Mayor squares off against air-terminal foes

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

In response to a petition drive to force an election on the new airport terminal plans, Mayor Bobby Burns called a news conference Tuesday to counter what he called "crucial inaccuracies" being made by petitioners.

"I'm ready to go to battle over it," Burns told Tom Dollahite, a leader in the opposition for a new terminal. Burns — backed by members of the City Council, city staff and community supporters — said he respects and defends the right to petition but expressed concern for terminal plans unanimously ratified by the City Council in October 1993.

"Keep in mind we've already spent $1.5 million on the new ter-terminal. ... The time for a referendum was two years ago, not now. It would be a gross waste of airport money if the referendum defeated this vital project," Burns said reading from a prepared statement.

Funds spent thus far have gone toward design, which is 90 percent complete, officials said. Construction is set to start at the beginning of next year and take two years and three months to complete.

Opponents launched a petition drive just over a week ago. "All we want to do is have a democratic vote," Dollahite told the mayor.

Terminal supporters see the intentions of the "small group" of petitioners as clearly an attempt to reverse terminal plans.

Monster storm, 140-mph winds rake Caribbean

■ Forecasters expect hurricane to spare East Coast of the United States, move north of Puerto Rico into Atlantic.

Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Dwarfing the island nations of the Caribbean with a 700-mile-wide maelstrom of wind and rain, Hurricane Luis destroyed homes and a hospital on two islands Tuesday and roared on toward the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

There was no immediate word of deaths or injuries.

Several hotels also were destroyed on Antigua and Barbuda, said Puerto Rico Gov. Pedro Rossello, who talked by telephone with the islands' prime minister, Lester Bird.

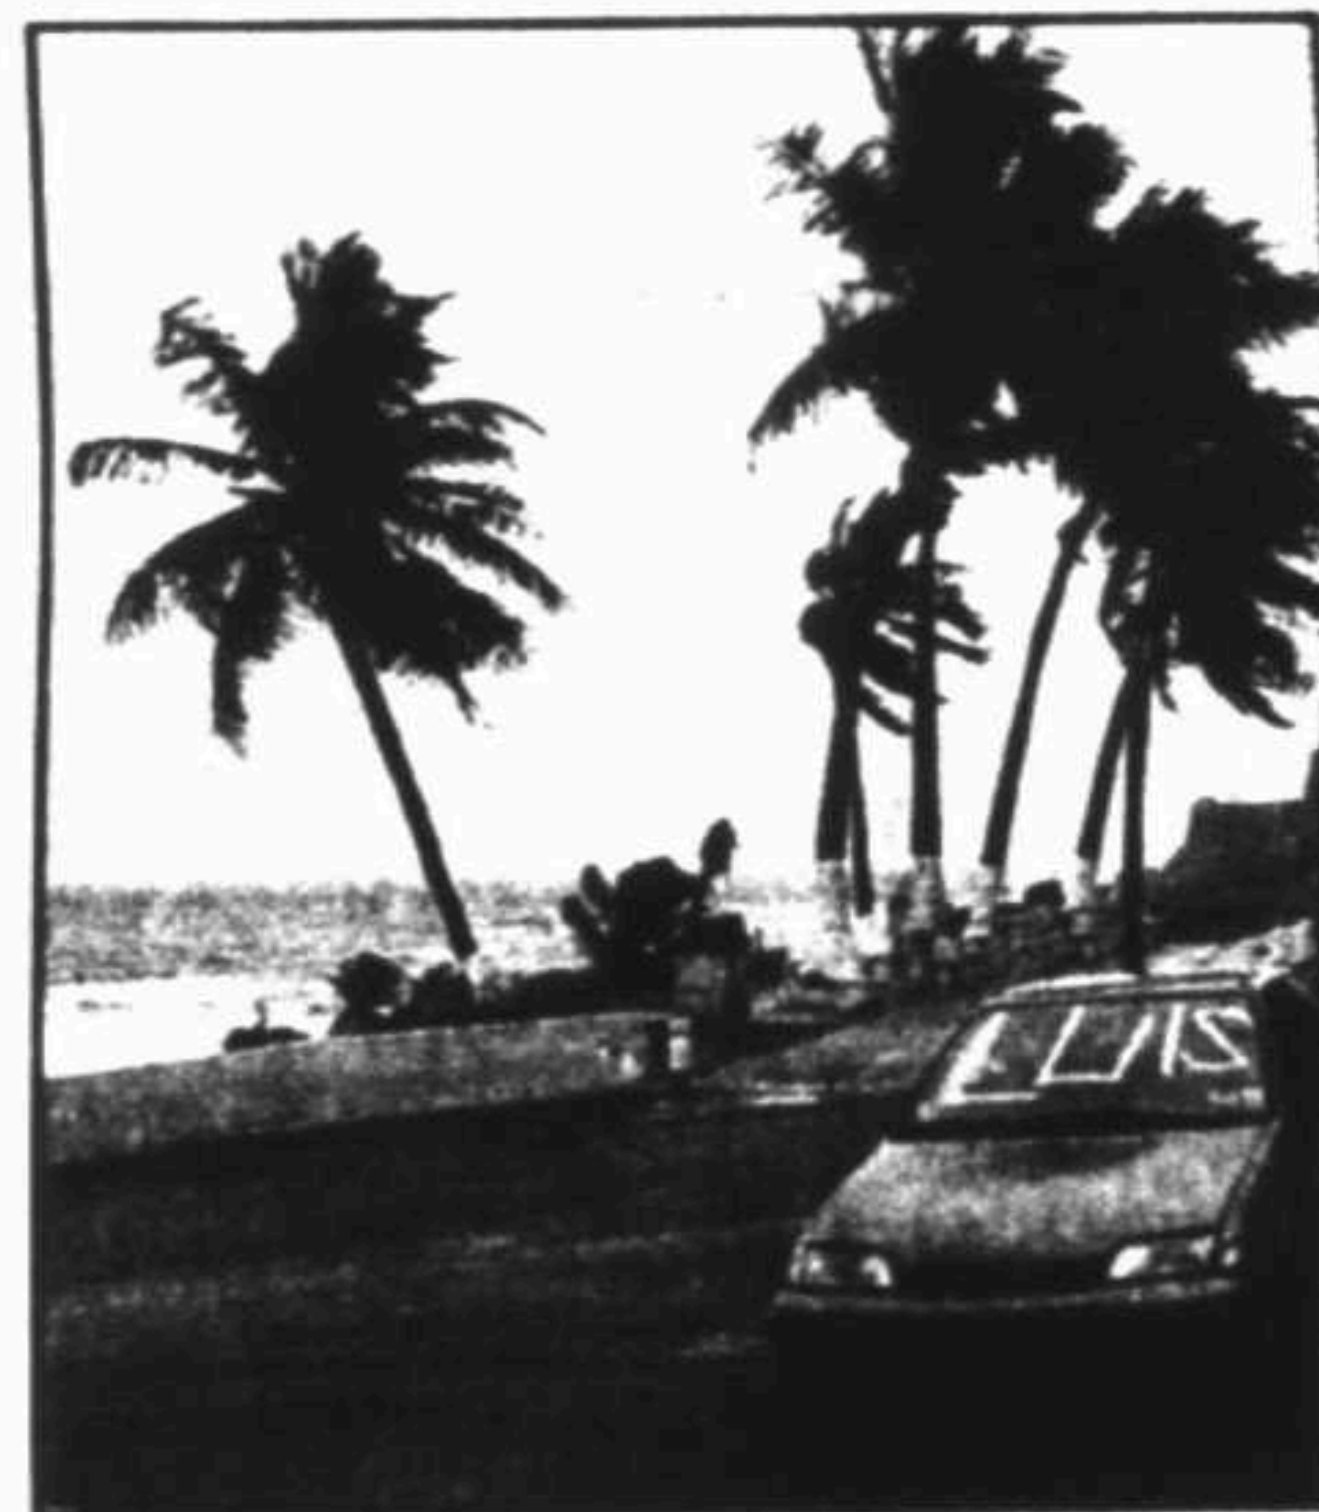

"The hospital there was destroyed as were many homes and buildings," Rossello said. He said Bird asked him to send a mobile hospital to Antigua.

Frightened tourists and islanders jammed airport terminals in Guadeloupe, Antigua and the U.S. and British Virgin Islands. Airports in the U.S. Virgin Islands closed at midday, and the last flight out of Puerto Rico left in the evening, hours before Luis was expected to arrive.

Some of the control tower's windows were boarded up to keep them from being blown out.

The scene was repeated throughout islands in the path of one of the Caribbean's most powerful storms of the century. From shantytowns to gleaming tourist hotels, boards and metal sheets were hammered over windows.

Forecasters expect Luis to spare the East Coast of the United States, moving north of Puerto Rico and north into the Atlantic. In Florida, emergency officials said it may be Friday before they know whether Luis poses a direct threat. "It looks like all of the U.S. mainland will be spared. But, once again, this is an outlook," said meteorologist Michelle Huber of the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

The brunt of the hurricane will begin hitting Puerto Rico today, said Roberto Garcia of the National Weather Service in San Juan. That was later than predicted before the storm's movement slowed. The National Guard was on alert in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for Puerto Rico on Tuesday afternoon after the first intense thunderstorms struck the area. Such a

Air pollution obscures views of scenic vistas at Big Bend

Associated Press

"The Big Bend National Park's scenic vistas of jagged peaks and tumbled rock have been disappearing lately, lost behind a white haze caused by air pollution that at its worst can blot out entire mountain ranges.

Problems have persisted for nearly three weeks, during which visibility has dipped to an all-time low of 9 miles on one occasion, park spokeswoman Valerie Naylor said. The summer time average is 50 miles.

"You can barely see any mountains from the park headquarters" when the haze is at its worst, Naylor said Tuesday. "Basically the whole horizon is washed out."

Usually, the view at the park includes craggy slopes which blush red at sunrise and seemingly endless blue skies. At some high spots, the thin ribbon of the Rio Grande can be seen

First lady repeatedly hits main nerve of human rights debate

BEIJING (AP) — Hillary Clinton named no names, but everyone knew whom she was talking about.

Her pointed emphasis on human rights, delivered in crisp, unadorned language from the heart of the last Communist superpower, electrified her audience at the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women.

Tuesday's speech denounced the crime, prevalent in India, of dousing wives in gasoline and setting them on fire because they don't contribute enough wealth to the family.

Mrs. Clinton attacked the practice of mutilating young girls' genitals, which is prevalent in some African and Islamic societies.

The Bosnia conflict hung unspoken in the air as she lamented "thousands of women (who) are subjected to rape as a tactic or prize of war."

Dole's English-only stance draws fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential frontrunner Bob Dole's support for making English the nation's official language and criticism of bilingual education are drawing fire from Hispanic-rights groups and educators.

"There is no problem in terms of Americans of all persuasions and from all different ethnic groups understanding the importance of learning English," National Council of La Raza president Raul Yzaguirre said Tuesday. "So it's a manufactured problem and it's a manufactured issue designed to appeal to the prejudices and the resentments of a group of conservatives in this country."

A day earlier, during a much-watched appearance before the American Legion in Indianapolis, Dole announced his support for making English the country's official language.

"If we want to ensure that all our children have the same opportunities in life, alternative language education should stop and English should be acknowledged once and for all as the official language of the United States," said Dole, who is Senate majority leader.

Britain, IRA, delay talks

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Saying it needs a few days to settle differences with Britain, the Irish government withdrew Tuesday from a meeting intended to pave the way for Northern Ireland peace talks.

The key issue was Britain's insistence that the Irish Republican Army promise to disarm before its allies in the Sinn Fein party could join negotiations. Sinn Fein has rejected the demand.

British Prime Minister John Major had planned to meet Irish premier John Bruton on Wednesday. Those plans collapsed when civil servants from both governments deadlocked on the precise terms for talks.

"The purpose is to allow some more time to attempt to resolve outstanding differences," a statement from Bruton's office said.

Irish officials said they hoped the impasse could be solved within days. Major's office in London confirmed the postponement but had no other comment.

Joe Hayes, a spokesman for Ireland's Department of Foreign Affairs, said Major agreed to "a short postponement to allow some more time to reconcile outstanding differences."

Dublin's announcement ended widespread assumption that the two governments had already agreed on an internationally supervised commission to oversee the disarmament of Northern Ireland's rival guerrilla groups.

Irish officials said they were more interested in getting talks started among the Northern Ireland parties than in setting conditions for Sinn Fein to join.

France detonates nuclear device

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — Defying international protests, France set off an underground nuclear blast Tuesday on a remote atoll in the South Pacific, beginning a series that it says will include up to eight nuclear tests.

The blast took place at 12:30 a.m. (5:30 p.m. EDT) in a tunnel beneath Mururoa Atoll, military spokesman Col. Abel Moittier announced in Tahiti, capital of the French territory in the South Pacific.

The blast ended a three-year French moratorium on nuclear testing, which had been joined by all of the world's nuclear powers except China.

China, which never joined the moratorium, conducted its fourth underground nuclear test in 14 months on Aug. 17.

Public outrage erupted when French President Jacques Chirac announced the planned tests in June, saying they were necessary so that France could create computer simulations that would make further tests unnecessary.

The blast Tuesday released energy equal to less than 20,000 tons of TNT, the French Defense Ministry announced in Paris. By comparison, the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima was equal to about 15,000 tons of TNT.

The French nuclear test site at Mururoa and Fangataufa atolls is about 3,200 miles southeast of Hawaii.

In recent weeks, ships carrying protesters from the environmental group Greenpeace and other groups have ringed Mururoa in an attempt to pressure Chirac's government to reconsider.

Two former British commandos evaded tight French security and made it to Mururoa this week. One was arrested Tuesday after spending the night on the atoll, and the other was caught in the lagoon before reaching the beach.

Protests were crippled Friday when the French Navy seized two Greenpeace ships and intercepted rubber rafts and divers who approached the atolls.

French military officials have warned the 14 protest vessels still around Mururoa to stay out of France's territorial waters, and on Tuesday declared the passage between Mururoa and Fangataufa off limits.

Chirac, a conservative elected last May, has said the tests will be finished by May 31.

"A country that wants to live in security should not lower its guard ... in a very uncertain world," Chirac said in an interview broadcast on French television Tuesday before the blast.

In the interview, he also said there might be fewer blasts than initially announced, and that they might end sooner than announced.

"If we have the information we need to change over to simulation, before the eight tests, obviously, regardless of the opinions of whomever, I will stop the blasts," he said. "My objective is not to carry out eight tests."

NATO resumes bombardment of rebel Serbs

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Its patience exhausted by shifting Serb signals, NATO launched new air attacks Tuesday meant to force the rebels to pull their big guns out of range of Sarajevo.

The airstrikes appeared to end about an hour after they started, at least around Sarajevo. But U.N. and NATO officials said they were open-ended.

"The attacks will go on until the Serbs comply with our demands," said U.N. spokesman Chris Gunness. "We hope that a strong signal being sent to the Bosnian Serbs will make them realize that the international community is serious."

However, heavy rain that began Tuesday night around Sarajevo limited the chances of new NATO attacks until the weather improved.

Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said U.S. warplanes flying from Aviano, Italy, and the aircraft carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt in the Adriatic Sea made up more than half the NATO strike force. A Western military source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 80 U.S. warplanes were involved.

Tuesday's targets — similar to those attacked last week — included ammunition depots and communications facilities, Bacon said.

The primary aim of the bombardment was to stop the shelling of civilians by forcing the Serbs to pull some 300 heavy weapons at least 12 1/2 miles away from besieged Sarajevo. But the NATO planes were not always able to get at Serb artillery emplacements because of their proximity to populated areas.

U.N. forces, which backed up NATO planes last week, helped out again Tuesday, destroying a Serb mortar south of the city as it was preparing to fire, U.N. officials said.

The Bosnian Serb military leader, Gen. Ratko Mladic, offered Monday to call a unilateral ceasefire around Sarajevo. But he refused to pull back the guns, defying a pledge to do so by Bosnian Serb political leaders.

NATO airstrikes resumed about 12 hours after the deadline for the Serbs to comply had expired.

The Bosnian Serb military said Tuesday's raids caused extensive damage and civilian casualties.

Bosnian Serb television showed several demolished houses, a crying woman dressed in black and a man almost cut in half lying in a coffin. It said one civilian was killed and a woman and two children were wounded when NATO planes bombed Hresa, a village northeast of Sarajevo.

There was no confirmation.

The Western allies also demanded that the rebel Serbs reopen Sarajevo's airport and land routes into the city, and end attacks on the three other U.N.-declared "safe areas."

The airstrikes also were meant to emphasize the West's seriousness before peace talks resume Friday.

The United Nations wants the Serbs to accept a U.S. initiative that would give them 49 percent of Bosnia, compared with the nearly 70 percent they hold now. A Bosnian Croat and Muslim federation would get the rest.

"They cannot win this war through an escalation of a military conflict," Gunness said in Zagreb, Croatia. "They have to sit now at the negotiating table and talk peace."

President Clinton said the NATO airstrikes Tuesday were an "appropriate" response to the Serbs' refusal to end their 3 1/2-year-old siege of Sarajevo. Russia, traditional ally of the Serbs, claimed the Serbs were preparing to pull back when the attacks came, and accused the West of siding with Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

In Sarajevo, people craned their necks as warplanes zoomed over around noon. The mood was festive. After the initial three-day wave of airstrikes ended last Friday, many had begun to get discouraged about the possibility of continued NATO action.

But danger remained. U.N. officials reported some sniper fire in the city, and the Bosnian Health Ministry said snipers killed a civilian and wounded another. Three others were wounded by shells exploding in the northern part of the city, said hospital officials.

U.N. officials said late Tuesday that shells were landing near their headquarters.

Earlier, U.N. officials in the northern town of Tuzla reported three explosions in the area of a Serb-held hillside communications tower, apparently from NATO attacks.

Bosnian Serb radio said the tower, on the Majevica hills, had been damaged, destroying television relays as well as cutting phone lines between eastern and western parts of territory they hold in Bosnia and with Serbia.

One U.N. source in Sarajevo, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said NATO planes also targeted a large Bosnian Serb barracks in the southern suburb of Lukavica. U.N. officials had been gathering weaponry there for a possible pullout.

