas pretended to call in the Texas State Guard, while school officials turned campuses into shelters and electricity and telephone company officials dispatched repair crews.

Of course, most of the activity during the annual drill took place solely in the City Hall basement instead of on the streets. LEPC members did not know what type of disaster would strike until the drill began.

Shipman said the group was brushing up on disaster-handling skills so it will be prepared for a real airliner crash, toxic waste spill or flood among other potential disasters.

The yearly exercise also is required by the state and federal governments. Federal Emergency Management Agency officials were supposed to monitor and evaluate the LEPC's response, but they could not attend.

"The East Texas floods have kept them very busy," Shipman said. "They have to work right now."

A tape recording of a LEPC self-evaluation which followed the drill will be sent to the governmental officials, he said.

Thomas said this year's drill, which Shipman and other LEPC

Task force puts shopping center project on hold

By Melia McEwen

■ Foundation facilities opened to Women's Department for fund raising.

Eastside Economic Development Task Force — an entity of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce — has been working toward development on the east side for close to five years.

Its first project was realignment of Lamesa Road, which was begun last June. Its second goal was a shopping center at the intersection of Highway 80 and Lamesa.

However, Task Force Chairman Roger Robles reported at Wednesday's monthly chamber meeting, that the shopping center project has been put on hold because another group is also working on a development project for the east side.

Robles explained to members that the task force, and the non-profit foundation formed to raise funds for the shopping center, are currently waiting for the board of directors of the MHCC to decide if they want to work with the other group.

In the meantime, he said, the foundation's facilities have been opened to the chamber's Women's Department for fund raising for scholarships and drop-out prevention programs.

Another major topic of discussion at the meeting — though it's a month away — was the third annual Mex-Tex Menudo Cook-off.

Both MHCC President Charlene Romero Wurtz and Executive Director Elvia Hernandez issued a call for volunteers, with Wurtz explaining that "We're going to need a lot of help. This a three-day event now, not a two-day event."

The cook-off is set for July 13-15 and is sponsored by Budweiser and Pepsi-Cola. This year, the Pride of Texas Carnival will be operating alongside the cook-off at the County Exhibit Building.

Among the events are a menudo, chili (sanctioned) and fajita cook-off, liye entertainment, food and craft booths, and a Friday night dance.

There will be a parade that Saturday at 11 a.m., starting at Lamesa Road and Nobles and proceeding south on Lamesa to Highway 80, turning left and going to the Exhibit Building. Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams has been asked to be the parade marshal, but has not yet agreed.

There is also the Senorita Hispana del Permian Basin scholarship pageant, open to those between the ages of 17 and 23, unmarried and childless. Lydia Evaro-Torres reports 14 women have already expressed interest.

After the cook-off, members will be attending the state Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce convention in Victoria, set for July 26-28. Both Williams and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards will speak at the Saturday evening banquet.

In other business at the meeting:

■ Members honored outgoing first vice president Joe Sena, who has been transferred to Dallas, and will be replaced as first vice president by Ray Chapa.

■ Manuel Reyes was honored as educator of the month. He has taught government, world and American history, and was a Spanish teacher at Midland High for the past 14 years.

■ Hernandez reported that the Immigration and Naturalization Service will hold Phase Two of the Immigration Reform Act of 1986 will be at Odessa College June 21 from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

■ Jim Slayton, director of the Midland Procurement Assistance Center, reported that the center currently has 60 clients and has sent in a funding proposal for FY 1991 to the government. He hopes to see some successful bids this summer, he said.

■ It was announced that the chamber would be part of the reception for the upcoming Confederate Air Force Advisory Board conference to be in Midland June 22-23.

Old bronze marker has seen a lot of living in 50 years

EAST DELTA — By the curve of a once dirt road, now paved, is a Works Progress Administration (WPA) marker.

Todd

After 50 years, the concrete base is listing and cracking, but the bronze marker is intact. It simply tells of the construction of a school building to serve a rural community in the eastern part of Delta County in Northeast Texas.

The then-new consolidated school district building, built of red brick, replaced the older school houses mostly built of wood decades earlier. The old dirt roads, thick in the middle of the Blacklands, were sticky and heavy when wet.

Most of the old wooden schoolhouses were abandoned in their farming communities, where cotton and dairy cattle, indeed, were as valuable as money. The old schoolhouse over at Pacio was pretty well torn up by a cyclone about the time the WPA, which some unkindly termed "We Piddle Around," was working on the new school at East Delta.

Except for school teachers, preachers, blacksmiths and country-store merchants, most everybody else lived on the farm. Once a month, maybe once a week, they'd go into town, Cooper, the county seat, or to the neighboring city, Paris, which was plenty big until they got to Dallas and the State Fair of Texas.

Back then, country folks didn't "shop." Not exactly. Shopping was mostly done in the Sears, Roebuck & Company catalogue. Going to town was somewhere between necessity and luxury — bits of both. There were the grocery stores for food and stuff not available on the farm, five-and-dime department stores for novelties and personals, shoe and clothing stores when the catalogue didn't work, motion-picture shows for the week's news and Hollywood dreams, and the courthouse for records of births, marriages and deaths.

Back home, the old Saturday Evening Post, Life, and National Geographic magazines and the radio and community gossip, school and church functions, and domino playing at home and at the cotton gin and blacksmith shop kept people entertained when work was set aside. The children told stories and played.

In 1958, about 18 years after the East Delta Consolidated School District opened up the school for education, it was closed down. The old dome-topped gymnasium with the hardwood floors and tarred roof was moved, in pieces, to Cooper and was restored.

The school building, which housed the 12 grades, was returned to bare bricks, mortar, and wooden planks. But it wasn't wasted. Bit by bit, it, too, was taken to Cooper, a town of about 2,000 then and now, and became part of the town school.

A few miles up and down the roads, some paved, some not, are communities, such as Charleston, Kensing, Pacio, Lake Creek, and East Delta. They are not what they used to be. They are older. Some look poorer, as many folks moved into the towns and cities.

Every couple of years many come back to a school reunion, such as the one in the aging East Delta Community Center. Once, it was the East Delta School cafeteria, which was left behind.

Out in the backwoods, where the oak trees are tall and full and the grass is green and full, are occasional clearings where townfolks have built country houses that would look expensive and quite at-home in the city. Many erstwhile rural folks who years ago moved to the city, such as Dallas or Fort Worth, are returning home.

But it's not the same. Economics have changed. Cotton is no longer the cash crop. It's mostly pasture-land and country retreats for city-folks who are country at heart.

Some people, at last, are finding home in the country for the first time and may wonder about the old WPA marker and the old weathered community center. Unfortunately, they may take the paved roads and other things for granted. But probably not, for they, too, have fond memories. Times have changed, and so will they.

ALBUM: High school fan calls lyrics 'graphic'

(From 1B)

we just thought it was nasty," Brown said.

Spokeswomen at the Midland and Odessa Musicland stores refused to comment on the album except to say that they no longer carried it. Calls to the parent Musicland office in Minneapolis were not returned.

Midland's El Nopal Record Shop, the Record Nook in Fort Stockton and Daniel Dan Music and Video Service in Pecos have also ceased selling the album, spokeswomen said.

Midland's Endless Horizons Discount Records, Tapes and Compact Disks will not restock the album until legal issues are involved, said saleswoman Ana Bustilloz.

However, Tom Logan, owner of Odessa's Endless Horizons, said his store will continue to sell "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

"This type of music has been sold for years," Logan said. "The only difference is this type of language never was popular before and the only reason they're cracking down is because it's selling."

"We have no plans to stop selling until someone tells us to," Logan said.

In Midland, Lt. Hank Norton of the police department's investigative services bureau, said the police had no plans to crack down on the album.

"We don't plan on doing anything," Norton said. "I haven't even heard the record."

He added that any action in the matter would follow lengthy consultation with the county and district attorney.

Sgt. Jim McKown with the Odessa Police Department said Odessa's response was similarly low-key. Asked if officers would arrest record store personnel for selling the album, McKown responded, "Not to my knowledge."

Midland County attorney Mark Dettman said his office had heard no complaints about the album and had no intention of conducting an investigation without complaints.

"My personal opinion is that it's tasteless but not obscene, but I haven't heard the whole album," Dettman said.

He said the last obscenity case the county prosecuted was in 1983 when videos showing "ultimate homosexual acts" was at issue.

Dettman said he is not convinced that words alone constitute obscenity under the Texas statute.

Ector County district attorney Gary Garison said his office had not heard any complaints either.

"Nobody around here has expressed any interest in the album at all," Garison said.

He speculated that rap wasn't very popular in the county.

" 'Til George Strait comes out with a nasty song I don't think we'll have much inquiry on this," Garison said.

Boy Scouts to honor Rep. Tom Craddick

Staff Report

The Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America will be holding its third annual "Distinguished Citizen Dinner" Monday.

State Representative from District 76 and Eagle Scout Tom Craddick of Midland will be honored.

"We are honoring him because he has served our district in a very fine way and the Buffalo Trail Council is very pleased to honor him in this way," said Gerald R. Petty, assistant scout executive for the Buffalo Trail Council.

Another Eagle Scout, Clayton Williams Jr., the Republican candidate for governor, will be the keynote speaker at the dinner. "He has contributed to the scouting program nationally and in Midland," Petty said of Williams.

Reception for the dinner, which is being held at the Greentree Country Club, will begin at 6 p.m. followed by the dinner and program at 7 p.m.

Cost of the dinner is $100 per person. All proceeds from the event will go to benefit the Buffalo Trail Council.

The Buffalo Trail is the Boy Scout council that covers an 18-county area in West Texas.

Craddick, who is a member of the council, has been the District 76 representative, which includes Midland, since 1968. In addition to his public service work, Craddick is a sales representative for Mustang Mud, Inc., owner of Craddick Properties and owner and president of Craddick, Inc.

DRILL: Center needs list of items needed for disaster

(From 1B)

coordinators spent four months planning, went smoothly.

"I can't think of any disaster that would be larger in Midland," Thomas said. "My only critique is I didn't get beeped."

The mayor said someone should have attempted to reach him through his beeper, although drill participants knew where he was all along.

City Secretary Bill Clanton said he was disappointed that Midland County failed to send a governmental representative, although a sheriff's office official took part in the drill.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown — LEPC chairman — said no one notified him of the exercise.

"I guess Bill (Shipman) didn't bother to tell me about it," Brown said. "If I had been aware, I would have been there.

"The sheriff's department has not seen the necessity of going through these drills anyway."

Councilman John Castro, who represented his employer, Southwestern Bell, said the LEPC center should have a list of items such as generators, water pumps and other equipment needed during a disaster.

Other representatives suggested that there be more steps taken to control traffic, more radio equipment and more telephones for the disaster center.

Deputy Chief John Smith of the Midland Police Department and Chief James Roberts of the Midland Fire Department said LEPC members did too much dispatching of emergency crews.

"We kind of lost a little bit of sight of our real concept," Roberts said. "This is going to be a decision-making group here. The real work is going to go on in the field."

For Shipman, who broke out in a heavy sweat during the exercise, it was his first time to coordinate a drill.

"I agreed with practically everything that was said," he said of the critique which followed the drill. "I think it went real well."

Next year's drill will be held in the Loraine Center, 601 N. Loraine St., where emergency headquarters and eventually the Midland Police Department will be housed.

The LEPC has been staging the drills since the mid-1970s. The crisis scenario varies from year to year.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Parents of strangled Odessa girl arraigned

Staff Report

ODESSA — The parents of 8-year-old Gloria Castillo, whose strangled body was discovered April 21 after a week-long disappearance, were arraigned Wednesday on three charges connected with their daughter's death, according to their attorney.

Jose and Ninefa Castillo entered a plea of not guilty on misdemeanor charges of making false reports, perjury and abuse of a corpse, said Bob Garcia, the parents attorney.

"I'm glad the thing finally started and we have a jury to decide this thing once and for all," Garcia said.

Donald Bleckler was also arraigned at the same time on an abuse of a corpse charges.

