Marriage For Two

By Arthur Somers Roche

"I'm glad," said Tracy, "that you are marrying him."

If the implication of his speech were not clear, the slight stress he placed on the next to the last word made his meaning brutally explicit.

"I thought," said the girl, "you loved me."

"Well?" said Tracy.

"If you cared for me, loved me the way you've said you did, you'd not intimate—"

He interrupted her with a laugh that held equal parts of scorn for her and contempt for himself.

"Loved you? Good God, haven't I made it clear enough?"

"You're not making it clear now," she accused. "You talk of my marrying Frank Burton as though—as if—well, as though I'd contemplated something else."

"Sorry if I've been a cad," he said. "Only when a woman—"

She interrupted him: "I thought you'd be a better loser, Larry."

He stared at her. "You talk as though this were a game." His voice rose. "A game, by God, and you the prize, eh? Well, Helen, sometimes games are crookedly won, cheats play in them, and you can't expect an honest player to accept a dishonest defeat as cheerfully—why, Helen, marriage isn't a game of bridge. You don't deal the cards again when the rubber is over."

His voice took on pleading.

"Helen, Helen darling! We're engaged. We love each other. You can't—you can't marry Burton. The man's old enough to be your father. You can't love him."

"Why can't I?" she demanded. "He—he's able—brilliant—"

"Then a squirrel hoarding nuts against the winter is able and brilliant," he scoffed. "The man hasn't an instinct, a thought, above acquiring an extra dollar—or an extra girl," he added bitterly.

"You talk as though marriage were a matter of purchase and sale," she said.

"Well, what else is your marrying Burton?" he countered. "You haven't said yet that you love him. And you can't say it. You can't look me in the eye and tell me that you love that old man."

"Don't be melodramatic, Larry, please. He's not old. Fifty, perhaps. And," she hesitated slightly, "I do love him."

"When did this great passion come to you?" he sneered. "Last night we were engaged. At least, yesterday afternoon we were. You loved me, then. At least, you said you did. I suppose that since you told me that you've told Burton the same thing." He shrugged, and the movement was an insult. "Having practiced on me, you were probably quite convincing to Burton."

"I think you'd better go," she said.

"It would have been better if I'd never come, never seen you," he said.

"Perhaps it would," she said.

"No, I don't think so. If you hadn't been engaged to me, Burton might not have offered the high price of marriage.

"And, Helen, what's Frank Burton's money to you? I've plenty of money. Even a street girl doesn't make her rivals put their fortunes on the table for approval."

"You might be respectful because of yourself, if not for me," she cried.

He laughed at her, at himself.

"We Were Making a Mistake"

"There's a lot of cant spoken and written about good breeding, Helen. But when a woman does what you are doing, it takes more than good breeding for a man to hide his feelings. And why," he angrily demanded, "should my good breeding rise to an occasion which yours has failed to meet? You want me to act like a gentleman when you have failed to act like a lady."

"I've tried to make you reasonable," she blazed. "I've told you that we were making a mistake, that I loved another man. You've insulted me and degraded yourself. You're too conceited to imagine that another man might be more attractive than yourself—"

"Helen! Please!"

He stared at her. Anger did not make her pretty. There was a virago quality in her that he had never suspected. Still, he accused himself, no matter what she had done, she was the woman he loved. Across his memory flashed recollection of the first time he had seen her, of the wondering awe, the incredulity, with which he had accepted her subtle intimations that he was not unpleasing to her.

Theirs had been love at first sight. At least it had been so with him, and he had believed her timid confession that it had been likewise with her. This was no way to part with one who had been loved, who was still loved. He caught at shreds of courtesy.

"Helen," he said gently, "forgive me. I—I've been unforgivable, I know, but—it's been because I love you."

"Love? What do you know of love?" she asked. "Love doesn't in-

FOUR PLANS TO SERVE SOUTH ARE EXPLAINED

Congressional Delegations And Civic Bodies Ask Designations

FUNDS UNAVAILABLE

Guinn Williams Asks Postal Heads to Put Wichita on Route

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—The desires of dozens of communities—small and large—to be on the air mail map of the United States were laid before the interdepartmental committee on airways today in a hearing on proposals for a second transcontinental route.

Towns and states of the southwest which would be served by the line were grouped as entire congressional delegations appeared to plead the causes of their sections; and in additional business and civic representatives sought consideration of individual towns.

Four Proposals

Postmaster General Brown listed four major proposals for the route, extending from New York west through Kansas City, Atlanta, New Orleans and St. Louis to San Diego and Los Angeles.

Emphasizing the necessity for congressional appropriation for establishment for the proposed route before it could be decided upon, the postmaster general said, initiation of the service could not be made before next July.

This did not lessen the ardor of the pleaders. They listed claims for immediate service, as well as needs of the states concerned for the future.

S. A. F. E. Makes Plea

William G. McAdoo, representing the Southwest Air Fast Express, Inc., and Southern Skylines, Inc., submitted a proposal to contract to carry the mail over a route between New York and Los Angeles, via St. Louis or via Atlanta. Portions of the routes, he said, are already in operation, carrying passengers and express, and he added that his companies were ready to initiate service promptly and to advance funds for lighting a route on assurance of reimbursement.

Pressing St. Louis' claim to the route on economic grounds, W. B. Wisenburger, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, said

Girls in College Vote 7 to 3 For Abbreviated Skirt

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. (UP)—In the face of arguments about individuality and a return to feminity, 70 per cent of the girls at Hunter college have declared themselves opposed to long skirts as a "long step backward in the progress of women's emancipation."

Two Men Saved From Plight in Duck Marsh

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas, Nov. 25. (INS)—Wesley Evans, 21, and G. D. McClustion, 20, were recovering at their homes here today from exposure as the result of spending hours almost submerged in the icy waters of a salt marsh. Wading across the marsh with heavy loads of ducks they had killed on a hunting trip, the youths were believed to have become so utterly exhausted they fell prone in the water and were unable to arise. Today they were in such serious condition they could not tell what befell them.

Butcher Boy Killer Gets Prison Sentence

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Nov. 25. (UP)—Leo "Pat" Kelley, once sentenced to hang for the slaying of Mrs. Myrtle Mellus, society matron, was re-sentenced today to term of from one to 10 years in San Quentin on the order of the state supreme court.

Doak Roberts' Death Ends Career Unparalleled For Service In Texas League

DALLAS, Nov. 25. (AP)—As he had wished, J. Doak Roberts, 58, died today as president of the Texas league. He had been ill more than a year and his death had been expected momentarily for several days.

One of the founders of the modern Texas league, Roberts had been its president the last nine years. His second five-year contract still had three years to run and he was apprehensive that his health might force him to resign before the expiration of that contract. Often he expressed the wish that he might die as league president.

Gardner Active Head

Recognizing the good he had done the league, its members in a meeting July 1 granted Roberts a six month leave of absence. J. Alvin Gardner of Wichita Falls became active vice president in October, leaving Roberts free to regain his health, if possible. His kidney ailment, however, bested the "grand old man of the Texas league," but he died the titular head of the baseball circuit he built.

The body of the veteran official will be taken to Corsicana tomorrow and funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday. Burial will be at Corsicana.

Started as Pitcher

Born at Corsicana, Texas, in 1871, Roberts lived there until 1921 when, on his election to the presidency of the Texas league, he moved to Dallas. His earliest connection with baseball was as a pitcher on independent teams in his home town and a semi-professional team promoter before the reorganization of the Texas league in 1902.

When the reorganization was effected, Roberts joined the late Ted Sullivan and his associates as owner of the Corsicana franchise. He operated league clubs at Corsicana in 1902, 1903 and 1904; Temple in 1905; Cleburne in 1906. In 1907 he attempted to quit baseball when the Texas and South Texas leagues merged, retaining only his interest in several player contracts sold to Claud Risly at Houston. Late that year Risly asked Roberts' aid in directing the club and the next year Roberts purchased a half interest in the Houston team. In 1920 Roberts sold his interest after having built up a substantial fortune by methods that still are considered model by other clubs which envied his ability to develop winners and conduct a baseball club economically.

One-Man Record

During his direct connection with the teams he made Texas league history. His clubs won Texas league pennants at Corsicana in 1902 and 1904, Cleburne in 1905,

BANDIT ROBS U. P. LIMITED

Fast Wyoming Train Derailed by Robber

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Nov. 25. (AP)—The fast westbound Union Pacific passenger train No. 17, was held up three miles east of here tonight. News of the holdup was brought here by a train crew which uncoupled the locomotive from the train and continued to Cheyenne.

Only very meager details of the holdup were available here immediately. Sheriff's officers and all available possemen were rushed to the scene where the coaches of the train stood on the track. Union Pacific officials could not be reached for a report.

The robbery was reported by the engineer of the train. Six cars are reported to have been derailed, but no passengers are believed to have been seriously injured.

The amount of the loot has not been determined.

A good description of the bandit was provided officers by his victims. Passengers said the robber, about 22 years old, wore blue overalls, a blue shirt, a gray cap, and a blue sweater. He brandished a pistol.

The Laramie county sheriff's deputies went to the scene of the holdup as soon as the report was received and a description of the robber was immediately sent to officers of adjoining states.

Scores of Cheyenne citizens were recruited to assist in the hunt.

This is the first train robbery in Wyoming since the days of Bill Carlisle, now serving a term in the state penitentiary for robbing Union Pacific trains, one with a toy glass pistol, west of Cheyenne.

Acquittal Gained By Man Accused Of Whipping Boy

J. H. Guest, charged with aggravated assault in connection with the alleged whipping of a 12-year-old boy here on Halloween night, was acquitted by a jury in the county court at law Monday afternoon.

The verdict was returned after comparatively short deliberation, according to L. V. Abernathy, assistant county attorney.

Asked to describe the occurrence, the youthful accuser, who was held on the stand for almost an hour, told the jury he was grabbed by the defendant and given a sereve thrashing with a strap. He denied that he had done anything to merit the punishment.

Guest stated he caught the youth in the act of throwing a rock at the porch of the Guest home. He had asked the crowd of boys, of which the plaintiff was a member, he testified, to stop throwing rocks and clods at his house, explaining that his wife was ill. The boys failed to heed his request. When he came out the last time, the youngsters ran and he nabbed the nearest one in the act of throwing another rock, he said.

Phillips Petroleum Declares Dividend

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. (UP)—Directors of the Phillips Petroleum company today declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share, placing the issue on a $2 annual cash dividend basis, compared with $1.50 previously.

In addition, directors declared a stock dividend of 5 per cent. The cash dividend is payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 16 and the stock dividend as soon as possible after Jan. 2, to stock of record Dec. 16.

Robert Pequite of the A. & M. college, Stillwater, judged the show.

BUSINESS BOOM GIVEN SUPPORT OF FARM HEADS

Hoover Talks Two Hours With Heads of Four Farm Bodies

INTEREST ARGUED

Rates Charged on Federal Loans Discussed At White House

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Representatives of national agricultural organizations pledged support to President Hoover today in his program for industrial stabilization, and in turn demanded that farmers receive lower interest from government credit agencies.

Interest rates took up much of the two hours of plain talk the leaders of the National Grange, the Farmers' union, the American Farm Bureau federation and the Farmers' Equity union had with the chief executive.

Satisfaction Voiced

The agricultural conferees voiced satisfaction with the outcome, but whether they won their point was left both by them and by a statement subsequently issued at the White House entirely within the realm of conjecture.

This statement, for which Secretary Hyde became sponsor, said the farm leaders "felt that a concerted action by the credit agencies of the government is now possible, and that such action would reflect back to agriculture the lower interest rate" which has followed the break in the stock market prices.

Roads Asked

Another demand by the agricultural leaders was for an immediate extension of the road program, with special emphasis on "farm to market" roads which directly would benefit agriculture by lowering marketing costs.

The credit agencies of the government which the farmers hold should act in concert to lower interest rates are the federal land banks, the federal intermediate credit banks and the federal farm board, which has or will have at its disposal half a billion dollars.

Lawton Waltons Hear Noted Outdoors Writer

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., Nov. 25.—Ozark Ripley, one of America's most noted outdoors writers, addressed members of the local chapter of the Izaak Walton league and local sportsmen at a meeting held at the chamber of commerce tonight. Mr. Ripley took dinner with officials of the league preceding his lecture.

The noted writer, guide, dog musher and outdoors man, appeared here in the interests of the new national expansion program by the national organization and in further connection with outdoor proposed projects in this vicinity, and which the local organization is sponsoring. Sportsmen from a number of surrounding towns were present.

Bridge Hearing Waits Recovery of Justice

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Illness of Justice Wendell Stafford of the District of Columbia supreme court today caused another postponement in argument of an injunction suit brought against the secretary of war by the Red River Bridge company of Texas.

At Justice Stafford's office it was said he was suffering from an attack of bronchitis and would not be in court again until Friday, regular motion day. As 10 cases are ahead of the Red River suit on the docket it is probable the case will not be reached until next week.

Gold Seekers Rush to Cow Pasture When Butcher Finds Teeth of Bossie Tightly Packed With What Made Yukon Famous

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 25. (AP)—A burro, a cow and a goat have dug up mineral deposits in this section worth millions of dollars.

The most famous animal in the Coeur d'Alene district is the burro whose hoofs brought to light the rich Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine.

Two prospectors who led this sagacious animal into the hills were about to abandon their quest when he kicked up an outcropping of valuable ore. That was several decades ago.

The silver-lead property revealed by the burro since has paid millions in dividends.

Then there is the Colville cow, the animal with the gold plated teeth. Recently the cow was butchered, and its high priced dental work was revealed.

Obviously the animal had nibbled grass growing right over a valuable gold deposit, but it died without making known the place to scores of gold seekers. Tiny particles of gold were crammed into the crevices of its teeth. The location still is sought by scores of prospectors who "rushed" the pastures.

Single Rose Dropped Into Grave Marks Simple Burial of "Tiger"

Georges Clemenceau's Body Rests in Soil of Native Vendee After Solemn Interment of Hero

By GEORGE W. HINMAN JR.
Universal Service Special Cable

MOUCHAMPS, France, Nov. 25.—A tiny mound of fallow earth under a leaden rain-spilling sky, marks tonight the spot where France's super-patriot, Georges Clemenceau, is becoming one with his native Vendee.

It appears particularly fitting that the "Tiger" should be taken back to the heart of Vendee. For it was from this province that many of the passionate lovers of France have come.

Mud Surrounds Grave

Today at noon, as a thin drizzle fell from the skies, the "father of victory" was carried to his last resting place beside the body of his father. Those who shouldered the light oaken coffin slipped in the mud as they reverently bore the body of the dead statesman up the wooded slope, where in a tiny grave, scarcely four feet deep, he will become one with the France he loved and fought for.

While in Paris and in all of the republic's far-flung possessions, guns boomed in war-like tribute to the fallen chieftain, no ceremonies marked the interment.

Small Group

A silent group of some 20 relatives and former governmental associates stood with bowed heads about the grave as the coffin was lowered into the earth.

The simple solemnity of the occasion was heightened when Michel Clemenceau, the "Tiger's" son, plucking a rose from the many funeral offerings, stepped to the brink of the grave and dropped the flower on his father's casket, saying: "Adieu mon maitre."

The interment took but 12 minutes from the time the casket was carried up from the winding country road until it rested at the bottom of the grave.

Tiger's Chosen Spot

The spot where the former premier was buried was one of his own choice. The grave had been kept waiting for him during the years. It had been kept continually open, but for today special preparations were made. Brabant, his faithful chauffeur, had been

WIGLEY WINS $10,000 BALM

Rio Crespi Ordered to Pay Waco Plaintiff

WACO, Texas, Nov. 25. (UP)—William Wigley won $10,000 damages in his $1,000,000 heart balm suit again Pio Crespi, Italian nobleman and multimillionaire cotton man and publisher.

The jury heard the case all of last week, retired late Saturday, and returned with its verdict today.

Wigley's suit was as outgrowth of the separation of him and his wife, who subsequently married Crespi. Neither Crespi nor his wife appeared in court during the trial.

Stay of 21 Days Given Dr. Snook From Execution

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 25. (UP)—The state supreme court late today granted a 21-day stay to Dr. James Howard Snook, former university professor, who was to have been executed Friday night for the murder of Theora Hix, his co-ed sweetheart. The stay was granted after Snook's attorney filed a petition in error, a motion for the stay and a motion for leave to file an appeal. The appeal will be filed some time this week.

TESTIMONY IN SLAYING CASE OPENS TODAY

"Emotional Insanity" Plea Of Defense in Death Of Hilburn

JUDGE WARNS JURY

Former Wife of Accused Man Summoned as Witness

Selection of the jury in the trial of Roy Grundy, indicted for the murder of June Hilburn here last Oct. 17, was completed at 4:45 o'clock Monday afternoon in the 89th district court. Testimony is scheduled to start at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The 12 men were selected from 38 veniremen questioned by attorneys. After hearing the oath of the jury, Judge P. A. Martin gave members their instructions, pointing out that much had been said about the case prior to the trial, and asking that they consider only such testimony as would be given in the court room.

Pointing out in particular G. C. Shirley, one of the jurors, Judge Martin said:

"Mr. Shirley, you were very nearly an eye witness to the slaying of June Hilburn. You heard the shots and saw the crowd gathering on the street when Hilburn fell. I charge you personally to keep your own opinion or what you may have seen or heard about the case entirely to yourself. Your opinions, except those formed from the testimony you will hear, must not be uttered to others on the jury."

Defense Outlined

Temporary emotional insanity was announced as the defense for the accused man by R. E. Taylor of defense counsel, who told each prospective juror that Grundy will contend he was under such intense mental stress that he was unable to distinguish between right and wrong when he fired the three shots which instantly killed Hilburn.

The jury was retired for the night at 5 o'clock and court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. The jury is composed of the following: C. B. Brown, C. C. Shirley, W. C. Clayton, S. L. Bingham, O. R. Harris, Sam H. Adams, F. J. Bryan, W. R. Sullivan, Paul O. Henning, R. O. La Fon, William Ott and L. A. Crawford.

Warden on Jury

Mr. Crawford is a former officer, and has been game warden at Lake Kemp for the past several years, it was revealed during the questioning. State attorneys did not question prospective jurors concerning their attitude toward capital punishment. The majority of the questions were routine queries, mainly as to whether the veniremen had formed opinions on the case from hearing of it or reading about it. In several instances, defense attorneys questioned the veniremen extensively on the insanity issue.

