

For Nuclear Waste Disposal

Area Targeted for Further Study

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Two locations in the Texas Panhandle have been recommended to the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) for additional study as part of the continuing nationwide exploration program to identify potential underground repository sites for high-level nuclear waste.

The locations are in east-central Deaf Smith County and north-central Swisher County in bedded salt formations of the Palo Duro Subbasin of the Permian Basin in Texas. The recommendation for further study was made in a draft report, titled the "Permian Basin Location Recommendation Report" (ONWI-288), submitted to DOE by the Project Management Division of Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus, Ohio, which has responsibility for managing the site study program on non-federal lands for DOE.

The recommendation is the result of studies that have been under way in the Palo Duro and Dalhart Subbasins since 1977 and is based on an analysis of data collected on geologic, environmental, and socioeconomic factors. Locations were screened using DOE site performance criteria that consider such factors as site geometry (depth, thickness, and extent of salt beds), geohydrology (salt dissolution considerations), geologic characteristics, resource potential, surface characteristics, environmental protection, and socioeconomic impacts.

The recommended locations were evaluated by Battelle as having salt units expected to be of adequate depth (1,800 to 3,000 feet), thickness, and quality for construction of a repository and has having no known environmental or socioeconomic factors that would preclude further studies.

Studies have been under way in the Permian Basin region since 1976. Since 1977, the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas at Austin has been collecting and analyzing data on the geology and hydrology of the Palo Duro and Dalhart Subbasin area, and NUS Corporation has been conducting environmental studies. Current exploratory drilling in the Panhandle will add to the data base.

The recommended study location in Deaf Smith County is located just north of Hereford and encompasses approximately 450 square miles. The location in Swisher County is situated north and east of Tulia and contains approximately 200 square miles. Hereford has a population of approximately 14,600 and Tulia 5,400. Both study locations contain land that is intensively cultivated, irrigated, and agricultural, with small areas of rangeland and numerous playa lakes. Land in both locations is predominantly privately owned.

"The Permian Basin Location Recommendation Report" draws on data from six earlier technical reports, which summarized the geology and environment of the region and area. The "Location Recommendation Report" describes the information used from those reports and the evaluations made to move studies in the Texas Panhandle from the area to location phase. Copies of the report have been sent to the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council (TENRAC) for review and comment. TENRAC is an advisory council to the state of Texas and has been designated by Governor William P. Clements as the lead agency to coordinate and communicate with DOE on high-level nuclear waste issues. Pending review of Battelle's recommendation by DOE and state officials, location studies will begin in Deaf Smith and Swisher Counties, if DOE accepts the recommendation.

Studies in Texas are part of DOE's national effort to identify sites for several regional nuclear waste repositories. Several types of rock are being studied, including bedded salt in the salt in the Texas Panhandle and southeastern Utah, salt domes in the Gulf Coast states of Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, basalt (solidified lava) at the DOE Hanford Site near Richland, Washington, tuff (compacted volcanic ash) at Nevada Test Site, and crystalline rocks such as granite in 17 Appalachian and Lake Superior states. Exploration in Utah, and Gulf Coast states, Washington, and Nevada has also reached the location phase.

Location studies will attempt to resolve identified geologic, environmental, and socioeconomic questions and issues specific to the locations. These issues, activities to resolve them, and a schedule for the location phase and subsequent phases are included in the "Permian Site Characterization Report" issues and Plans (ONWI-368), which DOE expects to send to TENRAC in March. ONWI-368 is the preliminary document leading to the Site Characterization Report (SCR), which is required by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission as part of the

City Okays 1982-83 Budget; Accepts 'Low' Bids

By JERI CURTIS
Staff Writer

The Hereford City Commission approved a balance $3.2 million budget for 1982-83 Monday night, with no increase in taxes.

An estimated $84,000 in garbage collection fees is the only increase, and will be used to purchase additional equipment for the health department.

The $3,220,148 budget is approximately $200,000 over the 1981-82 general operating budget.

Revenues projected in the new budget are, ad valorem taxes, $864,827; water charges, $846,000; sales taxes, $550,000; trash fees, $287,000; franchise taxes, $195,700; sewer charges, $187,200; farm lease, $62,861; fines, $64,000; golf course, $39,000; and other, $123,560.

The water and sewer department will receive the bulk of the budget with $915,882 going to that department. Police will receive $764,276; street department, $504,487; parks department, $347,376; and health department, $295,350. Administrative costs were projected to be $245,397; the fire department expenses were set at $118,834; and other costs, $28,546.

Included in the budget is an approximate seven percent pay raise for city employees.

The commission accepted a bid from Jake Diel for seal coating street paving at 51.9 cents a yard. Total cost for the paving would be $27,816.50.

"The bids were very close and quite a bit under what we anticipated," Dudley Bayne, city manager, said. The city had budgeted $32,000 for the job, based on costs from previous years.

The best bid for roof replacement on the original community center roof was also lower than budgeted. A year ago the roofing bids were about 22,000, according to Bayne. Plains Sheet Metal won the contract with a bid of $18,430 and the work to be completed in 120 days.

Hereford Cablevision had its franchise reading for the third meeting and was approved for service in the city.

The commission voted to join other Panhandle cities in sharing the cost for hiring engineers and consultants to study a proposed 12.7 percent rate hike requested by Southwestern Public Service.

The commission called a special meeting for March 10 at 10 a.m. to assign ballots for the city officers election.

A preliminary plat review for land on South Jackson was tabled until the next meeting.

Judges Race to Finish Redistricting; Final Testimony Expected Today

DALLAS (AP) — Three federal judges, racing to redraw legislative district lines in time for counties to prepare for a May 1 primary, planned to wrap up testimony today from plaintiffs presenting a variety of maps.

The panel ordered Harris County representatives to meet with state officials and printers late Monday to find a way to hold the May 1 election. The representatives had said they could not be ready until May 12, even if the original map is approved and the candidates' filing deadlines moved from March 19 to March 12.

"What you're doing is asking this court to change every election in the state?" federal appeals court Judge Carolyn D. Randall asked.

"That's right, Your Honor," replied Rex van Middlesworth, an attorney representing Harris County.

U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders pointed out that the panel had jurisdiction only over legislative elections. But van Middlesworth submitted that the judges had jurisdiction "regardless of what any other court has done."

Election officials from Dallas, Bexar and El Paso counties testified they could prepare for a primary May 1 if they receive new maps by the end of this week.

But Harris County Clerk Anita Rodheaver testified ballots could not be printed and loaded into voting machines in time. While other counties were sending out voter registrations based on lines drawn by the Legislative Redistricting Board, she said, Harris County was awaiting a final resolution of the issue.

U.S. District Judge Jerry Burchmeyer completes the panel, which agreed to revise the districts, after the U.S. Justice Department rejected the LRB map, saying it violated the Voting Rights Act by diluting minority strength.

Those upset with the LRB's House or Senate maps — mostly Republicans and minorities — filed the suit in federal court.

The judges Monday heard testimony about several alternate plans, including a "compromise" proposal born at a last-minute meeting among some of the plaintiffs.

A weekend meeting among representatives of the secretary of state, the House speaker's office and the House and Senate plaintiffs resulted in a compromise plan that consolidates their original maps and makes district lines conform to precinct lines.

Judge Randall chastised the attorneys for not filing the plan before the deadline set by the panel — but indicated the judges would consider it.

"I don't mean to be unfriendly, but that was precisely the reason we allotted as much time as we did," she said.

Some of the other plaintiffs implied that only Republicans were invited to the weekend meeting, but John N. McCamish Jr., counsel for the House plaintiffs, claimed their only purpose was to save the judges time.

Attorneys for Secretary of State David Dean, who coordinated the compromise plan, admitted the consolidated map made changes in more districts than objected to by the Justice Department.

"You can appreciate the bind we're in," Judge Randall told them. "The more we change... the more unlikely it is we'll ever have this election."

Besides the compromise plan, the judges heard original plans filed by House plaintiffs, Senate plaintiffs and the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Each side presented witnesses who testified the other plans "packed" minorities into districts or diluted them too much and that they changed more precinct lines — a factor in which the judges seemed especially interested.

Most of the discussion concerned minority districts in Bexar, El Paso, Harris and Dallas counties.

Cable Service To Be Sliced Wednesday

Hereford Cablevision will interrupt service to customers who live north of 14th Street at 10 a.m. Wednesday. Manager Lloyd Ames said service to cable in the area will cause an interruption of service of about 20 minutes.

"The mainline cable in the 400 and 500 blocks of Avenue G had gone bad due to water damage," Ames said. "The new cable has already been put in place, but splicing will cause an outage of cable services in this area."

"We would like to thank our customers for their cooperation," Ames added.

City, School Filing Deadline Wednesday

Six persons have filed for four positions on the Hereford City Commission and Hereford Independent School District Board of Trustees as the deadline for filing for those positions rapidly approaches.

Incumbent city commissioners Bud Eades (Place 3) and Emory Brownlow (Place 4) have filed for re-election.

In addition, Deaf Smith County Assistant District Attorney David Martinez has filed for the city commission election, but is unsure whether or not he will remain on the ballot since he is checking into the legality of a state official running in a local election.

