Worst Storm in Years Spreads Destruction Through Minn.

CHICAGO SNOW-BOUND

Rail and Wire Service Disrupted as Heavy Fall Continues

By The Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 30.—Amid clearing skies and low temperatures, this section of the northwest today was busy digging itself out of huge snowdrifts, an aftermath of one of the worst storms on record here.

Two deaths had been reported and damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars, as caused by the storm. Wire communication and traffic were halted, trolley company officials reporting the worst tie-up in 40 years. Only a few street car lines were in operation today.

Railroads Move Again.

Railroad traffic out of the Twin Cities, which was stopped yesterday was being resumed gradually tonight, and telegraph and telephone companies were at work replacing poles. Damage to communication facilities alone was estimated at several hundred thousand dollars. The snow will be worth millions to farmers of the northwest, according to agricultural experts.

CENTRAL WEST DRESSED IN WHITE AS STORM RAGES.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Gardeners' dreams of fresh vegetables faded out today, as a snowstorm, succeeding heavy rains and high winds of the last few days, dressed a large portion of the central west in regular midwinter fashion.

Wires Back to Normal.

The snow began falling last night and continued with only brief pauses today. The havoc wrought by the windstorms preceding the snow was being repaired with wire communication approaching normal.

The effect of the rains, however, began to appear. Guards were stationed on the levees when the Illinois river began rising more than a half an inch an hour. The Ohio river also had risen to dangerous levels.

Weather bureau officials held out little prospects tonight of a return to warmer weather soon.

A. F. OF L. RAPS IMMIGRATION LAW

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Immigration legislation is rated first among "nine outstanding" desirable pending measures and the bill providing the conscription of labor in a "national emergency" is described as the most "un-American" matter ever considered by congress in the report of the American Federation of Labor legislative committee made public today.

The other eight measures approved are:

Bills for settlement of railroad labor disputes; the child labor constitutional amendment; workmen's compensation in the District of Columbia; soldier bonus; adequate wages for District of Columbia school teachers; extension of vocational rehabilitation; respecification of the railroad labor board; adequate wages for postal employes; reclassification of government employes.

He expressed surprise that "such a thing (apparently meaning President Coolidge's request for his resignation after he had announced his determination not to quit under fire) could take place in Free America."

'Anderson In School At Ossining

William H. Anderson (left), off for school again

William H. Anderson, until lately state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league in New York, is singing "Bright College Years" again. He is in college again, this time in the exclusive Ossining university, often vulgarly referred to as Sing Sing, and he is adhering to his democratic principles by laboring with pick and shovel for the good of the school the first ten days of matriculation. After that he is going to take up a laboratory course in broom-making, one of the most popular of the studies pursued in the school. Anderson is going to school for just 285 days. Conviction on a charge of forgery is the reason.

Bergdoll Coming Back To Divert Attention From Teapot, Charge

By The Associated Press.

EBERBACH, Baden, March 30.—Charging the American government with an attempt to lure Grover Cleveland Bergdoll back to the United States with a promise that he would be given a light sentence, thereby providing the American public with a fresh sensation which would divert interest from the "oil scandal," the Eberbach newspaper Messenger today published details of alleged parleys with Bergdoll, carried on by three representatives of an American newspaper syndicate, and a man named Leighton Blood, allegedly a representative of the American state department, but who the newspaper declares is being suspected as being the spokesman for the American Legion.

According to the Messenger and other local newspapers, the four agents are alleged to have carried credentials from Secretary of State Hughes and the president of the American Legion on the strength of which Bergdoll was assured he would be given a maximum sentence of four months imprisonment provided he returned to the United States before March 20.

Blood, according to local reports, was equipped with a passport issued in the name of "Bryant" and official German documents which would insure Bergdoll's unhampered exit from Germany. Bergdoll's failure to get under way before March 20, it is asserted, brought a notification from an American newspaper correspondent to the effect that the state department had withdrawn its promises of partial immunity, but that two days grace was obtained by the correspondent which would have enabled Bergdoll to catch the steamer George Washington sailing from Bremen.

Bullock Admits Firing At Brazos Co. Sheriff

By The Associated Press.

BRYAN, Texas, March 30.—Commodore Bullock, who was said to have suffered a shock while serving in the world war and was confined in a government hospital for a time and who later, according to officers, had been an inmate of the county jail here, confessed early today to the slaying of Sheriff L. E. Morhead of Brazos county at the Sleepy Hollow school house, six miles from here last night, officers said. The shooting occurred during an entertainment in progress at the school.

Morhead was shot with a shot-gun, the gun having been discharged through a window outside the building. Bullock later was suspected when he knocked at the door of one of the sheriff's neighbors and informed him of the shooting. He then fled and was captured at his home in Sleepy Hollow early today and taken to the Grimes county jail at Anderson for safe keeping.

Funeral services for Sheriff Morhead were held here today.

CONGRESS EAGER TO CLEAR DECKS FOR JUNE MEET

Pressing Legislation To Be Pushed In Both Houses

BILLS TO BE PASSED

Investigations Holding Attention of Solons With More Coming

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Hopeful that congress will find its way clear to bring its present session to a close before the June political convention, house and senate leaders expect to make substantial progress this week toward disposing of pressing legislation.

The senate probably will receive the tax and bonus bill from its finance committee. The present plan of republican leaders is to give the bonus bill right of way with action on the revenue measure next in order.

Must Dispose of Bills.

These two proposals together with annual supply bills must be disposed of, in the opinion of both republican and democratic leaders, before the windup of the session. In line with this program, the house is continuing to give appropriation bills priority. The army supply bill was sent to the senate yesterday, and immediate consideration of the independent offices bill, which will be disposed of before the end of this week.

Thus far only one appropriation bill—a deficiency measure—has been whipped into shape for transmission to the White House, but practically all senate differences over the measures carrying funds for the interior, treasury and postoffice departments have been ironed out and within a few days they will be ready for the president.

Immigration Coming Up.

After disposing of the independent offices bill, the house will take up the Johnson immigration measure, planning to act on it before the senate has an opportunity to consider the measure reported by its immigration committee.

A dozen investigations continued to divert attention in both the senate and house. Tomorrow Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, intends to call up his resolution which would authorize an inquiry to determine whether Secretary Mellon is holding his post as head of the treasury department in violation of the federal statutes. So far as is known, there is no disposition on the part of the republicans to oppose consideration of adoption of the resolution.

The Daugherty investigating committee expects to decide in a day or two as to the future scope of its inquiry, while the senate oil committee will resume its hearings Tuesday.

Peach Bloom Beauty Via. X-Ray Route Is New Medic Discovery

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The discovery of a short road to peach bloom beauty by way of the X-ray was announced today by authorities at Beth Israel hospital after experiments with a method recently disclosed before the Eastern Medical society by Dr. Oscar Levin of this city.

The hospital surgeons warned, however, against the promiscious adoption of the X-ray process by beauty parlors and barber shops because of the danger of burning or cancer infection.

Under the method the patient's face is exposed to direct X-rays from 8 to 12 times in as many weeks. The greatest precautions are taken, the patient's scalp, ears, eyes, and eyebrows being covered with lead foil and the chest and neck with heavy rubber.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Initiation of new proceedings in an effort to prevent deportation of 17 former war time prisoners released by Presidents Harding and Coolidge was requested in a letter to Secretary Davis made public today by the social service commission of the Episcopal diocese of New York.

Steals Oranges And Two Die

By The Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 30.—Ten-year-old Pasquale Palonli's alleged theft of an orange from a peddler's cart yesterday, is held responsible for the death of two men and the wounding of two others and a woman. Masso Vilito, owner of the peddler's cart, died of bullet wounds soon after the pistol fight that followed Pasquale's alleged purloining. Clestipe Gentile Geutile, one of the three other participants in the quarrel, died tonight. The other two, both of whom were slightly wounded, were arrested and charged with murder. A woman shopper was shot in the leg and scores of others had narrow escapes.

Vilito, the police say, gave the boy a severe beating when he found an orange missing and suspected Pasquale as the thief. The boy's father took Vilito to task. Gentile ran to the aid of Vilito and Samuel Graneve to that of the elder Palonli.

DAUGHERTY JURY SWITCHES PLANS

Drop Personal Charges For Time Being; No Successor In View

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30—While President Coolidge is occupying himself with the selection of a successor to Former Attorney General Daugherty, the senate Daugherty investigating committee sought today a new direction for proceeding with its inquiry.

Subject to ratification in a formal executive session tomorrow, members of the committee planned to put out of the scope of inquiry, for the time being, consideration of the various charges against Mr. Daugherty personally and to bring under examination the record of the department of justice, in the prosecution of anti-trust cases.

Show Up Corruption.

"Our purpose will be to show up corruption if there has been corruption, the non-prosecution of anti-trust cases, and non-prosecution of war frauds," Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor said. "The object will be to clear up the new attorney general."

The president was said authoritatively today to have given no particular attention to individuals named in connection with the cabinet post Mr. Daugherty vacated.

Six Arrested As Klan Factions In Denver Clash

By The Associated Press.

DENVER, March 30.—Six men, arrested early today during a disturbance between ku klux klan supporters and anti-klan factions were released under bond after charges of carrying concealed weapons had been preferred against two and all had been charged with disturbing the peace.

According to J. Leo Stack, oil operator, to whom each of the arrested men made a statement after he had furnished bond for them, a large number of klan posters were thrown into the club rooms of the Knights of Columbus shortly after midnight. When members of the club went to the door they saw no one, but shortly afterwards a telephone call was received from a member of the order that klan members were working near his home. Six men then left the club for the place where the disturbance ensued, Mr. Stack said.

One shot was fired, according to police, who said that a patrolman had fired once in an attempt to halt one of the men arrested. Those arrested declared that they had not brandished weapons or struck any blows.

Homes Carried Away at Two Towns; Pittsburgh Damaged

MANY BLOCKS IN STEEL CITY HIT BY FLOOD WATER

Large Area Inundated As 2 Rivers Overflow; Worst In 19 Years

NO LIVES ARE LOST

Railroad Lines Washed Out And Mills Swamped; Crest Passes Sunday

By The Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, March 30.—A score of city blocks in the lower sections were inundated and sections for several miles upstream laid waste when both the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers, meeting here to form the Ohio, left their banks today in Pittsburgh's greatest flood in ten years. No loss of life was reported.

Much damage was caused to steel mills located along the river banks. Tracks of both the Baltimore and Ohio and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroads were flooded in sections. Many families were forced to leave their homes.

Waters Recede.

The crest of the flood was reached at 1 o'clock today at 29.2 feet, seven feet above the flood stage. A slow recession began at dusk.

Railroads following the courses of the various rivers were greatly affected. Baltimore & Ohio lines between Pittsburgh and Baltimore were under water in many places, and trains were routed over the Pennsylvania to Baltimore where they proceeded on their own lines. Traffic was delayed for 24 hours over the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie lines through the Monongahela valley and the flooding of the Pittsburgh terminal tracks caused trains to be routed at McKeesport to the Baltimore & Ohio tracks and run into Pittsburgh terminal of that road. A landslide occurred on the Monongahela division of the Pennsylvania but was cleared away within a few hours.

Basements Flooded.

Thousands of basements in the affected area were flooded and many industrial plants along both Monongahela and Allegheny rivers were forced to suspend operations until damage wrought by the flood can be repaired. Rowboats and canoes were pressed into service to establish communication between flooded districts and to rescue marooned residents.

At McKeesport where the Youghiogheny river joins the Monongahela, several streets were under six feet of water. At Dravosburg, near McKeesport, six hundred families fled from their homes when the water reached the second floor.

OFFICIALS DENY BERGDOLL RUMORS

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Officials here tonight reiterated that the government of the United States had never promised any immunity or a light sentence to Grover C. Bergdoll should he return to this country.

It was explained that state department letters carried by American Legion representatives in Germany were such documents as are usually given to persons traveling abroad in the form of introductions to consular and diplomatic officers and designed primarily to make the tasks of the traveler easier. These letters are available at the request of any reputable organization. The Washington government had no other interest in the matter.

FAMILY LOST WHEN POTOMAC RIVER AT KITZMILLER RISES

Victims Swept Away When Tree Is Uprooted in Storm; Two Bodies Recovered; 15 Homes Are Destroyed

By The Associated Press.

KITZMILLER, Md., March 30.—Five persons, members of an entire family, were drowned today when a tree to which they were clinging was uprooted and swept away by the flood waters of the Potomac river. Two of the bodies were recovered late today.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Beeman, their two children and David Beeman, grandfather of the children. They had left their home when it was flooded and had sought safety in a tree. The force of the current with their added weight uprooted the tree and swept it away. The bodies recovered were those of the two children, a girl and a boy.

Fifteen homes in this town were carried away by the flood. The bank building was the only structure left intact in the business section. A 100 foot bridge connecting Kitzmiller and Blaine, W. Va., was moved from its foundation but not swept away.

RED CROSS READY FOR STORM SEASON

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—A relief organization, similar to the one used effectively during the days of the Dayton flood, has been set up by the Red Cross ready for instant action at any one of the several flood danger points which have developed within the last 24 hours.

R. A. Harlan of the Washington division of the Red Cross left here this morning for Cumberland, Md., where great damage has been done by the overflow of the Potomac river.

