Fort Worth reacts

FORT WORTH — City leaders Monday began mapping their strategy for the future of Carswell Air Force Base following confirmation that the base will be closed. On Monday, U.S. Rep Pete Geren, D-Fort Worth, asked the General Accounting Office to determine the cost-effectiveness of keeping the base's Thompson Hospital open for military retirees. Geren has argued the hospital's closure would cost the federal government an additional $34 million in medical costs for military retirees./2D

Agent Orange link

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs on Monday said Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange could receive disability benefits for a nerve disease, but denied links between the herbicide and lung cancer. The VA also put off a decision on whether diabetes is related to Agent Orange exposure, waiting for a National Academy of Sciences study.

Smokers' wrinkles

A new study has confirmed that people who smoke are more susceptible to facial wrinkles than nonsmokers. The study, by Dr. Donald P. Kadunce, a dermatologist and five colleagues at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center, involved 109 smokers and 23 people who had never smoked, all between the ages of 35 and 59. The scientists used photographs to assess facial wrinkling.

Dick Clark tells

DALLAS — A prosecutor curious about Dick Clark's age took advantage of the perfect opportunity to get the truth — and nothing but the truth — from the nation's oldest teen-ager. Clark, host of "American Bandstand," appeared last week in U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders' courtroom as a character witness for a defendant in an investment fraud trial. When it came time to cross-examine Clark, Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Webster said, "Since I have you under oath, my wife told me to ask, 'How old are you?' " "Sixty-one," replied Clark as jurors broke into laughter.

TV's Michael Landon succumbs to cancer

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Michael Landon, the boyishly handsome actor who battled cancer with the same affability he brought to roles in "Bonanza" and "Little House on the Prairie," died Monday. He was 54.

Landon, who had disclosed his illness less than three months ago, died at his ranch in this coastal city, said Ronne Schmidt, a receptionist for Landon's attorney, Jay Eller.

Landon, who also starred in the TV series "Highway to Heaven" and whose career was jammed with writing, producing and directing credits, was set to start work on the new CBS series "US" when he was diagnosed with liver and pancreatic cancer on April

Shevardnadze-led group forms new Soviet party

MOSCOW (NYT) — A group of prominent Soviet citizens led by former Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze announced the formation of a new political opposition movement Monday intended to mount a nationwide challenge to the Communist Party.

"There is no time to wait any longer," the group, the Movement of Democratic Reforms, declared in issuing an impassioned plea to potential members to put aside their differences and unite against Communist hard-liners. "Passivity and divisiveness, endless argument and antagonism are working toward catastrophe."

Notable in the founding group was Aleksandr N. Yakovlev, senior adviser to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and one of the architects of his perestroika program for national economic and political restructuring.

Although Yakovlev's role in the Kremlin has been muted in the last few years, his decision to take such a public step was instantly a focus

Bush picks 'wild card'

Conservative draws high court nomination

■ Three Texans were among finalists, but the president instead chooses federal appeals court Judge Clarence Thomas.

N.Y. Times News Service

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush on Monday nominated Clarence Thomas, a conservative Republican with a scanty judicial record on civil rights and abortion, to replace retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall on the Supreme Court.

If confirmed, the 43-year-old U.S. appeals court judge for the District of Columbia circuit would follow Marshall as the second black judge to ascend to the court.

But Thomas, who has risen in Republican ranks as an advocate of bootstrap conservatism, would present a striking change from Marshall, a civil rights pioneer and an anchor of the court's declining liberal faction. With his selection, Bush focused attention on the future direction of the court and the political implications the nomination might have for the 1992 presidential election.

The nomination appears to be a wild card both for conservatives and liberals. His views on major issues before the court, including abortion, church-state relations and the definition of constitutional due process, are unknown.

Bush insisted Monday the nomination was entirely based on merit, but it came amid a rich swirl of political speculation.

Over the weekend, the White House had actively encouraged the impression Bush would appoint a Hispanic judge, a step that could bolster Republican gains among Hispanic voters in Texas, Florida and California.

In choosing a black nominee, Bush seemed to be aiming toward the less ambitious goal of insulating himself against

Judge's road: pride against prejudices

By Dan Freedman and Faith Keenan

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — For Clarence Thomas, the road that led to the summer White House and his nomination Monday to be the Supreme Court's 106th justice began in Pinpoint, Ga., in a home that lacked indoor plumbing and had a wood-burning stove for heat.

His father left when he was 2 years old; his mother worked as a maid for $20 a week and moonlighted at a nearby crab cannery.

A fire destroyed his home, and his mother sent him to live in Savannah, where his grandfather Myers Anderson and a few strict nuns taught him the value of hard work and perseverance.

Later, after graduating from Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass., he left Savannah for his first year at Yale University law school with nothing but a $50 bill in his shoe and a bucket of chicken for the long trip north.

On Monday, Thomas, 43, choked back tears as he thanked those in his life who "were adamant that I grow up to make something of myself."

The self that Thomas has made goes well beyond the dimensions of a Horatio Alger tale of pluck.

Army warns secessionists; Yugoslav cease-fire shaky

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (NYT) — Yugoslavia's fragile cease-fire appeared increasingly shaky Monday night after the army high command warned Slovenia, the secessionist republic at the center of the nation's crisis, to stop harassing army units.

The tensions arose a day after the nation's prime minister said the Yugoslav army had been ordered back to its barracks to ease the confrontation.

The army's new warning, released in a statement in Belgrade, the capital, accused Slovenia of refusing to allow food and water to military units and said army officers and their families were being seized and mistreated.

The army statement, released through the official news agency Tanyug, was all the more striking because it came after a meeting of the country's collective presidency, which along with the military is officially under the command of a Croatian, Stipe Mesic. It was after Mesic was officially granted his seat that the army was ordered back to its barracks.

Officials consider water rate increase to pay for pipeline

By Brian Pearson

Staff Writer

Midland water customers could begin footing the bill for a 155-mile pipeline from the O.H. Ivie Reservoir as early as this year, a city official said Monday.

Assistant utility director Ken Jones said officials are considering an increase in water rates, a reduction in the discount rate or a combination of the two.

City councilmen last week approved a resolution supporting the Colorado River Municipal Water District's sale of bonds to construct the $100 million pipeline. Midland's share of the cost is about $35 million, Jones said.

The city is considering five options that will pay off its end of the pipeline cost over the next 20 years, Jones said.

One option, he said, would be to raise the water rate, while another would be to reduce or eliminate the

Former partner discusses breakup with Navratilova

By Thomas Edward Korosec

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — Judy Nelson, who is suing tennis star Martina Navratilova for breach of a "non-marital cohabitation agreement," says she went to court only after she was threatened with being cut off and given nothing.

"Martina's attorneys told me: 'We'll kill you. We will put you through so much you can't stand it. We can give you nothing and make you wait,' " Nelson said in a wide-ranging interview Sunday with the Star-Telegram.

Over the past week, Nelson has broken her self-imposed ban on interviews and talked to such media as People magazine and NBC Sports, which broadcast a tearful nine-minute taped interview Sunday during its coverage of the Wimbledon tennis tournament.

Brushing aside any suggestion that the interviews were timed to distract Navratilova during the defense of her Wimbledon single's crown, Nelson's attorney, Jerry Loftin, said that the media and Navratilova compelled her to speak out at this time.

"People said they had answers to questions from Martina and they wanted Judy to give her side," Loftin said. "Until now we have turned down hundreds of requests."

Nelson, dressed in a sleeveless white summer outfit and sitting in a leather chair at Loftin's Fort Worth office, was composed as she talked to the Star-Telegram about everything from how the breakup of her seven-year relationship with the Czech-born tennis ace wound up in court to how Fort Worth reacted to a same-sex couple.

Since Navratilova moved out of the couple's home in Aspen, Colo., in February, the two never have sat down directly and tried to work out a settlement, Nelson said.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Wednesday is expected to be mostly cloudy with a high around 90 and a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms.

On Independence Day, the outlook calls for partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thunderstorms, a low in the mid-60s and a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 67, Tuesday's high was 89 compared with the record high for that date of 105 in 1989. The record low for today's date was 60 set in 1936.

STATE

The remnants of an upper-level low pressure system over Mexico combined with temperatures near 100 to fuel showers and thunderstorms across Texas on Monday.

Severe thunderstorms were reported Monday afternoon in East Texas, South Texas and southern portions of West Texas. Lighter showers fell in the Panhandle and South Plains.

Winds gusted to 69 mph shortly before 6 p.m. from a storm that hit the Jefferson County Airport near Port Arthur.

The Beaumont police department reported a funnel cloud over the western part of the city at 5:50 p.m., but it retreated into the clouds.

Skies were cloudy in South Texas, with afternoon temperatures reaching into the 90s over most of the region. However, the mercury only made it into the 80s along the Rio Grande. More showers are expected in South Texas through Wednesday.

Sunny to partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures characterized the weather across North Texas on Monday, as high pressure dominated the weather. Winds were around 5 mph in the eastern locations and 10 to 15 mph elsewhere.

Temperatures were in the mid-90s across West Texas in mid-afternoon Monday, with Abilene reporting the coolest reading, an even 90 degrees. Widely scattered thunderstorms are expected in West Texas through Wednesday.

NATION

Thunderstorms lashed parts of the nation's midsection with heavy rain Monday.

The storms also spawned a tornado in Wisconsin, causing minor damage and one injury in the Milwaukee suburb of Germantown, the National Weather Service said.

A thunderstorm with damaging winds and heavy rain dropped hail up to 1 inch in diameter near Foxport, Ky. Trees fell, and the storm dumped 1½ inches of rain on the area in an hour.

Thunderstorms also developed over other parts of the nation during the morning. At midday, rainshowers and thunderstorms extended from Florida through Texas, up through the Midwest and along the East Coast to western Virginia.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at 1 p.m. CDT included 1.35 inches at Fort Myers, Fla.

NOMINEE: Anti-abortion groups hail the choice

(From 1A)

along political lines, with civil rights groups and some Democrats on the Senate Judiciary Committee promising a tough grilling.

Anti-abortion groups hailed the choice, in the apparent belief that Thomas' generally conservative views would lead him to vote for reversal of the 1973 ruling that women have a Constitutional right to abortion.

White House aides said they expected a tough fight over confirmation, but on Capitol Hill there was a widespread feeling that barring some unforeseen scandal, most senators would find it hard to vote against a black nominee backed by a popular president.

Bush said he had nominated Thomas, the conservative former chairman of the Equal Opportunity Commission, because he was "the best man" for the job. Unlike Marshall, who had long been a hero to civil rights groups, Thomas had often alienated those groups with his positions opposing affirmative action, quotas and timetables.

"I don't feel he's a quota," Bush said, standing with an uneasy-looking Thomas in front of the weather-beaten shingled cottage that serves as Bush's office. "I expressed my respect for the ground that Mr. Justice Marshall plowed, but I don't feel there should be a black seat on the court or an ethnic seat on the court."

Bush and Thomas struck the theme the White House hopes will negate the inevitable criticism by civil rights groups about the nominee's dismissal of affirmative action as "social engineering." Thomas' life was offered as inspiring proof that minority members can pull themselves up from rough beginnings without special favors.

"If credit accrues to him for coming up through a tough life as a minority in this country, so much the better," Bush said as he took pains to characterize the nomination as one in which race was an incidental factor. Bush added with apparent feeling: "It proves he can do it, get the job done. And so that does nothing but enhance the court, in my view."

When Thomas stepped up to the microphone, his hands clasped tightly in front of him, he had to stop speaking twice, as he tried to thank his grandparents, sharecroppers from rural Georgia, who had raised him in a tenement with no indoor plumbing.

"As a child, I could not dare dream that I would ever see the Supreme Court, not to mention be nominated to it," he said. "Indeed, my most vivid childhood memory of a Supreme Court was the 'Impeach Earl Warren' signs which lined Highway 17 near Savannah. I didn't quite understand who this Earl Warren fellow was, but I knew he was in some kind of trouble."

"I thank all of those who helped me along the way, and who have helped me to this point and this moment in my life, especially my grandparents, my mother and the nuns, all of whom were adamant that I grow up to make something of myself," Thomas added.

ROAD: Nominee turns experience into credo

placing the first, Justice Thurgood Marshall — has turned his life experience into a credo: To achieve equal status with whites, blacks must become self-reliant and not depend on artificial legal devices such as affirmative action for a leg up.

Or, as he wrote in the Wall Street Journal in 1987: "I firmly insist that the Constitution be interpreted in a colorblind fashion. Hence, I emphasize black self-help, as opposed to racial quotas and other race-conscious legal devices that only further and deepen the original problem."

Such views won Thomas headlines between 1982 and 1990 when he served as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, a post he used as a bully pulpit against affirmative action programs to boost minority hiring and promotions.

These views spring from the Savannah that Thomas knew in the 1950s, a place that he told one interviewer consisted of "two different worlds: the white and the black. A world where a sign at the North Carolina border read 'The United Klan of America Welcomes You.'"

Thomas caught the attention of his teachers at the all-black grade school of St. Benedict the Moor in Savannah.

"When you stood in a classroom in Savannah, you saw little opportunity for them," said Sister Mary Aquin Donnellan, who taught Thomas in seventh grade. "You dreamed, but you never thought the dream would be fulfilled."

Thomas was dedicated — a hard worker, respectful and dependable — and he never arrived late for altar boy duty at 7 a.m. mass, she said.

Other former teachers and classmates also remember the judge as a good student and athlete.

"He would have been the star jock of the whole school," said Walter Eubanks, a former high school classmate who now lives in Augusta, Ga. "He was good at everything — sportswise, academically and in social relationships. He would have been a standout in any school."

Even Latin did not stump Thomas, said the Rev. John Fitzpatrick, who taught the killer subject at St. John Vianney Seminary, where Thomas attended high school.

BREAKUP: Nelson breaks her ban on interviews

(From 1A)

Negotiations over how the couple would divvy up the $5 million to $10 million at stake in the breakup went on during the spring between Nelson and her attorneys and Navratilova's agent and attorneys at International Management Group, a sports agency based in Cleveland.

The agency managed and controlled the couple's assets, which include three Aspen homes and expensive properties in Fort Worth.

"I would like very much to sit down and settle it with Martina, but I understand more than anyone that her schedule hasn't allowed it," Nelson said.

"Once tennis starts in January it becomes a way of life, the focus of her and everyone around her. It's not something she can turn on and off.

"I understand the emotional energy required of her, but at the same time, I want to get on with my life."

Nelson said Navratilova and her agency have cut her off from all financial support since February. "They have frozen me out," she said. "I have no income coming in. No money. No anything. I live in the house (in the Starwood section of Aspen), and thank goodness that is paid for."

Attempts to reach Navratilova's Dallas lawyers and Los Angeles publicist were unsuccessful.

Nelson said she filed suit only after Navratilova's manager and attorneys told her, in essence, that they held the high cards because they control the fortune.

"That's what put me at the point where I'm at," she said, referring to her filing suit June 4 against Navratilova. Her subsequent agreement to postpone court proceedings until September after the U.S. Open "only hurts me," she said.

Nelson acknowledged that people may view her as less than Navratilova's equal in terms of money, fame and career success, but she said the agreement the two signed was to ensure that such thinking didn't affect their relationship.

"Earning power never entered into it," she said. "When two people come into a relationship, how can you say if your earning power is greater than mine, then you are entitled to more benefits in this relationship? What we were both saying is we are both giving this everything we've got."

Beyond that, she said she did a great deal off the court to help Navratilova's on-court performance.

"She doesn't do this alone," Nelson said. "Yes, she hits the tennis ball, but there is so much else. You have to look at her career. Martina was not always disciplined, well-trained or well-coached.