HISD incumbent Sallie Strain and Bobby Griego have filed for re-election, and they will be challenged by Johnny Frank Gamez as the trio fights it out for the two seats currently held by Mrs. Strain and Griego.

The deadline for filing for city and school elections is Wednesday.

Texas Independence Celebrated Today

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Today is Texas Independence Day — and most state employees took the day off — but any Texas-sized celebrations probably will be postponed until 1986.

That year, on March 2, Texas will celebrate its Sesquicentennial, or the 150th anniversary of its independence from Mexico.

A commission already is at work planning for the event, which is expected to include the opening of a multi-million dollar state museum in Austin and a book based on Texas by author James Michener.

This year is the 146th anniversary, and Gov. Bill Clements said Monday that Texans would do well "to think long on the solid ideals bequeathed us by our forefathers."

Texas' Declaration of Independence was signed March 2, 1836, on a cold and windy day at Washington-on-the-Brazos, and Clements said in a proclamation that the document is "tattered" but retains its "vitality."

"The deep significance of Texas Independence Day — its importance to our heritage and its significance in the eternal struggle for freedom — is observed each March as a day of great meaning to all Texans, and it will never be lost so long as Texans throughout the world celebrate the historic event."

A story that goes along with Independence Day is how University of Texas President G.T. Winston — who had just come to the state from North Carolina — refused to grant a school holiday in 1897 so students could celebrate.

Students responded by borrowing a cannon and setting off shots that shattered windows in the Main Building. The boys were ordered to remove the cannon but later more shots were heard, and Winston finally joined the group and made a speech which has become a tradition.

"I was born in the land of liberty, rocked in the cradle of liberty, nursed on the bottle of liberty, and I've had liberty preached to me all my life, but Texas University students take more liberty than anyone I've ever come in contact with."

This year UT students, faculty and alumni will salute Texas independence with midday ceremonies, a cake, barbecue and orange beer.

In keeping with another tradition, which the Legislature started in 1932, Clements also has designated the entire week of March 2 as Texas Week.

Reagan Hangs Tough On Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, besieged by calls for major changes in his big-deficit budget, insists he won't trim the tax cuts enacted last year but is leaving room for other compromise proposals from Congress.

Reagan set out from the White House today to promote his economic program at Republican fund-raising receptions in Cheyenne, Wyo., and Albuquerque, N.M., before flying west for a vacation at his California ranch.

Faced with a growing list of proposed revisions in his plan, Reagan was quoted by a spokesman as saying, "There will be no uncertain sound to our trumpet."

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said the president was "firm, steady and determined to stick by the principles of his economic plan."

However, Speakes said Reagan was willing to listen to other ideas, which Republican Senate allies indicated included reductions in the Pentagon's budget and some tax changes.

In a meeting Monday with representatives of small business, Reagan declared he had compromised enough on his 3-year tax plan when he agreed last year to delay its start.

"I believe it's time for you and me and the American people to stand together and tell the Congress, 'No, you may not touch our tax cut,'" Reagan said.

The president, asked whether the recession wasn't growing deeper, replied: "Only to the extent it isn't getting deeper as fast. It has begun to level out. That always happens at the bottom. You've got to have a

Sweeping Amnesty For 2,863 Including Dissident Dae-jung

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan today granted amnesty to 2,863 people including dissident leader Kim Dae-jung, whose life sentence was reduced to 20 years in prison.

A government announcement said Chun had decided to grant the amnesty "out of the conviction that the moment has come for all Koreans to unite even more firmly in the endeavor to unify Korea in the 1980s."

The action was taken as part of the observance Wednesday of the first anniversary of Chun's inauguration to a seven-year term.

Kim, 56, who had won strong support in South Korea as an opposition political leader, narrowly lost the presidential election to the late Park Chung-hee in 1971.

He was arrested in May, 1980, after an outburst of anti-government demonstrations in Seoul and other cities, and was accused of plotting to overthrow the government by force. A military tribunal convicted him of sedition and sentenced him to death.

Kim's death sentence provoked widespread protests from many countries, including the United States. It was commuted to life imprisonment by the Chun government on Jan. 23, 1981, a few days before the South Korean president left for a summit meeting with President Reagan.

The government said of 13 persons imprisoned for what it termed "involvement in the Kim Dae-jung affair" would have their sentences reduced.

Trucker Pulls Driver From Fire, Leaves

HOUSTON (AP) — A trucker who saw a wrecker explode and tumble into a freeway guardrail reached into the flames and pulled the driver to safety, then left, saying he had to go unload his vehicle.

The wrecker driver, 21-year-old Lyle Motok, suffered third degree burns over 60 to 80 percent of his body after the collision with an 18-wheel truck Monday morning. He was in stable condition at a local hospital.

Carl Bolt, who officials said left no address or other personal information, was traveling east when he spotted the fiery crash in the westbound lane, another driver said. Bolt left the scene, saying he had to go unload his truck, a paramedic said.

Bolt stopped his truck, ran back to the scene and "reached into the flames and pulled him out," Don Pepka said. The carpenter said he had been driving just ahead of the wrecker when it swerved into the 18-wheeler's path.

"The guy with the wrecker company was in flames, screaming, 'God help me,'" he said.

Pepka said Bolt threw Motok to the ground and began rolling him around to smother the flames. Bolt also caught fire, he said.

Crew Named For Shuttle's Last Test Flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Navy Capt. Thomas J. Mattingly will command the fourth flight of the space shuttle Columbia, the last one which will be used to test computer subsystems, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has announced.

Henry W. Hartsfield will join Mattingly as pilot for the planned seven-day mission, which is scheduled for July, NASA spokesman Steve Nesbitt said.

The fifth shuttle mission, scheduled for mid-November, will deploy commercial payloads. It will be commanded by Vance D. Brand, with Marine Col. Robert F. Overmyer as pilot, Nesbitt said.

Men Plead Guilty In Fake Oil Well Scheme

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Two Amarillo men have been ordered to pay back almost $85,000 collected for non-existent oil wells after pleading guilty to selling securities without a license.

Prosecutors agreed to waive a multi-count indictment against Jim Anderson and Theodore Oliver McVade in return for Monday's guilty pleas, according to Randall County Criminal District Attorney Randy Sherrod.

Both men were ordered to pay back the money collected for the oil wells and were placed on 10 years deferred probation. Deferred probation means the incident will not appear on their criminal records unless the terms of probation are violated, Sherrod said.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor:
One year ago this month, the President of the United States was nearly killed with a "Saturday Night Special." Thank God President Reagan survived.
But during this past year over 20,000 other Americans were shot with handguns. They were not as fortunate as the President. They died.
It's easy to blame the politicians in Congress who should be doing something to stop America's handgun violence. But the Congress works for us. What have we done? What have you done?
The gun lobbyists are puny compared to us. Polls show that nine in ten Americans want tougher handgun laws. But the politicians hear from the gun zealots every day. It's time they heard from us.
Our goal is to find ONE

MILLION AMERICANS who care enough about handgun violence to stop it. And if becoming ONE MILLION STRONG isn't enough, we'll find ten million more until our handgun laws are strengthened. And if Congress won't change the law, we'll change the Congress.
Every time a John Lennon or a Ronald Reagan is shot, America is called a sick society. A handful of kooks doesn't make us a sick society. But what is sick is for the rest of us to let this handgun violence continue.
You can do something to stop America's handgun violence. Contact us. We'll show you how.

Sincerely,
Pete Shields

America Has Energy To Burn

The United States has energy to burn!

We have enough coal to supply all our nation's energy needs for hundreds of years.

Inconsistent environmental restraints inhibit its use. High sulphur Illinois coal, for example, without prohibitively costly scrubbing, is not legally burnable in Illinois; instead is being shipped to Wisconsin and Minnesota and elsewhere.

More significantly, an increasing quantity of United States coal is being sent abroad; a significant credit in our trade imbalance with other nations. Expected to exceed valued grain exports by 1990s.

Historically, the United States has hoarded its black gold.

We've exported significant quantities of coking coal (for steelmaking) and nominal amounts of steam coal to Canada but exported very little of our much larger reserves of steam coal (for making electricity) until 1979.

In 1979, we exported 2.5 million tons of steam coal overseas; in 1980, 16 million tons; this year, 25 million tons. In addition we will continue to export about 12 million tons of steam coal to Canada.

Over the next decade we could help satisfy Europe's and the Pacific Rim countries' appetite for hundreds of millions of tons of steam coal.

But our expanding exports have encountered a bottleneck; insufficient coal loading facilities on our coasts and a lack of deep-water ports necessary to handle the big ships.

Coal exports, which harvested for our nation $4.5 billion last year, could be many times that if we had the port capacity to move the coal.

There are some projects under way already. Seaports are being improved in 10 stated. These improvements will increase on-shore facilities to where they can handle another hundred million annual tons by 1985.

But getting the big cost-efficient ships into and out of those ports is going to require a lot of dredging.

To accommodate big coal carriers capable of carrying 150,000 deadweight tons — port and harbor channels must be 60 feet deep.

But once that is accomplished, we could reduce the price of export coal to Western Europe as much as 15 percent. That price would keep us competitive in the world market and create more mining jobs in the United States; also more jobs in railroading and shipping and related industries.

