Missing Woman Evangelist Is Found Alive

PROSTRATE FORM FOUND ON STREET IN DOUGLAS, ARIZ.

AMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON TELLS OF KIDNAPPING AND HER ESCAPE

(By the Associated Press) DOUGLAS, Ariz., June 23.—Positive identification of a woman in a hospital here as Amee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, who was reported drowned there May 18 last was made over the telephone by her mother, Mrs. Mable Kennedy, today.

The evangelist's mother made the identification in conversation with William F. McCafferty, editor of the Dispatch. Identification was established through a long white scar on the second finger of the woman's hand and also by her giving the name of a pet pigeon. The woman in the hospital here told the name of the pigeon, which was Jennie, and also said that she was injured on the second finger of her right hand in Durham Township, Near Ingersoll, Ontario. The mother told McCafferty the same thing.

These statements led the mother to the declaration that the woman was Amee Semple McPherson beyond doubt. McCafferty said that he had known Mrs. McPherson in Denver and declared that he was certain she was the woman lying in the Douglas hospital.

Says She Was Kidnapped The woman, told Chief of Police today that she had been kidnapped, taken across the Mexican border and escaped from her captors. She said that a man named "Steve" and a woman named "Rose" had carried her off to hold her for ransom. He believed that her prison was somewhere near Mexicali, immediately across the border from Calexico, Calif., for she had heard the man and woman referring to Mexicali in their conversation.

Two days ago, she said, she escaped and walked for several miles until she was picked up by some Americans, who took her to Douglas. There she went to the hospital where she is lying in a state of collapse. The police described the woman as having long, bronze colored hair, while

LUBBOCK STANDS GOOD CHANCE FOR MEETING, REPORT

FORT WORTH DELEGATION SAID TO HOLD POWER OF DECISION

Lubbock is conceded to have an excellent chance to get the 1927 convention of the West Texas chamber of commerce, according to telephone reports to the Daily Journal from Amarillo, scene of the present convention, this afternoon as the third and last day of the annual session drew to a close. The vote is to be taken at the night session tonight, the reports said. A strong Lubbock delegation, flashing the Scarlet and Black, official colors of the Tech College, has been assembling the streets of the North Plains oil metropolis during the three days, and sentiment among representatives of both the North and South Plains favors the next meeting coming to Lubbock, according to the report.

As far as could be told early this afternoon, chances between the four contestants for the meeting were about equal, with the Fort Worth delegation not yet having expressed their views or preferences, but it was the belief of those in charge of Lubbock's fight that Fort Worth can be won over to Lubbock's plea. Wichita Falls, San Antonio, and El Paso, in addition to Lubbock, are offering to entertain the next convention, and all three are making hard bids, but according to reports, sentiment generally is in favor of keeping the convention in West Texas, despite the plea of one or two of the outlying cities that they are in the outskirts of what is termed West Texas.

Heart To Heart Talks With Cynthia Grey

As summer advances, soap and laundry bills will assume higher importance in feminine minds. For summer is undoubtedly the dainty woman's greatest ordeal.

It threatens the cool precincts of her toilet—with attacks upon the crispness of her collars, the waves of her hair, the velvet of her skin. If she is to combat it, she will need every device of science and ingenuity, in addition to increasing vigilance.

The best of these is the simple cake of pure white soap, followed by a cold shower. A daily bath in summer is also highly essential. Many fastidious women demand two or three.

Choice of clothing has much to do with summer daintiness. The mode that demanded dark serge suits and silk dresses for street and office wear even on the warmest days, is passe now, along with many other unsatisfactory and stupid modes in dress.

The best taste cannot avail at light clothing on the street, so long as it is plainly made of suitable material. The most successful business dresses this year are of tub silk in many delightful stripes, repeating the colors of the band on the panama hat or the small felt cloche.

Dark silks that cannot be tubed are not only unhealthy and uncomfortable for the wearer, they are a crime against those who have to look at them. A perspiring, black-clad woman entering a street car can make the entire carful of passengers feel warmer and wearier.

But the woman who steps from her cold tub into freshly laundered lingerie and a simple, light tub silk dress, who dusts her powder off carefully and not too thickly, and who dispenses with excessive make-up which will smear as the day grows hotter, is a delight to the eyes of the passer-by.

Not only does she look dainty and cool—but she has a much better chance of feeling comfortable as well.

The Woman's Day

By ALLENE SUMNER

Daughters Orates
"My Mother from a Child's viewpoint" was the subject given 12-year-old Ellen Elizabeth Benson, world's brightest child, on which to speak before a metropolitan Business and Professional Women's Club. A bulky audience of more children were encouraged to "rise right up in meeting" and tell what they think of their parents, that profession might be greatly reformed. As is, children have never been trained to endure in silence, and grow bitter and rebellious under injustices of parents.

More on Summer Reading

Today I promised a list of "light" summer books than those given yesterday—the books you "ought to read," the books that will improve your mind, give your club cozy, optional food—well—

Try "Why We Believe" LIMA Human Beings, by Dorsey. "New Decalog of Science," by Wiggins. "Our Times," by Mark Sullivan. "The Mauve Decade," by Thomas Beer. "Microbe Hunters," by Paul de Kruif. "The Volage of the Arcturus," by Beebe. "Some Washington Ladies," by Meade Minnerode. Carl Sandburg's "The Prairie Years." "Memories," by Dame Melba. "Book on Marriage," by Count Keyserling.

The Scarf's The Thing

If all depends on how the scarf is tied this year, the same old story of yesterday which flew skily through the coat, may become a modish thing of beauty if tied into a stock effect, a four-in-hand, or a soft and jaunty look at the side. Even the old Douville scarf manner of wearing is waggishly a la bandana is seen on sport frocks.

Wages and Pains

Faps should be given a higher wage than the man without children, according to Professor Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago. He believes that married men with children are underpaid today and that both alone and married men without children are being overpaid. This would mean a wage slash for most workers, as only 22 per cent of them are workers with children. Make your own comment.

