White House defends criticized Cuba policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under attack from critics who say the United States isn't getting tough enough with Cuba, the Clinton administration today defended its response to the downing of two unarmed U.S. civilian planes off the Cuban coast.

"We took additional measures yesterday which are effective and will increase the pressure on Castro's government," said Undersecretary of State Peter Tarnoff in an interview with CBS. "It's exactly what's warranted at this time."

President Clinton announced a series of actions Monday designed to retaliate against Fidel Castro's government for the incident Saturday over the Florida Straits that left four occupants of the planes missing and presumed dead. Another plane from the Cuban-American exile group Brothers to the Rescue escaped Cuban MiGs and returned safely to the United States.

Congressional Republicans said Clinton's actions are welcomed but don't go far enough.

"Castro won't exactly be shaking in his boots unless we get tougher sanctions," said Rep. Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, R-Fla., a Cuban-American who represents a heavily Cuban district in Miami.

Presidential candidate Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., declared that Clinton was "coddling Castro."

"The president has yet to understand that the only way to deal with Castro's tyranny is with real firmness and pressure," said Dole, the Senate majority leader.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said Congress "either this week or next week" would send the president legislation dramatically expanding sanctions on Cuba. He criticized the administration for not pushing more vigorously for a condemnation of Cuba from the United Nations.

"The administration needs to indicate clearly that our goal, frankly, is a free, democratic Cuba and our goal is not to find ways to accommodate Fidel," Gingrich told reporters.

Clinton halted all charter flights between the United States and Cuba and added new restrictions to Cuban diplomats' U.S. travel.

THE SDN COLUMN

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The only time some people work like a horse is when somebody rides them."

Got a call last week. Nope, they weren't wanting to sell units in an oil deal, but they were wanting to sell interest in a new car.

It was going to be a legal version of the chop shop. Many stolen or hijacked cars are taken to underground shops where the vehicle is chopped into parts and they are resold.

It wasn't called a chop shop, but the results would be the same. A $1,000 investment would buy a five percent stake in a brand new $20,000 car.

The car would then be disassembled and sold for parts. A front bumper cover, for example would sell for almost $400.

A left rear door with tinted glass, plus power locks and windows, sells for more than $1,500. And an exhaust system is another $1,000 item.

The $20,000 auto, when broken down and resold in pieces, is worth $63,000 on a piece by piece basis. In other words, there is the potential of turning a $1,000 investment into $3,150 — or more than a 300 percent return on investment.

There's only one small drawback — the uncertain market demand. Just how can one be sure anybody's gonna need a gas cap? And even if they need one, how can they know we have one for sale?

A 300 percent increase on your investment...if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

It's much like the ad which says an IBM scientist and his colleagues have discovered a way to make an object disintegrate in one place and reappear intact in another.

It sounded like the "transporter" idea used by Captain Kirk when he would say, "Beam me up, Scotty."

Actually, the claim is a bit premature, but the company says it's working on the concept. A physics professor at Maryland University was so intrigued by the ad that he contacted IBM for more information.

The professor found out the concept was nothing more than an advertising gimmick. The research department says, however, that "someday...you never know."

HISD board seats all spoken for now

Tim Dacus, a technical specialist with Sun Pipe Line, has filed to fill an unexpired term on the board.

Last week, Burton Sandefur and Tony Lambaren filed for two full terms, which are also up for election on May 4. All seats on the board are at-large.

Incumbents on the HISD board — none of whom have filed — are Milton Adams and James Rinehart, full terms, and Jay Roemisch, unexpired term.

Art Mosley

Art Mosley is promoted

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The Texas Department of Criminal Justice has named Artis B. Mosley Jr. to the No. 2 job in the agency, executive director Wayne Scott said today.

Mosley, 56, succeeds Carl Jeffries as deputy executive director of operations and logistics. Jeffries left the job in November to become division director of TDCJ programs and services.

A 12-year agency employee, Mosley has served as director of support services for the prison system, head of human resources and chief of training and security.

At that graduation, Mosley announced that WTC had been granted certification by the TDCJ for pre-service training. Since that time, WTC has trained more than 1,400 correctional officers for the prison system.

Dacus' action leaves only the Western Texas College board of trustees as the only board without a full slate of candidates in May.

As yet, no one has filed for Place 1 or Place 2 on the college district board. On Monday, founding board member Bill Wilson Jr. announced that he will not seek re-election for Place 1. Carl Williams, Place 2, has neither filed nor made an announcement.

While all other boards have a full slate of candidates, there is only one contested race among the five entities holding May elections. Vernest Tippens, seeking a fifth Place 1 term on the Snyder City Council, is facing a challenge from the Rev. Caiaphas Cain.

Running unopposed on the council are Jerry Webb, Place 2; Kenny Gambrell, Place 3; and I.E. Martin, Place 4.

Also unopposed are Snyder ISD and Ira ISD incumbents. Seeking re-election on the Snyder ISD board are Glenn Clarady, Place 1; Mark McCormick, Place 4; and Janet Stribling, Place 5. Sid Wall, Kirby Sterling and Lance Autry are unopposed incumbents running for Ira ISD board seats.

