City Council member questions value of funding Chamber of Commerce

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Growing concern and frustration about the future of Midland's economy has prompted a re-examination of the city's funding for local chambers of commerce.

Midland City Council member Lee Wood at a city budget meeting Monday suggested the city's funding for the chambers might not be a worthwhile investment.

"We're not getting the biggest bang for our buck," said Council member Lee Wood. "We're dividing all this money up and it's going nowhere. Next year, maybe we should think of holding onto it. What we're doing now is not working. It's time for some radical changes."

This past year the city of Midland has contributed $234,000 to the economic development arm of the Midland Chamber of Commerce. The Hispanic Chamber of Commerce this year received $90,000 from the city, said David Diaz, executive director of the Hispanic Chamber.

There were no representatives from the Midland Chamber or Hispanic Chamber at the city's Monday meeting.

'We're not getting the biggest bang for our buck ... . What we're doing now is not working. It's time for some radical changes.'
— Midland City Council member Lee Wood

Wood said if the city kept the money it contributes to the Midland Chamber and Hispanic Chamber, it could develop a nest egg that would be used to offer incentives to lure businesses to Midland. He suggested the money could accompany any future growth fund created by the city.

In the coming weeks, council members will have to decide whether they want to adopt a "community growth fund," an economic development tool to be built up annually with $300,000 contributions from the reserves in the city's water and sewer fund.

"This isn't a knock on the Chamber, or the Hispanic Chamber," Wood said. "But what we're doing just isn't working. What I hear from the public is that they're not happy either."

City Council member LuAnn Morgan, a former board member of both the Midland Chamber and Hispanic Chamber, warned Wood that cutting off funding to the chambers of commerce may take Midland out of the economic development game.

"You've got to get your foot in the door with these companies," Ms. Morgan argued.

"If that's all we get, then what's the point?" Wood asked.

"It's better than nothing," Ms. Morgan answered.

Mayor Bobby Burns recognized Wood's concern.

"Lee's point needs to be discussed," Burns said. "But, I don't know how I could put a zero (zero dollars) for the chamber."

White House wants to tap oil reserves

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Trying to head off a repeat of last winter's heating oil crisis, President Clinton Monday said he would exchange crude oil from the national reserve for 2 million barrels of heating oil to create a reserve in the Northeastn United States.

It is expected to take about 90 days to create the supply.

"Winter may seem far off on this hot day, but if we don't do something now, reserve stocks of heating oil may not be in place before the cold weather comes," Clinton told reporters. "The action I take today will leave us far better prepared to face the winter months."

The Energy Department will trade the crude oil from the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve for home heating oil stocks and interim storage facilities in the Northeast. Clinton said he wants Congress to authorize a permanent heating oil reserve.

"The government has no business taking oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve or creating a heating oil reserve," said Morris Burns, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "That should be the function of private industry."

There is currently 5,500 billion cubic feet of natural gas in storage around the United States, all of it put there by natural gas utilities and not government. Burns said if Texas were to suddenly come up short of natural gas this winter and did not have enough to heat homes the federal government would not rush to Texas and create gas storage. "And they shouldn't," said Burns.

The Energy Department said it will offer the crude oil exchange through an arm of the Defense Department that procures petroleum products for the nation's military. Companies that want to participate must provide for both the heating oil and sufficient storage tank capacity in the Northeast.

"Clearly, the market is failing to supply us with adequate heating oil supplies, but that doesn't mean the government will be any better," said Bill O'Grady, director of fundamental futures research at A.G. Edwards & Sons in St. Louis. Low heating oil inventories and extreme cold weather in 1999 is blamed for doubling of heating oil prices from $1 the previous year to $2. The present price of heating oil is $1.10 only slightly higher than 1998 and well below 1999.

Clinton

O'Grady said the fundamental problem is a lack of refining facilities in the United States. According to one economic newsletter, U.S. refineries are running wide open in an effort to meet demand, but barely keeping even.

"We have not added any significant refining capacity in 20 years," he said. "No one wants one of these refineries in their neighborhood." U.S. refining capacity has shrunk radically in the past five years as a result of environmental laws that made many refineries uneconomical to operate. In the meantime, the increase of petroleum products from foreign refineries has increased.

Painter asks commissioners for 10 percent pay raise for deputies

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, flanked by an entourage that included his chief deputy, two captains, five lieutenants, his senior sergeant and members of the administrative staff, was upfront about his business with the Commissioners' Court.

"First and foremost, we are asking for a 10 percent pay raise," Painter said at the onset of his budget hearing with the Commissioners' Court on Monday afternoon.

There are 167 men and women employed in the sheriff's department representing an annual payroll of $6 million.

"I understand there is only so much money to go around," he said.

Painter also asked for more equipment, including almost $1 million for a new radio-communications system to replace a 25-year-old system. The old system suffers from transmission "dead areas," which the sheriff contends effectively could endanger lives

Commissioner questions constable signs on private cars used on duty

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Can a constable, not provided with an official patrol car, place Midland County constable markings and a Texas star emblem on his personal vehicle and go about official business?

Midland County Commissioner Louisa Valencia has questioned that practice.

And County Attorney Russell Malm is searching for an answer in Texas Attorney General opinions.

But Precinct 2 Constable Charles "Choc" Harris said that "the answer is simply 'yes' because they (commissioners) are paying mileage (at 28 cents per mile)" for the four constables to patrol and serve Justice Court documents.

"I know of 73 counties that are doing it right now," Harris, 48, said on Monday after Mrs. Valencia questioned the signs on his patrol car.

Mrs. Valencia said that she had "read something" about "county emblems on private cars" and wanted to know whether they were legal.

In researching Texas Attorney General's opinions, Malm said that "I haven't found anything that addresses it one way or another ... yea or nay. I'm going to keep looking."

However, Malm said that "an elected official cannot put his or her name on county-owned property."

OIL: White House to tap reserves

was just now beginning to reap the consequences of a failed environmental policy that had made it uneconomical for refiners to operate in the United States. He also noted that U.S. refiners and the entire industry, and did not carry high inventories. "Refining margins in the U.S. are extremely slim."

Burns called the heating oil reserve purely a political ploy to try and help Vice President Al Gore in the polls. "He's just trying to appease those in the Northeast who are upset by high gasoline prices."

Castle said Clinton was just "grasping at straws in an effort to appease Northeast voters. To me it doesn't sound an idea that is well thought out."

While Clinton is taking the credit for the heating oil reserve, the notion of a heating oil reserve for the Northeast was first broached by a group of Texas oil and gas associations, meeting last year in Washington D.C. "The oil and gas associations never got around to discussing details for the reserve and it certainly wasn't intended that the government get involved in fuel oil shortage in any way."

SHERIFF: Painter asks for 10 percent for staff and safety.

"It's high dollar," he said. "I understand that."

The sheriff and his aides asked for:

- An additional lieutenant position;
- 10 new patrol cars;
- An inmate classifications officer;
- And $20,000 in added fuel costs due to rising petroleum prices.

Detentions Capt. Richard Sexton told the commissioners the county jail system is in dire straits.

"We are just getting killed by turnovers (in personnel)," Sexton said. He cited the resignations of jailers, including one who is earning more money as a Texas Department of Public Safety dispatcher than as a jailer.

In reviewing the sheriff's proposed budget for Fiscal Year 2001, County Judge Bill Morrow noted that the sheriff's proposals were $2 million to $3 million more than his current budget of approximately $7 million. The almost 3 percent increase in the countywide tax base to $4.7 billion would bring in far less than $1 million in additional revenue. Sales tax receipts have shown a recovery in recent months, but Morrow suggested that it wouldn't be enough to make up the difference without raising taxes.

"It's still tight," said Morrow, who also noted that Midland citizens in the Vision 2000 community think-tank meetings had suggested more cooperation between Midland city and county functions and particularly unity in police-sheriff work. Such unity, which he suggested might be cost-effective, "is not going to happen anytime soon."

The Commissioners' Court controls the county's general fund that exceeded $21 million in FY 2000.

While Painter sought a 10 percent pay raise for his people, judges in the Midland Judicial District used their statutory powers to give "modest cost-of-living raises — 4 percent —" to their bailiffs and court reporters, noted 142nd Texas District Court Judge George "Jody" Gilles.

Their salaries, like that of the appointed county auditor, are set by statute by the district judges.

Morrow, the presiding officer of the Commissioners' Court and the county's chief fiscal officer, and the commissioners "are looking real hard at trying to find money to give a raise" to the 400-plus Midland County employees, Gilles said.

However, Gilles said than "any raise that might be forthcoming" for the judges' court coordinators, like those of other county employees not including elected officials, would be decided by the Commissioners' Court.

District Clerk Vivian Wood recommended a 5 percent raise for her 24 deputies.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia said that she is "hoping that we can do at least a 3 percent across-the-board" pay raise. "It's not a promise.

"I'm trying to do the very best I can with what I've got," Ms. Wood said. "And I am concerned about my employees. It's getting serious. We need to keep people (by offering more pay). We need to keep our experienced help."

Commissioner Randy Prude had asked the sheriff and his contingency what would be their priority: more pay, more equipment, or more people.

Promptly, the consensus was "more pay."

"The (Commissioners') Court," Prude said, "wants pay raises (for the county employees) more than anything else."

CHAMBER: Council member suggests cutting funds of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, stood by continued financial support for the chambers.

"The city is getting a lot for its money, but the city isn't allocating enough money (to the Midland chamber)," Canon said. "I've seen the chamber actively involved in recruiting businesses to town. They mustered all the resources they could. In the end this economic development sales tax beats us and the business goes to Amarillo or some other city that has an economic development sales tax."

In both 1992 and 1997 Midland voters voted against the adoption of a sales tax increase for the purpose of economic development.

Canon said although the Midland Chamber of Commerce has failed to attract new businesses to town its success has been in retaining those businesses that have considered leaving.

Chambers argue more money needed for economic development

In an interview Monday afternoon, Dennis Clayton, economic development manager for the Midland Chamber, said he, his assistant, Donna Johnson, and Midland Chamber President and CEO Marvin Wynn, have worked efficiently in retaining businesses, with the limited funding available.

The annual operating budget for economic development at the Midland Chamber is roughly $330,000.

Clayton said the Midland Chamber does all it can to retain and attract businesses with funds available.

"We have a very active retention, expansion and visitation program," Clayton said. "We have a database on existing businesses. We contact businesses, let them know we know they're out there. We find out how business is and how we can help them. We made 64 of those visits this fiscal year and 170 last year."

Clayton said more money would be needed to more actively pursue companies to move to Midland. "We spend pennies compared to what others spend on economic development," Clayton said.

David Diaz, executive director of the Hispanic Chamber, recognized Wood's concern about economic development but said until Midland voters support the creation of an economic development sales tax, Midland may never truly diversify its economy.

"Our community as a whole is somewhat at a disadvantage without some sort of economic development fund to attract more industry," Diaz said. "That's probably the major obstacle. We're wanting to play major league baseball with other cities that have an ED fund but we just can't compete."

Diaz added that he supports the creation of the community growth fund, but said that would only be a minor piece of a much larger puzzle.

"We need something now to try to attract new industry. If we continue to wait and hope someday that we will have economic development we'll fall behind the rest of the state. And, we're behind as it is already."

In fiscal year 1998-1999 Clayton said Midland missed out on attracting 350 new jobs to Midland when Home Warranty Customer Service Center chose Odessa instead, thanks to $1 million in cash incentives to paid to the company by Odessa. Midland offered no incentives because it didn't have the funds.

Also in 1998-1999 the Southwestern Bell Customer Service Center moved 200 jobs to Odessa because the company would only consider those cities with an economic development sales tax.

According to Clayton there are 2.5 employees working in economic development at the Midland Chamber. They include Dennis Clayton, who earns $60,000 a year; Marvin Wynn, president and CEO of the Midland Chamber, who gets half of his $100,000 salary from the economic development budget; and Administrative Assistant Donna Johnson, who makes $22,000.

The rest of the $330,000 budget pays for benefits, marketing costs, rent, postage, printing, telephone, travel, limited advertising and research.

The future

Canon suggested that all community leaders sit down and discuss the future of economic development to lay a road map for the city's future.

"We've never sat down and had a community plan for economic development," Canon said. "I know there is a lot of frustration but I feel we're right on the cusp to step out and do something."

Wood said he's heard that tune from various city leaders each of the four years he has served on council. "We can't continue to base our city on a declining asset," Wood said. "That's just suicide."

Wood suggested the city only needed one chamber of commerce. "It's time to put the divide behind us where we have the white chamber, the Hispanic chamber and a black chamber," he said.

"I agree 100 percent," Canon said. "It would be wonderful if we could just have one chamber .... Now is not the time to overact. It's time to do some soul searching. What got us to this point? How can we go from the talk to the walk? If we don't want to be in economic development then maybe we shouldn't spend any money at all.

"If they community doesn't want to be involved in that process maybe we are wasting our money .... I would hate to pull the rug out from under them (the Midland Chamber) without any warning," Canon concluded.

"I'm not saying pull the rug out this year," Wood said.

Council member James M. Bradford suggested the City Council speak with the Midland Chamber and Hispanic Chamber one on one.

Burns agreed.

"I think we should talk to them one on one," Burns said. "This is very much a team effort. It's not our job to tell the chamber what to do. It's our responsibility to allot the peoples' money as efficiently as we can."

The Reporter-Telegram requested records for the past 10 years showing how much money the city has given to both the Midland Chamber and Hispanic Chamber. Public Information Officer Tina Jauz said city employees were too busy preparing the city budget to fill the request for the information on Monday.

CONSTABLE: Commissioner questions decal use

(From 1A)

"I was just asking," Mrs. Valencia said of her inquiry.

Harris noted that he had purchased a 1995 Ford Crown Victoria with a "police package" and placed magnetic signs on the car, which he said may cost $8,000 to $15,000 used.

"It's fully equipped," Harris said, and has sirens, police lights, radio, and radar.

Harris noted that Precinct 3 Constable Angel Hernandez and Precinct 1 Constable Gene Smith have constable signs on their pickup trucks used in their law enforcement work.

Precinct 4 Constable Jack Swan, who is in his final year in office, does not use any constable signs on his vehicle, Harris said.

"We believe in marking them ... for safety, for education of the public," Harris said. "It has been totaling legal, because it has been practiced in Pecos County, Reeves County, Collin County, Montgomery County, Lubbock County, and Harris County," which takes in Houston.

Harris noted that the Commissioners' Court furnishes vehicles to other law-enforcement agencies, including the Sheriff's Office and the District Attorney's Office.

With constable signs on his private patrol car, Harris noted that the citizens would know that not any "Tom, Dick or Harry (was) pulling a vehicle over.

"They know from the decals ... and the glow at night that it is a law- enforcement vehicle. It is mandatory. It is just courtesy, good policy," Harris said, and is recommended by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

LULAC upset with school board's handling of racism allegations

LUBBOCK (AP) — Some parents and representatives of the League of United Latin American Citizens questioned a West Texas school board Monday night for not firing a secondary agriculture science teacher accused of making remarks demeaning of Hispanics and of smoking and drinking on school trips.

School board members assured residents of Hart that if Jim Tucker makes any other statements about "damn Mexicans," he will be out of a job at the school district, which is 70 miles northwest of Lubbock.

Mickey Mendoza, the mother of five children, began crying when she addressed the board.

"I know I'm a crybaby, but I hate it when you don't defend our kids," she said, according to a story for Tuesday's editions of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "We don't want him around."

During last month's school board meeting, a teacher told board members that Tucker told him he wanted to schedule early morning classes to "keep out the damn Mexicans." He was also accused of making racial jokes in class and of drinking alcohol on school trips.

School board member Harold Bob Bennett said Tucker admitted only to making the comment about the "damn Mexicans."

Tucker did not attend Monday's meeting. He could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press.

Orangemen stage mass demonstrations, force Belfast to close

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant hard-liners angry over restrictions on their traditional July parades mounted mass street protests Monday, forcing shops to close early and inspiring more violence across Northern Ireland.

Despite calls for peaceful protests by the leaders of the Orange Order brotherhood, trouble broke out within minutes in Belfast and other towns.

Along the so-called "peace line," a network of fences and walls separating British Protestant and Irish Catholic communities in west Belfast, youths on both sides traded projectile greetings of bottles and rocks.

Twenty-five miles to the southwest in Lurgan, riot police intervened to prevent Protestants from walking into the Catholic side of the town, among the most bitterly polarized in Northern Ireland.

And in neighboring Portadown, the mostly Protestant town at the center of debate over Orange Order parades, riot police armed with shields, clubs and attack dogs pushed demonstrators out of an intersection. The crowd responded by pelting police with rocks and bottles and torching a stolen car.

Business leaders in Belfast, Portadown and several smaller towns advised shops to close an hour before the protests to allow workers enough time to get away. Almost everyone followed the advice, as normally bustling shopping precincts became ghost towns by 4 p.m.

The business leaders condemned Orange tactics, saying the Protestant fraternal group was placing its own disputed right to march past hostile Catholic neighborhoods above everyone else's rights.

"Most businessmen didn't want to close their premises, and certainly do not support what the Orangemen are doing, but they had a duty to ensure that their staff could get home safely," said Bill Jeffrey, chairman of the Northern Ireland Small Businesses Federation.

The mass exodus of motorists meant that when groups of Orangemen and their supporters began rallying in predominantly Protestant parts of Belfast — some carrying placards reading "Respect our culture, restore our rights" — they had comparatively little traffic to snarl.

Units of riot police and British army helicopters kept watch from a distance over Protestant crowds blocking roads. Each protest ranged in size from a few dozen to several hundred. Some were composed mostly of women and children, while others had a more threatening air, with anti-Catholic terrorists among the participants.

British army bomb-disposal experts investigated a car that had been hijacked and parked on a key overpass in north Belfast. The alert forced a major highway to be closed for two hours before it could be confirmed the car contained no explosives.

Experts conducted a controlled explosion of a package left outside the home of a Protestant member of the government-appointed Parades Commission, which since 1998 has ordered restrictions on traditional Orange Order demonstrations that pass near or through Catholic areas. No explosives were found inside the package.

Motorists driving to suburbs south of Belfast reported that youths were trying to force people out of their cars. Successfully hijacked vehicles were soon burning in Protestant parts of north Belfast, too.

David Trimble, the Protestant leader of Northern Ireland's new power-sharing government and an Orangeman himself, warned that anyone committing violence this week "will only bring dishonor and disgrace on the cause they profess to support."

Trimble, who rose to prominence in 1995 by championing the right of Orangemen to continue parading annually through the main Catholic section of Portadown, today argues that the town's Orange leaders should drop their refusal to enter direct negotiations with the Parades Commission and Garvaghy Road protesters.

"I have to say this is the only way in which the issue will be resolved," Trimble said.

Other Orange parades scheduled for Wednesday — the 310th anniversary of the triumph of Protestant King William of Orange over his Catholic foe, James II — also have been ordered to stay away from predominantly Catholic villages and the Lower Ormeau enclave of south Belfast.

AIDS expected to cut life expectancy to 30 in parts of Africa

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) — Life expectancy in countries worst hit by Africa's staggering AIDS epidemic is expected to fall to around 30 within a decade — the lowest in a century — as the disease kills tens of millions more in its sweep across the continent.

The new estimate, released Monday, is the latest attempt to quantify the incredible breadth and effect of the epidemic on sub-Saharan Africa, where 15 million have died of AIDS and 25 million more infected people almost certainly will die in the next few years.

"It's hard to comprehend the amount of mortality we will see in these countries," said Karen Stanecki of the U.S. Census Bureau, which compiled the projections.

Stanecki presented the new figures at the 13th International AIDS Conference, a high-profile meeting being held for the first time in Africa, ground zero of the epidemic.

AIDS already has sharply reduced life expectancy in many southern African countries. For instance, in Botswana, where more than one-third of adults are infected with HIV, life expectancy is now 39 instead of 71, as it would have been without the disease. And the numbers are expected only to get worse.

Stanecki projected that by 2010, life expectancy will be 29 in Botswana, 30 in Swaziland, 33 in Namibia and Zimbabwe and 36 in South Africa, Malawi and Rwanda. Without AIDS, it would have been around 70 in many of those countries.

"These are a level of life expectancy that have not been seen since the start of the 20th century," she said.

Speakers at the meeting struggled for superlatives to describe the scope of this disease in the poorest parts of the globe, especially sub-Saharan Africa, where nearly three-quarters of all HIV-infected people live.

"The problem will get much worse before it gets better," said Dr. Roy M. Anderson of Oxford University. "This is undoubtedly the most serious infectious disease threat in recorded human history."

Dr. Kevin DeCock of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention called the epidemic "Africa's worst social catastrophe since slavery."

Stanecki predicted that by 2003, the populations of Botswana, South Africa and Zimbabwe will begin to fall because of AIDS deaths and dropping fertility resulting from the epidemic. In those countries, the populations will drop between one-tenth and three-tenths of 1 percent. Without AIDS, they would have grown between 1 percent and 3 percent.

