Five killed

Car bomb explodes outside luxury hotel

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — A car apparently laden with explosives blew up early Saturday outside a luxury hotel in this central Mexican city, killing at least five people and wounding six, police and news reports said.

The blast was the latest in a series of violent incidents in Mexico that began with a New Year's Day uprising in the south, the March 23 assassination of a presidential candidate and kidnappings of prominent executives.

Police said the explosion occurred at 2:40 a.m. (3:40 a.m. CDT) outside the Camino Real hotel in Guadalajara, 175 miles northwest of Mexico City.

Police reports cited by the major network Televisa gave the preliminary casualty count of at least five dead and six injured.

At least 10 cars parked nearby were destroyed or badly damaged, said the official Mexican news agency Notimex. It said there was some damage to the hotel, where a party was being held.

The reports were still sketchy shortly after dawn.

A bus that had transported a band to the hotel for the party was also damaged, and army troops cordoned off the explosion site. Bomb experts began an investigation.

No one immediately claimed responsibility, and the government said it had no report on possible suspects.

LOSER'S WOES — Bobby Hobbs, youth minister at First Baptist Church, had a bucket of "slime" poured on him because his boy's team lost a contest to the girls for the most mission offering brought during Vacation Bible School. The VBS offering of $677.65 will go to home missions. (SDN Staff Photo)

Ritz lighting set June 18 on square

The third annual "Lighting Up the Ritz" celebration will be held Saturday, June 18, on the courthouse square.

There will be a variety of refreshment and activity booths, vintage cars, motorcycles and live music and entertainment at the gazebo. A fire truck and ambulance will also be on display.

The Ritz Community Theatre will be selling T-shirts, caps and drinks to raise money for the renovation fund.

Tickets for the next theatre season will also be on sale. They are $30 for six performances, $60 for 12 and $100 for 24.

Booths will open at 5 p.m. with entertainment to begin at 7. People are encouraged to bring folding chairs and blankets for sitting on the courthouse lawn. The lights on the Ritz marquee will be turned on about 9:30 p.m.

South Korea greets sanctions; North Korea renews war threat

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea on Saturday welcomed the first formal sanctions against North Korea, warning its hard-line communist neighbor it's a sign of things to come. The North responded with renewed threats of war.

The International Atomic Energy Agency voted Friday to cut technical aid to North Korea, and the United States is leading a push to impose broader sanctions under U.N. auspices, possibly as early as next week.

South Korea's Foreign Ministry praised the IAEA's "resolute stance," saying it proves the international community's determination.

The North, meanwhile, renewed its harsh denunciations of efforts to punish it over its refusal to allow IAEA inspectors determine whether it's making nuclear weapons. The North has already said sanctions would be an act of war.

North Korea's official news agency, monitored in Tokyo, carried a government newspaper's commentary Saturday calling the South's support of sanctions "an act of self-destruction."

It likened the South to "a rabid dog barking into the sky, without any knowledge of its imminent death."

Principal backers of the sanctions, including the United States and South Korea, pressed ahead with the task of cementing support for them.

South Korea's Vice Premier Lee Hong-ku met with U.S.

Back to the schoolhouse

It may be summertime, but students needing extra help and those trying to get a jumpstart on the fall semester will be going back to school.

Summer school for Pre-K through 12th grade students begins Monday on two campuses in Snyder.

Classes for grades Pre-K through sixth, including bilingual, will be held at East Elementary. The classes will begin at 8:15 a.m. and end at noon.

Classes for kindergarten through sixth grade with end July 15; bilingual classes for Pre-K, K and first grade will end July 22.

Summer school for seventh through 12th grade students will be held on the high school campus.

English and math will be offered to those students who have failed a course. TAAS math and TAAS English will be offered to students who have not passed those tests.

There is no charge to students who completed the school year in Snyder for these classes.

Health will be offered to Snyder High School students. Tuition is $100. Out-of-district students may enroll in credit-offered courses only, and only if space is available. Tuition for out-of-district students will be $125 per semester.

Students should sign up for summer school at the high school counselor's office or by calling 573-0132.

Monday, all 7th through 12th grade students will meet in Worsham Auditorium at 8 a.m. for orientation.

See Page 7B for bus schedule.

Contract on court agenda

Scurry County Commissioners Court has only one item of new business when it meets at 10 a.m. Monday.

The court will consider a proposed contract between the Board of County Development, a county board, and the Development Corporation of Snyder, a city board.

Last year, the two groups agreed in principle to participate jointly in economic development with the BCD making a substantial contribution from its budget to DCOS operations.

The court will also consider budget amendments and line-item transfers.

Advisory board releases report

Scurry County Coliseum advisory board, citing "positive indicators," released first-quarter operating expenses for 1994.

Expenses for the first quarter amounted to $53,985. Direct income for the events was $18,588. The board also estimates $3,500 in hotel/motel tax revenues and $49,750 spent in Snyder as a direct result of events at the coliseum.

"These are positive indicators for the coliseum and Scurry County. The second quarter results should show a steady improvement," a news release from the board stated.

The coliseum was used for 25 days from January through March. The annex was utilized 20 days. The board estimates that 6,550 people from outside Scurry County visited Snyder during the first quarter, attending events at the coliseum.

Food vendors should follow simple rules

Scurry County Health Unit is asking July 4th Celebration food vendors to follow a few rules for the health and safety of consumers.

All food booths must have a thermometer which will read 0 to 220 degrees F. This will be used to check all cold foods to be sure they are maintained at 45 degrees or below and all hot foods to ensure they are maintained at 140 degrees or above.

All food booths must have handwashing facilities. This can be achieved by having a cooler with a spigot. Put a bucket under the spigot to catch wastewater and have soap and paper towels on hand for workers. Keep warm water in the cooler at all times by adding to it throughout the day.

"You cannot go wrong if you keep hot foods hot, cold foods cold, and wash hands frequently. Especially wash your hands after handling raw meat before you handle other foods," a health department spokesperson said.

The health department will not be enforcing the rule on floors, walls and ceilings, but asks booth attendants to try and keep dust off food and utensils and to cover food products to help protect them from flies.

"We will work with each of you to help make our temporary food service establishments safe for the consumer and still a fun project for the vendors," the spokesperson said.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The problem with second opinions is that's about how long most people think before offering 'em."

Snyder is sort of accustomed to cheap shots from the Abilene media, but when it comes from faraway places like El Paso and Dallas, it's a little more difficult to take.

The Dallas Morning News, whose sports staff is larger than some West Texas towns, sent Cathy Harasta to Snyder to report on the National Girls' Little Dribblers Tournament.

You may remember a couple of months ago when an El Paso writer, doing a feature on Arkansas' Nolan Richardson and his NCAA championship, poked fun in Snyder's direction.

It must be the urban mentality of bigger is better — thinking stimulated by smog, pollution, crime and congestion.

Ms. Harasta wrote in her Dallas News column: "Except for the power lines, not much goes in and out of Snyder. June is when the ceiling fans inside the Great Western diner move in their lazy orbits, and not much else in town moves at all. Summer is when Snyder, about 80 miles northwest of Abilene, is not on very many tourists' wish lists."

The article actually ended on a positive vain, but we suspect Ms. Harasta perfected her negative lead paragraph on her way out here.

Research was a little lacking. While Snyder is proud of its high school Tigers, it also has a college rodeo, golf and basketball team. In fact, Ms. Harasta, the WTC Rodeo Team is competing in the national finals in Bozeman, Mont. this week.

Nolan Richardson got his start in Snyder, winning the National Junior College Championship with a 37-0 season before heading to the Ozarks with a stop in Tulsa where he won the NIT.

As you finally stated, most of the community turned out to welcome the visitors, and we're delighted that the chamber folks were even kind to you.

Snyder may be viewed as a rather simple, backward place. Thank goodness, where else could a simple editor find work trying to figure out whether power lines run in or run out, or both.

Patriot anti-missile crews drill, wait

OSAN AIR BASE, South Korea (AP) — The crew leaped into action, and in a matter of minutes, the missile launcher roared to life. Staff Sgt. Carlos Flanders stood back, arms folded.

"This is the part," he said, "where we'd be watching it go off."

It was only a practice drill Friday for the Patriot air and missile defense battery at this air base 50 miles south of Seoul.

But crews say they're ready for the real thing — despite lingering controversy over the Patriots' performance in the Gulf War.

"No system is foolproof, but I've got confidence in what we have here," said Capt. David Cole, commander of C Battery, 2nd Battalion of the 7th Air Defense Artillery, based at Fort Bliss in El Paso, Texas.

The Patriot battalion — with half a dozen missile batteries and nearly 200 missiles — was deployed in South Korea two months ago, after North Korea cut short an agreed-upon inspection of its nuclear facilities.

Since then, the dispute has escalated sharply over the North's refueling a reactor in a way that made it impossible for inspectors to determine whether it has diverted plutonium, possibly for nuclear weapons.

As a result, the United States and others are seeking punitive sanctions, which North Korea says would mean war.

The South Korean government Friday ordered a nationwide check of underground shelters and emergency water supplies. In Vienna, Austria, the International Atomic Energy Agency's governing body voted to suspend technical aid to North Korea for barring full inspections of its nuclear facilities.

"It's definitely gotten tenser since we got here," said Flanders, 28, a launch crew chief. "There's a lot of pressure for us to do well if anything happens."

Military officials refused Friday to say where in South Korea, other than Osan, the Patriots are deployed. But they've said previously that the system would defend military airfields and ports that would be used to funnel in reinforcements in the event of battle.

The battalion, though not all its members, saw action in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War. One who did was Staff Sgt. Martin Wright, another crew chief, who was part of the Patriot contingent stationed in Israel in 1991.

"I'm not worried about how we'd do in combat here," said Wright, a tall, laconic 31-year-old from Corydon, Ind. "It's automatic, your whole body just pumps adrenaline, and you do just what you're trained to do."

The Army has defended Patriots against criticism they were far less successful in destroying Iraqi Scud missile warheads than the U.S. military initially claimed.

The battalion in South Korea is equipped with Patriots that have been modified to allow them to strike targets at higher altitudes and greater distances, officials said.

They have a feature called the "urban upturn," which is designed to make the missile disengage and self-destruct rather than following a target to descend to too low an altitude and ending up inflicting more damage in populated areas.

But even if they're new and improved, the Patriots could face harder-to-hit targets here than in the Gulf. According to some reports, North Korea has modified its Scuds to give them greater range — estimated at 370 miles — and enable them to fly 40 percent faster than the Iraqi version.

Senior Center sets Flag Day

Senior citizens will be saluting the American Flag and fathers with special programs next week.

A Flag Day is planned Tuesday and the Sunshine Choir will present a program of patriotic songs for a sing along starting at 11:15 a.m. Anyone who has a special poem or reading about the flag has been invited to present it. Senior citizens are encouraged to wear red, white and blue for Flag Day.

The Father's Day program is planned at 11:15 a.m. Friday and the Sunshine Choir will again be presenting special music. Recognition will be extended to the youngest and oldest father and to others as well.

Representatives from the Social Security Administration will be in the center Tuesday from 10 a.m. to noon and from 1-2 p.m. Anyone needing information about Social Security benefits is invited to meet with the others.

For senior citizens who need help with Medicare and information about other benefits which may be available to them, Dot Stokes is available for consultation in the center fom 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Tuesdays. This program is offered through the West Central Texas Council of Governments, which provided training for Mrs. Stokes.

Surplus commodities will be distributed through the center on Wednesday. Hours for distribution will be 9-11:30 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. Senior citizens give volunteer time to help with this program and senior citizens interested in working in this project are invited to contact the office for more information.

The Senior Saints will present a musical program in the center starting at 11:15 a.m. Thursday. The Tri-Chem textile painting class will meet at 9 a.m. Thursday.

The Senior Center will have a special Western Day on June 23 and senior citizens are encouraged to wear their cowboy duds and get ready for a cowboy sing along that day. Call 573-4035 for more information about the Senior Center.

Board tentatively approves new rules

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education gave preliminary approval Friday to new textbook rules that are meant to prevent the state in the future from running short of money for planned purchases.