Grundy is represented by R. E. Taylor, Cedric O. Taylor and J. P. Williams. State attorneys are Sam B. Spence, district attorney, and Mike Anglin and George W. Anderson, assistants.

One of the principal state witnesses will be Mrs. Grundy, who obtained a divorce from the accused man a few days before the shooting. In her statement made after the slaying, according to Mr. Spence, Mrs. Grundy statted the defendant had been extremely jealous of her. Another state witness will be seven-year-old C. S. Bennett Jr., who lived at the same address as Mrs. Ruth Grundy. The nature of his testimony has not been disclosed.

During the questioning of the prospective jurors, Grundy apparently was intensely interested in the proceedings. A brother sat on either side of him, occasionally dropping a word with him or glancing at his face as he listened to the attorneys. Grundy has been in the county jail since the day of the shooting.

JILTED GIRL DEAD

Nellie Tayloe Ross Mentioned As First Woman Senator to Wear Toga

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (UP)—Possibility of a woman breaking into the United States senate—hitherto 100 per cent male—was enhanced today with discussion of the name of Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former Democratic governor of Wyoming, as a candidate for the seat left vacant by the death of Senator Warren.

Another woman already is in the race for the senate seat, Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois, who successfully entered the House against male competitors and now is a member of that body. Mrs. McCormick will pit her strength in a statewide contest next spring for the Republican senatorial nomination against Senator Deneen.

Women have been represented in the house since war days, when Mrs. Jeanette Rankin was a member, and there are seven other women there now besides Mrs. McCormick, but no woman ever has been elected to the senate. Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton of Georgia served for one day in November, 1922, by appointment of Governor Hardwick, as special recognition.

Mrs. Ross, now directing activities of Democratic women at national headquarters here as vice-

'TIGER' RESTS IN NATIVE SOIL

Solemn, Simple Ceremony Marks Burial

dispatched to the spot shortly after his master's death to see that the sides were freshly straightened.

At an early hour peasants, the descendants of those valiant Chouans, who made so gallant a last stand for royalty after the revolution, gathered to watch the funeral procession pass through the town to the burial place.

Soldiers Line Road

All along the route from Mouchamps infantry and cavalry lined the road. At the graveside were stationed 50 gendarmes to keep the curious aside in fulfillment of the provisions of the dead statesman's will.

Clemenceau will have a last resting place after his own heart. The property on which the grave is located slopes down to a small winding stream. It is thickly planted with trees, and hedges cut off the view in all directions.

A sculptured shaft of Minerva, goddess of war, leaning on a lance, is the only sign that here rests the leader. All else is loneliness—utter isolation from all that represents the civilized world.

It was in such a spot that Clemenceau wished to return to his mother earth.

Cedar Guards Grave

Colombier, the township where lies the grave, means "dove-cote"—the haven and symbol of peace to the warrior who will wage no more wars.

A giant cedar spreads its branches above the grave as though it would shelter those mortal remains against the tempest of the elements, which has been raging continuously since the night the "Tiger" passed on.

Its roots, unharmed, grip the very grave itself. Clemenceau had directed that they be undisturbed in the digging of his last resting place.

It has been a day crowded with emotions defying description, for one who has witnessed the burial of the late President Woodrow Wilson, world-renowned pacifist, who was taken to his grave in the cathedral on the hill overlooking the capital of his nation with all the pomp and ceremony his country could offer.

Today Clemenceau, the fighter, without ceremony, without ritual, without any trace of tribute, was placed simply beneath the ground in an obscure wooded spot—almost a soldier's hurried battlefield burial.

Peasants of the Vendee he loved so well lowered the body of their great neighbor into the earth. The leather straps creaked, and great shunks of sodden earth thudded into the grave.

The journey of the funeral cortege from Mouchamps to the burial spot was a difficult one for the motor hearse and the five powerful limousines.

Brabant, the chauffeur, who had sped from Paris to prepare the grave, met the cortege at Mouchamps to direct it to Colombier.

He could only warn the other drivers of the hard task before them—roads and lanes of mud and gravel, hastily picked and shoveled into some sort of condition by husky Vendeean volunteers only a few hours before; steep hills, rain, more rain, and over all mud.

Perilous Route

Brabant stepped into the lead car to head the procession. The gendarmes lining the roads could keep the curious away, but they could not assist the cars over the perilous route.

Up and down hills the procession crept—sliding, bumping, swaying. Narrow turns in the road, laid out centuries ago, when the Vendeeans either plodded on foot or rode on horseback, confronted the drivers. Once the hearbol scraped against a jutting stone wall.

At last the cortege halts. The hearse is in mud up to its axles. The limousines are emptied as the occupants struggle through the mud, across a field just cleared of underbrush.

Four rugged peasants with heads bared carry the coffin to the grave.

It is over. This is the last of the man who said, "the intoxication of life is found in the pain of death."

And tonight, with the departure of the invading throng for Paris, the Vendee can discuss, with true Vendeean thoroughness, the events of the past 24 hours.

First, last night, came Brabant; roaring to the town in the same motor car wherein Clemenceau rode alive through the streets of Paris barely a week before. Brabant brought definite word as to what was to be done and what not done.

For example, local officialdom was to be barred from the scene of the burial—and the mayor at St. Vincent Sur Jard had hired an automobile especially for the occasion. Will he have to pay for it? There are many smiles and chuckles.

But Brabant brought word that there was work to be done. Francois and Pierre will make the grave ready. Picks, shovels and lanterns must be gotten.

"I am sure we can find the spot," says Francois.

"All right, come on, we'll find it," replies Pierre, and off they go.

They find it and buckle down to work on the side of the ravine at the bottom of which rages the tiny stream—yellow torrent, swollen by the rains.

Under the falling rain they work to straighten the sides and deepen the bottom of the "Tiger's" grave. Nearby, is the grave of his father, who said to his son just before his death:

"I will lie there beneath that cedar and you will come to me when your work is finished."

In Kansas Killing

Nine-year-old Paul Jones, above, of Arkansas City, Kan., slept soundly while a midnight intruder entered his home and shot to death Carl Jones, his father, and Elizabeth Walworth, his stepsister. Kansas authorities, working on the theory of a family feud over property, detained Harry Jones, below, the boy's uncle, for investigation, as well as his grandfather, John P. Jones. The child's mother is dead.

Itching Ends When Zemo Touches Skin

—thousands say. It's wonderful the way soothing, cooling Zemo brings relief to skin which itches and burns. Even in most severe cases, itching disappears almost as soon as Zemo touches the tender and inflamed surface. To draw out local infection and help to clear away unsightly blemishes, we know of nothing better than invisible Zemo. Always keep this family antiseptic on hand. Use it freely. DIXIE AIRMAIL HEARING HELD

Dozens of Towns Argue For Pet Routes

the "confidental trade track" which the line would follow if it went through his city would serve bigger business interests, produce greater revenue, and rest on larger banking resources than would be offered by more southerly routes. Representatives of other cities which would be on the St. Louis route offered charts to show that weather conditions are as good over this territory as over southern routes.

New Orleans' Demand

New Orleans' demand for the route was backed by representatives of Mobile, Houston, San Angelo, Brownsville and other towns and cities that would be served by most southerly route. Army centers in Texas must be closely connected with air mail, it was claimed.

Sponsoring the St. Louis route, Representative McClintic of Oklahoma urged that the line extend through Tulsa and Oklahoma City. Senator Bratton of New Mexico urged that the line extend through Amarillo, Texas, Clovis and Albuquerque, N. M., west to the Pacific coast. Representative Jones of Texas joined in this request that line touch Amarillo.

Representative Patman of Texas asked that the committee extend the route through any points that would include Paris, Texas.

Seeking particularly that the line extend through Birmingham, Major Sumpter Smith sponsored a route through Louisville, Nashville, Birmingham, Shreveport, Fort Worth and thence west.

Representative McCloskey of Texas urged that the route pass through San Antonio and Representative Collier of Mississippi made a plea that service go direct to Meridian, Jackson and Vicksburg, Miss., and Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas. Representative Lee of Texas sponsored the route via Atlanta, through Texas to the west coast.

Wichita's Bid Made

Representative Swing of California said everyone has agreed on the primary question before the committee—the need of a route to serve the South and West—and he asked only that western terminus of the line extend through San Diego to Los Angeles.

Concurring with Representative Garrett of Texas, Representative Garner of Texas sought consideration for the extreme southern route, via New Orleans, Houston, San Antonio, and El Paso. Representative Williams of Texas asked that the line include Wichita Falls, Texas, among its stops. Representative Hastings of Oklahoma said he spoke for the entire delegation from his state in urging the route through St. Louis, Oklahoma and Texas.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The SAFETY POINT marks a true value line

There's a safety point in battery prices, the lowest point that affords known values.

Don't go below it. Batteries built for a bargain cannot be expected to stand up. The margin you may save on their first price ordinarily falls far short of their extra upkeep expense.

Buy known quality — a Willard. The correct electrical size and built-in durability of Willards will save you money in the end.

Why take chances on poor quality and GUARANTEE. QUALITY is the only guarantee worth while. Guarantees don't start your car nor save you trouble. The merchant who has to make exceptional guarantees doesn't have much else to sell or talk about. Willards last longer than any other make. Tests have proven that repeatedly.

COUNCIL NAMES STREETS ANEW

Changes in Designations Are Voted

The city council Monday night tentatively changed the names of three extensions to principal streets, changed the name of one street, and bestowed a name on another which so far has gone nameless.

The changes agreed upon temporarily through passage of an ordinance on first reading follow:

Ardath street, from Carrigan avenue to Bridwell street, will be changed to Twenty-fifth street.

McGregor avenue, between Holliday street and Southern avenue, will be changed to Southern avenue.

Wilson street, between Bridwell street and the Holliday road, will be changed to Twenty-second street.

Miller street, in the Casper addition, will be changed to Twenty-sixth street.

The nameless thoroughfare through the Rohatch addition was dignified with the title of Avenue M.

The ordinance was recommended by F. M. Rugley, city engineer, whose petition to the council pointed out that the necessity for the changes was encountered in erecting the new street signs. The changes, it was said, make each street concerned a through passage, eliminating offshoots from the main thoroughfares.

Walter H. Caldwell appeared before the council as attorney for the M. F. Parrish interests, which sought the establishment of a business line, to comply with the city building code, at Eleventh and Holliday streets. On the property mentioned Mr. Parrish intends to erect a business building, it was said. The permit for the line was granted.

Permit for Ira Miks, feed store operator here, for the construction of a nine-inch outside wall in his new storage house at Fifth street and Indiana avenue, in lieu of 13-inch walls, as required by ordinance, was granted. He intends to erect an addition to the storage house later, he said, and when that is completed the nine-inch wall will be converted into a partition wall between the original store room and the addition.

First Woman Senator Seen

Nellie Tayloe Ross May Seek Warren's Seat

chairman of the national committee, declined today to discuss reports that she might enter the race.

"Wyoming is profoundly sorrowful today over the loss of its venerable and distinguished senator," she said. "The suddeness of the blow precludes any thought so soon of who his successor will be."

Under state law, a special election must be held to choose a successor to Warren. The governor cannot appoint when the vacancy occurs during a recess. At the special election, a senator will be chosen to serve until March 4, 1931, when Warren's term expires, while the six-year term beginning at that time will be filled at the regular election next fall.

Wyoming now has a Democratic senator, John B. Kendrick, who has served since 1917. He was re-elected last year. In an off year, the Democrats are conceded a good chance in the state. Mrs. Ross was defeated for re-election for governor by a small majority. She was elected to the office when her husband died during his term.

Senate veterans look a bit askance at the possibility of a woman member, but those who have watched the changes of the past few years in all directions accept the possibility of such an invasion, philosophically, as perhaps being inevitable.

CAPITAL TO PAY TRIBUTE TO WARREN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—President Hoover will join the senate, house and supreme court tomorrow in paying tribute to Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming, who died yesterday after a long life of public service.

For the second time within a month, the chief executive and his cabinet will go to the senate chamber for a brief, simple state funeral arranged to honor a veteran legislator, who in both age and service was dean of the senate.

The president paid the same honor less than four weeks ago to the late Senator Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, who died on Oct. 28.

The service will begin at 2 o'clock and it will be concluded in time for the departure at 3:15 o'clock of a special train which will bear the body westward to a last resting place in Wyoming.

The Rev. Z. B. Phillips, chaplain of the senate, will conduct the service, and those invited to attend include Chief Justice Taft and the associate justices of the supreme court, members of the house of representatives, the diplomatic corps and the commanding officers of the army, navy and marine corps, all of whom will have seats on the floor. Places also have been reserved for friends and relatives, including Gen. John J. Pershing, the late senator's son-in-law and commander of the American expeditionary force in the world war.

In the house delegation will be Maj. Charles M. Stedman of North Carolina, who, with the death of Senator Warren, became the only survivor of the civil war in either branch of congress. Major Stedman saw service with the confederate army, and Senator Warren was a drummer boy with a Massachusetts regiment in the union army, receiving the congressional medal of honor for gallantry in action.

Druggist Acquitted on Liquor Charge by Federal Court Jury

Paul (Percy) Phillips, Wichita Falls druggist indicted for possession and transportation of liquor, with two previous convictions alleged, was acquitted by a jury in federal district court Monday night.

The case was given to the jury about 3:40 o'clock Monday afternoon and a decision was not reached until more than five hours deliberation, the greatest length of time a jury has remained out during this session of federal court. Phillips' case was the first in which a conviction has not been obtained since Judge William H. Atwell opened the United States court a week ago.

The verdict was brought in during a late court session Monday night held in order to complete a civil case.

Phillips, called to the stand early in the trial, testified that the arresting officers had threatened to "beat my brains out with the butts of their guns" if he reported criticism of the police department. The "criticism," Phillips said, was his remark that the "sheriff's office had put a fast one over on the city" when members of the sheriff's department arrested an escaped convict at the door of the city jail after the man had been investigated and released by police.

A. L. Stubblefield and Ellis Summers, the arresting officers, testified on the stand that they had arrested Phillips soon after they had seen him driving an automobile which he abandoned after a chase and in which they found a considerable quantity of liquor. They first went to Phillips' drug store, they said, and later arrested him at another store. They denied that any roughness had been displayed toward their prisoner.

"All-Star" Local Cast Finds Vehicle For Roaring Comedy in "Aunt Lucia"

By MRS. L. N. CASON
The Record News Staff

An all-star cast? Yes, but in a cast that was all-star because the audience knew the actors, Clyde Straus as "Aunt Lucia," stood supreme.

An overflow audience filled the Woman's Forum clubhouse Monday evening to see "Aunt Lucia," the big collegiate comedy sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's club.

Before the play proper began, Mary Clare Burton was leader and reader in the baby pageant where 100 local children in their gay little pajamas shivered and groaned in accompaniment to the story she told. This was probably the most popular of all the chorus numbers.

The story is that of a Mid-west college where an old maid aunt of Betsy (one of the college girls) is expected on a visit. Aunt Lucia is worth 50 million dollars and the entire Sig-sig-retta sorority hopes for a big check from her to build a stadium. All preparations are made, and while everyone else is out of the clubrooms, "Jerry," (Clyde Straus) comes in dressed as an old maid and being mistaken for Aunt Lucia, his chums, Dick (Ridley Maples) and George, (Lloyd Wyatt) insist he impersonate the old lady.

Collegiate Plot

The resulting comedy is one of errors. Aunt Lucia hugs her niece Betsy, (Dolores Peevy, George's girl) and Molly, her chum, (Alta Ruth Walker, who is Dick's girl) and they tell her their inmost secrets.

Professor Gaddis, of the college faculty, (O. L. Heitt) who is white headed and seemingly has one foot in the grave, comes in with Dean Howard (Mrs. Thomas Korn) whom he has been courting but the thought of 50 million dollars is too much for him and he begins to court Aunt Lucia to the sorrow of Dean Howard. One of the most ridiculous scenes of the play was where O. L. Heitt in the part of Professor Gaddis chased Clyde Straus, as Aunt Lucia, madly 'round a chair to get a kiss.

Finally, when Jerry's girl, a part taken by Miss Mary Tancred, becomes angry because her Jerry has not shown up for the big dance that is to be given for Aunt Lucia that evening and makes an engagement to go with another boy, Jerry himself wants to discard the costume. At the dance, when a telegram is received from the real Aunt Lucia and Dr. Seamore reads it, everyone wishes to know who the fake Aunt Lucia is and George unmasks him. Everything ends happily. Professor Gaddis going back to his old love, Dean Howard, and the sweethearts pairing off.

Chorus Makes Hit

Miss Catherine Walker made a gracious and dignified Mrs. Seamore, who was suspicious of Aunt Lucia in the first place. Roy Carter was Doctor Seamore and Mrs. Thomas Korn impersonated Dean Howard—pretty and play perfect in her part.

Clyde Straus was the hit of the evening in the play proper but it would be hard to say who made the greatest impression in the flapper chorus.

Henry Penix, dancing across the stage as the college flirt; Jack Jeffus, as Gloria Swanson, all girl with his cigaret, until one looked at his feet; W. D. Nelson as baby face, but insisting on showing his legs instead of his face; J. P. Tarry with the million dollar legs, who danced with fascinating vigor across the stage until in his last kick, he got down and couldn't get up; Frank Creighton, as Clara Bow, (of all people—what will the Boy Scouts think of their master?); Paul Teague as Queen of the May, with pink pompoms on his slippers; Laverne Somerville as Maggie, with two rolling pins instead of one; George Kidd as a bride of 1930 in white domestic and a white domestic veil; Frank Delenne as a vivacious Spanish dancer—Well, they were just too good to be true.

Mervale Smith was pianist and the girls' chorus "Out in the New Mown Hay," and the sailor chorus "Breezing Along" were most attractive in costume and song. Both were led by Rose Tickell.

"Aunt Lucia" is far above the average home talent play and should have another full house on Tuesday evening.

FIRE WRECKS 100 RADIOS

Philco Store Room Blaze Costs $10,000

Flames which swept through the storeroom of the Philco Radio Sales company at 616-18-20 Eighth street early Monday morning, causing damage to radio sets estimated at about $10,000, did not cause a halt to business, according to George Dashner Jr., manager of the company. The front portion of the store was not damaged and only about half of the stock was destroyed or ruined by the blaze.

