TORCH

A lot of Rebecca's friends came to see her and the Olympic flame.

"My family was there, and people from my church," she said, "and my boyfriend from Amarillo, Austin Sage."

Rebecca said she was extremely excited.

She joined the torch bearer on Buchanan, just south of the Amarillo Civic Center. She ran north on Buchanan Street, past the cheering crowds at the civic center, under the railroad underpass, then turned west on N.E. 3rd and then south on Polk Street.

"There were crowds and crowds of people," she said.

Rebecca said the highlight of the run was when she carried the torch, not just once but several times.

"Actually, carrying that gave me an amazing feeling," Rebecca said.

Rebecca was chosen as a support runner by the Olympic Committee last year.

Culbertson-Stowers, Inc., nominated Rebecca to be a support runner about three months ago.

She was notified in early December that she had been selected.

Besides Rebecca, there was a support runner from Lubbock, one from Borger and one from Portales, N.M.

The support runners, clad in blue, accompanied the torch throughout the journey, often carrying the flame.

Rebecca ran with six different runners, clad in white, through the streets of Amarillo, covering 1.6 miles of the slightly more than four mile journey. The torch bearers ran only two-tenths of a mile.

The run was not difficult for Rebecca, despite the dark of night and freezing temperatures.

"I run cross-country, a mile and two miles in track," Rebecca said.

She comes by her running talents honestly. Both her mother, Sue Fatheree, and her older sister, Jenny, were track stars.

Rebecca's off to a good start this year. Track season doesn't start until next month, but practice begins next week. Rebecca already has an exciting 1.6 miles behind her.

"It was a great way to start," Rebecca said. "I enjoyed the whole thing."

attempt to avoid further litigation.

The lawsuit is now essentially on hold and the administrative hearing on the application protest, scheduled for Jan. 28, has been rescheduled for April 8.

The meeting this week is expected to revolve around well placement on the Mesa properties so that the wells do not directly effect water levels on in the neighboring CRMWA well field.

Kent Satterwhite, general manager of CRMWA, says CRMWA had placed its wells away from the boundaries of its property so as to effect the water level on neighboring land as little as possible.

"We want them to try to design their well field layout to minimize their pumping impact on their neighbors," Satterwhite says. "Basically, that's what we've done, too."

know this land was given in good faith by Celanese."

Sutherland said the board needs to discuss some of the land matters.

Board member Doug Locke said he agreed with Sutherland but, "We can't just go do it," he said.

Locke said he understood that the current PEDC is supposed to dispose of the assets of the corporation and pay off the debts.

Pampa is the first 4A PEDC in Texas to be voted out by the voters, according to state officials.

Each of the board members agreed with Bill Allison when he said, "We're learning as we go."

All five members of the board are newly appointed following the resignation of the previous board. Two board members resigned in September, and the remaining three resigned following the Nov. 6 election.

Allison described the feelings of the board when he said, "We need to honor it (the request by Celanese when the land was given)." The board is checking into the requirements imposed on them in phasing out the PEDC.

Board President Dalton Lewis and member Steve Phillips both echoed the comments of Locke, Allison and Sutherland that they want to do what is possible to insure future economic growth in the community.

Former PEDC Executive Director Susan Triplehorn said the tract of land is in an Enterprise Zone and an area called PEDCO Park.

She said if the board disposed of the property it would be disposing of a great economic tool, adding the land is in an area identified as a Foreign Trade Zone.

Mullenax, who is also a former PEDC board member, said Celanese wants to insure that Pampa be kept in a growth mode.

GRANT

reduced irrigation costs and improved water quality.

"The practice also helps increase rainfall runoff into reservoirs and aquifers," she says.

The High Plains Water District, based in Littlefield, estimates that increased crop yields resulting from one inch of extra rain at the right time on major crops in the area could have a market value of some $81 million with a regional impact of about $284 million.

The precipitation enhancement programs stimulate clouds to generate more rainfall than would normally be produced, TDA officials say.

It is an effort to maximize rain through the introduction of seeding agents, such as silver iodide. The seeding agents are flown into the clouds with aircraft.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs announced the matching grants in December.

The 77th Legislature moved the grant portion of the weather modification program from the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission to the Texas Department of Agriculture, effective last September.

Cattle Exchange Restaurant merges old with new CANADIAN — Merging the old with the new, the historic Moody Hotel in Canadian is now home to one of the newest restaurants in the area.

Shortly after the Moody Hotel opened in 1910, its lobby was a gathering place for cattlemen, ranchers and businessmen to talk, swap range tales and forge deals.

Built by Robert Moody, the structure was a three-story red brick building and cost $40,000. Including the basement, it encompassed 20,000 square feet with its 40 guest rooms. The hotel was the hub of activity in the heart of Canadian.

