Texas voters, who have amended their State Constitution 200 times in 320 opportunities, will get a chance to add four more to the list on May 18.

This is an unusual time to be voting on constitutional amendments, most of them being presented previously on general election dates. However, the four up for consideration this spring did not clear the legislature until this session convened, and one of the four is regarded as something of an emergency.

Amendment No. 3 on the May 18 ballot provides for removal of the limitation on the total state appropriations for assistance grants for the needy aged, needy blind and the needy disabled, and for setting a limitation on total state appropriations during a fiscal year for assistance grants for needy dependent children and the caretakers of such children. This amendment was proposed to meet a pressing problem — provision of sufficient funds to meet state welfare needs, which now are restricted by a constitutional ceiling on welfare spending from state funds.

Two other amendments to be voted on May 18 deal with other matters.

Amendment No. 1 would establish a State Ethics Commission empowered to set rules of ethics for members of the legislature, state officers and legislative officers, and to investigate violations, recommend compensation for members of the legislature and the lieutenant governor, and to recommend improvements and economy in the legislative process.

Amendment No. 2 would enable the legislature to propose constitutional amendments in called sessions as well as in regular sessions.

Amendment No. 4 would authorize issuance of $100 million in bonds to provide financial assistance to cities and other public agencies for water quality enhancement purposes, provide for improvement and continuance of the water resources program, and establish an interest ceiling of six per cent on water development bonds.

In case you haven't heard, the Wabash Cannon Ball was left off of the Railpax system's passenger train line-up. This noted train, which inspired the words which were made famous long ago and then propelled to new heights by Dizzy Dean in recent years, now operates between St. Louis and Detroit, according to Justin H. Brown, executive secretary of the Wabash Cannon Ball Railroad Club. Brown, incidentally, lives in Glendale, Calif., far removed from the Cannon Ball's run, but the club apparently has widespread membership and they are pleading with Railpax to get the Cannon Ball approved for its system.

According to the information they sent, the Wabash Cannon Ball first operated in 1884 between Chicago and Kansas City. A few years later, in 1888, it also had a run between St. Louis and Omaha, via Council Bluffs, and at that time was the fastest train known.

S-VIETS LAUNCH NEW DRIVE

US B52s Bomb A Shau Valley

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B52s dropped tons of bombs on North Vietnamese positions today east of the A Shau Valley near the Laotian border as South Vietnamese forces made a series of raids inside the valley.

South Vietnamese military headquarters reported no significant contact in the A Shau operation, which apparently is a diversionary tactic.

The valley, about 450 miles north of Saigon, is a supply and infiltration corridor for the North Vietnamese that leads from key arteries of the Ho Chi Minh trail toward the populous lowlands of South Vietnam.

The U.S. Command said battlefield activity across South Vietnam was extremely light and had dropped off in recent days to one of the lowest points of the year.

The command said the B52s were sent from the U Taphao Air Base on the Gulf of Siam and attacked North Vietnamese infiltration corridors and suspected troop concentrations 15 miles east of the A Shau Valley.

Troops of the American 101st Airborne Division flew into the A Shau on Wednesday and set up fire Base Fury to provide artillery support for the South Vietnamese. The U.S. troops were withdrawn Friday, presumably after unloading heavy barrages to soften up enemy positions.

South Vietnamese forces of undisclosed strength then entered the valley, reportedly to sweep up enemy supply bases.

In the central highlands, Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen reported from Fire Base 6 that the hilltop outpost which had been under siege for more than two weeks was quiet.

North Vietnamese troops kept up their shelling of South Vietnamese positions along Highway 7 in eastern Cambodia.

Liquor Sponsors Optimistic

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP)—Liquor by the drink has passed its first House test by an almost two-to-one majority, but its sponsors are stuck with a big weekend legislative hangover.

Their problem: How to woo enough support by Monday to get the 100 votes needed to put the local option mixed drinks bill into effect at once.

House members tentatively approved the measure Friday, 83-44, after a debate that lasted until nearly 8 p.m.

Without 100 votes in the House and 21 in the Senate to accept the House rewrite of the Senate's bill, plans to require local option mixed drinks elections in 46 counties May 18 would have to be abandoned.

The bill would not take effect until about Sept. 1 if it failed to get the two-thirds margin.

Speaker Gus Mutscher, who favors immediate effect, sat white-faced, hungry and exhausted in a clerk's chair after the House adjourned.

"It'll be tough. It'll be close, but I still think there is room for optimism," he said of Monday's expected vote on final passage.

The lobbyists and House aides clustered near Mutscher looked grim and hardly optimistic.

"I'll see you Saturday and we'll have a talk," a restaurant lobbyist told Mutscher as the lobbyist took off for his belated dinner.

Reps. DeWitt Hale of Corpus Christi and Dick McKissack of Dallas, the House sponsors of the Senate-passed bill, fought off no less than 26 attempts—mostly by drys—to change the measure in one way or another.

Only one amendment was added. Offered by Reps. E. L. Short of Tahoka and Renal Rosson of Snyder, it would make life tougher for some private clubs by requiring them to have 50 members instead of the present minimum of 25

Rains Continue To Dampen Area

Light showers continued to dampen the Snyder area Friday night and Saturday morning, although no heavy rains had been reported in Scurry County.

There was enough Friday night and early Saturday, however, to make April the wettest month of the year so far. The official gauge at the city water plant had .20 inches Saturday morning, making a total of .35 inches over a two-day period.

Heavier showers were reported in some areas, including half an inch at Lake J. B. Thomas. However, there had not been enough rain on the lake's watershed to result in any runoff Saturday morning.

Rains were reported over most of the state, but the amounts varied sharply.

City Police and Sheriff's Authorities Saturday morning watched a funnel cloud dip down from the sky northeast of Dunn, but it didn't touch the ground.

The funnel cloud originally was reported by Pat Barker, who lives Northeast of Colorado city. He notified Colorado City Police, and they contacted local authorities.

Agriculture Commissioner John White said it would take a great deal more rain than fell Friday night and Saturday to begin to bring Texas out of the drought's jaws.

Tornado funnels and thunderstorms were part of the weather scene Friday but none of the twisters touched ground.

Southeast Texas, the middle and upper coastal plains got a good soaking during the night with skies beginning to clear over South Central Texas.

Representative rainfall amounts were Dallas, 1.10 inches; San Angelo, 3.5 to 4.5 inches; Del Rio, 2.13 inches; San Antonio, 1 inch with brief street flooding.

At Wichita Falls, a group of Oklahoma Indians at a shopping center did a rain dance and produced a good downpour.

The National Weather Service said most of the rain would end today over Southeast Texas and the coastal areas but scattered showers were anticipated in parts of North Central and Northeast Texas.

Conditions elsewhere in the state were to be clear to partly cloudy with a general warming trend.

Early morning temperatures ranged today in the 50s and 60s in most sections.

Nixon Scores With Editors

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon scored with the editors. They disagreed on some of his answers but applauded his willingness to face the questions.

Most members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors interviewed after Nixon's hour-long interrogation by six editors and correspondents Friday night said the President acquitted himself well.

"He did a superb job of fielding some very tough questions," said C. A. (Pete) McKnight, new ASNE president and editor of the Charlotte, N.C., Observer.

A similar appraisal came from Newbold Noyes Jr., editor of Washington's Evening Star and retiring president of the society: "A very effective performance, and he was taxed by a lot of searching questions."

An almost unanimous reaction was that Nixon had shown courage and good faith in appearing before more than 500 editors who, generally, have criticized the infrequency of his news conferences, the credibility of military information from his administration, and the shafts aimed by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew at the media.