I would spine that this would work for the glorification of parenthood only, and the ignoring of human functions which contribute fully as much or more to the movement of the race. Count on our bachelor public servants who, penalized for lack of children by low incomes, would have been deprived of the opportunity of education and leisure permitting them to perfect their art or business, and thus contribute to the world. A kid or so is nice, but so is a great book or painting or law.

Hair Bleach

Many a brunette has started her friends who said goodnight to her, by saying goodmorning to them as a gorgeous red-gold blonde. The answer is "peroxide bleach." One can always be spotted. Take it two ways. But a combination of equal quantity of peroxide and ammonia can bleach out superfluous hair, making it almost unnoticeable.

SPORT CLOTHES PUT BACK IN OWN PLACE

(By HENRI BENDEL)

For NEA Service

NEW YORK, June 23.—One of the obligations, and by no means the least important one that summer imposes upon the well-dressed woman is that she be a picture of daintiness and coolness no matter how torrid the day may be.

The wardrobe for summer must include colorful organdies, chiffons and laces for the garden party and the club, and these social functions that have nothing to do with sport.

For a time, there was a tendency to wear sport clothes quite generally, and to neglect the typically summer dress with its frills and flounces in which a woman may be completely feminine and charming.

Picture Frock Today

This season, that idea is completely annihilated—the sport dress prevails for sports, but the picture frock has the play for other occasions.

The French designers have devoted much attention this year to appropriate attire for the summer afternoon, and the modistes have brought back the large hat with the transparent brim, which is the ideal accompaniment in millinery, and the result is that never has summer attire been more lovely than today.

Photographed today are three frocks that are smart, sophisticated and interesting, built on excellent lines as well as interpreted in the colors of the moment.

REDS BATTLING BUCCANEERS AT TOP OF LEAGUE

LEADERS SLOWLY DRAW AWAY FROM LOWLY NATIONAL CLUBS

(By the Associated Press) Cincinnati and Pittsburgh leaders in the National League, are creeping away from the rivals slowly. A week ago the difference between first and sixth places were only four full games. The margin now is seven.

Brooklyn, Chicago and New York remain in virtual deadlock for fourth position while the St. Louis Cardinals are stepping on Pittsburgh's heels. Only one point separates Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

The Reds retained their slight advantage yesterday by defeating Chicago, 3 to 2, although out-hit. Jake May saved the battle in the eighth by striking out two men and compelling another to ground to the infield after the Cubs had filled the bases.

Pittsburgh remained in the running when Lee Meadows confined St. Louis to two doubles and four singles to win, 3 to 1.

Brooklyn clung to fourth place by downing Boston, 4 to 2.

Philadelphia set down the New York Giants, 6 to 2. A home run inside the park by Mogan in the ninth accounted for three runs.

Babe Ruth gained his 23rd home run of the year when Washington and the Yankees divided a double bill. The Senators took the first, 8 to 7, by sending across six tallies in the ninth when two were out.

Heavy hitting by the Yankees gave them the second, 9 to 1.

Lyons of the White Sox registered his twelfth conquest of the season by beating Cleveland in 10 innings, 4 to 2.

The Detroit Tigers recorded their fourth straight victory against St. Louis, 9 to 4. Taverner of the Tigers had a perfect day at bat with four singles.

Billy Evans Says

Difficult Task Making over a major league ball club is a difficult task. If you have your doubts, go into conference with Connie Mack.

In 1914 Mack boasted a pennant winner. He decided for various reasons, to break up his team. The following year his club finished last. For seven successive years it was a tall order.

When the Mackian system began to make progress, last season it was a contender all the way. It faltered only in the stretch. This year it is an even better combination.

Only an absolute collapse of the ball club will prevent the A's from making considerable to say as to who is going to win the American League pennant.

Owner Bob Quinn of the Boston Red Sox has been going through all the hard luck that pursued Mack for seven years, since he acquired the Boston Americans.

It wasn't much of a ball club that went with the sale, so immediate efforts were made to strengthen it.

A number of veteran players, believed to have several years' service as winning ball at one end or the other with the Boston fans would still in their systems, were purchased, new ownership.

For two months the veterans delivered in fine style, but when warm weather set in they wilted and the club dropped to the bottom.

It was then decided to rebuild the team with young blood, no matter how long it took.

Getting a Break After several disappointing years it is beginning to look as if the efforts of Bob Quinn and Manager Lee Fohl were bearing fruit.

Most necessary to a winning ball club in the majors is a strong infield. At present the Boston club is better fortified in infield strength than in any other department of play.

Haney and Higney, former Detroit stars, have filled the gaps at third and short in fine style. Mike Herrera, the Cuban, is a very satisfactory second baseman and Phil Todt is mighty capable at first.

The Boston Red Sox have completed the building of the foundation for a good team, in getting together an infield of major league caliber.

The next problem is the outfield. In the best center fielders in the game, Ira Fingstad, Manager Fohl has one. Two more outfielders like him would solve the situation.

Psychology in Sport There is no doubt as to the power of psychology in sport. Recently the Philadelphia Athletics after toppling over Washington and New York in seven out of nine games, invaded Boston for a five-game series.

The moment Howard Ehmke, star pitcher of the Red Sox, began warming up, hopes of victory started to vanish on the part of the A's.

"There is one guy who is tough for us to beat," was the consensus of the Mackmen.

Ehmke, since his entry into the majors, has been a jinx for the Philadelphia club. No matter how poorly he may be going, he always rises to great heights against the Athletics.

This game was no exception. Pitted against the great "Lefty" Grove, Ehmke hurried faultlessly, shutting out the Athletics, 2-0. He drove in the first run and scored the other one.

Strange Coincidence When the Athletics stopped New York after the Yankees had won 16 straight games, it was history repeating itself.

Earlier in the season New York had won nine straight games when it met Philadelphia in a three-game series. The Athletics won all three games.

Getting away from Philadelphia, New York started another winning streak that reached 16 straight, when the Mackmen were again encountered.

This time in a four-game series. After breaking the streak, the Athletics won two more games, dropping the final contest.

And in each instance, it was South-paw Bob Grove who put an end to the Yankees' winning ways.