The flames began near the upper portion of the storeroom, in which the radios were stacked. No electric wires or other possible causes for the fire are located at the point where the blaze started and Mr. Dashner expressed the belief that rats had carried matches to that part of the room, thus causing the fire.

About 200 radios were stored in the building, about 100 of which were destroyed or badly damaged. A delivery truck and an automobile parked in the storeroom were also considerably damaged. Dense columns of smoke which issued from the burning room and which filled nearby stores caused a second alarm which brought out equipment from every fire station in the city.

Smoke damage to the Art Jewelry company, Union Clothing company and Noble-Little Hardware company was slight, it was reported. Jewelry in the display windows of the Art company was quickly removed to prevent damage should the flames spread to that portion of the building.

$20,000 Suit Against Bottling Firm Opens

Testimony in the suit brought by Rex Gilmore of Burkburnett against the Coca-Cola Bottling works on a claim of $20,000 damages was partially completed when Judge W. W. Cook adjourned the 78th district court Monday afternoon.

The case will probably be completed early Tuesday afternoon, Judge Cook said. The jury was chosen Monday morning.

Gilmore's claim is based on the allegation that he swallowed glass which had been broken from the top of a carbonated beverage bottle.

County Approves Bonds at Meeting

The bond given by J. P. Williams as new constable at Iowa Park was approved by the county commissioners court at their weekly meeting Monday afternoon. Mr. Williams will assume his duties at once.

The commissioners also approved the bond of the L. & F. Chevrolet company as a headlight test station and the company is now authorized as an official station. Bonds given by P. A. Collier for performance of contracts to build gravel roads in precinct No. 2 were also approved. One of the stretches of road is from the Burkburnett highway to the Municipal airport and the other is from the city limits of Burkburnett eastward along the old Burk highway.

Bids for additional books and shelving in the county clerk's office were opened at the meeting. The Buchanan Stationery company was awarded the bid for the shelving work and the Bailey Printing company the bid for the new books.

INDIGESTION DISAPPEARED

Took a Pinch of Black-Draught After Meals—Rid of Stomach Pains

Westminster, S. C.—"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for headache and dizziness for fifteen or twenty years," says Mr. E. D. King, of this place.

"I had a son who could not eat without suffering from indigestion and pains in his stomach. He would take a pinch of Black-Draught after meals for some time, and he quit having indigestion. It helped him.

"My wife took Black-Draught for dizziness and headaches. When she would feel sluggish and tired out, she took Black-Draught and found it relieved her.

"We have taken it and recommended it for years as a splendid family medicine."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been in use since 1835, with constantly increasing popularity because of the good it has done the men, women and children who have taken it.

First Baptist Circles Study Mission Book

All circles of the First Baptist Woman's Missionary society met Monday afternoon to study the book "Jerusalem to Jerusalem," and plan Thanksgiving gifts. Devotional and business services were followed in many instances with a social hour.

Circle one met with Mrs. P. Pinson at Kemp Kort and was opened with prayer by Mrs. W. L. Robertson.

After a short business session, the mission lesson on the book, "Jerusalem to Jerusalem," was taught by Miss Lucy Huggins.

Mrs. R. C. Smith closed the meeting with prayer. The following members were present: Mesdames F. S. Roop, W. L. Robertson, R. C. Smith, L. W. Smith, W. K. Guinn, C. E. Borland, J. T. Brooks, P. Pinson and Miss Lucy Huggins.

Circle Two

Members of circle two met with Mrs. L. L. Cole at her home on Austin. Mrs. Ben King opened the meeting with prayer after which plans were made for a Thanksgiving basket to be prepared for a needy family. Mrs. E. D. McIver gave the lesson on "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem."

Those present were Mesdames E. D. McIver, J. I. Word, Jessie Gibson, W. W. Whatley, W. M. G. Mackechney, I. A. Farris and the hostess.

Circle Three

Mrs. W. M. Dameron entertained members of circle three at her home on Twelfth street. Mrs. R. W. Morgan gave the devotionals and Mrs. W. B. Davis led in prayer. The talk on the lesson was given by Mrs. Fred C. Barron after which Mrs. J. D. McMahan closed the meeting with prayer.

Members present included Mesdames Fred C. Barron, A. I. Taylor, Ray Noland, R. W. Morgan, J. D. McMahan, W. M. Dameron, H. I. Parrish, W. B. Davis and W. M. Dameron.

Circle Four

Members of circle four met with Mrs. Ralph Hines at her home on Marshall street with Mrs. W. B. Woods opening the lesson with the scripture reading and Mrs. R. O. Grant giving the prayer.

Mrs. Hines gave the lesson on "Jerusalem to Jerusalem."

A cookie shower to the day nursery was reported as given last week and the circle will give them a turkey for Thanksgiving.

Those present were Mesdames J. O. Hyland, F. C. Divers, W. E. Smith, W. C. Wood, R. O. Grant, Monte Staniforth, R. C. Neal, C. H. Harr, Ralph Hines, W. E. Floyd, John Shepherd and Dave Shepherd.

Circle Five

Mrs. J. H. Goolsby was hostess to circle five at her home on Tenth street when Mrs. Alvah Conner opened the meeting with a prayer and Mrs. C. W. Roundtree read the minutes of the preceding meeting.

Mrs. Leslie Humphrey gave the mission study in "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem" and Mrs. H. A. Covington dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Those present included Mesdames Alvah Conner, H. A. Covington, Liza Bentley, C. W. Roundtree, Parker Simison, T. L. Husbands, H. I. Smith, W. R. Tittle, Frank Cripliver, L. A. Mytinger, Leslie Humphery, A. B. Womack and Fred Stingle, a visitor.

Circle Six

Members of circle six met at the home of Mrs. J. R. Robertson when Mrs. A. G. Holmes opened the meeting, Mrs. Fred Carter gave a prayer and Mrs. O. L. Powers gave the lesson on "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem." Mrs. Powers was assisted by Mesdames W. H. Morrison, Fred Carter and A. G. Holmes.

Lovely refreshments were served to Mesdames W. O. Kimmell, W. C. W. Brown, Roy Carter, Fred Carter, E. D. McCalley, J. F. Detieffs, A. G. Holmes and the hostess. The next meeting will be with Mrs. J. C. Wharton, 1810 Huff street.

Circle Seven

Mrs. J. L. Maxwell, 2020 Downing street, was hostess Monday morning to circle seven. The business session was presided over by Mrs. E. W. Irvine, leader, and the devotional given by Mrs. J. J. Lory.

The lesson on mission study, "Jerusalem to Jerusalem," was given with the following taking part: Mesdames O. B. Albritton, C. L. Oden, E. W. Irvine, Cliff Everts, A. C. Parks and J. L. Maxwell.

It was decided the circle would meet in the afternoon hereafter.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

Judge P. A. Martin, in his lesson Sunday, said the argument between fundamentalists and modernists over the reality of the Jonah and the whale episode was a waste of time. The lesson was what counted.

◇ ◇ ◇

Judge Martin has the same thought that Dr. Frederick Lynch, education secretary of Church Peace Union had, when he said, "A man goes to a church to worship, not to listen to a one-sided debate."

◇ ◇ ◇

In one of the lowest stratas of of the ruins of Babylon there appeared on a cuneiform fragment, this inscription, "Alas! Alas! Times are not what they were."

◇ ◇ ◇

Our world is a place where man's chief end in life seems to be to adjust himself to his environment.

◇ ◇ ◇

To this day, times are never what they were. And in so many, many ways, we are glad they are not. The cause bringing forth this lament is most often inability to understand "today."

◇ ◇ ◇

None of us understand just how the problems facing the youth of today will be worked out; but youth will work it out. We hear every day men and women in Wichita saying, "What is to become of our children?"

◇ ◇ ◇

The world and our children would be so much happier, if each looked to his own faults. It may be some small but constantly recurring error of our own is wearing down the hearts of those dearest to us.

◇ ◇ ◇

"The cost of a thing," says Thoreau, "is the amount of life required to be exchanged for it." Life is a much dearer thing to pay than dollars and cents.

◇ ◇ ◇

We look at two effeminate youths, with featureless faces and embossed hair who escorted two pretty girls to a concert recently and thought the world would be a pretty bad place if those were true samples of young American manhood. The most outstanding thing about them were their tuxedos.

◇ ◇ ◇

But we see boys with minds and characters each day; we see girls, who with all their gay nonsense, have ideals as crystal clear as the ideals of any age.

◇ ◇ ◇

True, young America does like to follow what it believes to be the "style." One fleshy example, probably 16 years old, got on the same bus with us the other evening and his little flat derby wasn't nearly so large as his fat face.

Presbyterian Groups Have Joint Luncheon

Members of the First Presbyterian and Lucy Hansel Missionary societies met in a joint session for a luncheon and program at the church at 1 o'clock Monday.

Circles one and two served the luncheon. The first number on the program was a violin solo by Mrs. Bruce Greenwood, accompanied by Miss Annette Walsh at the piano. Mrs. W. M. Priddy gave a vocal selection, accompanied by Mrs. Greenwood in the violin obbligato and Miss Walsh at the piano.

Mrs. H. B. Patterson reviewed "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," the book that has been studied by the two groups for the past six weeks. About 35 members attended the meeting.

Record News Daily Pattern Service

DAINTY KIDDIE FROCK
Pattern 1790

Isn't this an adorable little model for the wee miss? The cunning yoke points to smartness in front, but is straight across the back where a dainty opening fastens with tiny pearl buttons. Pin tucks, or gathers if you wish, form under the yoke to give fullness to the frock.

Design 1790 is made of dotted swiss or dimity, in solid color or with dots of contrasting color. The becoming square neck and the short kimona sleeves are bound in self material.

May be obtained only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch material.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model. The pattern has ample and exact instructions. Yardage is given for every size. A perfect fit is guaranteed.

Pattern will be delivered upon receipt of fifteen cents (15c) in coins carefully wrapped or stamps. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size wanted.

The new winter fashion book is ready for delivery. Price 15 cents, but only 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address all mail and orders to The Record News Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

First Methodist Society Has Program at Cline Home

Mrs. Walter Cline threw open her handsome home in Country Club Estates when the First Methodist Woman's Missionary society observed the week of prayer program there Monday afternoon. Receiving throughout the house with Mrs. Cline and Mrs. W. W. Cook, president of the society, were Mesdames S. S. McKinney, Phil D. Lesh, D. H. Allday, Jason Walker, H. K. Roberts, A. B. Lipscomb, C. C. Collier and Dick Levy with their assistants.

Mrs. W. W. Cook presided when the meeting was opened with group singing by Mrs. C. Y. Tully. Mrs. J. W. Akin Jr. was accompanist for the day.

After a lovely vocal number by Mrs. Tully, Mrs. Cook read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. Martin Rowe gave a beautiful vocal number.

The period of meditation followed and Mrs. C. A. Spraggins gave an inspiring talk on "The Goodness of God." Mrs. E. F. Bohmfalk gave two splendid readings, "The Great Guest," by Edwin Markham, and "Old Gentleman Gay."

The "Life of Maria Layng Gibson and Our Offering" was discussed by Mrs. C. H. Clark and personal reminiscences of Miss Gibson were given by Mrs. W. A. Miller who was a student in old Scarrett Bible school and was able to give many very interesting reminiscences.

A story about Miss Gibson was given by Dorothea Whitehead and in an impressive ceremonial, the offerings were taken from the baby department, the primary and the juniors.

As Mrs. C. Y. Tully sang "Give the Best You Have," the three department members marched in with a leader in each line carrying a little white basket in which the followers dropped their envelopes carrying a picture of Mary Layng Gibson. They had denied themselves for a month for this offering.

Mesdames Jason Walker, chairman, with her committee, Mesdames S. S. McKinney, Phil Lesh and D. H. Allday, helped Mrs. Cline prepare and serve the plates at noon. Mrs. C. C. Collier, chairman, with her committee, Mesdames H. K. Roberts, A. B. Lipscomb and Dick Levy, did splendid work as a committee of arrangements.

After lunch, Mrs. C. Y. Tully led in the hymn singing and Mrs. E. B. Gorsline gave the prayer after which Mrs. Wayne Somerville reviewed the book "Roads That Lead to the City of God," using maps, charts and posters, in a splendid outline.

The closing prayer was given by Mrs. C. A. Spraggins. Among those present were Mesdames C. A. Spraggins, C. H. Clark, J. B. Stokes, C. Y. Tully, J. W. Akin Jr., W. H. Walker, L. E. Ruth, C. L. Boone gave the afternoon devotional, using "Fellowship One With Another" as her subject. Mrs. H. W. Barton and Mrs. Gose Waggoner were on the program with talks before a memorial solo, "Sometime We'll Understand," was sung by Mrs. Wayne Barker, accompanied by Mrs. George Thorburn.

Mrs. J. A. Curtis had charge of the memorial service in which beautiful tribute was paid to Pat Anderson Newell, Wayne Henson, Mary Evelyn McGuigan, Edith Earline Stuckey, Mrs. H. M. Brannon and Miss Nora True.

Miss Viola Grace Doern gave the lovely Handel "Largo," accompanied by Mrs. Wayne Barker.

Personal impressions of Miss Maria Laying Gibson and Miss Lockie Rankin were given by Mrs. Homer Jasper and "Some Bright Morning" was sung as a memorial for these two. The offering made at this service was a memorial for Miss Gibson and will be used for the care of missionaries and deaconesses when sick or retired.

Mesdames John Tancred, S. E. Trevathan, W. J. Stuckler, Val Land, Herbert Gray, Henry Milliken and Paul Harding gave brief sketches of the following missionaries: Mattie Wright, Nannie Holding, Mabel Kennedy, Leila Roberts, Helen Gibson, Virginia Atkinson and Mrs. Julia Acton.

"Presentation of Our Gifts" was very vividly portrayed by Mesdames M. E. Crowell, Charles Crowell, E. A. McCarty, Joe Richker, Rose Corlett; Bobbie McCarty, Betty Jo Richker and Patsy Crowell.

Mrs. M. T. Clements made various announcements, after which Mrs. Milton Johnson dismissed the session with prayer.

Those present were Mesdames Earl Stuckey, Henry Milliken, W. J. Stuckler, M. M. Cummings, J. D. Vincent, L. E. Cowling, N. O. Mills, G. E. Laskey, R. L. Browning, H. C. Jasper, C. C. Piper, R. A. Soft, wavy hair!

The modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

Jealousy Is Main Cause of Wrecked Homes, Says Dix

Can a Jealous Couple Make a Success of Matrimony?—What Can A Husband Do When His Wife Tires of Marriage?—Doubting Thomas.

Dear Miss Dix—I am engaged to a nice girl and we are planning to be married very soon. Both of us have been working for quite a while. My fiancee wishes very much for me to join her church, but I am afraid that my family will disapprove and that it would cause hard feelings if I did so. I think that we should not live with either of our families, but go to ourselves, but my fiancee wishes to live at her mother's. My fiancee wishes to continue to work after we are married, but I seriously object to her doing so. We wish above all to be truly happy and shall sincerely appreciate any suggestions that you make about how to make our marriage a success. Both of us are quite jealous.—J. C. B.

Answer—My first suggestion, J. C. B., is to eliminate jealousy. That wrecks more marriages than any other one thing. For when suspicion enters the door, peace and happiness fly out of the window.

They say there is no cure for jealousy, but I think that common sense is a never-failing remedy for it. If, when you feel an attack coming on and perceive that you are getting green-eyed, if you will take a large and copious dose of good old hard horse sense, you will find that it will restore you to sanity and serenity.

Just consider how senseless jealousy is. How absurd. You must think that you are marrying a true woman and one whom you can trust, or else you would not have picked her out for a wife. You must think that she loves you and prefers you to other men, or else she would not marry you because you are no millionaire and have no glittering social position to offer her, and there is no reason in the world why she should marry you except for yourself alone.

Then why imagine every time you see her talking to another man that this woman whom you know to be honorable is about to betray you, or that she has ceased to love you and is likely to elope with any stranger who comes along?

So, if you want to be happy after you are married, you and your wife must make up your minds to trust each other, and to believe the best of each other, not to be always on the lookout, each expecting the other to play some dirty little trick. There is nothing really so insulting as jealousy. It shows that the jealous one believes you capable of doing the thing of which he or she accuses you.

As to whether you should join your sweetheart's church or not, that is a matter of your own religious convictions and you should be swayed by your conscience in the matter and not by what your family will think about it. Certainly when a married couple belong to the same church it makes for peace and harmony in the family, because there are enough things for a husband and wife to fight over without their engaging in a religious war.

Inasmuch as you are a poor young couple starting out on a very limited income, I think you are wrong in objecting to your wife keeping on with her job after you are married, as she wishes to do. Let her work until the babies come, which will automatically settle this question. A girl who has been used to earning her own salary and being financially independent is very apt to be dissatisfied and disgruntled when she finds herself with nothing to do except to try to stretch her husband's pay envelope farther than it will go and to wander around the store and look at the things she hasn't the money to buy.

You wouldn't want to give up your job just because you got married, would you? You wouldn't want to give up the work you like and that you had fitted yourself for doing, and the money it brought in, just because you are taking a wife, would you? Try to see it from your sweetheart's point of view and don't be old-fashioned enough to feel that there is any reflection on you in your wife working after marriage.

But you are right in putting your foot down good and hard, and keeping it there, on your fiancee's proposition that you go to live with her mother. Don't do it under any consideration. Don't live with your people or her people, or let any of them live with you. Start a home of your own even if it is only in a dry goods box. Go off by yourselves where you can fight it out together without having any in-laws to referee the domestic mill.

Statistics show that mothers-in-law cause more divorce than drink, or vamps, or any other one thing in the world. If your girl doesn't love you well enough to leave her mother for you, she doesn't love you well enough to be your wife. A girl with the mama complex is a mighty poor risk in matrimony.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I have been married for four years and have a boy 18 months of age. I have done everything I could to be a good husband and thought I was building up a home for my wife and child, but now my wife tells me that she does not love me and that married life is killing her and she cannot keep it up any longer, and she wants to leave me and go back to work again. I am a Mason and she says that I should put the child in the Masonic orphans' home. I am so desperate over the thought of losing my wife and being separated from my boy and having my home broken up that I have lost my hold on things. What shall I do?—A MISERABLE YOUNG MARRIED MAN.

