Thatcher finds 'no consensus' on Mideast

By ARTHUR MAX

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain said today that Palestinian leaders who enjoy popular support in the Israeli-occupied territories must be considered as alternatives to the PLO for peace talks with Israel.

Speaking at a news conference at the end of a four-day visit to Israel, Mrs. Thatcher said her talks with Israeli leaders had "produced some ideas of how progress can be made." However, she said there was no consensus on how to proceed.

"We must consider an alternative" to the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Mrs. Thatcher, who was urged by eight Palestinian leaders Monday to make sure the PLO was involved in the peace process.

She said the ultimate solution to the Palestinian problem appeared to be "some sort of federation" between King Hussein's Jordan and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip where 1.3 million Palestinians live.

But she said Hussein could not go to the negotiating table "without people who are accepted as representing the Palestinian people."

Mrs. Thatcher was embarrassed last October by two PLO officials who reneged on their promise to sign an accord renouncing violence and recognizing Israel only hours before they were to meet with Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe.

"If they were willing to do that (renounce violence and endorse recognition), I think that would create a new situation which would enable seeing the PLO in a different light," she said. "If not, we have to find other Palestinians who truly represent the Palestinian people."

She said she had no specific proposals to carry to Hussein, with whom she is to meet in London in mid-June.

Mrs. Thatcher indicated that her call for mayoral elections in the West Bank and Gaza was intended to build a new leadership that had the support of Palestinians.

"What we suggested was a kind of election process for Palestinian representation so that we be guarantee that those who have been elected will have the support of the Palestinian people," she said. Israeli officials rejected the idea, saying the last elections in 1976 led to PLO activisits taking office.

Hanna Seniora, a newspaper editor who has been mentioned as a possible member of a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation to peace talks with Israel, said the eight Palestinians told Mrs. Thatcher on Monday that she should make another effort to meet with PLO leaders.

But British sources said Mrs. Thatcher did not budge from her demand that the PLO first must renounce terrorism and endorse U.N. Resolution 242 that specifically recognizes Israel's right to exist. Israel refuses to deal with the PLO, saying it is a terrorist organization devoted to the destruction of the Jewish state.

Mrs. Thatcher, saying she was concerned about the absence of serious Middle East moves, has called on Israel to ease political and economic restrictions in the occupied territories to encourage the emergence of an alternative Palestinian leadership to the PLO.

But the Palestinians at the dinner meeting in the British Consulate in predominantly Arab east Jerusalem, swore their loyalty to the PLO. They said in a petition to Mrs. Thatcher that the PLO "must be addressed in any matter concerning Palestinians."

Britain has assured Israel that it will follow its current policy of refusing to meet PLO officials when it takes the rotating chairmanship of the European Common Market on July 1, Israeli and British officials said.

A year-long effort to start peace talks between Israel and a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation broke down in February over the PLO's refusal to endorse U.N. Resolution 242.

Joe Whitten is primed for the annual singing tour of "His Children" to federal and state prisons across the nation. The ministry is based in Big Spring.

Big Spring-based ministry carries message to prisons

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Joe Whitten's ministry is via songs in prisons.

"We travel all over the nation doing rehabilitation type concerts" in state and federal prisons, said the 55-year-old founder of the Big Spring-based Joe Whitten Prison Ministries. San Quentin has let me in."

Whitten takes his ministry to maximum-security penitentiaries throughout the United States. The gospel message which his ministry imparts is through "His Children," an eight-voice collegiate group which goes on tour from June through December.

There is no hell-fire and damnation preachments in the songs, which are not of the old-time gospel variety.

"It's mainly upbeat," Whitten said. "They (the inmates) will turn you off if you went in and did the old traditional gospel songs. It's got to have a beat to it. You've got to get their attention. They don't have to come (to the prison concerts)."

Whitten and "His Children" will be returning to the Texas Department of Correction's Eastham Prison Farm at Huntsville for a fall revival.

"They love us," he said. "We mix with them. We talk with them. We share with them. They think of us as family. They see us as their sisters, brothers, daughters, and sons."

AND THE REASON for that response, Whitten said, is because of the "love and caring" reflected by Whitten, his collegiate singers and is 55-year-old wife, Virginia, who tells of her confinements — of her being "locked up many times...(behind) the bars of a psychiatric hospital."

"'My freedom was taken away from me just as yours was,'" she tells the prisoners, Whitten said. And they identify with her. "'I've been judged, too, by the free world, as to why I've had this sickness.'"

Whitten recalled his wife giving a stirring testimonial in a federal prison, La Tuna:

"The men were standing and applauding, and one (inmate) standing on the front row met her, as she came off the stage. And he said, 'Lady, I've been locked up in the joint a long time, and that is the best thing I've ever heard said.'"

That particular inmate turned out to be the head of the Hell's Angels on the West Coast, said Whitten, who later learned that a lieutenant in the Mafia also was present in the concert and was "emotionally moved." Two weeks later, Whitten said that the La Tuna chaplain telephoned him and told him that the Hell's Angels chieftain had started seeking counseling.

"This message even reaches the hard-core inmates," he said. "We want to do our work in helping inmates turn their lives around."

WHILE VISITING prisons for women, Whitten's wife, an artist and color analyst, lectures on make-up techniques and self-improvement ideas to help improve the inmates' appearance and self-esteem. "They have zero self-image," Whitten said, "just like she (Virginia) does through her mental illness."

Whitten said his compassion for inmates is similar to that of those who reach out to help abused children, alcoholics, abused wives and others.

"Not many people care for the inmates," he said. "A lot of people do not want to help the inmates. They want to lock them up and throw the key away.

Two killed in explosion at New Jersey plant

KEARNY, N.J. (AP) — An explosion ripped through an aluminum manufacturing plant, killing two people and spewing huge fireballs and exploding baseball bats into the sky before the blaze was put under control, officials said today.

Police Capt. Joseph Messineo said two bodies were found in the rubble of the Airlite Aluminum Corp. plant in the Elite Industrial Park, a complex housing 15 companies.

The bodies were not immediately identified, but a plant supervisor, Lee White, said two employees were believed to have been in the single-story building when the blast occurred at 11:49 p.m. Monday.

The cause of the fire, which destroyed the Airlite building and damaged the other four buildings in the complex, was not immediately known. Tom Dunwoodie, chief inspector for the Kearny Fire Prevention Bureau, said it appeared a smelter furnace blew up.

The blast shattered windows throughout the residential neighborhood surrounding the complex.

"I live a couple of blocks from here, and it blew me out of my bed," said fire Capt. Frank Lynch.

Plastic-filled aluminum baseball bats manufactured by Airlite exploded in the blast and "were shooting up like projectiles," said Capt. Michael DiSalvo of the Harrison Fire Department, one of four called to fight the fire.

The fire was brought under control about 3:30 a.m., and about 500 residents evacuated from a nearby apartment complex were allowed to return home, authorities said.

"I woke up and all I saw was yellow flash in my apartment," said Richard Clark, a resident of the apartment complex. "I started yelling, 'Fire! Everybody get out!' It was like something I've never heard, like a nuclear explosion. It was outrageous."

Manny Martinez, another resident of the evacuated building, said his apartment's windows were shattered by the explosion. "I was sound asleep when it happened. Glass fell all over me," he said.

Fire officials had power in a 10-block area near the complex shut off and drew water from the nearby Passaic River to fight the blaze.

Bernard Dreker, a Kearny Fire Department dispatcher, said many kinds of companies were housed in the complex.

Firefighters continue to pour water on the smoking shell of an aluminum manufacturing plant in Kearny, N.J., which exploded into flames early today. Two people were killed.

Removal of wall will allow probe of Houston explosion

HOUSTON (AP) — A wall left standing after a natural gas explosion demolished a two-story downtown building will be leveled so fire investigators can safely dig through the rubble to determine the cause of the blast, authorities say.

"We won't go in the building until it's safe," said Fire Department Capt. Paul Cline.

Cline said he expected fire investigators to be able to survey the site today.

The Sunday explosion showered bricks and debris up to a block away, but no injuries were reported, officials said. All the stores were closed and the second floor was vacant.

Arson Capt. Mike Roberson said the cause of the explosion was still under investigation, but he added it did not appear suspicious.

"Everything I saw indicates a natural gas explosion," Roberson said Monday.

Firefighters called to check on a report of smoke arrived at 5:05 p.m. Sunday to see a three-foot hole blown out of one side of the building and heard the hissing noise of natural gas.

"It looked like a volcano erupted inside," said Antonio Martini, a security guard across the street. "All of a sudden you heard a little boom and you saw the roof start flying off and the walls fall down."

For more than four hours, firefighters fought a gas-fed blaze before getting it under control, officer Tom Johnson said.

"People were screaming. Everyone was running and hollering," Johnson said.

Roberson said investigators were checking reports that lightning might have hit the building. He added, however, that the hole seen by firefighters before the explosion could have been caused by the intense heat of flames inside the building.

Eighty-four firefighters and 21 units were called to battle the blaze. By 9 p.m., firefighters were still trying to put out some stubborn blazes underneath the rubble.

Nursing home fire kills three

JACKSONVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Fire swept through a nursing home early today, killing three people and injuring six others, police said.

Police Chief John Irlam said the blaze broke out shortly before 1 a.m. in the first-floor lounge area at the Rosedale Nursing Home and spread through the three-story brick building, causing extensive damage.

The dead were identified as Dora Houser, 76, Clarence Scott, 84, and Marilyn Adams, 49, Irlam said.

He said five people, suffering minor burns and smoke inhalation, were taken to a Jacksonville hospital. A sixth person from the nursing home was taken to the burn center at Memorial Hospital in Springfield.

Weekend rains bring year's total to 1.72 inches

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Residents were grinning ear to ear in drought-weary Midland County after a long-awaited rain, even though it soaked some areas and only sprinkled on others.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal reported that by 10 a.m. today more than a half an inch of rain had fallen, bringing the yearly total to 1.72 inches.

In other parts of the county, however, heavier amounts were reported. Residents in Greenwood reported as much as 4 inches fell Saturday through Monday and farmers south of Midland in the Cotton Flat area reported steady rains through the weekend, with totals reaching the 1.30 mark.

"We're still under half our normal" precipitation for the year, one forecaster said. Average rainfall by the end of April totals 2.35 inches. But by the end of May Midland usually has 4.4 inches, and it doesn't look as if that figure will be reached this month. "If we don't get our normal for this month, it looks like we'll stay behind," the forecaster predicted.

"We're very thankful for the rain we got," said Hoot Leonard, manager of Midland Farmer's Co-op, who reported about 2.30 inches had fallen there. "It's a start, but we need more."

Leonard said many Midland County cotton farmers were unable to plant their crops on schedule this spring because of the lack of rain. With the weekend rainfall, farmers should be able to get into the fields.

"We like to plant about the 10th of May, but we can plant as late as June 10th," Leonard said. "If we can get some rain in June and July we can make a pretty good crop."

While the weekend rainfall helped a great deal, area Entomologist Rick Minzenmayer said many areas still will "need another half an inch to get the cotton in the ground."

The rainfall also will help to revive the drought-damaged range land.

O'Neal-McEnroe baby born Friday

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Tatum O'Neal has given birth to a baby boy by tennis star John McEnroe, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

The 8-pound, 11-ounce boy was born Friday, and both mother and baby went home Monday in good health, said Corinne Rogers, nursing supervisor at St. John's Hospital. She didn't know the baby's name.

Miss O'Neal, the daughter of actor Ryan O'Neal, made her name as a child actress opposite him in the 1973 movie "Paper Moon."

Her brother, Griffin Patrick O'Neal, 27, was slightly injured in a boating accident Monday in Edgewater, Md., according to a spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources police. Gian Carlo Coppola, 23, son of movie director Francis Ford Coppola, was killed in the accident, officials said.

Assad visiting Greece

By ROBERT H. REID

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Syrian President Hafez Assad, who says his country is a victim and not a sponsor of terrorism, discussed political violence today during a four-hour meeting with Premier Andreas Papandreou.

Assad, on the second day of a three-day official visit, ignored reporters' questions as he left the Maximos Mansion in downtown Athens after his meeting with Papandreou.

The Greek premier, however, told reporters the "very friendly" talks covered "all the problems of the eastern Mediterranean region."

Papandreou has criticized Western efforts to brand Libya and other countries as sponsors of terrorism. Asked if his talks with Assad included discussion of terrorist attacks, the premier replied: "We couldn't not talk about terrorism. It's an everyday occurrence."

The U.S. government has blamed some terrorist attacks, including the Dec. 27 raids at the Rome and Vienna airports, on the Palestinian extremist group led by Abu Nidal. U.S. officials say Abu Nidal, whose real name as Sabry al-Banna, is supported by Libya and Syria.

Western diplomatic sources and Greek newspapers say Assad's visit — his first to a Western country since 1978 — is aimed at countering claims that his country instigated recent terror attacks in Europe, and to convince Western Europe that Syria was a target of terrorism and military threats from Israel and the United States.

Italian newspapers reported last weekend that investigators were preparing indictments against 20 Syrians in connection with the Rome attack.

But in a nationally televised speech Monday, the 55-year-old Syrian president said: "This dangerous phenomenon of using armed attacks to realize political aims is a warning to the world that it will be turned into a battlefield in the grip of those who see that they have the capacity to attack and at the same time avoid punishment."

"That's what the United States did with its (April 15) armed attack on Libya and that's what Israel is doing in south Lebanon and all the occupied Arab lands and that's also what (South Africa) is doing in the countries of southern Africa," he said.

Assad, who seized power in a 1970 military coup, claimed his government opposed terrorism "because we have suffered from it."

This is not Christianity. We go (into prisons) because the statistics show us that 98 percent of inmates will return to society," Whitten said, "and if they don't change while they are in there (prison), most of them will return to prison."

Whitten was a church choir director for 32 years before he immersed himself and his work into what he calls his "unique" prison ministry in song.

His ministry is mostly to maximum-security prisons, such as San Quentin, Soledad, La Tuna, Leavenworth, McAlester, Lompoc, units of the Texas Department of Corrections, and Folsom. "Our concentration is in maximum-security prisons — high-level."

LAST YEAR, "His Children" appeared in 55 state and federal prison concerts and in 30 churches in 13 states. The ministry, which operates on a $145,000 annual budget, is supported by love offerings, churches, individuals and others "along the way." His ministry is endorsed by the American Correctional Association.

Aside from performing for the inmates, Whitten and his group visit the inmates and dine with them.

"We eat prison food," he said, "because it helps us financially and it lets the inmates see we're not too good. It gives us credibility with the inmates."

Despite their criminal records, the inmates are "still human. We (often) think of them as animals. There is good in every person."

While his ministry is seeking to help the inmates, Whitten said that he and his group "feel empathy and sympathy toward the victims of criminals. And that's what were are trying to change — the criminal, so he won't have other victims."

"Inmates treat us as family," Whitten said. "They strike out at each other and the guards and take their hostility out on them. But they love us, because they know we love them."

The effectiveness of carrying the message of God's love and care to inmates was noted by John Allman, retired warden of the Federal Prison Camp in Big Spring.

"He (Allman) said he has spent millions of dollars of taxpayers' money in rehabilitation programs throughout the years," Whitten said. "And the only true rehabilitation that he has seen is through God."

Veterans honored all across state

Associated Press

Twenty-one gun salutes, flags at half-staff and cemetery ceremonies were commonplace across Texas on Monday as the state's residents honored the 575,000 soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen who have given their lives since 1776 in defense of the United States.

"America is special, but the difficult part of that is the fact that some (soldiers) don't return" from the missions necessary to keep the country the land of the free, said Maj. Gen. Donald R. Infante, Fort Bliss commander, in his speech to those who attended the Memorial Day service at the Fort Bliss National Cemetery.

Before Infante's speech, the nation's war dead were honored by a 21-gun salute and the raising of the main U.S. glag, which was framed along the cemetery avenue by 160 flags. Another 20,000 miniature flags, placed by El Paso's Boy Scouts, graced the cemetery sites.

In the Rio Grande Valley, veterans arose early — as in their military service days — to begin preparations for memorial services. Members of various legion groups worked together, traveling together to cemeteries, parks and gravesites to honor their fallen comrades in arms.

Legionnaires provided a 21-gun salute at each service, and "Taps" was played.

The Rev. Gene Horton of the Rio Hondo Baptist Church spoke at Mont Meta Cemetery and at Veterans' Memorial Plaza in San Benito.

"I feel like we're standing on hallowed ground. It's a sacred moment ... to think of the men and women who went and paid such a price, and never came back." Horton said.

A ceremony honoring veterans was held Monday morning at Houston National Cemetery.

In Beaumont, a Veterans of Foreign Wars post, American Legion Posts 33 and 817, a Boy Scout Troop and the Civil Air Patrol placed hundreds of miniature flags on veterans' graves at area cemeteries.

Members of Disabled American Veterans hosted Memorial Day services for several hundred Panhandle residents in the Poppy Field area of Amarillo's Llano Cemetery.

The remains of a Texas calvaryman who fought at the Battle of San Jacinto were buried in the Texas State Cemetery in Austin, where 179 Texas war heroes and statesmen were honored in ceremonies Monday.

At least 22 killed on Texas roadways

Associated Press

The death of a Lubbock pedestrian and a single-car accident on a rain-slickened Wichita Falls highway on Memorial Day brought fatalities on Texas roadways to at least 22 for the holiday weekend.

Authorities said Dolly Perry, 42, was pronounced dead at Lubbock General Hospital at 7:22 p.m., eight minutes after she was struck by a pickup truck.

In Wichita Falls, police said Helen Brown Burris, 29, died after she lost control of her car on Texas Highway 79 about 6:20 p.m. Monday.

Earlier, Sarah Hughes, 65, died in Wichita Falls after a two-car accident about 11:30 a.m. but officers said it was not raining at the time.

The death count, which began at 6 p.m. Friday, continued through midnight Monday.

The Department of Public Safety said three Fort Worth women were killed when their car was struck by a northbound vehicle that jumped the median and struck their southbound vehicle about 8 p.m. Sunday in Denton.

Four other people were injured in the accident, which involved two other vehicles, the DPS said.

The fatalities were identified as Jo Ann Poston Johnson, 44, Margie Poston Thompson, 53, and Virgie Paulien Poston, 73, the DPS said.

Deer Park police said four people were killed early Sunday when their car burned after being hit from behind at a stoplight.

The dead were identified as Heechul Ahn, 30 and Du Yong Kim, 27, who were both in the front seat, police said. Also killed were Hyang Ok Lee, 28 and her daughter Sandy Lee, 4, who were in the back seat. All the victims were from Houston.

The other car's driver was jailed for investigation of involuntary manslaughter, officers said.

Later Sunday, Victor Ramos, 16, of Eagle Pass, was hit while trying to cross a busy highway in Eagle Pass, police said. He died about five hours after being struck by a truck.

A tractor-trailer rig hauling cattle hit a Ford Pinto Sunday afternoon at an intersection on Loop 1608 southwest of San Antonio, killing two and injuring four.

The Pinto was pushed about 100 feet before it flipped and the rig rolled on top, crushing it, authorities said.

More than 75 volunteer firefighters, sheriff's deputies, San Antonio patrolmen and Department of Public Safety troopers worked for three hours in an attempt to pull the rig off the compact car.

The dead were identified as Reynaldo Uriegas, 28, and his 30-year-old wife, Cynthia.

A San Marcos woman, whose name had not been released Monday, was killed when a car ran into a dirt embankment near the South Central Texas city late Saturday, police said.

South African vigilantes ordered not to attack black neighbors

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A court ordered conservative black vigilantes not to attack other blacks in a neighborhood of the riot-torn Crossroads squatter city, and barred police and soldiers from assisting the vigilantes.

Cape Town Supreme Court Judge C.T. Howie issued a restraining order Monday pending a full hearing June 13.

The case was brought by six squatter leaders, including three whose followers were routed in last week's raging battles between the vigilantes and left-wing black rivals. At least 42 were killed and between 20,000 and 50,000 were left homeless.

Their petition charged that the vigilantes, with police support or acquiescence, had systematically attacked rival squatters from newer settlements on the fringes of Crossroads, 12 miles from Cape Town.

Police consistently deny siding with any faction in the Crossroads violence.

The six squatter leaders said they feared a similar attack was imminent on another section of Crossroads, in which all of them now live. That area, known as the KTC section, was not involved in the original violence.

Police Col. M.G. Mans, appearing before the court, said the order "could only limit and seriously hamper the activities of the security forces."

"It could lead to the withdrawal of all security forces from the area, which will result in the collapse of law and order and a bloodbath between the rival factions," he said.

But Howie said police could obey the court order and still protect law and order in Crossroads.

He ordered police to take "all necessary steps to prevent such attacks" by vigilantes against the rival groups, and told the police they must serve the court order on the vigilante leaders.

The petition for the restraining order claimed that Johnson Ngxobongwana, chief of the Crossroads conservatives, planned assaults on the KTC section.

Ngxobongwana has denied the rivals' allegation that his supporters initiated last week's fighting.

Meanwhile, government authorities said they would go ahead with plans to begin buildozing the area where thousands of shacks were burned. The government wants to move most of the squatters to Khayelitsha, a new black township farther from Cape Town, despite widespread opposition.

Two more burned bodies were found by police Monday, raising the known death toll to 42, and up to 50,000 people were left homeless in the fighting as thousands of shacks were burned by rampaging gangs.

Egyptian city now like ghost

By NEJLA SAMAKIA

ASSIUT, Egypt (AP) — This old Nile-side city is today a ghost of its past, when European royalty came as guests in the palatial homes of pashas, and wealthy Coptic Christian families wielded the political power.

"They used to hold spectacular balls for European royalty," said a son of a once-prominent family. "People used to import the finest clothing and food."

All that ended with the land and social reforms of the Egyptian revolution that overthrew playboy King Farouk in 1952 and brought Gamal Abdel Nasser to power.

Little remains of those graceful days and Assiut today is just another of Egypt's 25 provincial capitals.

The mansions of yesteryear are run down, many of them now offices of bureaucrats.

The treasures they contained were sold for the most part after Nasser took over in Cairo and set about spreading the wealth.

"Many families are now selling their houses, bringing in good sums for the land value," said Dr. Sarah Loza, a U.S.-educated sociologist who was born and reared in Assiut.

But even though Assiut's glamor and power waned, it has retained a reputation as a city that cared for its own.

"In the past, there was a very strong sense of community commitment," Mrs. Loza said in an interview. "Most of the community needs were handled through private voluntary organizations."

Assuit's people ran the city virtually without interference from Cairo, 240 miles to the north and the garden-club lives of the rich often spilled over to help the poor.

"The women used to travel in the summer and set up exhibits in the winter of the flowers, plants, new embroidery designs brought from abroad," said Mrs. Loza. Attempts to recreate the embroidery patterns led to jobs for illiterate or destitute girls and a needlework industry that became associated with Assiut.

After 1952, however, the government took authority over the volunteer organizations and the strong community spirit dwindled, Mrs. Loza said.

"Under the socialist regime there officially were no rich and poor, no more notion of the rich helping the poor," she explained. "All came under the care of the government."

Nevertheless, the city of 250,000 retains some semblance of philanthropy.

Existing schools for orphans and the handicapped today are financed by individual donors and run by church groups, while others are operated by the government's Ministry of Social Affairs.

Philanthropic groups, such as the Salvation of the Souls Charitable Society, still function, some in run-down mansions.

The Young Girls' Training Home, run by the Paris-based humanitarian organization Terre des Hommes, is the neighbor of the Trasher Orphanage, founded by Liliane Trasher, an American missionary from North Carolina.

But little has change at Assiut's old bazaar, where the old crafts remain. One shop in the bazaar has stacks of white umbrellas awaiting repair. White umbrellas, popular among city folk long ago, are used today for shade by Egyptian peasants.

Death count may grow in Bangladesh mishap

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Grieving relatives crowded the banks of the Meghna River today as rescue workers continued to search for victims of a double-deck ferry that capsized in a storm with about 1,000 people on board. More than 500 people were feared dead.

Officials today said 69 more bodies had been found in the ferry's hull, raising the known death toll to 149. However, reporters on the scene put the number of bodies recovered at about 240.

They said their count included bodies found by local people but not yet reported to the officials.

Mainul Hasan, a reporter for the daily Ittefaq, and Abu Taher of the Dainik Bangla also said at least 500 people were missing and feared dead, based on interviews with officials and survivors.

The ferry Shamia went down in a storm in the Meghna River in the Barisal district Sunday night 135 miles south of Dhaka, its destination.

Rescue work was interrupted by a severe storm Monday night that swept the coast with wind gusts of more than 60 mph and cut off communications with Moulvirhat, according to officials in Dhaka.

President Hussain Muhammad Ershad visited the disaster area Monday and personally supervised rescue operations for a time. He ordered that the sinking be investigated, and that all double-deck river ferries in the country be taken out of service temporarily.

Another double-deck river launch capsized April 20 in a storm on the Dhaleswari River 10 miles south of Dhaka, killing 200 people by official count and more than 500 according to unofficial estimates.

Dr. Akram Hussain, secretary of ports and shipping, said many of the approximately 100 double-deck ferries had structural defects and the government would have them examined by experts from the University of Engineering and Technology in Dhaka.

Hasan said witnesses and survivors in Moulvirhat told him the current washed many bodies away. He reported to Ittefaq that the storm continued for more than an hour and many people who tried to jump free of the Shamia were blown from the decks by the high winds.

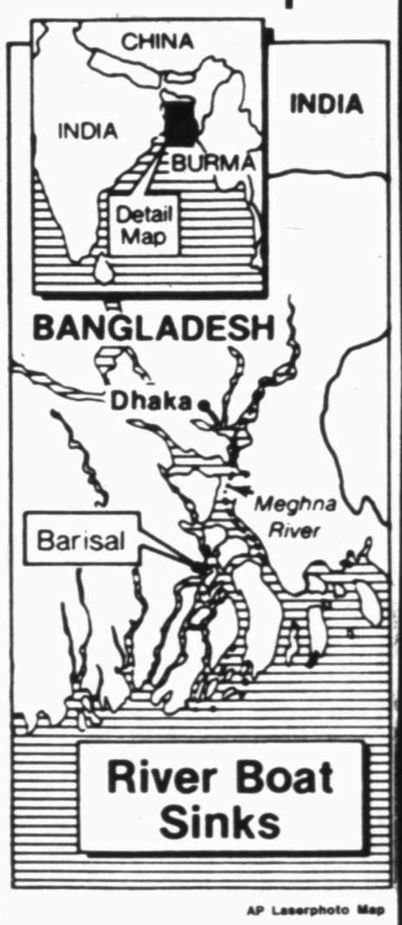

The New Nation, an English-language daily, today quoted survivors as saying many passengers wanted to get off at Moulvirhat because of increasingly bad weather, but were not allowed.

"We made frantic appeals to the captain of the ferry to anchor it but our cries went unheard," the newspaper quoted 30-year-old Azizul Huq as saying.

The Bengali daily, the Ittefaq quoted another survivor, Abdur Rashid, as saying that five members of his family including two daughters were missing.

A police source in Barisal, speaking on condition he not be identified further, said the ferry was carrying nearly 1,000 passengers, well over its permitted capacity of 400, and also was carrying cargo that is prohibited on passenger boats.

Only 24 bodies had been identified and turned over to relatives by late Monday, and officials were preparing to bury the rest.

Soviet newspaper critical of American tests on milk

MOSCOW (AP) — A government newspaper today criticized U.S. Embassy tests that found increased levels of radiation in milk sold in Moscow, and insisted that dairy products for sale in the Soviet capital are safe.

A leading Soviet nuclear scientist said Monday that the accident at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant on April 26, which spread radiation over much of the Soviet Union and Europe, had killed 19 people, including two workers who died at the scene.

The last report from a Soviet official had indicated last week that the death toll was 15.

In an article today headlined "A Storm in a Glass of Milk," Sovietskaya Rossiya, the government newspaper of the Russian Republic, suggested that the embassy report over the weekend was part of a U.S. campaign to spread false rumors and fears about the accident more than 400 miles south of Moscow.

It also seemed intended to counter reports on Moscow milk that might have reached Soviets through radio broadcasts from the West. The newspaper said U.S. officials may have released the information in hopes it would be broadcast back to the Soviet Union and generate fear.

"The statement about the 'dangerous' Moscow milk carries a political tint, rather than a concern about anyone's health," Vyacheslov Avilov, an official at the department on proccesing of animal products, told the newspaper.

U.S. Embassy officials called all pregnant American women and families with young children living in Moscow after receiving results Saturday of tests on a milk sample that showed radiation double the maximum level considered safe for infants and pregnant women.

Embassy spokesman Phil Duchateau said Saturday that tests on a milk sample taken the previous week indicated double the level of 1,500 picocuries per liter recommended by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration as safe for pregnant women and infants.

An embassy official said today that so far there have been no other reported findings of high radiation levels in U.S. tests of Moscow food samples since the Chernobyl accident.

Vera Vinogradova, deputy chief of a sanitation and epidemiology station in Moscow said the existing systems for checking foodstuffs were intensified after the Chernobyl accident, the newspaper reported. She said she could give the newspaper a complete guarantee that milk sold in Moscows is safe to drink.

Sovietskaya Rossiya said background radiation is monitored in fodder, pastures, soil and livestock, and that levels remain safe in the areas tested.

The article did not say what areas were monitored, or give any figures on normal background radiation.

Yevgeny P. Velikhov, vice president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said Monday that 19 people had died as a result of the disaster, but he said it would be months before a government investigating commission determines the cause of the accident.

Letter from Thatcher delivered to Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — The head of Britain's House of Lords delivered a letter from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, but declined to reveal the contents.

Lord Whitelaw said Gorbachev promised to respond to the message delivered Monday, and also indicated he will renew his proposal for separate talks with Britain on nuclear disarmament.

Whitelaw said Gorbachev met privately with him for about a half-hour, then held talks for more than two hours with a British parliamentary delegation.

Also at the meeting was Anatoly Dobrynin, former ambassador to Washington who in March was named a secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee and is believed to be in charge of the international department.

Congo-Ocean Railroad provides needed lifeline

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is one of a series of occasional reports from Associated Press correspondents on life and customs in the byways of the world.

BY RICHARD EVERETT

LOUBOMO, Congo (AP) — The stationmaster in T-shirt and sandals was indistinguishable from waiting passengers until he stepped forward with his red and green flags and ceremoniously signaled to the train to Brazzaville.

Passenger Marcel Bilongo was happy because the diesel locomotive and six cars arrived on time at Loubomo, halfway point on the Congo-Ocean Railroad built by the French colonial government in the 1920s.

