Reports that a man was hurled from an airplane into the field on the place of Mrs. Lucy B. Wells late Tuesday afternoon sent local officers out on an extensive search. No trace was found of the body, however, and officers attributed the alarm to tumble weeds falling from the body of the plane.

Pretty Days Send Pickers To Fields

Following recent cold weather, heavy fogs, and frosts, farmers of Collingsworth County Wednesday morning were faced with one of the prettiest days this fall and cotton picking was again generally started over the county.

Unfavorable conditions have slowed down the gathering of the cotton crop this fall, but the advent of better weather indicated that picking would continue at a peak. Lack of funds from the sale of the crop have also handicapped merchants, who have one of the best stocks in many seasons. However, business improvement is expected to follow the pretty weather.

County Has 7,197 Bales In Official Report On Nov. 1

Listing Collingsworth County with a total of 7,197 bales on Nov. 1, 1935, the U. S. Government cotton report today showed this county to be 2,651 bales ahead of the Nov. 1, report in 1934, at which time this county was listed with 4,546 bales.

Contractors Awaiting Arrival Of Machinery To Begin Work

Detour Routes

Traffic Expected To Be Closed On New Road During Week

Pending the arrival of machinery, paving work on Highway 4, north to Salt Fork River, was still in preliminary stages today. Detour signs were erected, however, and Summer D. Bacon, resident engineer, estimated that actual work should begin this week.

To Barricade Road

When the first stages of construction is started, the road will be barricaded, Mr. Bacon stated. Detours will direct traffic over the temporary route. However, traffic can continue over the present road until the barricade is placed.

All traffic from Wellington north into Shamrock will be sent around the old Shamrock road, which joins the new highway at Salt Fork river. Traffic will leave the highway in front of the compress, and turn west down Eighth Street. At the west end of Eighth Street it will hit the old Shamrock road leading north to the river. Traffic coming in from Mangum will cross the new highway at the northeast corner of the town section and continue west to an open street leading into town, or due west to the old Shamrock road.

National Work Continued For Pension Plan

December 15 Deadline Set For Drafting Tax Regulations

WASHINGTON.—Treasury officials worked against a December 15 deadline last week in drafting regulations for collecting the first of the taxes imposed by the special security act.

The law provides that employers of eight or more persons must pay one per cent of their 1936 payroll into an unemployment insurance fund. This levy graduates to two per cent in 1937 and three per cent in 1938 and thereafter.

While the 1936 tax will not become payable until January, 1937, the treasury hoped to complete its rules by the middle of next month so that employers can set up proper tax records at the start of the year.

Lawyers and accountants in the income tax bureau, which will handle the collections, also have held numerous conferences, with representatives of industry seeking simplification of procedure so that additional business bookkeeping can be held to a minimum.

Regulations for the collection of two other levies voted by the last Congress also are being formulated. Taxes to finance railroad retirement pensions become effective in March, while those for the social security program's contributory old age benefits will begin in 1937.

The new rail pension act provides for a tax of three and one-half per cent on carrier payrolls, and an equal levy on the wages of railroaders. Representatives of rail employers for collective bargaining will pay the full seven per cent from their salaries.

Federal old age pensions will be financed by a graduated tax imposed equally upon employers and workers, starting at one per cent each in 1937, and reaching three per cent each in 1940, on wages not in excess of $3,000. Railroaders and their employes are excluded from this levy.

Large Increase In Oldsmobile Sales Reported

More than twice as many Oldsmobiles were sold at retail at the recently concluded New York Automobile Show than were sold at the last New York show.

Retail sales of Oldsmobile cars throughout the country from October 1 to November 10 showed an increase of 67 per cent over the same period last year.

Retail sales for 1935 up to November 10 are double the 1934 record.

These figures released today by D. E. Ralston, Oldsmobile vice president and general sales manager, have resulted in stepping up the December production schedule to the point where December will be the second biggest production month ever reported at Oldsmobile.

October output likewise created a new record for that month. "Basing our statement on the public reception of Oldsmobile's new models, the great number of retail orders and the enthusiasm of our dealers, I think we may safely say that the experiment of fall introduction of new models promises to be a success," said Mr. Ralston.

A Real Public Enemy Is "Black Widow," Most Poisonous Of U. S. Spiders

As a rule, people dislike spiders. Still, it isn't a really bothersome little creature. Most of the time it minds its own business, which is spinning webs inviting flies "into its parlor," and creating little spiders.

But, like human families, that of the spider has its black sheep or, rather, its black "widow." And it is the ravages of this "public enemy of spiderdom" that have, in the last year or so, crashed almost as many headlines as have Dillinger, Floyd, and others of the human underworld.

In recent months, a veritable epidemic of poisonings in west and south were attributed to the black widow spider. In these cases, the symptoms almost invariably were similar. There was the initial sting, followed soon by intense pain all over the body, violent cramps, a general rash, "board-like" abdomen, fever, cold sweat, and difficulty in breathing.

In a number of cases, believed to have originated in the black widow's bite, deaths were reported. However, W. J. Baerg, of the University of Arkansas, who passed a very uncomfortable week after letting himself be bitten by one of the creatures, maintains it has never, so far as he knows, caused death.

Of numerous white rats which Professor Baerg exposed to the black widow's bite, none died, which seemed to conform his contention.

Nevertheless, whether or not its bite is deadly, this most poisonous American spider is feared even more than the rattlesnake in some parts of the United States; for instance, Texas.

For that matter, the Indians feared it long ago; some western tribes, in fact, used its venom to tip their arrows. And the widow's cousins in Russia, Italy, New Zealand, Spain, France, Madagascar, Australia—all are dreaded.

Its name the black widow spider owes to a gustatory affection for its dwarfish husband, which, after serving its purpose, is frequently eaten by the voracious mate.

The widow is also known as the "shoe-button" spider, from the shape of its body; and the "hour-glass" spider—on its shiny, coal-black body is a bright, red mark resembling an hour-glass. Technically, it is known as Latrodectus mactans. Since it has eight legs, not six, it is not, strictly speaking, an insect. Twice as large as the male of the species, the black widow is about a half inch in length, with a two-inch "leg spread." Scientists believe the venom in its hollow fangs to be more virulent, drop for drop, than that of a rattlesnake. And the black widow does not rattle a warning, although Professor Haerg learned that it was difficult to arouse.

He had to "insult" it for some time before it was indignant enough to nip him. Unlike the common field spider, the black widow haunts dark, un-frequented places such as basements, lofts, outbuildings, and lumber piles. It is especially fond of dry places; the recent dry months, incidentally, are believed the reason for the sudden increase of the species. Scientists are endeavoring to combat the widow's ravages in several ways. They are experimenting with tiny wasps, which bore into spider eggs to lay their eggs, causing spiders to die as the eggs hatch; and with a species of common fly which dotes on spider eggs.

Men Make As Good Teachers As Women Says Education Professor

AUSTIN.—Men make as good teachers as women, and vice versa, it is the belief of Dr. Annie Webb Blanton, professor of educational administration at the University of Texas, whose extensive contact with all types of teachers and instructors qualifies her to speak authoritatively on the subject. Dr. Blanton believes that there is no distinction to be made between the teaching abilities of men and women.

As to natural ability and efficiency, Dr. Blanton pointed out, there is no difference. It is true that women are preferable for teaching the lower grades, for the simple reason that young children feel more at home with a woman instructor. However, there are examples, especially in country schools, where men handle young children very competently.

Moreover, Dr. Blanton is of the opinion that men and women should be allowed to teach any subject with which they are familiar. That is, men have just as much business in teaching English and history as women, and that women are as well qualified to teach chemistry and physics as men.

To the popular idea that many women use the teaching profession as a means to sustain themselves until they can marry, Dr. Blanton suggested that men use teaching as a stepping stone to various professions. Neither practice is harmful to the school system, she said, as long as both give forth their best efforts while teaching.

She added that higher wages would attract more good instructors, since many "natural" teachers hesitate to enter the profession because of the low salary.

Booger Roogers Cause Deaths Of Negroes

DALLAS.—Sudden death among Dallas negroes, city and county officials learned recently, is prevalent principally because of "East Dallas specials," ice picks and "booger roogers."

And what, the puzzled officials inquired of Maceo Smith, negro chamber of commerce representative, is a "booger rooger?"

"That," he explained, "is a rough party which sometimes ends in a killing." An "East Dallas special" was defined as a knife with a blade sometimes half a foot long.

Limb And Brace Company Thrives

D. E. Hedgecock, proprietor of the Hedgecock Artificial Limb and Brace Company, makers of limbs and braces, is engaged in a business which helps many unfortunate persons get a new start in life. Maimed and disheartened they come to his place of business, and so efficiently and cleverly are they fitted with a new arm or a new leg that they leave with a determination to succeed in spite of their disability. It is not an unusual thing for this company to fit out five to ten persons a day with new limbs and braces. In so doing the organization makes that many better men, women and children for the artificial members are so cleverly made and fitted that it is hard to discern that they are not of bone and flesh.

Mr. Hedgecock established his business in Fort Worth in 1907 but brought it over to Dallas in 1914. He has the most modern equipped factory of its kind in the Southwest and serves thousands of customers over the Southwestern territory. Persons are coming to Dallas every week from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico to be fitted with new limbs.

Mr. Hedgecock is a native of Tennessee but Texas is his home and he is proud of the lone star state and quite enthusiastic over the coming Texas Centennial.

Probably a great deal of Mr. Hedgecock's success is due to his sympathetic understanding of the needs of those who are forced to wear artificial members, because he has worn an artificial limb for many years.

Every employee of this organization wears one or more artificial members.

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid.

After trying many brands of medicines—so-called relief for gas, and all of them a failure, I gave up hopes. By chance I tried Alka-Seltzer—I am more than satisfied. Geo. Bennett, New York, N. Y.

V-8 LEADERSHIP

ON OCTOBER 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out, in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $523,111,389.00 for materials.

Croat Terrorists On Hunger Strike

AIX-EN-PROVENCE — France — Three Croat terrorists, on trial for complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, began a hunger strike Tuesday night in protest against the disbarring of their lawyer.

As Georges Desbons, hired by Croats of the United States to defend the three men, was dragged from the courtroom by the police, he shouted: "I was disbarred by French justice in order to prevent damaging revelations of responsibility of certain foreign nations in the assassination."

The trial, which opened Monday, was suspended until Wednesday, when the defendants—Mio Kraj, Ivan Rajtich and Zvonimir Pospetil—refused to accept the service of Jacque Saudino, whom the court selected as their counsel to succeed Desbons.

Declaring they would have only Desbons, the Croats said through their spokesman:

"Our American brothers chose Desbons because they knew he alone was capable of getting us justice."

Forgotten Millions Lie in U. S. Vaults, History Unit Of Centennial Holds Interest

Long before the "forgotten man" was ever remembered, "forgotten money" was one of Uncle Sam's and the nation's bankers' biggest headaches.

It's hard to believe, isn't it, that even since money has been hard to get, Americans have a habit of laying it aside and then promptly forgetting about it. But it's true. Because of this carelessness, or absent-mindedness, or whatever you want to call it, several hundred millions of dollars today lie unclaimed in vaults throughout the country.

This colossal forgetfulness of the "thrifty" American public has put banks to great expense in establishing special departments to locate the rightful owners of these unclaimed millions.

There are many reasons why much of this mislaid wealth has never been claimed.

During wartime, many patriotic Americans sank their savings in Liberty Bonds. Then, not having a clear understanding of the investment they had made, they proceeded to put their bonds in an attic trunk and forgot about them.

Many doughboys, before leaving for overseas, deposited their savings in banks near their training camps. Some of these lads never returned from the battlefields. Many who did return forgot about their deposits.

Scores of new fathers, bursting with pride at the birth of a son have deposited money in the bank to provide for Junior's education. When the parental thrill wore off, the passbook was stored somewhere and forgotten.

People who secretly have accumulated quite a bit of wealth

Exhibited, in the picture above, is $200,000 in $5 and $10 bills. More than 600 times this amount of money lies, forgotten, in vaults throughout the country, while Uncle Sam, the courts, and banks advertise for its rightful owners or heirs.

have passed away without having had the forethought to provide a will. In other cases, heirs cannot be found.

According to the public administrator of New York City, unclaimed estates amounting to $634,092 were handled in the year 1934. And this, mind you, occurred in a single city.

If not claimed in 20 years, unclaimed money becomes the property of the state although, after that time, an owner of any part of this sum will be paid if he can satisfactorily prove his claim.

Inactive savings or ever checking accounts cause banks a great deal of trouble. Every so often they have to publish lists of depositors whom they have not been able to locate for five years.

It might not be a bad idea to scour the household for forgotten bonds and bankbooks. Uncle Sam, and the banks in general, would be glad to co-operate with legitimate owners in a share-the-forgotten-wealth movement.

Oldest Windmill In America Being Dismantled For Place In Museum

WEST YARMOUTH.—Shingle by shingle, stone by stone, America's oldest windmill is being dismantled under guard to be taken to the Henry Ford Museum of early American at Dearborn, Michigan.

The work of tearing down a mill built in 1633 began in a steady rain last week. The workmen said several days would be needed for the task. Meanwhile a twenty-four-hour police guard is being maintained to keep souvenir hunters away.

Cape Codders voiced energetic protests when it was announced the Ford Dealers Association had purchased the windmill, at a price unofficially placed at $12,000 for Ford. Since then letters of protest have been received from all parts of the United States. They're still coming.

Souvenir hunters flocked to the mill when the dismantling began. They were said to be offering as high as $5 for a shingle—but every shingle was carefully taken down, checked and filed away for shipment.

The mill—of quaint Dutch architecture—was built at Sandwich, on Cape Cod, thirteen years after the Pilgrims landed. It was moved to South Yarmouth in 1750 and then in 1782 it was moved again to Bass River. There it remained doing its share of the Cape's grinding, until 1894, when it was taken to its present site in this village.

Dr. Edward F. Gleason of Hyannis, who sold the mill to the Ford dealers, replied to protests with the assertion that Cape residents were late with their attempt to keep the mill on the Cape.

Girl "Robinson Crusoe" Fails To Enjoy Outing

AVALON, Calif.—A five year plan of adventure emulating a feminine Robinson Crusoe ended here this week after just five days when Alice St. Helens, pretty Indianapolis miss, decided good warm meals inside of modern shelters were more to be desired than sleeping under the stars and facing the stinging blasts of winter.