Moody's family sold the hotel in 192 to G.K. Engle. In 1950 Engle sold out to Nahim Abraham, a Lebanese immigrant and dry goods merchant. After a year, Abraham sold to cattleman Carl Freeman.

Longtime Canadian entrepreneur Malouf 'Oofie' Abraham admired the building as a child. Through the years he watched the structure deteriorate. After he went on to become a successful oil and real estate businessman, he continued to observe the building deteriorate.

In 1976, he purchased the building. He renovated all three floors and it became corporate headquarters for his firm, Malouf Abraham, Inc.

It has remained in the family ever since.

After Oofie's death in 1994, his grandson, Salem Abraham, bought the building and it is now headquarters of Abraham Trading Company, which trades in futures markets around the globe.

Cattle Exchange encompasses the old lobby on the ground floor and still carries the legacy of cowman's country and ranching — when cowmen exchanged cattle and a handshake sealed the deal.

The restaurant opened in March 2001.

Salem was seeking to carry out the longtime wishes of his grandfather when he and Milton Cooke met. Oofie had wanted a fine, high-quality restaurant for the ground level of the Moody.

Milton and Julie Cooke were wanting to open a steak house in Canadian. A friend of Milton's, Jim Baker, who is a pharmacist in Canadian, suggested he contact Salem.

The mouth-watering scent of mesquite-grilled barbecue is commonplace on the corner of Second and Main in Canadian as a steady stream of customers flow in and out of the ornate doors of the steak house.

Milton continues to cook, incorporating secret family recipes and specially-selected menu items from across the state. He also takes his delicious food on the road, catering for anywhere from between 20 to 2,500 people.

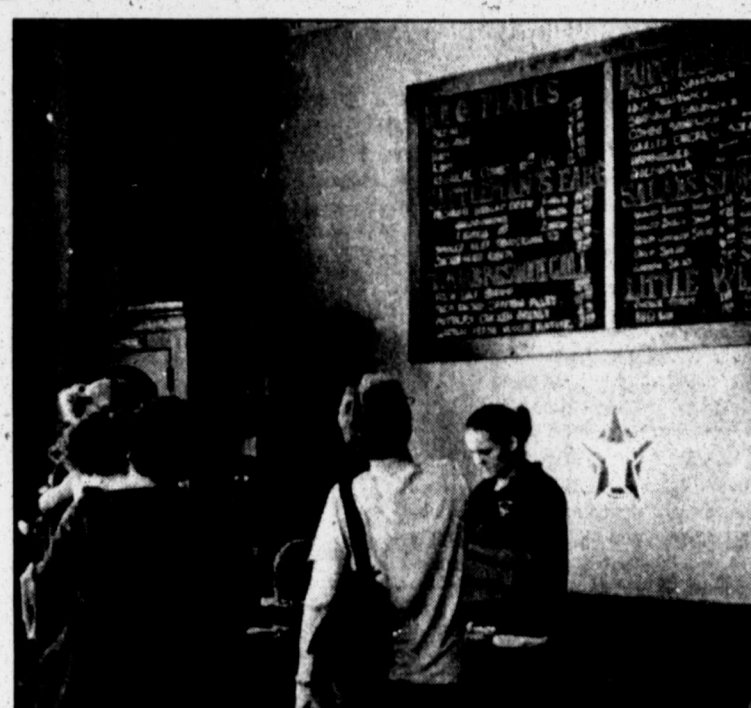

Milton and Julie are experienced in food preparation. He holds a degree in Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management, and has a long history in the business.

He opened his own Subway franchise in Pampa in 1991, and continues to own it.

Today the Cattle Exchange occupies the former lobby area, and has become one of the most popular restaurants across the Texas Panhandle.

Western art by Don Ray of Channing graces the Moody Lobby. "When Word was Bond," was commissioned by Salem. It represents the integrity of a cowman when a handshake concluded a business deal and man's word was his bond.

Ray, whose artwork includes western landscapes, historic paintings and bronze sculptures, will be the featured artist at a special show in Gallery I of Amy Winton's Academy of Art this month.

Vistors to the Cattle Exchange in Canadian select from a varied menu incorporating Cooke family secret recipes.

People from throughout the Panhandle area travel to Canadian to taste the delicious food prepared by Milton and his staff.

Additional information on the Cattle Exchange may be obtained by contacting 806-323-6755. Party packs and catering services are available.

WASHINGTON TODAY

Election offers bumper crop of Clinton alumni candidates

By WILL LESTER
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — About a dozen veterans of the Clinton administration — many of them former White House staffers — are running for prominent political offices this year. The offices range from the U.S. Senate to governor to the California state assembly. They include Cabinet members and former officials in federal agencies, centrists and liberals, some eager to run and others not so eager. But in the current political climate, they're all almost certain to highlight the economic successes of the administration they served.

