Injuries Weaken Wildcats for Artesia

By BUD STEPHENS
Sports Editor
Clovis News-Journal

CLOVIS — The Clovis Wildcats have played four games, and each time, local fans have met a new look in the lineup.

Not bad enough that the team should start with little experience, the Wildcats have been plagued by injuries in every game in the still-young 1953 season.

Clovis opens its conference schedule with four returning lettermen tonight. Remaining positions are filled by graduates from the B team.

When the season opened, Coaches Phil Harmon and Will Velt were counting on a couple of halfbacks who had speed to burn, but both are on the sidelines with injuries.

Lloyd Norton and Carl Shores, both small but fast, had lots of potential. Norton injured a knee in the opener against Fort Sumner and Shores suffered a broken collar bone in the Albuquerque outing. Elmer White, light but speedy fullback, tore a ligament in his hip in the Bulldog encounter.

Only original member of the backfield still around is Dwain Perry, co-captain. He started out as quarterback, but when injuries hit, he was moved to halfback. He's the team's leading ground gainer.

Taking over at quarterback is Buddy Prince, a boy with no previous high school experience. He's a fine passer and runs the team well despite lack of veteran

Harmon moved Bobby Dugan, a hard runner, up from the B team to fill the other halfback slot. Bill Worley, who at 197 is the team's heaviest player, fills in at fullback.

Rugged Jerry Nesbitt, at 165 pounds is co-captain and the best plug in the line. Mark Southard, 185 at center, and Jack Pawol, 165-pound end, are other lettermen.

The team lacks depth from end to end. Tackles have been a hard-hit position. Alvin Whitehurst, 195-pounder, and Jim Ruckman, 170, fill the slots well. But, beyond the two, there's little help.

John Stager, 205-pound defensive tackle, suffered a broken leg against Albuquerque. Harry Hutchins, his replacement, was sidelined with a painful thigh injury in practice this week.

Clovis has a 2-2 record. The Wildcats opened by beating Fort Sumner 28-6, then lost to rugged Dumas, Texas, 26-7, and Albuquerque 19-0. Two punt returns accounted for a 13-0 victory over New Mexico Military Institute last week.

Constant shifts in the lineup have prevented the Wildcats from steaming up an effective offense. They've gained only 498 yards in four games. But the defense has limited the opposition to 442. Clovis has gained 160 yards passing to 182 for the foes.

Bulldogs Statistics Look Impressive In Easy Games

The Bulldogs of Artesia take an impressive array of victory statistics with them when they invade Clovis Friday night for the first Artesia-Wildcat game at Clovis in four years.

An unimpressive team on paper, the Bulldogs nevertheless have managed to impress three opponents so far this year—two of them with shut-out scores.

Friday's contest is Artesia's first conference game of the year, as it is for Clovis, and coupled with animosity left over from last year's drubbing at Artesia, makes the game mighty important to the Bulldogs.

Artesia to date has downed Albuquerque High 20-6, and Portales and New Mexico Military Institute by 40-0 in both games. Albuquerque's 19-0 defeat of Clovis two weeks ago and Artesia's subsequent win over the Duke City eleven have, needless to say, given rise to optimism among Artesia fans.

The Bulldogs have already gained 974 yards net on the ground this year, against 309 for their opponents. They have piled up 33 first downs, compared to 18 for the opposition.

Artesia has scored an even 100 points against the combined opposition's six.

Chief ground gainer for the Bulldogs is Freddy Sanders, a speedy little halfback who might weigh 140 pounds sopping wet. He's totted up 219 yards in three games.

Quarterback Johnny Riddle has run the ball 16 times for 165 yards. Halfback Don Lewis and Fullback Larry Beadle are tied at 128 yards apiece, while halfback Leo Barker has a 114 total with an average of six per carry.

The Greatest Gasoline Development in 31 Years

New Conoco Super Gasoline with TCP*

Start the "TWO-TANK TEST" today!

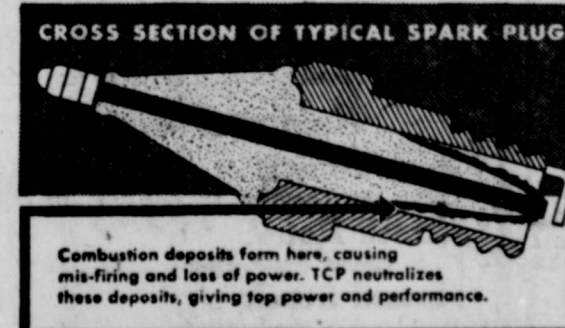

Conoco Super Gasoline with TCP has been rightfully called the greatest advance in motor fuels since the introduction of tetraethyl lead in 1922. For here, at last, is a gasoline so dramatically different that the average motorist can feel the improvement in his car after just two tankfuls. Yes, after your second tankful, chances are you will know why we say Conoco Super with TCP will:

- Boost power as much as 15%
- Increase spark-plug life up to 150%
- Give you extra gas mileage!

For Conoco Super is a new kind of gasoline—a gasoline especially developed to correct the greatest single cause of power loss affecting most of the cars on the road today.