Filing runs through March 20 in all five elections.

Drought reflected at sale here

Some 57 bulls were sold at the annual National Anxiety IV Hereford Bull and Female Sale Monday in the ag annex of Scurry County Coliseum.

The bulls sold for an average price of $907, while six cow-calf pairs averaged $870.

The W.G. Gordon Ranch of Walnut Springs paid the top prize for a bull, $1,750 and it was purchased from the Summerour Ranch in Dalhart.

The top prize paid for a female was $1,000. It was purchased from Pied Pieper Farms in Hamlin by the Bryant Ranch in Midland.

"The dry weather killed us as far as prices were concerned," said David Moore of Hamlin. "Many of the producers are just 'drouthed-out' and have no place to put any more animals."

He said the grass fires throughout the state have also played havoc with the cattle industry.

Collins quitting as consultant

AUSTIN (AP) — The embattled former chief of state prisons announced today that he is stepping down from a consulting job that has become part of a state and federal investigation.

Andy Collins, who retired as executive director of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice last December, has been a consultant for VitaPro Foods Inc., since he retired.

VitaPro, a Canadian company that makes a soy-based meat substitute, hired Collins for the $1,000-a-day consulting job after he worked up a five-year, $33 million deal between the state and the company.

State and federal authorities are looking into that deal because it was negotiated without formal bidding.

Allan Polunsky, chairman of the agency board, announced last week that the state has taken legal steps to cancel the contract.

VitaPro scheduled a news conference later today to showcase its product.

"Press coverage generated by my continued consulting agreement with VitaPro distracts from the real issue of VitaPro's contract with Texas and its benefits to the state," Collins said in a statement. "I think that Texas benefits from such partnerships and did so in its arrangement with VitaPro."

Under the deal negotiated by Collins, VitaPro sends the state thousands of pounds of the meat substitute each month. The product is used in prison kitchens in Texas and surplus supplies were to be sold by the prison system to other states.

Collins said at the time the deal was completed that the state would benefit from a healthier prison population and from sales of the surplus product.

Prison officials say efforts to sell the meat substitute have largely failed, and the product is stacking up in prison storage facilities.

U S West is buying big cable company

NEW YORK (AP) — U S West is buying Continental Cablevision in a $10.8 billion deal that would make the regional phone company one of the nation's most important forces in cable television.

The deal announced today is the largest since the recent enactment of legislation that gives phone and cable companies greater authority to get into each other's businesses.

U S West is already a major investor in the cable systems controlled by Time Warner Inc., which is the nation's second-biggest cable system owner. Continental Cablevision is third.

U S West will own stakes in cable systems that have more than 16.2 million subscribers nationwide.

The U S West Media Group will pay $5.3 billion in cash and stock for all of Continental's shares. In addition, it will assume Continental's debt, which currently stands at about $5.5 billion.

'American Primitive' will debut Wednesday

Western Texas College drama department will present "American Primitive or John & Abigail," a play by William Gibson, beginning Wednesday in the Fine Arts Theatre on campus.

The play will run nightly at 8 o'clock through Saturday.

The script for "American Primitive" is based on the writings of John and Abigail Adams and takes place during the Revolutionary War.

The production is under the direction and management of the WTC drama department students. Faculty involvement has been limited to consultation.

State property taxes top $15.4 billion

AUSTIN (AP) — Property taxes levied by local government and school districts in Texas rose 4.7 percent in 1994 to $15.44 billion, the state comptroller's office reports.

However, the comptroller said, for the first time since 1987, school districts reported raising taxes at a slower rate, less than 4 percent.

"For the preceding six years, school taxes have increased at annual rates ranging from 6 (percent) to 14 percent," the report said.

The property tax remained the single largest levy, with the state sales tax running No. 2 at $9.8 billion.

A total of $35 billion in taxes of all kinds was levied for 1994 government spending.

Citing rising property taxes, Gov. George W. Bush has been looking at possible ways of replacing the school levy. The latest report shows that need, Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said Monday.

"This underscores the governor's concern that the property tax burden is too high and may be near the breaking point," Ms. Hughes said.

As for the slower growth in school taxes, she said, "Even a modest increase on top of an already big burden is overwhelming for some people."

In a preliminary analysis, a special tax study group outlined several options to Bush, including: a gross receipts tax on business revenues; a value-added tax, which is a form of indirect sales tax paid on products and services at each stage of production or distribution; and increasing or expanding the current 6.25 percent state sales tax.

Ms. Hughes said the study group should have a final report ready by mid-March.

According to the comptroller's office, which looked at the most recent data available, the largest portion of property taxes — $9 billion — was levied by school districts.

Of all taxing units, counties reported the largest percentage increase from 1993 to 1994 — 5.9 percent. Cities and special districts — including junior colleges, hospitals, utilities and flood control — showed a 5.5 percent increase.

School property taxes, levied by the 1,040 independent school districts, accounted for 58 percent of all 1994 property taxes.

