House snubs Senate plan

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas House is scheduled to take up a $450 million school finance reform bill Thursday, after its Public Education Committee rejected a Senate bill with a $1.2 billion price tag for next school year.

The committee substituted its measure for the Senate bill on a 6-1 vote Tuesday, with Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-Universal City, voting against it.

But a sponsor of the House measure, Rep. Kent Grusendorf, said he voted for it in committee only to get it to the floor, where he plans to introduce his own substitute.

"There's too many unknowns" concerning the future cost of the House measure, as it was amended in committee, said Grusendorf, R-Arlington.

Another bill sponsor, Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, said the bill provides the equity that the Texas Supreme Court said was needed when it threw out the current system.

"I think that it would finally say that the quality of education for any school child in the state of Texas is not going to be a function of where they live," said Ms. Glossbrenner, D-Alice, head of the Public Education Committee.

Lawmakers are working in special session to answer the Texas Supreme Court's ruling that the school finance system is unconstitutional because of disparities between property-rich and -poor school districts. The $13.5 billion-a-year public school system relies on a combination of state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

The bill finally approved by the House likely will end up in a conference committee with the Senate measure, so lawmakers can try to work out differences.

"If everything goes right, we could pass an education bill" to Gov. Bill Clements before the special session ends at midnight March 28, House Speaker Gib Lewis said.

If a tax increase is required to pay for the measure, Lewis said, "We'll have to be back here week after next, and take that issue up." That would require a second special session, which only the governor has the authority to call.

Clements, who has promised to veto any new taxes for court-ordered public school finance reform, said of Lewis' statement, "I never heard of such a thing. I think that's mostly just conversation."

A bill spending no more than about $250 million in the 1990-91 school year would be acceptable, Clements said, because that amount wouldn't require a tax increase.

But Ms. Glossbrenner said Texans are willing to spend more money if they can be sure children are getting a good education. The House and Senate measures, besides calling for additional money and a more equitable distribution of funds, include provisions designed to make educators more accountable for the job they do.

"I believe that the people of this state want, and are willing to pay for, a quality education system," Ms. Glossbrenner said.

Six metropolitan chambers of commerce - Austin, Corpus Christi, Dallas, El Paso, Fort Worth and San Antonio - said they would support spending more state money to equalize school funding, if necessary, but only if major changes are made to raise education standards.

"Quite simply, the economic health of our state and the quality of life in our communities rests heavily on the successful restructuring of our education system," said John Crawford, chairman of the Metropolitan Chambers Education Task Force and vice chairman of public affairs for the Greater Dallas Chamber.

Members of the Texas Federation of Teachers also met with state lawmakers to support increased funding for public schools.

Clayton uncomfortable with Ann

AUSTIN (AP) - Republican Clayton Williams says he would feel uncomfortable facing Ann Richards in the Texas governor's race because she is a woman.

The GOP gubernatorial nominee said Tuesday that he had no problem with a woman seeking the governor's office, but added he would be more cautious running against her. He said he comes from the "male world."

Williams' discussion of the gender issue overshadowed a highly touted lunch at the White House with President Bush, who pledged to campaign actively for Williams.

"I'd be less comfortable, I think, campaigning against a woman," said Williams.

Ms. Richards faces state Attorney General Jim Mattox in an April 10 runoff for the Democratic nomination.

"Even cowboys get the blues," said Ms. Richards in Austin.

"The inevitable is not always comfortable," the state treasurer said. "I don't want to be his mother. I want to be governor of Texas."

Williams was in Washington for what he called a "listening and learning" visit. Last week, he clobbered three opponents to win the GOP nomination to replace retiring Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

During a luncheon at a Mexican restaurant for Washington-based reporters for Texas media organizations, Williams made his comments about running against a woman.

RICHARDS

He said he did not care whether Ms. Richards or Mattox won the Democratic nomination.

"We'll take either one of them on," said Williams. "They both have strengths and weaknesses."

But he took the statement, which he has made earlier, a step further, adding that "I wouldn't be as comfortable in battling with a woman. I don't have that comfort factor because I've never done that.

"I don't have a problem there, but neither do I have experience," said Williams, who has never held political office.

Asked to explain his comments, he said, "The worlds from which I came was the male world."

Judge selection is lost in shuffle

AUSTIN (AP) - Judicial selection - one of the two reasons Gov. Bill Clements called lawmakers into a special legislative session -has become the lost issue.

"Trying to ignite enthusiasm about judicial reform is like trying to set Lake Austin on fire," Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and chairman of a Senate committee considering several judicial proposals, said Tuesday.

With one week left in the 30-day session, lawmakers have yet to pass a bill out of committee to address a federal court decision that the current method of electing judges in nine urban counties violates the Voting Rights Act by diluting minority voting strength.

House Speaker Gib Lewis also appears ready to throw in the towel and tackle the issue in another special session.

After meeting Tuesday with Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said, "It's going to be very difficult to get a judicial selection bill passed this session."

But black and Hispanic lawmakers said they have a plan that will solve the problem and they blamed Clements for the impasse.

When asked how lawmakers can change Clements' mind, state Rep. Orlando Garcia, D-San Antonio, said, "That assumes he has a mind."

Clements called the Legislature into session for judicial and public school reform.

But so far, public school issues have taken center stage. "Public education is ahead of it on the agenda," Montford said.

The Black and Mexican American legislative caucuses said their proposal would serve as a temporary solution. The plan is similar to one offered by U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton except it maintains partisan elections.

Under the proposal, state district court candidates in Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar counties would run from the same single member districts as do state representatives.

In Jefferson, Ector, Lubbock and Midland counties, the candidates would run from commissioners court precincts. Candidates in Travis County would run from justice of the peace precincts.

State Rep. Larry Evans, D-Houston, and chairman of the Black Legislative Caucus, said the bill is supported by the plaintiffs in the judicial selection lawsuit, the Texas Democratic Party and Texas Conference of Black Mayors.

"We know this idea may not be popular with a lot of our colleagues, but many ideas that are right and just aren't popular," he said.

Plaintiffs in the lawsuit argued that minority voting strength was diluted because of the countywide voting method. Essentially, candidates favored overwhelmingly by minorities could not win office.

State Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, and chairman of the Hispanic Legislative Caucus, said single member districts for judges "brings more representation to more people."

NASA considering rescue plan

WASHINGTON (AP) - NASA will talk with aerospace company officials Thursday about sending astronauts to rescue a $157 million communications satellite stranded in space by a miswired Titan 3 rocket.

The Intelsat 6 satellite is whirling around Earth at an altitude of 276 miles - about 22,000 miles lower than it should be to do its job.

"The design was wrong," said Judy Stowell, a spokeswoman for Martin Marietta Corp., which built the rocket. "Our analysis shows an engineering design error caused the vehicle to be wired improperly."

As a result, after the Titan was launched on March 14, the satellite didn't separate automatically as it was supposed to. When engineers sent a separation signal, a small rocket that was to boost the satellite to its duty station stayed with the spent Titan and left the satellite marooned.

A Martin Marietta spokesman was quoted by the Denver Post as saying that the Titan had been wired to launch two satellites and that the separation signal went to a location where there was none. But Ms. Stowell said that explanation was premature and that two committees were investigating the failure.

While Martin Marietta searched for the cause, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration scheduled its meeting at the Johnson Space Center in Houston with representatives of Intelsat, owner of the satellite, and Hughes Aircraft, its builder.

Intelsat, a 118-nation consortium, did not insure the satellite, which was to have gone into service over the Atlantic Ocean. A spokesman, Tony Trujillo, said it was the most sophisticated communications satellite ever built, capable of carrying 120,000 telephone calls simultaneously.

Intelsat was being charged $115 million for the Titan rocket and launch by Martin Marietta. The satellite cost an additional $157 million.

NASA hasn't said whether it is willing to go after the satellite, as it has for five others.

"They are just going to come in and give us some information where the spacecraft is and its condition and so forth," said Hal Lambert, manager of integration operations at the space center. "We are going to discuss whether it's possible to get the satellite."

Two rescue methods have been proposed, Lambert said. In one, the space shuttle would carry a rocket stage into orbit to be bolted onto the satellite by astronauts. In the other, the satellite would be put into the shuttle cargo bay and brought back to Earth for refitting.

Because it was not intended for shuttle operations, the five-ton satellite has no fitting that could be grappled by the shuttle's robot arm. That would mean a special capture device would have to be designed and built.

Industry sources have little doubt the rescue can be accomplished; astronauts have saved five satellites that way, bringing three home and repairing two in orbit.

The cost of such a mission, however, would be high and probably would become the deciding factor. With shuttle flights costing $250 million and up, NASA no longer will rescue satellites for $15 million, as it did in 1984 with the Palapa and Westar satellites.

NASA spokesman say they don't know how much would be charged today because the agency no longer does commercial business and there is no published rate schedule. The charges, however, probably would be based on the amount of cargo space and weight involved.