"She didn't win as much. Her success began with training, eating right, having people teaching her how to focus, having people being emotional supports for her, with people being sounding boards for her, with people taking all of the responsibilities around her.

"I was all of those things."

The deeply tanned Nelson went on: "She began to become the player that she is when one person took all of that in and assumed all of that responsibility. I did that."

Nelson, who said she was in Fort Worth for the week to watch one of her two sons play baseball, touched on a number of other issues during her hourlong conversation.

On Fort Worth's attitudes toward her and Navratilova during the six years they lived in the city before moving to Aspen in November 1989:

"Fort Worth is a very conservative town. It has its own guidelines, and I think nothing like that had ever happened here. They were shocked at first, but after the sensationalism died down people saw that, well, Judy isn't any different. Martina is certainly a good and kind person who has interest in the community."

LANDON: Actor disclosed his illness 3 months ago

(From 1A)

5.

"I think every little moment gets more important after something like this," a stoic but congenial Landon said after he learned he was terminally ill. "It's not like I've missed a hell of a lot. I've had a pretty good lick here."

With Landon's passing, the only surviving original "Bonanza" cast member is Pernell Roberts. His manager, Brian Rix, said Roberts was "deeply grieved by Michael's death."

Liver and pancreas cancer is almost always fatal and often isn't diagnosed until in advanced stages. Landon had been treated with experimental therapy, including intravenus injections of bubbles of fat that contained a cancer-fighting drug. He also had been given coffee enemas to relieve intestinal irritation.

"If I'm gonna die, death's gonna have to do a lot of fighting to get me," Landon said in an interview with Life magazine. "I'm not just gonna lie down and let it happen."

He joked about his cancer treatments, saying he hoped he wouldn't lose his trademark curly locks.

And in his last television appearance, on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" on May 9, he asked the studio audience if anyone had ever taken a coffee enema and someone said yes. Landon replied: "You must be fun to have breakfast with."

"I think you have to have a sense of humor about everything," Landon said in an earlier news conference. "I think 'Highway to Heaven' helped me with that since I played a dead guy anyway."

Brandon Tartikoff, former NBC entertainment president, said: "I think he fought the fight about as well and courageously as it could be fought. He did it with dignity and determination and I'm just sad I won't be seeing him."

As a producer and performer, Landon favored non-violent, humanistic dramas looking at life, death, family and calamity. Behind the scenes, however, he was known as an outspoken stickler who alienated colleagues with inflexible demands.

He said his attraction to uplifting television was prompted by a miserable childhood.

"It's because my family background was so different," he said a few years ago. "It was filled with religious prejudice, a judgmental upbringing and lots of silence. My parents went for weeks without speaking. I created family relationships where people stay together because they communicate."

Born Eugene Maurice Orowitz to show-business parents Eli Orowitz and Peggy O'Neill in New York City, Landon spent much of his childhood coping with a suicidal mother and fighting in and being kicked out of school.

He graduated second from last in a high school class of 301.

A believer in Samsonian legend, Landon considered his long hair the source of his power. At a time when crew cuts were in vogue, Landon was cornered by several USC athletes who gave him an unsolicited haircut. Landon claimed his javelin tosses promptly slipped 50 feet, and while trying to regain his distance he injured his arm.

SHAKY: Yugoslav army issues warning to Slovenia

(From 1A)

Fierce fighting flared last week between the Yugoslav army and Slovenian militia units after Slovenia and Croatia, the two northernmost republics in Yugoslavia and the richest regions in this multiethnic nation, issued declarations of independence.

Although the nation's central government called both declarations illegal, the authorities in Belgrade have so far taken no action against Croatia.

The move to send the army back to its barracks, some of which are in Slovenia, and the rest of the cease-fire accord were negotiated with the help of the European Community. Those governments intervened Friday, helping to broker a truce out of fear Yugoslavia would be consumed by violence among its six feuding republics and two autonomous provinces.

The fighting began last Wednesday after Serbia, the largest of the nation's republics and the dominant force in the Yugoslav military, made clear it would use force to hold the federation together and prevent Slovenia from setting up border checkpoints and taking other steps toward autonomy.

Serbia is dominated by a reconstituted version of the Communist Party, which governed until the collapse of communism in Eastern Euorpe.

Much of the military high command is drawn from longtime communist cadres. The Slovenian and Croatian leaderships that emerged after post-Cold-War elections are more Western-leaning and intensely nationalistic.

Croatia's succession effort has caused other tensions. Although the army has yet to act in the republic, Croatia's large Serbian minority has made it clear it will fight the Croats to remain part of Yugoslavia.

It is unclear to what extent the military remains under civilian control. Sunday, national Prime Minister Ante Markovic said the army's move to prevent Slovenia from seceding from Yugoslavia was undertaken without his knowledge or consent.

In its statement Monday, the army high command said its units were in full combat readiness and that further harassment of its units by the Slovene militia would be met by a major use of military force.

"Any kind of threat will be responded to with a massive and vigorous strike," the statement said.

PIPELINE: Water customers could begin footing bill

(From 1A)

10 percent discount. Other options would be combinations of the two, he said.

The City Council could vote on an option sometime this year, he said.

"The sooner you raise the water rate the less you have to raise them," Jones said.

Customers now pay $1.85 per 1,000 gallons but receive a 10 percent discount if they pay their bills on time.

Construction on the pipeline, which will bring water to almost a half million West Texans, is scheduled to begin next March and end by Jan. 1, 1995, Jones said. The $100 million bill also includes construction of pumping stations to move the water uphill.

Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, Snyder and San Angelo water lines will be hooked into the pipe, which will supply Midland with 65 million gallons of water daily.

Ernest Lillard, a Colorado River Municipal Water District administrative assistant, said O.H. Ivie Reservoir, which was completed early last year, is filling up.

"We're very pleased with the way it's catching water," Lillard said. "We've got a good supply of water and that's good because some of the entities need it earlier than we initially thought."

Water now covers about 7,500 acres of the 19,200-acre lake, he said. The reservoir cost $70 million to construct.

Lillard said the water district now is working to acquire right of way for the pipeline.

"We don't anticipate any problems with that," Lillard said. "I'm sure somewhere along that 155 miles we will run into somebody who disagrees with it, but I don't anticipate any major problems."

Jones, meanwhile, said a 25-acre retention pond being built in northwest Midland to hold O.H. Ivie Reservoir water is about half finished.

Construction of the $5 million pond, which was started in January, should be completed this fall, well ahead of the initial date of December, he said.

The pond will give the city an additional 94 million gallons of storage capacity, with much of the water coming from O.H. Ivie Reservoir.

Between 60 percent and 65 percent of the city's water comes from E.V. Spence Reservoir and Lake Thomas, while the rest comes from Martin County well water. O.H. Ivie Reservoir could provide up to 40 percent of Midland's water in the future, city officials said.

A $10.6 million facelift of Midland's water purification plant was finished earlier this year, raising its processing capacity from 12 million to 32 million gallons.

"There are a still a few new-car bugs in it," Jones said. "But the plant itself is 95 percent."

The facility, finished almost three months ahead of schedule, will not approach its capacity until O.H. Ivie Reservoir water begins flowing, Jones said.

The upgraded plant, complete with a new disinfection process required by the Environmental Protection Agency, will be more efficient and have a higher filtration rate, Jones said.

The facility also has 9½ million gallons of storage capacity, compared with the 4½ million gallons before the renovations began.

Water district officials said water quality should improve substantially by the year's end after a $7 million retention lake is constructed near Big Spring.

Colorado River and Beals Creek, officials said, are sources of high chloride levels found in E.V. Spence Reservoir.

Contractors are working to divert the flow of those naturally salty water sources to a draw about 20 miles east of Big Spring. The draw is being widened and deepened to become a 1,465-acre lake.

PARTY: Group intends to challenge Communists

(From 1A)

for the question of how Gorbachev, the head of the Communist Party, might deal with the new movement.

Shevardnadze, in announcing the political initiative, said he had not discussed it with Gorbachev but would not exclude the possibility that the Soviet leader could offer a "controversial" reaction.

The founding members of the new group include some of the most popular anti-Communist insurgents in the nation, including Mayors Gavriil K. Popov of Moscow and Anatoly A. Sobchak of Leningrad, figures who led the insurgents to their early anti-Communist victories in the cities.

But notably absent was Boris N. Yeltsin, the nation's leading dissident and the newly elected president of Russia.

An increasingly canny political practitioner, Yeltsin on Monday was busy visiting constituents out in Siberia. But the founding signers of the new movement included the man he picked as his vice president, Aleksandr Rutskoy, a military hero and leader of a movement to democratize the Communist Party.

The other founders of the group were identified as Stanislav S. Shatalin, one of the creators of last year's "500-day" plan for a rapid move to the free market; Ivan S. Silayev, prime minister of Russia; Nikolai Y. Petrakov, a prominent reform economist, and Arkady I. Volsky, a scholar.

It was not clear what formal name the group would settle on, although there was one reference in the statement to the "Movement of Democratic Reforms."

The seven-page statement of intent, signed with a flourish by the founders, outlined an initial strategy to enlist not only insurgents but also wayward Communists.

They lately have been fleeing the party at the rate of more than 2,000 a day, while millions of others have stopped paying party dues.

The Shevardnadze group said an organizational committee would soon be created to prepare by mid-September for the movement's inaugural conference for unifying non-Communist forces.

States enter new year without budget; Maine must shut down

Associated Press

Angry state workers in Maine rallied outside the capitol Monday, demanding paychecks and a state budget, after the governor shut down all non-essential services in a fiscal showdown with the Legislature.

At least eight other states entered the new fiscal year without budgets. In one of them, Connecticut, the governor threatened to follow Maine's example.

"We want to be paid! We want a budget!" shouted some of the 200 or so idled Maine workers who were held back from the office of Gov. John R. McKernan by two police officers.

Deriding the governor, they also chanted, "Stop hiding, Jock" and "Impeach McKernan."

Budget negotiations continued in Maine, and in Connecticut, California, Ohio, Massachusetts, Louisiana, Pennsylvania, North Carolina and Illinois.

Nevada, New Jersey, Washington state and New York City reached agreement on budgets within minutes of their midnight Sunday deadlines.

Late budgets are a tradition in some states, but this has been a particularly difficult year for most. Debates have raged over such tough choices as imposing new taxes, cutting welfare benefits and laying off workers.

New York City balanced its $28.7 billion budget only by laying off 10,000 city workers. New Jersey's new $14.7 billion state budget could force the layoffs of 2,300 workers.

"Of course, this budget reflects a lot more pain and a lot less gain than any of us would like," New York Mayor David Dinkins said after reaching an 11th hour agreement with the City Council.

Final agreement on the city's budget remained elusive Monday. The council said it had never seen some of the figures the mayor's office said had been agreed to. And union leaders said Dinkins betrayed them when he refused their proposals for avoiding some layoffs.

Among those who already have received pink slips: 12 horses, along with 183 urban rangers who patrolled the city's parks.

"They were the perfect ambassadors for the city," lamented Alexander Brash, chief of the urban parks services, as he peered into one of the horse's stalls on Monday.

In California, Gov. Pete Wilson waited for final legislative approval of a $55 billion budget that would be balanced with the biggest tax increase in state history and the state's first cuts in welfare. Wilson has proposed $7 billion in tax increases.

The Legislature has approved major portions of the budget, but has yet to reach agreement on proposals to limit tax deductions for the wealthy, cap mortgage interest deductions and impose a 2 percent utility tax.

In Maine, McKernan declared a state of civil emergency after the Legislature failed to meet the budget deadline.

Telephone calls to the governor's office in Augusta were met with a recording: "Due to the close-down of Maine state government, no one is available to answer your call right now. Please call again."

Inside, while top aides and department heads huddled, McKernan met with reporters to reassert his opposition to taxes without reductions in business insurance costs.

About 2,000 state employees remained at work in jobs that protect the public health and safety. These included prison guards and state police. But more than 10,000 other state workers were told to stay home.

"We hope this impasse is going to be resolved as quickly as possible, and we want to get back to the normal operation of government," the governor said.

Earlier Monday, lawmakers happily recessed a session that had begun on Saturday. They returned later in the day.

Before recessing, Democrats in both houses pushed through a one-year budget, although in a form that would not take effect immediately. Republican McKernan, whose biggest dispute with the Legislature is over workers compensation, promised to veto it.

Connecticut's Legislature began work on crafting a huge tax increase — $1 billion or more — that will satisfy independent Gov. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. and avert a partial shutdown of state government.

Weicker originally threatened to shut down non-essential government services at midnight Sunday, but he gave the Legislature a 24-hour reprieve after vetoing a budget that passed late Sunday.

DEAR ABBY

Mom struggles with sentence of silence while dad's in jail

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Do you believe that a child who is 6½ years old should be told the truth, regardless of what it is?

Van Buren

Here is the situation: Dad is in jail for one year. Please understand, my husband didn't steal anything, nor did he commit a violent crime. However, he was found guilty of driving drunk — it was his third offense. If you think our son should be told the truth, how do you feel about my taking him to visit his father in jail? Or do you think it would be better to tell him that Daddy is away "on business" and he may be gone for quite a long time?

I can't describe the humiliation our family has endured. It was reported in the newspaper, but this is a large city and not everyone is aware of it. — WITHHOLD MY NAME, PLEASE

DEAR WITHHOLD: I think you should tell your son the truth, and tell him now, before someone else does. I also believe that you should take the boy to visit his father — for his sake as well as for his father's.

These are troubled times for your family. But it is not the end of the world. And this too shall pass.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this letter without my wife's knowledge. She wears makeup all day, and she never takes it off before going to bed. Instead, she washes her face in the morning, then applies her makeup for that day.

She has a very nice complexion, but I wonder if she is doing damage to her skin by sleeping in her makeup every night. — HER HUSBAND

DEAR HUSBAND: I consulted Dr. Arnold Klein, top-notch Beverly Hills dermatologist, who said (much to my surprise), "Sleeping in makeup does no more damage to the skin than wearing makeup all day. Many women feel that in the interest of 'cleanliness' they need to scrub their faces daily with the same vigor they would use in scrubbing their kitchen floor. And please, tell your readers that exposure to the sun without a sunscreen, plus the ordinary pollutants in the air, do far more damage to a woman's skin than cosmetics."

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from the director of the Elder Health Program at the University of Maryland. She advised people to take responsibility for their own health care.

I work in a doctor's office, and you would be amazed at the number of people who call in for refills on their medicines and don't even know the names of them. They ask for "blood pressure pills," or "the little yellow ones." Granted, we have their medications recorded on their charts, but that won't help them if they're in an accident and unable to speak.

Everyone who takes medication, elderly and young alike, should write down the names and dosages on a piece of paper and keep it in their wallets. And every time the doctor changes the dosage or adds a new medication, the patient should make note of it on the paper he or she carries. Also write down any allergies on the same paper.

Help us health givers keep you healthy. — JUDY G., ORMAND BEACH, FLA.

Tall people trade tall tales at convention

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — Don't you hate it when the tallest person in a crowded movie theater sits in front of you?

But if it weren't for tall-types there probably wouldn't be push-back seats in theaters or adjustable tilt steering wheels in cars.

About 300 tall people from around the United States, Canada and Europe — men towering at least 6-feet-2 and women at least 5-feet-10 — met Sunday for the annual International Tall Club convention.

Since the first Tall Club began 53 years ago, members have lobbied for mass production of king-size beds, special theater seats and the tilting steering wheels.

Convention-goers sported T-shirts flaunting their height such as, "Kiss someone tall, it's worth the climb" and "You have to be at least 5-foot-10 to ride this ride."

When a short person asked 6-foot-9 Uwe Seyler if he played basketball, the 50-year-old German peered down and answered back, "No. Do you play miniature golf?"