Answer—It will be small comfort to you to tell you that your loss is small when you love a woman who is so selfish, and has so little natural feeling that she is willing to dump her own baby in an orphan asylum in order to get rid of it, but take the consolation for what it is worth.

I often think that nothing else is more pitiful than the wasted tears men and women shed in grieving over the loss of worthless husbands and wives that they should rejoice in getting rid of.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Marriage for Two--By Arthur Somers Roche

"All right," said Larry, "I'll marry the first girl that will have me."

sult, doesn't sneer, doesn't condemn."

"I know it," he admitted. "And—I'm sorry, Helen."

"Sorry? After what you've said to me? I'm worse than a woman of the streets, and—I hate you."

"You can't say that," he protested.

"I have said it, and I do say it," she cried. "And if your street women are so much better than I—why don't you marry one of them?"

A Threat

Shame that something lovely had been soiled had prompted his apology. But deeper than any sense of shame was the sense of outrage. This girl had taken from him the delicate fruits of first love and had tendered them back to him acid and rotten. He had shared with her his dreams, his hopes, his high ambitions; had been gay with her, thoughtful with her, ecstatic with her. She had a precious something from him that was meant for his wife, that was sacred.

And she had degraded it by placing upon it only a money value. He knew, with the clarity of disillusioned love, that she didn't care for Burton. He knew, with agony, that her sweet and shy surrenders to him had been sham. The hot resentment of youth burned more fiercely now than his love had burned a day ago.

"All right," he said, "I will. I'll marry the first girl that will have me."

"Go ahead," she jeered. "Do you imagine that it will make any conceivable difference to me?"

"Yes, I do," he cried. "Because—even if you are going to marry Burton, Helen, you're in love with me."

"After today?" She was completely mistress of herself now, and her smile was mocking. "Larry, I don't care what on earth you do; I don't care whom you marry or if you marry. I only want you to leave me now."

"I'm going," he said.

He felt strangely shorn of pride as he emerged from the house on Sixty-eighth street. He had acted vulgarly, without chivalry, without decency. Helen, despite the incredibly mercenary thing she was doing, had come out of the situation better than he had. If she, too, had called names, it was only after he had done so, only after he had stripped pride from her.

But she managed to pick up the tattered remnants of pride and put them on again. Whereas he—how he hated her.

If he could only hurt her as she had hurt him. . . . But how could he hurt her?

Was it possible that his love had so quickly turned to hate? He must dismiss the new emotion lest it rule him more powerfully than its predecessor had ever done. No, he wouldn't. He'd hug hate to him, hurt her. . . . The whole world knew that they had been engaged. Suppose he married—just to hurt her—the first girl that would have him? By God, he'd do that very thing.

He had said to her that she was still in love with him, but now, as he walked toward Fifth avenue, he reviewed all their acquaintance. Strangely, considering that they knew the same people, had always known them, they had never met until two months ago. But his summers had been spent in travel that did not include the fashionable resorts which were her sole acquaintance with the world. In the winter he'd been away at school, at college, and lately had been engrossed in his law practice. They had reviewed affairs, and found that both of them had attended the same parties, but—well, there it was: they'd never met. New York was a big place, and one might never encounter one's dearest friends next dearest friend.

How much fun it would have been, he had said to her, if they'd known each other from childhood, if he, at 15, could have taught her, at 10, to dive, to play tennis. . . . But, she had reminded him, boys of 15 scorned girls of 10. But he had known that the boy he had been would have braved juvenile teasing and devoted himself to the girl she must have been.

Still—and these had been silly and therefore delightful arguments—some of the novelty of acquaintance might have been worn off had they been childhood sweethearts. This way, meeting when she was 23 and he 27, there was the unexplored past as well as the unexplored future to walk together. Not forgetting the wholly delectable present.

The Girl in the Park

He reached the avenue, and became dully conscious that it was a warm spring day. Across the street were occasional benches where, in summer, idlers sat. He narrowly avoided a taxi, but hardly heard the raucous insults hurled at him by the driver. In his misery he would not have minded being instantly killed. What had he to live for, now that love had gone from him?

He saw nothing absurd in his attitude. He was by no means humorless, but disillusioned love is more easily laughed at in the forties than in the twenties.

Then, as he slumped down upon a bench, his mood changed again. He had much to live for. He had hate to cast a more fiery light for his way than ever love had cast.

She hadn't loved him. It had been all a pretense. Daughter of a widowed mother, dependent on a comparatively small income, she had feigned a passion that she never felt. Not his charm, not his own love for her, but his money—that had been the reason for her swift surrender.

His threat that he would marry the first girl who'd have him had been uttered simply because, in his vanity, he believed that she still cared for him. But she'd never cared for him, had only loved his money, and had transferred her affections to a larger amount of money. He had meant security, comfort and luxury. But Frank Burton had meant colossal wealth, and that was all there was to it.

Then another angle obtruded into his mental vision. The world—their world, at any rate—knew of the engagement. It had been announced, and the wedding date had been set. That little world which seemed so important would know that Laurence Tracy had been jilted by Helen Wilson.

To hurt her! To embarrass her! It wasn't worthy, this wish to hurt a woman, but what did he care about worthiness. If the woman one loved was utterly devoid of honor, then the whole world must be equally lacking in it, and chivalry was an outmoded thing. By God, he would marry, marry instantly, and the world would think that he had done the jilting and that Helen had accepted Burton as a second and desperate choice.

Along the sidewalk came a figure. It passed in front of Tracy, but he couldn't have told, so blinded was he by the rage of hurt pride, whether it was a man or a woman. But when the figure paused at the far end of the bench and sat down he turned and stared.

A woman; a girl. Why on earth should she choose this particular spot to rest? Why couldn't she let him alone, let him have that complete solitude which he craved? Then he forgot her, as his mind went back to Helen, and to the incomprehensible revelation of her greed.

A slight movement from the girl at the other end of the bench interrupted his revery. Damn her, why must she fidget? If she must disturb, by her presence, the thoughts of another person, why couldn't she keep quiet? He turned, with utter lack of rationality, to frown at her.

Something about her expression banished his frown. She was looking toward him, but he felt that she didn't see him. In her eyes was the strained, anxious expression of one who is contemplating something so awesome that near surroundings mean nothing.

Involuntarily he turned and looked in the direction of her gaze. But beyond a jam in the motor traffic there was nothing to excite the slightest interest. He turned back to the girl, and now she met his glance. The faintest color showed in her cheeks and she averted her eyes.

Pretty thing. That is she would be if she weren't so pale, so thin. Marvelous eyes, only the hollows beneath them lent her a gauntness that did not blend with the youthful grace of her figure. Carelessly, he eyed that figure. Immature—or maybe just thin. Her neck—damn it, the girl looked half-starved.

Well, let her starve! As far as he was concerned, every woman in the world could starve.

But, at that, with decent clothes . . . The run-down heels of her shoes; the painfully darned stockings; the shiny shabbiness of her blue serge suit . . .

Hoover Extends Sympathy To Boyhood Teacher

WEST BRANCH, Iowa, Nov. 25. (INS)—Mrs. Mollie Brown Carran, boyhood school teacher of President Hoover, was in receipt of a telegram today from the chief executive and Mrs. Hoover offering sympathy in the death of Mrs. Carran's husband, John K. Carran.

Mr. and Mrs. Carran were the first guests to be entertained at luncheon by Mr. and Mrs. Hoover in the White House the day following the inaugural.

The president renewed his friendship with his old-time school mistress when he made his homecoming trip last year to West Branch, his birthplace. A daughter of the Carrans, Mrs. Marian Barnes, lives in Pasadena, Calif.

Driver Not Liable for Injury of Passenger

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25, (INS)—The supreme court today held constitutional a Connecticut law providing that a guest passenger in an automobile cannot hold the owner and driver liable for damages in an accident, unless the accident were intentional.

The decision was given in the appeal of Mae Silver, who sued her husband, after she was injured when he was driving his car in New Haven county. Silver, it is understood, carried liability insurance.

Cotton Loan Explained To Louisiana Farmers

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 25.(AP)—Farmers of 42 cotton-growing parishes in Louisiana gathered at their respective county seats today to hear detailed explanations of what the recently authorized federal farm board's million-dollar loan to the state's cotton cooperative will mean to them.

Officials of the Louisiana Farm Bureau Cotton Growers' Cooperative association, the farm bureau expert station and the agricultural extension division of Louisiana State university were called on to address the meetings.

Supreme Court Upholds California Fuel Tax

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25, (AP)—The California motor vehicle fuel tax laws of 1923 and 1927 were held valid by the supreme court today in a case brought by George B. Williams of Los Angeles and other owners of motor vehicles.

The tax was assailed by automobile owners as a "toll" prohibited under federal road aid statutes. It was also attacked on the ground it permitted distributors to retain a part of the tax to cover evaporation.

Guests were Mrs. Emma Laughridge of Smithville, Texas, and Miss Dorothy Greathouse.

Division Ten

Division ten met with Mrs. J. B. Meissner on Austin. The rooms were beautiful with great baskets of orchid chrysanthemums and vases of fall roses.

During the business session, which was presided over by Mrs. Meissner, plans were made for the Christmas party for the division to be held at the home of Mrs. L. B. Cummings.

Mrs. Harry May led the lesson on "Witnesses of His Strength," which was followed by a song by Mrs. O. B. Karr. Interesting papers on "Missions in Africa" were given by Mesdames Early Van Deventer, W. S. Gullihorn and T. P. Kelm.

During the social session refreshments were served to Mesdames W. P. Parker, W. S. Gullihorn, L. B. Cummings, Harry May, C. E. Stevens, O. H. Karr, T. P. Kelm, Fanny Wheeler, J. W. Hopper, M. P. Rogers, Early Van Deventer, H. M. Campbell and J. B. Meissner.

Junior College Prof To Head Ad Program

A. F. Edwards of the Junior college will have charge of the program at the regular luncheon of the Advertising club at the Kemp hotel at noon Tuesday, it was announced.

Due to the fact that station KRLD of Dallas has been requested to release its regular time of broadcasting from another program, the local club will not receive the talk to be made by Merle Thorpe, editor of "The Nation's Business" magazine.

This talk will be broadcast from Washington over the nation-wide net work of the Columbia Broadcasting system through WMAL, at 1 o'clock central standard time. His subject will be "Advertising's Opportunity."

Review of $75,000 Judgment Is Denied

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (UP)—The estate of Robert Lee Alexander, former county treasurer of Pottawatomie county, Oklahoma, and the American Surety company of New York, today were denied a supreme court review of a $75,000 circuit court of appeals judgment awarded to the board of county commissioners because of an alleged bribe accepted by Alexander as treasurer to buy certain securities with county money. The bonding company argued the judgment should be limited to the alleged bribe of $7,500, instead of the full $75,000 purchase price of the securities.

COUPLE JAILED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 25. (AP)—Mrs. Bertha Ellison and her alleged paramour, Andrew Garner, were placed in the county jail here today, and Coroner John J. Diffly said the woman confessed to witnessing Garner drown their 8-month-old daughter, Eleanor May.

SHORT STORY WRITER SUED

Ventriloquist Says B. Hecht Wrote About Him

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. (INS)—Ben Hecht wrote a short story a while ago that has had an unexpected sequel in a $250,000 suit for alleged libel, it was learned tonight.

The plaintiff is the "Great Lester," famous ventriloquist of another day in the theater, and now living a retired life in Rhinelander, Wis.

Press Agents Named

The defendants, along with Hecht, are James Cruze, of the films, Harry Reichenbach and Harry Scott, two of the best known press agents, and Sono-Art productions and world wide pictures, producers and distributors of the film "The Great Gabbo."

Over the week-end the various defendants were sought by summons servers dispatched by Bernard H. Sandler, attorney for the great Lester, of No. 225 Broadway.

The basis of the suit is that the Great Gabbo of the films was altogether too closely identified with the Great Lester of real life.

Hecht's short story told the tale of a ventriloquist who worked so long with his dummy that eventually he thought the dummy real and, in a moment of jealousy, stabbed the sawdust creature. Then he went to the police, confessed to murdering the dummy and was committed to an insane asylum, where he died.

So far, the Great Lester is not concerned. But when "The Great Gabbo" was to make its motion picture debut, certain press agent stories appeared, Lester declares.

These stories, it is alleged, asserted that "The Great Gabbo" was founded on fact, founded in fact, on the life and death of the Great Lester.

Whereupon the Great Lester has emerged from the Limbo of Rhinelander, Wis., to assert that he never stabbed his dummy, never committed murder, never was committed to an insane asylum and, hence, could not have died in one.

Now he wants to call attention—$250,000 worth of attention—to those facts.

Sisters Charge Fraud in Burial Lot Transaction

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 25.(UP)—Because they alleged they were defrauded out of $13,234 in a burial lot deal, two sisters, Eliza A. Cameron and Ode E. Cameron, today filed suit for $43,254 damages against the Memorial Park association and its trustees.

The women allege they were defrauded in purchase of 37 lots within a year.

Britain to Name Naval Parley Delegates Soon

LONDON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told the house of commons today that the chief British delegates to the five-power naval conference in January would probably be named next week.

President Hoover's proposal for the immunity of food ships in wartime was brought up when Commander Southby, conservative, asked the prime minister whether the food ship proposal would not be excluded from the discussion at the conference as a result of the decision to exclude discussion of the freedom of the seas principle.

Mr. MacDonald answered President Hoover had stated in his Armistice day speech that the food ship question was not intended for consideration at the five-power conference. He added the British government was in full agreement with his view.

Value of Terracing To Be Taught at Quanah

Special to The Record News

QUANAH, Texas, Nov. 25.—A model farm to show the value of terracing is to be located on the farm of T. C. Burkey in the Friendship community 12 miles from Quanah, according to County Agent Luther Hunter who will have charge of the work.

The owner has purchased a grader, and this grader and other implements will be used in the demonstrations to be regularly held on this tract. Lines are being run now, and within a short time the first demonstration on this model farm will be given.

Thousands of acres of Hardeman county land have been terraced under the direction of County Agent Hunter, and material savings and increases in production have been the result.

Children Cry for it

Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

THE BEAR-HUNTING SEASON
Daily Editorial

THE bear-hunting season is in full swing. Out in the Yellowstone, park authorities have mounted choicely-baited sections of big iron pipe on automobile trucks, and are luring troublesome bruins into the traps.

Too many grizzly play-boys have been breaking into camps and raiding hotel pantries, thereby invoking federal attention and banishment from the bacon-rind pastures.

Uncle Sam is also collecting big guns in Washington to halt bear sentiment, which for the past month has upset prosperity's juiciest apple carts, and tended to devastate general confidence.

President Hoover's campaign against pernicious pessimism opens up with a billion dollar railroad development boom, the echoes of which, ringing 'round the world, begin to dissipate market gloom and bring frightened ticker quotations, grain prices and bond bids out of cyclone cellars, where they have shivered and cowered and over-nursed their wounds.

Traffic experts, scanning balance sheets and horizons, decide to proceed with budgeted improvements and assure steel plants and equipment concerns of contracts which will keep blast furnaces, rail mills, locomotive factories and car shops on full-time schedules.

Are We Too Clever?

IT TAKES a good deal of faith to live happily in this modern world. There are so many things that disturb one's serenity; so many troubling indications that human beings are neither very wise, very noble or very important. To live in contentment in spite of these things requires a good bit of faith in the things that are unseen.

There is, for instance, the great steel mill district that surrounds the southern end of Lake Michigan. Entering Chicago from the east, you ride through this district for miles. As far as you can see, in every direction, there is nothing but a jumble of factories.

These factories are not disturbing because of their ugliness. Men have always built ugly buildings, and they always will. The sheer size and complexity of this conglomeration of mills are what bothers one. They make the men who work in them and live about them seem insignificant. They cause one to doubt that man is made for a high destiny when he can spend his whole life as an insignificant mite in this chaos of furnaces.

Then there are the automobile factories of Detroit. They spraddle out over miles of ground. Their production lines seem utterly unending. In them are machines that seem almost human—and human beings that seem almost machine-like. A person visiting them cannot escape the horrible suspicion that the man-is-a-machine theory may be right.

There are, also, Chicago's stockyards. It is impossible to avoid a slight chill of uneasiness at the sight of those droves of cattle and hogs being swiftly, relentlessly transformed from living animals into dressed beef and pork. Life, there, becomes a mere matter of breathing and eating and sleeping. How can you keep feeling that life is a miracle when you see how easily, and casually, it can be destroyed?

Those are a very few of the things that assail a man in this modern age. It is hard to keep the old faith, hard to cling to the old belief that life partakes of a glory beyond the stars.

We are, after all, alone on a planet that swings through empty space, and if we conclude that we are traveling without a goal the job of living becomes insupportable, for most of us. Yet our very cleverness in making machines, erecting factories and putting great cities together is operating to rob us of the faith that we need.

Our New Air Problem

THE RECENT CRASH of an airplane on a roof in the heart of New York City, in which the pilot was killed and his passenger escaped by a parachute leap, has brought to mind again a problem that threatens to become increasingly serious as time goes on.

Certainly, as air travel expands and the number of planes in the sky increases, we can expect more of these dangerous crashes in thickly populated city districts unless preventive steps are taken. Thus a new menace to life and limb, like the traffic problem brought by the automobile, appears inevitable unless the situation is met now.

Sane, commercial flying should not suffer by being forced to detour miles off regular routes to avoid flying over cities. These pilots, who know their business, rarely have accidents and when something does go amiss they usually have enough ability to handle their ship safely.

The fliers who should be kept away from over cities are the inexperienced student pilot and the reckless stunt flier who thinks it amusing to cut dangerous capers over congested areas where he can get a bigger audience. The student pilot should be relegated to the country for his own good, the stunt flier for the public's safety.

Aviation is no longer a spectacle; it is now an established business with millions invested therein. The rattle-brained stunt flier whose lust for a thrill breeds needless accidents that reflect unfavorably upon the whole aviation industry is perhaps the greatest menace to its sound development.

Every city should have adequate laws to protect itself against this new menace from the sky. One plane falling into the heart of a theater crowd, for example, might kill and maim scores of persons. Then, of course, adequate steps would at once be taken to prevent the recurrence of such a catastrophe.

But why not prevent it from happening the first time?