The coal industry is not looking to Uncle Sam to improve our harbor facilities; it is willing to finance those projects with "taxes on themselves," user fees to be applied on all port traffic.

There is still some government red tape to be untangled before the industry secures the necessary permissions to make these improvements.

Your congressman could expedite that.

Begin Gives Mubarak Ultimatum On Trip

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin says he will not go to Egypt unless Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak visits the disputed holy city of Jerusalem, Israel radio reported.

Begin insists that Mubarak include Jerusalem, which Israel declared its undivided capital in 1980, during the Egyptian leader's upcoming visit to Israel.

Egypt and all other Arab nations want Israel to return the Arab part of the city captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War. Most countries, including the United States, do not recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

The Israeli Cabinet on Sunday issued a statement saying that if Mubarak "insists that Jerusalem will not be included in his visit, Israel should forego this important visit."

Mubarak sent messages the same day seeking support for his position from the leaders of the United States, France, West Germany, Britain, Austria and Italy.

In Cairo, Foreign Ministry spokesman Raouf Ghoneim said details of Mubarak's trip to Israel are still under discussion and that there would be no further comment.

Well-informed Egyptian sources said the Foreign Ministry did not want to escalate the dispute over the planned visit, which Israel considers a vital demonstration that Egypt will honor the peace process begun by the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Egyptian press reports have said Mubarak has refused so far to set a date for the visit.

Israel wants it to take place before April 25 — when Israel will return to Egypt the last sector of the occupied Sinai Peninsula, under the terms of the 1979 Camp David peace accords.

In Washington, Egypt's ambassador to the United States, Ashraf Ghorbal, said Israel was needlessly complicating relations by insisting on the Jerusalem visit.

Ghorbal told reporters Monday after a meeting with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. that Mubarak "has expressed to Israel the difficulty he faces concerning a visit to the city of Jerusalem."

"Egypt's position since the Israeli annexation of Jerusalem is well-known," Ghorbal added. "It is known to Israel, it is known to our American friends, it is known to the whole world. We stand by our position."

Jurors To Continue Deliberations Today

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Jurors began deliberations in the capital murder trial of Eroy Edward Brown after hearing impassioned arguments alternately depicting the prison inmate as a malicious murderer and a victim of brutal prison officials.

The seven-man, five-woman panel deliberated for almost five hours Monday after hearing final arguments. Jurors were to resume deliberations this morning.

Brown, 31, of Waco, was charged in the April 4 drowning death of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack. Prosecutors have said they may later try him in the shooting death of Farm Manager Billy Max Moore.

Prosecutor Mike Hinton angrily told jurors that the defense attorneys "had dragged Warden Wallace Pack's name through the mud" and were attempting to try the warden's reputation while distracting jurors from the facts.

"You've seen how many minutes of your time and my time were taken defending a man without a scintilla of evidence against him. I'm mad and frustrated about dragging this man through the mud," Hinton said, slamming the witness stand with his hand.

Hinton said the state had a solid case against Brown, while the defense relied on the testimony of liars.

"The only thing you have before you in evidence is the scurrilous, incredible and uncredible testimony of Tommy Carlisle and Al Slaton," he said.

The two former inmates had testified that Pack tortured them, ordered the drugging of some prisoners and supervised the death of other inmates.

Though never referring to them directly, prosecutors had the mud-encrusted boots Pack was wearing the day he was killed sitting prominently on their table in full view of the jury.

In his charge to jurors, Dalteite told jurors they could only find Brown guilty of capital murder, and not a lesser charge.

The judge also said Brown's claim of self-defense could be substantiated if evidence showed he was in fear of serious injury or death and that prison officials provoked the incident.

licensing process.

If a potential repository site is identified in the Palo Duro, it will be compared to potential sites in salt in Utah and the Gulf Coast states as the location for one of the first three exploratory shafts, planned for 1983. Exploratory shafts are quired by NRC to obtain data at repository depth. The other two shafts will be constructed in basalt and tuff. One of the three sites with the exploratory shafts will be selected for application to NRC for a license to construct the first repository.

The first repository for the isolation high-level nuclear waste is expected to be in operation between 1998 and 2006, following a site screening process that narrows from national to regional to area to location phases, detailed site characterization, and fulfillment of licensing requirements.

Methodist Women To Meet Wednesday

All circles of the United Methodist Women will meet Wednesday from 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the First United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall. Eleanor Hudspeth will lead the groups in a Bible study, "Singing the Lord's Song."

The groups will meet again March 10 and 17.

The Elizabeth Brumley Circle will host the meeting

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said there were nine senators in the session with Reagan. "I think the president got nine different versions about what to do about the economy, deficits, spending, revenue enhancements and everything else," Durenberger said.

Speakes said he expected "some consensus to develop on Capitol Hill over the next two weeks" for budget revisions.

"I think what we'll do is watch and wait and see if somebody comes up with a better idea, we'll take a look at it," Speakes said. "We are always willing to work with the Congress."

He stressed that the White House was waiting for a "comprehensive plan," not piecemeal proposals.

Speakes said he did not anticipate changes in the 3-year tax cut, the 18 percent increase in defense spending proposed by Reagan, or the president's proposed budget reductions. Asked where there was room for compromise, he replied, "We'll have to wait and see."

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said Reagan "showed a good willingness to discuss revisions in the tax code that do not do any fundamental damage to the concept that he advanced last year and Congress enacted."

Wednesday and the Nettie Slaton Circle on March 10 and the Carrie Black Circle on March 17.

The Martha Circle will meet at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the church library. The Alice Ward Circle will meet March 10 at 2:30 p.m. in Kings Manor Lounge and the Naomi Harris Circle will meet March 17 in the home of Mildred Fuhrman.

HPD Have Locker Theft Suspect

Police have a suspect in two locker thefts reported Monday at Hereford High.

Two students reported that between 10:30 and 11:30 Monday their gym lockers were burglarized. One girl told police that a watch and $5 had been removed and another girl reported that her watch, an engagement ring and $10 had been stolen.

Also reported stolen was a three channel radio receiver valued at $100.

About $200 worth of windows were reported broken from a residence on Avenue

F. Police recieved three prower reports, issued four citations and checked one accident Monday.

During the weekend a juvenile was arrested for fleeing from an officer, unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, leaving the scene of an accident and public intoxication. Men Like To Do Pursuing

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am an attractive 50-year-old woman and could pass for 40. I was widowed at 46 and remarried a year later to an alcoholic who was also a crook. Within three months I divorced him.

A business friend of my first husband's (a dead ringer for Cary Grant) separated from his wife a few months ago. On an impulse I wrote him a note and suggested we ought to get together and add a little spice to one another's lives. He did not respond.

Last night I saw "Cary" at a party. He was extremely cordial but did not mention the note. I was hoping he'd ask to see me again, but he didn't. He is the best catch around and I like his style. Should I write him another note? Give him a phone call? Invite him to dinner? Help! I need some guidance.—Shortage Of Men In N.J.

DEAR SHORTAGE: Hide all writing instruments and put the phone where you can't reach it until the impulse to contact "Cary" has passed. He knows you are available, and if there's any interest you'll hear from him. The world has changed a lot in the last few years, but men still like to do the pursuing—even the ones who DON'T look like Cary Grant.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I moved to this city from Texas and got in with a group of neat kids. One guy (I'll call him Alex) seemed special, and I have seen a lot of him lately. We're both 16.

Last night when he came to take me to a party, he acted strange—as if he had been drinking. I didn't say anything until his driving began to frighten me. Then he said he had been sniffing glue, but it was nothing to get excited about. He wanted me to try it—it wasn't dangerous, just a terrific upper, better than booze.

I have never known anyone who did glue and would like to find out for sure if what Alex says is true.—"Linda" In Baltimore often wants more. This can lead to serious impairment of the judgment, cause an accident on overdose and even death. If you can't get this dude to drop the glue—drop HIM. He's bad news.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband and I must attend five or six cocktail parties a week for business reasons. I resent the way he wanders off and leaves me flat the minute we get inside the door. I don't see him again until he gets ready to go.

I don't know nearly as many people as he does and am bored to death most of the time. He seems to enjoy himself a lot, moving from one circle to another while I hide in the ladies' room to kill time. Is he being fair to me? What should I do about it?—Washington, D.C. Dolly

The New Mexico Academy of Science, in cooperation with ENMU, will provide two three-week sessions, according to Dr. Andy Sae, program director and professor of chemistry at Eastern. The program dates are June 7-25 and July 5-23.

HELLO, DOLLY: Accept the fact that those cocktail parties are business meetings for your husband. He's there to work the room. There are probably at least a dozen women at those mindless bashes who are as bored as you. Fine one and spend the time with her.

At Wits End

BY ERMA BOMBECK

A lot of professions enjoy limited lifespans. Dancers retire when the energy goes. Athletes retire when the legs go and sex symbols retire when the chins fall in their soup.

When the time comes, no one wants to go. As a performing housewife of 30 years, I'm ready to go. I know, I thought I had 20 or 30 more good years ahead of me, but I'm lying to myself and am ready to hang it up.

It's been coming for some time now. Like a dancer, the energy just isn't there when I need it. There's no motivation. I no longer care that my dishtowels look like the seat of a mechanic's pants or that my cookie sheet was born the same year as Alan Alda.