BASEBALL'S LOSS FITTING MEMORIAL MACK'S ANGLE COLLEGE STARS

The Great Umpire is no respecter of persons. Within a year, two of the greatest pitchers that ever took a sign from a catcher, have headed the final call of O. T. Christy Mathewson and Eddie Plank.

Major league baseball suffered a distinct loss in the passing of these two famous stars of other days.

Mathewson and Plank were among the first of the college ball players to make the big league grade. Matty hailed from Bucknell, Plank from Gettysburg.

These two great pitchers did much to make their alma maters known from coast to coast. It is fitting that they should be properly remembered by the colleges that graduated them into the big leagues.

Gettysburg is to dedicate a memorial gymnasium to help perpetuate the memory of Eddie Plank, Southpaw extraordinaire. Bucknell is to honor Mathewson in a similar manner.

The National League is lending its aid to the Mathewson movement, while the American League is helping to put over the Eddie Plank testimonial.

A great pitcher and a gentleman always, was Plank. Gettysburg College is asking the aid of the baseball fans of the country to assist in putting the project over.

A number of the American League clubs have designated an "Eddie Plank Day" on dates when the Philadelphia Athletics are the attraction.

134--THAT'S BOBBY--134

BOBBY JONES

BOBBY JONES, national amateur champion, cut another nick in golfdom's tablet of fame when he turned in the phenomenal card of 134 in the qualifying rounds of the British open tournament at Sunningdale the other day.

On the first 18 the Atlantic came through with a pair of 33's breaking the course record by four strokes. On the following 18 he hung up a 35, going out and a 23 coming in, giving him a 66--134--for the 36 holes. He was under fours with only a single five on his chart. He had six birdies.

Jones' 134 is said to be an all-time record for title play, and was made on a course he had had little playing experience on. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

On such days a collection will be taken up, thereby giving the fans, many of these admirers of Plank when he was an outstanding star, a chance to contribute their mite.

The fans are sure to do their part. Connie Mack, the man who made Plank, in speaking of the proposed memorial says:

"The erection of a memorial gymnasium to the memory of Eddie Plank is a splendid thought. It is a fitting tribute to a man who devoted 17 years of exceptional effort to raise the national pastime to the position of prominence that it now holds with the American public."

"I am more than anxious to see the fulfillment of this project." And Connie Mack, by the way, is doing more for the fund than merely offering his well wishes.

This summer a game will be played between the present Athletics and the members of the team on which Plank starred. The receipts will be turned over to the fund.

Such players as Eddie Collins, Chief Bender, Joe Bush, Wally Schang and other stars of former Mackian clubs will be rounded up for the affair.

It is pleasing to note the desire to honor Plank and Mathewson. It proves there is sentiment in baseball, all reports to the contrary.

Not only have Plank and Mathewson done much to elevate the standard of inspiration to the ambitious colicards of the game but they have been legible ball players. When they broke into the majors, the collegian had no standing, he was mere or less the joke of the ball club.

It's different now. The college field delivers many stars to the majors. Plank and Mathewson helped pave the way.

SECRETS OF STARS ON INSIDE BASEBALL

(By EDDIE COLLINS) For a second baseman to properly cover his position, play smart baseball, he must know the style of every ball that is to be pitched. Therefore the brainy second baseman is always familiar with every sign in the catcher's category. This gives him a working knowledge of whether the pitch is to be a fast one, a curve, a slow ball, a knuckler, a splitter or a waste ball. Knowing these things is most essential to the proper play of the second baseman, for he can position himself accordingly. When a second baseman covers on an attempted double steal he should always arrive in ample time to take the throw. It is far easier handling a thrown ball from a stationary position than catching it on the run. Incidentally, the second baseman who receives the ball while in a stationary position has a decided advantage in touching a runner over the player who gets it on the run. Being set for the ball and the runner makes it possible for the fielder to figure in what manner the player will slide in an attempt to avoid the touch. Too many second basemen wait until the ball is in the catcher's hands before starting for the bag. This is a grievous mistake. The player should leave his position as the runner starts. It is possible to start too quickly. This enables the opposition to realize who is covering and gives the smart batter a chance to hit through the spot vacated.

HELPFUL HINTS by GOLFING STARS

Joyce Wethered—Mastery Of Swing It is the commonest thing to see the greatest players playing shots from the fairway up to the hole with monotonous precision and yet to find them at times strangely crooked from the tee. Probably two chief reasons exist for this rather perplexing fact. It is possible that the ball, when it is teed up, free from direct contact with the ground, is peculiarly sensitive to various spins which arise from any divergence from a perfectly true swing; and to support this theory, it is a noticeable fact that some players, when they find themselves hitting their drives amiss, discard the tee altogether and play the ball directly off the ground. The contact may have a steadying effect on the stroke. Another reason may be that the harder a player hits the more he accentuates the slightest error in striking. A woman, or a man with only moderate height, may be rarely in trouble simply because they do not get far enough to matter. But prolong the direction line of their shots, and they may soon find themselves in very serious difficulties.

DIAMOND DISPUTES DECIDED

Left Fielder, with both feet in fair territory, reaches over the foul line to catch fly ball, which he fails to hold. Is the ball fair or foul? In judging whether a fly ball is fair or foul the umpire is guided by the ball rather than the position of the fielder. In other words, when a fielder reaches over the foul line to catch a ball that is in fair territory, the fact that both feet are in fair territory at the time cannot be given any consideration. The position of the ball, not the fielder, determines whether it is fair or foul. In the above play it was a foul ball, since the ball on which the fielder tried to make a play was in foul territory when it came into contact with his hands, later being dropped.

Miss Lenglen Too Ill For Tournament

WIMBLEDON, England, June 23. (AP)—Miss Suzanne Lenglen, French tennis marvel, was taken ill shortly after her arrival here today for a women's doubles match in the jubilee tournament. The Wimbledon tournament committee made the following announcement: "The committee regrets that owing to the indisposition of Miss Suzanne Lenglen, it was found impossible to do today's program as advertised. It is hoped that she will be well enough to play both matches tomorrow." Miss Lenglen was hissed by some of the English fans as she emerged from the clubhouse to enter her waiting motor car.