On the eve of the storm season, the Red Cross today announced formation of a new mobile disaster relief unit, with more than one hundred experienced men and women as aides.

CUMBERLAND, MD. BADLY DAMAGED

By The Associated Press.

CUMBERLAND, Md., March 30.—The family of John Devilbliss, reported lost in the flood at McCool, 20 miles west of here, were rescued from their home today after having been marooned since Saturday morning, according to advices from McCool tonight. The family, consisting of parents and four children were rescued by boats.

Wires into the town were broken by the flood.

Tonight a few of the principal streets of Cumberland were lighted by a local tire manufacturing company, but the remainder of the city was in darkness.

Guards on Duty.

Members of company G of the national guard were assisting the police in patroling the streets. Every member of the police force has been on duty since Saturday with short rest periods. Food was being served to them by the local Red Cross chapter.

Mayor Thomas W. Koon placed an estimate of $1,000,000 upon the individual property damage in Cumberland, and $200,000 upon damage to the city streets. The damage to railroad property was estimated at another million dollars.

Relief to families flooded out was afforded by the Red Cross and Salvation Army. Fifteen families in Cumberland have been provided for and 25 other families in Piedmont, Va.

Floods Recede.

The flood waters of Wills creek and the Potomac river were returning to their channels today leaving scenes of desolation in their wake.

Only one small section was under water in the city proper and the water was receding rapidly. Ridgely and Dixie, two towns on the West Virginia side of the Potomac, however, remained inundated as was a wide area in the lower Potomac Valley.

Great havoc was wrought by the flood. Many miles of railroad tracks were washed away, two big steel bridges and a number of smaller structures were destroyed, while hundreds of buildings and houses were damaged and in some instances washed away.

Start Relief Work.

Preparations were under way from relief work but it was believed that local organizations would be able to handle the situation. Until the plans for relief work are perfected those in need were being cared for by the people of their respective communities.

The railroads were the heaviest hit by the flood. The four-span steel bridge of the Western Maryland across the Potomac here was swept away as were other structures at Maple Run and Oakmont and its shops were under three feet of water. In addition to roadbeds and tracks of both Western Maryland and Baltimore and Ohio, being destroyed, freight cars were washed away.

TAX REVISIONS COMING SOON

Senate Committee To Push Matters In Coming Week

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Revision of the tax schedules in the tax bill as passed by the house was in prospect as the senate finance committee prepares to conclude work on the measure this week.

Before fixing the various rates the committee has asked Secretary Mellon outline again his views on some provisions of the house bill. Mr. Mellon has estimated the measure would cause a cut in revenue of $446,000,000 against a prospective surplus of $95,000,000 under the present law.

Must Determine Rates.

What rates will have to be restored to avert this estimated deficit must be determined. Chairman Smoot said today, indicating that even the surtax rates, already decided upon in accordance with the Mellon recommendation might be re-opened for revision.

The dispute over the cost of bonus bill passed by the house took a new turn today, the American Legion issuing a statement defending the estimate of $2,119,000,000 made by the veterans bureau actuary against the estimate of $4,856,750,087 made by Joseph McCoy, government actuary.

Vernon Woman Killed By Auto Driven By Wichita Falls Man; Accident Declared Unavoidable

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, March 30.—Mrs. A. J. Wheelin, 73, died here tonight following injuries received earlier in the evening when she was struck and run over by a car driven by J. E. Finley of Wichita Falls. Mrs. Wheelin was standing by the side of a car in the 1100 block on East Wilbarger street preparatory to going to church. Finley, approaching, was blinded by the glare of the headlight of a car coming up the street, and struck Mrs. Wheelin, knocking her about 20 feet. She died about 30 minutes later.

Witnesses declared the accident to have been unavoidable, the fault lying in the glare of the headlights. Finley was making only moderate speed, they say. He carried Mrs. Wheelin into a nearby residence following the accident and upon being told of her death had to be placed in the care of physicians.

Mrs. Wheelin made her home here with her daughter, Mrs. R. R. Griffin of 1123 East Wilbarger street. She is survived by nine children, all living and married, with families.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced but will likely take place Tuesday afternoon.

SOUTHWESTERN WATCHES RICE UNDER HEISMAN

Noted Football Mentor Faces Hard Task At Houston School

REPLACES ARBUCKLE

Scholastic Requirements Prove Big Hurdle To Be Overcome

Special to The Record News.

HOUSTON, March 30.—The action of Rice Institute in bringing Jack Heisman, premier football coach, to that school as director of athletics to replace Phil Arbuckle, resigned, is noted with interest in Southwestern conference circles. Rice Institute for the last three years has turned out football teams that have discredited them in the athletic world, and the resignation of Phil Arbuckle, for years head coach and athletic director, following the 1923 catastrophes is generally regarded as a tacit acknowledgement by the faculty that the need of a different system is recognized in that quarter.

Arbuckle's capability to develop a winning football squad at Rice began first to be questioned three years ago when Howard Yerges and Leonard Hilty were brought to the school and given charge of football. With unusually promising material they developed a worse than mediocre team. Arbuckle's reinstatement the following year resulting. In this past season the Owls drank the dregs and Arbuckle resigned to accept a tentative position as head of the Southwestern conference.

Comment Started.

The announcement a few days ago that Jack Heisman had arrived in Houston to take charge of spring football training at the Institute started talk and comment among Rice fans and there is a great deal of speculation as to just what this man will do with football at this school.

Jack Heisman for 16 years was head coach at Georgia Tech. It was he that developed the famous Golden Tornado championship team there in 1917. He was head coach at Pennsylvania, his Alma Mater, for two years following that, and went from there to Washington and Jefferson, developing a wonderful team there. Among other things he has been president of the American National Coaches' association, one of the biggest honors that a coach can receive.

Rice is regarded in the world of the football coach as something of a "Jonah." Eligibility requirements are stricter there than in most schools, it is said, and a great amount of splendid material is kept from playing every year by what many hold to be uncalled for scholastic prerequisites. It is this condition that Heisman must combat to put Rice Institute back in its proper football sphere, and it is a task that will call for all the ability of the mentor of the "Golden Tornado."

Heisman's services for the institute were not secured gratis, and alumni and fans are extremely hopeful in regard to the coming season.

REDUCING DIET.

Be careful how you adopt drastic reduction diets unless you are very seriously overweight. Bear in mind that a well balanced diet of small portions is more scientific than one which limits the individual to foods that are supposed to be in themselves thinning. Don't make up your mind all of a sudden that you must reduce and commence taking so-called thinning remedies, thus wrecking your digestion and doing no good. This sort of thing requires study and if you do not know the right things and the right quantities to take to get the best results do your reducing under the supervision of your physician or get a book written by a recognized authority at the library or book shop and follow tis teachings.

TODAY'S RECIPES.

Prune and Nut Bread—Take one cake yeast, one cup milk scalded and cooled, four tablespoons molasses, one cup lukewarm water, two tablespoons melted butter, four cups Graham flour, one cup sifted white flour, one cup each of chopped prunes and nuts, one teaspoon salt. Dissolve the yeast and molasses in lukewarm liquid. Add the butter, then flour gradually to make a soft dough. Add the salt and knead thoroughly. Cover and set aside in a warm place to rise for about two hours. When double in bulk, mold into loaves, place in greased pans and allow to rise again about one hour. Bake in a slow oven for one hour. This makes two loaves.

Prune Conserve—Take five pounds prunes, pitted and chopped, four oranges, four lemons, four pounds sugar. Let stand twenty-four hours. Skin and cook rinds of oranges and lemons, chopping them after cooking. Add the uncooked pulp to the prunes with one pound seedless raisins, one pound English walnuts chopped fine. Add a pinch of salt and cook all one-half hour.

Chess Pies—Take on cup granulated sugar, one cup butter, two eggs, one-half cup each of chopped nuts and prunes, four teaspoons coconnut, one teaspoon vanilla. Cream sugar and butter, add the eggs well beaten. Then add the nuts, prunes and coconut and vanilla and mix well together. Line gem pans with rich pastry, fill and bake in a moderate oven.

Prune Pudding—Boil one pound of prunes; remove seeds and cut into small pieces; one cup of bread crumbs. Place in layers in a baking dish. Cover each layer with brown sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. Cover with the water the prunes were boiled in and keep moist. Cover the top with a layer of chopped nut meats and plenty of butter. Bake slowly. Serve with the following sauce: one-quarter cup of butter, one cup of sugar. Beat butter and sugar to a cream, add two tablespoons boiling water, then beat again till the sauce is light and foamy like whipped cream.

Home-Wrecking Is Always An Inside Job | Lays Blame For Stolen Affections on Lack of Effort

Only Cruel Mothers Sacrifice Their Children to Themselves—Real Mother Love Seeks the Child's Own Good, Even at Its Own Expense.

Among my acquaintances are a rich old widow and her middle-aged son, whose devotion to each other is a perpetual marvel to all who know them. They live along together in a handsome house. Every day you may see them motoring around in a gorgeous limousine. They go off on trips together. Son never takes any lady but mother to the theatre or any place of amusement. In fact, wherever mother goes, son, like Mary's lamb, is sure to go also.

"Isn't such devotion beautiful?" exclaim their admiring friends.

Well, I, for one, see nothing beautiful in the spectacle of an old bachelor tied to his mother's apron strings. I see in it nothing but selfish tyranny on one side and weak slavery on the other. I see only a morbid and perverted affection that has warped the life of a man.

There is nothing beautiful in the mother love that monopolizes a child, that hampers and binds it and bars its way to its own self-expression; that makes youth conform itself to the limitations of age, that makes youth think old thoughts, cultivate old tastes, look at things from the viewpoint of the aged.

Beautiful mother love is the love that effaces itself, that seeks the child's good, even at its own expense; that strengthens the wings of the fitdgling, although it knows that its flight will carry it far from the home rest.

In this particular case, the mother has kept her son from marrying. He began by being human and having an inflammable heart. When he was young he loved a girl and a girl loved him, but they planned to be married. But mother broke all of that up.

She was a perfect Niagara of tears and told him how it would break her heart if he left her. She worked on his sympathies by tragic descriptions of her loneliness without him. She appealed to his gratitude by telling him how she devoted her life to him. And, at last, through mingled weariness, and pity, and a sense of duty, he gave the girl up and settled down to being mother's slave and lackey.

His mother is very proud of her achievement in alienating her son's affections from the girl he loved, and she proudly boasts she had made him promise never to marry as long as she lives. And all the other women who hear her cite this remarkable proof of filial devotion murmur enviously, "How wonderful!"

Yes, it is wonderful. It is marvelous that any mother who even pretends to love her child could be willing to take her happiness at his expense, and to sacrifice him to her jealous desire to have him to herself alone.

This woman loved and married in her youth. She had many years of happiness in the companionship of a good husband. She had the satisfaction of building her own home. She knew the joys of parenthood, and she has a son to sustain and comfort her in her old age. But, in order to monopolize him, she has cut that son off from all of the experiences which are the purest sources of happiness that any man ever knows.

She blighted the romance of his youth. She forced him to atrophy his affections, until now his heart is nothing but a stringly little bunch of muscles, incapable of a real, full, throbbing emotion. For the companionship of a wife of his own age she has given him the dull society of an old woman. He has never known the fun of homebuilding. The only love he has had was the dry husks of mother love. The only little feet that have ever run to meet him of an evening when he came home were the feet of his dog.

It is only in dreams of what might have been that he feels the thrill of little arms around his neck and pictures to himself the interest life might have if he had a pretty little daughter, just budding into womanhood or a son about whose exploits at college he could boast.

As it is, what has life given him? Nothing. What has life given to him in the future? Less than nothing. He has had no companionship, for, while his mother has been interested in what he did and thought, he has been bored to tears by her old wives' tales. He has not made of his talents what he should have made because he had no incentive to struggle. A man's wants are few and simple. It is for wife and children that he girds up his loins and fights.

And now before him stretches the dreary age of the lonely old bachelor. Mother is old and cannot live long. When she goes he will begin living around in hotels and clubs, with no society save that of other lonely old men; no one to care whether he is sick or well; none but hired hands to close his eyes when he is dead.

In the blighted geniuses whose mothers kept them at home because they could not bear to be parted from them, in the lonely old bachelors and maids whose mothers kept them from marrying because they could not bear to share their child with another, we see the work of the monopolistic mother—the cruel mothers who sacrifice their children to themselves.

HEARSE WINNER IN SPEED RACE

By The Associated Press

SHREVEPORT, March 30.—The modern funeral is not so slow.

Traffic Officer Willie Best of South Highlands, Sunday afternoon halted an automobile that he declared to be speeding at the rate of 35 miles an hour through the city streets, only to learn that it was the leading car in a negro funeral procession, and was occupied by the minister.

While serving notice on the driver of the car to appear in traffic court, Best was run down by the hearse, the driver of which apparently had no fear of official khaki. The officer was not seriously injured, but his motorcycle was demolished.

TIMELY REVIEWS ON WORLD TOPICS

"PASSAGE OF BONUS BILL WILL SAVE NATION MILLIONS," SAYS LEGION LEADER.