West Texans Pushing TWP

By ROBERT HEARD
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The strongest argument for spending billions to move water to West Texas is dispersal of the population, says a longtime water official.

Scattering people is good for military, political and enviornmental reasons, says Trigg Twichell.

Twichell, 69, is head of the U. S. geological survey's water resources division for Texas. He has been with the division since 1919, and will retire June 1.

"You're required to retire at 70, don't you see?" Twichell said in an interview.

A small, puff-faced man with white hair and sleepy eyes, Twichell vaguely resembles the late comedian, W. C. Fields. He speaks in a strained whisper that he blames on eye cataract medication.

To those who say West Texas, a naturally arid area should abandon dreams of empire. Twichell says the $9 billion Texas Water Plan (TWP), which would move water to West Texas, is "not an unreasonable thing for the government to do."

Texas voters rejected the first step in the plan in 1969.

Twichell said that East Texans migrated west by the thousands in the 1930s after destroying their topsoil. "They didn't take care of it, don't you see?" he said.

He erroneously predicted at the time of the migration that West Texans would revert to dry-land farming after exhausting underground water reservoirs through irrigation.

Already, 75 square miles of the Panhandle have been taken out of farming for lack of water, he said, but instead of planning for the day of severely limited water, West Texans are pushing for the Texas Water Plan.

And rightly so, says Twichell.

For one thing, agronomists say the two richest soils in Texas are in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and in the Panhandle, he said.

But there is a more important reason: "You want to spread your people out, don't you see?"

Why?

"For military reasons," he said, explaining that crowded urban areas are more vulnerable to attack.

Are there other reasons?

"Yes, you don't want the slums of the big cities," he said.

PRESENT PAGEANT — Fourth grade students at West Elementary presented a pageant, "Texas," at the Woman's Club last week. They will present it again at 2 p.m. Tuesday on the north side of the Scurry County Courthouse in observance of "History Appreciation Week."

TO RECEIVE DEGREE — Joe Franklin Robinson, son of Joe V. Robinson of Snyder, will received the master of divinity degree May 7 at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. A graduate of Snyder High School, Robinson received the bachelor of arts degree at Hardin-Simmons University in 1967. He is married to the former Carole Jo Dickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dickson, Baptist Missionaries in Brazil.

Trip Was Success

DALLAS (AP) — A Waco group's trip to Paris to discuss American prisoners of war with North Vietnamese representatives was termed a success Friday night by the group's chairman.

Cullen Smith and the 12-member group arrived here Friday enroute home from Paris where discussions were held with the deputy delegate-general of the North Vietnamese peace talk delegation.

"It was encouraging in the fact that the North Vietnamese agreed to see us," Smith said.

Smith said the delegation refused to accept letters and petitions bearing 60,000 signatures. But, he said, the representative "listened to every word" from three men who talked with Nguyen Tuan Lieu, deputy delegate-general of the delegation.

Waco Mayor Karl May and Harry Provence, executive editor of the Waco News-Tribune and Times-Herald, accompanied Cullen to Paris.

Smith said the North Vietnamese were "very courteous and firm."

Nixon Defends Hoover

WASHINGTON (AP) — Embattled FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has won a strong defense and a glowing tribute from President Nixon but not a firm commitment he will be kept on the job.

Labeling many of the criticisms of Hoover as "unfair and malicious," the President said at a news conference Friday night: "He's taking a bad rap on a lot of things and he doesn't deserve it."

But invited by a questioning newsman to pledge to retain Hoover as head of the FBI, Nixon said: "I'm not going to discuss the situation with regard to Mr. Hoover's tenure in office when the matter has not been raised by him or by me."

In any event, Nixon said, "It would be most unfortunate to allow a man after 50 years service to go out under a cloud, maligned."

Player Prefers Chinese System

HONG KONG (AP) — John Tannehill, 19, the top player on the U.S. table tennis team that returned from Communist China Sat., said he had compared the Chinese system of living to the American and found "I much prefer the Chinese system."

Interviewed on the train to Hong Kong less than an hour after crossing the border, the Middleport, Ohio, youth was asked which system he liked best.

"I'd much prefer the Chinese system if it could be set up in America," he said. "I wouldn't like to live in China because I'm an American. I'd like to go back to America and teach Mao's philosophy.

"I really love it," he added.

Tannehill, a sophomore sociology student at the University of Cincinnati, said he has considered himself a Maoist for about six months. He said he became interested in the philosophy of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung through his experience at college and his school friends.

Tannehill is the No. 2-ranked table tennis player in the United States and was the top-rated player to make the historic week-long trip to China.

"To be honest, I couldn't find any criticism of China," he said. "The way we were treated was beautiful. We went through a farm commune, and there I saw the principles of Mao's philosophy put into practice.

"I was amazed at the way people were very alive. They were not suspicious. They were very trustworthy of us.

Miss Mott Shows Poise, Artistry

A small but eager crowd of listeners were privileged to share a rich treat of music, beauty and artistry when Miss Kathleen Mott was presented in concert Friday at the Snyder High School Auditorium by the Scurry Concert Association.

Miss Mott, the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. R. Virgil Mott of Snyder, is a graduate of Snyder High School. She received her bachelors degree at the University of Indiana and masters degree at the University of Texas at Austin, where she is now an instructor of voice and is active in the opera workshop.

Her home-town audience was warmly receptive to her performance, but her poise and artistry would have quickly won over an audience of suspicious strangers.

Her skill at involving herself and her audience in the mood of the music she performs is surely one of her greatest gifts, second only to that lush and beautifully controlled soprano voice.

Miss Mott was brilliantly accompanied at the piano by Mr. Kelly Hale. Mr. Hale received a bachelors degree at the University of Oklahoma. He is assistant to Walter Duclorex, director of the workshop at the University of Texas and is working toward a Ph. D. there in opera conducting.

His consummate skill as an accompanist proves the absolute necessity for a singer to find an an accompanist whose artistry matches hers.

Together, these two young artists presented a varied and interesting program of music from many periods and styles.

The concert opened with a group of songs by the contemporary composer Benjamin Britten. Titled "On This Island," the work consisted of five different sections, each blending the vocal and piano parts to create the exact atmosphere described in the poetry.

Although sung in the original German, the next work, a group of songs about love in its various moods, composed by Richard Strauss, was beautifully performed.

A group of Spanish songs by Joaquin Rodrigo followed the intermission, and these were the particular favorite of this reporter. Perhaps more than anything else on the program, these songs seemed ideally suited for Miss Mott's voice and style.

"Monica's Waltz Song" from the opera, "The Medium," by Gran-Carlo Menotti proved to be a poignant and dramatic piece of musical theater----again performed so well by this young soprano that the listeners were drawn into the emotions of the people portrayed.

The remainder of the program consisted of songs familiar to most people. "The Waltz Song" from Gonnod's Romeo and Juliet is frequently performed by aspiring sopranos, but its flowing runs and highly placed notes sprang into new life when done with the skill and grace of this lovely performer.

The three songs from the Broadway stage which followed, "Where Are the Simple Joys of Maidenhood," from Camelot; "I Could Have Danced All Night" from My Fair Lady, and "Falling In Love With Love," made all of us yearn for more of the same, but it was time for the evening to end, which it did beautifully when Miss Mott sang the brilliant "Il Bacio," a perfect exclamation point ending for a lovely musical evening.

Keep your eye on this rising star. She's on her way.—JANE WOMACK.

