COMING SUNDAY

Burning

Arson is burning a hole in the nation's pocketbook at an ever-increasing rate and Fire Marshal Jerry Petree said Midland is beginning to feel the heat. Read Sunday about Midland's arson problem and a reward program designed to douse the crime.

Banking

As Texas American Bank's first and only female vice president, Geraldine "Jerry" Armstrong says she doesn't go home tired; she goes home "up." In Sunday's FOCUS, she discusses her banking career, which began more than 25 years ago.

Balloting

Along with that spring ritual of cleaning house and planting flower bulbs, it's time to pick new faces to represent voters on the school, city and hospital governing boards. An election series outlining candidates and issues begins Sunday.

MMH board chooses revenue bond plan

Midland Memorial Hospital officials will take advantage of soft economic soil and balmy interest rates to plant the financial seeds for a $15.1 million expansion.

Because construction costs and interest rates have dropped, MMH's board of directors Thursday unanimously voted to finance the hospital's state-approved 77-bed expansion with revenue bonds — apparently at no cost to the taxpayers.

In November, MMH's and Parkview's certificate of need applications for additional beds were joined in a hearing at the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin. Under state law, hospitals are required to seek approval from the Commission for any new service or equipment and expansions exceeding $600,000.

The commission approved MMH's application March 11, but denied Parkview's plans for a new $17 million 110-bed hospital.

MMH could finance the expansion one of two ways — general obligation or revenue bonds. While general obligation bonds require voter approval, revenue bonds do not.

According to Dr. Henrie Mast, president of the MMH directors, concern of the directors was not whether a bond issue would be passed by the voters, but that "the county will be having a bond election April 23 and if the hospital holds a bond election it may make the public less aware of the county's needs. And if we wait, we lose additional time. We have thought long and hard about this."

During Thursday's board of directors' meeting, Pat Estes, director, said: "I had reservations about going with revenue bonds, but the need is necessary and we will not raise taxes."

Mast added that "bonds can be financed out of the hospital's revenue and an increase in taxes may not be necessary."

The five publicly-elected directors said the financing decision is in the "best interest of the public" and if delayed could result in higher construction costs and interest rates. When the hospital sought state approval for the expansion, interest rates were 12 percent. But according to Mast, rates have dropped as low as 8 and 9 percent.

"If we delayed this financing decision, we run the risk that costs will begin to increase as the economy revives," said MMH director Ed Magruder.

He added that the $15.1 million debt will be paid with hospital revenues, but "if revenues are not sufficient, then the hospital district has the power to levy a tax to obviate (offset) the deficit."

According to Magruder, the hospital's monthly revenue is about $2.4 million a month and taxes would increase only if MMH came up short and could not retire the debt.

"The tax rate would then have to be adjusted," he said. "It could double the (seven cents per $100 valuation) rate under that set of circumstances. This would be necessary only in extreme circumstances. Still, it would only be 14 cents. We think the risk is small, very small, that the district would have raise the tax rate."

Although the board approved financing the expansion with $15.1 million in revenue bonds, "The new board (members elected in April) could change this amount," Magruder said.

"The future board could decide to issue enough bonds for a reserve fund, say $17.3 million to fund that reserve," he said. "It would give some comfort to those who buy the bonds. There is enough revenue for one year to cover the principal. This can be invested with interest in government or bank securities."

Magruder added that interest from the reserve fund would then offset the additional cost of borrowing.

More EPA officials ousted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in another round of political damage control, today accepted the resignations of five more top officials at the Environmental Protection Agency.

The resignations included John W. Hernandez Jr., who has been acting administrator for only two weeks since Anne M. Burford stepped down under congressional pressure.

Hernandez, who had expressed the hope that he would be considered for the top job permanently, came under fire himself almost immediately for his handling of a toxic chemical report while he was deputy administrator at EPA.

Also resigning were EPA General Counsel Robert M. Perry; Assistant Administrator John A. Todhunter; John Daniel, Mrs. Burford's chief of staff; and Paul C. Cahill, director of the Office of Federal Activities at the agency.

President Reagan, speaking at a brief press conference, denied today that the large personnel turnover at the agency reflected badly on his administration.

"I don't think it looks bad," Reagan said, denying that he had "engineered" Mrs. Burford's departure.

"I never would have asked for her resignation," the president said, calling it a "very generous thing" done in an effort to remove controversy and allow the EPA to resume its job.

And Reagan declared that in spite of "all of the allegations and all of the accusations ... no proof of wrongdoing has been presented in all of this fuss."

Reagan also said that some of the departing EPA officials "let us know for quite some time that they wanted out. They wanted to leave."

Reagan signs bill authorizing benefits, jobs projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has signed into law a bill that gives a $4.6 billion booster shot to the economy in public works projects and provides additional billions urgently needed by more than half the states to continue paying unemployment benefits.

The House gave final congressional approval to the anti-recession legislation late Thursday and the president signed it shortly after it arrived at the White House, about 9:30 p.m.

With many congressmen eager to leave town for a 10-day Easter recess, there was no formal signing ceremony.

In a brief news conference today, Reagan thanked congressmen for passing the jobs bill.

"By accelerating various government projects already budgeted for future years, this legislation avoids the costly error of creating a multi-billion dollar make-work job program, the sort of expensive mistake the federal government made too often in the past," Reagan said.

He said the bill "will add virtually nothing to the federal deficit if the higher spending in 1983 is offset by compensating reductions in future appropriations for these same activities." But the bill does not specify that that actually will happen.

The president indicated that despite the nation's 10.4 percent civilian unemployment rate, he believed the government should not spend any more money creating jobs. "The signs are clear that economic recovery is already underway, a recovery that will bring far more jobs to unemployed Americans than could ever be created by new federal jobs programs," he said.

Although the major focus of the bill is to create jobs, it also contains a $5 billion emergency supplemental appropriation to replenish a special fund from which 27 states and the District of Columbia are borrowing to meet their unemployment compensation payments.

"We've absolutely run out of money," Jack Hashian of the Labor Department's Employment and Training Administration said Thursday.

He said 19 states either have exhausted their unemployment benefit funds or would today, and that further juggling of accounts — which was done over the past several days — was impossible.

Hashian said federal and state governments pay some $100 million in unemployment benefits daily under various programs and added: "We're flat broke."

The recession-relief portion of the bill contains a provision ensuring that about $2 billion of the money will go to areas hardest hit by the recession.

Senate conservatives renew abortion, school prayer battles

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than two months into the 1983 Congress, Senate conservatives are renewing their ideological battle to outlaw abortion and return prayer to public schools.

The three Republicans on the constitution subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee approved on Thursday a proposed constitutional amendment intended to allow states to ban abortions.

Only hours later, Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., introduced a proposed constitutional amendment to allow voluntary prayer in schools. He acted at the request of the Reagan administration.

The prayer measure, like the abortion proposal, will be considered by the constitution subcommittee headed by Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, and then by Thurmond's panel.

However, both face long journeys to ratification: threatened filibusters by Senate liberals, the requirement of two-thirds votes in both the House and Senate and, finally, approval by 38 states.

A similar proposal on abortions introduced by Hatch last year was approved 10-7 by the Judiciary Committee but never had a vote in the full Senate.

The school prayer amendment submitted by Thurmond states: "Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or by any state to participate in prayer."

Social Security plan forwarded to Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today hailed congressional passage of a landmark plan to assure Social Security solvency into the next century and said "a dark cloud has been lifted" from the giant retirement system.

Hours earlier, Congress sent Reagan the compromise $165 billion package that will increase workers' contributions to the system, raise the retirement age by two years and tax benefits for affluent recipients.

"(For) all our senior citizens who worried about receiving their Social Security benefits and for the present-day workers concerned about the solvency of that system, I think a dark cloud has been lifted," Reagan said in praising the bipartisan Capitol Hill efforts to pass the measure.

"We have passed reform legislation that brings us much closer to insuring the integrity of the Social Security system," he added.

Shortly before midnight, the House approved the compromise $165 billion package on a vote of 243-102. Then, by a 58-14 vote, the Senate early today ended two years of partisan congressional conflict over the explosive issue. The bill is designed to avert the impending collapse of the system, which serves 36 million beneficiaries.

Reagan had embraced the legislation and, during an informal session with reporters in the White House press room, said he was happy that Congress heeded warnings that the system was in trouble and acted.

"For the sake of our people, I'm gratified that great good sense did prevail over partisan concerns," said Reagan, who is expected to sign the legislation during the week of April 10.

The bill follows the blueprint laid out two months ago by the National Commission on Social Security Reform, including:

—Higher payroll taxes in 1984, 1988 and 1990.

—A six-month delay in July's cost-of-living increase in benefits.

—A first-ever levy on benefits going to more affluent retirees.

—Mandatory Social Security coverage for new federal workers and employees of non-profit organizations.

—An increase in the current retirement age of 65.

Before the final vote, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., pleaded for support.

"This is not a perfect bill ... but we are not a perfect body. This is not the last word, but it is the best we can make at this time," declared Baker.

With action completed on the bill, Congress has left town for a 10-day Easter recess.

The way was cleared for final congressional action after negotiators bargained for nearly 12 hours Thursday to hammer out a compromise version of the legislation which had previously passed the House and Senate.

Rep. Barber B. Conable Jr., R-N.Y., who served on the reform commission, hailed the package during brief House debate, saying, "It may not be a work of art, but it is artful work. ... It will do what it was supposed to do: It will save the nation's basic social insurance system from imminent disaster."

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Snow in the central Plains and showers from the central Gulf to the eastern Plains are forecast through Saturday by the National Weather Service. Rain is epxected for the northern Pacific Coast, and most areas of the nation will be colder.

Blowing dust to visit Midland

West Texas' weathervane of spring — blowing dust — may be kicking around this weekend.

Northwesterly winds in the 15-25 mph range are to be bringing in "patches of blowing dust" Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The weatherman said high temperature on Saturday is to be in the mid-60s.

Tonight, winds are to be southwesterly at 15 to 25 mph and gusty. The low temperature tonight is to be in the mid-30s.

Thursday's high temperature of 73 degrees was well below the record low of 89 degrees for the date in 1938. Today's low of 51 was nowhere near the record low of 23 degrees set in 1955.

Georgia buried by 11-inch snow

By The Associated Press

An Atlanta radio station played "White Christmas" as up to 11 inches of snow from a spring storm coated budding trees and blooming tulips, delayed flights and caused at least 10 traffic deaths in Georgia and the Carolinas.

Hours after the freak storm, a rare earthquake shook western North Carolina on Thursday night. The mild tremor caused no damage or injury.

"The good Lord just wants to show us once in a while who is the real boss," said Bill Lerner, a National Weather Service forecaster in Atlanta of the storm that produced, at 7.9 inches, the fourth greatest snowfall in the city's history.

Elsewhere today, a storm dumped heavy snow in the Rockies, closing schools in Wyoming and causing avalanches that closed roads to some ski resorts in Utah. No injuries were reported.

Snow accumulations of up to a foot or more were forecast in Colorado by tonight, and the storm already had edged into western Nebraska, where 4 inches of snow fell in Kimball.

In Southern California, mudslides closed segments of the Pacific Highway near Malibu on Thursday, damaging at least one house.

Snow-laden branches snapped power lines from the northern part of Georgia into North Carolina, leaving over 51,000 people temporarily without power.

Topping off a snowman in Atlanta's Piedmont Park is Amy Norton. The southern city was blanketed with snow Thursday in an unusual spring storm.

In suburban DeKalb County, Ga., a 6-year-old girl lost part of her left leg and four fingers when she stumbled over a live power line, authorities said.

"This kind of snowstorm in Georgia in the dead of winter would be an unusual event," Lerner said. "But for it to occur near the end of March, it is almost unbelievable."

Six to 9 inches of heavy, wet snow accumulated in a band from metropolitan Atlanta eastward through Athens and Toccoa. Snow fell as far south as Macon in central Georgia and 11 inches was reported at Cornelia in the state's northeast.

By dusk, the snow had given way to rain and tapered off in most of the state.

"Let It Snow," "White Christmas" and other songs of the winter season were aired by WPCH-FM in Atlanta as the city nearly doubled its previous record snowfall of 4 inches, recorded in March of 1980.

"We played a few Christmas carols to celebrate the snow on this fourth day of spring," said announcer Jim Clark.

Eight people were reported killed in traffic accidents on snow-slicked roads Thursday, the Georgia State Patrol said. A mother and daughter died in a collision on a slushy interstate in South Carolina, authorities said.

This morning, low temperatures in northern Georgia froze ice patches on many roads, causing a traffic accident involving four tractor trailers and six cars in Clayton County. No injuries were reported, however.

Record-breaking low temperatures were reported today in other Southern cities, including Mobile, Ala., where it was 31 degrees, Pensacola, Fla., 34 degrees, and Montgomery, Ala., 30 degrees.

Air traffic at Atlanta's Hartsfield International Airport was disrupted Thursday by the storm as ground crews struggled to keep one of three runways open, said airport spokesman John Braden. "We (could) push snow off the runway, but the problem was it was falling faster than we could push it," he said.

Air traffic returned to near-normal this morning with a few delays still reported, officials said.

More than 27,000 utility customers were without power about noon in the Atlanta area, but by midnight, power had been restored to nearly everyone "except for a few scattered problems," said Georgia Power spokeswoman Kathy Harber.

Another 21,000 rural electric customers were without electricity in at least six Georgia counties at the peak of the storm, said Paul Flack, a spokesman for the Georgia Electric Membership Corp.

Fighting continues in Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government says troops are "annihilating" rebel exiles who streamed into northwest Nicaragua from Honduras. But the insurgents' commander says his forces are fighting on several fronts and "the defeat of the leftist regime in Managua is sealed."

While fighting raged Thursday, the Sandinistas faced a new threat on the southern border with Costa Rica, where a separate exile faction announced plans to join the battle to overthrow Nicaragua's 44-month-old leftist government. Military sources said guardposts were reinforced on the Costa Rican frontier.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Mexico and Cuba sided with Nicaragua in Security Council debate Thursday on the Central American nation's charge that it was under attack by anti-Sandinista guerrillas trained by the United States. Washington repeatedly has denied such accusations.

In a broadcast later over the rebels' clandestine radio station, guerrilla commander Col. Enrique Bermudez Varela said his forces are fighting on "the Atlantic coast and in the provinces of Nueva Segovia, Jinotega and Matagalpa."

The radio claimed rebel forces repelled a counterattack by 3,000 government troops in northern Matagalpa province.

The Defense Ministry said government troops ambushed a column of anti-Sandinista exiles crossing into Nicaragua, killed 12 and suffered three casualties.

The ministry said in a brief statement that Sandinista soldiers were continuing "to annihilate the rest of the counter-revolutionary column" near Jalapa, 165 miles northeast of Managua, the capital. It did say say how large the invading force was.

The rival claims could not be confirmed independently because the government has banned foreign correspondents from the embattled areas, where fighting reportedly has persisted for the past month.

Commander Leticia Herrera, coordinator of the local Sandinista Defense Committees throughout the country, called on the militias to prepare to fight.

"Facing the new, aggressive escalation of imperialism, we must increase revolutionary vigilance, and reserve battalions must turn out massively for militia practice," she said in a message distributed by radio and newspapers.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, Alfonso Robelo, a leader of the anti-Sandinista Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, said the rebels' attacks do not yet pose a danger to the Sandinistas.

"It looks to us like the first actions of small guerrilla groups that have been infiltrating Nicaragua for some time," said Robelo, who was a member of the Sandinista junta after it took power in 1979 following the overthrow of rightist dictator Anastasio Somoza.

Robelo resigned from the junta within a year after the Sandinista triumph and went into exile in Costa Rica last year. He said his organization is not participating in the fighting.

But one of the four factions belonging to Robelo's alliance announced it was withdrawing and would try to join the rebel Nicaraguan Democratic Force fighting in northern Nicaragua. This raised the possibility of an invasion of exiles from Costa Rica into southern Nicaragua.

The breakaway faction, called the Nicaraguan Democratic Union, said Robelo's organization was seeking a political dialogue with the Sandinistas but the faction wanted "a total fight against the regime."

The Nicaraguan government claims 2,500 rebels — former members of Somoza's national guard and disillusioned supporters of the Sandinista revolution — have invaded from based in Honduras. Rebel spokesmen say their forces number 12,000.

Though fighting has intensified in recent weeks, major clashes between anti-Sandinista forces and government troops first began last summer along the Caribbean coast in Zelaya province.

The government claimed then that the rebels were trying to establish a beachhead on Nicaraguan territory before the third anniversary of the Sandinista revolution, last July 19.

Fighting picked up in the north central provinces in November and hundreds of refugees streamed across the border into Honduras.

At the United Nations, Mexican Ambassador Porfirio Munoz Ledo called for "an end to all interference in the affairs" of Nicaragua, said "armed intervention in the area would be contrary to the principle of self-determination."

Cuban Ambassador Raul Roa accused the United States of using Honduras as a base to smash Central America's "liberation struggle."

'Mistakes' blamed for papal row

ROME (AP) — Nicaraguan diplomats say they believe the row with the Vatican stemming from Pope John Paul II's turbulent reception in Managua can be resolved if both sides admit their mistakes.

"I am very optimistic that what happened in Managua on March 4 can be clarified, although it calls for a balanced examination of unintended mistakes both sides may have made," Ricardo Peter, the Nicaraguan ambassador to the Holy See, told a news conference Thursday. It was Nicaragua's first official public reaction to the way John Paul was treated.

"What happened is serious, but it can be explained ... Obviously the explanation is very complex."

The pope, on an eight-day, eight-nation Central American tour, was received by the leftist Sandinista junta with a political tirade. At a papal Mass in Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, he repeatedly was interrupted by government supporters and forced to call for silence from an altar lacking a cross but flanked by portraits of Sandinista revolutionary heroes.

Vatican Radio broadcast several blistering reports condemning Nicaragua throughout John Paul's tour.

Nicaraguan portrayal seen by U.S. as propaganda ploy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaragua's attempt in recent days to portray itself as the victim of aggression from Honduras is viewed by government officials here as a propaganda ploy aimed at winning sympathy from the outside world.

And although the scale of the fighting is said to be far less intense than Nicaraguan officials describe it, the consensus is that opposition to the revolutionary government is widespread and growing.

The State Department has refused all formal comment on the reported outbreak of fighting deep inside Nicaraguan territory. But informal conversations with a variety of officials conducted with the understanding they not be identified by name suggests the administration has reached several key conclusions about the situation.

Ironically, Nicaragua finds itself in basically the same position as one of its ideological foes in the region, El Salvador.

Joining Peter at the news conference was Ernesto Fonseca, Nicaragua's ambassador to Italy. He accused the United States of rallying support from Western European countries for its "aggressive policy" towards Nicaragua's government.

The Sandinistas, who overthrew the U.S.-supported rightist dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979, claim Washington is organizing and financing an insurgency by Honduras-based Nicaraguan exiles and former Somoza guards.

"They (the United States) want to throw Europe against us," Fonseca said. "Western Europe should take a more active stand to avoid a massacre in Central America."

The ambassadors called the news conference in response to one held in Rome the day before by right-wing Nicaraguan rebels seeking European support for their fight against the Sandinistas.

Peter said the turmoil at the papal Mass in Managua stemmed from disappointment among Nicaraguans at the pope's message.

"I don't think we should justify it, but it can be understood," Peter said, suggesting Nicaraguans were frustrated by the pope's criticism of their "Popular Church," led by radical Catholic leaders in defiance of the Vatican hierarchy.

Peter also said Nicaraguans were upset that John Paul made no reference to what the Sandinistas see as a serious threat from the United States.

The pontiff was greeted in Managua with a tirade against the United States, and he rejected the homage of a Nicaraguan priest holding a Cabinet position against papal orders.

The Vatican has asked that those holding religious office refrain from politics.

"Perhaps what has been said was unilateral and did not take into consideration a strong reality within the Nicaraguan clergy," Peter said in reference to the pope's criticism of the Popular Church.

Benefits for jobless provided in two bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has passed one bill to rescue Social Security and another to create public works projects, but both measures include money for jobless benefits for unemployed workers.

The major purpose of the $4.6 billion jobs bill that was signed by President Reagan on Thursday is to provide work for the unemployed. However, the the legislation also contains a $5 billion emergency supplemental appropriation to replenish a federal fund from which 27 states and the District of Columbia are borrowing to meet their unemployment compensation payments.

Already, 19 of those states either have exhausted their unemployment benefit funds or would have today.

Meanwhile, the Social Security bill which awaits the president's signature to become law contains a $2 billion, six-month extension of an emergency benefits program that was due to expire next Thursday.

Under the extention, some 1.6 million jobless workers who exhausted 55 weeks of state and federal benefits before April 1 would get six to 10 more weeks of benefits, depending on severity of unemployment in their state.

States also would have the option of deducting from an individual's unemployment check an amount to pay for health insurance, if the jobless worker wanted it.

Interruption of the flow of unemployment checks had twice been averted by the transfer of funds by the Labor Department to a special U.S. Treasury account available for loans to states. Some $410 million was handled that way in the last 10 days.

Search-and-rescue satellite designed to find disasters

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An American search-and-rescue satellite going aloft next week will join a Soviet satellite already saving lives by pinpointing downed planes and sinking ships from outer space, NASA officials say.

The new satellite, in a north-south orbit about 530 miles high, will scan the entire earth every 12 hours, officials said Thursday.

By bouncing the distress signal down to designated ground stations in any of several nations, the satellite can locate a downed plane within 12 miles.

"Since we started working with the Soviet satellite COSPAS I (last year), there have been 22 lives saved, and we are just really getting started," Bernard J. Trudell said of the demonstration project that also includes Canada and France as prime partners.

"Some of those people absolutely would not be alive and walking around today if it wasn't for that satellite. The others were assists," he told a news conference Thursday.

Trudell is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's mission manager for SARSAT, or Search and Rescue Satellite, which is to be launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base on Monday, weather permitting.

NASA says the United States is spending about $29 million on the experimental project, with Canada and France together adding another $24 million. Cost of the Soviet effort, which is independent but coordinated with NASA, is unreported.

Federal law requires ships and private planes to carry emergency radio beacons which, when activated by impact, transmit a continous and distinctive signal. But unless a plane passes within about 100 miles of the transmitter — and has a receiver on — the distress signal will not be heard.

That problem should be solved by satellites. But the nature of the distress signal, designed for aircraft rather than satellite detection, means the space-borne searcher can only be effective when it is within direct sight of both the crash and a ground station. The satellite acts as a mirror to collect the signal and bounce it back to earth for analysis.

"The object of this project is to shorten the time between the occurrence of distress and the rescue ... (That) means saving lives and reducing the costs of rescue operations," Trudell said.

That was graphically demonstrated in the first rescue, on Sept. 10, 1982, barely a week after the joint effort began.

The Canadian government had concluded an unsuccessful $2 million search for a pilot missing in the rugged forests of northern British Columbia, but the victim's father, also a pilot, continued to search on his own, NASA says. The father and two passengers failed to return from a search Sept. 9 and the satellite search program was notified.

COSPAS I heard the father's distress beacon the next day, Canadian ground technicians located the crash site and helicopters quickly rescued the three passengers, all seriously injured. All three survived and the cost, NASA said, "was minimal."

Navy, Marines stage exercise

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Navy and Marine detachments are participating in a nine-day amphibious exercise aimed at testing their ability to evacuate American citizens "from a hostile area."

The maneuvers, dubbed "Kernel Blitz '83," will involve more than 7,000 sailors and Marines, 12 ships and 40 aircraft, Sgt. Angela McDaniel, a Camp Pendleton spokeswoman, said earlier this week.

Ms. McDaniel also said the Navy and Marines would conduct a mock beach assault during the exercise.

Major units taking part in the March 22-29 maneuvers include the Navy's Amphibious Squadron 1, based in San Diego, and the Marine Corps' 5th Amphibious Brigade, stationed at Camp Pendleton.

The evacuation of 200 "citizens" — played by Marines — is scheduled for March 27. The beach assault is tabbed for the next day. Both will be staged at Camp Pendleton.

Both surface and helicopter assault forces will be involved in the amphibious landing, which will also include aircraft bombing runs and artillery firing using Camp Pendleton facilities.

Live ordnance will be used during the exercise. "All normal precautions will be taken," Ms. McDaniel said.

The commander for the maneuvers is Rear Adm. William A. Walsh, who is in charge of amphibious forces, Eastern Pacific.

The 5th Amphibious Brigade is a Marine air and ground task force that includes infantry, tanks, artillery, amphibious vehicles, helicopters and jet fighters.

Inmate seeks habeas corpus

A prison inmate who claims he was denied a speedy trial in Judge Gene Ater's 244th State District Court in Odessa is seeking a habeas corpus hearing in federal court in Midland in an effort to gain his release.

The inmate, Loyd Dean Millican, was convicted by a jury in 1980 of delivery of the drug methamphetamine in 1979, and was sentenced to 15 years in prison. Previously, he was convicted of theft of cattle and burglary.

He is asking for the habeas corpus hearing before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton to prove his contention that he is being held illegally.

In his complaint, Mullican says that he was:

—Denied a speedy trial. "The state failed to provide a jailed defendant with a trial within 120 days as manadated by law."

—Convicted with insufficient evidence. The prosecution's evidence against him "amounts to no evidence." The chemist's test of the alleged methamphetamine, a stimulant, was improperly carried out, Millican contends, and did not exclude "some 31,000 other substances it might have been. The chemist based his findings on assumption and hearsay..."

—Denied his motion to quash. As a result, Millican says he was "vindictively" prosecuted.

—Prosecuted by an indictment "not found by a quorum of the grand jury." Millican says that he was "never indicted by the entire grand jury panel but by (foreman) Norvell Harris and the state prosecutors."

—Denied early access to his "rap sheet" — his criminal record — and thereby was denied evidence "favorable" to him.

Injured man files suit against DPS

A motorcycle passenger who says he was injured when the driver was forced "to lay the motorcycle down" to avoid a crash has filed a lawsuit in Midland's 142nd State District Court against the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The passenger, James Underwood of Odessa, says the mishap occurred at the underpass over U.S. Highway 80 near Midland Regional Airport on Sept. 18 when the DPS, "due to high water," had blocked off the right lane of traffic in the westbound lane.

The motorcycle, driven by Craig Wetherbee, was traveling west in the open left lane when a car in the right lane pulled into the left lane and toward the motorcycle. Thereupon, Wetherbee sped up the motorcycle "to avoid being forced into the side of the underpass" by the car. But in accelerating, the Wetherbee motorcycle came upon a pickup, and the motorcycle became in danger of crashing into the truck, the petition says.

"The only choice the driver of the motorcycle...had was to lay the motorcycle down, which is what he (Wetherbee) did," the petition says.

Underwood is charging the DPS with failing to warn oncoming motorists of the blocked lane and in failing to set out warning lights or signs to forewarn motorists of the blockage before they entered the underpass.

The petition does not specify the amount of damages sought by Underwood.

Midlander files lawsuit against phone company

Midlander Randy Linton, who says his car crashed into an "illegally parked and abandoned" Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. trailer on Oct. 20, is seeking a $203,700-plus judgment against the telephone company in federal court here.

Linton says he was injured in the crash, which happened on County Road 1130 four miles east of Midland. He is asking for $100,000 to compensate him for loss of earnings due to his injuries, $100,000 for his injuries, $3,700 for damages to his automobile, a 1977 Pontiac, and an unspecified amount to cover his medical expenses.

The case initially was filed in Midland's 142nd State District Court but was transferred to federal court upon the motion of defendant Southwestern Bell.

Midlander wins award

Linda Thorsen Bond of Midland won two first place awards in the 1982 communications contest of Texas Press Women last weekend.

Ms. Bond, executive producer of the Midland-based multi-media company, The Producers, won with a multiprojector slide show prepared for Carrizo Lodge in Ruidoso, N.M., and with a series of radio spots done for the Jastrow Gallery in Midland.

All first place awards in the contest will be submitted for judging in the national competition of National Federation of Press Women.

Brooks: Lewis' decision dumb, not mean

AUSTIN (AP) — Senate dean Chet Brooks says Speaker Gib Lewis' decision to hire former Rep. Neal "Buddy" Jones as Lewis' top legislative assistant was dumb, but not mean.

Brooks, D-Pasadena, said Thursday senators would meet soon to see how they felt about the hiring of Jones, who campaigned as a member of former Republican Gov. Bill Clements' "truth squad" against Democrat Mark White.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, said Jones, a Hillsboro lawyer, had run "vicious" campaigns against White and in losing a Democratic primary race for the Senate against Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

Washington said Jones was supporting White one day "and the next day he came out supporting Clements. You can't take the man's word, and that's an awful person to have in a position of considerable influence — someone whose word you can't trust."

Lewis talked with several senators, including Brooks, while the Senate was in session Thursday, but Washington said, "You don't come around desk to desk lobbying while we're doing something else...He hasn't answered any of my questions."

Brooks said Lewis told him he knew Jones "had sinned, but he believed that he had repented and had hoped that we could forgive him because he hoped there would be some salvation for him. It remains to be seen whether the Senate feels he has paid enough penitence yet."

Brooks said if senators had more questions, "we'll get back to him. If senators are satisfied with what he (Lewis) said, that there wasn't any malice involved, and it may have been a dumb thing but was a mean thing, we may be all right and there may not be any need for another meeting."

Man charged in wife's death to fight for children's custody

EASTLAND (AP) — The attorney representing Cisco Mayor Pro Tem Loyal Lundstrom, charged with the shotgun slaying of his wife, says he will fight a court suit seeking to wrest away custody of Lundstrom's five children.

"I am representing him, and he will oppose it," Eastland attorney Bill Hart said Thursday. "He's going to contest this."

State District Judge Jim Wright will preside over the case, scheduled to begin today. He said that spectators may be barred from the hearing.

Fred Oehlke, the father of slaying victim Doris Lundstrom, filed suit last week to gain custody of the youngsters and to terminate Lundstrom's parental rights. Oehlke has moved to Cisco to care for the children.

Wright said Thursday he would make a final decision today on whether the hearing will be closed to the press and spectators.

"It's closed at this point simply because I don't know what will develop in the morning," Wright said Thursday. "I have no intention of turning any case involving these children into a circus...I just have to wait and see what develops."

Wright said the hearing would be closed if the Lundstrom children attend the proceeding.

The hearing comes just five days before authorities are to present evidence against Lundstrom to a grand jury.

He disappeared March 3, the same day pathologists say Mrs. Lundstrom was slain by a shotgun blast of birdshot to the abdomen. He eluded a nationwide manhunt for nearly two weeks before surrendering to police at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

Lundstrom was charged with murder six days after his wife was killed. Police have said the missing official told them he returned out of concern for his children, but Oehlke filed suit last week to gain custody of the youngsters, ranging in age from 3½ to 10.

Officials say the couple was well known in Cisco, a North Central Texas community of about 4,200. After Mrs. Lundstrom's slaying, it was revealed that Lundstrom was convicted of manslaughter in 1968 in connection with the death of his first wife in Minnesota.

The state Supreme Court later overturned that conviction. Prosecutors declined to try the case a second time.

Lundstrom was unavailable for comment Thursday on the latest court proceeding against him. He was freed Monday from Eastland County Jail on a $200,000 property bond.

Lobbying office wins support

AUSTIN (AP) — An East Texas lawmaker tried to turn it into a debate on the agency's director, but a Lubbock legislator won support for the Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington after pushing it as an effective anti-Yankee measure.