Five days ago, accompanied only by her little dog, "Kurz," the young woman hiked into the interior wilderness of Santa Catalina island, intent on remaining five years.

For equipment she had a box of matches and three bars of soap. Her money spent in transportation to California and a futile attempt to break into the movies in Hollywood, Miss St. Helens hit upon the "five year plan" as a means of solving her problem of existence.

Fishing, mild mountain goats and berries, Miss St. Helens thought would offer ample food during her self-inflicted exile.

But hungry and cold and unable to stand the lonesomeness of a Robinson Crusoe, the girl today was being cared for by Constance Tinch Oroich, who came upon Miss St. Helens in a sheltered cove on Santa Catalina island's rugged shoreline.

The girl said she was an orphan and had been captivated by the thrill of adventure on an island after her rosy dreams of stardom vanished.

Hundreds Of Historic Mementoes Of State Included In Display

DALLAS, Texas—Establishment of the historical department of the Texas Centennial Exposition under Professor Herbert Gambrell of Southern Methodist University has created state-wide interest amongst private collectors and owners of historical heirlooms.

Hundreds of offers of historic mementoes of the heroes of Texas history have been pouring in from city and farm house. The private offers alone would fill the spacious hall of 1836 in the Texas Hall of State which has been allocated for the historical exhibit. Plans are being discussed for an additional space for historical exhibits in the million-dollar building.

From Dr. William E. Howard of Dallas, noted as a private collector of Texana, comes the proffer of such priceless documents in connection with Texas history as the last will and testament of General Santa Anna who was vanquished by General Sam Houston at San Jacinto. Also a certified signature of King Ferdinand and Queen Isa-bella of Spain; the autographs of 120 Texas and national figures for whom Texas counties are named; the autograph of every president of the United States and the picture and signature of every Viceroy of New Spain who ruled Texas from Mexico City.

Added to this will come exhibits of the Garcia library at the University of Texas in Austin which will include the original account by Cabeza de Vaca of his adventures in Texas, published in Zamorra Spain in 1529.

The original Texas Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the Republic and the State of Texas will be brought from the State Capitol at Austin, under guard of Texas Rangers, to be exhibited during the Exposition in Dallas.

Clergy Endorses "Mercy Murder" Move In England

Persons Suffering From Incurable Diseases May Ask For Death

CHICAGO.—Endorsement of England's "mercy murder" movement by Clergymen, including the famed "Gloomy Dean," William Ralph Inge, was reported recently by the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"To meet possible objections on religious grounds," the former dean of St. Paul's Cathedral signed a statement that "what is proposed is not contrary to Christian principles," the Journal correspondent said in this week's issue.

Other signers, the correspondent said, were Dean Inge's successor at St. Paul's, the Very Rev. Walter Robert Matthews; Canon H. R. L. Shepard, and Dr. T. Rhonda Williams, chairman of the Congregational Union.

Additional "influential support" for the newly formed "Voluntary Euthanasia Legislation Society," which seeks to give physicians legal power to terminate suffering from incurable diseases if the patients wish it—was listed as follows:

The Rev. Prof. J. M. Creel, of Cambridge University; Sir Humphrey Rolleston, former president of the Royal College of Physicians; Sir George Seaton Buchanan, vice president of the League of Nations Health Committee, and Prof. Julian Huxley, biologist and author.

The Journal correspondent said the plan advanced by Lord Moy-nihan, president of the Euthanasia Society, who is drafting a bill for the House of Lords, included an application form to be filled out by the patient seeking death.

A referee would see the patient, and decide whether permission for the voluntary death should be granted. After that, the patient would have seven days to change his mind.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal would not comment on the article, except to conform its authenticity.

Vast Throng Sees Iowan Cop Husking Crown

Pyrorrhea Found In Middle Life

AUSTIN, Texas—Pyrorrhea is a chronic disease involving the gums and also the part of the jaw bone surrounding the roots of the teeth. It also affects the membrane which fastens the tooth to the bone and helps to hold it firmly in place, stated Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

Being an adult's malady it is seldom seen in children. It is most common after middle life. It begins at the gum margin. Early symptoms include swelling and redness. Moreover, the gums are prone to bleed when brushed. Usually there is no pain, even in advanced cases. If the progress of this disease is not arrested, the bone and ligament become involved, pockets are formed between the teeth and gum, and pus collects.

Uncleanliness, undue stress on a few teeth, malnutrition and irritation produced by the accumulation of food, tartar, and bacteria around and between the teeth are outstanding factors in the development of pyorrhea. Badly fitted crowns and bridges, and over-hanging edges of fillings, which are direct contributors to mouth uncleanliness, also lead to irritation. Incidentally, pyorrhea is not contagious.

It is a curable disease if it is not too far advanced when recognized. Treatment is not by the use of drugs but in educating the patient in the proper use and care of the teeth and the removal of the remnants of dead membrane adhering to the root surfaces, as well as any existing tartar.

Proper daily attention to mouth hygiene is the one great bulwark against pyorrhea.

Library Work At Univ. Of Texas Is Pleasant Task

Position Helps Meet Expenses And Carries Degree of Distinction

AUSTIN, Texas—A student member of the library staff at The University of Texas is not only assured part-time employment to aid him in meeting his school expenses, but his appointment carries a considerable degree of distinction as well, since only those students who have made unusually high scholastic records are eligible for library employment. Frequently those students who start working as pages or in the mending or cataloguing department as sophomores prove so efficient that in later years they work their way into administrative positions as library executives. Many of the present administrative staff, including reference librarians and heads of departments, were initiated into library work as student employees.

Hardly The Proper Holiday Spirit

Can you imagine that! Thomas Turkey sulking, after millions of people have invited him and his feathered friends to Thanksgiving dinners! That's gratitude for you. While this bird in the hand means a hearty holiday dinner for Nedra Christensen, the turkey seems to have a dark suspicion he's going to get it in the neck, somehow.

THANKSGIVING DINNER

Here are two menus, the first the real old-fashioned Thanksgiving feast, the other sophisticated enough to meet the most modern taste; the first smacks of plenty, the other is more delicate and clean-cut.

- OLD-FASHIONED
Oyster Stew
Roast Turkey
Squash Souffle
Mashed Potatoes
Giblet Gravy
Cranberry Sauce
Molded Waldorf Salad
Nut Bread
Parker House Rolls
Mince Meat Custard Pie
Coffee

ROAST TURKEY
Clean, singe and pick over the turkey. Wash in salted water. It is a good plan to stuff the bird the night before cooking.

When stuffed, place in a large covered roaster with a little water. Baste frequently until tender. Allow about 30 minutes to each pound. Reserve the liquid and add to it the previously cooked giblets which have been chopped fine. If your oven is too small to accommodate a large roaster you may place the turkey in the broiling pan and cover it with several folds of cheesecloth. Pour about a pint of milk over this and continue basting until the bird is nearly done. By this time the cheesecloth will have formed a mask over the fowl and you can lift it off in order to brown the turkey, uncovered, the last hour of baking.

- MODERN MENU
Sea Food Cocktail
Roast Duck
White Turnip Cups with Diced Beets
Corn Patties
Riced Potatoes
Asparagus Salad
Parker House Rolls
Currant Pie
Coffee

ROAST DUCK
Clean ducks thoroughly, washing in cold running water. Wipe dry and stuff with sage and onion stuffing. Place birds in roasting pan with wings and legs tied closely to the body. Spread generously with fat and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place in hot oven for 10 or 15 minutes, add 1 cup of water and reduce heat to moderate. Baste frequently while cooking allowing 20 minutes to the pound. When done remove ducks to platter, pour off most of the grease and make a brown gravy with what remains in the pan. Or Serve with orange sauce.

Mrs. T. M. Johnston Honoree At Shower Monday Afternoon

Holidays Call Attention To Texas, Famous For Prime Quality Turkeys

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—With Thanksgiving and Christmas drawing near, the spotlight is again turned on turkeys.

"Texas turkey growers have paid closer attention than ever this year to selection of breeding stock and finished dressings in order to produce birds of prime quality for the market," George P. McCarthy, Extension poultry husbandman announced.

He pointed out that, although the turkey crop would be shorter in numbers this year, it would nearly balance in tonnage. Last year, 1,600 carloads of dressed turkeys were shipped out of Texas. This year, trade estimates place the carload shipments between 1,300 and 1,400.

McCarthy said that the Luling Foundation has one of the outstanding flocks this year, comprised of 1,800 birds from this year's hatch. Most of these birds will be sold as breeders.

Another good flock is owned by Levi Churchill, turkey demonstrator in Bailey County. Last year, almost his entire flock was graded prime. He will have around 500 birds this year.

"Breeding for quality pays," McCarthy said. He gave as an example the flock owned by the J. T. Owen family in Lynn County. Last year this family stressed quality in their turkeys. As a result of proper management, balanced rations, and good breeding stock, the family made a net profit of $153 on 85 birds sold.

"Last year," McCarthy emphasized, "prime toms and hens brought from seven to eight cents more per pound than ordinary commercial turkeys. There is every indication that the same condition in price will be true this year."

As a result of turkey grading schools held the last two years, the first dressed turkey shows in the Southwest was opened last December at Plainview. This year the show will again be held during the first week in December at Plainview.

ected as pastor of the new Hedley circuit, which serves this county, and Rev. J. R. Bright was named as pastor for the Dozier-Kelton area.

The change in circuits for this area was made in view of the fact that the work was considered too heavy, and the new circuit was added.

Quail and Marella were taken off of the Wellington circuit. This circuit now includes Samnorwood, Aberdeen, Bethel and Salt Fork, and will have Rev. Damron as pastor.

The new Hedley circuit includes Quail, Marella, McKnight and Ring, and will have Rev. Lacey as pastor.

Dodsonville remains the same with Rev. Strong serving Dodsonville, Fresno and Kelley.

The Clarendon district, in which this county is included, reported 476 additions on profession of faith during the year; on profession of faith by certificates 528, giving a total of 1,004. Salaries were reported 93 per cent.

The conference also paid tribute to two former Wellington residents, Rev. J. T. Hicks, and Mrs. E. B. Bowen with memorial services dedicated to them. Mrs. Bowen is the wife of a former Wellington pastor and was widely known and loved in this county. Rev. Hicks will always be remembered here as a former pastor, whose influence resulted in the construction of the present Methodist Church building.

and not more than 36 a week. Hunters will also remember that a preserve was created in the west portion of the county, extending north to the Quail territory. No hunting will be allowed in the preserve.

Duck stamps Tuesday had been issued to T. C. Crabtree, Ira Morgan, W. C. Starr, Mish Dukeminier, J. C. Simpson, J. W. Shull and W. R. Ward. As last year, the stamps will be necessary for all duck hunters and may be secured at the postoffice.

With the approaching duck season the following regulations are listed, by which water fowl may be taken: "Shotguns, only or not more than ten-gauge and not capable of holding more than three shells.

"From land or water with the aid of a dog, and from a blind or boat or floating craft of any kind, unless specifically prohibited.

"Birds must not be lured or attracted by the use of grain, salt, or any kind of food or the use of live waterfowl decoys."

It has been a great privilege to labor with them. I am speaking of the entire charge, consisting of Dodsonville, Kelley and Fresno churches."

A special Thanksgiving service is planned for all of the churches at Dodsonville on Thanksgiving Day, November 28. Preaching services will be held during both the morning and afternoon. Worship will be held at the Baptist Church building and dinner will be served at the noon hour.

First Recorded Case Of Wife Beating In America Now In Texas University

AUSTIN.—The first recorded case of wife-beating in America is found in an Aztec codex of sheepskin, dated 1540, now in the possession of the Garcia Library at the University of Texas. This document came from the ancient village of Tepeatepec, near Mexico City. By means of Aztec numerals, pictures, and some Spanish writing, it relates how a certain Spanish lord paid a negro the sum of three sheep to give his wife a sound beating.

Dr. Carlos Casteneda, librarian of the Garcia Collection, says he can not determine definitely whether the lord was too tender hearted to beat his wife or whether the wife was just too large. The Indian scribe, however, who kept this lord's records, presents a very realistic sketch of the chastisement.

Primitive as this document may appear to us now, it is remarkably complete in detail. Aztec numerals are employed to designate the number of sheep, chickens, or pounds of maize the lord exacted from his Indian subjects. Four chicken heads, or four dots and a chicken head, meant four chickens; and so on through nineteen. Twenty was indicated by a flag. The next step in this curious, but rather efficient system was the square of twenty, indicated by a feather. A purse, made somewhat like our numeral eight, represented twenty cubed.

In the Garcia Collection are many such graphic accounts of the Mayans, Aztecs, and Incas who once inhabited the region of Central America and the northern portion of South America. There are 43 in all, three of which are in the original and have never been published.

An average of 25 people apply each year for patents on perpetual motion machines—but the model never work.

After being fined $25 for disorderly conduct, Mrs. Clara Steinman of Chicago bawled out the judge, who then raised the fine to $50.

Jack Gibson New Dealer Here For Terraplane Cars

New Terraplane For 1936 Placed On Display At Wellington This Week

Announcing Jack Gibson as the new dealer for Collingsworth County, the new Terraplanes for 1936 were received here during the past week and are now on display at the Gibson Motor Company, one block east from the northeast corner of the square.

Not only do the new cars attain entirely new standards of beauty, but they incorporate safety engineering features to a degree never before found in automobile chassis and bodies. In addition, there are a number of innovations of a fundamental nature which no cars have ever had before.

Although these cars are still in the lowest price field, they are much bigger and finer than their predecessors of the same make. Of interest from a safety, as well as comfort standpoint, is the wholly new principle, Radial Safety Control, which makes possible greater safety in riding, steering, and stopping. So marked a difference does this new front end system incorporate in the riding qualities of the car that the manufacturers of the Terraplane have given the name, Rhythmic Ride, to the result of the synchronized and unified suspension system.

This new front end system also introduces Tru-Line steering bringing a new road sense to the steering wheel because of the accurate control of the steering system, regardless of road condition. Another new feature is the Duo-Automatic hydraulic brakes which incorporate a big husky hydraulic system with the double safety factor of an automatic reserve brake of the rotary-equalized mechanical type.

On the bodies, which have one-fifth more room inside than many cars selling at double the price, is the automatic draft eliminator—a feature added to Terraplane's all-year ventilation system which automatically equalizes air pressure inside and outside the car and screens the air entering the body in connection with the ventilating system.