Bilongo, a Brazzaville taxi driver, said it was nine hours late the day before when he took it to Loubomo to visit his family. Nevertheless, the train offered him a respite.

"I'm happy to visit the country," he said. "The city is too big, too wild, too much."

The Congo-Ocean Railroad offers much to many in the Congo.

Old as it is, it remains the lifeline and main source of land transport for people and goods in this Montana-sized central African nation with a population of about 2 million.

The second-class compartments this day were jammed with people headed for Brazzaville with bags bursting with bananas, onions, cassava and other goods to sell when they reached the capital, perhaps a half a day's journey away.

The 310-mile line rises from the Atlantic port of Pointe Noire, winds eastward over the Mayombe Mountain range and down the Niari River Valley to Brazzaville, on the west bank of the Congo River, offering all kinds of views along the way.

The railway was built to connect the inland capital with the coast, because the stretch of river from Brazzaville to the ocean is not navigable.

Hundreds of Congolese laborers died in the construction of the narrow-gauge railroad. They worked in jungles and mountains, where it was necessary to build a dozen tunnels, 82 bridges and 620 aqueducts. A recent track realignment project upgraded the line with five new stations, 19 bridges and three new tunnels, including one 2¼ miles long through the Mount Bamba massif, the highest point on the line at 1,313 feet above sea level.

The mountains offer passengers the most spectacular views of the journey, which normally takes about 15 hours from Pointe Noire to Brazzaville, and longer when there are breakdowns and other delays.

In its slow, winding climb from the sea, the train loops through a series of steep river valleys, moving from bright sunlight to dense shadowy jungle. It crosses gorges and waterfalls and disappears into inky black tunnels where the car windows seem only inches from the tunnel walls.

As it passes through the riotous green jungle, the sounds of shrieking birds and rushing water rise above clacking of the wheels.

It reaches towns at intervals of 10 to 15 minutes. Each is a cluster of wooden shacks half-hidden by banana trees and other towering plants.

The red and yellow stations are modeled after turn-of-the-century stations in France and seem incongruous in the jungle.

At least two passenger trains a day make the complete journey. Freight trains are more numerous, with more than 20 a day on certain parts of the line.

Elizabeth Tyre, 39, displays her best-selling Statue of Liberty crown on a New York roof top. The advertising and marketing executive designed the tiara for Lady Liberty's centennial celebration.

Lady Liberty crowns latest novelty craze

NEW YORK (AP) — America's love affair with the Statue of Liberty has spawned a new novelty craze — a foam version of Miss Liberty's crown.

At least three manufacturers are making copies of the spiked, green crown, hoping that their products will grace the heads of many tourists descending on New York for the Great Lady's 100th birthday.

The hottest copy on the market comes from Elizabeth Tyre, a 39-year-old advertising and marketing executive, who traces her love of the monument to "a romantic day at the statue in 1978."

"I invented the crown as a small token that I thought everybody could afford. I said to myself, let's spread the word of Liberty through the crown," she said last week.

Ms. Tyre's one-size-fits-all, seven-spiked tiara is the only version recognized by the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, which receives a percentage of her sales.

But the statue's form and likeness are in the public domain, and competing versions, all selling from $2.50 to $3.50, are on the market.

Despite an unsuccessful lawsuit in which Ms. Tyre claimed her design was unique, the other versions appear to be thriving, too.

David Dana of Dana International said his company was turning out 90,000 crowns a week and planned to double production beginning in June.

"Sales were low until about April, but now they have exploded and stores are stocking up for the Fourth of July celebration," he said. "It will sell in the millions."

Lyle Rose, president of The Lady & Associates, which was formed in September to market a crown and other Statue of Liberty products, said that between the Fourth of July ceremonies and the 100th anniversary of the statue in October, he expected sales in the 2 million to 3 million range.

Ms. Tyre said her company, Past Pluto Productions, has produced about half a million crowns to date and was ready to make a million on demand.

She formed Past Pluto in 1984 to make and market the crown.

"I've always said when something outlandish happened, 'Boy, that's past Pluto. Way out there!' " she said.

Several states hold primaries today

Associated Press

Former Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus is challenging heavily favored incumbent Bill Clinton today for the Democratic nomination, while in Idaho, Connie Hansen tries to join a small group of women who have followed their husbands to Congress.

In Kentucky, the third state holding a primary today, Republicans will select a candidate to challenge popular Democratic Sen. Wendell Ford, who is unopposed in the Democratic primary.

Faubus, 76, is making his third comeback bid after serving six two-year terms as Arkansas governor, from 1955 to 1967. He has criticized Clinton's performance, particularly on new school standards and school funding.

"Win or lose in this election, it will probably be my last time to participate in politics as an active candidate," Faubus said.

Another former Arkansas governor, Frank White, is favored to win the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

In 1957, Faubus called out the National Guard to block black students from entering Little Rock Central High School, prompting President Eisenhower to use federal soldiers to enforce court-ordered desegregation. Ever since, Faubus has said he acted to prevent violence, not to block desegregation.

NATION

Voters rejected his comeback attempts in 1970 and 1974.

Clinton, 39, seeking a fourth term, was 32 when he was sworn in for the first time in 1979, the youngest governor in the nation. He was defeated by White in 1980 but won the job again in 1982.

According to a recent poll conducted by television station KATV, 68 percent of likely Democratic voters favored Clinton, 14 percent preferred Faubus and 2 percent said they would vote for W. Dean Goldsby, 50, the first black to seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Among Republicans, 50 percent favored the 52-year-old White, with the rest divided among his three opponents or undecided.

A runoff would be held June 10 if no candidate gets more than half the votes in either the Democratic or Republican primaries.

In Idaho, Mrs. Hansen, 52, is considered a longshot to win the GOP nomination against four opponents for the 2nd District seat now held by Democrat Richard Stallings.

Her husband, George Hansen, had held the seat for seven terms until he was convicted of filing false financial disclosure reports. He lost in 1984 to Stallings by 170 votes. Hansen was reprimanded by his House colleagues and faces a prison term of five to 15 months, but he has remained free on appeal.

An early GOP straw poll gave the edge in the race to Mel Richardson, 58, an Idaho Falls broadcaster. Others in the field are Dan Adamson, defeated in the GOP primary by Hansen two years ago, and two Republican state legislators, Sen. Dane Watkins and Rep. J.F. Chadband.

Of the 105 women elected to the House throughout history 34 were widows of congressmen — including five still serving: Louisiana's Lindy Boggs, Illinois' Cardiss Collins, Maryland's Beverly Byron, California's Sala Burton and Louisiana's Catherine Long, all Democrats.

Some women have failed at the effort in recent years. Kathryn McDonald, widow of Georgia Democrat Larry McDonald, lost a 1983 special election for the seat he had held until he died when a Soviet fighter shot down a South Korean airliner. In Alaska in 1984, Democrat Margaret Begich was defeated by Republican Rep. Donald E. Young, who had won a 1973 special election to fill a vacancy caused by the death of her husband, Democratic Rep. Nick Begich.

Begich was killed when a plane on which he and then-House Majority Leader Hale Boggs, D-La., Mrs. Boggs' husband, were passengers crashed on a flight over Alaska. Mrs. Begich is running again this year.

In Kentucky, Republican leaders endorsed attorney Jackson M. Andrews for the Senate race after Carl W. Brown, a former commissioner in Jefferson County and winner of a congressional primary four years ago, was indicted in February on a charge of giving a handgun to a convicted felon.

Brown pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and was placed on probation. He withdrew from the Senate race, but his name appears on the primary ballot today.

Two perennial candidates are also on the ballot, Tommy Klein and Thurman Jerome Hamlin.

'Hands' organizers now have to collect pledges

Associated Press

Organizers of the Hands Across America human chain say they will spend the summer collecting the money pledged by hand-holders to provide food and shelter for the needy.

Organizers of the event stuck to their target of $50 million or more to help the hungry and homeless but said it may take all summer to count donations.

"The money raised served the least important goal," chief organizer Ken Kragen said in New York on Monday. Heightened awareness about the plight of the needy was the chief goal, he said.

"Suddenly hunger and homelessness have become a major issue in this country," he said.

Up to 7 million people joined Hands Across America's fragmented chain Sunday as it stretched across the nation.

Organizers estimated more than 4.9 million Americans clasped hands in the line from California to New York on Sunday, while millions more participated in related events in states off the 16-state route.

Kragen said a staffer told him the number of participants overall was between 6 million and 7 million. Spokeswoman Susan Suss said Bermuda, Japan, Canada, South Korea and West Germany had events.

Today, the approximately 350 staff workers of Hands Across America begin the task of counting and collecting money pledged. Grants will be awarded in September, said Roger Carrick, California director for Hands.

In California, an estimated 400,000 to 450,000 people participated, raising an estimated $2 million to $3 million, Carrick said. In Pennsylvania, about 570,900 people joined hands, state coordinator Natasha Green said at a news conference in Pittsburgh Monday. She estimated $5 million to $7 million may have been raised in the state.

No firm figures on money will be available for months, organizers said, because in addition to cash and pledges received before the event, at least 5 million envelopes for contributions were distributed Sunday.

"We would have to have gross earnings of about $60 million to net $50 million," said Marty Rogol, executive director of USA for Africa, which staged the event. "Are we halfway there? I don't know. Are we going to reach our goal by mid- to late-summer? Probably."

A toll-free number for pledges will remain in operation through the end of this year, Rogol said.

What really matters, Kragen said, is whether participants in Sunday's event become more active in trying to help America's impoverished.

He suggested volunteering with local agencies helping the poor and lobbying government officials to give priority to hunger and homelessness.

There were gaps large and small throughout the 4,152-mile line, especially in the deserts of the Southwest and even in urban areas once thought certain to be full.

Report: Seas could rise 11 feet in next century

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The world's oceans could rise 2 feet to 11 feet in the next 100 years, ravaging coastlines worldwide and contaminating drinking water supplies with salt water, researchers say.

A sea level rise of as little as 2.4 feet at the mouth of the Delaware could contaminate Philadelphia's drinking water, said James Titus, spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency, which issued a report on the threat Monday.

He released the report during the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, at a symposium on rises in sea level.

John Kraft, a geologist at the University of Delaware, reported that the Delaware coastline north of Rehoboth Beach is moving west at about 20 feet a year as erosion carries sand off the beach.

"There is a driving mechanism that we believe to be sea level rise," he said.

Kraft noted that the sea level off Delaware had been rising at about five inches per century until the past 50 to 100 years, when it began rising more than twice as fast, at a rate of some 14 inches per century.

He noted that predictions of sea level rise vary widely, and he said that some experts even believe we are at the peak of a cycle, and that sea levels will begin to drop.

Stephen Leatherman of the University of Maryland noted that the coastline at the resort town of Ocean City, Md., could be pushed back by as much as 89 feet by the year 2000 if high estimates of sea level rise are accurate.

The force behind the increasingly rapid rise in sea level rates is believed to be the so-called greenhouse effect, according to the EPA report.

Increasing concentrations of carbon dioxide and other gases enlarge the atmosphere's ability to retain heat from the sun — as a greenhouse does. The process is expected to raise the Earth's surface temperature by several degrees during the next century.

Carbon dioxide is a byproduct of the burning of coal, oil and other fossil fuels that has gone hand-in-hand with industrialization.

The new EPA report, entitled "Greenhouse Effect, Sea level Rise and Salinity in the Delaware Estuary," noted that estimates of sea level rise in the next century range from 2 feet to 11 feet.

Killing knowledge

When a bomb exploded at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in October 1983, killing 241 Marines, Terry Anderson was there, going through the rubble to get the names of the dead and wounded to tell the people back home. Anderson, the Associated Press' chief Mideast correspondent, was kidnapped by Arab extremists in Beirut in March 1985. He is now a hostage in Lebanon — or, by some reports, dead.

If alive, Anderson is not alone in losing freedom in order to tell the story. Although it isn't commonly known, 85 journalists are now languishing in prisons in 18 countries around the globe. Last year, there were 41 in prison. The offending nations are Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Ethiopia, Israel, Kenya, Lebanon, Libya, Malawi, Morocco, the People's Republic of China, Poland, Singapore, South Africa, the Soviet Union, Syria, Taiwan, Turkey and Vietnam.

Even more regrettable, the death count of journalists is mounting: 265 journalists have been killed in the past 10 years. We know of the violence in global hot spots because of the work of reporters. But few know that 93 journalists were killed in Argentina, 47 in Guatemala, 21 in El Salvador and 19 in the Philippines.

Behind its wall of propaganda, Vietnam is now brainwashing 27 Vietnamese journalists in re-education camps. Among them is Ho Van Don, once vice president of the International Federation of Journalists.

There are others. Boris Chernykh is one of 10 Soviet journalists now in prison. His crime: writing book reviews.

Fidel Castro has kept Cuban journalists Fernando Rivas Porta and Luis Rodriguez Rodriguez imprisoned for more than 20 years.

While journalists recognize and fully accept the dangers of their chosen profession, that doesn't mean atrocities perpetrated against them should be overlooked or regarded casually. Attacks against journalists are attacks against readers, viewers and listeners. When the reporter is silenced or the photographer murdered, the public is made deaf and blind. We must not remain silent as those who bring us the news are murdered, tortured, kidnapped, brainwashed and imprisoned.

Speaking out against such atrocities is the first step toward stopping those acts.

Another View:

Mexico's drug woes

Mexico is a proud country beset by humbling problems. How best to confront its lapses in drug enforcement? For more than a year the Reagan administration has played bad cop, good cop, sending some officials to condemn Mexican corruption and others to engage in soothing negotiations. That's the context in which to assess Washington's most recent, most stinging public assault.

In the 1970s, the United States helped Mexico, then the main source of America's heroin and marijuana imports, mount an exemplary effort to eradicate marijuana and opium poppy crops. As a result, the Mexican share of America's marijuana imports shrank to just 4 percent by 1981, while its heroin share declined to 33 percent in 1983. But when falling oil prices produced a new economic crisis in Mexico, the power of drug money renewed the erosion of enforcement. Drug exports are rising again; Mexican marijuana has increased to a 32 percent share of the American market, and Mexico's heavily armed narcotraficantes contemptuously parade their wealth and lawlessness.

Early last year, American officials began a blunt public attack on the Mexican drug trade and corruption. At the same time, however, Attorney General Edwin Meese held a series of quiet meetings with his Mexican counterpart, Sergio Garcia Ramirez, obtaining useful agreements to revive the eradication program. At Cancun last month, for example, the Mexicans agreed to overcome their worries about sovereignty enough to let Americans help check on the marijuana and poppy crop spraying. They also agreed to a better system for sharing intelligence data. Public criticism, the administration suggests, made the Mexicans more inclined to cooperate in these private talks.

This week, the administration renewed the publicity assault. William von Raab, the head of the U.S. Customs Service, denounced the Mexican drug traffic as "a horror story, increasing logarithmically" and charged that "Mexico is doing nothing about it." In a hearing of a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee chaired by Jesse Helms, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams declared that the traffickers' influence in the Mexican government was becoming so strong it will soon be "hard or impossible to root out." Von Raab even hinted that relatives of President de la Madrid were among the drug sellers.

Other administration officials were quick to note that this was just more bad-cop snarling. But did the bullying this time go so far as to make it harder for de la Madrid to cooperate? The next meeting between Meese and Garcia Ramirez will tell. Until then, the administration might review its tactics and remember that the aim of the game is not to indulge even justified rage, but to let the good cop's cajoling bear fruit.

'Serve all' bill has bankers choking

WASHINGTON — Except for being richer, bankers are like most Americans: They want the government to butt out of their business — unless they need the government's help.

Jack Anderson

Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, has stirred outrage in bank boardrooms across the country with her quixotic notion that bankers owe the general public something in return for the protection they get from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

"If the federal government is going to (insure banks) it has a right to expect that these institutions will serve all consumers, no matter how much or how little they have to deposit," Oakar told our associate Stewart Harris.

This dangerously populist idea is anathema to the bankers, of course. They'd much prefer to deal only with fellow members of the Millionaires Club — or at least charge the troublesome peasants hefty fees for the bother of handling their piddling accounts.

That's why the bankers are choking on their panatelas over Oakar's proposed Financial Services Access Act, now before the House Banking Committee. The bill would require federally insured banks to offer accounts with no service charges and no minimum-balance requirement to customers with less than $1,000 in their accounts; these customers would get 10 free transactions per month.

The bill would also nip in the bud a particularly nasty bit of discrimination being adopted by many banks: relegating small depositors to automatic teller machines and reserving personalized services for wealthy patrons.

The bankers claim the bill represents a return to unnecessary government regulation. Besides, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association said, more than half the banks in the country offer no-frills checking accounts with service charges of $3 a month or less. Another way of putting it, of course, would be that nearly half the banks do not.

The bankers claim they must be left free to carve out their chosen niche in the market, just like the airlines. But Oakar and banking committee chairman Fernand St Germain, D-R.I., see the bankers all racing to carve out the same lucrative niche: affluent customers. At the same time, they are trying to terminate — or "demarket," in the industry's euphemism — small accounts.

Committee investigators have already found some big-name banks that favor high-rollers over hoi polloi. For example:

— Bank of America replaced 120 branch offices with teller machines — at the same time it offered such lagniappes as private meeting rooms, tax shelter plans and $100,000 loans to customers with a net worth of $1 million or more. The bank insists it is still committed to the average saver.

— Wells Fargo Bank of California is being sued by a consumer group, which charges that customers must own a credit card to open an account. The bank says it just requires identification — like a credit card.

— Calling it an "experiment" when it backfired, Citibank in New York ordered many customers with less than $5,000 in their accounts to use teller machines. Criticism forced Citibank to back off, but this pioneering effort at "demarketing" small customers "suggested that behavior patterns can be altered," according to a study by the Research Council of Washington.

The study compiled a Bankers' hit list of least wanted customers: working middle-class consumers struggling to make ends meet and likely to overextend their credit; young families with little upward mobility potential; transients; and those who earn less than $18,000 a year.

RANK HAS ITS PRIVILEGES: When the Pentagon recently finished juggling its list of those who enjoy parking privileges, the Inspector General's office ended up with only 134 free spaces. Beyond that, the slots go for $60 a month. So who was first in line for a coveted free space? Why, Inspector General Joseph Sherick, of course, followed by his deputies, assistants and top senior officials. Only after the panjandrums got the pick of the lots did the handicapped employees get to choose their slots. And even further down the line were those conscientious workers who use vans and carpools to save fuel and money.

Elliott farewell unattended by Reagan

WASHINGTON — Most of the administration's key conservative officials — but not Ronald Reagan — were on hand last Tuesday at a White House farewell party for departing chief presidential speechwriter Bently Elliott.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The insider's guess is that the White House "mice" (chief of staff Donald T. Regan's lieutenants) never alerted the president to the invitation to honor the author of much of Reagan's golden prose the past five years. As for Regan, neither he nor his aides were invited. Relations between them and Elliott had grown increasingly stormy, leading to his departure to become a presidential campaign speechwriter for Rep. Jack Kemp.

A footnote: Joining Elliott on the Kemp campaign team will be another White House refugee, Central American affairs expert Constantine Menges. He was fired from the National Security Council staff the day before the Elliott party, which he attended.

HEINZ'S VARIETY

While President Reagan was pulling out all the stops to sustain his veto of the anti-Saudi arms sale bill, Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania was using his big stick as Republican senatorial campaign chairman to override the veto.

That angered such pro-Israel republicans as Sen. Chic Hecht of Nevada, who used his close ties to the Jewish community to fight for Reagan and the arms sale package. Disgruntled administration insiders suggested that the president cancel his Wednesday dinner speech for Heinz and the Republican congressional dinner here to show his displeasure, but that was out of the question.

While Reagan lobbied his heart out, Heinz was buttonholing Republicans up for re-election, warning them that a vote to sustain the president's veto could cost them the active support of the campaign committee. Heinz intends to redouble his anti-Reagan efforts before the scheduled June 5 override vote.

SOVIET NO GOODNIK

Top American diplomats were aghast at the selection of Yuri Dubinin as the new Soviet ambassador to the U.S., privately describing him as one of the worst envoys in the entire Soviet stable.

While serving for seven years in Spain, Dubinin handled more KGB espionage operations than most Soviet ambassadors do in a lifetime. He was roundly despised throughout Madrid's diplomatic community.

That is producing speculation that Dubinin is only a caretaker here and will be replaced by a higher-quality envoy in the near future. If not that, his assignment here means Mikhail Gorbachev means to retain power in his own hands, working personally with U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman in Moscow.

STOP KEMP CANDIDATE

Former Gov. Pierre du Pont of Delaware has described himself to key Eastern Seaboard Republicans as the only man capable of stopping Rep. Jack Kemp for the presidential nomination if Vice President George Bush falters.

Du Pont has been busy on the telephone talking politics with a variety of party notables, including former President Richard M. Nixon. The spurt of activity probably precedes an early announcement that would make him the first officially-announced Republican presidential hopeful.

His stop-Kemp talk came as a shock to the congressman's advisers, who had come to look on du Pont as a fellow supply-side conservative. The former governor's political operatives had been telling their Kemp counterparts that du Pont, bearing aloft the supply side banner, stood ready to combat Bush for the nomination should Kemp falter.

GOV. BALDRIDGE?

An unexpectedly strong showing in last Tuesday's town caucuses by a conservative seeking the Republican nomination for governor of Connecticut brought a hurried s.o.s. from the state party leadership to Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige in Washington.

The caucuses were designed to help the since abandoned gubernatorial ambitions of liberal Sen. Lowell Weicker but instead favored conservative former state senator Gerald Labriola. Panicked, the Connecticut GOP hierarchy dispatched a plea to Baldrige to consider becoming the "unity" candidate. Baldrige has been saying no to such entreaties for a year, and he told us his answer has not changed.

Baldrige is a multimillionaire industrialist without previous experience running for public office. However, he has been active nationally in the the party's moderate wing for a long time, including support for the presidential campaigns of William Scranton in 1964 and George Bush in 1980.

CHARLEY REESE

It's too early to praise Packwood's reform

Tax reform at this point is nothing more than a nibble on a bottom-fisherman's line. We don't know yet if we will catch the fish and we won't know what kind of fish it is until we do catch it.

Charley Reese

The bill passed by Sen. Bob Packwood's Senate Finance Committee must win Senate approval. It can be either killed or greatly modified in that process. Then, if it passes, it will go to a conference committee where a few senators and a few House members will reconcile the differences between the Senate and House versions of tax reform.

Here again, if no agreement is reached tax reform can be either killed or greatly modified. Assuming the conference committee produces a bill, then it has to go back to both the Senate and the House for a vote before it makes it to the president's desk and, absent a veto, becomes law.

There are plenty of places for ambushes between a Senate Finance Committee vote and a president's signature.

Moreover, there is more fine print in the present Senate bill, which is voluminous, than in a Lloyd's of London life insurance policy on a Latin American dictator. It is never wise, when the subject is legislation, to celebrate until you've read the fine print.

For that reason, I will withhold knighting Packwood as a slayer of lobbyists. He may deserve only the award for getting rid of a hot potato. It apparently dawned on Packwood that tax reform, which a popular president has made his number one domestic priority, was about to die on his doorstep. What the chairman of the Finance Committee may have told his committee members is: Hey, guys, let's get this thing off our backs. Once we get a bill out of our committee, then what happens to it isn't our fault.

Forgive me for sounding cynical, but I have observed the legislative process so long that the Pollyanna glow has long since faded. Many a legislator has voted for something in committee he was hoping would be gutted or killed on the floor. Besides, anybody who accepts $7,500 for a speech, as Packwood has done, is no idealist.

It's true that tax reform is needed and it's also true that it would be difficult, though not impossible, to produce a bill worse than the present law, which is grossly unfair to working men and women.

Still, you should not delude yourself. Congress, like any other legislative body, is similar to a stock exchange. There is always a lot of trading going on. There are men who have principles, men who have their hands out, and men who have their ears to the ground and their wetted fingers in the air. The best hope for tax reform is that a majority will see it as politically expedient to give the taxpayers a break.

The question then becomes, will they give us a real break or will they attempt to simulate giving us a break with a lot of rhetoric that does not conform to the fine print?

Ideally, a tax code should be designed solely to raise revenue, but the fashion has been to use the tax code as an instrument of social engineering — as an incentive to do some things and a dis-incentive to do other things. That's why it's so complex. Raising revenue is simple; social engineering is not.

Social engineering is also doomed to failure, for the ingenuity of a few congressmen and senators is no match for the ingenuity of 240 million Americans. No matter what the social engineers want Americans to do, a majority of them will figure out a way to do what they perceive to be in their own best interest.

Sensible and principled politicians know that a free people have to be governed with a light hand. The heavy-handed approach to governing people won't work without the police state. If you aren't willing to kill and terrorize people into obedience — a la communist governments — then you might as well recognize there are limits to what a government can do.

The founders of this country realized that. They gave us laissez faire — very limited government — by design. It is the only workable government for a free people. The New Deal liberals tried to abandon laissez faire without imposing a police state. It didn't work. It just created an army of bureaucrats, lobbyists and scofflaws, a weaker economy, and a mountain of debt.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, May 27, the 147th day of 1986. There are 218 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on May 27, 1936, the Cunard liner Queen Mary, sister ship of the Queen Elizabeth, left England on its maiden voyage. The liner was retired in 1967 and today is a tourist attraction in Long Beach, Calif.

On this date:

In 1647, the first recorded execution of a "witch" took place in Massachusetts.

In 1929, aviator Charles Lindbergh married Anne Spencer Morrow in Englewood, N.J.

In 1935, the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the National Industrial Recovery Act.

In 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge, spanning San Francisco Bay, was opened.

In 1941, the German battleship Bismarck was sunk by the British navy off France, with a loss of 2,300 lives.

In 1964, Jawaharlal Nehru, independent India's first prime minister, died.

Ten years ago: U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said Syria had agreed to extend the United Nations observer force in the Golan Heights for another six months.

Five years ago: President Reagan told the graduating class of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point that America's "era of self-doubt" had given way to "a hunger to once again be proud."

One year ago: Spend a Buck, the Kentucky Derby winner who broke tradition by skipping the Preakness, won the Jersey Derby and collected $2.6 million, the richest paycheck in horseracing.

Today's birthdays: Actor Vincent Price is 75. Novelist Herman Wouk is 71. Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is 68. Actor Christopher Lee is 64. Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is 63. Actress Lee Meriwether is 51. Actor Louis Gossett Jr. is 50. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., is 42. Actor Todd Bridges is 21.

Gypsies want recognition of those who died in death camps

CHICAGO (AP) — More than 700 Gypsies devoted their Memorial Day weekend to electing delegates to advise the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council in making sure the 500,000 Gypsies who died in Nazi concentration camps are not forgotten.

James Marks, a Gypsy leader from Spokane, Wash., said that while Jewish deaths in the World War II camps are remembered, the extermination of more than half a million Gypsies is not.

"We want to have our story told," Marks said. "We are entitled to it.

"We still mourn our dead," he added. "They should have a little respect and a little recognition."

In 1980, the 66-member council was created by then-President Jimmy Carter. Its purpose is to plan permanent memorials to the victims of Nazi death camps.

President Reagan, who now would make any appointments, has expressed sympathy for the Gypsy losses and said he would consider appointing Gypsies to vacant council seats.

But none have been appointed yet, and a decision on whether Gypsies will get any of the five seats they are seeking won't be made until September, Marks said.

Condo group to drop suit against vet who wants to fly flag on patio

MARINA DEL REY, Calif. (AP) — An elderly veteran who vows never to take down the American flag he is flying on his patio despite the orders of his condominium association, may have won his point.

More than 70 people have called retired Army Capt. James Meltzer and offered support and Al Ruh, the secretary of the association, said Monday that he will ask his fellow board members to drop a pending lawsuit.

"I am totally in favor of seeing that flagpole stand," said Ruh, secretary of the Villa San Remo Homeowners Association. "I think the suit should be dropped. I don't know how the others feel. I will propose that we drop it."

Meltzer, a decorated World War II veteran, erected his flag last July and the association told him the flagpole violated condominium rules and he had to take it down.

He refused, the association filed suit and the case drew wide publicity.

"Attorneys called me up, willing to take this case not on a contingency basis but for nothing," Meltzer said Monday.

Several condo owners at Villa San Remo flew flags on Memorial Day.

Association members said the flag is not the issue — it's the pole Meltzer erected in his enclosed patio behind three taller pine trees.

"I'm not against the flag," board president Henry Cordova said. "I'm flying the flag in front of my place right now. It covered my brother's grave on Corregidor.

"We just don't want to set a precedent," Cordova said. "He (Meltzer) never asked permission."

The patio is land owned in common by Meltzer and his neighbors but dedicated for his use. He may put furniture there, but nothing permanent without permission, according to association rules.

Home phone service will cost $1 more a month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost to consumers of having a phone in their homes will be $1 more each month starting Sunday.

The money reimburses telephone companies for part of the several dollars they spend monthly for the copper wire that runs from the telephone central office to customers' homes.

Consumers have been paying a $1-a-month fee per phone line for the past year. Now the charge will be $2.

The additional $1 charge will enable long-distance companies to pay less for their connections to the central office, where out-of-town calls are switched to individual home and business phone circuits.

The charge, ordered by the Federal Communications Commission, will show up on monthly bills as the "federal subscriber line charge."

Teen spelunker rescued

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A teen-age cave explorer rescued seven hours after he slipped down a 30-foot cave shaft was hospitalized in stable condition today, authorities said.

About 50 sheriff's deputies, civil defense workers and volunteers were hampered by waste-deep water and mud but managed to pull Robert Scott Allen from the cave about 9 p.m. Monday, said Tony Barrett, chief sheriff's deputy in Bedford County.

Allen, 18, suffered a head laceration and leg injuries but had no broken bones, said Paul Williams, a spokesman for Bedford County Hospital.

"He was up inside the cave with a couple of friends who said he slipped and fell down about a 30-foot shaft," Williams said. "...It looks like he's going to be all right."

Rescuers used a basket tied to a rope to pull Allen out after an earlier attempt failed when a sharp rock snapped a rope, he said.

Las Cruces climber dies

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — A Las Cruces teen-ager was killed while climbing in the Dona Ana Mountains, becoming the third climber in the state to die during the last two months, police said.

The coordinator of Dona Ana County Search and Rescue, Henry Diaz, said Tracy MacLaughlin, 17, was killed Sunday when he slipped and fell while climbing the east side of the mountains north of Las Cruces.

Diaz said the combined efforts of Search and Rescue, the Southwest Mountaineers and a search and rescue team from Alamogordo recovered the body shortly before 6 a.m. today.