The House, in a 94-40 decision, voted tentative approval Thursday to a bill keeping the Texas office in Washington in business until 1995. The measure, approved by senators, faces another House vote before going to the governor.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, argued against the agency because of its director, Sarah Weddington — the winning lawyer in the 1973 U.S. Supreme Court case that legalized abortion.

"Last week I read in the newspaper where she was going around promoting her philosophy about upholding the abortion decision which she helped obtain in the Supreme Court," said Hollowell. "Is she speaking for the state of Texas or is she speaking for this agency or is she speaking as an individual?

"How are you going to separate that and how are the people that are paying her salary going to separate it? If she draws that check every month, and she's up there advocating that, the people of Texas are paying for that," Hollowell concluded.

But Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock and House sponsor, said the office is needed to make sure Texas gets its share of federal funds. New York has a Washington office with 100 workers, he said. The Texas office now has 19 and would have 22 if the bill is approved.

Men say famine in future

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Famines are "inevitable" in the next few decades because variety has been bred out of seeds for the world's major food crops, scientists at North Carolina State University say.

"It's beyond quick fixes," Gene Namkoong, professor of genetics and forestry, said earlier this week. "Once you lose your genetic base, you can't recapture it. Major famines are inevitable — even with zero population growth — within 50 years."

The problem is "genetic wipeout," said Major Goodman, professor of statistical genetics. Extinction of hundreds of grain varieties and the loss of their inherited traits has made major crop failures certain, he said.

But the threat could be reduced if scientists act now to save the varieties that still exist, said Goodman.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's top researcher dealing with the issue says the scientists' assessment is "over-exaggerated."

"There are areas in the world where the germ plasm of crop plants is endangered in terms of genetic diversity," said Dr. Quentin Jones, of the department's Agricultural Research Service. "But we have a lot of germ plasm in gene banks now."

Germ plasm is the living matter in a seed, the part which contains the genes.

Nearly all the corn grown in the United States is based on three genetic varieties, or races, said Goodman, who has the world's only seed collection of all 250 major corn races still in existence.

Goodman, who stores the seeds in a tiny storefront room between a Greek restaurant and a hardware store, says development of other such collections are vital because the seeds hold the inherited traits that would be needed to help crops survive new diseases or changing climate.

Because almost all corn grown today has been bred for high yield in a specific environment, climatic changes or a new pest could wipe out the entire crop, he said.

Namkoong said 12 crops provide 95 percent of the world's calorie needs. In corn, one-third of the genes come from four inbred varieties. The problem is even worse in wheat, soybeans and other crops, he said.

Workers pay more for care

NEW YORK (AP) — American workers will pay a bigger share of the cost of health care if employers have their way, according to a report by a public opinion firm.

Yankelovich, Skelly & White Inc. questioned 207 people described as "leaders and experts" in the field of providing health care. Included were 54 medical personnel, 30 government officials, 51 executives from Fortune 500 companies, 15 union officials, 16 executives of health insurance companies and 41 health economists or public policy experts.

According the results released earlier this week, 75 percent of the employers questioned said they were extremely likely or very likely to pass along more of the cost of health benefits to workers.

Fifty-one percent of the employers said they believed business would provide incentives for less frequent use of health care services. And about 65 percent said they thought a system which limits the consumer to an approved list of health care providers was an effective way to control costs.

Border states' senators organize into caucus

By JOHN ELLEMENT

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of senators from nine southern border states will be speaking with one voice.

The 18 men have organized themselves into a caucus that will attempt to draw attention — and federal money — to combat vexing problems common to each state.

The number one topic will be beefing up the federal war on illegal drug trafficking, followed closely by enforcement of the United States' immigration policy, according to Lynn Levins, an aide to Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

DeConcini and Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., will chair the caucus, which will be formally unveiled at a press conference Thursday. They will be joined by a top official of the U.S. Customs Service, the Reagan administration's drug policy coordinator and a representative of the U.S Coast Guard at the unveiling.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is a caucus member. Because of their central positions in the formulation of new laws and in deciding where federal money is spent, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, are honorary members.

"Basically it's a coordinating body, to help filter through all the mass of legislation that is introduced, and all the administration's proposals on the budgets," said Levins. "It's a pooling of resources and ideas among the very senators directly involved" in issues affecting border states.

By throwing in together, the caucus members hope to increase their clout during the drafting of legislation and the federal budget. The ideal result would be tougher criminal penalties for drug trafficking and more federal dollars for the war on crime, among other things, said Levins.

Some of the caucus members bring an already considerable amount of clout to the group. Domenici is chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, which sets spending levels for the federal government, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which has jurisdiction over all military programs.

There are dozens of caucuses in Congress at present. Some, like the border states caucus, are organized along regional lines. Others are based on race, policy matters, or political philosophy. They have been and continue to be a growing political force here, because they are able to concentrate their efforts — or votes — on a single issue when needed.

The mechanics of the border state caucus operations have not been finalized, Levins said. But she said there are no plans to hire any additional people to staff the cacus. A budget has not yet been drawn up, she said.

In addition to Arizona, both senators from the following states have agreed to participate in the group: California, New Mexico, Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

Michigan to develop plan to study dioxin contamination

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — State and federal officials say they expect to develop a plan within two weeks to study dioxin contamination in Dow Chemical Co.'s hometown of Midland and in waters across Michigan.

After a meeting in Washington on Thursday, officials announced that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the state Department of Natural Resources will draft the plan as a joint undertaking.

The plan also includes dioxin studies across the country to see if Michigan has an unusual problem or if the nation faces a widespread threat from the toxic chemical, according to U.S. Rep. Don Albosta's office.

"Most immediately, we have to get answers for the residents of Midland," said Albosta, a Democrat whose district includes the mid-Michigan city. "We have to find out if this stuff has spread to the rest of the state. And we have to find out if this is a problem just in Michigan."

Race becoming issue in mayoral election

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Jane M. Byrne offered no support for Democratic mayoral nominee Harold Washington, and nearly half the party's ward bosses either did not vote or sent proxies to a meeting to endorse his campaign to become the city's first black mayor.

Although Washington received a unanimous endorsement of the votes cast at a meeting Thursday, Democratic committeeman John Stroger said he was "deeply hurt" by racial divisions evident in the party.

"The problem of the election is that...individuals are looking at skin color," said Cook County Democratic Chairman Ed Vrdolyak. "That is beyond reason, understanding or logic."

Mrs. Byrne, the Democratic incumbent who abandoned her brief write-in candidacy Wednesday night, made no expression of support for Washington on Thursday, despite the national party's call to support his mayoral bid.

"I've fought for Chicago will all my heart," Mrs. Byrne said in a statement. "It isn't news that I'm a fighter. I don't like to lose."

But Mrs. Byrne said she withdrew because a continued write-in candidacy "would not serve the city best." Too many legal obstacles existed, she said, in trying to clarify laws governing write-in campaigns.

"To withdraw and not endorse the Democratic candidate smacks of a hollow gesture," said Robert Neuman, the Democratic National Committee's communications director. "But she should certainly endorse Washington again. It's never too late."

Mrs. Byrne had promised to support Washington in the April 12 general election after he defeated her in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary.

Mystery man has 31 aliases

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Authorities say they now have 31 aliases for a man who held full-time teaching jobs at two Pennsylvania colleges under false identities while continuing work as an engineering professor in Washington.

Officials at George Washington University in Washington said Pennsylvania police presented them with identification cards Thursday for Paul Crafton, 59, who has taught engineering administration at the school full- or part-time since 1956.

Towson State University officials in Towson, Md., identified the man as having taught at that suburban Baltimore school, said Patrick Boyle, a spokesman for the state attorney general.

Boyle said 16 boxes of papers from the man's Lancaster apartment indicated he had 31 aliases.

"Our immediate goal...is to pinpoint conclusively the true identity of the suspect," said Boyle.

One published report said Crafton had taken the two positions in Pennsylvania at the start of the current academic year to pay for an operation for a crippled daughter. His combined salaries at the campuses came to $58,000.

The Washington Post said Crafton had earned $21,000 a year at George Washington, less than half the salary of his fellow full professors, because the school was dissatisfied with his work. This year, his salary is $14,000 because he is teaching part-time at his request.

The Baltimore Sun reported today that Crafton has had financial problems for at least six years and has been the subject of at least 11 lawsuits because of indebtedness.

The newspaper said the suits were filed in Maryland between 1976 and 1982 by several banks, a department store and a credit card company seeking repayment of more than $17,000.

George Washington has put Crafton on administrative leave, according to an announcement by Dr. Harold F. Bright, university provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The man, being held in lieu of $150,000 bail in Cumberland County Prison, continued to insist that he was Anthony S. Williams, the name used to rent an apartment in Lancaster, about 85 miles northeast of Washington.

"He stated his name was Mr. Williams," said Tom Powers, prison director of treatment, following a classification hearing Thursday morning. "He was in very good spirits...and pretty much answered our questions."

Meanwhile, officials at Towson said the man had been known to them as David Gordon and taught business courses from the fall of 1979 to March 1982. Towson is about 40 miles southwest of Lancaster.

Authorities have also confirmed they have evidence that the man taught at Wagner College in Staten Island, N.Y., earlier last year before being hired in Pennsylvania.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Saturday, March 26, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Poets A. E. Housman and Robert Frost, former Texas Governor William P. Hobby and traveler-publisher Duncan Hines were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actors James Caan and Alan Arkin, jockey Braulio Baeza, author Erica Jong, Diana Ross and playwright Tennessee Williams. A romantic relationship affects your luck in the coming year. Actions, not words, will determine how much career progress you make. You may have underrated someone. Take a second look!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stick to the issues in business discussions. Insist on facts, not fantasy. A change in routine reduces tedium. You develop a fuller social life. Stress the need for better work habits.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel helps you increase profits and make valuable new contacts. Begin an important project. Entertaining at home can be more fun and less expensive than going out. Romance blooms.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Devote more time to family members' needs. An evening at the theater or movies proves rewarding. Try to reach a compromise with mate regarding spending. Absence will make the heart grow fonder.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family problems are easier to solve with both you and mate at home. Give a young person the benefit of your experience. Letters bring welcome news to teenagers looking for college acceptances.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keep in touch with business contacts. An aggressive attitude will intimidate an older person who needs a special favor. Be gentle with mate or date. Cut down on unnecessary expenses.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance is somewhat sensitive now. Concentrate on platonic relationships. A change of scene will alleviate boredom or tension. Self-improvement projects give you a new self-confidence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cut travel to a minimum. You need to behave impeccably and steer clear of compromising situations. Make a point of visiting relatives who could feel neglected. A change of scene aids romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A newcomer is indiscreet. Be wary of secret deals. Romance flourishes when you become a better listener. Avoid gambling, games of chance. A late afternoon phone call promises an exciting evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Exciting news lifts your spirits and does wonders for your ego. Plan a celebration for loved ones. Candor helps close a generation gap. Public entertainment, theatrical performances hold special appeal tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take advantage of a special relationship to relieve a financial strain. Travel could leave you feeling harried. Observe all safety rules. Your self-confidence rubs off on a troubled teenager.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take older person's advice with a grain of salt. The mail brings an unexpected check or wonderful financial news. Share secret with loved one. Host a modest celebration tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A troublesome matter will sort itself out if you remain patient and tactful. A moving spiritual experience is possible. Spend a quiet evening with that someone special and speak from the heart.

WINNING FINESSES CAN BE DEVASTATING

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	3 ♠	4 ♡
Dble	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

A finesse is a way to win a trick you otherwise would not be entitled to. But a finesse for that reason alone can sometimes be foolhardy.

There are many points of interest in the auction. East's raise to three spades was preemptive. Even so, we would have removed West's double to four spades because the hand did not contain the vestige of a defensive trick. And we don't like West's double of four hearts. With so much strength in his side's long suit, his hand was more oriented to offense than defense. We like South's bold decision to compete with four hearts and North's faith in his partner—he did not run to diamonds when hearts got doubled.

Against four hearts doubled, West led the king of spades. Declarer ruffed, finessed the jack of hearts and cashed the ace. Now he was locked in dummy with no entry to his hand. He started to run the diamonds.

West waited to ruff the third diamond, then shifted to the king of clubs to knock out the entry to the diamond suit. Declarer won the ace in dummy and discarded a club on a winning diamond as West ruffed with the trump king. But declarer still had two clubs to lose for down one.

Declarer's error lay in taking the trump finesse. That would gain only if West had started with a doubleton king of hearts—unlikely in light of his double.

The contract is quite easy to make if, at trick two, declarer leads a trump to the ace and then overtakes the jack of hearts with the queen. Since it does West no good to duck the king, he might as well win. It is still correct to shift to the king of clubs, but declarer is in control.

He wins the king of clubs with the ace, comes to his hand with a spade ruff and draws the outstanding trumps. He can get back to dummy with a diamond and will end up with two overtricks!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Barney Clark's gift

Barney Clark died Wednesday, 112 days after becoming the first recipient of an artificial heart. But he left mankind a greater gift than the extension of life he received from the man-made heart.

Clark was dying, his true heart playing out the final notes of its existence, when on Dec. 2 Dr. William C. DeVries installed the polyurethane heart designed and built by Dr. Robert Jarvik. At that moment, Clark became a living part of medical history.

The retired dentist could have chosen to die and avoid the inevitable pain and suffering that followed implantation of the artificial heart. But he undoubtedly knew that to do so would be depriving other heart patients of the opportunity to benefit from the expertise his doctors gained from Clark's months on the Jarvik heart.

On the one occasion Clark spoke about his artificial heart, he noted that life was difficult with the man-made organ, "but all in all it has been a pleasure to be able to help people."

Throughout the final 112 days of his life, Clark gave the medical profession invaluable information to use in helping others. His death from circulatory collapse due to multi-organ system failure Wednesday night can in no way be considered a failure for medical science. Medical information provided through Barney Clark's experiences will pave the way into a new world of life-saving technology.

Clark's courage and will to walk into the uncharted region of artificial heart technology is a gift mankind should cherish forever.

Bess' pen pal

History surfaces in the most surprising places. One of the latest contributions to the annals of our nation was the surprise discovery of those 1,300 letters Harry Truman wrote to his beloved wife, Bess. They say much about the good humor, character and common sense of the gentleman from Independence.

Here is a paragraph Truman wrote from the White House shortly after succeeding Franklin Roosevelt:

"Just two months ago today, I was a reasonably happy and contented Vice President. Maybe you can remember that far back too. But things have changed so much it hardly seems real. I sit here in this old house and work on foreign affairs, read reports, and work on speeches — all the while listening to the ghosts walk up and down the hallway and even right in here in the study. The floors pop and the drapes move back and forth — I can just imagine old Andy and Teddy having an argument over Franklin."

A month later he wrote as follows during a break in the Potsdam conference where he met Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin:

"I bought you a Belgian lace luncheon set — the prettiest thing you ever saw. I'm not going to tell you what it cost — you'd probably have a receiver appointed for me and officially take over the strong box. But I came out a few dollars to the good in the game of chance on the boat, so it's invested in a luxury for you ... I seem to have Joe and Winnie talking to themselves and both are being exceedingly careful with me."

Harry's ghost surely is in the big league with those of "Andy and Teddy," not only because of his making of history, but because he could write about it so interestingly.

Another View:

College 'creativity'

Congress emphatically turned down President Reagan last year when he tried to eliminate federal loans and grants to students from middle- and lower-middle-income families. The administration is back again, still trying.

In a message to Congress, the president declared that the nation's educational system faces "complex and varied problems" that "call for a broad range of creative approaches by concerned parents, by educators, by the private sector and by government."

One of the creative approaches calls for changes in the Pell Grant program, under which students now can receive up to $1,800 a year for college costs, depending on how much their families are able to contribute. The administration would increase the maximum level of $3,000, but it would provide a more stringent needs test for those who are not "truly needy." It would also compel students to provide 40 percent of college costs, or $800, whichever is higher, before they could receive any federal grants.

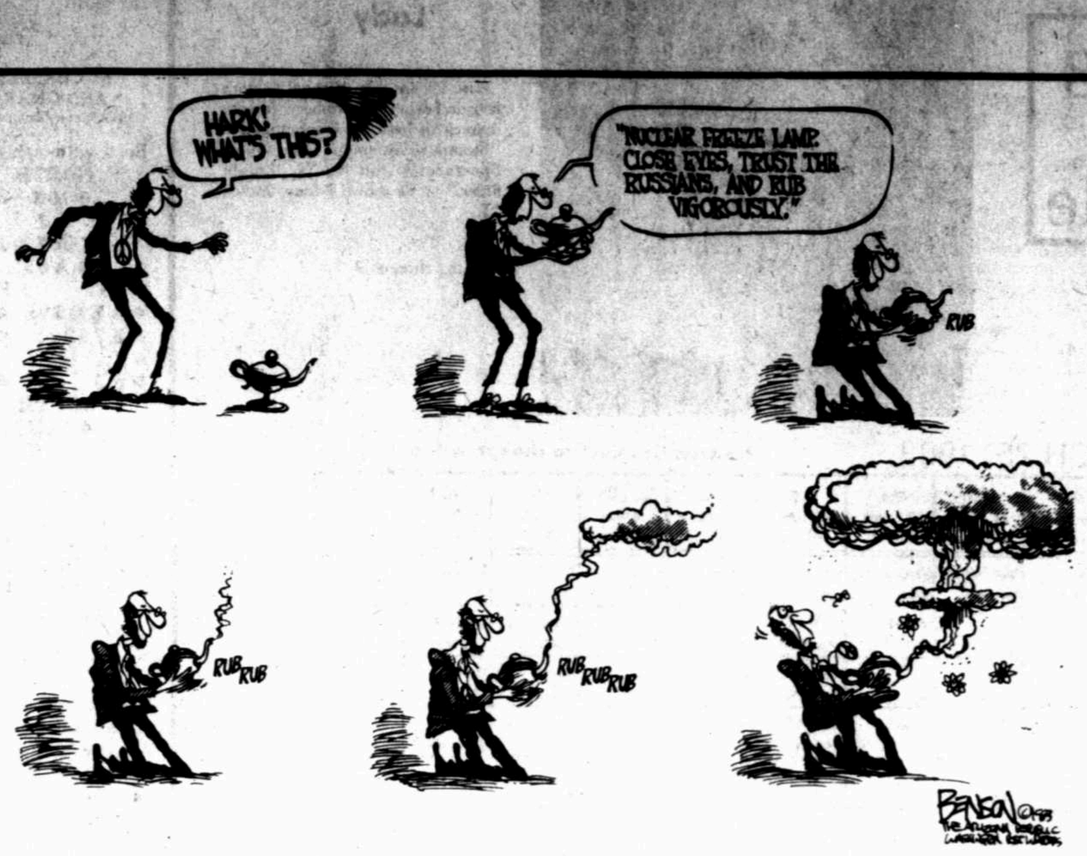

The rationale for what the administration calls a "major philosophical shift" is the principle of "self-help." Not many Americans will argue with the principle. Not many students can avoid self-help in reality. Who other than the truly wealthy can afford the $13,000 or so a year that it costs to attend an Ivy League school, or even half that much?

But how many students, in an economy where more than 11 million adults are seeking jobs that aren't there, can find jobs — summers and during the school term — that will provide them with a clear $5,000 or so? As Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., chairman of a House subcommittee on higher education, declared after hearing Education Secretary T.H. Bell testify about self-help: "Five counties in my district have unemployment over 25 percent. To talk about self-help for these people is ridiculous."

It is equally ridiculous, though, to think of education only as some kind of moral obstacle course, in which those willing to endure the pains can get the gains. Education is also a national need, as much a factor in national security as arms, as much a factor in a competitive economy as investment. Indeed, if the United States expects to find people who can operate its military technology, function in its economy and advance its science, it must invest in their education.

One of the serious problems of education is that students from middle-income families are increasingly unable to pay the soaring costs of college. The problems won't be solved by preaching self-help but by providing government assistance that will in turn provide a many-fold return on investment to the nation.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Air Force's target nonexistent

WASHINGTON — Air Force generals apparently don't have enough real problems to keep them busy. They recently spent months producing an elaborate "contingency plan" for dealing with a strike — not a first strike by the Soviets, but a labor action by the Air Force's civilian employees.

Jack Anderson

Never mind that civil servants are prohibited by law from engaging in strikes or slowdowns. Never mind that the Air Force's civilian workers are not tightly organized into unions, as the postal workers are and the air traffic controllers used to be.

The brass hats determined that a contingency plan was needed, so that's what they got: a 70-page document assembled by brigadier generals and above, marked "For Official Use Only." My associate Indy Badhwar obtained a copy, and some of the text reads like the Chief's instructions to Maxwell Smart.

"The long title of this plan is AFLC Labor Strike Contingency Plan. The short title is AFLC PLAN 20," the primer begins. "Due to the sensitive nature of this plan, the short title will be used to the maximum extent possible." That should fool any Russian spies.

Possibly hoping to avoid overreaction by gung-ho types, the authors feel compelled to point out that AFLC PLAN 20 applies not to "enemy forces" but to "friendly forces."

Nevertheless, they do paint a grim, if fantastic, picture of the situation the plan was devised to deal with: "Part or all of the civilian workforce may participate or threaten to participate in a strike, work stoppage or other concerted action."

Two pages of the primer are devoted to definitions. For generals who have been stationed on the Moon for their entire careers, the manual even defines a strike: "A concerted work stoppage of employees. Also called walkout."

It then lists the various types of strikes: "direct, general, jurisdictional, sit-down, slow-down, sympathetic, secondary and wildcat."

A jurisdictional strike is illustrated in terms that any general can understand:

"If carpenters are engaged to hang steel doors, as part of some construction project, on the grounds that the hanging of doors has always been a part of their work, the metal workers may decide to strike because they consider the installation of metal materials wholly within their province."

Air Force commanders are given a sort of early-warning system that will tip them off to an impending labor problem. Here's what they are told to look for: "Unusual militancy among employees or labor organizations ... a union objective that has not been met ... expressed employee dissatisfaction over pay or working conditions ... persistent emphasis by a labor organization on a particular complaint, demand or issue ..."

Does Miss Buxley pout when asked to take dictation from Gen. Halftrack? Watch out! She may be on a picket line tomorrow.

If the telltale signs of malcontent are somehow not caught and worse comes to worst, the manual assures its readers that headquarters will "direct the Military Airlift Command to provide movement of personnel as required to support the provisions of this plan." An airlift for strikebreakers, no less.

Footnote: The manual doesn't deal with the only real danger of a strike: by employees of defense contractors, who are not bound by the no-strike law.

TIP'S TEMPER: House Speaker Tip O'Neill usually keeps his Irish temper under control. But in the heat of the debate over Social Security reform, he interpreted a casual remark by veteran Rep. Chalmers Wylie, R-Ohio, as a slur on his integrity.

The most sizzling remarks were mysteriously deleted from the public record. The exchange was triggered by Wylie's remark that the Speaker had wielded a "fast gavel on the previous question earlier in the day."

"Was the gentleman on the floor at the time?" O'Neill demanded. Wylie said he had been.

"Then he had no opportunity (to be recognized), because I looked to both sides," said O'Neill. "I resent the statement of the gentleman."

"Well, I am sorry if the Speaker was offended," said Wylie. He tried to explain, but O'Neill wasn't buying.

"The gentleman said I had a fast gavel and it was not a fast gavel," said O'Neill. He also warned Wylie: "Don't play politics with me."

Wylie insisted he hadn't meant to offend O'Neill.

"Well, the gentleman has offended me, perhaps unintentionally, and I will accept his apology," O'Neill replied.

Wylie said later he thought his "fast gavel" remark was accurate, "but I don't necessarily think it was bad." He said he went up to O'Neill after the exchange and apologized again.

"He told me, 'Don't lose any sleep on it,'" Wylie said.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan's passive role rewritten

WASHINGTON — In resurrecting Ronald Reagan from restless passivity to the administration's point man in the battle to salvage his defense program, William P. Clark purged the White House of the counsel of political timidity that muzzled Reagan during last fall's election campaign.

Rowland Evans

The president's soft-spoken national security adviser worked quietly, as always. He digested reams of private messages and memoranda flowing to the Oval Office from defense-oriented congressmen and Reaganite insiders. In various ways, they carried this warning: If Reagan did not personally lead the charge, his defense buildup, and with it his bargaining chips for nuclear-arms talks with Moscow, would soon be in ruins.

Robert Novak

Now that the president is back doing what he does best — communicating his deepest convictions over television — all bets are off that the nuclear-freezers and defense-cutters will have their way. With Bill Clark almost alone inside the White House reinforcing Reagan's own political instincts, Reagan has staked power and prestige on humbling his critics whose anti-defense policies verge dangerously close to unilateral arms control while the awesome Soviet arms surge continues.

That is quite a distance from the carefully-structured role of passivity carved out for him last fall by top White House aides. They insulated Reagan from the nuclear debate for fear of tainting him as a nuclear cold-warrior. The big three White House signal-callers — James Baker, Michael Deaver and even Edwin Meese — killed plans for speeches bringing the president too close to the dreaded nuclear issue, ruling even the nuclear freeze out of bounds.

Last month when Reagan met with members of his MX Commission to publicize its bipartisan makeup, Deaver successfully argued against letting photographers record the session — too contaminating for the president.

Clark correctly gauged his boss as uncomfortable under such restraints. He worried and fretted over those private communications flowing into the Oval Office warning that Reagan's trillion-dollar, long-range defense program was bleeding at every pore and needed urgent presidential doctoring.

A large part of Reagan's plight is the empty stable of defense-sellers anywhere else. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, often by well-intentioned overkill, has proved unable to move congressional moderates (sometimes moving them the wrong way). Elsewhere in the Pentagon, Weinberger's speechwriters (who had the lead role in Reagan's Wednesday-night speech) turned out good material — but, with the exception of Navy Secretary John Lehman, no convincing speechmakers.

Clark knew that rescuing rearmament and saving what the president views as the foundation of a strong, safe foreign policy could only be done by Reagan himself.

The campaign by the born-again commander-in-chief began with the March 8 speech in Orlando. The target there was to seize moral high ground from the nuclear freeze and peace movements, and he used the speech to stigmatize the Soviet Union as an "evil empire." The next scheduled Reagan offensive was set for March 31 at the Los Angeles World Affairs Council, to be followed in early April by a speech on the fate of the MX missile.

But Clark worried about the political impact of congressional votes on the new budget resolution. He argued for sandwiching in the March 23 speech on the defense budget and the Soviet threat. Clark's advice was all Reagan needed.

The successful intercession by Clark in framing a new, frontal political strategy for Reagan's handling of the defense issue shows that when he wants to use it, his influence inside the White House is pervasive. The corridor chatter of senior aides — at least for now — carries no echo of the political timidity heard so frequently over the past six months.

That seminal change became clear to one White House insider when he heard David Gergen, the top Baker aide who runs White House communications and has always concealed his enthusiasm for defense spending, wax warm over Reagan's speech calendar on national security. "Remember," Gergen said, "we believe in here that you can only get peace through strength."

Hodel's plan kills drilling

To The Editor:

The United States has 200 trillion cubic feet (TCF) of proven natural gas reserves, down from 300 TCF ten years ago. Sixty-five TCF has been found since 1977 and is classified by our federal government as "new" gas. This gas sells at either uncontrolled prices or at prices regulated such that they in effect don't exceed a market clearing price. Seventy-five percent of these new reserves have been found by small independent gas producers.

The 135 TCF of gas found prior to 1977 is classified as "old" gas. It is controlled at prices well below current market clearing levels but it's price nevertheless is sufficiently high to have given the producer a more than adequate return on his initial investment made long ago. Seventy-five percent of this gas is owned by the major oil companies.

At this moment the federal government is actively considering additional controls on natural gas which would establish a price cap below levels provided in existing gas contracts and thereby roll back average prices on new gas by as much as a third to approximately $2.25 per MCF. On the other hand old gas prices would be allowed to increase.

By raising the price of old gas while lowering the price for new, in just the next three years alone up to $24,000,000,000 in revenues will be transfered to the major oil companies from the independent producers, who have been taking the recent risks and who in most cases have not had time to get a return of their more recent and much more costly investments.

This is not the way to run a railroad. Congress should resist the major company lobby and lay off the natural gas issue, letting existing law on pricing stand. If Congress enacts the plan proposed by Energy Secretary Hodel outlined above, you can count on a lengthy perpetuation of the economic depression that pervades the energy business in our area and across the nation. As the energy business goes, so goes our country. And the energy business goes nowhere when it is uneconomic to drill wells!

As it is, drilling activity this summer in the gas-prone United States will be only one-third of what it was fifteen months ago. Can you imagine what it will fall to if Hodel's plan is enacted? And all the while a shortage of reserves underlies the natural gas market, presently glutted due to reduced demand from an economy aching over high interest rates.

Cancer help

To The Editor:

Since I attended the "I Can Cope" course at Midland Memorial Hospital, I have had such an improved viewpoint about cancer and cancer therapy. Of course, I still hope that diagnosis is never my own, but if it were the classes I attended would help me deal with what lay ahead. In fact, I probably would attend the classes again, since they are offered free once or twice a year.

What I learned is valuable, but the friendships I formed are of even greater worth. I have a special appreciation and admiration for the organizers of the course, including Patty Hodges, Jim Rasco and Howell Watkins. Lots of work goes into putting something like that together!

I hope many others, whether cancer patients, their families, or just interested persons take advantage of this wonderful opportunity. Those interested could probably find out more by calling the Allison Cancer Center or the American Cancer Society.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1821, Greek patriots began an uprising against the domination of the Ottoman Empire — an uprising that led to establishment of an independent kingdom.

In 1947, 111 miners were killed in a coal mine explosion in Centralia, Ill.

And, in 1965, the Reverend Martin Luther King junior led 25,000 civil rights marchers to the steps of the Alabama Capitol in Montgomery.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon ordered the remaining U.S. forces in Vietnam to stay on until all American prisoners of war were released.

Five years ago: The Egyptian government declared it was prepared to go ahead with its Middle East peace effort despite Israel's military operation against Palestinians in Lebanon.

One year ago: In a by-election, former Common Market president Roy Jenkins won a seat in the British Parliament as a member of the Social Democratic Party.

Today's birthdays: Pop singer Elton John is 36 years old. Entertainer Anita Bryant is 43.

Moderate Republicans replace 'true believers'

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Alexander Haig was replaced by George Shultz.

Anne McGill Burford was replaced by William D. Ruckelshaus.

James Edwards was replaced by Donald Hodel.

In some of the top positions in the Reagan administration, generally moderate, mainstream Republicans have moved into slots once occupied by true-believers and longtime members of the Ronald Reagan fan club.

There have been other such shifts, less visible, in other government agencies, as the Reagan administration proceeds through normal staff turnovers and some less-than-normal shakeups.

But there are exceptions to this trend as well. Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's first national security adviser, was replaced by a friend of the president, William Clark, who holds unchallenged credentials as a conservative, as does Allen.

At the Justice Department, three hardline conservatives have departed:

—Associate Deputy Attorney Gen. Bruce Fein, who helped draft the initial plan to give tax exemptions to racially discriminatory schools, moved to a post as general counsel to the Federal Communications Commission. His replacement has not been announced.