The move comes after books purchased for the 1993-94 school year ate up almost the entire two-year textbook budget of $272 million. That means school districts won't receive state-paid updated textbooks next fall in several subjects next fall, such as health.

Under the new rules, which are up for final approval next month, state education officials will determine how much they have to spend on textbooks before soliciting bids from publishers.

In the past, Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno said, the state has asked for bids without projecting how much the books will cost. When the bids came in, the Legislature then was asked for the funding.

Until the 1993 legislative session, when funding was sought for the following two school years, the Legislature has been able to meet the cost, Meno said. But tight fiscal times, and a large expenditure on new reading books, changed that.

Besides the new budget projections, the rules make other changes. For example, the state would require that all members of committees that review textbooks for the state have expertise in the subject area they are considering, such as history or science.

Sweetwater gypsum plant reopens to meet demands

SWEETWATER (AP) — Recent growth in the state's construction industry is giving new life to plants that produce building supplies.

In this West Texas city, the Domtar Gypsum plant is gearing up to begin production of products such as sheetrock after a three-year hiatus. It closed in September 1990, but will reopen as soon as possible — creating 75 jobs, plant officials announced Friday.

"We have made the decision to reopen the facility based on the improved market demand for our product and a justifiable, positive financial return," said Archie Hunter, regional controller for Domtar.

The plant's return is the latest sign that construction is booming again in Texas.

Following the April tornadoes that destroyed hundreds of homes in Lancaster, contractors at a convention in Dallas said a construction boom in North Texas has raised prices and increased demand for building supplies to their highest levels in eight years.

And that increased homebuilding, combined with school and prison construction, spells good news for towns like Sweetwater, which will get an annual payroll of about $3 million at Domtar.

"Judging from past experience, we expect that, once the 75 people are hired and the plant is in production, they will spend about $500,000 annually here in Sweetwater," said Tim Fambrough, executive director of the Sweetwater Enterprise for Economic Development.

In addition, Domtar has scheduled capital improvements of $1.3 to $1.5 million to the plant.

The company originally closed the plant in response to a slump in the housing industry, which is generally attributed to high interest rates, said David Maddox, city manager.

Ex-pastor of major church writes book

FORT WORTH (AP) — The former pastor of the world's biggest Southern Baptist congregation has written a book on his brief tenure there and his abrupt departure two years ago.

The Rev. Joel Gregory was the pastor of the First Baptist Church of Dallas, which he describes as a "super church."

"Having been quiet for a couple of years, I'd like to tell my side of the story," said Gregory, 46, now an independent representative of a Fort Worth mortuary.

Gregory described the situation at a Dallas news conference Friday to promote his book, "Too Great a Temptation: The Seductive Power of America's Super Church."

Gregory said he left Dallas First Baptist because of confusion over whether he or the Rev. W.A. Criswell, the church's senior pastor, was the true leader of the 28,000-member congregation. It was the same reason he gave upon his September 1992 departure.

"The explanation I gave in my resignation was brief but true," Gregory said. "I found out after a couple of years that the incumbent wanted to continue a few years more."

Gregory said the book is not intended "to trash the church or its senior pastor."

"That the First Baptist Church of Dallas has for 125 years done good for the city and the world is not under question," he said. "That W.A. Criswell is a great man whose historic position is secure cannot be disputed."

In addition to details of his resignation, Gregory said his book will discuss the phenomenon of large, powerful churches in America and the conflict between Baptist conservatives and moderates.

The book will explore his involvement with the departure of Baylor University from the state Southern Baptist Convention, as well as the firing of Russell Dilday as president of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, he said.

In a written statement, the Rev. O.S. Hawkins, who was named pastor after Gregory's resignation, said he had no comment on the book "other than to say we at First Baptist Church are praying for him."

Gregory said the news conference was initially scheduled for September.

Financial Focus

When a stock splits, does that make it a good buy? A stock may look like a real bargain after a split, but in effect very little has changed.

For example, a stock selling at $100 a share announces a two-for-one split, and the shares sell at $50 after the split. This can be compared to exchanging a dollar bill for two half-dollars. You still have the same total amount, but you have two pieces of currency instead of one.

Why do companies split their stock? One reason is to make the stock affordable to more investors. Stocks on the major exchanges are traded in round lots of 100 shares. Investors may be more willing to invest $5,000 than $10,000. The stock isn't necessarily a better value, it's just available at a more affordable price. The company hopes there will be more buyers at the lower price.

Another reason a company may decide to split its stock is to give the public a message that the company is doing well. The implication is that the company is reducing the price of the stock because it expects its price to continue moving up. Often, this is what happens. However, it is not a direct result of the split but rather the performance of the company. An increase in the company's earnings generally means an increase in the stock price. So, when a stock "always splits at 50", for example, that is because the compan;y's growth merits it, not because 50 is the magic number.

A better way to judge a stock's value is to look at its price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio. For example, a $50 stock earning $5 per share has a P/E of 10(50/5=10). If the stock is split in half, the $25 shares earn $2.50 per share, and the P/E is still 10 (25/2.50=10). When a stock slits, the P/E does not change.

A stock's price and earnings in relation to splits can best be described with the following example: If the average P/E of a stock is 20, and the earnings are $5 per share, the target price of the stock is $100 per share (20x5=100). If the stock splits two-for-one, and the new earnings are $2.50 per share, multiply that by the average P/E of 20 for the new target price of $50 per share.

Bargain hunting is the american way. But when a stock trades today for half of what it did yesterday, it may simply be due to a stock split.

Gutierrez completes seven month Naval deployment

FLEET HOMETOWN NEWS CENTER — Navy Chief Petty Officer Daniel G. Gutierrez, whose wife, Yolanda, is the daughter of Felix and Catherine Oroseo of Snyder, recently returned from a seven-month deployment with Naval Mobile Construction Battalion Four, Port Hueneme, Calif.

The main body of the battalion deployed to Okinawa, while 10 details worked at sites in Japan, Korea, Alaska, Hawaii and California. Spearheading the Navy's new directive assigning women to a wider range of duty, NMCB 4 was the first battalion to have women assigned to a deployed Seabee unit.

Elements of Gutierrez' unit completed a wide variety of construction jobs during the deployment, from an erosion control project at Camp Schwab in Okinawa to the construction of a rifle range in San Bernadino, Calif. The San Bernadino project was a unique example of Seebees assisting local and federal law enforcement agencies.

Additionally, the battalion installed perimeter lighting and upgraded water and sewage facilities in Pohang, Korea; constructed a weapons assembly building in Iwakuni, Japan; built an artillery shelter in Mount Fuji, Japan and laid two roads in Adak, Alaska.

NMCB 4's mission follows the Navy's new strategy entitled "...From the Sea," which shifts the sea services' focus from a global threat to regional challenges and emphasizes strategic deterrence and defense, forward presence and crisis response and reconstruction. The 1973 graduate of Snyder High School joined the Navy in June 1973.

Scott finishes Army course

GRAFENWOEHR, Germany — Army Spec. Lola G. Scott has completed a U.S. Army primary leadership development course here.

Students received training in supervisory skills, leadership principles, and small unit training techniques essential to a fire-line supervisor in a technical or administrative environment.

The soldier is a mail clerk with the U.S. Army Element at Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers, Europe, Mons, Belgium.

She is the daughter of Nancy G. and Doyle O. Scott of Snyder. She graduated from Snyder High School in 1989.

Audit says districts could save millions

AUSTIN (AP) — The state auditor's office says it has identified $360 million that school districts could save in outside-the-classroom costs.

But an official with the Texas Association of School Boards on Friday criticized the report.

"If three strikes and you're out applied to lousy audit work, then some people at the state auditor's office would be looking at life sentences," said Dan Casey, associate executive director of the TASB.

The state auditor didn't immediately return a telephone message left after office hours Friday.

The report cited potential savings if school districts reduced their non-instructional costs to students to the average of 25 similar school districts.

A report last year found $370 million in savings.

But Casey said the groups of school districts had varying utility and transportation costs that made comparisons useless.

"Unless you take geographic or regional differences into account, I don't see how this would be useful to anyone," he said.

The report said that school districts are decreasing the percentage of total operating expenditures for outside-the-classroom costs.

That percentage has decreased from 42.2 percent to nearly 41.7 percent, which translates into $66 million more directed toward the classroom for the 1992-93 school year.

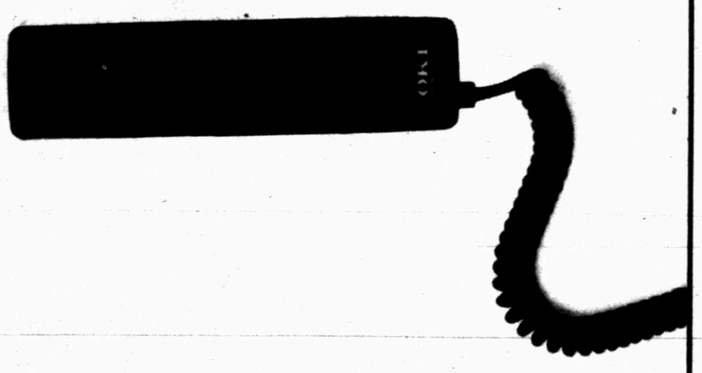

The Office of the State Auditor urged that the report be used in a constructive way "and not as a tool to attack school district management."

The report praised 11 school districts for making maximum use of their resources.

Being popular may have hurt M. Tyson

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — If boxer Mike Tyson doesn't impress a judge Monday with his educational record, his celebrity friends could be to blame.

Tyson dropped out of his high school program at the Indiana Youth Center for more than a year because of numerous visits from friends such as Whitney Houston, Spike Lee and Charles Barkley, said Phil Slavens, assistant superintendent of operations at the prison.

"They didn't kick him out, it was mutual," Slavens said Friday. "They said, 'You know, if you're not going to take it seriously, why even be there?'"

Tyson re-entered the program in September and has been going to classes every morning, Slavens said. He flunked a general equivalency exam in March, and is expected to re-take the test later this month.

"(The visits) had significant impact on what he was able to accomplish," said David Catlin, supervisor of education at the youth center.

GOP conservatives warn Gov. Richards

FORT WORTH (AP) — A Texas Christian Coalition leader Friday declared that conservative Republican activists are the "worst nightmare" of Gov. Ann Richards and her Democratic Party.

"Ours is not just empty rhetoric. We will pray and we will work," Alice Patterson, the coalition's state field director, told some 3,000 delegates attending a standing-room-only, pro-family rally on the convention's opening day.

Ms. Patterson and other social conservative leaders said Democrats are out of touch with average Texans. They said reports of a split between Republican conservatives and moderates are exaggerated.

She hailed the fact that both leading candidates for Republican state chairman — U.S. Rep. Joe Barton and Dallas lawyer Tom Pauken — are "exactly the same on every issue of concern to pro-family delegates."

State Rep. Steve Ogden, who has headed drafting of the party platform, said the proposed document is little changed from 1992.

"It is pro-free enterprise, pro-jobs. It reasserts our belief in less government and lower taxes. It reiterates our belief in the right to keep and bear arms. And it strongly opposes a federal takeover of our health care system," Ogden said.

"It is still pro-life. It is still pro-family. And unlike the Democrats, it reiterates our belief in traditional Judeo-Christian values," he said.

As many as 70 percent of the convention's 12,000 delegates and alternates are considered social-issue conservatives, a confederation of evangelical Christians, abortion opponents and home school advocates who flooded the party's March 8 precinct conventions.

The conservative challenge caused current party chairman Fred Meyer to abandon his re-election effort.

The three candidates to replace him addressed the convention Friday. One — moderate Dolly Madison McKenna of Houston — was booed when she said, "There are some people here who want the Republican Party to be a church."

Barton and Pauken offered similar philosophical messages. Barton also stressed his success at raising funds and winning elections, while Pauken stressed the importance of volunteers within the party organization.

"There's only one candidate who has a winning record in contested elections against Democrats. There's only one candidate who has built the party, who has recruited precinct chairmen, who has recruited county chairmen ... and there is only one candidate who has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for Republican candidates. That candidate is Joe Barton," the congressman said.

