Mother gets 40 years for injuring child

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A pregnant teen-age Midland mother who in anger severely injured her 3-year-old daughter last year by shaking her and slamming her head against a wall, on Friday was sentenced to 40 years in the Texas penitentiary system.

The mother, Kimberly Briones, had pleaded guilty to "serious bodily injury to a child" before 318th Texas District Court Judge Dean Rucker, who then sentenced the woman to prison.

The child, Esperanza "Espi" Salazar, suffered "severe brain injury due to blunt force and shaking," said the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Robin Malone Sams.

"I think basically it's worse than a murder," Ms. Sams said, "when a child ends up without any reasonable life functions" due to intentional injury.

"The child can't walk, talk or eat on her own, sit or anything else," Ms. Sams said. "Basically, it's just as bad or worse than a murder."

The child currently is in foster care under the state of Texas.

The injury occurred in her parents' apartment on a Sunday morning, Feb. 20, 2000, according to court records.

Ms. Briones, who pleaded guilty to the first-degree felony that carries a punishment range from five years to 99 years or life in prison, was represented in the case by court-appointed defense attorney Sandy Torres of Midland. She pleaded guilty in lieu of facing a jury trial.

Torres was unavailable for comment later Friday.

Ms. Briones, who said she was six months pregnant when she injured her daughter, was 17 or 18 years old at the time. She said she wasn't sure of her exact age or if she was born in October 1981 or 1982.

The injury to her daughter occurred out of anger and frustration because "the baby wouldn't clean her room and had called her names," Ms. Sams said.

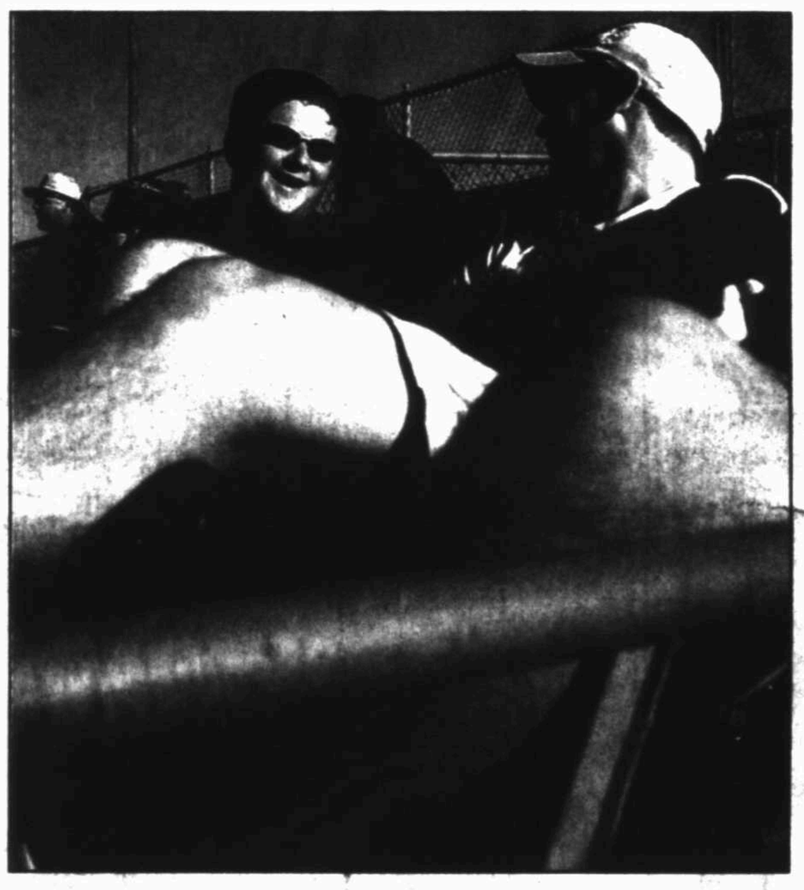

The mother's two other children, one of whom was born after the injury, are "no longer with her (the mother)," Ms. Sams said without saying who has custody of the children.

Ms. Briones and the children's father, Antonio Salazar, were "not really" married, Ms. Sams said, but "the father of the children was living in the home."

On Feb. 23, 2000, three days after Esperanza's head injury, the mother brought the comatose child to Midland Memorial Hospital. Subsequently, the

Snow to sunshine, the city has seen it all

By Richard Acosta

It has been one wild West Texas winter of extremes.

There has been ice. On the day after Christmas, for example, icy roads blanketed Midland, leading to more than 100 accidents in a 24-hour period.

There has been snow. On two days alone — Jan. 18 and Jan. 28 — Midland received a total of 2.2 inches of snow, slightly more than the city normally gets during an entire winter.

Just in the past week, there have been gusty winds, a condition normally associated with a West Texas spring afternoon.

Likewise, there has been the occasional lightning and thunder, again something generally seen in April, May or June.

And, of course, like this weekend, there have

Area labor market gets mixed signals for 2001

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

As the Midland-Odessa economy continues its recovery from the energy price crash of 1998-1999 the labor market is showing some, if mixed, improvement.

"It's two steps forward, one step back," said Michelle Seglem, assistant director of the Texas Workforce Center of Midland. "We get new job orders, but there are also companies still downsizing."

For example, she said, the center is working with a telemarketing center seeking employees while at the same time "We just had some ladies come in who worked for Conoco over 20 years and are looking for similar work."

In December 1999, the Odessa-Midland metropolitan statistical area (MSA) had a labor force

Being presidential hometown doesn't assure best press

By Georgia Temple

The last wild oil boom that hit Midland brought with it the national press. Many long-time residents saw the results on television. Some articles suggested anyone could come to town and within hours, if not sooner, be cutting an oil deal on a downtown street corner. And the screen images of some later stories — tumbleweeds forlornly rolling down a deserted street — remain in memory.

Well, folks, that was nothing. Now that Midland is known as the hometown of the president and a first lady, expect the airport gates to bulge with national media representatives — some good, some bad, some fair, some not.

Already, Inside Edition has been here and plans to air a program on Monday regarding President Bush's bachelor days.

"I told them I had nothing to say, and I would not talk about George in any way, shape or form," said Midlander Lin-

New Episcopal church to be dedicated today

By Johnnye Montgomery
MRT Correspondent

"On the day appointed, the clergy and people gather with the bishop in a place apart from the church or chapel."
— The Book of Common Prayer of the Episcopal Church

In a ritual with roots extending back as far as early Judaism, the members of St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church, their friends and well-wishers will gather today for the dedication of Midland's newest and most visible church edifice, located just off Midland's North Loop 250 between McDonald's and Wal-Mart.

Others may come simply to witness the pageantry and drama of the ancient ritual, the participants clad in colorful, tradition-laden regalia, the words and songs and gestures handed down through the centuries.

The ceremony will begin outside, where the congregation and visitors will stand with clergy, choirs, builders, architects, church governing entities and others while the Rt. Rev. C. Wallis Ohl Jr., Bishop of the Diocese of Northwest Texas, begins the by saying, "Through the ages, Almighty God has moved his people to build houses of prayer and praise, and to set apart places for the ministry of his Holy Word and Sacraments. With gratitude for the building of St. Nicholas' Episcopal Church, we are now gathered to dedicate and consecrate it in God's name."

Next, after a short prayer, they will move forward in a more or less stately procession, depending on the ferocity or the calmness of the wind, marching around the complex, singing a Swahili marching song as they go, then proceeding to the offices and the Parish Hall, to the garden and fountain, to the

Bush brings religion to the 'bully pulpit'

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Acting like a pastor as well as president, George W. Bush speaks about God, love, heart and faith even when the subject isn't religion. The trait is fine for many and "pretty harmless" to others. But it rouses concern among some that he'll push a religious agenda.

One of Bush's first acts was to declare the day after his inauguration a "national day of prayer." He also ate dinner with the local Roman Catholic archbishop, and followed up this week with his proposal to help religious groups provide charitable services.

And he speaks continually about faith.

Some say Bush's religious references are just part of his desire to set a new tone in Washington and distinguish himself from the personal foibles of former President Clinton.

"Being president of all the people, you can't push it too far," said Martin E. Marty, emeritus professor of American religious history at the University of Chicago.

Marty said Bush speaks of religion and faith in soothing, comforting tones — more like a pastor and less like a preacher lecturing the masses.

Some critics view the references as a sop to the Republican Party's Christian conservative base.

"There has never been a president in modern history who uses so quickly the power of his office to promote his religious agenda and one is hard pressed to find an answer for why, except his deep and abiding sense that he owes this election to the religious right," said the Rev. Barry Lynn, executive director of Americans United for Separation of Church and State.

Bush, a Methodist, said Thursday that his faith has "sustained me in moments of success and in moments of disappointment" and "without it, I doubt I'd be here today."

He addressed critics of his proposal to funnel taxpayers' money to religious organizations, pledging to respect the division between church and state.

"I'm interested in what is constitutional and I'm interested in what works," he told the National Prayer Breakfast, an annual gathering of lawmakers, foreign heads of state and spiritual leaders that is a tradition for presidents dating back to Dwight Eisenhower.

Bush's speeches are dotted with references to faith and love. He also talks about rallying the "armies of compassion" and appealing to "our better angels."

His inaugural address reached out to all faiths. Still, some were offended by the distinctly Christian nature of the prayers before and after his remarks.

"The moment that anything that George W. Bush does suggests that he's moving in that direction there'll be more controversy," said Alan Wolfe, director of the Boisi Center for Religion and American Public Life at Boston College.

"Right now, it's all put forward as pretty harmless."

Demoorats talk religion, too.

Clinton, a Baptist, quotes Scripture from memory. Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut, the Democratic vice presidential nominee and an observant Jew, was criticized by some for speeches about God and religion.

Bush talks freely about his faith. He said during a debate that Jesus is the philosopher who most influenced him. He discussed the religious conversion, aided by the Rev. Billy Graham, that he said helped him quit drinking after his 40th birthday.

"Nothing wrong with that," said John P. Crossley Jr., director of the School of Religion at the University of Southern California. "It's just a question of whether people like or don't like the style. I have some doubts about his sincerity so it spoils it a little bit for me."

Americans have doubts about blending politics and religion at all.

Half of those questioned in a Pew Research Center poll last fall agreed that it makes them uncomfortable when politicians talk about how religious they are. But 70 percent said it was important that the president have strong religious beliefs.

Robert Zwier, political science professor at Colorado Christian University, said Bush's use of religion shows he's learned a lesson from his father, former President Bush, who had cool relations with the religious right. The elder Bush also was uncomfortable talking about religion.

"He recognizes that he needs to make overtures to them much more quickly than his father ever did," Zwier said of George W., who was his father's liaison to religious conservatives.

Zwier noted that Bush minimized issues important to that wing of the party, especially abortion, during the campaign. But Bush reassured them two days after becoming president by denying federal money to international family planning groups that advocate or pay for abortions.

Bush family memories convene at Camp David

WASHINGTON (AP) — For President Bush, spending a weekend at Camp David is not just an escape from the pressures of the White House. It's a chance to bring back family memories: horseshoe games, his sister Doro's wedding in the chapel.

When his father was president, Camp David often resounded with the laughter of grandchildren, though former first lady Barbara Bush happily remembers that on some visits, the retreat was simply a quiet place to take a nap or ride a bike or swim laps in the pool.

It also was where first President Bush experienced a heart problem while jogging and where Barbara Bush slammed an inner-tube sled into a tree during a snowy January 1991 and broke her left leg.

This weekend, for his first Camp David visit as president, Bush planned to take brother Marvin, sister Doro, their families, and Condoleezza Rice, his national security adviser. He had no plans to work.

"The president is always free to work the phones and talk to people as he sees fit, but the purpose of going is relaxation" said White House press secretary Ari Fleischer.

Bush will be the 12th chief executive to use the woodsy compound tucked into a western Maryland mountainside. But when his father was president, the 143-acre camp was practically a second family home where George and Barbara Bush, their children and grandchildren spent much time, their peace and serenity and access to recreation assured by Marine Corps security.

It's been eight years since the Bushes could call the place their own, even on a temporary basis.

But much remains to jog their memories. As of last summer, the regulation horseshoe pitching range installed by the first President Bush — an avid horseshoe thrower — was in place and well maintained. So was the jungle gym installed for the Bush grandchildren.

"For the most part, weekends were spent at Camp David," Barbara Bush recalls in her 1994 memoir, aptly titled "Barbara Bush."

On many mornings, the president holed up in his office in Laurel Lodge while she settled into hers at Aspen, the presidential cottage, each using the quiet hours to catch up with work.

"Our guests were on their own with a world of things that they could do, and then all of us could meet at lunchtime," she writes.

For the 1992 wedding of daughter Dorothy Walker Bush, known to the family as "Doro," White House florist shop volunteers decorated the Camp David chapel with peach roses. George W. Bush, the bride's brother, read a Bible passage. As she and her new husband, Robert "Bobby" Koch, knelt at the altar, the groom unknowingly gave the congregation a view of the "Bush/Quayle" bumper stickers a family prankster had stuck on the soles of his shoes.

When the first lady broke her leg at Camp David, the couple made light of the sledding accident. There was "no damage to the tree," the president playfully reported.

The Navy, which built the place for Franklin D. Roosevelt during the depression, called it Camp Three. Roosevelt changed that to the more fanciful Shangri-La. Dwight D. Eisenhower changed it anew to the simpler Camp David, a nod to his 5-year-old grandson and his father, Davids both.

"In Roosevelt's day it was a hide-out with little hot water and with brush growing to the windowsills," writes former Associated Press White House reporter Dale Nelson in his 1995 history, "The President is at Camp David."

Harry Truman had the brush cleared and Eisenhower built a putting green; Nixon added a heated swimming pool. "Presidents and their families persisted in calling it rustic," Nelson writes. "Others called its trappings luxurious, even princely."

President Clinton used Camp David less than many predecessors but did bring it into the headlines with an unsuccessful attempt last summer to broker a Mideast peace agreement.

That was a reprise of President Jimmy Carter's use of the camp to produce the framework of an Israel-Palestinian peace pact in 1978 that became known as the Camp David accords.

Program available for 'very low-income' homeowners

From Staff Reports

The city of Midland is ready to assist very low-income homeowners with specific housing problems. There are funds available for repairing main gas lines and main sewer lines, and replacing furnaces and water heaters.

The emergency repairs program is funded through the federal HUD Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

"Mostly," said Sylvester Cantu, who is the CDBG administrator for the city, "we do replacements of the heating systems. We do water heaters but we also repair sewer line and gas line problems that usually occur in conjunction with heating problems."

"The program has been in existence for the past 10 years," Cantu said. "The program assists, depending on funding, about 40 to 50 families."

To learn about program requirements and how to apply, homeowners in need of assistance should contact the city at 685-7472. Also, local social service housing and public safety agencies wanting to make a referral should also call that number.

Applicants must fit the HUD's low income guidelines, which would be an income of no more than 30 percent of city median income based on family size. For example, a family of four would have to have a monthly income of about $1,000 or less to qualify. Also, homeowners must have occupied the residence for at least two years.

CHILD: Mother 'frustrated' with 3-year-old daughter

child was "life-flighted" to Dallas for treatment and rehabilitation, Ms. Sams said.

Court records, based on police detective questioning of the mother, quoted Ms. Briones as saying that she "was frustrated" with her 3-year-old daughter who wouldn't clean up her room and who "was cussing at me ...

"I couldn't handle it anymore, so I got her and hit her, ... grabbed her head and hit her on the wall," Ms. Briones said, according to the transcript of the interrogation.

"I was standing up," Ms. Briones said, "and she was standing up." The 4-foot-10 mother said that she "just grabbed her head and her hair and ... hit her head on the wall ... with all my strength, ... no, not all of it," but there was "a lot of anger inside of me."

At the time of her slamming the child against the wall, Ms. Briones said her left hand was on her daughter's chest and that her right hand was on the back of the child's head.

After the slamming, the child "started crying," Ms. Briones said.

The mother then said she tried to calm her daughter "by loving her again, ... be nice to her and tell her I'm sorry ..."

LABOR: Midland seeing steady loss in job market

(From 1A)

of 120,100 people; in December 2000, the labor force stood at 117,200, a loss of 2,900 jobs over the year, according to Robert Crawley, labor analyst with the Texas Workforce Commission. The December 2000 unemployment rate was 3.7 percent, compared with 6.5 percent in December 1999 and a December high of 8.1 seen in December 1992.

The number of employed residents rose by 600 while the number of unemployed residents fell by 3,500 people, to 4,300 in December from 7,800 in December 1999.

"Some of those unemployed found jobs," Crawley said. "Some dropped out of the labor market — they quit looking, they moved out of the area or they went back to school for retraining."

Dennis Clayton, economic development manager for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said the loss of labor force "has severely hindered our existing businesses, the existing oil and general economic recovery and what we can do for new businesses."

The mining sector — primarily oil and gas extraction — has fueled the recovery in the labor market, Crawley said, adding 600 jobs over the year, while construction added 200 jobs and durable goods manufacturing added 300 jobs.