Editorials SUMMER TIME

It was a dizzy old winter, with its threatened outbreaks in Europe, at a hectic old spring, but this is the good old summer time. Life is short and time is fleeting, and why should we be always in a hurry and nursing a perpetual worry?

Last month we slipped into our B. V. L.'s and this month we ought to take a lesson from the weather and slip out of our long-accustomed mental traces and go dashing headlong to the open pastures, where the June grass is lush and the birds are singing as joyously as before the Kaiser descended upon Belgium, bringing in his wake such a scourge of plagues as would have made early Egypt appear a pleasant paradise by comparison.

We've grown accustomed to look upon life darkly. We have had wars and rumors of wars. We have known sufficiently of evil and doubt. Our minds are weary of the turmoil and the strife. We long for the quiet ways we knew before the war. And came summer is knocking at the door and bidding us cast care aside for a time; is inviting us to forget our perplexities, to toss aside the problems that we have not been able to solve and go summering.

And he is a wise man who will ignore them. There is something in the seasons that demands relaxation. It is not by accident that the railroads and the steamboat lines run excursions from June to September; it is not by chance that the seaside and mountain resorts are in full blast then, that the schools are closed and the playgrounds open. When the sun is high, the inclination to mental effort is low. Even summer pauses for breath between the seasons of harvest and fall plowing, and all the rest of us should take the hint and do likewise.

It is summer again. The thermometer, if not the almanac, proves it. Therefore, a fig for a care, a fig for a worry; let the world come, let the world go—until fall breezes blow.

WORK, NOT LUCK, COUNTS There is an adage that "There is luck in leisure" but there is no truth in that adage and there is a little truth in the proclamation of many failures that "work and merit don't mean anything anymore, the lucky man will win anyway."

Of course there have been battles won by luck in which the better man lost, but they are the proverbial exceptions which prove the rule and are outnumbered by incidents the reverse as to be unworthy of notice. Luck-won successes are accidents. Work-won successes are incidents. Accidents always attract more attention than incidents for the same reason that normal human beings, which are incidents, pay money to see freaks of nature, which are accidents. To depend on luck is to play blind man's bluff among the laws of nature and of man.

These laws, when studied carefully, seem to prove that in the long run the best man wins the best place, and personal merit does succeed. Evidences to the contrary are merely the flips of chance.

Luck smiles on those who take off their coats, put their shoulders to the wheel, and plug away at the task. Fortune favors men who are not afraid of dreary, irksome drudgery. Luck climbs no Everest. Luck transmits no contact into electricity. Luck is never a ladder from the earth of mediocrity to the heaven of achievement.

IN NEW YORK SEE-SAWING and DOWN BROADWAY

NEW YORK—Above all things New York is for the young. Young steel that can hold 30 floors of building in its slim, brown arms. Young ideas, young blood. Young strength and young rebellion.

The old things cling precariously to their various straws. Eventually they must go down. Man and buildings alike. Old ideas and old morals.

There is Old Trinity, most historic of American churches. It stands throwing the shadow of the cross over Wall street, modern symbol of Mammon. It boasts a history that stretches back to the Revolution. It boasts the richest backing. Wealth and tradition cannot save it.

The burrowings of young steel into the earth undermined its foundations. Blasting for young skyscrapers has shaken its doddering old walls.

About a year ago young engineers came and sat in consultation. They found it needed a crutch and other supports. Its old legs were unable to hold it up. So they brought the very blood of the young machine age. They transfused the strong young steel into its crumbling old stone. Ninety-two steel casings went under the old brownstone. And the old church leaned back, waiting.

Reckless time took its toll. More blasting for skyscrapers. More vibration from the cat-cams. More storms and rains.

And the other day the ornamented topstone of the pinnacle fell. Day by day fragments of stone fall from the walls. Decay, halted at the base, now strikes the body.

I saw young engineers climbing the steep and going over the walls. Soon a scaffolding will enclose it and the rejuvenators will have Old Trinity partially embalmed in modern concrete and plaster.

Next will come the vaulted inner ceiling. Sooner or later lattice and plaster must come to its rescue.

Old Trinity's parish was chartered in 1897 by King William III. The Lord Bishop of London was the first rector.

The first church was destroyed in the great fire of 1766. Located on land of fabulous value, it is amusing to recall that 1755 all the land from Church street to the North river sold for 10 shillings.

A second church was built on the spot in 1788 and was torn down and replaced by the present edifice in 1829.

In the graveyard that surrounds it are the tombs of Robert Fulton, Alexander Hamilton and wife and scores of other historic folk.

At noon the stenographers come from the great offices and throw crumbs to the pigeons that flutter by the hundreds down from its eaves.

THE VERY IDEA! By Bill Cochran

"HERE COMES DAD" Who's that coming down the street? I'm the one she's gonna meet. Gosh, amighty, is she sweet? Sure she is—my daily treat! Surely, things would seem quite wrong, if I didn't hear her song. Sing a song of, "Here comes Dad." That's the song she's always had.

Always up to same old tricks, when the hour is near—six. Wonder why she thinks it's fun, just to meet me on the street? Every day, when work is through I see what all fathers do. He for home. The toy's told — she's to meet my three-year-old.

Notin' like a tiny mite. Cheerful — makin' things look bright. Gee, you don't know what you miss if you've never lived like this. Work may make you all red out. Still that feelin' swings down, when a child struts down the street—an' you're the one she's gonna meet.

Stewart's WASHINGTON LETTER

BROOKHART'S CAMPAIGN COST $3900, SO PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARY INTERESTS HIM

By CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON. — Col. Smith W. Brookhart showed a keen interest in the investigation of Pennsylvania's republican senatorial primary expenses the minute he landed in Washington, from out in Iowa, the other day.

He made for the committee room, where the inquiry was in progress at the time, straight from the Union railroad station, before even going to his hotel.

He got a royal reception from some of the committee members, too. Senator Jim Reed, the chairman, though not of Brookhart's politics, is about as far out of harmony with his party management as the colonel is with his. A terrific scrapper himself, thoughts of the fight the Iowa had just been putting up in his home state were the very thing to thrill him to the core.

