All wire fences connecting and adjoining were also charged with the current, it was said.

The boy is said to have been playing in his yard when he came into contact with the fence. His screams brought help but aid of physicians was unavailing. A call was sent to central fire station sometime later.

Two Rival Political Parties Hold Public Exercises In Ireland

WOLFETONE, Dublin, June 21.—(AP)—At the grave of Wolfe Tone in County Kildare today adherents of the Irish Free State and republicans held rival demonstrations in honor of the man who a century and a half ago founded republicanism in Ireland.

There were no untoward events. Immense crowds gathered from all parts of the country for the exercises. It had been expected that the government might interfere with the military display of the republicans, but there was no interference and the best of good feelings prevailed.

Several Free State ministers and members of the Dail Eireann were present. Peter Hughes, minister of defense, placed a wreath on the grave of Tone and after a review of the troops, delivered an oration on Wolfe Tone's devotion to Ireland. Eamon de Valera, the republican leader also placed a wreath on the grave and addressed a large meeting in an adjacent field. WISCONSIN IN LAST TRIBUTE TO LAFOLLETTE

Noted Statesman's Bier a Shrine for Thousands Sunday Afternoon

BODY AT CAPITOL

Remains Lie in State As Long Lines Pass for One Last Look

MADISON, June 21.—(AP)—Wisconsin paid impressive tribute today to Bob LaFollette as his body lay in state under the great vaulted dome of the capitol.

From high noon until the lengthening shadows of night had wrapped his homeland, persons from every walk of life, the humble shoulder to shoulder with the mighty for a last look upon the features of the man who had dedicated his life to their service.

In the never-ending line that mounted the state house steps in columns of twos and passed single file on either side of his bier were men and women, old and young, children and even babies in arms.

Now A Sob.

Only the slow shuffling of feet and now and then a sob disturbed the silence as the tide of humanity flowed through the majestic rotunda. Many of those who came had to wait an hour or even more under a blazing sun before they might reach the state house steps, but there was never a show of impatience. Neither police nor guards directed them; the people themselves maintaining the column formation which stretched around the capitol square into the streets beyond.

Unashamed tears coursed the cheeks of many men as well as women, as they looked upon the face of the sleeping senator. Peace was written there. The only lines were those of a gentle smile.

The casket rested under the spreading rays of a subdued light that stole down from the narrow glazed windows set high in the curve of the dome. A bank of palms and flowers was its background.

Flag Over Casket.

A large American flag covered the foot of the plain casket and two others hung from a marble balustrade which blended itself into the bower of palms and flowers. Flanking these on each side were Wisconsin state flags.

Resting at the head of the coffin was a basket of lilies, roses and gladiolaas, the remembrance of the Chicago Teachers' Federation. At the foot was the wreath from President Calles of Mexico.

At each end of the bier two members of the state legislature stood as a guard of honor—motonless throughout the hours. A single sentinl at the rotunda entrance separated the double column into single file. When at last the huge bronze doors of the open entrance to the state house had been swung shut, the body was moved back to the governor's reception room to remain until the hour of the funeral services—1 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

THE WEATHER

"Papa gave me this quarter 'cause he backed the car over my favorite toad."

LYRICS OF LIFE.
By Douglas Malloch
The Bashful Age.

The wife and I don't talk a lot
About—well, most of us do not.
We go along from day to day
And think of things we never say
That lots of younger couples would—
We sort of leave it understood.
No, I don't say a lot, you see,
She doesn't say a lot to me,
You're different at seventeen
About—well, you know what I mean.

The wife and I ain't much for talk.
We do more thinkin' when we walk
The talkin', just like most folks do,
I mean like folks like me and you.
And yet we never pass a farm
But what we see some fellow's arm
Around some girl, or mighty near.
Him sayin' things they like to hear,
Yes, cooin' like a turtle-dove
About—well, what I'm speakin' of.

The young folks seldom hesitate
At speakin' out, and talkin' straight
And sayin' what is on their mind
When someone that they like they find
You read a lot of "bashful youth."
And yet, by gosh, and here's the truth,
If you would see a bashful pair,
That never speak, and never dare,
Just wait until some parr appears
That have been married thirty years.

CONCEIT, KAY'S THEME BEFORE SUNDAY CLASS

He Tells Them that a Swelled-Head Is Bad Thing

TALKS ON EVOLUTION

Blames It As Possible Cause of Man's Conceit

A warning that a "swelled head" was one of the most reprehensible "diseases" he knew and one of the things he couldn't understand was sounded Sunday mroning by Judge John C. Kay in his Bible class lecture at the Strand theater. This observation was made in connection with a few comments on man's evolution which ,the speaker asserted, might be responsible for some of the conceit men exhibit.

His address in full was as follows:

If there is any truth in the doctrine that man is descended from some lower animal—I say, if there is any truth in that—then, it must have been the measuring worm that he came up from, for, of all things that man likes best to do, it is to measure other men and other things. He likes to have scales to weigh things in, and a yardstick to measure distance, a telescope to see what is beyond him, and some acid to pour on things to see what the chemical reaction will be. Why does he do that? I don't know. You don't. Except, it is some trait that has come down from above us and beyond us.

I am one of those that believe, and I must believe, that:

Thru the ages, one increasing purpose runs
And the thoughts of man are broadened with the process of the suns.

An Old Theory.

Man used to think that the earth was the center of all things, and that the stars moved around it. Copernicus and some others destroyed that theory and showed that the sun was the center around which things moved. And, then, when the elder Hersch l made those momentous journeys of his into sidereal astronomy, and showed that there were other suns and other worlds, man got a new name for things and called it the "universe," and now, out in California, where they

Panhandle Watching New Denver Lines

PANHANDLE, June 21.—Citizens of Panhandle and Claude are very much interested in the proposed railroad from the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway company main line at Claude to Panhandle and north into Hutchinson county. The proposed road would tap not only a large oil field but one of the richest agricultural sections in the Panhandle of Texas. There are no engineering problems to be encountered, most of the way being at level as a floor. The road would give Panhandle a one-way line into Wichita Falls, the headquarters of most major oil concerns in Texas. Service down state would be several hours shorter than now prevails over the two-way haul. Right-of-way would be given the railroad but it is understood the Burlington system never asks or requires a cash bonus.

FIRST SUMMER DAY IS HOT

City Swelters Under Torrid Sun Sunday; No Relief in Sight Monday

The first day of official summer came into Wichita Falls Sunday as though it meant business and gave one of the most uncomfortable days thus far this year—this notwithstanding the fact that all of last week brought torrid hours and sweltering nights.

A light haze in the air throughout the day did little to alleviate the oppressive heat, and streets were noticably bare of pedestrians and motor cars until the cooler hours of the evening.

Continued fair and hot was the best the weather bureau could offer for Monday.

"Obey" Too Much To Ask Of Bride, So Episcopals Want It Stricken Out

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP) — Recommendations that the word "obey" and the promise of the bridegroom to endow the bride with all his "worldly goods" be stricken from the marriage service, together with the optional adoption by the clergy of a shortened and more modern form of the ten commandments, are urged in the fourth report of the joint commission on prayer book of the Episcopal church, made public today.

The report, which is to be submitted for approval to the forty-eighth triennial convention of the church at New Orleans, October 3 to 23, also recommends the elimination from the books of common prayer of the instructural paragraph withholding from the unbaptized, excommunicated and suicides the rite of the burial service.

Numerous other changes in the book of common prayer recommended by the commission provide for the introduction of new prayers, substitution of modernized phraseology for obsolete verbiage and the transposition of certain services to lend logical continuity to the entire book.

CAL APPROVES LONG EXPECTED PRO UPHEAVEL

All Plans Worked Out by Secretary, Says Report

BE ANNOUNCED SOON

Rumors of Many Changes Believed to be in Order Now

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Plans for the long expected reorganization of the federal government's prohibition enforcement system have been worked out by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury and have received presidential approval.

Announcements Soon.

Announcement of changes to be made is looked for in a day or two. Meanwhile complete secrecy surrounds the new program. Officials declined to comment tonight and there was no indication where replacement of any officials was contemplated nor whether the program provided only for changes in methods.

Mr. Andrews held a lengthy conference with the president yesterday but refused to discuss the meeting. It was disclosed today, however, that his visit was for the purpose of laying his whole enforcement program before the chief executive and that as Secretary Mellon already had done, he gave it full approval.

When Mr. Andrews took over the job of assistant secretary of the treasury in April there was a general shifting of assignments among the treasury executives, and he was made field marshal of the various enforcement agencies, with supervision over the prohibition unit, the coast guard and the customs service. He said at that time that he had no intention of effecting changes until he was thoroughly acquainted with his job and then would alter the enforcement methods only to accomplish greater efficiency.

Frequent Rumors.

Since Mr. Andrews took charge there have been frequent rumors of a change in the office held by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, but the treasury has replied each time that no change was contemplated. No one would talk about this phase of the reorganization tonight. It appeared certain, however, that some officials who have been connected with enforcement work would be gradually weeded out and replaced by men who measure up to Mr. Andrews' program.

The assistant secretary is known to be well satisfied with the coast guards work and has frequently complimented its personnel for the effective steps taken against rum runners.

This will probably be the first ruling to be requested of the attorney general on the regular laws of the thirty-ninth legislature.