"Mining would probably go up more if employers could find more people," he observed.

Oil companies are constantly seeking roustabouts and drillers, Ms. Seglem agreed, "but everyone's afraid" to return to such an unstable industry.

Clayton stated "from my vantage point, historically and during 1998-1999 in our down economy and even during 2000, a high unemployment rate and the large labor pool the Odessa-Midland MSA could provide was a key factor in the interest shown in inquiries about locating to Midland-Odessa. Even with some of the recent job losses nationally, the need is for workers and to find a skilled labor force. That is the number question and number one factor a business looks at in looking at a community."

Clayton said he has been receiving a steady amount of inquiries about Midland, 30 percent of which are from call centers.

"I think we had some of our strongest opportunities in 1998, 1999 and 2000, when unemployment was higher, but because of competition lost out on those opportunities, to Odessa or to other communities in Texas or elsewhere in the nation," he said.

What is putting Midland "at the top of the parade" now, he believes, is the training capability provided by the Advanced Technology Center operated by Midland College and the Midland Independent School District.

"As businesses look at our region, our MSA for population, for employees, if we have the number of workers, that's great. The skill needs don't cause employers to turn away. In most cases they provide the customized training the need for their employees. One of the major factors we have in place is the ATC. We see that the companies and businesses are very interested in the fact that we have classrooms with computers available at the ATC, ready to provide training and our ability to respond to their needs."

Observed Ms. Seglem, "it's better than last year at this time. There were no opportunities last year. People had to move to find work. Now there are opportunities."

WEATHER: Winter has been more extreme than years past

(From 1A)

think about trying this year.

"It's crazy," Henandez said. "I wish it would warm up for a change. I'm used to our regular West Texas winters. Plus, I'm tired of paying these high electric bills."

Some people wouldn't mind the cold so much if it wasn't for the icy conditions that came with it.

Midlander Bliss Foy, who was taking in a brisk walk around the mall Friday afternoon, said she really didn't care for the type of weather we're having now. She said she didn't like the unpredictable weather and much preferred the normal, warmer, Midland winters.

"It's been a real inconvenience," Ms. Foy said. "Especially the icy days. But it's been pretty nice these last couple of days."

Moms also have a whole new handful of problems to deal with when facing colder temperatures. Vicki Martin, who was chasing one of her little ones around the mall, said dressing kids for the cold is no easy task.

"It's just too cold," Ms. Martin said. "Every time I go out I have to bundle up the kids and then unbundle them when I get to where I'm going. But then it warms up by the afternoon. So, basically you have to wear two outfits."

This time last year, Ms. Martin said she was enjoying an outing at the park; however, others, especially those who grew up in the northern United States, think this is one of the best — and mildest — winters of their lives.

Cheryl Martell, who is from Wisconsin, said she would trade a Wisconsin winter for a West Texas one any day of the week.

Echoing those statements was Patty Finch who just moved here from Kansas. She said the cold was not a big deal. It's the dry weather that is giving her fits.

"They are getting quite a bit of snow back home," Ms. Finch said. "This is one of the best winters I've ever lived through. But it's too dry. My skin is dry, my carpet is dry and my plants are dying."

However, summer is very hot here and some West Texans are enjoying a respite from the blistering heat that is sure to come.

Gene Weinzel is one such Midlander. He said he thinks the weather is just wonderful.

"We don't have weather like this that often," Weinzel said. "It's really not affecting my lifestyle any. Plus we'll be back to the heat before too long. I think we should appreciate it while it's here."

TOWN: Presidential press may be bad in spite of good attitude

(From 1A)

da Bond, who knew the president in the 1970s and is an acquaintance of the Bushes. Ms. Bond also told Inside Edition, "I would be glad to talk about Midland. Anything else was off limits for me."

Ms. Bond's strong feelings come from being burned in an earlier interview with a writer from a print publication who she said misrepresented his intentions.

"Some writers seem to be sensationalizing George's life and turning it into a work of romantic fiction," said Ms. Bond. "Sometimes they come into a story with preconceived notions, and no matter what we do we just cannot talk them out of that."

President Bush has spoken highly of Midland and his years here.

"He opened the door to this when he said — If you want to know what I'm like, see Midland," Ms. Bond said. "So, I think we have an opportunity with the influx of press to show that Midland is unique, and Midland is a great place to live."

Although Ms. Bond spoke with Inside Edition regarding Midland, she is not expecting to be included in Monday's program, which does not air locally. The program will be broadcast in Texas markets, including Lubbock on KCBD TV at 1:40 a.m., Dallas on KXAS TV at 6:30 p.m., and Houston on KPRC TV at 4:30 p.m.

On Friday, Inside Edition indicated to the Reporter-Telegram the only Midlander quoted in the 30-minute program was Mayor Bobby Burns.

"We've had reporters from all over the world in here the last six months," said Burns, noting he'd done more interviews than he could count. "We had the Houston Chronicle in here today (Friday). It's kind of a steady stream. It's not unusual to have to take some time to talk about George W. and his life here and how he's affected Midland."

Burns believes the media attention on Midland will only increase now that Bush is in office.

"It's just begun because George W.'s just begun," said Burns. "He's going to surprise people, and when he does surprise them, they are going to look at our city more.

"He's talked a lot about the 'Sky's the Limit' and the confidence of this town and believing in yourself and doing the right thing. And I think it did have a big impact on him. And now he's going to have a big impact on us."

Not all the coverage has been positive, Burns said. "We've had some bad articles. I spent a lot of time with one newspaper reporter, and she didn't report what I would have liked to have seen or reported accurately, I might add.

"But, everyone's got their point of view. We live in America. Free press. They may not see things as we do. They've got a different point of view, and, as a result, they are going to report it differently."

Caution doesn't ensure accurate coverage.

"Sometimes you can be very cautious and they go back and write exactly what they intended to write," said Burns. "I'm very proud of Midland and happy to live here. But somebody who has lived on the East Coast their whole life may not find Midland attractive and may never understand our 'Sky's the Limit' feeling."

WINTER: Midland sees extreme changes in forecast

been days in which the temperatures have climbed into the 60s, causing many local residents to flock to the outdoors.

But the bottom line is this: If you feel like you have been getting more wear and tear out of those jackets and sweaters this year than in the recent past, you are right.

It has been cooler.

In January 1999, for example, the average high was 63.6 degrees; in 2000, it was 61.5 degrees.

But this January, the average high was 52.3, 10 degrees cooler than what Midlanders had grown accustomed to.

According to Pat Vesper, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport, the reason for the lower temperatures was the frequent cloudy days Midland experienced in January. In addition, recurring cold fronts kept those lower temperatures from climbing once the cloudy conditions left the area.

However, in something of an oddity, those same cloudy days not only made the average highs lower than normal, but they also made the average daily lows higher than normal.

"Short-wave solar radiation is what comes when the sun warms things up," Vesper said. "On a cloudy day only so much short-wave radiation can cut through the clouds. Long-wave radiation is what the earth pumps back out. If it's cloudy out, the clouds will absorb the long-wave radiation and bounce it back down. So clear nights are colder than cloudy ones."

The numbers back up his explanation.

The average low for January 1999 was 32.3 degrees; in 2000, it was 33.2 degrees.

This year January's average low was 30.7, which was only slightly colder than the recent past.

While many Midlanders have enjoyed this winter's two snowfalls, the city is a long way from smashing any annual snow records.

It was on Dec. 11, 1998, for example, that 9.75 inches of snow fell on the Tall City, making it the heaviest one-day total in the city's history.

Still, while many Midlanders have wondered from day to day what the weather was going to be like, others have taken a certain delight in the changing conditions.

Walter Turner is one such person.

He said he enjoyed the so-called bad weather.

"Weather's been lousy," Turner said with a laugh. "I like it. I like it a lot."

But what's the best way to figure out how active the weather is going to be here?

Believe it or not, one possibility is to monitor the anchovy crop off the west coast of South America, according to information from a Web site about El Niño and La Niña.

During a heavy La Niña system, which has covered the Midland area the last few years, the warm water depth is shallow. As cold water, which carries more nutrients comes to the surface, the anchovy crops do well.

Also, during a La Niña system, the jet streams are pushed further north leaving Midland with more wind but no rain.

However, during a heavy El Niño system the waters off the west coast of South America are warmer below the surface. Because of the depth of the warmer water, less cool water surfaces, which has less nutrients, which means the anchovy crops suffer.

What also happens during an El Niño system is the jet stream is pushed downward toward Midland, giving this area more active weather.

What may be playing a big factor in the Midland weather of late is the La Niña/El Niño extreme needle is almost in the middle. It is leaning a little to the La Niña side, but the long-term forecast is for normal weather and rainfall for March 2001 until May 2001.

But Midland has a history of extreme weather.

Here are some examples of weather records:

- Highest high — June 28, 1994, 116 degrees.
- Lowest low — Jan. 11, 1962, (-12) degrees.
- Warmest year — 1953 with an average temperature of 67.60 degrees.
- Coolest year — 1976 with an average temperature of 61.76 degrees.

DEDICATION: St. Nicholas church to become more visible with new building

columbarium where the ashes of departed parishioners rest, to the bronze statue of St. Nicholas, and on into the church, where the bishop makes the sign of the cross with his crozier (an ornate shepherd's crook) and says, "Peace be to this house and all who enter here."

No room or fixture will be left unblessed, from the organ to the baptismal font, from the Altar Guild and vesting sacristies to the nursery, kitchen, offices and Parish Hall, the length and breadth of the complex. They all will be prayed over, consecrated and dedicated to the service of God. Following the dedication will be Communion, open to all baptized Christians, with others welcome to observe.

St. Nicholas was begun in 1956 as a mission on Princeton Avenue at the edge of a cotton field. Lucille Puckett, a charter member, said the original church was a converted barracks building moved in from the old U.S. Army Air Forces base, Midland Army Air Field, at what is now Midland International Airport, and bought at a bargain.

"We did all the work ourselves, because we couldn't afford to hire any help," she remembers. "The night before our first service, we were still working. About midnight, we realized that we didn't have a coffee pot to serve coffee after the service the next morning, so Bit Roberts hurried down to Walgreen's Drug Store and bought one."

The move to the loop was the result of a series of challenges to the church that Stasney says he feels were providential.

First of all, there was the growth of the city northward, with a quiet upscale neighborhood enclosing St. Nicholas to such an extent, it had no room for expansion, coupled with the growth of the parish, which demanded expansion.

St. Nick's was boxed in, caught between its beguiling image as a peaceful place of worship in a secluded neighborhood and its mission statement "to know Christ and to make Him known."

As vestry member Stan Jacobs explained, "It's easier to make Christ known when you're visible."

The church was given a nudge toward relocation with a parishioner's gift of eight acres fronting the loop, a location ideal for the vestry's vision of a "church in the marketplace," patterned after St. Nicholas' Church in downtown Durham, England.

Jacobs said the goal of the vestry and the parish was to aim for visibility, accessibility and inclusion.

The church engaged the services of architects Johnson Seefeldt and building contractor John Cooper. Yet, although St. Nick's looks from the road to be complete, the Rev. Jon Stasney, church rector, says the facility, like its people, is a work in progress.

"In fact, this dedication is really a redundancy," he said, "since the Church is really the people, and we were dedicated with our baptism.

"And we are all still a work in progress, waiting on God to show us the next step. This is the way God led Abraham, and this is how God is leading us, all of us, a step at a time.

"John Cooper wrote me an e-mail last week just as we were getting ready to have our first Sunday service, and he was concerned because there were some things still not finished. He said, 'God knows why the building will not be perfectly finished, but most people won't.' Yet, the very thing that delay the finish, the rainy weather, caused us to remember to move our floor mats over to this new location. We would have forgotten them.

"So that's just one more of the many, many providences that have brought us this far."

The public is invited to attend the dedication ceremonies at 2 p.m. today at 4000 W. Loop 250 North. The church is accessible from the Midkiff Road exit off Loop 250.

Second person arrested in child-injury case

From Staff Reports

Two caretakers of a 2-year-old boy have been arrested by Midland police for "injury to a child" after the boy suffered severe burns in hot bath water on Dec. 29, 2000, according to Midland police spokeswoman Tina Jauz.

The child, who suffered second- and third-degree burns over 30 percent of his body, was listed in "improved condition" in Lubbock's University Medical Center, Ms. Jauz said. He was airlifted there on Jan. 2 after Midland police officers were called to Midland Memorial Hospital to investigate reasons behind severe burns to a child.

On Jan 5, Midland police arrested James Bargsley, 23, for "injury to a child" by putting the child into the hot bath water, Ms. Jauz said.

Four weeks later, on Feb. 2, Ashleigh Rice, 20 was arrested for "injury to a child by omission" by not acting in a timely fashion to prevent further injury to the child burned by the hot bath water.

Greg Piccolo to play in Midland

By Emily Baker
MRT Correspondent

Jazz and blues musician Greg Piccolo will appear in concert at the Santa Fe Lounge of the Midland Hilton, 117 W. Wall, at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 7.

Piccolo

Even though Piccolo, a saxophonist and guitarist, said he has been playing selections off his new CD for the past year, this concert will be a release party for his new album, "Homage," which will be officially released Feb. 13.

"Homage" is Piccolo's fourth solo album. It is a tribute album that was designed to honor the musicians of the mid-1900s.

"It is all the stuff that I love and that is inside me," Piccolo said about his new album. "I love the sound of the late '40s and early '50s. That music had a huge effect on the music that I do. The songs kind of lead me in the direction I am going to go in."

"Homage" was recorded without prior rehearsal. Musicians Reese Wynans, Sam Butera, Bobby Ruggiero and Marty Ballou perform for the project. The group got together and a swing session got the CD project finished.

"We had a little touching up here and there, but that was it," Piccolo said. "We had never even played together before. I sent everybody tapes of what I wanted to do. I knew they were all good enough. I had confidence that I had the right people to do this."

Piccolo said the musicians only had a couple of days for recording and really didn't have time for rehearsal.

This record could very well be Piccolo's favorite.

"I love every song on that record," he said. "I really do. There is some variety. The songs are not all blues songs. It's cohesive. I think it's a great sound."

Piccolo has also been a part of more than 50 other recording projects. He has played with Pat Benatar, Colin James, Big Joe Turner, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Stevie Ray Vaughan and others. Piccolo added to his number of recordings a few days ago when he received a phone call while on the road.

"We were driving to Nashville from Arkansas and I get a call on my cell phone from Jimmy Vaughn who was in Memphis," he said. "He called me up and asked me to record on his new record."

Piccolo said he enjoys recording with other musicians.

"I would like to do more of it," he said. "I don't really advertise that I'm available for something like that, but I'm always happy when somebody calls."

Piccolo has been playing for 36 years, 25 of which with the band Roomful of Blues. Piccolo left Roomful of Blues in 1994 to pursue personal projects.

He usually writes lyrics to songs that have already been written by other artists. Piccolo said that he loves Earl King and writes to standard blues and songs from the late '40s.

"I do the B.B. King thing once in a while," he said. "I do an old Ray Charles tune I haven't heard anybody else do."

Piccolo said his favorite song writer is Hank Williams Sr. He also likes Willie Nelson, and pays attention to their song writing talents when writing his own songs.

"I know the reasons I like a song by my favorite songwriters so writing a song is an after-effect," he said. "I know how I want it (the song) so it is a matter of finding the right words to make it sound like I want it to."

Piccolo doesn't not really know how to read music.

"I play by ear," he said. "My philosophy is if you can't hum it, don't play it. If you don't hear it, why do you want to play it?"

Along with selections from his newest CD, Piccolo will be playing songs from other recordings when he visits Midland. He says he will "be there with bells on to try to make the people feel good."

Tickets for the show are $7 and are available at the Hilton. Reserve tickets are available for $10. For reserve tickets, call George Dreher at 686-0397.

Students learn about work place through job shadowing

Kasey Kelly
MRT Correspondent

Midland eighth-graders went to work Friday.

Students from Abell, Goddard and San Jacinto junior highs participated in National Groundhog Job Shadow Day Friday. The goal for the one-day event, sponsored by the Junior Achievement, is to allow kids the opportunity to see what a job is like and how the skills learned in school can be put into action.

Lisa Neal, program manager for Junior Achievement, said, "We would like every child to have the opportunity to experience life in the work force."

KNFM hosted one group of students from Goddard. The students toured Cumulus Broadcasting and some even served as "Dj's for a day" during KNFM's Matt Santiago's lunch time request show.

Angelica Richardson was one of the students who served as an on-air personality. "I've never been chosen to do something like this before," she said. "It was exciting."

Santiago told the students that English, math and interaction with friends were the most important preparation he had for his job. He went on to say communication, including listening skills, were also a major part of his job. "I'm sort of like a sponge," he said. "I listen to as much as I can and absorb it all."

The students also had an opportunity to tour the control rooms at KODM and B-93. B-93 Radio Personality Rebecca Cruz fascinated the students with her "fast hands." Kionti Jackson, another Goddard student, noted, "You have to be quick." Ms. Cruz also reminded students "to succeed in life you must put 110 percent into everything you do."