The Serb military statement said targets in Lukavica were hit twice. Serbs reported one explosion near the Bosnian Serb headquarters of Pale, nine miles southeast of Sarajevo; six more around the southwest Sarajevo suburb of Hadzici; and one at Hresa, just northeast of Sarajevo.

U.N. officials in Zagreb said two heavily armed British Warrior vehicles "neutralized" a Serb mortar on Mount Igman, south of Sarajevo. The force, dominated by British and French troops, hit dozens of Serb mortars and cannons last week with its own heavy artillery.

Mladic's refusal to move his guns appeared to override an offer by Nikola Koljevic, chief deputy of Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic.

Karadzic and Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic — normally Mladic's backer — wanted the weapons pulled back, according to a Bosnian Serb source who spoke on condition of anonymity. The source added that Milosevic was angered by Mladic's defiance.

U.S. envoy Richard Holbrooke, who is trying to organize support for the U.S. peace initiative, planned to meet again with Milosevic on Wednesday.

The peace talks are to begin in Geneva on Friday.

The three days of NATO strikes began last Wednesday, two days after a Serb mortar shell exploded in a crowded Sarajevo market.

Despite criticism NAFTA good deal

Although the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) is being widely criticized for not miraculously creating prosperity for Mexico or vast numbers of new jobs or increased exports for the United States, it's still early to categorize the trade agreement as a dismal failure.

In fact, long before the agreement was approved we said that NAFTA was merely a way to expand trade between the United States, Mexico and Canada, and not, within itself, the realization of trade prosperity. Mexico's financial problems were so overwhelming that it was apparent it would take years for the trade opening to improve that nation's economic plight — or to benefit the United States.

So while there was an understandable desire on the part of many Americans to see a tremendous boost in prosperity as a result of the passage of NAFTA, to expect a quick result was naive.

Responding to a study from Public Citizen, which lobbied against passage of the trade pact and now contends American workers are feeling the pinch from

NAFTA, Commerce Secretary Ron Brown said, "NAFTA clearly has had a positive impact on U.S. jobs and exports. It's time to stop playing the 'blame NAFTA' game every time there is a 'shock' felt in the international financial markets."

Judge Morris, the National Association of Manufacturers' senior policy director for international trade, asked, "Is there some disappointment generally in the Mexican market? Undeniably, but that doesn't mean NAFTA is a bad idea. If anything, it means it is more important."

Why? Because increased trade between the United States and Mexico will benefit both nations in the long run by raising the level of income for Mexicans and helping to create some jobs for Americans and Mexicans alike. That does not mean — and should not be misconstrued to mean — that NAFTA will magically generate prosperity for Mexicans and U.S. residents. Although we believe the increased trade will benefit the people of all three nations in the long run, those benefits will take time to accrue.

We still believe NAFTA was a good move.

Bush bites tongue on Clinton leadership

WASHINGTON — Former President George Bush continues to avoid press interviews because he can't help belittling Bill Clinton — whom he refers to in private conversations and correspondence with friends as "unbelievable."

Anderson

"Aren't these people (the Clintons) unbelievable?" Bush wrote in a recent letter to a friend. "Can you believe they run things?"

Another close friend of Bush told us the former president has offered similar thoughts to him in private, adding that Bush is especially critical of Clinton's foreign policy. "Yes, he thinks the Clintons are so unbelievable," this friend said.

That's the word he's used with them. He thinks they're so repulsive. He thinks they're buffoons. Bush's press aide Jim McGrath could not confirm that the remarks were made, but said he would not be surprised if they were true. He cited Clinton's policies in China and Haiti as two areas where Bush has questioned the judgment of his successor. In each case candidate Clinton spoke out against the Bush administration's handling of the issue, while President Clinton eventually adopted the same stance. "President Clinton built on what Bush has done," while giving his predecessor little credit, McGrath said.

Since leaving office in 1993, Bush has had little contact with Clinton, though he did appreciate a call from the commander-in-chief last spring. Clinton was calling to thank him for resigning his lifetime membership in the National Rifle Association after an NRA fund-raising letter referred to federal agents as "jack-booted government thugs." Bush confidants say he undertook the act as a personal tribute to a Secret Service agent who died in the Oklahoma City bombing. The agent had once been assigned to guard Bush.

Clinton was on a foreign trip at the time, yet he made a considerable effort to reach Bush by telephone — which he was able to do while in Ukraine. A source close to Bush calls it a warm gesture on Clinton's part, but says it wasn't all that great for Bush — considering the praise came from the man who took his job.

The last time the two presidents met was July 17 at the unveiling of Bush's portrait in the White House. Before that, it was at the now-infamous celebrity golf tournament at which Bush's drives accidentally struck two spectators, drawing blood from a woman who was hit in the head.

Ever the patrician gentleman, Bush generally avoids sharp criticism of the Clintons even in private gatherings of friends. Lately, however, some of these friends — many of whom served in his administration — have been pushing him to be more public about his real views. Otherwise, they fear the Clinton administration will continue to denigrate his record without response.

These friends are hoping to appeal to Bush's interest in establishing his place in history. Nearly three years removed from the White House, Bush still believes his presidency is underrated and his long years of service are not getting the credit they deserve. Some suspect the 71-year-old ex-president will be more outspoken in lectures affiliated with his $85 million presidential library at Texas A&M. The facility is due to be completed in 1997.

In the meantime, Bush occupies himself with his 13 grandchildren, and by boosting the political careers of two of his sons — Texas Gov. George W. Bush and Jeb, who plans another gubernatorial run in Florida. "As a proud father," one friend told us, "he's said that the careers of his children are his greatest redemption in the end — though he didn't use the word 'redemption.'" George W. Bush's Texas victory was particularly sweet for the former president, considering his son beat Ann Richards, the silver-tongued governor who made a splash at the 1988 Democratic National Convention by ridiculing then-Vice President Bush as a man "born with a silver foot in his mouth."

America's declining dialects may rebound

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bill Bryson, author of "Made in America: An Informal History of the English Language in the United States," is filling in for the vacationing William Safire.

In Vermont these days, by most accounts, you are less likely than you once were to overhear the locals pronouncing "cow" as "kyow," saying "so don't I" for "so do I" or employing the colorful, if somewhat cryptic, expressions for which the state was once noted — "heavier than a dead minister" and "well, that just eats my lunch" are two that spring to mind if not, alas, to many Vermont tongues any longer.

In North Carolina, meanwhile, on the Outer Banks island of Ocracoke, a place where the inhabitants once spoke a hearty dialect so rich and mysterious that visitors sometimes supposed they had stumbled onto some half-lost outpost of Elizabethan England, you could walk all day without hearing the quaint archaisms that were once central to the islanders' speech and lives — words like fladgat (meaning a piece of something), begombed (to be soiled or smeared), airish (for a stiff breeze), or quamish (for queasy).

All over America, it can seem, we are engaged in a process of linguistic homogenization that is quietly robbing us of turns of phrases, pronunciations and other dialect features that once gave many localities a stamp of distinction. "There is no doubt that certain kinds of dialect differences are dying out because the culture is becoming more uniform, more standardized — more mail-ized, so to speak," says John Algeo, a former professor of English at the University of Georgia and a veteran observer of American speechways.

"One of the central factors in dialect is isolation," adds Frederic Cassidy, dean of American dialect studies as longtime head of the Dictionary of American Regional English (DARE) unit in Madison, Wis. "As soon as you remove isolation, erosion of the dialect pretty generally follows."

Such certainly appears to have been the case on Ocracoke. From its founding as a pilotage port in 1715 to the middle of this century, it was cut off, emotionally as much as physically, from the mainland, and its resonant dialect thrived. But in 1953, most of the island became national parkland as part of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, attracting the unrelenting attention of tourists, and four years later a paved highway was built improving access and communication with the mainland. The changes secured Ocracoke's economic future but chased the accent to the back corners.

At the same time, easier access and other factors like urban flight and telecommuting mean that people are not just visiting tranquil backwaters like Ocracoke but increasingly settling there. Today, native Ocracokers account for less than half the island's population, and the same phenomenon is repeated elsewhere. In Vermont, for example, the proportion of native-born residents has fallen from nearly 72 percent in 1960 to just 57 percent today. Around Burlington, where the influx has been particularly pronounced, there is a standing joke that "it's nice to live in Chittenden County because it's so near Vermont."

The effect there has been not just a diminution of colorful phrases — it is a bold non-native indeed who can unselfconsciously say, "Well, wouldn't that just jar your mother's nerves," or ask for "a frog skin more" of coffee — but even of some venerable pronunciations, as at the town of Norwich. Traditionally pronounced "Norritch," like the city in England, under the onslaught of well-meaning but phonetically imprecise outsiders it became "Nor-witch." Now even the natives pronounce it so.

Much as this may alarm traditionalists, many authorities take a more philosophical view. "People nearly always see linguistic change as a deterioration when in fact it is just change," says Dr. Julie Roberts of the University of Vermont Department of Communication Sciences, who is heading a long-term study of the state's dialects. "Dialects don't die, they evolve, and that is almost certainly what is happening in Vermont now. I have no doubt that 50 years from now people will be decrying the loss of expression they heard in their childhoods in the 1990s. It has always been so."

Indeed, there may be what Roberts calls "a prestige factor" at play in perpetuating local speechways. A classic study on Martha's Vineyard in 1963 found that certain traditional pronunciations, notably those involving a flattening of the ou diphthong in words like house and mouse, were in danger of extinction, but then staged an unexpected rally. A main force for preservation, it turned out, was natives who returned to the island after living away and embraced the old speech forms as a way of distinguishing themselves from the mass of non-natives.

Similarly, a survey of Ocracoke speech by North Carolina State University's Language and Life Project found that middle-aged people — those who grew up in the 1950s and 1960s, when tourism first became a dominant motif of island life — have a more pronounced brogue than their elders. According to the project's report, "Hoi Toide on the Sound Soide: The Story of the Ocracoke Brogue," a likely explanation is that these people "exaggerate their island dialect features, whether consciously or not, because they want there to be no mistake that they are 'real' Ocracokers and not tourists or new residents recently relocated from the mainland."

So which is it for America's scattered and cherished dialects — long-term decline and eventual oblivion or a quiet but determined resurgence? The fact is nobody knows, or at least can agree on, how many dialects there are now, much less how many there may be at some point in the future.

"The word dialect is practically impossible to define to anybody's satisfaction," says Frederic Cassidy with a hint of wistfulness, and he should know. Between 1965 and 1970, under Cassidy's direction, 80 fieldworkers armed with stacks of questionnaires fanned out across America tracking down local or regional names for practically everything, from household utensils to words for dust balls under the bed.

It was the largest project of its kind ever undertaken — altogether 2.3 million pieces of data were collected — but despite its thoroughness, the DARE study can do no more than describe American regional speech as it existed between 1965 and 1970. Surely now, a quarter of a century after the last interview, it is time to embark on a follow-up? Sadly, no. Joan H. Hall, associate editor of the project, won't even hazard a guess as to what it would cost to embark on such an undertaking now.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 6, the 249th day of 1995. There are 116 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 6, 1901, President McKinley was shot and mortally wounded by American anarchist Leon Czolgosz at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo, N.Y. McKinley died eight days later; Czolgosz was executed the following October.

On this date: In 1837, the Oberlin Collegiate Institute of Ohio went co-educational as it conferred equal academic status to a class of four women and 30 men.

In 1888, diplomat and financier Joseph P. Kennedy Sr. was born in Boston.

In 1909, American explorer Robert Peary sent word that he had reached the North Pole five months earlier.

In 1939, South Africa declared war on Germany.

In 1941, Jews over the age of 6 in German-occupied areas were ordered to wear yellow Stars of David.

In 1944, during World War II, the British government relaxed blackout restrictions and suspended compulsory training for the Home Guard.

Merger mania is good news for pink-slip firms

One of the beneficiaries of a giant merger such as Chase and Chemical Bank is the "pink slip" industry. Every time two corporations in the United States take marriage vows, thousands of people have to be laid off, and the victims will be issued pink slips.

The Guillotine Pink Slip Company is one of the largest in the country. It is located in Greenwich, Conn., and looks more like a Colonial mansion than an office building.

William Stud, a jovial man, greeted me in his office, which overlooks a pond filled with swans. "Things must be good for you," I said.

"They have never been better. The companies are laying off workers left and right, and they have to come to us for reliable pink slips — ones that would not turn into sawdust when put in the washer by mistake."

"Can I see where you make the pink slips?"

"We don't make them in the United States. We print them in Korea."

"Korea?"

"Yes. You see, when the Guillotine Pink Slip Company merged with Red Ink Inc., we had to lay off 90 percent of our work force to pay interest on the junk bonds. So what we did was contract the manufacturing end of the business to Korea. They make fine pink slips, and when we hand them out, most Americans who receive them have no idea they were produced in the Far East."

"Did you feel bad letting so many people go?"

"We would have if we had been here. But all the executives flew to Florida for a sales meeting the week the slips were handed out."

"I suppose corporations can't have a merger without pink slips."

"The antitrust people in the Justice Department insist on it. They won't try to prevent a monopoly, but they are going to make sure all the employee firing is done by the book."

I said, "I suppose when it comes to Wall Street people don't count anymore."

"That's not necessarily true. When two Wall Street brokerages or investment houses merge, at least 50 percent of the employees have to be pink-slipped. It causes a lot of heartaches, particularly when the merged companies not only take away their jobs but also cancel their subscriptions to the Wall Street Journal."

"When you pink-slip someone, is there any way to ease the pain?"

"Well, some companies used to give away free turkeys at Thanksgiving. But they stopped doing it when the employees they fired didn't even have the grace to say, 'Thank you.'"

Simpson

LOS ANGELES — Simpson jurors heard time Tuesday that the witness — a former FBI agent — had a slur, and even a black.

As the mostly black jurors attentively listened, they quoted the witness as saying, "The only good nigger is a dead nigger."

Earlier, another witness testified that Simpson had a bloody glove on his right hand and that it was the glove that had killed the victim.

"If I had my way, I would have all the niggers together and burn them," Bell, choking back tears, said as he testified.

Asked for his reaction to the testimony, Bell said, "I kind of got teary."

The testimony, heard in eight days of testimony, was the first of the trial.

Still, admission that Simpson was a murderer was a triumph for F. Lee Bailey, who exposed the witness as a liar.

It was a shattering moment, prosecutors who examined Bell and the now-retired defense lawyer. Legal experts said the testimony was a devastating blow to the defense.

After the tapes, probably false, were played, Bailey said, "Loyola University professor Laurie L. King said, 'They want to get fast and painless.'"

Outside the jury room, Christopher, who is a prosecutor, said, "I'm not sure if it's a good thing or a bad thing."

These are the things that were argued. "It takes a level of emotional control to be able to do this," Bailey said.

They have a question because they are not sure if they can call the witness.

Darden, who is a prosecutor, said, "I know the hateful word 'nigger' but I don't want to use it."

Not to distract from the trial, Darden said, "I know the hateful word 'nigger' but I don't want to use it."

Simpson jury learns of racial slurs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson jurors heard for the first time Tuesday that the star prosecution witness — Detective Mark Fuhrman — had uttered a racist slur, and even advocated killing blacks.

As the mostly black jury listened attentively, witness Natalie Singer quoted Fuhrman as telling her: "The only good nigger is a dead nigger."

Earlier, another witness told how the detective who found a bloody glove on Simpson's property said he'd like to kill all blacks, and that interracial romance disgusted him.

"If I had my way I'd gather — all the niggers would be gathered together and burned," Kathleen Bell, choking back tears, quoted Fuhrman as saying.

Asked her reaction, she replied, "I kind of got teary-eyed and I left."

The testimony, the first jurors heard in eight days, followed last week's ruling that disallowed most of Fuhrman's tape-recorded use of the word "nigger" and his descriptions of police brutality.

Still, admission of the testimony was a triumph for defense lawyer F. Lee Bailey, who has sought to expose Fuhrman as a racist so consumed with hatred he would frame a black former football star for the murders of his white ex-wife and her friend.

It was a shattering defeat for prosecutors, who barely cross-examined Bell and Singer about the now-retired detective's comments. Legal experts said the prosecution, now convinced that Fuhrman lied when he testified he didn't use the word "nigger" in 10 years, wanted to minimize the devastating impact by keeping the testimony short.

"After the tapes, the prosecution probably feels that these witnesses are, at least in part, telling the truth," Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson said. "They want to get through this as fast and painlessly as possible."

Outside the jury's presence prosecutor Christopher Darden fought to stop other witnesses from repeating similar testimony about Fuhrman's disparaging comments about blacks.

"These are horrible, horrible things that were said," Darden argued. "It takes us to a higher level of emotionalism."

Bailey shot back: "Suddenly they have a queasy stomach because they are not in a position to call the witnesses liars."

Darden, who is black, said he knew the hateful power of the word "nigger" but said it should not distract from the charges against Simpson in the murders of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

"This is not the trial of the people versus Fuhrman, not yet," Darden said.

Clark, cross-examining Singer, elicited testimony that she had not told prosecutors about Fuhrman but notified the defense. Bailey asked why.

"Not in a million years did I think they'd want to hear what I had to say," said Singer, who now lives in Nashville, Tenn.

Singer, who met Fuhrman in 1987 because her roommate was dating his police partner, was asked if she was more offended by his words or manner.

"When he says the things he says, it's ... bolstered and held up and pushed out of his mouth with hatred and arrogance and despicability," she said. "And that's what hurts ... combined with the words."

Singer wasn't allowed to tell jurors what Fuhrman told her he did to blacks, but she did tell them: "After he did what he said he did, he said, 'Oh, well, it really relieves your tension.' And then this nauseating — it hits you here — kind of laugh ..."

Both Singer and Bell said they recognized Fuhrman on TV after he testified at Simpson's preliminary hearing more than a year ago, and they began making phone calls.

Bell said she tried to reach representatives of both sides but made contact with the defense first.

"I didn't want someone to be tried without all the information, and I thought that there might be some reason that they need to know that Mark Fuhrman said these things to me," Bell testified.

The sequestered jurors took notes during the testimony, a contrast to their recent non-response to other witnesses.

After she testified, Bell told reporters she had reservations about her actions because, "I felt that I was hurting the Goldman family and the Brown family."