Enactment of the soldier bonus bill, that passed the House on Tuesday, ultimately will save the nation's taxpayers billions of dollars, according to Gilbert Bettman, attorney of Cincinnati, and chairman of the national legislative committee of the American Legion that drafted the original adjusted compensation bill in 1920. In an interview recently Mr. Bettman predicted the bill would pass the senate and receive the signature of President Coolidge.

"If the claims of the former service men for adjusted compensation were allowed to remain unsatisfied," said Mr. Bettman, "a pension system undoubtedly would result. This could cost billions."

Mr. Bettman said the "basic justification for adjusted compensation" was not grounded in the belief that a tip of gratuity should be given the ex-service man for "military service rendered."

"That cannot be paid for," he said. "No service man has requested payment on that score. He seeks instead an approximate adjustment of the economic loss that he suffered by reason of his service."

Mr. Bettman pointed out that the United States "had need of capital, labor and the man to carry the gun" in the war, but that it employed the selective service draft for "only one of those essentials," and that while industries often made excessive profits on war contracts, and labor profited, "doubly, even quadruply," the service man was asked to accept as compensation for his economic loss—not for patriotic service—approximately $1.50 a day.

"It is now agreed," continued Mr. Bettman, "that if we have another war all the nation's resources will be subject to selective draft."

Mr. Bettman described the pending bonus bill as merely a means of rectifying an omission.

"Many people," he explained, "think the American Legion started the drive for the adjusted compensation bill. Nothing could have been further from the intention of the American Legion. At its first convention in November, 1919, it went on record as favoring aid for disabled comrades, but left adjusted compensation up to congress.

"Subsequently between 60 and 70 bills were introduced in congress, providing for soldier benefit legislation. All those bills were referred to the ways and means committee of the house, which sent out an S. O. S. to the American Legion."

The land and homing aid committee of the American Legion, he said, then went to Washington in an advisory capacity.

"Instead of preparing general legislation," he added, "we prepared a bill that was the basis of the four-fold adjusted compensation bill; containing the home aid land project, insurance and cash features. The insurance option is virtually embodied in the bill now before the senate."

MONEY At Work

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

Is your family pocket-book helped out by the present slight reduction in living costs?

The department of labor has recently published figures which show that there is now a slight reduction in all living costs.

While the better part of these reductions affect the wholesale market more than the retail, still, there are some definite reductions that should bring increased affluence to the family provider.

Usually when there is a slight lowering in prices, the family spends the same and simply gets a little slack in the way of increased luxury or careless buying.

It is much more profitable to keep continual and careful watch on family purchases. Then in case of small reductions in cost, the lowering in price is noticed at once and the saving may be used for definite pleasures or for investment.

The family buyer should follow the market exactly as does the buyer for a business house.

Rigging Up

By SUMMERS

The Omaha Oil Refining company has finished the instillation of a cracking unit of 1,500 barrels, and has practically doubled its gasoline output at its Casper, Wyo., refinery.

California is having a hard time supplying its own market requirements for crude. Some of the producers in the Pacific state have contracts calling for delivery of approximately 150,000 barrels of crude a day for eastern refineries. With the fields of California showing a steady and material decline, and consumption showing an increase the producers are faced with the problem of supplying sufficient crude to meet the demand.

The Mid West Refining company has completed a 1,000 barrel well on the Hogback structure in New Mexico, and the well crude is said to be of a high gravity.

Approximately 349,141 automobiles were manufactured during the February. The total is 26 per cent above that reached during the same month last year. If the same percentage of increase is maintained during the remaining months of the year it may tend to regulate the price of light crude.

HOW TO BUILD, FINANCE BETTER HOMES HAPPINESS AND FURNISH A HOME

Copyright, 1923

The Kitchen Arrangement

Sink, cabinet, with broad working shelf and dish cabinet if dishes are washed in kitchen) should be as close together as possible, without cramping passage room. Stove should be convenient, too, but slightly away from work shelf for hot weather. An ideal arrangement is china supboard at right of sink, cabinet with broad work shelf at left of sink, and, in a narrow kitchen, range on opposite wall from sink across narrowest part of room; if range is far from any broad working surface a table should be very near range.

All kitchen equipment, except the range, should be as near as possible to the dining room door. If no dining room pantry where sink is provided, kitchen sink should be near dining room door. Range with supplementary range beside it should be placed that full day light will light the oven. If stove is already installed in a dark place in exhibition house, move it into the light, even though repiping and wiring may be necessary. Mirrors may be hung to throw additional light on range. If there is no good working shelf on cabinet, a table should be near cabinet for mixing food. There will then have to be a second table with a heat proof top near the stove unless stove is so near to the cabinet that one table will serve both for mixing and setting hot utensils on. If possible, install a gas range, or an electric range if current is cheap enough to warrant. The range should, if possible, have an oven heat regulator. Where gas is unavailable and cost of electric current high, install a good oil stove with an oven. Refrigerator should be on porch or vestibule just outside kitchen door or should be in the kitchen near the back door, away from the stove. If space permits, tbale next to refrigerator is a convenience. An out-icer is a convenience; in cold weather the ice compartment may be left empty and open for the air to cool the food.

Dish towel and hand towel rack should be as near as possible to sink, high enough to be out of the way. The dish towel rack should be on side towards window for drying and airing.

Wall clock should be within sight of stove without worker turning around. Garbage pail and trash basket should be under sink. Stove should be near chief working surface; either table or cabinet.

Decorations — Simple, easily washed curtains of gingham, striped calico or unbleached musin with a colored tape border add to the attractiveness of the room. They should not obscure the light. If the windows are near working centers, curtains may be half length, that is, from top of windows to center sash, and finished with fringe.

Smaller up-to-date equipment, such as fireless cooker, a pressure cooker, utensils, electric whippers, cutlery, strainers and so on, should also be installed.

BRIGHTENING BRASS

Your brass candle sticks will appreciate an occasional rubbing with vinegar and salt. It will brighten antique brass without giving the appearance of having been polished.

Arranging Pictures

Tasteful simplicity in the arrangement of pictures and ornaments is the most essential thing. A room may better be completely devoid of such things than to be overcrowded with them or for them to be inartistic. Family portraits are never appropriate for the more public quarters of the house. If you must exhibit them confine them to the bedrooms. Never hang them in the living room, dining room or halls. Your home expresses your own personal taste and everyone that enters it is influenced in his opinion of you by its appearance, even though neither of your realize it at the time. If you have a large number of cheap garish tawdy souvenirs, vases and bric-a-brac, about, it gives a cluttered effect. Like all other bad habits a "junky" looking home is an easy one to slip into. If sentiment makes us value these things too highly for the junk heap better relegate them to the attick or an old trunk. They will collect less dust there and be far more decorative by their absence than their presence.

Saving Bedroom Curtains

To prolong the life of your bedroom curtains and let in every passing breeze at the same time, place small brass hooks three feet above those which hold the tie-backs, and loop the curtains there at night. It only takes a minute, and hooks need not show, and your curtains are neither dampened by sudden showers, or whipped by the wind. If they are hung straight, a ring sewed in the top of the hem, on the wrong side, at the outer edge will do it as well.

Proud Of Your Home?

This is your home. It is where you make your money, where you raise your family, where you enjoy the society of your friends, where you spend your hours of recreation and where you reap the greatest joys of life. What are you doing for the community that does so much for you? Is your home a credit to you and your town, or is it only a place where you park your clothes? If it is, make it a better home.

HOME

And what it takes to make it that
The rails are stretching endless miles;
The trains are rushing by,
There are a thousand winding roads
Beneath the arching sky.
And oh, the fun of packing up
And leaving on the train
Is nothing like the joyousness
Of going home again!

Each brook that tinkles as we pass
Is sure to find its way
Into the lake of my delight
That you behold today.
And oh, it is a happy thought,
No matter where I roam,
A thousand highways there may be
But all roads led home!
—Anne Campbell in Detroit News

HOW THE ARCHITECT SERVES

From the moment that intention to build is born, until the completed structure opens its doors for the fulfillment of those purposes for which it was created, the sound counsel of the architect guides its development along the ways of beauty, efficiency and economy.

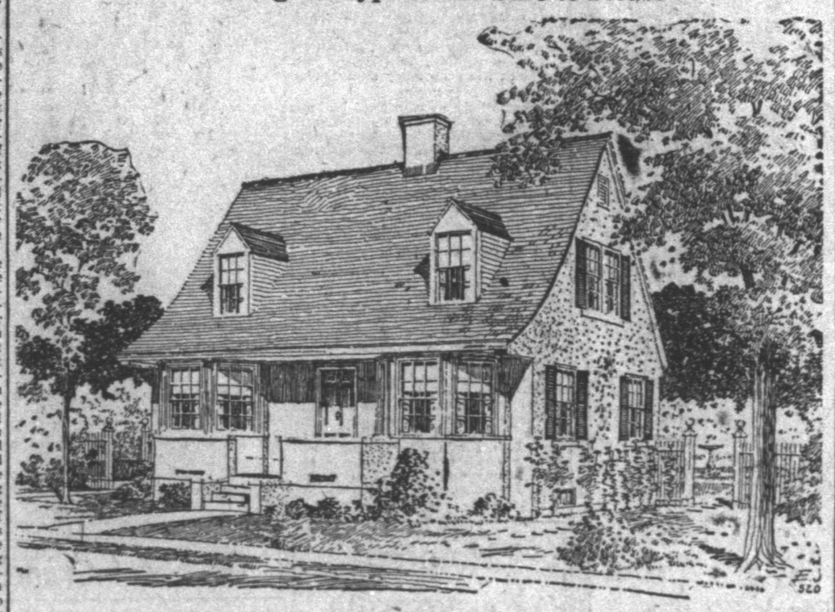

AMUSEMENTS AND HOME

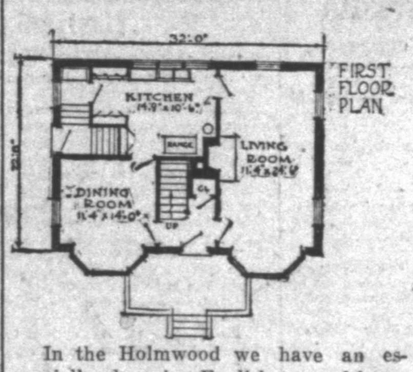

Entertainment is part of the home and nothing contributes quite as much as music. While radio is sweeping the country, yet the good old musical instruments of the home—the piano and the talking machine—are still as popular as ever. Dealers report steady sales all the time.

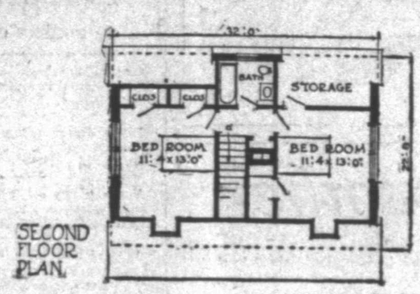

One of the most wonderful clocks in the world is to be seen in the cathedral of Wells, England. It was made by a monk exactly 600 years ago. The hours are indicated by the appearance of a number of armed figures on horseback. They meet in a kind of charge, the striking of their lances sounding the chimes for the hour.

THE HOLMWOOD

An English Type House Sure to Please

In the Holmwood we have an especially charming English type of home sure to delight the builder who wants large rooms offering plenty of opportunity for decoration and the placing of furniture. Those who like to entertain a great deal will be quick to see the possibilities in this plan. The exterior invites an informal method of planting.

A small terrace at the front has a solid stucco wall making a semi-private porch from which we enter the hall where we see a pleasing stairway and neat closet arrangement. From the hall we reach the living room at one side and the dining room at the other. The dining room is made cheerful by a front bay of three windows. The living room is the feature of this plan and should delight those who enjoy a spacious well-furnished room. It has a fireplace of proportions sufficient to permit the burning of large logs and the width of the room allows the placing of comfortable furniture before it without crowding. There are windows on three sides including a three-windowed bay in front.

One could hardly ask for a better kitchen than the one planned here. It has cross ventilation from every direction. Three windows light the sink, drainboard and working table. The range is well away to itself. There is a closet for brooms, pots, and pans, and a pantry with compartments for all the equipment of the culinary workshop. In the rear entrance is a place for the refrigerator and here stairs lead one to a cellar arranged with separate rooms for laundry, furnace, and vegetable and coal storage.

Two bedrooms and the bath comprise the entire second floor. Both bedrooms have large closets and one has a good storage closet in addition. The dormers and side windows assure comfortable sleeping quarters.

Built of concrete masonry and with walls finished in buff-colored stucco with red concrete tile or cement-asbestos shingle roof, this house will not only be permanent and fire-safe, but will be warm and hospitable in appearance.

MARRIED WOMEN WAGE EARNERS.

A new problem confronting American industry is that of the married women. A bulletin issued by the department of labor shows that there are nearly two million married women gainfully employed in the United States and that the gainful employment of married women is increasing. In 1890 less than five of every hundred married women were gainfully employed.

This increase in proportion represents a tremendous increase in actual numbers from about 515,000 in 1890 to nearly two million in 1920 with a tremendous increase since 1920. Their employment has increased forty per cent during the last ten years. Large numbers of married women are found to be employed in most of the industries studied by the agents of the department of labor.