"This election is for setting the long-term course of the Republican Party," Pauken said. "You won't win a majority of the people unless they know you stand for something. This is a time for choosing sides ... If we define the issues as liberals vs. conservatives, we will win."

Several conservative leaders urged the delegates to remember the need for post-convention unity and not harbor hard feelings after the chairman's election on Saturday.

"The Democrats and the media have come here this weekend expecting — and in some cases looking forward to — what they call a blood bath," said Tim Lambert, executive director of the Texas Home School Coalition. "We need to pull together after this is all over."

During the pro-family rally, which included singing of several patriotic songs and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," Ms. Patterson repeatedly brought cheering delegates to their feet as she reviewed the success of the movement and its plans for the future.

"We, Gov. Richards, are mainstream Texas. We go to work on Monday. We go to church on Sunday," she said.

In their bid to drive Democrats from power, Ms. Patterson said conservative activists are ready to campaign hard.

Showdowns highlight tourney

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor

Friday, the third day of competition at the Snyder-hosted Girls Little Dribblers National Basketball Tournament, was a day of showdowns.

Two of the top draws in a full slate of Friday games were a pair of contests featuring Lamesa teams.

Lamesa's No. 1 Major Division squad handed Snyder a 53-19 loss in a battle of undefeated teams, and Lamesa No. 1 fell to Levelland No. 1 in Junior Division action on Friday.

The tournament was scheduled to wind down with championship games in each division on Saturday.

Standout Mandee Meador canned 12 points and Crista Barron chipped in eight as Lamesa's Major Division team earned a berth in Saturday's title tilt against either the same Snyder team or Lamesa No. 2.

Snyder was led in the loss by Jodi Dennis' seven points and five from Christina Holder.

Snyder was to take on Lamesa No. 2 in a 10:30 a.m. battle at Scurry County Coliseum Saturday, with the winner advancing to face Lamesa No. 1 for the division crown at 8:30 p.m. at the coliseum.

In the Lamesa-Levelland Junior Division game, Levelland outscored Lamesa 15-11 in the final period to rally from an early 4-point deficit.

Tamara McDonald poured in 12 points and Holly Brasher hit 11 to lead Levelland into the championship contest Saturday.

April Barron had eight and Britney Pinkerton was good for seven for Lamesa.

In other Major Division action, Shallowater is making a run at the final from the losers' bracket.

Shallowater knocked off Denver City 40-16 in Friday's early game, then came back and handed Hamshire-Fannett a 31-22 elimination loss.

Shallowater, led by Lindzi Martin's 12 against Hamshire-Fannett and 22 by T'Nae Thiel versus Denver City, was to battle Gulf Coast in a Saturday morning game, with the winner heading into the American Major Division championship.

One of Friday's Senior Division highlight games was the 42-40 overtime win by Hamshire-Fannett over Gulf Coast.

Hamshire-Fannett trailed 10-4 after one period, but cut the difference to 17-15 by halftime. Gulf Coast still led by two, 26-24, after three periods, but a fourth-quarter rally tied the game, forcing the extra period.

Kara Melancon scored 16 points in the winning cause. Gulf Coast star Mary Sonnier canned 12.

The National Junior Division title game is set for 7:15 p.m. Saturday at Western Texas College. American Junior Division finalists will square off at 6 p.m. at WTC.

Qualifiers for the National Major Division final will meet at 8:30 p.m. at the county coliseum, while the American Majors fight for the title at 7:15 p.m., also at the coliseum.

Seniors in the National Conference will play their championship game at 4:45 p.m. and the American Seniors square off for the title at 6 p.m., both at the coliseum.

Coach Bob Doty takes two WTC rodeo teams to Bozeman for CNFR

Though the trip to the College National Finals Rodeo is an almost annual affair for Western Texas College coach Bob Doty, it's not every year he gets to take both his men's and women's teams with him.

When the first chutes fly open Monday on the campus of Montana State University in Bozeman, both squads will be competing for national titles for the first time since 1986.

"We're pretty fortunate," said Doty. "The last time our women won the region and got to go (to the CNFR), our men's team won the national championship."

BOB DOTY

The Lady Westerners won the NIRA Southwest Region crown handily in 1993-94, led by all-around winner Leslie Lewis.

Lewis accumulated 503 total points for the title. She also won first in the region in both goat tying, edging teammate Dusti Beaton, and in breakaway roping, winning by a gaudy 165 points.

Western Texas' men finished the season in second place in the region, less than 200 points behind champion Vernon Regional JC.

Roughstock events are the strength of the WTC men's squad. Trey Griffin, who rides saddle broncs and bulls, was second in the region's all-around standings, while teammate Fletcher Tigner, who competes in the same two events, was fourth.

Saddle bronc specialist Bronc Collier finished the regular season in third place in the region, trailing only all-around winner Justen Washburn of ENMU and Tigner. WTC bareback rider Cleve Schmidt earned third, as well, behind VRJC mates Kirby Berry and Pete Hawkins.

The Westerners' top bull rider for the season was Griffin, who was third overall. Snyder High School graduate Ross Hataway of Howard College was the event's runaway winner, claiming 345 points.

Top competition is expected from 2-time defending men's champion Southwest Oklahoma, Hill College and host Montana State.

Doty refused to say how he thinks his teams will do.

"I'm not going to make any predictions," he smiled. "Too many things can happen."

The WTC coach is making his 15th trip to the National Finals.

He has led the Westerners to four regional titles and 10 second-place finishes, including in '86 when the Western Texas men claimed the national title.

In addition, Western Texas' men have a third-place at nationals to their credit, as well as a fifth and five seventh-place efforts.

The WTC women's team is making its second appearance at Bozeman.

Hot-shooting NY evens series

HOUSTON (AP) — The revived Knicks are bringing two souvenirs back to New York — the homecourt advantage in the NBA Finals and the shooting touch they misplaced temporarily.

With their best shooting performance of the playoffs following one of their worst, they beat the Houston Rockets 91-83 Friday night to gain a split of the first two games and salvage what seemed like a wasted trip just two days earlier.

The Knicks still kept up their trademark defense as the Rockets did not have a field goal over the final 61/2 minutes.

After making just 34 percent of their shots in an 85-78 opening loss, the Knicks connected on 52.2 percent in Game 2, only the fourth time in 20 playoff games they shot better than 50 percent.

They were outstanding from 3-point territory, going 7-for-11 after a horrid 4-for-15 opening night.

"The playoffs really don't start and get interesting until the home team loses a game," New York coach Pat Riley said. "We have an advantage now, but we can not get lightheaded about this because Houston is a great team."

Trailing 79-76, the Knicks outscored the Rockets 15-4 the rest of the way as Houston went without a field goal after Vernon Maxwell's layup had given them the three-point lead with 6:32 left.

Derek Harper's 3-pointer gave New York the lead for good at 81-79 with 4:29 to go and he hit his fourth of the game with two minutes left, putting the Knicks on top 87-81.

John Starks, who rebounded from a 3-for-18 shooting effort in Game 1 to go 6-for-11, had 19 points, while Harper had 18 on 7-for-11 shooting. Patrick Ewing had 16 points and 13 rebounds.

"We know that we are a much better shooting team than what we showed in the previous game," Starks said. "I think we needed some rest. We just came off two tough seven game series. We came out like we wanted to win tonight."

Hakeem Olajuwon led Houston with 25 points and Maxwell had 20.

The next three games of the best-of-7 series will be played in New York starting Sunday night.

"We don't have a chance to relax. Houston is a very good road team," Harper said. "We have to enjoy this game for a little while and get ready to play the next three games in New York."

Starks finished 3-for-4 from 3-point range while Harper was 4-for-6. The Rockets managed to go 6-for-22, setting a finals record for attempts in a game.

Both teams shot far better and ran more than they did in the slow-paced opener in which only 38 percent of the shots went in.

"We spent a lot of time shooting the ball in practice yesterday," Riley said. "I think each player must have taken at least 150 shots."

On Friday night, the Rockets shot 39 percent.

"We felt that we didn't play as well as we should have in starting off a championship series," Starks said. "We had a chance to get that game in the end, but we'll take the split."

It was the fourth time in five years that teams split the first two games of the finals. In the three previous cases, the home teams in those two games went on to win the title despite blowing the homecourt advantage.

The Knicks are trying to extend the East's championship streak to six seasons. The last Western Conference team to win it was the Los Angeles Lakers, under current New York coach Pat Riley, in 1988.

The Knicks broke a six-game losing streak at the Summit and are 3-8 in their last 11 games overall against the Rockets.

In this year's playoffs, the Knicks are 3-7 on the road, while Houston is 8-3 at home.

The Knicks led 72-65 after the third quarter, but the Rockets got the first six points of the fourth period on a basket by Maxwell, a free throw by Robert Horry and a 3-pointer by Sam Cassell.

Ewing's jumper put New York ahead 74-71 with 10:16 to play. Olajuwon's turnaround cut the lead back to one. After Greg Anthony's jumper made the score 76-73 with 7:54 remaining, the Knicks went cold and Houston capitalized.

Matt Bullard's 3-pointer tied the game and a three-point play by Maxwell gave the Rockets a 79-76 lead. Charles Smith then hit a foul shot for New York, and Harper ended the scoring drought with a 3-pointer, putting the Knicks back in front 81-79 with 4:29 left.

Strange RBI single downs Royals

ARLINGTON (AP) — Doug Strange's two-out RBI single brought in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning and the Texas Rangers won their fourth straight game Friday night, 3-2 over the Kansas City Royals.

In the seventh, Will Clark drew a leadoff walk against Kevin Appier (5-6) and Juan Gonzalez singled. With two outs, Strange hit a soft liner off Stan Belinda to score Clark.

Kevin Brown (5-7) allowed two runs and five hits in eight innings. He walked four and struck out six.

Rick Honeycutt gave up a leadoff single in the ninth before Cris Carpenter came on for his fifth save.

The Rangers have won 10 of their last 12 while the Royals lost for the fourth time in five games.

Appier allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. He walked five and struck out six.

Texas took a 2-0 lead in the fourth on RBI singles by David Hulse and Oddibe McDowell.

Bob Hamelin's two-run, two-out double in the fifth tied it 2-2.

Braves ride Justice HR to 5-2 win over Astros

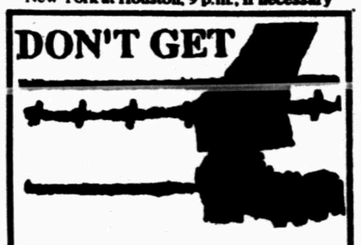

HOUSTON (AP) — David Justice hit a three-run homer Friday night, sending John Smoltz and the Atlanta Braves past the Houston Astros 5-2.

Smoltz (4-6) pitched three-hit ball for seven innings. He struck out seven and walked two. Greg McMichael pitched the ninth for his 14th save.

Justice connected with two outs in the fifth inning off Doug Drabek (8-3) for his eighth home run and a 5-0 lead. Drabek began the game with a 2.28 ERA.

Pinch-hitter Sid Bream had a two-run double in the Houston fifth.

Lightning triggers New Mexico fires

by The Associated Press

The flame-flanked town of Timberon remained evacuated for a third day as five lightning-caused New Mexico forest fires charred nearly 18,000 acres, injuring at least eight firefighters, authorities said.

A helicopter battling the Bridge Fire near Timberon went down Friday morning when its motor shut off, but nobody was hurt and the chopper sustained only minimal damage to its tail, Forest Service spokeswoman Peg Crim said.

No structures were immediately threatened by any of the fires. As of Friday night, Forest Service officials said the totals were:

—The Bridge Fire in the Lincoln National Forest near Timberon, 5,190 acres and more than 1,000 firefighting personnel.

—The Mule Creek Fire in the Gila National Forest along the Arizona state line, 5,500 acres, including 1,000 acres in Arizona.

—The Coffeepot Fire in the Cibola National Forest near Magdalena, 6,300 acres, 300 firefighters.

—The Ryan Fire, Cibola National Forest also near Magdalena, 640 acres, 100 firefighters.

Bible Questions & Answers

Homer Anderson

WHAT ARE THE BOOKS OF LAW?