Bleckler, a family friend, has been implicated with the Castillos for allegedly moving Gloria's body following an accidental strangulation, authorities claimed. The Castillos have maintained since their daughters reported disappearance that she was abducted.

A pretrial date will probably be in July, Garcia said.

'Cabaret' held over

Midland Community Theatre is holding over the musical "Cabaret" through Saturday.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., downtown.

The holdover is due to the show's popularity, says a release from MCT.

"Cabaret" is a special production of MCT, not a membership show. MCT members will receive a discount on their tickets and group rates are available. For reservations call MCT's box office, 682-2544.

Girl dies after accident

LUBBOCK — A 5-year-old girl hit by a car in Odessa Monday died Wednesday at University Medical Center hospital in Lubbock, a hospital official said.

Heather Connally died from injuries sustained in an accident that occurred after she walked out from behind a snow cone truck and into the path of an oncoming car near the 3100 block of Eisenhower Steet.

After she was pronounced dead, Heather was kept on a respirator at the request of her parents, so some of her organs could be donated, officials said.

Heather underwent surgery to remove organs Wednesday night, officials said.

Two dead in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — Big Spring Police Department officials reported that an apparent murder-suicide occurred Wednesday at an undisclosed location on the east side.

Officers who responded to a welfare check at a residence at about 2:40 p.m. discovered the bodies, officials said. The homicide victim, a 70-year-old woman, died from a single gunshot to the head, officials said.

The suspect, no description or relation given, committed suicide after the shooting, police reported.

Details of the incident were not available Wednesday evening.

Juarez off-limits to El Paso police as quarrel over auto thefts heats up

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A border "war" of words escalated as Mexican and El Paso officials quarreled over who is responsible for runaway auto thefts in El Paso.

Police Chief John Scagno on Tuesday declared Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, off limits to on-duty officers after Juarez officials said they would arrest any El Paso officers found working with "bounty hunters" who find and return stolen cars.

Scagno said Tuesday he also received information that Mexican authorities planned to implicate El Paso police in criminal activity and arrest them the next time they were in Juarez.

"The best defense is a good offense. They want to implicate anybody and everybody," said Scagno. "This is called war."

The cross-border accusations have been flying since El Paso police publicly accused Mexican officials of running auto theft rings that steal an average 100 cars a week in El Paso and drive them into Mexico. More than 3,000 cars had been stolen in El Paso as of last week.

Scagno has said the department has names of the Mexican authorities involved in the thefts, but has refused to disclose them.

The El Paso Herald-Post reported that the press spokesman for the Mexican Federal Judicial Police in Juarez, Emilio Gutierrez, drove a car stolen from the United States. The Herald-Post said the newspaper checked the vehicle identification number of the car. Records showed Hertz Rent-A-Car in Las Cruces, N.M. had reported the car stolen.

Gutierrez was not in his office when called by The Associated Press Wednesday. He told the newspaper the car was seized from a drug trafficker in October and he was allowed to use it while it was undergoing forfeiture proceedings.

Joel Landeros Arredondo, the federal district attorney in Juarez, issued the arrest order that accused El Paso police of dealing with bounty hunters.

"There are proper channels and procedures the El Paso police must follow to recover those stolen cars," Landeros said. "But they haven't been doing that. We know some police and some insurance are paying people to get the cars back without going through the proper channels."

STATE IN BRIEF

Firm recalls tons of chicken roll

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charlie's Meat Products of Amarillo, Texas, is recalling 18 tons of deli-sliced chicken roll from three southwestern states including Oklahoma because it may be contaminated with food poisoning organisms, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

The recall involves 36,000 pounds of "Charlie's Country Smokehouse German Brand Breast of Chicken," officials said.

The chicken roll is carried by ABCO and Safeway stores in Arizona, Homeland stores in Oklahoma, Kroger in Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas, and Homeland and Tom Thumb stores in Texas.

Ronald J. Prucha, associate administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said no one is reported to have gotten sick but that consumers who may have bought the product should check with the store and return it if necessary.

The chicken roll is sold to the stores in 7½-lb. plastic packages carrying the establishment number "EST. 13301" in the label's USDA inspection seal.

Consumers usually buy the product sliced at deli counters.

Mall protest planned

DALLAS (AP) — County Commissioner John Wiley Price says he and a group of minority business leaders will decide next week when to begin picketing a shopping center that's been accused of racial bias.

Price, who threatened a boycott of Red Bird Mall earlier this year after security guards allegedly harassed minority customers, said mall officials "have acted pretty much in bad faith" and that "minorities need respect."

The Dallas Morning News reported Wednesday that Price hopes to have enough pickets to surround the mall and deter would-be shoppers.

Mall officials said Tuesday that they were surprised by Price's accusations in light of recent steps they've taken to improve relations with the minority community.

Texan man killed

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — A Texas man was killed Wednesday when his foreign car was struck from behind by a tractor-trailer truck, the Highway Patrol said.

The victim was identified as Flem Dunlavy, 65, of Fort Worth.

Investigators said both vehicles ran off Interstate 44 after the accident and the truck overturned.

The Highway Patrol ticketed James Montgomery, 23, of Altus, Ark., the driver of the truck, for careless and imprudent driving-excessive speed.

2 Live Crew's Campbell meets Geraldo, Donahue

NEW YORK (AP) — They're forbidden in Florida and taboo in Texas, but the leader of the 2 Live Crew was welcomed Wednesday for a fiery, foul-mouthed defense of their salacious million-selling album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be."

Luther Campbell, the front man for the Florida band, first went on the offensive during a taping of the "Geraldo" show. The rapper cursed at the sheriff who arrested him and questioned the credentials of the sheriff's legal adviser.

"He hasn't given more to the black community than I have," Campbell said of the adviser, then ripped into Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro, who was also on the show.

He then headed from the Times Square taping to Rockefeller Center for a live bit on the syndicated "Donahue" show, where he was joined by previously censored performers Jello Biafra and Wendy O. Williams.

"I'm a little sick of the system," said Williams, who once wore only electrical tape above her waist at a show. "What are we going to do next?"

Campbell kept it clean for "Donahue," although Bob DeMoss — director of the conservative Focus on Family — stunned Phil with an expletive that was heard in some markets where the show is broadcast live.

"I'd like to keep this job," Donahue said in asking his guests to calm down. DeMoss, sitting sheepishly, later apologized.

Shuttle delays could threaten NASA's future

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – A series of problems disrupting shuttle flights this year are more a testament to the difficulty of space flight and NASA's post-Challenger safety concerns than to over-scheduling, experts say.

But, the rough sledding may serve as a warning to Congress that the shuttle fleet could have a difficult time assembling a space station later this decade without more ships or new expendable rockets.

"I think the thing to point out is the contrast with Challenger, the extreme caution with which each launch is being approached," said John Logsdon, director of graduate studies in technology, science and public policy at George Washington University.

"The shuttle is a scarce and fragile national asset. Preserving its capability to operate is more important than any single mission," Logsdon said.

"The message here is that it is normal for things to be fouled up," said John Pike, a space policy analyst for the Washington-based Federation of American Scientists. "It's just the nature of the business that this stuff is just real hard to do."

NASA last week announced that an elusive fuel leak would delay the shuttle Columbia's 10-day Astro astronomy missfon until mid-August and that the number of planned flights would be cut this year from nine, its previous high, to eight.

It will be the longest delay for a shuttle flight since missions resumed in September 1988, 32 months after the Challenger accident.

"You cannot anticipate all the problems," NASA launch director Robert Sieck told reporters at the Kennedy Space Center two weeks ago.

"If you don't try, you will never make it," said Air Force Col. Brewster Shaw, the shuttle astronaut who makes the "go-no go" decision in the final minutes of each countdown. "You might as well schedule them, and you can back off as necessary."

Among the charges leveled at the space agency by critics in the aftermath of the January 1986 Challenger explosion was that NASA had sacrificed safety in order to build the shuttle's flight rate.

NASA responded by shucking commercial satellites from its manifest, limiting its cargoes to scientific and national security payloads.

Tougher launch restrictions were imposed and the space agency began a slow buildup in the shuttle flight rate toward a peak of 13 in 1993. By then, its three-member shuttle orbiter fleet will be joined by a fourth orbiter, Endeavour.

Since its inaugural flight nine years ago, the shuttle has flown 35 times, 10 of those missions in the post-Challenger era.

NASA's new caution since the tragedy has been repaid with success.

Those 10 flights have included the long-awaited launch of the Hubble Space Telescope and a pair of sophisticated communications satellites that handle Hubble signals. The shuttle has successfully lofted probes now en route to Venus and Jupiter for prolonged studies.

In January, following a month's delay due to launch pad problems, a shuttle crew successfully retrieved the box-car sized Long Duration Exposure Facility just weeks before it was to make a fiery re-entry through the Earth's atmosphere.

The post-Challenger era includes the launch of four secret spy satellites. One of those, a photo reconnaissance satellite, broke apart in early March after its successful deployment a week earlier by the crew of the shuttle Atlantis.

Scientists expect U.S. manned mission to Mars

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — A conference of scientists meeting in Boulder says it's only a matter of time before the United States reaches Mars.

More than 250 planetary scientists, aerospace engineers and theorists from the United States, Europe, Soviet Union and Japan met to discuss various proposals for manned Martian exploration.

The Bush administration recently called for an American landing on Mars by the year 2019, to coincide with the 50th anniversary of America landing on the moon.

The conference was sponsored by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Martin Marietta and various government agencies.

Many of those attending the conference criticized NASA, saying it has become too cautious in setting a 30-year time frame on the project, which would cost $400 billion.

"Many of the NASA people who made their mark with the Apollo program are now close to retirement and are hesitant to make waves by supporting bold, new proposals," said J.R. French, a California aerospace consultant.

The last unmanned exploration of the planet was in 1976, by the NASA Viking mission that sent back data for more than five years. The Viking project found a planet a quarter the size of Earth.

Prices rise

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rebounded to post small gains Wednesday on a report of OPEC production cuts after losing ground earlier.

The market started off downward based on bearish numbers from the American Petroleum Institute, said Bob Baker, an oil analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

But prices came back to post modest gains by the close, with many traders crediting a report on production by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The contract for July delivery of West Texas Intermediate rose 7 cents to $17.58 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercentile Exchange.

Mid-Tex sold

A new corporation, Mid-Tex Partners Inc., has assumed ownership of Mid-Tex of Midland, purchased from owner Floyd Miller.

The corporation is headed by a trio of Midlanders: Alan White, Paul Renz and Sam Blanck. All three are long-time employees of Mid-Tex, and Blanck was part-owner of the old company.

Dollar weakens

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended weaker Wednesday against most major currencies after a mixed performance overseas, while the soaring British pound continued to take center stage.

Gold prices fell here and abroad.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $352 a troy ounce, down $3.70 from late Tuesday.

The pound rose to a nearly four-month high against the dollar, dealers said. It traded at $1.7070 in London, up from $1.7020 Tuesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's quotes, included: 1.6865 West German marks, down from 1.6965; 1.4240 Swiss francs, down from 1.4382; 5.6720 French francs, down from 5.7090; 1,238.00 Italian lire, down from 1,245.00; and 1.17195 Canadian dollars, down from 1.17255.

Earlier, in Tokyo, the dollar closed at 154.55 Japanese yen, up from 154.40 Tuesday.

The late bid price of gold in London was $350.15 an ounce, down from $356.25.

Silver prices also declined. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $4.915 a troy ounce, down from $5.018.

Zales in Japan

Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The big U.S. jewelry store chain Zale Corp. will create franchises in Japan in collaboration with Japanese concerns, a spokesman for one of the Japanese companies involved said Wednesday.

According to the spokesman at C. Itoh & Co., who spoke on condition of anonymity, the Texas-based jewelry store chain will open its first store in downtown Tokyo in September jointly with C. Itoh and a Japanese jewelry chain store named Tsurukame Corp.

Retail sales continue decline

■ Analysts continue to see a weak economy — but no recession — as retail sales post a third month of declines, falling 0.7 percent in May.

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales fell again in May, posting their first consecutive three-month decline since the last recession, the government said Wednesday.

