Sweetener group wants support of policies

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

A broad coalition of sweetener producers has asked President Bush to explore "all legal and effective means" of operating the U.S. sugar program in compliance with both American law and international trade agreements.

An international panel has ruled that U.S. sugar quotas are not in compliance with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), in response to a challenge filed by Australia in September 1988.

Dennis Printz, agricultural manager at Holly Sugar in Hereford, said that, prior to the official issuance of the panel report in Geneva, the U.S. sweetener industry has urged the administration to proceed "responsibly," recognizing that U.S. law prevails in this case.

The GATT complaint brought by Australia alleges that the quotas established under the U.S. Tariff Schedule do not conform to GATT rules.

"Quotas were an integral part of the U.S. sugar program from 1934 to 1974," Printz said. "The current quota system was triggered in 1982 by the Reagan Administration and continued in 1985 in order to comply with the Congressional mandate that the present sugar program be operated at no cost to the taxpayer."

Printz said that Australia has had a total embargo on sugar imports since 1915. "Australia alleges their trade has suffered from reduced access to the U.S. market, (but) they have actually increased their production despite reduced sales here," Printz said.

"U.S. law requires that the sugar program provide a loan rate of about 21 cents a pound for refined sugar and operate at no cost to the taxpayer," Printz said. "Now that the Administration has agreed to accept the GATT report, the U.S. industry needs to explore with them a way to comply with the will of Congress and, at the same time, try to comply with GATT."

Printz urged ag secretary Clayton Yeutter and trade representative Carla Hills to work with members of Congress and the sweetener industry in anticipation of the 1990 Farm Bill.

"We need to find the best mechanism to protect the integrity of the sugar program and also progress in the international arena," Printz said.

"We understand the importance of strengthening international agreements and, in fact, have supported the Administration's goal to eliminate all world-wide distortions in ag trade," Printz said. "At the same time, we look to the Administration, in cooperation with Congress, to consider all legal and effective means to operate a viable U.S. sugar program."

Printz said the entire domestic sugar industry has been a long-standing advocate of total elimination of government intervention in the world sugar market as long as all nations comply.

He also pointed out that President Bush, Secretary Yeutter and Hills have emphasized in public remarks that they would oppose any unilateral change in the U.S. sugar program while other nations continued to intervene in their domestic sugar markets.

Clements' aides say charges baseless

AUSTIN (AP) - Two gubernatorial aides denied allegations made by a police organization that they influenced the veto of a bill after accepting free trips from a group that opposed the legislation.

The Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas on Tuesday called for an investigation of Gov. Bill Clements' aides, Mike Toomey and Cliff Johnson.

And state lawmakers who sponsored the vetoed bill said they would file it again for consideration during the 30-day, special legislative session.

The measure, which was passed during the regular session ending May 29, required law enforcement groups to disclose how much they raise through telephone solicitations.

Ronald DeLord, president of CLEAT, the largest police organization in the state, said the bill would have helped identify suspicious organizations asking for money.

He said some organizations use a huge portion of the solicited donations for purposes other than charities. Others lie about representing police organizations and keep all the money, he said.

DeLord said a grand jury should investigate Toomey, the governor's chief of staff, and Johnson, the governor's legislative liaison. DeLord said the aides told Clements to veto the bill.

"I know two people got a bill vetoed and two people went on trips and something stinks," DeLord said.

According to published reports, Toomey and Johnson said they went on a ski trip to Utah in December as guests of the Texas State Troopers Association and two other groups.

The troopers association, which is not connected to the Texas Department of Public Safety, uses telephone solicitation to collect donations, DeLord said.

The troopers' association opposed the bill, sponsored by Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, and Rep. Keith Oakley, D-Terrell.

Clements said neither Toomey nor Johnson influenced him to veto the bill, which he previously said lacked "substantive changes" to the current law.

"I think this police association (CLEAT) ... is doing a very good job of using their pistol to shoot themselves in the foot," Clements said. He declined to comment further.

Toomey and Johnson denied the allegations. "Obviously this is nothing but sour grapes," Toomey said.

Johnson said, "This is a fight between several statewide organizations representing law enforcement and we're just kind of caught in the middle of it."