This survey did not include the millions of American women identified with the agricultural life of America. Perhaps the wives and daughters of farmers, who work early and late, are not gainfully employed. That is, they are not paid regular wages. This bulletin of the Federal Department of Labor deals with married women who are wage earners in the industries of the nation.

Now why shouldn't the women away down on the farm who help to produce the cotton crop of America be counted by the department of labor as among those gainfully employed? Regardless of all this, two million five hundred thousand married women engaged as wage earners in the industries of America constitute an industrial puzzle.

According to the labor department the solution lies in making it possible for men to support their families. This is one of the reasons why the labor organizations of America for more than thirty years have clamored for restrictive immigration laws and unless the signs are misleading they are going to win their demand.

There are any number of national lawmakers who are ready to vote to shut out all aliens for a period of five years and a vast majority of the members of the house have voted for the drastic restrictions or clauses of the Johnson bill which is now pending in the senate.

SCORE ONE FOR HIRAM.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California picked up the republican delegates in South Dakota by a very scant majority. Gasoline Bill McMasters stripped Senator George Sterling of his toga and hopes to be elected to the United States senate in November as a champion of cheap gas.

William Gibbs McAdoo captured the democratic delegation to the national convention. A rival delegation was pledged to Henry Ford but it could not get anywhere for the very substantial reason that Henry is a republican in the Coolidge band-wagon and isn't seeking a democratic nomination.

President Coolidge captured the Idaho delegation to the national convention and California and Idaho are neighbor states. Idaho is the home state of Senator William A. Borah. The fact is that Idaho was never on the map until Borah placed it there.

Borah and Johnson are republicans — progressive republicans. Now why did the Idaho republicans ditch the Johnson boom and proclaim Calvin Coolidge the favorite son of a far western commonwealth?

CLEANEST BIG CITY IN THE WORLD.

New York is the cleanest big city in the world so far as open vice is concerned, according to the annual report of the commission of fourteen. New York has the lowest mortality rate of any large city in the world, according to Senator Royal S. Copeland, who was health commissioner of Gotham for twelve years.

And yet politicially speaking New York is controlled by the Tammany tribe of Indians, whose big chief began life in the Gashouse district of that city and was at one time a bar tender. This was years before he reached his present high eminence as a political boss.

Philadelphia must have been the rottenest city in America before General Butler of the United States marines was placed at the head of its police department and given instructions to make the place as pious and as clean as a modern cemetery.

Governor Gifford Pinchot had something to do with the clean-up. He smashed the Penrose political machine and this made it easy for General Butler to smash the little political machinists who controlled the illicit booze traffic in the far famed Quaker City.

WAITING TO SEE WHAT ELSE THEY'RE GOING TO HAVE

The Great Grandmother

"The fact is," he said, "that ever since he's been here Price has been working night and day. He has been up against difficulties—perfectly appalling difficulties—and he has been in almost constant peril."

Lord Edmund looked at him with an expression of mingled surprise and distrust.

"But his business here was perfectly simple," he said. "I should have supposed he could have settled the fishing in an hour without the slightest difficulty, certainly without any danger."

"The fishing. Oh, yes, of course, the fishing?"

Royce had forgotten for the moment that it was the salmon fishing of Lishreen river, which originally brought Price to Ireland.

"And I think," said Lord Edmund, "that it was with you that the question about the fishing had to be settled."

"Oh," said Royce, "that wretched little fishing business could have been settled in a few minutes. In fact, we might as well settle it now. You can fish as much as ever you like. You can begin today if you want to. I'll lend you a rod with pleasure. What do you say to starting at once? I'll run you out to Lishreen in my car, and I think I can safely promise you a salmon."

But Lord Edmund had not won his position as a great statesman without possessing a capacity for sticking to his point.

"I'm still unable to understand," he said, "why my telegrams remained unanswered."

"It is difficult, I quite admit that it is difficult, to understand that," said Royce, "unless you know what Price has been doing. Once you know that you will see that the fishing—and even your telegrams—I deliberately say your telegrams—are matters of very small importance!"

CHAPTER XXI.

An Inspiration.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to tell me," cried Lord Edmund, "what Price has been doing."

Royce was scarcely prepared to do this. He felt that the story was a long and complicated one, not likely to be satisfactory to Lord Edmund. He shook his head gravely, assuming an air of professional dignity.

"Without breach of confidence," he said, "I can scarcely enter into an explanation. That would involve the discussion of the affairs of some clients of mine. You appear to forget, Lord Edmund, that I am a professional man."

"Very well," said Lord Edmund. "I must ask Price that question when I meet him."

His tone suggested that he meant to insist on getting an answer from Price. He also made it clear that he had no more to say to Boyce by walking away toward the far end of the platform.

But Royce was not easily shaken off. He felt strongly that he must talk Lord Edmund into a more amiable mood before Price suffered his cross-examination.

He, too, walked down the platform and overtook Lord Edmund at the gate leading to the road.

"By the way," he said, "are you fond of picture dealers?"

Lord Edmund stopped in amazement. Never had he met any one so persistent and so inconsequent as Royce. But it is the glory of an English gentleman that his dignity is not easily disturbed. He replied calmly:

"There are several picture dealers for whom I have great respect."

"Do you know one called Kaitcer?"

But Lord Edmund saw no reason why he should be heckled on totally irrevelant matters. He had come to Carnew to talk about Price, telegrams, Albanian boundaries and salmon fishing. The range of subjects seemed to him sufficiently wide. He was not prepared to discuss picture dealing as well.

Without saying a word about Kaitcer he turned his back on Royce and walked rapidly down the road. Royce ran after him and soon overtook him.

"I'm sure," he said, "you don't like ruffians—the kind of murderous ruffians who pretend to be patriotic and are simply highwaymen."

"I'm not interested in such people," said Lord Edmund.

"That's a pity," said Royce, "for unless you're fond of picture dealers and are more or less interested in murders it's difficult to tell you what Price has been doing."

Lord Edmund walked on, slightly quickening his pace, but he was mistaken if he thought he could outdistance Royce.

"I suppose you like pretty girls," said Royce. "Every man must, when they're really pretty, and the one I'm going to talk about is actually lovely!"

Lord Edmund in the course of a long life spent in the public service had seen as many pretty girls as he wanted to, and had ceased to be interested in them. He walked on without even looking around.

Royce, though he was not a professional diplomatist, had some theories about human nature on which he always acted in dealing with people who showed themselves in any way difficult.

He believed, for instance, that every man has a weak point, something in which he is really interested; that the introduction of this subject, whatever it might be, would divert his attention from the business on hand.

He was most anxious to turn Lord Edmund's thoughts from the remissness of his secretary in the matter of telegrams.

He had tried him with picture dealer. He had tried him with murderers, a class likely to interest any one who, as a statesman, is responsible for civilization. He had tried him with pretty girls, and they might be supposed to appeal to men of every rank and profession.

He thought of trying him with horse races, the foreign exchanges, auction bridge and golf. But they had been getting over the ground very quickly owing to Lord Edmund's efforts to escape, and had reached the town before Royce had time to start a new subject.

The sight of the door of his own office reminded him of the picture inside. He remembered at the same moment that, according to Kaitcer, who certainly ought to know, Lord Edmund was deeply interested in art. He hurried after him again, and this time seized his arm.

CHAPTER XXII

"You Ought to Do Something for Price."

"By the way," said Royce, "I'd like to have your opinion of a picture which happens to be in my office, a portrait of a lady in a blue dress, painted by Gainsborough."

This time, to Royce's great delight, Lord Edmund was very much interested indeed.

"Absolutely genuine," Royce went on. "Kaitcer thinks it's genuine."

"Kaitcer," said Lord Edmund. "Do you mean Kaitcer of the Carlton Galleries?"

"That exact man," said Royce. "He's over here at present. I was trying to tell you about him a moment ago, but you wouldn't listen to me."

"If Kaitcer has seen the picture—"

"He's done a great deal more than see it," said Royce. "He's been trying his best to steal it."

Lord Edmund, in spite of the incredulity of the story, was impressed.

"Perhaps," said he, "you'll allow me to see it."

"That," said Royce, "is exactly what I want you to do. In fact, I've been trying for the last half hour to propose that you should come and see it. But you kept walking away without looking round, and you wouldn't listen to a word I said."

"I didn't realize till a moment ago," said Lord Edmund, "that you were talking about a Gainsborough portrait. You said something about murderers and girls—"

"I had to," said Royce, "in order to show you what Price had been through in order to get that picture for you. He didn't want it for himself in the very least. His one idea was to secure it for you before Kaitcer walked off with it to London. He's been working day and night on land and sea, very often in the sea, up to his neck in it. He defied that ruffian, Jimmy Rafferty, and interviewed Cohen. Now you understand why poor Price never replied to those telegrams of yours. He never had a moment to put pen to paper, and he was right, you know, perfectly right. After all, what is Albania? What is Czecho-Slovakia? What, one might almost say, is the Irish republic compared to a Gainsborough portrait?"

A few minutes later Royce took the picture from the safe and spread it on the table. Lord Edmund examined it carefully. Royce's clerk was sent to borrow a magnifying glass from the doctor, the only man in Carnew who owned one, and Lord Edmund studied the picture through that. It was moved about so that the light fell on it in various ways. Royce and his clerk held it up against one wall and then against another.

"Is there anything known about the history of this picture?" said Lord Edmund at last.

"It has practically no history," said Royce. "It has been in Lishreen House ever since it was painted until today. It's supposed to be the great-grandmother of the present Sir Amos Coppinger."

"Do you think he'd be willing to sell it?"

"Strictly speaking, it's not his to sell," said Royce. "It's part of the furniture of the house, and that belongs to a lot of rascally money-lenders who are going to auction up the whole place."

"Kaitcer's opinion carries weight, great weight; but, of course, I'd like to have other advice. I may say, however, that if the picture proves to be genuine, I am prepared to give—"

He named a sum which made Royce gasp. It is difficult to deprive an Irishman of his self-possession and presence of mind when he is engaged in bargaining.

If you offer him one hundred pounds for a cow for which he never hoped to get more than twenty pounds he will groan and reply that his very lowest price is one hundred and fifty pounds. But Lord Edmund's offer for the picture was so far beyond anything that Royce imagined the picture could be worth that he was actually startled out of all power of bargaining.

"If you give that," he said, "I'll undertake to see that you get the frame without a penny of extra charge. It's genuine, too, quite as genuine as the picture."

A child born today will enjoy excellent health, and will probably travel extensively, and have a colorful life teeming with rich experiences.

If today is your birthday, and you have taken advantage of the opportunities offered you, your life is a successful one and replete with good fortune. "There is a tide, which taken at the flood leads to fortune," is a trite saying: in your case, however, the tide has flown freely and abundantly. If you have not realized your early dreams of success, it is because of the fear to take a chance that so often besets you: whenever you have been able to overcome this lack of intrepidity, your efforts have culminated well and to your entire satisfaction. You have great faith in yourself, but very little confidence in the efforts of others. As a natural result, you often mar your chances of success by wanting to do everything yourself, even to the smallest trifle. When you leave unimportant details to others, and occupy yourself with the big issues, your success is positive and complete.

Your character is a strong one: you have many friends, but just as many enemies. The former are your chief solace; the latter do not disturb your peace of mind, as you realize that success fosters envy—in others.

The happiness of your home life depends, more so than in most instances, on the character and tendencies of your mate. If the wife or husband you have chosen, also possess, like yourself, a strong character, with an abundance of will power, you will often clash, and clashes endanger love. If, on the other hand, your mate or companion is helpful, without being assertive, a great deal of happiness is in store for you.

The will to do things, the power to accomplish them, are gifts of the gods and should be nourished and cultivated at all times.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

WHEN THE ACTORS GO OUT

The villain bared his gleaming blade,
And with an evil glout,
He seized the frail and lovely maid,
By her fair slender throat.
Said he: "Pledge me your hand or die,
No mercy I shall show."
"And did she pledge her hand?" you cry;
Alas, I do not know.

The Yance hero and the Sheik,
Were fighting for the girl.
I saw the red sand whirl,
I saw the Yankee hero clasp
His pistol as he fell.
I heard the savage Arabs shriek,
"And did he shoot the sheik?" you gasp;
Alas, I cannot tell.

I saw the base blackhander place
A cask beneath the stair;
He was a man of evil face,
And quite untidy hair.
The giant powder in the cask
He lit, and walked away.
"And did the stuff blow up?" you ask;
Alas, I cannot say.

I saw as much as I have told,
Then sat there, sore perplexed,
Because I never might behold
What these good folk did next.
My heart must still go pit-a-pat,
As still I wait enthralled,
For when they'd gone as far as that,
The actors' strike was called.

The High Cost of Golf

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Most of us complain of the high cost of everything, yet once in a while some item gives us a jolt. It makes us realize that the demands of modern civilized life are becoming rapidly more exoribtant.

Lodging decently and comfortably in a hotel that used to cost a traveling man $2.00 a day now costs him from $10.00 to $20.00.

Home expenses have kept pace with the expenses of travel.

And when it comes to luxuries the only expression that can fit the case is the classic American exclamation, "Gee whiz!"

For example, according to the items collected by Damon Runyon the other day, you could in 1903 have joined the Claremont Country club of Oakland, California, for $100. Now if you can get in the privilege will cost you $2,230.