"Those candidates can say 'I came out of an administration that delivered eight years of peace and prosperity,'" said Craig Smith, a former White House political director. "In a time of war and recession, that doesn't sound so bad."

The list grew more crowded this week when Robert Reich, the former Clinton administration labor secretary, announced he was running for governor of Massachusetts.

One race has its full share of Clinton veterans, the Chicago district where former White House aides Rahm Emanuel and Pete Dagher are in a crowded field for the seat of Democratic Rep. Rod Blagojevich, who is running for Illinois governor.

The list of Clinton alumni running in 2002 includes at least five candidates for governor:

—Janet Reno in Florida, where the former attorney general is competing for the right to face Republican incumbent Jeb Bush.

—Bill Richardson in New Mexico. The former energy secretary is vying for an open governor's seat.

—Andrew Cuomo in New York. The one-time housing secretary wants to challenge Republican incumbent George Pataki.

—Reich in Massachusetts, who is trying to win the right to challenge Republican incumbent Jane Swift.

—Bill Curry in Connecticut, a former White House aide who is competing for the right to challenge incumbent Republican John Rowland.

There are at least two candidates for Senate:

—Erskine Bowles in North Carolina, a former White House chief of staff competing for the Democratic nomination. Former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole is the best-known Republican.

—Gloria Tristani in New Mexico. A Clinton appointee to the Federal Communications Commission, she is running for the seat held by Republican incumbent Pete Domenici.

At least three former Clinton aides are running for Congress: Emanuel and Dagher in Illinois; and former White House staffer Fred Duval, who is one of several candidates running for a new House seat in Arizona.

At least one Clinton aide is running for the state legislature: former Clinton speechwriter Andrei Cherny, who is a candidate for California's state assembly.

The list is likely to be longer if it included Clinton-era officials from more federal agencies and if more state and local races were examined.

Former Clinton aide Lanny Davis said running for office is a natural transition for some former staffers.

"The rarefied oxygen of working in the White House leads to a virus that never goes away," Davis said, though it may remain dormant.

Former Clinton aide Paul Begala said he found few surprises on the list of candidates, with the exception of Bowles. Bowles decided after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks to run for the Senate from North Carolina. Bowles' decision came after Republican Dole announced plans to run.

"He had looked at running many times," Begala said of Bowles, son of a politician. "I know how much he saw the downside of politics. But he was so moved by September 11th, I don't believe he could comfortably sit in North Carolina and not run."

Some candidates from the Clinton administration are well-known publicly like Reno, Richardson and Reich. Others have strong connections among Democratic insiders.

Even lesser-known candidates benefit from their contacts with political strategists and fund-raisers, said political scientist David Rohde of Michigan State University.

Every administration spins off political candidates, though some produce more than others.

Political analyst Thomas Mann suggests it might have been inevitable that the Clinton administration would produce a bumper crop.

"In many ways, Clinton was extraordinarily successful, but there were the downsides and he ultimately failed to pass off the baton," Mann said. "There has to be a sense of incompleteness to many associated with the Clinton presidency."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Will Lester covers politics and polling for The Associated Press.

Vanity, vanity, all is vanity

I like to consider myself a fairly sane, stable person. Most people would say I'm basically conservative in nature, so I have no excuse for what I've done. I can only blame it on middle-aged crazies or the proverbial "wild hair."

Actually, it was a wild hair that made me do it. Several wild hairs, in fact — curly gray hairs that sprouted from my scalp in a completely unorthodox fashion.

For my entire life, my hair has been medium brown with a slight wave. My mother's hair is ash blonde, fine, and extremely curly. My brother Keith inherited her hair. He had a great "Fro" back in the '70s. Men paid big bucks to get their hair to do what his did naturally. Now he keeps it cropped short.

My older sister Diana's blonde hair is quite fine, too. My younger sister Tracey has thick honey blonde hair, not as curly as Mom's, but curlier than mine.

That leaves me — the only one of the four children with brown hair, inherited from my father. My hair is thicker and more coarse than his, but almost exactly the same color.

As the middle child in a family of four, I looked for ways to express my individuality. I was proud of my brown hair because it was one trait that set me apart from the others.

Through the years I've cut my hair, grew it out, and worn various styles that reflected the fashions of the time. Looking back through photographs and old columns, I cringe to see some of those hairstyles, especially the perms.

Throughout it all, however, my hair remained brown. The most I ever changed the color was to put a dark brown rinse on it that faded away with a few washes.

