Carter Cites Peril Of Pact Rejection

Soviet Propaganda Weapon Warned

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, playing radio talk show host, said Saturday rejection of the SALT II treaty would give the Soviet Union "a tremendous propaganda weapon" against the United States.

Carter said refusal by the Senate to ratify the accord would be "a clear signal to the people all over the earth that our country is not willing to control nuclear weapons adequately."

The president accepted questions from 28 persons during the wide-ranging session, the second Carter has held. He predicted inflation would taper off by the end of the year. And Carter asserted that "by the time Congress adjourns, we will have on the lawbooks a comprehensive energy policy that will truly benefit the nation."

On the strategic arms issue, Carter repeated his statement that the SALT II pact should be verified "on its merits" — aside from any other considerations.

If the Senate fails to do so, the Soviet Union could claim falsely that it is a nation of peace and the United States is not, the president said.

Carter said he could not support a proposal by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, that the SALT treaty not be implemented unless the United States receives assurances that the Soviet troops are not engaged in a combat role and will not threaten any other country.

"I don't think it's necessary," the president said of Church's proposal. "My own judgment is that those kinds of amendments are not needed."

Carter also said the United States has a "perfect right" to keep its naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba, under a 1903 treaty that was reconfirmed in 1934. He said people should not fear a confrontation over the recent deployment of U.S. forces to the island for a training exercise.

Most of the questions concerned significant national affairs such as the arms race, the economy and inflation, though there were lighter moments as well. While the program produced no startling revelations, Carter did agree to grant an autograph to one caller and an appointment with government officials for another who was interested in development of alcohol-based fuels.

The president spoke on a two-hour "talk show" carried by some 200 radio stations affiliated with National Public Radio. Carter played host for a similar show which was broadcast in April, 1977 by CBS Radio.

Questioners were selected at random prior to the program from among an estimated 10,000 persons who wrote to NPR in advance requesting a chance to talk to the president. NPR reporters then placed calls to the questioners. There was no opportunity for listeners to call in.

At the outset, Carter told Susan Stamberg, the program moderator, that the questions he receives on radio talk shows are "much more intense and heartfelt" than those asked by reporters who are a part of the regular Washington press corps.

One giggling Florida woman said "I'm so thrilled," then asked Carter why the "news medium" referred to him as "Mr. Carter."

"I think they should show you the respect that's due to you by calling you 'President Carter'," he said. Carter sad Thomas Jefferson had insisted onbeing called only "Mr. Jefferson," and that "Mr. Carter" or even "Jimmy" was all right with him. He also urged her to show up for one of Saturday's county caucuses in Florida, where backers of Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy were clashing in the first test of strength in the 1980 presidential race.

Responding to a questioner's complaint about rising prices, he said, "This is one of the biggest responsibilities and one of the biggest problems I have as president.

"Most inflation is uncontrollable, at least in the short term," Carter said. He repeated an assertion that price increases by members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are largely responsible.

"If we could remove the energy part

Chemical Waste Hazards Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of tons of dangerous chemicals "pose an imminent hazard to man and the environment" near hundreds, perhaps thousands, of hazardous waste sites around the country, a congressional subcommittee said Saturday.

"The hazardous waste disposal problem cannot be overstated," the House Commerce subcommittee on investigations said in a new report. "Federal and state efforts to control disposal of hazardous wastes are totally inadequate."

Moreover, the panel found that "industry has shown laxity, not infrequently to the point of criminal negligence, in soiling the land and adultering the water with its toxins."

The subcommittee investigated more than a dozen sites where chemical manufacturers and other firms freely dumped toxic wastes, including the Love Canal near Niagara Falls, N.Y., where 200 families have been evacuated.

It found a repeated pattern of polluted water supplies, unexplained illness, excessive radiation levels and other dangers.

Known cancer-causing chemicals including dioxin were discovered at many of the sites before officials began looking for ways to clean them up.

Robert A. Roland, president of the Chemical Manufacturers Association, said it appeared from early reports of the subcommittee investigation that "the members deserve commendation for a comprehensive analysis of a serious public problem.

"We are especially impressed with the report's recognition of the society-wide origin of and responsibility for this problem, and its emphasis on the need for further detailed study of its nature and scope.

"Obviously, there are situations where immediate action is needed to protect public health," Roland said. "At the same time, we urge continued congressional action to develop the most thoughtful possible legislative and regulatory changes to address the basic overall problem."

Environmental Protection Agency officials agreed with the report's conclusion that hazardous waste is the biggest environmental problem now facing the country.

But the officials, who asked to remain unnamed, maintained that they are moving as fast as they can within environmental laws to eliminate existing hazards and issue new rules requiring the industry to dispose safely of hazardous chemicals.

The subcommittee, noting EPA estimates that 77.1 billion pounds of hazardous waste are produced annually, said only 10 percent of that amount finds its way to safe disposal sites.

In Denver, for example, the state government is unable to find a publicly acceptable site for the disposal of 70,000 cubic feet of soil contaminated with radioactive radium waste.

Similarly, environmental officials can find no home for 40,000 barrels of dangerous chemicals stacked up in rows in a warehouse in Elizabeth, N.J.

There are about 30,000 hazardous waste dumps in the country, and the subcommittee found that "the proper disposal of hazardous materials is the exception rather than the rule."

There is a "critical shortage" of such sites, the subcommitee said.

Besides Love Canal, members of the subcommittee or staff members examined Occidental Chemical Co.'s dump at Lathrop, Calif.; the so-called "valley of the drums" at Shephardsville, Ky.; Hooker Chemical Co. sites near Niagara Falls, N.Y. and Montague, Mich.; and sites in Hardeman County, Tenn.; Polk County, Fla.; and Corrigan, Tex., where cyanide was mixed with oil and spread on nearby roadways.

For three years, the EPA has been working on regulations designed to control hazardous wastes. Further delay "cannot be tolerated," the report said.

It also urged that EPA take a national survey to locate all dangerous waste sites.

Various congressional committees have been considering a proposed "superfund" to help pay between $13.1 billion and $22.1 billion estimated as the cost of cleaning up existing hazardous waste sites.

But it is given little chance of congressional approval this year, and perhaps not in 1980 either.

Lubbock County Coffers Bulge; Tight Management Gets Credit

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

RISING PROPERTY values and conservative management have made Lubbock County, if not a Rockefeller among Texas counties, at least impressively well-heeled.

County Auditor Dale Gallimore reported to the commissioners court last week that the county has almost $8 million in bank certificates of deposit.

Therefore, with a budget of some $9.5 million for 1980 and a budget surplus forecast for this year, the county has almost enough money in the bank now to operate for a full year even without the tax revenues that have been increasing each year at a faster rate than expected.

Although some of the nearly $8 million is "idle cash" that has been committed for the 1980 budget, the biggest percentage of it is "uncommitted reserves" that draw interest year after year.

County reserves have produced more than $850,000 in interest already this year, and Gallimore figures that that is worth 16 1/2 cents off the county tax rate.

The county valorem tax rate has been the same — 78 cents per $100 valuation — since 1962, when it was cut from 80 cents, which is the consitutionally set maximum for Texas counties.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw said the county was in debt when he came into office 15 years ago and it finally pulled out of the red only four years ago.

"There has been a real healthy growth of additional properties on tax rolls in the county because of the community growing and people having confidence in the future of the area," Shaw said.

"Federal revenue sharing has enabled us to acquire some major improvements without having to go to the people with bond elections."

Shaw said an example of a major improvement funded by revenue sharing money is the new $1 million Lubbock County Youth Center reform school under construction here.

Asked if management has played a role in reversing the financial condition of the county, he said, "I think there has been good, conservative management on the part of the commissioners court throughout the 15 years I have been in office."

Commissioner Coy Biggs of Slaton said spending revenue sharing funds for capital improvements instead of operations has been a key.

"They have been real particular in how they spent federal revenue sharing money," Biggs said. "They put it into capital improvement, stuff that's not operational.

"You don't put it into something you can't stop. You put it into something like the (new $3.5 million) jail, the computer room and equipment, the juvenile detention center. You don't depend on it for operating capital."

Biggs attributes the reserves to "good management and some tight-fisted commissioners" who "make sure they get a dollar's worth of goods for a

Airport May Receive Added Federal Funds

By JOHNNY HOLMES

THANKS LARGELY to a policy of realistic forethought by Lubbock's aviation department, the Lubbock International Airport could be in line for more federal assistance in funding some improvement projects at the airport.

Responding to a request by the Federal Aviation Administration, city aviation director Marvin Coffee this week submitted a list of five-year capital projects, some of which could be funded through the federal government's Airport Development and Assistance Program.

In the past, the airport has been successful in receiving such funds because the city, and in particular Coffee and the aviation department, have been "realistic, efficient and effective," according to an FAA spokesman.

"I would say Lubbock has gotten more than its share of funds over the years," said Bill Howard, chief of the airports district office of the FAA in Albuquerque. "Lubbock always seems prepared and ready to go, and that's what we like to see."

Among the projects in the letter to Howard are: expansion and improvement of the terminal building, extension of several runways and development of a new site for general aviation (private planes).

Over the years, Lubbock has been successful in receiving the government money and completing its projects. The airport is developing a new 20-year master plan, which became necessary when all the projects on the previous 20-year plan were completed ahead of schedule.

The projects listed on this five-year plan are merely the first phase of the projects to be included on the still unfinished new master plan, Coffee said.

"Our list to the FAA is only in answer to a request," Coffee said. "We're not committed to anything on the list. It's just that if we can get our application in and be ready to go, we stand a

CRASHES IN YARD

MARLBORO TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A single-engine airplane crash-landed in a back yard of a rural home Saturday, about 50 feet from where a woman was grooming horses, police said. The pilot was hospitalized in serious condition but the woman was unhurt.

Death Suspect Lead Traced

A MAN charged with the Oct. 5 murder of Lubbock businessman Oland Kenneth Anderson obtained a ride with a man in Amarillo and forced the man to drive to San Jose, Calif., Amarillo police say.

Reports indicate that Cary Olsen, 21, of Dallas was driving west on I-40 when he stopped to pick up a hitchhiker. Olsen told police the trip went without incident until they reached Albuquerque, when the hitchhiker, tentatively indentified as Joseph Michael DePauw, 28, pulled a gun on Olsen and told him to drive to San Jose.

Lubbock police were notified of the incident Saturday, but the time of the occurrence is unknown. San Jose police investigator Norman Punneo said Olsen was released in downtown San Jose.

Tech Staffer's Laser Study Aids Police

By RAYNIE HARDESTY

A SCIENTIFIC breakthrough using laser beams to detect fingerprints up to 10 years old is proving to be the key in breaking unsolved crimes across the nation, says a Texas Tech researcher who has been working on perfecting the method.

Since 1977, the FBI already has solved almost 80 cases by using lasers to identify fingerprints "that cannot be detected by conventional techniques," says Dr. Roland Menzel, who joined the Texas Tech University faculty this fall.

Menzel, who teaches physics and quantum mechanics, began experimenting with fingerprints and luminous lights reflected under laser beams in 1976 while working as a spectroscopist with the Xerox Research Centre in Ontario, Canada.

Within months the first crime was solved with the laser when the Ontario Provincial Police brought Menzel a piece of black electrician's tape they suspected had a print on its sticky side.

Because powders would have stuck to the entire side, using a laser was the only known possibility for photographing the print.

Menzel found the print after 20 minutes of exposure under the beam and later the suspect confessed when police told him they had found his fingerprint.

Although the new method of identifying fingerprints is only months old, Menzel said, "it's a solution we could have had years ago."

Wreck Kills Two, Injures 44; Switching Error Named Cause

HARVEY, Ill. (AP) — A railroad worker threw a switch too soon and sent an Amtrak passenger train crashing head-on into a parked fright train, killing two people and injuring 44 others, investigators said Saturday.

A jumble of twisted metal was left on the tracks after the crash in this Chicago suburb Friday night. Officials estimated damage at $1 million.

"A lot of people were moaning and crying and I almost passed out," said Mark Schwolow, an 18-year-old student at Southern Illinois University. He said he was seated one instant, then, "the next thing I knew I was getting up off the floor — or trying to."

Passengers were screaming as one of the coaches landed on its side. More than 200 passengers were aboard the train which originated in Carbondale, home of the university.

The Amtrak train, carrying dozens of college students to Chicago in five new double-decker "Superliner" coaches, plowed into the 40-car freight sitting on Illinois Central's mainline track waiting for the northbound Amtrak train to pass.

The lead engine of the freight was thrown 30 feet and the first Amtrak engine was cracked in the middle.

Illinois Central engineer Harold Coghlan, 54, of Chicago Heights and brakeman Richard Kinger, 21, of Country Club Hills were killed.

Alfred Schultz, 58, an East Hazel Crest fireman, suffered a heart attack while helping rescue injured and died early Saturday, authorities said.

Ten of the 44 others who were injured remained hospitalized.

Jerome Krohn, a National Transportation Safety Board rail safety inspector, said a switchman allegedly threw a switch prematurely, routing Amtrak No. 352 onto the same track as the freight in this south Chicago suburb.

A spokeswoman for the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad, Renie Einbinder, said only, "It's under investigation. Right now we're saying it was an apparent switching error."

Miss Einbinder said the wreckage would be cleared by late Saturday and normal commuter service restored by Monday on the Illinois Central Gulf line.

The train had stopped at several southern and central Illinois cities including Champaign, site of the University of Illinois.

One man, John Taksas, a 66-year-old Amtrak engineer from Monee, was in critical condition with multiple internal injuries at Ingalls Memorial Hospital in Harvey.

It was the second fatal crash Friday night involving an Amtrak train. A woman and two foreign students were killed in Kalamazoo, Mich., when the car they were riding in was struck at a crossing.

The freight was standing with its brakes on, waiting for the Amtrak train to go by after switching onto adjacent mainline track. The freight was ordered to radio the switchroom at the Markham yards, south of the freight train's position in Harvey, once the Amtrak had passed on the opposite track.

But, according to the mechanic, a switch operator at Markham allegedly threw a switch controlling the tracks just south of the freight without confirmation from the freight train's crew — before the Amtrak had cleared the switch, routing it onto the same track.

The Amtrak train, traveling at about 40 miles an hour, rammed into Illinois Central freight No. 51 only seconds later — and engineers of the two trains may not have known what occurred.

Conservative Group Votes To Disband

Mrs. J.E. Haley, a member, said the move was made because of a lack of participation by citizens in the 17 counties in the district.

Funds and records of the group will be transferred to the national caucus in Falls Church, Va., she said.

Acclaimed Architect To Speak At Public Lecture Monday

Paul Stevenson Oles, whose drawings have won high acclaim in architectural circles, will give a public, illustrated lecture on "Representational Drawing and the Design Process" at 4:30 p.m. Monday in the Texas Tech University Business Administration Building auditorium. There is no charge.

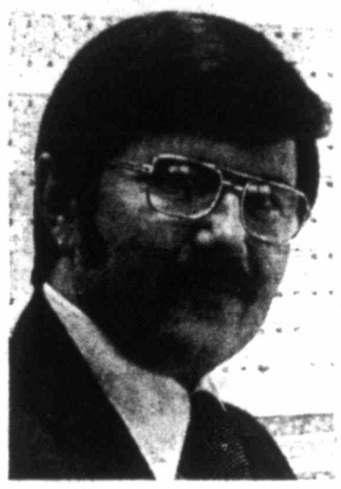

Oles is a graduate of Texas Tech University and holds a master's degree from Yale University. He is founder and principal architect of Interface Architects, Newton, Mass., and the author of the book, "Architectural Illustration: The Value Delineation Process."

He will be a guest critic in the Texas Tech Division of Architecture Monday-Wednesday.

Oles has been visiting critic also at Columbia and Harvard universities and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where where he has produced a 10-year master plan for the redesigning of that institution's interior spaces. He also has taught advanced architectural delineation at the Rhode Island School of Design.

In architectural practice he has produced community centers, rehabilitation of a U.S. Postal Service facility in the Boston area and residential work in Massachusetts, New York and New Mexico. In 1974 Oles worked with a group of designers who helped in the conversion of a 19th century brass foundry near Providence into an office building powered by energy from the sun, wind and moving water.

He has illustrated the architectural work of some of the world's most renowned architects, and the Architectural League of New York awarded him its Burch Burdette Long Prize in 1968 for a pencil drawing of a theater in the round. His drawings have appeared in the American Institute of Architects journal, in "Architectural Record," and in two "how to do it" classic devoted to methods of rendering, in E. Burden's "Architectural Delineation" and in Jacoby's "New Techniques of Architectural Rendering."

PAUL STEVENSON OLES

Oles' own book, published last June, explains a system he has developed which enables the designer to show in a realistic manner the way in which a structure will appear upon completion. His premise rests on the concept that visualization depends upon tone values, not upon line. Because value is associated with differences in surfaces of a variety of materials and the incident of light, these and other relevant factors are integrated into a set of procedures that Oles believes will help students and professionals produce the image of the building on paper.

Oles was asked in 1968 to participate in the design process of the provocative equation of triangles, assembled by architect I.M. Pei in Washington. In a forward to Oles' book Pei expreses his appreciation for the architect and artist "who perceives the intellectual substance in the design intent, and skillfully, rigorously and with fidelity investigates design implications through drawing."

Oles' visit to Texas Tech is one of a series initiated this fall to invite graduates to return to the university to serve as critics for student work and to lecture and visit informally with students and faculty.

Visiting Texas Tech with Oles is his wife, Carole Oles, poet and author of "The Loneliness Factor." She will present a public poetry reading of her work at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Senate Room of the University Center. There is no charge.

Senate To Discuss Needs OF Handicapped

Health care services in West Texas and the problems and needs of handicapped Texans will be the topics of two State Senate hearings in Lubbock this week.

The Public Health Subcommittee of the Senate Human Resources Committee will hear testimony primarily from hospital administrators and directors on health care needs.

The subcommittee, meeting at 10:30 a.m. Monday at the Hilton Inn Parlor 1, will be chaired by subcommittee vice-chairman E.L. Short of Tahoka in the absence of chairman Gene Jones of Houston.

Attending the meeting will be Dr. Raymond Moore, commissioner of the Texas Department of Health, and Dr. William Ross, chief of the Bureau of Community Services.

On Tuesday the Senate Human Resources Committee, chaired by Sen. Chet Brooks of Houston, will meet at 9 a.m. in the Hilton Inn Ballroom.

The meeting will the the second in a series of statewide hearings to evaluate the problems and needs of disabled Texans, including housing, transportation, impediments to gainful employment and funding levels for state programs.

Sen. Short will participate in the hearing as a member of the committee.

Va Answers Queries Frequently Asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some questions often asked of the Veterans Administration, and the answers:

•I have a service-connected disability and was discharged prior to World War II. Does service during this period qualify me for an automobile grant?

The VA automobile grant is available to veterans who are entitled to VA compensation for loss or loss of use of a hand or foot, or who are blind, regardless of period of service.

•I am being transferred to Australia because of my job. I have a home I purchased with a VA guaranteed loan. If I sell my present home, may I get a loan to buy a home in Australia.

No. GI loans are granted only for property in the United States, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands or Guam.

SLOW RECOVERY — Six months after a tornado ripped through Wichita Falls, much of the rebuilding still isn't completed. The French Quarter apartment complex, one of the many buildings damaged, still is a long way from being ready for occupants. (AP Laserphoto)

Recovery Process Continuing Six Months After Tornado

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — The three funnels that converged on Wichita Falls April 10 took only a few minutes to devastate the city. Six months later, the slow procss of rebuilding is still in the early stages, and some survivors have found more stumbling blocks than help in their efforts to regroup.

Ray and Judy Muller, for example, hired a contractor to rebuild their house soon after the tornado. After completing only a fraction of the work, thecontractor took off — with $1,500 in money and supplies.

Two men who bid on the work wanted $200 a day. "It didn't cost that much before the storm," Mrs. Muller said. "Right now we can't afford to build it and we can't afford to sell it."

Instead, the Mullers live in an 8-by 40-foot trailer near the remains of their home in the Western Hills section of the city, one of the areas hit first and hardest by the storm.

Their neighborhood is a hodgepodge of vacant slabs, patched and battered houses and the rebuilt homes of the more fortunate and affluent.

Charles Harper, head of the terminated reconstruction and redevelopment task force, estimates contruction has begun on little more than a third of of Wichita Falls' wrecked homes.

To his surprise, Harper said, one area that is rebounding quickly is south of Southwest Parkway near Memorial Stadium. The stadium, one of the first structures hit, was repaired before the Oil Bowl in August.

Across from the stadium, however, the Willow Creek Apartments remain a mass of twisted metal, shattered glass and splintered wood.

But homeowners behind the apartments are among the few heeding the Board of Commerce & Industry's slogan, "Wichita Falls is coming back strong and fast."

Rebuilders are taking advantage of the situation to expand and improve their property, knocking out walls and adding fireplaces.

"Houses are going back better," said Mrs. Bobbie Whitely of Faith Village, another hard-hit area. "I'd say the majority are building back brick. They don't know what will be next door, though, after they make their improvements."

Mrs. Whitely said builders are not obeying an ordinance prohibiting the reconstruction of any structure in the tornado area that wasn't there before April 10.

"In the next block there is a beauty shop. And there is a barbershop somewhere around here," Mrs. Whitely said, adding she and her neighbors hope a zoning ordinance will be adopted by the city council.

Building in the city has nearly tripled thus far this year. Last year, construction totaled slightly more tha $40 million. At the end of September this year, construction had surged to moroe than $111 million.

Harper said economics has played an important role in rebuilding. Those who had the money or received Small Business Administration loans early have rebuilt.

But "for a lot of people, living in a (federally financed) trailer home is easier than trying to do something else," Harper said.

For other tornado victims, recovery means more than physically rebuilding.

Those haunted by the storm stll are coming into Inter-Faith Disaster Services, Inc., the group formed by the cities' churches to meet the human needs of disaster victims.

"Some need help getting furniture, or help with emergency bills. Some need help in labor construction," said Johnie Harris, volunteer coordinator of the services.

"We've seen a lot of people who have no insurance coverage and whose income is too small to qualify them for SBA loans," she said.

"Some people are still paying on furniture that blew away and also are making payments on furniture to replace what blew away. Not all notes to lending agencies are covered by insurance."

But some "just need someone to talk to now. Everybody is tired of listening to tornado stories and want to go on to a more moral way of life. But some people are just now telling their experience. They've kept it bottled up inside," Mrs. Harris said.

The agency has assisted about 340 victims, and has 160 volunteers still on the job, some with the same cases they started with.

Inter-Faith has closed very few cases, she said because "the victims work through one crisis or solve one problem and then start on the next one. They just can't face it all at one time."

For many, the trauma lives on in the subconscious.

Kickoff For Toys For Tots Planned

The kick off of this year's Lubbock Marines' Toys for Tots campaign is the week of Oct. 26. The annual program is dedicated to bringing toys to children who might otherwise be neglected at Christmas time.

This year, however, only new, unwrapped toys are solicited. The demand for toys has grown with the program so that it is no longer possible to repair used toys. Also, some areas now have laws that prohibit distribution of certain used toys.

It also is important that the toy not just be new, but unwrapped. This helps the Marines identify whether the contributions are for girls or boys, and for what age.

Speaker For Religious Group Allowed To Speak At Tech

By RUTHANNE BROCKWAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Although the United States Constitution provides for separation of church and state, academic freedom allows the accommodation of a variety of viewpoints.

It was under the latter definition that speakers from Probe Ministries of Dallas were allowed on the Texas Tech University campus last week.

Donna Irons, who teaches Introduction to Special Education, admitted, "I had doubts at first. I was afraid it would be a religious presentation."

But academic affairs vice president Dr. Charles Hardwick told the Tech faculty they have a right to invite persons to speak on any subject in the classroom, as long as it relates to the course material.

Hardwick added that speakers giving a presentation with any religious content were to be allowed in the classroom only by unanimous approval of the students in that class.

Mrs. Irons's students voted to allow Bill Crouse of Probe Ministries to discuss abortion. She explained that his topic related to her course because her students have studied abortion as one of the alternatives some parents will choose rather than give birth to a child with birth defects. The students in Mrs. Irons's class are preparing for careers as special education teachers.

After the abortion lecture, Mrs. Irons said of Crouse, "I thought he was very fair."

Crouse, who has a bachelors degree in psychology and a masters in theology, said he was surprised that "memos have been flying" on campus about the Probe lectures. Of 31 universities in the nation where Crouse has lectured, he said, "Tech is the fourth where we've had trouble."

But he defended his group's mission, saying, "They can't keep us off. It's academic freedom. A university is a marketplace for all ideas."

In his abortion lecture, Crouse told the class, "I'm not trying to coerce my beliefs on you."

After he finished, one student asked him, "Well, are you for or against abortion?"

Crouse smiled and replied, "I thought that came out (in the lecture)."

His lecture centered on the fact that secular definitions of life and when it begins may vary from year to year, and court decision to court decision, but that God's position "gives us an absolute."

Crouse said the Bible defines life as "a continuum from conception to death, not birth to death."

One student asked Crouse if he believed a woman who has been raped should be allowed an abortion, to which he replied, "I don't think two wrongs make a right," and added that the Christian philosophy would provide medical and emotional care for the mother during the pregnancy and adoption of the child afterwards, if the mother chose not to raise the child.

"What if it was your wife or daughter?" another student asked, and Crouse answered, "If I was rational, not emotional, it would be the same answer."

Another Probe speaker, Dr. Walter Bradley, addressed the junior level mechanical engineering class of Dr. Robert Mason who teaches thermodynamics.

"The class voted unanimously to have him discuss the concepts of creation as discussed in Genesis, compared to our study of thermodynamics," Dr. Mason said. Thermodynamics involves the study of energy.

Dr. Mason said one of his students asked to have the Probe speaker and that after the class agreed, he, too, supported the lecture.

"If the students wanted to hear a topic such as we presented and the university declined to allow it, then I would say yes that would be a violation of academic freedom," he said.

Some 30 Tech classes hosted Probe speakers during a three-day period last week and after each lecture cards were passed out to students for comments.

Wacker said of the 25 cards turned in after the thermodynamics class, "There were no negative responses."

Wacker said the Probe speaker discussed the probability of life, or the simpliest form of bacteria, forming under random conditions. "His conclusion was there is almost no way," Wacker said, except for three possibilities: God or a supernatural being, life coming from another solar system, or the explanation of some physical law not yet discovered.

The Probe lectures were not officially sanctioned by the university, Hardwick stressed, but were allowed if students and faculty in a particular class unanimously agreed to have them.

The Probe group was sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, The Navigators and Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, according to Ken Griffin, president of Campus Crusade for Christ.

"We got administrative clearance," Griffin said, adding that, "A state supported institution cannot sponsor a religion but can accommodate ideas on religious perspective."

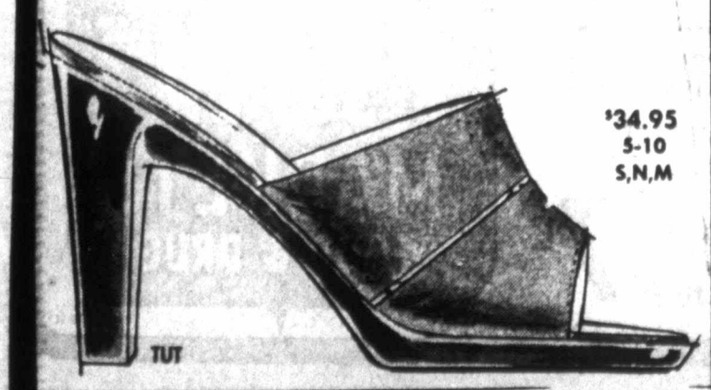

Linda Norris of Tech's legal counsel office said the U.S. Constitution offers competing clauses on the subject of religion — one stating that the state cannot establish or support a religion, but also that it cannot inhibit the free exercise of religion.

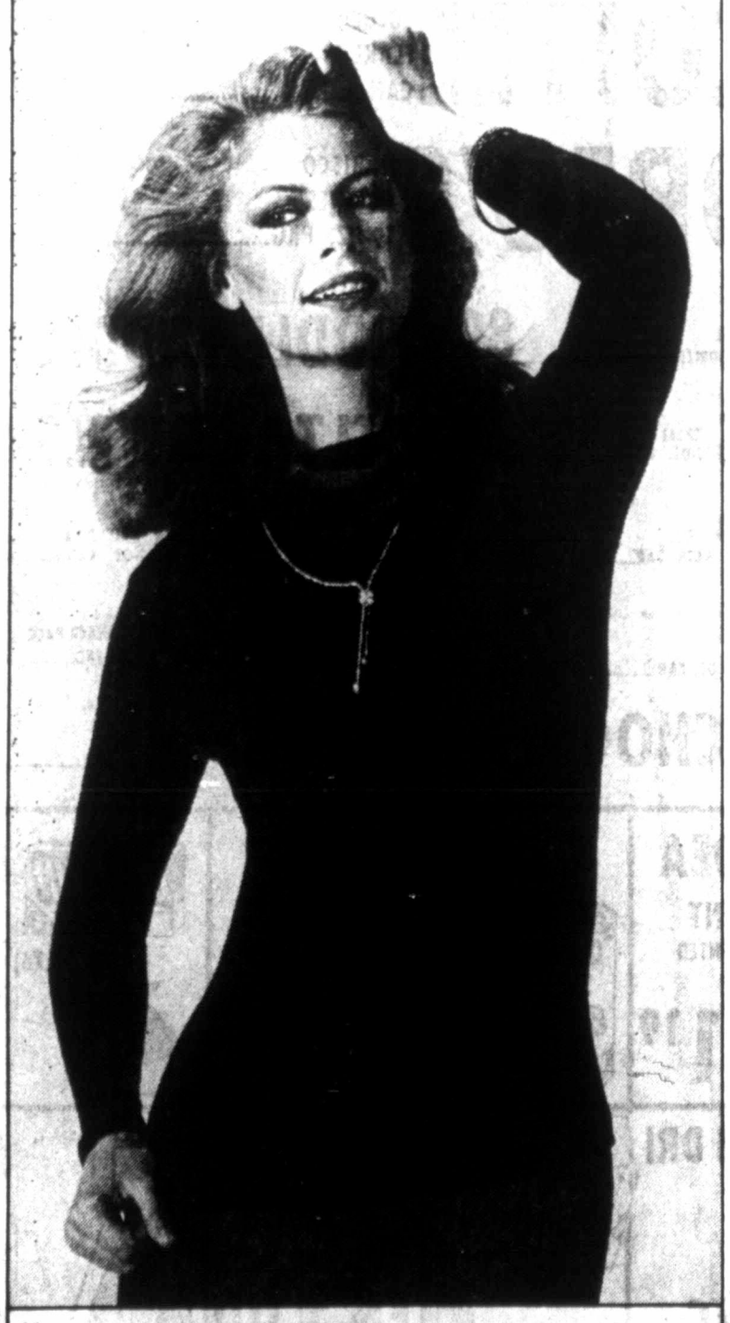

A state university "can't be for or against" she said. Miss Norris added that in addition to provisions of the constitution, Tech also is bound by principles of academic freedom which "protects the right to freedom of speech."

DOUBLE JEOPARDY REJECTED

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A judge has ruled that the retrial of former Gov. Ray Blanton's legal aide on charges of conspiring to sell executive clemency to inmates does not constitute double jeopardy. Judge Gilbert Merritt of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Friday rejected a double-jeopardy motion filed by an attorney for the former aide, T. Edward Sisk.

Area Man Impressed With Papal Mass

Avalanche-Journal Staff

It's not unusual to see Jerome Brockman attend church several times a week in the tiny farming town of Nazareth. As permanent deacon of the Holy Family Catholic Church — the only church in town — and through his work in several areas of the church, Brockman is one of the more active religious leaders in rural West Texas.

More than 300,000 people saw Brockman and his wife, Margaret, attend mass Oct. 4 — not in the cozy confines of the Holy Family sanctuary, but at the Living History Farm near Des Moines, Iowa, where he was one of only 10 persons from across the country selected to represent rural America and receive communion directly from Pope John Paul II.

"It was a fine trip," he said, back home to finish bringing in a record corn crop. "I don't know if I want to go through it all again tomorrow, but it was a very fun and enjoyable experience for us."

Brockman was selected to receive communion from John Paul by the National Catholic Rural Life Conference, which has been impressed with his work in the church over the years. "Mr. Brockman and the others we selected all represent the diversity of rural America," said William Schaefer, the conference's executive director.

The outdoor mass, celebrated in the heart of the Iowa Farm Belt, was a sight Brockman shall remember the rest of his life. "It was really something to see — all those people," he said. "But even though the crowd was huge, the people were orderly. There was a lot of security but no security problems.

"The whole crowd was in a real holiday picnic mood, and it was a good thing because we were there almost all day," he continued. "But even when we all were leaving, there was no horn-honking or cars trying to jockey for position. I'm not sure everybody wanted it to be over."

On his first visit ever to rural America, the pontiff spoke to the massive throng about the importance of preserving the rural lifestyle and praised the American farmer. As a native of tiny Nazareth and a farmer almost all his life, Brockman appreciated the pope's comments and said he felt the visit could help the country pull together a little bit more.

Indeed, Brockman had interrupted his annual corn harvest just to make the trip, and hurried home almost immediately to finish the chores.

"I really appreciated what the pope had to say about the farmers and rural life," he said. "It makes me feel like he really understands us and our lifestyle, and is appreciative of it. That makes me feel pretty good."

Though the papal mass was not set to begin until midday, crowds began gathering before sun-up and swelled through the day. An unexpected breeze cast a chill over the spectators as they waited, but once the pope appeared and began the service, a warm sunshine broke through and remained throughout the service.

"Maybe we just forgot about the weather when the mass began," Brockman said. "But it did get more pleasant once the pope was there. Really, considering all the people, the whole thing went very smoothly. I don't know what they could have done to make it any smoother."

At one point, Brockman admitted he had considered passing up the trip because his harvest wasn't in, but as he looked back on his experience, he's glad he opted to make the pilgrimage.

"I think the pope, by the interest he's showing all over the world, is becoming one of our most effecitve and respected moral leaders," he said. "His trip to America certainly is showing that he's got support, and it's not from just the Catholics. And I'm very glad I got to see what I saw. I'll remember the day a long time."

"It was really something to see. And you know, as we were going from Des Moines out to the farm, we passed several Protestant churches that had signs on their bulletin boards outside that praised and complimented the pope," he said. "I think that's wonderful that people can see that support for the pope."

Pope John Paul II returned to the Vatican shortly after Brockman made it back to Nazareth, and though they may never meet again, they'll remain united in one thought. Their meeting in a field near Des Moines was "just great."

Competitors, Singers, Clowns To Be On Hand At Tech Rodeo

The 35th annual Texas Tech Rodeo will test the skills of more than 350 contestants Oct. 25-27.

This year's event will provide western pageantry complete with nationally known vocalists and clowns.

Sixteen rodeo teams from around the Southwest will compete in a wide variety of events for men and women. Men's teams will vie in bareback riding, calf roping, saddle-bronc riding, steer wrestling, team roping and bull riding. Women's teams will test their skills in breakaway roping, goat tying, and barrel racing.

Entertainment Oct 26 will be Jody Miller, well know female country and western singer. Larry Mahon, whose past rodeo achievements carried him to six all-around cowboy titles, will entertain Oct. 27.

George and Kathy Taylor of Cleburne will entertain the crowds with their clown and comedy acts throughout the rodeo performance. Bob Romer, "the Bull-Dancer," and former National Finals Rodeo clown, will demonstrate his skills during the wild bull riding.

Rodeo stock will be provided by Harry Vold Rodeo Co. of Fowler, Colo.

Each performance will begin at 8 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Tickets may be purchased at all local western stores and at the Coliseum box office. Thursday night will be "family bargain night," and all tickets will sell for $3 with no seats reserved.

PSEUDONYM NOT ALLOWED

TRETON, N.J. (AP — The State Supreme Court has barred lawyer Richard D. Barker from using the name "The Budget Barrister" in his advertising, saying the name could be "misleading and deceptive." The pseudonym could "create in the minds of the public...the expectation that the attorney in question will provide legal services at a discount or cheaper than the service can be secured elsewhere when, in fact, his charges may be greater."

Seminar Slated On High Risk Pregnancies

A special five-day seminar designed to teach professional nurses how to recognize and identify 10 high-risk conditions of pregnancy will be conducted Oct. 22-26 at the Health Sciences Center Hospital. The seminar, aimed at reducing the infant mortality rate on the South Plains, focuses on use of modern medical technology to increase a newborn baby's chance for survival.

The High Risk Perinatal Seminar is being co-sponsored by HSCH, Metro Lubbock Chater of the March of Dimes, South Plains Perinatal Association, the Departments of Obstetrics-Gynecology and Pediatrics of Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, Mead Johnson Nutritional and Pharmaceutical Division, and Ross Laboratories.

Approved for continuing education credit, the seminar is aimed at registered nurses or graduate nurses with an interest in high risk obstetrical nursing.

This seminar is being held in Lubbock primarily because of the large number of high risk pregnancies in this area, noted Georgia Fojtasek, director of Nursing Staff Development at HSCH. Information will be presented to enable nurses to meet the needs of high risk obstetrical patients, including assessments and planning nursing interventions. The physiology of pregnancy, initial care of the neonate and psychological aspects of pregnancy also will be covered.

Participants will study the proper use of the fetal monitor and the overbed radiant heater. A demonstration of the fetal monitor will be held at 3:15 p.m. Oct. 24.

Chief consultant for the seminar will be Kathy D. Schneider of Sacramento, Calif., a registered nurse clinician who works with couples experiencing high risk pregnancies.

Seminar participants who preregister will pay a fee of $35. Registration at the door will be $40. For additional information, phone Georgia Fojtasek, Nursing Staff Development, 743-3441.

HSCH Slates Tours, Info At Fair

Lubbock and area students can spend a day exploring the careers available in the health care industry during the upcoming Health Careers Fair at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The fair is scheduled for Oct. 26 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the teaching hospital. Students will meet a number of health care professionals to discuss the various aspects of pursuing a health career.

Information will be provided on job availability, education requirements and salaries in the industry. Students will also tour the hospital facility to see health care professionals at work.

Students may make reservations for the Health Careers Fair by phoning Volunteer Services Director Jacque Hastings at 743-3346. Lunch will be provided by the hospital auxiliary.

The Texas Hospital Education and Research Foundation estimates that the health care field in this state currently has approximately 20,000 vacant positions. During the next 15 years there will be a need for 240,000 registered nurses, 143,000 emergency medical technicians, 160,000 health service administrators and others to fill the more than 300 careers represented in the health care area, according to the Texas Hospital Education and Research Foundation.

British Ambassador Wants Jerusalem Re-Divided

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Former British U.N. Ambassador Lord Caradon has asked Arab governments to comment on his proposal calling for a re-division of Jerusalem, the newspaper Adustour reported Saturday.

Caradon was chief architect of U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which calls on Israel to withdraw from land seized in the 1967 Mideast War.

Child Dies In Mexico After Fleeing U.S.

BOSTON (AP) — Chad Green, the leukemia-stricken three-year-old whose parents defied a court order and took him to Mexico for treatment with the banned substance Laetrile, has died, a spokeswoman for the Central Medical Clinico Del Mar in Tijuana, Mexico, said Saturday.

Chad died at his Tijuana home at 5:10 p.m. Friday, according to Marisa Terriquez. His parents, Gerald and Diana Green, had reported that Chad had not been feeling well Friday afternoon, she said.

The Greens reportedly have decided to stay in Mexico to consider the possibility they may be prosecuted if they return to Massachusetts.

The Greens fled their Scituate, Mass., home on Jan. 25 after a judge ordered them to stop treating Chad with Laetrile and a special diet they claimed can combat leukemia.

The judge also ordered them to resume chemotherapy treatments for Chad at Massachusetts General Hospital after the hospital brought suit in February 1978. The Greens insisted that chemotherapy was causing Chad more harm than good.

"This is a time of tremendous grief for me," said John Wyman, who served as the boy's court-appointed lawyer. "We all devoted a lot of time in keeping Chad healthy. I think we all have sympathy for the parents and the child.

"It's obvious that if we can confirm that he was not receiving chemotherapy then we can all reach our own conclusion, but I think we can all agree it was chemotherapy that kept him alive."

Assistant Attorney General Jonathan Brant, who conducted the case for the state of Massachusetts said it was uncertain whether an autopsy would be performed.

"All I know is that the body is in a mortuary in Tijuana," he said. "The only thing I can say is that I'm obviously very saddened by the news."

Laetrile is a trademark for a substance derived from the chemical amygdalin, found naturally in the pits of apricots and peaches and in bitter almonds.

Advocates claim it is an effective cancer treatment, but the U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the medical establishment in this country have said there is no proof it is of any value in treating cancer.

The FDA has banned Laetrile from interstate transportation. But 20 states have legalized use of the substance within their boundaries: Alaska, Arizona, Delaware, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Montana, North Dakota, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas and Washington.

In 1977, a federal judge in Oklahoma ordered the FDA not to interfere with shipment or use of Laetrile. The agency appealed and on June 18, 1979, the U.S. Supreme Court said the federal government may continue to ban Laetrile.

Tech Students Victims In Separate Assaults

Gary Martin of 2209 Slide Road told police that when he approached the door of his residence about 8 p.m. Friday, he was confronted by his landlady. The two began disputing a rent payment and reports indicate the woman began cursing Martin.

Martin told police he turned to walk away from the woman and heard a gun shot. Martin was not injured, and the woman left the residence.

Three hours later, Donny B. Dean of 815 Coleman Hall at Texas Tech University told police a man employed with a night club at Fourth Street and Avenue V threatened to shoot him and two friends.

Police reports indicate that Dean and two friends were in the club's restroom when the man came in and accused them of knocking holes in the walls of the club. The man then pulled a knife on the trio and forced them to go to the club's office. Reports indicate that while in the office, the man threatened to shoot the three students. Police said the man never displayed a gun.

Dean told police that when he tried to use a phone in the office, the man threatened to stab him. The three finally were released and returned to their dormitory where they called police.

Owen J. Kelly, 21, of 2119-A 18th St. told police he was cut with a sharp object during an attack outside a club at 2400 4th St.

Police reports indicate that Kelly was leaving the club about 2 a.m. Saturday when the suspect yelled something at him. Kelly reportedly yelled back, "Beat them Hogs," and the suspect got out of his van, ran over to Kelly and hit Kelly in the face with a sharp object. The suspect then returned to his van and drove away.

Another Texas Tech student told police he was struck in the head with a brick as he was walking away from the 7-Eleven convenience store at the corner of Eighth Street and Avenue Q.

Steven Allen Martin, 35, of 2011 8th St. told police he was walking away from the convenience store about 3 a.m. Saturday when a man jumped him and hit him in the head with a brick.

Police reports indicate that the man followed Martin home and attacked him again. Martin told police the man threatened to kill him because the man believed Martin was responsible for the suspect's arrest on a narcotic offense.

Oldest Citizen In U.S. Buried In Florida

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — America's senior citizen, Charlie Smith, was buried Saturday in the closing chapter of an ex-slave's storybook life which spanned nearly 14 decades.

Charlie, the oldest U.S. citizen listed on Social Security rolls, was 137 years old when he died Oct. 5 at a convalescent center in Bartow where he spent his last five years.

"He came to this country in shackles," General Counsel Arthur Cassell Jr. of Liberia said at a service. Charlie claimed to have been captured by slave traders in Liberia in 1854.

"He lived to become a free man. He exercised his rights and privileges as a citizen of the United States and he stood tall before his journey home," Cassell said.

More than 600 mourners packed St. James African Methodist Episcopal Church to hear several local dignitaries offer final tributes to Charlie. He had asked to be buried on a Saturday, saying that was the day of the week he had enjoyed most in his younger days.

After an hour-long service at the church a long funeral cortege wound through the streets of this quaint Central Florida town. American flags and red, white and blue bunting adorned utility poles near the church in recognition of Charlie's love for his adopted nation.

Charlie was buried under threatening skies, dressed in a brown business suit. He normally wore western attire when he would hold court in the convalescent center. There he would spin innumerable tales about the Civil War, Reconstruction days, and, so Charlie said, his time as a rider with outlaw Jesse James.

"Anyone sitting around listening to his oratories heard history that wasn't even written," said the Rev. M.C. Ross. "Oh, Lord, how good God was to him."

After the brief eulogies, the congregation strolled single file past the open bronze casket. Many of the mourners smiled warmly. One young woman stopped and whispered, "Goodby, Charlie."

When it came time for Charlie's 73-year-old son Chester to take a last look, he vigorously shook his head and chose not to do so.

Tears rolled from Chester's eyes throughout the ceremony. Afterward, the bespectacled man, walking with a cane, hobbled behind the casket borne by six Bartow police officers.

Bartow Mayor Bill Simpson recounted Charlie's life as a slave, a cowboy and fruitpicker, then told the mourners, "When you think of freedom, think of it in Charlie Smith's name."

Six Persons Die Following Wreck

BEEVILLE (AP) Six persons — including a mother and three children — died when a sports car ran a stop sign at a highway intersection and struck a station wagon early Saturday, state troopers said.

Four others were injured in the crash, which occurred at one minute past midnight just outside this South Texas town. The impact flung all 10 victims from the two cars, investigating Trooper Ellis Ginn said.

Patricia Rosas, 27, her five children, and 19-year-old Sandra Garza were eastbound on Texas 202 in a 1963 Ford station wagon when it was struck on the passenger side by a northbound 1978 Pontiac Trans-Am that "ran a stop sign (on the U.S. 181 frontage road) at high speed," Ginn said.

Canyon Lake Waterfall Testimonial To Senior

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Most of us hope for some meager memorial to our days on earth, but 21-year-old Byron Sampson can rest easy because he's already made his mark.

The Texas Tech University landscape architecture senior can point to a 120-foot sandstone waterfall as a testimonial to his college days in Lubbock.

As a planning aide in the city parks department, Sampson has worked since mid-July transforming the grassy bank of Canyon Lake 6 into a four-level waterfall.

Sampson began his task with a pile of boulders weighing up to 37 tons each imported from Stephenville, plus inspiration from Mother Nature and the architect who designed the Fort Worth Water Gardens.

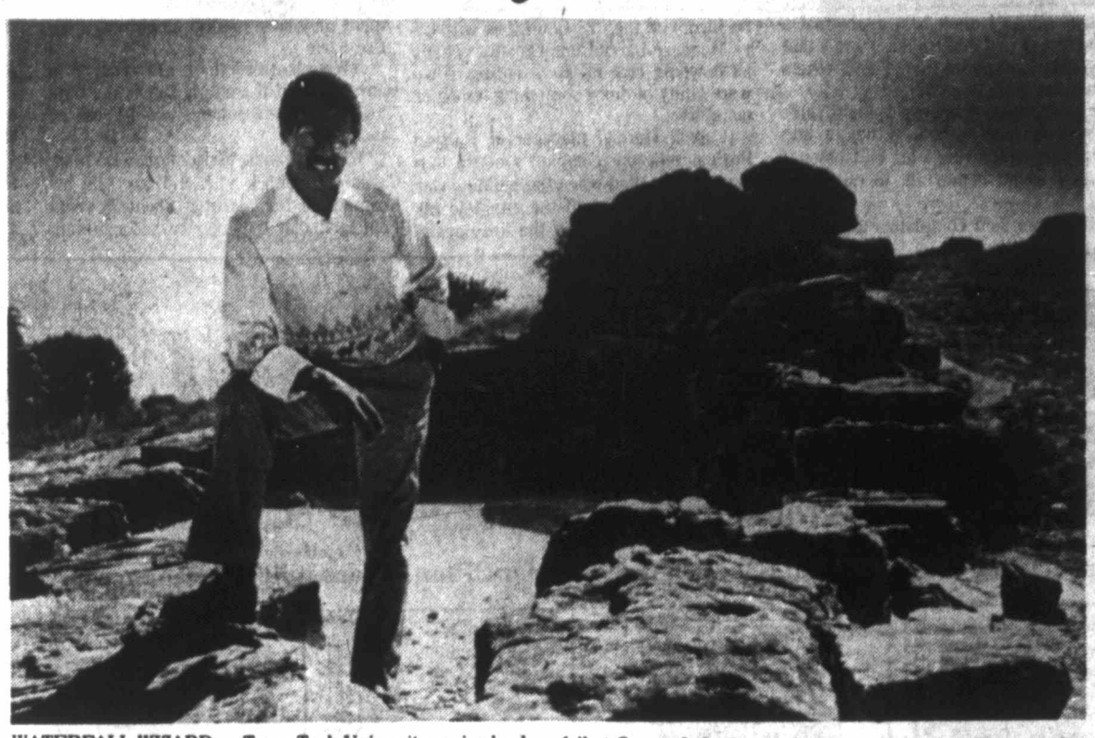

A 117-ton crane lifted each stone into position under Sampson's watchful eye, then the boulders were reinforced with steel and concrete.

Sampson said one workday he and his four-man crew poured four truckloads of concrete onto the stone and steel monolith in two and one-half hours.

Within a few weeks, Sampson expects 1,000 gallons of white, frothy water to begin gushing into the lake each minute.

The water first will enter a dish-shaped pool atop the waterfall inspired by nature, then bounce down stones 15 feet to a large pool below.

Sampson already envisions the waterfall crowded with neighborhood children and said kids living near the fall have been diligent in checking the progress of the construction.

WATERFALL WIZARD — Texas Tech University senior landscape architecture major Byron Sampson came to Lubbock to attend school but will leave the dusty plains with a 120-foot waterfall. Sampson, 21, designed and helped build the waterfall at Canyon Lake 6 as a planning aide for the city's park department. The four-level sandstone waterfall probably will begin gushing 1,000 gallons of water a minute into the lake the first part of November. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

"I want them to have fun," he said, and demonstrated a niche behind the fall from which junior explorers can watch the water's progress.

Not only is the waterfall designed to be aesthetically pleasing to drivers approaching on Quirt Avenue from East 19th Street, but Sampson said the fall serves to recharge the Canyon Lakes water after it has traveled through the first five lakes.

The water picks up oxygen as it pounds the salmon and maroon boulders to keep fishing in the 82-acre lake good.

Also, Sampson said the Canyon Lakes are designed to "reclaim land which man was destroying" and counteract the city's rapid growth to the southwest.

Construction of the waterfall was not without problems, Sampson said recalling days he thought the project would never be finished.

But his four-man crew who asked initially, "who's the snotty-nosed high school kid," encouraged him to continue the work.

One crew member told Sampson he was paying the price to learn. "No one can come up and say you didn't know what you were doing," Sampson remembered the man saying.

"Eventually, we built it," he said. "The five of us."

Designing and building the waterfall is "a dream come true," Sampson said. "To design something, build it and actually do the work — it's been fun.

"I wouldn't pass it up for anything.

"This is part of me right now — like an arm or something you can't do without," he said. "You take it for granted, but you always know you can use it.

"Someday, I'll bring my grandkids down here and they'll say, 'Hey, you know the guy who did this?'

" 'Yeah. I did,' I'll say."

Pageant Still Open To Entries

Applications are still available for the Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant, says pageant director Jack Geddes.

Women wishing to enter must be between the ages of 18 and 28 and must not have been married.

Contestants will be judged at preliminary trials at 2 p.m. Nov. 4, in Hodges Community Center, with finalists competing for the title of Miss Lubbock Dec. 8 in the municipal auditorium.

Deadline for entering the pageant is midnight Nov. 1. There is no entry fee for the Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant, a preliminary pageant to the Miss America Scholarship Pageant.

The winner of the Lubbock pageant will receive a $750 scholarship and a $1,000 wardrobe. She also will be sent to represent Lubbock in the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant next summer.

Contestants will be judged at preliminary talent presentations and interviews.

Alarm Monitoring Continues Despite Decision

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Fire Department is continuing to monitor two business-owned fire alarm systems in its central dispatch office, despite a three-year-old decision to drop other such systems from the department's monitoring panel.

The policy, which was initiated Jan. 1, 1977, mainly affected private alarm companies that had their clients' alarms terminating in the Central Station's dispatch office.

Fire Chief Tom Foster said the alarms had to be disconnected because of a lack of space in the dispatch office, and because monitoring the privately owned systems was taking away from the dispatcher's regular duties.

A letter sent by Foster to the various businesses four months before the Jan. 1, 1977, deadline stated: "We plan to remodel our office and rearrange our equipment for increased efficiency. Therefore, it is necessary that I ask you to move your equipment out of our office."

The chief learned, however, several days after sending the letter that Lubbock Sash & Door Co. and Ralston Purina Co. owned their own alarm systems — rather than leasing the equipment from another company — and that they had an agreement with the city that the alarms would be monitored by the fire department free of charge.

Farmers Cooperative Compress also was invited to stay in the dispatch office because of similar circumstances, but Ronnie Brown, the company's assistant manager, said it was decided they would begin monitoring their equipment elsewhere.

Lubbock Sash & Door and Ralston Purina are unique in that Foster says he will not allow his department to monitor any other company's alarm system.

"We obviously cannot be of service to a private business like we service (Ralston) Purina Mills and Lubbock Sash & Door," Foster said in a recent interview.

"They have been in here longer than I have. They bought the equipment a long time ago (before private alarm companies were in business). They made that investment, at the time, with the full understanding that they could terminate that alarm here in that office.

"I didn't feel it would be wise to break an agreement that was made by a predecessor of mine and say, 'Now, you have to get off this and get out.'"

The chief added, "Those people were in here for a long, long time, and, like I said, whenever they change up (the alarm equipment), for any reason, then they will go, as agreed, to an alarm company.

"If a new business comes into town, and they come down here and want to have such an agreement I'll say, 'I'm sorry, I can't provide that service because we have an alarm company in town — several alarm companies — that you can choose from.'

"So the basic difference between Purina Mills and Lubbock Sash & Door, and any other business in town, is the fact that an agreement was made that has been a long-standing agreement."

Several of the city's alarm companies, as well as municipal buildings and local hospitals, are linked to the fire department's dispatch office through a "ring down" circuit.

This enables a person to pick up the receiver of a modified telephone and automatically ring the fire department's dispatcher. The dispatcher can contact a person monitoring a structure's alarm system by using the same procedure.

Foster said there is limited space for additional "ring down" hookups, but that a business must have 24-hour surveillance of its monitoring panel before such a system can be installed in Central Station.

While not professing great anger over the fire department's continued service to Lubbock Sash & Door and Ralston Purina, James Ricketts, owner of Alarm Company of Lubbock, said he did not think it was fair that Foster ordered a stop to the monitoring service, then allowed two companies to remain connected to the panel.

"What's good for the goose has got to be good for the gander," Ricketts said. Ricketts said he thought the policy applied to everyone until several weeks ago when he learned differently from another person.

Ricketts indicated he was distressed that the chief did not tell firms affected by the order that the two companies would continue to have the service. If Foster had informed the businesses that Lubbock Sash & Door and Ralston Purina would remain hooked to the monitoring panel, and explained the reason, "then that would have been a different kettle of fish," Ricketts said.

"Everyone was asked to move under the guise of that letter that they needed the space, and they're still out there," Rickett said. "I don't have that great a complaint. I just don't think it's fair that they asked some to move and others didn't have to."

Foster said, "I believe I could solve the whole thing without getting it into the papers and having a big hullabaloo if the guy would come talk to me about it."

The chief said complaints also could be filed with the City Council or with City Manager Larry Cunningham. "That's all it would take in this situation, if we were guilty of doing something wrong or out of line."

Carroll Hering, manager of Ralston Purina, said the company's alarm system was installed when the building was built in 1942. He said the city told his company that some day the fire department may have to stop monitoring their fire alarm.

"We recognize there are changes in any city, and if the city thinks it's time to change their policies, we'll abide by them."

Gordon Davis, assistant general manager of Lubbock Sash & Door, said his company's fire alarm is about 25 years old, and that they service and maintain the equipment.

Davis said he was not sure what sort of agreement was made with the city to have the alarms monitored by the fire department. "It was a mutual benefit at that time," he said.

Both executives said their companies are not charged a fee for having the alarms monitored by the fire department.

East German Guards Kill Fellow Soldier

BERLIN (AP) — East German border guards shot and apparently killed a young fellow soldier who tried to smash through the 13-foot-high Berlin Wall with a heavy construction vehicle, West Berlin police reported Saturday.

They said fresh bullet holes in a guard tower indicated there was a shootout between the would-be escapee and the border guards.

Police said details of the incident Friday afternoon remained unclear Saturday because there were no known eyewitnesses on the western side of the wall dividing this city.

Residents near the wall reported hearing shooting, and police observed a communist patrol remove the apparently lifeless body of a young solider from the vehicle, and later tow the vehicle away with a tank, officers reported.

They said it appeared that the soldier had stolen the heavy tracked vehicle, used to haul concrete blocks for the wall, from border fortifications, drove it toward the wall but stopped at a fence 50 feet from it.

First Christian Church Site Of Nursing Update

A workshop entitled "Update: Cancer," designed to help nurses increase their understanding of cancer patients and to perfect their communication skills in dealing with terminally ill patients, begins at 8:30 a.m., Oct. 26 at First Christian Church, 2323 Broadway.

WE WANT TO WIPE OUT CANCER IN YOUR LIFETIME
AMERICAN CANCER SOCIETY

Sponsors are the American Cancer Society and Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The terminally ill client presents a myriad of problems and concerns for anyone associated with him. This seminar is designed to assist the medical professional in helping the family and the client through a difficult time by giving emotional and technical support.

Understanding the psychological and psychosocial impact a terminally ill client has on the family and those working with the client will be discussed by Charles Kemp, director of Terminal Care Project, Visiting Nurse Association, Dallas.

Joan Guntzelman, director of counseling and patient assistance at Presbyterian Hospital in Albuquerque will speak on the quality of life.

Giving psychological support to the dying and their families will be presented by Tom McGovern, counselor, Department of Psychiatry, Texas Tech University School of Medicine in Lubbock.

Basic communication skills will be the focus of a panel discussion by Susan Newfield, clinical nurse specialist, Department of Psychiatry at TTUSM; Neal Newfield, social worker in Department of Psychiatry, TTUSM; Harvey Joannig, psychologist; and McGovern.

Identifying personal attitudes toward dying and how it affects the nurse's approach to the patient will be the topic of a group session led by Rudy Arrendondo, psychologist, at TTUSM; Miss Guntzelman; and Kemp.

The seminar is open to nurses and other intersted health professionals and individuals.

Registration fee is $15, including luncheon. Registration may be made through the American CAncer Society, 1409 19th St., Lubbock. 79401.

Tech Announces Homecoming Luncheon

All Texas Tech supporters are invited to the Ex-Students Association Homemcoming luncheon at 11 a.m., Nov. 10, in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The luncheon-reception is scheduled before the Homecoming football game between Texas Tech and Texas Christian, which begins at 2 p.m. in Jones Stadium. The reception is open to all and the meal will be $3 per plate. This is the first time in several years it will be necessary to charge for the luncheon, according to Ex-Student Executive Director Bill Dean. A local company paid for the meal previously.

Credit-Tightening Moves Influence Gold Price

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury is out on the final effect of the Federal Reserve's credit-tightening measures on gold prices, as the metal's value seesaws in world markets.

"I thought the market was somewhat schizophrenic," said Jeffrey Nichols, a gold analyst at Argus Research. "One day it thought the Fed meant business and the next day it had some doubts."

"We are seeing the same erratic situation that we've been having in the past few weeks," said one London dealer.

"It appears that the volatility is going to continue," said John Crowley, a spokesman for the trading house of James Sinclair & Co. "It's a nervous market that could go either way."

Rather than stabiize the volatile gold market, as had been hoped, the credit-tightening moves merely sped up gold's roller-coaster ride.

The metal, which had traded as high as $444 an ounce two weeks ago, slumped $11.50 an ounce in London to $374 on Monday, rose to $391 Tuesday, went up to $408 an ounce Wednesday, fell $11.50 to $396.50 an ounce Thursday, and then edged Friday up to finish the week in London at $397 an ounce.

The wildly swinging gold price was attributed by analysts to changing opinions about the effects of the Fed's moves over last weekend to tighten credit. The Fed boosted the discount rate — charged to member banks when they borrow funds from the Fed — by 1 percent to 12 percent, and increased the amount of reserves member banks must keep on hand.

The moves, designed to stem inflation by making money more difficult to get, led banks to raise their prime lending rates by an unprecedented full percentage point, to a record 14½ percent. The prime rate is the interest charged by banks on loans to preferred corporate customers.

The size of the prime rate rise and general uneasiness about the credit-tightening policy sent stock prices into a tailspin. The Dow Jones industrial average plunged about 59 points during the week in heavy trading, including an 81.62 million-share day Wednesday that was the New York Stock Exchange's busiest day ever.

With the stock market troubled, gold traders were caught in the middle. Gold traditionally benefits from worries on other markets because it is considered a safer investment than stocks or currencies. But the credit-tightening actions, if effective, could weaken the metal's prices by shoring up the U.S. economy.