Bell testified that she met Fuhrman at a Marine recruiting office in 1985 or 1986 and was initially attracted to him, but then decided she might try to fix her friend up with him. She said that during a conversation at the recruiting office, she mentioned Marcus Allen, a black professional football player.

"His demeanor changed and his attitude toward me changed. ... He said that if, when he sees a black man with a white woman driving in a car he pulls them over," she testified.

"I was taken aback a little bit, and so I kind of paused, and I looked at the Marines and I just said, 'Well, what if they didn't do anything wrong?' " she testified.

"He said he'd find something," she testified. "Then he said, 'If I had my way I'd gather — all the niggers would be gathered together and burned.' "

When he testified at Simpson's trial in March, Fuhrman denied meeting Bell or her friend Andrea Terry.

Bell's testimony was the first jurors heard since Aug. 28.

Northern drought brings ruination of crops

BOSTON (AP) — The leaves are falling from the trees without turning their usual brilliant reds and golds. Pumpkins are already turning orange — or withering on the vine.

One of the worst droughts the Northeast has ever seen is worrying farmers and firefighters from Maine to New Jersey and leading to water restrictions in some communities.

"Every day it doesn't rain we lose a pile of money. And looking at the weather reports, it may not rain for another week," said Scott Ellis, who has 750 acres of soybeans in New Jersey, where the drought is most severe.

The dry July and August are threatening the eye-popping foliage changes and roadside farm stands that draw thousands of "leaf peepers" and other tourists to New England.

"They're ripening very early," said pumpkin farmer Peter Gibney, of Danvers, Mass. "They're showing a lot of color right now that normally they don't." Farmers in New Jersey said pumpkins there were too small to sell.

Rainfall throughout the Northeast is 8 to 16 inches below average this year. In some areas, the drought is setting records. Belfast, Maine, didn't have a drop of rain for 31 days.

"It's probably the worst I've ever seen it, and I've been farming 40 years," said Roger Richardson, who farms 2,400 acres on Maryland's Eastern Shore. "We just haven't had any rain in August. The soybeans are really taking it."

In many spots they're drying in the field."

In New Jersey, rainfall has been 30 percent to 40 percent below normal for the past 12 months, making it the second-driest September through August since 1896.

In the Connecticut River Valley, where many farmers rely on rain rather than irrigation, "they'll lose some of their crops. They'll be done early. They'll be out of peppers, out of tomatoes," said Richard Bonanno, a farmer who heads the New England Vegetable and Berry Growers Association.

"Even if you have the water, you're just fighting all the time to irrigate, irrigate, irrigate," he said.

Betty Miller of Miller's Plant Farms in York, Pa., said irrigation saved her fruit from dehydration but not thirsty animals. "The crows and pheasants pick at the watermelons and cantaloupe to get the water," she said.

Suburban gardeners are suffering, too. Many communities are imposing water restrictions, and once-prized lawns look like twine-fodder.

"I mowed once in three weeks, and when I mowed the whole lawn was full of dust because the lawn was so dry," said Bob Sanborn, 42, of West Nyack, N.Y., where outdoor watering and car washing are forbidden.

The six wells that supply Mount Savage, Md., have dropped to one-third their normal level. "People will probably have to go out of town to do their laundry" by next week, said Dan Williams, president of the town's water company.

In Delaware, Gov. Thomas R. Carper declare a drought state of emergency on Monday that will force most state residents to use less water. Newark, N.J., has threatened fines or cutoffs for people who violate water restrictions.

Drinking water supplies aren't threatened in most areas because many large reservoirs were replenished by early summer and spring rains.

Streams and rivers are low, however, threatening wildlife. The reduced flow of fresh water into the Hudson and Delaware rivers has allowed ocean water to penetrate farther inland, exposing fish and other wildlife to dangerous levels of salty water.

Software firm born in Midland takes off

■ Founded in 1981 and now operated out of Austin, company expands, embarks on first marketing effort to push sales.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

A software company that was born in Midland in 1981 is expanding and serves 250 customers in Texas as well as customers in 10 other states. Apollo Data Services, headquartered in Austin since 1991, develops financial software for county governments. It was founded by Skip Fulkerson and Lance Farris. Before founding Apollo, Fulkerson was data processing manager for Ector County for eight years. Farris has 17 years of experience in financial auditing and development of financial software for local governments.

In addition to founding Apollo Data Services, Fulkerson started S.F. Data Processing, which develops and prepares computer election ballots for more than 20 Texas counties, cities, districts and school boards.

Earlier this month, Apollo Data Services and S.F. Data Processing formed Apollo Software Inc., which acquired Apollo Data Services and S.F. Data Processing, merging the two entities into one.

PC/DOS software developed by Apollo automates local government offices for judges, justices of the peace, clerks, law-enforcement agencies, financial staffs, tax authorities, utilities.

Waco-based plant pathologist David Bush talks to West Texas cotton farmers about experimental cotton varieties at Holland Cottonseed Inc. test plots north of Big Spring.

Growers get news on experimental cotton crops

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — To farmers, the essence of the complexities of molecular biology, plant pathology and other sciences dealing with cotton production basically boils down to one simple thing: the quest for more cotton.

Waco plant pathologist David Bush put it this way: "The three most important characteristics of cotton varieties are yield, yield, yield."

Bush and two Lubbock-based molecular biologists, Norma Trolinder and Linda Koonce, joined almost 100 West Texas farmers and other agribusiness people Tuesday at Roy Holland's Holland Cottonseed Inc. Field Day 1995 to update producers on bold experimental cotton varieties.

In their dreams and hopes, farmers seek varieties that are hardy and drought-resistant, which is possible and extant. Drought-resistant cotton that fares well in dry conditions and on dryland farms has been on the market for years even as more research continues into more drought-resistant varieties.

Farmers are intent on attacking the scourges of boll weevils — which cause the young, succulent bolls to rot — and the beet armyworms — which cause cotton to waste away by stripping the plants' life-support system, the leaves and bracts.

They desire cotton strains that defeat the onslaught of detrimental insects, such as the boll weevil, bollworm, budworm and the beet armyworm.

"It's more than possible," Ms. Trolinder said. "It's done."

Monsanto, a major chemical company, has developed and is testing a cotton variety that produces an enzyme, cholesterol oxidase, that interferes with the boll weevils' life cycle, maturity and reproduction.

"I don't know how far away they are from putting this thing out," Ms. Trolinder said, but the enzyme is "showing very good efficacy against the boll weevil."

Ms. Koonce said the boll weevil needs cholesterol to complete its life

Annual Septemberfest to showcase 72 artists

From Staff Reports

Septemberfest will bring 72 artists to Midland Friday through Sunday for the 26th annual event sponsored by Las Manos for the Museum of the Southwest.

The artists will offer a variety of original art including pottery, fiber, jewelry, woodwork, watercolor and photography. The prices will fit any budget.

The majority of the artists live in Texas or New Mexico; however, artists are coming from as far away as Colorado, California and New York.

The 1995 Septemberfest Preview Party Invitation features the original design donated by artist Mary Ellen McKenzie. She lives in Austin, but grew up in Midland and graduated from Midland High School. She is the daughter of longtime Midlanders Chessley and Elizabeth McKenzie. Ms. McKenzie's watercolor won first place at the Septemberfest Silent Auction last year.

This year's event to include food and artists booths, performers, Kinderfest for children and a 10K, 5K and 1K Fun Run.

A diverse group of local artists will show their work at Septemberfest. The Midland artists are Anita Goudeau, jewelry; Melissa Naylor, fiber; Plyna Nesbitt, Santas; Linda Tiffany Cardwell, painted vests; and Nancy Tubb, jewelry.

Representing Odessa are Nita and Harold Baldwin, stained glass; and Nancy Dye, pottery. Other West Texans include Joyce Jones, watercolors; and Nora Phillips, oils. Both are from Lamesa.

This year's event includes food booths, artists booths, performers, Kinderfest for children and a 10K, 5K and 1K Fun Run hosted by the Permian Basin Roadrunners Club Inc., Saturday morning.

Permian Basin Alzheimer's group schedules forum for area families

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

When one person is stricken with Alzheimer's disease, an entire family suffers, so area medical officials have scheduled an Alzheimer's Open Forum for 10 a.m. today at Manor Park Chapel.

The latest information on how victims and their families can better cope with this devastating disease will be presented by Sharon Vangness, associate director of the National Alzheimer's Association in Chicago.

The public is invited to attend the forum at The Manor Park Chapel, 2208 N. Loop 250 West. The entrance is located west of Midland Drive or east off the loop.

For those struggling with Alzheimer's disease, there are resources available both locally and nationally that can be of help, according to members of the Permian Basin Alzheimer's Association.

Morning attack by 2 Rottweilers seriously injures Odessa girl, 9

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

ODESSA — An Odessa girl remained in serious condition at Medical Center Hospital Tuesday after being attacked by two, large Rottweiler dogs, according to police officials.

Nine-year-old Misty Ryan remained in the Pediatric Special Care Unit after undergoing surgery for severe bite wounds on her head, right arm, back and face, said Renee Henderson, hospital spokeswoman.

Police officials said Misty was attacked in the 3300 block of North Jackson Street by the two Rottweilers at about 6:55 a.m. while she was waiting for the school bus.

The dogs, who police said were apparently unprovoked, knocked Misty to the ground and bit her several times. Witnesses told police that the girl repeatedly tried to escape from the dogs, but continued to be knocked down and bitten. She was dragged more than 200 feet before neighbors could beat the dogs off the child.

When officers arrived, they had to prevent another child from being attacked. One officer sprayed the dogs with cayenne pepper spray; however, the dogs remained aggressive until Misty was taken to the hospital.

The dogs ran off after Misty was put into an ambulance. They were captured by the Odessa Police Animal Control and taken to the Animal Control Shelter, police officials said.

The dogs' owner, John Hill of Odessa, was issued citations for allowing his dogs to run at large and maintaining vicious animals. Police said he relinquished rights to the dogs and requested that the dogs be destroyed.

Child was dragged more than 200 feet before neighbors could beat the dogs off.

Fugitive grandmother: FBI still hunts woman after 10 years

AUSTIN (AP) — To many in Austin, Betty Ann Duke was known as a mother of two, substitute teacher, legislative researcher, leftist activist and committed warrior in the struggle for worldwide human rights.

To the FBI, the 54-year-old grandmother has been a federal fugitive "considered armed and extremely dangerous" for the past 10 years.

Ms. Duke disappeared in 1985 while awaiting trial in Philadelphia, where she was charged with harboring a fugitive from a $1.6 million armored truck heist and with possession of firearms and 200 pounds of explosives.

Along with being wanted in a series of bombings in New York and Washington, D.C., Ms. Duke was one of three Austinites involved in the November 1983 bombing of the U.S. Capitol, FBI senior resident agent in Austin Byron Sage said. That blast blew a hole in the Senate chamber's outside wall and caused $265,000 in damage.

For many who took part in anti-Vietnam War protests and later activities aimed at social change, Ms. Duke's actions came as no shock.

"This needs to be put in context. Her life, and ours, needs to be put in context," said Lori Jo Hansel, one of Ms. Duke's best friends.

Ms. Hansel, now an Austin lawyer and mother, reluctantly spoke of her friend to the Austin American-Statesman.

"Growing up in Texas, in the 1950s, we couldn't help but be affected by what was going on around us," Ms. Hansel said. "We grew up when black people couldn't vote. The march to Selma. Later, there were the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Malcolm X, the child running down the road on fire in Vietnam. ... These things had a direct impact on us."

Ms. Duke, born in 1940 in Beeville, was reared in a comfortable middle-class family in San Antonio.

In the early '60s, she lived in an Episcopal seminary in Chicago and worked in the ghettos, "figuring out what she could do as one person," Ms. Hansel said.

Ms. Duke came to Austin in the early 1970s, a divorcee with two children. The 1968 graduate of North Texas State University in Denton had been an English instructor at the university until she was fired in 1971 for cursing at regents during an anti-war demonstration.

In Austin, Ms. Duke worked as a substitute teacher, then as a legislative researcher. In 1981, she walked away from the job to raise money to defend friends arrested in a bungled Brinks robbery in New York state. Two police officers were killed in the robbery attempt.

Russell Duke, Ms. Duke's 31-year-old son, said his mother "is not a maniac. She's a highly educated woman with very strong ideals." Duke said he hasn't spoken to his mother in 10 years and that her disappearance was "very upsetting."

According to the FBI, Ms. Duke became active in a national terrorist group known as the May 19 Communist Movement. The group, the FBI said, was a spinoff of the radical Weather Underground, which grew out of anti-war groups common on university campuses in the 1960s.

Nearly one in 10 Texans is immigrant, census says

HOUSTON (AP) — Nearly one of every 10 people living in Texas in 1994 was born outside the United States, according to a new U.S. Census Bureau report.

The 9.9 percent of Texans who were foreign-born exceeds the 8.7 percent national average, the highest since World War II.

About 75 percent of those 1.8 million immigrant Texans had not yet become naturalized citizens, the report said.

The growth in the percentage of foreign-born Texans is accelerating. Since 1970, 1.5 million people born in other countries have poured into Texas, most from Mexico and El Salvador, most settling in the state's biggest metropolitan areas.

The census figures reflect changes in immigration law that began with the passage of the Immigration Act of 1985, which made it easier for immediate family members of recent immigrants to enter the country.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, intended to staunch the flow of illegal immigrants, actually fueled the numbers of foreign-born Americans. In one fell swoop, it granted amnesty to about 400,000 previously illegal immigrants living in Texas since 1982.

"And right now, the most significant change in law that is affecting immigration is the Immigration Act of 1990, which basically made it much easier for the extended relatives of current residents to immigrate into the U.S.," said state demographer Steve Murdock of Texas A&M University.

"Not just children and spouses can enter more easily now, but fathers, mothers and other family members."

California was home to 7.7 million foreign-born residents in 1994 — more than a third of all immigrants to the United States and nearly a quarter of the state population.

Texas ranked fourth as home to 8 percent of the nation's immigrants.

Nearly 1.2 million Texas residents were born in Mexico, and another 110,000 listed El Salvador as their place of birth.

Most were urban dwellers. Of the total 1.8 million foreign-born in Texas, nearly 1.7 million resided in metropolitan areas, 1.1 million of them in the inner cities.

Murdock noted that Texas was second to California in overall population growth from 1990 to 1994. If current growth trends continue, Census Bureau and state demographers expect the Anglo proportion of the Texas population to drop below 50 percent between 2005 and 2010.

Hispanics would be 41 percent of the Texas population by the year 2020. And by the end of 2030, only 36.7 percent of state residents would be Anglo, while 45.9 percent would be Hispanic, 9.5 percent would be black and 7.9 percent would be members of other ethnic groups, primarily Asian.

While census officials made no effort to question people about their legal status, they estimate 4 million of the 22.6 million foreign-born U.S. residents in March 1994 were here illegally. If that 17.7 percent is applied to the Texas number of foreign-born, that would mean 318,600 were illegal immigrants.

"Of course, the real question is whether you're going to answer a current population survey accurately if you're here illegally," Murdock said.

The report, however, did show that a great majority of foreign-born Texans were working and living above the federal poverty line and not dependent on public assistance.

About 1 million of the foreign-born Texans were working in 1994, while 86,000 of them were unemployed, 174,000 were under 16 years of age, 537,100 were not in the labor force and 3,000 were in the armed forces.

De Zavala marker languishes in courthouse basement

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A bronze historical marker honoring preservationist Adina De Zavala sits not on Alamo Plaza but behind office furniture in the basement of the Bexar County Courthouse.

"They made such a big deal out of it and here it is," said Rufus Martinez, assistant director of county buildings. His cluttered office has been home of the $1,700 marker since it was delivered in February.

Delays in erection of the De Zavala marker are nothing new.

Its backers have been waiting for one for 40 years, ever since the Texas House and Senate approved resolutions shortly after her death calling for a marker in her honor to be placed inside the Alamo.

The Bexar County Historical Commission received approval last year from the Texas Historical Commission to place an official state marker honoring Adina De Zavala in Alamo Plaza.

The monument is to be placed near the Alamo's long barracks, where she barricaded herself for three days in 1908 to keep the stone structure from being razed.

Her grandfather, Lorenzo De Zavala, was the first vice president of the Republic of Texas. Inspired by stories of revolutionary and republican Texas, Adina was instrumental in preserving many of the landmarks were those stories unfolded.

She helped preserve San Antonio's four other missions and the Spanish Governor's Palace. Adina also helped protect Mission San Francisco de los Tejas in East Texas and created the Texas Historical Landmarks Association, which erected the state's first historical markers.

But since the Bexar County Historical Commission hasn't met since June 1994, and County Judge Cyndi Krier hasn't named a commission chairman since the post became vacant in January, Adina De Zavala remains a celebrated — but formally unacknowledged — Texas heroine.

Historical commission members have told the San Antonio Express-News it now is unlikely the marker will be erected until 1996.

"Recognition of this historical preservationist has been long in coming and hopefully it will not be much longer," said Robert M.

Benavides, chairman of the county commission's historical marker committee.

Why people who have never considered skin peels, are now having them.

In a word, MicroPeel. It's the new peel. Developed by BioMedic Clinical Care, this 3-step, twenty minute procedure safely, effectively and painlessly uncovers better looking, healthier skin — the skin that's trapped by your damaged, micro-thin top skin layer.

Until now, the only way to effectively uncover it was through risky, less sophisticated chemical peels. With the MicroPeel, the risks are virtually gone — so you can have the skin you've always wanted.

Moo'vers & Shakers

Associated Press

Raspberries, vanilla ice cream and raspberry sherbet are among the ingredients in "razz-a-dazzical" pear shake. The recipe is the prize-winning creation of Miranda Streit, 13, of Fort Benton, Mont.

Miranda was the grand-prize winner in the "Great Shakes" recipe contest for kids, sponsored by America's dairy farmers. Her recipe was selected from among 1,700 entries. Miranda won a $1,000 prize.

The second-place winner was Roxi Conner, 11, of Boonsboro, Md., who created a "butter cup" shake with milk, butter pecan ice cream, honey and peanut butter.

RAZZ-A-DAZZICAL PEAR SHAKE

1 1/2 cups canned pears, drained and chopped
1 cup milk
1 cup fresh or frozen unsweetened raspberries
1 cup raspberry sherbet
1 cup vanilla ice cream
In the container of an electric blender place all ingredients.
Blend until smooth, about 30 seconds.