"You could," he says, "have joined the San Francisco Golf and Country club in 1897 for $1,500, a by no means insignificant sum in those days. Today the privilege is held at $3,500.

Three years ago when the Wilshire Country club of Los Angeles, was new a membership cost $250. Now it costs $1,250.

The Virginia Country club of Long Beach, Calif., started out about the same period with its membership at $100. Now its costs $1,000 to get in this club."

All of which goes to show that so far from being misers, Americans may find it difficult to prove that they are not spendthrifts.

It is the custom in European circles to speak of Americans as "dollar mad." Over there they are supposed to be so superior that they care nothing for so sordid a thing as money, but devote their whole mind to art and literature, gambling, romance, socialism, leisure, play, cussedness and pessimism.

Over here we are supposed to be all living on Main street, all going home to lunch on corned beef and cabbage, all working 25 hours a day like Rosum's universal robots, and altogether talking constantly through our nose about how much money we have.

As a matter of fact, Americans care less for money than any race in the world. They get it quickly and spend it more quickly.

Exclusive and high-toned as amusements may be at Biarritz or Monte Carlo, they have nothing on us; and if you don't believe it, you can apply for admission to the golf clubs at Oakland, Calif., and points west.

TIMELY VIEWS on WORLD TOPICS

"REGULATION OF RADIO MOST COMPLEX PROBLEM BEFORE U. S., SAYS HOOVER.

"The regulation of radio is the most complex and difficult problem in regulation that has ever confronted the government," Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, declared recently in an interview. "Two conflicting principles assert themselves. One is the right of inventors to earn a profit on their patents, and the other is the broad principle that nobody must be permitted to monopolize or control the means of communication. I think that is a question for the courts to solve, and I am not a lawyer.

"I believe, however, that everybody should be permitted to send out anything they like. The very moment that the government begins to determine what can be sent it establishes a censorship, and almost immediately it will be called upon to discriminate between opera and jazz, fundamentalist and modernist sermons, and so on throughout the whole field of clashing ideas.

"Nor must anybody else be permitted to act as censor. It would be absurd for anybody to attempt to set up property rights to the ether. It should be as free as the air. The government has no right to grant any such right to anybody, either for use or sale, any more than it has a right to grant anybody a section of the Hudson river for its exclusive use or to sell.

"What we must bear in mind is that this whole art is in a liquid state. Nobody knows where it will end. For that reason everybody practicing it should be given the widest possible latitude. The regulatory powers now vested in the department of commerce are totally inadequate and would have broken down completely but for the voluntary co-operation of the stations. About all we can do is to assign wave lengths and issue licenses. No license is issued for longer than three months, because we want to keep the situation tightly in hand. The White bill names the causes for which licenses could be revoked, and creates other powers which I am confident would enable to keep the ether open to everybody.

"You will recognize that if anybody should be able to have the exclusive use of a certain wave length he would have a monopoly on that part of the ether. That cannot be permitted. We have protected the ether. Of course, certain people have patents on the instruments by which you get in and out of the ether. Like all patents, they have certain rights which should be protected. That is a matter for the courts. It is also," he added significantly, "a matter for the exercise of broad vision by people in control of great industrial enterprises."

COTTON VARIES IN PAST WEEK

Fluctuations Bring New Low Records At New Orleans

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 30.—The last week in the cotton market was a period of feverish fluctuations and witnessed the making of new low records for prices, so far as the present movement is concerned. After starting out with some show of important advances, dut to very bad weather in the belt and rather favorable advices from Liverpool and Manchester, the market turned weak mainly on reports of practical stagnation in the manufactured cotton goods trade.

As a result of the active selling induced by these unfavorable advices as to dry goods and talk of further mill curtailment, May contracts declined to a level of 26.60 about the middle of the week and October dropped below the 23-cent level to 22.97. These levels were fully 11 cents a pound below the high marks of the season.

The downward trend of values was checked on Friday by reports that fully 50,000 bales were to be shipped out of the large certified stock in New York during April. These reports were accompanied by advices to the effect that there was a pressing demand from France and Japan. Cables reported not only that trade was improving in Manchester, but that the textile industries on the continent of Europe were extremely active.

Following up the indications of large exports during the coming month was the report that some signs were seen of an improvement in the dry goods situation as a result of the recent cut in prices on several of the leading staple products. In addition to the reports that the dry goods situation showed a turn for the betters, traders were confronted by a continuance of exceedingly bad weather in the cotton region promising to further delay the preparations for the new crop, already very backward.

Advances Friday and Saturday morning showed a gain of 145 points in the May contracts. This sharp rally had the effect of causing many traders to believe that a definite upward trend had been started in the market.

Des Moines Wins Third, 3-2, and Series

SPUDDER RALLY IN 9TH NEAR VICTORY ON WILLIAMS' HIT; FUSSELL, CHEEVES UNLUCKY

The Des Moines Westerners again were successful with their bits and took the last game Sunday and the series here from the Spudders, 3 to 2. Skipper Tanner's men registered nine hits to the visitors' seven, but the Des Moines slingers kept them scattered enough to discount the margin.

Fussell and Cheeves were touched for the Des Moines runs, all of which came in the third and fourth innings. Several times the Spudder hopefuls had chances to count, but lost them through failure to take advantage. Three double plays on the part of Manager Corriden's infield also nicked promising starts.

Spudders Try Rally.

Wichita Falls scored in the third, tying the count for the nonce, but the two winning Des Moines markers followed in the fourth. In the ninth with two men down and Jonnard an first, Red Williams slashed out his second triple of the day, scoring Jonnard. It was all over when Buddy Tanner, next up, popped out to Chavez.

Fussell-Cheeves.

For their first trip on the mound, Freddie Fussell and Virgil Cheeves destrved more than their reward. A score against the southpaw and two against the "Big Indian chief" were enough to win a ball game. Six hits did the trick. Starting off the first two frames with two strike-outs and no hits, Fussell slowed from the fast pace in the unlucky third. He was whipped through the prettiest delivery seen here this year, and looked like a million dollars. He was taken out, in all likelihood, to save his arm, as he has been out until recently. Given added strength to his arm, and Fussell will no doubt prove a winner.

Cheeves was using a slow delivery with little hop, but which was effective to the extent that he gave up only three hits scattered through four innings. Two walks, with a hit and an error, put the game away for Des Moines in the fourth. After that Cheeves went through the seventh.

Hoots.

Clarence Hoots was right, in two innings allowing one hit and issuing one free pass to first. He whiffed one batter.

Brown-Johnson.

In Brown and Johnson the Western leaguers had two more twirlers who were able to stand the gaff. Johnson allowed six hits spread out over five innings, which were good for only one run. He struck out one man and walked one. Brown turned back five Spudders and gave one walk and was touched for one score.

Tanner, Williams, Weiss.

Skipper Tanner, Art Weiss and Red Williams handled the hefty bludgeons for Wichita Falls. Each collected two safe ones, Tanner's being singles, Weiss' a double and a single, and Williams' two triples. The red-topped right fielder scored one run and drove in the other with his two long ones. Both three-baggers by Williams were long, clean drives to the right garden wall.

Anfinson-Johnson.

The Des Moines starting battery was high for that club, Anfinson and Johnson being responsible for two hits each. Anfinson made one a double. In the third they hit in succession and were jointly responsible for the run.

Locker, Fitzgerald and Cheeves made the other Spudder hits, one each. Gain, Roseberry and Chavez each connected for a safe one.

Oklahoma City Next.

Coming up on the Spudder exhibition program to complete a blasted series here are the Oklahoma City Indians. Manager Ludcrus will bring his crew here Wednesday and Thursday. One game was played in the series, which the Oklahomans won.

Crowd Shivers At Frigid Race On Autiel Track

By The Associated Press.

AUTEUIL, France, March 30. — Muffled in furs or wrapped in heavy coats, instead of wearing the latest creations, 75,000 persons assembled at the race track here today for the running of the President of the Republic 4,500 meters stakes. Within the enclosure was many Americans. It appeared more like a great gathering from Chamonix or Montreal winter sports than a gay spring crowd at a function generally regarded as the first out-door display of the summer styles for the season.

The thermometer's range for the afternon was a steady decline from six to two above the freezing point.

And a good horse with a semi-Scotch name, Master Bob, won the race by half a length. He was favorite at 4 to 1 in a field of eighteen starters, thus sending away happy four fifths of the spectators who wagered on his chances.

Sports Through Edgren's Eyes

By ROBERT EDGREN.

When Paul Berlenbach hit the floor he landed with a thud that jarred the boxing world. So much had been expected of Paul. Too much, in fact. He had been fighting professionally only half a year. A very short time in which to learn all the tricks of a game as complicated as boxing. Naturally there was glee among the cynical gentlemen who had been waiting to see him flop. He was described as a "bursting bubble." But Berlenbach didn't burst like a bubble, leaving no trace but a damp spot and a momentary mist in the air.

Let's analyze Berlenbach's case a bit.

First—he was a sensational amateur. He became a sensational professional with his first fight. Dan Hickey, brainy old timer, brought him along slowly, picking harder opponents week by week, making him fight often.

"He had a lot to learn," Hickey kept saying, "but he's learning fast."

Berlenbach knocked out a tough old veteran when he floored Carbone. Knocking out Jimmy Darcy in three rounds was a good job. He was going along well.

What happened in the Jack Delaney fight? Berlenbach changed from his usual deliberate start and rushed Delaney's superior experience and boxthat looked like his best chance. Delaney was known to be clever, experienced and a hard hitter. The thing to do was to make the fight short. The longer the fight went the more Delaneys superior experience and boxing skill would count to his advantage. It was known that Delaney could put over a hard, clean punch, especially with his right. When Colima invaded the east, heralded as a bigger Aurelio Herrera, Delaney dropped him cold with that right hand.

For two rounds Berlenbach swarmed all over Delaney, although he took several hard jolts in doing it. He had Delaney on the floor. At the end of the second round Delaney reeled to his corner, dazed and hurt by the few hard punches Berlenbach hurled past his guard. It looked like Berlenbach's fight. In the third Berlenbach rushed across the ring, eager to force matters to a quick finish. Delaney as he rose from his chair, swung a terrific right and caught Paul squarely on the chin. It was an unexpected blow and Berlenbach ran into it. He was so badly dazed that he had no chance to recover, and was knocked down three times in the third and fourth—each time by hard right hand punches on the chin. He had no defense left. That was where experience might have pulled him through, but he lacked the experience. That he got up each time and was facing Delaney, although helpless, when the referee stepped in and stopped the fight, promises that Berlenbach will come back. He isn't an "exploded bubble." When a bubble bursts it never comes back.

A great many good fighters, and some champions, have run into knockout punches.

Jack Dempsey, king of them all just now, was once knocked out with the first punch by Jim Flynn. At that time Dempsey was just a good novice who had won a string of fights, something like Berlenbach. Jim Flynn was a cagy veteran with a punch. He had fought all the good ones—Sam Langford, Jack Johnson—scores of others. He knew everything. And he caught Dempsey just right with one punch. Later Dempsey knocked Flynn out with one punch, settling the score. Dempsey went on to win the championship of the world.

Bob Fitzsimmons, a novice with a knockout record, was knocked out by Jim Hall. He afterward won three world championships, middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight.

Johnny Dundee was knocked cold with a single punch by Willie Jackson. Willie is through and forgotten. Dundee is world's featherweight champion.

If I remember right Sam Langford was knocked out in 12 rounds by Danny Duane just 21 years ago. Sam afterward became one of the greatest heavyweights in ring history—although the champions deftly dodged giving him a chance to win the title Danny was a good fighter—but through long before Sam got to the top. Sam still fights now and then.

Jose Rivers was knocked out by Johnny Kilbane. Jose afterward fought Ad Wolgast for the championship, and many who saw the fight still say that Rivers fairly won the title when both were on the floor. Rivers fouled and Wolgast knocked out, and the referee picked Wolgast up and held him on his feet.

Jack Britton was knocked out in one of his early fights by Steve Kinney—a one punch K. O. in the first round. Britton went on fighting and became welterweight champion.

The great Terry McGovern never was knocked out until late in his career—officially. But he came within an ace of it, and perhaps technically he was out. It was in the fight with Oscar Gardner, a sturdy youngster with a wallop. Gardner knocked Terry flat and stood near him during the count. Terry crawled along the floor and grabbed Gardner's legs, held on and scrambled up Oscar as desperately, and climbed up Oscar as if he was climbing a tree. In the confusion the fight went on, and Terry knocked Oscar out in the third round.

Tommy Ryan was knocked out by Kid McCoy, and afterward became one of the best middleweight champions we ever had. Joe Walcott, welter champion who used to knock out heavyweights, was knocked out by middleweight Kid Carter when nobody dreamed Walcott could be kayoed. Kid McCoy, with a wonderful knockout record, was dropped for a ten count by Jack McCormick, a dub boxer and wrestler. He massacred McCormick later.

And Benny Leonard, invincible lightweight champion today, was knocked out by Joe Shugrue and Frankie Fleming, in his first and second years of fighting. That didn't stop Benny.

