California blues

LOS ANGELES — Southern Californians need an attitude adjustment: Foul weather blues infected the psyche during nearly a month of rain, tans have faded and mud sullies the usually sun-toasted shores. There's a longing for barbecues, barefoot strolls, bicycle rides, tank tops and bare midriffs; yard sale treasure hunts; a buffeting drive in a convertible. Seasonal Affective Disorder, sunlight deprivation, cabin fever, whatever the experts call it, most agree sunshine is the needed elixir for this sun-crazy proletariat./6A

Former President Bush to visit city

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

Former President Bush is planning to attend the annual Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame induction ceremony in April.

Bobby Holt, a personal friend of Bush and a musem board member, confirmed that the former president will be a guest at the Petroleum Museum Hall of Fame Banquet, scheduled for April 19 at the Petroleum Club.

Holt said Bush was excited about helping honor the inductees. Three of them, Bill and Hugh Leidtke and Odessan Mac O. Boring Jr., are personal friends of the former president.

Bush said he was very "caring and sensitive" about the museum and that it was one of his favorite places to visit, according to a statement released by Holt.

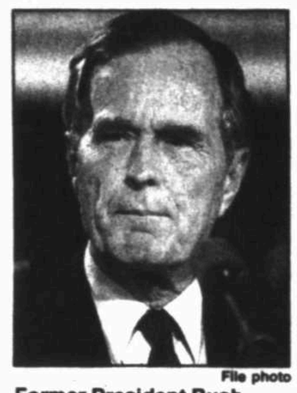

Bush — who was inducted into the hall in 1991 — is not expected to be a speaker at the ceremony.

Bush last visited Midland during the 1992 presidential campaign. During that stop he made a speech at the museum.

Bush and his friends, the late Bill Leidtke, his brother, Hugh — both oil and gas lawyers — and John Overbey, formed a partnership in 1953 that would become the springboard for outstanding political and business careers, said Betty Orbeck, museum archivist.

House approves balanced budget by 300-132 vote

■ Measure would prevent federal government from spending more money than it takes in.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a striking triumph for the new Republican majority, the House voted strong approval Thursday night for a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution designed to eliminate chronic federal deficits.

The 300-132, bipartisan endorsement was 12 more than the two-thirds majority needed to send the measure to the Senate.

Supporters expressed confidence that they also would prevail there, despite the likelihood of a protracted battle later this winter, and would ultimately send the measure to the states for a final ratification drive.

Loud cheers erupted in the chamber when Speaker Newt Gingrich, architect of last fall's GOP election sweep in the House, announced the results of a preliminary roll call that demonstrated sufficient support to pass the measure.

The vote came little more than three weeks after Republicans took control of the House and launched a 100-day effort to implement their conservative "Contract With America," with its promise of lower taxes and less government.

After the House approved the amendment, Gingrich called it a bipartisan,

Stanton program sports youngsters' skills

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

STANTON — The action scene is more than enough to make a parent proud: youngsters thoroughly enjoying the skills of basketball without fretting over who wins or who loses.

They all are winners as long as they play the game: Players In Progress, or PIP.

Eight-year-old Karyn Cook, who is adept at dribbling the ball in acrobatic positions, flung her petite body into a couple of cartwheels as if she were going to bounce from the gymnasium floor into the hoop and basket.

"That's my little girl," said Stanton farmer Kenneth Cook during a session Wednesday night. His daughter, who is into tap dancing and jazz dancing, said she can keep up with the bouncing ball while doing cartwheels, "but it's not easy."

Her brother, Keith Cook, 12, finds ball games, and especially ball handling, appealing.

"I like football and basketball," he said. "That's all, pretty much."

The appeal of PIP is in teaching children — ages 5 through 12, or from kindergarten through the sixth grade — eye and hand coordination in honing skills, and especially in building up their confidence.

"It's not really a competition

O.J. trial adjourns after bitter clashes

■ Jurors in legal limbo; judge might rule tody on prosecution's request for 30-day continuance, sanctions against the defense.

By Adam Pertman
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — America's best-watched court melodrama degenerated Thursday into sarcasm, name-calling, allegations of "gross" misconduct and a sweeping accusation by prosecutors that proposed defense witnesses included "heroin addicts, thieves, felons and . . . the only person I have ever known to be a court-certified pathological liar."

As a result, the prosecutors asked Judge Lance Ito to impose extraordinary sanctions against O.J. Simpson's lawyers: first, to admonish jurors that the defense had committed "egregious" errors during its opening remarks, and then, either strike the offending sections from the record or, in an unprecedented action, allow the prosecution to reopen its opening statement.

The prosecutors also sought a delay in the trial, which Ito sounded disinclined to grant. They made the request because one of their col-

Fifty years later, Auschwitz survivors fight fear to return

OSWIECIM, Poland (AP) — A half century later, it was as if the unburied dead of Auschwitz-Birkenau were talking back to the living through Moshe Stern.

His voice soaring in unbridled anger, the Israeli cantor's prayer for the dead recalled the boys and girls "killed, destroyed, expunged by the Nazis and their helpers."

They were the aunts and uncles that Rivkah Young never met. They were the 33 members of Blanche Major's family taken away on July 7, 1944, and sent to the cyanide showers. They were, by the time the Nazis were done, 1.5 million brothers, sisters, mothers and fathers.

Fifty years after Soviet soldiers liberated Auschwitz, the world Jewish community was holding a ceremony of its own at the world's biggest Jewish graveyard, a place where human ashes still linger in fields and ponds.

The main commemorations are planned for today. But they were organized chiefly by President Lech Walesa's office, and many Jews felt they did not adequately reflect Auschwitz's symbolism as the Holocaust's chief charnel house.

About 300 people attended Thursday's separate ceremony: mostly Jews, but also Gypsy survivors of Auschwitz-Birkenau and other concentration camps. People who were tortured, starved, humiliated and still feel fear.

German President Roman Herzog, a boy during World War II, was the only head of state. He wore the same dark suit and fedora as the German Jewish leaders he accompanied. He barely spoke, pain etched on his face.

Walesa spoke earlier Thursday in Krakow at Jagiellonian University, where 184 professors were seized by the Nazis in November 1939 and deported to Sachsenhausen, a concentration camp just outside Berlin.

Never once, however, did he utter the word "Jews."

Some Jewish leaders ignored the university ceremony, including the president of the European Jewish Congress, Jean Kahn, and Elie Wiesel, the Nobel Peace Prize winner who headed the U.S. delegation.

Likewise, no official Polish representative attended the Jewish observance, where Kahn accused Walesa's office of organizing "a nationalist celebration" that diminished the Holocaust's Jewish dimension.

But prominent Jews including Wiesel, an Auschwitz survivor, were determined to mend relations with Poles and none suggested a boycott of today's main ceremony.

Wiesel and Israeli Knesset Speaker Shevach Weiss said they met with Walesa and agreed that a peace declaration to be released at the main ceremony would acknowledge Jews were the main target of the Nazi genocide plan symbolized by Auschwitz.

Nine in 10 of the 1.5 million people killed at the largest Nazi camp complex — people gassed, starved, clubbed, hung, shot, worked to death in outlying armaments and chemical plants — were Jews.

But half of them were Polish Jews, and Auschwitz was initially built for Polish opponents of the Nazis — who were intent on eradicating Poland as a state and settling it with the Aryan race.

After the war, Communist authorities in Poland understated the extent of Jewish suffering under the Nazis. Bad feelings and misunderstanding still linger between many Polish Catholics and Jews.

At Auschwitz-Birkenau on Thursday, wrinkled survivors leaned on canes or sat down on mounds of earth and tried to steel themselves against horrific memories.

Israeli soldiers block settlers' tries to expand two settlements

MAALEH AMOS, West Bank (AP) — Jewish settlers tried to expand two small West Bank settlements Thursday by moving bulldozers and caravans to nearby hilltops, but were blocked by the army.

The move came a day after the Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's government approved new construction in West Bank settlements near Jerusalem, but said the building freeze for the rest of the West Bank remained intact.

Settler leaders complained that Rabin was trying to suffocate the settlements in order to appease the Palestinians.

"It is important that the settlers take the initiative and protect their land so they can expand," said Uri Uriel, a spokesman of the Settlers Council that represents 144 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Thursday's maneuverings were the latest in a month-old settler campaign to claim land before the second phase of the Israel-PLO autonomy plan is implemented and Israeli troops withdraw from large areas of the West Bank.

Palestinian leaders, meanwhile, repeated warnings that continued construction jeopardized the Israel-PLO autonomy talks.

"We will confront the expansion of settlement because it violates all our agreements with Israel. It will destroy the whole peace process," said Zakaria el-Agha, Housing Minister for the PLO-run autonomy government in Gaza.

Palestinians said they would stage protests to block further expansion attempts, but would try to avoid confrontations with the Israeli army.

Israeli officials tried to allay Palestinian fears, saying the scope of construction was limited.

"The government of Israel will not establish new settlements, will not expand settlements and will not expropriate land for settlements," Uri Savir, director-general of the Foreign Ministry, told reporters.

Settlers at this outpost eight miles south of Bethlehem had set up trailers on three surrounding hilltops, prompting dozens of angry Palestinians from a nearby village to rushed over and say the land was theirs.

Soldiers asked them to disperse and promised to remove the trailers.

Shilo Gal, a settler leader, said the trailers were on land allocated to Maaleh Amos for future construction and were placed there to ensure that it wasn't taken away.

Military spokeswoman Maj. Elise Shazar said two of the trailers were beyond the settlement boundaries and would be removed. The third could remain because it was on settlement land, she said.

In a separate incident, two bulldozers plowed a dirt path on a barren hill south of Kochav Yaakov, a settlement just beyond Jerusalem's northern edge, early Thursday. Settlers planted pine saplings as a symbol of ownership.

Soldiers ordered the work halted after army officials said it had not been approved. By mid-morning, the bulldozers were gone and only an Israeli flag could be seen stuck in the ground.

• Dynamic cushioning works by controlling airflow from the heel chamber to the forefoot chamber, through a channel. As the heel strikes the ground the heel chamber is compressed, forcing the air forward to the forefoot chamber. When you "toe off" the forefoot chamber forces air back to the heel. This movement of air gives extraordinary comfort to a walker.

• During long periods of sustained standing, dynamic cushioning stimulates circulation and helps reduce fatigue.

Shelling of Chechen capital traps Russian mothers in city

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russian artillery shells rained down on the southern fringe of the Chechen capital Thursday, trapping Russian mothers searching for their soldier sons and prompting some of Grozny's last residents to flee.

The mothers arrived in Grozny earlier this week, and were staying in an abandoned apartment building on the southernmost edge of the city. The neighborhood had been one of the few untouched by the massive firepower Russia has unleashed on the Chechen capital.

Officials in the neighboring region of Ingushetia said they sent in buses to evacuate the group of about 40 Russian women. But as night fell, there was no word of their fate.

A second group of mothers tried but failed to enter Grozny from the Russian-held side of the city north of the Sunzha River, which has become the front line in the brutal, nearly month-long siege of Grozny.

Russian troops also shelled and rocketed surrounding villages Thursday, igniting a huge fire in an oil storage terminal a few miles south of the capital and sending missiles crashing into a Russian border guard post.

According to Russian news agencies, Russian aircraft mistook the post near the village of Alkun in Ingushetia for a Chechen stronghold. One soldier was wounded in the attack.

Chechen officials said their fighters had pushed Russian troops out of some positions in the center of Grozny and retaken the railroad station. Their forces have the ammunition, strength and fortified positions to defend the capital for a long time, they added.

"No one is going to give away the city," Chechen spokesman Movladi Udugov told the Interfax news agency. "The war in and around Chechnya is only starting to gain momentum."

Russian President Boris Yeltsin said during a visit to the central Russian city of Lipetsk that his government is working to end the Chechnya crisis.

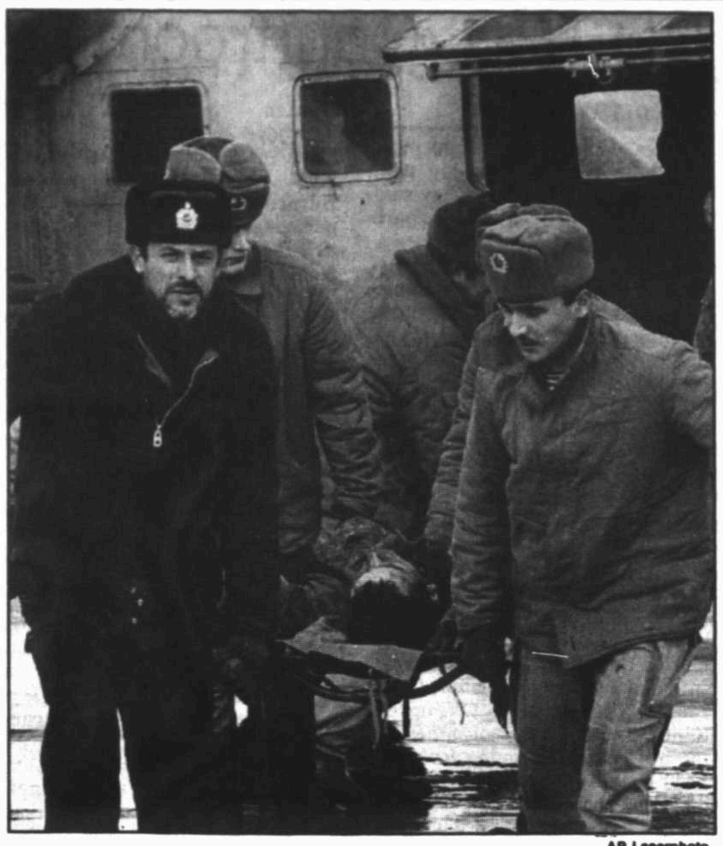

"We take it close to heart and are using all efforts to solve the Chechen conflict in a peaceful way," he told Lipetsk residents. It was the first time he had ventured outside Moscow since the war began on Dec. 11, when Russian forces entered Chechnya trying to end the tiny, mostly Muslim republic's bid for independence.

The war has provoked a bitter public outcry throughout Russia and the Soldiers' Mothers group is in the forefront of opposition to the conflict.

It has worked hard to arrange prisoner exchanges. One occurred Thursday on the border of Dagestan and Chechnya, where 34 Russians were handed over in exchange for 43 Chechens.

Russia's Federal Counterintelligence Service claimed to have freed anothr 34 Russian POWs in a secret operation Thursday, Interfax reported.

Several groups of mothers have come to the embattled Chechen capital, braving the Russian assault to try to find out if their sons are alive or dead, wounded or POWs.

Satellite explosion may slow Asian broadcasting, not end it

HONG KONG (AP) — The flames that engulfed a U.S.-made commercial satellite over China on Thursday may slow Asia's television revolution, but broadcasters say it doesn't mean Chinese launchers are riskier than Western ones.

With a footprint from Siberia to Australia, the Apstar-2 offered a sweeping yet cheaper alternative to less powerful satellites crowding Asia's skies.

"Apstar-2 was to provide a convenient one-stop shop," said Paul France, chief executive of Asia Business News, one of a dozen broadcasters which leased transmitters on the satellite.

An explosion destroyed the Hughes-made satellite and its Chinese-built Long March carrier rocket 65 seconds after launch from the Xichang Satellite Launching Center in southwest China. The cause was not immediately known.

Broadcasters, eager to tap Asia's growing middle class, said it would force them to adjust or delay plans to expand. But none said it would halt Asia's satellite revolution.

The explosion "may somewhat retard development, but not for very long," said Kevin-john McIntyre, general manager of Discovery Channel Asia. It's "a bump in the road, not a roadblock," he said.

But it was a setback for China's rocket program, which since its first international commercial launch in 1990 has billed itself as a cheaper alternative to more established Western rivals.

In December 1992, an Australian-owned satellite disappeared after taking off on a Long March rocket. A blast at the Xichang site that killed a worker in April 1994 dealt a further blow to the reputation of China's launch program.

Brian Jeffries, who edits Asia Pacific Space Report, said the rocket used in 1992 and on Thursday was a Long March 2E, which has "a checkered career" and is "now going to have a reputation as a fairly dubious rocket."

Jeffries said China must restore confidence by thoroughly investigating and making public what went wrong.

WEATHER WATCH

Skirt alert: High winds due in

Staff Report

Women, there's a "skirt alert" on tap for today, as the National Weather Service has issued a high wind watch through tonight, according to a forecaster at Midland International Airport.

He said the wind watch — which means that gusts "could be better than 50 mph" — may last until the late evening. The windy conditions will probably bring a little dust in the air, too, the forecaster said.

The winds today will be from the west 30-40 mph and gusty by afternoon. The forecast also calls for partly cloudy skies and a high in the lower 60s, according to the forecaster.

Tonight calls for partly cloudy skies and breezy with a low in the mid-30s.

Saturday also should be partly cloudy and breezy with a high in the upper 50s.

After an overnight low of 45, Thursday's high reached 66, compared to the record high for that date of 81 set in 1953. The record low was 15 set in 1940.

STATE

Clouds blanketed most of Texas on Thursday as heavy showers soaked the state. Temperatures were on the mild side with most North and West Texas readings in the 50s and 60s. South Texas warmed into the 70s while the Panhandle remained in the 40s. Afternoon extremes ranged from 77 degrees at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley to 45 in Dalhart in the northern Panhandle.

The rain was triggered by the collision of colder air moving into the state from the West with moist southerly breezes from the Gulf of Mexico, forecasters said. Winds were generally from the south or southeast at 5 to 15 miles an hour.

NATION

The storm that soaked Southern California for three days moved eastward Thursday, dumping snow and rain on parts of Nevada, Utah and Arizona.

Heavy snow fell across the mountains of southern Nevada and northern Utah, and in parts of eastern Nevada.

Minor flooding struck central Arizona. Wickenburg got at least 2 inches of rain, while Payson, Congress and Cordes Junction got more than an inch.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

leagues, William Hodgman, was hospitalized late Wedneday with chest pains and because they said they needed more time to prepare for the new witnesses.

Ito said he would rule on the motions as early as this afternoon. He told the defense it could finish its opening statement — which was delayed by Thursday's fight over the conduct of Simpson's lawyers — on Monday morning.

"It's a trial by ambush, that's the strategy," said deputy district attorney Marcia Clark. She said that even if Ito takes tough action against the defense, "it may not be enough, because the damage is indelible."

The jurors heard none of this.

They had been brought into a holding room to wait for the conclusion of an opening statement from defense lawyer Johnnie Cochran. But they did not get the opportunity. The day was consumed by the prosecutors' arguing for sanctions because the defense had not disclosed some of its witnesses, as the law requires, and for having included material from those witnesses in Cochran's opening remarks a day earlier.

"Tell the jury to disregard it and ignore it, tell the jury that the defense, the dream team, America's finest defense attorneys, tell the jury that these lawyers have committed misconduct, they have deceived the court, and that they have violated the basic and fundamental rules ... and that they have impinged upon the people's right to a fair trial," said Christopher Darden, a deputy district attorney.

His voice sometimes rising in anger, sometimes sounding snide, Darden repeatedly referred disparagingly to Simpson's lawyers as "the dream team," and once called the former football star "the dream defendant."

One by one, Darden described about a dozen witnesses the defense had only disclosed a day earlier, either in writing or during Cochran's opening comments. The law mandates that each side give the other, "in timely fashion," the names of witnesses, statements and other materials they intend to use.

Darden raised eyebrows with an allegation regarding a Los Angeles businesswoman named Mary Anne Gerghas. Cochran told the jury on Wednesday that she would give testimony damaging to the prosecution in two ways: by saying she had seen four suspicious-looking men running from the area of Nicole Brown Simpson's home the night she and Ronald Goldman were killed; and by asserting that she was told the case was "all wrapped up" when she tried unsuccessfully to relate the purported incident to law-enforcement officials.

Darden said that, in 24 hours since learning about her, authorities had learned Gerghas has nine lawsuits pending against her. He said those involved about $10,000 in bad checks and an allegation that she defrauded the J.W. Marriott Corp. of $23,000 by not paying for hotel stays.

Even more intriguing was the prosecution's assertion, without explanation, that Gerchas may not be "the person she claims to be ... she is not the real Mary Anne Gerchas."

Darden also struck out at a would-be defense witness named Christian Riechardt, who reportedly would discuss late-night partying by Nicole and Faye Resnick. Resnick wrote a tell-tale book about their friendship and about Nicole's relationship with Simpson.

Resnick "dumped him and he's out to get her," is how Darden explained Riechardt's appearance on the defense witness list. He said another witness had locked himself in his house when the prosecution tried to serve him with a subpoena, and yet another had told state investigators that he'd heard Simpson say of his former wife: "I'm going to get her, I'm going to teach her a lesson."

Defense attorney Carl Douglas assumed responsibility for the lateness, asserting he had inadvertantly overlooked the documents among the tens of thousands of other he had to deal with. He agreed some punishment might be warranted, but called Darden's accusations "vile, incidious and long-winded."

Cochran then defended both Gerchas and Riechardt, saying they were reliable. He dismissed his opponent's attacks as "histrionics" and said he "didn't come crying" when prosecutors submitted late witness lists to him in December.

For that infraction, Ito prohibited prosecutors from using any material from those witnesses in the prosecution's opening remarks, and said these witnesses could testify only after all others had been called. Darden said that punishment had "gutted" the part of the state's case alleging Simpson exhibited a pattern of spousal abuse.

Ito made it clear he believes some action should be taken against the defense now, but acknowledged he could not impose a parallel sanction because Cochran had already alluded to some of his late witnesses and their purported testimony in his opening comments.

The prosecution contended that using questionable information was part of a deliberate attempt to plant doubt in jurors' minds. Prosecutors said that was the major reason the witnesses identities weren't properly disclosed.

"Had we known about some of these witnesses, we could have informed counsel that they are heroin addicts, thieves, felons, and ... one of their so-called witnesses (is) the only person I have ever known to be a court-certified pathological liar," Darden said, thumping his finger on his lectern.

Both Douglas and Cochran sounded indignant when they defended their behavior, and said they were professionals who would never deliberately act dishonestly or unethically.