Achievement Day

SATURDAY was achievement day in Nacogdoches county. On that day the Nacogdoches Chamber of Commerce awarded prizes to the boys and girls of that county who had made the best records in agricultural production.

In the face of a poor crop year one boy made a record of two bales of cotton from one acre of ground; another boy had a record of 97 bushels of corn from an acre. Others had made records that were far above the average yields of the farms of the county.

Four hundred and eighty-seven boys and girls took part in the contests and $2,000 in prizes were distributed during the year.

We would venture the assertion that this amount was more than brought back to Nacogdoches county this year alone in the increased value of the agricultural products produced. But the lessons of industry and better methods learned in the contest will continue to produce dividends in Nacogdoches county for many years to come. The new set of farmers growing up in Nacogdoches county will surely be more intelligent and efficient than their elders. No expenditure by the business interests of Nacogdoches, who doubtless furnished the funds for the prizes, could have been more wisely made.

Oh, I would like to give you
A gift before you go;
A tribute that would say to you:
"She loves you so."

Darling, I should offer you
Largess as you leave,
But my hands are clumsy—
I cannot sew or weave.

I cannot even sing you songs;
So many gifts I lack—
You must go empty-handed,
But, oh, my dear, come back.

Observation

Eddie Cantor says the recent Wall street calamity did one good thing. It, at least, made people live within their means. And Mr. Brisbane argues that more people will go back to work instead of sitting in brokerages from 10 till 3. The following sign in the garment center appears to substantiate their comments:

Simon Kolbstein
Manufacturer of Dresses
"Formerly with J. P. Morgan & Co."

Pun My Soul!

Izzy Elinson's stocks are going up.

"Why," he writes, "I can hardly believe my own highs!"

Imagine

The height of publicity gags for a cinema actress was reached during the stock market excitement. The press agent for Fox Films, knowing that more people than ever were watching the ticker, cleverly arranged this stunt which went over the tape:

"Notice . . . Certificate, No. 1 . . . For Shares Class . . . A . . . Stock of . . . Fox Theaters Corporation . . . In name of Lina Basquette . . . Has Been Reported Lost . . . Finder will Communicate With E. P. Dutton and Co. . . ."

The Retort Proper

All his life a certain renowned producer of good shows (who once was a reporter himself), has refused to talk to newspaper men, insisting that some member of his staff speak for him. "If Mr. Hearst or Mr. Adolph Ochs or Mr. Pulitzer comes up here, I'll be glad to see them," he once said, "otherwise their representatives can speak to my representatives!"

S. J. Perelman, one of the more comical comedians on Judge, has written a book christened, "Dawn Ginsbergh's Revenge," the words and pictures being by the master himself. The publisher, incidentally, is Horrors Liveright, who is a nice feller, and all that, but when he wears a dinner suit he looks like a trap drummer who has been thrown out of work by the Vitaphone.

However, Groucho Marx, of the Three Marx Brothers, has indorsed Mr. Perelman's book in this manner: "From the moment I picked it up until I put it down, I was convulsed with laughter. Some day I intend reading it."

Oh, Mr. Wilstach!

Here are some new suggestions for Frank Wilstach's Dictionary of Similes: Percy Hammond: Mr. Hampton played his role with the gay gusto of a serious librarian on a spree. Elsie McCormick: Have no more respect for an author than a Soviet schoolboy has for King George. Helen Mullins: Kisses like honey from a spoon. Jessica Nelson: Souls crash like reeds in a frozen marsh. Will Rogers: Peace is like a beautiful woman; it's wonderful, but has been known to bear watching. Jim Tully: I was so low I thought a bus-boy was an aristocrat. Charles Beahan: Sexless as a tearoom hostess. H. L. Mencken: Dignified as the archbishop of Canterbury. Ray Hall: About as safe as a Christian in Mecca. Bugs Baer: Women's fashions are like the subway during the rush hour: no allowance made for hips. Regina Carewe: Difficult as to tell which tooth of a buzz-saw cuts deepest. Robert Littell: Acute as the isolation of a pacifist in wartime. George Jean Nathan: As convincing as a chorus man's suit for alienation of affections.

Hehehah

Take it from an interesting person who signs himself Tab, when "The Channel Road" broke in at Hartford recently Alexander Woollcott, one of the collaborators, made a speech at a dinner in honor of the producer, Arthur Hopkins.

Woolcott took for his subject a scene from a play in which Petrova starred. "Petrova," said Woollcott, "was immense in one scene in which she made ready for bed by putting on a long nightgown made of silver tissue. It was the best thing I ever saw in my life!"

To which F. P. A., the goat-getter, chirped: "You ought to get around more!"

In Fewer Words

People, take it from Will Rogers, are like a cat when it comes to their lives; they have at least nine, and they pick out the one to write about that they think will look the best.

Yes, Indeedy

Recently one of New York's bigger business men spent oodles of coin to advertise that business is sound. He also urged New Yorkers and others not to be pessimistic and spread propaganda that would bring on a real panic.

In the same envelope containing his advertisement suggestion he inclosed a memo to the head of his advertising department, which read: "Fire at least two of your staff. We must keep down expenses."

Yeah, business is so sound—you can hear the thump.

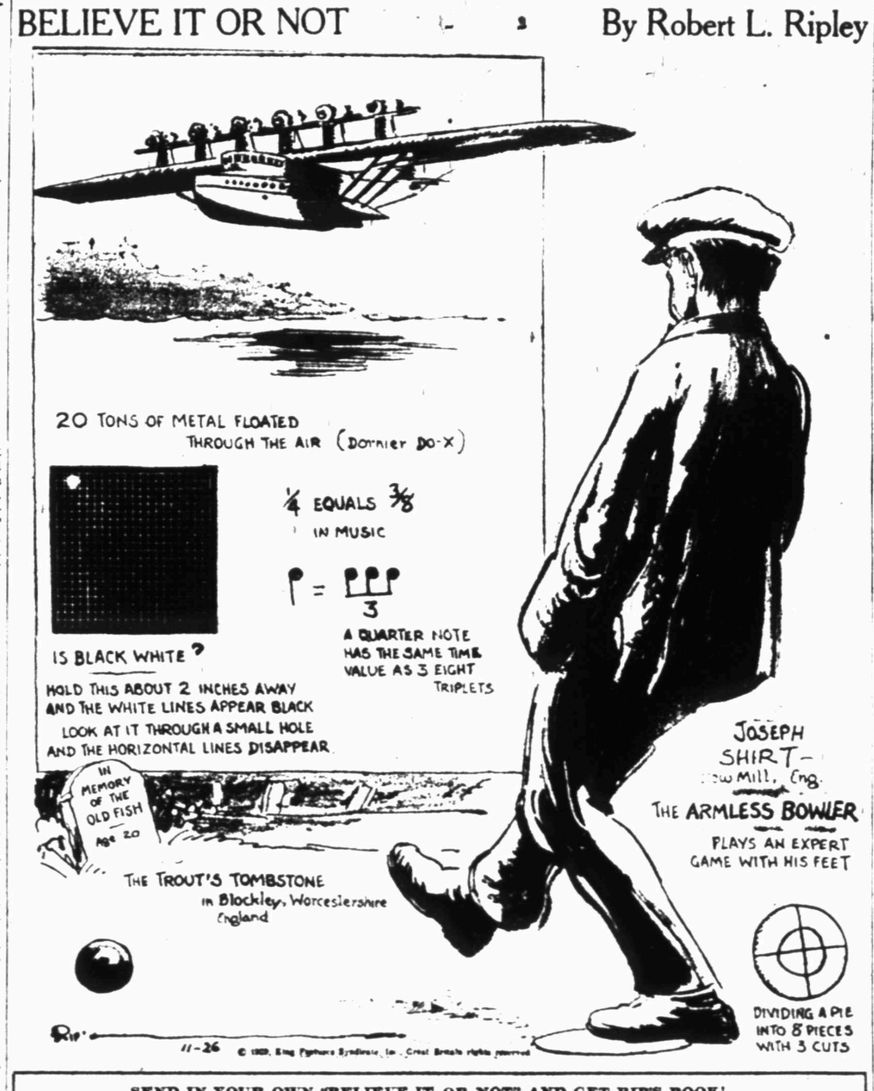

KIDNAPING ALLEGED

DALLAS, Nov. 25. (AP)—Two men were held in jail here today for questioning after they were alleged to have forcibly taken two women from their escorts last night and forced them to accompany them to a hotel. The women, uninjured, were rescued by officers who hurried to the hotel after the escorts had reported the kidnaping.

I. C. C. RULING

'EASY' The Love Story of a Modern Girl
By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER XLVIII

Jeanie was alone in the sitting room when Ann Marie arrived. She was sitting at the breakfast table with its china and silver and glass shining in the sun that flooded the room.

"Isn't this the life! I ask you!" she said in a breathless, happy excited way when Ann Marie had kissed her. "Breakfast at noon!—Stroll on Fifth avenue! Lunch at any old time—Shops and dance places!—Dressing for dinner and a show afterward!—Never in all my life have I had such a good time."

She certainly looked as if she were having a good time. Her cheeks were pink above the dim soft pink of her clinging satin dressing-gown, and her eyes shone.

"Brooky's shaving," she said. "He says his hand is never steady until he's had a drink in the morning—and he's just had one. That's why that bottle is on the mantel-shelf. I supposed you noticed the smell of whisky, didn't you, Spotless and Pure!" She laughed.

But Ann Marie had not noticed it. She was too wrapped up in her own anxiety to notice much of anything that morning.

"Jeanie," she said, "Leota Ingram is going to sue Howdy for breach of promise unless he gives her two thousand dollars!"

Jeanie raised her eyebrows.

"Oh, how can she do that?" she asked, pushing back her wide sleeves from her arms. "Why, Howdy's been married for perfect ages."

"Yes—and Stella knows that she is going to have a baby," Ann Marie told her. "That's the worst of it—All this Leota business will just kill Stella if she finds out about it."

Jeanie didn't think so.

"People don't die so easily," she said. "And besides Leota will never start any kind of a suit. She knows we haven't any money, anyway. Why, dad couldn't even scrape up the money for my wedding—"

Her face brightened with a wide smile.

"The wedding was lovely, wasn't it?" she asked. "Thanks to you and the money you let me have, you perfect darling!"

"Yes—and I've come to you for some now!" Ann Marie sat on the very edge of her chair, her face eager and questioning.

"Jeanie," she said, "Leota has hired that awful Beeseley for her lawyer—and she's told us that he's going to file a breach-of-promise suit for her against Howdy today unless Howdy gives her that two thousand dollars. Jeanie, you know Brooke could let me take that much—and you know I'd pay it back to him! You know I would! I have a job, and I'm making some extra money besides—"

All the brightness faded from Jeanie's face, like sunlight leaving a blank white wall.

"Ann Marie, you've no right to come here like this and spoil my honeymoon!" she cried. "What would Brooky think of me if I came crying to him about the family before we'd been married a week! He'd just think that he was going to support the whole gang of you all the rest of his life, that's what! —Why, I wouldn't ask him for a dollar and I absolutely forbid you to!"

She clenched her hands on her knees. The sun, coming through the high windows, twinkled on the enormous diamond engagement ring she wore. On her diamond-studded wedding ring.

"Money—money all around," thought Ann Marie foolishly as she went downstairs again in the elevator, "and not a cent to lend."

That made her think of a poem she had read somewhere.

She tried to remember what poem it was . . . But she couldn't think clearly.

The one and only thing that stood out in her mind was that she had failed . . . She had tried everywhere she could think of to get that money for Howdy. There was no other place to go.

She was through.

It was 12 o'clock, and the beautiful high-ceilinged lobby was already filling with the crowd that gathers for lunch every day in the cool dining-rooms that seem to have some of Central Park's coolness in them.

Wonderfully dressed, superbly groomed women were standing about in little groups or sitting in the big deep arm-chairs, smoking a cigaret while they waited for someone to lunch with . . . Ann Marie saw a tall good-looking man come up to one waiting woman, take her hands and gaze at her as if she were the most marvelous person in the whole world. . . . Probably she was, to him. . . .

"That's the way Jim Goodwin used to look at me," thought Ann Marie.

She remembered so clearly the day they had come here and had had lunch with Janet . . . How Janet had chattered and laughed, and how quiet Jim had been just sitting there smiling his quizzical shy smile that always seemed to have something a little sad about it.

Suddenly, with a start, she saw Jim coming up the wide front steps of the hotel!

He was alone, his eyes fixed and thoughtful, as he mounted the steps and turned toward the check room with his gray hat in his hand.

All at once he saw Ann Marie. In an instant the absent-minded look was gone from his eyes. Half the width of the lobby was between them, but in less time than it takes to tell about it, he had crossed.

She felt his hand shake as he clasped hers. And it told her, as nothing else could have told her, how much it meant to him to see her.

"Where have you been?" he asked. "Janet came back to town today and she's been trying to reach you. Miss Hogan said your sister was going to get married and that you'd gone home, but should have been back yesterday. Which sister was it?"

Ann Marie laughed. "Both of them!" she said. "Jeanie is here honeymooning with Brooke Walters—you remember him? And Alice! — Alice married Neal Forsythe!"

He nodded.

"Ah—so that's it!" he remarked thoughtfully. "I wondered what had happened to you when I saw you standing here . . . You must'nt take it like this, Ann Marie . . . If you'll forgive me for saying this —he wasn't the man for you. I know Neal and I like him. But he wasn't the man for you."

He gave a short laugh. "I talk as if I were reading that out of a book, don't I?" he asked. "And probably I sound very foolish—but what I say is the truth, just the same."

He looked beyond her into the dining-room where they had had lunch with Janet that one day.

"Let's go and sit down," he said. "I want to talk to you. . . . Or would you rather not?"

"I want to talk to you, too!" answered Ann Marie. "But I don't want to sit down and eat anything —I haven't been hungry for two days."

They were out in the sunshine now, standing on the steps while they waited for Jim's car to be brought up from the garage where he had left it.

"We'll get into my car and take a ride," Jim had decided. "That's about the only way two people can be alone in New York these days."

I came up and they got into it.

"This is the place where Neal Forsythe first made love to me," Ann Marie thought. "How wonderful he seemed to me, then!—The best-looking man that ever walked in shoe-leather."

Well, he was still the best-looking man that she ever had seen . . . YBut she knew him now. She knew how vain he was or those looks of his. How selfish he was . . . How conceited . . . And, oh, how appallingly lazy and good-for-nothing!

"I do look like a fright!" she said, leaning forward to glance at herself in Jim's windshield mirror. "No wonder you felt sorry for me, Jim—I didn't sleep much last night, and I haven't eaten very much for a couple of days. That always pulls a person down."

She turned to him, smiling. "You thought I was heart-broken about Neal, didn't you?"

He didn't answer.

"Well, I'm not, she went on "whether you believe me or not . . . I was hurt, naturally, because he threw me down. And I was angry because he took my car for his honeymoon—but I wasn't really much upset when I knew he'd eloped with Alice. Two months ago it would have broken my heart, but not now . . . I guess I just saw too much of him."

She gave a long sigh.

"But now let me tell you what I wanted to tell you," she said and as the great car slid noiselessly, almost, into Central park she began the Leota-story once more.

She had told it so many times during the last two days that it did not take her more than a minute or two to tell it now, from start to finish, to Jim Goodwin.

"And what I want to ask you," she said when she had told it all, "is for a loan of two thousand dollars, so I can give it to Leota and get rid of her. Will you give it to me?"

"Jim thought that over. Then he shook his head.

"No," he said. "I won't."

Swedish Woman Tries To Shoot Archbishop

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 25. (AP)—A Swedish woman named Marguerite Gudum attempted to shoot Monsignor Smith, titular archbishop of Paralo and former apostolic vicar of Norway, in St. Peter's cathedral yesterday.

The woman, who seemed to be mentally deranged, was disarmed by visitors to the cathedral and handed over to the pontifical gendarmes.

This was the first attempt at a serious crime in the newly formed Vatican city.

She approached Monsignor Smith Saturday and asked him for employment at the vatican. Monsignor Smith is a native of Holland.

Reserve Officers Hold Banquet at Mangum

Special to The Record News

MANGUM, Okla., Nov. 25.—Twenty-five representatives of the Greer and Kiowa county chapters of the Reserve Officers association met here last week for a banquet at Hotel Franklin. Capt. E. J. Tully of Oklahoma City was present and conducted a school of instruction following the feast. Lieut. Col. Frank H. McGregor acted as toastmaster for the affair. Dr. McGregor returned recently from Washington where he received the army war diploma for having completed the C-I course for 1930.

Supreme Court Refuses To Review Liquor Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (INS)—The supreme court today for the second time refused to review a decision of the Iowa supreme court upholding conviction of A. C. Bamsey on a liquor charge based upon evidence secured by police who entered his apartment without a search warrant.

Bamsey had appealed for rehearing on the ground that the first petition did not state his whole case for review.

The Once Over
By H. I. PHILLIPS

If Baseball Were Played Like Football

"Ruth is at bat now, folks . . . He has taken his third strike but is not out. . . . They've changed the rule on the third strike, you know, and a third strike doesn't count any more if the batter swings after the ball has crossed the plate . . . There! . . . Babe has socked out a home run clear over the fence! . . . No, wait a minute, folks. . . . The umpire is blowing the whistle and calling Ruth back. . . . I don't know why. . . . It seems it is illegal to knock a curve ball over the fence without signalling or something. . . . The rules committee, I am told, changed the regulations last winter.

PHILLIPS

"Ruth is still up. . . . He had five strikes on him a minute ago but he now has only one strike. . . . The pitcher was penalized four strikes for taking too much time or something. . . . Smacko! Ruth just poled one into deep center field where Wilson caught it. . . . Ruth is now on third base. . . . It may be that some of you don't quite understand that play. . . . It was like this. . . . Under the new rules it is illegal for a fielder to catch a ball until it has first touched the ground!

"Now Lazzeri is up. . . . On the first ball pitched he fouls one into the grandstand. . . . Lazzeri is out. . . . Mr. Jarvis B. Pootte, a spectator, caught that ball. . . . Under the revised rules a batter is out if a foul ball into the stands is caught by any gentleman in a blue suit.

"This retires the side. . . . There are only two men out, but that of course is sufficient under the agreement reached by the coaches at the winter conference held at the Plaza to perfect ways and means of making baseball more difficult to follow.