Pour into four tall glasses. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings, about 3 cups.

Nutrition facts per serving: 226 cal., 4 g pro., 6 g fat, 39 g carbo., 155 mg calcium, 82 mg sodium.

BUTTER CUP SHAKE

2 cups butter pecan ice cream
1 cup milk
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup peanut butter
Whipped cream
Butterscotch chips
Toasted coconut
In the container of an electric blender, place all ingredients.
Blend until smooth, about 30 seconds.

Pour into four tall glasses. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings, about 3 cups.

Nutrition facts per serving: 535 cal., 14 g pro., 31 g fat, 59 g carbo., 172 mg calcium, 224 mg sodium.

These homemade jams and jellies are blue-ribbon winners: strawberry banana jam, apricot jam and crab apple jelly. The recipes are gathered from state fair competitions across the country.

"The Country Preserves Companion" by Jocasta Innes (CollinsPublishers San Francisco, $12.95) contains 35 recipes for jams, jellies, marmalades, chutneys and pickled fruits and vegetables that make the most of garden produce. Among the recipes: pumpkin curd and lemon curd.

For more recipes, "The Busy Person's Guide to Preserving Food" by Janet Chadwick (Storey Communications, $12.95) contains easy, step-by-step instructions for freezing, drying and canning.

STRAWBERRY BANANA JAM

4 1/2 cups prepared fruit, about 2 quarts fully ripe strawberries and 3 fully ripe medium bananas
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
6 1/2 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin
1/2 teaspoon margarine or butter
Boil jars on rack in large pot filled with water for 10 minutes. Place flat lids in saucepan with water. Bring to boil. Remove from heat. Let stand in hot water until ready to fill. Drain well before filling.

Stem and thoroughly crush strawberries, one layer at a time. Measure 3 1/2 cups into 6- or 8-quart sauce pot. Mash bananas thoroughly.

Serve Spicy Western Steaks with 20-Minute Cowboy Beans. The steaks are marinated in a Western barbecue sauce.

Western Steaks with 20-minute Cowboy Beans make hearty fare

Associated Press

For spicy grilled steaks, marinate boneless beef chuck shoulder steaks or top round steak in a Western-style barbecue sauce. The barbecue sauce is made with ketchup, vinegar and brown sugar.

Serve the grilled steaks with a kidney-pinto bean duo that is cooked with onion, bell pepper and some of the homemade barbecue sauce. Use canned beans, and this side dish is ready in 20 minutes.

Round out the meal with garlic bread, coleslaw and corn on the cob.

SPICY WESTERN STEAKS
Total preparation and cooking time: 45 minutes
Marinating time: 6 hours or overnight
2 pounds boneless beef chuck shoulder steaks or top round steak, cut 1-inch thick.

WESTERN BARBECUE SAUCE

1 cup ketchup
1/2 cup cider vinegar
1/2 cup water
3 tablespoons packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
1 recipe 20-Minute Cowboy Beans (recipe below)

In a small saucepan, combine all sauce ingredients; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 10 minutes.

Reserve 1/2 cup sauce for 20-Minute Cowboy Beans and 1/2 cup sauce for brushing on steaks while grilling; cover and refrigerate. Cool remaining sauce for marinade.

Place beef steaks and marinade in plastic bag; turn to coat. Close bag securely; marinate in refrigerator six hours or overnight, turning occasionally.

Remove beef from marinade; discard marinade. Place beef on grid over medium ash-covered coals. Grill chuck shoulder steaks 14 to 19 minutes (top round steak 14 to 18 minutes) for medium-rare to medium doneness, turning once. Brush both sides of steaks with 1/2 cup reserved sauce during last 5 to 6 minutes of grilling.

Trim fat from steaks; carve beef into thin slices. Serve with 20-Minute Cowboy Beans. Makes 6 servings.

NOTE: To check the temperature of the coals, cautiously hold your hand, palm side down, at cooking height (just above grid). Count the number of seconds you can hold your hand in that position before the heat is uncomfortable.

WHAT'S COOKING?

Man credits mom for interest in cooking, but is more versatile

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

At work, Jed Barker is water program manager for the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission.

But at home, he's better known as Dad, a great cook.

He credits his mother as his inspiration in the culinary arts. "I guess I was kind of self taught," Barker said. "I've always loved to cook. I just picked it up from her."

Over the years, his favorite recipes became a little more complicated than those he learned in his mother's kitchen. Today the dishes he serves are just as likely to be from other countries or to be in different styles.

"I started cooking Greek (because) my wife and I would go down to the Greek Festival in Houston," Barker said. "I love ethnic food. I bought one of their cookbooks and got into cooking Greek."

"I have spurts of different nationalities (recipes) that I get into for a while."

He also is known for his meatless dishes, thanks to his daughter, who is a vegetarian. "I started off trying to cook meals that had something in them that made you think it was meat (such as tofu), but they never turned out," Barker said. "I ended up cooking real vegetarian dishes," including vegetable casseroles and grilled vegetables.

But since all members of the family aren't vegetarians, he also cooks many other kinds of meals. "My son hates vegetables, so that doesn't work out real well," Barker laughed. "He's a meat-and-potatoes man."

Add to that the whole family's effort to cut fat from their diet, and you end up with a cook who has a very versatile style. Low-fat cooking makes meal preparation more difficult, Barker said, but not impossible. With all the new products on the market, including low- or no-fat sour cream, "you can cook low-fat if you need to."

But not all the time. "One of my favorite recipes is cheese pizza. It has four different cheeses on it, and there's no way to make that puppy low-fat," Barker laughed.

Here is his favorite pizza recipe — and a couple of other recipes that the Barker family loves:

QUATTRO FORMAGGI AND PESTO PIZZA

1 recipe Pizza Dough (follows)
1/2 cup basil pesto
1 cup fresh Parmesan cheese
1 cup grated provolone cheese
1 cup crumbled gorgonzola cheese
1 cup cubed mozzarella cheese

Roll out pizza dough, spread with pesto. Add cheeses and bake at 500 degrees for 15 minutes.

PIZZA DOUGH

1 cup warm water
1 package dry yeast
2 1/2 to 3 cups bread flour

When not working as water program manager for the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, Jed Barker is a family man who has a versatile cooking style which he says his mother inspired.

2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
1 teaspoon salt
Combine all ingredients; mix and knead until smooth (about 5 minutes). Cover and let rise until doubled. Punch down and let rest 15 minutes.

SPANAKOPITAKIA

1 pound fillo pastry
1/2 pound clarified butter
1 onion, finely chopped
2 green onions finely chopped
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup parsley, chopped
1/2 cup fresh dill (1/2 dried)
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pepper
1/2 pound fresh spinach, chopped and drained (10 ounces frozen, chopped, thawed and drained)
1 cup evaporated milk
1/2 pound feta cheese

Reduced fat smoked sausage has less fat, not less taste

By Linda Anderson

When I was a kid, our Uncle Bill (we used to call him "Handsome Uncle Bill," at his own suggestion of course) introduced us to Polish sausage, since he was of Polish descent. We thought the dish was strange and exotic, since it was our first experience with foods other than what was available in our small Permian Basin hometown.

Through the years many foods (including different varieties of sausage, both Polish and otherwise) have become easier to come by, and even traditional foods are now being marketed in low- or no-fat versions.

Could be that I was remembering my Uncle Bill when I came across a nice lady who was giving out samples of a Polish-type sausage in my favorite supermarket. Only this was Eckrich Reduced Fat Smoked Sausage, not the high-fat kind my siblings and I met so long ago.

But this is the 1990s, and everything is low-fat these days, so I bought a package.

Eckrich Reduced Fat Smoked Sausage is priced at $1.99 per pound.

Label advertising claims the product "Tastes Even Better!" although it doesn't specify what exactly it is supposed to taste better than.

The sausage, which is "made with turkey, pork and beef," is supposed to contain "50 percent less fat" and "45 percent less calories than USDA data for smoked sausage," also according to its label.

Nutrition label shows that each serving (supposed to be 2 ounces, which may be enough for a sandwich — but maybe not) contains 120 calories, with 80 of those calories from fat. That's two-thirds of its calories from fat, which is a very high percentage.

I found the explanation in teeny-tiny print: "Fat and calorie content has been reduced from 18g fat and 220 calories to 9g fat and 120 calories per labeled serving." Oh.

But percentage of fat content never stopped a taste test, which, in this case, turned out to be surprising.

The reduced-fat sausage was very good! We even tried some of it plain and some with a little barbecue sauce. We tried it cold and we sampled it hot.

I appreciated that fact that it really doesn't taste greasy. The other tester just said that the sausage was "pretty good," and went back for thirds.

Eckrich Reduced Fat Smoked Sausage may not be a low-fat food, but it at least is lower-fat than regular smoked sausage. Handsome Uncle Bill would probably approve.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Add variations to standard uncooked tomato sauce

By Marian Burros

N.Y. Times News Service

Uncooked tomato sauce is a summer standard. For a variation, add some sun-dried tomatoes and a yogurt-ricotta mixture. The result is a deep, sweet sauce that melts right into the hot pasta. Simple sauteeing of zucchini brings out the sweetness of that vegetable, too.

DOUBLE TOMATO SAUCE WITH LINGUINE

1 cup sun-dried tomatoes, packed dry
4 ounces ripe tomato
1 large clove garlic
A few sprigs fresh basil to yield 1 cup, lightly packed
1 ounce Parmigiano Reggiano (1/3 cup, coarsely grated)
1 cup nonfat plain yogurt
1 cup reduced-fat ricotta cheese
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
Freshly ground black pepper
8 ounces eggless linguine, plain, or flavored with black pepper

1. Combine sun-dried tomatoes with enough water to cover; bring to a boil. Reduce to simmer and cook 10 minutes, until tomatoes are tender.

2. Put water for pasta in a large covered pot and bring to a boil.

3. Wash, trim and halve the tomato. Squeeze to remove some of the seeds and juice.

4. Mince the garlic.

5. Wash, dry and slice basil into strips.

6. Grate cheese.

7. Drain sun-dried tomatoes and place in food processor with 2 tablespoons of the cooking liquid; process to a coarse puree.

8. Add the fresh tomato and continue processing to make smoother; then add the yogurt and ricotta and blend until smooth. Stir in the vinegar and black pepper to taste.

9. Cook the linguine according to package directions.

10. Add the basil and cheese to the sauce and process to blend.

2 eggs

Saute onions in oil until soft and transparent; add parsley, dill and seasonings. Cook 5 minutes. Add spinach and cook until all moisture is absorbed. Add milk and cool.

Crumble feta cheese into well-beaten eggs and add to spinach mixture. Mix well. Cut fillo into 2 or 3 inch strips. Brush with clarified butter, add a tablespoon or so of spinach mixture and roll into triangles.

Place on ungreased cooking sheet, brush tops with butter and bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

CARNE ADOVADA

5 pounds pork shoulder meat, cut into 1-inch cubes
6 or 7 large dried chilies
1 clove garlic
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon cumin
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup flour
1 tablespoon oregano
1 clove garlic
1 tablespoon salt
1 cup water

Place meat in large pot with water and cook uncovered for 2 hours over low heat. Add additional water if meat is sticking.

While meat is cooking, stem, seed and rise the chilies, then place them in pan along with the first seasonings and enough water to cover. Boil 15 minutes covered; drain, reserving the liquid and puree in blender or processor with 2 cups of reserved chili juice.

Drain excess water from pork and sprinkle with flour, tossing the meat to coat. Cook about 10 minutes and add remaining seasonings and chili sauce. Add water and simmer 30 minutes.

20-MINUTE COWBOY BEANS

Total preparation and cooking time: 20 minutes

4 slices bacon
1 cup finely chopped onion
1/2 cup finely chopped green bell pepper
1 clove garlic, crushed

15- to 16-ounce can kidney beans, rinsed, drained

15-ounce can pinto beans, rinsed, drained

1 cup Western barbecue sauce, reserved from recipe for Spicy Western Steaks

1 tablespoon packed brown sugar

In large skillet, cook bacon over low heat until crisp, turning occasionally. Remove from skillet; drain on paper towels.

Remove all but 2 tablespoons drippings from skillet. Add onion, bell pepper and garlic; cook and stir over medium heat 3 to 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients.

Crumble bacon, return to skillet. Cover, cook 5 minutes or until heated through, stirring occa-oughly. Measure 1 1/2 cups bananas into strawberries in sauce pot. Stir in lemon juice.

Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for extra measure.) Stir fruit pectin into juice in sauce pot. Add margarine. Bring to a full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Quickly stir in all sugar. Return to full rolling boil and boil exactly 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into prepared jars, filling to within 1/4 inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cool, check seals. Makes about 8 cups or about eight 1-cup jars.

APRICOT JAM

3 1/2 cups prepared fruit, about 2 1/2 pounds fully ripe apricots
1/3 cup fresh lemon juice
5 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon margarine or butter
1 pouch liquid fruit pectin

Boil jars on rack in large pot filled with water for 10 minutes. Place flat lids in saucepan with water. Bring to boil. Remove from heat. Let jars and lids stand in hot water until ready to fill. Drain well before filling.

Remove pits, do not peel, and finely chop apricots. Measure 3 1/2 cups into 6- or 8-quart sauce pot. Stir in lemon juice.

Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for extra measure.) Stir sugar into juice in sauce pot. Add margarine. Bring to a full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Quickly stir in fruit pectin. Return to full rolling boil and boil exactly 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into prepared jars, filling to within 1/4 inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cool, check seals. Makes 7 cups or about seven 1-cup jars.

NOTE: Jam sets slowly; may take up to two weeks.

CRAB APPLE JELLY

5 cups prepared fruit, about 3 1/2 pounds crab apples and 3 cups water

7 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 teaspoon margarine or butter
1 pouch liquid fruit pectin

Boil jars on rack in large pot filled with water for 10 minutes. Place flat lids in saucepan with water. Bring to boil. Remove from heat. Let jars and lids stand in hot water until ready to fill. Drain well before filling.

Remove stems and blossom ends from crab apples. Cut crab apples into small pieces; do not peel or core. Place in sauce pot; add 3 cups water. Bring to boil. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally.

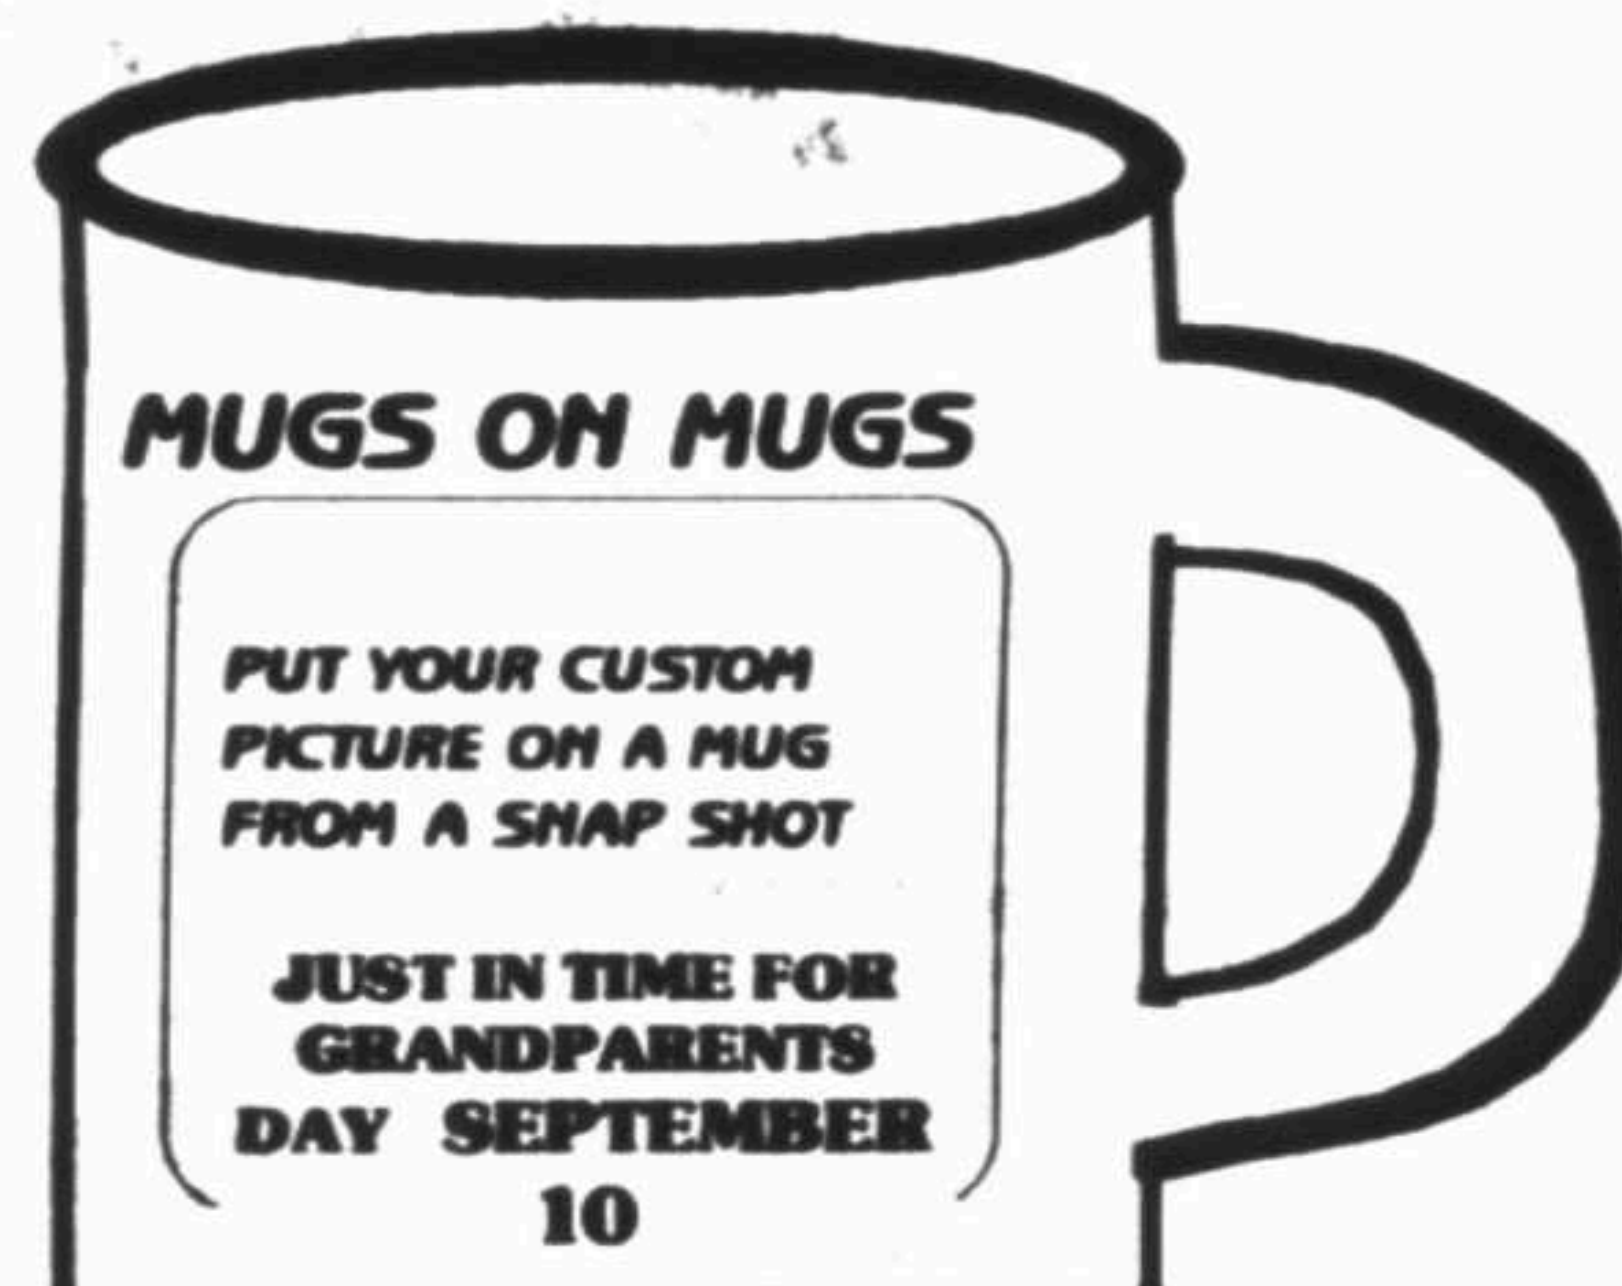

Crush cooked crab apples; cover and simmer 5 minutes.