"I don't have to call anybody a liar," said Cochran, who accused his opponents of being afraid of the truth and of delaying tactics to keep him from finishing his opening statement. "That's the problem with them; they want to label everybody."

SPORTS: Program boosts self-confidence thing," said Gracie Villa, whose 10-year-old daughter, Mickie, is in PIP. "It's learning how to dribble, handle the ball, control the ball, and keeping kids out of trouble. It builds a child's self-esteem."

From 9-year-old Daniel Harris' viewpoint, the sport has the making of success: "It's fun. It's teaching us skills."

"You learn things out of it: spinning the ball on your finger, ball handling, shooting layups," said Kaci Moore, 11.

The children perform such maneuvers as the spider, around the world, drop pass, and star drill.

Mary Hernandez encourages her daughter, Audrey, 8, to participate in PIP.

"She enjoys it; she has fun," Ms. Hernandez said. "She enjoys being with the other kids. It's just not a lot of work; it's a lot of fun."

The PIP program was developed by a Waco-area coaching couple, David and Brenda Land.

"They wanted a program that would teach these kids how to be winners," Leza Smith said.

In PIP, being a winner is persevering, not giving up and taking on a challenge.

"If someone falls down and messes up, they get back up," Mrs. Smith said. "As long as they do their best, their hardest, they can't be losers."

Brenda Kaye Kendall, who also supports the PIP program, said, "It's a boost for their self-esteem."

Mrs. Smith recalled an example of PIP's positive results.

A student who had never made the honor roll changed her study habits and attitude toward learning after she joined the PIP program. Afterward, her name started appearing on the honor roll.

Her mother attributed that accomplishment "to the discipline that we had in the program," Mrs. Smith said. "It helped her self-confidence tremendously." PIP players "get out in front of people" to perform, and that's not easy to do."

The woman encouraged her daughter to complete her homework and do well in school. She wouldn't let her daughter play ball until she completed her daily studies.

While the Stanton youth play ball, spiritual music plays in the background.

"It's jivy spiritual, but that's OK," Mrs. Kendall said.

"But can you imagine dribbling the ball to 'The Old Rugged Cross'?" said minister Steve McLean.

About 40 youngsters are in Stanton's volunteer program.

"It's just all about kids improving themselves," McLean said. "It's simply building confidence." And hopefully the children's efforts are backed by supportive parents who help their children grown physically, mentally, spiritually, and emotionally.

"If they want competition they can get it," McLean said. "They will have competition for the rest of their lives."

VOTE: House OKs balanced-budget measure

(From 1A)

"historic moment for the country," and said newly empowered Republicans had "kept our promise" to the voters.

The White House reacted coolly. "We all want to see a balanced budget," said press spokesman Mike McCurry. "But the president would also like to see the details of how the House would propose to meet this new constitutional requirement." Clinton has no formal say in the amendment, since it would go directly from Congress to the states.

Before the final vote, Democrats failed in an effort to force Republicans to unveil a detailed program of spending cuts, and failed again in a politically enticing attempt to exempt Social Security from spending reductions in the future. Republicans insist they plan no Social Security cuts.

But the Democrats succeeded in thwarting a more severe amendment that would have required three-fifths majority votes in Congress to raise taxes.

Republican Leader Dick Armey of Texas, near the end of the day-long debate, said that as a result of years of deficits, "Each and every one of our children today is endowed with 18,000 dollars of federal debt." Without the amendment, he said, "that indebtedness will grow larger and larger and larger."

Countered Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., "If the Republicans want to decimate Social Security, Medicare and basic community services, let them vote for the balanced-budget amendment. I will not."

The measure received the support of 228 of the House's 230 Republicans, and 72 Democrats — more than a third of those voting. Among them was Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas., a veteran of past legislative wars, who noted wryly that the Republican leadership was far more cooperative than the Democratic majority had been of budget-balancing efforts.

Two Republicans — first termers Mark Souder and John Hostettler, both of Indiana — as well as 129 Democrats were opposed, as was the House's lone independent, Rep. Bernard Sanders of Vermont.

Among those in the opposition was Democratic Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri, who had earlier branded the series of roll calls "the most important votes we will cast here in our service in the Congress, no matter how long we've been here or how long we will stay."

The measure calls for a balanced budget beginning in 2002, or two years after ratification by three-quarters of the states. It requires a three-fifths vote in both houses to run a deficit thereafter. A similar three-fifths vote would be required to increase the federal debt, which now approaches $4.7 trillion.

In the Senate, West Virginia Democrat Robert C. Byrd seemed ready to lead a last-ditch effort to derail the measure. GOP aides said the debate may consume three weeks or more, but expressed confidence that they could produce the two-thirds majority needed to send the measure to the states.

Earlier in the day, House Democrats blocked passage of a tougher measure that contained the precise language in the GOP's campaign "Contract With America." That amendment would have added a requirement that a three-fifths majority of both houses of Congress approve any increase in taxes.

The vote was 253-173 — 31 short of the two-thirds necessary for approval — and Republicans instantly sought political advantage.

With 220 of the House's 230 Republicans voting for it, but only 33 of 204 Democrats, Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas., said, "The problem's not on the Republican side."

After meeting privately with Gingrich, several members of the 73-person class of GOP freshmen said the leadership would schedule a House vote on April 15, 1996 — income tax day — on a separate proposed constitutional amendment that would require a three-fifths vote of both houses to raise taxes. That would require lawmakers to vote on a politically appealing proposal heading into the 1996 election season.

The move was part of a GOP leadership strategy to assure the support of both tax-limitation groups and the huge, rambunctious class of first-term GOP lawmakers reluctant to embrace a balanced-budget amendment without the tax provision contained in the "Contract With America."

The daylong debate was politically charged.

"American families know that trying to get Democrats to quit spending taxpayer dollars is like trying to knock hungry buzzards off a meat wagon," said Rep. Bob Goodlatte, R-Va.

Democrats replied that the GOP's proposal would lead to devastating cuts in popular social programs, Medicare and Social Security among them.

drilling many wells in the Permian Basin — later moved to Houston to pursue offshore opportunities and evolved into Zapata Petroleum.

Bush left the oil business in the early 1960s to pursue a career in public service that led to the White House.

The Liedtkes — through a series of successful mergers and acquisitions — built one of the largest independent oil and gas companies in the United States — Pennzoil Corp.

Boring pioneered in the development of the offshore drilling industry by building drilling rigs on platforms. "It is ironic that Boring helped develop the offshore drilling industry from Odessa," Ms. Orbeck said.

Boring, who still lives in Odessa, joins his father in the hall of fame. Mac O. Boring was inducted in 1986. The elder Boring headed the land department for Gulf Oil Co. in the early 1920s and was responsible for acquiring many of the leases that established Gulf Oil Co. as a leading producer in the Permian Basin.

Other pioneers to be inducted into the hall of fame are Paul O. Sill, a Midland rig builder, considered by the industry as a master craftsman in the building of wooden derricks, and Fred A. Wemple, a pioneer Midland oil marketer and civic leader, who served on the Texas Highway Commission and was responsible for building many of the roads in West Texas.

Japan accepts little foreign assistance offered after quake

■ As of Thursday, country had said yes to offers from only 15 countries out of 57.

By Peter Landers
Associated Press

TOKYO — In the nine days since a devastating quake flattened Japan's sixth-largest city, offers of help have poured in from around the world.

Do you need some German engineers? Chinese seismologists? A crack Israeli rescue team? Greek trauma surgeons?

To most of the offers, the government hasn't actually said no. It just hasn't said yes.

As of Thursday, the Foreign Ministry said Japan had only accepted offers of assistance from 15 countries. Fifty-seven countries, plus the United Nations, the European Union and the World Health Organization, have offered aid.

The government's bewilderment at the flood of offers was symbolized in a bizarre midnight press conference given to foreign reporters today by the chief of the disaster division of the National Land Agency, Kazutoshi Ito.

Quite nervously, Ito shouted out his statement on the government's response to the foreign offers, interrupting his interpreter at one point to yell at reporters, "What are you laughing at? Get out of here!"

Ito said each offer of foreign help had to receive the approval of local governments and related ministries. He said the process is "very complicated" and in most cases the local governments have not been able to respond.

That may be unfortunate, because some countries were capable of providing quite extensive aid.

The United States, for example, offered support by its 45,000-strong military force stationed here. Troops stood ready for search and rescue. Planes and ships were available to help transport personnel and supplies. Warehouses bulged with relief goods.

From the United States, Japan has accepted blankets, help setting up 20 tents, water and some plastic sheeting.

"It is extremely unfortunate that we did not reply immediately to the goodwill of foreign governments," said Michihiko Kano, the opposition's spokesman on foreign affairs.

Why the reluctance?

For one thing, Japan has traditionally responded to quakes on its own, and no one foresaw that a quake in the Kobe region could cause such widespread damage. So there was no emergency plan for dealing with foreign offers.

Even now, it remains unclear whether Japan feels that in general foreigners will only get in the way of relief efforts, or whether the devastation is so extensive that Tokyo really does welcome foreign help.

Yet even with more than 5,000 dead and 300,000 homeless from the Jan. 17 temblor, the same bureaucracy that tripped up Japan's own relief efforts snared foreign Good Samaritans in an even more tangled web.

Foreign doctors were let in, then told they couldn't see patients because they didn't have Japanese medical licenses. The government reversed itself a day later after news reports about the snafu.

Certainly foreign help brings along practical problems. Foreign doctors can't do much unless they have Japanese interpreters.

U.S., Vietnam to sign diplomatic relations accord

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — The United States and Vietnam will sign an agreement Saturday that paves the way toward diplomatic relations.

The two former enemies will open liaison offices in one another's capitals almost immediately after the signing, a U.S. official told the Associated Press Thursday.

The last U.S. diplomatic office in Hanoi, a consulate, closed its doors in 1955. The United States withdrew after refusing to recognize the Communist government that replaced the French colonial regime in 1954.

President Clinton lifted the 19-year U.S. economic embargo against Vietnam on Feb. 3, 1994.

The agreement represents de facto diplomatic recognition, and the United States will take possession of a building to house its liaison office after it is signed, the U.S. official in Hanoi said on condition of anonymity.

The U.S. office will likely open Feb. 3, after Vietnam's three-day celebration of Tet, the Lunar New Year festival, he said.

Eleven diplomats have been assigned to the U.S. liaison office in Hanoi to handle consular, political and commercial functions. Their main duty will be to help resolve the cases of the 1,621 U.S. servicemen unaccounted for in Vietnam.

The agreement, to be signed in Hanoi, settles questions about compensation for diplomatic properties seized at the end of the Vietnam War in 1975.

Under the accord, Vietnam will return or pay compensation for 36 U.S. properties, including the former U.S. Embassy building in Saigon, renamed Ho Chi Minh City. The United States will turn over the former South Vietnamese Embassy in Washington.

The two sides initialed the property agreement last month, but postponed a formal signing until final details were resolved.

Crane topples onto high school, kills 6 students

TOUL, France (AP) — A construction crane toppled onto a high school during classes Thursday, killing six students and injuring four other people.

Col. Bernard Modere, head of the rescue team, said the dead students were 17 or 18 years old. Three of the injured were students and the fourth the crane operator, who was seriously injured, Modere said.

The accident, apparently caused by high winds, occurred about 4 p.m. at the Jean-Baptiste Vatelot school, a private high school near the central market in Toul. The town of 17,000 is about 175 miles east of Paris.

The 100-foot crane fell onto the four-story building and collapsed its roof into the third floor, where about 20 students were in class, Modere said. He did not exclude the possibility that other victims could be trapped.

"There was a big gust of wind and the crane fell. I saw it. Everyone panicked," a shopkeeper near the school told French television. "A student came in to telephone. She was completely in shock because she couldn't find her friend."

The bells of the nearby Saint-Etienne Cathedral rang through the town to announce the disaster.

Two die in downtown Chapel Hill when gunman opens fire

AP Laserphoto

Police officers check the scene in Chapel Hill, N.C., Thursday after a gunman shot at passing cars, killing two, wounding two.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A law student opened fire near the University of North Carolina on Thursday, killing a student and a bicyclist and wounding at least two others as he peppered the street with rifle shots, police said.

The man began shooting randomly as he walked along a downtown street around 2 p.m., striking a police officer and a student who escaped unharmed when the bullet ricocheted off his keys.

The gunman was shot in the legs by police, then tackled by a bystander who was shot in the struggle. All three of the wounded were taken to the hospital; none suffered life-threatening injuries, authorities said.

One man was gunned down in front of a sorority house, and a bicyclist was killed a half-block away on the steps of the rooming house where he lived. Police said the man near the sorority house was a student and it wasn't immediately clear if the other victim also was. Police weren't releasing the victims' names pending notification of their families.

"He was shooting at me, he was shooting at random, and he was shooting at anybody he saw," said attorney Bob Epting, 50. "He looked like he was on his way to his own death."

The gunman worked his way up to the post office building across the street from the 200-year-old University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Orange County District Attorney Carl Fox said the man fired 10 to 15 rounds from a semi-automatic M-1, including several into the back of the post office building, which also contains his offices and a courtroom.

Authorities offered no motive.

"What happened up there is not something that any reasonable person could understand," Police Chief Ralph Pendergraph said.

"This is not what you would expect in our community, but where would you expect it?"

Wendell Williamson, 26, a third-year law student, was charged with two counts of murder, police said.

One of the oldest parts of the college campus borders the main road, Franklin Street, a block away from the shooting. The school has about 24,400 students.

Jasor Howard, a doctoral candidate in microbiology, said he encountered the gunman walking down the street. The gunman was carrying what appeared to be a high-caliber rifle and a camouflage jacket, he said.

"He looked right at me," Howard said. "I was scared."

Howard said the gunman fired, but the bullet went through his pants and ricocheted off his keys. He was not hurt.

The gunman shot dead a bicyclist trying to get out of harm's way, said witness Matt Mesmer. His body was sprawled on the steps of a rooming house, about a half-block from the post office..

The student's body fell in front of a sorority house. A backpack stuck out from under a sheet police used to cover his body.

Two police cars were hit by bullets three or four times each, and a female officer in one car was shot in the left hand. Two civilian cars also were hit.

Rain-stressed Californians need some sunshine

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Southern Californians need an attitude adjustment.

Foul-weather blues have infected the psyche during nearly a month of rain, tans have faded and mud sullies the usually sun-toasted shores. There's a longing for barbecues, barefoot strolls, bicycle rides, tank tops and bare midriffs, yard-sale treasure hunts and buffeting drives in convertibles.

Seasonal Affective Disorder, sunlight deprivation, cabin fever — whatever the experts call it, most agree sunshine is the elixir this sun-crazy proletariat needs.

"They're crabby because they aren't getting full-spectrum light, which affects the brain. It makes us tense, it's cabin fever," psychologist Joyce Brothers said Thursday.

"Human beings were not meant to stay together without a break for more than 72 hours. People need some down time."

For nearly a month, rain has left West Coast outdoors-lovers cooped up. But the sun rose shining Thursday as remnants of the latest storm scooted east. The forecast calls for clear skies at least through the weekend.

Legendary surfer Lance Carson was stoked.

"Gee, I'm going to miss Oprah!" he said, looking forward to his days in the sun. "But seriously, the babes and the sunshine and the beach, there's been nothing here. I've had it. It's been miserable.

"Malibu used to be the world famous surfing beach where the stars hung out, and now you can't even get there. There's mud coming down everywhere."

At the Sunglass Safari boutique in Malibu, the sunny respite offered some hope for dwindling sales.

"The last thing people have been thinking about is sunglasses," said Edgar Brekke, who runs the store. "The storm effect on business has been absolutely devastating this month."

Umbrellas were opening all over the region Thursday as restaurants prepared for what was in many cases the first alfresco serving since Jan. 3.

"It's beautiful to see the sun this morning," said Robin Thomas of Geoffrey's, an upscale, ocean-view watering hole in Malibu. "The customers we have had ... stagger in after slogging through the mud and water and say they just had to get out of the house."

For all the bummed-out masses, however, Brothers looks for the silver lining.

"Sunshine gives us burns, cancer and wrinkles that makes us old," she said. "You can say, 'Well, I'm not getting a tan,' but it is more healthy."

Scientists find physical basis for male, female emotions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The emotions that trigger a man to fight while a woman reacts with words, facial expressions and gestures are not merely learned behavior but have a physical basis as well, university researchers say.

"We have known that men and women behave differently in all sorts of ways and one of the differences most striking is in the way men and women deal with emotions," Ruben C. Gur, director of the brain behavior laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania, said in an interview.

Until now, he said, there has been little evidence directly linking those differences to brain function. His findings are that "there are several dimensions of brain function that correspond to some of those differences between men and women."

They show up in various ways.

"We have the situation depicted in sitcoms of a woman who wants to talk endlessly how she feels about things while the man is sitting there going through his newspaper, smoking his pipe, befuddled why anyone would want to talk so much about feelings," Gur said.

The neuropsychologist and his colleagues found that the brains of men and women are identical except in the region that deals with emotional processing.

Sophisticated scanning techniques showed the part controlling action-oriented responses was more active in men. The part of the brain thought to control more-symbolic emotional responses was more active in women, the University of Pennsylvania scientists write in today's issue of the journal Science.

The sexes differ in cognitive abilities, which include memory and judgment.

For instance, men tend to do better in tests in which they look at an object and try to imagine how it will look when rotated. Women do better at such abstract, mental dexterity tests as looking at different shapes, colors and sizes and sorting them according to a principle they have to guess at.

The differences also show in verbal memory, Gur said. "If you rattle off 15 items to get at the supermarket, women are more likely to remember the most. That's some of the wifely frustration when the husband comes back and has forgotten some of them. It may be endemic to his sex."

Gur, a neuropsychologist, set out to determine whether these differences are learned or physiological. The researchers tested 37 men and 24 women for brain activity in a machine similar to a CT scan.

Radioactive glucose was administered as the subjects lay quietly in a dimly lit room. The scientists were able to measure activity as they followed consumption of sugar by the brain; the more sugar used, the brighter the image.

Men had higher activity in the limbic system, a part of the brain responsible for emotional processing that remains from the era in evolution when reptiles flourished. Reptiles have the same components, but no one would expect them to contemplate a situation before lashing out.

Women showed more activity in one of the newer and more-refined parts of this system, the cingulate gyrus.

"The speculation is that the reason men are more inclined to express aggression instrumentally is because this is a part of the brain that is more active in men," he said. "Conversely, the part of the brain more active in women deals with more refined, symbolic means of emotional expression."

Gur said more aspects of behavior may relate to these systems.

Panel endorses wider testing of AIDS vaccine

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — A scientific advisory panel urged the government Thursday to heed AIDS victims' pleas for wider testing of the nation's first therapeutic vaccine for the fatal virus. But it warned that patients should not expect a miracle.

The vaccine, developed by Dr. Jonas Salk, the inventor of the first polio vaccine, is intended to help keep people with the HIV virus that causes AIDS healthier longer.

After 12½ hours of debate, the panel of scientists voted 6-3, with one undecided, to recommend that the Food and Drug Administration allow Phase 3 clinical trials in as many as 5,000 patients of the vaccine, called Immunogen.

"I am not at all excited about the data I've seen," said the committee's chairman, Dr. Stanley Lemon of the University of North Carolina. "But I would be thrilled to be proven wrong."

But the advisory committee warned that patients should not expect a miracle from the vaccine, whose effects it said had been exaggerated by its maker, Immune Response Corp. of Carlsbad, Calif.

The panelists agreed that patients with the feeblest immune system should not be included in the trial.

While other scientists are testing vaccines to both prevent HIV infection and to treat it, Salk's is the first therapeutic vaccine in development. He took a strain of HIV, stripped it of out its protective coating and then inactivated the whole virus. Two other therapeutic vaccines being tested with only portions of the virus.

The killed virus is then added to a chemical that helps the immune cells recognize an invader, remember what it looks like and fight it off. The theory is that without this immune-memory boost, HIV can hide in the body and elude immune cells until it has grown strong enough to wipe out the immune syste..)

Sanity is needed in damage awards

Stella Liebeck spilled hot coffee in her lap outside a drive-in window and the resulting burns were serious. It wasn't Ms. Leibeck's fault, of course. It was McDonald's for making their hot coffee just "too" hot. And as a result a jury awarded her the unbelievable sum of $3 million.

A judge trimmed it to $600,000 and McDonald's appealed but later settled the lawsuit for an undisclosed amount.

Contrast that to a Midland woman who suffered serious enough third-degree burns from a similar accident in her home to require major skin grafting by a surgeon. She was quick to say "it was my fault" and naturally it was. The incident happened at her own home with coffee she herself had brewed. That's the only difference. The similarity was that in both cases hot coffee and carelessness were involved.

The message is simple. Too many people nowadays just aren't taking responsibility for their actions, their decisions, their own carelessness. We are living in the Age of "It's the Other Guy's Fault."

The Menendez brothers claimed it was their parents' fault that the brothers killed them with shotgun blasts and two juries seemed to have been swayed. But similar refusals to accept fault or blame are legion in the realms of petty misconduct as well as involving cases that could lead to prison terms or death penalties.

The phenomenon involves not just the complainants, of course, but the juries who side with them. More and more of the latter seem to be teaming up with those who bring such suits almost as if they were all brothers and sisters in spirit.

Scott Montgomery, writing for the Cox News Service, said in a recent piece published in the San Antonio Express News that many experts — people who have spent their lives studying such things — say we're essentially letting people determine their own moral boundaries.

Far too often people are claiming as their "just desserts" not what they have earned. In fact, they often make no claim to having earned anything. They simply seek to gain something because they believe they are entitled to it, they DESERVE it.

Is a change underway? Some claim it is and point to evidence that more and more Americans are getting fed up with what has often come to be downright silly judgments. Some who believe the recent Republican victories indicate a desire for a more conservative, less tolerant society include this silliness among things that need to be dealt with.

Will some of that public dissatisfaction result in legislation that will call for more sanity in cases where unrealistic monetary awards are demanded?

If that's the only way, then we hope so. There simply are too many cases today where payoffs are being sought just because someone had a bad day.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Jan. 27, the 27th day of 1995. There are 338 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on Jan. 27, 1945, during World War II, Soviet troops liberated the Nazi death camp of Auschwitz-Birkenau in Poland.