Many analysts expected the Fed to make further credit adjustments in coming weeks, and government officials hinted that would be so. As a result, analysts said, the gold market would probably remain unstable for some time.

"I don't think there can be a stable outlook for gold," said Nichols. "Either the U.S. policy-makers will continue to fumble, and the gold markets will receive some further fuel from that, or they'll make their plays and bring the situation with regard to hyper-monetary growth under control. If the markets see that, they'll react negatively."

But Nichols added a caveat to that prediction:

"Typically when you ask economists about this you get the wrong answer," he said. "Maybe the market will stay where it is, instead."

•Iran was reported to have drastically cut its oil exports in recent days. The reasons for the cut were uncertain, industry and government sources said, but if prolonged the reduction could create a severe squeeze in world oil markets.

"Several oil companies have been notified to push back their October loadings" of oil onto tankers, a government source said. "The ships are backed up," confirmed a representative of one oil company. "We don't know why."

The cutbacks could lead to another oil shortage and provide new upward pressure on oil prices, which were raised by some other oil producers during the week.

•The French automaker Renault said it will provide $150 million in new capital to American Motors Corp. so the U.S. automaker can build a new Renault model in Wisconsin.

Renault said it will buy a 5 percent interest in AMC, which could rise to 22.5 percent, and will have two representatives on AMC's board.

The new car to be built in Wisconsin will be a front-wheel drive compact in several body styles "aimed at the heart of the American market" in the 1983 model year.

It will compete with the current "X-body" cars of General Motors Corp. and comparable Ford and Chrysler models scheduled for the 1981 model year.

The deal was the first of its kind in the United States, although Renault assembled AMC's Rambler models overseas until 1965, and only the second manufacture of a foreign car in this country. Volkswagen started production of Rabbit models in Pennsylvania last year.

•Automakers finished announcing their price increases on 1980-model cars, with Chrysler posting prices about 5.1 percent, or an average of $359, higher than final 1979 sticker prices. The Ford increase was estimated at 3.6 percent.

Earlier, Volkswagen announced price increases averaging 4.8 percent for its Pennsylvania-built models, General Motors boosted prices by an average of 4.6 percent and American Motors prices rose 5.2 percent.

Market Labeled Unpredictable As Anniversary Of Crash Looms

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — As Wall Street prepares to mark the 50th anniversary of the worst stock market decline in history, investors got a taste this past week of what that Great Crash must have been like.

For a couple of panicky days early in the week, stock prices lapsed into a virtual free-fall decline in the heaviest trading in New York Stock Exchange history.

By Friday the market had quieted down. But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials still wound up with its second biggest weekly loss of the post-Depression era, a 58.62-point decline to 838.99.

The drop nearly matched the 59.08-point slide recorded by the average Oct. 16-20 of last year in the midst of what came to be known as the October Massacre.

New York Stock Exchange volume, meanwhile, set both daily and weekly records. The total of 81.62 million shares traded on Wednesday was by far the largest ever for a single session.

And the weekly turnover of 253.71 million shares —which averages out to better than 50 million a day — easily surpassed the previous high of 220.55 July 31-Aug. 4 of 1978.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 4.10 to 59.29, and the American Stock Exchange market value index tumbled 22.34 to 212.81.

The spark that touched off all the convulsive activity was the announcement by the Federal Reserve that it intended to clamp down on credit with a new inflation-fighting strategy.

Instead of seeking to restrain inflation by gradually raising interest rates, the Fed said it would concentrate henceforth on more direct restraints on the supply of money in the economy. It said that from now on it would let interest rates go, within broad limits, wherever market forces took them.

For Wall Streeters, this was something akin to a ship's losing the use of its compass in the middle of the ocean.

They had gotten into the habit of monitoring even the smallest changes in key open-market rates for signs of what the Fed was up to. Suddenly there was no such guideline to go buy.

One prospect raised by the Fed's new strategy, most analysts agreed, was a more pronounced recession, with stronger measures taking hold to discourage the expansion of credit.

"Anybody who was holding out for the idea that there still might not be a recession has probably surrendered," said Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

In an analysis written immediately after the Fed's announcement, Allen Sinai at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. concluded that the Fed's action would:

•Drive interest rates sharply higher (which it already has done);

•Strengthen the dollar and dampen speculation in gold, silver, and other commodities;

•Put a strain on the cash-flow and credit positions of businesses and financial institutions, as well as those of many individual households;

•Push the U.S. economy into "a deeper tailspin." Sinai concluded, "The 1978-1979 credit crunch is in place."

The immediate surge in interest rates was dramatized by the decision of many leading banks Tuesday to raise the benchmark prime lending rate by a full percentage point, to 14½ percent — an unprecedented jump.

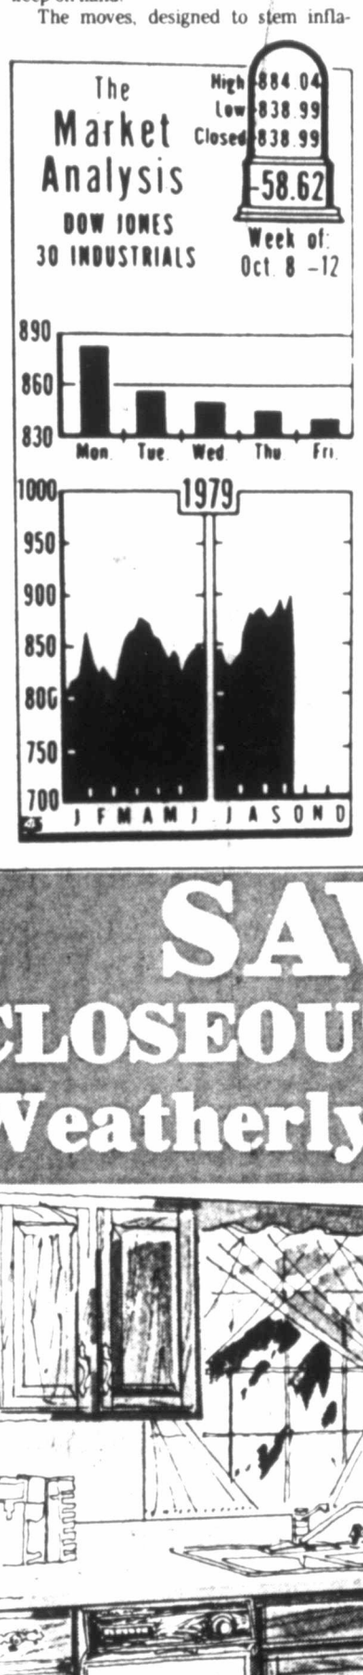

Higher too, to the 15-17½ percent range, went the rate brokers charge on so-called margin loans to investors. And most analysts agreed that that rise played a major part in the market's ensuing decline.

With the higher interest cost on margin loans, carrying stock on margin became less attractive, and a number of margin traders evidently decided simply to sell out their holdings.

Surging interest rates dealt a particularly direct blow to the many stock groups that are sensitive to trends in borrowing costs and bond yields — banks, savings and loans, and utilities. American Telephone & Telegraph, the archetypical "yield" stock for investors interested in current income, sold at its lowest price within the past year.

Before this chain of events began to unfold last weekend, the market had been cruising along comfortably with many indexes at their highest level since the early 1970s.

"We had a euphoric feeling that the stock market could shoulder the burden of high interest rates," Stovall said. "Now we're in uncharted waters. Nobody can predict what's going to happen."

The Market Meter

Hectic, Heavy Trading Swamps Stock Market

By J.L. Hutcheson
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman, Inc.

Hectic, often to the point of outright panic, trading activity swamped the stock market with the biggest volume in its history this week as unrelenting selling plunged stock prices through the floor. Stock prices showed their largest one day decline in more than five years on Tuesday as volume soared to more than 81,000,000 shares. This was more than 30,000,000 shares heavier volume than the previous record.

J.L. HUTCHESON

The market was reacting to the Federal Reserve's credit tightening moves which have catapulted short-term interest rates to record levels. By Tuesday, most of the nation's banks had raised their prime, or minimum lending rate, a full percentage point to 14 1/2% from 13 1/2%.

The immediate response of banks in raising their basic lending rate shook the market becuase short-term interest rates were already at record levels. There is serious concern among investors over how much higher interest rates will go, how long they will stay high and how severely they may cut into economic activity as the Fed fights to cool inflation.

Brokers in New York reported that their clients were "absolutely panicked". Many were referring to the crash of 1929, which marks its fiftieth anniversary this month, and saying that it is going to happen all over again.

Analysts feel that the Fed's action is likely to bring on a steeper recession, a much higher unemployment rate, a terrible profit picture and may also postpone the time of an economic recovery.

The downward pressure on stock prices was particularly harsh for the banks, oils and casino issues. Chase Manhattan lost more than 3 points; J.P. Morgan, 2 3/4; Texaco skidded more than two points and Bally Manufacturing fell more than 3.

Toward the end of the week, many stock prices had begun to recover as some buying entered the market to take advantage of very cheap stock prices. Helping the recovery efforts were the improved performance of the dollar in Europe and the sharp drop in gold prices. Most experts remain uncertain over the outlook for the market saying that most of the decline could be over but that it will take time to set the stage for something other than brief trading rallies.

Many investors feel that the possibility for new lows in the industrial average is not likely, but could happen. They seem to have adopted a "wait and see" attitude. Most do concede that there is a very high probability that a number of issues may have already recorded their lows for this declining phase.

Stocks Called Good Inflation Hedge

In today inflationary environment an investor needs an investment which will return about 30% a year or so. This will make up for inflation and taxes and also provide real gains. It may sound improbable, but one of the few investments which has done the above is common stocks.

A recent study by the Institute for Econometric Research which tracks the total return of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange reveals that the total return from appreciation and dividends over a five year period from Sept. 13, 1974 to present is an annual rate of 29.4%. Over the same period, inflation-as measured by the Consumer Price Index-amounted to an annual rate of 7.6%.

The total return of stocks listed on the high-flying American Stock Exchange showed a gain of more than 38% annually.

The same study now urges a bit of caution, saying that the current bull market has now progressed further, in both price and time, than any cyclical uptrend in the past quarter centruy. To find a bull market of greater duration and gains that the current one, it is necessary to go back to the 1949-1956 market rise.

Much of the gain in stocks has been recorded by the smaller companies across the U.S. They have continued to prosper which other stocks, in larger, better known companies, have not fared as well.

Diamond prices have continued to be a good hedge against inflation. During the first half of 1979, diamond prices edged up only 4% but since then the wholesale prices on investment grade diamonds have risen by 38% to 45%.

Diamonds are not suited for all investors. The small investor should steer away from this investment since it is dominated by institutional professionals and rich, knowledgeable individuals. You need at least $100,000.00 in cash to buy high-grade diamonds at a sufficiently low markup to justify the stones as an investment.

Soviets Say Grain Harvest Will Be Worst Since 1975

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet sources predicted Saturday that the Soviet grain harvest, which is 91 percent complete, will be the worst since 1975, necessitating massive purchases of American grain.

While there are no estimates yet on overall agricultural output, the 1979 grain harvest, if predictions are correct, will be 175 million to 185 million metric tons — off by about one-fifth from last year's record crop. The 1975 harvest was 140 million tons.

The United States recently agreed to allow the Soviet Union to buy 25 million tons of corn and wheat in 1979-80 and U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has predicted the Soviets will buy the full authorization.

Grain analysts in Chicago estimate the Soviets will buy 20 to 21 million tons from the United States.

It is not clear whether the Soviet purchase will drive up U.S. prices. While the Soviets were making the bulk of their U.S. purchases in 1979, prices for grain in the United States — for both foreign and domestic buyers — rose by 20 to 30 percent and cash prices for wheat topped $4 a bushel for the first time in several years.

A comparison of Soviet and U.S. grain prduction showsa wide lead for the United States. The Agriculture Department predicts the U.S. corn crop alone will be 187.7 million tons this year.

In the year ending Sept. 30, the Soviets bought about 15 million tons of American grain. A metric ton — the measure for grain — is about 2,205 pounds and equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Many rich farming areas in the Soviet Union were plagued throughout the 1979 growing season with persistent drought, noted the Soviet sources, who asked to remain unidentified. Other areas lost considerable acreage because of the extreme cold last winter — the coldest in 100 years.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's most recent estimates on Soviet grain production this year place the Soviet harvest at 175 million tons, while some Soviet sources predict the total will be 185 million.

Either prediction, however, is far off the record harvest last year when 237.2 million tons of grain were gathered.

Sources here said the smaller harvest this year was saved from being much worse when good weather held at the end of the season in Kazakhstan and Siberia, preventing in-the-field spoilage.

Soviet Agriculture Ministry figures show 280.3 million acres were planted in grain this year.

Official Soviet harvest figures will not be known until at least November or December when the Supreme Soviet meets. The figures normally are made public during the Parliament's winter meeting.

In the current five-year plan for the Soviet economy, grain production is targeted at an average of 215-220 tons annually. The predicted harvest this year falls about 40 to 45 million tons short.

Soviet Agriculture Minister Valentin K. Mesyats, in a speech Friday night in recognition of an agriculture workers' holiday Sunday, did not mention harvest figures. He said, however, that every technique available to Russian agriculture was poured into the system this year.

He also announced a plan for the "significant expansion in 1980" of Soviet corn acreage with an increased use of chemical and organic fertilizers.

FFA Members Leave For State Fair

Members of the Coronado Future Farmers of America will leave today to attend the State Fair of Texas, where they will join other FFA members in state-wide barrow competition.

Faculty members Finus Branham and Barron Wetsel, who are the Coronado chapter advisors, will accompany the group.

Judging will be held Wednesday and Thursday and the youths will auction their pigs Saturday.

Black Caucus Members Meet With Castro

NEW YORK (AP) — Fidel Castro met for more than three hours Saturday with two members of the Black Congressional Caucus, who later described the meeting as a wide-ranging discussion of world issues.

It was one of several meetings Castro was expected to have before returning to Cuba. Ellen Fleysher, spokeswoman for the Police Department, said the Cuban president was expected to remain in New York through Monday and possibly longer. He arrived here early Thursday.

Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., said the discussions "reaffirmed my notion that he (Castro) is a very sensitive and thoughtful, intelligent human being who is concerned not only about his own country but the conditions of the world."

Dellums, who is considered one of the most liberal members of the House, said the talks covered East-West concerns about peace, the ratification of the SALT II pact and "the non-problem" of the 3,000 Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Also in on the meeting was Rep. George Thomas LeLand, D-Texas, who, like Dellums, had met with Castro during a previous visit to Cuba.

Both said later that they viewed the meeting as an opportunity for the caucus to become more involved in the nation's dealings overseas.

"The Congressional Black Caucus has the potential to move into the central body politics of this country and to begin to express our concerns for peace," Dellums said.

Outside the mission Saturday, there were scattered protests from anti-Castro groups, but they were far smaller than the protests Friday, when 3,000 angry protestors, including Castro's sister, Juanita, called for his ouster.

Miss Fleysher said that the security detail guarding the mission had been reduced from 400 to 325 persons, but the "frozen zone" around the building was being maintained to keep protesters away.

After Saturday's meetings, Castro was to host a reception at the Cuban mission in mid-Manhattan.

Miss Fleysher said Rep. Charles Rangel, a black Democrat who represents Harlem, and former attorney general Ramsey Clark also were expected to meet with Castro on Saturday.

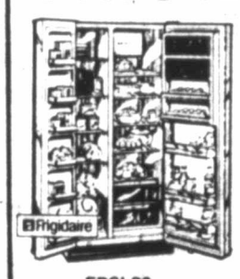

Neither Clark nor Rangel could be reached, but Clark's wife, Georgia, said the former attorney general had no plans for a meeting.

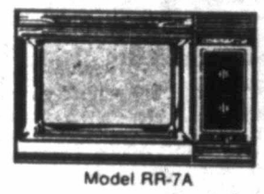

Also on hand, were three of the four Puerto Rican nationalists freed in September by President Carter. Lolita Lebron, Irving Flores Rodriguez and Rafael Concel Miranda planned to meet with Castro, according to a spokesman from the Pro Liberation of the Nationalists Prisoners Committee. Oscar Collazo, oldest of the four, could not make the trip for health reasons, the committee spokesman said.

The four nationalists were held in federal prisons for more than 25 years in connection with attacks on Congress and President Harry S. Truman in the 1950s.

In 1978, an earthquake in northeastern Iran destroyed entire cities and villages and killed more than 25,000 people.

Snake Steaks Hot At Bistro

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rattlesnake steak business was booming Saturday at Dominique's, a French restaurant whose clientele includes Vice President Walter Mondale and actress Elizabeth Taylor.

"It's crazy," said proprietor Dominique D'Ermo, marveling at the sudden upswing in rattlesnake orders at the Pennsylvania Avenue bistro a few blocks from the White House.

Dominique has served rattler since September but the rattle explosion really began Friday after the Department of Interior fired a scientist for asking Dominique in a letter on department stationary to cease and desist dispensing the slithery speciality.

Local newspaper stories highlighted the incident after news of the letter appeared in a local gossip column.

Secretary of Interior Cecil Andrus is another steady customer at Dominque's and he was not amused when Dominique told him about the letter.

G. Kenneth Dodd, 29, a herpetologist, said he told Dominique the Pennsylvania timber rattler he was dispensing in red wine sauce "is rapidly approaching extinction."

Department officials said Dodd was fired for disregarding department procedures. "It's ridiculous," said Dodd and appealed for reinstatement.

Dominique said he took the Pennsylvania rattler off the menu after Dodd's letter and arranged to substitute a Texas rattlesnake whose future appears more certain.

Business has been so brisk, Dominique said, "I had to call Texas and have them put some on the plane for this afternoon."

Dominique said he first got the idea in September "when somebody came to me with 10 pounds of rattlesnake."

Now, he said, "we sell about 75 pounds a week."

Dominque said the rattlesnake is cut into small pieces and poached for 1 1/2 hours. "We serve it in wine sauce with fresh mushrooms, fresh onions, fresh shallots, and fresh celery," he said.

Haig Views Troops In Cuba

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The presence of Soviet combat troops in Cuba poses no military threat to the United States, says retired Gen. Alexander Haig.

But, the former supreme commander of NATO force in Europe added, in the global political struggle between this nation and Russia, the combat brigade poses "a very serious threat."

GEN. HAIG

Haig, a Republican, spoke to reporters Friday before attending a reception for delegates to the state Republican Convention.

The 54-year-old general, who was also former President Richard Nixon's chief of staff, said the troop issue is not a military crisis in the magnitude of the missile crisis of 1962.

But the presence of the troops is not an isolated issue, he continued, and mustbe considred along with other developments, including the suspension of U.S. surveillance flights over the island, the construction of a submarine base at Cienfuegos and the presence in Cuba of a MIG squadron.

"The real importance is the reality that all of this has occurred in such a way to reinforce Cuba's confidence that Castro can export revolution to other parts of the world," Haig said.

Humphrey Center Dedicated

BOSTON (AP) — Muriel Humphrey says she hopes a multimillion-dollar cancer research center named in honor of her husband, the late Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, will help carry on his "indomitable spirit."

MRS. HUMPHREY

"Hubert would be pleased to know of this center's role in providing cancer care to many residents of the inner city," Mrs. Humphrey said Friday.

"There is no magic cure for cancer, but I know the indomitable spirit of Hubert will be ongoing at this center," she said.

Mrs. Humphrey's remarks came in a panel discussion on cancer research led by Boston University President John Silber, part of a day-long list of events scheduled to celebrate the dedication of the school's research center.

Coretta King, widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King, addressed a luncheon held in honor of Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey, who was presented the Hubert H. Humphrey Cancer Research Center Award.

The facility, named after the former vice president after Humphrey died of cancer in 1978, offers facilities for 60 cancer specialists within the Boston area and serves as the focal point for more than $4.2 million in federal research grants.

Authority Says Vent Anger

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Psychiatrist Andrew Watson says it's normal for parents to want to take a whack at their children when they misbehave and the adults who accept that fact are less likely to become child abusers.

Watson said parents who can accept their anger are less likely to become violent than those who refuse to admit it and then explode.

"People who become involved in child abuse cases are often highly conscientious — so much so that they can't face the normal anger they sometimes feel toward their children. They hold it in and push it out of their awareness until it eventually explodes into extreme violence."

Watson said getting parents to realize there is nothing unnatural about their anger is the first step in turning child abusers into good parents, who discipline their offspring effectively.

Direct Public Voting Urged

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Electrician, plumber, appliance repairman, Army colonel, office clerk, waiter, airplane mechanic, athletic instructor, engineer, teacher, bureaucrat, laborer, and speculator in commodities.

Fred Weiland III has been them all. Now, he wants to be President.

"I feel I have a much better background than most of the candidates for President have had in my lifetime," he says.

At 60, Weiland shares a comfortable ranch-style home with his family and a black poodle named Cherrie that has painted toe-nails and pink lace hair ribbons.

"That's so you'll know she's a girl without having to check too closely," he says.

Weiland's favorite themes are abolition of representative government in favor of direct voting on all laws and a federal budget voted on by taxpayers as they filled out their returns.

Shift In Anti-Inflation Plan Puts Wall Street In Turmoil

NEW YORK (UPI) — A sudden shift in the government's anti-inflation plan threw Wall Street into turmoil last week but the consensus was that the change would be for the better.

Until recently the Federal Reserve Board tried to combat inflation — currently 13.1 percent on an annual basis — By driving interest rates so high it would be too expensive to borrow money and the economy would slow.

It didn't work.

Despite the high interest rates, business demand for loans remained strong and banks had no trouble getting their hands on money to make them.

So the Fed launched a new plan: raise the discount rate, the price banks must pay for money, from 11 to 12 percent; increase the amount of money banks must keep keep on reserve, and shift its focus from manipilating short-term interest rates in favor of more direct control over the flow of money into the economy.

It was a plan businessmen had been recommending, but the announcement took everyone by surprise and the initial reaction was one of confusion and fear.

It was most visible in the stock market, where a one-day selling stampede piled up a record volume of 81.62 million shares on the New York Stock Exchange floor Wednesday, making the week the busiest in history.

Prices declined sharply Monday and slid further Tuesday when major banks, reopening after the Columbus Day holiday, raised the prime interest rate to an unprecedented amount — from 13 1/2 to 14 1/2 Percent.

By Wednesday, near-panic prevailed as institutions and individuals rushed to get out of the market. Particularly frightened were small investors who had borrowed to buy stock and faced demands from brokers to put up additional cash as the value of their holdings declined.

Bargain-hunters, many of them institutions, lightened the losses by moving in and taking advantage of depressed prices late Wednesday. Still, the decline for the week, measured by the popular market barometer, the Dow-Jones industrial average, totaled 58.62 points, the worst weekly drop in a year.

The breadth of the selloff was staggering. Of the 2,101 issues which traded, 1,984 lost ground and only 64 closed higher.

Monte Gordon, Dreyfus Corp. vice president, summed up the Wall Street reaction: "It's a new ballgame and the street doesn't know how to read it yet."

Despite the pandemonium, U.S. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller, Fed Chairman Paul Volcker and the rest of the nation's money managers held firm. The new rules, though painful, were good rules —indeed the only ones — to fight stubborn inflation in the long term.

They freely acknowledged the tough times ahead: the risk of higher unemployment, less money available for consumers to buy big-ticket items such as cars and kitchen appliances, and mortgage rates that would put homes out of reach for the average family. But they insisted the alternative — a worthless dollar in a stagnant economy — would be far worse.

The reaction abroad was a firmer dollar and a decline in gold prices, an indication other countries favored the new approach.

Meeting in Hot Springs, Va., members of the Business Council — comprised of top executives of prestigious U.S. Corporations — endorsed the new anti-inflation credit-tightening plan.

"The inflation disease is so virulent, the medicine you take to cure it is not very pleasant," said Citibank Chairman Walter Wriston. "To make believe the next six months is going to be fun is to lie to you."

"The Federal Reserve action was entirely appropriate and long overdue," said Clifton Garvin Jr., top executive at Exxon Corp., the nation's largest oil company.

"The sooner we suffer the pain, the sooner we will be through," said Irving Shapiro, chairman of the Du Pont Co.

Despite the assurances, many in the financial community appeared fearful the board's action will produce a credit crunch and push the nation into a steep recession.

"Essentially they fear the cooldown could turn into a freeze, especially with an OPEC price rise ahead," said one observer.

Green Book Lists Washington Elite

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Green Book has been published. Four hundred Washingtonians are out and 685 are in for the first time. And Mrs. Jean Shaw Murray, publisher and arbiter, doesn't want to say who's in, who's out, or why.

The Green Book is Washington society's Who's Who. Its formal name is "The Social List of Washington, D. C." It is published in a kelly green cover. It lists 5,000 names. It was started 50 years ago by Mrs. Murray's grandmother, Helen Ray Ragner, and taken over later by Mrs. Ragner's daughter, Carolyn Ragner Shaw.

"Mother used to tell who's been dropped, but I don't," Mrs. Murray said. "We drop people if they've died, of course, or moved from Washington, or don't return our questionnaire."

Or misbehaved?

"Oh, yes."

The judgments are made by a board of governors — four women, one man — acting anonymously, she said.

"These are the people who are, let's say, for the most part socially active. They live in the social part of the community. We try to keep it the same size each year, so the new people balance out those who are dropped," Mrs. Murray said. "You don't want it as big as the telephone book."

Soviet Dissident Fears Purging In Russia

MONTREAL (AP) — Soviet dissident Alexander Ginzburg says he fears opponents of the Kremlin regime will be "purged" in the months leading up to the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow.

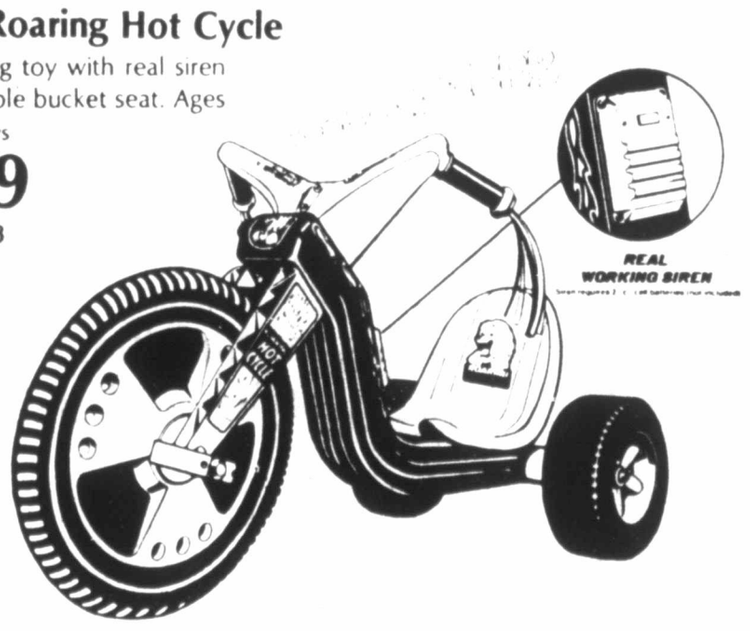

Ginzburg, who was among five Soviet dissidents exchanged last year for wo Soviet citzens foun guilty of espionage in the United Sates, sai Friday he has received information that anyone thought capable of disrupting the athletic events has been exiled to eastern regions of the Soviet Union.

Grassroot Party Leaders Lend Carter Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter holds better than a 2-1 edge over Sen. Edward Kennedy in support among grassroots party leaders for the Democratic presidential nomination, an Associated Press survey shows.

On the Republican side, Ronald Reagan commands a substantial lead for the GOP nomination, followed by John Connally, Howard Baker, former President Gerald Ford, George Bush, Philip Crane and Bob Dole.

The survey, completed Saturday, canvassed Democratic and Republican county chairmen throughout the nation about their first and second choices for their party's nominee in 1980's race for the White House.

Carter's standing in the survey indicates the president's support among the party hierarchy has held up thus far, at least in the pre-primary jockeying. Neither Carter nor Kennedy has announced his candidacy.

County chairmen, Democrat and Republican alike, generally occupy middle rungs of power in the party establishment, and to some degree are not as tightly tied as state chairmen to the preferences of national party leaders.

Carter was picked as the first choice of 1,233 county Democratic officials, compared with 574 for Kennedy.

Some Democratic officials said they were reluctant to come out yet for an undeclared Kennedy candidacy.

"If Kennedy became a candidate in the middle of November, you'd see a lot of chairmen for his candidacy," said Jack Keehan, head of the Democratic party in populous Hillsboro County, New Hampshire, home of the first presidential primary.

"I would like Carter," said Michael McNamee, chairman in St. Clair County, Michigan, and a Carter backer. "However, there is no doubt that the vast majority of members in our party want Kennedy. He is most likely the stronger candidate."

No Democrat emerged with strong backing as an alternative to Carter or Kennedy.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was the first choice of 25 county chairmen. Sen. Patrick Moynihan of New York was picked by 19 and Sen. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois was endorsed by 15.

While Reagan is the solid Republican leader, the race is closer than among the Democrats. Connally, an ex-Democrat, polled surprisingly well among party faithful.

Reagan, the former California governor was the first choice of 861 officials while Connally, a former Texas governor, was picked by 458. Baker, the Senate minority leader from Tennessee, was picked by 213 and Ford by 196. Bush, a fomer GOP chairman, polled 157 and Crane, a congressman from Illiois, 78. Dole, the GOP's 1976 vice presidential candidate, was the first choice of 39 party officials — most of them from his home state of Kansas — while Alexander Haig, former supreme commander of NATO, was endorsed by 28.

"I'd like to support Reagan but his age scares me to death," said Kathrena Franks, who heads GOP in Craig County in far northeastern Oklahoma. "He wears two feet of makeup now trying not to show it ...."

Democratic politicians, when asked to give their second choice, selected Kennedy, but not by as wide a margin as they picked Carter in the first-choice balloting. Many who picked Carter as their first choice refused to pick Kennedy as a second choice, deciding to swing their support elsewhere.

Kennedy led second-choice balloting with 571 votes, while Carter received 366. Next highest was Stevenson, with 164, followed by Brown at 107 and Moynihan with 76. The number of chairmen expressing support for "others" — persons not included in the survey — rose from 90 in the first choice balloting to 286 when asked their second choice.

In several states, Carter supporters criticized Congress for not doing enough to help the president.

"We feel if the Democrats in Congress had supported Carter's program to even an average amount that a president would expect from his party, he would be known by now as one of the oustanding presidents," said Melvin Yager of Spirit Lake, Iowa. On the Republican side, GOP chairmen picked Connally when asked their second choice. But like Kennedy, Connally was not able to muster the margin of support that Reagan had when the chairmen were asked their first choice.

However, the size of Connally's support indicates that his credentials as a one-time Democrat will not hurt him as much as has been predicted by some.

"In all around ability I think John Connally is the best choice, but Republicans tend to be suspect of him due to his association with Lyndon Johnson. Democrats are suspect of him due to his association with Nixon. I seriously doubt if Connally could be elected," said Bush supporter James B.L. Hansard of Wichita Falls, Texas.

Republicans chose Connally 474 to 361 over Reagan as their second choice. Baker followed with support from 273 county officials, then Ford with 231, Bush 195 and Crane, 104.

Haig was the second choice of 58 chairmen, and Dole was the second choice of 54 officials.

"In my county, Reagan probably is No.1 with Connally coming on. Everyone likes Dole, but for the Senate," said Henry B. Jameson, chairman of Dickinson County in Dole's homestate of Kansas.

As might be expected, Kennedy's greatest strength was in the Northeast, including such electoral-vote rich states as New York and Pennsylvania, as well as his homestate of Massachusetts. He also narrowly topped Carter in California, where county chairmen placed their own governor — Brown — a distant third.

Carter was particularly strong in the South and Southwest, but also led in early primary-election states such as New Hampshire, Florida, and Vermont, where a strong showing could boost his candidacy.

"Right off the bat, I'd don't think Kennedy would carry a state in the South," said Harry Rhoden, Democratic chairman for Toombs County in southeast Georgia, Carter's homestate.

GOP officials in several states indicated they are more interested in putting a Republican into the White House than a specific candidate. In the words of Ben Vidricksen of Salina, Kan., "I could live with about six or seven of the Republicans."

Reagan, who narrowly lost the nomination to Ford in 1976 but has kept a high profile as a newpaper columnist and radio commentator, is strong throughout the country, the survey indicates. However, chairmen rated Connally first in his home state of Texas, as well as in New York, Ohio, Michigan and New Mexico.

Democrats In Texas In Favor Of Carter

AUSTIN (AP) — An Associated Press survey shows President Carter an overwhelming favorite among local Democratic leaders in Texas for a second term as president.

Republican county chairmen are split, but former Texas Gov. John B. Connally has a sizeable lead over Ronald Reagan and George Bush.

A number of county chairmen in both parties refused to reveal their political leanings in the AP's mail and telephone poll taken since Oct. 1.

Others were outspoken.

"If Congress would help President Carter more our country would be in better shape," said A.H. Montagne, a Carter backer in Orangefield of highly industrialized Southeast Texas.

"To hell with Kennedy," said Earnest Rea of Childress, another Carter chairman in Northwest Texas.

"Please save us from Gov. Brown," said M.D. Carlock of Winnsboro, a backer of Carter in East Texas.

A West Texas Democratic chairman who did want to be named marked off all suggested Democratic nominees listed on the questionnaire and wrote in broad blue pencil: "We want John Connally."

"In all-around ability I think John Connally is the best choice but Republicans tend to be suspect of him due to his association with Lyndon Johnson," said Republican County Chairman James Hansard in Wichita Falls. "Democrats are suspect of him due to his association with Nixon. ... I seriously doubt if he could be elected." Hansard voted for George Bush.

"I like Ronald Reagan but feel his age is just four years the wrong way," said Republican Dunman Perry Jr. of Mineral Wells, a Connally backer. "We need a full-term president to get us out of the current crisis. ... Reagan is too old."

Of the 160 replies received from the 254 Democratic county chairmen, 95 said their first choice for president was Connally. Sen. Edward Kennedy got 19 votes, Sen. Daniel Moynihan 2, California Gov. Jerry Brown 3, Sen. Adlai Stevenson 4, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen 3, Connally 4, Sen. Henry Jackson 1, Rep. Jim Wright 2, Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards 1, Vice President Walter Mondale 1 and 25 undecided.

For second choice, Democratic chairmen gave Kennedy 35 votes, Carter 16, Brown 8, Moynihan 12, Stevenson 19, Gerald Ford 1, Mondale 5, Jackson 2, Bentsen 3, Frank Church 1, former U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger of Texas 1, former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes 1, and 24 undecided

Twenty-eight of the Democrats answering said they were working for their chosen candidate now. Another 66 said they would work in campaigns later.

Of the 161 replies received from 229 Republican county chairmen, 68 said their first choice was Connally. Forty-five said they favored Reagan and 26 chose Bush. One selected Alexander Haig, three Rep. Phillip Crane, three Ford, one Sen. John Tower, one Rep. Jack Kemp, nd 12 wer undecided.

For second choice, Republicans gave Connally 42, Bush 4, Reagan 23, Sen. Howard Baker 9, Ford 13, Crane 10, former Treasury Secretary William Simon 1, Rep. John Anderson 1, Sen. Robert Dole 5, Haig 5, Sen. Jesse Helms 1 and 12 were undecided.

Fifty-five Republican chairmen said they were actively campaigning for their No. 1 choice while 49 said they would campaign later.

Just how the political choices of the county chairmen will affect Texas voters in the primaries next May 3 is a matter of speculation.

Most of the Democratic chairmen were named after Carter swept the Democratic polls in 1976, and many of the Republican chairmen were named after Reagan forces gained control of the state GOP party in 1976.

In the 1976 general election, Carter carried Texas by a narrow 129,025-vote margin over President Ford with about 4 million votes cast. However, Ford carried the big-city counties of Harris (Houston), Dallas, and Tarrant (Fort Worth), along with Ector, Gregg, Denton, Lubbock, Midland, Potter, Smith, Taylor, Tom Green, Randall and Brazos. Carter carried Bexar (San Antonio), El Paso and Travis (Austin) counties, along with Galveston, Hidalgo, Jefferson, McLennan, Nueces and Wichita.

The AP survey showed Democratic chairmen in Bexar, Dallas, El Paso, Gregg, Denton, Lubbock, Potter, Smith, Tarrant, Taylor, Tom Green, Randall, Nueces, Hidalgo, McLennan, and Wichita counties personally favor Carter. Chairmen in Galveston and Travis counties were undecided. Democratic chairmen in Harris and Collin counties favor Kennedy while the Midland chairman wants Louisiana's Edwin Edwards.

Republican chairmen in Bexar, Cameron, Jefferson, Neces, Ectr, Dallas, Midland, Tarrant, Taylor, and Tom Green were undecided or said they would remain neutral until after the primaries. The Gregg, Brazos, Hidalgo and Wichita chairmen personally favor Bush. Chairmen in El Paso, Travis, Lubbock, Potter and Smith counties favor Connally.

"I'm strictly neutral and will support whomever the nominee is," said Republican chairman Lamar Smith of San Antonio."County chairman must remain neutral until after the convention. We're trying to keep the party unified and let harmony reign."

"I am mystified by those well-meaning Democrats who believe the Democratic president can be replaced by a challenger and the challenger would be elected," said Joyce Peters, Democratic county chairwoman, San Antonio.

Democrat A. Burr Morris of Dalhart, commented, "Democrats are trying to 'out-crook' Nixon's party. Up here in Dalhart, the Democratic party has deserted us, the Republicans also."

"The reason I have given John Connally as my first choice is because I feel he is the most likely to win against a Democrat and I feel he has the charisma to be a leader for everyone," said Republican Mary Whitt of Terrell. She added that "in polling Kaufman County, I find the three top runners to be Connally, Reagan and Kennedy. That is just a man-on-the street poll, not partisan."

"I will not support Kennedy, Brown or Moynihan and will probably go fishing on election day if either of those are nominated," said Louis Pitcock Jr. of Graham, who voted for Carter.

"I will not support Ted Kennedy under any circumstance," said Donald Jenkins of Miami, who voted for Brown. "And if he is nominated, I will resign my position and support the Republican candidate."

"In the event Edward Kennedy is nominated by the party, I can in no way support the party. I will resign as county chairman," said Raymond B. Cameron of Rockwell, a Carter man.

M. Braziel of Point, in East Texas, refused to vote for any of the half dozen Democratic presidential possibilities.

"If inflation is not curbed and fiscal responsibility is not returned to some balance, it will be most difficult for me to support anyone within the party — perhaps I would even support Connally or Ford," he said.

Shallowater's EMS Woes Linked To In-Fighting

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If Shallowater residents could schedule their medical crises, they would probably try to arrange them after the sun goes down, because the town's sole Emergency Medical Services vehicle only runs at night.

Shallowater is one of five rural communities in Lubbock County who were issued their own EMS unit when the service was started here. Abernathy, Idalou, Slaton, Woolforth and Shallowater officials agreed to staff the units with qualified personnel and offer around-the-clock service.

Yet, Shallowater has never provided day service.

Lubbock EMS units must answer all day calls in Shallowater — and that was 35 percent of their total calls last year.

Most of the rural communities had this problem to start with four years ago, acting Lubbock EMS director Doak Enabnit said. However, as their programs grew more experienced and the volunteer staffs grew larger, they were able to staff both day and night service.

Sources close to the Shallowater service attribute the problem to personality conflicts and group in-fighting. The volunteers appear to have split off into two factions — the "old guard" and the newly graduated emergency medical technicians.

Shallowater EMT Pam Stuart has called county commissioner Alton Brazell twice with reports of problems within the Shallowater service. She claims that the organization has the capability to make day runs now, but that the group is preventing her and another EMT from making the day runs — even though they volunteered for the job.

Mrs. Stuart said she was relieved when the newest EMTs graduated in April, thinking then that Shallowater would finally have enough trained personnel to run their EMS unit during the day. She claims the newly elected officers for the EMT association (graduates of the April class) said they couldn't make the day runs themselves because they worked and would not allow Mrs. Stuart to make the runs herself.

"They will not let me make runs now because I'm trying to make them do right," Mrs. Stuart said. "We have people who say they will go to classes" to get EMT certification, she said, and therefore make the day runs.

Mrs. Stuart was "terminated" as a member of the Shallowater group for reasons Jackie Buck, Shallowater EMT vice president, would not disclose. He did say, however, that the conflicts between Mrs. Stuart and the rest of the group began shortly after the election of officers for the group.

Buck said that when the Lubbock County Hospital District gave them the ambulance in 1975, it was with the understanding that Shallowater — at the time — did not have enough staff to meet the 24-hour a day requirements.

Buck said that the group is trying to staff the day runs and are waiting for another EMT class to start to enroll more volunteers.

"We have never been able to gather enough people to run days," Shallowater mayor Joe Cox said. "We're mostly just a bedroom community — We have such a small daytime population."

The EMT association is "marked by turmoil" Cox said, adding that the problem "is really just a personality clash."

Several people who talked about the problem mentioned a particular incident involving an unauthorized daytime run made several months ago. Mrs. Stuart described the incident as "the day the boiler blew up at the dorms" on the Tech campus. Thinking there might be injuries involved, Mrs. Stuart and another EMT took the ambulance unit out of Shallowater and were driving toward Lubbock when information came over the radio that EMS was not needed.

Mrs. Stuart said she responded to the situation because the EMS contract calls for the rural units to provide backup service into Lubbock.

She also said the mayor complained about them driving "his ambulance" outside Shallowater.

Cox said Mrs. Stuart and the EMT who accompanied her simply overheard the discussion on the boiler explosion over the police scanner and called the EMS operator to see if they could come into Lubbock and help. He said he objected not to their answering a Lubbock call, but to their responding to a call not directed to them.

"We need to go through regular EMS channels," Cox said.

Cox also said he was told that Mrs. Stuart and the other EMT broke the lock on the ambulance barn to get the unit out for the run. However, Mrs. Stuart said the lock on the door always has had problems and that it had been somewhat damaged before they arrived.

Mrs. Stuart claims she has been falsely accused of several things by the EMT association. And she says the association sent her a letter saying they had accepted her oral resignation — a resignation she says she never gave.

"We're the closest unit to Lubbock," Mrs. Stuart said, adding that Shallowater could provide effective backup service into the city.

"I can't see them keeping the unit out here if they're not going to use it. I have been fighting this since May," Mrs. Stuart said.

Mrs. Stuart said she believes the troubles with the Shallowater service is contributing to the Lubbock EMS deficit because Lubbock units are answering so many calls in the small community. The expense of oil and gas to make the out-of-town runs adds up, she said.

"I think you would have to say that it adds to the deficit," Lubbock EMS spokesman Enabnit said, but he stressed that the Shallowater problem was by no means the major source of the deficit.

The rural contracts are up for renewal in November, Enabnit said, and the issue of providing day service will probably be taken up again then. As for the Shallowater problems, "I've been out to their city hall twice," he said. "They could run that ambulance during the day."

"It's a mess out there," Enabnit added. "We can use that thing," he said of the Shallowater unit, "but we want service out there."

"They ought to be working together to save lives," he commented.

Vietnam Vets To Receive Area Aid

Several counseling professionals and community service agencies have joined together in a common effort to assist Vietnam veterans in the Lubbock area.

Organized by the local office of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV), the project is part of a nationwide Vietnam Vet Outreach Program. The Lubbock office is located in Room 414, Federal Building, 1205 Texas Avenue.

The program is an outgrowth of an extensive three-year project on Vietnam veterans funded by the 620,000-member association of wartime disabled veterans.

This was the "Forgotten Warrior Project" conducted by John P. Wilson, Ph.D., at Cleveland State University.

The research showed that while the vast majority of Vietnam era veterans have readjusted well to civilian life, notes Ronald E. McCarty, organizer of the Lubbock office, a significant number have serious difficulties that can be traced to their experience during the war.

It is these veterans that the DAV Vietnam Vet Outreach Program is primarily aimed at helping, according to McCarty.

The DAV is a nonprofit, private organization.

Tax Information Available To Deaf

Texans with hearing impairments now can get state sales tax information when calling the state comptroller's office in Austin.

With the assistance of Southwestern Bell, State Comptroller Bob Bullock has expanded the department's toll-free number (1-800-252-5555) so that deaf citizens may dial and ask questions via teletype.

"People who own or have access to home teletype or porta-printer may communicate directly with the comptroller's office, daily from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday," said Jim Phillips, director of sales tax in the comptroller's office. "When our switchboard operators receive an incoming all that generates a high pitch tone, they immediately route it to one of the office teletypes."

Phillips praised the system, saying "it opens a much needed link with our hearing-impaired citizens."

Phone company officials say that as more teletype equipment becomes available, many banks, utilities and other government offices will begin similar programs.

Theater Pipe Organ To Be Retired

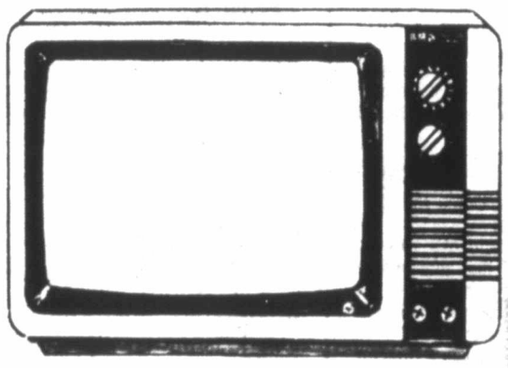

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A movie theater pipe organ weighing 40 tons and standing 40 feet tall is being retired and members of the American Theater Organ Society are working to find a new showplace instrument.

The organ, which required five freight cars when it was brought to Los Angeles in 1923 from its Chicago builder, W.W. Kimball Co, had been in the Wilshern Theater since 1933. The theater is slated for demolition.

EARLY MORNING CRASH SCENE — A 19-year-old Lubbock man was in satisfactory condition at Health Sciences Center Hospital Saturday evening with injuries received about 1:20 a.m. Saturday when his pickup collided with two vehicles parked in the 900 block of Avenue U. Police reports indicate the pickup was traveling south on Avenue U when it collided with the Datsun pickup in foreground. Police said the Datsun truck hit an auto parked in front of it and that all three vehicles overturned. The driver of the pickup, identified as Jay Edward Upton of 1513 32nd St., was pinned in the cab of his overturned vehicle for almost 30 minutes. (Staff Photo by Bill Janscha)

Carter Stretches Lead In Florida's Caucuses

MIAMI (AP) — President Carter stretched his lead over Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Saturday in Florida's Democratic county caucuses by capturing many small counties and running close in Kennedy's Miami stronghold.

Unofficial results from 57 of 67 counties showed Carter with 264 delegates,Kennedy with 31, AFL-CIO organizers with 19 and 19 uncommitted. However, those 57 counties have only 38 percent of the 878 delegates elected on Saturday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell described Carter as "very pleased."

Carter's campaign manager, Jay Hakes, claimed victory in late afternoon based on the results of surveys his campaign workers took at caucuses. Hakes also claimed victory in the Miami area — a feat he and the Kennedy campaigners had agreed beforehand would be a "knockout punch" for the president.

Focuses On Delegates

The campaign focused on the election of 879 delegates to the mid-November Democratic State Convention. They'll join 838 other delegates, including party leaders, elected officials and their appointees, to vote in a non-binding presidential straw ballot.

At stake in the caucuses and straw ballot, really, is nothing more than attention from the press and public. Florida's delegates to the 1980 Democratic National Convention in New York will be chosen in the state's March 11 presidential primary.

Nevertheless, the caucuses and straw ballot may have a psychological effect on the national political scene, in part because of the interest that developed after Kennedy, D-Mass., hinted strongly in September that he would challenge Carter.

Carter Thanks Staff

At the Carter headquarters in Orlando, Powell said Carter called the campain staff to thank them.

Powell said the President's showing is "a very clear signal that anyone who chooses to challenge the president of the United States must be prepared to fight every step of the way."

Draft-Kennedy campaign director Sergio Bendixen, a Democratic national committeeman, refused to concede Miami's 188 delegates, the largest bloc of any county.

Rain over populous South Florida's big cities kept the turn-out below the 50,000 registered Democrats who were expected to vote.

With hundreds of names on the ballot in the larger counties, party officials estimated it could be days before official results are tallied in some areas.

Dead Heat Indicated

But an unofficial Associated Press survey of most voters leaving caucuses in four of Florida's largest counties indicated Carter and Kennedy in a dead heat in Miami and Tampa, a Carter sweep in Jacksonville and a Kennedy victory in Fort Lauderdale.

The four counties — Dade, Hillsborough, Broward and Duval — elect 394 delegates, but there was no way to conclude from the poll how many each side had won.

In Miami and surrounding Dade County, which has the biggest delegation with 188, the AP survey showed 1,727 for Carter, 1,672 for Kennedy, 688 for the labor slate that included both Carter and Kennedy supporters and 187 who were uncommitted or refused to answer.

In the Tampa area, the contest over Hillsborough County's 45 delegates drew 740 Democrats for Carter, 796 for Kennedy, 586 for labor and 220 uncommitted or not responding.

In Broward County, Kennedy led with 2,054 for his slate, 960 for Carter's, 689 for labr's and 41 uncommitted or not responding. The Fort Lauderdale area has 116 delegates, second largest in the state.

The AP survey in Duval County, whose 45 delegates had been written off by Kennedy partisans, found 1,219 for Carter, 657 for Kennedy, 398 for labor and 145 uncommitted.

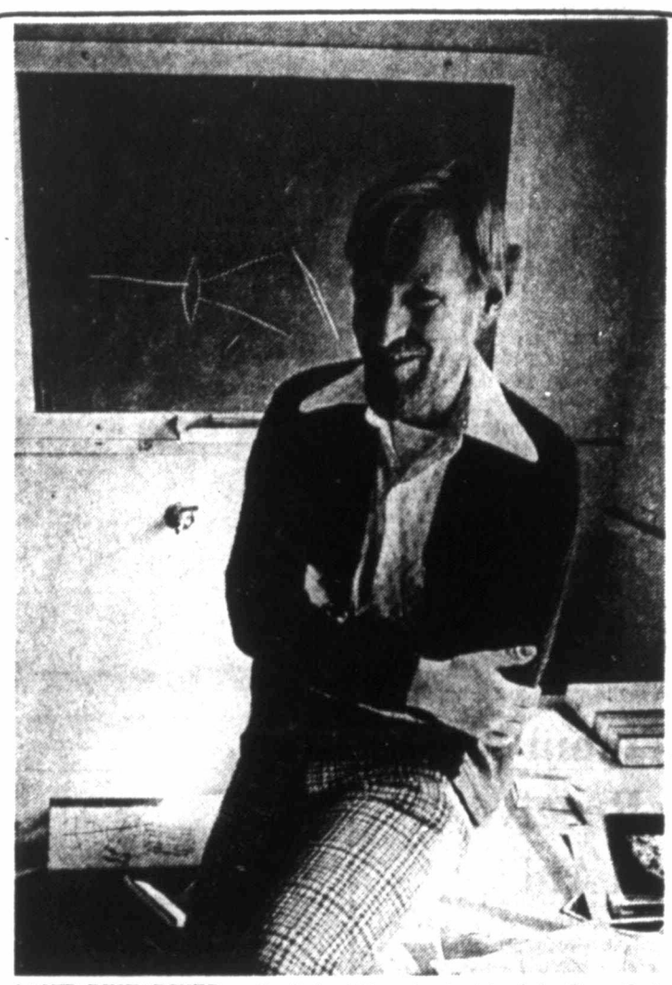

The campaign began last June when two Miami Democrats who helped Carter win his important 1976 victory in Florida — Bendixen and Dade County Chairman Mike Abrams — formally broke with Carter and set up a draft-Kennedy campaign.

As the Kennedy effort picked up steam, Hake, Carter's Florida campaign manager, former Interior Department aide and political science professor, gradually shifted his attention from preparing for the March primary to girding for the caucuses.

Many Democratic leaders agreed that the Saturday caucuses throughout the state were more a test of logistics and organizational skill than of popular sentiment. Both sides took elaborate steps to gain any possible advantage in the confusing caucus system.

In the larger counties, polling places were set up where Democrats could come in to vote for delegates. The Carter and Kennedy campaigns bused their supporters to the polls in chartered fleets, giving them hot coffee and doughnuts while they waited in line. The Kennedy forces said they suffered a serious setback late Friday when 14 of 20 buses they had leased were canceled. Frantically, they located nine replacements.

Kennedy has avoided any formal ties to the organization pushing his candidacy in Florida. When asked about the contest, the senator has minimized its importance, saying he believes the Iowa caucuses in January will be the first true test between Carter and himself.

LASER RESEARCHER — Dr. Roland Menzel, who joined the Texas Tech faculty this fall, has been experimenting for about three years with identifying fingerprints using a laser beam. The FBI, Scotland Yard, Ontario Provincial Police, Army Criminal Investigors, and Illinois police already have begun using the revolutionary methods to solve cases where evidence is elusive. (Staff Photo by Gary Davis) tions, and the people having the questions not knowing the answers," he said.

But Menzel began trying to use what scientists had considered a "nuisance" for years when an associate at the research center met an officer with the Ontario police interested in using lasers in police investigations.

Compared to conventional dusting techniques to retrieve fingerprints, using a laser is highly successful, Menzel said, "but it fails miserably when the surface itself emits a lot of light" or poorly accepts the print.

In such cases, a print can be treated by dusting with fluorescent powder, staining with a highly fluorescent dye, or spraying with chemicals reacting with the fingerprint residue to give off fluorescent colors detectable by laser beams.

But, treating prints is in the experimental stages and no "recipes" have been developed to reveal specific types of prints, Menzel noted.

"There are a number of instances" where these techniques fail, he said, noting that "I've wrecked evidence using them."

Menzel, who has been using lasers for 10 years, also has discovered that the beam will pick up prints on human skin, although the average rate of success is not very impressive.

However, when he finds the right magnetic dusting powder, the "process is almost a sure win," he said.

The scientist also has found that lasers can detect prints after weathering effects, for example, using laser beams to pick up prints from books that had not been touched since he was in school 10 years ago.

Fingerprints must be dusted within a few days using conventional techniques or the prints will dry out so that the dusting powder will not stick to them. Some conventional methods will reveal old prints, but they suffer limitations, he said.

In his research, Menzel shot a bluish-green argon laser beam through a lens and onto a previously touched article. He then viewed the article through a filter and observed the fluorescent prints.

He also experimented with a fingerprint on a white sheet of paper which was baked three days at 75 degrees Centigrade and then soaked five minutes in running water before it was allowed to dry at room temperature.

In future research, "I'm going to see if there's a systematic way of determining the age of prints by their color," he said.

Although the technique is simple, the scientist warned that success depends upon humidity, temperature, surface texture and the prints.

Typical prints are exposed one to 10 seconds under the light before they are photographed, he said, but some surfaces may require exposure for as long as 20 minutes.

One drawback to laser use, Menzel said, is the immovability of the equipment. Some scientists, however, argue this is "just as well" because laser machines can be dangerous and amateurs might only destroy rather than uncover evidence.

"The laser I am recommending," he said, "requires 460 volts for three phases and 50 amps per phase," as well as water serving as a cooling agent.

Menzel said law enforcement agencies are using the new method even though "evidence must be brought to the lab. Florida police once cut up a van and sent it to me. In some cases it's worth it."

Ontario has purchased a laser for its forensic lab, said Mendez, who estimated the cost of a laser at between $15,000 and $30,000.

"They didn't bat an eye (at the cost)," he said. "But that's the cost of about two police cars and cheaper than some microscopes they use in their labs."

Menzel plans to obtain a laser and return to his experiments within two months, but does not expect "to get a lab into full swing for about nine months."

He has written several articles on his findings to date, and has written a book, "Fingerprint Detection with Laser," which is expected to be published early next year.

Mercy Flights Approved By Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Phnom Penh government Saturday gave the go-ahead for a massive international airlift of food and medicine destined for hundreds of thousands of people said to be facing death by starvation and disease in Cambodia.

A British Royal Air Force transport flew from Bangkok to Phnom Penh on Saturday, the first relief flight of an air bridge that will carry more than $100 million in food and medicine from 30 nations.

The U.S. State Department says $7 million in rice and other food — part of the international effort — is ready to go to Cambodia once legal questions concerning delivery are resolved. Bills now before Congress call for between $20 million and $30 million in aid to Cambodia next year.

Jacques Danois, spokesman here for the U.N. Children's Emergency Fund — UNICEF, said Cambodian authorities in Phnom Penh granted permission for the daily flights into the capital even though they, UNICEF and the International Red Cross still were negotiating details of the operation.

Danois said the RAF C-130 Hercules turbo-prop would transport 15 tons of rice, vegetable oil and other supplies a day, and that a chartered aircraft would take in medical equipment, educational materials and food.

Western relief experts say that to stabilize conditions in the country, where some say as many as 2 million people are in imminent danger of dying of starvation, about 700 tons of food a day will be needed for several months. And it will have to be properly distributed, they say, in a country where the basic infrastructure of society has been destroyed.

The Hercules took three vehicles and other supplies to Phnom Penh on Saturday, although it was at first uncertain whether the aircraft would be allowed to make the regular flights. To date, only irregular flights by Red Cross and UNICEF have been made.

Pact Rejection Danger Cited By President of the inflation picture, we would have the same inflation rate we had a year ago or two years ago," the president said. "What we're trying to do is deal with inflation on a long-term, consistent and persistent basis.

"I believe inflation will turn downward toward the end of the year," Carter said.

He also said that interest rates "really go down with inflation, and that the only way to get them down is to get inflation down."

On buying now to beat higher prices later, Carter said, "My daddy always said, 'If you don't need something, it's not cheap.'"

Carter suggested that inflation could have at least one psychological advantage for the nation.

"I think in the long run, our awareness that the energy supply will be short and the prices very high, will encourage Americans to do what they have been unwilling to do — conserve," Carter said.

Turning to politics, Carter said it is "unfortunate" the presidential campaign is beginning so early. He said he favors a single six-year term for presidents, although there is ony a "remote" possibility the Constitution could be modfied to achieve that.

"Since I'vebeen in office I've become more and more convinced that one six-year term would be better," Carter said.

"We have too much of an emphasis by the news media, in my opinion, on the political motivations of a president almost as soon as a president takes office ...

"I think the injection of politics so early in the election year — already, as a matter of fact — is unfortunate."

Airport May Receive Added Federal Funds

better chance of receiving the funds. That always makes projects and progress better and easier."

Howard agrees that Coffee's early bird philosophy is a good one to have. "The FAA likes to plan ahead as far as possible, so we can be assured that our federal money goes toward high-priority projects," he said. "We're just trying to make the best possible use of the money.

"We have three basic criteria — projects that improve safety at the airport, projects that improve the airport's capacity to handle more people, and projects that improve the airport's efficiency," he said. "And we always try to go with our highest-priority projects first. But if we grant some money to someone for a project and they can't get going on it, we'll look around to see who is ready."

The airport development money comes from taxes collected by airlines, air freight companies and other businesses working from the airports across the nation. All the tax revenue is placed in a trust fund for the FAA to dish out for airport development projects as it sees fit.

"All that moeny is spread around the country by regions and districts," Howard explained. "Lubbock falls under the Albuquerque district, which includes all of New Mexico and West Texas. So you're competing with Amarillo, El Paso, Midland, San Angelo and the others around here for that project money."

"We know we're competing with these other cities for that money, so we've got to be ready to commence with our projects at the drop of a hat," Coffee said. "We've also strived to develop a good rapport between ourselves and all those we're involved with, like our engineering firm, so the FAA will feel confident that when they give us money, we'll use it wisely and efficiently. That could be the determining factor if some money came down to just two airports that were almost equal in every other way."

Despite the fact that the FAA receives many more applications each year than it can possibly fund, some money from unfinished, aborted or slow-moving projects is left over each year. At the end of each fiscal year, all leftover money is redistributed to airports that may have been denied earlier or have more projects on the board.

But in this case, all airports in the nation are vying for the money, not just those in the individual districts, said Howard. "The competition gets a little stiffer here, but there are fewer airports ready to move on new projects," he said. "So it can work both ways. But an airport that's ready to advertise for bids stands a good shot of getting some money."

The 10-year Airport Development and Assistance Program bill expires with fiscal 1980 and must be replaced by Congress for the airports to continue receiving these funds. Both Howard and Coffee mentioned that while the next bill is being hammered into shape in Congress there is some chance that major hub airports like Dallas-Fort Worth or Los Angeles International would be eliminated from the program and allowed to charge a use fee to fund their own projects. Should that happen, airport patrons could see reduced airline fares and freight rates, because there would be fewer taxes to collect to fund the smaller amount of projects.

"We don't really know what would happen under that sort of situation," Howard said. "And of course, it's a long way off, even if it should come about. The airports remaining in the program would still get about the same amount of money made available to them."

Coffee stressed that the items on the Lubbock capital projects list had not been mapped out in detail and that nothing on the list was assured. "These are just things we're looking at pretty hard for the next five years," he said.