Place three layers of damp cheesecloth or jelly bag in large bowl. Pour prepared fruit into cheesecloth. Tie cheesecloth closed, hang and let drip into bowl until dripping stops. Press gently. Measure 5 cups into 6- or 8-quart sauce pot.

Measure sugar into separate bowl. (Scrape excess sugar from cup with spatula to level for extra measure.) Stir sugar into juice in sauce pot. Add margarine. Bring to a full rolling boil on high heat, stirring constantly. Quickly stir in fruit pectin. Return to full rolling boil and boil exactly 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Skim off any foam with metal spoon.

Ladle quickly into prepared jars, filling to within 1/4 inch of tops. Wipe jar rims and threads. Cover with two-piece lids. Screw bands tightly. Invert jars 5 minutes, then turn upright. After jars are cool, check seals. Makes 9 cups or about nine 1-cup jars.

Make no mistake: When Sinatra gives up stage, he'll do it his way

LOS ANGELES — Make no mistake: When Frank Sinatra calls it quits, he'll do it his way.

Larry King wrote in his USA Today column Tuesday that the Chairman of the Board told him he's given up the stage for good. But a Sinatra spokeswoman later chalked up the report to "party chatter."

King said Sinatra, whose 80th birthday is Dec. 12, told him at a party recently that he is hanging up his mike and enjoying retirement.

"I'll never sing in public again, because those days are just gone. But I'm very, very happy," King quoted him as saying.

King also said Sinatra has grown a beard and spends his time swimming, playing a lot of golf and relaxing at his home in Malibu.

But the singer's spokeswoman, Susan Reynolds, said she had spoken with Sinatra since the party and that he has made no decision to retire.

"Mr. Sinatra has said he would be the one who decides when he stops performing," she said Tuesday.

Sinatra occasionally has forgotten lyrics during concert appearances in recent years. And he collapsed on stage in the middle of his trademark "My Way" during a March 1994 concert in Richmond, Va. A publicist said then that he fainted because of the heat.

Winfrey Show," which has begun its 10th season in national syndication.

LOS ANGELES — Leonard Nimoy is keeping his hand in science fiction, and trying to remain logical.

Nimoy is executive producer and sometime director of "Deadly Games," a new UPN series on Tuesday nights starring James Calvert and Cynthia Gibb.

Nimoy, best known for playing the pointy-eared and logical Mr. Spock on "Star Trek," doesn't often refer to those days when he's directing "Deadly Games," but sometimes he slips up, Calvert said in a recent interview.

"At one point he wanted Cynthia to go around something," Calvert said. "And he stopped and he said, 'Oh, I guess that's not logical.' And then he went — 'Oh! I mean, I mean correct! I mean, uh...' and everyone was just howling. It was just too funny."

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The Pretty Woman has paid a pretty penny for a house in northern New Mexico.

Julia Roberts bought a mostly adobe house on 50 acres north of Taos for between $1.75 million and $2.2 million, the Albuquerque Journal reported Tuesday.

The 30-year-old house is described as having about 7,000 square feet with four bedrooms, four bathrooms, and an indoor swimming pool.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Vanessa Williams would rather be on the screen than the Boardwalk.

Williams, who resigned as Miss America in 1984 after nude photographs of her were published in Penthouse magazine, has canceled a fall singing tour to appear in "Eraser," an Arnold Schwarzenegger movie, a spokeswoman said Tuesday.

Williams, 32, plays a federal marshal's wife who is forced into the witness protection program. Shooting begins in New York this week, said Gena Avery, Williams' assistant.

Williams had planned to play four nights at Caesars Atlantic City Hotel Casino as part of her international tour.

CHICAGO — Oprah Winfrey started her 10th season on national TV Tuesday with a new hairdo and theme song, the latter courtesy of Paul Simon.

In an interview in Tuesday's editions of the Chicago Sun-Times, Winfrey dismissed any suggestion that she started day-time talk shows down the road to sleaze. She says Simon wouldn't have penned her new theme — a pop tune with a Latin beat — if she wasn't committed to quality.

"I think we did a really good job of pulling ourselves away from the 'trash pack' last year," Winfrey said. "Ten years ago, I was just grateful to be on television. Now I feel a greater sense of commitment and responsibility to the work that I'm doing."

She also says her new bob will be the subject of a future episode of the "Oprah

DEAR ABBY

Bride's mother sees red over girl's black and blond hair

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My family is in turmoil over something that happened before my niece's wedding last week. My blond teen-aged daughter, Kim, was slated to be a bridesmaid in her cousin's wedding. Two days before the wedding, Kim and a blond friend parted their hair straight down the middle and dyed half of it jet-black!

Van Buren

When I saw the two-toned hairdos, I called my hairdresser and asked if the damage could be undone. It couldn't.

Abby, I know teens pull stunts like this as a form of harmless rebellion, so I gave what I thought was the best response: "So what; it'll grow out."

When we arrived at the rehearsal dinner the next evening, my sister (the bride's mother) threw a fit and ordered Kim to leave the party. She also told her she was no longer a bridesmaid.

I'm really hurt over my sister's reaction, and I think she owes my daughter an apology. When I told her that, she reacted as if I were crazy. Do you have any words of wisdom on this? — MOTHER OF A REJECTED BRIDESMAID

DEAR MOTHER: Your daughter chose a most inappropriate time to rebel. On a wedding day, attention should be centered on the bride. Your daughter's startling hair would have diverted attention away from the bride. Kim deserved dismissal for her thoughtless behavior.

The only apology in order here is from your daughter to the bride and her mother.

DEAR ABBY: There may be a simple solution to my problem, but as of now I have not figured it out.

Three months ago, my family and I moved to a new home in a new development. The neighborhood is very nice, the schools are wonderful, and we are happy here. The problem is mine. I am lonely. The neighbors are all quite friendly with one another, and I have tried to become close with them. They always seem happy to accept an invitation from me to go shopping or to come over for coffee, but if I do not initiate this, I don't hear from them.

It's not as if they don't like me, because I'm sure they would make up excuses not to see me if that were the case, and as long as I make the first move, they seem genuinely pleased to spend time with me. But I don't want to appear pushy or overly anxious, so I haven't called anyone in weeks.

I don't know if I should make my feelings known, or just stop calling and see if I ever hear from them. It hurts me every time I look out the window and see them all going shopping together while I sit home alone. Any suggestions? — ALONE IN NEW YORK

DEAR ALONE: If you have not called anyone in weeks, perhaps these women think you are no longer interested in pursuing a friendship with them. Break the silence and invite them all over for a backyard barbecue so your families can become better acquainted. If they don't warm up after that, look for friends outside your neighborhood.

It's best not to depend solely on your neighbors for your social life. Involve yourself in community activities. Volunteer at the local hospital or library; join a garden club or genealogy society; volunteer for fund-raising drives or become a teacher's aide. The opportunities are endless. Trust me, you get more than you give when you volunteer.

Mud puppies' name comes from its doglike appearance and desire to wallow in mud

Associated Press

LOUISA, Va. — The mud puppy, a long-bodied, short-legged salamander found in ponds and streams, measures about 12 inches in length. The name comes from its flattened head, which is doglike in appearance.

Mud puppies spend much of their time wallowing in mud and shallow water, eating insects, snails and crayfish.

Deion deciding

SAN FRANCISCO — Deion Sanders, who played with the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers last season, hopes to decide by Wednesday on where he'll play football this season.

There's only one problem: No team has made an offer. Despite well-publicized posturing for the comeback by the 49ers and the Dallas Cowboys, Sanders said he can't do anything until he has an offer on the table.

"I want you to understand, it's not me prolonging the decision," said Sanders, who also is an outfielder for the San Francisco Giants. "Let's see an offer. I'm praying this week I'll know everything."

He said his recent migraine headaches are partly due to stress over his decision. He spends his time off the baseball field "hoping that someone will come through with an offer so I can know what I'm doing with the next five years of my life," he said.

Sanders noted that he watched a little football Sunday before the Giants played the New York Mets. What he saw was obviously encouraging.

"With the junk I saw today, the price is definitely going up," he said. "The longer you wait, the more you pay. That's a quote."

Angels reach TL title series

■ A platoon of Midland pitchers helps the team get its first ever playoff series win and advance to the Texas League championship.

Staff Report

WICHITA, Kan. — Hello, Shreveport. The Midland Angels used an inspired performance from Corey Keling, great relief pitching and solid defense to beat Wichita 3-1 Tuesday night at Lawrence-

Dumont Stadium and advance to the Texas League Championship Series.

After splitting the first two games in Midland, the Angels won two of three against the Wranglers in Wichita and clinched the Western Division Championship series 3-2. It is the first playoff series win in franchise history.

The Championship Series begins Sept. 7 with Games 1-3 at Christensen Stadium. Game 4 is Sept. 11 in Shreveport with Games 5-7, if necessary, Sept. 12-14 in Shreveport.

The team returns home to Midland International Airport at 11:15 a.m. American Eagle from Dallas-Fort Worth.

Wichita had a 1-0 lead until the Angels scored twice in the fifth to take the lead for good.

Leon Glenn struck out but reached first to open the inning when Wichita catcher Sal Fasano dropped the third strike and threw the ball past first baseman Larry Sutton. Glenn stole second and came home on an RBI single by Basilio Ortiz which tied the score. Monzon reached on a sacrifice which sent Ortiz to third. Tim Harkrider got Ortiz home with a sacrifice fly to put the Angels ahead 2-1.

The Angels got an insurance run in the ninth when Pedro Guerrero smacked a two-out single down the third

Lee exacts revenge, beats Midland High

■ Lady Rebels rally to top 1994 playoff entrant Lady Bulldogs in volleyball district opener.

By Amy Woffenbarger
Sports Writer

Revenge, according to Midland Lee senior Amber Willis, is sweet.

Willis and the rest of the Lady Rebel volleyball team rallied after losing the first game to cross-town rivals Midland High to take a 8-15, 15-8, 15-6 District 4-5A opening victory Tuesday night in the Lee gym.

"We really wanted to win this game," said Willis. "They won both games last year and this was one of the games that we really wanted to win. And it was the first district game, so a win was important to get started off right."

It is safe to say that Lee's win, guided by first-year coach Carol McCann, was an upset. The Lady Bulldogs returned four players from their playoff team of a year ago and are considered, along with Abilene Cooper and Odessa High, a favorite to get into the playoffs. The Lady Rebels, however, were starting over with a new coach and only two returners off a team that missed the playoffs last year for the first time in three seasons.

But rivalries have a tendency to equal the score a little bit and as McCann has been saying since early in the preseason, her Lady Rebels are going to be a force to be reckoned with in league play no matter how many cards are stacked against them.

"I really believe this team (Lee) will be in it when it gets down to it," said McCann. "But don't get me wrong, Midland High has a great team and on any given day they're just as likely to handle us. We could meet tomorrow and they could beat us 15-0."