On this date:

In 1756, composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was born in Salzburg, Austria.

In 1832, Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, who wrote "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland" under the pen name Lewis Carroll, was born in Cheshire, England.

In 1880, Thomas Edison received a patent for his electric incandescent lamp.

In 1967, representatives from more than 60 nations signed a treaty banning the orbiting of nuclear weapons.

In 1973, the Vietnam peace accords were signed in Paris, formally bringing to an end the longest foreign war in U.S. history.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

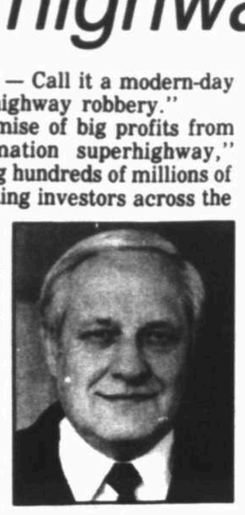

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Superhighway scams hit many elderly

WASHINGTON — Call it a modern-day version of "highway robbery."

With the promise of big profits from the heralded "information superhighway," scam artists are bilking hundreds of millions of dollars from unsuspecting investors across the country.

Anderson

Securities regulators say that tens of thousands of Americans have poured an estimated $1.5 billion into bogus high-tech investments. The scam artists prey mostly on elderly individuals, many of whom have risked their life savings out of a false belief that any investment connected with the much hyped information superhighway is the road to prosperity.

"The American people think the information superhighway is paved with gold," says Bill McDonald, who is monitoring the scams for the North American Securities Administration Association (NASAA). "They think they can't go wrong with high-tech investments, but a lot of people are being victimized."

Officials at the NASAA, the nerve center of the 50 state securities agencies, have found horror stories in every state. So far, the scams have prompted more than 125 enforcement actions or investigations by various agencies in 20 states. A Securities and Exchange Commission official told us the scams are a "serious problem," and that they are being attacked "very aggressively."

The scams were launched after the Federal Communications Commission held a number of major lotteries to award exclusive licenses in largely untested technologies, such as wireless cable television, specialized mobile radio and interactive video data services. Swindlers have capitalized on the lotteries by claiming to be raising funds to "build out" high-tech communications services in specific markets.

Regulators say the allure of the rapidly expanding information industry enables the peddlers to exaggerate the potential for profit and gloss over the substantial risks of these investments. In many cases, the scam artists don't even have the necessary FCC licenses.

Investors are often seduced by slick television infomercials and false claims that the investments are "IRA Approved" (though there is no such thing as an "approved" Individual Retirement Account) or endorsed by the Internal Revenue Service (though the IRS doesn't bless specific investments). Although the ads promise lucrative returns, regulators say that most investors will lose all of their principal.

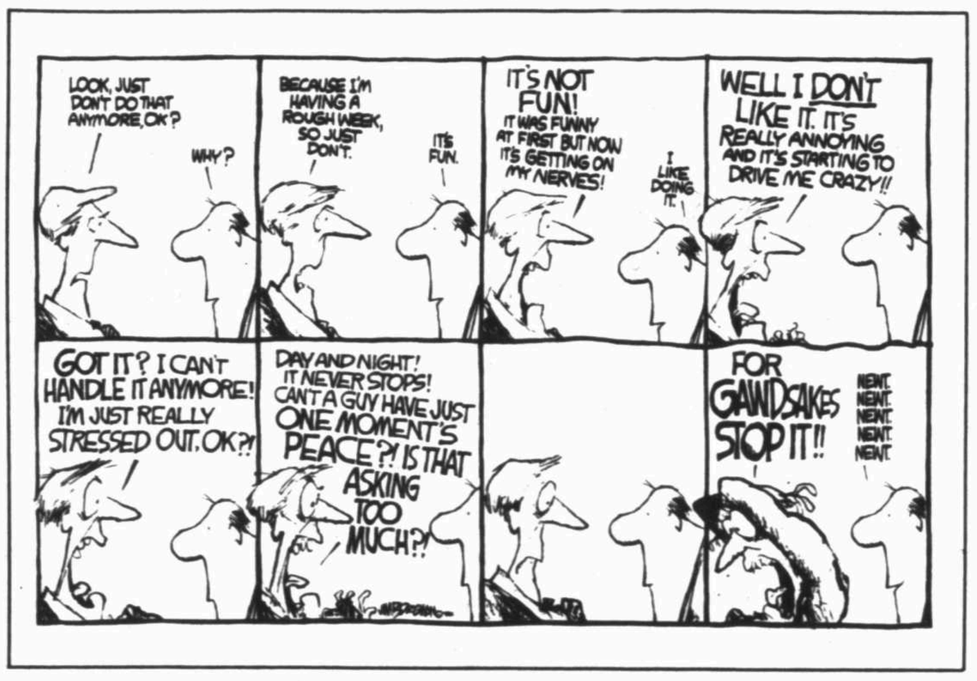

According to regulators, up to half the investors' money goes for undisclosed "commissions," while much of the rest pays for the boiler-room telemarketing operations used to pressure investors. In one California case, just .5 percent of receipts were used to construct the wireless TV project touted to investors.

"They just keeping pounding you and pounding you," said a retired 71-year-old California man, who says he received at least six high-pressure phone calls. Finally, about two years ago, a salesman came to the man's home peddling a high-tech deal that would double or triple his money.

"Like a dummy I gave him $10,000 bucks, and I never heard from him or saw him again," said the man, who asked us not to use his name out of fear that he would be targeted again.

One promoter of a high-tech deal, Michael Gartner, allegedly continued to solicit investors from a telephone in jail. Gartner raised more than $12 million — mostly from retirees — for shares in a videophone network.

Jack Anderson's and Michael Binstein's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Gingrich must learn to control his temper

The Democratic attacks on House Speaker Newt Gingrich are so much sound and fury, signifying — well, that Democrats can't think of anything else to talk about.

Murchison

Consider. If Democrats like Dick Gephardt and Barney Frank in the House and Chris Dodd in the Senate had a wonderful plan for welfare reform, they would talk about it, right? Or if they had anything to say about tax reform. Or balancing the budget.

But they don't. In fact, voters last fall repudiated the ideas, such as they are, of Dick Gephardt, Barney Frank, Chris Dodd, Bill Clinton and a host of now-fallen Democrats, including the former speaker of the House, Tom Foley.

The extent of this repudiation was large and devastating. Not even Foley's own constituents, who had maintained him in office since 1959, when Dwight Eisenhower was president and Cokes were a nickel, could stomach him any longer. He was recalled, as the saying goes, to live under the laws he had helped to make, laws that, thanks to Gingrich and the Republicans' Contract With America, will soon apply to incumbent as well as ousted members of Congress. This is a wonderful step forward. And great revenge.

As Gingrich retorted the other day: "I am a genuine revolutionary. They are the genuine reactionaries . . . they will use any tool to stop us . . ." They probably will, including the speaker's by-now-famous $4.5 million book deal. Anything to discredit the speaker and his programs! Anything to make him look less than all-powerful!

That said, the speaker needs to find a way around these controversies that keep popping up — what his mother said to the deplorable Connie Chung, how much a company owned by Rupert Murdoch promised — formerly, but not now — to pay him, etc.

I have some presumptuous advice for the speaker. You stay out of controversies by avoiding them in the first place. The speaker, who has a fiery temper and a thin skin, has done a poor job of this. He seems under the eternal temptation to fire back when fired on. What about holding your fire? What about tending to your knitting? In other words, what about just passing bills?

Passing the Contract With America, a truly glorious document, should be Gingrich's first order of business. He would probably say that it is, but you have to wonder. Defending himself seems to be the first order of business, with the contract somewhere behind.

This suits the Democrats to a T. They have goaded the new speaker into denunciation after denunciation. They have found he has quite a temper, which virtually ensures that he will be goaded again and again, like the fat — or, as we would say in these politically correct times, the calorically challenged — boy on the playground. Again and again, the search for an opening; again and again, a fresh scolding of tormentors by tormentee.

We don't need that, quite frankly. We need to pass the Contract With America verbatim and in toto and then move on from there — say, to friendly consideration of House Majority Leader Dick Armey's flat tax. How do you avoid the distractions? You treat them as such — as distractions unworthy of studied response. You keep your cool, in short.

There is another thing you do. You try to conduct yourself like Caesar's wife. You stay above reproach, in other words. From a free market standpoint, the $4.5 million book contract makes perfect sense; from the standpoint of keeping the media out of your white hair, it makes less than good sense. Why give the media a chance to yammer? First, pass the Contract With America, and then you've got something to write a book about.

In fairness to Newt, he is over-noticed in the world's most over-noticed city, which a predecessor, Sam Rayburn, called "a selfish, sourbellied place." If selfish then, how much more so now! Newt needs to roll with the punches. And then he needs to pass the Contract With America. We'll all live better — speaking of sweet revenge.

Book deal protest is just smoke screen

It is easy to see why liberal Democrats are so vigorously attacking Newt's plans to publish a book. This despite many precedents, most notably Kennedy's "Profiles in Courage," Goldwater's "Conscience of a Conservative," and Al Gore's book on the environment, all of which were written while in public office.

The financial issue is a smokescreen, existing only because it appears to be large enough to let liberals try to promote class envy, divert attention from the Republican "Contract With America," and hide their lack of an honest agenda founded in principles.

The Democrats' problem with the book and their wish to both destroy Newt personally and suppress the book are patently obvious: First, Newt is the architect of the "Contract With America" which liberals fear and detest because it threatens their big spending, big government policies and ideaology. Second, and perhaps more important, the publicity now assures a very large readership, and they don't want Newt's clear and contrasting vision for America available to the public unedited and uninterpreted by liberal spokesmen and the media.

Liberal Democrats rightly fear an informed electorate voting on a clearly defined plan for the country's future.

Guns are symptom or effect, not problem

I agree with Jane F. Hynd's sentiment that there is a problem with violence in our society. However, I wonder if we have lost the ability to differentiate between cause and effect. Guns are not the problem. Violence and gun-related violence are an effect or a symptom. The problem is that our society no longer has any discipline or values. Let's treat the cause, not the symptom. Let's look a little deeper.

King commemoration replaces R.E. Lee day

One of the things that I miss about my 11 years at Robert E. Lee High School in Midland, which ended 20 years ago, is that I was their surrogate Robert E. Lee, since I was the only teacher sharing the venerable general's birthday, and as a consequence, each year as this date rolled around I was inundated with greeting cards, cakes, gifts, music, handshakes, hugs, announcements over the public address system, etcetera. Now it's just a memory.

But during my growing-up years, I couldn't help but notice that the banks in Texas were closed on my birthday, not for me but for the general, and his name always appeared on the calendars in January, but all that has changed since the introduction of a national holiday for Martin Luther King.

Now, I do not begrudge people a day of commemoration for their hero, but why do they have to do away with all recognition of my hero to make way for it. Is there not room for both? What do the Robert E. Lee schools of Midland, Tyler, San Antonio, and wherever else they exist have to say about it?

I'm currently completing my 46th year of perfect attendance as a teacher, and still going strong like the Energizer Bunny.

Electricity increases don't match oil price

I received my TU Electric Bill in the mail today and was amazed at the fact that there was another increase on my bill. First of all, I pay for the amount of electricity I use (which I am sure includes a profit margin), then all of a sudden we are charged a $6 customer service charge. I have no idea what the $6 charge is for and now I have a new charge that is called "Fuel Surcharge for Metered Service."

It amazes me that the price of oil and gas is down, but my electricity bill keeps going up. If we have another June and July as we did in 1994, I'm going to have to get a second job to pay for electricity. Thank goodness I am able to work.

I think I read in the paper not too long ago that TU Electric was asking for a rate increase. Will that be in addition to all these other extra charges? What do we have to look forward to with the additional monies TU Electric is collecting?

NRA, Gingrich strike deal on gun ban repeal

■ House speaker agrees to schedule hearings for groups to air pro-gun views.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Rifle Association struck a deal with House Speaker Newt Gingrich that appears likely to postpone until spring a clash over repealing the new ban on assault-style firearms.

Word of the deal came Thursday as the White House warned anew that President Clinton would veto any measure that repealed the ban on 19 specific weapons and scores of similar firearms that was part of last year's $30 billion crime bill.

The NRA had been demanding an early vote, and despite fierce lobbying by Gingrich, had lined up several House members to support its effort. Gingrich is on record supporting the repeal, but did not want to hand Clinton a potent political issue so early in the new Republican Congress.

So Gingrich agreed Wednesday night to schedule hearings at which the NRA and other pro-gun groups could air their views, in exchange for a commitment from the NRA that it would hold off on demanding a repeal vote.

Tanya Metaksa, the NRA's chief lobbyist, quoted Gingrich as saying the hearings would begin in February and would be used as a platform to argue that gun ownership is "a constitutional right, not a duck-hunting right," a reference to Clinton's recent hunting foray.

She said Gingrich, R-Ga., also promised a free-standing vote on legislation to repeal the ban "near the end of the consideration of the Contract With America," the House GOP's 100-day agenda.

A senior House leadership aide, speaking on condition of anonymity, offered a consistent description of the agreement with one exception: "I don't think you'll see a vote by 100 days."

Told that, Metaksa said, "If we have hearings and the attention brought to the issue and the commitment of the leadership to a vote, I'm not going to haggle over whether the vote comes in 99 days or 101 days."

Before word of the agreement surfaced, the repeal effort appeared to be gathering momentum, and the administration dispatched Attorney General Janet Reno to Capitol Hill to lobby against it.

"People have got to understand that these weapons are not in any way for recreational purposes," Reno said.

She won an ally in moderate GOP Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island, who said he doubted a repeal would pass the Senate this year. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole made a similar prediction earlier in the week.

The debate over assault-style weapons is one of several subplots to the crime bill debate that will test GOP unity and philosophy. The GOP "contract" promises to reopen last year's crime bill and cut much of the spending on prevention programs.

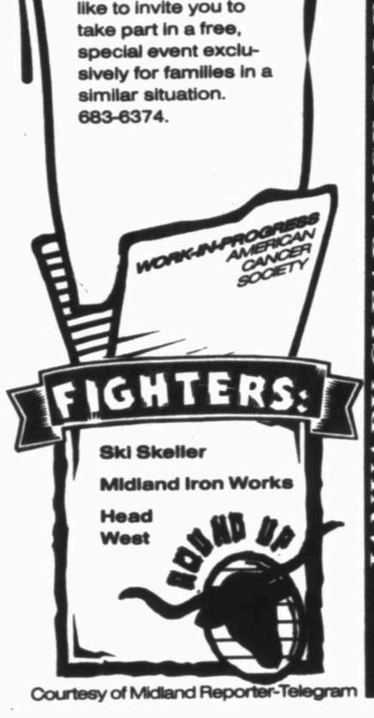

Conservatives derided much of that spending as pork-barrel waste, but many of the prevention programs are backed by moderate Republicans who were crucial to passing the bill last year. Therefore, finding the votes for deep cuts could prove difficult.

In addition, many Republican governors oppose the "truth-in-sentencing" provisions states would have to meet to qualify for prison-building grants. Of the $10.5 billion in prison grants in the House proposal, half would be available only to states that require violent felons to serve at least 85 percent of their sentences. The other half is reserved for states that have started increasing the incarceration of violent offenders, both in numbers of felons serving sentences and the length of time they serve.

While many states have or are moving toward enacting truth-in-sentencing laws on their own, governors of both parties view this restriction as an infringement on their responsibilities.

Even so, the emotions of those debates pale in comparison with the fight over assault-style weapons.

After spending heavily in last year's congressional elections in which they managed to defeat several incumbents who supported the crime bill, the NRA immediately put the new Republican Congress on notice that it wanted an early vote to repeal the ban.

IMF to give Mexico emergency loan as Clinton's plan meets resistance

■ Fund officials agree, subject to approval, to lend country up to $7.8 billion over 18 months.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The International Monetary Fund announced an emergency loan to Mexico on Thursday as a Clinton administration proposal for a $40 billion rescue package ran into more trouble from skeptical senators.

"What support there was is collapsing in a dramatic fashion," said Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb.

President Clinton continued to press for approval. "Mexico has never failed on any of its financial obligations to us in the past and this will be something where we will co-sign a note with good collateral," Clinton said in an interview with NBC anchor Tom Brokaw.

To help Mexico out of its currency crisis, IMF officials agreed — subject to approval next week by the agency's executive board — to lend the country up to $7.8 billion over 18 months.

IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus said the decision was made after Mexican authorities put together a "strong, coherent and credible" program of economic reforms to shore up government finances, tighten the country's money supply and sharply reduce the flight of capital.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin said the loan — largest in the IMF's 51-year history — "demonstrates the support of the international community for Mexico."

The IMF package is viewed in international financial circles as the hard-nosed agency's seal of approval on Mexico's program to revive its economy and should help encourage renewed private lending.

But Rubin cautioned that the administration's proposal for the United States to guarantee $40 billion in Mexican borrowing "remains an urgent priority if Mexico's economic problems are to be contained."

In a satellite address to international business and government leaders meeting in Switzerland, Clinton predicted congressional approval of the plan, saying it would "safeguard hundreds of thousands of Americans whose livelihoods are now tied to Mexico's well-being."

He told the World Economic Forum: "Failure to act could have grave consequences for the Mexicans, for Latin America, for the entire developing world."

The administration first proposed the guarantee plan two weeks ago, hoping to calm financial markets and halt a disastrous slide in the Mexican peso, which has lost almost 40 percent of its value.

It has argued that stabilizing the Mexican economy is needed to prevent international investors from withdrawing their funds from other developing countries, to keep illegal immigration from skyrocketing and because Mexico is America's third-largest export market.

Man who was often called 'Gerber Boy' dies at age 20

By Rick Hampson

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — For all his 20 years, Raymond Dunn Jr. couldn't walk or talk — in fact, he could barely breathe. But Raymond could do one thing.

He could make people care.

His mother and father dedicated their lives to him. Strangers offered their help and their love. And a big corporation gave him sustenance.

Raymond was known as the "Gerber Boy" because just for him, the company resumed production of a discontinued infant formula — the only food to which the profoundly retarded young man was not allergic.

He died last week in a hospital near his home in the Catskills, ending a life no less valued for all its troubles.

"He fought right up to the end. He wanted so much to stay with us," his mother, Carol Dunn, said Thursday. "But he suffered all his life, especially at the end. He racked his little body, just trying to breathe."

When he died, the Dunns still had a year's supply of a brownish liquid called MBF (for meat-based formula). Gerber stopped making it in 1985, but employee volunteers retooled five years later after Raymond's doctors said he would die without it.

"Gerber says 'Babies are our business,' but Raymond's their business, too," said Carol Dunn.

Raymond was born with a broken skull and a brain that had been deprived of oxygen; he was not supposed to live a year. His twisted, cramped body never grew beyond 38 pounds and four feet. He suffered up to two dozen seizures a day, and slept two or three hours a night.

His asthma made each breath a struggle; phlegm plugs repeatedly hospitalized him and threatened to kill him. He moved only with help, saw only shadows. His expression ranged from a painful grimace to a slight smile. His only sounds were snorts, gurgles, wheezes and an occasional burp.

His biggest problem was his allergy to virtually all food, save MBF. By 1988 Mrs. Dunn had hunted down every can she could find and Gerber had exhausted its backlog. The mother begged Gerber to make more.

Finally, in 1990, the company agreed. Research division volunteers put their own projects on hold, hauled out old equipment and devoted several thousand square feet and several days of production time and space to Raymond's MBF. They even had to go to Washington to get USDA approval for the label.

The batch was meant to last two years. When Raymond finished it, Gerber made more; when he died, he still had a year's supply.

Judge sets tentative trial date

■ May 8 has been scheduled to try teen accused of shooting Big Spring state trooper Troy M. Hogue.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A tentative date of May 8 has been set for the capital murder trial of a Big Spring teen charged in the Dec. 30 shooting death of Department of Public Safety Trooper Troy M. Hogue.

Levy Lee Edmondson Jr. of Big Spring — who turned 17 less than a month before reportedly killing Hogue — will be defended by Midland attorney Angel Nunez.

Nunez has submitted a change-of-venue motion, according to Big Spring District Attorney Rick Hamby. He does not anticipate the change of venue motion being granted, even though Hogue's death sparked public outrage in that city.

It was estimated that more than 1,000 people attended the funeral for the Big Spring father of two.

The first pre-trial hearing is scheduled for Feb. 8 at 118th District Court. Judge Bob Moore will oversee the disclosure of evidence between attorneys in the case.

Although there were multiple eyewitnesses in the immediate area at the time of the shooting, Hamby said his entire staff will be working to prepare the best case against Edmondson.

Throughout the pre-trial and trial processes, prosecutors will be dealing with multiple questions regarding Edmondson's psychological state at the time of the shooting.

Big Spring prosecuting attorneys have not decided if they will seek the death penalty in the case, Hamby said. However, no plea bargain arrangement has been offered to Edmondson.

Nunez has not yet returned telephone calls to his Midland office.

Hogue's death occurred when he and his partner, Darryle Sparks, were called to an accident scene about 10 miles east of Big Spring on Interstate 20. Howard County Sheriff's Office Deputy Clifford McCartney arrived first and, suspecting Edmondson was under the influence of alcohol, placed him in his patrol car.

Edmondson had reportedly struck a guardrail with his vehicle.

Because DPS has jurisdiction on the interstate, Ho-

Q. Since firefighters can have up to four days off in a row, do many have part-time jobs?

A. Yes, many do. Midland firefighters work about 56 hours a week at the fire stations, but since they work 24-hour shifts, they have time for part-time jobs. Some of the jobs that firefighters have away from the stations are welders, roofers, plumbers, truck drivers, teachers, graphic artists, auto mechanics, paramedics, retail salesmen, nurses and fire extinguisher inspectors.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Jury finds uncle guilty of assault, girl's rape

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Jurors deliberated 4½ hours before finding a Midland man guilty of sexually abusing his niece more than four years ago.

Bobby Bowers, 38 — not 40 as originally reported — was found guilty of sexual assault of a child in connection with an Oct. 12, 1990, incident. Charges were brought by his niece, who was 14 at the time of the assault.