An Analysis

—Alfred Regnery, a former legislative aide to Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and an advocate of removing restrictions on the FBI, was a deputy assistant attorney general at the department's land and resources division. He recently transferred to head the office of juvenile justice and delinquency prevention. He has been replaced by a more moderate special assistant to the attorney general, Hank Habicht.

—Robert D'Agostino, who wrote a memorandum that started a revolt among the career trial attorneys in the department's civil rights division, has returned to a law school teaching job, and was replaced by a conservative editorial writer from Norfolk, Va., J. Harvie Wilkinson.

Edwards, who left his job as Reagan's first energy secretary to return to South Carolina, was a longtime supporter of Reagan's presidential bid when he was a South Carolina governor.

With some of the shifts — most notably those that brought Shultz back to prominence as secretary of state and Ruckelshaus back to his old job as administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency — Reagan was searching for someone who could quickly step into a troubled agency, tackle some smouldering problems and restore credibility in a crucial area.

More children being fingerprinted

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Policeman Gary Armstrong grasped Nicholas Paz's hand, rolled his fingertips across the ink pad and pressed them one by one on a white identification form. Then he fingerprinted Nicholas' teddy bear.

Across the nation, children like 3-year-old Nicholas are being fingerprinted in the hopes that the prints will never be needed. Police call the growing popularity of kid-prints a reaction to the horror of child abductions and the tragedy of child custody battles.

"The fear that kidnaps and abductions bring are a sign of the times, as are the disintegration of families, the rise in divorce, the fighting over children in custody matters," says Capt. Robert Taylor of the Los Angeles Police Juvenile Division. "I think parents are looking for any additional thing that can help protect their children."

Programs to fingerprint children have been started in New York, Florida, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Virginia, Utah, Wyoming, New Jersey and other states. Whether this protects youngsters is disputed.

"If it ever gets to the point where you need fingerprints, you're really in trouble," says Peggy Berger. She was among the mothers who recently brought their children to a fingerprinting session at Mary B. Eyre Children's School in Claremont — where young Nicholas became a marked boy.

"It doesn't really protect children, it just provides a method of assisting police in the event that becomes necessary," Taylor says.

Capt. Frank Sano of Orange County's Westminster Police Department notes, "It could help a great deal if we found a child and they couldn't remember who they were. But if you haven't got anybody to match (fingerprints) to, they're absolutely worthless."

AP Laserphoto

Officer Gary Armstrong of the Claremont, Calif., police department puts the fingers of an unidentified child on an ink pad before putting the child's fingerprints on a record form. Many parents across the country are having their young children fingerprinted in what police call an emotional reaction to the horror of child abductions and the tragedy of child custody battles.

Other methods of identification are considered more important.

Jay Howell, chief counsel to the Senate Labor and Human Resources subcommittee on Investigations and an expert on missing children, says it is critical for parents to have a clear, recent, close-up photograph of their child's face to help searchers.

Police and parents throughout Southern California are organizing printing sessions. Taylor says his department expects 500,000 children eventually will participate for free, thanks in part to a $5,000 grant from a civic booster group, Patrons of the Children.

One of the first fingerprinting programs was started last September by police in Salt Lake City.

They initiated Child Watch after a series of summer kidnappings, two of which became homicide cases.

"We did have a bit of opposition from a child psychologist saying we shouldn't be frightening children, but the school board and PTA supported us," says Officer Marcia Jensen of the department's Crime Prevention Unit. "We're not trying to scare them or make them leery of everyone, just trying to teach them to protect themselves."

Child Watch incorporates films and lectures that once were part of its "Stranger Danger" program, as well as a karate expert who shows children defensive techniques for escaping a would-be abductor.

Ms. Jensen said Child Watch has reached 23,000 children in Salt Lake City.

The comprehensive approach is also favored by Child Find, a nonprofit organization in New Paltz, N.Y., founded in 1980 to locate missing children.

Spokeswoman Kristin Cole Brown says fingerprinting projects could be "obscuring the more important need for general education of children and an awareness of the dangers they face."

Child Find offers a lesson plan to help teachers explain to students how they can protect themselves and what they might do if abducted. Ms. Brown says teachers also are encouraged to watch for pupils who might themselves be kidnap victims.

She cites the case of Steven Staynor, the California boy who was kidnapped by Kenneth Parnell in 1972 and held eight years before he fled in March 1980.

"The man (Parnell) enrolled him in several schools up and down the coast," she notes, but teachers never realized the student named "Dennis Parnell" was Staynor.

Protest ends without violence

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A downtown rally called here by agricultural students protesting a lack of federal funding for a private university ended without violence after a government official threatened to cut off all aid.

About 2,000 placard-carrying protesters, including students from Hermanos Escobar Agricultural College and other supporters, marched here Thursday. The rally broke up shortly after 5 p.m. MST, and there were no arrests, Mexican police said.

The rally, which also lent support to financially pinched Cuidad Juarez College, was closely monitored by about 200 Mexican officers.

Salvadoran role talks opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, receiving conflicting signals from Congress about military aid to El Salvador, is sticking by its opposition to talks about a role for leftist guerrillas in the Salvadoran government.

"We do not believe the Salvadorans would be prepared to engage in negotiations on power-sharing," State Department spokesman John Hughes said Thursday. "We certainly would not advise them to take this course, nor do we find support for this in the Congress."

Opposition Laborites retain seat

DARLINGTON, England (AP) — Britain's opposition Laborites kept their parliamentary seat in Darlington's special election, and embattled party leader Michael Foot hailed the result today as a protest against mass unemployment.

The ruling Conservatives, who had feared taking a humiliating third place in Thursday's polling, came in a face-saving second, increasing chances Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher will call an early general election predicted for June or October.

Commentators agreed the third placing gained by the Social Democratic Party-Liberal Party alliance when official results were announced early today was a bad setback for the 17-month-old centrist grouping in its bid to break the two major parties' 60-year stranglehold on power.

French austerity plan revealed

PARIS (AP) — France's Socialist government today announced measures designed to reduce the country's mounting foreign deficit. They include a forced savings plan, an energy tax and budgetary restraint.

Government spokesman Max Gallo said the programs, decided on at a special meeting of the Cabinet at the Elysee Palace, were the continuation of an austerity plan introduced in June 1982.

The government pledged to hold down the 1984 budget deficit to 3 percent of gross domestic product. A similar promise was made for 1983.

Flood-stranded Peruvians use a log to cross a river near Chimbote in northern Peru. Offical accounts say at least 90 persons have died in recent floods and mudslides.

Mud, rocks kill at least 90 in Peru

TORNAMESA, Peru (AP) — An avalanche of mud and rocks crashed onto Peru's central highway near Lima, killing at least 90 people, sweeping two buses into a river and burying an undetermined number of victims under tons of debris.

National police said Thursday that six bodies had been recovered from the buses, which held 48 passengers each. They said townspeople living near the Rimac River also may have been swept away by landslides.

The mass of mud and rocks also swept a truck, car and police vehicle into the river, but their occupants managed to escape.

The disaster happened early Wednesday near Tornamesa, a town of 150 people next to the river, which runs through a canyon. Tornamesa is 36 miles east of the capital.

The latest casualties bring to more than 130 the number of people killed in mud slides and floods in north and central Peru in the past five days. Scores of people remain unaccounted for.

Israeli soldier injured in gas station bombing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A bomb ripped through a gasoline station today as an Israeli patrol was escorting a fuel tanker by, wounding an Israeli soldier, officials said. Radio stations said the Israelis made about 30 arrests after the blast in the Shweifat area, five miles south of Beirut.

The stations said the patrol consisted of two armored personnel carriers and one tank, and that the blast erupted at 8 a.m. (1 a.m. EST). The Tel Aviv command said one Israeli soldier was wounded in the explosion.

It was the second remote-controlled bomb blast directed against Israeli forces in Lebanon in two days. The first exploded on a coastal highway near Lebanon's southernmost port city of Tyre Thursday as an Israeli military bus was passing by. The Israeli command said no one was hurt in the Tyre blast.

The leftist Voice of Arab Lebanon radio station said both attacks were staged by the Lebanese National Resistance Front, the same group that has claimed almost all guerrilla attacks against the Israelis in Lebanon since last summer's invasion to stamp out the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In other developments, U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib flew back to Beirut from Israel; Israel's chief of staff designate, Maj. Gen. Moshe Levy, said Israeli forces were prepared in the event of renewed confrontation with Syrian troops in Lebanon in the spring or summer; and the leftist Beirut newspaper As-Safir said President Amin Gemayel has terminated the mandate of the all-Syrian "Arab Deterrent Force" in Lebanon as of March 31.

Pontiff initiates holy year

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Striking a gold hammer on the Holy Door of St. Peter's Basilica, Pope John Paul II today inaugurates the 1983 extraordinary Holy Year of Redemption commemorating the 1,950th anniversary of Christ's crucifixion.

For the first time since Holy Year celebrations began in 1300, they will not be limited to Rome but observed simultaneously around the world. The pope said this would enable Roman Catholics to stay home and share the spiritual benefits of the Holy Year.

The door-opening ceremony, beamed live by television to 20 countries, begins when the pope kneels at the threshold of the Holy Door, last opened in 1975, to signify he too is a sinner. After a prayer, the pontiff enters the basilica through the door as the Sistine Chapel choir sings "Lift Up Eternal Gates."

The pontiff has instructed Roman Catholic bishops that all jubilee activities be carried out in a simple, modest fashion with minimum expenses.

But the city of Rome and Vatican officials expect millions of pilgrims and tourists to flock to Rome for the festivities that will last until April 22, 1984. The city government has proposed a special budget of more than $15 million to improve security and provide better transportation, communications and tourist information services during the year.

In Christian belief, Redemption — the name given by the pope to the 1983 Holy Year — refers to Jesus sacrificing his life to save mankind. Jesus is said to have died in the year 33, on a Roman crucifix.

John Paul, calling for spiritual renewal at all levels, said in his proclamation that the year of the Redemption "should leave a special imprint on the church's whole life."

During the year, Catholics are asked to seek indulgence, or the pardon of temporal punishment of sin, by taking part in a community celebration organized on the diocesan level, including a Mass celebrated for the Holy Year or the exercise of the Stations of the Cross, prayers before 14 pictures representing the stages of Christ's suffering. Catholics also may gain indulgence by visiting churches designated for the purpose by local bishops.

Nebraska kills Frogs, 67-57

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Nebraska's Stan Cloudy has been the man with the great encores and is hoping the best is still to come when the Huskers travel to New York for Monday night's semifinals of college basketball's National Invitation Tournament.

With Cloudy leading the way with 18 points and 9 rebounds, Nebraska collected its third straight NIT home-court victory Thursday, stopping TCU 67-57 in a quarterfinal test.

The win allowed Nebraska, 22-9, to advance to the semifinals for the first time in four tries in the NIT and matched NU's season-best win record set in 1978 (22-9) and 1920 (22-2). The Huskers' Monday opponent will be determined today.

It was the third straight game Cloudy, the 6-4 Henderson County (Texas) Junior College transfer, has led NU in both scoring and rebounding. Against Tulane, Cloudy had 20 points and 14 rebounds and against Iona, he had a season high 24 tallies and 8 rebounds.

He has also dished off 14 assists while shooting 58 percent from the field on 27 of 47 field goal tries.

"He is a good competitor and is playing awfully well," said Nebraska Coach Moe Iba. "The thing is he can hit that shot (that you need)."

For his part, Cloudy said it was hard to put into words his feelings after leading NU to victory before a second-consecutive standing-room-only crowd of 14,753.

"I don't know how to express myself, but I know I love every minute of it," he said. "We saw the fans lineup at 6 p.m. (1½ hours before the tip-off) and we didn't want to let them or Coach Iba down."

The Huskers had no letdowns, as they took a 15-4 lead, with Cloudy scoring eight points, in the first 5½ minutes and were never headed. NU led 36-19 at halftime and by as much as 24 points, 62-38, with about six minutes to go.

"The fans ought to be happy. They filled the gym and got us three home games," Iba said. "I'm not saying we couldn't have won on the road, but playing at home helps."

On the other hand, TCU was playing its third straight NIT road game and sixth overall away from home. The Texas school was overpowered by the aggressive Nebraska man-to-man defense which held the Horned Frogs to just 38 percent (26 of 68) field goal shooting. NU hit 27 of 47 shots — a 57 percent clip.

"We just didn't have any legs tonight," said TCU Coach Jim "Killer" Killingsworth. He said the Frogs, which finished the year with a 23-11 record, were a half step behind all night.

"I think the NIT roaded us out. We have been too long on the road. We didn't seem to have any reactions on anything — defense, rebounding, offense," he said.

All-Southwest Conference guard Darrell Browder, who led all scorers with 25 points, agreed with Killingsworth.

"My legs were just too heavy. I couldn't seem to move very quickly, especially on defense," he said. "Nebraska came out with a lot energy in the first half. They have a good team and they wanted this one badly. They played well."

Browder had 20 of his points in the second half, inspiring his team's only rally when it scored 13 straight points to cut NU's lead to 62-51 with about two minutes remaining.

"Our basketball team is known for blowing a 17-point lead (the halftime margin)," Iba said. "I reminded them of that at halftime and when they (the Frogs) cut the lead down (with two minutes to go), I called time out and reminded them again."

The reminder was enough, as David Ponce's two free throws steadied NU and stymied the Frogs.

"I thought they tired, but we played awfully well," Iba said, who believes his team can be champions.

South Carolina Coach Bill Foster said his team had "effort and enthusiasm," but not much more.

"We saved our worst shooting night for tonight," Foster said. "We just couldn't score. It was a long 40 minutes for us."

Fresno State tripped Oregon State 76-67 Thursday night. The fourth semifinalist will be decided tonight when Mississippi plays DePaul at Rosemont, Ill.

Cards eliminate Arkansas, 65-63

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Coach Denny Crum of second-ranked Louisville said his first thoughts after the victory were about righting past frustrations at the hands of Arkansas, and not the Kentucky Wildcats.

Crum's Cardinals edged the Razorbacks 65-63 Thursday night in the NCAA basketball tournament's Mideast Regional seminfinals, setting up the first Louisville-Kentucky clash in 24 years.

"I thought it was turnabout's fair play," Crum said of Scooter McCray's tip-in at the buzzer that enabled Louisville to finally overcome a 16-point deficit for its first victory ever over Arkansas. It advanced the Cards to Saturday's title game with Kentucky, which trimmed Indiana 64-59 Thursday night, in the NCAA Mideast Regional tournament.

Arkansas twice before knocked Louisville out of the NCAA — in 1979 and again in 1981, a year after the Cards captured the national championship. The 1981 contest was won 74-73 on a 49-foot fling from midcourt by U.S. Reed as the buzzer sounded.

"Ours was a six-incher and their's was a 50-footer, but they both counted two points," Crum said.

There was a delay by the official scorer in granting the final basket to McCray, as he and Charles Jones each went up batting at the rebound.

"I don't know if I got it or Charles, but I'm happy Louisville got it," McCray said.

Crum said the victory only means Louisville has a change to go on "and we don't care who we play. I think Kentucky feels the same way."

Lancaster Gordon, another hero in the Cardinal comeback, said, "The Kentucky game is not just another game ... one's going to the championship. It's for the national championship."

Coach Eddie Sutton of Arkansas called Louisville "a great team. They could win this region and then go on and take the national title.

"We made enough mistakes at the end of the game to lose it," Sutton added. "It's a little emotional in the dressing room after a game like this."

It was McCray and Lancaster Gordon who sparked the rally that produced Louisville's 15th victory in a row and its 23rd in 24 games.

Arkansas, 26-4, riding an eight-point spree by Darrell Walker, had outscored the Cardinals 16-0 during a span of just under seven minutes in the opening half to take a 35-19 lead.

There were 39 turnovers in the game, 22 by Arkansas, and the Cards also had 10 steals, including three by Charles Jones.

The comeback enabled Louisville to realize the dream game it has wanted for years — a match with the Kentucky Wildcats. Kentucky has refused to play any other school in its state for years during the regular season, and only meets them by chance in postseason competition.

Louisville won 76-61 the last time the two played, on March 13, 1959, in the NCAA regionals.

Melvin Turpin scored 16 points and 12th-ranked Kentucky survived a late Indiana rally and trimmed the No.5 Hoosiers 64-59.

In the West Regional at Ogden, Utah, fourth-ranked Virginia, playing without All-American center Ralph Sampson for more than 12 minutes of the second half, held off No.11 Boston College 95-92 and 16th-ranked North Carolina State trounced Utah 75-56.

Midland Lee second baseman Barry Blackwell goes for the putout at first base during Thursday's non-district baseball game against Pecos at Lee Field.

Rebels, Willis avenge defeat

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee Rebels avenged one of their season's losses Thursday by posting an 8-4 victory over Pecos in nondistrict action at Lee Field. It was also a bit of vengence for starting pitcher Brian Willis who was tagged for the 7-6 defeat last week.

Willis, who has been suffering from an arm injury throughout most of the season, went 5⅓ innings before giving up the mound to reliever Kerry Robertson.

"He threw pretty good," said Lee coach Ernie Johnson. "He hasn't gotten to throw much because of his hurt shoulder. He needs to loosen it up. He was getting a little tired at the end."

Willis gave up five hits during his stint on the mound and all four runs — three of which were unearned — while striking out three and walking three.

Catcher Sergio Ochoa held the hot bat for the Rebels, going 2-for-3 for two RBI and scoring one run. Pinch hitter Steve Woodlee came through for the Rebels in his only trip to the plate, connecting for a RBI double with Danny Smedley on second.

"We hit some balls pretty sharp," said Johnson. "Woodlee got one, (Barry) Blackwell got one (a double) and (Rob) Walker got one, but we had too many pop ups, four infield flies."

Since the game didn't count toward Lee's District 4-5A record, which stands at a perfect 3-0 mark, Coach Johnson used the opportunity to get a few younger players into the game.

"It lets those kids play that don't get to play much," said Johnson about the nondistrict game. "It keeps them happy while giving the younger players more experience in case someone goes down."

Leading 1-0 going into the bottom of the third, Midland Lee came up with four runs, including the eventual game winner. Keith McDonald opened the frame with a walk and moved to second on Rob Walker's single to left. One out later, Willis loaded the bases with a single to left.

Ochoa collected his first hit and RBI of the game with a single up the middle that Eagle centerfielder Sonny Orona mishandled and let get behind him. McDonald scored on the hit and Walker came home on the error. Willis ended up on third and Ochoa at second.

Danny Smedley collected a walk to reload the bases off eventual loser Bobby Rayos who was pulled for Israel Abila. Jimmy Arthur picked up an RBI walk off Abila and Mark Schneider laid down a sacrifice bunt that brought home Ochoa with the fifth and deciding run.

Pecos picked up two runs in each of the fourth and sixth innings while Lee went on to score one in the fifth and two in the sixth for the final margin of victory.

The victory gives Lee a 10-6 overall record on the year while Pecos fell to 3-6. Lee's next game will be on Saturday against Odessa Permian at Lee Field. The Panthers are still looking for their first district win while Lee shares top 4-5A honors with Big Spring.

Familiar face found in Cubs' new crowd

MESA, Ariz. — As the game at the Chicago Cubs' Fitch Field minor league complex neared its end, it began to bother me that a couple of years ago I knew everybody. Now I know nobody in the organization outside of farm director Gordon Goldsberry.

The man next to me, with whom I had struck up a conversation, thinking he was a coach of some kind, turned out to be the father of Chicago's top Eastern scout and was merely taking a baseball vacation. He wasn't an official member of the Chicago family.

Now he was talking to another of his ilk, some guy wearing a Cubs' cap, about some new book Red Barber, the old Brooklyn radio announcer had written.

I wasn't really listening, but I heard the guy in the cap say, "Rickey" and "when I was with the Pittsburgh organization." For some reason, an alarm went off. "Are you with the Cubs?" I asked. "Why, yes, I am."

"Davis, Brandy Davis?" he looked surprised.

"Yes, but how..."

"You were with Bartlesville, KOM league, and I was covering the team...Geez, you were just a kid then. Now you must be almost as old as I am."

Brandy remembered. And why shouldn't he. He had come off the Duke campus a month into the season and still stole 72 bases for the Pittsburgh Pirates' Class D farm club. "I still have some of the clippings you wrote in a scrapbook my parents kept for me," he admitted.

"You remember," he said. "Ron Kline and I were sent to New Orleans (then a Triple A club) late in the season. Bartlesville was in a hot pennant race with the Dodgers' farm club at Ponca City and Ron and I both told Mr. Rickey that we didn't want to go. We'd rather stay with Bartlesville and help win the pennant. But he said he wanted to see what we could do in Triple A ball."

Davis stole 82 of 85 bases that year. "I was thrown out at third once and twice at home on double steal attempts$where I couldn't get the good jump and had to wait for the man on first to break. I was never thrown out at second. But I paid for it. In those days, we had no pads, no trainer and when I went into the shower, my hips and thighs were just one big strawberry."

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Perhaps one of the most remarkable aspects of Davis' 72 stolen bases was that he didn't have an automatic green light. "Gullic (manager Ted Gullic) would not let us steal indiscriminately. If we were behind or ahead by two or three runs, we didn't run. Today they steal bases in any situation, simply for the statistics."

From that Bartlesville club Ron Kline went on to become a successful starting pitcher for Pittsburgh and later a dependable relief pitcher for Washington.

Davis is now Chicago's National Scouting Coordinator, the same position he held during Dallas Green's rebuilding of the Phillies. In fact, Brandy brings to the Cubs a solid baseball background in rebuilding projects.

With the Pirates, he was part of Branch Rickey's reconstruction program and later managed in the Dodgers' organization for three years. He also served under Paul Richards.

"I was up and down with the Pirates," he reviewed. "When I finally realized I couldn't steal first base in the majors, I went into managing. But those of us who survived the crucible of the 1950s were the ones who won the Bill Mazeroski World Series in 1960.

When Green took over the Phillies in the late 1960s, he hired Davis. "What a lot of people forget is at the time the Phillies were a last place club. The team that was built into a constant contender was a product of the farm system, as well as some shrewd trades."

Davis contends the same methods are being employed to rebuild the Cubs. "One of the first things we did was to pull out of the co-op scouting system in which several clubs share information. We then expanded our own scouting staff. Before, the Cubs went for the big strong sluggers. Now we are looking for prospects who can run, throw, hit and think."

The Cubs, it seems, are using the text-book Rickey originated while GM of the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1930s and updated in moulding pennant winners at Brooklyn and Pittsburgh in the next two decades.

Davis interrupted himself long enough to time one of his pet projects on the Quad Cities team, who had just grounded to third. "4.2...that's not bad for a right-handed batter grounding to third. From the position he was in after his swing, it took him longer to recover."

Davis went on, we have a kid over on the Salinas club, Geoff Doggett, who stole 60 bases in 70 games." Actually, it was 66 in 75 games.

In the Midland outfield, William Hatcher stole 84 bases at Salinas and centerfielder, Terry Austin, a rangy kid who reminds you a little of Aaron Randle and Eric Grandy, had 43 swipes at Salinas. If Midland should get Henry Cotto back from Des Moines, there's another 52 thefts.

At Sarasota, rookie league last year, Stan Bodenick had 41 steals and Darrin Jackson 58 while Gary Jones stole 54 at Geneva.

The Davis trademark is very evident in the Chicago farm system.

In passing reference to some critizied trades in the off season, Davis said, "We are buying time. We didn't rebuild the Phils in a year. It's going to take three or four years to see if we've made a mistake on some of these kids we've drafted.

"They tell me Chicago hasn't had an every day regular come up through the farm system in 18 years. Scot Thompson is the closest thing to it. You can be sure it won't be that way in the future. If we have a winner here, it will be a product of the minor league club.

NBA strike inevitable

NEW YORK (AP) — The way Larry Fleisher was talking after the NBA and its players' union stopped talking, a strike on April 2 is a virtual certainty.

After a 20-minute meeting on Thursday, Fleisher, general counsel for the NBA Players Association, said negotiations on a new collective bargaining agreement have been a waste of time in recent weeks.

"It is clear to us that, based on today, we've been wasting our time the last few weeks," he said. "My feeling is there is no alternative. There will be a strike April 2. I will be shocked if it didn't occur.

"They backed off everything that had been agreed to. And their offer would effectively remove the players' right of free agency," Fleisher added following the quick meeting, at which, he said, a full committee of NBA owners appeared.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien claimed the club owners made a proposal that would guarantee the players 50 percent of revenues for the next four years. O'Brien said the union rejected it, demanding 53 percent, and walked out of the meeting, held at a secret site as were two previous negotiating sessions this week.

Bargaining for the league were O'Brien, nine of the 11 members of the NBA's labor relations committee and the league's negotiating team.

Fleisher said, "The NBA proposal today was a change in gross income from what was originally discussed and what the teams had to spend. They said $1.5 to $1.6 million a year (would be the salary cap). It would eliminate all free agency. The intent of the owners was apparent today. They want to take away free agency and we won't go for that."

Since a team would not be able to sign free agents if it exceeded the salary cap, Fleisher said the new proposal by the owners was "ludicrous."

"We have felt the gross would have to be big enough to allow players to enjoy a competitive free market," added Charlie Grantham, executive vice president of the union.

Phoenix Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo, chairman of an NBA special committee searching for ways to strengthen the league, said, "I think Larry Fleisher is trying to manipulate the media. The severity of the problem is there. Nobody is trying to break the union. All we're asking is that the union understand that we have problems. A strike would put everything in disarray and put more jobs in jeopardy."

Fleisher had expressed optimism with the talks until Thursday.

"They had exhibited good faith but today was the complete opposite," he said. "There was no intent to bargain today."

Mavs' guards beat Clippers

By The Associated Press

The Dallas Mavericks usually live or die with the performances of their frontcourt stars, Jay Vincent and Mark Aguirre. Against the San Diego Clippers, however, the Mavs relied on their improving backcourt.

The play of guards Rolando Blackman, Brad Davis and Kelvin Ransey paced the Mavericks to a 118-113 NBA decision Thursday night over the Clippers. Dallas, now 36-35 and with an outside shot at a playoff spot, got 20 points from Aguirre and 14 from Vincent, but the guards were the key.

Ransey sank a 20-foot jumper with 1:14 remaining to snap a 111-111 tie, then added two free throws. Blackman came off the bench to score 23 points and Davis added 18.

The big points belonged to Ransey, who had 13, eight in the final quarter.

"It seemed like the ball bounced my way tonight," said Ransey. "We had some fast breaks at the end that really helped us at the end.

"I've had an up-and-down season all year and game like this sure helps."

Dallas Coach Dick Motta concurred.

"We need to have wins like this if we are going to make the playoffs," said Motta, whose team stands seventh in the Western Conference but will need a late rush to catch sixth-place Portland or Seattle.

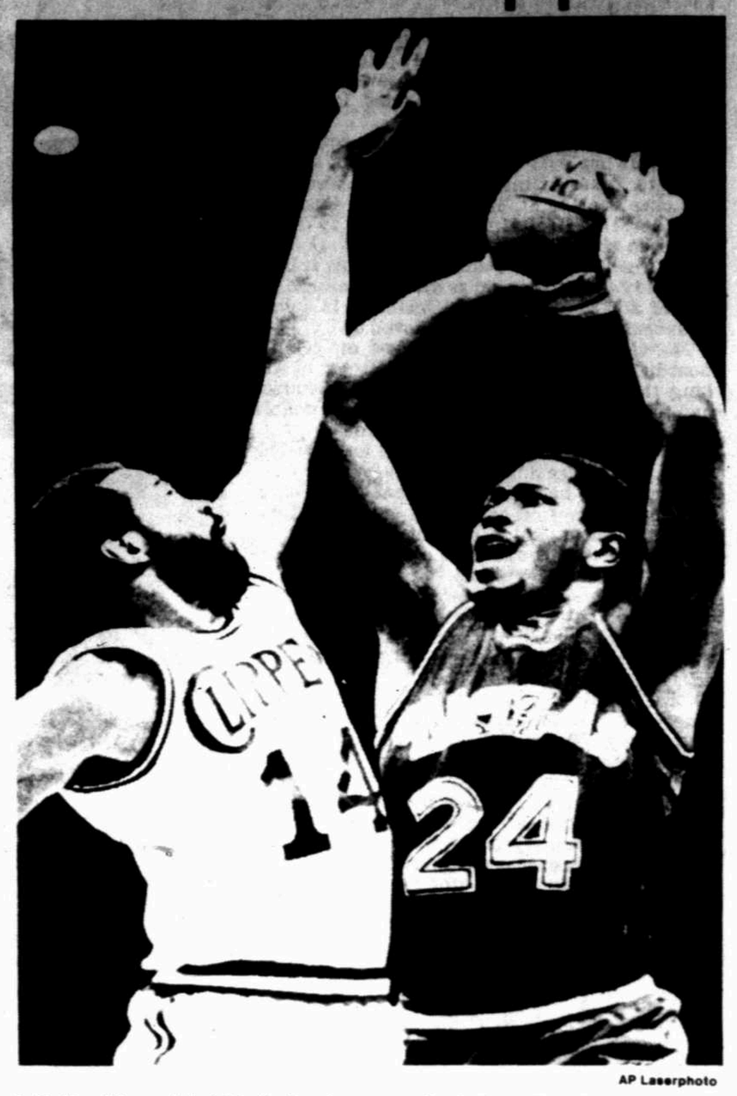

"We were hitting our shots tonight (they Mavs made 67 percent of their shots). For some reason, we had a lot of good shots. San Diego did a lot of switching on their defense and that allowed us to backdoor a lot."

Terry Cummings and Michael Brooks carried the load for the Clippers, finishing with 26 and 25 points respectively. Cummings also had a game-high 10 rebounds.

Suns 112, Kings 95

Phoenix won its sixth straight home game behind Walt Davis, who had 25 points, and Maurice Lucas, who contributed 21 points and 12 rebounds. Kansas City lost on the road for the fifth consecutive time even though Steve Johnson hit 13 shots in a row from the field.

"We've set a short-term goal and that's to win our remaining home games," said Davis, who leads the Suns with a 19.3-point average.

Dallas Mavericks' Mark Aguirre gets fouled by San Diego Clipper Lionel Hollins while taking a shot in their NBA contest.

Trail Blazers 104, Rockets 97

Jim Paxson scored 25 points and Calvin Natt added 21 for Portland.The Blazers, nursing a 48-43 halftime lead, outscored the Rockets 39-26 in the third period, with Natt and Paxson scoring 10 points each.

Elvin Hayes scored 20 points coming off the bench for Houston, which suffered it 11th loss in the last 12 games. The Rockets have the NBA's worst record at 12-57.

Bullets 102, Bulls 96

Don Collins came off the bench to score 31 points and Jeff Ruland had 27 points and 15 rebounds for Washington. Chicago rallied to within two points in the final minute but Ruland hit a 10-foot jumper with 35 seconds to go and fed Greg Ballard for a dunk with 17 seconds remaining to ice it.

No. 1 Houston puts 23-game win streak on line against Memphis St.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Coach Dana Kirk says the Houston team that his Memphis State Tigers meet in Friday night's semifinals of the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament would beat the Cougars' squad that won last event.

"By far they are a better ballclub," said Kirk, whose 17th-ranked Tigers face No. 1 Houston in the second game of a doubleheader. In the opener, No. 13 Villanova plays Iowa.

