Hospital waives train crash victims' bills

Permian Basin Area Foundation grants $100,000 to Midland Memorial

Midland Memorial Hospital announced Friday that no one treated as a result of the Nov. 15 Show of Support parade float and train crash was billed for the care received.

As a result of the crash, four military veterans died and 14 people were injured. The hospital treated 17 people for both minor and significant injuries, said MMH President and CEO Russell Meyers.

"At the beginning, because there was a wide variety of folks and a difficult situation, we held bills until we could figure out the right thing to do," Meyers said, noting the medical bills for all patients totaled about $375,000. "I don't know when we decided not to charge them; it was some time pretty early on, but we just decided it was the right thing to do."

The amount the hospital charges each year varies greatly from the amount it actually collects, after a variety of discounts are applied, Meyers said. For example, this year the hospital is budgeted to charge about $600 million worth of services but expects to collect less than $200 million after "a massive amount of discounting and write-offs that happen," Meyers said.

"This is effectively just another discount. We'll absorb it and spread the cost of it over everything we do," Meyers said.

After learning of the hospital's decision not to charge those injured in the train crash, a local philanthropist made a donation to the hospital to cover a portion of the costs incurred and challenged hospital board members to match it, according to a news release.

A collection of gifts from numerous donors was facilitated by the Permian Basin Area Foundation, with a grant of $100,000 made to MMH for the costs of mass casualty medical services incurred by the hospital.

There were 30 donors on the list. The hospital didn't release the names because most wanted to remain anonymous.

Meyers said he is grateful for the outpouring of support from Midlanders.

"I was stunned by the generosity of Midlanders when I moved here 10 years ago, but I'm no longer surprised when they step up. This is the most generous community I've ever worked in and known anything about," Meyers said.

Those interested in helping defray Midland Memorial's medical costs can do so by contacting the Permian Basin Area Foundation at 617-3213.

Ugandan man becomes American citizen

■ Co-founder of Africa Bridges of Hope takes oath Friday after seven-year process

The family of Meddie Mugoya has been fasting and praying once a week for the past three years.

His wife, Sarah; sister-in-law, Mary Herman; and son, David, 6, were among the more than 25 friends and family members who filled the federal courthouse's third-floor courtroom Friday morning for a ceremony they'd been waiting seven years for. In David's words, they were there because his dad was becoming an American citizen.

Sarah Hermann Mugoya first visited Kampala, Uganda, in October 2004 when she went to work with the Caring Heart Orphanage. She immediately fell in love with the children, the people and the culture. It was where she belonged.

Three days before she was to head home to Midland, she met Meddie Mugoya, who was director of Ugandan Bible League. He proposed to her the next day.

Hermann returned home and told her family. They flew to Africa to meet their future son-in law, and then Sarah moved to Uganda permanently on May 30, 2005. After the Mugoyas were married, Sarah served in Uganda until her visa

Data revision shows local labor market even stronger than believed

■ Midland, Odessa lead state with lowest unemployment, highest job creation

Area residents are well aware the local economy is thriving.

But revised labor market data released Friday by the Texas Workforce Commission indicates that the local economy was even stronger in 2012 than originally believed.

Unemployment in the Midland metropolitan statistical area was 3.4 percent in January, up from 2.9 percent in December but below the 3.9 percent reported last January, according to the commission, which originally said Midland's December unemployment rate was 3.1 percent.

The increase was attributed to college students, home for the holiday break, who took seasonal jobs.

Midland continued to report the state's lowest rate, followed by Odessa at 4.1 percent, up from 3.7 percent in December.

Midland's lowest rate remains 2.4 percent, reported in 2008.

"The news is spectacular," said Karr Ingham, the Amarillo economist who analyzes the oil and gas industry.

Some revisions dated back to 2011, he said, with the commission indicating Midland had added 1,400 more jobs than it originally reported, bringing the job growth rate to 8.7 percent from the original 6.7 percent.

The upward revisions were even more dramatic in 2012, with the commission stating Midland had added 5,700 more jobs during the year than originally reported, Ingham said.

"That took the original year-over-year growth rate as of December 2012 from 2.8 percent to 8.3 percent," he said.

Ingham said not only did Midland and Odessa have the lowest unemployment in the state but the highest rates of job

Fremont High School students pass through the hall during a class change on Feb. 22 in Fremont. Fremont Independent School District faces closure after years of underperformance.

South Texas school district awaits decision on closure

Associated Press

FREMONT — A South Texas school district facing the threat of closure after years of underperformance remained optimistic that state officials will recognize the progress made in a short time and let it continue to operate.

Fremont Independent School District Superintendent Ernest Singleton said a lengthy conversation with Texas Education Commissioner Michael Williams this month left him feeling that the struggling district 150 miles south of San Antonio would survive.

"I'm still out on that limb saying we are going to be good to go," Singleton said.

More than a year ago, Singleton suspended the district's athletics in an effort to focus on academics and save money. State officials ordered the district to close in late 2011, but later granted a reprieve on the condition that Fremont fulfill a long list of requirements.

The district has met nearly all of them, including moving its budget back into the black, building two new science labs in its high school, facing audits and having its buildings pass inspections, Singleton said Wednesday. He saw a visit from three-dozen school board members from around the state Thursday as an opportunity to show off the district's gains.

Abysmal attendance, which once led Singleton and the high school principal to accompany the constable on home visits to implore parents to send their kids to school, has also improved.

Principal Enrique Ruiz said late last month that his school's attendance had not dropped below 90 percent this year. On a visit to the campus a year earlier, the sign in front of the school put the day's attendance at 88 percent, well below the state average of 96 percent at the time.

Fremont's exception is student performance which remains below state targets and was something that Singleton said he and the commissioner spoke at length about.

"When you deal with years of gaps in instruction and in student learning, as I expressed to the superintendent, it's hard to make that up in one year," Singleton said.

School board President Michelle McCleery said engagement from parents and the community as a whole had increased tremendously in the past year. She conceded academic performance was a work in progress, but added, "I don't think Fremont is the only district in that situation."

Singleton had hoped the district might hear the state's decision before spring break begins Monday, but on Friday, the Texas Education Agency said there would be no announcement before day's end.

Still, in a sign the district is looking beyond the decision at hand, Singleton said he had already begun discussing the possibility of a bond vote in November for school improvements.

"I think if we can get a green light from TEA that will certainly be a sign of hope that we're going to be sustainable and I think that parents will step up to the plate and back us, back a new building process," he said.

Key lawmaker pledges to work on Medicaid expansion

Texas Republicans have made it clear they hate the idea of expanding health care for the poor under the Affordable Care Act, but a key leader pledged Friday to work on a state alternative to accomplish the same goal and bring in the same federal matching funds.

House Appropriations Chairman Jim Pitts said lawmakers from several committees will work together to try to come up with a home-grown solution to providing more poor people with health care. A Gallup poll released Friday showed 28.8 percent of Texans lacked health insurance in 2012, which Gallup called the highest rate in the nation and highest ever recorded in the United States.

"I think we owe Texans an obligation to discuss this plan during the legislative session and get something done this legislative session," Pitts said in the most unequivocal statement yet on expanding Medicaid.

Lawmakers heard three hours of testimony about how Texas could provide 1 million people with health care coverage and better reimburse doctors by spending $18 billion and earning $100 billion in federal matching funds over 10 years. State officials, hospital representatives and county leaders said the state might even save enough money at the local level to cover its $18 billion investment.

Billy Hamilton, a former state revenue estimator who now works as an economic consultant for Methodist Healthcare Ministries of South Texas, said counties and hospital districts spend $2.5 billion a year on indigent health care, and private hospitals provide $1.8 billion a year in charity care. Expanded Medicaid would reduce much of those costs, he said.

"I don't really think you're going to see a more overwhelming fiscal opportunity" than Medicaid expansion, he said.

Dallas County Judge Clay Jenkins said expanded health care coverage would allow him to lower county and hospital district taxes. He said the mentally ill also would gain coverage, reducing the likelihood they end up in the county jail.

"If we can get behavioral services for those people outside of our jails ... that's a much better way of doing it," he said.

The only person to speak against expanding health care coverage was John Davidson, a policy analyst with the conservative Texas Public Policy Foundation. He said expanding the number of people who rely on government-funded health care means ever-growing costs for taxpayers.

"We believe Medicaid spending is on an unsustainable trajectory," he said.

Senator files much-anticipated scholarship bill

The head of the Texas Senate Education Committee on Friday filed a highly anticipated bill offering businesses tax credits for donations that help poor and at-risk children leave public schools for private ones.

Houston Republican Sen. Dan Patrick has spent months clamoring for expanding "school choice" but waited until Friday, the last day to file bills in the legislative session, to formally offer his proposal.

Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst, who oversees the flow of legislation in the state Senate, assigned it SB 23, a low enough number that debating the measure will be a priority before the Legislature adjourns in May. It is likely to face stiff, bipartisan opposition.

Co-sponsored with fellow tea party favorite Sen. Ken Paxton, R-McKinney, Patrick's plan allows firms to get up to a 15 percent credit on state business or franchise taxes for donating to nonprofits that provide funding so low-income and at-risk children can leave traditional schools for private and religious alternatives.

"Several hundred-thousand students are stuck in low-performing schools today," Patrick said in a statement. "This should not be acceptable to anyone."

Patrick calls himself an "education evangelist," and says that while wealthy families can afford to move so their kids attend strong public schools, low-income students are "held hostage by their Zip codes."

But defenders of traditional schools dismiss the plan as a new wrinkle on long controversial voucher systems that funnel money away from already cash-strapped traditional public schools.

The Coalition for Public Schools said the bill and other educational proposals championed by some conservative lawmakers show "our public schools are under attack."

"It is appalling to see such legislation filed that would create a corporate tax loophole and voucher scholarships to divert critical dollars into an experimental voucher program to subsidize private education," the umbrella group of religious, child advocacy and education organizations said in a statement.

Al Iorio, pioneer accordion maker, dies at 94

McClatchy Tribune

HACKENSACK, N.J. — Amedeo "Al" Iorio, a mechanical engineer from Cresskill, N.J., hailed from a family of accordion makers.

Little wonder that he engineered a better accordion.

Iorio, who died Monday at 94, developed the first successful electronic accordion, called the Accorgan — a veritable orchestra in a squeezebox, thanks to an embedded chip.

"If Al had never put in those electronic sounds, the accordion would not have been recognized as an instrument that could be played in many musical groups," said Norman Seaton, president of the National Accordion Association, which is holding its 2013 convention this weekend in Dallas.

"He was definitely a pioneer," Seaton said.

Iorio's forebears began in the music business in the mid-19th century in Italy. His father, Candido, opened an accordion shop in New York City in 1907. Iorio, with a mechanical engineering degree from Stevens Institute of Technology, transformed the business, renamed it the Iorio Syn-Cordion Musical Instrument Co. and moved it to an Englewood, N.J., industrial park.

Iorio was an unabashed champion of the accordion, an instrument that, for many, conjures memories of Lawrence Welk and polka bands.

"The accordion will never die out," he said in a 2002 interview with The (Hackensack) Record. "There's still a lot of business out there, and the new computerized keyboards are always advancing themselves."

As for his own musical prowess, Iorio "didn't go out and do gigs or anything," said a niece, Denise Grasing of Leonia, N.J. "But he played the accordion well enough to be able to demonstrate it and sell it."

Iorio continued on after the business closed.

"His garage was full of accordion parts, and you could always call him," said Guenadiy Lazarov, owner of Accordion Gallery, a sales and service business in Roxbury, N.J. "He was proud of his family's legacy, and it was a blessing for him to still do what he enjoyed."

Iorio, an Army Air Forces veteran of World War II, is survived by his wife, Gloria; a sister, Norma Ferraro of Long Island; a granddaughter and a great-granddaughter. His son, Ken, who co-owned the family business, died in 1996.

New judge to decide DA's contempt citation

Associated Press

DALLAS — A judge who declared the Dallas County district attorney in contempt of court for not testifying during a hearing agreed on Friday to let another judge decide how to handle that citation.

State District Judge Lena Levario's order refers contempt proceedings against District Attorney Craig Watkins to Judge John Ovard, the presiding judge for the state administrative region that includes Dallas. Ovard said Friday he would likely assign another district judge next week to examine the issue and decide on any possible punishment for Watkins.

Levario held Watkins in contempt Thursday for not answering questions in court about whether his office improperly prosecuted oil heir Al Hill III for mortgage fraud. Levario dismissed the charges against Hill, blaming Watkins' lack of testimony.

Hill's attorneys allege Watkins pushed forward the prosecution of Hill as a favor to a friend and campaign donor, attorney Lisa Blue, who was embroiled in a dispute with Hill over legal fees. They presented records of phone calls between Watkins and Blue, as well as campaign donations he received around the time the case was being considered.

Prosecutors speaking on Watkins' behalf rejected any suggestion that the case was handled improperly.

Levario said it was clear to her that Watkins was "calling the shots," and without testimony from him or Blue, she had to dismiss the case.

Watkins had filed motions Friday asking Levario to refer the case to another judge.

His spokeswoman, Debbie Denmon, said prosecutors were still deciding whether to appeal Levario's dismissal of charges against Hill.

Report: Fort Bliss brings $5.9B to El Paso economy

Associated Press

EL PASO — West Texas officials said Friday they plan to meet with Pentagon leaders and members of Congress in Washington next week in an effort to spare Fort Bliss from the automatic federal budget cuts that officials say would greatly impact the local economy.

A study by the University of Texas-El Paso's Institute for Policy and Economic Development shows the base and adjacent medical center have a $5.9 billion economic impact and creates nearly 62,000 jobs with more than $4 billion in compensation to area households. The study was done last month for the Greater El Paso Chamber of Commerce.

"It's not chump change," Rick Glancey, the chamber's military forces division chairman, said at a news conference Friday at the chamber's offices in downtown El Paso.

Glancey said the chamber plans to meet with members of Congress from Texas and New Mexico as well as "two- and three-star rank generals" in the Pentagon to make the case for Fort Bliss and adjacent military installations in New Mexico such as Holloman Air Force Base in Alamogordo and Las Cruces' White Sands Missile Range.

Tom Thomas, the civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army for West Texas, said he is optimistic about the outcome of their lobbying efforts.

"When you face a trillion dollar cuts in 10 years, everybody's going to take a hit. But I think we'll come out as good or better as any installation in the country," he said after the news conference.

Maj. Joe Buccino, Fort Bliss' public information officer, highlighted a statistic from the report that said the base accounts for 11 percent of the jobs in the area and 16 percent of its economy. The event was not attended by high-ranking military officers.

"We will not bring a different message to D.C. The facts are very clear," El Paso Mayor John Cook said.

Associated Press

El Paso Mayor John Cook, right, presents a report Friday that says Fort Bliss has a $5.9 billion dollar impact on the local economy. He is joined by Tom Thomas, left, civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army for West Texas, Maj. Joe Buccino, public information officer for Fort Bliss, center, and Rick Glancey, chairman of the Greater El Paso Chamber of Commerce's Armed Forces Division at the Greater EL Paso Chamber of Commerce.

MPD: Intoxicated driver attempts bribe

By James Cannon
jcannon@mrt.com

A Midland man remained in custody Friday after he was arrested for allegedly attempting to bribe police officers to get out of a driving-while-intoxicated charge.

Victor Manuel-Hinostro Muniz, 21, is being held on a second-degree felony of bribery, a third-degree felony of possession of a controlled substance and a misdemeanor charge of driving while intoxicated.

