Appeal dismissed in Bhakta verdict

A guilty verdict returned against a Snyder man accused of choking his wife to death has been upheld by the 11th Court of Appeals in Eastland.

The court denied an appeal filed on behalf of Bharat N. Bhakta.

Bhakta was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in 132nd District Court Aug. 21, 1985. He was sentenced to 18 years in the Texas Department of Correction in connection with the death of his wife Kumud on April 25, 1985.

In a separate ruling last week, the court also upheld a second 132nd District Court sentence involving the felony DWI conviction of Michael Ray Morris. That offense was alleged in April of 1985.

In the Bhakta case, defense attorney Pete Greene argued in appeal that evidence was insufficent to show that the grand jury used "due diligence" in attempting to determine the specific cause of Kumud Bhakta's death.

In addition, it was argued the prosecution had suppressed evidence material to Bhakta's defense.

The appeals court's decision denied both contentions.

The indictment returned by the grand jury alleged that Bhakta had caused the death of his wife by "choking the victim with his hands and by causing trauma to the head of the victim by manner and means the nature of which is not known to the grand jurors."

The defense argued the reference to "means.. not known" in the indictment in-

Figures indicate 40 percent tax hike

By VICKI BROWN
SDN Staff Writer

Due to the estimated 40 percent loss in oil values for Scurry County, Snyder residents can expect to see a corresponding 40 percent increase in combined taxes on 1985 notices they will receive this fall, according to preliminary figures released by the Scurry County Appraisal District.

This will include property owners who pay taxes to the four Snyder-based taxing entities — Scurry County, the City of Snyder, Snyder ISD and Western Texas College.

Following "effective tax rate" estimates computed by the district, taxpayers will be charged approximately 42 cents more per $10,000 in appraised value on their property.

For a $50,000 home, an individual can expect a tax bill of about $725, the figures indicate. This reflects an increase of some $208 over last year's bill of about $517 for the same property.

Appraisal officials use a complex formula to determine each jurisdiction's maximum effective tax rate — the highest allowable rate a taxing entity can charge per $100 valuation to generate the same amount of tax dollars it required last year.

Appraisal figures indicate all jurisdictions, except the City of Snyder, will lose a percentage of taxable value from last year.

In terms of percent of value lost, Scurry County, Snyder ISD and Western Texas College will be the entities most affected.

The WTC district will lose 49 percent of its tax base. Snyder schools will decline approximately 35 percent and Scurry County will lose about 34 percent.

According to the district's figures, to generate the same tax dollars it required last year, Snyder ISD would see the largest tax rate increase — from some 52 cents per $100 valuation last year to just slightly more than 81 cents. This means that the tax bill on a $50,000 home will rise from some $258 to approximately $407 — an increase of almost $208 over last year. The school tax accounts for over half of the property owner's total tax bill.

Additionally, Scurry County as a taxing entity would see its rate rise from just over 17 cents to nearly 27 cents per $100 valuation. This approximate nine cent rise would increase the tax bill on the same $50,000 home from some $88 last year to almost $135.

Using this year's values, to generate "the same amout of

Little Dribblers head for Snyder

Fifty-five teams, most from Texas but three from as far away as Illinois and Louisiana, will be making their way to Snyder this week for the Girl's Little Dribbler National Tournaments.

The tournaments, which begin Wednesday at Scurry County Coliseum and the high school and college gymnasiums, will stage 96 games in three divisions and three leagues.

Tournament passes, good for all the games, are $10 for adults and $5 for students. Children under age 6 will be admitted free. Fans may also purchase a day pass for $3 for adults and $2 for students. Day passes are good for only one gymnasium per day, however.

Prices may fluctuate. For instance, there are fewer games Wednesday than later in the week and day passes on that day will be $2 and $1.

Day passes and tournament passes may be purchased at each of the three tournament sites. Concession stands will also be open during each game.

There will be nine tournaments. Divisions are determined by the population of a city or area. The Continental Division consists of cities with 2,500 population or less; the American Division is cities 2,500 to 7,500; the National Division is cities or areas with a population of 7,500 to 30,000. Cities with a greater population than 30,000 are divided into areas.

In addition, divisions are broken into age groups. The Junior League is girls age 9-10; the Major League is girls 11-12; and the Senior League is girls 13-14.

For the national tournaments this week, there will be four Junior League teams and four Major League teams in the Continental Division; six Junior League teams, six Major League teams and eight Senior League teams in the American Division; and 10 Junior League teams, 10 Major League teams and seven Senior League teams in the National Division.

Snyder will have a team in each league, all playing in the National Division.

Summer classes to begin

Summer school for Snyder High School students begins Monday with four classes to be offered.

Students can receive a semester's (one-half) credit by attending three weeks of school, and a full year's credit by attending all six weeks.

School officials encourage students interested in participating in extracurricular activities next year to consider summmer school.

By obtaining a full credit in the summer, the student would have an extra credit hour available for extracurricular activity in the fall and spring.

This session of summer school will meet from Monday, June 2, through July 14. Instruction will be offered from 7:30 a.m. until 12:45 p.m.

Enrollment will be at 7:30 a.m. Monday in Worsham Auditorium.

The cost will be $100 per semester credit or $50 per half-credit. The fee must be paid at enrollment.

Students enrolling for summer school must attend classes since one day of instruction equals one

Q — Under the upcoming salary changes for the school, how are the superintendent's and assistant superintendent's salaries going to change in comparison to teachers?

A — The principle of a 3 percent raise for the "midpoint" salary is the same, but assistant superintendents will receive a proportionately higher raise since they are in a different pay grade than teachers. Teachers will receive a raise next year of some $755 while assistant superintendents will receive some $1,400. Regarding the superintendent, he is not included in the pay raise. Any changes in his salary is considered separately by the school board at contract renewal time.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Solving problems sometimes is easier than living with the solutions."

No one was happier than the banker to be using an umbrella Friday morning. A good general rain had soaked the county overnight, making cotton planting this week a good possibility.

There's nothing like a general rain to change the outlook of folks—even the non-farmers. Even a tight-fisted banker like Roger Mize will be more than happy to pay full price for his full page ad.

Snyder National Bank ran a page ad on May 3 asking for a three-inch rain during the month. The SDN guaranteed results—sort of a no-rain, no-pay situation.

The first rain, .70 of an inch, fell three days after the ad was published. Going into last Thursday, the city's total for the month was 2.10.

Even though only three days were left in the month, we remained confident because it generally rains on the last day of school—caused by school picnics and other outdoor activities.

Friday afternoon it appeared that Snyder might exceed the three-inch total by more than an inch. We might ask the banker if he wants to pay a premium for the ad since he got more than his money's worth. But on second thought, we'll just be glad the rains came.

Although the rains were welcomed, the moisture played havoc with playoff baseball games scheduled Friday at Moffett field. Fans from Pecos and Weatherford were in town, but the field was under water.

Snyder, scheduled to meet Crowly Saturday afternoon in Wichita Falls, was keeping watchful eyes on the moisture-laden skies.

Meanwhile, Snyder's population is expected to swell considerably this next week as Snyder plays host to the National Girls Little Dribblers tournament.

Tournament officials indicate that all motel rooms are filled, the college dorms are reserved as well as overflow to an apartment complex. Some fans are having to stay in Sweetwater and Colorado City.

Rains and out-of-town visitors all in one week—it marks the start of a good summer.

Two jailed for robbery

Two suspects have been arrested in Devine in connection with the robbery of a Snyder paraplegic reported to sheriff's officers May 7.

The suspects now in custody are Lucio Ramirez Jr., 22, and Mauricio Hernandez, 22, both of Snyder. They were jailed by Hondo County authorities after a routine check on the pair turned up warrants for their arrest issued out of Scurry County.

They are accused of beating 25-year-old Juan Hermosillo of 701 30th St., taking his money and then dumping him beside the Ennis Creek Road north of Snyder on May 7.

Ramirez and Hernandez were confined in the Hondo County Jail Friday morning pending transfer to Scurry County. The transfer is expected early next week.

Soviets won't honor treaty

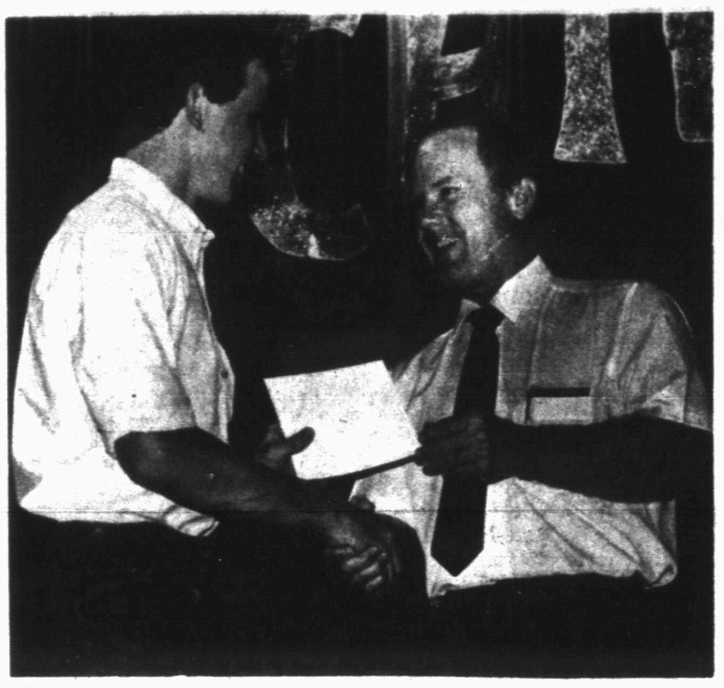

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Saturday said it will not feel bound by strategic arms controls it agreed to with the United States in the 1970s if Washington exceeds the weapons limits allowed by the SALT accords.

A government statement published by the official Tass news agency strongly condemned what it called President Reagan's "exceptionally dangerous" announcement Tuesday that Washington will not feel bound by the SALT II treaty in the future.

It was the first official Soviet reaction to Reagan's announcement, and signaled that both superpowers are willing to abandon key structures they set up in the 1970s to limit their arsenals unless they reach new arms accords by the end of the year.

Reagan announced Tuesday that the United States would scrap two nuclear-armed submarines to keep within the terms of the SALT II accord, signed by U.S. and Soviet leaders in 1979 but never ratified by the U.S. Senate.

But he also served notice that he will not abide by what he has called a "fatally flawed" agreement, thereby asserting for the first time U.S. readiness to abandon the SALT II limits on strategic nuclear weapons.

Windshields broken by water balloon

Police investigated two criminal mischief complaints Thursday afternoon — both involving broken windshields resulting from water balloons being thrown at moving vehicles.

No charges were filed in either case.

The first incident was reported at 37th St. near Snyder Farm and Ranch Supply at 1:45 p.m. and the second in Towle Park just after 3 p.m.

Police made contact with suspects in both incidents and restitution was agreed to in both cases.

City officers also noted the clearing of a stolen bicycle complaint filed Wednesday morning.

A 20-inch BMX bike reported stolen by Larry Minson of 2216 42nd St. Wednesday night was found in the alley behind the Minson residence Thursday morning.

In other action, city officers jailed one male suspect Thursday on a warrant issued in connection with a recent misdemeanor assault complaint.

Insurance president says he will meet with Soviet leader

WACO, Texas (AP) — The president of a Waco insurance firm says he is traveling to Moscow this week with a group opposing President Reagan's Star Wars plan and will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bernard Rapoport, president of American Income Life Insurance Co., is a prominent Democrat and son of a Russian immigrant who says he is travling with three members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The 800,000-member union has lobbied against Reagan's Strategic Defense — Star Wars — Initiative, the MX missile and the B-1 bomber.

But Rapoport says he hopes the trip will help dispel Soviet misconceptions about capitalism and aid peace through urgings of a reduction in arms spending.

"I'd like to say to Mr. Gorbachev, 'You have problems in your country and we have problems in our country. But because our cultures are different, we take the same problem and view it differently,'" he told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Rapoport, 68, said he and his fellow travelers are scheduled to meet with Gorbachev Friday and will speak through an interpreter. He said he did not know how long the meeting will last.

Rapoport said he plans to show Gorbachev a framed photograph of his father while he was imprisoned in Siberia.

David Rapoport was a Russian Jew who was found guilty of being a Socialist propagandist after the revolution of 1905. He was permanently exiled and sentenced to hard labor, but escaped in 1913 and started a new life in San Antonio, where Rapoport was born.

"I think I'll be the first American he has met whose father was in the Russian Revolution," Rapoport said.

Rapoport said he realizes that some visitors to the Soviet Union have been used as propaganda tools, but does not think that he will be.

"Some Americans make a terrible mistake when talking to top officials of state by agreeing with all the problems we have, like poverty and injustice," he said. "But those exist in every country. At least we start with freedom."

Rapoport said he won't bring up last week's decision by the Soviets to allow 117 citizens to emigrate to the United States to join relatives. But as a leader in Jewish circles, Rapoport said he hopes the subject comes up.

But Rapoport says he hopes the trip will help dispel Soviet misconceptions about capitalism and aid peace through urgings of a reduction in arms spending.

"I'd like to say to Mr. Gorbachev, 'You have problems in your country and we have problems in our country. But because our cultures are different, we take the same problem and view it differently,'" he told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Rapoport, 68, said he and his fellow travelers are scheduled to meet with Gorbachev Friday and will speak through an interpreter. He said he did not know how long the meeting will last.

Rapoport said he plans to show Gorbachev a framed photograph of his father while he was imprisoned in Siberia.

David Rapoport was a Russian Jew who was found guilty of being a Socialist propagandist after the revolution of 1905. He was permanently exiled and sentenced to hard labor, but escaped in 1913 and started a new life in San Antonio, where Rapoport was born.

"I think I'll be the first American he has met whose father was in the Russian Revolution," Rapoport said.

Rapoport said he realizes that some visitors to the Soviet Union have been used as propaganda tools, but does not think that he will be.

"Some Americans make a terrible mistake when talking to top officials of state by agreeing with all the problems we have, like poverty and injustice," he said. "But those exist in every country. At least we start with freedom."

Rapoport said he won't bring up last week's decision by the Soviets to allow 117 citizens to emigrate to the United States to join relatives. But as a leader in Jewish circles, Rapoport said he hopes the subject comes up.

Soviets won't honor treaty

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union Saturday said it will not feel bound by strategic arms controls it agreed to with the United States in the 1970s if Washington exceeds the weapons limits allowed by the SALT accords.

A government statement published by the official Tass news agency strongly condemned what it called President Reagan's "exceptionally dangerous" announcement Tuesday that Washington will not feel bound by the SALT II treaty in the future.