Analysts saw the report as a reflection of fading consumer confidence.

"Consumer confidence was down in May," said economist Sandra Shaber of the Futures Group, a Washington management consulting firm. "Maybe the poor job market and very weak wage gains are having an effect."

The Commerce Department said sales skidded 0.7 percent to a seasonally adjusted $146.84 billion after falling 0.9 percent in April and 0.4 percent in March. Sales had not fallen for three straight months since the fall of 1981.

Sales were even worse in April and March than first reported. Commerce had said originally that sales were down 0.6 percent in April and 0.2 percent a month earlier. They were unchanged in February after rising 2.8 percent the previous month.

Retail sales represent about half of consumer spending, which has been a driving force since the 1981-82 recession. Overall, consumer spending accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

But most economists believed the economy would continue to skirt a recession, although its growth would be weak for months to come.

"This does not necessarily indicate that the economy is in a recession, or headed in that direction, since there are signs of buoyancy elsewhere, such as in exports and capital investment," said economist Gordon Richards of the National Association of Manufacturers. "Nevertheless, the slackening of sales indicate a weak second quarter and probably an even weaker third quarter."

Ms. Shaber also said the report was not "the last nail in the coffin of recession" and could lead to promotional activity such as lower prices. She said that would be "good news for inflation."

On the other hand, S. Jay Levy of Levy Economic Forecasts in Chappaqua, N.Y., said: "It's an indication of a recessionary trend." His organization contends there is a 60 percent chance the economy will slide into a recession this year.

Levy and Ms. Shaber both pointed to the weak job market, where most recent gains reflected temporary government hiring of census workers, while employment losses continued at factories and in the construction industry.

Automobile sales, a major component of retail sales, dropped 0.6 percent after a 1.6 percent decline in April.

The manufacturing sector, including the automobile industry, has been dampened by Federal Reserve efforts to keep interest rates high so the economy would not overheat and fuel inflation.

But even excluding automobiles, sales were down 0.8 percent in May. In fact, sales were off in every sector except for clothing and, Ms. Shaber said, "that was on sale."

Todd Harvey stands at the corner of Illinois and Midkiff promoting Domino's Pizza. He and the other employees at Store No. 6858 are sharing a $5,000 sales bonus.

Midland pizza store wins sales contest

■ Hard work has netted the 17 employees of the Dominos Pizza store at 3302 Illinois an 800 percent increase in sales and a share of a $5,000 bonus.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Standing on the corner hawking goods may be an old fashion way of doing business, but for the employees of Domino's Pizza store at 3302 Illinois it worked well enough to make them number one in Domino's Southwest Region.

The company offered a $5,000 bonus to the store in the Southwest region that showed the largest increase in carry-out sales during May, and that was enough to send the store's employees to the street — literally.

Getting into the spirit of the contest, the store employees added their own touch to the sales campaign by standing on the corner of Midkiff and Illinois with a large Dominos sign in an effort to tempt hungry Midlanders headed home from work.

It was enough to post an 800 percent increase over March sales, win the $5,000 prize and say something for an old fashion merchandising.

According to Jason Rummer of Dallas, regional director for Dominos, the Midland store bested 134 other stores located throughout Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico.

"We introduced a new promotion (a carry-out special on large pepperoni pizzas), and we tried to put a little employee incentive behind it," Rummer explained.

The $5,000 prize was divided evenly among the 17 employees — from the manager to the drivers.

Asked what they would do with the nearly $300 in prize money, employees offered such original plans as paying bills and going on shopping sprees.

Union Pacific Resources announces major gas find

N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH, Texas — Union Pacific Resources Co. has made a major natural gas discovery in southern Wyoming, a region expected to become a prime gas supplier to the growing California energy market.

A well drilled by Union Pacific Resources in Wyoming's Sweetwater County tested at 1 million cubic feet of gas per day and is expected to produce 5 million to 8 million cubic feet per day after undergoing stimulation procedures, the company said Tuesday from its headquarters in Fort Worth.

Company officials foresee the Green River Basin of southern Wyoming as an area in which the company can greatly expand its gas production.

About one-fourth of the basin falls within the huge, 7.5-million-acre Union Pacific Railroad land grant, from which Union Pacific Resources last year generated 46 percent of its oil and gas production. The land grant includes portions of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah.

Union Pacific Resources has access to the land grant for oil and gas exploration because it and the railroad are subsidiaries of Union Pacific Corp., a transportation and energy giant with heaquarters in Bethlehem, Pa.

Demand for gas from the basin is expected to increase dramatically with the completion of a natural gas pipeline from Wyoming to California.

If regulatory agencies approve construction of a pipeline as expected, it could be completed within two years, said William Adams, chairman and chief executive officer of Union Pacific Resources.

The Wyoming gas reserves have been largely "waiting for a market" that would be provided by the pipeline, Adams said.

"The Green River Basin is a top priority for exploration and development," said George Lindahl III, vice president of exploration for Union Pacific Resources. "With the proposed gas line coming in, drilling will increase substantially."

Southern Wyoming has "big potential" for a major increase in its natural gas production, because of the huge volume of reserves believed to be there, said Tom Ahlbrandt, an official with the U.S. Geological Survey, which estimates energy reserves.

The gas discovery well drilled by Union Pacific Resources is near two prolific wells in the Dripping Rock Field of southern Wyoming that have produced about 8 billion cubic feet of gas since 1984.

"We plan to drill two more wells in

Investment firm can help choose options

Q. My wife and I are retired and have $20,000 in IRA accounts, $30,000 in cash savings, and $81,000 in a low yield fund with Dean Witter from a lump sum pension distribution. We receive $314 monthly from this; Social Security brings our total income to $1,700 a month. We have no outstanding debts and own our home which is worth about $100,000.

We also have $91,000 in an isolated savings account from a saving and profit sharing plan. Untaxed, we have about 45 days remaining in which to invest this to avoid a heavy tax payment. We would like to increase our monthly income by $500 to $800.

Can this be done... and what options do we have? — T.A., Phillipsburg, N.J.

A. If you didn't have some cash savings already I would suggest paying the taxes since the rate, using five year income averaging, would be about 16 percent. But you already have sufficient cash and will have access to money if you transfer it to an IRA rollover, so you can earn interest on money that would otherwise be paid out in taxes.

The hard part is deciding where to put the money. Rather than seeking one answer for now, I suggest you see an investment firm that offers a wide range of possible investments. That way you can "park" your money for now and make longer term decisions later.

I suggest you get in touch with one of the major no-load mutual fund firms such as Dreyfus in New York, Fidelity in Boston, or Vanguard in Pennsylvania. You can start, at each firm, by putting your money in a government securities money market fund. This is a no risk option that currently pays about 8 percent — this would provide you with about $600 a month in interest income. Looking for more income would involve significant risk.

Q. My wife and I just turned 40 and have no children. My salary is $27,000 a year and my wife earns $23,000 a year. Neither of us is covered by retirement plans at work. Our annual living expenses are currently about $23,000 excluding income and payroll taxes. The $23,000 in living expenses includes rent and other expenses but also includes $1,200 for life insurance and mutual funds.

We have a variety of CDs, some in IRA accounts, and other assets totaling about $190,000 and have no debts.

Our goal is to achieve financial security and to retire in 15 years. Is this goal reasonable? Based on the current value of our assets, what is a reasonable expectation of what they'll be worth in 15 years? We are concerned that our income taxes will continue to grow because of our interest income. Also, we're concerned that because of rising living costs and taxes we may not be able to save much money out of our salaries in the future. Should we put money into universal life policies for a tax shelter? And what about buying a house... is it a good investment in our situation? Do we need to continue saving? — J.L., Phoenix, Ariz.

A. The answers to your questions rest in a nest of assumptions about inflation and taxes. Since inflation will make today's dollar measures look silly let me introduce you to a simpler way of looking at your progress toward your goal.

I call it the Years of Income Method. Since you are planning to retire at age 55 and don't have a corporate pension, you need to replace your earning power with the earning power of savings. Assuming a 6 percent current yield

Dow Jones Averages

NEW YORK(AP) Final Dow-Jones avgs. for Wed., Jun. 13.

Except for the closing, the averages are calculated from the open, highest and lowest prices, for each of the 30 industrials, 20 transportation and 15 utility stocks as soon as trades in each have been reported. For example,the high for the 30 industrials is the highest that the group has been during the trading day, not the highest that the 30 reached in a group. That means the combination of the highs for each stock in the group rarely matches the actual high of each of the 3.

FIND: Wyoming area top priority for UPR

(From 1C)

"We plan to drill two more wells in this area in 1990," Lindahl said. "We feel we have tapped into a potential 50-billion-cubic-feet reservoir and anticipate additional drilling activities in 1991.

"This field alone could fill a significant portion of the proposed Wyoming-to-California pipeline," he said.

Union Pacific Resources said it has a 70-percent working interest in the gas discovery well before payout and a 52-percent interest after payout.

Payout is the point at which revenue from well production equals the cost of drilling and completing the well.

Union Pacific Resouces, in conjunction with partners, initiated a 100-well program last year to develop reserves in southwest Wyoming. The program is "well under way and should be completed this year," Lindahl said.

BURNS: Financing retirement

with annual dividend growth of about 4 percent, you will need about 17 years of personal spending — including taxes and health insurance — as your investment fund.

You say that your basic personal spending is $23,000. If you assume that you will pay 20 percent of your income in income taxes and health insurance, your current required retirement income would be $28,750 ($23,000/0.80). With current savings of $190,000 you now have 6.6 years of income saved. If there were no inflation and it grew at 8 percent, you would have 21 years of income in savings by the time you were 55.

Unfortunately, there IS inflation and if it averages 4 percent a year you will have the equivalent of only 11.7 years of income.

I could go on and give you a lot of computations but the bottom line here is that if you continue saving, you will meet your goal. To help, you should increase your tax deferred assets and take some risk in lower current yield common stocks that will deliver a higher long term return.

Buying a house probably isn't the answer unless the current market thrusts opportunity your way. Phoenix housing prices are weak. If you can buy a house or condo at a price where the cost of ownership is a better deal than renting — without consideration of tax benefits — then consider buying.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Inheritance can be divided without limits

By Bill Doyle

Q. My wife and I have one daughter, who is married. No grandchildren. Our daughter is named in our wills as our sole heir. We have a substantial sum in certificates of deposit and a money market deposit account.

How can we protect this money from getting into the wrong hands — our daughter's husband and his family — after our daughter's death?

Doyle

A. Assuming you and your wife leave this vale of tears before your daughter and she receives your estate under the terms of your wills, there's no way you can control what happens to the money from that point on.

When your daughter inherits what you leave, she can do anything she likes with it. She will be able to spend or give away the money as she pleases. And she can choose the heirs named in her will. If there is no will, the surviving spouse inherits everything in most states. Rules vary and it is impossible to print those of all 50 states in this column.

It's obvious there is bad blood between you two and your in-laws. You might try persuading your daughter to have a will drawn up naming heirs other than her husband and his relatives. But her husband might convince your daughter to change her will after you two are gone.

You two could establish a trust specifying that your daughter receives the income from what you leave while she lives and that the money goes elsewhere after her death. If you go that route, make sure the trust is drawn up by a lawyer who is experienced in that kind of work.

A far better idea would be for you and your wife to warm up to your son-in-law and his relatives. Try to end the family feudin' fussin' and fightin' before it drags on for decades.

Q. I have not found a lawyer who knows anything about living trusts. I contacted three or four. They did not seem familiar with trusts and said they do not handle living trusts. How can I locate a lawyer, attorney, or whatever to do it for me?

A. Contact your county and/or state bar association. Ask for a list of law firms that specialize in trust work. Then, get in touch with about five of those firms. Explain what you have in mind and ask about fees, which can vary widely.

Q. Our granddaughter graduated from college recently. Over the years, we bought Series E and EE, U.S. Savings Bonds for such an occasion. The cash value of the bond now is around $5,000.

What is the best way to give these bonds to our granddaughter? Should we give them to her outright? Or should we exchange them for HH bonds, from which she would receive interest semiannually?