Stanecki said this is the first time the Census Bureau has projected negative population growth due to AIDS. The population growth of several other countries — including Malawi, Namibia, Swaziland and Zambia — will be near zero because of the disease.

Experts note that programs to educate people about condoms and other ways of avoiding infection clearly can work in southern Africa. Because of early efforts, the epidemic never occurred in Senegal, and Uganda has reversed its high infection level.

AIDS medicines have dramatically improved survival in the United States and Europe, but the drugs are simply too expensive and hard to deliver for most of the world's infected. Five drug companies have pledged to lower their prices in the developing world, but health officials in poor countries note they still lack the health care services necessary to offer the medicines to the sick.

On Monday, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, created by Microsoft's founder, said it will spend $50 million in Botswana to strengthen that country's health care system. Merck & Co. said it will match the donation in Botswana, mostly by providing AIDS drugs.

Fugitive wanted in agent's killing arrested in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A man indicted on a murder charge in the 1994 killing of an undercover Drug Enforcement Agency officer was arrested by Mexican authorities, the Attorney General's office said Monday.

Augustin Vasquez Mendoza, who has been on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List for four years, was taken into custody Sunday in Tehuacan in central Mexico. U.S. authorities, who had offered $ 2.2 million for his capture, plan to seek his extradition.

Vasquez Mendoza is suspected of the killing of DEA Agent Richard Fass, who was shot in suburban Glendale, Arizona, while buying 22 pounds of methamphetamine from two alleged Vasquez Mendoza drug dealers, authorities said.

Two gunmen were arrested as they fled and a third accomplice was captured in Los Angeles a few days later, but Vasquez Mendoza escaped.

Mail 'n' More packs all kinds of items for safe shipping

Proper packing gets packages there safely

How a parcel is packed makes a big difference in how it arrives at its destination, says Marsha Bettis, owner of Mail 'n' More. Modern distribution centers for all major shipping companies, including the U. S. Postal Service, use conveyor belts and other machinery to help them get thousands of items to varied destinations in a timely manner.

"That means if you write 'Fragile' on the box, it probably won't make a difference in how it's handled," Marsha observes. "However, with proper packing, even the most fragile items should arrive in good condition."

Mail 'n' More's staff has experience and training from experts in the field, so they know not only the standards of each shipping company, they know what it will take to protect the package from the bumps and shakes it will get on its journey. "A properly packed box should bounce," Marsha reveals. You may or may not want a bouncing demonstration done on your package.

Because you pay for every pound shipped, Mail 'n' More is careful to keep the packing materials from adding any unnecessary weight. That's why packing peanuts and bubble wrap are so useful, because they're so lightweight for the protection they provide.

If you want to pack it yourself, Mail 'n' More can tell you if it was done right. This knowledge is important because carriers will not insure improperly packed parcels. Marsha suggests you stay away from using string or duct tape in sealing your package, but do always use a good, strong, corrugated box.

In recent weeks, they have sent out a wedding dress with bouquet and bubble solution, a crystal chandelier and an old gas pump. "Sometimes we have to get pretty creative," Marsha acknowledges, when it comes to getting an oddly shaped item to meet shipping standards. When necessary, they make a box from scratch.

Another important part of getting it there is knowing how best to ship it. Mail 'n' More's state of the art computer system helps you determine the best way. They measure the size and weight of the package because most companies have limits on these. The contents must also be considered. Some require special considerations in transit: a musical instrument may be sensitive to changes in pressure and temperature inherent in air travel—so it may have to go by ground; perishable or highly fragile items may do better by air, so they spend less time in transit. Cost and destination can also be factors.

If you've hesitated sending something because you didn't know how to box it or how best to ship it, take it to Mail 'n' More and let them handle it with care.

Mail 'n' More is located at Midkiff and Loop 250, in front of Albertsons. They have been in the same location for 14 years. Hours are 9-6 Monday through Friday, other times by appointment. The phone number is 699 MAIL.

Wonder how to pack something for shipping—like a fragile candleholder, south-of-the-border art, or even a computer monitor? Let Marsha Bettis and her staff at Mail 'n' More pack it and help you know the best way to ship it.

Start saving money with four easy tips

How many times have you told yourself you were going to start saving money? We all say it and then we put it off. According to the Houston Chronicle, more than 60 percent of the population has less than $5,000 in liquid savings. It may seem difficult to start a savings plan, but here are a few tips to ease you into the habit.

Don't bite off more than you can chew. We tend to try to start a savings plan by setting aside more than we can really afford. Establish a goal for how much you would like to save in a month or a year and then slowly set aside an amount you can live without, say $25 a week. Gradually increase the amount you save by allocating all or a portion of your annual raise, for example, to your nest egg.

Look into an automatic investment plan or dollar-cost averaging. It may not be feasible to set aside $1,200 at once—but $100 a month may be possible. Dollar-cost averaging is a good technique to accumulate some savings without going broke. To dollar-cost average is to invest a fixed amount of money at a fixed interval—once a month, for example—in a particular investment or security, regardless of the price per share. Because you contribute a preset dollar amount, the number of shares you buy will depend on the individual share price. This technique allows you to acquire fewer shares when the price is high and more shares when the price is low. Dollar-cost averaging does not guarantee profit or protect against loss and you should consider your financial ability to continue purchases at low levels.

It may be easier to save by automatically deducting a preset amount from your checking account instead of having to manually transfer the money.

Join your employer's 401(k). If you don't participate in your employer's 401(k) plan, it's time to think about it. This is an easy way to start saving for your retirement. The money usually comes out of your paycheck pre-tax, so you won't really miss it. Many employers will also match a percentage of what you contribute to your plan subject to certain limitations.

Open an Individual Retirement Account. A Roth IRA (if you qualify) allows you to contribute up to $2,000 a year but you get no tax deduction. When you begin taking distributions at retirement, they are tax-free, if certain conditions are met. A traditional IRA also allows you to contribute $2,000 of earned income a year and the contributions are tax-deferred. The Roth IRA has no mandatory withdrawal age while the traditional IRA has a mandatory withdrawal age of 70-1/2. Withdrawals prior to age 59-1/2 may be subject to a 10 percent IRA penalty plus ordinary income taxes.

Whichever way you decide to save, start today so you can reap the benefits sooner!

Window tinting from Mid West Glass beautifies, protects your home or business

It is said that the eyes are the windows to the soul. On the other hand, windows are your eyes to the world. Just as you close your eyes when light gets too bright, you want to protect your home against the sun's heat and its damaging ultraviolet rays. The good news is, window film from Mid West Glass lets you keep out the harmful elements without plunging your home into darkness.

Mid West installs a variety of types of window film; some of which blocks out up to 80 percent of the sun's heat and 100 percent of its damaging UV rays. UV rays, over time, can fade carpet and other furnishings and can 'dry rot' curtains that are exposed to the most sunlight.

West-facing windows (or sliding glass patio doors or anything with glass in it) can let in a lot of heat much of the year, if they are not protected by something. Curtains or shutters work, but they make the room dark. Window film cuts heat and UV rays while giving you a variety of choices on how much light to let in. You may want as much light as possible, or you may want to reduce glare in the room with film that reflects a little light or a lot.

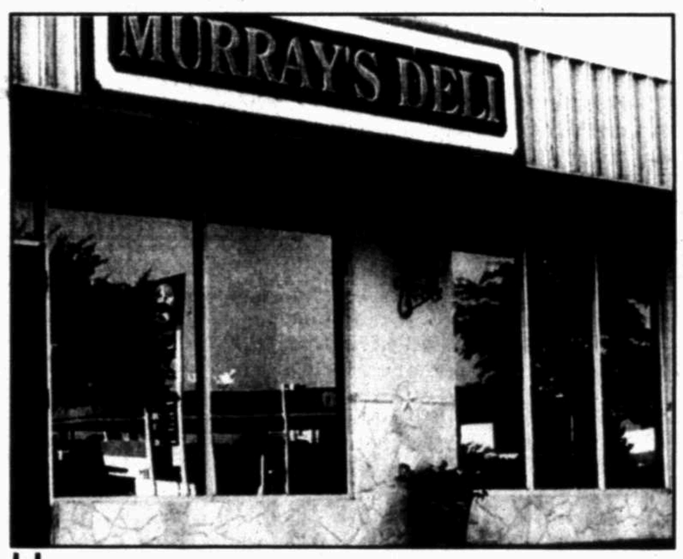

Highly reflective film adds security to your home or business by making it hard for others to see in. Security films are available that are very hard to break with a hammer or cut with a knife. These films also hold glass together if it breaks, reducing the danger of being cut by sharp fragments.

A variety of attractive architectural tones are available to add beauty both inside and out. Today's films are designed to keep their great looks year after year—residential films come with a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, bubbling or cracking.

Another beauty of window film is the cost. It is much less expensive than installing new windows and, in a building with large west-facing windows, may even pay for itself in reduced air conditioning costs. Installation usually goes quickly, with minimal interruption of your lifestyle.

As mentioned, window film goes on anything with glass—bay windows, French doors, sliding patio doors—and any shape glass—square, round, oval, or other decorative patterns. The installer simply cuts the film to fit the shape.

This is, simply put, an attractive and simple way to fight back against the harsh elements of the sun, while letting in the light and the view you enjoy. Call Mid West today for a free estimate and get on your way to enjoying more of your home all year.

Homes and businesses, like Murray's Deli, enjoy the beauty and protection of window film from Mid West Glass. Call 682-7373.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Midessa Communications, Advance Voice & Data, Paradigm are now Texas Telephone & Data Technologies

Three local telecommunications companies join forces

Beginning last week, three local telecommunications companies have joined together under one name—Texas Telephone and Data Technologies—to provide customers one place to go for anything that involves transferring voice or data from one place to another. Midessa Communications Systems joined with Advance Voice and Data, which recently bought Paradigm Telecom, Inc.

The three principals of the new company will be Harry Crawford, President; Brad Jones, Chief Operating Officer, and Gil Pyle, Chief Financial Officer. These three, along with their service technicians, combine for over 100 years of experience in telecommunications.

Here's what all this means to you: Now there is one local company big enough to take care of anything you need related to telecommunications. Business telephone systems, wiring, computer cabling, WAN and LAN installations, business and residential dial tone and long distance service, even Internet service and cellular service (the company is an authorized agent for Cellular One). For Internet service, they provide regular dial-up accounts as well as T1, ISDN and DSL.

Texas Telephone and Data Technologies provides telephone service for a number of state and national government agencies including national parks, prisons and rest stop pay phones. Many of the major banks and hotels in the area get their dial tone, long distance service and equipment from them.

If your existing equipment needs repairs or upgrades, call Texas Telephone & Data Technologies. They are qualified to service Toshiba, Panasonic, AT&T, Lucent NEC and other systems. The addition of Paradigm Telecom authorized them to service Samsung equipment.

If your business needs a whole new system to keep up with growth or with technology advances, the company represents a long list of makers.

Harry Crawford notes, "Now clients can have a large variety of services put on one bill." Brad Jones says it will simplify service. "You don't have to call different places for any telecommunications issues," he says.

If you have offices elsewhere in Texas, the new company can be your one provider. They offer service in Austin, Dallas, Houston, Lubbock, Amarillo, San Angelo and other cities.

They offer dial tone and long distance at a discount. One-plus rates are just 7.9 cents per minute in-state or out-of-state, with no minimum monthly usage fee. The exact cost of dial tone service depends upon the type of service you need.

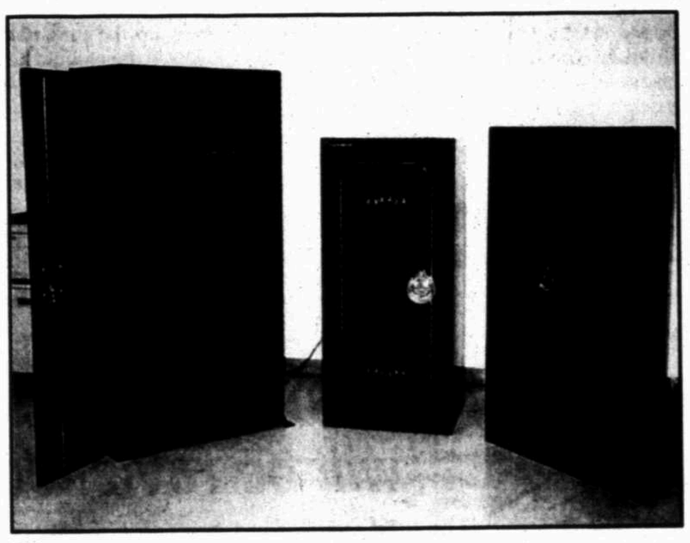

Since this is a local company, you'll get personal service. Whenever you call, 24 hours a day, seven days a week, you'll talk to a person, not a recording.

Harry says they intend to continue to provide good service, do what they say they'll do and take care of customers. That's what's already made these companies successful individually. Now they're working together to better serve you.

The merger of three companies (Midessa Communications, Advance Voice and Data and Paradigm Telecom, has put Harry Crawford (from left), Brad Jones and Gil Pyle together to serve all your telecommunications needs. The new company is Texas Telephone & Data Technologies.

Locally-owned Texas Telephone and Data Technologies provides discount dial tone service, long distance, equipment and other telecommunications services. The main office is at 1004 West Front and the phone number is 520-7374.

These three gun cabinets, which are still in the manufacturing process, are just a sample of what is available at Control Power, Inc. To find out how they can meet your custom metal fabrication needs call them at 697-6666.

Control Power does gun cabinets, other metal fabrication

"We've already sold a good number of gun cabinets," relates Control Power plant manager Luis Huerta. That is especially exciting because the company only recently branched out from oilfield-related metal fabrication business into gun cabinets and other general metal fabrication. Luis believes that speaks well of the quality and design of his cabinets.

Their gun cabinets come in a variety of sizes and shapes, including the standard hallway type to the corner-fitting triangular shape. The corner style has been his best seller so far. They come in single or double door configurations. Sizes range from the small four-gun to the 21-gun-plus jumbo size.

Special features include the internal, lockable, compartment for ammunition, handguns, jewelry or other personal effects. Control Power powder coats their gun cabinets for maximum protection and beauty. They currently offer five attractive colors, with others available on request.

Gun cabinets provide protection with a neat and trim look. Locks range from light security standard lockout to the high security, fire resistant cabinet with a vault type locking system.

The same skill that allows Control Power to make quality gun cabinets allows them to make security safes as well. These are available to fit any special space or shape you have. They can make safes fire resistant upon request.

Control Power also does sheet metal fabrication, powder coating, sand blasting and other metal work. Luis believes his company has the largest powder coating oven in Midland, at 40 feet. This allows them to put the highly protective, durable and environmentally safe paint type on very large items. "Powder coating lasts about twice as long as conventional spray painting," says Luis, which means it protects things like lawn furniture and other metal items much better, for about the same price as spray painting.

Powder coating consists of spraying and electrically charged paint powder onto the metal surface, then heating the metal to 400 degrees for approximately ten minutes. Any metal that can take the heat can be powder coated.

The company also does a variety of metal fabrications. This includes stainless steel counter tops for restaurants, handrails, fences, ramps, truck tool boxes, truck beds, belt guards, large smoker-type barbecue grills and much more.

They can sandblast and repaint objects that have seen too much of the West Texas sun and wind.

Now you can attractively protect your guns. Now you can have your favorite lawn furniture repainted instead of the expense of throwing it away and buying new. Now you can have any sheet metal fabrication you need, from a company with years of experience.

Call Control Power today.

Control Power, Inc. is located at 2136 Commerce, near Tomcat Lighting and Staging. The company does many types of sheet metal fabrication including gun cabinets and safes. They also do powder coating. The phone number is 697-6666.

Fashion's alterations make a perfect fit

Fitting into clothes you bought off the rack can be a challenge. They may fit in the shoulders, but not in the sleeve length, or some other place. Or maybe you've gained or lost a little weight since you bought what is now your favorite pair of pants. You don't need to wear ill-fitting clothes when you can get them altered at Fashion Cleaners.

If you need some minor nips or tucks to make it fit right, Fashion's experts can do it. To assure a perfect fit, Fashion's Philip McCain requests that you let their staff mark the garment before making alterations.

They also do minor repairs such as replacing buttons, patching holes, replacing zippers.

A typical alteration procedure includes four steps: First, the garment is marked with tailor's chalk. Then it is cleaned. Third, the alteration is done and finally it is pressed, to give it a clean, fresh, sharp look.

Most alterations take one to two weeks. Alterations are available at both locations.

Fashion Cleaners has two convenient locations: 801 W. Wall and in the Imperial Shopping Center at Midkiff and Wadley. They do all kinds of cleaning and laundry, as well as alterations, reweaving and keepsaking of bridal gowns. Pickup and delivery available.

Fashion Cleaners' alteration experts Sally Henson (pictured) and Sandra Johnson will make sure your clothes fit you to a "T."

Enroll now for Midland Gymnastics day camp

Looking for a fun and worthwhile way for the kids to burn some extra energy this summer?

Midland Gymnastics' summer day camp is still accepting enrollments. Day camps will continue through the week of August seventh. "Every week we have more kids than the previous week, but we still have room," says owner Blake Hughes.

Camp runs for one week from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday - Friday. It includes ages four to 13. Blake says it's exciting how well the different age groups can get along in a fun, structured environment.

Camp is a great way for novices to try out gymnastics or for others to improve their skills.

Blake coached in Houston for years after being a High School All American, vault qualifier at the NCAA National Championships at the University of New Mexico and accomplishing other honors.

Midland Gymnastics Center is owned by Blake Hughes. It is located at 3501 North Lamesa Road, across from the big water tower at Hogan Park. The phone number is 682-4113.

Midland Gymnastics' day camp program includes children from four to 13, from novices to team kids. Call 682-4113 to enroll your child.

ATC can bring strong benefits for economy

While all the reasons cited by advocates of the Advanced Technology Center are valid reasons for developing the facility, one compelling reason must not be overlooked. That is the students who have either dropped out of school or who are in danger of dropping out who may be salvaged for productive work.

There is no doubt that the Midland economy will benefit tremendously from a better-trained workforce or that workers employed in higher-paying jobs will spend their money locally. And having the Advanced Technology Center will mean tremendous opportunities for Midlanders to retrain for new jobs any time the need for a new occupation arises.

That is one of the best reasons for such a center. It offers great flexibility to meet the needs of a changing economy.

Yet at the heart of the Advanced Technology Center is the basic goal of providing training for Midlanders so they may acquire good jobs and keep them.

David Daniel, president of Midland College, said the ATC "will impact the dropout rate in public schools, positively impact the enrollment at the community college and will create a better-trained workforce."

What that can mean for the community is fewer unemployed or underemployed people, an attractive workforce for prospective businesses and a brighter economic future.

The Advanced Technology Center can provide numerous Midlanders with the necessary training to get and hold good jobs, to contribute to the stability of the local economy, and to retrain for new jobs anytime a change is needed. That's a good investment for a community like Midland that has been buffeted by the volatility of the oil economy for decades.

It's time for an improvement for the Midland economy, and the development of the ATC looks like a step in the right direction.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, July 11, the 193rd day of 2000. There are 173 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 11, 1804, Vice President Aaron Burr mortally wounded former Treasury Secretary Alexander Hamilton in a pistol duel near Weehawken, N.J.

On this date:

In 1533, Pope Clement VII excommunicated England's King Henry VIII.

In 1767, John Quincy Adams, who would become the sixth president of the United States, was born in Braintree, Mass.

In 1798, the U.S. Marine Corps was formally re-established by a congressional act that also created the U.S. Marine Band.

In 1864, Confederate forces led by Gen. Jubal Early began an abortive invasion of Washington D.C., turning back the next day.

In 1934, Franklin Roosevelt became the first U.S. president to travel through the Panama Canal.

In 1955, the U.S. Air Force Academy was dedicated at Lowry Air Base in Colorado.

In 1977, the Medal of Freedom was awarded posthumously to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

In 1979, the abandoned U.S. space station Skylab made a spectacular return to Earth, burning up in the atmosphere and showering debris over the Indian Ocean and Australia.

In 1980, American hostage Richard I. Queen, freed by Iran after eight months of captivity because of poor health, left Tehran for Switzerland.

In 1989, actor Laurence Olivier died at age 82.

Ten years ago: Leaders of the Group of Seven nations concluded their summit in Houston by encouraging Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to enact reforms in return for Western aid.

Five years ago: The U.N.-designated safe haven of Srebrenica fell to Bosnian Serb forces. The United States normalized relations with Vietnam.

One year ago: A U.S. Air Force cargo jet, braving Antarctic winter, swept down over the Amundsen-Scott South Pole Research Center to drop off emergency medical supplies for Dr. Jerri Nielsen, a physician at the center who had discovered a lump in her breast.

Documentary portrays British WWII heroes

Americans sometimes like to think we have cornered the market on heroism. Aren't we, after all, the "home of the brave"?