They include:

— The development and expansion of a general aviation site for private planes to use. This project, planned for 1982, could be added onto an existing taxiway and is expected to cost about $2.6 million, according to the letter.

— An extension of the east-west runway that would include acquisition of land, relocation of county and access roads, developing a new clear zone for the arriving and departing planes and construction of the new runway itself. Targeted for 1980 through 1982, this portion is estimated to cost $6.7 million.

— Expansion of the new terminal building in anticipation of new airlines needing space would call for expansion of the apron and taxiways outside the existing terminal as well as an extension of the terminal building. Also under consideration in this item is a new air freight building. Total cost for this portion is anticipated at $7.89 million, with a time frame running from 1981 through 1984.

— A short north-south runway relocation would be made necessary if the apron for the terminal expansion is approved. Cost of this relocation would be about $1.2 million.

— A parallel north-south runway is expected in the 20 year master plan, but before it could be constructed the city would need to acquire the land to put it on. By 1985, the airport plan calls for $3.7 million to be spent buying land.

— Phase 2 of the parking lot expansion is penciled in for 1982. As the demand for space grows, so must the parking lots. About $2.4 million is figured for that cost.

— A reliever general aviation airport adjoining the main airport is expected for 1984, accordig to the letter. That facility, tentatively planned for 700 acres, would cost about $3.5 million for the land. The aiport buildings would come later.

"Remember, this is just what we're looking at, what we'd like to see happen," Coffee said. "We'll just have to see what the FAA thinks of them."

LULAC Sets Political Unit

WASHINGTON (AP) -The League of United Latin American Citizens formed a national political unit for the first time in its history Saturday with a goal of increasing Hispanic voter turnout in the 1980 elections.

"We feel as the nation's oldest and largest Hispanic organization we have the will and the network to encourage voter participation," LULAC President Ruben Bonilla said.

The Corpus Christi, Tex., lawyer was elected head of the organization earlier this year on a platform of increased political activity for LULAC, which has about 100,000 members.

Bonilla formed a political arm for the Texas branch of LULAC in 1978.

The group will be called Hispanics Organized for Political Education, or HOPE. Its headquarters will be in Washington.

dollar spent."

"They work hard to do that and to keep what they've accumulated," he added.

Biggs noted that the accumulation of reserves is slowing because of inflation and he warned that a small deficit is possible in 1980.

"Next year is going to be a different story," he said. "The cost of fuel is so great, if the R&B (road and bridge) units have another wet year like they did this summer, fuel is going to eat us alive next year. It did this year.

"If we don't watch our Ps and Qs, we're liable to have a deficit next year. We're just going to have to be real tight-fisted."

Biggs said Lubbock County's being debt-free and having large reserves is a major source of pride with him and fellow Commissioners Jim Lancaster of Idalou, Alton Brazell and Edgar Chance.

Judge Shaw sits on the court but only votes in case of a tie.

"We go to other places and talk to other government officials, and they're just amazed that Lubbock County is debt-free and has a budget surplus," Biggs said.

Houston Porno Shops Close

HOUSTON (AP) — Pornography dealers all over the city were shut down Saturday following a federal court ruling allowing police to enforce a new anti-obscenity law, but a few vowed to stay open.

The 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ruled Friday that police here and in other Texas cities could enforce the law while the court considers appeals that it is unconstitutional.

The law broadens the definition of obscene materials and is designed to make prosecution easier.

Police Chief Harry Caldwell said that as soon as he received word that a temporary injunction barring enforcement of the law was lifted, Houston's small, but "effective" vice squad would "got to work with diligence" to keep Houston "a decent community."

"Everything is the same at Bellaire News," he said. "I'm sure there will be an arrest here no later than Wednesday, maybe Monday. If they want to come out and arrest us, we'll go to court."

He said his business had stopped selling sexual devices because they are specifically named in the new law, but was continuing to carry other merchandise showing various sexual behavior.

Judy McMillan, secretary-treasurer of Five Star Films, a distributor of adult movies, said the chain of cinemas called Theatres West would not close.

"It has to be obscene to be against the law, and since we don't think they (the movies) are obscene, we're going to remain open," she said.

By WAYNE PANTER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock race driver Malcolm Garrett Jr. departs this week for Atlanta and another bid to capture a national championship in the Sports Car Club of America's annual Road Atlanta racing classic.

Open solely to top-finishing drivers in the SCCA's various U.S. geographic regions, the week-long race meet brings together not only the top racing talent but a who's who of international motor racing as automakers vie to capture prestigious racing laurels.

The trip to Atlanta will be Garrett's fourth in five seasons of driving in the SCCA's Trans-Am B Sedan class. Previously he won national honors in drag racing competition.

This year his credentials are perhaps the best in the field; in winning a second consecutive Southwestern Division championship, Garrett's Datsun 710 sedan finished first in six of seven races. He was second on that other occasion. The feat is unprecedented in SCCA competition.

The 32-year-old insurance broker credits painstaking preparation along with accumulating experience for his season's achievement.

"Never before have we gone to Atlanta so well prepared," he said last week.

Noting "outstanding" help from Lubbock sponsors, principal among them Continental Motors, agent for the Nissan Corp., and Dubose Automotive Machine, which has performed engine work on the car, he said "The car worked flawlessly all season. I think we're getting maximum performance from it."

In his three previous appearances at Atlanta Garrett finished 19th, 11th and 19th. The latter finish, last year, nevertheless was his best performance, he feels.

"We were running sixth (in a field of 30 after qualifying 14th) when a spark plug wire came off. We had to stop to repair that, and this is a race where you go non-stop to stay ahead."

Conducted over a 2.52-mile, 12-turn course, the race sees B-sedan class speeds of 60 to 148 mph, with drivers averaging 107 mph in qualifying in around a minute, 40 seconds.

"Last year in qualifying 14th I was within a second of the fastest qualifier, so you see it gets down to who can carve a tenth of a second off his time some place on the course," Garrett noted.

And that will be his primary objective this year.

Garrett leaves for Atlanta Wednesday, towing the race car in an enclosed trailer behind a motorhome.

On Friday Nissan has reserved the track for drivers running Nissan equipment, and Garrett will run as many laps as possible to refamiliarize himself with the course and to set about finding those elusive tenths-seconds.

There'll be more practice the following Monday and Tuesday, but those sessions are limited to 30 minutes daily for each class of car.

Wednesday and Thursday are qualifying days, with the several races spread out over Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 26-28. Garrett's event is scheduled late Saturday, 19 laps over the tortuous, hilly course.

Garrett's father will accompany him to Atlanta, and joining the pair the following Wednesday will be his pit crew, consisting of Mike Horton, Steve Brodie and Garrett's son, Matt, 10, who handles timing chores for the crew.

They'll return to Lubbock early in the following week, hopefully with a national title, but certainly with valuable new experience — plus some outstanding memories — to take into the 1980 racing season.

Panel Cites Disposal Company For Oil Contaminated Roads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil contaminated by toxic chemicals was laid on roads near Corrigan, Texas, because of a waste disposal company's negligence, a congressional panel has concluded.

The report released Saturday also said the district office of the Texas Department of Water Resources did not conduct an adequate investigation and "therefore, failed to discover a potential public health problem until after any damage was already done."

The House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations chaired by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, had subpoenaed shipping records and held a public hearing last May in Corrigan.

The oil found on nine East Texas roads contained toxic chemicals, principally nitrobenzene. Cyanide was also found in trace amounts.

The oil came from the Browning-Ferris Chemical Services Inc. transfer station near Nederland, Texas.

"The company accepts full responsibility and, to its credit, promptly consented to remove the contaminated sections of eight of those roads under orders from the Texas Department of Water Resources," the report said.

The company testified that the contamination was accidental and the procedures leading to the problem had been eliminated.

"However, documents...suggest, at a minimum, a pattern of negligence on the part of the management of the Nederland facility prevailed through Nov. 2, 1978," the report said.

The accounting controls necessary to prevent improper disposal were absent before that date, it said.

The report added that although the contaminated portions of the roads had been removed, "The extent of contamination of adjacent land and water is unknown."

The water resources department's district office in Orange, Texas, received a complaint on Nov. 2, 1978, that cyanide was mixed with the waste oil being dumped near Corrigan.

The state investigator assigned to the case told the subcommittee his check of the records showed proper accounting and disposal of all cyanide shipments.

The subcommittee, however, examined the same records and found it impossible to track the cyanide shipments' movements.

The report said the investigator's supervisor "was so convinced of the company's good faith...that he theorized (at the hearing) the source of contamination to be the failure of a truck driver to properly wash out a tanker prior to the loading of road oil.

"Clearly, these two enforcement officials did not perform the investigation necessary to insure that the public health was protected," the report concluded.

The report also said Browning-Ferris did not know the final disposition of materials sent to small recyclers in Louisiana.

"The subcommittee discovered that these small waste oil firms do much of their business with asphalt contractors in Louisiana and Mississippi, thus it is possible that roads in those states may also be contaminated with toxic substances," the report said.

The comments on the Corrigan road oil were contained in the subcommittee's report on hazardous waste disposal throughout the nation.

"The hazardous waste disposal problem cannot be overstated," the report said. "Because of years of inadequate disposal practices and the absence of regulation, hundreds and perhaps thousands of these sites now pose an imminent hazard to man and the environment."

The report said federal and state governments are "totally inadequate" in their efforts to control hazardous waste disposal.

Preparations Under Way For Tahoe Exploration

TAHOE CITY, Calif. (AP) — Final preparations are under way for Monday's submarine exploration of the mysterious depths of the Sierra Nevada's oval-shaped Lake Tahoe, one of the nation's deepest lakes.

The work will be done in the shadow of lofty mountain peaks and the gaudy, crowded south shore district of dozens of high-rise gambling spas that jam the Nevada side of the lake.

Diving around the clock Monday through Thursday, the 17-foot-long Pioneer I, manned by three specialists, will explore depths to 1,200 feet in an attempt to unravel the lake's mysteries. The lake, with its surface 6,228-feet above sea level, is estimated to be 1,640-feet deep.

Crater Lake in Oregon is the nation's deepest at 1,932 feet. The world's deepest is Lake Baykal in the Soviet Union, which is 5,714 feet deep.

Lake Tahoe is 23 miles long and 12 miles wide and straddles the California-Nevada border 200 mile east of San Francisco between the Sierra and the Carson Range.

The lake, carved by glaciers, is so deep that it never freezes. Even in winter with air temperatures below zero, the lake temperature never gets below 39 degrees. The lake's crystal clarity is renowned. Visibility extends to 130 feet in some places.

The $30,000-plus project, financed by the San Jose Mercury News, is headed by University of California at Davis limnologist Charles R. Goldman, an expert in the physical, chemical and biological properties of fresh waters.

He said the expedition will study underwater canyons, pinnacles, mountains and gorges, spawning patterns of Mackinaw and trout thought to grow to 40 pounds. The sub will prowl the depths to 600 feet, and observe algae and small creatures related to surface pollution.

The project affords "a rare opportunity to execute firsthand visual research in an area which, to date, has been studied only by surface vessels and subsurface testing. ... We will be going where no one has ever gone before — a frontier right on our doorstep," he said.

Goldman said Divers have reported strange features, including "underwater warm springs," beneath the surface of the chilly mountain lake.

"Their origin and geological properties are virtually unknown," he said, calling Lake Tahoe "in some respects a miniature ocean." He and his associates hope to record the unique features of the lake with movie and videotape photography.

Chartered from Martech International of Houston, Pioneer I is fitted with powerful floodlights and a mechanical arm that can grasp and retrieve objects. The year-old sub also has the capability of taking deep water and core samples.

P. Anthony Ridder, president and publisher of the Mercury News, said the newspaper's involvement in the project is that of an interested and responsible member of the community.

"Lake Tahoe is very important to our area," he said. "Many of our residents enjoy Lake Tahoe for summer and winter recreational activities, and are very concerned with the lake's condition. ... I trust that the findings of this first-ever submarine research will provide enlightening results."

MOSCOW UNUSUALLY WARM

MOSCOW (AP) — Ten days after Moscow's first snow, residents here were strolling about the Soviet capital Saturday under a glowing autumn sun in near-record-high temperatures.

Normal temperatures for this time of year are about 39 to 41 degrees. But on Friday and Saturday, Moscow temperatures reached 64 degrees.

Weather forecasters say the unusually warm weather and sunshine will continue at least through Monday because of a large high pressure system that has moved into European Russia from Africa.

Good Spirits, Arrests Precede Dallas Game

DALLAS (UPI) — Except for the worry and work, police don't hardly mind the once-a-year madness in the jammed downtown streets nearly as much as they once did.

The madness is the strolling, yelling, hook'em Horning and boomer Soonering of the eve of the Texas-Oklahoma football game. New Police Chief Glen King watched it Friday night, and pronounced it not nearly the shambles it was 10 years ago when he first saw it.

"It's changed an awful lot," said King. "The crowds are much better controlled. The safety factor is a lot higher."

Police arrested 220 people between twilight and the early morning hours, mainly on charges of public drunkenness or failing to obey an officer. They said mainly the celebrants merely cursed one another and drank beer like it was water.

Police spokesman Bob Shaw said 137 of those were jailed, but that few of them were students at either university.

There were no fights, and there was no harassment of the 350 police officers who stood along the streets, enforcing such new subtleties as one way pedestrian traffic on opposite sidewalks along Commerce Street, the key thoroughfare for the gatherers.

One policeman suffered minor injuries, but he was attacked by another officer due to a misunderstanding. Shaw said the vice officer, dressed in street clothes, was subduing a man with a choke hold when the man's female companion hit the officer in the back of the head with a beer bottle and knocked him down.

The officer was applying a choke hold to her when the uniformed officer came to her aid. Shaw said the vice officer suffered little more than an injured ego from being attacked by a fellow officer.

"The weather was good and the beer was flowing," Shaw said, and all those good spirits probably prevented fights and the property destruction of past years.

Among those arrested was an enterprising entrepreneur who was selling beer for $1 a can from the back of a van as he drove through downtown. He was charged with violating the city's liquor laws, Shaw said.

Rhett Stein, owner and manager of State Wide Bail Bonds Co., said one thing about the night never changes, and that is profits for downtown businesses, and for his business in particular. He said business was up 200 percent over a normal Friday night.

Becky Kubick of Oklahoma City, wearing red slacks and red-trimmed shirt, walked down the street yelling "Boomer Sooner" into a bullhorn. She said she returned to the United States for Friday night, and Saturday's game, and that she had one rule of conduct: "Don't come with any inhibitions."

Citizens Protest Nazi Gathering

WALNUT CREEK, Calif. (AP) — More than 800 persons — many of them holding signs and chanting "Death to the Nazis" — gathered in a city park Saturday to protest a demonstration by a small group of American Nazi Party members.

There were no injuries and no arrests, although police said they used the irritant Mace to keep the demonstrators from tearing down a barrier separating them from the Nazis.

The eight Nazis — eight men and a woman — who arrived at Heather Farms Park in a pickup truck, used bullhorns to hurl insults at the protesters, calling them "animals" and describing President Carter's administration as Jewish-controlled.

The protesters, separated from the Nazis by a barbed wire barrier erected by authorities, pelted the Nazis with dirt clods wrapped in newspaper and chanted anti-Nazi slogans.

Among those present was black militant Angela Davis, who said racism "is growing in the U.S.," but added that she was "opposed to a violent confrontation with the Nazis."

Miss Davis was acquitted in 1972 of murder charges stemming from the bloody Marin County courthouse shootout in which a judge, two convicts and their accomplices were slain.

Jim Harris, a member of Breira, a Jewish anti-racist organization, said he also opposed a confrontation so long as "they are not putting a bullet in my back or threatening my children."

School On Ignition To Open Monday

A four-day short course on automotive transistor ignition systems will get underway Monday evening at National Distributing Co., 1012 17th St.

The 12-hour course is limited to 30 students and enrollment had approached that number late last week. "We can accomodate three or four more," a spokesman for the school said.

Conducted by James R. Calamon as part of the Texas State Technical Institute's mobile automotive program, the course will take up function, design and testing of original equipment transistorized ignition systems as found on late model foreign and domestic automobiles.

The $20 fee for the course covers tuition and all materials. The class will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday and nightly at the same hours through Thursday.

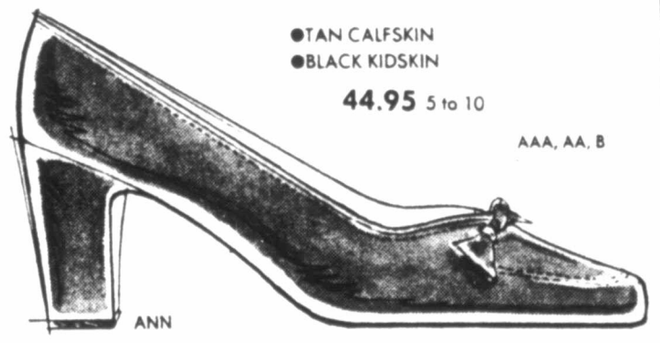

The school is the first in a series of four to be held in the next several weeks. Slated Oct. 22-23 is a school on operation of Allen automotive diagnostic systems; Oct. 31-Nov. 1, fuel injection systems, and Nov. 26-29, carburetion and emission control systems. Inquiries may be directed to Jim Lindsey at National Distributing Co., 744-1215.

TECH DROPS SECOND CONFERENCE GAME

Razorbacks Pen Up Red Raiders 20-6

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

The autumn sun broke through Lubbock's cold, gray, lifeless sky only momentarily Saturday afternoon — a couple minutes before the conclusion of the football matchup between Texas Tech and Arkansas.

Those golden rays of light arrived just in time to escort some 47,000 disappointed Red Raider fans to their cars, the undefeated Razorbacks to their dressing room and the punchless Raiders into the loss column.

Two big plays — a 76-yard scoring pass-run play from quarterback Kevin Scanlon to split end Bobby Duckworth and a 67-yard punt return by Gary Anderson for another touchdown — enabled 12th-ranked Arkansas to hog up a 20-6 Southwest Conference victory.

For Arkansas, the win was the fifth of the season against no losses. More importantly, the victory leaves the Hogs with a 2-0 mark in conference action.

The loss ended Tech's hopes of a

SWC title this year. The Red Raiders are now 1-2 in league play and 2-3-1 on the season.

Neither squad moved the football with much success or consistency during the course of the contest. But the Razorbacks came up with the big play when they needed it.

Duckworth's 76-yard pass-run touchdown effort snapped a 3-3 second-quarter deadlock and provided the Hogs with enough points at that stage of the game to record their 19th victory over Tech in 23 attempts.

Scanlon was given excellent protection by his offensive line when he dropped back on first and 10 at the Razorback 24 yard line. Duckworth split Tech's zone coverage with a well-executed pump-and-go pattern and Scanlon threaded a perfect pass to his open target.

Duckworth grabbed the pass close to the Tech sideline near the midfield stripe, cut inside a step to avoid safety Ted Watts and raced the remaining 45 yards to paydirt and the winning points.

It was Duckworth who stung the Red Raiders two seasons ago when he hauled in a 59-yard scoring pass from quarterback Ron Calcagni late in the fourth quarter to provide the Hogs with a 17-14 victory.

"Bobby Duckworth won the game for us down here two years ago," Scanlon said in the locker room. "He made a super run after the catch today. I'm sure Tech will remember him."

Anderson's 67-yard punt return and touchdown came with 3:20 remaining in the final period. Needless to say, it dimmed all hope the Red Raiders might have had about pulling out a last-second victory.

The 6-1, 175-pound freshman took Maury Buford's punt at the Arkansas 33, was almost knocked off his feet by a Razorback blocker, escaped the arm tackle of a Tech defender and picked up his wall of blockers down the Red Raider sideline. Once Anderson turned the corner, it was nothing more than a foot race.

The Red Raiders scored the game's first points midway through the first quarter following a fumbled punt by Anderson. Strong safety Tate Randle caused the fumble with his hit on Anderson and reserve linebacker Jeff Crombie came up with the football.

Ish Ordonez' 21-yard field goal with 9:06 showing on the clock in the second period tied the score at 3-3.

A 27-yard punt return by Anderson gave the Hogs the ball at Tech' 44 and gains of 22, 11, 3 and 2 yards by senior fullback Roland Sales moved the ball to the Tech 6. The Hogs stalled at the Tech 4 and Ordonez came on do do his thing.

Duckworth and Scanlon teamed up on Arkansas' next possession for the scoring pass to give the Hogs the halftime advantage 10-3.

Ordonez made it 13-3 in favor of the Razorbacks with 5:34 left to play in the third stanza. Ordonez booted a 30-yard field goal after the Hogs couldn't penetrate Tech's goal line after picking up a first down at the Red Raider seven.

Quarterback Ron Reeves sat slumped over in front of his locker and wearily went about the task of getting dressed. Members of the press swarmed around him but the big Texas Tech sophomore just didn't have a lot to say.

"They just whipped us inside," he said quietly. "Our plan was to run right at them but they just stopped us."

Indeed, the Razorbacks, did quite a job of shutting out James Hadnot and Ron Reeves — in other words — the entire Tech offense.

Hadnot was held to 98 yards on 27 attempts and Reeves' net gain was seven yards in 13 tries. Actually Reeves rushed for 45 yards but he was also dropped for a minus 38 to negate most of that yardage.

"We just couldn't sustain anything," said Reeves bending over to pull on his cowboy boots. "We couldn't make the big third down plays."

He spoke so softly it was hard to hear him, even in the silence of the somber Tech dressing room. But Reeves was exactly right, for the record, Tech converted six of 18 third down conversions.

"They didn't do anything we didn't expect," added Reeves. "It was just a matter of execution — we didn't have it today."

And so a large Jones Stadium crowd spent most of the day in silence as the Raiders were unable to move the football and took a 20-6 defeat at the hand of Arkansas.

"Arkansas had a real quick defense," said Hadnot. "They weren't real tough but they were good hitters and they had good pursuit. They were just quick off the ball."

"Their defense was super," said a visibly shaken Dockery. "They were very quick. Arkansas has a good team and they played a good game. They ran right at us, what mistakes they did make — they overcame."

"Offensively we didn't take advantage of the breaks we did get. We didn't make things happen, we didn't make the big plays.

"That was the difference between last week (Tech's 21-20 win over Texas A&M) and this game," he added. "Last week we made things happen."

And for the second week in a row, the kicking game played a major role in the contest. But this time it was the Hog special teams that turned things around. And when Gary Anderson returned a Maury Buford punt 67 yards for a touchdown in the games final minutes — that put the icing on the cake for the Hogs.

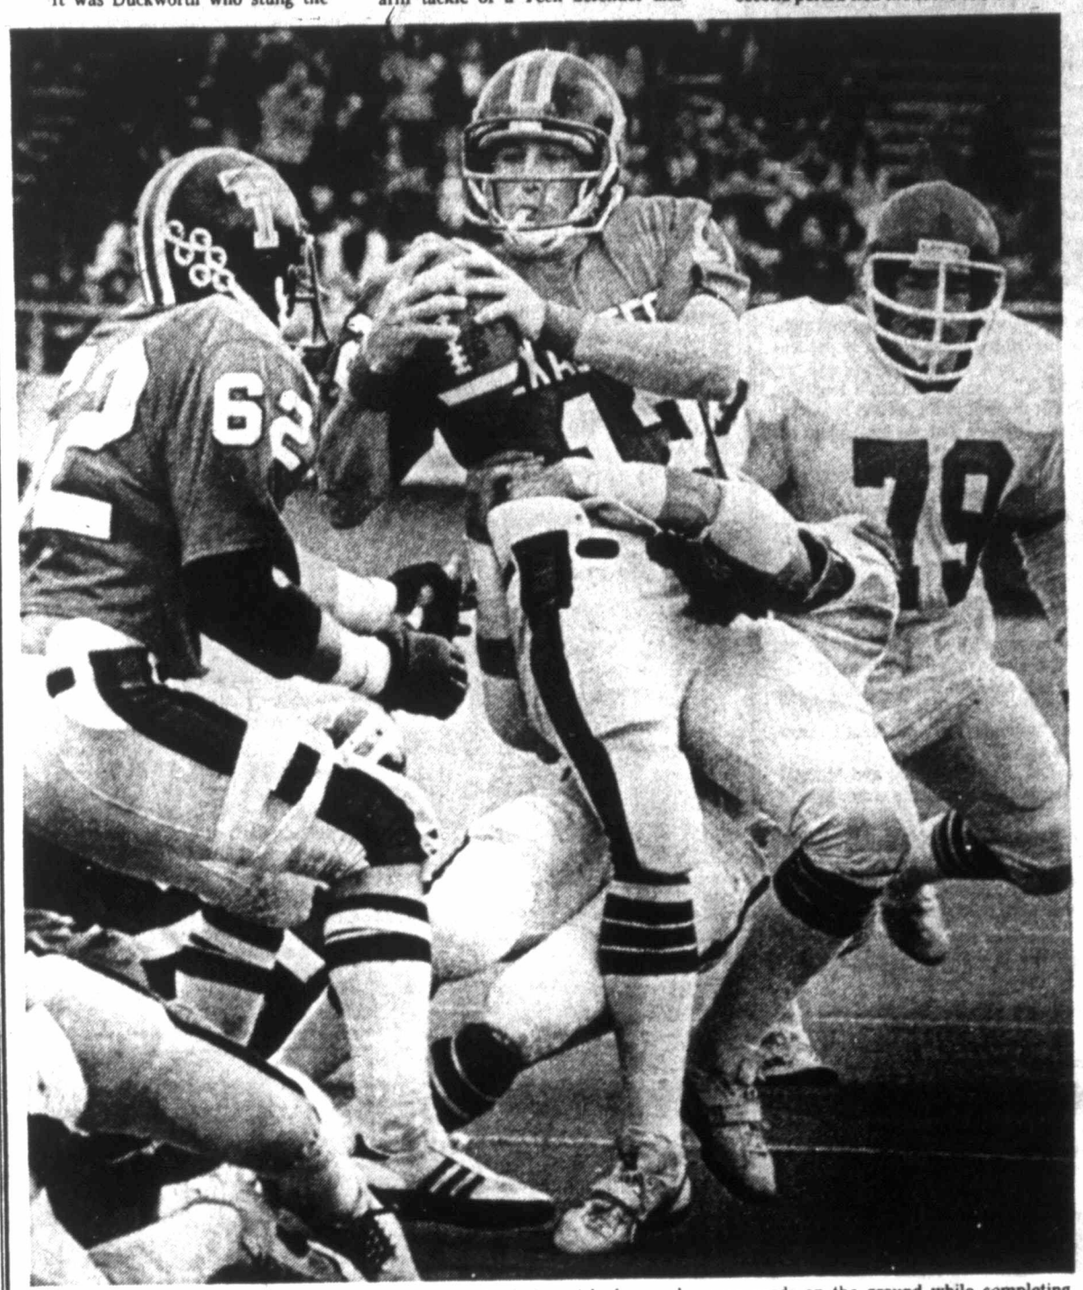

"The game was still in limbo until that punt return," admitted Dockery. "That hurt us."

One of the few Tech bright spots was the play of freshman noseguard Gabriel Rivera. 'Senor Sack' led the Raiders in unassited tackles with nine and one of those was for a loss.

"I played more than I have before," said Rivera. "But our defense had to play a lot so everybody got to get in there. Arkansas is a good team — they are quick."

Jamie Giles also stood out among the Tech defenders, getting in on 11 tackles.

"As far as coming off the ball, we couldn't hold our own," said Giles. "They just ran right at us and they made the plays when they had to."

HOG-TIED — Texas Tech quarterback Ron Reeves is hauled to the Jones Stadium turf during Saturday afternoon's Southwest Conference game against Arkansas. The play was indicative of the day Reeves and the Red Raiders had as Reeves picked up only seven yards on the ground while completing only eight of 20 passes for 78 yards as the Red Raiders dropped their second SWC contest, 20-6. Birds Take 3-1 Edge In Series

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pinch doubles by John Lowenstein and Terry Crowley drove in two runs apiece and Baltimore exploded for six runs in the eighth inning, roaring from behind for a 9-6 victory over Pittsburgh in Saturday's fourth game of the 1979 World Series.

The triumph gave the Orioles a 3-1 edge in the best-of-seven Series, which continues this afternoon. Baltimore needs just one more victory to clinch its third world championship.

The six-run rally was the third big inning in the Series for the Orioles. They scored five times in the first inning of the opener, which they won 5-4, and then had another five runs in the fourth inning of Game 3, which they won 8-4.

The Orioles mounted their rally against Kent Tekulve, ace of the Pirate bullpen who came on in the eighth after reliever Don Robinson got into trouble.

Baltimore was trailing 6-3 when Kiko Garcia, hero of the Birds' victory in Game 3, opened the eighth inning with a single. Garcia earlier had doubled home the first two Baltimore runs after the Pirates grabbed an early 4-0 lead.

Ken Singleton moved Garcia up to second with his third hit of the game. After Eddie Murray forced Singleton, Doug DeCinces drew a walk, loading the bases.

That brought Tekulve out of the Pirate bullpen. The lanky, side-arming right-hander relieved in 94 games in the regular season, posting 31 saves. But he just didn't have it on Saturday.

Lowenstein came off the bench to bat for Gary Roenicke in a righty-lefty switch by the Orioles. He drilled a double into the right-field corner, scoring two runs and cutting the Pirate lead to 6-5.

Billy Smith batted for Rich Dauer and was given an intentional walk, loading the bases again. Then Oriole Manger Earl Weaver went for his third straight pinch hitter, inserting Crowley to bat for Dave Skaggs.

Again, the strategy worked, with the

Longhorn Defense Strangles Mighty Oklahoma

DALLAS (AP) — Senior tight end Steve Hall's first collegiate touchdown, an acrobatic one-handed stab of a wobbly, 2-yard Donnie Little pass, staked the fourth-ranked Texas Longhorns to a 16-7 victory Saturday over the No. 3-ranked Oklahoma Sooners in a battle of unbeatens.

Hall, a second-stringer from Broken Arrow, Okla., outjumped Sooner linebacker George Cumby with a left-handed grab just 2:00 before the end of the first half.

It gave Texas a 10-7 lead and the Longhorn defense, No. 1 in the country, made the play stand against the awesome Oklahoma offensive arsenal, which had averaged 45 points a game.

The Longhorn defense, led by tackles Steve McMichael and Bill Acker, shackled Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims, who gained only 73 yards in 20 carries. It was the first time in 14 games Sims, whose longest run was 16 yards, had failed to gain 100 yards.

Sims suffered the indignity of fumbling away the Sooners' last chance late in the fourth quarter to Longhorn defensive end Tim Campbell at the Sooner 30. Sims' fumble led to a 38-yard game-clinching field goal by barefoot kicker John Goodson, who had earlier connected from 37 and 23 yards.

Texas is now 4-0 while the Sooners drop to a 4-1 record. Texas now leads this bitter series 44-27-3.

Defensive back Derrick Hatchet's 36-yard interception return of a wayward J.C. Watts pass set up Hall's touchdown at the Sooner 5. After two running plays failed, Little rolled out and pitched the ball to Hall.

Oklahoma scored its only touchdown in the first quarter on an 11-yard pass from Watts to rookie Stanley Wilson after recovering a Johnnie Johnson fumble at the 'Horn 16-yard line.

Sophomore tailback A.J. "Jam" Jones rushed for 127 yards on 31 carries as he gained most of the yardage for the Longhorns between the 20-yard lines.

The Texas defense was tested early in the third period when Wilson dashed 47 yards to the Texas 28-yard line. However, the Longhorns held and place-kicker John Hoge missed a 37-yard field goal.

Oklahoma flexed some defensive muscle of its own when the Longhorns charged to the Oklahoma 13 but nose guard Johnnie Lewis stopped Leroy King cold on 4th and 1.

The Texas defense sacked Watts five times trying to pass and held the Sooners to only six first downs, two of them in the first half.

Texas ripped off a drive to the Oklahoma 13-yard line on its first possession, behind Jam Jones' hard running before the Sooners stiffened. On third and 1 from the Oklahoma 13, Sooner tackle Keith Gary sacked Little, forcing the 'Horns to settle for Goodson's 37-yard field goal into a 15 mph wind for a 3-0 lead.

All-America Johnson fumbled Hoge's 48-yard punt and Ken Sitton recovered at the Texas 16 to give the Sooners a gift touchdown. On third and 5 from the 11-yard line, Wilson, of Carson, Calif., made a leaping catch of Watts' pass for the touchdown.

A sellout crowd of 72,032 jammed the Cotton Bowl in 79-degree weather for the matchup of the Red River rivals.

McMichael was all over the field, making three sacks and it was his hard tackle of Watts that caused Hatchet's interception which led to Hall's touchdown.

Texas coach Fred Akers said his defense certainly was a key to the victory.

"Our defense is one of the most experienced in the country," Akers said. "That pays off. We hope to always have a good one."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer called it the way more than 72,000 saw it.

"The Texas offense ... kept our backs to the wall," he said. "The Texas defense today compares to the Texas defense of 1977. We are just not as big and strong as Texas."

Kush Loses Coaching Position

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State football coach Frank Kush was fired Saturday after 25 years at the helm of the Sun Devils.

At a hastily called press conference hours before his team was to take the field against Washington in a Pacific-10 Conference game, Kush said ASU athletic director Dr. Fred Miller advised him that he would be dismissed.

The Associated Press learned that ASU defensive coordinator Bob Owens was named to coach Saturday night's game.

Kush said he was fired because Miller did not believe im when he denied punching former Arizona State punter Kevin Rutledge and forcing him to quit he team.

Attorneys for Rutledge have filed a $1 million lawsuit against Kush and the school over the incident.

Kush's prepared statement read:

"What I cannot accept is the manner in which this matter was handled.

"No one can contradict rumors, innuendos or untruths. That is why I feel so personally hurt and troubled at the action taken this weekend by Dr. Miller."

Substitute Quarterback Leads Cougars On Comeback Trail

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Sub quarterback Terry Elston completed two passes in the final 50 seconds and scored on a 5-yard run with only 15 seconds remaining Saturday as No. 7-ranked Houston edged Texas A&M 17-14 in Southwest Conference play.

An overflow crowd of 59,545 watched the game against a backdrop of blowing dust and giant cranes, which are being used to expand the seating capacity of Kyle Field to 71,600.

It appeared A&M had upset Houston as the Cougars got the ball for the final time at their 40-yard line with only 50 seconds left in the game. Elston, a 6-foot-3 junior, hit Eric Herring with a 38-yard completion with Herring making a one-handed diving catch.

Elston then threw to halfback Terald Clark for 17 to the A&M 5 and scored on the next play by sprinting around right end after his receivers were covered.

Curtis Dickey and Mike Mosley gave A&M a 14-10 halftime lead on 1-yard scoring runs, and the lead held up until Houston's last second heroics.

The win boosted Houston's record to 5-0. The Cougars are 2-0 in the SWC. A&M, playing its home opener just now because of the stadium construction, fell to 2-4 and 0-3 in the SWC.

Houston had grabbed a 10-0 lead on a 44-field goal into the wind by Ken Hatfield and a 15-yard sprint by 220-pound David Barrett, who shook off three A&M tacklers.

A&M moved 53 yards for its first touchdown after Houston punter Mark Ford shanked a 19-yard kick. Dickey had runs of 19 and 12 yards, and Mosley ran for 14 to set up Dickey's 1-yard touchdown leap over right guard.

A&M then kicked off, and on the first play A&M defensive end Jacob Green and cornerback Carl Grulich slammed Terald Clark down and he fumbled. Linebacker Doug Carr recovered at the Houston 17.

A third down, 10-yard pass from Mosley to Gerald Carter carried to the Houston 6, and Mosley scored untouched on third down, running an option to the left.

Houston drove from its 13 to a first down at the A&M 4 but used up its time outs. Quarterback Delrick Brown ran to the 2, threw incomplete for Herring in the end zone, and Allen Polk was stopped for no gain.

A Hatfield field goal kick appeared to split the uprights, but the Cougars failed to score because time had run out in the first half and Houston was flagged for illegal procedure on the play.

Dickey and Mosley, both track sprinters, repeatedly appeared on the verge of breaking through the Houston secondary for scores but were held off by great open field tackles by linebacker David Hodge, defensive end Sam Proctor and safety Elvis Bradley.

Houston cornerback Donnie Love intercepted Mosley three times to stop A&M drives at the Houston 13, 29 and 8-yard lines.

The victory was Houston's first ever at Kyle Field.

Hog Running Game Too Much For Tech

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The way Bobby Duckworth saw it, it was a simple matter of deception.

"Their cornerback had me man-on-man," he said, setting the scene for his game-breaking 76-yard touchdown catch. "We ran an up-and-go, where I run downfield, fake to the outside and when (quarterback) Kevin (Scanlon) pumps it to me I just cut back up.

Simple as that, the Razorbacks were ahead 10-3 and they never looked back. It was one of only five passes Arkansas completed all game. That's quite different from what was planned.

"We had planned to put the ball in the air more often," said Arkansas boss Lou Holtz, "but Scanlon didn't care to throw it. Several times he checked off at the line.

"That's just our style of play. Sometimes we're wide open, sometimes we play control. Sometimes we get off the bus throwing the football, sometimes we get back on and haven't thrown it."

Scanlon agreed that more passes were in the game plan, but you know how plans go.

"Sure, we'd talked about it," he said. "We thought Tech would blitz us quite a bit, a lot of other teams have. We went into the game prepared to throw the ball 20 or 30 times, but we were gaining big chunks on the ground — we never had to.

"Then we had that big long pass, we didn't need all those short ones."

Those Tech blitzes never appeared, at least not in the frequency the Hogs were expecting. "Tech is a real sound defensive football team," Scanlon said. "They put in a couple of things TCU did against us last week, but they were things that had been in their scheme before. When you're a sound team, you don't change things for just one game."

Of the touchdown, the quarterback said, "That was just a super catch by Bobby. He's got super acceleration. He runs a 9.5 hundred and he's 6-5, he's got great long legs and can really move."

But as spectacular as that one catch was, it was after all just one catch. Scanlon felt the real key to the game was the Hog running attack, in particular one drive late in the game.

"That one drive at the end was what did it," he said. "We ran a couple of times and kept on getting first downs. We got the ball at the 20 and moved to about the 40 before we had to punt. We didn't score, but we used about six minutes on the drive. I think that was the key to the game."

The Razorback running game was extremely efficient. Eight different people carried the ball, and all of them averaged just at 3.8 yards each tote.

"We had a good thing going and just decided hey, let's just stay with that. The main thing was that we were getting those big chunks of yardage," Scanlon said. "Roland (Sales) ran the ball real well."

Indeed, Sales ran the ball 20 times for 107 yards, his first regular-season 100-yard performance. He said the key to the Arkansas running game was understanding the defense the Raiders were throwing at them.

"They switched defenses on us early in the game," he said. "But it wasn't much trouble. The only thing was, it caused a couple of mix-ups. Once we figured out what they were doing it wasn't much trouble. If something's there and we can understand it, we can use it."

Of the forsaken game plan, Sales said, "I'm not sorry we didn't throw more. We got a good thing going and we stuck with it."

After living in the shadows of Ben Cowins, Jerry Eckwood and Micheal Forrest for the last three years, Sales seems to be enjoying his senior season in the sun.

"We can go as far as this team wants to go," he said, bubbling in the locker room after the win.

"I believe it's all the way to the top," Sales said.

"This season is about as satisfying as it can be. It's the way you'd want your senior year to go. After that situation in the beginning of the year, everything's starting to change now.

Orioles' Depth Stymies Pirates

pinch hitter drilling another double — almost identical to Lowenstein's — into the right-field corner for two more runs, giving the Orioles a 7-6 lead.

Tim Stoddard, the fourth Baltimore pitcher of the game, was the next batter. Because of the American League designated-hitter rule, Stoddard had never had an official plate appearance in the majors. But this World Series is being played without the DH, and the Orioles' hurler, a former star basketball player at North Carolina State, always will remember his first swing.

Stoddard bounced a single past third base, scoring the fifth run of the inning, and Baltimore added another on a force play groundout by Al Bumbry.

Stoddard then protected the lead over the final two innings to earn the victory in this slugfest which produced 28 hits by the two teams — 16 by the Pirates.

The homer was greeted by a scoreboard celebration which pronounced "Bombs away in Pittsburgh, Pa." And the Pirates took the cue and began shelling Orioles' starter Dennis Martinez.

Ott went into his home run trot on the ball, perhaps engaging in a bit of wishful thinking, before the umpires sent him back to second base.

Phil Garner followed with a single for the fifth consecutive Pirate hit. Ott was cut down trying to score but prolonged the rundown long enough for Garner to reach second on the play.

After pitcher Jim Bibby lined out, Omar Moreno, who had left 11 runners on base in the first two games of the Series, ripped a single to center, scoring Garner for the Pirates' fourth run of the inning. It was Moreno's first RBI of the Series.

The five straight hits was one short of the World Series record for consecutive hits. The Chicago Cubs had six in a row against the Detroit Tigers in the ninth inning of their Series game on Oct. 10, 1908.

Most of the Pirates' quick cushion disappeared in the very next inning when Baltimore came roaring back against Bibby.

Leadoff batter Skaggs reached first when Madlock threw badly after making a nice stop on his ground ball. One out later Bumbry followed with a single to center for Baltimore's first hit and Skaggs stopped at second.

Garcia followed with a double up the gap in left-center field, scoring both Skaggs and Bumbry. That gave the Orioles' shortstop five hits and six RBI in the Series.

Tech Falls To Arkansas

ford punted from the Tech 27 and the ball bounced and hit the arm of Arkansas defensive end Mark Dewey. Billy Cummings fell on the ball at the Arkansas 32 and the Red Raiders had a chance to pull within three points.

A 14-yard burst by senior fullback James Hadnot three plays later gave the Red Raiders a first-and-goal at the Arkansas 6 with over nine minutes to play. But the Raiders lost seven yards on the next three plays and had to settle for a 30-yard Adams' field goal that cut the Hog lead to seven points, 13-6.

The Raiders went nowhere on their next possession and had to punt from the their own 15. Buford hit a good punt, but Anderson went all the way on the return to put the game out of reach.

Tech's offense never crossed the Arkansas 40-yard line until the game's final drive that ended on the Razorback 30. Both Tech scores were set up by fumble recoveries.

The Red Raiders managed 231 total yards as compared with 292 for the Hogs. Tech had 121 rushing yards — 98 of those coming on 27 carries by Hadnot — and 110 passing yards.

The Hogs had 183 yards on the ground and 109 through the airways. Sales paced the ground attack with 107 yards on 20 tries.

Arkansas shut off Tech's ground attack by floating it two linebackers, Mike Massey and Ozzie Riley three to four yards off the line of scrimmage. It enabled the linebackers to read the play and key on Hadnot, and it also gave them time to come up and stop many outside runs the Red Raiders tried.

Myers, Raiders Open Cage Workouts

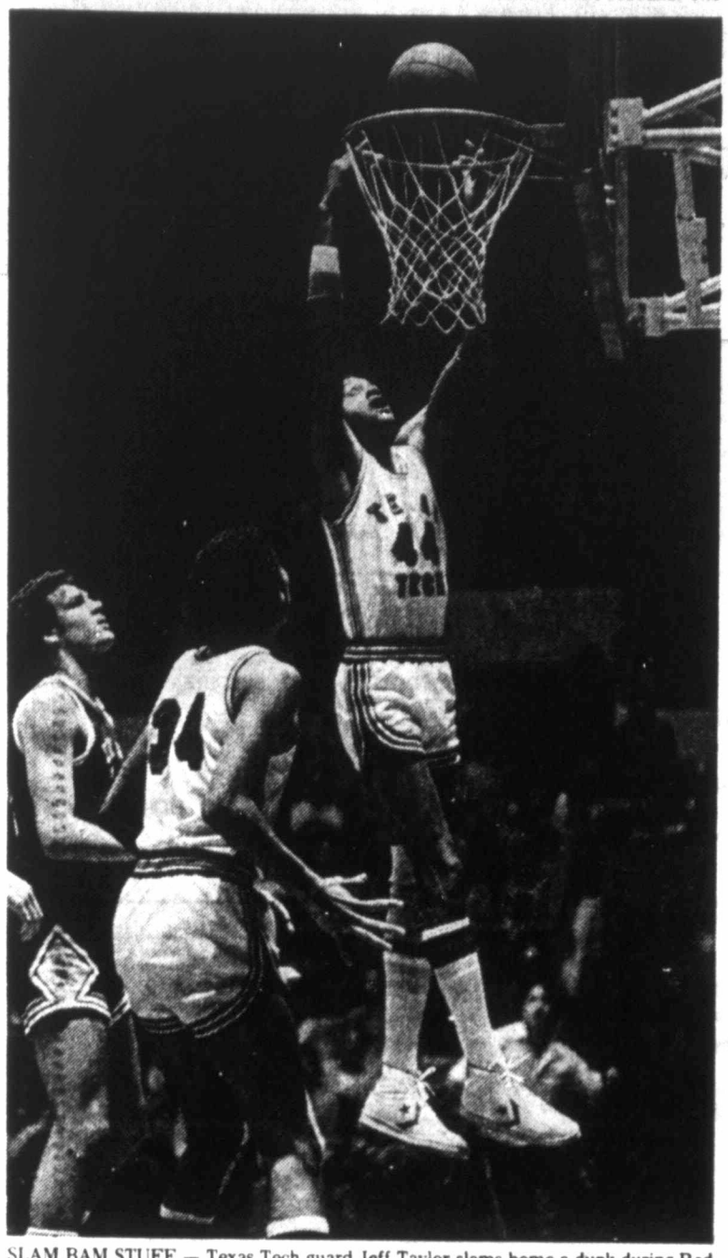

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A smile fluttered around the corners of Gerald Myers' mouth as he contemplated the question. It wasn't anything he hadn't heard a thousand times before: Will the Raiders run and gun?

He was silent for a moment and when the Texas Tech head basketball coach did speak, he chose his words carefully.

"We'll have a good, fast-break transition game," he said slowly."But we won't be a racehorse type team.

"Still," he added, "we'll be looking for the fast break after the rebound. The problem, though, will be getting the rebound."

And that, in a nutshell, sums up the outlook for the 1979-80 Red Raider basketball team. Myers will welcome back nine lettermen and four starters from last year's 19-11 NIT team Monday when basketball practice begins on the Tech campus.

The coach rates his team as a better-than-average shooting bunch, but admits that the Raiders are woefully short on size.

"We don't have a whole lot of bulk," said Myers. "But we do have quickness and jumping ability — and we're probably an above average shooting team. But our rebounding and inside muscle could give us problems.

"We'll have to get something going inside," added the Tech coach. "You just can't win consistently shooting strictly from the outside."

And the men that Myers will look to inside will be 6-8 junior Ralph Brewster and 6-6 junior Ben Hill.

"Those two guys are proven players," said Myers. "Ralph started all 30 games for us last year and Ben started about half of them. They're not exceptionally big, but they're going to carry most of the load inside."

Brewster was the Raiders' second-leading scorer last year with an 11.3 average per game while Hill averaged almost 11 a game during conference play. Brewster was also Tech's leading rebounder with an average of 7.6 a contest.

But Brewster also led the Raiders in a less glorious category — fouls. He had 84 of them in 30 games and Raider fans got used to seeing the big man from El Paso make his share of early exits.

"Leslie has made a lot of progress since last year," said Myers. "He's stronger and more physical now. I hope he can give us some depth."

Another area where Myers is looking for depth is in the scoring department. Senior Kent Williams was the team's leader last year with a 12.4 average. That's a good figure but hardly overwhelming.

"The key to our success:" says Myers, "is a good balanced attack. We don't have anybody who's going to score 20 points a night.

"But if we get good balance and good team play we'll be in good shape. We have to come together as a team — we're going to have to mesh."

Some other integral parts in the Raider machine will be sophomores Jeff Taylor and David Little. Both got ample playing time as freshmen and, according to Myers, should be better players because of it.

Both saw action in all 30 games last year and both ended with a scoring average of just over 7 points a contest. Taylor's biggest night came against Western Illinois when he scored 20 and Little had 19 against the University of Houston. Taylor also led the team in dunks with 13.

"We're still a young team," admits Myers. "But we're not as young as we appear since a lot of our guys played so much last year."

Myers is also looking for a contribution from senior Thad Sanders who was used only sparingly last season.

Myers will begin his tenth season on Nov. 15 when the Raiders host the Poland National team in an exhibition match. Tech's first real contest is on Dec. 1 when the Raiders host West Texas State.

Besides the WT game, the Raider non-conference schedule includes two other Texas teams — North Texas State and Lamar University. Both of those games will be at home.

For Tech basketball fans, there will be few new faces in the Raider lineup. Myers' staff nabbed three players out of the high school ranks and picked up a junior college transfer. Tech's new additions are 6-5 Joe Washington (Tupelo, Miss.), 6-6 David Reynolds from nearby Perryton, 6-2 Nelson Franse from Hobbs and Dwight Williams, who played at Western Texas last year.

"We got some good players that can help us," said Myers. "But I'm not counting on them to come through early in the season."

What Myers didn't get was a big man, and that, he admitted is what the Raiders needed most. Nonetheless the Tech boss was cautiously optimistic about the upcoming season.

"Right now, (Texas) A&M would have to be the conference favorite," he said. "They've got all five starters coming back plus the big man — Rudy Woods. That gives them an advantage over everybody else in the league.

"But second place is wide open," he was quick to add. "I think it's going to be a battle for second between Arkansas, Houston, SMU and us. And second place is so critical because you get a bye all the way into the (SWC) tournament."

But the Southwest Conference is still months away, scheduled for the first week in March. Right now, Myers has more important things on his mind — like coming up with a starting lineup.

"It's hard to determine a starting lineup right now," he said. "The competition is real intense and we've got a lot of people that can play.

"We've got some good basketball players," he said emphatically. "The only thing is, so does just about everybody in the conference."

ENDING NOTES— The Raiders will practice in the Men's Gym on the Tech campus for three to four weeks before moving over to the Coliseum. Due to a lack of space in the Men's Gym, the practices will be closed to the public until the Raiders move over to the Coliseum.

WOLVERINE ON THE LOOSE — Michigan tailback Butch Woolfolk (24) had little trouble eluding Minnesota's Anthony Davis as he took a first-quarter pitch for a dramatic 58-yard touchdown run. Michigan went on to take a 31-21 victory in Saturday's Big Ten game. (AP Laserphoto)

Wisconsin Clips Spartans

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Defensive end Dave Ahrens raced 55 yards with an interception for the clinching touchdown and Steve Veith kicked three field goals, leading Wisconsin to a 38-29 upset of 19th-ranked Michigan State in Big Ten football Saturday.

Two fumble recoveries by defensive end Guy Boliaux set up touchdown runs of three yards by Curtis Richardson and one yard by Dave Mohapp for Wisconsin, 2-4 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten.

Michigan State, 3-3 for the season and 1-2 in the conference, dropped its third game in a row. Sophomore Brian Clark, playing because regular quarterback Bert Vaughn was sidelined with a kidney ailment, couldn't rally the Spartans after they blew a 14-3 first-quarter lead.

Veith's third field goal, a 37-yarder two seconds before halftime, gave the Badgers the lead to stay at 17-14.

Boliaux pounced on a fumble by the Spartans' Steve Smith at the Michigan State 18 yard line with five minutes left in the third quarter. Runs of eight yards by quarterback Steve Parish and nine by Gerald Green set up Mohapp's one-yard scoring run as Wisconsin led 24-14.

Derek Hughes returned the ensuing kickoff 98 yards to score as the Spartans closed to within 24-21. However, Wisconsin freshman Troy King returned the next kickoff 41 yards to the Spartan 37, and Green scored three plays later on a 29-yard burst up the middle for a 31-21 Wisconsin lead.

Buckeyes Pop Indiana

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Art Schlichter, eighth-ranked Ohio State's quarterback, had another big day Saturday, mainly because of the blockers in front of him.

"They just overwhelmed our linemen," Indiana Coach Lee Corso said of the Buckeyes, 47-6 winners over Indiana to remain tied with Michigan for the Big Ten Conference football lead.

Earle Bruce, Ohio State's coach, admitted that controlling the line of scrimmage was the focus of the Buckeyes' closed practices all week.

"We emphasized coming off the ball," he said, "and we had great blocking at the point of attack today."

Schlichter, the Big Ten's total offense leader, accounted for 204 total yards in the unbeaten Buckeyes' sixth straight triumph this fall. Ohio State shares the league lead with Michigan at 3-0.

Big Ten

Herrmann's Passing Disposes Of Illinois

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Quarterback Mark Herrmann, who led 20th-ranked Purdue to a 28-14 victory over Illinois, said Saturday it was "a real thrill" to break the Boilermakers' career passing record.

"I really didn't know which pass it was (that broke the record), I didn't hear the public address announcement, but I knew I was having a good first half," Herrmann said.

Michigan Sophomore Sparks 31-21 Victory

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan sophomore tailback Butch Woolfolk scored on touchdown runs of 58 and 41 yards to lead the 11th-ranked Wolverines to a 31-21 victory over stubborn Minnesota Saturday.

Iowa Scorches Wildcats

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Gordy Bohannan passed for two touchdowns and scored twice and Dennis Mosley rolled up 160 yards and added two more touchdowns Saturday to lead Iowa to a 58-6 victory over Northwestern.

Bohannan, a junior college transfer making his first start, didn't play in the second half but before departing, he threw touchdown passes of 44 yards to Keith Chappelle and 12 yards to Louis Burke. He also scored on runs of five and one yards.

Mosley, who went into the game as the Big Ten's leading rusher, carried 20 times and scored on a pair of one-yard runs. He set up the first with a 56-yard run and his second with a 14-yard run.

The victory marked the first time in 15 years that Iowa has won three straight in one season and gave the Hawkeyes a 2-1 record in the Big Ten and 3-3 overall. Northwestern is 0-4 in the conference and 1-5 for the season.

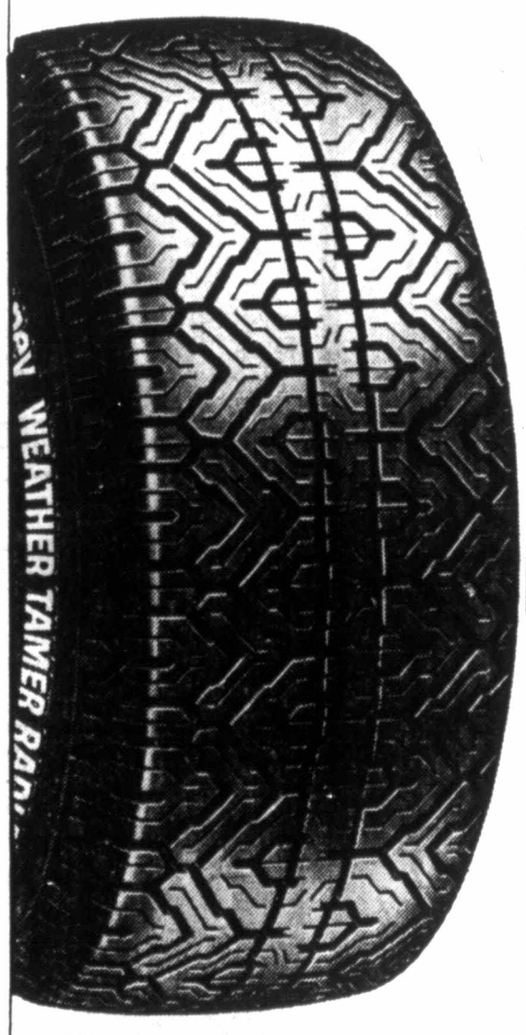

Mistakes were costly for the Wildcats who turned the ball over eight times.

Tech Hall Of Honor Set To Induct Trio

The first quarterback of a victorious Texas Tech bowl team, a long-time leader of the Red Raider Club and a former player and coach at Tech have been selected for induction into the Texas Tech Athletic Hall of Honor.

The induction will bring to 46 the number of members in the Texas Tech Hall of Honor.

Arterburn quarterbacked the Red Raiders to their first bowl victory in the school's history — a 25-14 triumph over Pacific in the 1952 Sun Bowl. He was selected All-Border Conference in 1951, and had one of the top total offensive games in Tech history against Arizona in 1951 — 267 yards.

Arterburn is an active member of the Double T Letterman's Association, the Ex-Student's Association and the Red Raider Club. He also is coordinator of the Texas Tech Letterman's Lounge.

Fuller is a board member and on the Executive Committee of the Red Raider Club. He was instrumental in obtaining the roomy track stadium, which bears his name. As a result of his high interest in Tech athletics, he served for five years as chairman of the All-American Football Game and he assists the Texas Tech Athletic Department in a number of areas.

Morris has the rare distinction of having played for and against Texas Tech, and having coached against and for the Raiders.

A tackle for the Raiders in 1933 and 1934, Morris was a player-coach for the Lubbock Air Force Base from 1942 to 1944 and he saw action during that time against his alma mater. From 1947 to 1950, he was the line coach of Tech's football team.

Morris was Director of Guidance for the Lubbock Independent School District for 20 years, receiving recognition from the Texas Attorney General's office for outstanding school programs on crime prevention and teenage juries.

Tech Golfers Finish Fourth

CLOVIS (Special) — The Texas Tech men's golf team finished fourth among 11 teams in the 15th annual Eastern New Mexico University Intercollegiate Tournament Saturday.

Crimson Tide Overwhelms Gators 40-0

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Second-string quarterback Don Jacobs set up one touchdown with a 24-yard run after a fake punt alignment and bolted 73 yards for a third period score, leading second-ranked Alabama to a 40-0 romp Saturday over winless and punchless Florida.

Jacobs' fourth-down run after Alabama shifted out of punt formation set up Steadman Shealy's three-yard touchdown and Shealy's nifty running set up Steve Whitman's five-yard plunge as the Crimson Tide took a 14-0 first quarter lead and coasted to its fifth triumph of the season and 14th in a row.

The victory marked Bear Bryant's 289th coaching success, 25 short of Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time record of 314. It also was his 34th triumph in 39 meetings with one of his former pupils and 24th in a row. Florida is 0-4-1 under Charley Pell, who played at Alabama in 1960-61-62 and later served as a graduate student assistant under Bryant.

Alan McElroy kicked the first of his two field goals eight seconds before half time to make it 17-0 while Major Ogilvie and John Hill added scoring runs of one-yard and two yards respectively as Florida suffered its worse defeat since a 49-7 licking by Georgia in 1971.

Meanwhile, Alabama's defense, ranked third nationally, held Florida to three first downs and never permitted the Gators beyond the Crimson Tide 45-yard line. Alabama has yielded just one touchdown all season and that came with 12 seconds left in the opener against Georgia Tech.

The Crimson Tide wasted no time, driving 52 yards in eight plays on its first possession for a 7-0 lead. The margin included a 15-yard run by Billy Jackson but the key play came on fourth-and-one at the Florida 33.

Jacobs dropped into punt formation but the Tide then shifted into its Wishbone and Jacobs galloped around left end to the 9. Shealy, the starting quarterback, returned and carried twice to start the scoring.

Alabama's second touchdown came on an 85-yard march which included runs by Shealy of 23, 14 and six yards plus two unsportsmanlike conduct penalites against Florida's defense for interfering vocally with Alabama's signal-calling cadence.

The first infraction moved the ball from Alabama's 39 to the Florida 36 and the second one cost the Gators half the distance to the goal line and placed the ball at the ten. It took Whitman two carries of five yards each to score.

Although Florida did not commit a turnover in the first half, the Gators trailed 17-0 and more of the same was in store after the intermission.

Alabama, the No. 1 rushing team with a 373-yard average, ground out 435 more using 13 ball carriers. Jacobs led the way with 122 on just seven rushes.

Florida managed just 66 yards in total offense and completed only one of nine passes for seven yrds. The Gators haven't won in seven games dating back to last season.

Pell, who played on Alabama's 1961 national championship team, said he thought Alabama was "the best team in the country for 1979."

Deacons Whip North Carolina

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Tailback James McDougald scored two touchdowns on short runs and quarterback Jay Venuto threw a 60-yard scoring bomb as Wake Forest stunned 14th-ranked North Carolina 24-19 in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

McDougald, a senior, broke open a 10-10 tie in the fourth quarter by plunging one yard for his second touchdown.

Venuto, who picked holes in the North Carolina defense all day with his passing, sealed the game with 8:30 remaining with a 60-yard pass play to fullback Albert Kirby, making it 24-10.

North Carolina fought back late in the fourth quarter however, as quarterback Matt Kupec threw a 5-yard scoring pass to end Mike Chatham. His score capped a 72-yard drive and made it 24-17.

DROWNING THE GATORS — Alabama fullback Steve Whitman rolls over into the end zone as teammate Major Ogilvie (42) signals the touchdown during the first quarter of Alabama's 40-0 rout of Florida Saturday in Southeast Conference action. (AP Laserphoto)

Maryland Falls To N.C. State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Running back Walter Sullivan scored on a 14-yard run in the third quarter and North Carolina State's defense halted Maryland's running game Saturday as the Wolfpack shut out the Terps 7-0 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Sullivan scooted 14 yards through the right side of the line with 12:54 left in the third quarter to cap a 74-yard march for the game's only score.