And Harry Greb—one of the toughest eggs that ever held a world's championship—the iron man. When Harry was knocking everybody for a loop in his first year in the ring—just like Berlenbach—he met Joe Chip, whose best claim to fame was that his brother held the middleweight title for a few weeks. Pancho Villa, great little man and flyweight champion, was going like a whirlwind in his first year when he met Francisco Concepcion, another Filipino said to have been the best boxer ever turned out in the islands, and was licked out of his boots in four rounds. That didn't keep Villa from becoming a champion later. Stanley Ketchel was knocked out by Billy Papke, and won the middleweight title back by flattening Bill in turn.

Looking over the list it seems that nearly every world's champion has been knocked out sometime or other. Anybody can step into a punch.

Little Lessons In Big Sports

Is it a good policy to carry both light and heavy balls, or should a round of golf be played throughout with the same kind of ball?

Answered by BOB MacDONALD
Winner of the Metropolitan Open championship, 1921 and 1923. One of the longest drivers in the game though using only a 12 1-2 ounce driver.

Always use the same kind of ball. All hazards, including water, are chiefly mental. In most cases the shot would be a very easy one if the hazard were invisible. To use a floater is to give in to a weakness that is imaginary. So I say, use on weight of ball, put a little Coue into the shot and then step up and make the shot you wish to make.

Earl Combs drew considerable notice in the papers before his arrival at the New Orleans camp, due to his negotiations with the New York club and the Lonisville owners for a part of the fortune paid for him. As a result many fans—and some members of the Yankee outfit—had gained the impression the spare young Kentuckian was a bit proud of himself, so to speak. This illusion was dispelled soon after the former American association star reached camp, however.

Combs looked over the Yankee outfit—especially Ruth, Witt and Meusel—and then remarked, "Looks like I gotta hard job breaking into that outfit. Any manager would be foolish to try to shove me in while they are going good. I'm booked to warm the bench but I'm not kicking, at all. I had to warm the bench in Louisville when I first went there."

Fairly sensible view for a youngster who had every reason to feel that he was "sitting pretty."

Sports of 1924

"Uneasy lies the dome that wears a crown," as Bob Fitzsimmons, originator of the light heavyweight division, once said. Now Michael Francis McTigue, of County Clarke, Ireland, sometimes known as "the light heavyweight champ who failed", has an uneasy dome, for today he fights Young Stribling in Newark, N. J. "Ma" Stribling's boy, William, whom she raised to be a fighter, is about to get another whack at the title he and his family claim he was robbed of last October in Columbus, Georgia.

Who is going to win? McTigue beat Siki, who beat Carpentier, who beat Levinsky, etc., etc.—every one knows now how bum Siki is, and that neither Stribling nor McTigue would have a chance with Greb or Tunney, for instance. In this bout McTigue won't have his bad hand—or his own referee, while Stribling won't have his fellow Georgians around for aid and comfort. Mike is 32, William 19—and Zev is now 4, which has about as much to do with it as this fight has to do with deciding who is the best light heavyweight in the world.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

While Jack Dempsey's recent operation has apparently eliminated all chances of a heavyweight championship fight before next Labor Day his absence from the ring may help the game considerably in that it will give the leading aspirants full sway and a chance to "put up or shut up," as we used to say on the street corner. Now there is Mr. Wills, eminent representative of the colored race. He's been calling Jack Dempsey names for a couple of years while his manager and friends have been turning down plenty of chances offered him to prove in the ring and not by word of mouth his right to a battle with the champ. Wills hasn't knocked out one good heavyweight.

Luis Firpo is just dying for some more American dough—while announcing that he will not fight more than one more battle. Dempsey's temporary retirement leaves Mr. Firpo in a receptive mood for challenges from lesser lights. A victory over Luis from the Pampas would give Wills a chance to collect a nice slice in a battle with Dempsey and, what is more important, would even force promoters to recognize his claim for the right to meet Jacques les Demps.

And Tommy Gibbons, deprived of a chance to get his dome Knocked off in a return battle with Dempsey, can now look over Wills, Firpo and some of the other boys while waiting. Jack Renault, Canadian heavy, would make a worthy opponent right now for Gibbons, Wills or even Firpo—if Luis is in poor condition, as photos indicate.

Then there is Erminio Sap Spalla, the Italian heavyweight, who seems good enough to be matched with Renault or Gibbons. Romero Rojas, the new South American flash, wants to show his stuff in the United States against any of the run of mine stuff. Enough has been written about him to create some interest.

If all these busy heavyweights who think they can knock Dempsey's can off are really sincere and believe they deserve heavyweight title this seems like the propitious moment for them to step out and clean-up the field while Dempsey isn't lurking behind a tree to smack them down unexpectedly.

Floral Heights and S. A. Boys Drop Plans

SCHEDULE DELAYED

$30 a Year Fee Is Decided On At Sunday Meeting

The withdrawal of the Floral Heights Baptist church and the Boys club of the Salvation Army from the Sunday School league was announced at the meeting of club representatives at the First Methodist church, north, yesterday afternoon. The Floral Heights Baptist church gave inability to get together a full team as their reason for withdrawing, while the Salvation Army stated that it would be impossible for them to comply with the requirements for Sunday school attendance due to the members of their club atteding Sunday school at various churches over the city.

The withdrawal of these two clubs from the league brings the membership of the league down to a six club basis. For this reason the schedule committee, which had arranged a schedule for an eight club league was forced to delay making its report until some time during the week.

It is hoped to have the first game of the season for the league on April 14, but it is not definitely known yet that this date is satisfactory to all clubs.

At the meeting yesterday it was decided to place the fee for membership at $30 a year per club. This money is to be used to defray expenses attached to securing umpires and maintaining grounds for play. Other expenses are to be born by the individual clubs incurring them.

All league games are to be played on the diamond back of Ball Brothers factory, it was announced. The Wilson ball was declared to be official.

Yesterday's meeting placed the Sunday School league on a firmer basis, officials of the league say, and make a satisfactory season very probable.

The withdrawal of the Floral Heights club and the Salvation Army team is to be regretted, but should not materially affect the fortunes of the league.

GRAFTON SPEAKS ON PHARASEES

"Leaven" Taken As Key-Note of Sunday Morning Text at Presbyterian

Taking as his text Matthew 16:6 "Then Jesus Said Unto Them, Take Heed and Beware of the Pharasees and of the Sadducees," Rev. N. F. Grafton at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning spoke on the danger of distorted opinions and doctrines. His sermon was as follows:

The word "leaven" is the key-word of my text. Leaven is a ferment that gradually and silently permetrates and effects the whole lump of dough. The leaven of the Pharasees and Sadducees was certain doctrines which were dangerous and would subtly effect the whole thinking and the future life of the people.

The Parasees, and the ford means those who are separated by correct opinions on the scriptures, by correct living, assumed sole authority to interpret the law. They lived the simple life, they attended all of the services of the temple, at whatever hour held, they scrupulously kept every letter of the law. Their doctrine was "one true and living God," the mortality of the soul, rewards and punishments in the hereafter, angelic spirits — a mixture of fate and providence in the individual life.

Their inception or beginning was very wholesome. The sect of the Pharasees was organized quite soon after the return of the children of Israel from the Babylonish captivity. There was a need for this sect, a need for a formulative doctrine, a need for the development of worship, a need for a return to the former relations with Jehovah which Israel sustained before the captivity, a need to be kept separated from the customs and religon of the heathens round about. It was the program of this sect of Pharasees to do just those things and it was a very, very wholesome program and yet Jesus Christ says: "Beware of the leaven of the Pharasees."

Beware of Leaven.

What did He mean? He meant to beware of the leaven of the Pharasees as to certain doctrines which they were teaching during the days of Jesus. What were they? First, as to the traditions of the fathers, a system of doctrines which had grown up and accumulated in their body. The traditions of the fathers was a certain thing handed down from mouth to ear, from generation to generation. The father would tell the son a certain thing which had happened back there in Jewish history and the son would tell his son. The Pharasees had come to hold these traditions sacred and they believed with all their heart that the children should live up to these traditions of the fathers.

To be sure some of these traditions were splendid things, but there had been an increase, a natural growth and development in handing down these traditions until there had piled up an accumulation of things which burdened the church and the lives of the believers and Christ sought time after time to cut the foundation from under those old traditions which did not mean very much, but the Pharasees held on to them until Jesus said: "Beware of the leaven which makes you think the past sacred and that every thing which occurred in the past is the real and right thing."

The leaven of the Pharasees not only pertained to certain of their doctrines but to their attitude as well. They assumed an arrogant attitude of interpretation of the word of God. They took the position that no other sect and there were three, had a right to place an interpretation upon the meaning of the scriptures, and arrogantly they held to that. The scriptures meant exactly thus and so and it did not make any diffe what anyone sa. unless it came from a Parasee. That was wrong. Jesus said that was a dangerous leaven. There are people in the twentieth century who do just that thing, who feel that their denomination has the whole truth and that they have the right to say that the scripture teaches thus and so. Jesus is saying to those people as he did to the men of old: "Beware of the leaven of the Pharasees" and to the arrogant demand that people believe their interpretation of the scriptures to the exclusion of all others.

Another thing in their attitude was that inordinate regard for externals. They would rather put on their robes and go down on the street corner and mumble a prayer so the people could see them than to go into the closet where no one but God could see and hear.

Now as to their actions. There was two things in the lives of the Pharasees that Jesus warned against; one was that they having the authority to interpret the scripture conveniently did so to suit themselves. Here is one interpretation. There were certain laws with regard to the child taking care of his parents when they were old and feeble. It was a command of Almighty God. The Pharasees undertook to interpret that and they said that by the use of a certain Hebrew word one was absolved from all responsibility and they would utter that word and be absolved and the father might go out and perish for hunger and the aged mother be starved. Jesus, knowing their hearts and lives, called them hypocrits and warned against this leaven.

Sadducees Protest.

The Sadducees were a protesting sect. There was a religious need for the Sadducees when their sect was organized. The Pharasees had become so enamored with the past and its traditions as to mistake form for substance. They accepted the corruption of the past as well as the excellence because they were so in love with the past, and as a result the real thinkers were alienated. They said that if certain things were supposed to be so, which were patent on the face of them that they were not so, then they were through. They began to ignore the worship of the Living God; they said that this living in the past was all right for old men, women and children, but not for the thinking men. So they began to cast about to see what could be done and they organized the sect of the Sadducees.

They proposed to use the question mark, to investigate all traditions and see how many were true and how many were worth saving and how many ought to be thrown on the scrap heap; they proposed to weigh all opinions and decide how many were good and how many bad, how many could be saved and how many rejected. In other words, they proposed to clear away the rubbish which had accumulated in the thinking system of the doctrines of the Pharasees and the people through this long period of time. They proposed to put religion on a sound believable basis, one which would appeal to the thinking people and win them back to God and the temple.

That was wholesome; it was good. I think the period of closed eyes and blind faith is gone and I believe it is right it should be. It was right in the days of the Pharasees and Sadducees and it is right today. The Bible is subjected to scrutiny and it should be; religion is put on the witness stand and it should be. Just as this word of God is scrutinized by the keenest of students, so will this word of God stand out as the true word of the Living God. As our blessed, holy religion is placed upon the witness stand to testify, so surely will its testimony be true, and that which cannot ring true should be rejected.

This was the attitude of the Sadducees. "We are going to try these things: we are going to retain the right and reject the wrong." The church has passed through a transition in its belief. There was a time when the church believed the earth was flat; ministers preached it In my boyhood ministry I was associated with a man in the Presbyterian church who still took the position that the earth was flat. He said: "I tell you it is all a lie about the world being round. Do we not read of the four corners of the earth?" And he preached strenuously that the earth was flat. Now we have come to believe that the world is round and it has not destroyed our religion.

As scientists have been digging in the earth they tell us that the world was not six days in the making. We remember a period in the history of the church when that announcement was made and received with consternation. Men said: "Our religion is gone if we believe that." But the church has come to realize that a day with God is not a day of twenty-four hours as we measure it. God says: "A day is as a thousand years." Why not ten thousand? Why confine the age of the world to six thousand years when perhaps it is sixty thousand? There is not a single conflict between God's eternal truth and science. When we come to investigate we find that God's days cannot be numbered as ours; that He speaks of a period of time.

I believe the creative time of Almighty God continues and will continue. There are other things that have injected themselves into the past and there are some things we have had to relegate to the scrap heap and it is right that we should, just as the Pharasees should have relegated some of the things of the fathers. But the danger was that the Suddacees were caught in the meshes of their own negation. They made the mistake og junping at conclusions after superficial investigation. It was all right for them to say they were going to investigate the traditions of the fathers, but they should not have been satisfied with superficial investigation and then come to certain conclusions following such investigation.

Certain cherished doctrines discarded meant to them that all cherished doctrines should be discarded; that if one of those traditions of the fathers is proven not to be true then it puts a question mark over against every other doctrine. Don't you see how their minds moved? They did investigate in a certain way but instead of going to the bottom of things they put a question mark over against all the sacred doctrines of the Pharasees. The trouble was that they lacked a safe anchorage and any man who starts in upon a scientific investigation touching the scriptures and the past, unless he has a safe anchorage, is pretty apt to get into deep water. Any man who stands with his feet upon the Rock Jesus Christ may have the storms and their winds about his head and yet be stedfast and safe.