It was the first official Soviet reaction to Reagan's announcement, and signaled that both superpowers are willing to abandon key structures they set up in the 1970s to limit their arsenals unless they reach new arms accords by the end of the year.

Reagan announced Tuesday that the United States would scrap two nuclear-armed submarines to keep within the terms of the SALT II accord, signed by U.S. and Soviet leaders in 1979 but never ratified by the U.S. Senate.

But he also served notice that he will not abide by what he has called a "fatally flawed" agreement, thereby asserting for the first time U.S. readiness to abandon the SALT II limits on strategic nuclear weapons.

In recognition of services, Stehley and Lynch were presented with gifts given by the junior high faculty and staff.

Windshields broken by water balloon

Police investigated two criminal mischief complaints Thursday afternoon — both involving broken windshields resulting from water balloons being thrown at moving vehicles.

No charges were filed in either case.

The first incident was reported at 37th St. near Snyder Farm and Ranch Supply at 1:45 p.m. and the second in Towle Park just after 3 p.m.

Police made contact with suspects in both incidents and restitution was agreed to in both cases.

City officers also noted the clearing of a stolen bicycle complaint filed Wednesday morning.

A 20-inch BMX bike reported stolen by Larry Minson of 2216 42nd St. Wednesday night was found in the alley behind the Minson residence Thursday morning.

In other action, city officers jailed one male suspect Thursday on a warrant issued in connection with a recent misdemeanor assault complaint.

Passport dispute deadlock reported

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany and the Western allies are deadlocked over the communist country's new policy requiring diplomats to show their passports as they cross between East and West Berlin, sources said.

Sources in East Berlin said that a change in the policy was "out of the question," but added that the East German government did not want to escalate tensions.

Insurance president says he will meet with Soviet leader

WACO, Texas (AP) — The president of a Waco insurance firm says he is traveling to Moscow this week with a group opposing President Reagan's Star Wars plan and will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bernard Rapoport, president of American Income Life Insurance Co., is a prominent Democrat and son of a Russian immigrant who says he is travling with three members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The 800,000-member union has lobbied against Reagan's Strategic Defense — Star Wars — Initiative, the MX missile and the B-1 bomber.

But Rapoport says he hopes the trip will help dispel Soviet misconceptions about capitalism and aid peace through urgings of a reduction in arms spending.

"I'd like to say to Mr. Gorbachev, 'You have problems in your country and we have problems in our country. But because our cultures are different, we take the same problem and view it differently,'" he told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

Rapoport, 68, said he and his fellow travelers are scheduled to meet with Gorbachev Friday and will speak through an interpreter. He said he did not know how long the meeting will last.

Soviet stars perform for the relief efforts for Chernobyl

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet pop star Alla Pugacheva, declaring "we want to give our hearts," kicked off a benefit concert before 30,000 people to aid victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster and help pay for the vast cleanup now under way.

The concert, the Soviet Union's first rock benefit, was held in Moscow Friday night at an indoor stadium built for the 1980 Olympics.

The 2½-hour show mixed hard rock and some touches of the 1940s, and presented acts ranging from the new wave band Bravo to more typically Soviet variety numbers and a poetry recital by actor Mikhail Ulyanov.

Spectators in stands that began 80 yards from the multitiered stage were quiet in comparison with crowds at Western concerts. They remained in their places and applauded most performances warmly, but not wildly.

"Money is money, but we want to give our hearts," Ms. Pugacheva told the audience, then opened the evening with a song called "Twentieth Century."

The red-haired singer then introduced a Soviet journalist, Vladimir Svetov, who presided over a satellite television link with Kiev.

He presented a parade of people who had done cleanup work around the stricken nuclear power plant 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital.

"Come on, let's applaud every time we hear the name of that town!" Ms. Pugacheva urged as miners, firemen and others sent greetings to Moscow.

STANFIELD PLAY--Mrs. Carole Haynes' second grade class at Stanfield presented a play recently that they wrote themselves after studying about the Solar System. The play included the nine planets, sun, moon, a robot, and astronauts. It was entitled "Space Frontier." Mexican official: accuations united people, government

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The president of the Mexican Senate says recent U.S. accusations of massive drug-related corruption within the Mexican government united Mexico's people and government.

Sen. Antonio Riva Palacio Lopez said Friday that remarks made on May 13 by Customs Commissioner William von Raab and Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, had "a clear interventionist color" and in "an unconscientious and disinformed way."

Riva Palacio made his comments during the U.S.-Mexico Interparliamentary Conference being held here at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Although the Reagan administration backed away from the remarks made by von Raab and Abrams, Riva Palacio said the corruption charges "provoked the full and immediate rejection of the Mexican people and government in significant unity."

He did say diplomatic gestures since the U.S. Senate hearing have increased hopes for "friendly relations" and he suggested that a "pronouncement" from the U.S. delegation to the conference here, headed by Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, "would be in order."

Gramm said Americans realize much of the solution for the drug problem lies on the American side of the border. "We clearly have to do more in the United States" in arresting drug users, "especially sports figures and movie stars. When they get arrested, they ought to go to jail."

German composer Ludwig von Beethoven died in 1827.

Chances said dim for summit meet

BONN, West Germany — A Soviet news agency chief said Friday that prospects for a second superpower summit have dimmed because of Washington's "restrictive attitude" on nuclear arms control.

Valentin Falin, director of the government news agency Novosti, complained about President Reagan's tentative plans to scrap compliance with the SALT II treaty. The Soviet official said he was skeptical a summit can be held this year.

"If the United States continues its restrictive attitude to disarmament, I am not sure the summit will take place," Falin told reporters at a news conference here.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Reagan met in Geneva last November, and agreed to hold a summit in the United States this year. The Soviets have not agreed to set a date.

On Tuesday, Reagan announced he decided to dismantle two Poseidon nuclear submarines and stay in compliance with limits set by the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Talks treaty, SALT II, which was never ratified by the Senate.

The president said the United States intended to exceed the pact's limits later this year unless the Soviets reversed arms programs that he claimed violate SALT II, an accusation the Kremlin has rejected.

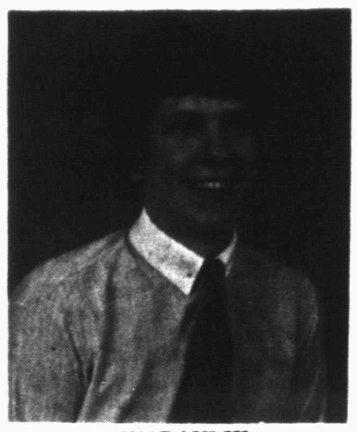

Referring to Reagan's decision, Falin said: "I don't know what more we can offer the U.S.A. to continue to abide with the agreement, unless of course we declare ourselves the 51st state of the United States."

Falin is in West Germany as a guest at a Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War meeting in Cologne, about 18 miles from Bonn. The group won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1985.

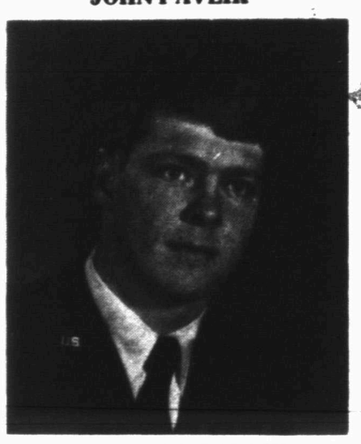

In a written message to the meeting released Friday, Reagan said the Soviet Union failed to comply with major arms control agreements and refused to respond positively to U.S. arms reduction proposals.

Swimnastics for senior citizens will be resumed this week at the Western Texas College Swimming pool. The group will meet at 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays through the summer months.

Results of the Silver Haired Legislature election will be announced Monday.

More than 1,400 people died in 1913 in floods that swept through Ohio, Indiana and Texas.

Doctor recommends heart transplants for older people

CHICAGO (AP) — Heart-disease patients in their 50s and 60s should be considered routinely for transplantation, a life-saving procedure normally reserved for the young and middle-aged people, researchers say.

"I honestly think it's a mistake to categorically exclude older patients," Dr. Marc I. Lorbert of the University of Texas said during an annual meeting of transplant surgeons Friday.

"It seems crazy not to help them," agreed Dr. O. Howard Frazier, who headed the university's four-year study. "(Besides) if you can get them past the surgery, they do better than younger patients."

Most of the nation's 56 heart-transplant centers generally refuse to accept patients over 50 years old because of the high risk factors as well as a critical organ shortage.

That's slowly changing somewhat because of the new anti-rejection drug cyclosporine, which is improving older patients' chances, said Dr. Barry D. Kahan, also of the University of Texas at Houston.

Approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration in late 1983, cyclosporine suppresses the body's immune system and helps keep the body from rejecting new organs.

"With cyclosporine now, they (older patients) do just as well," said Kahan, who's transplanted kidneys into patients up to age 79.

"It's perfectly appropriate," said Dr. Anthony Monaco, president of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons. "(Besides) you can't impose that kind of select criteria — it brings out all sorts of legal and ethical issues.

A well-motivated 55-year-old might be more effective than a 25-year-old motorcyclist."

The Texas Heart Institute has performed 23 heart transplants on patients over 55 since July 1982, said Frazier. Eight of the patients were over 60. The oldest was 67.

Frazier said he initially expected a survival rate of 10 percent to 15 percent, the same for older lung-cancer patients.

He is, therefore, pleased with his results — only four of the 23 have died, all of them under 60. One died due to rejection. The others succumbed to infection.

About a fourth of all heart-transplant patients die within the first year.

"It may be that these patients have some protection" against rejecting transplanted organs, Frazier said, adding that older patients receive lower doses of anti-rejection drugs because they're more susceptible to infection.

Despite the high success rates for older patients, surgeons invariably choose young patients over those over 55 when a young donor's heart becomes available, said Frazier.

An estimated 325 people are awaiting heart transplants around the country at any one time.

The Scurry County Museum will host a Permian Basin Museum Institute Workshop on Collection Management for the Small Museum on June 7.

Sam Hoyle, a director of the U. S. Army Air Defense Artillery Museum in El Paso, will present the program. All interested persons are invited to attend, said Shirley Leftwich, museum director.

The workshop will begin at 9:30 a.m. Coffee and doughnuts will be served in the museum. A Dutch treat luncheon is planned at noon at K-Bob's. The afternoon session will include a tour of the museum's storage area and will be concluded by 3 p.m.

Registration fee for the workshop is $2 per person.

FOR CHILDREN WHO LOST TOYS IN THE RECENT TORNADO

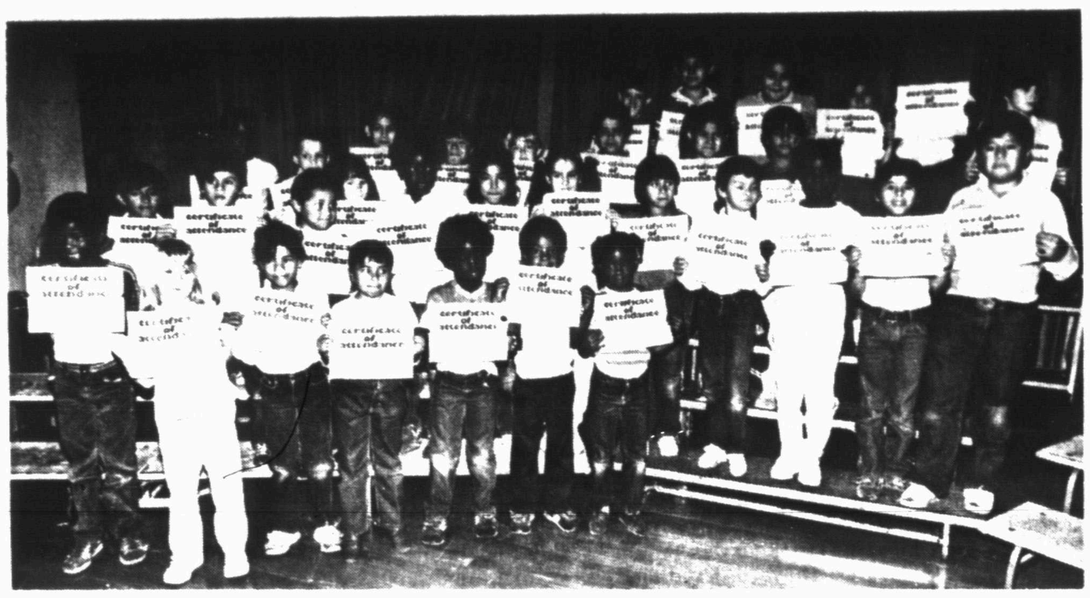

a gift from SNYDER, TEXAS

Thank you Snyder for helping make the toy program for the children of Sweetwater a successful effort. I received several thank you's from the teachers, counselors and the chamber of commerce for all of our help. In our conversations it was stressed how helpful the toy program had been in the children's attitudes. This trauma had affected the parents but very few people had realized how this tornado had affected the children. They lost so much even if they are only children. They need our help in any way we can help, the toys are one way we can help them and I am glad we came through in this manner.

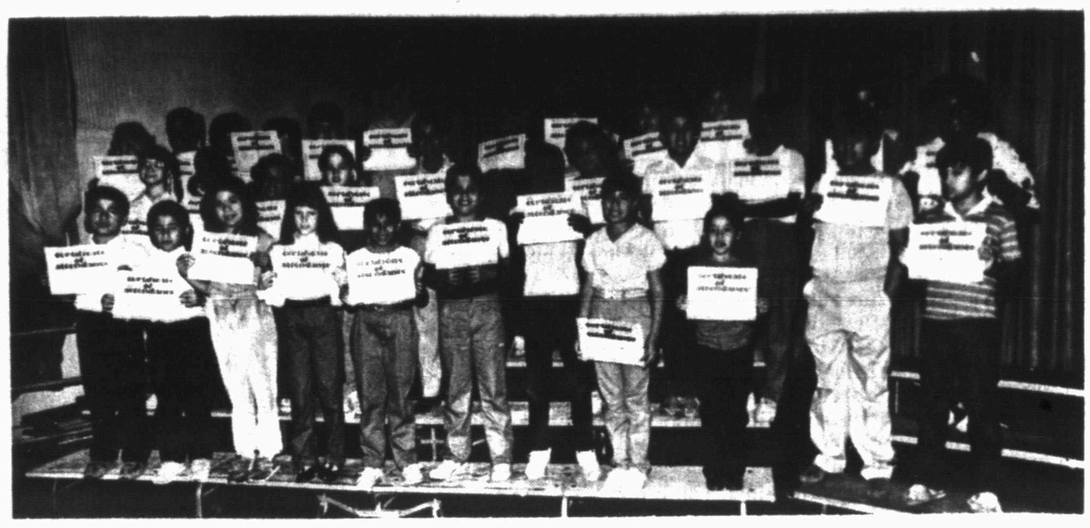

A Special Thanks to the Following:

the individuals that made donations of toys, Mundens, Burgess and Perrys for their donation of toys, the many individuals and companies for the funds that were donated, the radio station for the super job with the publicity, SCAT for their special donation, all of the employees at Ben Wilson's for all their help. We would not want to forget the children at Stanfield for the food they collected and their donations. Deep down in our hearts it sure makes us feel good to know that we have young people that care for others as these young people did for the children of Sweetwater.