After listening to their mentors talk about working at a radio station and all that it entails, Goddard student Latoya Nix said, "Being an on-air personality sounds cool because they really try to reach out to folks. And even though they say they don't make much money they still work with the community."

Parent volunteer Lisa Holifield accompanied the Goddard students on their field trip. She said she felt like the kids had an overall good experience. "It's like visiting a neighbor," she said. "Even though they rolled out the red carpet for these kids, I think they got a realistic view of what radio is like."

Goddard Junior High eighth-grader Danielle Miller enjoys her on-air stint with KNFM's Matt Santiago Friday. Miller was allowed to broadcast the weather.

Students from Abell Junior High School visited Marathon Oil, Home Depot, Energas and Wal-Mart.

Student Jenna Gillock shadowed an employee at Marathon Oil. She said she had an exciting and educational day. She hopes to be a computer technologist someday and learned that to achieve that goal she will need math, science, communication and typing skills.

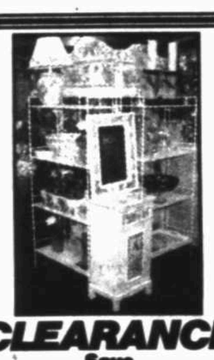

Wal-Mart, especially the pet department, made a big impression on Abell student Chad Simpson. "I got to feed the fish," he said. "I learned that I would like to work with animals when I'm in high school." He also noted he improved his math skills and developed a greater appreciation for the importance of percentages and the tax rate.

Sarah Smith realized the importance communication plays in some businesses after her visit to Energas.

"I learned what kind of communication skills to use and how communication affects the service that is provided to the community," she said.

Other businesses involved in the project included Midland County, Compressor Systems, Inc., MISD, Target, Best Buy and the city of Midland.

Man with machete injures three workers, six children at school, police say

By Peter Jackson
Associated Press

FELTON, Pa. — A former schoolteacher walked into an elementary school with a machete Friday and struggled with a principal and several teachers in a kindergarten classroom before being subdued.

Three women and six children were injured, but none of the injuries was life-threatening, school officials said.

William Michael Stankewicz, 56, was arrested about 20 minutes after the midday attack at North Hopewell-Winterstown Elementary School, about 75 miles west of Philadelphia.

He was being held on $500,000 bail after being arraigned on charges including two counts of attempted homicide, seven counts of aggravated assault, and one count of bringing a weapon onto school property.

"I had nothing in my hand. I will not admit that," Stankewicz told reporters prior to the arraignment. Blaming U.S. immigration officials and congressmen, he complained about the treatment he had received five years ago during a divorce.

"I begged for help and nobody gave me any help," he said.

Stankewicz, who once served time in prison and had worked as a schoolteacher in Baltimore, had a bloody cut on the top of his head and blood on his jacket as he was led away from the school in handcuffs.

He refused to say what he was doing at the school, and authorities said the motive for the attack was unknown.

Stankewicz — who lives about 400 miles away, in Johnson City, Tenn. — once lived in central Pennsylvania and his former wife's children had attended the school, prosecutor Thomas Kelley said.

He had a history of troubles with police, including a 1996 federal conviction for threatening to kill his former wife, her children and a congressman.

The struggle began in the school lobby and spilled into two adjacent rooms, including the kindergarten classroom.

"We heard screaming from outside in the hall," said 12-year-old Chelsea Stein, who was in her sixth-grade classroom when the attack began. She also heard crying. "I think it was a teacher, maybe," she said.

Principal Norina Bentzel, 41, was slashed on her arm and hand, nearly losing a finger, and Linda Collier, 52, a kindergarten teacher, underwent surgery for cuts on her hand. A third-grade teacher with minor injuries was treated and released.

The six children, all ages 5 or 6, were not seriously hurt.

Outside doors are normally kept locked during classes. The attacker apparently entered the building in the morning behind a parent, county emergency manager Patrick McFadden said.

One of the first 911 calls to police was from a woman hiding in the principal's office with the door locked and two children inside, he said.

The school, which has about 320 students and 50 staff members, was closed after the attack, and youngsters were sent home.

Stankewicz served two years in federal prison for threatening his Russian-born fourth wife Larisa, whom he met through a video service. The threats began after she tried to end their five-month marriage, said her attorney, Stephen Converse.

"He's a violent man, prone to violence. You can imagine living with him," Converse said.

N.J. reaches settlement in racial profiling case

By Ralph Siegel
Associated Press

TRENTON, N.J. — The state agreed Friday to pay $12.9 million to the four victims of a 1998 police shooting on the New Jersey Turnpike that caused a national furor over racial profiling.

The state did not admit any wrongdoing in settling the civil lawsuit, but plaintiffs' attorney Peter Neufeld said: "We think that money speaks volumes about what happened that night."

Attorney General John Farmer said each plaintiff will be paid from $912,000 to $5.8 million.

The four men — three are black, and the fourth is Hispanic — were pulled over near Trenton as they headed to a North Carolina college to showcase their basketball skills in hopes of a scholarship.

Two white troopers, John Hogan and James Kenna, said they stopped the van for speeding. They said they fired 11 shots at the vehicle when driver Keyshon Moore put the van in reverse as the officers approached on foot.

Moore was uninjured, but the others were wounded. LeRoy Grant and Danny Reyes were hospitalized for 13 days and Rayshawn Brown for two.

The four sued, accusing the state police and the troopers of shooting them without provocation. The lawsuit also alleged the troopers pulled the van over solely because the occupants were minorities.

The explosive case led to a national examination of criteria authorities use in stopping drivers.

New Jersey officials later admitted that state troopers stopped overwhelmingly disproportionate numbers of minorities in searches for drugs. Top law enforcement officials knew of the practice since at least 1989 but did not admit it was widespread until 10 years later.

The state agreed to federal monitoring of its traffic stops to avoid a federal civil rights lawsuit.

Kenna still faces an attempted murder charge. Both he and Hogan also face charges of aggravated assault, misconduct and falsifying records to conceal their singling out of black drivers. Charges against the two were thrown out by a judge but reinstated by an appeals court last month.

Attorneys for the troopers, Jack Arsenault and Robert Galantucci, are trying to have the charges dismissed. Both said the public settlement jeopardized their clients' chance at a fair trial.

Arsenault said the payment "is going to be inferred as an admission on the part of the state that my client did something wrong."

Reyes, who still has a bullet in his body, will be paid $5.8 million; Grant, who also has a bullet lodged in his body, will be paid $4.4 million. Brown will receive $1.8 million and Moore $912,000.

'Cultural revolution' purges some of Venezuela's cultural elite

By Alexandra Olson
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — In 1971, when Venezuelan authorities were seeking a national home for modern art, art critic Sofia Imber volunteered. "If you give me a garage, I'll turn it into a museum," she said.

And so she did, turning a Caracas auto parts store into a gallery full of Picasso, Matisse and Venezuelan art.

But she never reckoned on President Hugo Chavez and his so-called "cultural revolution," which has put her out of a job, along with 15 other heads of state museums, publishing houses and theaters.

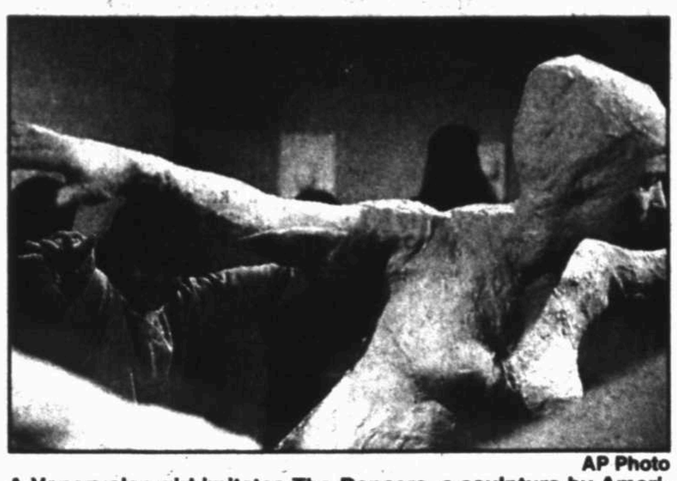

The purge is typical of the populist politics of the former paratrooper who led a failed coup in 1992 but got elected president six years later.

Vowing to lift up the poor and dismantle what he calls a corrupt Venezuelan oligarchy, Chavez has taken on the judicial system, entrenched political power and organized labor.

Now it's the turn of the art world, which was shocked on Jan. 21 when he casually announced the sackings during a radio program.

"Culture has become elitist. Princes, kings, heirs, families took over institutions that cost the state millions and millions," Chavez said. "They wanted to do whatever they wanted. They thought they were autonomous governments."

This doesn't suggest the government is less keen on the arts; it is doubling funding this year for museums, publishing houses and theaters to $30 million.

AP Photo

A Venezuelan girl imitates The Dancers, a sculpture by American artist George Segal at the Sofia Imber Caracas Contemporary Art Museum in Caracas, Venezuela, Thursday. President Hugo Chavez announced that he had fired Imber as the museum's curator as part of a shakeup to bring art from the elite to the masses in what he calls his "cultural revolution."

But for 74-year-old Imber, Chavez's move was quite a turnaround from just 10 years ago, when the government recognized her contribution to Venezuelan art by naming the museum after her.

Imber says she heard of her dismissal from friends.

"Everyone called and asked me, 'Why? How is this possible?'" she told The Associated Press.

The governments of Brazil, France, Chile, Colombia, Italy, Mexico and Spain have showered her with awards for her contributions to Latin American art.

When the museum opened its doors in 1974, it was a humble, 50-piece exhibit adorning an upscale apartment complex. Today, with 4,000 pieces and 15,000 visitors a month, the museum is the envy of Latin America.

Inside its tranquil sculpture garden and 17 exhibition rooms are the works of Venezuela's most beloved modern artists, such as kinetic sculptors Jesus Soto and Alejandro Otero, catapulted to international recognition by the museum.

On display are paintings by Manuel Espinoza, who is now Chavez's vice minister of culture and one of the architects of the purge.

Imber's sacking dismayed her admirers abroad. "It's a tragedy," said William Lures, a former director of New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art, who has worked closely with Imber. "She has built one of the most remarkable art museums in Latin America."

Reaction at home has been more mixed. Some of Imber's employees said she had been at the helm for too long. Yet even her detractors were shocked that Chavez failed to publicly recognize her contribution.

Vicglamar Torres, a culture reporter for Caracas' Ultimas Noticias newspaper, acknowledged that "every stone of that museum is her work. I don't criticize what happened, but the way in which her departure was effected."

Imber is peppery, even imperious, and readily admits it. "I'm not amicable or likable, but everyone loves the museum," Imber said. "The public has grown accustomed to the museum's excellence. Maybe that's what they call elitism."

Imber argues that it was people like her who launched the real cultural revolution through such programs as sending staff into the countryside and slums to teach about art.

She says she is somewhat consoled by the appointment of Rita Salvestrini, a former deputy curator, to succeed her. She believes Salvestrini won't pander to political whims.

When the government renamed it the Sofia Imber Contemporary Art Museum in 1991, it said it was "granting a wish of the Venezuela people because it is known that since the museum was founded everyone calls it 'Sofia's museum.'"

Chavez's government says it has no intention of changing the name, but Imber suggested her legacy would be intact even if it did.

"Even if they change the museum's name," she said, "no one will be able to say it isn't my masterpiece."

Indian, Pakistani leaders speak; remote villages desperate for relief

By Ramola Talwar Badam
Associated Press

TIKER, India — With a telephone call between their leaders Friday, India and Pakistan came together as neighbors, not rivals, in the wake of an earthquake that killed thousands of Indians and left many more desperate for food, housing and help rebuilding.

Aid from around the world was on the way, but there were complaints that lack of coordination was hampering distribution and that remote villages were stranded while population centers got attention.

More than 15,000 bodies had been pulled from the rubble of the 7.7-magnitude quake by Friday afternoon, and officials estimate the final toll could reach 35,000.

In the first reported conversation between Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee and Pakistani military ruler Gen. Pervez Musharraf, Vajpayee thanked Musharraf for two planeloads of relief sent to the western state of Gujarat, where the epicenter of the Jan. 26 quake was located.

Musharraf initiated the call "to convey his sympathy at the great loss of life caused by the earthquake," said Mohammed Bashir, an official in Vajpayee's office. Gujarat borders Pakistan, where at least 18 people were killed in the quake.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars in 47 years and tested nuclear weapons in 1998. Vajpayee, blaming India-Pakistan clashes in 1998 on Musharraf because he headed his armed forces then, had avoided speaking to Musharraf since the military leader came to power in 1999.

Asked about the possibility of resuming stalled peace talks, Press Trust of India quoted Vajpayee as saying, "We have always favored talks for which the right atmosphere has to be created. Violence, killings and terrorism must stop, and the climate should be such that fruitful and meaningful parleys can take place."

Musharraf has repeatedly offered talks anywhere, anytime over Kashmir, the Himalayan province that has sparked two wars between the nations.

India accuses Musharraf of aiding Islamic militants who have been fighting since 1989 to separate the Indian-controlled portion of Kashmir. Musharraf has said Pakistan does not aid them, only gives them moral support.

Since the devastating quake, Pakistan has contributed to a huge international aid campaign for India. The Indian government has sent thousands of its own soldiers to Gujarat to provide relief, and privazte Indian groups have bolstered the effort.

Seven U.S. Air Force C-17 cargo planes carrying relief supplies and the personnel to unload it were expected to land Saturday in Gujarat. A lack of people to take the goods off planes has caused a bottleneck in the flow of goods, the U.S. Embassy said.

Aid was reaching many people, but in remote Gujarati villages, quake survivors say they have received little so far from the government or international aid agencies.

"Why should they come and help us here? They think we're alive so that should be enough," said Hasmukh Patil, a farm laborer in Tiker, a village of 5,000.

Tiker has been receiving regular deliveries of food, water and other supplies from private groups, but "no government agency has visited us yet," Patil said.

Most of Tiker's residents earn about 50 cents a day working as farm laborers for six months and making salt in the backwater areas during the rest of the year.

Their stone houses destroyed by the quake, the people of Tiker now live in makeshift huts built of plastic sheets and bamboo poles provided by the private aid groups. They are crammed together on the outskirts of their village, wondering whether the huts will be their homes for years to come.

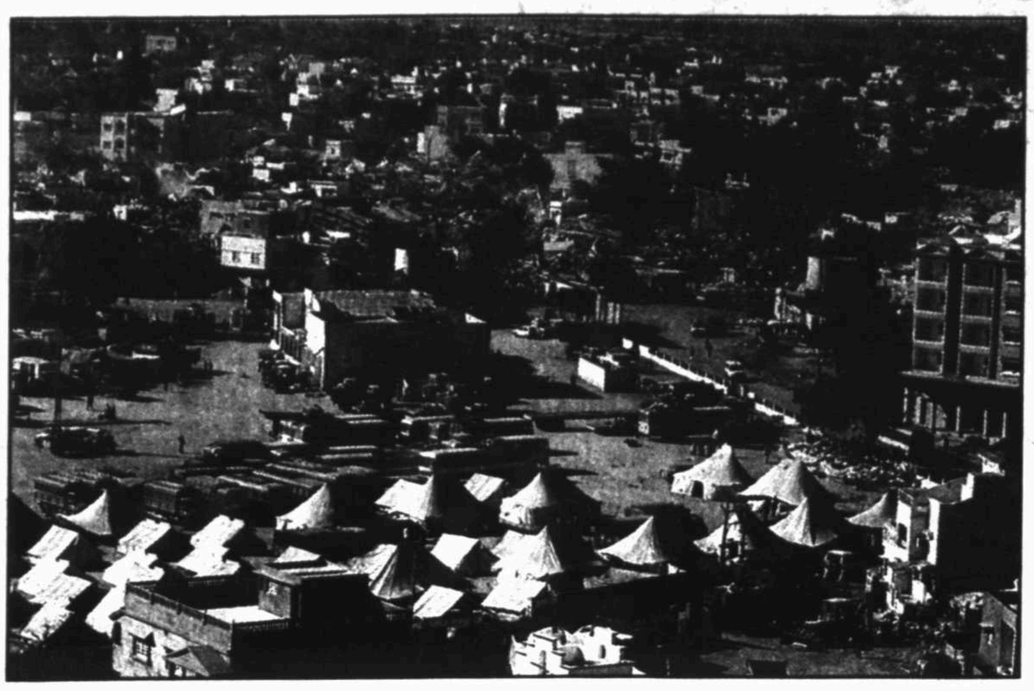

"Everyone thinks all villagers live in huts, so it's easy for us to rebuild our homes," said Virji Kanjaria, a teacher in Tiker. "But people in cities can go to banks for loans. Who will give villagers loans when all we have is dry fields and now broken homes?"

Keshubhai Patel, Gujarat's top elected official, rejected criticism of the relief effort — and noted it was being undertaken by a government work force itself decimated by the quake.