Lately, those scraggly gray hairs have been driving me crazy. I knew it wasn't just me when in the middle of a serious conversation, a man said, "Did you know you have a gray hair sticking out of the top of your head?"

Try to get your mind back on what you're doing after that.

I know I'm getting older. I know I can't stop time. But does it hurt to put the brakes on, just a little bit?

I wanted to do something, but what? Lots of women my age — 40-something — are coloring their hair. We're all trying to adjust to this in-between period.

I'd been toying with the idea of coloring my hair for some time. I didn't know what I wanted to do, except that I didn't want it to be boring brown. Then I saw a photograph in a magazine. A woman with mousy brown hair like mine had lightened her hair to a strawberry blonde and then highlighted it. It wasn't really blonde. It wasn't really red. And it sure wasn't brown.

That's it! I thought. That's what I want to do. I showed the picture to Vic.

What do you think about me doing that to my hair? I asked. He thought it would be great.

That's all I needed. The magazine article told how you could achieve this effect at home, but I didn't think I better try. I'm cosmetically challenged. This wasn't the time to learn how to lighten hair.

So I set up an appointment with a hairdresser. I'm glad I did. Two and a half hours later, I realized I would have been in way over my head. (Pardon the expression.)

Hair-lightening is a comical process. First you wet down the hair with smelly chemicals. Then you put a plastic bag on your head and sit under a hair dryer for awhile. Once that's done (twice for long hair), then you wash it all out and blow it dry.

A first glimpse in the mirror before drying almost gave me a heart attack. Thoughts raced through my mind. What have I done? I had already decided to go to Wal Mart and buy some brown hair rinse — or a scarf — before going to work the next day.

Once dried, I decided it didn't look so bad after all. In fact, it looked pretty good. Then the hairdresser pulled out the high-lighter hood.