Navy buries Civil War hero 105 years after his death

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy buried a forgotten hero Friday, ceremoniously carrying the remains of Civil War Medal of Honor winner James Smith to Arlington National Cemetery, "where he belongs" after lying for a century in an unmarked pauper's grave.

"This is now as it should be, only 105 years late," Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., said at a wreath-laying ceremony on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Waiting across the Potomac River at Arlington were some of the Navy's most senior admirals, ready to bury the old sailor with solemn military honors.

Smith had died in New York City in 1881 and was buried in an unmarked common grave, his earlier exploits aboard the USS Richmond at the Battle of Mobile Bay almost forgotten.

But he left behind three children. And a 20th century great-grandson took up his cause.

For the past eight years, Thomas Clarkson Brenker struggled to correct what he felt was the wrong done his great-grandfather.

"I just wanted a marker on his grave," Brenker recalled of his struggle to honor the old sailor. "But I was told they couldn't mark the grave because others had been buried in the same location over the years. Then I asked to exhume him, but the cemetery wouldn't allow that, either."

Brenker was stalemated, unable to mark Smith's grave, unable to have him removed to another site. Then, after yet another letter-writing campaign a year ago, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York and the Navy advised him the body could be exhumed if he would obtain a court order — which the church agreed not to contest.

That battle over, plans were made for a funeral mass and memorial service last week in New York City, followed by Friday's re-interment at Arlington, which had its origins as a cemetery for Civil War victims.

"Thanks to the efforts of Tom Brenker and others, James Smith can now be properly laid to rest," John Barth of the Freedom Foundation in Valley Forge, Pa., said at the Memorial Day wreath-laying ceremony at the Lincoln Memorial.

Patients' relatives relieved, angry over home shutdown

DALLAS (AP) — Relatives of residents at the Corinth Manor Nursing Home were angered or relieved after the facility was ordered closed by the state on grounds that inadequate care threatened the patients.

"Oh, thank goodness... That's what needed to be done," said Kay King, whose father was a patient at the home for 24 days until the family removed him because he appeared weak and malnourished.

Ms. King said her 74-year-old father, Frank Peterson, who suffers from Alzheimer's disease, lost 30 pounds before they removed him from the home on March 21.

"He was scared to death. He begged us to get him out," she said.

Richard Moore, a pastor at Freeway Baptist Church, said the shutdown has upset his 70-year-old aunt Pearlie B. Martin who had lived in the home for almost two years.

"She's at my sister's home right now on the porch with her head down," Moore said. "She's not happy. "It's like a family here. She got used to the people here and they all know her. They call her 'Aunt Pearlie B.' — even the nurses.

"I'm just going to be frank, I don't like it."

After a series of inspections concluded that inadequate care is threatening its patients, state health commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein on Thursday signed an emergency order to shut down the South Dallas nursing home.

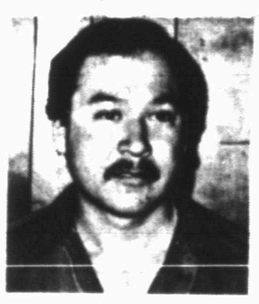

Texas Department of Health inspectors found delays in contacting patients' physicians and in dispensing medication. They also found advanced bed sores on patients, poor sanitation, an inadequate nurse-call system and what the department called "other deficiencies of patient care."

"When the home showed no significant improvement in conditions by the Memorial Day weekend, we were very concerned for the 58 patients living there, and we continued to monitor the facility on a daily basis," said Howard Allen, chief of the agency's Bureau of Long Term Care.

Betty Jean Norwood, administrator of Corinth Manor, refused to comment on the order.

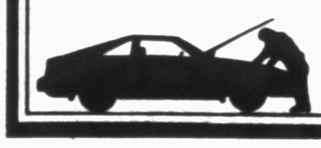

It is only the 10th closing — which by law lasts 10 days — since 1977.

SWC first major conference to approve tests for steroids

DALLAS (AP) - For the first time, a major college athletic conference has approved a plan for random sampling of athletes to detect use of steroids with the approval of such a proposal by the Southwest Conference, a conference official said.

The SWC voted Friday night in a special session to begin the testing program beginning in the fall of 1986, said Dennis Robinson, assistant conference commissioner.

The program calls for 36 football players and 14 other athletes to be tested at each school sometime during the year, Robinson told The Associated Press.

Testing will be strictly educational the first year and no penalties will be contemplated until the 1987 season, Robinson said.

"We're the first conference to pass such a program and I believe it's a positive step," Robinson said. "Of course, will still have to write the procedures and consult our legal counsel." The vote was eight for the program with one abstention.

Robinson wouldn't divulge the one SWC school abstaining.

"That wouldn't be appropriate," he said.

Robinson said the program would be for steriods only.

"Conference schools have their own individual drug testing programs," he said.

Robinson said the names of the offenders would never be released because it wouldn't be in the best interest of the student-athlete.

TCU Athletic Director Frank Windegger said releasing the names would violate the Buckley Amendment, a federal statute that protects the student-athlete's right to privacy. The Buckley Amendment prohibits releasing personal information about an individual without that person's consent.

Jackie Sherill, Texas A&M football coach and athletic director, said he favors testing but doesn't think there should be a conference program.

"Each school should have their own tests and then a member of the conference should go to each institution to make sure it is being properly administered," Sherril said.

The steroid testing proposal was made in April by Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds.

He proposed that the SWC test 50 football players for steroids two weeks into fall practice. That proposal was amended to include 36 football payers and 14 from other sports.

Arizona posts comeback win

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - After its 8-7, come-from-behind victory over Maine in the College World Series, Arizona doesn't have to play until Monday. It might take that long for some of the Wildcats to come down out of the clouds.

"This was the biggest hit of my life," said Dave Shermet after his two-run, two-out homer in the bottom of the ninth lifted Arizona, which trailed 7-0 after 6½ innings, to its victory over Maine Friday night.

"Last year I hit two home runs in the regionals but nothing can compare to this," the sophomore said. "After (Pat) Waid ground out, I thought, OK, they've left it up to me. I like pressure situations."

The win puts fifth-ranked Arizona, 46-18, into Monday's winners' bracket game against Loyola-Marymount, 50-18. The Lions edged second-ranked Louisiana State 4-3 in the tournament opener. The Tigers, 54-13, play the seventh-ranked Black Bears, 41-22, with the loser being knocked out of the double-elimination tournament.

Doubles by Billy Bean and Chris Donnels in the bottom of the eighth lifted Loyola Marymount to its win over LSU.

Western chances look good for June 16-21 National Finals Rodeo

Western Texas College makes its bid at the College National Finals in Bozeman, Mont., June 16-21 and Coach Bob Doty likes the school's prospects.

"I think this group is just as strong depth-wise as we have even had at the finals. There aren't any weak hands on the team and we're entered in as many events as we ever have been - a lot more than last year," said Doty.

Western qualified both a men's team and a women's team to the national event. The women's team finished first in the Southwest Region. The men were runnersup to Tarleton State University.

The six-member men's squad is led by the Southwest Region's runnerup all-around cowboy, Bliss Mayhan, who placed in both the saddle bronc and bareback at nationals last season. A sophomore from Kim, Colo., Mayhan will be entered in the bareback, saddle bronc and bull riding.

Other sophomores on the squad are Mike Carrillo and Tobin Tate. Carrillo, from Kingsville, will compete in the bareback where he finished third in the Southwest Region this season. Tate will vie in the bull riding and calf roping. He is from Clovis, N.M.

Freshmen are Keith Hudson, Jim Smith and Paul Yorks. Hudson, from Paradise, Texas, is the Southwest Region calf roping champion and will also compete in steer wrestling.

Smith, who was fourth in the calf roping in the region, will compete in the calf roping, steer wrestling and team roping. Smith hails from Del Rio.

Yorks, from Mt. Morris, N.Y., will also compete in calf roping, steer wrestling.

Several other WTC students will compete at the College National Finals Rodeo, including sophomore bareback rider Tony Hecksher, who second in the regional during the past season. Hecksher, from Australia, will not be able to contribute to WTC's team points, however.

Also competing will be Chuck Smith, from Deleware, and Cody Foster, from Memphis, Texas, who will team rope with Yorks and Jim Smith.

It will be the sixth year for the men and the second for the women, who also won first in the region in 1984.

Competing for the women will be Mistri Davis from Truth or Consequences, N.M., Shelly Eldridge from Capitan, N.M., and Niki Moist, from Star, Idaho.

Davis and Eldridge, both freshmen, will compete in the breakaway roping, goat tying and barrels. Moist, a sophomore, will compete in the goat tying and breakaway roping.

Rockets need inspiration believes Akeem Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) - Akeem Olajuwon thinks the Houston Rockets may need a little inspiration in their NBA championship playoff series with the Boston Celtics.

"When we're playing in front of our home crowd, we'll be more fired up, we'll be playing with full intensity," Olajuwon said. "We will be a different team for sure."

Houston's fans will have a chance to be a factor for the first time in the series Sunday at 2:30 CDT when the Rockets host the Celtics in the third game of the best-of-7 series at The Summit.

Boston leads the series 2-0 following Thursday night's 117-95 blowout victory in steamy Boston Garden. The fourth and fifth games of the series alo are scheduled in Houston Tuesday and Thursday.

"When we go home, we need to be confident," Houston's Ralph Sampson said.

"I feel good about playing at home. We play in our own gym, sleep in our own beds and eat our own food. What we need to do is play defense, rebound and run."

The Rockets have been blown out in the third quarter in each of the first two games of the series and the Celtics are starting to sense that they are taking control of the young Rockets.

"They'll have to beat us four of five games," Kevin McHale said. "That will be tough the way we're playing."

The Celtics have lost only three times in their last 33 games. They have lost only one playoff game to four playoff opponents and could become the winningest club in NBA history if they sweep the Rockets.

"We're not afraid to play in their building," Celtic forward Larry Bird said. "The pressure's on them. "If they lose that game, they're in trouble.

"I feel if we come in and win the game on Sunday, we probably can win another championship."

Trouble already is here for the Rockets. Only four teams in NBA history have recovered from an 0-2 start to win the NBA title.

"This was the worst game of the season," Olajuwon said of Thursday night's effort. "I am ashamed. We didn't look like the team that brought us here."

The Celtics have won 40 consecutive home games and had the best home record in the NBA for the regular season, losing only one of 41 home games.

Kansas City gives Rangers a 'Royal' shellacking, 12-2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Rudy Law hit three doubles and scored four runs and Steve Balboni and Willie Wilson each homered Friday night to power the Kansas City Royals to a 12-2 rout of the Texas Rangers.

Dennis Leonard, 5-4, gave up six hits through seven innings, struck out four and walked one before giving way to Scott Bankhead. The loss went to Bobby Witt, 2-4.

Two Texas outfielders left the game with minor injuries. Pete Incaviglia twisted the knuckle on the middle finger of his left hand while striking out in the fifth and Gary Ward was hit by a pitch in the first. X-rays on Ward's left elbow were negative, a Rangers spokesman said.

Wilson led off the Royals' first with his fourth home run, then Lonnie Smith walked and scored on Law's first double. A groundout sent Law to third and he made it 3-1 on an infield out by Frank White.

Law walked in the third, took second when Witt threw wildly to first on an attempted pickoff, and scored when shortstop Curtis Wilkerson threw wildly to first.

Balboni doubled leading off the fourth and went to third on an infield out. After Smith walked, Law doubled to score Balboni and put Smith at third. Mickey Mahler then relieved Witt and surrendered a two-run single to George Brett.

Balboni hit his seventh home run leading off the fifth. The Royals loaded the bases in the sixth on Law's double, Brett's walk and White's single. Hal McRae then unloaded a two-run single and Balboni brought White in with an infield out.

Tigers in Wichita Falls; Pecos plays here Monday

Rain and threats of more rain have made planning for the regional playoffs about as certain as rolling the dice at Las Vegas but officials are hoping dates are now set.

The three-game playoff between Pecos and Weatherford here was scrapped, then tentatively moved to Abilene for a one-game affair before being shuffled back to Snyder again. The playoff game is now scheduled for 3 p.m. Monday on Moffett Field - weather permitting, of course.

Snyder's single-game shot with Crowley had to be moved from Abilene Cooper Field to Wichita Falls because of weather conditions. The Tigers and Eagles were to square off at 1 p.m. Saturday.

The eventual winners of the two playoffs will meet next week sometime in the Class 4A state quarterfinals. The victor will advance to the state tournament in Austin.

Judicial probe funds okayed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis says he will grant Rep. Frank Tejeda's request for more state funds to expand his House Committee on Judicial Affairs investigation of alleged misconduct involving Texas Supreme Court justices.

"If he needs some help, I will give him all the support he needs," Lewis told the San Antonio Express-News Friday.

Tejeda and Lewis said they will meet this week to discuss beefing up resources of the committee, which has already held hearings in San Antonio and Austin.

Tejeda is expected to ask Lewis to approve interim, but as yet unspecified, funding to hire an attorney experienced in criminal law and professional investigators to assist the committee in its probe.

Lewis said he has the authority as House speaker to approve special funding for the committee, which in turn has the power to carry out the investigation.

Lewis said he supports the committee investigation because "that's what the Legislature is for."

So far, the committee has used lawyers for the Texas Legislative Council to provide legal advice in the probe. Tejeda said he hasn't decided what extra resources to seek.

Reports persisting of economic plan

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Is the Mexican government secretly putting the finishing touches on an Aztec Plan that would deliver a series of shocks to the seriously ailing economy to try to restore it to health?

The reputed plan has been widely debated in the press. It would, according to the reports, be roughly patterned after the strong measures taken in Brazil and Argentina to correct their economies.

The measures would temporarily freeze wages and prices, create a new currency pegged to the U.S. dollar and adjust fiscal and monetary policies to reduce inflation and interest rates, according to the accounts.