Now what was the result? Gone the doctrine of immorality; gone the doctrine of the resurrection of the body; gone the doctrine of rewards and punishments; gone the doctrine of angel spirits. "Beware of that subtle leaven of the Sadducees that might lead you into a maze and mist of negation, doubt, despair and ruin."

Iconoclast In Danger.

The Iconoclast is in danger of getting the habit of breaking images. Somehow when he has broken one image there is a feeling and a desire to break another, and there is a subtle danger there. Negation is apt to lose its reverence for sacred things, negation is apt to end in skepticism and materialism. We find that the Sadducees went to the other extreme from the Pharasees. Here is the extreme of orthodoxy and here the extreme of liberalism and both were wrong, absolutely and essentially wrong.

We have in all churches the extreme of orthodoxy and the extreme of liberalism They are called fundamentalists on one hand and modernists on the other. If Jesus Christ could stand here today he would say to beware of both. There is that subtle thing in either one of them that might wreck your faith and do you wrong. There is one safe platform and that is to stand upon sure ground. I have never been a modernist and I have never been a liberalist, but I am standing on the true word of the Living God. You can have your thunder and battles and warfare in the church and by and by it all passes away as the "tempest in the eatpot", and the man who stands upon the Rock Christ Jesus as the sure foundation will be unmoved, unhurt and unharmed.

The leaven of negation led to the leaven of mental superiority. Unconsciously the Sadducees developed this mental superiority. They learned to sneer at the Pharasees because they believed certain things that the Sadducees did not believe. This led to the leaven of worldliness. Just as the Pharasees were intensely religious so were the Sadducees intensely worldly. As they rejected certain doctrines they shaped their lives according to their thinking with regard to othat doctrine. They came to believe that the Sabbath was not as sacred as their fathers believed and taught the Sabbath to be, and as a result they opened their stores on the Sabbath, they took part in games, they followed their pleasures, simply because they had come to disbelieve in the sacredness of the doctrine of the church of Christ.

There are Sadducees in the twentieth century who have lost their confidence and faith and their love for the Sabbath and as a result they profane the day of Almighty God. The Sadducees lost their faith in divine worship and the result was that they absented themselves from the temple of God. Three times a day the true worshiper went to the temple, morning, afternoon and evening, but the Sadducees did not do that. They went one time; they were "oncers." There are a lot of Sadducees in this church and every other church in Wichita Falls. What does it mean? It means that the church does not mean as much to them as it did to their fathers and mothers. Jesus said: "Beware of the doctrine of the Sadducees. It will lead you to worldliness; it will cause you to lose that which you once held sacred."

Take if you please the doctrine of immorality. They argued "that if there are no rewards or punishments, if there is no future life, I better get just as much out of this life as I can." And so they swung clear to the extreme; they were a careless, unconcerned and indifferent sect of people and Christ said: "Beware of that subtle leaven that will permeate your life and your thinking and lead you away from God and the church and right living and right thinking and cut you adrift out on the sea without chart or compass and without anchor—hope gone forever and forever."

ANSWER MADE TO WHEELER CRITICS

Montana Senators Replies To Charges of Treason And Sedition

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the "prosecutor" in the Daugherty investigation, replied today to charges made against him by the republican national committee news bureau by saying that people of Montant "repudiated these stories and authors of them by a majority of more than 20,000 at the last election."

The statement of the Montana senator was brought out by a detailed attack on him issued last week by the news bureau under the caption of "What Everybody Should Know About Senator Wheeler and his Montana Gang."

The attack was to the effect that while Senator Wheeler was United States attorney for Montana "the state became the hotbed for treason and sedition, the leaders in the treasonable and seditious movement being friends of Wheeler's" and that he refused to interfere.

"Everybody knows," said Senator Wheeler's statement, "what the story was put out for, and everybody in Montana knows that the charges are absolutely false. The people of Montana repudiated the stories and the authors of them by a majority of 20,000 and more at the last election."

EL PASO, Texas, March 30.—C. C. Chase, son-in-law of A. B. Fall, who resigned as collector of customs of El Paso after refusing to testify before the senate oil committee regarding a visit to Price McKinney of Cleveland on behalf of Mr. Fall, returned from Washington today. Mr. Chase, who faces impeachment proceedings, issued a lengthy statement assuring his friends of his innocence and asserting that at the time he visited Mr. McKinney he had no knowledge of the nature of the correspondence that had passed between Fall and McKinney. McKinney has testified that Fall had asked him to say he had loaned the former secretary $100,000 and that when he did not answer Fall's letter, Chase had come to see him about it.

AUSTIN, March 30.—With more than 1,500 girls taking part in the exhibition to be held by the Woman's Physical Training department of the University of Texas, April 3, on Clark Field, gymnasium instructors and students are working hard in preparation for the demonstration which is to be the culmination of all gymnasium and class work for the year. The various groups are drilling regularly and strenuously this week and the regular physical education classes are dismissed until after the exhibition when they will resume regular class work.

The program will begin with the grand march in which 1,500 girls of the combined physical education classes will take part. They will form an immense "T" and the spectators will join them in singing "The Eyes of Texas." This will be followed by the dumbell drill by advanced gymnasium classes. The dumbells will be covered with phosophorus and all the lights will be turned off during this stunt.

The sports classes will then follow with games and relays by more than 200 girls.

TO THE CITIZENS OF WICHITA FALLS

TOMORROW it is your duty to cast your vote for a man to serve as Mayor of this growing metropolitan city. As a candidate for that honored position I want to assure the people, if elected, that my best attention will be given to all questions concerning city affairs and that I will be ready at all times to act with dispatch of every matter effecting the city for the best interest of the people.

During the past two years, when the cost of every commodity has declined from 20 to 40 per cent, and during which time every line of business has reduced its expenses accordingly, we find during the same period the city has reduced the tax rate less than 10 per cent, after having added to the fiscal year several years of back taxes, collected at an expense of 10 per cent to the taxpayers, and no accomplishment along progressive lines, except paving paid for by the property owners themselves.

I know local conditions, and fully realize what should be done to better them. It will be my purpose, if elected, to watch the expenditures of the city government from every angle, keeping the expense of same at a minimum by combining, where possible, the various departments, at the same time keep pace with the progress of the city. Necessary improvements should not be retarded at the cost of the health of a people or the progress of a city.

Development of the resources of the city, now neglected, will be encouraged and thereby reduce our tax rate by enhanced valuation. All matters effecting the contentment and prosperity of our people, including matters such as taxation, and public utility rates, will be watched with an eye singular to the interest of our entire citizenship. I will oppose the proposed expenditure of $25,000 on our present city hall. Such an expenditure will be a waste of the taxpayer's money.

If you favor my candidacy for Mayor on these principles, I shall appreciate your vote and influence Tuesday, April 1st, and if elected, I shall always endeavor to live up to he confidence placed in me to the best of my ability.

MILLER'S TEXT IS FOURSQUARE

Pastor Preaches On Balance As One of Creator's Great Laws

Following is sermon of Rev. Leslie Miller, delivered before his congregation Sunday morning at the First Methodist church, Seventh and Lamar:

Balance is one of God's great laws. It figures largely throughout the whole universe. It is essential to beauty. It is the safe guard of the physical world about us. It is essential to the general well being of human society.

Scientists tell us that the solar systems of the infinite spaces are ordered on a balance that is extremely fine, yet as true and eternal as God Himself.

The finest art is created on this law. A painter once told me that many a picture would be priceless but, because of some detail being a bit askew, the whole work was condemned in the eyes of the critics.

Poetry must follow this law as to thought, content, size and meter. The great poems that are sung around the world swing free and unencumbered; they are in balance.

The work of man's hands in the realm of the architect, the engineer, the builder must be governed by the law of poise and balance. Nature abhors the eccentric in anything. Wherever she finds it her tendency is to set about to destroy it.

One of the problems in the development of the gasoline motor has been the achievement of balance. The engineers, have in a large measure, succeeded, for today we have the quiet motor with the vibrations reduced to the minimum. One of the points in the selling talk for some motors is the demonstration of a pencil standing on end on the motor casing and maintaining its equilibrium while the mechanism is running.

God loves poise. It is thrilling to contemplate His handiwork in bringing into being the countless planets of the heavens and all the laws of nature, and yet everything is tuned to a balance as delicate as a hair spring, yet as powerful as the forces of eternity.

But the greatest thing God makes is a balanced man. And the best thing a man can do is to help God make a man as nearly foursquare as possible.

Jesus was perfect. He is our great example, and our model. If this were not true the world would be lost. To whom could we turn for examples of thought, conduct and right living save to Him?

The master was perfectly balanced in that He was perfectly developed on all four sides of His being. This fact is briefly and clearly described in the words of our text. In this only picture we have of Jesus from the time of infancy to the time He took up His ministry we are told that He "increased in wisdom, stature, and in favor with God and man," that is His development was mental, physical, moral and spiritual, and social or as a server of humanity.

If Jesus was developed on these four sides in order that He might be perfect in balance, so must seek, as far as it lies within our powers, to strive to develop the same four sides of our lives, that we may be balanced and foursquare.

The first side that is mentioned in our text is the mental. Truly if we are to be foursquare we must develop our minds. We shall mention three ways that will help along this line.

First, by the thoughts you think. The poet of the Old Testament says, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Both success and defeat begin in the thought processes. Evil deeds and demonstrations of love and kindness flow from the same source. There is an old saying that if you sow a thought you reap a deed; if you sow a deed you reap a habit; if you sow a habit you reap a destiny. The first thing one must do is to think the right thoughts. Great thinking makes a great man. Good thinking makes a good man. The converse of this is just as true.

By varying our interests we may also develop our minds. In our age of specialization there is a danger that men shall become "one-track minds." In his work the world requires the successful man to "know his stuff," but he may by variety of reading and interests have the joy of a larger and happier life. A man can be a great financier and at the same time love music and art. Roosevelt was a great politician and statesman, but he was also a scientist, a writer, and an all round man. It is fine to be powerful in your chosen field of endeavor because of your mental capacity, yet able to think great thoughts in other fields of human activity and interests.

Many times the youth in school is awed into discouragement because of the so-called unusual genius who outshines all the rest in the class. But the world will take the normal boy with moral brain capacity and potentiality, plus hard work, in preference to the prodigy. A few years ago we were interested in the mental prowess of the infant prodigy, William J. Sidis, who, at the age of eleven lectured before the faculty at Harvard on higher mathematics. Today at the age of twenty-six he runs a machine for a few dollars per week.

Again, we may develop mentally by disciplining the mind. Mental development is a process of persistency, the same as the development of physical powers. By disciplining the mind, one may take psychic potentialities, which seem very meager, and make of them a giant mind. It is said that after Sir Walter Scott became famous he returned to the school of his boyhood. As he stood there in the room he asked the master to point out the "fool." The great writer walked over to where the boy designated sat, and handed him a Guinea. "What is that for," asked the surprised youngster. "For keeping my seat warm," replied Scott.

Some of the greatest men of the world have been giants mentally but weaklings physically. Sir Walter Scott wrote some of his greatest novels as he lay on his couch, dictating to his secretary, in spite of intense pain with the disease that finally took his life. Milton, the blind poet, saw with his inner eye the mysteries of God and His truths, even though he carried with him through life the tragic infirmity of blindness. Steinmetz, the great American inventor and scientist, was an illshapen dwarf physically, but from his mind came some of the greatest discoveries and inventions of the age. Regardless of what a man may be able to do by powers of the mind, if he is abnormal physically, he is out of balance.

Every boy and girl should strive to have a well developed body. Modern education is emphasizing this. Many a boy or girl, who, otherwise would grow up a weakling, if they grew up at all, have made strong men and women of themselves by developing what bodies they had until they became strong. One cannot read the life of Theodore Roosevelt without wondering at the tremendous will power he must have had as a boy and a young man, when he, by sheer force of the stamina that was in him, made for the strain of his future life, a rugged body out of a weak one. He succeeded in his fight against weakness and was able to stand the stress and strain of his public career, and in the later years of his life give himself to his expeditions and scientific explorations. A strong mind in a strong body is a combination that is powerful for good or for ill in the world.

This lends us to the third side of a foursquare life, that is the moral or spiritual side.

Now we may say that, even though one may register nearly if not wholly a hundred per cent, physically and mentally, and is a weakling morally and spiritually, he is woefully unbalanced. A strong brute can kill with his fists. An intellectual devil can damn many a life. One who is out of center in his moral and spiritual life is a dangerous member of society. The mentally weak we may house in a proper asylum. We take care of the physically weak in the hospitals. But the moral degenerate brings the curse of his weakness upon all society and upon himself.

One of the greatest men a certain state ever sent to the senate, a man of presidental timber, was a man of fine intellect, and rugged physique; in these he was a giant, but morally he was a dwarf. His name today is seldom heard. He lost out.

I'd rather be below par mentally, and a weakling physically, than to scintilate mentally, and be a giant in body, and not be morally straight and spiritually alert to the higher things of life. A man who is square on his spiritual and moral side, can take his mental and physical prowess and bring, in God's name, the richest blessings to the world.