Midland police officers noticed a red pickup impeding traffic near the 1200 block of North Lamesa Road shortly before 10 p.m. Thursday.

The driver abruptly made a left turn, failing to yield the right of way. Officers said the pickup caused another vehicle to swerve and almost hit a Midland Police Department squad car head-on, according to Muniz's arrest report.

Officers followed the vehicle and activated emergency lights to conduct a traffic stop on the 1100 block of East Cuthbert Avenue. The driver, later identified as Muniz, told officers he had not been drinking but changed his story before officers administered a field sobriety test. Officers said Muniz told them that he consumed about "six 13-ounce Dos Equis and three or four Patron tequila and Red Bull" mixed drinks, according to court records released by Precinct 3 Justice of the Peace Judge Billy Johnson Friday afternoon.

Muniz declined to give a specimen of blood for an alcohol test.

During a search of the vehicle, officers found a digital scale with white powder hidden in the ashtray compartment. The white powder was determined to be cocaine, according to the report.

Muniz was then arrested and taken to the Midland County jail.

While en route, he allegedly attempted to bribe officers. He said he would give them $500 if they would drive him to an ATM and home. As officers approached the county jail, Muniz increased his offer to $1,000, according to the arrest report. He was then charged with a second-degree felony of attempting to bribe a public official.

Muniz was charged with possession of a controlled substance because he was arrested in a drug-free school zone.

Bond had not been set as of 3:30 p.m. Friday. If convicted, Muniz could serve up to 20 years in prison on the bribery charge and up to 10 years in prison for possession of powder cocaine.

TSA officer Robert Howard signals an airline passenger forward at a security check-point at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport in SeaTac, Wash., in 2010. Flight attendants, pilots, federal air marshals and even insurance companies are part of a growing backlash to the Transportation Security Administration's new policy allowing passengers to carry small knives and sports equipment like souvenir baseball bats and golf clubs onto planes.

Delta CEO opposes TSA's revised policy on knives

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The head of Delta Air Lines on Friday joined the growing opposition to the Transportation Security Administration's new policy allowing passengers to carry small knives onto planes.

Delta CEO Richard Anderson said in a letter to TSA Administrator John Pistole that he shares the "legitimate concerns" of the airline's flight attendants about the new policy.

Allowing small knives to be carried on board after a ban of more than 11 years "will add little value to the customer security process flow in relation to the additional risk for our cabin staff and customers," Anderson said in the letter, which was obtained by The Associated Press.

"If the purpose is to increase security checkpoint flow, there are much more effective steps we can take together to streamline the security checkpoints with risk-based screening mechanisms," he said.

Delta, based in Atlanta, is the world's second-largest airline. It is the first major airline to join not only flight attendants but pilots, federal air marshals and insurance companies in a burgeoning backlash to the policy. Pistole announced the policy on Tuesday.

TSA spokesman David Castelveter declined to comment on the letter. He said TSA plans to implement the policy on April 25 as scheduled.

Airlines for America, a trade association representing major U.S. airlines, has been supportive of TSA without explicitly endorsing the policy.

"We support the TSA's approach of combining its vast experience with billions of passenger screenings with thorough risk-based assessments," Jean Medina, a spokeswoman for the association, said in response to a request Friday for the association's position.

OATH

expired and then returned to Midland.

Meddie obtained a visa to visit her and their children in Texas, but since their engagement, Sarah said it's been a long process of working to get his U.S. citizenship.

The couple started the Africa Bridges of Hope ministry to help sponsor and support children in Uganda. They sell jewelry and gifts at the Midland Downtown Farmers Market to raise funds for the organization.

While almost all naturalization processes take place in El Paso, the Mugoyas received notice this week that the paperwork had been switched from the federal court in El Paso and they wouldn't have to travel.

Dozens of their church friends and family members, who wouldn't have been able to make the trip to El Paso, watched Friday as Mugoya was sworn in as a citizen.

Judge Robert Junell told the court before the ceremony that he spends so much time sending people to jail that he's happy when he gets to perform a naturalization ceremony.

"What a great day," he said.

After the oath was administered, Junell read a letter to Mugoya from President Barack Obama that said Mugoya represents the promise of the American dream.

Mugoya said many people in his country look at coming to the U.S. as a good opportunity. When someone receives a visa to visit, they throw a party because they're so excited, and when they return home, others want to hear about the trip.

After he officially became an American, Mugoya told the court that the process hadn't been an easy journey and was at times painful and hard.

"But right now, I feel good about it. I'm so excited," he said.

REVISION

growth at 9 percent and 8.2 percent, respectively. The next closest MSA was Houston at 4.5 percent job growth.

In the area's dominant industrial sector — mining, natural resources and construction — growth was similarly revised upward. The commission originally estimated Midland employment in that sector, which includes oil and gas, at 19,800 jobs at the end of 2012. That number has been revised to 23,100 jobs, a gain of 3,300 jobs, sending the rate of job creation in that sector from the original 3.7 percent to 16.1 percent.

"We would have expected an upward revision to the numbers," he said. "As it turns out, those revisions were more incredible than expected. And those numbers may have been greater if we'd had a sufficient labor pool. The market is obviously tight.

"Any time you add jobs at that pace, that's extraordinary," he said. "There are incredible things going on there."

The commission said Midland's labor force grew to 93,142 in January from 92,254 in December and from 86,496 last January.

Pam Welch, executive director of Midland Development Corp., said the numbers show how important it is that development continues to keep up with the growth in population.

"That's the main thing that came out of the City Council retreat, that we have to get ahead of the curve," she said.

The MDC has assisted the city with infrastructure projects, she said.

Michael Sanchez, director of transportation at Midland College, said he could easily operate 10 trucks with three students each and "I don't think I could ever fill the demand."

Right now his classes average nine students a month.

He estimated that 50 percent of the students at the school's truck driving school are from outside the area, including El Paso, Amarillo and Virginia. The problem is that students come to the area, work awhile and then return home, he said.

"We're trying to fill positions with people in the area who will stay. There is a huge demand for truck drivers," he said.

Sanchez said he gets calls from companies wanting to hire his students. It's not just oil companies hiring, but transportation companies such as Averitt Express and FedEx.

He also gets about 30 calls a week from people interested in the opportunities available.

"I have teachers wanting to leave their jobs," he said. "You wouldn't believe the variety of people interested. Casa de Amigos sponsors single parents, low-income students. They're amazed. They were cleaning houses and now they're making good money. They go from $300 a week to $1,500 or $1,600 a week."

He is working to get equipment to help meet demand, and said Chevron and Key Energy have both made significant donations to the program. Plans are to open a branch in Fort Stockton later this year.

Statewide, the unemployment rate rose to 6.3 percent from 6.2 percent in December but is below the 7.2 percent reported last January.

Commission officials reported Texas employers continued to expand their payrolls in January with the addition of 10,400 nonfarm jobs for a total of 310,900 jobs added in 2012.

While Midland had the lowest unemployment, the highest was in McAllen-Edinburg-Mission at 11.6 percent.

Appeals court limits border searches of electronic devices

Associated Press

PHOENIX — A federal appeals court ruled Friday that Border Patrol agents must have reasonable suspicion of criminal activity before conducting comprehensive searches of laptops or other digital devices in what civil liberties activists are calling a significant victory for privacy rights.

The decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals creates for the first time a broad standard aimed at protecting travelers' most private information from arbitrary searches.

"A person's digital life ought not be hijacked simply by crossing a border," Judge M. Margaret McKeown wrote for the appeals court majority.

The ruling only applies to Border Patrol agents operating within the 9th Circuit, which includes the U.S.-Mexico border along Arizona and California.

The court did not define what constitutes a comprehensive search, and it's likely Border Patrol agents will still conduct superficial reviews of computers, thumb drives, compact disks, cellphones, cameras and other electronic devices during border stops.

Legal observers expect both sides will appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court. The federal government insists border agents don't need reasonable suspicion to search electronic devices for hidden and deleted files.

The case centered on Howard Cotterman, a U.S. citizen whose laptop was seized at the Arizona-Mexico border in 2007. After a months-long review, federal investigators found hundreds of hidden child pornography files on Cotterman's computer, including images of him molesting a young girl, the court decision states.

A grand jury had indicted Cotterman for offenses related to child pornography, but a district court deemed the search illegal and suppressed evidence. The Fourth Amendment prohibits "unreasonable searches and seizures."

The appeals court ruled that federal agents had reasonable suspicion based on a 15-year-old child molestation conviction against Cotterman and because Mexico is known as a sex tourism destination.

Bill Kirchner, a Tucson lawyer representing Cotterman, declined to discuss the specifics of his client's case other than saying his criminal history was not sufficient grounds for reasonable suspicion.

In its ruling, the appeals court noted that the intrusive nature of forensic searches of electronic devices triggers the reasonable suspicion requirement.

Under federal policy, investigators can detain electronic devices for months without cause. The forensic reviews often uncover password-protected and deleted files.

"It's definitely a move in the right direction in terms of recognizing privacy rights in the digital age," said Sharon Bradford Franklin, a lawyer with the Constitution Project, which had filed an amicus brief in the case supporting new privacy standards.

Nearly 7,000 people had their electronic devices searched by border agents from 2008 to 2010, according to the Constitution Project.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Arizona declined to comment on the case.

In a dissenting opinion, Judge Consuelo Callahan said the court's decision flouted "more than a century of Supreme Court precedent, is unworkable and unnecessary and will severely hamstring the government's ability to protect our borders."

But Hanni Fakhoury, a staff attorney with the Electronic Frontier Foundation, said reasonable suspicion is a far cry from probable cause, which would require Border Patrol agents to obtain a warrant before fishing for hidden digital files.

SpaceX's Musk 'optimistic' about Texas spaceport

Elon Musk's SpaceX founder made billions as a co-founder of PayPal, an e-commerce company that enables money transfers on the Internet.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — SpaceX billionaire Elon Musk swung by the Texas Capitol on Friday and told lawmakers he could announce this year that the state will be home to his next ballyhooed spaceport — if the price is right.

Bringing rare celebrity wattage to typically dry House Appropriations Committee hearings where the state budget is hashed out, Musk expressed optimism about Texas' chances of beating out Florida, Georgia and Puerto Rico for what he says will be "a commercial version of Cape Canaveral."

Musk, who was in Austin to speak at the South by Southwest festival and promote his Tesla electric cars, said the winner hinges on which state puts together the best offer. He hinted at competitors offering generous economic incentives yet stopped short of revealing figures.

He often spoke, however, as though Texas was the preference. California-based SpaceX already launches unmanned rockets from a launch pad in Florida but Musk said there is an inherent appeal to expanding elsewhere.

Musk said his new spaceport will be the world's first commercial orbital launch site.

"All things being equal, I think it's better to have more than one location and have them be geographically separate," Musk said. "But on the other hand, if the economics are so compelling in Florida, that has to be considered."

Whatever offer the state puts on the table for SpaceX is likely to include taxpayer money from Gov. Rick Perry's deal-closing Texas Enterprise Fund, which has been used to sway corporate heavyweights like Apple to expand in the state.

Ironically, after Musk finished testifying and was followed into the hall by admirers wanting pictures with the PayPal co-founder, lawmakers in the freshly empty committee room took managers of the Texas Enterprise Fund to task over transparency and questioned restocking it with more money.

SpaceX already has roots in Texas, building rockets at a facility near Waco. The proposed launch site would be just outside Brownsville near the U.S.-Mexico border. The Federal Aviation Administration is still conducting an environmental impact statement on the proposed site.

Musk said the company hopes to make a decision this year on where to build the site. SpaceX is already buying land near Brownsville.

"We're talking about something that is really the big leagues here," Musk said.

SpaceX has a $1.6 billion contract with NASA to keep the International Space Station well stocked. The contract calls for 12 supply runs, including one that launched earlier this month.

SpaceX, or more formally Space Exploration Technologies Corp., leads the commercial pack that is working toward launching astronauts in another few years. Musk said he can have people flying on a modified Dragon by 2015.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

DALLAS

Updates nearly done at Dealey Plaza where JFK shot

Updates to Dealey Plaza are ahead of schedule and construction barriers will soon come down at the Texas site where President John F. Kennedy was shot.

The Dallas Morning News reported the $1.6 million restoration includes repairs to fountains, upgrades to landscaping and cleanup of a nearby triple underpass. City funds and donations are paying for the improvements at the park.

JFK was fatally shot on Nov. 22, 1963. The upgrades were scheduled to be finished by this summer in preparation for the 50th anniversary of the tragedy but officials say good weather has led to more progress.

Senior architect Trent Williams with the Dallas Park and Recreation Department said Thursday that by April 1 visitors probably won't see any signs of construction.

Cardinals set Tuesday as start date for conclave

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — The preliminaries over, Catholic cardinals are ready to get down to the real business of choosing a pope. And even without a front-runner, there are indications they will go into the conclave Tuesday with a good idea of their top picks.

Then it will be just a matter of agreeing on one man to lead the church and tackle its many problems.

The conclave date was set Friday during a vote by the College of Cardinals, who have been meeting all week to discuss the church's problems and priorities, and the qualities the successor to Pope Benedict XVI must possess.

That said, there doesn't appear to be a front-runner, and the past week of deliberations has exposed sharp divisions among cardinals about some of the pressing problems facing the church, including governance within the Holy See itself.

The Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, said the pre-conclave meetings had given the cardinals a chance to discuss the "profile, characteristics, qualities and talents" a future pope must have.

Those closed-door deliberations, he said, provided an opportunity for discussion and information-gathering so the cardinals could go into the conclave ready to cast their ballots. "The preparation is absolutely fundamental," Lombardi said.

Cardinal Sean O'Malley, archbishop of Boston, agreed, noting that without this week's meetings the conclave "could drag on."

"The preference is to have enough discussions previous so that when people go to the conclave, they already have a particular idea of who they're going to vote for," he told reporters at a briefing earlier this week.

Then it's a matter of consensus-building in order to reach the two-thirds majority needed to elect a pope — a process that for the past century has taken no more than a few days.

Benedict himself was elected on the fourth round of voting in 2005, a day after the conclave began — one of the fastest papal elections in recent times. His predecessor, John Paul II, was chosen following eight ballots over three days in 1978.