Combustion deposits drastically reduce power

When you drive your car, deposits constantly build up on spark plugs and in the combustion chambers. These deposits can "cheat" you of power two ways. First, they short-circuit spark plugs—causing them to mis-fire. Second, deposits in the combustion chambers cause fuel to ignite before it should. This is called pre-ignition or "wild ping." The combined effect of mis-firing and pre-ignition is loss of power, lack of "pep" and wasted gas.

How Conoco Super with TCP works

TCP is a special chemical additive which is added to Conoco Super Gasoline. It was specifically developed to overcome the loss of power and fuel caused by combustion deposits. TCP neutralizes harmful deposits on spark plugs—your plugs spark as they should. It prevents deposits in the combustion chambers from causing pre-ignition—"wild ping" is controlled. Thus, every time you fill up with new Conoco Super, it's like getting your spark plugs cleaned and your engine tuned-up.

TCP helps your car, whether new or old

If you are driving a new car, with a high-compression engine, you need Conoco Super Gasoline to keep your car delivering all the power that was built into it. If you drive an older car, with tens of thousands of miles on the speedometer, Conoco Super can restore much of the "new car" performance and power you've been missing.

Start your "TWO-TANK TEST" today

When your gasoline tank is one-quarter full or less, fill it with Conoco Super with TCP. Now, there will still be some ordinary gasoline mixed in with your Conoco Super. So make sure your next tankful is Conoco Super, too. So rapidly does Conoco Super work, that with this second tankful, chances are you'll feel as if your engine has had a tune-up. You'll feel a boost in power. Try it today. We're sure you'll stay with Conoco Super.

Three Artesians Hunt for Bear In New Mexico

Ed Havins, Jerry Cole and Ralph Brown spent most of last week in the northern part of this state, near Pecos, hunting bear.

They took six bear dogs. On the hunt, they followed the dogs on mules especially trained for big game hunting. "These mules are not only more sure-footed on the trail but are easier to care for as they require less food and attention than do horses," says Havins. Havins plans to hunt deer and elk near Rifle, Colo. next week. He will be accompanied by Pat Murphy of Lovington. Both will meet Floyd Hickson, former farmer here. The trio will pack into the mountains and stay about 10 days.

New Plan for Injury, Property Auto Insurance Reduces New Mexico Cost Outside Albuquerque

A new plan of classifying private passenger automobiles for bodily injury and property damage liability insurance rates in New Mexico was announced by William Leslie, general manager of the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters, on behalf of the bureau's members and subscribers.

The plan, which is effective immediately, relates rates to the various recognized hazards of automobile operation to a greater degree than the plan formerly in use, Leslie said.

"It is estimated that at least 50 per cent of owners of private passenger cars insured by National Bureau companies will save on insurance costs as a result of the new classification plan," Leslie stated. "Liability insurance rates for these cars are lower because they qualify as less hazardous risks. For cars that are exposed to much greater recognized hazards,"

In explaining the new plan, Leslie stated:

"Under the old plan, a private passenger automobile was classified as Class 1, 2 or 3, depending upon use of car and age of operator. Under the new plan, use of car and age of operator continue to be classification factors, but Classes 1 and 2 are each subdivided into three classes.

Cars for non-business use and with no operator under 25 years of age, all formerly classified as Class 1, are now classified as 1A, 1B or 1C depending upon the degree of hazard involved in their operation. Individually-owned cars with operators under 25 years of age, regardless of business or non-business use, were previously all classified as Class 2, but now these cars are classified as Class 2A, 2B or 2C, according to the degree of hazard involved in their operation. Class 3 remains unchanged and still includes individually-owned cars used for business and with no operator under 25 years of age, and also cars owned by corporations, copartnerships or unincorporated associations, regardless of age of operator.

"The new plan recognizes that the use of a car in the course of going to or from work and the amount of such travel are important as a measure of hazard. A car not customarily used in driving to work is generally subject to less exposure than one driven un-wards in their operation, the rates are higher. For the remainder, those cars that qualify for the medium risk classes, the rates remain unchanged."

"Therefore a non-business car with no operator under 25 years of age, which is not customarily driven to work, is the least hazardous risk. Such cars are classes as 1A and receive the lowest rate.

"A non-business car, with no youthful operator, which is customarily driven to work and travels a one-way distance of less than 10 road miles is classed as 1B. "A non-business car, with no youthful operator, which is customarily driven to work and travels a one-way distance of 10 or more road miles is exposed to greater hazards than a 1A or 1B car and is classed as 1C.

"An individually-owned private passenger automobile owned by a person under 25 years of age or driven by a youthful operator resident in the household or employed as a chauffeur, is classed either as 2A, 2B or 2C, whether the car is for business or non-business use.

"The least hazardous of the car risks where youthful owners or operators are involved are the family car driven occasionally by a son or daughter under parental supervision and the car owned or operated by a young married couple having legal custody of one or more children resident in the household. A young son or daughter living at home will usually have use of the car under parental supervision.

"Frequently the youthful operator will have an older member of the family in the car. In the case of young parents, the responsibility of caring for small children and the confinement to home that this usually involves substantially reduce the exposure and modify the instability factor generally recognized in youthful drivers.