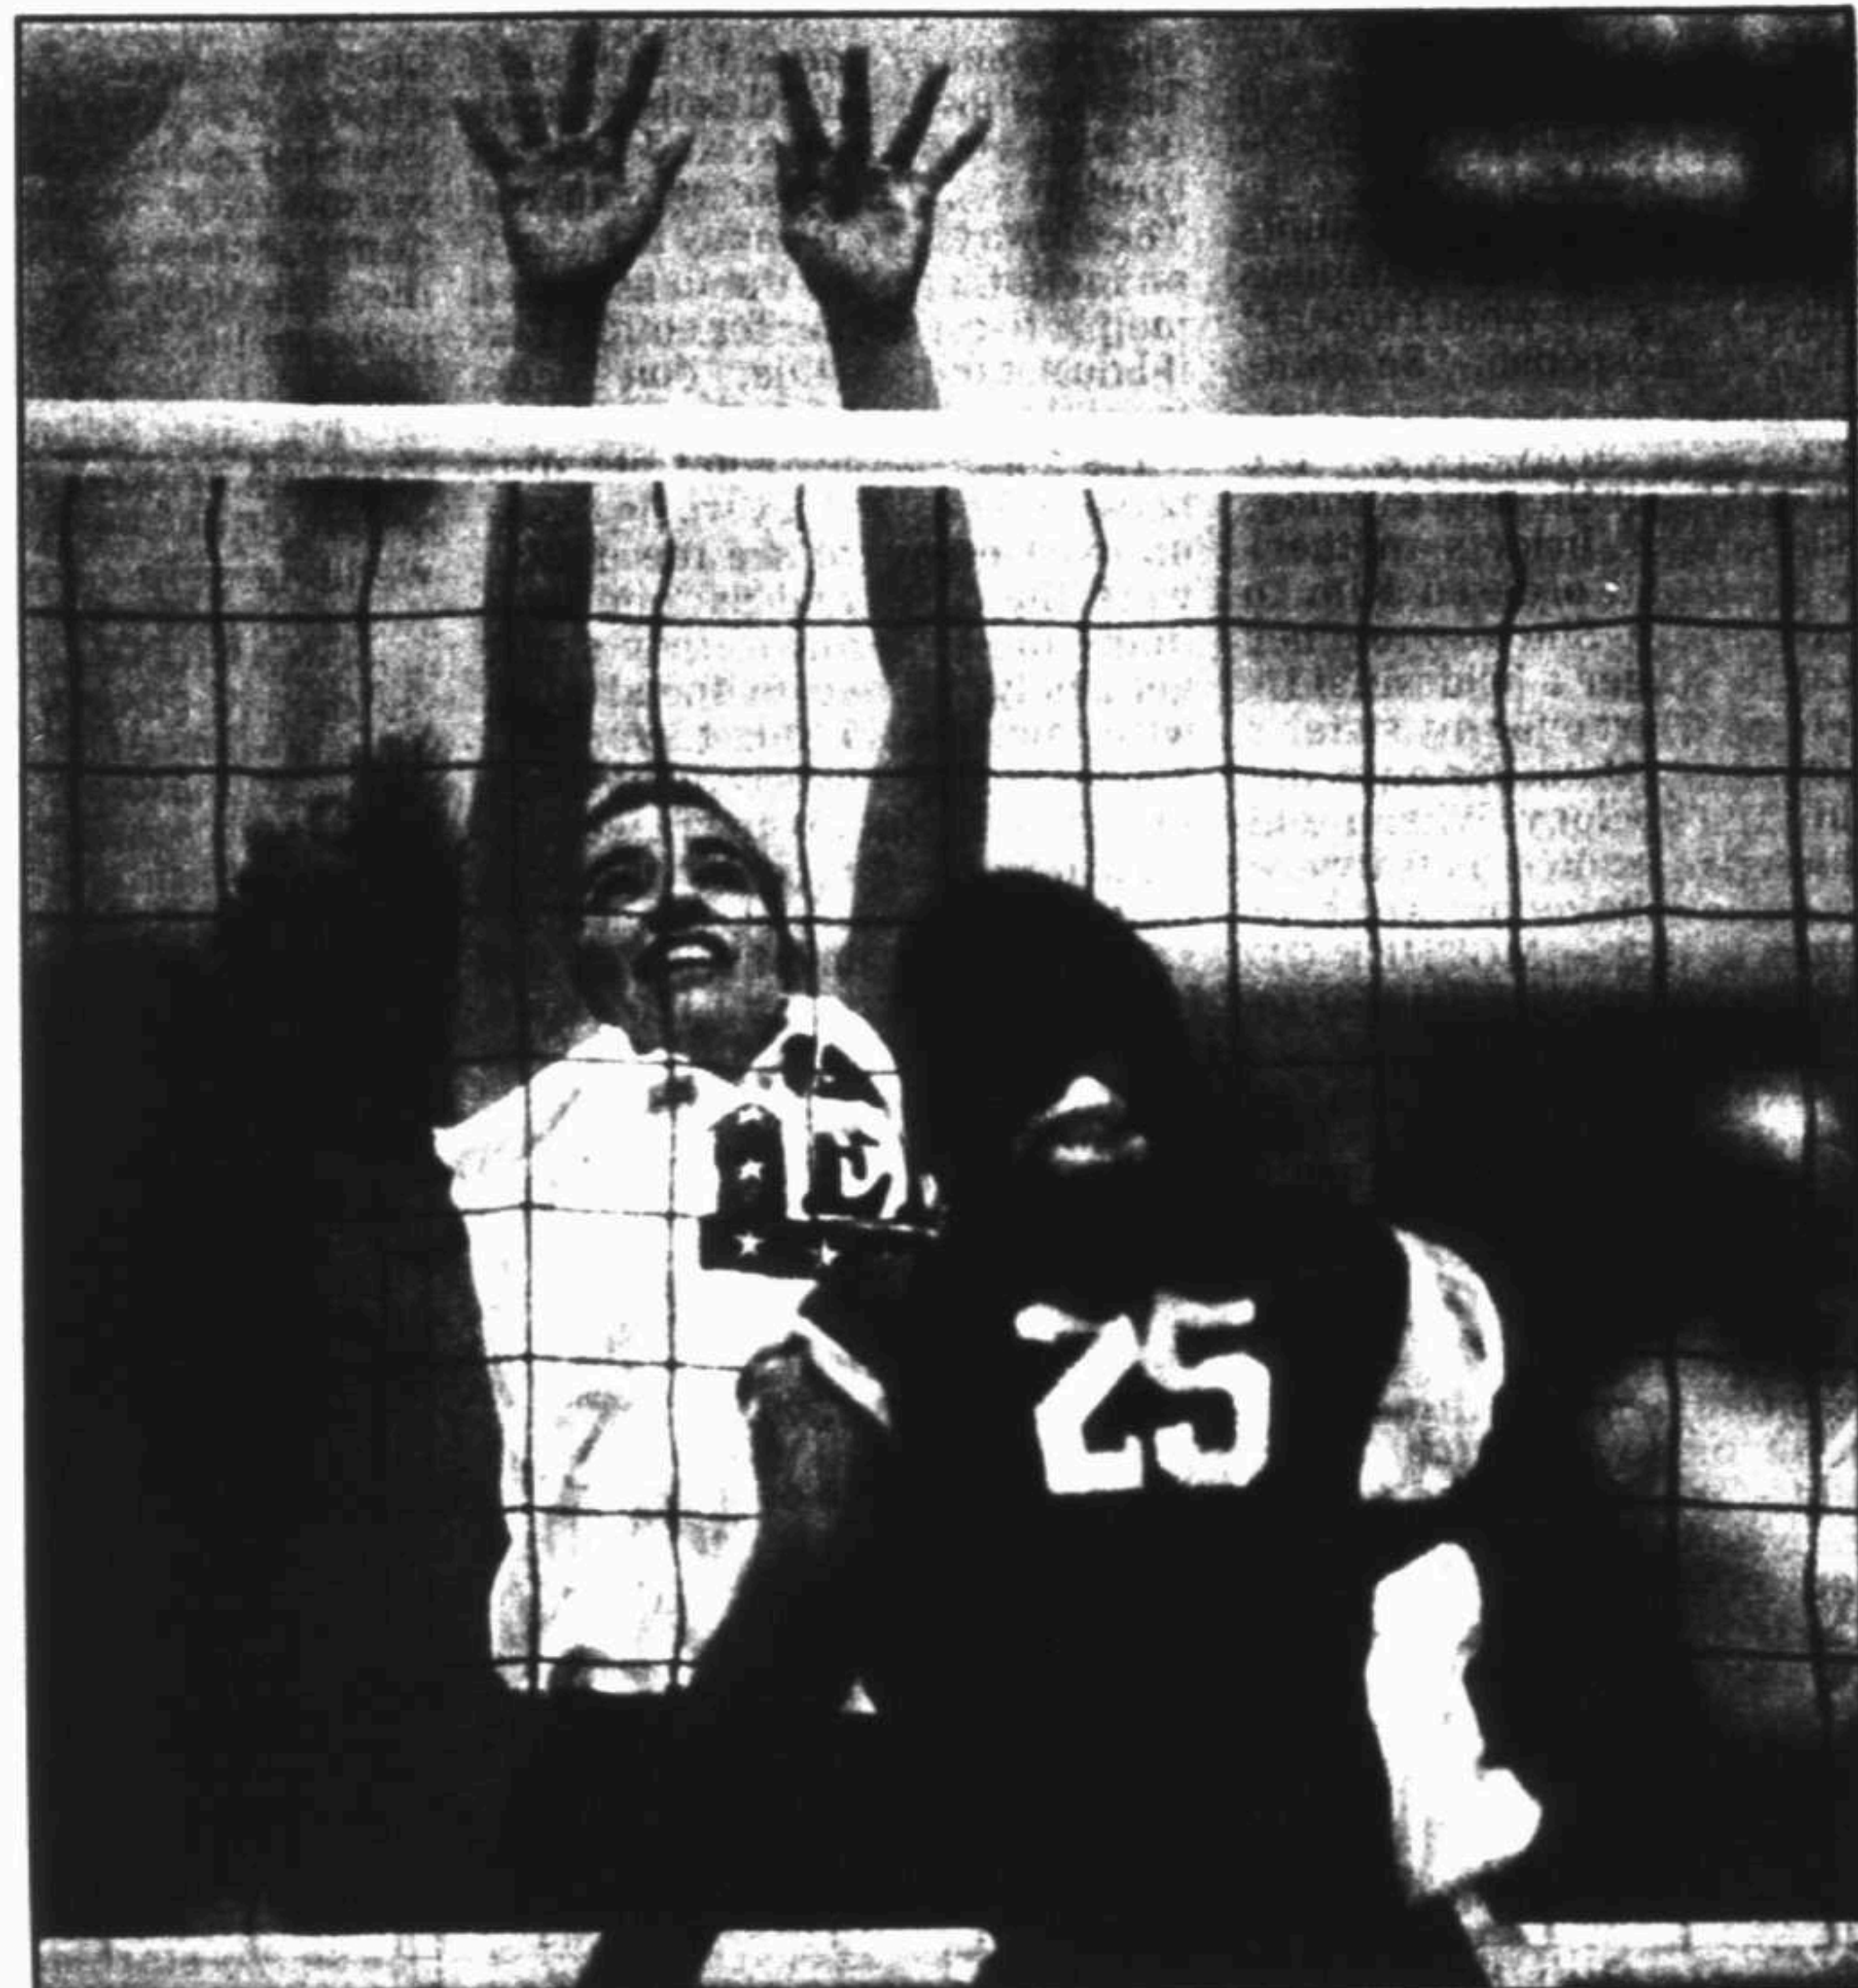

"And that's not just your typical coach's talk. I really honestly believe we're going to be one of the team's fighting for a playoff spot," said McCann.

The Lady Rebels (4-6 overall) made believers out of the Lady Bulldogs (6-5).

After rallying to win the second and force the third game, the Lady Rebels got out to a 7-3 lead in the third on the improved net play of junior outside hitter Allison Bradshaw and Willis, who seemed to finally tame MHS' big hitting seniors Toya Zachery, Jamee Stennett and Elesceeya King with potent blocks.

The Lee defense then held the Lady Bulldogs to just three points as they pulled ahead to match point on five straight serves by junior La Saundra

Smith likely to miss season

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys need Deion Sanders more than ever. Kevin Smith, their best cornerback, is gone, apparently for the season.

"I was dreaming of how much fun it could have been having Kevin and Deion on the two corners," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said. "It could have been fun. Kevin is one of the top five corners in the NFL. And he was great on the special teams, too." Smith damaged his Achilles tendon without being touched in Monday night's 35-0 victory over the New York Giants. He was injured chasing a deep pass late in the first half.

"There was no contact and it didn't look like the turf caused it," Switzer said. "You could see Kevin running along and all of a sudden he looked around like, 'Who hit me?' Nobody touched him. It was just torque stress while he was running at full speed."

Said Switzer: "Deion means much more to us now. This chasing Deion has gone from show to real business. When you lose a player like the 'pup' you can go downhill quick. They're talking a tear, a rup-

Ripken ties Gehrig's mark

■ Iron Man Cal equals the former Yankee's 2,130 straight game record before a sellout crowd.

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken joined the Lou Gehrig as co-holder of one of baseball's greatest records Tuesday night, playing in his 2,130th consecutive game as the Baltimore Orioles beat the California Angels 8-0.

Ripken did more than just show up — he went 3-for-5 with a homer, one of six solo shots by the Orioles. The six home runs tied the club mark for a home game and was one short of a team record. Ripken can become baseball's career iron man in the series finale Wednesday night, shattering a record few thought would ever be broken after Gehrig willingly ended his streak on May 2, 1939.

When the game became official after 4 1/2 innings, the sellout crowd of 46,804 at Camden Yards gave the Orioles short-

Jones' Nike deal irks NFL

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

While Jerry Jones delighted in his Nike caper Tuesday, the rest of the NFL fumed.

"He enjoys the maverick image," said Carmen Policy, president of the 49ers and the Dallas owner's favorite jousting partner. "But the man's gone too far, he's out of control. There is money and there is class and the two aren't synonymous."

Here's how District 4-5A football will finish... maybe

District 4-5A is going to be an improved football league in 1995.

And that is quite a statement considering the fact that Odessa Permian went to the large school state semifinals and Midland Lee went to the small school state quarterfinals.

The reason the league will be better, however, is the fact that the teams from top to bottom possess more talent than a year ago. It could make every district week a trip to a potential horror show. There may be no "for sure," "in the pocket" games on the schedule.

And you won't have to stay up until midnight to see it take place this year. The league, in a rare moment of sanity, has moved all district starting times to 7:30 p.m. That in itself should be applauded loud and long as a victory for the fans of 4-5A.

This is also the last season of the Southwest Conference, so I guess, this is also the last season that 4-5A can be referred to as the "Little Southwest Conference." As of late, that is a moniker that probably won't be missed.

Williamson

So, before the paint rubbing begins, here is how I see the 4-5A race coming down this year. These picks are probably worth less than the paper they are printed on, especially when you consider the price of newspaper these days.

No matter what is said here, they're going to play the games anyway. This in no way has any bearing on the three teams that will actually earn state playoff berths. That's a promise.

1. Odessa Permian: Last year was the season to take some skin off the Mojo shin, but nobody did it. So don't expect any favor from the Panthers this season. Permian is not only the best in District 4-5A, but could make another serious state championship run.

2. Abilene Cooper: The only downside the Cougars face this season is the fact that coach Randy Allen can't take his quarterback home with him this year. Still, Cooper possesses a stable of running backs that could be the envy of the league.

3. Midland Lee: A new coach, a new offensive formation and some untested offensive linemen put the Rebels on the edge. Third place would be a good finish in this league, and Lee just seems to have the knack of finding that playoff door. A defense with bad breath doesn't hurt.

4. Odessa High: The Bronchos are being picked as high as second in some circles, but OHS still needs to learn to beat someone other than Lee. A season ending loss to last place Abilene High last year kept it out of the playoffs. Still this team could be there.

5. Midland High: The Bulldogs should be vastly improved this season, but the entire district is better than a year ago. Still, MHS showed last season that it can compete. Just ask Permian. The Bulldogs made a team out of the Panthers last season, only losing by one point and a failed two-point conversion attempt.

6. San Angelo: Some say the Bobcats can make the playoffs. Talent is on hand, but there is no way this team can shake the quarterback controversy. There are just too many battles for this team to face off the field.

7. Abilene High: The Eagles are the bottom pick here, but AHS could be the surprise team of the league. Coach Gary Gaines started as many as 10 sophomores last season and they have to be better as juniors. That still doesn't translate into a playoff berth, but those on high perches, however, should beware. Just ask OHS.

stop a standing ovation for 5 minutes, 20 seconds as the instrumental "Day One" by John Tesh played over the loudspeakers.

As the 10-foot numbers on the warehouse outside the stadium flipped to 2130, Ripken shook hands with several of his teammates. He then emerged from the dugout on three separate occasions, acknowledging the cheers with several waves, including one in the direction of his family in the seats behind home plate.

The celebration was also a tribute to Gehrig, the former New York Yankee great who died of a crippling disease two years after his streak ended. The large video board in center field showed Gehrig and Ripken together, two men of a different era whose common link was an innate desire to play baseball every single day.

Ripken, 35, last missed a game on May 29, 1982. He has started every game since then, missing only 164 of 19,386 innings during the streak.

Ripken hit his second homer in two games in the sixth inning, a drive to left off Mark Holmstrom. He is 12-for-33 (.364) during the home stand that has been dubbed "Streak Week."

Brady Anderson homered twice and doubled for the Orioles, who were 1-6 on the homestand.

The Orioles got all the runs they needed in the second inning when they hit four homers off Brian Anderson (6-8).

Chris Hoiles started the onslaught with a leadoff homer. After Harold Baines fled out, Jeff Manto, Mark Smith and Anderson connected to make it 4-0 and start the Angels reeling toward their 13th loss in 15 games.

The four-homer inning tied the team mark set in May 1967 in a game against the Boston Red Sox.

Anderson homered before Bobby Bonilla and Rafael Palmeiro hit RBI singles in the fourth to put Baltimore ahead 7-0. Every Oriole had at least one hit by the fifth inning.

Scott Erickson (10-10) pitched a three-hitter in his fourth complete game of the season, tying Mike Mussina for the club lead.

Brian Anderson, meanwhile, is 9-6 with a 10.86 ERA in his last seven starts since Aug. 1. The four homers was the most he has given up in one game this season.

White Sox 2, Rangers 1
ARLINGTON — Mike LaValle homered for the first time in more than a year, a two-out drive in the 11th inning that led Chicago past Texas and extended Chicago's winning streak to seven.

LaValle connected on a 2-2 off Ed Vosberg (5-4), his first homer since Aug. 7 at California. It was the 18th homer of his big league career.

Matt Karchner (3-1) pitched two innings for his third victory in four decisions.

Juan Gonzalez hit a 423-foot home run in the second, the Rangers' only run off Alex Fernandez. Gonzalez's 22nd homer ended a 16-inning scoreless streak for Fernandez.

Chicago tied it off Kenny Rogers in the eighth inning. Lyle Mouton doubled with one out, moved to third on a wild pitch, and scored on a Barry Lyons sacrifice fly.

Rogers allowed eight hits in 8 1/3 innings. Fernandez gave up four hits in nine innings and struck out seven.

Mariners 6, Yankees 5
NEW YORK — Jay Buhner's three-run homer capped a four-run fifth inning, carrying Seattle to a victory over New York.

Seattle built a 6-0 lead before the Yankees began a comeback against Mariners starter Bob Wolcott (3-1), making only his fifth major league start.

Mike Stanley's sacrifice fly cut the lead to 6-4 in the seventh, and the Yankees loaded the bases when reliever Jeff Nelson hit Tony Fernandez with a pitch. Nelson got out of the jam by striking out Randy Velarde.

In the ninth, the Yankees closed within a run on Don Mattingly's six homer with one out. But Norm Charlton, the fifth Seattle pitcher, closed out the game for his sixth save.

Indians 7, Brewers 3
MILWAUKEE — Eddie Murray had four hits and drove in four runs as Cleveland beat Milwaukee for their 14th win in 18 games.

Dennis Martinez (10-4) scattered seven hits in seven innings and won for the first time since July 21.

Martinez struck out seven and walked one in his eighth bid for victory No. 10. He began the season with a career-best nine consecutive victories.

Milwaukee lost for the eighth time in nine games, falling 3 1/2 games behind Kansas City in the wild card race.

With Cal Ripken tying Lou Gehrig on Tuesday night in Baltimore, Murray passed him in Milwaukee.

The Indians' first baseman had an RBI double in the fourth inning to give him 5,061 total bases, moving him past Gehrig and into 11th place on the career list.

Royals 9, Blue Jays 8
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bob Hamelin homered leading off the 10th inning, giving Kansas City a wild victory over Toronto and eliminating the defending World Series champions from the AL East race.

Toronto, which began the day 2 1/2 games behind Boston in the AL East race, won consecutive World Series titles in 1992 and 1993. The Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. rounds third base after hitting a home run against the Yankees Tuesday.

Blue Jays were out of contention when the players' strike stopped last season.

Kansas City, which had led 7-0, fell behind 8-7 when Joe Carter hit a three-run homer in the ninth off Jeff Montgomery.

Wally Joyner tied the score in the bottom half with a 430-foot drive off Ken Robinson (1-1), the longest homer this season at Kauffman Stadium.

Hamelin, the 1994 AL Rookie of the Year, homered the following inning. On Saturday, he was recalled from Triple-A Omaha, where he had been sent after a prolonged slump.

Tigers 6, Twins 4
MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie C.J. Nitkowski pitched five innings to gain his first AL victory as Detroit beat Minnesota for their first two-game winning streak in more than a month.

The Tigers, who beat Cleveland on Monday, hadn't won two straight since beating Oakland on July 25 and 26.

Phil Nevin drove in two runs for the Tigers, including the go-ahead run in the sixth.

Red Sox 7, Athletics 4, 14 innings
BOSTON — Jose Canseco hit a three-run homer in the 14th inning Tuesday night to give Boston a win over Oakland and hurt the Athletics' longshot wild-card chances.

Canseco hit his 22nd homer on a 1-0 pitch off Carlos Reyes (3-5) with two outs after Troy O'Leary singled and Mo Vaughn walked. Rick Aguilera (3-2) pitched one inning for the win.

It was the fifth time this season that Boston had won a home game with a homer.

The A's started the night three games out in the wild-card race, trailing five other teams. It was the second straight 4-hour, 27-minute game for Oakland, matching the team's longest this year.

The Red Sox won for the 26th time in their last 32 games.

Houston brawls, defeats Reds

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Derrick May followed a bench-clearing brawl with a grand slam in the seventh inning Tuesday night and the Houston Astros snapped an 11-game losing streak to the Cincinnati Reds in convincing style with a 10-1 victory.

A series of bench-clearing incidents, starting when Reds reliever Xavier Hernandez threw inside to Brian Hunter in the sixth, eventually led to the ejections of Hernandez, Ron Gant, Lenny Harris and manager Davey Johnson of the Reds and Pat Borders, Doug Drabek and manager Terry Collins of the Astros.