The first five books of the Old Testament, written by Moses, are called the Pentateuch, from Pente, five and Teuchos, a volume. The word "Genesis" is from a word which means origin or beginning. "Exodus" is from a word meaning exit or departure. Leviticus is from "Levi," a son of Jacob, from whom the priests were descended. Numbers contains the history of the numbering of the children of Israel at two different times. Deuteronomy is from deuteros, second and nomos, law, and signifies "Second Law." It is not a second law, nor a new law, but a restating of the law given at Mount Sinai.

In the Pentateuch is the history of the creation, the flood that destroyed the wicked, the choosing of a special people, their development as a nation in Egypt, the wilderness, the giving of the law at Sinai, and the system of worship for the Patriarchal and Jewish Ages.

New neighbor

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Sex World porn shop has a new neighbor: the entertainer who used to be known as Prince.

The rock star — who changed his name to an unpronounceable symbol — bought a 107-year-old building that is sandwiched between Sex World and a restaurant in the city's Warehouse District.

He paid $185,000 for the four-story building, but there's no word yet on what he plans to do with it. He already owns one nightclub in the neighborhood, and there's speculation that he'll open a second.

"I think everybody thinks we're hiding something," said Kim Carlson, a consultant to the former Prince's Paisley Park Enterprises. "But we're not. We just don't have any immediate plans."

Senators Gramm, Hutchison rallying delegates in Texas

FORT WORTH (AP) — U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm told fellow Republicans Friday the party made mistakes in the 1992 presidential election that won't be repeated this year.

Gramm, who's considering a 1996 presidential bid, predicted that Republicans would win across the board because Texans are fed up with Democrats in Washington and Austin.

"I cannot wait until this election, until we give the Democrats a good, old-fashioned stomping," Gramm told the state GOP convention.

"I'm not just talking about an election. I'm talking about a crusade. Will you join this great crusade?" Gramm asked.

The second-term senator fired broadsides at both President Clinton and Texas Gov. Ann Richards.

"Ann Richards and the Democrats have raised our taxes, squandered our money, coddled criminals, filled up our streets with thousands of felons, destroyed the public schools ... and there are not enough shredding machines big enough in Austin to cover up that bad record," Gramm said.

In Austin, the governor said, "I didn't see these people during the legislative session. I didn't see them at the last legislative session. I didn't see them expressing any opinion on what ought to be done about crime or education or jobs, and suddenly now they are these last-minute experts."

Gramm said Republicans lost the White House in 1992 "because Bill Clinton and the Democrats confused people about who they were and what they wanted to do. And I believe that Bill Clinton is well on his way to solving that problem for us."

He said Clinton's record of raising taxes and pushing a national health care plan have angered many Americans.

"Today, when one half of the world is trying to escape socialized medicine, we are the only country on the planet that is trying to get into it," Gramm said.

The state's second senator, Kay Bailey Hutchison, told the convention she looks forward to her race against Democrat Richard Fisher, who two years ago served as an adviser to independent presidential candidate Ross Perot.

"My opponent never seems to be able to make up his mind. ... He supported Ross Perot against George Bush. Then he said he was helping Bill Clinton behind the scenes," she said.

"My opponent wants to go to Washington to support the president. I want to go to Washington to support Texas," she said.

At a convention dominated by social-issue conservatives and evangelical Christians, both senators said the party will find a big audience for its message of traditional family values.

Gramm said that while he would be offended by any religious litmus test for political candidates, "I am equally offended at those who seem to believe that if you do hold strong religious convictions, you ought to be precluded from the political process."

Book signing

DALLAS (AP) — Perhaps David Cassidy should title his next book, "C'mon, Get Lost."

A few hundred middle-aged fans came to Cassidy's book-signing Thursday, but the former Partridge family member didn't let anyone get too close.

He refused to sign anything but copies of his new book, "C'mon Get Happy." He wouldn't permit anyone behind his table to pose for photographs. And he insisted that autograph-seekers have their names written on Post-it notes so that he could copy them down.

Jury awards $10 million in malpractice case

DENTON (AP) — A woman who suffered brain damage from complications during childbirth was awarded $10 million in a malpractice suit against Denton Regional Medical Center.

A jury Friday found the hospital negligent but cleared the anesthesiologists who worked on Kathy LaCroix.

Mrs. LaCroix suffered irreparable brain damage from oxygen loss in January 1991 during the delivery of her daughter, Lawryn, by Caesarean section.

Her attorneys said the nurse-anesthetist and other medical personnel failed to properly treat her when she began having breathing problems and seizures and went into cardiac arrest.

"I think the message this jury has sent is this: the citizens of Denton County expect hospitals to provide top-quality medical care," said Michael Whitten, a LaCroix family attorney.

"They don't expect anesthesiology services to be provided by a nurse-anesthetist without an anesthesiologist supervising," he said.

Mrs. LaCroix's husband, Lawrence LaCroix, was in the operating room during the birth and repeatedly asked for help for his wife.

Doctors diagnosed her current condition as "moderate dementia" and said the once bright, ambitious career woman can never again live independently.

Jurors in the trial, which began April 4, rejected arguments that the anesthesiologists were negligent. Dr. Christian Green and Dr. Darius Pourzan provided anesthesiology services under contract to the Women's Pavilion at Denton Regional.

STATE OF TEXAS

To Juan Luna, and to all whom it may concern, Respondent(s):

You have been sued. You may employ an attorney. If you or your attorney do not file a written answer with the Clerk who issued this citation by 10:00 a.m. on the Monday next following the expiration of 20 days after you were served this citation and petition, a default judgement may be taken against you. The Petition of the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services, Petitioner, was filed in the 132nd District Court of Scurry County, Texas, on the 18th day of November, 1992, against Juan Luna, alleged or probable father, and/or unknown biological father, Respondent(s), under Cause No. 17,555, entitled "In the Interest of Vanessa Gomez and Natasha Gomez, Children." The suit requests to terminate the parent-child relationship. The date and place of birth of the child, who is the subject of the suit: Natasha Gomez, February 13, 1992, San Angelo, Tom Green County, Texas.

The Court has authority in this suit to enter any judgment or decree in the child's best interest which will be binding upon you, including the termination of the parent-child relationship, the determination of paternity, and the appointment of a conservator with authority to consent to the child's adoption.

Issued and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Snyder, Scurry County, Texas, this the 6th day of June, 1994.

Ten arrests keep local police busy

Snyder area peace officers were busy during the past 24 hours, making 10 arrests, including eight between midnight Friday and 4:30 Saturday morning.

Police were dispatched to the Twin Oaks Motel at 12:33 a.m. Saturday where they arrested a 24-year-old man for public intoxication and a 14-year-old boy for probation revocation. The youth was later released to his parents.

At 2:11 a.m. Saturday, officers arrested a 34-year-old man at 16th Street and U.S. Highway 84 for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated. Also arrested at the scene was a 31-year-old man for public intoxication.

Officers were requested in the 1800 block of College Avenue at 3:09 Saturday morning in reference to an assault. Police arrested a 38-year-old man for family violence.

Police arrested 25-year-old Jose Alfredo Benitez for felony driving while intoxicated and driving with a suspended license at 3:49 Saturday morning in the 1000 block of Avenue R.

At 4:20 a.m., officers arrested a 26-year-old woman and a 34-year-old man for public intoxication in the 400 block of 29th Street.

Officers made two arrests Friday, both on charges of assault/family violence. Taken into custody were a 33-year-old man at 7:25 p.m. at the Law Enforcement Center and a 25-year-old man at 11:59 p.m. in the 1700 block of Avenue R.

At 7:28 a.m. Friday, police were advised of a broken window at East Elementary. A report for Class B criminal mischief was filed.

A woman came to the police department at 9:46 a.m. Friday to complain that someone had stolen some food stamps from an apartment at the Park Village Apartments. A report for Class A theft was filed.

At 10:08 a.m. Friday, Troy Whetsel contacted police in reference to someone stealing a heater from 2101 Ave. M. A report for Class C theft was filed.

Anita Clinkinbeard contacted officers at 1:40 p.m. Friday in reference to someone damaging her son's pickup. A report for Class A criminal mischief was submitted.

Officers also took three complaints of family violence Friday evening. Two reports were taken from women coming to the police department at 8:14 and 8:48 p.m. The third followed a request for assistance in the 2900 block of Avenue L at 9 p.m.

Obituaries

Eva Turner

1901-1994

Graveside services have been set for 2 p.m. Sunday at Hillside Memorial Gardens for Eva Gladys Turner, 92, of Snyder.

Mrs. Turner died at 12:15 a.m. Saturday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

She was born Dec. 2, 1901, in Crews and had lived in Snyder since 1973. She was a member of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

Mrs. Turner was preceded in death by a daughter, Alta Lynch Holoman.

Surviving is a son-in-law, Bobby Holoman.

Wayne Warren

1928-1994

SWEETWATER — Services are set for 2 p.m. Sunday in the McCoy Funeral Home Chapel for Wayne Lavern Warren, 65, who died Friday at his home near Claytonville in Fisher County. Burial will follow in the Hobbs Cemetery.

He was the father of Stephen Warren of Snyder.

Born in Roby, Mr. Warren atended school in Barronview, Roby and Hobbs. He married Bertha Ratliff in 1947 in Sweetwater and was employed by the Hobbs Co-Op Gin for many years. A farmer and rancher, Mr. Warren was a member of the Lamar Street Baptist Church in Sweetwater.

Survivors include his wife, Bertha Warren of Claytonville; two other sons, Gill Warren of Andrews and Paul Warren of Logansport, La.; three sisters, Edna Benson of Sweetwater, Maggie Wiley of Lubbock and Florence Smith of Fort Worth; a brother, Floyd Warren of Yucipa, Calif.; 14 grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Edith Lincecum

1908-1994

BAIRD — Services were held Friday afternoon in the First Baptist Church for Edith M. Lincecum, 85, who died Wednesday at her home. Burial followed in the Ross Cemetery.

Mrs. Lincecum was a former resident of Scurry County and once operated a grocery store in Dunn.

Born in Cottonwood, she had lived in Baird for 52 years. Prior to her retirement, she was a receptionist at the Evans Clinic. A member of the First Baptist Church, she married Welborne Lincecum in 1925 in Oplin. He preceded her in death.

Survivors include two daughters, Billie Jean Wristen of Baird and Robbie Skinner of Bedford; two grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Undersecretary of State for political affairs Peter Tarnoff to talk about the sanctions push. Both agreed that punitive steps against the North are inevitable, officials said.

Lee, who also heads the Unification Board, said that South Korea would do its best to persuade China to agree on sanctions, the officials said.

Also Saturday, Japanese Foreign Minister Koji Kakizawa arrived in Seoul to discuss options in pushing for sanctions. Kakizawa is to head for Beijing to add Japan's voice to appeals that China not block the punitive measures.

China is North Korea's only major ally, and as a permanent member of the U.N. Security Council could veto a sanctions resolution.

But significantly, in the IAEA sanctions decision, China abstained in the vote to terminate about $250,000 worth of technical aid to North Korea.

June contest to begin now

Snyder Garden Club has begun its selection of Yard of the Month and Business of the Month for June.

Committee members are in the process of looking at yards and businesses throughout the designated contest area, and will announce the winners near the end of the month. A large and small yard and one business will be selected.

June's contest area is bordered on the north by the south side of 25th Street and Coliseum Drive and on the south by 37th Street from College Avenue to U.S. 84. The west boundry is the east side of College between 37th and 25th Streets. The area includes the Eastridge Addition and the area west and north of the traffic circle.

Chairperson for the month is Glenda Glasscock.

The Yard of the Month and Business of the Month projects are sponsored by Snyder Beautification Committee.

For Yard of the Month criteria, see Page 7B.

Financial reports a window into lives of U.S. lawmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers' yearly disclosure of their finances provides a captivating glimpse into their lives.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., reported that his ex-wife owes him $1 million from a divorce settlement in 1987.

Rep. Norm Sisisky, D-Va., got a rug worth $125 from the chief of staff of the Pakistani army.