Bravery does not have only one address, as you will see in a magnificent two-part series, airing on the Public Broadcasting System Monday, July 10, and concluding July 17 (check local listings for time). It's called "Finest Hour," a documentary about the brave British soldiers, citizens and political leaders who stood alone for months against Adolf Hitler and his Nazi war machine until the United States entered the war.

Thomas

The program, which has a companion book by Tim Clayton and Phil Craig, skillfully weaves top-quality war footage with dramatic re-creations in a blend of color and black-and-white photography that is authentic "reality television." The British were legitimate "survivors."

We hear voices and see faces of people who lived through this awful time, when many Americans believed they would see Britain and all of Europe come to be dominated by Hitler. While some in Europe tried to adjust to and survive in what they perceived to be an inevitable new world order, the British, under the courageous and inspirational leadership of Winston Churchill, never gave up, withstanding waves of Nazi bombings of London and turning the tide in the Battle of Britain.

Whitelaw Reid, who reported for the New York Herald Tribune from London in 1940, tells in a contemporary interview of conversation and correspondence with Churchill and other top British and American leaders. New insights into the role of U.S. Ambassador to London Joseph P. Kennedy are offered by Page Huidekoper, Kennedy's secretary at the time.

The action, drama and tears are fit for a Steven Spielberg film. The Brits were just like our boys — young, afraid, inexperienced, but remarkably brave and committed. Unlike Americans, they had to see their capital city under siege and large portions destroyed by a man bent on world domination.

The film shows how easily things might have turned out differently. In June, 60 years ago, Britain's future was grim. Germany had already conquered Poland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and France. Britain had fought and lost to the Wehrmacht at Dunkirk, and her soldiers came limping home in a spectacular evacuation orchestrated by Churchill and British military leaders. Churchill regularly bombarded President Franklin Roosevelt with requests for help, but Roosevelt was in the midst of a reelection campaign, and U.S. isolationist spirit was strong. The Soviet Union had an alliance with Germany. Britain was forced to stand alone.

We hear audio recordings of Edward R. Murrow while watching film of the German bombing of London. We hear William Shirer's eerie and ominous broadcasts from Berlin. "Finest Hour" is a history book come alive. It is stuff those who didn't live through it, and those who did, should not miss. Young people who think history is dull won't think so after they've seen this film.

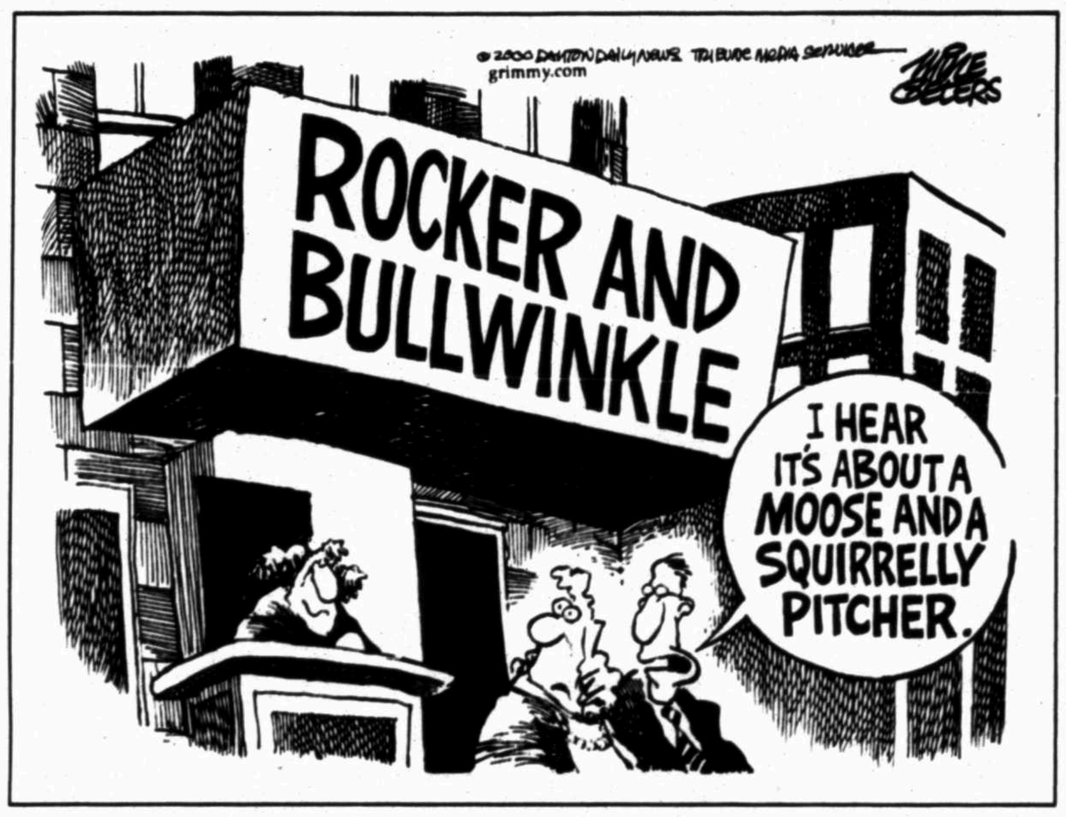

Dozens of witnesses tell their own stories. There is Iain Nethercott, who at age 19 was an antiaircraft gunner aboard the HMS Keith during a brutal air and land siege. He watched in horror as his co-gunner was beheaded. Bess Walder was one of only seven survivors from a group of 90 children being evacuated to Canada aboard a British liner when it was torpedoed. There is a dramatic reenactment of her predicament as she tells the story.

There is Edith Heap, a Women's Auxiliary radar plotter, listening on a headset to the fighter pilots, including the battle during which her own fiance was killed. Sixty years later, she still cries, and you may, too, when you hear her story. Marian Holmes, Winston Churchill's personal secretary, tells how Churchill dealt with the tremendous pressures he faced.

The show's final line sums up the unequaled achievement of Britain: "Alone, Britain could never have won the Second World War. But in 1940, she refused to lose it."

"Finest Hour" is truly great television. It deserves a large audience, and PBS should be encouraged to create more great films like this one.

Absent Bush, Gore talks up politics

SWEET land of liberty. Now there's a grand, overarching theme that should make a presidential candidate's heart (or at least his speech writer's) go pitter-patter as the Fourth of July approaches.

But we haven't heard much from George W. Bush and Al Gore about the underlying principles of our generally exceptional nation, unless you count the throwaway lines.

Last week Bush's efficacious pander to the League of United Latin American citizens included a flourish on "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Touching but not very informative.

Inattention to the biggest-picture ideas is not likely to have much effect on the outcome of the presidential race unless one of the major contenders announces in late October an unanticipated affection for establishing a monarchy.

Given the Supreme Court's 5-4 votes on abortion rights and other culturally divisive issues, Gore, of course, hopes he can make the bank shot and get some mileage from the threat that Bush's high court nominees might pose. Polling has shown repeatedly, however, that only rarely are voters driven by a single issue, even abortion or other emotionally charged questions that make their way to the Supreme Court.

To make any inroads, Gore would have to convince voters that Bush presents a more broad-gauge threat. That was exactly the point of the recent Courting Disaster treatise from the People for the American Way Foundation. Lord knows this tax-exempt 501(c)3 wasn't promoting Gore — oh, no — but if you're really dense they provided a helpful subtitle: "How a Scalia-Thomas Supreme Court Would Endanger our Rights and Freedoms."

Perhaps it says something comforting, if not ennobling, about the strength of our democracy that the major party candidates would rather go hammer and tong over salmon-defeating hydroelectric dams in the Pacific Northwest than to offer straightforward musings on the founding concepts of the republic.

Then again, it's not a good idea to let the campaign pass without having an understanding of the candidates' views of such basic tenets.

So, both campaigns were asked to make their big guy available.

As Gore's limousine picked up speed last week in downtown Philadelphia, just a few blocks from Independence Hall, the vice president warmed quickly to the question of what his tenure in the White House would mean to basic constitutional liberties.

"Absolute protection of them," Gore began. "I believe that our Constitution is a living and breathing document that has not only the enumerated liberties mentioned in the Constitution but also liberties such as right of privacy that has been found by the Supreme Court in the Constitution even though the word does not appear."

Eminently sensible answers like this send strict constructionists around the bend and contrast with what Bush has had to say on the issue.

When outlining his criteria for Supreme Court nominees, Bush said last fall: "The most primary issue is will they strictly interpret the Constitution of the United States."

Bush, although he wouldn't like it, needs to be drawn out on this point. On which issues has the court gone too far? Privacy, voting rights, jury selection, gun control, environmental protection?

Gore was cagier when the issue was turned around and he was asked how constitutional principles might be diminished by a Bush presidency.

"Well, I don't know the governor's views on all these questions," Gore replied initially and unconvincingly. The highly electronic vice president probably could have pulled out his Palm Pilot and told you if Bush had, since birth, said three or more words about the shroud of Turin or Kerensky debt.

Not surprisingly, given just a moment, Gore conjured up a dig at the constitutional implications of a George W. Bush presidency.

"I know that he opposes a woman's right to choose," Gore said, noting Bush's relentlessly narrow take on abortion. This comment came the day before the Supreme Court's big abortion decision.

"I know that he has said that his two favorite Supreme Court justices are Justice (Antonin) Scalia and Justice (Clarence) Thomas," Gore said. "Those would be the last two that I would name as models for future . . . nominations."

This may be a slender reed on which to hang much of a presidential campaign, but in this area the vice president is going with what he's got.

Painful lessons will be revisited during meeting at Camp David

BEIRUT, Lebanon — If you can't be at Camp David, Beirut is about as good a vantage point as any for watching the Palestinian-Israeli summit talks, because Lebanon has many lessons, some obvious, some subtle, to offer the negotiators.

Lebanon, first off, is a reminder of what happened when Israelis and Palestinians tried to resolve their differences not with diplomacy but with brute force during that long hot summer of 1982. At that time Israel still entertained the fantasy of solving the Palestinian problem by wiping out the PLO, and the PLO entertained the fantasy that armed struggle could win back at least all of the West Bank and East Jerusalem.

Friedman

But the Israeli-Palestinian war in Lebanon was a war with no winner. All sides lost. A short time later, Lebanon taught the Israelis another lesson that simply because Israel has more power doesn't mean it is in its interest to cram a deal down the other side's throat.

On May 17, 1983, with the help of a very foolish Reagan administration, Israel's Likud government imposed a peace settlement on Lebanon, which gave Israel a permanent security presence in South Lebanon. The Lebanese prime minister at the time literally cried after signing the treaty. The May 17 agreement, though, was never implemented. Because it had no legitimacy in Lebanese society it had no roots, and therefore no staying power. The only thing the May 17 agreement gave birth to was a war against Israel by the Hezbollah Shiite guerrillas which eventually forced a unilateral Israeli withdrawal and a virulent anti-American campaign that culminated in the blowing up of a U.S. Marine barracks, killing 241 servicemen.

You cannot work anymore on the assumption that we should not change our ways to meet the challenges of peace and in order to become a productive economy. In the wake of driving the Israelis out of South Lebanon, Hezbollah has turned its focus inward to satisfy what it knows its constituency now wants most jobs, better schools, development, an end to corruption and integration with global trends, not more war.

Hezbollah first leapfrogged over the old politics here by not being afraid of the Israelis, but now, having evicted them from South Lebanon, Hezbollah is turning its attention to the economic and social aspirations of its rank and file.

So what's the lesson? Prime Minister Ehud Barak of Israel may be coming to Camp David without the support of all the traditional, small-minded ethnic parties in Israel. But I guarantee you, 60 to 70 percent of the Israeli people are with Barak. That is, they are ready for a real and fair deal, including hard compromises, provided the bottom line reads The End. The end of this conflict so Israelis can really get on with life.

The divisions in the Israeli Parliament, like those in the Lebanese Parliament, represent the old politics of ethnic and religious division. But remember, Barak himself was directly elected by the Israeli people precisely to bring about a final peace. He still comes to Washington with a strong mandate for that.

Speaking of elections, Bashar Assad was elected president of Syria to succeed his father. On the eve of Bashar's election, what did he do? Give a speech attacking Israel? No, he ended government controls on auto imports, enabling any Syrian to import a car. Bottom line: I don't know whether Yasser Arafat and Barak will be able to achieve what they both will consider a fair deal.

How to manage IRA distributions

If you are like most investors, you view your IRA as a way to invest annual contributions and have these funds grow tax-deferred until you reach retirement. What happens when you reach that exciting point in your life when you are ready to retire and want to tap into this account and begin taking distributions? No doubt you are aware that once money starts flowing out of your IRA, it loses its tax-deferred status and you have triggered a taxable event. That's why managing your IRA to maximize the after-tax income you will receive while minimizing the taxes you owe takes careful and thorough planning.

Daniel Watts

Much of your distribution plan rests on your age.

If you are between ages 59 ° and 70 °: These are your prime retirement years when you will begin enjoying the leisure time you have planned on filling for so long. Fortunately, once you reach 59 °, you may withdraw funds from your IRA without penalty. Your retirement distribution may be received as regular payments on a periodic basis or in single payments when you need them. There is one caveat, however. You have to be more diligent in managing the funds that remain in your IRA to achieve the appropriate balance between conservative and more aggressive investments. You want to generate enough income to support your current lifestyle, but you also need to have your funds continue growing to meet tomorrow's needs. Attention to current market trends is particularly important since you don't have the luxury of time to correct any ill-timed decisions.

Once you reach age 70 °: Regulations governing IRAs require that you remove a certain minimum amount from your IRA every year after you attain age 70 °. This minimum amount is calculated using a life expectancy factor and the fair market value of your IRA. You may always choose to receive more than the required minimum amount without penalty. If you take less than the required amount, however, you may be liable for payment of a substantial penalty tax. This penalty tax is equal to 50 percent of the difference between the amount that should have been withdrawn and the amount actually removed from your IRA.

Of particular importance at this time is your choice of beneficiary since you may choose to compute your required minimum withdrawal based on your own life expectancy or on a joint life expectancy with your IRA beneficiary. Additionally, you will have to choose whether to calculate your distributions using the term-certain method or the recalculation method. Before beginning your required minimum withdrawals, you should consult with your tax advisor since the IRS generally does not permit you to change the method of calculation once payments have begun.

Before you reach age 59 °. Your IRA assets are intended to provide you with retirement benefits; therefore, the tax laws discourage distributions prior to age 59 ° by imposing a tax penalty in addition to ordinary income taxes. The penalties are waived if you are disabled or if you elect to receive "Substantially Equal Payments" from your IRA.

Substantially Equal Payments allow you to receive distributions as a series of payments based on your life expectancy. You must select and adhere to the distribution method you choose until you are age 59 ° or for five years, whichever is longer. If you deviate from the payout schedule, the IRS may retroactively impose the 10 percent penalty tax on all prior distributions.

Removing assets from your IRA using the Substantially Equal Payment option is a long-term commitment that could negatively impact your finances in retirement and should be initiated only after careful consideration.

The regulations governing IRA distributions are complex and, in many cases, decisions you make may be irrevocable. For instance, once you take money out of an IRA, it cannot be put back in to continue growing tax-deferred; your method of calculation regarding minimum distributions cannot be changed, in most cases; and your schedule of substantially equal payments is fixed. For these reasons, you need to consult with a knowledgeable accountant or tax advisor before beginning a distribution program to ensure that you are making decisions that are appropriate for your particular situation.

Collapse of Philippine garbage dump kills at least 31

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A mountain of garbage loosened by rain collapsed and burst into flames Monday at Manila's biggest dump, flattening squatters' shanties and killing 31 people, officials said.

Some 29 other people were injured and at least 68 remained missing late Monday, Red Cross spokeswoman Tess Usapdin said. The victims were poor people who earn a living by scavenging garbage in the Payatas dump.

Rescuers dug through the wall of rotting garbage late into the night, but were hampered by the stench and lack of equipment, including adequate lighting, she said.

One scavenger, Gloria Alano, sobbed and yelled at rescuers using a heavy bulldozer on a heap of garbage to search for survivors and bodies.

"Backhoe, use only backhoes, not bulldozers, I want to get the bodies of my loved ones," she cried. Her husband and three children were buried under the tons of garbage.

After collapsing onto the shanties, the wall of garbage burst into flames, engulfing the area. Residents said the debris may have been ignited by fallen power cables or stoves being used in huts covered by the garbage.

Portions of the Payatas dump in Quezon City, the largest in metropolitan Manila, often smolder from the spontaneous combustion of rotting garbage.

Fire trucks could not reach the area because of limited space and parked on a main road several blocks from the dump. Hoses were pulled through crowded alleys by firefighters, who extinguished most of the blaze after several hours.

Danilo Castro, whose shanty was perched alongside the mountain of garbage, said he felt the ground shift in the morning, before it finally collapsed.

"I left the house because I needed to sell outside, so I left my wife and child," he said. "When I came back my house was gone and my wife and child are buried underneath."

The wall of garbage buried an area of squatter houses about the size of four basketball courts. About 100 houses were covered, Quezon City Mayor Ismael Mathay said.

About 780 people were taken to an evacuation center at city hall, he said.

In one area, rescuers pulled out three bodies, including a man badly burned but breathing.

Red Cross volunteers doused his body with water from a fire hose but failed to revive him, witnesses said.

A week of heavy rains followed by a thunderstorm early Monday apparently caused a crack in the upper portion of the mountain of garbage, Manila police chief Edgar Aglipay said.

The dumpsite was to be closed permanently last December but the plan was postponed until later this year after residents at a garbage landfill in San Mateo in nearby Rizal province refused to allow waste from metropolitan Manila to be dumped there.

Officials say they have tried in recent years to relocate the hundreds of scavengers and junk yard workers living around the Payatas dumpsite, but most have refused.

Josephine Ranola, a hospitalized dump resident, said they declined to be relocated because they could not afford the cost.

The Payatas dump and a former dump in Manila's Tondo slum district called Smokey Mountain long symbolized the wrenching poverty in the Philippines.

■ Nation news/1D

President Joseph Estrada's predecessor, Fidel Ramos, ordered Smokey Mountain leveled in the mid-1990s and built apartment buildings at the former eyesore.

MISD considers recruiting Russian teachers

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

With the teacher shortage in Texas reaching mammoth proportions, the Midland Independent School District is looking into some creative alternatives for filling its 200 vacant positions.

"There is a shortage, especially in physics and chemistry and in the upper level math classes," said Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr.

According to the State Board for Educator certification, for the 1998-99 school year there were 41,400 certified-teacher vacancies in the state of Texas.

John O'Sullivan, secretary-treasurer for the Texas Federation of Teachers, said the statistic is misleading because there isn't a shortage of certified teachers in Texas. In fact, he said there are more certified teachers in Texas not teaching than certified teachers in the classroom. The problem, he said, is that those teachers are choosing not to teach.

"It's not a shortage of certified teachers. It's a shortage of certified teachers willing to work for the wages, hours and conditions that are currently in place in Texas schools," O'Sullivan said.

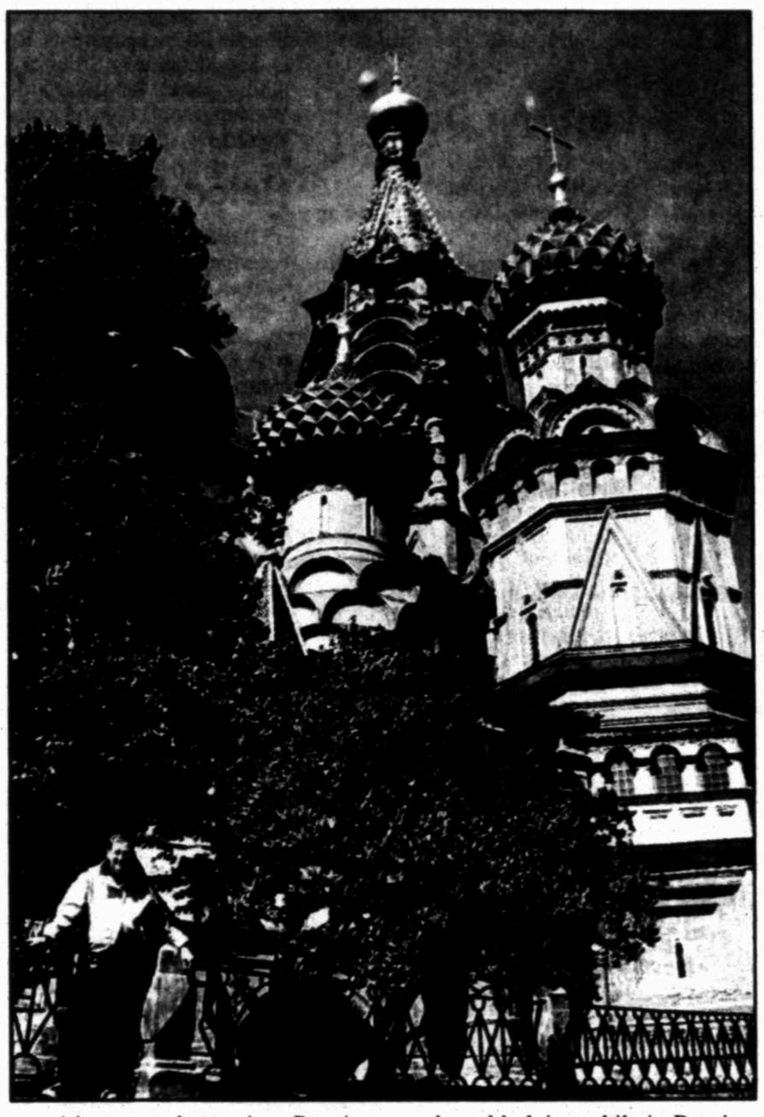

When it comes to math and science teachers, the problem is amplified because teachers with expertise in math and science can find private-industry jobs with better compensation.