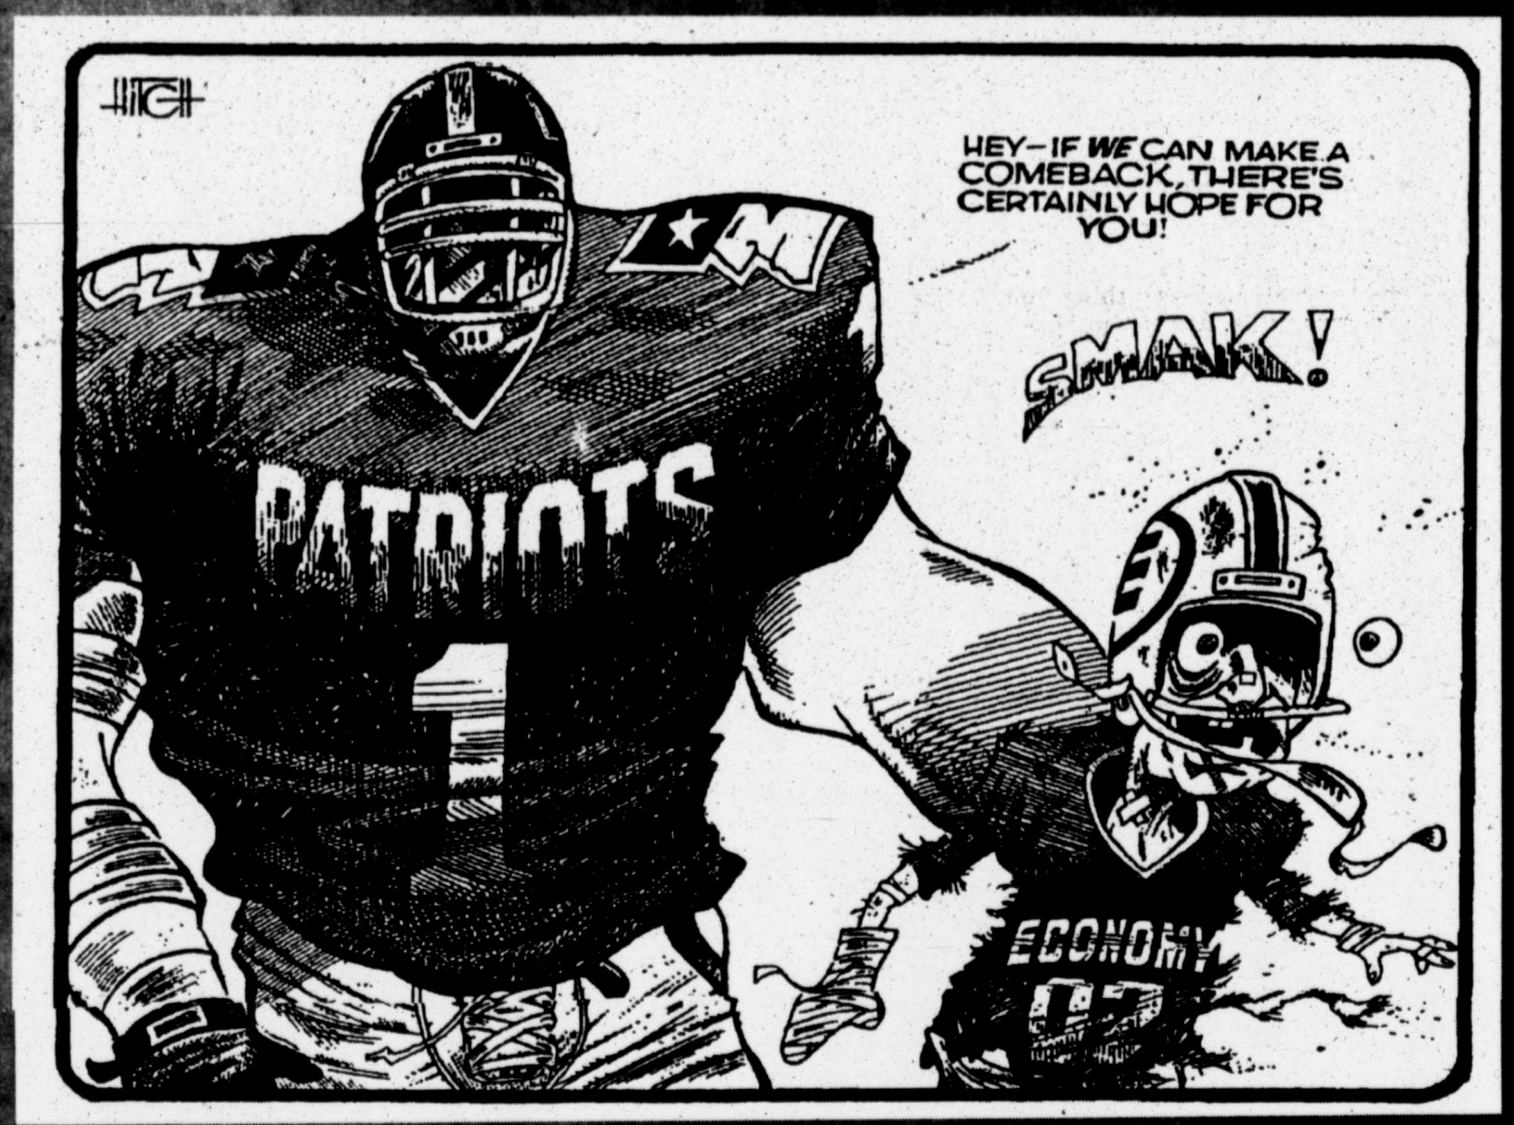

This plastic contraption covered with tiny holes fit tightly over my hair. She took a little crochet hook — that's what it looked like to me — and began pulling bits of hair through the holes. I couldn't help but giggle at this weird-looking creature that was supposed to be me. And that's before she slopped blue goo all over it, put another plastic bag on my head and stuck me under the dryer again.

Vanity, vanity, all is vanity.

Reactions to my new haircolor have been mixed. A co-worker described me as looking like a "floozie." I think she was kidding... The publisher calls me "Red" now. Most people don't quite know what to think or to say.

My husband likes it. My daughter likes it and my grandchildren love me no matter what color my hair is. My dog, my cat, and my horse still recognize me.

And I don't have to look at those scraggly gray hairs — for awhile anyway.

Big government vs. Bible and Constitution

Liberals and neoconservative pundits are saying that the easy U.S. victory in the first stage of the war on terrorism shows the merits of a big government.

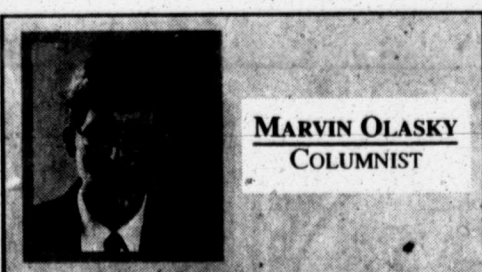

That's illogical spin, and they should not be allowed to get away with it.

We can puncture the balloon of those who would use military needs to engorge government generally by learning from the original Cassius Clay of Kentucky.

Some may remember that name as Muhammad Ali's pre-Muslim moniker, but I'm referring to the antebellum anti-slavery editor and politician who, when giving a speech in the 1840s, would often say, "To those who respect God's word, I appeal to this book." Then he held up a copy of the Constitution and said, "To those who respect our fundamental law, I appeal to this document."