Rep. Walter Tucker, D-Calif., received a $200 love offering after delivering a sermon at the Bread of Life Church, and another at the Antioch Missionary Baptist Church.

And royalties from a book on black congressional political history earned Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., $12,623 last year.

The disclosures were contained in personal financial statements released Friday by the House. The reports, required by law, list lawmakers' assets, liabilities, income and financial dealings in a broad range of value. The Senate is due to release its reports on Tuesday.

The papers show who are among the richest — Rep. Fred Upton, R-Mich., the Whirlpool appliance heir, who has more than $3 million in assets, and Rep. Amo Houghton, R-N.Y., of the Corning glass family, who owns more than $1 million in Corning, Inc., stock and a home worth more than $1 million. Rep. James H. Quillen, R-Tenn., listed well over $5 million of assets, including land, insurance agencies and municipal bonds.

And, again, Sisisky: He reported owning more than $1 million worth of stock in Coca-Cola and another $1-million-plus in Pepsico.

The reports also suggest who's among the poorest, including Rep. Bob Inglis, R-S.C., who listed little other than a small retirement account, and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., who appears to have a negative net worth because of two personal loans.

The disclosures showed that one of the most popular speakers in Congress was Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who spent 55 days on the road addressing groups from San Francisco to Minneapolis to Tampa. Most of the outings were sponsored by universities, foundations or women's groups.

Traditional foes unite as they try to save endangered bird

MIO, Mich. (AP) — It's enough to make a spotted owl green with envy: The timber industry, environmentalists and government regulators are working together to try to save an endangered bird called the Kirtland's warbler.

The same groups that have been at each other's throats over the habitat of the spotted owl have united to try to save the half-ounce, yellow-breasted warbler, also threatened by a shrinking habitat.

The endangered owl dwells in the Pacific Northwest's old-growth forests, where a 3-year-old logging ban cost thousands of jobs. A federal judge lifted the ban Tuesday.

By contrast, the warbler lives near young trees, nesting in the thick underbrush beneath stands of jack pines just 5 to 15 years old.

"They're very picky," biologist David Case said.

The pines start dying when they reach 16 to 20 feet, but by that time, they've choked the undergrowth.

Historically, wildfires preserved warbler habitat by destroying older trees. Heat from the fire bursts the pine cones and scatters their seeds, giving birth to a new generation of trees.

But as more people moved into the area, they fought the fires, disrupting the cycle and shrinking the bird's habitat.

As of last year, fewer than 1,000 of the warblers were known to exist — all within an eight-county area of Michigan's Lower Peninsula.

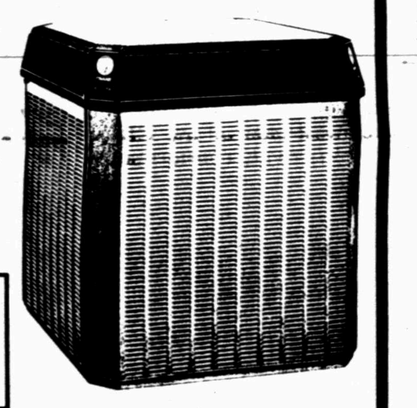

Now, state and federal agencies use controlled burns and clear-cutting to restore the habitat. Private logging companies cut the timber.

"The reason the Endangered Species Act is working in Michigan is one simple word — partnerships," said Charles Wooley, Kirtland's project leader for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"It is nice not to have the kinds of problems they've got in the Pacific Northwest," said Paul Call, raw materials manager for Weyerhauser Co.'s mill in nearby Grayling, which buys some of the pines harvested to bolster warbler habitat.

SNYDER, TEXAS

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

As a young girl growing up, Margaret Presswood played school and dreamed of becoming a teacher. During the past 32 years, she has accomplished that goal and many others.

After 17 years in the classroom, she eventually branched out into other areas of education including reading and curriculum consultant, principal and curriculum director. While all facets of education interest her, Margaret recently said she liked working with curriculum best.

However, even the best of associations eventually comes to an end. Thus, she decided to retire at the end of the 1993-1994 school year to pursue personal and family interests.

Margaret's "new life" may or may not include substitute teaching in the future. She has no plans now to do so, but won't go so far as to say "never." She noted that some retired teachers do return to the classroom on a part-time basis as substitutes.

While her husband, Lee, will continue as the principal at Northeast Elementary, Margaret said she will be devoting some time to cooking, gardening and browsing for antiques, an interest she only acquired recently.

The Presswoods moved to Snyder in 1979. Lee had been hired as the vice principal at the high school and Margaret joined the SISD staff as reading consultant for the elementary grades. She had earned her master's degree with a reading specialization a year earlier at Abilene Christian University.

She was interviewed by Dr. Tom Scannicchio, assistant superintendent in charge of curriculum and instruction. Dr. Scannicchio has also recently retired.

Her first year on the job, she primarily visited classrooms during reading periods and became acquainted with the teachers.

As she reflected, Margaret often praised Snyder teachers for being "hard workers and accepting of new concepts as well as help."

"I have always enjoyed working with Snyder teachers," Margaret said.

In those days, she said that the reading program was moving towards becoming more "skills oriented," a new approach in education.

FINAL DAY — Margaret Presswood, who has just retired as the director of curriculum and testing for Snyder Independent School District, recently cleaned out her office and packed her mementoes. She is looking forward to relaxing after spending the past 32 years in education. She joined the SISD as a reading consultant in 1979. (SDN Staff Photo)

Later, Margaret's duties were expanded to include curriculum consultant for all the elementary subjects. Primarily, though, she said her focus was on math and language arts.

In the 1980s, she attended workshops about "effective schools," a term she said that is not used very much now.

During this period, she was also working towards her supervision certificate at Texas Tech University. Since she was "so close" to earning her mid-management degree she chose to pursue that at Tech as well.

Now qualified for administrative work, Margaret temporarily left curriculum and reading consulting to assume the role of assistant principal at the junior high, a job she performed for three years beginning in 1988.

As assistant principal, her main duties were discipline and textbook selection. She also kept track of students' absences and tardiness and worked with the principal on the junior high curriculum.

In 1991, Margaret who by then had decided that "curriculum" was my favorite area" was hired as the director of curriculum and testing, replacing Janice Brown who moved to Odessa.

The advent of TAAS, Texas' mandated achievement test, put "greater demands" on the teachers, Margaret said. At one time, the state also required NAPT Tests (Norm Reference Assessment Program for Texas.)

She ordered, distributed and collected the tests, and coordinated teacher training for the tests as well as the budget for her department.

In 1992-1993, Snyder took part in a state-sponsored field TAAS test in science and social studies. This past school year, Snyder also participated in a field test for end-of-course tests in both algebra I and biology I.

Though she isn't sure about what will happen, Margaret said the state seems to be moving toward requiring end-of-course tests.

She noted that these tests are part of the numerous changes she has witnessed in education.

"The state is beginning to hold individual campuses accountable for student performances. We are already there and it will be even more so next school year," she added.

Margaret said that the accountability movement began some five years ago. She expects other changes in the area of testing, too.

"Snyder teachers have always felt responsible and accountable for themselves and their students," she noted. "Snyder teachers will feel the pressure, but will rise to the occasion. They work hard and do a good job."

When asked to pinpoint what she liked best about being curriculum director, she cited "working with the teachers." She explained that each summer Snyder teachers meet to write the curriculum for the next school year.

About five years after the Presswoods moved to Snyder, the state began to "require schools to write out their objectives." But Snyder teachers "went beyond" and included the state's essential elements in their curriculum planning, she noted.

Today, she said the state is pushing for more "hands on" experience in the classroom.

What she will miss the most is "watching students learn." As curriculum director she was not always able to observe students in the classroom, something she always enjoyed as a teacher.

In 32 years, Margaret has outlined the four major changes she has witnessed in education.

—Reading has progressed from being skills-oriented to the whole language approach.

—Schools are returning to the concept where all subjects are being related to each other.

—The focus is now on standardized tests which occur more regularly than the tests given in February in previous decades.

—Technology in the classroom has grown by leaps and bounds. Next school year, Snyder's first grade rooms will also have computers with CD roms.

More students are served this way and teachers are becoming more comfortable with computers, she noted.

The technology oriented courses will allow more high school students to enter the work force, she said.

Special students also receive more help now, Margaret added.

Margaret was raised in Anton. Her father farmed and her mother was a housewife. Influenced by an English teacher, Margaret said she always wanted to become a teacher and be like "Mrs. Greer, who really made literature come alive in the classroom."

She began classes at Hardin-Simmons University but dropped out before finishing so she could have her family. Living in Knox City when she decided to finish her degree requirements, Margaret commuted to Hardin-Simmons in a car pool. She then lacked 36 hours including student teaching.

When her son, Vernon Lee, was 2½ months old she earned her undergraduate degree and moved to Odessa where she taught ninth grade English and eighth grade speech from 1962-1965. After her husband obtained his masters at Sul Ross University, they moved to Comanche in 1966 where she taught seventh grade language arts for 10 years.

After Margaret received her master's in education with a specialization in reading at Abilene Christian University, they moved to Merkel and she taught secondary English at Trent. She said she enjoyed the small classes very much.

When Margaret began her teaching career she had no plans to become a consultant. But as opportunities presented themselves she decided to take advantage of them.

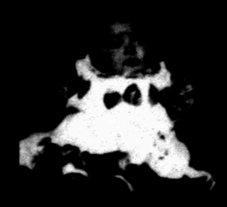

Margaret is a life member of the Texas State Teachers Association, a member of the Texas Elementary Principals Association, the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, and the Zeta Lambda Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma Society International.

The Presswoods have two children, Margie Virchis lives in Anchorage, Alaska and Vernon Lee recently graduated from Texas State Technical College in Sweetwater. He served as a medic in the Persian Gulf War.

Margie has been trained as a bilingual teacher but is not presently working. Her husband is an X-ray technologist with Providence Hospital in Anchorage.

The Presswoods have a year-old grandson in Anchorage and a granddaughter who lives in Germany.

In formal ceremony...

Comer, Daily marry

EASTLAND — Christi Camille Comer and Darrell Irvin Daily were united in marriage in a formal candlelight ceremony on June 4 in the First Baptist Church in Eastland. The Rev. Tom Goodman, pastor of the church, officiated.

Background for the ceremony was formed by a 15-tiered candelabra archway flanked by twin nine-branch candelabra and enhanced by greenery and black and silver bows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Comer of Cuero, formerly of Snyder. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Daily of Center Point.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a fitted gown of white satin and Alencon lace with a sweetheart neckline and pouf sleeves and adorned with hand-beaded lace and sequins. The full skirt dropped from a V-waistine and swept into an oval cathedral length train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was attached to a bandeau of satin, seed pearls and crystalline leaves and iridescents. She carried a cascade bouquet of calla lilies and stephanotis.

Cami Comer of Cuero was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Maria Cantu, Cindi Tate, both of Austin, and Tonya Hargrove of Burnet. They were attired in soft black daytime sheaths with short organza pouf sleeves, flat pleated satin bows at the shoulders, and square necklines. Matching grosgrain pumps completed their ensembles and each carried a single long-stemmed calla lily.

Best man was Donnie Daily of Amarillo, twin brother of the groom. Dennis Daily of Center Point, another brother, Charles White of Eastland and Eugene Wilton of Fort Worth were groomsmen.

MRS. DARRELL IRVIN DAILY

Miss Kailey Howell of Coleman, flower girl, wore a tea length black and white checked ensemble with a full scalloped hemline. Ringbearer was Attis Comer of Lubbock, cousin of the bride. Carrie and Danny Duckworth, niece and nephew of the bridegroom of Center Point, were candlelighters.

Mother of the bride chose a cranberry crinkle crepe tea length ensemble accented with pearls and rhinestones. The mother of the groom wore a pale pink tea length gown with a lace overlay of pastel hues. Their corsages were designed of cymbidium orchids.

Sherri Shiller of Arlington presided at the registration table which featured a picture of the couple in a crystal frame, accented by square brass and etched glass candleholders with lighted votive candles.

A reception was held following the ceremony in Carlton Hall at the church. Four individual bride's cakes were displayed on tiers of a wrought iron tree which was enhanced by fresh calla lilies and greenery. The bride's bouquet completed the table decor.