Taxes by 968 cities reached nearly $2.5 billion, or 16 percent of the total, while county taxes were $2.3 billion, or 15 percent. Property taxes by special districts in 1994 topped $1.6 billion, about 10 percent of the total.

The report found that the average of school tax rates reported rose about 3 cents in 1994 to just over $1.35 per $100 of value, the same amount of increase as in 1993.

Only 26 districts had rates of less than $1 per $100 of value.

No Thanks to the Groom, Couple's Notes Are Late

by Abigail Van Buren

1996 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Where is it written that it is the bride's duty to write all the thank-you notes? Aren't wedding gifts intended to be enjoyed by both the bride and the groom? At least half of our wedding gifts came from my husband's side of the family.

Even though my husband agreed to write thank-you notes for the gifts from his friends and relatives, he kept putting it off for so long, I was embarrassed, and I finally wrote them all myself.

Please print this in your column. Many newlywed wives will thank you.

FRANK'S WIFE
IN SPRINGFIELD, VA.

DEAR WIFE: Times have changed. More newlywed wives are now fully employed outside the home.

In years gone by, the husband brought home the bacon and the wife fried it. No more. There's a new innovation, as I clearly state in my wedding booklet: "The bride and groom share the writing of thank-you notes. She writes to her friends and family, he to his."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Enraged in Bremerton, Wash.," who has been inspired to political activism by the closing of a government-sponsored food shelter in her state: Why does she assume that it's the government's responsibility to feed the hungry? Where in the Constitution does it say that? Rather, it is our duty as neighbors and citizens to help those less fortunate than ourselves.

She wanted to know what she could do to influence the government about the injustice of the closure. While voting responsibly and educating herself on the issues is always a good idea, rolling up her sleeves and pitching in to solve the problem herself is an even better idea. How about getting on the telephone to private businesses and local community members and asking for their financial support to keep it open? She could also make calls to area grocery stores, wholesalers, restaurants, etc., and ask them to regularly donate their surpluses and good-but-unsellable food to the food bank. She could ask local media to announce a food drive to help fill the shelves as well, and ask for volunteers to run it.

Many food banks across the country are run in precisely this manner — all organized and staffed by volunteers. When we volunteer our own time, it brings us closer to the problem, and we become more invested in solving it, rather than sloughing off responsibility to the government. Best of all, it's done with donated time and food that would have gone to waste, rather than spending our precious tax dollars.

EILEEN COALE,
ANNAPOLIS, MD.

DEAR EILEEN: Thank you for your helpful suggestions to implement community activism. I see your point, and it makes sense to me. However, it's not as simple as you make it seem. There are health department regulations, tax ramifications and fiduciary responsibilities that I doubt an 18-year-old would know how to handle. Perhaps those wishing to solve this nationwide problem should volunteer to work with an established charity such as a privately funded or church-sponsored food bank or service club.

Appeals court says lawsuit must end

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An appeals court, ending the threat of a federal takeover of the Edwards Aquifer, has ordered an end to a lawsuit brought by the Sierra Club against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The action by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals came Monday on the 58th day of the second-longest drought in San Antonio history. It also came on the same day the Edwards Underground Water District declared mandatory conservation measures for the first time since adopting its drought management plan in 1989.

A three-judge appeals court panel in New Orleans told Senior U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton III of Midland to end a 5-year-old endangered species lawsuit.

The appeals judges said all the remedies requested by the Sierra Club in its lawsuit have been granted, so the case should be concluded.

"I think it's a good decision and a correct one," said Russell Johnson, attorney for the San Antonio Water System. "But it sets the stage for Round Two."

Sierra Club attorney Stuart Henry said he is pleased with the suit's accomplishments getting the wildlife service to issue a plan to protect endangered species in Comal Springs and the state to create an authority to regulate pumping.

But he said more lawsuits to protect plants and animals that depend on aquifer-fed springs in New Braunfels are likely.

"If the aquifer keeps going down, and we start getting takes (deaths) of endangered species, I guess we'll have to start filing some lawsuits against San Antonio and a bunch of other pumpers," Henry said. "I don't know that we've got much choice. I hope like the dickens it rains."

Even the appeals court in its order acknowledged the possibility of more litigation, saying that if the Sierra Club wants additional relief it must file a new lawsuit.

The Sierra Club had asked and Bunton had threatened several times to impose federal pumping limits, but the appeals court on Oct. 18 ordered Bunton to hold back, pending its review of the case.

The wildlife service Feb. 14 issued its recovery plan for aquifer species. The appeals court said that was the last step needed to satisfy Bunton's May 1993 final judgment in the case.

The Texas Attorney General's Office last fall appealed to the 5th Circuit over Bunton's appointment of a monitor to oversee the aquifer. The state also objected to being billed for one-third of the monitor's cost.

The appeals court Monday agreed with Bunton's actions, but instructed him to take the "steps necessary to conclude this case promptly."

While the order apparently brings at least a temporary halt to action in federal court, the Texas Supreme Court is scheduled next month to consider whether the authority created by the state to regulate the aquifer may go to work.