"Where the youthful car operators are not owners but are resident in the household or are employed as chauffeurs or where the youthful car owners or operators are married and have legal custody of one or more children resident in the household, such cars are classed as 2A.

"Where persons under 25 years of age are the owners or principal operators and are married but without children, the cars are classed as 2B.

"Cars owned or principally operated by unmarried persons under 25 years of age are the most hazardous private passenger risks, these youthful owners or operators typically lack parental supervision and the cars are frequently driven by other youths. Such cars are classed as 2C.

"Class 3 under the old plan remains unchanged under the new plan. This class still includes individually-owned cars used for business purposes with no operator under 25 years of age and also cars owned by corporations, copartnerships or unincorporated associations regardless of age of operator. However, it does not include private passenger cars owned by farm family copartnerships or corporations.

Status Quo—

of mustering a retaliatory atomic bombing.

In addition, the threat of Communism is twofold—military and ideological, Capt. Fielding declared. Even if the military strength of Communism might possibly be made ineffective, guns and atomic bombs cannot wipe an idea from the minds of men, he said.

He listed six blocs the U. S. must reinforce, located on the perimeter of Communist Russia and its satellites. They are the European, Mediterranean, Middle East, Indo-Pakistan, Southeast Asia, and Pacific blocs. These must be reinforced and held for the free world, he said, adding that progress to this end has been satisfactory in most countries.

Crabgrass Is New Pest in Southern New Mexico Lawns

This summer, southern New Mexico lawn enthusiasts have noticed in their yards an unfamiliar pest which has been identified as crabgrass.

Crabgrass, also called watergrass, summer grass, or fall grass, is an annual of pale-green color and is usually much-branched at the base. The stems have a tendency to spread by rooting at the lowermost swollen joints.

The leaf blades are 2 to 5 inches long, 1/4 to 1/3 inch wide, rather lax and flat, and the sheaths are rough-hairy with long, stiff, white hairs.

L. C. Gibbs, extension horticulturist at New Mexico A&M college, explains that most weeds have one or two virtues, but this is not true of crabgrass. It is a lazy variety, hardly evident until the sun has thoroughly warmed the ground early in June.

Even then crabgrass doesn't become a real pest until it becomes very hot and the other grasses appear more or less dormant. Crabgrass really takes over under these conditions, unless checked effectively in the early stages of growth. It will, however, kill out under adverse fall weather conditions and leave ugly brown bare spots.

Death at this stage is too late, because unless checked before frost, the crabgrass will have already done the damage and produced a seed crop for next year's infestation.

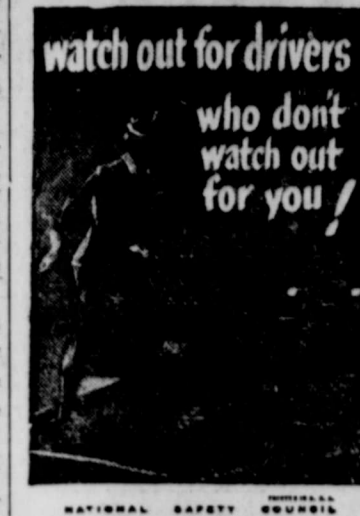

Chemicals containing either phenyl mercuric acetate or potassium cyanate as their basic ingredient are satisfactory for controlling crabgrass, Gibbs says. Excellent results have been obtained with both materials.

Two applications 10-14 days apart are generally required for satisfactory control. For best results, the horticulturist recommends that the materials be used as directed by the manufacturers.

Dodge Offers New Royal V-8 for 1954

Highlight of the 1954 Dodge line is the new super deluxe series known as the Royal V-8. A completely new interior styling is keyed to harmonize with 11 different body colors and 14 two-tone combinations. The Royal V-8 series is keynoted by Jacquard upholstery fabric, previously used only for rich tapestries and expensive furniture. On the exterior, a new spear-like chrome moulding accents the low, sweeping lines and lends a smooth, modern look. There also is a new grille design and treatment of headlights, taillights and wheel covers. The 1954 Dodge line also introduces such engineering advancements as PowerFlite, a new fully-automatic transmission; the economy-and-endurance tested Red Ram V-8 engine stepped up to 150 h.p. and 7.5 to 1 compression ratio; and a new type full-time power steering unit. The Coronet Six and Meadowbrook Six have been stepped up to 110 h.p. and 7.25 to 1 compression ratio.

Unveiling of Super Deluxe Series Highlights Introduction of New Dodge Line This Week

Unveiling of a new super deluxe series known as the Royal V-8 is the highlight of the 1954 Dodge passenger car line introduced in dealers' showrooms across the nation this week.

As Dodge launches its 40th year with the most luxurious car ever to bear the Dodge name, it also will introduce completely new interior styling, more than a dozen body beautifications and several major engineering advancements in its entire line consisting of 20 different models.

W. C. Newberg, president of Dodge division of Chrysler Corp., said the 20 different models are in three series—the new Royal V-8, the Coronet V-8 and Six and the Meadowbrook V-8 and Six. They are being offered in 11 new body colors and 14 two-tone combinations that are keyed to harmonize with the completely new interior styling.