"There is not a single village where relief has not reached in one form or the other," he said.

Experts reviewing the toll of death and destruction wrought by the temblor say builders weren't following rules meant to ensure that homes and offices are quake-proof.

"This is the dream of all concerned with earthquake safety — to see that the buildings are protected as far as possible. But this is not happening," said S.K. Srivastav, president of the Indian Meteorological Society, which tracks quakes and helps set standards for quake-proofing.

Turkish lawmakers charged after fatal brawl

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Two lawmakers were charged with involuntary manslaughter Friday in the death of a legislator killed during a violent melee in parliament.

Mehmet Fevzi Sihanlioglu, 55, died late Tuesday after a debate turned violent, with deputies punching one another and throwing glasses.

Cahit Tekelioglu and Mehmet Kundakci, members of the far-right Nationalist Action Party, are accused of fatally hitting Sihanlioglu. Both were released pending trial. They face up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

At the time, parliament was debating a government proposal that would reduce the time allocated to debaters. Opponents of the proposal maintain that the move is designed to silence opposition parties.

The Nationalist Action Party is a member of three-party government coalition. Sihanlioglu's True Path Party is in the opposition.

Turkish deputies are immune from prosecution, but the two lawmakers said Thursday that they were renouncing that immunity, paving the way for a trial.

Battle for media empire dredges up fear, financial dirt

By Angela Charlton
Associated Press

MOSCOW — When they strode across Red Square for a chance to speak their minds directly to President Vladimir Putin, the top journalists from Russia's largest private television station looked ready to take on the world.

When NTV's stars emerged nearly five hours later, their eyes were drained of fire, their shoulders taut from the heated exchange. Their steely debate partner had called their boss a thief and shrugged off concerns that prosecutors were trying to get them off the air.

Two other guests were at that Kremlin meeting Monday: Russia's top prosecutor, who is trying to put NTV founder Vladimir Gusinsky behind bars for fraud, and the man leading the drive by the gas monopoly Gazprom to claim control of NTV because it can't pay its debts.

"To shut down a television station, one doesn't need to arrest someone. One can use financial management ... It can be like a calm death, and therefore, it's not murder," said NTV satirist Viktor Shenderovich, one of the journalists who met with Putin.

Determining just what the battle over NTV is all about is complex. Is Putin waging a war on media freedom? Or is he trying to root out the "oligarchs" who made fortunes in the 1990s, using Kremlin ties to buy up lucrative state property at knockdown prices? Or is it a fight for NTV's juicy share of the Russian advertising market?

NTV, short for Independent Television, has been a vigorous critic of the Kremlin's two wars in Chechnya and alleged corruption since its launch in 1994. NTV says its struggle for survival reflects an authoritarian drive to stifle dissent.

U.S. and European officials have rallied behind the network, and CNN founder Ted Turner and financier George Soros have expressed interest in buying a stake to ensure that it survives. During her last days in office, former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright accused Putin's government of "trying to undermine the media."

Yet NTV's struggle has raised relatively little protest among Russian citizens. They value its professional coverage, but largely back Putin's pledges to restore order and have little pity for Gusinsky.

Gusinsky is sequestered in his Spanish villa under house arrest while Russia clamors for his extradition.

Gusinsky and Russia's other "oligarchs" have claimed it was impossible to do business in the chaotic first years of post-Soviet reform by obeying the law. Putin says that's no reason to let them off the hook.

Observers say prosecutors under Putin have targeted tycoons who fell out of favor with the Kremlin.

"Gusinsky ran up a lot of debts, he's no Boy Scout. But I don't think the importance of NTV has to rest on whether Gusinsky is a virtuous businessman or not," said Ellen Mickiewicz, director of Duke University's journalism school and author of a book on Russian television.

Some industry analysts say NTV's $700 million in annual advertising revenues are the real reason for the struggle. It is the only major media company whose advertising is not managed by the giant Video International, which is closely tied to Press Minister Mikhail Lesin, a Putin ally.

"We used to envy the guys over there, their freer atmosphere and the money," said Volodya, a cameraman at the state-run network RTR, who gave only his first name. "Now their guys come to us in the parking lot to ask about a job."

NTV's programming is increasingly acidic, particularly in its near-daily reports of prosecutors' raids on Media-Most's offices. NTV's "Turn Out the Light" portrays Kremlin aides as mafia hit men and marked the hospitalized Yeltsin's 70th birthday this week by offering him a vodka-soaked birthday cake.

"These emotional distortions come from one thing: We are being pressured. You make us hurt, we scream," said NTV general director Yevgeny Kiselyov.

Kiselyov paces the sagging floors of NTV's corridors, one ear glued to a cell phone, while lawyers whisper in his other ear. He and colleagues warn Putin is reverting to the methods of his KGB years.

"He is a man of the system. We represent an opposing system, and must be undermined," Shenderovich said.

But others note the struggle for control of Russia's leading networks — including the initial raids on Media-Most — began under Yeltsin.

"Television has become an integral part of an economy in which the most profitable investments are not in production but in elections. Elections are won not by presenting a superior platform, but by controlling national media," Yulia Latynina, who recently moved her investigative reporting program from NTV to state-controlled ORT, wrote this week.

NTV once helped demonstrate that theory: In 1996, Gusinsky joined other media executives in backing Yeltsin's bid for re-election against a popular communist candidate. Gusinsky has since called that a huge mistake.

Meanwhile, Media-Most needs money. Prosecutors say it is more than $800 million in debt. Some paychecks are being delayed.

If Gazprom wins, it would control NTV, since it already owns 46 percent. Media-Most owns 30 percent and 4.5 percent belongs to a subsidiary of Los Angeles-based Capital Group Cos.

Alfred Kokh, the head of Gazprom's media arm, said editorial policy would largely remain unchanged if Gazprom takes over. But he added: "If I swear that I won't fire anyone or won't hurt a fly, these people will become untouchable and stop fulfilling the will of shareholders."

In the meeting with NTV journalists, Putin said he wanted NTV to stay on the air but urged them to abandon their embattled boss.

"Of course we will not surrender the man who created NTV," said the station's chief news director Grigory Krichevsky.

Lee boys climb into third place

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

With each game becoming crucial in the District 4-5A playoff race, Lee took a page from the Al Davis book — the Rebels just won, baby. Lee didn't play its best game of the season, but did enough to dispatch cellar dweller Abilene High 59-43 and take over third place in the district.

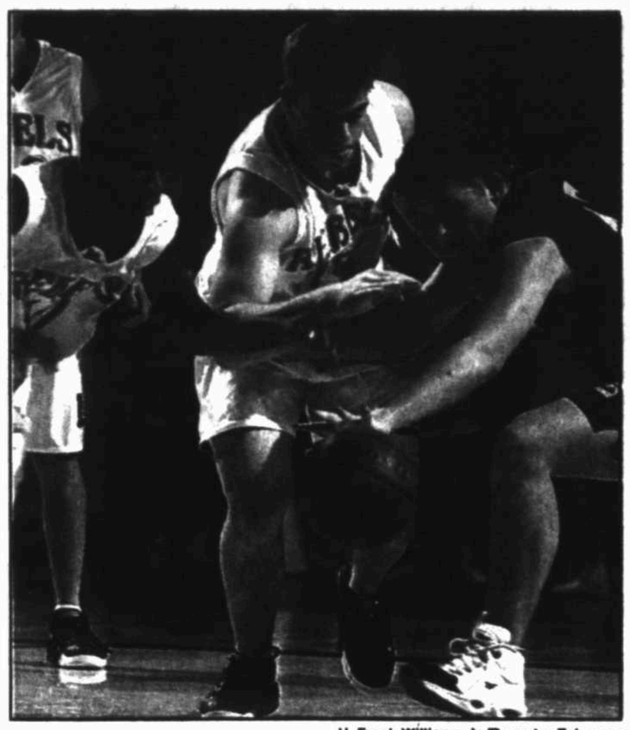

While the Lee boys took care of business, the Lady Rebels saw their season come to an end with a crushing 74-31 defeat to Abilene High. It was the final regular season game for Lee, which would have remained mathematically alive during its bye next Tuesday had it won.

Not only are the Lee boys still alive, but they actually improved their status.

"I'd rather have an ugly win than a pretty loss," said first-year Lee coach Mark Coffman, who didn't see much artistic value in his team's win. "I was really pleased with our defensive effort. That's something which can win you some close games if you're not shooting the ball well, which we weren't."

Indeed, the Rebels (15-11 overall, 6-4 in district) only made 23-of-65 from the field, just better than 35 percent for the game. But

Lady Dawgs defeat Cooper girls, clinch outright 4-5A crown

Staff Report

ABILENE — The Midland High Lady Bulldogs put the District 4-5A basketball title in their hip pocket here Friday night with a tough 51-47 victory over third place Abilene Cooper.

MHS climbs to 11-0 in the 4-5A race and has only one loop game remaining against San Angelo Central at Chaparral Center on Tuesday at 6 p.m. Then, it's off to the state playoffs. The MHS girls didn't make the state playoffs a year ago, but have not skipped a beat in the 2000-01 season, skating thus far undefeated through the league ranks.

Second place Abilene High has two district losses, both the MHS, and the Lady Eagles can no longer claim any share to the title. MHS will draw a first round bye in the state playoffs and will not enter the playoff fray until the area round against an undetermined El Paso team.

The MHS girls did struggle in this one, however, trailing 19-16 at the half and 35-31 at the end of the third period. The Lady Dawgs outscored Cooper 20-12 in the fourth quarter to bring the championship home to Midland.

Laura Koch had a big night for MHS with a game high 19 points while Edrea Rogers pumped in 14. Celeste Stevenson led Cooper with 15 points while Jennifer Louis had 11.

MC baseball kicks off 1st season with two victories

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

Take away some of the first game jitters and the Midland College Chaparral baseball team had an impressive showing in their doubleheader debut Friday at Christensen Stadium.

The Chaps, kicking off their inaugural season, swept Lubbock Christian Junior Varsity, 5-4 and 12-4.

The first game was the closest as the Midland College Chaparrals came back from a 2-0 deficit with two runs in the fourth and three more in the fifth to get the victory.

During that first game, one could tell that the Chaps were playing their first ever regular season game together as the bats took some time to get warmed up and a few early errors led to a pair of unearned runs.

"I thought it went exactly as expected," said MC coach Steve Ramharter about his Chaps' debut. "The players came out real tight the first time through the batting order. Some were a bit timid and some were trying to do too much. But they relaxed and started playing the way they're capable of."

Once MC started to get warmed up, the runs started coming in bunches. Abel Gonzalez connected for a two-run single to left field to tie the game at 2-2 in the fourth inning. Then in the fifth, the Chaps added three more as Josh Haney and Ben Fritz each had RBIs.

The star of the first game was starting pitcher Matt Overman (1-0), who went six innings, struck out nine and allowed just one earned run. Overman also did not allow a walk.

"As you could tell, we needed to get the first game jitters out of the way," Overman said. "Now that we've got the first couple of games out of the way, we move on through the rest of the season."

The Chaps' offense exploded in the second game as Midland College pounded out 17 hits and had a seven-run third inning to help run away from Lubbock Christian. For most teams, 12 runs on 17 hits would be pretty good, but not for the Chaps.

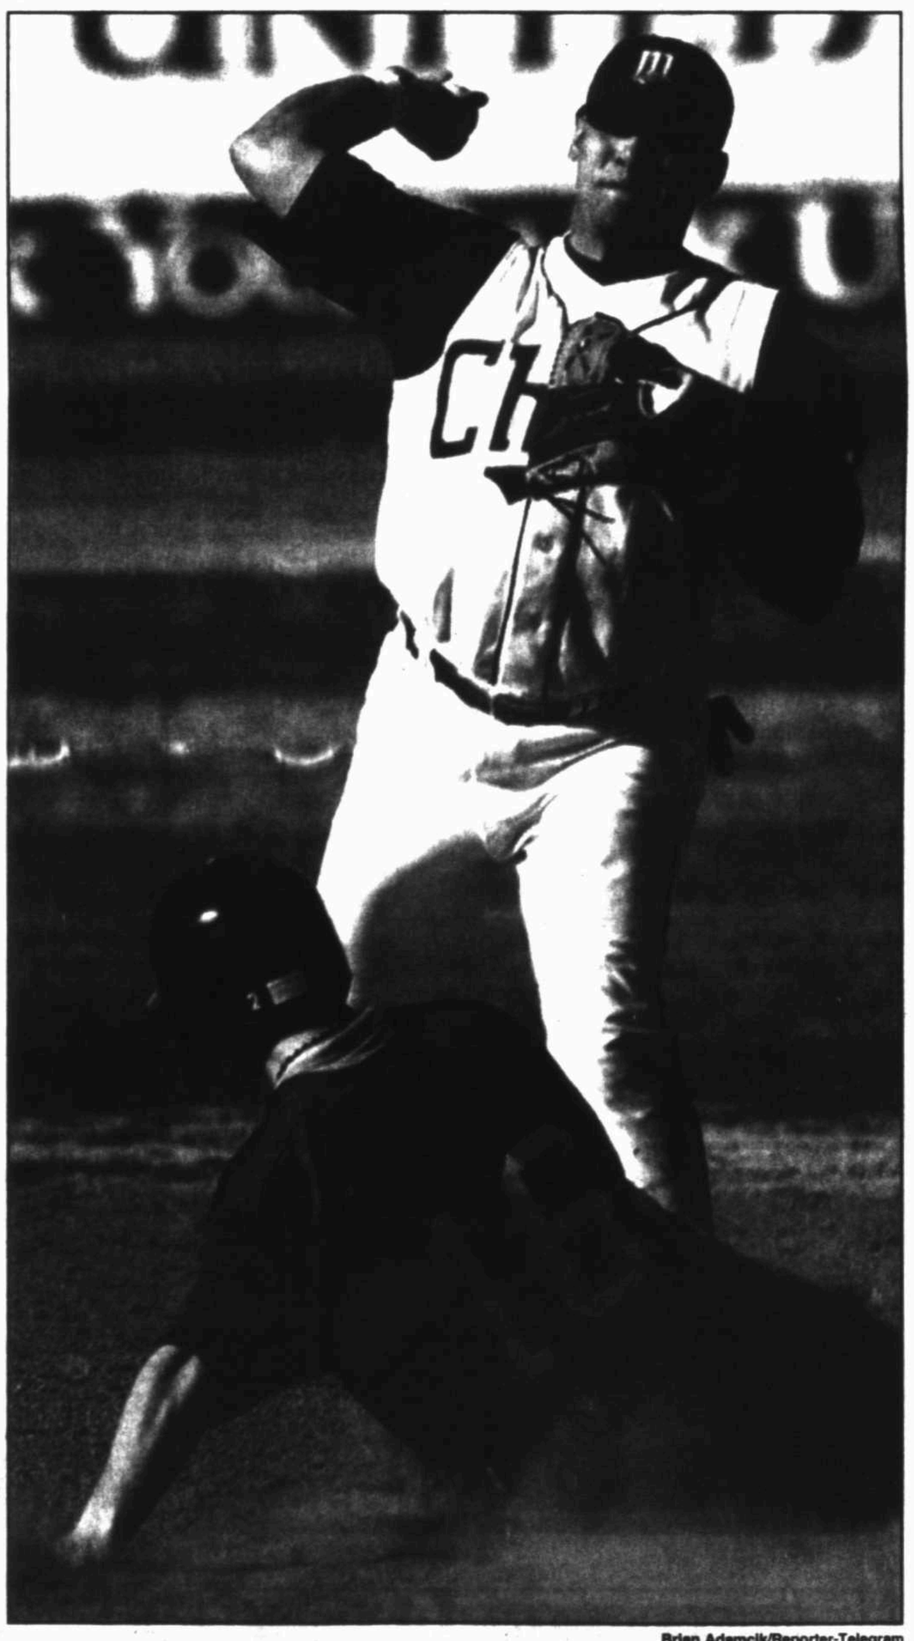

"I wanted more," Ramharter said. "I was disappointed we didn't do better at the plate. I thought we kind of coasted and didn't put them away. That's the case when you have 20 freshmen. They don't know they're good. They don't know how to put people away."

Midland Lee graduate Josh Haney led the attack for Midland College (2-0) in the second game with a 4-for-4, three-run performance.

"I guess everybody got the jitters out from the first game," said Haney about the second game's offensive outburst. "I was pretty nervous going into the first game, I guess everybody was."

Woods again trails by 8 at Pebble Beach

■ Matt Gogel leads Pro-Am tournament just like he did last year when Tiger came from nowhere to win.

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Tiger Woods was 2-over par and quickly losing ground to the leaders on a course that's usually a pushover for players with far less ability.

Woods has never played Poppy Hills particularly well, so it was no surprise when he let out a heavy sigh and said, "It feels like Groundhog Day."

It was, in more ways than one Friday.

Back in the picture at the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am was Matt Gogel, the victim of Woods' spectacular comeback last year. He tied the course record at Poppy Hills with a career-best 62 that gave him a three-stroke lead over Vijay Singh.