Mounted on a full 115 inch wheelbase and equipped with an 88 horsepower engine, and 100 horsepower available optionally, the car is not only roomier, but is capable of maintaining the reputation that Terraplane has established for performance. This car

1936 Terraplanes On Display In Wellington

Terraplane Custom Brougham for 1936, mounted on a 115-inch wheelbase chassis with an 88-horsepower engine and 100 horsepower optional.

carries on the tradition of the models which have broken AAA records for speed, economy and hill climbing, all over the country. The bodies are all of steel, having a steel floor, steel roof and a complete steel structure throughout. The Electric Hand which was introduced on the Terraplane last year for smoother, safer, faster, gear-shifting, is optional on all models. The Terraplane is made in two series—Deluxe and Custom. A full line of bodies being available in either series.

In the bodies extra leg room, elbow room and shoulder room, has been provided. The sedans are full six-passenger capacity with seats three inches wider front and rear than those normally considered standard. The seats are 50 inches wide in front and 49 inches in the rear. At shoulder and elbow height, 56 inches of width is provided above the arm rest, and because of the three-inch longer wheelbase, more leg room is provided lengthwise.

The body is more completely insulated than any bodies previously made. The sound insulation of the Terraplane bodies for 1936 has been carried in an extremely high standard. Various insulating materials are employed to damp out any possible vibration.

The introduction of automatic draft elimination in the Terraplane for 1936 brings a feature to this low price car which will be found for the first time in cars at any price. The system insures a supply of clean, fresh air to the occupants of the cars. It completes the all-year ventilating system in that it filters the incoming air supply, permitting air to only enter the car at a definite point when the ventilating system is in use.

In cold weather driving, the automatic draft eliminator prevents chill draft around the door of the car because the bottoms and sides of the doors and in fact all other possible sources of air leakage on the car are sealed. Air is only permitted to enter at one point with the windows closed and the ventilating system in action.

The interior of the body has been beautified in many respects. Because of the V-form of the windshield, it is possible to tilt and curve the instrument panel to make it more legible from the driver's seat. The instruments have been rearranged. In place of the water level gauge a water temperature indicator is now supplied. The ruby tell-tale lights for oil pressure and battery charging are continued. These lamps flash red on the instrument dial if the generator is not charging or if the oil pressure is below normal.

The interior upholstery and trim of the Terraplanes for 1936 is of a quality usually found in cars of a much higher price. An option is provided in that the seat cloth may be either an Uxbridge Worsted with a two-tone tree bark pattern or a 100 per cent two-tone red-brown Mohair. The sidewalls on the Terraplane are Uxbridge Worsted or Mohair optional with headlining colored to match.

From an engineering standpoint, one of the most important innovations in the Terraplane is the introduction of Radial Safety Control. As its name indicates this system derives its outstanding advantages from the fact that the front axle in its oscillation, due to inequalities of the road, moves in a true vertical arm. It is held to this path by two drop-forged torque rods, one on each side of the frame of the car, fitted to the side rail of the frame.

The action of these torque rods permits the front axle to rise and fall freely without restrictions in the vertical plane, and to deviate to a sufficient degree from the horizontal position to accommodate the inequalities encountered on the road surface. Because of the use of these torque rods, the front springs have no duties to perform except those of absorbing road shock. They do not have to drive the front axle nor absorb brake torque. As a result, a softer, more flexible spring, can be employed without in any way affecting the control of the car, but providing infinitely better riding qualities. The front springs can thus be synchronized properly with the rear springs giving rise to what Terraplane engineers have called the "Rhythmic Ride."

Another feature called "Tru-Line Steering" which will be featured in connection with the Terraplane this year also results from this front end construction. It is achieved by the fact that it is not necessary to compromise the steering layout in order to approximate correct steering under all operating conditions. The torque arm control makes it possible not only to design the steering according to strict theoretical accuracies, but to actually maintain this accuracy on the car in practice. This results in a much better driving feel or "road sense" of the car.

Another important feature of the Terraplane for 1936 which is outstanding from a safety point is the use of Duo-Automatic hydraulic brakes. In this system all of the inherent advantages of the hydraulic brakes, are provided plus the infallibility of the positive rotary-equalized mechanical brake. With this system, every application of the hydraulic brake is backed up by a mechanical application which follows closely behind it, but which is inoperative except under emergency application. This is the first time in any automobile that a dual application system has ever been provided.

Terraplane chassis for 1936 are longer, wider and more rigid than in 1935, although the latter chassis was outstanding in this respect. The increased dimensions, however, are required for the bigger, wider, and longer body. With three inches added to the wheelbase and with the tread at the rear increased from 56 to 57 1-2 inches, a broader and longer foundation for the body is provided. The distinctive Terraplane feature in which the bottom floor of the body provides a rigid plate cross-member for the frame is continued. This gives a complete juncture of body and chassis and provides a unified structure for the entire assembly eliminating any line of weakness or break in structural strength and at the same time removing useless dead weight.

The big six cylinder Terraplane engine with its bore and stroke of 3 x 5 inches produces 88 horsepower at 3800 r.p.m. with its standard compression ratio of 6 to 1. If greater horsepower is desired there is a 100 horsepower engine optional which employs the superpower dome. The latter is a solid aluminum cylinder head giving a 7 to 1 compression ratio.

There are a number of detailed improvements in the Terraplane engine for 1936, increasing its efficiency and ruggedness. The waterpump, for example, is now the pressure type instead of the suction type. This provides a very effective flow to the car heater when installed.

The carburetor on the new Terraplane has been improved and is now fitted with an anti-percolating device designed to prevent vapor lock in the float bowl. There is a spring-loaded needle valve in the float bowl which opens when the throttle is closed permitting vapor to escape. A further improvement in the gasoline supply system is in the use of a larger tank. The tank capacity is now 16 1-2 gallons instead of the 11 gallon size previously used.

The Electrical Hand installation which proved to be such a great success in the 1935 Terraplane is continued with detailed improvement. The appearance of the Electric Hand bracket on the steering column has been materially improved, having been given a streamline form to coincide with the interior trim of the car.

A number of important changes have been made in the transmission, making it a huskier, more rigid unit. There is a dual interlock on the transmission by means of which the gears are locked in mesh. The clutch must be depressed in order to release the lock, thus preventing any possibility of gears slipping out of mesh. The transmission case is longer, and the gear faces are wider. The rear axle provides a standard ratio of four one-ninth to one with an optional ratio of three eight-ninths to one. The tire size on the Terraplane for 1936 is 6.90x16 inches.

LOCKHART.—The sale of 430 No. 2 cans of green cream peas for $60.20 was reported by four members of the Caldwell County Better 4-H Products Association at a recent meeting, according to Miss Leta H. Bennett, home demonstration agent. This amount was sold in a period covering not quite two months. The peas are sold by four of the leading grocers of Lockhart.

A Planned Program of Saving for the Home

1. Buy In Quantities.
2. Watch For Specials.
3. Save Unused Portions.
4. Have Year-'round Refrigeration.

Tests recently made over the country show the necessity for year 'round refrigeration. The Government Weather Bureau reports show that there are only nineteen days in the average winter, when temperatures remain throughout the day at "safety zone temperatures"—below 50 degrees and above 32 degrees.

Natural refrigeration is not dependable. It is always summer in the kitchen. Tests in various cities during the winter season, show an average temperature of 76 degrees (26 degrees above the danger-line).

Electric refrigeration is dependable. It makes possible your planned program of saving.

Business Outlook Bright For Rest Of Year, Burchel

Recent Improvements Ex- pected To Continue Into Next Year

AUSTIN.—Practically all phases of business activity have registered further progress toward recovery during the past month and there are good grounds for expecting that the present trend will continue, at least during the remainder of the year and the early months of the new year, it is pointed out by Dr. F. A. Buechel, assistant director of the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research.

"Marked expansion during recent weeks in retail trade, checks cashed, and the movement of miscellaneous freight indicate that the rate of consumption is raising," Dr. Buechel said. "On the industrial production side of the picture, the outstanding features are the all-time high which was reached during the week ended October 12 in electric power production; the new peak reached in freight carloadings during the week ended October 19, the highest since 1928; and the maintenance of activity near the high of the year despite lack of volume orders from the automobile industry during recent weeks and the fact that the steel industry has been receiving but little support in the way of volume orders from the heavy industries such as commercial construction, the railroads, and public utilities.

"Although the rate of activity of railroads is growing more and more favorable and that of public utilities is already highly satisfactory, the same condition unfortunately does not exist with respect to net operating incomes of either of these institutions. In the case of the railroads, fixed costs and rigid public control create difficult problems for railroad management, and this situation would be greatly accentuated if the Federal social security and the railroad pension acts were to be upheld by the Supreme Court. About 70,000 miles of railroad are already in receivership, more than one-fourth of the total for the country, with more receiverships impending. Until some of these problems are brought nearer solution than they are at present, the railroads will not be in position to contribute either to the direct or indirect reduction of unemployment to an extent commensurate with the importance of this industry in our present economic structure.

"Although much of the distress of the railroads may be accounted for by the general business depression and the aggressiveness of competing agencies, this explanation will not account for the current low operating returns of public utilities, for the output of these organizations declined relatively little during the depression, and at present the output is the highest on record. Political rather than economic factors, therefore appear to be responsible for the current unfavorable net operating results of public utilities. Should the Supreme Court invalidate or ameliorate the Federal Farm Board, and the recent price pegging operations of the AAA."

Giant Squash

If this vegetable were to drop on anyone, there would probably be a great big squash. Anyway, this giant specimen, weighing 165 pounds, created much excitement about Seattle, Wash., where big squashes abound. It was estimated this huge exhibit would supply filling for 350 pies.

orate the influence of recent Federal legislation pertaining to public utilities, an important stimulus to the heavy industries would doubtless result, with corresponding benefits to the employment situation.

"Considerable apprehension is being expressed in certain quarters concerning the effect on agriculture of the possible invalidation of the AAA by the Supreme Court. So far, at least as Texas is concerned, these fears seem to be without foundation. The animal industries of the State—beef, dairy, poultry, wool and mohair—which have never come under the AAA program now have comparatively bright prospects.

"If subsidies for agriculture are needed as a permanent policy to compensate for the natural hazards agriculture constantly faces and the weak bargaining position which the industry holds because of its six million widely scattered operating units and diverse interests, these subsidies, it would seem, should be associated with a program for promoting efficiency in production and not the reverse. With such a program, the additional tax burdens which direct subsidies would involve might be at least partially offset by lower costs of food and the maintenance of our foreign markets for agricultural products.

"The statistical position of agriculture is now the strongest it has been in years as a result of the devastating drought of 1934 and the growing demand for farm products. This is the time, therefore, to consider carefully to what extent the Federal Government itself may have been responsible for the building up of surpluses through the '20's by its production loan policies, the activities of the Federal Farm Board, and the recent price pegging operations of the AAA."

Dairymen Not To Increase Number Cows In Herd

There will be no marked increase in number of milk cows on farms over the next two years, but milk production is expected to increase in response to better feed conditions, according to the annual outlook report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Stocks of dairy products are reported larger than a year ago, and with prospects for increased production during the late winter, the total supplies of dairy products will be larger than a year ago.

Farm prices of butterfat are reported higher now in relation to feed grains than a year ago, and a further increase is in prospect. Farm prices of butterfat are low in relation to meat animals, and are likely to continue relatively low during 1936, says the report.

This price relationship will tend to check dairy production in areas where shifts are most easily made from dairy to meat production.

Receipts of milk and cream indicate the decline in city consumption of fresh milk and cream is probably past, and with further improvement in business and in consumer incomes, city consumption probably will increase. With further business improvement, the report adds, butter prices will probably rise in relation to other commodities.

The number of milk cows increased steadily from early 1928 until the spring of 1934 when drouth and the general shortage of feed caused a decline. On January 1, 1928, there were 22,129,000 milk cows, and a year later there were 26,185,000. On January 1, 1935, there were 25,100,000, and on January 1 next, there will be about 24,500,000.

The bureau's dairy correspondents all over the country report farmers are planning to increase their dairy herds, but actual increases during the next year or two seem likely to be small.

The growth of population during the next year or two, it is expected, will be proportionately greater than the increase in number of milk cows. This will tend to make conditions slightly more favorable for dairying.

Line Motor Co. Agency For New Plymouth Autos

Plymouth President Gives Reasons For Industry's Leadership

H. S. Line this week announced the opening of the Line Motor Company in Wellington on the ground floor of the IOOF building. Mr. Line has the agency for Plymouth and DeSoto automobiles in this territory. He comes here from Canyon, and has operated automobile sales agencies in Canyon and Hereford. In addition to the sales agency, Mr. Line also has an assortment of used cars at the Gibson Service Station.

In announcing the opening of the Plymouth-DeSoto Agency here, Mr. Line invited the public to visit the new location and to see the new modern automobiles in the line.

D. S. Eddins, president of the Plymouth Motor Corporation, recently listed reasons for the motor industry's leadership in U. S. business recovery.

"Most Americans think of Detroit as the 'motor capital' of the country, but the whole nation actually contributes to the modern car," he said at the National Automobile Show. He was discussing the reasons for the motor car industry's importance in leading national business recovery.

"The business of making, selling and servicing motor transportation absorbs more than 5,000,000 men and women workers. One out of every six American workers derives his daily bread—either directly or indirectly—from the automobile industry.

"Behind that fact lies the reason for the motor car industry's importance as a vital force in leading the United States back to prosperity.

"Industrial cities and farming communities alike share in the fortunes of the motor car industry. Millions of workers in all walks of life—miners in lead, zinc and copper mines; cotton pickers in the South; shepherds in the West; and industrial workers in scores of cities—owe a big part of their income to this one industry.

"The amount of raw material and finished car parts necessary to keep automobile assembly lines going staggers the imagination. In one year the industry uses between four and five million tons of steel and a quarter million tons of malleable iron. Automobile factories absorb 350,000 tons of rubber, 12,000 tons of aluminum, 31,000 tons of copper and more than 66,000,000 square feet of plate glass. One of every ten bales of cotton and 4,000,000 pounds of Mohair go into new motor cars in a year.

"A breakdown of the amount of material that goes into one new car provides an insight into what the industry as a whole demands of other industries. A low-price car such as the new 1936 Plymouth has 1,700 pounds of steel and 500 pounds of malleable iron in the body, engine and chassis. A single Plymouth also requires 70 pounds of safety glass for the windshield, windows and doors; 160 pounds of rubber for tires, tubes, "Floating Power" engine mountings, and body cushion shims; 60 pounds of copper for babbitt bearings and other parts; 20 pounds of aluminum for pistons; 70 pounds of cotton and 15 pounds of wool in the upholstery.