"Foxx is now up for the Athletics. . . . He has been penalized two strikes for glaring at the catcher. . . . Foxx hits the next ball to second. . . . The second baseman fumbles and the ball bounds over his head where it is recovered by the center fielder, who throws in time to catch Foxx at first. . . . Foxx is safe, however. . . . It is illegal this season for a player to recover a fumbled ball.

Miller is now at bat. . . . One strike, three balls. . . . Ball four. . . . Ball five! . . . Ball six! . . . Ball seven! . . . Ball eight! . . . It looks pretty serious now. . . . If Miller gets 10 balls he walks. . . . This is quite different from the old days when four balls constituted a pass. . . . Well it all tends to open up the game, folks, and make it deeper and harder!"

National Biscuit company has voted to split its stock two and a half for one. This presumably disposes of the report the biscuit company contemplated merging with Warner Brothers and producing talking animal crackers.

Market Mother Goose

Sing a song of millions—
A pocket full of stocks,
Four and twenty good things
Gone upon the rocks.

The bears are in the counting house
Counting out their shares,
The lambs are in the pawn shops
Hocking all their wares.

The queens are in high dudgeon
There isn't any honey;
What's the use of petting
Men who haven't money.

Wichita Falls as a Poultry Center

Among the varied industries which have developed phenomenally during the past 10 years to supplement the oil business in building an active, heavily populated community in the Wichita Valley, one of the most stable and progressive is that of poultry and egg production.

Developed with less attention from the general public than has been given some other enterprises, the growth of this industry has nevertheless proceeded steadily, and has carried it into the foremost ranks of profitable commercial undertakings.

Made necessary, in part, and aided largely also by the rapid growth of Wichita Falls' population, the raising of poultry and eggs has been greatly enhanced by the natural conditions existing in this district. A maximum of bright weather throughout the year, with an average temperature of 65 degrees, has been found highly favorable to the production of eggs as well as the growth of chickens. Such an authority as M. Johnson, head of the largest chicken ranch in the world, which is located near this city, states that the sandy soil common to this section is one of the most desirable for the poultry business. Other material factors contributing to the success of the industry here are unusually adequate railroad facilities, and the recently completed irrigation system. The latter has greatly expedited the local production of green feeds in abundance, an important factor in successful promotion of poultry and egg production.

Inauguration of egg and chicken production on a large scale near the city received a marked impetus with the concentration of oil field population here in 1919 and 1920, when the total number of residents reached a figure probably half again larger than the present population. Further extension of the machinery and energy thus devoted to these activities followed to make the community a considerable producer for markets in other sections of the country.

At the top of the industry in this vicinity stands the M. Johnson ranch, maintaining a flock of White Leghorn laying hens of from 10,000 to 14,000 throughout the year, and capable of producing more than 500,000 baby chicks every three weeks. These chicks are shipped at the age of one day all over the country, and have been used in building poultry raising enterprises in hundreds of communities. Another large poultry farm, the Sunshine ranch, adjoins the Johnson ranch, and also specializes in White Leghorns.

Definite organization of the Ray-Massie community residents for cooperative production and marketing of poultry and eggs was accomplished early this year. Scores of the small farms with which the irrigated valley is becoming well equipped include large flocks of high grade chickens in their farm programs. One of the principal endeavors in the small-farm community now under development by Charles Weeks, California colonization expert, is the raising of White Leghorn chickens and eggs for commercial purposes.

Growth of the turkey-raising branch of the poultry industry near this city is reflected in the shipment of more than 200,000 pounds of dressed turkeys to Eastern markets from Wichita Falls during approximately five days, from Nov. 11 to 15. Poultrymen of this district are organized, and are affiliated with the national trade organization. Along with manufacturing, dairying and wholesaling, egg and poultry production represents one of the most firmly established industries thus far developed in the community.

By GRANTLAND RICE

On Curing a Slice

Mr. Grantland Rice. Sir:
He told you his drive had a hook at the end
And this was a fault that he wanted to mend.
He was sure you could help him and therefore he wrote
To beseech you to give him the right antidote
And relieve a suffering friend.

Did you weaken and say you didn't quite know?
Did you tell him to go and consult a good pro?
Did you throw in the basket his woeful appeal?
You did not, you just told him to hit with the heel.

As I understand it this hook that he hated
Was far out at the end, a hook very belated,
Not a wide sweeping hook that lands out in the hay,
But a ball that goes straight nearly all of the way
And then tips to the left and I venture to say
That's the longest ball ever created.

Now my drive goes straight, but the end of its flight
Is cursed with a mean little swerve to the right.
A slice does not roll like a hook, you'll agree
And I'm shy on the distance I get from the tee.
And I'm mad enough often to fight.

The drive is a shot that we all find unruly,
And if I am not taxing your patience unduly,
Pray get me that hook and your debtor I'll feel.
You told Mr. Hooker to hit with the heel;
Now tell me what to hit with.

Yours truly, H. HOVEY.

If you're cursed with a slice then your balance is sour,
Your body and hands are ahead of the swing
At the moment of impact, where most of your power
Is lost in bad timing before the old bing.

A slice can result from a number of sins,
But keep the weight back from the top of the blow,
Give the club head a chance and you may miss the whins,
As the wrists enter in with a free, smoother flow.

Caging the Stormy Petrel

It has remained for John Golden, the producer, to cage the stormy petrel of sport. His name is Frank Craven, actor, playwright, golfer and world's record spectator.

Unable to accompany the Ryder cup team across the water and see the British open also, I asked Mr. Craven if he would pinch-follow the athletes. "To be sure," he replied, traveling 7,000 miles for the purpose. Later on the suggestion was made that he accompany your dispatch bearer to Pebble Beach as a sight-seeing aid to help cover various matches. "Why not?" Mr. Craven replied, adding another 6,000 miles to his tour. A couple of football games at Boston and New Haven were a mere step for him but as we were about to round him up for a jump to Urbana the alert John Golden threw out a golden net and put the stormy petrel under cover. So he is now opening in a new play called "Salt Water," in the meanwhile looking with yearning eyes at far-off battlefields of sport and a bit restive after only 18,000 miles of traveling since last April to keep close check upon various competitions, unmindful of the multitudes that wanted to see him on the stage.

What Mr. Golden will be able to do about it when the sunshine of another spring arrives and the bluebird sounds the call of the open is another matter. It is our guess that he will say with Kipling—approximately:

"For something in my head upset it all
And made me drop whatever 'twas for good;
And out at sea behold the dock lights die,
And meet my mate—the wind that tramps the world."

The Indignant Ones

Any number of indignant colleges, old grads and other noncombatants get quite upset when the suggestion is offered that while they have strong teams, fine records and certain star players—the quality and quantity of the schedule must play a big part in any team ranking or all-star selection.

It is the playing of long, hard schedules that cost many teams victories in certain games and that also deplete the vitality of certain stars. For example, Georgia university hit Oglethorpe, Yale and North Carolina in succession and then had to bump along against Florida, Tulane, N. Y. U. and Georgia Tech. Obviously the Georgia team was in no shape to hit a fast mid-season or late season clip after such a gruelling opening.

The test should include at least four hard, standard games. And those playing five, six, seven or more hard games must be given even more consideration. Many good teams with outstanding stars have only been called on to play two or possibly three hard games with resting spots in between that can make all the difference in the world. This may not be any one's fault. But matters can be judged only upon conditions as they happen to exist.

Modern football is a high pressure, wearing, tearing, nerve depleting game and those playing through six or more hard games can hardly be judged on even terms with those only playing two or three hard games.

Deciding what are hard schedules and what are not hard schedules will cause much indignation, but what would football be without a large quantity of indignation?

South's First Blizzard Leaves Death List of 12

ATLANTA, Nov. 25. (AP)—Drizzling rain erased the southland's first snow of the season today as temperatures rose and clearing skies made good the familiar forecast of fair and warmer. A death list of a dozen names was left in the wake of the four-day cold snap. Traffic mishaps, precipitated by sleet and rain, yesterday added three fatalities to the casualty record.

Officials—Barry Holton, Notre Dame; C. P. Mosley, Baylor.

The future greats will have their day Tuesday afternoon when the Reagan Junior high school team and the Zundelowitz Junior high eleven head on at Spudder park in their annual city championship game. This game will mark their fourth meeting in as many years. Followers and partisans of the two teams are looking forward to seeing the usual good, hard fought game that has resulted when the teams have met before.

Both teams went through light workouts Monday afternoon and put on the concluding touches to their long training period. They will rest until the referee's whistle sends them flying at each other on the morrow.

Coach Golden has driven his Zundelowitz Junior high charges at a hard clip during the past two weeks and now pronounces them ready for the fray of their lifetime. With but a single exception, every player on the Zundelowitz eleven is in tip-top physical condition and should be able to put up a great fight. Costello, end, is out with an injured wrist and it is doubtful whether he will be able to take the field when the game starts.

Zundy Has Fast Backs

The Zundelowitz machine will rely on a fast hard hitting set of backfielders to bring home the winning touchdowns for the team. Also the forward wall is capable of putting up a great fight and match the best that the Reganites have to offer, so it is avered.

The Reaganite running attack is built around four ball luggers, Cossey, Williams, Berry, and Fooshee, all about of equal merit and strength. These boys have flashed a snappy brand of football at times this season and will bear heavy watching in the game Tuesday.

Forward Wall

A doubtful forward wall seems to be the main worry of the Zundy team. Most of the boys in the trenches are b e but none are experienced in the methods of tackling and charging. The wing positions are the weakest spot on the forward line. Two hefty but inexperienced tackles should deal the Reagan backs plenty of misery. Christian and Griggs 150 and 180 pouds respectively occupy the tackle berths, but both of these are inexperienced and may have plenty of trouble tomorrow. Tarkenton and Johnson claim the guard berths. Both of these youngsters are green, but they may be depended on to give the Red and White backs something to worry about. Captain Merchant successfully holds down the pivot position. Although his opponent tomorrow is one of the smallest men on the Reagan team, J. Z. Powell is one of the best linemen that wears the Red and White and should give the Zundy pre-game coin flipper some pointers on offensive work. The Zundy forward wall will average around the 125 pound mark, according to Coach Golden.

Big Pep Squad

The pep squad has not been inactive and under the capable leadership of Miss Vance they have practiced diligently for the last several weeks with a view of the coming game. A huge pep squad will be at the game to support the team tomorrow in the big game. In fact the largest student body attendance ever to attend one of the Zundy-Reagan games is expected to be on hand for the game tomorrow.

Motorcycles Will Race in Big Meet Here Next Sunday

The Wichitan Cycle company, local distributors of the Harley-Davidson machines, and the Wichita Indian Motorcycle Sales company have announced that they will sponsor several Wichita Falls cycle jockies in the 100-mile motorcycle derby which is scheduled for next Sunday at 2:30 o'clock at the Texas-Oklahoma fairgrounds speedway. Other entries are coming in daily now from such places as San Antonio, Houston, Waco, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Okmulgee, and one from Denver, Colo.

Twenty of the cars qualifying in the fastest lap of the time trials, which are being held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, will face the starter's flag in the 200-lap grind in the afternoon feature.

The big feature of the afternoon will be a demonstration of endurance as well as speed for both jockies and the machines.

Henry Williams, of national Whippet stock car racing fame, has a Chevrolet of the vintage of 1924 which he will race in the "junk car" race. This "junk car" race will no doubt prove a race comic entertainment for the spectators. Entrants for this feature are coming in fast from Wichita Falls and the small towns round about.

Another feature of the afternoon is a head-on collision which will see two automobiles running at top speed and full head-on. A terrific crash will result from this and give some idea of the dire calamities resulting from actual automobile wrecks.

Entry blanks for the 100-mile race and for the junk car race may be secured from W. W. Bowen, 1506 Eighth street, Wichita Falls.

Masonic Association Meets at Mountain View

Special to The Record News

MANGUM, Okla., Nov. 25.—A district meeting of the Masonic Association No. 1 was held last week at Mountain View, with E. E. Dodson, W. M., and Clyde R. Evans, S. W., attending from the local order. Mr. Dodson was elected president of the association for the ensuing term. The district includes 11 lodges in Greer and Kiowa counties. The December meeting will be held at Roosevelt.

Marsters May Do a Rockne

Al Marsters

This is Al Marsters, Dartmouth's crippled quarterback, as he appeared the day he left the hospital to see the Big Green stop Cornell in a spectacular last quarter rally.

HANOVER, N. H. (AP)—Up here at Dartmouth, they are pulling for Al Marsters to do a Knute Rockne and be present on the sidelines when the Big Green meets the Navy at Philadelphia, Nov. 30, in the last game of the season for both teams.

There is a feeling hereabouts that Marsters' presence on the Dartmouth bench inspired his old teammates to comeback in remarkable fashion and defeat Cornell in a fourth period rally that netted the two needed touchdowns.

Marsters who suffered a fractured vertebrae in the Yale game, Nov. 2, went right back to Dick Halls' house—the college infirmary—after the Cornell game and went into heavy training for the Philadelphia trip. The training consists of lying flat on his back.

Present Season Ends Rampant Days Of Chris Cagle's West Point Career

NEW YORK, Nov. 24. (INS)—When shades of November grow dark and another gridiron season's activities have been stowed away, the rampant ghost of Harold "Red" Grange, none other than Christian Keener ("Red") Cagle, of the U. S. Military academy, shall have consummated his four-year term at the Point and departed from the Army football team—just like his sorrel-thatched Illinois predecessor for fame, acclaimed a great All-American halfback.

Cagle, like Grange will leave vivid memories of a brilliant pigskin career and his fame and color will be associated with that of other Army stars, Oliphant, Merrilat, McEwan, Daly, Garbisch, Bunker and his former teammate "Light Horse Harry" Wilson. It will just be another case of "the song is ended but the melody lingers on."

First Appearance

One of the most capable broken field runners and forward passers that ever graced an Army lineup, Cagle, captain of this year's team, first crashed the headlines in 1926 as Harry Wilson's running mate. A versatile athlete, Cagle never was found out of the pink of condition, for other sports occupied his attention when his football makeup was ensconced among the camphor balls. It was the 21-21 contest with Navy at Chicago that year that showed Cagle's endurance and ableness to combat the fiercest opposition as a regular in the backfield. And it was that game which firmly established Cagle as a comer.

In 1927 and 1928 Cagle's efforts continued to bear fruit. In fact Cagle was chosen as an all-America backfield by almost all experts at the conclusion of last year's activities. The present campaign was, then, in the nature of an anticlimax for the red-head but Cagle shot off to his usual sparkling start and figured prominently not only in the easy wins over Boston U., Gettysburg and Davidson, but in the grueling 20-20 encounter with Harvard and continued to radiate even in the losing Yale game, in which Albie Booth attained nation-wide attention. While Booth may have uncorked a more sensational game, Cagle's dominant class was never overshadowed, which, in a word, amply demonstrates how steady, reliable and efficient a back this chap is.

Star Undimmed

With all the sorrow occasioned for West Pointers by Illinois' 17-7 trouncing of Army recently, once more Cagle's star remained undimmed. Bob Zuppke, the famous coach of the Illini, emphatically stated, after the battle, that Cagle still deserved the all-American consideration that most undoubtedly will be his when the time arrives for such matters, and went on to rave about Chris' forward passing, his timing, and his tricky mode of executing a play.

After being a star for three successive years, Cagle's outstanding play this season is all the more noteworthy. Opposing linemen "lay" for the red-head and made it extremely difficult for Chris to pull off those long runs he is noted for. As a means of combatting this evil, Cagle has resorted to the forward pass more consistently this year and by his deadly accurate heaving has been able to overcome his antagonists as well.

Bowlers Have Good Night at Spudder Alleys on Monday

The Montgomery company bowlers took two out of three games from the City National bank pin topplers when they met Monday night in their regular schedule at the Spudder alleys. The First National bank players took two out of three from the Nafziger Baking company and Sherwin-Williams took a like number from the Texas Electric Service company.

Miller of the First National bank had high three games with a total of 504 and Lee of Nafziger Baking company had high single game with a total of 194.

Notice, City League

On account of the Thanksgiving holiday programs over the city, all games scheduled for the City league on Wednesday and Thursday nights have been postponed until the corresponding time and day of the next week.

COYOTES-TRIBE TRAIN HARD

Holtonites Will Leave Tuesday Night

Monday afternoon the Junior college Indians practice field was the scene of some heavy football training. Two big games are slated for the Coyotes and the Indians this week. The Coyotes will take on the much vaunted Amarillo Golden Sandstorm at Butler field on Thanksgiving day and the Indians will entertain the Jackrabbits of the Wayland Junior college on the same day here at the Spudder ball park. In preparation for these two games the respective coaches, Barry Holton and E. A. Baggett have put in a good deal of time in bringing around their charges to the pink of condition for the game.

Coyotes Hopeful

The teams put in a stiff session at the fundamentals of the game on Monday afternoon. Also they rehearsed some of the plays which they intend to uncork against the enemy on the Thanksgiving day The Pack has not played a game since they lost their crucial game with the terrible Lubbock Westerners to the tune of 6 to 0. But the reverse at the hands of the Westerners has not dimmed the hopes of the Coyotes in their anxiety to trim their ancient enemy, the Sandies. This has been the game of the season for the Pack since the early days of football between high school teams in the northwest part of Texas.

Will Rest Tuesday

The Pack will rest on Tuesday and then will entrain for Amarillo on the night of the same day. The boys have trained faithfully and strenuously since the Lubbock engagement and the coach does not intend to run the risk of over-training. He believes that a day's rest just at this time will do the outfit more good than a day spent on the practice field. This will give the boys time to store up physical energy—and no doubt they will need it against the powerful Sandies. Before the game against the Vernon Lions the Coyotes had a full day's rest and this seemed to invigorate them to the point where they played their greatest game of the season thus far. Taking this as a cue the coach is going to try the scheme again before the Amarillo game.

At this writing it has not been definitely determined whether the special will be run to the Panhandle city or not. Those in charge believe, however, that the project will go through and the train will be run.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Questions and Answers

Q—Are the baseball magnates considering doing anything about the so-called lively ball before next season starts?

A—They may be considering it, but that's as far as they'll go.

Q—Has the managerial situation in the major leagues been settled as far as the 1930 season is concerned?

A—Not entirely. Brooklyn in the National league and Boston in the American still are quietly shopping around.