Newberg announced that the 1954 Dodge line also offers such mechanical advancements as the economy-and-endurance tested Red Ram V-8 engine stepped up to 150 h.p. and 7.5 to 1 compression ratio; PowerFlite, a new fully-automatic transmission; and a new full-time power steering unit.

Meadowbrook V-8 models will continue at 140 h.p. The horsepower of the six-cylinder engines has been raised to 110 and the compression to 7.25 to 1.

Although the new Royal V-8 features super deluxe appointments and fittings, Newberg pointed out that the entire 1954 Dodge line is marked by many new styling changes.

On the exterior, a new spear-like chrome moulding accents the low, sweeping lines. Combined with a four-inch increase in the overall length of four-door and club coupe models and a five-inch increase in the sport coupe and convertible, the new exterior trim lends a smooth, modern look to the entire line.

Other major body changes include the grille design and front end. The new grille is lower, wider and has a more massive appearance. The traditional ram hood ornament has been streamlined, and a distinct, new styling has been given the V-8 crest and chrome-lined air scoop. Headlights have been redesigned and bumper guards have been modified.

In restyling the interiors of the entire line, R. C. Somerville, Dodge vice-president, revealed that his division had contracted for all available mill capacity on a new type of upholstery fabric known as

"Although new to the automotive industry," Somerville said, "Jacquard is a class of exclusive fabrics previously used only for rich tapestries and expensive furniture. We have chosen Jacquard for the 1954 Dodge because it is adaptable to unusual and elaborate patterns that contribute an entirely new feeling to our interiors."

A new benefit to the driver was described as "four-corner contact." He explained it as a feature that allows the average driver to maintain visual contact with all four fender lines.

"It is accomplished in the front," Somerville related, "through a combination of chair-high front seats that rise as they move forward, sloping hood and large one-piece windshield. In the rear it is made possible by the chair-high seats, wrap-around rear window and newly-designed chrome fins that accent the rear fender lines."

Somerville also said that the 1954 Dodge line has a choice of two transmissions. In addition to the new, fully-automatic PowerFlite drive, Dodge is making available the standard three-speed transmission, either with or without automatic overdrive. PowerFlite, which requires no

Guide to Time of Irrigation, Amount of Water To Use Depend on Estimate of Soil Moisture

By C. H. DIEBOLD
 Soil Conservation Service

When do you need to irrigate? To what level should the "readily available" moisture in the crop root zone drop before you put on water?

For most row crops, you can delay irrigation for several days if the "readily available" moisture is more than one-half the total amount that can be held in the soil at a depth of 6 to 12 inches.

In contrast, growth has slowed up and you have missed the best time to irrigate when the level of readily available moisture is lower than one-fourth in the 6-12 inch layer.

The best way to maintain rapid growth is to irrigate when the level of readily available moisture in the 6-12 inch layer is between one-fourth and one-half.

What is "readily available" moisture? It is the volume of water occurring between the moisture level, field capacity, and the level at which plants with mature root systems begin to show drought symptoms. It is the moisture that a plant can obtain easily from the soil while maintaining rapid growth.

We consider that a soil is at field capacity two days after it has been well-soaked by irrigation or by heavy rain. We say it is at the other limit when plants with well developed root systems begin to show signs of wilting. "Readily available" moisture, then, is the amount of water that a soil can deliver easily to plants between these two points.

We have calculated the readily available moisture values for the surface foot of various soils in the Southwest.

These values are based on irrigation trials, and they cover the common ranges of soil texture. They represent the average depth of water that can be held in readily available form in the surface foot.

2.1 inches per foot of soil for medium to fine textured soils.

1.2 inches per foot for sandy loams containing more than 70 per cent sand and for loamy sands up to 85 per cent sand.

1.0 inch per foot for loamy sands containing 85-95 per cent sand.

0.7 inch per foot for sands — more than 95 per cent sand.

As expected, sandy soils hold smaller amounts of readily available moisture than heavier soils. But, to our surprise, there was little difference between fine sandy loams (less than 70 per cent sand), loams, silt loams, clay loams and clays.

Now, with this information, if you learn to estimate the percentage of readily available moisture present in the soil, you can then estimate the inches of water to be applied to bring the root zone to field capacity.

You can also better determine when the moisture content is suitable or tillage. Just because the soil is not sticky, don't think that you can operate without creating a tillage pan.

Preliminary studies indicate that tillage pans may be created by most farm implements, when more than one-half of the readily available moisture is present in the soil. Of course, the one-way disk is especially bad in creating tillage pans, but don't overlook the other tillage implements.

Although this article is directed largely toward irrigation farming, the writer has found that estimating the percentage of readily available moisture present is helpful on dry farm lands also.

Here, the amount of readily available moisture at the time of planting winter wheat may be the difference between success and failure. You can also evaluate different tillage and management practices as they affect storage of moisture in the soil.

The author has tried several methods of estimating readily available moisture over a period of years in New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, and Arizona. Of these, the "ball test" for estimating readily available moisture in medium to fine-textured soils appears to be the most practical.

A spade is perhaps the most satisfactory tool for examining the surface foot of soil. For deeper depths, a soil tube or an auger is helpful in taking samples quickly.

As the first step in estimating the readily available moisture in the soil, take a typical handful of soil from a depth of between 6 and 12 inches.