"These materials and others of lesser quantities too numerous to mention go into each new Plymouth. When it is realized that we are equipped to turn these cars off the assembly line of our main plant in Detroit at the rate of three a minute, some notion can be gained of the volume of materials needed in a single year. Plymouth uses more than 650,000,000 pounds of steel, 64,000,000 pounds of rubber and 23,000,000 pounds of glass during a year."

Fitting Memorial

Since there is no manner in which to know how much money will be contributed over the nation, leaders have been unable to decide just what type of memorial will be created. However, it has been announced that no monument or statue will be erected from the fund, but instead that the money shall be used to construct some memorial which will be of lasting service to the needy, a purpose taken from the life's habits of the famous humorist and philosopher.

Money collected from the campaign in this county will be sent to the national committee, which is headed by Vice President John Nance Garner. Contributors have been assured that no deductions will be made from the fund for any expense other than for the actual memorial.

The form of the Memorial will depend upon the number of friends who contribute. The number of contributions will of itself be a memorial to Will Rogers, and will be of as much importance as the amount contributed.

Either of the three banks in Wellington, the Wellington State Bank, First National Bank, or City State Bank—or the Wellington Leader—will accept contributions to the fund.

The coupon above may be used to identify the donor and may be presented with contributions at the banks or at The Leader office.

January to raise revenues.

Governor Allred appointed the three member control board who met in Austin Saturday to organize formally. They were D. B. Benson of Bowie, a dry, chairman, D. J. Decherd, of Flatonia, a wet, and J. W. Williams, of Port Arthur, a liberal.

Called Compromise Bill
The governor ordered Orville S. Carpenter, state auditor, and R. B. Anderson, tax commissioner, to study the act so regulations could be prescribed and collection of dealers' license fees and taxes started with a minimum of delay. "The Texas liquor control act is evidently a compromise bill," he said. "It is not perfect, of course, and could be improved upon in many respects. Unquestionably it is the best bill that could have been passed under all the circumstances with the wide conflict of opinion prevailing in the legislature."

"I am impelled to sign it because of the total present lack of regulation and the tremendous loss of revenue."

Revenues $10,000 Daily
Revenues from liquor sales and license fees were estimated at $10,000 daily.

Benson is a practicing attorney and is 40 years old, Dechard, 45, has been a general merchant 30 years. Williams is a Port Arthur attorney.

The control board will name a full time administrator.

Although the law went into effect on the governor's signature, actually it cannot become operative until the administrative setup is completed, stamps are printed and regulations formulated.

The status of liquor dealers who continued sales without a license was in doubt. Sales have been unregulated since repeal of constitutional prohibition last summer but under the new law dealers who sell without a license may be denied permits. It was estimated at least two weeks would be required to prepare forms and solve other administrative problems. The board, however, may issue temporary permits.

Applicants Must Advertise
In addition, applicants for licenses must advertise their intentions in newspapers at least two weeks before the board can act.

L. G. Phares, acting director of the Public Safety Department, said he probably would confer with his superior on a course of action in the interim.

"I don't believe we will be unreasonable about the thing," he said.

Huge stores of liquor became immediately subject to taxation. The law levies a tax of 80 cents a gallon on whiskeys and distilled liquors with similar taxes on beverages of lighter alcoholic content.

Farmers To Get--

"Each signer in order to be eligible for his second payment and to keep his contract in force must be sure to have at least 25 per cent of his hog base that he has raised on his farm," Mr. Stovall stated, "and must not exceed his hog base of hogs raised on his farm.

"In connection with any excess pigs which the producer may have, we wish to quote a portion of Circular Letter Corn-Hog Work, No. 0-35:

"Any hogs a 1935 corn-hog contract signer may have produced in 1935 in excess of the production permitted under the terms of the contract to which he is a party must be disposed of on or before November 30, 1935, in accordance with the direction of the Secretary of Agriculture, if the corn-hog contract to which such producer is a party is to be considered as having been complied with in full.

To Relief Sources

"As outlined in C. H. 108, the Secretary of Agriculture has directed that a contract signer may dispose of excess pigs by giving them to one of the following organizations: (1) Federal Emergency Relief Administration, (2) County Poor Farm, (3) Red Cross, or (4) Salvation Army. The Secretary has not authorized the contract signer to dispose of excess pigs on the farm. When the field supervisor visits the farm soon after Nov. 30 to make a final check of compliance, any excess pigs disposed of on the farm after receipt of this notice that were suitable for human consumption or further feeding will be included in such producer's 1935 production, regardless of the disposition that have been made of the carcasses."

"Any producer having an excess in pigs is asked to call at the office of the county agent within the next week or ten days and list the number of excess pigs he has with the Secretary of the Corn-Hog Association, who will turn this information over to the county allotment committee and they will make arrangement with the Relief Administrator or the Red Cross to dispose of these pigs. Please remember that these pigs are to be disposed of on or before November 30 or your contract will have to be reported as a non-compliance and will be subject to cancellation.

Will Rogers Will Be Presented In River Boat Film

Production Is Considered One Of Best Produced By Famous Humorist

"Steamboat Round the Bend" is one of the two pictures completed by Will Rogers before his untimely passing.

In this picture he portrays the character of the kindly old captain of a river steambot, "The Claremore Queen."

It is probably one of his best pictures, quaintly amusing with no hilarious scenes which would in any manner cast a reflection on his beloved memory. His starring partner is Irving S. Cobb, one of his closest friends.

Cobb essays the role of captain of "The Pride of Paducah," rival of "The Claremore Queen" for business and racing honors on the old Mississippi.

In after years these talking pictures of Will Rogers will be priceless heirlooms. These two, "Steamboat Round the Bend," "In Old Kentucky," and his previous pictures, are all we have left to bring back the living image of his great character, known and loved in every country and clime. It is altogether fitting and proper that his friends should see them and periodically in the years to come.

Will Rogers' talents were so diversified and his contacts so numerous and widespread that no group or industry can lay claim to his principal thought or action during his busy and fruitful life.

Lecturer, world traveler, newspaper reporter and columnist, actor, film star, philosopher and philanthropist, he was admired, loved and respected by millions. Of recent years he devoted a considerable portion of his time to the production of photoplays and had reached the very top in this profession. It was thought his appearance in a long list of successful photoplays based for the most part on his homely philosophy of life, that he was best known to many.

The motion picture industry, therefore, feels proud of the fact that it is the instrument through which his memory can be preserved as in real life.

event other than a gathering of their children during the evening. Their children, all of whom gathered with them Friday evening, are Waddell Bailey and family, Arthur Bailey and family, and Mrs. J. D. Thomas and family.

Here 38 Years Ago
Mr. and Mrs. Bailey came to Collingsworth County 38 years ago, arriving in 1897, and purchased a tract of land from the Mill Iron Ranch, located northeast of Wellington. The land was not fenced at that time and Mr. Bailey says that he rode his range daily for six years and in that time he only lost two head of cattle. Mr. Bailey also profited in another way from his territory experience. After coming to Collingsworth County he handled steers instead of cattle. Mr. Bailey was both a good buyer and a fair trader as the same men sold him their steers year after year. He says that he really began making money out of his steers when he fenced his place and had more time to look after them instead of devoting so much of it to seeing that they were still around.

Mr. Bailey retired from active business a number of years ago and since that time has spent a greater number of his days in Fort Worth but he still likes to come back to Collingsworth County and meet his old friends and see familiar faces and to think of the days when he rode an unfenced range.

Mr. Bailey recalls that Comanche Indians still lived near the State capitol when he moved to Texas. He came to Texas from Tennessee in 1872 and his first stop was in Austin, where he secured a job hauling wood for W. L. Carlson. He was only eighteen at that time and he relates with considerable interest the first time he saw six Indians. However, they were peaceful and did not cause trouble.

In 1875 Mr. Bailey moved to a place near Gainesville at the request of his older brother, who was already established there. He went in partners with his brother and bought school claims on which they intended to raise hay. He put up his saddle horse for his half. The year before they had sold from $12 to $15 a ton, but when Mr. Bailey gathered his first crop he took it to market and the best price he could obtain was $2 a ton. Mr. Bailey, who later proved to be a shrewd trader, relates this incident with cheerful chuckles, but he says it was not funny then.

In November of 1875 he was married to Miss Charlie Tomlinson. Anxious to find work he took a contract clearing up 12 acres of timber. In the spring he started making his crop. The weather was unseasonable and he had to plant over, and just when it looked like the crop was getting along fine, a plague of grasshoppers swept the country and completely destroyed his crop.

Early Cattle Raiser
Not liking the luck he was having with farming and seeing a better opportunity in raising cattle, he later moved to Indian Territory and secured a ten year lease on a large tract of land. Here he spent eight years building up a herd of cattle. It was in the days before barbed wire was used extensively and Mr. Bailey frequently found that he got back fewer cattle from the range than he had turned loose. However, the severest test he went through in Indian Territory was when a drouth came in which the grass dried up and in which his cattle died by the thousands. Mr. Bailey skinned each cow that died and sold the hides, and in this manner managed to save something for a new start.

In 1897 he came to Collingsworth County and bought the tract of land from the Mill Iron.

Beware The Cough From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden mucus is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

FIRST PUBLIC SCHOOL

Recently Massachusetts celebrated the 300th anniversary of the founding of the famous Boston Public Latin School. Since this was the first public school on the continent the event was celebrated as "The beginning of the American school."

A bronze tablet at the old institution bears this inscription: "From the seed planted here the whole American system of free education grew."

This "first public school" is 141 years older than the nation itself. It was founded in 1635.

According to a writer in the Pathfinder during a general meeting of the town one Philemon Parmot was entreated to become "schoolmaster for the teaching and nurturing the children with us." Its high traditions have been maintained down through the years and many famous men are numbered among its graduates.

The celebration this year followed a military review by 1,700 of the school's student cadets. There was a pageant depicting not only the birth and growth of the school, but also the birth and growth of the nation. The celebration also included the presentation of a tercentenary tablet, and a huge alumni banquet.

THRIFT AND CRIME

Encouragement of thrift as a means of reducing crime is suggested by a well-known publicist, who declares that extravagant habits in many cases are the direct cause of banditry.

Aside from financial gains possible through economy and thrift, the habit of saving has a stabilizing effect upon one's character. The person who is laying aside something each week or each month with the idea of ultimately securing financial independence is more dependable than one who spends his money as fast or faster than he makes it.

Many who have resorted to dishonesty in order to obtain needed funds quickly are those who have been first led into extravagant living. Allowing themselves to indulge in luxuries in excess of what their earnings warrant, they more easily yield to temptation to dishonesty in its various forms.

Habits of thrift should be inculcated early and should be encouraged at every turn. Those who have acquired such habits are generally industrious, ambitious and honest.

SOIL EROSION — FARMER'S WORST ENEMY

"Seventy-five percent of the farm land of the nation is in need of scientific treatment to curb soil erosion," is the damning indictment of the agricultural industry made by the experts who have been making an intensive study of this growing farm menace.

Some thirty-five million acres of land formerly cultivated have been ruined by uncontrolled erosion, land which, if it had been saved, would be worth nearly two billion dollars! One hundred and twenty-five million additional acres have been denuded of their more productive top-soil and as a result have depreciated in value to the extent of three billion dollars!

Such is the penalty paid by agriculture for the misuse of land, yet the destructive, wasteful process goes on.

Isn't it strange, that while we have spent vast sums of money for fertilizing the soil and for research and experiment in making it more productive, we have done little, until now, to save the soil itself?

But at last this all-important work has begun in earnest—and effectively. The projects under way in this area, with headquarters at Memphis, means a new day of security and prosperity for the entire section. Farmers who hasten to avail themselves of the services of the Soil Conservation Service officers here to help them, will be honored by their progeny for having built for future generations.—Donley County Leader.

RUSSIA'S HANDICAPS

Why the industrial ambitions of Russia are doomed to frustration is told rather convincingly by Isaac Don Levine, former foreign news editor of the New York Tribune, in his book "Red Smoke." Some of the points made by Mr. Levine are these:

Russia has less coal deposits than the state of Wyoming and seven-eighths of Russia's coal reserves are almost inaccessible and thousands of miles from existing or planned industrial centers.

The main timber ones are likewise located in remote and almost uninhabited areas, which the Soviets themselves admit are handicapped by "lack of labor and are separated from consumers of firewood by great distances accentuated by extremely poor communications.

Russia has important oil deposits, but these are also unfavorably located. Being a flat country, its waterpower possibilities are limited. Its mineral resources of iron, copper, silver and gold ore are scanty. Because of the great distances to be traversed the transportation problem seems insurmountable. There is not one first-class harbor on the Russian seacoast.

Even agriculturally, Mr. Levine declares, Russia's resources are inadequate for the immense population. The soils of the north are unfit for farming and the climate is too cold, while the southern zone is subject to droughts.

Taken all in all, it appears that Russia's economic threat to the "capitalistic" world is mostly a bluff, or so it will prove to be for many years to come.

Formerly they were called common scolds and sent to the ducking stool. Now they are called reformers and sent to Congress.