Hereford's HEROES

By BRACK BRYANT

My hero is my dad, John David Bryant.

My hero has taught me everything I know, from playing football to making a giant shake. In football he taught me how to be a good quarterback and a stinging tackler. He's shown me a lot of plays from when he played football. He was the quarterback for the Hereford Whitefaces and in college he played for West Texas State University.

In basketball he showed me how to aim a basketball better and play a hard one-on-one defense. Whenever I'm in trouble, he's always there waiting to help me. Last summer he showed me how to play racquetball. I thought it was very fun.

My dad is the best person in the world He always tries to please you as best he can. I love him very very very very much. I wish I could spend a lot more time with my hero, my dad.

Moderate stress can hurt hearts

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Long periods of moderate stress common in daily life can trigger potentially hazardous disruptions in the heart's blood supply, a new study shows.

The research is the latest effort to understand what happens during silent ischemia - painless moments when the heart needs more blood than its arteries can supply.

As many as 3 million to 4 million Americans have these episodes without knowing it. Heart specialists are debating just what to do about them, and even whether the spells are truly dangerous.

At a meeting Tuesday of the American College of Cardiologists, a Boston team presented evidence that the heart rate may gradually increase for a half-hour before the heart becomes ischemic, or deprived of oxygen-carrying blood.

Twenty-one persons' heart rates were monitored by portable recording devices as they went about their daily routine. Even at their most rapid, their hearts often did not beat remarkably fast.

"It is not necessarily how strongly you turn on your cardiovascular system. It's how long," said Dr. Andrew Selwyn, the study's senior author from Brigham and Women's Hospital.

In the study, silent ischemia occurred when the subjects' heart rates rose from an average of 74 to 95 beats per minute. But three-quarters of this increase took place over periods up to a half-hour before the ischemia.

When ischemia causes pain, it is known as angina. People can take a variety of drugs to ease this condition. Some experts believe that silent ischemia is just as hazardous as the painful variety and give their patients the same medicines.

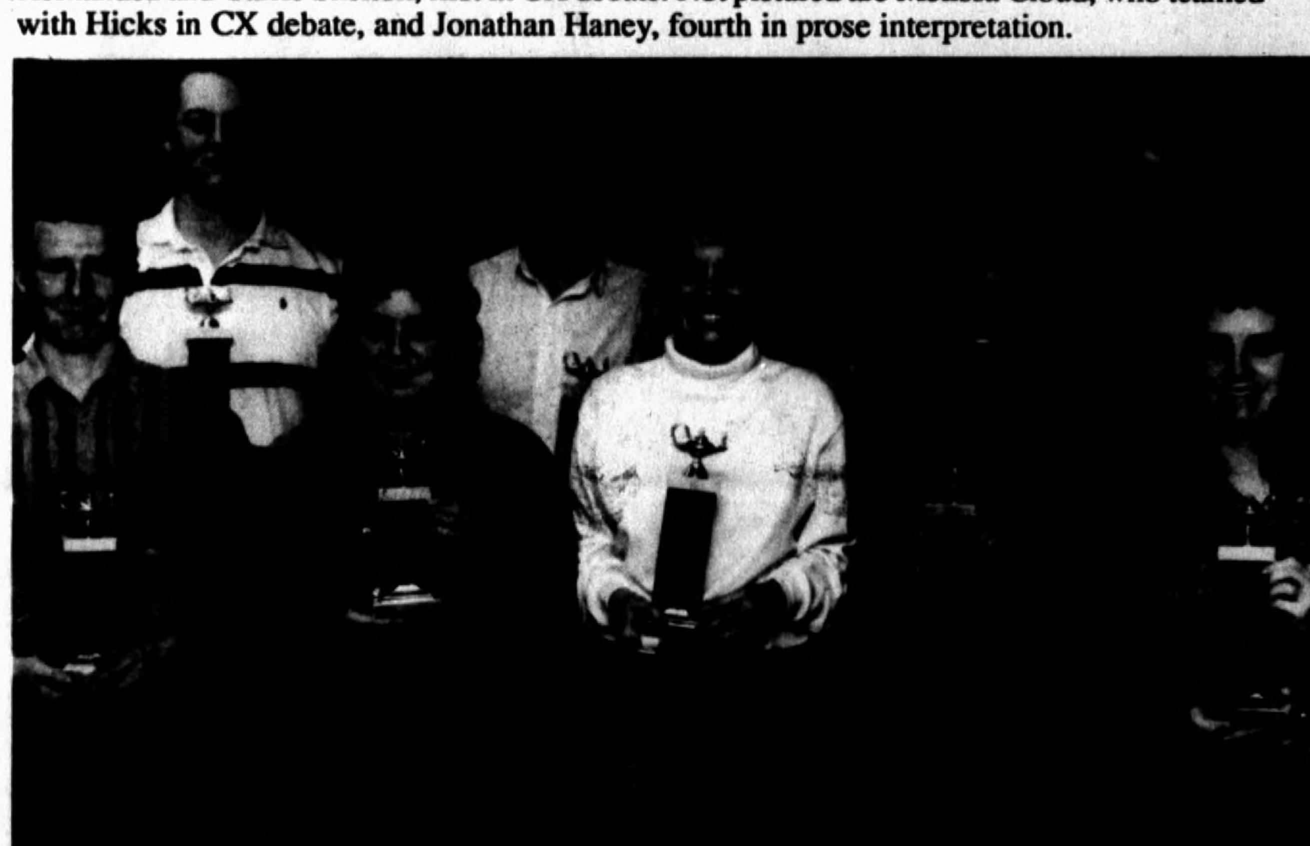

The Boston study suggests such medication may not have the same effect on all kinds of silent ischemia. It found that drugs called beta blockers worked well controlling ischemia that occurred during moderate and high heart rates, but nitrates worked best at low rates.

The idea that silent ischemia should be identified and treated is based in part on studies showing that people with this condition are especially prone to heart attacks and deaths. But some question whether this is true for the majority of essentially healthy people with silent ischemia.

Holguin to re-enact Las Cruces bowling alley shootings

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) - Ida Holguin's hair has just begun to grow back, she has relearned how to walk, three bullets remain in her body and she is haunted by the faces of two gunmen.

Mrs. Holguin is one of three people who survived last month's brutal bowling alley shootings that left four people, including three children, dead.

She returned to the scene of the shootings, Las Cruces Bowl lanes, on Tuesday to tell her story for a re-enactment of the crime, which will be aired this season on NBC-TV's "Unsolved Mysteries." It was the first time she spoke publicly about the slayings.

On Thursday, doctors plan to remove a bullet from Mrs. Holguin's arm. The one in her shoulder and half of one in her brain will remain. Doctors say it would be more dangerous to remove them.

"I can't understand why they (the gunmen) had to shoot," she said. "They already had the money. Why did they shoot?"

According to police, two men herded the victims into an office, forced them to lay down and shot them in the back of the head. They started a fire to cover up the crime and fled with $5,000.

Steve Teran, 26, his stepdaughter Paula Holguin, 6, daughter Valerie Teran, 2, and Amy Houser, 13, were killed. Also wounded were the owner's daughter Stephanie Senac, 34, and her daughter Melissa, 12.

Police, stumped in the case, turned to "Unsolved Mysteries," in hopes that one of the show's 30 million viewers in the United States and Canada might know the identity of the gunmen.

Teran's widow, Audrey, also went to the bowling alley Tuesday, but broke down soon after she arrived.

Police now believe Teran and his two children walked into the bowling alley while the crime was in progress.

Mrs. Holguin said she had already been shot when Teran, who also worked at the bowling alley, entered with his two daughters.

"He said, 'Oh my God! No!' I recognized his voice," Mrs. Holguin said.

Even though she had been shot she was still conscious, she said.

"I was coming and going, coming and going. I felt myself drowning. I was drowning in my own blood, drowning in my own blood," she said.

"After the second bullet, I just started praying. I prayed hard," she said.

Mrs. Holguin said she realized she would die as the gunmen shot the other victims.

"I heard Melissa scream. I started getting really scared. I started thinking those guys are going to kill us. I don't think they're just going to take the money."

The wounds left her unable to walk, her vision is blurry and her coordination is poor.

The shootings have changed her in other ways. She said she is less outgoing and less trusting.

"They (the gunmen) took a lot from me, because I don't feel the same. I'm just not the same person," she said.

Raymond Holguin, her husband of 16 years, said he has given up a second job because he doesn't want to leave his wife alone. The two both previously worked two jobs each. The family's income is supplemented by donations but Mrs. Holguin said they have been forced to give up at least $700 a month income.

Funds for the victims were set up at the Roman Catholic Diocese of Las Cruces, First National Bank and Dona Ana Savings and Loan to help the victims pay for funeral and hospital costs.

Eagles, Eller dominate Herd in home opener

By SAM W. WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces finally played at home Tuesday, but what they got was anything but home cooking as the Canyon Eagles flew off with a 13-0 win in a game at Whiteface Field shortened to five innings by the 10-run rule.