The plan has gained such credence that Budget and Planning Secretary Carlos Salinas de Gortari recently found it necessary to deny its existence.

Even in private, high-level government officials insist the plan is a fabrication, although they do acknowledge that the measures Argentina and Brazil adopted — wage and price controls and a new currency — are being monitored.

"It would be dumb not to be screening what the other guys are doing and learning from their successes and mistakes," said a senior government economist, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Still, the reports persist that the government is on the verge of unveiling the measures.

"The Mexican government has been contemplating this plan. There's no doubt about it," said Jonathan Heath, senior economist with the private Mexican forecasting project of CIEMEX-Wharton Inc. in Philadelphia.

Rogelio Ramirez de la O, director general of the private consulting firm of Ecanal in Mexico City, said, "I think something was presented to the president (Miguel de la Madrid), but I don't think it went beyond the first presentation. I don't think the president liked it at all."

"The consensus at the decision-making level," he added, "is that it is too risky."

Heath said such a plan should be put in place only if the government is able to renegotiate its foreign debt of nearly $100 billion to reduce the interest payments which are a heavy drain on resources.

Without reducing the debt payments, he said, "implementing economic reform at this stage won't solve anything."

The prospect of radical change comes as government officials are negotiating with the International Monetary Fund on a new aid package to help Mexico with its financial troubles.

The economy has been hard hit by the collapse of oil prices in the international market. Analysts predict the economy will, if it hasn't already, slide into a recession this year. Inflation is expected to soar, perhaps hitting 100 percent. It was 63.7 percent last year.

The IMF talks reportedly have been slow, with the IMF and Mexico having a difficult time reaching agreement on a new target for Mexico's red-ink spending.

The IMF technicians are pushing Mexico to drastically reduce its budget deficit as a percentage of the gross national product. The IMF, according to an international banker who spoke on condition of anonymity, wants the deficit reduced to 7.7 percent this year, from the 9.9 percent of 1985.

Mexican officials, though, fear they will not be able to meet such a goal and project a deficit of at least 12 percent.

Commercial bankers who make up Mexico's 13-member advisory group for its foreign debt were scheduled to meet last Tuesday, but the meeting was postponed to give more time to work out a plan with the IMF, according to the banker. An IMF package would give Mexico about $1 billion in aid.

The bankers want Mexico to come to terms with the international financial organization before they begin discussing any request for fresh bank loans, possibly in the range of $2 billion to $3 billion.

Mexico needs the additional money partly to make up for the lost revenue expected from plunging oil prices.

High school senior drowns, body found

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — Hours after underwater search teams retrieved an 18-year-old youth's body in Lake Cherokee, his fellow high school seniors wept as they honored him at their graduation ceremony.

"We come before you tonight as the graduating class of 1986, but we are incomplete," class valedictorian Derek Chamness, one of 43 seniors graduating from Tatum High School, said Friday night.

Stephen Allen's chair on the front row was empty, except for his green graduating cap and a red carnation.

Allen's body was found in the lake Friday afternoon, one day after he drowned while attempting to swim to shore.

Taxes projected to rise 40 percent taxes as required last year, the college district's old rate of some eight cents would have to go to approximately 11 cents. Last year, the college rate generating tax income of some $43 on a $50,000 home. This would go to $56 with an 11 cent rate.

City tax values are approximately the same and the corresponding bill for a $50,000 home would remain at about $128 using the tax rate of some 25 cents.

All of the estimates noted above assume no changes in the amount of tax dollars required this year compared to last — facts that will not be known until each entity completes budget planning this summer.

Declining oil production and the recent plunge in price per barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude are the two major factors producing an overall decline in the county's tax base this year.

Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler noted an increase in real estate and personal property values helped bolster the decline somewhat.

Figures released April 30 by Thomas Y. Pickett and Associates — the firm hired to estimate oil values — indicate that overall the county will lose some 40 percent of its tax base. Peveler noted that the county realized some $1.7 billion in oil values for 1985. Values are only expected to hit just under $1 billion for 1986 — a decline of almost 43 percent.

In remarks made to officials with each jurisdiction, Grant Hammond, an engineer with Pickett, noted that production will continue to decline between 18 and 20 percent each year. "The tax base future is at a critical stage in its life no matter what the price is. You're looking at a terminal tax base from what you've enjoyed for nearly the last 40 years," he said.

Peveler noted that although oil values are down overall, the figures reflect some $10 million in added values due to new leases.

The addition of approximately $8.5 million in real estate and personal property to the tax roll offered the sole bright spot in the tax value picture.

That increase will primarily benefit the City of Snyder which will see a slight rise in its tax base now estimated at some $283 million — up from about $280 million last year.

Regarding agricultural values, Peveler added that a change in government regulations will hold those values at approximately last year's levels.

During hearings scheduled for July 16-17, the Appraisal Review Board will examine property valuations. The board has the power to raise or lower those figures based on its findings. "Changes are usually made only for limited reasons, like an error brought to their attention," Peveler said.

Board members must also approve any changes, except clerical changes in name or address, to the tax roll.

Once the values have been verified, maximum effective tax rates will also be certified. Changes in the values could spell slight changes in the maximum effective tax rates as well.

Certified values and their corresponding estimated maximum effective tax rates for each entity are listed below. As an example, the WTC rate of .0869 equals more than 8½ cents and the Hermleigh ISD rate of 1.1066 equals more than $1.10 per $100 valuation. The rates include:

—Scurry County: taxable value at almost $1.5 billion with an estimated effective tax rate of .2698, up from .1765 last year.

—WTC: taxable value at slightly more than $1.5 billion with an estimated effective tax rate of .1123, up from .0869 last year.

—Snyder ISD: taxable value at some $1.3 billion with an estimated effective tax rate of .8130, up from .5150 last year.

—City of Snyder: taxable value at some $285 million with an estimated effective tax rate of .2541, down from .2550 last year.

—Ira ISD: taxable value at almost $152 million with an estimated effective tax rate of .7027, up from .5320 last year.

—Hermleigh ISD: taxable value at some $32 million with an estimated effective tax rate of 1.1066, up from .965 last year.

Assault report filed locally

Police investigated a misdemeanor assault complaint shortly after midnight Friday.

A suspect in that case was identified but no arrest was made.

Appeal denied in Bhakta case

dicated improper procedures on the part of the grand jury for failing to discover the actual cause of death prior to returning the indictment.

The appeals court overuled that objection noting that expert testimony of doctors and pathologists introduced in the trial supported the theory — also presented in the indictment — that Kumud Bhakta died from choking.

Quoting a similar case from 1984, the court noted "if there is sufficent evidence to prove one of the two ways of committing the offense, this Court need not consider whether the evidence is also sufficient to support the alternative theory."

In the second major area of appeal, Greene argued that he had not been informed prior to the trial of an oral statement made by Bhakta to police concerning an argument between himself and his wife on the night previous to her death.

That statement was later introduced into evidence at the trial as part of police reports concerning the incident.

On that point, the appeals court held that the statement in question did not constitute "exculpatory evidence" — an indication that knowledge of the statement would not have greatly aided the defense.

Bhakta remains in the custody of the Texas Department of Corrections serving his 18-year sentence.

In the Morris case, the defendant argued that his conviction and sentence to two years in the county jail and a $500 fine was unlawful because of references to a previous DWI conviction in 1981 in the indictment.

Morris had argued that the 1981 conviction should have been suppressed since he was not represented by counsel at that misdemeanor proceeding and did not understand the effects of the guilty plea he entered at that time.

The appeals court cited certified copies of the 1981 misdemeanor proceedings which contained a waiver of appointed counsel signed by the defendant in overuling the appeal.

Woman upset by what police see as favor

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A woman irked over what police saw as a favor has plastered signs on her car and front door protesting what she calls an invasion of privacy.

Since police entered her home April 25 to check on a possible burglary, Jann Haddad has put up signs including one that reads, "Officers of the El Paso Police Department are requested (since I have no rights) to refrain from searching my home without a search warrant."

Buffalo plan

Words cannot express our thanks for the many acts of love shown during our loved one's sickness and death.
A special thanks to Dr. Gibson, Gayle, Kathy, Dr. Miller, Dr. Pate, the Nurses in CCU, and everyone in the hospital and Snyder Nursing Center, for their thoughtfulness and kindness.
May God bless each in a special way.
The Family of Henry Layne

Thanks

Reference to notice of thanks on April 27, signed The Family of Nona Cumbie:

So we wish to add a special thanks to Dr. Carl Dillaha who was and had been Moma's personal doctor for a number of years. Also, Snyder Nursing Home and Staff and Sndyer's finest neighbors - Marie & Bo Moffett, the Horsley's and her true friends. And appoligize for the way the flowers were handled.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

Although organized in the area in 1973, Tejas CowBelles may be the county's least recognized women's group. But a handful of local members hope to heighten its public image.

Martha Huddleston, an active Scurry County member, explained that women from Colorado City, Big Spring and Snyder compose the local unit. "We meet once each month and alternate meeting places among the three cities," she said.

The national organization began when an informal group of 14 wives of Arizona cattlemen met on Oct. 17, 1939, in Douglas, Ariz., to brainstorm ideas "to promote friendly and social relations among cattle people and to cooperate for the best interest of our industry, our community and our country."

Informal cells continued to meet during state cattlemen meetings. By 1952, the loose-knit groups had enough representatives meeting in conjunction with the national convention of the Cattlemen's Association in Fort Worth to organize.

Currently boasting some 11,000 members, the organization focuses on working on solutions to beef industry problems, promoting the importance of the industry to the nation's economy and educating consumers on the nutritional value of beef products.

"So many people think they shouldn't eat beef. But if you eat small quantities, you can get more nutrition with fewer calories," Martha explained.

As an example, she noted that a large chef salad — a popular entree enjoyed by dieters — actually contains more calories and cholesterol than a regular sized hamburger.

If made with lettuce, tomatoes, an ounce each of lean chicken, lean ham and cheese, two carrot strips and two tablespoons of salad dressing and served with six saltine crackers, the salad will contain 700 calories and 746 milligrams of cholesterol.

A four-ounce hamburger patty on a regular-sized bun with lettuce, tomato, catsup and a dill pickle and eaten with one-fourth a cantaloupe provides 585 calories and 120 milligrams of cholesterol.

CowBelle members are quick to point out that beef can be lower in both calories and cholesterol level than other meat products. According to the National Cattleman's Association, three ounces of cooked lean beef contains some 73 milligrams of cholestrol. By comparison, the same amount of roast chicken contains 76 mg; fried chicken, 74 mg; pork, 77 mg; shrimp, 130 mg. and cheddar cheese, 90 mg.

In terms of calories, three ounces of lean roast beef contains 169 calories while the same size serving of top loin (strip) steak contains about 195 calories. By comparison, the same amount of baked chicken without skin contains 174 calories while fried chicken with skin contains 209.

In the past, the local group has distributed nutrition packets to second grade students. Currently, its members distribute copies of the "Texas Cook Book" for $6.

Members also try to influence legislation at the national and state level through their legislative committee. "The legislative chairman in each unit tries to keep abreast of political activities that will affect the industry," Martha explained. "This person will initiate letter writing or calling campaigns to reach congressmen on issues affecting farming and ranching in general."

Lucille Sterling of Big Spring serves as the state organization's president.

Each spring, the organization hosts a farm tour for fourth grade students at Coahoma and an educational exhibit at the county fair in each of the three counties.

To promote the nationwide "Beef for Fathers' Day" program, local members are sponsoring a "Beef Trivia Game." Interested individuals submit answers to the following questions to June Wall, Box 322, Snyder, by June 9. A drawing to determine the winner of a $25 beef certificate will be held among all those with correct answers on each item.

The questions include:

—Where did the hamburger originate?

—How many pounds of T-bone steak do we get from the average beef carcass?

—What are the three major grades of beef?

—How many calories are in a three-ounce serving of sirloin steak?

—How much of the fat in beef is saturated? a. 100 percent; b. 73 percent; c. 48 percent.

—In comparing beef with chicken; a. beef has the same amount of cholesterol as chicken; b. beef has more cholesterol than chicken; c. beef has less cholesterol than chicken.

—How much zinc is found in a serving of beef? a. three times that of chicken; b. twice that of chicken; c. same as chicken.

—A roast is medium-rare when it is cooked to what temperature?

—What's the difference between a steak and a roast?

—How much beef per person was consumed last year?

—How did "sirloin steak" get its name?

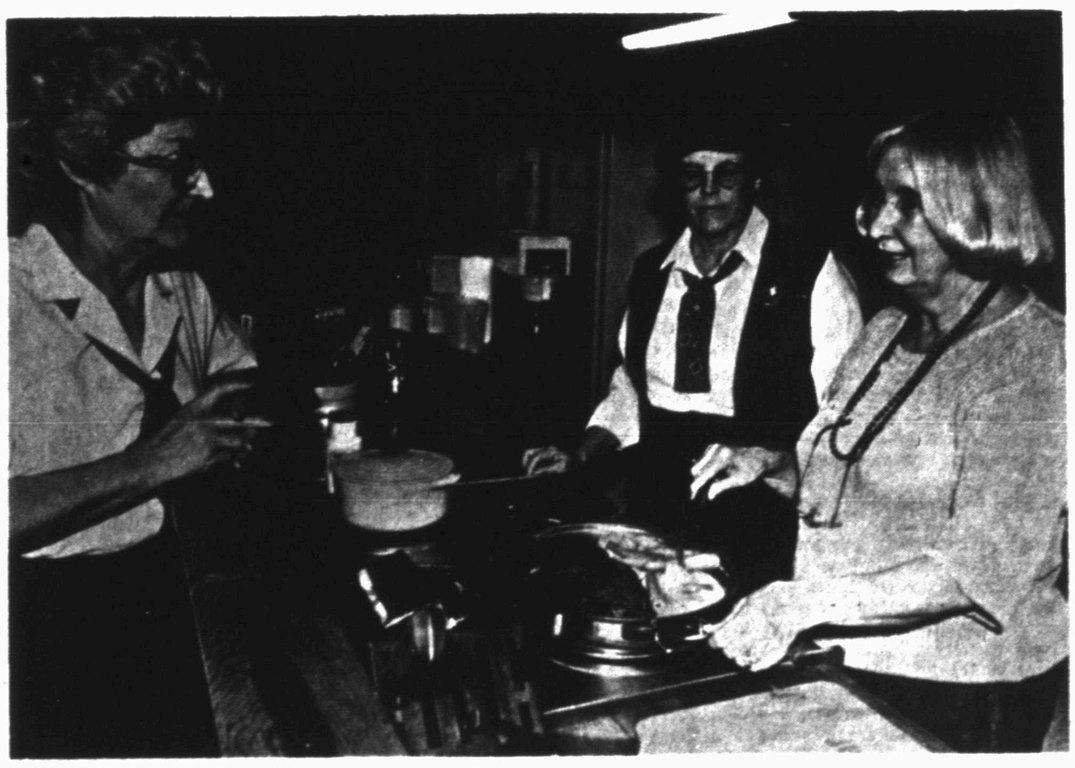

—What lady made the phrase "Where's the beef?" famous?