Q—Who are the champions of the various divisions in boxing at the moment?

A—Mickey Walker, middleweight; Jackie Fields, welterweight; Sammy Mandell, lightweight; Bat Battalino, featherweight; the titles in the other divisions being vacant or subject to dispute.

Q—Will Jack Sharkey be generally recognized after his next fight as heavyweight champion of the world?

A—Yes, if he wins.

Q—Why can't baseball magnates get the crowds that football draws, and don't they try to?

A—Baseball parks aren't large enough, and cannot be expanded in the way possible in the case of football stadii.

Q—If the six-day bike riders cover 1,440 miles a week during the annual races, how far away are they at the end of the season?

A—From sanity?

Q—How do hockey salaries compare with those paid baseball players and which earns the most, a hockey player or a baseball player?

A—Hockey salaries do not begin to compare with those paid in baseball. Up until recently $20,000 was top salary for hockey and that was paid to but one star. Hockey players take greater risks, but the return from the efforts to the owners' pockets is not so great, which is what counts on payday.

Q—Are the veterans of baseball fading out faster than new talent is coming in?

A—On the contrary, the best of the veterans hang on, but are being rushed for their jobs by some very promising youngsters these days.

Doak Roberts' Record as Club Owner-Manager Stands Alone

Houston in 1909, 1910 (tied with Dallas), 1912, 1913 and 1914 (tied with Waco), a record for one-man league championships. The 1902 Corsicana club still holds a record of 27 consecutive victories.

Roberts developed and sent many players to the big league, including Tris Speaker, Dode Criss, Nig Clarke, Rick Adams, George Whiteman, George Foster, Joe Jenkins, Hickory Dickson and Pat Newnam. He once claimed title to Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby, refusing the former because of an epidemic in Cobb's vicinity and Hornsby because scouts agreed the Rajah could not hit. He always was of the old school that thought an owner should run the playing field as well as the box office.

Morris' Successor

He was the only man who had maintained a connection with the league from 1902 until 1929. In mid-season of 1904 he became president, remaining in that position until 1906 when the merger occurred. In the fall of 1920, after disposing of his Houston interests, he succeeded President J. Walter Morris. He was reelected in 1927 under a five-year contract.

For several years Roberts had been a member of the national board of arbitration, the advisory body of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. He never missed a meeting of that association and when that body convenes in Chattanooga next month it will be the first time in 28 years it has been without his services and advice.

Gardner will continue in charge of league affairs until a meeting is held during the national association convention at Chattanooga to choose a president.

Surviving Roberts are his widow and one son, M. Doak Roberts, both of Dallas.

WICHITA CLUB NAMES OFFICERS AT MEETING

The directors of the Wichita Falls baseball club convened in their annual business meeting Monday and formally and officially elected William E. Huff as the new president of the Spudder baseball club. The resignation of J. Alvin Gardner was handed in and accepted by the association. Mr. Gardner served as president of the club until a few weeks ago when he sold the controlling interest of the Spudder ball club to Mr. Huff.

A. W. King was elected vice president to succeed Mr. Huff. Guy Airey was reelected secretary and treasurer of the club.

The new board of directors chosen at the meeting includes William E. Huff, A. W. King, C. E. McCutchen, C. D. Shamburger, Dr. Everett Jones, Lamar Fain, F. P. Timberlake, Jack Barnard and L. E. Stone. These men will serve the club for the ensuing year.

FORT WORTH CLUB OWNER GRIEVED

FORT WORTH, Nov. 25. (AP)—"It is with regret that we hear of the death of Doak Roberts," Ted Robinson, president of the Fort Worth baseball club stated this afternoon. "The Texas league and baseball has lost a great friend."

"I am new in the game, but Roberts was a great leader. He was always for the best interest of baseball."

Federal Gift Tax Held Legal by High Court

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (US)—Taxes imposed by the federal government upon gifts, as authorized in the internal revenue law, were today held "constitutional by the supreme court, thereby saving a large source of revenue for the government. The decision was given in an appeal by Joseph H. Bromley of Philadelphia, to avoid a tax of $20,598 on gifts totaling $568,300.

WINNER MEETS LAMESA ELEVEN

Ralls Uncorks Terrific Aerial Attack

Special to The Record News

FLOYDADA, Texas, Nov. 25.—Before 2,000 fans here Monday the Ralls Jackrabbits defeated the Lockney Longhorns by a score of 14 to 13 and won the right to meet Lamesa next Saturday for the championship of class B, district two. A fast aerial game proved superior to the line plunging and end running by the Lockney team but not until the final whistle blew was the contest decided. At the final whistle the Lockney boys were within eight yards of the goal line. Lockney scored in the first quarter after Spence and Cook had carried the ball near the goal and Spence went over but failed to kick for the extra point. After Walker had placed a 20-yard pass in the hands of Captain Perryman who advanced another 10 yards, Henry carried the ball over and Ralls passed for the extra point.

In the third quarter Lockney scored again when Duncan received a long pass and stepped 20 yards for a touchdown. In the final quarter Walker passed again to Bryan who went over for Ralls' second and final touchdown and the Jackrabbits plunged the ball over for the extra point. Ralls passed 22 times, with 10 complete for 177 yards. Lockney passed 14 times, with three complete for a total of 66 yards. Lockney averaged 37 yards on punts and Ralls 33. Walker's passing was the feature of the game with the work of Perryman and Bryan of the Jackrabbits while Duncan, Spence and McAdams did stellar work for the Longhorns.

Soft coal production in 1928 had slumped more than 24,000,000 tons as compared with 1923.

Health and Diet Advice

Undulant Fever

Until recently, undulant fever has been a rather rare disease in the United States, but much more frequently found in Spain, Portugal and France. This disease is known by a variety of names, such as Mediterranean fever, Bruce's septicemia, Neapolitan fever, Cyprus fever and septic acmia melitensis and goat fever.

This disease is characterized by attacks of fever which may be weeks or months in duration, often remittent. The belief has been held that it is usually spread by goat's milk which is infected by the micrococcus melitensis. However, recent investigations made by government chemists at Washington have disclosed the fact that these bacteria are to be found in cow's milk and that perhaps this is the greatest source of infection. It is claimed there are over 50,000 cases of undulant fever in the United States at the present time, and that most of these cases originated in the use of unpasteurized cow's milk from cows affected with contagious abortion. This micrococcus enters the body through the intestines and invades the blood. The spleen becomes enlarged and softened, the lymphoid cells increase, and there is congestion in the liver, kidneys and other abdominal organs.

After the infection from the milk the first symptoms usually occur after an incubation period of 14 days, when the temperature rises slowly, accompanied by pain in the back and limbs and some headache. There is soreness and tenderness in the region of the stomach. The temperature may rise to 103 or 105 degrees, and continue at this for several weeks, after which the recovery apparently takes place, but return attacks frequently occur. The lungs are usually congested and mucus may be expelled from the bronchial tubes.

The patient is usually unable to sleep, and is very irritable and weak for this reason. The gums bleed readily, and the sweat glands of the skin are usually interfered with after the third week of the disease. The hips, shoulders, ankles and knee joints may be painfully swollen, resembling arthritis, but they seldom show reddening of the skin over them.

Whenever there is a prolonged fever in which the joints are involved, undulant fever should be considered. The safest diagnosis must rely upon a bacteriological examination.

The outlook for recovery is very good in most cases, especially if the proper care is taken of the patient. The best of nursing is required in undulent fever cases, much the same as in typhoid. The best diet seems to be only to use some one of the acid fruits during the height of the fever. Oranges, grapefruit, grapes, etc., may be used. The bowels must also be kept thoroughly cleansed with the use of enemas at least twice and sometimes three times daily. Cold shower baths should also be used during the height of the fever. After each shower bath a brisk rubdown is advisable.

The pain of the joints can be relieved through the use of hot fomentations.

If these instructions are followed, the course of the disease can usually be greatly shortened.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sense of Smell Lost

Question — A. J. writes: "Six months ago I lost my sense of smell, and almost immediately my sense of taste. Of all I have eaten since then I have never tasted a single mouthful. Every meal is a dreadful ordeal. Can you help me? I am 70 years old."

Answer—I am sure your sense of smell and taste can be partially restored if your loss did not take place following an operation or treatment in your nose. If your loss of the use of your olfactory nerve is caused from catarrh, you could surely get good results from following a fasting and dieting regime designed to correct catarrhal disorders. If you see this answer, please write, giving your full name and address so I can send you some special articles on this subject.

Hydrogen in Foods

Question—D. T. asks: "Will you please tell me the foods that have hydrogen in them? My mother was told not to eat foods containing hydrogen."

Answer—I do not know of any foods that do not contain hydrogen, as this is one of the elements always present in foods. I am sure your mother must have been mistaken about the advice given her.

Turning Blue

Question—H. G. writes: "Please tell me why my flesh turns blue upon the slightest bruise. The blue spots appear even when I am not conscious of having been touched by anything."

Answer—You should have a careful examination made, as the tendency to turn blue is often a very serious condition denoting a weakness of the walls of the blood vessels. You surely need a diet rich in vitamins and organic salts, such as are found in the non-starchy vegetables, especially those used uncooked.

Father and Son Banquet Held at Mangum, Okla.

Special to The Record News

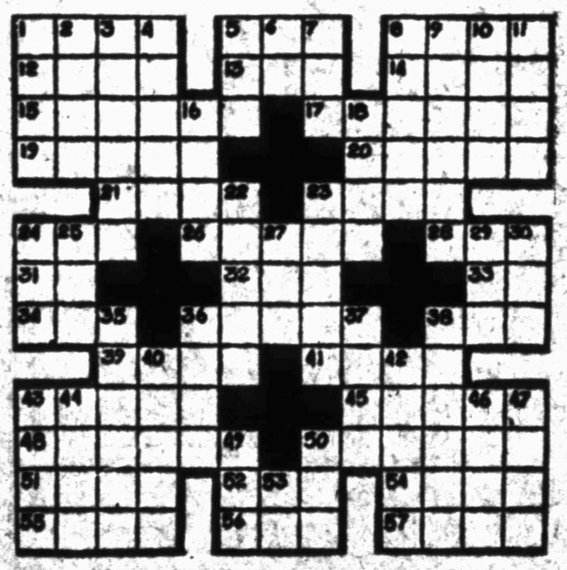

MANGUM, Okla., Nov. 25.—The annual father and son banquet at the high school gymnasium last week was attended by 260 boys, old and young, gray-haired and otherwise. The attendance exceeded any previous father and son banquet here by more than 100, according to County Attorney Hollis Arnett, who served as toastmaster. Much enthusiasm was shown by the fine turn-out of dads and lads. The annual event was sponsored by the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs.

SAN ANTONIO JAIL BREAK

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 25. (AP)—S. C. "Burley" Shipp, facing six indictments, including one on a theater stick up, escaped from the Bexar county jail some time today by sawing a bar and clambering through a nine-inch aperture. Shipp made his escape from the hospital ward, where he had been taken after he complained of being ill.

TARIFF FIASCO BLAME PLACED

Jouett Shouse Lays Failure Upon Hoover

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Blame for the failure of congress to pass the tariff bill at the special session is laid directly upon President Hoover in a statement issued by Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, Mr. Shouse even indicating he believed the "senatorial old guard" was not at fault.

Mr. Hoover, he declared, had maintained his silence until the Democrats and Independent Republicans struck out the flexible provision which gave the president the power to raise or lower tariff duties.

"Then indeed, he found his voice," Shouse said. "But his utterance was confined to an objection to yielding this power, which had only been granted in 1922 on the express understanding that its life was to terminate as soon as the post-war emergency of chaotic financial conditions abroad had passed."

The head of the executive committee said the Hawley draft of the house bill never would have been submitted to the house of representative if he had signified his distaste for it.

Quail Season Welcomed By Mangum Hunters

Special to The Record News

MANGUM, Okla., Nov. 25.—Several local nimrods brought forth their old rusty rifles last week and oiled them up in preparation for the quail hunting season which opened Wednesday. The season is open on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week from Nov. 20 to Jan. 1, inclusive. Thanksgiving Christmas and New Year's day are included in the open season. The bag limit is 10 in one day or 50 in one season.

PLANT SHIPS BIRD FEATHERS

Turkey 'Clothing' Sent to Manufacturers

Ginnings of Saturday and Monday added 355 bales to the county's total for the 1929 season, according to reports received Monday evening, running that figure up to 18,746.

Electra replaced Iowa Park and Wichita Falls, moving up to second place in number of bales ginned, with 3,844 bales. Burkburnett's 5430 holds first place in the county by a wide margin.

Cotton prices showed more strength, according to reports of Monday's selling. The range moved from 11 to 16 cents to 14 to 17.56 on middling basis.

Little activity was reported in the poultry and produce market Monday. Numerous consignments of turkey feathers, gleaned from the Thanksgiving packing season in this territory, are arriving at the Armour creameries plant this week. It was predicted that at least two carloads of this accessory will be shipped from the local plant during the next few days, to be converted into dusters, juvenile head gear, etc.

Work was progressing rapidly Monday on the former Kraft Cheese factory, where a large crew is converting the plant into a manufactory for powdered and condensed milk. Producers of milk for cheese making are now delivering their product to the Dairyland plant of the Southwest Dairy Products company on Virginia street, it was stated.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. (AP)—An opening advance on relatively steady Liverpool cables was followed by reactions in cotton today, with near months easy under liquidation promoted by the issuance of December notices. January contracts after selling up to 17.65 at the start declined to 17.47 and closed at that figure with the general market closing barely steady net 6 points lower to 2 points higher.

The opening was steady at a net advance of 11 to 15 points in response to the relatively steady showing of Liverpool, an idea that the December notices which were estimated at about 85,000 bales would be promptly stopped by the trade and continued talk of a possible scaling down to crop ideas because of recent unfavorable weather in the South. December sold up to 17.50 and May to 18.18 on this initial advance.

Prices eased in consequence with December declining to 17.31 and May to 18.03 during the early afternoon or about 2 to 5 points net lower. Later fluctuations were more or less irregular but the rallies met a little more selling and offerings increased in the last few minutes with January closing at the lowest price of the day while other deliveries were within a point or two of the lowest.

Differences between near and later months widened out somewhat during the circulation of the notices but the closing quotation for December were only 14 points under January compared with a closing difference of 17 points on Saturday.

Much of the day's business seemed to be connected with the further evening up of December contracts and there was a good deal of switching from December to later months. Aside from this no particular trading feature was in evidence, according to local brokers.

Liverpool cables said that trade calling and continental buying had absorbed some hedge selling in that market. Manchester advices reported a broadening demand for cotton cloth and said a fair business was pending for India.

Exports today, 30,369, making 3,060,551 so far this season. Port receipts, 77,142. U. S. port stocks, 2,570,696.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 25. (AP)—December liquidation today, the first notice day for that option, influenced an irregular undertone in the local cotton market with speculation on the notices resulting in a downward movement at one stage. New Orleans notices of around 18,000 bales and new year notices of about 85,000 were issued, the latter representing practically the entire stock.

Cables were about as expected but December which opened 2 points down on the circulation of the notices. As New York figures at the opening were higher, the months beyond December in New Orleans opened at 5 to 10 points up and all leans soon were 5 to 13 points above Saturday's close.

Continued circulation of the notices influenced the market here to ease off 15 to 21 points around the middle of the morning but it soon ruled steadier in quiet trading during the afternoon and remained within the earlier range, closing at a slight net decline. December opening at 17.35, down 2 points rallied 7 points to 17.46 and then dropped 17 points to 17.23, closing at 17.31, net 6 points down for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 7 to 9 points.

In opening at the 2 point decline December ignored a 2 to 5 point gain in Liverpool's opening, but the later months reacted to the favorable cables by selling off 5 to 10 points in gains on all active positions and improving in early trading on reports that the notices were being stopped particularly in New York.

December then traded up to 17.42, January to 17.60 and March at 17.78, or 3 to 6 points net higher.

Livestock

MID-WESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 25. (AP)—(USDA)—Curtailed cattle supplies around the 11-market circuit had a tendency to stimulate demand for the better grades of light weight fed steers and yearlings, but packers continued bearish on matured steers. Some markets reported upturns of 25c on better yearlings. Losses of 25c were turned in on weighty steers. Choice yearlings in Chicago scored $15.85, and best medium weight steers brought $14.70. Demand for replacement stock was generally improved, prices firm to slightly higher. Receipts $6,500, a decrease of 34,800 from a week ago, but 13,000 heavier than the corresponding day last year.

Our courteous ad taker will receive your Classified Ad and help you to word it, then our collector will call the next day. These accounts are "accommodation accounts" for the convenience of our patrons in transacting business over the telephone.

Classified Ad patrons desiring to have ads charged must have a telephone listed in their own name. No book record is made by the publishers on account of the great number of transactions, hence the necessity of collecting promptly.

Correction of errors in Classified Ads must be made before the second insertion. No allowance will be made for more than one incorrect insertion.

Cancellations and adjustments regarding errors should be telephoned to the Classified Ad department between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Ads accepted for afternoon papers up until 11 a. m. same day.

Morning paper up to 6 p. m. for the following morning.

Sunday paper up to 7 o'clock Saturday night.

Same copy in both papers.

THE CLASSIFIED DEPARTMENT IS OPEN ON SUNDAYS from 8 to 6 p. m. and telephone orders for classified ads to be inserted or to be discontinued will be accepted.

Exceptions: Want ads will be accepted over the telephone for all excepting the following classifications: Situations Wanted and Wanted to Rent. Ads for these classifications are cash with the order and will not be accepted over the telephone.

The Times reserves the right to classify all Classified Ads under the appropriate headlines and to revise or to withhold from publication any ads deemed objectionable.

PROHIBITION IS DEBATED

It Needs 140 Years for 'Trial,' Dry Says

By SAM LOVE
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—It will take 140 years to give prohibition as fair a trial as it deserves in the United States, the Rev. Dr. Clarence True Wilson, executive secretary of the Methodist Society for Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, asserted yesterday in a debate with E. Clemens Horst, wealthy California wine grape grower.

Dr. Wilson invaded the heart of Broadway to debate with the Californian, and while he drew applause from some of his Astor hotel listeners for his gameness, he also brought down about his head salvos of hearty laughter with a number of his statements. In fact a vociferous percentage of his listeners refused to regard the "debate," which was being broadcast, as a serious occasion, and they applauded Dr. Wilson even more cheerfully than did his partisan supporters present.