ENMU Drops 30-6 Decision

WEATHERFORD, Okla. (Special) — Joe Quinn scored two touchdowns to lead Southwestern Oklahoma to a 30-6 victory over Eastern New Mexico University here Saturday night.

The win improves Southwestern's season record to 4-1 while ENMU drops to 3-3.

Southwestern assumed a 12-0 halftime lead on the strength of Quinn's two 1-yard TD plunges. The score was 15-0 when Jackie Clifton of the Greyhounds scored from a yard out in the fourth period. Southwestern responded with 15 consecutive points to round out the scoring.

Western Hills Suffers Sixth Loss

LAKE ARTHUR, N.M. (Special) — Western Hills Academy dropped its sixth straight game of the year here Saturday afternoon, losing to Lake Arthur 42-18. Lake Arthur never trailed in the six-man contest, jumping out to a 12-0 lead on TD runs of 35 and 5 yards by Javian Olivas and Bobby Bingham, respectively. Western Hills managed to get on the scoreboard in the opening stanza when Jeff Shadin bulled over from the 1, cutting LAHS' lead to 12-6.

The color TV in our picture cost $350 when new. Most homeowners policies would give only $150 for it today — enough for a black-and-white set. Ætna's new Homeowners Contents Replacement Cost Coverage would give the owner a brand new color TV — about $450. Because our new coverage replaces old contents for new up to 400% of their current cash value! The additional amount this new coverage pays can provide thousands of dollars in added protection. But it costs only a little more. Do you want the best homeowners coverage you can buy? Give us a call and ask about Contents Replacement Cost Coverage. We'll be glad to call on you. Volunteers Vex Georgia Tech

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Quarterback Jimmy Streater passed for two touchdowns, ran a third and set a school record for total offense as Tennessee blanked Georgia Tech 31-0 Saturday.

Before retiring midway in the third quarter in the non-conference college football game, Streater picked up 103 yards on the ground and threw for another 96 to raise his career offense total to 4,210 yards. The old record was 4,068 yards by quarterback Condredge Holloway from 1972 through 1974.

Georgia Tech, now 1-3-1, was unable to get inside Tennessee's 30-yard line until midway in the fourth quarter as Vol defenders sacked Yellow Jacket quarterback Mike Kelley seven times. Tech's only chance to score was a 39-yard field goal attempt by Johnny Smith with 6:40 left, and it was wide.

Streater hit a 15-yard pass to Anthony Hancock for a 25-yard touchdown and followed it with a 13-yard pass to Reggie Harper in the end zone, both in the second quarter. In the third quarter, Streater zipped around and through three groups of Tech defenders for a 43-yard touchdown run.

Tennessee, now 4-1, opened the scoring in the first quarter with a 42-yard field goal by Alan Duncan. Gary Moore plunged two yards for the Vols' first touchdown in the second quarter after Craig Puki set up the score by intercepting a Kelley pass and returning it to the Tech 38.

Tennessee travels to Birmingham next week to play second-ranked Alabama while Georgia Tech hosts Auburn in Atlanta.

Georgia Surprises LSU

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia erupted for two quick touchdowns early in the third quarter on an 11-yard run by Matt Simon and an 11-yard pass from Buck Belue to Carmon Prince as the Bulldogs upset 13th-ranked Louisiana State 21-14 in a Southeastern Conference football game Saturday.

The Bulldogs then survived a fourth quarter comeback by the Bayou Bengals, who drove 80 yards for one score and had another threat die at the Georgia 22 when Scott Woerner recovered a fumble with just over two minutes remaining.

Simon's 11-yard touchdown run came with 12:32 left in the third after Jeff Hipp had recovered an LSU fumble at the Tiger 37.

Belue's scoring pass to Prince came on the next possession following an LSU punt and staked Georgia to a 21-7 advantage.

Georgia, 2-3 for the season, and 2-0 in the SEC, got its first touchdown on a 13-yard run by Anthony Arnold to cap a 31-yard drive with only 2:01 left in the opening half.

A 58-yard kickoff return by Chris Williams enabled LSU to gain a 7-7 halftime tie when LeRoid Jones plunged over from the 1 with only 36 seconds left in the half.

LSU, falling to 3-2 overall and 1-1 in the conference, went 80 yards in five plays early in the 4th quarter, with quarterback David Woodley scoring on a 24-yard keeper one play after he had fired a 38-yard pass to Greg LaFleur.

The victory was keyed by an aggressive defense that had done little in Georgia's first four games this season.

It was led by sophomore nose guard Eddie Weaver and Hipp, who recovered one fumble, intercepted a pass and forced another fumble.

Simon, making his first start, gave Georgia a ground attack for the first time this year, cracking out 128 yards on 14 carries.

It was his 19-yard run that started the Bulldogs' game-winning 51-yard drive shortly after he scored his third quarter touchdown.

Belue also had a big play in the early third quarter score when he scrambled under pressure and fired a 21-yard strike to Arnold at the LSU 11 on a third down play.

Georgia, celebrating the 50th anniversary of Sanford Stadium, was fired up from the start, holding LSU to only 10 yards in the first quarter when the Tigers were forced to start three series inside their own 25 yard line.

"I don't think I've ever had a defense that has come so far in five weeks," said Coach Vince Dooley, who added that he was as proud of this victory as any during his 16 years at Georgia.

Pitt Devours Cincinnati 35-0

PITTSBURGH (AP) — University of Pittsburgh quarterback Rick Trocano passed for one touchdown and ran for another, and running back Randy McMillan rushed for 119 yards as the Panthers beat Cincinnati 35-0 in college football Saturday.

Cincinnati, 1-4, got close to scoring three times. Steve Schultz's 32-yard field goal attempt sailed wide in the second quarter, and early in the third quarter Pitt cornerback Terry White intercepted Tony Kapetanis in the end zone to kill another Cincinnati threat.

Then, Kapetanis slipped on a keeper at the Pitt 2-yard line to end a drive that started at the Cincinnati 20. The Bearcats got to the Pitt 4-yard line on a 76-yard pass play from Kapetanis to wingback Aaron Hagans.

War Eagles Outlast Scrappy Vanderbilt

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn running backs Joe Cribbs and James Brooks combined for six touchdowns and more than 300 yards rushing to lead the Tigers to a 52-35 victory Saturdy over the determined Vanderbilt Commodores in a wild Southeastern Conference football game.

Brooks set the tempo for the scoring extravaganza when he raced 79 yards for a touchdown on the second play of the game. After that, Brooks and Cribbs met little resistance as they ran almost at will through the Commodore defense.

But the Commodores refused to concede the game, scoring three touchdowns in the second quarter and winning a fourth-and-one gamble at their own 18 yard line in the third quarter to keep alive a scoring drive.

The only standout defensive play came in the third quarter when Auburn stopped the Commodores inches short of a touchdown after Vanderbilt had a first down at the Auburn 6.

For the game, Cribbs rushed for more than 219 yards in 14 carries and three touchdowns. He also had a 56-yard scoring run nullified by a holding penalty.

In addition to his 79-yard scoring run, Brooks also scored touchdowns on a 15-yard run and on a two-yard pass from quarterback Charles Thomas.

Clemson Skunks VPI 21-0

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Billy Lott threw two scoring passes to flanker Billy Tuttle as Clemson's Tigers rolled to 21-0 football victory Saturday over Virginia Tech's Gobblers.

The triumph was the fourth in five starts for the Tigers. It was the third straight defeat for the Gobblers, 3-3, and their first shutout since last year.

Lott hit Tuttle again on an 8-yard scoring pass with just six seconds gone in the second quarter at the end of a 53-yard march.

Clemson's third touchdown came with 2:32 left in the third quarter when Marvin Sims scored on a yard out at the end of a 75-yard advance.

The Tigers' soccer-style kicking specialist, Obed Ariri, added the three extra points to boost his career record to 75.

Louisville Smothers Hurricane 24-7

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Greg Hickman, Bo Haden and Lawrence Mack scored short yardage touchdowns and freshman quarterback Scott Gannon led a rejuvenated Louisville running attack to a 24-7 win over Tulsa in college football Saturday.

Louisville, 3-3, held to seven yards rushing in a 27-0 loss to Florida State last week, erupted for 219 yards on the ground, led by freshman Hickman getting 101, including a one-yard smash in the first quarter that tied the game 7-7.

Meanwhile, the Louisville defense held Tulsa to minus 12 yards rushing.

Westerners Beat Caprock For Homecoming Win

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Army Salinas' nose didn't grow an inch when he said earlier in the week that Lubbock High was "starting to come around".

After watching the Westerners come from behind to defeat Amarillo Caprock 20-13 at Lowrey Field, it's a fact Salinas' statement had some merit to it.

Idle coach-talk it wasn't.

The Westerners came out smoking in the first half, rolling to a 12-0 halftime lead over the Longhorns. But after the mid-way break, it was Caprock's turn to take charge — which it did without hesitating. A 29-yard run by Bobby Short, a Manuel Diaz PAT kick and a 2-step burst by Mark Carrol allowed the 'Horns to take a 13-12 lead with 8:47 left in the contest.

But instead of turning belly up at that point, the Westerners punched their timecards back in and went to work.

Starting from their own 20, Lubbock marched 80 yards as the clock was winding down to score the go-ahead TD, a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Gilbert Cuevas, giving LHS an 18-12 lead with 1:06 left in the homecoming contest. Cuevas hit Tino Chap with the two-point conversion pass and the rest was history.

The march, which was so sweet it almost dripped with honey, wasn't without its key plays. Perhaps the most prominent was a 15-yard personal foul penalty against the Horns, following a three-yard dive by fullback Thomas Romero. The 15-yard stepoff moved the ball down to the CHS 20 and from that point the Westerners used two plays — a 9-yard rollout by Quevas and an 11-yard Johnny Johnson gallop — to move into scoring position.

"I thought we proved four things tonight (Saturday), " explained LHS head coach Army Salinas. "We proved we could move with the football when we had to, play under adversity, come back when we had to and finally, play as a team."

The Westerners did just that all right.

The adversity Salinas was talking about came when end Larry Walker was ejected from the game after tossing a couple of punches. According to Salinas, Walker had been baited into the incident.

With Walker riding the bench, Salinas had to go to a "makeshift" offense in the second half.

"That's why we were a little more conservative in the second half," said Salinas. " Without Larry in there we aren't able to pass the ball the way we'd like to."

In the first half, LHS rolled up 251 yards of total offense, doubling its season per game average. But in the final 24 minutes, the Westerners accumulated only 87 yards.

Lubbock had taken the halftime lead after Thomas Romero scored on a four-yard run and Walker had caught a 38-yard strike from Gilbert Cuevas. After both TDs the PAT attempts failed.

The Westerners saw a golden opportunity to score in the first half slip through their fingers when a 38-yard pass from Walker to Cuevas moved the ball down to the four-yard line. But an eligible-receiver penalty nullified the call, bringing the play back.

"That hurt," said Salinas. "If we'd scored then we'd been in a lot better shape."

Chaparrals Glad Sul Ross Gone After Nightmarish 49-0 Loss

By DON HENRY
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

All Friday night, an unattended sprinkler soaked the Coronado High School field, where Lubbock Christian College was scheduled to play Sul Ross on Saturday. Naturally, the field was inundated.

But, that inundation didn't stop when the sprinkler system was shut off; Sul Ross started it right back.

Only Sul Ross' flooding came with points.

Even a change of playing sites didn't help.

When the sprinkler system was turned off at CHS, there were three inches of water on the field. When the Sul Ross system was shut off, there were 49 unanswered points on the scoreboard.

Maybe, now, it's good that the Chaparrals aren't playing Sul Ross but twice this year; the total after two games are Sul Ross 96, LCC 0.

Saturday afternoon's 49-0 Sul Ross runaway left the Chaparrals with a four-game losing streak, a 1-6 record and only two games remaining on their first football schedule.

The next will be here next Saturday against Panhandle (Okla.) State. That contest will be played at Lowrey Field, which will be another field the Chaparrals have tried this season.

Because of the accidental water situation at Coronado's stadium, Saturday's contest was moved to Stephens Field, on the LCC campus, making it three different home sites this year for the vagabond Chaparrals.

The field had nothing to do with it, however. A powerfull Lobo fullback, an accurate quarterback, and offensive and defensive lines which allowed LCC nothing were the keys.

"It was just like the first time," remarked LCC coach Jerry Don Sanders after the final second mercifully ticked off the clock. "We just didn't play against them. . . no intensity. You have to play hard to do any good, and we just didn't play."

Sul Ross turned Rodriguez, a 210-pound freshman fullback, loose on the Chaparrals, and he responded with an opening touchdown and 92 yards rushing. He played but one down past the middle of the second quarter but had two TDs and a rushing average of 5.7 yards per carry.

But, the Chaparrals were well acquainted with him; he was the offensive leader when Sul Ross blanked them 47-0 in Alpine early in September.

Once the Chaparrals slowed down Rodriguez, freshman quarterback Larry Hill took over. He hit five of eight passes for 60 yards and two touchdowns, but the way he embarrassed the LCC secondary, it appeared as if he was hitting everything for 1,000 yards.

As it was, even with coach Joe George flooding the field with reserves, the Lobos amassed 468 yards offense. LCC had 110, only 35 at the half when the score stood 35-0.

It was just Sul Ross' day, as it improved its record to 3-3. On the first drive, it turned a fumbled snap on a punting try into a first-down run. . . it blocked an LCC punt. . . it caught a fumble in the air. . .it intercepted one pass. . and it fell on five LCC fumbles.

The Lobos bruised 74 yards on a time-consuming, 13-play drive after the opening kickoff. Rodriguez carried seven times, including the last, when he muscled his way into the end zone from the 12 with 9:23 left in the first period.

Steve McLaren then booted the first of his seven perfect extra points, and the flooding act was under way.

LCC couldn't move, but Rick Juarez saw nothing except white shirts as he tried to punt. The Lobos blocked his kick, took over at the LCC 23 and scored in just three plays, on an 8-yard pass from Hill to McLaren.

Baylor Bears Shut Door On Mania

Brannan, substituting for injured Mickey Elam, directed three long distance Baylor scoring drives and then took the Bear 62 yards in a desperation race with the clock to set the stage for Bledsoe's winning kick.

Defensive tackle Max McGeary broke through to block two fourth period Southern Methodist field goal attempts after the Mustangs had deadlocked the score at 21 on a sensational 100-yard kickoff return by freshman James Collier.

The loss dumped Southern Methodist from the Southwest Conference's unbeaten ranks, while Baylor improved conference record to 3-1 and its overall season record to 4-2. SMU is now 2-1 in the SWC and 3-2 overall.

Horned Frogs Cook Hapless Rice 17-7

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Christian quarterback Steve Stamp, subbing for starter Kevin Haney, turned two Rice fumbles into touchdown runs of 1 and 16 yards Saturday as the Horned Frogs defeated the Owls 17-7 and ended a nine-game losing streak.

TCU, which lost to Arkansas 16-13 in the closing seconds last week, took a 3-0 lead on its first possession with a 19-yard field goal by Greg Porter and went ahead 10-0 at halftime on a 1-yard plunge by Stamp.

TCU started its first touchdown drive when safety Steve Barnes recovered the first of two costly fumbles by Rice running back Earl Cooper.

Barnes recovered at the Rice 39 and TCU drove to the Owl 1 where Jimmy Allen failed to score on two line plunges. Stamp then piled into the end zone with four seconds left in the half.

The Frogs, who had not won since a 13-7 victory over Tulane last season, struck again early in the third quarter when Cooper fumbled and Jim Bayuk recovered at the Rice 16. Stamp scored on the first play.

Rice quarterback Randy Hertel, the Southwest Conference's leading passer, got the Owls on the scoreboard with 4:31 left to play with Cooper's 2-yard run to climax a pass-oriented drive. Hertel completed passes of 22 yards to Cooper and 20 yards to Jose Fortune in the drive.

Rice dropped to a 1-5 overall record and 0-3 in Southwest Conference games. TCU now is 1-4 for the season and 1-2 in the SWC.

Rice lost seven turnovers — Cooper's two fumbles and five interceptions on Hertel, which tied a Rice school record for most interceptions in a game.

Cornhuskers Pluck Hapless Jayhawks

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Tim Hager threw a pair of touchdown passes, Dean Sukup kicked three field goals and reserve I-back Craig Johnson ran for two more TDs and set a school record as fifth-ranked Nebraska overcame a slow start and went on to throttle Kansas 42-0 in the Big 8 Conference football opener for both schools Saturday.

After a scoreless first quarter before the Husker homecoming crowd, Sukup opened the second stanza with a 36-yard field goal. Nebraska scored on next seven possessions as the Huskers totally controlled the line of scrimmage.

Jarvis Redwine, with 158 yards rushing for the day, scored on a 54-yard run and Sukup added field goals of 41 and 27 yards to give Nebraska a 15-0 halftime edge.

Mark LeRoy intercepted Kansas quarterback Kevin Clinton on the Jayhawks' first possession of the second half, setting up Hager's 24-yard TD pass to tight end Junior Miller. Hager hit wingback Kenny Brown with a 12-yard scoring aerial less than four minutes later.

Johnson's first score, from one yard out, capped third period play.

Johnson set a Nebraska record with a 94-yard scoring run early in the fourth quarter. Ironically, Redwine's 54-yard TD earlier had the brief distinction of being the longest run from scrimmage by a Husker this year.

Kansas' deepest penetration, to the Nebraska 31, was stymied in the third quarter.

It was the second consecutive shutout for Nebraska, now 5-0, which utilized reserves through most of the second half.

"I think our offense had a good day, but if I had to single out a particular unit, the credit would go to the defense," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "Kansas isn't that good a football team but they have scored points in their previous outings."

The Jayhawks fell to a 1-4 mark.

Nebraska's I.M. Hipp, who needed just 59 yards against the Jayhawks to become the Cornhuskers' all-time rushing leader, managed only 19 yards before reinjuring a troublesome toe.

But Redwine's effort, and the 138 rushing yards that "Super Sub" Johnson picked up, were more than enough to pace the defending Big-8 co-champs.

OSU Surprises Mizzou

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Second-string quarterback John Doerner threw two touchdown passes Saturday and Terry Suellentrop rushed for 146 yards in the second half to rally underdog Oklahoma State to a 14-13 Big Eight football victory over No. 15-ranked Missouri.

Missouri, a three-touchdown favorite, led at halftime 13-0, but kicker Jeff Brockhaus, who kicked two field goals in the first half, missed on three attempts in the final eight minutes after the Cowboys took the lead.

Doerner came off the bench in the second quarter when starter Harold Bailey was injured and brought the Cowboy offense to life in the third period with scoring drives of 80 and 84 yards.

With 8:34 left in the third period, Doerner hit Ron Ingram with a 15-yard scoring strike that was deflected into the receiver's arms by tight end Don Echols.

The Cowboys used 17 plays in their next scoring drive, capped by Doerner's 10-yard pass to Mel Campbell, who beat Bill Whitaker in the corner of the end zone. Colin Ankerson's extra point gave the Cowboys, now 3-2, a 14-13 lead that they never lost. Missouri is also 3-2.

Suellentrop, a seldom-used running back, finished with 152 yards on 22 carries and kept both scoring drives alive with key runs.

Noseguard Norman Goodman blocked Chris Lundgaard's punt early in the first period and Ray Stephens recovered on the Cowboy 24. Seven plays later, James Wilder dived over from the 1 for Missouri's first touchdown in the first half this season.

Eric Wright intercepted a Doerner pass late in the second period and returned it 20 yards to set up a 37-yarder for a 13-0 Missouri advantage.

Irish Down Air Force

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Quarterback Rusty Lisch threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score, and running back Vagas Ferguson had a pair of first-half TDs as 10th-ranked Notre Dame routed Air Force 38-13 Saturday in college football.

The triumph boosted the Fighting Irish to 4-1 on the season, while Air Force dropped to 0-6 and had its losing streak extended to nine games — the longest in academy histry.

Ferguson, who didn't play in the second half, rushed for 84 yards and scored on runs of 5 and 23 yards. He now needs only 21 yards to break the school career rushing record of 2,682 held by Jerome Heavens.

The other Irish first-half scores came on Lisch's 2-yard pass to tight end Nick Vehr, Lisch's 1-yard run, and Chuck Male's 43-yard field goal.

Air Force quarterback Dave Ziebart, who already owns the school total offense record, also claimed the passing mark by completing 15 of 26 passes for 132 yards, including a 2-yard TD toss to tight end Scott Schafer in the third quarter. Ziebart now has 4,344 yards passing, breaking the old standard of 4,283 set by Rich Haynie.

CARDINAL FUMBLE — Stanford quarterback Turk Schonert (14) fumbles the ball during first quarter action in Saturday's Pac-10 game. Schonert shook off the fumble to throw for two touchdowns and another to tie the No. 1-ranked USC Trojans 21-21. It was just one of two surprises in conference action as Washington State upset UCLA, too. (AP Laserphoto)

Stanford Ties USC

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quarterback Turk Schonert threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score Saturday as Stanford rallied from a 21-0 halftime deficit and earned a 21-21 tie with No.1 Southern California in a Pacific-10 Conference football game.

Both teams missed field goal attempts in the closing minute of the game. Stanford's Ken Naber was short on a 53-yard try with 43 seconds left and Southern cal's Eric Hipp had a 39-yard kick blocked after holder Jeff Fisher fumbled the snap as time ran out.

The Cardinals, a three-touchdown underdog, are 3-2-1 and 1-0-1 in Pac-10 play. The Trojans are 5-0-1 and 2-0-1 in conference action.

Schonert's first touchdown pass was a 19-yarder to Mike Dotterer in the third quarter. He completed four of five throws in the Cardinals' drive that began at their 20-yard line.

Stanford cut Southern Cal's lead to 21-14 2½ minutes into the fourth quarter when flanker Ken Margerum hauled in a nine-yard toss from Schonert, who normally has sat out the fourth quarter while freshman quarterback John Elway takes over.

Far West

Charles White gave Southern Cal a 7-0 lead on an eight-yard scoring run to cap a 72-yard march after the opening kickoff. He tallied again in the second quarter on a one-yard burst, making it 14-0.

Marcus Allen dashed 15 yards making it 21-0 midway in the second quarter.

Schonert completed 16 of 27 passes for 163 yards. For the Trojans, White gained 221 yards on 32 carries.

It was White's top rushing game ever, but he lost two fumbles and could manage only 52 yards in the second half against the stiffening Stanford defense. But the outing gave the Trojan senior 4,535 career yards, moving him into sixth place on the NCAA all-time list ahead of former Texas Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

The dramatic finish was the second in as many weeks for Stanford, coming off a 27-24 victory over UCLA in which Naber kicked a 56-yard field goal with no time remaining.

One of the bright spots for USC was the play of cornerback Herb Ward, who recovered a fumble to set up the Trojans' second touchdown and intercepted a pass that led to the third.

Leading to Southern Cal's downfall was its failure to establish a passing attack. Quarterback Paul McDonald, who entered the contest as the nation's top-ranked passer, completed 7 of 13 throws for just 67 yards and had two intercepted.

Elway, playing only the second quarter, completed 9 of 16 passes for 118 yards for the Cardinals, but was unable to put any points on the board.

Iowa State Edges KSU

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Iowa State went 29 yards in seven plays for a second-quarter touchdown following a Kansas State fumble and made it stand up for a 7-3 victory in the Big Eight opener for both teams Saturday.

Kansas State disappointed a homecoming crowd of 23,400 by failing to get its offense going under three different quarterbacks. The only Wildcats' score came on a 33-yard Butch Stocking field goal after Iowa State fumbled the ball away on its own 30.

The win was the second of the year for Iowa State against three defeats. Kansas State's record dropped to 2-3.

The Wildcats lost the services of starting quarterback Sheldon Paris on the play before Stocking kicked the Wildcats' field goal. Paris suffered a shoulder dislocation.

Paris had been unable to maintain a sustained drive for the Wildcats and his successors Darrell Dickey, the freshman son of Kansas State Coach Jim Dickey, and Paul Hobbs, a junior fared, little better.

For Iowa State, quarterback Walter Grant teamed with Payne to give the Cyclones a big edge in offense. The Cyclones had 305 yards total offense to 143 for Kansas State.

Cougars Upset UCLA

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State cornerback Mike Snow blocked two field goal attempts and deflected an apparent touchdown pass in the end zone as the Cougars upset Pacific-10 football rivals UCLA, 17-14, before a record Martin Stadium crowd Saturday.

Fullback Brian Sickler capped an 84-yard drive in the fourth quarter with a one-yard touchdown plunge for the winning score to complete a comeback from a 14-7 halftime deficit.

Running back Tim Harris scampered 33 yards with a pitchout from quarterback Steve Grant on the previous play to set up the score.

The winning drive was helped by a personal foul for a late hit against UCLA safety Ken Easley, which gave WSU a first down at UCLA's 34 when it appeared the drive might stall.

The Cougars drove to the UCLA five to start the second half but lost the ball on a fumble by Grant, but UCLA gave the ball back when tailback Freeman McNeil fumbled on the Bruin 20 and cornerback Hugh Parker recovered.

The Cougars then drove to the UCLA 4, and Clete Casper kicked a 21-yard field goal to cut the margin to 14-10.

Snow blocked a 41-yard field goal attempt by Peter Boermeester as time ran out in the first half. In the fourth quarter, Snow foiled Boermeester's 25-yard attempt that would have given the Bruins a 17-10 lead.

One play earlier, Snow had deflected UCLA quarterback Rick Bashore's pass which appeared to be on target to flanker Willie Curran in the end zone.

The game attracted 32,651 spectators.

Washington State is now 2-4 on the season and 1-2 in the Pac-10. The Bruins are now 2-4 overall and 1-1 in conference play.

The Washington State victory broke a 12-game UCLA winning streak in the series and was the first Cougar triumph over the Bruins since 1958. The Bruins lead the series 24-7.

California Bombs Oregon State

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Rich Campbell threw for 292 yards and two touchdowns as California rolled over hapless Oregon State 45-0 in a Pacific-10 football game Saturday afternoon.

Campbell, who played less than two full quarters, led a California offense which rolled up 583 yards and scored almost everytime it had the ball.

Cal is now 3-1 in the Pac-10, and 4-2 overall, while Oregon State is 0-4 and 0-6.

California went 71 yards in 11 plays with the opening kickoff and scored on Paul Jones' one-yard run. After the teams exchanged punts, the Bears moved 64 yards in five plays with John Tuggle scoring from the six to make it 14-0.

Cal's Mick Luckhurst missed a field goal early in the second quarter, but made up for that with a 25-yard boot on the Bears' next possession.

SCHOOLBOY FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Top-Ranked Cooper Rolls On

By The Associated Press

Abilene Cooper — the No. 1 ranked team in Texas — used a tight defense and a fourth quarter touchdown reception by tight end Alvin Jenkins to ice a 21-0 win over Odessa in a schoolboy football matchup Friday night.

The unbeaten Cougars scored in the first quarter on a 30-yard inside reverse run by Mike Flores and added another tally in the third stanza on Keith Pantalion's 8-yard touchdown pass reception from quarterback John Slaughter.

The win was the fifth straight for Cooper, the top-ranked Class 4A squad in The Associated Press schoolboy football poll. Eight of the top 10 teams in the division came out victorious during the sixth week of the 1979 schoolboy gridiron season.

Third-ranked Plano intercepted four Lake Highlands passes — converting two into touchdowns — to shut out their district rivals by a 30-0 count. Lake Highlands was ranked No. 9 in Class 4A coming into Friday night's game.

Plano scored first on a field goal, led 10-0 at the half and waltzed away with the game with three touchdowns in the first 18 minutes of the second half.

"This is the best game we've played all year," said Plano coach Tom Kimbrough. "We had balance from our offense and defense. I was pleased."

Plano quarterback Ronnie Mullins demonstrated his skill with the option play and ended up as the game's top rusher with 110 yards on 17 carries. Fullback Greg Birdsall added to the attack with 85 yards on 14 carries. Each scored two touchdowns.

Sixth-ranked Houston Stratford fell for the second time this year and suffered its first shutout loss since 1976 as unranked Houston Spring Woods pulled off a shocking 9-0 upset.

Spring Woods scored on a 45-yard field goal in the first quarter by Scott Stonestreet and an 18-yard touchdown run by Mike Church in the second. The tough Tiger defense sacked Stratford quarterback Jeff Fonden eight times.

No. 2 La Porte beat Pasadena, 27-15, fourth-rated Conroe blasted Cypress-Fairbanks, 56-6; Temple, fifth-ranked, blanked Round Rock, 27-0; No. 7 Converse Judson rolled over Laredo Martin, 48-0; eight-rated Killeen edged surprising Waco Richfield, 22-21; and Highland Park, No. 10, nosed out Richardson, 21-17.

Jasper, the king of the hill in Class 3A, defeated unranked Silsbee, 23-0. The nine teams ranked behind Jasper also came out on the better half of the score Friday night.

No. 2 Kerrville Tivy clobbered Carrizo Springs, 42-0; third-ranked Beaumont Hebert beat cross-town rival Beaumont South Park, 35-7; No. 4 Paris, powered by Ricky Dirks' three touchdown runs, blasted Liberty-Eylau, 42-14 and fifth-rated Huntsville steamrolled Houston King, 42-0.

Gregory-Portland, No. 6, downed Calallen, 27-6; seventh-ranked Estacado beat Lamesa, 35-0; San Angelo Lake View, rated eighth, used two touchdowns by running back Mike Doyle to hold off Odessa Ector, 18-14; No. 9 Pecos won a defense-dominated clash with Snyder, 3-0 and tenth-ranked Cuero embarrassed San Antonio Southside, 55-0.

More than half of the ranked teams in Class 2A and Class A had the weekend off.

Pittsburg — the top-ranked team in 2A — blanked Hooks, 40-0; No. 2 Childress rolled to a 35-0 win over Tulia; fourth-ranked Breckenridge beat Comanche, 26-7; Wylie, No. 5, crushed Kaufman, 31-0; and tenth-rated Hondo outlasted Pearsall, 26-13.

Kenedy, Littlefield, Hallettsville, San Antonio Randolph and Hays Consolidated — the other ranked 2A clubs — did not play.

China Spring — the cream of the crop in Class A — edged Moody, 7-6, for its fifth straight win. In other action, No. 2 Haskell bombed Crowell, 54-0; third-rated Hawkins beat Sabine, 23-12; fifth-ranked Seagraves downed O'Donnell, 41-0; and No. 9 Dilley squeaked past Three Rivers, 14-6.

The poll's other ranked Class A teams — Glen Rose, Mason, Troup, Flatonia and Falls City — were not scheduled.

LCC Schedules Women's Golf

The women's golf championship of the Lubbock Country Club is scheduled Tuesday-Thursday this week. The qualifying round is set for Monday.

Katie Quest is the defending LCC champion.

'Pokes, Rams In Hate Match

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys still think the Los Angeles Rams are chokers. The Los Angeles Rams still think they can whip the Cowboys' posterior.

Such is the atmosphere for another meeting — this one a Sunday night special — between two National Football League teams where working up a good case of hate is no problem.

"We've got the Rams just where we want 'em and that means we're going to keep beating 'em because they are our main competitors in the National Conference," says Cowboy free safety Cliff Harris.

Harris continues, "I can't think of anybody I'd rather beat. They like to talk a lot. Of course, we have Thomas Henderson to try to match that. But Thomas isn't talking all that much this week. He is just thinking it."

What Henderson and most of the Cowboys "think" is that Los Angeles doesn't play well in the clutch.

The Rams have been their division champion six times but never made it to the Super Bowl. One reason is they have yet to jump their Cowboy hurdle, losing 37-7 in 1975 and 28-0 last year in NFC Title games.

The latter joust is the one where Henderson rubbed it in by intercepting a pass and running it back for a touchdown.

Los Angeles beat Dallas last year in the regular season after Coach Ray Malavasi correctly predicted that, "We're going to whip their asses."

Malavasi won't say that this time although he concludes: "We don't look at it as revenge...we look at it as competition...we're very confident."

The Rams played well the last time they were in Texas Stadium, beating Dallas 14-12 in 1976 in a first-round playoff game. Then they lost the next week to Washington.

The Dallas players also forget that Los Angeles is just one of five clubs that leads its all-time series against the Cowboys by the margin of 7-6.

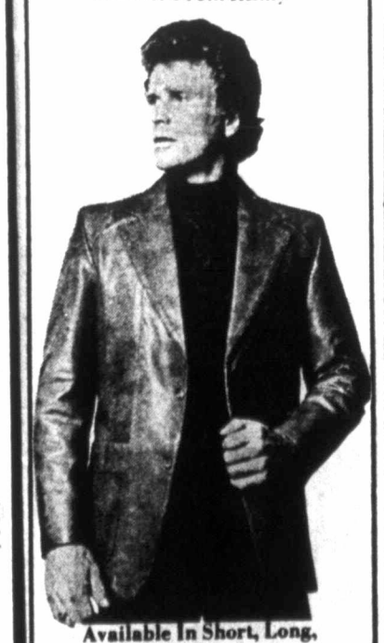

Dallas is a five-point favorite for the 8 p.m. CST kickoff before a sellout crowd of 65,000 fans.

The Rams are 4-2 and lead the NFC West by a game. Dallas is 5-1 and tied with Philadelphia in the NFC East.

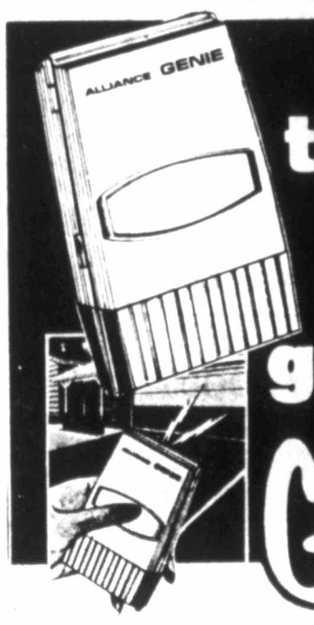

Wide receiver Ron Jessie, who is lost with a fractured fibula, is the latest injury problem for the Rams. The same injury is currently sidelining guard Dennis Harrah.

The Cowboys are healthy and have added former Baltimore defensive end John Dutton to the roster. He is not likely to play against LA.

Hatcheries Aid Bass, Stripers

A good year of hatchery production has resulted in the stocking of more than two million striped bass and 4.7 million hybrid stripers in Texas reservoirs.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department crews during June also stocked approximately two million Florida largemouth bass and 942,000 smallmouth bass.

The weather cooperated this past spring for striped bass production, as widespread rains drew mature fish upstream where they could be captured by technicians for artificial spawning.

This year's production more than tripled that of previous years for hybrid stripers, which are a cross between striped and white bass. Hybrids do not reproduce, but are valuable as a put-grow-and-take sport fish for powerplant lakes and other reservoirs where there is too little river inflow to make natural reporoduction of pure stripers a possibility.

Cool spring nights and generally erratic weather conditions hampered smallmouth bass production at the San Marcos hatchery. It was a good spring for production of the Florida strain of largemouth black bass.

Area Fish Lucrative

Buffalo Springs Lake — "Fishing is very good right now," reports Barnie Greenfield at the concession-bait store. All species are producing action. Charles Baker used crank bait to land a 6 1/4 pound channel cat, and Milton Paul of Slaton fished near the bridge to haul in two channels weighing 6 1/4 and 7 1/2 pounds. David Foster tested the upper lake area with plastic worms to get a string of seven bass with a total weight of 9 1/4 pounds. Earl Eldredge teamed up with his brother Malcolm to hook several bass around the cattails in the lower lake. Keith Morgan used a plastic worm to land a 3 pound bass. Crappie action is excellent in most areas of the lake; some of the crappie are weighing 1 1/4 pounds. The carp and perch continue to bite in all areas of the lake.

Oak Creek Lake — The past two weeks have produced some of the best cat fishing ever experienced in the Blackwell area. The yellow cats are providing the most attention with individual weights hitting 35, 40, 46 and 51 pounds last week. Several nice strings of white bass were reported caught by anglers trolling the north flats and deep water around the points. With the water temperature holding at 70 degrees, Ike Pate at Sportsman's Lodge said the next six weeks will likely offer more excellent fishing for channels and yellows.

White River Lake — Pat Keeton of Lubbock used big minnows on the lake to bring in a 3 pound bass, and three channel cats each weighing 2 1/2 pounds. H.D. Stewart of Lubbock worked the crappie house area to hook a 4 pound bass, plus three channels with a total weight of 17 pounds. Eldon West of Littlefield landed a 4 pound 13 ounce bass to prove the good days of fishing are still here. The lake is in good condition.

Tascosa Takes CC Crown

HEREFORD (Special) — David Williams of Amarillo Tascosa outraced Monterey's David Howard to win the individual title at the Hereford cross-country meet here Saturday.

The Avalanche-Journal means value. Value that is both tangible and intangible.

Intangible value that comes with the quality of news coverage you receive by reading The Avalanche-Journal — a level of editorial excellence on the local, national and international levels unparalleled in West Texas.

Then there are the tangible benefits derived from reading the Avalanche-Journal. The cash benefits. The money you can save by subscribing to the A-J.

For instance, we publish a variety of store coupons each week. By using just some of them, you can save enough on purchases to more than pay for that week's A-J. Add to this the many advertised sales and your savings are greater.

All this boils down to one point. Subscribing to The Avalanche-Journal is more than getting a newspaper. It's making a profitable investment.

Majority Leader Feels U.S. Must Build Military Power Now

WASHINGTON (AP) — To slow the international arms race later, the United States must build its military power now, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday.

Byrd, who has not yet officially announced support of the SALT II arms limitation treaty, said that if the Senate rejects the treaty, "there are no limits on the Soviets."

And even if the Senate votes for arms limitation, "we've got to build up to the limits allowed in SALT II," he said at his regular Saturday news conference.

"We've got to build up ... not only for our own security, but to help bring about meaningful arms reduction in SALT III."

He said NATO allies as well as the United States should continue modernization because "unless you have matching forces, you have nothing to bargain with. And unless you have something to bargain with, there's no reason to believe the Soviets will reduce their forces."

Byrd, D-W.Va., said that unless the Senate ratifies the SALT II agreement, the U.S. government will be forced to spend even more to build up the military and will be less capable of monitoring Soviet military moves than with the treaty.

But he stopped short of outright endorsement, saying "nobody should rush to say yes or no."

He said he met Friday with about 10 senators on apparently opposite sides of SALT debate so far — "senators very strong for more defense and senators not so strong for it."

"I wasn't seeking converts," he said, but airing the matter in what he called "a very good session" involving both Democrats and Republicans.

He wouldn't say who was invited except Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., an advocate of higher defense spending, and two senators — Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., and Alan Cranston, D-Calif. — whom Byrd appointed to head informal groups studying the competing issues of reducing arms and increasing spending.

Though a number of Democrats have publicly criticized the treaty, he said, there also seems to be "more and more a party-line approach on SALT II, and that's bad."

He still hopes to have the issue settled this year, possibly as soon as Thanksgiving although "we might be here till Christmas," Byrd said.

A big factor now is White House delivery of the administration's five-year defense plan, which senators have requested and which the administration has promised.

Several senators have called for a 5 percent annual increase in defense spending the next few years, but Byrd said he'd heard no senator demand such a percentage in the five-year plan as the price of SALT support.

However, he did say treaty approval was unlikely unless the plan is laid out for the Senate.

Museum Celebrates 50th Anniversary

The 1979 Annual Meeting of the West Texas Museum Association will be a very special occasion.

The banquet meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center will mark the 50th anniversary of the Museum Association.

In 1919, the West Texas Museum Association was begun as the Plains Museum Society, with 29 members. In 1979, the membership has grown to more than 1,400, all of whom will be invited to the Association's 50th anniversary celebration, and the membership goal for this 50th anniversary year is two thousand.

Each of the past presidents of the Association will be honored at the dinner by having a table named in his honor. All living past presidents have been issued special invitations to attend the celebration, and Association members hope that those who are deceased will be represented at the dinner by relatives, according to Mrs. Jack Strong, chairman of the 50th anniversary committee.

In keeping with the 50th anniversary theme, "Opening the future by understanding the past," Mrs. William Mingus has written a brief, entertaining history of the Museum, to be presented especially for the occasion. Slides and pantomime will accompany the production. Mrs. Frank Goodwin will sing musical selections appropriate to each stage of the history.

Dr. William Curry Holden and Mrs. George Wesendonk (nee Sylva Wilson), two of the original five persons who signed the association's charter in 1929, will be present, and recognized for their contributions.

The annual meeting is the customary occasion for awarding the "action awards" of the Association to those who have contributed significantly to the culture of the South Plains.

The theme for the 50th anniversary celebration has inspired a commemorative letter opener to be given to those holding Association memberships at the $50 level or above this year.

A medallian embedded in the lucite handle of the letter opener depicts the stages of growth of the museum. Represented in relief are the original basement building completed in 1937, the facility (now part of Holden Hall) completed in 1950, and the large new structure on 4th street that the Museum has occupied since 1970. The words, "Opening the future — West Texas Museum Association," surrounds the art work. On the reverse side is the Museum's new logo.

In celebrating its 50th anniversary, the Association membership committee seeks to increase membership from 1,400 to more than 2,000 persons. October is membership emphasis month. Individual and family memberships are available for $15, associate memberships for $25, active memberships for $50, sustaining memberships for $100, participating memberships for $500 and corporate memberships from $1,000.

Members are given advance notice of exhibits, special programs and acquisitions. They receive "The Museum Digest" and are eligible for special tours of other museums.

Membership dues support exhibits, special programs, planetarium programs and equipment, acquisitions for the permanent collection and the purchase of art. As dues are paid throughout this year, one of the limited edition of 500 letter openers will be sent for each membership at the $50 or above level, until all have been claimed.

Holden Recalls First Museum

Dr. William Curry Holden has worn many hats. As scholar, historian, author, archaeologist, anthropologist, teacher and museum director, his contributions to the culture of the South Plains are numerous.

Probably more people know him for his 50-year-long association with the Museum of Texas Tech University than for anything else he has done.

Holden says, however, that if anyone had told him when he was a teenager that he would eventually be director of a museum, he would have thought that person "crazy."

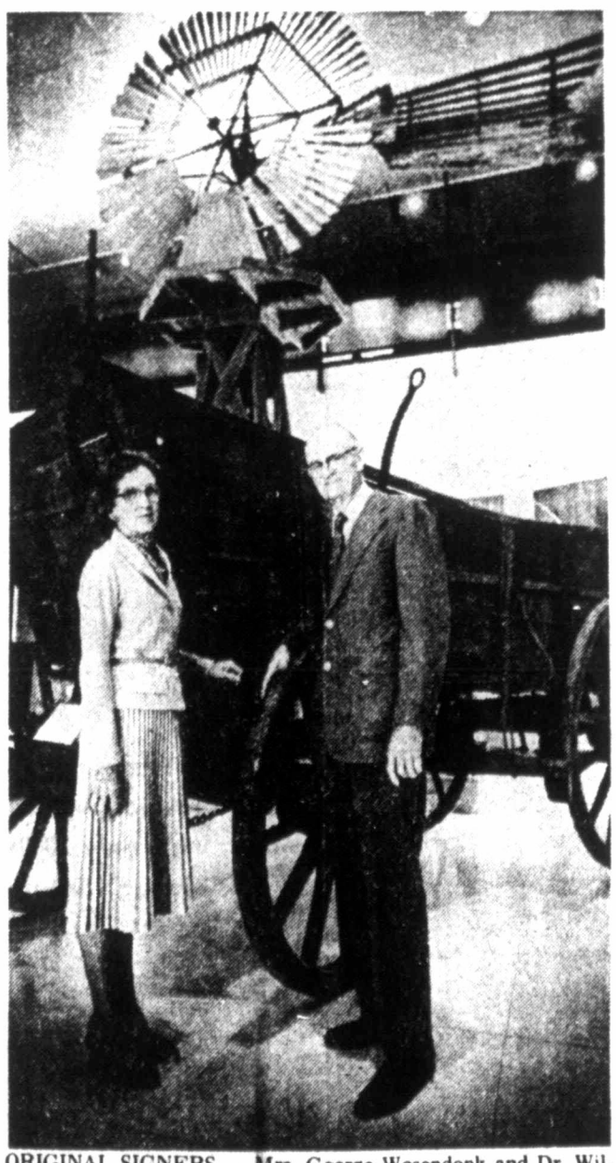

"I never had the slightest idea I would end up doing anything like this," he said.

The Texas Tech Museum was born in Holden's imagination as he searched for a solution to a ticklish problem. As a history professor at McMurry College in Abilene, Holden sponsored a group of young men. Rules at the college were strict, and the men became restless. They even stole chickens from farmers to generate a little excitement, he said.

To keep the young men out of mischief he decided to keep them busy. He talked them into renovating an old one-room shack and cramming it full of "anything old." One could say West Texas' first museum was a rehabilitiation program for chicken thieves.

The people of Abilene, however, were thrilled with their new museum. When people in Lubbock heard about it, they invited Holden to come to Lubbock and help build a museum at Texas Tech.

So began a relationship that has lasted 50 years. Holden became a charter member of the Museum Association, and his is one of the five signatures on the charter.

ORIGINAL SIGNERS — Mrs. George Wesendonk and Dr. William Curry Holden, original signers of the Association's charter in 1929, will be among the members and friends on hand to help the Museum Association celebrate its 50th anniversary Tuesday. Holden serves as director of the Museum which he helped found, while Mrs. Wesendonk, who left Lubbock for several years after taking part in its beginnings, returned to find the progress of the Museum "beyond any hope or dream we ever had back in 1929."

Charter Signer Admires Growth

In 1929, when Sylva Wilson signed the charter creating the West Texas Museum Association, she had no premonition that she would ever be honored for that act.

"I hate to admit it, but I never supposed the museum would be so successful. After all, at that time we didn't have anything except an idea," said Mrs. George Wesendonk (nee Sylva Wilson).

But Mrs. Wesendonk was in on a number of important "firsts" in the 20's. She registered as a student at Texas Technological College on the first day it was possible to do so. She was graduated in the Class of '29, Texas Tech's first four-year graduating class. After graduation, she took a job as secretary to Dean of Women Mary W. Doak at the college.

Mrs. Wesendonk became interested in the fledgling museum association, which elected her secretary, and it was in this capacity that hers was one of the five signatures on the charter.

She married and left Lubbock for a number of years, returning to find the dream of a Museum a reality. "Was I delighted and surprised!" she said of her reaction.

Although she is now deeply involved with the Ranching Heritage Center, she continues to keep tabs on everything going on at the museum. She is also a member of the board of directors of the Texas Tech Ex-Students Association.

"I love Tech," she said, "And I do love that museum. But you know what?" she confided. "I had forgotten all about signing that charter until Winifred Vigness, the Executive Secretary of the Museum Association, told me about it. I really had no sense of a history-making event occurring at the time."

Mahon Computer Helps Find Wanted Books For Library Patrons

by JACQUE HUTCHINS
Family News Staff

How many times have you searched all over town for that book you just had to read? Unfortunately, it couldn't be found on any shelf, anywhere. So, thinking the situation hopeless, you gave up and re-read an old favorite.

If you had contacted Interlibrary Loans at the Mahon Library, chances are that special book could have been located for you.

Interlibrary Loans operates in almost every library, but the Mahon Library uses a special terminal that feeds into 2,100 libraries across the country. The newly obtained computer system can locate books in other libraries within a matter of seconds.

John Elsweiler, Interlibrary Loans librarian, searches numerous libraries for books that cannot be found in Lubbock. It's just a matter of his punching the book title and author into the terminal, and within seconds the names of libraries handling that books appear on the screen. He then sends a request for that book to be loaned to Lubbock or area libraries.

"The basis behind Interlibrary Loans is that not all libraries can have every book ever published," said Elsweiler. The Mahon branch houses the terminal but it services not only the Lubbock area but 25 surrounding counties. These libraries make telephone requests to Mahon for the use of the terminal services.

"We handled 10,000 requests in the office last year — with 3500 being from Lubbock patrons," said Elsweiler. The 10,000 requests include the servicing of all area libraries asking for book loans and the sending out of books requested by other libraries nationwide.

Not only can the library seek books for loan as far away as New York, but Elsweiler has processed requests to the Mahon library from the CIA library and Yale library. With bibliographical information on five million books, libraries are able to thoroughly serve one another.

It is possible to request magazine and newspaper articles as well as books through the system. Elsweiler says the service is available to the public at no charge. He adds that it can be helpful to students needing research material as well as lawyers and businessmen.

Anyone seeking a book may stop at the Mahon Library or phone in their requests. They merely need to know the name and author of the book, if possible. Elsweiler and his co-worker, Mary Lou DeAnda, punch the information into the terminal, making requests for the book loan to Texas libraries first. The information travels to all available libraries until it is fulfilled. Book delivery may take from five to 30 days.

The person making the request is telephoned when the book arrives. The book can be picked up at the reference desk anytime during regular library hours.

BOOK FINDERS — Mahon Interlibrary Loan Librarian John Elsweiler, with his assistant Mary Lou DeAnda, feeds a book request into a computer terminal that can provide names of any library in the country which has the book on file. This service helps a library patron find the book for which he is searching; the Library will arrange for loan of the book to the local facility. (Staff Photo by Linn Scherwitz)

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

BARBARA WALKER, a local writer and a friend of ours, came into the office the other day with a copy of her latest children's book, looking for a little sympathy. Being in this business and rather frequently on the receiving end of one kind of flack or another, we were able to relate to her plight.

Sometimes the most harmless-seeming remark will rouse somebody's ire and produce an angry letter in our mailbox.

I found her book rather charming. It is named "A Good Fish Dinner," and has pleasant illustrations, drawn with a light hand by Art Cummins. Published by Parents' Magazine Press, it was the subject of a spate of letters to the publisher from irate mamas who feel that the book is objectionable for one reason or another. You never know when you are going to pull somebody's string, as we told Barbara.

The story (dare I give the plot away?) concerns a fox who tricks a fishmonger and steals some of his fish. The wolf follows his example but is more greedy, and gets caught and "whacked" to death by the fishmonger.

GOODNESS KNOWS, I approve of mamas who read their children's books and have enough backbone to object to those which offend. (I hope that they exercise the same caution about the television programs they watch and the cereals they eat.)

But I was a little nonplussed over the nature of the criticisms. Some of the moms objected to the word "dead" in the book (the fox and the wolf "played" dead, and at the end, of course, the wolf really was). One mother wrote that she was not ready for her child to deal with the concept of death. I hadn't even realized that the book was dealing with the concept of death, which shows how dull I am.

I thought of how lots of the old children's stories ended in death for the wolf, the witch or the bad guy. Later on, as our society became more sensitive to such things, some of those more violent endings were removed, as I discovered when I read the same stories to my kids. Nowadays the wolf gets rehabilitated at the end, and the old witch in Hansel and Gretel probably opens up a day nursery, which is noble and uplifting. But we still break into applause when the witch in the Wizard of Oz yells "Help! I'm melting!" and disappears like an ice cube on a hot stove. Now that is a violent ending, aggravated by the Munchkins dancing around singing, "Ding! Dong! The Witch is dead!" (Somebody in this office remarked that witches in those stories were always old ladies, which is unkind and unfair. After I thought about it, I agreed. It's hard to know what to take offense at these days.)

I WASN'T AWARE that we were acting out our violent tendencies when, as kids, we played at dying. We didn't usually have guns (neither did my kids) but that didn't trouble us; most of our toys were homemade or existed only in our imaginations anyway. To die well was an important element of the game, and villains were chosen for their talent at this. One kid, Eddie Whipple, was known for his dramatic deaths, which sometimes took several minutes of flailing around and final twitching to complete. I guess our play would seem rather insensitive today.

Some of the readers' mothers thought that Barbara's book was too violent generally.

We are doing a lot of thinking about violence these days, with good reason, but our "entertainment" still seems to get more violent all the time. I watched a movie with the kids the other night which seemed to consist mostly of bad language and car crashes. The cowboy movies I grew up on had lots of shooting and killing, but no bad language, and people died quickly and bloodlessly, to reappear as the villain of the next movie.

It occurred to some of us as we were watching news films from Vietnam that those were real people dying, who would not reappear the next night, and we became more sensitive to this sort of thing. I was glad when they began to portray death more realistically in films, because I thought it would seem less like a game, and help us appreciate that being shot is not fun. Instead, we seem to have become immune to death and violence — like bad language, it takes more and better violence to shock us.

I TOOK BARBARA'S BOOK home and tried it out on the Angel, who is a little old for it, but the softest-hearted person I know. (When we took her to the steer roping at the O. S. Ranch she took one look at a little calf being thrown, declared, "that's mean!" and refused to watch.)

She seemed to have no trouble with the book. A steady diet of Saturday morning cartoons (the road runner is our favorite, and terrible things happen in that cartoon) have given her a pretty good sense of what is real and what is play.

I don't pretend to know what this all means. On the one hand, we are reduced to tears by the sight of baby seals being clubbed to death in Alaska; on the other hand, our children watch and hear things on television, that are really quite horrible and shocking, without batting an eye. Does that mean that we are becoming more or less violent?

THE MOST CURIOUS criticism of Barbara's book was, it seemed to me, the inference that the story would teach kids "it's all right to steal as long as you don't get caught." I can't think of a more pervading or worrisome lesson being taught in our society than that one. But if I had been looking for a message instead of just enjoying the book, I would have thought the lesson was that just because your buddy gets away with it doesn't mean that you will. And that is a problem most kids are going to have to encounter sooner or later.

Even if you disapprove of the book, it can open fruitful conversations with your kids about the nature of right and wrong behavior. If the kid sees you cheating on your income tax or breaking the speed limit, he is unlikely to take very seriously a discussion of the fox's morals. And in a world in which one person can be sent to jail for cheating on welfare forms and another go free after embezzling hundreds of thousands of dollars, a kid may be somewhat confused about what is expected of him.

On the other hand, I suspect most kids are more canny than we give them credit for...

Experts Gather Data On 'Remarriages'

With the rising rate of divorce and remarriage, more and more adults and children are today living in step-families.

Each year in the United States, one-half million adults become step-parents, and there are over 15 million step-children under 18 in this country.

As a discipline concerned with relationships within families, the Department of Home and Family Life at Texas Tech University believes it can make a contribution to families and to educators by gathering information on remarriage.

The researchers, Dr. Nancy Bell and Ann Chambers, hope is to identify successful patterns of interaction in situations which are unique to remarriage, those patterns which lead to satisfaction for the new family.

In order to do such a study, the department, a division of the College of Home Economics, is seeking cooperation from the community. Questionnaires have been mailed to a group of Lubbock residents, but the researchers are interested in hearing from other such families who have not received the questionnaires.

The researchers would like to hear from members of the community who have remarried and who might be interested in participating in the research project. The study would not involve a great deal of time, according to the researchers, and interviews would be arranged at the convenience of the participants. In exchange for the time involved, the persons would be given book lists and information on courses and services available to remarried couples and, when complete, a summary of the results of the research.

All information will be confidential, and no one except the inteviewer will have access to the information provided.

To participate in the project, or to receive more information, interested persons should call Dr. Bell or Miss Chambers, 742-3000, or write to them care of the Department of Home and Family Life at Texas Tech, Box 4170, Lubbock 79409.

Simple Life Not So Easy

NEW YORK (Special) — Ah, to return to the simple life ... no family budgets to balance ... no gas shortages to endure ... no inflation to battle. Life could be so sweet.

Don't bet on it.

Your over-civilized existence is probably a lot better than you think, says the American Council of Life Insurance.

For example, try comparing yourself to the more than 3.1 billion people — almost two-thirds of the world's population — who live that "simple life" in less developed countries!

To give you an idea of what it could be like, the Council suggests you try the following:

• Remove all furniture and utensils from your home. Keep only a few old blankets, a kitchen table, a chair, a few pots.

• Discard all clothing. Keep only a few of the oldest for each member of the family.

• For food, keep only a small sack of sugar, some salt, onions and a small bowl of chick peas.

• Remove all sinks and toilets. Cut off your water and electricity.

Now comes the tough part. Demolish your home and move your family into a hut you've built yourself. No television. But there will be one radio in town you can listen to.

Of course, you will have to throw away all newspapers, magazines and books. And discard all your insurance policies — if anything happens, you're strictly on your own.

Finally, set up the nearest hospital no closer than 12 miles away and replace the chief physician with a midwife.

SNYDER (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Rogers of Lubbock and Col. and Mrs. Joe N. Rogers of Oklahoma City, Okla. celebrated their golden and silver anniversaries, respectively, Saturday with a reception in the Citizens Community Center.

Mary Francis Rose and Rogers were married Oct. 19, 1929 in Frederick, Okla. Their daughter, Coleen, and Joe Neal Rogers were married Oct. 16, 1954 in Oklahoma City.

FASHIONABLY ATTIRED — Elegantly sophisticated, this two piece suit features a cardigan jacket with padded shoulders and a slim front buttoned, yoked skirt. It is styled in wide wale corduroy. High heeled sandals, textured stockings and the very important hat make for the right accessories.

Many Bakers Prefer Cocoa

NEW YORK (Special) — Do people buy cocoa just to make cocoa? Silly question? Not at all. According to recent supermarket sales studies, the majority of "scratch" bakers use cocoa, rather than all other forms of chocolate, to create chocolate recipes.

There are a number of reasons why experienced bakers choose cocoa. Because cocoa is pure chocolate in highly concentrated form, using it results in products with richer, more "chocolate" flavor. In addition, because three-quarters of the cocoa butter — which has no flavor properties — has been removed, cocoa is also significantly lower in fat than other forms of chocolate.

For dollar-conscious consumers, cocoa offers another benefit: six ounces of cocoa goes as far as eight ounces of baking chocolate. And, if fact, cocoa can be substituted for baking chocolate in most recipes. The conversion formula is simple: three level tablespoons of unsweetened cocoa plus one of shortening (liquid or solid) equals a one-ounce square of unsweetened baking chocolate.

DRY MILK

An eight-ounce glass of reconstituted dry whole milk contains about 150 calories and has a nutrient profile similar to that of the whole milk from which it was made.

MERRY
Hassle-Free
CHRISTMAS

Playing Santa to friends and loved ones can be fun . . . but, if 8 hours, 2 aching arches and one empty shopping bag later, you're still looking for that "perfect" gift . . . give your feet a rest and your spirits a lift at DIAMONTRIGUE!

You'll not only discover the most beautiful of diamond simulations, you'll also discover how to enjoy a hassle-free Christmas.

Just have your special someone visit Diamontrigue now and ask for a CHRISTMAS GIFT SELECTOR CARD. It's so simple:

First, they write down their choices on the card, selecting from rings, earrings, tie tacs, necklaces, bracelets and stick pins.

Then, you take the card to Diamontrigue and select something from the suggestions your special someone has made.

That way, the gift you give will not only be a welcome one, but still a surprise, since the recipient won't know which you've chosen!

Diamontrigue Generation II adds a flair to the holidays, with perfectly cut, faceted and polished diamond simulations, all set in 14 karat white or yellow gold mountings – all at an unbelievable fraction of the cost of diamonds.

Don't risk giving an unwanted gift this Christmas. Use the Diamontrigue Gift Selector Card: after all, wouldn't you really like to please someone this year?

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I owe you heartfelt thanks for an article you wrote concerning missing persons some eight or nine months ago.

I had cried and prayed so much for someone to show me how to get in touch with my son, whom I hadn't heard from in two and a half years. Then I read in your column that the Salvation Army helps locate people, so I wrote to them immediately.

In a matter of days they wrote back. Those wonderful people didn't leave a stone unturned in trying to locate my son. One night, less than two weeks later, my telephone rang. It was my son calling! Abby, that had to be the happiest day of my life. We are now reunited.

Please print that information that helped me find my boy, since there are a lot of people who don't know where some of their loved ones are, or even if they are alive.

God bless you and the Salvation Army!

VIRGINIA B.

DEAR VIRGINIA: Anyone wanting to locate a lost relative should write to:

Salvation Army Missing Persons
Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274

Please note the following: The Salvation Army will search for relatives ONLY, and even in a foreign country, but not for juvenile runaways or children kidnapped by the other parent.

They are not set up for adoption or genealogy research. And please do not ask them to locate a relative to collect a debt.

The Salvation Army is a non-profit organization, supported by donations, so if you request a search, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a few dollars for long-distance telephone calls.

DEAR ABBY: What would cause a grown man to take guests in the house on a grand tour, pointing out the furnishings, objects of art, pieces that were found in various places around the world during his travels, etc. ad nauseam?

The man is my husband and I am so embarrassed when I see the looks on their faces. It sounds like so much bragging to me. I've even heard him mention how much various items cost. Lord, help me!

We do have a lovely home, have traveled extensively and have collected some interesting things, but, Abby, if he would just wait until someone admired an object or asked him where it came from, there might be some justification for all his talk.