—Which are the 10 top cattle producing states?

—From what cut of beef do we get pastrami?

—What favorite campfire food is made from a by-product of the beef animal?

Martha noted that any woman involved in any form with the beef industry is invited to join the local chapter. "Some husbands are in the cattle feeding business or even connected with packing houses. Our only stipulation is that she be involved with the beef industry in any way."

SERVING UP BEEF — Jean Everett and Martha Huddleston watch as Jean Bullard prepares a chuck roast. At slightly less than $5, the three and a half pound roast can provide two meals for a family of four. The women believe "that's a bargain at any price." (SDN Staff Photo by Noble B. Young)

Group chooses theme

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Professional Secretaries International has chosen the theme "Expanding Our World" for Professional Secretaries week April 20-26. Officials note it will emphasize global recognition of secretaries and their changing duties and responsibilities in today's automated office.

"Flowers, candy and lunch are not the focal point of Professional Secretaries Week, educational development and professionalism are," says PSI president Carolyn S. Hayes, pointing out that "the commercialism has been inspired from outside the ranks of secretaries.

"This year's theme reemphasizes the twofold purpose of Professional Secretaries Week: to increase public awareness of the vital role played by secretaries in business, industry, education, government and the professions, and to reaffirm the dedication of secretaries to professional performance of their responsibilities," she adds.

Americans rank taste, quality and nutrition as the primary reasons for buying seafood, according to the Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel. It says seafood is prepared in 61 percent of American homes at least three times each month.

Getting it back with interest

By James Jacoby

It is a sound principle of rubber bridge that you should not make a close double of a part-score contract, since the opponents may end up making an easy game-bonus if either your judgment or your defense is faulty. The same rules do not apply to tournament play. If you are not allowed to play a part-score that you could make, you may then find it necessary to make a somewhat risky double to get back to par or better on the deal. That is what happened on today's deal. When South continued with three hearts, East decided to double. He had just too many A-K combinations to let North-South run over him. Accurate defense, aided by a well-chosen suit-preference signal, justified his boldness.

West led the spade queen and then the jack, which East overtook with the king. East cashed his spade ace and then played the diamond king. West encouraged with the seven but when the ace of diamonds was cashed, East played the jack. This unusually high card was a clear command to partner to play back the 13th spade if he had it. East quickly did just that, promoting West's heart queen to a trick. Down two — 300 — was more than enough to compensate for the 110 that East-West would have scored in three diamonds.

In Telkwa, B.C.

Williamson, Ehalt unite

TELKWA, B.C. — Kelly Williamson became the bride of Garth A. Ehalt May 17 in Eddy Park in Telkwa, British Columbia. Officiating the afternoon double-ring ceremony was Rev. Rod Fowler of United Church in Smithers, B.C.

Parents of the couple are Jim and Kay Bennett of Topley, B.C. and the late Kenneth Ray Williamson, and Erv and Irene Ehalt of Telkwa, B.C.

The bride is the grandaughter of Dotty and Bill Hart of Snyder and Lillian Williamson and the late E.H. Williamson of Snyder, and P.W. Birdsall of Pagosa Springs, Colo.

The bridal party and bride walked through an archway of pine branches and pink silk roses. The aisle was lined with pots of silk ivory dogwood blossoms trimmed with pink bows. Pine branches and pink roses decorated the registry area.

Musical selections included "Power of Love" and "Walk Hand in Hand". The songs were sung by Jan Morrison-Hines and Keith Hines of Smithers, B.C. As the mothers were escorted down the aisle by Sky Williamson, brother of the bride, "St. Elmo's Fire" was played. As guests registered "Show Me" was sung.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a full length gown with a fan shaped sweeping train of ivory brocaded satin with molded bodice trimmed in tiny covered buttons and a double collar divided with a single strand of pearls. The traditional fitted sleeves came to petite points over her hands and closed at the wrist with tiny covered buttons. The gown was enhanced with a finger tip length veil of French silk illusion attached to a cascade of tiny flowers and seed pearls. She wore pearl earrings.

Keeping with tradition, she wore her mother's wedding gown as something old. She wore a blue garter as something new and blue. She borrowed her grandmother's strand of pearls. Pennies minted in the years of the couples birthdays were worn in her shoe.

She carried a nosegay bouquet of two large catalaya orchids surrounded by pink rosebuds and baby's breath with ivory lace. Pink and forest green satin picot streamers with loveknots completed the bouquet.

Serving as maid of honor was Valarie Williamson, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Lianne and Sheley Ehalt, sisters of the groom.

Bridal attandants wore pearl pink satin brocade tea-length dresses featuring off the shoulder ruffles. The fitted bodices came to a point in front with soft gathered skirts. Combs of pink baby's breath and green leaves were worn in their hair.

They carried pink silk roses with baby's breath and greenery with layered satin picot bows and streamers of pink and forest green.

Flower girls were Kimberly and Bridget Westman, the bride's nieces. They wore forest green taffeta ruffled dresses. Their pink hats were trimmed with tiny flowers and seed pearls. Streamers of pink and forest green completed the hats.

Frank Holzer of Prince George, B.C. was best man. Bill Dutch of Vancouver, B.C. and Marcell Ehalt, brother of the groom were groomsmen.

The groom wore a classic black tuxedo with pink bow tie and cumberbund. Groomsmen and ushers wore the classic black tuxedos.

An open house was hosted by the couple in their new home until the reception was held in the Telkwa Community Hall. The hall was decorated in the chosen colors of pink and forest green. George Marchildon served as master of ceremonies.

The bride's table was covered in pink with floor-length ivory lace overlay. Pink silk rosebuds and orchids with touches of forest green streamers decorated the tiered wedding cake. Lorna Oleson Ofner and Grace Sullivan Bell served at the bridal table.

Miniature forest and logging decor was used on the groom's cake with mints and squares.

The couple went to Hawaii for their honeymoon.

Graduating from Houston Secondary School in 1980, the bride attended College of New Caledonia, Prince George, B.C. She is employed by Pacific Inland Resources in Smithers, B.C.

The groom is a graduate of Smithers Secondary School and British Columbia Institute of Technology. He is employed by Houston Forest Products.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at Telkwa Fire Hall. Wedding showers for the bride were given in the home of Irene Marchildon and Trina Storey.

Out of town guests were from Saskaton, Annaheim, Lanigan, Middlelake, Humboldt, Saskatchewan, Panoka, Alberta, Vancouver and Tsawwassen, B.C. Also Snyder, Pagosa Springs, Colo. Jasper, Alberta and San Diego, Calif.

Seniors exercise

Robert H. Jamieson has put into a book the exercise programs he developed for retirement-home residents.

"Exercises for the Elderly" (Taplinger Publishing Co., 132 West 22nd St., New York, NY 10011), even uses as models in its exercise photos two people over 80.

The program is structured to include both mobile and handicapped people and is planned to escalate from an easy start to a safe maximum for older persons. Since well-planned exercise is good for people of any age, this book for those over 65 is a good investment, at a modest $6.95.

Book Review

IN THE PENNY ARCADE. By Steven Millhauser. Knopf. 166 Pages. $14.95.

August Eschenburg is a genius with an obsession.

Eschenburg, the protagonist of a long story which bears his name as its title, is obsessed with what, to him, was "the only thing that mattered: the creation of living motion by the art of clockwork ... the precise imitation of all human emotions."

Eschenburg's story is set in Germany in the years just prior to World War I. The son of a small town clockmaker, Eschenburg becomes enchanted with clocks as a child, believing that in the real world "it was always a certain time" while in his father's clock-filled shop it "was many times together and therefore, in a way, no time at all."

As he matures, Eschenburg turns his talent for clockmaking to creating automatons powered by clock mechanisms which look astonishingly human as well as beautifully perform human motions.

When his genius is recognized by the outer world, efforts are made to coarsen and corrupt his art in the name of profit. Eschenburg resists as best he can, but it is a losing battle, and the story of his rise and fall is wonderfully detailed by author Steven Millhauser.

Six other Millhauser stories make up his "In the Penny Arcade." All of them provide fine reading as Millhauser demonstrates his remarkable skill for using words sparingly but in such a way that they create a much larger world than the one described.

The title story is a good example. Here a boy of 12 steps "from August sunshine into the shadows of the penny arcade." What he finds in this world of illusion both saddens and elates him at the same time. When he emerges from the arcade, he still retains his sense of wonder although he is no longer a child.

Diego Rivera art exhibition set

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — To mark the 100th anniversary of the birth of Mexican artist Diego Rivera (1886-1957), the Philadelphia Museum of Art will host the exhibition "Diego Rivera: A Retrospective" June 1-Aug 10.

The museum says, "The most significant paintings and works on paper from each period of the artist's career have been assembled for the first comprehensive survey of his work to be held in this country since 1931."

Rivera was a leader of the Mexican mural renaissance of the 1920s and 1930s.

CHILDREN NEED PRACTICE, NOT PREACHING, TO LEARN SAFETY

Practice, not preaching, helps children learn safety.

Many adults unwittingly allow their children to face danger in daily life without giving them the right kind of training.

Because children don't have the mental capacities of adults, they must be taught in a manner that accounts for their limitations. Child education experts agree that young children generally must experience their lessons--not just hear them.

If children are to learn safe methods, we must help them practice what we preach.

Children must be taken by the hand and shown how to do things safely. Then they should be observed to be sure they follow through when alone.

Practice, as a way of teaching, should be used to help children properly handle childhood dangers related to traffic safety, fire safety, climbing safety, proper behavior around animals, and safe use of toys. As children grow, also show them proper use of hand tools, safe use of kitchen appliances, and precautions with yard equipment.

Educators explain that demonstration saves children a big step in the mental process. To follow verbal directions, children must interpret abstract words, which are mere symbols for actions, ideas and things, and apply them to the real world. Imitation, on the other hand, allows children to bypass the interpretation stage and match their action with the action seen or practiced.

Children are much more likely to remember what they have done than what they have been told.

Because children learn by example, it is most important and essential that adults use proper safety procedures themselves--all the time and not just when teaching children.

For example, parents will often cross a street with a child in tow without a deliberate stopping motion to look for traffic. Although an adult can glance quickly at traffic and judge whether or not it is safe to cross, a child cannot. Yet, the parent who does this is unknowingly teaching the child that it is all right to cross without stopping at the curb to look for traffic.

Children will do what you do.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I plan on making a wooden glider for the backyard, the kind two people can sit on and swing back and forth. I have everything pretty well figured out and expect to use 2-by4s made of pine for most of the structure. The one thing I haven't decided on is the kind of cover to make. Have you any suggestions?

A. — An excellent cover or ceiling for the glider would be lattice molding, which will keep out most of the sun's rays but allow a little light to come through.

Q. — We want to put an addition on our house. I can't get a definite answer as to whether I need a permit for the kind of construction which merely adds on to the house rather than being a separate building. What is your opinion?

A. — See no reason why you can't find out definitely. Go to your town hall or other municipal building and find out. The chances are you will need a permit, perhaps even a variance. Don't rely on what friends or relatives tell you.

Q. — A few years ago, I installed some indoor-outdoor carpeting in our family room. I have a considerable amount of it left over. Can I use it outdoors on the patio?

A. — If it had a foam rubber backing, probably not. The key, however, is whether the carpeting was intended for outdoor use.

CLASS STUDIES ARCHITECTURAL STYLES — Mrs. Peggy English's fourth period Honors World History class has been working on a project involving the various architectural styles in Scurry County. The students have photographed different architectural styles to produce a slide program. They wrote a transcript to accompany the slides. Teddies reveal '80s-style glamour

By Florence De Santis

While lingerie designers often think in terms of glamour or sex appeal when creating their very special items of wear, they have to be practical, too.

After all, underthings provide everything from bosom support to warmth in winter, so decoration really comes second.

However, when a garment becomes an accepted part of lingerie, it's often the time to glamorize it a little.

That's happening with the teddy, the one-piece basic combining pantie and camisole, which was especially popular in the '20s.

This season, some teddies have become cousins to bodysuits, with a touch of Lycra spandex to give them stretch fit. Others are for sleeping, as in Miss Dior's ivory poly charmeuse teddy with softly pleated legs, shapely lace bodice and matching jacket.

Spring glamour teddies can be lingerie or show a little at the top of pants or skirts. At Vanity Fair, the newest teddie silhouette is cut swimsuit-style, with hip-height legs whether in lace with satin center band, in all-stretch lace or in stretch cotton with sides and neckline banded in lace. Givenchy for Boutique Industries cuts a teddy with flared legs and a scoop neckband that runs over the shoulders and is usable as lingerie, top or sleepwear.

When a teddy is lingerie-only, its top may be bra-shaped, even lightly underwired, as in Natori's apricot and ivory poly/satin with ruffled hipline and pearl-buttoned front. This ballerina look, generally designed for upscale lingerie, is the ultimate combination of function and decorative fashion.

Entirely functional, however, is something new in bra contruction this spring, conceived for wear under all the fashions with cutback shoulders. The straps of many bras and teddies veer to the center in the back and join, sometimes below the shoulder blades, sometimes high up, between them.

Vanity Fair calls this construction the V-back, and they use it on a coordinated stretch lace group of bra, camisole, teddy and slip, since cutback shoulders mean that everything worn beneath must not show straps. The V-back construction also gives non-shifting support, so Vanity Fair and other makers are using it in athletic bras of simple design and a V-back called the "racer back."

1986, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN

GLAMOUR TEDDY, as done by Vanity Fair in floral lace and V-shape midriff of Antron satin, is designed as lingerie or for sleep.

Mattox harrassed by church home enthusiasts

AUSTIN (AP) — The leader of a Tarrant County church home ordered closed by a state judge says his followers are calling Attorney General Jim Mattox at home — at all hours — to register their protests.

Mattox said the calls begin at about 1 a.m. and continue all night.

The callers talk about "all manners of things," according to Mattox.

"Everything from preaching mini-sermons to saying very insulting things toward me and my family and my staff, uttering an assortment of veiled threats all the way from being political to being physical," he said of the calls.