A fledgling West Texas company, however, thinks it has the answer to the problem. In March, Charles Weinacht launched Russia Link with the goal of recruiting Russian professionals and educators to migrate to the United States for better working conditions and salaries than they currently are receiving in Russia.

"The teachers there are not being paid and they are wanting a better life," Weinacht said.

He said Russian teachers who do find work are paid less than $100 a month when they are paid and that the money doesn't go very far. "The inflation there is terrible. Conditions in Russia are terrible. They get paid in rubles and that's generally eaten up with inflation," said Weinacht, who first traveled to Russia in 1992 looking for oil exploration possibilities.

Through his contacts and experiences in Russia, Weinacht decided to found Russia Link to find American jobs for Russian professionals. He has sent proposals to Midland ISD, Dallas and Houston and at its last board meeting, MISD heard a presentation by Weinacht and Executive Director of Personnel Tom Holland about recruiting teachers in Russia. Weinacht said Houston and Dallas also have expressed in interest in hearing more about the concept.

If MISD chooses to go forward with the process, an MISD administrator would fly to Russia to interview pre-screened teachers. Russia Link would provide airfare for the trip and MISD would be responsible for paying only for lodging and meals.

Russia Link, upon MISD choosing to hire any Russians, would sponsor the teachers, secure work visas and relocate the teacher to Midland. The cost for the complete process would be about $10,000-$12,000 and would be paid for by Russia Link. The company makes money by financing the process which is reimbursed over time by deducting the charges from the teachers' salary. MISD would have limited involvement outside of the selection process and no expense for meals and lodging while in Russia.

"The main obstacle is they must be fluent in English in both writing and speaking skills," Weinacht said, adding that finding qualified and willing teachers will not be a problem nor will the acquisition of work visas. He also said finding English speakers will be relatively uncomplicated because many professionals have studied English as a foreign language.

The school board is set to investigate the matter further at its next meeting and both the superintendent and Board President George Lara are at least in favor of investigating the matter.

"I'm in favor of researching and exploring that avenue. It may be something we could tap into that may be fruitful. But I think we should be cautious before we bring someone from another country if we don't have the complete full background on them," Lara said.

'It's not a shortage of certified teachers. It's a shortage of certified teachers willing to work for the wages, hours and conditions that are currently in place in Texas schools.'

MC staffer gets first-hand look at education system in Russia

By Emily Statton
MRT Correspondent

Stan Jacobs didn't want to see Russia with a tour group.

Although he planned on indulging in the usual tourist activities, such as watching the Bolshoi Ballet and visiting St. Petersburg museums, the primary purpose of his trip was not centered around bringing home photographs of the Kremlin or St. Basil's Cathedral.

Stan Jacobs was going to Russia to visit a high school friend who was a missionary in the country and then making a pit stop in Lithuania to try to help start a community college there.

Jacobs, who is associate vice president of Instruction for Academic and Transfer at Midland College, received an e-mail from the American Association of Community Colleges about the start-up of a college in Lithuania. Since he had long been planning to visit his missionary friend, he decided to kill two birds with one stone.

"I thought I could just stop in Luthuania after my Russian vacation," Jacobs said.

In order to prepare for his trip, Jacobs gathered information from his colleagues about the early beginnings of Midland College.

"Stan told us about his trip at an administrative meeting, and asked if anyone could help him learn about the planning stages of starting a community college," recalled Elise Coombes, the public relations director at Midland College.

Ms. Coombes, who shares an office with Jacobs and has known him for 20 years, was not surprised to hear that Jacobs was heading for Russia.

"Stan has traveled everywhere," Ms. Coombes said. "He's taken students on educational trips, and he's gone to China for a visit to our sister city there."

During his stay in Russia, Jacobs took the

New name, other changes to greet ranch rodeo fans

By Bill Modisett
MRT Staff Writer

A new name, new location, bevy of entertainers and other changes will greet rodeo fans this year when the annual event is held.

The name has been changed from Midland Ranch Rodeo and Western Heritage Days to West Texas Cowboy Celebration and Rodeo, said Harry Wolf, director of the event, who also will serve as master of ceremonies at this year's celebration. The event is still being presented by the Midland Ranch Rodeo Association.

Proceeds from this year's event also will go to the Cerebral Palsy Foundation, Wolf said.

Although the rodeo itself will take place on the grounds of the Midland County Exhibit Building, as it has in years past, the remainder of the events will be at the Holiday Inn Convention Center and Holidome.

Activities will get under way at 6 p.m. Sept. 29 at the Midland County Exhibit Building with the first installment of the rodeo. Back at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, a jam session will begin at 9 p.m. at the chuck wagons. Food will be available for purchase and those attending can eat and enjoy music and performances by cowboy poets.

Wolf said, "It will be an opportunity for people to hear the music of the West — the only music that originated in the Southwest — and hear the best performers of that music and cowboy poetry."

On Saturday, activities will begin at 10 a.m. at the convention center, where a chuckwagon cookoff will be held, along with performances by cowboy poets and musicians, Indian dancers, trick rope artist Bryce Chapman of Lubbock and others.

At 4 p.m. on Saturday, another performance of the ranch rodeo will begin at the Midland County Exhibit Building. Rodeo events such as wild cow milking, steer doctoring, team sorting, calf branding and double mugging will be held, along with a new event — bronc riding.

Plans are to have about 100 vendors at the Holiday Inn Convention Center this year. Wolf said that at 5 p.m., the vendors will close and at 6 p.m. a meal will be served and a concert and dance featuring Craig Chambers and Time Warp will begin. That band was nominated by the Academy of Western Artists this year as the "Best Swing Band of the Year," Wolf said.

A number of other outstanding entertainers scheduled to perform at this year's ranch rodeo include cowboy poet Mickey Dawes of Tampa, Fla., nominated by the academy as "Rising Star of the Year;" Liz Masterson and Sean Blackburn of Denver, Colo. (Liz was nominated by the Western Music Association as "Female Vocalist of the Year"); Ed Stabler of Murchison (nominated by the Western Music Association as "Instrumentalist of the Year"); and the Texas Trailhands of Dallas and lead singer Devon Dawson (Dawson was nomi-

Governor faces his first big pinch in state budget, deficits expected

AUSTIN (AP) — It's unlikely that any state services or programs will have to be cut because of a possible shortfall in the budget surplus, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee said Monday.

Deficits anticipated in the state Medicaid program, prison system, nursing home patient care and inside two agencies that miscalculated last year's financial needs are making emergency support necessary.

As much as $750 million of the $1 billion surplus could be used to keep the overall $98.2 billion budget out of the red, said House Appropriations Chairman Rob Junell, D-San Angelo.

Bush

"These just aren't little dollars," Junell told the Houston Chronicle in Monday's edition.

Legislative Budget Board staff members were scheduled to brief legislative leaders privately today on the projected size of the emergency appropriations bill to balance the current state budget, as well as how much money specific agencies need to balance their budgets.

Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, chairman of Senate Finance Committee, told the Associated Press on Monday that the state should have enough in the surplus fund to cover the deficits with room to spare.

"It's not a crisis," Ratliff said. "Because I think ultimately we'll still have a surplus," in at least the $200 million range.

However, the crunch will hit in January when legislators start drafting the next two-year state budget, he said.

"We're not going to go out of this biennium with the surplus that we had last time," Ratliff said. "We will not have much of a surplus to go into the next session with."

Texas' healthy economy will provide enough new revenue to cover about $2.5 billion in increased government operating costs caused by inflation and population growth, Junell and Ratliff said.

But they added that little money will be available for anything else. That includes $110 million to $250 million required for constructing new prisons. The health insurance program for retired Texas teachers, TRS-Care, will also run out of money in August 2001 if it does not receive $400 million in state funding in the next Legislature.

Pickwick Players return from New Zealand

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Justin Tate found New Zealand to be a land of stunning beauty. Daniel Hartman welcomed the opportunity to visit another culture. Both returned Monday with the rest of the Pickwick Players and their directors from 12 days in New Zealand, where Midland Community Theatre's youth performing troupe represented the United States at an international festival in Christchurch.

"The Pickwick Players have a reputation as one of the premier youth theater troupes in the United States, so I am not surprised that we were selected to take part in this important festival," said Bill Williams, director of the Pickwick Players.

Williams accompanied Pickwicks Frank Pecina, Meredith Buchanan, Amye Crass, Kelli Dugan, Anne Edelbrock, Hartman, Susan Hochman, Sarah Pilgrim, Tate and Laura Underwood, along with Judith Giebler, MCT's theater school director. The troupe performed "The Hundred Dresses," which was presented here by the Pickwicks in early April at Cole Theatre.

Miss Crass described the opportunity to take the production to New Zealand as the kind which comes along "once-in-a-lifetime."

The Pickwicks presented four performances of "The Hundred Dresses" at the festival.

"The show was really well received," Tate said of the performances in New Zealand.

"Most of the audience was young children, but they seemed to really enjoy it," said Hartman, who ran sound for the show. "A lot of the parents of the children talked with the cast afterwards and told them it meant a lot to watch the play."

In addition, Williams and Ms. Giebler conducted a five-hour drama workshop as part of the festival activities. The Pickwicks also participated in the workshop, which drew children ranging in age from kindergarten to around 13 from all over New Zealand.

"They put together an entire production in five hours and showed it to their parents," Tate said of the New Zealand youth participating in the workshop. "They made the scenery, read the script and did the blocking and everything. They did a performance for opportunity to get familiar with the educational systems of Eastern Europe.

He visited several classrooms, which he found to be similar to their American counterparts.

"There was a blackboard, a bulletin board, desks, and a teacher," Jacobs said. "The schools were in moderate buildings, a little bit old, much like Goddard Junior High."

He found that the Russian curriculum focused more heavily on math and science. He also noted that the line between church and state was not as strictly drawn.

"I went into a classroom with Kyle, my missionary friend, and we taught the students the Lord's Prayer," he remembered. "You can do that sort of thing, as long as you have the teacher's permission."

Another difference he noticed between education in the United States and Russia was financial. Jacobs said that Russian teachers were paid significantly less than teachers in America.

Jacobs said the average teacher's annual salary in Russia is the equivalent of $2,000 American dollars. Though the cost of living is significantly lower, Jacobs said the Russian educators still end up with less to spend annually.

"Most teachers have to take a second or third job," he explained. "I met a lot of teachers who told me they would love to get a job in the United States, because the pay was so much higher."

Jacobs said, however, that the low wage rate for teachers was not an indication that the Eastern Europeans did not value education. In fact, when Jacobs went to Lithuania he found a number of people were "extremely excited" about the prospect of getting a junior college.

"Over in Russia and the Baltic countries, it is pretty much decided by the time you are in seventh or eighth grade whether or not you will be attending a university," Jacobs said. "If you don't go to a university, then you don't get any kind of higher education."

Jacobs compared the situation to the university system in Texas.

"Here in Texas, only the top ten percent of students usually get into the University of Texas or Texas A&M," Jacobs said. "Now imagine if there weren't any other places for people who weren't in the top 10 percent to go. Imagine if we didn't have Texas Tech or TCU or Midland College."

"A large number of people who were interested in education would be denied that opportunity," he said. "And that's what is happening in Lithuania."

Jacobs talked to members of the community in Lithuania, encouraging them to get legislature behind their idea so that they would have a tax base for funding.

The location and basic furnishings for the community had already been provided by a company in the Netherlands.

"They just need to get one person who will head the fight for the college," Jacobs said. "They've already got the desire for education."

nated by the Western Music Association as "Female Vocalist of the Year"). Also in that group is Allan Chapman, who was nominated by the Western Music Association as "Songwriter of the Year" for the song "Red Silk Bandana."

Wolf, director of this year's ranch rodeo, was also nominated by the Western Music Association as "Songwriter of the Year" for his song, "The History of the West."

Cost of Saturday's events is $25 per person, which pays for attendance at the banquet, concert and dance.

Sunday's activities will begin with a playday at the exhibit building beginning at noon and cowboy church at the convention center. Activities at the convention center will continue until about 2 p.m. Sunday.

Wolf said any musicians or poets who want to perform at this year's ranch rodeo should contact him at 687-3130. Any vendors who want to rent a space should contact Marian Farr at the Agriculture Extension office. Cost for a 10-foot by 10-foot space is $50 and $75 for a 10-foot by 20-foot space.

BUSH: Budget setback could spell problems for campaign

(From 1B)

House Appropriations Committee, said Monday that he believes the problems will be solved.

"I still feel as long as our economy is doing well, I think we're going to have some money to address at least the basic numbers that we need," he said. "We're going to have a surplus, the question is how much of a surplus are we going to have."

Ratliff said circumstance makes lawmakers stuck between a rock and a hard place.

"I suppose in hindsight we could have provided more cushion for these extraordinary circumstances but if we had done so, we might have been accused of hiding money when people wanted to spend it on things like teacher pay raises," Ratliff said.

And regardless of the amount of spare change left in the state's account, the crunch could be used to fuel criticism against Gov. George W. Bush, the likely GOP presidential nominee.

Bush has presided over five years of Texas prosperity — a triumph he often touts on the campaign trail.

Now, legislators face an emergency spending bill in January that legislative leaders say could nearly wipe out the anticipated $1 billion surplus.

Bush spokeswoman Linda Edwards reiterated that the budget crunch would not lead to cuts in state services and she defended a governor-pushed $1.7 billion tax cut two years ago.

"The governor and the Legislature made budget decisions based on the best information available at that time," Edwards said. "Clearly, if you look at the governor's record, Governor Bush has applied sound fiscal policies and has slowed the growth of government."

Tate and Hartman are among the returning Pickwicks cast in "Grease," which opens with a gala performance on July 21 at Cole Theatre. On Sunday, their timely return from New Zealand suffered a delay.

"Our flight getting into LA was delayed for two hours before takeoff and that caused us to miss our connecting flight to Dallas," said Tate, noting that the airlines made an alternate flight schedule but failed to notify them in time. "So, our airlines put us up in a hotel for the night. There were no problems with that. We got to see a couple of celebrities while we were out there. It wasn't that bad of a deal at all."

Court hears audio recordings made during Branch Davidian siege

By Matt Slagle
Associated Press

WACO — Unidentified Branch Davidians were heard asking "start the fire?" and "should we light the fire?" in recordings played Monday in a wrongful death trial against the government.

Wearing headphones, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith, a panel of five jurors and attorneys listened to nearly an hour of mostly unintelligible conversations leading to April 19, 1993, when the compound burned to the ground.

Some 80 sect members, including leader David Koresh, died from either gunshots or fire that day.

The standoff began Feb. 28, 1993, when agents with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms unsuccessfully tried to search the complex and arrest Koresh on illegal weapons charges. A gun fight ensued; four agents and six Davidians were killed.

The excerpts were presented in audio and transcript form as the $675 million wrongful death trial filed by surviving Branch Davidians and family members entered its fourth week. They contend the government used excessive force against the sect and contributed to the blaze.

"Let's keep that fire going," a male voice said on the final day of the siege as tanks rumbled in the background.

Federal agents were heard warning sect members of an impending tear-gassing operation and urged them to surrender the morning of April 19. On the same excerpt, a male voice was heard asking, "Should we light the package?"

A day earlier, an unidentified male said, "you always wanted to be a charcoal briquette ... There's nothing like a good fire to bring us to the earth."

The audio clips, government attorneys say, help prove that suicidal Davidians, not federal agents, caused the three fires that consumed the rickety wood complex.

Plaintiffs say tanks used in an FBI tear-gassing operation on the final day turned the compound into kindling by punching holes in the walls, allowing wind gusts to feed the flames.

They also say the tanks could have knocked over lanterns used to illuminate the compound after the government cut off electricity.

Potentially incendiary tear gas canisters launched into the building also may be a culprit, they contend.

The government filed a motion Friday seeking to introduce the tapes as evidence. Plaintiffs had requested the recordings be barred from court because of their anonymous nature.

Smith overruled the plaintiffs' request Monday morning. "I don't think it matters who was talking. These are adult Branch Davidians who were talking," he said.

The recordings were made with tiny eavesdropping devices hidden among supplies that were sent to the compound by the government.

Earlier on Monday, an FBI agent recalled peering through his binoculars and seeing a sect member bending over in a second-floor window seconds before smoke and flames erupted around noon on the final day of the siege.

"Shortly thereafter, I noticed smoke and fire coming out of that window," Ronald Elder testified. "He got up and moved out of my view, and that's when I saw the fire and the smoke coming out of the window."

Plaintiffs' attorney Michael Caddell questioned Elder's ability to see that far even with binoculars, saying Elder was a little less than half a mile away from the complex.

Caddell also wondered why Elder never reported what he had seen until two months later during an FBI interview.

"When I observed something, I would speak out to other team members. The team leader would report it if it needed to be reported," Elder said. "Our main concern was if these individuals inside the building were going to come out compliantly or in a hostile manner."

Other testimony Monday included a deposition read by government attorneys from sect member Kathryn Schroeder.

Schroeder recalled dispensing guns and ammunition to others in the compound, including Misty Ferguson, who was 17 at the time and received third-degree burns as she fled the fiery compound.

Ferguson, now 24, testified earlier in the trial that she never had a gun. Under cross-examination Schroeder said she thought Ferguson had a gun but was not absolutely sure.

Schroeder, who left Mount Carmel after the deadly 1993 siege began, also said Koresh frequently spoke about guns during church meetings.

"I'd say every single study could have had ten minutes' talk about guns," Schroeder testified.

DEAR ABBY

Many groups offer help for children suffering abuse

DEAR ABBY: This letter is in response to your recently printed letter from "Concerned in Pennsylvania," who asked what advice could be given to children who suffer abuse in their homes and cannot leave. We receive calls of this type regularly at Childhelp USA.

While all forms of abuse or neglect are harmful physically, emotionally or psychologically to children, authorities may not think a situation is serious enough to permanently remove children from their homes. Moreover, the abuse may be unknown to all but the perpetrator and the victim. Often victims are scared silent because they are frequently threatened, told it's all their fault or that no one will believe them. Victims may have mixed feelings because the perpetrator is an important person in their lives.

Youngsters in these types of situations must be made aware of the following:

1. You are a victim and the abuse you are suffering is not your fault.

2. You do not deserve to be treated this way.

3. If you are being burned, bitten or hit hard enough to leave marks or bruises, you are being abused.

4. If you are not being fed well enough or taken to the doctor when you are sick, if you are locked in a room for hours or left home alone at too young an age — you are being neglected. Neglect is a form of abuse.

Van Buren

5. If you are made fun of, called names, told you are unwanted or that you are worthless or stupid, you are being emotionally abused.

6. If any of the above are being done to you, please find someone you trust and tell them. A family member, a teacher, the school nurse, the school counselor, someone at your church, a neighbor or anyone you can trust must be told. Ask them for help. Make them believe you. Show them the marks.