But all we have said thus far is useless, providing we are undeveloped on the fourth side of our being, that is our social or service side. What good is a great mind unless it is used in the service of humanity? What good is a strong body unless its powers are used in lifting up the weak? What good is morality and spirituality, what good is a man's religion unless it inspires to service? Faith without works is dead. This is true. Mind, body and soul are useless unless they are used to the glory of God and the uplift of mankind. Jesus was a server. He came among us as a servant. In our text we again note that he grew in favor not only with God but with man. He was developed on his social or service side. The test of happiness, of balance; yea, the test of the right to dwell among one's fellows, is the service test. A selfish mind in a selfish body together with morals that are maintained through selfish cowardice, makes up about the most useless sort of person in all the world.

We can't well get along without all four of the elements that go into making a foursquare man. Less than all makes a life out of balance, an eccentric.

God is eager, through Christ, to help every young man and young woman, yes, everyone who will, make as nearly a foursquare person as possible.

In the twenty-first chapter of Revelations we read John's description of the Holy City. He tells us that it is foursquare; its height, width, breadth and length are equal. This is the ideal for the human life; equal on all four sides of our being.

In the text we have taken we read of Jesus that he increased in wisdom, in stature, and in favor with God and man. It doesn't say that, as he developed mentally His body became weak, rather he grew in both. It doesn't say he was good, being perfectly moral and spiritual, and at the same time held himself aloof from the world. No, rather He increased in favor with both God and man. Here we have our model in the person of the Master. For you to strive to be less, though you may, and likely in comparison to Jesus, shall fall short, you are being untrue to yourself, your fellowmen and your God.

BUILDING CODE PASSED TONIGHT

Final Hearing to Be Held; Paving to Be Considered

Final passage of the new building code, consideration of several paving matters and the appointment of two new election judges to serve at the polls Tuesday will constitute the principal business matters to come before the city council Monday night.

The building code has finally been drafted to the satisfaction of city officials and the public generally and now awaits its third and final reading. This, it has been announced, will be attended to tonight. The only complaint made against any provision of the code, that eliminating the use of wooden shingles on all structures in the city, has been modified to allow shingles on any building outside of the fire limits; this was made at the request of local lumber dealers who protested vigorously against the proposed new ruling.

City officials have asked that any one with further complaints to present appear before the council tonight.

Two new judges for the Tuesday municipal election are to be named to replace the two originally appointed and who will be unable to serve. The men are understood to have been selected already and to have expressed their willingness to serve, which makes their appointment Monday night a mere formality.

Report British To Modify Cattle Law

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Senator Hale, republican, Maine, announced tonight he had been informed through the statement department that the British government had agreed to modify its embargo on American livestock caused by the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease in California.

Under the new regulations, Senator Hale said, the embargo will be lifted on Canadian livestock passing through American ports and will not apply to American livestock from east of the Rocky Mountains.

CHARGE MEDICS VIOLATE LAWS

Issue Permits For Liquor Without Examinations

Special to The Record News.

AUSTIN, Texas, March 30.—Charge that physicians violate both the state liquor law and the federal permit to prescribe liquor, when prescriptions are issued except upon "careful personal physical examination of the patient," was made by Comptroller Lon A. Smith Saturday, in announcing that he is causing a statewide investigation of alleged violations in this respect.

"Permits are being suspended in every instance where violations are found," he said.

Comptroller Smith pointed out that the conditions surrounding prescriptions are "a very wise and precautionary measure for the protection of physicians from imposition by others than those who are entitled to receive prescriptions," he said.

The blanks furnished physicians, on which liquor prescriptions are written call attention to the law, and the violations are inexcusable from whatever cause they arise, Comptroller Smith declared.

Clear and Cool Weather Gives Variety Sunday

A warm and sunny day that gave way later to a brisk, chill wind furnished a variety of climatic conditions Sunday with indications early last night that a further drop in temperature would be felt by daybreak Tuesday.

The day for the most part was cloudless and until noon when a strong wind sprang up, was warm. The breeze increased in velocity after 2 o'clock in the afternoon and with the sun dropping down at 6 the thermometers also started a descent. Heavy wraps which have been in the discard for the past few days, reappeared Sunday night.

A promise of clear, cool weather was held for Monday by the weather bureau.

Considerable automobile traffic utilized the country roads Sunday afternoon but this was reduced to a minimum during the evening.

Kay Bible Class Attendance Record Jumps To 602 At Strand Theatre Sunday

MIRACLES TAKEN AS DAY'S THEME

Ability of God to Feed The World Touched On Speaker

Continuing the record-breaking attendance streak that has endured for the past three weeks, the Kay Bible class attendance at the Strand theatre Sunday morning hung up a new mark with 602 men present to listen to the Judge's Bible talk. Yesterday was the third straight Sunday in which a new attendance mark has been established.

An added feature of the program was the concert given by the jubilee singers of the Dickson Colored Orphanage of Gilmer, the organization which is now appearing in Wichita Falls to solicit funds for the support of the school. The music rendered made a distinct hit with the men and insistent encores were demanded.

Judge Kay's talk concerned the needlessness of worry and dealt with some of the miracles wrought by Christ. His complete address is as follows:

Now, the lesson this morning is about the ability of God to feed humanity. You know, we do not live enough. We do not put enough into life. We do not live whole-heartedly enough. A man wants to take all of life that is best. You want to live like the negro told the justice of peace. The negro went before the justice of peace to get married and he was better versed in the language of the crap table than he was in the ritual of the church; and, when the justice of peace stood him up and said to him: "Sam, do you take this woman to be your lawfully wedded wife, for better or for worse, leaving all others, clinging only unto her, so long as you both shall live?" He said: "Boss, I shoots it all."

Birds Going North.

Last Sunday, there happened a wonderful thing in Wichita Falls. You that were out in the afternoon. There was a great flight of birds going north, thousands and thousands of them stopped here. The trees up at my house were filled with them, and every bird in every tree had his face toward the north. Ah, what a wonderful, wonderful thing that is. Not a one of them had any baggage, no purse, no grip, no job, no property. I saw no doctor among them, nor any lawyer, nor any court; beating their wings out into God's infinite [illegible] trusting to Him only that they might eat bread. Ah, what a wonderful flight they had, leaving behind what they cared about, passing over many a brook and river, many a vale and many a city, and saw the smoke of many a farm home, and the blue sky, going northward at the command of God, to live gloriously, without worry, and without pain, and without sin.

You know, man right down at the bottom, would like to be a god himself. And, that is the reason that he takes upon his own shoulders, often times, the worries and the high executive functions that properly belong to God. Man would like to run things himself, but he cannot do it. And, the finest lesson in life, and the finest thing for you to know, is not to worry about all that great class of things in front of which you are helpless, and which belong only to God. You cannot do His work.

Miracles Easy.

The easiest thing for me, in the Bible, is the miracles. The feeding of the five thousand, as this lesson was about. Ah, I do not know, I do not know, I do not know how He comes in the darkness of the winter night and puts the frost-work embroidery outside the window pane in my bedroom. I do not know how He forms His ice, and His snow. I do not know why the birds spread their wings to the north in the springtime and we are now against that happy season when God is going to display His great millinery shop. "Ah, who hath counted up the cost of all the fabric torn and tossed to make one summer for his trees." We cannot do that. You cannot put the blue in the violet, and the yellow in the jonquil, nor the emerald in the peacock's train. These things are not our business, but God's business, and His only.

Now, these people that went out there—five thousand people—following about the Savior, were poor. Were they poor? Ah, were they? Hear me, when I say to you with all my soul, that only that man is poor that knows not God. Hear me, when I say to you that only that man is poor who has not learned the lessons of life as taught by the Savior. These people were out there without anything to eat. Five thousands of them! Was that a strain upon God to feed those five thousand? Does that bother you as a wonderful miracle?

Supplies in Plenty.

Professor Audubon saw one drove of wild pigeons that he said would take eight thousand bushels of grain and acorns to feed them one meal, but no man furnished it. I saw the food supply in one of the greatest city markets on the globe; more bread than I thought was in the world, packed up like cord-wood for hundreds of feet, and fish, and meat, and pies, and cakes, and the man that was running it said that by 9 o'clock tonight, there will be nothing left. Here we are wondering what is going to become of the world; wondering whether we can pay the taxes; wondering whether we can pay the soldiers' bonus; wondering whether we can do this, or that, when it takes fifty million dollars to feed the people of the United States one day.

But, the Savior never performed one miracle to aid Himself, and He refused to do it on every occasion. And, He never performed one miracle that wasn't an aid to humanity, and, He never performed one miracle that did not show His love for humanity. You know how we would do if we could perform a miracle. We would fix ourselves. But, He did not do that. Here, these five thousand people out there being fed miraculously, not any more so than I have been, and you have been, and some, only, believed on Him. Not all—but, some. Miracles do not convince men. When old Dives was over there burning, and asked Abraham to send Lazarus back, and finally asked him to send somebody back to earth to speak to his brethren, he said: "They would not believe though one arose from the dead."

Miracle for Man.

The Savior performed this miracle for men. Everything that He did was for men; not to help the stars swing in their courses; not to help nature, although he loved nature more than any man that has ever walked the earth, but everything that He did, and all of His effort, was for poor, weak, sinful men. He worked for them.

Now, is the work, and the miracle, the [illegible] of His life, to be lost on [illegible] me? Where can you go, if [illegible] Does anybody else point [illegible] city of refuge? Is there [illegible] other than this hope? Is [illegible] paper to be beating their [illegible] to come from any other [illegible]

I would like for you to [illegible] think you should do, is [illegible] say that "I am living [illegible] That I am going to [illegible] life, trusting in Him, [illegible] as the [illegible] birds trust in Him. That I do not know what is in front of me but I am going to beat my way forward, and upward, under His blue sky, and above His green earth, trying only to be as He is consecrated, and clean, and fine.

Don't Lose Bible.

Let me beg of you, men, and each of you, that the lessons of the Bible be not lost on you. That is a terrible thing in the Bible, and there are many terrible things in it, but that is a terrible thing where that fellow went out to sow the wheat and some of it fell on stony ground and could not sprout. What does that mean? Ah, it means there are some hearts so hard, there are some men so indifferent, that all the beauty of life, and all the strength of life, and all the lessons of life, and all the experience of humanity is lost upon their stony hearts, and they reject and despise heaven's counsel. These things ought not to be.

Now, in Wichita Falls, I want us to get a reputation for being upright, clean, Christian men. That is what I want with you. I do ot get any salary to come down here and talk to you. What I want us to have here, is not only that reputation, but I want it tion. I want it to be a fact that we to be something more than a reputa- are clean, upright, Christian men. With that I am satisfied. With nothing less than that can I be satisfied.

I am obliged to you for coming here this morning.

Educator to Be Speaker Before University Club

Dr. J. W. Hunt, president of McMurray college at Abilene, will be the speaker at the University club luncheon at the Kemp hotel Tuesday noon, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Hunt is widely known as one of the most entertaining speakers of Texas, his original wit, rare ability in painting word pictures, and his exceptional intellect having won for him a position of fame as an after dinner speaker. A number of local people heard him at the annual chamber of commerce banquets at Seymour and Vernon recently, their recommendation of the man creating a great deal of interest in tomorrow's luncheon.

MONDAY LAST DAY FOR TAX PAYMENT

Today will be the final date for the payment of all state and county taxes as tomorrow—April 1—all unpaid taxes will go on the delinquent roll. An added penalty of $2.25 is made on all taxes delinquent and a half per on each $100 valuation is the fine for February, March and April delinquencies.

It is believed at the county tax collector's office a big day's payment of taxes will be received by those seeking to avoid delinquent penalties.

POLITICAL AD NOT NEWS ITEM

Article Relating to City Finances Not Labeled As Such

An article relating to the city's finances at the close of the fiscal year, and which appeared in Sunday's Record News should have appeared as a political advertisement and should have carried a line designating it as such, but through an oversight was printed as a news item. The article referred to was offered this newspaper as a paid political advertisement, but through mistake was not handled as such.

This statement is made in fairness to all parties interested in Tuesday's city election, and because The Record News appreciates the political effect that such an article might have.

"Three Weeks" Packs Crowds In At Strand

A new motion picture which should rank right at the top, with the best that the industry affords, is Goldwyn's screen version of Elinor Glyn's sensational novel, "Three Weeks," which was seen last night at the Strand theatre and proved to be one of the most beautiful of screen offerings. Mrs. Glyn has given the public her word that she is entirely satisfied with the picture and, judging from the impression it made upon the audience at the Strand theatre, the public at large is going to be thoroughly satisfied with it, too.

The story of "Three Weeks" recounts the love romance that came to the Queen of Sardalia and the young Englishman, Paul Verdayne. The queen paidfor her transgression of the laws of man by her death, at the hands of her dissolute husband, but Paul, her lover, through his deep and enduring affection for her, made of his life a monument to her character and her influence. The story is told in the photoplay with a wealth of detail, a vividness of acting and an analytic presentation of the love passion which will insure the screen version a much wider popularity than the book itself joyed. Praise, in no uncertain ure, is due to Alan Crosland, th rector; Cedric Gibbons, Goldwyn art director who designed the simple and beautiful sets, and John J. Mescall, the head cameraman, and every member of the distinguished cast.

Some of the largest Sunday crowds that have ever seen a picture in Wichita Falls saw "Three Weeks" at the Strand yesterday.