Some of the callers identify themselves as supporters of Pastor W.N. Otwell of the Community Baptist Church in Forest Hill, near Fort Worth, Mattox said.

A state judge has ordered the church's boys home closed because it does not have a state license. Mattox's office filed the suit to close the home.

Otwell confirmed Thursday that "some of our people are calling" Mattox.

"It's not harassment. How can it be harassment when someone can help you and all you are doing is knocking on their door and asking for relief? That's pleading. And anytime you have to do it it is proper. These people can't get to Jim Mattox during the day," Otwell said.

"If it's in the middle of the night, it's in the middle of the night," he added in a telephone interview.

Mattox said many of the calls "most certainly would not be considered very Christian."

"They are calling at one, two, three, four o'clock in the morning. I don't mean just one call. I'm talking about constant calling," he said.

"Sometimes I ask them if they had a mama that taught them any manners," Mattox said.

Otwell said any nasty calls are not coming from his backers.

The calls began last week after Otwell and his supporters returned to Tarrant County after several days in Austin. Last Wednesday, after meeting with Gov. Mark White, Otwell told his supporters that Mattox "needs a little harassment."

Mattox, who said he once planned to be a Baptist minister, said, "I don't think the Christian community in the state would approve of the kind of tactics these people are engaged in."

Texas sues feds on nuke dump site

AUSTIN (AP) — Republicans and Democrats are blaming each other for letting Texas become a finalist in the nation's search for an atomic garbage dump.

The finger-pointing circle goes like this:

— Attorney General Jim Mattox and Gov. Mark White, Democrats, say Republican U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas should do something about it.

— Gramm says he is doing something about it, and adds that Mattox is too incompetent to win a lawsuit to block the selection of a Panhandle site for the high-level nuclear waste repository.

— Mattox said GOP Vice President George Bush should be doing more to help Texas.

— Mattox also blamed the federal government in a lawsuit filed Thursday in federal court in Washington, challenging the decision that made a Texas Panhandle site one of three finalists. Mattox asked the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington to order the U.S. Department of Energy to start the site selection process anew.

— And, to round out the circle, White and GOP challenger Bill Clements are pointing at each other.

The Reagan administration on Wednesday announced that Deaf Smith County, Texas, and sites in Nevada and Washington state are the finalists for the high-level nuclear waste repository. A final selection won't be made until 1994.

Texas already is a party to two suits challenging the selection process. Mattox said the Panhandle site is unsuitable because it is a productive farm area and sits on the Ogallala Aquifer that supplies water for the region.

The attorney general called on Texans to contact Gramm "and tell him we expect him to get the thing stopped."

"He's supposed to have a direct line with the president," said Mattox, recalling that Gramm said in his 1984 campaign that he would be effective in opposing a Texas dump site.

"We've not seen any change in the process that would indicate his ability to get that done," Mattox said.

White agreed with Mattox, saying Gramm "is supposedly at the right hand of the president every moment" and should be able to help block the dump from winding up in Texas.

In a statement released by his Washington office, Gramm said he and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, would make sure "that Texas political opposition" to the nuclear dump is heard.

"Unfortunately, given Mr. Mattox's inability to carry through a successful lawsuit, the interest of the people of Texas will have to be represented by my work with Sen. Bentsen here in Washington," Gramm added.

Spelling Bee winner says he's good at spelling words

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jon Pennington said that at times in the final minutes of the National Spelling Bee his mind would go blank, but when he heard the word he'd have to spell to win the competition he thought, "Oh, goody, goody."

The word "odontalgia" was one he knew, and that was all the 14-year-old from Shiremanstown, Pa., needed to put him over the top and become champion of the 59th spelling bee.

The key to his success, he casually told reporters later, was a natural ability.

"It's just something I'm good at," the tall, brown-haired eighth-grader said.

Asked what separated him from the 173 others he beat in the two-day spelling bee, he said modestly, "I'm luckier."

But soon pride eclipsed his modesty, and he signed autograph books for his fellow competitors, "Jon Pennington the champion."

Jon took the title after a see-saw duel with Kenneth A. Larson, a 13-year-old seventh-grader known as Andy from Tequesta, Fla., who was competing in the bee for the third time.

In that final round Jon misspelled his first two words but spelled the next six correctly.

Under the rules for the final round, when one contestant misspells a word, the other contestant must spell that word correctly and another word to win.

Restaurant drapes red flag to judge

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A grand jury is expected to settle a dispute over whether a restaurant's drapes made out of the state standard are a desecration of the Lone Star banner.

Republic of Texas restaurant owner Hugh Reed says the curtains are part of his penchant for Texas lore, such as the live longhorn friends gave him for his 40th birthday.

But county Court-at-Law Judge Hollis Godfrey disagrees.

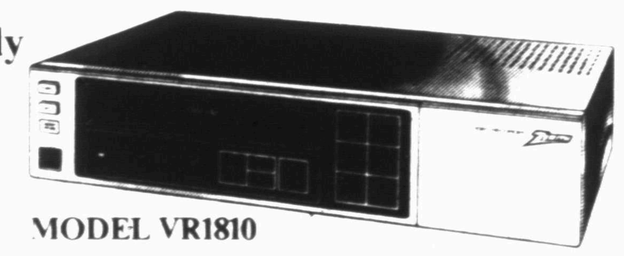

"They took flags of Texas and made them into curtains for eight windows. They are folded over and sewed, hanging on curtain rods," he said.

Desecration of a venerated object such as the flag is a Class A misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Dear Abby

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please help my husband and me handle a sensitive problem involving a couple who are our very dear friends. "Tom" and "Mary" have been married about 10 years and have two beautiful children. We noticed in the last four or five months that Tom has been moody and depressed. He and Mary were always so loving to each other; now he hardly looks at her. Others have noticed it, too.

We just found out that Tom has been having an affair with a young woman — I'll call her Doris. She's a minister's wife with small children. Her friends say she has emotional problems and has had several affairs before this.

I feel we should tell Mary about this affair. Doris has told a few people in town and rumors are spreading. I'd like to spare Mary the humiliation of hearing it from strangers.

My husband says someone should talk to Tom about Doris' instability, her previous affairs and the gossip around town; then he might come to his senses and realize he's risking his family and career for a foolish fling.

I don't think Mary is aware of Tom's affair, but I know she's been concerned about his depression. I hate to see Tom and Mary split up, but I can't stand to see Mary made a fool of by Tom and his tramp.

What should we, as good friends, do?

VERY WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: First, I will tell you what not to do. Don't tell Mary about Tom, and don't tell Tom about Doris. But do urge Tom to see a doctor about his depression. Eventually, this will all come out in the doctor's office, which is the appropriate place for it.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married soon and my friends are throwing a bachelor party for me. I am told that this party will feature a girl who does a striptease dance. In my book, nudity is something between me and my libido (and soon, between me and my wife), and I would feel very self-conscious gawking at somebody's daughter dancing for my pleasure.

First, I don't want it. Second, it would be embarrassing for me. I know a lot of guys like this sort of thing, but I am not one of them.

I don't know what to do. Meanwhile I am ...

NERVOUS IN THE NORTHEAST

DEAR NERVOUS: Tell your friends what you have told me. It's as simple as that. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: This is a minister's response to the problem created by small children who disrupt wedding ceremonies by becoming restless, talkative and whining. The parents you wrote about pushed past the ushers who politely asked them to leave the child in the church nursery, which was staffed with licensed attendants.

You were asked, "How can a situation like this be prevented?" Your reply: "It can't, unless bouncers are enlisted!"

I have a better solution: When planning the wedding with the bride and groom, I ask their permission to make an announcement before the wedding. If they agree (and so far they all have), I walk out in front of the guests, the organist lowers the volume to almost nothing, then I say, "My name is Pastor Paul, and I have two very important requests to make on behalf of the bride and groom: The first: Please do not take any flash pictures during the ceremony. The second: If you have a small child who begins to cry, please do not wait, hoping the child will stop, but take the child out immediately so that others will be able to enjoy the ceremony."

The above has worked very well, underscoring an old adage: An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

THE REV. PAUL McKOWEN, FREMONT, CALIF.

Deaver DA is chosen

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court chose a former U.S. attorney to investigate lobbyist Michael K. Deaver, and told him to pursue all possible leads in determining whether the ex-presidential aide should be prosecuted.

Whitney North Seymour Jr., once the top federal prosecutor for New York City, was named by the court Thursday and quickly pledged to "let the chips fall where they may" in the conflict-of-interest probe.

The three-judge panel not only listed specific subjects for investigation, but said Seymour should look for "any related matters and other allegations or evidence" developed during the inquiry.

The panel, established under the 1978 Ethics In Government Act, said the probe should cover:

—Deaver's lobbying for the Canadian government.

—His lobbying to retain a tax break for businesses locating in Puerto Rico, also successful so far. The court said Deaver represented the Commonwealth government, but his office said his client was a corporation.

Federal law restricts, and in some cases bans, former federal officials from lobbying the government on issues with which they were "personally and substantially" involved.

Separate provisions of the law restrict a former government official's contact with his or her former agency, and with issues once under the official's domain. Those restrictions last one or two years, depending on the circumstances.

Each violation can lead to a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Seymour's broad mandate is a sharp contrast to that given by the court last April in its most recently ordered independent counsel investigation.

Then, the court ordered the probe of a single Justice Department official in an investigation of the withholding of environmental documents from Congress.

Speaker committee announces committee

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis has appointed a 15-member citizens committee of the "finest brainpower" in Texas to suggest ways to revitalize the state's economy.

Lewis also said his "game plan" is to avoid a tax increase.

The speaker announced the creation of the Speaker's Economic Advisory Group in a Thursday speech to the Texas Lyceum Association.

The Lyceum is a non-partisan organization dedicated to what it calls the "discussion and development of the Texas viewpoint and values."

Lewis described committee members as representing the "finest brainpower in the state of Texas" and said they would "look at what we have as a state to help us formulate a formula for the future."

Star crusaders put on show

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Along with the usual host of diplomats, the U.N. special session on Africa attracted crusaders Bob Geldof, Ted Turner, Bishop Desmond Tutu and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who each pushed his cause with undiplomatic frankness.

Geldof, the Irish rock star whose Live Aid and Sport Aid happenings have been credited with raising more than $50 million to aid African famine relief victims, on Thursday blasted the U.N. session as a farce.

His remarks drew a sharp rebuttal from Jackson.

Geldof said the session has not gone far enough to meet Africa's long term development needs, and said its draft plan of action is "filled with holes and ifs and buts."

"The U.N. is on trial at the moment," said Geldof, who assailed both East and West as "crippling factors" in Africa's attempts to recover from devastating drought and indebtedness. He advocated transforming all outstanding loans to struggling African countries into grants.

Jackson told a forum of nongovernmental organizations involved in Africa that "the West must abandon the Tarzan approach to Africa, a cultural aberration born of chauvinism."

The Baptist minister, who sought the U.S. presidential nomination at the head of the "Rainbow Coalition" in 1984, used the Tarzan analogy again in rejecting Geldof's judgment.

"I do not know of his level of authority on the United Nations," Jackson said of the Irish star.

He said Geldof's statement was arrogant and presumptuous. "It discredits his efforts more than it discredits the United Nations special session."

Checks unsigned due to malfunction

AUSTIN (AP) — About 14,000 taxpayers, mostly in Kansas, have received income tax refund checks that are not signed by the Internal Revenue Service's regional director.

The unsigned checks resulted from a malfunctioning U.S. Treasury department machine in Austin, officials said Thursday.

The machine stamps IRS Regional Director Gordon P. Hickam's signature on the refund checks at a rate of about 15,000 every 45 minutes.

The machine was out of whack for about 45 minutes late last week, according to Eugene Sides of Austin, deputy regional manager for the U.S. Department of Treasury's financial management service.

"This type of thing would normally be caught. It could have been caught through quality control procedures, but they got out," he said.

The unsigned checks, mailed last Friday, will be honored by banks, according to Sides.

Bob Branson, an IRS spokesman here, said Hickam confirmed that about 14,000 checks went out without signatures.

Treasury Department spokesman Jim LaForest in Washington said the agency, which writes 800 million checks a year, occassionally had problems with the check-signing machines.

"This has happened from time-to-time. But the checks are perfectly good. Someone who received one should just take it to the bank and the bank will process it," he said.

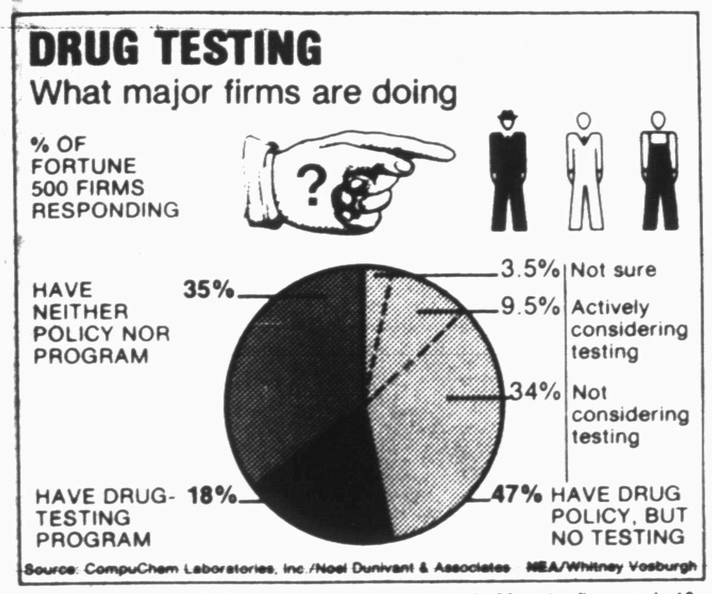

The Treasury Department has notified the Federal Reserve Bank of the serial numbers and date (May 23) of the unsigned checks, according to LaForest.

"It was a print malfunction. Sometimes the ink will run out and fade. We don't really know why it happens," he said. "Fourteen thousand is a fair amount. It's happened before for 100 at a time. Everybody knows what to do about it."

Sides said he did not know the specific problem that caused the machine to malfunction.

"From what I can tell it started working on its own again. Machines can be temperamental, like people," he said.

IRS and Treasury Department officials were eager to place the blame with the Treasury Department.

How do companies fight drug abuse? In a survey of 180 major firms, only 18 percent said they test employees or applicants for drugs. But many others at least have an anti-drug policy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't block yourself in today by putting limitations on your thinking. Instead, do just the opposite by examining in depth all of your possibilities.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be sensible and prudent regarding your spending habits today. If there are any frivolous expenditures on your list, cross them off.