7. Try not to be alone with any person who hurts you.

8. Listen to your little voice inside when it says that what is being done to you is not right.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, July 11, 2000:

Develop greater financial independence. People and institutions you count on financially could become less dependable. You are unusually talented, and you draw others. Use your people skills and broaden your circle of friends to establish greater security. Your creativity bubbles forth and you often come up with interesting ideas and plans. If you are single, romance will not be a problem. Use care to not get involved with someone who is emotionally unavailable. If attached, the two of you connect on a deep level. SAGITTARIUS pushes you hard.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ Early developments toss you into turmoil. Discuss a financial matter with a friend who has the same or similar security interests. Reject a plan that will cost you, but do it in a way that another can understand and accept. Believe a family member, who has excellent intentions. Tonight: Do research on the Web.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Challenges arrive early on. What you might think is perfectly OK triggers another. Refuse to get into a disagreement; rather, agree to disagree. Extend yourself toward another, who appreciates your efforts. Give up a nervous habit. Tonight: Follow another's lead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Challenged by news, you might need to regroup at work. What you think is workable actually might not be. Don't let disappointment or anxiety ruin you. Walk away from a problem for a while, and you'll recharge. Spend money on something you love. Tonight: Go out for dinner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You keep putting your best foot forward, and another continues to sabotage your actions. Let go of working this through. Emphasize positive attitude and creativity. There is always an option or another way. Keep that in mind with a loved one. Tonight: Buy flowers on the way home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ Foundations need to be honored, despite another's uproar. A strong, steadfast attitude puts the kibosh on another's wildness. You might be reading too much into another's behavior. Let go of concerns or share them with that important person in your life. Tonight: Frolic along.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ Your nerves could be pulled taut. You get news from a distance that forces you to take stock. You have many more friends and supporters than you realize. Ask for ideas or emotional feedback. Tonight: Schedule needed downtime.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ You mean well. Associates understand where you're coming from, especially professionally. You inadvertently test a partner's limits; as a result, you might need to make a gesture in order to keep the peace. Share more of your professional life. Tonight: Shoot the breeze with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Roll with high energy and charisma. If you encounter negativity from key associates, understand that they wish they had some of your magic. Make calls to a loved one at a distance. If need be, schedule an important trip to see this person. Tonight: Treat another.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Early-morning news tosses you into a tizzy. You cannot seem to come to grips with what needs to happen. Evaluate developments carefully. A loving partner comes to the rescue. Work demands your focus, even if you don't feel up to snuff. Tonight: Now that work is done, you feel great!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Assume a high profile if you want to greet success. An early-morning money issue could sabotage your mood if you let it. Stay on course. Know your long-term goals. A partner or friend agrees and does whatever is possible to ease your way. Tonight: Catch up on mail.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Another could easily start shrieking at your unpredictability. Perhaps you need to explain that you are simply that way. Nurturing others draws positive results. Concentrate on work; try to stay out of trouble, if possible. Gracefully assume responsibilities. Tonight: Where your friends are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ Take action, even if you feel a bit insecure. Don't let a dream or another's comment invade your emotional well-being. If single, a flirtation takes on a dicey overtone. Consider a change within a relationship. Understand where this person is coming from. Tonight: Work late.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1NT	Pass	4♡	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

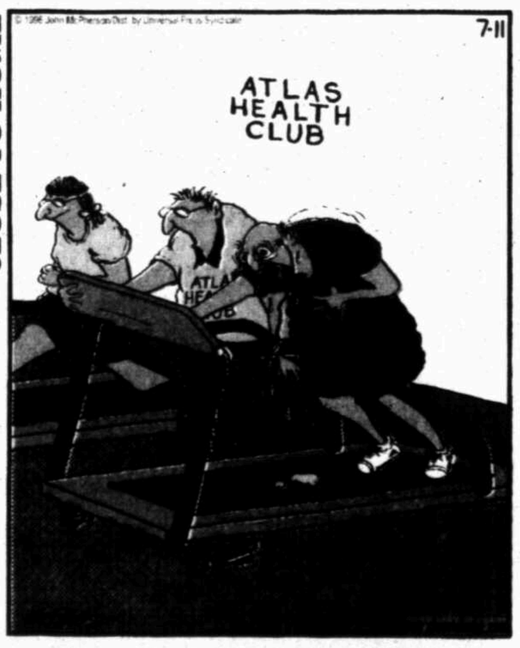

This deal cropped up in the Australian National Championships some years ago. Study the bidding and play and decide who, if anyone, erred.

North-South were using a 15-17 point range for their one no-trump openings with transfers at the two- and four-levels, hence North's four-heart bid showed a good spade suit at least six cards long. In light of the opening-bid range, North's insistence on game was somewhat aggressive, but cannot be faulted. The outcome would depend more on the location of South's high cards than on whether it was a maximum or minimum no-trump, and that was almost impossible to determine with any degree of accuracy.

Declarer ducked the opening lead, won the continuation of the queen with the ace and led a spade to the king to learn the bad news that there was a trump loser. A heart was led and East rose with the ace to switch to the king of diamonds. Declarer won with the ace and led the queen of hearts for a ruffing finesse. West withheld the king, and a diamond was discarded from dummy. Declarer continued with the jack of hearts, pinning the 10 as West covered and dummy ruffed. Declarer came to hand with a club ruff, cashed the ace of spades and continued with the nine of hearts, discarding the table's remaining diamond. Declarer lost only one trick in trumps, hearts and clubs — making four-odd.

While West might have shifted to a diamond at trick two, that defense is not indicated. East, however, blundered badly by rising with the ace of hearts when that suit was led from the board — a play that could not gain. Had East played low instead, allowing West to win with the king, the contract couldn't have been made. Try it

Scott confirms 'Blade Runner' rumor

LONDON — Director Ridley Scott has confirmed what many sci-fi fans have long suspected — Deckard, the hard-bitten hero played by Harrison Ford in 1982's "Blade Runner," is not quite human.

"He is a replicant," Scott was quoted as telling Britain's Channel 4 television, referring to the genetically engineered androids Ford's 21st-century Los Angeles cop is charged with tracking down.

Film fans have debated the character's nature since Scott released his director's cut of the movie in 1992.

A commercial flop when it was initially released — with a studio-imposed voiceover and a tacked-on happy ending — "Blade Runner" became a cult classic.

The documentary airs on Saturday.

DHAKA, Bangladesh — Supermodel and UNICEF representative Claudia Schiffer is on a five-day visit to Bangladesh.

Schiffer is on a tour to assess the impoverished nation's efforts to eradicate polio, which affects millions of children. She will visit immunization centers.

Bangladesh is trying to eradicate polio by giving free oral vaccines to children twice a year. The program is funded in part by UNICEF.

NEW YORK — The move from NBC News White House correspondent to co-host of NBC's "Weekend Today" taught David Bloom something about television "cotton candy," he says in TV Guide.

"The first half-hour, you're delving into serious issues," Bloom said. "Then you're making cotton candy. It's all fun. It's within my capacity to be a serious journalist and to learn how to make cotton candy."

"He really popped as a correspondent, but I wasn't sure he could make the transition to anchor because he's so intense," said NBC News President Andrew Lack. "But he has surprised me. He grows more comfortable each week and has shown he can do it."

LONDON — Supermodel Elle MacPherson says motherhood has taken its toll on the figure that earned her the nickname "The Body."

"When you stop breast-feeding, your body gets back into shape quickly. There are a few stages you go through — at three months, six months and then a year," MacPherson said in the July 11 issue of Hello! magazine.

"Then, two years down the track, everything goes downhill because you're that much older!"

The 37-year-old Australian and her partner of five years, French financier Arpad Arki Busson, 37, have a 2-year-old son, Flynn.

MacPherson told the British weekly she would like to have as many as three or four children, saying motherhood is her "greatest achievement."

LOS ANGELES — Former Eagle Don Henley is enjoying life in the slow lane now that he has left Los Angeles and returned to his native Texas.

"I really believe I've discovered my better self," Henley, who married Sharon Summerall in 1995 and is raising three children, told the Daily News of Los Angeles over the weekend.

The change is evident in "Inside Job," his first release of new material in 11 years. In one track, "Everything Is Different Now," the former Eagle sings: "I hate to tell you this, but I'm very, very happy."

The singer-drummer returned to Texas after his Los Angeles home was destroyed by a 1994 earthquake.

LOS ANGELES — James Brown, move over. Jay Leno may be the new hardest-working guy in show business.

In addition to putting in marathon work days as the host of "The Tonight Show," Leno performs stand-up comedy at private shows — as many as 100 performances per year.

Leno earns an estimated $14 million per year at NBC. He gets as much as $100,000 per appearance by corporate customers eager to see the late-night talk show host perform in a more intimate venue, the Los Angeles Times reported Sunday.

So why is he still working so hard at the peak of his success?

Leno said many people outside of show business work just as hard as he does, without the recognition. But he doesn't discount the financial rewards.

"People always say, 'Oh, money can't make you happy,'" Leno said. "But if you're already happy, money can make you happier."

Select right preschool for family

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D.
New York Times Special Features

QUESTION: What should I look for when selecting a preschool for my child? — P.G., Memphis

DR. BRAZELTON: First of all, you must decide whether you want a preschool that asks parents to make a contribution in time and effort. Some preschools keep parents involved and ask for participation at many levels, which is a good thing if you are not already overburdened with work or other obligations.

Brazelton

Second, you should look closely at the teachers involved with the school. Do you feel good about them, and do you feel that your child will respond well to them and fit in?

To help you make up your mind, spend a day observing a class in action. Then ask yourself: Would I feel good about being here? Do the teachers respect and value each child as an individual? Is the program for the day interesting and a bit challenging?

By 4 or 5 years of age, many children are ready to learn the first steps of reading and writing. Any program should account for this, but this should be done without pressure. Programs which place pressure on a child to learn at this age can undermine the child's own eagerness and take away his motivation and feeling of success when he does make a learning spurt.

At this age, remember that intelligence is built on nurturing emotional experience, not drilling. A preschool which fosters the child's self-esteem and values her for who she is will be preparing the way for future learning.

Last of all, find out if the program you are interested in will allow you and your child the necessary time for adjusting to the separation you will be facing. Always plan to stay in the classroom for the first few days, until your child lets you know that it's OK for you to go. The teachers should feel a responsibility to help in this important adjustment, not to push you away.

Parents of preschoolers and their teachers are bound to feel a bit competitive for the child. (This is an important part of caring deeply about the same child.) But, rather than letting this competition create friction, you and the teacher should talk about it openly.

QUESTION: My 22-month-old daughter hits and bites me when I tell her no or ask her to do something. She also tries to bite the rug or whatever is near her. When she is trying to bite or hit, she growls like a dog.

I have tried to stop her by telling her it is not nice and that it hurts. I have also used timeouts. These have not worked. Do you have any suggestions? — H.A., Endwell, N.Y.

DR. BRAZELTON: Most toddlers go through phases of biting and hitting when they are frustrated or angry. The more you react, the more you may be reinforcing her behavior.

I certainly agree with what you are doing, but I would advise you to stay as calm as you can. The most effective way I've found to deal with such behavior is to put the child down and walk away from her, saying, "I don't like that." Just make sure that she's in a safe place to be alone.

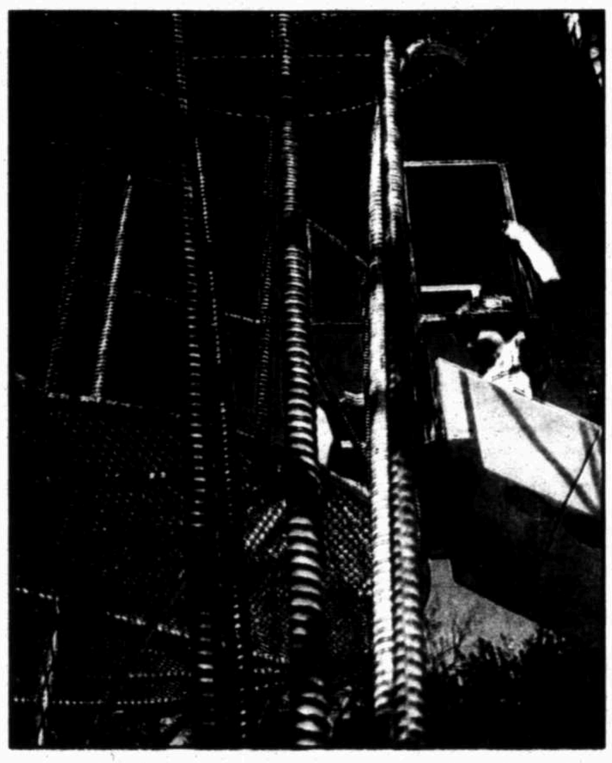

The biting at the rug worries me a little because it is unusual. A few children who are this violent in their behavior may deserve to have a physical checkup. Consult your pediatrician or nurse practitioner about pica (eating substances that are not food) or anemia. But the biting may just be a "touchpoint" that she's going through before she develops into a new phase.

Be sure to use positive reinforcement when she doesn't bite or overreact. Tell her: "Good for you!"

MISD and city officials work hard to keep kids' playgrounds safe

By Katie Boden

Some of us can recall playgrounds that were more like combat zones. Remember those 10-foot-high slides with steep, metal ramps that scorched our seats on hot summer days? And how about those swing sets that tipped over if two swings got going in the same direction?

Thankfully, this equipment is becoming obsolete.

However, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission still estimates that a child is treated in an emergency room for a playground-related injury every two-and-a-half-minutes. This does not include the children whose injuries receive treatment outside the emergency room. Consider these additional facts recorded by the USCPSC:

- The leading playground equipment relative to children's injuries is swings, followed by climbers (monkey bars, overhead ladders, rings), then slides.
- 70.2 percent of playground injuries are due to falls.
- Injuries to the head and face account for nearly 60 percent of all injuries to children ages 0-4.
- Injuries to the arm and hand account for 43 percent of all injuries to children ages 5-14.
- About 40 percent of all playground injuries have been attributed to lack of appropriate supervision.

The city of Midland and Midland Independent School District are both well aware of these statistics and are doing their best to provide safe public playgrounds in our city.

Dan M. Hanks, supervisor of grounds for MISD, has been involved with the school district's playground equipment for 17 years. Just during that time he has seen a lot of changes. "It is the goal of MISD to continually change and upgrade playground equipment to provide the safest, most accessible and enjoyable equipment," said Hanks. "MISD does not allow individuals or groups to build school playground equipment by themselves. Equipment must be planned and meet specifications."

MISD follows the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission's guidelines for playground safety. Whenever the need arises to build a new school playground, only professional companies conforming to national safety standards are allowed to bid on the job.

Professional manufacturing companies are chosen to supply the equipment. "These companies have to adhere to guidelines before they can sell to the public," said Hanks. "Also, these companies have multi-million dollar liability policies behind them," he added. Manufacturers are going to do their best to make sure their equipment doesn't produce any injury claims.

MISD is currently purchasing equipment from GameTime, a company located in Fort Payne, Ala. GameTime has been certified by the International Organization for Standardization since 1996.

Some safety requirements include:

- Equipment built low to the ground.
- Use of platforms and bars to discourage children from climbing on the outside of the equipment.
- Separate equipment designed for toddlers and older children.
- Equipment built with a child's torso size in mind so legs and heads won't get stuck.
- Flush bolts so as not to hook on children's clothing.
- Crawl tubes designed with windows for security.
- Planks on suspension bridges that won't pinch when they come together.
- Establishment of safety zones around each play component to help eliminate collisions.

The design and implementation of surface coverings is also a safety issue. "We used to dig pits, put a unit in, then fill the pit with sand," said Hanks. "Now we build a concrete border 12 inches high so the sand will stay.

"The ADA (American with Disabilities Act) is causing changes in the industry, too," he added. Play areas must be accessible for wheelchairs.

Sand is not allowed, but is still used. Wood chips are being used for pathways to the equipment. "Rubber surfaces are too cost prohibitive," said Hanks.

In addition to adhering to the USCPSC requirements, MISD also inspects play equipment every three months. All 35 school grounds are inspected at least four times a year. "In the mean time," said Hanks, "when we receive a work order, we go out and fix it."

Service Master, a contract service company for grounds and custodial services was recently called by MISD to provide help, or possibly take over the job of maintaining the play grounds. "The bottom line," said Hanks, "was that they could not do anything more efficient with the use of money allowed as we were already doing."

Hanks said he wants all kids, regardless of physical limitations to have a good time and to be able to play along side each other. "You are not going to eliminate all injuries. You cannot stop a child from playing and getting hurt."

Stewart Gerhart, parks operations manager for the city of Midland, is in charge of Midland's 47 parks, which range in size from .3 acres to 150 acres. As well as managing the parks, Gehart is also a certified inspector. The corner of his desk was piled high with photos of all existing park equipment, as well as log books having check-off lists for every park.

"All our parks are inspected monthly using this check-off list," Gerhart said. "In addition, cleaning crews check it once a week."

The city also uses only professional contractors and suppliers for all playground projects. Midland City parks follow the 1994 U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission Handbook for Public Playground safety. The manufacturers follow the 1997 guidelines. As with MISD, the playground equipment is purchased from GameTime and is warranted for 10 years.

As it becomes necessary, old equipment is replaced with updated units in city parks. Some equipment is preferred over others. A new component called the Mega Rock is a big hit. It is a plastic simulated rock with hand and foot holds for adventurous little mountain climbers. A dinosaur fossil relief appears on the underside. Cargo nets, however, will no longer be considered for playground use. "We will not install cargo net climbers anymore," Gerhart said. "They're too dangerous. The chain often breaks."

Gerhart also explained that some parks, like Reyes Park, will have two sets of identical play equipment, but one set is obviously for older children. The equipment for the younger children is installed farthest away from the streets.

The city uses concrete sand, 18 inches deep, as a surface material. "Kids and parents like concrete sand better than masonry sand," said Gerhard, "because it doesn't stick to clothes and skin." To meet ADA requirements, rubberized material is used for boundaries and up to transfer stations.

Transfer stations are a new concept being used both on school and city playgrounds. Basically steps with hand rails, they are installed at access points to play equipment. ADA required, the idea behind the transfer stations is to allow a child to climb out of his wheelchair, pull himself up on the transfer station, then around on other areas of the play unit. They are being received with mixed reviews. "We've always tried to provide octagon ramps to handicapped children," said Hanks. "The children, although still in their wheelchairs, could play alongside all the other children. With transfer stations, the handicapped child will be out of his chair and this may prove more difficult and restrictive than before."

Midland has its own unique safety issues that are not addressed in government manuals. Both Hanks and Gerhart have been busy battling fire ants, brought out in large numbers due to recent rains. "When they first appeared, we tried to eradicate them. Now we're just trying to control them," said Gerhart.

Another pesky problem is sticker-burrs. The parks out on the edge of town, surrounded by undeveloped land, seem to be plagued the most.

Both Hanks and Gerhart believe school and city parks in Midland are safe. Gerhart has his own method of "test driving" the equipment. "Anytime a new piece comes in, I try it out with my 7-year-old and 2-year-old. Anytime we put one in, I wouldn't be afraid to let them play on it."

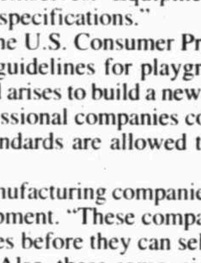

The most important piece of safety equipment should be the parents. Gerhart advised, "Parents, go out when your kids are playing. Know what they're playing on. We provide the opportunity for their play, but parents should be there watching out for them."

A PARENT'S PERSPECTIVE: JEFF STEVENS

Gun control: Keep them out of children's hands

By Jeff Stevens

It's the media's fault. It's the government's fault. Video games. Movies. A violent culture. The gun lobby.

Stevens

A decade of death and carnage at the hands of our children and the blame game continues with no solutions in sight. And as this haunting trend picks up steam in the 21st Century, I've yet to hear anyone place the blame squarely where it belongs — on the shoulders of American parents.

Thirteen-year-old children, despite how much they've been anesthetized to violence by television or movies, can not walk up to Big Billy's Baretas and Bazookas and order a semi-automatic machine gun as if it were a Big Mac.

At the heart of almost every gun-related child death is an issue of parental neglect.

In Jonesboro, Ark., the boys who went berserk on their classmates got their weapons from a family member.

At Columbine High School in Littleton, Colo., one of the shooters had a firearm on his dresser and bomb materials in his room.

I don't know what it was like in anyone else's house, but growing up with Wayne, my beloved father, my sister and I always had an open-door policy — our door was always open and he could come in whenever he wanted. If he felt the urge to prowl through my personal effects, he did so with the justification, "It's my house."

As a child and particularly as a teenager, I was none too happy about that. But, today, as a parent of three, I have a greater understanding that my father's intent was not to make me feel like I was in prison.

His intent was to ensure that I did not, in fact, end up in a real prison while under his charge.

My parents understood that one of the responsibilities of parenting is to make every effort to protect their children from drugs, violence and the myriad hazards associated with casual sex.

That's no less true and probably more true today. What is difficult to accept is that often what children need protection from most is themselves.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, approximately 4,000 children under the age of 20 die each year as the result of firearms. Almost half of those children die from accidental shootings or suicide.

And behind those 4,000 children are likely to be 8,000 parents regretful that they didn't secure their guns, didn't keep them unloaded, didn't talk to their children about the consequences inherent in guns.

Charlton Heston and the NRA are not the problem.

Violent movies are not the problem nor is the media or video games or Hulk Hogan and his rasslin' buddies.

Gun deaths involving children are the fault of parental neglect, and until America wakes up and assigns some consequences to parents who allow their children access to loaded weapons, the killing will likely continue.

Michael Irvin calling it a career

■ Cowboys wide receiver expected to officially announce retirement today during press conference.

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — The spinal injury that ended Michael Irvin's 1999 season has forced the Dallas Cowboys' receiver into retirement.

The announcement, which has been expected for months, will become official with a news conference Tuesday at Texas Stadium. It comes a month after longtime teammate Daryl Johnston also called it a career because of a neck injury and a week before Dallas opens training camp.

Great hands made Irvin one of the best receivers in NFL history and a loud mouth made him one of the game's great showboats.