Evans, Tavarez Repeat Wedding Vows April 9

Sheryl Lynn Evans and Mario Orasco Tavarez exchanged wedding vows April 9 at 6 p.m. at the 37th St. Church of Christ. Pat Abbananto, minister of the church, officiated in the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Evans, 1809 East Drive and Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Tavarez, 2104 Forty-first St.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length gown of bridal satin overlayed with lace with a satin bow and train and satin covered buttons down the back of the dress. The A-line dress had long lace sleeves accented with a ruffle and satin buttons. The gown was fashioned by Mrs. Montie Whitehurst. The bride wore a blue garter, a borrowed diamond necklace belonging to Sallie Tovar, a ring that the groom had given the bride and the new wedding gown to complete the traditional something old, something new. The bride carried a cascade of carnations trimmed in blue ribbon streamers.

Jimmy Wilson, served as best man and Billy Keith Evans and Don Shattel were ushers.

Vicki Evans, sister of the bride lighted candles. She wore a light blue dress.

Two candelabras and artificial greenery decorated the altar.

Music was provided by a stereo.

A reception was held in the home of the brides's parents. Wenona Jones and Vicki Evans presided at the table.

Both the bride and groom graduated from Snyder High School. The groom is employed by Ritz Craft.

Professor Favors "R" Movies

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — It might be a good idea for the whole family to go to "R"-rated films, a Southern Methodist University professor of film art said Thursday.

"If the controversial film is used as the basis for family discussion later, both parents and children may learn," said Dr. G. William Jones.

Dr. Jones said he is unopposed to pornography because it affected social control or behaviors.

"I may object to it for reasons of it being in bad taste," he said.

Films in Dallas are rated by the Dallas Motion Picture Review Board. An "R" rating "depends on the scenes and the way they are handled and what the review board decides," said Michael Hunt, of a major downtown theater.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Edminson invites you to attend the Revival at Union Baptist Church April 18-25 at 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Flower Talk

By HERSHEL HINSHAW

TULIPS BROUGHT A FORTUNE

When tulips were first introduced to Holland, the mania for these flowers was so great the following list of items were given in barter for a single bulb:

4,000 pounds of wheat, 8,000 pounds of rye, four fat oxen, three fat swine, twelve fat sheep, two hogsheads of wine, 1,000 gallons of beer, two tons of butter, one thousand pounds of cheese, a complete bed, a suit of clothes and a silver beaker — all this being worth at the time around $1,200.

Flowers today are most reasonable in their prices, even the flowers that were at one time considered out of reach, through cultivation, hothouses and other means of production all are a good buy at our shop.

Diamonds Were Man's Friend First

NEW YORK (AP) — Diamonds are a girl's best friend, according to that Little Rock girl in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." However, diamonds were first the man's best friend.

The ancient Roman historian Pliny refers to diamonds as "the most valuable of gems known only to kings."

Males still show an avid interest in wearing diamonds, be it on tie clasps, cuff links or wrist watches, says Bulova Watch Co.

Ruby Butts Presents Program To Students

Ruby Butts, home demonstration agent, reviewed the book, "I'm Okay; You're Okay" in a program presented to the sixth grade at Central Elementary School Thursday. Recently the guest speaker completed an A&M sponsored human relations course and adapted material applicable to the group in a speech, "How Do You Relate To People?".

Six students took parts in two skits to demonstrate proper ways to act in developing a mature personality. They were Tammy Lee, Mary Ellen Villanueva, Della Braziel, James Wells, Darrell Lester and Keith Wells.

"How you relate to people is an important part of how you make friends, belong to groups, play on teams, and, in general, have a place in your community," Miss Butts said.

"In a few years it will help determine how you get jobs, keep jobs, make friends, keep friends, get dates, or get married and stay married.

"Probably the most important thing you are learning in school is human psychology. And probably the most important job you are doing is developing a philosophy of life.

"A good understanding of psychology and a good philosophy of life means good relationships with other people.

"What do you need to know about human psychology? Not very much. But when you begin to understand what people are like, then you can begin to see a relationship between the things you do and the way people respond.

"Very small children learn some simple things about action and response - like when you hit someone they may hit in response. But how far have you progressed in learning - and using - this type of knowledge?

"Everyone has a 'need' for certain things if he, or she, is to develop a good personality. You need these things, but so does everyone else, and when you relate to people in a way that meets their needs it makes them feel good toward you. Then both you and they feel good toward you.

"When you learn to think of the other person, and of yourself, and decide how you are going to act on the basis of how you want them to act, then you you are learning your lessons in human psychology well. And you will be able to relate to people in a way that meets your needs.

"When your philosophy of life has developed to the stage that you are concerned for yourself and others - when you really want the best for yourself and others enough to do something about it, then you have a mature personality. You will be able to relate to others in ways that show your maturity."

Old Gadgets In Attic Can Be Gaily Painted

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Flea market enthusiasts might keep in mind a prediction of Jack Denst of Chicago. The artist-designer, noted for his wall coverings and sculptural effects predicted the rush to art nouveau 15 years ago. He now says the newest collector will be the one with "motion mania," collecting machines that work, the artifacts of the '30s, and using them.

The demand for player pianos is already being felt—new rolls are being made. And the foresighted collector of 78 rpm records may find the old Victrola, with a new coat of paint, can be a great conversation piece.

"An old radio, toaster or typewriter from the period, decorated with paint, paper or fabric, can be put to work in a modern environment," Denst observes.

This art form is upon us because articles of the '30s have visual interest unlike today's precisely engineered objects which often look alike.

Denst, a bachelor, is seeking a particular old-time refrigerator which he plans to paint and use as an icemaker and bar supply unit in his new apartment living room.

He can see lots of possibilities—the old-time fan that can become useful again and, in addition, become a striking decoration with a bright new color. And how about the old fashioned treadle sewing machine? Zinged up with a fresh coat of wild paint a young girl might like to have it for her room. And think how economical it would be for her to learn basic sewing methods.

"Working art is much more satisfactory than the traditional transformation of an object from its original purpose into a planter or a lamp," says Denst. "Concentrate on objects which can make a comeback into usefulness with lively visual impact. For example, cover a carpet sweeper base with fabric or painted stripes and it will make its incidental clean-up appearances to the tune of admiring remarks never earned by contemporary appliances."

There are the old things that might be converted to other things—an old-fashioned permanent wave machine may be made into a game table lighting fixture.

A street car conductor's money changer can make a shining table decoration and a milkman's wire basket with white-painted bottles might look great on the bookcase.

And then there are the sculptural effects. Some old things Denst and his artists rounded up at second-hand stores include an orange Hollywood Kleig light (he placed it on a slick black pedestal) and an old dress form (size 42) sculptured white with plaster of Paris,

Browsing in second-hand shops might turn up a variety of useful things—meat grinder, curling iron, clothes wringer.

"Drug Lyrics" Safe From FCC

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission, shrinking from accusations of censorship, has declared itself powerless to punish the broadcasting of songs with so-called "drug lyrics."

Broadcasters must decide what songs to put on the air, the commission said Friday, but the FCC "cannot properly make or review such individual licensee judgments."

There were indications, however, that critics might continue to press for complete retraction or judicial invalidation of the commission's March 5 policy statement advising broadcasters of their "responsibility ... to exercise adequate control ...."

Commissioner Nicholas Johnson promised a dissenting statement and Tracy Westen, lawyer for a group suing for an injunction against the policy, said the group may press forward with its suit.

The March 5 statement, Johnson said at that time, was "an unsuccessfully disguised effort ... to censor song lyrics that the majority approves of; it is an attempt by a group of establishmentarians to determine what youth can say and hear ...."

Westen said that by expressing its disapproval of "drug lyrics" the FCC may have implanted in broadcasters a fear that could be erased only by a court decision.

Commissioner Robert T. Bartley, who took no part in the March 5 statement, voted for Friday's lengthy "clarification" but seemed to share the doubts that it could entirely wipe out the fears of censorship.