Success from supposition

During the play of a bridge deal, clues flutter around the table like fireflies on a summer's night. The hard part is spotting them. Yet help is now at hand. Albert Dormer has written an excellent book, "Dormer on Deduction" (Gollancz; $16.05 p.p. from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124).

Be warned that some deals are difficult, but I think Dormer has the best writing style of any bridge author, molding the words into delightful sentences. This alone makes the book a pleasure to read.

Today's deal is one of Dormer's easiest. Against four spades, West leads the diamond ace: three, queen, two. West continues with the diamond king and another diamond. You ruff, play a trump to dummy's king, which wins, and a trump to your queen. West signaling with the heart nine. East takes your next spade play with the ace (West discarding the heart three) and switches to the heart 10. Should you finesse the queen or go up with the ace and play for the clubs to break 3-3?

Maybe you played the heart queen, thinking that a finesse is 50-50 whereas a 3-3 break will occur only about one-third of the time. True, but bridge logic is more important than percentages. East's diamond queen at trick one showed the jack. If West held the heart king, he would have underled his diamond king at trick two. East would have switched to a heart at trick three, defeating the contract. As West didn't defend like that, he cannot have the heart king.

So, take the heart finesse, draw East's last trump and claim.

Lady Tigers defeat Lubbock High by 10

It was a three run bottom of the first that propelled the Snyder High School Lady Tigers to a 13-3 defeat of Lubbock High in softball action Monday.

In the second, Snyder continued to put the runs on the scoreboard as Jody White hit a two RBI doubles with the bases loaded to give the Lady Tigers a 5-0 lead.

In the bottom of the fifth, Joanie Wemken hit a first-pitch triple to knock in White. The run gave Snyder the win by the 10-run rule, 13-3.

Snyder pitcher Amanda Huff had a no hitter going into the fourth inning. She gave up three runs on three hits, struck out four and walked three.

"This was her best pitching performance of the year," said coach Billy Hicks. "She threw the ball well and kept it in good location all game. It was good to hit the ball again after we fell kind of silent down in Austin."

White went two for two with two doubles and three RBIs, J. Wemken went one for three with a triple and two RBIs while sister Raechele Wemken had a two for two night with two RBIs. Mendy Winter had three RBIs as she went two for three with a double and a triple.

The Lady Tigers will be in action Friday in the Brownwood Tournament. They will play San Angelo Central at 2 p.m. in the first round game.

Tiger netters play in Brownfield tourney

Despite the weather conditions, the Snyder High School tennis team made a good showing in Brownfield. The tournament, originally scheduled for March 22-23, was rescheduled to last weekend.

"The wind was blowing between 40-50 mph on Friday," said coach Chad Redwine. "It was really not fun tennis, but survival. Who ever wanted to stay out and play in it was going to win."

"I was really happy with the attitude of the kids. I did not hear any excuses or complaining about having to play in the wind. They had great attitudes."

In the boys' doubles, Jason Crow and Salvador Aguirre finished in third place while Todd Hall and Brett Gibson had a 10th place finish.

Jaime Juarez had a third place finish in boys' singles. Ty Jones was eighth in the same catagory.

On the girls side, Laura Gonzales and Michelle Spencer finished fifth in doubles play. Angela Sanchez and Cynthia Fennell were 15th.

In singles play, Vicki Vargas and Lidia Rodriguez tied for 13th place.

"Jaime Juarez really stepped out and hit the ball well. He learned a lot about what it takes to win some big matches," added Redwine. "We had some big wins which will help us as far as district seeding is concerned in April."

Ashley Herrera, Anna Hanan, Calley Estes, Joel Pulattie, Nick Means and Tommy Wilson, all freshmen, played in the Odessa tournament.

"They all got beat out early in the tournament, but they learned how good some other freshmen actually are and how much work is needed to compete with the kids from the bigger schools."

"We have a ways to go and a lot of work to do. Everyone has been working hard and will get another shot at Lubbock Friday.

Lady Horns crack top 25 rankings

AUSTIN (AP) — In the last week of the regular season, the University of Texas women's basketball team managed to keep a tradition going.

Riding a 76-60 win over Texas Tech, the Lady Longhorns broke into The Associate Press Top 25 national poll for the first time this season. Texas, 17-7, moved into the 25th spot.

"We cracked it, but it's not a very big crack," Coach Jody Conradt said. "Still, it's nice to be recognized."

Texas and Tennessee are the only teams to be ranked in the AP women's poll every year since its inception in 1979.

Texas was ranked 19th in last year's preseason poll, but the Lady Longhorns dropped out after losing their first two games and never re-entered. It marked the first time Texas didn't finish a season in the poll.

UT has won seven straight games and 13 of its last 15.

Judge rules owners must add to cap

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that NFL club owners must add another $2 million per team to the salary cap next season, a decision that made the club owners unhappy.

Owners will challenge Monday's ruling by U.S. District Judge David Doty, said Greg Aiello, the NFL's director of communications.