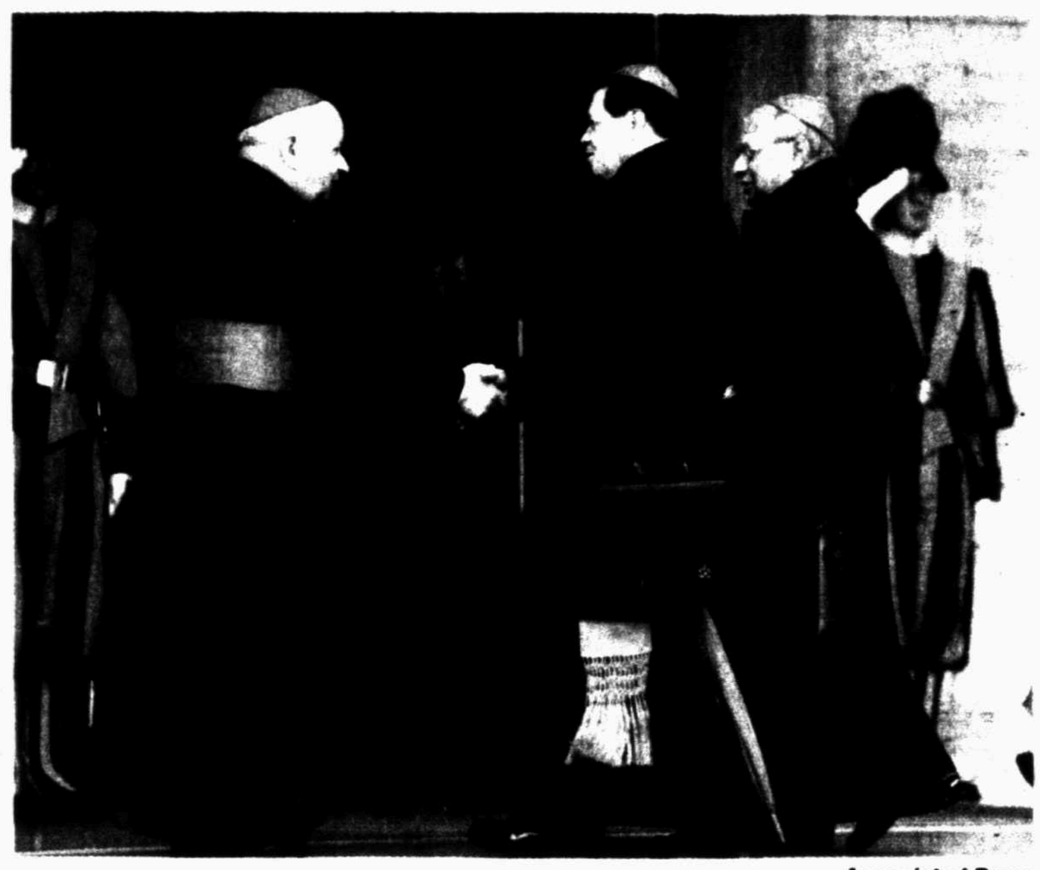

In the past 100 years, no conclave has lasted longer than five days.

On Tuesday, the conclave will begin with a morning Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, followed by a procession into the Sistine Chapel and the first round of secret balloting in the afternoon.

If black smoke is sent snaking out of the chapel chimney to indicate there is no victor, the cardinals will retire for the day. They return Wednesday for two rounds of balloting in the morning and two rounds in the afternoon, a process repeated each day, with occasional breaks for reflection, until a pope emerges.

U.S. Cardinal Timothy Dolan, considered a papal contender, said in a blog post Friday that this week's preliminary discussions covered preaching and teaching the Catholic faith, tending to Catholic schools and hospitals, protecting families and the unborn, supporting priests "and getting more of them!"

"Those are the 'big issues,'" he wrote. "You may find that hard to believe, since the 'word on the street' is that all we talk about is corruption in the Vatican, sexual abuse, money. Do these topics come up? Yes! Do they dominate? No!"

Associated Press

Cardinal Norberto Rivera Carrera, center, followed by Cardinal Albert Malcolm Ranjith Patabendige Don, right, greets Cardinal Stanislaw Dziwisz as they arrive for a meeting at the Vatican on Friday. Cardinals have set Tuesday as the start date for the conclave to elect the next pope, signaling that they were wrapping up a week of discussions about the problems of the church and who best among them might lead it.

At this time last year, there were 1,973 rigs in the U.S. Among them, 1,296 were listed as searching for oil, 670 for gas and seven as miscellaneous.

There were 195 directional drilling rigs this week, an increase of 10; 1,130 horizontal rigs, down 11; and 427 vertical rigs, down four.

In Texas there were 835 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas, a decrease of six. At this time last year, there were 929 rigs in Texas.

Among the other major oil- and gas-producing states, California increased by five and Alaska, Colorado and Louisiana increased by two rigs each. New Mexico and North Dakota each gained one rig.

Oklahoma saw the steepest decline, losing seven rigs this week. Arkansas and Pennsylvania each lost two rigs.

West Virginia and Wyoming were unchanged.

In the U.S., 1,682 rigs were listed as on land, 19 in inland waters and 51 offshore. There were 49 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico.

Canada lost 75 rigs to finish the week at 580 rigs. There were 451 rigs listed as searching for oil, a decrease of 58. Canada lost 17 gas rigs, dropping to total to 129.

No top option for gas field raises concern

Associated Press

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Wyoming's governor and an environmental group are concerned the U.S. Bureau of Land Management has not come out in favor of a specific plan for allowing what would be one of the largest gas drilling projects in the United States.

The BLM says it will settle on a preferred plan when it releases a final environmental impact analysis for the Continental Divide-Creston project next year. Before that happens, the federal agency will evaluate comments submitted by citizens and public officials.

The final plan probably will draw elements from the five proposals the BLM has outlined for the project, said Mary Wilson, spokeswoman for the BLM Wyoming office.

"It is unusual," Wilson said. "But this time we decided to not go in that direction but say all of these alternatives that have good ideas in them."

The project involves BP and more than 20 other companies drilling as many as 8,950 new gas wells in the high desert north and south of Wamsutter in south-central Wyoming. The area already has hundreds of gas wells: BP advertises on an Interstate 80 billboard that Wamsutter is home to the company's largest onshore gas field in North America.

The new project combines two previous proposals and would expand the drilling zone to 1,672 square miles, or one-third bigger than Rhode Island.

The five development options range from not allowing any new drilling to allowing each new well to be drilled from its own pad. Mid-range options include employing directional drilling to cluster multiple wells on the same pad, establishing high- and low-density drilling areas, and taking special steps to protect species including mule deer and sage grouse.

BP warns of rising costs from oil spill settlement

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — BP is warning investors that the price tag will be "significantly higher" than it initially estimated for its multibillion-dollar settlement with businesses and residents who claim the 2010 oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico cost them money.

The oil giant estimated last year that it would spend roughly $7.8 billion to resolve tens of thousands of claims covered by the settlement agreement. But in a regulatory filing this week, BP PLC said businesses' claims have been paid at much higher average amounts than it had anticipated.

The company also said it can't reliably estimate how much it will pay for unresolved business claims following a ruling Tuesday by the federal judge supervising the uncapped settlement. U.S District Judge Carl Barbier rejected BP's interpretation of certain settlement provisions.

Barbier upheld claims administrator Patrick Juneau's interpretation of settlement terms that govern how businesses' pre- and post-spill revenue and expenses — and the time periods for those dollar amounts — are used to calculate their awards.

BP had argued that Juneau's interpretation would lead to "absurd results" and "false positives," but the judge said the settlement agreement anticipated that "such results would sometimes occur."

"Objective formulas, the possibility of 'false positives,' and giving claimants flexibility to choose the most favorable time periods are all consequences BP accepted when it decided to buy peace through a global, class-wide resolution," Barbier wrote.

BP spokesman Geoff Morrell said the company believes the way Juneau is processing business economic loss claims is "contrary to the agreement."

"His approach has produced unjustified windfall payments to numerous business claimants," Morrell said in a statement, adding that BP will pursue "all available legal options" to challenge Barbier's decision.

BP already had revised its estimate for the total cost of the settlement before Barbier's ruling, saying earlier this year that it expected to pay $8.5 billion instead of the $7.8 billion it estimated when it first cut the deal.

In this week's regulatory filing, the BP said it has been analyzing the processing of recent claims to determine if they can be used to predict future claims but concluded it can't.

Excluding business claims that Juneau hasn't received or processed yet, the company now estimates it will pay $7.7 billion to resolve the rest of the claims covered by the settlement.

Oil prices rise on jobs data

Associated Press

The price of oil was up slightly Friday, as a strong U.S. jobs report was tempered by gains in the dollar.

Benchmark oil for April delivery was up 39 cents to finish at $91.95 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The Labor Department said employers added 236,000 jobs last month, far exceeding economists' predictions. The unemployment rate fell to 7.7 percent from 7.9 percent. That could signal increased demand for oil products if more drivers are joining the daily commute.

But the report also supported the U.S. dollar against the euro, yen and other currencies. A stronger dollar makes oil a less enticing investment for traders using those other currencies because oil is traded in dollars.

Lower oil prices have pulled down prices at the gas station. The average price for a gallon of gas fell another penny to $3.71, the lowest level in three weeks.

Sen. McCain slams release of illegal immigrants

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Republican Sen. John McCain of Arizona said Friday that some of the more than 2,000 illegal immigrants recently released by the Homeland Security Department because of budget cuts may have been convicted of serious crimes, citing "local sources."

In a letter to Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano, McCain demanded new information on the release of the detainees, who were facing deportation, including the details of their criminal records. He said there's a possibility some of them had committed serious crimes such as smuggling, narcotics trafficking and child molestation.

Federal officials maintain those released were non-violent criminals and low-risk offenders. The states where immigrants were released include Arizona, California, Georgia and Texas.

McCain wants Napolitano to make public this month the criteria used to determine which detainees were released and how many had been convicted of serious crimes.

"Local sources have raised the possibility that some of the detainees had committed serious crimes such as weapons offenses, smuggling, narcotics trafficking, forgery, aggravated assault against police officers and child molestation," McCain wrote. "The American public needs to be confident that ... the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), in fact did not release detainees who will be a danger to the public."

McCain's press office did not respond to a request to identify the local sources the senator cited.

McCain also raised questions about whether the budget cuts have prompted Border Patrol agents to quickly release newly detained illegal immigrants. He requested answers by March 18.

Other Senate and House Republican leaders have also called for a review of the releases. Critics argue that the plan allowed thousands of criminals to return to the street without regard to public safety.

Government documents show the Obama administration planned to release roughly 5,000 immigrants by the end of March. The agency's field offices reported more than 2,000 immigrants were released in February before intense criticism led to a temporary shutdown of the plan, according to the documents.

Immigration officials said the immigrants still eventually face deportation and are required to appear for future court hearings. They must also consent to mandatory check-ins, phone calls, tracking devices or home visits. Violators can be detained again or deported.

McCain is working with a handful of Republican senators to overhaul immigration policy. He has said a path to citizenship for the nation's 11 million illegal immigrants must be contingent on better border security.

Senate Democrats face challenging landscape

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a surprising string of victories last fall, Democrats now face a challenging terrain as they look to hold onto their Senate majority in 2014 and prevent Republicans from gaining full control of Congress during President Barack Obama's final two years. His party must defend a hefty 21 seats, including seven in largely rural states that the president lost last fall.

The task of maintaining control of the Senate has grown more daunting in recent weeks, with four Senate Democrats announcing plans to retire. Sen. Carl Levin, of Michigan, disclosed his decision on Thursday, following Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin and West Virginia Sen. Jay Rockefeller. New Jersey Sen. Frank Lautenberg has also said he will retire, but Democrats will be heavily favored to hold the seat. A fifth Democratic retirement could come soon from South Dakota Sen. Tim Johnson, who has not yet announced his intentions.

Democrats control 55 seats in the Senate, after November elections in which they did better than expected and gained two seats to pad their majority. That means Republicans would need to pick up six seats next year to take control for the first time since 2006.

Twenty months before the mid-term elections, Republicans are laying the groundwork to try to capitalize on the defense-playing Democrats, working to recruit strong candidates in Arkansas, Alaska, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Dakota and West Virginia — all states carried by Republican presidential nominee Mitt Romney last year. They're also buoyed by history, which shows the party controlling the White House typically loses seats during the midterm of a second-term president.

Republicans have only 14 of their seats up for re-election and only one — Sen. Susan Collins, of Maine — is in a state Obama carried last year. Just two GOP senators have said they will retire — Mike Johanns, of Nebraska, and Saxby Chambliss, of Georgia — and they represent states that favor Republicans.

US relaxes export controls on some military parts

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Taking its first concrete step to streamline outdated restrictions on military exports, the U.S. moved to make it easier for American companies to sell aircraft equipment and parts to overseas customers.

The White House announced Friday it has notified Congress of plans to give the Commerce Department, rather than the State Department, authority to control the export of thousands of "dual-use" items that could be used either for military or commercial purposes. The goal is to simplify the export process for U.S. manufacturers competing in the global market by treating non-sensitive products differently than things like jet fighters and missile launchers.

Senior administration officials are painting the move as part of a broader effort to rebuild an export control structure leftover from the Cold War that is tough for business and tough for the government to enforce. Decades ago, these products were made specifically for military systems, and there was a serious risk of letting them fall into the wrong hands. These days, many products are interchangeable with commercial systems and widely available outside the U.S.

Under the current rules, items on the U.S. Munitions List are under the strict control of the State Department, where agents determine which allies and partner nations can purchase the products. But the State Department must treat the sale of a spare part — a bolt or a wing piece, for example — the same as an entire fighter jet.

The new rules take those less sensitive items off the Munitions List and hand authority for controlling them to the Commerce Department, which has a more flexible approval process. As an entity charged with promoting economic growth, the Commerce Department is also known for being more lenient in granting permission for products to be shipped out.

The White House said the move would not pose any additional risk.

Amnesty: NKorea control expands beyond the gulag

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When Amnesty International officials scrutinized new satellite imagery of a notorious North Korean prison camp, what caught their attention was not what was happening inside the fence but outside it.

A network of guard posts enclosing a valley and a small town indicated not an expansion of the sprawling Camp 14, as originally thought, but authorities' control of those living beyond the camp's perimeter.

The rights group isn't sure why that's happening but says it's another good reason to step up scrutiny of human rights conditions in the secretive nation, with its unparalleled restrictions on citizenry and its vast gulag.

Amnesty is pushing for member states next week at the U.N. Human Rights Council to support an independent commission of inquiry into systematic abuses and crimes against humanity in North Korea.

That would add international pressure on Pyongyang, which was hit Thursday with the toughest U.N. sanctions yet for its latest nuclear test. It has responded by unleashing a barrage of threats against the United States and South Korea, which undertake major military exercises in the region next week.

A U.N. special rapporteur on human rights is due to present a report on North Korea to the council in Geneva on Monday. Japan, Europe, the U.S. and South Korea have all indicated support for some kind of enhanced inquiry mechanism, and only half of the 47 member states on the council will need to vote in favor for it to be established.

While it is highly unlikely North Korea would allow investigators into the country, Amnesty said a commission of inquiry would lead a better resourced probe into conditions in the country and could provide a basis for some day bringing perpetrators before the International Court of Justice.

"The focus on North Korea right now is on its provocative statements and threats of nuclear strikes. As scary as that prospect is, it's an extraordinarily remote possibility," Frank Jannuzi, deputy executive director of Amnesty International USA, told reporters Friday in Washington.

"What is certain is the human tragedy faced by North Koreans every day."

A third of North Korean children are chronically malnourished, according to the U.N., and up to 200,000 people are held in political prison camps, many simply because they are related to those deemed unfriendly to the authoritarian regime.

The best-selling book "Escape from Camp 14" by author Blaine Harden has shed light onto one corner of the gulag. It tells of Shin Dong-hyuk, who was born in the camp, endured forced labor and torture, then at age 23 managed to escape through its electrified fence and eventually reached the West.

Amnesty said it commissioned the satellite images and analysis of the area, which lies 43 miles north of Pyongyang, from commercial provider Digital Globe. It found that North Korea has constructed a 12.5-mile perimeter, much of it on steep terrain, next to the camp to encircle a valley that contains mines, orchards and a small town. While the perimeter is marked by posts and not a fence, there is controlled access and some 20 guard towers that are more concentrated near the town than the camp.

"What's most worrisome is that it seems to expand the scope of control beyond the formal boundaries of the prison camp," said Jannuzi.

Still, Jannuzi, a former U.S. congressional staffer who has been to North Korea several times, said the country is not the "black box" it's often made out to be. Foreign charities and aid groups operate there, and there is some tourism.

Jannuzi predicted the mounting international pressure on North Korea over its rocket and nuclear tests, while justified, will lead to a "hardening of views and tightening of controls" there and will set back hopes of an incremental opening.