Susan Hopkins, Miss Tall Orange County, who is 6 feet, said she and her cohorts play softball every year with members of Short People of America but are used to losing.

"They always win because their strike zone is so small we end up walking the whole team," she said.

Although tall tales were in abundance at the convention, many participants confessed they grew up feeling like misfits who were cramped in classroom desks and had to have special clothes made for them.

But they said the greatest change the clubs have made is in the self-image of tall people.

"We've learned to capitalize on a God-given gift — our height," said 6-foot Susan La Pierre of Philadelphia.

Baseball richer after changes

The suspense has broken. A major league baseball committee recommends that Miami and Denver be awarded National League teams, leaving the four other finalists — Buffalo, Orlando, Tampa-St. Petersburg and Washington — in baseball despair.

The decision was unromantically commercial. Deep pockets. Deep market. Those were the commonly heard phrases as baseball lovers (some of them jilted) talked about the decision recently.

Both winning cities brought financial resources to bear when it counted. Denver, more than 600 miles from the nearest team (Kansas City), will be the only draw in mountain time and will hold a captive multi-state audience.

It is backed by the Adolph Coors Co. and a broad ownership group. Miami is similarly well situated: Gateway to the baseball-crazed Caribbean, its team should easily fill a baseball stadium — steamy heat, hurricanes and all. It is supported by the very deep pockets of H. Wayne Huizenga, the retail video king.

Miami and Denver may have been the best financial bets. But baseball is heart, too.

The heart might have been tempted to take the leap with St. Petersburg, which built the Suncoast Dome in a wildly expensive effort to attract the big time.

The heart went out to Washington, too, that teamless capital of this baseball nation that has only politics to divert its citizens until the Redskins start preseason games.

And it ached for dark-horse Buffalo, Queen City of the Great Lakes, which so loves the sport that the minor league Bisons draw fans as heavily as teams in the majors.

But this was a task for money men, not romantics. The romance now will have to come from the field, once the owners ratify the choice of Denver and Miami (or Miami and Denver) as the 27th and 28th teams in major league baseball. One way or another, baseball will be richer.

OTHER VIEWS

Officials against women in combat

Military officials appearing before a Senate subcommittee left no doubt they oppose sending women into combat. They exercised diplomacy in expressing their views.

The chiefs of staff were commenting on an amendment by Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo, added without debate to the 1991 defense authorization bill. It would repeal the ban on women in aircraft engaged in combat missions.

Feminists have pushed for removal of the no-combat policy, claiming it would open up career opportunities for women in the military. But arguments against the change abound. If women were eligible for combat, all women of draft age would be subject to conscription if the military draft were renewed, because its purpose is to raise combat personnel. It's doubtful most young women want this.

Approval of the Schroeder amendment could open to assignment of women to all combat jobs, not just those aboard aircraft. It's doubtful most Americans want this.

— The Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City

Judge decides women don't belong at VMI

A federal judge decided ... that women do not belong in the quasi-military atmosphere of Virginia Military Institute, a 152-year-old, public college nestled in Virginia's Shenandoah Valley.

Perhaps Judge Kiser hasn't been paying attention to the U.S. citizens who served as soldiers in the recent Gulf War. Thirty-three thousand of these citizen-soldiers, five of the combat-related casualties and two of the prisoners-of-war were women. Try telling those soldiers they don't belong in a military setting.

What damage would coeducation do to VMI? According to Judge Kiser: "The presence of women would tend to distract male students from their studies. It would also increase pressure relating to dating which would damage the esprit de corps and the egalitarian atmosphere which are critical elements of the VMI experience."

That's the kind of argument once used to keep women out of the military — and many all-male colleges — altogether. Given the increasingly coeducational nature of the armed forces and their service academies, Judge Kiser and VMI are bucking the trend with their insistence that an all-male military experience should be preserved at taxpayer expense.

Black Beret chief has many enemies

RIGA, Latvia — The man who heads the dreaded Soviet Black Berets here may have felt immune from repercussions for the acts of his commandos. He was Moscow's man on the scene and the local communists kowtowed to him. But Capt. Cheslav Mlynik underestimated the depth of hatred for him and his men. On May 4, someone snuck into his secured apartment building and shot him in the chest.

Anderson

Now, while Mlynik recuperates behind the triple-locked and guarded door of his apartment, the Soviets have hushed up the incident. But word of mouth is spreading the news through Latvia, where few tears are being shed over Mlynik. The only question is who of the many enemies of the Black Berets would want the captain dead. Mlynik and his not-so-merry band of men have killed at least six unarmed pro-independence Latvians since January, and before that they amused themselves shooting up the freedom-loving people of other Soviet republics including Georgia and Azerbaijan.

We talked our way into Mlynik's apartment building in downtown Riga, but couldn't get past the bodyguard at his door. Mlynik was hiding out while recuperating from the shooting, and would not tell his version of the story. But we pieced it together in interviews with his own men and Latvian officials.

Before Mlynik joined the Black Berets, the group started out with honor. The Black Berets' official title is Otriad Militsii Osobogo Naznachenia, or OMON for short. It means "Militia Special Mission Squad." It was formed as an elite counter-terrorist force to provide security for the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympics. But any noble purpose disintegrated in the Afghanistan conflict where the OMON troops were used to terrorize and murder the Afghan people.

In 1987, Mikhail Gorbachev assigned the OMON to fight organized crime in the Soviet Union. That was when Mlynik was appointed to head the OMON unit in Latvia. The next year, their mission was secretly changed from snuffing out gang bosses to snuffing out dissent. Muscovites began calling them by another name, using the same initials but meaning "Detachments for Mechanical Processing of the Population."

The Ministry of the Interior, which runs the OMON, has built up a force of more than 30,000 storm troopers to send to trouble spots when the Soviet republics threaten to get too uppity.

Latvia is such a place, and since January the Black Berets have been on a rampage, raiding government buildings, snatching people off the streets, shooting up cars and killing at least six Latvians.

Someone slowed Mlynik down a little on the evening of May 4. A gunman got into his building, which requires a special key, made it to the second floor and shot Mlynik as he was entering or leaving his apartment. One bullet struck him in the chest, and he was hospitalized in critical condition for more than a week.

The assassination attempt seemed to humble the Black Berets who were quiet for a couple of weeks. Latvian leaders began to think it was one of Mlynik's own disgruntled men who tried to kill him, because the assailant got past a tight security system. But others now think that it could have been an Azerbaijani who traveled the long distance to get revenge for Black Beret attacks in that republic. Or, it could have been a Latvian who had had enough of the Black Berets.

HOSTAGE UPDATE — The American hostages in Lebanon are in the clutches of a Lebanese crime syndicate — the Masawi clan that dominates the Lebanese underworld. The Masawi are the nucleus of the Hezbollah terrorist group that controls the movements of the hostages. The governments of Iran and Syria, both seeking better relations with the West, may try to put pressure on Hezbollah to release the hostages, but the Masawi will not let the Americans go without a price. They will seek ransom money, which the U.S. government will refuse to pay. The only way to meet their demands will be for the money to be raised privately.

Arab-Israeli conflict started with British

Someone asked how the mess in the Middle East got started. Well, like most messes in the world, it started with British colonialism.

The British promised the Arabs, who had been under Ottoman rule for 400 years, independence if they revolted and help the British in World War I. In that mad war, the Ottoman Empire was allied against the British and the French and the Russians.

Reese

The Bolshevik Revolution, however, threatened to take Russia out of the war and the British, in the mistaken notion that Jews somehow had great influence in Russia (a real laugh in view of their plight), promised the Jews a national home in Palestine, which at the time did not exist on any maps.

Thus, the British made two conflicting promises, for the area called Palestine was within the area promised to the Arabs, who were an overwhelming majority of the population.

Naturally, the British reneged on both promises. Rather than one large independent Arab state, the Brits and the French carved up the region to suit themselves. The French had Syria, which at the time included Lebanon. The Brits had the rest.

Before the war, an Austrian journalist had begun the modern political Zionist movement — to reestablish a Jewish state. Note the difference between political Zionism and religious Zionism, which called for a return of individual Jews to the biblical land regardless of who ruled it.

The U.S. mainly stayed out at this point, but President Woodrow Wilson's idealistic peace plan, which called for self-determination and which had been rejected by the British and French, resonated among the people of the world, including the Arabs.

Three years after the Balfour Declaration, according to one survey, Palestine had 61,000 Jews and 542,000 Arab residents. Political Zionism, contrary to conspiracy theories, did not sweep Europe. Most European Jews were content to be Europeans. By 1928, the Jewish population of Palestine had grown to only 152,000 while the Arab population was 727,000.

The Arabs or Palestinians, as they were beginning to think of themselves, saw, however, that if matters continued, they could end up being displaced by European immigrants, and thus the conflict started. Pretty soon Jews and Arabs were fighting each other and both, from time to time, were fighting the British. In about 1922, Britain had taken all of the Palestine Mandate east of the Jordan River and created a new country, Trans-Jordan.

Hence today you hear Zionists argue — as I myself used to — that Jordan is really a Palestinian state. That's semantics, however, and does not address the problem of the Palestinians who were born and have always lived west of the Jordan River.

By 1947, Great Britain weighed down and drained by all the messes it had created, abandoned Palestine and handed the problem over to the United Nations.

Zionists, of course, will say Jews regained half of Israel. As in all conflicts, sincere people see the same events differently.

In the course of the 1948 war, Jordan occupied the West Bank and East Jerusalem, and Egypt occupied Gaza. Neither Egypt nor Jordan asked the Palestinians what their wishes were.

In 1967, Israel defeated Syria, Jordan, and Egypt, occupying the West Bank, East Jerusalem, Gaza, the Sinai, and the Golan Heights. It returned the Sinai in exchange for peace with Egypt, but the rest remains under Israeli military occupation. Thus Palestinians there and most in refugee camps elsewhere remain a stateless people.

That's how the conflict started. God knows how it will end.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Rumors to contrary, big government not dead

Good old tight-fisted, tall-in-the-saddle Texas — to invoke the archaic legend — is bracing itself for a state income tax. Goldarn, it seems there are just too many people out there enjoying their daily bread. We've got to make them realize their civic responsibility to live on less so the bureaucracy and its clients can live on more.

Murchison

In Texas the gospel of responsibility is preached most winningly by a pair of mega-millionaire businessmen — former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Dallas magnifico Jess Hay — neither of whom will lack the resources to pay the country club bill, even after a 6 percent income tax is slapped on the toiling masses.

I like this kind of community spirit, don't you? Why, without people like these, the rest of us might imagine that we toil chiefly for our own well-being and that of our families.

True, the state comptroller has lately come up with $5 billion in savings and new fees. The political leadership has bestowed its preliminary blessing on this plan. The main thing this may mean is new ammunition for the income-tax lobby.

In a couple of years, the lobby will be back at the old stand. The members will spread wide their hands in futility. See, we tried; we have done it all, and to no avail. We still need money; we still need an income tax.

My friends, have you noticed? Government in America is not shrinking. Government is growing flat out — its size, its reach, its cost. We are moving inexorably toward that point where government controls and disposes of at least half the national income. Last year, according to the Tax Foundation, Americans labored 128 days — until May 8 — to pay for government. This was the longest ever. The residents of 15 states and the District of Columbia worked even longer. High-tax states like New York and California are in such a mess, their economies contracting and their budgets rising that they have to cut spending, like it or not.

Ronald Reagan for a season preached to an enthusiastic national audience the follies of big government and big spending. The communist countries, with the biggest government structures in the world, began vindicating Reagan's arguments by falling apart. People began clamoring for more freedom, not less. Here, meanwhile, the zeal for bigger, costlier government programs has survived and surmounted Reaganism.

Theoretical deficits grow accordingly. Theoretical? Why, yes. A theoretical deficit is what you'd have if you bought everything you wanted instead of scaling back expectations to match economic means. Tall-in-the-saddle Texas has a theoretical deficit of $4.5 billion for the coming biennium. That's because state leaders, discontented with a lousy $2 billion in new, anticipated revenues, want a 22 percent increase for the next biennium.

It sounds as though I were picking on Texas, my native state. I single out Texas only on account of its reputation for frugality and its once-envied status as a low-tax state. If it can happen here, it can happen anywhere.

Concerning governments appetite for our money, we can do two things. The first is to limit lawmakers' terms — all lawmakers, state as well as national.

The second thing we can do is to freeze spending. Cutting is hard, dangerous work. Freezing is rough justice: Everybody suffers in the same proportion until revenues catch up.

There's probably an even more basic point: It's to remember that the Reagan experience, never mind what the media told us, didn't stop government growth; that fans of government power — many of whom batten on government favors — are numerous and well-organized; that taxpayers, by contrast, are largely voiceless. The day the taxpayers get their act together, and start telling high-tax lawmakers to jump in the lake, will be our greatest national day since July 4, 1776.

ANC's first convention in South Africa opens today

■ Nelson Mandela is expected to formally succeed the congress' current president, Oliver Tambo.

DURBAN, South Africa (NYT) — The African National Congress, which has struggled since 1912 to free South Africa from white-minority domination, is poised for one of the most potentially significant events in its turbulent 79-year history.

Seventeen months after President F.W. de Klerk restored its legal status, the congress today will convene its first national conference inside South Africa in more than three decades.

These sessions here in the Indian Ocean city of Durban will bring together more than 2,000 delegates from around the country and abroad to choose a new leadership and discuss what to do about negotiations with the government, the suspended guerrilla struggle, politically motivated violence and the crumbling economic sanctions that the congress wants maintained against the Pretoria authorities.

Nelson Mandela, who was freed from 27½ years in prison nine days after the African National congress was legalized, has set a cautious course as its deputy president and functioning leader. Now he is expected to formally succeed the congress' current president, Oliver Tambo, who is in poor health after a stroke.

Beyond that, said James Stuart, a member of the National Executive Committee, "it's quite conceivable that there could be major surprises in the outcome of the elections."

Some of the old guard who kept the congress going during the decades in exile face the prospect of being replaced by younger, more impatient challengers.

While Mandela would remain in charge, the delegates can influence the congress's ideological direction by choosing a new leadership dominated by moderates like Thabo Mbeki and Jacob Zuma, who view negotiation as the best and fastest route to majority rule, or radicals like Chris Hani who espouse confrontation over compromise.

In interviews, officials and ordinary members also acknowledged that their conference must grapple with what kind of organization the African National Congress should become.

Since it was legalized on Feb. 2, 1990, the congress, which Mandela once described as a government in waiting and not a political party, has found itself losing the initiative to de Klerk, whose dismantling of apartheid has fostered the view abroad that his reforms deserve rewards.

"The ANC is the oldest political organization in this country and it has survived because it has adapted," said Frene Ginwala, Mandela's chief of research. "Maybe slowly, maybe ponderously, maybe taking a long time, but it has adapted, both in terms of its policies and in the way in which it organizes itself."

"The situation does really require a new organization," Ginwala continued. "It is made more difficult because we have to do it in a hurry and in the glare of no little publicity."

The congress, which says it now has 500,000 members, seeks to reconcile different strategies developed in isolation by former political prisoners like Mandela, returned exiles and "internals" — those who stayed in the country to resist apartheid.

Another challenge for the the conference will be placating the militant youths, often ill-educated and jobless, who have been the unruly foot soldiers of its strategy of "mass action" — a combination of boycotts and demonstrations.

Troops meet scattered resistance

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Government troops and tanks advanced into southern Lebanon Monday in a bid to restore Beirut's authority, meeting scattered resistance from Palestinian guerrillas who refused to lay down their arms.

The troops spread out in the port of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, and on several hilltops to the east. But the army made no attempt to enter sprawling Palestinian refugee camps, which also serve as bases for guerrillas.