Groom's table featured chocolate cake and chocolate covered strawberries served with coffee. Cake was topped with an original bridal couple fashioned from strawberries dipped in white chocolate.

Members of the house party included: Mary Davis of Silverton, Doris Dudley of Tulia, and Jeanne Graham of Lovington, N.M., aunts of the bride, Joani Duckworth and Cathy Jacobs of Center Point, sisters of the bridegroom, Stephanie Daily of Amarillo, a sister-in-law, and friends Kathy Howell of Coleman and Karen Hughes of Eastland.

Following the couple's honeymoon trip to Branson, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Daily live in Eastland where they coach and teach in the Eastland schools.

CARPET DONATION — Sharon Goodwin, Scurry County Museum employee, stands in the area where records of the Dept. of Commerce and Labor, Division of Naturalization, are kept. Trust partner and win

How do you view trust? To my mind, it is one of the most important attributes in a marriage. If the spouses don't trust each other completely, they might as well pack up and head to the divorce court.

Also, as Harold Macmillan, former prime minister of Great Britain, said, "A man who trusts nobody is apt to be the kind of man nobody trusts."

In bridge, it is important to trust your partner. When something weird happens, it is comforting to know that you can rely on your partner's bidding or play. Then you have a better chance of correctly working out the position.

In today's deal, cover the East and South hands. Against four hearts, you, West, lead the spade four. East wins with the ace and returns the club seven: eight, ace, two. Should you switch to the diamond jack or give partner a club ruff? Why?

North's three-spade cue-bid showed a hand worth a high-card raise to four hearts.

After a spade to the ace and a club to the ace, West saw that if his partner could ruff the next club, it would be the third defensive trick. Where was number four? Surely it could only be the diamond ace. But if partner had the diamond ace and a singleton club, he would have cashed the diamond ace before leading his club, to clarify the situation.

So West switched to the diamond jack at trick three, defeating the contract by two tricks.

Note that if West leads a club at trick three, declarer will come home with an overtrick: a difference of "only" three tricks.

Ask Dave

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Baseball star Dave Winfield answers kids' questions about baseball and life in "Ask Dave," a collection of the best of his nationally distributed "Ask Dave" newspaper column.

The 102-page paperback (Andrews and McMeel, $7.95) contains Winfield's answers to questions about personal milestones, such as his 3,000th hit and winning the 1992 World Series. The book also contains photos of Winfield, plus three collector cards.

TO WED IN CASTROVILLE — Plans are set for an 8 p.m., June 25 marriage of Buffi Michele Highfield and Jeffrey Wayne Wooldridge, both of San Angelo. The ceremony will be held in the Landmark Inn, State Historic Site, in Castroville. Buffi is the granddaughter of Tommy and Mary Pherigo and the great-granddaughter of Mrs. T.M. Pherigo, all of Snyder. (Contributed Photo)

Capitol Hill debates rural health care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health care needs of rural Americans must not be ignored as Congress debates reform of the nation's health system, say lawmakers from rural areas.

Texas Congressman Charles Stenholm and Kansas Congressman Pat Roberts used an appearance Thursday before the House Agriculture Committee to unveil a package of reforms they have drafted to improve health care delivery in rural communities.

"Recognizing that we are just one small piece of the larger health reform picture, we nonetheless have felt that during this period of reform it is absolutely critical that the concerns and needs of rural America be heard, respected and responded to," said Stenholm.

Regardless of which health care plan ultimately is approved by Congress, the rural provisions should be included, he and Roberts stressed.

"We cannot afford to pass a national health care reform plan that does not take into account the special needs of the rural health delivery system," Roberts said. "Rural folks deserve access to the same quality health care as those living in urban areas."

Stenholm and Roberts, who are leaders in the 151-member House Rural Health Care Coalition, said their blueprint would help communities find their own solutions to the rural health care crisis.

Many rural communities nationwide face shortages of health care providers, hospitals and clinics, with many residents having to drive long distances in search of medical care.

At an afternoon hearing of the Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee, Vermont Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy said the current debate over health care reform means little to those who lack access to regular health care services.

"Having a great prenatal care benefit is meaningless to a woman living in an area without a provider trained in obstetrical care," he said.

The Stenholm-Roberts plan would:

— Help rural hospitals and health clinics, in part by increasing funding for community and migrant health center programs; developing regional emergency care networks; and improving air transport to specialized facilities in medical emergencies.

The bill would also give rural hospitals greater access to specialists in other areas, by expanding the rural facilities' use of telecommunications.

— Seek to increase the number of physicians practicing in rural areas by increasing funding for the National Health Service Corps, and broadening the definitions used by the Corps to determine which areas are most deserving of health care personnel.

— Boost the number of primary care physicians by deferring student loans for interns and residents who enter primary care training programs; and increasing the federal reimbursement for rural physicians' services.

The legislation would be funded by making affluent senior citizens pay more for some of their Medicare premiums, generating more than $4 billion over five years. Stenholm said the affluence test would apply to two percent of those receiving Medicare.

The Part B Medicare payments, which cover doctor bills and out-of-hospital expenses, would be increased for individuals making over $100,000 a year or couples with incomes of more than $125,000.

Stenholm expressed hope that ruaa lawmakers will be able to forge a coalition with inner-city lawmakers to pass the legislation, saying many of its provisions would help impoverished urban areas as well.

Of the rigs running this week, 410 were exploring for natural gas, 326 for oil and 16 were listed as miscellaneous.

World bank oks loans to Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico will be able to tackle some of its most pressing environmental problems with $918 million in loans from the World Bank.

The bank's board approved the three loans Thursday, in the first payout of an agreement signed last year providing Mexico up to $1.8 billion over the next three years for environmental protection.

"The Mexican government is committed to rapid and effective progress in upgrading environmental enforcement and reversing past damage," said David de Ferranti, chief of the World Bank's Mexico division. "These three new projects will be a major building block in helping them do that."

The loans, to be disbursed over eight years, will be supplemented by $1 billion committed by the Mexican government to environmental infrastructure improvements.

The three loans are:

—$368 million for the Northern Border Environment Project, to help border cities improve their management of the environment and enforcement of environmental protection laws. Five or six of the border's 27 cities, yet to be selected, also will receive funds for water treatment and sanitation, solid and hazardous waste management, air quality and transportation improvements. The government will provide $394 million toward the project.

"The investment could well have a beneficial impact on the U.S. side," de Ferranti said.

Some $15 million of the World Bank money will be earmarked for creation of ecologically important reserves contiguous to protected areas on the U.S. side. The Mexican government has agreed to create preserves across from Big Bend National Park in West Texas; along the Mexican Gulf Coast extending protection for the Laguna Madre, shielded on the U.S. side by Padre Island; and across from Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument in Arizona.

—$350 million, to be matched by the Mexican government, to improve water and sanitation services across Mexico, particularly in poorer areas. Intestinal diseases, linked to unsafe water and lack of sanitation, ranked as the principal cause of death in Mexico in 1990.

—$200 million for improvement of solid-waste services in 23 medium-size cities that are home to 11 million residents. The World Bank estimates that only 15 percent of the waste generated annually is disposed of properly, in part because of the absence of sanitary landfills.

The World Bank is training much of its attention in Mexico on environmental protection as the pace of industrialization and urbanization quickens, said Javed Burki, the institution's vice president for Latin America and the Caribbean.

"Environmental considerations in Mexico should take precedence over everything else because of the structural change in the economy," Burki said.

The funding isn't linked to the border infrastructure improvement projects the United States and Mexico have committed to perform as part of the North American Free Trade Agreement.

But de Ferranti said the World Bank has been in "close touch" with officials of the North American Development Bank, which will funnel up to $3 billion in NAFTA-related government and private money for border cleanup projects.

Is hernia surgery only option?

DEAR DR. GOTT: A year ago I was diagnosed with an inguinal hernia that I ultimately had repaired. Last week my family doctor said I have another weakness in the wall and I will develop a hernia within a year or two. Other than avoiding heavy lifting, he gave no direction. Are there exercises I can do to strengthen the muscles, or is it too late and is surgery again unavoidable?

DEAR READER: In the male embryo, the testicles develop in the abdominal cavity and descend through channels called the "inguinal canals," into the scrotum at the time of birth. Ordinarily, the inguinal canals close and fuse shut after the testicles descend.

However, as men age and their tissues sag, one or the other inguinal canal may open and stretch, allowing a portion of the intestine (or intestinal covering) to herniate (protrude) into the canal, perhaps even into the scrotum itself.

Such inguinal hernias are common. They cause a soft lump, which may occasionally be painful, to appear in the groin. Small hernias do not need treatment. However, they tend to enlarge. Then a "knuckle" of intestine can become strangulated (wedged) in the canal.

Because of swelling and pressure, this "knuckle" may be deprived of its blood supply; emergency surgery becomes a necessity to prevent gangrene of the bowel and other serious complications.

This constant and unpredictable threat of strangulation makes many men with inguinal hernias opt to have the weakness repaired before an emergency operation is required.

The surgery is relatively easy but has one drawback: The hernia may recur. Evidently, this is what happened to you. If your doctor is correct, your inguinal canal is once again weakening; with time, you may develop a hernia.

Repeat surgery is not a necessary option at this time. You can safely wait until a hernia appears. If you avoid heavy lifting and straining, you may not need surgery for years, because these activities accelerate the development of a hernia.

Unfortunately, there are no exercises or treatments that will strengthen the inguinal canal. You and your doctor should periodically monitor the situation and make a decision about surgery if and when the time is appropriate.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

A couple of months ago I wrote a column about collective nouns. In particular, I listed some nouns for medical specialists. Because the game was fun, I asked that you readers send me your suggestions.

Well, folks, you really outdid yourselves. Now, after collecting your various submissions, I'm doing a follow-up column. More precisely, I am herewith recording the Definitive List of Medical Nouns.

For some categories, I received more than 50 entries, so I've taken the best and, in most cases, listed more than one choice: I've also included my original nouns.

An (itch, wheal, patch) of allergists.

A (whiff, bag, mask) of anesthesiologists.

A (murmur, prolapse, flutter) of cardiologists.

A (pile, ream, butt, caboose, hind, phew) of colo-rectal surgeons.

A (rash, salve) of dermatologists.

A (triage, litter, stat, code) of emergency room physicians.

A (secretion, hyper) of endocrinologists.

A (clan, kindred, reunion, brood) of family physicians.

A (belch, craw, bolus) of gastroenterologists.

A (creak, limp) of gerontologists.

A (clot, pool, scab) of hematologists.

A (curiosity, allopathy, introspection, extravagance, enigma, query) of internists.

A (helix, genesis, chain, trait, dominance) of medical geneticists.

A (squall, bundle) of neonatologists.

A (piddle, colic) of nephrologists.

A (stroke, cortex, lobe) of neurologists.

A (ganglia, ego, burr, convolution) of neurosurgeons.

A (fusion, fission, radiance, rad, scan, overdose, tracer) of nuclear medicine specialists.

A (prod, handful, dilation) of obstetricians/gynecologists.

A (growth, mass) of oncologists.

A (glance, sighting, glimpse) of ophthalmologists.

A (bite, bridge, extraction) of oral surgeons.

A (cast, knit, pin) of orthopedic surgeons.

A (snort, drip, sniffle, phlegm, swab) of otolaryngologists.

A (slice, cross-section, gross) of pathologists.

A (cacophony, brood, tot) of pediatricians.

A (brace, crutch, cycle) of physiatrists.

A (tuck, snip, implant, sag) of plastic surgeons.

A (compliance, breath, wheeze) of pulmonologists.

A (caution, apple, outbreak, forethought) of preventive medicine specialists.

A (craze, couch, shrink) of psychiatrists.

A (ray, negative, peek) of radiologists.

A (hobble, misery, balm) of rheumatologists.

A (stitch, resection, slice) of surgeons.

A (bleb, swallow, ribcage) of thoracic surgeons.

A (pool, sprinkling, tinkle, specimen, void) of urologists.

A (bypass, pulse) of vascular surgeons.