Senator Bob La Follette and Brookhart are fellow insurgent republicans. The colonel's and Senator McNary's hearts beat as one on the subject of farm relief.

It was a joyful reunion. The investigation had to wait while his friends slapped the recently nominated ex-senator on the back, congratulated him and pumped his hand.

The inquiry's kick for Brookhart probably lay in the comparison which he doubtless drew between the measly $3900 he found sufficient to finance his successful Iowa primary campaign and the couple of millions or more spent in Pennsylvania — in vain, at that, on the part of two of the three candidates.

Brookhart's political methods, however, are different from those of the effete east. He requires no money to pay others to help him fight. All the fighting it's necessary to have done in his behalf he's quite capable of doing for himself, at next to no expense.

He looks it, moreover — a regular Mar. chunky, powerful of build, built-neck, with a choleric eye and a square, pug-nacious face.

The Pennsylvania investigation has had plenty of interest for others besides Brookhart. A large share of the credit for its swiftness is due to Chairman Reed. From the very beginning he pushed things, three sessions a day and for into the night, at top speed. He did not want the affair to be a bore. He wanted it to have pep, in order to stir up the maximum amount of talk. If the witnesses didn't provide enough of it to suit him, he put in the condiment himself.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS by Olive Roberts Barton

When the moon began to get bright again, the Man-in-the-Moon said, "Now the moon is a boat. If you like, you can go adventuring in it instead of in your broken airplane."

"I'll row," said the man in the moon. "I suppose his feelings were hurt," said the Moon Man, "but they need not have been. I can see all things from my house on the moon (which is the size of a tiny boat). I see all sorts of queer things. The last circus I saw had elephants who were queerer things than roses. Hats with feathers all over them, and dunces, caps, and one elephant even had a tambourine and a fan and wore a silver-lace mantilla over a high-corned hat. He did a Spanish dance and kept time with the tambourine."

"The poor little fellow thinks he is the only queer elephant in the world." "This moon certainly is growing," said the Man-in-the-Moon suddenly. "We can't use it for a boat any longer. It's more than half full now. The eclipse is going away."

So they sat quite still and the moon kept getting bigger and rounder until it was quite full grown.

Helpful Health Hints By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING

Director General U. S. Public Health Survey

CARE OF THE EXPECTANT MOTHER

By DR. HUGH S. CUMMING Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service.

All expectant mothers should be under the care of a physician, if this is possible, and should, of course, undergo a thorough physical examination. Examination of the urine is of the utmost importance, and such examinations should be repeated frequently in order to detect conditions, the neglect of which may jeopardize, even sacrifice, the lives of both mother and child.

If the expected baby is the first one, the physical examination made by the doctor should invariably include a measurement of the pelvis. In no other way can it be determined that a pelvis is not reduced in size or otherwise deformed, conditions which make for serious trouble, and a knowledge of the existence of which enables the doctor to determine beforehand the nature of the assistance he will be called upon to render at the critical moment.

Feeble-mindedness. An examination of the blood should be made to detect hidden conditions which, if left undetected, might, and often do, result in a diseased child, a child that may even be feeble-minded.

Much of our present feeble-mindedness could have been prevented, and many morons would today be useful citizens if their mothers had been properly treated for diseased conditions in time.

Expectant mothers should have an abundance of fresh air, good plain wholesome food, daily recreation, diversified tasks that are not too taxing on their strength, adequate rest and sleep, and they should be free from worry.

Selecting Diet. Diet should be selected with the view of avoiding the necessity for the use of laxatives, but if the diet does not accomplish this result, then a simple laxative should be taken on the advice of the physician.

During the latter part of her expectancy, the mother should see her physician, or send him a specimen of urine for examination every two weeks. She must not forget to partize freely of liquids. Drink plenty of water. Headache, if persistent, or if sudden and severe, should be reported to the physician, as should also swelling of the face, hand or increasing swelling of the ankles, should they occur. Medicine should not be taken except on the advice of the physician.

WHOLL INTRODUCE HIM? Jim Ferguson is scheduled to speak in San Angelo July 16. Ferguson probably does not need much of an introduction as he has had plenty of experience with the people of Texas and it is hoped that they know him well enough that no introduction will be necessary.

But should he want someone to tell Tom Green county people who he is not, who will have the temerity to stand on a platform with Jim Ferguson in San Angelo and say "Ladies and gentlemen, it is my pleasure to," etc.—San Angelo Standard.

JOHN and FAY MILBURN buy a home of their own shortly after their baby girl is born and the advertising agency in which John is partner and copy writer lands a new contract.

John, in love with his wife Fay, but a romantic individual, is fascinated on meeting NELL ORME, of whom PAT FORBES, a friend of John's, hints that she is having trouble with her husband.

NEL and VERA BOYD, a young married couple, give a party and Vera shows an interest in John that he does not return, but which arouses Fay's jealousy.

Noel Boyd later boasts of an arrangement with Vera whereby each leaves the other to do as he pleases. Fay takes the baby to Houston to visit her parents, and during her absence John runs around a greta deal with Pat Forbes, whose wild tendencies have aroused the suspicions of his wife.

Word begins to go around the town that John is being indiscreet, and NATHANIEL GRAHAM, his business partner, takes him to task. John resents this, and a gradually growing breach between him and Graham is widened.

John enters on a short but violent flirtation with ELEANOR MASON, a girl who is his neighbor.

PAUL DAVIDSON, a lawyer and amateur actor, finds himself involved with a girl named RITA JOHNS and asks John to break it up. John reluctantly agrees, and is successful, but he learns from her something of the vindictiveness of thwarted women, for she lies about him to Davidson and only a sense of humor saves the two friends from becoming enemies.

Fay returns, and John, although a little worried about how she is going to take it, decides to tell her about some of his actions while she was away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII

Fay noticed that he seemed a little preoccupied during dinner and asked him what was worrying him.

"Nothing," John told her, and forced a cheerful smile. "Just busy, I guess."

"How are things coming along at the office dear? You know, you never told me much about the business in your letters."

He shrugged. "About as well as you could expect, I guess. We've got another artist to give Briggs a lift."