The army reported two minor clashes with Palestinians and allied Sunni Muslim militias, and one army unit was blocked from taking up its position by Palestinian guerrillas. Two Sunnis were reported killed and six people were wounded.

The advance by 6,500 soldiers was the latest step in efforts by the Syrian-backed government of President Elias Hrawi to end Lebanon's 16-year-old civil war. The army already disarmed militias in the Beirut area under a 1989 accord that reformed the government's structure to give Muslims more equality with Christians.

Hrawi's success in re-establishing sovereignty in Sidon and other southern areas will be key to further steps, such as persuading Israel to withdraw from the border enclave in southern Lebanon it maintains to protect Israel from guerrilla attacks.

The Israelis have said they will not give up their "security zone" while Arab guerrillas are free to launch attacks on Israel and while Syria has 40,000 soldiers in Lebanon.

Failure to expand the government's control could mean a resumption of the civil war, which has left 150,000 killed and 200,000 wounded. It also could scare off thousands of Lebanese who have begun returning from abroad to help rebuild their shattered nation.

Hundreds of civilians fearful of potential violence fled the southern region Monday in cars loaded with mattresses and other household goods.

But others gathered on streets and cheered the army troops, sprinkling them with rice and rose water, the traditional Lebanese welcome.

The army began moving at dawn, and guerrillas of the Palestine Liberation Organization went on alert. An estimated 6,000 guerrillas are headquartered in the refugee camps of Ein el-Hilweh and Mieh Mieh on Sidon's flank and in hills to the east.

PLO leaders pledged not to block the army. But they also refused to give up their weapons, saying they needed them to defend thousands of refugees in Lebanese camps and to continue their struggle against Israel.

The PLO's security chief in southern Lebanon, Kamal Medhat, declared Sunday that the guerrillas would fight if the army tried to enter their camps.

PLO gunners fired at least five mortar rounds toward army troops Monday.

Free-trade study delivers warnings

■ Relaxed trade between U.S. and Mexico could hurt, help borderlands, study finds.

By Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Southwest border can expect a mixed blessing from a U.S.-Mexico free trade agreement, says a report Monday that warns economic expansion may be accompanied by environmental decay, crumbling social services, and rapid growth.

The report, a series of studies on the impact of a free trade agreement on the "borderlands" of the Southwest, predicts there will be increased investment in the economically impoverished region that stretches from San Diego to Brownsville.

But the increase in trade could also spur urban sprawl, pollution and increased demands on already strained water supplies, housing, transportation, schools, health care and social services.

The result could be a "situation of economic overheating," the report said.

"This will act as a constraint on growth, and will dictate a barely acceptable quality of life for the poorest residents in both countries," said one of the academic studies, which were compiled by Baylor University for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

The report said the population expansion in the region could both outstrip the supply of homes and overwhelm already strained social services.

"Transborder aquifers are drying up and the use of the Rio Grande is at capacity," one study said. "There is no additional water available — conservation and reclamation are the only answers. Without water there is no possibility of border growth."

The study also notes that outside investment in border communities could drive up property costs and displace small businesses and low-income households. Small retailers who depend on Mexican shoppers and U.S. banks that depend on Mexican depositors could also be hurt if their products or services can be provided south of the Rio Grande.

And the increased concentration of investment along the border could reduce levels of growth elsewhere in the Sunbelt, notably cities already weakened by overbuilding and the savings and loan debacle during the 1980s, and now threatened by reductions in military spending.

"The growth of a strong border economy could further damage the stagnant economies of cities like Albuquerque

Sex education must promote abstinence, Teen-Aid chief says

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Abstinence — not doling out contraceptives — is the answer to reducing teen pregnancy, according to LeAnna Benn.

Ms. Benn, the national director of Teen-Aid, Inc. — an organization promoting an abstinence-based public school curriculum — spoke at a luncheon for the Baptist Men of the First Baptist Church Monday.

"Teen pregnancy is a community problem," Ms. Benn said. "But education is not the answer if education means only information. Education must teach values and not mix the message of contraceptives and abstinence. It doesn't work."

Ms. Benn said teen-agers are bombarded with messages in the media promoting sex and encouraging them to have "sex when you're ready."

"I don't know of a single 13-year-old who is ready," she said.

The abstinence advocate said that exercising control gives teen-agers "a personal power" that can result in "a paradigm shift to personal responsibility."

Ms. Benn said Teen-Aid "promotes premaritial abstinence as the ultimate choice for teenagers." She said the curriculum is based on the concept of combining efforts of church leaders, teachers and parents to teach value-based life skills.

She said the media "are yelling at our kids to have sex."

"Magazines have articles like 'Just Say Yes: Smart Girls Can Have Sex,' and they give information on how to have sex with no consequences," Ms. Benn said, brandishing several youth-oriented national magazines.

The Teen-Aid director said conflicts between a student's home environment and values taught at church or school can be resolved with education.

"When students learn about premarital abstinence and their parents are having multiple sex partners, then the kids begin to call the parents to task — like the smoking issue," she said.

Teen-Aid, is designed for students in grades 7-12. Information from Teen-Aid, Inc. said classroom presentations include decision making and refusal skills, fetal development, self-image, substance abuse and other related life skills.

The curriculum stresses abstinence and adoption as an option for pregnant teenagers. AIDS and HIV is discussed along the lines of "presenting the advantages of abstinence until lawful marriage."

Midland Independent School District sex-education is also value-based, said MISD science coordinator Jan Artley.

In previous Reporter-Telegram articles, Ms. Artley said, "The words 'sex education' are an overstatement. We approach it (sex education) from a scientific perspective and may discuss the reproductive system along with other body systems ... we also use videos to discuss how to say 'no,' to peer pressure — little vignettes on saying no to drugs or sex without losing face."

PUC staff, TU blast proposed rate increase

By Peggy Fikac
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — A $353.8 million recommended rate increase for Texas Utilities Electric Co. drew fire Monday from the company, consumers, cities and the staff of the Public Utility Commission.

The three-member PUC is to consider the case July 15. Monday was the deadline for parties to file their objections to the 8.2 percent increase recommended by three PUC administrative law judges.

Dallas-based TU Electric, which has requested a $442 million, 10.2 percent increase, said the recommendation is so low it would prevent the company from carrying on construction quickly enough to meet customer needs.

"Not only does the future of TU Electric hang in the balance, but so does the economic future of the 5 million people who rely upon TU Electric for their electric needs," the company said.

But 69 cities served by TU Electric, and the state advocate for utility ratepayers, said the proposal allows the company to recoup too much of the costs associated with the $11 billion Comanche Peak nuclear power plant near Glen Rose.

"There is a wide gulf between what the examiners have recommended and what we think is a fair level for the ratepayers to pay," said Carlos Higgins, deputy public counsel.

TU Electric filed the rate increase largely to recover costs related to operating Unit 1 of the two-unit nuclear plant.

Geoffrey Gay, lawyer for the cities, including Fort Worth and Arlington, and the Office of Public Utility Counsel proposed that about $5 billion be disallowed from rates.

'There is a wide gulf between what the examiners have recommended and what we think is a fair level for the ratepayers to pay.'

— Carlos Higgins, state advocate for utility consumers

They said that's how much was due to company imprudence, rather than the $1.49 billion recommended by the administrative law judges. They did not estimate what rates would be under their recommendation.

The public counsel and a church-based community action group in Fort Worth, Allied Communities of Tarrant (ACT), called the design of the rate proposal unfair to residential ratepayers.

ACT leader Rosa Miranda distributed a document at a news conference saying that although residential users consume 32 percent of Comanche Peak's electricity, TU Electric recommends they pay 42 percent of its cost. She said her group is willing to compromise at 37 percent.

TU Electric spokeswoman Kathi Miller said each customer class pays a fair share of their total cost of service.

Permian Basin Drug Task Force Commander Tom Finley shakes hands with Sen. Phil Gramm after receiving a $190,230 drug asset forfeiture check Monday.

Sen. Gramm delivers drug-asset forfeiture check to task force

■ Money expected to cover about 20 percent of the Permian Basin Drug Task Forces' 1991 expenses, official says.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Texas Sen. Phil Gramm delivered a $190,230 check to the Permian Basin Drug Task Force on Monday, calling it the region's largest drug asset forfeiture ever.

The check, delivered during a Midland ceremony, was the task force's share of $223,800 in cash seized from drug dealers in a February raid near Pecos.

"I always enjoy giving out asset-sharing money," said Gramm, who described asset forfeiture as the equivalent of grabbing drug dealers "by the throat and reaching into their wallets."

He said it is ironic that profits from drug sales are now being used, through the forfeiture program, to help send narcotics dealers to prison.

Ronald F. Ederer, the U.S. Attorney for Texas' Western Judicial District, said laws passed with Gramm's support made forfeiture of drug dealers' assets possible.

Gramm, a Republican, is "the best friend we have in Washington for law enforcement," Ederer told the approximately 80 people at the ceremony, which was held at the task force's headquarters at 9900 W. Interstate 20.

Ederer said he has emphasized cash and asset confiscation during his three-year tenure.

In 1988, according to Ederer's office, federal drug busts in the Western District brought in about $1.5 million. In 1989, the figure was up to $4.9 million, followed by $10.6 million in 1990. This year, about $12 million in assets and cash has been seized, and Ederer

Allegations of illegalities tarnish image of junior livestock shows

By Catherine Chriss
Associated Press writer

HOUSTON — In the dark hours of early morning, 17-year-old Kayshia Clifton wets down Mad Max in the barn at her West Texas ranch home. Her younger, freckle-faced brother cleans up the manure.

Kayshia combs the Brahma steer's bristly hair and dries it with a steer-sized blow dryer. It's a routine the red-haired Crosby high school senior has practiced for eight years.

She intends to enter Mad Max next February in the junior division of the Houston Livestock Show. But chances are she won't win. Many fear that a new age of livestock shows is spoiling the competition for youths like Clifton, who compete the straightforward, honest way.

"The purpose of the program was for children to learn something and to make a profit. Those things have changed," said Don Clark, retired livestock director for the State Fair of Dallas. "The learning aspect has more or less taken a back seat to winning and making money."

The Houston Livestock Show, the world's largest, has been tainted by illegal drug use, polygraph tests, accusations of sabotage, and an investigation by the Food and Drug Administration.

Earlier this month, officials announced that eight youths at this year's Houston show were disqualified after their animals tested positive for drugs.

High stakes are involved. The teen-age exhibitor of the grand champion steer in Houston took home a record $221,000 this year. Ranches and farms that produce a grand champion also can profit by touting their success.

For more than 60 years, the Houston show has been a wholesome event associated with mom, apple pie and the American flag. Ten thousand 4-H and Future Farmers of America students from the state competed this year.

Showing animals lets youths like Kayshia Clifton learn responsibility, build character and test their skills.

"The majority of these kids at the livestock show are good. They're quality kids," said Leroy Shafer, assistant general manager of the Houston Livestock Show. "The bad thing is a minority of the people are going to make it look bad for the majority."

No one disputes that junior livestock shows have evolved into a sophisticated arena of genetics and science, mirroring the industry.

"The American myth that the exhibitor of the Grand Champion steer at stock shows is just a kid who took an orphan calf from his grandfather's farm and raised him into a champion is good sentimental fodder, and it is also rubbish," wrote Cherie Carrabba, editor of The Showbox, a monthly magazine widely read in the junior livestock circle.

Drug use is seen as the most serious symptom of the ills afflicting livestock competition.

Houston Livestock Show officials initiated drug testing three years ago, the first show in the country to do so. Experts test the top six animals in each breed and randomly test a few others.

Four percent of the 194 animals sampled this year tested positive, the most ever. Three drugs were detected — clenbuterol, lasix and acepromazine — none of which is safe for use in animals raised for human consumption. The Houston show, like most,

'The myth that the exhibitor of the Grand Champion steer is just a kid who took an orphan calf from his grandfather's farm. . .is good sentimental fodder, and it is also rubbish.'

sells its animals for meat.

Clenbuterol enhances muscles and makes steers look better. The drug is illegal in the United States and available only on the black market, and the FDA is trying to determine how it is getting into the country.

Lasix makes animals tighter and lighter.

TEEN: 'Media are yelling at our kids to have sex'

sen said the organization also offers abstinence as an option.

In sex education curriculumsdeveloped by the Texas Family Planning Association School and Community Sexuality Education Task Force, one of the concepts taught to teens is "to encourage postponement of sexual activity until the individual is well-prepared for the emotional and physical consequences of sexual behavior."

"We believe — we know that abstinence is the best option for teens," Ms. Hellinghausen said. "But many teenagers choose to be sexually active. To deny them information and resources is going to hurt them. We support giving information on contraceptives to those who need it."

Ms. Hellinghausen said not teaching about contraception "is not dealing with the reality of where teenagers are."

"Values are also important. We make teen-agers look at their lifestyles, their options and the consequences of their actions," she said.

Ms. Benn said students need "directive instruction."

"Most kids know sex causes babies," she said. "They can see that in two nights of watching television. They have knowledge. The problem is they don't have values. Knowledge doesn't motivate anything. It's your values and belief systems that motivate you. Knowledge alone doesn't change behavior."

Ms. Benn challenged church leaders to support curriculum in the public schools which "supports your religious beliefs."

"The Bible is alive and well," she said, "and there is another view of sexuality other than NBC's, ABC's or Mademoiselle magazine's."

Judge Baskin overturns jury award

Staff Report

A Midland judge has overturned a jury decision that awarded more than $1 million to Waterwonderland owner Sam F. Henderson in his lawsuit against United Bank, court records show.

Henderson, of Odessa, filed the lawsuit in March 1989. He claimed that bank officials reneged on a $2.45 million loan agreement. Last December, a 142nd District Court jury awarded Henderson $1.17 million in damages, agreeing that the bank — now Texas Commerce Bank — was guilty of a breach of contract.

But Judge Pat M. Baskin struck down the jury's decision in a ruling dated June 25. In an opinion accompanying his order, Baskin said Henderson never proved that he had a contract with the bank.

John Gunter, Henderson's attorney, called Baskin's decision "flat wrong."

"We are appealing it immediately," said Gunter, who added that there seems to be no point in having jury trials if judges are going to overturn jury decisions.

Barry Beck, the local attorney who represented Texas Commerce Bank in the lawsuit, could not be reached for comment Monday.

Baskin, who is in a Houston hospital recovering from heart bypass surgery, also was unavailable for comment.

mals that might scamper in the show ring.

Two of this year's disqualified animals ranked at the top. A Centerville boy's champion American breed and Crossbred steer that sold for $37,000 tested positive for clenbuterol. A reserve champion lamb from San Saba that netted $12,000 tested positive for lasix.

The penalties are severe. Disqualified exhibitors and their siblings are barred from competing again at the Houston show. Exhibitors are prohibited from participating in FFA-sponsored contests outside their school for a year. And the families forfeit the sale money.

This year, disqualified exhibitors forfeited $61,600.

Although the percentage of exhibitors misusing drugs is small, "it's a great concern of ours," Shafer said. "If one out of 10,000 is doing it at our show, it's a serious problem. It's a violation of rules, trust, and goes against the show's purposes of benefiting youth and promoting education."

Five families whose youngsters were disqualified maintain they are falsely accused. They have hired lawyers and are threatening lawsuits, said Jackie Barton of San Angelo, whose son's lamb tested positive for lasix. They suspect faulty urine tests, negligent testing and even sabotage.

The livestock show freezes urine samples in preparation for possible court challenges. Three samples will be tested this week at the expense of exhibitors, said Steve Woodley, assistant manager for livestock.

But show officials stand firmly behind their decision, he said.

"I think they know how the animals got the drugs," Woodley said. "I just don't think they are willing to admit it."

Authorities never released the names of the disqualified exhibitors. But most live in small towns. Word of the dishonor spread quickly.