The new statement prior to the release of the Public Notice of March 5, 1971. To the extent that it does so, I concur in the action here taken."

Commissioner H. Rex Lee, recalling his earlier warning, commented:

"I did have some concern that the Notice might be misunderstood, and so stated in my concurring statement. This has happened."

The commission statement and a concurring statement by Commissioner Robert Wells, blamed the "confusion" on alleged inaccuracies in press reports of the March 5 policy.

Hines Overhauling Houston's Skyline

HOUSTON (AP) — Gerald Hines, the investments builder who is overhauling Houston's skyline, said Saturday he plans a $35 million project involving three high rise office towers of 12, 18, and 30 stories.

The 1736-acre Post Oak Central Project will be a major addition to the City Post Oak complex Hines is developing six miles west of downtown Houston.

City Post Oak already has 12 multi-story structures totaling 2,462,000 square feet, and, including Post Oak Central, plans now have been announced for eight other high rise structures.

Post Oak Central will add one million feet of office space, an 80,000 square foot mall for specialty shops, and parking for more than 4,000 autmobiles.

Hines has been responsible for the development and management of more than 100 business and commercial facilities. More than 9 million square feet have been constructed and by this summer Hines projects under construction will exceed 4.8 million square feet.

Major downtown projects nearing completion are the 50-story No. 1 Shell Plaza and the 27-story No. 2 Shell Plaza.

Hines began the City Post Oak complex in 1963 with the completion of a new Joske's Department Store. By 1968, he had built five office structures.

He also was developing along the southwest corner a $10 million Neiman - Marcus building and a 30-story office tower that opened in 1969, a fabulous Galleria Mall and specialty shop complex that opened last November, and the 21-story Houston Oaks luxury hotel that opened last month.

The Post Oak Central site is adjacent to the location for a proposed Saks' Fifth Avenue store. The Hines intersts have leased the land from the Brochstein family, nationally known manufacturers of fixtures and fine woodwork for retail stores, banks, and office buildings.

Post Oak Central was designed by Philip Johnson, New York architect.

Freedom Academy Planning Awards

BROWNWOOD—Directors of Howard Payne College's Douglas MacArthur Academy of Freedom have announced plans to pay annual tributes to men and women associated with the news departments of radio and television stations and newspapers.

HPC president, Dr. Guy D. Newman, and Othal Brand, McAllen, president of the Academy's board of directors, announced jointly that awards will be made to the writers and newscasters for their part in promoting and reporting news paying tribute to the colleges and universities stressing the values of teaching "The American Way of Life."

Cash awards to the reporters and newscasters and plaques for their respective stations and newspapers will be made during 1971, according to Dr. Newman.

A large group of well-known people associated with the media, along with educators and businessmen and women, will work with HPC public relations official, George Hine, in determining the awards, said Dr. Newman.

Among them are: Bill Collyns, Midland Reporter-Telegram; Ed Wishcamper, Abilene Reporter News; Craig Woodson, Brownwood Bulletin; Bill Martin, San Angelo Standard-Times; Wacil McNair, Snyder Daily News; Vick Lundington, KTXS-TV, Abilene; Larry Fitzgerald, KRBC-TV, Abilene; Bob Gooding, WFAA-TV, Dallas; Bill Jamar, KBWB, Brownwood; and John A. Long Hair Grad Is Refused Jobs

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Ex-Marine Dave Apke is 21 and says he holds a music degree from the University of Cincinnati. "I'm proud to be an American," he says, but nobody wants to hire him.

The reason? Shoulder-length hair.

"I could get a job that would pay maybe $20,000 year," Apke said if he got a haircut.

"I am not the kind of guy that goes along with most things," he said.

Apke does have a job that pays a little—he sells flowers on Dallas street corners for a company that hires young people unable to hold conventional jobs because their mode of dress and hair length.

"Well, it would never pay the rent but I can always crash (stay) with friends and it does keep me fit," the 6-foot-4 flower vendor says.

Apke says his parents live in Cincinnati.

"I keep in touch with my folks pretty regular," he said. "Well, you know this job is not necessarily to their specification but I am always welcome home when I go back."

Apke, with a peace symbol on his belt and long hair, does not appear to be a former Marine.

"I think they're ignorant," he says of draft evaders. "I joined the Marines because my father and brother both were in the Corps."

He said he thinks America "has done a fine job" in Vietnam, "but I would like to see us get out now. We have too many problems to solve in America without sorting out other people's."

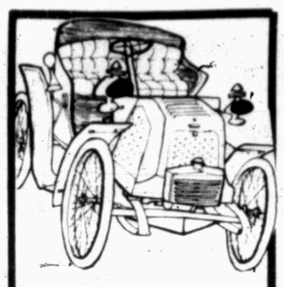

Apke said he hopes to form a musical group in Dallas, but he left his guitar in an East Texas bus station and $30 to retrieve it.

He said his hair has led to several difficulties: A man threw a brick at him in East Texas and a peace officer at Ralls West Texas shaved his head.

"He told me he was going to make me look like an American," Apke said.

The term "foggy bottom" originated in Washington, D.C. It was a slum area and is now the site of government offices.

Texans Are Protecting Their Natural Heritage

EDITOR'S NOTE: When it comes to protecting the land, water and air, Texas has every problem in the book, because it has every environment from desert to swamp, from ranges of mile-high mountains to 367 miles of coastline, from treeless farmland in the west to thick pine forests in the east. Here are some of the ways Texans are protecting their natural heritage.)

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

In Lubbock, a four-year-old boy struts importantly across the windswept Texas Tech campus. He grabs a discarded cigarette pack in a tiny fist, crams it into his litter bag and toddles on.

In San Antonio, a stylish housewife shoves a spade into the black soil to plant a tree in the path of a strip of concrete, in defiance of an expressway plan she believes will ruin parklands.

From the coastline of the Gulf of Mexico to the arid High Plains, Texans are marching to a cadence of concern over their state's threatened environment.

College students are testing water, staging rallies, making speeches and writing letters. Women's groups are buttonholing legislators, appearing before city councils and forming study groups. Teen-agers forsake relaxed weekends to make posters and collect reusable cans.

Texas scientists are using test tubes, computers and newly developed techniques to analyze pollution problems.

In the front line of the battle are professional men and women attacking industries and governments through the courts and the media. It's a grim war for them, and defeat dogs every step.

In San Antonio, construction has started on a freeway that has been actively opposed by conservation groups for over a decade. The route would take it through Brackenridge Park, home of the city zoo and the famous Sunken Gardens.

Citizens in Corpus Christi, Houston and San Antonio have almost consistently lost in their battles to keep the Texas Water Quality Board from granting variances — exceptions from state anti-pollution standards — to local industries.

In Dallas, a group fighting pollution from a lead plant has lost round after round, only to return to the fight.

Previously unsuspected pollutants continually are discovered in the air, the water and the land as the environment of the Lone Star State comes under ever closer scrutiny. Each discovery escalates the war, increasing the job to be done.

Houston citizens forced land fill garbage dumping near residential areas to be stopped. Housewives picketed, blocked bulldozers and trucks and stormed City Hall until the City Council ordered several dump sites closed or moved.

Dozens of Lubbock organizations have organized clean-up campaigns. Business students at Texas Tech collected two tons of aluminum cans and bottles. YMCA youths are cleaning up the alleys. A class of preschoolers daily scours the Tech grounds for litter.

A Houston group called Help Eliminate Pollution presented a factual report to the Texas Air Quality Control Board on the pollution from a fertilizer plant. The facts, which had never been presented to the board by local government agencies, so impressed the board that it refused a pollution variance. The fertilizer plant, which had been putting pollutants into the air for years, was shut down.