The most serious confrontation came in the bottom of the seventh when Hernandez hit Craig Biggio and Jeff Bagwell on the arms with consecutive pitches, clearing both benches for a lengthy fight.

Hernandez was ejected then along with Harris and Johnson. After John Cangelosi struck out, Dave Magadan was intentionally walked to load the bases with one out.

NL Roundup

May then hit his first career home run over the right field fence, extending Houston's lead to 8-1 and ending Cincinnati's bid to sweep an opponent for the season for the first time since 1900.

Temper flared erupted in the sixth when Hernandez threw inside to Hunter, causing both teams to charge onto the field but no punches were thrown.

As the top of the seventh was about to start, Gant came to the plate and before any pitches were thrown, he and catcher Borders got into a free-swinging fight and both were ejected.

Drabek (8-8), who had held Cincinnati to three hits over seven innings, was ejected in the eighth for hitting Reds catcher Benito Santiago with a pitch. Collins was ejected along with his starter.

Mike Simms gave Houston the early lead with a three-run homer in the third off Frank Viola (0-1). Hunter and Biggio singled and after Hunter was caught stealing, Bagwell was intentionally walked.

Simms followed with his sixth homer.

Braves 1, Cardinals 0
ATLANTA — Greg Maddux became the major league's first 16-game winner with his fourth consecutive complete-game victory as Atlanta beat St. Louis.

Fred McGriff gave Maddux the only run he needed when he lined Tom Urbani's first pitch of the second inning over the center field fence for his 23rd homer.

Maddux (16-2) allowed seven hits, walked none and struck out eight in recording his 10th complete game of the season, most in the majors. It was his third shutout.

Maddux became the first Atlanta pitcher to throw four consecutive complete games since Phil Niekro had that many from May 20-June 2, 1980.

The Cardinals had him in two-out trouble in the first when John Mabry was safe on second baseman Mark Lemke's throwing error before Ray Lankford doubled to left. Maddux got Mark Sweeney on a chopper to the mound to end the threat.

ture and that's not good."

An MRI test showed Smith has an incomplete rupture of the right Achilles tendon and surgery will be required, perhaps this week, team spokesman Rich Dalrymple said.

The Cowboys — along with San Francisco, Miami, Denver and Philadelphia — are negotiating with Sanders' agent, Eugene Parker. A call to Parker's office in Fort Wayne, Ind., on Tuesday was not returned.

The Cowboys were preparing an offer for Sanders that sources said will include a $10 million signing bonus for a multiple year deal. However, Sanders won't be available until after the baseball season ends even if the Cowboys should sign him.

"We got the best recruiter in the world, Jerry Jones, trying to sign Deion," Switzer said. "It still comes down to how much money is involved. All that rah-rah bit doesn't go very far."

"Everybody is laughing at Jerry for his sideline shows. I tell Jerry that six years ago he was watching Monday night football on television from a bar. Now he is Monday Night Football. I don't have to recruit Deion. We have Jerry out there doing it."

Smith got some of Jones' millions before he got hurt. Smith got a bonus check for $4 million on Sunday after signing a contract extension to 1999.

"I feel bad about getting the money and not being able to help my teammates win," Smith said.

Jones wasn't concerned.

"Smith earned that money with some great years. He'll be back," he said.

Clayton Holmes, a four-year veteran from Carson Newman, moved into the starting corner spot opposite Larry Brown. Rookie Alundis Brice of Mississippi will be activated for Sunday's game against Denver to back up Holmes.

"We're looking at a list of players but it's hard just to go out on the street and find somebody," Switzer said.

JONES: Deal nearly overshadows rout league and its union consider their private province Monday night by announcing his own deal with Nike in a press release headed "Cowboys' Owner Bucks NFL Again."

(From 1C)

It not only upstaged his team's 35-0 demolition of the Giants, but again alienated the league establishment by attacking the revenue-sharing concept that's made them rich. And it again set off an anti-Jones reaction.

"It's up to the league to get in there and see if it's legal. I don't know if it is or not," Buffalo Bills owner Ralph Wilson said. "If people are going to go off in all directions, the league is going to erode. And fast."

Once more, Jones showed he can step outside league guidelines and strike his own deal at the expense of the other 29 teams. The Nike deal could even help Jones in his attempt to sign Deion Sanders, a major client of the sports apparel giant.

Jones and Policy are battling for Sanders, the baseball player-cornetback who helped San Francisco win the Super Bowl last season. That became more urgent Monday night when Kevin Smith, the Cowboys' best cornerback, went down with an Achilles tendon injury that's expected to sideline him for the season.

But there was a general sense around the league that Jones is biting the hand that feeds him by trying to separate the Cowboys' revenue from NFL Properties, the league's licensing arm. During Monday night's game, the Dallas coaches and staff members wore no logos on their plain white shirts, not even anything that said "Cowboys."

Jones already has bucked the league by selling Pepsi rather than the league-sanctioned Coca-Cola at Texas Stadium.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Jones' Nike contract is "an apparent violation of league policies." Browne added that the league constitution requires commissioner Paul Tagliabue to give the Cowboys a hearing "and he will promptly do so."

The league statement also noted: "Most fans who called our office today complained about the contrived manner in which this business deal was announced and promoted on the opening Monday night telecast."

Others were less diplomatic.

"Jerry doesn't have the concept of what it means to be a team and what it means to work in concert with your associates," said the Giants' Wellington Mara, the league's senior owner.

"I see where he said that he thinks we should continue revenue-sharing in television and gate receipts. To me that translates that he would like to share in other people's revenues without them sharing his."

Team equipment licensing goes through NFL Properties, run by all 30 teams. No more than a couple of owners have any sympathy for Jones — perhaps New England's Robert Kraft and Oakland's Al Davis, the eternal maverick. Policy called Jones "an Al Davis wannabe."

The rest are likely to vote against any private deal. They object not only to his substance, but also his style, as when he paraded on the sidelines during Monday night's game with tennis star Monica Seles, among others, in tow.

He's also bucking the players' union. Player licensing must go through Players Inc., the licensing arm of the NFL Players Association.

Aggie back gets SWC weekly offensive honor

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas A&M defensive coordinator Phil Bennett was smiling, but he could empathize with Louisiana State coaches while watching Leeland McElroy steamroll the Tigers.

This time, the former LSU assistant was on the same sideline as McElroy, who scored three touchdowns and gained 359 total yards in a 33-17 victory over the Tigers on Saturday.

"One of our assistant coaches asked me, 'What do you think they are going through over there trying to stop Leeland,'" the first-year A&M coordinator said. "I told him, 'I know what they're going through. I was doing the same thing last year.'"

McElroy earned honors as Associated Press Offensive Player of the Week with the stellar opening-week performance. Rice cornerback Warrick Franklin, who intercepted two passes in a 38-0 victory over UNLV, was named AP Defensive Player of the Week.

McElroy, a junior from Beaumont Central, confounded the LSU defense in several ways. He carried 35 times for 229 yards, caught four passes for 49 yards and returned two kickoffs for 81 yards.

His touchdown runs of 18, 3 and 33 yards were largely responsible for boosting the third-ranked Aggies to their 27th consecutive home victory, the longest current streak in the nation.

It was McElroy's busiest day as an Aggie. He got only sporadic playing time behind Rodney Thomas and Greg Hill during his first two seasons, gaining attention for electrifying kickoff returns.

Now that he finally has center stage as starting tailback, he's not complaining about being overworked.

"That's what I've been asking for, what I've wanted since the day I stepped on the A&M campus — to carry the load," McElroy said. "I felt the heat. I'd be lying if I said I didn't. But that's what I wanted all along. I think I did OK."

There's no need to persuade Texas A&M head coach R.C. Slocum.

"I was completely pleased," Slocum said. "I thought he showed stamina and was remarkable. I think some who had questions about him being the workhorse for us, he answered those convincingly for me."

Franklin's 22-yard interception return for a touchdown on the second play of the game gave the Owls a quick start to their first shutout since a 34-0 victory over Tulane in

Texas A&M running back Leeland McElroy gained 359 all-purpose yards Saturday against LSU to gain Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week honors from AP.

He finished with two of the Owls' four interceptions in the game.

"The first interception I stayed put and the receiver came to me," Franklin said. "I couldn't believe the quarterback threw the ball. I saw nothing but daylight in front of me."

"The second one, I was between the quarterback and receiver. I just happened to catch that one," Rice coach Ken Hatfield said.

Franklin might not get many more chances to pick off passes this season.

"People look on film and decide who they want to pick on," Hatfield said. "That's why sometimes he doesn't have near the stats of someone else."

"He's the best I've had at cornerback, and that includes Air Force, Arkansas and Clemson — some of those guys are playing in the NFL."

CHAMPS: Schooler gets last 5 batters base line that scored second baseman Orlando Munoz. The run was set up by a heads-up play on the bases by Munoz, who changed the complexion of the inning by stealing third base with one out.

Munoz singled to open the ninth, went to second on a sacrifice by Tim Harkinder and then got a five-step jump on Wichita pitcher Don Eddy and took third. Two batters later Guerrero lined a pitch down past Wichita third baseman Lino Diaz which gave Midland a two-run lead.

Mike Schooler, who came on in the eighth, got the last five batters out including Reuben Smiley with a strikeout to end the game.

Keling, pitching on three days rest since working Friday's Game 4 for the Angels, went 5 1/3 innings, giving up six hits and only one run to earn the win. Keling outdueled Wichita's Ken Ray, who didn't know if he would pitch until just hours before the game.

The Wranglers had planned to throw Game 1 starter Kris Ralston, who pitched a three-hitter on Friday. The Wranglers' parent club, the Kansas City Royals, did not want the 20-year old Ralston pitching on three days rest and risk serious injury to his arm.

Keling got the Angels to the fifth but ran into some trouble when a leaping catch by Munoz saved what could have been the tying run.

Mandy Romero and Lino Diaz opened the fifth with consecutive base hits off Keling when, after a fly out to center by Reuben Smiley, Abilene Cooper's Jason Marshall hit a lazy pop fly behind second base. It looked to drop in between second and right field when Munoz made a diving, back-hand grab which prevented Romero from scoring and tying the game.

The Wranglers scored first, taking a 1-0 lead in the third.

Felix Martinez, the Texas League's stolen base leader this season, singled with one out and stole second before coming out of the game after re-aggravating a hamstring injury.

Marshall, who came into the game for Martinez, scored when Martinez drilled a Keling pitch into left field for a double but was thrown out trying to stretch a double into a triple.

The win gives the Angels their second Western Division championship in franchise history, and their second trip to the title series. The 1975 Midland Cubs were named co-champions with Lafayette, La., when the final game of the series was called off.

It is the first time the Angels have won the Western Division playoff series since the league went to a split-season format in 1977. The Angels lost to San Antonio in 1979 as well as El Paso in 1982 and 1991.

4-5A: MHS does not go down easily go down easily as they got a kill from Zachery and a double block from Zachery and Stennett to pull within 14-6. But Bradshaw served the match out with a bomb that the Lady Bulldogs could not put back in play.

(From 1C)

"I'm not surprised by the way they came back," said McCann. "After watching them come back down 10-1 and beat Andrews in the first game of the season, I knew they had it in them."

Lee, which took the early lead in all three games, fell behind in the first after watching a 5-1 lead evaporate into a 5-5 tie.

MHS pulled away for a 9-6 lead on three straight Lee net errors. A kill by Zachery gave the Lady Bulldogs a 10-7 advantage and a Lee return error boosted the lead to 11-7. Kills by senior middle hitter Zachery and senior setter Valerie Anderson gave the Lady Bulldogs a 13-7 lead before another Lee error set game point. After three MHS attempts at game point, senior outside hitter Sara Pritchett hit successfully to win the game.

"Certainly I was pleased with Game One," said coach Terri McColloch, who led the Lady Bulldogs to the playoffs last year in her first season at the helm. "But we let the momentum shift and we never got it back. In volleyball it's very hard to get the momentum back when you lose it."

Lee hurt its own cause in the first with five serving errors, including two by the normally accurate Willis, who along with Kasey Walters are Lee's returning starters.

"I was concentrating a little too hard," said Willis. "In the second and third, I tried to do all the little things right and it worked out."

Lee again took the early lead in Game Two, but they held the momentum this time and led the entire way behind improved serving and net play.

Senior setter Julie Seibold got things started with an ace as the Lady Rebels took a 4-0 lead. A kill by Bradshaw and an MHS hitting error increased the Lady Rebel lead to 6-1.

MHS began a rally behind junior setter Christy Trautman's serving to pull within 7-4 before serving out of bounds to end the rotation. That's when serving specialist Aleena Smith came into the game for Lee and reeled off five straight points to give the Lady Rebels a 12-5 lead.

Dykes hopes attitude helps end Lion streak

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech will take on fourth-ranked Penn State believing that good things happen to those who prepare.

Football coach Spike Dykes said that attitude could help the underdog Red Raiders break the Nittany Lions' 17-game winning streak, the longest in Division I-A.

"Every Saturday, teams win that aren't supposed to," Dykes said Tuesday in response to the 17-15 upset Northwestern pulled last weekend over No. 9 Notre Dame.

"And every Saturday, teams lose that are supposed to win," he said. "You've got to be ready, and if you are, I think anything can happen."

A crowd of 95,000 is expected Saturday for the 11 a.m. kickoff in State College, Pa. It is the debut meeting between the teams and the season-opener for both.

"It gets your attention in a hurry," Dykes said. "I think that's the fun of the game. Competition is what we all strive for."

The game offers a chance to prove road skills for Tech, a Southwest Conference team that failed to win a game in an opponent's stadium last season.

Penn State, winners of the Big Ten championship, returns four senior starters to an offensive unit that led the nation in scoring with 47.8 points per game.

The Lions last year rolled over Southern Cal 38-14. Tech, meanwhile, lost 55-14 to Southern Cal in the Cotton Bowl.

But Dykes said his team has shown steady improvement since then. He reserved special praise for tailback Byron Hanspard, a 6-0, 190-pound sophomore who averaged 99 yards rushing in the last five regular-season games.

Hanspard got tougher, stronger and quicker over the summer, Dykes said.

Saturday's matchup against Penn State, he said, moves Texas Tech toward its goal of improving via an upgraded schedule. Last year saw the Red Raiders play — and lose to — Nebraska (42-16) and Oklahoma (17-11) during the pre-season.

"We've played some awful good teams in the last few years and we haven't won many of those games," Dykes said. "We've played teams in the Top 5 and it's been hard, it's been really hard."

"You know the beautiful thing about it is our standing in the conference has risen."

Penn State coach Joe Paterno on Tuesday was sounding concerned about injuries that have thinned his team.

"We're not very good," Paterno said. "The last two or three practices, we have been terrible. We haven't executed well. We've made a lot of mistakes. We haven't been able to concentrate."

Sloppiness aside, the Lions are ready to play.

"It's been a long preseason," linebacker Terry Killens said. "We're ready to go out there and hit somebody else besides each other."

Tech beware, Paterno concerned

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Watch out Texas Tech, Joe Paterno says he's concerned about his football team. Paterno expressed similar concern before several games last season, and the result was usually a Penn State blowout.

"We're not very good," Paterno said Tuesday. "The last two or three practices, we have been terrible. We haven't executed well. We've made a lot of mistakes. We haven't been able to concentrate and I'm very, very concerned."

Paterno, never known for his optimism, sounded downright giddy three weeks earlier at the beginning of preseason practice. But a few injuries and off-the-field problems have thinned the No. 4 Nittany Lions at several positions.

To prevent any more injuries, Paterno has reduced contact during practice.

"We didn't do as much tough work and that might be one of the reasons we're not looking very good right now," he said.

Courier breaks into contention

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Courier wandered out of his strange wilderness and into contention at the U.S. Open on Tuesday, thumping foot-sore French Open champion Thomas Muster in straight sets on a day when upsets reigned.

There was no indifference by Courier this time, none of the haphazard stretches or moody moments that have marked his descent in the rankings.

This time, for the better part of two hours, he was the Courier of old, drilling 10 aces, drumming baseline winners and reaching the quarterfinals with a 6-3, 6-0, 7-6 (7-4) romp over the No. 3 Muster, a clay court specialist who ripped up his feet on these hot hardcourts.

Courier, No. 14, will find out just how far back he's come when he plays his next match against No. 5 Michael Chang, a 6-2, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 winner over Michael Tebbutt.

No. 2 Pete Sampras, getting better with every match, served 18 aces and breezed into the quarters with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-3, 6-4 victory over No. 15 Todd Martin.

"It's hard when you have a pretty good idea of where the serve is going and it is still eating you up," Martin said. "It gets to be a bit demoralizing. Pete played awfully well tonight."

Sampras ought to be able to stroll into the semis past 70th-ranked Byron Black of Zimbabwe, who scored the day's first upset, 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, against erratic 1994 runner-up Michael Stich.

"He doesn't really serve that big, so I can get in on his serve," Sampras said of Black. "But to beat (Thomas) Enqvist, who I think is one of the best players in the world, and to beat Stich today, he's got to be oozing with confidence."

Reaching the women's semifinals were top-seeded Steffi Graf and No. 9 Gabriela Sabatini. Graf beat Amy Frazier 6-2, 6-3, and Sabatini downed Mary Joe Fernandez 6-1, 6-3, two days after Fernandez ousted defending champion Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

"I've really progressed from match to match," said Graf, who played a three-setter in the opening round and won every other match in straight sets. "My back is holding up really well."

Graf has dominated Sabatini of late, but remembered losing to her in the 1990 Open final when Sabatini won her only Grand Slam title.

"Her game keeps you off a little bit so you don't get the rhythm," Graf said.

Muster never got his rhythm against Courier. Muster's bleeding blisters were covered with a yard of tape, but for all it mattered he might as well have played barefoot the way little Byron Black used to do.

Black, who's grown up to all of 5-foot-9, pulled the first upset of the afternoon by sending the 6-foot-4 Stich packing.

"I played a lot of barefoot," Black said of his youth on the grass courts his father, once a player at Wimbledon, installed back home in Zimbabwe when the African country was still called Rhodesia. "I have very high arches. I started getting a very bad heel, and then I had to play in shoes, although my dad didn't like me tearing up his court too much."