The Cougars own the nation's longest winning streak at 23 games and are top-seeded in the Midwest Regional. The only player missing from the team that reached the Final Four last year is guard Rob Williams.

"From the experience standpoint, they did lose the one good player," said Kirk. "But they've got so many players, it's not that noticeable. They're seven or eight players deep. And they're physical."

One obvious improvement over last year's Cougars is the play of 7-foot sophomore Akeem Olajuwon, a shot-blocking specialist who averaged 13 points and a team-leading 11 rebounds while learning the finer points of the game.

"He is a much better player," agreed Lewis, adding that the Nigerian native "is still learning and has a way to go, but he has made tremendous improvement."

The Cougars have several other talented players, including forward Clyde Drexler, forward Larry Micheaux and guard Michael Young. Young led the Cougars in scoring, averaging 17.6 points to Drexler's 16.6 and Micheaux' 13.9.

After dropping consecutive decisions to Syracuse and Virginia early in the season, the Cougars rolled unbeaten through the Southwest Conference regular season and postseason tournament and defeated Maryland 60-50 in their first NCAA tournament game.

"I don't know we are a better team from last year," said Lewis. "I think we are playing better together."

Memphis State, 23-7, finished in a tie for third in the Metro Conference and features one of the nation's top players in 6-10 Keith Lee, who averaged nearly 19 points and 11 rebounds. Lee is Kirk's best player, but not his only good one.

"We have five positions scoring in double figures," he said. "When people concentrate on one player, another gets free. We like to get people into that situation."

Iowa, 21-9, tied for fifth in the Big Ten, but Coach Lute Olson says the Hawkeyes are coming together at the right time.

Villanova, 23-9, tied for first in the Big East. Coach Rollie Massimino says he's not worried about the thousands of screaming Hawkeyes' fans who will pack Kemper Arena.

Aaron wants baseball commissioners' job

By The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Home run king Henry Aaron is campaigning to be major league baseball's commissioner. But he says he doesn't expect to get the job. Aaron, who is running the Atlanta Braves' minor league camp this spring, said Thursday he plans to write the 26 baseball club owners, asking that he be considered as a candidate to replace baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn...

Track

AUSTIN, Texas — Billy Olson, the only pole vaulter to clear 19 feet indoors or outdoors, will compete in the Texas Relays April 9. Last year, Olson set a Texas Relays and Memorial Stadium record of 18-3 in the pole vault. This year, he set a world indoor best of 19-0¼ in a meet at Toronto.

The Olympics

NEW DELHI, India — The demonstration tennis tournament at next year's Olympic Games in Los Angeles will be restricted to players under 20 and professionals will be allowed to play, because it is a demonstration sport only and Olympic medals will not be involved. Monique Berlioux, director of the IOC, said there will be men's and women's singles tournaments for 32 players each, with a limit of two players from one country in each event. Six teams will contest the other demonstration sport, baseball.

Now for the bad news. The Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee reported Thursday that, with 16 months to go until the 1984 Games, it still had not found a site for the shooting competition. The news did not please the Executive Board of the IOC, which had asked Los Angeles to finalize plans before the 86th session of the IOC here this week...

BANGKOK, Thailand — American Ray Arinno shot a six-under-par 66 Thursday and took the first-round lead in the Thailand Open Golf Championship...

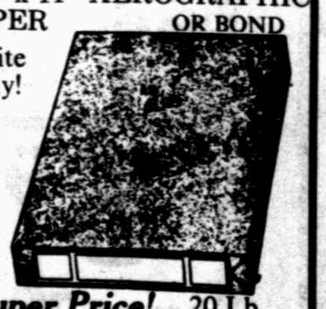

Hockey

TOKYO — The top contenders scored victories in the Group B World Ice Hockey Championship Thursday, as Japan beat Romania 6-2 and Poland downed Yugoslavia 12-2. In another game, Austria defeated Norway 3-2. Japan, with two victories and one tie, leads the eight-nation tournament with five points. Undefeated Poland, with two victories, shares second place with the United States with four points each. The Americans, who were idle Thursday, also have a 2-0 record.

Gustafson can't figure Longhorns

AUSTIN (AP) — No. 1-ranked Texas is 7-0 against baseball powers Cal-Fullerton, Oral Roberts and Arizona State, but several smaller Texas schools number the top-rated Longhorns among their victims.

In a roller-coaster season unlike any coach Cliff Gustafson has ever experienced, Texas has lost twice to Texas-Arlington and Texas Wesleyan, and once each to St. Mary's, Lubbock Christian, and, for the first time in history, to Texas Lutheran after 47 straight victories.

"It's really hard to evaluate what this team is all about," Gustafson said as his squad neared the end of a 11-day period that included 18 games. "Maybe the rankings are all screwed up."

The victories over Texas touched off celebrations by Longhorn opponents reminiscent of winning the College World Series, and Gustafson had this to say to his team after a recent doubleheader loss at home to Texas Wesleyan:

"You guys are making an awful lot of people happy, but you're not making me very happy."

After Texas had blanked Arizona State 6-0 for the Sun Devils' first shutout in 55 games, Texas second baseman Bill Bates said, "We get up for the tougher teams and have a tendency to slack up against the easier teams."

Texas backed up Bates' words in its next series, falling 3-0 to Texas Wesleyan for the Longhorns' first shutout loss in 130 games, then losing the second game 6-5. Texas had beaten Texas Wesleyan 23 straight times.

"They're tired," Gustafson said in a Tuesday interview. "We've played every day since a week ago Friday. When you're tired, you get sluggish, the bats get slow, the reactions are slow, and it really showed up yesterday (against Texas Wesleyan), plus we came off a pretty inspired performance against Arizona State."

"We may just fly home without a jet," said Texas Wesleyan coach Frank Fultz. "I'm sure Texas will be in Omaha (for the College World Series) before it's all over, but this has to be the biggest series I've ever been in. How big is it? I'll have to wait until we get back and talk to the president."

AP Laserphoto

Tradition certainly is on the side of Texas and Gustafson, the winningest active coach in college baseball with more than 750 victories. In his 15 previous seasons at Texas, the Longhorns gained the College World Series 10 times and won the national championship in 1975.

This year, however, Gustafson almost had to start from scratch as only two starters returned — catcher Jeff Hearon and centerfielder Mike Brumley, who switched to shortstop.

In hopes of getting an instant transfusion of batting power, Gustafson recruited seven junior college players, the most since he has been at Texas, and he observed "the majority of them have really struggled. We keep shuffling them in and out, hoping to get them untracked, and unfortunately they just haven't taken hold."

Only first baseman Jose Tolentino of Seminole and outfielder-pitcher Steve Labay of Angelina among the junior college recruits are starting.

Those on the bench include Jamie Doughty of Seminole JC, who set a national junior college record last year with 31 homeruns; Bud Ray of San Jacinto, who batted .439 with 21 homeruns; and Alan Brown, who hit 27 homeruns in two years at San Jacinto.

Texas' pitching staff, which includes preseason All-American Roger Clemens, is the team's strength. "When we put our best pitchers out there, like Clemens, (Calvin) Schiraldi and (Mike) Capel, we're pretty good," said Gustafson.

His biggest disappointment is Texas' hitting. Only infielder Bryan Burrows, who was batting .346 through 34 games, has been consistent.

"We thought we were going to be a good hitting team," said Gustafson. "I go back to the recruits who were such outstanding hitters in junior college, and you kind of expect them to be mature and move in and continue to progress, but unfortunately it looks like maybe their level was junior college."

Gustafson also wonders what has happened to the Longhorns' base stealing, a favorite tactic of Gustafson teams.

Brumley, for example, set a single-season team record with 43 steals last season and was thrown out only four times. This year, Gustafson said, Brumley was caught stealing on six of his first seven attempts.

Texas' pitching keys victory; Cubs lose

By The Associated Press

Since they start earlier, the pitchers generally are ahead of the hitters in spring training. This year, that's especially true of Texas' Rick Honeycutt and Minnesota's Jack O'Connor.

Honeycutt, who has allowed just two earned runs in 16⅔ innings, gave up just one hit to the New York Yankees in 5⅔ innings in the Rangers' 4-0 victory Thursday.

O'Connor won his fourth game without a loss this spring as the Twins outscored the Detroit Tigers 13-6 with the help of a grand slam homer by Gary Ward.

Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell and Len Barker of Cleveland, both tuning up for possible opening-day assignments, also made strong showings in Thursday's exhibition baseball action.

Caldwell went six innings, allowing only two hits, as the Brewers thrashed the San Francisco Giants 9-0. Overall, the Giants managed only four hits while the Brewers were banging out 17, including the sixth homer of the spring by Ben Oglivie, who is hitting .543 with 14 runs batted in.

Barker worked five innings for Cleveland, allowing only one run, and Julio Franco drove in four runs with two doubles and a single to lead the Indians to a 5-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

In other action, Marv Foley and Greg Walker each had three hits, including a homer, as the Chicago White Sox beat a Pittsburgh Pirates split squad 8-1. George Bell had a three-run homer and a pair of singles as the Toronto Blue Jays downed the Boston Red Sox 6-4.

Mike Marshall slugged his sixth homer of the spring for Los Angeles and Steve Sax drove home Cecil Espy in the fifth inning with the winning run in the Dodgers' 3-2 victory over Baltimore.

Dave Edler and Bud Bulling homered for Seattle in the Mariners' 4-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Wallace Johnson hit a home run on rookie reliever Kurt Kepshire's first pitch in the bottom of the ninth to give the Montreal Expos a 7-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

George Foster's two-run homer in the sixth inning, his third of the spring, powered the New York Mets to a 2-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. Mike Torrez allowed one run over the first four innings for the Mets before leaving with a pain in his right thigh. Neil Allen and Doug Sisk shut out the Reds over the last five innings.

Rain washed out games between the Kansas City Royals and a Pittsburgh split squad and Philadelphia-Houston.

Niekro loses opening starting role to Ryan

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Joe Niekro doesn't want it to sound like he's complaining, but he is unhappy that the Houston Astros have decided to go with strikeout artist Nolan Ryan in the season opener instead of with him.

The club announced three weeks ago that Niekro, a knuckleball specialist, would pitch the April 5 opener in the Astrodome against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

But General Manager Al Rosen gave the honor to Ryan after he realized that Ryan needed only 15 strikeouts to surpass the all-time career strikeout record of 3,508 by Walter Johnson.

By starting Ryan in the season opener, Ryan could have four days rest and pitch again during the season opening home stand and possibly set the record during the Astros' opening homestand.

If Ryan pitched the second game of the season, his turn would not come up again until the April 11-13 series at Los Angeles.

Niekro added, "Please don't make it sound like I'm complaining. I'm just hurt by the way it was handled. Never does any good to complain anyway. ... if you complain you just get in the doghouse. On the other hand, if you don't complain, you get ulcers."

"I'm disappointed, I can't hide that," Niekro said. "It's their decision, not mine. I just work here. But sure, it hurts. You'd think you'd get more respect."

Rosen sees the move as a public relations gesture to the long-suffering Astros fans.

"If you have a chance to break a record like Nolan does, something as monumental as this, you like to break it at home," Rosen said. "The Houston fans are deserving of that, don't you think?"

Niekro isn't unhappy with Ryan or Manager Bob Lillis.

Ryan said he sympathizes with Niekro. But he also wants the opening assignment.

Texas Rangers: Rader inherits another loser

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Doug Rader, for 10 years a major league player and for three years a minor league manager, has been assigned the task — in his own unique way — of rebuilding the Texas Rangers, who lost 98 games last year.

He would like to douse that part of his image that labels him a prankster, while retaining the zest to motivate his players.

As a two-time Gold Glove third baseman with the Houston Astros, Rader hit 20 or more home runs in three seasons. He also gained a reputation as a flake. For example, he once was said to have invited a player and his wife to dinner, then greeted them at the door in the nude.

But, as manager of the Hawaii Islanders, a San Diego farm club in the Pacific Coast League, he produced winning records all three years, including a mark of 73-71 in 1982.

"We gave him an absolutely terrible team, and he somehow managed to win more games than he lost," said Padres minor league administrator Tom Romenesko.

This year, Rader again has inherited a losing team from managers Don Zimmer and Darrell Johnson, who split time last year. Besides harping on the game's fundamentals, Rader has stressed motivation. He has held team meetings to stir passion in his players.

Sambito faces more surgery

COCOA, Fa. (AP) - Houston Astros relief pitcher Joe Sambito must undergo surgery for the third time since last July on his left elbow, but Astros General Manager Al Rosen says a doctor's report is encouraging.

Sambito, 31, a former National League All-Star performer, underwent surgery last July and again last Saturday to correct nerve and ligament damage.

The surgery will be performed by Dr. Frank Jobe in Los Angeles, and Rosen said he did not know when Sambito would be able to resume workouts.

"We are encouraged by the examination of Joe's left elbow," Rosen said Thursday. "However, a small amount of surgery to remove additional scar tissue is necessary and this has been scheduled for Friday April 1.

"The prognosis for a complete recovery remains the same but his rehabilitation is prolonged," he said.

Last Saturday's surgery was to remove scar tissue from the nerve area.

Steve Lundquist, from SMU, pockets another NCAA swimming title as he strokes his way to the 200-yard individual medley.

SMU's Lundquist seeks seventh NCAA title

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Senior Steve Lundquist of Southern Methodist hasn't won six individual NCAA swimming titles by being easily satisfied.

Lundquist, who hopes today to become the 10th swimmer in NCAA history to win seven titles, just missed setting an NCAA record in winning the 200-yard individual medley Thursday. He then helped the Mustangs set a meet and American record in the 400 medley relay to put his team in first place heading into today's second session of the NCAA meet.

The Mustangs were second to Stanford when Lundquist dived into the Indiana University Natatorium pool.

But, he put them in the lead for good as Mark Rhodenbaugh, Lundquist, Bob Patten and John Spaulding finished in 3 minutes, 12.63 seconds.

Lundquist, a 21-year-old from Jonesboro, Ga., was clocked at just over 52 seconds for his 100 yards.

Noting that he has had a quicker split, Lundquist said, "I'm pretty pleased with it."

The world record holder in the 100-meter breaststoke won the individual medley in 1:45.54 — his best ever in the event and a time that has been topped by only one other swimmer.

The Mustangs led the team scoring after the opening day with 69 points. Texas was next with 61.

Caps narrow in on home-ice advantage

By The Associated Press

It could have been a familiar scenario for Capitals Coach Bryan Murray, but this time Murray was sitting on the other side of the fence.

Murray, whose Capitals will be in the National Hockey League playoffs for the first time this spring, saw his club rally from a 3-1 hole with four third-period goals in 5:33 — two by Bobby Carpenter — to beat the struggling New Jersey Devils 5-3 Thursday night.

The victory moved Washington three points ahead of the New York Islanders in the battle for second place in the Patrick Division. The winner of that race will have the home-ice edge in the best-of-five opening round of the Stanley Cup playoffs next month.

Elsewhere on a night when all home teams won, it was Quebec 7, Los Angeles 3; Philadelphia 7, Toronto 4; Boston 7, St. Louis 6; Calgary 6, Chicago 5, and Montreal 5, Minnesota 3.

"They had a chance to win and the pressure got to them," said Murray. "They let up, made some mistakes and we capitalized on them. It reminded me of the way we did last year."

Last year, the Caps were blowing such games as they hung around the Patrick Division cellar. Now, the Devils and Pittsburgh are battling to stay out of the basement and the Capitals are one of the NHL's better teams in their ninth — and first winning — season.

"We're in a heck of a position now to finish in second place," said Murray. "I like our position."

"We had good control of the game when we were ahead 3-1," said Devils Coach Billy MacMillan. "But then we made three glaring defensive mistakes that were a direct result of three goals."

Nordiques 7, Kings 3

Quebec, returning home from an all-losing four-game road trip, handed Los Angeles a severe blow to its playoff chances as Peter Stastny collected two goals and two assists.

Flyers 7, Maple Leafs 4

Philadelphia now has 100 points this season, thanks to Ron Flockhart's two-goal, two-assist evening against former Flyer goaltender Rick St. Croix.

Bruins 7, Blues 6

Boston, which has the league's best defense, gave up more goals to St. Louis than it had in its previous four games. But Rick Middleton scored three times and set up another goal to pace the Bruins' offense. Bernie Federko scored twice for the Blues.

Flames 6, Black Hawks 5

Lanny McDonald had two goals and Kent Nilsson got the game-winner with the Flames shorthanded as Calgary moved two points ahead of Vancouver in the Smythe Division race for second place.

Canadiens 5, North Stars 3

Minnesota, which trails Norris leader Chicago by three points, didn't pick up any ground on Chicago. Montreal's Guy Carbonneau registered a pair of goals, including one into an empty net with 1:13 remaining to clinch the decision.

'Too Tall' arrested

DALLAS (AP) — Defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones of the Dallas Cowboys was arrested for driving while intoxicated and a traffic violation after a brief early morning chase with officers, a Dallas police spokesman said.

Jones, a 32-year-old All-Pro, posted a $200 bond and was released from jail at about 4:40 a.m. — 2½ hours after his arrest, said police spokesman Ed Spencer.

Spencer said Jones declined to take a breath test. He was booked into city jail on municipal charges of driving while intoxicated and failure to maintain a car in a single lane of traffic.

Jones is scheduled to appear before a municipal judge April 11 to respond to the charges, Spencer said.

Watt aide sees need for more drilling

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

An assistant secretray of the Department oof Interior said in Midland Thursday evening he believes that any time government changes, the actual transformation creates friction. oThe former New Mexico State agriculture teacher said Interior Secretary James Watt and his policies were on the right track. They owere just greeted coldly by the opress.

"We're into the energy business for the long-term," said land and water resources expert Garrey E. Carruthers in a press conference. Since 1981, Watt has lifted bans on hydrocarbon drilling for much United oStates-owned land.

Carruthers was in Midand to speak oto a joint meeting of the Permian Basin Chapter of International Association of Drilling Contractors and the Permian Basin Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute.

"More exploration and more leasing are needed, and that takes time," Carruthers said. He said Reagan's administration would like to lure private ocontractors into exploring many frontier areas for possible energy ofinds. Carruthers said that is othe only way accurate information oon what lies under some federal olands will ever be had, since the ogovernment can't afford to get it oany other way.

"Balanced land use and multiple-use oplans implemented under Watt, with Reagan's support, keep taxes down for all of us," he said.

"There are 80 million acres of wilderness land set aside, 'locked up,' and 23 million additional acres are under study for addition to this land total," he said. "Surely there must be a limit to what we can set aside as wilderness."

There is also a limit to how much land the government can lease out. "I think we're about at the limit of offshore and dry land available for drilling," he said. "Some of it is turned oback to us, and we put it back on the market quickly."

Carruthers emphasized Interior does onot allow drilling in parks or refuges under its control. But drilling has occurred on Louisiana refuge oland — with much success.

A company recently wanted to drill ofor oil in a large Houston park and got permission from the city.

As for federal lands, there just aren't many in Texas. "The government had to buy land in Texas," he said. "We lease some military base lands to oil and gas companies, but the military can be very hard to deal with. They always take precedence (over Interior's needs)."

From New Mexico, Carruthers has oan agricultural science background and understands land management.

"Some people believe that all available ofederal land should be wilderness," ohe said of environmental oactivists, "but we can't afford othat. Ranching, oil and gas, and oforestry uses help pay a share of othe United States' budget."

Even if Interior Secretary Watt wanted to abuse federal lands and destroy valuable wilderness, as some environment-watchers think, "The process ois difficult to mess up," Carruthers said.

"We protect federal land with a lengthy lease procedure involving federal, ostate, and local governments. oThe public participates in the oprocess at least five times before oit's done."

The easiest way for Watt to run Interior would be to just "lock everything oup," Carruthers said. "Rarely odo we satisfy everybody. But we are pleased and feel successful. We have half of the nation's 310,000,000 acres of public lands avaliable for oil and gas leasing."

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 237 taxable funds)		38	7.8	7.8

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 237 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 decreased $1.5 billion to $180.8 billion for the week ending March 23, 1983.

The funds' 7-day average yield declined slightly, to 7.76% from 7.77%. The funds' 30-day average yield held steady at 7.77%.

The funds' average maturity figure remained at 38 days for the second week in a row.

William E. Donoghue says, "Tax-free money funds have experienced asset increases in 11 of the past 12 weeks. This week, assets of the 39 tax-free money funds covered by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT increased $56.5 million to $16.5 billion. This compares with 26 tax-free money funds with $7.1 billion in assets one year ago. Although the 7-day average yield of taxable money funds declined slightly this week, the 7-day average yield of tax-free money funds increased from 4.37% to 4.42%--this translates into an 8.84% taxable equivalent yield for investors in a 50 percent tax bracket. This week's highest-yielding tax-free money fund reported a 5.2% tax-exempt yield, or a 10.4% taxable equivalent yield for investors in a 50 percent tax bracket."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date. Businessman helping out

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A wealthy Alaska contractor, who says all his money "comes from God anyway," has donated $10,000 to his hometown to help feed the jobless.

"I just love the people back there in Pennsylvania dearly, and I know they've been having a struggle," Jack Andrews, 41, said Thursday in a telphone interview from Fairbanks, Alaska.

His mother, Liz Kotun, a high school janitor and bus driver, presented the check Wednesday to a food bank operated by United Steelworkers Local 1211 in Aliquippa, about 25 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

"He always said if he's ever in the position, maybe he could help someone, somewhere. I'm definitely proud. Who wouldn't be?" she said.

Andrews said he simply wanted to help his family and friends back home. His younger brother, Bernie, was laid off from Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp.'s Aliquippa Works last summer.

One-third of the steelworkers in Aliquippa, a mill town along the Ohio River, are laid off.

Andrews describes himself as a millionaire, but says he earned it the hard way.

"I've always worked hard with my hands and I've always had more than one job," he said. "The money that I receive in this lifetime all comes from God anyway and the amount doesn't matter. I just want to do what's right."

"It's fantastic that an individual would do this. It will be quite a bit of help," said Bill Mencanin, a spokesman for the union local.

Local officials began deducting up to $20 from steelworkers' paychecks last July to help their furloughed colleagues, raising additional money through dances and sales.

So far, the food bank has raised $190,000, most of it used for $25 grocery certificates distributed twice a month to unemployed steelworkers whose benefits have expired, Mencanin said.

"He (Andrews) has a feeling for these people," said Mencanin, adding that the local was astounded by the $10,000 gift, the largest individual contribution to date.

In nearby Midland, also hard hit by mill closings, a union food bank has received $13,000 during the past seven months from a mysterious benefactor known only as Mrs. Calabash. The latest donation, $2,000 in cash, arrived as a St. Patrick's Day gift.

Andrews, who has five children ranging in age from 1 to 20, settled in Fairbanks and established Hub City Construction Co. eight years ago.

Recession finally hits J.D.

LYNCHBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Jack Daniel's whiskey distillery will idle 53 workers, the first time in its 117-year history that the company has laid off permanent employees, a company spokesman said.

The spokesman, a Jack Daniel's executive in Nashville, asked not to be identified. He said the layoffs scheduled April 22 represented less than 8 percent of Jack Daniel's Lynchburg force and about 5 percent of its employees worldwide.

"From 1978 to 1982, the number of employees at the distillery has increased 76 percent — from 305 employees to 538," the company official said Thursday. "This is a relatively small layoff but it is the first time permanent employees have been laid off."

The spokesman said sales increased 4.3 percent from 1981 to 1982, below projections of a 12 percent to 14 percent growth rate.

"We have to make projections four years in advance because of the whiskey's maturing time," he said. "We didn't figure on a recession as deep as it was or that it would affect us as it did."

Layoffs will be made on the basis of seniority, he said.

"In Moore County, with the second smallest population of any county in the state, and Jack Daniel's being its only employer of any size, even a relatively small layoff will be painful for the local economy," the spokesman said.

"And who has to go and who gets to stay will leave some residual bitterness among local citizens."

Machine tool decision closer

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The U.S. government is moving closer to a decision on a controversial request from a major machine tool manufacturer for trade relief against Japanese imports, sources in both Japan and the United States have told the Los Angeles Times.

Such a move could lead the Japanese government to propose voluntary quotas on its machine tool exports similar to the current limits on automobile exports.

The Reagan administration has spent nearly a year debating how to respond to a petition from Houdaille Industries Inc., a Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based company, which has asked the White House to deny tax credits on the purchase of Japanese machine tools because of indications that Japan secretly subsidized a machine-tool cartel to help its industry overwhelm international markets.

The bitter debate within the administration, which is likely to reach a head within the next few weeks, provides a unique glimpse into the struggles facing administration officials when their free trade principles collide with evidence that a vital U.S. industry is suffering because of inroads into the American market from foreign companies that have benefited from government industrial targeting.

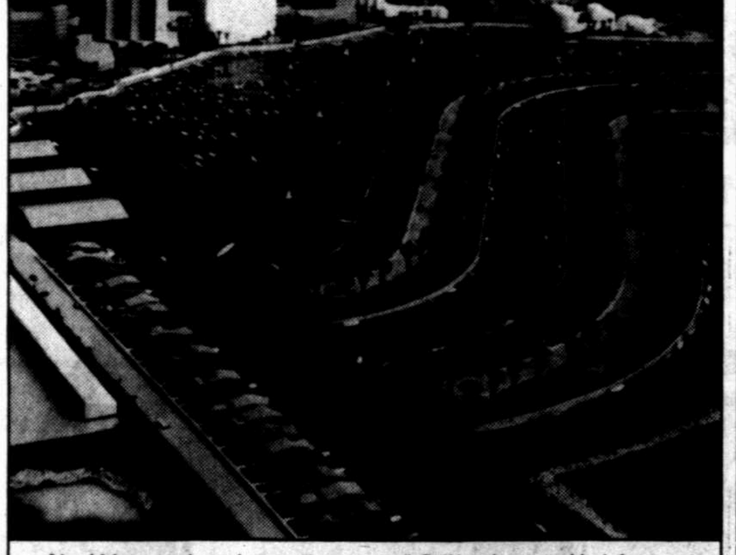

The Japanese government has denied the allegations that its industrial policy toward the machine tool industry constitutes an unfair trade practice but it has already moved informally to limit Japanese exports to the United States and has ratified an industry decision to increase export floor prices by 10 percent this year.

Now it appears likely that Japan will quietly propose so-called "voluntary quotas" on exports of advanced machine tools to the United States, government and industry sources say, in return for an agreement by the U.S. government not to impose direct restrictions on Japanese equipment.

The Houdaille petition represents the first detailed evidence designed to demonstrate how Japan's industrial policy benefits a specific industry. It calls on the president to deny the 10 percent investment tax credit to U.S. companies that buy highly sophisticated computer-controlled machine tools that perform elaborate metal-cutting work.

Soviet pipeline economic turkey

By STERLING NOEL
Hearst Feature Service

It now appears that the great Siberian pipeline which will bring Soviet natural gas to Europe is going to turn out to be the economic turkey of all time.

The reason: world oil prices are going down, but the way the Soviets have rigged their contracts with European nations, the price of Siberian gas will only go up.

The technicalities involved in this do not make for absorbing reading, but this is how the scam works, as described by the Wall Street Journal:

The gas contracts for West Germany, France, Italy and the rest of the buyers have two prices – a base price and a floor price. The base price is around $4.70 per million BTUs, which is reasonable enough. But it goes up or down according to an index on oil prices, and applies only so long as the base price is above the floor price.

What happens, then, when the base price goes below the floor price, as is happening right now with OPEC and market price cuts? In that event, only the floor price prevails.

The catch here is that the floor price, which was intended to give the Russians a minimum return on their investment, has assumed an increase in the price of oil of 3 percent a year, which will now produce a floor price of $5.70 per million BTUs in 1981 dollars by the end of the decade. So, as the OPEC benchmark of $34 a barrel deteriorates (now at $29 a barrel), the price for Siberian gas goes well above the world energy price.

Furthermore, the contracts include a take-or-pay clause for 80 percent of the gas volume, which means that the European buyers have guaranteed to pay 80 percent of the floor prices no matter what happens to energy prices and no matter how high the floor price.

The Europeans couldn't have gotten a worse deal for Siberian gas if the Russians had set out deliberately to cheat them. And, come to think of it, who says they didn't?

All of this should provide some satisfaction to the Reagan administration and many other independent thinkers who assailed the pipeline deal as a bad bargain from the outset.

At the nub of this opposition were two factors that still apply. One was that the Europeans were placing themselves under potential Soviet political control in the event of any future crises. If they would seek to oppose the Russians in any way deemed to be harmful, then their gas supplies could be cut off.

The second significant factor that surfaced early in the pipeline deal was the insistent doubt that a gas-carrying pipeline of 3,500 miles could possibly be economically feasible. Much of this thinking was based upon the determination after years of study and analyses that it was not economic to pipe gas from the Prudhoe Bay field in Alaska to Chicago.

Low-tar cigarettes don't lessen risk

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father and one of my brothers were smokers until they got peptic ulcers, and then they quit. I smoke but (knock wood) don't have an ulcer. Can this be because I smoke one of those low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes? — Jaimey, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Jaimey: I receive a number of letters from people who want to know if they can smoke or drink or eat too much and still keep from getting sick. I would like to say yes but, if I did, I would simply be taking part in the same kind of deception many of these people practice on themselves.

The only way to avoid the risks associated with cigarette smoking is to stop smokng cigarettes. In regard to your particular question, the results of a study by Dr. Diana B. Petitti, of the Kaiser-Permanente Medical Care Program, indicate that people who smoke low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes are just as likely to develop peptic ulcer disease as are those who smoke regular cigarettes. Moreover, the risk increases as the number of cigarettes smoked increases.

If, like your father and brother, you would stop smoking if you had a peptic ulcer, wouldn't it make sense to stop smoking now?

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is there any value to having a woman who is in labor walk around? A friend of mind from college days called me from out of town after having had a baby and said that was what she was permitted to do. Is this something new? — Janet, Rockville, Md.

Dear Janet: A report from the Welsh National School of Medicine indicates that a person who is mobile during the early stages of labor may be less anxious; however, there is no evidence that moving around does any physical good.

Dr. John P. Calvert reported these findings on the basis of a study of 100 women. Those who were having their first baby and who chose to move around during the early stages of labor did report more pain; however, they were less anxious than the women who chose to remain in bed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I was in my teens, I took tetracycline because I had acne. Now I hear that it is also used to treat some venereal disease. Is there anything to this? — Ms. K.G., Clearwater, Fla.

Dear Ms. G.: Tetracycline is commonly recommended and has been shown to be effective in the treatment of chlamydial infection in both men and women. As you may have been told when you took the drug for acne, tetracycline is contraindicated for pregnant women.

For Parker, Montpelier, Vt.: A number of risk factors have been identified that are associated with the death of infants in general, not specifically with the sudden infant death syndrome. They include poverty, maternal smoking or use of drugs, and poor prenatal care. A mother's illness during the pregnancy and a history of a previous miscarriage are other factors associated with infant deaths.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has a son with cerebral palsy, but she says the doctor said that he would probably outgrow it as he became older. Is the doctor just trying to make her feel good, or is there really something to what he says? — Marion, Terre Haute, Ind.

Dear Marion: It is possible for motor abnormalities, such as those evident in young children with cerebral palsy, to improve or disappear entirely as the child grows older. Furthermore, this can happen with or without treatment. The more mild the condition, of course, the better the chances that the symptoms will eventually resolve.