Canyon's John Eller went the distance to get the win while Joe Anima was hung with the loss after giving up five runs in two innings.

Eller pitched a near-perfect game, holding the Herd hitless through four-and-a-third innings before Jim Anima singled, and allowed only three walks while striking out six. The right-hander helped his own cause with a two-for-two performance at the plate with two runs scored and three runs batted in.

The Herd committed six errors in the game, and Herd pitchers put seven more batters on base via walks and hit batters while none of the three recorded a strikeout.

"It was just one of those days," Herd coach T.R. Sartor said. "When we did hit the ball it was right at somebody and then we had all those errors."

The combination of walks and errors gave the Eagles their first two runs of the game in the second inning. David Taylor drew a lead-off walk and then advanced to third on Stephen Hamrick's sacrifice bunt. Joe Anima threw wide at first on the play, allowing Hamrick to reach.

Jason Jackson then sent a sacrifice fly to left field for an RBI and Jeff Perez singled to right for another.

Canyon added four more runs in the third as the first five batters in the inning reached base.

Eller singled, Glen Woodard doubled and Skipper Tate loaded the bases with a walk, prompting Sartor to replace Anima with Jason Walterscheid. Walterscheid promptly wild pitched a run home and gave up a run-scoring single to Taylor, allowing all three inherited runners to cross the plate and being charged with a run himself when Taylor came home.

The Eagles added a single run off Walterscheid in the fourth and the senior walked the first two batters in the fifth, both of whom scored after he was replaced by Jesse Barrera.

Barrera had no better luck at stopping the Eagles, giving up four hits to score Walterscheid's men and four more that reached base after the pitching change.

Hereford got its lone hit with one out in the fifth when Jim Anima sent a clean single up the middle. Anima became the only one of four Herd base runners to get past first base when he reached third on a pair of wild pitches by Eller.

The loss drops the Herd to 1-7 on the year while Canyon moved to 4-5-1.

Sprint meet to put prep runners on the fast track

DALLAS (AP) - One high school track meet on Thursday promises to be a very fast one - in a couple of ways.

The Waylan Wallace Triangular features several of the swiftest schoolboy sprinters in the nation, and it is expected to last only about an hour.

To cast the spotlight on the fast company invited to the meet, Dallas South Oak Cliff Coach Leonard Grant has scheduled only sprints.

The meet pits Grant's team, which has captured the last two Class 5A track championships, against Greenville and Longview.

"I wanted to have a meet for the fans," Grant said in explaining why he chose the unusual format. "There are no open dates on Saturdays, so in order to get a meet that won't interfere with a Saturday invitational, we thought of a tri-meet. I wanted to get two outstanding teams against the best in Dallas."

The meet brings together Greenville's Henry Neal, South Oak Cliff's Doyle Jones and Tyrance Wesley, and Longview's Kim Wallace.

Neal is the defending Class 5A champion at 100 and 200 meters. He has run a 10.32 for the 100 meters this year - the second-fastest time in the state - and is taking aim at the national record of 10.18 held by Roy Martin, a former SOC sprinter.

Neal also has run the state's fastest 200 this year - 20.89 seconds.

Jones ran a wind-aided 10.19 last year, the fastest 100 in the nation for 1989. He also defeated Neal in the Region II final.

Wesley has a personal best of 10.33 and defeated Jones in last weekend's Leon Hayes-Pepsi-Cola Invitational.

Wallace ran a 20.93 in the 200 last year for the state's fourth-fastest time. Longview also has 300-meter intermediate hurdler Richard Murray, whose 38.14 ranks in the state's top 10 this year.

"I like the concept of the meet," said Greenville track coach David Gish. "It will give people a chance to see the premiere sprinters in the state without having to sit through the other events."

The 400-meter relay that opens the event could be the topper. Longview enters the meet with the best time in the nation, a 40.71-second effort. South Oak Cliff's 41.20 ranks third in the state this year. Greenville's best effort has been a 41.60.

Besides the 100, the 200, and the 400-meter relay, the other events will be: 800 meters, 110-meter hurdles, 400 meters, 300-meter intermediate hurdles and the 1,600-meter relay.

Ranger tickets sell fast

ARLINGTON (AP) - The baseball lockout is over and fans are flocking to the ticket windows at Arlington Stadium, eagerly waiting for the Texas Rangers to begin regular season play.

Players, beginning full workouts today at a shortened spring training camp in Port Charlotte, Fla., are equally relieved. Team owners and the union, after striking out on an agreement for 32 days, finally hit a home run.

"Nobody cares what the details are," Rangers manager Bobby Valentine said of fans' interest in the pact. "I don't even care. They just want to see us play baseball. Me, too."

After the agreement was reached Sunday, Rangers' general partner George W. Bush had said, "Finally, there is joy in Mudville."

Arlington Stadium director Jay Miller agreed, saying the Rangers already have sold 7,600 season tickets, 400 more than last year, with more sales expected after the ticket office was deluged on Monday and Tuesday.

"I think the fans, like pretty much all of us, wanted the thing to get resolved," he said.

Although not yet officially set by the American League, the Rangers' home opener will probably be April 17 against Milwaukee, said Miller.

"If you look at what the fans are buying, that seems to be the consensus," Miller said.

Mike Stone, Rangers president, said the ordeal had been worth it because now there is no threat of a mid-season strike.

"I do feel badly for our fans, who have been confused and hurt," he said.

But Rangers' general manager Tom Grieve wasn't so sure of the lockout's value.

"... A heavy price has already been paid. There is mass confusion in baseball," said Grieve. "We will start the season and play without interruption, but I wouldn't try to tell a fan ... that it was worth it."

The team probably will open the season April 10 in Toronto, but an open date on April 9 means a makeup game could be scheduled.

Baseball owners try to fit lost week back into schedule

NEW YORK (AP) - Today, a place might be found for some missing baseball games.

A decision is likely on the regular season, and it is expected the schedule will be restored to 162 games. Because opening day was delayed a week by the lockout, teams were assured of just 158.

"The issue is not totally resolved," Commissioner Fay Vincent said Tuesday. "They're still working on it."

Baseball would prefer to add games at the end of the season. Other choices include playing doubleheaders or filling open dates.

"I guess that would be ideal," Vincent said of extending the season. "It would be so much easier to transpose the week. It would be crisp and clean."

If games were added in October, it would push back the playoffs and World Series. CBS holds the rights for the postseason and must give its approval before that change can be made.

"Baseball initiated discussions with us yesterday on giving consideration to moving the postseason back," Jeremy Handelman, vice president of program planning at CBS Sports, said. "We have not established a position, we're examining it.

"We're in a business partnership with baseball, we have a collective interest here," Handelman said. "I can appreciate from a fan's standpoint that what happens in October is not an immediate concern. But there are numerous things that are affected within CBS."

Meanwhile, the exhibition schedule has been revised. The spring season had been set the go through April 1 - the day before the original Opening Day - but was changed when openers were delayed until April 9.

Spring training began Tuesday and exhibition games start March 26. All teams will play at least 13 times and the Chicago Cubs will play the most, 16. Some split-squad and "B" games are being added daily.

But Memphis, Des Moines and some other cities that were to play host to big-league exhibition games lost them. Teams that had been scheduled to play on the road on their way to opening day now will stay longer in Florida and Arizona.

Las Vegas, Jacksonville, Fla., Oklahoma City, Columbus and Greenville, S.C., also were among cities that lost exhibitions.

Also, baseball clarified a scoring rules decision, saying that for the first two weeks of the season, starting pitchers will need to work just three innings to get credit for a victory. After that, starters will need to pitch the usual five to be the winner.

Mr. Farmer,
If you're not using
N-FIX™
on your crop acreage
you're losing money.

N-FIX™ is a nutrient supplement which facilitates a stronger, healthier soil which in turn produces plants with improved root structure, more resistance to disease, insect and environmental stress.

N-FIX substantially reduces the amount of chemicals needed.

Tests prove that N-FIX increases nutrient uptake to the plants from 25 to 82%.

Tests prove that N-FIX increases the nutritional and protein value as well as the TDN of grains and hay.

N-FIX reduces irrigation and energy costs due to the soils' improved tillage and increased ability to retain moisture.

N-FIX has been known to increase crop yield anywhere from 10 to 20% in normal conditions.

N-FIX is 100 percent environmentally safe and is proven effective.

N-FIX is guaranteed.

Folks who believe in the magic of Mother Nature... also believe in the magic of N-FIX.

Performance proven since 1979

Tar Heels lose Madden to knee injury

DALLAS (AP) - The Sweet 16 has turned sour for North Carolina.

The Tar Heels' Kevin Madden, who hit all 10 of his field goal attempts in the NCAA basketball tournament subregionals in Austin, Texas, injured a knee in practice and is out for the rest of the tournament.