The woman, now 18, made a report to the Midland County Sheriff's Department in 1992.

The victim told the jury Wednesday that Bowers was playing hide-and-go-seek with the girl and her siblings when he took her to the hayloft on the farm where they lived and sexually assaulted her there.

Bowers used an alibi defense. His boss at the time of the assault brought Bowers' time card for Oct. 12, 1990, to show he was at work at the time of the attack.

However, Midland County Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman pointed out that the times on the card were written in by the defendant.

The victim testified that immediately following the assault she told her then-best friend, who testified Thursday that she never told him about the attack.

The victim's sister, who is now 12, testified that her sister "hardly ever

Police impose fines for illegal unloading

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Some Midland drivers are upset with having to pay $60 fines for loading or unloading their children at school without parking, but there is little room for compromise from police officials.

According to calls received at the Reporter-Telegram, a few drivers have expressed anger, arguing that they did not know it was illegal to load or unload passengers in a traffic lane, and therefore should have been given a warning instead of a citation.

Spokesmen for both the Midland Police Department and the Midland Independent School District Police Department said their resources are stretched so thin that officers must make an effort to change traffic patterns in the short time that they have to enforce these laws.

Midland police officers enforce these laws when a particular school is having a problem and asks the Midland Police Department for assistance in keeping traffic orderly, explained police Sgt. David Garcia.

The problem with enforcing these laws is that it takes one or two traffic officers away from their normal jobs, stationing them at the various schools. "We can only do it on a case-by-case basis," Garcia said.

Since the beginning of the school year, there have been only 41 drivers ticketed by the Police Department for letting their children in or out in traffic lanes, Garcia said. These were written at various schools in response to calls from school officials, he said.

Dan Walkenshaw, MISD chief of security, also said his manpower resources are stretched. MISD officers respond to cite drivers breaking these traffic laws when a problem is identified at a specific campus.

MISD officers issue traffic tickets that are handled through municipal court just like Police Department traffic tickets, Walkenshaw said. The only difference in city police tickets and MISD tickets is the name of the issuing agency, he said.

Drivers are warned that although officers give warnings for some violations, officers are working to alter traffic patterns with a minimal investment of police time — which usually means citations.

Aside from the fact that the practice of stopping and loading or unloading children without parking tends to impede traffic, the practice is also dangerous, Walkenshaw said,

The practice puts children in a position to walk into traffic where drivers are not expecting them, Garcia said. "They (children) don't have the protection of the crosswalk," he explained.

Court indicts man on charge of tampering

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

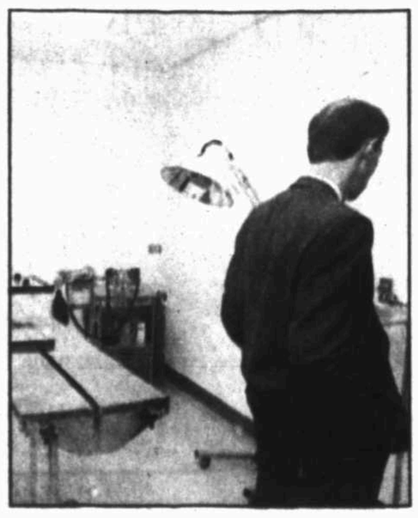

A Midland man and his business — Collective Resources Inc. — have been indicted for altering documents in connection with mishandled medical wastes, officials said.

John L. Iman and his company are each charged with four counts of tampering with governmental records and eight counts of securing execution of document by deception. The indictment, on behalf of the Texas Office of the Attorney General, was handed down by a Midland County grand jury Wednesday.

"He (Iman) was filling out burn receipts indicating he incinerated the wastes as he was supposed to do," said Ward Tisdale, spokesman with the Office of the Attorney General.

In fact, officials said, Iman had abandoned — in the fall of 1993 — the trailers of medical wastes instead. The trailers — two in San Angelo, three in Del Rio and two in Colorado City — con-

College veterinary students receive new lab

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Midland College's veterinary program has stepped into the '90s, thanks to a complete facility renovation and new medical equipment.

"The big difference is that students will now be able to do procedures on campus which they used to have to leave campus to do," said Kerry Combs, director of MC's Veterinary Technology department. Vet Tech students will train in lab and surgical procedures involving the study of parasitology, pharmacology, immunology and nutrition.

Veterinary staff and students celebrated the program's revitalization with an open house and tour Thursday afternoon.

MC President David E. Daniel said residents, students and faculty were persistent in seeing that the department's facility be upgraded. A big boost came in the form of a $50,000 donation from the Dora Roberts Foundation.

Daniel said that in the past the veterinary department suffered from "not enough space, animals and equipment."

He said however, supporters of the department rallied to keep the program going and to upgrade the laboratory and equipment. "There was a strong advisory committee, a strong, stubborn group of people," Daniel said, garnering laughs.

"And that committee and another group of people, including students, said this program must not close."

A firefighter looks over the scene of a house fire at 501 W. Cuthbert Ave. Two fire engines responded to the scene of the blaze that occurred shortly before noon Thursday. Firefighters, who were on the scene until 1:08 p.m., said the house was fully engulfed in flames when they arrived. Further details were unavailable.

Representative to hold commission appointment

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

City Council representative Claudia Egan has been appointed to the 1995 Public Safety Commission of the National League of Cities, a position she said will open channels of public safety information to Midland.

"Being on the committee helps keep Midland more attuned to what's happening nationally," Ms. Egan said. "We'll be able to network with any city that's a member of the National League of Cities."

The committee deals with "anything that has to do with the safety of citizens" with a concentration on police and fire issues, Ms. Egan said.

Midland's representation will allow the city access to a national database of pubic safety information and give the city a voice in that area.

"It's not some hotty-totty thing. It's a real work committee and I'm real excited about it," she said.

Ms. Egan said she was appointed to the committee by outgoing Texas Municipal League president Fred Guerra to fill the spot vacated by former Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth. As a member, Ms. Egan will also serve as reporter of the committee's activity.

The appointment complements Ms. Egan's involvement in public safety, notably crime prevention, in Midland.

She recently chaired the Project Awaken Task Force, a community task force on crime, alcohol and drug abuse formed as a result of a special grand jury recommendation in January 1993.

Ms. Egan has also served as a member and officer of the Midland Crime Prevention Commission and Crime Stoppers. She's also been a member of the 200 Club, an organization that assists law-enforcement officers, and families of officers, who are injured or killed in the line of duty.

RAPE: Jury declares man guilty of assault told the truth." Later the sister contradicted her own testimony regarding whether Bowers and the victim had ever been left alone together.

Thomas Roach, a friend of Bowers who also serves in the Texas State Guard with him, testified he remembered Oct. 12, 1990, specifically because it was the day Bowers was commissioned as an officer.

He said that night he and Bowers went out and celebrated.

The victim's mother testified the victim "always lied" and said she couldn't have been assaulted by Bowers because they were never left alone because "she always watched them together."

She said her other two children "have never lied." The woman testified Bowers was with her on the night of Oct. 12, 1990.

Bowers took the stand on his own behalf and said that day sticks out in his memory because he received his officer's commission that day. He said he and Roach went out that evening.

Defense attorney Bob Stevens asked Bowers if he ever raped his niece.

"No sir, no way."

When Ms. Clingman asked the same question, he responded: "M'am, she is my niece. I wouldn't do that with my niece."

Bowers admitted to pinching the girl on her breast in order "to teach her a lesson" not to pinch others on their chests. He said he grabbed her once when she was going to run out of the house to escape household chores and he said he handcuffed the girl once when she kept taking the handcuffs he used as a security officer.

He denied wrestling with the children, but said that while he was lying down watching television they would jump on his back and he would roll around with them.

He said he may have touched the girl's "private parts ... her breasts" while they were rolling around.

"I said it was possible," said Bowers, who was convicted of misdemeanor theft in October 1991.

Two rebuttal witnesses testified they believe the victim is truthful through their knowledge of her since 1993. One of the witnesses works for Permian Basin Community Centers and the other works for the Midland Rape Crisis Center.

Ms. Clingman reiterated the fact that the victim has "no support from her mother and sister" and "she's alone with her mental deficiency, yet she had the courage to come and testify."

"Look at who has the motive to lie," Ms. Clingman told the jury. "At this station in her life, what does she have to gain from lying?"

Stevens turned that same line of thinking around stating: "All of this comes down to the testimony of (the victim) and Bobby Bowers ... who do you believe?"

He said at the time and day the victim claims that the assault occurred Bowers couldn't possibly have done it because he was at work and school records show she was in school.

The jury began deliberating at 4:10 p.m. and returned the guilty verdict at 8:35 p.m. Bowers will remain free on bond until the punishment phase of the trial, which will be next week.

238th District Court Judge John Hyde will decide the punishment. Bowers could receive probation or two to 20 years in prison.

Family is host to thousands of bats living in their rafters

TIVOLI (AP) — Bats have a Southeast Texas family scared to go outside after dark.

Thousands of bats flying through the night air, bouncing off walls and windows, return each night to their new roost inside Sandi and Terry Dowdys' home overlooking the Guadalupe River.

"I don't want to stay," Mrs. Sandi told The Victoria Advocate Thursday. "I'm afraid the baby (Eric, her 13-year-old son) will get rabies."

If they don't find a way soon to get the bats out and keep them out, the infestation could cost the Dowdys their rented home.

Mrs. Dowdy first noticed sounds in the walls a few months ago — scraping and chirping noises. But not until lately did the couple realize that the noises were being caused by bats.

WILL JUSTICE BE ABLE TO STAND THE TEST?

The story is everywhere. Not much of a way to ignore the trial and tales of O.J. Simpson. It seems that Americans again will make history for perhaps this century's most expensive, extensive, and elaborate legal event. Will Justice be found amid the fanfare of it all?

The danger lies in our self created world of social and moral confusion. In a time much like ours, God's prophet wrote in Isaiah 59, "They have turned them into crooked roads; no one who walks in them will know peace. So justice is far from us, and righteousness does not reach us."

But we answer to our God, "It must...it must reach us!" And our nation "of the people, by the people and for the people" has historically offered the best of justice, mercy, and faith to our world. No matter your persuasion for innocence or guilt for Simpson, be praying that true justice be found. Jesus reminded those religiously proud of old, "you have neglected the more important matters of the law, justice, mercy, and faithfulness." May it not be said of us.

"To us, raising kids right means raising their consciousness."

"Growing up in 'traditional religions,' we got too much tradition and not enough religion."

"But as parents, we still wanted to expose our kids to the important ideas and values behind all that doctrine and dogma."

"In Unitarian Universalism, we found a way to raise our children spiritually without confining their spirituality."

"They're part of a community that respects ideas, values diversity, and encourages curiosity."

"We figure if they grow up learning to ask the right questions, they'll find the answers for themselves."

Couple pledges support for TCU alumni center

Staff Report

Midland independent oil and gas executive John L. Cox and his wife, Maurine, have pledged $750,000 to support the building of a new alumni center at Texas Christian University.

The donation will fund the Cox Banquet Hall in the planned Dee J. Kelly Alumni Center. The new alumni center will become a focal point to welcome campus guests and serve the university's 50,000 alumni. The Cox Banquet Hall will be home to a ballroom-style facility designed to seat up to 300 people.

The center is named in honor of Dee J. Kelly (TCU Class of '50), a prominent Fort Worth attorney and TCU trustee. Groundbreaking is expected by mid-1995 on a site east of TCU's Amon G. Carter Stadium.

Longtime TCU supporters, the Cox's have two children who attended TCU. Son Kelly Cox is a 1977 TCU graduate and a TCU trustee. His daughter Carolyn Cox also attended the university.

The new alumni center is part of "The Next Frontier," TCU's comprehensive $100-million fundraising effort. The five-year campaign was kicked off in November of 1994. As of this month, the university had received $65 million in gifts and pledges toward the goal. The campaign is designed to strengthen academic programs, build scholarships, endow positions, attract faculty, extend computer technology, conduct and improve new buildings and expand the university's presence around the world.

Center hosts conference

Staff Report

Region 18 Education Service Center will host the two-day conference "Vision III: Face of the Future" Feb. 3 and 4.

The conference will focus on educating gifted and talented learners. It will feature speakers from Midland and around the state. The event is open to parents and educators.

Featured speakers will include Carolyn Callahan of the University of Virginia, Jime Delisle of Kent State University and Jeannette Covington of the Texas Education Agency.

Other speakers will include Jane E. Woodward of Fort Stockton Independent School District, Felicia Wood and Nancy Polson of Marfa ISD; Myron Weckworth of Comfort ISD; Joe Bullock, Sul Ross State University, and the Zenith Staff of Ector County ISD. Midland ISD presenters will include Patricia Maurer, Lucinda Windsor, Patty Smith, Hugh Franks, Deanna Krehbiel, James Bradford and Vicki Rice.

The conference will open 8 a.m. Feb. 3. On-site registration will be conducted as space allows. Cost for parents is $10 and $45 for educators. For more information call 563-2380.

INDICT: Court convicts man of tampering

(From 1B)

tained a total of 49,000 pounds of wastes from hospitals and funeral homes including placentas, an arm from an amputation, blood products and syringes, officials said.

The parked trailers "posed a definite health and environmental hazard," Tisdale said.

Conviction of the third degree felony charges — related to altering the burn receipts — is punishable by two to 10 years in prison and fines not to exceed $10,000.

The criminal charges follow a 1993 civil lawsuit filed on behalf of the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission maintaining Iman violated health and transportation hazards by allowing the trailers of waste to sit for weeks. That lawsuit was resolved after Iman agreed to make plans for proper disposal, Tisdale said.

"It's my understanding that the TNRCC contracted to have the waste hauled away. It has been cleaned up," said Patrick Shaughnessy, TNRCC spokesman.

Iman told the Reporter-Telegram in December 1993 that the waste was not abandoned and he was forced to park the trailers when the TNRCC refused to renew his license to transport medical waste. Iman also claimed the TNRCC denied arrangements to have another company transport the waste for disposal.

TEEN: Trial set for May gue began to question Edmondson, who reportedly produced a British-designed, .455-caliber Webley revolver and fired one time. The bullet struck Hogue in the head, killing him.

McCartney and Sparks wrestled the gun from Edmondson and handcuffed him.

Edmondson, who is reported to have an extensive juvenile criminal history, has been held without bond at the Howard County Jail since the incident.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, JANUARY 27, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Greater creativity will make your work a thing of beauty. Events in early spring will let you know exactly where you stand with an employer or important client. Business success depends on your ability to cooperate with others. Public support is forthcoming. Romance sizzles during the summer months. Buy or sell property in September. A trip you take in late fall or early winter leads to surprising personal revelations.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: ballet great Mikhail Baryshnikov, football player Cris Collinsworth, Irish pacifist Mairead Corrigan, actress Donna Reed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Common sense helps you solve a sticky family problem. A new openness will make a longtime relationship meaningful again. Good news arrives by mail or phone call. Confide in those who have proven their loyalty.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some valuable information comes into your hands, setting the stage for financial progress. The traditional approach may prove ineffective in certain cases.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look behind the curtain of your future; good things await you! Old worries fade. Efforts to show your good faith will be rewarded. Financial gains from a new project should exceed your expectations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Key matters have been placed in your capable hands. Keep them there! Straighten out a garbled message before turning your attention to bookkeeping chores.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Some information you receive is sketchy. Friends or relatives will help fill in the gaps. Show your gratitude in tangible ways. New legal or media developments favor your objectives.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A private meeting will help you get a project started without further delay. Diplomacy will help calm troubled waters. Trust your financial intuition; it is right on target! Romance needs more time to develop.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The good news you receive now bodes well for the future. Become a smart shopper. A carefully-negotiated agreement will bring long-term benefits. Someone living at a distance has helpful ideas. Listen closely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put your best foot forward. Defer to your loved ones' wishes when making weekend plans. You need to find out what is going on in your community. Strive for important self-improvement objectives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle routine chores while conditions are favorable. This is not a good time to take financial or emotional risks. Let your associates at the office have their own way. Entertaining at home helps you relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The pace you set today will outstrip the best efforts of your competitors. Be careful not to scatter your energies too widely. When you go to the bargaining table, you must be prepared.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Curb a tendency to daydream. Your work performance is being judged! Hard work and perseverance will strengthen your financial position. Cater to the needs of your children or pets. Avoid over-indulgence in food or drink.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A family member who is going through a big change requests your presence at a special event. Do your best to be there. Profits will rise when you and your co-workers cooperate more closely.

Opening lead: Four of ◇

If you can see that, left alone, declarer is likely to land the contract, do what you must to suggest a more attractive line. Here's what we mean.

We offer no apologies for the auction. Suffice it to say that this hand was dealt near the end of a team match in which North-South were trailing and North felt that drastic action was necessary to retrieve some earlier reversals.

The opening lead set up a trick for the defenders which they would surely cash if they gained the lead while declarer was drawing trumps. Declarer won the ace of diamonds at trick one and led a low trump, finessing the jack.

Had East followed routinely with the three, the rest would have been automatic — and painful for East-West. South would have cashed the ace of trumps to drop the king, drawn the remaining trump and then cashed five clubs for a diamond discard. In all, declarer would have scored four trump tricks and a ruff, two hearts, one diamond and five clubs to land the contract with an overtrick.

This, however, was an expert game, and East dropped the nine without blinking an eyelash. Now declarer had an option — playing East for the bare 10 9 instead of a falsecard from the actual holding, and there was no way of telling which. Mathematically, there is little to choose between the two lines, but at the table declarer came to hand with a club and led the queen of spades — down one!

'Current Affair' to air videotape from Waco compound standoff

LOS ANGELES — "A Current Affair" said it is airing a videotape today from the Waco standoff at the Branch Davidian compound, in which a wounded David Koresh warns against "pushing my family around."

"What we do, people would not understand. This is serious stuff here," Koresh says, addressing the camera, according to the syndicated TV magazine show.

The March 8, 1993, video is being broadcast for the first time, a series spokeswoman said Thursday. The identity of the source that provided the tape was being withheld for legal reasons, she said.

Cult leader Koresh and about 80 of his followers were killed and the compound destroyed on April 19, 1993, after a 51-day standoff with federal agents.

LOS ANGELES — Less than two months after undergoing hip replacement surgery, Liza Minnelli will be strutting at a film awards banquet.

After hip replacement surgery, Liza's on her feet.

The 48-year-old actress-singer, who won an Academy Award for her 1972 performance in "Cabaret," plans to appear at the British Academy of Film and Television Arts' fifth annual Britannia Award gala Feb. 8, organizers said Wednesday.

The event will honor actor Anthony Hopkins, best known for his film performances in "The Silence of the Lambs" and "The Remains of the Day."

LOS ANGELES — Actress Claire Danes, who plays teen-ager Angela Chase on "My So-Called Life," is mourning the apparent demise of the critically acclaimed but little-watched ABC-TV drama.

"It doesn't make any sense to me. I mean, I don't know how the Nielsen system works and you know, I can't help but take it a little personally because we work so hard on something," Danes said in a recent interview.

"My So-Called Life" leaves the air after Thursday's episode, and ABC won't decide until later whether it will return. The show has been scheduled against NBC's highly rated lineup of "Mad About You" and "Friends."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Country music fans nominated Alan Jackson in seven categories, including top entertainer and male artist of the year, in the TNN-Music City News Country Awards.

Country-music fans nominate Jackson.

Jackson's "Livin' on Love" was nominated for video of the year and top single. His "Summertime Blues" also was nominated for video of the year and "Who I Am" is up for album of the year. Jackson and George Jones were nominated for their update of Jones' hit "A Good Year for the Roses."

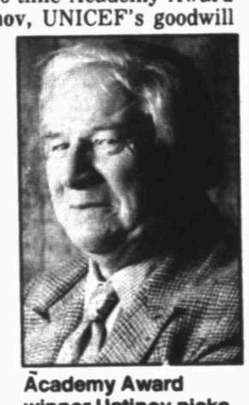

Vince Gill received six nominations Thursday; Reba McEntire and Ricky Van Shelton three each.

The winners will be announced June 5 during a special on The Nashville Network broadcast from the Grand Ole Opry House.

Fans pick the winners on ballots printed in the Music City News and through 900 telephone numbers to be advertised on TNN.

ATLANTA — Two-time Academy Award winner Peter Ustinov, UNICEF's goodwill ambassador for 27 years, has received yet another honor — the International Child Survival Award.

Academy Award winner Ustinov picks up another honor.

Presented Wednesday night by former President Jimmy Carter on behalf of the Atlanta Committee for UNICEF and the Carter Center, it recognizes Ustinov's work for UNICEF.

Ustinov said in an interview that politics is hampering UNICEF's ability to help the children of Iraq, adding that the U.N. embargo on food and medicine doesn't penalize the country's leaders.

"They go on living in great comfort, but the obvious people suffer — the old, the infirmed and the children," he said. "It is tantamount to seeing someone struggling in the sea when you are on a ship and asking them to first fill out a form on their political affiliation, race and religion."

FAMILY MATTERS

Husband's snoring may be serious problem

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I made a New Year's resolution that I would try to sleep with my husband. We have been married almost 12 years, and his snoring is so horrible that I haven't been able to sleep with him all night yet! There are times that, even with me sleeping in my daughter's room, I can hear him. I swear there are times that the walls vibrate. All of these years we've laughed about it and gone on.

May

I also don't think that he sleeps very well at night because he's always tired in the morning. For a lot of reasons, I want to be able to get out of my daughter's room and sleep with my husband. Do you know if anything can be done about his snoring? BLASTED OUT

DEAR BLASTED: Something can be done to help your situation. Snoring often is a medical symptom that can be caused from something as simple as a cold to something as serious as sleep apnea. Regardless of the cause, snoring does interfere with normal breathing and sleep. The person is often deprived of the deeper levels of sleep.

Snoring usually occurs during "mouth breathing." According to the American Sleep Apnea Association, "Snoring noise occurs when the tissues in the throat flap against each other as air passes between them into the trachea en route to the lungs. When air flow is blocked completely, an apnea (cessation of air flow) occurs. Therefore, apnea occurs when there is a complete closure of the throat, while snoring results from only a partial closure."