Diaz said McLaughlin fell about 70 feet to his death. He had been mountain climbing with three friends, Diaz said.

Tax debate may be on TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is likely to begin debate early next week on proposals to overhaul the tax system, and for the first time constituents will be watching on television.

"This historic breakthrough could be the catalyst for real action," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

If cable companies cooperate, as expected, as many as 5 million people will be able to watch the debate on several hundred cable systems carrying the Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network.

"It's going to help tremendously," said Minzenmayer, who also predicted cattle prices will rise slighty as the result of the much needed moisture.

Vernon Chandler, a cotton farmer in Warfield, said the .95 of an inch he received won't be enough to help him get into his dryland fields. "I have a little patch that I've irrigated. If I get another inch or so, I'll be able to start on my dry land," he said.

Sharon Graham, whose husband Roy farms on Cloverdale Road, said the 2-inch rain they received will help them to get into their fields within a day or two.

"It's been great and it really helped," she said. "It'll do us for awhile until we get some cotton up. Then we'll need more."

The weather service says tonight should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Lows are expected to be in the mid 50s and winds from the east at 5 to 15 mph.

Wednesday is expected to be partly cloudy, and forecasters are calling for a 20 percent chance of afternoon showers and thunderstorms. Highs in the low 80s are expected and winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph.

Monday's high of 77 was 23 degrees cooler than the record high of 100, set in 1945. The overnight low of 55 was 7 degrees warmer than the record low of 48, set in 1947.

STATE

Another night of severe thunderstorms plagued Texas, with hail and wind damage reported in the Midland-Odessa area of West Texas and in the Rio Grande Valley.

Heavy rains fell throughout the Texas hill country early today.

Hail three-quarters of an inch wide was reported east of McAllen, and strong winds at Elsa — between McAllen and Harlingen — destroyed a shed and overturned a trailer.

Strong thunderstorms around the Midland-Odessa area last night produced marble-size hail and winds gusting to 55 mph.

Heavy rains along with winds of up to 60 mph were reported farther south, at Big Lake.

NATION

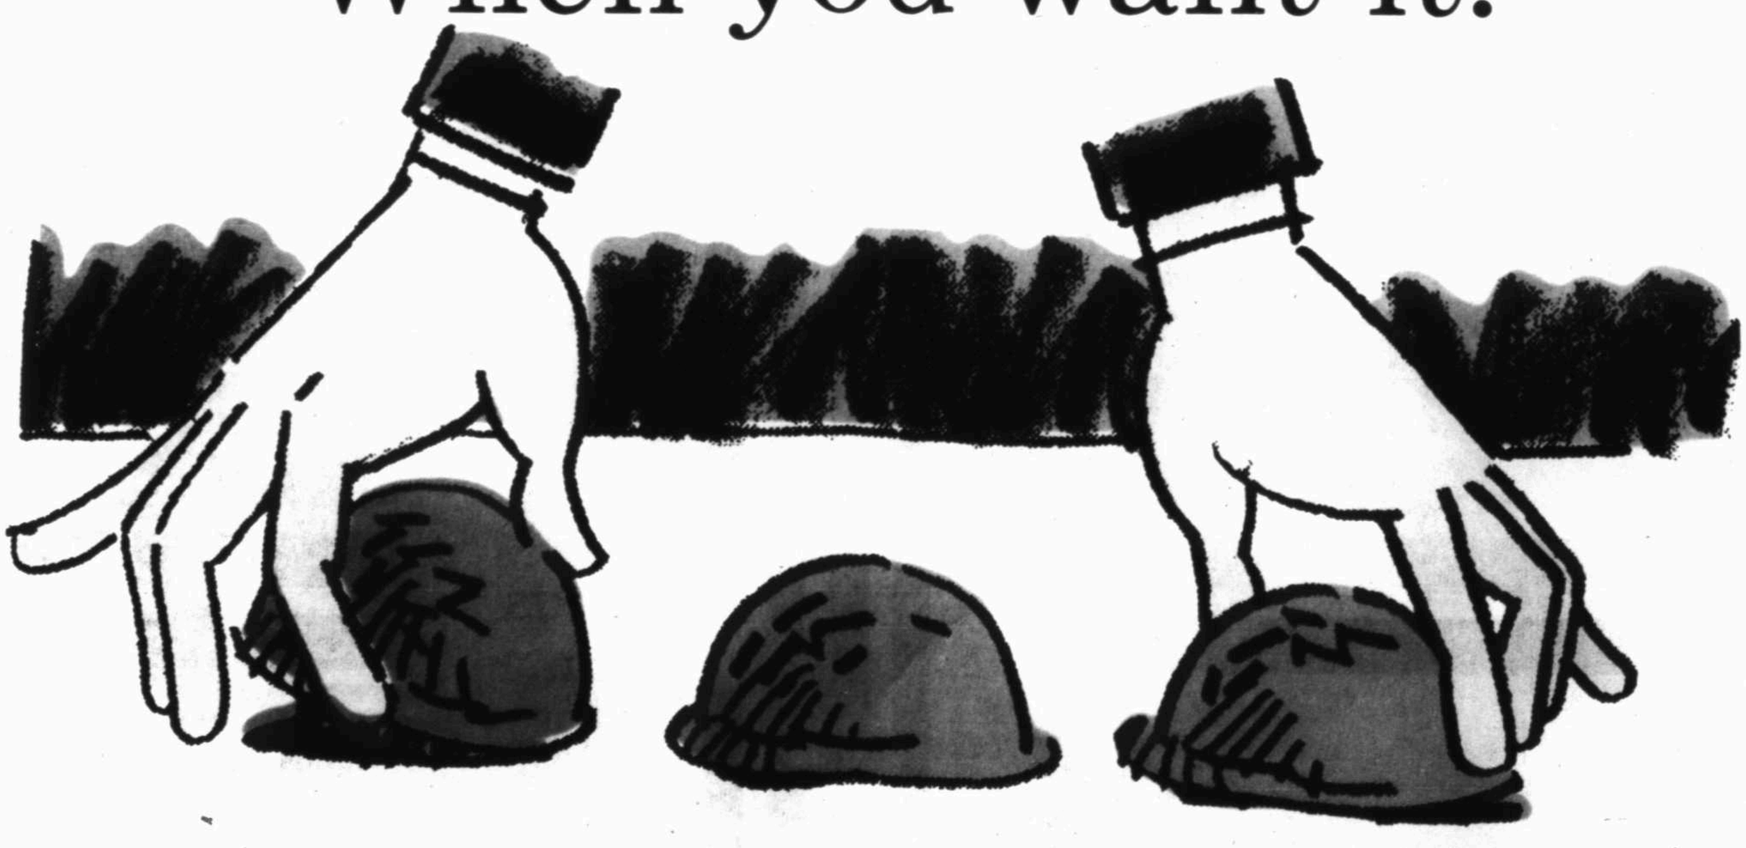

High winds cut through Utah canyons today and a large low pressure over Kansas scattered showers and thunderstorms into the Deep South. Plains and Midwest.

Thunderstorms were heavy in sections of northeast Georgia and southwest Texas.

Fair weather prevailed in the Northeast and from the northern Rockies through California and the Southwest. However, rain was scattered across the Pacific Northwest.

Celtics' wee men snuff Rockets' flame

Twin Towers see pine time

BOSTON (AP) — The big men set the stage and the little men stole the spotlight.

Boston, which got strong performances from its frontcourt in the first half and its backcourt in the second half, shut down two of Houston's top scorers and rode a team effort to a quick start in the NBA championship series.

"Anyone on this team can give us a spark and that's why we are so tough to play against," Celtics' center Bill Walton said after Monday's 112-100 victory over the Rockets in the opener of the best-of-seven final.

"We are destined to do better things," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said, "but there are better teams to try to do it against than Boston."

THE CELTICS' 29th victory in their last 32 games and 39th in a row at home resulted from a balanced attack and Houston's foul trouble.

Ralph Sampson picked up his third foul 4:45 into the game and didn't play again in the first half. Akeem Olajuwon, the other half of the Rockets' Twin Towers, missed the rest of the third quarter after picking up his fourth foul with 5:21 left in the period and his fifth 32 seconds later.

Boston led 61-59 at halftime. But with Dennis Johnson scoring 12 points and his backcourt mate, Danny Ainge, adding 10, the Celtics outscored Houston 30-17 in the third quarter and took a 91-76 lead that never was threatened.

"They gave DJ and myself the open shots," Ainge said. "We forced that strategy by the Rockets because Akeem and Ralph picked up a lot of fouls trying to cover our inside guys one-on-one."

That defense failed.

In the first half, Boston's centers and forwards — Robert Parish, Kevin McHale, Larry Bird and Walton — combined for 54 points. Johnson and Ainge had just seven.

"We have a lot of strength up front and that's where we push the ball," Johnson said.

In the second half, with the Rockets double-teaming the big men, Johnson and Ainge scored 30 points while the frontcourt managed 21.

"We have good ball movement and find the open man," Johnson added.

Houston, meanwhile, suffered from struggling players in both the frontcourt and backcourt. The 7-foot-4 Sampson, who went scoreless in one game this season, hit only one of his 13 shots and finished with two points and four turnovers. Guard Lewis Lloyd, who averaged 14.8 points per game in the semifinals against the Los Angeles Lakers, made just two of five shots and scored four points.

"We beat ourselves. We had a bad third quarter and they just played good," Lloyd said. "We've got to respect them, but not on the court."

Houston committed six of its 16 turnovers in the third quarter and Boston had 11 of its 15 steals in the second half as the Celtics' excellent defense and the Rockets' carelessness broke the game open.

"If our defense works like it did in the third and fourth period, we don't have to shoot well to win," Bird said. "When we started to play the tough defense, we got a lot of easy baskets."

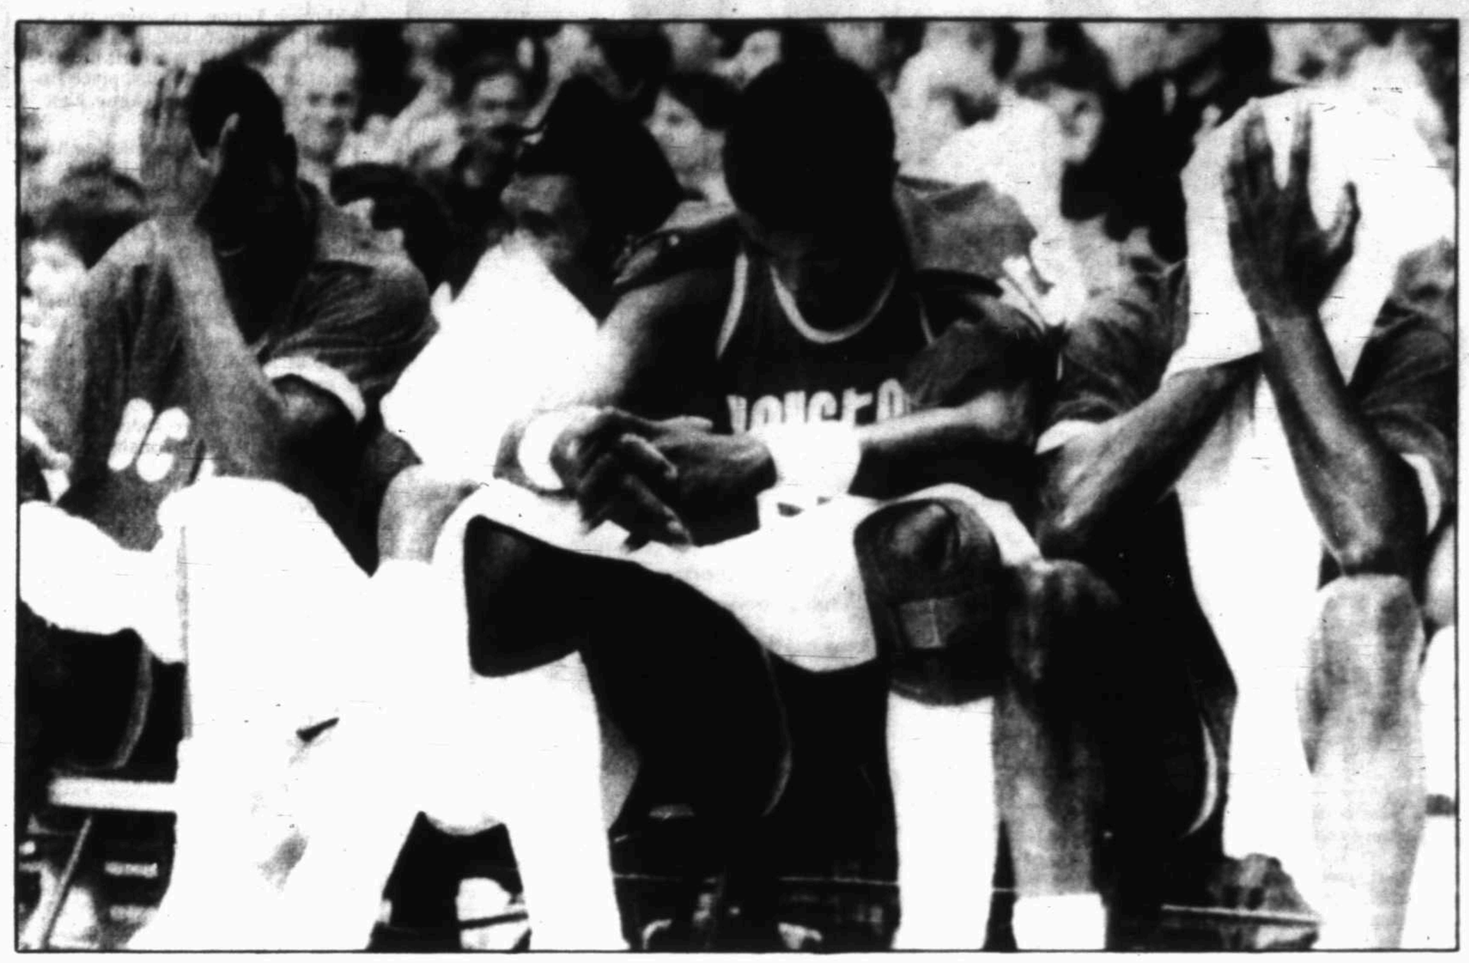

BOSTON, 48-1 at home this season, can add to that record in Thursday night's second game before the series moves to Houston for games next Sunday, Tuesday and, if necessary, the following Thursday.

Boston has won three consecutive playoff games over Houston, starting with the last two in 1981 in the Rockets' only other final appearance, won by the Celtics 4-2.

The Celtics' top scorers Monday included three players from that series — Parish with 23 points, and McHale and Bird with 21 each. Bird added 13 assists. Johnson scored 19 points and Ainge 18.

Olajuwon led Houston with 33 points, including 25 in the first half. Rodney McCray scored 20 and Robert Reid 16.

With Sampson or Olajuwon on the bench, Boston could concentrate on defending against just one big man. When the two played in the second half, their aggressiveness was restricted by a fear of fouling. And Boston exploited that.

Indy moves to Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A wet blanket is draped over the Indianapolis 500 today, an American spectacle awash in Midwestern rain and pushed back an unprecedented six days to Saturday.

Two and one-half miles of asphalt stand depressingly devoid of cars today after a second day's postponement. Memorial Day weekend has come and gone without one of its traditional fixtures. Left behind, in and around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, were tons of debris and acres of mud. And silence.

There has been no green flag signaling the start of the race, no checkered flag signaling victory — only the white flag of surrender to weather so unpredictable at the start, so frustratingly predictable at the end.

THOUSANDS OF spectators have returned home. Hundreds of track workers have returned to their regular jobs. And the forecast called for a 50 percent chance of rain returning to the speedway today, plus a chance of rain Wednesday and Thursday.

In 1973 it took three days to get the crash-started, rain-finished race completed. Never before or since in the 75-year history of this place has it taken longer than that.

At 3:10 p.m. EST Monday, about three hours after the rescheduled start of the race, Bill York, a track spokesman, said speedway officials had decided to postpone it for a second day in a row and, because of the lack of a favorable forecast, had decided to hold off on another rescheduling announcement.

It left everyone at a loss, particularly the drivers.

"You either make your decision or you don't," Al Unser Jr. said. "If they have that much of a question about tomorrow's weather, they should just make it Saturday."

About 3½ hours later, they did, speedway publicity director Al Bloemker making the announcement and saying as well that the Miller American 200, an Indy-car race in Milwaukee originally set for Sunday, June 1, had been rescheduled for June 8.

The volunteers and track personnel who have weekday jobs can return to the speedway on Saturday. So can a respectable crowd.

And so can ABC. The network's grand experiment, live nationwide televised coverage of the race, would have been a casualty of the Indiana downpour had the race been run today, or any other day before Saturday. America would have seen it on videotape, long after the excitement had subsided.

Bloemker said there almost certainly will not be any driver practice before Saturday's race. "Not that I know of; I doubt it. I don't see why it should be" a dangerous situation, Bloemker said.

Even before the formal announcement, Bobby Rahal said he thought it would be wise if the other drivers got a warmup session "just to give everybody a chance to remember what it's like to drive around here at 200-and-some-odd miles an hour, not just put us in here cold."

THEY LAST drove here Thursday. Their qualified cars must remain here, but they can go to Milwaukee or elsewhere to practice if they wish.

Bloemker said "it was a speedway decision" to reschedule the race for Saturday and insisted ABC had no input. "We've got bad weather conditions for the next two or three days and we wanted to take a better chance on good weather conditions for the race."

Danny Sullivan, the defending champion, said it was "basically the right decision. I would have hated to see us start the race and then have it stopped after a couple of hundred miles. Nobody wants to go through that. This is the Indianapolis 500."

"It's better to wait until Saturday. Now they'll have a chance for a better crowd and a chance to clean up this place and make it better for everybody."

When the 1973 race was finally run — and won by Gordon Johncock in a rain-shortened 332½ miles — the speedway gates were opened to let everyone in free of charge. Only about 35,000 fans, less than one-tenth the race-day norm, accepted the invitation.

Perhaps that many were in attendance Monday to watch each other, the garbage, the mud and not much of anything else.

At least on Sunday, they got a glimpse of the 33 low-slung racers engineered to shriek around the track at better than 200 mph. The cars got as close as the pits before the day's second downpour washed away the race.

Angels capture first game

Transmitter wins second game

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It was supposed to be a doubleheader followed by fireworks. But the fireworks wouldn't wait.

After Midland beat Arkansas in the first game 3-0 on the combined five-hit pitching of Vance Lovelace and Terry Clark, the teams got through a half inning of the second game when the first loud explosion of the evening was heard.

It was a blown transmitter that knocked out the Angels Stadium lights and left the crowd in twilight, 8 p.m. to 9 p.m., when the Angels gave up on attempts to restore the lights and the game was called.

By this time it was reasonably dark, and the big crowd was becoming impatient for the fireworks show.

As a result, the Travelers and Angels will play doubleheaders tonight, Wednesday and Thursday, all beginning at 6 p.m.

Ironically, the P.A. system was out of order the entire first game and just before the start of the nightcap, the P.A. was declared ready-and-able only to have the lights fail.

However, the one game the fans did see was a dandy matching a couple of lefthanders who were first round draft choices on the mound in the opening of the seven-game series that produced a rare Angel Stadium shutout.

LOVELACE, who began the season as a relief pitcher, got the nod over Arkansas' Joe Magrane, 6-2, who was the St. Louis Cardinals' No. 1 draft pick last year out of the University of Arizona.

Magrane pitched well enough to win, but Lovelace, with a final-two inning assist from Terry Clark, went five innings for his first win of the season. Clark also picked up his first save of the year.

Magrane may be still wondering how he lost. One Midland run scored on a sac fly, another on a wild pitch and a third on a chop back to the pitcher, which isn't in the 17-run tradition of Angel Stadium winners.

John Hotchkiss gave Lovelace the run he needed to win in the second, beating out a carom off the pitcher's glove. The Midland shortstop was running when Mark McLemore singled through the left side as the shortstop broke for the bag. Hotchkiss reached third and scored on Mike Madril's loft to center.

In the fourth, Billie Merrifield singled to left. Glenn Walker rapped into a force at second and James Randall walked. When Rafael Tovar beat out an infield hit, the bases were loaded. That's when Magrane uncorked a run scoring wild pitch and Kevin King's chop back to the box got Randall home from third.

THAT WAS the scoring. Lovelace took care of the non-scoring, allowing just four hits before he retired.

"Joe (Manager Joe Maddon) asked me how I felt after the fifth and took me out before my shoulder began to tighten up. He didn't want to take any chances," he explained his departure while working on a shutout.

For Lovelace, it was an encouraging step forward. "Last season was a struggle," said the Tampa, Fla., native, who split the season between San Antonio and Vero (Florida State League).

"My fastball was moving pretty good and I had good speed on my change up. I had trouble early in the game with my curve, but I got it under control in the later innings," Lovelace said.

A first round draft choice of the Chicago Cubs in 1981, Lovelace was traded to the Los Angeles Dodgers organization in the deal that sent Ron Cey to Chicago. It was recognition of tremendous potential, but Lovelace's progress has been painful, his enemy control.

Monday it was his ally.

"I stayed ahead of the hitters and walked only one." By staying ahead in the count, Lovelace had batters fishing on for balls on the fringe of the strike zone.

THE STRANGE part of Lovelace's season is that he came to Midland as a hard-throwing relief pitcher and was pressed into a starting role as a result of a series of injuries to starters.

"Starting or relieving. It doesn't make that much difference, although when I came here I was looking forward to relieving. Then came the injuries and Joe said I was best suited to move into a starting role," said Lovelace. "He told me not to worry if I had a couple of bad outings. His confidence in me has helped."

Joyner slams 16th homer

Texas Rangers still in first place

Associated Press

California Angels rookie Wally Joyner keeps finding out more about American League pitchers, while they keep learning about him. Sometimes, they learn too late.

Joyner hit his major league-leading 16th homer of the season, a two-run shot with two outs in the ninth inning Monday that rallied the Angels past the New York Yankees 8-7.

The victory broke California's five-game losing streak and ended New York's five-game winning string.

New York relief ace Dave Righetti retired the first two California batters in the ninth before Brian Downing singled. Joyner, after fouling off a slider by Righetti, hit another slider into the right-field seats at Yankee Stadium.

"I don't know him really well," said Righetti, 4-2. "I threw him two hard breaking balls. Obviously, the second one hung up there a long time."

Joyner said both pitches from Righetti were in the same spot.

"I just corrected my swing and I got my bat head out there," he said.

Joyner tied Oakland rookie Jose Canseco for the major-league RBI lead with 41 as the Angels managed to avert a four-game sweep at Yankee Stadium.

"This takes a lot of the sting out of an ugly four days," Angels Manager Gene Mauch said. "The thing I like about Wally, he functions as well in the ninth as he does in the first."

The Yankees seemed ready to pull out another victory when Don Mattingly blooped an RBI single in the eighth inning that broke a 6-6 tie. But this time, the Angels rallied.

"It was as if destiny wasn't on our side," Downing said. "It kind of gets to you after a while because we couldn't step on them and keep them down when we did get a lead. They simply wouldn't stay down. At least we grabbed this game."

Mike Easler's three-run homer gave the Yankees a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Ron Hassey's two-run homer in the seventh lifted New York into a 6-6 tie.

California starter Mike Witt, 4-4, who struggled but won. He gave up seven runs on 10 hits in 8⅓ innings, and Terry Forster got the last two outs for his first AL save since 1976.

"It was like a heavyweight championship fight," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "You get knocked down, catch your breath and come up swinging again. It was like that every game of this series."

Despite the victory, some of the Angels' frustration lingered.

After Joyner homered in the ninth, Reggie Jackson was ejected by home-plate umpire Al Clark for arguing a strike call. Jackson was restrained by Mauch and two coaches, but still flung his helmet in Clark's direction.

Rangers 7, White Sox 2

Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out in 10 of his previous 12 plate appearances, drove in three runs with a homer and triple and Gary Ward also had three RBIs with a single and double.

After striking out his first trip against former Ranger Dave Schmidt, Incaviglia hit his ninth home run of the season in the fourth inning to give host Texas a 1-0 lead.

With the score tied 1-1 and the bases loaded and two out in the fifth, Incaviglia swung at a wild pitch for a strikeout, but made it safely to first and Orlando Mercado scored to make it 2-1. Ward followed with a two-run single. Incaviglia had a two-run triple in the seventh as the Rangers maintained their half-game lead over California in the AL West.

American League

Red Sox 5, Indians 3

Don Baylor hit a two-run homer and Bill Buckner also homered, powering visiting Boston to its eighth victory in the last nine games.

Buckner's solo home run, his fourth, came in the first inning. Baylor connected for his ninth homer in the fourth inning. Both blows came off Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti, 3-5, who had allowed only one home run in his previous 54 innings this year.

Bruce Hurst, 4-3, gave up three runs on seven hits in six innings. He struck out seven and raised his AL-leading total to 84, three more than teammate Roger Clemens. Bob Stanley, the fifth Red Sox pitcher, got his eighth save.

Mariners 7, Orioles 6

Harold Reynolds, batting just .167 since being recalled from the minors two weeks ago, drove in three runs with three hits as Seattle ended Baltimore's five-game winning streak.

Reynolds had an RBI double in the third inning and hit a two-run double with the bases loaded in the sixth. He also stole two bases.

Jim Presley added a two-run homer as host Seattle built a 7-1 lead after six innings against Storm Davis, 4-3.

Mark Langston, 3-4, and Matt Young, who got his first save, withstood the Orioles' 15-hit attack. Mike Young drove in three Baltimore runs with a double and single.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 1

Mark Portugal snapped his personal seven-game winning streak, pitching eight scoreless innings before needing relief help in the ninth, and Kent Hrbek hit two home runs that powered Minnesota.

Portugal, 1-5, took a seven-hit shutout into the ninth, but left after Jesse Barfield's home run, a single and a walk. Portugal won for the first time since Aug. 31.

Hrbek hit a solo homer in the seventh off Toronto starter Doyle Alexander, 3-2, and a two-run shot in the eighth, giving him nine this season.

Kirby Puckett also hit a two-run homer, his 14th. Puckett, who drove in three runs and scored three times, and Mickey Hatcher each had three of the Twins' 13 hits.

Tigers 5, A's 4

Dave Collins, whose double sparked a tying two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning, singled home the winning run in the 10th inning at Tiger Stadium.

Detroit trailed 4-2 entering the ninth, but a single by Lou Whitaker, a double by Collins and Johnny Grubb's two-run double tied it.

In the 10th, Pat Sheridan singled and Tom Brookens walked. After Whitaker bunted into a forceout at third, Collins singled home the winning run.

Willie Hernandez, 2-2, got the victory and Jay Howell, 0-4, took the loss.

Brewers 4, Royals 0

Danny Darwin, making his first start of the season, pitched a four-hitter against a team which traditionally gives him trouble. Darwin entered the game with a 1-6 lifetime record against Kansas City but did not allow a hit until George Brett's two-out double in the fourth. The veteran right-hander struck out five and walked three.

The Brewers nicked Charlie Leibrandt for a run in the first inning when Randy Ready doubled, took third on Cecil Cooper's single and scored on a double by Dale Sveum. Sveum's single triggered a three-run fourth, which included Rob Deer's RBI single.

Tanner finds same Bucs

Astro rookie gets first victory

Associated Press

Chuck Tanner returned to Pittsburgh and found that the Pirates are just as hospitable as they were during the last two seasons.

Although Tanner managed the Pirates for nine years and won a world championship in 1979, he left last October after consecutive last-place finishes in the National League East.

This year, Tanner is piloting the Atlanta Braves, who rallied from a 4-0 deficit Monday with the help of six Pittsburgh errors and beat Pittsburgh 9-4, dropping the Pirates' record at home to 5-15.

"It really didn't make any difference who we were playing," said Tanner, who lives in the Pittsburgh suburb of New Castle. "You want to win every day, no matter who the other team is. I don't want to beat the Pirates any more than I do the Dodgers or the Cardinals or the Mets."

TANNER GOT a mixed reception. When he trotted off the field in the seventh inning after talking to pitcher Paul Assenmacher, he even peered into the stands to see who was booing him.

"It was the same guys who booed Terry Bradshaw and the same guys who boo Pete Rose," he said. "It didn't bother me; it really didn't. You look at all of the problems in the world and you can't let something like that get to you."

The Braves trailed 4-3 but they took advantage of four Pittsburgh errors — two by shortstop Sammy Khalifa — to score five unearned runs in the eighth inning. The rally included Ted Simmons' tie-breaking sacrifice fly and Dale Murphy's two-run single.

"I really didn't know how many errors they made. I was too busy making our moves," Tanner said. "I think our aggressive baserunning led to the runs as much as anything else."

The Pittsburgh fans applauded when home runs by R.J. Reynolds and Tony Pena gave the Pirates a 4-0 lead. But they saved their loudest cheers for former Pirates slugger Willie Stargell, now a Braves coach. He received a 30-second standing ovation in the first inning.

"You knew they weren't going to forget him," Tanner said. "Willie Stargell is a legend in this town. Me? They'll remember me just like they do any other manager — as being horsefeathers when we lost and being great when we won."