No longer can I leap into the air in glorious exhilaration when my laundry smells fresh or glide my hands smoothly across a bathtub that doesn't feel gritty.

Like a ballerina, I've lost timing. There was a moment when I knew exactly when a child was going to split from the kitchen and lock himself in the bathroom to keep from doing dishes, but no more. They get away from me.

My average for creative meals used to be stunning. A couple of years ago, I baked 355. I've been in a slump now for five years, reaching my all-time low the other night when I served a bowl of cottage cheese and leftover pizza.

Face it, the body is gone. Those legs that used to run trays up to the bedroom 18 times a day for a common cold have more ridges than corduroy. The form that used to drag out every morning and feed everyone now burrows under the covers like a lump and whimpers.

I told the family last week, "I'm finally retiring." My husband said, "You've retired every week since we've been married." I told him, "This is different. I want to move over and let a younger woman take my place. I want to retreat from life and take my place in history, leaving the house only for an occasional award or a tribute ceremony at Kennedy Center, where they can dig up old home movies and testimonials of the housewife I used to be. This old soldier from the utility room is saying her last goodbye."

My husband said, "Before you go, could you drop off the dog at the vet's and my jacket at the cleaners?"

Somehow, I thought my leaving would be more poignant than that.

LET THEM HAVE A DRY BED

The greatest gift you can give a bedwetter and the rest of the family, too, is an end to this serious problem, and make no mistake, bedwetting is serious. It can cause complicated psychological problems that last a lifetime. It's so needless because bedwetting, when not caused by organic defect or disease, can be ended. Send for our free brochure, "Bedwetting—What It's All About and How To End It", a report by two medical doctors. No obligation.

Balloon mail

The French created the first postal system of modern times in 1450 and launched air mail over a century ago. A balloon carrying 500 pounds of mail soared aloft from Paris on Sept. 23, 1870 during the Franco-Prussian war.

Because the free-float balloons landed in the Prussian camp, Parisians soon switched to pigeons. Before Paris capitulated the birds delivered some 115,000 messages to the surrounded city despite German efforts to intercept the mail with hunting falcons.

Watchdog Group Formed

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A citizens' watchdog committee has been formed in this border city to keep an eye on local issues and politicians.

The El Paso Interreligious Sponsoring Organization (EPISO) claims 400 persons attended the group's first meeting last week, at which EPISO members decided to investigate a $60 million proposed electricity rate increase, a $25 million bond issue proposal, neighborhood services and schools.

Professional organizers from the Industrial Areas Foundation (IAF) in Los Angeles had been working here for a year before the first public meeting. But the formal kickoff was rushed because of local opposition, said the Rev. Larry McNeil, a Baptist minister originally from Lufkin.

The group came together six months ahead of schedule said McNeil, 34, now based in Los Angeles with IAF.

"The anti's and the kooks sped up the process," he said. "Every time we get attacked, the enemy does the organizing for us."

The group is similar to San Antonio's Citizens Organized for Public Service (COPS) and other groups in Fort Worth, Houston, Brownsville and nearly 20 other cities nationwide. All are based on the teachings of Saul Alinsky, a nationally-known community activist.

McNeil said opposition to the groups usually dies down, despite a flurry of complaints at the outset.

"The kooks will go away after awhile," he said. "We won't."

He added that one IAF organizer had received a phone call telling him to get out of town.

But McNeil, who said he has been called an "outside agitator" said El Paso needs the EPISO program.

"There is a tremendous reservoir of talent here, but the city has crap schools, it has Jonathan Rogers as mayor. It has a lot of problems," McNeil said.

Roman Catholics from some of the city's affluent have criticized EPISO and IAF, claiming Bishop Raymundo Pena railroaded the enlistment of 24 parishes, expected to contribute $100,000 to the organization.

"EPISO is one concrete way of implementing the church's teaching on social justice," Pena said. "It is committed to a free and open society and the participation of all citizens in the decisions that affect their lives."

But not all his parishioners agree.

"Sure there are a lot of things in society that need to be corrected," said Carol Varoz, a homemaker. "But we have channels to work through."

Mrs. Varoz, 46, and her husband, Roman Varoz, 47, a retired U.S. Army lieutenant colonel, say they will complain all the way to the Vatican.

Valenzuela 'Awarded' Contract

By JOHN NADEL AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela and his representatives have been unable to agree on salary terms with the Los Angeles Dodgers. So the defending world champions, obviously out of patience, have unilaterally renewed the pitching sensation's contract for 1982.

The Dodgers said Monday night in announcing their decision that Valenzuela, who became the first pitcher in major league history to receive the Cy Young Award and Rookie of the Year award in the same season, will be the highest paid second-year big leaguer in history. Terms were not announced.

Valenzuela, who earned a reported $42,500 as a rookie last year, was 13-7 with a 2.48 earned run average in the strike-interrupted season. He led the majors in shutouts with eight and strikeouts with 180.

It is believed that the contract calls for the 21-year-old left-hander to receive $300,000 in 1982, the club's original offer. The Associated Press was told by a source close to the Dodgers that the National League team made a higher offer during negotiations, but went back to its original offer when it renewed the contract.

Through his representatives, Antonio DeMarco and Dick Moss, Valenzuela reportedly had asked the Dodgers for at least $1 million for the coming season. The club reportedly opened the negotiations offering $300,000 and had raised it during talks, but not significantly.

The two sides, including Valenzuela, met for more than three hours Sunday and held another session Monday. The meetings proved fruitless.

DeMarco said by telephone that he would wait until the contract arrived by registered mail before issuing any definitive statement.

"We are going to wait to receive the contract because they didn't extend us the courtesy to mention the amount," said DeMarco, referring to what he was told by the Dodgers over the telephone. "We're going to wait and we'll see what happens."

"Fernando would like to be in Florida when we arrive at an arrangement that is satisfactory. We maintain that we are fair and not unreasonable."

When asked if he was upset by what has happened, DeMarco said, "No."

Valenzuela, from the Mexican state of Sonora, has no recourse in the matter except to remain on the sidelines. As a second-year player, he was not eligible for either salary arbitration or the free-agent re-entry draft. Under terms of the Basic Agreement, a team can cut the salary of a player whose contract is renewed by a maximum of 20 percent.

Clubs are allowed to renew the contracts of eligible players between March 1-10.

Campanis said in the renewed contract, "Fernando will receive the largest salary for a second-year player in major league history."

The Dodgers left for their spring training facility in Vero Beach, Fla., last Wednesday without Valenzuela. All major leaguers were required to be in camp Monday.

Tech, TCU, Baylor Win Tourney Playoff Games

By JOE STROOP Associated Press Writer

If there was a lesson to be learned from the first round of the Southwest Conference basketball tournament, maybe it was this: don't stop at 46 points.

Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas were all eliminated in Monday's first round and they all had 46s shining on the scoreboard when the buzzer sounded.

Texas Christian cruised by SMU 54-46, Baylor nudged Texas 48-46 on a field goal at the buzzer and Texas Tech's starters ended their Rice game on the bench, slapping each other on the back as reserves polished off a 60-46 win.

That puts TCU against Tech in the second of Thursday's quarterfinal games as the tournament moves to Reunion Arena in Dallas. In the opener, Texas A&M — recipient of a first-round bye after earning a third-place regular-season finish — goes against Baylor.

It seems ironic that Texas' downfall ended where it began this season — in Baylor's Heart O' Texas Coliseum. The Longhorns were ranked No. 5 nationally and cruising with a 14-0 record when they reported to Waco for a Jan. 26 match with the Bears.

During that game, Texas forward Mike Wacker went down with a knee injury that knocked him out for the season and, from that point, Texas won only two of its last 13 contests.

Monday's loss to Baylor was courtesy of Bear forward Jay Shakir, who made a steal and a layup to tie the score at 46, then canned a 25-foot jump shot at the buzzer for the winning points.

"I don't apologize for Jay's shot going in at all ... I don't care how long it bounced around 'up there,'" said

Baylor coach Jim Haller. "It was the first break we got all night."

Baylor overcame a nine-point Texas lead and an off-night by SWC career scoring champion Terry Teagle to post the win.

"It's hard to believe that we would win when Teagle has a night like that (5-of-16 field goals)," said Haller. "He just wasn't in his rhythm ... He will have to play well for us to beat the Aggies."

"Have you seen that before?" a deflated Texas coach Abe Lemons asked rhetorically. "Did that look familiar? ... We go crazy at the wrong time — missing free throws and throwing the ball away. That pass that Baylor stole, I could read 'Spalding' (brand name) on it as it was coming toward me."

Tech had a somewhat easier time against Rice, even though the Owls had beaten the Raiders twice during the regular season.

"It's tough to be able to beat somebody three times in a year," grinned Tech coach Gerald Myers, who sat his starters down to a standing ovation as time expired. "We had good concentration ... it was the best game we have played on defense all year."

Tech forward Joe Washington was given the job of guarding Rice's Ricky Pierce, the nation's No. 2 scorer, and he held Pierce to 14 points, less than half his season average.

"They really played some ball tonight," said Pierce. "They put the pressure on and controlled the tempo and denied us the ball."