Sleep apnea can have serious consequences because of its cardiovascular impacts. While most snorers do not have sleep apena, I encourage you to seek medical advice.

Snoring can be treated in a number of ways, including surgical removal of the noise-producing tissue, special pillows to alter sleeping positions, the nasal continuous positive airway pressure (nCPAP) device, dental appliances to hold the tongue forward in the mouth, and nasal dilators.

There is hope for your husband's snoring. Talk to your physician for an appropriate medical referral. I think you have a great New Year's resolution — let's make it happen!

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL PLEASE: Your husband's behaviors most assuredly constitute verbal and emotional abuse. You have a right to medical care when you are ill. Contact the Battered Women's Center (683-1300). You will find them to be wonderfully supportive and sensitive. It is not appropriate for a spouse to put you down when you are ill and force you to go to work so soon after surgery. Not only is that wrong and abusive, it is very dangerous to your physical health. Please give the center a call — do not continue to minimize the effects his treatment is having on your mental, emotional and physical health.

THE FOLLOWING "RULES OF FAIR FIGHTING" ARE OFFERED BAY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

Conflict is a normal state of affairs between humans. Resolving conflict effectively can work toward strengthening relationships. The following rules are helpful to use when settling a difference between spouse or child:

- Decide upon a time limit for discussion before you begin and stick to it — no more than 30 minutes, preferably 15-20 minutes.
- If you don't finish in the amount of time allotted, then schedule for another day.
- Decide on how many "zaps" (or hurtful remarks) you'll permit before either of you will walk away. A zap is a hurtful remark, insult, threat, dig, etc.
- If a person feels he or she has been zapped, he or she has been! Any attempt to threaten, shame or blame is another zap.
- Choose one problem to address per session. Have a session every day if you need it, but stick to one problem per session.
- Stay in the present. Don't bring up what happened 12 years or 12 days ago unless it very specifically relates to the present.
- Stick to the point. Don't get carried away with other subjects.
- Own your own feelings. Avoid blaming your partner for your feelings. They are not anyone else's, they are yours. "I" statements are particularly good for this.
- Listen to the other person. You need both points of view to find an agreement for both of you.
- Agree upon a solution which is good for both of you, not just one or the other of you.

DEAR ABBY

Believing good news was bad choice for patient

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for furthering the education of your readers regarding the necessity of breast self-examinations.

Van Buren

I am 37 years old, with no history of breast cancer. Upon feeling a lump in my breast a year and a half ago, I went to my OB/GYN doctor. She felt the lump and said, "Don't worry. It's nothing."

I trusted her judgment and ignored the lump for eight months, until I started to feel a dull pain in that area. I went to my family doctor who said, "It's probably nothing, but I'm ordering a mammogram just to be safe."

The mammogram showed a definite growth, which unfortunately turned out to be cancer.

Since then, I have undergone chemotherapy and have just started radiation therapy. I have learned that many other women have not been given mammograms, or otherwise had their lumps examined via needle aspiration.

Abby, please let your readers know that sometimes they have to take their health needs into their own hands, and ask — no, demand — mammograms when a lump is discovered. A misdiagnosis can easily mean the difference between life and death.

Now, I regret relying on my first doctor's diagnosis. Sometimes when a doctor says, "Don't worry — it's nothing," we are so relieved, we forget that doctors are human and make mistakes. Mine did — and time will tell if her misdiagnosis has meant the difference between life and death for me. — LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: Thank you for sharing your experience in order to help other women. Your case clearly illustrates the importance of a second opinion. Patients should never hesitate to confirm a diagnosis, especially one where high risks are involved. Please write again. Meanwhile, you are in my prayers.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Sarah," is a part of a circle of friends — male and female — who have remained close friends all through school and even after college.

"John," a very handsome member of the group, became engaged to a woman who had not been a part of the original group.

Sarah was shocked and hurt when she learned, months later, that she had not been invited to John's wedding.

I ran into John shortly after that, and he gave me a big hug. When I told him how hurt Sarah was because she hadn't been invited to his wedding, John said, "It was my wife's big day, and I deferred to her decision."

Then I said, "That's odd; I would have thought it was your big day, too."

Abby, I believe John's wife wanted to exclude a person she perceived as a potential rival — and she succeeded.

I told Sarah I thought John's bride was petty and mean-spirited, but John will probably soon figure it out on his own.

Abby, why do you think my daughter wasn't invited to John's wedding? — SIMMERING IN SEATTLE

DEAR SIMMERING: The reason she wasn't invited to John's wedding is immaterial. However, for you to have put John on the spot by telling him how "hurt" your daughter was to have been excluded from his wedding was tactless.

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday night, my boyfriend (I'll call him Joe) and I picked out a video for rental, then we stopped and I got some wine coolers to sip while we watched the movie.

Joe fell asleep three times during the movie, and I finally had to wake him up when it ended.

In about 20 minutes, he said he was tired, took the remaining coolers, and said goodbye.

The next morning I stopped to see him, only to find that he had gone to someone else's house with my coolers, hung out there, fell asleep, and remained there for the entire night. I told him that what he had done was very rude. He accused me of overreacting.

Abby, what do you think of such behavior? I would like your opinion as proof that I am not some kind of raving nut, which is what he called me. — HURT AND ANGRY

DEAR HURT AND ANGRY: From your account of what occurred Saturday night and Sunday morning, I would not say you were a "raving nut." I would, however, question your judgment if, in the future, you tolerate such insulting and abusive behavior.

WORTH REMEMBERING: "Our ideals, laws and customs should be based on the proposition that each generation in turn becomes the custodian rather than the absolute owner of our resources — and each generation has the obligation to pass this inheritance on to the future." — ALDEN WHITMAN

Good advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. Vegetarian chili low-fat

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Even the staunchest meat lovers will want seconds of this bold vegetarian chili. With three kinds of beans and hominy replacing the meat, the fat in this chunky soup is minimal.

QUICK VEGGIE CHILI CON QUESO

28-ounce can crushed tomatoes
2 15-ounce cans pinto beans
1 15-ounce can red kidney beans
1 15-ounce can garbanzo beans
1 14½-ounce can hominy
1 6-ounce can tomato paste
1 4-ounce can diced green chili peppers
2 medium onions, chopped (1 cup)
2 medium zucchini, halved lengthwise and sliced (2½ cups)
1 to 2 tablespoons chili powder
1 teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ teaspoon sugar
Dash salt (optional)
1½ cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese (6 ounces)
Dairy sour cream (optional)
Fresh cilantro (optional)

In a Dutch oven combine tomatoes, undrained pinto and kidney beans, drained garbanzo beans and hominy, tomato paste, undrained chili peppers, onions, zucchini, chili powder, cumin, garlic powder, sugar and salt to taste, if desired. Heat to boiling; reduce heat. Simmer, covered, for 30 minutes. Remove from heat. Add cheese; stir until melted. If desired, top with sour cream and cilantro. Makes 8 main-dish servings.

Trains still chugging along

By Jean Pagel

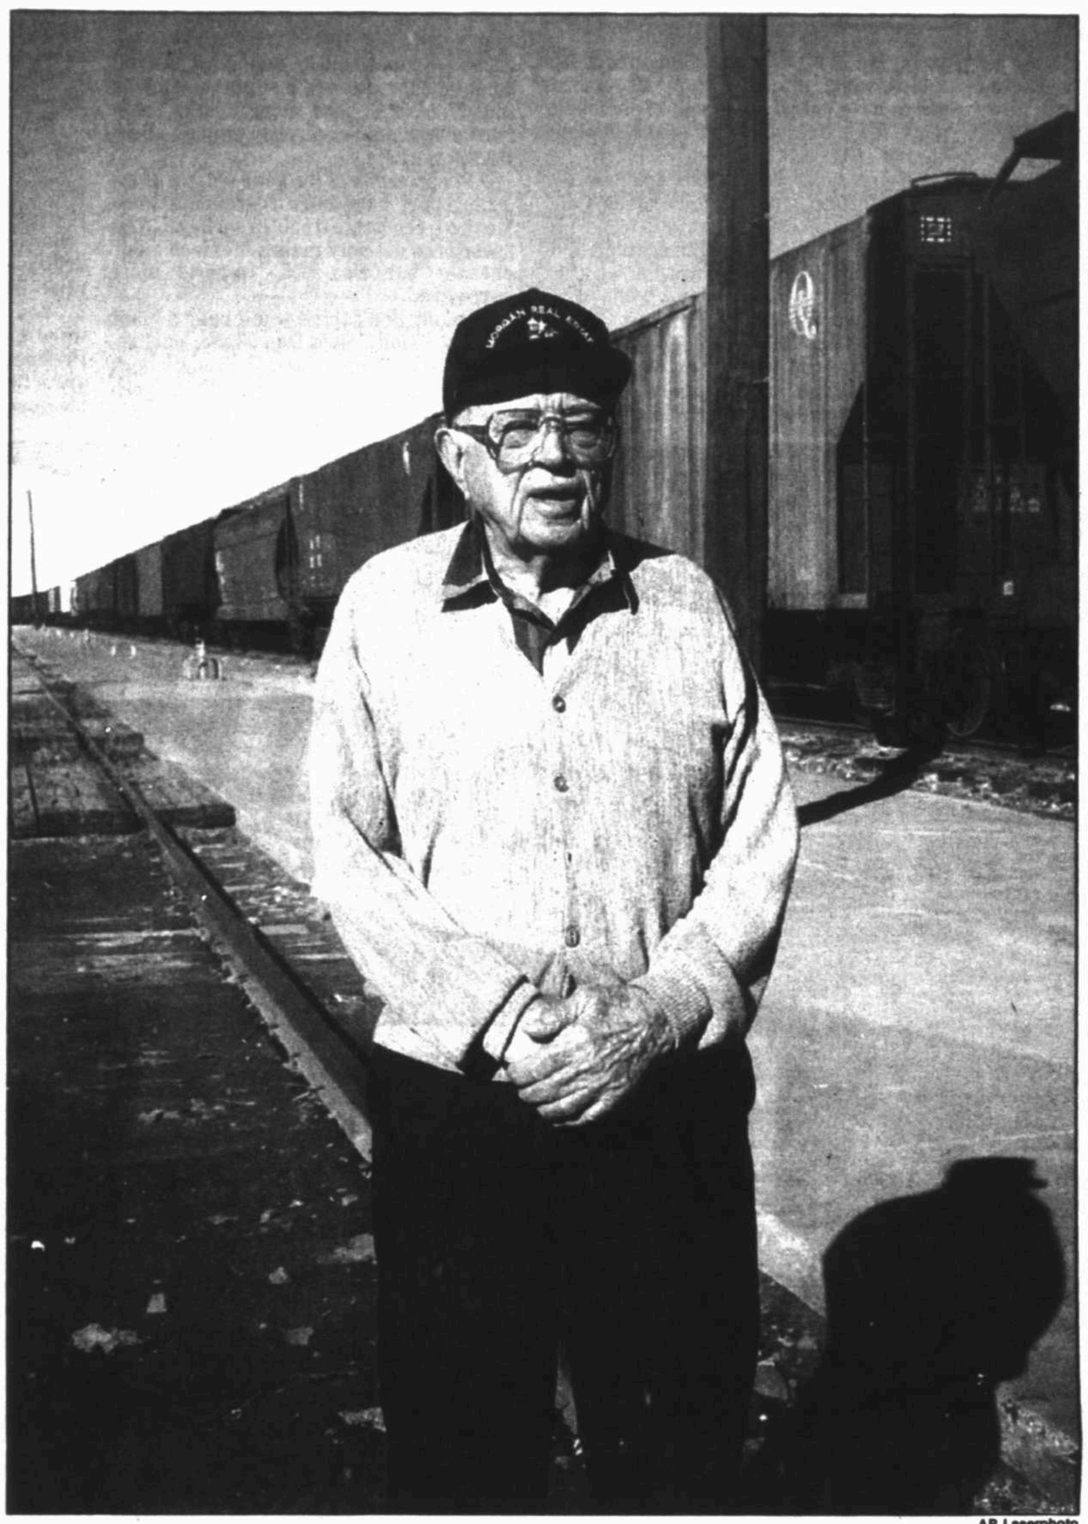

SWEETWATER (AP) — It isn't just Carlos Morris' imagination at work when the 82-year-old Sweetwater native proclaims a resurgence in trains.

Morris, roaming recently across the weedy site of a razed depot, recounted memories of the iron horse that shaped Texas a century ago.

Three railroads and hundreds of their workers used to bustle through Sweetwater, he said. Only Santa Fe Pacific Corp. remains now.

But Morris insists — and transportation experts agree — that rail activity is gaining ground again.

"The traffic is building up," Morris observed. "It's catching on fast."

AP Laserphoto

Sweetwater resident Carlos Morris, 82, poses in the Santa Fe railyard in Sweetwater on Nov. 30, 1994. Morris insists — and transportation experts agree — that rail activity is gaining ground again.

A NEW report by the Texas Department of Transportation forecasts moderately steady growth for freight rail.

The transportation plan, 11 months in the making and sent under mandate to federal highway officials, depicts a profitable industry dominated in Texas by five large operators.

Trains in Texas carried 230 million tons of commodities in 1991 along 11,370 miles of track — more track than any other state, according to the report.

Chemicals, gravel, petroleum products and farm crops made up most of the rail shipments originating in Texas. Coal and grains were the commodities most commonly bound for here by train.

"You can put so much more weight-wise on rail than you can on a truck," said Jack Foster, a planning coordinator for the state transportation department. "Trucks are limited both by size and weight what they can operate on the highways."

"STEEL WHEEL and steel rail is still the most efficient way to move a mass on land," said Stephen Roop, head of rail research for the Texas Transportation Institute in College Station. "It takes less fuel to move a ton by steel than by rubber and asphalt."

Forty-six railroads operated in Texas in 1993, the state's report said. That's up from 33 railroads in 1978.

The Texas Railroad Commission considers five of those operators — Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe; Burlington Northern; Kansas City Southern; Southern Pacific; and Union Pacific — as Class I, meaning they earn more than $250 million annually.

The proposed merger of Burlington Northern and Santa Fe would create a railroad with 3,596 miles of Texas track, slightly more than what leader Union Pacific operates, the report said.

ON THE downside for small-town Texas, companies are abandoning track in rural areas where demand for freight rail has dwindled.

From 1981 to 1993 in Texas, according to state figures, 2,126 miles of track were abandoned — about one quarter of that in 1993 alone.

"Abandonment deprives these communities of opportunities for growth and economic development and adversely affects overall community quality of life," the report said. "At the same time, shipping costs for business in these communities climb."

But Roop sees a resurgence for trains based on the long-haul capacity that rail offers against trucking's flexibility.

The resurgence "reflects the industry's consolidation, streamlining, improvements in efficiency," Roop said. "Rail is becoming the mode of choice for many shippers and is even entering into partnerships with trucking to carry trailers."

EXPERTS PREDICT more complementary freight hauls in wake of deregulated trucking and the North American Free Trade Agreement's escalated trade with Mexico.

One observer described a historical "cat and dog fight" between trucks and trains.

"However, changing demands in industry have led to new cooperation," said Hampton Rogers, a spokesman for the Austin-based Texas Motor Transportation Association.

Trucking's share of shipments surged years ago with the development of the U.S. highway network.

But Roop pointed out the public costs for new roads and road maintenance.

"Trucks tear up our roadways," he said. "Trucks are not as fuel efficient (as trains). Trucks are not as environmentally friendly."

THE LOCOMOTIVE that permeated Texas folklore and landscape provides an essential link to movement of commodities in the '90s, Roop said. The industry remains innovative, he said — even given its historical roots and the romantic fascination some people attach to a train.

"It's a fabulous piece of machinery. It's huge, it's powerful," Roop said. "It's a marvelous system to move goods and material."

Exercise healthy for older people too

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Exercise is now recognized as the "sine qua non" for management of high blood pressure, low blood pressure, some heart and lung conditions, obesity, lack of appetite, excessive hunger, softening of the bones, softening of the brain, fatigue and lassitude, depression, compulsive activity, stiff joints, back pain and sexual prowess ("sexercise").

Page

It literally puts to shame the claims of Lydia Pinkham's Compound and elixer Haddacol but "mirable dictu" is true.

The following abbreviated discourse explains in happily oversimplified terms how this came about.

In the beginning there was primordial ooze — a rather nasty looking mess that, however, contained all of the necessary building blocks for life (carbohydrates, proteins, fats, minerals, hormones, vitamins, enzymes).

Then along came the element oxygen, the prime facilitator for progressive change and development.

Over the millennia this has culminated, for the moment at least, with present day man's mind, body and soul. Just as an amoeba absorbs oxygen directly from a fluid media, so does the body utilize oxygen, made available via blood, whose composition resembles ancient day sea water.

It is the circulating blood that enables the body's cells to convert food into energy and to rebuild tissue.

The performance of physical exertion, exercise, by accelerating the pulse rate does indeed increase the supply and available quantity of that gaseous element, namely oxygen. This is one type of gas that will not bother you.

It is critical to remember that all exercise must be tailored to the individual and prescribed by a knowledgeable instructor and then only after one's physical condition has been medically evaluated.

In those persons over 75, emphasis should be placed on flexibility, strength, coordination and balance rather than on aggressive aerobic training.

The next column will outline specific activities and also note the risks involved. Remember that the original marathon runner dropped dead at the finish line.

Follow the good sense of Erma Bombeck, who quipped: "The only reason I would take up jogging is so that I could hear heavy breathing again!"

Scientists search for ways to end aging process

By Dr. Michael Freedman

NEW YORK (AP) — From Harvard comes a report that one of the hottest areas of research right now is aging — and how to put a stop to it. A few scientists hope to eventually figure out how people can live well beyond the 120-year mark that is today's maximum life expectancy.

Some researchers speculate that a select group of genes may extend life; others are looking for therapies to halt the processes that damage cells and lead to the body's deterioration and eventual death. And still other scientists say the answer to longevity is far more mundane: a healthy diet, regular exercise and positive social interaction.

There is clear evidence that staying active, both mentally and physically — along with eating a nutritious diet — strengthens the brain, muscles, heart and immune system.

In an earlier column, I reported that research scientists have been able to quadruple the life span of the lowly rat by improving its environment and diet, give it proper exercise and provide it with plenty of social contact and an active sex life.

Even scientists who are intent on slowing the biochemical advance of aging acknowledge that no pill will even substitute for the benefits of good nutrition and exercise.

So even if research scientists are able to identify longevity-related genes, it will not significantly help people who don't take good care of themselves in the first place.

Peso devaluation increases hardships of Mexican laborers

By Josh Lemieux
Associated Press

MATAMOROS, Mexico — Each day, Lucia Palomares walks across railroad tracks to work at a General Motors plant near her plywood-walled house, the same as she did before Mexico's latest economic crisis.

But now she walks home from the car-radio assembly line with less purchasing power, thanks to a peso devaluation and ensuing price hikes that have gobbled a big chunk of the family budget.

Meanwhile, U.S.-owned maquiladoras — assembly plants that use Mexican labor to make products mostly for export back into the United States — are seeing a dramatic drop in their payroll costs, thanks to a stronger dollar that buys 40 percent more pesos.

"The only ones who benefit are the maquiladoras because they sell (in dollars) over there," Mrs. Palomares said, nodding north toward the United States, "and they pay in pesos here."

She and her husband, Ruben, often used to buy chicken and other groceries across the Rio Grande in Brownsville, Texas.

Now the U.S. prices aren't worth the trip and they can't afford to buy much meat for their five children, ages 2 through 13. Refried beans, rice, fruit and vegetables will be their main courses, at least for now.

Palomares, gazing at his 2- and 3-year-old daughters playing next to a swing set he made from scrap wood, said he wished he could afford more.

"We can't do anything but wait with patience," he said.

Workers in Matamoros, an industry-ringed border city of about 400,000 residents, have the strongest unions and generally receive the top wages in the maquiladora industry.

Still, Mrs. Palomares, who has spent four years at GM's Deltronicos de Matamoros, earned only 284 pesos per week, or about $83, before the devaluation began Dec. 20.

Her salary has climbed to 312 pesos per week, but now that equals only about $54.

> 'The only ones who benefit are the maquiladoras because they sell (in dollars) over there, and they pay in pesos here.'
> — Lucia Palomares

Meanwhile, prices at many Matamoros stores have jumped by about 33 percent or more for such staples as beans, cooking oil and milk.

"We're going to have to dedicate our money to food, and sacrifice clothes and shoes and such things," said Ruben Palomares, 38, who receives the equivalent of $78 a month in worker compensation after slipping and injuring his back while working in a grocery store.

He takes care of the children and serves as neighborhood leader of Colonia Baltazar Diaz Bazan, which is sandwiched between a sprawling industrial complex and a chemical plant.

Palomares said he's worked to bring electricity and running water to the bumpy alleys of the colonia. They're still waiting for sewerage and pavement.

During his 1993 debate with Vice President Al Gore over the North American Free Trade Agreement, Ross Perot flashed a picture of a poor neighborhood much like this one. Perot argued that cheap Mexican labor and NAFTA will combine to create a "giant sucking sound" of U.S. jobs going south. Some 2,100 maquiladoras already employ about 480,000 workers.

U.S. opponents of the year-old, tariff-reducing pact have been regrouping since Mexico's economic troubles surfaced. The lower peso not only makes Mexican labor cheaper but also U.S. imports more expensive.

"I really don't think you'll hear a giant sucking sound," said Don Nibbe, publisher of Twin Plant News, a maquiladora trade magazine. "However, with the peso devaluation and the way our phone has been ringing in recent weeks, I know that there is a lot of interest among U.S. companies in taking another look at Mexico."

Nibbe said the devaluation significantly lowers payroll costs, which make up roughly 80 percent of a typical maquiladora's operating budget. But the decline in real wages also lowers worker morale.

"Already there's pressure to bring wages up, and some maquilas have already done so, especially for the key management people who they can't afford to let go," Nibbe said.

"I talk to maquiladora managers everyday and they are of course concerned about their workers," added Arturo Torres, a McAllen, Texas, attorney who has represented maquiladoras for 20 years.