Astros 4, Cardinals 1

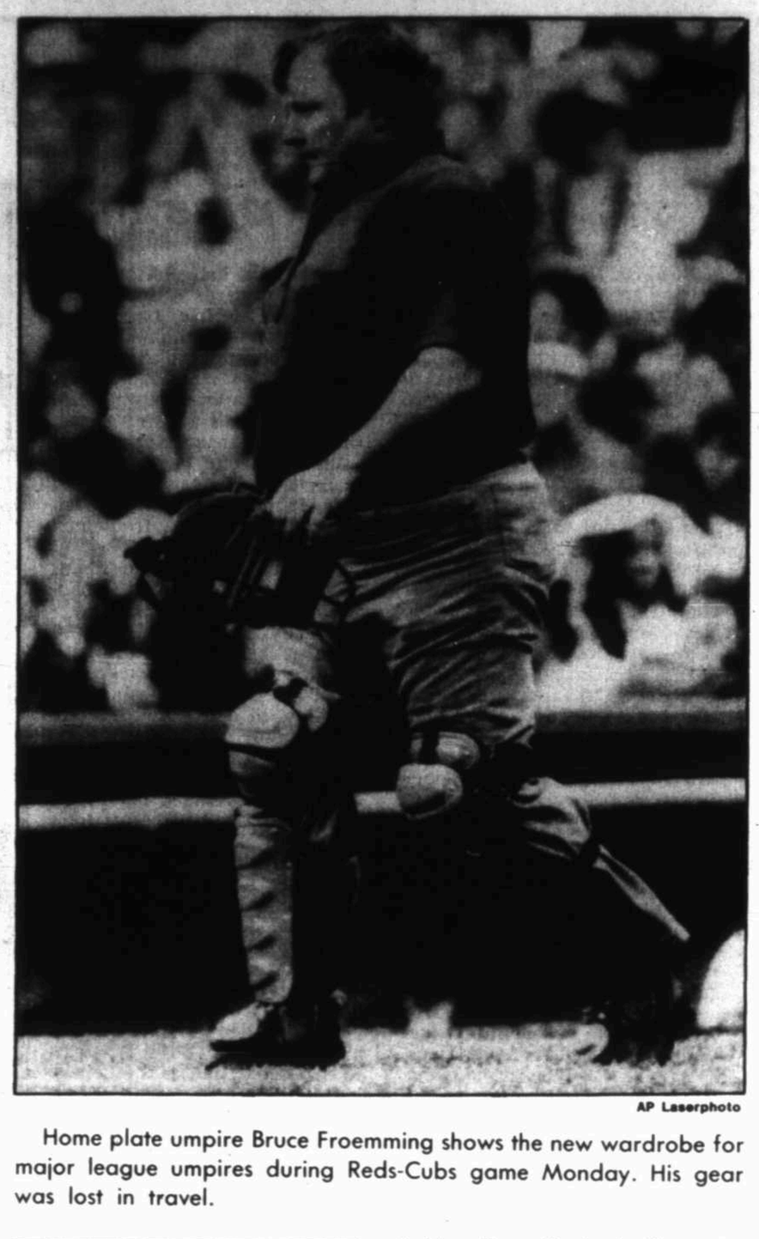

Rookie Jim Deshaies posted his first major-league victory by allowing three hits and striking out 10 in seven innings. Denny Walling drove in two Houston runs with a grounder and a single and Terry Puhl had three hits as the Astros opened a half-game lead over San Francisco in the NL West.

After Deshaies walked Ozzie Smith to start the eighth, Frank DiPino took over and recorded his second save with two hitless innings.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Terry Pendleton singled and Mike Heath doubled him home. Houston went ahead with two runs in the fourth on singles by Puhl and Jose Cruz, Walling's grounder and Glenn Davis' single. The Astros chased Bob Forsch with two more runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Puhl and Walling.

"The difference for me was I started using my slider tonight like I did when I was in spring training," Deshaies said. "I had a good fastball, but I couldn't throw it every pitch. The slider sets up the fastball. Batters start looking for the breaking pitch and don't get what they want.

"What really helped me was about a week ago I threw a simulated game in the Astrodome. (Outfielder) Billy Hatcher came up to me afterward and said, 'Hey, when you throw that slider in and the fastball up, you're really effective.' "

NL Roundup

Cubs 9, Reds 6

Jody Davis hit a three-run homer and pitcher Dennnis Eckersley had a two-run shot as Chicago snapped Cincinnati's four-game winning streak.

Davis' eighth homer of the season capped a five-run first inning against Scott Terry, who made his first major-league start when Mario Soto was unable to loosen his shoulder. Eckersley's homer, his second this season and third of his career, finished a four-run third after Cincinnati tied it with five runs in the second, including Dave Parker's three-run homer.

In the Cubs' third, Durham and Jerry Mumphrey walked and both scored on a double by Manny Trillo before Eckersley homered.

Padres 9, Expos 6

Hot-hitting Kevin McReynolds drove in three runs with a triple and a two-run single and Graig Nettles and Steve Garvey hit consecutive home runs in the ninth inning to back Dave Dravecky's nine-hit pitching. Although Dravecky yielded homers to Andre Dawson and Tim Raines, five of the Montreal runs were unearned as a result of two errors by San Diego third baseman Nettles.

The Padres, who blew a 5-1 lead when the Expos scored four times in the second inning, broke the tie with two runs in the fourth. Tim Flannery and Tony Gwynn opened the inning against rookie reliever Jeff Parrett with a walk and a single, respectively, and advanced on McReynolds' fly ball. Terry Kennedy's grounder scored Flannery with the go-ahead run and Nettles singled Gwynn home.

McReynolds, who is hitting .447 in his last 38 at-bats, tripled home one of the Padres' two runs in the first inning and delivered a two-run single in a three-run second that chased Montreal starter Jay Tibbs.

Nettles has homered in his last four games.

Jackson's Edens hurls two-hitter against Gators

Associated Press

Jackson pitcher Tom Edens tossed a no-hitter for 7⅔ innings before settling for a two-hitter in a 6-1 victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators Monday night in a Texas League game.

The Mets picked up their fifth straight win after two rainouts on their home field.

Edens, 5-2, struck out four and walked two. The loser was Mike Mills, 2-4, who himself carried a no-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the fifth inning.

But in the fifth, rightfielder Jason Felice hit a three-run homer for all the runs Jackson would need. Felice added an RBI single in the eighth inning.

Beaumont's only run came in the fifth inning, as Eric Varoz walked, stole second, went to third on a throwing error and scored on a infield grounder.

Jackson, in third place in the Texas League East, moved to within 1½ games of front-running Arkansas, which was beaten 3-0 by the Midland Angels Monday night.

Beaumont's loss dropped it 1½ games behind West Division-leading El Paso, which knocked off Tulsa 9-7 Monday night. Beaumont and Jackson will play a doubleheader Tuesday night.

Shreveport, the second-place team in the East Division standings, pulled to within a game of Arkansas in the tight West Division by outlasting San Antonio 3-2.

The Captains scored all three runs in the first inning, with run-scoring singles by Charlie Hayes, Greg Litton, and Romy Cricjen.

Ed Puikunas, 3-1, got the win over Andres Mena, 1-7.

Jackson hitting 'scared'

By JOHN NELSON
AP Baseball Writer

The cruel realization had dawned, and Reggie Jackson was scared.

His teammate for the past four years, an almost certain Hall of Famer and seven-time batting champion, Rod Carew, was out of baseball at the age of 40, a free agent whom no one wanted.

"It scared the hell out of me," Jackson said. "Sure did."

Only a few months younger than Carew, Jackson was beginning to realize that he too may be losing control of his own destiny — that he was close to the mortality threshhold baseball imposes.

"I want to play next year, too, but if I'm a bum the rest of the season, I've got to accept my fate," Jackson said. "People always told me it would be a tough emotional change. You accept the physical change. You can't lose weight easily anymore, your body gets old. But in your mind, you stay young.

"The last two years, I've had to try to prepare myself to severe the emotional ties with baseball in 1987."

With his 537 career home runs, sixth on the all-time list, Jackson needs 36 more to pass Harmon Killebrew and join Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth, Willie Mays and Frank Robinson as one of the top five sluggers of all time. Yet he realizes that at this stage of his career, he must constantly prove himself.

Jackson already is two years past what many thought would be his end. Injured and playing in only 116 games, Jackson hit just 14 homers and drove in 49 runs in 1983. But, in 1984, he rebounded with 25 homers, surpassing the 500 career mark, and 81 RBI. And he drove in 85 runs with 27 homers last season.

Playing well again this year (seven homers, 18 RBI and a .319 average in 113 at-bats), Jackson says he feels relaxed and capable of accepting any adjustments that his age and the game demand.

"They had to doubt me last year. I was disappointed that they did, but I was getting pretty close to 40," Jackson, who turned 40 on May 18, said. "I was mad at them, but they had some reasons to doubt. But, hey, give me some credit for being Reggie."

It used to bother Jackson that his eventual role in the American League would be as a designated hitter. Now that this fate has overtaken him, he is making that adjustment as well.

"I guess God is watching over me, making sure my attitude stays in the right spot," Jackson said. "Your mind has a lot to do with it. I'm not thinking about why I'm not playing more, why I'm not doing this or that.

"Of course, it helps when you're doing well, when you're not hanging on. Oh, I'm hanging on physically. I'm 45 to 50 at-bats behind the everyday players, and I've missed all (but two) of my starts against lefthanders. But (Manager) Gene (Mauch) says I'll get 450 at-bats. So what's the problem? I want to play, but I'm not going to miss playing in 32 games.

"I'm accepting the adjustments, but I still want to maintain a good image of myself. Now, I'm going for quality, not quantity."

Jackson still would like to play through 1987, if fate treats him kindly.

"At 40, you've got to play where you fit in. You don't deal anymore. You're just hoping to get into the game, whether it's as a DH, a role player or a managerial change late in the game. I know I'm not going to catch many fly balls anymore. I know I can't be used as a defensive replacement."

None of these adjustments has come easily. Jackson literally has had to talk himself into many of them.

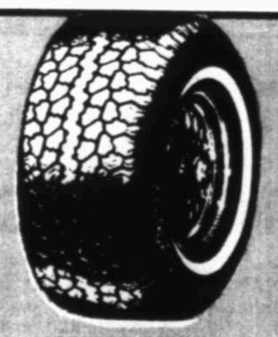

"You just keep talking to yourself and hope it works out," he said.

But some of the adjustments also must have come easier after Carew's forced retirement. It was shock enough to be a learning experience.

"You've got to finish when you want," Jackson said, "because you never know where you'll wind up."

Joyner slams 16th homer

Texas Rangers still in first place

Associated Press

California Angels rookie Wally Joyner keeps finding out more about American League pitchers, while they keep learning about him. Sometimes, they learn too late.

Joyner hit his major league-leading 16th homer of the season, a two-run shot with two outs in the ninth inning Monday that rallied the Angels past the New York Yankees 8-7.

The victory broke California's five-game losing streak and ended New York's five-game winning string.

New York relief ace Dave Righetti retired the first two California batters in the ninth before Brian Downing singled. Joyner, after fouling off a slider by Righetti, hit another slider into the right-field seats at Yankee Stadium.

"I don't know him really well," said Righetti, 4-2. "I threw him two hard breaking balls. Obviously, the second one hung up there a long time."

Joyner said both pitches from Righetti were in the same spot.

"I just corrected my swing and I got my bat head out there," he said.

Joyner tied Oakland rookie Jose Canseco for the major-league RBI lead with 41 as the Angels managed to avert a four-game sweep at Yankee Stadium.

"This takes a lot of the sting out of an ugly four days," Angels Manager Gene Mauch said. "The thing I like about Wally, he functions as well in the ninth as he does in the first."

The Yankees seemed ready to pull out another victory when Don Mattingly blooped an RBI single in the eighth inning that broke a 6-6 tie. But this time, the Angels rallied.

"It was as if destiny wasn't on our side," Downing said. "It kind of gets to you after a while because we couldn't step on them and keep them down when we did get a lead. They simply wouldn't stay down. At least we grabbed this game."

Mike Easler's three-run homer gave the Yankees a 3-0 lead in the first inning. Ron Hassey's two-run homer in the seventh lifted New York into a 6-6 tie.

California starter Mike Witt, 4-4, who struggled but won. He gave up seven runs on 10 hits in 8⅓ innings, and Terry Forster got the last two outs for his first AL save since 1976.

"It was like a heavyweight championship fight," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "You get knocked down, catch your breath and come up swinging again. It was like that every game of this series."

Despite the victory, some of the Angels' frustration lingered.

After Joyner homered in the ninth, Reggie Jackson was ejected by home-plate umpire Al Clark for arguing a strike call. Jackson was restrained by Mauch and two coaches, but still flung his helmet in Clark's direction.

Rangers 7, White Sox 2

Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out in 10 of his previous 12 plate appearances, drove in three runs with a homer and triple and Gary Ward also had three RBIs with a single and double.

After striking out his first trip against former Ranger Dave Schmidt, Incaviglia hit his ninth home run of the season in the fourth inning to give host Texas a 1-0 lead.

With the score tied 1-1 and the bases loaded and two out in the fifth, Incaviglia swung at a wild pitch for a strikeout, but made it safely to first and Orlando Mercado scored to make it 2-1. Ward followed with a two-run single. Incaviglia had a two-run triple in the seventh as the Rangers maintained their half-game lead over California in the AL West.

American League

Red Sox 5, Indians 3

Don Baylor hit a two-run homer and Bill Buckner also homered, powering visiting Boston to its eighth victory in the last nine games.

Buckner's solo home run, his fourth, came in the first inning. Baylor connected for his ninth homer in the fourth inning. Both blows came off Cleveland starter Tom Candiotti, 3-5, who had allowed only one home run in his previous 54 innings this year.

Bruce Hurst, 4-3, gave up three runs on seven hits in six innings. He struck out seven and raised his AL-leading total to 84, three more than teammate Roger Clemens. Bob Stanley, the fifth Red Sox pitcher, got his eighth save.

Mariners 7, Orioles 6

Harold Reynolds, batting just .167 since being recalled from the minors two weeks ago, drove in three runs with three hits as Seattle ended Baltimore's five-game winning streak.

Reynolds had an RBI double in the third inning and hit a two-run double with the bases loaded in the sixth. He also stole two bases.

Jim Presley added a two-run homer as host Seattle built a 7-1 lead after six innings against Storm Davis, 4-3.

Mark Langston, 3-4, and Matt Young, who got his first save, withstood the Orioles' 15-hit attack. Mike Young drove in three Baltimore runs with a double and single.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 1

Mark Portugal snapped his personal seven-game winning streak, pitching eight scoreless innings before needing relief help in the ninth, and Kent Hrbek hit two home runs that powered Minnesota.

Portugal, 1-5, took a seven-hit shutout into the ninth, but left after Jesse Barfield's home run, a single and a walk. Portugal won for the first time since Aug. 31.

Hrbek hit a solo homer in the seventh off Toronto starter Doyle Alexander, 3-2, and a two-run shot in the eighth, giving him nine this season.

Kirby Puckett also hit a two-run homer, his 14th. Puckett, who drove in three runs and scored three times, and Mickey Hatcher each had three of the Twins' 13 hits.

Tigers 5, A's 4

Dave Collins, whose double sparked a tying two-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning, singled home the winning run in the 10th inning at Tiger Stadium.

Detroit trailed 4-2 entering the ninth, but a single by Lou Whitaker, a double by Collins and Johnny Grubb's two-run double tied it.

In the 10th, Pat Sheridan singled and Tom Brookens walked. After Whitaker bunted into a forceout at third, Collins singled home the winning run.

Willie Hernandez, 2-2, got the victory and Jay Howell, 0-4, took the loss.

Brewers 4, Royals 0

Danny Darwin, making his first start of the season, pitched a four-hitter against a team which traditionally gives him trouble. Darwin entered the game with a 1-6 lifetime record against Kansas City but did not allow a hit until George Brett's two-out double in the fourth. The veteran right-hander struck out five and walked three.

The Brewers nicked Charlie Leibrandt for a run in the first inning when Randy Ready doubled, took third on Cecil Cooper's single and scored on a double by Dale Sveum. Sveum's single triggered a three-run fourth, which included Rob Deer's RBI single.

Tanner finds same Bucs

Astro rookie gets first victory

Associated Press

Chuck Tanner returned to Pittsburgh and found that the Pirates are just as hospitable as they were during the last two seasons.

Although Tanner managed the Pirates for nine years and won a world championship in 1979, he left last October after consecutive last-place finishes in the National League East.

This year, Tanner is piloting the Atlanta Braves, who rallied from a 4-0 deficit Monday with the help of six Pittsburgh errors and beat Pittsburgh 9-4, dropping the Pirates' record at home to 5-15.

"It really didn't make any difference who we were playing," said Tanner, who lives in the Pittsburgh suburb of New Castle. "You want to win every day, no matter who the other team is. I don't want to beat the Pirates any more than I do the Dodgers or the Cardinals or the Mets."

TANNER GOT a mixed reception. When he trotted off the field in the seventh inning after talking to pitcher Paul Assenmacher, he even peered into the stands to see who was booing him.

"It was the same guys who booed Terry Bradshaw and the same guys who boo Pete Rose," he said. "It didn't bother me; it really didn't. You look at all of the problems in the world and you can't let something like that get to you."

The Braves trailed 4-3 but they took advantage of four Pittsburgh errors — two by shortstop Sammy Khalifa — to score five unearned runs in the eighth inning. The rally included Ted Simmons' tie-breaking sacrifice fly and Dale Murphy's two-run single.

"I really didn't know how many errors they made. I was too busy making our moves," Tanner said. "I think our aggressive baserunning led to the runs as much as anything else."

The Pittsburgh fans applauded when home runs by R.J. Reynolds and Tony Pena gave the Pirates a 4-0 lead. But they saved their loudest cheers for former Pirates slugger Willie Stargell, now a Braves coach. He received a 30-second standing ovation in the first inning.

"You knew they weren't going to forget him," Tanner said. "Willie Stargell is a legend in this town. Me? They'll remember me just like they do any other manager — as being horsefeathers when we lost and being great when we won."

Astros 4, Cardinals 1

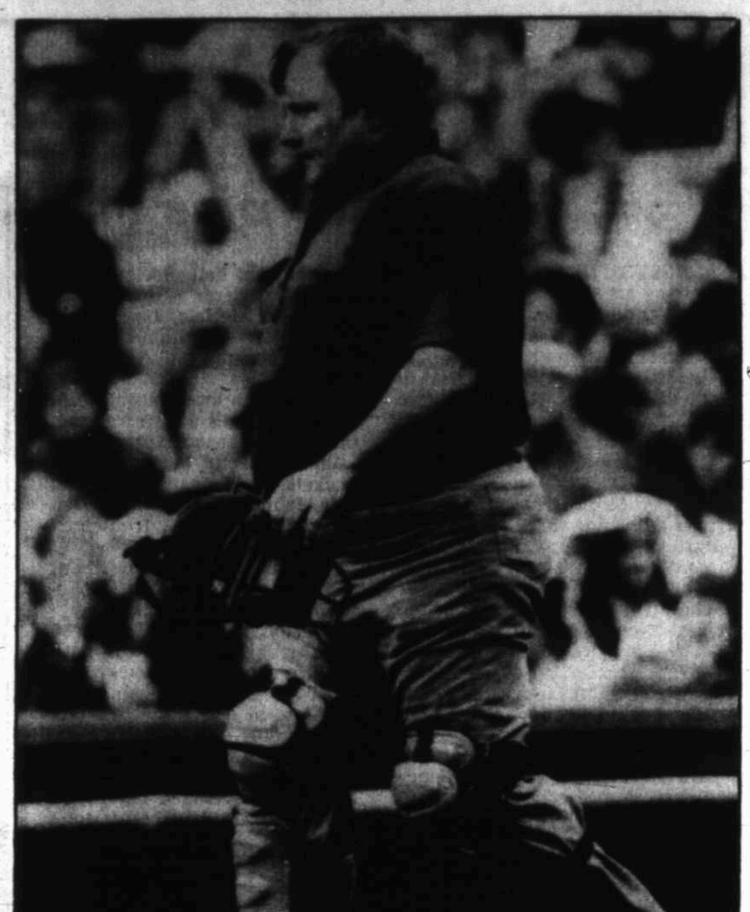

Rookie Jim Deshaies posted his first major-league victory by allowing three hits and striking out 10 in seven innings. Denny Walling drove in two Houston runs with a grounder and a single and Terry Puhl had three hits as the Astros opened a half-game lead over San Francisco in the NL West.

After Deshaies walked Ozzie Smith to start the eighth, Frank DiPino took over and recorded his second save with two hitless innings.

The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Terry Pendleton singled and Mike Heath doubled him home. Houston went ahead with two runs in the fourth on singles by Puhl and Jose Cruz, Walling's grounder and Glenn Davis' single. The Astros chased Bob Forsch with two more runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Puhl and Walling.

"The difference for me was I started using my slider tonight like I did when I was in spring training," Deshaies said. "I had a good fastball, but I couldn't throw it every pitch. The slider sets up the fastball. Batters start looking for the breaking pitch and don't get what they want.

"What really helped me was about a week ago I threw a simulated game in the Astrodome. (Outfielder) Billy Hatcher came up to me afterward and said, 'Hey, when you throw that slider in and the fastball up, you're really effective.' "

NL Roundup

Cubs 9, Reds 6

Jody Davis hit a three-run homer and pitcher Dennnis Eckersley had a two-run shot as Chicago snapped Cincinnati's four-game winning streak.

Davis' eighth homer of the season capped a five-run first inning against Scott Terry, who made his first major-league start when Mario Soto was unable to loosen his shoulder. Eckersley's homer, his second this season and third of his career, finished a four-run third after Cincinnati tied it with five runs in the second, including Dave Parker's three-run homer.

In the Cubs' third, Durham and Jerry Mumphrey walked and both scored on a double by Manny Trillo before Eckersley homered.

Padres 9, Expos 6

Hot-hitting Kevin McReynolds drove in three runs with a triple and a two-run single and Graig Nettles and Steve Garvey hit consecutive home runs in the ninth inning to back Dave Dravecky's nine-hit pitching. Although Dravecky yielded homers to Andre Dawson and Tim Raines, five of the Montreal runs were unearned as a result of two errors by San Diego third baseman Nettles.

The Padres, who blew a 5-1 lead when the Expos scored four times in the second inning, broke the tie with two runs in the fourth. Tim Flannery and Tony Gwynn opened the inning against rookie reliever Jeff Parrett with a walk and a single, respectively, and advanced on McReynolds' fly ball. Terry Kennedy's grounder scored Flannery with the go-ahead run and Nettles singled Gwynn home.

McReynolds, who is hitting .447 in his last 38 at-bats, tripled home one of the Padres' two runs in the first inning and delivered a two-run single in a three-run second that chased Montreal starter Jay Tibbs.

Nettles has homered in his last four games.

Jackson's Edens hurls two-hitter against Gators

Associated Press

Jackson pitcher Tom Edens tossed a no-hitter for 7⅔ innings before settling for a two-hitter in a 6-1 victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators Monday night in a Texas League game.

The Mets picked up their fifth straight win after two rainouts on their home field.

Edens, 5-2, struck out four and walked two. The loser was Mike Mills, 2-4, who himself carried a no-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the fifth inning.

But in the fifth, rightfielder Jason Felice hit a three-run homer for all the runs Jackson would need. Felice added an RBI single in the eighth inning.

Beaumont's only run came in the fifth inning, as Eric Varoz walked, stole second, went to third on a throwing error and scored on a infield grounder.

Jackson, in third place in the Texas League East, moved to within 1½ games of front-running Arkansas, which was beaten 3-0 by the Midland Angels Monday night.

Beaumont's loss dropped it 1½ games behind West Division-leading El Paso, which knocked off Tulsa 9-7 Monday night. Beaumont and Jackson will play a doubleheader Tuesday night.

Shreveport, the second-place team in the East Division standings, pulled to within a game of Arkansas in the tight West Division by outlasting San Antonio 3-2.

The Captains scored all three runs in the first inning, with run-scoring singles by Charlie Hayes, Greg Litton, and Romy Cricjen.

Ed Puikunas, 3-1, got the win over Andres Mena, 1-7.

Jackson hitting 'scared'

By JOHN NELSON
AP Baseball Writer

The cruel realization had dawned, and Reggie Jackson was scared.

His teammate for the past four years, an almost certain Hall of Famer and seven-time batting champion, Rod Carew, was out of baseball at the age of 40, a free agent whom no one wanted.

"It scared the hell out of me," Jackson said. "Sure did."

Only a few months younger than Carew, Jackson was beginning to realize that he too may be losing control of his own destiny — that he was close to the mortality threshhold baseball imposes.

"I want to play next year, too, but if I'm a bum the rest of the season, I've got to accept my fate," Jackson said. "People always told me it would be a tough emotional change. You accept the physical change. You can't lose weight easily anymore, your body gets old. But in your mind, you stay young.

"The last two years, I've had to try to prepare myself to severe the emotional ties with baseball in 1987."

With his 537 career home runs, sixth on the all-time list, Jackson needs 36 more to pass Harmon Killebrew and join Hank Aaron, Babe Ruth, Willie Mays and Frank Robinson as one of the top five sluggers of all time. Yet he realizes that at this stage of his career, he must constantly prove himself.

Jackson already is two years past what many thought would be his end. Injured and playing in only 116 games, Jackson hit just 14 homers and drove in 49 runs in 1983. But, in 1984, he rebounded with 25 homers, surpassing the 500 career mark, and 81 RBI. And he drove in 85 runs with 27 homers last season.

Playing well again this year (seven homers, 18 RBI and a .319 average in 113 at-bats), Jackson says he feels relaxed and capable of accepting any adjustments that his age and the game demand.

"They had to doubt me last year. I was disappointed that they did, but I was getting pretty close to 40," Jackson, who turned 40 on May 18, said. "I was mad at them, but they had some reasons to doubt. But, hey, give me some credit for being Reggie."

It used to bother Jackson that his eventual role in the American League would be as a designated hitter. Now that this fate has overtaken him, he is making that adjustment as well.

"I guess God is watching over me, making sure my attitude stays in the right spot," Jackson said. "Your mind has a lot to do with it. I'm not thinking about why I'm not playing more, why I'm not doing this or that.

"Of course, it helps when you're doing well, when you're not hanging on. Oh, I'm hanging on physically. I'm 45 to 50 at-bats behind the everyday players, and I've missed all (but two) of my starts against lefthanders. But (Manager) Gene (Mauch) says I'll get 450 at-bats. So what's the problem? I want to play, but I'm not going to miss playing in 32 games.

"I'm accepting the adjustments, but I still want to maintain a good image of myself. Now, I'm going for quality, not quantity."

Jackson still would like to play through 1987, if fate treats him kindly.

"At 40, you've got to play where you fit in. You don't deal anymore. You're just hoping to get into the game, whether it's as a DH, a role player or a managerial change late in the game. I know I'm not going to catch many fly balls anymore. I know I can't be used as a defensive replacement."

None of these adjustments has come easily. Jackson literally has had to talk himself into many of them.

"You just keep talking to yourself and hope it works out," he said.

But some of the adjustments also must have come easier after Carew's forced retirement. It was shock enough to be a learning experience.

"You've got to finish when you want," Jackson said, "because you never know where you'll wind up."

Celtics may sweep; key omens all bad for Rockets

By SCOTT OSTLER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NBA Sports Analysis

BOSTON — Warm up the VCR and get the rest of this series on tape, fans. The Boston Celtics are giving a demonstration of basketball you might want to file away in your tape library and show to the grandkids 30 years from now when they try to tell you the Jupiter Jumpsters are the best team in hoops history.

The Celtics won the series opener Monday, beating the Houston Rockets, 112-100. The Celtics will sweep this series.

I realize, of course, that in sports, there's no such thing as a sure thing. That's what I was saying Monday morning to my hotel room-service waiter, Pat Riley.

Still, you can't like the Rockets' chances, not even to win one game in this best-of-seven.

An omen: Early Sunday morning in Houston, 6,000 Rockets fans camping out on the lawn outside the Summit to buy tickets for Games 3-4-5 got soaked when the automatic sprinkler system went on.

The fans threw rocks and bottles at the police. Twenty wet fans were arrested. The police called the fans animals.

Maybe this just isn't going to be Houston's series.

Monday afternoon, in the third quarter, the Rockets showed something they didn't show in five games against the Lakers.

Desperation. Panic.

The Celtics outscored the Rockheads, 16-4, at the end of that quarter. That was the game, maybe the series.

"This is the worst poise we've shown," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said.

Bad poise. It'll kill you every time.

"We lost our composure," Houston guard Robert Reid said.

An omen: You know how intense coaches are. They work 24 hours, studying film, agonizing, never taking a break.

The night before this series opener, Celtic Coach K.C. Jones was down at the Last Hurrah room of the Parker House Hotel, grabbing the mike and singing ballads such as "Misty," "Georgia on My Mind" and "You're Nobody 'Til Somebody Loves You."

Loosen up, K.C.

A team always, to an extent, reflects the personality of its coach. The Celtics aren't likely to blow this series by tightening up.

Omen: The pre-series injury report came out Sunday, and Larry Bird wasn't on it.

Last year at this time, Bird was recovering from a bar brawl and had some bothersome hand injuries. This year?

"I feel pretty good," Bird said, after 21 points, 8 rebounds, 13 assists and 4 steals.

"I feel very healthy. I'm ready to go. I don't think I can feel much better."

Larry Bird is at the peak of his game. This means he could pick up a Boston Garden usher, two beer vendors and a ballboy and they would give Houston a run. Give Bird the Celtics and they will not be stopped. Not by Houston.

Basketball people are starting to call Bird the greatest basketball player of all time, and his game will never be better than it is right now, his motivation will never be greater ... unless he goes against the Lakers next year.

He receives awards left and right, the same way he shoots.

"You got an MVP trophy before the game," someone said to him Monday. "Was that a league trophy?"

"I don't know," Bird said. "I receive 'em every day. It might have been a Seagram's award."

"It was a Miller Lite award," someone else said.

"I don't even drink their beer," Bird said, sipping a diet soda.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch better find out Bird's brand and order a case for each of his players.

Forget the individual trophies. Bird, the league's MVP by acclamation, wants this championship badly.

"My years are numbered now," the 29-year-old Bird said. "We gotta take advantage every time we get to the finals."

When somebody told Bird the Rockets had a "nothing to lose" attitude going into the series, he bristled: "If the Rockets feel that way, then they shouldn't be here."

Maybe that's the key.

The Rockets tried to double-team Bird in the second half and it turned out to be a terrible idea. To double-team Bird effectively, if there is such a thing, you have to be quick and sneaky. Houston was neither.

"It (a double-team) takes me completely out of the offense for a while," Bird said, "but when they do that, somebody's open on the court and I can find him pretty easy."

Isn't this a simple game?

Omen: The Boston Garden crowd showed up Monday.

Bird, the Celtic spokesman on most matters of import, has been openly critical of the Garden fans. They've been far too quiet for his taste in recent games. They have not been fulfilling their obligation to fire up the home team.

Maybe that fan lethargy accounts for the Celtics' disappointing 48-1 record at home going into this series.

But the fans showed up Monday.

"They've been like Laker fans," Bird said scornfully. "They got greedy. They would sit back and wait until something special happened, or the game got close. They just came for recreation, instead of to cheer.

"Today they were the old Celtic fans, loud and boisterous, and we've always played to our fans."

Fans, schmans. The Celtics play to their own tune. They are good and they are cocky. Monday, they played a good game, not a great game, and blew the Rockets off the court.

"We played very well," Bird said. "The thing I'm concerned with is our defense. Once that starts to click, we feel nobody can beat us."

And nobody will; not this month or next month, not if Bird has his way and the Celtics continue to play Celtic basketball.

Which the Celtics figure to do, for three more games. Boston sweeps, Houston weeps. Or is that just the sprinklers?