Dear Dr. Solomon: In watching various sporting events on television, I notice that the athletes often have their ankles taped. Is this to treat an injury they have already had, or is it to prevent an injury from happening? — Greg, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Greg: Taping is used both to protect and to prevent an injury, but it is no substitute for accurate diagnosis and treatment. If the athlete has already suffered an injury, the taping is designed to provide support and to allow use of the joint while at the same time limiting its motion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine decided to have an abortion when the doctor told her that the baby had some very serious problems. Although she says she would do the same thing all over again, she has been very depressed lately. Would you say that this is normal or that she should get some professional help? — Margie, Tucson, Ariz.

Dear Margie: The fact that a person's reaction to an event may be common does not necessarily mean that the reaction is normal from a medical or psychiatric standpoint. Many women do feel a deep sense of loss when they choose to have an abortion, no matter how necessary they may feel it is and no matter how correct they feel their decision was. Apparently your friend did not use abortion as a birth control technique but as a means of preventing the birth of a malformed child.

However, the fact that many women — and men, too, for that matter — would grieve over the loss of a child they had been looking forward to may or may not be normal; it would depend in large measure on how long their grief lasted, its intensity, and their ability to continue to function despite their sense of loss.

Background music becoming inescapable

By JOHN FARINA
Copley News Service

You may think of background music as a sneaky way to get more work out of you, or to make you spend more money in the marketplace.

Or you may just enjoy listening to it, even if it isn't necessarily the music of your choice.

"Most people love it," said Ken Kanine of Music Innovations, a background music supplier. "But there are some who hate it."

Whether you like it or you think it's bland, annoying and repetitious, background music is increasingly inescapable in our society.

Millions of Americans hear it every day.

ENTERTAINMENT

Dentists deliver it to patients via headphones, to take their minds off the agony of drilling. Supermarkets use it to keep customers in a good frame of mind — and in the store longer.

Some factory surveys show it reduces boredom and boosts productivity.

Background music is even piped into the White House.

Muzak is the name most people associate with background music, because much of it is provided by Muzak Systems, a leader in the industry. But a growing number of competitors are entering the field. While Muzak calls it muzak, the generic term is non-entertainment, or functional, music.

Functional music is designed to charm listeners while permitting them to keep their minds on the task at hand.

Entertainment music commands single-minded attention and so does not qualify as scientifically programmed background music.

"It isn't a good idea to be be operating a punch press while listening to Sammy Davis Jr. belt out a vigorous rendition of "Chicago (My Kind of Town)," said James Boggins of Muzak Systems.

The non-vocal, softer melodies of "Gimme a Little Kiss" or "An Everlasting Love" played by a string orchestra are examples of functional music.

To make sure the music fits the mood, programmers selectively choose the size of the orchestra and the musical instruments, as well as the melody and the beat per minute.

Release of FBI files reveals John, Yoko not alone in 1970s

Hearst Feature Service

John Lennon and Yoko Ono "knew they weren't alone" during the peak of their anti-war activities in the early 1970s, but they never suspected the FBI of keeping extensive files on their political and personal lives, according to a longtime family friend.

"Neither John nor Yoko could have realized the volume or intensity or magnitude of the files kept by the FBI," said Elliot Mintz, a confidant of Lennon who maintains close contact with the former Beatle's widow.

The American Civil Liberties Union has filed suit on behalf of history professor Jon Wiener to force the U.S. government to release all its files on Lennon, charging documents have been concealed that may reveal a "campaign of dirty tricks" against the murdered musician.

The suit, filed in federal court in Los Angeles, claims the Lennon files are improperly being withheld from the public by the Reagan administration in the interest of "national defense."

It names as defendants the FBI's Washington office, as well as bureaus in Los Angeles, New York and Detroit. The government has 60 days to respond to the suit which will be heard before U.S. District Court Judge Robert Takasugi.

Documents already obtained by Wiener under the Freedom of Information Act, reveal an attempt by the FBI, with the support of the Nixon administration, to deport Lennon during the 1972 presidential election, using a plan to have him arrested on drug charges before the Republican convention in Miami.

Wiener believes the secret documents probably provide evidence of "further harassment, dirty tricks, illegal wiretaps and burglaries." Two agents working on the Lennon file later were convicted of illegal spying activities against the Weathermen, a radical political group, said Wiener.

ACLU attorney Mark Rosenbaum claims the 26 pounds of documents obtained by Wiener, who's writing a book on Lennon and the 1960s, represent only about one-third of the FBI files. Previously released documents "have been heavily edited," to avoid further political embarrassment to the Nixon White House, he added.

The attempt to exempt the documents from the Freedom of Information Act "exemplifies the Reagan administration's attempt to dismantle that act," according to ACLU spokeswoman Linda Valentino.

In a phone interview, Mintz said Ono won't get involved with the fight to obtain the complete FBI files. Recalling a recent conversation with Ono, Mintz said:

"The basic feeling I get is that she is more involved with looking into the future than remembering the past...Her primary responsibility now is to raise her son, Sean, and her artistic pursuits."

Both Lennon and Ono were aware of spying activities against them, "but they never became paranoid," he noted.

Mintz said he was particularly disturbed by FBI documents suggesting Lennon and Ono might be involved in violent political activity at the GOP convention.

"They never mentioned to me any plan to go to Miami," Mintz said. "It seemed to reflect poor intelligence sources on the part of the bureau."

Concert keeps brass, chorale on the move

Talent, planning and marvelous acoustics equal the right mix for a successful concert.

St. Ann's Catholic Church was packed Sunday for just such an offering. Chorale and brass literally surrounded the audience with "The Glory of Venice" during the eighth subscription concert in the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's season. The chorale and symphony brass section were directed by Dr. Stanley Engebretson.

It was a most moving performance, one which left its audience on a high.

To stage this concert required some unique planning. Remember the game of musical chairs? You must move constantly and be in the right place at the right time or you're out of the game.

No one was removing chairs Sunday, but it took constant movement to keep performers in the correct postions. The concert was performed by a split choir and divided brass section, which moved between selections presented prior to intermission.

During its opening number, Randall Thompson's "Pueri Hebraeorum," the male singers and part of the brass players performed from the balcony. Then in the third selection, Giovanni Croce's "Gaudeamus Omnes in Domino," the choir was split again, with male and female singers performing from the balcony. During the next number, Jacob Gallus' "Cantate Domino," the brass players moved to the sides of the church, with the choir still split between the main platform in front and the balcony.

In addition, the brass section aptly performed two outstanding numbers — Giovanni Gabrieli's Canzon Duo Decimi Toni a 10, No.4 and his Canzon a 12. Both were lovely.

It's easy to see that the performers had an active day, but the effect achieved made the time and effort necessary in staging a concert of this sort worthwhile.

This season represents Engebretson's fourth as chorale director. Throughout his tenure the organization has grown in size and quality and one did wonder why his name was not listed on the credits page where Dr. Thomas Hohstadt's name appears when he is conducting. Hohstadt is the symphony's conductor and the musical director for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

Four competent solos were delivered by Lisa Harwell, sporano; Scott Hammond and Joseph Dawes, tenor; and David Morrow, bass.

The ninth and last subscription concert of the organization's season will be held May 9 and 10 when the full symphony and chorale perform Verdi's "Requiem."

'Thorn Birds' blows away 'Winds of War'

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — Give Americans a love story, and they'll line up to watch it. Make that love nearly impossible to achieve, or even forbidden, and they'll beat the door down.

The networks sell soap in the afternoon on that premise, and ABC is counting on "The Thorn Birds," a 10-hour miniseries that runs for four consective nights starting Sunday, to work as well.

It should — and for the right reasons, too. "The Thorn Birds," Colleen McCullough's romantic novel that sold 10 million copies in the United States, is everything that "The Winds of War" wasn't. It's an intoxicating story that springs from passionate people and their relationships — not from contrived historical encounters pumping up lifeless characters.

David Wolper and Stan Margulies, who broke television ground with "Roots," produced the $21 million "Thorn Birds." While it doesn't have any of the sociologocal significance of "Roots," "The Thorn Birds" is entrancing.

Thankfully, Miss McCullough did not write her own screenplay, as Herman Wouk did on "Winds of War." While Wouk's words were stilted and long-winded on the screen, the dialogue in Carmen Culver's teleplay fits nicely.

The TV story, except for some minor condensation, also is exceptionally faithful to the book.

The core of the book and miniseries is the forbidden fruit, an overwhelming — but mostly unfulfilled — love over three decades between a handsome priest and a beautiful woman. Father Ralph de Bricassart (played by Mr. Miniseries himself, Richard Chamberlain) must choose between God and Rachel Ward, as the gorgeous Meggie Cleary.

This isn't just a choice between chastity and passion. Father Ralph's anguish and guilt are intensified by ego. He has a burning desire to rise in the Catholic hierarchy. Ambition, more than anything else, is his mortal sin.

The series is running during Holy Week and the scheduling has prompted a protest from the United States Catholic Conference.

In the middle of Sunday night's episode, the legend of the thorn birds is explained, establishing an aura of ill-fated destiny that afflicts the female characters from generation to generation.

The thorn bird has no song until it impales itself on a thorn tree. Then it sings magestically. "It pays its life for just one song," says Ralph. "But the whole world stills to listen, and God in his heaven smiles."

"What does it mean, Father?" young Meggie asks the priest.

"That the best is brought only at the cost of great pain."

Later, in one of the miniseries' most moving scenes, Meggie thinks she is dying when she's actually menstruating for the first time. It's Ralph who explains what's happening, and, in Chamberlain's gentle words and soothing eyes, you can almost see the future.

"The Thorn Birds" follows an Australian family, the Clearys, through three generations covering 40 years.

Paddy Cleary (Richard Kiley), his wife (Jean Simmons) and their children are brought to Australia in 1920 by his sister, a rich widow named Mary Carson who needs help running her sheep ranch, Drogheda. Barbara Stanwyck is deliciously evil as the old bat who lusts after Father Ralph.

What Mary can't have, she wants no other woman to enjoy. At her death (watch for the corpse to keep breathing) the will she leaves makes it more difficult for what Mary believes is the inevitable attraction between Ralph and her niece, Meggie.

Chamberlain, who starred in "Shogun" and "Centennial," gives another intense performance. He reportedly had some frustrating moments with the inexperienced Miss Ward. But this doesn't show on the screen. Miss Ward is enchanting and gets better as she ages.

Austin-based country entertainer Allen Damron will perform at Midland's El Centro Restaurant and Bar, 215 W. Wall Ave., today and Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight. There is no cover charge. Damron, whose most recent album is "Allen Damron-Country," plays country, folk and a little gospel during live performances.

British TV producer has his roots in theater

NEW YORK (AP) — It's said that British television has its roots in the theater, and Shaun Sutton is living, working proof.

"I did my first Shakespeare in 1926, when I was 6 years old," he says. "It was a walk-on in 'Julius Caesar.' I worked on a new version of 'Cymbeline' written by George Bernard Shaw, in '37, and did 'Macbeth' before the war. Those were stage-manager jobs, you see."

Sutton is still doing Shakespeare, but for television, not the stage. He's at work now on the seventh of 14 productions he will supervise for "The Shakespeare Plays," the joint British Broadcasting Corp.-Time-Life Television series.

Sutton is executive producer of the last group of plays in the six-year cycle that eventually will encompass all 37 of Shakespeare's dramatic works. Rehearsal began recently in London on "Coriolanus," with Alan Howard from the recent Broadway production of "Good," and Irene Worth, as the leading players.

Three plays produced by Sutton, the "Henry VI" trilogy, and a fourth in which he was directly involved, "Richard III," will be broadcast on public TV over six consecutive Sundays starting March 27, and on Monday, May 2.

Sutton, who took a seven-week job in television in 1952 to direct an adaptation of "Huckleberry Finn" and has been there ever since, was behind a desk at the BBC when, he recalls, "I was suddenly asked to do the Shakespeare.

"After being an administrator for nearly 20 years, it was like being made legitimate again, being back in the studio," he says.

Kevin Kline rising male star on Hollywood film horizon

By CAROL OLTEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It's no secret that there's a shortage of charismatic male stars in Hollywood.

Actors like Robert Redford, Al Pacino, Robert De Niro and Dustin Hoffman — likely candidates for romantic leads in the past — are all middle-aged. Matt Dillon, an up-and-comer for the '80s, is still a little wet behind the ears. John Travolta, who beamed brightly for a short time in the '70s, appears all washed up. William Hurt is a possibility, but the field clearly needs reserves.

Enter Kevin Kline.

Kevin who?

At 35, Kline fits the image of Mr. Tall, Dark and Handsome. Somebody already has showed the panache to call him "the new John Barrymore." Moreover, he can act, having spent more than a dozen years in the business, first as a student at the Juilliard Drama Center, then as a founding member of John Houseman's Acting Company and, finally, as a leading stage actor and winner of Tony Awards for "On the Twentieth Century" and "The Pirates of Penzance."

Kline is just now starting to star in movies and, if present performances are any indication of screen talent, more film work is sure to follow. He started at the top as Nathan Landau, Meryl Streep's mad, but charming, lover in "Sophie's Choice."

In February he popped into movie theaters and onto nationwide cable television in the film version of "Pirates of Penzance," re-creating his highly praised role of the swashbuckling Pirate King. Shortly thereafter, he will be seen in "The Big Chill," a contemporary love story directed by Lawrence Kasdan who received kudos as the screenwriter for "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and director of "Body Heat."

Kline had just finished location shooting in South Carolina on "Big Chill" and was back in New York when we talked recently. With characteristic reserve, he winced at the notion of becoming a celluloid Prince Charming.

American Acropolis on the Hudson in bad shape

NEW YORK (AP) — Audubon Terrace started out as an American Acropolis on the Hudson. Without moving an inch, it has wound up on a trash-strewn stretch of Broadway, across from a gas station, in the midst of tenements and bodegas.

Audubon Terrace did not change. In 1983, as in 1923, its elegant classical temples, lined up along a brick courtyard, house some of the nation's most learned societies and finest art collections.

But the city changed, and today this Beaux Arts grouping falters in a shabby corner of upper Manhattan where it seems, at first glance, like a classical mirage.

The American Geographic Society has moved out and the Museum of the American Indian is ready to follow. The terrace's other institutions cry for more visitors and attention, but attract neither.

Yet Audubon Terrace's assets would make it the cultural center of most cities. They include:

—The Hispanic Society, with the most comprehensive collection of Spanish and Portuguese art outside Iberia, including paintings by Goya, Velazquez and El Greco.

—The Indian museum, which boasts the world's greatest collection of American Indian art and artifacts, ranging from shrunken human bodies to two-story totem poles.

When the terrace was dedicated in 1908, its Washington Heights neighborhood was half-rural. Everyone assumed the center of New York would continue to move north, toward the new arts complex.

But the central city grew up, not out. Washington Heights rose, too, but with apartment buildings that cut off the river view. After World War II residents fled to more spacious precincts, and poor blacks and Hispanics took their place. Drugs came, too, and the crime rate soared.

Ever since, the area's reputation has kept people away.

"German tourists come here, but East Siders are afraid of being mugged," says Nancy Henry, the Indian museum's publicist.

Ignorance keeps others away. If it didn't get bad press, Audubon Terrace would get no press at all. The occasional burglary is reported, but the museums have trouble getting listed alongside the more accessible midtown institutions.

So Audubon Terrace remains a cultural secret, even though it offers one of the city's more interesting architectural experiences, even though admission charges are low or non-existent, even though its neighborhood is no more dangerous than most others in New York.

This anonymity dates back to an era when art was more gentleman's hobby than business or religion. Archer M. Huntington built the Hispanic museum to house his private art collection. His nephew designed most of the terrace buildings, and his wife's sculpture stands in the courtyard.

Huntington left the society with a charter that barred it from moving — and from borrowing art or lending pieces from his collection.

"I have six El Greco's," says Priscilla Muller, gesturing to paintings on the wall in the museum's arcaded gallery, "but I can't loan them." This prevents her from staging large exhibitions to attract new visitors, because such shows are based on art exchanges.

Woman lobbies full-time for poor

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — At an age when most people have retired, Emma Gunterman patrols the halls of the California Capitol, a full-time lobbyist for the poor.

And the 67-year-old Mrs. Gunterman is angry. Complaining about cuts in government aid, she says, "I am outraged at certain things they are doing."

To Emma — everyone uses her first name, including Gov. George Deukmejian — the cuts lead to higher costs down the road and leave the poor deeper in poverty.

"I don't think that all low-income people are angels," she says. "I think they have the same percentage of undesirables as people with money. The fact is that the people who are really in need are usually in that position basically through bad luck, and they need help."

A former teacher and door-to-door saleswoman, Emma Gunterman is "an institution, almost" in the Capitol, says a colleague.

"SHE'S A remarkable lady," says Ralph Abascal, general counsel for California Rural Legal Assistance, a non-profit law firm that represents the poor. Emma lobbies for the CRLA Foundation.

"I guess one of the things that makes her very effective is that she is very tenacious," Abascal says. "It's a quality that 95 percent of the time you marvel at and applaud and 5 percent of the time can be very aggravating because it's turned toward you.

"She is unrelenting. She continues hounding until you say, 'Please, Emma, leave me alone. I'll vote for (your) bill.' "

Sen. Nicholas Petris, D-Oakland, calls Mrs. Gunterman "a heroine in my book, a woman who fights very hard for the poor of this state. She is the best informed on issues relating to the poor of anybody."

Mrs. Gunterman, born in the Netherlands, came to the United States after high school. She studied Greek and math at Smith College and taught for two years in New York City. Later, she sold household goods door to door in Los Angeles.

SHE GOT her first taste of legislative work 25 years ago when she organized a summer school at a farm labor camp and found she needed to set up a child care program as well — older children could not attend class unless someone took care of their younger siblings while parents worked in the fields.

"In those days there was not one publicly funded child-care program in the State of California, so I worked on legislation to make it possible," she says.

Her husband, Joe, now retired, was a lobbyist for the Friends Committee on Legislation, a Quaker group, for 17 years. Emma worked as a volunteer until she became a paid lobbyist 10 years ago.

She got to know Deukmejian when he was a state senator carrying a pension-reform bill backed by the National Senior Citizens Law Center, for which she was a lobbyist.

"My experience was that he was an intelligent, caring person," she says. But now, she adds, "I am flabbergasted by some of his (budget) proposals. They don't make sense and they don't seem humane."

DEUKMEJIAN'S proposed 1983-84 state budget would deny a cost-of-living increase for a second year to the 1.5 million recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

"These people last year did not get a penny cost of living," she says. "It's true the cost of living did not go up that high...but they have had two years of rising costs.

"What most people don't understand is that if there is anybody who hates welfare, it's the people on welfare. They know it's a lousy system. They hate being on it."

Most recipients, she says, get off the program as soon as they can.

"Whether it's a person who has been in a car accident, whether it's a kid, whether it's an older woman who has never worked and is left without money, whether it's a worker who is underpaid or a worker that's laid off, it seems to me in our society these people should get a minimum they can really live on," Mrs. Gunterman says.

That's not what they are getting, she asserts.

AFDC PAYMENTS, the state's largest welfare program, are among the highest in the nation, but they still leave recipients below the poverty level, she says.

The federal poverty line for a family of four is an income of $9,860. A family of four on AFDC gets $7,212, plus up to $1,584 in food stamps.

But the typical AFDC family, a mother with two children, gets $506 a month plus $72 to $107 in food stamps, depending on how much they pay in rent, for a top yearly total of $7,356.

"So at the highest, they have $613 (a month) for a family of three," she says. "I have never yet seen anything left over for clothing, never seen anything for books, recreation or the refrigerator breaking down."

For other welfare recipients, the situation is more grim, she says.

"There is one group that I feel worse about than any other. That is the group of people who are not lucky enough to be 65, not lucky enough to be disabled...and who do not have kids under 18.

"THOSE ARE the general assistance people. Typically, they are the older women, the people who have run out of unemployment insurance."

For them, monthly grants range from $100 to $248.

"That's the group I want to go on a crusade for," Mrs. Gunterman says.

Mrs. Gunterman says her efforts are often an uneven battle against special interests that contribute heavily to election campaigns.

"The influence of money on bills — special interest money — has just gotten worse," she says.

Daughters follow in mother's steps

VICI, Okla. (AP) — Pearl McAlary set the pattern when she was a young girl by becoming Vici Rodeo Queen and her three daughters — known as the McAlary sisters — followed in her footsteps by winning the hometown honors and many others.

The McAlary sisters, who grew up in this small northwestern Oklahoma town, competed in rodeos and Appaloosa shows from New York to Arizona during their contest days. And, most times, they were in the winner's circle at the finish of the event.

But, in addition to the awards, the sisters also picked up a lot of memories. The laughter, the work and the fun, the winning and losing, have tangled together in their past.

The sisters, Judy Donnelly, 34, Billie Williams, 32, and Sandy Elliott, 27, are grown up now and married, but the memories of their many accomplishments remain vivid, they say.

The sisters reflected on their unique past while at their parents' house in Vici recently.

There were fond memories for "Miss Redrock," an Appaloosa mare that carried all three women through a lot of rodeo contests.

"Miss Redrock was used to winning by the time I started entering contests," Sandy said. "When the winner was announced, she would try to step forward. It was so embarrassing. I was trying to hold her back."

Winning was not unusual for Miss Redrock or the three women.

Sandy won the 1973 National Champion Break-away Roper in the High School Rodeo Association; Billie won the Oklahoma High School All Around Cowgirl title in 1967 and 1968; and Judy was the 1966 Oklahoma High School Rodeo Queen and the first woman to win the cutting contest at the National Appaloosa show, the same year in New York.

And each of the daughters won Oklahoma Appaloosa Queen title — Judy in 1966, Billie in 1968 and Sandy in 1975.

Riding and showing horses became second nature to the young girls from Vici and they led a few quarter horses in the ring for Monte Reger, a well known quarter horse breeder from Woodward.

"They're good and they could ride anything," he said. It's kind of bred in 'em. There ain't nothing they can't do."

The McAlary girls soon learned, however, that the rodeo trail was paved with sweat and dedication.

"It took a lot of hours out in the arena," Billie said. "For us, it was a job. We did it full time."

An hour on a horse, every day, was only a part of that job.

Tax on tips begets tips on tax

Evelyn Duncan, left, and Kay Scott are among about 60 people from the food and beverage industry attending a tax seminar sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service Thursday morning in Midland Center. Ross Tomlinson, right, an IRS agent, explains a new government regulation designed to boost reporting of food and beverage industry workers' tip income.

IRS explains recipe for taking bigger bites from tips

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

About 60 employers and employees from the food and beverage industry gathered in Midland Tuesday to hear an Internal Revenue Service spokesman explain the government's new recipe for getting a bigger bite from tips earned by restaurant and nightclub workers.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsiblity Act (TEFRA) of 1982 is designed to increase reporting of all tips for tax purposes by "allocating" a probable tip income among all employees likely to have received tips.

Ross Tomlinson, revenue agent with the Dallas District IRS office, said the allocation requirement is not a new tax, but rather a new means of bolstering a tip reporting requirement which dates back to 1934.

Tomlinson said IRS studies indicate only about 16 percent of tip income is reported for tax purposes.

He said the TEFRA provision is designed to boost that percentage by stiffening the tip reporting requirements for "large" food and beverage establishments. The IRS defines "large" operations as those with more than 10 employees on a typical business day.

"We're doing it because the dollars are not being reported," Tomlinson said. "We would like more of that 84 percent to come up and hit the books, get on the tax return."

Tomlinson said the allocation will be an amount that, when added to the total tips reported by employees, will equal 8 percent of the business' designated gross receipts — cash, charge and room service sales.

Food and beverage industry employees have protested allocations made during each payroll period because the resulting tax withholding often reduces their hourly-wage paycheck to near nothing.

Tomlinson said allocations should involve bookkeeping entries for year-end tax purposes only, and no withholding is required. He said the allocation requirement has been misapplied in some cases during its first few months in existence.

He said those employees who have reported all tips in the past will have no trouble with the new enforcement provision. Employees whose reported tip income exceeds what would be their allocation would not receive an allocation, he said.

Tomlinson also noted that accurate tip records — kept by both employer and employees — will help an establishment avoid IRS scrutiny.

"Accurate records are a key to substantiating that (tip income) amount on your return," Tomlinson said. "When and if an individual is examined for income tax, that's the point at which any reconciliation takes place between the individual and the revenue service. Keep accurate records and you'll have absolutely no problem with this allocation requirement."

Tomlinson said the TEFRA provision was not designed to promote audits of past abuses of the tip-reporting requirment.

"Congress did not intend that we go back and correct previous years," he said. "We're interested in getting it right and keeping it right."

Sam Gonzalez, owner of Manuel's restaurant in Odessa, said he has some problems with the allocation system, both in theory and in practice.

"Granted, these people — busboys, waiters and waitresses — do not report their full income," Gonzalez said. "But how many rich waitresses or waiters do you see?"

He said the 8 percent assumed tip rate is unfair to employees receiving less in tips. "As a waiter, you could come up to a family of 12 and get zilch, and that's what kills me," he said, adding that while his employee earnings records are tracked by a computer, "I pity the poor employers who are not on computer."

Gonzalez said food and beverage industry lobbyists are fighting the allocation system in Congress.

Judge: Woman guilty of theft of valuable tool

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The judge watched a bit of television, listened to a tape, and, still donned in his black robe, considered testimony of witnesses and the accused in his role as judge and jury.

On Thursday, the day the trial started in Midland's 142nd State District Court, the judge found 32-year-old Carol Morris guilty of theft of a diamond-studded oil field teaching tool — a miniature model of a core drill bit. He placed her on probation for five years, fined her $500 and ordered her to spend 30 "full days" in Midland County Jail.

Judge Pat Baskin, who could have sentenced Miss Morris up to 10 years in prison and fined her up to $5,000, told the defendant that he didn't know if she viewed the sentence as harsh or lenient. But Baskin said he beholds the punishment "as rather lenient" and meted her the relatively light sentence "for the sole reason that there were some suggestions that your family was entitled to some funds...."

Miss Morris contended that she was trying to sell the Christensen Diamond Products core bit to recoup the $3,000 which she said her father, Robert James "RJ" Morris, 50, had "invested" in the bit. She said her father, who was killed in a 1981 shooting following a disputed dice game, had won the drill bit in a gambling bet and apparently was given the bit in lieu of $3,000 in cash.

MISS MORRIS said she tried to locate the bit's rightful owner and also went through lawyers Michael Williams and Robert L. "Bob" Evans Jr. She even said Christensen Diamond Products of Oklahoma City denied that the bit belonged to the company. But she indicated she wanted a reward — $3,000 — in exchange for returning the bit.

"Did you even know it was stolen?" her defense attorney, former Ector County District Attorney John Green, asked her.

"No," she said.

"One of their (Christensen's) employees had put it up (in a gambling game with her father)," she said, "...and my father had won it in gambling."

"I just wanted the $3,000...because that's what my father had invested in it."

The bit was reported stolen by Christensen's Charlie Smith of Oklahoma City on Jan. 16, 1980, in the burglary of his car on the Holiday Inn parking lot in Midland. Smith reported he had been using the bit to teach an Odessa drilling class.

On Nov. 5, 1982, from a balcony of the Best Western motel in Midland, Texas Department of Public Safety intelligence agents filmed on video tape the sale of the bit by Miss Morris to an undercover narcotics officer from Midland County Sheriff's Office.

EVIDENCE indicated that Miss Morris sought $12,000 in $100 bills for the bit; the officer paid her. However, further evidence revealed that co-defendant Michael Burton, who had arranged the bit's sale to the officer who was posing as a "company man," wanted $4,500 for his services in setting up the sale.

Altogether, the undercover officer apparently had agreed to pay $16,500 for the bit, which a Christensen representative testified was worth about $6,000 or $7,000.

Miss Morris said she was just with Burton, who was doing the selling, she said, and that "the purpose of my being there was to verify the amount of the money."

Miss Morris was arrested moments after she had received the $12,000 and was jailed. Co-defendant Burton is serving a penitentiary sentence for his role in the set-up. And another co-defendant, John "Poor John" Montgomery, is on a misdemeanor probation for his role, which, he said, was to "see what it (the bit) was worth."

Miss Morris said the bit was stored in the attic of a machine shop in Odessa. After her father's death, she got the bit in her efforts to collect on gambling debts which were due her father.

In making a case for his client's defense, Green brought to the witness stand Dr. Ruby Morris, an educator who is the widow of R.J. Morris and mother of the defendant, whom she described as "my baby girl."

Dr. Morris said her husband had brought the encased bit home and explained that he "beat a man out of it gambling."

"I TOLD HIM to get it out of my house," she said. He did. Later, Dr. Morris said she asked her husband where he had stored the bit, and he told her that "it wasn't any of my business."

The widow said she suspected the bit, which "had some little things that looked like rhinestones or diamonds," had been stolen.

Miss Morris, who insisted that all she wanted out of the bit was the $3,000 which her father "had invested in it," said a spokeman for Oil Field Theft Hot Line would not offer any reward for the bit's return.

Prosecutor Jim Rex asked Miss Morris if she would have returned the bit to the owner without her receiving money in exchange for giving it up.

"I would have to explain their employee owed my father $3,000," she said. However, Miss Morris said "even Christensen Diamond Products said it wasn't theirs." However, a company representative testified that the serial number on the bit indicated that Christensen owned the bit.

Even in selling the bit to "the company man," Miss Morris said she "wasn't concerned about doing nothing illegal."

"You weren't?" asked Rex.

"No," said Miss Morris, who had been advised by her defense counsel not to testify. Nevertheless, she did, and elected to be tried before the judge rather than before a jury.

In finding her guilty of theft, the judge said that "there's no doubt" that Miss Morris was aware the bit had been stolen.

"Frankly," said Baskin, who also noted that Miss Morris is to be tried on a forgery charge, "it's not certain who stole it...and no one is suggesting you stole it...A thief has no title to property."

"The court is forced to conclude that you knew it was stolen," Baskin told Miss Morris, and further said that evidence indicated that "you knew you were doing something suspect."

"No one is suggesting your father stole it, but I suspect he suspected it was stolen."

MMH's governing boards forced to increase budget by 4.3 percent

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

"Under TEFRA, Medicare won't recognize (reimbursement for) private rooms. With only six semi-private rooms set aside for Medicare patients, we need to bring the semi-private room rate closer to the private room rate."

Six months into the fiscal year, Midland Memorial Hospital's governing boards have been forced to increase their budget by 4.3 percent.

Because the Tax Equity Fiscal and Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) is expected to slash about $1.2 million in MMH's Medicare reimbursement, the boards — trustees and directors — approved an increase in room rates and ancillary charges.

Also at Thursday's meeting, the boards decided to seek state approval for a $1.2 million CT scanner, a computerized X-ray machine that provides a cross-sectional view of the body.

The certificate of need application for this machine is expected to be filed with the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin in the next two weeks. Upon approval, MMH officials will arrange interim financing for the scanner until the Midland Memorial Foundation board of governors raise funds committed to the scanner purchase.

In addition, directors Thursday reviewed the hospital's financial statements, paying bills and accepting equipment bids.

The April 1 increase will up the rate of private rooms from $143 to $148 and hike semi-private room rates from $125 to $148. Ancillary charges, such as lab tests, X-rays and physical therapy treatment, also will increase in April.