But Torres noted that President Ernesto Zedillo is encouraging businesses not to raise salaries beyond 7 percent.

"You can't really give a 40 percent wage increase and violate the tenets of President Zedillo's economic reform program because you will receive the heat of the government," Torres said.

NEW: College receives lab

(From 1B)

Because of their persistence, the college president said a decision was made "to do what was needed for this program and for Midland."

Daniel said the facility "was totally remodeled by our own staff."

The new facility boasts laboratory sinks, tables, IV stands, and medical and anesthesiology equipment. Visitors at the open house enjoyed refreshments and toured the department, which includes a room with caged mice.

Although a horse, goats, and calves have been donated to the program, MC spokeswoman Elise Coombes said no large animals will be kept on campus, except for classroom training.

Veterinary director Coombs said students will learn to do physicals, blood work and note vital signs to diagnose illness. Since the animals cannot say what ails them, Coombs said students must "learn to be very observant."

Currently there are five second-year and seven first-year students in the program.

"So, we are ready for some more students," Coombs said. "And later, as the program expands, for more equipment."

The veterinary director said the program awards a two-year associate of life science degree and prepares graduates to assist veterinarians. "There is a demand for trained veterinarian assistants," he said, noting that some students may elect to continue their education and acquire bachelor's degrees in biology, zoology or animal science.

"I'm looking forward to seeing the program flourish and grow," Coombs said in remarks to the crowd gathered Thursday. "We did this for the students. The students are the lifeblood of this program."

Senators submit IRA legislation for homemakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Homemakers would be allowed the same Individual Retirement Account deductions as their working spouses under legislation introduced Thursday by Sens. Kay Bailey Hutchison and Barbara Mikulski.

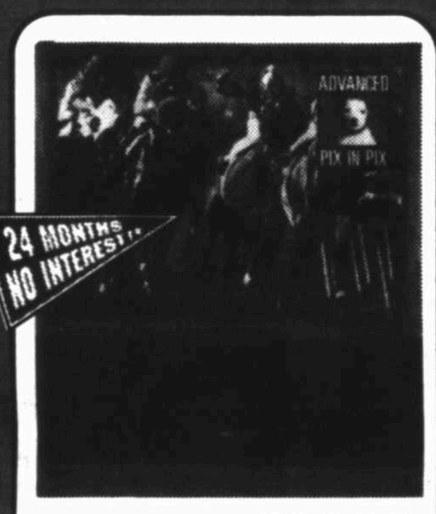

Taking up a charge they began last year, the senators said the current tax code discriminates against stay-at-home spouses, inhibits savings and doesn't promote the family structure.

Chaps claim turf war

■ Midland College pulls off another rally while New Mexico JC loses game, guard Lenny Holly for year.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Prior to the start of the game, a confrontation between the Midland College and New Mexico Junior College players occurred on the floor. Midland was accustomed to shooting at the south end of the Chap Center and the visiting Thunderbirds wanted that territory.

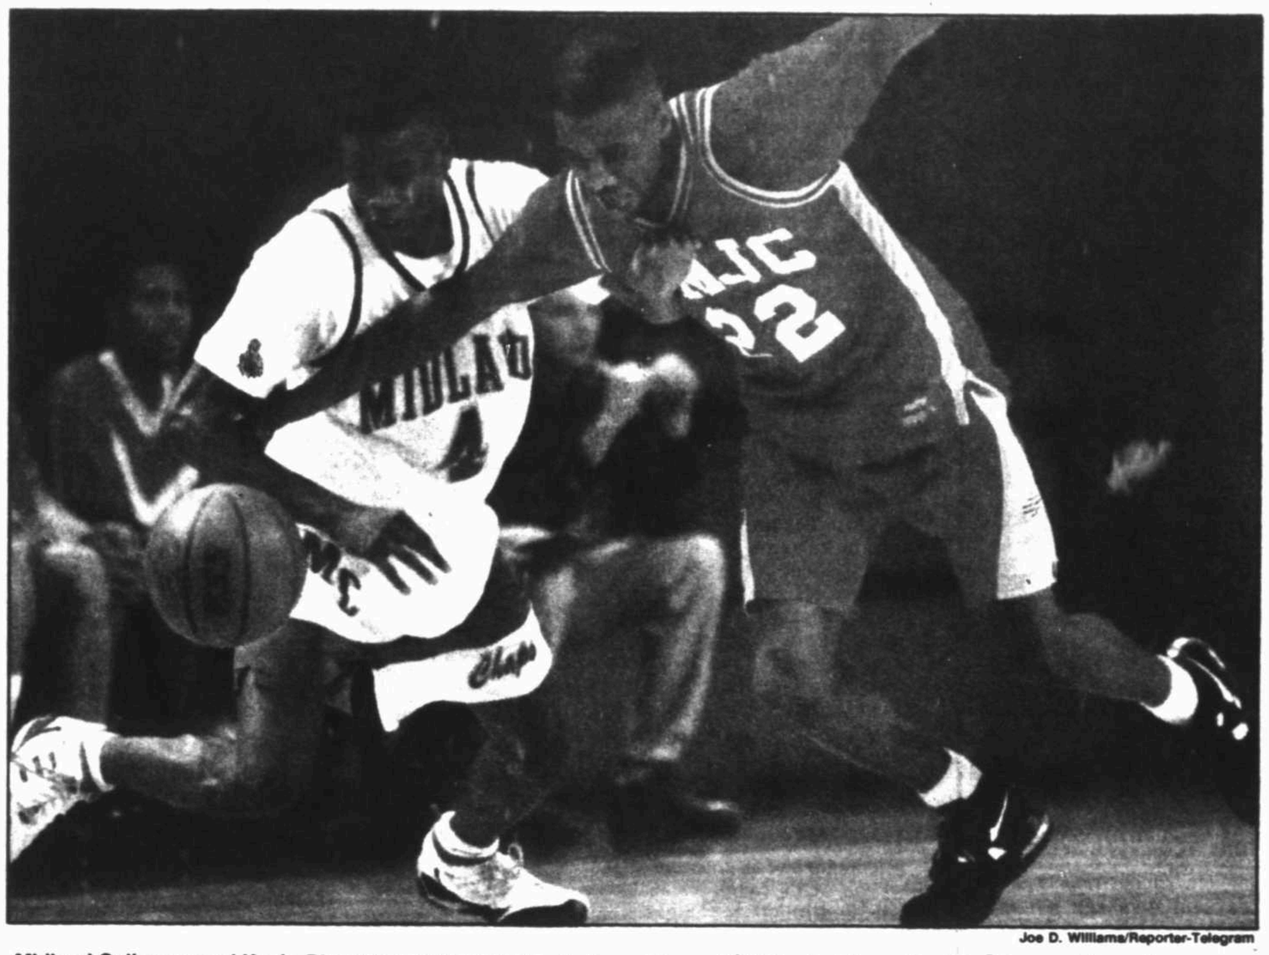

Midland gave up that end prior to the game, but recaptured its turf in a 40-minute war that the Chaps' claimed 100-94 in a battle for first place in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Midland, now, sits alone in first with a 5-0 record (18-3 overall), one game ahead of NMJC, two games ahead of Odessa College. The win also gives MC plenty of fodder when the next national poll comes out next week. The Chaps are 3-1 this year against top 20 competition, defeating Mineral Area (15th), Odessa College (third) and NMJC (ninth) since returning from the semester break.

NMJC not only lost the game but have lost its star guard, sophomore Lenny Holly, for the year. Holly will undergo surgery today in Hobbs, N.M., to re-attach a separated tendon on the middle finger of his left hand.

It was a game that lived up to its bill-

Miami has taken several steps to combat past tourist crime problems:

- Formation of a tourist-oriented police wing based at the airport that provides specially trained officers to cruise the rental car district.
- Production of a special Miami video for air travelers that tells about basic attractions, mentions the tourist-oriented police and offers common-sense tips.
- Placement of tourist information booths throughout the airport.
- Removal of telltale license plates that indicate rental cars and make renters more vulnerable to crime.
- Construction of special toll-free tourist police phones in the area surrounding rental cars.
- Initiation of program to return crime victims to Miami to testify in trials.
- Placement of sunburst symbols on highway signs to mark tourist routes and sunburst signs with specific cities listed near rental car agencies.

Lady Chaps move into first-place tie

■ Midland College dumps New Mexico Junior College 74-61 and takes advantage of Odessa's upset over Howard College to tie the Lady Hawks for league lead.

By Stewart Doreen
Staff Writer

With the most demanding road trip of the season ahead for the Midland College women's basketball team, a win Thursday night was a must.

Thanks to the team's play in the second half against New Mexico Junior College, a 74-61 win at Chap Center was a lock.

With the win, the Lady Chaps (18-4 overall, 3-1 in conference) moved into a tie for first place in the WJCAC with fifth-ranked Howard College after the Lady Hawks were upset by Odessa College 68-59 in Odessa.

The Lady Chap win came about because of a strong surge to open the second half. Down 30-28 at the half, the Lady Chaps came out and dominated play. Sophomore post Joanna Kailahi scored the first eight points of the half leading the way for a 12-1 run.

Rebounding and strong defense were the key reasons for the Lady Chaps' 17-3 scoring run. Midland outrebounded the Lady Thunderbirds 9-0 early on and didn't allow NMJC a field goal for the first four minutes of the half.

"I emphasized our rebounding and our aggressiveness at the half," Midland College coach Ron Jones said. "We did a good job of moving the ball in the second half. That's making a difference in our half-court game."

For the rest of the half the Midland women would never look back, building a lead of 26 points when the

MHS battles Cooper for District 4-5A lead

■ Midland High takes on Abilene Cooper while Midland Lee battles Abilene in District 4-5A action tonight.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The boys of District 4-5A still have five games to play before the state basketball playoffs arrive, but you might say the district championship will probably be decided at 8 p.m. today in the Midland High gym.

That's when the MHS Bulldogs take on the Abilene Cooper Cougars, both standing with identical 6-1 marks and a full two-game lead over the rest of the 4-5A pack.

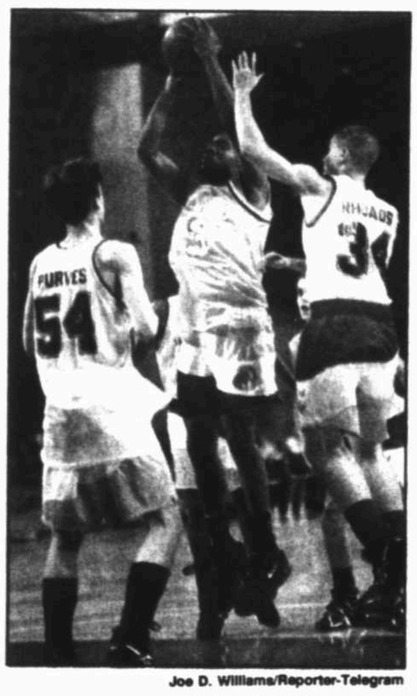

That fact was not lost on MHS coach Jack Stephenson after his team avenged its only district loss of the season by beating cross-town rival Midland Lee on Tuesday at Chaparral Center before more than 3,500 fans.

"We have put ourselves in position to play for a district championship and we have Cooper at our place Friday night," Stephenson said.

But there won't be 3,500 fans at this one since the MHS gym holds well under 2,000, but this is where Stephenson loves for the basketball to go up. It's where he feels he has a huge advantage.

MHS has already beaten Cooper on the road, and most feel that the winner tonight will own the title and the first round bye in the playoffs. MHS, a Final Four team a year ago, placed second in district play and had to earn the trip to Austin the hard way. This time Stephenson would like the bye. But he would also like a little recognition after his team climbed to 20-4 with the win over

Smiling Sampras to finals

■ Pete Sampras dried his eyes after a grim week full of injuries and health problems for his coach to beat Michael Chang to advance to the Australian Open final.

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

MELBOURNE, Australia — A phone rang as Pete Sampras, all smiles now, spoke of his aching muscles, his creaking joints and the special quality of his gutsy run to the Australian Open final.

"It's the president!" Sampras joked. "Tell him I'll call him back."

For the first night in a grim week, a torturous time when his coach and friend Tim Gullikson has been undergoing brain exams for a grave illness, Sampras finally felt free to laugh.

Perhaps President Clinton will call Sampras if he wins this Grand Slam tournament on Sunday, and if he does it will be a call well deserved. Few athletes have performed at this level while going through such physical and emotional strain.

Sampras, the defending champion, walked gingerly, his body hurting everywhere, after coming off two straight five-set matches to beat indefatigable Michael Chang, 6-7 (8-6), 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in just over three hours Thursday evening.

Sampras, who plays the winner of Friday's Andre Agassi-Aaron Krickstein match, said that reaching the final means more to him than the other five Grand Slam titles he's won.

"This is the most special to me because of the circumstances and the fact that I was down and out against (Magnus) Larsson, and down and out against (Jim) Courier," said Sampras, who lost the first two sets of both matches and was down 2-4 in the fourth against Courier. "I really fought back and showed more heart this week than I probably ever have, just refusing to go down without a fight.

Hey, it's the Super Bowl, man

Nike's real star at the Super Bowl will be Stanley Craver, the over-the-edge football fanatic portrayed by Dennis Hopper. During halftime of the game, Craver will take 90 seconds of air time that cost Nike $3 million to tell the world why he so loves the game.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Steve Young, Deion Sanders and Jerry Rice are Nike men. So are Stan Humphries, Junior Seau and Natrone Means.

The athletic shoe monolith's real star at the Super Bowl, though, will be Stanley Craver, the over-the-edge football fanatic portrayed by the master of menacing madness, Dennis Hopper.

Stanley has smelled shoes, eaten player photographs, stormed the Green Bay practice field and sung a plaintive ode to football in an empty stadium parking lot. But his finest moment might come during a second-quarter break on Sunday when, in 90 seconds of air time that cost Nike $3 million, he will tell the world why he so loves the game.

The trenchcoat is gone. The soiled referee's jersey is replaced by a crisp, clean one. Stanley stands, a la George C. Scott in "Patton," in front of a dark flag with an orange football that bears the Nike Swoosh.

He says he couldn't play football because he was allergic to milk "and the soybean juice my mother gave me made my bones weak."

As clips are shown of NFL greats, all of them under Nike contract, Stanley shouts of the "ballet of bulldozers, the moments of grace in a sea of fury."

"I have seen the locker room, my friends," he says. "I have smelled the shoes, stormed the field and sung the songs. And I

Drexler trade wish could be granted

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Clyde Drexler may be about to get his wish to be traded to a title contender, and he wouldn't have to leave the Northwest.

The New York Daily News reported Thursday the Portland Trail Blazers and Seattle have agreed tentatively to a deal that would send Drexler to the SuperSonics for Kendall Gill.

Sonics president Wally Walker wouldn't comment on the report except to say the Drexler-Gill deal "has been mentioned for a long time." Blazers president Bob Whitsitt was out of town on a scouting trip and didn't return a telephone message.

Blazers spokesman John Christensen said the team does not comment on possible roster moves.

Both shooting guards have expressed unhappiness.

ing. Midland College lived up to its reputation as the comeback kids, erasing an 18-point New Mexico Junior College lead, the third conference win by the Chaps after trailing at intermission.

"It's just the heart of the guys," said Midland guard Kevin Rice who pulled out his arsenal of dunks, free-throw shooting and hard-nosed defense in a shootout with Holly. "We have the mental toughness where we can come back from an 18, 20, 25-point lead. I knew that it was going to be a fast-paced, high-scoring game."

Rice led the Chaps with 26 points, 15 in the first half as Midland weathered a hot NMJC team out of the locker room. Shedrich Franklin scored 21 points, Devon Phillips added 20 and D'Juan Baker chipped in 17 points.

New Mexico roared to a 19-8 lead after Shawn Baker hit one of his five three-pointers with 14:00 left in the first half.

NMJC built its lead to 38-20 on Ray Reese's only basket of the night.

But, MC fought back, outscoring NMJC 15-2 over the next three minutes to position themselves for a second-half charge.

In the second half, the Chaps went to work down low as Franklin and Ben Radford scored 17 points and grabbed 14 rebounds together in the second half.

"I thought that was the difference in the game," said Black, whose team led in rebounding 19-11 at the half, but was outrebounded 20-15 in the second half. "We just didn't do a very good job of rebounding in the second half, and Midland was able to get the second and third shots."

Radford's statistics did not reveal his value. His presence forced NMJC into bad shots underneath, he stole the ball from Holly on two consecutive possessions late in the second half when the T-Birds were trying to rally from an 83-76 deficit with 2:21 to play.

"I saw he was curling around and I just took the shortest rout, it was a lucky guess," said Radford.

But the loss was not what concerned NMJC coach Ron Black.

"I was pleased with the way we played. Losing Lenny is big because we only have two sophomores, anyway. Holly went back into the game because he couldn't have done anything else to it (Thursday), but if he doesn't have surgery his finger will be crooked the rest of his life."

Holly, who led NMJC with 24 points, suffered the injury with 8:33 to play in the game and Midland leading 72-69. He returned several possessions later and was there at the end draining two, three-pointers as the T-Birds tried frantically to catch Midland by trading three-pointers for free throws.

However, Midland would have nothing of the trade as they made 15-of-16 free throws in the final 1:33 of the game to seal the victory.

"I was confident with our free throw shooters," said Rafferty "I just needed Holly to miss."

MC: Kailahi leads Lady Chaps with 29

(From 1C)

Chaps lead 74-48 with about two minutes left in the game.

The domination showed up in all the statistical catagories. On the defensive end, the Lady Chaps held the Lady Thunderbirds to 10-of-30 shooting and outrebounded them 25 to 14. On the offensive side, Midland went 19-of-31 from the field hitting their shots and getting key boards on misses.

"We just fell apart," NMJC coach Brent Palmer said. "MC played harder than we did. We just didn't come out with the defensive intensity we needed."

The second-half surge followed a first half where the Lady Chaps came out somewhat sluggishly. Despite jumping out to an early lead, MC fell behind New Mexico, 11-12 and 2-3, and trailed on and off for much of the half. NMJC's Kristi Allen led the Lady T-Birds with 21 points and Erica Holloway had 12. Anita Vuletic struggled with eight points on 4-of-15 shooting.

Midland's 9-of-35 shooting in the first half and a rough NMJC team made it difficult for Jones' ball club.

"In the first half, they (NMJC) were the aggressors, and we held back," Jones said.

Kailahi paved the way for a Lady Chaparral victory, scoring a game-high 29 points on 12-of-15 shooting. Kailahi, the benefactor of Midland's excellent ball rotation, pounded the physical New Mexico defense to help establish Midland's inside game.

"When she (Kailahi) stays out of foul trouble and moves her feet, there is no one who can stop her," Jones said. "She's a very dominant center."

What was also impressive about the Lady Chaps' victory was that they won without the services of point guard Amber Follis, who missed the game due to a badly bruised left knee. Midland made up for the loss of its field general using a total team effort.

"We pulled together," Midland's Stacie Johnson said. "(But) we're used to playing with other players at the point."

Rashunda Jarmon added 11 points for the Lady Chaps. Roslynn Dunn led the team with nine assists while Johnson, the conference's defensive player of the week, had nine boards.

Midland will travel to Big Spring on Monday for a first-place showdown with Howard College. The 5:50 game will be the first of the team's remaining seven games, five of which are on the road.

4-5A: Local teams in action tonight

(From 1C)

Lee.

"The Texas Basketball Coaches Association doesn't have any team from Region I ranked in its poll," Stephenson said. "Surely, someone out here should be ranked. Arlington Martin came out here to one of our tournaments and lost by 15 to El Paso Irvin and we beat Irvin for the championship. Martin is ranked No. 3. And I think I have what may be the best team I've ever had in my life. I don't think that makes a lot of sense that we are not ranked somewhere."

Meanwhile, Midland's other three teams are all still playoff hopefuls. The Midland High girls can almost nail down a third consecutive 4-5A crown with a win against lowly Cooper in Abilene while the Lee boys travel to Abilene High to face a team that the Rebels lost to at home and the Lee girls host Abilene High, the only other team beside MHS to defeat the Lady Rebels. All those games have 8 p.m. starts.

But MHS girls coach Jim Raughton isn't counting his chickens.

"We still have three district games left and two on the road (Cooper and Permian) but it's nice to be on top," Raughton said.

Cooper came close to upset over AHS Tuesday, losing by only four points, so Cooper has shown improvement.

Lee girls coach Elise Kail can take a giant step toward the playoffs with a win over Abilene High, but knows the challenge ahead is a rough road.

"We've got a tougher schedule than Midland High, but we're at home for every game except Permian. We've got to take advantage of the home games," Kail said.

The Lee boys at 4-3 are reeling from two consecutive 4-5A losses after a 4-1 start, but Lee coach Jon House isn't taking the negative approach.

"We're thinking of winning two in a row instead of the fact that we have lost two in a row," House said. "We have a little cushion in the race for third place, but our seniors are going to be asked to step forward and give us some leadership down the stretch. We need the Abilene High game and the Odessa High game that follows. We should be in good shape if we can take those two."

If all four Midland teams make the state playoffs, and that is looking more and more like a possibility, it would be the first time in city basketball history that has happened in the same year. A lot is on the line each night out.

Walsh endorses no-huddle for WFL

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

MIAMI — Bill Walsh once beat Cincinnati's no-huddle offrense in the Super Bowl. That doesn't mean the old San Francisco coach thinks the idea of calling plays on the run is such a bad thing.

Walsh is endorsing the no-huddle as part of a hurry-up effort that promises faster football for the World League, which returns this summer with six franchises in Europe.

The league will be sort of a laboratory for the NFL, partners in the venture with Fox Inc.-News Corp. With Walsh operating as offensive consultant, it promises free-flowing football with fewer interruptions, producing faster games.

"We're looking to speed up the game," Walsh said. "We want a free-scoring game with balls thrown and caught. We want continuous games with a lot of scoring."

Ane he wants them over fast. "I've heard talk of 2 hours, 30 minutes," Walsh said. "When I was on the competition committee, we were fighting 3 hours, 15 minutes."