BIG BUY MADE

Texas Company Buys Stuff In Putnam-Moran For Big Price

FORT WORTH, Texas, June 21.—The big purchases of production in Texas continues and a summary of the sales since the first of the year would look like a composite statement of the twelve federal reserve banks.

Olympia Oil and Refining company purchased the holdings of the Dixie Gasoline company in the Byrd oil and gas field of Brown county, near Brownwood, West Central, Texas, which included about 1,000 acres of proven or semi-proven leases, paying more than $500,000, exact sum not announced.

The Texas company brought its purchased in the Putnam-Moran shallow district of Shackelford-Callaghan counties, West Central Texas, to about $1,000,000 when it paid $250,000 for the holdings of Leslie Spoonts, L. H. Chouste of Fort Worth and associates on the Diller Brothers ranch.

600 Bbls. a Day.

Production there amount to about 600 barrels daily, most of which is from a prolific pay from three wells at 550 feet.

Landreth Production company made its entrance into North Texas by purchasing the Garrison, Keys and Ealick 60 acre lease in section 53, block 14, Wilbarger county, for $125,000. Landreth has as a rule confined its operations to the Breckenridge-Eastland district.

There were several disappointments and a new pool or two scattered over North and West Texas. In the Barney Carter district, an effort at an eighth-mile extension east failed when Cornelius Brothers No. 1, Spicer, northwest of the southwest of the middle quarter of section 2, block B, T. & N. O. Ry. survey.

However, the pool went south across a 40-acre stretch when Jerome McLester and associates No. 2, Pritchard, southwest of the northeast of the west quarter of section 2, made 2,000 barrels initial at 3,528 to 2,536 feet after throwing a scare into every body when it started off at 325 barrels a day.

New Balcomnes Area.

Upon the second test hinges the fate of the new south extension of the Richland pool in Limestone county, which at this writing had drilled the plug at 2,873 feet and was drilling on down to 2,985 feet, where rat holing stopped after entering a gas sand one foot.

The test is Graves and associates No. 1, Stubbs, 700 or 800 feet east of Barkley and Meadows No. 1, Hilburn, the first oil well there after four gassers and two dry holes. Both tests are in the M. Boren survey. Sun Oil company owns the majority of the acreage north and west of the well and dry holes and gassers limit it southward.

No. 1, Stubbs had the Austin chalk at 2,276 to 2,580 feet, as compared with Barkley and Meadows No. 1, Hilburn at 2,117 to 2,560 feet.

Thursday the oiler was deepened five feet to 2,995 feet and went into a shale break in the Woodbine sand. Its flow rose from 100 to 150 barrels. Top of the pay was 2,981 feet. The oil tests 44 to 46 gravity.

The oiler is about 1,000 feet east of a northeast-southwest line drawn through the row of gassers.

Sun Oil company is starting three wells and Barkley and Meadows two there. There are several other locations pending the completion of the Graves et al No. 1, Stubbs.

Sun No. 1-A, Hilburn, north offset of the oiler, and No. 2-A, Hilburn, a location east, are spudding; Sun No. 2, Hilburn, west offset of the oiler, is drilling at 1,000 feet. Sun's "A" wells are in the Hudson survey, the other in the Boren survey.

Barkley and Meadows No. 2, Hilburn, east offset of the oiler, and No. 3, south offset of the oiler, are derricks, preparing to building rigs.

May Develop Nice Pool.

There is plenty of room for a pool the size of the Richland field in the new district, according to scout reports, and the lure of the high gravity oil is expected to draw even further exploration.

West of Currie, King State Oil company No. 1, Laird, Dunigan survey, is shut down for water at 2,210 feet in chalk, the latter formation having been topped at 1,935 feet. It is northwest of Wortham.

Moore Brothers No. 1, Quimby, Anderson survey, is shut down for water at 2,100 feet in the chalk.

While both these tests are west of what is conceded to be the line of faulting, operators are watching them with more than casual interest.

The dearth of water has caused many wells to shut down and others have not been started for the same reason. This involuntary restriction of drilling may prolong development in the entire East Central Texas district indefinitely.

Gulf Coast Area.

While fields in the gulf coast territory showed a considerable slump in completions and initial production last week, the output was down only about 900 barrels. Total recovery averaged 97,200 barrels as against 98,110 barrels the week before.

South Liberty is beginning to decline in both output and field work. During the week only seven wells were completed at Liberty, as compared with 13 last week, all of which were oil producers.

Fewer new wells are being started now than at any time this year and it is beginning to look as if further development of the field will be slow.

Bashara Oil company Pickett No. 5 made 1,000 barrels at 3,530 feet, the best of the week there, but eclipsed on the gulf coast by a work over at Hull, Republic Production company's Iolbear No. 95, which did 3,000 barrels at 2,560 feet.

Big Waite Phillips Deal Falls Through

The Mid-Continent's largest individual oil deal, the prospective sale of the Waite Phillips company to the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company, fell through early Friday afternoon when the officials of both companies separated after failure to "get together."

In a simply worded statement the news that the prolonged negotiations between Waite Phillips of Tulsa, head of the major independent oil company that bears his name, and R. J. Berry of Findlay, Ohio, vice-president of the Ohio Oil company and president of the Mid-Kansas, had been broken off, was made known. Other than the statement neither Waite Phillips or Mid-Kansas officials cared to discuss the matter Friday night.

What Blocked It.

Just what the stumbling blocks were was not learned, although many opinions are being circulated. The official statement follows in full:

"It was announced late Friday by officials of both the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company and the Waite Phillips company that negotiations looking to the purchase of the latter by the Mid-Kansas had been called off and that no further negotiations are contemplated. It was announced that negotiations that were on were actually only of a tentative variety—in fact never reached the point where a definite price was set of a gauge taken of all producing properties.

"The deal has occasioned much comment on account of the magnitude of the Phillips properties. The properties consist of approximately 15,000 barrels daily production in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas; two modern refineries, one at Wichita, Kan., and one at Okmulgee, Okla.; also one of the most efficient marketing organizations for the sale of petroleum products in the west. The marketing division covers parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas. The value of these holdings are estimated to approximate $30,000,000.

"The statement of the Waite Phillips company was emphatic in one respect, that being that its properties wer positively not for sale henceforth either to the Mid-Kansas company or to any other company. The Waite Phillips company is now in the midst of an enlargement of its refining and marketing divisions to keep pace with its increase in daily crude oil production, particularly at Rainbow Bend, Kan. It is announced that it is the intention to continue expansion in all departments."

It was 10 days ago when scouts of different active companies that maintain offices in Tulsa first reported to their superiors that agents of the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company were appraising the Waite Phillips properties.

Official confirmation has never been received from either company, but the official announcement proves definitely that the deal was on for a while, but that the Mid-Kansas officials hesitated about paying the price that Waite Phillips wanted for the company that he has wrought in the last three years, following the sale of his northern Oklahoma properties then to the Mid-Kansas for $5,000,000.

COTTON CAN'T HOLD GOLD IT CAN COMMAND

Diversified Farming Becomes Most Effective Road to Prosperity

Cotton is king but its kingdom cannot keep the gold that is gathered from every nook of the world.

Politicians have offered many a panacea that would keep King Cotton's gold in the southland but the bankers have offered the wisest solution and it is a very simple one—diversify and keep King Cotton's money as a savings account.

The ten cotton states are North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee. In these states in 1920 there were a total of 2,500,407 farms and of this number 1,872,326 were growing cotton. But neglect of food and forage consumed all the money made by King Cotton, for the average production per farm was only six bales and this money was spent to sustain the farmer's family and livestock. The figures, taken from the census records, are very interesting and should appeal to the farmers of Northwest Texas and Southwest Oklahoma, who raise far more than an average of six bales per farm, but who have not learned that it pays to live at home.

The following figures speak volumes. The larger figures are number of farms and the smaller show the percentage compared to the total number of farms, which is 2,550,407.

Raised no corn	289,827	12
Raised no hay or forage	1,342,918	54
Raised no oats	2,185,506	86

Raised no sweet potatoes	1,481,297	58
Raised no Irish potatoes	2,005,293	79
Grew no cane or syrup	1,942,445	76
Had no purebred animals	2,415,966	95

NEW YORK BONDS.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Bond prices last week moved within a narrow trading area, failing to make much progress despite a revival of interest in special groups. Trading was enlivened late in the week by a vigorous rally in the oil issues, which followed the announcement of the court decision upholding the lease of Teapot Dome naval oil reserves to the Sinclair interests.

Strength of United States government obligations, which continued to establish new high records, was one of the outstanding features of the week. Reasons for the steady accumulation of these issues at current high levels, were found in the abundant indications of easy credit and the serious attention being given by banks and other institutions to reductions in the government's floating debt.

Tax day settlements rarely have been accomplished with so little disturbance of the money market. Call money rates remained stable throughout the week around 3½ per cent but undoubtedly would have tended lower had not surplus funds been withheld by banks from the call loan market instead of being used for liquidation of their indebtedness at the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Reports that several important European loans were impending, occupied the attention of the investment community. Probably the first to appear will be a $15,000,000 bond issue for the city of Berlin for which Speyer and company have been negotiating. The loan will replace a short term credit granted by the same bankers last year.

New financing last week was relatively light, offerings totalling only $59,000,000, as compared with about $86,000,000 in the preceeding week. The July 1 reinvestment demand, however, is expected to attract a number of sizeable new issues to the market.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

NEW YORK, June 21.—In view of the unaltered stability of trade with the opening of summer operations, the business world has derived encouragement from the favorable comparison of current activities with those of a year ago.