That's it. I'm sorry I can't print the amusing, off-color choices, but this is a family newspaper. Thanks to all of you who took the time to write in your suggestions.

Raising a ruckus in name of victory for GOP

By Jill Lawrence
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Kristol's strategy to restore his battered Republican Party is taking an incendiary turn this month. He's inviting prominent party members to slug it out publicly on abortion and family values.

Highlighting deep divisions is not an obvious recipe for victory, but it is a proven one. Consider the Democratic Leadership Council, the centrist rebels who gave the liberal party establishment fits until they produced a sheaf of voter-friendly ideas and Bill Clinton to extol them.

Kristol, chairman of the 5-month-old Project for the Republican Future, was serious enough about following the DLC model that he sought guidance from its founders.

Criticize, analyze, theorize and don't shy away from a fight, advised the DLC veterans whose influence is reflected today in Clinton's positions on crime, defense, trade and welfare.

It's the part about conflict that Kristol seems to have taken to heart.

One of his first acts was advising Republicans to deny there is a health care crisis — Clinton's primary argument for health care reform. The result was a mini-furor and a suitably splashy baptism for the new provocateurs.

Since then, Kristol has issued a barrage of health strategies and policy options; dispensed advice on how to handle the Whitewater and Paula Jones issues (with restraint); circulated a new abortion position for the GOP (return control to the states and scrap the platform's call for a constitutional ban); and scheduled forums this month on his party's chief vulnerabilities: domestic policy, abortion and family values.

"You don't want to have differences swept under the rug and suddenly have huge fights in 1996," says Kristol. "It's very useful to have these debates now."

The DLC's goal was to nudge Democrats toward moderate stands with middle-class appeal. The Project for the Republican Future aims for a broader, more practical brand of conservatism, minus religious overtones.

"We are not the kinds of conservative activists who just want to make a fuss," Kristol says. "We want to develop a winning conservative strategy. That does imply getting votes from people who haven't read all the same books and magazine articles that you have."

GOP policy groups have proliferated since the 1992 election. Republican National Chairman Haley Barbour says that's healthy "as long as they are not antagonistic toward each other."

Barbour also notes that the party's National Policy Forum has heard from 177,000 people at 60 sessions around the country. "They're not here for Washington consumption," he says of those hearings. "We've been out listening to America."

Kristol takes a different tack. His first forum, on domestic policy, pitted Empower America director Vin Weber — a former congressman — against former Bush administration budget director Richard Darman.

For 60 years, Weber said, the GOP has been unable to stop government growth or win public support for its domestic agenda. Empowerment — giving people choices in housing, education and other areas — addresses both problems, he said.

Empowerment, countered Darman, is a meaningless slogan doomed to breed cynicism by delivering less than it promises. It's too expensive to do right, he said, yet too puny to address huge societal problems. "You need an exciting vision," Darman lectured.

Judge orders man to hang victims' photos in jail cell

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who was convicted of driving while intoxicated in a case stemming from a fatal traffic accident has been ordered by a judge to hang a photograph of his victims in his prison cell.

State District Judge Ted Poe Thursday sentenced Manuel Lopez, 22, to 10 years in prison, the maximum allowed in Texas for drunken drivers who kill.

Poe said Lopez "eliminated a family" when he collided head-on with a car whose occupants were on their way to church March 26.

Julian Luviano, 31, and his wife Gloria, 25, were killed. Their 5-year-old daughter, Amy, suffered a broken arm and pelvis, and their son, Julian Jr. 4, still in Hermann Hospital, is paralyzed and cannot breathe on his own.

Prosecutor Kelly Siegler said Lopez had been drinking all night and into the morning of March 26 when, after only one hour of sleep, he got behind the wheel to take a friend to work.

Luviano was taking his wife and two children to church around 10 a.m. when Lopez tried to pass another car in Galena Park and collided with the Luvianos' car.

Officials said Lopez's blood-alcohol level was 0.27 percent. The level at which drivers in Texas are considered intoxicated is 0.10 percent.

Poe accepted Lopez's guilty plea of involuntary manslaughter, then sentenced him to 10 years in prison.

After September, offenders like Lopez will face up to 20 years, Poe said, but in the interim something was needed to help Lopez "understand the consequences of his actions. I'm not sure that he realizes that yet."

The judge said that though Lopez apologized for what happened, his courtroom demeanor suggested otherwise.

Lopez, an undocumented worker from Mexico, was in Houston only a few months when he was arrested for driving drunk. He had been on probation for only 39 days after being convicted on that charge when the fatal accident occurred.

The photograph of the Luviano family in his cell should serve as a daily reminder of the magnitude of his actions, said Poe.

"He needs to see the people whose lives that he took," the judge said.

The judge ruled that Lopez' vehicle was a deadly weapon, meaning he will have to serve half of his sentence before being considered for parole.

Poe also said he would formally request that the parole board not grant Lopez early release and ordered that a photo of the family be sent to the board along with Lopez's file.

"I think (the photo) is a good idea. The defendant has a son around the same age as Julian and maybe when he looks at it, it will hit home," the prosecutor said.

Defense lawyer Ricardo Rodriguez, said there was no real defense for his client and that Lopez "realizes the wrongfulness of his acts and is anxious to pay his debt."

He likely will be deported as soon as he is released from prison, Rodriguez said.

"He told me personally he would think about the family every day of his life and pray for their souls," the attorney said.

"He will be reminded of them every day of his life, with or without the picture."

Poe is known for his unusual sentences.

Last month, he ordered a child molester to put a sign on the front door of his home for the next 20 years warning children to stay away.

Loses lawsuit

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A woman who claimed she was injured in an auto accident involving Jessica Lange lost a $250,000 lawsuit against the actress.

A Circuit Court jury Thursday rejected the claim by 37-year-old Laura J. Douglas, who said she suffered chronic upper back and neck problems in the 1993 wreck between her car and one driven by Lange.

Never a dull moment on planet USA

By Joseph Spear

Random thoughts and observations: The Curmudgeon has a lot on his mind today, but it's all a-jumble. He'll do his best to leave you with some provocative things to chew on, but forgive him if his thoughts stray....

Did you read where the cable television executives are upset about sagging profits brought on by the cable re-regulation bill Congress passed in 1992?

Since 1986, these modern robber barons have been operating as an unregulated monopoly and pocketing outrageous earnings at the expense of hapless consumers, whose bills shot up 10 to 20 percent a year. Now the Federal Communications Commission is limiting their profits to reasonable levels and they are teed-off.

Cable executives recently had their annual convention in New Orleans and judging from news reports, they believe the industry is on the verge of ruin. Profits are down, investment in new technology is off, the advent of the 500-channel system has been delayed. You're going have to live with 60 channels a little longer folks. Hope you can hack it.

Should we be crying for cable TV? Before answering, let's review a 1993 memo written by an officer of TCI Cable Management Corp., a subsidiary of the nation's largest cable operator:

"I want to remind each of you that the transaction charges for upgrades, downgrades, customer-caused service calls, VCR hook-ups, ect., are vital new revenue sources for us. By charging for these functions, we can recover almost half of what we're losing from rate adjustments.... We cannot be dissuaded from these charges simply because customers object. It will take awhile, but they'll get used to it.... The best news of all is now we can blame the charges on regulation and the government. Let's take advantage of it."

Should we cry for cable? When polar bears prowl hell....

We've been hearing a lot about "Generation X," the disillusioned twentysomethings whose minds were molded by "The Simpsons" and who are now entering an economy and a social structure they view as inferior to those enjoyed by their parents. But what about Generation Y, or whatever you want to call the population bulge behind the X's? How will a bunch of kids raised on "Beavis and Butt-Head" rule the world?

No way to know, but here's a hint: High school students in North Carolina and New York state recently filed lawsuits to force their school districts to quit making them participate in community volunteer programs. Such practices are tantamount to involuntary servitude, they say.

Another hint: According to a recent Washington Post article, many schoolteachers have quit assigning homework because their students refuse to do it.

From Woe-Is-Us to Don't-Bother-Us in a few short years....

Just thought you'd like to know June is National Accordion Awareness Month. Also National Dreamwork Month. You are encouraged to keep a "dream journal" to help you recognize how the conscious mind is influenced by the subconscious....

Do you know that the federal government spent a mere $277,000 on pickle research in 1993? Thomas Jefferson would be appalled. "On a hot day in Virginia," he once wrote, "I know of nothing more comforting that a fine spiced pickle, brought up trout-like from the sparkling depths of that aromatic jar below the stairs in Aunty Sally's cellar."

A white supremacist on trial in Florida for the murder of a prostitute filed motions asking that he be permitted to wear a Ku Klux Klan robe and to have his name changed to "Hi Hitler." Seems our little neo-Nazi, previously convicted of murdering and raping a 10-year-old girl, was under the impression that when the Fuhrer's followers screamed "Heil Hitler," they were actually saying "Hi Hitler."...

As 19th century German poet and journalist Heinrich Heine once wrote of an ambassadorial appointee, "Ordinarily he is insane, but he has lucid moments when he is only stupid."

Punishment should fit crime, not age

By Joseph Perkins

I read the news this week, oh boy.

In Cleveland, Tenn., 17-year-old Shannon Blaylock went on trial for the rape and robbery of his former foster mother.

She was stripped, bound, burned with cigarettes, repeatedly raped and shot in the leg.

In Griffin, Ga., six boys, ages 11 to 14, appeared before a juvenile court judge on charges of raping a 9-year-old girl. She was picking berries when she was attacked.

It might be something of a comfort if these depraved acts were an aberration, if the juveniles involved were unusually bad seeds. But youth violence is occurring with increasing frequency throughout the country. America has an epidemic on its hands.

FBI statistics bear this out. Between 1987 and 1991, the number of juveniles arrested for such violent crimes as rape, robbery, aggravated assault and homicide increased 50 percent.

The ominous trend owes to a number of factors, the most significant of which are that more and more kids are packing firearms — viewing their weapons almost as fashion accessories — and more are involved with drugs. Indeed, over the past decade, the number of juveniles arrested for gun-related murder increased by 80 percent. The youth arrest rate for sale or use of such hard drugs as heroin and cocaine skyrocketed 700 percent.

Lawmakers in both Washington and state capitals have fallen all over themselves this election year to pass legislation proving to voters that they are getting tougher on crime. But neither the federal crime bill nor the various "three strikes" and related bills that assorted state legislatures have ginned up will make a dent in juvenile crime.

That's because youthful offenders rarely pass through the adult criminal justice system. Most are tried in juvenile courts, which treat even the most hardened, unrepentant, inveterate young criminals as thought they are reclamation projects for some latter-day Father Flanagan.

But that's old-think. Juvenile delinquency today is not about fist fights or joy rides in stolen cars or vandalizing property. It's about drive-by shootings and carjackings and gang rapes and murdered tourists. The juvenile justice system has yet to evolve to reflect these changes in the severity of youth crimes.

About the only "get tough" measure federal and state lawmakers have taken to address youth crime is the creation of boot camps. If a kid is underage and maims or even kills someone, he's sentenced to push-ups at 5 o'clock in the morning. Sorry, but that hardly seems a deterrent to youth violence.

If lawmakers insist on throwing money at boot camps, they need to target the right juveniles. It does little good to send violent young offenders to a camp. They require a stronger punishment.

But a month or two of boot camp could do some good for the kids who commit nonviolent offenses. It would be a happy medium between caning and the slap on the wrist that they now receive.

As to violent youth, laws need to be enacted that will make them think twice about preying on the innocent. It seems reasonable, for instance, that juveniles who commit violent crimes be tried as adults. Such a reform is favored by 73 percent of the American public.

As it is now, many young offenders are well aware they will receive lenient treatment in juvenile court no matter how loathsome their crime. They will be far more circumspect if they know that they will be tried and sentenced as an adult if they commit adult crimes.

In a similar vein, there is no reason that all juvenile court proceedings should remain closed to the public and the criminal records of all young offenders remain confidential. It may be reasonable to protect the privacy of juveniles who commit nonviolent acts. But if a youth is arrested for a violent crime, he deserves no special privacy.