A. The basic answer depends on how the bonds are registered. If they are in single ownership form, in your granddaughter's name alone, you have to turn the bonds over to her. The same thing applies if the bonds are in beneficiary form, with your granddaughter as owner and you or someone else as beneficiary. If they are in co-ownership form, in her name "or" your name, you can hand them over to her, but you are not required to.

However, if she is not the registered owner of the bonds, you cannot give them to her by having them reissued in her name. Ownership of U.S. Savings Bonds cannot be transferred from one living person to another. If either of you is the registered owner of those bonds, you will have to die before ownership can be shifted to your granddaughter or anyone else.

As for the choice between the bonds you purchased and HH bonds, I'd stay with the Es and EEs until they reach final maturity and stop accruing interest. That way, the interest can be kept deferred from federal income tax.

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones says he's willing to consider spending up to $25 million to convert Texas Stadium to a domed facility, a report said.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today that Jones believes a domed Texas Stadium would be a prime location for Super Bowls, NCAA Final Fours and political conventions.

"You can enclose and air condition the stadium at a considerably less cost than it would be to build a new domed stadium," Jones said.

A domed stadium also would eliminate the concern about weather problems. The Super Bowl site committee requires an average daily temperature of 55 degrees for cities without domed stadiums.

The average temperature for Dallas in late January is 45 degrees.

NFL owners repeatedly rejected Dallas as a Super Bowl site in the 1970s because of the cold weather and the lack of adequate seating at Texas Stadium.

A domed stadium could also provide another venue for major-league baseball and professional basketball, Jones said. But he said he hasn't talked with either the Mavericks or the Rangers about the possibility of moving to Texas Stadium.

The Mavericks have a lease agreement with Reunion Arena. They have not expressed an interest in leaving.

The Rangers are considering options for a new stadium. The city of Arlington has proposed a $200 million facility adjacent to Arlington Stadium.

Odds tall for Strange

■ The winner of the past two U.S. Opens goes for three in a row, a feat not accomplished in 85 years, as the USGA tournament begins today.

MEDINAH, Ill. — There are 155 of the world's finest players and a bear named Medinah between Curtis Strange and one of sports' oldest records.

Eighty-five years have gone by since Willie Anderson won his third consecutive U.S. Open Golf Championship. No one has even had a shot at it in 39 years — since Ben Hogan won his second straight.

Now Strange, who won at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass., in 1988 and at Oak Hill in Rochester, N.Y., in 1989, has an opportunity to match a record that has stood since Theodore Roosevelt was in the White House.

"I've thought about it for 12 months," Strange said before a practice round at the Medinah Country Club.

"Every idle moment, I've thought of Medinah. I've practiced for it for three months. Now it's here. I think I'm ready for it. I think I'm playing well enough to win."

He'll find out starting Thursday, when he tees off at 9:02 a.m. in a threesome with British Open champion

Joseph Golding and Antwan Goodley. Martin Lattibeaudiere and Michael Melzer.

You may have no clue as to who those boys are right now, but, chances are if you follow high school basketball, you'll know about them in the next year or so.

Even sooner if Lady Luck has anything to do with it.

Golding, Goodley, Lattibeaudiere and Melzer are four of the front line home-towners on the 15-and-under Amateur Athletic Union Midland Magic basketball team.

By virtue of a second-place finish in the West Texas Association qualification tournament in Lubbock, the Magic will compete in the AAU National Championship tournament, July 7-14 in Kingsport, Tenn.

Magic head coach Dale Pond, a former assistant coach at Hardin Simmons University, knows the competition at the national tournament will be tough, but remains fairly confident.

"I don't think our chances are as good as some of the other teams simply because we're in our first year of doing this," he said. "But we want to win and we have a good chance to, especially with the players we've added."

Under AAU rules, by advancing to the national tournament, the Magic was able to pick up two players from the West Texas division. Zeb Leatheridge, a 6-0 guard from the Lubbock team, scored 37 points against the Magic in Lubbock's win in the West Texas-AAU Carrier-BCI Shootout championship game in May. He will be on the side of Midland in Tennessee, though, as will 6-9 post Chris Paddock of Abilene.

Host-team Lubbock was the champion of the AAU-Carrier-BCI Shootout in the 15-and-under division, but due to scheduling conflicts will not compete in the nationals. Lubbock defeated Midland twice in the West Texas tournament, 64-42 in an early round, and 92-59 in the championship game.

Argentines drop Soviets in World Cup

ROME — The last teams to get going, Spain and Uruguay, never really did in the first scorless tie in the World Cup.

But defending champion Argentina got untracked and sent the Soviet Union to the brink of elimination.

put the 1986 champions at 1-1 after a stunning 1-0 loss in the opener to Cameroon. The Soviet Union is 0-2 after a loss to Romania and needs a near-miracle to advance.

Wednesday night's game at Naples was played before a raucous crowd in the stadium where Argentine star Diego Maradona performs for Napoli of the Italian League. Maradona is regarded as something of a god in the city.

Maradona played far better against the Soviets, but the difference was the five lineup changes made by Coach Carlos Bilardo.

Pedro Troglio, one of the new players in the starting lineup, scored the first goal in the 27th minute, powerfully heading home a clever pass from Julio Olarticoechea, another new starter.

Midland Angel starting pitcher Carl Hamilton uses body language to try to persuade the umpire into calling a strike in Wednesday night's 7-3 Halo win over San Antonio. Mike Knapp hit a grand slam homer in the eighth inning to break a 3-3 tie.

Knapp slam ends skid for Angels

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

The irony at Angels Stadium Wednesday night was that a catcher wielded the biggest gun during the pitching duel that transpired there.

Midland catcher Mike Knapp interupted an otherwise low-scoring defensive struggle with an eighth-inning grand slam that pushed the Angels past the San Antonio Missions 7-3 and averted a six-game sweep by the visitors.

The four-run blast gave some much-needed backing to a more-needed solid performance by the Angel pitching staff. Midland had been outscored 59-29 in its first five games of the San Antonio series, all losses.

Knapp's second home run of the season eclipsed the left-field wall and bounced somewhere this side of Lubbock. It did so to the delight of the announced crowd of 3,788 which remained rivited throughout the nip-and-tuck affair.

But Knapp was equally thankful for solid efforts of starter Carl Hamilton — who gave up two runs on five hits through six innings of work — and reliever Dave Martinez, who got his first win as an Angel by striking out

Blazers lose bench battle

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

NBA Finals

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Portland's bench is a bust. It's a big reason the Trail Blazers' season may end in defeat Thursday night.

With its substitutes outscoring Portland's 99-47, Detroit holds a 3-1 lead in the best-of-7 NBA Finals. In the last two games, both Pistons' wins, the gap has been wider, 60-20.

Cliff Robinson, with 19 points, is the only Blazer backup with more than 10 in four games. Their substitutes were battered 34-12 in a 121-106 loss Sunday and 26-8 in a 112-109 loss Tuesday night.

"Our people have to perform," Blazers coach Rick Adelman said. "We somehow have to get something from our people coming off the bench."

That bench consists of two rookies, a free agent pickup, a journeyman center on the downside of a 12-year career and three players who rarely play.

Detroit's bench has Vinnie Johnson, John Salley and, for the first two games, Mark Aguirre. In the last two games, Johnson hit 18-of-25 shots for 41 points; Portland's substitutes made 9-of-32 for 20.

"Everyone knew that Detroit had the more experienced bench," Clyde Drexler said. "Their bench players are like starters."

The difference was obvious in Tuesday's second quarter. Adelman started Jerome Kersey and four subs — rookies Robinson and Drazen Petrovic, guard Danny Young and center Wayne Cooper.

He also started it with a 32-22 lead. But with the four backups playing in the first 3:37, Detroit went on a 7-0 run, while the Blazers their four shots and had four turnovers.

Drexler then replaced Young, but Johnson's jumper closed the gap to 32-31 before Drexler ended Portland's drought with a jumper 4:22 into the period. The Pistons had three substitutes on the floor during the 9-point spurt, and Johnson had seven points.

"It was a turning point of the game," Adelman said.

"Our job is to hold the game where it is," Cooper said. "We didn't."

"When we have had that many bench players in the game, we usually shoot the ball much better," said Robinson, the only Portland substitute who scored Tuesday night. "We have all year."

Petrovic, a good shooter during the regular season, had trouble getting free against Detroit's quicker guards and had defensive problems. He played only four minutes.

Detroit's substitutes have played 309 minutes in the series and Portland's 223. The only game in which Portland's backups had more points, 20-13, was its only victory, 106-105 in overtime in Game 2.

The Pistons fell behind in the fourth quarter of Game 4 after taking a 16-point lead late in the third, but Isiah Thomas' basket with 25 seconds left gave them the lead for good, 108-107.

"We know we can always stay aggressive and keep attacking because someone is always waiting on the bench to do the job," Thomas said.

Portland also needs better play from center Kevin Duckworth. He had six points in the first quarter Tuesday night, but finished with eight points.

Suspension upheld

NEW YORK (AP) — The American League upheld Boston manager Joe Morgan's three-game suspension on Wednesday for his part in a bench-clearing brawl with Cleveland on June 3.

The Red Sox were scheduled to play the New York Yankees Wednesday night, and third base coach Rac Slider will fill in for Morgan.

"It's still Joe's club," Slider said. "He made out the lineup."

Morgan was suspended after gloating about Roger Clemens hitting Cleveland's Stanley Jefferson with a pitch June 3.

Clemens opened the bottom of the first inning by drilling Jefferson with a fastball, leading to a fight.

The incident took place the day after Indians reliever Doug Jones threw a pitch near the head of Tony Pena.

"I loved it. We got even, didn't we?" Morgan said

STRANGE: Champ calls Medinah a No. 3 'bear'

From 1D

Mark Calcavecchia and U.S. Amateur champion Chris Patton.

"I just want to give myself a chance," Strange said. "I want to have the adrenalin flowing. I want to have the heart beating fast. I want to be in the heat. I want to feel all that."

He felt some of it as early as a week ago. A chronic stomach problem flared up in Atlanta and sent him to a hospital for tests.

"Nerves," said Strange, noted among his peers as one of the most pressure-proof players in the game.

"I've had this problem since I was a young boy."

Then Strange, a prematurely graying 35-year-old, laughed at himself, at the whole situation.

"You know something's up when you've got a knot in your stomach for a week," he said.

The knot and the nerves compose one of the three principal problems he faces.

"Sure, he's under a lot of pressure. But Curtis handles pressure as well as anybody in the game," Calcavecchia said.

"Curtis has a lot weighing on him, but he's equal to it," said Greg Norman, Strange's close friend.

Norman and Calcavecchia are among the tight little cadre of international stars who compose Strange's second problem — the short list of those most likely to succeed in blocking his bid for golfing history.

The list, Strange acknowledged, is shorter than usual because "the course eliminates a lot of guys."

"It's a bear," Strange said in identifiying problem No. 3.

Most touring pros designate the U.S. Open as the toughest tournament in the world to win. Thanks to Medinah, this one may be the toughest of the toughest.

"This could be the hardest Open they've played since 1975."

Mets blast Cubs, Giant hurler loses no-hit bid

Associated Press

Two days, three games and a lot of fun for the New York Mets at Wrigley Field: 43 runs, 57 hits, 17 doubles, a triple and six home runs.

The New York Mets again took advantage of the wind, sweeping a doubleheader from Chicago 15-10 and 9-6 Wednesday. All that a day after they blew out the Cubs 19-8.

"That can happen in this ballpark," Mets manager Bud Harrelson said. "We were ready for it, I think."

"Everybody was kind of slumping together. I've said it with the pitching staff, that one guy throws bad and it moves to the others. I think hitting is that way, too," he said.

The Mets, who struggled at the plate for the first two months of the season, have played 14 games in June and scored at least three runs every time. They won three games last weekend at home against Pittsburgh and then took three of four in Chicago, scoring 72 runs and raising their team batting average 20 points to .257 with the barrage.