In nearly all lines of industry, operations are proceeding at a swifter and more regular pace than the summer of 1924 and the outlook for quiet and orderly expansion later in the year is improved. The seasonal slowing down has been only moderate, as reflected by the fact that steel operations in the Pittsburgh district have been averaging 60 per cent of capacity against 45 per cent at this time last year. Good crops and the maintenance of fair market prices, it is believed, quickly would stimulate a general revival of all commercial activities in the fall.

Railroad movements of freight continued to indicate a fair amount of activity in diversified business channels. Establishment of a new high record for the year by carloadings for the first week in June left little doubt that a broad demand existed for almost all classes of commodities and manufactured products.

The metal price situation last week was decidedly firmer. Even steel and pig iron quotations which have felt the effects of severe competition gave signs of stiffening. A noticeable improvement in the demand for copper was effective in lifting prices of the red metal.

The American sugar producing industry was benefitted by the administration's decision not to alter the present tariff o nthe Cuban raw product. Expanding sales of agricultural implements testified to the better financial condition of farmers generally and their confidence in the season's crop outlook.

The general consensus regarding the steel industry has been that the present moderate volume of new buying would be continued through July and August with perhaps a slight drop in production since the output has been exceeding consumption. The prospect for fall and early winter was held to be promising.

T. U. Law School Is Bigger This Summer Than Ever Before

AUSTIN, Texas, June 21. — Law students are attending the summer school of the University of Texas in greater numbers than ever before during the summer session, according to Miss Lucy M. Moore, registrar. There are 143 students registered in the law school this summer, an increase of 15 over the largest summer enrollment on record for the law school.

Dr. George W. Stumberg of Louisiana State university, will be added to the law faculty during the second term. He will teach a course in bankruptcy, and will remain to teach in the next long session of the university. Professor Stumberg received the J. D. degree from Yale. He was a Rhodes scholar to Oxford, and during the war did legal research for the United States army. Dr. Stumberg will succeed Dr. C. C. Haines, professor of law, who has resigned to accept a position in the southern branch of the University of California.

Oil Gossip

Word comes from Dallas that the Katy, Missouri-Kansas-Texas lines, are reverting to the use of coal rather than fuel oil on twenty of its Parson-St. Louis large freight engines in order to cut the cost of its fuel oil bill which has run into a staggering figure since the completion of Kayt's contract with Mexican Petroleum. The Katy is not the only road that is following this policy; other roads are showing some concern over fuel oil costs and notices of such changes may come some oftener now.

GALVESTON ROAD BONDS PASS

GALVESTON, June 21.—With but one small box out, the $500,000 road bond issue had carried here tonight 1,964 for as compared with but 634 votes against. The bond issue is to permanently pave Galveston's share of the Houston-Galveston road and provides other improvements.

LAND'S END--By William Almon Wolff

"Hello, Bill!" he said to the driver. "How's every little thing by you?"

"Better," said Bill. "Moe, meet my friend. He might buy a boat if you've got one that can start round the block and get back before midnight."

Promptly Moe's hands went into a-tion. He had just the car—yes, yes! He led them to it. Bill gave it one look and Moe another.

"Listen," he said, "my friend's buying a car—see? He ain't starting a museum—see? Nor he ain't planning to keep a service station all summer either—see?"

Moe saw. He led the way, in silence, to another car. To Pete this was a less attractive machine than the first. Its paint was not so shiny; one fender was slightly crumpled. But Bill seemed to be better pleased. Pete amazed and alarmed, saw him swing back one leg and deliver a mighty kick against a front wheel. Moe however, made no protest.

Bill gave the speedometer, with its record of mileage, a perfunctory glance; then got down and examined with meticulous care, the clutch, brake and gas pedals. Later he explained to Pete while when you were dealing with a gyp, nothing really meant anything, you could make a guess at the amount of driving a car had had by the condition of the pedals. Bill said that he himself knew seventeen ways of doctoring a speedometer's total mileage record, and he had never really studied the subject. Moe had really studied the subject. Moe had.

After that the real examination began. Bill started the engine, ran it, throttled down, with a retarded spark; raced it; went over the pump and the hose connections; held a long conference with the carbureter; drained out a handful of gasoline from the vacuum tank, smelled it, and Pete thought, tasted it. He did mysterious things in other parts of the car, emerging from their completion with greasy, oily hands.

Then he took the car out, invited Pete to get in the front seat with him and departed, leaving Moe, wholly unconcerned, behind. He played around in heavy traffic; slipped into Central park; drove uptown to find a hill. In the end he shook his head, plainly puzzled.

"Nothing much the matter with her that I can see," he said. "You'll have to spend a little money—get the valves ground and new rings. But she's worth it.

Pete maintained a respectful silence. He had not known that one went into so many things in a matter of this sort. He had driven a car, some years before, in the country. Now, after a front-seat trip with Bill, he wasn't so sure that the next day, say, would see him blithely driving through Columbus Circle. He went back, looking wise, to Moe's.

Moe, all smiles, greeted him. His eloquent hands expressed his admiration of the car, his confidence in Bill's verdict.

"I've driven worse," Bill admitted grudgingly. 'How much?"

"Fifteen hundred dollars—cash," said Moe.

That sounded reasonable enough to Pete, who knew, within three or four hundred dollars, the list price of that particular machine when new.

"Listen," said Bill, reproachfully, "we just want to buy this bus, Moe,—not all the rest of them you've got here.

Moe spoke rapidly and at great length. He wasn't, eh explained, making a cent. Bill was his friend—hence the sum he had named. To anyone else it would be, and so forth.

"Seven-fifty—take it or leave it," said Bill, interrupting.

Pete gasped. Moe was moved to tearful mirth. Much later Bill turned to P ete

"Give him nine-seventy-five," he said.

"You ain't being stung much at that—he always figured on getting nine-fifty for her."

CHAPTER III
Some Work

Moe was distintcly about Pete's check, but the bank upon telephonic conversation, proved reassuring. Tears were in his eyes still as he folded the slip of paper and put it away. He was losing money. Bill looked almost happy.

"I'll say he didn't put anything over this time!" he muttered. "You drive, bo?"

"I never have—in the city," said Pete. He had been growing more and more modest about his driving for the last hour.

"Don't start now, then," Bill advised. "Just as well turn her over to get fixed up a bit, anyway. And you can take some lesson in one of them school cars. They got rubber fenders on them, I guess.

Bill scouted around outside, found a friend, and commissioned him to drive Pete's car to a place where, he explained, they'd only charge him half as much again as the work to be done ought to cost, instead of twice as much, which Bill said was the usual custom.

"Gosh," said Pete. "I—I'm much obliged Bill. What do you get?"

Once more Bill had an inward struggle. And once more his better nature triumphed.

"I don't know what's got into me!" he said frankly. "You get me, though somehow, boss. "You don't owe me nothing. I get mibe from Moe—see?"

"But he lost money—"

"Say, don't make me laugh! Course if you insist on slipping me something—I saved you some dough at that I guess—'

"I'll tell the cock-eyed world you did!" said Pete reaching for the roll of bills in his pocket. He counted off ten of them and gave them to Bill, and Bill kissed the topmost one.

"Boss," he said earnestly, "You're there. Don't let anyone tell you different. Where you goin' now? The clock ain't working for you—see? Who t'ells the boss?"

"Why, home, I guess," said Pete. It was in the nature of an anticlimax, but that, he realized, was inevitable. You couldnt keep up the pace he had been traveling for the last few hours.

Home was fun, at that. For the first time in several years Pete took out a certain bulging envelope marked outside, "Bills Unpaid," with a smiling, even countenance. A choice lot of bills. He regarded them with something of that mixture of emotions with which a man finds an old package of letters.

There were friendly, pleasant, unobtrusive bills. Bills that wanted to be paid, of course, some time, but wholly at his convenience—whenever he got around to it. Bills, these, from creditors who did business in old-fashioned buildings, and used engraved stationery. There were preemptory, unpleasant bills. Naturally, he wrote the checks for the nice bills first; one had to be fair in these matters.

Later it struck him that he was hungry, and he went over to the Brevoort, and sighed. Just a few years ago the evening would just have started with his arrival in the Brevoort. He would have found most of his friends in the downstairs rooms, and his news could—and would—have been celebrated appropriately. Now—well, the makeshifts made possible by bootleggers didn't appeal to him, and he didn't see a soul he knew, anyway, except some of the waiters.

So he went hom early and planned to go to bed, but got an idea for a lay-out instead, and worked half the night on it, and called Campbell up in the morning, as soon as he had a chance to get to his office, and told him about it, and got an order by telephone, without having to show his croquis, even, and went to work as if he still had only eleven dollars and sixty-three cents in the world; he had the stuff nearly finished by three o'clock that afternoon, when he suddenly remembered that he could go and paint sand dunes and invite Campbell and all other art editors to jump off the dock. Only, of course, he didn't want to paint, now, and he felt, practically far the first time in his life, like illustrating stories and doing advertising layouts.