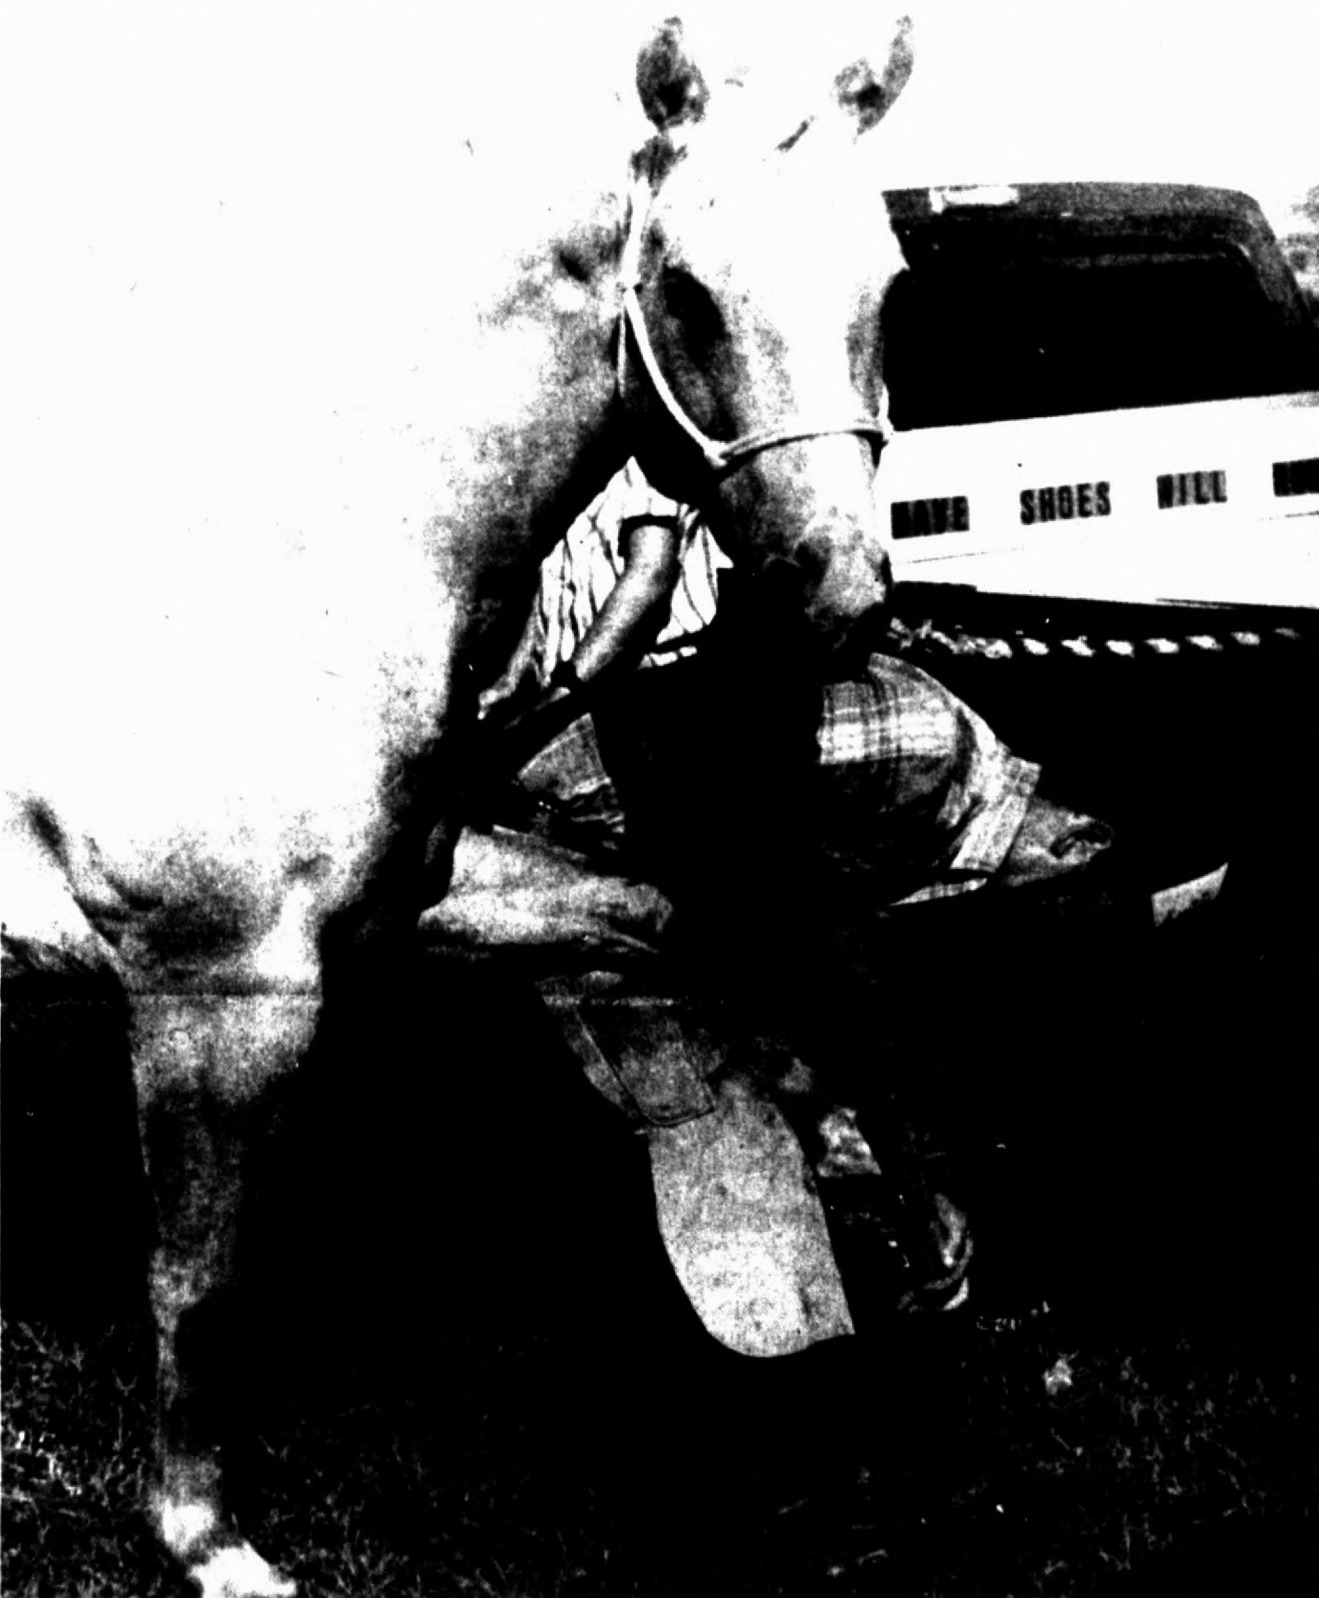

He said he wanted the Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County district attorney's office to investigate whether Toomey and Johnson violated laws on bribing public officials.

Toomey said, "I don't have anything to hide."

Sen. Edwards said he was more interested in getting the bill passed again and having the governor sign it than in pursuing an investigation of Toomey and Johnson.

"It protects the public and it protects law enforcement organizations throughout Texas," Edwards said. "It's hard to know why the governor vetoed the law."

Clements controls the agenda for the special session.

Employers don't want mandatory comp system

AUSTIN (AP) - An employers group blasted a Senate proposal to phase in mandatory workers' comp insurance, while legislative leaders met privately to try and reach a compromise.

Approximately 100,000 employers in Texas do not carry workers' comp insurance, according to the Industrial Accident Board. Most states require employers to purchase workers' comp insurance.

Lawmakers failed to approve an overhaul of the system of compensating workers injured in on-the-job accidents during the 140-day regular legislative session and now are meeting in a special session that began last week.

Kent Caperton, one of the authors of a Senate workers' comp plan, said private meetings with House leaders so far have been general in nature.

"We're really just talking philosophy and approach," Caperton, D-Bryan, said.

While most lawmakers will be going home for the long July 4 holiday weekend, Caperton said the negotiations at the Capitol will continue.

Bush optimistic about reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) - The pace of reform in Poland and Hungary is picking up even as President Bush gets set to visit the two East European countries - with assurance to Moscow he will not try to overhaul their economies or pose a threat to the Soviet Union.

While Bush on Tuesday was advising Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev not to get "uptight" about his trip to Warsaw and Budapest, U.S. officials said privately the second stage of elections in Poland and a revamping of the Communist party leadership in Hungary have improved the trend to democracy.

There is uncertainty who will eventually become prime minister of Poland, however, and the reshuffling in Hungary may require a change in protocol on such delicate issues as who sits next to Bush at dinner. A four-man ruling body has sharply reduced the power of General Secretary Karoly Grosz.

"He'll still see the same Hungarians, but in what order?" said a U.S. official who assessed developments on the condition he would not be identified. "We've asked the Hungarians."

In both countries Bush will meet with prominent leaders of the opposition, and he is bound to dwell on his session with Lech Walesa, the leader of the Polish trade union movement Solidarity.

Poland has now had two rounds of elections, and Solidarity has done well. It's won 99 of 100 Senate seats, and the union has won all of the contested races for the lower house.

A president is to be chosen by July 18. Bush will be in Warsaw and Gdansk, the Baltic seaport where Solidarity was launched, July 9-11.

There may be a caretaker government for a while, and it's not clear if Wojciech Janczelski will wind up wearing the twin hats of president and Communist party chief.

"There is a lot of nervousness among the Poles because nobody knows how all of this is going to work out," said another U.S. official, who also insisted on anonymity. "But we know the way the trend is running, and we welcome the trend."

In Hungary, he said, the reshuffling at the top of the party "doesn't change things much."

Democratic change is so far advanced it is conceivable a majority of the Hungarian parliament will be noncommunist in the next two to five years, a State Department official told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee.

DOE says study needed at Pantex

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - The Department of Energy will continue to study three toxic chemical spill sites at its Pantex nuclear weapons plant after a recent study cited the need for more data to determine whether the contamination poses a health hazard to humans, said a Pantex spokesman.

"We have found nothing to indicate that anybody or anything is threatened" by two sites where gasoline has leaked into groundwater and another decades-old chemical burn pit, said DOE spokesman Tom Walton.

The report, filed with the Texas Water Commission, shows that solvents and gasoline components have contaminated subsurface areas at Pantex, but the level has not reached down to the depths of the Ogallala Aquifer, Walton said.

DOE has been studying the contamination sites for more than a year by drilling bore holes, Walton said.

A December DOE report on the department's facilities across the country listed the Pantex sites as being among the most potentially hazardous to the environment.

The report, "tells us what we know to date and what further characterization of the sites is needed," said Walton.

In the next year or two, he said, the DOE plans to study the precise extent of the contamination and use the data gathered to form a plan to deal with and clean up the spills.

"Although the complete chemical composition of the contamination has not been characterized, some contaminants associated with gasoline, and other contaminants not associated with gasoline, have been detected in the soils and perched ground water," said the report. "Further characterization of the nature and extent of contamination is required before complete quantification of the human health and environmental risk can be performed."

Perched ground water, where some contamination has been detected, is ground water trapped in sand formations normally located above water tables. Contaminated perched water was found beneath both gasoline spill sites, but not beneath the chemical burn pit, the use of which was discontinued by the DOE in 1980, Walton said.

Toxic substances found at the Pantex spill sites include two carcinogenic substances, benzene and toluene.

DOE investigations of the chemical burn pit determined that the most widespread pollutants found there were toluene and acetone.

run from each public school site in Hereford to Tierra Blanca and Bluebonnet.

The summer session is tuition-free, but students are expected to attend everyday.

Parents with questions about the program may contact their child's principal or assistant superintendent Marc Williamson at the HSD administration building at 364-0606.

Congress wants immediate plug in ethics law loophole

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is trying to block the route which former Reagan administration aide Lyn Nofziger used to win a reversal of his conviction for illegal lobbying.

Rep. Barney Frank said Tuesday the House Judiciary Committee will consider amending the Ethics in Government Act to revise provisions Nofziger used successfully in appealing his 1988 conviction.

"We saw it as a potential loophole," said Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat.

In a 2-1 decision Tuesday, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Nofziger's conviction must be set aside because it wasn't based on a finding that he had knowledge of each element of the offense.

He was convicted Feb. 11, 1988, of three counts of illegally lobbying top presidential aides on behalf of private clients after he left the White House one year into the Reagan administration. The clients were scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., a maritime engineers union and the manufacturer of the Air Force's A-10 anti-tank plane.

The appeals court said Tuesday that in order for a conviction to be valid, the prosecution must demonstrate that Nofziger knew the matters on which he lobbied were already of "direct and substantial interest" to the White House.

The proposed amendment would eliminate the provision requiring knowledge of each element of the offense, said Frank, chairman of the House subcommittee on administrative law. Congress passed a similar measure last year but it was vetoed by President Reagan.

Independent counsel James McKay, who prosecuted Nofziger, said he will consider appealing. He could seek a review by the federal appeals court in Washington or by the Supreme Court.

A five-year statute of limitations could make it impossible to bring revised criminal charges.

His conviction was reversed in a decision written by U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge James Buckley, joined by Judge Stephen Williams, both Reagan appointees. The third member of the panel and lone dissenter was Judge Harry Edwards, a Carter administration appointee.

Nofziger, the White House political director in 1981, began lobbying his former colleagues within months of leaving the government. He said he was trying to stimulate their interest in various matters, which would not be a violation of the one-year ban on lobbying an ex-employee's former government agency.

The case against Nofziger was the first major test of the revolving-door provisions of the Ethics in Government Act.

"I don't think I am part of any revolving-door syndrome," said Nofziger. "People lobby in this town; the main industry in this town besides government is lobbying."

Asked whether he thought he got off on a legal technicality, Nofziger said, "Absolutely no ... I think they came after me on a technicality."

Nofziger said he was pleased by the decision. "I think I was innocent from the beginning; I still think I am innocent," he said.

The court ruling won praise from President Bush.

Bush, asked about the ruling at a state dinner Tuesday night honoring Australian Prime Minister Robert Hawke, smiled broadly and said only, "I'm always glad when somebody is found not guilty of something."

Nofziger had been sentenced to 90 days in prison and fined $30,000. He said that defending himself cost over $1.5 million in legal fees and possibly more than that in lost income.