Singh was part of the drama last year, too. He was one stroke back going into the final round and finished in a tie for second with Gogel.

Woods wasted another soft, still and sunny day on the Monterey Peninsula with a 1-over 73 on a course that has five par 5s.

Where did that leave him? Eight strokes behind, the same spot he was in after 36 holes last year.

Maybe it's just a coincidence that comedian Bill Murray is back at Pebble Beach. He starred in the movie "Groundhog Day" about a TV meteorologist stuck on the same day.

Gogel can only hope for a better outcome.

"It would be a heck of a story if it continues this way," he said. "But we're only halfway through. It's a long way until Sunday."

Gogel was in control last year, cruising through the Cliffs of Dooms until he played the final eight holes in 4 over and Woods put together a comeback that ranks among his best, an eagle-birdie-par-birdie finish.

Gogel has seen the replay of Woods' holing that wedge shot from the fairway on No. 15 more times than he would like. He also has reflected on his own mistakes, which haunted him the rest of his rookie season.

After a nearly flawless round on another gorgeous day, the 29-year-old from Kansas has given himself another chance.

"I was anxious to come back because I love this place," Gogel said. "It wasn't like I was coming back for unfinished

Texans, Capers pick Palmer as offensive coach

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Chris Palmer, the longtime offensive assistant who was fired as Cleveland's head coach, joined the expansion Houston Texans on Friday as offensive coordinator.

"I think building something from scratch from the ground up is exciting," said Palmer, who arrives after going 5-27 in two seasons with Cleveland. "It's rewarding as far as being a coach is concerned."

Palmer was introduced by Dom Capers, hired last month to lead the Texans when the NFL's 32nd team takes the field in 2002. Like Palmer, Capers also has been an expansion coach, with Carolina.

The Texans weren't necessarily bent on hiring any assistants immediately, but Capers said Palmer's sudden availability couldn't be ignored.

"We feel as though we're able to have the best offensive coordinator in the NFL," Capers said.

The Texans initially said they would not hire any coaches this year, but general manager Charley Casserly said the availability of Capers and Palmer changed their plans. They also have hired a conditioning coach.

Palmer began his NFL career in Houston as the Oilers' receivers coach from 1990-1992, helping install the run-and-shoot offensive scheme. In his three seasons here, Palmer coached Pro Bowl pass-catchers Drew Hill, Haywood Jeffires, Ernest Givins and Curtis Duncan.

He became the New England Patriots' wide receivers coach in 1993. He was an assistant with the Patriots for four years, the last year as offensive coordinator.

Palmer became Jacksonville's offensive coordinator in 1997, staying there two seasons until he became Cleveland's head coach in January 1999.

Palmer, 51, reportedly turned down similar offers at Chica-

Rainey's homer propels Texas Tech

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Jason Rainey's two-run home run in the top of the sixth inning helped secure a 5-4 win by Texas Tech over the TCU Horned Frogs Friday afternoon in the Astros College Classic at Enron Field.

Rainey's blast over the right field fence gave the Red Raiders a 4-3 lead. Tyler Carson sealed the win in the top of the seventh when he scored on a passed ball.

Walter Olmstead connected on a solo home run and shortstop Erick Macha had three hits for TCU.

Pitcher Chris Phillips (2-0) got the win for Texas Tech, striking out six batters. Clint Mokry (0-1) took the loss for TCU.

Baylor 16, Houston 7

HOUSTON — Baylor jumped ahead in the first inning as Kelly Shoppach batted in three runs with a homer to help Baylor beat Houston 16-7 on Friday.

Pitcher Kyle Edens was credited with the win for Baylor bringing his record to (1-0). Pitcher Nick Torina had the loss with (0-1) in game three of the Astros College Classic.

Baylor's Mark Saccomanno connected for a three-run home run down the left field line in the fourth inning.

Houston didn't get on the scoreboard until the fifth inning, at that point trailing 9-0.

Where: Audrey Gill Sports Complex, Midland.
Records: Midland High is 2-0 in District 4-5A and 8-1 overall; Abilene Cooper is 0-2 and 4-7.
Notes: MHS has two 1-0 wins under its belt in 4-5A play: over Midland Lee to start district, then over Odessa High on Tuesday... Cooper is struggling, having been outscored, 7-0, so far in district play. The Cougars lost to San Angelo Central, 3-0, on Tuesday... MHS goal keeper John Faulkenberry and his defenders have pitched two shutouts, and no other 4-5A school can boast that. Abilene High keeper Jacob Henderson hasn't been scored upon, but AHS has only played one district game.
Next: MHS will play at San Angelo Central at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Midland Lee at Abilene High

When: 2 p.m.
Where: Lee Soccer Complex, Abilene.
Records: Midland Lee is 0-2 in District 4-5A and 1-5 overall; Abilene High is 1-0 and 9-2.
Notes: Lee hasn't scored a goal in district play, having lost 1-0 to Midland High and 6-0 to Odessa Permian on Tuesday... Lee must turn it around, but playing at Abilene High will be a tough way to do it. AHS has two shutout victories since district began, although one was a non-district 4-0 win over San Angelo Lake View on Tuesday... AHS' Francisco Gloria had two goals in a 4-0 win over Abilene Cooper in the district opener. On the district scoring lists, Gloria trails only Permian's Cody Peterson and Tim Bowington, both of whom fared well in Mojo's pasting of Lee on Tuesday.
Next: Lee is open on Tuesday. The Rebels will return to action by hosting Abilene Cooper on Feb. 10.

Chmura chooses not to take stand

Associated Press

WAUKESHA, Wis. — Mark Chmura chose not to testify in his sexual assault trial after his lawyer told him there was no need to because the case has gone so well.

Defense attorney Gerald Boyle rested his case Friday, telling Judge Mark Gempeler he told the former Green Bay Packers tight end not to take the stand.

"Things fell the way we thought they would," Boyle told Gempeler.

"Your decision is you do not wish to take the stand?" Gempeler asked Chmura.

"Yes, that is true, your honor," Chmura replied, the first time he has spoken in court during his nine-day trial. Closing arguments were expected Saturday afternoon.

A teen-ager who used to baby sit for Chmura's two sons told police Chmura pulled her into a bathroom during an April 9 post-prom party at his friend Robert Gessert's Hartland home, pulled down her pants and had sex with her without her consent.

Chmura is charged with third-degree sexual assault and child enticement, both felonies. He could face up to 40 years in prison and $20,000 in fines if convicted.

His accuser has testified the former NFL star called her jailbait, asked her about the length of legs and gave her a $20 tip for being cute when she watched his children.

Chmura's wife, Lynda, testified Friday she has never heard her husband refer to a woman's body in a demeaning way.

"Mark doesn't make comments like that, especially to young girls," she testified.

Chmura's accuser also has said she disliked him because she heard he fathered a child with another baby sitter.

"Absolutely not," Mrs. Chmura said.

"Your marriage is solid?" Boyle asked.

"As a rock," Mrs. Chmura replied. "I know the truth about my husband and I love him very much."

Chmura remained expressionless throughout his wife's testimony.

Chmura, a three-time Pro Bowl selection, joined the Packers in 1992. He appeared in two Super Bowls with Green Bay, but missed most of the 1999 season with a neck injury. The team cut him in June.

Wisconsin, Alvarez agree to extension

Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Wisconsin football coach Barry Alvarez, courted by Miami to become the Hurricanes' new coach, agreed to a contract extension Friday, saying he plans to finish his coaching career with the Badgers.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed, but Chancellor John Wiley described it as a competitive package. Miami was prepared to offer Alvarez a five-year deal worth about $1.4 million annually, but the coach said his decision wasn't about the money.

"I've put an awful lot of work into this program," Alvarez said. "It's my program. I put my stamp on it. I plan on this being my last job."

Alvarez, who took Wisconsin from the bottom of the Big Ten to three Rose Bowl titles in six years, said the Miami offer was the most serious he has considered, mainly because of the location and the recruiting possibilities.

"The best high school football in the country is played in Florida," Alvarez said. "It's a school that could potentially play for a national championship every year."

Miami athletic director Paul Dee said the Hurricanes gave up trying to sign Alvarez after hearing broadcast reports Friday that he signed the contract extension.

Dee said he and Alvarez spoke each of the last three days about the position, but the talks never reached the negotiation stage.

The five-year deal worth about $1.4 million annually was the same contract Butch Davis turned down before resigning this week to take the head coaching job with the Cleveland Browns.

Alvarez insisted he didn't discuss the Miami job with Dee just to drive up his value for Wisconsin.

Alvarez had been an obvious choice for the Hurricanes. He interviewed for the Miami job in 1995 after Dennis Erickson left the program, but the Hurricanes hired Davis instead. Alvarez also has ties to incoming Miami president Donna Shalala, who was Wisconsin's chancellor when the Badgers hired Alvarez to rebuild the program in 1990.

NBA fines Iverson for derogatory comments

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Allen Iverson was fined $5,000 by the NBA on Friday for shouting a derogatory remark about gays toward taunting fans.

The Philadelphia 76ers guard said he was responding to a barrage of insults and racial slurs from the crowd last Sunday in Indianapolis. Iverson's comments were recorded by NBC.

Iverson said he was called a "monkey" and another racial epithet.

"That's the worst I've heard it in my career," he told The Philadelphia Inquirer on Tuesday.

"They called me jailbird ... waving their middle finger at me. Everything. Screaming behind the bench the whole time, and nothing was done about it. They weren't even thrown out," he said.

The fine cited Iverson for "directing profanity towards fans."

go and Cincinnati, saying he was enticed by the Texans' organization, the prospect of working for Casserly and owner Bob McNair and the city itself.

"We've moved 18 times now and my wife's favorite house was here in Houston," Palmer said. "I don't know if it's on the market now, but there's a sketch of that house in our (current) house."

Jazz' Sloan signs for three more years

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan, already the NBA's longest-tenured coach, is staying on board for at least three more seasons.

Sloan signed a three-year contract extension Friday that carries him through the 2003-04 season. His current contract would have expired after this season.

"I'm going to work tomorrow," Sloan said with a laugh. "That's what I've always done."

The salary was not disclosed.

Sloan is the most successful coach in Jazz history, going 638-298 since succeeding former coach Frank Layden on Dec. 9, 1988. Sloan also coached the Jazz to the 1997 and 1998 NBA Finals, where they lost twice to the Chicago Bulls.

About one month ago, Jazz vice president Kevin O'Connor approached Sloan to propose the new deal. Working with owner Larry Miller, terms were completed without fanfare.

"It went together smoothly because Jerry and myself ... have common goals for this franchise," Miller said. "I believe we've been fair to Jerry, and Jerry tells me we have."

Midland College's Tyler Ward and Abel Gonzalez (8) can't keep a bloop single from dropping in during the first game. Midland College kept their poise well enough to sweep both games Friday afternoon at Christensen Stadium

CHAPS: Haney has four-hit game

the mound was Tim Wallis (1-0), who went 4 1/3 innings, allowed four hits and two earned runs. Wallis also struck out two and walked three.

"I thought the starting pitchers were excellent," Ramharter said. "That was the highlight of the whole day."

Just for the record, the Chaps played this doubleheader in just four hours, which suits Ramharter just fine.

"That's our style," he said. "We play a doubleheader in four hours. Some college games take four hours for just one game. Our pitchers work fast, they get quick outs and get into the dugout so we can hit."

The Chaps host another doubleheader today at Christensen Stadium as Wayland Baptist JV comes to town. First pitch is 1 p.m.

Other Chap Firsts: The first hit by a Chaparral came in the third inning of Game 1 when Michael Garza connected on a two-out single to right-center field... The first Chap run was scored by Haney on an Abel Gonzalez single to right field in the fourth inning of Game 1... The first strikeout by a Chap pitcher came in the first inning of Game 1 when Overman fanned Drew Dutton, LCU's third batter... Midland College's first double was hit by Chad Christy in the fifth inning of Game 1... MC's first triple didn't come until Game 2 when Haney hit a deep ball up against the right-center field fence.

Chap Notes: Prior to the game, each Midland College baseball player received a game ball... Mayor Bobby Burns was on hand to throw out the first pitch...

Healthy Pudge will be ready for Texas

By T.R. Sullivan
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

ARLINGTON — A thumb injury and the Rangers' active off-season have brought about a change in plans for catcher Ivan "Pudge" Rodriguez.

He won't be late to spring training this year.

"I'm going to be there the first day," Rodriguez said Friday before the Rangers' annual Mid-Winter Banquet. "I got hurt two months before the season ended. I've been away from baseball for too long. I want to play. It's a great time to meet these guys and put this thing together for 25 guys so we can go on and win the World Series."

Rangers pitchers and catchers hold their first workout Feb. 17 in Port Charlotte, Fla., while the first full-squad workout is Feb. 23. The past two years Rodriguez has waited to report with the position players.

He has sat out long enough. He suffered a broken thumb on July 24 last year and played in just 87 games. Rodriguez said the thumb is completely healed and he's ready to get back to work.

"I'm just working my tail off every day," Rodriguez said. "I'm in better shape than I've ever been in my career. The thumb is strong, I'm swinging the bat well, I'm feeling great."

Rodriguez also said he won't let his contract situation take away from that euphoric feeling. He said he was thrilled when the Rangers signed former Mariners shortstop Alex Rodriguez, even though his staggering $252 million contract makes Ivan Rodriguez, the nine-time Gold Glove winner, seem vastly underpaid.

"I'm happy for him," Ivan Rodriguez said. "He's my friend. I've known him for a long time. We work out together in Miami. I know he's going to be here a long time, plus there are a lot of other new guys that will help us."

Alex Rodriguez said he's thrilled to be able to play on the same team with the All-Star catcher.

"Pudge is a great worker," Alex Rodriguez said. "He's probably the hardest worker I've ever seen. I think we'll both help each other out. One of the great things about playing with Ken Griffey Jr. is that we pushed each other to the next level."

Alex Rodriguez will make $21 million this year in base salary alone. Ivan Rodriguez has two years left on his contract that pays him $8 million this season and $9 million in 2002. After that he can be a free agent, although general manager Doug Melvin has brought up the possibility of working out a contract extension.

"I'm going to leave that to my agent, Jeff Moorad," Ivan Rodriguez said. "They can sit down and talk if they want to. I don't want to be involved. I want to put on a uniform and play baseball.

"I'm happy with the contract that I have. I can't say I'm unhappy with the contract now when three years ago I was happy with it. The only thing I want is to play the rest of my career with the Rangers."

"He'd better," Alex Rodriguez said. "He recruited me to come here. He has no choice."

GOLF: Gogel must contend with memories

business."

With birdies on the last three holes, Gogel finished at 131 and managed to separate himself from the pack after two pristine days at Pebble.

The pack did not include Woods.

Despite playing the same course as Gogel and Singh — and the easiest of three in the rotation — Woods bungled the first two pars 5s and was over par for the second time in his last five rounds.

"My swing was never in sync," Woods said.

Singh, who wound up tied with Gogel two strokes behind Woods last year, also played Poppy and had a 68 to get to 134.

The group at 135 included Kemper Open champion Tom Scherrer and Frank Lickliter, who was one stroke behind the late Payne Stewart after 54 holes two years ago and never got a chance when the final round was washed out.

That shouldn't be a problem this year, not with that stranger known as the sun gracing all three courses.

"This is the most sunshine we've seen in the last five years, all packed into two days," Lickliter said after his 66 at Poppy Hills.

Phil Mickelson, who won Pebble Beach in 1998 when the final round was pushed back seven months to August, had a 66 at Spyglass Hill and was at 8-under 136.

Gogel has 36 holes left to protect this lead, but his game is holding up just fine. He has played his last 31 holes without a bogey, and he did the one thing Woods failed to do at Poppy Hills by taking advantage of the par 5s.

Gogel birdied all five of them, including the 555-yard ninth hole for a 62. His previous best round was a 63 in the third round at Las Vegas.

Woods didn't appear to be bothered by the ligament he sprained in his left knee Wednesday when he collided with an overzealous man seeking an autograph.

He sprinted up a steep slope left of the 12th green to see where his blind pitch shot land. It was 4 feet from the hole and he saved his par on the 531-yard hole.

It was part of an ominous start to a sloppy day. He hit a 4-iron into the water on the par-5 10th hole to take bogey, and really chopped up the 531-yeard 12th. His 3-wood went through the fairway behind the pine trees. He pitched sideways into the 13th fairway, then tried to scale a row of 45-foot pines to the green.

Saving par with the great pitch at least restored some of his humor.

"Hi, I'm Tiger Woods. I'm playing with you today," Woods told Mark O'Meara, a common introduction when amateurs are playing with pros.

Woods proceeded to bogey the next two holes. When he finally strung together some good shots, his putts bumped along and kept him frustrated.

Jackalopes get huge win vs. Scorpions

Staff Report

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. — The Odessa Jackalopes scored a big 2-1 victory over the New Mexico Scorpions here Friday night.