He was, for fifteen minutes or so, seriously annoyed. He got oua half-finished landscape, and went to work at it, conscientiously, and ruined what might have been a good picture. And then abruptly he had a bash of inspiration. He had money enough to do as he jolly well pleased, didn't he? Well, what he polly well pleased to do was what, for the last five years, he had loathed doing. Soy joyfully, he chucked the smeared canvas across the room and went back to his lay-out, and when, the next day, he delivered it Campbell liked it so much that he added a hundred dollars to the check.

"Stick around a few minutes and they'll have it for you, Pete," he said. This was equivalent to another hundred, really, because, as a rule, Campbell howled like a stricken wolf when Pete or any other artist asked, trembling, if he could have a check by this day week. "I'll put it through right away."

"Oh, never mind!" said Pete. "Let 'em mail it when they get around to it!"

He hadn't known it, but he had been living for years just for that opportunity. Campbell's face, as the words sank in, was beyond description. But he recovered himself as Pete was going out of the door.

"MORE COTTON" THEIR DEMAND.

"More Cotton" is the demand of the International Cotton Congress which held its convention in the city of Vienna this year. A resolution was adopted in favor of a large increase in cotton growing as the only means of meeting the public demand.

Another resolution was adopted to the effect that the industry must be able to obtain raw material on a cheaper basis. It goes without saying that the International Cotton Congress is not made up of cotton growers. And what is the public demand as set forth by this International Cotton Congress?

That the American growers must go back to cheap cotton in order to make large profit for the spinners of the world, as well as the sellers of the world. Never for the grower, mind you. Another demand of the congress is that all governments shall stimulate cotton production by creating efficient transport facilities and by construction of such gigantic irrigation and drainage works as are now being undertaken in the Sudan and India.

There are two million southern families engaged in the production of raw cotton. In anti-bellum days black slaves produced the cotton crop of America, cheap cotton, for New England and Old England where not a pound of cotton came from the earth.

Since the close of the Civil War whites and negroes who are not human chattels, have been the producers of cheap cotton. This is the only great commodity or staple that the buyer insists upon making the classification and also fixing the price.

He classifies the product of another and he fixes the price on that product. Cotton growers of America throughout all time have lived from hand to mouth. Indeed with rare exception the cotton growers of America have ever been financial dependents—that is, they have been carried by others.

Now what will happen to them if the rich fields of the Sudan and of India are made the cotton patches of the world to supply cheap cotton for the spinners of Europe and Asia. There is no labor in the world as cheap as the Sudanese labor unless it is the God-forsaken toiler under the skies of India or China.

This is one of the reasons why the International Cotton Congress at its recent session in Vienna declared that the governments of Europe and Asia should build vast irrigation systems and storage reservoirs whereby the pauper labor of those countries can be utilized in growing cheap cotton for the spinners of the world.

MEXICO.

Knights of the Golden Fleece first invaded Mexico under the leadership of Cortez. They were on the trail of gold. Knights of the Golden Fleece have been busy in Mexico ever since Cortez died. They have appeared in every age of Mexico on period of Mexican history, and ever in quest of the wealth, stored or undeveloped mineral wealth of this rich but unfortunate country.

For thirty years the Golden Fleece Knights of the period have been searching for the yellow sands. Billions of wealth have been taken from Mexico by nationals of other countries. This wealth belonged to Mexico and the people of Mexico. Mexico has 15,000,000 people. There are 12,000,000 illiterate and poverty stricken. After taking the wealth from the soil of Mexico and never contributing to educational or building purposes, these nationals of other countries, throughout the ages, have damned the Mexicans for being illiterate and superstitious and incapable of self-government.

Woodrow Wilson sent John Lind, a Swedish American from Minnesota, to Mexico to pass judgment on its people. Lind returned with the verdict that the natives were illiterate and superstitious and incapable of self-government. Now another eminent citizen of Minnesota, acting in his official capacity, has hurled his bolt at Mexico and its people.

Always kick the under dog. It is safe. Always side with the strong. It appears to be popular in some circles. Why should nationals from other countries make the laws for Mexico and the Mexicans. Why shouldn't nationals of other countries, living in Mexico in quest of the golden sands, bow to the tax laws of Mexico and respect the edicts of Mexican courts.

It is a long road from Cortez to the present day, but it is lined with plunder.

NEVER SNEER AT THE WOPS.

A well known scientific writer volunteers the information that man's first engineering was applied to canals. There were canal builders in the ancient city of Ur of the Chaldees. It is said these canals were built 4,200 years ago. In Europe the earliest canals were Roman. Traces of such waterways have been discovered in Italy, which show that canal building was carried on long before the rise of Rome. There they were built to irrigate the lands by carrying water from a higher level.

It is said the Chaldeans showed surprising enterprise in canal building more than 40 centuries ago. They dug not one but many irrigating canals. Babylon had its great canals. They served to make the waters of the river Euphrates navigable and were built with considerable engineering skill. Suez Canal was the successor of a great waterway built 2,000 years or more earlier. One canal connected the River Nile with the Red Sea.

Chinese understood canal building at a very early period. They were the first to invent locks to raise vessels from one water level to another. Now four or five thousand years after the first irrigation canals were built under Asiatic skies, the people are building irrigation canals and storage reservoirs in Texas.

Ft. Worth has a great lake of impounded water. Wichita and adjoining counties have a great lake of stored water. Dallas is building one of the largest storage basins in the country. In the upper and the lower Rio Grande valley the people are going back to the methods employed by the ancients.

In drouth seasons it is well to place some of the facts before the people, facts connected with the catching and the storing of flood waters that make the earth blossom like the favorite rose gardens of Persia. Modern man does not know it al

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

WHEN EDUCATION "TAKES."

President Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, one of the leading American institutions of learning, is making an effort to persuade colleges to admit only such students as are really anxious to educate themselves.

He is perfectly right in contending that a large number of men go through college without getting anything out of it.

Education is like smallpox, in that it "takes" with some people, and with others it does not.

I have been associated with many college men.

I have found that the college men, if they really worked at college, and were interested in what they were doing, got along better in the beginning, and usually had less difficulty in after years, for their equipment enabled them to take many short cuts while the non-college men were taking the long way round.

But I have known dozens of men who went through colege, did just enough work to graduate, and in a few years were no better off than if they had spent the college years at work—perhaps not so well off.

For the time of professors and instructors to be wasted in seeking to pound knowledge into heads that are too dense to contain it is a waste of time and money.

The future of the world depends on education.

But the man who goes to college merely to "get by" does not get an education.

And a man who never went to college at all can get a very excellent one, as witness Abraham Lincoln, and many other great men of most of the civilized nations of the world.

It is my belief that no boy ought to go to college unless he expresses a strong desire to do so, and gives some reason for that desire that is better than a wish to row on the crew or play on the football team or take part in the activities of the place.

It is also my belief that no boy ought to be kept in college longer than the first year unless the marks that he receives show that he is really interested in the work.

For if he is interested he will do it well enough to get good marks.

If he is even as interested in it as he is in the athletes and their records he will do well, for where his interest is his mind will be, and it requires no superhuman efforts to stand well in an institution which graduates yearly many hundreds of boys.

But if an education is not going to "take" it is not worth administering.

If a boy is to forget in a few years not only all he learned, but all the methods of study that were taught him that he might the more easily complete his education on his own account, a college education is wasted on him.

He may, it is true, get a little social pleasure out of his "bright college years," but it is not necessary for educators to expend their efforts on him for that. He can make his way socially on his own accont, without troubling with mathematics and the ancient and modern languages.

It is a mistake for parents in straightened circumstances to skimp and save in order to send boys to college in the hope that they will get advantages their progenitors lacked.

Let them first determine if the boys are the kind that will work for these advantages.

If they are not it would be better to send them out into the world and find how hard it is to make a living without all that can be taught them.

WHERE THE STANDARD BUTTED IN.

Nebraska is on the map again. Lincoln is on the map. Lincoln is the home of Charles W. Bryan. Now the city of Lincoln maintains a retail gasoline station. This station retails gasoline at the price of 18 cents. They get their supply from independent dealers.

Of course, the Standard maintains stations in the same city. Selling price is 22 cents at retail. Now the Standard attorneys say that operating a filling station is not a part of the business of government, and they have gone into court asking for a perpetual injunction.

They deny the power of the people of Lincoln to vote to maintain such a station when the only grant of power contained in the law which gave them permission to frame their own charter, was for its own government.

Speaking for the Standard, these attorneys say that operating a filling station is not a part of the business of municipal government, that gasoline and oil are not necessaries of life and that no combination in restraint of trade to fix or control prices had been in existance to justify such a step by the city government.

Charles W. may come back next year. He is on the firing line. He says the state republican government of Nebraska and the state republican machines are spokes in the wheel of big business. In the language in the old time sport, "let her roll."

THEY FIX THE PRICE.

Americans are the greatest coffee consumers of the period. Americans consume 70 per cent of the rubber output of the world. In a very few years the price of rubber has jumped from 17c to 75c per pound and now the price of coffee is climbing to the skies.

Brazil is the principle coffee producing country and the Brazillian government restricts the sale and fixes the price. Colonies of Great Britian produce most of the raw rubber of the world and the British nationals backed by their government, restrict the output and fix the price of rubber. Business is business.

John Bull will make the rubber purchasers of America pay the war loan made by the United States to Great Britian, and the Brazillian statesmen will see to it that American coffee drinkers pay a high price for their fancy beverage.