If he had been needy in his childhood I might be able to understand, but that was not the case.

Tell me, please, what I can do to help him.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Tell him privately and lovingly, in a non-critical way, what you have told me. Almost every reasonable person will accept suggestions graciously if they are presented properly.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My wife's father is being transferred to a job near our home and has hinted that he would like to spend the working week living with us. (We have a guest room.)

Dad is a kind and generous man and I get along very well with him, but I value my privacy and prefer to live alone with my wife.

It would be possible for Dad to commute to his new job just as he is doing in his present one.

I feel a bit guilty not insisting that he live with us, but I have to admit that if he were to stay here from Monday through Friday of every week I wouldn't have the privacy I presently enjoy.

So what's the answer.

ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANON: A couple should not open their home to anyone unless both parties are in complete agreement. If either one has reservations, the word from here is DON'T!

CANCER ANSWER LINE

A farmer explains: "I have been thinking about buying cancer insurance. Is this a good idea?"

ANSWERline: It is a very good idea to have health insurance to cover medical and hospital bills for all types of illness. If you are protected in this way it is not necessary to buy special or additional cancer insurance. No individual knows what illness the future holds. To assume that it will be cancer is wrong, because the odds are in your favor. However, to make sure that you are protected in case of a serious illness, choose a general health policy that provides for at least 30 days in the hospital, home-health benefits for such services as homemaker care and coverage of outpatient treatments such as drug or radiation therapy. In choosing a policy, you should be aware that although a "deductible" may be high — this is the amount you have to pay before the insurer takes over — it may be offset by a longer term of coverage.

• • •

A lawyer writes: "Six months ago I had a physical examination including a 'procto.' A benign growth was found and removed. Why was this done?

ANSWERline: A 'procto' is an examination of the rectum and bowel by means of a lighted tube that can reveal abnormal growths of tissue called polyps which may be cancerous, or benign. Since benign polyps may sometimes develop into cancerous growths, many experts advise that they be removed. You did a great deal to protect your health.

• • •

A teenage girl writes: "My mother is in the hospital recovering from a mastectomy. I am worried and want to help her, but I don't know what to do. Do you have any suggestions?"

ANSWERline: When a family member has an illness and surgical treatment, the rest of the family suffers as well. Although your mother has had a breast removal, which can be a shock for everyone concerned, you would do well to understand that this is a positive thing. It was a treatment to help save her life. You can help your mother and yourself by accepting her breast surgery and by showing loving concern but not pity. Show your mother extra affection. Help her when she needs your help, but do not make her feel helpless. As the experience of thousands of women each year proves, it is possible to lead an active, healthy life after breast cancer surgery. With the aid of an artificial breast form and a few minor wardrobe adjustments, a woman can look like her usual self. As a daughter you may worry about your health because your mother has had breast cancer. It would be a good idea for you to speak with a physician to ease those fears. Additionally, your local Unit of the American Cancer Society may have a Reach to Recovery program. If so, a volunteer who has undergone a mastectomy will be glad to talk with you and your mother about her surgery.

• • •

Do you have further questions? Call your local unit of the American Cancer Society or call M.D. Anderson Hospital & Tumor Institute's Cancer Information Service, 1-800-392-2040 toll-free in Texas.

Waldorf Chefs Reveal Secrets

NEW YORK (Special) — The famed Waldorf-Astoria is prepared to reveal — and teach its chef's show-off cooking secrets. A first-time this year course, "I Cooked ... at The Waldorf-Astoria," is offered weekly, Monday through Wednesday in classes limited to 30.

The course of chef-supervised, cook-it-yourself sessions (48 hours of instruction) is $375 per person. On selected weekends, Saturday and Sunday, a faster course (16 hours of instruction) is $295 per person.

Included are luncheons in the elegant Waldorf restaurants; chef demonstrations; comparative tastings at lectures; buying tips; kitchen tour; champagne graduation reception; "I Cooked at The Waldorf" chef's apron; notebook and tote bag; plus diaploma autographed by executive chef, Arno Schmidt.

For more information and schedules, write to Beverly Barbour's "Learning with Professionals," 325 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10022.

Be Beautiful

If your skin is showing the effects of time, if dry lines are beginning to form in your delicate eye area, if your skin looks dull, or your skin is oily or so dry it is flaking and peeling, just imagine what it will be when cold weather sweeps in.

It is time for special care to renew fresh new cells that keep your skin young looking. You need a plan! You need our professional care for the change of season. The most expensive cosmetics in the world are still secondary to clear, beautiful skin. Don't make the mistake of trying to cover up what you can change.

Most of us who have lived in West Texas have skin which is dehydrated, a term used to describe a lack of moisture, not oil. We have the answer. Both men and women can replace that valuable moisture with the authentic European facial treatment created by international skin care expert, Christine Valmy. Ms. Valmy's products are derived from animal and plant substances, and her scientifically designed skin care machines really do marvelous things for the complexion.

Doctors and nutrition experts agree that good eating habits, plenty of exercise, and adequate rest will encourage skin to glow and be beautiful whether you are young or old. What we offer to you through our professional skin care room and make-up artists is the availability of even a more radiant you.

Call on us today. These services offered to you through our professional salon or through the student services at a lower price.

Solar Society Plans Meeting

The Solar Energy Society will hold an organizational meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Flame Room of the First National Pioneer Building for the purpose of forming a solar energy society in West Texas.

Membership to the society will be open to all persons interested in the use and development of renewable energy resources such as solar, wind and biomass.

The enthusiastic attendance to seminars, workshops and public meetings on solar energy indicate a growing interest in solar technologies in the West Texas area. The purpose of the West Texas Solar Society will be to further the development of solar energy and related arts, sciences and technologies with concern for the ecologic, social and economic fabric of the state.

The society shall serve to inform and raise public awareness of the potential of renewable energy resources.

Officers for the society include Dr. C.E. Teske, president; James Smith, vice-president; Glenn Hill, treasurer; and Dr. R. Heyward Ramsey, secretary.

Dr. John Reichert, Texas Tech University professor of Electrical Engineering and project director of the Crosbyton Solar Energy Project, will speak on the use of solar energy in the production of power.

For more information call Dr. Teske, 742-3199.

Trivia Quiz

Settle in for a brief Trivia session. There are 10 questions in the test. You need five right to pass; eight right rates an "A."

1. How good does Johnny Mathis think your chances are?

2. A reader's favorite question: Katharine Hepburn goes on vacation and falls in love with Rossano Brazzi, who's married at the time. The film is "Summertime." Now, in what European city does the affair take place?

3. Question from another reader: How many Indians were left on the island at the end of "And Then There Were None," the original film of Agatha Christie's story?

4. What was the name of the 1965 remake of that suspense picture? (And, for a bonus point, where did the remake take place?)

5. Sugar Ray Robinson dominated the world of boxing middleweights during the 1950s, winning the title half a dozen times. Now, of this list, which boxers also held the middleweight championship during that decade?

A. Jake LaMotta
B. Randy Turpin
C. Carl (Bobo) Olson
D. Kid Gavilan
E. Gene Fullman
F. Carmen Basilio

6. An old rock song by The Dubs: "Could This Be —?"

7. Can you recall Peter, Paul and Mary's first hit song, from back in 1962?

8. Endora and Samantha were the mother-daughter team on which TV show? (Do you know who played the parts? An extra point apiece if you do.)

A. "Bewitched"
B. "The Munsters"
C. "The Addams Family"
D. "My Mother the Witch"
E. "My Little Witch"

9. If you're a fan of oldtime Trivia, you've probably heard this favorite question: What was the name of the mayor on "Fibber McGee and Molly?" Answer: Mayor La Trivia. But who played the part? (Hint: Later, he was Osgood Conklin.)

10. Name Chester A. Riley's next-door neighbor and for a bonus point, tell what the Mrs. called her hubby.

(c) 1979 by Dan Carlinsky, New York City

1. Awfully good (from his 1957 hit, "Chances Are.")
2. Venice
3. After the murderous U.N. Owen was taken care of, two little Indians remained. Needless to say, they were glad to see the boat driver show up to take them home at the end.
4. "Ten Little Indians" (Bonus: Not on an island, as in the original, but in a remote village in the Alps.)
5. All but D.: Gavilan was a welterweight champ.
6. Magic
7. Yes, it was "If I Had a Hammer."
8. A. "Bewitched" (Extra points: Agnes Morehead and Elizabeth Montgomery)
9. Gale Gordon (later of "Our Miss Brooks," fame)
10. Honeybee and Jim Gillis; she called him "Jimsy."

Coparenting Vital Element For 'Children Of Divorce'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (Special) — Sally just found out that her parents are getting a 'divorce.' It is an abstract concept to the child. She is not sure what 'divorce' means. But when her parents separate she worries: "What is going to happen to me?"

"Sally and all children of divorce will be fine as long as they receive adequate help from their parents to sort out and weather the storm of separation," asserts Dr. Joan Kelly, clinical psychologist and member of Kentucky Fried Chicken Time Out Institute.

A pioneer in the study of children's reactions to divorce and separation, Dr. Kelly advises, "parents should explain to their child that they are getting a divorce; they cannot assume that the child knows what is going on."

"We both love you" is the key message to get across to children, says Dr. Kelly. "We are not divorcing you," should be the underlying statement.

"Divorce is strictly an adult solution to an adult problem ... it doesn't necessarily help the children," continues the psychologist.

That was one the basic findings of the "Children of Divorce Project," begun by Dr. Kelly and her colleagues in 1970. This five-year clinical research project investigated the experience and effect of divorce on 131 children and adolescents from 60 divorcing families in Marin County, Calif. The study was the first of its kind to go directly to youngsters to find out how they really feel about their parents' divorces.

According to project results, the children who are happiest after divorce are those whose parents have worked out what Dr. Kelly terms "co-parenting" — both parents maintaining and fostering the parent/child relationship.

Dr. Kelly advises seeking professional counseling for the entire family during the divorce process, especially for help in determining visitation arrangements. Citing the Divorce Project finding on visitation, Dr. Kelly says the conventional "twice a month" is not enough according to the youngsters surveyed. Those happiest were the children who saw their non-custodial parent several times a week. Space and freedom to develop affectionate relationships with stepparents is also an important factor, the study determined.

Working on the "co-parenting" concept not only aids the children, but the parents as well, states Dr. Kelly. It provides a focus and helps adults to better integrate their emotions. If the parents are at odds, the child will be more apt to feel that he or she must "choose sides." And, unless it is emphasized that divorce is a parental matter, some children may jump into action to prevent it. Especially for young children, parents must explain divorce not once, but many times and in a variety of ways.

No matter how bad the marriage may be, very few children are relieved to find out about a divorce, states Dr. Kelly. Divorce is a major life crisis for most children and adolescents. More often, sadness and anger prevail. The important thing is to be supportive, available and sensitive to your child, advises the psychologist. "Some things simply have to run their course."

Aside from anger, other reactions to divorce can differ depending on the age group. Dr. Kelly outlines some initial reactions to divorce parents can expect from their children based on Divorce Project findings. However, she emphasizes that circumstances vary for each child and, as with all behavioral categories, the following are general guides, not specifics.

Pre-Schoolers: Most children respond with observable and significant behavioral changes — regressions in toilet training, increased irritability, whining, crying, general fearfulness, sleep problems and an increase in aggressive behavior and tantrums.

Five and Six Year Olds: Although these children experience heightened anxiety and agression at the time of separation, this age group seems to have a more reasonable understanding of the divorce-related changes and their self-confidence and on-going development are not impeded as easily as the younger ones.

Seven to Ten Year Olds: Fears of being forgotten, great sadness about the family breakup and loyalty conflicts predominate in the seven to 10 year old age group.

Adolescents: Unlike the younger children, who sometimes feel responsible for the divorce, adolescents generally do not take the divorce responsibility on themselves. Distancing and withdrawal will most likely be used as a defense with members of this age group who tend to go out on more social engagements and frequently stay away from home.

Dr. Kelly is quick to point out that after one year, a majority of these behavioral and emotional responses will disappear if the quality of caretaking by the parents is maintained.

She does not propose that parents stay together for the sake of the children. Rather, Dr. Kelly and her colleagues on the Children of Divorce Project hope to generate enough information as to the reactions of children to divorce to make the divorce process easier for all involved. The entire scope of the Project's findings will be released in a soon-to-be published book.

"There is hope," says Dr. Kelly. "And more so, if parents are prepared for the child's reaction to divorce and know the key to resolution — stability and continuing love."

Dr. Kelly and fellow Institute members are examining the single parent lifestyle and its impact on both parents and children from the legal, financial and psychological viewpoints.

CHINA GIFT — Josephine Bottoms, Caprock China Club president, presents Charley Pope, executive vice-president of First Federal Savings & Loan Association, a handpainted china plate. The club begins its annual tea and exhibit today in First Federal Plaza, 1300 Broadway. The group was organized in 1968 and became a member of the State Federation of Porcelain Art Clubs of Texas in 1969.

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: Langley was in a snit that Eddie cut himself in for 50 percent of whatever Langley filches from Phoebe. Linc realized that Myrtle has been covering up for Kelly's pill habit. Ann was returned to the sanitarium, but Mark blamed Paul when Ann almost knifed Ellen. Brooke drank heavily and laughed in Eddie's face when he suggested she might get pregnant with his child. Eddie flashed a gun in front of Erica and said it was for protection. Palmer brought Janice to Pine Valley to lie to Nina about Cliff. Wally left Erica in the lurch for her disco opening when he went home for his father's surgery.

ANOTHER WORLD: Mac won and Kirk's merger was defeated. Joey gave himself up and was jailed while Paul went into debt to bail him out. Mac was hostile to Iris and Willis for siding with Kirk. But, Gwen, told Mac that Willis was forced to vote against him because Kirk threatened to reveal a dark secret about Janice. Blaine put on a problem pregnancy act. Kirk let it be known that he's been aware of June and Jeff's affair. Willis and Gwen rekindled part of their old flame. Rachel admitted she is still in love with Mac and wants to get him back. Janice fretted that her sorbid past with a man would be revealed by Kirk.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Bob noticed that Dana stuck to Ian's hospital bedside after Ian suffered a heart attack. Don turned a cold shoulder to Ralph for leaving Mary high and dry. Kim and Sheila worked at the bookstore after Lisa decided to move to the inn with Bennett. Detective Lewis caught a suspect, Watkins, in Grant's assault case. Jeff decided to pick up on John's nomination as chief of surgery. Dee compared Annie's hopeless love for Doug with a guy named Larry whom Dee met at college. Sheila declined dates from her neighbor Hal. Kim moved into Ralph's old duplex despite John's objections.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Mickey opposed Maggie's suggestion that they shelter Cathy. Julie's first skin graft in San Francisco was successful. Don and Donna didn't tell Marlena that Samantha is having health problems since Marlena's ill herself. But Marlena guessed that Sam is back in the drug scene. Marie realized that Alex recognized her as a past lover. Mike fumed after learning that Margo borrowed money from Trish. Mary refused Steve's lunch offers, but he scored work points with Stephanie and Bob. Chris and Bob speculated that Alex has an inside source at Anderson Manufacturing since he knew details about Chris' solar device. Lee worked her charms on Doug.

THE DOCTORS: Carolee accused Steve of playing "daddy" to Lisa while Carolee's searching for Lisa's parents. Colin popped pills to cope with his busy surgery schedule. Nola arranged to make it appear that M.J. is irresponsible at the hospital as part of her plot to separate M.J. and Colin. Steve worried about Mona's increasing fondness for Jessica. Luke was in financial straights at the club.

EDGE OF NIGHT: April caught Elliott and Sarah smuggling. He threatened to pitch her out the window, she fell and hit her head, was knocked unconscious and hospitalized. Margo offered Logan big bucks to buy Jamie so that she could give the child to April as a present. Lily, the new Madison housekeeper, is superstitious, especially since wierd "ghost lights" are emanating from Nola's film production house in the middle of the night. Deborah admitted to Nancy that she is attracted to Owen. Calvin was named new chief of police.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: The lawsuit was dropped after a closed session when Zelda forced Rick and Monica to admit they spent the night together after Mrs. Kirkorian's surgery. Lee and Les also proved Kirkorian's past health history. Bobbi tearfully returned Roy's ring after he learned from her ex-john and Ruby that Bobbi had once been a prostitute. The mob put the screws to Luke to prove his loyalty by knocking off Mitch. In a crazed state, Luke raped Laura. Richard, the dance exercise whiz, gave Claudia and the girls diet tips. Scotty blew up when he learned about Laura's charge-card buying. Roy had also shown an interest in Laura to spite Bobbi.

GUIDING LIGHT: Holly tried to save Clara from Gail's attack and was stabbed herself. Roger hit up Alan for money to pay for a plastic surgery operation by Dr. Renee DuBois. Rita had thoughts of sex with Roger and Greg during her Caribbean vacation with Ed. Jackie decided to throw in the towel and asked Mike to handle her divorce from Alan. Jackie didn't blame Hope, but she told Diane that she could now have Alan. Elizabeth couldn't hide her lovemaking hesitation during her honeymoon with Justin. Lucille noticed Ross' sudden attentions to Amanda. Renee told Roger she didn't want him as a patient because she doubts he's leveling with her about her reasons. Peter transferred Holly to Cedars Hospital.

LOVE OF LIFE: Joel was suspicious of Amy's interest in Bruce. Van asked Bruce to make Steve move out, without telling Bruce that he's uncomfortable with Steve's adulation. Betsy arranged to go to New York for an abortion. Wes split. Tony came clean to Bambi about Kim. Liane won't reconcile with Tom until he breaks all ties with Meg.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Mario pleaded that Karen keep his secret about really being Marco. Joe bit the dust and Clint took over handling the Banner. Sadie's attitude about Jack softened and she asked to sing at his and Carla's wedding. Samantha asked Mick to move in with her. Dorian's suspicions about Mario increased when Ellen tipped her off that Mario always hated research. Becky returned to Europe to locate Richard because of Joe's death. Jenny worried that Brad isn't ready for fatherhood. Maggie set her sights on Clint, while Edwina and Gretel vied for Herb, who was interested that Vicki's a very rich widow.

RYAN'S HOPE: Nancy moved to San Antonio. Uncle Tiso suggested that Joe marry Siobhan in order to keep her quiet if she learns about the "business." Siobhan nixed Joe's apologies for his shabby treatment. The bottom fell out of Dee's banana commodities. Rae agreed to keep mum about Roger's wrong diagnosis that resulted in Tom's death if he keeps mum about her involvement in Mr. Snow's death.

SEARCH FOR TOMORROW: Mignon held an engagement party for Travis and Liza and met Renata, who didn't tell Mignon that she recognized Rusty's portrait as being her own father. Carolyn's sight returned. Simon telepathically kept Helene's voodoo dolls locked away so that she wouldn't harm Carolyn. Sunny agreed to go on a camping trip with Lee. David comforted Renata's fears of being exposed as a bastard. Helene held a seance for Mignon and Rusty's spirit.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jill threatened Stu that if he doesn't give her the divorce settlement she'll claim he deliberately pushed her down the stairs. Nikki decided to be a model. Casey convinced Snapper to give Chris time alone. Les pleaded Lance's job case to Luke. Jill and Derek were too proud to admit they still care for each other.

Dishwasher Saves On Heating Bills

TROY, Ohio (UPI) — A household appliances manufacturer is introducing a line of dishwashers that allows a 20 degree reduction in temperature in home water heaters.

The 140 degrees currently recommended for dishwashers is higher than necessary for other household uses. The new appliances heat their own water to the correct temperature at the right time.

Other energy-saving features include 140 percent more insulation, which conserves heat and helps reduce operating noises; and automatic drying without a heating element. A fan in the new appliances automatically switches on and off during the drying cycle so the contents dry from heat built up during the wash and rinse cycles.

Safety Suggestions Ensure Evening Fun

NEW YORK (Special) — Before your children scramble out the door this Halloween night in search of goodies and goblins, make sure they're well-apprised of basic Halloween safety rules. It's a good idea to hold a "Safety Briefing Session" a day or so before Halloween when children are more open to suggestion — rather than on Halloween night when they're anxious to join fellow trick-or-treaters. Here are a few safety suggestions to help assure everyone's peace of mind on Halloween night.

— Encourage your children to trick-or-treat with groups of friends in familiar neighborhoods. Younger children should be accompanied by adults or older children.

— It never hurts to repeat the obvious. When trick-or-treating, children should stay on sidewalks and cross streets at intersections and crosswalks. They should be dressed warmly and comfortably.

— Choose a costume that allows full peripheral vision, unimparied hearing and leaves arms and legs free for unrestricted movement.

— Feed children a hearty, nutritious dinner before they leave on their trick-or-treating rounds. This will limit the temptation to eat candy before they get home, and before you have a chance to personally give it your "seal of approval."

Visiting Nurses Provide Medical Care, Support

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

When the parents of a prematurely-born infant were told they could at last take their baby home from the hospital, the couple was overjoyed.

Despite the instructions and reassurances from the doctor and hospital staff, however, the parents were overwhelmed at the prospect of caring for the unusually small infant by themselves.

So when the doctor suggested home visits by the Visiting Nurse Service of Lubbock, they agreed and felt immediately relieved. The nurse continued to visit the home, until the parents were confident enough to care for their infant alone.

In another family, an eight-year-old, in the hospital for another reason, was found to have diabetes. Both the youngster and her parents were fully instructed on matters of diet, how to give insulin shots and suggestions on managing the disease. However, when the youngster's dismissal from the hospital was imminent, the family's courage vanished. Again, the answer was several visits to the home by a Visiting Nurse.

Another client — we'll call her Jessie — has more complex problems, so much so that the Visiting Nurse Service of Lubbock has requested and received help from several community agencies, in order to properly care for the 81-year-old woman.

Jessie lives alone (she has no relatives) because she prefers to live independently in her own home, and hopes she never has to go to a nursing home. "If I had to go to one of those institutions," Jessie said, "I wouldn't be allowed to keep my dog."

Even if Jessie had a car, she couldn't drive it because of age and health problems, so kindly neighbors take turns in going to the grocery store for her.

She manages her life fairly well, since she is still able to do simple household chores and cook the sparse meals she now prefers.

However, Jessie has severe and long-standing health problems. (Note: Visiting Nurses do nothing without a doctor's orders.) Because she has open sores on both legs, the Visiting Nurse checks the wounds and changes the dressings on her twice-weekly visits to Jessie. In addition, the nurse provides other skilled nursing functions, all of which Jessie appreciates.

Obviously, however, Jessie receives an additional benefit from the nurse's visit. Simply, she explained: "You know, I don't have any folks left. And while my neighbors are real good to me, most of them work during and day. When they get home at night, they're mostly too tired to come and see me. Sometimes I won't see anyone until perhaps the week end. So, I look forward to seeing the nurse — she makes me feel I have someone who cares about me."

Gayle McComb, R.N., who directs the efforts of the Visiting Nurse Service of Lubbock (a private, non-profit group), says the circumstance described above is not unusual, because nurses of the agency firmly believe that "interest" goes a long way in rehabilitating a patient. "This group was organized specifically to give personalized, intermittant care in the home," Mrs. McComb said, "and because so many clients have commented on the dedication of our nurses, I have no reason to doubt that what they say is true."

When asked who is eligible for aid by the Visiting Nurse Service of Lubbock, Mrs. McComb commented, "Because of the recent awarding of an HEW grant, I can now proudly say our agency is truly a comprehensive home health service; and our services will be available to all persons in need of such care, regardless of age or income. Also, our service will not be limited only to Lubbock residents, and we expect to expand to include residents in a 15-county area."

Mrs. McComb explains that payment for services is by arrangement — through public insurance sources such as Medicare and Medicaid; or private insurance; Champus; V.A.; or through cash payments on a sliding income scale. Because of the HEW grant, the agency will also be able to serve those who cannot pay in any way.

Persons desiring more information concerning the Visiting Nurse Service of Lubbock, Inc. may call: 793-9067.

CROQUE MONSIEUR

1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
¼ cup milk
8 slices white bread
4 slices boiled ham
2 eggs, slightly beaten
¼ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
Cheese Sauce:
1 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. flour
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 cup milk
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Combine Swiss cheese and milk to form a paste. Spread one side of each slice of bread with cheese mixture. Cover 4 slices with a slice of ham. Cover with second slice of bread, cheese side in, to form a sandwich. Combine eggs, milk and salt in a shallow dish. Dip bread into egg-milk mixture; saute on a lightly buttered griddle or skillet until brown on both sides and cheese is melted. Serve with Cheese Sauce. For sauce, melt butter in a 1-quart saucepan. Stir in flour and mustard until smooth. Remove from heat and stir in milk. Heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in cheese until melted. Garnish sandwich with sliced cherry tomato and green pepper.

Minigardens Supply Fresh Vegetables

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

So you have a strong yearning to grow your own vegetables, even though you don't live on a 100-acre farm? Or maybe, though you don't even have an acre of soil to call your own, you yearn for the taste of fresh vegetables?

Well, don't despair — you do not necessarily have to give up the pleasures of gardening, merely because you live in a room, an apartment or a townhouse. The fact of the matter is that if you have a windowsill, balcony or a doorstep, you have enough space for a minigarden.

The basic materials you will need are one or more containers, synthetic soil and the seeds for the plants you hope to grow.

Concerning choice of container, imagine — if you can — what the size of a full grown specimen of the variety you've chosen will be. With this in mind, begin rummaging through the junk you have in your garage, kitchen or other places where you keep things you never use but don't want to throw away. Hopefully, you should be able to find a normal kind of container such as a plastic or clay pot. If not, consider an old pan, a plastic bucket, a bushel basket, a wire basket or a wooden box. (Remember not to choose a half-bushel basket for something that you plan to put on a windowsill!)

The size and number of the containers can vary with the available space you have and the number of plants you want to grow. Six-inch pots will be fine for herbs. On the other hand, radishes, onions and miniature tomatoes will do better in 10-inch pots.

Caution: if you plan to use solid plastic containers, allow for drainage, drilling holes on the sides (not bottom) of container. For example, a wooden container will last three to five years if painted both inside and outside with a safe wood preservative.

Now you're probably saying to yourself, "Why should I have to go out and purchase synthetic soil?" The mini-gardener will benefit from using synthetic soil, because the product is free from plant disease organisms and weed seeds. Synthetic soil also holds moisture and plant nutrients well. In addition, a package or box of synthetic soil is easier to store than 'real' soil, for purely aesthetic reasons.

In choosing seeds, remember that miniature vegetable varieties are best for mini-gardens. It's worth the investment to purchase high-quality seeds and to choose seeds from a reputable dealer or company.

To plant your seeds, follow directions found on the backs of seed packets. Or, if you have purchased some bulk seeds from a dealer, ask for planting instructions.

Experienced gardeners "start" seeds indoors in small containers on windowsills that have plenty of sunlight. It's best to put in two or three seeds in each container. If you cover the seeds with peat moss and moisten with water, your seeds will sprout faster. Then, enclose the container in a plastic bag until the seedlings emerge. Transplant seedlings to larger containers only when the first two leaves are fully developed.

Another good rule to follow is: "Plant your vegetable and fruit plants where they will get the most sun, and your leafy vegetables and root vegetables in the more shady areas," said R.E. Wester (a retired Agricultural Research Service horticulturist).

Wester also gives the following additional suggestions:

• Apply one level teaspoon of a vegetable fertilizer per square foot of soil about three weeks after the plants have reached the two-leaf stage and again every three weeks. Mix the fertilizer into the top one-half inch of soil and water thoroughly.

• Vegetables need a water supply equal to about one inch of rain every week during the growing season. Water each time the soil becomes dry down to a depth of one-eighth inch.

Your best local expert on growing anything is the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The office is located in the County Office Bldg., 763-5351, ext. 235, 236, 237 or 238.

In some areas of the United States, mini-gardening can be an all-year-around activity. However, here in West Texas, mini-gardeners will no doubt have to confine their efforts to growing vegetables indoors. For a starter, try growing chives or quick-growing radishes in a kitchen window and have fun doing it!

(Those interested in detailed instructions for mini-gardening may write for Wester's booklet, "Minigardens for Vegetables" from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The cost of each booklet is 35 cents, but there is a minimum charge of $1.00 for each mail order.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE

Make sure the coffee table, or tables, in front of your sofa look right in proportion to the sofa. Too many homes have coffee tables that look out of place in relation to the sofa, thus hurting the appearance of the living room.

If possible, consider having a secondary conversation grouping in a room in addition to your main conversation group. The secondary one can allow for smaller, more cozy and intimate groupings.

Remember in decorating a room to consider the proper spacing between pieces. The right spacing will not only improve the usefulness of a room but also its beauty.

GERMAN POTATO SALAD

6 slices bacon, diced
1 small onion, chopped
2 cans (15 oz.) white potatoes, drained and sliced
4 tbsps. pimiento, diced
3 tbsps. flour
¾ cup cold water
3 tbsps. cider vinegar
2 tbsps. sugar
2 tbsps. parsley flakes

Conventional Method: In skillet fry bacon until crisp. Remove. Saute onions in bacon drippings until tender. Add bacon, potatoes and pimientos to onions. Blend flour and water, add to skillet along with vinegar, sugar and parsley. Stir constantly until mixture thickens. Cook on low, uncovered, for 30 minutes. Serve warm. Makes 8-10 servings.

Microwave Method: In a 2-quart casserole dish microcook bacon for 2-3 minutes or until crisp. Remove bacon and add onions to drippings; microcook 2-3 minutes or until tender. Add bacon, potatoes and pimientos to onions. Microcook covered 5 minutes. Blend flour and water, add to casserole along with vinegar, sugar and parsley. Microcook uncovered 5-7 minutes, stirring twice. Makes 8-10 servings.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

Steeped in tradition, the Cotton Club has been a haven for musicians since 1938. Bob Wills, Buddy Holly, Hank Williams and Elvis Presley all played there. Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Alvin Crow, Joe Ely and Jerry Jeff Walker have all climbed on stage, faced a crowd already well into BYOB liquor and provided the music. The Cotton Club has been mentioned with reverence in major magazines across the globe and, even with its reputation somewhat tarnished by fights and time, few if any would refrain from mourning should the club pass away in the night.

According to restaurant owner and local legend C.B. Stubblefield, who just purchased the Cotton Club with entertainer Joe Ely, it almost did just that. "We didn't buy the Cotton Club to make money. We just didn't want to see it torn down, or used for a warehouse or anything besides a place for people to listen to music. There's been a Cotton Club for, gosh, I don't know how many years. And we didn't want to see it end."

Ever the philosopher, Stubblefield — called Stubbs by even the folks who haven't met him — emphasized that he has enough responsibility with his barbeque palace on Broadway, that he was not trying to go into direct competition with the other honky tonks in town. As he put it, "Like Nixon says: let me make this crystal clear. I'm not making the Cotton Club my livelihood. I'm not thinking in terms of getting rich. That's what is wrong with this world. People keep thinking about having a house on the hill, a Rolls Royce and diamond rings.

"Instead of being grateful, greed has taken over. No one seems to understand that they ain't going to do a damn thing in life except die. You can be the president or you can be Al Capone, and you're still going to wind up dying. That's why I think the only thing we need to be thinking about is making the world a little better for everybody coming along after us."

Stubblefield, who brought Muddy Waters to the Cotton Club not that long ago, sees keeping a legend alive as being a way to keep people happy. But he still shifts most of the credit to musician Joe Ely. Watching this writer try to take notes between mouthfuls of barbeque and hot peppers, he laughed and said, "Get this down. I don't think I would have even thought about it (purchasing the Cotton Club) if it hadn't been for Joe Ely. It takes two people to make this work: two people who have respect, honor and admiration for each other. I wouldn't have taken it upon myself without Joe.

"See, Joe Ely and I are friends. I wouldn't have even brought in Muddy Waters without him, since we were both sitting back one night listening to Muddy sing and Joey said, "Why can't we bring that man to Lubbock?' It was his idea."

COTTON CLUB
New owners promise to "fix it up nice"

Even so, Stubblefield and Ely have money — big money — tied up in the club. They'll be spending another $10,000 to $20,000 for "general housecleaning and fixing the club up." The outside of the building, much of it now in disrepair, will be "made to look nice." Leaks will be fixed. There's even the possibility of a well-known Lubbock artist using one of the inner walls for a mural depicting all the greats who have played the Cotton Club.

More importantly, though, Stubblefield plans to adopt a get-tough policy regarding troublemakers. Realizing that some music lovers have avoided the Cotton Club for fear of the drunks and possible parking lot altercations, he said, "Everybody's ain't bad in this world, but there's some that just like to fight and raise hell. And they'll have to go somewhere else. Highest priority for us is security. There's gonna be security people there at all times to make sure a man can still bring his family to the club and have a good time. There's going to be no bad talk at the club. People can drink up, but they're going to behave. There will be no fussin' and fighting.

"And if you start to acting like a fool out there, I will expel you — maybe permanenetly. We may even put up pictures of troublemakers like the post office, and not let them back in. I mean this and want to make it crystal clear: We are going to fix up the Cotton Club and we are not going to have anyone hassled at all."

Present plans are for Stubblefield to hold a grand opening "sometime before December," probably with Ely on stage. The restaurant owner may bring a few more singers and bands like Muddy Waters, but insists he's not planning on creating just a blues club. "I'd love for Marcia Ball to play out there," he said. "And I'd like to have the whole shooting match — hillbilly, country and western, blues — I don't care. They can all play together."

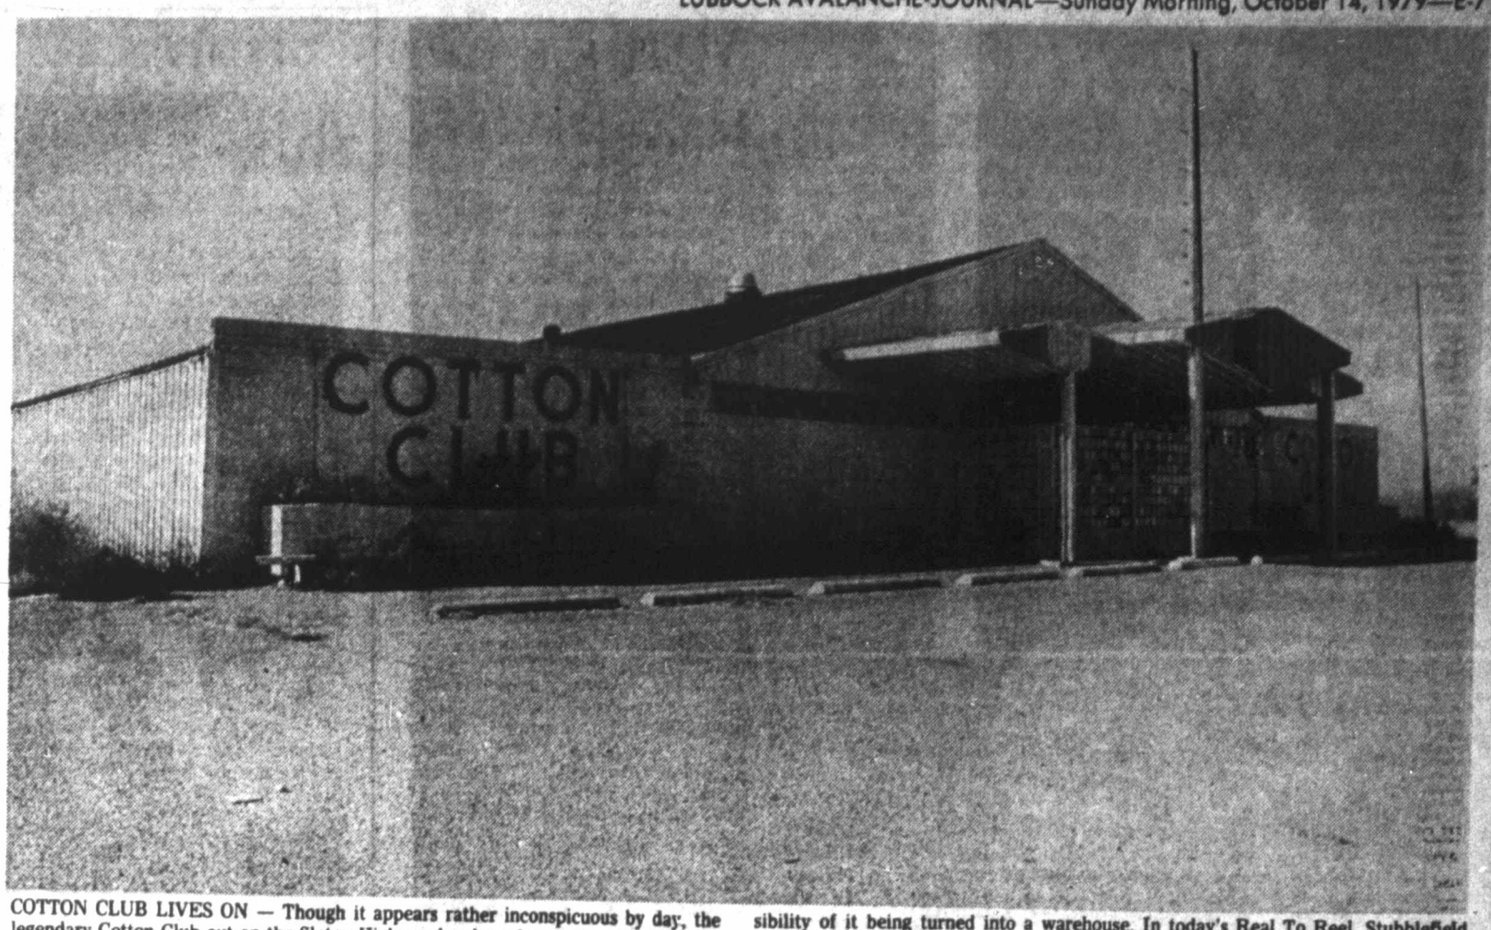

Stubblefield will also continue the present policy of renting out the building to bands, fraternities and assorted party-givers, reiterating, "Like I said, we're not buying it to just make money ourselves with music."

Still, the music is his inspiration for risking the money in the first place. "Lubbock has been a good home for me. And the music in this town has been good too. I think the recent Buddy Holly (tribute) concert was something of value. I went to see Ray Charles here, and that man still has something to say. But there's still a type of music which isn't real available here, and it's music that people might be able to listen to if we keep the Cotton Club going."

Indeed, C.B. Stubblefield and Joe Ely have recognized the tradition in the old Cotton Club, and hope to sparkle it up a bit by adding a little bit of much needed quality and control.

COTTON CLUB LIVES ON — Though it appears rather inconspicuous by day, the legendary Cotton Club out on the Slaton Highway has been known for its celebrated raucous music for over 40 years. New owners C.B. Stubblefield and Joe Ely plan to make sure that the legend lives on, recently purchasing the club to ward off any possibility of it being turned into a warehouse. In today's Real To Reel, Stubblefield talks with A-J entertainment editor William Kerns about his plans for cleaning up the club — as well as his plans for cleaning up the acts of troublemakers who have frequented the establishment. Tech Symphony To Debut Today

The Texas Tech University Symphony Orchestra will hold its first concert of the 1979-1980 season at 3 p.m. today at the University Center theater. There is no admission charge.

The program will mark the debut of Phillip Lehrman as symphony conductor, and will feature Browning Artist-in-Residence William Westney performing "Piano Concerto No. 2 in C Minor" by Sergei Rachmaninoff with the orchestra.

Lehrman, a native of New York City, earned degrees from the University of Southern California. He conducted the orchestras at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and the Monday Evening Concerts for the Los Angeles Chamber Music Society. He held positions as assistant conductor with the New York Philharmonic, Buffalo Philharmonic, Young Musicians Foundation-Debut Orchestra, and Ojai Festival.

He was also the fellowship conductor for the Berkshire Music Center (Tanglewood), and has been the guest conductor for the Madison Symphony Orchestra and the Wisconsin Youth Symphony. He has studied with both Leonard Bernstein and Richard Lert.

William Westney studied at Queens College in New York City and a Doctorate in Musical Arts in performance from Yale University. The New York-native pianist has earned distinction as the top piano prize-winner in the 1975 Geneva International Music Competition. Other awards have included a Fulbright grant for European study, winning the 1973 competition of the Piano Teachers Congress of New York, and being selected as the only American winner in auditions held by Radiotelevisione Italiana.

The program for today's concert includes "Night On Bald Mountain" by Modest Mussorgsky, an 1881 edited version of Mussorgsky's original work. The composition depicts a witches' assembly on a mountain top while they await the arrival of Satan. The concerto by Sergei Rachmaninoff, which Westney will perform as soloist, was completed in 1901 when the composer was only 28 years old. After a brief period of illness and some critical disappointments the popular success of the concerto in its Moscow premier (in October of 1881 with the composer at the piano) and later performances bolstered Rachmaninoff's confidence, and provided a work which since has become a mainstay of the concerto literature and Rachmaninoff's most well-known work.

Tech Books Sublette

Composer and experimental guitarist Ned Sublette is the second featured artist on the 1979-80 Leading Edge Music Series, conducting a 1:30-3:30 p.m. workshop and presenting an 8:15 p.m. concert and lecture-demonstration for the public Tuesday at the Texas Tech University Center theater.

There is no admission charge.

The Leading Edge Music Series engages internationally known musically oriented artists who explore uncharted territory in composition, performance and perception.

Ned Sublette, a Lubbock native, represents the new breed of musician with panoramic interests. His roots are in jazz guitar and saxophone, computer science, mathematics, tuning theory and linguistics. He majored in classical guitar and vihuela at the University of New Mexico, and studied classical guitar in Spain and Italy. He did graduate studies in composition, performance and electronic music at the University of California (San Diego).

Recently he has been dividing his time between New York City, Albuquerque and the road. In New York City he presents his work in public concert and also works as a radio producer and recording engineer. In Albuquerque he is a composer-in-residence at KUNM-FM, where he recently produced a festival of experimental works for the medium of radio with the support of the National Endowment for the Arts.

He also performs at universities, art galleries, radio stations and festivals.

The Leading Edge Music Series is sponsored by the Texas Tech Department of Music, Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the University Center Programs Fine Arts Committee and Texas Tech University. Tuesday's concert will be preceded by warm-up activities at 7:45 p.m., as composer Ron Pellegrino creates live laser graphics and pianist Matalie Wham composes music in real time.

Kass Writing Movie Script

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) — Jerome Kass has been signed to write the screenplay of "Tales of the City."

"Tales of the City" is based upon the best-selling novel by Armistead Maupin which was published last year by Harper & Row and is scheduled for paperback release in November. A continuation, "Further Tales of The City," will be published by Harper & Row in February, 1980.

"Tales of the City" is a romantic comedy about an innocent young girl thrown in among a group of bizarre and raunchy boarding house inhabitants in San Francisco. The film is scheduled to go before the cameras in the spring of 1980.

MURPHEY STILL THE LONE WOLF — Singer Michael Murphey has made no bones about his desire to escape corporate control over his music, and he recently revealed he left the CBS/Epic label in hopes of producing and releasing his own albums. In a personal interview held before his concert at Cold Water Country, Murphey spoke with A-J entertainment editor William Kerns about his reasons for leaving, as well as his feelings about the state of the industry, the state of Texas and potential new projects. The sensitive songwriter also backtracks to explain what really inspired him to leave Austin, and the factors which may have driven his song "Wildfire" to hit status. (Staff Photos by Milton Adams)

Michael Murphey Still Looking For Freedom

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

Liken the life of singer-songwriter Michael Murphey to a mountain trail, and it's not at all difficult to pinpoint the easily navigable sections, the rocky dead ends and the surprising array of turning points. Murphey, after all, wrote "Texas Morning" and "Geronimo's Cadillac" while becoming an unwilling focal point for an Austin music clique in the early '70s. He finally shed the "cosmic cowboy" albatross hung about his neck by the media, emerging from the Colorado Rockies with "Blue Sky, Night Thunder," his most popular LP. And now Murphey reveals he's left the fold of CBS/Epic, his recording label since 1973, thus embarking on a path much rockier than anything before encountered.

Mind you, Murphey has left labels before, jumping from A&M Records to Epic after the release of his "Cosmic Cowboy Souvenir." But that was when his star was on the rise. It's now been almost five years since he rode "Wildfire" to the upper reaches of the AM charts, and his albums have not been selling well at all. Though one can't help but be affected by the frustration he's felt with record companies, Murphey has to fight a much bigger battle as an independent.

Once booked in large halls, for example, Murphey is now playing club dates and small theaters. That he has not yet faded away like the rest of the Austin music scene (B.W. Stevenson comes vaguely to mind), that he can still pull 1,500 fans out to Cold Water Country on a Thursday night, is a good sign.

But there is still no denying that this sensitive Texas-born singer is at yet another turning point, with one direction finding the big dreams paying off and the other threatening to swallow his career whole.

During a personal, 60-minute interview in the singer's comfortable, though hardly extravagant, bus before his recent Lubbock club appearance, Murphey revealed himself to be as hopeful and confident as he is open. Asked right off the bat about his split with CBS/Epic, he said, "It was a technicality in the contract in my favor. CBS was in a position where they owed me a lot of money. But I wanted off the label anyway, so I settled for something less than that amount so I could be free. I asked off the label with the understanding they would pay me a settlement for what they owed me.

"There was nothing underhanded about what CBS was doing; they weren't holding back royalties or anything like that. It was just a contractual deal my lawyer had made that they were not willing to go along with at that particular point in time, because CBS has been having contractual problems. But they were contractually bound. So I had to decide if I wanted to hold them to it or go.

"I interpreted it as being a good time to leave the label, because I've been on CBS for six years and there are other avenues to be explored. Also, I don't feel this is a time in my life when I want a big corporation to be in the picture ... because I think they're standing on shaky foundations. Their investments and their whole setup is based on the strength of the dollar, and the dollar is not strong. It's falling all the time. As it falls, they're going to run into all kinds of marketing problems. See, from a strictly business point of view, we're entering the era of the little man. The small, independent businessman is going to be the guy who survives."

Pressed to elaborate upon the business practices CBS employed which angered Murphey, the singer tried first to deal with the music industry as a whole before seguing into CBS' pigeonholing him as a regional success. He said, "If I give you an example, I have to say it in terms of all record companies and not just CBS. I disagree with sending out millions of albums and claiming a platinum or gold album just through distribution, when those records really haven't been sold. Because when they're returned, it really hurts the artist. He thinks his record has gone gold, and then they call him up and say he really only sold 150,000 copies.

"In a way, it's a snowball thing. One corporation starts doing it, then another has to follow suit. And before you know it, everybody is trapped in this crazy way of doing things.

"Also, I feel that CBS, in particular, regionalizes. They get an artist on a label and they perceive him as a regional phenomenon. That's what they did with me. As long as you're in your region, your own back yard as regards to territory, they're willing to help you out. But when you leave that territory, they don't see you as having any clout. Well, that stifles an artist's career.

That's like saying: all you Indians stay on the reservation and all you cowboys stay back in Texas."

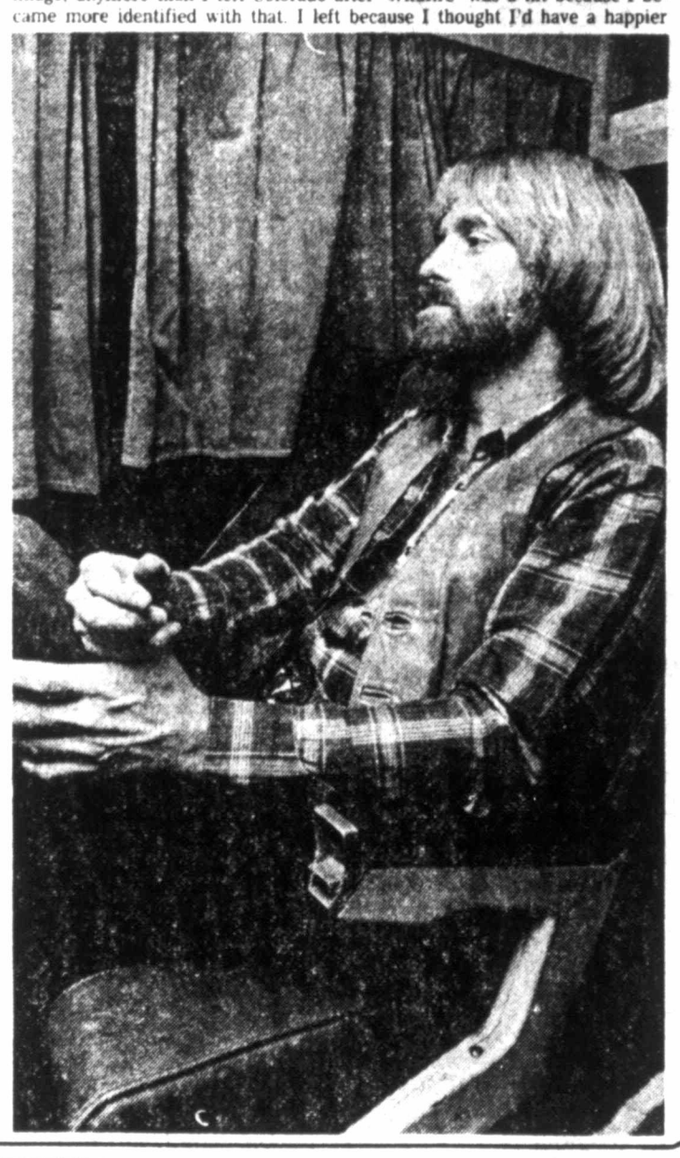

Leaning forward to emphasize his point, he added, "But in traveling around, I've never found a lack of receptiveness to my Southwestern lifestyle or my Southwestern style of music. In fact, I have to work harder to go over here, because people are used to the music, than I do in New York. There, I'm still a man from Mars."

CBS, however, was not alone in stereotyping Murphey as a Texas phenomenon. Now residing on a ranch outside Taos, N.M., Murphey once caught a great deal of flack just because he moved from Austin to Colorado — a move he insists was inspired more by geography than labels. He explained, "Everytime you have a hit record, you get stereotyped for that record."

Picking up a newly received copy of an album cut by Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley, he continued, "Like Moe and Joe now have an image of being a couple 'good old boys,' because they just cut a hit song called that. People get all screwed up because they fail to see the artist operative behind the persona in a song. So if I write a song that says 'cosmic cowboy' in it, then people say Michael Murphey is saying he's the cosmic cowboy.

"That's not necessarily so. That's like saying Randy Newman really hates short people. ... I mean, I didn't really see a horse come down from the sky in 'Wildfire.' I just wrote a song about a character who sees it. And the point of the song is what the character thinks about it.

"Listen, I didn't go to Colorado because I was tired of the 'cosmic cowboy' image, anymore than I left Colorado after 'Wildfire' was a hit because I became more identified with that. I left because I thought I'd have a happier lifestyle up there, and I always wanted to live in the mountains. And Austin, which I dearly love, was the closest thing I could find in Texas to a mountain environment. If they had mountains here, I'd still be in Texas. I like Texas; I like its culture."

But he is not overly fond of the members of the music press who failed to see beyond the 'cosmic' reasons for leaving. He felt repercussions, he said, "because Texans don't like for somebody to leave the nest. In a way, that's beautiful. But it sure doesn't leave much room for exploring something new. ... There were a few critics who really took shots. They said Michael Murphey was going to Colorado because he was trying to be John Denver. It's just like Willie Nelson is identified with Austin, so if John Denver moved to Austin he'd be accused of trying to be Willie. It's all so stupid because people make music; Places don't make music.

"If Willie Nelson was happy making music in Juneau, Alaska, they'd all be writing about the 'Alaskan music scene.'

"But I resented those shots because no one compared me to John Denver before I moved to Colorado, so why should they just because I crossed an imaginary boundary in a certain territory of our country? And something else: since I left Colorado, no one for the last three albums has compared me to John Denver."

Murphey says his music is easily adaptable to honky tonk audiences, adding that, "We make it more of a party atmosphere. I don't go up there and sing 10 Bob Dylan songs because they'd throw bottles at me." He has no qualms about playing his older material, and seems to recognize the fact that the past five years have not seen his songs as well accepted by the masses. Yet he harbors no plans for a change in style.

"Why should I?" he asked. "An old manager once told me, 'If you don't have any enemies, how can you stand for anything?' That's true. If everybody loves your music, then that must mean it's a pretty watered down brand of music. ... My personal favorite of all my albums is 'Lone Wolf.' It wasn't a commercial success, I know, but that's the one I enjoyed making the most. It was an album about loneliness, fear and isolation — and working your way through that. It's not something you can play at a disco, and disco music was what was happening at the time."

And still is?

Murphey shook his head and said, "I think a lot of singer-songwriters have just had to limp along and try to make it during this disco trend. Unless they wanted to adapt to the disco sound, which I didn't want to do." He laughed, "God, it sounds like we're talking about the Dark Ages. The Days of Disco. But see, I don't hate disco music."

Reminded that an alarming number of clubs have switched from live music to straight disco systems, Murphey commented, "I'll tell you, that is such a self-defeating trend. Because how can the bands who play disco music survive

Jewison Fights The Law, Wins Laughs

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

DALLAS — Outside, the city is still trying to recover from a record 102 degree reading in early October. Inside a Fairmont Hotel suite, however, Canadian director Norman Jewison is found ironically asking an aide to turn down the air conditioning, then considers this critic's query of how much Watergate influenced his decision to direct "...Justice For All." Not bothering to rise from his lounging position on a sofa, he said, "I think we're all a little (teed) off at the law these days.

"I think we've lost our confidence in many areas, and part of this stems from the fact practically everyone involved in Watergate was a lawyer. Most politicians are lawyers."

It's not hard to guess that "...And Justice For All," slated to open Friday at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock, takes a critical look at the American judicial system. Yet it remains extremely difficult to describe the film. Jewison — who has given us such fine films as "The Cincinnati Kid," "In The Heat Of The Night," "Fiddler On The Roof" and "Rollerball" — has backtracked and given us his first seriocomic satire since "The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming."

He cast purposely against type. John Forsythe, TV's smooth "Bachelor Father" and now the Charlie behind the medium's angels, is wonderfully despicable in his first villainous role, playing a judge who holds rules and personal prejudices before compassion. And Al Pacino, usually cast as the neurotic off-beat hero, is brilliant as lawyer Arthur Kirkland, an island of rationale and logic in a sea of madness.

Jewison's direction is flawless, all the more apparent in such a difficult medium. He plays with the viewer's emotions to the point where one cannot help but begin thinking about the issues involved. After all, this is a movie which literally has audiences in stitches one minute, in tears the next. "...And Justice For All" is bound to be as controversial as it is funny, as popular as it is heartbreaking. Pacino and Jewison will both get their names bandied about in the Oscar race, and yet it seems the 53-year-old director would be happier with a different sort of award.

He said, "I think most filmmakers, just like good writers, want to think they have something valid to say. Something relevant. But I don't want to use film as a social vehicle for propaganda. If I wanted to make a pure message picture, I'd still be working for the National Film Board of Canada. I want to reach an audience, but I feel a film should have a balance. I don't want it to be all heavy."

Toughening his stance a bit, he continued, "Face it. The (judicial) system is falling apart and that's the truth. Why? Well, it comes down to values. Why do we postpone cases so easily. We have more trial postponements than any other country. You just couldn't get away with this in England. There, justice is meted out quickly and with common sense. But the judge in England is not elected. I mean, why do we elect judges? Why do we elect sheriffs?. . .There are sheriffs who have never been policemen, never studied criminology, never studied law, never been trained. You can't have a fireman who can't put out a fire, then elect him to chief solely because he votes for the right political party.

"So this picture tries to show what exists. It also tries to do so with a sense of humor, because we don't have all the answers and thus can't take ourselves too seriously. . .But I think if we continue to expose the things that bother us, that don't make sense, then maybe we can improve the situation. I think this picture has its triumphant moment. Our hope is in people like Arthur Kirkland, who still has ideals and still fights for those who deserve a break. A lawyer who still believes in justice, who believes in the majesty and purity of the law.

"I think audiences will walk out of the theater glad about what happens at the end, but disturbed by the picture as a whole. And I like that."

Reminded that Time Magazine had also recently explored the inadequacies in contemporary trial and sentencing procedures, Jewison took off on the tangent of luck and timing — both of which, he said, play a vital role in any film's success, or lack of it. "That's why I'm hoping I'm not the only one," he said. "I hope the timing is right. Just like the timing was right when I did 'In The Heat Of The Night.' A lot of people told me I shouldn't make that film, that there would be a definite white backlash. But they were wrong. . .

"The timing was also good on 'The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming.' That's a picture that has the same effect today that it had 10 years ago. At the time, Americans were paranoid about the Communists. One side would draw a line in the dirt and say, 'Step across this line and I'll blow your (expletive) head off.' The other side would counter with, 'Oh yeah, well step across this line and I'll...' Like two children.

"But if you can make a film and capture that terror — and at the same time have a funny, and perhaps warm, ending — then maybe people will leave the theater saying, 'I understand a little better.'"

Jewison received complete cooperation from the city of Baltimore while making "...And Justice For All," emphasizing that the picture deals with all courts and not just those situated in Maryland. "The problems are national, not specific," he said. Several bright new talents make their debuts in this film, with Jewsion trying to "avoid personalities and fit the right actor to the right part." Which brings us to Al Pacino, a huge box office attraction who manages to bring a separate personality to every character he plays.

Asked to define Pacino's talent, the director paused a moment and answered. "He overcomes personality because he's probably one of the best actors in America today. Also, he's a character actor. He's not a Hollywood film star. That's what makes it exciting to work with him. He's an instrument upon which you can play. He describes himself as that. He says, 'Demand a lot of me.'"

Jewison did, even before filming began. He asked Pacino to fly to California and help read actors prior to casting. Smiling, he recalled, "Sure, I was told Al doesn't like to fly, that he doesn't like to travel, that he's nervous outside New York. But there was no problem. I merely told him I needed his help, that not all the actors were in one place. And he cooperated. He would read for hours with other actors. . .Is that rare? Well, sometimes. A lot of actors don't like to be bothered.

"Really, it depends on how much empathy an actor feels for another."

The picture also stars Lee Strasberg, Pacino's 73-year-old acting tutor, as Arthur Kirkland's grandfather. And it's no surprise the scenes between Pacino and Strasberg are really quite special. Strasberg once said of Pacino, "Some actors play characters. Al Pacino becomes them. In fact, he assumes their identity so completely that he continues to live a role long after a play or movie is over."

Jewison quickly agreed with that analysis. "God, we got so used to him carrying his character off the set that we found ourselves calling him Arthur during dinner. Really, he totally immersed himself in the character. He studied law, he went to courts, he talked for hours and hours with young legal aid attorneys."

One can't help but notice such praise is a far cry from that bestowed on the last star Jewison directed: Sylvester Stallone in "F.I.S.T." Stallone slammed Jewison's directorial decisions after the bad reviews piled up, and the Canadian filmmaker remains slightly closemouthed regarding that situation. Asked for his reaction, he coolly indicated Stallone's inadequacies by saying, "Well, Stallone obviously considered himself experienced enough to make those comments. But I think 'Paradise Alley' reveals the sum total of his talents as a producer, director, editor and actor. I don't have any other comment to make except to ask you to judge the quality of the man's work."

But that's already been done. And it seems more than reasonable to assume the verdict will be much more positive for Jewison's "...And Justice For All" than it was for "F.I.S.T." Still, Jewison isn't making predictions. "I like it (the film). You say you like it. But one just can't be sure about what works and what doesn't until it is exposed to the public.

"We premiere the film Oct. 17 in Baltimore. That's when we'll know."

Country Style

By Russ Parsons

Lots of people wish they were in the same position as Charles Terry, that's part of the problem. While most musicians have to struggle a while, sleeping where they can, eating when they can and picking up any band members who come available, Terry has a sponsor.

That means he lives in a nice apartment, has a car, can pay for recording time and can lure good pickers with a promise of a steady salary.

And that creates jealousy.

He has a single out now — "Four-Beer Beauties" on one side and "He's Not A Cowboy" on the other — but it wasn't too long ago he was living on a farm in Denver City, just picking his guitar for his mom, family and friends.

Then Elizabeth Masterson happened into his life. A member of a prominent South Plains ranching family, Mrs. Masterson decided Charles had the stuff to make it big.

A tryout with Happy Shahan, Johnny Rodriguez's manager, confirmed her hunch and so she moved Charles to Lubbock to make his run at the big time.

His reception was cool. "Lubbock is a real cliquish town," he said. "If you don't know the right people it's hard to get good musicians. I started out with college kids who just wanted to pick up some extra money. Then I got some high school kids who were real ambitious but were just as inexperienced as I was.

"I went through that scene for about eight months and just ate my sack lunch. People would miss rehearsals and sometimes they'd be so busy with other things that they couldn't make engagements."

Now that part is over, thanks largely to his association with singer-songwriter David House and his association with Don Caldwell Studios, where he recorded his single.

"I feel like I've finally gotten inside the clique barrier," he said. "It's just a process of getting to know one good person. He has a friend, you meet him."