Simple formula: Plan A erases Sampson, Plan B eliminates Akeem

By DAVE ANDERSON
New York Times News Service

BOSTON — In launching the Houston Rockets into the National Basketball Association championship final, Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson combined for an average of nearly 50 points a game. But in limiting the Twin Towers to a total of only 35 points, only 2 by Sampson, in Monday's 112-100 victory, the Boston Celtics used what Coach K.C. Jones described as "Plan A and Plan B" on defense. On offense, the Celtics used the whistle.

"We just tried to take it to Akeem," explained Kevin McHale, who mostly covered the 7-foot center. "Make him commit some fouls and get into our game. You can't let those two guys intimidate you."

That was Plan A, but at halftime it was barely working. Although the Celtics had a 61-59 lead, Olajuwon, who averaged nearly 28 points in previous playoff games, had 25 points and 8 rebounds.

"Akeem was having a picnic," Jones said. "So we decided we would try to make him give the ball up. We had to go after him on defense. We couldn't take a chance on the man guarding him losing his mind, so as soon as Olajuwon got the ball, somebody else helped out on him."

That somebody was often Larry Bird, and sometimes a third Celtic would help.

In the first half, McHale, at 6-10, started out covering Olajuwon, but Bill Walton, Robert Parish and briefly Greg Kite also covered him. Or tried to. Parish, who is 7 feet even, originally had lined up against the 7-4 Sampson.

"The decision for me to play Ralph and for Kevin to guard Akeem was based completely on height," Parish said. "Kevin wasn't giving away too many inches."

The whistle, meanwhile, made Sampson virtually disappear when he picked up his third personal foul less than 5 minutes into the first quarter. He didn't return until the start of the second half. By then Olajuwon also had three personal fouls. And when he went to the bench with five less than 7 minutes into the second half, the Rockets never recovered. Neither did Sampson, who scored his only field goal after the Celtics had taken command, 81-72.

"Early fouls can get you out of sync," said Bill Fitch, the Rockets' coach. "I think that's what happened to Ralph."

But getting big men out of sync is why the Celtics have won 15 NBA titles. It's often forgotten that the Celtics have lost only two championship finals — to the Los Angeles Lakers last year (when Bird and Parish were slightly damaged) and to the St. Louis Hawks in 1958 (when Bill Russell had to depart with a damaged ankle).

Over the last three decades, the Celtics not only have dominated the NBA, but in the title round they have controlled some of basketball's most celebrated big men — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Wilt Chamberlain, Moses Malone and Bob Pettit. Not that the Celtics stopped them completely, but they stopped them enough to win, as they did Monday.

"We've played against two guys that big, but not two guys that good," said Red Auerbach, once the Celtics' coach and now their president. "Kareem and Mitch Kupchak are that big, but Kupchak isn't that good."

In the 1964 championship final against the then San Francisco Warriors, the Celtics were confronted by the "Twin Towers" of that era — the center Chamberlain at 7 feet, and Nate Thurmond, then a 6-11 rookie.

"Chamberlain couldn't beat you by himself," Auerbach recalled. "The only thing we'd tell Bill Russell was: 'You're not going to get much help, you're supposed to be the greatest defensive player in the game, do your job. Run him, make Chamberlain put out a lot of energy.' But in that series, San Francisco not only had Wilt and Thurmond, but they also had Tom Meschery.

"What we did was put Russell on Chamberlain, but instead of putting Tom Heinsohn on Thurmond, we put Heinsohn on Meschery and we put Frank Ramsey, who was only 6-3½, on Thurmond. Now Thurmond had to chase Ramsey and he couldn't. They eventually had to bench Thurmond. You can play basketball two ways, by reacting to what the other team does or making them react to what you do, like the way we used Ramsey."

San Diego wins fifth MISL title

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ron Newman has mixed feelings about newspaper reporters, but was depending on today's editions to see whether his eyes deceived him.

The San Diego Sockers coach, resplendent in black tuxedo and royal blue cummerbund — before being doused with champagne — watched in disbelief as his team won its fifth consecutive indoor soccer title with a 5-3 victory over the Minnesota Strikers on Monday night.

"I didn't believe you could do it five times in a row. I would say it's impossible to do. It's just impossible," Newman said.

Winning is no big deal for the Sockers, the class of the Major Indoor Soccer League or the North American Soccer League — the two leagues they've played in alternately since 1981.

WHAT MADE Monday night special for the Sockers was that there was a game to win at all. San Diego was down 3-1 in the best-of-7 series against Minnesota.

"They've (the championships) all have got something different," Newman said. "This is just one of the family. It's as if people were to say, 'Which is your favorite son?' This is the same way. But this is probably the hardest one."

The Strikers had the Sockers' number all season, beating them in all three regular-season meetings, including two in the San Diego Sports Arena. Until the Strikers won Game 2 of the series on May 11, the Sockers had never lost a post-season game at home. They ran that record to 28-1 Monday night.

"We realize how close we came," Minnesota Coach Alan Merrick said. "It's a bitter pill, but we also proved that San Diego can be caught and we can play with them."

Indeed, the Strikers did plenty of that. In the championship game, Minnesota took 46 shots on goal to 22 for San Diego.

BUT THE Sockers used their so-called "no-goal patrol" to kill three of the four two-minute penalties called on them in the first half.

During the other penalty, Minnesota's Jan Goossens scored from outside the penalty box on a kick that found the upper right-hand corner of the net to tie the score at 1-1.

The Sockers took the lead for good 17 seconds later when Juli Veee passed to Gary Collier, who fired a hard, low shot just inside the left post past a diving Tino Lettieri.

The Sockers took a 3-1 lead 1:18 into the third quarter when Branko Segota worked a give-and-go with Brian Quinn, booting the ball into the left corner of the goal from 15 feet.

Quinn, who scored the Sockers' first goal midway through the opening period, picked up his second goal 6:22 into the third period on a long sideline pass from goalie Jim Gorsek. Quinn dribbled around Thompson Usiyan and beat Lettieri to the far corner of the net to make it 4-1. Quinn, who finished second to teammate Segota in playoff scoring (31 points to 23), was named the series' Most Valuable Player.

Steffi Graf continues net heroics

PARIS (AP) — Steffi Graf is on a roll.

The 16-year-old West German won her 21st consecutive match Monday as she advanced to the second round of the French Open, the first of tennis' Grand Slam events in 1986.

The third-seeded Graf, who has won the last four tournaments she has played, needed just 34 minutes to beat countrywoman Andrea Betzner 6-1, 6-0.

"I think I'm playing very well," Graf said. "I think I have a good chance, not to win, but to reach the quarters.

"I'm feeling very well."

She also played as well as any other player on the opening day of the $2.6 million tournament on the fabled red clay of Roland Garros.

The first round was to have been completed today with top-seded Martina Navratilova against Sandra Cecchini of Italy; No. 4 Hana Mandlikova of Czecholslovakia against Sabrina Goloes of Yugoslavia; No. 2 Mats Wilander of Sweden, against Ricardo Acuna of Chile, and Parisian favorite and fourth-seeded Yannick Noah against another Frenchman, Tarik Benhabiles.

On Monday, Ivan Lendl, the men's top seed, easily defeated West Germany's Michael Westphal 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd also moved into the second round with a center-court victory over French junior champion Cecile Calmette 6-0, 6-1.

BORIS BECKER, the men's No. 3 seed, beat France's Jerome Potier 6-0, 6-3, 6-0, and Sukova, the women's sixth seed, defeated Sabena Simmonds of Italy, 6-4, 6-2.

Seeded players overall had an excellent day with 10 of 11 winning.

The only seed to lose was American Kathy Jordan, No. 11, who was upset by fellow American Camille Benjamin 1-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Among the winners Monday was Carling Bassett of Canada, the 13th women's seed, who was making her first tournament apparance since her father, John, died of cancer less than two weeks ago. She beat Catherine Tanvier of France, 7-5, 6-3.

"My family wanted me to do what was best," Bassett said. "I thought this was best."

But none of the matches was as one-sided as Graf and Betzner.

Graf scored 49 points to 15 for Betzner. Graf broke Betzner five times and held serve throughout. Graf used her service games to score 28 points, while Betzner could manage just nine.

"I don't think my game has changed much, but I have more cofidence," Graf said. "For four or five tournaments, I've played great."

"There is usually one player expected to win here, maybe two," Lloyd said. "This year I see four players able to win this tournament, and Steffi's one of them. ... I feel her success has taken some pressure off me."

Lendl has felt pressure of his own as tendinitis in his knee has slowed him down and placed a question mark on his No. 1 ranking.

He took a week to practice and rest between the Italian Open and here and said after his victory over Westphal he is feeling stronger — although still not at top form.

"I feel I am playing solid, not spectacularly but solid," he said. "After the Italian Open I had hoped to practice tenmis four hours a day and play golf four hours a day, but with the treatments (on the knee) I didn't have time for golf. I wasn't very pleased about that."

Becker also stayed in Italy to practice on clay.

"We've been concentrating on tactical things," said Becker, who prefers faster courts and quicker points than he'll find in Paris. "I've heard clay is different than grass. I'm trying to be a little more patient."

In early action today, fourth-seeded Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany led a parade of top-ranked women into the second round with a 6-4, 6-1 victory over America's Lori McNeil.

The only seeded player to lose as the second day of play on Roland Garros' red clay courts commenced was America's Anne White, seeded 15th. She lost to Laura Gildemeister of Peru, 6-1, 6-3.

Martina Navratilova, the top-seeded woman, began play later against Italy's Anna-Maria Cecchini. Fifth-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia opened against Yugoslavia's Sabrina Goles.

Two high-seeded men, Sweden's Mats Wilander (No. 2) and Parisian favorite Yannick Noah (No. 4), also opened play. Wilander against Riccardo Acuna of Chile and Noah against Frenchman Tarik Benhabiles.

Other seeded players posting early victories today included No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, 6-1, 6-2 over Katerina Skronska of Czechoslovakia; and American Kathy Rinaldi, No. 7, who beat another U.S. player, Hu Na, 6-1, 6-3.

Maleeva's sister, unseeded Katerina Maleeva, also won, beating American Terry Holladay 6-2, 6-3.

White, whose chief claim to fame perhaps has been her appearance in a clinging white body suit at last year's Wimbledon championships, appeared to be climbing back into her match against Gildemeister when disaster struck.

Up a service break at 2-1 and serving at 30-30, White thought she had an ace, but the judge ruled the ball out.

White, from Newport Beach, Calif., then double-faulted.

California looks at no pass rule

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Two California legislators think the "dumb jock" should go the way of other stereotypes.

They are sponsoring bills that would require junior and senior high school students to have a C average to participate in sports, band, school newspapers or other extracurricular activities.

"We have too many kids who all they do is play basketball or football and they come out at the end of the rainbow unable to read or write or do anything to survive in society," said Assembly Speaker Willie Brown, a San Francisco Democrat.

Brown's bill was approved last month by the Assembly and is pending in the Senate. A similar bill by Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-Whittier, was passed by the Senate last week and sent to the Assembly.

One of the bills is very likely to be sent this summer to the desk of Republican Gov. George Deukmejian, who has not taken a position on the issue.

The bills would put into state law a policy already adopted by more than half the state's 1,029 school districts, which have 4.2 million students.

The San Francisco Unified School District in 1980 was the first to require a 2.0 or C average to participate in sports.

"Despite dire predictions made at the time, the program has not caused youngsters to drop out or damaged the athletic program, but seems instead to have acted as an incentive for individual academic improvement," says Pegge Lacey, legislative coordinator for the district.

The Los Angeles Unified School District, the state's largest, has had a policy since 1983 that is tougher than Brown's or Montoya's bills — students cannot participate in any extracurricular activities if they have lower than a 2.0 average or if they get one F. Under the two bills, a student could get an F as long as his or her overall average was a C. The bills, if they become state law, would allow districts like Los Angeles to have more stringent policies.

"The result has been nothing but encouraging," said Rita Walters, president of the Los Angeles school board and author of the policy. "It has been rewarding for teachers and most of all for students. The parents are delighted with it. Even students are learning appreciation for it."

More Sports, 8B

Steve Thompson, a senior at Los Angeles' Crenshaw High School, an honor student and a star basketball player, said his fellow athletes are working harder and trying harder.

"I realize athletics won't be there the rest of our lives, even if we get into professional sports," he said, speaking for Brown's bill.

Brown brought in other athletes to testify for his bill, including Pamela McGee, Olympic basketball gold medalist and University of Southern California graduate; David Meggysey, former St. Louis Cardinals' linebacker and western director of the National Football League Players Association; and Ken Margerum, Chicago Bears wide receiver and a Stanford University graduate.

California is not the first state to consider such a law. Texas passed one in 1984 as part of a major school reform bill. The Texas law requires students to receive a passing grade in all courses to participate in extracurricular activities.

Texas Gov. Mark White says the policy is a success because it has shifted the emphasis to academics. Opponents, including some coaches, parents and students, say it discourages students from taking more difficult courses. Last fall, the first football season under the rule, about 15 percent of varsity athletes failed and could not play.

Opponents in California, including the state School Boards Association, said such policy should be left up to local districts.

Assemblyman Dick Floyd, D-Hawthorne, said that idw-achieving students who "can achieve some feeling of self-respect" only through sports or band would be hurt by the policy.

"Many students will drop out because they can't make the grade," he said in Assembly floor debate.

Assemblyman Steve Peace, D-La Mesa, said the bill could lead to "serious grade inflation" as coaches and teachers tried to help star athletes play.

your horoscope
© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Wednesday, May 28, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The next year of your life can be one of the most important depending on how hard you work to achieve your goals. Accept a leadership role and you will make tremendous financial progress. Additional education or training paves the way to the top. Let loved ones know that any temporary sacrifices they make will be richly rewarded.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: actresses Beth Howland and Sondra Locke, baseball slugger Kirk Gibson, pitcher Randy Martz, the Los Angeles Lakers' Jerry West, singer Gladys Knight, "James Bond" author Ian Fleming, Olympic athlete Jim Thorpe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): One-day business trips prove luckier than extended travel. Delays are difficult to understand but could work to your advantage. Go along with mate's social plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Patience coupled with determination will help you achieve your goals in business or romance. Focusing on new priorities lets you take a big career step. Mate's understanding is a source of delight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Check the newspaper for employment leads. Those involved in creative endeavors find their incomes rising. Romance could be unpredictable. Avoid making impulsive declarations or promises.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be on guard around someone who offers you a fantastic-sounding job; it could prove disappointing. Political events abroad affect your business gains. Look for new sources of income. Form short-term alliances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can remain the power behind the throne if you play your cards right. Do not rush into a new partnership. Friendship and finance do not mix. Be discreet about romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Signs of incompatibility should not be ignored by those contemplating marriage. Make a special effort to replace bad habits with good ones. Recycling an old project could lead to new profits.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An on-again, off-again business relationship could prove very lucrative. Just do not give partner a free hand with jointly owned funds. Accepting a suggestion at face value could lead to disappointment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Use partner as a sounding board if you want the plain truth. Speculative ventures are likely to flourish. A lawsuit may be settled in your favor. Take advantage of a lucky break.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Push ahead full steam even if well-intentioned friends try to dissuade you. Freedom of thought and action is a top priority. Caution is advised in romance. Take a wait-and-see approach.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An exciting career plan should be held in abeyance for the time being. Better service is the key to new financial rewards. You receive wonderful news about an impending move. Consult partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Bring yourself and a pet project to the attention of higher-ups. Efforts to further an outside interest could harm a valuable business or personal relationship. Take a chance on romance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Let mate or another family member set the pace today. You need to conserve your energy for an important work project. A reliable individual gives you new hope about a relationship.

Opening lead: King of ♡.

At duplicate bridge, if you think the opponents can't make their contract and are reasonably sure that your side can't bid any higher without suffering defeat, it is right to settle for the plus score. At rubber bridge or team play, however, it is usually correct to take out insurance by bidding one more—you are willing to risk a small loss to protect against a possible large swing against you.

This deal came up in the weekly team game held at New York's renown Cavendish Club. North's jump overcall was preemptive and East, Phillip Alder, a recent immigrant to these shores who has joined the Goren organization, raised his partner competitively. After South, Rita Rand of New York, made the winning decision to bid three no trump, Alder decided he was likely to find his partner with some shortness in diamonds, so he took what he thought was a sacrifice at four spades.

As the cards lie, that contract was due to succeed—with trumps splitting evenly, the only losers would have been one trump, one diamond and one club. But North, Claire Tornay of New York, wisely elected to take out some insurance of her own by bidding four no trump.

North-South did have ten tricks available. Unfortunately, East-West were able to reel in four tricks first. West, Philip Martyn of New York, had a natural lead of the king of hearts and East signalled his encouragement with the seven. A low heart to the queen and a heart back sealed declarer's fate at the earliest opportunity.

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — French photographer Henri Cartier-Bresson has won Sicily's "Novecento" (900) prize, awarded every two years to an international figure of arts and culture who "increases the worth of knowledge and beauty."

Argentine author Jorge Luis Borges, who was the first winner of the award, a golden rose, will present it to Cartier-Bresson later this week. The award is named after Palermo's Novecento publishing house.

Cartier-Bresson, 78, is the founder of the Magnum photo agency and is considered a pioneer of modern photography.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — American George Robert Hanson has beaten 50 competitors from 27 nations to win the fifth international conductors' competition organized by Hungarian television, the state-run news agency MTI reported.

Hanson received an award of $2,000 plus a golden baton and an invitation from the "Interkonzert" Festival office to conduct the 1987 Interforum gala evening concert, MTI said but did not provide details about the event.

Second prize in the contest Monday went to Gintarash Rinkiavitsius of the Soviet Union and third place to Gyoergy Gyoerivanyi Rath of Hungary.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Crown Prince Frederik has assumed new official duties as the successor to Denmark's throne in ceremonies marking his 18th birthday and legal coming of age.

Queen Margrethe, Denmark's monarch since the death of her father King Frederik IX in 1972, formally presented her son to the cabinet Monday at Christiansborg Palace, the home of the Folketing, Denmark's parliament.

The Queen named Frederik as her deputy on the council of state, the constitutional link between the monarchy and the government.

The crown prince, although still a student at a private school in suburban Copenhagen, will be required to preside at the twice-monthly state council meetings in the Queen's absence.

• • •

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Monaco's Princess Stephanie is making her first visit to Spain to sing on a taped television variety show featuring humorist Pedro Ruiz.

Stephanie

The princess, who was to perform songs from her new album "Hurricane" on the show, arrived Monday from Paris aboard a private plane. She was guarded by 15 civil guards and police at Barajas airport as reporters and photographers besieged her.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Henry Ford II has complained that a forthcoming book on his family is spiced with too much sex, says Robert Lacey, author of "Ford: The Men and the Machine."

Henry Ford II

Lacey told a news conference Sunday that Ford said he was unhappy with the manuscript, which covers 100 years of life in the Detroit automotive family.

But the former chairman of Ford Motor Co., said he understood the business necessity of the sex angle, according to Lacey.

"I let Mr. Ford see the manuscript and he was upset," Lacey said. "I asked him whether he was disappointed in it and he replied: 'No, I'm not disappointed at all. It's what I expected. You have to put sex in books these days to sell them."

Lacey, who has also written books about the British and Saudi royal families, used tidbits about the private lives of the Ford family to promote his book before 15,000 dealers at the annual American Booksellers Convention.

The book will be published next month by Little, Brown & Co. Inc.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Former French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing says that if a person has knowledge and judgment, then making the decisions of a world leader is the easy part.

Giscard, who received an honorary doctor of laws degree at Brown University commencement exercises Monday, did not address the 1,800 graduates and advanced degree recipients, but met with students and faculty at Brown's international relations department.

"Most people think making decisions is the hardest part of being a world leader. But, in fact, it's the easiest part if you have the knowledge and judgment. Then it's quite natural," he said.

Giscard was president of France from 1974 to 1981.

ARTESIA (AP) — A former El Paso medical writer was named editor of an Artesia, N.M., daily newspaper, the paper's publisher announced.

Tim C. Palmer succeeds Lois Purvis, who left the newspaper, publisher Gary Scott said.

Palmer moved to Artesia after spending a year at the El Paso Times as a medical writer and general assignments reporter.

Prior to that, he worked four years at The Ruidoso News, a semi-weekly. The last three years he was editor of the Ruidoso newspaper.

Palmer was born in Denver and raised in Albuquerque. He received a bachelor's degree in English from Southwest Baptist University in Bolivar, Mo.

He began his journalism career as a reporter for the Sheridan Press in Sheridan, Wyo., after two years as a tennis instructor in Cali, Colombia.

He also holds a masters degree in international journalism from Baylor University in Waco.

INDUSTRY, Ill. (AP) — The leader of a country-western band from Iowa was killed when her husband accidentally ran over her with the band's bus near here, authorities said.

Doria Stewart Watson, 43, of Keokuk, was killed on U.S. Highway 67 a mile north of here and 12 miles south of Macomb when her husband, Larry Gale Watson, backed over her with the bus Saturday, police said.

Police said Mrs. Watson and the band — Doria Stewart and the CC Riders — were headed for a show in Beardstown when a truck being towed by the bus broke loose. Watson decided to stop and retrieve the truck. Mrs. Watson apparently got out of the bus to give directions while her husband drove, police said.

The back windows of the bus were boarded over so Larry Watson could not have seen his wife standing behind the bus, police said.

Mrs. Watson died at the scene of massive head and chest injuries and multiple fractures.

EDGEWATER, Md. (AP) — The son of actor Ryan O'Neal was injured and his companion killed when their boat cut between a tow boat and a disabled vessel being towed to port Monday, an official said.

Cpl. William Stallings of the Maryland Natural Resources Police identified the injured man as Griffin Patrick O'Neal, 27, but refused to release the name of the dead man, pending positive identification and notification of relatives.

"There was a boating accident in the South River at approximately 5 p.m. when a small runabout cut between a boat that was disabled and under tow," said Stallings. "The tow line struck one subject, throwing him to the deck. He received severe head injuries and was dead on arrival at Anne Arundel General Hospital."

Canadiens' Pat Roy piling up cups

MONTREAL (AP) — Last year it was the Calder Cup and this year the Stanley Cup for Patrick Roy, the goaltending wonder boy of the Montreal Canadiens.

"The experience in Sherbrooke was beneficial to everybody," Roy said of his minor league experience in diagnosing the Canadiens' Stanley Cup victory over the Calgary Flames.

Roy, the Conn Smythe winner as the most valuable player in the Stanley Cup playoffs, was among several current Montreal players who spent last season helping Sherbrooke win the Calder Cup, emblematic of American Hockey League championship.

Last Saturday night, in the Canadiens' clinching 4-3 victory over Calgary, Roy was one of two former Sherbrooke players in the starting six. The other was Brian Skrudland, who scored the tie-breaking goal in the second period.

Gaston Gingras, although not a rookie, also played on the 1985 Sherbrooke team and was a key factor on defense as the Canadiens won their 23rd Stanley Cup.

"I think winning the Calder Cup last year was a big part of us winning the Stanley Cup this year," Gingras said. "Honest to God, winning last year taught us the sacrifices needed to win the playoffs."

No fewer than eight former Sherbrooke players were on the Canadiens' roster this year. They also included Mike Lalor, who provided Montreal with strong defense in the playoffs.

Claude Lemieux, who played for the Junior Verdun Canadiens last season, also was a key factor in Montreal's playoff success this year.

"We may be young, but we're experienced," said Lemieux, who scored 10 goals in the playoffs, including four game-winners which was a tournament record for rookies.

"Experience isn't just age," Lemieux continued. "I'm not old, but I won the Quebec League junior championship and a world junior tournament (Team Canada, 1985, in Finland.) Stephane (Richer) was on that team, too. We're winners."

He would have to include Skrudland in that category, too.

Skrudland, the AHL playoff MVP last year, scored the overtime goal in Game 2 that saved the Canadiens from going back to Montreal down two games to nothing. His goal on Saturday night gave the Canadiens a 2-1 lead they never relinquished.

"I remember Skrudland telling me before the playoffs that he was going to score some big goals for us, that he was a 'clutcher,'" Montreal Coach Jean Perron remembered. "He sure did that."

Montreal veteran defenseman Larry Robinson pointed to Skrudland's goal a record nine seconds into overtime in Game 2 as perhaps the most important goal for the Canadiens in the five-game series.

"It was the turning point," Robinson said. "It gave a big lift to our confidence. We didn't really play well in the first game (a 5-2 loss). We started to question ourselves. After all, this team had beaten the (Edmonton) Oilers."

Standing tall above all the rookies was Roy, the sometimes eccentric goaltender who continously "talked" to the goalposts to ask them for "help" during the contest.

They did help him on some occasions when Calgary shots rang off the posts. But mostly, he helped himself.

"Patrick is a big goalie and he can fill up a lot of space in the net," Francoise Allaire, the Canadiens' goaltending coach, said. "He's a very smart goaltender who can see a lot of things on the ice and adjust during a game if he has to.

"He's also extremely confident."

Roy figures that he and his rookie colleagues will be around for a long time in a Montreal uniform.

"The Sherbrooke guys are the future of this team," Roy said.

Perhaps not the heart of the Canadiens just yet, the rookies could very well be the soul right now.

Indy drivers applaud race move to Saturday

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Drivers who spent two fruitless days waiting to race in the 70th Indianapolis 500 generally applauded the track's decision to wait until Saturday to try again.

But some drivers were upset that it took speedway officials so long to make the decision.

"They could let us know," veteran George Snider said Monday, some hours before the track announced its decision to wait until Saturday. "They don't have to keep it a secret. What's the big deal?"

"It's better to wait until Saturday," defending champion Danny Sullivan said. "Now they'll have a chance for a better crowd and a chance to clean up this place and make it better for everybody."

Johnny Rutherford, a three-time Indy winner, also favored Saturday.

"That's the only thing left reasonably available at this point," he said. "But we're here to race whenever they race. It's just unfortunate that it puts everybody to this inconvenience."

Snider thought Saturday was the best possible decision for fans.

"You can't expect people to come back in the middle of the week, but they will come back if they have a chance," he said.

At one point Monday, all the speedway would say was that the media would be given at least 12 hours notice before the start of the race.

"You gotta be joking! That's ridiculous," driver Al Unser Jr. said of that plan. "You either make your decision or you don't. If they have that much of a question about tomorrow's weather, then they should just make it Saturday."

What apparently prevented the Speedway from immediately announcing a Saturday start was the conflict with the next stop on the Indy-car circuit, a 200-mile race at Milwaukee. That race has now been pushed back a week.

Pushing the Milwaukee race back a week creates another problem, Rutherford noted, "because we go from Milwaukee to Portland (Ore.), which is quite a haul. And for the teams to get cars ready and make that long a trip in a week's time, it gets pretty tough. But we'll do what's necessary."

Bobby Rahal, among the favorites for this year's race, was concerned that the rescheduling announcement included a notice that there wouldn't be another practice session before the checkered flag falls.

"I think it would be smart on their part to have a bit of a warmup session, just to give everybody a chance to remember what it's like to drive around here at 200-and-some-odd miles an hour, not just put us in here cold, without having driven a car for five days."

But Rahal was glad that ABC, which was frustrated in its bid to show the race live for the first time, would get another chance on Saturday.

"I think TV should be considered as much as can be. They're as much a part of all this as the teams and everything else is," he said. "If they feel it'll make a better show — let's face it, I guess to a degree we're in the entertainment business. Our sponsors would rather see it televised."

Veteran driver Johnny Parsons just wanted to race.

"I don't care when it is. If they put lights on the cars, we could run at night ... It wouldn't bother me. A couple hours (notice) is all I need," he said.

Added Unser: "Personally, I'd rather run tomorrow (Tuesday) and get it over with, but I don't think it's right for the fans to run it tomorrow. I think a lot of the people have to work. What are they going to do? They spend a lot of money on their tickets to come out here, and they wouldn't be able to see the race. I think for them, they ought to run it Saturday."

Which one would you put your nickel in?

It's no contest. The one on the left wins hands down because the eye is naturally attracted to the vivid, bright colors.

Color in advertising works the same way. While black and white newspaper advertising still packs a bigger and better wallop than ever when it comes to bringing customers into your store and moving merchandise off the shelves, carefully controlled comparative test have proven conclusively that the addition of a single color to a newspaper ad increases sales by an average of 41.4%.

But color is only one part of the creative selling capacity of the Midland Reporter-Telegram Advertising. Put your nickel where it will do you the most good. Call 682-5311 today. One of our advertising sales experts will be happy to color your sales a more profitable green.

Dallas possible NHL site

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Dallas could be possible site for a National Hockey League franchise if the league decides to expand beyond its current 21 teams, some NHL team officials say.

"In Dallas you have a facility comparable to any in North America," said Cliff Fletcher, president and general manager of the Calgary Flames. "And Texas sports fans are great sports fans.

"There is absolutely no reason that hockey can't do just great there," he said.

Fletcher's viewpoint was backed by Lou Nanne, who runs the Minnesota North Stars.

"There's a fabulous arena there. I think it would be very successful," he said. "Every other form of entertainment has been successful down there."

But NHL President John Ziegler said there are no plans to expand the 21-team circuit immediately.

"We do have an advisory committee that still has charge to examine that," he told the Dallas Times Herald. "The timetable for that report is at the next December meetings."

Some officials have suggested that an expansion to 24 teams would enable the NHL to have four six-team divisions. Others feel an expansion to the south might help attract a network television contract. Currently, the NHL is limited to the ESPN cable network and local telecasts.

"Somewhere down the line, the NHL is thinking four six-team divisions," said David Poile, general manager of the Washington Capitals. "Dallas is as major league as any city in the NHL. Any move to expand, and the NHL would have to consider Dallas."

Bill Torrey, general manager of the New York Islanders, said he would look at Dallas "with great interest."

"I know there was great interest down there when Dallas played Fort Worth in the Central Hockey League," he said.

The CHL folded a few years ago because of poor attendance.

"Minor league hockey went the way of all minor league sports in major league markets," Fletcher said. "But I remember when Dallas had a lot of hockey fans when the CHL was flourishing. Fort Worth did, too."

San Jacinto hammers Nassau

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) - Ken Griffin's three-run homer into the lights above the leftfield fence led a 19-hit assault by defending champion San Jacinto, Texas, on Monday as the Gators hammered Nassau, N.Y., 18-3 in second-round action in the National Junior College World Series.

Earlier Monday, Southern Idaho eliminated Meramec, Mo., 7-6, in a fan's bracket contest. And Monday night's feature game was to match Yavapai, Ariz., against Brevard, Fla.