NL Roundup

Giants 6, Padres 0

Trevor Wilson, bidding for baseball's fourth no-hitter of the season and second in three days, lost it on Mike Pagliarulo's leadoff single in the ninth inning as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres.

Wilson (2-0) struck out nine and walked none. Until Pagliarulo lined a clean single to right field on a 3-1 pitch, only one batter had reached base — Benito Santiago in the fifth after striking out on a wild pitch.

Astros 5, Dodgers 1

Glenn Davis hit a three-run homer, his 19th of the season, and Mike Scott held Los Angeles to three hits over seven innings, leading Houston to a victory that extended the Astros' longest winning streak of the season to six.

The Dodgers have lost 12 of their last 16 games, including three straight to the Astros.

Scott (4-6), making his first start since striking out 15 against Cincinnati, fanned seven and walked two. He only run he allowed came on Stan Javier's first home run in the sixth, and Danny Darwin got his third save.

Reds 13, Braves 4

The Cincinnati Reds broke a five-game losing streak, pounding Steve Avery in his major-league debut and routing the Atlanta Braves.

Avery, considered one of the best minor-league pitching prospects in recent years, lasted just 2 1-3 innings as the Reds erupted from a 10-day hitting slump. The 20-year-old left-hander allowed eight hits and eight earned runs, walking three and fanning three.

Expos 4, Phillies 3

Spike Owen hit a sacrifice fly in the 10th inning and the Montreal Expos seesawed past Philadelphia, the Phillies' sixth loss in seven games.

Ron Jones hit two home runs for Philadelphia, including a leadoff shot in the ninth that made it 3-3. But with two outs in the 10th and runners on second and third, Tommy Herr was intentionally walked and Jones hit a routine fly ball to right.

Pinch hitter Tom Foley's two-run single with one out in the ninth put Montreal ahead 3-2.

Pirates 6, Cardinals 5

Center fielder Willie McGee's third error of the game helped the Pittsburgh Pirates rally for two runs in the ninth inning and a victory over the St. Louis Cardinals night.

Gary Redus and Jay Bell drove home the deciding runs with consecutive sacrifice flies as the NL East-leading Pirates completed a three-game sweep of the last-place Cardinals, who have lost six of seven.

McGee, a three-time Gold Glove winner, had just three errors last season and he has five this year.

Jose Lind led off the Pirates' ninth with a double off reliever Lee Smith. Smith encountered arm stiffness and left the game with a 3-2 count on Reynolds, who was pinch-hitting.

Cubs, Pirates gain finals

Staff Report

The North Central Cubs and the Northern Pirates will meet today at 6 p.m. at Sparks park to decide the city championship of Midland's B Little League.

Northern romped into the finals with a 7-1 victory over the Northern Giants behind the pitching of Mark Stoltz and the four RBI by Alex Jacobs. Stoltz and Brent Winter both had doubles in the contest. Cody Marcum took the loss for the Giants.

North Central had a more difficult time, gaining a 5-4 win over the Mid-City Orioles as Brent Brunson drove in three of the runs and Eric Clodfelter picked up the win. J.P. Thompson had a double for the Cubs while Nathan Carter, Bradley Vineyard and Justin Givens had extra base hits for the Orioles.

The Mid-City Cardinals won a 19-18 decision over Tower 1 while the North Central Indians beat Tower 2, 7-3, to move into the consolation game. That game is also set for 6 p.m. today at Sparks Park.

Weiss' hit drops Rangers, Clemens wins 11th

Associated Press

Walt Weiss was not about to be picky, not with a .118 batting average as a right-handed hitter.

Weiss hit a soft single that drove in Doug Jennings for an unearned run with two outs in the 11th inning as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Texas Rangers 3-2 Wednesday to avoid a series sweep.

"I didn't hit it real good, but I got it over the infield," said the switch-hitting Weiss, who had four hits in 34 right-handed at-bats prior to this game-winning hit.

The winning run was set up when Jennings went to second when his two-out grounder down the first-base line went through the legs of Rafael Palmeiro.

"It was definitely going to be foul, but I saw it hit something and bounce back towards fair territory," Palmeiro said.

Weiss then dumped a soft fly into shallow right field off reliever Kenny Rogers (2-2) to score Jennings.

"This was a good win," Weiss said. "It was a tough game all the way. We had a lot of regulars out of the lineup."

The Athletics, who are 5-0 in extra-inning games this season, avoided being swept in a three-game series at home for the first time in two years despite playing without Jose Canseco, who was placed on the disabled list Wednesday, and Mark McGwire, who is bothered by a sore chest muscle.

Texas is 1-4 in extra-inning games this season.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 1

Roger Clemens scattered six hits in eight innings to win his seventh straight decision and become baseball's first 11-game winner as the Boston Red Sox beat the New York Yankees.

Clemens (11-2) has surrendered only nine runs in his last six starts while recording his longest winning streak since he was 14-0 in 1986. He struck out eight and did not walk a batter, improving to 11-4 lifetime against the Yankees.

Jeff Reardon pitched a perfect ninth for his ninth save.

White Sox 11, Mariners 2

Dan Pasqua and Ron Kittle hit back-to-back home runs in the third inning and Jack McDowell pitched a four-hitter as the Chicago White Sox routed the Seattle Mariners.

Chicago's biggest offensive game of the season gave the second-place White Sox a 5-1 record on their six-game road trip.

Pasqua hit his fifth homer after Ivan Calderon drew a walk from Erik Hanson (6-5) and Kittle followed with his 10th homer for a 5-0 lead. It was the first time the White Sox have hit back-to-back homers this season.

McDowell (3-3) was staked to a 5-0 lead in the first three innings before the Mariners scored their runs in the bottom of the third on doubles by Brian Giles and Jeff Schaefer and a single by Greg Briley.

AL Roundup

Tigers 5, Indians 4

Lloyd Moseby's tie-breaking single in the eighth inning gave the Detroit Tigers a victory over Cleveland, ending the Indians' three-game winning streak.

Cecil Fielder, who hit his major-league-leading 23rd home run in the second inning, opened the eighth with a single off Rudy Seanez (1-1), the third Cleveland pitcher. Jesse Orosco relieved Seanez and pinch-runner Kenny Williams stole second, took third on pinch-hitter Tracy Jones' sacrifice and scored on Moseby's single.

Mike Henneman (3-4), the last of four Detroit pitchers, went 1 2-3 hitless innings for the victory.

The Tigers trailed 4-2 but tied the score in the bottom of the fifth on Lou Whitaker's ninth home run of the season. It came off Cleveland starter John Farrell.

Brewers 7, Orioles 2

Dave Parker homered and drove in three runs as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Baltimore Orioles for only their sixth victory in 21 games.

Parker drove in the Brewers' first run with a first-inning sacrifice fly, then hit his fifth homer of the season with Robin Yount on base via a single to give Milwaukee a 6-1 lead in the seventh. It came off Jose Bautista.

Mark Knudson (4-3) gave up five hits in 6 2-3 innings for Milwaukee after replacing an injured Teddy Higuera with one out in the first inning. Higuera, who faced only two batters, aggravated the groin pull he sustained on June 6.

Blue Jays 10, Twins 1

Junior Felix, Glenallen Hill and Fred McGriff homered and left-hander John Cerutti held Minnesota's all-righty lineup to one run in seven innings-plus as the Toronto Blue Jays handed the Twins their sixth straight loss.

ANGELS: Pitching finally gives Angels some joy five and allowing one run over the last three innings.

"It was fun getting the hit, but I had more fun catching Carl and Dave," Knapp said.

"It's nice to finally get some spark. Hopefully that will carry over into the second half. Sure, the grand slam was obviously fun, but I didn't think I hit it that hard."

What he hit was a two-strike pitch off James Wray that made San Antonio reliever Zac Shinall a loser for the first time this year.

Shinall, 3-1, entered the game at the start of the seventh inning holding a 3-2 edge. That was erased when Scott Cerny knocked in Mark Davis with a ground ball to short stop for the second time in three innings.

When John Skurla led off the eight with a double and Luis Aguayo followed with a single to put Angels at the corners, Wray replaced Shinall. He got Edgar Alfonzo to hit a grounder, and Skurla was cut down at the plate. But Davis turned in his third single of the game, and Knapp blasted the homer.

The Midland Angels snacked on goose eggs for the first four innings Wednesday, and it looked as if the San Antonio Missions would continue their spell over the hosts. The Missions, meanwhile, got untracked with a pair of runs in the second when Eddie Pye knocked in a pair of runs with a single just out of Hamilton's grasp and through the box into center field.

But the Angels scratched out a run in the bottom of the fifth on Mark Davis' leadoff single, a balk by Hartsock and a pair of groundouts.

Midland tied it at 2-2 when Wiley Lee belted a leadoff triple to the fence that turned around right fielder Bruce Dostal. He scored on a passed ball by Lance Rojas.

"Those were the same guys who've been out there the last five nights," said Angel manager Eddie Rodriguez. "But this time we got a good start out of Hamilton, and Martinez came in and did a good job."

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Expand your circle of friends and business contacts. The money picture will brighten if you make the right moves in August. You finally find the answers you have been seeking. Major decisions are called for in December. Keep on top of any family problems. Self-employment opportunities open up in early 1991. Do not sell yourself short. Celebrate a family milestone in style.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tennis champion Steffi Graf, actress Dorothy McGuire, singer Boy George, pitcher Don Newcombe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Practical measures will bring the best results today. Swallow your pride and accept that special position or assignment. You need to scale down your spending. Be firm. Have the strength to say "no."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Talk to someone you believe is standing in the way of your happiness. Travel is a good business investment now. Unusual circumstances will put you in the right place at the right time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are able to create your own career opportunities now. Work toward a goal that will make you financially secure. A romantic interlude convinces you that your choice was a good one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An addition to the family is possible. Someone who tries to rile you will make a mistake. Stay on top of your job. Your leadership qualities shine brightly. Your charm assures romantic success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your old job is available again. Sound out your mate if relocating would be necessary. Do not ignore a financial problem; it must not be allowed to escalate. Spend time with children.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance blossoms between two college students or business churns. Stop being stubborn. Make your apologies at the office and career progress will be easier. A lost opportunity returns.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You shine at work today. Do not be taken in by promises from someone who wants to unseat you. Protect your flank. A financial situation shows steady improvement. Keep up the good work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romance shifts gears. Refuse to accept someone's excuse for breaking a date. Your position at work could be improved by another person's mistakes. A part-time job produces welcome cash. Pay bills promptly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop being so businesslike about love. Show your feelings! Give children the emotional support they need. Intervening in a family argument will only make matters worse. Mate is on your side.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your income will rise when you take your work more seriously. Attend adult education classes and keep up with the latest developments in your field. Romance holds some questions. Exercise patience.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be sensitive to someone's financial plight, but avoid painting yourself into a corner by giving too much help. A change will be upsetting until you realize it is in your best interest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Welcome fresh challenges. A change of personnel can work to your advantage. New lines of communication open up. Follow up your hunches. Romance has you walking on air. Avoid rushing things!

TODAY'S CHILDREN have tremendous personal magnetism and can achieve great things early in life. A short attention span is the only stumbling block to lasting fame and fortune. Wise parents can help these Geminis learn to see things through to completion.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of ♣

The final of the Championship event of the Omar Sharif World Individual, held in early May at the Showboat Hotel and Casino in Atlantic City, N.J., consisted of 44 players, among whom were a host of the world's greatest. But some hands proved too much for even such a star-studded field. Here's one of them.

Six diamonds by East-West would have been an excellent contract to reach. However, it is hard to fault either East or West when the bidding went as shown. Before reading on, decide whether you would rather play or defend four spades after the lead of a club.

At the table we kibitzed, the South hand was held by the veteran Swedish internationalist, P.O. Sundelin, who eventually finished third. He received a club lead, taken by East's ace, and a club was continued. Sundelin ruffed with the king of spades, cashed the queen to reveal the 3-0 trump split, then led the ten of trumps. It made no difference whether West covered or not. Since the club suit was already established and dummy had a guaranteed entry, declarer made the rest of the tricks.