HONEY A HEALER
Folk medicine - that honey hastens wound healing - has apparently been confirmed by Israeli clinicians. Mice who had unboiled honey applied to surgical wounds showed faster healing than mice whose wounds were treated in the usual way. It appears that natural honey is a honey of a healer.

Our first summer job saw us employed to kill grasshoppers, receiving ½ cent per 'hopper.

A relative paid the bounty, but we had to provide our own ammunition. Since BBs sold at the time for a nickle a cardboard tube, the profit potential at first seemed enormous.

Like most of our early job calculations, this one figured an unending crop of victims and at least a 50 percent average on the gunnery side.

Our final paycheck just barely exceeded our reach for comic books, however, leaving us begging for ammo money. Then the grasshopper plague petered out with the summer showers, and we went back to unemployment.

Happily, we might add.

In retrospect, the job offer was probably made more to get us out of the adult's hair than to rid the world of locusts.

But it started for us the annual start-up, stop routine called summer jobs — a random series of busy-work scheduled during the three-month lull when school kids were supposed to be on "vacation."

These youngsters — the "vacationing" ones — were those whose parents weren't prone to pester them about being too lazy. Parents falling into the other category — the "pestering" variety — likely calculates to 99.9 percent of free thinking West Texans.

Our folks were plainly in the majority.

As an adult, no one appreciates more than we do the rhythm and pleasure of work. But with only one notable exception, we're hard pressed to remember any summer job we ever remotely liked.

The only one remembered happily was working in an ice plant during the 100-degree days of the summer of 1967. But that is a story for another time.

Most of our summer jobs came under the category of barrel-bottom employment. Our list certainly isn't original: hoeing weeds — "choppin' cotton" when applied to rural settings — moving irrigation pipe and, that annual unfavorite of reluctant workers everywhere, mowing grass.

As we grew older, these jobs diversified into grocery store clerking — stocking millions of 303 cans between sacking and toting the same goods — and the best-paying bad job of all, roustabout work in the oilpatch.

As employment went, they were all great incentives to obtain job skills in other fields of endeavor.

We did learn some things about work, however.

—It's impossible to enjoy work you can't improve with time and skill (hoeing weeks and mowing grass are examples, both with a built-in limitation for either).

—The best jobs don't depend on the duty performed but rather the people you have to do it with.

—And nobody but nobody likes to be told what to do.

We'll have to qualify that last one. Nobody likes to be told what to do unless they want to avoid final responsibility for the work done. Then they'll take direction to Glory.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

One Christmas my sister-in-law, who lives in Dallas, gave my little boy a complete set of rain gear, a bright yellow MacIntosh, rain cap, and golashes. My husband, her brother, teased her mercilessly in the way of big brothers toward little sisters, regardless of age, about her choice of a gift.

"By the time it rains enough for him to use that," he said, "it will be two sizes too small." It was mean't to be a joke, but unfortunately, it turned out to be a prediction.

There is a peculiar sadness about a drought that pervades everything, everywhere. My friend Roland, an old-time cowboy in the best tradition, quit cowboying for a while during the drought of the Fifties. "I just got tired of seeing cattle suffer," he used to say. "I got tired of seeing calves born dead because their mamas were too weak to birth them properly."

More than one old-timer has said that the drought of the Eighties is even worse than the Fifties was. The other night I heard a local newscaster call it, "The Drought of 1984." I gave a short, dry laugh. As if that one year were all there was to it.

There is something almost magical about the first good soaking of a year that has been too dry even to produce snow. (That is, thick, wet snow that packs into hardy snowmen. Not dry, powdery stuff that melts in one day.) Up on our little hilltop place, we've watched the clouds gather all around, then move on to spawn tornadoes a couple of counties over. Or pound the earth with just enough hail to beat the grass into submission and send families huddling into their hallways and closets.

But this time we watched it coming, hazy silver sheets across the valley that gradually obliterated the landscape until gusting against the house with that full-bodied, earthy smell that sends you out to the front porch to glory in it in cozy dryness. We had company out from the Big City, and they delighted in our front-pourch vigil like children. Not many city houses have front porches anymore, you know.

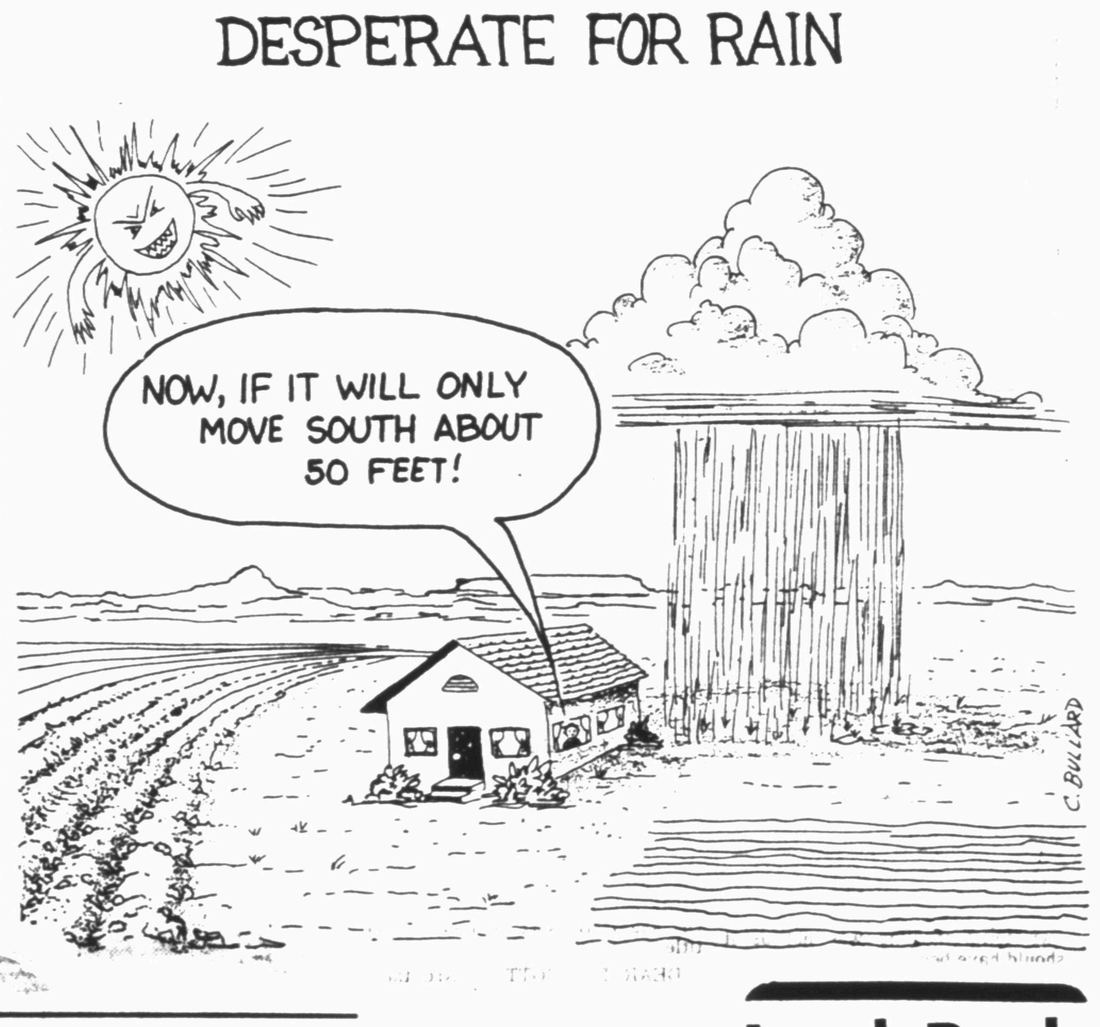

Too soon to please us, the rain passed and we saddled up to take a ride in late afternoon gold. As soon as we had traveled some distance from the house the clouds knit together overhead again and snakes of lightning crawled across the sky. "I like to take risks as much as you do," said my friend, a police officer, "but I don't know about this lightning." She was right, and we took the shortcut home with thunder rumbling at our backs and big splats of water hitting our faces. We reveled in the adventure, embellishing it mightily as we rode so that it would sound better when she returned to work, giggling breathlessly as the horses tossed their heads and the sky flashed.

That night, while we all watched a movie on the VCR, the power went out. We lit kerosene lamps and sat talking quietly in their soft glow, exchanging confidences like kids at summer camp as the rain pummeled the windows. When the lights came back on with a blink and a surprise, we were amazed to see that two hours had passed. That's the way of rain in West Texas, once you get past the scary stuff.

As our guests left the next morning, we thanked them for bringing us rain from the city. Still, the rain gauge is always a disappointment the Morning After; we only got half an inch, but nobody is complaining.

Growing up in the ciy, I never gave rain a thought unless it spoiled my daddy's golf game. I took a lot of things for granted back then.

I don't, anymore.

The bedpan: source of power

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

The bedpan is a 100-year-old contrivance that has, unfortunately, undergone few design changes during the century it has been used in hospitals. Doctors have not traditionally devoted long hours analyzing or debating the phenomenon of the bedpan — until they, as patients, are expected to use one. Then all hell breaks loose. However, after an appropriate interval of several months, we conveniently "forget" how uncomfortable the device is and continue to insist that our patients be wedded to it.

I've often considered the old metal bedpan to have more esthetic than practical value. It seems to me that the cold, shallow, scalloped contraption would be ideal for sliding on snowy hills (like metal trays) or as containers for exotic houseplants. Maybe, in fact, the thing has no esthetic value at all; but it is shiny and smooth and makes a glorious gonging sound when, empty, it is dropped on a hard floor.

The plastic bedpan attains no prestige whatsoever and is not even a suitable topic for discussion. It may be warmer to sit on, but it has no more appeal than tacky, modern, rubberized automobile bumpers. I prefer the stainless-steel or chromed forms of both old-fashioned products.

In any case, hospitals and doctors have endorsed the bedpan with such enthusiasm that the instrument should take the place of the snake-and-staff caduceus as a more fitting logo for the healing profession.

Several elegant investigations have conclusively proved that the average patient expends no more energy getting out of bed to use a commode than squiggling and worming on a bedpan. And it's a heck of a lot easier psychologically and physiologically to go to the bathroom in a sitting position than when supine.

Despite the published studies that show no overall advantage to the bedpan, doctors still demand that patients use it. I believe the reason for this particular prejudice is rooted in some vague atavistic sadism that physicians try desperately and unsuccessfully to cover up. Perhaps our own toilet training was not as it should have been.

The bedpan has become a metaphor for hospital care: If it weren't so unpleasant, everyone would want it. The bedpan is the primary reason so many sick people want to stay on their feet, in a manner of speaking. Obviously, the bedpan is the sole reason that our hospitals are not bursting with ill patients. The new Medicare rules pale into insignificance, when compared to Bedpan Power, as a force to keep people from demanding in-hospital care.

Any hospital that needs to double its census can do so almost overnight by banning bedpans. If nurses were relieved of bedpan duty, there would be raucous rejoicing by hordes of crisply starched R.N.s who would have so much unexpected leisure time on their hands that they would gratefully absorb the increasingly menial paperwork required of them. If the bedpan became a curiosity, doctors would want it back. We would claim we were being deprived of our independence and freedom of choice. To physicians, the past is always more inspiring than the future; we worship the good old days.

Patient care would suffer (according to doctors) because of "government interference." Malpractice rates would skyrocket because greedy and chary insurance companies would claim increased risk of patients vaulting over the side rails to relieve themselves, falling and breaking hips. No matter that this is a lie; the actuarial tables would prove it anyway.

The bedpan is the source of all medical woes. It could become The Cause of the 1980s. We may properly excrete all our venom and frustration into (and take out our resentments on) the bedpan. This object of hate and defilement is designed to accept our emotional, as well as our physical, wastes. It serves no purpose other than to put a red ring on humanity's behind.

I'll bet you can sense my growing intellectual momentum. Yes, Hallelujah, brothers and sisters! What a revelation! The entire medical profession (now known familiarly as the mega-corporate-federal-health-maintenance-conglomerate) is ready to topple because it rests on ... the bedpan.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

No answers yet about arthritis

DEAR DR. GOTT — What is your opinion about the theory that osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis are caused by an amoeba? I heard that this is being researched at three medical schools, but that the Rheumatoid Disease Foundation and the American Medical Association doesn't approve.

DEAR READER — Osteoarthritis is caused by the natural wearing away of joints that occurs with age. Rheumatoid arthritis is a form of joint inflammation. I am not aware of the AMA's position on amoebas as a cause of rheumotoid arthritis. Although there is a study in progress to investigate this possibility, I believe that the reports are, as yet, inconclusive.

DEAR DR. GOTT — It seems that my liver does not expel iron. I am a moderate drinker, but my doctor thinks I'm a real lush. What causes this type of liver ailment and what damage can be done?

DEAR READER — Toxic levels of iron can build up in the liver and in other structures. Iron overload can result from the faulty regulation of iron absorption and from repeated blood transfusions. If you are a heavy drinker, your liver problem is more likely to be caused by alcohol than by iron. Often the people in a drinker's environment are more reliable judges of the amount consumed. Listen to your doctor and get off the booze.

Iron itself is toxic to the liver. If you do have iron overload, more specific treatment will be necessary; you can obtain further information from the Iron Overload Diseases Association, 224 Datura St., Suite 912, West Palm Beach, FL 33401.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had a glucose-tolerance test and have hypoglycemia. The doctor says it's due to a pancreatic disorder and adrenal insufficiency. Can a high-protein diet take care of these problems?

DEAR READER — A high-protein diet may help, but only if you simultaneously reduce the sugar you eat.

I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report on HYPOGLYCEMIA. Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 plus their name and address to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Are there blood tests that can definitely indicate the paternity of a child?

DEAR READER — By determining the blood type of the child, its mother and its father, specialists can often prove paternity. More often, the paternity can be disproved. Nothing in laboratory testing is truly definite, but blood-typing can tell a great deal. Fortunately, we have progressed beyond the old saying that maternity is a matter of fact, paternity a matter of opinion.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I'm only 35 and I'm getting gray hair. What can I do about it, other than using hair coloring?

DEAR READER — I'm not aware of any natural means to get rid of gray hair. It's in the genes.

Purple heart to be awarded

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A Purple Heart medal for burns received in the terrorist bombing of a West Berlin discotheque will be presented to a soldier undergoing treatment at Brooke Army Medical Center, officials say.

Spec. 4 David Jackson will be awarded the medal as soon as orders, which were mailed Thursday from Washington, are received, a BAMC spokesman said Thursday.