Committee takes aim at B-2 funds

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House Armed Services Committee's defense budget talks are focusing on the costly B-2 stealth bomber, with $1.1 billion already slashed from President Bush's Star Wars proposal.

Funds for the radar-evading plane took a slight hit Tuesday as lawmakers accepted a $351 million reduction in B-2 money to save the Marine Corps V-22 Osprey, a revolutionary aircraft the Bush administration wants to cancel.

But Democrats and Republicans on the panel are threatening to drop the administration's B-2 bomber program altogether.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, was seeking an amendment to terminate the program and remove funds for the B-2 from Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's $295.6 billion defense budget. The measure was supported by Reps. John Rowland, R-Conn., and Ron Dellums, D-Calif.

Reps. John M. Spratt, Jr., D-S.C., and Marvin Leath, D-Texas, also were pushing amendments to cut funds for the B-2. Spratt's proposal calls for an $850 million reduction while Leath is suggesting a cut of $900 million.

Opposition to the bomber, considered the most expensive in history, has increased in Congress with members questioning the wisdom of investing more than $22 billion in a plane that has never flown.

On Tuesday, the House panel rejected, 31-19, an amendment by Rep. William L. Dickinson, R-Ala., to restore some of the funds for the bomber that the research and development subcommittee voted to spend on the V-22 Osprey.

The vote leaves $2.7 billion in procurement funds for the B-2 and cuts the proposed $1.8 billion for research and development to about $1.5 billion.

Star Wars, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, took a $1.1 billion cut as the committee, by voice vote, approved a $3.5 billion budget, considerably less than the $4.6 billion Bush proposed for the program to develop lasers and other weapons to stop enemy nuclear missiles.

That reduction came on top of a $1 billion cut in proposed Star Wars spending made by Cheney two months ago as he slashed $10 billion from the budget.

By a 39-12 vote largely along party lines, the committee rejected an amendment by Rep. Jon L. Kyl, R-Ariz., to accept Cheney's spending level for Star Wars.

The Democratic-controlled panel did side with the administration on some issues.

It rejected an amendment by Dellums to terminate the Midgetman missile program. And it voted to restore $71 million for the Lance missile and other short-range attack weapons - money that was cut by a subcommittee.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - More than half the teachers surveyed by Texas A&M University say they are under such stress that they would not choose the profession again.

Stress, almost 90 percent of which is based on paperwork, has already burned out half of their colleagues, according to Dr. Rutha Leffel, who surveyed almost 400 elementary, middle school and high school teachers in 15 small, medium and large districts.

Ms. Leffel, coordinator of psychological services in special education with the Round Rock school district near Austin, said stress and burnout is unconnected to number of years on the job.

"Beginning teachers are reporting the same stress levels as experienced teachers," said Ms. Leffel. "The burnout is not from the years of experience; it's the workplace that's causing stress and burnout."

Her doctoral advisor, Dr. Walter F. Stenning of the Texas A&M Curriculum Research Laboratory, said the report is the first in-depth stress study of several school districts of all sizes and of teachers on all levels.

"All the teachers know at least one colleague who was burned out due to stress," said Stenning. "One-third of the teachers say seven out of 10 of their colleagues are burned out."

Almost 80 percent of teachers in every size school district experience medium to high levels of stress on a daily basis, Ms. Leffel found. She said more than half the teachers in large districts suffer high stress levels daily.

"On their most stressful days, 83 percent of the teachers in small districts report high stress levels while nearly all teachers, 96 percent, in large districts report high stress," said Ms. Leffel.

Paperwork and clerical duties were blamed by 88 percent of teachers for stress, while 85 percent said students' special needs, including misbehavior and motivation problems, were stress factors.

Stenning said school districts could begin now to lessen stress levels. He said that stress can be reduced through communication and other means.

"Ironically, schools could gear up very easily for this sort of intervention strategy," he said. "They have the facilities and the staff. Administrative leadership could make the difference."

There was a presentation of a plaque to the Volunteer of the Year for 1988. Also, two volunteers were presented a gift for their outstanding performance for the year 1988. (Identities of the volunteers are kept confidential for safety reasons.)

Browder noted that there were 238 victims recorded for Hereford in 1988. Through the end of May this year there have been 166 victims reported for 1989.

Begun in May, 1987, as a satellite program of the Amarillo Rape Crisis/Domestic Violence office, the Hereford office has a current list of 20 volunteers that carry pagers and are on call during weekends and office hours. There are 22 other volunteers with the 'WHO' (We Help Ourselves) program that visit with schools and other children's groups. So far, more than 1,500 students in the Hereford schools have heard the 'WHO' programs.

The Hereford Outreach receives its funding through the state grants, local organizations such as United Way, and donations from the public. However, since April, the state legislature cut all funding to most similar programs. The office has been operating basically on what has been donated locally.

Members of the advisory board recognized were Kelvin Betzen, Sid Ham, Gloria Salinas Hubner, Ross James, Alice Lockmiller, Sharon Pennington, Dr. David Purdy, Cindy Simons, Janie Solis, David Wagner, James Witherspoon, Ronda Batenhorst, Herb DeLa Rosa, Mary Jean Ferry, and Becky Groneman.

The public officials recognized were Wayne Amstutz, Greg Buckley, Jim Conkwright, Wes Fisher, Martha Galvan, Vernon Hope, Rick Lee, Terry Langehenning, David Ruland, Celia Serrano, Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turrentine, Paul Hamilton, Mark Adams, Judy Baker, Jimmy Bell, Sheriff Joe Brown, Don Brush, Darwin McGill, Jay Patel, Roland Saul, Judge Tom Simons, Austin Rose, and several others.

July 4th means more traffic

The Fourth of July is approaching along with summer vacation which means not only will Texas motorists be taking to the highways, but a lot of visitors will also be entering Texas.

With the increase in the number of motorists on the highways, the possibility of having an accident will also increase.

Major Vernon Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, stated, "This combination can be deadly, if motorists do not take certain precautions over the 4th of July holidays."

"Before traveling you should insure your car is in good working condition including necessary equipment to help in case of a breakdown, such as a good spare tire. Long trips should be well planned, allow time for traveling, be well rested and take frequent breaks," said Major Cawthon.

Do not mix drinking and driving. It not only could cost you big fines, jail time and loss of your driving privileges, but the cost could be as high as your life.

Always be watchful of other motorists. All, too often, simple mistakes can lead to traffic accidents. Be courteous by displaying good driving habits that you expect others to display. Remember that courtesy can be contagious.

Insure that everyone in the vehicle is properly secured and that all loose items are in the trunk. During a collision, any loose object could be a potentially dangerous weapon.

Does the end justify the means?

Certainly we don't feel that it always does, especially in regard to our county commissioners' recent proposal to raise our county taxes 7.999%.

Past revenue reserves of the county have been eroded from year to year until there is no reserve left. Now faced with more state mandates on minimum jail standards, increases in insurance rates, a diminishing tax base, and impending pay hikes, your county commissioners want some financial relief.

Will this tax increase become reality? We don't know, and won't know until the July 10 commissioners' court meeting. However, many of you have gone on record asking that the county face up to the same fiscal problems with which many of us must deal, and to act with more foresight in its future planning.

We would like to extend our thanks to all those concerned persons who expressed their opinions and showed their opposition to the proposed tax increase at Monday night's public hearing.

Sacramento makes Louisville's Pervis Ellison top pick in NBA draft

NEW YORK (AP) - On his chest, Pervis Ellison will wear No. 42, but for one night at least, he was No. 1. And finally, the secret is out.

Ellison's selection Tuesday night ended a month of speculation over how Sacramento would use its No. 1 pick in the NBA draft.

"It's hard for me to say how I feel, how happy I am," said Ellison, a second team All-American from Louisville.

And when did he find out he would become the first of this year's college class to go pro?

"When the commissioner announced it," he said.

All-American Danny Ferry, who led Duke to the Final Four this year for the third time in four seasons, was the second pick, taken by the Los Angeles Clippers. Another All-American, Sean Elliott of Arizona, went third to the San Antonio Spurs. Either could have been No. 1.

Five of the first six players taken were big men, the exception long-shooting Glen Rice of the national champion Michigan Wolverines, taken No. 4 by the Miami Heat. North Carolina forward J.R. Reid went next, staying in the same state when he was picked by Charlotte. Stacey King, Oklahoma's All-American center, went sixth to the Chicago Bulls.

The first point guard taken in the draft was George McCloud of Florida State, who averaged 22.8 points and 4.2 assists, taken seventh by the Indiana Pacers. Eleven of the 27 first-round picks were used for backcourt players.

Sherman Douglas, the All-American guard from Syracuse, did not go until Miami made him the first pick of the second round, 28th overall. The Big Ten player of the year, guard Jay Edwards of Indiana, was the Clipper's second-round selection, No. 33. The Big East player of the year, guard Charles Smith of Georgetown, was not drafted at all, probably because he only weighs 165 pounds.

Reid, who just completed his junior year at North Carolina, was the first underclassman taken, and Oklahoma had the first doubleheader. After King was selected by Chicago, the New Jersey Nets took guard Mookie Blaylock of the Sooners with the 12th pick.

The Kings earned the No. 1 pick last month in the NBA's lottery. Their choice was a well-kept secret, although Ellison knew Kings vice president Bill Russell was interested.