Irvin loved taunting opponents with an exaggerated first-down motion after a big catch. He made enough big catches that he was nicknamed "the Playmaker," a moniker he proudly had printed on his license plate.

Along with Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith, Irvin led the Cowboys to three Super Bowl championships in a four-year span. Fans argued over which "triplet" was the most important, yet it was understood that each enhanced the others.

Irvin finished his 12-year career with 750 catches, tied for ninth in NFL history, for 11,904 yards, also ninth all-time. He holds nearly every major career or single-season receiving record in Cowboys history.

His insight and personality will help Irvin well in his next career. The 34-year-old is expected to announce plans to go into broadcasting.

For all his on-field accomplishments, Irvin also will be remembered for some serious off-field incidents.

In 1996, Irvin was arrested in a motel-room drug bust in the wee hours of his 30th birthday. He pleaded no contest to a felony drug charge that summer and received 800 hours of community service and four years of probation, which was lifted last Thursday, 10 days early.

Irvin also was suspended by the NFL for five games. His image and the team's were seriously tarnished and he lost most of his endorsements.

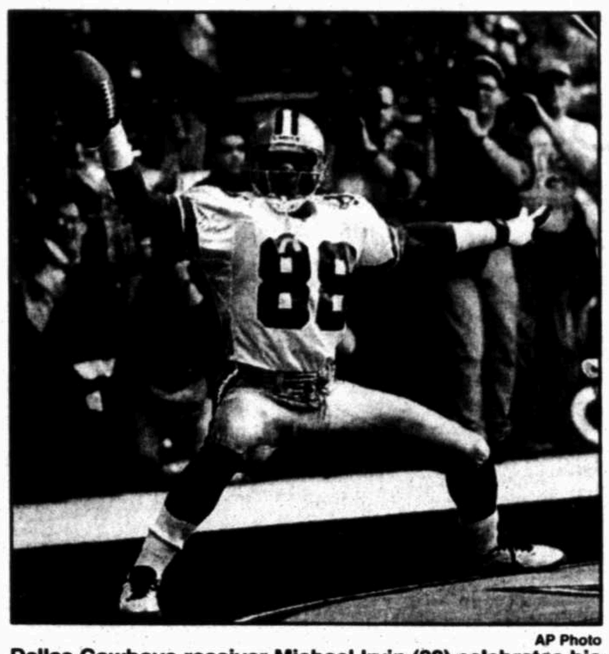

Months later, Irvin was falsely accused of sexually assault. At training camp in 1998, Irvin was involved in "Scissorsgate" when he cut the neck of a teammate during a playful scuffle prior to a haircut.

Irvin followed that with a down year in 1998, catching a career-low one touchdown pass as then-coach Chan Gailey reduced his role in the offense.

His future in Dallas was questioned going into 1999, but Irvin turned a hot topic into a non-issue by working hard and saying all the right things. Then, on Oct. 10 in Philadelphia, he suffered the most serious injury of his career.

MIDLAND ROCKHOUNDS

'Hounds take 2nd straight

Midland holds on to beat Missions

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

As decisive a win as the Midland RockHounds had enjoyed one day earlier, Monday's game against the San Antonio Missions was far less certain in terms of dominance of an opponent.

But that doesn't mean the 'Hounds won't take a win.

After falling behind by two runs early, the 'Hounds found a way to win that has often eluded them in close games this season. Thanks in part to a bloop double and a bad throw to first base which were both indirect results of the glaring sun in the west, the 'Hounds scratched across enough offense to take a lead. They held on to it, as the game ended with a called third strike, to claim a 4-3 win over the Missions, their second in a row at Christensen Stadium.

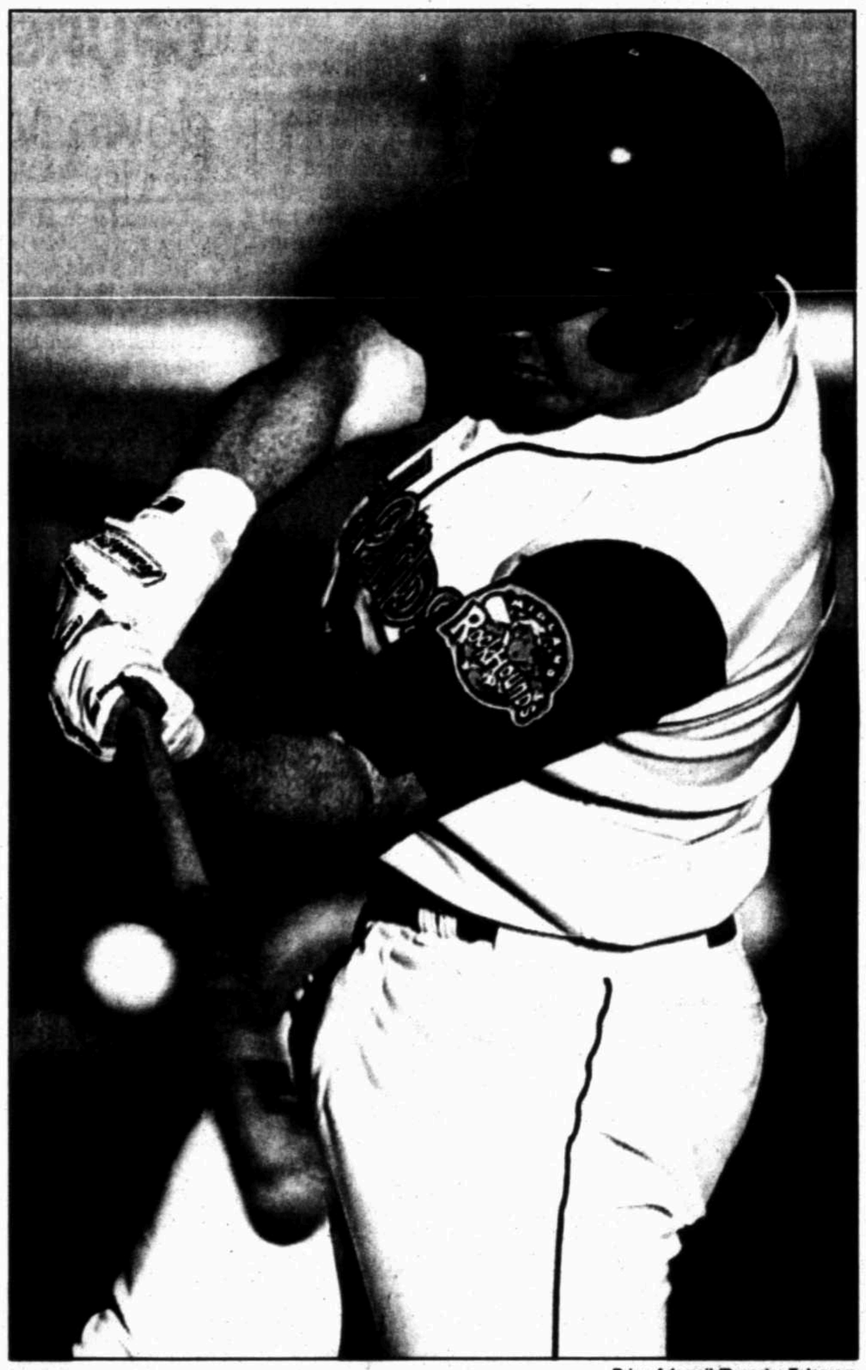

The win couldn't be attributed sheerly to good luck, but 'Hounds' manager Tony DeFrancesco knows that fortune is as good to have on your side as talent.

"Tonight I feel like we finally got some breaks," said DeFrancesco. "We were helped by that throw to first base which they lost in the sun and we got a twilight double by (Justin) Bowles which was big."

If there is a 'Hound who could use some good luck, it's Bowles. For much of the season, his batting average has been hovering around the .200 mark, and he entered Monday's game hitting .202. Against the Missions, he went 2-for-4 as both of his hits resulted in the 'Hounds pushing across a run.

With two outs in the bottom of the fourth and the 'Hounds trailing 2-1 with Todd Mensik at first base, Bowles hit a hard grounder into the hole between third base and shortstop. Missions' third baseman Nick Theodorou fielded the ball and threw to first, far too late to put out Bowles.

Theodorou's throw skipped up the line, pulling first baseman Robb Gorr well off the bag. With the sun in his eyes, Gorr couldn't pick up the throw and the ball got away from him and rolled into right field foul territory. This allowed Mensik to come all the way around and score, tying the game 2-2.

Report: Duncan to remain with Spurs

By Jim Vertuno
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Maybe the begging worked.

After weeks of pleas from fans to stay with their team, free-agent forward Tim Duncan reportedly is ready to sign a new deal with the San Antonio Spurs, spurning the Orlando Magic and the opportunity to play with Grant Hill.

The Orlando Sentinel and the San Antonio Express-News reported Monday that Duncan's representatives told Orlando general manager John Gabriel that Duncan will turn down the Magic's six-year, $67.5 million offer.

Duncan

Lon Babby, Duncan's attorney, flew to San Antonio on Monday and met with Spurs officials. Contacted by The Associated Press, Magic officials declined comment until Duncan made an announcement.

Duncan will hold a news conference at 10 a.m. CDT Tuesday to announce his plans.

Reports of Duncan's decision to remain in San Antonio brought welcome relief for Spurs fans, who had dotted the city in recent weeks with billboards and placards reading: "Stay Tim, Stay!"

The anxiety took off when the Magic made a hard push to lure Duncan and Hill. Both players traveled to Orlando on the same weekend and were treated to stays in one of the theme-park city's top resort hotels and luxurious parties hosted by Magic executives.

Downs auction raises $8,000 for local MDA

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

The people from Ruidoso Downs Race Track and Casino came to Midland Monday, not only to show their faces around Midland, but to give back a little.

They were part of the Ruidoso Downs Jockey Tour and MDA Auction held at The Bar.

When the last bid was taken, they did their part. All totaled, $8,000 was raised for the Muscular Dystrophy Association from the auction of sports memorabilia and vacation packages. That number is absolutely huge. In fact, the total is more than three times the number raised last year and almost as much as the last two years combined.

Last year, $2,500 was raised during the event's first year in Midland. Organizers said that the last auction in Lubbock pocketed $5,800 for charities.

"We wanted to do something to help and show some gratitude for the people who are coming to Ruidoso," Kenny Hart said.

In the world of Quarter Horse jockeys, Hart is an icon, becoming the first jockey to break notable racing records. He was the first to win 1,000 races. Then the first to eclipse some other notable barriers — 1,500 wins, then 2,000, then 2,500, then 3,000. All totaled Hart rode in 21,422 official Quarter Horse races. He won 3,181 (a remarkable 14.8 percent). He placed or showed in 5,723 (26.7 percent). He led the nation 19 times in races won or money won.

Hart, who retired in 1997, was also the first jockey to exceed $1,000,000 in a season (1977) and $2,000,000 (1981). In 1985, his

Johnson to start against Wells in All-Star contest

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

ATLANTA — Just call it the All-Scar game.

The amazing list of All-Star casualties grew even longer Sunday, with Ken Griffey Jr., Barry Bonds, Cal Ripken, Mike Piazza and Greg Maddux becoming the latest to pull out because of injuries.

Mark McGwire, Pedro Martinez, Alex Rodriguez and Manny Ramirez previously were scratched from Tuesday night's game at Turner Field.

"We were looking at who we could've had if everybody was healthy and it looked like it could've been one of the best All-Star lineups of all-time," said Atlanta third baseman Chipper Jones, a starter. "It's disappointing."

With Cleveland second baseman Roberto Alomar also hurting — he was hit by a pitch below the right elbow Sunday, although he will start — there's an injured All-Star at every position.

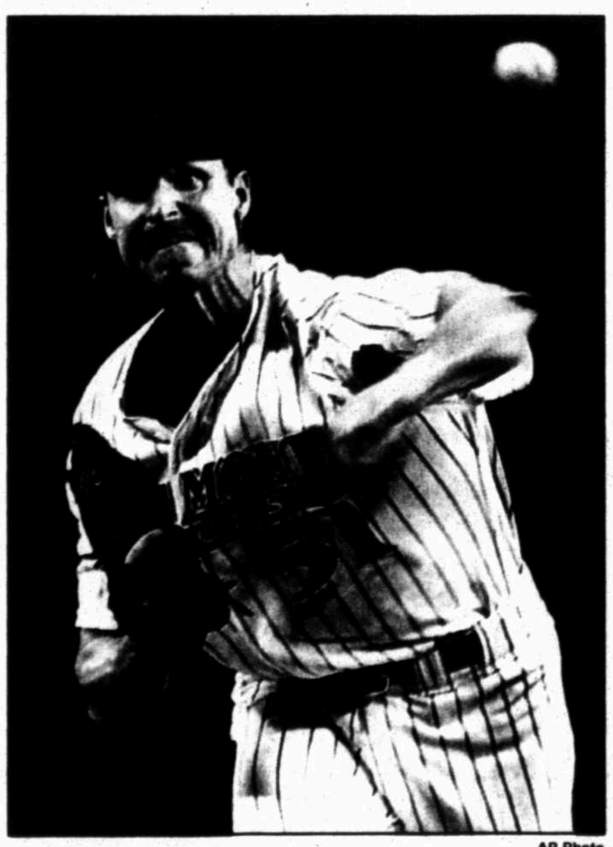

"They've been bugging me for a lineup the last few days," said NL manager Bobby Cox of the Braves, "but I just don't know who I can provide right now."

Cox and AL manager Joe Torre were able to patch together lineups on Monday, headed by starting pitchers David Wells of Toronto and Randy Johnson of Arizona.

The AL lineup will lead off with Alomar, followed by Derek Jeter and Bernie Williams of the Yankees, Jason Giambi of Oakland, Carl Everett of Boston, Ivan Rodriguez of Texas, Jermaine Dye of Kansas City and Travis Fryman of Cleveland. Jeter, Everett and Fryman are replacements for injured starters.

The NL is even more wounded, with four substitute starters. Leading off for the NL will be Barry Larkin of Cincinnati, followed by Jones, Gary Sheffield of Los Angeles or Vladimir Guerrero of Montreal, Sammy Sosa

All-Star injuries don't dampen festivities for players who are fill-ins

By Josh Dubow
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Not everybody at the All-Star game is bummed out about the injuries that have kept the sport's biggest names on the sideline.

Some players are too overjoyed at being fill-ins — no matter what the circumstances — to have much sympathy for the disappointed fans and their banged-up colleagues.

"I'm going to enjoy it," said Jeffrey Hammonds, who found out he was replacing Barry Bonds on the roster in the eighth inning of Colorado's game Sunday night against Anaheim. "It's not a burden. This is what it's all about. It's ironic that it took an injury, but if that's what it's going to take ..."

With a record eight players selected for the team — Bonds, Mark McGwire, Ken Griffey Jr., Mike Piazza, Greg Maddux, Cal Ripken, Manny Ramirez and Alex Rodriguez — missing the game, there will be more players in the training room than on the field this week.

That will surely leave fans who paid between $100-150 a ticket a bit unhappy — and some players as well.

"It's too bad because these are the guys I enjoy watching, too," said Baltimore shortstop Mike Bordick, added to the team when Ripken opted out with a back injury.

It got so bad that NL manager Bobby Cox put out a cross-country alert for a third-string All-Star catcher to take Piazza's place on the roster. He finally found the Cubs' Joe Girardi after his first two choices couldn't make it. Javy Lopez went back home to Puerto Rico

Armstrong surges to take Tour lead

By Andreas Evagora
Associated Press Writer

LOURDES-HAUTACAM, France — Lance Armstrong surged into the overall lead in the Tour de France on Monday with a stunning climb in the Pyrenees that placed him second in the 10th stage.

Armstrong, who came back from cancer to win last year's Tour, overtook 1998 winner Marco Pantani and contender Richard Virenque on the final climb in cold, driving rain.

Armstrong was in his element.

"Today was about good tactics," he said. "It was a good day for me. I like these conditions."

The 28-year-old Texan started the day in 16th place, 5:54 behind, but his stirring performance gave him the yellow jersey for the first time this year. Armstrong created a 10-minute swing in the standings and now holds a lead of 4:14 over second-place Jan Ullrich, the 1997 champion.

The only rider Armstrong couldn't catch Monday was Spain's Javier Ochoa, who won the first tough climb that was roughly the halfway point of the 21-stage race.

Ochoa, who rides for the Kelme team, won the 127-mile stage from Dax to Lourdes-Hautacam in 6 hours, 9 minutes, 32 seconds. Armstrong finished 42 seconds behind.

"Ochoa rode hard and led for so long," Armstrong said. "Probably 99 percent of the people there were Spaniards cheering him."

Armstrong, who rides for the U.S. Postal Service Team, has said all along that he can dominate other top riders in the mountains. The Tour is won and lost in those grueling stages, with good climbers able to make up dozens of minutes in the overall standings.

The vital moment of the day — and perhaps the whole Tour — came eight miles from the end.

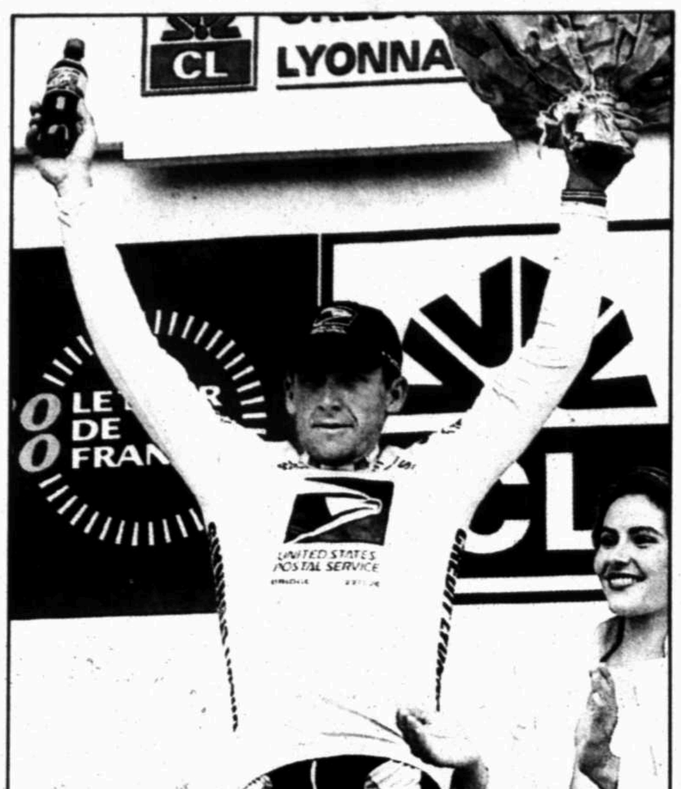

Armstrong was well behind Ochoa, in a group with Pantani, Ullrich and Alex Zulle.

Pantani attacked. Armstrong stayed with the shaven-headed Italian, but Zulle and Ullrich struggled to keep up.

Armstrong suddenly accelerated, storming past Pantani and attacking the group ahead of him, which included France's Virenque, last year's King of the Mountains.

"Armstrong came through like a plane at the end," Virenque said.

Chilling winds, driving rain, mist and temperatures as low as 45 made it a day for brave riding. Several riders skidded down treacherous mountain roads.

Karl, Brown turn down Tar Heels

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — They're not exactly lining up at North Carolina for Bill Guthridge's job.

George Karl and Larry Brown pulled out of consideration for the Tar Heels' vacancy Monday, the latest high-profile coaches not interested in taking over one of the most famous programs in college basketball.

Karl, the Milwaukee Bucks' coach who used to played for Dean Smith at North Carolina, said he was flattered to be approached.

"Right now, however, I also have a loyalty to an organization that has treated me very well, an owner who has shown a great deal of faith in me and team that's on the verge of something special," he said.

The Bucks had gone seven seasons without a playoff appearance before Karl led them to two consecutive postseason berths.

Brown, the Philadelphia 76ers' coach who also played under Smith with the Tar Heels, announced his decision after meeting with North Carolina officials over the weekend.

"I have decided to continue my efforts and fulfill my dream of helping to bring a championship to Philadelphia," Brown said.

Smith, who retired in 1997 as the winningest coach in NCAA Division I history, called the Sixers and Bucks last Friday about the job opening. Guthridge retired June 30 but is acting as the interim coach until his replacement is found.

Other former Tar Heels under consideration include Notre Dame's Matt Doherty, Middle Tennessee State's Randy Wiel and Tennessee Tech's Jeff Lebo. Kansas coach Roy Williams, an assistant under Smith for 10 years, announced last Friday that he would not take the job.

Doherty met this weekend in Chapel Hill with Baddour, Smith and Guthridge. Doherty, who played under Smith, said meetings with North Carolina athletic officials went well, but he hasn't been offered the job, nor was he given a timetable on the search.

UNC also plans to talk with Wiel on Tuesday.

"I'm very happy at MTSU, but when something like this comes along you need to give it your attention," he told The Tennessean.