Brother Johnathan may be all powerful. He may be the banker of the world. He may hold the purse string of the world, but when it comes to raw rubber and the coffee bean, he is going to be pinched until it hurts.

SCOPES WITHOUT PRICE.

John T. Scopes of Tennessee is a young school teacher without price. Thus far he refuses to surrender to the lure of wealth. He has turned down offers from movie managers aggregating $150,000, while in New York advising with attorneys and scientists in his defense.

A motion picture corporation offered $50,000 for the rights to the trial and for the young biologist to appear in a production. Offers to write for syndicates and various others brought the sum well beyond $150,000.

Scopes refused them all. He declared that the big thing is the trial and that nothing else matters to him. In fact, he even refused offers of theater tickets, insisting on paying his own way. Would William Jennings Bryan turned down these offers had he been John T. Scopes

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE
Germini

Today's planetary aspects are, on the whole, favorable, although there will be two brief periods of adverse conditions. The first between noon and 2 p. m., and the second, after 9 p. m. These, however, are both of short duration, and need not interfere with the work outlined for the day, provided they are carefully borne in mind, and impulsive acts or decisions avoided. The signs denote that all professional work will hold out great promises of success, and any venture along artistic or literary lines will not be abortive. The indications presage that any important change in either business or private relations, made today, and always provided that it is not based on emotion but founded on mature judgment, will be beneficial to all interested parties.

Not much of a positive character can be said about the child born today. Health conditions promise to be uncertain and indefinite, and, while serious consequences need not be feared, sickness will cause worry and axiety, and demand watchful care and unremitting attention. Boys will apparently enjoy better physical conditions than girls. In disposition and temperament, the future can be prognosticated with sureness and reliability. Children brought into the world under today's auspices will be patient and cheerful, and they will, with very few and rare exceptions, possess high ideals and keen consciences. They will, at no time, be prepared, to sacrifice what they know is right for the sake of expediency, or for self-advancement. Only in rare instances will great material success be achieved but they will all leave their mark, and the world will be a better place for their advent.

If today is your birthday, steadfastness and loyalty are your outstanding virtues. Although your exalted view of the obligations of friendship and the responsibilities of love may receive several shocks and setbacks, this will, in no way, abate what may almost be called the quixoticism of your ideals, and, in their names and because of them, you will always be ready to forgive and forget.

You are conscientious in all duties that you undertake, and, while lacking both initiative and originality, the plodding and perservering habits that are characteristic of you will insure for you success—solid but not glittering.

You are at your best in home life, as everything denotes that, as a mate you are loving and affectionate, without being mushy, and, as a parent, ideal, without being foolish. You are devoted to children, and they are to you, as age never dims the spirit of youth that lives within you, and that finds unrestrained and unaffected expression in both speech and action.

HOW IT STARTED

Calling Them "Pallbearers."

Pallbearers are a rather mournful topic. But they are a very definite element of our social life and we cannot help seeing them or hearing about them, or perhaps if we are men, some day ourselves finding conferred upon us the sad honor of carying to his last resting place the remains of a friend. It is meet, therefore, that we know the true significance of the term which has been applied to the office.

The name pallbearers for the friends of the deceased who carry the cofin to the grave is of somewhat indirect significance.

Pall comes from pallium, which means a cover or a mantle, and may be used to designate any kind of rich cloth. But in olden times it was used specially for the heavy covering that was draped over the coffin at a funeral ceremony. And it is for this reason that the men who bore upon their shoulders the cofin came to be called pallbears.

Irrigation

DATA OBTAINED BY THE SOIL SURVEY.

As we have noted in preceding articles, construction work was started on this project, as on many other projects, without preliminary studies of the project problems.

It was ascertained approximately how much water the reservoirs would hold, and about how much land could be covered by irrigation. Beyond this not much work was done.

However, shortly after construction work was started, arrangements were made with the Texas Experiment Stations and the U. S. Bureau of Soil Surveys to have a detail soil survey made here.

This was a great step forward. Many irrigation projects have never had a soil survey made of their lands. Many others, only after attempts had been made to farm lands which a soil survey showed later to be unfit for farming.

The soil survey was conducted on the ground by government scientists. Their work was extremely thorough and accurate. Thousands of borings were made to test for sub-soil conditions. Field tests and laboratory tests were conducted on soil samples so as to group them in their proper classes.

The results of the work of these scientists was compiled and printed in a bulletin. A large scale map was also made of the project which gave in minute divisions the location of each and every type of soil found.

This bulletin and the map contain an immense amount of valuable data. No man need go it blind in buying land here. He can refer to the soil survey and find out at once just what kind of soil is being offered him and what crops it can be expected to grow.

JACKSON COUNTY SCHOOLS HELP ILLITERATES LEARN

ALTUS, Okla., June 21.—Jackson county won the distinction last year of having the public school system that taught more illiterates to read and write in "moonlight" schools than any other county in the state, according to Miss Mattie H. Henry, county superintendent. One hundred and ninety-two illiterates were taught the rudiments of education during last year.

The county school system got another boost recently when State Superintendent M. A. Nash told at the meeting of county superintendents held at Weatherford that although three counties made 100 per cent in model school rating that Jackson county was rated first of the three highest. Every one of the 32 schools of the county received the rating of model or super model.

Sartin and McDonald Confer In Austin On New Free Bridge

D. B. Sartin, county judge of Wichita county, and C. C. McDonald, local attorney, are in Austin today conferring with the State Highway Commission relative to the construction of the $326,000 free concrete bridge to be built across the Red river at Burkburnett.

The commission has advised that former Senator Joseph Weldon Bailey has been employed by the toll bridge interests to protest the building of the bridge but so far no date has been set to hear the argument. It was believed locally that the protest might be argued today or Tuesday.

The commissions of Texas and Oklahoma have approved the project and set aside funds for its construction. The federal department has also given approval. New laws passed by the last legislature give the Texas commission more authority in the building of intrastate bridges and it is believed the commission will not reverse itself on the Burkburnett bridge.

The bridge has been sought by Wichita county and counties of southern Oklahoma for many years. It will open a direct route to Oklahoma City, Tulsa and many other prominent cities of Oklahoma, saving travelers many thousands of dollars annually.

The Texas commission plans to advertise for bids to construct the bridge some time during July. It is estimated that at least a year will be required to finish the bridge after work is under way. The chambers of commerce of Wichita Falls, Burkburnett, Randlett, Walters and Lawton have done much work in having funds appropriated for the bridge.

More Truth Than Poetry

ON BIOLOGISTS

Biologists are people who
Observe what ants and cutworms do,
And how a cotton weevil looks,
And put what they have seen in books.

But do they ever stop the ants
That undermine the garden plants
So that they drop their leaves and rot?
No gentle reader, they do not.

And when a codlin moth they see
Demolishing an apple tree—
Do they on the destroyers fall,
And stamp their lives out? Not at all.

Among the trees and shrubs they lurk,
And watch these demons at their work,
Employing microscopes instead
Of good old arsenate of lead.

I know quite well, and so do you,
Exactly what these insects do
And how, with an unholy joy,
Our trees and gardens they destroy.

And if biologists would find
Some way to kill all crawling kind,
And rid us of them, if they could—
The work they do might be some good!

Through A Woman's Eyes

WHEN WE SEE RED

"I have just returned from a short trip to France and I think American men should take a lesson from Europeans, particularly the Latins. They are so charming, so unfailingly polite and well mannered with women. Compared to them American men are rude and boorish.

"Unless a woman particularly interests him, the American man will not put himself out to be nice to her. But with the European the fact that she is a woman is enough to call forth all his chivalry and his best manners.

"And their clothes! The European is as impeccable in his dress as the American man is careless in it. Instead of the fuss which our men make about changing clothes, they actually enjoy it! What a pleasure it must be for a wife not to have to beg her husband to buy a new tie or to wear it when she buys it for him, not to have to fight to make him wear his 'tuk' to the theatre!

"After being abroad I feel I could never be attracted to the American man. And when I marry I am afraid it will not be to one of my own countrymen."

My dear child, before you marry it would be well for you to learn to distinguish between superficial trivialities and the realities of life. Chivalry is not a matter of bowing and scraping and pulling out chairs, nor marriage one of ties and dinner coats. It may be true that the Continental standards our men have no manners and no style. But where in the world is there a manhood of finer thoughts, or higher ideals, of truer chivalry, than ours? And where are these better husbands?

The European husband may be careful about his dress. The American husband is usually more concerned about dressing his wife.

The American wife may have to remind her husband to be nice to her lady friends. But that is better than wishing that he would be less nice to them!

If you go to Cuba you will find Latin manners at their best. The Cuban gentleman knows how to use his dark eyes and he can bow from the waist just so! But the particular brand of chivalry current there makes it impossible for a woman to go alone on the street after dark without the danger of being insulted. Also the Latin attitude toward women is such that when Latin gentlemen go out for amusement they very frequently leave their wives at home! The girl who admires Latin men should learn something of the position of Latin women.

In Europe the man who is an expert at kissing women's hands may be equally adept at letting his wife press his trousers and shine his shoes. It would be worth pressing trousers and shining shoes, our little admirer of the Valentino school, may say to herself, to have one's husband kiss on'e hands in that way. But wives don't have their hands kissed — gracious no! You must learn the Latin distinction between women and wives.

And when you complain that unless one particularly interests him, the American man does not put himself out to be nice to women, you are touching on what to the more experienced woman is his greatest charm. The Latin adores women, but the American adores a woman! And the homage he reserves for her is worth something.