Of course, with a television partner, commercial timneouts can't be disturbed. So Walsh sees cuts elsewhere. Fewer penalties and holding huddles — if teams insist on using them — within two yards of the line of scrimmage to speed them up. With rosters limited to 32 players, there will be fewer substitutions and, he hopes, fewer pileups on tackles.

If it sounds revolutionary, that's what appeals to Walsh. "It's something new, something different," he said. "It's a chance to streamline the game a little."

The World League last operated in 1992 with teams in both Europe and the United States. It returns with six franchises, all of them overseas.

"Our current plan is for a European product with six teams," said Neil Austrian, president of the NFL. "At some point, we'll step back and rethink where else to go."

Those possibilities include Mexico and South America, but not, at least for the time being, the United States.

The teams, each outfitted in uniforms featuring colorful logos and designs that were unveiled Thursday, are the Amsterdam Admirals, Barcelona Dragons, Frankfurt Galaxy, London Monarchs, Rhein Fire, based in Dusseldorf, and Scottish Claymores, based in Edinburgh.

They will play 10-game schedules beginning April 8, and their rosters will include seven national players, at least three of whom must be active and play in each game. For home games, all seven will be activated. The Euopean players were selected following tryouts late last year. They will be supplemented by NFL players and players selected in the World League draft, scheduled for Feb. 20-21 in Dallas.

The league will operate with a salary scale that pays quarterbacks $20,000, other players $15,000, kickers and punters $10,000 and inactive players $5,000.

The coaching staffs include some familiar names.

Ex-Boston College coach Jack Bicknell returns to coach Barcelona. Ex-Florida coach Galen Hall will coach the Rhein Fire. Longtime NFL assistant Bobby Hammond is London's coach. Al Luginbill, who coached Marshall Faulk at San Diego State, will coach Amsterdam. NFL Hall of Famer Ernie Stautner will coach Frankfurt. Lary Kuharich, who coached college football as well as in the CFL and the Arena League, is the coach of the Scottish Claymores.

Other ex-NFL types coaching in the league include Doug Williams, offensive assistant with the Claymores; Lionel Taylor, offensive coordinator for the Monarchs; Carl Hairston, defensive assistant with Barcelona; and Wes Chandler and A.J. Duhe, both with the Fire.

Walsh said finding players won't be a problem. "There are hundreds, even thousands of outstanding athletes who'd like to play pro football. There's not enough room with 30 teams. Frankly, with 50 teams, there would still be plenty of athletes."

OPEN: Sampras tops Chang to make finals

(From 1C)

"That's really important to me. I think I've shown a lot of people that I might look kind of lackadaisical, but deep down inside I'm doing whatever I can to try to win."

In the tears he shed over Gullikson during the Courier match, Sampras also revealed the emotional side of his nature that he had always sought to conceal. He had presented a stoic veneer on court, giving away nothing to his opponents or the crowd. But with the 43-year-old Gullikson hospitalized in Chicago after a dizzy spell that followed diagnoses of two strokes and a congenital heart condition, Sampras could hide his feelings no longer.

"I think people understand that I'm normal, I have feelings like everyone else, and that I'm not a robot out there, that I play the way I play, and the way I carry myself is just the way I am," Sampras said. "I'm as normal as the guy across the street. I think that's what people have to realize when they see tennis players. We're not above everyone else. We do the same things everyone else does. It was a very tough thing to go through."

Sampras said he's been chatting daily with Gullikson and talking about strategy with him.

"He's in good spirts," Sampras said. "It's nice that he's home and with his family. He's recovering and he's doing good."

Gullikson was still flying home from Australia when Sampras dueled Courier for four hours, but after hearing what happened, he said "it was a helluva win, and to win that match under the circumstances was an extraordinary effort."

There were moments during the match against Chang when the enervated Sampras could barely move. Instead of running after everything, he picked his spots. Chang, meanwhile, chased every ball and seemed like one of those pesty Australian blowflies, always in Sampras' face and refusing to go away.

"I was pretty tapped in the last couple of days," Sampras said. "The match against Jim was very tough on the body. I think the point where I really started to feel it was in the middle, kind of in the beginning parts of the fourth, when the body is sore and I was just tired. That's the time when you just have to play the points that you really have to win. If it's 40-love, it doesn't make sense wasting energy. The long match just takes its toll."

Chang showed off the power he's been developing, serving 20 aces at up to 120 mph. Sampras' speed was up there, too, with a respectable 13 aces, but it was his solid play in long rallies and relentless attack at the net that won it for him after he took seven straight games from the second set to the middle of the third.

"I just hung in there like I did in my previous couple of matches," Sampras said. "I knew if I kept on Michael from the backcourt, I could wear him down. And I did wear him down a little bit, but I myself was getting pretty worn out in the fourth. I was very sore today and a bit stiff and it took me a little while to get loosened up. Fortunately, I have two days off now, because my body's a little banged up."

For Chang, the disappointment of losing was softened by the success he had in getting to his first Grand Slam semifinal since the 1992 U.S. Open and pushing Sampras as hard as he did.

"It's been a good tournament for me," Chang said.

NIKE: Stanley becomes success

(From 1C)

have heard the footsteps.

"Yes. And they say to me, they say 'Stanley, is football the greatest game in the world? And I say, 'Yes, footsteps. Yes it is!'"

Then he turns sharply and, in the inimitable style of a referee, walks away.

Stanley, you see, is a former NFL referee, something the 14 other spots in the campaign have occasionally hinted.

"Either the league asked him to leave or he left on his own or he just disappeared," said Stacy Wall, the ad campaign's writer and creative director.

Wall works for Wieden & Kennedy Inc., the Portland advertising agency responsible for all of Nike's off-the-wall, award-winning campaigns.

"They believe in creating commercials that half the people who see them are going to love. If you want to do that, you have to accept the fact that half the people are going to hate them," Wall said. "They're willing not to be middle-of-the-road, which is a wonderful thing to have in a client."

Stanley has done more to associate Nike with football than any Super Bowl MVP ever could.

The campaign began in the fall of 1993 as Nike introduced its turf trainer shoes as part of its cross-trainer line.

"It has gone on to become a highly successful category for us," Nike spokesman Keith Peters said. "It helped us establish and build a business."

Sales of Nike's cross-trainer line rose 49 percent last year.

The ad campaign came under some criticism in its first few months because some perceived Hopper's character as making fun of the mentally ill.

"To me, we weren't really making fun of anybody," Wall said. "We created a character who's probably less obsessed with pro football than a lot of real NFL fans are. We've taken less heat this season because I think people have gotten to know the character more."

One of Wall's favorite spots is one in which Stanley says he can communicate telepathically with Troy Aikman and Michael Irvin. For the final half of the 30-second spot, Stanley stares wide-eyed and silently into the camera.

The spot ends and another company's commercial runs. Then, just before returning to the game, the camera goes back to Stanley staring for another 15 seconds.

Hopper had never done advertising, but agreed to portray Stanley because of Nike's reputation.

In the spots, there is no direct mention of Nike, just the company's logo or Swoosh somewhere in the background.

Hopper, who plans to be at the Super Bowl on Sunday, was finishing a movie this week and unavailable for interviews. Robin Berg, vice president of Hopper's Alta Light Productions, said the actor is extremely happy with the ads.

"They're funny," she said. "And he loves doing them."

Whether Stanley comes back next season remains to be seen.

"I can only say that this character will always love football," Wall said. "There may be a time when he needs to come back."

Anderson leads 'Horns over DePaul

AUSTIN (AP) — Roderick Anderson scored a career-high 33 points and made six straight free throws in overtime, leading Texas to 99-92 double-overtime victory Thursday night over DePaul.

Reggie Freeman added 21 points, including six 3-pointers, and Terrence Rencher scored 19 as Texas (11-4) overcame a 14-point second-half deficit for its 19th straight home victory.

Throughout their comeback, the Longhorns never led until Rencher hit a 3-pointer in the second overtime to put Texas on top 89-86.

Peter Patton sank a 3-pointer with 1:12 left as DePaul got within 93-92, but the Longhorns held DePaul scoreless the rest of the way.

Tom Kleinschmidt had 25 points and nine assists, Will Macon had 16 points and Bryant Bowden had 13 points and 11 rebounds for the Blue Demons (8-7).

Anderson forced the first overtime on a drive with 23.8 seconds left in regulation that tied the game at 76. As time ran out, he lost the ball on the way to the basket.

In the first overtime, Anderson's two free throws with 9.2 seconds left tied the game at 86. Kleinschmidt missed a potential game-winning fadeaway jumper outside the foul line as time ran out in the first extra period.

DePaul led 45-36 at halftime after taking a 14-2 lead to start the game.

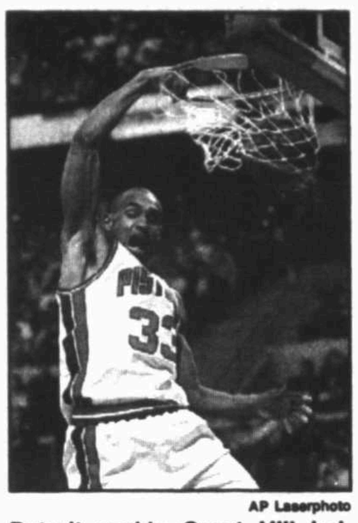

The Blue Demons handled the Texas press in the first half, patiently moving the ball past midcourt and spreading the ball around after that. Patton was 5-for-5 in the first half with 12 points.

In the second half, Texas got within 54-53 on a 3-pointer by Freeman, but the Blue Demons held the Longhorns scoreless over the next 6:39 in the midst of a 13-0 run.

Texas came back with four 3-pointers to close the gap.

Hill becomes first rookie to top NBA All-Stars

Detroit rookie Grant Hill led the NBA All-Star balloting.

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit's Grant Hill is the fans' favorite in NBA All-Star balloting, becoming the first rookie ever to lead the voting.

Getting 1,289,585 votes, Hill edged Orlando's Shaquille O'Neal in final results of fan balloting Thursday even though he's played in only 25 pro games.

"Leading the entire NBA in All-Star voting makes me feel awestruck," said Hill, who was expected to return to action Thursday night against Portland after missing eight games with a foot injury.

"I looked forward to making the rookie game this year, and maybe playing in an All-Star game sometime in the future. And now here I am, starting in the All-Star game. To me, it is an honor that should be bestowed upon someone like (teammate) Joe Dumars, not one of the league's rookies.

"But I am thankful to everyone that voted for me. I know it will be an unbelievable experience."

Joining Hill, a forward, as Eastern Conference starters for the Feb. 12 All-Star game at Phoenix are O'Neal at center, Chicago's Scottie Pippen at the other forward spot and Orlando's Anfernee Hardaway and Indiana's Reggie Miller at the guard positions.

Among the Western Conference starters is one player who doesn't even start for his own team — Phoenix guard Dan Majerle. The Suns' Charles Barkley and Seattle's Shawn Kemp were voted in at forward, Houston's Hakeem Olajuwon at center and Golden State's Latrell Sprewell at the other guard spot.

Orlando's Brian Hill, whose team has the best record in the league, will coach the East All-Stars. The West team will be led by the coach whose team is leading the conference as of Sunday, probably Phoenix's Paul Westphal.

Coaches will select seven All-Star reserves for each team. They will be announced Jan. 31.

Hill, who earlier was chosen to play in the rookie game Feb. 11, will play only in the All-Star game.

In leading the balloting, Hill edged O'Neal by 26,134 votes. The Magic center, the league's leading scorer, received 1,263,451 votes in making the All-Star team for a third consecutive year.

New York's Patrick Ewing was a distant second among East centers with 728,331 votes.

Pippen, now a five-time All-Star including four in a row, was the East's No. 2 forward in the balloting with 1,134,525 votes. Charlotte's Larry Johnson was third with 698,331.

Among the East guards, Hardaway will be appearing in his first All-Star game and Miller his second, his first since 1990. Hardaway received 999,327 votes and Miller got 908,493, with Cleveland's injured Mark Price third with 854,771.

Miller, the first Pacers player ever to start in an NBA All-Star game, took his team to the Eastern Conference finals last season and was the second-leading scorer last summer on Dream Team II, which won the world championship.

Spurs move ahead of Rockets with 103-100 win

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The San Antonio Spurs relied almost exclusively on their starting five Thursday night, getting 101 points from them in beating Houston 103-100 to move a half-game ahead of the Rockets in the Midwest Division.

Forward Sean Elliott had 26 points and David Robinson 25 for San Antonio, which still trails Utah in the division. Dennis Rodman, debuting his fifth hair color of the season (purple), grabbed 22 rebounds and added 11 points.

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 36 for Houston and Robert Horry added 20.

The lead changed hands several times before the Spurs took control at the end of the fourth quarter.

Elliott hit two free throws with 2:01 remaining to give the Spurs a 95-91 lead after Sam Cassell missed a 3-pointer. Cassell was 3-of-3 from 3-point range before the miss.

Olajuwon came back and scored on a jumper in the lane with 1:50 remaining to cut the lead to two, but San Antonio got buckets from Avery Johnson and Vinny Del Negro and Vernon Maxwell missed a 3-pointer to give the Spurs a six-point lead with 54 seconds remaining.

■ NBA Roundup

Magic 102, Bulls 99

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal had 37 points and 17 rebounds to lead Orlando to a victory over Chicago, which played without suspended star Scottie Pippen.

The Magic, who improved their NBA-best record to 34-8 and kept a spotless 20-0 home mark, trailed most of the game but took the lead for good on a flying tap-in by Donald Royal with 1:02 left.

O'Neal was then fouled on a jump hook with 37 seconds left and converted the three-point play to put the game out of reach.

Warriors 121, Bullets 118, OT

LANDOVER, Md. — Golden State ended its 14-game road losing streak, getting seven points in overtime from rookie Dwayne Morton in a victory over Washington.

The Warriors trailed by 18 points midway through the third quarter before rallying for their first road victory since Nov. 11 at Utah. Tim Hardaway scored 30 for Golden State, going 11-for-11 at the free throw line.

Suns 92, Pacers 86

INDIANAPOLIS — Charles Barkley had a season-high 19 rebounds, including a crucial one following a missed free throw in the final seconds as Phoenix defeated Indiana to match the club record of eight straight road wins.

The Pacers, who lost leading rebounder Dale Davis with a dislocated right shoulder early in the second quarter, trailed 80-65 with 9:23 left in the game. Rik Smits, who led all scorers with 26 points and had a team-high 12 rebounds, and Bryon Scott sparked a 17-4 run that left Indiana trailing 84-82 after Derrick McKey made two free throws with 3:54 to play.

Cavaliers 77, Hawks 68

ATLANTA — Cleveland matched its lowest scoring output of the season and it was good enough for another victory.

With Chris Mills and Tyrone Hill leading the Cavaliers with 14 points apiece, Cleveland held the Hawks to their lowest score since moving to Atlanta.

Trail Blazers 106, Pistons 89

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Clyde Drexler, the subject of persistent trade rumors, scored 13 points and sat out the final 16 minutes as Portland beat Detroit.

Rob Strickland had 15 points and seven assists and Clifford Robinson had 14 points for Portland, which used an 18-2 run late in the third quarter to pull away.

Knicks 87, Clippers 74

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing had 21 points and 10 rebounds as New York won its sixth straight game and their 14th in the last 15, beating Los Angeles.

The Clippers were held to just 29 first-half points as they lost their third straight on a six-game road trip that began Monday.

Jazz 120, SuperSonics 108

TACOMA, Wash. — The Utah Jazz won their 15th straight road game — one short of the NBA record — and 11th in a row overall, outscoring Seattle by 12 points in the fourth quarter.

Utah will attempt to tie the record set by the 1971-72 Los Angeles Lakers when they play at Houston next Thursday.

Cincy wins 7th straight

Associated Press

DAYTON, Ohio — Darnell Burton scored all of his 11 points in a 19-2 game-opening run Thursday night that swept No. 19 Cincinnati to an 81-60 victory over Dayton, its seventh straight win.

Burton, a key figure in Cincinnati's longest winning streak in two years, hit three 3-pointers and two free throws in the four-minute spurt. Cincinnati (15-5, 5-0 Great Midwest Conference) led by double digits the rest of the way.

Fans started filing out of UD Arena with 10 minutes left when Dayton (6-10, 0-4 GMC) fell behind by 30 points. The Flyers have lost six of their last seven, a skid interrupted only by a 10-point victory over Notre Dame on Jan. 17.

No. 20 Missouri 85, Colorado 80

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Paul O'Liney missed his first five free throws and then hit 13 in a row, including eight straight in the final 2½ minutes as Missouri rallied from a 12-point deficit to beat Colorado for the 23rd straight time at home, 85-80.

A free throw by Scott Combs gave the Tigers (14-3 overall, 3-2 Big Eight) a 78-73 lead with 37 seconds to go, but 3-point buckets by Colorado's Mack Tuck and Donnie Boyce made it 80-79 with 16 seconds left.

Despite breaking out of a four-game shooting slump by hitting a season-high 57 percent, Missouri won it at the foul line.

No. 24 New Mexico St. 75, San Jose St. 66

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Rodney Walker made all three of his 3-point attempts and scored 20 points in leading New Mexico State to a Big West Conference victory over San Jose State.

The Spartans (1-15, 0-8 Big West) led 39-32 at the half and maintained an advantage until Clyde Jordan gave the Aggies (14-4, 5-2) the lead at 43-42 with two free throws with 14:51 to play. Over the next five minutes, the game was tied at 43-43, 45-45, 49-49 and 51-51, the last with 9:43 left.

Then 3-pointers by Skip McCoy and Walker gave New Mexico State a 57-51 lead and the Spartans got no closer than four thereafter, that at 60-56 with 6:57 remaining.

No. 12 Arizona 97, No. 18 Oregon 89

EUGENE, Ore. — Damon Stoudamire scored 28 points with six 3-pointers as No. 12 Arizona handed No. 18 Oregon a 97-89 loss, its first at home this season.

Stoudamire, who grew up in Portland, had promised the Wildcats (14-4 overall, 4-2 Pac-10) would sweep a pair in his home state this week and his long-range shooting backed up the boast against the Ducks.

Ray Owes scored 13 of his 17 points in the second half as Arizona dominated the game inside in its eighth straight victory over Oregon. Joseph Blair had 19 points and 12 rebounds for the Wildcats and Corey Williams scored 17. Owes and Williams also had 10 rebounds apiece

The Ducks (12-3, 4-2) shot 37 percent from the field, 31 percent in the second half, and were outrebounded 54-42.

No. 4 UCLA 77, No. 17 Stanford 74

LOS ANGELES — Ed O'Bannon scored 23 points for No. 4 UCLA, which made six foul shots in the last 81 seconds to escape with a 77-74 victory over Stanford.

Stanford's Dion Cross missed a 3-pointer as time expired.

The Bruins (12-1, 6-1 Pac-10) led 45-31 at halftime, but Stanford (12-3, 3-3) went ahead 74-73 on Cross' fourth 3-pointer of the second half with 1:07 remaining.

Two free throws by George Zidek with 45 seconds left put UCLA back on top, and Tyus Edney made one with 24 seconds to play and another with 14 seconds left to increase the margin.

Greenspan sees slower economy

■ Interest-rate increase 'looks like a done deal,' economists say.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — There is evidence the torrid pace of the economy is slowing, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress Thursday. But he offered no indication it was enough to make further increases in interest rates unnecessary.

The economy, Greenspan told the Senate Budget Committee, is "no longer flat out. Fairly good moderate growth is occurring. That is an important plus for the stability of the economy. These are good signs, not bad signs."

Private economists said they remain convinced the Federal Open Market Committee will boost rates — probably by a half percentage point — when the Fed's key policy-setting panel meets Tuesday and Wednesday to review the economy.

A rate increase "looks to us to be a done deal," economists for Merrill Lynch & Co. said in a statement.

David Wyss of DRI-McGraw Hill, a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm, told the Senate panel, "I do not think the next tightening is overly dangerous. But we are getting close to the line between slowdown and recession."

Judging from Greenspan's testimony, Wyss said, the Fed chairman "is feeling a bit more confident the economy is slowing down" and the Federal Reserve may leave rates alone after next week's anticipated boost.

If the policy-making panel pushes rates higher as expected, it would be the seventh time in 12 months that the central bank has raised rates in a series of preemptive strikes against inflation. The six increases have pushed the prime lending rate up 2.5 percentage points, raising the cost of borrowing for millions of Americans.

Greenspan, testifying on Capitol Hill for the second straight day, appeared Thursday to subtly shift the emphasis of his remarks.

On Wednesday, Greenspan stressed that the economic expansion, now nearly 4 years old, is still too rapid to prevent inflation from rising.

He said the economy apparently expanded at about a 4 percent rate last year, the fastest in a decade and well above its capacity to grow without inflation.

The Commerce Department on Friday will announce its preliminary estimate of growth in the gross domestic product for the fourth quarter of 1994. GDP measures all goods and services produced in the United States.

Most recent data have pointed to continued robust growth through the end of last year.

The Commerce Department reported Thursday that factory orders for big-ticket durable goods such as cars and computers rose 1.4 percent in December, capping the biggest annual increase in 16 years.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Gasoline futures rose Thursday after the Environmental Protection Agency said New Jersey would not be allowed to sell a cheaper gas.

Meanwhile, crude oil moved lower in light trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March settled at $18.24 per barrel, down 15 cents at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

Reports that New Jersey was considering lowering the required oxygen content in less polluted, reformulated gasoline sent prices down by 0.35 cents Wednesday.

Gasoline with a lower oxygen requirement would cost less, undermining Nymex contracts and leaving anyone hoping to sell gas in New Jersey with a more expensive product.

But the EPA said New Jersey had recently exceeded federal carbon monoxide limits and refused to approve the state's proposal. That sent the February unleaded gasoline contract higher. It settled up 0.19 cent at 57.44 cents a gallon on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas prices were up 2.1 cents with contracts for delivery in March settling at $1.382 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar was mixed vs. other key currencies Thursday as traders awaited fourth-quarter U.S. economic growth data and the Federal Reserve's interest-rate policy meeting next week.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 99.38 Japanese yen, down from 99.53 late Wednesday.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5178 German marks, up from 1.5175.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday: 1.2765 Swiss francs, down from 1.2770; 5.2555 French francs, up from 5.2485; 1,602 Italian lire, up from 1,598; and 1.4145 Canadian dollars, up from 1.4118.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5907, down from $1.5915.