Sandusky's charity seeks permission to sell Pa. HQ

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — A children's charity founded by former Penn State assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky is asking a judge for permission to sell its headquarters.

Judge William Morgan on Friday scheduled a March 28 hearing on the request by The Second Mile to sell the two-story building in State College for $650,000.

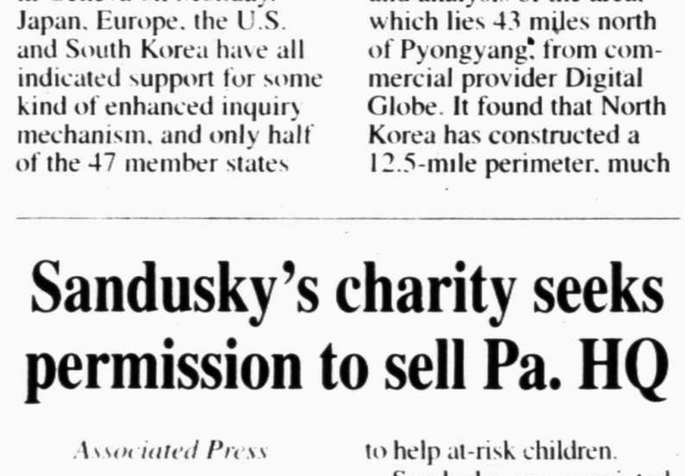

The Second Mile was started by Sandusky in 1977 to help at-risk children.

Sandusky was convicted last summer of sexually abusing 10 boys, some on Penn State's campus. He's serving a 30- to 60-year state prison sentence but maintains he's innocent and is pursuing appeals.

Prosecutors have said Sandusky met most of his victims, if not all of them, through The Second Mile.

In the filing, lawyers say the sale proceeds would pay for victims' claims, programs and legal fees.

Lady Chaps' win guarantees spot in NJCAA Tourney

Lady Chaparrals 83
Lady Texans..... 67

Ade

Dixon

LUBBOCK — There was no surprise reaction from the Midland College women's basketball team following its domination over South Plains College on Friday. The Lady Chaparrals expected to win and win big if they executed their game plan.

The Lady Chaps dominated the No. 18-ranked Lady Texans in all phases of Friday's NJCAA Region V Tournament semifinal game and cruised to an 83-67 victory to not only reach today's 2 p.m. championship game against Weatherford College, but qualify for the national tournament.

With the Region V women having two automatic bids this year to the expanded 24-team national tournament, MC (25-7) and Weatherford will play for a higher seed at nationals March 18-23 in Salina, Kan. Weatherford advanced earlier in the day with a 77-71 victory over New Mexico Junior College in a game that wasn't as close as the final score indicated.

Like the Lady Coyotes, Midland College made it look pretty easy against their Western Junior College Athletic Conference foe. MC shot 50 percent from the floor, including 50 percent (7 of 14) from 3-point range. They also forced 16 turnovers and held the Lady Texans to 37.5 percent shooting.

Considering that each team won at home in their two WJCAC meetings and the games were decided by a combined 13 points, most people in attendance would have expected a closer game on Friday … except the Lady Chaparrals.

"I'm not surprised because we work hard," said sophomore forward Achiri Ade, who led MC with her 20th double-double of the season of 18 points and 12 rebounds to with three assists and three blocks. "I know we're

What a relief

Hardaway leads Lady Rebels to victory

Lady Rebels 5
Lady Bobcats..... 3

By Jonathan Hull
jhull@mrt.com

Emily Hardaway is as comfortable in the pitcher's circle as she's ever been during her four seasons playing for the Lee softball team, and it showed on Friday.

Coming on in a rare relief appearance, Hardaway threw 5 1/3 perfect innings, recording eight strikeouts in a 5-3 come-from-behind victory for the Lady Rebels against District 2-5A foe San Angelo Central at Gene Smith Field.

Hardaway came on in relief for freshman pitcher Darby O'Grady, who got the start against Central but struggled to find her command. Central scored three runs in 1 2/3 innings against O'Grady, grabbing an early lead. However, the Lady Bobcats wouldn't get the ball out of the infield again once Hardaway took over with runners on second and third and two outs in the second inning.

"I came (in) in a hard spot," said Hardaway, who will start today's game against crosstown rival Midland High. "But I knew my team was going to be there. My main goal was just to pitch the ball where it needs to be pitched and let my team do the rest."

Hardaway struck out Central pitcher Maddie Contreras to end the second inning. The strikeout was simply a sign of what was to come.

"Emily came in and did a great job," Lee coach Wes Overton said. "She did what she was supposed to do and shut them down. She did her role as a relief pitcher."

Hardaway also sparked the Lady Rebels at the plate in the bottom of the second, driving the ball to the fence in centerfield for a double, scoring Cidney Martin from first. Gaby Hernandez — courtesy running for Hardaway — scored on the next at-bat when Lee catcher Destiny Reyes

Rangers tie Pecos, advance to tourney title game

By Jordan Mason
jmason@mrt.com

The pool play finale between Greenwood and Pecos on Friday certainly didn't go how Garrett Carlisle expected — or how anyone in the packed Greenwood stands expected for that matter — but the end result was fine by him.

In a game worthy of prime time, and the final spot in the West Texas March Classic championship game, the second spot in the title game was decided on a technicality as Greenwood and Pecos ended five innings tied at 9-all with the Rangers advancing on a tiebreaker, number of runners to second base.

But for Carlisle, whose mother traveled from Fort Worth on Friday to watch him play, the championship berth was one he'll take regardless of how it happened.

"I was hoping we got to the championship because then she gets to stay longer," Carlisle said with a smile. "And who doesn't want to be in the championship?"

Pecos certainly agrees and after playing Greenwood to a 9-9 tie, the Eagles were stunned to learn that they'd been handed their first loss after the teams tied on the first tiebreaker, runners to third base, and Greenwood won on the next tiebreaker with one more runner to second base.

Even Ranger coach Craig Finley admitted afterward that it was a strange way to end what turned into one of the most exciting games of the Classic.

"That was exciting," Finley said. "Both teams fought and fought and hit

MC softball team finds urgency in time for sweep

Midland College's Kristine Vargas delivers a pitch to Clarendon's Jazmine Aguilar on Friday afternoon during a WJCAC game at Midland College

By Len Hayward
lhayward@mrt.com

Tommy Ramos didn't see a sense of urgency from his team early Friday afternoon against Clarendon College.

And that lack of urgency almost cost Midland College a victory in its Western Junior College Athletic Conference opener at the Midland College softball field.

But the Lady Chaps rebounded to win the first game of a doubleheader, erasing a three-run lead against the Lady Bulldogs to win, 5-3, and then Midland College was near dominant in a 7-0 victory in the second game to sweep.

"It was just finally executing and going in there confident," freshman second baseman Naomi Posada said. "It was the first (conference) game and we were pretty nervous. But we got the hang of it."

Through three innings of the first game on Friday, Clarendon pitcher Karen Mao held the Lady Chaps to one hit, and then in the fourth worked out of a two-on, two-out jam.

Meanwhile, the Lady Bulldogs built a 3-0 lead by plating single runs in the first, third and fourth as two errors and a passed ball led directly to runs.

In the fifth inning, though, Midland College finally caught up to Mao as Taylor Daniels drove in two runs with a double to right to cut the lead to 3-2.

The Lady Chaps (22-11) put up three runs in the sixth as Leanna Meyer scored on a fielder's choice, and then Posada singled, cutting Central's lead to 3-2.

The Lady Rebels tied the game in the fourth when Hernandez — again courtesy running for Hardaway after Hardaway drew a one-out walk — scored from second on an infield single by Dee Gaona.

Senior third baseman Kristen Schlemeyer put the Lady Rebels ahead with a two-run single back up the middle of the infield, scoring Kylie Herring and Ciatra Sheppard for a 5-3 advantage. And with the way Hardaway was pitching, that was all the run support she needed.

"It was a different mentality with (Emily) in there. It really changed the whole game," Schlemeyer said. "We started making adjustments as the game was going on. We just had faith in each other."

HOBBS, N.M. — The Midland College baseball team split a doubleheader with No. 2 New Mexico Junior College on Friday at Ray Birmingham Thunderbird Field.

The Thunderbirds won the first game 8-4, but the Chaparrals rebounded to win the second game 10-7.

The Chaps (12-7, 3-3 in WJCAC play) fell behind 5-1 after three innings in the first game, and couldn't recover. Midland College scored three runs in the fifth but couldn't come up with any runs in the sixth or seventh innings.

MC catcher Chris Shaw was 2 for 4 with a home run and three RBI, and Blair Beck was also 2 for 4. Joel Atkinson was 1 for 2 with a RBI in the game.

In the second game, the Chaps jumped out to a 5-0 lead as starting pitcher Jason Zgardowski pitched four no-hit innings against the Thunderbirds. Zgardowski, though, couldn't get out the fifth but Jared Robinson came on in relief and held down NMJC.

Robinson gave up four runs on nine hits with two walks and five strikeouts as Midland College handed the Thunderbirds their first conference loss of the season.

The Chaps also had a big game at the plate with 12 hits as Atkinson and Beck each had home runs and combined for four RBI. Scott Popescu was 2 for 5 with a RBI, and Matt Reyes was 2 for 4 with a RBI. Hunter Redman finished 1 for 5 with two RBI, and Daniel Vargas had a hit and scored three runs.

The two teams will resume their four-game WJCAC series at 1 p.m. today at Christiensen Stadium with a doubleheader. Thomas McIlraith will start Game 3 for the Chaparrals today, and MC assistant coach Hector Rodriguez said the Game 4 starter is still undecided.

drove in two runs with a single to left for a 5-3 lead.

Meanwhile, Kristine Vargas came on in relief of starter Holly Herrington in the third inning and gave up one run in four innings.

"I think it's more of us getting a sense of urgency to come out and play, and that's something that this team hasn't figured out yet," Ramos said. "When we take the field we should have a sense of urgency and play at a high level, and not wait for the opponent to put pressure on us."

The Lady Chaps looked more urgent in the second game as they took a 3-0 lead in the third with Posada and Daniels each hitting home runs, as Daniels hit a two-run shot over the left-field fence.

Midland College added two runs each in the fourth and fifth innings to complete the scoring as starting pitcher Shelby Weissenbach shut out the Lady Bulldogs and allowed only four hits and had two strikeouts.

"As long as we compete good things will happen," Ramos said. "I think what they figured out was as long as we compete, execute and play for each other, we are capable of winning some games. We've just got to get that chemistry going."

Midland College will continue it's WJCAC opening weekend with a doubleheader against Frank Phillips College at noon today at the MC Softball Field.

Brett Wagner added a goal for Odessa on a power play 19 seconds into the third period, cutting Texas' lead to 4-3. However, a late goal by Max Shuart gave the Tornado some breathing room.

From staff reports

LUBBOCK — The Western Junior College Athletic Conference will be well-represented in the Men's NJCAA Region V Basketball Tournament final today.

It will be an all-WJCAC final with conference champion Howard College (28-4) meeting WJCAC second-place seed New Mexico Junior College (26-6) at 5:30 p.m. today at Lubbock Christian University's Rip Griffin Center.

NMJC and Howard split their two meetings this season with each winning on the road.

LADY CHAPS

a good team. I know if we play hard, then we'll go far. Our main goal is to come out with a lot of energy and play our game. If we do that, then everything else falls into place."

A lot of things started falling into place early on for the Lady Chaps as they raced out to a 17-5 advantage at the first media timeout at 13:45 of the first half. Not only was MC hitting its shots but South Plains was turning the ball over and not connecting on its attempts from the floor, as MC took a 42-24 lead at the intermission.

"This is the first time in the three times we've played South Plains that we made them a little uncomfortable," MC coach Ron Jones said. "They are such a good halfcourt offensive and defensive team and they controlled the tempo both times we played them. But I thought from the beginning we were able to get some transition and just sped up the game a little bit, which allowed us to separate."

MC freshman guard Tia Dixon said the team's energy got things rolling for the Lady Chaps in the first half.

"I feel like we wanted it more than they did," Dixon said. "We had a lot on the line and our energy kept is in the game. From the energy on the bench to talking on the court, it helps a lot."

South Plains (25-6) cut it to as close as 46-32 early in the second half, but every time the Lady Texans looked to have some momentum going, the Lady Chaps would come up with either a stop or a shot to quell it.

"It's all about staying calm," said Dixon, who had 12 of her 15 points in the second half. "There were times they shocked us with their pressing. We just kept running our plays, listened to our coach and moved the ball around."

Also for MC, Daneichka Canales and Diamalieses Rivera each added 10.

For South Plains, Alexius Dawn had a game-high 19 points, Shea Myatt had 12 and TaSheena Moore added 11.

The Lady Chaps now turn their attention to a familiar foe in Weatherford. The teams split this season with each winning at home by double digits.

"Obviously, they are very big and very physical, and the last two times we played them they played a (man-to-man defense) and they've been playing zone the last two weeks," Jones said. "We know it's going to be a different challenge because they are big and long in that zone. I told the girls they have about an hour before I start thinking about Weatherford."

Added Ade, "We're excited about this win, we've worked hard and we deserve it, but we're going to move on to (today's game) and focus on Weatherford."

Notes: This will be Midland College's first trip to nationals since 2010 and sixth trip overall in the 19-year history of the program. ...In Weatherford's win against NMJC, the Lady Coyotes had as much as a 70-47 lead with 8:05 left in the game. Six players scored in double figures for WC (23-4): JohVonna Darrington had 16, Bree Brooks 14, Waleska Perez 13, Desiree King 12, Cleyder Blanco had 12, and Itiana Taylor added 10. ... This season, Weatherford defeated MC 85-73 in Weatherford on Dec. 4. On Jan. 3, MC returned the favor with a 78-66 victory at Chaparral Center.

ODESSA HIGH AT MIDLAND HIGH

When/where: 2 p.m. today, Grande Communications Stadium

Records: Midland High 10-4-3, 7-3-1 (22 points) in District 2-5A; Odessa High 9-6-4, 4-5-3 (15 points)

Last game: Midland High 6, Lubbock Coronado 2 on March 2; Odessa High 2, Amarillo Tascosa 2

Last meeting: Midland High 3, Odessa High 1 on Feb. 9

Notes: A victory today could put the Bulldogs in the playoffs, but Midland High coach Warren Cottle said that's not his team's focus. The focus is on continuing to improve. "To be honest, I try to stay away from that, and stay focused on this game," Cottle said. "If you start adding pressure to them, it takes them out of focus, and you have to keep them in their zone." ... The Bulldogs had Tuesday off after a convincing 6-2 victory against Lubbock Coronado at home last Saturday. That victory kept Midland High in second tied with rival Lee, each with 22 points. MHS is seven points ahead of fifth-place Odessa High in the standings. ... Odessa High, meanwhile, is coming off a frustrating tie against Amarillo Tascosa where the Bronchos took a 2-0 lead, only to see it evaporate in the second half. OHS head coach Noe Cerazo said that tie puts some pressure on his team to pick up three points in today's game to stay in the playoff hunt. "It's one of those games where you can't afford to lose no more points," Cerazo said. "You are going to have to get three points this weekend." ... Nico Francino scored two goals and Homero Vasquez added another as the Bulldogs beat Odessa High at Ratliff, 3-1, on Feb. 9.