Jack Keeling, a Centerville rancher, is considering suing the stock show officials. He was aghast when he learned his 11-year-old son's steer tested positive for clenbuterol. Keeling said he'd never heard of the drug. He and his son have taken polygraphs to try and clear the family name.

"This was the most exciting thing our family has ever done, our biggest accomplishment," said Keeling, who has spent $5,000 trying to prove his innocence.

"It hurts him. It hurts us all. This is going to scar him for life," Keeling said of his son. "And he's innocent."

Those concerned about the new age of livestock shows claim soaring prize money is to blame for unscrupulous tactics. The reserve champion steer rocketed to $90,000 this year.

The record-setting auctions in what many consider the "biggest and best show" make many Texans proud.

But the rich prizes also increase pressure to win at all costs, said Sally Carwile, a 4-H leader in Montgomery County.

"The money is just so tremendous at the state level and at Montgomery County level. I think money is the big attraction," she said.

One solution would be establishing a ceiling for the auction sales, a practice followed by shows in other states. Bidding could exceed the ceiling, but the surplus would be funneled into scholarships.

CHECK: Assets seized this year total $12 million, up from $10.6 million in '90 is predicting a total of $20 million for 1991.

The local drug task force, meanwhile, has grown to depend on drug forfeiture money to help pay for its operations. Task force Commander Tom Finley said the $190,230 check he received Monday will cover about 20 percent of the agency's expenses for 1991.

Local communities are responsible for paying 25 percent of the task force's budget, with the rest coming from federal grants. So the more assets seized, the lesser the burden on local taxpayers to support the task force, Finley said.

Gramm said the task force, which covers a 17-county area, plays an important role in keeping rural West Texas from becoming a "safe haven for drug trafficking."

He said he was glad that recent U.S. House of Representatives initiatives to shift money from rural drug task forces to urban law enforcement met with failure.

FREE: Increased trade could spur urban sprawl and Phoenix," the report said.

The study also suggested that free trade will expand the economic base in Mexico, potentially reducing the need for job seekers to migrate to the United States.

Bentsen said the study shows that a properly negotiated free trade agreement could expand economic growth on the U.S. side of the border.

"But the study also provides an important warning: with economic growth come greater demands on the roads, bridges and other basic services along the border," Bentsen said. "Many of those resources already are strained to the limit. Unless steps are taken to improve them, the border area will not be able to reap the full benefits of a trade agreement with Mexico."

Bentsen said the study also calls for greater attention to the environmental problems that afflict the border. He promised to monitor the completion of a joint U.S.-Mexico border environmental plan, which will be assembled as officials negotiate the free trade agreement.

Texas exported $13 million worth of goods across the Rio Grande last year, while Mexico was one of the top ten markets for no fewer than 36 states, Bentsen said.

Arrest

Police arrested a Midland man Sunday afternoon in connection with a rape that occurred late the night before.

Lester Lewis Travioli, 27, 4422 Leddy Drive, remained in jail Monday in lieu of a $20,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

Travioli was arrested on a warrant about 3:21 p.m. Sunday in the 2600 block of Neely Avenue.

He was apprehended in connection with the sexual assault of a 16-year-old woman about 11:30 p.m. Saturday. The woman told police that the man, whom she knew, took her to an unknown Midland residence and sexually assaulted her.

Our services include back gauging and the overall monitoring of leases."

For special events, Stanley Smith Security offers guard and patrol services. Security may be arranged on both a permanent or temporary basis for banks, office buildings, hospitals and construction sites, at entrance points or wherever such services are needed in the Permian Basin.

Professionally trained guards and officers, on-site supervision, late model patrol vehicles and 24 hour dispatch are just a few of the many reasons Stanley Smith Security is contracted time after time.

With a free, no-obligation security survey, Stanley Smith Security can professionally identify a client's specific needs and design a security program for any business, thus insuring quality, cost effective services.

Stanley Smith Security, in Midland since 1975, stands out in the industry by having built a solid reputation for quality service within Texas and throughout the United States.

It was founded in San Antonio in 1928 and has grown to become one of the 10 largest security companies in the world.

The company recently expanded its West Texas operations through the acquisition of Network Security Company. Because of this growth, Stanley Smith Security is the largest supplier of security officers and security motor patrol services in the Permian Basin.

Stanley Smith Security provides professional training for its officers and guards through an extensive, in-house training program. "Our people, although they are not law enforcement officials, are knowledgeable in all aspects of security," assessed Owens. "All of our personnel undergo recurring training every six months."

Added Jim Nicholson, regional vice-president of the Southwest division, "We have spent a large amount of money to initiate a nationwide guard and security officer screening process. We consider our psychological profile test, which was developed with our in-house psychologist, Dr. John Hezel, Ph.D., to be the newest in the industry."

The test is administered to all new hires before employment. "It gives us indicators for such conditions as proneness to drug and alcohol use and accidents, as well as information about long-term interests," he noted. "The test is ours alone and is unique to Stanley Smith Security."

In the Midland office, Owens and his staff, which includes Doug McCallister, head of operations, and Lori Hoefs, office manager, would like to thank their West Texas clients for their continued support.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: auto racer Richard Petty, Justice Thurgood Marshall, actress Polly Holliday, slugger Jose Canseco.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unpredictability can be an asset now. You score a major triumph by keeping a competitor off-balance. Consult an expert on marketing a creative idea. Curb your temper when dealing with loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A windfall fattens your pocketbook and sends your spirits sky-high. A stunning performance may surprise some people but not those who know you best. Be firm about saying "no" to hangers-on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone may try to manipulate you today. Keep your guard up and realize that not everyone emulates your direct ways. Romance hits a high note when family members applaud your choice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You bounce back after some difficult experiences. Career demands could separate you from your loved ones. Call home often and make the best of what is a temporary situation. Romance thrives on consideration.

LEO (July 23-August 22): Innovative ideas abound! Take a chance and try an unusual approach to an old problem. Lost documents can be replaced. Protect your reputation. Fulfill an obligation to your employer without further delay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The differences of opinion that divide you and your loved one are not important enough to separate you permanently. Lay your cards on the table. Intelligent compromises can lead to lasting happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Trying to take the easy way out will only complicate matters. Make a firm decision and move quickly. You can no longer afford to close your eyes to what must be done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The spotlight is on the arts and other creative activities. A meeting with a member of the opposite sex could trigger an outburst of feelings. Exercise self-restraint. Keep a close eye on spending.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are able to hold things together in a difficult situation. The way you handle your emotions is important to your health. Bringing others home unexpectedly could upset your mate. Call first!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A lethargic mood could hold you back today. Stop feeling guilty and build a more positive relationship with a member of the opposite sex. Co-workers will respond favorably to your friendly overtures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep a close eye on business spending now. Accept a new role and make it work for you! Someone could be overwhelmed by a proposal you make. Give them time to think.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Loved one looks to you for romantic inspiration. Getting away to a distant place for a while would do you a world of good! Put new financial information to practical use. Revise a budget.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are imaginative, artistic and eager to develop their talents. An early interest in the arts should be strongly encouraged. Since these youngsters tend to drop their plans if they encounter setbacks, concerned parents will encourage them to persevere. In love with love, these Cancerians will probably have quite a few casual romances before finding the right mate and settling down.

Of all forms of bridge competition, the team-of-four match represents the fairest. Since one pair on each team plays the North-South cards and the other East-West, theoretically the par result on every board should be zero. If one team makes, say, three no trump with the North-South cards, so should the other for exactly the same score.

But bidding styles differ, and sometimes being aggressive at one table will pay off. At other times it's right to be conservative. These idiosyncracies will yield differing results. And then, once in a while, Lady Luck will intervene in the proceedings.

When this deal was played in a team match, one pair reached six spades as North-South. That was not a particularly appetizing contract. Since the ace of hearts had to be lost, declarer needed a 3-3 trump split to get home, about a 35 percent chance. That came to pass, so North-South racked up 1,430 points.

At the other table the bidding went as shown. Six hearts is a far superior slam. With any plain-suit lead, 12 tricks could almost be claimed. Declarer can cash the ace of spades, force an entry to dummy by ruffing a diamond and discard the other diamond loser on the king of spades. An excellent slam, except for one funny little thing that happened on the way to the Forum.

At the table, West found a trump lead. East took the ace and returned a trump, and declarer was in dummy before he wanted to be there! The blocking ace of spades and the high clubs were still in hand, and the entry to dummy had been removed before it could be put to use. Declarer had to concede two diamond tricks for down two.

Observant movie fans find fault with Oliver Stone's 'The Doors'

It took a few months for all the complaints to roll in, but the editors of Premiere finally got around to listing mistakes movie fans noticed in Oliver Stone's movie, "The Doors":

■ Morris is pictured wearing Ray-Ban Wings sunglasses at a party in 1970. They weren't manufactured until 1984.

■ A conversation in 1968 mentions "Easy Rider." The movie wasn't released until 1969.

■ Band members warn Morrison that his actions at a 1970 concert may lead to the cancellation of a planned gig at Woodstock. Woodstock happened in 1969.

■ Morrison is shown as a UCLA student in 1965 holding a copy of "The Portable Nietzsche." The particular edition he's holding wasn't published until 1976.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Rapper Vanilla Ice is helping Star Island live up to its name — he just spent $1.8 million on a six-bedroom, six-bath house on the exclusive island in Biscayne Bay, a newspaper reported Monday.

Vanilla Ice

Ice, whose legal name is Robert van Winkle, will be making a few changes on the home he bought last week down the street from Gloria Estefan's mansion and the home of French singer Michel Sardou, The Miami Herald reported. Van Winkle is from Dallas.

On the drawing board: ice blue neon decorations, an aerobics-dance studio, recording studio, theater, half court for basketball and a king-and-a-half size bed under ceiling stars that twinkle to music.

The leather furniture will be in white, black, hot pink and purple, said Jeffrey Smith, of First Impressions, whose North Miami firm has designed apartments for Donald Trump.

SAN DIEGO — It was a meltdown Roseanne Barr Arnold who entertained youngsters in the city where her tortured rendition of the national anthem caused an uproar.

"This is serious stuff. No kidding around," she said after she and her husband, Tom Arnold, arrived Sunday at the San Diego Center for Children.

The center treats physically and emotionally abused children. The comic couple were invited when the center's directors learned they would be in town for Ms. Arnold's appearance at a San Diego club.

"Tom and I like being on the side of people who are getting well because we're getting well, too. I guess if I had one lesson to tell them, it would be don't keep secrets and it's not your fault," said Ms. Arnold, the star of ABC television's "Roseanne."

At one point, Arnold said, "Come on, children, Rosie's going to sing for you."

"Are you a singer?" a 6-year-old boy asked Ms. Arnold.

"Yes, I'm a very famous singer," Ms. Arnold replied. "Especially in San Diego."

During her off-key rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" last summer at a San Diego Padres game, she spat and grabbed her crotch. She said later she was poking fun at baseball players.

LONDON — Princess Diana is the most popular member of the British royal family, according to two polls released Monday, her 30th birthday.

A Gallup poll conducted for The Daily Telegraph showed Diana has moved ahead of her husband, Prince Charles, in Britons' affections.

Gallup polled 985 adults between June 19 and June 25. Twenty-two percent listed Diana as their favorite, compared with 12 percent in a similar poll in 1988.

Respondents described Diana as fashionable, caring and charming, but few thought she was intellectual, The Telegraph said.

Charles dropped to No. 2 with 15 percent, down 6 points from 1988, The Telegraph said. His sister Anne also had 15 percent, the Queen Mother had 14 percent and Queen Elizabeth II 12 percent.

A separate Gallup poll conducted for Legal and General insurance company surveyed 500 married women. Almost a third nominated Diana as their favorite and praised her as a good ambassador and mother.

The margin of error for the polls was not available.

PONTIAC, Mich. — Aretha Franklin will put her singing to work July 13 for the struggling Pontiac-Oakland Symphony.

Promoters said they hope to raise $100,000 through the queen of soul's concert.

The symphony is hurting from the loss of state arts funding.

"The state has stopped funding the arts, but it is important to remember that 20 years ago, the state did not provide funding for the arts," said Wilmer Bryant, event chairman. "We got used to that grant money coming in."

Tickets for the Franklin concert will range from $15 to $200, Bryant said.

At Wit's End

Good manners are bred in the bone

By Erma Bombeck

Most mothers think good table manners are a hormonal thing — like puberty. When children reach a certain age, a chemical is released into their bodies and from that day forward, they will use silverware, eat with their mouths closed and say please and thank you.

Bombeck

They aren't. And they won't. Good manners are in the genes. They're like good teeth. You're either born with them or you're not.

At great sacrifice, I have dedicated my entire life to instructing my children on how to behave at the dinner table and not make other people sick. I have failed miserably. One still holds a fork in his fist like a predator stalking his first meal in two weeks. Another one is known as the Siberia of the table. Whenever a dish is passed to him, he regards it as a gift. It comes to rest next to his plate. The other one considers creamed chicken a finger food.

Everyone likes to blame mothers. Oh sure. Why not! Well, it just isn't true. I tried the "Get the mirror" trick. This is where you put a mirror in front of the pig-child and let him see himself as others see him. The grosser he ate, the more he loved what he saw.

I tried public humiliation and reduction of self-esteem. No matter if we were in a restaurant or had guests for dinner, I called them on manners violations. It made no difference.

I even told them I once broke off with a guy who laughed with cottage cheese in his mouth and warned them they would never get married, bear children or get a job unless they learned to swallow their food before speaking. They laughed.

My Uncle Wesley is to blame for their lack of manners. As a child I can remember my mother's brother dipping his fingers in her coffee cup and asking, "You want the rest of this?" Somehow it seemed funnier than when one of my kids licked his fingers and spread his hand over the last piece of pizza and asked, "Anyone want to share?"

The other night on television, a guy advertising a fast-food sandwich the size of a satellite dish stuffed half of it in his mouth and then delivered his message of ecstasy.

From sheer habit, I held up a mirror in front of him.

Trouble at UTEP

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas-El Paso officials are being criticized for the way they handled the dismissals of two assistant coaches, fired in response to an NCAA allegation that the basketball program lacks institutional control.

An El Paso Herald-Post columnist said in Monday's editions that officials should be embarrassed by the way they fired coaches Greg Lackey and Rus Bradburd.

El Paso Times sports editor Ray Hagar asks in a column why UTEP President Diana Natalicio waited so long, leaving Bradburd and Lackey little time to look for a new job and UTEP Coach Don Haskins little time to look for new assistants.

The NCAA has accused UTEP of 13 rules violations and another violation was uncovered during UTEP's internal investigation. The university has responded by mail to the allegations.

Their highnesses return

■ With play returning to a normal schedule, the party atmosphere abandoned Wimbledon Monday, and for Ivan Lendl, the party ended early for the 12th summer.

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Order was restored to Centre Court as the rabble gave way to royalty, the waves and chants disappeared and Ivan Lendl endured his traditional torture.

David Wheaton let his American freak flag fly and 120 mph serve soar to beat Lendl 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 in a third-round match Monday and send him home a Wimbledon loser for the 12th time.

The only new twist to this old story was the quickness of Lendl's departure. He hadn't lost a Grand Slam match so early since his first-round exit here in 1981.

Wheaton's victory over the No. 3 seed put him on track to meet fifth-seeded Andre Agassi, a 7-6, 6-3, 7-6 winner against Richard Krajicek, in the quarterfinals.

"This is my best surface, and I think I am a contender in this tournament," said the 22-year-old Wheaton, a 6-foot-4 muscleman who is ranked 20th. "I wouldn't necessarily say I'm going to win, and go out on a limb like that. But I think I have a chance."