But for a long time he couldn't get to know that one good person. It seems a lot of people had already made up their minds about him before they met him. That's not real hard to understand though. He admits that he is neither a good guitar player nor a good singer, but says that he's working hard on both.

"I guess it's like anything else when you first get started in something. You find there's lots of things you should've done when you were 6 years old," Terry said.

"When I was first trying to get my band together it was hard for me to get good musicians. They'd say 'What do you play' and I'd tell them rhythm guitar. They'd say well let's play this in F-Sharp. Well, I'd have to say let's do it in G, I don't know F-Sharp.

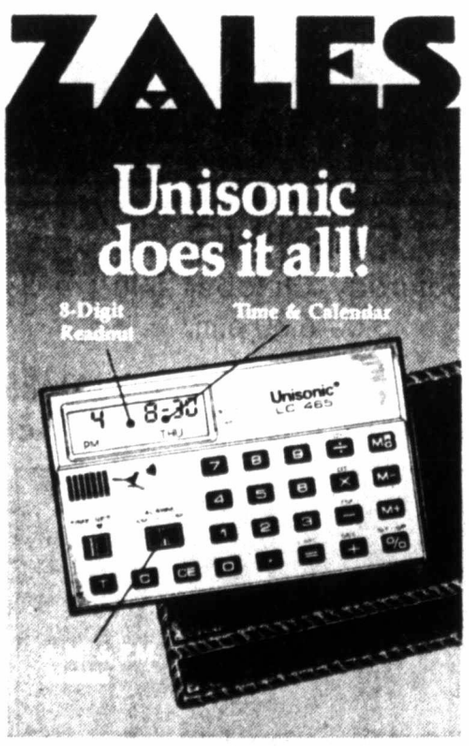

"I've also had a great deal of help on my voice," he said. "It's still not real good, but it's so much better than when I came up here. David House really helped me with that. Still, right here in Lubbock, there's probably 50 people who can sing better than I can ever hope to sing in my whole life. They're on street corners and working in garages."

What it all comes down to, though, is that regardless of his talent (and his singles show that he understates that), it seems to me that this is a case of a guy who has a chance to make his dream come true. How many of us would turn that down?

Like Terry said; "I've devoted my whole life to this dream. When I left Denver City I told my dad that if I went to Nashville with a guitar my chances would be about a million-to-one against making it. But If I go up here with Elizabeth Masterson, that narrows the odds down to probably 10,000 to one."

Opera 'Faust' To Feature Gershon Silins

Guest artist Gershon Sillins will be featured in the role of Valentin in the 8 p.m. performances October 25-27 opera "Faust" at the Civic Center theater, sponsored by Texas Tech Music Theatre, Civic Lubbock, Inc., and the Lubbock Civic Ballet.

GERSHON SILINS

The opera, composed by Charles Gounod and directed by John Gillas, is based on the tale by Goethe. It will be performed in English.

Silins, a native of Chicago, has performed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in Chicago and New York, under conductors Sir George Solti, Carlo Maria Giulini and James Levine. He is a regular soloist with the music of the Baroque concert series in Chicago. He recently performed the role of Sid in Britten's Albert Herring with the Chicago Opera Theatre, and also appeared with the Des Moines Metro Opera and the Hindsdale Opera Theatre. He was a member of the Apprentice Program for Singers of the Santa Fe Opera in 1973 and 1974, and will be a member of the Western Opera Theatre in 1980.

Tickets for "Faust" are on sale at the Civic Center box office and in room 259 at Texas Tech University's Drane Hall. The production will be accompanied by the Texas Tech Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Phillip Lehrman, and will include several ballet and dance sequences performed by the Lubbock Civic Ballet and choreographed by Neil Hess. Chorus director is Kyung Wook Shin.

Seminar Centers On George Inness

The work of landscape painter George Inness (1825-1894) will be the subject of an art seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Texas Tech University Museum. The seminar is one of a series being given by Rabbi Alexander Kline on 19th century American art.

There is an admission charge.

Inness' early work reflected the robust vigor of what critics call the Hudson River School. His work changed after a trip to Europe, though. He was influenced strongly by the English landscape painters, as well as Jean Carot, Henri Rousseau and others of the French Barbizon group of landscape artists. He is noted for cool and grayed colors, and soft brown-greens that fade into rosy browns.

Inness' drawing is firm and knowledgeable, but strong religious and mystical tendencies predominated in his last years.

"June" in the Brooklyn Museum and "The Home Of The Heron" in the Chicago Art Institute are typical of his work and particularly well known.

Kline To Speak About 'Maccabees'

Sponsored by Friends Of The Classics, Rabbi Alexander Kline will lecture on "The Maccabees" at 3p.m. today in the Pioneer Room at the Ranching Heritage Center.

Officials state in publicity that the lecture is of special interest to Biblical history students wanting to learn about the revolt against domination by the Selevcio Empire of Antioch. The Maccabees formed a dynasty which ruled Judea until the time of Herod The Great. The book of the Maccabees is included in the apocryphal writings of the Bible.

The public may attend today's lecture at no charge.

Murphey Still Taking Risks

if they can't play it live at concerts? Therefore, the trend itself destroys the product. Except for the disco music created totally by studio technicians, and nobody is going to buy anything that mechanical for that long. I really feel sorry for all the black R&B groups who are so good, but got put in the disco funnel and can't get bookings.

"Why? Because there are no dance concerts. See, that's where they blew it. They should have done like in the '60s and put on dance concerts. They should have said, 'Hey, we'll have five bands play disco and we'll all dance to live music.' Man, that would have worked. It would have lasted. But man, somebody got greedy and said, 'Hey, all we have to do is get some records and a good stereo system, and they'll flock to us.' And they did — for awhile.

"But also, another thing is that it destroys record sales. . .If you dance to a record two or three times at night at a disco, why would you need to have that record at home? I mean, disco singles sell well to teenagers, but then singles (.45s) only represent 11 per cent of the whole record market."

Songs by Michael Murphey, though, are known more for their visual flavor than a good beat for dancing. And it was only natural to expect that, especially in this era of songs being made into movies ("Ode To Billy Joe," "Harper Valley PTA," "Convoy" and the upcoming "Desperado"), that a Murphey song would also find its way to the screen. The surprise came in discovering it was not "Wildfire."

He revealed, "There's not even a script to 'Wildfire;' I own the rights, and I don't think it would even make a good film. Unless it was children's animation, and that's opening another can of worms."

But Murphey's "Hard Country" will be made into a film. Casting is not yet confirmed, but Murphey said direction would be by David Greene, who just won an Emmy for helming the TV special "Friendly Fire." He hopes to begin shooting the film on Nov. 28 on Texas locations, adding, "I've worked with a screenwriter named Michael Caine (not the actor) for about a month, mainly on dialogue and changing the story. He's the guy who put the format together..."

And if the primary source of filmic material is a good story, there may be more Murphey efforts in the future — because ever since he was a small boy growing up in Dallas, Michael Murphey has wanted to be a storyteller. "That's what attracted me to songwriting, the story part of it. I'm not the kind who writes songs for people to dance to. That's a separate art. And there will always be more dance music than story music, because there will always be a greater desire to party than to sit down and listen to music. . .The audience will always be small for story music. Top 40 will always be bigger. But every once in a while, an 'Ode To Billy Joe' will be a hit."

Or a "Wildfire."

Asked why he thought "Wildfire" hit home with the public, Murphey indicated much of that public might have been composed of young women. "The horse is probably one of the oldest symbols in man's mind," he said. "In a way, the horse represents man's way of getting free. 'Wildfire' is really about escaping a present situation to something else. That's a pretty universal theme. And given the fact that it's primarily girls under 20 who buy singles, and most horseowners are probably still predominantly teenaged girls, well, that helped. I mean, I've seen whole psychological treatises on teenaged girls and their interest in horses. I don't really understand it myself.

"Basically though, the song deals with the myth of escape, of being on a farm in Nebraska where this ghost will come pick me up and take me away. I tried to condense that to its simplest terms. So I chose the winged horse. It's one of our oldest myths, and I just made it American. I put it in Nebraska instead of Greece."

Indeed, Murphey is still looking for total freedom as reality, not myth. The word freedom pops up continuously in his conversation. Freedom is his religion, but no ghost is emrging from the skies to help him deal with cutting the strings to big record companies. Asked how this newfound freedom will affect his career, he said, "Well, it affects me because I now have the ability to get certain projects off the ground without a beauracracy gumming up the works. Like 'Hard Country': if I wasn't free of CBS, it would be a hell of a hard deal to put that together. Now I can do one album for a label, without signing away the rest of my life (or promising them further albums)."

But Murphey has been around long enough to realize there is little, if any, reality in a phrase like total freedom. As he put it, "I just wish I had all the answers. I don't. I mean, as Joni Mitchell once said, 'You can be too busy being free, too.'"

Still, Michael Murphey, now a small, independent businessman in the music industry, is confident he can operate better as a lone wolf. Indeed, it was clear back in 1974 when he shocked record company executives by writing the song "Nobody's Gonna Tell Me How To Play My Music." Obviously, he still plans to cling to those lyrics, no matter what.

Poet To Visit City This Week

Carole Oles, author of the poetry collection "The Loneliness Factor," will be in Lubbock Monday through Wednesday to conduct autograph sessions, guest lectures and a public poetry reading.

The artist-in-residence at the Massachusetts' Artists Foundation will offer a public reading at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Senate Room at Texas Tech's University Center. She will sign autographs from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday at the Hemphill-Wells downtown outlet, from 3 to 6 p.m. at the Hemphill-Wells affiliate at South Plains Mall, and from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Tech's University Center.

Your Haircut Should Look as Good After Five Days as it Does After Five Minutes.

And it will when you come to Command Performance. We shampoo, cut and blow dry your hair with precision.

Precision haircutting keeps your hair looking great long after you've had it done, because the hair is cut in harmony with the way it grows. And because it's cut to fall into place naturally, you don't have to keep fussing with it.

It costs just fourteen dollars for gals or guys. No appointments necessary. We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning.

Make your next haircut a precision haircut, and you won't hate yourself the morning after.

Recital Set For Wee Folk On Thursday

The Lubbock Music Teachers Association will present its student affiliates in a Wee Folks Recital at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Garden & Arts Center, 4215 University. The public may attend at no charge.

The program will consist of varied selections by piano students in first through third grades. It is the first student affiliate performance for younger children in this area.

The Texas Music Teachers Association student affiliates program was revised during the 1977-78 season to include the younger age grouPs in local and state activities for the first time in 27 years. Younger students may now participate in solo and ensemble performances and theory and composition contests.

Gayle Bowen will coordinate Thursday's recital.

Tickets On Sale For Dance Concert

Texas Tech University Theater and Tech's dance department will stage the institution's first co-sponsored dance concert, called "An Odyssey In Dance, Music and Light," at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 26-28 on the University Theater stage.

The concert will feature eight modern dance works by choreographers Diana Moore, Texas Tech University; Kristina Gintautien, Lubbock High School; and guest choreographer Susan Taylor of Tampa, Fla. The works include: "And ThenThere Were None," "Noazark," "Summertime," "Emission Nebula," "Sky Sine," "Out of the Shadows and Into the Shade," "Octaberlunes" and "Vagages."

Due to heavy season ticket sales, early reservations are suggested.

White Offers Wood Art Lessons Here

Sponsored by the Lubbock Parks & Recreation Department, John Christopher White will offer a series of lessons in wood art at the Garden & Arts Center, 4215 University.

One section of students will meet from 1 to 4 p.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays from Oct. 22 through Nov. 6; yet another will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. on Thursdays and again from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays Oct. 25 through Nov. 10.

BURNETT EARNS SUCCESS

Carol Burnett has earned her success, charting her course through college dramatics, nightclubs, revues, Broadway, and finally TV and films. "A Wedding," on HBO this month, is her fourth film and the first in which she really feels comfortable. She plays Tulip, a "blustery, up-tight, holier-than-thou lady whose husband has not looked at her in years except to demand dinner. She is definitely not me, although I do understand her. Like Tulip, I've been afraid, a child who didn't realize her own potential and kept putting herself down. But get a little approval, and you begin to thrive."

PEPE ROMERO: To perform Oct. 26 at Tech University Center theater

Classical Guitarist To Appear

Classical guitarist Pepe Romero, a member of the celebrated Romeros Quartet, will be featured in concert at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 26 at the Texas Tech University Center theater. Reservations and ticket prices may be obtained by calling 742-3610.

Romero was born in Malaga, Spain in 1944. At age 3, he began studying guitar with his father, Celedonio Romero. He gave his first public performance with his father at age 10 at the Teatro Lope de Vega in Seville.

He has received a great deal of acclaim, with the Washington Star saying "he electrified the audience. He is a supreme technician. The individual movement of his right hand fingers produces a a clear, strong attack on every note. It's something to see, but you can only see it in slow passages. The rest of the time it is hopeless, like trying to watch the wing beats of a hummingbird."

European critics have also been quick to praise Romero's skills.

As a "world premiere" artist, Pepe Romero has given the first performances of several works composed and dedicated to him. He offered the first performance of the Paul Chihara "Guitar Concerto" commissioned by and performed with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra in April 1976; and the premiere of Father de Medina's "Concierto Flamenco." With family members, he also played premiere performances of de Medina's "Concierto Vasco," Rodrigo's "Concierto Andaluz" and Morton Gould's "Troubador Music."

Following his first performance with the Spanish National Orchestra in Madrid, composer Federico Moreno-Torroba was moved to dedicate to Romero his beautiful "Concierto de Castilla."

Romero is on campus in conjunction with the National String Teachers' Association's guitar symposium, sponsored by the Tech music department.

ART TALK: By La Wanda Murfee

Don't you like to go into an office, a home or gallery and stand back and admire (or criticize) people paintings? Every museum has an abundance of portraits, the most popular type of art since Egyptians and Greeks recorded individuals of their day. Although identities of most of the models have long been lost, artists preserved a way of life, history of costuming, the elegance or simplicity of mankind, while leaving thier own mark of the struggle or dexterity of applying paint or chisel through portraiture. The ultimate of the arts has always been the portrayal of the figure or portrait.

Portrait painters today have many advantages over those of the past with the use of the camera. With one photography session with the model, the artist can make many shots from which to decide on the final pose, the effect of the garments, placement within a setting. Most clients who commission a portrait are busy people and are pleased to sit for the artist and his camera than to prolong a sitting while the oil paint goes onto the canvas. The camera affords a simple shortcut to the first painting session with the sitter.

Any artist wants the client for two or three sittings to determine coloring, mannerisms, attitude and expressions for the final painting. The camera cannot always capture all these attributes. A fine oil portrait must be a painting and not a photograph. The two mediums are as different as Chopin and Bach.

Some painters will assist the sitter in selecting clothing that will enhance the figure and set the mood of the portrait. An informal pose would certainly call for more freedom in dress than say, a formal format in acedemic robes. A favorite dress may challenge the artist as he forsees problems with lighting, reflections, textures and mood accomplishment.

Technique and style of painting has tremendous influence on portrait product. A very feminine lady will certainly be better captured in a loose, free technique than a method where edges, tones and color are more severe. Many aspects are to be considered when commissioning a portrait other than simply thinking one must go to an artist, sit in a chair before a north window for some hours, then be happy with the results. In order to achieve a happy success, both client and artist must become emotionally and technically involved in the complicated production of a portrait.

I know some portrait painters who keep up a continual conversation while the painting is in progress. Others I am acquainted with chat in the beginning, then as the painting progresses past the first drawing, the artist is lost in his work and ceases to converse. The model then entertains himself in his own thoughts.

The next time you have the opportunity, watch the sitter more than the artist. The artist's close observation of the model oftentimes make the model uncomfortable and often relaxation is difficult.

Piano Recital Slated

Jane Henry Wilson will be featured in a faculty piano recital of music by Leos Janivacek at 8:15 p.m. Oct. 28 at Texas Tech University's Hemmle Recital Hall. There is no admission charge.

A native of Lubbock, Mrs. Wilson received her Bachelor's degree in music education from Texas Tech with piano and cello as principal instruments. She received the Master of Music degree in piano performance from Indiana University and is now a candidate for the Doctor of Music degree at that institution. She studied piano with Abbey Simon, Alforso Montecino, Jorge Bolet and Sydney Foster.

Mrs. Wilson taught at Iowa State University and the Catholic University of America before joining the Tech faculty.

She was a recipient of a Shell Foundation Faculty Development grant to attend the International Music Festival 1978 in Brno, Czechoslovakia, which celebrated the 50th anniversary of Janivacek's death and the 125th anniversary of his birth. The highlight of the festival was the performance of all of the operas of Janivacek.

Mrs. Wilson did research in the Janivacek archive in Brno, and also made a trip tothe village of Hulwaldy, Janivacek's birthplace, as a guest of the Czech government. The Tech recital will include a slide lecture, and Mrs. Wilson's observations from that trip.

'HELLO DOLLY' CONTINUES — The Lubbock Christian College staging of "Hello Dolly" will continue with 8:15 p.m. performances Friday and Saturday at the campus' Moody Auditorium. In the scene at left, Cornelius Hackl (Byron Rogers) and Barnaby Tucker (Ron Dunagan) react to learning that Irene Molloy (Tambia Fincher) is a widow. At right, Teena Sharp (playing Minnie Fay) and Miss Fincher contemplate an adventure. Not pictured is Liz Schrode as Dolly. The play is produced and directed by June Bearden, with choreography by Suzanne Aker. Costumes are by Brooks Van Horn of New York. Music and orchestra director is B. Wayne Hinds. FIRE ANT REPORT — After two years of research on ways of controlling the spread of the imported red fire ant, Texas Tech University officials present a report to Texas Commissioner of Agriculture Reagan Brown, second from left. The Texas Department of Agriculture has provided a total of $400,000 to Tech for fire ant research. Explaining a portion of the progress report is Dr. James K. Wangberg, right, Tech entomologist. Second from right is David A. Ivie, director of the TDA's agricultural and environmental sciences program. At left is Dr. Samuel E. Curl, agriculture dean. (Tech Photo)

Scientists Collect Ants

Collecting ants is not everyone's hobby, but for researchers at Texas Tech University, who have one of the world's largest collection of ant specimens, it is an extremely important exercise.

Entomologists at Tech are studying the imported red fire ant, an agricultural and health threat, and the ant collection serves as a resource base for knowledge.

The collection according to the researchers, will help in understanding the adaptive powers of all ants in West Texas. Then researchers can focus on the possibility of future establishment of one specific variety, the red imported fire ant.

The fire ant mounds are as hard as cement, and farm equipment, being driven against them unexpectedly, can be damaged. The health problem is serious for people who are sensitive to the ant's venom, as bites could be fatal.

The ant is moving westward at a rate of about 20 to 30 miles per year along a front from Dallas to Uvalde. Dr. Darryl P. Sanders, Texas Tech entomologist, is concerned that it could reach West Texas in the next decade.

But that depends on how well the ant can adapt to the dry and cold environment in West Texas and the Panhandle. Sub-zero temperatures have prevented the northward movement of the ant, and research during the next 12 months will attempt to determine the effect of hot and dry environments.

Dr. James K. Wangberg, also a Texas Tech entomologist, said, "Soil types do not seem to affect the ant as it can adapt to a wide variety of soils. The ant has already infested more than 40 million acres in Texas."

Sanders and other researchers in entomology and biology are working on a continuing project to control the spread of the fire ant. The Texas Department of Agriculture (TDA) provided $200,000 to Texas Tech in 1977 to begin a fire ant research program, and TDA Commissioner Reagan Brown recently announced an additional $200,000 for the 1979-81 period.

The research team, headed by Sanders, includes Drs. Wangberg, Donald Ashdown, Daniel P. Bartell, and Oscar P. Francke, all from the Department of Entomology. Dr. Stuart L. Pimm, Department of Biological Sciences, is also a principal investigator.

The ant collection, made by Bartell and Francke, represents ants from 8,000 nests and includes 140 species. The collection provides information on biology, habitat, food habits and behavior.

"Parasites, predators and diseases can be identified from the base knowledge to control ant populations," Bartell explained.

This red fire ant was unknown in the United States 40 years ago, but since its introduction near Mobile, Ala., in the 1930s, it has moved westward.

Density surveys conducted by Ashdown indicate that the fire ant is concentrated along highways and that areas five to 10 feet from the paved edge have particularly high populations and colony density.

"The fact that the ants are close to the highways is obviously important because the ant could move faster if it gets an accidental lift on commercial or other vehicles," Ashdown said.

A computer model is being developed to predict where the ant is going and how fast it will get there. Pimm, who is developing the model, continuously feeds new data from the other researchers into the model to improve its accuracy.

During the next two years the researchers will complete the collection of ant species, refine computer models, evaluate temperature, humidity and soil types as influencing factors, and screen the efficiency of biological and chemical control.

A virus specialist, Dr. Shanti Bilimoria, will be associated with the project in the second phase. He will grow pathogens (diseases) and innoculum to test on the ants. Dr. Robert Marlett, a park administration specialist, and Lawrence B. Zuercher, a landscape architect, will provide land use systems that will discourage fire ant establishment or at least concentrate ants in area that could easily be treated.

Dr. Donald R. Haragan, an atmospheric scientist, will develop techniques for measuring and analyzing soil moisture and temperature regimes to predict future ant establishments.

Area Corn Growers Excited By High Yields

By JIM STEIERT
A-J Correspondent

HEREFORD — Deaf Smith County's corn harvest has begun to gather speed.

High winds that accompanied an arriving norther earlier this month toppled a major percentage of the county's corn crop, and farmers will have to use pick-up attachments on their combines to salvage the fallen corn.

Early yeilds are extremely encouraging, however, in the wake of two disastrously short corn crops here in 1977 and 1978. Yields of from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds per acre are welcome news to many farmers, who did well to harvest 5,000 pound per acre yields in 1978 due to hot weather and repeated attacks by spider mites.

Joe Artho of Hereford Grain Corp. reported that the local cooperative's elevator facilities are "beginning to get a good run of corn now" and also reported that some soybeans and early grain sorghum have been delivered.

"The corn looks real fine. It's running from 17-28 percent moisture content right now. Quality-wise, it's lots better than last year's, when we had so much ear worm damage. We're really just getting underway on the corn harvest here, and it will take about three weeks to wrap things up on corn. Soybeans have already slowed down, with a lot of farmers getting them harvested early to avoid excessive field losses. Bean yields have ranged from 20-50 bushels per acre. It will be after frost before we really get into the grain sorghum harvest, although we've already received a million pounds of milo and one farmer has already wrapped up his maize harvest," Artho reported.

To the east of Hereford at the Dawn community, corn harvet is moving rather tentatively at this time, according to Dale Wofford of Dawn Co-Op.

"The corn looks real good, but it's still just kind of trickling in, without the big push underway yet. Yields are mostly 8,000 to 9,000 pounds per acre, with a few 10,000 pound yields, and the soybeans are generally making about 35 bushels per acre this year," said Wofford.

Test weights on corn were listed by Wofford at 52-53 pounds per bushel.

Northwest Grain manager Calvin Mitts reported that only a few tentative loads of corn have been cut in the area served by his firm, located west of the Farmer's Corner area.

"The wind during the past week blew most of the corn down out here in this country, and the corn's a little later than normal this year anyway. The yields look to be better than the last couple of years, if we can get the fallen corn picked up," Mitts.

He added that no yield figures are available from farmers in that area yet, and that moisture content of the corn is still around 25 percent at this time.

"We've got grain sorghum as the predominant crop out here in this area for the first time in several years — 70 or 80 percent of our acreage. Once the corn dries down and harvest starts, it won't take long to finish harvesting it, and then we'll run later on milo.

The milo looks exceptionally good. All we need is about $6 for it, and then maybe we could pay some bills," Mitts added.

South of Hereford at the Easter community in neighboring Castro County, Gene King of Easter Grain reported that corn harvest is about 40 percent complete.

"Barring any weather-related slowdowns, we could be through the majority of the corn harvest in another week, although 75 to 80 percent of the corn in this area went down during the high winds," said King.

Test weights on corn in the Easter area were listed as 54-56 pounds per bushel, and King reported that 9,000 and 10,000 pound per acre yields were being recorded on many farms in that region.

"We're getting better quality corn and a lot better yields than we had last year, and the whole situation is much improve all the way around," commented King.

Calvin Jones, agricultural manager of the Holly Sugar Corp. Hereford plant indicated that sugar beet harvesting operations throughout much of the acreage supplying the local best processing plant are underway.

Jones reported that during the initial stage of the beet harvest, receiving hours and deliveries of beets will be arranged with growers on a day-to-day basis, and growers will be notified concerning planning for each following day.

"Station hours should be extended during November as we begin our accelerated harvest and stockpiling operations, and at that time, we will make every effort to accept the crop as delivered in hopes of completing the harvest by mid-November and avoiding any possible problems with frozen beets," said Jones.

Prospects are for an excellent beet harvest in the High Plains production area this year, according to the Holly official, who pointed out that even hail damaged beets hae posted good recovery without excessive loss of sugar content.

"We're looking at a potential bumper crop in our growing area at this time. Our samples indicate this year's crop should average 20 tons per acre and should have a higher sugar content than last year's crop as well," said Jones.

Beet yields in 1978 averaged 17.3 tons per acre, and sugar content averaged 14.25 percent.

Pending Sugar Bill Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Margaret M. Heckler, R-Mass., said recently that a pending sugar price-support bill would "pick the pockets of American consumers" while giving Cuba "a bonanza of over $1 billion."

"The bill deserves to be defeated on both counts," she told reporters at a news conference.

The measure, backed by the Carter administration, is now being considered by the House.

The measure would ratify an international sugar trade agreement and would require raising U.S. import duties as part of an effort to assure that raw sugar sells in the United States for at least 15.8 cents a pound. Sugar now seels for 15 cents per pound.

Proposed Plant Protection Act Arouses Debate In House Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some critics of legislation now in Congress that would overhaul the Plant Variety Protection Act see it as a threat to millions of small farmers and home gardeners who might see their favorite seeds disappear from store shelves.

But supporters of the measure, including the Agriculture Department and large segments of the professional seed trade, say this is so much dandelion fluff blown out of proportion by alarmists.

Bills that would amend the 1970 act have been introduced by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. Among the highly technical amendments is one that would allow federal patents on new varieties of okra, celery, peppers, tomatoes, carrots and cucumbers.

Critics contend individuals or companies holding such patents could control which varities are grown and thousands of varieties now available would be banned.

A House Agriculture subcommittee headed by de la Garza held a hearing on the proposed amendments in July, but the panel now intends to reopen the proceedings later this year in an attempt to settle some of the questions that have arisen since then.

The purpose of the 1970 act, de la Garza said at the earlier hearing, "is to encourage the development of new varieties, to make them available to the public, to provide protection on a voluntary basis to the developers and thereby promote progress in agriculture in the public interest."

Bernard Leese, commissioner of the Agriculture Department's plant variety protection office, told the panel the agency "recommends the bill be enacted."

Leese said that in 1970 when Congress was working on the measure, "two canning companies objected to the law, based on the fear that the legislation would increase the cost of raw vegetables and therefore increase the cost of their products."

As a compromise, he said, the six vegetables now proposed to be covered by the amendments were excluded from the 1970 law. Subsequently, Leese said, the canning companies found that the 1970 act did not increase their costs and do not now object to the six vegetables being included.

Another proposed amendment would extend the period of federal patent rights to 18 years, one more than now permitted "to conform with other countries with breeders' rights laws and with the requirement" of the International Union for the Protection of New Varieties of Plants "which the U.S. may join," Leese said.

Criticism of the legislation has been led by Cary Fowler of Wadesboro, N.C., representing the National Sharecropper's Fund, who also testified at the hearing in July.

Fowler has continued his opposition, including an article last month in "ruralamerica," a publication of Rural America, a rural activist group often involved in housing and other social issues affecting low-income rural families.

Fowler, besides claiming the legislation "could make it illegal for small farmers to grow varieties of common vegetables," said opponents are concerned the bill "would further promote corporate consolidation in the seed industry."

Fowler also expressed concern about plant variety protection in Europe where he said "illegal varieties cannot be sold by commerical seed companies."

Barbara Schlei, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, told the July hearing Europe's method "is not the system that we have" and "the seed industry itself would oppose the adoption of any similar system here in the United States."

Harold D. Loden, executive vice president of the American Seed Trade Association, told The Associated Press following publication of some of the charges by Fowler and other critics of the legislation that "it is amazing the extent to which some groups are able to get the press to print untrue, half-true or misleading statements."

"Holders of plant variety protection certificates or plant patents have no way of banning any variety," he said. "Varieties cannot be banned in the U.S. for any purpose or by anyone. The Plant Variety Protection Act is a voluntary program to protect one's own varieties from being stolen or pirated."

In Fowler's "ruralamerica" article, he said "the patenting laws make seed companies attractive targets for takeover by large corporations," continuing that "Burpee is now a subsidiary of ITT, Purex owns Ferry-Morse, and Northrup-King is now owned by a Swiss chemical firm, Sandoz."

Loden, representing the seed trade, responded.

"So what! The merger of seed companies or acquisition by other companies is simply related to profitability of the individual enterprises and is the decision of the free-enterprising and independent businessman.

"If the seed company has been successful in its research and has protected varieties which are accepted by the consumer, then they are more attractive for not only takeovers but for their owners. It is important to remember that a plant variety protection certificate (patent) is useless unless it is for a variety which is accepted in the marketplace."

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A REBUTTAL OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Agriculture's recent audit report on Cotton Inc. concedes that CI once directed export sales to a few producers.

But the rebuttal says the audit report, released in late August, "does not at all bear out widespread inflammatory news coverage." Most of the criticism in the audit, the rebuttal says, was directed at the USDA itself.

The rebuttal was written by the staff of Cotton Inc. for submission to the CI board of directors, which met Friday in Dallas.

Cotton Inc.'s direction of sales to a few producers was in violation of an agreement under which it promised to refer sales opportunities to all merchants and cooperatives. However, Cotton Inc. says it had no internal written policies to carry out the agreement.

There was "no structured policy on this matter," the rebuttal says, and representatives "now and then made an exception to the sales referral procedures."

THE REBUTTAL SAYS THOSE PRACTICES were terminated a year ago. That was two years after a 1976 agreement in which Cotton Inc. promised to refer sales opportunities for distribution to all merchants and cooperatives.

There was another violation of the ban last spring, the rebuttal says, but the person involved is leaving the company and procedures are being enforced.

It has been reported that USDA documents show Thomas O'Mara, international marketing account manager for Cotton Inc., offered a business opportunity to William Dunavant, a major Memphis cotton merchant, at about that time. The action, it has been reported, was an attempt to involve Dunavant, an outspoken critic of CI's export promotion program, in the controversy.

Most of the practices of the federally supervised cotton research-promotion program questioned in the audit, the rebuttal says, "stemmed from the degree of independence Cotton Inc. has been given."

The audit report, the rebuttal says, "lays the responsibility on the Department of Agriculture for allegedly not having 'effectively carried out its oversight responsibility under the Cotton Research and Promotion Act'."

THE EXTENT OF COTTON INC.'S AUTONOMY from the government can be debated, the rebuttal says.

But it adds: "Given that degree of independence which the company has and believed merited, the firm's practices should not be judged in the context of that environment, and not, ex post facto, against a set of specific guidelines only now being proposed."

Cotton Inc. disagreed with an audit charge that $273,455 in equipment was purchased without the required prior approval. The rebuttal says only one piece of equipment, worth $16,806, was not approved according to procedures.

The organization was criticized for contracting for $5.9 million in television advertising without review or approval. Cotton Inc. responds that a request was not submitted directly to the Cotton Board and USDA because the funds would not be spent until 1980.

More than $200,000 was omitted from inventory records, Cotton Inc. concedes, but the inventory was inaccurate at just one of 30 CI locations around the country.

DIRECTING INFORMATION PROGRAMS at groups of farmers who sought refunds of their per-bale assessments could be seen as an effort to thwart the farmers' rights to refunds, the USDA said in the audit.

Market research, the rebuttal says, has shown dissatisfaction is highest among farmers with the least amount of information about Cotton Inc.

The rebuttal is highly critical of Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., for his "attacks" on Cotton Inc. following release of the audit and "intemperate" remarks about what was "by and large a balanced and constructive document."

Findley is a Cotton Inc. critic who pushed for the audit. He claimed the audit reflected "gross mismanagement" and "squandering of public and checkoff funds."

Economy, Quality Head Dairy Course Topics

Approximately 100 are expected to participate in the 31st annual Dairy Short Course Sunday and Monday in Lubbock.

It is sponsored by the Department of Food Technology and Animal Science at Texas Tech University.

The meeting, which usually attracts producers, processors and dairy marketing representatives from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, will be in the Hilton Inn. Registration will be from 2-6 p.m. Sunday and continue from 8-8:45 a.m. Monday.

Discussions will deal with such topics as economic conditions in the dairy industry, quality control, the Texas Uniform Milk Inspection Program and legislative action regarding the industry.

Speakers will represent the Texas Department of Health, the Dairy Products Institute of Texas (DPIT) and Superior Dairies, Austin; Southland Corp., Dallas; Bell Dairy Products and Southwestern Public Service Co., Lubbock; the Texas-New Mexico Dairy Technology Society, and Texas Tech University.

Dr. Sam E. Curl, dean of the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences, will welcome guests. Dr. J. Wayland Bennett, associate dean, will be the guest speaker for a 6:30 p.m. banquet Monday. Bennett, an agricultural economist, is a member of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, and he will discuss "Producers and Consumers in an Inflationary Economy."

Speaking at the dinner on behalf of the Texas-New Mexico Dairy Technology Society, which helped found the short course, will be the society's president, Fred Browning of the Green Spot Co. of San Antonio.

Short course topics and speakers scheduled are: "The Dairy Industry in 1979," M. J. "Jim" Adamson, president of DPIT and executive vice president, Superior Dairies, Austin; "A Report of the 1979 Texas Legislature," Glenn R. Brown, DPIT executive vice president; "Research and Development in the Food Industry," Dr. Howard Zimmerman, director of research, Development and Quality Assurance, Southland Corp., Dallas; "Quality Control in the Dairy Industry," Donna E. Huffington, quality control director, Bell Dairy Products, Lubbock; "Texas Uniform Milk Inspection Program," Hugh Rundle, director, Milk and Dairy Product Division, Texas Department of Health; and "A Question of Balance," Irwin Glover, power sales engineer, Southern Division, Southwestern Public Service Co., Lubbock.

The registration fee for the short course is $30, and that fee include the banquet.

Top Farmland Lost To Non-Farm Uses

Top-producing farmland is being lost to urban and other non-farming uses at a faster rate than previously thought.

On the average, more than four entire farms of 400 acres each are lost every day.

In a year's time, the land lost to farming is equivalent to the amount needed to grow the wheat used in making 1¼ billion loaves of bread.

Not only present but future food and fiber needs must be considered as land uses are determined for coming generations.

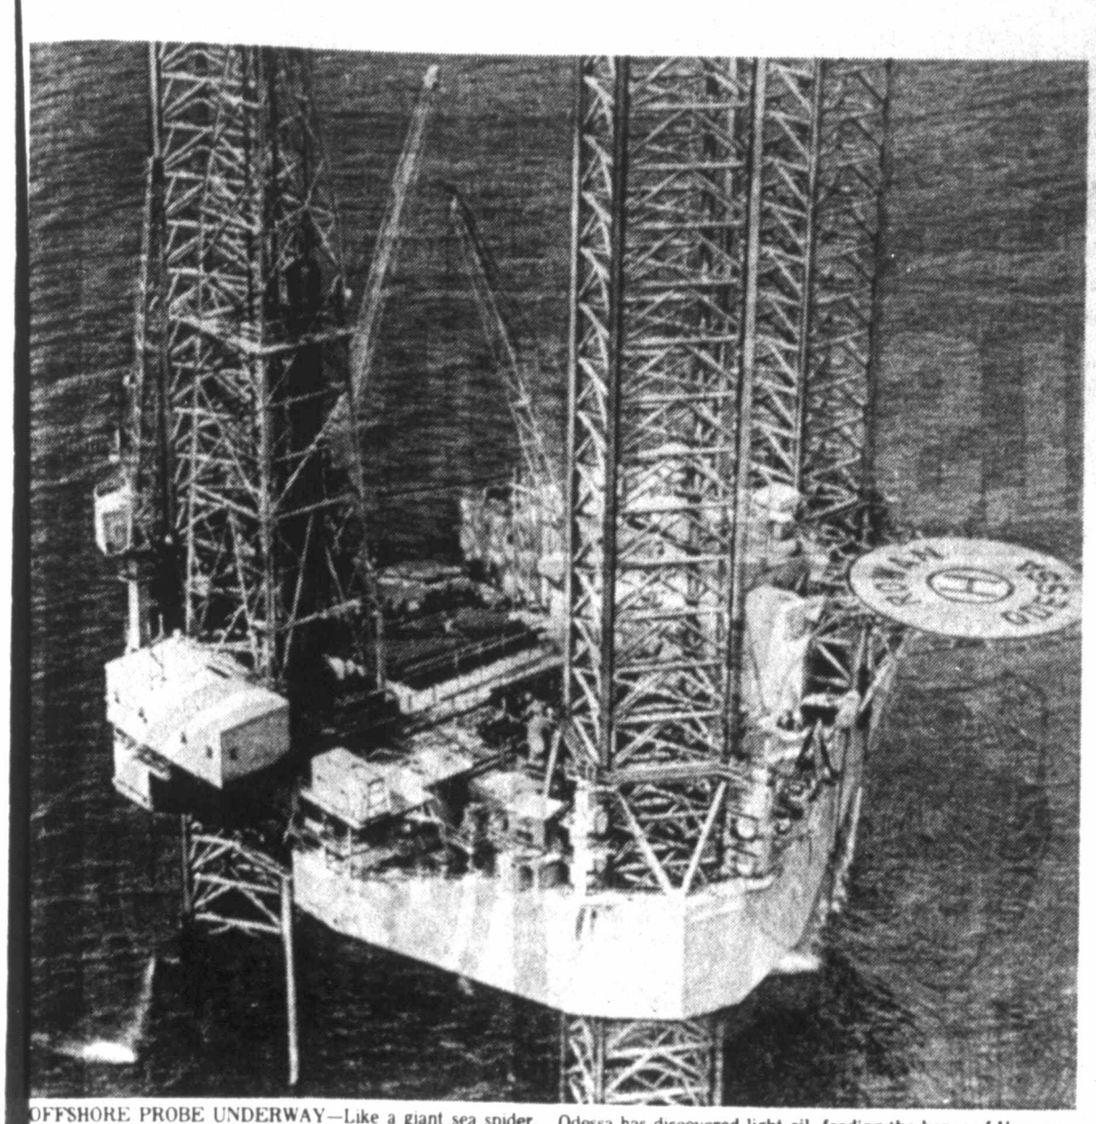

Irrigation Affects U.S. Food Supply

Irrigation is used on only 12 percent of farmland devoted to the growing of crops.

Yet, this irrigated land, located primarily in the 17 western states, yields about one-fourth of the value of all crops.

This contribution of irrigated agriculture to the overall food supply must be considered as increasing non-farming demands are placed upon water usage.

OFFSHORE PROBE UNDERWAY—Like a giant sea spider, Rowan International's jack-up rig, the Odessa, lurks in the warm waters of the Caribbean off Venezuela's coast. Venezuela Racing Energy Clock To Bolster Shrinking Reserves

A-J Oil News

By MONTE HAYES

ABOARD THE ODESSA (AP) — Winds were gusting up to 40 knots, rocking American and Venezuelan workers on this oil-drilling rig in the Caribbean off Venuzuela. L.D. Rogers, supervisor of the Odessa, grasped a railing and squinted into a blistering sun.

"This here wind takes away a lot of the heat," said Rogers, a big, ruddy-faced offshore operator from Jackson, Miss. "The sea gets pretty rough at times, but the weather's as good as a man can ask for."

That's good news for Venezuela's national oil monopoly, which has hired Rowan International's Odessa and two other offshore rigs from the United States to probe for oil in the country's continental shelf.

After half a century as one of the world's major oil exporters and a key supplier of energy to the United States, this South American nation is locked into a race against the clock to replenish rapidly shrinking reserves.

Venezuela's rich deposits have yielded more than 34 billion barrels of crude in the last 60 years. But no major fields have been discovered since 1958, when the government decided to grant no more concessions to foreign oil companies.

Since 1970, the last year Venezuela led the world in oil exports, daily operating capacity of the country's industry has plunged from nearly 4 million barrels to 2.4 million barrels today.

That is still good enough to make Venezuela the fifth biggest producer in the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. But at current production rates, the country's remaining 18 billion barrels of proven reserves will be gone in 20 years.

The wells may run dry even sooner, say some experts. They note that production of 3.4 billion barrels of the "proven" reserves depends on difficult, costly "secondary recovery" projects, not yet carried out, that would inject steam, water or natural gas into old fields to force out lingering pockets of petroleum.

"That is like counting chickens before they are hatched," Juan Pablo Perez Alfonzo, former oil minister and founder of the world oil cartel, said in his last detailed critique of the industry before his death in September.

To postpone that dark day when the wells go dry and to buy time to diversify its economy, Venezuela plans to spend $25 billion over the next 10 years to rejuvenate its aging oil industry.

Much of this titanic sum will be pumped into secondary recovery projects and into drilling thousands of feet deeper into Lake Maracaibo and other established fields. Petroleos de Venezuela, the state oil monopoly that has run the industry since nationalization in 1976, is also paying billions to modify its refineries to extract gasoline from heavy crudes.

The refining changes are necessary because Venezuela's deposits of valuable lightweight crude — the oil that yields the most gasoline — form less than 20 percent of its total proven reserves and will be exhausted within 10 years.

Unless, of course, exploration turns up new deposits. The search for light oil has spurred Petroleos into a $175 million program to drill 30-odd wildcat wells in the turquoise waters off Venezuela's 2,200-mile Caribbean shoreline.

Of 13 wells drilled by three rigs since the offshore probe began in October 1978, two have struck oil. In June a well drilled by the Odessa 17.5 miles north of Venezuela's arid northwest coast netted 2,200 barrels a day in tests. In early September, a well drilled off the northeast coast by Maraven's rented rig, the Ocean Rover, yielded 1,000 barrels a day in tests.

In both cases, the oil was light, just the kind Venezuela most needs. But officials of Maraven and Corpoven, the Petroleos subsidiary overseeing the Odessa operation, say more wells have to be drilled to determine if the two areas contain marketable quantities of crude.

Despite the spotty results so far, Venezuelan oil officials remain confident that the country's continental platform holds up to 12 billion barrels of the precious light petroleum.

Some foreign experts, however, express doubts about the platform's potential as an oil producer.

"I don't see it as a big source of oil," says an American oil company geologist on loan to Petroleos. "There are no large fields left to be discovered in Venezuela."

"If they were sure there was oil offshore, they wouldn't be going into the Orinoco Heavy Oil Belt at this point," adds an official of an American oil company that provides technical support for Venezuela's industry.

The Orinoco belt is one of the largest untapped oil reserves in the world. Experts estimate it contains at least 700 billion barrels, but the total may be much higher because the 300-mile strip along the Orinoco River has not been fully explored.

The drawback — and it's a big one — is that the oil found there is thick, sticky, dirty and extremely expensive to produce and refine on a commercial scale. And perhaps only 10 percent of this tar-like crude, known in the trade as "non-conventional" oil, can be extracted with technology presently available.

The government of President Luis Herrera Campins has announced it plans to spend $3.5 billion to initiate development of the Orinoco deposits. It has set a production target of 125,000 barrels a day from the belt by 1985 and is aiming for a potential output of one million barrels daily by the late 1990s, a venture that will cost many billions more.

But skeptics abound.

"There's no market for that oil today," says an American refining expert. "If people saw what it looked like, they would understand why. It's thicker than molasses. You can turn a jar of it upside down for 30 seconds without it pouring out. And it's peppered with sulphur and metals. The U.S. is a market for clean products."

Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti is convinced, however, that there is going to be a market for the tar-belt oil in coming years as the world's supplies of lighter crudes dwindle.

Looming over Venezuela's search for new reserves is the specter of a rapidly growing domestic appetite for gasoline — no small problem for a country that earns 95 percent of its foreign exchange from oil exports.

Venezuelan motorists' love affair with big gas-guzzlers is fed by subsidized pump prices that range from 13 to 31 U.S. cents a gallon. Domestic fuel consumption this year is averaging 300,000 barrels a day and could reach one million barrels daily by 1990, Venezuelan energy officials warn. But politicians fear the inflationary impact of raising prices.

Most Venezuelans appear unperturbed by the possibility of their petroleum being gone in the not too distant future. In fact, many don't believe it could happen.

"Venezuela will have oil for another hundred years," says a retired Venezuelan geologist. "It's just a matter of looking for it."

"Optimism," he says, grinning broadly as he watches workers changing the Odessa's drilling bit, "is something we Venezuelans have plenty of."

Texas Refiners Log Increases In Petroleum Product Volume

AUSTIN (Special) -Texas refiners manufactured 44.2 million barrels more of petroleum products in the first six months of 1979 than in the similar period a year earlier, according to reports to the Railroad Commission.

Products output in January-June, 1979, totaled 862,271,524 barrels against 818,038,468 barrels in the first half of 1978, a tabulation of monthly recapitulations by the commission's Administrative Services Division shows.

Motor gasoline yield in the first half of 1979 was 350,795,260 barrels against 321,770,221 barrels a year earlier.

This volume compares with 140,228,171 barrels in the previous June. Inputs of crude oil and blends totaled 149,283,082 barrels in May, 1979.

Texas refineries ran 121,045,433 barrels of crude oil in June compared to 121,438,807 barrels in June, 1978, and 125,048,488 barrels in May, 1979.

Products manufactured in June, 1979, totaled 142,586,877 barrels, up from 140,865,770 barrels in the same month the previous year, and down from the 147,740,949 barrels in May, 1979.

The June, 1979, manufacture of motor gasoline totaled 57,827,310 barrels, compared to 59,861,560 barrels in the year-earlier month and 57,710,625 barrels in May of 1979.

Texas refineries manufactured 9,895,354 barrels of home heating oil in June, 1979—an increase of 743,202 barrels from the year-earlier volume. The May, 1979, output was 9,507,952 barrels.

Texas operators have reported 16 oil and 30 gas discoveries for the Sept. 16-30 period, the commission's Oil and Gas Division has announced. In the year-earlier period, 21 oil and 26 gas discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

Through the first nine months of 1979, Texas operators have reported 895 gas and 362 oil discoveries, against 805 gas and 344 oil discoveries in the year-earlier period. Successful exploratory and field completions in the nine months of 1979 total 6,069 oil and 4,096 gas, against 6,212 oil and 4,158 gas completions in the same period last year.

Oil discoveries in the last half of September, 1979, included four in West Central Texas, three in the deep South Texas area, two each in the Midland, Lubbock and North Texas areas and one each in East Texas, Southeast Texas, and the San Angelo areas.

Gas discoveries included 20 in deep South Texas, six in the Refugio area, three in the Southeast Texas area, and one in the Panhandle area.

In the Sept. 16-30 period, operators reported that 134 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes. There were 2,677 dry holes reported in the first nine months of 1979 against 3,003 a year earlier.

New applications for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 1,057 in the last half of September compared with 857 in the same period of 1978.

Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells in the Sept. 16-30 period amounted to 1,227 against 952 a year earlier.

Operators filed 245 amended applications to drill.

There have been 15,644 applications to drill new oil and gas tests this year, against 14,980 in the same period of 1978. Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells so far this year total 18,130 against 17,710 in the first nine months of 1978.

The Railroad Commission has granted applications of three operators to sell low-volume natural gas produced on state land in Panhandle and South Texas counties to interstate purchasers.

Viking Resources Corp. was authorized to sell 64,000 cubic feet of gas per day—its production share in Tract 5-C, San Antonio River, McCaskill field, Karnes County—to National Exploration Co. Gas produced on non-state lands in the 704-acre gas unit already are being sold interstate under private contract.

National Exploration will pay the maximum legal price of $2.22 or $2.062 per million BTU as determined by a pricing provision of the federal Natural Gas Policy Act.

HNG Oil Co. and Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas Co. were authorized to sell their reserves of 64 million cubic feet of gas underlying two acres in the Viking (upper Morrow) field, Hemphill County, to El Paso Natural Gas Co.

The life of the reserves is estimated to be four years. El Paso will pay $1.73 per thousand cubic feet of gas.

The applications were granted during a conference on Oil and Gas Division matters. Under state statute and Commission Rule 69, operators must obtain RRC authorization to sell gas produced on state lands to interstate buyers.

THE ROUSTABOUT

BY RAY WESTBROOK

AN ENERGY POLICY statement adopted recently by the Executive Committee of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, calls for increased domestic exploration plus increased accessibility to public lands for petroleum and mineral exploration.

Dr. John D. Haun, president of AAPG, says the United States is currently using more than 6 billion barrels of oil per year and producing only half of that amount.

"The balance of our appetite for oil is fed by imports," he said in a policy paper released by the association.

Oil and natural gas resources of the U.S.—and the world—are finite, he pointed out.

"Within the next decade or so, the world petroleum supply and demand curves will cross. The results could be catastrophic if we are not prepared."

Huan thinks it is futile to recount the ways the United States arrived at the energy problems it now faces. "Instead, we need to accept the problems as real and work together, as a nation, to find both short-term and long-term solutions."

THE ASSOCIATION lists seven points which it believes should be incorporated into a U.S. energy policy.

Increased domestic oil and natural gas exploration; increased accessibility to public lands for petroleum and mineral exploration; improved recovery of oil from existing fields; abandonment of divestiture plans for oil companies; aggressive development of alternatives for traditional fossil energy sources; increased conservation efforts; and reasonable environmental safeguards.

"Any measures to decrease our deficit in international payments must include deregulating wellhead prices," according to IPAA. "Higher prices will stimulate exploration and development of crude oil and natural gas resources."

A recent "lock-up" of 110 million acres in Alaska before adequate exploration for petroleum and mineral deposits had been conducted, demonstrates a lack of understanding of the long-term interests of the United States and its citizens, according to AAPG.

"Public lands accessibility is a fundamental national problem. Regional attitudes which call for excessive restrictions should not have the effect of prompting decisions contrary to the national interest."

AAPG thinks the objective of Outer Continental Shelf leasing should be maximum resource development, not maximum income to the federal government.

THE IMPROVED RECOVERY of oil from existing fields has been a major target of research and development in the petroleum industry for many years, AAPG says.

Currently only some 33 percent of petroleum is recovered from known reservoirs, leaving billions of barrels of oil which would be attractive to enhanced recovery procedures.

There are still conflicts between enhanced oil recovery activities and laws or regulations designed to protect the environment, according to the association.

AAPG says a "war-effort" program is necessary to develop significant production from alternative energy sources by 1990.

Coal is considered the most obvious fossil fuel alternative to the nation's traditional dependence on oil and natural gas.

"In addition to the direct combustion of coal, there is need for synthetic gasoline to replace declining domestic oil production. A national objective should be the production of synthetic gas and liquids (synthetic fuels) from coal of at least the equivalent of one million barrels of oil per day by 1990," AAPG says.

THE EXPLOITATION of oil shale should be conducted by using conventional mining techniques as well as in-situ methods, AAPG believes. "It will be extremely difficult and expensive to scale up a production level of one million barrels of shale oil per day within the next 20 to 25 years.

AAPG says that while the emotional climate surrounding nuclear energy has slowed the inevitable development of that important energy source in the United States, the nation—and the world—must become more dependent upon nuclear fuels to generate electricity.

Future energy needs—now served by oil and natural gas—will be met by extending existing fields, new discoveries, improved recovery, adding alternative sources and continued imports of foreign oil, according to AAPG.

Pipeline Companies Competing For Line

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Three pipeline companies are staging a winner-take-all contest for the right to build a west-to-east crude oil pipeline to serve U.S. Upper Midwest refineries.

A fourth company has given up the struggle. And one of the three remaining companies faces a handicap because its alternate pipeline route was proposed after the government-set deadline, according to a report by the Oil and Gas Journal.

President Carter will decide the outcome of the surviving proposals.

He could name a single winner or decide to select two—or even all three—as preliminary winners.

This could mean that the company able to come up with the best plan for financing its project would prevail, the magazine says.

Or Carter could order a delay until additional studies are made.

The three contenders are:

—Northern Tier Pipeline Co., a venture of eight companies which wants to build a marine tanker terminal at Port Angeles, Wash., and lay 1,491 miles of line to a Clearbrook, Minn., pipeline connection. Initial capacity: 709,000 barrels a day, with expansion to 933,000 barrels a day. Cost: $1.23 billion.

—Northwest Energy Co., in concert with Foothills Oil Pipe Line Ltd. for the Canadian portion, asking to build a 1,508-mile all-land route from a trans-Alaska oil pipeline connection at Delta Junction, Alaska, to an Edmonton, Alta., pipeline connection, paralleling the proposed Alaska Highway gas pipeline for all but the final miles. The all-land route was substituted in August for a project calling for a marine terminal at Skagway, Alaska. Initial capacity: 500,000 barrels a day, with expansion to 750,000 barrels a day. Cost: $1.56 billion.

—Trans Mountain Oil Pipeline Corp., a publicly owned company with 38 percent of the stock held by five major oil companies, which wants to build a marine tanker terminal at Low Point, Wash., and lay an 823-mile line to an Edmonton connection. More than 100 miles of the line already is in place. Initial capacity: 500,000 barrels a day, with expansion to 630,000 barrels a day. Cost: $525 million.

Engineers Set Thursday Meet

The South Plains Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, AIME, has scheduled a dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at the Gridiron Restaurant.

Charles L. Bare of Conoco Oil Co., Houston, will speak to the group on the topic, "Reserve Recognition Accounting —The Engineer's View."

Bare, former president of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, said in an abstract of his talk, that as a result of recent actions by the Security Exchange Commission, publicly held oil and gas companies are required to calculate and disclose the volumes and present values of proved hydrocarbon reserves.

"This requirement has the potential of creating a major impact in demand for petroleum engineering manpower both for the estimation of the reserves volumes and values, and also for the auditing of resulting information to be included in financial reports," he said.

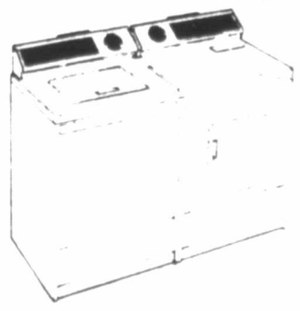

Bare will describe the potential impact of those rulings on the engineering profession.

The South Plains Section will also present scholarships to six Texas Tech University students during the program. This year's recipients include: William J. Kastler, Bruce A. Oney, Robert E. Vinson Jr., Felix Acree, James A. Davidson and Gary M. Dupriest. Each will receive a $500 scholarship.

Southwestern Public Service will host the meeting.

Mayor Jane Byrne Pursues Dream For Chicago

By DAVID SMOTHERS

CHICAGO (UPI) — For a self-professed true blue Chicago Democrat, Jane Byrne is doing the unthinkable — tearing up the roots Richard J. Daley planted.

Daley was mayor of Chicago for 20 years. Jane Burke McMullen Byrne has been mayor of Chicago for about six months. She was Daley's pupil and protege in government. She reveres his memory.

Yet much of what she has done since Daley's death in 1976 is kick the slats out of his Chicago Democratic machine, evict an incumbent mayor, and institute what sometimes seems a continual political earthquake in the city.

She is proud of it. It will keep up, she said in an interview, until all the roots are up.

"The roots of this thing grow like a tree," she said. "To bring about the total change that I envision the people want, you've got to take every root and that's where we are right now.

"I don't think this city is going to breathe until all those roots are gone. It's correct (they are Daley's roots). He isn't here, however, to control the roots."

Mrs. Byrne stunned the ward bosses of Chicago in February when she overwhelmed Mayor Michael A. Bilandic in the pivotal Democratic primary.

As Bilandic's commissioner of consumer sales, she already had broken the code of Chicago Democratic politics. She talked. When she thought Bilandic, Daley's heir, had "greased" a taxi fare increase, she said so.

Bilandic, understandably, fired her. Jane Byrne said she would fire him. She was not given a sliver of a chance in her lonely campaign until a succession of snow storms, followed by an agonizing freeze, tortured Chicago last winter.

Bilandic seemed unable to cope with, or even to comprehend, what Chicagoans were going through.

Mrs. Byrne, regarded a few months earlier as a bit of an Irish shrew taking pot shots at a popular mayor, was suddenly "our Janey."

She sits now, all 5-feet-4 and 100 pounds of her, in a beige dress and purple sash behind Daley's desk on the fifth floor of City Hall and calls the shots in Chicago.

She talks a mixture of gut politics and of shooting for the moon on Chicago's behalf.

"I think the city of Chicago is on the brink of (going) all the way up or we won't make it," she said. "I want to take the position that we'll pull it all the way up.

"I don't want people to think in the future that Chicago is that midwestern town. I don't want it to be just Chicago a convention center — all the trite things its reputation is based on. Those are all old.

"It's got to take its place in the world markets. It's got to expand. It's got to be as people think of Paris."

In pursuit of this towering dream, Mrs. Byrne has:

—Fired one police superintendent, appointed another, and then replaced him with a veteran homicide cop, Joseph Di Leonardi, who proceeded with a teeth-rattling shakeup of the department's top echelon.

—Demanded the entire school board resign.

—Invited the Chicago Park District, a pasture of purest patronage, to turn over its power to her.

—Taken on some of the most powerful and savvy aldermen in the City Council in a street corner brawl for dominance and gained the edge.

—Made peace with the Democratic machine, huddled with Republican Gov. James R. Thompson in plotting to get the money to keep Chicago mass transit in shape, pressed a massive revitalization program for Chicago's Loop, begun vital expansion of the international terminal at O'Hare Airport, and presided over a whangbang weeklong party for hundreds of thousands on Navy Pier called Chicagofest.

—Also: Been accused of shooting from the hip and the lip; of blatant favoritism in her appointments and vindictiveness in her dismissals; of governing more by press release than by policy; of undermining the coalition of independents, disillusioned Democrats and blacks which elected her.

"It's not tougher than I thought it would be," she said of her job. "It's easier. I think it's because the people have been so tremendous.

"I'm out in the neighborhoods all the time... and they don't call me mayor. They call me Janey. They yell, 'Janey, how are you?'"

"I knew the battle that would ensue once I got in. The politicians — I knew I had the support of some of them but not all of them. They lost. Nobody likes to lose.

"I figured 'give them time to make their move.' I waited to see how far they would act up and then they pushed (over an investigation of a hijacking at O'Hare). We won on the vote. We killed it on the (council) floor.

"So that was one turning point. I also knew that the business community didn't know where I came from or if they could get along with me."

So she met with the city's business leaders and they told her they wanted:

—A new international airline terminal at O'Hare. "We've done it."

—Settlement of a suit that has held up all Chicago Housing Authority building in the Austin area for a decade. "We've settled it."

—The North Loop development. "We were able to obtain a $50 million credit line from the Continental Bank to go ahead with it."

Rock-It

By Doug Pullen

Perhaps the simplest way of pinpointing whatever it is that makes a punk rock group like The Clash tick is by listening to the group's lyrics — especially in a song like "Garageland," where singer Joe Strummer triumphantly declares, "The truth is only known by guttersnipes."

The Clash members liken themselves to the enlightened but lowly class to which the above quote refers. The words are those of singer Joe Strummer, a subdued character who tends to avoid the limelight despite his integral role within the band. As lead singer, rhythm guitarist, co-songwriter and co-founder, Strummer has a great deal of influence on the band's direction.

"Garageland" appears on the group's first English but second American album "The Clash." The group is about to conclude a six-week American tour in support of the album, which was released in England in 1977 but deemed too risky by American officials at Epic Records. Epic released the group's brilliant second album, "Give 'Em Enough Rope," in 1978.

Part of The Clash's tour has been performed with Lubbock's Joe Ely Band on the bill. The two groups met while Ely was on tour in England last year. Friendship and idealistic similarities arose, leading to the unusual pairing of Ely's unique country-blues-rock combination and The Clash's intelligent punk sound. Ely performed "Fingernails" on stage with The Clash in Monterey, Calif. He then accompanied the band during a string of Texas dates on the current tour.

THE CLASH performing on stage at Rox

"They were a little hesitant," Ely said after the Lubbock performance Oct. 7 at Rox, which drew surprisingly good attendance figures (close to 450) and crowd response.

Ely preceded Lubbock's first taste of punk rock with a quick set comprised of more than 10 songs, all of which sounded a little rushed. Ely's show wasn't as inspired as his summer Rox gigs with Fort Worth blues harpist Delbert McClinton. But his set was lively nonetheless, with modified arrangements of Ely standards and drummer Robert Marquan's progress in adjusting to his new role as Ely's percussionist.

Ely's appearance was highlighted more by individual performances than the overall material included. Lloyd Maines was consistent as usual. But the quiet steel guitarist didn't musically dominate this set as he did during the Ely-McClinton shows. Jesse Taylor continues to play guitar with a passion and agility less familiar in his work a couple years ago. Interesting is Ely's increased confidence at lead guitar, a position he assumes comfortably, though sparingly.