"Judge Doty's preliminary ruling on the salary cap increase is puzzling since it rejects the judgment of independent auditors selected by both the union and management to make these calculations," Aiello said.

Aiello said owners, in challenging the ruling, will make another submission this week.

East G/T students create future homes

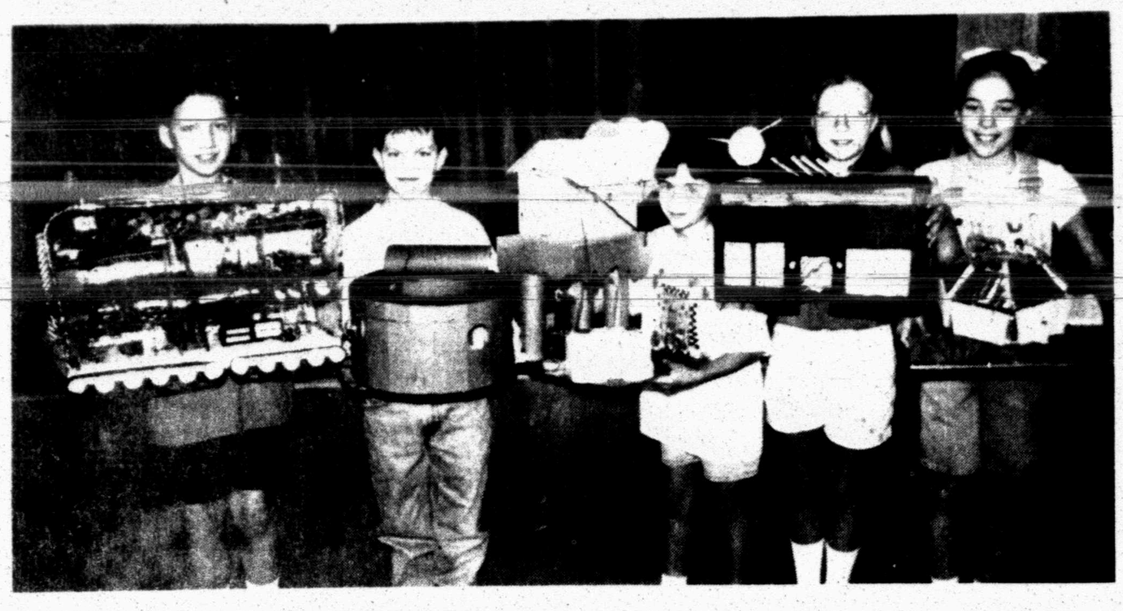

Someday people may actually live in homes like the ones designed and built by East Elementary gifted and talented students, all fourth graders.

Students in Melony Early's class were given the task of not just designing a home of the future, but making it earth friendly and using multiple recyclable materials.

Examples of students' creativity included a Lunar Home that featured a greenhouse capable of recycling both water and air.

Some homes included living, recreation and work areas which recycled air and utilized water filters.

The homes featured either a combination of wind and solar power or just solar power.

Confidant led authorities to escaped killer's location

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — When Robin Wolfe heard the voice of her best friend on the telephone last week, she began to shake.

It was Geoffrey Ward, a convict serving eight life sentences with no chance of parole for a crime spree that included raping a woman and a teen-age girl, and strangling them with the cord to his electric guitar.

"I'm out," Ward told Mrs. Wolfe, then held up the receiver so she could hear trucks rolling by.

Ward had scaled the Powhatan Correctional Center's razor-wire fences and was running wounded with a manhunt on his tail. He only wanted to know one thing: Would she help him?

"I fell on my knees and prayed," Mrs. Wolfe told The Associated Press on Monday.

Mrs. Wolfe borrowed money to drive to Virginia from her Iowa home. She packed a bag with medical supplies, and then called a friend for advice.

Then she called police to turn Ward in.

Prison authorities found him hiding in woods north of the prison last Thursday, 30 hours after he escaped into the dark, foggy countryside. He was waiting for Mrs. Wolfe, whom he had called twice, including once from crossroads near where he was caught.

"This was the hardest thing I have ever done in my life," said Mrs. Wolfe, who asked that the name of her hometown not be released. "It was head over heart, because in my heart I wanted him to get out of there — to start a new life."

A state official who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed Mrs. Wolfe's story. But neither prison authorities nor State Police would comment.

Mrs. Wolfe, who admits she was once romantically infatuated with Ward, said she feared he would be killed by police.

"I think he knows that I love him with an unconditional kind of love and that I did what was best to keep him safe, keep me out of jail and keep my family together," Mrs. Wolfe said.

How to cope with powerful emotions

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Crying very easily is embarrassing at weddings and other gatherings. Consequently, I don't attend many functions. Is there an over-the-counter medication I can take to control my emotions?

DEAR READER: Most normal people cry when they experience powerful emotions. In large part, this is a learned behavioral response. Such persons were allowed as children to cry freely or were taught that it's acceptable to weep in public. Because this response is traditionally a gender issue, girls are more apt to cry than boys. Also, elderly folks often weep more readily when deeply touched.