"Under TEFRA, Medicare won't recognize (reimbursement for) private rooms," said Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance. "With only six semi-private rooms set aside for Medicare patients, we need to bring the semi-private room rate closer to the private room rate."

During an interview between the trustee and directors' meeting Thursday, Miller said because of TEFRA, present room rates have cost the hospital about $70,000.

While private room rates will be increased by 3.5 percent, semi-private room rates will rise by 14 percent. Miller added that "$17.50 of the $18 increase for the semi-private room rate is because of TEFRA."

Along with the April 1 increases, Miller said MMH employee overtime will continue to be reduced. Although overtime pay in December totaled about $77,000 more than the $1.1 million monthly payroll, Miller said it is now about 3 percent, or $33,000. He estimated the reduction of overtime pay could save the hospital $100,000 a year.

In the board meeting, MMH President Ray Branson said, "We do continually compare with other hospitals of like size, and rate surveys show that MMH charges less."

The revised 1983 fiscal year budget will boost MMH's $29.7 million in patient care revenue to $31.6 million. The revised total operating revenue of $25.9 million will increase to $27.4 million.

In the financial statements, gross patient revenues for February totaled $2,537,271, exceeding the budget by $216,379. Branson said the average hospital stay was shortened, allowing 62 more patient days in February.

"This 85 percent occupancy rate made our gross patient revenue favorable," he said.

The directors paid $13,258.02 to the Midland County Tax Appraisal District for collection of taxes and appraisal fees, $99,698.68 for February's indigent care, $19,609 to Area Builders for final billing of the 1977 expansion and $35,020.26 for 20 budgeted equipment items.

The board also accepted bids for budgeted equipment totaling $126,868.75.

Montford, Hightower promote proposed farmers' loan program

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower held a joint news conference Thursday to promote a proposed constitutinal amendment to provide state-backed loans to farmers for purchasing equipment for efficient water use.

Hightower said the legislation, sponsored by Montford and Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, would allow farmers to make more use of existing water resources.

"There will be no state water plan unless we deal with the agricultural needs and the inefficiencies thereof," Hightower said, calling current water use for agriculture "quite wasteful."

Charts distributed by Hightower report more than 40 percent of water used on 5.6 million acres of irrigated land is lost to evaporation, seepage or run-off, while on 2.2 million acres, 30 to 40 percent is lost.

Only on 30,000 acres is the loss limited to 5 percent or less, the charts show.

Hightower said "the technolgy is there" to improve water use but that farmers can't afford to purchase the equipment required.

Providing a loan program is a realistic approach to the problem of agricultural water use, he said, noting that such use makes up 72 percent of Texas' total water use.

Montford said the proposal is to provide farmers "a helping hand and not a handout."

Farmers in all parts of Texas — and not merely West Texas — need to be able to purchase such equipment, he said.

"It's not a practical piece of legislation — it's a plan for Texas."

Hightower said the measure "makes common sense," and reported checks with lenders indicate they will support the program.

The proposal, which would be funded through bonds, would allow farmers to obtain loans at 10 to 11 percent, based on current rates, Hightower said.

Hightower noted that calculations by Texas A&M University show that farmers would be able to save 18 billion gallons the first year and 325 billion by the program's 10th year.

Montford said there also would be benefits from energy as well as water savings under the program.

Five-day-old twin girls may share gall bladder

EL PASO (AP) — Siamese twin girls born five days ago have separate hearts, but may share a gall bladder and other internal organs, according to the doctor in charge of caring for the infants.

Dr. Richard Heath, an infant specialist, said Thursday that more tests are needed before doctors can determine "whether surgery can and should be contemplated."

Preliminary results from another test showed the twins may share a liver. More tests on the twin's liver and gastrointestinal tracts were scheduled today.

The dark-haired twins, Brenda and Ivon Hernandez, are attached from the breastbone to the navel.

The six doctors studying their case still need to find out if the babies share a gall bladder or a bile duct. Siamese twins sharing either a heart or a bile duct never have been separated successfully, doctors said.

Since the twins are still connected extensively at the chest, Heath said no one could guarantee they'd survive surgery even if they had two of each organ.

"We still don't have enough information to really make an accurate statement," Heath said. "Obviously, if the heart were significantly conjoined and could not be separated, the chances for survival would be very limited."

The twins' parents, Maria Delores and Raul Hernandez, were relieved that the babies have separate hearts.

"It seems like good news to me," said Mrs. Hernandez, 26, who is recovering from the Caesarean delivery at Newark Methodist Maternity Hospital. "I hope the other (tests) come out the same way."

Senate approves bill raising fees

AUSTIN (AP) — Proponents of a bill to raise fees for state services say that the measure would result in a two-year revenue increase of over $14.5 million.

The Senate approved the bill Thursday.

Dallas Sen. John Leedom's proposal, the fifth in a series of bills, would raise fees charged by the secretary of state.

As an example, the fee for filing articles of incorporation for a domestic corporation would increase from $100 to $200.

Senate develops bill to protect aquifer

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Natural Resources Committee has reported out SB 1018, which would require a permit from the Texas Water Commission before a shaft could be drilled through an aquifer.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Hereford, is designed to ensure the state will have its own source of information if the U.S. Department of Energy drills a test shaft to determine if West Texas is a suitable site for storage of nuclear waste, an aide to Sarpalius said.

West Texas is one of five sites being considered for storage of nuclear waste. The number will be lowered to three by August and experimental shafts will be drilled for testing.

If a shaft is drilled in West Texas, it will go through the Ogallala Aquifer, which serves much of the area as a source for irrigation and drinking water.

Final site for storage of nuclear wastes will be made by the president in 1987.

David Escamilla, aide to Sarpalius, said the bill "is directed to anyone digging a shaft going through an aquifer."

Escamilla said the bill is designed to give Texas its own source of information about the shaft, instead of relying on word from the DOE.

The bill also would require the shaft's driller to get a letter from the Railroad Commission ensuring oil and natural gas reserves are not interfered with, would require public hearings and full-time surveillance from the Water Commission during drilling.

In supporting the bill, Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said, "If we cannot prevent the shaft, we can place it under our own parameters."

Escamilla said he didn't know whether the bill's purpose was to reduce the chance of West Texas being chosen as a nuclear waste site.

He said the bill's purpose "is not to say 'no' to the federal government, because that wouldn't pass constitutional muster," but rather to ensure the state of having its own source of information about the shaft.

Legalization of horse race betting headed for death in committee

AUSTIN (AP) — This year's version of the legalized horse race gambling bill seems headed for death in a House committee unless the chairman can change at least one mind.

Eight members of the 15-member Committee on Urban Affairs have told Chairman George Pierce in a confidential letter that they want the bill — co-sponsored by Pierce — to never come out of subcommittee.

"We do not plan to support HB440 if it comes to the committee," the letter to Pierce said.

Committee member Mike Toomey, R-Houston and one of the eight, said Thursday it was "a good bet, pardon my pun" that the bill would die in committee.

If Pierce and other horse race backers can't talk at least one of the eight into a change of heart, legalized pari-mutuel betting in Texas could be dead in Texas for at least another two years.

"IT COULD be in better shape," Pierce, R-San Antonio, said of the bill's status.

Bill author Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said he would "continue to work that committee" despite the majority opposition. Berlanga conceded his bill could be doomed "if they are set in concrete, which I don't think they are.

"All things can happen in the legislative process," he said.

The Berlanga bill calls for local option elections on horse race gambling.

The eight committee members or their spokesmen confirmed Thursday they would vote against it. Their letter to Pierce said they were signing it with the understanding that Pierce "will keep the request confidential."

Pierce read portions of the letter to a reporter who previously talked with the eight legislators or their aides about the matter.

Also Thursday, the committee authorized Pierce to order the director of Texans Against Gambling to submit records showing who is bankrolling his lobbying efforts.

PIERCE SAID he expected Allen Maley Jr. of Dallas to comply with the committee request without being subpoenaed.

Committee member and horse race gambling foe Frank Eikenburg, R-Plano, said the eight votes seem certain, but added, "They aren't solid until after the votes are cast. I'd like to bring it up quick and get rid of it. The longer they postpone it, the more chance people have to change their minds."

Pierce said, "We're not in that big a hurrry to get it out."

The eight committee members opposed to legalized horse race gambling are Eikenburg; Toomey; Barry Connelly, R-Houston; Randy Pennington, R-Houston; Al Edwards, D-Houston; Jan McKenna, R-Arlington; Steve Wolens, D-Dallas; and David Cain, D-Dallas.

Bob Kelly, House parliamentarian, said it would take an "extraordinary" action to get the bill to the House floor despite committee rejection. There are several methods to circumvent committees, but those tactics are rarely tried, Kelly said.

The push for horse racing could be resurrected in the Senate, but Berlanga acknowledged some problems there because of tax provisions in his bill. Only the House can originate a tax bill.

"IF IT GETS moved over to their ballpark, it would have to be altered," he said of the Senate, adding that the needed changes could be made.

Wolens disagreed, saying the House committee's rejection would be a fatal blow.

"The underlying impetus behind the bill is that it creates new dollars for general revenue. That's one of the attractions. To eliminate that would be to diffuse much support for the bill," he said.

"Probably, it is over," he said.

If senators do approve a horse race bill, it must go back to a House committee before going to the House floor.

Near-record crowd attends Lions' Pancake Jamboree

A near-record crowd of 8,627 persons ate pancakes at the Downtown Lions Club 27th annual Pancake Jamboree at Dellwood Mall Shopping Center.

George Loudamy, jamboree chairman, said attendance ranked second to the 8,836 persons who feasted on pancakes at the 1977 event. The 1982 figure was 8,129.

Ticket sales totaled $36,551, of which $31,141 came from the advance sale by club members, according to figures released at the club's Wednesday noon meeting. Keith Somerville was ticket sale chairman. The five top salesmen were Charlie Sprayberry, $5,682; Rusty Gifford, $2,042; Jack James, $1,300; Jim Goldman, $1,237; and Bill Malone, $1,087.

Net proceeds from the event will fund the club's special activities and projects. This year's activities budget exceeded $25,000.

President Jack Darden expressed appreciation for the support given by Midland and area residents at the recent festival. He said the club will be able to expand its 1983-84 activities program.

According to figures furnished by Lion Jeff George, the Lions Club, during the last 13 years, has fed 104,903 persons at its annual Pancake Jamborees. Figures prior to 1971 were not available.

Easter Seals, PBRC fund-raiser to be held Saturday in Odessa

ODESSA — A fund-raiser to benefit Easter Seals and the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center will be held Saturday at the Showcase Dinner Theatre on Highway 80 east of Odessa.

White nominates Odessa judge for Texas Judicial Council term

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Mark White has submitted the nomination of Judge Ray L. McKim of Odessa to the Senate for consideration as a member of the Texas Judicial Council for a term extending to Jan. 1, 1989.

McKim, 58, serves as judge of the 7th Administrative Judicial District. If confirmed, he would replace Judge Ross E. Doughty Jr. of Uvalde, whose term expired, according to the governor's office.

McKim attended The University of Texas at Austin.

House to give clerks more time

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House has tentatively approved a plan to give county clerks more time to have general election ballots printed.

Houston Rep. David Patronella's bill, approved Thursday in a preliminary vote, would direct the secretary of state to certify general election candidates 55 days before the election, rather than the current 35.

Several other deadlines, including the last date for replacing deceased or withdrawn candidates, also would be moved up 20 days.

The measure faces another House vote before it goes to the Senate.

Fabric applique easy to make

Copley News Service

It's easy to applique a bouquet, especially when you start with a floral printed fabric. You simply cut out the flowers, arrange them in a bouquet and stitch them to a contrasting background.

For extra interest, you can make a vase, basket or bow from a contrasting fabric scrap. Machine stitches create all the stems you'll need.

The appliqued bouquet is ideal for a throw pillow. With matching print fabric for a ruffle, the pillow becomes even more beautiful.

Here are the directions for the ruffled, appliqued pillow:

MATERIALS: ⅞ yard print fabric for appliques and ruffle; ½ yard solid-color fabric for pillow front and back; 18x18-inch section of polyester fiberfill; sewing supplies; zigzag sewing machine. Optional: fusible webbing.

CUTTING: 1. Cut one 18x18-inch square each for pillow front and pillow back. 2. Cut 18x18-inch square from batting. 3. Cut 18x18-inch square for backing. 4. From print fabric, cut three 7x36-inch strips for the ruffle.

APPLIQUES: 1. Cut several flowers from remaining print fabric. 2. Cut leaves, or anything else desired from print fabric. 3. If desired, cut a base, basket or bow shape from contrasting fabric. 4. Optional: Using your shapes as patterns, cut corresponding shapes from fusible webbing.

ASSEMBLY: 1. Arrange flowers and other appliques on right side of pillow front. 2. Slide fusible webbing beneath appliques. 3. Following directions on webbing package, fuse appliques to fabric with an iron.

BASTING: 1. With right side of pillow front on top, sandwich batting between pillow front and backing. 2. Baste a large X-shape through all three thicknesses.

STITCHING: 1. Set zigzag machine for a medium stitch. 2. Stitch around appliques, one at a time, with matching or contrasting thread. 3. If desired, for added interest, stitch extra lines on a vase, basket or bow. 4. Add lines of zigzag stitches as needed for stems.

RUFFLE: 1. With sides facing, stitch short ends of ruffle together to form one continuous circle or fabric. 2. Press open seams. 3. Fold ruffle in half lengthwise, keeping seams inside. 4. Sew two rows of long, gathering stitches at raw edges of ruffle. 5. Gather stitching to fit around pillow front. 6. Lining up raw edges of ruffle with outside edges of pillow, baste ruffle to right side of pillow front.

PILLOW: 1. With ruffle inside and right sides together, baste pillow front to pillow back. 2. Machine stitch around pillow, leaving small opening for turning. 3. Clip corners, trim batting close to seam; turn pillow to right side. 4. Stuff pillow with polyester batting or fiberfill. 5. Sew opening closed with tiny hem stitches.

'Thought-for-thought' translation of Bible provides many challenges

Copley News Service

Try translating the New Testament passage from Revelations 3 that says, "Behold I stand at the door and knock" into an African language and you get an idea of what Bible translators are up against.

"The problem is that in some African languages only thieves knock on doors," says the Rev. Douglas Shaw of Living Bibles International's San Diego office.

"You'd have to come up with something else, like 'I stand at the door and call out to you as a friend would call,'" Shaw said.

It's this sort of problem that lies behind Living Bible International's "thought-for-thought," rather than "word-for-word," translations of the Bible, Shaw added.

"You cannot translate the Bible word for word," he said. "Many languages do not have an equivalent word for an English word, so you have to translate thought for thought.

"Scholars may not feel the need for that thought-to-thought translations, but we're trying to provide something for the masses."

"Thought-for-thought" paraphrases of the Bible were popularized by Kenneth Taylor, whose "The Living Bible" burst upon the scene a decade ago.

"The Living Bible" grew out of Taylor's desire to publish a Bible his and other children could understand. Now, more than a decade later, Taylor dreams of publishing similar paraphrases of Scripture into 200 of the world's major languages within another decade.

"The board of Living Bibles International has set as its goal to complete the 200 major languages of the world by 1992," Shaw said. "That would cover 90 percent of the world's population." He said there are already at least portions of "The Living Bible" in 110 languages including almost 50 complete New Testaments and perhaps five entire Bibles.

Living Bibles International does translations from the original Hebrew and standard English versions of the Bible, using "The Living Bible" as a guide. It employs about 1,200 local linguists, scholars, pastors, businessmen and others worldwide working on the translations.

"It takes us up to seven years to translate a whole New Testament," Shaw said.

In many countries the Bibles are distributed at or mostly below cost, Shaw said.

"In Sri Lanka we are placing the New Testament into 60,000 Buddhist temples," he said. "In Italy the New Testaments are being published by the Vatican press."

More than 28 million copies of "The Living Bible" have been distributed during the last decade, Taylor said in an interview.

He said that for many it was "the first time they've understood Scripture."

Taylor said that while some have dismissed "The Living Bible" as "just a paraphrase," it presents God's word "in simple English" for people who would not otherwise understand it.

It is not a word-for-word translation, but a paraphrase taken from "inspired Greek thought, not inspired Greek words," Taylor said.

Dr. Harold Lindsell, author of "The Battle for the Bible," said new Bibles are continually needed because languages and word meanings change and new words are always appearing.

He said the King James Version is a masterpiece, but not one everybody easily understands it.

Actress firm believer in running for health

Copley News Service

She went from sophisticated city girl to a free-spirited country lady all in the name of love. And when this season found her back in politics, she brought with her a dose of down-home country charm, proving once again that beauty and brains are not mutually exclusive.

I could be describing the wife of any Washington VIP, but I'm not. Because the character that fits this description is super beauty Susan Howard in her portrayal of Donna Culver Krebs on the nighttime supersoaper of them all, "Dallas."

"When it comes to beauty routines," says Susan, "I guess you could say I'm a bit old-fashioned in the sense that I don't use a lot of products and I stick pretty much to basic routines.

"The most important beauty treatment to me, although it doesn't sound like one, is running. I feel that exercise contributes a great deal to your overall appearance and I don't just mean having a good figure."

A STRICT BELIEVER in disciplined exercise, Susan runs between 30 and 40 miles per week, and credits this as being one of the reasons she has glowing skin and healthy hair.

"When people have massages or facials or even scalp treatments, one of the main ideas is to get the blood flowing and to bring it to that area. I feel," says a truly radiant Susan, "that running does the same thing, plus it helps to flush out your arteries as well as keeping your weight down and toning your entire body.

"I drink tons of water," she continues, "whenever I can. I find that when you have ample fluid in your body and you do physical exercise, the perspiration helps to really flush out your skin and bring all the impurities to the surface."

To help her dry skin stay soft and young looking, Susan never uses soap on her face, but instead cleanses with Abolene cream followed by a vigorous scrubbing with a warm washcloth.

"Also," adds this super beauty, "I never use face powder of any kind. I find that it dries out the skin and gives a chalky, pasty appearance that just doesn't look attractive."

Susan is a natural blonde and believes another reason behind the beautiful shine on her hair and general healthy condition is a combination of finding the right products for her specific hair type as well as applying some basic rules of common sense.

"BLONDES HAVE to be especially cautious," she says, "because light hair is more porous than most other shades and it can become very dull and drab looking if you're not careful what you put on it.

"I've found a shampoo called Fermo-Caresse works best on light hair because it brings out natural highlights and rinses out easily, so there is no danger of soap residue clinging to your hair.

"Mary Keats, head of hairdressing at MGM studios for 19 years, taught me some very basic things."

Those basic hair care tips include avoiding a hair dryer whenever possible and instead drying your hair naturally in the sun. Trim your hair every six weeks. Use only a wide-tooth comb on wet hair. Brush your hair only when dry, and use a brush made of natural bristles. Use a curling iron rather than electric rollers for a quick curl, since it tends to damage the hair less. Avoid both hair sprays and hair-setting gels, since both tend to dry and dull the hair.

"I think if you just use common sense as the basis of any beauty routine," concludes Susan, "you'll find that looking your very best is a lot easier than you thought possible."

BEAUTY HINT

If you are like most women, the first thing you reach for in the morning is a nice hot cup of coffee.

A lot has been said both pro and con about this beverage, but recently a new piece of information casts an entirely new light on the subject.

According to Bernice Adams, hair coloring expert of the Earle Adams Salon in Hollywood, drinking coffee 12 to 24 hours before coloring your hair can cause significant change in the shade that results.

Baked potato recipes make many meals

Copley News Service

Jeanne Jones, author of more books than she can count on her two busy hands, has stuffed 100 meals-in-a-potato into a paperback book named "Stuffed Spuds." The paperback won such rave reviews from culinary aficionados from the Book of the Month Club that it has been released in hardcover.

Jones' tastily titled potato creations whet the appetite and fill the need for potato creativity.

"When I decided to do the book on stuffed spuds, it was on whimsy," said Jones. "Even naming the recipes was fun, delicious play. But make no mistake — I do not toss books out lightly. Nothing gets into print without work; however, nothing becomes so much work that I don't enjoy it either."

Jones designs all recipes. She employs four specialists — two of them non-dietary — to prepare and test recipes. She makes the final decisions. She is constantly striving to cut back on fat, reduce salt and improve flavor.

"My basic thing is a low-calorie diet," said Jones, whose cookbook, "Jeanne Jones Food Lover's Diet (A Safe, Sane Way to Stay Thin Forever)" was also published last year, following closely on the heels of a string of cookbooks geared to pamper specific dietary needs, yet please the general cook as well.

Recipes follow, but before getting into the potato, Jones offers these tips from her book, "Stuffed Spuds," published by M. Evans and Co., Inc., New York. (Paperback: $5.95):

— When buying potatoes, select "nice big ones" — russets or all-purpose potatoes. (Jones uses ¾ pound potatoes when developing recipes, but ½ pound potatoes can be used. If so, substitute three ½ pound potatoes for two ¾ pound potatoes in each of the following recipes.)

— When cutting tops from baked potatoes, store tops in a tightly sealed container in the freezer. When you want deep-fried potato skins, they're ready to use.

— If there is more filling than will fit the potato shells (which is the case in several recipes), it may be used as filling for omelets or frozen for use as a vegetable side dish at another meal.

— When scooping potato out of the shell, do so carefully. Do not take out too much. You need a strong "bowl" to hold the stuffing.

— According to Jones, the following method is best for preparing and baking potatoes to ensure as tough-textured a potato shell as possible to be stuffed without tearing:

BAKED POTATOES

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Wash the potatoes well and dry thoroughly. Pierce with fork to keep the skins from bursting. Bake for one hour. Remove potatoes from the oven and allow to cool until comfortable to the touch.

Jones prepared pate as a dip for chips (toasty potato skins) from the following recipe.

PATE IN A SPUD

2 baked potatoes
2 tbsps. butter or corn oil margarine
½ lb. fresh chicken livers
2 tbsps. brandy
½ cup chicken stock (see recipe below)
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. freshly ground black pepper
Chopped parsley for garnish

Cut a thin slice from the top of each potato. Remove the pulp from the potaoes, being careful not to tear the shells. Place the potato pulp in a mixing bowl and mash; cover and set aside. Keep the shells warm.

Heat the butter or margarine in a skillet. Add the chicken livers and cook until tender. Place the chicken livers, brandy, chicken broth, salt and pepper in a blender container and blend until smooth before adding to the mashed potatoes. Pour into the warm potato shells and garnish with chopped parsley. Serve as dip for baked potato skin chips.

VICHYSSOISE IN A SPUD

Serving vichyssoise in a spud bowl is an imaginative presentation for an informal patio supper, and it goes well with charcoal-broiled fish, meat or poultry.

2 baked potatoes
2 tbsps. butter or corn oil margarine
1 medium-sized onion, chopped
2 leeks, white part only, chopped
1 cup chicken stock (recipe above)
1 bay leaf
½ cup cream or milk
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
Snipped chives or green onion tops for garnish

Cut a thin slice from the top of each potato. Remove the pulp from the potaoes, being careful not to tear the shells. Place the potato pulp in a mixing bowl and mash; cover and set aside.

Heat the butter or margarine in a skillet. Add the chopped onion and leeks and saute about three minutes. Add the mashed potatoes, chicken stock and bay leaf and mix thoroughly. Simmer the mixture, covered, for 15 minutes, or until the vegetables are tender. Remove the bay leaf and discard. Whirl the mixture in a blender or push it through a fine sieve to reduce it to a velvety smoothness. Add cream, salt and pepper and mix thoroughly.

Place potato shells on serving plates and pour mixture into them. Refrigerate until cold. Garnish with snipped chives or green onion tops just before serving.

SALADE NICOISE SPUD

2 baked potatoes
1 tomato, sliced
½ cucumber, chopped
1 can (2 oz.) flat filets of anchovy, drained and coarsely chopped
¼ cup coarsely chopped pitted ripe olives
2 leaves Bibb lettuce, torn into small pieces
1 leaf romaine lettuce, torn into small pieces
½ cup French dressing
2 leaves romaine lettuce for lining potato shells
Chopped parsley for garnish

Cut a thin slice from the top of each potato. Cool to room temperature and remove the pulp carefully. Dice the potato pulp and place in a mixing bowl. Set the shells aside. Add the tomato, cucumber, anchovies, olives and torn lettuce to the diced potatoes and mix well. Add French dressing and toss thoroughly. Line the potato shells with romaine lettuce leaves and heap the salad mixture into the shells. Garnish with chopped parsley.

(Salade Nicoise is best served at room temperature; however, if you are making it ahead of time, it can be refrigerated and served cold.)

DILLED CHICKEN STUFFED SPUD AMADINE

2 tbsps. sunflower seeds
2 baked potatoes
¼ cup mayonnaise (homemade, with corn oil, preferred)
½ cup sour cream
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. tarragon, crushed in a mortar with a pestle
½ tsp. dried dill weed, crushed in a mortar with a pestle
1 cup chopped cooked chicken

Toast the sunflower seeds in a 350-degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes, or until golden brown. Watch them carefully because they burn easily. Set aside.

Cut a thin slice from the top of each potato. Remove the pulp from the potatoes, being careful not to tear the shells. Place the potato pulp in a bowl and mash. Keep the shells warm. Add the mayonnaise, sour cream, salt, tarragon and dill weed to the mashed potatoes and mix thoroughly. Add the fish and toasted almonds, reserving enough of the almonds to sprinkle over the tops for garnish. Heap the mixture into the potato shells. Heat in a 350-degree oven for 15 minutes. Garnish with the reserved almonds before serving.

Caffeine: Safe or not?

Hearst Feature Service

Caffeine is well on its way to becoming this decade's most negative buzz-word. First, decaffeinated coffees, then decaffeinated teas started popping up on supermarket shelves. Television commercials made viewers aware of caffeine's stimulating effects as actors requested "only half a cup," because "caffeine makes me nervous."

Soft drink companies also have jumped on the band wagon with decaffeinated products displaying bright stick-on-labels proclaiming "no caffeine," and slogans like "Never had it. Never will," "99-percent caffeine free," and "You don't need caffeine and neither does your cola."

The October 1981 issue of Consumer Reports alerted the public to the potential dangers of caffeine, stating that while there is no persuasive evidence that moderate caffeine intake is harmful to the average healthy adult, "excessive consumption may lead to chronic caffeine intoxication or 'caffeinism,' a medical term for 'coffee nerves.' Symptoms include restlessness, disturbed sleep, heart palpitations, irritations of the stomach and diarrhea. "Caffeine is also mildly addicting," the report continued. And The American Council on Science and Health added other possible effects of caffeine, including mood changes, depression and irritability.

The most controversial questions about caffeine focus on its possible link to fibrocystic breast disease and to birth defects. The following has been revealed:

* Surveys indicate that about 95 percent of pregnant women consume beverages and drugs that contain caffeine. More than 10 percent of pregnant women reportedly drink more than five cups of coffee daily.
* Any caffeine a mother consumes crosses the placenta and enters the bloodstream of the fetus. Because the unborn child metabolizes caffeine at a slower rate than the mother, it is exposed to a greater concentration of caffeine for a longer time.

"A lot of physicians are warning women to avoid caffeine during their pregnancies," said Judy New, a registered dietitian. New, who doesn't consider the anti-caffeine campaign to be "hype," said medical indications show that caffeine may be dangerous. "It does have a drug-like effect on the body. It can raise the blood pressure level and it can make people with nervous disorders more nervous."

The connection to fibrocystic breast disease is "fairly widely accepted, but we're not really sure," New said. In a study of women with fibrocystic breast disease, "about half of the women reported a decrease in pain, and lumps disappearing completely, with the reduction of caffeine."

Soft drinks are now the nation's favorite beverage, replacing coffee. Annually, the average American will consume 34 gallons of soft drinks, compared to about 28 gallons of coffee, according to Consumer Reports. The amount of caffeine required to stimulate the typical adult is estimated at 150 to 250 milligrams a day. A daily dose of more than 250 milligrams is considered excessive.

A 12-ounce Pepsi-Cola contains 37 milligrams of caffeine, Coca-Cola contains 34 milligrams, Royal Crown Cola contains 36 milligrams, while the Mr. Pibb diet drink contains 52 milligrams.

Estimates vary over the amount of decaffeinated-cola sales compared to regular-cola sales, but Beverage Industry, a biweekly industry publication, estimates that 1982 decaffeinated sales were 1.8 percent of the $20 billion total soft-drink market, or $360 million. The American Council on Science and Health estimates caffeine-free colas will capture 8 percent to 10 percent of the soft-drink market within a few years.

"Research has shown that the American public is concerned about caffeine," said Keith Pickett, corporate communications manager for the Seven-Up Company in St. Louis. "We're not saying caffeine is harmful for you. We're just saying that there's been a lot of concern and confusion. The public should know which products do and which do not have caffeine."

Groups want salt amounts on labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two groups say the government's voluntary sodium labeling campaign isn't enough and are asking the courts to require that food processors disclose on their labels the amount of salt inside packages.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest and the Institute for Public Representation said in their U.S. District Court suit recently that the Food and Drug Administration should require the salt labeling. They also argued that the agency should regulate the amount of salt in processed foods.

FDA spokesman William Grigg wouldn't comment on the suit, saying he had not seen the court papers. But he said that 19 percent of all packaged food labels now list the amount of salt inside. By contrast, 7.5 percent of food labels carried this information in 1978, he added.

About 75 million Americans suffer from high blood pressure, a condition which can contribute to heart attacks and strokes. Salt added to processed foods is the major source of sodium in the American diet. Sodium is believed to be a contributor to high blood pressure.

The FDA turned down a petition from the center for a mandatory salt labeling requirement last year.

The FDA has proposed a requirement that food processors disclose the salt content of their products if they provide any other nutritional information on their package labels. The FDA also has developed definitions for terms like sodium-free, low salt, and without added salt to enable consumers to better understand the advertising claims made about sodium.

FDA spokesman Bill Green said the agency received about 2,700 comments on its proposals and about 80 percent came from consumers who approved of them. He said the agency still is evaluating the responses before issuing a final proposal.

Bruce Silverglade, legal director for the center, said voluntary labeling won't provide consumers with adequate choices because many products won't be labeled. And he noted that FDA always has said it expects only about half of all processed foods at best to carry salt content information.

"The agency is making it clear that it is aware of the problem. But they are failing to bite the regulatory bullet and do something about it."

DEAR ABBY

Judge's drug lecture may set youth straight

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As a captain in our local police department, I have witnessed countless tragedies due to drug-related crimes, suicides, etc.

You ran an extraordinary column entitled "Listen to the Judge" back in July 1972. That column was not only a public service, it might have saved a few young lives.

I hope you will run it again. If you do, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. — CAPT. STANLEY J. JANUS, LACKAWANNA POLICE DEPT., LACKAWANNA, N.Y.

DEAR CAPTAIN JANUS: I agree. It's worth a rerun, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Recently, a 17-year-old Florida boy pleaded guilty to possessing hallucinogenic drugs. He had also been charged with violence toward a Miami Beach police officer.

Judge Alfonso Sepe sentenced the youth to one year in the county stockade and four years' probation. The comments of the judge so impressed me that I ordered the transcript from the court reporter so that I may read it to my own children.

Your column is so widely read I am sending you the "lecture" Judge Sepe gave that boy in the presence of the grieving parents. I hope you will publish it and give it the national forum I think it deserves. — MRS. A.L. CATES, MIAMI, FLA.