Conservatives today might start with the Bible, as just about all the Founders did a little over two centuries ago. The Bible is clear on government's chief role: to wield "the power of the sword" against both external enemies and internal criminals. Government is needed to terrorize terrorists and other evildoers, so soldiers, cops and judges are needed. The role of government, though, is not to construct a new Eden or reconstruct society.

The prophet Samuel was among those who warned Israel that kings did not like to stick to their proper work of providing for the common defense. He initially argued against having a king at all, because a person who did a good job as a military leader would not stop there: "He will take the best of your fields and vineyards and olive groves, and give them to his attendants. He will take a tenth of your grain and of your vintage, and give it to his officials and attendants. Your menservants and maidservants and the best of your cattle and donkeys he will take for his own use. He will take a tenth of your flocks, and you yourselves will become his slaves."

MARVIN OLASKY

Such Bible lessons are important, but many Americans believe we have outgrown them. For them and for all of us who respect the Constitution as written, the Preamble to that great document makes a memorable distinction. It notes that the federal government exists to "provide for the common defense" but to "promote the general welfare." There's a huge difference between providing and promoting — the choice of those particular words was not accidental.

"Providing" means doing the job yourself. The government has an army — religious organizations, the Lions Club and labor unions do not have armies — because Washington's job is to provide for the common defense. "Promoting" means developing a favorable environment within which others are likely to step up. The federal government was not involved in poverty-fighting during the 19th century, but American churches, synagogues, businesses, and civic and fraternal associations fought a war on poverty then that was far more effective than our capital-W War of the 1960s and 1970s.

It is constitutionally right to grow a big government for defense when we have potent adversaries abroad. It is constitutionally wrong to grow a big government for welfare, especially since civil society can accomplish many of the tasks that government has taken upon itself. If a church, synagogue or Optimists club can provide after-school care or baseball leagues for kids; we don't need government to do it. If religious groups or atheists clubs can provide counseling in times of trouble, we don't need government grief counselors.

All Americans should learn the Constitutional distinction between providing and promoting. If proponents of big government pay no attention to the Bible, they should read the Constitution. It's great that folks in Washington know how to run an army.

That doesn't mean they can manage well the compassionate work of a Salvation Army. Winning a war in Afghanistan is still different from winning a war on poverty.

Early Intervention for Troubled Child Saves Later Heartache

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Angry Mother in Texas," who was offended when "Uncle Pete" (who is schizophrenic) voiced his concerns that her 8-year-old son might also have a mental illness. You were right to advise her to have her son evaluated. I am a patient care coordinator for a pediatric outpatient facility. I talk to parents who call our facility seeking help for the first time.

Recently I spoke with a woman whose seventh-grader was showing signs of mental instability. She said her daughter had always been different, but now she was having more difficulty than ever. The mother was heartbroken that her daughter had no friends and no one to talk to. Mom knew she was in denial, but she wanted to protect her daughter from being labeled. Resistant to seeking mental health services, Mom finally agreed to a neurologic evaluation with our pediatric neurologist.

Before that visit could occur, the mother called me again expressing concern about her daughter's behavior. After consultation with our psychiatrist, the girl was admitted to a psychiatric hospital for intensive treatment.

Abby, as parents, our instincts are to protect our children. That mother had tried everything from divorcing her husband, to moving to a different city, to placing her daughter in a private school. Had she sought evaluation and treatment sooner, it is likely that therapy and medication could have managed the child's symptoms and saved them all much heartache, turmoil and expense.

Sometimes parents are blinded by love and do not see their children with open eyes. I hope "Angry Mother" takes your advice, if only to put her fears to rest.

A CARING MOTHER
IN MICHIGAN

DEAR CARING MOTHER: So do I. The most responsible and loving thing parents can do is to be certain that their children's health is absolutely sound, both physically and mentally. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Angry Mother in Texas." Please have your child checked. My cousin is autistic and mentally retarded. When his mother (my aunt) first saw my youngest son at the age of 1, she told me he should be tested. I was so upset I ignored her.

Luckily, our pediatrician also suspected there might be a problem and had my child tested. My son is also autistic. Knowing and understanding the disability has helped our family as well as my son.

I apologized to my aunt for doubting her. My son says he loves visiting "Aunt Betty" the best because she understands his autism.

ANOTHER TEXAS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Some parents fail to realize that having a child with a mental illness is not a reflection on themselves or their parenting ability. The elephant in the living room can't be denied forever, and the sooner the child receives proper diagnosis and treatment, the better for the child and the family.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing concerning the letter about ethnic stereotyping. Comedian Red Skelton used to tell a story that perfectly ridiculed such stereotyping:

A man was seated next to a Chinese gentleman at a banquet. Attempting to make conversation, the man said in Chinese pidgin, "You likee food?"