But look what happens if, at trick two, East were to shift to the king of diamonds, forcing dummy to ruff. Assuming West defends correctly, there's no way for declarer to set up and use the clubs, since a critical entry to the board has been taken out too soon. And declarer cannot get to his hand often enough to ruff all his losers on the table. Sooner or later, the defenders will take two heart tricks and score a trump trick by force.

Turner apologizes to Christians

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner apologized on his own Cable News Network for calling Christianity "a religion for losers."

Turner, appearing on CNN's "Crossfire" program Tuesday night, said he was speaking off the top of his head when he made the comment.

"I want to officially apologize to all the Christians for saying that," Turner said. "That was a very uncalled-for statement. At one time or another, I've offended just about everybody. I was making a talk off the cuff when that just popped out, and I feel very sorry for it."

Turner met earlier in the day with Chinese student leader Shen Tong, 21, who was offended by something Turner said last month.

Shen said he was unable to persuade Turner to lend support to his country's democracy movement.

"He don't want to be involved. He don't want to contribute," Shen said. Shen sought the meeting after Turner said the Chinese government "felt forced" to quell democracy protests with military strength that left hundreds of demonstrators dead.

Turner's remark about Christianity was first made last year and repeated last month at a convention of the American Humanist Association, where he was named Humanist of the Year.

Despite his apology, Turner said Tuesday night he has problems with organized religion because of what he perceives as its inflexibility.

"The thing I don't like about all organized religion is, I've never seen one yet that didn't think they were right and it was the one true way," he said.

WOODSTOCK, Ill. (AP) — Dick Tracy, come home.

So say the people of Woodstock, Ill., population 13,000 and home to Chester Gould, creator of the comic strip shooting to be this summer's blockbuster movie.

As Tracy would say, "Egods."

A special preview was scheduled Wednesday night at the Woodstock Opera House to give the town its first peek at the celluloid Tracy, that squeaky clean, jut-jawed good guy who has been cowing bad guys like no other copper since 1931.

The Walt Disney Co. film starring Warren Beatty and Madonna opens nationwide Friday.

Three hundred moviegoers paid $100 each to attend the sold-out Woodstock performance with Gould's daughter, Jean O'Connell.

Proceeds will benefit the Chester Gould Memorial Library — a small-town museum planned to commemorate the late cartoonist and his famous characters like 88 Keys, Mumbles, Breathless and Pruneface.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Itinerant Grateful Dead fans are going to have trouble finding spots to rest their heads around the time of the group's July 8 concert at Three Rivers Stadium.

The city won't let them sleep in the arena's parking lot and a northern suburb adopted a resolution banning all camping for the first two weeks of July.

The resolution adopted Monday by the Reserve Township Board of Commissioners bans all camping out, including sleeping in tents or any vehicle, in the township from July 1 to July 15.

"We don't want any problems," said Andrew Perlik, board chairman.

At least 25 people were arrested when about 500 of the band's fans clashed with Pittsburgh police outside the stadium in April 1989.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Bush told guitarist Chet Atkins' wife that turning 66 "doesn't hurt a bit."

Bush, who celebrated his 66th birthday Tuesday, telephoned the country musician's home Wednesday morning to thank the musician for calling the White House a day earlier with birthday wishes.

Atkins was away from home eating breakfast, but his wife Leona spoke to the president for about five minutes.

Mrs. Atkins said Bush remarked about his birthday, "It doesn't hurt a bit."

Atkins, known as "Mr. Guitar," joked later that his wife should have relayed the call to the restaurant where he was eating.

"I've got to train her differently," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 1970s pop duo Seals and Crofts is putting together a record as a follow-up to their first concert tour in 10 years.

The two, whose hits included "Summer Breeze" and "Diamond Girl," did a concert tour in Canada last summer.

"It was such a success that everyone convinced them to work on another album," country music star Dan Seals, brother of Jim Seals of Seals and Crofts, said Tuesday.

CAGERS: Hoops in a football town

From 1D

Midland won two games, beating Odessa's entry twice, 73-64, and 83-75 in the loser's bracket final.

In addition to the out-of-towners, the Magic will be led by four or five "name players" according to Pond, although he remains unsure of his starting lineup.

The players looked to by Pond to carry plenty of weight in Kingsport — all 14 and 15 year olds — are the 5-7 Golding; James Franklin (5-6), son of Midland College head coach Reggie Franklin; Goodley (6-1); Lattibeaudiere (6-0); Melzer, the 5-10 brother of former Midland High guard Scott; and 5-11 David Wilson.

Other roster members include Kirk French (5-10), Gene Ivie (6-1), Sean Low (5-8) and Cory Watson (5-6). All are Midlanders with the exception of Ivie, a Canyon resident spending the summer with his father in Midland.

Pond, who played for and graduated from HSU before coaching there, misses some aspects of college basketball but says he is fulfilling his role in life after having entered the ministry as the Associate Minister of Activities at Midland's First Baptist Church. Oddly enough, though, none of the players on the current roster are FBC members.

In guiding the Magic, it is Pond's wish to promote the game of basketball in what is primarily a football town. Although a fan of football, Pond said he would like to see prep basketball's popularity rise as well.

"Midland is a football town," he noted. "And that's good. It doesn't necessarily take away from our basketball. The folks who went to Lubbock — the fans — got really excited about basketball and about the (AAU) program. We want to carry on that excitement for the youth of our town."

Pond added that not only was the Lubbock tournament good for the fans, but it was "neat" for the players too, as they were somewhat taken aback by their own success.

"Seeing their excitement when they saw the success they had was a neat thing. I think they were surprised at what was going on. And just exposing them to basketball outside of Midland" was worthwhile.

The Midland team started working out in April, the first time they had ever played on the same team together after attending different junior highs and freshman schools.

One of the factors which adds to making Pond unsure of his starting lineup for the national tournament is the team's inability to attend a warm-up tournament in Kansas City, Mo. The Magic was supposed to participate in the Inter-Associational AAU tourney, but could not make it, due in part to a lack of funding and contributions needed to make the trip.

Pond says a "lack of exposure more than a lack of support" may be the reason behind the absence of donations to this point.

As for the the Magic and their competition at the national tournament, Pond again reiterates his belief in what the team can accomplish, saying they "caught a little of what they are able to do" at the tournament in Lubbock. He reminded, though, that other teams from around the country will boast players that "everyone will be reading about six or seven years from now" when they enter the college ranks.

(Any individual or group wishing to make a donation to help the Midland Magic on its trip to Kingsport, Tenn., can contact assistant coach Michael Moak at 697-9445 or 682-7669, or Kirk French at 699-0969 or 682-0287.)

World Cup fan dies

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The excitement of watching Egypt's 1-1 tie with The Netherlands in a World Cup soccer match was said Wednesday to have caused the deaths of one man in Egypt and another in Jordan.

Mohamed el-Sayed Eissa, 25, suffered a massive heart attack and died immediately following the Egyptian goal scored by Magdi Abdel-Ghani, the newspaper Al-Akhbar reported.

In northern Jordan, Jalal Omar Baziamit, also 25, died of a similar heart attack as he celebrated the Egyptian goal.

U.S. tries to avoid rout

World Cup

ROME (AP) — Everything's in place: the opponent, the crowd, the spectacle. Now all the United States has to do is avoid another embarassing rout when it plays Italy before a packed Olympic Stadium at 2 p.m. CDT today.

Only the Americans think they have a chance of winning, and not even all of them are convinced. Midfielder Tab Ramos predicted a tie Wednesday morning before the team left its camp in seaside Tirrenia and drove through the hills of Tuscany to Rome.

"Oh wow," backup goalkeeper David Vanole said after the team practiced in the 78,417-seat stadium Wednesday night. "You can't help but play well here."

The players arrived in Rome under heavy guard, with machine-gun toting police accompanying the team bus. Before practice, the players had time for a short trip to the Spanish Steps and dinner in a downtown restaurant.

But Thursday's game will be all serious. The U.S. team looked years behind the rest of the soccer world against the Czechoslovaks and wants to atone.

"That was not really us," American coach Bob Gansler said of Sunday's game.

Gansler will shake up the lineup against Italy, a three-goal favorite, according to Las Vegas bookmakers. The coach hasn't told his team what the lineup will be, but players said they expected defenders John Doyle and Marcelo Balboa would replace Steve Trittschuh and John Stollmeyer. Jimmy Banks was the leading contender to replace midfielder Eric Wynalda, who must serve a one-game suspension because he was ejected against the Czechoslovaks for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Gansler wouldn't confirm any of this, saying only: "There probably will be a couple of changes."

The U.S. team, shaken by the repeated fouls of Czechoslovakia, went through an extremely physical practice Tuesday night, with Gansler encouraging players to go after each other as hard as they could.

"It was good," midfielder Paul Caligiuri said. "We need to get more physical and that's how we have to play."

The Italians, who beat Austria 1-0 in their opener, are among the top teams in the world. They start dangerous forwards GianLuca Villa of Sampdoria (10 goals in 22 games last season) and Andrea Carnevale of AS Roma. Salvatore Schillaci of Juventus, the scorer against Austria, scored 15 goals in 30 games last season and doesn't even start.

So how is the U.S. team going to cope?

"This game is going to have to be the best game we ever played," U.S. goalkeeper Tony Meola said.

All around Rome, banners hang for the Azzurri, the Italian team's nickname. The fans aren't expecting just a victory, but a blowout. If that doesn't happen, the players' faces will be as blue as their jerseys.

"We have more to lose than to gain against the U.S.," midfielder Roberto Donadoni said. "We're enthusiastic, but we know the biggest risk we could take would be to undervalue this U.S. squad."

Defender Giuseppi Bergomi said the Americans aren't as awful as they looked against the Czechoslovaks.

"Technically, they're not bad. They press a lot," he said. "But the five goals the Czechs scored destroyed them morally."

The last time the Americans played in Olympic Stadium, the Italians beat them 10-0. That was on April 4, 1975, when the current U.S. team was just learning how to play. They played again on May 30, 1984, when the Italians left half their team home and played a scoreless tie in a downpour at Giants Stadium.

But those games were different. They were exhibitions. The intensity level Thursday will be incomparably higher.

"All the players on Italy," U.S. forward Chris Sullivan said, "play games in front to 50-80,000 every week. So these guys aren't taken in by all the hype. They just feel right at home out there on the field."

For the U.S. players, it's nothing like home.

"The level is a bit higher and the butterflies a little larger," Gansler said. "It's the greatest show on earth, the ultimate showcase."

Vanole, the most spirited player on the U.S. team, stayed on the field after Wednesday night's practice and admired the stadium, built for the 1960 Olympics and reconstructed for the World Cup.

Cash gets Wimbledon wild card

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Australian Pat Cash, the 1987 Wimbledon men's champion, received a wild-card berth for this year's tournament — enabling him to avoid having to qualify.

Cash, 25, ruptured an Achilles tendon in April last year and plummeted in the world standings before his health returned.

He was runner-up in a tournament in Seoul in April, 1990.

Real Paris not hotbed of fashion

Paris chic may be a myth except for one famous French avenue

By Tova Navarra
Copley News Service

"Hey, Daddy, won't I look swell in sables / clothes with Paris labels / Daddy, Daddy, you gotta get the best for me!"

So goes an old song.

But unless Daddy is a Frenchman with enough savoir faire to shop on the Rue de Faubourg St. Honore in Paris, he probably blunders quite a bit. And it shows: The Paris chic known by tout le monde may well be a myth except for that one famous avenue.

Shattered dreams notwithstanding, there aren't too many knockouts strolling Les Champs Elysees. All the ooh-la-las over Paris fashions — the hub of haute couture — seem confined to Vogue, Elle and other thick, expensive magazines. At least when it comes down to what is worn by everyone who isn't a model.

It seemed to me that Parisian men looked better dressed than any of the women, but that's not saying much. If a man had on an Easter-egg purple shirt, a subtle plaid sports jacket, dark gray, full-cut trousers and black loafers, you could bet he had on purple socks — all in all, not a bad accent. I've seen fuchsia socks with a fuchsia shirt that looked decent if you like fuchsia on a man.