DEAR MRS. CATES: Rarely do I devote an entire column to one letter, but I agree, this is worth it. Here it is:

Judge Sepe spoke directly to the youth and said, "Do you know who is going to serve that year? Not you; your mother and father will serve that year.

"That is what's wrong. THEY get sentenced. They get sentenced for a lifetime.

"You serve a year. Your body is in the stockade for a year, but their souls are tormented for a lifetime. Why? Because you are a selfish, spoiled boy, that's why.

"There is no punishment in the world that I could inflict upon you that could in any way compensate for what you are doing to your mother and father. I have not spent 5 cents raising you. I didn't know you from Adam. But your mother and father have put their lives, their hearts, their sweat, their money and everything else they have into bringing you up. And now they have to sit in this courtroom and listen to a total stranger who had nothing to do with your upbringing scold you and put you in jail.

"This is at a time when phony kids your age are yelling, 'You adults have your alcohol, we want our drugs; you have polluted our water and our air, you have polluted this and that,' and all the rest of the garbage that comes out of your mouths.

"Meanwhile, you put yourselves above everybody else. I feel sorry for you.

"I want you to think of this for one year, and the reason why I say it:

"If you are sick, a doctor will treat you and he won't be on drugs. The lawyer who represents you won't be high on drugs, and the people in whose custody you'll be won't be on drugs.

"Your astronauts are not on drugs, and your president is not, and your legislators are not.

"And your engineers who build the bridges that you drive across and the tunnels that you drive through are not on drugs, and those who build the planes that you fly in and the cars that you drive are not.

"Neither are those who build the bathrooms that you stink up with your lousy, rotten drugs.

"None of them have been on drugs, and this is because of people like your mother and father.

"But in the world of the future," Sepe went on, "the same may not be true. Teachers, doctors, lawyers, legislators — products of the new drug-oriented generation — may well be high as kites.

"You won't know whom to send your child to, or whom to trust your life to."

Sepe sighed and closed the case file.

"Let's see what kind of world you leave to your children," he said, "before you talk about the world that we left to ours."

Fashion-watching in Paris

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PARIS — The best fashion show in Paris is on the streets.

That's fortunate, since it is almost impossible to get in to see the major French designer shows that attract thousands of buyers and the press several times a year. In fact, many of fashion's officialdom — even the store executives who travel to such world fashion centers as Paris and Milan — must share the limited seats available for the runway shows.

But that doesn't keep them from going to Paris, because there is much to learn from the way the French dress on the streets, in boutiques, restaurants, tea rooms, discos and the theater. And from the displays in boutiques, the fashion-conscious get a worthy view of upcoming trends, plus innovative ways of display and decoration.

Nevertheless, fashion presentations are available. The houses of Christian Dior and Chanel put on low-key shows for the public twice weekly, usually weekday afternoons. Pierre Cardin accepts group admissions only, charging a fee that, it says, is tailored to the size of the group (no hints offered). A few other houses invite outsiders to see audio-visual presentations of their designs.

"Les Coulisses de la Mode," a commercial presentation with both audio-visual and live models, has been temporarily discontinued. However, it would be worth checking with that organization before your trip to see if these shows have been revived. (The most recent price quoted is $24 for a two-hour show with cocktail; $40 for the show with lunch.)

To insure your best chance of seeing a Paris fashion show:

— Write in advance: A dignified note on engraved stationery or formal business stationery and the mention of a swanky Paris hotel as your place of sojourn will boost your chances.

— Check with the concierge of your hotel: Theoretically, the concierge will be current on which houses permit tourists to their showings. Unsurprisingly, the fancier hotels (and their concierges) have the most success in getting their guests into shows.

— Call the fashion houses directly: The telephone book with listings by professions has fashion houses listed under "couture," "couture creation" and "couture (haute)." Learn to pronounce the name of the designer before you dial the number — no one appreciates having his or her name mispronounced, particularly French designers and their coterie. Polish up your best French grammar and most formal idioms — they count with the French — and ask for the attache de presse (the press office deals with all public matters). Sound official, dignified and rich.

Whether or not you get into a fashion show, just being conscious of the people around you, even on the metro or walking through a museum, will give you lots of ideas about clothes — not only what's new, but more stylish ways to wear what you already have, fresh color combinations, new hairstyles, makeup trends and the like.

Paris fashion-watching is at it's best at:

— La Coupole (102 Boulevard Montparnasse 75014): A favorite hangout of the fashion and literary crowd, who usually arrive after 11 p.m.

— Le Relais Plaza Grill (31 Avenue Montaigne 75008): The superdeluxe coffee shop in the Hotel Plaza Athenee (10 asparagus in season for $18 at last count). Emanual Ungaro, whose boutique is across the street, occasionally lunches here, and so do the French and the tourist crowds. (If you can't afford the lunch tab, check out the lobby. The crowd mix is likely to include one Hollywood celebrity, 12 rich Texans, two French royalty and 16 Arabs.)

— Cafe des Deux Magot and Cafe de Flore (just off Place St.-Germain des Pres): Bundle up and sit outside to watch the passing show of young Parisians on the Left Bank. Saturday afternoon is the best show.

— Brasserie Lipp (151 Boulevard Saint Germain 75006): Good international mix of the professional fashion world and a clientele that is well dressed.

— Carette (4 Place du Trocadero 75016): Tea room in the Trocadero famous for chocolate macaroons and a well dressed crowd.

— Angelina (the old Maison Ruplemayer, 226 rue de Rivoli 75001): A famous tea room, to which the lovely, elegant older women of Paris come daily — as do some young women.

— Any Japanese restaurant: The current fad in Paris, a favorite of the young because the food is fresh, attractively presented and you can eat lunch rather speedily if you want.

U.S. college student master calligrapher

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WHITTIER, Calif. — It takes most artists the better part of a lifetime to achieve fame in their profession. Some die in oblivion. Others — a fortunate few — reach the top in their youth.

Like Xiao Kejia.

By the age of 13, Kejia (her faimly name is Xiao) had mastered the art of Chinese calligraphy, or brush-writing, and was famous throughout China for her bold and expressive style. Today, the 19-year-old Whittier College sophomore is one of China's master calligraphers — a distinction she shares with two dozen men in their 70s and 80s.

The 2,000-year-old art of calligraphy is highly esteemed in China, and few people of any age ever master its most advanced forms.

Kejia says, however, that calligraphy as a career "wouldn't be that interesting."

"Then I would have to write it," she said. "It wouldn't be a hobby anymore."

Her famous hobby, aside, the talented young artist is a typical college sophomore trying to decide on a major. Kejia ("Kathy" to her American friends) attends classes, works part time in the cafeteria and the library, and squeezes in four hours of study a day.

KEJIA TEACHES a class in beginning calligraphy to five Whittier students, and still finds time to practice herself.

"Before, my father wrote to me and said, 'Practice every day.' Now he knows I'm too busy. He says, 'Practice every week. Don't forget.'"

The modest artist talks a lot about her family. Like most calligraphers, she learned the art at home. Her grandfather is a Chinese calligrapher and poet and often looked at her work. When she was 9 years old, her novelist father sat down with her to practice for more than two hours after dinner every night.

"He spent all his (free) time with me," she said, "and he was very, very strict."

Kejia spent years copying the ancient masterpieces of calligraphy to learn different styles and forms of the art. She also memorized a poem a day. At the beginning, she said, she was so young that she didn't pay any attention" to the meaning of the many poems her father picked out for her to copy.

Later, she chose her own poems, especially writing on nature and friendship. Eventually, she took up the study of the great 4th-century calligrapher, Wang Hsi-chih, who is to calligraphy what Shakespeare is to theater.

"The most I learned," she said, "the more I collected their (the ancient masters') good strokes together and made my own style. That's why my writing does not look like anybody else's."

KEJIA SPECIALIZES in cursive calligraphy. The most advanced style of brush writing, it is so personalized and merged with art that only a Chinese calligrapher can actually read the characters.

Kejia's work delights even the untrained Western eye. The characters, each of them a word, are more than a foot high; and the lines are at once graceful and bold.

"The strokes," she explained, "must have bones. Even the light strokes do not float. They are engraved in the paper. You can see the strength."

Kejia writes on rice paper with a thick brush made from the tip of a weasel's tail, dipped in black ink and held straight up and down. She draws the characters with a sure hand, obviously in command of the twists and turns the brush makes. She is ambidextrous and switches hands or uses left and right simultaneously "for fun" or when she is tired. She varies her strokes.

"It depends on the characters," she said. "Some characters I use delicate strokes for, and some I want to write in a large hand."

When Kejia's friends first took samples of her art to other Chinese artists, the artists did not believe a teen-ager could show so much skill.

"They said, 'Ask her to come over here,'" Kejia related.

AND SO SHE BEGAN giving demonstrations of her work. After she turned 13, and especially after she appeared on national television in 1977, the slim, dark-haired schoolgirl gave dozens of demonstrations in China's factories and schools. Exhibitions of her work appeared throughout China dn in Japan. Visiting diplomats received samples of her art as gifts from the Chinese government. And through it all, she was held up to Chinese youth as a model of hard work and discipline.

Fame was not all fun for Kejia, however. In addition to giving demonstrations and answering scores of letters from young and old admirers every week, she had to find time to practice calligraphy and keep up with her schooldwork.

"I had a hard time, actually," she said. "I could not go out."

But those were minor inconveniences. She might have been prevented from studying calligraphy at all.

DURING THE 10 YEARS of China's Cultural Revolution (1966-1976), the ancient arts fell into disfavor. Afraid of persecution by Red Guards, Kejia's famous grandfather burned hundreds of his poems. Her parents were sent to the countryside to work as farmhands, and it was not until they returned to Peking in 1976 that Kejia began to study calligraphy.

"I could have started even earlier," Kejia noted. But mainly, the bad times passed her by.

Today, the young artist sees a bright future for the brush writing in China. Every elementary school student has a calligraphy class once a week.

"The country is very open now," Kejia said. "They encourage people to learn new things and old things, to carry on the art traditions."

Her 88-year-old grandfather, she said, has now been recognized as one of the oldest calligraphers in the country and was chosen to head a national committee on Chinese calligraphy and art.

KEJIA HAS LEARNED to speak English since she arrived here and now is taking courses in English literature and calculus. She said that she might pursue post-graduate studies in architectgure in the United States.

"If I have a degree from here," she said, "I can get a better job when I go back (to China). People (there) think (U.S.) standards are better."

Kejia's brother just received his bachelor's degree at Whittier College, and her cousin, Robert Wang, is a professor of political science there. It is easy for high school graduates to leave China if they have a scholarship and relatives who can support them abroad, she said. But she fully intends to return.

"...Because my parents are there," she explained.

Baking called 'piece of cake'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Don't approach cake baking with fear and trembling," says the author of a new cake cookbook. "It's not painting a masterpiece. Have some fun."

Baking a cake doesn't have to be the mysterious, daunting process that frightens so many otherwise confident cooks, insists Diana Dalsass, author of "The Good Cake Book."

Cake baking can be quick, easy and almost foolproof, once the basic procedures for combining ingredients are understood, she explains. The two key principles to remember are to beat the eggs very thoroughly, and not to overbeat the batter when the dry ingredients are added.

Parents, children need some amount of privacy

Copley News Service

Q. My husband and I differ on the closed vs. open bedroom door policy when there are children in the home.

I believe that all family members, even the youngest ones, need privacy once in a while, whether it's for reading, radio listening or just a little quiet time. That respect for privacy should extend to the parents' night or evening sharing time together.

My husband disagrees. He worries when our bedroom door closes out the children because he wonders what they are doing or whether they are in trouble. Besides, he says, why does there have to be so much secrecy in the family?

Which side are you on?

A. You seem to have built up a pretty good case on your side, especially in your inclusion of all family members in the respect-for-privacy issue.

If the parents plan well (even if both of them are working), there can be time for open communication. After all, it's the quality of our time spent with children, not the amount of it, that's important.

There can also be the agreement that we knock, asking for permission to enter — and aren't offended if the request is denied. Sometimes it is more difficult for parents than for children to accept that approach.

I wonder a little about your husband's apparent conflict between "secrecy" and "privacy." They certainly aren't the same thing.

Q. Our preschooler has a new friend who goes to school with him, and something about the relationship bothers me. Perhaps it shouldn't, but I'd like your reaction to the situation.

The friend is a little black boy who comes from what seems to be a very nice home. Both of his parents are lawyers, and he is the only child.

My son wants to bring him home to play with him, and the boy's mother has called me to request that I invite him because of their having no other children at home or in the neighborhood. Both she and I are aware that the two boys are inseparable in their nursery school.

Two factors bother me. One is that we live in an all-white neighborhood. The other is what the future might hold for these little boys who can't possibly retain a friendship in this kind of world. So, what do you think about this?

A. Honestly, I find it hard to believe that a person who appears to be as sensitive and intelligent as you are would fail to recognize the box into which you've closed yourself.

"This kind of world" to which you referred is increasingly less tolerant of the kind of prejudice you tend to perpetuate.

An easy "out" for you is to invite the youngster over, face neighborhood comments (if they come, and they may not) by referring to a beautiful childhood friendship, and let the future take care of itself. Your assumption that they "can't possibly retain" it may be all wrong — unless you let your own prejudices mess it up.

I'm so reminded of the famous song from "South Pacific" entitled "Carefully Taught" which young Lt. Cable sang related to his South Seas sweetheart. It referred to loving and hating all the people your relatives hate, and having the attitudes dinned in your thin little ear by the time you're 6 or 7 or 8 — or earlier.

Q. When I was in college some years back (the early '60s) there was a lot of talk about teaching machines and programmed learning. I thought they had great promise for children and schools.

However, the subject has kind of faded away. It seems a shame to me, and I wonder what's happened. What has?

A. In some ways the programmed learning-teaching machine movement is bigger than ever these days, but it goes under a different title, related to computers of various types.

Programs of the type prepared twenty years ago were based on taking a subject to be taught, dividing it into its logical elements, and presenting it to children (and adults) in either a machine or published format.

The computer movement has, of course, gone far beyond those promising beginnings. The education community wasn't quite ready for it then, but now it appears to be. These days computer technology seems to be more recognized in our schools for the stimulating contributions it can make to learning.

DEAR ABBY

Judge's drug lecture may set youth straight

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As a captain in our local police department, I have witnessed countless tragedies due to drug-related crimes, suicides, etc.

You ran an extraordinary column entitled "Listen to the Judge" back in July 1972. That column was not only a public service, it might have saved a few young lives.

I hope you will run it again. If you do, I thank you from the bottom of my heart. — CAPT. STANLEY J. JANUS, LACKAWANNA POLICE DEPT., LACKAWANNA, N.Y.

DEAR CAPTAIN JANUS: I agree. It's worth a rerun, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Recently, a 17-year-old Florida boy pleaded guilty to possessing hallucinogenic drugs. He had also been charged with violence toward a Miami Beach police officer.

Judge Alfonso Sepe sentenced the youth to one year in the county stockade and four years' probation. The comments of the judge so impressed me that I ordered the transcript from the court reporter so that I may read it to my own children.

Your column is so widely read I am sending you the "lecture" Judge Sepe gave that boy in the presence of the grieving parents. I hope you will publish it and give it the national forum I think it deserves. — MRS. A.L. CATES, MIAMI, FLA.

DEAR MRS. CATES: Rarely do I devote an entire column to one letter, but I agree, this is worth it. Here it is:

Judge Sepe spoke directly to the youth and said, "Do you know who is going to serve that year? Not you; your mother and father will serve that year.

"That is what's wrong. THEY get sentenced. They get sentenced for a lifetime.

"You serve a year. Your body is in the stockade for a year, but their souls are tormented for a lifetime. Why? Because you are a selfish, spoiled boy, that's why.

"There is no punishment in the world that I could inflict upon you that could in any way compensate for what you are doing to your mother and father. I have not spent 5 cents raising you. I didn't know you from Adam. But your mother and father have put their lives, their hearts, their sweat, their money and everything else they have into bringing you up. And now they have to sit in this courtroom and listen to a total stranger who had nothing to do with your upbringing scold you and put you in jail.

"This is at a time when phony kids your age are yelling, 'You adults have your alcohol, we want our drugs; you have polluted our water and our air, you have polluted this and that,' and all the rest of the garbage that comes out of your mouths.

"Meanwhile, you put yourselves above everybody else. I feel sorry for you.

"I want you to think of this for one year, and the reason why I say it:

"If you are sick, a doctor will treat you and he won't be on drugs. The lawyer who represents you won't be high on drugs, and the people in whose custody you'll be won't be on drugs.

"Your astronauts are not on drugs, and your president is not, and your legislators are not.

"And your engineers who build the bridges that you drive across and the tunnels that you drive through are not on drugs, and those who build the planes that you fly in and the cars that you drive are not.

"Neither are those who build the bathrooms that you stink up with your lousy, rotten drugs.

"None of them have been on drugs, and this is because of people like your mother and father.

"But in the world of the future," Sepe went on, "the same may not be true. Teachers, doctors, lawyers, legislators — products of the new drug-oriented generation — may well be high as kites.

"You won't know whom to send your child to, or whom to trust your life to."

Sepe sighed and closed the case file.

"Let's see what kind of world you leave to your children," he said, "before you talk about the world that we left to ours."

Fashion-watching in Paris

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

PARIS — The best fashion show in Paris is on the streets.

That's fortunate, since it is almost impossible to get in to see the major French designer shows that attract thousands of buyers and the press several times a year. In fact, many of fashion's officialdom — even the store executives who travel to such world fashion centers as Paris and Milan — must share the limited seats available for the runway shows.

But that doesn't keep them from going to Paris, because there is much to learn from the way the French dress on the streets, in boutiques, restaurants, tea rooms, discos and the theater. And from the displays in boutiques, the fashion-conscious get a worthy view of upcoming trends, plus innovative ways of display and decoration.

Nevertheless, fashion presentations are available. The houses of Christian Dior and Chanel put on low-key shows for the public twice weekly, usually weekday afternoons. Pierre Cardin accepts group admissions only, charging a fee that, it says, is tailored to the size of the group (no hints offered). A few other houses invite outsiders to see audio-visual presentations of their designs.

"Les Coulisses de la Mode," a commercial presentation with both audio-visual and live models, has been temporarily discontinued. However, it would be worth checking with that organization before your trip to see if these shows have been revived. (The most recent price quoted is $24 for a two-hour show with cocktail; $40 for the show with lunch.)

To insure your best chance of seeing a Paris fashion show:

— Write in advance: A dignified note on engraved stationery or formal business stationery and the mention of a swanky Paris hotel as your place of sojourn will boost your chances.

— Check with the concierge of your hotel: Theoretically, the concierge will be current on which houses permit tourists to their showings. Unsurprisingly, the fancier hotels (and their concierges) have the most success in getting their guests into shows.

— Call the fashion houses directly: The telephone book with listings by professions has fashion houses listed under "couture," "couture creation" and "couture (haute)." Learn to pronounce the name of the designer before you dial the number — no one appreciates having his or her name mispronounced, particularly French designers and their coterie. Polish up your best French grammar and most formal idioms — they count with the French — and ask for the attache de presse (the press office deals with all public matters). Sound official, dignified and rich.

Whether or not you get into a fashion show, just being conscious of the people around you, even on the metro or walking through a museum, will give you lots of ideas about clothes — not only what's new, but more stylish ways to wear what you already have, fresh color combinations, new hairstyles, makeup trends and the like.

Paris fashion-watching is at it's best at:

— La Coupole (102 Boulevard Montparnasse 75014): A favorite hangout of the fashion and literary crowd, who usually arrive after 11 p.m.

— Le Relais Plaza Grill (31 Avenue Montaigne 75008): The superdeluxe coffee shop in the Hotel Plaza Athenee (10 asparagus in season for $18 at last count). Emanual Ungaro, whose boutique is across the street, occasionally lunches here, and so do the French and the tourist crowds. (If you can't afford the lunch tab, check out the lobby. The crowd mix is likely to include one Hollywood celebrity, 12 rich Texans, two French royalty and 16 Arabs.)

— Cafe des Deux Magot and Cafe de Flore (just off Place St.-Germain des Pres): Bundle up and sit outside to watch the passing show of young Parisians on the Left Bank. Saturday afternoon is the best show.

— Brasserie Lipp (151 Boulevard Saint Germain 75006): Good international mix of the professional fashion world and a clientele that is well dressed.

— Carette (4 Place du Trocadero 75016): Tea room in the Trocadero famous for chocolate macaroons and a well dressed crowd.

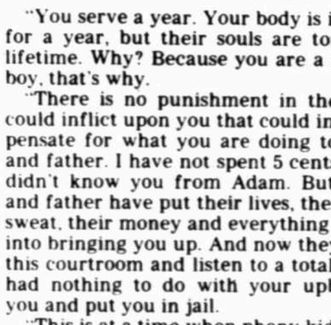

— Angelina (the old Maison Ruplemayer, 226 rue de Rivoli 75001): A famous tea room, to which the lovely, elegant older women of Paris come daily — as do some young women.

— Any Japanese restaurant: The current fad in Paris, a favorite of the young because the food is fresh, attractively presented and you can eat lunch rather speedily if you want.

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WHITTIER, Calif. — It takes most artists the better part of a lifetime to achieve fame in their profession. Some die in oblivion. Others — a fortunate few — reach the top in their youth.

Like Xiao Kejia.

By the age of 13, Kejia (her faimly name is Xiao) had mastered the art of Chinese calligraphy, or brush-writing, and was famous throughout China for her bold and expressive style. Today, the 19-year-old Whittier College sophomore is one of China's master calligraphers — a distinction she shares with two dozen men in their 70s and 80s.

The 2,000-year-old art of calligraphy is highly esteemed in China, and few people of any age ever master its most advanced forms.

Kejia says, however, that calligraphy as a career "wouldn't be that interesting."

"Then I would have to write it," she said. "It wouldn't be a hobby anymore."

Her famous hobby, aside, the talented young artist is a typical college sophomore trying to decide on a major. Kejia ("Kathy" to her American friends) attends classes, works part time in the cafeteria and the library, and squeezes in four hours of study a day.

KEJIA TEACHES a class in beginning calligraphy to five Whittier students, and still finds time to practice herself.

"Before, my father wrote to me and said, 'Practice every day.' Now he knows I'm too busy. He says, 'Practice every week. Don't forget.'"

The modest artist talks a lot about her family. Like most calligraphers, she learned the art at home. Her grandfather is a Chinese calligrapher and poet and often looked at her work. When she was 9 years old, her novelist father sat down with her to practice for more than two hours after dinner every night.

"He spent all his (free) time with me," she said, "and he was very, very strict."

Kejia spent years copying the ancient masterpieces of calligraphy to learn different styles and forms of the art. She also memorized a poem a day. At the beginning, she said, she was so young that she didn't pay any attention" to the meaning of the many poems her father picked out for her to copy.

Later, she chose her own poems, especially writing on nature and friendship. Eventually, she took up the study of the great 4th-century calligrapher, Wang Hsi-chih, who is to calligraphy what Shakespeare is to theater.

"The most I learned," she said, "the more I collected their (the ancient masters') good strokes together and made my own style. That's why my writing does not look like anybody else's."

KEJIA SPECIALIZES in cursive calligraphy. The most advanced style of brush writing, it is so personalized and merged with art that only a Chinese calligrapher can actually read the characters.

Kejia's work delights even the untrained Western eye. The characters, each of them a word, are more than a foot high; and the lines are at once graceful and bold.

"The strokes," she explained, "must have bones. Even the light strokes do not float. They are engraved in the paper. You can see the strength."

Kejia writes on rice paper with a thick brush made from the tip of a weasel's tail, dipped in black ink and held straight up and down. She draws the characters with a sure hand, obviously in command of the twists and turns the brush makes. She is ambidextrous and switches hands or uses left and right simultaneously "for fun" or when she is tired. She varies her strokes.

"It depends on the characters," she said. "Some characters I use delicate strokes for, and some I want to write in a large hand."

When Kejia's friends first took samples of her art to other Chinese artists, the artists did not believe a teen-ager could show so much skill.

"They said, 'Ask her to come over here,'" Kejia related.

AND SO SHE BEGAN giving demonstrations of her work. After she turned 13, and especially after she appeared on national television in 1977, the slim, dark-haired schoolgirl gave dozens of demonstrations in China's factories and schools. Exhibitions of her work appeared throughout China dn in Japan. Visiting diplomats received samples of her art as gifts from the Chinese government. And through it all, she was held up to Chinese youth as a model of hard work and discipline.

Fame was not all fun for Kejia, however. In addition to giving demonstrations and answering scores of letters from young and old admirers every week, she had to find time to practice calligraphy and keep up with her schooldwork.

"I had a hard time, actually," she said. "I could not go out."

But those were minor inconveniences. She might have been prevented from studying calligraphy at all.

DURING THE 10 YEARS of China's Cultural Revolution (1966-1976), the ancient arts fell into disfavor. Afraid of persecution by Red Guards, Kejia's famous grandfather burned hundreds of his poems. Her parents were sent to the countryside to work as farmhands, and it was not until they returned to Peking in 1976 that Kejia began to study calligraphy.

"I could have started even earlier," Kejia noted. But mainly, the bad times passed her by.

Today, the young artist sees a bright future for the brush writing in China. Every elementary school student has a calligraphy class once a week.

"The country is very open now," Kejia said. "They encourage people to learn new things and old things, to carry on the art traditions."

Her 88-year-old grandfather, she said, has now been recognized as one of the oldest calligraphers in the country and was chosen to head a national committee on Chinese calligraphy and art.

KEJIA HAS LEARNED to speak English since she arrived here and now is taking courses in English literature and calculus. She said that she might pursue post-graduate studies in architectgure in the United States.

"If I have a degree from here," she said, "I can get a better job when I go back (to China). People (there) think (U.S.) standards are better."

Kejia's brother just received his bachelor's degree at Whittier College, and her cousin, Robert Wang, is a professor of political science there. It is easy for high school graduates to leave China if they have a scholarship and relatives who can support them abroad, she said. But she fully intends to return.

"...Because my parents are there," she explained.

Baking called 'piece of cake'

NEW YORK (AP) — "Don't approach cake baking with fear and trembling," says the author of a new cake cookbook. "It's not painting a masterpiece. Have some fun."

Baking a cake doesn't have to be the mysterious, daunting process that frightens so many otherwise confident cooks, insists Diana Dalsass, author of "The Good Cake Book."

Cake baking can be quick, easy and almost foolproof, once the basic procedures for combining ingredients are understood, she explains. The two key principles to remember are to beat the eggs very thoroughly, and not to overbeat the batter when the dry ingredients are added.

Parents, children need some amount of privacy

Copley News Service

Q. My husband and I differ on the closed vs. open bedroom door policy when there are children in the home.

I believe that all family members, even the youngest ones, need privacy once in a while, whether it's for reading, radio listening or just a little quiet time. That respect for privacy should extend to the parents' night or evening sharing time together.

My husband disagrees. He worries when our bedroom door closes out the children because he wonders what they are doing or whether they are in trouble. Besides, he says, why does there have to be so much secrecy in the family?

Benefits lure workers to Siberia

NERYUNGRI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A cooperative apartment in the warm Crimea where the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev used to summer, a Bulgarian-made car, and vacations to Cuba are all within the reach of construction worker Anatoly Platonoyov.

Seven years ago, Platonoyov packed up his wife and year-old daughter and said goodbye to cosmopolitan Leningrad. He is one of the bolder examples of the socialist boomer created by the Kremlin in its push to dot eastern Siberia with industrial complexes.

The 40-year-old Platonoyov, attracted by the challenge and promise of high wages and bonuses, was among the first wave of pioneers to arrive in Neryungri, where the temperature can dip to 58 below zero Fahrenheit. He was in the vanguard of those just beginning to scratch the fragile permafrost in what was once a small settlement.

Now, an open pit coal mine that will be the Soviet Union's largest, yielding 13 million tons a year by 1985, is in operation. A huge coal dressing plant and a power plant to supply a planned corridor of metallurgical complexes are under construction.

The work is hard and living conditions tough for most of the 40,000 workers now on the project.

It's more than 10 hours to Moscow by plane. Housing is utilitarian, and when workers can't idle away spare time sitting outdoors or going to the movies, the barracks-like existence can be depressing.

Then why come?

"It's like alpinists," said Platonoyov. "They climb because it is a challenge. Of course the best advantage of working here is accumulating money."

He has saved 3,000 rubles — $4,200 — in the seven years here. He earns between 700 and 900 rubles a month, the wages geared to output, and his wife makes 400 to 500 rubles as a painter. Combined, they make more than seven times the average Soviet monthly wage (177 rubles or about $250). And there are bonuses for each year they stay on.

"I'm not trying to save a lot," he says. "I am much more interested in spending the money."

Platonoyov has vacationed in Cuba, and in July he'll go to Bulgaria. He is entitled to special coupons allowing him to buy a Bulgarian car, and because his 120-man construction team won the Socialist Emulation Award, they were bumped ahead on the two- to three-year waiting list for an apartment.

Every three years, the state pays his round-trip air fare to anywhere in the Soviet Union for a vacation, which at 42 days each year is longer than the average Soviet worker's month off.

Because such benefits accrue with longevity, Platonoyov says, the workforce is stabilizing.

"The first ones who came here were disposed to grabbing as much money as they could land, then leaving," he said. "Now it's a great rarity if they quit."

A fellow resident of Leningrad, excavator Vladimir Ilyich Zakharov, arrived eight months ago.

"I was sick of the big city," he says. "It is a noisy place, and now that I am getting advanced in age (48), I would like to be able to get a country home."

His 350-ruble monthly salary in Leningrad has been almost doubled. He makes 650 rubles now, and while high earnings were an incentive, Zakharov says money alone did not draw him to Neryungri.

"My real motive in coming was to bring my eldest son (who is 25 years old)," he says. "The big city spoils young people. They need to know how to walk around in the forest, having only dry bread, no sausages, no liquor. They've grown accustomed to the easy and lazy life."

Diplomats see little result from aid

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Diplomats from Western nations that have poured billions of dollars worth of aid into impoverished Tanzania over the past two decades say they see little result from it.

They also say the donor nations must share in the blame for it.

"There is a real sense of donor fatigue setting in," said one senior diplomat, who like other envoys interviewed on the subject declined to be identified by name or nationality because of the sensitivity of the jobs.

The diplomats and aid officials said much of the aid grants and low-interest loans have been wasted and that the country is worse off now than it was a decade ago.

This east African nation, which became independent from Britain in 1961 and charted a socialist course in 1967, receives more aid per capita than any other country in Africa — about $600 million a year for a population of 18 million.

The foreign officials said much of the aid has been wasted because of shoddy planning of projects by the donor countries and local bureaucrats; mismanagement, bad maintenance, pilferage, corruption, and an emphasis on huge industrial projects needing expensive raw materials and sophisticated technology from abroad.

The landscape of Tanzania, bigger than Texas and Oklahoma combined, has become littered with projects that show hardly any sign of paying off:

— A huge cement plant at Mbeya in southern Tanzania, completed nearly three years ago with aid money from Sweden, has yet to produce a bag of cement — chronically in short supply — because there is not enough electricity to power the plant.

— The National Milling Corp. used Canadian government financing to set up a big bakery in Dar es Salaam in the 1970s to supply this capital of more than a million people with 60,000 loaves of bread a day.