North Carolina (21-12) is making its 10th straight appearance in the Round of 16 and faces Arkansas (28-4) in Thursday's NCAA Midwest Regional semifinal opener at Reunion Arena. Texas (23-8) meets Xavier of Ohio (28-4) in the second game.

Madden, a 6-foot-6 senior from Staunton, Va., tore the anterior cruciate in his right knee while driving past another player on a one-on-one drill.

Madden, averaging 10.1 points and 4.7 rebounds, scored 12 points against Southwest Missouri State and 14 against Oklahoma.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith said the loss of Madden will change the Tar Heels' look.

"Of course, we're extremely disappointed that Kevin will be out," Smith said. "We've been using Kevin as a big guard-small forward. That means Rick Fox ... will be at small forward, and then (Henrik) Rodl will give Fox some rest.

"Then Rodl, Hubert Davis and Jeff Denny will see more action in Kevin's spot," Smith added. "It changes the look of our team a great deal."

Madden will accompany the team to Dallas, Smith said.

"I think we're all just under a shock right now. Kevin's handled it well. ... He wants to be with us," the coach said.

"They put a form of a cast on so he can't hurt himself anymore and they'll operate as soon as our season is over because he wanted to be with the team."

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said the Tar Heels' loss of Madden will "takes away some team chemistry."

"I think it will affect them from a chemistry standpoint, but they play a lot of people anyway," said Ellis, whose Tigers face Connecticut in the East Regional.

"I think from an emotional standpoint I'm sure Kevin will get his team fired up. Any time you see one of you own hurt and you're a family, sometimes players respond to that in a positive way."

To add to North Carolina's woes, it'll be like a home game for the Arkansas Razorbacks, and North Carolina knows it.

Reunion officials estimate that 65 percent of the 17,007 tickets sold for Thursday's semifinals have been purchased by Razorbacks' fans, who prefer watching their Hogs play at home in Barnhill Arena but are more than happy to travel to Dallas.

Even with Texas in the other regional semifinal, Arkansas fans were able to purchase the majority of tickets.

"Even though Texas is in the semifinals I think we'll have more fans in the stands," Arkansas forward Lenzie Howell, from Dallas, said. "After all, this is Barnhill South."

"They're talking about it being like a homecourt for Arkansas," Smith said. "Not only the crowd but the fact they've won six games through the Southwest Conference tournaments. I'm impressed with Arkansas. I think every coach says that - and they should because there's only 16 teams left. I think we should be impressed with all 16 teams."

Arkansas, ranked seventh, is the highest surviving seed - No. 4 - in a regional where the top three seeds, Oklahoma, Georgetown and Purdue, were knocked out. Arkansas earned its trip to Dallas with an 86-84 victory over Dayton.

North Carolina upset the Sooners 79-77 in Austin to make it to Dallas.

Clemson looking to break through against UConn's tenacious press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Break the press. Break the press. Break the press.

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis has said it a hundred times. The fifth-seeded Tigers (26-8) either need to break Connecticut's ferocious press Thursday night in the NCAA tournament's East Regional semifinals or forget about the Final Four.

The matchup between Clemson of the Atlantic Coast Conference and top-seeded Connecticut of the Big East will be the opener of a regional doubleheader.

Third-seeded Duke (26-8) will look to continue its Meadowlands mastery in the second game against seventh-seeded UCLA (22-10), which is returning to the round of 16 for the first time in 10 years.

The winners will play Saturday for the right to go to Denver for the Final Four.

The opening game offers a contrast in styles. Connecticut likes to press and run. Clemson is big and strong and very good when it can work inside with Elden Campbell and Dale Davis, the "Duo of Doom."

"The bottom line to this contest is that we need to break their press," Ellis said. "It does not matter how big we are or anything. If we do not break their press, we do not win the basketball game on Thursday night. It is no factor with our big people if the ball does not get in the paint."

Connecticut, which shared the Big East regular-season title with Syracuse and then won the league tournament, had its press in high gear in the opening two rounds of the tournament, collecting a combined 35 steals against Boston University and California.

"You always try to attack big people," Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said. "We'll spread it out and attack."

Ellis described Connecticut as a very athletic team that hits the offensive boards well and that has two outstanding shooters in Chris Smith and Nadav Henefeld.

"Connecticut's defense is the key to the game," Ellis said. "They have one of the best defenses in the country. It is a relentless press and one that they will use the entire 40 minutes. It's the reason they have 30 wins this season, defense."

Smith said the Huskies can't afford to let Clemson play its type of game. The Tigers did that in the second half against La Salle, overcoming a 17-point deficit.

"I thought La Salle let Clemson control the tempo," said Smith, the Huskies' leading scorer with a 17.2 average. "We can't afford to let that happen to us. We've got to press them for 40 minutes."

UCLA is bucking recent history in trying to beat Duke at Brendan Byrne Arena. Duke is 9-1 in that building and has traveled through East Rutherford to the Final Four in three of the last four years.

The Blue Devils have been in the round of 16 five straight years.

"You can't say you're going to be there next year, so you have to take advantage of the opportunity," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "So a big part of the preparation for this basketball game is how we handle being at the Meadowlands."

That could be a problem. Forward Alaa Abdelnaby and point guard Bobby Hurley grew up in the shadow of the arena. Abdelnaby is from Bloomfield, Hurley from Jersey City.

"I don't really know what will happen up there," Abdelnaby said. "I do know I will have to be selfish with my time and do what the team needs. I don't want to be a hermit, but I want to be focused and think about basketball."

UCLA has played excellent defense in the tournament, evidenced by Kansas scoring only 70 points in its second-round game with the Bruins. The Jayhawks had averaged more than 90 a game.

Gearn Industries: a giant in agribusines

Firm among world's largest in feedmill construction

Tim and Geary Gearn

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

HUSTLE HEREFORD

Give the Gearns a cutting torch and they'll draw it--give them a welder and they'll build it.

From a modest beginning in a small welding shop 40 years ago on the east edge of Hereford, Gearn Industries, Inc., is now classed among the largest livestock feedmill manufacturing companies of the world.

Built on the economic thrust of the vast irrigation and cattle industries centered around Hereford, the agribusiness firm has now spawned into a steel fabrication factory of vertically-integrated items related to the petroleum, food and textile industries.

With an annual payroll in excess of $1 million funneling to Deaf Smith County residents, the family-owned company stays a step ahead of the times by operating on the cutting edge of innovative enterprises....from high-tech stainless-steel fabrication to automatic livestock flotation systems.

Leading the pack in the family business are Geary, Tim and Ken, Jr. (called J.R. around family circles), with their father, Kenny, holding a low-profile in purchasing. Their mother, Idie, is a receptionist these days, but she frequently reflects on the years when she handled company books and was a secretary to her own sons--years that she and her husband saw the business grow into an international by-word in feedmill construction. A fourth son, Gordon, who worked with the firm in the 1970s and 1980s now operates his own machine shop in Oklahoma City.

Irrigation drilling and equipment again kept the welders busy back when "Kenny Gearn Machine Works" sign caught most everyone's attention east on U.S. 60. But today, the family factory is housed on the west side of town in a building a little larger than a football field, with a work-force of around 50 cranking out specialty systems for distribution across North America. The firm still caters to the irrigation world, but it has become an undisputed leader in livestock feedmill fabrication.

But if you don't have a place for a feedmill, how about a "Cowveyor" that silently moves cattle through processing chutes on rubberized conveyors...or a portable steam-flaker that turns feedgrain into breakfast food for livestock. And the Gearns have a sophisticated cattle kitchen to go with it. All of this translates into big bucks in agribusiness, from ordering out tons of raw ribbons of steel from the East to international marketing at the CEO levels.

On the specialty end, the Gearns crank out thousands upon thousands of irrigation engine coolers, called Plains Heat Exchangers. Designed into spirals of copper tubing fitting together with silver alloy, the Heat Exchangers are shipped regularly to every irrigation area of the U.S., Canada and Mexico. The copper-coiled cooling system is the result of years' in on-site field experience by Kenny Gearn who came to Texas on the wave of an industrial irrigation tide that surged across Hereford 40 years ago.

Then, in one corner of the Gearn factory is a computerized rig that styles a simple looking device slotted like hip-pocket "pick" combs. But in this case, the "eye-guides" channel hair-like strands of synthetic fiber into structural insulation at Owens-Corning Fiberglas factory near Amarillo.

"When Owens-Corning opened a few years ago, they asked for local specialty contributions to the Amarillo plant and this fabric guide was one of the items we came up with that they liked," said Tim Gearn, who is in the engineering and marketing end of the family business.

The latest livestock innovation to come off Gearn assembly lines is a neat little package of rubberized conveyor belts and ramps that replaces the common squeeze-chute system in processing cattle. Where cowboys once punched and prodded livestock into a set of squeeze bars for processing, a unique flotation system called the "Cowveyor" gently eases cattle off their feet and literally carries the stock into a processing position.