"And Nat Graham? How is he these days?"

John frowned. "I don't know what's getting the matter with Nat. Dagonite, he seems to get zowier every day. I sometimes think Nat is miscast as an advertising man. Not that he isn't a good one—but he would fit in much better, I believe, as a censor of public morals, or an agitator for the suppression of smoking, drinking and kindred vices."

"John, you mustn't talk that way about Nat Graham. After all, you are partners you know."

"I know it, all right," he remarked tersely, and Fay said, "What's the matter? You haven't quarreled or anything, have you?"

"No."

"Oh, I think you've just begun to get on each other's nerves a little. That's to be expected. You mustn't be too harsh with Nat."

John looked at her for a long time, a peculiar expression on his face. Finally, "Fay," he said, "it's peculiar just it, the perverse streak that runs through us?"

"Why, what do you mean?"

"Well, here you are defending Nat Graham. Not so long ago it was you that was knocking him and I was defending. What do you suppose it is—a sort of chivalry in us, or a plain love of argument?"

Fay laughed. "I'm in no mood to philosophize over it."

"You know, Fay," John began after a pause, "I've got a sort of confession to make to you."

Fay looked at him quickly, in some alarm, but saw a queer little smile playing over his lips.

"What now?" she asked with mock severity. And then, as if something suddenly had occurred to her, "Have you been misbehaving in my absence?"

"I was out with another woman," John said, smilingly and dramatically. "An old flame of mine."

He was watching her narrowly, and he noticed an expression of disapproval—or something akin to it—flit across her features.

But her question was composed enough. "Yes? Who was it?"

"Dorothy Francis. You've heard me speak of her. Used to know her in the old days at school, and now she's a leading lady in musical comedy."

"Oh, John," Fay said with some impatience. "Won't you ever learn?"

"Learn? What do you mean?" He was instantly on the defensive. He knew he was on the wrong side of the argument but he thought, not wholly wrong.

He went on hurriedly to explain. "Look here now, Fay, it was business—strictly business. She wants to get on the dramatic stage and what she wanted from me was some publicity ideas."

"How often did you see her?"

"Oh, about two or three times. We had dinner together one night."

"And danced, I suppose," Fay put in.

"Yes, yes, we danced, but mainly we discussed the thing that was on her mind."

"Well, was it necessary to take her out at a public dining place?"

"Wouldn't you rather I did that," he countered, "than meet her at some private rendezvous? It isn't as if we had anything to hide, Fay?"

She exclaimed "Oh!" as if she were completely out of patience with him; and turned her face away.

He was a little appalled at a realization of the difficulty of his job, but there was a stubborn honesty in him that impelled him to go on.

"Look here, Fay, I'm being square with you—I hope you give me credit for that. I kissed her goodby."

He rather expected an outburst at this, but Fay was silent; and, looking closely at her, he saw that she was crying.

"Come now," he said, feeling terribly sorry for her, "don't take it that way, Fay. It really was nothing."

He went over to her and put his arms around her and tried to kiss her, but she turned her head away from him.

"What's the matter, Fay? If I'd known it would hurt you, I wouldn't have done it for worlds."

"I was so happy just a little while ago," she sobbed with a little catch in her voice, "and now you've spoiled it all. It meant so much to come back to you, and now you tell me—"

"Fay was terribly disarming, John thought—far worse than being quarreled with."

"Let me explain," he said. "It will take a lot of understanding on your part to get me right on this, but I think you're capable of doing it. Kissing Dorothy Francis, Fay, wasn't cheating. You know Dot was a college sweetheart of mine—you've had youthful sweethearts yourself, haven't you?—and somehow—oh, hang it, I can't say what I want to say at all. You remember how lonely we were both at Christmas, don't you? How we seemed to long for the old carefree days of childhood that can't return? Well, seeing Dorothy was just like bringing back the old carefree student days. And it was melancholy, Fay, melancholy as the devil. That's why I kissed her. That's all the justification I have for it, but somehow it was just like shaking her hand, for all of there was behind it."

He took her face in his hands and gently but firmly pulled her head around to face him. Then he kissed her on the lips, kissed the tears from her eyes.

"Come, Fay," he said, "can't you understand?"

"I don't understand you want," she answered him with some bitterness. "You're always asking me to overlook this and disregard that as being of no consequence. You're always wanting to be forgiven."

"Not forgiven, exactly," he said a little sharply. "Not until I've sinned, at least. I want to ask you this—do you think I'd come out and told you about kissing Dorothy Francis if I had thought it was something to be ashamed of?"

"I don't know," she answered dully. "Sometimes I don't know what to think of you at all."

She spun, like a schoolboy who has been caught at some prank, and Fay again felt the impulse to mother him, and relented.

But that night as he lay beside her he was forced to confess to himself that he had not been as honest with her as he had pretended to be.

"Neighbors' Wives"

"Confound it, though," he thought, "how can I tell her about Eleanor and the other things if she feels this way about Dorothy? She'd have a fit if I told her I had kissed Eleanor Mason."

She felt suddenly as if she were fighting a battle against immense odds and nowhere was there a dependable ally. "John," she complained bitterly to the white kitchen walls as she moved about preparing dinner, "why can't you be careful? Why are there such busy bodies as that hateful old hen?"

John came bustling home to dinner, full of enthusiasm over some copy he had written that day, but Fay quickly quashed it. "What's this I hear," she asked him, "about you coming home disgracefully drunk with another man?"

He smiled her query. "Oh, Lady Blodgett, been here again, hasn't she?" "Despite her firm intentions to sever with him, Fay had to laugh. But she quickly recovered. "John," she asked, "were you really drunk? You know I think that's disgusting."

THEO YOUNG

By NEA Service
SALT LAKE, June 22.—Theo Young of St. Louis, Mo., is through with women for life.

And he doesn't intend to speak to one for the rest of his existence.

How come?

Well, he loved pretty Mary Brown. St. Louis girl, back in 1915.

Then she became Mrs. Mary McCormack, still of St. Louis.

Theo became a wanderer.

Reporters found him in a Seattle dance hall, dancing silently with the girls. They wondered why he wouldn't speak.