Squeeze the ball of soil firmly three or four times. Use just about the squeeze you would on a hard-milking cow, not too much, not too little.

If the soil is too dry to form a ball, it contains less than one-fourth as much readily available moisture as it would have when at field capacity.

When the soil is moist enough to form a ball, it contains at least one-fourth the amount of readily available moisture it would have at field capacity.

Take the moist ball and toss it about one foot into the air. Then catch it just as you would catch a baseball.

If the ball breaks with five tosses or less, it is fragile. Such fragile balls contain from one-fourth to one-half readily available moisture. Now is the best time to put on irrigation water.

If the ball still remains intact after it has been tossed five times, it is durable. Durable balls contain more than one-half readily available moisture. You won't need to irrigate at this level.

If the thickness of one-fiftieth of an inch, or more, sticks to your thumb after the soil is squeezed firmly, the readily available moisture is between three-fourths and 100 per cent of field capacity.

The same clues apply to the sandy soils except that the balls of soil are usually fragile for the entire range from one-fourth readily available moisture up to field capacity.

If you follow the procedures, you should be able to estimate within one inch the depth of water that you need to apply to fill the root zone. The ball test is a sound, proven guide for the farmer who wants to apply water efficiently.

Cause of Asthma Discussed By Local Doctor

Many asthma sufferers have become discouraged because they have felt theirs is an incurable disease. But asthma, like any other sickness, responds favorably to Chiropractic when its primary cause is subluxation.

A subluxation is a misplacement of a vertebra in the spinal column which results in the impingement of nerve fibers and thus the improper or inadequate distribution of vital force within the body. A subluxation is a "blocking" so that some part of the body is prevented from getting the necessary vital nerve force to maintain health.

When the Chiropractor adjusts the subluxation and replaces it in its normal position, life force can again flow in the proper quantity and quality, and health restoration begins.

Even in chronic cases of asthma that have existed over a long period of time, Chiropractic can be beneficial—so, do not be discouraged, do not give up hope. Remember, it is not right to say "everything possible has been done" unless Chiropractic is included.

For further information about Chiropractic you are invited to consult Dr. Kathryn Behnke, Palmer Graduate Chiropractor, 408 W. Richardson, Phone 861.

Other Fellow's Money

WHEN WE ARE operating a business and fail or neglect to pay our bills and obligations as they come due on the first of the month we are actually using the other fellow's money on which to operate our own business.

We probably would resent this if someone said it to us and yet if we use the money we should employ to pay our debts to continue to do business and fail to pay our bill then we would be out of business if it weren't for the other fellow's money.

We have pointed out many times before that the extending credit to an individual or a business firm is extending a courtesy. It is expected when credit is granted that the bill will be created by the first of the following month.

If it were not believed the bill would be paid then we would not extend the credit. In many instances those being granted credit are honest and sincere, too. They fully intend to pay that obligation.

But sometimes something happens to prevent us from paying the bill. In other cases, however, we just do not make the effort sufficient to meet the obligation or we use money we should use to pay our bills to pay something else or oftentimes to buy something else.

When this occurs we destroy our credit rating and we become a bad risk insofar as credit bureaus and agencies are concerned.

And when that occurs over a period of time we usually find we are not granted credit and we must pay cash for what we get.

Sometimes those granting credit make a mistake by not demanding pay and by permitting accounts to grow too large. In this event they perhaps have intended to grant a favor but the fact is they have done the individual a dis-service instead of a favor.

Good credit is one of the finest things in the world. We could all have good credit rating if we would not seek credit unless we know we can pay our account when it is due and if we were willing to make the effort and the sacrifice which will permit us to pay our bills.

Credit is a fine thing. Much of the world's business is done on credit but it only remains a good instrument to be used in business transactions when it is not abused.

Don't use the money of the fellow you owe to do business if you want a good credit rating.

Newspaper Week

ALTHOUGH THEY TAKE jibes at all the other national days and special weeks, newspapers nevertheless have staked out this week as their very own on the calendar.

It is designed, the professional associations say, for newspapers to focus attention on themselves, to overcome what is generally believed a lack of public understanding of the newspapers' role in contemporary society, and of newspapers' problems.

We suspect the leadership for such a movement comes from the editorial towers of the large newspapers, which are so far removed from their readership they must have a special week to supplement their day-to-day efforts.

Editors of such newspapers should try their hand at small-town journalism for a few weeks. If they think people aren't interested in the newspapers, let them be caught in the editorial chair when a birth announcement is left out, a flood of typos errors hits page one, a headline fluff slips by everyone, or the newspaper goes way off base on an editorial stand.

In small towns the newspaper is not edited by reader surveys and circulation results. It is too close to the people or that. When John Citizen nails the editor on the way to the postoffice or Mrs. John Citizen calls upon the phone and wants to speak to whoever wrote that piece, reader surveys are beside the point, and the editor better have more than a sheet of paper covered with figures to explain his action.

But in the spirit of newspaper week we'll take time out for a brief moment of sympathy, of understanding, of feeling for those big newspapermen who print less local news in six or seven days a week than the Advocate does in two days, then can't understand why they're not close to the public.