The evening belonged to the London (rather than Lubbock) boys, though, as The Clash rammed through a one hour set of almost 20 songs. The show was pulsed by Strummer's coarse, indistinguishable, desparate vocals and the powerful combination of Mick Jones' guitar work with Nicky Headon's punctual drumming.

The short, choppy hair styling typical of English punks a couple of years ago seems to have given way to a more nostalgic look. Greased hair combed in 1950s ducktail style abound. Even drummer Headon's two children (not yet 10 years old) greased their hair.

The Clash flirted with a crowd anticipation built upon curiosity and lack of exposure to the punk culture. American attempts to copy the punk look or thinking usually fall short in their insincerity. But English punk is very much a social movement, typical of young, poor English kids who frequently feel they have nowhere to go. Some of them, of course, sing about it.

Mick Jones opened the set by plucking a few melodious, light notes from his Les Paul guitar. The introduction was deliberate though, as the band worked immediately into a less melodic frenzy. Guitarist-singer Strummer was irrepressible, though his reserved personality led him to abandon the spotlight, often singing with his back to the crowd or walking behind bassist Paul Simonon while concentrating on his guitar work.

The controversial, sometimes violent themes of The Clash's socially-minded music are prevalent in Strummer's lyrics. Most of those lyrics, unfortunately, were quickly rendered inaudible by the persistent sore throat that bothered Strummer. His voice went out with the second song, "I'm So Bored With The U.S.A.," a song critical of American cultural indulgence. Other songs included in the show were "English Civil War," which capitalizes sardonically upon the "When Johnny Comes Marching Home" motif to express the group's fearful disgust of the English social structure.

Many of The Clash's song take similar jabs, songs like "Police and Thieves," "Stay Free" and "Julie's With The Drug Squad."

The show ended with a rousing encore of Ely's "Fingernails" and The Clash's version of Sonny Curtis' "I Fought The Law." The encore was highlighted by the appearance of Ely and Jesse Taylor on electric guitars, and accordionist Ponty Bone, also of Ely's band. This was the single most important moment of the evening, hearing punk renditions of country-inspired rock. The band's recent infatuation with rockabilly is not only typical of the group's musical diversity (its roots are in soul), but exemplifies the band's versatility as well.

"We're no different from Ely," a member of The Clash's 16-person entourage said after the show.

Any violence anticipated on the part of the crowd was not in evidence during the show. It was inherent in the band's music. And the successful performance did lead a couple of Clash members to smash two tables and some beer bottles in their dressing room after the show. (Two amplifiers and a speaker cabinet blew out during the show.)

The group didn't stop going after its performance, as late night partying at an after-hours club, a nocturnal visit to Buddy Holly's grave, and even more partying ensued until the band caught a morning flight out of town.

The Clash may not be alone in likening themselves to guttersnipes. Many people still think ill of the punk rock movement, despite the fact that it is the only movement within rock today which still contains the energy and politically-minded conviction of the rock music produced during the Vietnam war. The Clash represents the kind of strong political consciousness much less common in contemporary rock.

Attorneys Believe Time Right For Prepaid Legal Services

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — As far as two recent Gonzaga University Law School graduates are concerned, prepaid legal service for middle-class Americans is an idea whose time has come.

Attorney Richard Kayne and his partner, Alfred Kitching, have begun a plan to help those families who can't afford expensive lawyers, and who make too much money to qualify for free legal aid programs.

"What we're trying to do is come up with as comprehensive a plan as possible for the average person," Kayne said, noting that the prepaid legal service concept is starting to pop up all over the nation.

"There's been a federal push and by the American Bar Association to get some of these programs going," he said.

As proposed, participating families and individuals would pay an estimated $12 a month for a variety of legal services at no extra cost, including such things as wills, real estate transactions, consumer protection claims and uncontested divorces.

Should more intensive legal help be needed, such as defense of a criminal complaint, the client would then pay an additional fee.

"We're not trying to have assembly line services," Kayne said. "We're trying to cover the full gamut of legal problems."

Kayne said he and Kitching already have lined up several established law firms to participate in the program in addition to their regular caseloads, providing participants with a list of experienced attorneys from which to choose.

In the beginning, Kayne said the program will be aimed primarily at employee groups and others interested in establishing group-type plans.

"What we're going to do to get this started is set it up as a fringe benefit and offer it to employee groups," Kayne said. "It's the next fringe benefit. They've already got dental and they've got medical."

Besides providing inexpensive legal help, the two attorneys believe their program also will help people solve legal problems at an early stage before they grow into a crisis situation — the point at which most people finally decide to see an attorney.

Kayne and Kitching recently sent letters to all members of the Spokane County Bar Association to advise fellow attorneys of what they are trying to do and to invite contributions.

Social Security . . . Out West

By BILL WEST
S.S. Field Representative

What else are you getting for your Social Security tax dollar besides a retirement benefit and the widow's benefit that was covered in last week's column?

The broad catagories are: Disability benefits, survivor benefits and Medicare.

The requirements for receiving disability benefits were discussed in some depth in this column in early September, so I'll just briefly summarize them and get on to the benefits payable to those who are found to be disabled. The requirements are that you must be under age 64½, have enough work credit and have a disability that keeps you or has kept you from working for at least 12 months or is expected to result in death.

Suppose that you are a worker, age 32, with a wife and two children. In June of this year you were severely injured in a car wreck and after a few weeks your doctor tells you that you will not be able to return to any kind of work for at least 12 months.

You have worked hard and your covered yearly earnings, beginning the year you were age 22 (in 1969) through 1978 averaged $8000 per year. Beginning with your sixth full month of disability you are entitled to a monthly benefit of $530.40 per month and your wife and each child is entitled to $265.20 per month, but limited to a family maximum payment of $928.20 per month. This amounts to $11,138.40 tax free dollars per year. (Proposed legislation would limit those workers who become disabled in future years to approximately 80 percent of their average earnings).

Your wife will receive benefits until the youngest child is age 18 or married, which ever occurs first. The children would receive benefits until age 18 unless they marry before age 18. They can continue to receive benefits until age 22 if they are unmarried, full-time students in an approved school.

There are many kinds of approved schools, such as most colleges, junior colleges and universities, as well as many vocational schools, nursing schools and beauty and barber schools.

In addition to the cash benefits, you would become entitled to Medicare if your disability lasts 25 months. However, neither your wife nor your children would be covered by Medicare.

If you have any questions concerning the above or any Social Security matter, call the Social Security office listed in your telephone book.

City Permits Top $1.8 Million

The Lubbock Building Inspection Department has issued permits totaling $1,865,600 for future construction activity here.

Commercial projects accounted for $255,000 of the total, and residential development programs made up the balance of $1,610,600.

Lee Lewis Construction Co. received the largest permit, one for $240,000 for the construction of an activities center at the Lubbock State School, 3401 North University. The facility will contain 6,006 square feet of floor space.

In the residential category, Sam Reyes Construction plans to build two quadraplex units at 2301 76th St. and 7409 Waco Ave. Costs of the facilities is expected to be $120,000 each.

Reyes also received permits to build single-family homes at 4416 89th St., for $105,000, and at 5402 91st St., $59,000.

Stan Angelley has scheduled two duplexes at 7502 and 7504 Ave. W. Costs are expected to be $73,000 each.

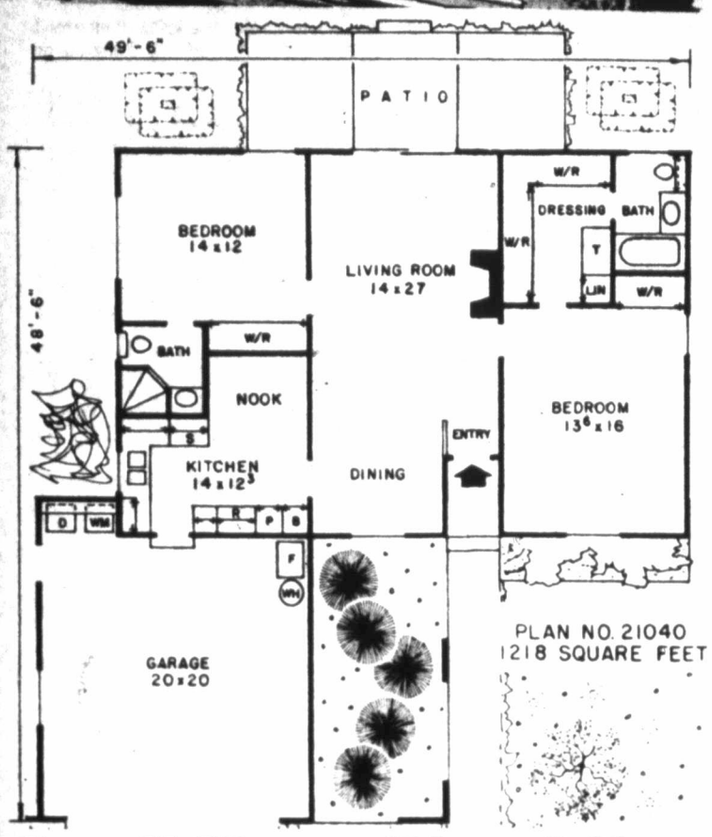

C&G Construction has scheduled five single-family homes in the 2100-blocks of 75th, 77th and 78th streets. Estimated costs range from $44,000 to $44,500.

Three homes have been scheduled by Harold Long in the 5200-block of 89th Street at costs varying from $50,000 to $56,000.

Ken Flagg will build homes at the following locations: 5229 93rd St., $52,000; 5208 90th St., $52,000; and 2101 62nd St., $55,000.

Burl Kizer has scheduled houses at 6407 and 6405 Elmwood at costs of $58,000 and $55,000, respectively.

Other single-family homes, with estimated costs and contractors, include: 5703 62nd St., $74,000, Jim Hatchett; 3712 97th St., $60,000, John Givens; 7707 Ave. W, $46,000, Stinsons Enterprises; 7705 Ave. V, $44,000, Sunrise Builders; 4908 59th St., $39,000, Day & Co.

Small House Plan Offers Many Different Features

By HIAWATHA ESTES

What features do you want to incorporate into your new home? Comfort? Outdoor living? Spaciousness? Privacy? Lots of storage? Even though this is a rather small home, it offers all of these qualities.

The recessed entry is well protected from the elements. It is separated from the dining by a partial wall. The living room-dining extends from the front wall, twenty-seven feet to the rear wall. A wide window in the dining offers a view towards the street while sliding glass doors provide access to the patio and encourages outdoor living in this private area.

Both of the bedrooms are extra large — especially the master bedroom — for a home of this size. They both have direct access to a bath. The master bedroom has a wardrobe in the room plus additional wardrobes in the dressing area.

There is more than adequate cabinet space in the kitchen, including pantry and broom closets. Note the roomy nook space. A door opens to the garage where a washer, dryer and overhead storage are located.

Note the imaginative use of both horizontal and diagonal wood siding plus heavy wooden members around the living room window and on each side of the diagonal siding of this impressive, contemporary exterior.

Complete working drawings for plan 21040 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until February 14, 1980. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $4. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $13 value — for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, Calif., 91328.

Pioneer Corp. Expects Earnings Will Increase

NEW YORK (Special) -The president of Pioneer Corp. told a recent gathering of securities analysts in New York that the corporation's earnings per share increased during the first half of this year, and the trend is expected to continue into the third quarter.

K. B. Watson said Pioneer's earnings for the first six months of 1979 were $1.55 per share, on the recently split stock, up from $1.12 per share for the comparable period a year ago. He estimated the diversified, energy resources corporation, headquartered in Amarillo, will record third quarter, 1979, earnings ranging from $1 to $1.20 per share, compared with $0.46 in 1978.

Using the midpoint of the third quarter earnings estimate, earnings for the 12 months ended Sept. 30, 1979, would be $2.91 compared to $2 for the comparable 1978 period.

Directors of Pioneer will consider a dividend increase at the November meeting of the board, Watson said.

Watson predicted the firm's capital expenditures for 1979 will amount to $118 million. Expenditures for oil and gas exploration will be approximately $47 million this year, an increase of $11 million from 1978, he said.

The board of directors has announced the election of Charles K. Vaughan to the position of vice president, with responsibility for the distribution system of Pioneer Corp.'s utility division, Pioneer Natural Gas Co.

Vaughan has been with Pioneer for 18 years in various managerial positions in the Pioneer Natural Gas Co. distribution operations.

Chapman Gets New Associate

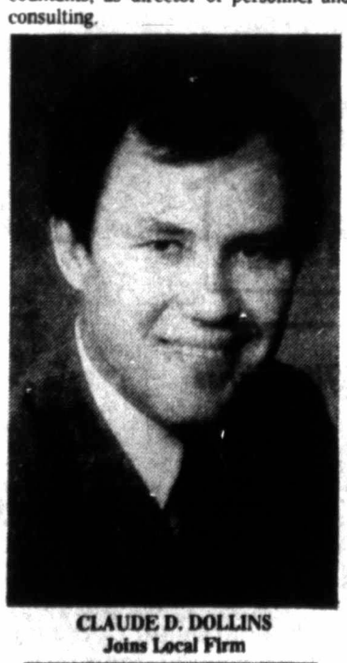

Chapman and Co., Realtors, Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service has announced the association of Elizabeth Middleton to its residential real estate staff.

She is a graduate of Monterey High School and attended Texas Tech University. Some of the organizations she is a member of, or has held offices in, are the Lubbock Symphony Guild, West Texas Ski Club Inc., The Lubbock Women's Club, and the Women of the Church at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

"We feel very fortunate in having Elizabeth Middleton join our experienced, professional real estate organization and feel she can help you achieve your real estate goals," said Harold Chapman of the firm.

State Farm Agent Gets Honor

MALVERN, Pa. (Special) -Dan K. Williams, agent for the State Farm Insurance Companies in Lubbock, was awarded the professional insurance designation, Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter—CPCU—at national conferment ceremonies recently in Boston.

The conferment was held in conjunction with the 35th Annual Meeting of the Society of CPCU.

Williams is a 1953 graduate of Texas Tech University. He began his insurance career with the State Farm Companies in Lubbock in 1950. He received the Charter Life Underwriter professional designation in 1965. Williams currently serves on the board of directors of the Lubbock Area Association of Life Underwriters and has served as president and district governor of the American Busuiness Club.

New Home's Location Important

Perhaps the most important factor in selecting a home is location, according to Leroy Land of Land & Associates of Lubbock.

"Finding the right home is important, but people shouldn't overlook other key factors such as proximity to transportation, cultural facilities, activity centers and shopping, to name the more obvious," said Land.

"People can fall in love with a home, causing them to overlook key factors associated with location that may lead to problems once they are settled in.

"We have found that people who are relocating across country are far more aware of critical location factors than those who are staying in the same general area," said Land, whose firm is a member of RELO Inter-City Relocation Service.

"Local buyers should take the same careful approach. This is particularly important for the first-time buyer who is accustomed to changing residence more frequently as a renter."

Land offered several key factors in making a home selection:

—Consider personal factors such as street traffic. Do you prefer a neighborhood with a lot of children? What about pets? What kind of neighbors will you have?

—Is it important that you are close to public transportation, major highways and/or work?

—Check out various community facilities such as proximity to schools, recreation, church, shopping facilities, library, theaters and health care facilities.

—Does the area fit you needs and preferences? Is it old or new? Are the houses well spaced or close together? Does it offer the various opportunities you want and need?

—Are you concerned about public service? Who picks up the trash, what is the cost and how frequent is collection. Check out police, fire and emergency services. Ask about public utilities and determine cost.

—Inspect the entire neighborhood. Will nearby traffic prove to be an annoyance? What is planned for vacant lots in the area? Is on-street parking permitted? How is surrounding property zoned?

Find out about possible future improvements that may result in increased taxes or special assessments such as sidewalk construction, street improvements or new sewers.

"No two buyers have the same needs or desires. Thus, people need to carefully evaluate all of the factors related to the location of a home before they agree to purchase it. It can mean the difference between a happy future or frustration," Land said.

Valley's Lubbock plant produces turbine pumps which are used to move water through irrigation systems, lift water from deep wells and supply water for large volume industrial uses.

BAKER'S STORE, a Floyd County Landmark, will house Lockney's newest business.

Oddie Probasco of Lubbock, native and former resident of Lockney, will operate "Cowboy's Closet," featuring western wear, in the building.

The Texas State Historical Commission placed a historical marker on the present building, constructed in 1914, and dedicated it to the founders of Lockney May 4, 1971.

WE'RE USED TO seeing $5 Federal Reserve Notes with Lincoln's portrait on the face (front). These notes have been issued ever since the change to small-sized paper money in 1928.

But what of Lincoln's "older brothers," the earlier $5 notes?

Lincoln is on $5 Silver Certificates, too. Small-sized ones began with the Series 1934 and lasted through Series 1953B. These notes promised to pay the bearer $5 "in silver."

A rare "older brother" note, the Silver Certificate Series 1923, also pictures Lincoln. "The United States of America" is around his portrait on a wide band that makes the portrait resemble a porthole view. (It's called the "porthole design.")

EVERY SO OFTEN you still can find a U.S. Note circulating. You'll recognize it by the red seal and the "United Staes Note" at the top of the front.

Lincoln missed some Silver Certificates, too. The Series 1886 pictures Ulysses S. Grant. This note's back shows five silver dollars, four reverses and one obverse; the obverse is dated 1886. The design is appropriate for notes that certified "that there have been deposited in the Treasury of the United States five silver dollars payable to the bearer on demand."

An excellent Sioux Indian portrait appears on the $5 Silver Certificate Series 1899. A Series 1896 note pictures a figure representing electricity enlightening the world with a raised lamp.

National Bank Notes were issued by banks, but were backed by the government. These notes were secured by bonds rather than by silver in Treasury vaults.

Some of these picture historical scenes. "The Landing of Columbus" and "Columbus Sighting Land" both appear on an Original Series $5 note.

There also were $5 National Gold Bank Notes picturing gold coins of all values from $1 to $20 on the back.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, Oct. 14, the 287th day of 1979 with 78 to follow.

The moon is moving from its last quarter toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Libra.

The 34th president of the United States — Dwight D. Eisenhower — was born Oct. 14, 1890. Actress Lillian Gish was born on this date in 1899.

On this date in history:

In 1912, former President Theodore Roosevelt was shot in Milwaukee, but refused to have the wound treated until he had finished his third-term campaign speech.

In 1944, British and Greek troops liberated Athens, ending three years of World War II occupation by German troops.

A thought for the day: Allied Supreme Commander Dwight D. Eisenhower said after victory in World War II, "Humility must always be the portion of any man who receives acclaim earned in the blood of his followers and the sacrifices of his friends."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR OCT. 14, 1979

PHYSICAL

Criticals: 2, 13, 25, 36, 48, 59, 71	Extreme reactions
Highs: 3-12, 26-35, 49-58, 72-75	Good day for athletics
Lows: 1, 14-24, 37-47, 60-70	All worn out feeling

EMOTIONAL

Criticals: 8, 22, 36, 50, 64, 78	Calculate your moves
Highs: 1-7, 23-35, 51-63, 79-85	A confident time
Lows: 9-21, 37-49, 65-77	A disconsolate time

INTELLECTUAL

Criticals: 15, 32, 48, 65, 81	Be alert to danger
Highs: 1-14, 33-47, 66-80	A perspicacious day

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Ramblin' Rhodes

By Don Rhodes

"THE THING ABOUT MUSIC is the deeper you get into it, the more you realize your limitations or lack of limitations. I can't do bluegrass music and still be commercial and have a top 40 record."

Canadian-born Colleen Peterson made that observation in Nashville recently while discussing her love for bluegrass, country and rock music.

COLLEEN PETERSON

The first time this writer ever heard of Colleen was more than a year ago when she was featured on the Capitol Records show and sang "Beginning To Feel Like Home," a song she had composed.

Her voice sounded as clear and precise as Kenny Baker's fiddle playing, and her happy personality made Dolly Parton seem like a grouch. Combine that with a superb songwriting ability and you have a winning combination.

"I usually write about things that mean something to me," Colleen related. "Beginning To Feel Like Home" came about because the town of Nashville where I was living in 1974 was sending me home. I had been there eight months and had been pounding on doors. I was told to go home, get a manager and get straight in my head. So I went back to Toronto and stayed there a year-and-a-half.

Her road eventually led back to Nashville, and in 1976 she was signed to a Capitol Records contact. Two albums, which this writer would classify among the favorites in his collection, have resulted: "Colleen" (ST-11714) and "Takin My Boots Off" (ST-11835).

THE SECOND ALBUM features several "goldie-oldies" including "Run To Her" (formerly a Bobby Vee hit), "I Go To Pieces" (formerly a Peter and Gordon hit) and "Cupid" (a Sam Cooke hit). One of the finest cuts on the album, however, is a song composed by Colleen called "One Horse Town."

Her background includes many kinds of music. She was in a Toronto production of "Hair" in 1969 and 1970, and she also sang with a rock band that included members from the bands 1910 Fruitgum Company and The Ohio Express.

She grew to love bluegrass music after falling in love with Michael Coleman, bass player for Doc Watson, and moving to Deep Gap, N.C., to be with him.

"I like the harmonies in bluegrass music. Bluegrass singers and musicians have to do everything just right for it to work proper. I have a lot of respect for bluegrass music," she added.

Likewise, it is a safe bet bluegrass music fans, as well as fans of almost any other kind of music, would have a lot of respect for Colleen Peterson if they ever listened to her recordings.

INFORMATION NEEDED: It would be a big help if readers who go to bluegrass festivals would send a postcard or letter letting me know which festivals they enjoy the most and why in order to pass that information on to others and to keep you informed of them this year.

QUOTED AND NOTED: In referring to her sister's bust size, Stella Parton told a reporter for the Atlanta Constitution, "I make jokes about it myself, but I have to because everybody wants to know what happened to me. But if I wasn't Doll's sister, they'd never think anything about it, because I'm no different from Crystal Gayle or Barbara Mandrell. I'm as big as they are, but I'm expected to have grapefruits because I'm a Parton."

ALSO BEING QUOTED: Kenny Rogers' duet partner, Dottie West, told an Associated Press reporter she was proud of singing the 1974 campaign jingle for Tennessee's infamous ex-governor, Ray Blanton, who has become famous also as the joke of the song, "Pardon Me, Ray." Blanton granted executive clemency to 52 criminals in the final days of his administration.

When asked if she had any regrets singing the jingle that helped get Blanton elected, Dottie was quoted as replying, "No, I was paid well."

Wood Power Can Save Energy

By CRAIG WEBB
United Press International

A century ago the United States counted on wood for much of its energy. Today, beset by spiraling fuel prices, a growing number of Americans are turning back to the forest.

Wood supplies America with 2 to 2.6 percent of its heat and enegy — half as much as nuclear power — the U.S. Department of Energy says. Eventually timber could provide up to 10 percent of the nation's energy needs.

While the number of woodburning stoves for homes increases every year (2 million were sold in 1978), industries and governments also are finding benefits from woodburning.

In Burlington, Vt., the municipal electric plant converted a coal-fired boiler to wood two years ago and halved its production cost per kilowatt hour. Recently a second boiler was converted and there are plans to build a 50-megawatt wood-fired generator.

What intrigues foresters, consumers and even environmentalists is that so much heat and energy can be produced just by burning scrap — what loggers normally leave in timber stands or discard at the mills.

"I have become excited about the potential of sheer waste," said Jim Dollard, the Energy Department's acting resource manager of wood energy. "I'm talking about the use of sawdust for landfills, slabs left for burners. I've gone to logging areas where up to 60 percent of the wood is still there as a form of waste... I want to see that utilized."

Proponents add that clearing waste wood from lots will enable foresters to employ modern management techniques and replant the land with genetically engineered seedlings that are hardier and faster-growing than anything in mother nature.

Promoters of wood fuel tout several other advantages:

—Most homes and industries don't need major capital investment to start burning wood. Oil, coal or gas-fired boilers require only minor adjustments or some additional equipment.

—Twenty million homes already have fireplaces and 40 percent of all new homes are being built with them.

—Emissions from wood fires are within pollution laws.

But Dollard and others studying wood energy see some potential problems, too. Wood's greatest asse is that it's renewable, but the forestry experts fear a craze for wood fuel might result in the wholesale teardown of forests without any planting for the future.

Forestry officials also fear the use of wood for fuel will squeeze future supplies of timber that are already expected to be tight. And environmentalists worry about whether forests they want set aside as wilderness areas will become fodder for fireboxes.

Centuries ago, schoolteachers used to say, America was so densely forested a squirrel could hop from treelimb to treelimb all the way from Maine to the Mississippi River.

Today, a third of the 2.27 billion acres in the United States is still classified as forest. Even the region from Washington to Boston, America's most densely populated stretch, is half forest.

Opinions vary widely as to who all that wood will help and by how much. The majority of the experts say that, considering the government predicts no more than a 10 percent contribution ever from wood energy, only certain industries and regions of the country will reap more than minor benefits.

Northern New England is one example. Already 20 percent of the homes there burn wood as a primary heat source and another 30 percent use it as a supplement. In Burlington, Electric Department spokesman Timothy Cronin said the city's planned power plant will use a supply of nearby timber that officials predict will never run out.

"The figures are astounding on what's out there," he said.

Among industries, pulp and paper mills are the leaders. The burning of wood residues now provide 47 percent of the power for their operations.

In both instances the important thing is that the wood came from nearby. Experts say timber is a good substitute for other fuels only when it is abundantly available and can be trucked a short distance.

This means, for example, that utilities cannot economically build anything bigger than a 50-megawatt, wood-burning power plant because it costs too much to bring in wood from far away. A 50-megawatt power generator is tiny compared to the 3,600-megawatt outputs of some planned nuclear facilities, so utilities wanting to replace nuclear with wood would have to build dozens of wood-burning plants instead of one mammoth facility.

"The whole nation is going to have to go through a change of philosophy, that instead of thinking bigger is better, smaller may be the most efficient," said Jack Hornick, the U.S. Forest Service's coordinator of the wood utilization and energy application program.

Ron Bruner of the American forest Institute says the industry is split on the benefits and potential of selling wastes. The key is whetern wood energy becomes so popular people start using good wood rather than scraps, he said. The forest service predicts the public demand for pulp and paper products will double by the year 2020.

Scientists are finding ways to extract chemicals from wood that now usually come from oil.

The industry is going to have enough trouble finding wood just to meet the demand for its traditional products, Bruner said. If people start chopping down good trees for energy rather than using waste wood there could be a shortage of timber.

H.V. Decker of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation used other terms to express his fears. The average wood firm supplying fuel will be a small operator and those businessmen will be out to get wood fuel quickly, he said in a recent magazine article.

"That does not mean stumbling around in the wake of a sawlog veneer operation," he wrote. "They will be looking for heavily stocked, straight-stemmed woodlots." In other words, the sort of wood that needs to be reserved for other purposes.

Both Dollard and Hornick said they are aware of the possibilities of using something other than forest wastes. Dollard said buyers of wood fuel must be like the owners of the Burlington power plant, which takes only wood chips that came from forests where good management is practiced.

Spokesmen for environmental groups also fear the effects of an uncontrolled move to wood energy.

"We're concerned that energy development not interfere with some stands that have been reserved for greater value," said John Hooper of the Wilderness Society. He added that so long as wastes are used and good management practiced, wood energy is a good thing.

At the Sierra Club, Associate Director John McComb said he wants to make sure timber cutting won't exceed the amount that can reasonably be expected to grow back within a given period. In 1976 the U.S. grew about 50 percent more than the 14.4 billion cubic feet of wood it cut, but demand is skyrocketing.

"My sense is that trees for energy are probably not a viable thing," he said. "If I were to define it as to how much it could decrease our imports of oil, it would not be important."

Tom Barlow of the Natural Resources Defense Council predicted the demand for wood fuel would force loggers to look for more stands of timber to cut and thin. That traditionally means they will look to the national forests rather than to the private landowner.

Even today the forest industry doesn't provide anywhere near all the nation's commercial timber from its own land. Two years ago, for example, the 14 percent of America's commercial forest land that it owns produced 37 percent of the softwood timber cut.

Since World War II the government, owner of 20 percent of the commercial forest land, has made up for much of the difference by selling timber from its national forests.

Barlow said the government's wood-pricing policies let loggers buy timber for a cheaper price from the forest service than they could from private landowners. He said this should be changed as demand for wood fuel grows.

"The forest service is going to have to reform its own selling strategy if the forest industry is to be pushed into courting the private salesman more aggressively," he said.

Hornick denied the claim on pricing. But he did agree with the environmentalist that the government must work hard to promote forestry among the small-lot owners.

Those owners, possessors of 58 percent of the United States' commercial forest lands, are viewed by many as the key to whether wood energy helps America's forests or endangers them.

The small-lot owners also are the inheritors of America's historically ambivalent attitude toward trees.

Since the first settlers arrived our woods have been a source of both fear and beauty. The Pilgrims were awed by the size of the forests in the New World, but Puritan leader William Bradford called them "a hideous and desolate wilderness." To them and to other settlers, "taming the wilderness" meant cutting trees.

On the other hand, poets have written volumes on the beauties of trees and the woods. Many people came to see them as a direct gift of God, and every year newspapers feature stories on people fighting to keep a favorite elm or maple from being felled.

It's no coincidence that both Johnny Appleseed, the grower, and Paul Bunyan, the cutter, are folk heroes.

Into this tradition comes the resurgence of trees for energy. Forest experts say private lot owners need to become more aware of tree farming and other management techniques, but whether they want to be is another matter.

"The private landowner, the majority of them aren't interested in harvesting trees," Bruner said. "They want them because they are there."

He said the problem is that the average person can't imagine "farming" trees because it takes 25 to 50 years for a crop to come in. People can't afford to put out seed money when they won't live long enough to reap the benefits, he said.

The federal government spent $869,000 during the past fiscal year to help private owners meet the cost of preparing their stands and seeding them, but forestry experts say the government needs to increase that support.

Meanwhile, the forest industry is pushing to change several laws so that tree farmers would get the same kind of benefits and insurance protection other farmers receive.

As for the wood user, government officials said information programs are needed to keep people from improperly sett ng up wood stoves and causing fire hazards in their houses.

Dollard said those who do switch over to wood fuel usually have few regrets.

"They get the feeling that they beat the system," he said. "They didn't have to pay the power companies... They just brag about a $30 (heating) bill in the middle of winter."

That feeling of beating the system is what wood energy can do for some. But it will benefit only certain groups — and only if they don't burn themselves out of a good thing.

Sears Recalls Arc Welders

Emerson Electric Co. and Sears, Roebuck and Co. have asked consumers to return 13,000 arc welders sold by Sears between June, 1978, and July, 1979.

They said electrical insulation on some of the welders may be damaged, exposing the user to possible shock. No injuries have been reported.

The arc welders being sought were sold through Sears catalog and retail stores. Two models are involved — a 50-amp unit, model number 113.201420, which sold for approximately $60 and a 20 to 70-amp unit, model number 113.201430, which sold for approximately $100. Both arc welders bear the Sears Craftsman Home-n-Shop name.

Owners are asked to contact their nearest Sears store for replacement or refund.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Guess Who Came To Berate

THE UNITED STATES' relationship with Fidel Castro's Cuba in many ways is a reflection of the nation's overall foreign policy throughout much of the world for the past two decades.

That it has been somewhat less than successful is the understatement of the year. In brief, under several administrations, it might be summed up as indefinite, unrealistic and costly, in manpower, material, money and prestige.

What has happened vis-a-vis Communist Cuba—and its apologist-front man for Moscow—and the U.S. in some ways is a mirror of our relations with numerous other so-called emerging nations of the world. On balance, the record has been a sorry one.

IT MAY BE recalled that when Castro's rag-tag army toppled Fulgencio Batista's corrupt regime Jan. 1, 1959, the event was hailed as one of progress for "the people" of Cuba and a step toward "liberation" of an oppressed nation.

But, as has been the case in innumerable such "liberated" nations—from Vietnam to Angola, Ethiopia and Iran, to name only a few—the ruling clique which took over has been as oppressive as the one it replaced, and in several instances more so.

As a result, we have the spectacle of millions of persons from Southeast Asia to Africa living under virtual military dictatorships, their lives and their nations in disarray. To suggest that their lot has materially improved with a change of masters would be the height of idiocy.

WHEN CASTRO and his guerrillas first stormed out of the hills long before that memorable climax to his crusade, the idea of such "liberation" movements was still in its infancy.

And although the war in Indonesia had been raging almost from the end of World War II, the movement was to gain ground, and respectability even among high-ranking U.S. officials. The end result has been the end of colonial rule the world over, which may prove to be more costly than many realize, and the rise of the so-called Third World with its own brand of progress.

When "the revolution" finally succeeded and Castro marched into Havana to stay, many western officals, and the media, were quick with their praise.

But, no one reckoned on the hold Marxism had, or would gain, on the unpredictable Castro. And despite the fact that several administrations, including the present one, have made repeated overtures to improve relations with Cuba, no real progress in that direction has taken place

On the contrary, Castro—with massive Russian military and financial aid—has turned his nation into a Soviet armed base 90 miles away, and has helped his benefactors export Marxist tyranny to sweeping areas of the Third World, as well as neighboring nations in this hemisphere.

IT WAS 19 years ago that Fidel Castro last set foot on U.S. soil. That time, it was in concert with none other than Nikita Khrushchev in a UN sideshow that was a hint of things to come.

Now, the man who has enslaved his people and drained the blood from Cuba's youth by selling their souls and services to Moscow's mad men, is back in the United States. And again, the UN was his forum.

Again, at considerable expense to the taxpayers of America, we are privy to having a "guest" on our shores berate us and hold us up to ridicule.

Under the UN "rules of the game," this is his privilege. But, his harangue should not go unanswered.

AS WE WITNESS what is happening in the United Nations, in Cuba, in Southeast Asia, in Africa and Iran today, perhaps it is time we took a hard look at what is happening in this country.

It is far past time that we start demanding of our elected leaders, and those they appoint from the UN to the State Department, that they put America and its interests first, that we no longer "get in bed" with causes and leaders whose basic goals are inimical to those which are the cornerstone of this nation and for which we have paid such a high price to defend. We no longer should opt for the easy way out just because of racial overtones which in fact are more political than humane. On that point, it might be noted that almost as many millions of so-called minority races are still in bondage as there were before the so-called liberation movements gained credibility.

If Castro's presence does nothing else, perhaps it will remind us of "what has gone wrong" with U.S. foreign policy and what we need to do to right things before it is too late.

ART BUCHWALD:

SALT II Held Hostage By Capitol Hill Killers

WASHINGTON—"Hello, Mr. President, listen carefully. I'm only going to say this once. We're holding SALT II hostage up on the Hill and we're going to kill it unless you follow our instructions."

"Don't hurt it. SALT is all I've got. If anything happens to it I don't know what I'll do."

"Well, if you ever want to see it again you better meet our demands."

"What are they?"

"We want the Soviet troops out of Cuba."

"It's not in my power to do that. Won't you take a dam or a new Air Force base instead?"

"Don't mess with us, Mr. President. We mean business. You're to go on television and tell the Soviets that unless they get the troops out by the end of the month they'll never see SALT again."

"I CAN talk to them, but suppose they don't buy it?"

"That's your problem, not ours. Also, we want you to increase the defense budget by five percent."

"But that will only add to the deficit and will destroy my attempts to control inflation."

"Hold it a moment. We're going to put SALT II on the phone."

"SALT—SALT, are you all right?"

"AAAggghhhhhhhhhhhhhhh!"

"All right, Mr. President. Are you convinced we're not kidding around?"

"What do you want?"

"We want a $30 billion MX system, a $2 billion nuclear carrier, a large fleet of $100 million B-1 bombers, new $10 million tanks, and 3,000 million-dollar cruise missiles."

"I DON'T have the money."

"You can find it, Mr. President. What's money compared to a SALT treaty?"

"I'll see what I can do. How much time do I have?"

"Not much. And if you reveal any of this conversation to the public it's bye-bye treaty."

"Have you hurt it already?"

"You might not recognize it by the time we get finished with it. I'm having a tough time keeping my people from roughing it up right now."

"Tell them not to touch it. I'll do anything to save it. But how can I be sure you're really holding SALT as hostage?"

"YOU DIDN'T have to do that."

"Don't tell us what we can do or cannot do, Mr. President. Just be grateful we haven't buried it already."

"I'll get the money. When will you contact me?"

"As soon as you get the troops out of Cuba, and find the money for the new weapons, plant a classified advertisement in the Evans-Novak column. When it appears we'll contact you and let you know where you can pick up the treaty."

"Let me speak to SALT again."

"Hold on."

"SALT, this is Jimmy. I'll get you out of there if it costs me everything in the budget. Can you hang on just a little longer until I talk to the Russians again? SALT, are you there?"

"AAAgggghhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh!"

Men and women who strive for power want it for either of two reasons—for gain or for its own sake. We must beware of the power-seeker who doesn't care about the land, or money or rings on the finger. He may wish to hook a ring in our nose.

Letters to the Editor

Former Resident Of Cuba Paints Grim Island Scene

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As a Cuban, who emigrated to this country almost 29 years ago, as an American Citizen since 1957, and as a member of one of the very best communities in the world, this city of Lubbock, I would like to comment on the current situation of combat Soviet troops in Cuba.

First, the Soviet Union is not giving all of these arms and military assistance to Cuba for "free." For this, the Cuban people have not only lost their freedom and dignity, but the sugar crops as well as many other crops: fruits, vegetables, fish, etc., are taken to Russia and other satellite countries every year.

The Cuban people hardly have the elements of basic staple food to put on their tables.

Gone is the coffee; the sugar is rationed; meat, when available, is distributed at less than a pound per person per month; milk is an item of pure luxury, and given, under ration, to children under six and adults over 65.

The life of the Cuban housewife is a constant standing in line. There are no clothes, no shoes, and the houses are falling because construction materials are only used for building of those "show places" the Castro Government lets the tourists and journalists see.

Those military forces from the Soviet Union in Cuba and the $8 million that they pour daily into the country are not only a threat to this hemisphere, they constitute the symbol of the "puppet" regime of Fidel Castro and the way he uses it to keep the Cuban people from rebelling, not only for the indignities they have to suffer, but for sending their young men to fight and be killed in distant Africa.

Maybe this "training" station or Combat Unit is not a threat to the United States.

I applaud President Carter's intentions to increase surveillance of Cuba and the location of troops and military equipment in Key West and Guantanamo, but since the American People have no knowledge of the details of the treaties of SALT II, and history has proven many times that treaties do not mean much to Russia, I hope that our representatives in Washington will take into account whatever is going on in Cuba.

I deeply feel that while common sense dictates caution and the resolution of this problem through proper diplomatic channels, President Carter and Congress must realize that Castro is indeed a puppet of the Soviet Union, no matter how strongly he denies it.

Castro's intention has not changed in any way since I met and argued with him back in 1948 or 1949, and that is: to bring Communist domination to all the countries of the American Continent.

This purpose alone, and its episodic successes, is more than worth $8 million a day to Russia.

Resident Makes A Pitch For Preserving Overton South

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

We just spent a delightful week in the Ruidoso area. Knowing that we are residents of Overton South and interested in its preservation, our host took us to Lincoln, N.M.

It's a beautiful little town steeped in history. It seems the people of New Mexico recognized the importance of preserving history for their future generations. So with help from State, County, City and the average citizen, they are doing just that.

My point? The overwhelming lack of support for a very small segment of Lubbock known as Overton South. It's the oldest intact residential section we have.

The opposition is beyond our comprehension. It took 20 years to honor Buddy Holly. In 20 years Overton South won't be here to save.

We're happy to have the few sights we do have to show our visitors. But what a feather in our cap to have a viable downtown, a bustling campus, with a neatly cared for residential area nestled in between.

'Christ Voted Out Of Party' Reader Says Of Resolution

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

At the South Plains Democratic meeting, Thursday, Oct. 4, Room 107, Civic Center, Jesus Christ was voted out of the party.

The business meeting was opened with an invocation and closed, "In Christ's name, we pray, Amen."

New officers were elected and a resolution honoring Mr. Carl Looney, the secretary of our organization at the time of his death, was passed.

A person in the audience introduced a second resolution, stating that "denominational prayers" were offensive to many in the party, and wanted all reference to Christianity omitted from further prayers at future meetings.

Approximately 60 people were present at the business meeting. About 30 percent of the people voted for the resolution, 20 percent voted against it and the remainder declined to vote, therefore the resolution passed.

Apathy is going to be the downfall of our form of government as we have known it for the last 200 years. A very small number of outspoken people and bureaucrats are in control of our great country, and have no God-given guidelines to run it with.

Therefore, it is doomed, if the people do not rise up and get involved in the political framework, taking control and putting it back on the right path our forefathers intended with the guidance and help of our Lord, Jesus Christ.

Ralls Reader In Protest Over Showing Of Movie

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In regard to an article by Nancy Allen "TV Movie With Incest Subplot Draws Opposition" (A-J, Page 7-A, Oct. 7), I make the following comments:

It seems that Mr. deTournillon has issued a "dare" to me in the last two paragraphs of the article.

It seems Mr. deTournillon thinks he has me over a "Cowboy Barrel" so to speak. But I have news for him. He doesn't have anyone over a barrel.

It's true that I enjoy watching the Cowboys. It is good entertainment. But I don't have to watch them. I can, and often do, discipline myself to not do certain things if there is a good reason for not doing them.

If Mr. deTournillon thinks that people won't boycott CBS for showing certain type movies, he's wrong. Not all people will, but a few can and will.

I know that some who are denied the right to see "Flesh and Blood" will holler, and I know that if I don't want to watch it, I can turn it off and that's exactly what I plan to do.

But what will those who lack the power to discipline themselves do? They will soak up the junk and America will be the worse for it.

Why not use the opportunities you have to upbuild our people, rather than to prostitute our society by movies such as Flesh and Blood? If you have any wisdom you can make lots of money and add a dimension of honor to the people of our great land, instead of showing movies like "Flesh and Blood."

Visitor Lauds Editorial On Blacks--PLO; Suggests Probe

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As a visitor to your community, may I offer my congratulations on your excellent editorial "Blacks, PLO--Sorry Spectacle" (Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, Oct. 3, 1979)

If I remember my high school course on International Relations, isn't it a violation of the Loan Act for an individual to engage in the foreign policy of the United States?

My question to the United States Department of Justice: If this is so, why are you not looking into the activities of these individuals to determine if a violation of law has been committed?

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

A Family Affair...

(Last of two columns)

WASHINGTON—I avoid X-rated films, and I only wish they would try to avoid me. But TV is making it just a matter of time before the taste barrier is finally shattered.

In a recent NBC movie, a stripper faced the incredible charge that she was an unfit mother. You have to admire the cheap cunning it took to invoke motherhood to supply sympathy for lewdness.

Well, CBS is topping that one with a two-part drama about mother-son incest. No doubt the dramaturgists will do their best to make you feel that if you're against incest you're against motherhood.

Ah, l'amour! Now on to father-daughter love. The family that sleeps together, keeps together, right?

CBS APPARENTLY lied to a variety of concerned inquirers, promising "you wouldn't recognize the allusions to incest in the film" if you hadn't read the book it was based on.

But Newsweek reports that "anyone past puberty...will quickly decipher what's going on." The son stands "frozen at the bedroom door as Ma glides seductively inside, after reassuring him that 'It's all right... Everything's all right.'

"What's more, the message is practically spelled out in neon throughout the rest of the film. Mother and son embark on a steamy odyssey to Las Vegas, replete with cheek-to-cheek dance embraces and bed-top nuzzlings."

Thus does TV appeal at once to the 12-year-old mind and the 14-year-old libido. The pitch is defended by a network official who talks, appropriately enough, like a 16-year-old civil libertarian:

"WE FEEL that TV can deal with any sensitive subject if it does so tastefully." After all, CBS's own sensitive and tasteful censors did cut a bit of bedroom foreplay out of the final version.

A group called the National Federation for Decency is aiming its protest where it counts: to potential advertisers. The TV brotherhood is counterprotesting by waving the Constitution around.

Lee Rich (producer of The Waltons, of all things) calls the NFD's action "blackmail" and "a violation of everyone's First Amendment rights." (He evidently knows neither what blackmail means nor what the First Amendment says.)

NFD head Donald Wildmon debated Rich on Tom Snyder's Tomorrow show and made his case so cogently that even Snyder, no prude, was won over. TV, he argued, is an industry.

IT IS GEARED to profits, not morals. It responds to moral pressures only when they take the form of economic pressures. Short of state censorship, the boycott is the most effective way of making one's objections felt.

What other private means are there? Rich suggests turning off your set. But that doesn't address the problem of how to reform television as an industry—one with enormous power to change the moral tone of society.

You may as well suggest that people who don't like obscene billboards close their eyes.

The trouble with that is that the billboard is still there, redefining our attitudes toward decency, privacy, and ultimately human dignity itself. A boycott may be the least one can do.

Like most TV people, Rich wants to see the issue as one of individual consumption. You don't like, you don't look. But there is a huge difference between disliking and deploring.

VALUE CAN'T be reduced to preference. Commercial vulgarians never understand this, and don't want to.

Every time a boy hits puberty he finds himself with a new set of preferences. Values, embodied in private morality and public rules of decency, help tell him how to handle them.

But nowadays he also finds the entertainment folk waiting for him, eager to sell him a line of consumer goods called women. The show-biz people have a vested interest in denying the authority of values that interfere with profits.

The virtue of thrift, C.S. Lewis noted, has become the vice of "sales-resistance." A chaste respect for women is bad for business.

So it is natural, I suppose, that we are now proferred a TV movie implying that even Mom can be an object not of respect but of consumption.

As with other consumer items, like fine foods, the main thing is that she be enjoyed with good manners; with sensitivity and taste. Bon appetit, Son.

Q. WHO WAS the first to use spoon lurs to catch fish?

A. A Vermont boater named Julio Buel. About 165 years ago, that was. He dropped a teaspoon into a lake one afternoon and watched fish strike it all the way down. So he rigged another with a hook and pulled in quite a haul.

Q. Has there every been a U.S. president who after his presidency went on to serve in the U.S. Congress?

A. Only one—John Quincy Adams.

Signs and More Signs near Interstate Construction

Area Roads Undergoing Changes

Recovered from a dried-up money well of a couple of years ago, the Texas Highway Department is building full-speed again, with several multimillion-dollar projects now under way on the South Plains.

Chief among those are now rapidly progressing Interstate 27 links between Lubbock and Amarillo and the construction of a four-lane highway between Lubbock and Levelland.

Some secondary roads in the 17-county Lubbock district are wearing out and need to be repaired, said District Engineer George Wall, but the highway department considers Lubbock district roads generally to be in good shape.

Loop 289 frontage roads around Lubbock are mostly worn out and 14 miles, mainly in the southern portion of the loop, are being resurfaced.

A noticeable difference between Texas four-lane highways of the 1960s and this year is the grass in the medians that used to be kept neatly mowed but now grows high along many highway stretches.

• • •

Wall said a shortage of personnel has forced the department, which is known officially as the Department of Highways and Public Transportation, to begin contracting its mowing. But he said contracts "are expensive" and indicated less importance is placed on mowing now.

The department was in what its officials were calling a funding crisis a few years ago because, they said, its federal and state funding had grown insufficient even for basic road maintenance; but the Texas Legislature put into effect a new funding system directly tied to the rate of inflation and solved most of the problem.

• • •

A $25.5-million interstate section from North Loop 289 to New Deal is scheduled to be finished in September 1980, and a 9.3-mile section costing $6.9 million for grading and structures and a so-far undetermined amount for paving, lighting and signing will be completed possibly in early 1981.

The second section will run from New Deal to Abernathy.

An 8.3-mile section is under a $21.4 million "turnkey" contract to several contractors for completion by July 1981 from Abernathy to near Hale Center, and an 8-mile, $33 million-plus contract has been let to run the interstate through Hale Center.

"We're working on additional sections to the north, getting them ready to go to contract," Wall said. "We won't go all the way to Amarillo (through contracts from the Lubbock district). A portion is in the Amarillo district.

"The federal cutoff for funding interstate construction is Oct. 1, 1986, and we will have all sections under contract by then."

• • •

Also under contract by that time, he said, will be Interstate 27 construction from the north loop through Lubbock to the south loop.

"Nobody knows exactly where it's going to go now," Wall said. "We've narrowed it down to three routes — all between Avenue A and Avenue H."

• • •

A Port-to-Plains highway to be designated an "interstate connector" and run generally along U.S. 87 south to Interstate 10 near San Antonio has been approved by Congress and signed into law as part of the federal highway bill.

The Port-to-Plains Highway is separate from Interstate 27 planning, Wall said.

A 1.7-mile section of Texas 114 is being widened to four lanes from U.S. 385 to the western city limits of Levelland as part of the effort to run a four-lane highway from Lubbock through the Hockley County city.

A section from the eastern city limits to 385 has been finished for several years, and another link is being constructed for 8.9 miles and $3 million to west of Smyer.

"We are currently working on plans for a four-lane, divided section through Smyer," Wall said. "That will tie to the present four-lane, divided section built several years ago from Reese Air Force Base to Farm Road 2130 (east of Smyer)."

• • •

He said a 2.7-mile section east of Smyer is not under contract as yet.

Texas 114 is as heavily used between Lubbock and Levelland, he said, as is the divided and much finer U.S. 84 between Lubbock and Littlefield.

Loop 289 was finished about five years ago, but some of the frontage roads have been in use since 1960.

Both frontage roads are being rebuilt over a stretch of 13.904 miles from the Idalou Highway south at a cost of more than $4 million.

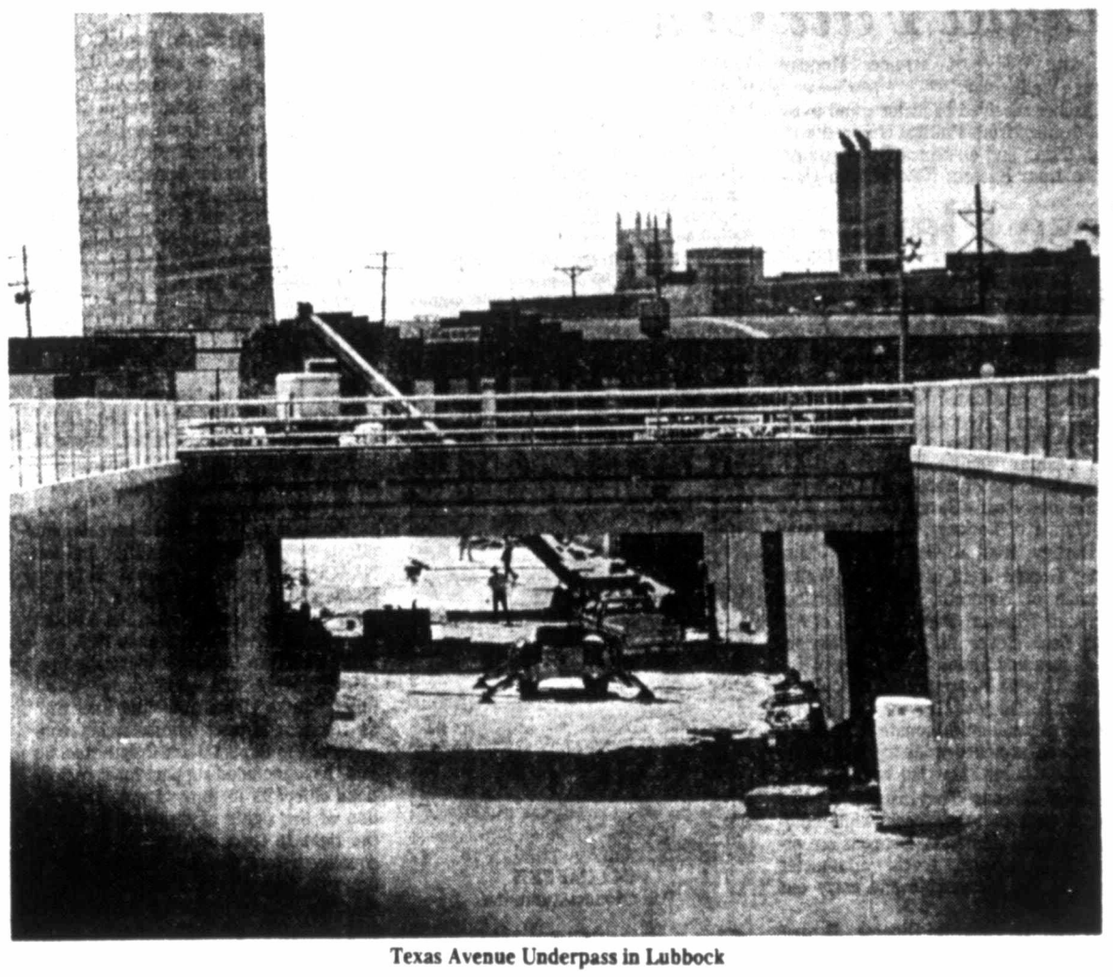

• • •

In Lubbock, a $1.9-million underpass is under construction to run Texas Avenue under the railroad at Fifth Street. The project will allow Texas Avenue to become a one-way street running south and Avenue H to become one-way north. Those streets will merge at Third Street after the project is finished in January, Wall said.

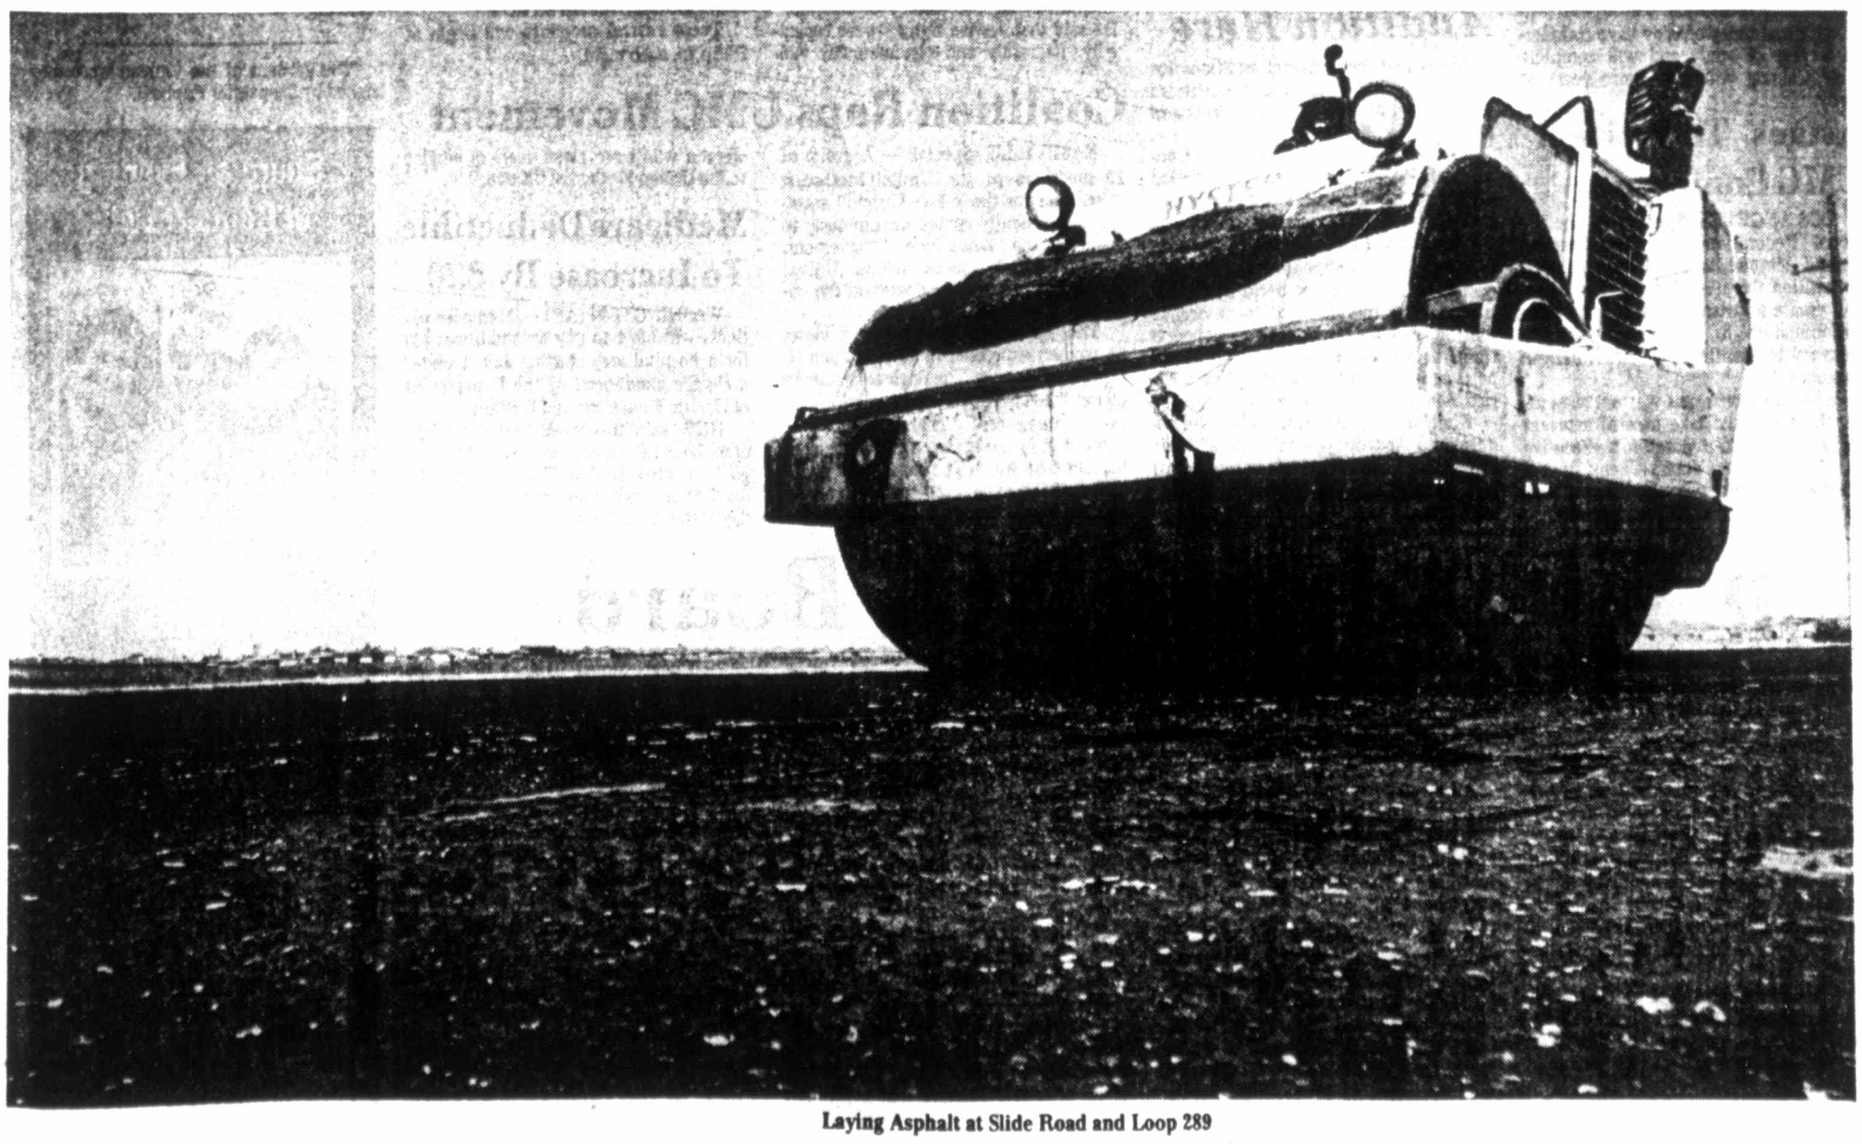

FM 1730, an extension of Slide Road, is being widened from a two-lane to a six-lane road from Loop 289 south 1.2 miles to 82nd Street.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

One day, as I was walking along Fifth Avenue in New York, a man I knew slightly pushed through a crowd, stopped me, and said, "You believe in religion as a practical technique, don't you?" When I said that I did, he continued, "You also teach, do you not, that there is a healing power in Faith?" Again, I agreed. "Well," he said, "my big problem is irritation. Sometimes I feel that I'm just going to blow up. Can you tell me how to keep from being irritated?"

Evidently this problem of irritation is a widespread one because, recently, I have been hearing about it from many sources. The head of a large department store told me the other day that never in all his years of merchandising experience had he seen so many irritated customers and irritated sales people as now. "I would be willing to close down for two days," he said, "if someone would come in and give my sales clerks a course in how to keep their tempers and curb their tongues in the presence of customers, no matter how annoying they may be."

The governor of one of our most important states once told me, "One of my big problems is to know how to conquer irritation. I always liked people until I got this job. Now they drive me to distraction."