"The guys ... just kept patting each other on the back," said Raider center Clarence Swannegan. "Everybody was fired up and that kept us going."

TCU coach Jim Killingsworth did not have much praise for his Killer Frogs, even though they won.

"We couldn't seem to get anything going," he said. "We didn't have any rhythm at all."

He did laud junior guard Darrell Browder for a team-leading nine rebounds and his team direction.

"I thought he did a great job of running the offense, probably the best of his career," Killingsworth said.

Sports Briefs

BASKETBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who averaged 30.3 points and 10.3 rebounds in leading the Los Angeles Lakers to four victories last week, was named the National Basketball Association Player of the Week.

His top performance of the week included a season-high 41 points, 19 rebounds and five blocked shots in a 116-114 double-overtime victory over Philadelphia last Friday.

HOCKEY

MONTREAL (AP) — Wayne Gretzky, who shattered the National Hockey League's record for goals in a season, and rookie Neal Broten of the Minnesota North Stars were named co-winners of the league's Player of the Week award.

Gretzky, the 21-year-old Edmonton Oilers phenom who broke Phil Esposito's mark of 76 goals in a season last Wednesday against Buffalo, had six goals and four assists in three games last week. He now has 82 goals and 99 assists for 181 points, both records.

Broten was chosen after he scored four goals and had 11 points in four contests during the same period.

FOOTBALL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to order the Oakland Raiders-National Football League trial moved from Los Angeles.

The court denied the change of venue sought by the NFL, saying that it had failed to prove a change in the trial location was warranted.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson ruled Feb. 2 that the second trial between the Raiders and NFL be held in Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tracy Austin, the top seed in the $150,000 Avon Championships of Los Angeles, was forced to withdraw from the women's tennis tournament because of first and second degree burns suffered when boiling water was spilled on her over the weekend.

Heels Regain Top Poll Spot

By TOM CANAVAN Associated Press Writer

Preseason favorite North Carolina, which reigned over the elite of college basketball from the beginning of the season until late January, once again rules the Associated Press poll following a week of upsets among the nation's Top Twenty teams.

A dozen members of last week's Top Twenty, including then top-ranked Virginia, lost at least one game during the week. West Virginia, ranked sixth at the time, also saw its 23-game winning streak — the longest in the country — end against Rutgers.

North Carolina, ranked second last week, collected 36 of 60 first-place votes in the balloting by nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters Monday. The Tar Heels, 24-2 following victories over Georgia Tech and Duke last week, picked up 1,162 of a possible 1,200 points — 40 more than runner-up DePaul.

Ray Meyer's Blue Demons received 16 first-place votes after raising their record to 26-1 with victories over Furman and Notre Dame. DePaul now has the nation's longest major winning streak at 21 games.

Virginia slipped to No. 3 following its 47-46 loss at Maryland. The Cavaliers still managed five first-place votes and 1,097 points.

The Vandals had 766 points — 32 more than the Gophers, who were ranked 13th last week when they downed Big Ten rival Iowa. The Hoyas of Georgetown, 23-6 after victories over Providence and Connecticut, were another 10 points back at 724.

West Virginia, now 24-2, and Tulsa, ranked eighth last week when it was upset by Bradley in overtime, rounded out the Top Ten. The Mountaineers got 617, while the Golden Hurricane had 565 to nip both Iowa (562) and Fresno State (560) for 10th place.

Memphis State slipped three slots to No. 13 following a loss to red-hot Louisville, and was followed by Arkansas, Kentucky, Wake Forest, Kansas State, Alabama, UCLA and Alabama-Birmingham, which won the Sun Belt Conference tournament Sunday and a berth in the NCAA tournament.

San Francisco, outlasted by Pepperdine last week, and Tennessee, a losers to both Georgia and Auburn last week, fell from the Top Twenty, being replaced by Kansas State and Alabama-Birmingham.

World Series Goat Relives Disaster

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — George Frazier, one of the new young aces of the New York Yankee pitching staff, has discovered that fame is fame regardless of how it is achieved.

Over the winter, he found himself inundated with an inordinate number of speaking engagements although his fame was negative — "goat" of the 1981 World Series.

"I started every speech by telling the audience that I was the man who lost three games in a single World Series — a modern record," he said.

"I explained I was the second in all of baseball history to do it and the other person was Lefty Williams of the 1919 Chicago White Sox, but my record was more outstanding."

"Williams did it in eight games and I did it in six and, besides, Williams was later banished from baseball for throwing the 1919 Series to the Cincinnati Reds."

"I was trying, and Williams wasn't."

One might have imagined that the handsome 6-foot-5, 200-pound right-hander from Tulsa, Okla., spent the cold off-season months brooding over his three losses to the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1981.

Nothing was farther from the case.

"Aw, sometimes, I would be sitting at the dinner table and suddenly burst out, 'Losing three games — how did I do it?'"

"But my wife, Mary, always would stop me and say, 'Forget it, honey. It's in the past. You were just unlucky. You'll make it up.'"

"I will, too. I've got 17 years to do it."

Last week, the Second Ten was Iowa, Georgetown, Minnesota, Fresno State, Arkansas, San Francisco, Alabama, Wake Forest, Tennessee and UCLA.

The week's biggest plunge was taken by Kentucky, which tumbled from No. 7 to 15th place following a 94-78 loss to Louisiana State.

Frazier said he didn't brood over the personal disaster because everybody from owner George Steinbrenner to the most vociferous fan had joined in lending encouragement.

"Mary was tremendous," he said. "She held up well until the sixth game when the Dodgers clinched the Series. Some woman sitting near the wives' box rose and said in a loud voice, 'My God, I can't believe he lost again.'"

"Then Mary burst into tears. I didn't know that until she told me in November. She was dry-eyed and smiling when she hugged me after the game."

The young pitcher said the winter doldrums were further eased when his wife bore him his second child, Brian, in December.

"A thing like that can make you forget all your other miseries," he said. Frazier has another boy, Matthew, 2 1/2.

Thrown into the World Series in his first year as a Yankee middle reliever, did not pitch badly overall but was the final victim of some dinky Dodger hits and loose Yankee fielding.

"It wasn't pressure," he said. "I was more nervous against Oakland."

Little rules to live by: If you must stand in line to get a seat, the publicity almost invariably is of higher quality than the food you'll be served.

Herd Fems Third at Pampa

The Hereford Whiteface girls' track team placed third among 12 teams at the Top O' Texas Invitational Track Meet at Pampa last weekend, accumulating 79 points.

Tascosa, a perennial track power in the Panhandle, won the team title with 123 points, while Amarillo High placed second with 111. The nearest District 4-5 team to Hereford was Coronado, which tied Pampa for sixth place with 37 points.

HHS coach Martha Emerson was satisfied with the results of the Herd's initial cinder showing. "We started out with some times that we finished with last year," the coach said. "I was pleased that we finished third out of twelve teams in a strong field."

Paula Mason's second in the 400 and Lori Albracht's runner-up placing in the 200 highlighted the Herd's showing in the running events, while Maria Carreon took a silver medal in the discus for HHS.

Mason clocked a 62.4 in the 400 meter race, which was won by Tascosa's Sonya Dreyer in a time of 61.5. Albracht was clipped at the tape in the 200 meter event by Sondra Ramsey of Dumas, who won the event with a 26.8 clocking, one-tenth of a second ahead of Albracht.

Carreon tossed the disc 108-7 1/2, placing behind Tascosa's Teresa Lundgreen, who won the event with a toss of 116-2 1/2.

Hereford's 1600 meter relay team of Allyson Thomas, Michelle Osborn, Mason and Deborah Rogers took second in that event. The Herd quartet was timed in 4:16.8 to finish behind Amarillo High, which had a time of 4:15.3.

Other placings for Hereford included the following:

400 Meter Relay (Sandy Brownlow, Albracht, Dede Dobbins, Jill Pickens), 6th, 52.9.

800 Meter Relay (Brownlow, Albracht, Dobbins, Pickens), 3rd, 1:52.7.

Allyson Thomas, 3rd in the 400, 63.7.

Michelle Osborn, 4th in the 400, 64.5.

Kellie Howell, 4th in the 3200, 13:11.5 and 6th in the 1600, 6:12.8.

Dana Cabbiness, 5th in the 800, 2:33.8; and 5th in the 1600, 6:08.3.

Jill Pickens, 4th in the high jump, 5-0.

D'Nan Brannon, 4th in the discus, 97-4.

Golfers Fifth At NMMI Meet

The HHS golf team finished fifth at the New Mexico Military Institute Invitational Tournament played in Roswell, N.M. over the weekend. Scott Skinner's 163 for the 36-hole event topped the Whitefaces, who had a total of 663.

Borger copped the team title with a 638 total, while Plainview was second at 640. Lubbock Coronado placed third with a 642, and Monterey was fourth with a 653.

Borger's Andy Anderson took medalist honors on the first hole of a playoff with Plainview's Randy Mickey after the two tied for low honors with 152s.

Other Hereford totals included Frankie Garcia, 164; David Dudding, 168; Brett Barrick, 168; and Paul Jorde, 185.

JV Girls Win Track Trophy

Laura Kosub won the 3200 Meter Run, and the 800 Meter Relay and 1600 Meter Relay teams won titles as the Hereford junior varsity girls track team won their division at the Top O' Texas Invitational at Pampa last weekend.