Black tore up Stich with a variety of two-fisted forehands and backhands, and the net-charging German accommodated him with 79 unforced errors.

"I know how he plays, and I just think I got off to a very bad start," said Stich, the No. 8 seed. "He didn't make any unforced errors. From the third set on, I was just in charge. I changed my style. I went for more. I had my chance in the fifth set, that break-point for 2-1, but I just gave it away. I played a poor game, made a double-fault and missed an easy volley."

Courier and Muster waged a fierce baseline duel, slugging hard all the way, but Courier took more chances and put away far more winners — 42 to 14 — while out-acing Muster 10-0.

"Personally, I feel good going out against Thomas on any surface, even clay," Courier said. "He's had a phenomenal year, and he deserves all the credit he's gotten. We're going to play the same match on any surface. We're going to play power vs. power, even on clay."

Once the best player in the game, the winner of four Grand Slam titles from 1991 to 1993, Courier lost in the second round of the Open a year ago and drifted in this year with few of the other players giving him a chance of winning.

But Courier said he started to feel good about his tennis a few days before the Open started.

"When I feel good," he said, "I always play well."

The problem for Courier has been that his tennis shifts with his mood, going from unbeatable one day to vulnerable another.

"Sometimes you have to take some steps backward to take some more steps forward," Courier said. "I really haven't pinpointed it. All I know is that's the way it is. Today I am playing well, and I am going to try to keep playing well for a good long time."

"I learned I hate losing. I have always known that, but you really find it out when you lose a lot."

Beating Muster so easily should help Courier against Chang.

"I go in confident," Courier said, "knowing that I played a very good match. It is a good time for it, but I don't want to go outside and start doing cheerleading exercises or anything like that. It is one match."

POWER POINTS OFFICIAL RULES

- Object of the game is to amass as many of the 136 possible points as you can. Simply review the week's schedule of games, listed on entry form, and decide which game you are surest of picking a winner in. Write the name of your projected winner on the 16-point line. If that team wins its game that week, you win 16 points. Write the name of your second-surest winner on the 15-point line, and so on down to the 1-point line, which game you figure to be a long shot. Next, fill in Tiebreaker 1, the total points scored by both teams in the week's Cowboys or Oilers game. If this step fails to produce a winner, the judges will apply Tiebreaker 2, total offensive yardage from scrimmage in this game. If a winner still doesn't emerge, a drawing will be held among those contestants still tied. Decisions of the judges are final. The weekly winner of the contest will receive $1,000.
- Any entry form that does not contain a legible name, address, etc., will be disqualified.
- Entries that fail to forecast a winner from each and every game will be disqualified, as will entries that fail to distinguish between the Jets and Giants of New York and, when necessary, between the Houston Oilers and the Houston Cougars.
- No points are awarded on tie games or in case any game is not played for any reason during its scheduled week.
- Entering POWER POINTS constitutes permission by contestant for his or her name and photograph to be used for news and reasonable promotional purposes at no charge.
- Employees of this newspaper and their immediate families are ineligible to participate.
- No purchase necessary. Facsimile game entry forms will be accepted and are available at all outlets of participating co-sponsors. Enter contest by dropping entry form into POWER POINTS container at participating co-sponsors.
- Weekly deadline for entry will be 2 p.m. Fridays except when noted otherwise on weekly entry form.
- Neither this newspaper nor any co-sponsor will be responsible for illegible entry forms or those lost, stolen or damaged in any way.
- Limit: one entry per person per week. Each entry must represent the original work of one entrant; "group" entries, "systems" or other attempts to enter multiple entries will be disqualified. Filling out extra forms and putting your friends' and relatives' names on them violates this rule. Any such entries are destroyed prior to grading.
- Contestants must have reached the age of eight (8) years by the Sunday of any week's play.

Pell latest senator to announce retirement

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Sen. Claiborne Pell, the blue-blood Democrat from Rhode Island known for his leadership in education, arts and foreign affairs, announced Tuesday that he would retire at the end of his term in 1996 after 36 years in Congress.

"There is a natural time for all life's adventures to come to an end," Pell said.

The 76-year-old lawmaker was first elected in 1960 and is now the third most senior member of the Senate after Strom Thurmond, a Republican from South Carolina, and Robert C. Byrd, a Democrat from West Virginia.

Pell is the seventh Democrat to announce his retirement from the Senate this year, compared to only one Republican. Political analysts say the numbers all but insure that the GOP will continue to maintain a lock on the chamber after the 1996 election. Currently, Republicans control 54 Senate seats to the Democrats' 46.

"It's absolutely stunning," said Charles O. Jones, a political science professor at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, who said it looks as if senators are "bailing out" of the Democratic Party. And Haley Barbour, Republican Party chairman, said Senate Democrats "are voting with their feet."

Besides Pell, retiring Democrats include: Paul Simon of Illinois, Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, Jim Exon of Nebraska, Howell Heflin of Alabama, David Pryor of Arkansas and Bill Bradley of New Jersey. Hank Brown, a Colorado Republican, also also retiring.

Pell, however, insisted Tuesday that his retirement was no indictment of public service. "It is fashionable today to malign the Congress, to malign the federal government and to malign those who serve the public in elective office," he said at a news conference at his office in Providence, R.I.

But the senator, best known for creating a federal program of grants to college students, said he believes individual members of the Senate are all committed to serving their constituents and to improving the quality of life in the country.

The announcement Tuesday did not come as much of a surprise to political observers on Capitol Hill or in Rhode Island. Before the 1990 election, Pell had indicated he was ready to retire. But Senate Democrats pressured him to run for another term because they were worried his seat would go to a Republican, former Rep. Claudine Schneider. Pell trounced Schneider with 62 percent of the vote to 38 percent.

This year, Pell has been hounded by questions about whether he would retire after he was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease. Pell noted Tuesday that while few people were trying to persuade him to run for a seventh term, he was physically fit for another campaign if he chose to run.

"As to my health, I have been assured that there is no medical barrier to my seeking reelection and to serving another six-year term," Pell said. "I feel strong and healthy and ran two miles Tuesday."

In Rhode Island, the largely blue-collar population has long revered the scion of a wealthy family that had summered in Newport for five generations before moving there permanently when Pell was 9 years old. Over the years, the voters also showed a high tolerance for his eccentricities, such as his interest in parapsychology and his inability to recall any bills he sponsored in the Senate.

"I think people like Pell, and they recognize that he's an institution in this state, and they respect the job he has done," said Darrell M. West, a political science professor at Brown University in Providence. "But I think they recognize it's time for a change, too."

West said voter surveys indicate the race to replace Pell will likely be a toss-up. More than half the voters identify themselves as independents in the state. Most politicians expect the race to pit Democratic Rep. Jack Reed against Republican State Treasurer Nancy Mayer. Surveys show they are both well known and well-respected throughout the state.

Rep. Patrick J. Kennedy, a freshman Democrat from Rhode Island, is too young at age 28 to be elected to the Senate. The Constitution requires that senators be at least 30 years old to take office. Kennedy, son of Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, is considering a run for the Senate if Republican Sen. John H. Chafee retires in 2000, sources said.

Pell promised that he would work to help elect a progressive Democrat to his seat, naming Reed specifically. Pell also said he would work to help President Clinton win reelection to the White House.

Tuesday afternoon, senators flocked to the floor to praise Pell for a long and fruitful career always marked by a self-deprecating and courtly manner. In 1972, Pell was responsible for moving legislation that created the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants for low- and middle-income college students, providing aid directly to students instead of to schools.

By 1980, the program had been renamed "Pell grants." During the last academic year, 3.7 million students received an average grant of $1,476 to help pay for college. The majority of those students come from families earning under $15,000 a year.

But over the years, much to Pell's chagrin, the amount of money appropriated for the program has not kept up with the cost of higher education. And the majority of students have had to take on more debt to help pay for their education than when the program first began.

"Pell grants, named for Sen. Pell, symbolize his commitment to excellence in education and opportunity for all and will be his enduring legacy to American education," said Sen. Kennedy. "Pell grants are a monumental achievement, and few senators in our history have made a greater difference for the nation."

Pell also was the main sponsor of legislation creating the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Both agencies, which provide grants to foster artists and intellectuals, have come under withering attack by conservatives in recent years, and the Republican Congress has been intent on eliminating them.

Besides his focus on education, the arts and humanities, Pell has long been involved in foreign affairs and has served as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. To this day, Pell carries in his breast pocket the charter of the United Nations, which he helped draft at the 1945 convention as a staff member.

But in recent years, Pell has frequently come across as confused and ineffective. Shortly after he won reelection in 1990, Democratic senators on the Foreign Relations Committee revolted and grabbed power from Pell by giving subcommittee chairmen autonomy over staff and issues.

In the high stakes drama over Haiti last year, Pell was conspicuously absent. President Clinton sent the chairman of the Armed Services Committee to Port au Prince for negotiations, not Pell. "I would have been delighted to be asked, but wasn't," Pell said at the time. "If I'd been the president, I would have made the same choice."

Judge throws out charges against Arkansas governor

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday threw out a fraud indictment against Gov. Jim Guy Tucker, ruling that the Whitewater prosecutor had exceeded his authority in bringing the charges. But Tucker still faces a more serious set of charges brought by the prosecutor.

Tucker, a Democrat, had been accused in a June 7 indictment of obtaining a federally backed loan under false pretenses and trying to avoid taxes on the sale of a cable TV business financed with the loan.

U.S. District Judge Henry Woods, a Democrat, said the charges bear no resemblance to the matters Whitewater special prosecutor Kenneth Starr had been assigned to investigate.

Starr, appointed by a panel of federal appeals judges for the District of Columbia, had contended that Woods had no authority to restrict the scope of his investigation, and Attorney General Janet Reno had agreed.

But the judge ruled otherwise.

"I cannot accept the proposition that a citizen can be put on trial in my court for a loss of his liberty and no court has the power to determine where there is jurisdiction to proceed in the matter," Woods wrote.

Woods also threw out the June 7 indictments of two Tucker co-defendants — his personal lawyer, John Haley, and his business partner William J. Marks.

Tucker still faces a 13-count indictment issued by the Whitewater grand jury Aug. 17. In that case, the governor was accused of falsifying documents to inflate property values.

Tucker has not yet challenged those charges, which carry a total of 55 years in prison and $2.75 million in fines.

Neither indictment directly involved the Whitewater land development venture in which President and Hillary Rodham Clinton were partners. But the indictments involved some of the players in the Whitewater venture.

Starr, appointed by a panel of federal appeals judges for the District of Columbia, contended that Woods had no authority to restrict the scope of his investigation. Attorney General Janet Reno had supported Starr's position.

Mistake foils fugitives escape plan

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — If you want to walk the walk, you've got to talk the talk.

Two escapees from a Utah prison blew their cover by breaking an unwritten local law on acceptable nicknames for San Francisco.

Anthony Scott Bailey and Eric Neil Fischbeck both said they were from "Frisco" when questioned by University of California officers who found them sleeping on campus Monday.

Use of the name — loved by tourists but loathed by residents — set off the alarm bells that their prison break didn't.

"No one from here ever says that," campus police Sgt. David Eubanks said.

Pressed further about which schools they attended, one said he couldn't remember and the other said he never went to school.

When one provided two alternate spellings for his purported last name, officers took them in, fingerprinted them and discovered their true, fugitive status.

Bailey, 27, and Fischbeck, 21, had escaped Saturday by crawling under a fence at a minimum-security prison in Bluffdale, about 20 miles south of Salt Lake City, authorities said. Both were serving time for burglary and Bailey was serving a sentence for drug possession.

Four months away from parole, they now face up to 15 more years for escape, authorities said.

"Anybody who escapes with that little time left can't be very smart," Utah corrections spokesman Jack Ford said.

Nearer San Francisco — er, "Baghdad-by-the-Bay" — officers were equally unimpressed.

Squalor amid nature's splendor: Park-worker housing goes to ruin

By Tara Meyer
Associated Press

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz. — Amy Czarnowski remembers the look on the maintenance man's face when part of her roof collapsed into her wooden cabin one morning.

"He showed me a stack of papers an inch thick and said there were 200 requests in for repairs," says Czarnowski, a National Park Service biologist who comes home each day to a cabin without a bathroom or kitchen. "He laughed and said I was Number 201."

Decrepit, peeling trailers, wooden cabins without running water and recreational vehicles are what Czarnowski and most other seasonal employees call home in the 51 national parks across the United States.

At North Cascades National Park in Sedro Woolley, Wash., water is carted in with buckets so employees can brush their teeth and bathe.

Yosemite National Park in California still houses workers in canvas-roofed "tent cabins" at its highest elevations.

National Park Service officials say housing and repairs have been ignored so long that there is a backlog of almost $4 billion in housing maintenance and septic system repairs nationwide.

"It's appalling," says David Barna, a spokesman for the park service in Washington. "But the problem isn't sexy enough to get the money it needs. Everyone wants to build new parks and new monuments, and what has been lost is the routine maintenance our employees need."

But given the limited amount of money available, priority must be given to fixing problems that directly affect visitors, such as traffic and parking, Simon says.

At the Grand Canyon, Sarah Gale, a park service payroll clerk, comes home to a 12-by-25-foot trailer in a cluster employees have dubbed The Dumpsters. Her hovel, one of several originally used to house workers who built Glen Canyon Dam in the 1960s, features a bathtub that's 1 foot by 3 and a door so warped the place floods every time it rains.

"It's pretty bottom-of-the-barrel," Gale says. "I have one roommate, but there are others here who have to share a Dumpster with two other people."

Those who can't find space in employee lots must share campgrounds used by tourists with RVs. Arnerberger says it's an unfortunate mix.

"Employees may come home and want to have a party and listen to music, whereas people that come up here are trying to get away from that," he says.

Park service officials are exploring the possibility of leasing land to developers who would build and manage employee housing for a fee.

Another way to pay for better housing, Barna says, would be to give the park a bigger cut of entrance fees and money collected from concessionaires who run hotels, shops and other businesses.

Some concessionaires' contracts in national parks date back 40 years, when parks got about 2 percent of the take. The Grand Canyon gets an average of 3.4 percent.

including bookkeeping, planting and search-and-rescue.

Many workers at the Grand Canyon say they put up with the shabby housing as a small price to pay for a job in a spot they love.

"I've lived here before, so it's not like the housing deterred me. I love working in this park," says Czarnowski, who lives in a dorm whose main drawback is that it is full of rowdy 18-year-olds.

Czarnowski, 21, is working on her third summer job at the canyon.

The workers pay rent for their housing. Prices at the canyon range from $40 to $80 a month.

The nation's main lobbying group for park users, the National Parks and Conservation Association, wants employee housing improved.

"The trailers really have to go. They need a decent livable place to live," says David Simon, the group's Southwest regional director.

But given the limited amount of money available, priority must be given to fixing problems that directly affect visitors, such as traffic and parking, Simon says.

17-year-old cadet says she's ready for challenge of Citadel

Nancy Mellette of Irmo, S.C., had hoped to serve under Shannon Faulkner, not pick up battle for women to attend institution.

Associated Press

OAK RIDGE, N.C. — Nancy Mellette, a 17-year-old cadet who wants to march at The Citadel, said Tuesday she is up to the physical challenge that school officials tried to use to keep Shannon Faulkner out.

A cross-country runner, Mellette said her best time in the two-mile run is 13 minutes and she recently did 28 sprints in 30 seconds.

"I can do pushups pretty well, too," she told a news conference at Oak Ridge Military Academy, the military academy she attends about 30 minutes north of Greensboro.

Asked her weight, Mellette pluckily replied, "Don't you know you're not supposed to ask women that question, sir?"

The Citadel in Charleston, S.C., had tried to keep Ms. Faulkner out based on her weight, which was never disclosed. A school spokesman had said Ms. Faulkner was 20 pounds over weight requirements and that the school doctor had recommended she be rejected.

She was taken to the infirmary with heat exhaustion the first day of rigorous training and dropped out a week later, citing the stress of the court fight and her isolation on campus.

Mellette of Irmo, S.C., said she had hoped to serve under Ms. Faulkner and had not expected to pick up the battle for the right of women to attend the state-supported military college.

Lawyers challenging The Citadel's all-male status last week asked a judge to allow Mellette to enter Ms. Faulkner's lawsuit. If that isn't allowed, Mellette probably will file a separate lawsuit, attorney Val Vojdik said.

But Citadel President Claudius Watts said Tuesday it doesn't matter whether Mellette joins the lawsuit because the courts should rule by the fall of 1996 whether an alternative women's program at Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C., is constitutional. If it is not, Mellette and other women could join the all-male corps of cadets.

Mellette's attorneys said they're not convinced the matter will be resolved by the courts in time for her to begin school next fall.

Mellette said the alternative, state-subsidized leadership program at Converse College doesn't equal The Citadel.

"Converse doesn't offer electrical engineering courses and I don't believe that the military instruction they have at Converse would be equal to The Citadel," Mellette said.

Mellette said she also was interested in applying to the U.S. Military Academy, the U.S. Air Force Academy, the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and the University of South Carolina.

She cited her family's ties to The Citadel and said going there gives her the option instead of the obligation of military service after graduation.

Mellette's father, Bland, is a 1963 Citadel graduate. Her brother, Bland III, is a senior and cadet corps officer of The Citadel.

Watts said he felt Ms. Faulkner would have been accepted by the members of her company had she continued, but conceded, "It would have been very lonely at night."

And he said, the cadets who celebrated after Ms. Faulkner decided to leave were not celebrating her failure. "The cadets were letting off steam," he said. "They were relieved the pressure had been let off them too."

KENT KHUK JOB FAIR

 Do you have fun at work?
 Are you considering a career change?
 Where will you be and what will you be earning in a few years if you stay with your present company?
 Do you feel that you receive adequate training to prepare you for the "next step" at your company?
 Have you ever wondered what it would be like to work in a convenience store?

Find out more about us in an informative two hour session to be held this Saturday, September 9, from 9 A.M. - 11 A.M. The fair will be held at the Kent Corporate office at 3314 West Loop 250 (next to McDonalds). Any questions you have concerning our company, benefits, career potential, working conditions and general industry information will be answered. We will also conduct a store tour at our location next door. Space is limited, so please call Sharon Minnick for reservations at 520-4000 by this Friday afternoon.

Find out why you should join one of the fastest growing convenience store teams in West Texas!