OUR PAST

By C. C. BISHOP

HON. TEMPLE HOUSTON'S ELOQUENT PLEA IN DEFENSE OF ALFRED SON. Delivered at El Reno, Okla., Terr. Nov. 16th, 1897

The courthouse was packed last night to overflowing to listen to the speech of Colonel Temple Houston for the defense. It was a masterly effort, the finest, in fact, ever heard in El Reno. The counsel delivered his speech entirely to the jury without any brass band accompaniment, and the twelve men who listened to it drank in the words as they fell from the learned speaker's lips. After going over in a brief way the evidence which was introduced during the trial, Colonel Houston closed his speech with the following touching remarks:

"Gentlemen, as I told you in the beginning, the territory has shown no motive for the commission of such a crime, and we have given you a reasonable—a true—explanation of every act and utterance of the defendant—even for his trip in that fatal direction. He went only to woo (and win) one of the daughters of the land, tender-eyed, and fair to look upon; and how like a boy, to take the shortest route to see his sweetheart, and, seeing her, take her back by the longest route. The life of this boy, up to the instant of his accusation, has been faultless; and do you believe that he took this sudden and awful plunge from innocence into fathomless depths of crime—from child-like purity into hideous murder? When asked to believe such a supposition, refer to your duties, as given you in his honor's charge; apply the law as there laid down to the proof, and then follow the dictates of your conscience, and I do not fear the result. This brave boy asks me to say to you that, to him, honor is dearer than life, and, as the old exemplar of purest patriotism thundered in the ears of his country's oppressors, he says in this, his hour of trial, 'give me liberty or give me death.' He demands that you free him or inflict the death penalty. Rather than that you should fix upon his boyish brow the brand of felon, he would prefer to walk from your presence with his body polluted with the scales of whitest leprosy. He appeals to no sentiment of pity; only to the justice of his country's laws, which you are so solemnly charged to administer. You came into that box with light hearts and consciences clear. Oh, may you leave there thus! untortured with the curse of having wrecked the life of him whose life you hold in the hollow of your hands. And he is so young, too. Boyhood's dawn still softens upon his child-like face. You will not be here long now. Your homes where loved ones are even now watching, waiting to greet you, and when you clasp them to your manly breasts may the rapture at that moment be not embittered by the memory of having wrecked the life of yonder boy, whom all law and righteousness plead with you to save. Gentlemen, be just; heed not the perjured fiends who thirst for this boy's blood, and in the years yet to come, when the pale messenger summons you before the court where you shall be tried along side of the kings of the earth, each memoried hour of life shall come back to you with awful distinctness, and then happily can you recall that when you judged here, you judged with justice, and in the very spirit of Him who said: 'Even as you did it unto the least of these, so you did it unto me.' So that in the perfection of righteousness you tried the stranger within your gates (for he never saw one of you until he fearlessly placed his fate in your hands) even as you would be tried yourselves. He has a Texas home far across the southern prairies, where the skies were a deeper purple, where the dawn has a brighter glow and the sunset wears a softer gold; where midnight stars look down upon us in a more unspeakable splendor. His loved ones, like yours, are waiting—no! no! not like yours—for his life is darkened even now by the awful shadow of death; and who shall tell what he feels? Gentlemen, break that suspense; dry those tears; bind up these almost broken hearts, for now no power but you can do so. This noble duty done and each hour of life thereafter will grow proud with this recollection."

(Alfred Son was acquitted after being tried three times for the murder of Fred Hoffman.)

The Exile's Return

Text: Haggai 1:2-8; 2:8-9; Bechariah 4:6-10

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 24.

Religious and social messages of utmost importance are contained in some little books of prophecies which appear in the latter part of the Old Testament.

Two of these, Haggai and Bechariah, form the basis of our lesson. These prophecies belong to the age of the exiles' return from Babylon—Haggai in the days of the immediate return and Bechariah, probably born in Babylon and among the returned exiles, but younger at the time of the return and succeeding Haggai some years later.

Despite the people's mission of hope, the progress of rebuilding the city and temple was very slow. The people were hindered in their work and then stopped by the opposition of the Samaritans.

After a delay of 15 years they were in a badly discouraged situation, when Haggai aroused them by his prophetic appeals. He strikes at once at the crucial weakness in their plans of rebuilding.

They were more concerned about building for themselves than about centering their life in religious devotion. To build good houses for themselves had seemed more important than rebuilding the House of God as the symbol and place of worship.

Too often, perhaps, a contrasted situation has been manifested. One thinks of old world cities where rich and beautiful churches and cathedrals overshadow hovels and slums unfit for human habitation, and one contemplates the failure and the lack of power of religion when it has not redeemed and purified cities and set the people in ways of cleanly and double living.

Nevertheless, civilization fails when devotion has no place in the life of a people. It is in the purification of religion, so its power and its motives may be effective, that there is the hope of building truly alike in state and in church.

Haggai saw that if a people were to live upon a high plane, their vision must be lifted to higher things. Where a people has no passion for something higher than abundance of possessions, and comfort and pleasure, it will not be long until these things defeat themselves.

So Haggai stirred up the people with a new zeal. He brought them the message concerning a world which was not the world belonging to the devil or the world belonging to lust and greed; it was a world that belonged to God and a world that could find its right uses only as the godly accepted its wealth and resources for noble ends.

Bechariah took up the work where Haggai ended. His visions were effective for this day, and they offer a message for ourselves. "The man with the measuring line" has become a symbol. What would he find if he went forth to measure American cities as he measured Jerusalem?

Fables Of Gold Keep Texans At Money Diggings

Many Legends Piled Up In Century, But No Treasure Found

FORT STOCKTON.—Legends of buried treasure have haloed many sections of Texas throughout its century of struggle against harsh wilderness, pirates on the coast and bandits on its plains.

At intervals hopeful searchers have set out with "maps," or merely optimism, to dig for "buried" Spanish gold, or the loot of ruthless raiders, but the hills refuse to yield their secrets.

Near Fort Stockton in the far West Big Bend country at beautiful Tunis Springs is the tumbled ruin of an early day stage station. Its crumbling walls are marked with the fable of buried treasure and for scores of years seekers have come with pick and shovel, dug a while and were succeeded by others equally hopeful, who also departed disillusioned.

Attacked by Indians
The accepted version of the legend is that a stage coach carrying the pay roll for the garrison at Fort Stockton and another shipment of gold, stopped at the Tunis station for a change of horses and were attacked by Apache Indians. Before troops could reach the scene from the fort, 20 miles away, the white men at the station and with the coach were killed, the gold, supposedly, being buried during the fight.

The floor of the old station is one and every foot of ground inside the heavy stone walls has been sifted to a depth of several feet. The area for 100 yards around the station is pitted with holes dug during the past 60 years. As far as known, the "buried" treasure remains below earth.

Warm Route Laid Out
After the discovery of Gold in California in 1849, a warm southern route to the west coast was laid out through the wild country of southwest Texas. Although this section of the state is largely arid, it is dotted with great crystal flowing springs and at these points the early carriers of the mails and passengers built their stations.

In those days it required 30 or 40 days for a letter to travel from Texas to California with no assurance it would reach there. The stations along the route were substantial and fort-like structures that gave protection to settlers and travelers against hostile Indians and predatory white men who infested the region.

The old stage trails today are dotted with the sagging walls of those harbors of safety in the wilderness and around many of them cling tales of buried treasure. People generally, dismiss them as fiction but each generation has its quota of the credulous willing to test their belief with pick, shovel and crowbar.

Production Soars In Pontiac Plant

On his arrival in New York for the annual auto show H. J. Klingler, president and general manager of Pontiac Motor Co., gave evidence of the heights to which the motor car industry has risen as the leader of all business recovery with the statement that his own company has found it necessary to increase the production of new 1936 Pontiac cars for the last four months of this year from 48,000 to 57,000. Production of 1936 models started in September.

All-time records for Pontiac production during the fall months were broken, he stated, when the company built 16,633 cars during October just closed. In October a year ago there was no production. During September this year 4,082 Pontiacs were manufactured.

Through October just closed, the company has built 134,061 cars for the first ten months of the current year, which compares with 75,581 for the entire year of 1934.

Mr. Klingler says that barring anything unforeseen in the economic picture, business during the coming year should far exceed 1935.

Here is what an actual user has to say about "Wincharger" and the new ZENITH Radio Combination deal

Fresno, Texas,
Nov. 18, 1935.

Wellington Radio-Electric Shop,
Wellington, Texas.

Dear Sirs:

After operating my Wincharger and Zenith Radio for the past month I want to let you know that I think it is the best thing that ever happened for the farmer who wants a radio and electric lights. My radio has been absolutely OK, and I am going to install lights in my house.

As you know the whole outfit costs me $121.50, including the $97.50 radio set. Just as you told me, it hasn't cost me an extra penny to operate the 6-tube, large size radio.

I have tuned in on almost every station in this country and in addition have gotten England, Japan and South America without any trouble.

My experience with the Wincharger leads me to believe that it will undoubtedly carry the load of lights for the house with ease. I want you to wire my house for three lights, which I understand will only cost me about $10 more, completely installed. I only run the charger one day a week now and that is plenty to take care of the batteries. The Wincharger has not given me the slightest trouble, and does not vibrate at all.

I believe that your deal is the best thing that ever happened for the farmer who wants a real radio and lights for his home. We are all more than satisfied and only regret that we didn't get it sooner.

Very truly yours,

P. E. Lowerie.

SALE STARTS FRIDAY, Nov. 22

As you know our store is small, and we bought rather heavy this fall. Frankly, we have not moved as much stuff as we thought we would, and as a result, we have over a full carload of new stuff that has never been uncrated, because we do not have room to display it. Something must move, and move quickly. The only way we know to do it, is to reduce the price drastically even if it means a loss on some items. That is just what we have done. ## London Parley Seeks to Avoid Naval Race

Powers Will Try to Limit Building After '36

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

WITH the whole world fearful that the East African incident may provoke the entire European continent into another terrible war, and that such a war, if it comes, will eventually spread to the far corners of the earth, there is little room for hope that any definite agreements of importance will be reached during the naval conference which opens in London December 2.

Certainly of reductions in naval armaments and great powers will find favor. Nevertheless, all things remain exactly as they are. Rather the chief hope at the meeting will be to put some sort of limitation upon the naval building which is certain to begin with the expiration of the present London treaty at the end of 1936. If the delegates can succeed in preventing a free-for-all naval race which ultimately might lead to disaster, the conference will not have been in vain.

The December conference is in reality a preliminary to conferences in May or June of next year. Delegates will now attempt to clarify the desires and intentions of the several major powers; in the spring they will return to London to see what actual technical agreements can be arrived at, using the revelations of the December meeting as a foundation.

It has been generally predicted that the outcome of these meetings will be additions totaling 1,000,000 tons to the navies of the great powers. Whether each power will be able to build her desired share of the additions without serious protest from the others remains to be seen.

Would Ban Battleships.

Great Britain, it is safe to predict, will renew her efforts to sell the other powers on the idea of abolishing the battleship in all navies. She has indicated that she would like to augment her present naval tonnage by the addition of 20 new cruisers. If the battleship must remain at the insistence of other nations, Britain will certainly start construction of at least one, to replace obsolete ships.

The United States will, without much argument, seek to uphold the present policy of naval parity with Great Britain, as granted by the Washington naval treaty of 1922. She will, however, differ with Britain on the types of ships to be built, since the battleship, or capital ship, is a real necessity to an efficient American navy.

Japan, having already broken the reins of the 5-5-3 ratio, will reiterate more forcibly her demands for parity with Britain and America. Such parity will be in all likelihood theoretical, for Japan is little likely to be in a position to do enough building to reach that level if the two English-speaking nations are going to make sizeable additions to their naval strengths.

Germany has won an agreement with Great Britain which will allow her to build a fleet equal to 30 per cent of the British strength. France will at least insist upon matching ship for ship with Germany. What Italy will do is highly problematical at the time, although it may be said she will keep right on increasing the size of her navy; to what extent is the real problem.

Submarines would be abandoned if Britain had her way, and it is a safe bet that John Bull will make the automatic suggestion to outlaw them in the preliminary conference, with absolutely no hope of success. At least that will clarify the situa-

From this it will be seen that if the naval conferences do not succeed in abolishing the battleship, Father Time will, unless the powers begin building new ones soon. Battleships cost about $40,000,000 apiece, so it is hardly reasonable that new ones will be constructed with anything like reckless abandon.

No ship larger than 35,000 tons can clear the locks in the Panama agreements are not worth bothering about anyway, because it seems unthinkable that the two fleets should ever be directed against each other. "Let America go right ahead and build ships of any size she likes," say the sponsors of this plan, "and let Britain build whatever size she deems advisable."

However, is it really certain that these two great navies would never be used against each other? Here ian exports? Suppose ships carrying our goods are refused entry into Italy by blockade: would our fleet step in and attempt to break the blockade? In such a case our navy might well be operating against Britain.

Some sort of definite agreement between the United States and Britain might be effective in the Far East, where the two countries have analogous interests. If the two navies would agree to build two tons for every one Japan builds over the 5-5-3 ratio, Japan would be discouraged from her parity ambitions, it has been pointed out.

Meanwhile, there is quite a movement afoot here at home to clear up our own naval policy. The growth of our navy has been spasmodic and without a clearly defined objective for many years.

The start of the World war caught our navy quite unprepared. We were forced to build a fleet of very great size in a big hurry; naturally, the cost was much more than it should have been. In the early years following the war the navy was allowed to decline to a great extent. This was only following the traditions created by our government in the years immediately following other wars.

Our Spasmodic Building.

The Washington treaty was signed in 1922. In the eight years after that we laid down only 21 men-o'-war, and these were the result of periodic bursts of enthusiastic building, rather than of a carefully scheduled plan. During that same period, much of our war-time fleet became obsolete, but we did not make replacements. We were rapidly falling well back into third place in naval strength, for during the years between 1922 and 1930 Great Britain built 86 ships and Japan built 125.

The policy of Anglo-American parity was extended in 1930 at London, but for us the parity was purely theoretical, for we did not actually build up to it at all.

Now since the advent of the Roosevelt administration, the Vinson-Trammell bill has definitely approved naval construction up to the parity principle, authorizing the building of planes and ships to make parity a fact.

The Standley Plan.

Besides this, the alert and able Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations of the United States, has outlined and actually begun to put into practice a plan which gives the nation a more definite naval policy than it has ever had before. The Standley plan is only the beginning, for to be successful it must have the continued support of congress for many years to come.

The plan is simple enough. It involves a consistent, orderly, and clearly-scheduled program of annual replacements of all obsolete ships. It will promote what the admiral calls a "business man's navy." The plan would be projected into the future, and would allow for the completion of 12 or 13 ships every year to take the places of the same number which will each year become over age. The cost would be a regular item in the annual naval appropriation bill. The Vinson-Trammell bill would give us parity with Britain by 1942; the Standley plan would prevent our navy from falling behind again after this burst of construction.

tion with respect to underwater craft in the subsequent discussions.

There is also no doubt that America will be successful in upholding the international legality of the capital ship. The question will resolve itself into an effort to limit the tonnage of these vessels, rather than to abolish them altogether. The United States was successful in defeating the British proposal to limit capital ships to 25,000 tons at the London conference of 1930.

Battleships Live 20 Years.

The generally accepted naval theory is that battleships have outlived their usefulness after they have become more than twenty years of age. There have been no battleships completed during the last ten years, and by far the greater part of the world's battleships have already passed the twenty-year mark.