Instead of the highly-mechanized steel squeeze-chutes, the Cowveyors require only a neck-bar to hold cattle in place during processing, such as vaccination and worming. One cattle feeder said his cattle like the ride so much that they didn't want to get off at the end of the line.

The main incentive of using a Cowveyor is to cut down on animal injury. A Livestock Conservation Institute survey in large beef packing plants showed a $57 loss from bruises alone for every 100 cattle. And two-thirds of all loin bruises occur during loading and unloading from trucks. Each severe loin bruise results in a $20 carcass discount at the packing plant, with the survey showing that out of every 100 head processed, seven to nine sustained severe loin bruises.

"In a typical squeeze chute, 3 to 5 percent of the cattle get bruised at the headgate alone," said Tim Gearn, while describing the new processing system. "And head trauma generally results in weight loss." The survey indicated that expert chute operators will hit about one in 25 cattle jaws, while an average operator will hit one in 15 with the common hydraucally-operated units--and this can add up to even greater injury if the chute is equipped with a head extender.

First introduced to the U.S. market on the East Coast by Temple Grandin, a livestock handling specialist of Urbana, Ill., the new system was discovered by Dr. Chet Fields, a consulting nutritionist of Hereford, who in turn introduced Grandin to the Gearns.

With a trial unit at a veal processing plant in Utica, N.Y., the next move was in the Texas Panhandle at the Farwell Feed Yards near Farwell, a 30,000-head feeding unit that agreed to cooperate on using the new rig.

At the present time, the Cowveyor will handle cattle weighing between 350 and 850 pounds, but its the process, not the equipment that's simple.

Cattle come in from an ordinary crowding chute that opens onto a conveyor stairstep ramp and as they reach the top, a leg spreader positions them for the rubberized conveyor. As the cattle are gently picked up under the brisket for their ride on a rubberbelted conveyor.

Hydraulically operated and lined with inflated rubber tubing, the sides are adjusted with air power--in or out--to accommodate the various sizes of livestock.

On each side of the unit, drop-down bars allow the processor to work cattle. And since the conveyor belt can be moved forward or backward, the manually-operated headgate can be closed at exactly the right position to avoid injury to the animal. A curtain at the headgate keeps cattle from seeing ahead and balking during dismount.

Phil Treadway, manager of Farwell Feed Yards, said he now needs only one man to move cattle into the cowveyor, where it used to take two--"And with revaccinating, we can go at least 50 percent faster."

Tim Gearn estimated the life-span of a Cowveyor to be around 15 years. The cost will run between $45,000 and $50,000. A processing squeeze chute costs between $6,000 and $7,000 and lasts about one year.

On the feeding end of the livestock industry, the Gearns have developed a genuine country kitchen for cattle. And if you have a lender who's bit squeamish on financing permanent livestock installations, the Gearns have a feed processor that can be moved, swapped or sold...leaving behind nothing but the virgin site. They call it a Modular Mill, another packaged unit that is built entirely in the Gearn factory then moved to a feeding site by truck similar to the way trailer houses are moved. In fact, the exterior looks like a trailer house. But that's where the similarity ends.

The Gearn Modular Mill was designed initially to provide high-quality steam-flaking of feedgrain for smaller cattle feeding operations that could not afford a stationary multimillion-dollar outfit--single units that could handle feed processing for yards in the 6,000 to 8,000 head range. One of the first to be installed was at Follett Feeders, Inc., near Follett, Tx., in the northeast corner of the Texas Panhandle. Then came others, such as Royal Beef near Scott City, Ks., and Keeling Cattle Co. near Hereford.

As Geary Gearn noted, since each Modular Mill is totally factory built, improvement is an ongoing policy--"Each one we build is a little bit better than the last...we are now in our third generation of Modular Mills since the first was built back in 1985."

In an effort to fit a superior flaker with a superior cooker, the Gearns have developed a steam cooker which they call "Steam King." This 30-foot tall steam chamber, or whatever you want to call it, is billed as the state-of-the-art in grain cooking. The Gearns pioneered the round design and have built more round steam chests than anyone in the business.

"The key to a good cook is multi-faceted--even grain flow, precise temperature control and correct grain retention time," said Tim Gearn. "All of these factors are designed into Steam King."

With Steam King at its side, the Gearn modular Mill takes the cooked grain through a set of rollers which produce flaked kernels that look more like breakfast food for people than feedstuff for cattle. The Gearns say that on a 12,000-head feedyard, costs can be lowered by $464,565.50 a year by using flaked milo instead of cracked corn.

"We have spent a lifetime studying the art of flaking grain and have chosen to attack the problem in a manner which gives us the most control over the total package," said Tim Gearn. "This objective is accomplished by building a flaking system in our factory under ideal conditions, instead of out at a site where one has to contend with such things as bad weather."

Most recent Modular Mills to be installed have been at the Perry Kirkland Feedyard near Vega and at the Dan McWhorter Feedyard 15 miles north of Hereford. As the Gearns pointed out, the Modular units may be leased, purchased outright or bought on a lease-purchase agreement--"We have about any size units for any size feedyard of 6,000 head capacity or more." Economist say that around 6,000 head capacity is about the minimum that will justify the smallest Modular Mill. However, the units are built so that additions maybe added to almost any desired feeding capacity. But with 7 percent spread between steam-flaked corn and cracked corn, big numbers in cattle feeding add up to big bucks at the feedbunks on just a small saving.

For the grain handling industry, the Gearns came up with a simple little device with a tough teeth--a manual Nutt Cutter. It was developed in the Gearn factory to snip hard-to-reach nuts that hold grain elevator cups in place. By the very nature of the lifting performance, the grain cups must be replaced at intervals, but working with a cutting torch in a grain bin is risky business at best, due to the explosive nature of grain dust. Thus, the Gearns says nip it, don't cut it.

The Gearns are not oldtimers around Hereford by pioneer standards, but they have built some good-sized foundations since the first of the clan arrived in 1949.

Kennard (Kenny) DeWitt Gearn Sr., was reared and attended schools in the Oklahoma City area where his father, W.A. Gearn, worked as a bookkeeper. Following marriage to Idie Robinson of Enid, OK, in 1942, the Gearns moved to California where he worked at a security plant and later served two years with the U.S. Navy. The Gearns continued to live in California until 1949 when they moved to Dimmitt, and a short time later, moved to Hereford where he opened water well drilling company and a small welding shop just east of the Hereford city limits. As business grew in the irrigation equipment field, Gearn moved up the highway a piece to establish the Kenny Gearn Machine Works, a sizable steel fabrication operation that specialized in the construction of irrigation well equipment.

The first of the four sons, Geary DeWayne, was born in California, as was Timothy "Tim" Allen. The other two sons, Kennard "J.R." DeWitt and Gordon Paul, were born in Hereford. All attended Hereford schools and graduated from Hereford High.

After earning a degree in marketing from West Texas State University at Canyon, Geary and his wife, Beth, moved to Los Angeles where he was employed at the Ford Motor Co. in dealership marketing. After obtaining a degree in business from the University of Texas, Tim and his wife, Keith Ann, moved to New Bremen, Ohio, where he was employed by Crown Controls Corp., as assistant market director.

When W.A. "Pappy" Gearn retired in 1955 from a lifetime in bookkeeping for such large corporations as the North Arkansas Railroad and Kobe, Inc. of Los Angeles, he and his wife retired in Hereford where he continued to dabble in bookkeeping--setting up a sophisticated set of records for his son, Kenny Gearn Machine Works. The elder Mr. Gearn also pioneered the first commercial grape vineyard in the Texas Panhandle, planting 20 acres of vines on the exact spot where Gearn Industries factory stands today. He marketed his grapes at a roadwide stand on U.S. 60 and sold a few to local merchants in Hereford. He became affectionately known around town as "Pappy" Gearn.