Also the Latin's delight in being nice to all women is founded less in chivalry than in vanity. He prides himself on having "a way with the fair sex" and likes to see them wriggle under his spell.

It would be as unfair, of course, to brand any nationality of men as being bad husbands, as it is to brand all American men as being bad dressers. But when an American girl writes to me that she could not marry an American man, and how delightful it must be to be married to the beautifully dressed, beautiful-mannered Continental men, particularly the Latins —we see RED.

Seven Injured In Fight At New York Pre-Election Meet

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Seven men and a woman were injured tonight in a fight which resulted in the expulsion of 25 radical labor unionists and nearly disrupted a fusion convention of the socialist and American labor parties to nominate a ticket for the coming city election.

The fight followed the refusal of twenty of 200 delegates to join in a tribute to the late Senator LaFollette and the ejection of 14 because of their "communistic" beliefs.

The delegates who refused to stand a moment in silence in honor of LaFollette and those who were banished from the convention by Algernon Lee, temporary chairman, were representatives of the left wing of the labor party.

Chairman Algernon Lee refused to read a resolution prepared by adherents of the expelled delegates stating that the convention was "a fraud" and was not a socialist-labor fusion conference but a purely socialist convention.

Six Held in Okla. Narcotic Seizures

TULSA, Okla., June 21.—Word of the arrest of six men and the confiscation of narcotics valued at more than $10,000 in Osage county by federal officials during the past week was received here late today.

The arrest and seizure partly uncovers the operations of one of the largest drug smuggling and peddling rings ever to have operated in this section, W. L. Eads, federal narcotic agent for this district declared tonight.

The officer asserted he had received proof that drug shipments valued as high as $50,000 a shipment are constantly being sent into the Indian country.

Forrest is charged with unlawfully accepting certain adjusted service certificates as collateral for loans and charging more interest than is provided for in the compensation act

Jim Claims Negro Pardons Were All Investigated Well

AUSTIN, June 21—(AP)—Former Governor James E. Ferguson tonight declared that the approximately 45 pardons granted negro convicts at the state penitentiary at Huntsville in conjunction with "June Teenth" by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson was done after each case had been thoroughly investigated by himself.

"All the negroes freed were serving long-time sentences and most of them had served many years of their sentences," Mr. Ferguson said. "They were not given any aid from outsiders and many of them had been in the penitentiary so long they had forgotten from which county they came. Each was allowed to tell his story and those pardoned were entitled to clemency."

Sam P. Cochran of Dallas, Texas, chairman of the board of trustees of the Shriners hospitals and Thomas J. Houston, first imperial ceremonial master of the imperial council of America, formally conveyed the structure to the Illinois Shrine and to the city of Chicago.

Security National Bank Outfit Sloughs Monroe's Travelers

COURTNEY HITS FOUR SAFETIES IN FOUR TRIES

Harris, Rawls, O'Leary and Parker Wallop for Circuit

By MACK TURNER

The Security Bankers dumped the Travelers by the merry tune of 13 to 8 Sunday afternoon on the Twilight diamond. "Oklahoma Lee" Courtney and Gabe Harris divided the nine inning affair between them on the mound, and the former aided greatly in scoring of runs with four hits in four times at bat. "Monty" Montgomery and Courtney each scored three tallies.

Four home runs were batted. Harris, Rawls, O'Leary and Parker were the ones to get the round trippers. Jimmy Parker, who poled the last of the quartet, hit probably the longest drive of the season, a hefty wallop far over the center fielder's head.

The Travelers broke into the score column in the first inning off Courtney. After Hefner and Taylor had gone out, Rawls singled to left and scored on Polly Woods' double to the same pasture.

Bankers Cut Up At Start

The Bankers went wild in the first canto and shoved five over the platter. After Curren Brown had passed out at the plate Graves was walked. Flatt flied out to center. Montgomery singled to center, sending Graves to third. On a double steal Montgomery went to second and Graves scored. Montgomery went to third on the throw to the plate to get Graves. Virgil Brown doubled to center scoring Montgomery. Courtney beat out an infield hit to short, sending Brown to third. Harris hit a home run to deep left scoring Brown and Courtney ahead of him. Patterson whiffed.

Courtney breezed through the next two innings. The feature of these innings was the whiffing of O'Leary, Hicks, Hatton and Hefner in fast rotation.

The Securities hammered Hatton from the mound in the third. Flatt rolled out Hatton to Lesley. Montgomery was safe on Hefner's low throw to first. V. Brown flied out to O'Leary. Montgomery stole second and third and scored on Courtney's single to left. Harris singled to right sending Courtney to third. Patterson singled to center, scoring Courtney and Harris. Murrell took Hatton's place on the mound and Hatton went to right field. Murrell stood off the rubber and lured Patterson from the base by winding up and then threw him out at third.

Hefner doubled in the fifth and scored ahead of Rawls when he picked out one of Lee Courtney's slow balls and drove it for a home run.

The bank boys jumped on Pig Iron Murrell's spitter in the fifth and chased over three more to salt away the game. Montgomery beat out a bunt and went to second on Murrell's jungle heave. V. Brown scored him with an infield hit past first. Courtney's third safety sent Brown to second. Both men scored when Jimmy Parker drove a long single to right.

Andy Taylor and Charley Hefner pulled a bit of team work in the fifth when Andy muffed Patterson's fly back of the box. Hefner took the ball in care before it hit the ground, for the putout.

O'Leary's home run and four wide ones to Hicks brought Oklahoma Lee off the mound in favor of Gabe Harris in the sixth. Parker made a nice running catch of Hatton's pop fly in short right. Hicks stole second and third while Gabe was passing Hefner and Taylor. Riley Rawls stopped one with his leg and Hicks was forced over the pan. Hefner and Taylor scored on Montgoremry's error. Montgomery went into left field to capture Murrell's pop fly. Lesley rolled out to first unassisted.

Patterson's long triple and Parker's long drive over Rawls' head for a homer netted the Bankers' final pair in the seventh inning.

Northern Clubs Boast Decided Edge on South

Cats Non-Stoppable—Spuds Near Up and Snort Viciously

DALLAS, June 21.—(AP)—The North Texas teams had decidedly the best of it in the inter-sectional games played last week.

Dallas and Fort Worth each won six out of eight games played, Wichita Falls won five out of seven while Shreveport copped four out of seven from their South Texas rivals.

The week's play resulted in entrenching the Panthers so firmly in first place that another split season seems inevitable, provided the club owners follow their practice of the last five years. By defeating Houston and San Antonio in decisive fashion the Panthers within the last two weeks have increased their margin of leadership from three to nine full games. They have won exactly three times as many games as they have lost.

Buffs Can't Tame Cats.

The Buffs were the latest to essay the role of Panther tamer, and the task proved a profitless one. The Panthers won three out of four games and would have ejected Marvin Goodwin's entry from second place had not San Antonio been equally luckless in their series with Dallas. A feature of the Buff-Panther series was a one-hit game, hurled by Johns who ran his string of victories to ten.

The remarkable reversal of form displayed by the Dallas Steers was an outstanding feature of the week. After dropping two of their first three games, the Steers suddenly took on new life and won five straight, including a double header from the skidding Bears. A change of leadership may have been responsible for the spurt, Larry Gardner having relinquished the reins to the veteran twirler, Snipe Conley. Conley is popular among fans and players alike and it is probable he will get results that Gardner, a newcomer to the league and an amateur in the managerial role, could not get, despite his long playing experience and fine ability. The acquisition of Jack Tesar and Russell Pence, from Tulsa of the Western league, reinforced a wavering pitching staff. Each of the newcomers turned in a well pitched victory for the Steers.

Spuds Cut Up.

Wichita Falls won five and lost two during the week while San Antonio reversed these figures. The Spudders, after weeks of indifferent play, showed some of the form predicted for them before the season. They won all their games through heavy stick work. Tanner seems unable to get his pitching staff to functioning smoothly. The Bears showed little improvement over their disastrous playing of the week previous. Relying on their heavy artillery to win for them, they found themselves at a disadvantage in the North Texas parks where the fences are arther from home plate than in their own hat box lair.

Waco Slipping.

Waco, after displacing Dallas for the leadership of the second division, found the air too rarified, and dropped back to sixth place where they feel much more at home. But unless the Cubs brace up they may drop a notch lower, as the Shreveport Sports served unmistakeable notice that it is not their intention to inhabit seventh place indefinitely. Saturday night found them within half a game of the toboganing Cubs. Like Dallas the Sports seem to have taken on new life with a change of leaders, (the veteran Sid Smith having "replaced" Fred Luderus), and for the first time in several weeks they turned in more victories than losses.

Beaumont has become about as firmly entrenched in last place as the Panthers are in first and for these two positions at least there is little prospect of immediate argument. The Exporters are doubtless fully ready for a new deal in the form of a split season. They won two and lost five during the week.

CLEVELAND 7; WASHINGTON 5.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Cleveland took the third game of the series from Washington today, 7 to 5, the Indians knocking Walter Johnson out of the box in the seventh inning. After driving in three runs with a double in that inning to put his team inthe lead, Manager Speaker saved the game in the ninth by a spectacular catch in deep center with two men on base. Score:

Drug Store Nine Defeats Petrolia

Skipper Shipley with his newly organized Smith Drug store No. 2, baseball club, journeyed to Petrolia Sunday and swamped the Petrolia Wild Cats by a score of 16 to 7. Ralph Walker hurled brilliant ball and was airtight in the pinches. He whiffed nine batters and allowed but nine scratch hits.