The Gators sent 15 batters to the plate in the fourth inning to score 10 runs. Steve Carmada, 15-2, worked four innings for the victory, with Doug Rogers pitching in the fifth, when the game was called on the 10-run rule.

All but one of San Jacinto's starters got at least one hit off loser John Autolino, 8-4.

Midlanders salute those who died defending nation

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The American flag flew at half staff, the bugler played "Taps" and flowers adorned the graves of soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen who gave their lives in defense of the United States Monday as Midlanders saluted fallen servicemen during annual Memorial Day services at Fairview Cemetery.

"We came here today to pay tribute to those who died in the past so that we may be free," the Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of Kentucky Street Baptist Church, told one of the largest Memorial Day audiences ever assembled in Midland.

Before Porterfield's speech, the nation's war dead were honored with the presentation of colors and the raising of the main flag which was framed by other flags that lined the cemetery avenue and with the "Pledge of Allegiance." Miniature flags graced the graves of soldiers buried at both Fairview and Resthaven Memorial Park.

Members of various veterans' groups worked together, traveling to the gravesites to honor their fallen comrades in arms and to dedicate wreaths in their memory. Among those present were members of American Legion, Woods Lynch Post 19 and Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Posts 7208 and 4149 and Auxiliary, Lt. William Brewer and Col. Theunis Day Chapters of Daughters of the American Revolution, Texas-Aaron Estes Chapter of the Daughter of Republic of Texas, and Norman's Pride Chapter of Daughters of American Colonist.

During the ceremony, legionnaire A.J. McCright said "We are free today because many, many people were dedicated enough to wear the uniform."

Crockett Elementary School principal Roberto Banda told the audience that Memorial Day should not only be a day of remembrance, but also a day of rededication to the causes for which our soldiers fell and died.

He pointed to the stones, marking the graves of American servicemen and said, "If our children ask what these markers mean, we should answer that each of these reminds us that once a person lived and once a person died so that we may be free."

For American veteran Dan Eversole, this Memorial Day service was especially memorable.

Eversole, who served with the U.S. Army in World War II and Korea, proudly held the American flag througout the ceremony and, afterward, he said "This is what Memorial Day is all about — to remember our departed veterans. Anytime I can carry our flag, I'll be more than proud to do it."

LSD making come back in Midland, officials say

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

LSD, the hallucinogenic '60s drug that went out with Nehru jackets and love beads, is making a comeback in this area, according to local law-enforcement officials.

"Within the past month here in Midland, we've seen a dramatic increase," said a Midland Police narcotics detective who asked that his name not be used.

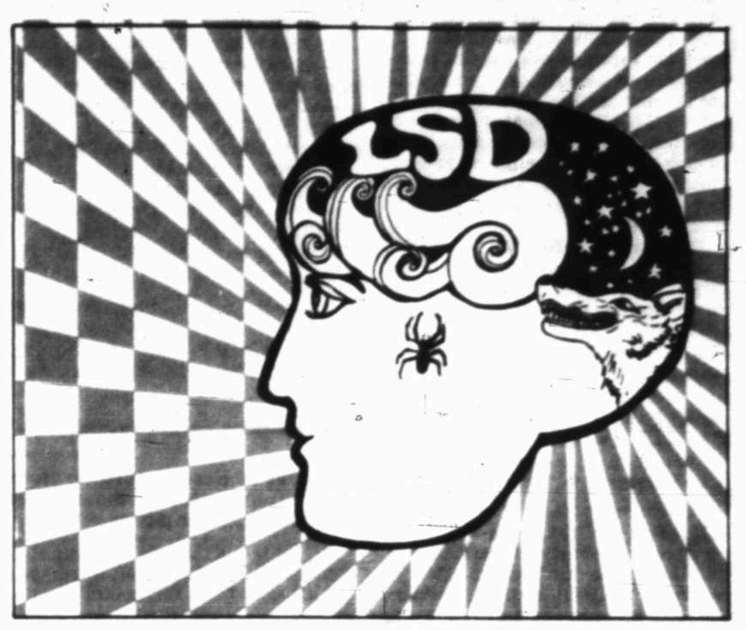

"It's cheap, it's easy (to make) and people are going back to it," concurred Sgt. Tim Rogers, an investigator with the Midland Sheriff's Office.

The detectives said a tab of LSD costs $8, compared with $20 for a hit of heroin and over $100 for a gram of cocaine.

"That's a pretty cheap high," said the MPD detective. Then there's the novelty-item appeal, he said: "It's a new high for a lot of the younger people."

Invented by Swiss chemists in 1938, LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide) is a powerful hallucingen which takes its users on a trip outside reality. In the freaked-out '60s, it was the drug of choice for those who liked to sit and watch pretty colors floating in the air.

Consultant plans drug seminar

By HOLLY LONGABERGER
Staff Writer

There are several different options a company can use to combat drug abuse, according to Charles Pendleton, a consultant to industry about drug control policies and options.

That will be just one of several topics Pendleton will discuss at a "drug awareness in the workplace" seminar being sponsored by Midland's Texas Association of Business. It will be held Wednesday from 8-11:30 a.m. at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 80. A panel discussion will follow Pendleton's address. It will be led by people from local businesses, including Dr. Joseph Wolpmann, medical director of Clearview Behavioral Health Center.

Pendleton, who deals with over 400 companies nationwide, said companies issuing simple statements about drug abuse is the most common practice being done around the country. However, "some companies are issuing broader statements to include laboratory testing, urinalaysis and blood samples," he said.

Another option is employer assistance and rehabilitation, when an employee steps forward and admits having a drug problem. Pendleton said the company provides resources to aid the employee. If the company has no resources it often uses the community resources as a contract service, he added.

An example of this he said, is if a Midland business used the facilities at Clearview Behavioral Health Center.

"But, the employer is under no legal requirements to help the employee and very few do have rehabilitation programs. However, this option is a very viable resource," Pendleton stated.

One option which Pendleton highly recommends is training of managers, supervisors and employees about drug awarness, recognition, signs and symptoms.

"Education is the key to prevention," he stressed.

"A supervisor is out with the employees everyday, and he is really not aware of what's going on," he continued. "They won't become experts, but they will become more aware."

An alternative that would not be put in company policy is undercover work where investigators report to the management, Pendleton said.

Some other options, such as searching employees' belongings or conducting urinalaysis tests are often considered invasion of privacy or unconstitutional. Pendleton said that these are legal, but the employee has the right of notification.

"The reason why private companies have this right is because private companies do not fall under the provision of the Fourth Amendment which states...'All citizens are protected from unreasonable searches by government agent.....' " he said.

According to Pendelton if a private company follows company policy and uses people other than government agents (i.e. police, etc.) the company can operate in the exclusion of the Fourth Amendment.

Pendelton said he is unaware of any arbitrator or judge who has criticized these programs nor has there been any legal decisions about urinalaysis. But there has been criticism against the procedure and the methodology of the proceedures, he said.

A company has to be extremely careful in picking a quailified laboratory to do the urinalaysis testing, Pendelton stated. "Of the thousands of labs across the country, in reality most can't perform industrial legal screening," he explained.

Pendelton suggested some guidelines a company should follow when picking a lab. Make sure the company maintains a legal chain of custody, meaning someone from the lab observes the sample all the way through the process. This helps the company if it is challenged and the lab can prove the sample came from a certain person, Pendleton added.

He also said the lab should use state of the art equipment. One essential piece, he said, is the "GC-Mass Spec." This gives individual identification of all the drugs in the sample.

In addition, it is important to make sure the lab maintains a frozen sample for at least six months and that each positive sample is confirmed by a more sensitive method of testing, such as by GC-Mass Spec.

Official unsure about asbestos suit

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The experts tell him he's safe, but every now and then Lou McCreary casts a wary glance at the little bumps on the ceiling in his Austin office.

McCreary, a special assistant attorney general, is overseeing a $42 million claim Texas has filed to try to remove asbestos from state buildings. Ironically, McCreary works closer to the infamous insulation than most of the state workers he is trying to protect.

Much of the asbestos in state buildings lies above ceiling panels or wraps pipes hidden behind walls. In most of the Supreme Court Building, where McCreary works, the asbestos has been sprayed directly onto the ceiling. An air conditioning duct at the top of the wall blows cold air across the ceiling and onto McCreary's desk.

"It poses no danger statistically," McCreary said, eyeing the duct and the ceiling. "Scientifically, however, the doctors will tell you that there is no certain amount that has to be ingested to cause danger." To cause cancer.

Joel Smith, asbestos coordinator for the Texas Department of Health, said he knows of no instrument that can measure the amount of asbestos in the air in an office like McCreary's.

"If the asbestos is in good condition, is not deteriorating and is not physically being scraped or bored on, the chances of anybody being hurt are infinitesimally small," Smith said. "The danger of asbestos primarily is being disturbed."

McCreary said he knows that but still worries that the insulation is drying and that the air conditioner is blowing microscopic asbestos fibers into his lungs. "It's a psychological problem to employees, because they have heard the dread word — " cancer.

McCreary doesn't smoke, and Smith said that makes him pretty safe. "Statistically, a smoker is about 60 to 90 times a greater risk than a non-smoker," Smith said.

"For every person who contracts cancer from asbestos exposure, 8,000 people will contract cancer from smoking."

Until recently, Manville Corp. — formerly Johns-Manville Co. — was the free-world's largest manufacturer of asbestos products. Today, Manville is trying to climb its way out of the Chapter 11 bankruptcy it filed in 1982 following a stream of asbestos-related lawsuits. Since bankruptcy, a variety of businesses, governments and individuals have filed damage claims against the Denver-based firm totalling about $110 billion.

On Jan. 31, 1985, McCreary — acting on behalf of Attorney General Jim Mattox — filed Texas' portion of those claims in the New York bankruptcy court: $42 million to remove the asbestos from more than 1 million square feet in buildings operated by 13 state agencies or universities.

Included in those claims is a request for $194,872 to remove asbestos from pipes, boilers and ceilings in nine buildings at Odessa College and $28,680 to "remove and replace pipe and boiler insulation that exposes employees and contractors" at the Big Spring State Center.

But McCreary isn't optimistic about the state's chances of recovering much of that $42 million. First, he said, Texas must prove that the asbestos came from Manville and no other manufacturer. Then it must compete against the nearly 10,000 other claims pending against the company.

Manville spokesman Ray Gomez said states, businesses and individuals have filed $80.2 billion in property damage claims against the manufacturer.

Manville's reorganization plan places property damage claims second in priority after health claims. The company has proposed creating a $125 million trust fund to pay off the property damage claims. Texas' share of that trust — if the state could prove all of its claim — would be $65,000.

"By the time you boil it all down, we're not going to get much," McCreary said.

Aware of the odds, Mattox and McCreary asked the Legislature to help Texas join other states in lawsuits against 47 other asbestos manufacturers and distributors. Maryland and the District of Columbia had already filed similar suits.

"The basis of these lawsuits is that the defendants knew or should have known of the hazards associated with human exposure to asbestos products in public buildings, that they failed to provide adequate warnings of such hazards, that such asbestos must be removed or encapsulated and such defendants are therefore liable for such costs," Mattox wrote state leaders on Jan. 29, 1985.

Small town of Sundown like any other except for school

SUNDOWN (AP) — The northwest Texas town of Sundown doesn't seem the least exceptional at first glance.

After passing cotton fields and cows grazing amidst oil pumps, all roads into the town of 1,800 converge at the one flashing red light.

There's one convenience store, Everybody's Bank and a small post office on the main street.

But nestled in the northeast corner of the town located about 35 miles west of Lubbock is a 7.3-acre building built of multi-shaded beige bricks, which turns this small town into an unusual giant.

The building is the home of Sundown School.

School superintendent G.D. Lasater greets visitors to the school with a warm smile and an offer of, "Come in this house," as he leads them into his office. Lasater grew up in Andrews and was a high school principal in Hobbs, N.M., before moving to Sundown.

The school looks new, although it was built in 1978.

The old schools, on the same plot of land, "had some buildings that were in really bad shape," said E.W. Roe, 52, school board member in the 1970s.

"We needed something done to our facilities," Roe continued.

"Most of the people here are just working people. There are no people here who own a royalty. They live at Lubbock or somewhere else," Roe added.

William Clements, 54, has been on the Sundown School Board for the past nine years, serving now as president of the South Plains Area School Board Association.

"As a citizen in the community I felt it was a much needed thing," Clements said. "Our facilities were at a low state."

After determining a bond election could produce the funds needed to finance a super-school for the small town, Roe said, voters passed the issue about four to one.

"We were really surprised at what we could do," Roe explained.

The community was able to finance the school because of "the tax base that we had on the oil property here in the district," Roe said.

Although the bond issue passed, "there was some opposition from the oil companies. Mainly because of the kind of building we were building," Roe continued.

"The oil company pays about 98 percent of the takes in the district. So they paid for about 98 percent of the school. Two percent came from citizens and farmers. The oil companies were upset with us for getting this large of a bond passed." Today, he added, the oil companies are proud of the school.

The cost of the school complex was $5.3 million.

The community of Sundown accepted the idea of building the school. "They were thrilled to death they were going to get this kind of facility," Roe commented.

A complete tour of Sundown School takes about two hours. Included in the complex are facilities for kindergarten through high school. Each classroom has a television with closed circuit capabilities and there are computer labs for each grade level.

An auditorium with 800 rocking seats has expansion capacity to 1,100. The stage area has a professional-quality light and sound system.

There is a junior Olympic-size swimming pool for the 350 students, with required swimming lessons for all youngsters in the school. There's also a canoe so paddling skills can be learned.

Public hearings slated about use of CD funds

From Staff Reports

The first of two public hearings on the use of $659,000 in Community Development funds for 1986-87 by the city of Midland will be at 7 p.m. June 5 in the council chambers.

On June 5 the Planning and Zoning Commission will take public recommendations on the use of the money they expect to receive from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The second public hearing before the city council is tentatively scheduled for July. Community Development funds are used for three objectives, including activities to benefit low and moderate income families; activities which aid in the elimination of slum and blight and other needs having a particular urgency because of existing conditions pose a threat to the health and welfare of the community.

The funds will be used in roughly south and east Midland. Maps of the target areas are available from the city planning division.

The following is a list of activities that may qualify for Community Development funds:

— acquisition of property for a public purpose.
— acquisition, construction, reconstruction, rehabilitation or installation of public facilities or improvements.
— clearance, demolition and removal of dilapidated buildings.
— provision of public services directed toward improving public services and facilities (limited to $98,850 of this year's grant).
— interim assistance, such as repairing streets, parks and public buildings.
— relocation assistance.
— removal of architectural barriers for elderly and handicapped.
— disposition of property acquired under this title.
— rehabilitation of housing.
— code enforcement.
— historic preservation.
— economic development activities.
— administrative and planning costs.

For more information about the Community Development program contact Bob Miklo in the planning division office at 683-4281, ext. 408.

ASBESTOS

The attorney general asked for a $215,000-a-year appropriation to set up a special asbestos litigation team. "It takes money to bring in money," McCreary said, citing the $2 million the state spent in court before it won a $50 million settlement for Texas over the Howard Hughes estate.

"Nothing ever happened," McCreary said. "We'll try again."

In the meantime, the asbestos sits in McCreary's office and hundreds of others around Texas. Aware that disturbing the asbestos is what causes the greatest problems, Bob Jenkins, director of building and property services for the Capitol Complex, has ordered his crews to take special precautions.

"We sent all occupants (of the state buildings) a letter and told them they were not to do any work in the ceilings without contacting us first," Jenkins said. He wants a team of his workers to take a special Department of Health course to learn how to safely remove the asbestos from ceilings and pipes.

In 1983, the Legislature granted Jenkins almost $1 million to remove the asbestos from the ceilings in the Supreme Court Building where McCreary, Mattox and about 250 other state employees work. But when the lawmakers also decided to build some new offices for the courts and attorney general, Jenkins put those plans on hold.

Renovating the old building first, he said, would have required all of those workers to move to temporary headquarters. Less than two years after they would have returned, the new offices would have been ready and another move would be in the works. Jenkins decided to wait on the asbestos work until after the new offices open.

"It was less costly to the state to go ahead and manage it as it is," he said.

SCHOOL

Two gymnasiums are included in the complex.

Biology and chemistry labs are complete. Senior science students are taken on a spring break trip to Port Aransas or to the Davis Mountains. A home economics cottage is used by the community for 50th wedding celebrations and seminars by the county extension agent, as well as home economics students.

Students produce and film a newscast each day.

There are facilities for auto mechanics, wood shop, welding, arts and crafts and drafting, to name just a few. The library is a two-story circular complex within the existing building.

The school district was not content with outstanding facilities. With the building of the school they began to make plans "to hire the best teachers that were available," Roe said.

"Our plans were, within five years, to have the best educational program in the state," Roe said. "I feel we have."

More money was offered to teachers. Because housing was a problem in the tiny community the school built apartments and houses for new staff, Clements said. As time progressed other incentive programs were offered, including health insurance and a retirement plan.

"Once they (the teachers) are here and see what we have, we have very little turnover," Lasater said. "In the past eight years, there have been maybe three that have moved on for reasons of their spouses' jobs. The others have just been through retirement."

Department heads coordinate programs in science, math, history-social studies and language arts from kindergarten through high school. "We feel that has tremendously helped us in our programs, to coordinate it all the way through," Lasater said. "We are proud of our staff."

"When we got into the full facility, there was an overall increase in the test scores (of students)," Lasater said. "You could see a dramatic change in the outlook of the students, the teachers and the community."

Lasater said there is very little vandalism in the school. "Our students are proud of it. We feel they are trying to take care of it."

Dropout statistics for Sundown are minimal. The state formula for a school the size of Sundown would be 10 to 12 students over a four-year period. "We know that we actually have one or two dropout students," Lasater said.

Of the students taking the Texas Examination Academic Measures test last year, all who were required to take the test passed, Lasater said. Scores for students taking the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test show consistent growth from one year to the next.

This is the first year, Lasater said, there has been a problem with "a student passing drugs around. Even now we don't have a problem in the school. This year there has been more attention drawn to it than in the past. However, it has come up such that even our students will police themselves. Our student council members work hard on drinking even. They have programs that point up the evils of drinking alcohol and just plain old smoking cigarettes."

The current oil crunch may begin to affect Sundown School in another year or so, Roe commented. "It's a big budget. I am sure they may have to look at places of cutting the budget. The budget is much higher than for another school this size. But the drop in income "won't take away from the quality," Roe said.

Operating budget for the 1985-86 school year is about $4.3 million. Terrell County, a West Texas school district similar in size to Sundown, has a budget of about $2 million.

"It's our staff's goal to have the finest school system in the state of Texas," Lasater asserted.

Car swerves to avoid barricades, hits house

From Staff Reports

A house at 800 W. Storey was struck by a car Monday, but no serious injuries were reported, according Midland Police Department reports.

Dick Bench, 61, no home address available, was northbound on A Street in a 1978 Chevrolet Caprice about 7:57 p.m. when he swerved to avoid barricades set up for street construction, and lost control, according to reports.

He was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, treated and released, an MMH spokesman said. The house, which is owned by Charlie Linebarger and Associates, was apparently unoccupied, according to police reports.

A 25-year-old Midland sheriff's deputy was treated and released after his patrol car, a 1984 Ford, struck a telephone pole in the 3500 block of Andrews Highway about 6 this morning, according to hospital and police reports.

Deputy John Hudson was responding to a burglary call when his car hit some water and he lost control, reports said.

A cinderblock wall near a house belonging to Bishop Ward at 2413 E. California was struck about 5 p.m. Monday by a 1977 Ford Cobra driven by Michael Houck, 2803 Moss, reports said.

Houck, 19, was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, but has been released, the MMH spokesman said.

Also released was Margaret Graves, 27, 2410 E. California, who had been injured in an 11:50 a.m. accident on Front Street near Lee Street, reports said.

According to reports, Ms. Graves in her 1979 Ford Thunderbird was stopped at a red light on Front Street when her car was struck by a 1971 Chevrolet van driven by 29-year-old Roglio Paredes, Route 2, Box 197. Also struck was a 1973 Chevrolet Caprice driven by Willie Jackson, 1202 E. Cowden, who was also stopped at the light, reports said. Jackson and Paredes were unhurt, reports said.

In other reports, Morris Davis, Route 4, Box 7, reported a Monday burglary in which a microwave oven and two jewelry boxes containing costume jewelry were taken. The oven was valued at $350 and the jewelry boxes and their contents were valued at about $500, reports said.

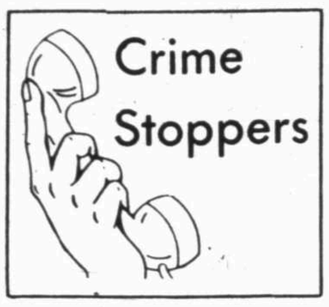

Greg Bonner, 3204 Park Lane, reported the loss of a $450 tire and three $50 batteries from a 1981 Ford truck. The auto burglary occurred on County Road 113 West, reports said.

Crime Stoppers seeks Frontier Petroleum burglary information

This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information about a burglary at Frontier Petroleum, 607 County Road South in Midland County.

Sometime after 7 p.m. on April 10, burglars entered Frontier Petroleum by prying open the front door. They made off with an IBM XT personal computer, an Espon FX-series printer and several computer accessories. The combined value of the stolen property is over $10,000.

Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 cash reward for information leading to the arrest and indictment of the persons responsible for this burglary. Crime Stoppers also pays cash rewards for information leading to indictments for other felony crimes. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa. Callers need not reveal their identities.

DRUGS

Other things to consider are the lab's credentials and toxicology credentials, certifications, quality controls, acceptance in the scientific community and price, he said.

"Prices vary all over the country. What is most is not always the best," Pendelton warned.

Pendelton said he personally feels that a lab should specialize in industrial drug testing. "Most medical and clinical labs are not set up to do those tests," he stated.

He said he is strongly opposed to on-site testing because "non-state-of-the-art equipment" is often used, but he added samples can be collected on the site and shipped to a lab.

Other topics which Pendelton will discuss at the seminar are the cost to industry, rehabilitation of the employee and company policy. For more information about the seminar contact the Texas Association of Business at 694-9543.

LSD

But LSD was also capable of evoking a psychedelic psychosis, as when some acid trippers decided they could float off rooftops to join the pretty colors. Instead, they became one with the ground.

"They really thought they could fly," said Rogers.

The current product is weaker than its '60s forebears, and so far no Midlanders have been the victims of fatal bad trips, according to the detectives. But "it can cause irreparable brain damage," said the MPD detective.

"We're pretty sure that it does have some chromosonal effect," and at the very least can turn its users into "space cadets," said Bob Savage of the Palmer Drug Abuse Program.

"It's a very tragic kind of drug when it does take hold of you," he said.

Savage said LSD use is like a pendulum — "It swings in and out."

The stereotypical profile of a current Midland user is a person in his late teens or early 20s. He's typically from a lower-middle-class or lower-class background, which makes the drug's low price attractive.

"A lot of the heavy-metal kids like it," Savage said. "It's got kind of its own cult."

Unlike cocaine, marijuana and heroin, LSD is a synthetic drug which is produced cheaply and easily in clandestine "labs" in such places as Lubbock or Dallas, from where it has lately been finding its way to Midland.

Recently the principal of Midland Freshman High School turned up an unfamiliar substance which turned out to be LSD, according to the MPD detective.

"He didn't know what he had," the detective said.

The detective theorizes that all the LSD in Midland is being brought in by relatively few people. If police can get to these people and "hit it in its infancy stage, maybe we can shut it down," he said.

Helping limit the drug's popularity is the bad publicity it received in the '60s, he said: "People are still kind of afraid of the effects of it."

But Rogers is less certain that the drug's bad effects are scaring off would-be users.

"If heroin can't scare these people, how the hell can LSD do it?"

Lee Greenwood will perform at Holiday Inn Convention Center

From Staff Reports

Lee Greenwood performs tonight at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. The concert, sponsored by Coors and KNFM Radio, starts at 8 p.m.

Greenwood, one of this country's best known country/pop stars, made the journey from the farmlands of central California to the top of the record charts in the course of a 20-year career.

Greenwood began playing professionally when he was in his mid-teens, but the setbacks along the way were numerous, as opportunities presented themselves on his horizon to vanish later. When he finally signed with MCA Records in 1981, the songs he wrote and the tunes he recorded were to bring him instant success.

He was working in a piano bar at night and dealing in the casino by day at the Tropicana in Las Vegas when "It Turns Me Inside Out" became his first national hit. Only after the song established itself as a hit, did he feel comfortable enough to move into pursuing a music career fulltime.

Some of his hits over the past five years include "Ring On Her Finger, Time On Her Hands," "I.O.U." "You've Got A Good Love Coming," "Fool's Gold," "Dixie Road," "God Bless the U.S.A." and his latest single, "Hearts Aren't Made For Breaking."

Tickets, priced at $13, may be purchased at the door.

Firefighters will collect for MD

From Staff Reports

The Midland and Odessa Fire Fighters will be trying to "Fill their Boots" on Saturday. The contributions will go to fight Muscular Dystrophy.

The Midland Firefighters will be manning the street corners at Wadley and Midkiff and at Loop 250 and Midkiff. In Odessa, the firemen will be at 42nd and Andrews Highway.

The funds raised will be used to support the Permian Basin clinic and its patient service program. Both are held at the Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. For more information call Kerry Zubras at 683-2405 or 366-7588.

MHS student to give piano recital

From Staff Reports

Graham

Sharon Graham presents her senior recital at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the choir room of First Baptist Church, 2104 W. Louisiana Ave.

She will perform works by Beethoven, Chopin, Brahms, Kuhlau and Thompson. Miss graham, who is the daughter of H. Gerald Graham, has been a student of Mrs. Donald K. Thompson for 13 years.

She has been a member of the National Fraternity of Student Musicians for 12 years, earning her Paderewski Medal, as well as a member of the Texas Music Teachers Student Affiliate Organization, playing in several local recitals and contests. Also, she has participated in the State Convention Ensemble programs.

A 1986 graduate of Midland High School, Miss Graham is a member of the National Honor Society, the Junior Classical League, the French Club, the Student Council President's Cabinet, Teen-age Republicans and Students Against Drinking. She is a member of Girl Scouts as well as active in the choir, ensemble and youth groups at First Baptist Church. She is also a member of Acteens.

She plans to attend Southwestern University, Georgetown, this fall.

The public is invited to attend her recital.

Violinist, pianist will perform in MC recital

From Staff Reports

The public is invited to attend a violin and piano recital presenting Cathy Meng Robinson, violin, and Linda Scott, piano, at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College campus.

The program includes Beethoven's Romance in F Major, Opus 50, Bach's Chaconne from Partita No. 2 in D minor, BWV 1004, Prokofieff's Sonata in D Major, Opus 42a and Saint-Saens' Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, Opus 28.

A reception follows at No. 5 Hialeah, Saddle Club North.

The 109-year-old square-rigged barque Elissa manuevers up the Galveston Ship Channel Monday afternoon on the first leg of a 60-day journey to New York to participate in the rededication of the Statue of Liberty on July 4.

Elissa on its way to New York City

GALVESTON (AP) — The tall ship Elissa left its home port Sunday amid a chorus of ship horns, bound for New York to join an Independence Day celebration parade of ships.

The vessel departed about 2:30 p.m. while dozens of pleasure craft and freighters sounded a farewell in the harbor and port, said Alix Hornblower, one of a cadre of volunteers who will sail the ship.

"Everything went as planned," said Ms. Hornblower, a Corpus Christi woman who will join the crew at Charleston, S.C., for the final leg of the trip. "The Elissa did a slow parade up along the beach past the jetties to show off a little to the crowd before sailing out of sight about 4 p.m."

After stops in Miami on June 1 and Charleston on June 5, the iron barque is scheduled to join other tall ships in Baltimore on June 14 for a salute to those who survived and those who perished in the recent sinking of The Pride of Baltimore.

A new $250,000 engine was needed, along with an estimated $483,000 in trip expenses, before the Galveston Historical Foundation could fully commit the Elissa to the New York trip. A four-month campaign raised the needed funds.

Couple charged with making bombs

STATE

AP Laserphoto

Federal agents, posing as Mexican terrorists, confiscated 18 car bombs Saturday and arrested three persons.

ROUND ROCK (AP) — For the five years Francis "Frankie" Paxton lived with her small daughter in a quiet Round Rock subdivision, she was the kind of person residents were proud to call a neighbor and a friend.

However, some of her neighbors said her new husband — retired Green Beret Maj. James Albert Paxton — made them feel uncomfortable when he moved in last year, although they weren't sure why.

Perhaps, they said, it was his unnerving calm, or the fact that the former military officer never seemed to work regularly.

Saturday, the neighborhood was rocked with the news that the Paxtons had been arrested on charges of making and selling bombs, and another man on charges of interstate transportation of explosives.

Paxton, 43, was arrested Saturday morning in the parking lot of a San Antonio shopping mall after he delivered 18 "car bombs" to two federal agents posing as Mexican terrorists, said Robert Rowe, resident agent in charge of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Within 30 minutes, other agents — with guns drawn — surrounded the Paxtons' two-story brick and frame home in Round Rock, about 100 miles away, burst into the residence, and arrested Mrs. Paxton, 35, and Daniel Thomas Nicewander, 33, of Phoenix, Ariz.

The agents led Nicewander away in handcuffs and escorted Mrs. Paxton — who was mowing the lawn a short time before she was arrested — to a waiting car, where she was taken to jail.

Round Rock is on Interstate 35, 20 miles north of Austin.

Rowe said Paxton, his wife, and Nicewander would be arraigned today before a U.S. magistrate.

Paxton was charged with 18 counts of possession, manufacture and sale of explosive devices, Rowe said.

Nicewander, described by authorities as having served under Paxton in the Green Berets, was charged with interstate transportation of explosives.

Mrs. Paxton was charged with possession and sale of an explosive device. Her arrest stems from the sale of a pipe bomb May 6 to an undercover agent near the Paxton home, Rowe said.

Neighbors said they do not know how an outgoing, friendly woman who adored her daughter and liked to visit friends at garage sales could ever become involved in selling bombs.

"She struck you as being more of a Tupperware lady than someone who would try to sell you bombs," said Wanda Slaughter, who lives down the street from the Paxtons in a middle-class subdivision.

Rowe said the explosives Paxton offered the undercover agents "were more powerful than a hand grenade. They were designed for use as car bombs. They had been made with a magnet to stick to gasoline tanks and such," he said.

Federal agents said the bombs were made of two components — one solid and one liquid. The cylindrical devices, about the same size as common smoke detectors, explode when the components are mixed, Rowe said.