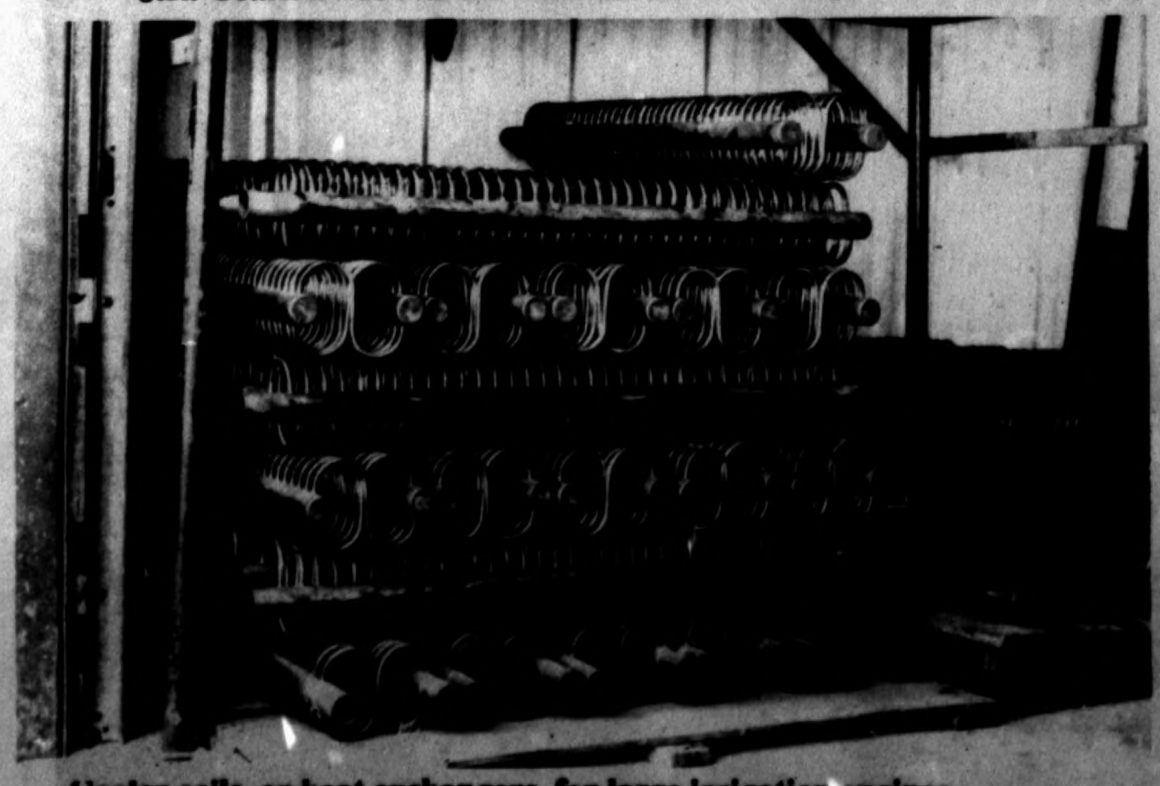

In 1970, Geary and Tim returned to form a partnership to fabricate feedmills for the larger commercial cattle feeding operations that were expanding across the High Plains. The initial factory of the present plant is on the site of their grandfather's grape vineyard.

Following graduation from high school, J.R. attended Southwest Texas State and West Texas State Universities then joined his brothers in the family operation in regional and national sales. He and Belinda Majors of Turkey were married in 1980.

Gordon Paul attended the University of Texas after graduating from high school and later attended West Texas State University before joining his brothers as machine shop superintendent for the family unit. In 1981, the machine shop started by Gearn in 1949 was merged with his sons' operation west of Hereford. He previously had sold the irrigation well servicing end of the business. During this time Gordon Gearn moved to Oklahoma City to head up a family oilfield business. When oil development dropped, Gordon elected to remain in Oklahoma City and open his own machine operation.

During the late 1970s, the Gearns expanded heavily into fabrication of oilfield equipment and at one time had more than 100 people on their payroll. But as the U.S. oilpatch hit on tough times in the 1980s, the Gearns sold their family-owned Oklahoma business and followed the trend of the times and moved more into specialty manufacturing. They also built one of the first commercial ethanol extraction plants in the Southwest. Though this business also followed the slumps of the oil business, most energy experts see a return of increased ethanol production form grain crops in the 1990s.

The Gearns also handle extensive specialty work in the fabrication of stainless materials for the American Fructose Co. factory at Dimmitt..."-"The stainless-steel pipe is so expensive they check it in to us foot-by-foot and check it out the same way."

A tour through the Gearn factory is nothing less than a welder's holiday--every conceivable steel press and cutter is strategically located along an assembly-line course. Here and there, high-tech computer equipment blends with tools of another time--three generations of tools can be found in the Gearn factor. And there's no giant marquis or roadside billboard to show you the way...the only word on the giant roundtop is "Gearn."

Mrs. Kenny Gearn once said, "I only came to Hereford with Kenny for the ride, but stayed because I loved it." And her husband sort of summarized the family sentiments for the land:

"Deaf Smith County is fantastic--the best people in the world."

Names in the News

OSLO, Norway (AP) - Elie Wiesel, winner of the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize, will bring together other Nobel laureates, human rights champions and statesmen in a high-powered conference to evaluate the darker side of the spread of democracy.

Wiesel organized the conference to assess the risk of long-supressed hatreds surfacing in societies that abruptly became free. The gathering, set for Aug. 26-29, will be arranged with the Norwegian Nobel Instutute, a Wiesel spokesman said Monday.

Among 35 leaders to accept invitations so far are 1983 Peace Prize winner Lech Walesa of Poland, French President Francois Mitterrand, Czech President Vacel Havel, former U.S. President Carter and Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith.

Wiesel won the Nobel Prize for his writings examining the Holocaust.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Filmmaker Robert Hendrickson, suing talk show host Geraldo Rivera for alleged copyright infringement, lost a bid to subpoena mass murderer Charles Manson to testify.

Hendrickson contends that Manson is the only available witness who can testify about his 1972 documentary "Manson," parts of which the filmmaker claims Rivera used without permission.

In a ruling released Monday, U.S. District Judge Ronald S.W. Lew declined to subpoena Manson, 55, who is in state prison in Corcoran, 190 miles north of Los Angeles. Lew said Hendrickson cited no authority empowering the court to issue the subpoena.

Hendrickson, 45, of Woodland Hills, filed the copyright infringement suit in May, a month after Rivera aired excerpts from "Manson" in the TV special, "Murder - Live from Death Row."

The trial is set for April 10.

Nunley is manager of Louisiana district

Trans Louisiana Gas Co.(Trans La) has named Gerald Nunley manager of its Natchitoches district, which provides natural gas service to 22 communities in four parishes in northwestern Louisiana.

GERALD NUNLEY

Nunley moves to Natchitoches from Dallas, where he was corrosion control coordinator for Atmos Energy Corp., parent company of Trans La. Nunley began his career with Energas, the Texas division of Atmos, in Hereford in 1971.

Along the way, he served as assistant manager in Hereford and office manager in Lubbock. In 1986, he was named Energas assistant district manager in Lubbock, and he was promoted to Midland district manager in 1988. Nunley and his wife, Mary Ann, have two daughters, Kasey Ann and Allison.

Atmos Energy Corp. provides natural gas service to more than 500,000 customers in Louisiana, Kentucky and Texas through its operating companies--Trans La Gas Co., Western Kentucky Gas Co. and Energas.

UNEMPLOYMENT CONSULTING FIRMS: BOON OR BOONDOGGLE?

Dear Commissioner Nabers, I received the enclosed survey from a consulting firm offering to save me money by lowering my company's unemployment tax rate. This company maintains that I am paying much more than I should and if I use their services they can keep my rate low. Please review the enclosed sales literature and tell me if this would be a good deal for my company.

W.M.
Austin, Tx.

Dear W.M., You should approach this firm just as you would any other business which is trying to sell you a service. What does it offer that you cannot get for yourself more economically? Is the time and hassle you save by not doing it yourself worth the fee you pay? Upon what are the company's promises of a lower tax rate really based?

In the area of contested claims, for example, an employer should always be prepared to offer firsthand testimony and documentation concerning the work separation. No one else can provide this for you or relieve you of this responsibility because no outside party is going to have firsthand knowledge of the events. What this means is that you will have to work WITH the consultant to give him information that you yourself could just as easily write on the form or present at a hearing.

The sales literature also promises to "hold your hand" throughout the appeals process. Some employers may feel better about being represented in a quasi-judicial process, but there is a mountain of literature from the agency and from my office that is free and available on request.

The company which contacted you promises you a lower tax rate. It has taken the amount of state unemployment tax paid by your company last year and compared it to the minimum tax rate available during that year, implying that you will have the minimum unemployment tax rate under their program. Look at this carefully. The fact that you, an experience rated employer, had a higher than minimum tax rate means that your company had chargebacks from unemployment claims during the last three years.

Are you unclear on just what chargebacks you have on your record? Drop our Rates Department a line and request a printout of your chargebacks. It's free.

COMMISSIONER
Mary Scott Nabers

Lakers throw Kareem party; Spurs' Robinson holds his own

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

While Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was having his number retired in Los Angeles, David Robinson was putting on a Hall of Fame performance in Seattle.

Robinson scored 39 points, 20 in the fourth quarter, and had 10 rebounds and seven blocked shots as the San Antonio Spurs routed the SuperSonics 128-106 Tuesday night.

It was the second victory in two nights for the Spurs, and Robinson scored 73 points in the wins over Phoenix and Seattle. Against the Sonics, he made 13 of 17 shots and all 13 free throws.

"The people of Phoenix and Seattle got a real treat," San Antonio coach Larry Brown said. "Playing against good athletic teams like these brings out the best in him."

Robinson used his quickness to offset the physical defense the Sonics used against him.

"Seattle tried to bump me, but I used my intelligence and quickness to get better position," Robinson said.