Older men in berets and scarves carried off a traditional Continental charm, but some of them showed traces of being somewhat unwashed. Many older women took on a French matron air in orthopedic-type shoes and braided buns.

CNS Graphic

THE WOMEN 18 to 45? Rarely did I see what Barbizon and other modeling schools call "The Look" — that polished, clothes-hair-makeup-accessories ensemble (the French word meaning "together") but with an individual flair.

For all the glass display cases of Revlon, Adrien Arpel, Elizabeth Arden, even cheap brands of makeup sold worldwide, you could count the faces with makeup on the fingers of one hand. (And most of them were of Pigalle-Moulin Rouge-section notoriety. Wherever I went in the makeup I wear every day, I felt strangely self-conscious, that perhaps people thought I was one of them.)

Au naturel prevailed, which is a shame because makeup adds pleasing color, contour and, at least as I see it, life to a face. Hair also appeared to fall where it may as opposed to the engineered coiffures you might expect. But hairstyles in Vogue have gone askew in an attempt, I suppose, to be undone and kittenish. So it's not a shock that women look to the idea that unkempt is easier.

From the neck down, things in Paris get more interesting, but not because garments are beautiful or aesthetically coordinated or chosen to create an improved body line. Flowing, above-the-ankle-length pants are pretty on most women, but not with high-top, padded athletic shoes. Ankle socks and flats on a woman in a knee-length skirt created an odd, overgrown schoolgirl look a la Annette Funicello. The little girls do better with their boxy dresses, white cotton tights and Mary Jane-style shoes.

CASUAL WEAR no longer automatically means jeans, except for some tourists from the United States or Italy. The women who do wear them must not realize that they just don't jibe with dressy or sheer hose and casual shoes. Add a parka or other such jacket to the outfit and voila! — street style gone awry.

Aside from a slovenly appearance, any garment that augments a big stomach or a bony chest or fat hips creates a major fashion blooper. A tight, straight skirt and bolero jacket make a big stomach the main event.

Alas, the "pregnant" look went out shortly after artist Jan Van Eyck painted Arnolfini's wedding in 1434, at which the bride wore a kind of bodice bustle in the front, making her seem pregnant. (That was a fashion during a time when men, no doubt, thought women were in their best form when pregnant, and possibly, just possibly, there was a hint of macho pride at contributing to that profile.)

Low-cut V-neck sweaters are usually out of the question for day wear, bony chest or not, but you do see them on women in the Metro and in stores and restaurants. And miniskirts look pathetic on anyone — fat hips or slim — with knees. Knees, folks, all of them, are awful and distracting. No designer alive can expose knees and get away with it, no matter how clever the rest of the outfit. Dark tights may help, but don't count on it.

THE FUNNIEST concoction, however, is the big sweater or shirt that stops just at the gluteal folds. Worn with nothing else but tights, women look as though they forgot an item of clothing. Of course, you never lean over, sit, bend down or move your legs in this outfit. You must stand perfectly still. Also, you must never appear at an office or in any workplace (except a dancing academy) while dressed in such absent-minded garb. Not too many girls take their chances with this in Paris, but the ones you do see give off all the vibrations of boys in black leather jackets.

For the most part, the women of Paris dress like rag dolls and make little effort to match colors or patterns. One woman walking down the Avenue Hoche wore a blouse, skirt, sweater, scarf, hat, coat and hosiery, each with different printed pattern and colors. No, this was not Christian LaCroix or any of his contemporaries who can create uncanny and exquisite matches with unlikely prints. This was the doing of Bozo the couturier. Desolee.

The women who tried to be sexy wore high heels and tight clothes (if you honestly think they're necessary elements of sex appeal) to climb the endless stone steps at the Sacre Coeur cathedral. Walking shoes? Breezy pants, a well-made shirt or cotton jacket? No way! Why these women think they look good when their postures are out of whack, their feet visibly hurt and they can't sit comfortably, je ne sais pas.

REAL SEX APPEAL emanates from self-confidence and physical comfort; it's an attitude, not an outfit. The old French saying, Il faut souffrir pour etre belle — You must suffer to be beautiful — should be guillotined.

So much for fashion in many sections of Paris, save the Rue de Faubourg, along which Francois Mitterrand's wife slips out of the guarded palace and frequents the exclusive boutiques and galleries. Pierre Cardin and other internationally known designers call this avenue their headquarters, and the people here are definitely role-model chic. Nothing outlandish, mind you, like Givenchy-gone-bonkers or lamp shades on the head, but tasteful combinations of fabric, line and embellishment (including hair and makeup) for which — doggone it — you need beaucoup francs to accomplish.

Madonna's tour designer visits NYC

N.Y. Times News Service

Jean-Paul Gaultier was in New York last week to attend the Madonna show at the Nassau Coliseum. Gaultier, a Paris designer with a platinum flattop, designed costumes for the singer's tour.

Gaultier said he had been asked by rock groups to design clothing, but would do so only for Madonna. "With her it is a collaboration," he said. "She loves the corset, and I love it, too. Her look is so 'me.'"

He said Madonna had asked for something along the lines of Cyd Charisse's dance costumes from the 1950s.

"I did it, but made it more modern, more pointed," Gaultier said, referring to a provocative men's pinstriped suit with chest cutouts.

"I like the mixing of femininity and masculinity. Of course, with Madonna, the femininity explodes through the masculinity. It's a little bit surrealistic. It's kind of an obsession in America, you know, the pointed breast."

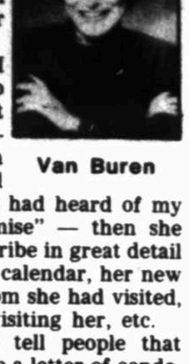
DEAR ABBY

Brevity is best for comforting

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently lost my husband of 51 years. After his death, I received many comforting letters telling me what a fine, kind and gentle man he was. This did much to help me bear my loss.



Van Buren

However, I am writing to tell you about one letter I received from a longtime friend saying that she had heard of my husband's "demise" — then she went on to describe in great detail her busy social calendar, her new apartment, whom she had visited, and who was visiting her, etc.

Abby, please tell people that when they write a letter of condolence, the recipient is usually not in the mood for social chitchat.

When my daughter was in the hospital, dying of leukemia, a friend called to "cheer her up," and kept her on the phone for half an hour describing the Caribbean cruise she had just returned from — and the wonderful plays she had just seen in New York!

How can people be so insensitive? — SOUNDING OFF

DEAR SOUNDING OFF: For the thoughtless and self-centered, it comes naturally. And to the well-intentioned who attempt to entertain or distract a grieving friend with a cheerful, newsy letter: Please consider instead a brief message expressing your sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's "baby sister" (age 34) is getting married for the fourth time (one annulment and two divorces). She chose our wedding date for her wedding. It will be a civil ceremony, but she's having a big blowout just like it was her first.

My husband wants to attend her wedding and the big party the night before, which will kill the whole weekend. I had been looking forward to a personal celebration for our wedding anniversary, but it won't be possible now that his sister screwed up all our plans. With 365 days in the year, wouldn't you think this selfish girl could have picked another day to get married?

I know I'll have a miserable time at her wedding, as it won't be easy to hide my resentment. I'm not sure I can handle this. — NOSE OUT OF JOINT

DEAR NOSE: You can if you really want to. Be a good sport and handle it with grace and generosity of spirit. "Baby sister" has already had three strikes against her; perhaps your lucky day will prove lucky for her, too.

If you anticipate a miserable time, you'll have one. Most people are about as happy as they make up their minds to be. Think positive and turn this lemon into lemonade.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "STILL HURTING IN EUGENE, ORE.": All love affairs would be pain-free if both parties quit caring at the same time. But unfortunately, they rarely do, so face it — it's over. One way to dull the pain is to invite another woman out. You'll never know what's out there unless you survey the scenery.

Universal cameras would be nice

By Erma Bombeck

With the vacation season approaching, I'd like to propose something rather revolutionary. With the exception of laundry labels and traffic signs, there are few things in this world that transcend cultures, languages or geography. But wouldn't it be nice if we had a universal camera? You know, something you could hand to a stranger and say, "Would you be so kind as to snap our picture?" and he would say, "Certainly," and in two seconds it's done?

Bombeck

I remember one day in Italy, in a garden somewhere, my husband and I saw this man with three cameras around his neck and lenses peeking out of every pocket. Following him around was his wife with a camera bag slung over her shoulder and carrying a tripod. My husband asked him if he would snap a picture of us together.

He looked at our Instamatic as if it were leaking nuclear waste. "Where is the viewfinder?" he asked. We showed him. "What do I push?" We showed him. "How do you focus it?" We spent longer talking to him than we did to each other in three weeks. We grinned and he snapped the picture. When we got the print back, our heads were cut off.

I have the feeling that if you put your camera in the hands of the late Ansel Adams, he wouldn't know how to get the lens cap off. That's because, of the millions of cameras in the world, there are no two alike. Most of the cameras you buy are obsolete before your charge is approved.

My husband has an expensive German camera that takes three months of instruction to work. You are warned not to operate it or heavy machinery if you take an aspirin. I am telling you it is complex.

Since most of our picture albums look like I am a woman of mystery who travels alone, he occasionally asks that I take his picture just to show he was there. I take the camera and mumble something about the distance, twirl around the lens like I'm focusing, look up at the sun like I'm concerned with light, arch my body into a catatonic state and say, "Hold it!" The picture that comes back has the quality of a print taken of a bank robbery in progress.

I always say, "It must have been the wrong ASA." I have no idea what that means.

Victor Costa designs a 45-piece Dior collection

By Woody Hochswender
N.Y. Times News Service

It seems an odd marriage: Victor Costa, king of the knockoffs, and Christian Dior, the French fashion house. But Costa, a Dallas designer known for producing excellent copies of French couturiers' clothes, has, under a license agreement, designed a 45-piece collection bearing the Christian Dior label.

The first collection, for the resort-holiday season, opens for store buyers' consideration in New York on Wednesday. There are luncheon suits and entrance-making dresses, including several with big satin bows, a trademark of Christian Dior's chief designer, Gianfranco Ferre.

The clothes carry the Christian Dior label but are to be displayed in a separate area of the stores. Imagine that: a copy that is the real thing.

"The intention is not to copy the Dior couture, but to capture the essence of what Ferre does," said Bob Miller, the executive vice president of Victor Costa.

"Victor is an expert at capturing what was created for the Paris runway, cutting it into sizes 2 through 16, in three different colors, and getting it to the retail floors of America."

Ferre-designed ready-to-wear, which has the words Christian Dior Boutique on the label, is available in only about a dozen stores in the United States.

Costa's Dior line, which will cost about a fourth as much as Dior's, is likely to be sold in hundreds.

Most of the clothes by Costa will retail for $500 to $1,000. Costa expects to do about $3 million to $5 million in sales the first year, of which Christian Dior will receive a percentage as a royalty.

In essence, by giving Costa a license to steal, Dior benefits not only from the designer's ability to produce haute couture-type garments for less, but also from his high-quality manufacturing operation in Texas.

"It validates what I do best, which is to interpret the looks of Paris, especially the couture," Costa said. "I've always been in awe of Dior."

Costa is also guaranteed a front-row seat at Christian Dior fashion shows, where he can sketch in the open, and with a clear conscience.

Study indicates a little beer may lengthen life

By Jean Carper

Drinking a little beer may help some people live longer. So suggests a new study by Dr. Leslie Klevay, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In laboratory tests, Dr. Klevay gave some animals water to drink and others beer. The beer-drinking animals lived an astonishing six times longer. They also had lower blood cholesterol and less heart enlargement.

Carper

There is a catch, though. All of the animals suffered from a copper deficiency which promotes heart disease and cuts life short. But the overwhelming majority of Americans also eat a diet dangerously deficient in copper. It's estimated that a mere 20 percent of us get the recommended dietary doses of copper.

Dr. Klevay says the beer in some mysterious way counteracts the expected damage from the copper deficiency, prolonging the animals' lives. Beer's secret ingredient is unknown, but Dr. Klevay does not think it is alcohol.