Kosub took the distance event with a time of 13:32 to help the Herd to 116 points at the first place ranking. Coronado took second place in the team standings with 105 points, while Estacado was third with 73 points.

The HHS 800 Meter Relay team won that event with a 1:57 clocking, while the 1600

Meter Relay team was timed at 4:32.9 to take that title as well. In addition, the Herd placed second in the 400 Meter Relay with a time of 55.0.

Other placers for Hereford included Cheri Barker, 6th in the 3200 (14:35); Marta Carlile, 2nd in the 800 (2:41); Jana Morgan, 2nd in the 100 (12.9); Angela Rody, 3rd in the 400 (68.3); Lori Walterscheid, 2nd in the 200 (29.7); Liz Hayes, 4th in the 200 (30.6) and 2nd in the long jump (15-3); Marty Valdez, 5th in the 1600 (6:38); and Theresa Phibbs, 4th in the triple jump.

Ex-NFL Hero

Bobby Layne, at 55, is Still Zesty

By Murray Olderman

DETROIT (NEA) — Robert Lawrence Layne never expected to find himself in such a hallowed procession. The names, to anyone connected with football, were awesome: George Halas, Art Rooney, Red Grange, Mrs. Vincent Lombardi. And now Bobby Layne was next in line.

As the others had done before him, he flipped the ceremonial coin at midfield before a Super Bowl game, with the captains of both teams around him. He was in full TV view of 100 million Americans as a distinguished guest at the recent Super Bowl XVI. And it almost got to him.

Almost but not quite, because the supreme facet of Bobby Layne's character is that he is always true to himself.

For Bobby Layne — the free spirit, the rollicking bon vivant, the man with the whiskey voice and a thousand experiences to match — it was nice to get "that letter from Mr. Rozelle" asking him to toss the coin in the locale that had been the scene of his greatest football exploits. And Bobby appreciated it: "Second greatest honor I ever received." The first was getting elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Even at the mellow age of 55, Bobby exudes the aura of the brash, gregarious, hell-raising leader of the posse, who, if his step was just a little more firm and his arm a shade more limber, could still go out and lead an offense on the fields of football.

He now lives comfortably in Lubbock, Texas, where he dabbles in oil and other properties and has been married to the same lovely lady, the former Carol Krueger, for 37 years.

Not long ago, he ached to get back into football and campaigned actively for the head coaching job at Texas Tech, which happens to be near his back door in Lubbock.

"I've lived there since 19 and 46," he explained, "and they've never gone to the Cotton Bowl. It would have been fun. But I didn't get it. My past hurt me quite a bit. It's a Baptist, non-drinking job."

And that admittedly isn't Layne, who hasn't missed much in the way of social diversion through the years.

"They said," continued Bobby, "I didn't know how to recruit. Hell, I know how to recruit. With $100 bills."

Pithily, he had stripped away the hypocrisy of college football, and that is Layne's way. He never pretended to be anything he wasn't. Through 15 professional football seasons (1948-62), highlighted by three NFL championships with the Detroit Lions, he played hard both on and off the field and hued to only one goal: winning.

"Nothing counts," he said, "except championship rings. You never saw (Francis) Tarkenton wear one. Records (Tarkenton is the leading passer of all time) don't mean a damn thing if you don't wear one of those rings."

Layne was, above all, a winner. He didn't throw a pretty pass. He didn't care about completion percentages. But he had absolute confidence in his ability to take a team to victory.

In the 1953 championship game against the Cleveland Browns, with the Lions backed on their own 20-yard line with three minutes to play, trailing 16-10, Bobby looked around the huddle and drawled, "Awright, fellers, y'all block and ol' Bobby'll pass you rah to the championship."

And he did, in less than a minute. Layne invented the two-minute offense. His old teammate, Doak Walker, once said, "Bobby never lost a game in his life. Time occasionally ran out on him."

Layne himself admits to only two disappointments in his life: 1. that he never won a championship for Art Rooney in the five years with the Pittsburgh Steelers that wrapped up his career; 2. that he has never owned an airplane.

Still, he hasn't missed out on much. Don Meredith, another ebullient Texan who played quarterback, once mused that when he came back to earth in his second

Carner Aiming At Hall of Fame

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Give JoAnne Carner a choice and she'll gladly settle for two consecutive victories and a spot in the Ladies Professional Golf Association's Hall of Fame.

"It's the hardest Hall of Fame to get into," Carner said. "The last ones went in about four years ago."

Unlike other sports Halls, the LPGA Hall of Fame is based strictly on performance: win 30 events with two different major championships, 35 official events with one major championship, or 40 official events.

Carner, who didn't join the pro tour until she was 30 years old in 1970, is just two victories from being eligible for induction into the LPGA Hall of Fame. After winning the second tournament of this year's tour, she has 33 career victories, including one major — the U.S. Women's Open, which she has won twice.

"My goal this year is get enough tournament wins to get into the Hall of Fame," Carner said. "The sooner I do it, the less pressure it will be."

"There's enough pressure already. But when you get out there knowing you can get into the Hall of Fame with a victory, there's added pressure."

Carner was in New York Monday to help announce the first points-bonus system in golf. News conferences also were held in Los Angeles and Tokyo to announce a $4.5 million prize money program established by Mazda.

Under the three-year agreement with the LPGA, a $300,000 bonus pool will be established by Mazda annually. A points system based on players' finishes in LPGA Tour events will divide this among the top 10 players in points standings following the final LPGA event of the season — the Mazda Japan Classic in November.

The Series' first-place winner will receive $125,000, the richest cash award in women's golf. Second place will be worth $60,000.

In addition, each top stop winner will receive either a new automobile or $5,000 in cash. The LPGA and tournament sponsors also will share another $1 million annually in promotional programs for the new Series.

"This will unify all of our sponsors, reward all of our players with a bonus pool, expand media coverage and provide a year-end bonus pool," said Ray Volpe, LPGA commissioner.

Carner already has received a check for $5,000 for her win in Miami last month. Hollis Stacy, winner of the first and third tournaments of 1982, received a check for $5,000 and a new car.

"When it (the new bonus system) was first announced to the players, there was a standing ovation in the room," Carner said. "There's an awful lot of money."

"When I see $125,000, that's as much as I was making two years ago for the entire year."

Last September, Carner passed the $1 million mark in career earnings, a plateau reached by only by two others — Kathy Whitworth and Donna Caponi. Although her goal is the Hall of Fame, the new money looks good to her.

"I played 30 tournaments last year," she said. "I was going to cut back to maybe 23. Now, I might play all 38 with that kind of money."

Sutton Will Be Ready

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Pitching ace Don Sutton, whose kneecap was broken by a pitch five months ago, will be ready to go when the 1982 season opens April 6, Houston Astros' manager Bill Virdon says.

Virdon made the announcement Monday after the right-hander pitched in practice Monday.

"I know he'll do whatever it takes to get himself ready by the time the season starts," Virdon said.

The Astros' pitching coach concurred.

"He threw today for about eight minutes and had no trouble," Mel Wright said. "He threw his full assortment of pitches."

Wright said he would have Sutton throw every day for four or five days, then give him a day off before letting him pitch batting practice for the first time Sunday.

Sutton, who caused a stir in the off-season by saying on a radio talk show that he would like to end his career with the California Angels, arrived to find his locker decorated with bubble gum cards and other paraphernalia from that team.

Second baseman Joe Pittman signed a one-year contract Monday. He was the team's last unsigned player.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — David L. Young, the Richardson appliance salesman who quit his job this year to seek the Democratic nomination for governor, may not be the best known candidate in the race, but he may well be the most unique.

Most political observers aren't taking Young's candidacy too seriously since he says he won't spend more than $10,000 to make the race (the other candidates are expected to spend millions), but Young apparently does and he has proposed a "new era of equality" for Texas.

Young, who claims to have been a theologian, writer and teacher during his career, says he wants to see a "unified approach to Texas government based on equality of representation, equality of taxation and equality of opportunity."

Young, 38, says the rich are under-taxed and over-represented, while poor and middle class Texans are over-taxed and under-represented.

The former Montgomery Ward employee and Austin native says Texas has an "elitist" government full of tycoons and lawyers that cater to large corporations while those with the least income bear the heaviest tax burden.

"I will work to reverse the reprehensible regressivity in Texas taxes," Young says.

White Criticism
While Young was pledging to fight elitism, one of the major contenders for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination was being blasted for his civil rights record.

Ruben Sandoval of San Antonio, national civil rights director for the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC), says Attorney General Mark White's record on civil rights issues is so poor that Hispanics should "go out to lunch" or vote for Republican Gov. Bill Clements in November if White gets the Democratic nomination.

Sandoval charged that White "has the sentiments of a Klansman" and has opposed such issues as extension of the U.S. Voting Rights Act, expansion of bilingual education and free education to children of illegal aliens.

White denied that he opposes bilingual education and the Voting Rights Act, and said he favors free schooling for the children of undocumented workers as long as the federal government picks up the tab.

At least one Hispanic leader, former LULAC president Ruben Bonilla of Corpus Christi, already has endorsed Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple of Dill for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Filing Deadline

The State Democratic Party has set back the filing deadline in the land commissioner's race because of the recent death of Jerry Sadler.