"Fumb maybe," they hazarded.

"Not so dumb." Theo told the newspaper men "Just that I'm never going to talk to a woman again—never."

"And to smokers, drinkers, neckers or flappers need eggs."

"I will be a great shock to some girls. Little home-body some day when Theo breaks his rule and blurts out: 'Will you...'"

Tells Story From Cot

The former evangelist from her cot in the hospital told a story of abduction from Ocean Park, California, a trip across the border to Mexico, and of how she escaped about noon yesterday, and ran until she fell with exhaustion.

Finally sighting a mountain, which has been identified by officers here as the famous "Niggerhead" Mountain, fifteen miles south in Sonora, Mexico, she headed for it.

Reaching the mountain about dusk she found a road and struggled along falling from time to time with fatigue. She said she sighted the glare from the slag dumps of the copper smelters in this city as the night wore on. She finally reached the outskirts of Aguaprieta, and approaching a house occupied by Mexicans, called for help and asked that the police be notified.

No Assistance Offered

The Mexicans, she said, offered no assistance, and she went on falling unconscious before another house. An American, whose name was not learned, and who was in Aguaprieta brought her to a hospital here. When she told police she was a kandy was established about the building, McCafferty, who had known Mrs. McPherson in Denver, where he had covered her meetings for newspapers, was recognized.

She greeted him with a smile and asked him to notify Los Angeles at once and to ask Los Angeles police to protect her daughter Roberta when she found the abductors would attempt to kidnap.

While she talked the woman became very nervous and in a semi-conscious state, due to her exhaustion. The story of her abduction as she related it to McCafferty was:

"I went to Ocean Park with my secretary, Miss Schaefer. There I changed into my bathing suit and slipped on a dress over it. 'We went to the beach where we rented a little beach tent. I went in swimming. I saw Miss Schaefer get the names of some swimmers, and some music.

"Before she returned I came back out on the beach. There were life savers. I went back into the water a short distance and while I was watching the guards I heard someone calling 'Mrs. McPherson!'

Tells of Kidnaping

"I turned to face a woman who explained that her baby was dying and that she wanted me to pray for it. She said her husband had the baby in a car nearby. She had a coat over her arm. I accompanied her to the car in which there was another woman with a bundle in her arms. When I thought was the baby.

"The next thing I knew I was pushed into the car on the floor. The woman threw the coat over me and a sweet, sticky odor assailed my nostrils and filled the automobile, which was a sedan.

"That was the last I knew until I came to, on a bed, like a hospital cot. It was in a room with a window almost completely closed. I was violently ill. The woman, who was called 'Rose' was with me. It was dawn. I do not know whether or not it was the next day, but she told me it was the morning following.

"The other woman came in, and I asked them what they wanted with me. They said they were holding me for a half million dollars ransom. I told them they were foolish, that I did not have that much money, nor did the church have it, but they replied that they knew better, and I was kept there day after day.

Planned To Get Ransom

"Later they told me they had made plans to get the ransom. Then, from the remarks I overheard later, I learned that they had almost been captured in San Francisco when trying to make arrangements to get the money.

"A few days ago I was moved. We were in two automobiles and traveled long distances. We came to another house and remained there two days. 'The men were not there. Previously they had burned my fingers to make me answer the questions they had asked. They threatened to cut off the finger with the long scar.

"I refused to talk, and while I did answer one question, I would not answer the rest because I knew my mother, her friends and members of the church would expend every effort to raise and pay the sum of half million dollars which my captors demanded for my release."

Mother Highly Excited

LOS ANGELES, June 22 (AP)—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Almee Semple McPherson, evangelist, when told over the long distance telephone from Douglas, Ariz., of a woman there naming a pet pigeon which Mrs. McPherson had had when a little girl, exclaiming "That settles it. She is my daughter."

Highly excited and almost hysterical, Mrs. Kennedy immediately began packing for a trip to Douglas and gave instructions that Mrs. McPherson's two children, Roberta and Roll, be made ready to accompany her.

Mrs. Kennedy was greatly agitated at the report that her daughter had been kidnapped.

"I hardly can believe that," she said. "If they kidnaped and held her for ransom why did they not come forward when we were offering a reward of $25,000 for her return?"

She added that she had telegraphed the woman at Douglas to identify the children and describe them.

"If she does that, it will remove my last doubt," she declared.

Leadership Missed

The influence and leadership of Almee Semple McPherson, famous exponent of the four square gospel creed, was never fully realized until she failed to return from a surf bathing trip to Ocean Park, near here, on May 18.

When the evangelist's secretary, Mrs. Emma Schaefer, reported that Mrs. McPherson had disappeared, probably drowned, the news spread with amazing rapidity and soon thousands had gathered on the beach of Santa Monica Bay.

While her followers destined a vigil at the water's edge, started to last for weeks, imploring the sea to give up the body of their leader, others of her faithful flock crowded about the altar of Angelus Temple, Block Square monument to the labors of Mrs. McPherson here, and sought divine help to return her safely to them.

The intense interest in the disappearance of the woman pastor manifested itself as the topic of conversation in every gathering place about the city—hotels, clubs, cafes, church congregations and barber shops. From the standpoint of sustained interest, the case of Mrs. McPherson is unparalleled in police annals here.

As the days went on and no trace of the missing evangelist was found, the belief here grew that she had disappeared in some manner other than drowning.

Letter Holds Lock Of Hair

LOS ANGELES, June 22 (AP)—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Almee Semple McPherson, stated today that last night she received a letter containing what purported to be a lock of her daughter's hair and in which replies to all the questions which she prepared for it. It was also as tests when R. A. McKimley, blind attorney of Long Beach, informed District Attorney Am. Jones that kidnapers had approached him to arrange for a ransom for the evangelist.

Abductors Sought

DOUGLAS, Ariz., June 22 (AP)—Two groups of Americans have come into Mexico south of here to search for trace of abductors of Mrs. Almee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, who straggled into Aguaprieta today and told police she had just escaped from kidnapers who seized her May 18 at Ocean Park, Calif. One group of American officers were accompanied by Mexican officers, while the second group was headed by Folsom Moore, general manager of the Bisbee review, and patrolman Patterson, of Douglas.