On to Clovis

ARTESIA'S PROMISING football Bulldogs tonight face always-tough Clovis in first AA conference match for the South-eastern New Mexico team.

Remembering last year, Artesians shouldn't sell Clovis short.

Those Bulldogs of ours have a lot on their side as they enter into league competition this year, things like good physical condition, top coaching, and drive.

We also think they have stronger backing from the community than in several years past, a backing the better for having been earned by the boys through their showing of the 1953 season to date. That ability has surprised some adults who hadn't figured on Artesia's developing football strength this year.

These Bulldogs are full of surprises—we think they'll have one for Clovis tonight, despite reports the Wildcats are "laying for Artesia."

Grand Jury Report

DESPITE ITS supplementary report issued Monday, the recent Eddy county grand jury's report does little credit to its members and gives little justification for its brief existence.

So far as we could tell, the grand jury was almost solely concerned with administrative details concerning operation of Carlsbad's city police force. It went so far afield Dist. Judge C. Roy Anderson had to call the boys together for a report on matters the jury had overlooked in its enthusiasm to play super-cop.

Artesia is also very much interested in the paragraph which reads "An investigation of alleged violations committed by a Justice of the Peace and Artesia, New Mexico, City Police Judge John Elliott found insufficient evidence to warrant indictment by the Grand Jury."

Why did not the grand jury list all the officials on whom it had reports, whether true or false, and say it found insufficient evidence to indict them? Such a paragraph as that concerning Elliott implies by innuendo there are irregularities, although not serious enough to warrant a grand jury indictment. Certainly there is nothing of justice about a statement such as that in a grand jury report. If there has been misconduct, it should be known; if there has been no more in that office than in others not mentioned, one individual should not be singled out.

Parking Meters

WE HEAR REPORTS in the community that a fellow in St. Louis has come up with a new idea to further the revenue parking meters can produce.

He has invented a device which, when a car backs out from a meter that still has time on it, cancels the time and turns it back to zero. That was so the next guy won't get a free ride.

Artesia's city fathers in pursuing their current policy might well consider an order for such a device.

They are also passing an opportunity in not equipping their meter patrolmen with at least roller skates, if not a motor scooter. He could probably make the full circuit in 20 minutes, we imagine, and be ready to start all over again without feeling the least bit tired.

THE PERSUADER

NEW MEXICO EDITORS ARE SAYING—

Rebuilding 'Bloody Run' West of Roswell Is Announced With Six-Mile Stretch First

PUBLIC IS PLEASED

Nothing has occurred in this community lately that has aroused as much interest as an announcement that work is to begin on rebuilding Bloody Run, the state highway that runs west from Roswell to the mountain region of Ruidoso, and which has taken many lives in the past decade.

Unofficial word on the project is that Border Hill, the worst death trap in the state of New Mexico, will be one of the first things to be eliminated in the reconstruction program.

That is good news, too, for anyone who drives the west road approaches the bloody knob with apprehension, not knowing if he is to be the next victim.

Six miles of the highway are to be the first move toward rebuilding the route and that is a fine beginning as all of Roswell agrees.

We make the statement advisedly, and base the conclusion on the number of telephone calls that have reached the editorial desk within the past few days, commending the State Highway Department and expressing the hope that the remainder of the route will be taken care of before too very long.

The Highway Department does realize the importance of this rebuilding program. It knows that the route is one of the worst killer stretches in the state, and has taken full recognition of it in this first step. And we understand, also through unofficial sources, that money for the whole reconstruction program may be available before too very long.—Roswell Record.

ONLY BOOTLEGGERS HURT

New Mexico's newspapers are having themselves a good time with accounts of how the lifting of a century-old ban on selling liquor to Indians has failed to set off a rush of Redmen to the bars.

In Gallup, the New Mexico Indian center, newsmen made a survey of the town's bistros the day after the law had been repealed and found things were pretty quiet. Where were the Indians? They were going stoically about their business as usual.

The truth of the matter, we strongly suspect, is that the Indians who wanted firewater were getting it long before the people of New Mexico wiped out the old law in September's special election. They wouldn't be in a great hurry to swarm into the bars now. Probably had a good stock anyway. The rest of the Indians just weren't interested.—Carlsbad Current-Argus.

READERS

Hobbs, the sixth largest city in New Mexico, has the fifth largest circulation of books from its public library, according to records for 1952-53.

Three larger cities and one smaller do more reading than Hobbs. There are big Albuquerque, population 145,693; Santa Fe, 25,738; Roswell, 17,318, and surprisingly Las Cruces, estimated 13,000 population.

Clovis, with its fifth-ranking population of 17,318, was close to dilute with its small annual book circulation of 14,368 volumes. It ranked 16th in the state in book-borrowing.

Carlsbad, the fourth-ranking with 17,975, had nothing to boast about. Its readers borrowed only 42,244 books from the public library, which was 263 fewer than in Hobbs with its 13,875 population.

Roswell's 17,318 residents borrowed only 46,546 books, which total was only 4,309 above that of Hobbs.

Miss Doris Nesbitt, the Hobbs librarian, operates a good library, keeps the shelves alive. And Hobbs responds with large-scale borrowing.