Last game: Lee 2, San Angelo Central 1; Odessa Permian 1, Abilene High 0

Last meeting: Lee 3, Abilene High 0 on Feb. 9

Notes: The Rebels begin a key five-game stretch today that could determine plenty about their playoff fate. If Lee can win today, and rival Midland High beats Odessa High, the Rebels will clinch a playoff spot. Lee coach Scott Hicks said his squad is aware of the implications of today, and he said he would like to go into the final few games of the season without the pressure of worrying about getting into the playoffs. "When the playoffs are on the line, that can affect the kids emotionally," Hicks said. "Hopefully we don't falter (today), but if we do we are still OK. We still feel good about our chances to be in the playoffs again this year." ... Hicks said Reilly Gwin will likely play today after missing the last two games because of an injured knee, and he added that Tre Sanchez will return to the lineup. Also, Jason McAfee could miss today's game as Hicks said he is taking the SAT test today. ... Lee picked up its first win since Feb. 12 on Tuesday with a 2-1 victory against San Angelo Central. Alan Avila and Darius Strambler scored for the Rebels. ... Abilene High still has an outside shot at a playoff spot, but would need to win out to have a chance.

Last meeting: Midland High 1, Odessa High 1 on Feb. 9

Notes: The Lady Bulldogs are on the cusp of clinching a playoff berth, and a victory today could do that for them. Coach Ryan Dunlevy, though, said his team is looking to not only clinch a playoff spot but also move up the standings to get a better seed. "They know what they have to do to be successful, and we have to basically win," Dunlevy said. "We are in a no-lose situation if we want to have an opportunity at second." ... Dunlevy said he took advantage of the Tuesday off to give his players a chance to rest and didn't practice on Monday and Tuesday. ... Midland High found its scoring touch with a 6-1 victory last Saturday against Lubbock Coronado. "That game the girls came out on fire, and we did everything that we'd been working on in practice," Dunlevy said. ... The Lady Bronchos clinched their playoff spot on Tuesday and are sitting in second with a chance to stay there with a win today. OHS took a 2-0 victory against Amarillo Tascosa on Tuesday. ... In the last meeting between these two teams on Feb. 9, the Lady Bulldogs needed a late goal to pull off the tie as Anne Bergman scored in the 70th minute.

Last meeting: Abilene High 3, Lee 0

Notes: The injury-riddled Lady Rebels return to action today basically playing for pride as they are all but eliminated from playoff contention with a Midland High victory today. ... Lee was without four starters in Tuesday's game, but a depleted backline held up for 60 minutes against league-leading San Angelo Central before the Lady Bobcats broke the ice with a goal. ... Lee has not won a game since Feb. 12 when it beat Abilene Cooper, 2-0, and is, 0-5, in its last five games. ... Abilene High still has some life in the postseason but it needs to win today and have Midland High lose to keep fourth place within striking distance.

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram

Greenwood first baseman Garrett Carlisle waits on the throw from Braydin Moreland on a pickoff attempt as Fort Stockton's Matthew Fabela races back to the bag Friday at Greenwood High School during a game in the West Texas March Classic tournament.

RANGERS

the ball well.

"It was just clutch hitting, who could have the clutch hit at the last time, and thank goodness we were the home team — going again they might have put two more up."

After losing its first game of the day to Fort Stockton, 4-1, Greenwood was the first to control the seesaw game against Pecos. Carlisle got the Rangers going with a two-run shot to left, jump-starting a five-run third inning that ended with Greenwood up 6-2. The home run by Carlisle was his second of the day after a solo shot against Fort Stockton.

Yet the Eagles were just getting started, chasing Carlisle off the mound during a three-run fourth that pulled them within 6-5.

After Greenwood (10-2) tacked on a run in the bottom of the fourth, Pecos seized the lead as the first five Eagles to the plate reached base before Ranger sophomore Victor Urias recovered from his nightmarish start to the inning by retiring the top of the Eagles' lineup in order. Finley, for one, was impressed by the recovery.

"We had bases loaded with no outs and gave up two, it could have been a lot uglier," Finley said. "The kids, they battled, and I had to go out there and calm them down and talk through some stuff and get their nerves back, but they were able to fight through it."

Right on cue, Greenwood began the bottom of the fifth with a walk followed by a double by junior Braydin Moreland, which allowed leadoff man Jonathan Shaw to score after the center fielder mishandled the ball as he tried to pick it up.

Moreland tied the game up again on the next at-bat, an RBI groundout by Urias, before Pecos reliever Brandon Garnto retired the next two batters, ending the game due to the tournament inning limit.

Greenwood now meets Presidio in the WTMC championship at 7 p.m. today at Citibank Ballpark while Pecos will face Seminole, a team that also lost its first game on a tiebreaker in its finale, in the third-place game at 4 p.m.

And following its loss to Fort Stockton on Friday — in which the Panthers avenged two earlier losses this season to Greenwood — the Rangers will look to do the same to Presidio after the Blue Devils erased a 6-0 lead en route to an 8-7 eight-inning win against Greenwood in the Monahans Sandhills Tournament.

And after the Pecos game Friday, Carlisle was excited for the shot at revenge and a chance for his mother to watch him play again.

"I'm just happy we got the win," Carlisle said.

Cowboys tender McCray

By Tom Orsborn

San Antonio Express-News

Restricted free agent safety/special teams ace Danny McCray received a one-year tender offer of $1.323 million from the Dallas Cowboys on Friday, the club announced on its web site.

The Cowboys can match any offer made to McCray from another club. But because the Houston native signed with the Cowboys as an undrafted free agent in 2010, they won't receive compensation should he leave.

Friday marked the start of a three-day period in which teams can contact free agents prior to the official start of free agency Tuesday. Dallas isn't expected to be as active as it was in free agency last year when it inked seven players, including cornerback Brandon Carr to a five-year, $50.1 million contract.

NHL ROUNDUP

FROM WIRE REPORTS

PREDATORS 6
OILERS 0

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Colin Wilson had a career-high two goals and two assists, and the Nashville Predators beat the Edmonton Oilers 6-0 Friday night to snap a three-game skid.

Patric Hornqvist, David Legwand, Rich Clune and Zach Boychuk also had a goal apiece as the well-rested Predators won for the first time since Feb. 25, when they beat Dallas in overtime, by matching their season-high with six goals. Shea Weber had three assists in the first game against Edmonton this year.

Pekka Rinne made 24 saves for his fourth shutout this season.

The Oilers are 0-4-1 in their last five, the last two their first shutout losses this season. They were playing their second game in as many nights, and a roster with five players already missing was without forward Ales Hemsky. He had a puck go off his foot in Thursday night's 3-0 loss at Detroit.

SENATORS 3

NEW YORK (AP) — Jakob Silfverberg broke a tie with 4:41 left, and the Senators snapped a four-game losing streak.

Silfverberg got a rebound of defenseman Eric Gryba's shot and put it past Henrik Lundqvist for his fourth goal of the season. Zack Smith and Patrick Wiercioch scored in the first period, defenseman Sergei Gonchar had two assists, and Robin Lehner made 33 saves for the Senators.

Ottawa broke an 0-2-2 skid and won on the road for only the fourth time (4-7-2). Ottawa had been 1-7-2 in its previous 10 road games, but the Senators improved to 12-1-1 in their past 14 visits to Madison Square Garden.

Rick Nash and Brad Richards, in his first game back following a two-game injury absence, scored in the opening period, but the Rangers had a season-best, four-game winning streak broken.

PANTHERS 2, OT

SUNRISE, Fla. — Dustin Byfuglien scored with 40.5 seconds left in overtime. Byfuglien brought the puck across to the right circle and his wrist shot whistled past Jacob Markstrom.

Blake Wheeler and Andrew Ladd also scored for Winnipeg. Ladd also had an assist and has three goals and four assists in the last five games for the Jets.

Okla. crowd stunned by wrong-basket shot at buzzer

Associated Press

YUKON, Okla. — With a 1-point lead, 2.9 seconds to play and possession of the ball, all Hugo High School had to do was inbound the basketball and run out the clock to advance to the Oklahoma championship tournament.

But what followed stunned everyone.

Hugo guard Trey Johnson got confused and laid the ball into the wrong basket just before the buzzer, giving the opposing team, Millwood High, a 38-37 win and a place in the Class 3A state semifinals.

"When I saw the kid going that way, I was like, 'No, he's not. No, he's not ... Oh, yes he is.'" Millwood assistant coach David Samilton told The Oklahoman. "I couldn't believe it."

Johnson received the pass during Thursday night's game, needing only to dribble away the remaining seconds for a Hugo win. Instead, he got turned around and dropped a layup in the wrong basket just before the buzzer, Hugo coach Darnell Shanklin told The Associated Press on Friday.

Hugo's celebrating fans went silent, and Millwood fans broke out in celebration after a moment of silence for reassurance that the points — and the win — were theirs.

"Without a doubt, that's the toughest locker room I've ever had to talk to," Shanklin said.

Johnson was tough to console, Shanklin said, adding that other players on the team called and texted him on Friday.

"The kid feels terrible. It's still a game, regardless of what anyone says, basketball is still a game," Shanklin said.

With the win, Millwood advances to a semifinal matchup against two-time defending state champ, Centennial High.

"I feel sorry for him," Samilton said. "I really do feel sorry for him. But hey, I'll take it."

DALLAS — Brittany Chambers' layup with under a second to play gave Kansas State a 51-49 victory over Texas in the first round of the Big 12 Conference tournament Friday night.

Chambers scored 20 points and grabbed nine rebounds to lead the eighth-seeded Wildcats (15-16), whose reward is a quarterfinal game against No. 1 Baylor (29-1) Saturday.

Three players scored all but two of Kansas State's points. Haley Texada had 19 points and Chantay Caron scored 10 for the Wildcats, with Heidi Brown's basket being the only other score. Mariah White had no points but matched Chambers with nine boards and led Kansas State with five assists, including one on the game-winning basket.

Imani McGee-Stafford had 15 points and 10 rebounds to lead the Longhorns (12-18), the ninth seed. McGee-Stafford's basket with 30 seconds left tied it. Nneka Enemkpali scored 12 points for Texas.

No. 19 Texas A&M women top No. 17 S Carolina

By George Henry
Associated Press

DULUTH, Ga. — Kristi Bellock scored 17 points, Karla Gilbert added 11 in a reserve role and No. 19 Texas A&M beat No. 17 South Carolina 61-52 in the Southeastern Conference tournament quarterfinals.

The Aggies (22-9) snapped a three-game losing streak and will play No. 9 Tennessee in the semifinals Saturday.

Ashley Bruner finished with 19 points and Ieasia Walker added 15 for South Carolina (24-7).

Texas A&M survived a scare early in the second half when All-SEC center Kelsey Bone fell to the floor with a leg injury, but she later returned wearing a right knee brace after missing about 6 minutes.

During Bone's absence, South Carolina took its first lead 1 minute later when Bruner's layup made it 30-29.

But with Gilbert helping the front-line offense while Bone was off the floor, Texas A&M followed with an 11-1 run to go up 42-33 on Adrienne Pratcher's two free throws.

Bone made it 48-40 with a putback at the 8:24 mark and her free throw less than 2 minutes later gave the Aggies an 11-point lead.

The Gamecocks, who failed to make the SEC semifinals for a second straight year, were coming off a dominant win over Alabama, but they missed too many shots inside to gain momentum in the first half.

It was a familiar pattern for a team that ranked next-to-last in SEC scoring this season despite having the nation's sixth-best scoring defense.

South Carolina's biggest deficit was 12 on Bellock's free throw with 6:26 left. The Gamecocks were essentially finished after Courtney Walker's steal led to a layup by Bellock that pushed the lead to nine with 1:34 remaining.

More birdies for Tiger, and the lead at Doral

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

DORAL, Fla. — Tiger Woods struggled on the practice range, and he didn't feel much better two holes into his second round Friday at the Cadillac Championship. He would not have guessed this would be the day to set a personal record for birdies, much less wind up with a two-shot lead.

"All I need is one shot," he said. "And as soon as I feel it on one, I can pretty much carry through. And I did that today."

It was a 4-iron on the par-3 fourth hole, the toughest on the Blue Monster.

Woods hit a bullet with a slight fade at the left edge of the green and heard the crowd cheer as the slope and the grain took the ball to within 4 feet for birdie.

And just like that, he was on his way.

In a World Golf Championship with the biggest names in the hunt, Woods ran off six birdies in an eight-hole stretch around the turn in a clean, crisp exhibition. That sent him to a 7-under 65 and a two-shot lead over former U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell.

Woods has made 17 birdies in two rounds, his most ever on the PGA Tour, though that wasn't the most important number.

"It left me a two-shot lead," Woods said.

He was at 13-under 131, his lowest 36-hole score on tour since the 2009 AT&T National.

Woods followed that 4-iron with a wedge he stuffed to inside 2 feet. He added a collection of 10- to 15-foot birdie putts, and ended his big run with another 4-iron with a totally different shape, this one high and soft to 15 feet on the 224-yard 13th hole. Those par 3s ranked as the two toughest at Doral on Friday, and he birdied them both.

A birdie-birdie finish by McDowell gave him a 67 and prevented a dream final group for the week-end at Doral — Woods and longtime nemesis Phil Mickelson.

Mickelson, sparked by a visit to Augusta National earlier in the week, hit a 9-iron that stopped inches from dropping for a hole-in-one on the par-3 ninth. He had a 67 and was three shots behind, along with Steve Stricker (67).

Rory McIlroy showed signs of turning the corner with a 69, although he ended with a sloppy three-putt bogey. It was his first round under par this year, a small consolation for the world's No. 1 player. He was still 11 shots behind Woods.

Las Vegas qualifying canceled by heavy rain

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Brad Keselowski will start on the pole after heavy rain forced NASCAR to cancel qualifying for Sunday's race at the Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

The track got steady rain all morning Friday and again in the early afternoon after a brief break, forcing NASCAR to scrap practice and qualifying in Las Vegas for the first time. The speedway urged fans to take cover from rain, high wind and lightning when the afternoon storm broke over the desert north of the Strip.

"I was just thinking when I walked in, with this being Vegas and all, what the odds would be of a rainout in Vegas," Keselowski said. "I bet that was pretty high."

Sunday's field will be set by points and the NASCAR rule book, giving the pole to last season's Sprint Cup series champion. The top 36 spots are set by owners' points from last year, with the rest filled out by points or qualifying attempts.

"That's a really good deal," said Keselowski, the first-time champ. "It's one of the perks, I guess, of being the champion in the first few races. This is the first time I've had a decent starting position in a rainout."

Mike Bliss will miss the race because of the cancellation of qualifying.

Keselowski will be on the front row alongside Clint Bowyer, last season's second-place finisher. Daytona 500 champion Jimmie Johnson and teammate Kasey Kahne will be in the second row.

Although the rain also forced the cancellation of Friday's practice, no drivers seemed particularly concerned after going through Thursday's open test of the new Gen-6 car.

"We had more than enough practice this weekend," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said. "So I'm not too worried about what we didn't get to do today, because yesterday was way more than we needed, to be honest."

TEXASSPRINGTRAINING

FROM WIRE REPORTS

RANGERS' BELIVEAU ENCOURAGED BY START VS BREWERS

PHOENIX — Texas starter Jeff Beliveau threw two scoreless innings Friday before rain canceled a spring training game against the Milwaukee Brewers with the Rangers leading 2-0.

Beliveau, who has an outside shot of a spot in the Rangers bullpen, struck out one and allowed two hits and a walk.

Brewers starter Tyler Thornburg pitching three innings of no-hit ball, striking out two and walking two. Texas scored the only two runs of the unofficial game in the top of the fourth against Brewers left-hander Tom Gorzelanny.