Just then his table partner was introduced to the crowd. He walked to the dais and delivered a beautiful speech in perfect English. When he returned to the table, he turned to his seat partner and said, "You likee speech?"

JACK RUNNINGER, ROME, GA.

DEAR JACK: I'm sure the man was left speechless.

BASKETBALL

PAMPA — The City of Pampa Recreation Department will be sponsoring mens and women's 3 on 3 basketball leagues for ages 16 and up. Three on three is played "half-court" style with three players on each team.

Entry deadline is Friday at 5 p.m., and the season will begin Jan. 29.

Entry fee (sponsor's fee) is $100 and player's fee is $10 per player with a minimum of five players on each team roster.

Roster forms, fact sheets and league by-laws are available at the Recreation Office at 816 S. Hobart. For more information, call 669-5770 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SOFTBALL

PAMPA — There will be a Lady Harvester Softball Booster Club meeting at 7 Monday night in the Pampa High School library.

Parents of softball players are urged to attend.

BASEBALL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — During last year's All-Star game, Barry Bonds put on a New York Yankees uniform for a picture with his son Nikolai, who wanted to wear his father's San Francisco uniform.

"Gary Sheffield came by and said I looked like crud," Bonds recalled on Monday night. "He said I looked better in a Giants uniform."

Bonds agreed to $90 million, five-year contract with the Giants on Monday, and as a result he is all but guaranteed to remain in a San Francisco uniform until he retires. The deal also calls for a 10-year personal service contract — with the Giants to pay $1 million annually to the Bonds Family Foundation — after his playing career is over.

Harvesters host PD tonight in key District 3-4A clash

PAMPA — Pampa will be looking to knock off one of the District 3-4A leaders when Palo Duro comes into McNeely Fieldhouse tonight.

The Dons, at 4-1 in district and 13-8 for the season, are in a three-way tie with Canyon and Randall for first place. After last weekend 66-49 win over Borger, the Harvesters improved to 2-3 in 1-4A play. For the season, Pampa is 12-12.

Palo Duro is coming off a big win, slipping by Randall 76-74 last Friday night.

The Dons, who are about the same size as the Harvesters, relied on their defensive quickness to turn back tall Randall.

Steve Chavez (6-1 senior) scored 20 points and Berry Benson (6-0 junior) added 17 to lead the PD offense.

The Harvesters stunned Borger by jumping out a 14-0 lead against their longtime rival.

Three Harvesters finished in double-figure scoring in the lopsided win over the Bulldogs. Adam Rodgers (6-0 senior) led all scorers with 16 points. Ryan Zemanek (6-2 junior) had 15 points and Kyle Francis (6-1 senior) added 11.

The Harvesters are tied with Dumas and Hereford in the district standings. Borger and Caprock at 1-4 are at the bottom.

The Pampa-Palo Duro girls' game tips off at 6, followed by the boys' clash at 7:30.

The Lady Harvesters lost a first-round district game to Palo Duro 62-49. Pampa is 2-5 in district and 5-15 for the season. Palo Duro is 5-2 and 18-8.

Palo Duro girls are tied with Randall for second in the district race. First-place Canyon is a perfect 7-0.

High scorer

Junior guard Kade Zybach was high scorer with 16 points in Fort Elliott's 56-52 win over Miami Tuesday night. The Cougars were ranked No. 9 in Class 1A (Division Three) in this week's Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll.

PHS wrestlers win at Super Six

HEREFORD — Pampa wrestlers came away from the Hereford Super Six Tournament with a victory over Lubbock Coronado.

"This was a big win for us," said Pampa coach Justin Turner. "We got our first win as a program."

The Harvesters, hampered by injuries, had losses to Lubbock Estacado, Hereford and Lubbock High.

"We had to wrestle with an injury-riddled team. We had a lot of starters out," Turner said. "I felt like we would have had some more wins if we hadn't been so beat up."

Brandoh Boyd, Dusty Langley and Joel Palmateer helped carry the Harvesters to victory.

Boyd, wrestling at 130 pounds, won his first two matches. Langley (145) won three of four matches and Palmateer was a perfect 4-0.

Pampa visits Caprock tonight in a dual match.

"Caprock's probably got the best team in the area right now. It's going to be a tough one," Turner said.

Spurs lost to Nets, 99-97

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — With Jason Kidd, Kerry Kittles, Kenyon Martin and Keith Van Horn in the lineup, it was easy to forget about the New Jersey Nets' other starter.

The way Todd MacCulloch has been playing lately, forgetting him is getting more difficult to do.

MacCulloch had 18 points, 10 rebounds and set up the game-winning basket with his career-high fifth blocked shot, leading the Nets to a 99-97 win over the San Antonio Spurs on Monday night.

Red Raiders lose in overtime

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — If there were nerves, Texas' James Thomas never showed them.