Because crying is to a large extent learned, it can be unlearned, as any behavior can. If you are embarrassed by your crying, I suggest that you attend more — not fewer — functions, so that you can effectively de-sensitize yourself. Over time, especially if you make an effort not to cry so readily, you will find yourself being more objective and less weepy.

As an alternative, you might consider several counseling sessions with a trained professional, such as a psychologist or trained social worker. In this therapeutic atmosphere, you can gain more control over your emotions, without becoming insensitive. Thus, you can learn ways of modifying your behavior without changing the way you feel.

I believe that this approach would be preferable to taking tranquilizers or other drugs, which can affect your thinking and personality.

This situation is analogous to anger. We all become angry at times, but we learn that striking or harming the object of our anger is not appropriate.

Therefore, we don't so much control our anger as modify our reaction to it. Similarly, you can learn that you don't always have to cry when you're happy or sad. By modifying your reactions, you will feel empowered and in better control. Thus, the act of changing your behavior has its own built-in reward.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Some of my trouble with constipation is caused by my taking pain pills for arthritis and other problems. How can I offset pain-pill effects on my digestive tract?

DEAR READER: Many analgesics cause constipation, the most notable being codeine and other narcotics. As a general rule, I advise patients who require a pain killer to use the drug with the fewest side effects.

If constipation remains a problem, the judicious use of over-the-counter laxatives may be necessary. Also, additional fluid, including hot prune juice, may help overcome constipation.

Patients with arthritis may be constipated because they are unable to exercise; such activity assists evacuation. In these instances, a mild bowel stimulant, such as Milk of Magnesia, or a stool softener (Colace and others) may restore regularity. Ask your doctor for additional advice.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Constipation and Diarrhea." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

Diabetes test said rejected by FDA

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Diabetics will have to wait to get a pain-free way to measure blood sugar while the maker of a controversial glucose test figures out how to prove it works.

Diabetes experts told the Food and Drug Administration on Monday that the Diasensor, in line to become the first non-invasive glucose test, must be studied more before it can be sold. They urged that research be done quickly.

The Diasensor "is certainly the hope for the future," said panelist Dr. Joann Boughman of the University of Maryland. "But the future is not here today."

Dozens of diabetics who pleaded with the FDA panel to let them buy the machine were bitterly disappointed.

"You know nothing about this," Gail D'Vortez of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., shouted at the panelists as they outlined their concerns about the Diasensor.

The panelists said they were moved by the pleas, but insisted diabetics deserved better evidence than manufacturer Biocontrol Technology Inc. provided that the machine works. The company studied 23 people for a month, but the Diasensor was sensitive enough to test just eight of them accurately at least half the time.

"I will apologize to every diabetes patient ... in this room that I cannot be more enthusiastic," said panel chairman Dr. Arthur Karmen of Albert Einstein College of Medicine. "But hopefully what you want to get is the right answer" from a diabetes test.

The FDA is not bound by advisory panel decisions but usually follows them, and FDA medical device chief Dr. Susan Alpert immediately asked Biocontrol to meet with her this week to figure out how to proceed.

There are some 16 million diabetics in the United States. Their bodies cannot regulate glucose in the bloodstream — levels too high can cause organ damage and death, while levels too low can cause fainting as the brain doesn't receive enough energy.

Diabetics must prick their fingers several times a day to draw blood and determine when they need medication. But 70 percent don't test themselves even once a day, putting them at risk for serious complications.

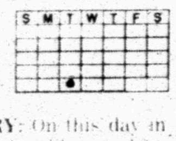

The Diasensor uses military technology that detects heat-seeking missiles to read a diabetic's glucose levels when the patient simply lays an arm on the machine. Infrared light is reflected through the patient's arm and measured by a sensor that recognizes how far away from his or her ideal glucose level the blood currently is.

But for unknown reasons, the Diasensor doesn't work for everyone. Biocontrol could only get accurate readings at least half the time for eight of the 23 patients it studied.

Biocontrol said its solution is to require that every patient prescribed a Diasensor undergo strict testing for a month, and the company will only sell the $7,000 machine to the ones for whom it will work best.

Current trends call for more unusual, hipper grave stones

Hipper headstones are letting today's dearly departed express themselves with immortal etchings that test the bounds of dignity: dancing elephants, dice, golf clubs and even beer cans with the epitaph, "I did it my way."

"When someone thinks something is wonderful and beautiful, it may be — in their mind," said Donald Kenney, director of cemeteries for the Archdiocese of Boston. "But someone else may be mortified to see a Schlitz beer can on a headstone."

With the refinement of etching during the past two decades, including the use of lasers and the addition of color, the possibilities for headstone designs have allowed for more than just crosses and flowers.

Yves Porier has been making markers in the Boston suburb of Quincy for 15 years, etching everything from marijuana cigarettes to a monument shaped like a poker hand, a royal flush, with two granite dice at the base.

"Obviously the man was a gambler," he said. "There are always families that would like something that pertains to how one lived."

Porier recently made a marker for a man that included his date of birth, date of death and, "Never Saw The Red Sox Win A World Series."