The Cause of It

The subject was "Resolved, That Prohibition Is a Success and Should Be Continued."

Asserting that prohibition is right in principle and a success in practice, Dr. Wilson drew the first laughter from his audience by saying, "prohibition was never designed to make it impossible for a man to get a drink." The speaker was later able to add that prohibition was intended to discourage drinking.

"Prohibition has not been well enforced," said Dr. Wilson, "but it has been put into the hands of politicians and betrayed by compromise."

The debator for the affirmative also argued that prohibition has "made news out of booze," which he regarded as a hopeful sign, and attributed to it the nation's prosperity after the world war.

Cleans Up Politics

"Prohibition," said Dr. Wilson, "has done more than anything else ever did to clean up politics in this country."

A perfect uproar of laughter greeted this statement and it was necessary for the reformer to pause for silence before he could finish the sentence—"and give us a chance to vote for decent men."

"We recently took a religious census in Washington," he continued, "and found that 94 per cent of all officials are members of some evangelical church. Prohibition has done that for us."

In replying to Dr. Wilson, Horst cited voluminous statistics which he asserted he had previously supplied for Dr. Wilson and which he accused Dr. Wilson somewhat bitterly of ignoring.

"Savings bank deposits between 1920 and 1928 increased but one-tenth of one penny per day per pro rata population despite the fact that wages of working men increased 69 per cent during that period," said Horst. "I have figures for 1929 showing that savings decreased by $195,000,000 during the last year."

High U. S. Death Rate

"In 1919, only three of the 10 leading foreign countries had a lower death rate than the United States. In 1927, every one of them had a lower death rate than the United States. There must be less happiness because there are more suicides. There must be more murders, robbings, burglaries and other violent crimes because penitentiary commitments exceed by two and eight-tenths times the previous rate, not including the liquor law commitments."

Dr. Wilson replied by saying that he did not bother with Horst's statistics because it had been his experience that in a statistical argument, "the biggest liar always wins." But there were no hard feelings. Dr. Wilson sat down amidst a long burst of applause and laughter caused by his plea for a 140-year trial of prohibition to "give it the same chance that the liquor system had and his assertion that "there is less violation of the liquor law in the United States today than there has been for 140 years."

Colorado Fireman Scalded to Death

TRINIDAD, Colo., Nov. 25. (INS)—H. B. Kennedy, 45, locomotive fireman, was scalded to death and traffic on the Texas main line of the Colorado and Southern railroad near here was tied up today as the result of the mysterious wrecking of a freight train. The engine and a score of cars overturned when the train was derailed. Railroad officials are investigating to determine the cause of the wreck.

Uncle of Eunice Pringle Found Dead in Hotel

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 25. (AP)—E. L. Pringle, 55, agent for the Missouri State Life Insurance company and uncle of Eunice Pringle, complaining witness against Alexander Pantages in the West coast assault case, was found dead in his hotel room here today. Dr. Willis M. Butler, coroner, said the man committed suicide.

Callahan County Bonds Apparently Defeated

BAIRD, Texas, Nov. 25. (AP)—Unofficial incomplete returns from Saturday's special election indicated the Callahan county $1,000,000 highway bond issue was defeated. With two boxes unheard from, the returns showed 847 against and 813 for. Proponents plan to seek another election.

PERPETUAL

Plaque Bearing Lasting Invitation Given To Hoover by Texans

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—A gold plaque bearing a perpetual invitation to visit Dallas and Texas was presented to President Hoover today by a delegation from the Lone Star state. The presentation was made by Representative Sumners of the Dallas district in behalf of Mayor J. Waddy Tate of that city.

Others in the delegation included Senator Connally, Representatives Jones and McCloskey, Homer D. Wade, vice president and general manager of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, Maj. Roland A. When Morris Met the Demon Rum.....

The Morning After Led to Prohibition

By FRASER EDWARDS
(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—This etching of a dry is more to point a moral than to adorn a tale. The subject is Morris Sheppard, senior senator from Texas, and how he got that way.

But soft. For it concerns the ghost of a buried past. It must be whispered that back in the gay nineties, when tippling among students at the University of Texas was the thing to do on festive occasions, Morris had an unsophisticated encounter with the demon rum.

And the Morning After—

Certain symptoms the morning following a hitherto and henceforth blameless life, convinced Morris that drinking was a terrible curse. He thereupon resolved to make it his life's work to fix it so good fellows would need no ice water, headache powders or "dog hair" treatment the morning after.

Relentlessly pursuing his ideal of making America a safer place to live in, Morris succeeded in having the eighteenth amendment written into the constitution—with slight aid from the Anti-Saloon league and the W. C. T. U.

Morris has all the attributes of a good fellow. He is by long odds the easiest mark in the senate for a hard luck story. He could retire and live in luxury if he could collect half the interest on the "loans" he has made during his 26 years in congress.

Veteran in Congress

Morris actually has spent half his life in congress. At 27, he succeeded his father, the late Representative John Levi Sheppard, in the house, and he is 54 now. This was in accordance with the good old-fashioned southern custom of sending the son in the footsteps of his father, if he had the stuff in him. The fact that Texas has kept Morris in congress is proof that he has something on the ball.

In the house, Morris was noted chiefly as a schoolboy orator. He learned apt alliteration's artful aid at the University of Texas. His classmates have never forgotten the opening lines of his speech in thanking a distinguished actor who had contributed an annual prize to the winner of the college dramatic contest. Said Morris:

"Some sev-er-al seas-ons since you pre-sen-ted a bee-u-tif-ul jew-wlled med-dal to the win-nah, etc., etc."

Conscientious Worker

Since that time, Morris has given up oratory to a large extent and gone in for hard work in the interest of Texas. Nothing seems to be too much trouble for him to do in behalf of a constituent. In fact, he has been criticized for running so many errands, but he goes ahead just the same. His batting average on votes and roll calls answered is the highest in the senate. He missed one several years ago.

He nearly broke up a recent night session of the senate with his impish sense of humor. A group of Democrats were in the cloakroom swapping yarns. Morris told one on himself and then turned it on every newcomer to the delight of his colleagues whose whoops could be heard all over the chamber.

A former Texas congressman, noted for his sharp tongue, made a speech several years ago on the deterioration of the senate. He set such Texas idols as Houston, Rusk, Mills, Bailey and Culberson on a pedestal with an upward sweeping gesture and then brought down his hand until he almost touched the floor, exclaiming:

"Where is this little fellow Sheppard? I can't find him!"

Defends Himself

Just as Morris finished getting off the gag on Carter Glass, of Virginia, Thaddeus Caraway, of Arkansas, strolled into the cloakroom to find out what all the "shooting" was about.

"Thad," said the roguish Morris, "you remember—!"

"Certainly, I served with him in the house," replied the unsuspecting Caraway.

"Of course, of course," egged Morris. "Great fellow!"

"A brilliant man," corrected Caraway. "One of the great orators of his day. A man of sound sense."

"Yes," said Morris, now having Caraway on record, "he made a speech about you."

Substituting the names of James P. Clarke, James H. Berry and James K. Jones, late great senators from Arkansas, Morris went through the speech which ended with the sweping gesture near the floor and the exclamation:

"And now look what Arkansas has come to—this fellow Caraway, of Jonesboro!"

"Isn't that darn fool dead yet?" snapped Thad while his colleagues howled.

His Actions "Shout"

No, Morris is not the orator that Joe Bailey was, nor a great lawyer like Culberson, but he is the gogettin'est senator Texas ever had and actions sure shout.

LUBBOCK ROAD MEET OPENS

Quanah Man Presides at Session

LUBBOCK, Texas, Nov. 25. (AP)—The first annual convention of the Carlsbad Cavern Highway association opened here today with 81 delegates registered from 15 towns in Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas.

President Carl S. Guin of Quanah, Texas, presided. The welcoming address by State Senator Pink L. Parrish of Lubbock was responded to by G. K. Richardson of Carlsbad for New Mexico, Carl Gallagher of Quanah for Texas and James M. Moreau of Olustee for Oklahoma.

Visitors were guests of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon.

Katy Authorized To Buy Oklahoma Railroad

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (INS)—The long fight between the Rock Island and Katy railroads for control of the Beaver, Meade & Englewood railroad, a 65-mile line in the Oklahoma Panhandle, ended today when the Interstate Commerce commission authorized the Katy to purchase the road.

In denying the Rock Island's application to acquire the road the commission said such denial was without prejudice for a renewal of the application if the Katy failed to promptly consummate acquisition of the Beaver, Meade & Englewood.

Texas Denied Claim For Funds Used in War

AUSTIN, Texas, Nov. 25. (INS)—Texas will have to petition congress in order to recover $300,000 claimed by the state for the organization during the world war of the famous thirty-sixth division.

This was the information Rice M. Tilley, assistant attorney general, brought back from Washington today after he had presented the state's refund claim to the United States comptroller general. The claim was rejected by that official.

HINES PRAISES TRADE OUTLOOK

Nation's Workers Prosperous, He Says

Harry Hines, local oil operator, who has spent the last 11 days in financial centers of the East, is of the opinion that "the stock market reaction is destined to revitalize all commercial and industrial lines" in the United States, according to statements made Monday afternoon.

"In my opinion," said Mr. Hines, "there will be no faltering in the continuance of business progress resulting from the recent stock market operations. Billions of dollars will be spent in all lines of endeavor. Federal highways will be expanded and construction hastened, resulting in our getting more paved highways and getting them more quickly by reason of the government's willingness to put huge sums of money into circulation."

Mr. Hines also predicted that most of the country's railroads will spend vast sums of money during the coming year to increase payrolls necessitated by considerable programs of improvement and extension, and expressed the belief that similar speeding up of activity will feature the operation of factories, mills, etc.

"The reaction is destined to revitalize all commercial and industrial lines and its ultimate outcome will be gauged by 'just how earnest we are in our willingness to return to work,' applying our talents and our energies to those industrial and professional tasks for which we best are fitted, rather than trying to outwit the stock market," Mr. Hines said. "A heads-up, shoulder-to-the-wheel attitude will give us industrial and financial stability, both locally and nationally."

PRODUCER IN BETTER POSITION, SAYS PENNEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—"The basic soundness of American industry, the true economic strength of the business life of this country, and the genuineness of its prosperity have been convincingly demonstrated during the past few weeks," says J. C. Penney, chairman of the board of the J. C. Penney company.

"A readjustment of market prices on general securities has been going on. Heavy market losses, accompanied in a large number of individual cases by the actual loss of accumulated fortunes, have taken place.

"Quoted prices on securities have tumbled at a rate which in years past would have brought about a panic, stifled industry, and wrought havoc with the credit and earning power of the country.

"No panic has occurred. Industry has kept steadily on with many new records for output and for sales being made, the credit of the country and the earning power of the country have both shown no impairment, great manufacturing organizations, in place of closing down, are declaring extra dividends out of increasing earnings.

"Retail sales organizations are preparing for good business during the next few weeks and these preparations are based on a sound analysis of what the holiday season will bring forth in the way of purchasing on the part of the general public.

"In general, the belief of the country is that sound forces are at work on a program which will bring a more equitable percentage of profits to the producers, without adding to costs paid by the consumers.

"Sound advice has come to the cotton growers and practical assistance is being offered through the farm relief board. The same conditions exist among the grain producers.

"Stockmen are getting the best prices in years with steady demands for all kinds of live stock.

"Many industrial areas are reporting satisfactory activity with good increases in sales volumes. These conditions are reflected in increased local building activities, bank deposits and in a general absence of unemployment.

"A country cannot suffer economically so long as its wealth producing power remains unimpaired. The economic value of the individual is measured by his ability to create wealth, not by his ability to harbor money.

"The stock market flurry has not impaired the wealth producing ability of the individual or of industry."

Father Has Now Regained Health By Use of It

"My Father Suffered for Eight Years; Relieved by Orgatone," She Says

"My father had suffered for eight long years," said Mrs. S. H. Gardner, while talking to an Orgatone representative regarding the great relief her father, Mr. Sam Rubel, 207 Cottonwood, Waco, Texas, and who is an employe at the wrecking shop at 13-B, has received from Orgatone.

"My father has suffered with indigestion and in fact a general rundown condition. He lost his appetite entirely and the little he forced himself to eat always soured on his stomach causing him a lot of misery. Gas would form after meals and he would bloat up something terrible and in this condition he naturally did not have the least bit of pep, and felt miserable most of the time. He had a very bad case of constipation all the time, and nothing seemed to help it in the least. He finally kept getting worse until he felt that something had to be done, in order that he might be able to keep going.

"Orgatone was recommended to him by a friend who insisted that he try it for a while. Well, after the first few doses he began to improve. His appetite returned, and is now splendid. He eats just anything he wants and plenty of it and it does not bother him in the least. He never has indigestion any more nor is he troubled with those bloating spells that used to give him such a restless feeling. He is entirely free from constipation and really acts and says he feels like a new man all the time. Life is not a drudge for him any more, but a feeling of happiness to know that he is free from all the misery that he has suffered for so long. Since finishing his second bottle of Orgatone he says it is a wonderful medicine, and he would be glad to recommend it so that others might be benefited from it like he has."

Iowa Park Teacher Reported Improving

The condition of Miss Audrey Brown, high school teacher at Iowa Park, who suffered a fractured vertebra in an automobile accident Sunday evening, was reported excellent by attendants at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital late Monday night.

The fracture was slight, physicians said. The accident occurred several miles out on the Henrietta road when the car in which Miss Brown was riding went into the ditch after colliding with another machine. Miss Mildred Cannon, an occupant of the car, escaped with minor bruises. The two were returning to Iowa Park after a visit with Miss Cannon's parents in Henrietta, it was reported.

What is said to be the first Chinese daily founded in America is still published by its first editor, Dr. Ng Poon Chew, in San Francisco's Chinatown.

AKERS ACCEPTS LIFE SENTENCE

Court Imposes Term When Appeal Is Dropped

A formal sentence of life imprisonment was imposed upon Otis Akers by Judge P. A. Martin in the 89th district court Monday morning after the defendant had failed to file an appeal to his conviction several weeks ago on an indictment drawn under the habitual criminal act, charging him with robbery by assault. Akers will be removed from the county jail in about a week, officers said.

Theater "Loco-Bus" Heads Parade Here

Spending a full day in Wichita Falls on its coast-to-coast visitation of all Publix theater cities, the $25,000 deluxe combination of motor bus and locomotive representing that theatrical corporation entertained hundreds of local citizens along with "Fat Boy" Joe Cobb and "Scooter Toughboy" Lowery, Majestic headliners, with a parade and varied musical offerings on the streets here Monday.

The impressive "Publix Special" has the appearance of a locomotive sufficiently to attract throngs of followers. Carrying a "cow-catcher," a clear-voiced silver bell, locomotive whistle, and belching smoke from its stack, the "loco-bus" headed a parade from the new Scott Avenue bridge through the business district. The special's crew included Mayor J. W. Akin, T. Wilson Erwin, Dallas, district manager of Publix theaters, "Fat Boy" Joe Cobb, Scooter Lowery, and J. H. Cobb, the fat one's father. A brief ceremonial marked the stop at the new bridge, where the two youthful comedians gave thir official approval to the radio-equipped bus, which they viewed here for the first time.

H. C. Federer, local Publix theaters manager, and Robert Eller, manager of the Strand theater, were in charge of the parade.

GALE IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, Nov. 25. (INS)—Disrupted communication facilities today prevented adequate check-up of the damage done when a severe gale hit the northeast coast of Portugal. Troops have been rushed to the assistance of the inhabitants, reported to be suffering severely from floods and torrential rains.

LIQUOR BOAT CAUGHT

PORT CHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 25. (AP)—Loaded with 20,000 cases of liquor for the holiday trade, the schooner Storm Petrel of New York was chased into a creek at Port Chester today and captured. The liquor was confiscated and the crew placed under arrest.

MORE HIGHWAY FUNDS SOUGHT

Federal Aid May Be Enlarged $75,000,000

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—Chairman Dowell of the house roads committee announced today he would seek an increase from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000 in the annual organization for federal highway aid for the fiscal years 1931 and 1932 in response to a general movement over the county for expansion of road building programs.

Conferences with officials of the bureau of roads, members of the state highway commissions and associations sponsoring highways, had shown him, Dowell said, the country as a whole desires to extend and improve the highway systems.

Since the war, he said, $75,000,000 has been sufficient to meet the annual demands of states which match the federal money dollar for dollar in the construction of arterial highways.

Dowell said in many parts of the country, particularly in the western states, there was an urgent demand to build roads to connect links which would afford complete highways which were now only improved in sections.

TEXAS MAY GET $3,000,000 MORE

AUSTIN, Nov. 25. (AP)—Texas probably would receive $3,000,000 additional yearly for road work if congress should increase the annual appropriation from $75,000,000 to $125,000,000, R. S. Sterling of Houston, chairman of the state highway commission, said here today.

Sterling pointed out that the state now receives $4,500,000 in federal aid each year. If Texas shares the proposed increase in proportion to the present allotment this state would get $7,500,000 annually.

At a recent meeting in San Antonio highway officials urged an increased federal appropriation for highways.

Pick Wilson, Veteran Railroad Worker, Dies

Pick Wilson, 57, former resident of Wichita Falls, died at his home in Fort Worth about 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, according to word received by friends here.

Funeral services will be held in Quanah at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. Interment will also be in that city. Survivors include his widow, three brothers and two sisters, all of Quanah.

Mr. Wilson was a conductor on the Fort Worth and Denver railway but was not in active service at the time of his death. He moved away from Wichita Falls about eight years ago after a residence here of more than 20 years.

PRISON COMMISSION

HOUSTON, Nov. 25. (AP)—The Texas prison commission met here today to discuss a successor to W. H. Mead, who resigned recently as general manager of the prison system. Chairman W. A. Paddock announced it was by no means certain the commission would be able to announce a selection today.

Better Than Whiskey For Bad Colds

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold remedy they have ever tried.

To get rid of that cold, step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk 60c for a bottle of Aspironal, the liquid cold remedy, and tell him to serve you two teaspoonsful. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite and expect you to try it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest, most effective, easiest to take and the most agreeable cold remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night. All druggists carry and guarantee Aspironal, the largest selling liquid cold remedy in the world. (adv.)