Looming in the same half of the draw as Wheaton and Agassi is three-time champion Boris Becker, who beat Andrei Olhovskiy 6-1, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Wimbledon returned to stolid respectability a day after opening its gates to the masses for the first time on the middle Sunday because of rain postponements last week.

Players again bowed or curtseyed to the Duchess of Kent in the Royal Box and the stands were filled with the regular, older, more restrained ticket-holders in blue blazers and fine dresses.

The green-jacketed mandarins of the All England Club insisted they aren't planning a repeat of Sunday's open house for the public. But they said they learned lessons that might lead to changes to attract younger fans and bring back that party atmosphere.

The only history set Monday came on the court when Martina Navratilova when she surpassed Chris Evert's record of 111 singles matches at Wimbledon. Navratilova beat Catarina Lindqvist 6-1, 6-3 to gain the quarterfinals in her quest for a 10th title.

Wheaton adds name to long list

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — If you judge a man by the company he keeps, David Wheaton is finally moving up in the world.

For the past two years, he has been the best American player that most Americans couldn't name — even if you gave them the clue "David."

But late Monday afternoon, the free-thinking, free-swinging Minnesotan with the stars and stripes draped across his brow took a big step up in class by adding his name to the long and distinguished list of Ivan Lendl's Wimbledon conquerors.

And more important, perhaps, Wheaton seemed at last to understand what it will take to make the really short list of those who have gone on from there — McEnroe, Connors, Becker, Cash and Edberg — to win this championship.

Lendl

"It's not like a boxing match," Wheaton said, "where you knock the guy out and go celebrate. I have another match tomorrow against a good player (Jan Gunnarsson). If I don't go out there and

Old nemesis downs Angels again

■ Wichita right-hander Pedro Martinez, who beat Midland three times in 1990, gets his fourth win over the Angels this season.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

Pitchers throughout the Texas League know the dangers of taking the mound at Angels Stadium, where earned run averages can balloon faster than Roseanne Barr on an ice cream diet. But Wichita right-hander Pedro Martinez would probably like to get starts here more often.

While the 22-year-old from the Dominican Republic did see his ERA take a bit of a hike Monday night on the Angels' home turf, he continued his dominance over Midland with a 10-6 triumph that evens the present series at 2-2.

Martinez, who upped his season record to 8-4, now has four wins over Midland this season. His 1990 record of 6-3 reflected three victories over the Angels.

"I beat these guys three times last year and four times this year so far," Martinez said. "I don't know what it is. They're very good hitters, but I guess every pitcher has one team in the league that they have better success with.

"It helps that I have a good offense and a good defense behind me," he said.

Martinez, who entered the game with a .277 ERA versus Midland batting this year, gave up 10 hits and four runs through six innings. He left the game with a 10-4 advantage thanks to Tom Redington's two run home run in the first inning and a three-run blast by Jose Valentin in the fifth.

Dave Shotkoski (3-8), victimized by four unearned runs in the first inning, took the loss for Midland. Shotkoski gave up all 10 Wichita runs (six earned) on 10 hits in 4⅓ innings.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

One of the Angels' newest players, catcher Mick Billmeyer, studies an incoming pitch from Wichita pitcher Pedro Martinez.

Midland tried to rebound from the disastrous top half of the first when Reggie Williams sent Martinez' second pitch of the game over the left-field wall for his first homer of the year and Tim Salmon added an RBI single. But what could have been a much bigger inning ended when Marcus Lawton grounded into a double play with the bases loaded.

"I was throwing mostly fastballs in the first couple of innings," Martinez said. "They started looking for fastballs, so I changed my mind and worked on my changeup.

The Wrangler defense played flawlessly, turning another double play in the third.

The Angels outhit Wichita 15-11, but 12 Midland baserunners were stranded in the game, which brought both ball clubs to the .500 mark in the second-half TL race with 5-5 records.

Damion Easley, whose first-inning fielding error on leadoff man Darrell Sherman's ground ball led to Shotkoski's four-run deficit, atoned for the miscue with a 3-for-3 night at the plate, including a triple and a run scored.

Redington, whose first-inning blast cleared the scoreboard above the left-field wall, finished the night 3-for-4 with three RBI and two runs scored.

The Angels closed the margin to 4-3 in the second inning when Walt

'Alzado will be the first of a lot ... with cancer'

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

The image was an alarm, sounded as loud and demanding as a siren, a warning more eloquent than any words.

To any athlete who watched Lyle Alzado, unable to walk without help, his once booming voice reduced to a raspy whisper, a sad shell of what once was a mountain of a man, the message was loud and clear.

Stay away from steroids.

Alzado's interview with NBC's Maria Shriver on Saturday was a chilling peek into the underbelly of sports. Ex-player-turned-author Peter Gent once jokingly called it "better football through chemistry."

There is nothing funny about Lyle Alzado, though, afflicted with inoperable brain cancer after what he says was a lifetime of popping pills.

A year ago, Alzado tried to defy the ravages of time to make a comeback with the Los Angeles Raiders. He was 41, out of football since 1985, and so he reached for help from an old pal — steroids.

"In my comeback," he told Shriver, "I used a certain steroid that caused me to lower my immune system."

The result, a year later, is a man who has lost 60 pounds from his once huge frame, a man whose frame is frail, a man who struggles through dizzy spells and slurred speech as a side effect of being treated with radiation, oral cortisone and chemotherapy. It is not a pretty picture.

Could steroids have done this to Alzado in so short a time?

By all means, according to Dr. Forest Tennant, who was drug advisor to the NFL from 1986 to 1990.

"Anabolic steroids depress the im-

NL Roundup

MONTREAL — Howard Johnson took over the National League RBI lead with a two-run single and the New York Mets beat Montreal 4-2, the Expos' eighth consecutive loss.

Frank Viola (9-5) allowed a run and eight hits in seven innings for his second victory over Montreal in five days. John Franco got the final three outs for his 16th save.

Mark Gardner (3-5), who lost to Viola last Wednesday at New York, gave up seven hits and walked four in 6 2-3 innings.

The Mets scored three unearned runs in the third inning with two outs.

Darryl Boston reached when Delino DeShields bounced a throw to first after fielding a routine grounder. Garry Templeton blooped a double to left and Dave Magadan was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Gardner then walked Kevin McReynolds to force in a run and Johnson lined a 3-2 pitch to right for two more. That gave Johnson 57 RBIs, one more than Will Clark of San Francisco.

Spike Owen hit his second homer of the year leading off the seventh for the only run off Viola.

The Expos closed to 3-2 in the eighth. Ivan Calderon singled to short off reliever Jeff Innis and moved to second on Templeton's throwing error. Tim Wallach followed with a run-scoring single.

In the ninth, Boston got a ground-rule double when his one-bounce liner to center went under the outfield fence. He scored on Templeton's single.

Cardinals 1, Phillies 0

PHILADELPHIA — Bryn Smith and Lee Smith combined on a three-hitter and Todd Zeile drove in the only run as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bryn Smith gave up three hits, struck out two and walked none through seven innings. Cris Carpenter pitched the eighth before Lee Smith came on for his 21st save. He has saved six of the Cardinals' last nine victories.

Zeile's bases-loaded single in the fifth drove in Tom Pagnozzi with the only run needed by Bryn Smith (7-4), who has three victories and two no-decisions in his last five starts. The Cardinals beat the Phils in the opener of this four-game series after sweeping three games from the Phils last weekend at St. Louis.

Bruce Ruffin (1-1), recalled from the minors June 8, gave up 10 hits, struck out seven and walked two in eight innings.

Bryn Smith worked four perfect innings and had two out in the fifth before Charley Hayes lashed a single past third for Philadelphia's first hit. Hayes was forced by Dickie Thon to end the inning.

Pagnozzi opened the St. Louis fifth with a single and reached second when Bryn Smith faked a one-out bunt and dumped a single over a charging infield. Ozzie Smith walked to load the bases and Zeile singled to left scoring Pagnozzi.

Ruffin worked out of the jam by striking out Ray Lankford and getting Pedro Guerrero on a pop foul.

The Phillies threatened in the fifth when John Morris beat out a bunt and advanced to second on a sacrifice by Ruffin. But Sil Campusano struck out and Mickey Morandini grounded to second.

Ricky Jordan tripled with two out in the ninth, but Smith ended that threat by striking out Dale Murphy.

Cubs 6, Pirates 5

CHICAGO — Ryne Sandberg's fourth straight hit, a tie-breaking single in the 13th inning, gave the Chicago Cubs a victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

With two out in the 13th, reliever Stan Belinda (3-2) hit Damon Berryhill with a pitch. Mark Grace then walked and Sandberg looped a single to right to score Berryhill with the winning run.

Bob Scanlon (3-3) got the victory as the Cubs stretched their winning streak to three games and snapped the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

Bob Walk, bidding to improve his record to 7-0, left after five innings with a 4-2 lead that the Pittsburgh bullpen couldn't protect.

Neal Heaton pitched a scoreless sixth and seventh before Grace walked to open the eighth. Vincente Palacios relieved, and Sandberg greeted him with a two-run homer.

AL Roundup

MINNEAPOLIS — Carlton Fisk's two-out homer in the 10th inning lifted the Chicago White Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Fisk hit an 0-1 pitch from Carl Willis (2-2) well over the fence in left for his sixth homer of the season, ending a wild game that saw both teams rally in the eighth inning.

Bobby Thigpen (5-2) picked up the victory with 2 2-3 scoreless innings. The Twins got a runner to third with two outs in the ninth, but Chuck Knoblauch's grounder deflected off Thigpen to shortstop Ozzie Guillen, who barely got Knoblauch at first. Thigpen also escaped a first-and-third, one-out jam in the 10th by getting Chili Davis on a fielder's choice and Scott Leius on a fly ball.

Minnesota has lost five of its last six games after winning 20 of 22.

Lance Johnson's two-run double in the eighth capped a three-run rally that gave the White Sox a 4-3 lead.

Rick Aguilera relieved Steve Bedrosian with runners at first and second and two out and promptly gave up a run-scoring double to Fisk. Johnson, who also singled in a run in the fourth, then doubled to put the White Sox in front.

Blue Jays 4, Mariners 3

TORONTO — Roberto Alomar doubled home two runs to tie the score, then scored the winning run in the ninth inning when catcher Dave Valle took his foot off home plate, giving the Toronto Blue Jays a 4-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Seattle starter Randy Johnson, who struck out 11 and didn't walk a batter, took a two-hitter into the ninth, but he gave up a double to Mookie Wilson, then threw wildly to first after Devon White hit the ball back to the mound, allowing Wilson to go to third and White to second.

Mike Jackson (4-3) relieved Johnson and gave up a game-tying double to Alomar, who then stole third. Joe Carter and John Olerud were intentionally walked before Rob Murphy relieved Jackson.

Pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks then hit a grounder to shortstop Omar Vizquel, whose throw home was in time to force Alomar. But umpire Ken Kaiser ruled that Valle took his foot off the plate, allowing the winning run to score on the error.

Jim Acker (2-4) was the winner after pitching the ninth in relief of starter David Wells.

Orioles 10, Tigers 2

BALTIMORE — Ben McDonald limited the Detroit Tigers to two hits in eight shutout innings, retiring 24 of 26 batters, in his first outing since May 22, and the Baltimore Orioles hit four homers.

McDonald (3-3), just off the disabled list after missing five weeks due to a sore elbow, retired the first 12 batters he faced before Cecil Fielder singled off the left-field wall to start the fifth inning. The right-hander set down the next 11 batters before Rob Deer's two-out single in the eighth, then got his seventh strikeout to end the inning.

Andy Allanson's RBI single in the ninth off Paul Kilgus spoiled the shutout and the Tigers got their other run on Mark Salas' run-scoring groundout.

McDonald had not pitched since giving up six runs to Detroit in just over an inning more than five weeks ago. He went on the disabled list two days later with a sore elbow — the same injury that kept him sidelined at the outset of the season.

Yankees 6, Indians 2

NEW YORK — Jesse Barfield and Kevin Maas crushed consecutive home runs and the New York Yankees ran over Cleveland, the Indians' fifth straight loss.

Don Mattingly drove in two runs as the Yankees won for the sixth time in seven games. Cleveland has lost nine of 10 and 21 of its last 24.

Scott Sanderson (9-3) pitched five innings and Lee Guetterman worked four scoreless innings for his fourth save.

Red Sox 6, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Roger Clemens rebounded from a bout with food poisoning to allow five hits in seven innings and rookie Mo Vaughn drove in four runs as the Boston Red Sox beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Clemens, who was scratched from his scheduled start on Sunday, broke a personal two-game losing streak, giving up all singles before being replaced by Jeff Gray to start the eighth.

Clemens (10-5) struck out eight and walked one for his first victory since June 14. He is now 11-4 lifetime against the Brewers.

The victory was just the second in eight games for the Red Sox and the loss was the third straight for Milwaukee.

Royals 7, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Boddicker held Oakland to four hits over 7 2-3 innings and Kevin Seitzer hit a game-breaking three-run triple as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Athletics for their second victory in 10 games.

Boddicker (7-6) took a two-hitter into the eighth before surrendering a two-run home run to Harold Baines as Kansas City sent Oakland to its fifth loss in seven games.

Over his last six starts, Boddicker has given up 32 hits and 12 earned runs in 42 innings (a 2.57 ERA), going 4-2 and lowering his ERA to 3.04 for the season.

ALZADO: 'That big massive guy I was ... it was a phony' mune system and lymphocytes," Tennant said. "He has lymphoma. You don't have to be a rocket scientist to figure out the connection."

(From 1C)

More alarming is Tennant's suggestion that Alzado is only the tip of a frightening iceberg. "I don't think we've even begun to see the consequences of steroid use," he said. "Alzado will be the first of a lot of big names to come down with cancer."

Tennant also charged the NFL with having, until recently, a carefree attitude about steroids. "I tried to start cracking down on steroids in the NFL years ago," he said. "No one wanted to believe steroids could do this."

Dr. John Lombardo, the NFL drug advisor for anabolic steroids, wasn't available for comment.

For its part, the NFL is the only sports league testing for steroids, a policy begun in 1987. That means Alzado could have used steroids throughout his career with no threat of detection. And it means his estimate that 75 percent of his colleagues were using them sounds plausible.

The attraction was obvious — a shortcut to success, a body that would make coaches drool. "That big, massive guy I was," Alzado said. "I hate to admit this, but it was all phony."

In their book, "Drugs and the Athlete," Dr. Gary I. Wadler and Dr. Brian Hainline wrote that steroids are routinely abused by athletes. "Since the doses of anabolic steroids used by athletes may be in excess of 1,000 times the normally prescribed doses, it is reasonable to anticipate that the number and severity of adverse effects will significantly exceed those reported with therapeutic doses," they said.

In 1989, the NFL began suspending players who tested positive for steroids, sitting down 13 that year and three last season. Alzado routinely would have been tested as part of his pre-training camp physical last year but wasn't suspended. That may be because his steroid of choice, according to Sports Illustrated, was HGH, human growth hormones, for which there are no effective tests. The comeback ended quickly because of injuries. In late March, his cancer was diagnosed.

Alzado went public in the hope that his plight might convince other football players to steer clear of steroids. He is an exhibit now, a lesson to be learned.

This situation is very much like the Len Bias case. In June 1986, Bias was the second player chosen in the NBA draft, a million dollar contract in his grasp, a dream about to be delivered.

Within 48 hours, he was dead from a cocaine overdose.

Hopes were expressed then that Bias' death would serve as a warning, an alarm for athletes walking on that thin edge. But only a week later, NFL defensive back Don Rogers died.

Cause of death: An overdose of cocaine.

ANGELS: Howie named TL Player of the Month

(From 1C)

McConnell's sacrifice fly scored Bobby Jones.