Jackson is in satisfactory condition with second- and third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body, wounds inflicted during the April 5 bombing, hospital officials say.

Maj. Bruce Bell, an Army spokesman in the Pentagon, said Jackson will join 38 other Army soldiers and two members of the Air Force who earlier received Purple Hearts for wounds sustained in the La Belle disco bombing that injured 63 Americans and 167 others.

The attack led to the April 14 U.S. air strike on Libya.

Jackson was in critical condition until May 1, when his condition was upgraded to serious. It was changed to satisfactory this week.

Hurricane warnings helpful

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one knows how many hurricanes will strike the United States this year, but federal officials warn that the potential for disaster is growing as more people move to coastal areas.

Last year's hurricane death toll of 30 was well below the long-term average, despite the largest number of storms to come ashore since 1916. That success was due to improved warnings and evacuation efforts, Federal Emergency Management Agency Director Julius W. Becton said Thursday.

But development means there are some areas where there may not be time to evacuate before a storm, so residents need to keep alert and be ready to head inland or to shelters, adds Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center.

"I think last year's performance was, from the life-saving standpoint, outstanding," Becton told a news conference. "We cut the (long-term) average of 84 deaths to 30. But 30 is still too many, and our goal is to reduce that further."

The six-month hurricane season officially begins Sunday.

Public cooperation was important in reducing the 1985 toll, explained Becton, who said better warnings and more extensive evacuations were key reasons for the low number of fatalities.

Hurricane Elena last year caused the largest peacetime evacuation in U.S. history, affecting 1.7 million people in four states, Becton said.

And another 1.4 million evacuated low-lying areas in the face of Hurricane Gloria, he said.

But Frank warned that sometimes there just isn't enough time for people to get away. Particular problems were areas where coastal development has been great in recent years.

He urged residents to stay aware of storm warnings, know the location of nearby shelters and evacuation routes, and to evacuate or go to the shelter when a storm approaches.

Mother distraught over child's death

CHICAGO (AP) — A bus driver who refused to make a one-block detour to a hospital despite a passenger's pleas that her 9-year-old daughter had suffered a heart attack says he's "going through a lot of mental anguish" over the girl's death.

Nicole Hobson was pronounced dead at Children's Memorial Hospital early Thursday, after a passenger carried her the block to the emergency room.

"I feel real bad about the girl's death," said Ben Perry, 32, a Chicago Transit Authority Driver for less than four months. "I'm going through a lot of mental anguish. I didn't know where they were going until I was almost there."

Transit Authority investigators were interviewing Perry, said CTA spokesman Bill Baxa, who refused to comment about reports that the driver has been suspended without pay.

Nicole, who had a pacemaker and was stricken while riding to the hospital with her mother late Wednesday, was pronounced dead in the emergency room 45 minutes later, said hospital spokesman David Dalton.

"It appears she suffered cardiac arrest (on the bus), and the doctors really couldn't say what would have happened if she'd got here earlier," Dalton said Thursday.

Late Thursday, CTA Chairman Michael Cardilli issued a statement, saying:

"Everyone at the CTA feels for the family. ... Our hearts go out to them. It would be useless for us to try to justify or even respond when all the information is not in."

Dalton said an autopsy was being performed, "but even that won't provide us with an absolute idea of how crucial timing was."

Baxa said the CTA would issue a more detailed statement "when we feel we have a complete account" of what happened.

"He (the driver) wasn't concerned about the kid or the mother or anything," said Ted Garrettson, 28. "All he was worried about was completing his ... run."

Garrettson said Nicole and her mother, Mae Hobson, sat across from the driver and that he first heard Mrs. Hobson cry out about her daughter about six blocks from the hospital.

"The woman was sitting there screaming her baby was having a heart attack, she's got a pacemaker, and the bus driver was telling her, 'Get off the bus, lady,'" Garrettson said.

Soviet director skeptical of U. S.-Soviet summit

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The head of the Soviet news agency Novosti today said he is skeptical that a U.S.-Soviet summit can take place this year if the United States maintains its current stance on nuclear arms.

Valentin Falin told reporters in Bonn that since the Nov. 19-21 meeting last year between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Geneva, the United States has been motived solely by what it perceives as its own interests.

"This does not serve either the interests of the Soviet Union, the United States, or Western Europe," said Falin, Novosti's general director.

At Geneva, Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to meet in the United States sometime this year, but the Soviets have not agreed to set a date.

Falin also criticized the U.S. rejection of Soviet offers to hold separate talks on a nuclear weapons test ban and a purported lack of commitment in Washington to negotiated curbs on the superpowers' nuclear arsenals.

"If the United States continues its restrictive attitude to disarmament, I am not sure the summit will take place," he said.

On Tuesday, Reagan announced he had decided to dismantle two Poseidon nuclear submarines to stay in compliance with limits set by the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Talks treaty, which has never been ratified by the Senate.

Reagan said the United States intended to exceed the pact's limits later this year unless the Soviets reversed arms programs that Reagan claims violate SALT II, a charge the Kremlin has rejected.

Falin, who spoke at a news conference at the Soviet Embassy in Bonn, said, "I don't know what more we can offer the U.S.A. to continue to abide with the agreement, unless of course we declare ourselves the 51st state of the United States."

Falin was in West Germany to attend the meetings of the International Physicians For the Prevention of Nuclear War in Cologne.

Farmers adding new land to program

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a disappointing start two months ago, the government's new soil conservation program has gotten off the ground with farmers agreeing to idle 3.8 million acres of the nation's most delicate cropland this year.

The Agriculture Department announced Thursday it was accepting bids for an additional 3 million acres of highly erodible land into the long-term Conservation Reserve Program, a substantial boost over the 838,000 acres accepted after an earlier round of bidding in March.

Despite the increase, the total area recruited for the 1986 land-idling area still fell short of the 5 million-acre goal for the first year of the five-year effort. The department said it plans a third sign-up period for later this year.

"We are pleased with the excellent response from farmers during the second sign up," said Daniel G. Amstutz, undersecretary of agriculture for commodity programs. "We are well on our way to our goal of taking 40 (million) to 45 million acres of highly erodible land out of production within the next five years."

In the new bidding round, the department accepted bids from 22,863 farms, agreeing to pay an average of $44.23 per acre in annual rent to keep the land out of cultivation, a slight increase from the $41 average in the initial round.

Total annual rental payments for the additional acreage will be $132 million. A total of 34,156 bids had been received during the latest sign up, for a total of 4.6 million acres.

Norman Berg, an official of the conservation group the American Farmland Trust, called the new results encouraging.

"This will give us a good base to build on for the future," he said. "We're off and running."

The conservation reserve, part of the farm law enacted late last year, is designed to take at least 40 million acres of fragile U.S. cropland out of production over the next five years, and keep it idled for at least 10 years.

Farmers are to receive annual rental payments on the land they idle, as well as initial financial help for planting grasses, trees or other soil-conserving cover on the acreage.

Under the program, farmers submit bids stating how much they will accept in rental payments to take their erosion-prone land out of production for at least a decade. The department accepts the most attractive bids, limiting eligibility to the 69 million acres it has classified as the most highly erodible cropland in the nation.

To be eligible, soil has to be eroding at a rate of at least three times as fast as it can be restored through natural processes.

The program has been hailed by conservationists as the most significant anti-erosion step in 50 years.

At a congressional hearing last week Peter C. Myers, deputy secretary of agriculture, said it would be hard to meet the 40 million-acre target set by the program.

He said many farmers find it more attractive to participate in competing government subsidy programs that pay them based on their production — an incentive to keep their land in production.

Berg said to get further land out of production the department may have to gradually increase what it is willing to pay per acre.

Berg also said it may be necessary to soften the requirement that land remain idle for 10 years, or to extend the program beyond its current five-year life.

Colorado was the leader in the second round of bidding, with farmers there agreeing to idle 526,000 acres for a total annual rental of $20.4 million. Next highest were Minnesota, with 214,000 acres at $10.5 million rent, and Texas, 279,000 acres at $10.1 million.

Ford damage award has been reduced

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A state appeals court refused to set aside a $26 million judgment against the Ford Motor Co., but did agree to halve it.

The 13th Court of Appeals Thursday affirmed a trial court's negligence finding against Ford in connection with an October 1978 wreck that killed a 19-year-old girl.

But the panel agreed with Ford that the $26 million damage award granted the parents of Devary Durrill was excessive and reduced the award to $12.3 million.

The reduction was the second of what began as a $106 million award granted Mr. and Mrs. William Durrill in 1983.

A spokesman for Ford at the company's Dearborn, Mich., headquarters, said the automaker is satisfied with part of the court's ruling.

"We are pleased the court of appeals recognized the excessiveness of the award and reduced it," said Ford spokesman Tom Foote. "But we continue to believe that, even reduced, it is excessive and that the verdict should have been set aside."

The Durrills have 15 days to remit $14.5 million of the award against Ford Motor Company or face a second product liability suit against the automaker.

The court reduced the amount in actual damages the Durrills could claim for the loss of their daughter from $6.8 million to $2.3 million, and the amount of punitive damages from $20 million to $10 million.

"The jury rendered a judgment which we find so excessive as to Mr. and Mrs. Durrill and to Devary Durrill as to shock our conscience," Chief Justice Paul W. Nye wrote in the court's 43-page opinion.

A Nueces County jury in 1983 awarded the Durrills $6.8 million in actual damages for the loss of their daughter, who was killed when her Ford Mustang II was struck from behind and burst into flames. Devary Durrill died a week after the accident from burns on 80 percent of her body suffered in the accident.

In addition, the jury ordered Ford to pay $100 in punitive damages after finding the company negligent in not warning that its 1974-model Mustang II autos could burst into flames in rear-end collisions.

The original award was reduced to $26 million in 1984 in a hearing for a new trial before 28th District Court Judge Walter Dunham.

Directors reject $665 million bid

HOUSTON (AP) — The Board of Directors of Anderson, Clayton & Co. tentatively rejected a $665 million bid from two New York investment firms for the Houston-based food company, according to a statement released Friday.

However, the board of directors did not rule out a purchase by the New York firms of Bear, Stearns & Co. and Gruss & Co, according to the statement.

After meeting Thursday afternoon, the board of directors "authorized managment to meet with representatives of the Bear, Stearns-Gruss group and to seek to resolve the numerous uncertainties posed by the letter proposal," the statement said.

Meanwhile, the board will continue to recommend that shareholders vote for a management proposal to sell a fourth of the firm to employees at a special meeting June 3, said Mark Addicks, a company spokesman.

Under that complicated dead proposed by Anderson Clayton President W. Fenton Guinee and other officials, shareholders would receive $37 a share in cash but retain 75 percent of their existing stock holdings.

Anderson Clayton's products include Chiffon margarine, Seven Seas salad dressing, Gaines pet foods and Igloo coolers.

The two New York firms had offered $54 a share in cash for all shareholders' stock in a letter Thursday, Guinee said.

The investment firms would then form a new corporation to be called Newco, according to the statement released by Anderson Clayton.

Addicks said company officials rejected the bid based on advice of its financial advisors, The First Boston Corp.

Vice chairman pleads guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors pleaded guilty Friday to trying to steer a postal contract worth $250 million to a Texas company in exchange for illegal payoffs.

Peter Voss, under an agreement with federal prosecutors, admitted in a three-count felony information filed in U.S. District Court that he had illegally received from $20,000 to $25,000 in payoffs.

He immediately resigned from the postal board.

Voss, state co-chairman of President Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign in Ohio, also admitted that he had an agreement to receive as much as 0.25 percent of the value of the postal contract.

U. S. offers Soviets substitute for Salt II

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. arms control director Kenneth L. Adelman says the United States has offered the Soviet Union "a substitute regime" for the SALT II treaty that could reduce long-range nuclear warheads on both sides.

"If they come down in the number of warheads they will find we will come down," Adelman said.

The U.S. official said in an interview late Thursday that negotiations were not required to put the new controls into effect. "We are going to be watching what the Soviet levels are," he said, and tailor U.S. strategic warheads totals to the Soviet "threat."

President Reagan, in a decision announced Tuesday, said the United States would disregard the limit the "fundamentally flawed" 1979 treaty imposes on strategic bombers with nuclear-tipped warheads.

He said the new policy was a response to Soviet violations of the unratified accord. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in separate statements, said subsequently that the treaty had been outdated.

But Adelman said the decision does not mean the end of nuclear arms control, as some critics, including former Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, suggested may be in the offing. They have expressed apprehension that the Soviets would double their ballistic missiles and the United States would respond with a similar buildup.

Adelman said, however, that Reagan's pledge not to deploy more strategic ballistic missile warheads than the Soviet Union offers Moscow "a substitute regime" for the treaty.

Genetic discovery may help CF diagnosis

NEW YORK (AP) — A biotechnology company says it has made a genetic discovery that will allow prenatal diagnostic testing for cystic fibrosis with greater than 99 percent accuracy.

Collaborative Research Inc., of Lexington, Mass., will be able to offer such reliability in 84 percent of test cases, within families that already include a cystic fibrosis victim, said Helen Donis-Keller, director of Collaborative's human genetics department.

The key is that company researchers have identified new genetic flags, called markers, along the threadlike chromosome that holds the cystic fibrosis gene, and that the markers occur on both sides of the gene, she said. The company said it will offer the test within weeks.

Other scientists said current tests, using previously identified markers, already offer greater than 95 percent accuracy in about 80 percent of families that have had a cystic fibrosis case. In optimal situations, accuracy can range up to 99 percent, said researcher Lap-Chee Tsui of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Two current markers are estimated to have accuracy rates above 99 percent, said Mark Leppert, senior research associate at the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

But Donis-Keller said te accuracy of the markers has not yet been pinpointed.

Scientists also aid the usefulness of the new markers would depend on just how close they lie to the cystic fibrosis gene, a question Donis-Keller said is still under investigation.

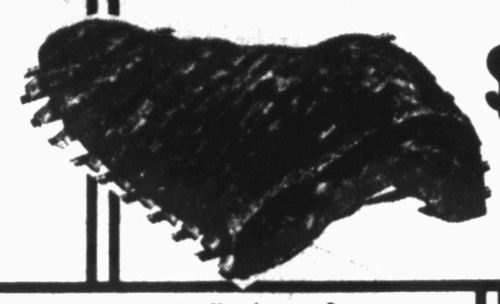

Cystic fibrosis, with an estimated 30,000 victims in the United States, is the nation's most common fatal inherited disease. Victims produce an abnormally thick, sticky mucus that clogs the lungs and digestive system.