Sadler, who served as land commissioner in the 1960s, was seeking re-election to that post prior to his death from natural causes Feb. 25.

The 74-year-old Sadler was a long time veteran in Texas politics and had held a number of posts in state government.

In 1976, he was able to get into the runoff for railroad commissioner even though he got into the race late and spent very little money in his campaign.

The deadline in the race has been set back until March 12. The deadline for the GOP side will not be extended.

Gasohol Standstill

Farmers, energy officials and others who staunchly supported the exemption of gasohol from the five-cent state gasoline tax were counting on the fuel not only as an alternate energy source but as a potential major market for agricultural products.

However, lower gasoline prices and high interest rates have apparently cooled interest in alcohol fuel.

Officials of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council say the low gasoline prices have negated incentives to get into the marketing of gasohol, while high interest rates have held up financing for construction of the plants needed to produce the ethanol that is mixed with unleaded gasoline.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, who sponsored the gasohol tax exemption, said the exemption should have been approved two years ago when money was available and long lines at service stations made the public more aware of the need for the alcohol fuel.

The current glut of gasoline could keep prices low for a few months or a few years, officials say, and keep interest in gasohol down.

"That's unfortunate," says Kubiak, "because people have forgotten the long lines and the trouble we had to go to just to get a tank full of fuel. Those days will be coming again."

Mandatory Insurance

The state's new mandatory liability auto insurance law has been confusing some motorists who aren't quite sure what proof of insurance the law requires.

However, the Department of Public Safety has come up with a simple solution to the problem.

DPS says motorists should simply make a copy of the first page of their insurance policy and keep it in their cars.

The front page of the auto policy should satisfy any police officer who asks for proof of insurance, DPS officials say.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Aid won't stop hearing loss

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently a representative of a well-known brand of hearing aids performed a hearing test, offered to local people as a free service. He advised me that one inner ear had trouble picking up a higher range and I had a 37 percent hearing loss. He prescribed his hearing aid (over $500) to pick up that range. He also claimed that it would prevent further deterioration of my hearing.

Actually my hearing does not appear to be a problem. My husband agrees. My husband's test was declared good. We are 70 years of age.

Will such an aid help to prevent further deterioration of my hearing? After all, prevention would make it worthwhile but otherwise it would not seem to be necessary.

DEAR READER — Most people in your age group will have some loss of hearing for high frequency sounds. The loss may not be great enough to interfere with normal hearing for conversation.

No hearing aid will prevent loss of hearing. I don't know what the salesman actually told you but if he told you that I would recommend not dealing with him. Hearing aids serve only one purpose, to improve your existing hearing. In fact if a poorly fitted hearing aid is used to amplify sound to a great degree it could cause noise-induced hearing loss.

I don't think anyone should buy a hearing aid who has not had an examination by a physician or an audiologist. An audiologist has a masters degree with five to six years of college. If he is certified by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association he will also have had supervised experience. He may provide hearing aids for you. But a straight hearing aid salesman may not have these qualifications. Some have only a few days or a few weeks training before getting their license. That is why many people end up with a drawer full of unused hearing aids.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently I was diagnosed as having thyroiditis and am currently taking Synthroid. I'm 26 and gave birth to my first child nine months ago. My doctor explained that my body is producing too many antibodies which are killing the thyroid cells. He said I would be able to have another child without any risk to it from the Synthroid. Do you agree with this and do you consider thyroiditis to be a serious condition? Right now we're working on adjusting my dosage because I still feel fatigued a lot of the time.

DEAR READER —

Sounds like you have a fine doctor. One cause of low thyroid function is destruction of thyroid gland tissue from your own immune system (there are other causes, too). The Synthroid merely replaces the thyroid hormone your normal gland would produce.

If you don't get enough thyroid you are less likely to get pregnant. And if you are properly regulated to provide the optimal amount of thyroid hormone you certainly should be as likely as other mothers to have a normal pregnancy.

Low thyroid function can be and is one of many causes for fatigue but most fatigue is caused by other factors.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband, who is 74 and an angina pectoris patient, drinks a glass of prune juice every morning.

Can this be detrimental to his health? Our two physicians disagree. One holds it is a no no, the other thinks it's all right as long as it doesn't cause diarrhea. We would appreciate your opinion.

DEAR READER — Prune juice does contain a chemical (oxypheisatin, an anthraquinone) which was once used as a chemical laxative. It is not used anymore because patients using it developed chronic liver disease. Whether the amount in a small amount of prune juice is enough to be harmful has not been well studied.

The other point is that anyone with heart disease such as angina pectoris should not need to strain for a bowel movement. The respiratory effort and straining can trigger serious, even fatal, heart irregularities. Of course this can be prevented with other means of bowel management. But many people use prune juice all their lives with no ill effects.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Polly Fisher

A French lesson

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Can you tell me what the terms "chiffonade" and "confit" mean as they refer to French food? Also does a dish described as "au gratin" always have cheese on it? My husband doesn't think I know anything about cooking and there's a couple of bets riding on your answer. Thanks. — MRS. P.K.

DEAR MRS. P.K. — Chiffonade can refer to any dish garnished with or served with shredded vegetables. A confit is a preparation of medium-size pieces of salted meat, usually goose, duck or pork, simmered in and covered with the meat's melted drippings. It's a way of preserving the meat and is very rich. A dish served au gratin doesn't necessarily have cheese on top. The term means that the top of the food has been quickly browned, generally under the broiler or in a very hot oven. Crumbs and/or cheese are frequently sprinkled on top to provide added flavor and an attractive appearance. Hope you won your bets! — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — Living in the Arctic Midwest, I've found a way to improve "snakes" used for keeping drafts from coming in under doors. Cut two pieces of heavy fabric 12 inches wide and four inches longer than the bottom of the door. Seam the pieces together on three sides leaving one end open. Then sew a line down the exact center (through both thicknesses) making two separate chambers. Fill both sides with corn (about three-quarters full) and sew the open end closed. To use, lay the snake with one filled side on the floor and the other resting up on the door. This works much better than the old conventional snake (a single roll) since it more effectively blocks the opening under the door. — BEN-JI

DEAR POLLY — One of winter's most exasperating jobs is putting children's galoshes on over their shoes. Here are some tricks to make it easier. If rubber galoshes are cold and stiff, warming them carefully with a hand-held hair dryer will make them more pliable and easier to pull on. Putting plastic bags over the children's shoes, then dusting the outside of the bags with cornstarch, will reduce friction so that the galoshes will pull on easily. — MRS. R.F.

Industry Fizzing Over 'No Caffeine' Theme

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The soft-drink industry is fizzing over a new advertising campaign by Seven-Up, which after two decades as the "uncola" is trying to increase its share of the market by attacking a basic ingredient of its cola competitors — caffeine.

Les Zuke, a spokesman for the Seven-Up Co., said Monday that Seven-Up, which is owned by Philip Morris Inc., has been running two of its new television ads featuring the no-caffeine theme for several weeks in St. Louis and Los Angeles.

Zuke said ads proclaiming, "Seven-Up...Crisp and Clean...No Caffeine...Feelin' Seven-Up" would be introduced nationwide within several days.

One of the ads features Dallas Cowboys defensive lineman Randy White with two children. It's a typical Seven-Up commercial highlighting a well-known sports figure.

But it's the other commercial that has upset the rest of the industry, which is now dominated by Coca-Cola and Pepsi-Cola.

The ad features Tug McGraw, relief pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, brushing aside cans of Dr. Pepper, Sunkist orange soda, Pepsi, Coke, Mountain Dew and Mello Yello and saying as he reaches for Seven-Up, "I'm taking no caffeine."

"Our commercial simply is informing the consumer that our product does not contain caffeine," Zuke said. "We are making this known to the consumer because for many people it is important whether a drink contains caffeine."

Other soft-drink companies claim the Seven-Up ad suggests that soda with caffeine is dangerous to health — an issue that has been debated since the mid 1970s.

Joe Block, PepsiCo Inc.

vice president of consumer affairs and marketing, criticized the new Seven-Up campaign as a "diservice to the public" since it perpetuates unsubstantiated health concerns by the use of scare tactics.

"Caffeine is one of the most thoroughly tested and researched substances in our food supply," he said. "PepsiCo Co. is firmly convinced that caffeine is perfectly safe, imposes no hazard to the public — a conviction that is fortified by extensive scientific research."

The Wall Street Journal said Monday that Pepsi sent mailgrams to its bottlers threatening them with violation of their exclusive franchise agreements if they go along with Seven-Up's ad campaign. Asked about the report, Block would say only that "communications with the bottler is privileged information and confidential."

The federal Food and Drug Administration last year advised pregnant women to avoid consuming products with caffeine after heavy doses of caffeine caused birth defects in rats. Other studies have pinpointed caffeine as a stimulant for adults and indicated it might impair the development of children's nervous systems.

But recent studies, including one released by Harvard Medical School a month ago, concluded that coffee consumption has a minimal effect on the outcome of pregnancy.

The controversy has had its impact on sales of caffeine drinks. Studies prepared for the International Coffee Organization in London revealed that decaffeinated coffee accounted for 17.2 percent of all cups of coffee consumed during a month-long test period in early 1981 compared with 5.8 percent during a comparable period in 1970.