But Wichita broke the game wide open with a five-run fifth that began with four straight singles and ended when Valentin smacked his seventh homer of the year over the right-field fence.

ANGEL DUST: Mark Howie was named the Texas League player of the Month for his outstanding June. Howie, also selected to play in the first Double-A All Star Game later this month in Huntsville, Ala., hit .390 in 28 games in June, collected 38 RBI and launced 10 homers.

Alan Sontag will put his 1-2 record on the line tonight for Midland when the six-game series resumes at Angels Stadium. Frank Seminara, 8-2, will start for Wichita. Seminara's 2.52 ERA is second among starters in the TL.

Gates open today at 6 p.m. A fireworks show will begin immediately after the game.

UTEP coaches angry with school's action

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texas El-Paso assistant coach Rus Bradburd, accused of violating NCAA rules, lashed out at university officials Monday, saying he and another coach were fired in a "shabby" attempt to cover up deeper institutional problems.

Bradburd and assistant coach Greg Lackey were fired over the weekend after UTEP completed an internal investigation of its basketball program. The NCAA has accused the school of 13 violations, including lack of institutional control.

Bradburd is accused of giving rides to players and recruits, and of lying to an NCAA investigator.

"I think what they've done is a shabby attempt to try and cover up obvious problems institutionally by dismissing the lowest guys on the totem pole," he said.

Bradburd said he and Lackey were singled out because "it was a convenient and inexpensive way to solve the problem."

Lackey has admitted giving a ride to UTEP player Ralph Davis because he was stranded without a ride. He said a recruiting visit he made to former player Francis Ezenwa had the approval of school officials and the Western Athletic Conference.

Malone's status tops hectic day for NBA

Associated Press

Moses Malone, the seventh player in NBA history to score 25,000 points, is a free agent again.

Malone, who signed big free-agent contracts with Philadelphia in 1982 and Atlanta in 1988, had his Hawks' career officially ended Monday when they traded for Denver center Blair Rasmussen and put him on the roster in Malone's place.

The Hawks thus made Malone an unrestricted free agent ineligible to return to the Hawks for a year.

Malone, a 15-year veteran, lost his starting job early in the 1990-91 season and averaged a career-low 10.6 points. He still managed to lead all NBA reserves with 8.1 rebounds per game.

The Hawks gave up veteran guards Doc Rivers and Spud Webb and the rights to first-round pick Anthony Avent in three deals over the past week.

"I wouldn't say we're cleaning house," coach Bob Weiss said. "That implies that we didn't like what we had, and that's not true. We see a need to get younger without making the talent base deteriorate."

The NBA champion Chicago Bulls, meanwhile, are trying to stand pat with their veteran players.

On Sunday, they exercised an option to keep reserve forward Cliff Levingston, and on Monday they announced their intention to try to re-sign starters John Paxson and Bill Cartwright and backup center Scott Williams.

"It is our intention to sign Cartwright and Paxson," Bulls vice president Jerry Krause said. "We have no timetable. Now it's just a negotiating process."

Cartwright's agent, Bob Woolf, said he has been contacted by another team but declined to say which one.

"We must look into all alternatives, but I know Billy likes Chicago and wants to stay in Chicago," he said.

The Bulls also have the right to match any offer made to Williams, who will undergo surgery on his right shoulder this week and may have an operation on his left shoulder later in the month.

Rick Mahorn became a free agent after the Philadelphia 76ers decided not to sign him to the $1.6 million option year in his contract.

"The decision will allow us greater flexibility, but does not preclude us from signing Rick at a later date," said Gene Shue, the team's general manager.

Although he could sign with the 76ers, Mahorn is free to strike a deal with any team in the NBA.

WHEATON: Minnesotan to brush himself off, play today

(From 1C)

play good tennis tomorrow, I'd be in a lot of trouble."

He did not elaborate on what kind of "trouble" he was talking about, but it is easy enough to make an educated guess.

It is hard to think that a man who stands 6-foot-4 with a serve like a siege gun would get lost in any crowd, but it has happened to Wheaton. And it could well happen again if he fails to capitalize on what was surely the biggest win of his brief, up-and-down career.

Wheaton's ascension through the tennis ranks began in earnest in 1989, at the very time Americans were casting about for young, world-class players to replace the aging duo of Connors and McEnroe.

Unfortunately for him, a handful of contemporaries made it into the boat first. And if Wheaton fails to get on board this time, you get the sense (and he probably does also) that it could cost him dearly.

Michael Chang won the French Open in 1989 at the tender age of 17 and soon after was rewarded with a big, fat contract that required nothing more taxing than smiling while inflating a pair of overpriced sneakers. Twenty-one-year-old Andre Agassi hasn't won a major, but he has won enough other tournaments to earn considerably more as a pitchman for a different brand of overpriced sneakers. Pete Sampras hit the big time last summer by winning the U.S. Open at age 19. Jim Courier's ship came in last month in Paris, where the 20-year-old smoked Agassi in the final.

There is only so much hardware and so much money to go around. And to their credit, once each of the aforementioned got a foot in the door, they have been harder to send packing than an uninvited relative. Courier, the most recently successful, is the highest-ranked at No. 4 in the world, followed by Agassi at No. 5, Sampras at No. 9, Chang at No. 11.

Wheaton, meanwhile, with only one singles title on his resume, has lagged behind at No. 20. Now, with the total number of his Wimbledon challengers reduced to 15, and his youthful American classmates cut back to just Courier and Agassi, his chances to break through have never been better.

"I think this is my best surface and I think I am a contender in this tournament," he said. "I wouldn't necessarily say I am going to win, and go out on a limb like that. But I think I have a chance."

Wheaton cashed in the Czech and his magnificent obsession Monday on Centre Court by pounding out 16 aces and 44 service winners, several of which cranked the radar gun as high as 120 mph and all of which averaged out to 107 mph.

TENNIS: Agassi moves to quarters with three-set win also won, including Steffi Graf, Gabriela Sabatini, Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and Mary Joe Fernandez. Jennifer Capriati, the 15-year-old seeded ninth, struggled again before beating Brenda Schultz 3-6, 6-1, 6-1.

(From 1C)

Lendl offered no excuses for his loss, save the mention of hand surgery that cut down his training for the one championship he can't seem to win and can't stop thinking about.

He had played down the obsession to conquer this tournament that plagued him last year, and now left it feeling he had done the best he could under the circumstances. If Lendl, 31, saw the opportunity to win here slipping away, he kept it to himself.

"I was beaten fair and square," said Lendl, who abandoned his baseline game more than ever to try his luck at the net. "I'm disappointed, but there's no point to be angry about it."

Wheaton, wearing his Stars and Stripes headband, engaged Lendl in a heavyweight tennis battle that featured 115 service winners — 60 by Wheaton — and many knockout volleys.

Neither player showed the quick feet, acrobatic skills or imaginative strokes that have helped Becker, Stefan Edberg and John McEnroe win Wimbledon.

Rather, Wheaton and Lendl relied mainly on booming serves and lumbering forays to the net that resulted in quick points and produced a tedious three hours of tennis.

Wheaton complained frequently about calls — he thought he had more than the 16 aces he was credited with — but played down the importance of the victory.

"It's not like a boxing match where you knock the guy out and go celebrate," he said. "I have another match tomorrow against a good player (Jan Gunnarsson). If I don't go out there and play good tennis tomorrow I'd be in a lot of trouble. The big thing is not to get too up after you win. But still, I'm going to enjoy a big win like this."

Agassi, a first-round loser in his only previous Wimbledon four years ago, also is gaining confidence with each match and has no seeds in his path the semifinals.

"As the days go by, I'm starting to understand the concept of grass," he said. "I think grass beats up your body a lot more than other surfaces, in the sense you're always digging out balls and having to bend.

"I sure feel like I'm playing well enough to do exceptionally well. But until you can compete against the Edbergs and Beckers, or the big serve-and-volleyers match after match, then that's a true test of your ability on the surface. I think I have shown that I'm a contender for sure."

Krajicek served 18 aces against Agassi in only three sets. But when he didn't get his first serve in with any depth or power, Agassi fired 15 winning returns past him.

Krajicek, 19, had only three break points, all in one game.

Agassi saved all three break points and went up to wrap up the set.

"I felt when it came the crucial points," Agassi said, "that's where I had the edge on him."

Prices get boost

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose Monday on anticipation of strong demand for gasoline on the Fourth of July holiday and a growing sense that Iraqi crude won't be back on the global market any time soon.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in August settled at $20.76 per barrel, up 20 cents, in light volume at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

There was also brisk buying of the gasoline, as traders decided demand will be strong in the short run, as millions of Americans take off for Independence Day festivities later this week.

Natural gas prices remained sluggish, with contracts for delivery in August settling at $1.190 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.8 cents.

Tbill rates mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $10.47 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.59 percent, up from 5.58 percent last week. Another $10.44 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.71 percent, down from 5.76 percent last week.

Stocks surge

NEW YORK (AP) — An interest rate reduction in Japan and new signs of recovery in the domestic economy provided the inspiration Monday as the stock market ran up its sharpest gain in 2½ months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 51.66 points to 2,958.41, recouping in a single session almost all of last week's 58.81-point loss.

Interest lifts dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose sharply Monday as the outlook brightened for firm U.S. interest rates and after the Bank of Japan lowered that country's discount rate.

The dollar rose 1.65 pfennigs against the mark in New York, closing at 1.8280 marks, up from 1.8115 late Friday.

The dollar also gained nearly 1 yen in New York, rising to 138.42 yen from 137.525 yen late Friday.

The British pound fell to $1.6095 in New York from $1.62175.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday's prices, included: 1.5652 Swiss francs, up from 1.5525; 6.1920 French francs, up from 6.1380.

Natural-gas prices go through floor

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The collapse of natural-gas prices this week is expected to radically affect local producers and cause a further decrease in the rig count.

Monday's price for natural gas was $1.02 per Mcf at the Waha header near Fort Stockton and dropped to as low as 95 cents in Wyoming, according to Robert K. Anderson Associates, Midland natural-gas consultants.

Natural gas in the Four Corners area of New Mexico already has been selling for as low as 40 cents per Mcf, according to industry sources.

Prices have dropped to their lowest point since the early 1970s.

"This is a critical situation for the oil and gas industry," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

"Some producers have already shut-in gas wells, and I would expect others to follow suit," he said.

Spannaus said he fears the low prices will hinder the push for natural gas as a premium fuel.

He said the crash of gas prices most certainly would cause the rig count to go even lower.

"It was just a few months ago that there were more rigs drilling for natural gas than oil — now it has flip-flopped," Spannaus said.

According to Hans Hansen, the $1.02 for gas delivered to the Waha header, a juncture point for the the El Paso Natural Gas main line to California, does not count the gathering charges.

"Gathering charges can hit producers for another 15-20 cents," he said.

John McFall, a spokesman for El Paso Natural Gas, said the transportation cost from Waha to California is approximately 63 cents.

Basic supply and demand patterns are seen as the cause of the rapid drop in prices.

"It's basically a matter of too much gas and not enough consumption — the old story of supply and demand," Hansen said.

Ed Parker, senior vice president of marketing for Meridian Oil Co. in Houston, said that in June approximately $1.9 trillion cubic feet of gas competed for $1.4 trillion cubic feet of demand.

He said mild weather and a natural-gas distribution system in limbo also were responsible for the downward pressure on gas prices.

"Open access initives proposed by FERC have not come to full fruition. You still have too many sellers trying to get into pipelines controlled by a handful of distribution companies," Parker said.

With such a mild winter, most natural gas storage is now full, he added.

"You find major oil company producers deep discounting natural gas just to get it in the pipelines. They use the revenue to finance overseas drilling and downstream operations," Parker said.

While Hans Hansen said that none of his clients had shut-in gas wells in response to low prices, Parker said Meridian had shut-in considerable production, amounting to nearly all of its spot market capacity.

"It is our opinion that unless someone exercises discipline and shuts-in gas, the present price collapse will be longer than short term — maybe for the next three months," said Parker, who believes that if Canadian producers and other U.S. producers shut-in about 25 percent of their production, prices would begin to improve.

"We can shut-in enough gas to make a difference, but it is going to take discipline from all the producers across the board," he said.

Manufacturing economy ends decline, survey says

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. manufacturing ended a yearlong decline in June and pushed the overall economy further out of recession, a national group of purchasing executives said Monday in a widely followed survey.

The National Association of Purchasing Management's business activity index, a sensitive barometer of economic trends, soared to 50.9 percent from 45.4 percent in May.

Economists said the improvement in the index was further evidence that the nation's economy is emerging from the recession that by official reckoning began one year ago.

The purchasing managers report was welcomed on Wall Street and foreign exchange markets, with stock prices and the dollar's value rising on the news.

June's increase carried the index past 50 percent, the point at which the association says the manufacturing economy generally begins to expand. It was also the second straight month that the index was above 44 percent, the level at which the overall economy begins to grow.

The index, compiled from a survey of purchasing officers at more than 300 industrial companies, had not been above 50 percent since May 1990, when it registered 50.1 percent.

At its low for this recession, in January, the index stood at 37.7 percent.

"It's a further indication that we're beginning to crawl out of the recession," said David Wyss, chief financial economist with DRI-McGraw-Hill, a forecasting and research concern in Lexington, Mass.

By itself, the purchasing managers survey does not mean the recession is over, but Wyss and others noted it compounded other evidence of a rebound, such as in increase in orders for durable goods from factories and a rise in hiring by companies.

"All the indicators are pointing upward," Wyss said.

Ashland Oil says purchase of Permian Corp. is complete

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Ashland Oil Co. said Monday it has completed its purchase of The Permian Corp., a crude-oil collection and distribution company, for about $225 million in cash, stock and assumed debts.

Ashland is paying $75 million in cash and 2.2 million shares of its common stock for Permian. It is also assuming $83 million in debts.

Based on the closing price of Ashland's stock on June 28, the value of the shares was about $66.8 million.

The former parent company, National Intergroup Inc., agreed to sell Permian to Ashland on April 29. Permian, which National Intergroup has owned since 1985, is one of the nation's largest gatherers and distributors of crude oil.

As part of the agreement, National Intergroup said Ashland will assume about $83 million of Houston-based Permian's debts, and Permian will forgive $14 million in debts owed by National Intergroup.

National Intergroup, based in Carrollton, Texas, said it anticipates "some favorable adjustments to previously recorded losses on this sale," but the changes wouldn't be recorded until the end of the third quarter in September. No figures were announced.

Partners who held Permian before its 1985 sale to National Intergroup had conditional value rights that entitled them to payments under certain circumstances if the company were resold. However, National Intergroup said the conditions were not met and no payments are anticipated.

Ashland Oil, based in Ashland, Ky., is the nation's 16th largest refiner of crude oil.

National Intergroup is the parent company of Fox-Meyer Corp., the nation's third-largest drug distributor, and Ben Franklin stores, a franchisor of 1,250 retail variety and craft stores.

Bank can't charge IRA fee without agreement

By Bill Doyle

Q. A bank has put us on a spot. It is demanding a $15 annual administrative fee for my individual retirement accounts and a similar fee for my wife's IRA, both effective 1991. See attached letters.

Doyle

Under the terms when we opened these IRAs in 1985, called the "rules of class" in the bank's letters, there were no fees. We do not have the option to move the IRAs to another institution, because the CDs in the IRAs are not mature and there would be a penalty for early withdrawal. Why should we be penalized for the bank's inconsideration?

The CD in my wife's IRA is approximately $1,000 and her interest per year is only about $60. The bank wants 25 percent of her CD's earnings to cover custodial costs. Talk about loan sharking. We have already moved all our other accounts and banking matters to other institutions.