The 6-foot-9 Ellison averaged 17.6 points and 8.7 rebounds last season for Louisville.

After trading centers LaSalle Thompson and Joe Kleine in the same week last season, the Kings were left without a true, everyday pivotman. It showed as Sacramento finished 27-55, next-to-last in the Pacific Division. The Kings needed help up front.

Last year, the Clippers were the only team worse than Sacramento in the Pacific Division, and they need help of almost any type. Their biggest immediate problem, however, may be lack of experience, and they might be willing to part with Ferry to gain it.

"We might keep the pick or we might move it if we can get a quality veteran," Clippers general manager Elgin Baylor said.

So, the 6-10 Ferry said that while he thought he could have gone No. 1, after averaging 22.6 points last season at Duke, he won't be surprised, no matter where he winds up.

Louisiana Tech forward Randy White was the eighth selection, by Dallas, and Georgia Tech forward Tom Hammonds went No. 9 to Washington. Pooh Richardson, the UCLA guard, was the 10th selection, going to the expansion Minnesota Timberwolves.

The league's other expansion team, the Orlando Magic, picked 11th, taking small forward Nick Anderson of Illinois, another college underclassman.

The Los Angeles Lakers used their first pick, 26th in the first round, to pick a 21-year-old Yugoslav, 7-1 center Vlade Divac of Partizan Belgrade.

McEnroe lights up Wimbledon with win

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) - Trust John Patrick McEnroe.

On a day when everything before and after him was predictable and dull, the world's most charismatic tennis player lit up the world's most famous tennis court with the comeback of his 14-year career.

"I don't ever remember coming back from two sets down before," the mercurial McEnroe said after his 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 8-6 first-round victory over Darren Cahill of Australia on Wimbledon's Centre Court on Tuesday.

"It's great to come back and win the match," he said. "Let's face it, I could easily be out of the tournament."

Technically, the match may not have been of the highest quality. Both players struggled with their first serves. But it transcended tennis. It was pure theater.

"I never really got my game in total gear," McEnroe said after the 3-hour battle that started in sunshine and finished in evening gloom with a standing ovation for both players. "I don't think it's the greatest match he's ever played either. But for excitement ..."

For excitement, it beat the rest of the day's matches put together. They included straight-set victories for defending women's champion Steffi Graf and her three main rivals, Martina Navratilova, Chris Evert and Gabriela Sabatini.

Graf, playing her first match since losing the French Open final to 17-year-old Arantxa Sanchez, gave up only eight points on serve as she swamped Julie Salmon of Britain 6-1, 6-2. Navratilova opened her bid for a record ninth women's singles title with a 6-3, 6-2 victory over Jill Hetherington of Canada.

Evert, recovered from an ear infection, downed Peanut Harper 6-1, 6-1, while Sabatini conceded fewer games than any of the main contenders by trouncing Diane Balestrat 6-1, 6-0.

But of all the 42 completed singles matches on the second day of the championships, one stood out - the best rally of McEnroe's career.

"I expected a tough match. I didn't expect something like this," McEnroe said. "It's a positive just to be able to sit and dwell on this for a day but I'm proud of this, coming from two sets down to win."

For two sets, the left-handed American, who gave up a large part of the European clay-court season to concentrate on winning a fourth Wimbledon crown, appeared to have wasted all the preparation.

Deserted by his serve - he double-faulted 16 times - McEnroe allowed his 23-year-old opponent, at No. 26 the highest-ranked non-seeded player in the men's draw, to control the match.

But with the crowd behind him and his temper in check apart from sporadic swipes of his racket, McEnroe dug deep into his repertoire of unorthodox strokes and turned the match around.

As his first serve and returns of serve improved, McEnroe broke Cahill twice in the third set and again in the fourth, passing the Australian with flicked backhands and mixing up the pace on his volleys.

In the fifth set, McEnroe's touch and variation were at their best. But he blew five break points and, serving second, was under continued pressure.

He kept his cool, broke Cahill with a backhand cross-court pass to go up 7-6 and served out the match with a pair of swinging, swerving aces.

They were two of his best serves in the match.

Cahill said he was disappointed to lose in the first round of his most cherished event.

"To do well here is the ultimate, but I'm young and my time will come," the Australian said.

He said he found it hard reading McEnroe's improvised shots.

"It's very hard to pick where he's hitting the ball," Cahill said. "A lot of times he had me going the wrong way. It's going to take a lot to beat him."

FIRST THE SEED

Without a doubt, the one thing that determines the outcome of any crop is the seed that you put into the ground. Good seed produces a good crop - bad seed fails you.

We believe that insect and disease problems this last year have created a need to look at the crops and varieties you plant and your harvest intentions.

TAM 200 ; a new release from Texas A & M that appeared very promising in limited trials.

TRITICALE ; for known grazing or graze-out acreage - triticale showed less damage from insects & disease than wheat in 1988.

OATS ; Chillicothe oats produce excellent grain and abundant forage for grazing.

MESA ; 1988's best variety for milling & baking qualities. A consistent high yielding variety that makes excellent early grazing; also a new release from NAPB that has excellent grain quality, yield and test weights.

TAM 105 ; need to update your seed. We have both certified and good quality select seed available.

Biggio homer keys Astro win over San Francisco, 7-5

By The Associated Press
With one swing, Craig Biggio ended a couple of streaks that had the San Francisco Giants thinking the National League West was theirs. The Giants were four outs away Tuesday from their eighth straight victory over the Houston Astros and a five-game lead in the National League West.

To help them to it, the Giants called on Steve Bedrosian. But for the first time since being acquired from Philadelphia, Bedrosian couldn't hold the lead as the Astros rallied for a 7-5 victory.

Trailing 5-3 with two outs in the eighth, Ken Caminiti doubled and scored on a single by Rafael Ramirez. Bedrosian, 2-4, relieved Jeff Brantley and, after an intentional walk to Bill Doran, Biggio hit a three-run homer.

"When you're looking at a 90 mph-plus fastball like he has, you've got to turn it up a notch," Biggio said. "I knew he had to come in with a good pitch. I knew I hit it good. I was just afraid it was too high and not far enough."

It was.

In his previous five save opportunities with the Giants, Bedrosian had come through each time.

"I gave him a fat pitch," Bedrosian said. "My performance was unsatisfactory. I have to face the music and face the fact I didn't get the job done."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Montreal 3, New York 2 in 14 innings; Cincinnati 9, Atlanta 3; Pittsburgh 5, Chicago 4; Philadelphia 4, St. Louis 2, and San Diego 5, Los Angeles 3 in 17 innings.

Danny Darwin, 7-2, pitched two innings of scoreless relief for the victory, striking out the side in the ninth.

Expos 3, Mets 2

Tim Wallach's single scored Nelson

Santovenia with one out in the 14th inning.

Santovenia doubled to left off Rick Aguilera, 3-3, with one out and moved to third on Otis Nixon's infield hit. Wallach then lined a 1-2 pitch into center field.

Steve Frey, 2-0, pitched one inning for the victory.

Padres 5, Dodgers 3

Chris James' run-scoring single snapped a tie in the 17th inning.

Toggy Gwynn started the 17th with a one-out, bad-hop single and stole second. Tim Belcher, 4-8, intentionally walked Jack Clark before James followed with a single to right. Clark went to third on the hit and scored on Garry Templeton's sacrifice fly to left.

Pat Clements, 1-0, pitched 4 2-3 innings for the victory.

Reds 9, Braves 3

Todd Benzinger hit a grand slam and rookie Scott Scudder allowed no runs and two hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Barry Larkin extended his hitting streak to six games with singles in his three at-bats to increase his hit total to 99. He was 3-for-4 and leads the National League with a .365 average.

Pirates 5, Cubs 4

Andy Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla

hit consecutive run-scoring triples during a four-run first inning.

The first four Pirates' batters in the game hit safely against Rick Sutcliffe, 9-5.

Phillies 4, Cardinals 2

Rookie Dennis Cook allowed four hits in eight-plus innings and drove in a run.

Cook, who began the season in the minor leagues, is 2-0 since being acquired from San Francisco on June 18 in the trade for Steve Bedrosian.

Tommy Herr, Steve Jeltz and Darren Daulton also drove in a run apiece for the Phillies.

Orioles peck Blue Jays, 16-6 Matuszak's death drug-related

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The first major-league game between teams with black managers was memorable. Because of what happened on the field, not in the dugouts.

Frank Robinson's Baltimore Orioles trounced Cito Gaston's Toronto Blue Jays 16-6 Tuesday night in a zany evening at Memorial Stadium.

Toronto outthit the Orioles 13-11. But Baltimore drew 15 walks - most in the majors this season and tying a team record - and took advantage of four errors, three by third baseman Kelly Gruber.

"I didn't wake up this morning thinking about it (the historical significance)," Gaston said. "I woke up thinking about a game between the Blue Jays and the Orioles."

Baltimore won the first meeting of the year between the teams and increased its lead in the American League East to 6 1/2 games. The Orioles matched their season high for runs and ended a three-game losing streak, sending Toronto to its third consecutive defeat.

"I don't know if this was a big game, but it is an important series," Robinson said. "To jump out and score 16 runs is very gratifying, but I don't think we were lucky. We took advantage of the walks."