About a can of beer a day seems to extend human life, but more than two drinks a day can be dangerous, according to other research. The best advice is to avoid a copper-deficient diet by eating more seafood, liver, vegetables and nuts.

ATTENTION, MEN

Cover your ears when President Bush says he hates broccoli. There's new evidence that eating broccoli and its vegetable cousins may be more important for men than for women.

A new study of more than 600 persons by University of Utah School of Medicine researchers discovered that men who ate the most "cruciferous" vegetables; including broccoli, had a 70 percent lower risk of colon cancer than the skimpiest eaters of such vegetables.

Other vegetables in the cruciferous family include cabbage, brussels sprouts, cauliflower and kale.

Oddly, the study, unlike several others, did not find that cruciferous vegetables cut the risk of colon cancer in women.

However, researchers noted that both men and women who ate the most fat were more likely to develop colon cancer. Also, both sexes who ate the most foods high in fiber and beta carotene, such as carrots and spinach, also had lower rates of colon cancer.

This is one of the first studies to show that diet may be more critical for men than women in warding off colon cancer, concluded researchers.

WHAT ABOUT OLIVE OIL?

If you ask most health experts, they say they prefer olive oil to other vegetable oils.

But recently, a widely publicized study from Columbia University said piling more olive oil on top of other fat in the diet did not help the heart. And a new Stanford University School of Medicine study declared olive oil no better than corn oil in regulating good-type HDL cholesterol.

Does that mean you should stop eating olive oil and switch to corn, soybean and safflower oils? No, say several experts. Dr. David Kritchevsky, Wistar Institute, says it's silly to add more olive oil on top of a fatty diet in hope of more benefit, which was the theory tested by Columbia researchers. The proper idea, Dr. Kritchevsky says, is to use olive oil in place of, not in addition to other fats, namely saturated animal fats.

Further, numerous studies suggest that corn oil depresses immunity and dramatically increases the rate of cancer in laboratory animals. Other experts fear that too much corn, safflower and soybean oil fosters numerous disease processes.

It's still best to cut back on all oils, but when you use oil, olive oil and canola oil (like Puritan) still seem safest.

Jean Carper's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

Researchers seek safer breast implants

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A breast implant filled with peanut oil could mean safer breast enlargements for thousands of women who have the surgery each year, a radiologist says.

Because the oil is transparent, the new implants do not interfere with X-ray mammography for breast cancer the way silicone breast implants can, said Judy Destouet, head of the mammography unit at Washington University's Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology.

"They appear like the fat in the breast — you can see through it," Destouet said.

Destouet and Leroy Young, associate professor of plastic and reconstructive surgery at Washington University School of Medicine, are heading the development of the new implant.

The most common implant now is filled with silicone gel, which appears as dense as bone in X-rays and therefore can hamper early detection of breast cancer, Destouet said. Others are filled with saline, or a combination of silicone and saline.

"I think many women need (breast augmentation) for self esteem, and I think that we should have the freedom to do what we want for our bodies," Destouet said.

"We hoped to develop a better product that would allow women to augment their breasts but won't take away the benefits of state-of-the-art mammography. We feel that we have something that really can be a safe alternative."

Breast augmentation is one of the most popular cosmetic surgery procedures available, according to the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons Inc. in Arlington Heights, Ill. Some 72,000 women undergo breast augmentation each year, said spokeswoman Cathleen Coyne.

But some doctors disagree that implants interfere with early cancer detection.

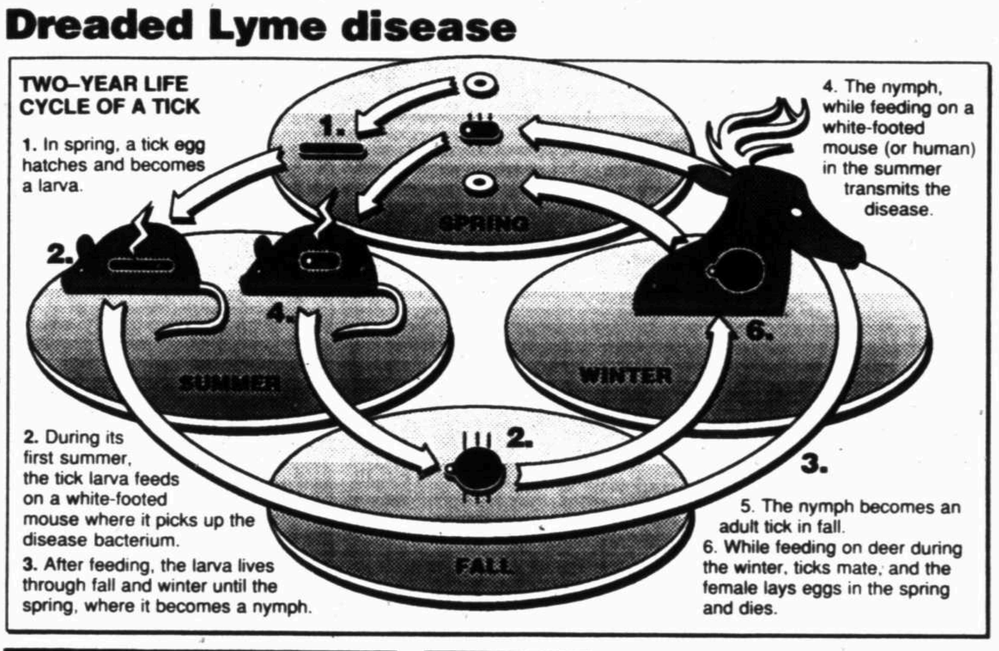
Studies by Dr. Garry Brody at the University of Southern California followed 3,000 women in the Los Angeles area who have had breast augmentation.

"Thus far, the delay is theoretic only. It's certainly a possibility, but when we look at the statistics, we can't find the delay. Their cancer seems to be picked up at the same stage as the unaugmented population."

The American Cancer Society estimates that one in 10 women will develop breast cancer in her lifetime.

Carolyn Cline, a plastic surgeon and psychologist in San Francisco, said she discourages women with a family history of breast cancer from having the surgery. "But the average women, I don't feel — given the improvements in radiological techniques — that it is a major issue," she said.

Dreaded Lyme disease



WHERE THE DISEASE IS FOUND:

Cases have been confirmed in 43 states of the U.S., Europe, Asia and Australia, especially in Germany, Scandinavia, China and the Soviet Union. Ticks which spread the disease can be found just about anywhere, from wooded forests to suburban backyards.

TREATMENT:

There is presently no known cure, but antibiotics are given to fight the bacteria, and work especially well in cases of early detection and diagnosis.

PREVENTION:

Proper clothing should be worn when outdoors, including long-sleeved shirts, long pants, hats and gloves, and tall socks or boots. Tick repellants containing DEET (N,N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) are useful to keep ticks away from you. When hiking, walking or running, stay on the main path, as ticks are especially prevalent in tall grass or brush. Most importantly, check frequently for ticks whenever you return from the outdoors. Remember to check thoroughly, as ticks can be as small as the head of a pin.

WHAT IT IS:

Lyme disease has existed for centuries in Europe, but the first confirmed cases in the U.S. appeared in Old Lyme, Connecticut, in 1975. The disease is caused by an organism called a spirochete, a spiral shaped bacterium, which is spread by various species of ticks when they attach on to the flesh of humans or animals. The disease has been called "the great masquerader" because its symptoms vary from individual to individual and mimic other diseases. However, if not diagnosed quickly, it can cause serious heart, joint and nervous system disorders.

SYMPTOMS:

In some cases of Lyme disease symptoms take years to appear, while in others it takes only days. Early stages normally begin with a red rash, flu-like symptoms, fever, headache, fatigue, and muscle and joint pains (though some people develop no symptoms at all). If left undiagnosed or untreated, severe long-term problems can occur including: vision problems, numbness or tingling, seizures, meningitis, facial paralysis, encephalitis, muscle weakness, and cardiac and other nervous system disorders.

REMOVING TICKS:

Do not try to burn out or suffocate a tick, as it may cause it to regurgitate its stomach contents and spread disease. Instead, use fine-jaw tweezers and grab the tick at the head (be careful not to squeeze the body). Pull firmly, but do not twist. Once the tick is removed, wash the area well with soap and water and apply an antiseptic to prevent infection. Flush the tick down a toilet, or place it in alcohol to kill it.

Drug reduces vertebral bone loss

BOSTON (AP) — A drug can reverse the loss of vertebral bone and prevent fractures in older women with osteoporosis, a common cause of disability among the elderly, according to a study.

Danish doctors who tested the medicine, called etidronate, found that while it halted the loss of bone in the spine, it did not affect bones in other parts of the body.

An estimated 15 million to 20 million Americans have osteoporosis. The condition is blamed for 1.3 million fractures annually in people over age 45. It is especially common among older women, when their bodies make less estrogen after menopause.

The research, directed by Dr. Tommy Storm at Sundby Hospital in Copenhagen, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. It was financed by Procter & Gamble's Norwich Eaton Pharmaceuticals, which makes etidronate.

The doctors performed a three-year comparison study on 66 women who ranged from age 56 to 75. When it was over, they found that the vertebral bone mineral content of those who got the drug increased 7 percent. But it decreased 3 percent in a comparison group who got dummy pills. The number of vertebral fractures also decreased substantially in the etidronate group.

Antibody protects

WASHINGTON (AP) — A synthetic version of an AIDS virus fragment may be tested later this year to determine if it can protect unborn babies from developing AIDS.

Dr. Arye Rubinstein, professor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, said studies in his lab have shown that mothers infected with human immunodefiency virus (HIV), which causes AIDS, will not pass the disease to their unborn if their immune system develops a particular type of antibody.

AUBURN AUTOMOBILE CO. AUBURN, IND. (1931-1936)

"Dual Ratio" was a unique feature found on 1932 Auburns and again on the 1933 models. Originated and introduced by Auburn, Dual Ratio was another concept of the two-speed rear axle, which lent twice as many gear ranges to the three-speed transmission.

In the old days, two-speed rear axles were sold as an accessory for some cars — usually as a luxury or high-performance option — but they were not as reliable as a conventional one-speed differential and not as good as the overdrive transmission that was soon to come. A complicated dual-speed differential often led to trouble down the road. Auburn is one of very few makes that ever offered a two-speed rear end as a stock factory item.

Since the totally restyled 1931 Auburn (with a look not unlike the Cord L-29) was such a great success, the same look was continued in 1932 and 1933. However, extra-cost 1933 "Salon" models had new horizontal pieces in the V-shaped grille, as well as dual trumpet horns below the headlights, V-windshields and broadcloth upholstery in sedans, and other niceties that more than justified the slightly higher price.

Auburn's piece de resistance in the 1930s was, of course, the famous Speedster, a long, powerful-looking roadster with a "boat-tail" rear deck. (The 1932 and 1936 Speedsters were shown, some time ago, in this series.) The sedan is of less value to collectors than the various convertible models; yet, some collectors select closed cars as a matter of choice, as they are generally safer and easier to maintain (no convertible top to wear out).

Other interesting features of the 1933 Auburn: Bendix B-K vacuum-operated power brakes (on Salon V-12s) and hydraulic brakes on all models. "Silent-second" transmission was used, and there was "Free-Wheeling," a coasting device used briefly in the early '30s until outlawed. The Bijur automatic chassis lubrication system was a feature of convenience offered by several quality cars in the 1920s; during the early '30s it was less frequently seen.

The "X-plus-A" steel chassis frame was sturdier than usual and considered twice as rigid as the previous year's basic X-frame.

Straight-8 Auburns had a 127-inch wheelbase, with 133 inches for the V-12s. It was written then that the new Auburn, priced well under $2,000, was just about the most car you could get for your money!

During the 1930s, both Auburn and Duesenberg were subsidiaries of Cord. Auburn went out of production after 1936, with Cord and Duesenberg calling it quits in '37. A "1938" Duesenberg was built, however, using leftover chassis parts and a new custom body. Years later, Auburn, Cord and Duesenberg were revived, in highly limited production.