Proposed Importation Of Snakes Is Opposed

BIG SPRING, TEXAS, June 22 (AP)—Youths in this section are opposed to the proposition of J. S. Gates, Sugar Creek, Mo., snake exporter, who offers to send 10,000 black snakes to this state to exterminate the rattlesnakes, because it will spoil their Sunday sport.

Howard county youths are not sure that black snakes can whip the rattlers, but ask why their only dangerous sport—that of snake killing—should be destroyed.

Snake hunting parties are common in Howard county, many of the youths and young men spending their Sunday killing rattlers, keeping their rattles for souvenirs.

INVITATIONS FOR SCOUT JUBILEE SENT OUT

Written invitations to attend the Scout Jubilee at the C. W. Post Scout Camp are being sent today to Scout men of the towns of twelve counties, and these men will be the chairman of the delegations from their respective towns. L. S. Hurley reported this morning.

While it would be a great educational factor for scouting if all the people of the twelve counties might take part in the program of the day and enjoy the barbecue that will be served, it would be practically impossible to accommodate such a crowd, hence the special arrangements for invitations. It is understood, however, that any man who has contributed anything whatever to Scouts during the past year has a special invitation to participate in the activities of the day.

The program, as outlined here, includes the dedication of the camp by Governor Blinn of Lubbock and a talk by J. W. Pritch, Executive of the Ninth region, Boy Scouts of America, with the history of the camp ground by S. S. Barwood of Post. Activities of different sorts including baseball, will be included, and the day will be entirely tiled.

TWO DAIRY CATTLE EXPERTS HERE WITH EATON

County Agent D. F. Eaton has with him the work D. T. Simons, secretary of the Texas Jersey Cattle Club, and representative, in that capacity, of the National Jersey Cattle Club, and J. L. Thomas, of the Extension department of Texas A. & M. College.

Mr. Simons and Mr. Thomas are making a survey of this county in regard to the betterment of dairy and diversified farming interests, especially as concerns the Jersey element. Mr. Simons stated this morning that he was agreeably surprised with the county, as they had found many good Jerseys here, and dairy conditions are much better than he had expected. In view of the fact that the location of purebred bulls was the object of the research so much high class cattle is of importance.

Ten high-calibre bulls were found in service over the county, and with a letter that 6,000 cows in the county this makes a very good start. Mr. Thomas said, Lubbock county, however should boast at least 100 Jersey bulls.

Mr. Simons pointed out that the increase in annual value of dairy products and animals, should these purebred bulls be used for five years instead of the scrubs prevalent now, would be more than a half million dollars for the county alone.

Mr. Eaton stated that within a few days, one of the best bred bulls in the State would be placed on the Emery farm in the Liberty Community, near here. This is the son of Masterman of Oakland, with Burnett's Lone Star his dam. Incidentally, Mr. Emery has a dairy herd of Jerseys equal to any other herd in this vicinity.

LaGuardia To Test Law On "Boatleg"

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Democratic Representative LaGuardia, Progressive Party, New York, today defied critics of his recent demonstration of mixing whisky with near beer and producing what he said was real beer for sale.

My attention has been called, I read the announcement of prohibition enforcement headquarters at Albany, N. Y., that anyone found mixing near beer and malt liquor would be arrested for violation of the Volstead act. I accepted the challenge and on my next visit to New York I got a job at a soda fountain in a drug store in my district and under a name as usual and one of near beer and drink it right there.

"If the prohibition department desires to test the law I will give it the opportunity."

ACCUSED BANKER TAKES OWN LIFE

H. P. Fall Hangs Self In Jail At Bay City While Waiting Trial for Murder

(By the Associated Press)

BAY CITY, June 22.—H. P. Fall, East Texas banker, accused of the killing of Mr. and Mrs. Camden Sanborn of this county hanged himself at a jail today in the county jail.

His body was found by Sheriff Mangum who had been talking to Fall a few minutes previously.

Fall had looped a piece of wire through one of the window bars in the cell and attached a piece of cord to the wire.

The cord he placed around his neck, first putting a towel next to the floor to prevent cutting him. Then it is believed that he stepped off the lavatory to his death.

Fall has administration of the Sanborn estate and was charged with the duties of Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn shortly after they were slain.

About two weeks ago he suffered a stroke and was taken to the hospital where it was feared he would die. He recovered however and last week was taken back to his cell in the county jail here.

Road Tax Withheld In Jefferson County

JEFAUMONT, TEXAS, June 22 (AP)—The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Archer county bond case is affecting Jefferson county because two large oil companies are withholding $80,000 in road taxes. This will cause the county to default on interest payments August 1, unless other means are found to raise the money. Henry Williams, county treasurer, said.

The oil companies are not averse to paying the taxes but their attorneys are studying the question of whether the companies can be assessed a ten percent penalty if it is found the taxes are to be paid.

Thousands Suffer Needlessly From Stomach Trouble

SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF DAL-LAS PHARMACIST IS BRINGING RELIEF

Indigestion, constipation and their attendant ills respond quickly to a private prescription known as Gordon's Antiseptic, the scientific discovery of a well-known Dallas pharmacist who spent twenty years in perfecting the remedy.

This medicine, which is an internal antiseptic, combined with the most effective digestants, stops and prevents fermentation (souring) of food matter in the stomach and bowels. It is a known fact that fermentation, which is the greatest obstacle to the successful treatment of stomach trouble, can only be stopped with an antiseptic. The underlying object of Gordon's Antiseptic is to prevent the absorption of poisons from the food mass which inflame and irritate the stomach and bowels and produce gas, which causes much distress.

Gordon's Antiseptic goes right to the seat of stomach and bowel troubles. It relieves indigestion, constipation, gas in the stomach, dyspepsia, heartburn, bloating after meals, excess acid, bad breath, sick headaches, nervous, tone-up the digestive organs and stimulates the stomach and bowels to their normal functions. It is a remedy that should be in every home.

Gordon's Antiseptic is sold by good druggists—$1.50 for 64 doses—has than 4 cents a dose.—Ad.