Wiel has a 65-53 record during his four years at MTSU. He played four seasons with the Tar Heels before graduating in 1979.

SPURS: Duncan to turn down Magic's $67M offer

(From 1C)

Duncan even got to meet Tiger Woods, who lives nearby.

Hill has said he will sign with Orlando. Had the Magic pulled off the Duncan deal, Orlando would have had the juggernaut lineup capable of tipping the balance of power in the Eastern Conference.

The Magic position, and the offer it makes, are unique. They have the NBA's coach of the year in Doc Rivers and enough salary cap room to sign two of the league's top free agents. Their future includes nine first-round draft picks.

But there was pressure from the Spurs as well. Veteran center David Robinson, who along with Duncan gives San Antonio the most formidable front line in the league, cut short his vacation in Hawaii to persuade Duncan to stay. The two guided San Antonio to its first NBA title in 1999.

With the Spurs' aging lineup, the 24-year-old Duncan is considered the key to San Antonio's future. Without him, the Spurs would be left with a brand-new $175 million arena for the 2002-2003 season and without one of the game's superstars.

In the end, it appears Duncan's loyalty to the Spurs and his desire to keep playing with Robinson won out.

"Tim stayed at Wake Forest all four years," an NBA source told the Express-News. "He isn't a guy who likes a lot of change in his life. He has played with David Robinson and for the same coach for the past three years. But the Magic made it a difficult decision for him."

Duncan could sign a seven-year deal worth $86.5 million if he re-signs with San Antonio, although he is likely to sign a shorter deal. Duncan has a nonbinding commitment to the Spurs and cannot officially sign a contract with the team until Aug. 1.

"I haven't heard anything," Spurs coach and general manager Gregg Popovich said. "He hasn't given me a hint this entire time. I sure wish somebody would tell me something."

mounts earned $2,628,431. His career total was $28,415,605, a record which stood until this year.

Among the other representatives from Ruidoso included two other standout jockeys, Mike Short and Jeff Williams.

Another man making the trip was Rick Baugh, general manager of the Ruidoso Downs Race Track and Casino. He represents not only the racing business but Ruidoso Downs' recent expansion into the casino business.

"The major goal was to use the casino to enhance the horse racing business," Baugh said. "Twenty percent of the revenue from the casino goes straight into racing."

That means bigger purses, which could be hard to imagine, especially when it comes to the Quarter Horses. The All-American Futurity is one reason Ruidoso is the mecca for Quarter Horse racing fans. The race which takes place on Labor Day weekend pays the winner $1,000,000 and features a $2,000,000 total purse.

"Up until a few years ago, it was the richest race in the world," said Hart, who coincidentally never claimed the All-American.

The Rainbow Futurity, which will be held July 23, pays a total purse of $700,000.

Horse racing has always been an important part of the Midland sports scene. From the Scharbauer family to Gwen Eaves, Midland's owners have brought home racing's top trophies from thoroughbred's Kentucky Derby to the All-American Futurity. Last year, Eaves' horse, A Delightful Dasher, won both the Rainbow Futurity and All-American Futurity.

The Ruidoso officials say that A Delightful Dasher should again be a major player in the nation's Quarter Horse scene this year.

Also, Midlanders are part of an important West Texas contingency which frequent Ruidoso for racing and gambling.

So yes, the people of Ruidoso has benefited from Midland's wealth. Monday, they helped give back.

IRVIN: WR won three Super Bowls

(From 1C)

wardly slammed his head into the hard turf of Veterans Stadium and was temporarily paralyzed.

Tests revealed that he sustained a herniated disc, but they also detected that Irvin was born with a narrow spinal cord. That genetic condition became his primary concern because it puts him at a much higher risk of serious injury if he takes another blow to the head or neck.

The Cowboys have been preparing for life without Irvin ever since. In February, they acquired receiver Joey Galloway from Seattle.

Irvin never had the speed Galloway has, but he beat defenders to the ball using smarts and size.

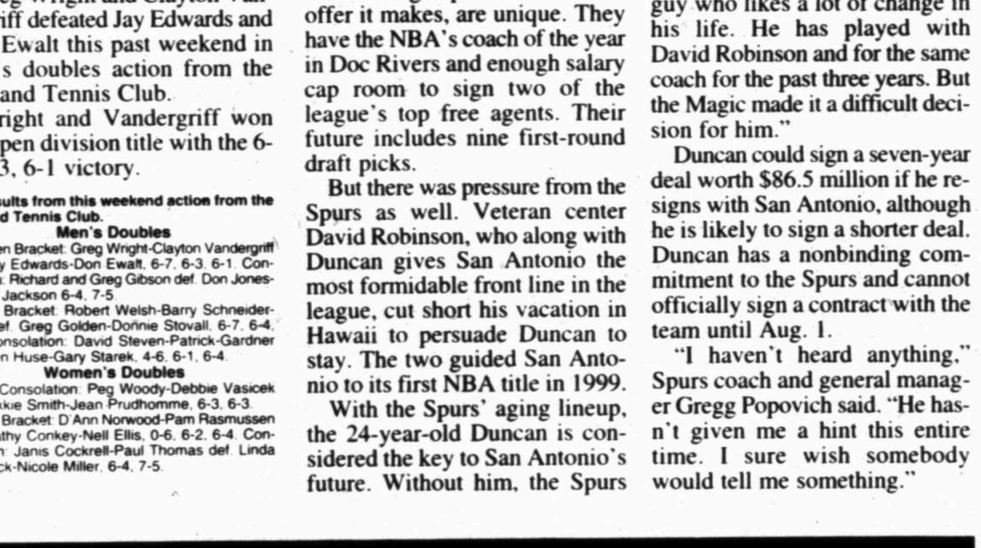

He took advantage of his 6-foot-2, 207-pound frame to screen cornerbacks, especially on the quick slant that was the trademark play for Irvin and Aikman. On deeper passes, Irvin often stretched the rules of contact by swatting away defenders' arms.

In addition to his three Super Bowl titles in Dallas, Irvin won a national championship in college at Miami, his hometown.

Irvin was the final first-round pick by Tom Landry. Dallas took him with the 11th overall pick in 1988 and a year later he was reunited with his college coach, Jimmy Johnson. The Cowboys won the Super Bowl following the '92, '93 and '95 seasons.

ALL-STAR NOTEBOOK

Aaron to Rocker: Just shut up

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Hank Aaron has tried to counsel John Rocker in the months since the reliever disparaged minorities, gays and foreigners in a magazine interview. Aaron isn't sure Rocker listened.

"The thing that bothers me is the fact that he keeps talking about it more and more and more," baseball's home-run king, also an Atlanta Braves executive, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"If he would just be quiet, play baseball, and do the thing that he can do best, and that's pitch and relieve for the Braves, I think things will be better," Aaron said.

Also on the show were baseball commissioner Bud Selig and union head Donald Fehr, who repeated their long familiar positions on the divide between players and owners.

Selig claimed the revenue disparity between the large and small markets has increased.

"There's no question that revenue sharing, salary restraint, the way we do business with each other, all of that has to be changed," he said. "The fact of the matter is that the disparity thing is so serious, wherever I go, whether it's Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, San Diego, Milwaukee, Seattle, that people are concerned. They're concerned that their team doesn't have a realistic chance of winning."

Just last month, the New York Yankees became the first baseball team ever with a $100 million payroll — more than six times Minnesota's at $16.5 million. Management's attempt to get a restraint on salaries is the primary reason baseball has had eight work stoppages since 1972.

"I don't see any historical precedent for it," Fehr said. "We've always believed in free markets. ... The key is going to be revenue sharing."

The players' association is expected to exercise an option to extend the current labor contract through the 2001 season. If owners are serious about getting a restraint on salaries, a work stoppage the following season is likely.

On other topics, Fehr said it's doubtful the union would ever agree to eliminate the designated hitter.

"A large generation of fans in American League cities have grown up with the DH. I think it's popular there," Fehr said. "I think the controversy actually is good for baseball, and I don't see any realistic prospect that that's likely to be changed.

Selig also repeated that Pete Rose's lifetime ban from baseball is unlikely to change. Rose applied for reinstatement three years ago, but Selig hasn't ruled.

"Pete accepted voluntarily a lifetime suspension from Bart Giamatti. There aren't any of us who are happy about it, and I understand," Selig said.

"But protecting the integrity of the game is a responsibility of the commissioner and of major league baseball, and until there's anything further to talk about, it's just a subject that's painful for all of us who have to be involved. ... I told a group of children the other day that if there's ever a scintilla of doubt when people go to a game that there's anything in question about that game, we have no game left."

COULD HAVE BEEN THERE: This marks the second straight All-Star game not played at the site originally selected.

On June 27, 1997, the commissioner's office announced the 2000 game would be played at Joe Robbie Stadium in Miami, the home of the Florida Marlins.

"Major league baseball is gung-ho on the future of baseball in South Florida," NL president Len Coleman said then. "The year 2000 is a very special year all around the world and certainly the All-Star game will be a significant event."

By Dec. 1, 1998, baseball's tune had changed. The Marlins had just sold off most of their stars and gone 54-108, the worst record ever for a World Series champion. Attendance plummeted.

"The National League has decided the All-Star game should be played in new facilities, except in special circumstances," Coleman said then.

Last year's game, originally scheduled for Milwaukee, was moved to Boston's Fenway Park when it became clear Miller Park wouldn't be ready and the Brewers then switched to the National League.

Next year's game is scheduled for Seattle's Safeco Field, the 2002 game for Milwaukee and the 2003 for Chicago's Comiskey Park.

Detroit's Comerica Park is viewed as the top contender for 2003, and San Francisco's Pacific Bell Park and Houston's Enron Field are thought to be the top choices for either 2004 or 2006.

DERBY TIME: Ken Griffey Jr., Sammy Sosa, Chipper Jones and Vladimir Guerrero are scheduled to represent the National League in Monday night's home run derby, while Ivan Rodriguez, Carlos Delgado and Carl Everett are set for the AL, to be joined by either Edgar Martinez or Troy Glaus.

COKE IS NOT IT: Usually, Coca-Cola dominates in Atlanta, its home.

Not when the All-Star game is in town.

Only Pepsi was served at the Braves' All-Star gala Sunday night. That's because Pepsi is a corporate sponsor of major league baseball.

ROCK: OF Bowles goes 2-for-4

(From 1C)

off Missions' starter Adrian Burnside (6-4). Oscar Salazar singled, then scored the go-ahead run when Jacques Landry doubled just inside the left field line.

The next batter, Bowles, then hit a towering fly to medium right field which San Antonio's Geronimo Gil couldn't pick up in the sunlight. It resulted in a double and an RBI for Bowles, proving to be the decisive run in the game.

"I just hope we can all keep it up tomorrow," said Bowles, who with his 'Hound teammates can take three out of four in the series against the Missions with a win tonight. "It was nice because we got some pitching and some offense doing something at the same time. We had some clutch hits even though we didn't score a lot of runs."

The 'Hounds fell behind 2-0 when Gil got a two-run single off Midland starter Justin Miller in the top of the third, the only runs Miller would give up in five innings. The 'Hounds got on the board in the bottom of that inning when Miguel Olivo, who had played in the Futures Game for the World team in Atlanta, belted a solo home run off Burnside to dead center.

Left-hander Eric DuBose, making his fourth appearance of the season after suffering a shoulder injury, won his first decision of the year by pitching two scoreless innings of relief.

Bert Snow gave up a run and uncorked three wild pitches in the final two innings, but he still managed to get his 12th save when he struck out Kip Harkrider in the top of the ninth with a runner on second. Harkrider checked his swing and 'Hounds' catcher Cody McKay appealed to third base umpire Scott Hepinstall, who ruled that Harkrider went around, ending the game.

"It was a bit of struggle but Bert came through in the end," said DeFrancesco. "You need to win a one-run game if you're going to be a contender in the second half of the league."

ROCKHOUND BITES: The heroes of Sunday's 11-1 rout of the Missions were both honored by the Texas League. Pitcher Jesus Colome was named the league's pitcher of the week after winning two decisions and McKay was named batter of the week after hitting .500 (16-for-32) and driving in nine runs, including five on Sunday.

Sosa now wants to stay in Chicago

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Sammy Sosa wants to stay in Chicago for the rest of his career.

Or through 2001.

Or maybe through only this year.

A day after telling the Chicago Cubs he would veto any trade attempt, the star outfielder gave various positions on his future.

"I want to stay in Chicago," Sosa said Monday. "They're beautiful fans. They're beautiful people. They love baseball. I'm looking forward to staying in Chicago."

A few minutes later, thinking about the contract extension he wants, his position shifted.

"If they don't take care of me after this year is over, I'll probably finish next year and go to another place," Sosa said. "If they have a future with me, they'll close the deal. If not, I'll probably go to another place."

There's even a chance he would approve a trade during the offseason — if it's the right deal.

"I really have to wait until the year is over the find out the whole situation," he said.

Sosa, whose $42.5 million, four-year contract expires after the 2001 season, had wanted the Cubs to either give him a contract extension now or trade him. Chicago had no intention of extending his contract at the price Sosa wanted: $15 million to $20 million annually.

LINEUP: Injuries are not uncommon

(From 1C)

of the Cubs, Jeff Kent of San Francisco, Andres Galarraga of Atlanta, Jim Edmonds of St. Louis and Jason Kendall of Pittsburgh.

Sheffield, Guerrero, Galarraga, Edmonds and Kendall all would be filling in for starters sidelined by injuries.

Cox once thought he'd have McGwire, Bonds and Griffey, the top three home run hitters in the league, plus Piazza in a power-packed order.

No longer. Now, the names of the no-shows are starting to overshadow the actual participants.

The New York Mets announced Sunday night that Piazza was out. The catcher sustained a concussion Saturday night when hit in the helmet by Roger Clemens' fastball, and did not play in the series finale against the Yankees.

"I'm a little groggy," said Piazza, who will stay home and rest during the break. "I have a headache, obviously."

Cincinnati pitcher Danny Graves, Arizona outfielder Steve Finley, Baltimore shortstop Mike Bordick and Toronto third baseman Tony Batista are among the replacements coming to play.

Injuries around All-Star time are common. Tony Gwynn and Jose Canseco missed last year at Fenway Park and, when the game was previously held in Atlanta in 1972, five players originally picked were absent: Luis Aparicio, Amos Otis, Freddie Patek, Gary Nolan and Joe Coleman.

Sosa captures home run derby

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Step aside Junior, Sammy's the man.

Slammin' Sammy Sosa ended Ken Griffey Jr.'s two-year reign as Home Run Derby champion, hitting the longest, loudest and largest number of shots at Turner Field on Monday night.

Sosa beat Griffey 9-2 in the finals and hit 26 overall, including a pair of 508-foot shots — one to the 755 Club in the left-field upper deck and one that came to rest atop the second green batter's backdrop in straightaway center, below the scoreboard.

"I know I have people behind me, who support me and love me," Sosa said to the crowd of 50,118.

With injuries to Mark McGwire, Barry Bonds, Mike Piazza and Manny Ramirez, there wasn't nearly the drama of last year, when Griffey won but McGwire conquered the Green Monster at Fenway Park, with hundreds of fans filling Lansdowne Street to catch the balls.

Before Monday's competition, scalpers were dumping tickets with $50 face value for $10 each.

But what started off as a listless, humid night sparked up immediately when Sosa started swinging.

Sosa, who lost out to McGwire 70-66 for the home-record record two years ago and 65-63 for last year's title, made flashbulbs sparkle and fireworks explode in the night.

In the semifinals, Sosa beat Everett 11-6 and Griffey topped Carlos Delgado 2-1. Then, Griffey and Sosa were tied 2-2 in the first round of the finals, which was split into two rounds with each player allowed five non-homer swings each.

Sosa, practicing his swing in the runway between rounds, then went ahead with a 429-foot homer to left, took a pitch, and connected on four straight swings — hard, long shots of 476, 488, 477 and 443 feet. He added two mores, at 460 feet and 508.

INJURIES: Eight all-stars will sit out and Todd Hundley is tending to a sick family member and turned down an offer.

(From 1C)

"It has put a bit of a damper on the game, but it will give some up and coming players a chance to show what they can do," Los Angeles outfielder Gary Sheffield said. "A lot of people will get to see what these guys can do for the first time."

Sheffield is especially excited to watch Montreal slugger Vladimir Guerrero, starting in left instead of the fans' choice, Bonds.

The six other fill-in starters are also in the All-Star lineup for the first time in their careers: Carl Everett, Jim Edmonds, Andres Galarraga, Jason Kendall, Derek Jeter and Travis Fryman.

"The guys who are replacing everybody are still All-Stars," Griffey said. "When you look at their numbers, they've done as well as everybody else."

The comeback stories of Galarraga and Kendall are particularly touching. Galarraga missed all of 1999 battling cancer, while Kendall's right ankle was nearly torn off in a frightful accident about a week before last year's game.

Galarraga is replacing McGwire, perhaps the most disappointing no-show for fans who were eagerly awaiting Big Mac's Home Run Derby power display.

Kendall will start in place of Piazza, who sustained a slight concussion after being hit in the helmet by a pitch from Roger Clemens on Saturday.

"It will be cool to hear my name announced with all the other great players in the lineup," Kendall said. "It will be a chilling moment. I just wish it were on different terms."

In all, the injured players have accounted for 66 All-Star appearances, led by Ripken's 17, putting a new face on this year's game. There are 11 first-time starters — the most since 1993 — and pregame introductions will be a must-see for casual fans.

"I guess the only upside to that is there are so many more deserving players that the roster allows you to have," AL manager Joe Torre said. "Now you're able to honor more. It's a big thrill to see the faces of these guys when they come into that clubhouse."

It will be particularly odd for Fryman, who has made four All-Star appearances before this year, backing up Ripken each time.

As a shortstop with Detroit from 1992-94, Fryman played behind Ripken. When he switched to third base in 1996, Ripken was there too, ahead of him once again on the All-Star depth chart.

With Ripken home this week, Fryman gets his first start.

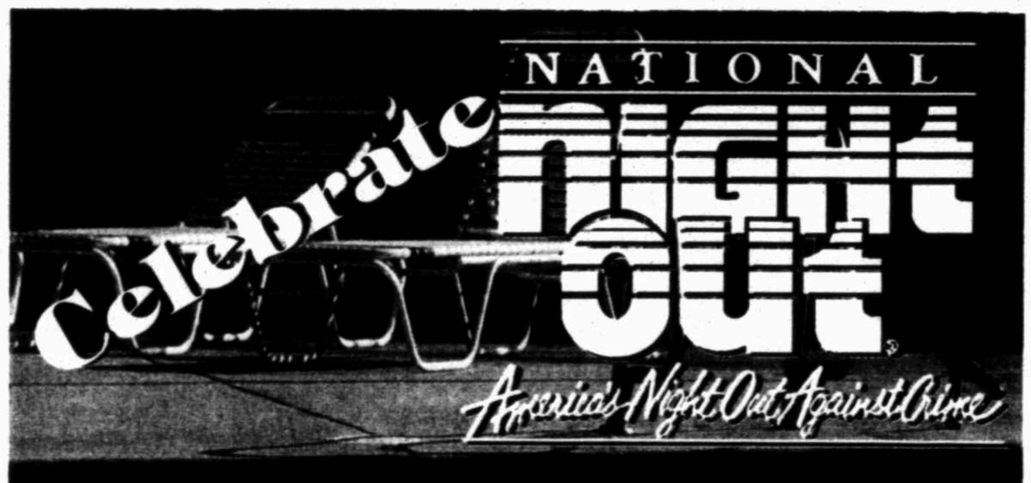

"It's not an All-Star game if I'm playing behind Cal," Fryman said. "I've always been his caddie. The highlight for me is always taking grounders with Cal and having a locker next to him. It will be a different experience."

Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 95.21 cents. Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 106.99 Japanese yen, down from 107.76; 1.5138 Swiss francs, down from 1.6268; 1.4800 Canadian dollars, unchanged from 1.4800. T bills mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities were mixed in Monday's auction. The Treasury Department sold $8.5 billion in three-month bills at a discount rate of 5.900 percent, up from 5.830 percent last week. An additional $7.5 billion was sold in six-month bills at a rate of 5.945 percent, down from 5.975 percent. The three-month rate was the highest since May 15 when the bills sold for 6.065 percent. The six-month rate was the lowest since June 19 when the rate was 5.920. The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 6.071 percent for three-month bills with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,850.90 and 6.215 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,699.40.

Crude continues downward trend

NEW YORK (Bloomberg) — Crude oil fell, bringing its losses since the end of June close to 9 percent, on mounting support within OPEC for Saudi Arabia's plan to raise output to trim prices and avoid hurting worldwide demand.

Venezuela, OPEC's No. 3 producer, said Monday the group would raise output for a third time this year if prices stayed high. Saudi Arabia expressed concern about surging prices a week ago and said it would add 500,000 barrels to daily supply to send prices down to levels last seen in early May.