"We threw everything we could at him, and nothing happened," Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff said.

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was the Los Angeles Lakers 109, Charlotte 97 in a game in which Abdul-Jabbar's No. 33 was retired at halftime; Orlando 121, New York 118; Indiana 112, Miami 98; Chicago 122, Washington 97; Detroit 117, Milwaukee 96; Portland 120, Houston 110; Denver 119, the Los Angeles Clippers 112 and Golden State 105, Minnesota 101.

Willie Anderson had 18 points and Sean Elliott 17 as the Spurs won their third straight game. Shawn Kemp had 20 and Sedale Threatt 19 for Seattle.

The Sonics cut a 91-76 deficit after three quarters to 94-83 early in the fourth before the 7-foot-1 Robinson took over.

He scored 10 of the Spurs' next 11 points as San Antonio opened a 105-92 cushion with 5:24 left.

Lakers 109, Hornets 97

Byron Scott scored 21 points for Los Angeles, which clinched a playoff berth and celebrated the retirement of Abdul-Jabbar's uniform number.

Despite the absense of All-Star forward James Worthy because of back spasms, the Lakers extended their record against the second-year Hornets to 6-0. Armon Gilliam led Charlotte with 25 points.

Bulls 122, Bullets 97

Scottie Pippen scored 10 of his 24 points during a third-quarter barrage and Stacey King came off the bench to score a career-high 24 points for Chicago. King also had three blocked shots and three steals.

With leading scorer Jeff Malone ailing with a hamstring injury, Ledell Eackles had 31 points for the Bullets.

Pistons 117, Bucks 96

James Edwards scored 21 points and Detroit took command early.

Isiah Thomas had 19 points for the Pistons, who have the NBA's best record.

Ricky Pierce scored 21 points for Milwaukee.

Trail Blazers 120, Rockets 110

Clyde Drexler scored eight of his season-high 41 points in the final three minutes. Drexler also had 16 rebounds.

Cliff Robinson had 15 points and Terry Porter 13 for Portland. Otis Thorpe led Houston with 27 points.

Magic 121, Knicks 118

Scott Skiles set or matched career highs in three categories, Nick Anderson scored a career high with 29 points and Michael Ansley had all 16 of his points in the fourth quarter.

Skiles had career highs with 23 points and 12 rebounds and tied a career high with 17 assists.

Johnny Newman had 20 points for struggling New York.

Pacers 112, Heat 98

Detlef Schrempf scored 20 of his career-high 29 points in the first half as Indiana took a huge lead.

Sparked by a 3-point basket and two free throws by Chuck Person, who scored 25 points, the Pacers ended the first quarter with a 15-3 spurt that put them up 32-19.

Miami was led by Terry Davis with 15 points.

Warriors 105, Timberwolves 101

Rod Higgins, subbing for ailing Chris Mullin, scored a season-high 26 points.

Higgins, starting because Mullin has a viral syndrome affecting his lungs, made seven of 12 shots, including all three from 3-point range.

The expansion Timberwolves got 34 points from Tony Campbell.

Nuggets 119, Clippers 112

Alex English scored 28 points and had two key assists in the final quarter.

Walter Davis and Michael Adams had 24 points each.

Danny Manning led Los Angeles with 25 points.

Hints from Heloise

Q. Lately I've noticed that when I use my wooden cutting board and rolling pin, everything seems to stick to them. What can I do? — Mrs. Ed Ballard, St. Joseph, Mo.

A. Wash them in hot sudsy water and allow to dry well. Season with mineral oil (not vegetable oil, which can get rancid) by applying a thin coat with paper towels. Let it set overnight, and the next morning wipe off any excess.

Do this cleaning and reseasoning every once in a while to keep the wood in good condition. — Heloise

FAST FACTS

Recycle old plastic shower curtains:

1. Use as a drop cloth when painting.
2. Turn one into a durable picnic tablecloth.
3. Cut and sew to make a crib mattress cover.
4. Try one as a ground cover for a sleeping bag.
5. Place over a sandbox to make a moisture-proof cover.

DRYING MASCARA

Q. I am forever buying new tubes of mascara because they dry out so quickly. Is there any secret to making them last longer? — Kay Barnes, Tulsa, Okla.

A. One of the reasons mascara dries out quickly is because many women pump the brush up and down, which pumps air into the tube and causes the mascara to dry quicker. Instead, gently stir the mascara brush around in the tube to coat the wand, and always seal tightly. — Heloise

SOUND OFF

Dear Heloise: My pet peeve is that when I am reading a long article in a magazine, I have to spend time searching for the continuing pages which are never in consistent consecutive order. To add to this frustration, they usually stop in the middle of a sentence so that by the time I find the continuing page, I've forgotten what I have just read. — Marie Bronder, Tucson, Ariz.

Brenda Walterscheid honored at shower

Brenda Walterscheid, March 24 bride-elect of David J. Jones, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday, March 17, at the Hereford State Bank.

Guests were welcomed by the honoree; her mother, Opal Walterscheid; her grandmother, Elizabeth Walterscheid; and the prospective bridegroom's mother, Mary Jones.

Nancy Urbanczyk invited guests to sign the registry book.

The honoree's sisters,Lindy Yosten, Lori Walterscheid and Donna Kemp, served refreshments of spiced cider, coffee, cinnamon rolls, sausauge balls, quiche and mints. The table was covered with a navy cloth and a cream lace overlay and was centered with an arrangement of cream colored silk flowers. The table was further enhanced by a silver tea service.

A canister set was given to the honoree from hostesses: Kathy Allison, Charlene Sanders, Karen McPherson, Joyce Lomas, Peggy Fox, Marian Yosten, Cathy Betzen and Jeri Bezner.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie and Tracey Johnson Jr. of Denver, Colo. are the parents of a son, Ronnie Wayne Johnson III, born March 12, 1990. He weighed 6 lbs. and 10 ozs.

Grandparents are Ronnie and Cheryl Johnson Sr. of Bennett, Colo. and great-grandparents are Ansel and Betty Greenway of Hereford.

Trans-Jordan (now Jordan) became a kingdom in 1946 as it proclaimed its new monarch, King Abdullah Ibn Ul-Hussein.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy asked the nation to work toward putting a man on the moon by the end of the decade.

Luncheon scheduled in Amarillo

The March luncheon of the Amarillo Christian Women's Club will be held Tuesday, March 27, at 11:45 at the Tascosa Country Club.

Cost of the luncheon is $8. Reservations may be made by calling Joan Scarth at 806/352-0670 or Fon Arthur at 806/355-0537.

The theme of this month's luncheon will be "Spring Is Coming." A style show will be presented by Casual Corner and Lynn Garrett will provide special music. LaVerne Garrett will be the speaker. A nursery is available at $1 per family.

Amarillo Christian Women's Club is non-denominational. All ladies are welcome for this special event.

Members of the bean family manufacture their own nitrogen that enriches the soil around them. Planting beans in sandy tracts will enable other plants to thrive there as well.

Self-help lecture set April 9 at WTSU

Og Mandino, the most widely read inspirational and self-help author in the world, will be on the West Texas State University campus Monday, April 9 as the seventh guest of the Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series. His presentation, "A Better Way to Live," which is also the title of his new book expected to be released by Bantam Books later this spring, begins at 7 p.m. in the Virgil Henson Activities Center Ballroom.

Mandino's 13 books have sold more than 21 million copies and have been translated into 18 languages and Braille. His works include, "The Greatest Miracle in the World, The Greatest Miracle in the World, The Greatest Success in the World, The Gift of Acabar, The Christ Commission, Og Mandino's University of Success, The Choice and Mission: Success! His Classic, The Greatest Salesman in the World," is the all-time best seller in the world in the field of sales and was followed by, "The Greatest Salesman in the World Part II".

Mandino's talents do not stop with the pen. In 1983 he received the coveted C.P.A.E. Award from the National Speakers Association, and in 1988 presented the keynote address at the organization's national convention. In 1984 he was selected as the 14th member of the prestigious international Speakers Hall of Fame.

A master storyteller, Mandino tells his audience that "we're all so busy looking for quick answers that even though the old principles are right under our noses, we no longer see them." In 60 minutes of laughter and tears, Mandino teaches those "old principles" to audiences around the world.

He enjoyed the success of his own "back to the basic" lessons before sharing them with others. Mandino talks frequently about his background and tells of a time in the 1930s when he had lost everything, his family, his job and his self-respect.

"I was a drunk," he says simply. "I had been arrested over and over and had lost my family. I was a bum wandering from city to city. One night in Cleveland I came close to suicide."

Mandino discovered the "old principles" the hard way and used them to become a successful salesman, sales manager, chief executive editor of Success Unlimited magazine, best-selling author and world-renowned lecturer.

Tickets to his April 9 lecture at WTSU are provided free of charge and are limited to two person while supply lasts. The complimentary tickets will be available beginning Monday, March 26 at the WTSU office of communication services, the Canyon Chamber of Commerce and the Credit Bureau of Amarillo and the Panhandle.