Midwestern university students in Wichita Falls are establishing an ecology laboratory at a lake near Iowa Park. Once in operation, the lake will be a classroom for pupils from the nearby public schools. The youngsters will learn of their environment and about conservation from a natural setting instead of out of a book.

Boy Scouts in the Rio Grande Valley each summer stage a massive drive to clean up the beaches of Padre Island. The youngsters gather and remove tons of refuse.

Two chemists at Angelo State University reported findings of excess mercury in canned and lake fish. The report led to an investigation underway now by the Food and Drug Administration.

In Dallas, a combine of ecology groups called Air Quality Coalition of North Central Texas, successfully defeated an attempt to turn part of Meridian State Park into a golf course.

At Texas A&M, a research team has developed a system for studying water quality in rivers and streams: Data gained from these studies are being used by the Texas Water Quality Control Board. Much of it was previously unavailable.

An A&M scientist has developed techniques to use refuse to build better roads. The scientist has conducted feasibility studies on using ground up rubber tires, bottle glass and waste plastics to build streets and highways. A stretch of road in College Station using the new material has already been laid.

Citizens in Fort Worth are backing a plan to turn a long section of the Trinity River near the downtown area into a park and recreation center. Dams would create long, shallow lakes. Walkways, sporting areas and swimming areas would developed. Residents have made donations to finance planting of 1,658 pecan trees along the river. An electric company will install a light show along one stretch of the river. The project will transform a usually ignored river into a valuable asset.

Education is the major goal of many of the environmental groups. There are about 60 such groups in Dallas, a similar number in Houston and scores of groups in Fort Worth, Amarillo, Waco, Corpus Christi, San Antonio, Wichita Falls and other Texas cities, all aimed at teaching people ways to keep the air, the water and the land clean.

McCarthy To Be Visiting Professor

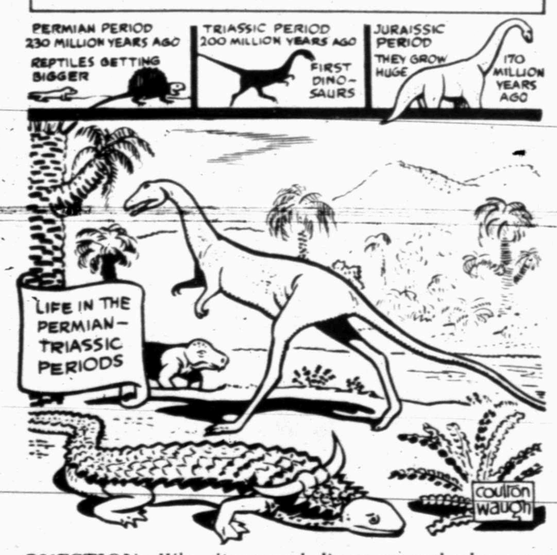

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy will be a visiting professor of English at the University of Maryland for one semester beginning in September, officials said

They said the Minnesota Democrat, an unsuccessful candidate for his party's 1968 presidential nomination, also was asked to teach government and politics but declined.

"He wanted to talk about poetry," said Dr. Morris Freedman, chairman of the English department.

McCarthy has written two volumes of poetry, the first privately published and the second published recently by Doubleday under the title "Other Things and the Aardvark."

A Junior Editors Quiz About DINOSAURS

QUESTION: Who discovered dinosaurs and what were the early kinds like?

ANSWER: In 1812, a 12-year-old English girl named Mary Anning found some strange looking bones in the side of a cliff. Soon, a whole skeleton was uncovered, which turned out to be that of a very ancient fish-shaped reptile, to which the name plesiosaurus was given. Although not a dinosaur, it was the first large skeleton of an ancient reptile ever discovered. Then, in 1822, Mrs. Gideon Mantell, also of England, found some strangely shaped teeth which turned out to belong to the huge extinct dinosaur Iguanodon. These were the first remains of a true dinosaur ever discovered. Later, many other remains were found from which the full story of the dinosaurs was developed. As you can see from the picture, reptiles started getting larger about 230 million years ago, with the dinosaurs appearing about 30 million years later. The large picture shows what some of these first dinosaurs looked like. By about 170 million years ago they had grown to the colossal creatures we hear so much about.

The answer is simple, 24 hours a day just like everyone else. But you can make better use of it by using Arcadian Liquid Fertilizer. Arcadian Liquid can be transferred to an applicator 8 times faster than ammonia, and applied 5 times faster than an ammonia-dry blend-herbicide spray application system.
We can't give you more than 24 hours a day, but we can custom apply your fertilizer and herbicides with our high speed custom application equipment.
We can furnish you a pull type applicator if you want to do it yourself. Either way is fast and efficient.
Call us if you don't have time: And we'll save you some.

Knicks-Bucks Clash Forming

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's clear the decks for the much anticipated clash between the New York Knicks and the Milwaukee Bucks in the championship final playoff for the National Basketball Association title.

The signal to get ready followed the Knicks' 89-84 victory over the Baltimore Bullets and the Bucks' 117-94 trouncing of Los Angeles Friday night.

There are no tomorrows left now for either the Bullets or the Lakers in the best-of-7 series to decide the Eastern and Western Conference crowns.

Each must win all the remaining games in the series to avoid elimination, which may come Sunday for both.

The Knicks lead 3-2 over the Bullets and can wrap up the series by winning at Baltimore Sunday. The Bucks have an even greater margin over the Lakers 3-1 and can end the series by winning the fifth game Sunday at Milwaukee.

Behind by 12 points at 84-72, Jack Marin sparked a Bullet rally that cut the edge to two at 86-84 with 50 seconds left at Madison Square Garden.

Baltimore's rally stalled there and Walt Frazier's jumper from the side with 28 seconds to go insured the Knicks victory.

"The big difference between the last two games and this one was our poor shooting," said Gene Shue, Baltimore coach.

As far as Frazier, who scored 28 points, was concerned "the difference was that we were much more aggressive on defense." Marin finished with 25 points.

Lew Alcindor celebrated his 24th birthday by scoring 31 points as the Bucks whacked the Lakers at the Forum in Los Angeles.

Larry Costello, Milwaukee coach, commented "We ran at them instead of letting them run at us." He added that Oscar Robertson "played a great game for us." Gail Goodrich's 26 points topped the Lakers. The playoffs in the American Basketball Association resume tonight with Kentucky vs. Virginia at Norfolk and Indiana vs. Utah at Salt Lake City.

Kentucky leads the Squires 1-0 in the series for the East Division ABA title. Indiana and Utah are tied 1-1 for the West crown.

Thaw In Relations

NEW YORK (AP) — The thaw in sports relations between Communist China and the rest of the world, started this week by the visit of the U.S. table tennis team behind the Bamboo Curtain, could lead to a return to Olympic competition by the Chinese.

Avery Brundage, head of the International Olympic committee, said Friday the door is open to the Red Chinese to return to the Olympics if they want to.

"We have repeatedly told them that our purpose is to unite the youth of the world," said the 83-year-old Olympic chief. "When the People's Republica of China is ready to abide by IOC codes and regulations, it will be welcome to the Olympic movement."

Communist China's last communication with Olympic officials came shortly after the 1956 Games in the form of a letter which stated that they were cancelling their membership in the international federations and that they wouldn't compete as long as Brundage was president.

The Communists had a team of 50 athletes ready to compete in the 1956 Games at Melbourne but they pulled out at the last moment, protesting the Olympic recognition of the team from Taiwan that represented Nationalist China.

"In 1957," said Brundage, "they again renewed membership in the International federations. Then out of the blue sky, came the letter to the IOC saying they would never compete as long as I am president."