The Scorpions are the leaders of the Western Divison of the Western Professional Hockey League. The third place Jacks are now within nine points of the Scorpions.

The Jacks took a 1-0 lead in the first period on a power play goal by Matt Hoffman and got the win in the second period on a goal by Tim Hill.

Odessa goalie Grant Sjerven was excellent, stopping 35 of 36 shots, giving the Scorpions only one goal in the third period of play. The Jacks got only 24 shots on goal for the game.

The Scorpions made the game interesting with a goal only 1:03 into the third period, but neither team could find the net again.

Slap Jacks: Odessa's Derrick Laxdal suffered broken nose and concussion in an on-ice altercation with New Mexico's Alex Stojanov. Laxdal didn't play again and Stojanov scored the Scorpion's only goal of the game. The Jacks stay five points behind Lubbock, a 5-3 winner over Fort Worth Friday, but the Jacks have three games in hand against the Cotton Kings. That race is huge since the winner of that series gets home ice in the first round of the playoffs. The Jacks are 2-2-3 against the Scorpions this season and it's really been that close since just 25 goals have been scored between the two teams in regulation play.

they hounded Abilene High (5-20, 0-9) into an even worse performance shooting, as the Eagles hit only 28 percent of their shots. Just as telling, Abilene High made 24 turnovers.

Lee never trailed the Eagles, who twice tied the game early in the first quarter, but the Rebels seized control of the game when they scored 10 straight points to go up 22-11 in the second quarter. The closest Abilene High got was within six points at the outset of the third quarter.

The Eagles have been a punching bag for the rest of the district this season, and the Rebels handed them a 75-62 defeat in the first half of 4-5A. Overconfidence might have been the biggest opponent for Lee.

"I think you worry about not playing hard against people you know you can beat, but we played hard," said Coffman.

Despite not having their top game offensively, the Rebels still found ways to score. Guards Wendell Smith, Cornell Hunt and Drew Coffman created baskets by penetrating and either scoring themselves or dishing off to 6-foot-7 center Eric Winston for easy finishes.

The Rebels knew from their first meeting with AHS that they could be successful by driving to the hoop.

"We tried to pretty much get the ball to Eric and that's what we try to do every time we drive the lane," said Smith, the team's leading scorer who had 16 points. "(The Eagles) were really playing out there by the 3-point line. They were easy to go around, it was just they were sitting in that zone."

Winston led Lee in scoring with 17 points while Drew Coffman added 10. Nobody for Abilene High scored more than seven points.

The Lee girls also didn't have anybody score more than seven points either, as their hopes to make the playoffs went up in smoke in the first few minutes against the second place Lady Eagles. Abilene High scored 12 of the game's first 13 points, after which the Lady Rebels could get no closer than nine points.

Putting the ball in the basket from anywhere was a struggle for the Lee girls, who hit only 11-of-49 from the field for a dismal 22 percent clip. It was typical of many Lady Rebel losses this season, when they couldn't put the ball in the hole and got off to slow starts.

"We just couldn't get the ball to fall," said Lee coach Elise Kail, whose team also had a rough night from the free throw line, making only 9-of-24. "It's not that we weren't taking the shots, they weren't dropping in."

It was a rough final game for Lee's only two returnees from last year's playoff team, seniors Shamera Bryson and Shandi Neatherlin, but a learning experience for the rest of the young squad. All of Lee's district losses came to the three teams who will be going to the playoffs, Midland High, Abilene High and Cooper.

Those teams all had at least seven players returning from last year's squad. Next year the Lady Rebels will return seven players.

"They want to take the good things the seniors did and build on that," said Kail of next year's returning underclassmen. "I still hate for it to end like this."

Bryson and Wykia Wallace each scored seven points for Lee. Abilene High's LaSharla Richardson was the only scorer in double figures with 17 points.

Cougars shock Midland High

Staff Report

ABILENE — Midland High fell from second place to fourth place in the wild District 4-5A boys basketball race here Friday night after a tough 52-50 upset loss to Abilene Cooper.

MHS is now 5-4 in the loop race, one-half game behind 6-4 Midland Lee, which is now in third place. The Bulldogs also have major games left with 6-3 San Angelo Central and 8-2 Odessa High.

And this was a tough one to lose. With the game tied at 50-50, Cooper got the ball with 15 seconds left. The Cougars ran a play and Chris Harris fed Tony Cunningham for the winning basket near the final buzzer. MHS never had a chance to inbounds the basketball.

The Cooper win was a strange one in the fact that the Cougars pulled the upset without anyone really turning in a big night. None of the Cooper players scored in double figures.

The Bulldogs got 24 points from guard Lucquente White, but he was the only player for MHS to land in double figures.

The Bulldogs will host San Angelo Central in a key district game Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Chaparral Center. Central took over sole possession of second place on Friday with a surprising 75-56 win over league leading Odessa High, so the Bulldogs may be forced to win all of its final three games to get into the state playoffs.

Injury to high-scoring Jagr makes World's goaltenders more valuable

By Ira Podell
AP Sports Writer

DENVER — Jaromir Jagr's absence from the World team is good news for North America's goalies. The same can't be said for the opposing netminders, who must compensate for the loss of the high-scoring forward.

The World team lost its top offensive weapon as Jagr was forced to pull out of Sunday's game because of a head injury. Jagr, the Pittsburgh captain who led the All-Star voting three of the last four years, experienced dizziness and a headache after he was rammed into the boards Wednesday night by Philadelphia's Todd Fedoruk.

He was replaced Friday by Boston's Sergei Samsonov, who will be making his first All-Star appearance.

Without the scoring punch of Jagr, the league's leading scorer three years running and No. 2 so far this season, the unlikely Czech goalie duo of Dominik Hasek and Roman Cechmanek — along with San Jose rookie Evgeni Nabokov — will have the daunting task of making up for his loss.

The All-Star Game has averaged 14 goals in the three years of the North America against the World format.

Hasek didn't know if he'd be back for another one and he certainly didn't expect to be backed up by Cechmanek.

Hasek intended to retire following last season, until a groin injury cost the five-time Vezina Trophy winner half the season and the All-Star Game.

He will start in goal for the World team at the Pepsi Center. North America captured the first two games in this All-Star format before the World squad won 9-4 last year at Toronto without Hasek.

"Of course I want to win," said the 36-year-old Buffalo Sabres star, who has been voted to start four straight years. "I've played two games for the World Team, and any time I've played we've never won."

More surprising than Hasek's inclusion in the game is that of the Philadelphia Flyers' Cechmanek. The 29-year-old first-year player served as Hasek's backup on the gold-medal winning Czech Republic team at the 1998 Nagano Olympics.

"He's supposed to be a backup goalie in Philadelphia, but once he got his chance he proved that he can play at the higher level. The way he's played, I think he deserves to be there," Hasek said.

Cechmanek wrested the Flyers starting job from Brian Boucher, who had a great rookie season and led Philadelphia within one game of the Stanley Cup finals.

When Boucher struggled early, Cechmanek — too old to have rookie status — took over by performing like a veteran.

"He is not young, but I am really surprised for him to come in his first year in the NHL and make the All-Star Game," Hasek said. "It is a big accomplishment."

This season could be Hasek's last in the NHL and he might not be around to play for his country next year at the Salt Lake City Games.

If not, he feels comfortable leaving the goaltending duties to Cechmanek and St. Louis' Roman Turek, who easily could have been an All-Star this year as well.

"I am here and I am focused on this season," Hasek said. "The Olympics in Salt Lake City is going to be something really special and I never said I don't want to play in that. If that is still possible, I want to play there. And if I don't, then it is probably time for players like Cechmanek or Turek."

Hasek is 18-17-4 through the first half of this season with a respectable goals-against average of 2.31 for the Sabres, the third-place team in the Northeast Division. Buffalo, with 56 points, trails first-place Ottawa by 10.

"I wasn't pleased with my performance," Hasek said. "The team played pretty well, but I believe that if I'd played better, it could have been different.

"I felt good with the way I practiced. I have had so many problems with injuries, but I felt great. Only in the game I was struggling a bit."

Hasek has been around long enough to have gone through the Eastern Conference-Western Conference All-Star battles that preceded the current format, and prefers it.

"I think it is better and, you play the best players, the biggest stars, even maybe some teams might not be represented in the All-Star Game," he said.

That is the case this year as six clubs — including the Montreal Canadiens — do not have any players in the game.

Hasek was directly involved in a classic All-Star play when Owen Nolan came in on a breakaway during the 1997 game and pointed — in Babe Ruth fashion — to the top corner of the net and fired the puck in at that spot.

"I have seen it many times on TV and I remember this goal," Hasek said. "Reporters were asking me what I thought about him showing me the top corner and I didn't know what they were talking about.

"When you are on the ice you really don't look at his hands, you look at the puck."

Hasek would rather concentrate on the present.

"After the season I'll make other decisions, but like I said, I don't want to say anything until the season is over," he said. "After the season I will sit with my wife and the organization, I will make some decision.

"Right now, I want to only be focused on the season and the playoffs. So you won't hear anything else from me."

New garden will be place to pray for unborn children

■ Communidad, a ministry to the poor, has purchased empty lot around the corner from Planned Parenthood to create a prayer garden.

By Johnnye Montgomery

Bob Hilton, a member of St. Ann's Catholic Church who also manages Communidad Alabare (Community of Praise), a ministry to the poor, observed the anniversary of Roe vs. Wade with the announcement that Communidad plans to create a prayer garden where people may come to pray for the unborn in protest of abortions.

Communidad, a 501 (3c) Corporation, has purchased the empty lot on Fort Worth Street around the corner from Planned Parenthood's clinic to plant that garden.

Hilton is a veteran protester who has been involved in the pro-life movement almost since its beginning. He was the lone Midlander among a group of about 60 Operation Rescue protesters arrested for criminal trespass at a clinic in Austin, where he spent 20 days in jail.

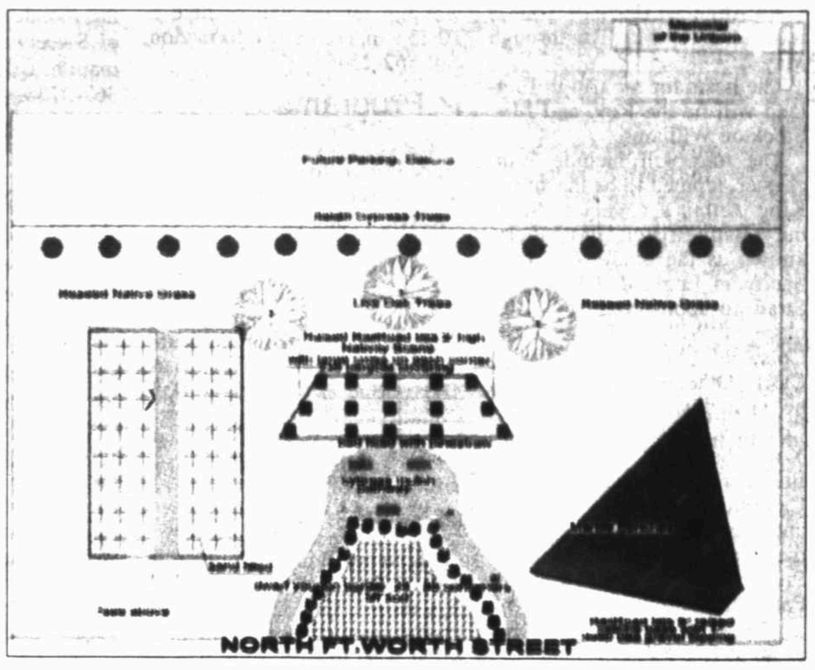

For the past five or six years, he has come to a location within site of the Midland Planned Parenthood clinic every Friday before dawn and prayed for about an hour. He stated the prayer garden concept came out of one of those prayer sessions.

"I was asking the Lord what he wanted me to do, and how I could work to prevent this (abortion), and I felt that the Lord was telling me to buy this lot and build a place for people to pray," he said.

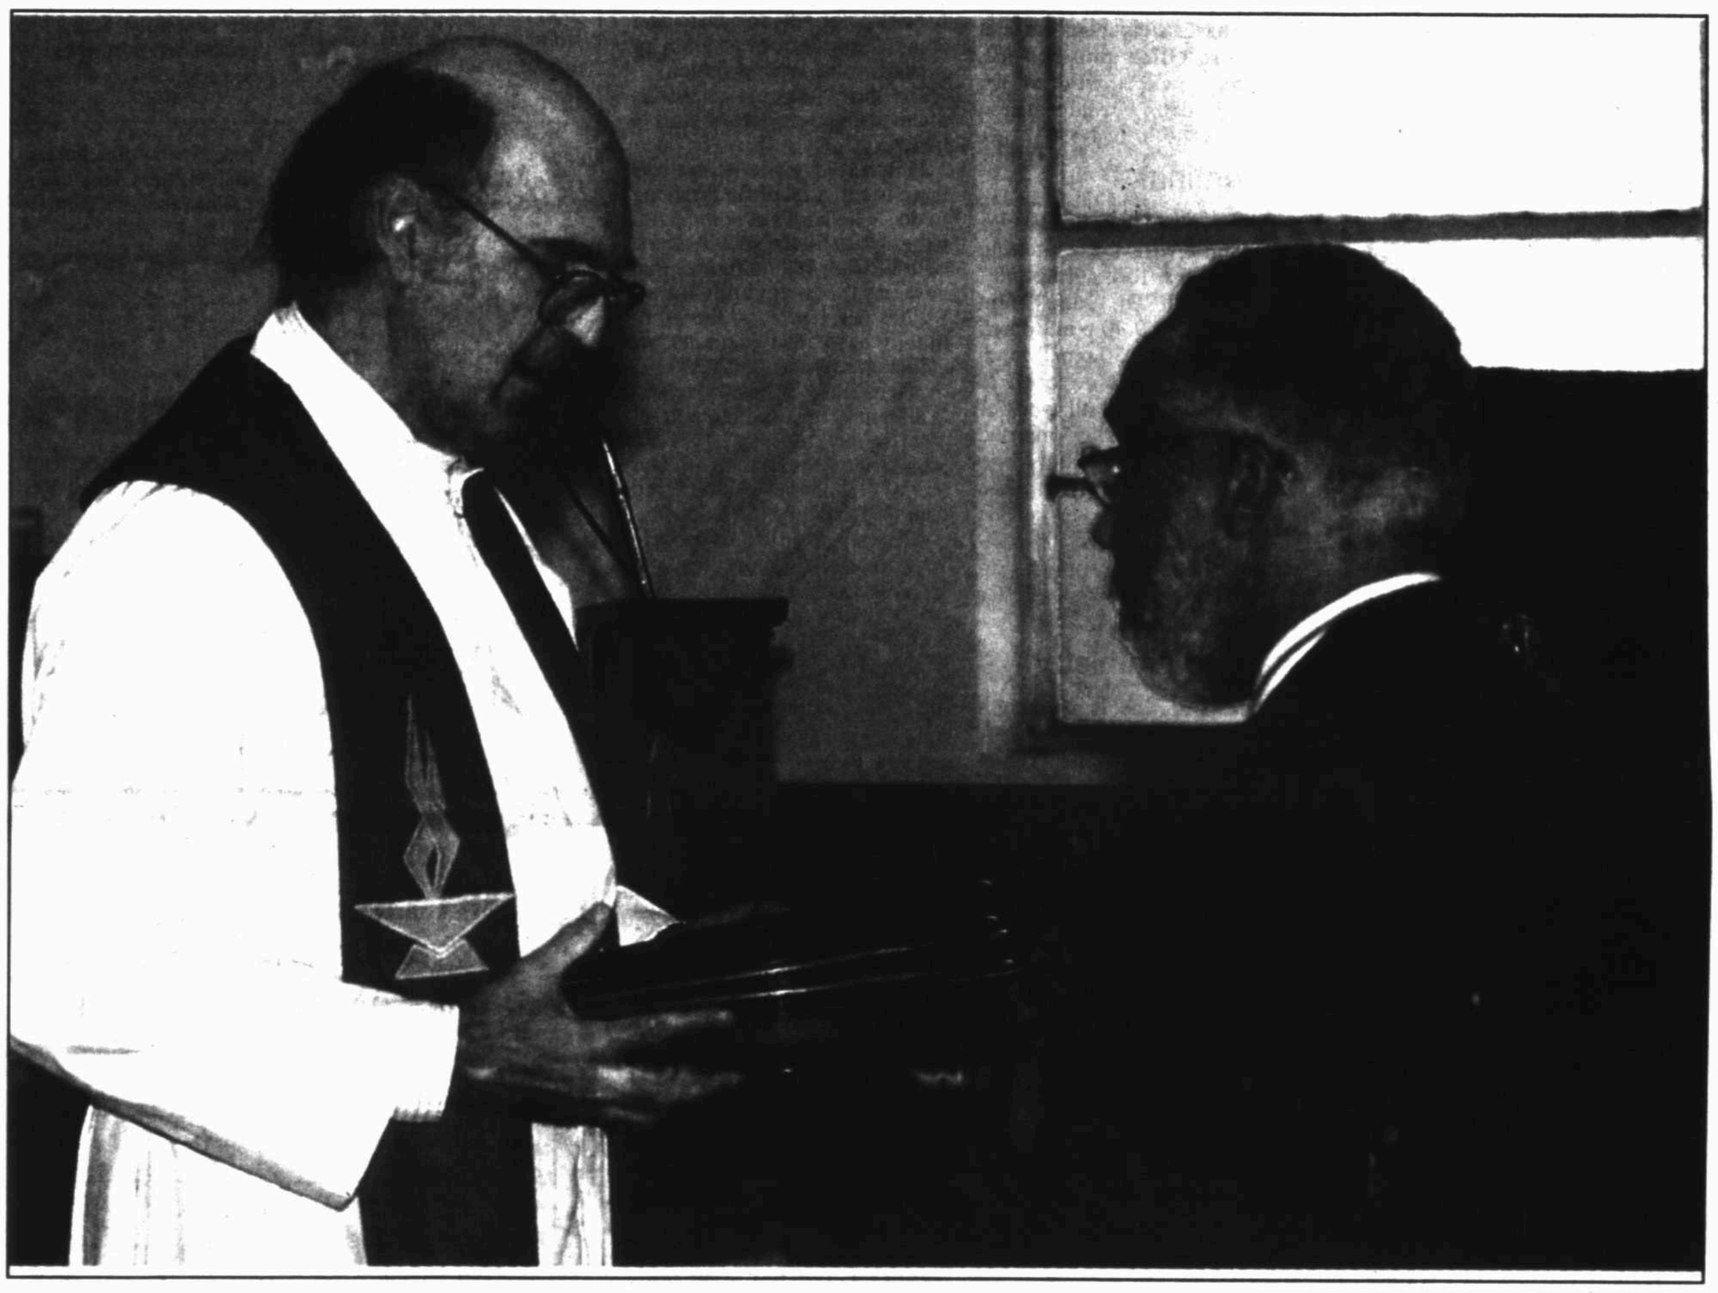

"It was my plan to ask 150 people for a one-time donation of $100 each," he said.