Third Baseman Skeelis had a great day in the field for Petrolia. Fritz Taylor, Smith Drugs right fielder, connected for a home run with the bases full. Bob Riley smasked out a double with the hassocks crowded. Paul Whatley engineered a pair of two-ply killings over the Whatley to Glenn Coolidge to Lloyd Taylor route.

"Speck" Moon starred in the outfield with a pair of running catches.

The drug store nine is a strong combination and is open for any Sunday games in nearby towns.

BENGE HOLDS SPUDDER BATS WELL IN CHECK

McCurdy and Gainer Sock Homers—Fans Yelp for Relief

Houston jumped on the crippled Spudders Sunday at the plant with gusto, taking the rubber tilt of the series and the last of the home stand, 9 to 2.

Raymond Benge, young right hander, kept eight safeties well scattered while his mates slapped Southpaw Arnold Stone in clusters for an even dozen base wallaps.

The ferocious Wichita Falls bludgeoning attack of the past ten days wilted before the highly effective curve ball pitching of the Buff youngster. Only one of the two Spudder runs were earned. This marker came in the third on a pass issued to Jonnard, a single to starboard by Stone, and a hoist to right by Distel. Bubber scored after the catch. The other marker came in the fourth. Fitzgerald led away with a double to right, and went on to third when Shortstop Kane absolutely ignored the throw-in. Dorman popped a short fly to right, and Fitz was held to his base. Golvin rifted a single between short and third, sending him home.

Three double plays put on by the Buff inner guard aided materially in quelling any indication of the Tanner outfit to overtake the speeding Buffs who had started scoring in the second and were headed in but three stanzas the rest of the way.

Buffs Hit For Extra Bases.

Single by Compton, triple down the first base line by Peel, and a one-baser by McCurdy scored a pair for Houston in the second. Kane singled and Gallagher tripled in the third for a run. McCurdy opened the fourth with a blast over the port barrier. A walk, a double by Gainer, an infield out, and single by Compton pushed in two more during the fifth. Gainer started the seventh with a blast to the left field home run zone. Compton walked. Peel and McCurdy singled, sending one run over. Fuller walked, Benge lined out to Turgeon who stepped on the keystone, doubling McCurdy off. With Peel on third and Fuller at first, the latter set out for second, and Peel came home when the throw was made to the middle bag. Kane retired the side with a rocket to left. The Buffs were held at bay in the eighth and ninth.

Fans Wrong Again.

Earlier in the game when Stone was getting his bumps, a number of fans set up a howl for a new pitcher, some chiding Manager Tanner for not making the change. By riding Stone, who is not in the best of shape, the situation was not bettered in the least. Tanner had no relief pitcher. Both Bob Osborn and Rip Wheeler have been called away unavoidably. The rest of the staff is overworked. Dick Morgan, who pitched Friday, was the only man Tanner could have sent in as relief. Morgan will pitch this afternoon in Fort Worth unless Osborn returns in time to play. Osborn will not be in very good shape even should he rejoin the club soon enough to take up the mound burden.

Tanner, probably, will nurse his staff along as much as possible even at the expense of losing a few games between now and July 5 or 6 when in all probability Texas league moguls will split the season. The Spudder manager has not said this is his intention, but any good "grandstand manager" will tell you that it would be a wise proceeding.

Allied Debts And Dawes Plan Due To Be Issues At Brussels

BRUSSELS, June 21 (AP).—Inter-allied debts and the execution of the Dawes reparation plan were thrust into the foreground at the very outset of the opening session of the third congress of the International Chamber of Commerce today. Allusions to these problems and an enthusiastic demonstration for King Albert, who was present throughout the session, were features of the opening.

The speech of the outgoing president, Willis H. Booth, in which he reviewed what had already been done by the chamber toward economic restoration and warned the delegates that much more remained to be accomplished, was received with warm approval. Mr. Booth's reference to the Dawes plan and possible hitches in the application of the provisions for deliveries in kind by Germany rather startled some of the delegates from the countries from which reparations are due.

"The Dawes plan and the London agreement made profound changes in the obligations imposed upo Germany by the treaty of Versailles," he said. "Germany is required to accumulate gold marks within Germany and place them at the disposal of the agent general for reparations, who is also the head of the transfer committee. To this transfer committee is given the primary responsibility of converting the gold marks existing in Germany into currencies outside of Germany and available for the beneficiary countries. This committee will be aided by the German government and the Reich bank, but responsibilities nevertheless rests with it."

KAY

have the greatest telescope in the world, the yhave found that there are maybe thousands of universes beyond the ken of anything that was known before.

Man ought not to get too conceited when he knows these things. I can understand pretty nearly every kind of a fellow that I meet, except a fellow with a swelled head. That is a disease that I can't get acquainted with.

I heard a pretty good story last week. A fellow died and went to heaven. He found St. Peter at the gate. Peter looked him over and asked him who he was, but he didn't seem to reach for his keys very readily. "Why," he says, "I'm Colonel Bighouse. Everybody in the world knew me." Peter says, "Which world?"

We ought not to get too important along this line.

What About Peter.

Now, what has that got to do with this lesson about St. Peter breaking out of jail, or getting out of jail? Just everything. Let me say to you men, this morning, that unless you believe that religion is supernatural, and above, and beyond physical and human power, then you might as well quit. Religion is above us and it is beyond us. It is infinitely beyond the effort of man to philosophize about it, or to measun it, or to weigh it. So that when we come to a lesson like the miraculous delivery of this apostle from the jail, we must remember, if we would be religious, that the act was a supernatural act. That man's power is different to God's power. That, because you or I are unable to do a certain thing is no reason why that the Almighty couldn't perform it. Because, it is written that His ways are not our ways, and that His ways are above our ways.

You know, it is strange that many men, educated men, have written against religion. I want you to take that thought home with you this morning, that many hundreds of strong men, educated men, have written against religion, but not one of them has written a book against sin. Why is that? Because, he who goes out and denounces sin, he who goes out and writes against sin, he who goes out and teaches men against sin, is doing some good, and no good fruit can grow on the tree of the unbeliever. Therefore, no matter how great the mind of the unbeliever, no matter how honest his purpose, no matter how high his education, he never, never writes against sin, and shame, and wrong, and misery. And, the reason that he doesn't write against it is because it is written: "By their fruits ye shall know them."

He could write against sin if—what? If he had religion. If he believed, as I believe, that religion is not my invention, not the invention of the apostle, not the invention of the church, but, that it is a broad scheme of salvation that was established on Calvary, and has come down to relieve man, and to save him from his sin, and his poverty, and his suffering.

Now, some of these people, when Peter got out of jail, said that an angel was with him. Most any scientist would tell you that there wasn't any angels, and couldn't be, that it is against physics, and all the laws of physics. I don't know! I don't know.

You know, I am so ignorant that I can't tell why these corn flowers out here on the prairie are blue this spring. I don't know why they are blue. They might as well have been red, as far as the information I have got is concerned. I am so ignorent that I can't find out, with all my effort, why it is that the mesquite bush bears beans, and the corn stock bears corn. There is the bean, and there is the corn, and there is the bush, but I cannot find out, no matter how hard I try, why the beans grew on one and the corn on the other. There are men who might reach more deeply into that than I could, but, I confess, I know nothing about it. I don't know who it is that tells the hawks and birds to stretch their wings southward in the fall, to get away from the ice and snow storms. I don't know who tells them, nor why. That is beyond me, and above me. I don't know why the sunlight makes things grow, and why they won't grow in the shadow. I know it is true, but I don't know why it is true. But I know, also, that it must always be true.

So, the only thing that I want to get before you, this hot morning, is this: That religion comes from a God that is mightier than we, and stronger than we; whose mind is infinitely greater than the human mind, and who is able to do things that humanity can't see, or fathom, or weigh.

THIMBLE THEATRE — An Inquisitive Customer — —By SEGAR

MAY WARMER WITHOUT RAIN, SAYS REPORT

Mean Temperature for State Is Slightly Over 73.8

HOUSTON, Tex., June 21 (AP).—May in Texas was slightly warmer than usual and considerably more arid. The mean temperature on the state as shown by reports from 121 stations was 73.8 degrees which was seventenths of a degree higher than normal. The average rainfall at 216 stations was 2.63 inches or 1.03 inches less than normal.

L. H. Daingerfield, meteorologist of Houston, writes the record for the federal government. The few words he devotes to the state of the thermometer assert that the highest monthly mean was 83 degrees at Encinal and the lowest 64.3 at Dalhart. Encinal was the most torrid place in the state where the mercury rose to 115 degrees on May 24. Dalhart and Seminole were at the other extreme with a temperature of 34 degrees on the first day of the month. Twelve days later Midland alternately perspired and chilled when the thermometer registered a range of 56 degrees, which was the greatest daily range of any place in Texas during the month.