"Traders are getting more used to the idea that the oil is coming," said Tom Bentz, an analyst and broker at Paribas Futures Inc. in New York. "There is a lot of political pressure on the Saudis from consumers, from the U.S., to get the oil out there."

Crude oil for August delivery fell 59 cents, or 2 percent, to $29.69 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil, which fell 6.8 percent last week, is up 49 percent from a year ago.

In London, Brent crude oil for August settlement fell 85 cents, or 2.9 percent, to $28.85 a barrel on the International Petroleum Exchange.

'There is a lot of political pressure on the Saudis from consumers, from the U.S., to get the oil out there.'

— Tom Bentz, analyst and broker for Paribas Futures, Inc.

Saudi Arabia, the world's top producer, said last Monday that it was ready to boost production immediately if prices of a collection of crude oils monitored by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries didn't fall back to $25 a barrel from over $30. The price stood at $28.99 on Friday.

The Saudi's fellow OPEC members at first opposed the plan, especially as it came just two weeks after the producer group agreed in Vienna to raise production quotas by 708,000 barrels a day. Still, prospects for a unilateral increase by Saudi Arabia have prompted some members to change their positions.

"What the Saudis want, the Saudis get," said Nauman Barakat, vice president of global energy trading at ABN Amro Inc. in New York. "But they don't want a unilateral decision that might break the cohesion within OPEC. They need a bit of time to work the magic" through talks with other members.

OPEC President and Venezuelan Energy and Mines Minister Ali Rodriguez, speaking in Indonesia today, said OPEC would raise output by 500,000 barrels a day if the OPEC benchmark stayed above $28 for 20 consecutive days. Friday was the index's 14th consecutive day over $28.

Rilwanu Lukman, Nigeria's top oil adviser and secretary-general of OPEC, said at a weekend meeting with oil ministers in Algeria that prices are too high and more oil may be needed, Reuters reported Saturday.

Until the extra oil output is formally approved and announced by OPEC, New York prices are likely to stay in a range of about $29.50 to $30.50 a barrel, Barakat said.

Gasoline for August delivery rose 2.3 cents, or 2.5 percent, to 94.94 cents a gallon on the Nymex.

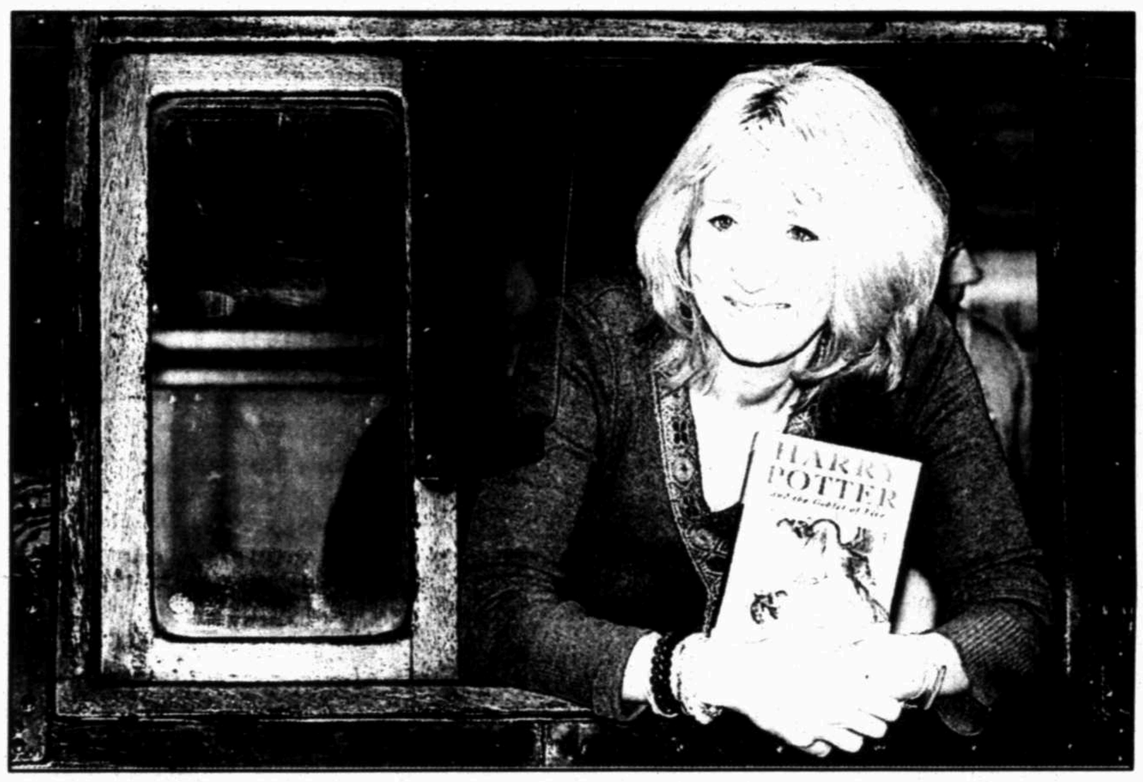

Prices rose partly after Tosco Corp. cut processing in half at a 20,000 barrel-a-day hydrocracker unit at its Trainer, Pennsylvania, refinery, following a mechanical failure on Friday, Bridge News reported, citing unnamed industry sources. Repairs could take a month.

Also, some speculators simply bought gasoline after they had "gotten impatient for it to go lower," said Michael Fitzpatrick, a trader at Fimat USA Inc. in New York.

Gasoline futures dropped 11 percent last week on signs that the worst of supply tightness was over in the Midwest, where pump prices have reached records above $2 a gallon.

The Energy Department will issue its weekly report on U.S. retail gasoline prices later today. Nationwide pump prices for regular, self-serve gasoline fell in the previous two weekly reports after reaching a record high.

Harry Potter book breaks sales records

By Rachel Beck

NEW YORK — Harry Potter performed some cash register magic for the nation's bookstores over the weekend, many of which tallied record-breaking sales thanks to the release of the fourth book in the children's series.

Booksellers — big and small, on and off the Web — reported Monday that crowds packed their stores continuously since early Saturday, when "Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire" went on sale at 12:01 a.m. local time.

The U.S. publisher, Scholastic Inc., already plans to print about 2 million more copies of the $25.95 book in the next few months. The initial print run in the United States was 3.8 million copies.

Barnes & Noble had its biggest weekend in history, selling 502,000 of the new Harry Potter books as of the close of business on Sunday night. That included about 100,000 through its Web site.

Barnes & Noble spokeswoman Mary Ellen Keating said the huge crowds helped boost overall sales, as the people who flocked to the stores ended up buying other books as well.

Amazon.com, too, had a stellar weekend, with 389,000 total orders for the new book coming in. Eighteen percent of the orders came from new customers to its Web site, the company said.

About 350,000 were ordered before the book even went on sale and about 40,000 orders were tallied since early Saturday.

FedEx Corp. delivered 250,000 copies for Amazon on Saturday, 95 percent of the orders arriving at customers' homes by 4 p.m.

The giant retailers weren't the only ones pulling in the big crowds.

Barb Bassett of The Red Balloon Bookshop in St. Paul, Minn., said the store had about 500 advance orders and then sold an additional 150 to 200 books. The bookstore still has around 100 books left.

"The rush has somewhat ended, but the books are still easing out the door at a nice pace," Bassett said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Loans against home equity, retirement plans can pay for college

By Eric Tyson

Tyson

Q: In previous columns, you've advised parents to save in retirement accounts so that their children won't be penalized on financial aid when it comes time to apply to college. How will I come up with money to pay for college when my funds are in retirement accounts?

A: In most cases, even if you have some liquid cash that can be redirected to your child's college bill, you will, in all likelihood, have to borrow some money. Only the affluent can truly afford to pay for college with cash.

One good source of money is the equity in your home. You can borrow against your home at a relatively low interest rate, and the interest is generally tax-deductible. Some company retirement plans — for example, 401(k)s — allow borrowing as well.

A plethora of financial-aid programs allow you to borrow at reasonable interest rates. For example, both unsubsidized Stafford Loans and Parent Loans for Undergraduate Students (PLUS) are available even when your family is not deemed financially needy.

In addition to loans, a number of grant programs are available through schools and the government, as well as through independent sources. You can apply for the federal government programs by completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). Grants available through state-government programs may require a separate application. Specific colleges and other private organizations, including employers, banks, credit unions and community groups, also offer grants and scholarships.

Your child can work and save money during high school and college. In fact, if your child qualifies for financial aid, he or she generally is expected to contribute a certain amount to education costs from employment during the school year or summer breaks and from savings. Besides giving your teen-ager a stake in his or her own future, this training encourages sound personal financial management down the road.

Q: I think I made a mistake on my previous year's tax return that I filed earlier this year. I contributed money into my IRA. While I didn't take a tax deduction for the contribution, I made the IRA deposit so that the money could grow over the years without taxation. Someone recently told me I should have filed a special tax form to note this nondeductible contribution. Is that right, and if so, how do I correct my mistake?

A: You should have reported your nondeductible contribution on Form 8606. Yes, it is another pain-in-the-rear IRS form, but down the road it will save you from paying tax again on that $2,000.

Unlike deductible contributions, nondeductible contributions to an IRA are not subject to the normal income taxes when you start drawing on your savings in your golden years. If you don't report your nondeductible contributions, the IRS assumes that all the money in your IRA came from deducted contributions, and you will owe tax on 100 percent of your withdrawals.

In order to correct your mistake, you need to amend your return. Call the IRS at 800-TAX-FORM for a copy of both Forms 1040X and 8606. Fill them out, put them in an envelope and send them in. (Note: you will owe a $50 penalty for not filing Form 8606 wit h your Form 1040.)

In future years, please check out the newer Roth IRA, which is also a nondeductible type of IRA. However, unlike the regular IRA to which you contributed, your investment earnings aren't taxed when withdrawn from a Roth IRA (subject to eligibility requirements).

Bush campaigning to gain more minority voters' trust

BALTIMORE (AP) — George W. Bush's mission among black voters is to carve into their certain landslide for the Democratic ticket. Trying to increase his minority of a minority, the Republican presidential candidate remarked with a smile that he saw one or two supporters as he addressed the NAACP convention on Monday.

"Maybe more than a couple," he said, after that line drew a ripple of applause.

But this was not Bush territory, nor did he pretend otherwise. His aim, with the oldest and largest of civil rights organizations, as in his campaign among Hispanics, is to increase his portion of the minority vote against Al Gore on Nov. 7. By edging his share upward, Bush could improve his odds in some battleground states.

But more important, in all likelihood, will be whether Vice President Gore can mobilize minority supporters in numbers approaching those that turned out for Bill Clinton in 1992 and 1996.

Gore will address the NAACP convention on Wednesday, among friends. Bush delivered his 17-minute speech to a politely skeptical crowd, applauded but never cheered. The only outburst preceded his speech, when a handful of people shouted protests against the execution of Gary Graham, a black man, for murder in Texas. The NAACP has protested that execution, too, and called for a national moratorium on capital punishment. Bush didn't mention the issue.

He acknowledged that some Republicans have avoided the NAACP, and that the organization has sometimes avoided the GOP. "I am here today because I believe there is much we can do together to advance racial harmony and economic opportunity," he said.

His speech was essentially his standard campaign address, centered on his proposals on education, housing, health care, and the other issues on which he has moved to the center since winning the nomination with appeals to Republican conservatives.

Bush said that racism still exists in America, and acknowledged that Republicans have not always carried the mantle of Abraham Lincoln. "Strong civil rights enforcement will be a cornerstone of my administration," he said.

That recalled the words of the last Republican presidential nominee to address the NAACP, his father, George Bush, who said in 1988, "I will be personally involved in protecting the rights of all Americans."

Bob Dole, the 1996 GOP nominee, bypassed the NAACP in his campaign, saying that Kweisi Mfume, president of the organization, was "trying to set me up" by inviting him before a hostile audience. Dole later said he'd erred.

By the numbers, it didn't make much difference. When Clinton beat President Bush in 1992, he got 83 percent of the black vote. Bush got 10 percent. In 1996, it was 84 percent for Clinton, 12 percent for Dole.

In 1988, black turnout was low, and that hurt the Democrats as the elder Bush won the White House.

In the 2000 polls, Gore's support among African-Americans runs in the mid to high 70 percent range, with Bush in the middle teens. The question is of intensity, which translates to turnout. Clinton had it among minority voters; Gore needs it.

Bush said he hoped the 3,500 NAACP conventioneers who heard him wouldn't rule out changing their opinions to support him. He made no evident headway. Eleanor Holmes Norton, the District of Columbia delegate to Congress, said he'd offered nothing new, and had avoided issues on which he and the NAACP are at odds.

A successful Bush campaign among minorities would be one that convinces them he is a middle-road leader they could work with, not a hard-liner to be feared.

The NAACP is campaigning to register and turn out voters, Mfume saying its volunteers have enrolled 2.8 million of a 4 million voter target. "Race to Vote" is the slogan of the convention.

Black Americans are expected to represent about 11 percent of voters in the 2000 elections. Their impact, hinging on turnout, could be crucial in close contests, especially in the swath of old industrial states from the Midwest across to Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the battleground states.

Bush has made a series of campaign appearances before black and Hispanic organizations in the past month. Back home, he gained nearly half the Hispanic vote in winning re-election as governor of Texas in 1998, and nearly doubled his share of the black vote to 27 percent, up from 15 percent in 1994.

Gore leads him comfortably but not overwhelmingly among Hispanics for the 2000 contest — margins of 13 to 20 points in recent polling.

Latino voters are concentrated in four states, Bush's Texas; California, a must-win state for Gore, who leads there; New York, which no Democratic nominee can afford to lose, and Florida, where Bush is favored.

Bush has gone to major Hispanic organizations with proposals that fit their interests on immigration, telling one group he'd divide the Immigration and Naturalization Service into two organizations, one to welcome legal immigrants, the other to enforce boundaries against illegals.

There were no such tailored proposals in his NAACP address. In his turn, Gore will be offering more of what the members want, including the support for affirmative action and stronger hate crimes legislation he already has pledged.

House GOP leads in fund-raising battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to hold their six-seat majority, House Republicans on Monday reported that they had raised $90 million at midyear — almost as much as they collected during the entire 1998 election.

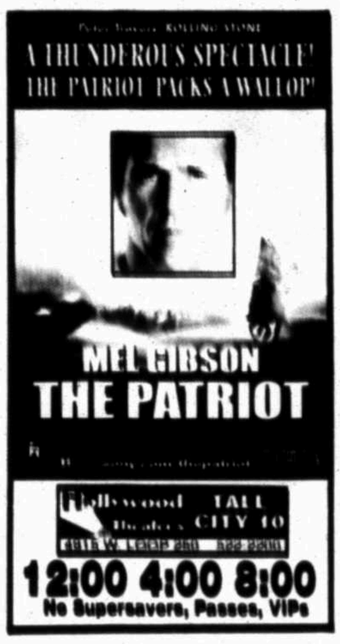

Between Jan. 1, 1999, and June 30, 2000, the National Republican Congressional Committee took in just $10 million less than the $100 million it raised during the entire 1997-98 campaign. By June 30, 1998, the NRCC had brought in $60 million.

Party officials said they are on track to raise a record $125 million by the end of the year.

The NRCC was helped by a record-setting fund-raising dinner in May featuring former President Bush, which pulled in $14 million that was divided with Senate Republicans.

But House Republicans entered July with less money in the bank than their Democratic counterparts. The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee reported Monday that it had $37 million on hand as of June 30 — more than nine times as large as the $4 million it had at this time two years ago — as compared with $22 million for the Republicans.

A nostalgic Clinton rebuts future GOP tax cut proposals

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — His opinion on national priorities may soon be worth less than "half a soda-pop," said President Clinton, but he nonetheless offered a low-key rebuttal Monday to Republican tax cut and spending plans that would far outlast his presidency.

In a nostalgic, valedictory address to the National Governors' Association, Clinton also appealed for civility amid election-year politics and took broad credit for the nation's economic success.

"I ask you to help ensure an election season that is positive, open and vigorous about the real and honest differences, but devoid of the poison that has too often clouded the judgment of everybody involved in the public process," Clinton said.

Although Clinton has begged, borrowed or created opportunities lately to tout the economic stewardship and qualifications of his chosen successor, Vice President Al Gore, he did not mention Gore in Monday's address to a bipartisan group of about 35 governors.

Neither did he mention Gore's presumptive GOP opponent, Texas Gov. George W. Bush. Bush skipped the meeting, as did his brother, Florida Republican Gov. Jeb Bush.

Still, Clinton's broad summing-up of the economic and legislative successes of his two terms amounted to an implicit pitch for Gore, and to his own ideas for continued fiscal prudence.

Among those is a special $500 billion reserve fund, which would be out of reach of either the current White House or the current Congress. Clinton says the fund is necessary as a hedge in case projected budget surpluses don't happen.

In an apparent off-the-cuff digression, Clinton mused that his priorities for spending probably won't have a long shelf life.

"I think it would not be responsible for me to propose how to spend all that money," Clinton said. Clinton said a quarter plus his opinion "will get you half a soda pop after next year."

Congress returned to work this week after a holiday break, and Clinton directly criticized tax cut measures backed by the GOP majority.

The estate tax bill the Senate will vote on this week is too expensive and ill-conceived, Clinton said.

"I think we've got to keep the economy going by hewing to the same principles of fiscal discipline that got us where we are," Clinton said. "And that means I think whatever combination of spending and tax cuts any candidate for any office proposes, there ought to be enough left over," to get rid of the national debt and other priorities, he said.

A former governor who once chaired the governors' group, Clinton waxed nostalgic as he thanked the group for cooperation over the years, and credited state executives with helping sustain the national economic boom.

"I thought this was in fact the most partisan speech I have ever heard him give, but he is very good and very subtle," said New Jersey Gov. Christie Whitman, a Republican, after Clinton's speech. "If he had mentioned Al Gore then everybody could have said 'yes, this is a very partisan speech.' The fact that he didn't mention Al Gore by name enabled him to get away with it as just policy."

Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge, a Republican often mentioned as a possible Bush running mate, shared a car from the airport with Clinton and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and had a more positive take on the speech.

"I didn't see it as much partisan, necessarily, as presidential," Ridge said.

Clinton saved the direct partisan firepower for later in the day. At a speech in Philadelphia estimated to raise $600,000 for Pennsylvania Senate candidate Rep. Ron Klink, D-Pa., Clinton said every Democratic vote in the Senate counts dearly.

Recalling the recent nomination fight over Enrique Moreno, a Texas judge Clinton nominated for the federal bench, Clinton said Republicans in the Senate tried to disguise their partisan opposition by denying Moreno a hearing. "And the leader of the Rep party in Texas — you all know who he is — total silence while this man was denied even the dignity of a hearing," Clinton said slowly.

Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison said Moreno, a Harvard-educated lawyer in private practice since 1981, lacked the necessary experience to sit on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Clinton said in a statement at the time that claim was "unconscionable," noting that Moreno won the top rating from the American Bar Association, which evaluates and reports on the professional qualifications of people being considered by the president for nomination to federal judgeships.

Republicans often grumble that Clinton and Gore do not deserve so much credit for a robust economy, and point instead to a lucky combination of technological expansion and sound fiscal management by the independent Federal Reserve. Clinton, who takes pains to say that he never offers advice to Greenspan, did offer Greenspan a ride to the governors' meeting aboard Air Force One. The popular, long-serving Fed chairman is scheduled to address the group Tuesday.

Failed toy retailer has suit filed against it for breaking privacy policy

BOSTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission on Monday filed a lawsuit against Toysmart.com, accusing the bankrupt online toy-seller of breaking a promise to customers that it would never share private information about them.

In a complaint filed in U.S. District Court in Boston, the FTC said Waltham-based Toysmart is violating its own assurances appearing on its Web site that "when you register with toysmart.com, you can rest assured that your information will never be shared with a third party."

Toysmart, which is majority-owned by Walt Disney Co., ceased operations in May and began soliciting bids for its assets, including customer lists and profiles. Internet privacy activists protested, claiming that if the sale of that information were allowed, it could encourage a wave of other failing dot-coms to abandon privacy assurances in return for cash.

Toysmart has solicited bids for client information, but FTC attorney Ellen Finn said it was unclear whether Toysmart has already sold any. The complaint seeks to block bankruptcy actions until the privacy question is addressed.

Toysmart's privacy guidelines had been certified by TRUSTe, a San Jose, Calif. company that has given its seal of approval to more than 2,000 sites that have met its criteria for safeguarding their customers' privacy. It was TRUSTe that first brought Toysmart to the FTC's attention.

There was no answer at the company's headquarters Monday. A woman who answered the phone at The Recovery Group, a Boston company handling Toysmart's bankruptcy, referred questions to the company's attorney, Harold Murphy, who did not immediately return a phone message seeking comment.

Finn said the commission would try to reach an agreement with Toysmart before a July 26 hearing scheduled in federal bankruptcy court.