Ags Take Giant Step Over Tech

William Eckert Dies At Age 62

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — William Dole Eckert, former commissioner of major league baseball died Friday of a heart attack. He was 62 years old.

Eckert was stricken while playing tennis at the Lucayan Towers in Freeport in the Bahamas. His widow, Catherine, said in Clearwater he arrived in the Bahamas Friday for a short vacation.

He served as commissioner of baseball from November 1965 to November 1968. He retired from the U.S. Air Force in 1961 with the rank of lieutenant general.

Eckert graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1930. He entered the Army Air Corps and graduated from flight school in 1931. During World War II he was the commander of a bomber group and chief of flight maintenance for the Ninth Air Force in Europe.

Eckert became baseball's fourth commissioner, succeeding Ford Frick, despite his inexperience in the sports world. Chosen to assist him in the arduous duties of major league lord was Lee MacPhail, an old hand who would supply the baseball savvy.

Eckert signed a seven-year contract at $65,000 per year—said he was delighted to have MacPhail "take this key post." He pledged his office would not become a puppet to the owners. Baseball's new "Sergeant Spike" - the nickname Eckert earned while a plebe at West Point because of his early interest in sports; showed a sense of humor at the start of his three-year reign.

He said he preferred being called "general" sometimes and "commissioner" at others—"but if you're having a drink with me, call me Private Spike."

He had a hot potato on his hands soon after he took office—a delicate situation in Milwaukee, where the Braves had left a crying populace and headed for greener grass in Atlanta.

Eckert said he could foresee no expansion compromise in time to forestall the state of Wisconsin's antitrust suit against the Braves. And he was right.

The trial came off in Milwaukee, and the result was a red carpet for the Braves to depart for the untapped southeast goldmine.

This stormy episode prodded Eckert to public relations work.

"Baseball has to do some public relations spade work to maintain its image," he said and named Joe Reichler, a former Associated Press sports writer, as the public relations man.

Eckert hooked up with players' representative Marvin Miller as the Major League Players' Association threatened to stir up a storm of protest if it didn't receive certain financial arrangements. In December, of 1966, the major league owners finally agreed to a two-year, $8.2 million pension play and checkoff for players' dues to the association.

He later helped solve a dispute between owner Charles O. Finley and the Kansas City Athletics, who was charged with unfair labor practices by the players. The controversial Finley soon thereafter moved his team to Oakland.

Eckert also understood during his tenure that baseball would soon again be breaking out in another expansion move, but wasn't around when it happened in 1969.

Champion Frazier Is Man Of Many Moods

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — To be with Joe Frazier is to be in a hourse of mirrors.

The heavyweight champion of the world is many images, all of them seemingly in conflict with the others.

Joe Frazier was a poor black youth who left the sandy farm lands of coastal South Carolina to seek his future and his fortune in the North. He carried with him a ninth grade education; dreams of money to buy new cars and flashy clothes and echoes of the voice of the bossman.

Joe Frazier came home recently as heavyweight champion of the world and he had his flashy clothes and his new cars —a red Cadillac and a bronze Cadillac. And the man who heard the crowd's roar when he beat Muhammad Ali, came home to an ovation from the 167 whites and three blacks in the South Carolina Legislature, where he spoke.

But, there still is a restlessness in Joe Frazier. There is a doubt as to the path he must walk in his career; a desire to see racial harmony; a bitterness of the life he led as a black child and the sunup to sunset hours his mother worked in the vegetable fields to help support her 13 children.

Joe Frazier came home to Beaufort, S.C., where he said, "things really haven't changed that much and some damn people will never change"

He came home to Beaufort where he said that only his "Mommy brought him back," and where he remarked, "How can they ever say to Joe Frazier to come back here and live."

He came home to Beaufort where he can, despite all else, feel at peace; where he can sit in the big gold chair in the small living room of the little white frame house where he spent his boyhood and talk of his father as "an alright man" and worry about a new home for his mother.

In the ring, Frazier moves with a relentless anger as if to not only defeat, but to destroy, his opponent. He punches with violence. He appears savage in nature. He is what the fight fan likes to call "a real killer."

With his 7-month-old daughter Natasha, he is a gentle man, who kisses the baby on the cheek and plays silly games with her, and ruffles the hair of his other children and exchanges witty remarks with them.

With his mother he is a tender son, who walks with her hand-in-hand through a piney woods area where she so wants to build a new home.

With his friends he laughs loudly and he makes jokes and he chides newsmen for "always being underfoot."

And there are times when the smile disappears and he slips into a melancholy mood and stares into space and doesn't want to say what is in his mind.

He admits he is an uneducated man. He left school at 15 because "I wasn't learning anything, just taking up space and I sure didn't want to take up space in that school."

But he is a philosopher. He speaks of the way things should be, but more often he questions why things were the way they were—why once a black couldn't find a job unless it was behind a mule or in a packing shed or bent over a plowed row.

He said, in a sad, tired voice, "It' just should never have been, should never have been."

He wants all people, black and white, to "play together, work together and pray together, and in that way we'll solve all our problems."

But he can be critical of the white man he has known since childhood, who, the champion said, "still talks like a white man. He never invited me into the house for a cup of coffee—big deal."

Joe Frazier cannot sit in silence, nor can he lay his championship belt at his side and be happy with what he has accomplished.

"I need a challenge everyday," he said. "My next challenge is to get a hit record. I got to have something to make me go. Fighting is no longer a challenge. I have beaten all the top-ranked heavyweights."

But there appears to be deep inside Joe Frazier a need to once again fight Muhammad Ali and this time knock him out; knock him unconscious and knock him out early and erase any question as to who is the superior of the two fighters.

Joe Frazier, the man, came from Joe Frazier, the boy.

The boy took some cloth he found in that small home on Laurel Bay Road and he sewed a boxing bag and he stuffed it with the mess that draped from the live oak trees and he punched it every day after school and every Saturday morning and every Sunday afternoon.

He went to a neighbor's house where there was a television set and he watched the series called Fights of the Century and he came to admire, and perhaps to adore, Joe Louis, and he came to admire and perhaps to adore Sugar Ray Robinson.

Frazier still talks with the thick-tongued slur of the Southern black and he often is frustrated that his words and his thoughts are twisted and turned.

And, he speaks of many things.

He said:

"Big people only look after big people instead of looking after the little people. The big people don't need help. It's the little people that need the help."

And he said:

"I accomplish something and then I set me another goal and I work harder. You get one car and you want two, and you work harder. You get a new house and you look around for something to put in that house, and you work harder. The more things I knockout, the more things there are to knockout."

And he said:

"All the good athletes leave the South. Why can't we give them a recreation center and train them and keep them in the South."

And, he also said:

"Every time I see a black person taking a step forward I feel proud . If you just put your right foot forward and then your left foot forward and you keep walking forward, there'll always be someone there to give you a hand."

Tigers Nip Tors 4-3

LAMESA — Snyder's Tigers evened up their District 3-AAA baseball standings at 1-1 with a 4-3 triumph over the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes here Friday in a tight pitcher's duel.

Marvin McClanahan, the winning twirler, yielded only four hits while going the distance for Snyder. Palmer, the loser, was touched for just seven hits.

The Bengals grabbed a 3-run lead in the first inning, but the hosts cut it to 3-2 in their half of the frame. Snyder added its last run in the third and Lamesa scored its last tally in the 5th.

Stewart Sims doubled to open the game. He stole third and scored on a sacrifice by Larry Wall. David Thompson then knocked a home run over the right field fence. Tommy Washington walked and scored on a two-bagger by Albert Hernandez.

For Lamesa in the 1st, Sisson was hit by a pitched ball and Hogg walked. Palmer singled both of them in.