Lance Berkman and Geovany Soto walked and Brandon Allen made it 1-0 with an RBI single to left. Leonys Martin followed with a single to right before Gorzelanny struck out Mike Olt to end the inning. The game was called in the fourth inning after a 19-minute rain delay and will not be made up.

BRAVES (SS) 14 ASTROS (SS) 9

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Freddie Freeman and rookie Evan Gattis each hit their second home run this spring and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 14-9 Friday in a meeting of split squads.

Freeman's two-run shot off Jordan Lyles came in a six-run first inning. Gattis hit a three-run homer off Sam Demel in the second and added an RBI double the next inning.

Lyles gave up seven hits and six runs to nine batters. Demel, the first of seven Houston relievers, allowed five runs, while getting only two outs.

Sean Gilmartin gave up two runs and five hits in three innings in his first start for the Braves.

More birdies for Tiger, and the lead at Doral

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

DORAL, Fla. — Tiger Woods struggled on the practice range, and he didn't feel much better two holes into his second round Friday at the Cadillac Championship. He would not have guessed this would be the day to set a personal record for birdies, much less wind up with a two-shot lead.

"All I need is one shot," he said. "And as soon as I feel it on one, I can pretty much carry through. And I did that today."

It was a 4-iron on the par-3 fourth hole, the toughest on the Blue Monster.

Woods hit a bullet with a slight fade at the left edge of the green and heard the crowd cheer as the slope and the grain took the ball to within 4 feet for birdie.

And just like that, he was on his way.

In a World Golf Championship with the biggest names in the hunt, Woods ran off six birdies in an eight-hole stretch around the turn in a clean, crisp exhibition. That sent him to a 7-under 65 and a two-shot lead over former U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell.

Woods has made 17 birdies in two rounds, his most ever on the PGA Tour, though that wasn't the most important number.

"It left me a two-shot lead," Woods said.

He was at 13-under 131, his lowest 36-hole score on tour since the 2009 AT&T National.

Woods followed that 4-iron with a wedge he stuffed to inside 2 feet. He added a collection of 10- to 15-foot-birdie putts, and ended his big run with another 4-iron with a totally different shape, this one high and soft to 15 feet on the 224-yard 13th hole. Those par 3s ranked as the two toughest at Doral on Friday, and he birdied them both.

A birdie-birdie finish by McDowell gave him a 67 and prevented a dream final group for the weekend at Doral — Woods and longtime nemesis Phil Mickelson.

Mickelson, sparked by a visit to Augusta National earlier in the week, hit a 9-iron that stopped inches from dropping for a hole-in-one on the par-3 ninth. He had a 67 and was three shots behind, along with Steve Stricker (67).

Rory McIlroy showed signs of turning the corner with a 69, although he ended with a sloppy three-putt bogey. It was his first round under par this year, a small consolation for the world's No. 1 player. He was still 11 shots behind Woods.

Las Vegas qualifying canceled by heavy rain

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Brad Keselowski will start on the pole after heavy rain forced NASCAR to cancel qualifying for Sunday's race at the Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

The track got steady rain all morning Friday and again in the early afternoon after a brief break, forcing NASCAR to scrap practice and qualifying in Las Vegas for the first time. The speedway urged fans to take cover from rain, high wind and lightning when the afternoon storm broke over the desert north of the Strip.

"I was just thinking when I walked in, with this being Vegas and all, what the odds would be of a rainout in Vegas," Keselowski said. "I bet that was pretty high."

Sunday's field will be set by points and the NASCAR rule book, giving the pole to last season's Sprint Cup series champion. The top 36 spots are set by owners' points from last year, with the rest filled out by points or qualifying attempts.

"That's a really good deal," said Keselowski, the first-time champ. "It's one of the perks, I guess, of being the champion in the first few races. This is the first time I've had a decent starting position in a rainout."

Mike Bliss will miss the race because of the cancellation of qualifying.

Keselowski will be on the front row alongside Clint Bowyer, last season's second-place finisher. Daytona 500 champion Jimmie Johnson and teammate Kasey Kahne will be in the second row.

Although the rain also forced the cancellation of Friday's practice, no drivers seemed particularly concerned after going through Thursday's open test of the new Gen-6 car.

"We had more than enough practice this weekend," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said. "So I'm not too worried about what we didn't get to do today, because yesterday was way more than we needed, to be honest."

TEXAS SPRING TRAINING

FROM WIRE REPORTS

RANGERS' BELIVEAU ENCOURAGED BY START VS BREWERS

PHOENIX — Texas starter Jeff Beliveau threw two scoreless innings Friday before rain canceled a spring training game against the Milwaukee Brewers with the Rangers leading 2-0.

Beliveau, who has an outside shot of a spot in the Rangers bullpen, struck out one and allowed two hits and a walk.

Brewers starter Tyler Thornburg pitching three innings of no-hit ball, striking out two and walking two. Texas scored the only two runs of the unofficial game in the top of the fourth against Brewers left-hander Tom Gorzelanny.

Lance Berkman and Geovany Soto walked and Brandon Allen made it 1-0 with an RBI single to left. Leonys Martin followed with a single to right before Gorzelanny struck out Mike Olt to end the inning. The game was called in the fourth inning after a 19-minute rain delay and will not be made up.

BRAVES (SS) 14 ASTROS (SS) 9

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Freddie Freeman and rookie Evan Gattis each hit their second home run this spring and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 14-9 Friday in a meeting of split squads.

Freeman's two-run shot off Jordan Lyles came in a six-run first inning. Gattis hit a three-run homer off Sam Demel in the second and added an RBI double the next inning.

Lyles gave up seven hits and six runs to nine batters. Demel, the first of seven Houston relievers, allowed five runs, while getting only two outs.

Sean Gilmartin gave up two runs and five hits in three innings in his first start for the Braves.

More birdies for Tiger, and the lead at Doral

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

DORAL, Fla. — Tiger Woods struggled on the practice range, and he didn't feel much better two holes into his second round Friday at the Cadillac Championship. He would not have guessed this would be the day to set a personal record for birdies, much less wind up with a two-shot lead.

"All I need is one shot," he said. "And as soon as I feel it on one, I can pretty much carry through. And I did that today."

It was a 4-iron on the par-3 fourth hole, the toughest on the Blue Monster.

Woods hit a bullet with a slight fade at the left edge of the green and heard the crowd cheer as the slope and the grain took the ball to within 4 feet for birdie.

And just like that, he was on his way.

In a World Golf Championship with the biggest names in the hunt, Woods ran off six birdies in an eight-hole stretch around the turn in a clean, crisp exhibition. That sent him to a 7-under 65 and a two-shot lead over former U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell.

Woods has made 17 birdies in two rounds, his most ever on the PGA Tour, though that wasn't the most important number.

"It left me a two-shot lead," Woods said.

He was at 13-under 131, his lowest 36-hole score on tour since the 2009 AT&T National.

Woods followed that 4-iron with a wedge he stuffed to inside 2 feet. He added a collection of 10- to 15-foot birdie putts, and ended his big run with another 4-iron with a totally different shape, this one high and soft to 15 feet on the 224-yard 13th hole. Those par 3s ranked as the two toughest at Doral on Friday, and he birdied them both.

A birdie-birdie finish by McDowell gave him a 67 and prevented a dream final group for the weekend at Doral — Woods and longtime nemesis Phil Mickelson.

Mickelson, sparked by a visit to Augusta National earlier in the week, hit a 9-iron that stopped inches from dropping for a hole-in-one on the par-3 ninth. He had a 67 and was three shots behind, along with Steve Stricker (67).

Rory McIlroy showed signs of turning the corner with a 69, although he ended with a sloppy three-putt bogey. It was his first round under par this year, a small consolation for the world's No. 1 player. He was still 11 shots behind Woods.

Las Vegas qualifying canceled by heavy rain

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Brad Keselowski will start on the pole after heavy rain forced NASCAR to cancel qualifying for Sunday's race at the Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

The track got steady rain all morning Friday and again in the early afternoon after a brief break, forcing NASCAR to scrap practice and qualifying in Las Vegas for the first time. The speedway urged fans to take cover from rain, high wind and lightning when the afternoon storm broke over the desert north of the Strip.

"I was just thinking when I walked in, with this being Vegas and all, what the odds would be of a rainout in Vegas," Keselowski said. "I bet that was pretty high."

Sunday's field will be set by points and the NASCAR rule book, giving the pole to last season's Sprint Cup series champion. The top 36 spots are set by owners' points from last year, with the rest filled out by points or qualifying attempts.

"That's a really good deal," said Keselowski, the first-time champ. "It's one of the perks, I guess, of being the champion in the first few races. This is the first time I've had a decent starting position in a rainout."

Mike Bliss will miss the race because of the cancellation of qualifying.

Keselowski will be on the front row alongside Clint Bowyer, last season's second-place finisher. Daytona 500 champion Jimmie Johnson and teammate Kasey Kahne will be in the second row.

Although the rain also forced the cancellation of Friday's practice, no drivers seemed particularly concerned after going through Thursday's open test of the new Gen-6 car.

"We had more than enough practice this weekend," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said. "So I'm not too worried about what we didn't get to do today, because yesterday was way more than we needed, to be honest."

TEXASSPRINGTRAINING

FROM WIRE REPORTS

RANGERS' BELIVEAU ENCOURAGED BY START VS BREWERS

PHOENIX — Texas starter Jeff Beliveau threw two scoreless innings Friday before rain canceled a spring training game against the Milwaukee Brewers with the Rangers leading 2-0.

Beliveau, who has an outside shot of a spot in the Rangers bullpen, struck out one and allowed two hits and a walk.

Brewers starter Tyler Thornburg pitching three innings of no-hit ball, striking out two and walking two. Texas scored the only two runs of the unofficial game in the top of the fourth against Brewers left-hander Tom Gorzelanny.

Lance Berkman and Geovany Soto walked and Brandon Allen made it 1-0 with an RBI single to left. Leonys Martin followed with a single to right before Gorzelanny struck out Mike Olt to end the inning. The game was called in the fourth inning after a 19-minute rain delay and will not be made up.

BRAVES (SS) 14 ASTROS (SS) 9

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Freddie Freeman and rookie Evan Gattis each hit their second home run this spring and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 14-9 Friday in a meeting of split squads.

Freeman's two-run shot off Jordan Lyles came in a six-run first inning. Gattis hit a three-run homer off Sam Demel in the second and added an RBI double the next inning.

Lyles gave up seven hits and six runs to nine batters. Demel, the first of seven Houston relievers, allowed five runs while getting only two outs.

Sean Gilmartin gave up two runs and five hits in three innings in his first start for the Braves.

DISNEY WONDER

The Disney experience on the high seas

Disney's Miami cruise ship is wonder for kids, adults

By Carlos Frias
Cox Newspapers

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Elise never saw her coming. She was still in awe, staggering in a dream-like state along deck five of the Disney Wonder — an entire deck designed with lower ceilings to make it feel cozier to children on Disney's first cruise ship to sail out of Miami. Then, someone snatched the black-and-white fedora off my hipster-cool 9-year-old's head.

A Disney Wonder crew member, in her late 20s and wearing the identifiable yellow polo shirt, cackled as she ran off with Elise's hat. Elise's cool was busted as she gave chase. Soon, my two other daughters, Amelia, 7, and Catalina, 5, joined in hot pursuit, all of them quickly embroiled in an impromptu game of keep-away.

They were having such a good time — even the crew member — and the ship hadn't yet left the port.

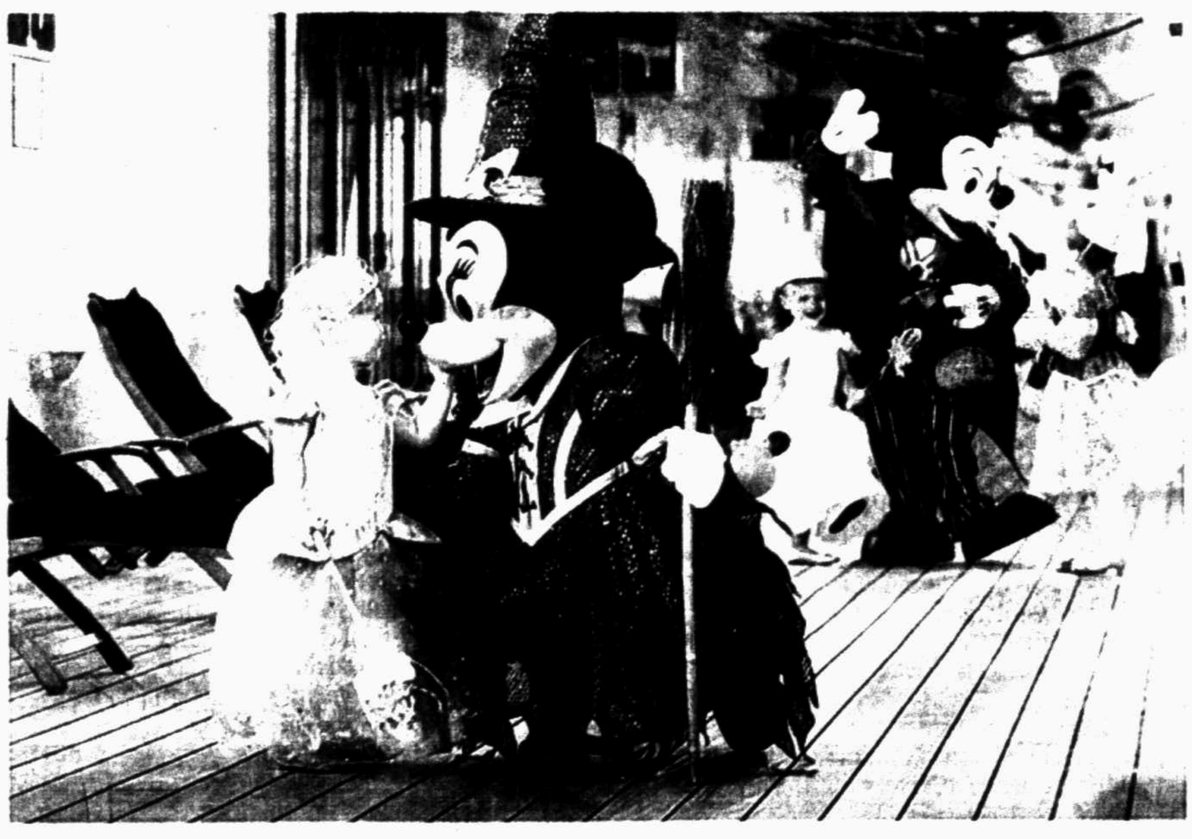

For the Disney aficionados who have not yet sailed with the Mouse, this should come as refreshing and enticing news: To take a Disney cruise is to get the full Disney experience on the high seas.

The Wonder, the Mouse's second of four cruise ships, built in 1999, has been repositioned from Los Angeles to the Port of Miami, where it quietly began sailing in late December and has now begun regular four- and five-day tours to the Caribbean.

A Florida-born kid, I consider myself a Disney connoisseur because it was my family's annual vacation throughout my childhood. My own children grew up with a possibly unhealthy devotion to the Disney princesses in specific, and to the parks in general.