With the number of books growing in our library, many patrons hope the time is not far distant when the number of books borrowed can be greater than two. That's hardly a week-end's reading.—Hobbs News-Sun.

ABSENTEE BALLOT MATTER NEEDS FINAL DECISION

Attorney General Richard Robinson has ruled that Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 10 of the Sept. 15 special election, "was not validly passed."

The amendment received approval by nearly 3 to 1 of all those who voted in the election. Twelve counties failed to approve by a two-thirds majority. In one, the amendment failed to receive a majority.

It is doubtful if the original framers of the constitution wished to make absentee voting so difficult to provide in New Mexico. It is recognized that it was sought to set up the voting requirements so all citizens would forever have the privilege of voting. But in so protecting the right of franchise, the original framers have taken away the right to vote of persons unable to be at their polling places on election day. As the tempo of living increases, increasingly large segments of the population are thus disenfranchised.

The Legislature sought, in submitting the amendment as it did this year, to offer a new premise for a review in the supreme court. Previously, the high court has ruled that the language of Section 1, Article 7 of the constitution prohibits absentee voting; that the phrase, "precinct in which he offers to vote" implies physical presence at the polling place. To amend this section, the constitution sets out that it shall take the approval of two thirds of those voting in each and every county and a three-fourths majority in the entire state.

A new premise has been provided by the legislature.

Two prominent groups in New Mexico have been active in advocating the absentee for New Mexico one of the two states now without such a provision. One group is the League of Women Voters. The other is the American Legion, assisted by other service organizations.

These groups have not finished their work in the absentee ballot field. They could finish the round by bringing a supreme court action.

If we are never to have an absentee ballot in New Mexico, let's know it now—leave the matter pending where it is.—Alamogordo News.

COFFEE TALK—

Bulldogs Rated to Win Over Clovis By at Least Two Touchdowns Tonight

WE HOPE THE FOOTBALL boys don't see this, but the general talk is that Artesia is at least a two-touchdown favorite to win over Clovis' Wildcats in the two teams' first conference game tonight at Clovis.

The Advocate will staff the game, naturally, and attempt to arrange pictures for benefit of fans who can't make it.

THIS PAPER AS A PART OF the hometown news media of Artesia was taken to task by Jerry Brown of the Current-Argus the other day for not recognizing what Mr. Brown believed was the outstanding play of a certain Bulldog.

We agree with Mr. Brown's estimate, but there are two considerations holding us back. One is answering the phone to talk with all the mommies whose sons weren't recognized. If we were running a sports desk alone, it might not be so bad, but we use the phone for other stories, too.

Then too, it's a little hard in a small town to publicly state, especially early in the season, that this player is dandy, that one superlative, etc. The Advocate, when boosting is in order, tries to boost the Bulldogs at this point in the season as a team, rather than pick out individuals to boost.

IN CASE ANYONE MISSES it on page one, the annual baseball club stockholders meeting is to be held next Tuesday night, rather than Monday as usual.

REPORTS ARE BEING heard more housing is in the works for Artesia. A story is expected next week on more housing for veterans, for which about $45,000 is reported to be available. Size of the project will depend on demand.

Also in the works is some FHA housing but this is very definite. No one can say how much, or at what cost, but house construction will be able in the city.

MORE AND MORE REEF over parking meters is being this time not just the same people who have always opposed them.

Sixteen hundred parking tickets is a lot to put out month, but the cops did it every month under instruction from the city council. Their best previous month, according to our recollection, was 1,400, as we recall, the average been around 1,200.

One thing you can hand to police—they really follow up at least in enforcing the parking meter ordinance.

ATTORNEYS HAVE BEEN studying their copies of the passed in the last legislative session, having arrived two weeks ago although the legislature adjourned in March.

In the volumes is an new motor vehicle code, for one thing rule out right when the light facing the start of the turn is red. City officials plan to bring city ordinances on traffic line with the state code, state code does of course concede all city laws.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF new Plymouth for 1954 is works for release next Tuesday.

It, like the Dodge announced today, features minor changes and a host of improvements. Most others are expected to follow a new line this year in the new since last year saw a big major change-overs.

THOUGHTS IN PRINT

Oil Earns More for British Export Trade Than Long-Vaulted King Coal

OIL EARNS MORE MONEY for Britain in export markets than does its "king coal," the Wall Street Journal points out.

In the first quarter of this year, Britain's fast-growing refinery industry earned nearly 48 million dollars in foreign currencies, while coal brought in a little more than 43 million dollars. If the trend continues, this will be the first year in which the nation's foreign earnings from coal will have been exceeded by those from another fuel. Last year, coal earned Britain 155 million dollars in foreign currencies compared with 146 million for petroleum.

IF I WERE ASKED WHAT was the oddest feature of American education—the one which strikes me still as mistaken—I should say it is the belief that everything you need to learn must be taught.—D. W. Brogan, British author and political scientist, in a BBB broadcast.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE oyster, told by Anne Terry White in Coronet:

There are more than 50 different species, though not all of them have commercial value. Some are as large as a dessert plate, others so small that a hundred or so make a portion.

New and Delectable Cobblers

By ALICE DENHOFF THERE are many schools of thought on the subject of that delectable dish known as the cobbler.