In the 3rd, Butch Buchanan walked, went to third on a single by Wall, and scored on a fielder's choice with Albert Hernandez batting him in.

Roque Has Big Bat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jorge Roque of the Arkansas Travelers isn't subscribing to the early season theory that the Dixie Association will be a pitcher's league.

Roque smashed his third homer in as many nights Friday night to give Arkansas a 6-5 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

Rafael Batista of Columbus also believes the pitching isn't so tough. He powered a 410-foot homer in Columbus' 8-1 victory over Asheville.

And John Gamble powered a two-run homer in Montgomery's 6-3 victory over Savannah.

Law Schools Can Be Choosy

Career Corner
by Joyce Lain Kennedy

what job would you like to see explored in this column?

Dear Joyce: My son has asked me to send him to law school. After graduating from college, he began graduate work, but dropped out and took a part-time job selling appliances in a store.

It would take pages to describe all the difficulties he's gotten into during the past year-and-a-half. Also, he smokes marijuana regularly. I'm against this but he's always quoting some expert who says marijuana is not harmful. Last week, he came to me and said that he now has a better understanding of what he wants from life, and that he wants to go to law school. Not for the financial rewards of the legal profession, but to fight against social wrongs – perhaps in the environmental field, or representing minority groups.

He isn't sure he can get into a good law school (he had average grades) and that acceptance depends on how well he does on the national Law School Admission Test. He feels that if he has to go to a lesser law school, he may as well forget it because he won't be able to get a good position after graduation. Are admissions based on this test solely, and will the fact that he smokes marijuana affect his chances for acceptance at a good school? – D.A., Washington, D.C.

It's unlikely that law school admissions officers would be aware of your son's pot habit, unless it had led to academic problems on the undergraduate level. If he has a criminal record as a pusher – or any criminal record – a law school admissions committee would be compelled to deliberate this factor most carefully.

AN IMPORTANT FACT is that many law schools are swamped with applications this year – for example, one prominent institution already has 4,000 applications for 300 spaces – which means schools can be choosy. A definitive statement on the policies of all law schools isn't possible, but, in general, if a school does learn that a particular applicant is a marijuana smoker, it probably would refrain from making a moral judgment. BUT, the school would be likely to weigh the previous and potential CONSEQUENCES of marijuana abuse as one of the factors in comparing that student with abundant numbers of equally-qualified candidates who do not use grass.

Another significant point is that, after graduation from law school, a "clean record" is very important to bar examiners in determining whether an applicant has the requisite moral character for admission to the bar.

CONCERNING the so-called harmlessness of marijuana, your son is misinformed. Knowledge in sociology, or other non-medical sciences, simply does not count in areas to which it does not pertain. The pot controversy is a MEDICAL question, best left to health experts. While the verdict isn't in yet on the extent of damage this drug causes to the physical, mental and genetic organism, there is enough and increasing evidence that its use leads to a progressive loss of willpower, to raise serious questions.

BOOKLET. I urge every reader who wants an authoritative medical viewpoint to send for "About Marijuana," an extremely informative pamphlet by Dr. Franz Winkler, published by the nonprofit Myrin Institute for Adult Education. For a single copy, send 20 cents for printing costs, and a long, white stamped and self-addressed envelope to me at this newspaper. Write "A.M." on your outside envelope, and allow several weeks for delivery because this pamphlet is in great demand.

MOTIVATION? Your son's insistence that only the best-known law schools will do makes me wonder about his reality perception. If he really wants to gain legal skills–to battle for social reform, he should realize that, as of now, he is a lancer without a horse. His first task is to get mounted – i.e., get into law school – whether or not it's a widely recognized institution. On that score . . .

THE ADMISSION PROCESS is not entirely mechanical, as a rule. Most law schools do require applicants to take the Law School Admission Test (for information, write to the Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, N.J. 08540). The test scores are helpful in predicting the student's chances for success in law school but the student's college record, extracurricular activities and personal recommendations are also weighed. For detailed information, read "Pre-Law Handbook, 1970-71" prepared by the Association of American Law Schools and Law School Admission Test Council ($3.95 from college bookstores or from Law Division, Bobbs-Merrill, 4300 W. 62nd St., Indianapolis, Ind. 46268).

Teen girl defends long-haired youths

By Abigail Van Buren

[© 1971 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.]

DEAR ABBY: You recently wrote that there is more fighting going on in the average American home because of hair than anything else.

I am a girl, 19, and I want to know why adults are so quick to judge a person by his outward appearance? If a boy has long hair he is taken for a hippie, radical, pot smoker, homosexual or freak. Why?

It makes me sad that outward appearances mean everything to adults. They don't bother to look at a person and see beyond his hair or his dress. They don't care what's on the inside.

Why can't adults forget what a person looks like, Abby, and judge him for what he is? They'd get to know a lot more beautiful people they now pass up because they look like trash. SPEAKING FOR MANY

DEAR SPEAKING: I agree, it's what a person is on the inside that's important. But we can't go around with X-ray eyes, bypassing appearances in order to look into a person's heart, soul and motivations. So, I ask you, why would a respectable girl want to get herself dressed up to look like a streetwalker? And why would a decent productive young man want to look like a shiftless, unwashed, bushy-headed bum?

Long hair, if it's clean and cared for, doesn't offend me. But long, greasy, neglected hair on men or women—young or old—does.

A person may be immaculately clean, but if he looks dirty, I don't want him serving me in a restaurant. And I haven't the time to give him a physical.

True, perhaps we are missing out on meeting a lot of beautiful people because they look like trash. But who wants to pick thru what looks like trash in order to meet beautiful people?

Somewhere there should be a happy medium. And tho I respect a person's right to comb his hair and dress the way he wishes, if he gets himself dressed up to look like he's going to a costume party, he shouldn't feel that society is picking on him if somebody laughs.

DEAR ABBY: Many pregnant, unmarried girls have never heard of Florence Crittenton Services. We offer girls a place to live with other girls who share the same problems. We give them good medical care, an opportunity to continue their education, plus other services the expectant mother may need. We charge according to how much the girl and her family can pay.

The girl may either live in one of our 48 homes around the country, or she may decide to live in her own home, but accept some of the services we offer. She may keep her baby or give it up. The decision is hers and there is no pressure.

Please, Abby, tell girls who need our help to look for Florence Crittenton Services in the white pages of their phone books, or write to our home office at 608 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. 60605. MARY W. PALMER

DEAR MARY: I have long been acquainted with your fine services and have recommended Florence Crittenton to hundreds of girls without hesitation, but another boost won't hurt.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who said her husband never gives her children compliments, only criticism, prompts this letter.

My father is the same way. But we know he loves us. His idea of a compliment is, "Well, it's about time you did something right, dummy!"

A father shows his love just by feeding and clothing his family and working hard to give them the best. My father came from a strict European family who never said much and never showed much affection. I know it's hard for dad to say, "I love you." He has only said it twice to me. Once when he whipped me for something and found out later I didn't do it. And the other time was on the telephone when I was 2,000 miles away, and homesick, and I said, "I love you," first.

No matter what my father says, or doesn't say, I know he loves me. CAROLE

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Woman Robber Waits Turn

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The woman waited patiently in line at the supermarket with a stocking mask over her head. When her turn came, she held up the checker for $300, police said.

Customers waiting in line with her said they noticed nothing unusual about the woman's appearance.

A man told police he thought she was wearing the stocking to protect her hair from the wind. A woman witness said she thought the stocking was a hairnet.

Police said Friday the woman displayed no weapon but merely handed a paper bag to the checker and told her to fill it with money.