In other AL games, Minnesota downed Oakland 11-5, California beat Cleveland 2-1 in 10 innings, Detroit rallied past New York 6-5, Seattle routed Kansas City 8-0, Milwaukee stopped Boston 5-4 and Texas defeated Chicago 5-1.

Jay Tibbs, 5-0, struggled but wound up with Baltimore's first complete-game victory since April 23. Fred McGriff and Gruber homered in the ninth inning.

Mike Flanagan, 4-6, gave up six runs on six hits and four walks in 2-3 innings. Frank Wills and Dwayne Buice followed, and the three combined to throw 220 pitches.

Twins 11, Athletics 5

Kirby Puckett drove in three runs for the second straight game and Minnesota scored eight times in the sixth inning.

In the sixth, Puckett hit a grounder that went through the legs of third baseman Carney Lansford, allowing two runs to score. Center fielder Dave Henderson lost a fly ball in the Metrodome lights, enabling two more runs to come home.

Gary Wayne, 3-0, got the victory and Juan Berenguer went three innings for his second save. Gene Nelson, 2-3, was the loser.

Mariners 8, Royals 0

Brian Holman, 2-2, pitched a seven-hitter for his first AL shutout and Jeffrey Leonard hit a three-run homer.

Leonard hit his 15th home run of the year. Darrell Coles also connected in the fifth inning against Luis Aquino, 3-2.

Tigers 6, Yankees 5

Alan Trammell's two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning rallied Detroit.

Tracy Jones and Lou Whitaker opened the ninth with singles off Lee Guetterman, 1-1. Trammell followed with a double to left field, and Whitaker barely beat shortstop Alvaro Espinoza's relay to the plate.

Steve Sax went 5-for-5, and his solo home run put the Yankees ahead 5-4 in the eighth. Brad Havens, 1-1, got the victory.

Brewers 5, Red Sox 4

Rookie Gary Sheffield went 3-for-3 against Roger Clemens.

Clemens, 8-6, went 6 1-3 innings. Don August, 7-7, allowed one earned run on seven hits in 6 2-3 innings. Dan Plesac got his 19th save.

Angels 2, Indians 1

Jack Howell led off the top of the 10th inning with a home run.

Neil Allen made his first appearance for the Indians and Howell was the first batter he faced.

Rich Monteleone, 2-0, pitched 2 1-3 innings for the victory. Bryan Harvey got his 10th save.

Rangers 5, White Sox 1

Rookie Kevin Brown pitched 8 1-3 strong innings.

Brown, 7-4, lost his bid for his first shutout in the ninth inning. Jeff Russell got two outs for his 18th save.

Jeff Kunkel, filling in for injured shortstop Scott Fletcher, drove in two runs. Kunkel is 6-for-17 since Fletcher sprained his left ankle five games ago.

Rookie Greg Hibbard, 0-2, was the loser.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The parents of former Oakland Raiders defensive lineman John Matuszak acknowledged that their son battled his chronic back pain with prescribed and illegal drugs.

Matuszak's parents reacted swiftly to the announcement Tuesday by the Los Angeles County coroner's office that their son died of an accidental overdose of a mild narcotic painkiller. The coroner also found non-lethal traces of cocaine in Matuszak's system.

"We are not unmindful of the problems our son had in his battle against chronic pain and his resulting use of drugs, both prescription and otherwise," Marv and Audrey Matuszak said in a statement released within minutes of the coroner's report.

The Matuszaks were in Hayward, Calif., today for a private memorial service and could not be reached for further comment. Al Davis, the Raiders' managing general partner, and former coach John Madden were to deliver eulogies. Matuszak, who died June 17 in a Burbank hospital, was buried last week in Oak Creek, Wis.

"At the proper time, we will have things to say about substance abuse and the scoundrels in the medical profession who recklessly dispense prescription drugs and the parasites of society who distribute illicit drugs from back alleys to fashionable condominiums," the Matuszaks said.

"For now, however, we do not wish the dark side of these realities to detract from the celebration of the good and great deeds of this kind and wonderful man - our son."

Their statement was released in Los Angeles by Kathy Pinckert, who said she was John Matuszak's publicist for the last five years.

Tests also showed traces of a byproduct of cocaine, but that was not considered to have contributed to Matuszak's death, coroner's spokesman Bob Dambacher said.

"The manner of death is listed as an accident," Dambacher said.

Also contributing to Matuszak's death were an enlarged heart and pneumonia, Dambacher said.

Matuszak, 38, had been given a prescription for Darvocet early on the morning of June 17, Dambacher said. Darvocet is a combination of two drugs: propoxyphene, a mild narcotic painkiller found in Darvon, and acetaminophen, the painkiller found in Tylenol, Anacin-3, Panadol and Tempra.

High doses of propoxyphene "taken for prolonged periods may lead to physical dependence on the drug. However, it is less addictive than other similar drugs, and most people are able to stop treatment without difficulty," according to the American Medical Association's "Guide to Prescription And Over-The-Counter Drugs."

The propoxyphene level found in Matuszak's blood was 3.4 micrograms per milliliter, Dambacher said, but he was unsure how much of the drug Matuszak had taken.

"Anything could be fatal over 1.0 (micrograms), but that depends. If you've perhaps been using it, you can build up a tolerance," Dambacher said. "With his size (6-foot-8, 280 pounds) and his prior use of it, we don't know how much it takes."

Matuszak played for the Raiders from 1976 through 1981 and was on two Super Bowl championship teams. The Raiders moved to Los Angeles in 1982, but Matuszak had a back injury and spent the entire season on the injured-reserve list.

He then retired to pursue full-time an acting career in which he had dabbled while a player.

Matuszak stars in the movie "One Man Force," which is scheduled to be released directly on video later this year. The movie received poor marks in test screenings in Atlanta, according to a spokesman for Shapiro-Glickenthaus Entertainment.

No place has had as many great agricultural leaders as Hereford

Says lifelong cattleman Bud Thurber

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

The pilot trimmed the sleek plane following a steep climb from the Mississippi ranch--the big river was left behind and Texas was straight ahead.

"How would you like to be a full partner with me in the Hereford business?" a passenger asked as the plane bumped through updrafts off the Mississippi River.

"I don't have that kind of money, so there's no way," the pilot replied as he set the plane on a course for Texas.

"I'll make you a full partner in my registered Hereford business. We'll lay in cattle at whatever amount I have in them. If they're too high they're too high. If they're too cheap, they're too cheap," the man answered. "You will owe only me and there will be no interest until the cattle are paid for."

Thus began a partnership that set the foundation for the Number One registered Hereford herd in the nation, and the beginning of a team that would gain recognition in the Hereford industry throughout the world.

The pilot was W.R. "Bud" Thurber who now owns and operates the Thurber Cattle Co. out where 25-Mile Avenue blends with U.S. 385, and the passenger was J.S. Bridwell of Windthorst, Tx. The year was 1956 and the place was 8,000 feet over the Mississippi River.

"We had been working cattle in Mississippi and facilities weren't the best on the ranches Mr. Bridwell had bought there. We were working commercial heifers I had sold to go to Florida," said Thurber.

"We were taking off in Mr. Bridwell's plane, and I was looking out, when he reached over and said

"Bud, how would you like to partner with me?"

"We expanded from there and just kept growing. I guess if Mr. Bridwell were still alive we'd still be growing."

The Bridwell Hereford Ranch was headquartered at Windthorst, 25 miles southeast of Wichita Falls. Within a decade from forming the partnership, it became the nation's top registered Hereford producer with more than 10,000 head stretched across 11 ranches in five states.

"We never sold our calves but always held them over as yearlings," said Thurber. "When you count the calves, the yearlings and the cowherd, you come up with a pretty good size operation. At one time, Mr. Bridwell had more than a quarter million acres of land."

The Bridwell Hereford Ranch exhibited grand champions at every major show in the nation.

From his office in Hereford, Thurber spoke of the grand champions exhibited by Bridwell Hereford Ranch at every major Hereford show in the nation, and of twice setting records for the highest selling Hereford bull in the world.

After nearly 20 years in the cattle feeding end of the beef business, Thurber says one of the biggest problems is extreme highs and lows at the marketplace.

"The big problem with beef cattle today," said Thurber, "is they have become so mongrelized we don't know where we are or where we're going. This age of boxed beef is more and more going to demand a uniform animal. I really believe this will help iron out highs and lows."

Being a soft-spoken man of low profile in big business, Thurber speaks of the cattle business as a way of life and not merely as a tool for profit. "I guess you'd say I was born in the cattle business," said Thurber. "I've been in both, production and finishing, and I've found it all to be a very high-risk business, but I believe the beef business is beginning to show a little more maturity...maybe a leveling out."

At a time when most men retire, Thurber is running 10,000 head of yearlings.

Cattlemen from coast to coast have seen Bud Thurber in the show ring where his show stock many times have swept the blue ribbons of an entire show or topped the sale at an auction. They have seen the same man make a lateral move into the feeding industry, chalk up good profits, and weather the beef crash of the 1970s. At an age when most men retire, Thurber is running 10,000 head of yearlings and a cow-calf ranch is on his mind.

"I don't know of any place that has had so many great leaders in the agricultural industry as the city of Hereford," said Thurber, as he recalled how the big beef boom days of the 1960s were centered around Hereford. "California and even Colorado may have at one time been out in front in cattle feeding but no area in the nation has even been close to these High Plains in custom cattle feeding during the past 25 years. Kansas is up there pretty close these days but I believe these cattle feeders in the Hereford region still have the edge on all others."