Juxtapositions between the religious and the secular are inevitable. On a headstone in Malden, words from the Scriptures are side-by-side with the motivational mantra: "No Guts, No Glory, Go For It."

The trend has not been greeted as good news from directors of cemeteries seeking to preserve a more subdued, traditional atmosphere.

"It makes all of my elder statesmen tremble," said Bruce Schlossberg, of the Jewish Cemetery Association.

For Schlossberg, the biggest problem presented by modern technology is the request that faces of the dead be etched into the stone. In Jewish tradition, images of the deceased are not put on headstones.

As for requests for farm and home scenes, and unusually shaped stones, Schlossberg said he tries "to bend over backwards to let them do what they want."

"I think it adds to the texture and integrity of the cemetery," he said. "Unfortunately, traditionalists don't see it that way."

NASA seeks cause of satellite's failure

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A radio signal sent today from a doomed satellite showed that its computer and two gyroscopes had stopped working, surprising ground controllers looking for clues into why the spacecraft had broken away from space shuttle Columbia.

The slender, 12-mile tether linking the shuttle and its half-ton, $400 million satellite broke Sunday night and the satellite quickly slipped into the black void of space, the miles of cord spiraling behind.

Hoping to gather clues on what went wrong, ground controllers at Johnson Space Center used a radio command to switch on a few science instruments and other systems on the lost satellite as it flew over Houston late this morning.

There were some surprises: The on-board computer and two of the four gyroscopes were not working, and both thrusters mysteriously had opened and spewed out nitrogen gas. It was unclear whether there was any connection between these problems and Sunday's break of the tether.

"There has been an event on the satellite that we do not understand yet," Mission Control said.

"Everybody is huddled over the data and trying to figure out what it means, because it's just data at this point," said NASA spokesman Dave Drachlis.

The U.S.-Italian satellite has enough battery power to allow communication for another one or two days. After that, it will be space junk and will probably burn up in the atmosphere within a month.

The shuttle's disappointed crew members turned today to the other half of their cargo.

Experiments with protein crystals, metals, fire and other materials will take up most of the astronauts' time until they return to Earth late next week.

The astronauts couldn't hide their disappointment at the fate of the tethered satellite but chalked it up to experience.

"I don't want to try to pretend that we're not pretty bitterly disappointed," said Jeffrey Hoffman. "But nevertheless, human lifetimes are short in the big scheme of things, and hopefully these dreams will someday come true."

Scientists had hoped the tethered satellite would yield valuable electricity when dragged by a spaceship through Earth's magnetic field. The electricity could be used for space stations and tethers might even be able to lower packages to Earth, they said.

Before the break, part of the theory had proved true. The metal ball and tether generated up to 3,500 volts. The future of tether technology suddenly appears very much in doubt.

Shuttle commander Andrew Allen said the idea deserves further consideration despite the accident.

Prosecutors don't have to let defense witness exhumation

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The judge in the federal building bombing case refused today to order prosecutors to let the defense be present when the body of one of the victims is exhumed.

U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch considered the request at the start of a two-day pre-trial hearing for defendants Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols.

After the exhumation issue was considered, Nichols attorney Michael Tigar began motions challenging the federal murder and conspiracy indictment on procedural grounds. Tigar maintains that the anti-terrorism statute under which McVeigh and Nichols are charged does not contain a sufficient intent requirement to carry the death penalty.

The defense also maintains that the indictments should be dismissed because of prosecutorial misconduct and because one grand juror violated his secrecy oath by talking to a reporter.

The exhumation issue involved the body of Lakesha Levy, who is buried in New Orleans. She is to be exhumed because investigators believe she was buried with a severed leg that belongs to someone else. A separate leg now determined to be Mrs. Levy's has been the subject of months of investigation.

Defense attorneys wanted to be present during the exhumation to monitor government investigators. Prosecutors said Mrs. Levy's family did not want the defense present.

The judge moved the case last week to his home court in Denver. The hearing today and Wednesday had already been scheduled for Oklahoma City before he handed down that ruling.

"Doe" was the mystery suspect who authorities believe helped McVeigh rent the truck that carried the 4,800-pound bomb used to blow up the building.

A widely circulated FBI sketch released after the April 19 bombing proved to be a false lead: It was of an innocent Army private who had visited the rental agency.

McVeigh lawyer Stephen Jones, in a motion filed in October, said some grand jurors, convinced there was a larger conspiracy, wanted to question the FBI sketch artist but prosecutors denied their request.

The defense also accuses the prosecution of a host of constitutional and procedural violations in the preparation of the indictment.

Prosecutors deny the allegations and maintain the grand juror's interview with Evansville, Ind.-based "Media Bypass" is irrelevant.

McVeigh and Nichols are the only ones charged in the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

Both men could face the death penalty if convicted under a federal anti-terrorism law.

Houston man claims check

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston man has claimed his half of Saturday's Lotto Texas jackpot, receiving a lump sum payment of $1 million.

Roque Silva requested minimal publicity, the Texas Lottery Commission said Monday.