But long before he had contacted the 150, he was joined

Hollowell pastor: Congregation is 'doing church in a new way'

By Johnnye Montgomery

For the last six months of 2000, the Rev. Dennis Bade and the congregation of Hollowell United Methodist Church have been getting to know one another, enjoying the courtship and exploration that all new friendships undergo.

But it was official as of Jan. 1. Bade, formerly associate pastor at St. Luke's UMC, was named pastor of Hollowell. Bade is Caucasian; the congregation at Hollowell is predominantly African-American.

Bade, who had been at St. Luke's 5 1/2 years before this appointment, said people usually describe him as progressive in theology.

"I use the Wesleyan Quadrilateral, which means more or less, that we do our own theology from Scripture, we do it from tradition, or how has the church dealt with questions over the years; we do it from reason, because God gave us a mind to think and we're not supposed to leave our mind at the door of the church; and lastly, we do it through our experience," Bade said.

He said his transition to Hollowell has been smooth.

"I've been very graciously accepted, and the people are recatching the vision that Hollowell has always had in this community, which is a very involved church, living out their faith in community and not just leaving it at the door as they leave Sunday worship."

Bade said race is a non-issue; it's near the bottom of a list of real concerns, such as the re-creation of community in the neighborhood, expanding the congregation and building inclusiveness.

"There's a marvelous spirit in this congregation, and people are very much aware that their faith needs to be lived out in the world. They do some concrete things to make that happen," he said. "They're very aware of their social action responsibilities, and that God has called them to stop what is happening in this area.

"They're doing church in a new way."

Bade said although the congregation's activities include the usual handing out of Thanksgiving and Christmas boxes, collecting mission packets and preparing flood buckets for the United Methodist relief organization, UMCOR, other activities include getting involved in government — City Council, school board and the Texas Legislature.

"We've had meetings here to spread the word about the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIPS), which has not been well publicized. James Fuller is a member of our congregation, and the chair of our administrative council, and he's also a member of the school board. He keeps us aware of what is happening at the schools.

"If we're not active in the community, faith doesn't work."

Recently, the congregation at Hollowell made a commitment to explore the possibility of creating a Shalom Zone in the area.

The Communities of Shalom, Bade explained, came out of the Los Angeles riots in 1992, after the Rodney King decision. It was a

LESLIE WILLIAMS

God promises never to leave us, no matter how many holes we've got in our feet

Williams

There may be "fifty ways to leave your lover," but there are a million and fifty ways to shoot yourself in the foot.

Whole fields, vast arenas are mined out there for the unsuspecting. There's the social arena, for example — calling out "Hi, Hilda!" and remembering (too late) that her name is Mildred. Or, going on and on about how dreadful it would be to have triplets — just think of the work, the trouble, the exhaustion — and having your date smile and say, "You can ask my mom. I'm a triplet." Or, my personal worst, running into an old friend and asking about his wife, only to find out that she died two years ago.

Then there are the many professional opportunities to shoot yourself in the foot — for instance, showing up for an important meeting with your baby's spit-up dribbling down the back of your shoulder (you can still smell it but you just couldn't find it in the mirror). Or, regaling the positive aspects of the program your boss has just decided to can. Or, getting your tongue twisted while giving a speech to the culinary society on the art of pheasant plucking and the preparation of other delicacies.

Then there's the home life arena — the casual comment to Uncle Mort, "Drop by some time and see us" that turns into a week-long visit with his family of five kids who buzz through the refrigerator like a swarm of locusts. Or, how about the reverse psychology you use on your teen (a trick that backfires immediately): "Fine. Make friends with Eddie Haskell."

Moving into the more serious realms, we humans seem destined to cripple ourselves in relationship. Failing to discern the difference between a friend's personal secret and public news, for example, is a great way to blow both your toe and your friend's toe right off. And judging from the overloaded court dockets, we humans cannot seem to avoid drunk driving, child abuse, theft, murder and drugs. Repeat offenders seem destined to keep shooting long after they have no feet left whatsoever.

Such is the nature of sin. Doing what we don't want to do, not doing what we do want to do, and sometimes not doing anything at all except thinking about it, over and over.

Being an equal-opportunity God, the Lord forgives us when we bring out the old pistol of sin and start firing. If we're sorry, we can be assured of enough grace to cover everything from a faux pas to a murder. The good news of Jesus Christ is that, though there may be fifty ways to leave your lover, God loves us so much that He promises never to leave us, no matter how many holes we've got in our feet.

PRAYER: Hilton says garden fits into revitalization

(From 1C)

in his fund-raising effort by several Midlanders, including Mike LaMonica and Michael Banschbach. Several donors had come through with large amounts. In less than seven weeks Hilton and others had raised the $15,000 needed to buy the lot.

After a Nov. 1 closing on the lot, they began to solicit ideas and funding for the garden.

He obtained a preliminary landscape design plan from La Casa Verde, along with a $12,000 estimated cost, and gave them the go-ahead. At present, there is some $4,000 in the project pool, and construction work on the site began Jan. 23.

The planned garden will be bordered on the east by Italian cypress trees, with live oak trees and native grasses providing greenery and shade without excessive use of water. In the center a life-size nativity scene will stand on a bed of pine straw and protected from the weather by a small pergola. Nearby will be a monument to the unborn, and near the northwestern corner will stand a large sand-filled box supporting 1,000 crosses to represent the abortions the clinic performs for the 50-county area it serves.

At its western entrance there will be a cypress mulch pathway surrounding a dwarf yaupon holly border that will protect an inner area filled with flowers, grass, or perhaps some type of mulch.

On the southwest corner is planned a seating area of marble benches.

Hilton said while he realizes there is still a lot of fund-raising to do — he hopes at some point to be able to fill the nativity scene with life-size Italian figures that cost in the neighborhood of $1,200 per figure — the community has already demonstrated considerable support.

"I've received Bishop Pfeifer-'s blessing, and the support of Monsignor Murphy (of St. Ann's) and Robert Walter of Our Savior's Lutheran Church, and Charlie Dodd of First Baptist.

"There are so many people who are excited about this, and we've already had a number of church members say their congregations will come to pray on Fridays," he added. "With the present effort to revitalize downtown Midland, I think this will fit right into the revitalization work, and it may even give people ideas about some other things they could do with property down here."

Above all, however, he says the prayer garden will provide a place for people to witness to the visitors at the clinic.

"There have been some girls come across the street to see us, and while we don't plan to harass anyone, we will pass out tracts to anyone who will take them.

"We realize that (Planned Parenthood) does other things besides abortion, but according to their figures, they did just under 1,000 (abortions) in 1999."

Planned Parenthood has no plans to leave

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Carla Holeva, vice president of community affairs of Planned Parenthood of West Texas, said the organization, founded in 1938 and which has been in the Permian Basin since 1965, has no plans to leave.

"We serve about 3,000 women at (the Midland) site every year, and many of them travel up to four hours to get to us," said Ms. Holeva, who explained that although the local agency is often targeted for its abortion services, a preponderance of the agency's work is in other patient services, education services and public affairs.

"We do pap smears and breast exams. We provide emergency contraception, pregnancy testing and counseling, and we offer all FDA-approved birth control methods," she said. "We do hormone replacement therapy, which a lot of people don't know about.

"And yes, we do abortions. We're the only clinic in a 50-county area that offers this."

PPWT also provides adoption referrals, testing for such conditions as anemia, diabetes, urinary tract infections, amenorrhea and pelvic inflammatory disease, menopause services and tubal ligation and vasectomies.

Ms. Holeva said clinic services are provided on a sliding fee scale, and that no one in need of care is ever turned away.

"Most of our patients must have financial assistance, but a lot of women with insurance turn to us because of the confidentiality of our services."

PPWT provides extensive public education in connection with its clinics, offering books, videotapes and audiotapes, brochures and educational newsletters for patient and community use. Ms. Holeva said agency professionals go to schools and churches and other groups upon request, to present training programs on teen pregnancy, adolescent growth and development,sexual harassment and other issues in answer to teens' questions about their sexuality.

"We would like to see new policies at federal and state levels that would advance reproductive health and decision-making. We think every teenager should have access to honest, responsible information on sexuality and pregnancy prevention programs that have been proven to work."

NEW: Hollowell seeks to rebuild community

(From 1C)

response by churches to work toward systemic change within defined geographic areas in collaboration with residents and community organizations to develop economic prosperity, coordinate resources and aid in the planning for the community's future.

"What happened was that a lot of places got burned out, and the UMC General Conference felt the church should make a response to this," said Bade.

"Shalom is a Hebrew word that often gets translated into English as 'peace', but it means much more than that.

"Essentially, it means, 'We are interrelated. If you make it, I make it, and if I make it, you make it, and I wish you the very best that can happen.' The same concept is defined within the Old and New testaments as justice and living morally as individuals and as a community."

Bade said the neighborhood surrounding Hollowell seemed ready-made for a Shalom Zone because of its history.

"It's my understanding that the Lee Street business community was once the center of community life in this neighborhood, but it became a ghost town when Lamesa Road was built," he said. "The railroad crossing was cut off and made Lee Street essentially a dead end.

"So we would like to shore up the vision and to have Shalom become a catalyst for the renewing and rebuilding of the community here, to strengthen relationships between people and have them work together with the few institutions left here.

"There have already been Shalom communities built in the Houston area, and the Dallas/Fort Worth area, giving reality to the thought that God loves us."

Bade explained that Shalom communities work in four different ways.

"They work for spiritual renewal; they work for community prosperity; they strengthen relationships between people; and they work for nature, health and healing.

"You don't do it alone. You do it with other people.

"We've already approached many residents of the area, and looked at many of the assets of the community, and we're asking if they'd like to work together to redevelop this neighborhood," said Bade.

"One of the assets we have here is a lot of vacant land. We think we can use that to create affordable housing for low-income working families, and to create public areas that people will be proud of."

Bade stated that preliminary plans are to begin training the last of March, and to continue through August, with sessions one Saturday each month, for five months.

"The training will consist of looking at who we are as God's people, redefining our purpose, doing church in a new way and basic skills of community organization."

He said the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and several other churches have already expressed a willingness to join the project.

Caution urged on shrine that sits at center of peace talks, prophecy

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Negotiations over a disputed Jerusalem holy site are failing to take into account its central role in the end-times prophecies of Judaism, Christianity and Islam alike — or to calm those who want to see the prophecies played out, an Israeli author warns.

"People's beliefs are a strategic fact when you're dealing with Jerusalem, the Holy Land, and the Temple Mount," said Gershom Gorenberg, an expert on apocalyptic beliefs.

Backed by senior Israeli security officials, Gorenberg warns that a U.S. proposal for Israel to cede the sacred hilltop, known to Jews as Temple Mount and to Muslims as the Haram as-Sharif, could spur extremists to desperate action.

The holy site at the center of peace talks and prophecy lies in a corner of Jerusalem's Old City, 36 walled acres on which early Islam raised gleaming mosques over the ruins of Judaism's two biblical Temples. It's Islam's third-most holy site; Judaism's first.

It's also the single stage on which three different plays unfold — the final-days beliefs of the world's major monotheistic faiths, Gorenberg writes in a new book, "The End of Days."

And for Christian and Jewish end-timers, Israel's proposed concession of the Temple Mount to the Palestinians threatens to rewrite the ending to what they see as a divine script:

— For Jews, the day a third Temple rises on the site of the old is inextricably linked to the coming of the Messiah.

— In Christian theology, Jews' construction of the third Temple would be another ordained step toward the antichrist, the Apocalypse and the Second Coming — as was the founding of the state of Israel itself.

— In some Muslim beliefs, meanwhile, Jerusalem will be the field for the final battle between good and evil, Gorenberg says.

Two former Israeli security officials recently warned Prime Minister Ehud Barak of the possible danger in negotiations over the site's fate.

Assaf Hefetz, former national police commissioner, and Carmi Gilon, ex-chief of the security agency Shin Bet, said in a letter to Barak that an extremist attack on the hilltop's mosques would likely "lead to all-out war and unleash destructive forces that would imperil Israel's existence."

A recent TV panel discussion on the subject with some of Israel's leading rabbis opened with a clip from a 1999 apocalyptic movie, "The Omega Code," showing a terrorist blasting away the hilltop's gilded Dome of the Rock.

One of the panelists, Yehuda Etzion, said he believed one day the mosques would be razed, but stopped short of saying he and his followers would do it themselves.

How this will happen, who will do it and when he will do it — I don't know," Etzion said. "But ... the mount will be purified. That means that the mosques will be removed from it."

Israel's chief rabbi, Israel Meir Lau, calls the proposal that Israel cede sovereignty of the site "sacrilege" but condemns suggestions of attempts on the mosques. "The Temple will be built, soon, in our days — not at the cost of bloodshed," Lau said.

There is great diversity among Christian groups concerning end-time prophecy, with some giving it very little emphasis and others making it the core of their belief.

Those who believe the founding of Israel is prophecy fulfilled say the hilltop cannot be entrusted to Muslims. The Israelis "go against their own Scriptures if they don't (keep the mount)," said David Parsons, spokesman for the International Christian Embassy, a staunchly pro-Israeli group.

History proves the volatility of the site, which Israel left in the Palestinians' day-to-day control when it took east Jerusalem in the 1967 war.

In 1929, when Jews raised the blue-and-white flag of the Zionist movement at the Western Wall, the 1 1/2 weeks of rioting that followed killed 133 Jews and 116 Arabs. In 1996, Israel's opening of a tunnel just outside the compound sparked riots that killed 58 Palestinians and 15 Israelis.

It was right-wing Likud opposition leader Ariel Sharon's Sept. 28 visit to the compound, in the center of a phalanx of Israeli police, that touched off the current Israeli-Palestinian clashes.

Adnan Husseini, the Noble Sanctuary's chief guardian, says Palestinians are prepared to deal forcefully with any future attempt on the shrine: "The variety of ways by which the extremists have tried to harm the shrine has deepened our ability to contain any attacks," Husseini said. "Now we are experts."

Though only a small minority of Israelis actively anticipate rebuilding of the Temple, Gorenberg noted "the power of the symbol that works below the surface" on a much wider circle.

In early January, a rally against President Clinton's Temple Mount proposal drew an estimated 200,000 Israelis to the walls of the Old City — one of Jerusalem's largest gatherings in modern times.

"Everyone, from the black-hatted Orthodox Jew, to any one of the hundreds of other kinds of people on the other side of the spectrum, has woken up to this," said Joel Fogel, a New York-born religious student. He was drawn to the Old City's Jewish Quarter, where believers have assembled an array of religious items — including flax robes woven for the priests and lyres carved for the temple music —to await the eventual rebuilding of the Temple.

"The feeling is that the time is very near," said Eliamou, a guide at the Temple Mount Institute, where these items are being assembled.