Stocks slip

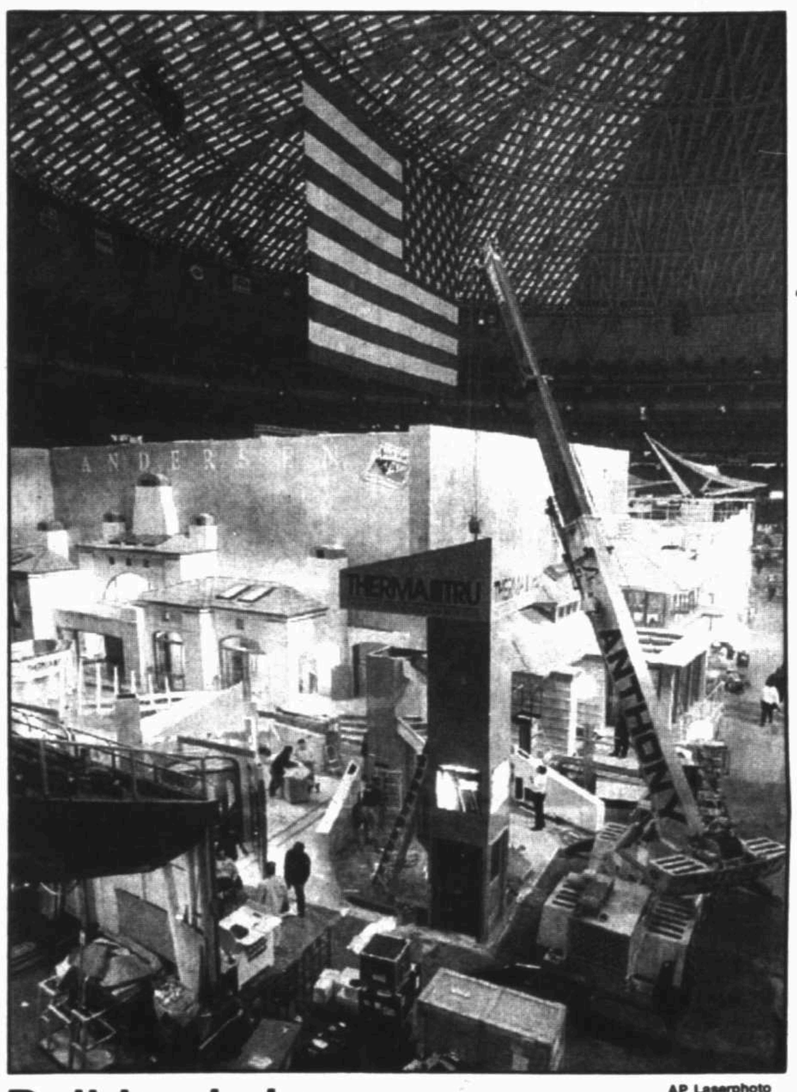

NEW YORK — Stocks ended mixed on Thursday, as investors nervously awaited some sign on the direction of interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.01 to 3,870.44. The blue chip index dropped as much as 17 points before trimming its losses.

Advancing issues were in a virtual dead heat with decliners on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,112 up, 1,032 down and 785 unchanged. Big Board volume was heavy at 311.91 million shares, but down from 341.93 million on Wednesday.

Broad market indexes were narrowly mixed. The NYSE's composite index rose 0.51 to 254.92.

City chamber panel works with state representatives

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

With the new Texas Legislature just convened, members of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Government Affairs Committee — part of the chamber's Community Development division — are working closely with area representatives.

The committee has met with State Rep. Tom Craddick, Community Development Vice President Mike Canon reported at Wednesday's Chamber board meeting and has identified five specific areas the group will concentrate on. The five are: Education and Taxes; Juvenile Crime and the Penal Code; Tort Reform and Workman's Comp; Healthcare; and Regulatory and Environmental Reform.

In addition, members of the group and others will attend the Austin Legislative breakfast, set for Feb. 21 in Austin.

Canon also reported that the division's Education Combination committee has worked hard "to bring together partnerships between educators and businesses, and I think we'll see substantial benefits from what's being done and for very little money."

In other reports, the chamber will hold its annual membership drive Feb. 27 through March 10. The goal is to sign up 150 new members during the drive.

LuAnn Morgan, vice president for economic development, reported that retention and expansion efforts in support of existing Midland businesses have been reorganized, allowing chamber staff members to concentrate on larger industries and volunteers to visit with smaller businesses. This, she explained, will allow for improved contact with the town's smaller businesses.

She also reported that representatives of a California-based high tech company are expected to visit Midland in the first quarter, and that a California-based mug manufacturer continues to be interested in relocating to Midland.

Also, Dan Anderson, vice president for the Convention and Visitor's Bureau, reported that Midland is one of three finalists to host a convention of the State Association of Young Farmers of Texas. The other two cities are College Station and Wichita Falls.

Dr Pepper has colorful Texas history

Associated Press

The proposed sale of Dr Pepper-Seven-Up Cos. Inc. to Britain's Cadbury Schweppes PLC strikes deep in the heart of Texas. In Waco, to be precise, where the country's oldest major soft drink was born in 1885.

"It's a Dr Pepper town and Dr Pepper state, there's no question about it," Joe Cavanaugh, executive director of the Dr Pepper Museum and Free Enterprise Institute in Waco, said Thursday.

The fruit syrup and seltzer concoction was first served at Wade B. Morrison's Old Corner Drug Store in Waco.

The official story goes that a young English pharmacist, Charles Alderton, invented the soda in 1885. Alderton, who also jerked carbonated drinks at the drug store's soda fountain, experimented with blends of fruit-based flavors after he noticed customers tired of the same old fruit flavors.

The drink caught on, and Morrison named it after his first employer, Dr. Charles Pepper of Rural Retreat, Va. — where some folks claim Morrison stole the secret recipe out of revenge, heartsick over a thwarted romance with Pepper's daughter.

The unusual drink has remained most popular in the Southwest, particularly in its home state, where Wacoans drink more Dr Pepper per capita than anyone else in the world.

"Dr Pepper loyalty is really intense," Cavanaugh said. "People who are Dr Pepper drinkers are wont to stay that way the rest of their lives."

The soda was introduced to millions at the 1904 World's Fair Exposition in St. Louis and gained its famous slogan, "Drink a bite to eat at 10, 2 and 4," a supposed formula for avoiding sugar letdowns, in the 1920s and 1930s.

Dr Pepper moved to Dallas in 1923 and merged in 1988 with Seven-Up, which itself was introduced two weeks before the stock market crash of October 1929 by The Howdy Corp. in St. Louis, where manufacturing remains.

The Dr Pepper museum, which is independent of the company, is the only nonprofit museum "with a mission to tell the whole story" of the entire soft drink industry, Cavanaugh said.

Opened in May 1991, the museum has hosted more than 225,000 visitors and averages about 60,000 annually. Cavanaugh hopes all the international attention from the Cadbury offer will raise its profile.

Durable-goods orders rise 1.4 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory orders for "big-ticket" durable goods such as cars and computers rose 1.4 percent in December, capping the biggest annual increase in 16 years.

But analysts noted the strength at the end of the year came from military and transportation orders and that, excluding those components, demand was weaker than it appeared.

The Commerce Department said Thursday that orders for durable goods — products expected to last three years or longer — totaled a seasonally adjusted $161.4 billion in December. It was the second straight advance, including a 3.2 percent gain to $159.1 billion in November. Orders dropped 0.8 percent in October.

The December increase helped push orders for 1994 up 13.9 percent, the biggest advance since an 18.3 percent surge in 1978. Orders rose 8.6 percent increase in 1993.

"Overall, the report still shows strength in the manufacturing sector, but there are a few signs of softness emerging," said Lynn Reaser, an economist at First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

GATT's effect on savings bonds is unknown

By Bill Doyle

Q: With the passage of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade last year, I am concerned by reports that the guaranteed rate of return for U.S. savings bonds will fluctuate. This makes me leery of continuing to invest in these bonds. Should I switch to certificates of deposit? Or, in your opinion, will savings bonds still be a safe investment?

Doyle

A: In the GATT legislation passed by Congress, a small item related to savings bonds was included in an attempt to raise some revenue to replace anticipated losses from the reduction of tariffs on imports.

The law gives the U.S. Treasury authority to eliminate savings bonds' guaranteed rate. The end to the guaranteed rate, which has not taken effect, would be retroactive to bonds issued after Oct. 1, 1994.

The Treasury is expected to replace the current, guaranteed rate with a floating rate tied to six-month Treasury bills.

Right now, the guaranteed rate for savings bonds is 4 percent, and the six-month T-bill rate is around 5.5 percent. If the rule changes were in effect today, bondholders would be getting a better rate. But, if T-bill rates should go down to what they were about two years ago, savings bond investors would get less than the current 4 percent.

Bonds that are held five years or longer now enjoy a market-based rate that is 85 percent of the rate paid on longer-term, higher-yield Treasury securities.

Under the new rules, bonds will increase in value every six months instead of every month as they do now. That was the system in place before March 1993, when Congress moved to the monthly interest calculation.

So far, no specific changes have been announced by the Treasury. Sit tight until the exact language of the changes is known. Then, based on market conditions and the outlook for competing investments, you can make your decision as to whether you should stick with savings bonds.

Q: I have shares of a fixed-income, closed-end bond fund in an individual retirement account that has 40 percent of its portfolio invested in derivatives, which have been in the news as being enormously risky. Although the overall fund value has dropped since last year, the dividends are pretty good. And the closed-end fund is now selling at a 19 percent premium. Should I sell or hold?

A: You should consider selling. That fund is especially risky now — but not because of those notorious derivatives you mentioned.

You said the closed-end fund was selling at a big premium, and that is where the true risk lies.

Such funds sell at either a premium or a discount. Your fund could move from selling at a premium to selling at a discount, and your principal could diminish significantly.

Most such funds are now selling at a discount, and any selling at a premium carry a lot of risk.

Q: My wife is participating in a 401(k) retirement plan at the place where she works. May she also have an IRA and invest up to $2,000 a year? Would the IRA contributions be tax-deductible?

A: If your family's adjusted gross income is less than $40,000 a year, your wife can invest up to $2,000 a year in an IRA, and it would be deductible.

From $40,000 to $50,000, there's a formula that gives you a diminishing amount you can invest. If your family's adjusted gross income is more than $50,000, you or your wife cannot make any tax-deductible contributions to an IRA.

Clinton sets deadline for strike

NEW YORK (AP) — President Clinton on Thursday set a Feb. 6 deadline for progress to settle the baseball strike, and the U.S. Senate called a new hearing on the sport's antitrust exemption.

Clinton ordered both sides back to the bargaining table, and union head Donald Fehr said talks probably will resume Wednesday. Clinton said if a settlement doesn't seem imminent by his deadline, he will ask mediator W.J. Usery to recommend a solution.

"I hope it doesn't come to that," Clinton said. "I urge the owners and the players to give their full support to this mediation effort, and to settle this unfortunate dispute themselves. It is time to put behind us the rancor and cynicism that are shadowing the American ideal of baseball. It is time to let all the excitement that the 1995 season can offer sweep away that tarnished image. It's time to 'play ball.'"

Usery, a former Labor Secretary appointed to mediate by Clinton last Oct. 14, failed to create a breakthrough during five rounds of negotiations. The strike, baseball's eighth work stoppage since 1972, went through its 168th day Thursday.

"We are now getting down to the final stretch," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said by telephone. "If it comes to it and former Secretary Usery does feel it is appropriate to come up with a suggested solution, and if that solution is considered to be reasonable and fair by the public, the players and owners are going to be under a great deal of pressure to abide by it."

Owners broke off talks Dec. 22 and implemented their salary cap proposal the following day. No talks have take place since, and the sides have filed unfair labor practice charges against each other with the National Labor Relations Board. Owners plan to open spring training Feb. 16 with replacement players.

"Now, as the strike drags on, it threatens the start of the 1995 season," Clinton said. "It could well damage the economies of the spring training states. It is imperiling the livelihoods of tens of thousands of workers whose jobs depend on baseball. And it trying the patience and depressing the spirits of millions of baseball fans — including me. It is time for this strike to end."

On Capitol Hill, the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on antitrust, business rights and competition called a Feb. 15 hearing on the exemption, which was created by a 1922 Supreme Court decision.

Subcommittee chairman Storm Thurmond, R-S.C., called the exemption "an important matter." Fehr and acting commissioner Bud Selig are expected to testify.

"I believe that baseball's antitrust exemption should be closely examined," Thurmond said. "I remain committed to exploring ways to bring about an end to the baseball strike in time for the 1995 season."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole offered the use of his Capitol office for negotiations.

"Some of the toughest, most stubborn legislative knots have been untangled in these offices," the Kansas Republican said on the Senate floor. "Perhaps, just perhaps, some of this compromise magic can wear off on the baseball negotiators. We'll lock the doors. We'll supply plenty of pencils and writing pads. We've got good computer software. And you can count on an unlimited supply of black coffee, too."

Waldorf survives wet weather, takes Phoenix lead

Associated Press

■ Golf

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Duffy Waldorf, thriving in chilly, wet weather that seemed better suited for Europe, shot a 7-under-par 64 Thursday to take the first-round lead at the Phoenix Open.

Waldorf teed off early and had five consecutive birdies on the back nine on the TPC of Scottsdale stadium course.

Two days of rain had softened the greens, and runner-up Hale Irwin carded his 66 after a similarly early start. Of the 41 players who broke par, only 11 teed off in the afternoon.

"The rain helped the greens a lot," said Waldorf, who has yet to win on the tour in eight seasons. "Days like this, you wish you could play 27 or 36 holes."

Jim Furyk, Bob Lohr, Tom Watson had 67s, with 11 players one stroke behind them.

The group at 68 included 1993 Phoenix champion Lee Janzen, Australian Steve Elkington, who won the season-opening Mercedes Championship, and Lanny Wadkins and Neal Lancaster, who fared the best of the late starters buffeted by 25-mph wind gusts during the afternoon.

Defending champion Bill Glasson and 13 others shot 69s. Phil Mickelson, the Northern Telecom Open champion, bogeyed the last hole and settled for a 70.

Nick Faldo of England, who tied for 25th behind Mickelson in Tucson, matched par at 71, his highest score in five rounds since he rejoined the U.S. tour full-time. Hawaiian Open winner John Morse shot a 72.

Irwin started on the back nine and had one birdie by the turn. He warmed up with a three-birdie string on Nos. 1, 2 and 3 and added another on the last hole after hitting a 7-iron to within tap-in range.

The three-time U.S. Open winner will be eligible for the Senior PGA Tour in June. He said experience told him to keep it simple in the face of adverse weather.

"I'm not a good mudder. I've tended to like the warmer climes," said Irwin, who owns 17 other titles.

Waldorf, who majored in psychology at UCLA and wears a hat inscribed, "May the course be with you," discussed his wine collection as well as Thursday's birdies, pars and bogeys. He said he has learned to shrug off the tension of never winning — a step which may help him win.

Senior Skins

KONA COAST, Hawaii — While Lee Trevino will play against Arnold Palmer in the Senior Skins Game, that doesn't preclude him from being a member of Arnie's Army.

Trevino, Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Raymond Floyd tee it up Saturday in the two-day event at the Mauna Lani Resort, with $540,000 up for grabs.

"Floyd's got to be the odds-on favorite," Trevino said. "He's the youngest (52) of the four players. He's a competitor. He's gotten more competitive since he's been in his late 40s than he was when he was younger.

"He's a big man and he hits the ball a long way. He's a great wedge player, and if he is putting well, you can't beat him.

"My problem is, I always want Arnie to win," Trevino added.

Seahawk charged with vehicular assault

SEATTLE (AP) — Lamar Smith of the Seattle Seahawks was charged with one count of vehicular assault Thursday in the crash that left teammate Mike Frier paralyzed.

Frier, a 300-pound defensive tackle who played three years in the NFL, is not expected to walk again.

King County prosecutor Norm Maleng said Smith, a rookie running back, drank at least five beers and 6½ ounces of scotch during a three-hour period at two suburban Kirkland establishments before driving his 1992 Oldsmobile Bravada into a utility pole Dec. 1.

"Drunk driving destroys lives and shatters dreams," Maleng told a news conference. "It shattered Michael Frier's dreams."

Smith, 24, will be arraigned Feb. 3. The standard sentence upon conviction in this kind of case is three to nine months in jail.

"We're going to seek a stiff sentence," Maleng said.

Seahawks running back Chris Warren, the AFC rushing champion, also was in Smith's vehicle. Warren was arrested for investigation of vehicular assault following the wreck near the team's headquarters in Kirkland.

Although the players all said Smith, not Warren, was driving Smith's vehicle, Thursday's announcement about the filing of the felony charges against Smith was the first official word that Smith was the driver.

"The confusion didn't come from the police," Maleng insisted. "They did a superb job. The confusion came from the statement of the defendant, Lamar Smith, that Chris Warren was the driver."

Maleng said Warren initially told police that he, not Smith, was driving.

"He states that he was misunderstood, but the police officer clearly recollects that type of a statement," the prosecutor said.

Maleng noted the accident scene itself led to the confusion.

"Oh, my God, it was chaotic," he said. "It was wet that night. They hit that utility pole and sparks were flying on the pole. As a matter of fact, the pole was on fire and blew out the transformers."

Maleng said fibers taken from the shattered windshield matched with Warren's clothing and placed him in the passenger side of the vehicle.

Dave Neubert, a Seahawks spokesman, said the team would have no comment on the charges. He said Warren and Smith were out of town and not immediately available for comment.

Because Smith was not arrested the night of the crash, he was not given a blood test. However, Smith's blood alcohol level was estimated to have been at a range of at least between .09 and .13, Maleng said. The legal limit to determine drunkenness in Washington is .10.

Maleng said Smith was driving about 50 mph, 20 mph more than the posted speed limit, before the crash at 8:40 p.m.

TOY CHEST

Dress up your child's room with this handy toy chest. It provides ample storage space for toys, while doubling as a bench. You can mount it on casters for easy mobility. The full-size pattern is simple to follow. Just trace onto plywood, saw out the parts, and assemble. Paint and then decorate with decals, or stain for a natural finish. The toy chest measures approximately 24 inches by 32 inches.

OFFICIAL GAME RULES

It's fun and easy! Anyone 18 or older can play the Welcome to the Oil Patch Game, except employees (and family members of employees) of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Associated Publishing Company, Brite Systems, Inc. and their advertising and promotion agencies. The Welcome to the Oil Patch Game is designed for people in Andrews, Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland, Upton, Ward and Winkler counties. No purchase is required to play or win prizes, but you must have a Permian Basin Area Wide Book lucky number to enter and win a prize. Long distance charges may apply in some areas. If you live in the above counties and do not have a Permian Basin Area Wide Phone Book, call 687-1756, 563-5440 or 800-588-1756 to find out where to pick one up without charge.

Here's How to Play

Turn to The Game Page in the Midland Reporter-Telegram or in other area publications and look for this week's question. Then call CityLine, 560-2400. enter category 1111 for the correct answer and to find out if the number on the card following page 256 in your phone book has made you a winner of one of this week's three prizes of a tank full of gasoline (valued at up to $25) and $75 in cash or the grand prize, gasoline for a year (valued up to $1,300) and $1,000 in cash.

Each week three numbers will be selected to win a prize valued at $100 or more. If the number in your phone book is a winner, keep listening. CityLine will tell you how to claim your prize. Keep calling.....new lucky numbers will be added many times in the same week promotion.

You could win one of the unclaimed weekly prizes and enter the drawing for the grand prize. Here's how: Complete the official entry form and mail it so that it arrives before the deadline or hand print your name, address and daytime phone number on a plain 3"x5" piece of paper. Be sure to include your Permian Basin Area Wide Phone Book lucky number and the correct answer to this week's question. The more often you enter, the better your chance of winning. Mail entries - one per envelope to: Welcome to the Oil Patch Game, Associated Publishing Company, 4400 N. Big Spring, Suite 201, Midland, TX 79705. All entries become the property of the sponsors. None will be returned.

Each week for six weeks ending January 15, 1995, the winning numbers will be selected at random and will win one of that weeks prizes. If the winners are not identified by CityLine, they will be drawn from mailed entries. The grand prize,gasoline for a year and $1,000 in cash, will be drawn from weekly winner and all qualified mailed entries. The total value of all prizes to be awarded in the Welcome to the Oil Patch Game is valued at $3,650 or more.

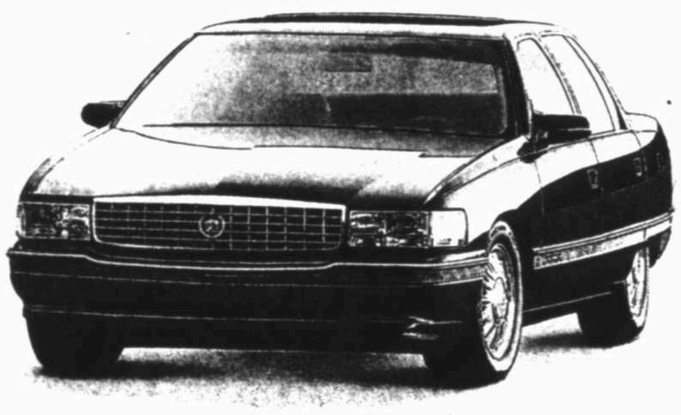

Each game begins at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday and ends at 11:59 p.m. the following Monday. No substitutions of prizes is permitted. Only one weekly prize will be awarded to each winner.

By entering, winners authorize the use of their names, cities or photos for publicity purposes. Winners may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and release. Taxes are the responsibility of winners. Void where prohibited.

A Friendly EXCLUSIVE

Friday & Saturday Only

We've just made special arrangements to substantially reduce the interest rate on our entire stock of new cars and vans. That means substantially reduced monthly payments when you buy. And, since this special financing is not available to any other dealer in Midland/Odessa, it also means more vehicle for your money than anywhere else.