By agreement, the United States and Great Britain may not lay down another battleship until 1937. It takes three or four years to build one of the giant "floating fortresses." By the year 1941 there would be only two British battleships less than twenty years old—the Rodney and the Nelson. The United States will have the Colorado and the West Virginia still of useful age. Japan will have none and France will have none. Italy is building two 35,000-ton battleships now, and they alone in Europe's navy will be less than twenty years old.

canal, so it is safe to predict that the United States will not plan any new battleships of more than that limit. Nor is it probable that Uncle Sam will ever agree to the limit of 27,000 tons, which it is reported, Great Britain will propose.

35,000 Tons Our Limit.

Britain feels that it would be more to her advantage to distribute her tonnage limit in a larger number of smaller ships. With her widely scattered colonies, covering the earth (You know: "The sun never sets on the British flag"), she has ample fuel stations to feed her ships on long cruises. America has no comparable system of supply depots, and therefore finds it essential to have ships with larger fuel capacity, which can go a long, long way from home without having to worry about the problem of refueling.

Growing more and more every day in Great Britain is the feeling that Anglo-American battleship is a case in point:

The League of Nations is even now trying to take some of Mussolini's steam out of him by the application of sanctions until he decides it is time to halt his invasion of Ethiopia. It is not beyond the realm of possibility that these sanctions will have to be enforced through the use of a naval blockade. Prime Minister Baldwin has openly reminded his country of such a possibility. He has also said that Great Britain would have no part of any such blockade without knowing exactly how the United States stands with respect to it. The league itself has been apprehensive on that point and has asked the United States to define its position, without having obtained a clear answer, as this is being written.

How Navies Might Meet.

If member nations of the league refuse to sell goods to Italy, will the United States increase its Ital-

Various State and City Elections Give Cheer to Both Parties—Greece Votes for Restoration of King George II.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REPUBLICANS shouted loudly that the victory of their party in the New York state election was a terrific blow to the New Deal and a repudiation of President Roosevelt. The Democrats declared it was no such thing. James A. Farley, who is both national and state chairman of the Democrats, gave them their cue when he declared recapture of control of the legislature by the G. O. P. was "normal" and that the Democratic vote for assembly candidates taken as a whole exceeded the Republican vote by more than half a million, which was something of an exaggeration.

The Republicans gained nine additional seats in the assembly, giving them 82 to 68 held by the Democrats. Only two senate seats were involved in the contest, both to fill vacancies. One of them went to a Republican and the other to a Democrat, leaving the setup of the upper legislative body unchanged.

In 45 cities of the state, the Republicans elected 33 mayors, including Roland B. Marvin of Syracuse, possible nominee for governor next year. The President saw Hyde Park go Republican and Farley failed to hold his own district in Rockland county.

The Democratic organization in New York came through strongly and menaces the prospect of a reelection for Mayor LaGuardia, observers hold. The Fusion forces, which turned Tammany out two years ago, crumbled.

In Philadelphia S. Davis Wilson, Republican, was elected mayor but the vote was close enough for the Democrats to call it a virtual victory for the New Deal. Cleveland, Columbus and 23 out of 42 other cities and towns in Ohio chose Republican mayors, and so did a number of municipalities in Massachusetts. Socialists of Bridgeport, Conn., re-elected Jasper McLevy mayor, and Democratic mayors were returned in Hartford and New Haven. Republicans gained control of the New Jersey legislature, but Hudson county, including Jersey City, went Democratic by a record vote.

Results in the spectacular election in Kentucky gave the New Dealers a real reason for rejoicing, for A. B. Chandler, known as "Happy," the Democratic candidate for governor who had the support of the national administration, handily defeated Judge King Swope, the Republican nominee. This despite the fact that Democratic Governor Lafoon had declared himself against Chandler and threw his support to Swope. The referendum on repeal of the state prohibition amendment gave the repealists a good majority.

In Virginia and Mississippi all the Democratic nominees were elected, which was to be expected.

"GROSSLY arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious," was the way Federal Judge William C. Coleman of Baltimore described the public utility holding act, and he held the law unconstitutional in its entirety. In a long decision, the judge declared that the act's "invalid provisions" were "so multifarious and so intimately and repeatedly interwoven throughout the act as to render them incapable of separation from such parts of the act, if any, as otherwise might be valid."

Judge Coleman instructed trustees for the American States Public Service company, plaintiffs in the litigation on the act, to treat the law as "invalid and of no effect."

The Securities and Exchange commission announced in Washington, however, that enforcement of the act will continue, despite the ruling.

THE League of Nations set November 18 as the day on which the economic sanctions against Italy should be put into effect, and later decided that coal, iron and oil should be included in the embargo. The league appointed Premier Laval of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, to carry on peace negotiations with Italy. Sir Samuel still insisted any peace must be within the framework of the League.

The Italian armies on the northern front pushed further into Ethiopia, following the tanks and with bombing planes active overhead, and one column entered the city of Haulzen on the way to Makale. The invaders met with no resistance of consequence. The government at Addis Ababa announced that Italian planes had killed 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows with bombs and machine gun fire at Gorabei. This place is the site of a military post in the south but all the men were at the front.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has accepted an invitation from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, to appear before that organization in Chicago on December 9 and deliver an address. Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Chicago at nine o'clock that morning, make his speech and start back to Washington three hours later.

The President's promised trip to Indiana to take part in the dedication of a memorial to George Rogers Clark at Vincennes has been postponed until June of next year, when he will also visit the Texas centennial exposition in Dallas.

MILWAUKEE, which had been terrorized for eight days by a succession of mysterious dynamite explosions, was relieved when the terrorist, Hugh Frank Rutkowski, was blown up by his own bomb as he was preparing for another outrage. Unfortunately a little girl was killed by the same blast. The bomber, described by the chief of police as "an extreme low type of individual with a warped, criminal mind," had at least one accomplice who may also have been blown to pieces by the explosion.

MEDALS were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission to 47 men and children of the United States and Canada, or to their relatives in 11 cases. Most of the awards are for rescues of persons from drowning.

Two silver medals were awarded and 45 bronze. The silver ones went to James C. Martin, fifty-one-year-old Joplin (Mo.) laborer and Christine Stewart, thirty-five, of Brookline, Mass. Martin went into a sewage pit trying to save a fellow worker. Both drowned. Miss Stewart leaped into the sea near Bar Harbor, Me., in an attempt to save Emily McDougall, thirty-one. Rescuers pulled them out 40 minutes later. Miss McDougall died. Cash awards totaling $7,000 for educational purposes accompanied the medals in 14 cases, the commission announced. In 22 other cases, a total of $17,250 was granted for purchase of homes or "other worthy purposes."

BILLY SUNDAY, the spectacular evangelist whose fiery eloquence led many thousands to "hit the sawdust trail" to the altar and seek salvation, died of heart disease at the home of his brother-in-law in Chicago. His wife, known all over the land as "Ma," was with him at the end and said Billy died as he had always wished, suddenly. Mr. Sunday, who was almost seventy-three years of age, was a professional ball player in his youth. He was converted in 1886 and in 1903 was ordained a Presbyterian minister.

One of America's leading scientists, Henry Fairfield Osborn, died in New York at the age of seventy-three years. He was eminent in many branches of science and was sometimes called "the successor to Darwin and Huxley." For years he was the president of the American Museum of Natural History.

SOVIET Russia celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with a tremendous display of its armed strength in Moscow. Infantry, cavalry, tanks and all the other army services marched for hours past the tomb of Lenin, where stood Joseph H. Stalin and other leaders to review the long parade.

Voroshiloff, commissar for war and navy, declared in the order of the day that the Soviet army was ready to protect the frontiers of "our sacred land" at any moment. He warned the world that danger of a new general war hung over mankind.

The executive committee of the Communist Internationale published an appeal to workers of all countries to join hands to force an end to Italy's war in Ethiopia, protect the Chinese people from invasion, ward off danger of war in Europe and bring about a downfall of Fascism.

WHILE the invading Italians were pushing further and further into his realm, Emperor Haile Selassie I of Ethiopia celebrated the fifth anniversary of his coronation, and he did it in fine style, too. Escorted by a throng of feudal chiefs in barbaric attire, the king of kings and his queen passed through the streets of Addis Ababa amid wildly cheering thousands, and gave thanks to God in St. George's cathedral. Afterward, seated on his ivory and teakwood throne in the palace, he received the felicitations of the chieftains and the diplomatic corps.

The emperor holds that the big oil concession negotiated for American interests by F. M. Rickett, the English promoter, still holds good although the Americans relinquished it at the suggestion of Secretary Hull. "This concession," said Haile, "is an integral part of our national economic program. We purposely granted it to a neutral country like the United States in order to avoid political complications and international jealousies. It is unfortunate that war must delay its fulfillment. Through the benefits accruing to this concession we hope to raise the social level of people and provide them with honorable remunerative employment.

"I am sure that when our country is again at peace, and the circumstances are propitious, all the terms of the enterprise will be carried out by the original concessionaires, who never canceled the concession, but merely withdrew temporarily at the suggestion of the State department for the worthy motive of promoting international peace."

AFTER a conference with agricultural specialists and representatives of farmers, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced that a two year program for corn and hog producers had been determined upon, the main features of which are:

1. Prevention of an excessive production of corn in 1936 and 1937.
2. Allowance of an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as it is estimated would take place were no adjustment program in effect.
3. Prevention of an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

Maximum and minimum hog production requirements will be imposed under the new contract particularly to prevent regional dislocations in production next year, according to AAA officials who said such "dislocations" would be certain to develop because of maladjustments in feed supplies and hog numbers brought about by the 1934 drouth. The maximum and minimum requirements have not been determined.

The new contract will require that an area at least equal to the number of acres withdrawn from production of corn be added to the usual area of the farm devoted to soil-improving and erosion-preventing uses. This requirement was a part of the 1934 corn-hog contract, but was relaxed when the drouth came.

ADMINISTRATOR HARRY L. HOPKINS issued an order barring from work relief jobs all persons not on the dole as of November 1. He said, however, that despite this order 10 per cent non-relief labor could be employed on any project, and more in specific cases. The $330,000,000 public works non-federal program and the $100,000,000 low cost housing program have been exempted entirely from the relief labor requirement because of a shortage of skilled construction workmen on relief.

MACKENZIE KING, the new prime minister of Canada, was in Washington negotiating with President Roosevelt a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and the Dominion. Completion of such a treaty was one of the planks of King's recent election platform.

Canada buys more from the United States than any other country, and America, in turn, is Canada's best customer. Last year America exported goods worth $302,000,000 to Canada and imported goods worth $231,000,000. These totals compare with 1929 totals of $948,000,000 and $503,000,000 respectively.

WHEN the nations get together in London in December for the next naval conference it is not likely they will be able to agree on much in the way of limitation of naval armament. But there is a good prospect that Italy will there demand the neutralization of the straits of Gibraltar, which would be extremely distasteful and perhaps embarrassing to Great Britain. Diplomats are certain the British would refuse to make the concession. They say Mussolini's purpose is to force Britain to declare her intentions in the Mediterranean, where a large part of her war fleet is massed at the present time.

It was reported in Paris that the Duce would ask that the straits be put in the same status as the Suez canal, and would offer to scrap two 35,000 ton battleships now under construction as an evidence of his good faith. Britain hopes France will support her attitude concerning this demand and in return may agree to take a larger percentage of exports from French Morocco to strengthen France's position in that colony.

GEORGE of Greece is once more king. The plebiscite resulted in his recall by a huge majority, and before long the monarch will be back on the throne he abdicated 12 years ago. The vote in favor of the restoration was almost unanimous, even in Crete, the birthplace of the republican leader Venizelos, who is now in exile and under sentence of death.

King George II

As the results of the balloting came in, Premier George Kondylis appeared on the balcony of a government building and announced: "As of tomorrow, King George II will be king of the Hellenes. There will be no political parties. They have been broken up by the people themselves and a new epoch of reconstruction will start.

"It's more glorious than I'd imagined. The expression of popular will to favor restoration was foreseen, but results exceeded all expectations."

The cabinet met to swear a new oath of allegiance to the exiled monarch. All armed forces were called to take a similar oath.

A delegation sailed aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return. Officials said they expected King George, who was in London, to come back within two weeks.

CHINA has suddenly abandoned the metallic silver currency standard, adopted a managed paper currency and otherwise reformed its monetary system. The four-point program was announced in Shanghai by Finance Minister H. H. Kung just after Vice President Garner and his party of congressmen had left the city for Manila.

The American party was entertained by high Chinese officials, including Kung. But, despite much flattery of the hands across the sea character, no hint was given of China's contemplated action. However, all English language newspapers in Shanghai carried long interviews with Senator William H. King of Utah and Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, both of whom practically told China that it "was not any of her business what America did about silver," and predicted the continuance of United States purchases until the price of silver has reached $1.29 an ounce.

The new Chinese program provides for: 1. Nationalization of silver. 2. Restriction of bank note issues to three government owned banks. 3. Stabilization of the Chinese dollar at the present level. 4. Legalization of bank notes for payment of all debts which provide for payment in silver.

BELIEF of the Chinese police that the attempt to assassinate Premier Wang Ching-wei was part of a communist plot was denied by the foreign office at Nanking.

The theory was widely held, however, that the gunman, Sun Fengmin, who died of bullet wounds inflicted by the premier's bodyguard, acted because of his anti-Japanese feelings. The premier whose condition was announced as "satisfactory," was considered friendly toward Japan.

At Peiping, the political council ordered its subordinate agencies in North China to put down any group which endangers friendly Sino-Japanese relations. The council is controlled by generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, military leader of the Nationalist government.

MEN AND AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON

★ National Topics Interpreted by ★ WILLIAM BRUCKART ★

Washington.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.

Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formation of budget estimates for submission to congress.

Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year 'round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems, not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other, even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and is not overlooking because those things are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.

It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation the major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrift Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.

Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 20 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts.

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League, which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The league insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the spending which Mr. Roosevelt calls extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the league, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present unsound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of has at its command all the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal pay roll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of seats.

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court of the United States, are considering questions revolving around President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws which would

U. S. to Speed Up Hunt for Redfern

Missing Aviator Reported Alive in Jungles.

Washington.—A dramatic State department report just made public has added color to the belief that Paul Redfern, American aviator missing for eight years, is alive in the jungles of Dutch Guiana.

Plans for an expedition of crack army fliers to hunt for Redfern were at once speeded up.

The report was the first-hand story of a Roman Catholic teacher of Dutch Guiana, who, from the lips of a jungle Indian, heard the story of Redfern's crash and how he was pulled from the wreck of his plane.