PROA Opposes Unitization

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP)—The issue of compulsory unitization may cause controversy at the annual convention of the Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association two weeks from now.

Members at the organization's annual membership meeting voted 63 to 0 to oppose the unitization measures before the Texas legislature, but only after three men voted their 53 proxies against adjournment and continued the meeting.

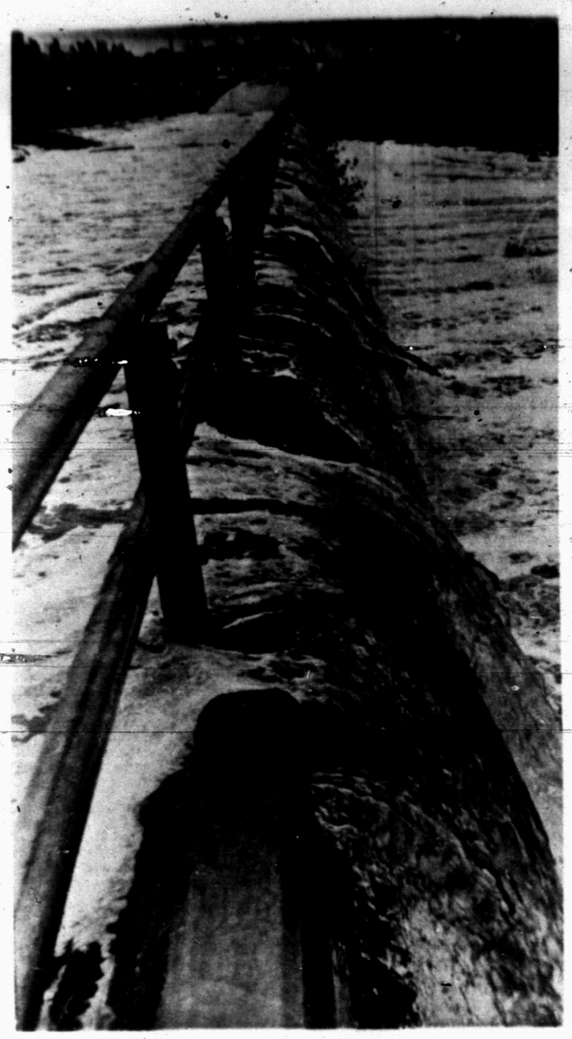

The unitization proposal would allow an oil or gas field to be put into a single operating unit if 75 per cent of the operators and 75 per cent of the landowners agree.

The proposal also would allow for the outstanding interests in the area to put in the unit under certain conditions.

The vote against unitization came Thursday after a majority of some 30 oil men voted to adjourn about an hour and a half after the meeting started.

The three deciding to stay and vote their proxies were R. P. Herrnann of Amarillo, G. N. McDaniel of Borger and E. T. Dunigan of Pampa.

VALUABLE OVERFLOW — Water, the result of Thursday night's extensive rains, overflows from the dam which acts as a holding area for San Angelo's water supply. Just Thursday the bottom of that reservoir acted as a resting place for old tires, ducks, and birds. The crossing was closed to traffic around 5 a.m. Friday. (AP Wirephoto)

Everglades' Fires Are Health Hazard

MIAMI (AP) — Smoke pouring from fires in the drought-parched Florida Everglades has doubled air pollution counts and is creating a health hazard over South Florida's highly populated Gold Coast region, a state pollution official has warned.

Frank Kleeman, regional director of the Florida Air and Water Pollution Control Board, said Friday that air samplings in the last three months reveal pollution counts above standards "to avoid adverse human health effects."

"I would suspect this has already had adverse effects on those with respiratory diseases and caused considerable discomfort to those afflicted," Kleeman said.

Dr. Milton Saslaw, director of the Dade County Public Health Department, said increases have been reported by hospitals in the number of respiratory cases being cared for.

"It's my understanding that we're well below danger levels reported in Los Angeles and some of the larger cities, but there is irritation from smoke."

More than 6,000 fires have scorched 400,000 acres of grasslands in the Everglades so far this year. The drought, described as the worst in 25 years, began in October.

A 50,000-acre blaze continued to rage in northern Dade County Friday, fought by 50 fire fighters including troops from Homestead Air Force Base.

Meanwhile, a 12,000-acre timberland blaze crept into the northwest corner of Florida Everglades National Park and went untended because there weren't enough crews to fight it, a park spokesman said.

Odessa Planning Honors For CRMWD Directors

ODESSA — The Odessa Chamber of Commerce will host an appreciation dinner for present and past directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday April 27, in Exhibition Hall "A" of the Ector County Coliseum.

The event will take place 20 years after the first spade of dirt was turned in the Colorado River bed in southwest Scurry County to launch the building of the most unique water district of its kind in the country.

Highlight of the Chuck Wagon Gang steak dinner will be the appearance of J. B. Thomas as the principal speaker of the evening. Thomas, retired president of Texas Electric Service Co., is a Fort Worth resident and is the one man who motivated the formation of the CRMWD.

As president of a sprawling electric supply company, Thomas as early as 1946 envisioned the time when the growth of West Texas cities served by his company would be hampered by the lack of water. As the first step in the formation of a first-of-its-kind water district Thomas conferred with the late E. V. Spence, then a member of the State Board of Water Engineers. From that meeting between friends came a water survey of the West Texas area served by Texas Electric Service Company. Thomas believed so strongly in his idea that he persuaded his company to foot the bill for that initial survey.

The April 27 dinner will be the first of its kind to show appreciation to 27 men who are, or have served as CRMWD director without pay since 1949.

It is only fitting that Odessa should host the affair. The city was the first to receive water from the infant organization and it has also purchsed more water from CRMWD than any of the other cities served by the district.

In addition, Odessa has the distinction of having the only original members of the board of directors. When Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder joined together to form the CRMWD and voters of the three cities approved the contract, city councils in each of the respective cities appointed four members of the board of directors.

The Odessa City Council in 1949 picked Charles B. Perry, P. C. Harbour, J. L. (Dusty) Rhoades and W. E. Bruce as its representatives in the new board. Of that original four, three have served continually since 1949. Bruce was forced to resign his position in 1967 because of failing health and died the same year. H. S. (Duke) Samson was named to succeed Bruce on the CRMWD board and continues to serve in that position.

Perry, an Odessa banker, was named chairman of the board of directors in 1958 after the death of Robert T. Piner of Big Spring, the original chairman. Perry continues to serve as chairman.

Directors from Snyder are Lyle Deffebach, Dr. John Blum, W. A. McGlaun, and R. D. Fields. Past directors from Snyder include James Rosser, R. A. Schooling (now on the staff of the district), William H. Wilson, Jr., Gene Burney and Malven Stevenson. Deceased members are W. J. Ely and Forrest Sears.

Although not listed as a director Joe Pickle, managing editor of the Big Spring Herald, has served, without pay, as secretary-treasurer of the water district since 1949.

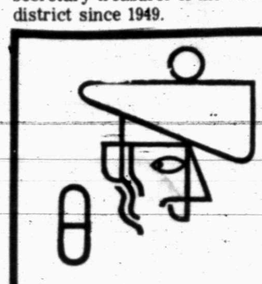

CBS Wants Scott For Specials

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News is negotiating with Academy Award winner George C. Scott to play George Washington in three specials Commemorating the 200th anniversary of the American Revolution.

The network wants Scott to play Washington in three different stages of his career, pre-Revolutionary, during the war and as a statesman.

The specials would be done extemporaneously, with Scott as Washington fielding questions in the same manner that Peter Ustinov did as Lord North, the British prime minister during the Revolution, in the first of the series.

Scott won the Oscar as best actor Thursday night for his movie portrayal of Gen. George Patton, but declined to accept the award.