Walter Robert "Bud" Thurber was born May 12, 1920, at Tucson, Arizona, to Harold and Carey Thurber who had come west from Virginia for a drier climate. The Thurburs staked out a ranch in the rolling grassland between Patagonia and Nogales near the Mexican border. The ranch later became known as one of the top Hereford operations in the Southwest.

"The Thurber family was in the Shorthorn business in Virginia. I remember a big Shorthorn bull my father bought, but he was already moving into the Hereford business before I was old enough to remember much."

With younger brother Sam and older brother Harold, young Thurber attended a country school called Empire on the Santa Cruz River near Nogales.

"At one time our ranch ran from Patagonia to the Mexican border," said Thurber.

Just before the big depression and Wall Street crash, Thurber's father decided it was too dry in the border country, and in 1928 he sold out the 100,000 acre spread, along with 3,500 head of Hereford cows, and moved to northern California.

"Dad wanted to go where it rained, so he bought a ranch near a little California town called Willet," noting that in spite of only a 15-inch annual rainfall, the Southern Arizona country contained some of the best rangeland in the Southwest. "We spent two years ranching in Northern California, but caught 120 inches of rain the first year and 125 the second. We decided that was too much rain."

"My dad still has walls covered with blue ribbons and trophies we won in those days."

During those two years, the Thurburs exhibited registered Herefords at shows across northern California and in such out-of-state towns as Reno, Nevada. "My dad still has walls covered with blue ribbons and trophies we won in those days," said Thurber. His father, at age 93, still lives near the old ranch home. His mother died seven years ago.

"We had grass head-high in California, but the cattle were starving to death, so we moved back to Arizona to what we call the home ranch, 10 miles north of Sonoita where my brothers and I grew up. My dad still lives there on part of the old ranch, where he has lived for 59 years."

The Thurburs brought in a registered string of Herefords and were one of the first to introduce the old Anxiety 4th straight-bred line to Arizona.

Thurber graduated from Patagonia High School just about the time the dust storms were being socked down on the High Plains of Texas, and while attending the University of Arizona, he was married to his childhood sweetheart, Yvonne Braden.

"I actually met my wife when I was about 11 and she was about 8 or 9 while attending Bible School one summer," said Thurber, who also pointed out that he and his family showed registered Herefords through his school days of the 1930's.

He graduated from the University of Arizona in 1941 with a degree in animal husbandry, and during the years immediately following he and Mrs. Thurber became parents of two daughters. Because of his family status, Thurber was deferred from action in World War II.

In January 1949, Thurber went to work as manager of the registered Hereford operation of J.S. Bridwell and moved his family to the headquarters near Windthorst.

Thurber pointed out that the Bridwell Hereford Ranch was already known in cattle circles across the nation when he joined them in the late 1940s, but the big expansion was yet to come.

"There has been some change in the Herefords since that time," said Thurber, "But actually, as to what we call the old line-breeding of Herefords, there really hasn't been all that much change. There was an infusion of small-types which we later discarded and went back to the old bloodlines which we considered some of the good cattle even to this day."

When Thurber hired on as ramrod, Bridwell had his basic registered herd of about 800 cows located on three ranches just south of Windthorst - East Ranch on U.S. 81, Headquarters Ranch six miles west and a third and larger ranch 16 miles to the southwest of Windthorst on the West Fork of the Trinity River.

"At one time, there was a total of 11 ranches in five states and probably 10,000 commercial cows."

In speaking of the vast operation of the Bridwell cattle business, Thurber said, "At one time, there were a total of 11 ranches in five states and probably 10,000 commercial cows, and we usually carried all the calves over to yearlings."

As manager of the registered operation, Thurber staged Bridwell's first production sale at the ranch in 1952, and from that time until their dispersal in 1968, they held a production sale about every two years.

"When I went to work for Mr. Bridwell, there was a nucleus of a tremendous herd of cattle that just needed to be worked with an developed which is what we went on and finally accomplished."

"We had some problems, as did everyone else, such as getting rid of some of the smaller pony-type cattle that had been brought in, but we got rid of them, and brought the herd back and then expanded it - at one time we had approximately 1,200 registered cows."

Larry Domino was Bridwell's most popular bloodline during the 1950's, followed by the Real Silver Domino line in the late 1950's and early 1960's. They then blended the two bloodlines together.

Thurber recalled that in the middle 1950's, he hired Karroll Higgins as top herdsman for the registered string as they annually followed a show circuit across the nation.

Higgins later moved to Hereford where he became manager of the old Eskimo Ranch that was owned at that time by the late Jack Renfro. Renfro also became owner of the sprawling TO Ranch headquartered near Raton, N.M., shortly before his death in the mid-1960s.

During the early 1950's, Bridwell had exhibited stock mostly within the state of Texas, then Thurber expanded showings into nearly every major show of the nation, with the exception of California. They showed the champion carload in Denver at the National Western Stock Show in 1956.

"From this point on, we expanded and showed carloads in Denver every year, and showed pretty much all over the country."

Thurber said that the same year they made the big sweep in Denver, they sold half-interest in the grand champion of the Oxley Hereford Ranch at Pawhuska, Okla., for $55,000 which at that time was record price ever paid for a Hereford bull, and then followed up by selling half-interest in another bull for $52,500 to Ed Fisher who was affiliated with the Fisher body works in Detroit.

While speaking of the livestock exhibitions in the Southwest, Thurber said, "We swept those shows many times and at the Arizona National in Phoenix one year we won 12 blue ribbons out of a total of 14, including both champions."

Following the death of Mr. Bridwell, Thurber said his management policies of the ranch were "a little different from those of the Estate's board of trustees" and by this time he held a partnership in all the registered cattle and about one-half of the commercial cattle. In addition to the Windthorst ranches in Texas, they also had a 100,000 acre spread near Adrian and a 30,000 acre ranch near Romero in the Texas Panhandle, and a sixth Texas ranch located near what is now Lake Arrowhead. They also had considerable acreage under lease.

With the board of trustees made up of a former oil superintendent, an office manager, an accountant and a nephew, "None of these people were ranch people nor knew much about the cattle business. Our operations didn't work out with their way of thinking and it was decided that the best thing to do was to split the blanket," said Thurber as he recalled the breakup of the Bridwell-Thurber partnership.

"Mr. Bridwell had it written in his will that I could keep the partnership operation as long as I so desired. I wanted to keep it on but it didn't prove to be practical," said Thurber. "We sold all of the registered cattle at private treaty and then I bought their interests in the Colorado ranches and cattle and then I sold them my interests in the ranches down here (Texas)."

Thurber sold his Colorado ranches (about 50,000 acres) near Trinidad and Agilar about 10 years ago.

Thurber and his family moved to Hereford in 1968 to set up a new way of life in the cattle-feeding business.

Thurber had already purchased land for a feedlot near Summerfield by the time he and the Bridwell Estate were dissolving partnership in 1968. That same year, Thurber and his family moved to Hereford to set up a new way of life in the cattle feeding business. Prefeeder, Inc. opened as a cattle growing operation, but after two years, Thurber moved the unit into a full scale finishing lot.

"I had some misgivings coming into the feeding business, but it was one phase of the cattle business that I had ever tried," Thurber added, pointing out that Tom Harris, his assistant manager and herdsman at Bridwell, came with him to Hereford as a partner. "We had fed a lot of cattle but had never run a feedlot per se."

"I actually spotted this land for the feedlot from the air while flying between ranches," said Thurber, who noted that they opened with 8,000-head capacity in 1968 and had expanded to 26,000 by the time they sold it six years ago. Harris is now manager of the King Ranch Feedlot near Kingsville.

A third partner in the feedlot was also a former Bridwell employee, Mike Robertson, who was Thurber's office manager at Windthorst.

Thurber is now heavily involved in the stocker end of the cattle business with cattle scattered on eight ranches in three states.

"I really love to live here in Hereford... it's up to the people on whether we stay at a certain level or keep growing."

"I really love to live here in Hereford," said Thurber, as he adjusted the video of a commodity market screen. "I believe that the city of Hereford, and the surrounding area, has reached something of a plateau or maybe we could call it maturity. And now, as I see it, it is up to the people on whether we stay at a certain level or keep growing."

At the age of 69, when many folks have long retired, the Hereford cattleman continues to handle a heavy inventory of yearlings, some of which are on far-flung pastures across the Southwest, while others are stashed in commercial feedyards around Hereford. "You might be able to find some cheaper grain up in Kansas but with our climate and our modern feedlots, you're going to find these Texas feeders are mighty hard to beat."

Thurber initiates a few futures contracts and stays abreast of what's happening in downtown Chicago or New York, but his real bullishness is on Hereford and the beef business: "I've eaten beef all of my life and just love the taste of beef and here I am doing business right in the middle of the greatest

Combust, Gramm get 'Enterprise' awards

U.S. Rep. Larry Combust (R-Lubbock) and U.S. Sen Phil Gramm (R-College Station) are among the 161 representatives and 31 senators to receive the Spirit of Enterprise Award from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The awards were presented on June 13 in a ceremony on Capitol Hill.

The recipients had compiled pro-business voting records of 70 percent or more based upon votes on key business issues determined by the U.S. Chamber.