A. While you can call the bank's action "dirty pool" or "a low blow," it's not loan sharking. That's defined as being charged exorbitantly interest on a loan you obtain. When you have a CD, in effect, you make a loan to a bank by leaving money there for an agreed-upon period of time, during which the bank pays you interest.

A bank can charge any fee it pleases on an IRA, if — and only if — a provision in the agreement signed when the IRA was originated permits such fees. The bank can't lay on new fees out of the blue.

If your original IRA agreement stated, flat out, no fees would ever be levied, you have very good reason to gripe. In that case, take your story to regulatory authorities — the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., 550 17th Street, N.W., Washington, DC 29419, and, because the bank's letterhead indicates it is a state-chartered savings bank, banking regulators in the capital of your home state.

Before doing that, read your original CD agreement carefully. Chances are, you will find obscure words permitting fees to be instituted at a later date.

Q. You indicated the 12 percent reserve requirement banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions must maintain with the Federal Reserve (and on which some of those institutions have stopped paying interest) is tied to the S&L and bank bailout.

As chairman of the board at a S&L, I know the reserve requirement is totally unrelated to the bailout. What support do you have for your statement?

A. While one is not the direct result of the other, they are far from unrelated.

In your position, you surely are aware the reserves your S&L and other depository institutions are required to keep in their vaults as cash or on deposit with Federal Reserve Banks — earning no interest — change from time to time; most recently last December.

And you certainly know the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is making banks pay more into the Bank Insurance Fund and S&Ls pay more into the Savings Association Insurance Fund. Those two funds — BIF and SAIF, for short — were created by Congress in the S&L bailout legislation and are used to pay off depositors when banks and S&Ls go bust and are closed.

The effects of the reserve requirement and the higher cost of either BIF or SAIF have increased bank and S&L operating costs. As a result, some — not all — have stopped paying interest on a portion of customers' accounts equal to the reserve requirement, which can be a high as 12 percent.

Many banks and S&Ls making that move, thereby reducing both their costs in interest paid on accounts and depositors' income in interest received, have sent announcements to customers laying all blame on the reserve requirement. But all depository institutions have been subject to reserve requirements for years.

When a bank or S&L stops paying interest on 12 percent of deposits, customers of that bank or S&L share in the cost of the S&L and bank bailout.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a strong gain today in buying encouraged by an interest rate reduction in Japan.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 1,061 up, 444 down and 460 unchanged.

The Bank of Japan lowered its official discount rate from 6.0 percent to 5.5 percent, touching off a sharp rally in Tokyo stock prices. The Nikkei 225-stock index jumped 3.51 percent.

Analysts said the BOJ's action was taken as a plus for the interest-rate outlook in this country.

At the same time, the Tokyo market reaction served to relieve worries over recent declines in that market.

In the U.S. economy, meanwhile, investors got an early signal that a recovery from the recession might be gaining momentum. A trade group of corporate purchasing executives said its index climbed above recession levels for the first time in more than a year.

Among actively traded blue chips, Bristol-Myers Squibb rose 2 to 79¾; General Motors ⅞ to 41⅝; DuPont 1⅜ to 47¼; Eastman Kodak ¾ to 39½, and Philip Morris 1½ to 65.

Japanese stocks traded in this country were broadly higher. Matsushita Electrical rose 3 to 123 and Kyocera 1¾ to 93¼.

Deere & Co. gained 1½ to 53½. A Wall Street Journal article gave a bullish picture of sales prospects for farm equipment.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 2.67 to 206.14. At the American Stock Exchangve, the market value index was up 1.62 at 359.74.

THE REAL VALUE OF LEASING AN S-CLASS SEDAN TODAY.

The rewards of driving a Mercedes-Benz. Of course you covet the magnificent S-Class sedan. But you wonder: Is leasing a Mercedes right for the times? Yes. Because right now, leasing can help make what may have been slightly beyond your reach within your means.

Higher resale value – Lower monthly payment. Since two factors that determine monthly payments are interest rate and resale value, and since the cars of Mercedes-Benz, as a line, have consistently had the highest resale value in America,* it could actually cost less to lease a 1991 Mercedes than you thought possible.

Like no other dealers in the world.

Take advantage of our special leasing program.† For a limited time only.

BRITT IMPORTS

1004 South Midkiff Midland • 563-3095 • 699-7993

*Cars sold continuously, 1979–88. †Available exclusively from Mercedes-Benz Credit Corp. Excludes Coupe and SL models. © 1991 Authorized Mercedes-Benz Dealers.

Feds move to bar Keating, aides from thrift industry

Keating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Regulators Monday moved to bar Lincoln Savings operator Charles H. Keating Jr. and six others from the thrift industry after a judge rejected pleas that the hearing would harm Keating's defense on separate criminal charges.

In its biggest-ever enforcement action, the Office of Thrift Supervision also seeks $130.5 million in money Keating and the others are accused of looting in four Lincoln Savings & Loan deals.

Regulators say Lincoln lost $12.3 million by improperly funding a stock option plan at Phoenix-based American Continental Corp., Lincoln's parent. The office contends Keating, his family and top executives enriched themselves by selling stock to the plan, which paid for it with loans Lincoln guaranteed.

Attorneys for Keating and the others argued the hearing was unnecessary because their clients don't have any money left. Keating's attorney, Stephen C. Neal, said Keating would agree never to work in the thrift or banking industries again.

Neal also asked Administrative Law Judge Paul J. Clerman to dismiss or at least postpone the civil case so Keating could prepare a defense in other proceedings against him, including a criminal securities fraud trial.

Algerian oil minister breaks ranks, calls for price, production talks

PARIS (AP) — Delegates from 24 oil producing and consuming countries ended a first day of talks Monday without discussing what some view as the foremost issue — oil prices.

But Algeria's new oil minister, Nordine Ait Laoussine, later said that prices and production should not be taboo in the talks. It was "illusory to think you can change anything without talking about price and production," Ait Laoussine told a news conference.

The oil conference sponsored by France and Venezuela is an attempt to overcome misgivings fueled by boycotts, surpluses and price shocks.

The most frequent catch-phrases at the first conference for producers and consumers were stability and diversity of oil supplies, the environment, clean fuel or the exchange of market information by producers and consumers.

Ait Laoussine agreed that prices should not be the focus of the two-day meeting for fear of "killing it." But he suggested that oil consuming and producing countries might have to set what he called a "target" price of between $20 and $25 per barrel, to stimulate supply.

The United States and Britain attended the meeting only relunctantly and belatedly.

Analysts: Fed won't lower interest rates further

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve will not make further cuts in interest rates unless signals that the recession is over turn out to be wrong, private economists predicted Monday on the eve of a key midyear meeting of the central bank.

The Fed's top policy-making group, the Federal Open Market Committee, meets behind closed doors on Tuesday and Wednesday to map interest rate strategy not only for the rest of the summer but also to set preliminary monetary growth targets for next year.

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan will announce the results of the Fed's deliberations on monetary targets when he appears before Congress in two weeks to provide a status report on the economy.

The Bush administration is hoping the Fed will allow the money supply to grow at a sufficiently brisk pace to support the emerging recovery. Some economists said concern over this matter may be the reason the White House has delayed making the widely expected announcement that Greenspan will be re-appointed for another four-year term as chairman.

"The administration may well be dragging its heels on re-appointing Greenspan in order to make sure that the Fed comes out of this week's meeting with money ranges that will provide adequate support for the recovery, especially given that 1992 is a presidential election year," said David Jones, economist at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. of New York.

On the question of short-term interest rates, analysts uniformly forecast that the central bank will not lower rates further given growing signs that the recession has ended.

The latest indication of recovery came Monday with a report that a widely followed index of the nation's manufacturing sector flashed its first signal of growth.

SURVEY: Manufacturing ends yearlong decline

(From 5C)

Critical components of the index posted gains last month, the purchasing managers said.

Production levels grew for the first time since July 1990, with the trade group's production index jumping to 55.0 percent from 48.8 percent in May.

Meanwhile, new orders — the driving force behind the manufacturing economy — posted their second straight big monthly gain. The purchasing managers' new orders index shot up to 59.1 percent from 50.6 percent in May.

Edward Yardeni, chief economist at C.J. Lawrence Inc., a New York investment concern, said the jump in orders "is typically a sign of a great deal of optimism" among manufacturers.

The increase in orders means production will continue to grow in the coming months.

The purchasing managers also said prices and inventory levels declined in June, two more positive developments for manufacturers.

Yardeni said that while manufacturers were deliberately reducing inventories last year in response to signs of recession, stockpiles of goods are now falling on their own.

Bush expresses support for Sununu

N.Y. Times News Service

President Bush expressed support and respect on Monday for his chief of staff, John H. Sununu, and said that months of questions over Sununu's use of government and corporate aircraft for private and political travel should now be put to rest.

In a news conference at his retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine, Bush said Sununu had apologized to him "right from his heart" for the embarrassment that the issue caused.

"I think John said, 'If mistakes were made, I made them.' And what more can a man be asked to say?" Bush said. "And so I'd like to see this matter laid to rest."

The president said he and Sununu had had more than one serious talk about the issue, which surfaced this spring after news accounts disclosed that he had flown extensively on military jets for personal business.

Sununu reimbursed the government for those trips at commercial airline rates, as is White House policy, although the true cost of the military planes was far greater. An internal inquiry concluded in May that Sununu had wrongly classified as official business two visits to ski weekends and that he had not repaid the government for one trip to his dentist.

The issue flared anew last month, when it was disclosed that Sununu had begun flying corporate and privately chartered aircraft to political events after the White House limited his use of military aircraft to official travel.

Bush effectively revoked Sununu's right to travel without prior approval after the disclosure, and said publicly that his aide had created an "appearance problem."

On Monday, Bush made it clear that Sununu still enjoyed his support.

Fort Worth faces future without Carswell AFB

By Mike Drago
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — City leaders Monday began mapping their strategy for the future of Carswell Air Force Base following confirmation that the base will be closed.

Meanwhile, nervous business owners who depend on the facility wonder how they'll get by.

"We will be majorly affected," said Jody Simpson, a sales representative at an appliance rental store near the base. She estimated about 30 percent of the store's business depends on Carswell.

"If it gets bad enough, I'm sure we'll be forced to relocate, like everyone else around here."

The Base Closure and Realignment Commission Sunday recommended that the 50-year-old base be closed along with Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin and Chase Field Naval Air Station in Bee County.

Kingsville Naval Air Station was the only Texas military base winner as the independent commission voted to keep it open.

Fort Worth Mayor Kay Granger met Monday with Rep. Pete Geren, Rep. Joe Barton, consultant James Toal and others to begin assembling a task force to study alternative uses for the base, said public information officer Pat Svacina.

Some of the suggested uses for Carswell include turning it into an industrial park, relocating Meacham Airport there or creating an international trade zone. Citizens also have suggested turning the base into a recreation area.

"None of those options have been explored yet and that's what the task force will do," Svacina said. "That's a huge chunk of land. It's not in any form that can be converted to civilian use immediately."

Part of the task force's goal will be to minimize the economic loss to the region. An Air Force study found that the base pours $212 million into the regional economy every year and affects 12,000 jobs.

Mike Rosa, the research director for the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce, was optimistic that the city would find a way to avert economic disaster in the wake of Carswell's closure.

'Those that remain in the area will be buying the groceries, radios and TVs in the local economy. Those may be nothing more than silver linings, but in a way it doesn't hurt to look at silver linings.'

— Mike Rosa, Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce

"Some 7,000 of those will be (military) jobs we won't have to worry about since they'll be transferred," Rosa said. "The working spouses will be turning in notices to offset maybe a thousand civilian jobs. In a sense, there's kind of a wash effect."

Rosa said there also will be a benefit from military retirees who previously purchased goods at the military exchange.

"Those that remain in the area will be buying the groceries, radios and TVs in the local economy," he said. "Those may be nothing more than silver linings, but in a way it doesn't hurt to look at silver linings. The perception of disaster is a little greater than the reality."

Beeville city officials say they have been in contact for more than a year with companies interested in locating an industrial complex on the land Naval Air Station Chase Field occupies.

City councilman and former mayor John Ybanez said the proposed closure will have little immediate effect on the city.

Mayor Carlos Salazar agreed.

"It's been 18 months since this thing started," said Salazar, who is also a civil service worker at Chase Field. "I don't think the impact will be much different. We've already seen a big slowdown here in business."

But Judy Johnson, 39, whose husband is a retired military officer, said her family will have trouble surviving without Carswell. She said the family depends on the base's hospital for treatment of several chronic ailments.

"That's gonna really hurt us," Ms. Johnson said. "Right now I work because I want to, but when they close Carswell, I'll have to think about paying for medical insurance."

Toal said even if President Bush and Congress approve Carswell's closure, Fort Worth has a while to absorb the impact.

"I think the good news is that we have two years for transition. No where along the way do we have an abrupt change," said Toal, who is expected to be named to the task force. "This community will survive. It has survived worse things."

Drug case ends with sentencing

HOUSTON — The mother of a stillborn baby whose liver was filled with enough cocaine to kill an adult was sentenced Monday to 12 years in prison in a an unusual cocaine possession case.

Traci Jackson spent July 9, 1989, in a Houston crack house where she handled a dish of cocaine before going into a bathroom, apparently to deliver her baby, according to testimony at her trial. People who were at the crack house testified she smoked the drug for several hours.

Another woman testified she found the 3½-pound, stillborn fetus wrapped in a plastic bag in a bedroom. A DNA expert identified the fetus as Ms. Jackson's.

After a four-day trial, a jury convicted Ms. Jackson on Thursday of cocaine possession. She pleaded guilty to theft and to a charge of violating her probation in committing an earlier theft.

Ms. Jackson's attorney, Alex Bunin, said he will appeal the conviction on the grounds of unconstitutional sex discrimination.

"I don't think it should stand, but that's for the appellate court to decide," said Bunin, who took the case on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Ms. Jackson could have been sentenced to 20 years, but O'Brien recommended the lighter term to state District Judge Woody Densen.

"Her sentence was more commensurate with what somebody else with more conventional evidence would have received," O'Brien said.

"It (the conviction) doesn't at all discriminate against men," O'Brien said. "The offense is one that anyone can commit. The only aspect of this case that is different from a standard case is the evidence necessary to prove the offense is particular to women."

Summer brings worry about ozone pollution

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The 100-plus temperatures that have been lingering in El Paso the past few weeks have contributed to an increasing ozone problem as well, officials say.

"When we have temperatures in the 100s and stagnant air, I say, 'Hold on to your seats, the ozone may come,'" said Jesus Reynoso, air quality supervisor at the El Paso City County Health District.

Ozone is a colorless form of oxygen that occurs naturally in the upper atmosphere where it shields Earth from the sun's ultraviolet rays, and it normally isn't a problem at ground levels for most of the year in El Paso.

But summer's intense, direct sunshine causes a chain of chemical reactions that breaks apart hydrocarbons and other compounds. The main sources of the hydrocarbons are vehicle exhaust and volatile vapors from gasoline and solvents, which releases oxygen and turns it into high levels of the pollutant.

On June 17, temperatures in El Paso hit 102, going over 100 for the first time this year. The ozone pollution level reading was 143. Readings above 100 indicate unhealthy conditions and violate federal standards.

It was the highest level reading this year and one of four days since late May that ozone has exceeded federal health standards.

Last year, ozone exceeded federal standards for healthy levels eight times. The year before, the gas clogged El Paso air on 11 days.

El Paso had the country's 15th worst ozone pollution in 1989. The 1990 rankings are not out yet.

In high concentrations, ozone temporarily irritates the eyes and lungs, impairs physical activity and can create tightness in the chest, said Dr. Gonzalo Diaz, a lungh specialist with El Paso Pulmonary Associates.

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

* ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
* MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
* COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
* SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to - $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