"I just told myself to take my time, and I would make them," said Thomas, who sunk two of the four free throws Monday night that sealed a 74-71 overtime win over Texas Tech.

"James works as hard as anyone on the team on free throws," said Longhorn coach Rick Barnes. "He had missed a couple earlier, but he went out there and made the two that really mattered."

T.J. Ford sunk the other two. All four came in the final 23 seconds of overtime.

The Red Raiders still had one last chance to win. With less than seven seconds left, Marcus Shropshire, a good 3-point bet for Tech, got the ball at the top of the key but his shot bounced off the rim as the buzzer sounded.

"We had some chances," Tech coach Bob Knight said. "I think you can always look at a shot you missed or whatever, but we made some defensive mistakes that cost us at different times during the game."

Ford, Thomas and Brandon Mouton each scored 18 points for the Longhorns (12-4, 3-0 Big 12).

Soccer talk

Pampa girls soccer coach Jimmy Patulea talks to his team during a recent match at the high school complex. The Lady Harvesters claimed third place in the San Angelo Tournament last weekend. Senior Misti Northcutt and junior Leslie Williams of Pampa were named to the all-tournament team. The Lady Harvesters travel to Lubbock on Saturday to play Odessa Permian. In an earlier match, Pampa tied Amarillo High 0-0.

Spurrier is new Redskins coach

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — This time, it's Steve Spurrier.

In 2 1/2 years as owner of the Washington Redskins, Dan Snyder has thrown money at Deion Sanders, Jeff George, Bruce Smith and Marty Schottenheimer — any big name who would take it.

More often than not, it hasn't worked out.

On Tuesday, Snyder was set to present his most audacious investment yet: giving Spurrier a record five-year, $25 million deal even though he's never coached an NFL game.

"The Redskins are getting one of the real names in football. Period," said vice president Pepper Rodgers, Snyder's point man for the Spurrier negotiations. "Steve is a guy that everybody wants to have as a coach."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19)

 Assume a lower profile as you digest difficult, if not contrary, information. You might not be sure as to what to do. Hang out in your present mind-set. You'll know when the time is right. Trust yourself enough to sit back. Meanwhile, concentrate on other matters. Tonight: Do your thing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)

 You feel like the lead basketball player as you throw one ball after another into the hoop. Others cheer you on. Your success stems from a strong drive, an understanding of facts and working well with others. You can afford to say "no" to an unappealing offer. Tonight: Midweek break.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)

 Others deem that you can do the job. The question remains whether you want to or not. You need to take stronger control of what you want in your life. Too many times you say "yes." You can only do well that which you want to do. Stay in control of your life and responsibilities. Tonight: Work as late as need be.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)

 Make inroads with those at a distance through making calls. Think in terms of specializing in your present field. You will add to your job desirability. Recognize your limits at the same time. Discuss possibilities with someone who might be able to give you good advice. Tonight: Listen to music while surfing the Net.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)

 Deal with someone directly. You might not be able to make your point as clearly as you would like. Help someone understand that his or her actions could have repercussions for you. Remain easy. Don't lose your patience. Tonight: Dinner for two.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)

 Opportunities knock on your door, making nearly anything possible. Lighten up about someone's change of heart. Don't overthink it. Simply grab the occasion and the moment. Good luck surrounds fast actions right now. Tonight: Go along with someone's ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)

 Focus on getting the job done. The less time you spend floating on the Internet, the more you get done. Stay on top of someone's requests. The key is to remain present with the moment. Someone at a distance chooses not to talk or communicate. Tonight: Stay even.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)

 Allow your creativity to help others with their problems. Curb a tendency to flirt way too much. You could cause yourself more of a problem than you realize. Schedule time with a youngster you enjoy. Hop on the swing with this person! Tonight: Only what you like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)

 You cannot avoid dealing with family and personal issues. You might make the plea that you have work to be done. It won't work. Everyone in your life needs attention and special care right now! Lighten up and do what you have to do. Tonight: Quit fighting the inevitable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

 Answer calls, schedule meetings and clear out e-mail and messages. Your efficiency serves you best when you're focused on communication. Others might need feedback from you. Let someone know where you stand. State your case with your normal flair. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)

 You might not choose to share with others exactly what you have in mind. Do be careful with risking because you could get yourself into some trouble. Be grateful for what you have rather than always seeking something else. Avoid envy. Tonight: Treat yourself well.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)

 The moon accents you presently. You're able to beam in much more than usual. Timing works right now. Go for what you want, and don't put it off until tomorrow. Your smile wins many friends — use it right now. Cheer up someone who might be blue. Tonight: You decide.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTES — Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter stands for another. In this sample, A is used for the three L's. X for two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