It corroborated the story told by William La Varre, noted explorer, who during a recent trip into Guiana learned of the "white man who fell from the skies."

La Varre has turned his data over to Maj. Willis Taylor, ace army explorer stationed in the Panama Canal zone, who will be in charge of the rescue expedition.

James S. Lawton, American consular agent at Paramaribo, Dutch

Redfern disappeared eight years ago while attempting a flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio Janeiro. His wife never has given up hope of his rescue.

La Varre penetrated within 75 miles of the village by canoe, then was forced to turn back.

At one point, as he worked his way up the Suriname river system with a party of fierce Djukas, he heard mysterious whisperings of a "white man" who ruled a Djuka village called Dahomey. La Varre explained:

"He proved to be an Albino native, with platinum hair and blue eyes. The Djukas almost worship him."

Intelligence of Dogs Overrated, Says Artist

New York.—Diana Thorne, who has drawn more than 5,000 dogs since she became a famous portray-er of these animals for magazine covers, says most dogs are not as clever as they are given credit for being. At least a good many of her models have been pretty dumb. Beautiful, but dumb, she insists.

Pat, for instance, Pat had so much, "it" that people stopped to look at him in the street, but he liked all the wrong people, had a perfect passion for tramps and bums, suspected the milkman, barked at the gas inspector and chewed holes in the postman's trousers.

One day when he had been left to keep an eye on things, Miss Thorne came home to find that her studio had been broken into and thoroughly robbed.

Pat, looking thoroughly pleased with himself, was guarding a pile of articles that the burglar had left behind as not important enough to take. When the robber was caught, he related that Pat had followed him about from room to room, sniffing delightedly and begging to be petted.

Indian Learns to Write at 51 in a CCC School

Assonet, Mass.—At fifty-one, Joe Starr, full-blooded Blackfoot Indian and member of the CCC camp here, has achieved a lifelong ambition.

After months of study under Camp Instructor Abial S. Hammond, Joe has learned to read and write. His first letter was to Maj. Gen. Fox Conner, commander of the First Corps area, and read as follows:

"Dear General:
"I thank you for the chance to write English. I am a Blackfoot Indian and the CCC teach me much. Sincerely, Joe Starr."

Joe was born in Butte, Mont. When nineteen he went to sea on a square rigger bound for Singapore. From there he wandered all over the world.

Wearing of the sea, Joe turned to road building and lumbering. He arrived in Boston without home or food and found a haven in the CCC.

This Factory Makes Beggars "Invalids"

Madrid.—A factory for making beggars "invalids" has been discovered here by a Spanish journalist who lived for a month on the streets of Madrid, as a beggar. An apparently one-armed beggar introduced him to this factory of synthetic injuries, which is run by a man who was formerly a sculptor, but now makes a comfortable living by fitting healthy beggars with infirmities. His work consists largely of creating the appearance of one arm, or one leg, but he can also give his clients "blindness."

"Doll Library" in the City of Brotherly Love

In Philadelphia is to be found the only "doll library" in the world, and it is patronized by about 200 poor children. The dolls are lent to them for a week and then may be exchanged for others if they have kept them clean and unbroken. The photograph shows Paul D. Shriver, originator of the library, with some of the little ones waiting for dolls.

thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompaniment of forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well that the administration has much argument on its side, and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians, but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

Note Delayed 16 Years Patches Up Friendship

Hastings, Neb.—A note of congratulation to Will Langdon, of Hastings, from his friend, Willie Winkler, of Friend, arriving just 15 years later, has restored the men to their old basis of friendship.

Langdon, who for 16 years, had felt his friend had let him down in failing to answer a birth announcement, was unable to find what delayed the letter Young James Langdon, sixteen years old, was working in the harvest fields when his father received the note dated April 10, 1919, and beginning: "I congratulate you on that boy."

Spiders Rout Prairie Dogs
Lewiston, Mont.—Black widow spiders won a complete victory here. A prairie dog town, last spring a busy sector, has been evacuated, according to reports. Across the entrance to the town are woven the stout black widow spider webs.

Guiana, reported he interviewed the Creole teacher, M. A. Melcherts, stationed at Drie Tabbetjes on the Tapanahoi river.

Last April the Creole said an Indian named Kapan came to him from Sapakunu, suffering with yaws, a tropical disease. The report quotes the Creole:

"He told me there was a white man on the Paloemeu river in the village of the pialman; that he, Kapan, had seen him and that he was crippled so that he could not walk; that he had come out of the sky and he had seen his machine, which was wrecked on a savannah and not a mountain.

"Also that one Sapakunu, chief of the village where he lived and after whom the village was named, helped the white man from the machine when he crashed."

The report added that the Creole teacher was very intelligent and his honesty was vouched for by mission priests.

Only approval of the department commander is needed for Major Taylor to attempt the rescue.

La Varre declares there is strong evidence that Redfern, reported to be a hopeless cripple, is still in the Indian village, about 200 miles airline from Paramaribo.

The State department report said there are areas where a plane might land.

SYNOPSIS

Anna ("Silver") Grenoble, daughter of "Gentleman Jim," formerly of the community, but known as a gambler, news of whose recent murder in Chicago has reached the town, comes to Heron River to live with Sophronia Willard, Jim Grenoble's sister. Sophronia's household consists of her husband, and stepsons, Roderick and Jason. The Willards own only half of the farm, the other half being Anna's. On Silver's arrival Duke Melbank, shiftless youth, makes himself obnoxious. Roderick is on the eve of marriage to Corinne Meader. Silver says she wants to live on the farm, and has no intention of selling her half, which the Willards had feared. Silver tells Sophronia ("Phronie," by request) something—but by no means all—of her relations with Gerald Lucas, gambler friend of her father. Roddy marries Corinne. She has a maid, Paula, who seems to attract Jason. Silver again meets Lucas, who has established a gambling resort near town. She introduces him to Corinne, though against her will. Friendship between the two develops, to Silver's dismay. At a dance Duke Melbank insults Silver. Roddy's solicitude brings Silver to the realization that she loves him. Roddy is offered a position at the University farm, but, to Corinne's dismay, he declines it, declaring he is a farmer, not a "white collar man." Determined to break up the growing intimacy between Lucas and Corinne, Silver tells Roddy she has decided to sell her portion of the farm. Not understanding, he reproaches her for her "treachery."

Jason went self-consciously to a shelf and drew down a portfolio of drawings. "Nobody but Paula has ever seen these," he said.

The drawings were pastel scenes with a simplicity of line and tone that surprised Silver. "Why, Jase, they are lovely!" she exclaimed. She turned to him impulsively. "Would you rather do this than farm?"

He laughed and shook his head, then looked at Paula. "I guess not," he said quietly. "I'm a farmer. But it's because I like farming that I get a kick out of doing this once in a while. Which one do you want, Silver?"

After a moment's thought Silver selected a light autumn sketch in grays and browns.

"Has Roddy never seen this?" she asked.

"No—he hasn't seen any of them. I used to show him some of my things—and he liked them. But after he met Corinne—well, it's none of my business. I never could quite figure it out, myself. D—n it—I feel sorry for Roddy!"

Silver tucked the drawing under her arm. "I'll hang this in my room," she said, then started toward the door. "And don't worry about Roddy. When a man falls in love, it does funny things to him sometimes."

Jason laughed. "Gosh, doesn't it?" he exclaimed, and looked at Paula. "Shall I tell Silver?" he asked suddenly.

"Sure!" she said at once.

Jason looked at Silver and smiled. "Paula and I are going to be married in the summer," Jason confessed, "—maybe in the spring. We're thinking of a little dairy farm up north—maybe—we're not sure yet."

Silver exclaimed with delight. "Am I the first to hear about it?"

"We didn't know ourselves—not until this afternoon," Jason grinned.

Tears came into Silver's eyes as she looked at them. Jason and Paula—beginning life together on a dairy farm . . .

"Don't say anything," Jason said. "Don't tell the others just yet."

"Well, I suppose I ought to wish you luck," Silver said, "but when two people are in love, there's nothing much anyone can say. Isn't that so, Paula?"

"It sure is so," Paula agreed, lapsing into an accent she had almost conquered since her advent from the Rhineland ten years ago.

The days passed, and Silver Grenoble came presently to know what it meant to live on a farm in winter. But the weekly round of hard work fell into a rhythm which somehow eased the discomfort, and in the old stone house there was always an overtone of contentment.

In Roddy alone, it seemed, was there any discontent. He had explained that Mrs. Meader had not been well and that Corinne was staying with her for a few days. But when the middle of December approached and Corinne was still with her mother, Sophronia became rather voluble on the subject of Roddy's living alone in the big house. For Roddy had withdrawn more and more to himself. His days he spent in work about the place. And at night he would shut himself in his "shop" sorting and grading and completing his records, so as to be ready for another season of experimenting with his beloved corn.

Roddy's mood was rarely discussed by the others, but Silver knew that beneath their silence lay an intensity of feeling that one day must break the bonds of reticence that held it. She knew, too, that while Corinne's absence had something to do with the way Roddy felt, behind it all was the growing resentment toward herself that had begun that night when she had told him of her intention to sell her land as soon as his lease had expired. That had rankled until he could think of nothing else.

It was a black, blustery night, and Silver put on her old leather jacket and her close-fitting tweed hat. She went out into the inky darkness and started toward the summit of the hill, when a sudden flare of light, like the striking of a match, arrested her attention through the small window of Roddy's workshop in the shelter of the slope.

Roddy must be in there, she thought, getting ready for another night's work. The thought of his self-imposed loneliness smote drearily across Silver's heart. Why should she not go to him now and talk to him—beg him not to remain away from his father's house because of her?

She stepped to the threshold and paused.

"Roddy!" she called softly.

He scooped up handfuls of corn.

"Well?"

"I came over to beg you not to—not to stay away from our house because of me," Silver said. "If that's the reason—"

He stood up and looked at her. At the painful flush that sprang into her cheeks, he stepped toward her with contrite haste. His feelings were in such confusion now that he could scarcely speak.

"I'm sorry, Silver," he said heavily. "It's certainly no time for me to hold out against you—after this. We don't seem to understand each other, that's all."

Silver turned her eyes from him. "I can't go on like this," she said. "It has been utter misery."

"I can't say I've been enjoying it myself." He looked down at her and saw that she was shivering.

"But listen—you'd better get back into the house," he remarked gruffly. He reached down and drew her to her feet, then took her hand in the most acute embarrassment he had ever known. "Let's forget it, Silver."

For a moment she permitted her hand to rest in his, then withdrew it hurriedly. Without a word she ran to the door and vanished in the darkness toward the stone house.

Later, when Roddy thoughtfully returned home, the strong wind beating up the slope against him seemed fantastically like that sudden impact of Silver's cold, slender body.

"Good Lord!" he muttered, and ran his hand across his eyes. "I must be crazy."

But as he lay in bed thinking over the events of the night, it was the memory of Silver Grenoble's clinging to him that gnawed and worried at the core of his being until at last as he stared up toward the invisible ceiling, his whole life seemed to be tangled in a hopeless maze.

He vowed savagely that tomorrow he would do two things—he would write a letter to Neal Anthony definitely rejecting his offer, and in the evening he would drive to Ballantyne and fetch Corinne home.

Beneath the cobalt glitter of the sky Roddy found himself driving along at a snail's pace, although he had forty miles yet to go—and fifty miles back home again, with Corinne beside him.

Corinne had deliberately prolonged her visit with her mother, as Roddy knew, in the hope that he might finally accept Neal Anthony's offer, if only to please her. She had been affection itself, indeed, and always spoke regretfully of her prolonged absence. But Roddy had had time to do a little thinking about Corinne. She was young and spoiled and wholly untrained in responsibility. But she would grow up in time, Roddy reflected, and the passing months would bring to her a sense of her place in the scheme of things.

But there would have to be a change. For one thing, Corinne must be brought to realize that they would have to economize at every turn during the coming year.

It was two o'clock in the morning when Roddy returned to the farm with Corinne. She had broached the subject of Neal Anthony. When he told her of the letter he had written that day, Corinne had lapsed into a silence more deadly than any virulent denunciation he might have anticipated.

In the house she sank down on the couch in the living room and gazed blankly before her.

Roddy came over to her. He drew a chair, seated himself, and took her hands into his own.

"Look at me, Corrie!" he begged softly. "Let's not begin like this. You don't know what it means to have you home again. And you can't guess how lonely it has been here without you."

"Listen, Corrie. I'm sorry about that job Neal Anthony threw my way. I wish I could have taken it—for your sake, Corrie. But—I couldn't. And some day you're going to be glad I didn't."

Corinne sighed again. "I'd rather not discuss it any more," she said coldly. "You've made your decision."

She drew her hands away from him and Roddy sat back in his chair. For a moment he regarded her thoughtfully. During the past few days a hope had formed in his mind that he must express to her—a profound and solemn hope on which, he believed, depended the serenity of their lives together.

"All right, Corrie," he said at last. "We'll drop it—and start in again. But let us start in right this time. Let us face the problems together and work them out together. I want a home—a home with you, Corrie, where we can bring up our children and be happy together. I've been thinking about that very thing while you've been away. If we had a baby, you'd find something to live for here. We'd be closer to each other, Corrie—"

She sprang up suddenly. "Have you gone crazy?" she cried nuskily. "Do you want me to bring a child into a place like this—where we may be starving next year? Or wasn't it enough for you to throw Anthony's offer into my face? You had to think up something more brutal—"

"Corrine—for God's sake!" Roddy stammered in despair. "We are not going to starve," he went on lamely, obstinately. "Lots of people are bringing up children on less than we have."

It dawned on him painfully that Corinne was not listening. He felt completely lost, floundering about in a gray and chilling chaos.

"All right, Corinne," he concluded dully. "I did not know that I was insulting you. I'll not do it again."

He got to his feet and turned to find her eyes upon him, widening for a moment with reflective indolence, then closing as though she were shutting him out of her consciousness, shutting herself in with her own resignation and defeat.

On an evening in February, Paula had come down from the big house and sat beside the table munching an apple.

Sophonra pushed her glasses back into place on the bridge of her nose and shook her head.

"There's no use in gettin' yourself worked up into a state over Corinne," she said to Paula. "If you ask me—all that woman needs is exercise. If she'd do a bit of her own housework, it'd be better for her."

"I think I'll go up and stay with Corinne for a while," Silver said. "That's better," old Roderick said. "It's the first time anybody here has been in Roddy's house in almost a week."