One prefers to make it with a pastry base. Another advocates biscuit dough. Some use two crusts; others one.

Some New Cobblers Whichever your school, you might like to try new ways with cobblers such as the following:

To serve 6, sift once 3/4 c. sifted flour, measure, add tsp. baking powder, 1/2 tsp. salt; sift again. Cream 2 tbsp. taken from 4 tbsp. butter; add 1/4 c. sugar gradually, creaming after each addition.

Add 2 tbsp. taken from 1/2 c. milk, beating thoroughly. Add flour, alternate with remaining milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add 2 tbsp. currants and 1 1/2 tsp. grated lemon rind.

Turn into well-greased baking dish (8x8x2 inches). Combine remaining butter, 1/2 c. honey, 1 1/4 c. water and dash of salt. Pour over batter. Bake at 350° F. for 45 minutes. Serve warm with cream.

Main Dish Cobbler A main dish cobbler is made with a bran cereal pastry.

Cut 2 lb. round steak into 1 in. cubes; add 1 1/2 c. sliced onions and brown in 1/4 c. shortening. Stir in 2 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. pepper, Worcestershire sauce, 3/4 c. chopped parsley and 2 tsp. salt, mixing well. Add 2 1/2 c. water slowly; stir constantly. Add 2 sliced raw potatoes. Cover and simmer about 30 min. Pour in greased 8 1/2-in. casserole.

Bran Pastry Cover with bran pastry roll 1/4-in. thick. Prick with fork, show wedge-shaped pieces. Bake at 450° F. about 20 min.

To prepare pastry, roll 1/4 c. bran cereal until fine; combine with 1 1/2 c. flour and 1/2 tsp. salt. Cut in 1/2 c. shortening. Add 1/4 c. cold water (more or less little at a time, until dough moist enough to hold together).

Cultivating Good Listening In Our Children and Ourselves

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

PROBABLY among the most likable and forceful persons you know are those who look into your eyes when they speak or listen to you.

When you and I don't squarely face the person we presumably are listening to, we may dislike this person or what he says or be uninterested in it. We may fear the force of his eyes, his demeanor or whole personality.

Uncomplimentary Manner

Whatever the cause for it, we don't suggest in our manner that we consider the person speaking to be important or worth giving wholehearted attention. To this extent, he doesn't find us attractive or likable. But when we listen with forceful animation, we suggest that we consider him important, causing him to like us.

Our failure to face the person to whom we are talking makes what we say less forceful, and the listener less impressed by it and by us. In contrast, when we use our eyes with good effect as we speak to a person, we render ourselves and what we say more attractive, and the person listening to us more responsive, as a rule. Of course, good listening and speaking with the eyes can become a mere matter of habit.

Bigger Business Boom
In 1960s is Foreseen

Sight Economic Upsurge
Following Tapering Off

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The big postwar business boom may have run its course but some Washington experts believe the stage is being set for another economic spree in the 1960s.

These Washington economists believe that production and national income are at their highest levels and will taper off in the next few years barring any international crisis.

President Eisenhower

However, seven years from now, in 1960, the experts say, this country may experience boom conditions never before equalled in American history.

The reason is the steadily climbing population. By 1960, the big post-war baby crop of the 1940s will begin planning marriage and then demands will soar for housing and consumer goods.

One Washington official says: "If you think you have seen a housing boom in the past few years, wait until 1960. It will be terrific."

Without informing the Secret Service, which is charged with the welfare of the nation's leaders, Ike invited Veep Nixon to return with him to the vacation spot.

It was perfectly okay for Nixon to go, but an unwritten law was broken when the President and the Vice President made the hop in the same plane.

This put both their lives in one airplane and should an accident occur, the nation might lose both its top leaders at once. If such a disaster should occur, the speaker of the House would become President.

NEW COMPTROLLER-GENERAL—Senate Secretary Mark Trice is an open candidate for the $17,500-a-year post of comptroller-general—if and when its present occupant, Lindsay Warren, takes advantage of a new retirement law to quit.

Trice, who started out in government service as a Senate page boy, already has the recommendation of the Senate Republican policy committee for the Warren position.

Trice made himself a candidate for the job after Congress, in its last session, amended the retirement law so that the comptroller general may retire at full salary for life after he has served 10 years of his 15-year term, reaches the age of 65 or is disabled.

Friends of Warren indicated that he might step out under these conditions. So far, however, Warren has made no move to get out. He has another two years of his term to serve.

MICHIGAN MELEE—The politicians in Washington are keeping an eye cocked toward Michigan where, they say, may come the hottest political battle of the year. It won't only be Democrats versus Republicans, either.

The Republicans especially may have quite a squabble among themselves before they decide whether Senator Homer Ferguson is to be a candidate for re-election.

If there is an intra-party fight, it will be between Ferguson and the former Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg. The general has threatened to run against Ferguson in the primary and he has encouragement from Democrats.

Former President Truman is said to have told Vandenberg that if he can win the GOP nomination, the Democrats would put only token opposition against him.

However, such a move might stir up trouble in the Democratic ranks, too. Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams reportedly has set his sights on the United States Senate for 1954 and might balk at any Democratic deal with Vandenberg.

Wallace Pressley and children