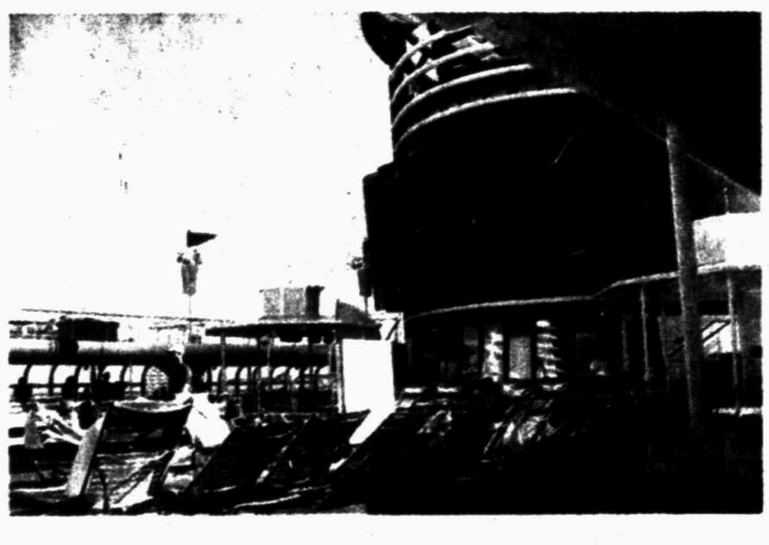

There is something to that "Disney magic." In

Lessons from the high seas

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Things to consider when booking a cruise on the Disney Wonder:

■ Prices for the four-day cruise start at $500, and are actually more affordable than the three-day ($609), but the five-day ($575) might offer the best bang for your buck. Children sail for free on select days through February.

■ A ship's satellite Internet is incredibly slow — and expensive. If you're going to want to use your smartphone or tablet on the cruise, call your phone provider before you leave and set up an international plan. Also, check with Disney about their on-ship cellular network.

■ If you're traveling with kids, sign them up for the kids' club. They'll give each a GPS wristband that stays on them for the duration of the cruise, giving you a modicum of peace of mind when they're onboard, and when you stop at ports.

■ Take two sets of bathing suits — unless you want to put on a cold, damp suit the next morning. And don't forget the sunscreen.

■ Bring a jacket. The deck of the ship can get cool at night.

■ Give kids some "them" time. Check them into the supervised and secured Oceaneer Lab to let them play computers, role-playing games with counselors and make friends while the adults grab a drink or take in a movie. Carry the two-way phone with you in case the kids or the counselors need to reach you.

■ Deck Three is Disney-music free, a respite.

■ Visit the Atlantis water park. For just a few dollars more than the price of the tour of the aquarium, your family can spend the day at a great waterpark. Or, if you like to gamble, this is your time.

CRUISE

my experience at the parks and on the ship, it's called service. If anything sets Disney apart, it's the ability to provide a service a guest doesn't yet know he wants.

You don't have to be a parent to identify the gene that produces Disney magic. But you'll know it when you see it.

For me, it was on my first dinner on the ship.

The girls were still buzzing from the experience of their first day on their first cruise. ("Is this a ship or a hotel?" Elise had said. "It's a ship — with elevators!" Amelia added.)

The day had been full: lugging our bags around as I waited for our state room (I should have taken Disney's repeated recommendations to check them); shepherding three girls under the age of 10 around a tour of the ship; practicing the requisite race to the life boats; watching the girls dance to "Call Me, Maybe" and "Gangnam Style" on a main-deck party as we cast off; finishing with an afternoon that faded to darkness on the sea, splashing in the pool.

We were all a little surprised by a kids menu that was highlighted by surf-and-turf (steak and shrimp), one that rotated every night with a choice of thoughtful, signature dishes for the children, as well as the customary chicken fingers, pizza, burgers and hotdogs for the pickier palates.

When the meal came to the table, I made a move to begin that requisite chore for any parent going to dinner with his kids: to cut everyone's steak before you take your first bite. But before I even took my napkin off my lap, our servers Beata Nagyova, from Slovakia, and Balwan Singh, from New Delhi, had already grabbed the girls' cutlery and began cutting the two young girls' steaks into bite-size squares.

I was stunned.

"You're on vacation, man," Singh said, looking up from the steak with a smile. "We've got this."

I didn't have to ask. Scratch that: It had never occurred to me to ask.

If you're a parent, you know what this moment means: We all sat down to a nice, stress-free dinner — and ate at the same time. That's how to start a vacation.

Since a limitless bacchanalia is such a part of cruising, I can say that Disney's offerings were elegant and diverse. Although Disney does provide bottomless plates of burgers, hot dogs, fries and pizza that are available 24 hours a day, you can find dishes such as the lightly fried crisp crab cakes, conch chowder and braised short ribs in reduction over mashed potatoes, which I chose for my meal one night.

It's that attention to detail that calls to a variety of passengers, which were not limited to young families. There were parents with teenage children — there is an entire teen club with tailored activities — and empty-nesters.

One couple in their late 40s, who sat near us for our dinner seating, came for a getaway without their college-aged kids. They live in Orlando and have taken the cruise out of Port Canaveral, which now features Disney's new, 4,000-seat cruise ships, the Fantasy and the Dream. Yet, they had always been interested in taking a Caribbean vacation with the kind of service you get at Disney.

"The level of service you get with Disney, you don't get anywhere else," he said.

For those used to touring on Royal Caribbean or Carnival, this must be said before going any further: There is no gambling on the ship. The Wonder did make a stop in Nassau, Bahamas, where folks could gamble from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Atlantis before the ship called all-aboard.

And this is no Hedonism on the High Seas. There are plenty of adult-only activities — including a pool area for guests 18 and older and a romantic restaurant for adults only at the top of the ship, as well as mixers at the music lounge every night. But if you enjoy gambling or singles cruises, this is probably not the cruise for you.

What Disney does — and arguably does best — is PG-rated family entertainment. Trading on the fame of their Magic Kingdom ride "Pirates of the Caribbean" and the subsequent movies' unbridled box-office and marketing success, the crew of the Wonder encouraged all aboard to dress like a pirate for a Caribbean-themed dinner one night, followed by dancing on the top deck of the ship, culminating in fireworks.

On another night, it was time for the captain's dinner and show. But when Mickey Mouse is the official captain, and the show designed by Disney, you know it's going to be an over-the-top event with attention to all the details.

For this event, it was a Golden-Globes-inspired theme to put everyone in the mood. Men in jackets and ties and women in glimmering evening gowns strutted down the red carpet leading to the 977-seat auditorium inside the Disney Wonder. Paparazzi leaped onto the edges of the runway, flashes snapping.

At the end of the hall, a woman who calls herself Rona Rivers, resplendent in a golden evening gown, awaited guests headed to the Golden Mickeys with a microphone and camera. The interviews flashed on the pair of screens next to the stage in the theater on the other side of the doors. Who are you wearing, she wants to know. Are you feeling just fabulous tonight?

Inside, the auditorium buzzed with energy as a Broadway-style show started in the tradition of Disney theatrics. One musical number led into another. Snow White crooning about her prince who will one day come, Tarzan swinging a la Cirque de Soleil, followed by a Toy Story tap dance, and more. The air dripped with Disney.

One after another, they continued, the music swelling, children applauding, parents stealing glances at the delight on their kids' faces.

And when Mickey and Minnie appeared from behind the rich, red curtain, sparkling in golden formal attire, spinning and twirling amid a whirling dervish of golden dancers, I felt a little hand tighten in mine.

I look over at Catalina, my 5-year-old. Tears are running down her cheeks. Before I can ask what's the matter, she turns to me with an impossibly wide smile.

"Daddy, these are tears of joy!" she says and wipes her eyes.

The show ends in a crescendo. Golden confetti blasts from above. Everywhere, applause.

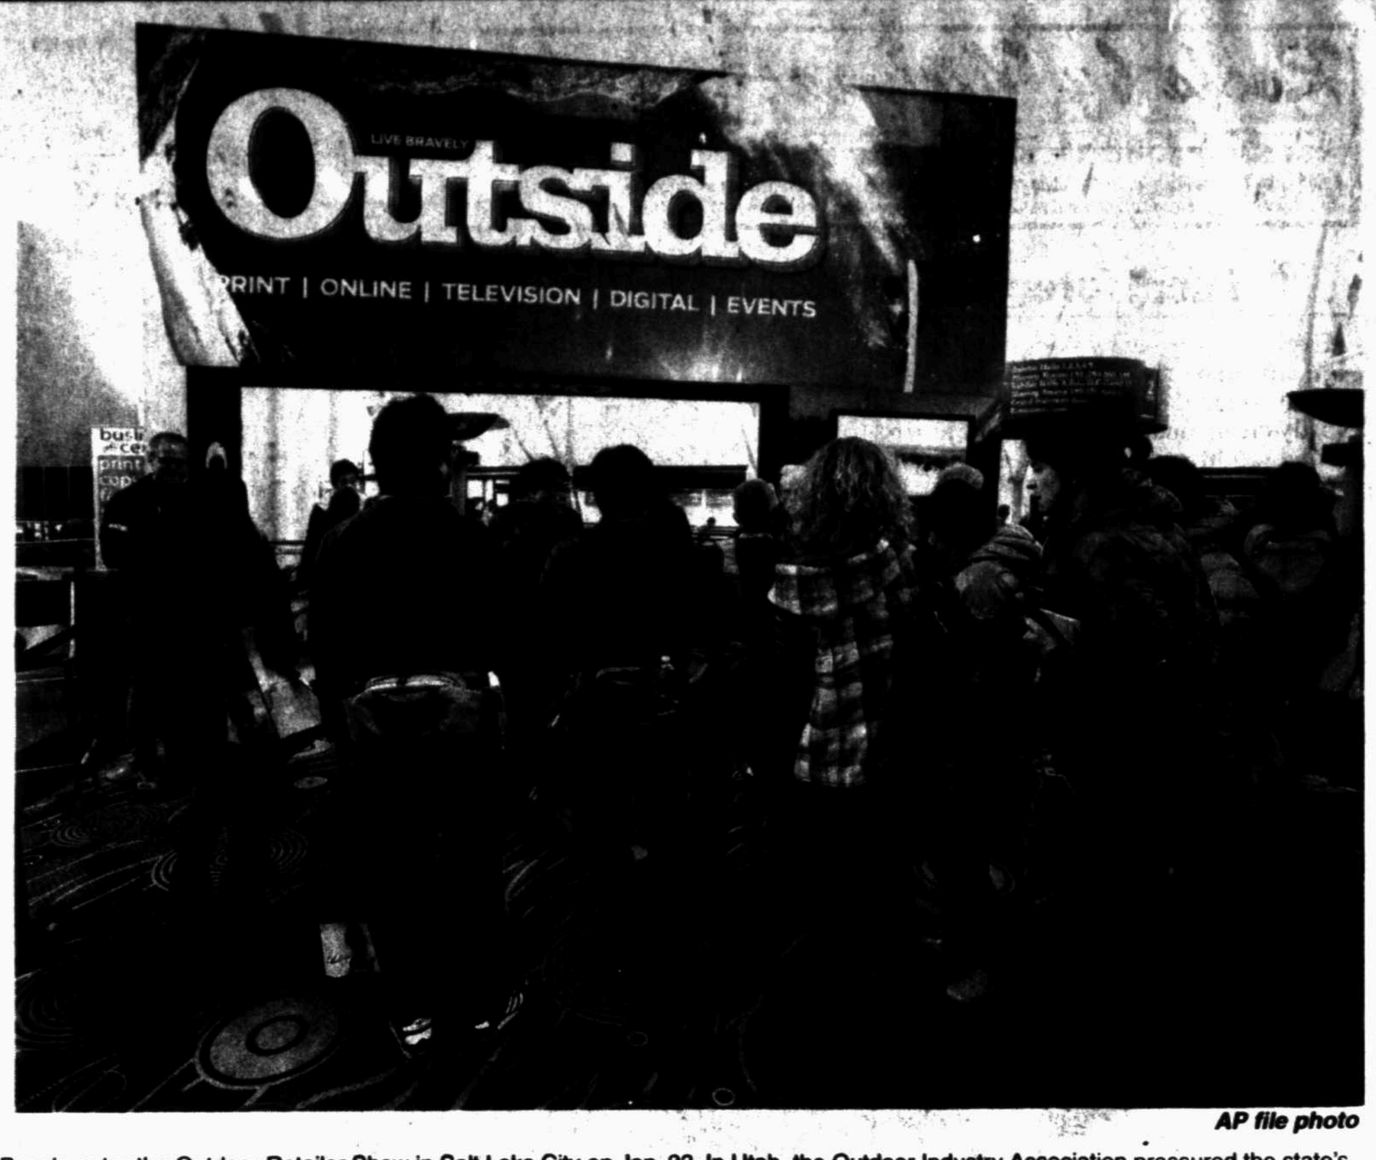

Catalina is out of her chair, clapping and spinning, reaching up toward the glinting rain, laughter — uncontrolled laughter — bursting from her little lungs.

Despite my joy at all these family fun activities, the Wonder does offer an opportunity for some alone time. The Wonder has play areas where children are secure and supervised while parents check out the spa, jazz club, coffee house, adults-only restaurant or night club. The children get a GPS tracking device and a pair of walkie-talkies that work all over the ship so the staff — or the children themselves — can reach parents wherever they are on the ship.

There is a nursery for infants and toddlers. And for children up to age 13, two play areas, where they can play video games, draw, paint, dance with Snow White, have books read to them by Belle, and choose from activities that are varied and ever-changing. My daughters came home with several glittery projects and computer-painted portraits.

On our last night, we squeezed every last bit of joy from the cruise. After dinner and another original show, the girls went off to play in the video-game lab while I sipped a Rusty Nail at the Cadillac jazz lounge. Emboldened by the knowledge that the crew lives on the ship, my oldest daughter wanted to know over our last breakfast if it's possible to buy real estate aboard the Wonder.

Thanks to the legions who love Disney, it's a thought worth pondering: Some may never want to leave this ship.

People enter the Outdoor Retailer Show in Salt Lake City on Jan. 23. In Utah, the Outdoor Industry Association pressured the state's Republican governor to treat outdoor recreation seriously by threatening to pull a lucrative trade show out of Salt Lake City. They have helped fund nonprofits that lobby for increased land preservation, sometimes butting heads with energy groups seeking to drill on federal lands.

RECREATION POLITICS

Interior pick puts outdoor industry in spotlight

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — She doesn't wear a cowboy hat favored by traditional picks for interior secretary. Sally Jewell prefers fleece and Gore-Tex jackets and wears a safety helmet when she needs it for scaling cliffs, skiing or kayaking.

Jewell

Jewell, the 57-year-old chief of Recreational Equipment Inc., represents a new face for a cabinet post more often associated with ranching or oil, gas and mining development. The fact that a mountain-climbing CEO of an outdoors company is President Barack Obama's nominee underscores a new reality in Washington and beyond: the growing influence of outdoor recreation as a political and economic force.

"It's a total game-changer — a recognition of changes in how public lands are used," said Peter Metcalf, president and CEO of Salt Lake City-based Black Diamond Inc., a maker of ski and climbing gear and apparel. "Politics in Washington have finally caught up with reality."

While past interior secretaries have included conservationists, such as former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, and allies of industry such as Reagan's first Interior Secretary James G. Watt, they always have been challenged by the competing forces that want to use the federal government's vast lands. That tension doesn't figure to ease under Jewell, who faced her first Senate hearing Thursday and is expected to be confirmed in coming weeks.

Critics complain that the outdoor industry has worked to lock up valuable lands and stymie development in the West.

Though oil and gas trade groups aren't opposing Jewell, the nomination of a woman who has a led a recreation-focused company with 128 stores in 31 states alarms some who argue that she might favor her own industry over others.

Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah, said the recreation industry is "a special interest group like any other .... They have clearly wanted their industry to have a primary position on certain pieces of land."

At Thursday's hearing, Jewell cited federal statistics showing that the Interior Department generated more than $12 billion in revenue from energy production last year, and that visitors to national parks generated an estimated $30 billion in economic activity.

"These are impressive numbers. They underscore the important balance that the Department of the Interior must maintain to ensure that our public lands and waters are managed wisely, using the best science available, to harness their economic potential while preserving their multiple uses for future generations," she said.

Jewell, who also has experience in the oil industry and as a banker, already has been tested with demands as she prepares to take over the department, which manages 780,000 square miles of public lands, including the national parks.

It wasn't long ago that the notion of the outdoors industry holding major political clout would have been difficult to imagine.

"We've always thought the outdoor sector was important. It's just getting others to recognize it that was the challenge," said Sue Rechner, chief of Confluence Watersports, a Greenville, S.C., maker of Mad River canoes and other watersports brands.

Outdoor executives acknowledge they were somewhat naive when they started in politics. They first tried to lobby members of Congress by giving ice-ax awards; that didn't cut it, said Metcalf, one of the industry's most active and passionate voices.

Industry officials said Americans spend $646 billion a year on outdoor gear and apparel, off-road vehicles and travel and services, creating 6.1 million professional and seasonal jobs. Many American brands dominate the global marketplace for outdoor equipment.

In Washington, the 4,000-member Outdoor Industry Association tripled its PAC contributions in 2012 to nearly $90,000, according to data compiled by opensecrets.org. The industry spends around $300,000 a year on lobbying, but says it didn't push for Jewell's nomination and that she earned it on her own.

In Utah, the OIA pressured the state's Republican governor to treat outdoor recreation seriously by threatening to pull a lucrative trade show out of Salt Lake City.

They have helped fund nonprofits that push for increased land preservation, sometimes butting heads with energy groups seeking to drill on federal lands.

"This is an economic engine, not just a bunch of guys trying to protect the land," said Mike Reberg, district director for Rep. Jim Matheson, D-Utah. "They created an economic perspective on why this stuff is important."

Lobbying disclosures show the OIA's leading issues are protecting wilderness lands and full funding for the Land and Water Conservation Act, which steers money from offshore oil leases to recreation programs. It has teamed up with other industry players to push for a repeal of the 1930s tariff on imported shoes.

"Our industry is often overlooked because of how diverse and broad it is. It's not a normal economic sector," said Frank Hugelmeyer, OIA's president. "We're a horizontal industry that touches many traditional economic sectors."

Beyond her executive experience, it was Jewell's work on the board of the National Parks Conservation Association and for President Barack Obama's "America's Great Outdoors Initiative" that brought her leadership to the attention of the White House.

Among the issues Jewell will need to navigate is the collision between a record-setting energy boom — which has led to sharply increased drilling over the past decade — and the desire of western communities to lure tourists and information-age workers who want to be able to play outdoors, using the gear the industry makes.

Bishop complained that REI has pushed for America's Redrock Wilderness Act, a bill that has languished in Congress for years without action because of the Utah delegation's opposition.

It also helped fund nonprofits that sued to stop the Bush administration's award of 77 oil and gas leases on Utah land in 2008. He scoffed at those who argue that the West can prosper from the recreation economy.

"Recreation is a great element, but it's only one of the elements you need," Bishop said. "It is extremely volatile. You need a good industrial sector. You need a good manufacturing sector. You need a good mining sector."

Girl fails to measure up to her own high standards

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. Basically, I don't like me. I am self-conscious about my weight, my face, my personality. I'm not pretty. I have heard so many times I should "just be myself" that I am sick of it! I don't want to be myself because I don't like myself.

All of my friends are either beautiful, witty, kind or whatever. And I am not, I guess. Please tell me what to do about it. — COMING UP SHORT IN OREGON

DEAR COMING UP SHORT: I do have a few suggestions, and the first is to stop being your own worst enemy. The more you dwell on what you think you lack, the more you will amplify those things. Find one thing you like about yourself and build from there.

Because you're self-conscious about your weight, do something about it by adopting a healthy eating and exercise plan. While you may not be a cover girl, you can be well-groomed. More important than being "witty" is to be a good listener. Remember that, and people will think you are a great conversationalist.

The more you brood about yourself, the lonelier you will become. The more you think about helping others, the less time you will have to think about yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our mid-40s and have four beautiful daughters. A boy who dated one of them has become a family friend over the past few years.

"Brett" is a nice young man and has always been helpful with our family. The problem is, Brett texts and calls my wife on a daily basis. The conversation is benign, but I can tell he has a crush on her.

I have asked my wife to stop communicating with him so often, but she insists it's "just a friendship" and nothing is going on. My point is that there IS something going on — from his side — even though she may not realize it.

We have gone round and round about this to the point of exhaustion. Should I let this go or continue to insist that their relationship be redefined? — UNEASY IN FLORIDA

DEAR UNEASY: Looking from the outside in, I suspect that your wife is enjoying all the attention she's receiving from this young man. She's in her mid-40s and it has to be flattering. This is not to imply that the communications will lead to anything more. So step back, find your sense of humor and try to be less heavy-handed until this blows over. Because it will.

DEAR ABBY: My stepfather died recently. I found out when I saw his obituary in the newspaper. It described him as a "loving husband and father," and while I know that's a fairly generic epitaph, nothing about it is true. He was an alcoholic who had several affairs while married to my mother. He also abused me and my stepsiblings physically and sexually.

It's bad enough that he died without having to face the consequences of his actions, but it kills me to know that "loving husband and father" is how our community and history will remember him now that he's gone. Is there anything I can do to get some form of the truth out there? — ANGRY IN TENNESSEE

DEAR ANGRY: Yes, there is. Just keep talking and the word will get around.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 9, 2013:

This year ideas keep popping up from all directions. At times, you will need to vanish or close down from excess communication. You might wonder how you are able to implement so many great suggestions. If you are single, you could meet someone very special to your life history. You might find that you often don't agree with this person, but you do find each other exciting. If you are attached, you know that there is another solution just around the corner. Learn to work as a team, and understand that both of you can be right with different solutions. Take time to recharge your batteries in this busy year. AQUARIUS understands you well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Your day revolves around getting together with friends. Whatever you aspire to be could become a reality today or in the near future. A misunderstanding or taking someone's comments personally would be a mistake. Tonight: You are the center of attention.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Whether you are the host of an event or simply a guest who is responsible for someone, others will count on you to do what is needed. You will move from experiencing high tension to being relaxed. Return calls and answer others' requests. Tonight: A force to be dealt with.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ Your energy and intellect work together. You might enjoy getting out of town or going to a flea market or two. You will have a better time if you socialize at the same time. Honor a need for change and more spontaneity. Tonight: Catch up on a friend's or loved one's news.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ You naturally draw others in as you create mischief. Reveal more of yourself to a new friend or partner. Understand what is happening with this seemingly demanding person. He or she only wants more time with you. Let it happen. Tonight: Paint the town red.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Others notice the twinkle in your eye, and they know you are up for a fun time. Whether an event is preplanned makes no difference, as you will add a touch of excitement. If you are single, stop and take another look at a new person. Tonight: The good times could go on and on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★ A project on hold finally gets worked on, and you will feel better about yourself as a result. Decide to carry it out to completion and see what happens. Confusion surrounds a domestic matter. Know that no one means ill. Tonight: With your favorite person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Approach a situation in a different manner. You are especially creative when you're exploring a new idea that is out of your comfort zone. You won't feel better until you do something. Confirm meeting times as well as places. Tonight: Let the good times roll.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★ You might need more quiet time at home. Whether you want to do your taxes or simply complete a project, make it OK to do just that. Know what is happening between you and someone else. Your sense of humor emerges when dealing with this person. Tonight: At home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Don't put off an overdue conversation with a neighbor or sibling any longer. Listen to news more openly. You could be slightly overwhelmed by all the people around you, calling you and looking for you. Stay spontaneous, and don't worry so much. Tonight: Say "yes" to an offer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★ Be aware of the cost of proceeding in a certain direction. You could be overwhelmed by what is happening. You don't need to respond to someone's attempt to push you. Put yourself first, and you will be a lot happier. You, too, have boundaries. Tonight: Whatever you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You can't be stopped from enjoying yourself, as you always have a host of friends nearby. A misunderstanding with a loved one could be straightened out quickly. What has happened is only a misunderstanding, and nothing more. Tonight: Sort out who, what and where.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★ You might want to placate an important individual in your life. Take stock of your situation. As a result, you might want to rethink a decision. Nothing replaces authenticity. Claim responsibility for just your side of the problem. Tonight: Vanish while you can.

Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
When my refrigerator started having problems, buying a different one from the classifieds was my first thought. My parents, on the other hand, are trying to convince me that buying a new one is the only way to go. To prove their point, they bought a new one for themselves. The first one delivered was defective. After three hours on the telephone with customer service, they got a second one delivered. This time it was the wrong model. A few more hours on the telephone got that one returned. However, now they're living out of a small dorm refrigerator because the store hauled away their old one. While they've been eating take-out and waiting for a replacement, they're still trying to convince me that buying new is better. From their example I can't see the advantages. Am I really wasting my time buying a used refrigerator? Right now, buying a new one seems like a bigger hassle.

Cash: Having a dorm-size refrigerator wouldn't be so bad if your parents had the college meal plan to go with it.

Carry: It's also a great excuse to avoid cooking and go out to dinner.

Cash: As your parents have proven by their example, buying new isn't necessarily going to save you time or money. Contrary to your parent's belief, you can find a quality used refrigerator in the classifieds.

Cash: It seems that your parents may have confused the term "used" with "old", and that's not necessarily the case. Refrigerators are common appliances that show up for sale quite often. Although some can be older, many are relatively new and up for sale as a result of newly remodeled kitchens or home purchases.

Carry: In most cases, refrigerators are sold because they no longer fit a certain décor. Buying one like that can save you considerable money.

Cash: When it comes to refrigerators though, you should look for models that are not more than a few years old. Refrigerators continue to get more energy efficient each year.

Carry: Buying a fridge that is too old could cost you more in the long run since it uses more electricity to keep things cool. You'll find that most newer models have better insulation and efficiency factors than their predecessors.

Cash: However, if you do choose to buy a used refrigerator, just be careful. Since you might have one before your parents, they may invite themselves over for dinner!

Fast Facts

Making the Grade

Choosing a new refrigerator is no easy task. According to EPA's Energy Star, there are over 2500 different models of refrigerators on the market. That's a lot of choices. However, they dwindle quickly when you look at efficiency. Only about 1500 of these models meet today's Energy Star criteria (15% better than the federal standard). The more efficient, the less choices there are. About 120 models (less than 5%) are 20% better than the federal standard. A mere 15 models (less than 1%) are 25% better than the standard.

Size Matters

Some people choose a refrigerator based on the space they have between cabinets. Others select a model by the features it offers. But what is the right size for your family? To determine the approximate number of cubic feet you will need, multiply the number of people in your household by five. For example, a family of four would need a refrigerator approximately 20 cubic feet in size. If you're the type of family that likes to buy in bulk, you might consider multiplying by six.

The Key to Dieting

When my friend Mary bought a new refrigerator, she came up with what she thought was a great idea. Ever since she put her husband on a diet, he'd sneak treats from the refrigerator when she wasn't looking. Her new plan was to put the old refrigerator in the garage with the food he wasn't allowed to eat.

When I came over to visit and saw the refrigerator in the garage, I questioned the effectiveness of her plan. "How does it help him if he knows the goodies are in here?" I asked.

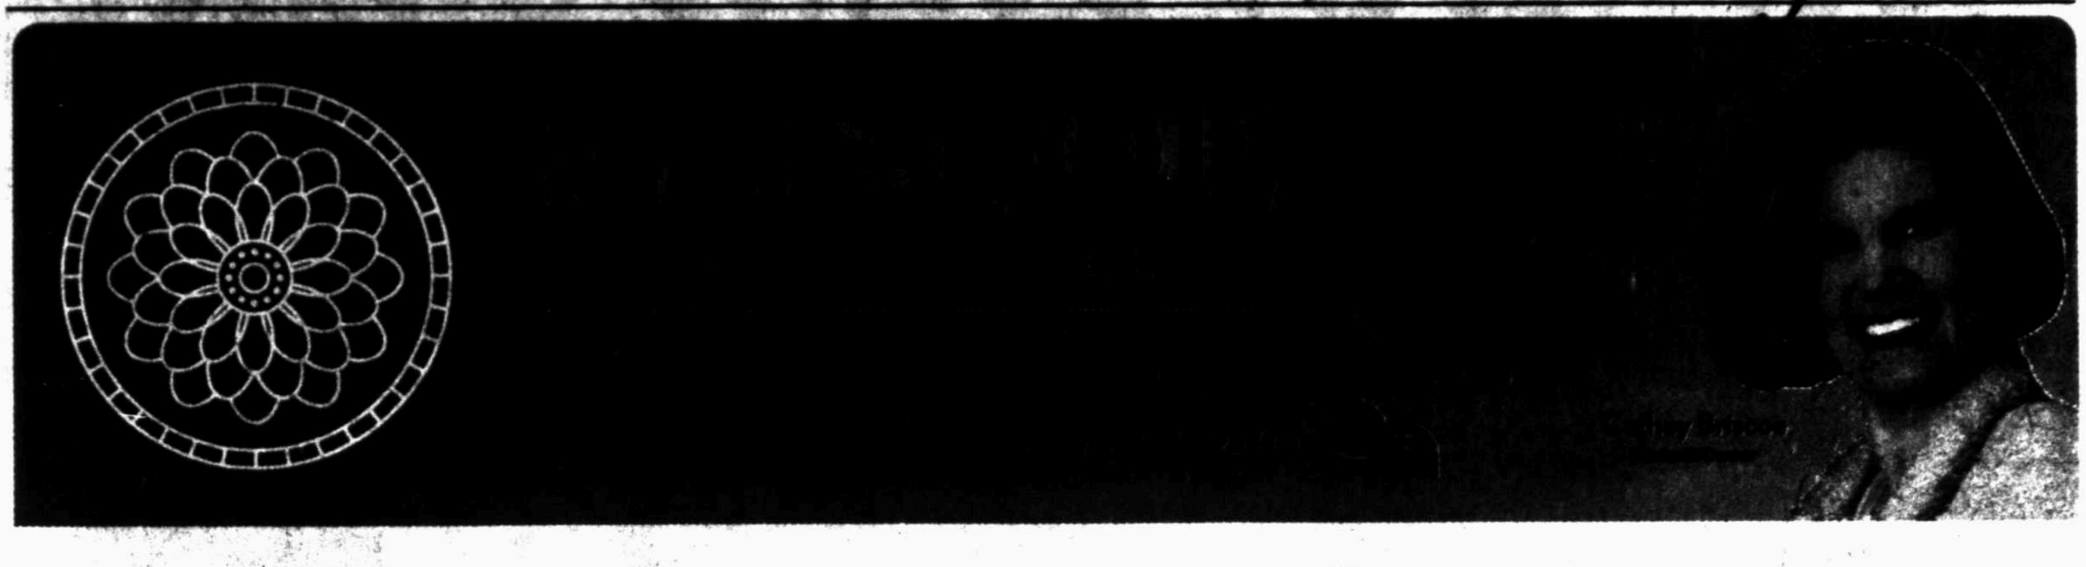

"He may know what's in there," she said showing me the padlock on the side, "but I have the only key!"

(Thanks to Stephanie J.)