Corinne was huddled up in bed weeping stormily.

"Corinne!" Silver said sharply. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself!"

Corinne stared at her with wild eyes. "Who sent you here?" she demanded petulantly. "I suppose the whole Willard family has been having a conclave!"

"Stop it!" Silver broke in. "No one sent me—and you're acting like a child."

Corinne began to weep in earnest. "I—I might have known—you'd say that. This place is driving me mad! The wind—and the cold—and being alone—"

"You don't have to be alone," Silver protested. "Why didn't you come down with Paula tonight and—"

"Because they all hate me! I know it. They hate me because I'm not a farm lout—like the rest of them. Roddy hates me—and loves to see me suffer! He's tickled to death because Jason has humiliated me. Paula for a sister-in-law—oh!"

Silver took her by the shoulder.

"I'm not going to sit here and listen to that nonsense," she said severely. "You've got to get yourself out of this mood. Turn over here! Is your head aching?"

"It has been bursting—all day!"

Silver ran her fingers gently over Corinne's shoulders. "I used to do this for my father when he had a headache," she said quietly, and began pressing her finger tips into the tendons and muscles that were knotted at the back of Corinne's neck.

"That's better," Silver said.

"O—oh—that hurts!"

Silver worked more gently. "You ought to get out and see what the world is like around you. I'll tell you—take a walk with me early tomorrow morning, over to the Flathe place and back. You have no idea how good it makes you feel."

A sort of docility had crept over Corinne. "I'll do anything," she mumbled, "just to get away from the grayness of this hill."

For some time there was silence between them, until Silver began to wonder if Corinne had fallen asleep. Presently, however, Corinne spoke up unexpectedly.

"Why didn't you marry Gerald Lucas, Silver, when you had the chance?"

"I should have been the most unhappy creature in the world," Silver replied.

"Why?"

"Because—I've seen enough of that life to know," Silver said.

Corinne lay still and did not speak. Fear filled Silver's heart as she fixed her eyes upon Corinne and wondered, with something like despair, what was passing in the mind of this girl who was Roddy Willard's wife. Once or twice she felt that she must say something to warn her against Gerald Lucas and the bright disaster that awaited any woman who gave him her love. But the words would not come. At last, with an inner trembling, she got up and spoke softly.

"I hope you feel better."

Corinne turned over and yawned. "Lots better. Thanks so much, Silver."

Silver patted the coverlet on Corinne's shoulder. "Try to sleep now. And I'll come up in the morning, right after breakfast, to take you on our hike."

"Perhaps it would be better to postpone it till the afternoon—or maybe another day," Corinne suggested. "I'm expecting a telephone call tomorrow."

Silver regarded her for a moment in silence. "Well, go to sleep now, anyhow," she said, and stole quietly out of the room.

Alone again under the cold starlight, Silver found that her ministering to Roddy's wife had had a profound effect upon herself. All that lawless feeling for Roddy that had battled within her for weeks retreated now before a burning pity for Corinne and a feverish resolve to do everything in her power to save Roddy's wife from herself and her false sense of values.

CHAPTER IX

IN MARCH, after a prolonged spell of bitter cold and very little snow, a sudden thaw set in. The back of the winter, as Sophronia said, was broken.

But everywhere the talk was of the gloomy outlook for the farmer. "A man doesn't know whether to pray for rain or drouth. If there's a bumper crop, prices will go still lower—and if you don't plant at all, you get nothing."

Roddy reflected. What if he had to sell his last year's grain at practically no profit to himself! He was no worse off than countless farmers whose obligations were staggering compared with his own.

For that matter, things were better. Corinne had been more like her old self during the past weeks. He was well aware that Silver Grenoble had had much to do with the change in Corinne's state of mind. He had seen very little of Silver, but she and Corinne had become very friendly.

How to Vary Meat Dishes

Few Hints for Housewife Who Must Consider Time Involved.

The question of variation of the meat dish always puzzles the busy housewife who must choose her meals in reference to the time involved in the preparation. She naturally depends on steaks and chops and ham, all of which can be broiled or panbroiled in a short time. These are among the more expensive meats and for this reason she varies them with the well-known hamburger steak, which may be very good or very poor, depending upon the way it is seasoned and cooked. Nothing is more unappetizing than dry, poorly seasoned cakes of steaks. However, there are many ways in which it may be prepared so that the family will enjoy it rather than eat it with resignation.

I wonder if you have ever prepared meat balls in the Swedish fashion, which is not only unusually good but which is also very economical. Another recipe in which I like to use chopped meat is known as baked hamburger. The meat is well seasoned with onion, a bit of catsup if you like, as well as the usual salt and pepper. It is made into large flat cakes, and, as the old-fashioned recipe says, "made white with salt, yellow with mustard and black with pepper." A few onions may be sliced on the top before it is put in a hot oven and baked for 15 or 20 minutes.

Quick Meal.

- Swedish meat balls
- Boiled potatoes
- Peas in butter
- Watercress and tomato salad
- Crackers

Baked Hamburg Steak.

- 1 1/2 pounds hamburger
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- Pepper
- Dry mustard

Season hamburger with salt and pepper and form into a flat cake. Place into well-greased baking pan, making white with salt, yellow with mustard and black with pepper. Put in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit), and bake 15 to 20 minute until brown.

Swedish Meat Balls.

- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1 onion
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 egg
- 3/4 cup rich milk or cream
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper

Quick, Complete Pleasant ELIMINATION

Let's be frank. There's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste matters that cause acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts—your intestines must function.

To make them move quickly, pleasantly, completely, without griping. Thousands of physicians recommend Milnesia Wafers. (Dentists recommend Milnesia wafers as an efficient remedy for mouth acidity).

These mint flavored candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly in accordance with the directions on the bottle or tin, then swallowed, they correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source and at the same time enable quick, complete, pleasant elimination.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48 wafers, at 35c and 60c respectively, or in convenient tins containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately an adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores carry them. Start using these delicious, effective wafers today.

Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letter head.

MOVIES IN DARK AFRICA

The movies have penetrated far into the heart of West Africa, the natives having a passion for films of super-fervid melodrama, wild west exploits, murder, pillage and arson. Attempts have been made to infuse an element of moral uplift into their intellectual bill of fare and their conception of white humanity, but these efforts have met with a marked lack of appreciation.

I'M SOLD

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Stradivarius Regarded Greatest Violin Maker

That there has been no greater violin maker than Stradivarius, the well informed readily admit, says a writer in the Baltimore Sun. Starting as an apprentice to Amati, he began to work for himself in 1666, and gradually developed and improved on his master's style, until by about the year 1700 he had attained a perfection of workmanship, model and tone which sets a pattern for all time. He lived to a great age, was very industrious, and is known to have made more than a thousand instruments (including also some violas and violincellos) of which possibly half are still in existence.

Nevertheless, it is a mistake to think of him as anything unique or miraculous. He was exquisitely skillful with his tools, but so have been many others, including some alive and busy today. He had an uncanny judgment of the varying resonance qualities of the woods he used, but so has every really great violin maker.

By trial and error he wrought toward the production of an instrument which would have a richer and more powerful tone as well as being a thing of beauty to the eye, changing various details of his model no less than sixteen times in the course of his life, but others have done the same, even if in a less degree.

STAR DUST
MOVIE AND RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

SHED a few tears for Mickey Mouse; the poor little thing can't take out life insurance. He was turned down by the famous Lloyd's of London the other day—and Lloyd's will take a chance on anything or anybody. Walt Disney, who created Mickey, wanted to insure him for one million pounds (which comes so near being five million dollars that it isn't worth while to compute the difference), but Lloyd's came right back with the declaration that Mickey is immortal.

Disney.

A lot of theatrical producers in New York are going to be awful glad when Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone take a train, plane or bus for Hollywood. The newly-wed Tones have been disrupting performances just by being present. Mobs accompany them to the door. More mobs escort them into the theater. Everybody in the audience wants to take a look at them, or ask for autographs. On one occasion the show couldn't go on till the movie stars rose and took a bow. Some day maybe a movie star will be killed by the crush of enthusiastic fans—then he'll really know how much his public loves him.

Don't miss "Metropolitan" when it comes to your town. RKO has really brought opera to the screen in this one, with Lawrence Tibbett singing some of his favorite songs magnificently, after a four-year absence from the screen. It was shown at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, and celebrities turned out in droves for the first performance. Of course, most of them have the habit of going to the Music Hall regularly anyway, and as for visitors from out of town, it heads their lists of places they must see.

Something seems to have happened to the Hollywood girls. Miriam Hopkins startled everybody by asking to co-star with Merle Oberon, and then Irene Dunn came along and said she'd like to work with Ann Harding in "The Old Maid."

Leslie Howard and Helen Hayes won't have audiences in the studio when they broadcast, which seems like an excellent idea. It's exasperating to listen to a favorite program and realize that the people watching it are being highly amused and entertained by things that can't be enjoyed at a distance till television becomes more general.

If you want to land a place on one of the amateur programs, you'll be lucky if you're not a singer. Too many singers are appearing; Fred Allen has sent out a call for comedians. And if you're an impersonator you're practically sure of landing at the top when the votes roll in.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., now living in England, hopes his American friends won't misunderstand his staying there. He felt that he'd never get anywhere in Hollywood, and that his only chance was to produce his own pictures in England, where he could select his own stories. He says he couldn't do that in this country; it would cost too much. He's working now in his first one, "The Amateur Gentleman," with Elissa Landi as leading lady. And the whispers have it she's to be his next Mrs.

If you lived in Hollywood you'd have to make some changes in your address book right now. Marlene Dietrich has moved into Richard Barthelmess' house, and Bing Crosby, having sold his home to Al Jolson, has rented Marion Davies' Beverly Hills abode. Incidentally, Miss Dietrich has taken to nibbling tuberoses on the set—and people thought Lillian Gish was exotic, years ago, when she munched carrots right in court!

Dietrich.

Carol Lombard has long wanted to be a comedienne, and after Claudette Colbert's success in "It Happened One Night" she gave the studio no peace until she got a comedy role—"Hands Across the Table" gives it to her, and she hopes you'll like it.

Fredric March and his wife have just returned from that vacation in England; they took a motor trip, and finished reading "Anthony Adverse," which will be March's next picture.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Joan Bennett celebrated her arrival in New York by going to see her father in the stage play, "Winter set" . . . Sally O'Neill wants to stage a come-back in movies . . . Rosalind Russell may become a star as a result of her work in "Rendezvous," with William Powell . . . Jean Harlow's been having the flu . . . Katherine Hepburn may postpone her European vacation because of the war scare.

"ART OF BORING"
IN SEVEN VOLUMES;
WE DON'T NEED IT

"The Art of Boring" in seven volumes. Bertrand Russell promises to write it.

To whet our appetites he mentioned the scholarly bore, the funny bore, the story telling or reminiscing bore, etc., etc., etc.

We really don't need seven volumes to tell us how to bore people, nor even one. For all the bores you can possibly think of come easily under one head. If you want to emulate them you need do but one thing—talk about what interests you rather than stop to think what will interest the person you are talking to.

The woman who talks about her children does that.

The man who talks about himself does that. Sometimes its about his success, how he did this and so, sometimes its about how a stupid world kept him from being successful or happy.

The wise-cracking bore and the reminiscing bore and the superior, pedantic bore, they are all doing that—talking about what interests them only.

That's their way of enjoying people. Then don't they care, you may ask, about whether people enjoy them? Of course they care. There isn't the most unmitigated bore alive who if he could help it would enjoy himself at the cost of boring people. The point is they just don't stop to consider that side of it.

And come to think of it, the person who does not use others for an audience but who enjoys others by drawing them out, really gets so much more out of his contacts. If the others tried that way they would never go back to boring people.

Composite City

Stockholm has been described as a composite of Scottish lake scenery, of the Bay of Naples, and of the islands of the Aegean. It is built on peninsulas and islands, and hundreds of boats and small steamers ply its waterways, taking its residents to and from their island homes.

One Human Dies by Murder Every 42 Minutes in the United States

America's murders are on a 24-hour schedule. The minute hand of the nation's crime clock is a blade of death, slicing off another human life every 42 minutes, adding the figure 35 each day to our ever mounting homicide rate.

For despite G-men, radio scout cars and lie detectors, the quaint American custom of large scale killing has become deep rooted, especially in the South.

As against the 13 northern American cities having no deaths from homicide last year, 12 of the 13 with the highest homicide rate were south of the Mason-Dixon line. The one exception, East St. Louis, is northern only geographically, its people being predominantly southern.

Murder will out, statistically, each July as experts complete a survey over the preceding year's homicide records. The current report shows that approximately 35 people are killed each day by their fellow men.

It shows Lansing to be one of the 13 cities without homicide in 1934, and Grand Rapids to be one of the 10 cities with the lowest homicide records.

Center of all-around plain and fancy killing, however, is Macon, Ga., which received the all-American rating of 66.7 on a 1934 rating of 36 homicides among 54,150 people, or an average of three killings a month. Proportionately, nearly seven times as many persons in Macon are done to death by shooting, stabbing, choking or poisoning than the average for the country at large.

It's not much safer, in Memphis, either, where a rate of 56.5 per 100,000 leads Atlanta with 52.3; Birmingham with 50.2; Jacksonville, 49.6; Montgomery, 49.2; Nashville, 48.0; Petersburg, Va., 47.3; Augusta, Ga., 45.7; Lexington, Ky., 42.1; Savannah, 40.8; Mobile, 37.9; Little Rock, 37.0; East St. Louis, 33.5, and Charleston, 31.7.

But by way of outstanding contrast, consider Brockton, Cambridge, Gloucester, Haverhill, Holyoke and Quincy, Mass., as well as East Orange and Lakewood and Hoboken, N. J.; Newport, R. I.; Lincoln, Neb., and Lansing, which had no killings at all.

Statistics based on 169 representative cities show that Grand Rapids follows with the low rate of 0.6 on its homicides, tying Jersey City and preceding Providence with 0.8; New Bedford, 0.9; Somerville, 0.9; Lowell 1.0; Lynn, 1.0; Waterbury, 1.0; Altoona 1.1, and Berkeley, 1.1.

For the five largest American cities, Chicago retains its preeminence in homicides, producing a rate of 14.2 per 100,000 in 1933 and 13.3 in 1934.

Philadelphia follows with 1.8, Detroit with 1.8, Los Angeles with 1.4 and New York with 1.3.—Detroit Free Press.