There is a therapy, a healing technique which can be used to overcome and conquer irritation. Like many other such therapies for the emotional problems of modern living, it can be found in the pages of the Bible. In the book of Colossians, we get the secret of overcoming irritation where it says, "Let the peace of God rule in your heart." That is a great phrase and it will help you if you make it your dominating emotion, your supreme attitude, your habitual spirit. Let it rule your heart and it can control your basic self.

A person who has the peace of God ruling in his heart is always under control. He is therefore, able to take an objective and scientific attitude toward his irritation. And no one has ever learned to live effectively until he has become scientific and objective toward emotion.

Take anger, for example. How do you control anger? Simply by being scientific and objective toward anger. If you begin to get angry, your face becomes red, your voices rises, your fists clench. This is the result of adrenalin being shot suddenly into your system. Instead of allowing the voice to rise when anger begins to well up within you, deliberately force it down and control it until you are speaking quietly, almost in a whisper. You can never carry on an argument in a whisper! If your hands begin to clench, deliberately extend your fingers. You cannot continue to be angry with your fingers held out extended. Try it sometime.

I was present at a religious conference when tempers began to flare. Even at religious meetings, people are human. Those present began to get peppery and irritated. Then a man took off his coat, went over and lay down on a couch in the room.

Everybody was astonished. Anxiously we asked, "What's the matter? Are you sick?"

"No," he said, "I'm not sick. I was just getting mad and I've found that I cannot get mad lying down!"

Those of us who practice faith need not be swept by emotion and carried into anger and irritability by it. We should be able to control emotion rather than have it control us. If you have the power to control your emotions, you will not be left defeated and sick by the irritations to which all of us are prey.

Acquire such control. Pray for guidance. Seek the peace of God actively and affirmatively. If you have the peace of God ruling your heart you can master the skill of objectively examining irritation and anger and so reducing their power over you.

Worldwide Church Loses Case

WASHINGTON (Special) — The U.S. Supreme Court returned to the bench Oct. 1 to dispose of nearly 1,000 cases, including several dealing with church-state issues.

The justices unanimously declined to review a ruling by the California Supreme Court which refused to dissolve that state's receivership of Herbert W. Armstrong's Worldwide Church of God. Last January, the state, acting after several members of the denomination protested lavish spending by church leaders, took over all church records and, in effect, temporarily dissolved the denomination.

The state claims it acted under its incorporation laws, which allowed it to consider the Worldwide Church as a charitable or public trust subject to state investigation and receivership.

The Worldwide Church has argued that California's receivership provisions allow the state to claim that church property is owned by the citizens of the state, that church records are public and subject to state audit and review, that the state may compel the church to account for its income and expenditures so it may determine if church funds are being used for their stated purposes, that church officials are public trustees who may be removed and replaced by the state and that the state may reorganize the church's form of government from hierarchical to congregational.

Last March, the California Supreme Court declined to lift the receivership order, leading church attorneys to appeal to the nation's high court.

In spite of its action denying a hearing, the merits of the case were not involved. It is widely presumed that the case will ultimately come back to the justices for final disposition.

In another church-state action, the justices likewise declined to schedule oral arguments on a challenge to Ohio's refusal to recover instructional materials and equipment from parochial schools in the state in the aftermath of a Supreme Court decision outlawing such aid.

Supporters of the high court's decision had sought a mandatory injunction from Ohio courts but lost on an appeal to the state supreme court. That tribunal held that the injunction could be denied because the equipment and materials would soon be obscelescent, that public officials might entangle the state with church leaders in the process of recovery, and that public schools could not benefit from the recovery because they already have such equipment.

Ohio has been one of the key battlegrounds in recent years in the constitutional fight over how much states may aid parochial schools. The Supreme Court has ruled that transportation, meals, and health care are among a limited number of ways states may provide aid without violating the no-establishment clause of the First Amendment.

In another action dealing with private schools in Ohio, the justices unanimously refused to review a lower court ruling that the state may not control student disciplinary procedures in nonpublic schools.

The Fourteenth Amendment's guarantee of the due process of law does not confer on parochial school students the right to challenge disciplinary actions, the court held.

The high court also ruled out a hearing for a Colorado man who was denied a driver's license because he refused to be photographed for religious reasons. David Johnson and other members of YHWHHOSHUA, a small sect, argued unsuccessfully that permitting themselves to be photographed amounts to idolatry.

The Colorado Supreme Court ruled earlier that the state's interest in making a photograph of every applicant for a driver's license is so compelling that it "overbalances" the burden of protecting the free exercise of religion.

In another religious freedom case, the court let stand a New York court's ruling that a clergyman may not refuse to answer questions put to him by a grand jury unless answering the questions would violate the priest-penitent relationship.

Without dissent or comment, the justices unanimously threw out the case brought by Roman Catholic priest Louis R. Gigante, who argued unsuccessfully that his right to keep conversations with penitent individuals confidential overrides the state's need to interrogate him about suspected criminals.

In yet another action, the justices also refused a challenge to the social security system by a minister who claimed he should be exempted from paying self-employment taxes for his conscientious or religious objection to the system.

DR. STANLEY LETCHER JR.
Will Preach In Lubbock

Letcher To Lead Fall Crusade

The crusade begins today with services at 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m. and continues with 7:30 p.m. services Monday through Wednesday.

Letcher received bachelor's and master's degrees from Phillips University in Enid, Okla., and an education specialist degree from Eastern New Mexico University. He is a candidate for the doctor of divinity degree from Artesia Christian College.

A staffed nursery will be available during all the crusade services.

Catholic Diocese Plans Installation Mass Today

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Amarillo will admit 29 men into the candidacy for the permanent diaconate today at 3 p.m. at Christ the King Church.

The mass of installation will be conducted by Bishop Eugene Marino, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of Washington, D.C., the Rt. Rev. L.T. Matthiessen and the Rev. James Gurzynski.

The men to be admitted to candidacy come from all parts of the South Plains and include eight from Lubbock.

Candidates from Lubbock are Clarke E. Cochran, Charles Greenwell, Joseph Kucauskas, David Lucero Jr., Thomas Noble, George A. Rhoads, George R. Shieldes and Gaspar Wilson.

Other candidates are Orval Ray Blunt, Terry Pavehouse, Richard D. Riley and Pete Valdez of Amarillo; Estaban Castillo, Emilio Fuentes and Vicente H. Garcia of Hereford; Antonio B. Flores and Pedro Garcia of Ralls; Jose M. Garcia of Lockney; Jerry Grossman of Hartley; Raul M. The permanent diaconate is a recently revived ordained ministry within the Catholic Church. Married men may be ordained deacons. They usually serve a church on a part-time basis while holding other full-time jobs. Deacons are ordained to preach, teach, administer many of the sacraments and carry out works of charity.

Within the Amarillo Diocese, 33 men already have been ordained deacons.

Candidacy is the first major step on the path to ordination. Those who will be admitted today already have completed a year of study and will complete their training with two more years of study.

LCC To Hold Lectureship

The "inside story of church growth" will be the theme of the 23rd Annual Lubbock Christian College Lectureship, Oct. 21-24. The featured speakers will be dealing with various principles of growth and many classes will illustrate these principles with examples of growth in the Garland Road Church of Christ in Dallas.

Other features of the LCC Lectureship which have been popular in years past will be continued.

Each morning a session dealing with difficult Bible verses will be conducted. Leaders include John Fortner, Danny Mize, Dan Hardin Loyd Hall, Terry Brown and Glen Gray.

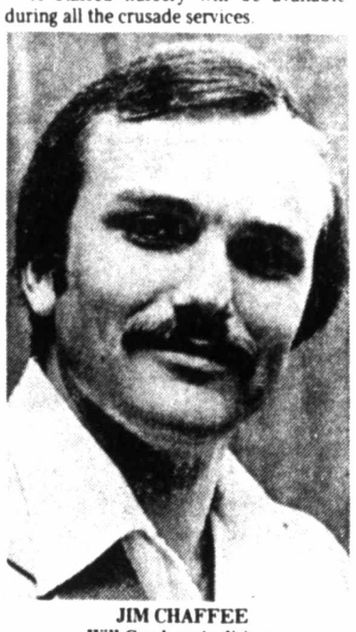

Besides the women's classes taught by the members of the Dallas church, Mrs. Paul Johnson will lead a class discussing the Equal Rights Amendment, Dr. Joyce Hardin will lead a class on "Dealing with Depression," and Betty Bailey will teach a class on "Building Up One Another."

Spanish sessions run concurrently with the English meeting. Topics to be covered in the Spanish program this year include the Christian family, motivation, youth work, personal evangelism and premarital counseling.

Asians To Petition UMC Conference

LOS ANGELES (Special) — The National Federation of Asian American United Methodists voted here recently to petition the 1980 General Conference to "create a structural unit" within the denomination to "carry out effective ministry to Pacific and Asian-American churches."

While a specific unit was not suggested, the action did take note of a recent suggestion by the federation's executive director, the Rev. Jonah Chang, that a missionary conference with its own bishop be established, at least temporarily.

JIM CHAFFEE
Will Conduct Auditions

Group Slates Audition Here

Vocal and instrumental auditions for the Continental Singers and Orchestra will be held Monday at 7 p.m. in Room EB02 at First Baptist Church.

Jim Chaffee, talent director for Continental Singers, a non-profit Christian organization with offices in Los Angeles and Great Britain, will be conducting the auditions. Persons between the ages of 16 and 23 are eligible to audition.

Continental Singers perform during the summer months, and there are 12 touring groups who give concerts throughout the U.S., Canada, in 16 European countries, the Caribbean, South Africa, South America and the Orient.

For the audition, singers will be required to sing one gospel song of their choice and instrumentalists will play two selections of varying tempos, according to Chaffee.

Baptist Committee Gets Award From American Jewish Group

WASHINGTON (Special) — The Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs received the prestigious Isaiah Award for contributions to human rights from the Washinton chapter of the American Jewish Committee at a recent luncheon.

James E. Wood Jr., executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee, received the award for the Baptist agency, which is celebrating its 40th anniversary by sponsoring a Religious Liberty Conference on Church, State and Human Rights in the nation's capital.

Rabbi Matthew Simon of Temple B'nai Israel and a member of the executive board of the Jewish Committee presented the 2-foot-high wooden sculpture of the Old Testament prophet, declaring that the Baptist agency has spoken for 40 years "on every concern that is our joint concern."

Rabbi Simon praised Baptists generally, noting that Jews and Baptists share a common heritage of exile, dissent and commitment to the principle of separation of church and state. "We have learned well from the Baptists," he said.

The Jewish leader, speaking to nearly 300 Baptists and Jews at a luncheon, paid further tribute to the Baptists for championing the cause of freedom in repressive countries and declared: "We need voices that can call the judgment of God upon men."

In his response, Wood paid tribute to the American Jewish Committee for its own human rights record, including its defense of religious liberty, aid to survivors of the holocaust, contribution to the creation of the State of Israel, efforts in having basic human rights guuarantees written into the United Nations charter, and its role in refugee relief.

Wood, who also praised recent joint efforts by the Jewish committee and the NAACP to relieve tensions between blacks and Jews, said human rights was "the primary reason" for the Baptist Joint Committee's formation in 1939.

The veteran Baptist leader called religious liberty "the cornerstone" of all other human rights and "the linchpin" of freedom. Other human rights concerns of the Baptist Joint Committee, he said, have included support for conscientious objectors in time of war; recognition of the rights of displaced persons; the right to food, shelter and clothing; equality before the law; nondiscrimination with regard to race, religion, national origin or sects; and the rights to privacy, work, education and vote.

Wood denounced the historic persecution of Jews, calling it "the saddest chapter in all the history of religion." He said that Jewish rights "were repeatedly, flagrantly and systematically violated in the name of religion. It is a tragedy which has endured for 2,000 years and has not yet ended."

He called on Baptists and Jews "to reach out to each other," saying that failure to do so "should be regarded as a denial of our common heritage and of our common affirmations of faith."

RELIGION NEWS

Detroit Solon Has Doubts On Church Independence

WASHINGTON (Special) — Although the church is a "polite captive of the state," it shows signs of breaking away from dogmas and practices which separate it from human need, a Detroit congressman told participants in a Religious Liberty Conference.

U.S. Rep. John Conyers Jr. (D-Mich.), said he has "serious doubts" that the church in the U.S. is independent. If that is true, he went on, "it follows that it is exceedingly difficult to go as far as it wants" in changing the status quo.

Conyers added, however, that he is "optimistic about the future of the church...it is beginning to show signs it will break away from the dogma and practice which are at odds with the world of 1979, the world of the 1980's and beyond," he said. "I see it finally beginning to nibble on the real questions of the day."

He admitted that he starts with the assumption that society provides democracy for only a few. "We live in a very undemocratic democracy," he said, noting that "most systems in government and the private sector are working poorly," including religious institutions.

As an extreme example of the breakdown of systems he cited prisons which, he said, "reflect our inhumanity in a way that staggers even those of us used to working with reality."

The congressman said his role is to "help alleviate the pressures in the church against progressivism so that we can deal with redistribution of resources and opportunities which is what it's all about."

Whitley To Speak At Parkway

John C. Whitley of Cleveland, Ohio, will be the keynote speaker for a series of lessons for families on "The Bible Way For You Today" at Parkway Drive Church of Christ this week.

The special meetings will begin today at 9 a.m. with worship, Bible class and a Homecoming Service.

Evening meetings start today and will be held at 7:15 p.m. through Thursday.

During the week, singing groups will present "Sermons in Song." Music will be presented by the Lubbock Christian College A Capella Choir and Meistersingers, the Lubbock Christian High School choir, and the chorus from the 22nd and Birch Street Church of Christ.

Dr. Wayne Hinds, chairman of the music department of LCC, will lead congregational singing.

Children's meetings also will be part of the week's activities.

Each evening a preaching service in Spanish will be led by Miguel Arroyo, Parkway's missionary from Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Elgin Baptist Sets Revival

Evangelist L.B. Stallings will be leading revival services at the Elgin Avenue Baptist Church, 6402 Elgin Ave., Monday through Oct. 21.

Stallings is now a full-time evangelist and lives in Fort Worth. He participated in the follow-up to the Billy Graham Crusade in New Zealand and has preached in the Phillippines at the invitation of the Foreign Mission Board.

He was graduated from Levelland High School, attended Texas Christian University and then was graduated from Southwestern Baptist Seminary.

Evangelist Joe Atkinson will be the singer for these special services.

These revival meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m. each night.

Coalition Raps UMC Movement

NASHVILLE (Special) — A group of 20 members of the United Methodist "Coalition for the Whole Gospel" meeting here recently agreed unanimously to challenge the "Good News" movement, an evangelical caucus within United Methodism, to open dialogue on the nature of the church.

The action was prompted by views on women expressed in July by John N. Oswalt of Asbury Theological Seminary at the "Good News" convocation. Coalition members characterized as "shocking in the extreme" Oswalt's contention that woman's role is "the civilization of the male" and said such an assertion was a "slap in the face to the women who have given years of service to the United Methodist Church."

Medicare Deductible To Increase By $20

WASHINGTON (AP) — Medicare patients will have to pay an additional $20 for a hospital stay starting Jan. 1 under a change announced by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW said this week that the Medicare hospital insurance deductible will go from $160 to $180. They said the deductible is about equal to the cost of one day's stay in a hospital.

Archbishop Will Address NCC Board

NEW YORK (Special) — A speech by Archbishop Oscar Romero, the El Salvadoran religious leader who has been nominated for the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, will highlight the Nov. 8-10 meeting of the National Council of Churches Governing Board.

The 266-member board, which sets policy for the nation's largest ecumenical organization, represents 32 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox church bodies. Its semi-annual meeting will be held at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City.

Rev. Romero, who has gained wide fame in Central America for his advocacy of human rights and democracy in El Salvador, will speak to the board Nov. 8. A news conference will be held the previous day at the Interchurch Center.

The major policy statement before the Governing Board is titled "The Injustice of the Criminal Justice System: A Christian Call to Responsibility."

Charging that the present system "does more to perpetuate violence and conflict than to halt them and engenders more disrespect than respect for the law," the document presents a sharp indictment of the status quo in criminal justice and supports a wide array of reforms. This will be its second reading by the Governing Board; then, if passed, it will become an official policy of the council.

A second major area of concentration will be a re-examination of both the National Council's purpose and the ecumenical commitment of its member communions.

Papers will be presented evaluating present levels of commitment and offering a theological rationale for a renewal of ecumenical commitment. In addition, a new statement of purpose for the council will be given a first reading.

All three documents will be discussed by the member communions during the next year, before a new statement of purpose is adopted by the Governing Board at its 30th anniversary meeting in November 1980.

At this year's meeting the board will also hear a report from a panel created recently to consider NCC positions on the Middle East. In addition, the Commission on Justice, Liberation and Human Fulfillment will present an evaluation of the council's record on questions of race, including its staffing, funding and program commitments.

Resolutions before the board will include calls for:

— A permanent ban on the use of toxic herbicides containing dioxin, such as Agent Orange, the defoliant sprayed widely by the U.S. in Vietnam;

— Creation of an NCC fact-finding team to investigate the results of a July spill of radioactive uranium tailings near the Navajo community of Church Rock, N.M.

— Boycott of non-union iceberg lettuce from California and Arizona by all NCC units, in support of the United Farm Workers;

— Release from prison of 11 members of the Republic of New Africa, who were jailed in Mississippi in 1971 as part of an alleged FBI campaign to destroy the RNA;

— Congressional passage of legislation guaranteeing payment of medical fees for treatment of U.S. citizens and permanent residents who were exposed to the U.S. atom bombs exploded in Hiroshima and Nagasaki;

— Donation of the Olympic village at Lake Placid, N.Y., to the Six Nations (the Mohawk, Seneca, Onondaga, Oneida, Tuscarora and Cayuga tribes) after the 1980 winter games;

— Federal, state and local efforts to investigate and bring to trial perpetrators of the recent rash of cross burnings and the renewed Ku Klux Klan activities;

— And action by the U.S. government to guarantee full self-determination and human fulfillment to the people of Micronesia, a U.S. trust territory.

Each Advance In Technology Creates Possibilities For Change In Society

CONNECTIONS
COURSES BY NEWSPAPER

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth in a series of 15 articles exploring "Connections: Technology and Change." In this article, science historian Edwin T. Layton Jr. argues that societal values determine the shape of technology. This series was written for Courses By Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. A related 10-part television series, "Connections," co-produced by the BBC and Time-Life Films, is being shown over PBS stations concurrently with this newspaper series. By EDWIN T. LAYTON JR.

Henry Ford once said that purchasers of his famous Model T could have any color they wanted — so long as it was black.

Certainly technology did not force Ford to produce automobiles in only one color. This was a case where societal values influenced technology.

Ford's "Tin Lizzy" was not merely popular; it aroused deep affection. It did this precisely because it embodied many American values. The color was in keeping with a religious and cultural heritage that valued plainness.

But the Model T also reflected American democracy. Before Ford the automobile had been the plaything of the rich; after him it became available to the masses. Putting Americans behind the wheel fulfilled values nourished on the frontier: mobility, restlessness, individualism, and a conception of personal freedom that bordered on anarchy.

Ungainly as it was, the Model T nevertheless expressed an aesthetic principle that form should follow function. Perhaps the finest expression of this principle was the Clipper ship, now often considered the most beautiful of all sailing ships. It was, however, criticized on aesthetic grounds by contemporaries. John Griffiths, who invented the Clipper, defended it by arguing that beauty consisted of "fitness for the purpose, and proportion to effect the object designed."

This functionalist aesthetic, sometimes called American "vernacular," helped to give form to a vast number of thing made in America. Here, too, societal values helped guide technology.

Societal values also account for the demise of the Model T. Ford's masterpiece admirably fitted the needs and values of a rural market. But urbanization and a growing taste for luxury doomed the Model T. In the 1920s, General Motors wrested automotive leadership from Ford by catering to the new public tastes, offering choices of color, models, and luxury features.

THOUGH TECHNOLOGY IS manifestly influenced by societal values, many people think that technology cannot be controlled.

Karl Marx was one of the first to express the idea that techology determines the course of social change. Marx argued that "the hand-mill gives you society with the feudal lord; the steam-mill gives you society with the industrial capitalist."

In this case, historical research has refuted Marx. The Doomsday census of 1086 A.D. inventoried more than 5,000 mills driven by water-power — not by hand — in England alone, at a time when the feudal lord was still very much in evidence. Conversely, we find industrial capitalists with factories driven by hand, wine, or water power before the adoption of steam.

There is no inevitable cause-and-effect relationship between technological and social change. Each advance in technology creates many new possibilities; only a few are realized by a particular society. The Amish provide an interesting example; they reject most modern technology for religious reasons.

Over the course of centuries, China and the West often made strikingly different choices concerning the social uses of technology. The printing press and paper served to entrench the Mandarin establishment in China, but stimulated radical social changes in Europe. The Chinese also invented gunpowder, but used it for firecrackers; the West used it in cannons.

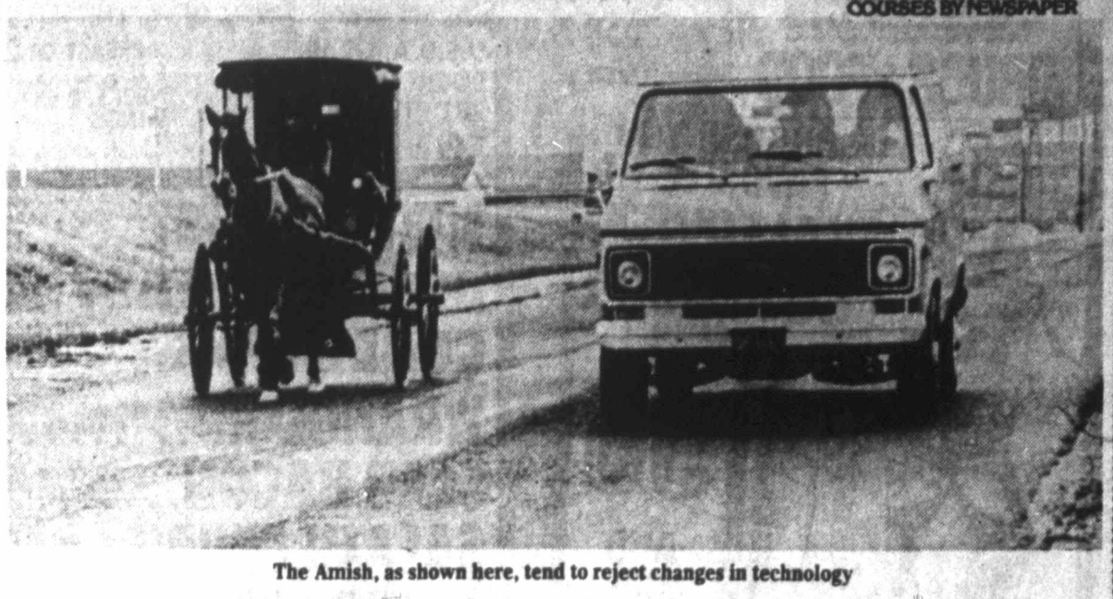

THE IDEA THAT technology is out of control may result from the way we frame our questions. A useful way to understand the interaction of technology and society is through the theory of "Social lag" developed by the American sociologist William F. Ogburn.

The interval between an innovation and society's adjustment is what Ogburn called "social lag." This theory emphasizes the disruptive effects of technological change and the need for mechanisms to protect society. It therefore helps us understand a good deal of recent social history.

But if we take the new technologies as "given," then social problems such as air pollution and urban decay appear to be imposed upon society by some mysterious force of technology. When we examine the sources of new technologies, however, this is clearly not the case.

The automobile, for example, is one of the most important causes of both air pollution and urban decay. But automobiles were not forced upon the public. Popular literature prior to the introduction of the Model T shows that Americans hoped for, and wanted, a cheap car for the masses. Americans saw the automobile as a way of reducing urban congestion by letting people move to green suburbs. It did just that, but it left the inner cities to decay.

Automobiles were expected to eliminate "horse pollution," no small matter. They did so, but they created a new, insidious form of air pollution, "smog." Thus the urban decay and air pollution produced by automobiles were not caused by some mysterious force of technology. They are by-products of doing something that the public clearly wanted to do. In this case technology is not out of control. Rather, we are paying a penalty for our own lack of foresight.

The Amish, as shown here, tend to reject changes in technology

TECHNOLOGY DOES NOT exist for its own sake. It is the means by which society achieves certain ends. Technological activities are initiated to meet social needs.

The crucial question, then, is how are social needs determined? In America the traditional answer has been market demand. But cheap cars, along with other things that society wanted, require very large, complex industrial organizations for their production. A compact car would cost about $50,000 if produced by hand.

As a result, free competition in the open market has been replaced by conscious control by a small number of industrial giants. The "invisible hand" of the free market has been replaced by the "visible hand" of managerial planning.

Despite the enormous concentration of power in the hands of a tiny elite, there has been little public quarrel with the criteria of choice. Americans grumbled about the big corporations, but until recently they appear to have approved of their products, if not all their practices.

The American automobile manufacturers, for example, had little difficulty "selling" the American consumer the idea of larger, heavier, more luxurious, and more powerful cars. They were more profitable to produce, and Americans seemed very pleased with their "gas guzzlers."

But increased weight required more efficient engines, which meant increasing the compression ratio, which in turn caused a large increase in the emission of nitrous oxides. Higher compression in automotive engines was the most important single cause of a staggering 628 percent increase in the rate of production of these harmful pollutants from 1946 to 1967.

AS OGBURN MIGHT have predicted, disruptive and threatening technological changes produced a reaction from society. The automakers' neglect of safety led Ralph Nader in 1965 to mount a crusade that broadened into a consumers' revolt. Environmentalists, following the pioneering work of Rachel Carson in 1963, had already begun their protests through such agencies as the Sierra Club.

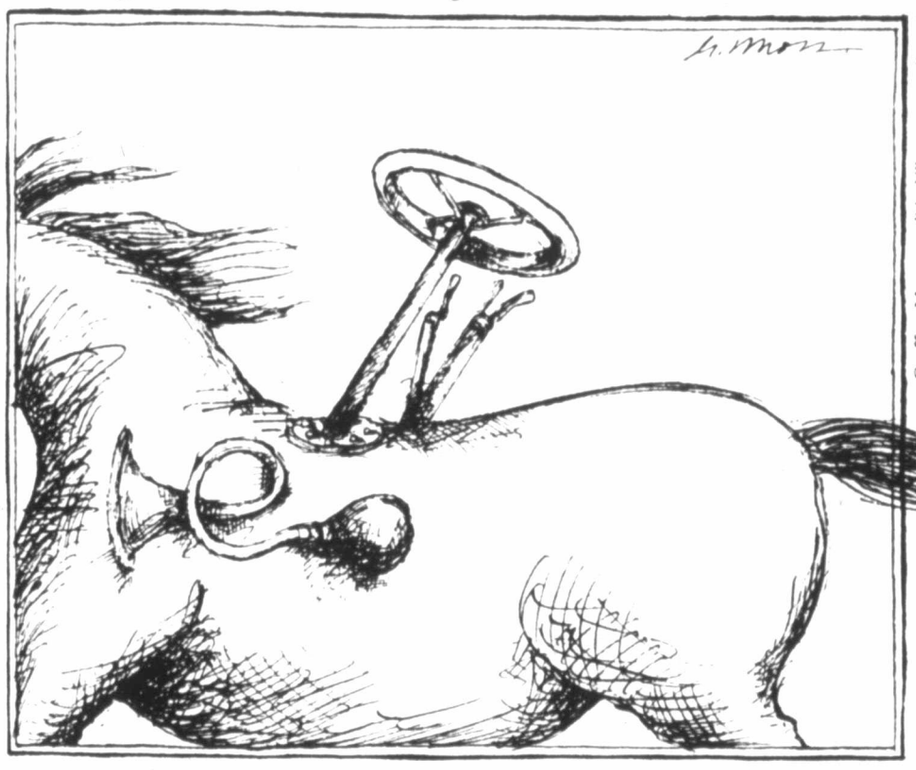

Scientists also made an important contribution, pointing to the public dangers inherent in radioactive fall-out in the 1950s. More recently, scientists have raised serious questions concerning the safety of nuclear power.

In all of these cases the force of aroused public opinion brought government action. Perhaps the clearest case is provided by the automobile: government, responding to public pressures, is attempting to impose a new set of value priorities upon manufacturers, particularly in the areas of safety, pollution, and fuel consumption.

Behind the rancorous debates over particular issues something important is taking place. We are being forced to rethink long-accepted fundamentals. Our democratic socieity is attempting to redefine its values, reorder its priorities, and reshape the mechanisms through which these values guide the course of technological development.

It is too soon to predict the outcome. But one thing is clear: societal values do influence technology.

NEXT WEEK: Population expert Kingsley Davis of the University of Southern California discusses the relaitionships among technology, population, and resources.

Many Urban Poor Now Displaced

DENVER (UPI) — The revitalization of the nation's inner-city neighborhoods by young white professionals is creating hardships by displacing the poor, predominantly made up of minority groups, and the elderly.

That is the conclusion of a number of authorities concerned with the problem. They say the back-to-the-city movement, tagged "gentrification" by social scientists, unquestionably is economically upgrading blighted neighborhoods, but it also is creating hardships for the communities' residents, who typically are the poor and minority.

"The problem is substantial," said Rep. King Trimble, a black Colorado state lawmaker. "I have mixed feelings.

"On one hand neighborhoods are being upgraded because of the movement back to the city. But on the other hand, there is a social cost because traditional residents are being displaced."

Displacement is characterized by increased rents which force out low income tenants, demolition of poorly maintained or dangerous structures, and the conversion of low or moderate rent apartments to condominiums at higher prices ill-affordable to tenants.

Dr. Jules Mondschein, a Denver University social work professor, said that in considering ways to handle the problem, "I'm going crazy trying to figure out a way to be a decent human being. People are being hurt."

A recent report by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development said gentrification was sweeping the country with renovation projects occuring in 60 percent of the major cities in the South, 53 percent in the Northeast, 43 percent in north central areas, and 25 percent in the West.

The activity was strongest in such cities as Washington, D.C., New Orleans, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and Denver.

John Michener, former executive director of human resources for the state of Maryland, describes the owners of rehabilitated housing as "urban pioneers," who are primarily young white professionals with good earning potential.

He said many are single or married with no children, and have incomes ranging from $10,000 to $30,000 annually.

Michener also told the National Neighbors' Conference here that the urban pioneers, unlike many of their parents who moved to the suburbs 20 years ago, were at ease with diversity, both racial and economic.

"We're just taking back what our parents gave away," said a deputy state attorney general, who is a resident of one of Denver's neighborhoods undergoing a face-lift. "It's as simple as that."

Caldwell said the downtown Denver area was experiencing a boom in development and as a result new jobs were being created, accompanied by a demand for conveniently located housing.

"There is a serious problem and it's going to get worse especially for the elderly and the poor," Caldwell said.

"We're going to have to provide some type of subsidized housing for those people."

Michener, however, views the gentrification process as a rare opportunity to reduce residential separation along social and economic lines.

But he admits that if uncontrolled, the back to the city movement will create middle class neighborhoods having the homogenity of suburbia.

Michener said the inner city renaissance could be linked to the energy crunch.

Ford To Shut Down San Jose Plant

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. says it will close its light truck assembly plant at San Jose, Calif., for two weeks beginning Monday to reduce inventories. It means temporary layoffs for 1,480 workers.

At the same time, Chrysler Corp. said it was recalling 100 workers to its Hamtramck, Mich., plant to increase production of compact models. Seven other Ford plants return to production next week after shutdowns.

A NEW PRESIDENT

James T. Sherwin of New York City, Executive Vice-President of GAF Corporation and an International Chess Master, has been elected President of the American Chess Foundation, the leading philanthropic organization in U.S. chess.

The American Chess Foundation contributes to the development of American chess through grants to support such efforts as lessons for promising junior players, travel expenses for Americans representing this country in international events, and programs to make the public more aware of the game.

A VISIT TO FORT WAYNE

On a recent visit to Fort Wayne, it seemed like old times again! One night I lectured, answered questions and demonstrated the Knight's Tour at the International Harvester Chess Club. The next evening I played simultaneous blindfold.

Here is a blindfold game against the club champion. In this one, you will see Black make an incredible blunder—a hard one to explain—and it ended matters fast.

Scanners Complex, Easy To Operate

By MIKE WENDLAND
KBZRH KKE 4451

Thanks to rapidly developing microprocessor technology, scanners today typically use a computer-like keyboard that allows the operator to scan certain programmed frequencies, lock out unwanted signals, search specific banks of frequencies and insert specified "priority" channels that will sound each time the frequency is activated.

And, if that isn't enough, many of the models will even tell you the time of day.

As a hobby, scanning is relatively inexpensive. Good basis units are available for under $200. The most costly I've seen is a model that has a memory containing more than 2,000 frequencies. It costs about $500.

In most cases, the small retractable antenna that comes with the unit is more than adequate for local listening. But even if you need an external, outside antenna, excellent models are available from about $10 up.

Most of the scanners are primarily used in homes, on AC, but are easily adaptable to DC battery use in a car. Before you make your scanner mobile, however, check with local authorities. In many states, unauthorized mobile police receivers are unlawful.

—Low Band, 32-50 MHz. This is the least active band, although state police and some specialized government agencies like conservation departments are often heard from about 42 MHz up.

—Aircraft, 118-136 MHz. Since aircraft transmissions are in AM and most other public service users transmit in the FM mode, only the more sophisticated scanners, like the Bearcat 220 from Electra, will include the aircraft band. If you're fortunate enough to have one, though, the priority channel to monitor here is 121.5, the national air emergency frequency.

—Amateur, 144-148 MHz. This is the popular ham two-meter FM band, active day and night. Make sure you program in 146.52, the most used calling channel. Most of the ham repeater stations can be found from 146.64 to 147.39.

—High Band, 148-174 MHz. The marine band runs from 156.050 to 157.475, with 156.800 designated as a distress and calling channel. Other main users of this band include local police and fire departments, private business, mobile telephone and the federal government.

—UHF Band, 420.450-500 MHz. Amateur operators are allocated all the way up to 450, with local police and fire agencies most often found between 453-454 and 465-467. Power companies, taxi services, railroads and industrial concerns are the other major users.

Exactly what frequencies are the most active in any of the bands depends, of course, on where you live. While the main police-fire frequencies are probably the most popular, half the fun of scanning is searching various chunks of the spectrum and "discovering" your own hot frequencies.

Q: I keep hearing about cycle 21 skip. When will the skip conditions start to diminish? — M. F., Irvine, Calif.

A. As you know, skip, or radio signals which bounce off the ionosphere and travel long distances, is caused by sunspots and comes in 11-year cycles. This cycle, one of the most active ever observed, is expected to peak in May of 1980, with a monthly total of 153.4 sunspots. For this month (October), the predicted sunspot number is 140.8. The experts say cycle 21's monthly sunspot totals won't dip below 100 until mid-1982. Thus, active skip conditions will continue for some time.

Dear Static: Violations of FCC rules on the amateur bands are not being dealt with harshly at all. the FCC must never monitor the ham bands anymore because it is so busy with CB. Hams are swearing and jamming more than ever before. I've been an amateur for 12 years and it's the worst ever. The FCC people should spend some time on the ham bands or they're going to have another CB mess. — T. R., Chicago.

Information Offered On Drug Effects

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

As illegal drug use skyrockets and more and more people fall into the pit of hopelessness, we need to become better acquainted with the negative effects of the drug if we intend to be prepared to convince our own children of the dangers of drug abuse.

First of all, we need to realize that there are four general categories of drugs. These four specific types are: Stimulants (amphetamines and cocaine), the general symptoms are restlessness and nervousness; depressants (barbituates, opiates, and alcohol), the symptoms being drunken behavior, drowsiness, and slowed reflexes; hallucinogens (marijuana, hashish, mescaline, and psilocybin), most notable results are dilated pupils, rambling speech, and visions of things that are not present. Lastly we have deliriants, such as aerosol products, airplane glue, paint thinner, etc., resulting in slurred spoeech, poor coordination, impaired judgment, and sometimes severe headaches.

Secondly, mere knowledge of the four categories will do little or nothing to quiet its destructive sweep across our school campuses. It takes involvement. It takes genuine concern, and most of all it takes a desire to do something about it. Get involved with your local P.T.A. and other concerned groups and let your voice be heard.

When we understand the dangers involved in drug abuse and the likelihood of our children coming into contact with drugs or those that abuse drugs in the public school, we will be better prepared to guide and direct our youngsters away from the social and criminal snake pit — drug abuse.

Official Reaffirms U.S. Duty To Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says there has been no change in policy toward South Korea and "we are committed to deterring military aggression in that area."

The comment this week by State Department spokesman Hodding Carter came after Mike Mansfield, U.S. ambassador to Japan, said a mutual security treaty with South Korea will be honored but that he felt the Philippines and Japan are the outermost lines of American defense in the Pacific. The State Department spokesman's reaction was that "President Carter has repeatedly stated our unqualified commitment to the Republic of Korea and to the other allies in that region."

China Students Eager To Learn

By ALINE MOSBY

KUNMING, China (UPI) — Three Americans living in this remote city in southern China are a barometer of how the post-Mao thaw is progressing in China.

Elizabeth Booz and her son Patrick, 24, teach English and world history at Yunnan University while Stephen Thorpe, 28, handles the same subjects at Kunming Teachers' College nearby.

The trio flew into Kunming, a quiet city of 1.5 million 180 miles from the Vietnam border, in February during the brief, heady period following resumption of Sino-American relations.

"The thaw was on, everybody was so excited, and then came the crackdown in March," said Mrs. Booz, referring to the sudden disappearance of anti-Mao Tse-tung posters in Peking and other cities, the suppression of youth rallies and official discouragement of contacts between Chinese and foreigners.

"Everybody seemed cut off from us. We did our classes and that was it, as if they wanted to sweep us foreigners into a closet.

"But by now the scene has become more relaxed and people are friendly again.

"We are invited to supper sometimes by students. At first the atmosphere is stilted but then things warm up, the dam breaks and we spend hours talking. They want to know what is available to buy in America and how much it costs, how much we make and so on."

The Booz family and Thorpe are among several American teachers and technicians now working in various areas under the new cultural and scientific exchanges between the two nations. American coal, mining, agriculture and oil experts live in other cities.

Mrs. Booz, a widowed teacher and writer from Glassboro, N.J., and Washington, D.C., was about to teach in Indonesia when she was asked by other educators to apply for China. Her son, just graduated in Asian studies from the University of Wisconsin, also applied. Thorpe of Houston heard "on the grapevine" that China wanted English teachers.

The three found that Kunming's university of 1,200 students and college of 1,400 both were woefully short of books in English and teaching materials for their world history and geography classes.

The books to teach English hd been published in 1939 and included passages on mistreatment of blacks in America and phrases for attending a garden party at Buckingham Palace in London.

"We considered bringing in English language books from abroad, but so many teach phrases for talking on telephones, riding in cars and individual activities, things not done here, so we had to rule that out," Mrs. Booz said.

To build up a library of books in English for the students, Mrs. Booz appealed to friends in the United States and U.S. tourists passing through Kunming. Now students can borrow from the library more than 1,000 books, from Ernest Hemingway novels to encyclopedias.

The world history and geography class posed a problem since the university had no complete world maps. They did have one that "shows China in the center of the world and Europe some tiny appendage off to one side," said Mrs. Booz.

Friends in the United States shipped maps and a globe to the class. And Mrs. Booz, also an artist, draws on the blackboard a map of the entire world for her history-geography class which has 250 students, "including hangers-on and teachers."

"They are anxious, frantic, to learn about the world," she said. "Everything you drop on them they absorb like a sponge. And the more they learn the more they realize how little they know about the world. They are awfully ignorant about world history and geography."

Patrick added, "The students are dying to get their hands on books about China written abroad."

Mrs. Booz said Chinese students "learn by memory, this is how they have been educated. They learn political science as a sort of catechism. I have them recite in small groups, rather than individually, as they are used to being a collective."

English is the favored language course at both schools, as all over China. The Booz mother and son teach 200 students in several classes while Thorpe has 150. The university French classes draw 40 students, Russian 20.

Students in China have been told officially they can listen to Voice of America broadcasts to help their English. "When broadcast time comes you see antennas everywhere on the campus," Patrick said.

Films, work, school events and trips to the countryside keep the teachers busy. Bearded, slender Thorpe lives in the 1930's style Kunming Hotel. He hung a huge Texas flag on the wall of his book-filled room. Yunnan University gave Mrs. Booz and her son a simple house on the campus, rent free, in addition to paying them $366 monthly, 10 times the pay of a beginning teacher in China.

"They built us a bathroom with a handcrafted cement bathtub," Mrs. Booz said. "And we have the only flush toilet and indoor running water tap on the campus."

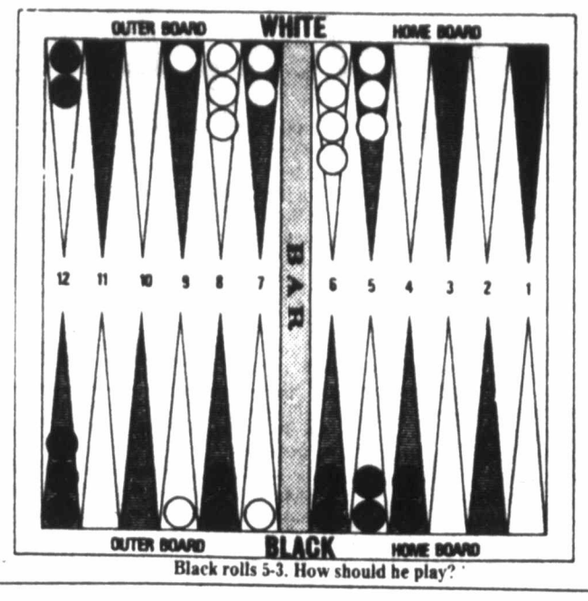

The house, with a homey picket fence, has fluorescent light fixtures on the ceilings and a cement floor. It has five rooms, a luxury in housing-short China.

"We feel wasteful for having so much space to ourselves," Mrs. Booz said as she sat in her living room, furnished with Chinese modern, motel-like furniture.

DOE To Experiment With Windmills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three giant windmills will be in operation in Washington state by mid-1981 as part of a test of generating electricity by wind turbine.

The Energy Department said this week that each of the three modern windmills will have propeller-like blades spanning 300 feet from tip to tip — the length of a football field — whirling vertically around a central hub at the top of a 200-foot tower.

Black rolls 5-3. How should he play?

Backgammon by Omar Sharif

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

Black has just rolled an excellent number. The scales have tipped heavily in his favor. Two excellent moves come into consideration: (1) Hit the blot on White's 9-point with the runner on White's 1-point; (2) hit the White blots on Black's 9-and bar-points with two men from the Black 12-point.

At first glance it might seem convenient to hit the blot on White's 9-point. That would accomplish several objectives. It would put a White man on the bar; it would activate Black's runner; it would not leave White a return shot — since White will have to re-enter with part of his next roll, the Black blot on White's 9-point will be out of reach of the enemy.

The move has some drawbacks. Should White be lucky enough at his next turn to roll some combination of 7, he will not only re-enter the man from the bar, but he will also make Black's bar-point. That advanced point could prove a thorn in Black's side — he will find it difficult to bring home his men without giving White a shot from the bar-point.

As against that, hitting the two White blots is likely to prove decisive immediately. The Black blots are safe for the moment, since White has to re-enter two men from the bar. Indeed, Black should double at his next turn. He is an overwhelming favorite to make his bar-point and then complete his prime, trapping two White men. Only an eternal optimist would accept a double in White's position.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tired of playing the same game of cards or scrabble? Try darts.

Darts, as a pastime, has advantages. The game is inexpensive. It takes up little space. It can be played well by almost anyone, regardless of size or strength. Women can compete with men, children with their parents.

John Lankalis works as a product manager in Manhattan. In the evenings and on weekends he plays darts.

"It's a good social game," Lankalis says. "It's a nice way to meet people and have a nice time.

Lankalis once played on a team with a bartender, an artist-illustrator, a computer operator, a writer, a lighting director, a businessman and a photographer.

Outside of league competition, he says, "The only person you are competing with most of the time is yourself, you can push yourself to your own level."

— "Being able to concentrate.

What the player is throwing at is the "English clock" dart board, made of bristle, which measures 18 inches in diameter and has a 13⅜-inch scoring area. The scoring area is divided, like a pie, into 20 equal sections numbered 1 through 20.

Darts that hit within the scoring area earn a score equal to the number of the pie piece. There are double and triple zones which, if hit by the dart, count for two or three times the number of the piece. If the player hits the triple 20, he scores 60 points.

The dart is usually made of brass and weighs anywhere from 11 to 45 grams. It has three parts — a steel point which sticks in the board, the metal barrel which the player grips while throwing, and the flight, which consists of a metal adapter and feathers and determines the flight of the dart to the board.

Each player takes a turn, throwing a dart three times at the board from a distance of 8 feet. The dart board is mounted 5 feet 8 inches' from the floor to the center of the bull's-eye. To determine who throws first, each player takes one throw at the bull's-eye. The person who comes closest throws first.

The classic English pub game is 301. The player strives to reduce his score from 301 to 0. He must start and end on a double. If a player throws his first dart and hits the single 19, that dart does not count. If his next dart hits double 19 that dart and all subsequent darts he throws count. If, near the end of the game, he is left with eight points, he can end by hitting the double four. The first player to hit zero wins.

Also played are 501, the same way as 301 except that a double is not required to start, 801, 1001, cricket, baseball and killer.

Bob McLeod is co-author of Darts Unlimited (Grosset & Dunlap, $5.95) which explains darting to the beginner. He is also wholesaler of darts, dart boards and darting equipment.

There are "close to 4 million serious dart players" in the United States, McLeod says. He contends they are almost all congenial.

In the 300 tournaments he's attended, he says, "with all those thousands of people there and all that competition and everything, I've yet to see a fight or even a hot argument."

Of the many tournaments in this country, McLeod says the top one is the U.S. Open. Other players say the World Masters, in which only top dart players are allowed, is more prestigious.

McLeod says the Philadelphia area produces the best players because the American version of darts was played there before the English version gained popularity.

Exhibit Pays Tribute To Explorer

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — When Capt James Cook sailed into the South Seas two centuries ago and found Paradise it was the moon landing of its time.

Some of the excitement sparked by his stupendous voyages is echoed in a vast London exhibition marking the 200th anniversary of Cook's death in Hawaii, one of the island groups he discovered.

"Captain Cook in the South Seas" celebrates a man who "added a hemisphere to the known world." The show says Cook "sailed farther and explored a greater area of the earth's surface than any previous navigator."

His three explorations were a kind of 18th century Apollo project, stirring as much excitement as moon rocks and lunar telecasts did in our own day.

Books on each of his voyages were runaway best sellers. His discoveries and his dramatic death in Hawaii in 1779 inspired poems, plays, even a "serious pantomimic ballet" in Paris. The British Museum's "Otaheite Rooms" showing objects Cook brought back became the most popular place in London.

The romance of the South Seas born then is with us still. Cook's name even now conjures visitions of lush islands, lusty maidens and lovely lagoons unsullied by the outside world.

When he first set sail in 1769 he headed into mystery. A decade later he had roughly completed the map of the modern world.

He sailed his tiny wood ships thousands of leagues in conditions no sailor would tolerate today. He went from the far south (he was the first to cross the Antarctic Circle) to the far north (he sailed north of Alaska searching for a Northwest Passage).

His contribution to the advancement of geographic knowledge was immense," the show says. "His observations of the peoples of the Pacific revealed a new world to students of mankind."

Most lands he explored and charted — many of Cook's beautifully drafted charts and maps are in the show — had been "discovered" earlier. But Cook was the first to reach Hawaii, and he established the geography of Australia, New Zealand and several island groups and literally put them on the map.

Like the Apollo astronauts, Cook had a scientific mission on each voyage and pioneered methods of studying nature and people.

He was sent first to observe the transit of Venus as the planet passed between earth and sun. His second voyage sought a "lost continent" in the southern seas. His third looked for a "northwest passage" north of Canada.

The last two missions proved negative. But Cook and his scientific team became the first to study mankind itself in the Pacific, collecting shiploads of exotic trophies which thrilled all Europe.

Those same objects, plus many never before exhibited, now cram one whole floor of the Museum of Mankind with war clubs and carvings, Hawaiian feather cloaks, watercolors of vivid mountains and limpid lagoons, sketches of bare-breasted girls — everything the term "South Seas" evokes.

Even though he created that "South Seas" image, Cook himself is a somewhat shadowy figure in a long list of famous explorers. The current show is only one sign that he at last is getting his due.

Another major exhibition is in the National Maritime museum at Greenwich. There is a new book on his tragic final voyage. A Cook museum is growing at his birthplace on England's northeast coast. A Cook Heritage Trail runs through the area, and there is another museum at the other end.

Research for several recent Cook anniversaries — the 250th of his birth, bicentennials of his Hawaiian and Alaskan landfalls — has given the hero a human face.

For instance, it is now believed Cook was an enthusiastic smuggler in his youth. There are hints he joined the British navy in a Watergate-style "high-level coverup of his illegal activities," says the new director of the Captain Cook Trust. He admits his idol was a womanizer "particularly partial to Hawaiian girls," an "adventurer and fast-living buccaneer."

He also was something of a prophet. The exhibition cites his repeated fears that the idyllic life he found in the South Seas would be corrupted or destroyed by contact with the Western world.

Hunt Says Nixon Wasn't Loyal To Subordinates

(Third of a three-part series in which Howard Hunt talks exclusively to Marilyn and Hy Gardner about his new life and the Watergate affair.)

Q: Everyone else, it seems, made money writing about Watergate. Haven't you?

A: "The net is very negative. I received a substantial advance on my autobiography. But when you deduct that from what my legal fees have been, I come out very much a loser."

Glad you asked that!
BY MARILYN AND HY GARDNER

Q: Do you think Nixon got what he deserved? Or do you think he was treated too harshly for what he did?

A: "He's never really admitted what he did. I have some very personal feelings about what he did. None could be taken into court. And, after all, Mr. Nixon has been pardoned by a successor president. I think he has behaved very inappropriately considering his role and the destruction of so much of our lives in that period of time...The great debt that he still owes America for the damage that he did by bad governing. If only for that, he ought to be indicted. But I was willing to let sleeping dogs lie so long as he stayed out in the West Coast and piddled around, became a grandfather and played golf."

Q: What was the worst thing you think Nixon actually did?

A: "He failed to be loyal to his subordinates. I've been an officer in both the Navy and the Air Force. And when I was given officer's training, I was told that you take care of your subordinates first. And then you bed down for the night. Be sure they're well taken care of and they in turn, will take care of you. Mr. Nixon failed in this. He encouraged his closest assistants and associates to get deeper into the morass. And when they were wasted, he walked away with a pardon. What kind of a man is this?"

Q: What would you have done if you had been Nixon?

A: "Nixon is so bound by his own personal concerns, his own paranoid preoccupations, that I can't put myself in his position. A rational political leader who was aware of what the issues were — what the problems were — should have come forward the morning of the arrest and said, 'These are my men. I take full responsibility for them. If you want to blame them, blame me'...Then I think the thing would have been over in 2 weeks. Because it was the cover-up that was the bad part of it.

When you listen to those White House tapes and read the transcript you see Nixon sitting in the Oval Office plotting to let John Mitchell take the fall, as he said. My God, Mitchell was his law partner. Mitchell was the man who plucked him from political obscurity in California, gave him a law partnership in New York, ran his successful attempt at the presidency. This was a man to whom he owed everything. How can you treat your associates in that fashion?"

Q: Why do you think Nixon really decided not to erase all the tapes?

A: "Money. He was given the idea of the tapes by LBJ — when he gave Nixon a tour of the White House. LBJ told Nixon he ought to re-install the taping system for the writing of his memoirs. That means money. He had this hoard of information and it represented mega-bucks to him. As in fact, it has. And I'm sure that was the sole reason he didn't destroy them. Many of us in prison at that time were praying that he would. Assemble the press and show them an immense bonfire on the south lawn of the White House. But it never happened."

Ex-Disney Employees Make Film

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Walt Disney Productions, alone among animation film studios, has succeeded in producing feature length cartoon hits regularly since "Snow White" burst upon the scene in 1937.

Every five years or so during the past four decades Disney has reaped uncounted millions from the likes of "Pinocchio," "Peter Pan" and "Jungle Book" virtually without competition.

Other animation studios have challenged Disney in the field, among them Hanna-Barbera (Charlotte's Web) with indifferent success.

Now Disney faces a formidable competitor in Don Bluth Productions which is making a $7 million version of the award-winning novel "Mrs. Frisby And The Rats of Nimh."

The new animated feature, in conjunction with Aurora Productions, will be produced by a team of former Disney employees who defected en masse last month.

Bluth and 11 other animators and artists pulled out of Disney for the express purpose of making animated films and have hitched their wagon to Aurora which is headed by three former Disney executives.

The defection could be a major blow to Disney. The departed artists represented 17 percent of Disney's animation department which was putting the finishing touches to "The Fox And The Hound," due for release at Christmas, 1980. The movie has been pushed back six months.

Nucleus of the new outfit are Bluth, Gary Goldman and John Pomeroy, key animators at Disney for the past seven years or so.

Bluth worked on "Sleeping Beauty" in 1971 and subsequently contributed to "The Rescuers," "Robin Hood" and "The Sword and the Stone."

In leading the exodus from Disney, Bluth said, "The studio just hasn't been the same since Walt died.

"It's the difference of night and day. There's no decisive vision or leadership in the animation department. It was Walt's baby. All of us want to keep the animation art form alive and we had a difficult time doing it at Disney.

"The creative atmosphere has disappeared. Their thinking is more toward marketing than production. More business than art."

Bluth said "Mrs. Frisby And The Rats of Nimh" will be in the Disney tradition. The design and art work will reflect Disney's classic style.

"The important thing is to give the animated characters personality," he said. "And that's what we're working on right now."

Jim Stewart, executive vice president of Aurora, which is providing the capital for "Mrs. Frisby," directly employs nine of the former Disney animators through a subsidiary.

Stewart, a Disney veteran of 12 years and a former vice president, joined forces last year with two other ex-Disney executives — Richard Irvine and Jon Lang — to form Aurora.

He resents implications that Aurora "raided" Disney to set up a competitive animation studio.

"Aurora was established to make live action feature films," Stewart said. "We are just finishing our first movie, 'Why Would I Lie,' which Larry Peerce is directing. We had a goal of some day making animated films.

"We did not initiate the decision for the animators to leave Disney. They let it be known to their superiors they were unhappy and were actively seeking another association.

"The creative atmosphere in Disney's animation department changed in the past few years. The animators didn't have any incentives. They resented the lack of appreciation for the contributions they were making.

"They came to us and said they were interested in what we were doing because of our past association and interest in animation."

Aurora has an agreement with Bluth and his team for a minimum of two feature length animated movies, each of which would require at least five years of production.

Aurora will eventually employ 30 animators and artists, camera specialists, film editors and technicians to produce "Mrs. Frisby."

"There's room for more feature film animation aside from Disney," Stewart said. "It takes 30 to 40 months to create an animated film. So far, no one else has ever done animation of the quality and style of Disney. We are confident in the ability of the team of 12 animators.

"'Mrs. Frisby' has Disneylike qualities but in addition it has some wonderful and sensitive things to say that Bluth brought us from the novel."

Minority Fights For Survival

By STEPHEN K. HINDY

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's Armenians, a tightly knit minority that still holds out hope of returning someday to their ancient homeland, are fighting for survival in the chaos left by this nation's Christian-Moslem civil war.

The plight of 200,000 Armenians here, about six percent of the Lebanese population, is shared by many landless people who seek to maintain their national identities — people like the Kurds scattered in Iraq, Iran, Syria, Turkey and the Soviet Union. Ancient Armenia now is part of Turkey and the Soviet Union — the latter being the Soviet Armenian Republic.

The Armenians who live here are well-integrated into Lebanon's economy. They run successful businesses in both the Moslem and Christian sectors of this divided city. But they have shunned social integration.

Most Armenians have clustered in the Bourj Hammoud and Nabaa neighborhoods. They have their own schools, theaters, newspapers, customs and language. Most speak French and Arabic as well as Armenian.

Like the Palestinians who started coming here after Israel became a nation in 1948, the Armenians did not choose to live here. When the Turkish empire was falling apart in 1915, the Turks, fearing an Armenian alliance with the Russians, expelled 1.75 million Armenians from eastern Turkey.

More than a million of them are believed to have died during the forced march into the Turkish province of Syria, which then included Lebanon.

The clannishness born of this persecution has rendered the Armenians a vulnerable patch in the Lebanese quiltwork of well-equipped private armies of various sectarian and ideological colors.

Although about 200 Armenians mercenaries fought beside the Christians during the 1975-76 civil war, Christians in communities surrounding Bourj Hammoud and Nabaa resent the Armenians' policy of "positive neutrality."

Many feel that the Armenians, a Christian people, should have taken a stand in the war.

"We have a grievance against them because their politics exclude local considerations," said a spokesman for former President Camille Chamoun's National Liberal Party. "They have a kind of double allegiance. Not once in their political history in Lebanon have they behaved as Lebanese first. They always behave as Armenians first and then Lebanese."

More than 20 Armenians, fighters and civilians, died recently defending their neutrality in three days of vicious street fighting with militias of the two main Christian parties here, the Phalangists and the National Liberal. An estimated 15 Christians died.

The Armenians huddled in terror in Bourj Hammoud and Nabaa as gunmen fought with rifles, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades. About 100 civilians on both sides were kidnapped during the fighting.

Leftist sources, who were not involved in the battle, said that many of those kidnapped were found with their throats slashed, but the Armenians and Christians denied this, saying all the abducted were released after a cease-fire.

The Armenians claim that "positive neutrality" is a threat to the alleged Christian aim of consolidating control of a de facto "Christian Lebanon" in East Beirut and Mount Lebanon.

They say the Christian militias have imposed direct and indirect taxes on Armenian shopkeepers, bombed the shops of those who refused to pay, and spread propaganda in the Armenian communities.

"Step by step, they were trying to get at the heart of our community," said Vatche Papazian, 33, of the Tashnag Party, one of three Armenian nationalist groupings.

The trouble was sparked by a Christian militia effort to shut down a gambling casino in the Armenian quarter. The Christians claim the Armenians fired first, but the Armenians say the Christians were flaunting their presence in the Armenian neighborhood.

"What do they mean when they say they want to close down the gambling houses here — they are not the state," said Papazian, a computer scientist who was graduated from the University of Wisconsin. "We're saying to them if you are the de facto forces in your area, fine, we are the de facto forces in our area."

Western military sources say the Armenians can put together 3,000 to 6,000 fighters armed with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and Soviet-made Kalashnikov assault rifles in the face of a combined Christian militia strength of about 15,000 men. The Armenians have a reputation of being fierce fighters. Papazian attributes this to high motivation.

"We have always had some self-defense needs," he said. "As time went by, we have felt the need to strengthen ourselves. The weaker the state got and the stronger the militias got during the civil war, the more we realized we had to be strong."

The Christians claim Armenian neutrality in the civil war was opportunism, that the Armenians supported winners and applauded the Syrian peacekeeping presence when the Syrians were shelling Christian neighborhoods in October 1978.

In spite of these divisions and the flight of 12,000 Armenians during the civil war, the vast majority of Armenians here have vowed to remain.

"Wherever our nation, our people is, that is where we belong," said Margos Hayrabedian, 41, a butcher whose brother was kidnapped and killed in the fighting. His comment is echoed by many in the streets of Bourj Hammoud.

This allegiance to the Armenian community is a problem for those who dream of returning to what once was the kingdom of Armenia.

"The more we get assimilated, the weaker becomes the desire to fight for an independent Armenia," said Papazian, noting that until the mid-60s, the Armenian community in Lebanon had been growing.

'Toe' Quicker Than Eye

By SHARI LEWIS

My pop claims that a magician is full of magic from head to toe. Here's a trick that proves it.

After dinner, someone picks a card from a shuffled deck and it's put back with the others. To keep the cards away from the food, the deck is placed on the floor, and when you nudge it with the tip of your toe, the pack cuts itself right at the selected card!

Here's how: Spill a little salt on the table near you before you start. Have someone pick a card and remember it. Square up the deck and place it on the table in front of you. As the person shows his card to the other people, press the tip of your index finger into the spilled salt. Press hard enough so that a number of the salt grains stick to the end of your finger. Don't wet your finger first, keep it dry.

When the card is ready to be returned, tap the top card of the deck with your index finger as you ask them to put it right on top. You have just left a few grains of the salt on top of the pack. After the selected card is on the deck, have someone cut the cards and complete the cut.

Now you place the deck on the floor. Ask for the name of the card, and then gently nudge the deck with the toe of one shoe. The deck will spill slightly and, because of the grains of salt, will cut itself somewhere near the center.