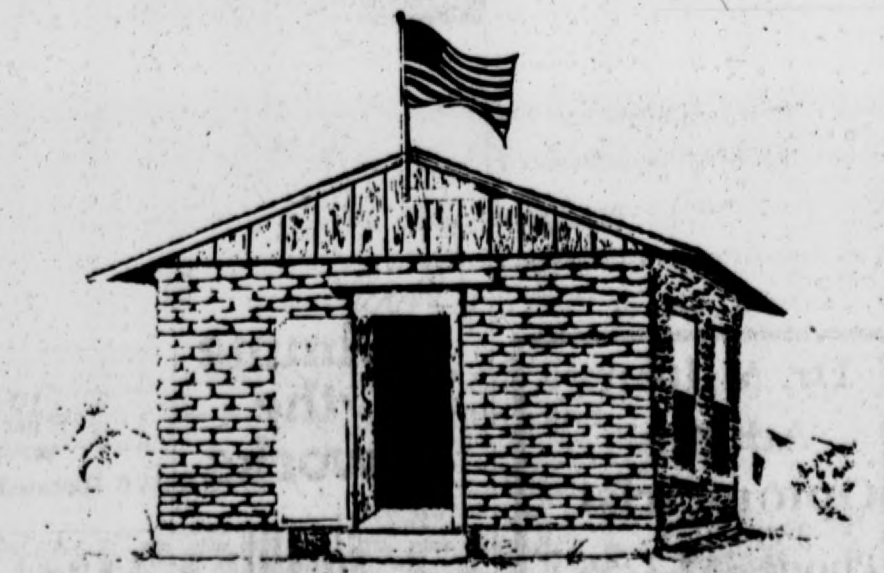

"Our Congress commits so many outrages against business that an impartial observer might easily conclude there is some kind of legislative conspiracy afoot to undermine the free enterprise system," said Dr. Richard L. Leshner, president of the U.S. Chamber.

"In truth, the situation would be a lot worse were it not for many members (of Congress) who do appreciate the free enterprise system and work energetically to defend it, often at great political risk."

"...Too often, a vote against a labor bill is irrationally condemned as a vote against labor. Fortunately for us, there are many members of Congress who recognize these proposals as the frauds they are and vote against them despite the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune they know will ensue."

"Such votes require integrity and courage that is rarely acknowledged and applauded."

Leshner said the U.S. Chamber will make the awards an annual event to keep the list of pro-business legislators up to date.

White Pig Restaurant caters to devout Red Raider followers

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - Although it was never a formal degree requirement, hardly a Texas Tech University student since the 1950s has parted from the university without having eaten at least one hamburger at the White Pig.

Somewhere along its route to longevity, the White Pig became an institution because it has been able to weather the competition from national hamburger chains, and a second generation of students are eating there now.

The restaurant, located near the northeast tip of the campus, also gets an assortment of judges and lawyers, banking personnel, construction contractors and ne'er-do-well reporters for the lunch run or an afternoon soft drink.

It's the kind of business that never expanded into a franchise operation or set up successful branch stores, but it has provided its owner, Gene and Katie Schleuse, a living for 32 years.

A generation of Texas Tech football players are acquainted with the burgers-and-fries cuisine that still flows from the restaurant's griddle.

Schleuse said, "When Jim Carlen was coach here, he bought 120 hamburgers every Friday night. He would give them (the players) two hamburgers and put them to bed."

According to Margaret Sparkman, who has worked at the restaurant for 31 years, the White Pig also used to buy the players' supper every Sunday night after a Saturday win. That was before eyebrows began to lift at such tangible support.

The restaurant has been mentioned in the food columns of Texas Monthly magazine in two recent years, but an ability to persevere through the years and still bring back old customers is probably its proudest achievement.

"Much of the trade is made up by Tech students, but a lot also comes from clear across town," Schleuse said. "Most of the checks I take come from the area from 19th Street to 90th Street. It's old customers that have moved away and still remember - and still come back."

In its early days, the White Pig was a contemporary of the storied Hi-D-Ho Drive-In, but it maintained an atmosphere all its own. Customers watched familiar faces cross the restaurant scene at a distance, with few introductions.

It was the Hi-D-Ho for cruising, the White Pig for eating.

Was there no provision for romantic inclinations then?

Sure.

Schleuse said he was told recently by a Tech student that his parents became engaged while dining at the restaurant.

And another impetuous suitor once had the proprietor painstakingly place an engagement ring atop a food order so that it would have maximum impact when it came into view.

In some circles that could be construed as a bit off the wall, but it must have become a conversation topic forever after.

"I don't try to do as much business as I used to do. I close every day at 5:30, and we only have the dinner run. But our dinner run is as good as it has ever been. We compete with Burger King, which is right across the way," Schleuse said.

"I raised two kids out of this place," he said, referring to David, no national sales manager for the Chili Bowl, and Donna, who is in charge of a hospital nursing division in Corpus Christi.

"The east-west freeway will take us out. So, I guess instead of quitting, I will just let it take me on out."

He added, "All the students have memories. They come up and tell you stories. It never misses a day when somebody doesn't just come by to see if we are still here."

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, June 28, the 179th day of 1989. There are 186 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 28, 1914, Austrian Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, Sofia, were assassinated in present-day Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, by a Serbian revolutionary - the event which triggered World War I. Five years later on this date, the Treaty of Versailles was signed in France, officially ending the international conflict.

On this date:

In 1491, England's King Henry VIII was born in Greenwich.

In 1778, Mary Ludwig Hays gained the name "Molly Pitcher" and a place in U.S. history by aiding American forces at the Revolutionary War Battle of Monmouth in New Jersey.

In 1836, the fourth president of the United States, James Madison, died in Montpelier, Va.

In 1838, Britain's Queen Victoria was crowned in Westminster Abbey.

In 1894, Labor Day was established as a holiday for federal employees on the first Monday of September.

In 1919, Harry S. Truman married Elizabeth Virginia Wallace in Independence, Mo.

In 1928, New York Gov. Alfred E. Smith was nominated for president at the Democratic National Convention in Houston.

In 1939, Pan American Airways began regular trans-Atlantic air service as the "Dixie Clipper" left Port Washington, N.Y., for Portugal.

In 1950, North Korean forces captured Seoul, South Korea.

In 1977, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld a 1974 law giving the government control over former President Richard M. Nixon's White House papers and tape recordings.

In 1978, the Supreme Court ordered the University of California Medical College at Davis to admit Allan Bakke, a white man who claimed he was a victim of reverse discrimination when the school rejected his application.

Ten years ago: The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, raised world crude oil prices to a range of $18 to $23.50 a barrel, the biggest increase in five years.

Five years ago: Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson issued a statement disavowing as "reprehensible and morally indefensible" statements by supporter Louis Farrakhan which were roundly attacked as anti-Semitic.

One year ago: The federal government sued the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to force reforms on the nation's largest labor union, saying it was dominated by the Mafia. (The two sides reached a settlement in March.)

Today's birthdays: Comedian-movie director Mel Brooks is 63. Actress Danielle Brisebois is 20.

Thought for today: "There is nothing so powerful as an old idea whose time has come again." -- Ben J. Wattenberg, American writer (1933-).

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) - "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson was decked out in a white tuxedo and Oscar-nominated actress Melanie Griffith wore a white lace wedding gown as they remarried at a ceremony at their rustic ranch.

Johnson, 39, and Ms. Griffith, 31, were married under a white, flower-entwined arbor in a non-denominational ceremony attended by about 30 people, publicist Elliott Mintz said in announcing the Monday afternoon ceremony.

Ms. Griffith, who is expecting to give birth in autumn, was nominated for an Academy Award for her "Working Girl."

Johnson and Ms. Griffith were married in 1976 and divorced within two years.

the 1989 'TEXAS' Souvenir program. Although the musical drama has featured different cowboy artists for the past 23 seasons, this is the first edition to display full color prints.

Called the Rembrandt of the West, Snidow is internationally recognized for his realistic contemporary watercolors of cowboys at work on the range, on windmills and on horses.

A gentle, gray-bearded man, Snidow has exhibited his paintings, sculptures and drawings in France, China, Canada and across the U.S. At 51 he has won more awards from the Cowboys Artist of America than any artist alive with 27 medals, three "Best of Show" and two "Memorial Awards."

Paintings by Snidow can bring up to $75,000 and are collected by such celebrities as Julie Andrews and Blake Edwards.

The musical drama 'TEXAS' opened June 14 and will continue through Aug. 26. It will be staged nightly except Sunday in Palo Duro Canyon near Amarillo; for reservation information, call 655-2181.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: As we are grandparents in our 60s and raised three children, we thought we knew a little about food and drink that was good and not good for children. Now we wonder. We are not trying to be bossy, but we would like to know if we are behind the times. The most precious thing a grandparent has is at stake — grandchildren.

We have a 5-year-old grandson who we would have called high-strung. It is impossible for him to be still one minute. He does things even though he knows he will be punished. He is so rough with smaller children while playing with them. If you hand him something, he will jerk it out of your hand — even a glass of liquid.

My wife and I think he might calm down a little if my daughter would not let him have so much stuff loaded with caffeine, such as Coke and chocolate, more than one time a day. My daughter doesn't think that has anything to do with him being high-strung. When he has stayed all night and day with us, we wouldn't let him have all of the colas and chocolate he wanted and you could tell he had calmed down some.