Discussing rainfall, Mr. Daingerfield said that Eagle Pass was the wettest spot with a total precipitation during the month of 12.72 inches while at Falfurias, in the same section, broadly speaking, there was only a trace and it thereby stood out as the most arid in May. Excessive amounts of 2.50 inches or more in 24 consecutive hours fell at 17 stations and here again Eagle Pass made a bid for momentary fame by a drenching on May 28 of 8.66 inches of moisture, which was the greatest amount that fell at any point in 24 hours. Sixteen days were clear, ten partly cloudy and five cloudy. The prevailing direction of the wind was from the south, as usual. The highest velocity it attained was 44 miles an hour from the west at San Antonio on May 8 and at Port Arthur from the northwest on May 14.

At 50 cotton region stations in seven divisions of the state, more rain fell in the northeastern group, including Dallas, Fort Worth, Greenville, Henrietta, Paris, Sherman and Weatherford, than in any of the others. Its record was 4.98 inches average which, however, was far short of the 4.02 inches average in 1924 and 4.45 inches normally.

WAURIKA LIGHT PLANT SOLD TO SOUTHWESTERN

Announcement Made of the Consolidation of Power Company

WAURIKA, June 21.—One of the largest deals ever made in Jefferson county was announced this week by the Consumers Light and Power company who have operated the local light and ice plant for the past several years, when the Waurika manager, A. D. Kerr, announced that the plant had been bought by the Southwestern Light and Power company. The Southwestern company owns and operates most of the utility properties in the southwest section of this state as well as some in Texas.

This deal is of vital importance to every Waurikan as it is a well known fact that territory served by transmission line service means lower electric rates.

WORKINGS OF SIN ARE TOLD BY ATKINSON

Christian Pastor Makes Appeal Against Sin in Sermon

Taking as his text Matthew 4:1. "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil," Rev. Milo Atkinson, pastor of the First Christian church, spoke Sunday morning on the manner in which the devil was wont to tempt man when he evinced an interest in Jesus Christ.

The full text of Rev. Atkinson's sermon was as follows: :

The significance of an experience is sometimes measured by the circumstances under which it occurs. The word "then" in the text reminds us that the voice from heaven had just declared Jesus to be the Father's beloved son in whom He was well pleased.

F. B. Meyer says, "boys do not bother the orchard till the apples begin to get ripe." Now that the divine sonship is being manifested in the Savior, it is not surprising that the devil makes his attack. This is a principle in Christian experience that many believers do not understand. They think it strange that with faith in the living God they should be tormented with the temptations of the devil.

Temptation Is Not Sin

"God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man:

But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away from his own lust, and enticed."

The temptations that satan throws in the path of the Christian are intended by him to be stumbling blocks for the believer. God would have us use them as stepping stones to higher things. "Then Jesus was led up." Are not these words suggestive? To the believer who is led by the spirit will be given the power to use these temptations as God designed and make them stepping stones on the path of victory.

Sin cannot enter the human heart except through a gate which God has fixed for righteous uses. Hunger is a very real human experience, but the Christian must decide in the light of God's word how his bread is to be procured.

Satan is compelled to run all his trains on the Lords' tracks. Every sin is a perverted use of some worthy power or faculty in human experience. It is also true that there is no facult or power of human personality but may be prostituted to evil purposes. Jesus, in His experience, reveals to us this underlying principle that is involved in all forms of temptation and in His example gives us a demonstration of the victorious way of mastering temptation.

The Great Value of a Man

Two worlds are contending for the soul of a man. What God has invested in our redemption suggests the value of the Almighty places on us. The efforts Satan puts forth for man's overthrow indicates Satan's estimate of the value of a human soul. The uncut diamond in the earth may appear to be of no more value than a pebble on the roadside, but the miner is willing to risk his life and endure great hardships to find the diamond. All because he knows how that gem will flash with beauty when it is brought out in the light and is properly cut.

The countless forms of temptations satan offers to man also indicates his estimate of the value of the human soul. Burglars do not break into pauper's houses. Satan would not resort to so many shrewd devices for man's overthrow if he did not realize the worth of man. But the value of the human soul can reach its highest degree only with the hand and guidance of the Almighty. Burglars who plunder the vaults of wealth never use their ill-gotten gains wisely or even to their own best interests. The priceless treasure of the human soul, under the leadership and control of satan, misses the highest joys of human experiences, no matter how many alluring promises sin may hold out to the tempted heart.

Makes Two Worlds Real

This picture portrays the blessed reality of a personal Christ. In this sacred record the personality of the devil is no less real. This statement of the text is in striking contrast with that of some modern teachers. For example, this esentence from a recent lecture, "Man is redeemed from the power of a false theory and initiated into the joys of the kingdom of heaven." Set over against this is a word of scripture, "To turn them from the power of satan unto God that they might receive forgiveness of sin and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith which is in me."

Christ's Method

"It is written." Three times did the Savior quote from the word of God. In this is found the secret of His victory. It could not be otherwise. Satan is "the father of lies." He whose very heart is falsehood, feels that no weapon is quite so powerful as the absolute truth of God's unchanging word. The Christian can do no better than follow the Savior's example. David said, "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against Thee." There is no more powerful antidote to sin than the living word of the living God.

But even here there is need of caution. We must guard against scraping Scriptures. When Satan felt the first keen thrust of God's word in the hands of the Savior, he too undertook to quote scripture. But in doing so he took the sacred text out of its setting and gave it a meaning which it did not possess. The Savior met his skillful thrust by the statement, "It is written again." Men's philosophy of life and course of conduct is not to be built on a single text from the blessed word, but is to be shaped by all the truths that shine from the sacred page. Some of the most zealous religious teachers are quite adept in quoting texts. Shakespeare reminds us that even satan can quote scripture to his purpose. It is this failure to consider all that God has said which has given rise to so many varying and contradictory cults in the religious thought of modern times. Most all "isms" are the outgrowth of overemphasis on some fragments of truth to the exclusion of related truths.

EVERY SHOW A GOOD ONE

Fun and Drama Features of The Different Film Offerings

From Colleen Moore, ever the ingenue, at the Mission, through Aileen Pringle at the Strand and Florence Vidor at the Olympic there are good programs underway at the Wichita Falls picture houses this week. Colleen is better than in "Sally," she is a "Desert Flower" this time. Aileen Pringle puts a real interest in a horse race and by some clever managing makes "Wildfire" win the International Sweepstakes, while Florence Vidor, as beautiful as ever, is the heroine in a rollicking fast comedy drama on marriage and divorce at the Olympic.

Makes Man Right.

Colleen Moore is the stepdaughter of a foreman on a construction gang building a railroad far into the desert in her picture, "The Desert Flower." She becomes dissatisfied with her life and moves on the wake of a tramp hobo she has befriended to a typical western mining town where she gets a job in a dance hall and saloon helping out. She puts the tramp on the straight and narrow path, and finds when at last she decides that he is worth marrying that he's not the hobo he looks but the son of the president of one of America's largest roads.

Wildfire is a horse, and Aileen Pringle is a woman, a woman with the nerve to gamble her whole future existence on the whims of a horse and a jockey in the biggest race the nation affairs. On the eve of the big race Garrison, to whom she has been engaged after a manner throughout Garrison's five years in South America, appears. Thinking Wildfire is owned by a man named Duffy, and anxious to eke justice to Duffy, whom he regards as a cad, he buys the only horse that has ever beat Wildfire and enters him in the race. Duffy is a real villain and attempts every known trick to "pull" the race and is only prevented in his final and most daring attempt by the quick wit of Miss Barrington, part played by Aileen Pringle. Wildfire wins.

Fun At Olympic.

The Olympic furnishes a full measure of fun this week. A famous divorce lawyer of Paris allows his enthusiasm for his profession get the best of his year-old romance with his beautiful wife, Florence Vidor, and finds himself the victim of the divorce court. The pretty wife is soon wooed and won again by another, and hardly married to him when her one-time husband, the divorce court expert, is called in to arrange to set her free once more. In the liberating scene it is decided that the first marriage wasn't a failure after all. The show is as full of fun as any in Wichita Falls in a long time.

The "Garden of Mirth," musical comedy, will be the feature attraction at the Palace all this week with a special added attraction in Professor Howard R. Whiteside, clairvoyant and psychist, scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday nights.

News Of The Fields

White, McCarty

White Brothers No. 1, McCarty in the southwest corner of their lease just east of the Beaver Creek area and offsetting the Hammond lease to the north, is setting casing to test a sand at a depth of 1,179 feet.

Consolidated, Wilson

Consolidated Oil company and Larkin and White bailed lots of salt water in their No. 1, Wilson, block 76, ATNCL, east of the Burns and Maxson wells, north of Archer City, Archer county, sand record given as 1,523-35 feet, with the sand broken with shale.

Barkley-Meadows

Another oil pool was definitely added to north Archer county yesterday in the semi-completion of Barkley and Meadows' No. 1, L. F. Wilson, in the center of the northwest quarter of block 88, ATNCL, north of Archer City. The well is showing for a 100-150 barrel well in its present state from one-foot of sand topped at 1,524 feet.

It is probable that the hole will be drilled further into the sand today with the expectation that a much better well will result. The hole, while only a quarter of a mile or so from two or three small producing wells in block 86, is the first completion of any size for an area extending some two or three miles on either side.

A deal has been closed between Freeman and Hampton and Burton and Ruff, the latter owing the west offset sixty acres, for development of that tract on a fifty-fifty basis and drilling here should start at once.

Barkley and Meadows were credited also last week with the opening of the sixth Balconnes Fault producing pool north of Currie in East Texas.