To Gorenberg, people who dismiss the power of those beliefs risk a mistake that's been made too many times — as in Waco, Texas, where, before the fatal Branch Davidian compound inferno erupted, David Koresh's fixation on the Apocalypse was dismissed by some officials as "Bible babble."

Any lasting Mideast peace deal will have to take views on Jerusalem's hilltop shrine into account, and on their terms, Gorenberg says.

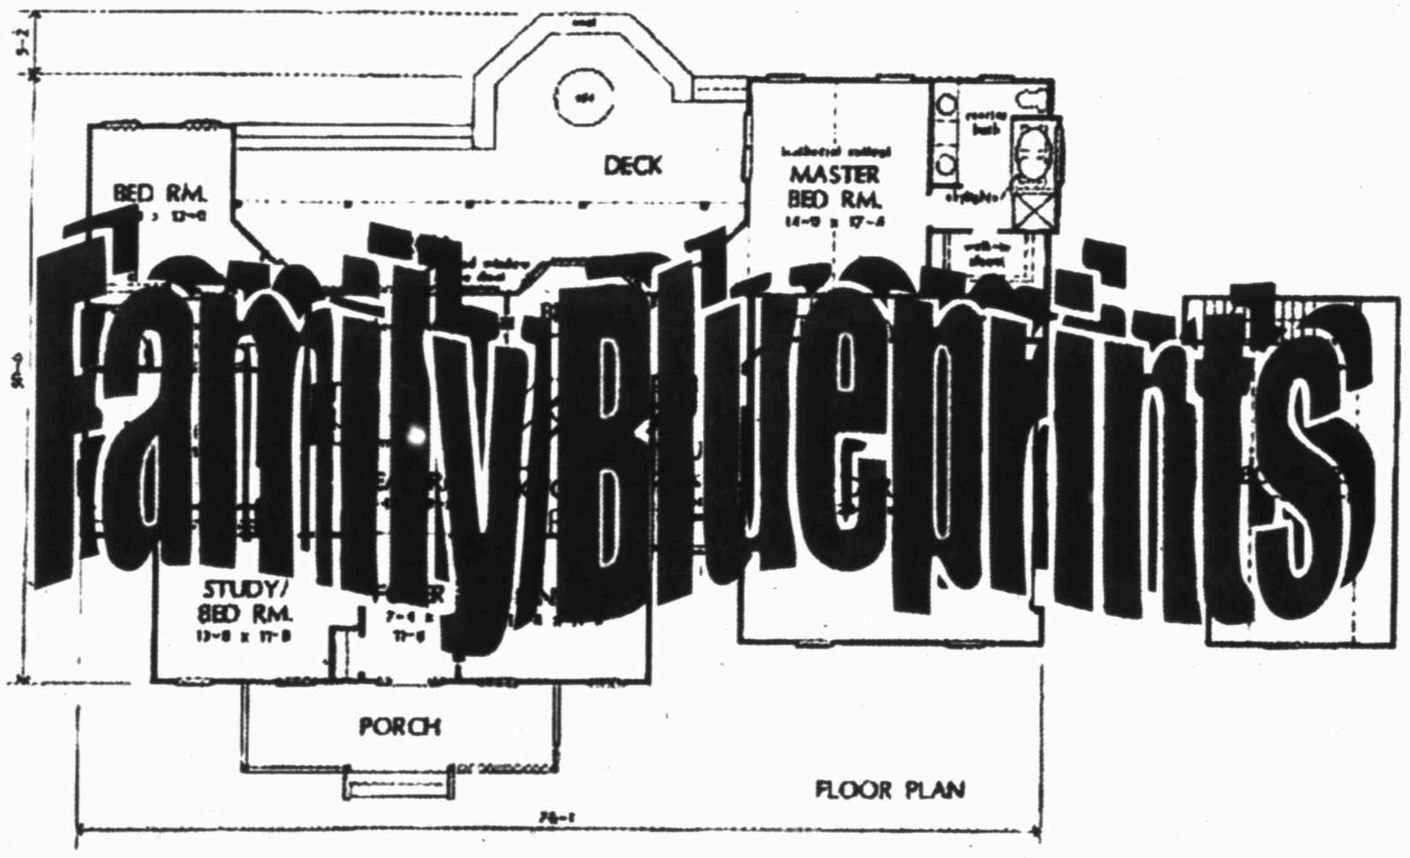

"You (could) declare it to be under divine sovereignty," Gorenberg said, citing one proposal. "And then each side can say, 'Well! I won! — It belongs to God. And, obviously, my God.'"

Kelly Ripa could fill Kathie Lee's shoes on Live With Regis

NEW YORK — Could someone be filling Kathie Lee's old chair permanently?

Published reports on Friday said Kelly Ripa of the soap opera "All My Children" will join Regis Philbin as the new co-host of "Live With Regis." They said the announcement could come as early as Monday.

"Live" spokeswoman Debbie Dolins couldn't say whether there will be an announcement on Monday, or even whether Ripa is a finalist for Kathie Lee Gifford's old job.

"We can't confirm anything yet," Dolins said Friday.

Ripa has filled in as co-host several times since September, and announced during a guest spot in November that she's pregnant. She's played Hayley Santos since 1990 on the ABC drama, for which she has been nominated twice for a daytime Emmy.

Gifford bantered with Philbin on "Live With Regis & Kathie Lee" for 15 years before leaving last July. Several women have been mentioned as possible replacements, including CNBC financial reporter Maria Bartiromo and Philbin's wife, Joy.

NEW YORK — After helping the Baltimore Ravens knock off the New York Giants in the Super Bowl, Tony Siragusa knocked 'em dead in the Big Apple.

The jovial, 343-pound defensive lineman made David Letterman's audience roar with laughter as he made fun of his own girth and took a few good-natured jabs at the "Late Show" host on Thursday.

The hoots began right after "Goose" was introduced. As Paul Shaffer's band played Toto's "Hold the Line," Siragusa made a face when he found a tight fit in the armchair on the set. Letterman responded "Holy Cow! Easy, easy!"

Always a jokester in the Ravens' locker room, Siragusa poked fun at himself after the TV audience saw a clip of him piling on top of Oakland Raiders quarterback Rich Gannon, a hit that drew a $10,000 fine.

"Is that you there, No. 98?" Letterman asked.

"Yeah, I know it's hard to see me, I look a lot skinnier in person," Siragusa shot back.

ROME — Filming was suspended on the set of the upcoming Leonardo DiCaprio movie "Gangs of New York" after a horse-drawn carriage tipped over, injuring three extras.

The publicist for the 19th-century period drama, directed by Martin Scorsese and co-starring Cameron Diaz, said it appeared the injuries on Thursday were not serious. "It was decided out of respect for them to suspend the day's shooting," publicist Larry Kaplan said.

One Italian news agency said DiCaprio became angry at paparazzi who took pictures of the accident and pelted them with horse manure. Another news agency reported both incidents but made no connection between them.

Kaplan refused to discuss DiCaprio, and the actor's spokesman in New York, Ken Sunshine, said all he knew was that "Mr. DiCaprio was on his way to the hospital to visit the victims of the accident."

Two women and a young girl were injured while shooting in the Villa Borghese park in central Rome.

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii — Prosecutors want a judge to set aside a court-approved agreement that allows for the dismissal of a marijuana-possession case against pop star Whitney Houston if she meets certain conditions.

The Hawaii County prosecutor's office says Houston did not submit a substance-abuse assessment in time for a hearing Thursday to determine whether she has complied with the agreement.

Houston, who did not attend the hearing, pleaded no contest through her attorneys Nov. 2 to promoting a detrimental drug in the third degree. The offense is punishable by up to 30 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The petty misdemeanor charge stemmed from a Jan. 11, 2000, incident at the Big Island's Keahole-Kona International Airport. A security guard took Houston's handbag, and police reported it contained half an ounce of marijuana.

At the November hearing, Houston was granted a deferred acceptance of no-contest plea, meaning the charge against her would be dismissed in three months if she paid $1,000 to the state and a $25 "criminal injury" fee; made a $3,000 donation to the group Big Island Wave Riders Against Drugs; and submitted a substance-abuse assessment.

NEW YORK — Jessica Simpson is only 20, but the pop singer admits she's had some "diva moments."

Simpson tells CosmoGIRL!, on newsstands Monday, that with people making a fuss over her all the time, it's hard to stay true to herself.

"I've definitely had my diva moments where I hate my outfit because my stomach's hanging out over my pants or my butt looks big. I'll blow up at people," Simpson said. "But I'm not some ... machine. I'm human."

In the article, Simpson talks about her shyness — and her upcoming album.

And Simpson realizes that her second record could make or break her.

"I'm right there ready to explode. ... Or I could go pfffffft. No one could ever hear from me again."

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Feb. 3, 2001:

Communication remains key this year. Don't get frustrated if you have to reiterate something. Sign up for a class to help you express yourself more effectively. Your intuition strengthens over the next several months. Use your experience with money. Allow your circle of friends to expand. Loved ones and children could get on your nerves. Is it you, or is it them? Learn stress busters, and relationships will benefit. If you are single, do not attempt to turn a friendship into a love relationship. Someone special will come to you this year. If you are attached, ask for your sweetie's help in working through pressure. Develop more understanding. GEMINI is fun to hang out with.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Rushing around will get you nowhere. A significant person might not agree to a purchase. Ultimately, you're likely to appreciate that you didn't make it. Moderation is the key word. Possible compromise with a female is in the offing. Tonight: Make love, not war.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Another's career can keep you from expressing your individuality. Don't take what a friend says personally; this person values your opinion. You'd like to learn more, but not today. Be patient. Tonight: A little chocolate won't hurt.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Chatter surrounds you. Is someone planning a wedding or an important occasion? You might be inclined to jump in and take charge. Keep your emotions in check if communication gets muddled. You are more expansive than usual. Tonight: Go with the flow.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★ Contacts with friends can be off the mark, or maybe you just can't reach them. Your patience is being tested. Don't let children annoy you. There is plenty of time to set goals for the future. Curb your strong determination and seek out answers now. Tonight: Relax in a hot tub or a bubble bath.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Someone in your life needs attention or assistance. As a result, how you see this person could change. Schedule your day lightly to avoid being annoyed by interruptions. A young person might have a good idea. Tonight: Where you are, the party is.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Deal with those in charge. You might need to fine-tune a moneymaking idea, or you might need additional information in order to make a decision. Organizational efforts work well at home as long as you are the one making the effort, but leave time for conversation. Tonight: Opt for a romantic novel.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ There could be a delay in vacation plans due to finances. Try to come up with solutions. Romantic curves occur, whether you want them to or not. Is your hobby satisfying, or should you try something new? Tonight: Mellow out with a favorite activity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ You have little control over what is going on at home. There is either not enough clarity or you just don't have the energy. Get into exercise or a physical activity. Someone close to you can benefit from your resourcefulness. Tonight: Relax with a favorite pal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ A secret pops out. Be sure to verify information. Discussions with your partner can be productive, but don't drag it out. Create more fun together. Make your point another day. You can only control yourself — forget about others. Tonight: Let another call the shots.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ You might want to purchase a computer game or maybe even a new computer. You might not be sure the price is worth it. After you've spent the day talking, enjoy the peace and quiet at home. An old friend might be thinking of contacting you. Tonight: Popcorn and a video.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ What's the new look you want? Think carefully before you take the plunge. A new house or a remodeling project might be on your mind. Expect a blast from your past sometime in the next few weeks. Be easygoing, and get into a favorite activity or pastime. Tonight: Let plans flip-flop. Do what you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Visualize. Don't limit your ideas. Someone might want to treat you to lunch or a movie. If a family member asks for your advice, give him assistance without being wishy-washy. Consider options to deal with an aggravating person. Tonight: Introduce yourself to a Harry Potter book.

HOW TO WRITE A CLASSIFIED AD THAT WORKS!

❶ Promote Your Merchandise - The more descriptive you are the more likely your merchandise will appeal to someone.

❷ Check The Market Value - The most common mistake that occurs is over or under pricing your goods.

❸ Always Include The Price - People are more likely to respond when they know the price range.

❹ Keyword Your Ad - Begin each ad with the name of the item, such as "Stove" or "Guitar" rather than "Kenmore" or "Gibson", "Ford 1997" instead of "1997 Ford", or by its key reference point, such as location or area in real estate ads..

2001 FORD F-250 Super Duty pickup truck

Powerful service

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Revolutionizing the heavy-duty pickup truck market when it debuted in 1998 as a 1999 model, the Ford Super Duty F-Series has reached a milestone with the production of one million units in two short years. As the undisputed truck leader, Ford has left nothing to chance, designing, developing, and building more variations from its several truck platforms than any other truck maker.

The blue oval's Super Duty truck family consists of the following models: F-250, 350, 450, 550, 650 and its over the top, brawny 750 for serious industrial applications.

Borrowing the space and comfort attributes from the Lincoln Town Car, the ruggedness of the F-350 Super Duty is joined to the ease, versatility, and weight hauling capabilities of the F-250 Super Duty, this unique truck model is making waves like no other.

Built in the automaker's Louisville, Ky., manufacturing complex, the F-250 Super Duty pickup truck is available in two- or four-wheel drive, short (6 3/4 ft) or long (8 ft) cargo box, and five wheelbases ranging from 137.0 to 172.4 inches. Cab configurations include Regular, SuperCab and four-door Crew Cab. Available model offerings are XL, XLT and Lariat.

Powerplant options include: the base 5.4L Triton V-8, 6.8L Triton V-10 and a 7.3L Power Stroke V-8 turbo diesel. Power is transferred to the pavement through either the standard M5HD five-speed manual or ($1095) optional 4R100 four-speed automatic transmission. The Power Stroke turbo diesel comes standard with a M6OD six-speed manual transmission.

On the road, the V-10 engine/four-speed automatic and 4x4 running gear do not hamper the ride. In fact, this large truck is very easy to drive down long expanses of Midwestern interstate. Quiet, comfortable and fast, one can almost forget this Super Duty is designed to be a truck for commercial applications.

In the cabin, displays and control are straightforward and functional. There are several "power points" to plug in additional electrical equipment, such as cellular phones and laptop computers. The driver's view of the road is good, enhanced by a novel "cut away" side window design.

The leather 40/20/40 bench seat in the Lariat model is very comfortable. The standard four-door configuration of the Crew Cab makes access to the rear bench as convenient as climbing into the back seat of a large sedan.

2001 TOYOTA Sequoia SUV

The New Standard

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Big news from Toyota! The automaker is introducing its first mainstream, full-size sport utility vehicle to the American market. Designed to fill a key product and price position between the 4Runner and upscale Land Cruiser, the new SUV is larger than the Land Cruiser, complementing the automaker's SUV lineup with the size, features, performance and pricing currently in high demand by American families.

Built in Toyota's new Princeton, Ind., assembly plant alongside the Tundra pickup, the Sequoia boasts a US/Canadian content of 60 percent. Just 40 percent of the vehicle's content -- primarily the engine and transmission components -- is sourced from Japan. Buyers can choose two- or four-wheel drive configurations and SR5 or Limited models.

The large Toyota SUV is powered by a robust 4.7L i-Force V-8 engine, modified for this application from the Tundra pickup. Torque is delivered to the road through a four-speed ECT automatic gearbox. A five-speed transmission is not offered.

According to the automaker, the Sequoia was developed, designed and built to meet the unique demands of the American market. With exterior dimensions that place it between the Chevrolet Tahoe and Ford Expedition, the Toyota Sequoia has a ground clearance of 10.6 inches for outstanding off-road capability.

American motorists will not be disappointed with this latest offering. On road performance is powerful, smooth and oh-so-quiet! The prime mover is responsive and willing at all times.

Sequoia features two important electronically controlled systems as standard equipment that contribute to the high level of performance and driver convenience -- Vehicle Skid Control (VSC) and Traction Control (TRAC)/Active Traction Control (A-TRAC).

VSC helps maintain cornering stability in situations where the vehicle could lose traction and skid sideways. The system senses when too much steering input is applied while the vehicle is traveling over poor-traction road surfaces such as loose dirt, pooled water, or ice. The system automatically reduces engine output and independently applies braking power as necessary to each of the four wheels to help maintain vehicle stability and driver control.

The traction control systems -- TRAC/two-wheel drive and A-TRAC/four-wheel drive, works by using the same wheel sensors employed by VSC, applying brake pressure to each driving wheel independently to maintain wheel traction on slippery surfaces.

Inside the cabin, the Sequoia is roomy and very comfortable. Wide doors facilitate access along with two hand grips and running boards to facilitate entry and exit. Outward visibility is excellent. Displays and controls are world class.

For those who desire plenty of cupholders, the Sequoia is heaven. There is some serious storage space throughout the cabin to stow a family's worth of gear. Second and third row passengers also get the star treatment -- leg room abounds.

The second row seats are 60/40 split/fold/recline and tumble. The third row 50/50 split seats are also fold/recline and tumble. They can also slide forward and back to adjust either passenger leg room or rear cargo area.

One novel feature of note -- the rear window goes up and down electronically -- unlike the fixed glass configurations of most SUVs currently in the market.