Rowe said the devices were "very well-made," easy to conceal and weighed about a pound.

The arrests culminated a month-long investigation by his office, Rowe said.

Neighbors of the Paxtons said that, before the raid, they could not recall the last time a police car stopped on their street.

Lee Payne, 52, who lives across the street from the Paxtons and who has known Mrs. Paxton for five years, said the Paxtons were married about a year ago. It was the second marriage for both, and Paxton brought his son to live with Francis and her daughter, Jessica, Payne said.

It wasn't long before things started to change, he said.

Payne said he sometimes went inside the home when Francis Paxton lived there with her first husband. That ended when James Paxton moved in, he said.

"They would always come to the door to talk to you," he said. "You knew something had changed."

Book has students' ideas about Texas

EL PASO (AP) — To one child, El Paso is a "piece of dry land and 400 miles all around."

To another, the state capital seems more than 3,000 miles away.

Yet another says Texas is the "largest cattle ranch in the world."

The observations of Hughey Elementary School pupils are contained in a booklet called "So You Think You Know All About Texas."

It is an afterthought for an art project involving a mural to celebrate the Texas Sesquicentennial. Art teacher Jeannine Collins asked her fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade students to write a short, spontaneous paragraph telling something they know about Texas. The information served as a guide for deciding what would be depicted in the mural.

School officials decided to publish the booklet "in the spirit of fun (and) duplicating the comments exactly as they were turned in by the students," according to an introduction to the booklet.

The booklet reflects the Hughey students' unique view of Texas, as well as their unique spelling and grammar.

Did you know, for example, that "one of Texas' nice features is Big Ben National Park."

And El Paso is "so far west the rest don't know were hear"?

One of the fourth-grade students counted El Paso's population and came up with a fairly good estimate: "El Paso has about 180 people or maybe more."

And another student has a pretty good geographical peg on El Paso: "El Paso is close to the Rio Grande and Lubbock."

Another wrote, "El Paso is located in the Rio Grande opposite it's principle port Cuidad Juarez."

Mayor Jonathan Rogers, who received a copy last week from Ms. Collins, found two favorites that he has been repeating to his friends:

"El Paso is a major smelling and refining center," one of the students wrote.

Rogers also likes the bit of philosophy that one student tendered about tumbleweeds.

"When the wind blows in El Paso, tumbleweeds fly and roam. But when the wind dies out, they rest at their new home."

"I cracked up. It's humorous," Rogers said.

The mayor also likes the way those youngsters think.

"Mexico is on our left side and we are glad to have them there," one student wrote. Obviously, Mexico is "on the left" if you travel west on the Border Highway or on Interstate 10, Rogers noted.

The mayor also speculated that some of the youngsters had unpleasant experiences driving though vast stretches of the Southwest desert because one of the students wrote "The distance from El Paso to Austin is about 3,670 miles."

Laughing, Rogers said the booklet proves the adage that, "Out of the mouth of babes come pearls."

El Paso truly is a melting pot, according to the young anthropologists at the central El Paso school. As examples, the young students offered a variety of origins for our existence.

"Indians invented" us and people later "came from Asia." But another student insisted that El Paso "was founded by the French" in the 16th century, while another contends that the Spanish established us 100 years later.

Other observations "from the creative pencils of Hughey Elementary Students" include:

- "Texas has a lot of heratige in fact too much to explain."
- "Not like many others...Texas has it's own national Anthom."
- "Texas is the 53rd state of America."
- "Mexico tried to pass a dumb law to take Texan's guns away which caused a war."
- "In the broad perspective of warfair, the Alamo could never be counted a major bottel."

Baby found in dumpster

HOUSTON (AP) — A baby wrapped in a paper bag was discovered abandoned in a trash dumpster buried beneath a portable television just hours after she was born, police said Monday.

Police continued to look for the baby girl's mother, and the child was placed in the custody of the Harris County Children's Protective Services, Sgt. Mike Thomas said.

Thomas said the newborn appears to be Hispanic and was between four and six hours old when found in the dumpster.

Passengers cheer crew

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — After a Continental Airlines jet touched down on just two of its three wheels and skidded on its left wing to a safe stop, passengers applauded and cheered the flight crew.

Flight 199 was forced to make an emergency landing Sunday at Corpus Christi International Airport after the pilot discovered a problem with the landing gear on the Boeing 727-200.

Police search for gunman

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston police were searching today for a man who shot and killed a convenience store owner for refusing to give him money, police said.

Fayez Khalil, 31, of Houston, was shot and killed late Monday after he refused to hand over cash from his register at the Magic Market, said homicide Lt. Sandy Bielstein.

In accordance with the wishes of Dr. Herbert Cavenaugh, deceased, all the files and medical records of his patients are transferred to:

Manpower: leading the way in office automation

Manpower Temporary Services, the world's largest temporary service, has done it again. Manpower has met the challenge of providing the work force with qualified office automation personnel. It has been a costly and timely process, but well worth it.

Manpower has long been recognized as a leader in the temporary help field both nationally and internationally. There are more than 1050 offices all over the world; each one backed with the expertise of professionals in the temporary help business. They are pioneers of office automation training. Although there is only one small office in Midland, Texas, they can count on having the support they need from their home office in Milwaukee. They have all of the knowledge of their office automation experts at their fingertips.

In a recent issue of Modern Technology Mitchell Fromstein, President of Manpower, Inc., says ' "The more we do, the more we're assuming an expanded role, and that's the abiltiy to manufacture, upgrade or cross-train a skill if it doesn't exist," ' But, Fromstein states that he is not in the training busines per se - at least not yet. ' "Training, as such, is a niche in the market. We're not doing this because we're addressing the training market but because we have a massive workforce of experienced office workers who lack automation skills. In order to keep those skills marketable and keep us in business in the future, we had to figure out a way to train those people.

' "The days when a temporary firm simply had a pool of typists who were sent into the marketplace for short assignments are coming to an end. I really see our role changing as equipment in the office gets more complex. The ability to simply run a two-line ad in the paper and find somebody with a skill who will work temporarily just doesn't work anymore," ' he says. He adds that, while the expense of investing in hardware and software might be too steep for small local temporary help firms, those firms will have to rent or make a small investment in equipment eventually to stay in business. ' "We've got 85,000 people trained and they're working, and happy, and comfortable, and successful. How can anyone argue against that?" '

Manpower has developed Skillware for 25 pieces of equipment and software and are continuing research for easier, faster and more economical ways to train today's temporaries.

Among the SKILLWARE available are Xerox 860, IBM Displaywriter, Wang systems, NBI, DECmate, CPT 8520, Phillips Micom, IBM System 36 and IBM 5520.

They also have available specialized IBM PC SKILLWARE training for IBM's popular software. These include the Displaywrite Series for Displaywrite 2 and 3. They also have Lotus 1-2-3, one of the most popular software packages in the office today. Their SKILLWARE teaches operators to create, edit, store and print simple worksheets.

They also have Multimate and Wordstar 2000 SKILLWARE training available for the PC. No other service can meet the needs of office automation like Manpower can. Along with the SKILLWARE training there also has to be support and proven interviewing and testing. Manpower's 30 question interview is a study into the work experience of the applicant and is enhanced by data entry and word processing supplements which go into specific areas of equipment and experience. Their data entry testing is an actual "hands on" test which measures speed and accuracy and the results are printed out in hard copy for accurate measurement. And Manpower's ULTRASKILL is a statistically validated word processing test that covers machine and software specific knowledge and clerical skills.

Manpower is all of this and much more. The professionals at the Midland office are Midland residents. And they are aware of Midland's needs. "During these times we can not let the economy strangle us. We must look for new ways to cut corners and economize. Not only new, but better and wiser," says manager Vicki Hicks.

Manpower's quality of service will speak for itself and so will their methods. Because, their methods are methods of the future, today. Call them at 683-4624 for a free demonstration of SKILLWARE on your equipment. Let them help you solve your crucial staffing problems. Manpower is number one, they are worldwide and they are concerned about Midland, Texas.

House of Arts and Crafts expands, adds items for home decorating

House of Arts and Crafts, located in the La Villita Shopping Center, has expanded in recent months. That's why owner Bill Juren says, "It's not just a crafts store. It's also a variety store for all your needs around the home."

There are items to help you decorate your home, your clothing, and more. It's impossible to list everything, but here's a small selection of what you'll find at House of Arts and Crafts.

NEEDLE WORK SUPPLIES

House of Arts and Crafts has an expanded supply of sewing and needle work items. Whether you want a kit or just select items, this store has it. Pre-finished hoops for cross stitching, terry cloth, place mats, pillow shams and hand towels with cross stitch materials for embroidering are all in stock. The color selection of DMC embroidery floss is brilliant. There's also a wide variety of colors in quality crochet and knitting yarn. Latch hook kits and open stock yarn and canvasses are also in the store.

T-SHIRT AND SHOE DECORATIONS

House of Arts and Crafts has everything it takes to make your T-shirt, sweat shirt or tennis shoes the most dazzling ones in town. Puff paint, slick paints, glitter paint and even iron-on rhinestones will add a special sparkle to your outfit. You can't beat the selection. There's also a wide variety of wood beads and other materials for necklaces. Fun buttons add a special flair to clothing. Different shapes, letters and colors let you use your creativity. These can be used as buttons or can be clipped into special barrettes and bracelets. To top it off there are plastic sun visors that can be painted to fit your style.

TOLE PAINTING SUPPLIES AND CLASSES

Instructor Wanda Mullins teaches a variety of classes, including tole, acrylic, oils and water color. House of Arts and Crafts has a new assortment of do-it-yourself books (on tole painting and other subjects) and wood items that are ready-to-paint.

CANDY MAKING SUPPLIES

One of House of Arts and Crafts newest sections is for your candy making. Candy molds, coloring, flavoring, kits and others supplies are all in stock for you.

MORE

The selection goes on with calligraphy supplies, paint pens and other art supplies. Even silk flowers can be obtained at House of Arts and Crafts. They'll make the arrangements for your home or wedding, or they'll teach you how to make them.

The selection goes on and on. Go by House of Arts and Crafts in the La Villita Shopping Center to see the many things that have been added as they've expanded the store.

Whether your interest is tole painting or T-shirt decorating House of Arts and Crafts, located in the La Villita Shopping Center, has the supplies. Go by and see their expanded selections.

Classes and knitting machines are a hit at Leggett's Sewing Solutions

Have you ever wished you could knit your own sweater, but didn't think you had the time or knowledge needed? Perhaps you're an accomplished seamstress, but would like to smooth out some troubled spots. Leggett's has the Sewing Solutions at Number 8 Plaza Center.

Leggett's newly expanded area is dedicated to sewing classes for beginners and experts. Bernina sewing machines and sergers, along with the incredible Passap knitting machines, are all set up to make learning fun at Leggett's. Owner Betty Martin explains that they have a press, cutting tables and all the sewing machines needed for the classes. Though Bernina machines are provided for classes, individuals are free to bring their own.

To insure the best learning environment possible, classes are limited to approximately eight people.

Qualified instructors, that also teach at Odessa College and Midland College, teach a wide variety of classes including lace tucks, French hand sewing, detachable collars and more. A basics class for 10-13 year-olds will start in June. There will also be a class for 14-16 year-olds. A Brazilian Embroidery class, which focuses on unique clothing embellishment, started last week.

A Saturday Series entitled Sewing Solutions is sure to be a hit. Each Saturday the class deals with a different trouble spot. You can sign up for just the class or classes you want.

Betty also encourages you to let them know if you would like to see a class offered on a particular subject. Even evening classes will be offered if there is enough demand.

Classes are approximately $5/hour unless supplies are provided. When the supplies are not provided a discount is offered at Leggett's.

One of the most exciting things going on at Leggett's Sewing Solutions right now is the introduction of the Passap Knitting Machines, which a novice can use to knit a beautiful sweater in just a couple hours.

These incredible machines, which can be used to make blankets, sweaters, socks, dresses and so much more, have been popular in Europe since the early 1800's. It's just been within the last 30 years that knitting machines were imported to the United States. Passap machines have been imported for the last four or five years. The first of these to be imported were pink, thus they've been fondly called "Pink Knitting Machines."

Betty says she waited a while to begin offering these machines, because she wanted to have a technician and instructor first. "If people don't know how to use it they're not going to like it," she reasoned.

Now, Leggett's has an instructor, technician and a variety of knitting machines. Lucrecia Black enjoys teaching people to use the knitting machines.

Lucrecia says, "Speed's the name of the game we play in this country, now." This machine lets you play the game successfully.

Even if you've never used a knitting machine before, you can set an appointment to use Leggett's machine for just $10. Lucrecia will show you how to use the machine and in about two hours you can have a beautiful sweater. (Total cost, including yarn, will be approximately $15.)

"The end product is the same (as one knitted the old fashioned way)," Lucrecia says.

Leggett's keeps a wide selection of yarn, including acrylic, wool and cotton, in stock. In fact, Betty says when your knitting a sweater this way, "The biggest thing is trying to decide which color you want."

That makes matching a skirt easy.

Betty also announces that there is a Machine Knitting Club which meets at the store the second Tuesday of each month.

Soon their will also be a Bernina Club, where people can share helpful hints.

Whether you want to knit a sweater, improve your sewing skills or just see how Leggett's incredible line of machines work, go by Leggett's, Number 8 Plaza Center. You may call 683-3101 for more information.

Foto-Makers says it's check up time for your camera

Terry Smith, owner of Foto-Makers in the Imperial Shopping Center, says it's time to make sure your camera is ready for your summer vacation. Foto-Makers will help you make sure you have everything you need.

It's time to get your camera ready for the vacation scene, says Terry Smith, owner of Foto-Makers in the Imperial Shopping Center.

When it's time to "zoom in" on your vacation spot or catch a picture in a "flash," you'll be glad you went to Foto-Makers for all your camera equipment.

Foto-Makers has everything you could possibly need, starting with batteries and including many types of sophisticated equipment.

The experts at Midland's premier camera store will help you select the perfect flash, lenses, filters, even tri-pods and darkroom equipment.

If you don't have a camera that's up to par for your fun vacation, Foto-Makers can solve the problem. Whether you want an auto-load, auto-focus, auto-advance camera that takes all the worry out of photography or a camera that lets you be the boss, Foto-Makers has it. Kodak, Konica, Minolta and Nikon are just a fraction of the variety.

And, the film selection is unbeatable. Kodak, Fuji and Konica - take your pick. Terry says the new Kodak VRG film, which they have in stock, is proving to be very popular.

The colors are brilliant.

When you're through catching all those exotic scenes and fun family shots, you'll want to bag your camera up in a bag from Foto-Makers and head back to the same store for quality prints, albums and frames.

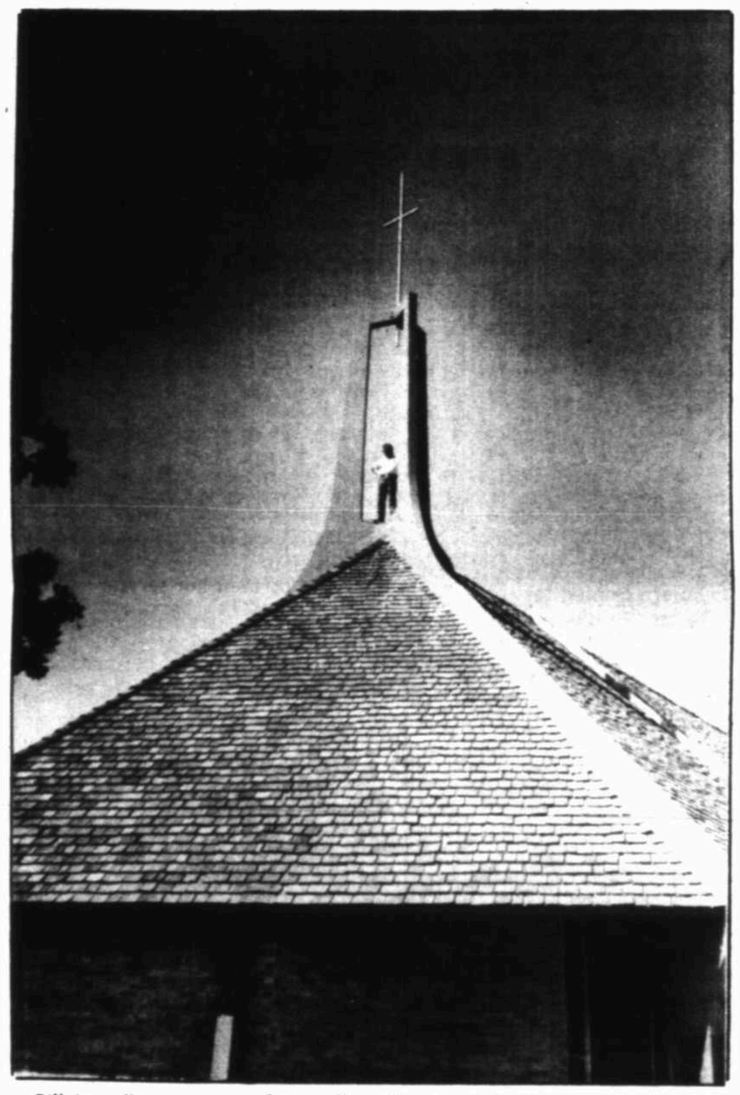

Take your choice of 3½x5 glossy prints or the 4x6 mat finish photos that've made Foto-Makers famous. Just have them in by 10 and they will be out by 4.

Foto-Makers, who as an Imperial Shopping Center merchant is helping support Meals on Wheels, is equipped to do enlargements in the shop. Wallet size, 5x7s and 8x10s are all yours at this lab which is dedicated to quality workmanship.

So, let Foto-Makers at Wadley and Midkiff print your Memorial Day pictures and prepare you for more photo fun this summer.

Lewellen's fine maintenance-free surfaces have many applications

Meeting set for organization of local N.A.R.I. chapter

Bill Lewellen, owner of Lewellen Construction, is on top of a big job at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road. Lewellen Construction is covering all the wood beams with a high quality, maintenance-free surface. Call 686-8007 for more information.

Many homeowners have discovered the brilliant difference that maintenance-free siding from Lewellen Construction makes. However, many people have not recognized the impressive improvement that maintenance-free surfaces can make in commercial structures.

Bill Lewellen points out that one of their most recent jobs has been at the Grace Lutheran Church at 3000 W. Golf Course Road. This beautiful brick building with a steep roof ahs many dark colored beams that required painting regularly. Lewellen Construction has covered each of those huge beams with a complementary maintenance free surface. When the job is completed, the church can count on a consistently good looking exterior that will require no maintenance for years and years to come.

Joan Lewellen says that businesses can also enjoy this type of quality exterior. It is important for a busines to be constantly projecting a good image. That's tough to do with painted surfaces, even when it's regularly painted. After all, each paint job goes through at least three stages — looking great, looking okay, looking bad. Lewellen Construction makes it possible for your business constantly maintain a good image.

Bill encourages customers to be cautious when they are comparing prices. You need to be aware of the grade of materials being included in the estimate. He points out that when you invest in a maintenance-free exterior, you need to make sure that you are getting quality materials and good workmanship that will endure for years.

Alside Siding's Divisional Sales Manager Michael Johnson attests to the quality of the work done by Lewellen Construction: "Workmanship is excellent and meets all manufacturer's suggested installation specifications."

Lewellen Construction's customers also attest to the company's quality work. One customer recently wrote, "I always get what I order and receive compliments on our selection, quality of material and the professional installation. You can refer to us qny time and we will give you an 'A' recommendation."

This customer had called on Lewellen construction for siding, trim and windows. (Lewellen Construction also installs quality storm and replacement windows and doors.)

Is it time for you to get a maintenance-free exterior for your home or office. Call Lewellen Construction at 686-8007 or go by their booth at the Home Show in Midland Park Mall, June 19-22. They'll show you how to enter Alside's Keep American Beautiful Sweepstakes. The grand price will be new Alside siding, plus all new windows, soffit and fascia, gutters and downspouts, shutters and storm doors installed on your home. That's only the beginning of the prizes, so be sure to go by Lewellen Construction.

The Lewellen's are commited to quality work, that's why they are working to organize a local chapter of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry. An organizational meeting has been set for May 28, 7:30 p.m. at the Airport Executel on Highway 80. Call for details at 686-8007. This not-for-profit trade association will represent alls egments of the professional remodeling service industry. One goal of the association is to protect the homeowners of the Permian Basin by helping them know who the reputable contractors are.

Baby boomlet boon to clothing business

NEW YORK (AP) — A baby boomlet, which helped sales of children's clothing grow nearly $5 billion since 1979, is enticing big name designers and manufacturers to hop onto the kiddie bandwagon.

Though nowhere near as big as the baby boom that followed World War II, the mini-boom has resulted in industry sales sprouting from $10 billion in 1979 to $14.7 billion in 1984, the most recent year for which statistics are available.

And for designers and retailers, the good news is expected to continue.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the next five years will be peak years for the children's clothing industry.

Among those who have already jumped into the industry are Liz Claiborne, whose success with a line of clothes for girls sizes 7-14 led her to expand the collection this spring to include a preteen line called LizKids.

Jou Jou Designs, which has been in the junior business for nine years, is also taking advantage of the favorable market and has added a back-to-school line for kids.

"We envision doing $5 million to $7 million" during the first year, said Marcelle Zeit, vice president of Jou Jou's children's division.

Even Hershey Foods Corp. is getting into the act. The Pennsylvania-based chocolate maker, with help from General Sportwear Co., will have a line of Hershey's kiddie clothes in department stores this fall.

The reason designers view the market as being lucrative can be charted to changes in parents, more than children.

More mothers today are "among the trend-setting people, the yuppies and working women," said Diane Specht, associate publisher of Earnshaw's Review, considered the bible of the children's industry. They have more money to spend and tend to be more creative when it comes to mixing and matching.

AP Laserphoto

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the next five years will be peak years for the children's clothing industry. Liz Claiborne has jumped into this market with a line of clothes for girls called LizKids.

Suzanne Richey of Thomas Textiles, a major manufacturer of children's clothing, said one of the biggest changes is a move away from "very basic clothing to very unique, novel and very forward clothing."

"Gone are the days of five basic T-shirts and five pairs of pants. It's not enough for the garment just to be cute," Ms. Richey said. "It also has to be on target as far as having fashion silhouettes, prints, novelties and appliques."

OshKosh B'Gosh, a 90-year-old maker of work clothes for farmers and railroad workers, foresaw the mini-boom five years ago. Although the company was making some kids' clothes at the time, the company jumped into the market, said David Hyde, vice president of merchandising.

Between 1981 and 1985, the Wisconsin-based manufacturer's sales have tripled from $47.5 million to $152 million, primarily because of its children's line.

"When you combine more births with people having children later, double-income families, more disposable income, the whole yuppie approach to wanting nice things not just for themselves but for their children, that's why the children's apparel business is faring well," Hyde theorized.

Ellie Fishman, a children's fashion consultant, added that today's more casual lifestyle has also helped the industry.

"The overall market has a very casual feeling, which is reflecting a lifestyle which for a long time didn't exist in the children's business," she said. "So it's appealing to a younger mother who herself constantly dresses that way."

Other factors, Ms. Fishman said, include a relaxed dress code at most schools and children's added awareness of fashion through television.

One of the newest trends for younger consumers is wearing stone-washed jeans with holes worn into them.

New designer jeans 'aged'

NEW YORK (AP) — The sturdy, indigo-blue dyed denim pants that dry goods peddler Levi Strauss helped turn into an American classic will be pummeled with rocks and intentionally ripped in the name of style this fall.

Stone-washed denims, which have been around for several seasons, are expected to be a big seller for fall, according to an industry group and several jeans manufacturers including Levi Strauss and Zena jeans.

But some predict the newest trend will be stone-washed jeans with holes worn into pockets, derriere and knees.

Jean Driscoll of Jeanswear Communications, an industry group, said the "bleached out, torn on purpose look" has appeal to younger consumers who are leaning toward a "'50s and '60s perspective."

"They're interested in James Dean and the whole revival of the '60s," she said, adding that tie-dyed jeans and denims with patches will also be popular for fall.

Dick Gilbert, president of Zena jeans, said he was surprised and more than a little skeptical when his design team told him the ripped jeans were the hottest look in Europe.

"They came back and showed me a pair of jeans they paid $80 for," Gilbert said. "It had three holes in it."

At first he said, "forget it," but was persuaded to change his mind. Zena will offer the torn jeans for $44, making it their most expensive jean.

Gilbert said the price reflects the amount of work that goes into achieving the look. The holes are made using a car buffer and sand paper, and then stone-washing the denim to achieve the worn look.

Stone-washing is done by putting dyed jeans into massive laundry tubs and washing them for several hours with pumice. The rocks strip the denim of all but the faintest of color.

Gilbert admitted the idea of buying torn jeans was "a little silly."

"Here, we're building in the holes and charging you extra for them, when if you're patient enough you can get them yourself."

Jeans manufacturers prepare for busy year in 1986

NEW YORK (AP) — With baby boomers aging and the number of traditional jeans wearers shrinking, the jeans industry has had to jazz up the American classic to renew buyer interest.

Thanks to printed denims and stone-washing — fading denim by washing it with pumice — manufacturers have apparently recaptured the public's attention, and are gearing up for a big year in 1986.

"It should be a boom year for jeans if January and February are any indication," said Jean Driscoll of Jeanswear Communications, an industry group. Figures show sales were 23 percent higher in January than the year before and up 14 percent in February.

Some 416 million pairs of jeans were sold in 1985, according to Miss Driscoll. That figure was far short of the record 502 million sold in 1981 at the peak of the designer jeans and the "urban cowboy" Western craze.

"That was really a phenomenon, one that I don't know if we'll ever see again," said Bill Hervey, president of the Wrangler menswear division for the Greensboro, N.C.-based Blue Bell Inc.

Oversaturation of the market and the shrinking number of traditional jeans wearers caused sales to fall to 466 million the following year.

Dean Christon, marketing specialist for Levi Strauss & Co., said demographics was the key.

Stagnant sales caused the San Francisco-based Levi Strauss — the nation's leading jeans producer — to close 23 facilities and lay off 7,000 workers in 1985. Dozens of smaller companies went out of business.

"The people who buy the most jeans are those between 12 and 24. That's a group that is smaller today than in the past," Christon said. "The baby boomers have moved past that point now, so the dramatic increases (in sales) of the late '70s are just not occurring any longer."

Another reason for the drop in sales was that buyers got tired of jeans and began stocking stores with "anything but denim," especially the camouflage look, said Tom Collins, a spokesman for Blue Bell.

Jeans sales remained fairly static from 1982 until the second half of 1985 when consumers began gobbling up paisley and flower-printed denims, and jeans in a rainbow of colors that were anything but blue.

"With a smaller number of jeans companies scurrying to get a bigger piece of the pie and a smaller number of buyers, we know we have to have new product offerings so people will buy more," Christon said.

Levi primarily hung its hopes on its pre-washed 501s, spending over $50 million in advertising since 1984 to promote the faded, shrink-to-fit styles.

The gamble paid off. Levi sold $2.6 billion worth of jeans in 1985, according to Christon.

Wrangler, which primarily stuck with its basic five-pocket jean, also saw sales start to climb last summer.

"We trace it to an interest in getting back to our roots again," said Collins. "The consumer really is interested in buying American-made clothes, and jeans are about as American as you can get."

DEAR ABBY

Wife loses by choosing husband instead of dog

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to "Mrs. Catch-22," whose common-law husband gave her an ultimatum: the dog or him. I agree with your advice to send the heartless scoundrel packing.

Several years ago, "John," my first husband, gave me a female puppy for Christmas. I housebroke her, fed her and trained her with no help from him. She was a good watchdog, yet gentle with our baby.

Then, a year and a half later, John decided he couldn't put up with the dog hair in the house, even though I vacuumed and swept daily.

He said he was going to take the dog to the woods and shoot her. I cried and begged him not to. I offered to take her to my mother's house until a home could be found for her. He refused that idea. I offered to take her to the Humane Society, but he said it would be cheaper to shoot her.

He gave me a choice — either let him shoot her that day or he was going to move out that night and file for divorce.

I made the wrong choice. I chose John. I cried for two weeks after he shot her.

I recall asking myself what kind of man I was married to. Well, two years later, he left me for another woman, which is something my dog never would have done. So by making the wrong choice, I lost them both. Had I chosen the dog I would have had one less heartbreak to endure. My son has never forgiven his father for shooting our dog.

Since then, I have remarried. My present husband loves dogs, and I am happier than I have ever been in my life. — SHOULD HAVE CHOSEN THE DOG

DEAR SHOULD HAVE: It's a shame you were such a slow learner. For the record, if an animal lover is asked to choose between a person and a dog, choose the four-legged variety.

DEAR ABBY: I am 81 and my darling is 66. For the last several years I have had two birds — a small parrot and a cockatiel. I have grown very fond of these birds, but my fiancee says no way will she marry me unless I get rid of my feathered friends. Perhaps I should mention that she is a compulsively neat housekeeper who thinks birds are dirty. I read you daily. — PERTURBED OCTOGENARIAN

DEAR OCT: There are no "dirty birds," just careless caretakers. Promise to clean the bird cage daily, and line it with my column.

DEAR ABBY: Now that summer is nearly here, there will be many picnics, barbecues and cookouts, so I want to warn parents, grandparents, baby sitters, etc., about a danger they may not be aware of.

As a newspaper reporter I had the unhappy task of reporting the accidental death of a toddler. This little one was drowned when he quietly fell head first into a picnic cooler filled with water. (The container had been filled with ice, but it melted.) No one saw it happen. The child just disappeared. They found him later.

His parents were overcome with guilt and grief. No one ever dreamed that such a freak accident could occur, but it did. And if it happened once, it could happen again.

Please, remind your readers to empty those ice chests once they've served their purpose. Thanks, Abby. — PAT WILSON, SPRING LAKE, N.C.

DEAR PAT: Thanks for caring enough to write. You may have saved a toddler's life today.

Benavidez to compete in pageant

Nora Benavidez, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Adam Benavidez and Maria Benavidez of Midland, has been named a participant in the Modern Miss State Finals to be June 20-22 in Houston.

The pageant is for young women, ages 13-18, who excel in scholastic achievement and community involvement. Contestants are judged on poise, personality, grooming and speech or talent presentation, as well as scholastic and civic achievements. Entrants must be participate in school activities and document at least 10 volunteer service hours to a community or charitable organization.

Pageant is the official state preliminary for the Modern Miss National Finals.