The jackpot had been estimated at $4 million. That figure assumed that the state would buy an annuity to pay off — over 20 years — one winner, who would actually would have received about $3.5 million with interest included, said commission spokesman Keith Elkins.

Because there were two winners, each prize is under $2 million. When prizes are under $2 million, the state pays each a lump sum rather than buying an annuity.

The second winning ticket was purchased at Ramey Market in Fort Worth. The winner has not come forward.

The estimated jackpot for Wednesday's Lotto Texas drawing again is $4 million.

Four people taken to jail

Four people were arrested Monday, including three on outstanding warrants.

A 25-year-old male was arrested at 2:07 p.m. on a city warrant of making alcohol available to a minor and county warrants for possession of marijuana and motion to revoke probation.

Two people were arrested on outstanding warrants from Williamson County. Arrested at 3:15 p.m. were a 24-year-old male and a 19-year-old female on warrants to revoke probation on Class B theft charges.

At 9:21 p.m., DPS troopers arrested a 24-year-old female on outstanding county warrants for speeding and no liability insurance out of Mitchell County and a motion to revoke probation warrant out of Tarrant County for Class B theft.

A 34-year-old male was arrested at 11:37 p.m. for public intoxication and evading arrest.

In other activity, an officer was requested at 9:08 a.m. in reference to a 14-year-old juvenile leaving home Friday and not returning home by Monday. An offense report was submitted and the youth was located shortly thereafter.

A minor accident was reported at 9:32 a.m. in the 4400 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1989 Plymouth driven by Christopher Mills of 1376 N. Ave. R and a 1989 Cadillac driven by Patsy Weems of 2508 48th St.

At 11:30 a.m., a person notified the sheriff's office that he had found three boxes of Flexiflo Easy-Feed Enternal Nutrition Bags some eight miles south of Snyder on Highway 208.

An officer was requested at Snyder High School at 2:45 p.m. in reference to two subjects fighting at the school. An offense report for disorderly conduct was submitted.

$200,000 said added to victim's travel fund

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department set aside $200,000 today to augment efforts by Oklahoma and the United Way to help victims of last year's Oklahoma City bombing travel to Denver to observe the trial.

"We want to be sure that victims can exercise their right to attend court proceedings," Attorney General Janet Reno said in a statement announcing the federal funding.

At the same time in Oklahoma City, Gov. Frank Keating announced the establishment of a Victims and Survivors Travel Fund. The fund will be administered by the United Way in Oklahoma City and will receive private contributions from around the country to help victims attend the proceedings in Denver, which is 500 miles by air from Oklahoma City.

The federal government is barred by law from accepting private contributions for this purpose.

Reno said the federal effort, much larger than any ever undertaken by Justice's Office for Victims of Crime, would meet the government's responsibilities under the Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1990. That federal law requires the government to make its best efforts to ensure that victims of crime can attend all public proceedings in the trials of their assailants.

Earlier this month, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch moved the trial of Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols from Oklahoma to Denver to ensure that an unbiased jury could be selected. The two men are charged with the April 19, 1995, bombing of a federal building in Oklahoma City that killed 169 people and injured more than 500.

Reno said the federal funding also would support emergency needs such as temporary housing and crisis counseling.

Hospital suit seeks to disconnect baby

NEW YORK (AP) — The parents of a brain-dead baby who doctors suspect was abused are fighting a hospital's attempts to disconnect her from life support.

"We believe there is still life in her body," Lois Scoon, mother of 5-month-old Mariah Scoon, said Monday.

Mariah was declared brain dead last Thursday, three days after she was taken to Long Island Jewish Medical Center with a severe brain hemorrhage.

The district attorney's office is investigating what caused the injury; the Scoons say they did not abuse their baby. No charges have been filed.

Lawyers for the hospital petitioned a court Monday to remove Mariah from the ventilator that is keeping her alive, saying there is no possibility she will recover. State Supreme Court Justice John A. Milano ordered the Scoons to respond by Wednesday.

The Scoons oppose disconnecting the life support.

"We're talking about a child's life," Mrs. Scoon said. "I think we should be afforded the opportunity for a second opinion, a third opinion.

The Scoons said they spent $14,000 on fertility treatments to conceive Mariah.

Ford recalling 4 1996 model vehicles

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. announced Monday a recall of about 92,000 of its 1996 model Taurus, Mercury Sable, Thunderbird and Mercury Cougar vehicles.

About 81,300 Taurus and Mercury Sable cars are being recalled because of an electrical switch that may have been damaged during production.

The damaged switch in the low fluid indicator system may cause the brake warning light to remain on despite the actual brake fluid level, or may prevent the light from illuminating if the brake fluid level is low.

Ford said the problem would not affect the cars' braking capabilities.

The automaker also said about 10,900 1996 Thunderbirds and Mercury Cougars are being recalled because of a possible heater-defroster system problem.

In certain cars, a malfunctioning semiautomatic temperature control module may cause erratic or loss of blower operation resulting in the defroster not clearing the windshield.

The automaker said it is notifying affected owners by mail to return their vehicles to dealers for inspections.