Cola-Cola Co. would say only that the company, which commands 37.5 percent of the soft-drink market to No. 2 Pepsi's 24.5 percent, would not comment on another company's "competitive activities."

Spokesman Carlton Curtis said Coke sent "informational" mailgrams to its bottlers last week about the ad campaign.

The parent companies, which make soft drink syrup and concentrate, pay for nationwide ad campaigns, but they frequently enter into cooperative agreements with their bottlers — which actually put the soft drink in bottles and sell it — to run ads on local radio and TV.

Seven-Up's Zuke said General Cinema Corp., of Chestnut Hill, Mass., which makes Sunkist orange soda, had contacted Seven-Up about the ads. General Cinema says that although regular Sunkist soda contains caffeine, diet Sunkist does not and the cans could be confused in the TV ad.

Zuke declined to say whether Seven-Up would change its TV ad to satisfy General Cinema.

Comparative advertising is nothing new to the soft-drink industry. But previous ads compared taste or smell, not the effect of ingredients.

"In the past it hasn't been: 'It's not good for your health,'" said Emanuel Goldman, an analyst who follows the soft-drink industry for the securities firm of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co.

Seven-Up's new strategy is posing some difficult problems for the bottlers, who often handle several brands of soft drinks. Of the 464 bottlers who handle Seven-Up products, for instance, only eight are owned wholly by the company, Zuke said.

"Imagine yourself a bottler where two-thirds of earnings may come from caffeine products," Goldman said. "Most of their products are being disparaged by inference."

And, Goldman said, Seven-Up's campaign could backfire if consumers began to associate all soft drinks with caffeine and health hazards and turned away from soda all together.

Seven-Up cannot afford to lose more customers. It posted a $7.1 million operating loss in 1980 and $1.7 million last year. Goldman estimated Seven-Up's market share at 5.8 percent, down from 6.5 percent three or four years ago.

Human Rights Factor In Foreign Aid Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking more money for foreign aid in the fiscal 1983 budget, is telling Congress it would consider human rights factors before sending any funds to Chile, Argentina or Guatemala.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., scheduled to testify today before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, was expected to face tough questioning on proposed aid for the three Latin American nations.

The administration is requesting $8.67 billion for foreign military and security-related aid — $1.6 billion more than Congress already has authorized for the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. Congress last year approved foreign aid covering a two-year period.

Included in the additional amount are requests for $250,000 in training funds for Guatemala and $50,000 each for the same purpose for Argentina and Chile.

Congress cut off aid to those nations after the Carter administration raised objections to their human rights policies.

State Department officials, briefing reporters on the security assistance budget, said human rights and other factors would be considered before any decision to spend the allocations for the three countries.

Meanwhile, Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio, and 27 other House Democrats, told the president they think the War Powers Act would require him to consult with Congress before allowing U.S. military advisers in strife-torn El Salvador to arm for combat.

And the State Department announced that Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., will head a delegation of American observers being sent to El Salvador, at the request of the Central American nation's government, to observe the March 28 elections for a constituent assembly. Mrs. Kassebaum is a member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

In other congressional business:

—The Pentagon asked for authority to quickly shift about $2 billion in ammunition and war reserve stocks to the South Korean armed forces in case of an outbreak or threat of war with North Korea.

—The Senate debated a bill, passed last fall by the House and endorsed by Reagan, that would impose jail terms on journalists and other individuals who disclose the name of a U.S. intelligence agent. A final vote was not scheduled.

—The Christian Action Council urged Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, to abandon his proposed constitutional amendment to bar abortions because it is "doomed to failure." Instead, the group is asking Hatch to support legislation that would give fetuses legal standing by stating that life begins at conception.

If Finances Work, Dallas Will Host GOP

DALLAS (AP) — If city representatives and Republican National Committee members can hammer out financial terms, President Reagan will get his way and Dallas will be targeted for the 1984 GOP nominating convention, officials said.

"The president wants us to have it here and if we can work out all the financial aspects, it looks like Texas will be the place," committee chairman Richard Richards Monday.

President Reagan has written Texas Gov. Bill Clements that he would like the convention held in the nation's seventh-largest city, and Richards traveled to Dallas on Feb. 10 to take a preliminary look.

He returned Monday with eight members of the national committee's site selection committee to tour the city, examining both Reunion Arena and the Dallas Convention Center.

He said site selection committee members would return April 13 to inspect hotel facilities. A formal vote still must be held by the full committee July 19.

"Dallas is the only city that we've looked at, to be honest with other cities, that had an interest in us," Richards said.

He said officials from another city had contacted GOP authorities and asked that their city be kept in the running. He declined to name the city.

Earlier cities mentioned as possible sites were St. Louis, Atlanta, Detroit and Kansas City, Mo.

"We'll begin our negotiations with your city concerning financial matters and hope it all works out," Richards said at a news conference here. "I don't know of a place that has greater potential than you have here."

Richards said he planned today to telephone White House Chief of Staff James Baker, a Texas native, to report the committee's findings.

Richards confirmed that the national committee expected Dallas to foot the bill for convention security, but he said Dallas commerce would benefit in return, estimating that the conventioners collectively would spend $25 million to $40 million a day.

Dallas Mayor Jack Evans said the city should be able to provide enough security for those attending the 1984 convention.

He has said earlier that $10 to $12 million in private donations would need to be raised since the municipal government could not spend tax money on the convention.

Traffic Tight Before Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Traffic was so tight when Air Florida Flight 90 crashed that another jetliner had touched down on the same runway seconds before the Boeing 737 lifted into the air, according to investigators.

Federal Aviation Administration regulations require a separation of at least two miles between departing and arriving aircraft.

But calculations by federal investigators show that at one point Flight 90 and an incoming Eastern Airlines jet briefly shared the same runway — which is 6,866 feet long.

As Flight 90 passed its "point of no return" — after which its pilot had no choice but to proceed with takeoff — the Eastern jet had just touched down near the other end of the runway, the calculations show.

The issue of separation was expected to be a major topic when Federal Aviation Administration officials began testifying, possibly today, before a board of inquiry of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The NTSB investigators and other sources emphasized that no link had been found between the degree of separation and the accident, which killed 78 people when the Air Florida jet hit a busy commuter bridge and plunged into the Potomac River.

But one pilot knowledgeable about conditions that prevailed on the snowy Jan. 13 afternoon at National Airport said, "For this type of weather it's extremely close." The pilot asked that his name not be used.

The calculations developed by the NTSB's air traffic control group show that Eastern Flight 1451 touched down at 31 seconds after 4 p.m. on National Airport's runway 36. At the same time, according to a transcript of the Flight 90 cockpit recorder, the Air Florida jet was still struggling to get off the ground toward the other end of the runway, having just reached its point of no return.

Michael J. Pangia, associate counsel for the FAA, said Monday that FAA officials were expected to respond to the NTSB calculations in their testimony.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said that even if it were found that separation rules were violated the reason could have been the inability of Air Florida Flight 90 the gain proper acceleration during its takeoff.

Anti-Busing Vote Set Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is poised to approve tough anti-busing legislation that could eliminate most existing court orders requiring busing as a method for desegregating public schools.

A final vote was scheduled today on a Justice Department authorization bill which includes the most stringent anti-busing bill ever cleared by either house of Congress.

However, the proposal still faces an uphill fight in the House, which has approved its own, weaker version of legislation.

Senate passage of the proposal was assured last week when a small group of liberals abandoned a 9-month battle to block approval of the proposal sponsored by Sens.

Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., who led a filibuster against the proposal, predicted the measure would never become law because of anticipated resistance in the House, and because the courts are likely to declare it unconstitutional even if it is approved by Congress.

Supporters say the legislation is nothing more than a reflection of widespread public disaffection with busing among families of all races, and economic status.

Specifically, the anti-busing amendment prohibits federal judges from ordering students transported when the roundtrip exceeds 10 miles or takes more than 30 minutes.

It would permit parents or schools boards where busing orders are now in effect to ask that they be dissolved.

The anti-busing bill is the first of a series of conservative proposals in Congress that seek to strip federal judges of authority on a number of issues, including abortion and school prayer.

The average SPS customer spends the same percentage of his budget for electricity as he did in 1976. SPS keeps electric service costs lower by engineering and designing its own power plants, cooling towers and certain pollution-control devices. SPS is continuing its research into alternative energy sources to guarantee that our customers will have a reliable supply of electric power.

Jim Martin, district manager, Clovis.

SPS employees pay the same rate for electric service as do the Company's other customers. Although some utility companies in other areas offer special employee rates, SPS employees do not receive a discount on their electric service.

Jim Steinhilper, senior rate analyst, Amarillo.

SPS must build new power plants to take advantage of coal, a more reliable, less expensive fuel. Gas-fired plants cannot be economically converted to other fuel sources, so SPS must construct coal-fired plants to meet the energy needs of its customers. Coal-fired plants are more expensive to construct than gas-fired, but the SPS engineering and design staffs are able to build coal-fired plants at about one-half the national average.

Berry Smith, reports control supervisor, Amarillo.

Knowing what electricity is worth is worth knowing. For answers to your questions, call or write your SPS manager.