DEAR READER: The example of what your grandchild eats that you included in the rest of your letter is not very reassuring that he is getting a balanced diet. Yes, too much caffeine can make children nervous and overactive. A good test to see if that is the case would be to eliminate it.

However, hyperactive children often benefit from caffeine and related medicines that you would think would make matters worse. I think your daughter should discuss the child's behavior and diet with her pediatrician. I would like to have seen some mention of milk in the child's diet.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother-in-law insists on buying the inexpensive eyeglasses that are sold in discount and drug stores. I told her that she needs to go to an optometrist so she can get an accurate prescription but she continues to wear the less costly glasses.

Are these glasses safe? I figure if my mother-in-law sees it in your column she will go to an eye doctor.

— Margie M., Indianapolis, Ind.

According to the American Optometric Association, these glasses generally won't harm your eyes. The association does, however, stress the importance of having a regular eye health examination by an optometrist.

An important fact to remember is that blurred vision isn't always caused by a focusing problem. It can be a symptom of an eye disease in need of treatment.

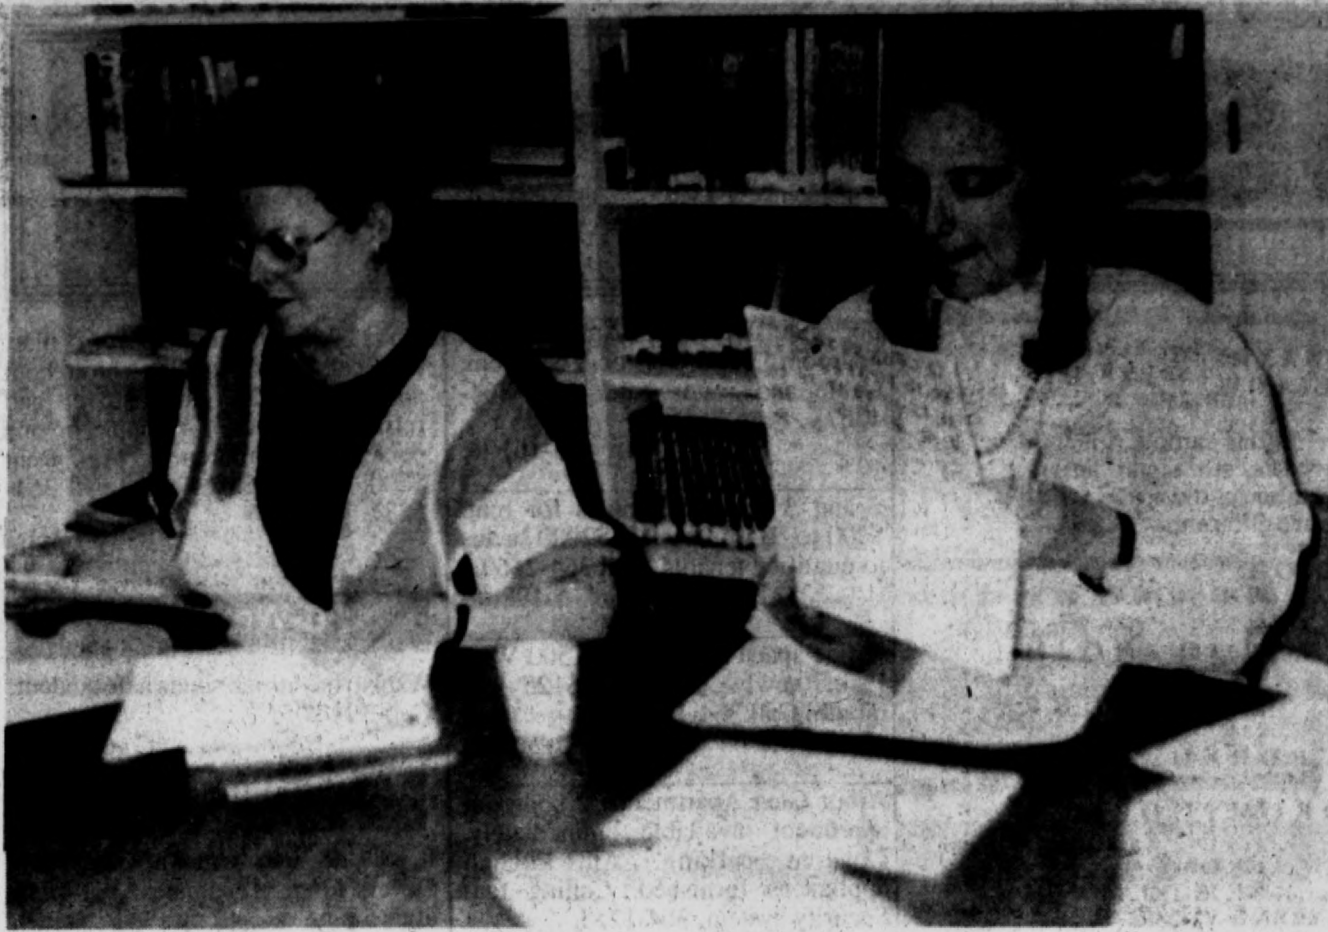

Ready-to-wear glasses may seem fine when worn for a minute or two in the store, but put them to the grueling test of everyday life and they usually prove otherwise.

The following are some points to think about before purchasing the off-the-rack glasses: Both lenses have the same magnification, while most people need a different lens prescription for each eye. The lenses have no correction for a common vision problem causing blurred vision. The optical center of the lenses often does not correspond to the wearer's line of vision.

Custom-made prescription glasses that are ground to meet the wearer's specific vision needs are a necessity, not a luxury, for people today. — Heloise

Selecting music

Linda Gilbert, left, and Amy Gililand are busily choosing musical selections for the melodrama, "Belle of Bisbee". The humorous production, directed by Gililand, will be held July 14-15 at St. Thomas Episcopal Church and Gilbert will play appropriate music. The outdoor setting, known as the Doubting Thomas Dinner Theatre, will feature dinner served at 7:30 p.m. and the play begins at 8:30 p.m. each night. For ticket information, call 364-0146. Proceeds from the rollicking Western will benefit the church and the community.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN READERS: I spoke at a convention in Las Vegas several weeks ago and, as always, when I have visited that unique city, I was fascinated by the presence of slot machines in the airport, the hotel lobbies and just about everywhere you look.

Although I would not put a nickel in one of those one-armed bandits, I am intrigued by the variety of people who are hooked.

Is this a game for suckers? Definitely yes. But some folks do win—sometimes. Last December, a slot machine at the Golden Nugget in Las Vegas paid a staggering $3 million.

In the magazine "Sylvia Porter's Personal Finance" I read the following tips by Nancy Dunn on how to increase your odds. Proceed at your own peril, suckers:

Slot machines nearest the doors tend to be the most generous. They pay out more because the clatter and clang of the coins attracts customers. The machines farthest from the door are lower paying.

In Las Vegas, slots in casinos off the Strip (the downtown area) are more generous than those in the large Strip casinos.

Avoid the nickel slots—they provide the worst odds.

Ask the hostess where the best machines are.

Do not play two machines side by side; it's unlikely that two generous machines will be placed next to each other.

Stick with bar slots; they usually pay better than the machines that show apples, oranges and cherries.

Machines with several slots, requiring more than one coin per pull, tend to pay better.

Give a particular slot machine six tries. If you don't hit, move on.

If you came to Vegas by bus, you probably received a voucher for quarters, if so, bet only that amount.

If you don't have a voucher, set your own dollar limit and stick to it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My wife and I both lost partners to early deaths. We married 13 years ago. All the children, hers and mine, are grown and on their own.

We all get along fairly well, but one of my stepdaughters is a bit of a thorn in my side. "Sallie" comes over her almost every day. She goes straight to the fridge and practically cleans us out. Recently she mooched, Sallie has had us to dinner once, a hamburger cookout in the back yard. Her husband did the broiling.

Isn't it terrible for a grown woman to take advantage of her mother like this? It's the only thing my wife and I argue about. Please express your views, Ann. I could use some help.—San Antonio, Tex.

DEAR SAN AN: I agree. It is terrible, but this is one argument you are not going to win. Sallie is indeed a world-class free-loader.

but her mother doesn't have the nerve to tell her to shape up.

In the interest of family harmony, look the other way. It's not worth ruining your marriage.

When planning a wedding, who pays for what? Who stands where? "The Ann Landers' Guide for Brides" has all the answers. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) To: Brides, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

For the first time in modern history, the world population growth rate is declining reports the United States.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Burt Reynolds, who couldn't make it to a weekend barbecue for Vice President Dan Quayle, isn't really a member of the Republican Party after all.

In fact, The Palm Beach Post reports he hasn't voted since 1980 and is a registered Democrat.

"The issue is: What does a person consider himself?" said Reynolds' agent David Gershenson. "If he's technically registered as a Democrat, I know he considers himself a Republican."

Reynolds was invited to the Quayle barbecue in North Palm Beach but sent his regrets because he was taping his "B.L. Stryker" television series.

Despite a Post story saying Reynolds was a Democrat, he told Jupiter Mayor Mary Hinton that he was a Republican.

Publicist Kenny Miller said Reynolds registered in Palm Beach as a Democrat in 1980 to vote for Jimmy Carter because he got to know the former governor while making movies in Georgia.