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series is a complimentary service of West Texas State University and the Credit Bureau of Amarillo and the Panhandle.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been reading your column for almost 25 years and feel as if I know you. We are in agreement about 90 percent of the time, but the one issue where we don't see eye-to-eye has always gotten my hackles up. I refer to your irrevocable stand on adoption.

You always advise against letting the adopted children know who their biological parents are and remain dead-set against any contact after the papers are signed. I disagreed and wrote twice to tell you so. When you refused to back down, I thought you were being stubborn, but today, when I read a column by Carl Rowan, I changed my mind. This is what he wrote.

"Just as I am against 'open marriages,' I am against 'open adoptions.' There is this thing called bonding that is crucial to family relationships. How does a child truly bond to adoptive parents when the natural mother shows up every third Thursday and says, 'Remember who your real mommy is!'

"Open adoptions can become a string of nightmares for all involved. Especially when a young mother hands over a child to an affluent family, because she can't afford food and shelter, clothing and education. Then five years later, that mother marries a guy who is bringing in good money, and she wants her child back.

"An open adoption is not really an arrangement in which a child finds protection, nurture and love under the wing of a couple who want and need to bond with a child. It is an in-limbo relationship in which the heart may rejoice, but the mind keeps waiting for the other muddy shoe to drop.

"The adoption agencies ought to look very carefully at open adoptions now rather than wait a dozen years to see how much human hurt this new scheme has produced."

I don't know how much of this can make room for in your column, Ann, but I hope you will print as much as possible, because Carl Rowan opened my eyes about a controversial issue that I never fully understood before. -- Chicago Reader

DEAR CHICAGO: Thank you for a superb letter. I am printing every word of it. Carl Rowan has been a good friend of mine for many years, and I have always admired his work. As usual, he is dead right, and I am delighted that he chose to write about this subject. With an economy of words, he presents the problem in exactly the right perspective. Write on, Carl!

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband has been a drinker for at least 20 years. "Orrin" has never missed a day's work because of his drinking, so of course he doesn't think he has a problem.

I have given up trying to get Orrin to give up the booze, but now he has started to do something that is making me very angry. He is putting vodka in the dog's water bowl and getting him drunk. The dog staggers around in circles, walks into walls, then falls in a corner and goes to sleep.

I've thought of calling the Humane Society, but I am afraid they'll come and take the dog away. That would break my heart. Can you help, Ann? My husband thinks you are very smart, because you write a column. I am only a stupid wife who doesn't know anything. Thank you. -- Denver

DEAR DENVER: It is impossible to reason with a drunk, so stop trying. Go to Al-Anon and learn how to deal with your husband's boozy behavior. If it persists, find a better home for the dog. That pooch needs help.

Is that Ann Landers column you clipped years ago yellow with age? For a copy of her most frequently requested poems and essays, send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.85 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.87.)

First lady to be inducted

AUSTIN (AP) - First lady Barbara Bush will be on hand March 27 to be inducted in the Texas Women's Hall of Fame for her volunteer work.

Gov. Bill Clements said Monday that Mrs. Bush will receive a special achievement award for her work in Texas and throughout the nation.

Sally McKenzie, chairwoman for the Governor's Commission for Women and sponsor of the event, said Mrs. Bush was a unanimous choice of the Hall of Fame awards committee.

"She has inspired a national resurgence in volunteer activities, ranging from literacy to AIDS education," Ms. McKenzie said.

"Long before the national spotlight was on Mrs. Bush, she worked tirelessly in community service programs in her home town of Houston, in Texas and across the country.

"This award is a fitting tribute to her past accomplishments and her ongoing commitment," Ms. McKenzie said.

Seven other Texas women who will be inducted at the ceremony at the Hyatt Regency Hotel are: Gussie Nell Davis of Kilgore; Margaret Swan Forbes of San Antonio; Terese Tarlton Hershey of Houston; Jane A. Wetzel of Dallas; Dr. Judith B. Craven of Houston; Lucia Rede Madrid of Redford and L. Ruth Guy of Dallas.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Will you please explain exactly how alcohol can cause a man to become impotent? My husband, age 61, has trouble getting an erection and then trouble performing. He started getting this way four years ago. His appetite for sex has increased 90 percent and he can't keep his hands off me, touching me whenever I am near.

His yearly physical shows no signs of prostate trouble, so I believe it is from drinking beer every day for the past 18 years. He never gets visibly drunk and has always driven with a beer in his hand.

I told him he was an alcoholic, and he said, "Probably, but it's no problem." There is no way I can convince him it's the alcohol making him this way unless I can explain exactly how it does it.

DEAR READER: I can't say what is causing your husband's difficulty. He should have an examination for impotence to search for various causes. But alcohol certainly can and often is a factor in causing impotence and poor performance.

Your comment about his increase in desire is consistent with Shakespeare's writing in "Macbeth," wherein Porter says, "Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: It provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. ... " Many men think alcohol improves their performance, but it does not. It just makes them unaware of how poor their performance is — somewhat like a drunk who thinks he is driving with great skill.

Alcohol decreases the male hormone testosterone. It destroys the free-circulating testosterone in the bloodstream. This is the form of testosterone that is active and stimulates sexual performance and other masculine characteristics. Also, it affects the testicles directly, causing them to produce less testosterone.

Alcohol affects many nerve fibers and can cause a condition known as alcoholic neuropathy. That can affect nerves to the legs too. Neuropathy can also involve the nerve fibers that control erection. A good example here is the diabetic who has diabetic neuropathy involving these same nerve fibers and who is then impotent.

Have your husband read Special Report 84, Understanding Alcohol and Its Effects, which I'm sending you. Others who want this report can send $2 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/84, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: A couple of months ago a small, hard lump appeared right under the lower lid of my eye. Then I noticed another smaller lump above my upper lid in the same eye. I don't think it's bothering my eyesight because I see and read clearly without squinting. Could these be some kind of tumor? Are they dangerous? What kind of eye doctor would you suggest I see?

DEAR READER: See your family doctor first. If it is at the margin of the eyelid, you could have a chalazion. These result from plugging of the tiny Meibomian glands that are arranged along the lid margin to form a small hard cyst. They are like sebaceous glands of the skin that oil your skin. The secretion from them keeps tears from overflowing and enables the eyelids to seal tight when you close your eyes.

These usually do not cause any problem. If they do, a tiny incision inside the lid can be done to remove the lump and the gland itself.

Or you may be describing cholesterol deposits under the skin. Your doctor will be able to tell simply by looking.

Bridal shower held

Jennifer Griffin, April 7 bride-elect of Kenny Griffith, was honored with a bridal shower March 10 in the home of Mary Thomas. Greeting guests with the honoree were, from left, the prospective bridegroom's mother, Lois Griffith of McAllen; hostess, Mary Thomas; and the honoree's mother, Rosie Griffin.

Griffin feted with shower

A bridal shower was held for Jennifer Griffin March 10 in the home of Mary Thomas. The honoree and Kenny Griffith plan to wed April 7.

Welcoming guests with the honoree were hostesses, Mary Thomas and Carmen Flood; the mother of the prospective bridegroom, Lois Griffith of McAllen; and the honoree's mother, Rosie Griffin.

Linda Gililland invited guests to register.

Carolyn Hacker and Selsey Metz served refreshments of coffee, various miniature pastries, assorted breads and fruits, and filled pastries.

The table, covered with a white cutwork linen cloth, was centered with an elegant arrangement of fresh cut pink Holland long stemmed tulips placed in a crystal bowl and set upon a silver and mirrored tray. Also, adorning the table were silver serving trays and pink napkins capturing the color of the tulips.

Serving pieces of selected pottery were presented to Miss Griffin from the hostesses: Ella Marie Veigel, Carmen Flood, Carolyn Hacker, Selsey Metz, Linda Gililland, Mary Thomas, Juanita Rodriguez, Kathy Allison, Pat Green, Betty Whitaker, Ann Beard, Jana Green, Betty Drake and Viola Moore.

It takes more than blind luck to pin down the right home.

Sure, you could go on stumbling through the housing market. Running into dead ends and getting cornered with too little information.

Or you could nail down that new home the easy way. By consulting an experienced real estate agent.

An agent can point out options you may have missed. Get you inside interesting homes that you may never have seen otherwise. Even do a lot of the groundwork, so you don't have to.

Like researching financing packages. Checking through the multiple-listing service for homes that fit your needs -- and your pocketbook. Negotiating with the seller. And arranging for inspections. He or she will even be there at closing.

So instead of forging ahead without knowing what's out there, get some help from an expert. A real estate agent.

Inside The Hereford Brand, you'll find both qualified agents and valuable information about home buying. Everyday, the real extate classifieds list many properties and agents. And The Brand's Sunday housing section examine the lastest market trends and housing opportunities.

With the right guide, hitting your mark can be child's play.