Miss Benavidez, a student at Lee High School, has been active in French competitions in Houston and San Angelo. She is a candystriper at Midland Memorial Hospital, a Dixie Doll at LHS and a member of Alamo Heights Baptist Church.

AT WIT'S END

'Makeover' misleading misnomer

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is nothing that brings me to a dead stop like a picture page in a magazine headlined, 'MAKE-OVERS.' The "before" picture is in black and white and shows a woman with limp hair, no make-up and a pained look on her face indicating the transmission fell out of her car — on her foot. In the "after" picture, she is shown in color, with a new hair style, new lip line and a look usually reserved for a woman who has just smelled laundry with a fabric softener.

I live the fantasy that if I were to be made over, a few bangs, a little shadow under my cheekbones and a trace of lip gloss could get me all the work Jaclyn Smith turns down.

Come on now, don't tell me you haven't stretched out on your back in bed and held a mirror up to your face to see how you'd look with no wrinkles. Or that you haven't rearranged your chin with transparent tape to your neck. We've all locked the bathroom door and put chewing gum between the spaces of our teeth to make them look like they'ye been capped.

The only thing great about being on nationally televised shows is the trip to make-up. They're like artists who take away your father's nose and give you one like Joan Collins, take away your Margaret Hamilton look-alike lips and give you full ones like Sophia Loren. They can give you Hepburn cheekbones and a Linda Evans chin just with contour and shading.

The real downer is when you have to wash it off. No one will ever know the nights I cried as I watched my entire face disappear down the drain in a rush of brown water and suds.

I want to believe that a make-over takes absolutely no discipline or sacrifice on my part. I hate the articles on entertainers who say that a beautiful body, good skin and fat, shiny hair is a lifetime commitment to exercise and good diet.

I'll never forget what my sister-in-law said once. It was on her 40th birthday. She was in a philosophical mood and was looking for the meaning of life. Finally, she broke the silence and said, "I am so bored with dieting and counting calories and feeling guilty for not exercising. I have just figured out that for the rest of my life, I can never enjoy an Oreo cookie."

We both sat there and thought about it. She was right. That's why I have to believe that with a bright scarf and a few plucked brows, my mother would not recognize me.

The other day I read an article that was talking about models. They said Christie Brinkley was great to work with. She even got up an extra hour early so the puffiness of sleep would diminish.

Given that equation, it means only one thing. I can get no more than three hours sleep a night.

Gainesville newspaperman veteran of 50 years' experience

By TOM UHLER

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Imagine a 13-year-old kid in a slicker and jeans riding his big two-wheeler down a muddy street in the rain in 1936, hands clutching his handle-bars and a whistle between his teeth. He's tooting the whistle up and down the street, flinging newspapers to folks at screen doors.

In those days, you didn't have plastic wrappers to keep your newspaper from being soaked in the rains, so when it rained paper boys blew whistles to alert customers they were coming.

Fact is, even on sunny days you didn't know when to expect your paper in the 1930s. There were no deadlines.

"We just ran the presses when we had everything ready," recalled Warren Flowers, general manager of the Gainesville Daily Register. "Sometimes it'd be dark before we got them out."

Flowers, who has been in the newspaper business 50 years this month, was one of those 13-year-olds riding in the rain in 1936. That was his first year as a carrier for the Register. Except for a brief stint in the armed forces in World War II, he's been with the newspaper ever since.

A subscription to the daily cost 10 cents a week in 1936 and came to your door in the form of a folded up four-cornered biscuit.

"I had 80 subscribers," Flowers said of that first paper route. "If I could collect from them, I could come home with $3.20 a week."

Later he would make another 10 cents a day carrying papers from the press room to the route room for the carriers.

Warren Flowers

HE REMEMBERS the days when former editor A. Morton Smith sequestered himself in a telephone booth in the office to take stories from The Associated Press. It was a daily occurrence. Smith had a typewriter set up in the phone booth and banged out stories via "the horn" of Ma Bell. AP transmits straight into computers in the newsroom now.

In those bygone days, paper boys had more time to do kid things than they do now. They'd pick up the nearest milk can and stick when they passed through the cemetery and play "Tin Can Shinny" on Main Street behind the office, or maybe engage in a variation of leap-frog called "Spanish 1-and-Over" while waiting for the presses to roll.

They made it a point most days to stop at the Purity Bakery shop owned by the late John Hardy across the street from the newspaper and buy all the day-old cherry and apple pies he had, at a nickel a pie. Warren Flowers was always near the lead.

A carpenter's son, Flowers was born in the railroad town of Shattuck in the Oklahoma panhandle on Aug. 3, 1922, the oldest of six children born to Charlie and Hallie Flowers.

The family left Oklahoma when Flowers was two years old and settled in Gainesville, where the oldest boy saw an ad for paper boys in the local newspaper 11 years later and answered it. Newspapering was the first and only work he ever knew.

Flowers joined the Register two years before it absorbed the rival Signal, when it was called the Daily Register and Messenger. The newspaper had flourished for the past 46 years and was owned by Clarence, Joe Sr. and Esther Leonard, all of Gainesville. It was founded by the Leonards' father, J.T. Leonard, in 1890.

FLOWERS GRADUALLY worked his way up in the company from paperboy, to circulation manager for many years, to business manager, and finally to general manager in 1976. Not many homegrown men in the town of 14,000 can say they didn't work for him as a paper boy at one time or another over his long career.

"I'd say thousands have passed through here," said Joe Grotte Jr., a former carrier and now foreman of the composing room at the newspaper. "Many have gone on to bigger and better things — like Phil Adams, he's the district attorney now."

"You really needed the money and wanted a paper route back then," Flowers recalled. "When I was back from the service, in the late '40s and '50s, we'd have an applicant pool of 50 good prospective carriers. They'd stay on a route two or three years in those days, through their senior year in high school. You didn't have the turnover you have now."

Back then, parents didn't throw their kids' routes. They were usually too busy working themselves. Carriers were mainly boys whose parents wanted them to become businessmen. There weren't many female carriers; the Child Labor Board frowned on paper girls.

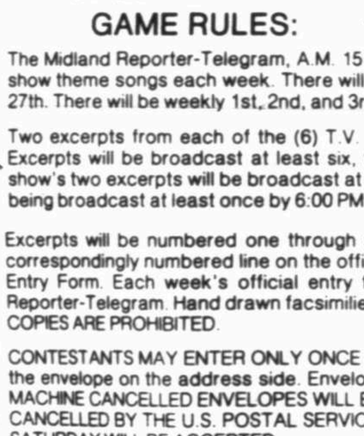

Expanded rural routes, improved circulation technology and the need to get the newspaper to the reader earlier put an end to the days of 13-year-old carriers, although a few youngsters still manage a city route. (There will always be a 12- or 13-year-old hot off the street with a dog-chasing tale to tell.)

THAT'S NOT all that has changed. Newspapers, and the men and women who operated them, had to be able to change with the technology if they wanted to survive. In a span of less than 50 years, Flowers has seen the Register progress from an 8-page flatbed Goss Duplex printing press, with 72-inch wide rolls, that printed off hot lead type, to a high-speed 16-page Goss Tubular Press with metal casting boxes in 1956, to its current 24-page electronic offset printing press with heated aluminum page plates.

Flowers has seen the newspaper move from manual typewriters and linotype machines to video display terminals and computerized typesetters. He was around when the Register published its largest paper ever in 1948 — a 116-page "Centennial Edition" — and was also around for the newspaper's 50th anniversary edition in 1940 — a 114-page edition that opened with a letter from then-president Franklin D. Roosevelt.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

MONEY

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against all major currencies except the Canadian dollar in early European trading today. Gold prices fell slightly in light trading.

"The market wants to buy dollars, but because of the holidays in the United States and Britain yesterday, there just wasn't much opportunity to trade," said one Frankfurt dealer.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar fell to a closing 169.68 yen from Monday's 169.75. But later, in London, it rose to 169.80 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Monday:

—2.289 West German marks, up from 2.281

—1.8985 Swiss francs, up from 1.8908

—7.3015 French francs, up from 7.2685

—2.5755 Dutch guilders, up from 2.566

—1,570.50 Italian lire, up from 1,563.50

—1.3715 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3716

In London, the dollar rose against the British pound. It cost $1.4928 to buy one pound, cheaper than the $1.495 price in Europe Monday.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $341.15 a troy ounce at mid-morning, up from an opening bid of $340.75 but lower than last Friday's closing bid of $342.20 when the market was last open.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, the bid price was $341.35, down from $341.50 late Monday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell the equivalent of 84 cents to close at a bid $341.26.

Silver rose on the London market where the metal was selling at a bid price of $5.09 a troy ounce compared with $5.05 last Friday.

Experts warn surge in oil prices only temporary

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The recent spurt in crude oil prices, primed by strong demand for gasoline in the United States, signals only a temporary gain for the battered oil industry and prices will decline again before fall, many industry experts and analysts say.

"Frankly, it's baffling in objective terms," said Scott Johnson of Chase Econometrics, referring to the market's rise.

The price of the major American crude oil, West Texas Intermediate, cracked the $17-a-barrel level early last week on both the futures and open exchanges for the first time in three months. And petroleum product prices moved up strongly as well.

Although fuel prices subsequently dropped sharply, they finished the week positively. The crude oil futures contract, at $15.59 a barrel, was nearly $2 above its close on May 1.

The surge led to suggestions that the long-awaited market recovery had arrived and that crude oil prices were on their way to stabilizing close to $20 a barrel.

But the increase in gasoline demand had caused some traders to be "overly euphoric" about crude oil prices, said Johnson, vice president for energy economics at the forecasting concern, adding that the price rise was more a result of "emotion than substance."

Dillard P. Spriggs, president of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a consulting firm, said: "We're seeing an upward blip now. We'll see a downward blip later. The market is going to remain volatile, with prices moving between $14 and $18 for quite a while."

THESE AND OTHER analysts said that gasoline demand, which rose at rates of 6 percent throughout the early spring and which caused refiners to increase their purchases of crude oil, cannot sustain crude oil prices at its current levels because of the continued glut of crude on world market.

"There probably is a little more upside room left in the market — I wouldn't be surprised to see it rise by another dollar or so," said Steve H. Hanke, chief economist for Friedberg Commodity Management Inc. of Toronto. "But the long-term fundamentals — a tremendous amount of excess capacity exacerbated by producers' terrific needs for revenue — are still very bearish."

Several of the oil experts interviewed questioned whether the public's demand for gasoline was really as strong as some in the oil community have asserted. Only the United States has experienced a growth in gasoline demand; Western Europe and Japan have not.

Charles T. Maxwell, a senior vice president at Cyrus J. Lawrence Inc., contended that some portion of the growth in demand was due not to motorists, but to petroleum marketers buying gasoline supplies early and to dealers taking early delivery for the Memorial Day holiday.

IN FACT, THE latest government and oil industry statistics indicate that gasoline demand may be easing. The Federal Energy Information Administration, for example, estimated gasoline demand, after rising for over two months, declined slightly in April to 6.9 million barrels a day.

However, several analysts asserted that, whatever its true strength, gasoline demand may have, as Johnson put it, "set up the potential for a real sharp crude oil price decline in the late summer."

One reason, according to Hanke, is that the demand for gasoline spurred refiners to increase their purchases of crude oil, which, in turn, provoked producers to push more crude oil onto the world market.

Another reason, Maxwell explained, is that the demand for crude oil was increased by refiners having to use more barrels of heavy crude oil than usual to make gasoline. That was because the three-week-long strike in the Norway's North Sea oil sector temporarily eliminated from the market 900,000 barrels a day of light crude oil, which yields the most gasoline and because the demand for gasoline had pushed refinery runs to five-year highs.

Further, analysts said that Saudi Arabia probably lowered production of its light crude oil by up to 500,000 barrels a day in April while renegotiating netback deals.

THUS, IN ORDER to get the volume of gasoline they wanted, United States refiners had to buy a larger-than-usual quantity of heavy crude, a circumstance that Maxwell said has been the major reason for the rising price of crude oil.

Now, the analysts said, the return of Norwegian oil to the marketplace and the completion of the Saudi renegotiations with its customers mean that the surplus of crude oil will be substantially greater in 6 to 10 weeks — and so will the stocks of such important petroleum byproducts as kerosene and heating oil.

Some analysts said they remained skeptical over OPEC's prospects for reaching an accord at its full meeting scheduled for June. Others feel that, chastened by a half year of sharply lower revenues, the OPEC membership is now ready to abide by a production accord.

Paper begun in 1773 halts publication

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore News American suspended publication today and ordered severence pay for its approximately 500 employees, newspaper officials announced.

The company statement said the newspaper's final edition would go to press this afternoon.

The News American, begun in 1773, has published both morning and evening editions during the week and morning papers on Saturday and Sunday.

The Hearst Corp., which has owned the News American since 1923, has been trying without success to find a buyer for the ailing daily since last November.

The company has released few details of the negotiations, which involve not only the newspaper business but also the valuable downtown property where the newsroom, business offices and printing presses are located.

The building, covering a city block, is across from the street from the popular Harborplace shopping mall and tourist center at the Inner Harbor.

The News American statement said Hearst discussed the sale with 50 possible buyers, many of whom were interested in the real estate, but Hearst was unwilling to sell the property unless continued publication of the News American was guaranteed.

Land Office offers relief to producers

From Staff Reports

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro has told represenatives of Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association the General Land Office is concerned with the plight of producers under its leases and that the GLO has already redefined and interpreted its leases in the most favorable light possible for producers.

The delegations, with the assistance of Rep. Tom Craddick, met with Mauro to discuss the basis on which royalties under from state leases administered by the General Land Office are computed.

Mauro said he understood the producer's problem, and would help in every way possible. He said the General Land Office would send a letter to producers this week, explaining that producers may file a lease amendment to request a shut-in royalty payment for oil wells similar to that for gas wells.

He also said that the GLO staff was reviewing an existing attorney general's opinion which requires royalty to be paid on gross proceeds of oil sales without taking into account transportation charges.

"We are satisfied with the cordial and helpful position of Commissioner Mauro and his concerns for the industry," said Hans Hansen, spokesman for the group.

Business lobbies lining up to support tax revision measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the nation's largest business lobbies, which opposed the tax revision bill passed by the House last year, are beginning to line up behind the far more radical measure now before the Senate.

And, for the first time since President Reagan made tax simplification a top priority in early 1985, the odds seem to have shifted in favor of enactment of a far-reaching tax overhaul bill, say those in both industry and government.

"You can almost smell a bill (emerging) that has widespread support," said Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

The Senate is expected to begin debate on the tax bill in early June, soon after members return from their Memorial Day recess.

The degree by which the Senate Finance Committee measure — with its lower top tax rates on both individuals and corporations — has been picking up business endorsements has surprised many, even in the business community.

"Business in general is favorably impressed with the Senate bill. It is simpler, more dramatically reduces rates and is a bit more sensitive to the capital formation requirements that the nation's business faces," said Jerry Jasinowski vice president and chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Jasinowski, whose organization is expected to endorse the bill shortly, said momentum clearly is building behind the Senate plan.

BUT, HE ADDED: "I don't think it's in the bag by any means. It's a lot more complicated than many people think. It's a very fragile bill. All it takes is one broadside and the whole thing could come down."

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the nation's largest business lobbying organization, joined the growing list of business backers of the plan last week — after vigorously opposing the House-passed measure.

The American Banking Association and the Investment Company Institute also came out for the bill last week, and an endorsement from the Business Roundtable was expected.

And Reagan has given the measure his endorsement. So has the AFL-CIO, although the labor organization would like some changes — including retaining the current deduction for union dues.

The Senate bill would slash personal tax rates from the present maximum of 50 percent to 27 percent and the corporate rate from 46 to 33 percent, while eliminating most current deductions and credits.

By contrast, the House bill preserves many of these deductions, but does not cut rates as deeply: personal rates would be reduced to a maximum of 38 percent; business taxes to a top of 36 percent.

The Senate measure would raise $108 billion in additional corporate taxes over the next five years. It would also disallow deducting losses for certain tax shelters, particularly in real estate, repeal the investment tax credit and increase capital gains taxes.

STILL, THE firestorm of opposition some senators had anticipated from the business community never materialized.

"The prospects of a 27 percent rate and the elimination of the irrationality caused by the tax shelters has been so attractive to business people that they have come to support it almost with undiminished enthusiasm," said Arthur Levitt, chairman of the American Business Conference and president of the American Stock Exchange.

Levitt said he and his colleagues are "very concerned about increasing the captial gains tax and feel it is an impediment to growth. I feel passionately about that. But in spite of that, we feel that the bill is better for the country."

Of course, not all business groups support the Senate bill.

The National Association of Home Builders has attacked the measure, claiming it would raise rents up to 20 percent and slow construction of rental housing.

And, the National Association of Realtors is mounting an intensive lobbying campaign over the Memorial Day weekend.

Like the home builders, the realtors oppose a provision that would restrict deduction of rental losses against other incomes.

Al Abrams, senior vice president of the National Association of Realtors, said thousands of its members will contact senators during the recess to try to win support for changes.

"Everybody's for" the concept of tax simplification and rate reduction, he said. "It's how you get there that's the problem."

Savings operator pleads guilty to theft

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jeffrey A. Levitt, the savings and loan operator who was at the center of Maryland's thrift crisis last year, pleaded guilty today to the theft or misappropriation of $14.6 million from now-insolvent Old Court Savings and Loan Association.

Levitt admitted to all 12 felony theft charges and 13 misdemeanor misappropriation charges against him. Sentencing by Circuit Judge Edward J. Angeletti was delayed.

Each felony count carries a possible 15-year prison term, and each misdemeanor could draw a five-year term.

Attorney General Stephen H. Sachs said he would ask for at least a 25-year term, with more time if Levitt refuses to make full restitution.

"Our goal is a long prison term for Levitt and whatever else it takes to induce him and his family to pay back every dime he stole," Sachs said.

Levitt, 43, has been imprisoned since Jan. 30 for violating a court-ordered $1,000-per-week limit on his personal spending. The 18-month term stemmed from the court's attempt to preserve Levitt's wealth pending resolution of the state government's $200 million lawsuit against Old Court officials who allegedly bankrupted the thrift by stealing depositors' funds.

That suit has not come to trial. Levitt's guilty plea to the criminal charges is a separate matter.

Levitt engaged in plea bargain discussions with prosecutors in early May, but the talks broke down May 16. Sachs said Levitt had agreed to plead guilty, make restitution and assist prosecutors in pursuing other Old Court officials, but Levitt tried to assure that an estimated $2 million inheritance his wife, Karol, received from her family would not be taken away. Sachs refused.

Levitt is the only savings and loan official indicted since the near-collapse of the state-chartered thrift industry last May following a run that began at Old Court and spread to other thrifts. Sachs said he expects indictments against other Old Court principals, and perhaps additional charges against Levitt, in a few weeks.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Wife aided in escape

PARIS (AP) — The woman who flew a rented helicopter into Paris' La Sante prison and plucked a prisoner from a rooftop is the escapee's wife, police said today.

Vaujour

In a spectacular prison escape Monday morning, Michel Vaujour, who was serving 18 years for armed robbery and attempted murder, made his fourth prison escape aboard the helicopter.

The aircraft later was abandoned in a nearby soccer field.

Police identified the pilot as Nadine Bourgain, who married Vaujour in 1979 while he was serving an earlier sentence in Chalons-sur-Marne. Using the name Lena Rigon, the woman rented the white Allouette helicopter in St. Cyr L'Ecole, outside Paris.

The couple has a 5-year-old daughter.

Her brother, Gilles Bourgain, died during a bloody, July 5, 1983 hold-up of an armored car in Tours. He was killed when the small truck being used by the robbers exploded.

The two surviving gangsters were caught and sentenced to 20 years in prison. Two women accomplices received 5-year sentences for their part in planning the robbery. Vaujour's wife was arrested in that case but not charged.

Polish boycott continues

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — More than 200 Gdansk University students voted to continue boycotting classes to protest what they claim are toxic emissions coming from the floor in the math and physics departments, a source said.

An aide to Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski who identified himself as Col. Mielczarek, met with the students Monday to help resolve the dispute, said the source, on condition he not be identified.

Mielczarek reportedly told the students that he "would be happy" to report to Jaruzelski that the strike was over and "promised that proper decisions would be taken soon," the source said.

However, the students voted 145-to-85 to continue the boycott, the source said.

Libyan visits Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Libya's No. 2 man, Abdel Salam Jalloud, came to Moscow on Monday for the first visit by a Libyan leader since last month's U.S. air raids on his country.

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, said Jalloud was greeted at the airport by Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and Defense Minister Sergei L. Sokolov. It gave no details on Jalloud's itinerary.

The Soviet Union gave Libya verbal backing after the April 15 bombing raids on Tripoli and Benghazi. The Kremlin rejected American assertions that Libya, one of Moscow's closest allies in the Arab world, was involved in international terrorism.

But the Soviet response stopped short of any overt political or military action.

Queen home from U.S.

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II arrived home today from her five-day private visit to Kentucky's thoroughbred horse farms.

The queen stayed with William Farish III, president of the U.S. Jockey Club and his wife Sarah, at Lane's End Farm outside Lexington.

Queen Elizabeth is reported to be searching for breeding stock for a potential winner of the English Derby, the only British classic race she never has won.

The monarch arrived at Heathrow airport aboard a Royal Air Force VC10, and stepped into her limousine at the side of the aircraft.

Pandas still not safe

PEKING (AP) — It will take at least another four or five years before China's giant pandas are safe from a famine which has killed more than 60 of them, the official Xinhua News Agency said today.

The arrow bamboo, the staple food of the panda, has yet to recover from a rare cycle beginning in 1983 in which the bamboo flowered and withered, the report said.

In the Minshan Mountains of Sichuan Province, bamboo from seeds matured in 1974 were up to 6 feet tall, but pandas find the bitter taste of the young plants unpalatable.

It takes 15 to 20 years before the bamboo shoots gain the tender taste preferred by pandas, it said.

About 800 of the 1,000 surviving pandas in China live in remote mountain areas of Sichuan.

Bonner stops in France

PARIS (AP) — Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner, who is in France for three days en route home from receiving medical treatment in the United States, says people should not believe anything Soviet officials say about her or her husband Andrei Sakharov.

Mrs. Bonner plans to meet today in Paris with President Francois Mitterrand.

On Monday, she told reporters after meeting with premier Jacques Chirac that her children would try calling her in the closed Soviet city of Gorky once a month, and if they cannot get through "that means something is happening to us."

Mrs. Bonner said her main fear about returning to internal exile in Gorky, which is closed to foreigners, was that Soviet authorities would increase the isolation of her and her husband and continue what she called a campaign of systematic disinformation.

Korean student dies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A student activist who set himself on fire and jumped from a building in a college protest four weeks ago died at a hospital Monday, Seoul National University reported.

He was the third student to have died this month in similar fiery protest action against the government and the United States.

The latest suicide, Lee Chae-ho, 22, and another Seoul National University student doused themselves with gasoline and set fire to their bodies on April 28 as they led a group of fellow students in an off-campus demonstration against mandatory student military training and the United States. Lee was chairman of the university's anti-war, anti-nuclear commitee.

The other student, Kim Se-chin, 21, who did not jump from the three-story building but suffered severe burns on the rooftop, died early this month.

Last week, another student, Lee Toong-soo, also of Seoul National University, leaped to his death shouting anti-American and anti-government slogans after setting himself on fire.

Weapon pact detailed

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Foreign Ministry said Monday the government would have to approve the deployment of new American chemical weapons in West Germany under the terms of an agreement with the United States.

Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog made the comment when asked about a report in the weekly Der Spiegel magazine that said the U.S. military had developed contingency plans for deploying new chemical weapons in Europe in case of a crisis.

Der Spiegel's Monday issue said European governments would have no effective say in the event of a possible deployment of the binary chemical weapons. It did not cite any sources for the report.

Chrobog said the U.S.-West German agreement provides for possible deployment of binary chemical weapons "only with the (West German) government's approval."

Earthquake rock Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Two powerful earthquakes rocked some isolated islands of Fiji in the South Pacific on Tuesday morning, but they were not felt on the most populous main islands, the Fiji Meteorological Office said.

Only isolated islands were in the area of the quakes and the official spokesman did not know if they are inhabited. There were no immediate reports of damage or injury.

The spokesman, quoting seismologists in Hawaii, said the quakes were centered in the underwater Lau Ridge of the Fiji Basin at a depth of about 310 miles.

The first quake, at 7:41 a.m. (2:41 p.m. Monday EDT) registered 6.7 on the Richter scale, the spokesman said. The second measured 6.2 and had an epicenter about 500 miles south of the capital of Suva, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Earlier reports had said the second quake measured 7.2 on the Richter scale.

Population award due

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett will accept the United Nations 1986 population award, which will be given to Mexico for reducing its growth rate from 3.5 percent to 2.1 percent in recent years.

The Interior Department said Bartlett will accept the award — a gold medal and $25,000 — during ceremonies today at the United Nations in New York City. In announcing the citation, the Interior Department said Mexico's growth rate "has been considered a unique world example."

AI invited to Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government has invited Amnesty International to send a delegation to Mexico to complete its investigation of the human rights situation in rural areas.

Amnesty International, a human rights watchdog agency, recently issued a report condemning what it said was endemic violence in the countryside.

The government has complained the report "does not distinguish between valid acts and subjective assertions" and has urged the group to take another look at the situation.

Much wheat anticipated

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico will reap a record harvest of 4.8 million to 5 million tons of wheat this year, the government predicted.

"Such a volume will permit the guarantee of the supply of food derived from wheat to the population during the next 12 months and cut out importation of the grain, with a considerable savings of foreign currency," said the government newspaper El Nacional in Monday's editions.

The government food copany Conaspo will tae about 2 illiion tos of the heat at the guaranteed price of 58,000 pesos a ton, about $107. The rest will be sold to private companies at higher prices.

Vietnam preserves reminders of war

By PETER ENG

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — As a woman washes her bicycle on shore, ducks waddle on the fuselage of an American B-52 bomber poking out of the shallow water. A mud-encrusted plaque nearby says the plane was sent by "U.S. aggressors."

The wreckage of the B-52, shot down on Dec. 27, 1972, over Ngoc Ha village in Hanoi, is one of many reminders of the war that ended more than a decade ago.

Instead of clearing the debris of the war, authorities have preserved downed U.S. planes and ruins of bombed houses. The message intended to be conveyed is that the United States killed many civilians in an attempt to subdue an innocent peasant nation through massive firepower.

The war wreckage also seems intended to foster unity among citizens of a nation now fighting guerrillas in Cambodia and Chinese border forces.

The war memorials show that Vietnam "is trapped in the past, in the sense that they say, we have won the war over the Americans...and we are invincible," said a Western diplomat, who insisted on anonymity.

Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son denies that the conflict debris is intended to preserve the hostility towards the Americans.

The United States and Vietnam "had a terrible record in the past, but we are willing to look into the future," he told visiting American journalists. "The museum, the collection of monuments, are kept for future generations to learn from the war, and it is the same thing they do in every country."

Between 1965 and 1968, the United States bombed North Vietnam to boost South Vietnam's morale, stop the supply of the insurgency in the south and force the communists into a peace agreement.

The bombings resumed in April 1972. In December of that year, B-52s flew on an 11-day blitz that left much of the Hanoi-Haiphong area in rubble and flames, killed 2,000 people and injured 2,000. The attacks became known as the Christmas bombings.

Diep Duong Chinh, who lives in Ngoc Ha, said Gen. Van Tien Dung, then the armed forces chief of staff, visited the village a day after the B-52 was downed and said he would ask that the site be preserved as a memorial.

Chinh, who said seven villagers died in the bombing, agreed that the wreckage should remain. He also said the United States should pay compensation.

Other large slabs of U.S. B-52s are piled up at a nearby park, inside what resembles an outdoor metal zoo cage. An old woman sells cucumber, sugar cane, tea and cigarettes in front of huge chunks of fuel containers, bay doors, wings and turbines.

Singled out among the American pilots was Navy Lt. Cmdr. John McCain III, now a Republican congressman from Arizona. A concrete monument which looks like a man crucified, stands at the edge of Truc Bach Lake where McCain's plane was shot down in 1967.

Asked what the monument meant, Nguyen Xuan Chien, 14, wrapped a hand around the head of the figure and said: "This is the enemy of the Vietnamese people."

But Nguyen Van Thanh, a 20-year-old university student, said the statue no longer has "any real meaning."

"Some still dislike the U.S., but they are not the majority. My own house was bombed in 1967, but that was only a consequence of the war," he said.

Another memorial is a lot on Quan Thanh street where huge slabs of blackened concrete are the only indication that a house once stood there.

Lam Thi Hoi, 64, who lived in the house and then built a new home just around the corner, said the government "should build a new house there, to make the city more beautiful."

On Kham Tien street, the shell of a house now holds a small museum and a statue of a woman holding a lifeless child.

The statue commemorates Mrs. Nguyen Tu and her month-old baby, said to have been killed a day after Christmas in house No. 51. A column rising above the statue bears the inscription: "Kham Tien, Remember the Hatred Against U.S. Aggressors, Dec. 26, 1972."

East Berlin border checks stir diplomatic controversy

BERLIN (AP) — The United States, France and Britain would consider breaking diplomatic relations with East Germany if new border checks in East Berlin are imposed on their envoys, diplomatic sources said today.

The East German government on Monday began requiring diplomats from other Western countries who are accredited in East Berlin to show passports when crossing between the two sections of the divided city. Previously they only had to show an identification card issued by East Germany.

An American spokesman said the new rules have not been imposed on U.S., British and French diplomats.

"It looks like this will not apply to us," said Ed Harper, a spokesman for the U.S. diplomatic mission in West Berlin.

Berlin, which is inside communist East Germany, was partitioned into zones overseen by the United States, France, Britain and the Soviet Union since 1945 under the occupation agreement reached at the end of World War II.

The Western powers do not recognize either the designation of the Soviet zone as East Germany's capital or the city's division.

Diplomatic sources from one of the Western powers, who spoke to The Associated Press in East Berlin on condition they not be identified by name or country, said the three NATO countries have informed East Germany "they are considering breaking-off diplomatic relations" if the new rules are imposed on their diplomats.

TAKE A CLOSE LOOK

What do you see? Ducks? How many are there? In nature, blending in is fine but its not what you want if you're in business. Successful businesses stand out. They don't blend in with all the rest and that's where we can help. The Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified Advertising staff can help you create the kind of messages that show your products and services off to their best advantage. Your ads will put you on everyone's map! If your cash register tells you that you're blending in give us a call at 682-6222. Now how many ducks are there? Look carefully and you'll see three.