The state-owned enterprise turned out bread at subsidized prices and drove small bakers out of business. Now it lacks flour, yeast, baking powder and spare parts for broken-down equipment and is lucky to produce 20,000 loaves a day. Bread is in very short supply.

— The National Bicycle Co. in Dar es Salaam, incorporated Dec. 31, 1974, under a collaboration agreement with Atlas Cycle Industries of India, hasn't made a bicycle in about six months and its 400 employees are idle.

Twenty-six arrested at cock fight

DAVILLA, Texas (AP) — Dauthet Bowser has been raising fighting cocks for 60 years but shipping them off to Louisiana for battle was so expensive and time-consuming that he decided to stage his own.

The result was the arrest of 26 men at his cock fight last Sunday. Bowser, 73, and another man were charged with promoting the fight.

In an interview, Bowser said he usually sells the roosters to other cock-fighting fans or takes them to Louisiana, where, he claimed, cock fighting is legal.

But a spokesman for the Louisiana State Police said cock fighting is illegal throughout Louisiana.

When pressed to name the town where he takes his roosters, Bowser said he can't remember its name. He said it's on Interstate 10, just across the Texas line.

DAVILLA, population 72, is on FM 430 and FM 487, about 50 miles northwest of Bryan.

The Milam County sheriff's office got an anonymous tip that a cock fight was taking place and sent two deputies to break up the event.

When the deputies arrived, a spokesman for the sheriff's office said, two roosters were fighting to the death. In the rules of cock fighting, the fight goes on until one of the chickens is dead.

The sheriff's spokesman said the spectators were standing in a circle in a flat, muddy area between Bowser's chicken pens.

All 26 spectators were arrested without incident, authorities said.

Since the fight was on Bowser's property, he was charged with promotion of gambling.

ANOTHER MAN, Bernardo F. Avila of Buckholts, was arrested on a charge of cruelty to animals. The other participants were arrested on charges of gambling.

Sheriff Leroy Broadus said his deputies seized no money or chickens. Each of the 24 paid a $61 fine and was released from jail Sunday, Broadus said.

Avila had to put up $500 bail, but Bowser had to post $1,000 bail before he could be released.

AP Laserphoto

Dauthet Bowser stands in an opening between the rows of chicken cages that house his fighting roosters, near the spot that twenty-six men were arrested Sunday. Twenty-four men were charged with gambling and fined $61, another was charged with cruelty to animals and had to post $500 bail. Bowser was charged with promoting the fight and had to post $1,000 bail before he was released. Bowser, 73, said Monday after the arrests, that he's been raising fighting cocks for 60 years.

That makes him mad, he said.

"I don't understand how they come up with this 'promotion of gambling' thing," he said Monday. "We weren't out there to gamble. We were out there for the sport."

Bowser said the bets being made at Sunday's fight were small — $5 or $10 total for the winner.

"IT WASN'T enough money to make it worth it for us to be out there," Bowser said. "If it was just for the money, why, none of us would be out there. We just do it for the enjoyment of it. It's a sport, like horse racing or football."

But unlike those sports, cock fighting involves pitting two animals against each other and having them fight until one is dead. It's illegal in Texas, but Bowser doesn't believe it's cruel.

"It's what they're bred to do," he said.

"You get two roosters together (outside the cock fighting ring) and they'll naturally fight. But in the sport, it's a fair fight. At least, they have a chance — they have to be within two ounces of each other, or it's no match. It's not like raising them and killing them for food, where they just go down the line and chop, chop, chop."

His main interest in the sport, Bowser said, is in raising the fierce birds. He said he doesn't fight the chickens, but sells them to other fighters.

"I TAKE them to other states, where it (cock fighting) is legal, and I sell them," he said.

"A good cock can bring in $75 to $100."

However, the illegality of the sport doesn't always stand in its fans' way in Louisiana or in some parts of Texas.

A Louisiana trooper said arrests are made "fairly often" for cock fighting.

The Texas Department of Public Safety has made no recent arrests in East Central Texas for cock fighting, said David Wells, DPS public information officer in Austin.

Brazos County sheriff's Deputy Charlie Owen said the sheriff's office has not received any reports of cock fighting in the county.

BUT BROADUS said he'd heard that cock fighting is popular in the western part of his county. Around Davilla, Bowser said, cock fighting has been popular for years, but Sunday's fight was the first in the area in about two years.

Broadus said the fight two years ago was also broken up, leading to the arrest of several men. Those arrests stopped cock fighting for a while near Davilla, but Bowser said he got tired of having to go out of state to enjoy the sport.

"Sure, I know it's illegal," he said. "But it's my land, and I wanted to have a little fight with a few of the people around here. Nothing big, just a little sport."

But his arrest taught him a lesson, Bowser said.

"I'm not doing this any more," he said. "I'm selling my cocks and letting it go. I'm too old for this."

Antique ring returned

GARLAND (AP) — A high school senior who said her antique diamond ring was stolen from an art class got the heirloom back through the mail — with a written apology from the thief.

The $6,000 ring vanished March 15 after Kathy Jerome, 17, set it on a sink in an art class at Lakeview Centennial High School in this Dallas suburb. For more than a week, she and her classmates covered the school with posters which read, "Please return the ring. No questions asked."

On Wednesday, her mother opened an envelope that had come in the mail. Out popped the ring and an unsigned note saying, "I'm so sorry." The envelope bore no return address.

"It was unbelievable that someone returned it," Ms. Jerome said. "I ran around telling everyone it was back."

The ring had belonged to her great-great-grandmother, she said.

Craddick introduces legislation specifying Air Control Board fees

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, has introduced legislation specifying the amount which may be charged by the Air Control Board for permit fees.

HB 1584 would amend the Texas Clean Air Act, which authorizes the TACB to set fees for pollution-emitting facilities, to set a fee "not to exceed $200 for each intended point of emission," and providing that such fees are to be "a one-time charge and may not be applied on a recurring basis."

The bill also provides that fees may not be charged for operating permits or for exemptions to construction permits.

Current TACB fees apply to new construction under a formula adopted by the board.

Texas farmers choose PIK

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Most Texas farmers have agreed to go along with a new "payment in kind" program of the federal government that will pay them in surplus commodities in exchange for holding a portion of their cropland out of production.

The involvement across the state in the PIK program astounded many agricultural leaders, a Texas A&M economist said earlier this week.

The result, said Dr. Ron Knutson, an economist in marketing and policy with Agricultural Extension Service, should be stronger farm prices.

The program should get rid of surplus stocks of commodities that have plagued the marketplace for the past several years, Knutson said.

"We have the potential for a substantial drawdown in surplus stocks of farm commodities due to the large number of farmers signing up for PIK," Knutson added.

President Reagan, in proposing the program, said the reduced surpluses combined with lower 1983 production, should give farmers the higher farm prices they have been demanding.

Nationwide, farmers have signed contracts to take 82.3 million acres out of production under the federal programs, including the Reagan administration's payment-in-kind program, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced Tuesday.

In Texas, more than 60 percent of Texas' 200,000 farmers have pledged to remove a total of about 9 million acres from production, the USDA said. That's more than a tenth of the production being held back nationwide, officials said.

Farm leaders say they didn't expect the PIK program to catch on like it has.

"The participation has surprised everybody," said Plano farmer William Wells. "We haven't had anything like this before. I think if you can get the farmer in better shape economically, it will help everybody dealing in agriculture."

Bob Poteet, executive vice president of the Texas Cotton Association, said the PIK program can help producers as well as reducing the nationwide surplus.

"But there is an underlying problem — that's that the reduction in supply may stimulate production abroad and compete even further with our growers," he added.

Mike Moeller, a Guadalupe County wheat farmer who is president of the Texas Farmers Union, said he hoped the program "won't be a one-shot deal."

Implantation review begins

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — As messages of sympathy poured in from around the world for the family of Barney Clark, his doctors said a review board is considering new guidelines to allow artificial heart surgery for patients in better health.

Other cardiac surgeons on Thursday praised the experiment with the world's first permanent artificial heart, but doubts were repeated that the device would ever replace conventional heart transplants.

Clark's doctors said another implant was possible within months, but that a patient in better health than Clark going into the surgery would have an improved chance of survival.

President Reagan telephoned Clark's wife, Una Loy, on Thursday and expressed his "deepest sympathy," a White House spokesman said. Reagan called Clark "a brave and courageous man."

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, saying the 62-year-old retired dentist "distinguished himself as one of the preeminent pioneers of science," ordered the Capitol flag to remain at half-staff until Clark's funeral Tuesday near his home in suburban Seattle.

"Our phone has continued to simply ring off the hook," said John Dwan, spokesman for the University of Utah Medical Center. Expressions of sympathy after Clark's death Wednesday night came from as far as Australia, England, Brazil and Japan, he said.

At a news conference Thursday, Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who gave Clark his new heart Dec. 2, described the difficult hours after Clark's brain ceased functioning and before the air-driven heart was shut off at 10:02 p.m. Wednesday, after pumping for 112 days.

Clark entered "a downward spiral" in which several organs failed almost simultaneously, DeVries said. The cause of death was given as "circulatory collapse secondary to multiple organ failure."

"It became obvious at the very end that he was neurologically not responsive to any stimulus we gave him," he said, and Clark's blood pressure could no longer support life. "The artificial heart at autopsy looked as good as the day it was put in," DeVries said.

Clark's doctors and his relatives said they hoped future artificial heart patients would be in better physical condition before surgery.

Members of the university's Institutional Review Board, which must approve all research involving human beings, "told me they are seriously considering loosening or liberalizing the pathological definition of a suitable candidate," said Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president for health sciences.

Revised guidelines would require approval of federal government.

Describing the final moments of Clark's life, DeVries said that after talking with Mrs. Clark, he pronounced the patient dead and "this courageous man's heart was turned off." He would not say who turned off the heart.

"I cried a little and it's not all out yet," said heart inventor Dr. Robert Jarvik, who was in Clark's room at the time.

"I would like to tell these doctors that they must not give up," said Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African surgeon who first transplanted a human heart. That first transplant patient died 18 days after surgery, but the longest survivor has lived 13 years.

Houston heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley said Clark's case contributed greatly to medical understanding of heart patient care. But he said the quality of life with the mechanical device "is not acceptable" because the patient is tied to a compressor by hoses and because of the physical impact inside the chest from the mechanical closure of heart valves.

Minutes before her husband's death, Mrs. Clark stood by in his room as Dr. Ross Woolley of the school's Institutional Review Board gave the Mormon patient a church blessing. She then bent over, kissed his cheek and left.

The medical team "had no second thoughts or bad feelings about the termination of this man's existence," he said.

Clark's kidneys had been weak as a result of the cardiomyopathy that had destroyed his natural heart. They finally shut down, unable to cleanse his blood.

Clark lost the acid-base regulation in his body. His lungs, weakened by emphysema, failed after that. His blood vessels became dilated and flaccid, no longer functioning as pipelines to carry oxygen to the cells of the body. Then the brain failed.

Finally, the heart-drive system was turned off.

Girl goes home without transplant

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sharon Stohler, an 11-year-old Anderson girl who traveled to Texas seeking a new heart, arrived home with doctors' orders not to chase her brothers.

Her mother, Barbara Stohler, said she received no specific instructions from doctors at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston for her daughter's care.

"The doctors did say, however, that she could not chase her brothers," Mrs. Stohler said Thursday night at Indianapolis International Airport shortly after she and her husband, David, returned with Sharon from Houston.

Sharon arrived at the Texas Children's Hospital on March 9 and underwent a series of tests to determine whether a heart transplant was appropriate.

Doctors at Riley Children's Hospital in Indianapolis said she suffered from degenerative heart disease and probably would die in less than a year without a transplant.

The Houston doctors decided against immediate transplant surgery and began treating Sharon with a drug to control the inflammation of her heart muscles.

Doctors at Riley hospital will monitor her condition, taking weekly blood tests and giving her a checkup in 10 days.

Rock singer Osbourne released from hospital, resuming tour

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Rock singer Ozzy Osbourne, whose controversial act has included biting off the head of a bat, was released from a hospital after treatment for a respiratory infection, stress and fatigue, a spokesman said.

Osbourne, who formerly played in the British rock band Black Sabbath, was stricken about 30 minutes before his show was to end Tuesday night at the Metro Centre.

He was carried off the stage on a stretcher and taken to Swedish-American hospital.

Osbourne

Osbourne spokesman Kevin Kennedy said the rock singer, discharged from the hospital Thursday, now is in good condition and will continue a concert tour in Mount Pleasant, Mich., Saturday night. A concert Wednesday night in Green Bay, Wis., was canceled.

Kennedy said the performer had been fighting a respiratory infection for several weeks.

NEW YORK (AP) — An 18-inch "Princess Grace" doll, clad in a wedding dress and advertised as being "in memory of America's fairy-tale princess," has irked Monaco's Prince Rainier, who filed suit to stop the advertising and sale of the doll.

The prince filed suit in U.S. District Court on behalf of himself, his late wife, Princess Grace, and the royal couple's children, Prince Albert and Princesses Caroline and Stephanie. The suit also seeks to stop advertising and sale of the "Prince Ranier" doll.

Named as defendants were Reeves International Inc. and Dollspart Supply Co., both of New York City.

The complaint said the firms were asked to cease advertising and marketing the dolls last month "since neither the late Princess Grace nor plaintiffs have ever given defendants permission to manufacture or sell these dolls."

Telephone calls to both companies for comment went unanswered Thursday night.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Civil rights leader Rev. Ralph Abernathy says he is "very glad to be alive" after undergoing successful surgery to bypass a blocked artery in his brain.

"I owe it all to God and am eternally grateful to Dr. (Mel) Epstein and Johns Hopkins Hospital," Abernathy said at a news conference after his release from the hospital on Thursday.

Abernathy had bypass surgery March 9 to relieve a blocked artery in his brain. In January he suffered a mild stroke which had slurred his speech. The surgery was aimed at preventing another stroke, doctors said.

Abernathy

Epstein, who performed the surgery, said he was optimistic that Abernathy will recovery fully.

Abernathy is president emeritus of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and was a top aide to Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. during the civil rights movement in the 1960s. Abernathy ran the SCLC for nine years after King's death, and is now pastor of the 1,200-member West Hunter Baptist Church in Atlanta.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Film producer Steven Spielberg had predicted a spate of lawsuits against "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," even before the screenplay was completed, the woman who wrote the film says.

"When I was writing 'E.T.,' Steven turned to me during a story conference one afternoon and said, 'How many people do you think will sue us when this comes out?' We both laughed and started making up stories," said screenwriter Melissa Mathison.

A $750 million lawsuit was filed against Universal Studios, Spielberg, Ms. Mathison and others last August, with plaintiff Lisa Litchfield saying her one-act play, "Lokey from Maldemar," was the basis for the "E.T." story.

Several other writers later said the script was theirs, but did not file suit.

Most recently, Indian director Satyajit Ray joined the fray. Ray said scenes from the "E.T." script were similar to scenes from his unfilmed screenplay "The Alien."

'Debbie' won't do Princeton

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Be it resolved: That an X-rated movie shall not fill Princeton University's ivory towers with erotic images this Saturday night.

Princeton's American Whig Cliosophic Society — which claims to be the largest and oldest literary and debating group in the world — called off its showing of "Debbie Does Dallas," a skin flick about a concupiscent cheerleader, after some students objected.

To reach the decision, the society argued the merits of showing X-rated films at Princeton in a debate before about 60 students Wednesday night. In the end, they voted 31-29 for a non-binding resolution that pornographic films should not be shown by student organizations at the university, Landis said.

"It was canceled after reconsideration of the issues involved," said Marc Landis, one of the society's 1,400 members. "There was question whether it was a desirable film to bring to campus. There were considerations that it might be objectionable to large segments of the community."

"The most offensive thing is that it degrades, humiliates and objectifies human sexuality and particularly women," said Shelley Rigger, a member of the Princeton's Women's Center, which has opposed showing the movie about a woman who wants to be a cheerleader for the Dallas Cowboys football team.

"Pornography presents a distorted vision of what human sexuality is about," Ms. Rigger said, adding that argument over the movie was not an issue of freedom of speech.

"Every time they pick a film, they're exercising their personal choice. When they decide not to show it, it's no different than if they decided not to show 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' because people didn't want to see it," she said.

"We're not advocating censorship. Censorship comes down from a figure of authority," she said.

Princeton University has no policy on organizations sponsoring the showing of X-rated movies, said university spokeswoman Dorothy Lupichuk.

In retaliation to the planned showing of "Debbie," the Women's Center showed an anti-pornography film, "Not a Love Story," Tuesday night.

But it was the debate that changed the minds of the society members who had decided in January to show the film.

"That certainly represented to us that we were in danger of alienating a large segment of the university community," said Landis. "We're not showing films just to offend people."

Ballet founder steps down

BOSTON (AP) — E. Virginia Williams, founder of the Boston Ballet, will step down as its joint artistic director, a position she shared with French ballerina Violet Verdy, the company announced.

"Miss Williams and Miss Verdy have been working together for the artistic continuity of the Boston Ballet, and they feel that this is the time to make a change in titles," Joseph T. McCullen Jr., the ballet board chairman, said in a statement Thursday.

Miss Williams will become artistic adviser and Miss Verdy will continue as artistic director, said Boston Ballet President Joel Garrick.

IN RE:
POST PETROLEUM CO., INC.
Debtor.
No. BK-82-01889
ORDER REQUIRING ALL PARTIES IN INTEREST TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM, ESTABLISHING DATE BARRING FURTHER FILING OF CLAIMS

Now on this 10th day of March, 1983, there came on for hearing before me the Application of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., debtor in possession, seeking an Order of this Court requiring all creditors to file Proofs of Claim in this action. In support of said Application, debtor in possession represented that the Schedules filed must be verified prior to submission of a Plan of Reorganization or Disclosure Statement. The Court further finds that such Order is appropriate under rules of this Court and the United States Bankruptcy Code.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED BY THE COURT that all creditors or parties having claims against the estate of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., debtor herein, file Proofs of Claim with the Office of the United States Bankruptcy Court Clerk, Seventh Floor, 201 Dean A. McGee Avenue, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73102; and contemporaneously mail a copy of such Proof of Claim form, with all supporting documentation to the offices of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., Tenth Floor, Colcord Building, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73102 to the attention of Mr. Dick Hunt.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all claimants attach to their Proofs of Claim supporting documentation as to the debt upon which claim is based, and in the case of creditors performing services or delivering materials to specific well sites of the debtor, that these creditors reference the specific well sites where such work was performed or material delivered. Any creditor asserting a secured position, whether by way of agreement or statutory lien must attach documentation upon which they rely in asserting a priority or security position and in the case of Mechanic's and Materialmen's Liens, attach to their Proof of Claim a copy of the filed Lien Statement.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all claimats must file their Proofs of Claim, delivering copies thereof to the offices of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., as noted herein, on or before the 12th day of April, 1983. PARTIES FAILING TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM AS HEREIN DECREED SHALL BE THEREAFTER BARRED FROM ASSERTING ANY CLAIMS OF WHATSOEVER KIND OR NATURE AGAINST THE DEBTOR ESTATE OR ITS PROPERTY.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Office of the Court Clerk of the United States Bankruptcy Court issue notice of this Order to all parties in interest herein and, upon request of any parties in interest, provide a Proof of Claim form.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the debtor in possession is hereby ordered to publish this Order in its entirety for three consecutive days in the Journal Record of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and such other newspapers in such other locations as it shall deem proper.

Implantation review begins

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — As messages of sympathy poured in from around the world for the family of Barney Clark, his doctors said a review board is considering new guidelines to allow artificial heart surgery for patients in better health.

Other cardiac surgeons on Thursday praised the experiment with the world's first permanent artificial heart, but doubts were repeated that the device would ever replace conventional heart transplants.

Clark's doctors said another implant was possible within months, but that a patient in better health than Clark going into the surgery would have an improved chance of survival.

President Reagan telephoned Clark's wife, Una Loy, on Thursday and expressed his "deepest sympathy," a White House spokesman said. Reagan called Clark "a brave and courageous man."

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, saying the 62-year-old retired dentist "distinguished himself as one of the preeminent pioneers of science," ordered the Capitol flag to remain at half-staff until Clark's funeral Tuesday near his home in suburban Seattle.

"Our phone has continued to simply ring off the hook," said John Dwan, spokesman for the University of Utah Medical Center. Expressions of sympathy after Clark's death Wednesday night came from as far as Australia, England, Brazil and Japan, he said.

At a news conference Thursday, Dr. William DeVries, the surgeon who gave Clark his new heart Dec. 2, described the difficult hours after Clark's brain ceased functioning and before the air-driven heart was shut off at 10:02 p.m. Wednesday, after pumping for 112 days.

Clark entered "a downward spiral" in which several organs failed almost simultaneously, DeVries said. The cause of death was given as "circulatory collapse secondary to multiple organ failure."

"It became obvious at the very end that he was neurologically not responsive to any stimulus we gave him," he said, and Clark's blood pressure could no longer support life. "The artificial heart at autopsy looked as good as the day it was put in," DeVries said.

Clark's doctors and his relatives said they hoped future artificial heart patients would be in better physical condition before surgery.

Members of the university's Institutional Review Board, which must approve all research involving human beings, "told me they are seriously considering loosening or liberalizing the pathological definition of a suitable candidate," said Dr. Chase Peterson, university vice president for health sciences.

Revised guidelines would require approval of federal government.

Describing the final moments of Clark's life, DeVries said that after talking with Mrs. Clark, he pronounced the patient dead and "this courageous man's heart was turned off." He would not say who turned off the heart.

"I cried a little and it's not all out yet," said heart inventor Dr. Robert Jarvik, who was in Clark's room at the time.

"I would like to tell these doctors that they must not give up," said Dr. Christiaan Barnard, the South African surgeon who first transplanted a human heart. That first transplant patient died 18 days after surgery, but the longest survivor has lived 13 years.

Houston heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley said Clark's case contributed greatly to medical understanding of heart patient care. But he said the quality of life with the mechanical device "is not acceptable" because the patient is tied to a compressor by hoses and because of the physical impact inside the chest from the mechanical closure of heart valves.

Minutes before her husband's death, Mrs. Clark stood by in his room as Dr. Ross Woolley of the school's Institutional Review Board gave the Mormon patient a church blessing. She then bent over, kissed his cheek and left.

The medical team "had no second thoughts or bad feelings about the termination of this man's existence," he said.

Clark's kidneys had been weak as a result of the cardiomyopathy that had destroyed his natural heart. They finally shut down, unable to cleanse his blood.

Clark lost the acid-base regulation in his body. His lungs, weakened by emphysema, failed after that. His blood vessels became dilated and flaccid, no longer functioning as pipelines to carry oxygen to the cells of the body. Then the brain failed.

Finally, the heart-drive system was turned off.

Girl goes home without transplant

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sharon Stohler, an 11-year-old Anderson girl who traveled to Texas seeking a new heart, arrived home with doctors' orders not to chase her brothers.

Her mother, Barbara Stohler, said she received no specific instructions from doctors at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston for her daughter's care.

"The doctors did say, however, that she could not chase her brothers," Mrs. Stohler said Thursday night at Indianapolis International Airport shortly after she and her husband, David, returned with Sharon from Houston.

Sharon arrived at the Texas Children's Hospital on March 9 and underwent a series of tests to determine whether a heart transplant was appropriate.

Doctors at Riley Children's Hospital in Indianapolis said she suffered from degenerative heart disease and probably would die in less than a year without a transplant.

The Houston doctors decided against immediate transplant surgery and began treating Sharon with a drug to control the inflammation of her heart muscles.

Doctors at Riley hospital will monitor her condition, taking weekly blood tests and giving her a checkup in 10 days.

Rock singer Osbourne released from hospital, resuming tour

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Rock singer Ozzy Osbourne, whose controversial act has included biting off the head of a bat, was released from a hospital after treatment for a respiratory infection, stress and fatigue, a spokesman said.

Osbourne, who formerly played in the British rock band Black Sabbath, was stricken about 30 minutes before his show was to end Tuesday night at the Metro Centre.

He was carried off the stage on a stretcher and taken to Swedish-American hospital.

Osbourne

Osbourne spokesman Kevin Kennedy said the rock singer, discharged from the hospital Thursday, now is in good condition and will continue a concert tour in Mount Pleasant, Mich., Saturday night. A concert Wednesday night in Green Bay, Wis., was canceled.

Kennedy said the performer had been fighting a respiratory infection for several weeks.

NEW YORK (AP) — An 18-inch "Princess Grace" doll, clad in a wedding dress and advertised as being "in memory of America's fairy-tale princess," has irked Monaco's Prince Rainier, who filed suit to stop the advertising and sale of the doll.

The prince filed suit in U.S. District Court on behalf of himself, his late wife, Princess Grace, and the royal couple's children, Prince Albert and Princesses Caroline and Stephanie. The suit also seeks to stop advertising and sale of the "Prince Ranier" doll.

Named as defendants were Reeves International Inc. and Dollspart Supply Co., both of New York City.

The complaint said the firms were asked to cease advertising and marketing the dolls last month "since neither the late Princess Grace nor plaintiffs have ever given defendants permission to manufacture or sell these dolls."

Telephone calls to both companies for comment went unanswered Thursday night.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Civil rights leader Rev. Ralph Abernathy says he is "very glad to be alive" after undergoing successful surgery to bypass a blocked artery in his brain.

"I owe it all to God and am eternally grateful to Dr. (Mel) Epstein and Johns Hopkins Hospital," Abernathy said at a news conference after his release from the hospital on Thursday.

Abernathy had bypass surgery March 9 to relieve a blocked artery in his brain. In January he suffered a mild stroke which had slurred his speech. The surgery was aimed at preventing another stroke, doctors said.

Abernathy

Epstein, who performed the surgery, said he was optimistic that Abernathy will recovery fully.

Abernathy is president emeritus of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and was a top aide to Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. during the civil rights movement in the 1960s. Abernathy ran the SCLC for nine years after King's death, and is now pastor of the 1,200-member West Hunter Baptist Church in Atlanta.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Film producer Steven Spielberg had predicted a spate of lawsuits against "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," even before the screenplay was completed, the woman who wrote the film says.

"When I was writing 'E.T.,' Steven turned to me during a story conference one afternoon and said, 'How many people do you think will sue us when this comes out?' We both laughed and started making up stories," said screenwriter Melissa Mathison.

A $750 million lawsuit was filed against Universal Studios, Spielberg, Ms. Mathison and others last August, with plaintiff Lisa Litchfield saying her one-act play, "Lokey from Maldemar," was the basis for the "E.T." story.

Several other writers later said the script was theirs, but did not file suit.

Most recently, Indian director Satyajit Ray joined the fray. Ray said scenes from the "E.T." script were similar to scenes from his unfilmed screenplay "The Alien."

'Debbie' won't do Princeton

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Be it resolved: That an X-rated movie shall not fill Princeton University's ivory towers with erotic images this Saturday night.

Princeton's American Whig Cliosophic Society — which claims to be the largest and oldest literary and debating group in the world — called off its showing of "Debbie Does Dallas," a skin flick about a concupiscent cheerleader, after some students objected.

To reach the decision, the society argued the merits of showing X-rated films at Princeton in a debate before about 60 students Wednesday night. In the end, they voted 31-29 for a non-binding resolution that pornographic films should not be shown by student organizations at the university, Landis said.

"It was canceled after reconsideration of the issues involved," said Marc Landis, one of the society's 1,400 members. "There was question whether it was a desirable film to bring to campus. There were considerations that it might be objectionable to large segments of the community."

"The most offensive thing is that it degrades, humiliates and objectifies human sexuality and particularly women," said Shelley Rigger, a member of the Princeton's Women's Center, which has opposed showing the movie about a woman who wants to be a cheerleader for the Dallas Cowboys football team.

"Pornography presents a distorted vision of what human sexuality is about," Ms. Rigger said, adding that argument over the movie was not an issue of freedom of speech.

"Every time they pick a film, they're exercising their personal choice. When they decide not to show it, it's no different than if they decided not to show 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' because people didn't want to see it," she said.

"We're not advocating censorship. Censorship comes down from a figure of authority," she said.

Princeton University has no policy on organizations sponsoring the showing of X-rated movies, said university spokeswoman Dorothy Lupichuk.

In retaliation to the planned showing of "Debbie," the Women's Center showed an anti-pornography film, "Not a Love Story," Tuesday night.

But it was the debate that changed the minds of the society members who had decided in January to show the film.

"That certainly represented to us that we were in danger of alienating a large segment of the university community," said Landis. "We're not showing films just to offend people."

Ballet founder steps down

BOSTON (AP) — E. Virginia Williams, founder of the Boston Ballet, will step down as its joint artistic director, a position she shared with French ballerina Violet Verdy, the company announced.

"Miss Williams and Miss Verdy have been working together for the artistic continuity of the Boston Ballet, and they feel that this is the time to make a change in titles," Joseph T. McCullen Jr., the ballet board chairman, said in a statement Thursday.

Miss Williams will become artistic adviser and Miss Verdy will continue as artistic director, said Boston Ballet President Joel Garrick.

POST PETROLEUM CO., INC.
Debtor.
No. BK-82-01889
ORDER REQUIRING ALL PARTIES IN INTEREST TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM, ESTABLISHING DATE BARRING FURTHER FILING OF CLAIMS

Now on this 10th day of March, 1983, there came on for hearing before me the Application of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., debtor in possession, seeking an Order of this Court requiring all creditors to file Proofs of Claim in this action. In support of said Application, debtor in possession represented that the Schedules filed must be verified prior to submission of a Plan of Reorganization or Disclosure Statement. The Court further finds that such Order is appropriate under rules of this Court and the United States Bankruptcy Code.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED BY THE COURT that all creditors or parties having claims against the estate of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., debtor herein, file Proofs of Claim with the Office of the United States Bankruptcy Court Clerk, Seventh Floor, 201 Dean A. McGee Avenue, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73102; and contemporaneously mail a copy of such Proof of Claim form, with all supporting documentation to the offices of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., Tenth Floor, Colcord Building, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73102 to the attention of Mr. Dick Hunt.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all claimants attach to their Proofs of Claim supporting documentation as to the debt upon which claim is based, and in the case of creditors performing services or delivering materials to specific well sites of the debtor, that these creditors reference the specific well sites where such work was performed or material deliverd. Any creditor asserting a secured position, whether by way of agreement or statutory lien must attach documentation upon which they rely in asserting a priority or security position and in the case of Mechanic's and Materialmen's Liens, attach to their Proof of Claim a copy of the filed Lien Statement.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that all claimats must file their Proofs of Claim, delivering copies thereof to the offices of Post Petroleum Co., Inc., as noted herein, on or before the 12th day of April, 1983. PARTIES FAILING TO FILE PROOFS OF CLAIM AS HEREIN DECREED SHALL BE THEREAFTER BARRED FROM ASSERTING ANY CLAIMS OF WHATSOEVER KIND OR NATURE AGAINST THE DEBTOR ESTATE OR ITS PROPERTY.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Office of the Court Clerk of the United States Bankruptcy Court issue notice of this Order to all parties in interest herein and, upon request of any parties in interest, provide a Proof of Claim form.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the debtor in possession is hereby ordered to publish this Order in its entirety for three consecutive days in the Journal Record of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and such other newspapers in such other locations as it shall deem proper.