Moreover, those who may come in contact with the youth — classmates, teachers, neighbors, employers — have a right to know about the youth's criminal background so that they can take proper precaution. America is plagued with youth violence because the juvenile justice system continues to treat young offenders with kid gloves.

We will continue to read weekly reports of underage rapes and robberies and assault and murders until lawmakers finally get around to enacting some reforms.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Over the years I've addressed a number of serious issues in this column, problems which cry out for a solution or, at the very least, contemplation. This weekend I'd like to discuss something that's really been on my mind lately: the cancellation of "Star Trek: the Next Generation."

All right, so it's not going to be making the newsmagazine show circuit anytime soon; so our congressmen and women won't be making speeches on it; so Oprah hasn't noticed; so what? The quality of my life will be diminished (no man is an island), and I say Bah, Humbug! to the powers that be at Paramount who made such a disastrous decision.

What were they thinking?

Tell me where they're going to find another actor of the calibre of Patrick Stewart! The first time he opened his mouth I was smitten. Trained in classical Shakespearean theatre in his native England, with a voice that would ring the rafters in any revival meeting tent, I tell you, he can make a busted gasket seem spellbinding.

Last year, TV Guide did a survey. They asked readers if they'd rather depend on Captain Kirk (William Shatner) or Captain Picard (Stewart) to save their fannies in an emergency. To my great shock, they overwhelmingly favored Captain Kirk.

C'mon! That guy's nothing without Spock!

This year, Steven Spielberg introduced a new program which was supposed to be a sort of "Star Trek" under water: "Seaquest DSV." Yet the show bombed in the ratings. Why?

Elementary my dear Watson, IT'S WRITING, STUPID! Hollywood is all the time casting big stars in stinkers and wondering why. IT'S WRITING, STUPID! You can tell quality writing when you see it on the screen because you take something away from it with you; it resonates, vibrates in the mind, leaves you thinking. On the surface, it's an exciting story; underneath, it's a brain teaser dealing with the great themes that have occupied mankind since the days of mythology and epic poetry.

You can't make a quality program with every fancy special effect known to man if you don't have quality writing, and "Star Trek, the Next Generation" has some of the finest writing on television today. The final two-hour episode itself was a brilliant finesse of the best in science fiction and wonderful characterization between Captain Picard and his old nemesis, "Q."

But, they keep doing it. Thinking they can take something fine and pass off a cheap imitation. Consider that syndicated copycat, "Deep Space Nine."

Bor-ing.

I mean, how many confrontations can we have between the Bajorans and the Cardassians? Plus, they're a space station, so they never go anywhere like "Next Generation" does. They don't explore new worlds, discover new life forms, stave off interplanetary war, or save mankind. If it wasn't for Quark, I wouldn't watch it at all. He's such an unabashed capitalist that it's refreshing and fun. But he's the bartender, not the commander or head of security, so here we go back to the Bajorans and the Cardassians.

Everything about "New Generation" is magic, from the chemistry between the ship's crew to the enigmatic barkeep played by Whoopi Goldberg to the maddening appearances by "Q."

Keep in mind, I'm normally not a sci-fi fan. I don't read it or keep up with the trends. And I'm not a Trekkie. I haven't bought the book on how to speak Klingon. I don't dress up like a Romulan and attend conventions.

But I do appreciate true quality when I see it. I admire freshness, creativity, innovation and stand-out singularity. In the waves and washes of sitcoms and lawyer shows, it's a real treat to have something to genuinely look forward to each week, even if you do have to stay up 'til 10:30 on Sunday night — something that, for a whole hour, takes your mind off every single boring detail of your daily life, takes you, in fact...to a whole new universe...takes you to a place that leaves you with a sense of wonder.

NOW what'm I gonna do? I ask you.

Reunion thanks

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to say a big thanks to Aline Parks, Daton McCarter, Lavern Herring, Noville Johnson, June McGlaun and her docents. Also, the chamber of commerce for the packets and to all the merchants that gave door prizes. Also to the Local Yokels band and to Reta's for a great lunch.

Thanks to every one who had a part in the Dermott School reunion.

Thanks a lot,
Texa Myers Ball

Astro-graphs By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sunday, June 12, 1994

In the year ahead, you might find yourself to be more daring and enterprising than you have been in the past. This could be a marvelous asset, provided you don't become reckless or foolish.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're counting on others to do for you today things that you should take care of yourself, you could be barking up the wrong tree. Be self-reliant and responsible. Gemini, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Even though material conditions could be improving for you, this does not give you license to be wasteful or extravagant. Don't spend now what you might need later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might be a shade too opinionated for your own good. You may feel you're impressing others, and you are — but in the wrong way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) There is a possibility you might let the cat out of the bag today pertaining to something significant you promised to keep secret. Be mindful of what you say and to whom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't let your extravagant whims gain control of your purse today. This might happen if you pal around with persons who can afford what you can't, or if you're trying to make an impression.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually you have an appreciation for the virtues and abilities of persons with whom you're involved. Today, however, you might feel your way of doing things is right, and theirs isn't.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your haste today to promote issues or interests about which you're enthused, there's a chance you could leave out lots of pertinent information in your presentation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Keep this in mind today, especially in your financial or commercial affairs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Persons who are in positions to help you might not today, if they feel they are being used or manipulated. In order to be effective, you must also be totally sincere.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you're unduly impressed with your own thoughts and ideas today, it might cause you to turn a deaf ear to better suggestions offered by persons with whom you're involved.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Resist inclinations today to jump into a joint venture before you know the benefits and penalties of your involvement. Be slow, not sorry.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Persons who are sincerely interested in your welfare might have helpful advice to offer you today. Hear them out before making major decisions.

Your Birthday

Monday, June 13, 1994

In the year ahead, your chart indicates you might be more fortunate in joint ventures than operating alone. Keep this in mind if you find something good you want to get off the ground.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today there's a possibility you might find yourself in an uncomfortable position that is of your own making. Don't succumb to inclinations to put the blame on others. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be a bit more security-minded than usual today, especially where your possessions are concerned. If visiting an unfamiliar neighborhood, be sure to lock your car.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In sensitive career situations today, keep your impulsive tendencies in check. If you act without thinking, you might create an avoidable complication.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Instead of bringing what's bothering you out into the open today, you might elect to seethe in silence. This could make things hard on yourself, as well as on others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Friends will appreciate you more today if you make an effort to abide by the will of the majority. Don't attempt to tailor things to suit your own purposes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In your one-to-one relationships today, try to keep your sense of fair play and congeniality intact, even if involved with persons who are unreasonable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Relationships with co-workers could be a bit more fragile than usual today. If you get too bossy or arrogant, it could shatter the structure that holds you together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone with whom you're closely involved might be a bit too extravagant or careless today. Unfortunately, his or her actions could affect you if you don't protect your position.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Petty annoyances you usually handle in stride might be magnified out of proportion today, especially if perpetrated by your mate or family.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be safety-conscious today if you have to use unfamiliar tools or materials. If you can't handle these resources, turn things over to someone who knows what he or she is doing.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might put too much emphasis on material things and not enough on that which is of an esthetic nature. This could cause you to pay a price for something that far exceeds its true worth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Even if you feel the clock breathing down your neck today, try to keep a cool head, especially in complex endeavors that must move at a measured pace.

Homeowners shoulder bigger tax burden

AUSTIN (AP) — Homeowners are paying a bigger share of school property taxes, which have gone up nearly half a billion dollars under the latest education funding law.

The state comptroller has reported that the local taxes went up 6 percent — or $493 million — to give school districts a total of $8.67 billion to help fund their budgets this school year. The state kicked in another $7 billion.

Businesses paid more than half the local school taxes. Although their taxes went up, their share of the total declined by close to 2 percent, according to the comptroller.

Homeowners' share of the $8.67 billion was just over 40 percent. That's up from 37.7 percent of the previous year's $8.18 billion local tax bill.

The shift in the tax burden was due to rising home values and to the removal of homestead exemptions that had been granted under a previous school finance system, according to the comptroller's office.

The earlier system, which used county education districts to redistribute some local property tax money, among school districts, was thrown out by the Texas Supreme Court.

Voters last year refused a ballot proposal that would have allowed continuation of the education districts. Those districts generally allowed a 20 percent homestead exemption on about two-thirds of school property taxes, a higher break than that granted by most school districts.

Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said Thursday that local school districts have heard from taxpayers about the increase.

"Homeowners are increasingly vocal, and you have some concerns by business owners as well about the overall level of property taxes," he said.

But Casey said local boards must raise taxes "to keep the doors open, and to be able to attract teachers and other staff, and to be able to function."

Bill Allaway of the business-based Texas Association of Taxpayers said his group is concerned about property tax increases making the state a less attractive place to do business.

"You can build a chemical plant in Deer Park, or you can build a chemical plant in Trinidad," Allaway said. "As these costs go up, the competition from other places for that investment becomes tougher and tougher."

State Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said higher property taxes are to be expected when funds are moved from property-rich to poorer school districts, as they are under the school finance law.

Lawmakers have shifted the money to try to meet a 1989 state Supreme Court order to even out funding available to school districts with different levels of property wealth. The court has thrown out three education funding laws that haven't met its standard.

Under the current law, which also is being challenged in court, the school districts with the most property wealth are required to share with the rest of the system. Most either sent a check to the state this school year or are educating other districts' students.

"You have to expect ... that when you shift funds from wealthy districts to poor districts, that the wealthy districts were going to raise their tax rates to make up for that loss," Ratliff said. "No politician likes higher tax rates anywhere, but there's no way to make up this kind of revenue."

School funding has become an issue in the race for governor between Republican George W. Bush and incumbent Democrat AnnRichards.

On Thursday, Bush campaign spokeswoman Deborah Burstion-Wade said, "Taxpayers can look to Gov. Richards for this spiraling increase."

"George W. Bush ... strongly believes the state government should not shirk its responsibility to adequately fund education," she said.

Richards spokesman Chuck McDonald said state funding for education has increased dramatically since the governor took office, but property taxes simply have gone up more.

To have the state pick up a bigger share of education funding, as suggested by Bush, would be costly, McDonald said. For example, he said, to reverse the current percentage and have the state pay 55 percent of school costs, rather than 45 percent, would cost $3.3 billion in this two-year budget period.

"The question is, is he (Bush) going to pay for this through an income tax or a monstrous sales tax increase?" McDonald asked.

Bush spokesman Reggie Bashur said his candidate envisions using money "from an expanding economy and streamlining other parts of state government."

California passes tax plans to benefit public libraries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California voters rejected higher taxes and more borrowing for everything from earthquake repairs to wildlife preservation. But when it came to local libraries — that was a different story.

Across the state, tax measures to benefit libraries passed by overwhelming margins Tuesday.

"You can be dirt-poor Abraham Lincoln or dirt-poor Alex Haley, go to the library and get books for free and educate yourself. That's the cornerstone of the American system," said Tom Biesek, who fought a higher tax for the 99-year-old library in South Pasadena. "It's an apple pie, motherhood and flag issue. That's why it passed."

Despite such high-tech distractions as video games and cable TV, librarians found people still seem to love a good book.

"It's extremely satisfying," said librarian William Tema in suburban Altadena, where residents voted to pay $29 more a year in property taxes to raise $433,000 for their two branches.

"We had people come in and say they never in their life voted yes on a tax increase, but that they were pushing that little pin in that slot because they love their library."

Across California, voters defeated a number of other measures, including a pair of $2 billion statewide bond issues to reinforce quake-damaged highways and bridges and to protect wildlife by such means as wetlands preservation.

In the last few years, strapped local governments sacrificed library budgets for police and fire needs. Libraries had to cut back hours, stop buying books and lay off employees.

Readers in South Pasadena were planning their library's 100th anniversary bash when they heard budget cuts were in the works.

"We found out we were not going to have a major centennial celebration — we were going to be kicked in the butt," said Janvier Wetzel, head of the Committee to Protect the Library.

They used fliers, precinct walkers, lawn signs and even a cable TV ad to generate support for a property tax of $24 to $36 a year to raise money for the library. Biesek said the taxpayers association opposed the measure only because cash was going through the City Council instead of straight to libraries.

In Northern California's El Dorado County, library supporters were so sure a property tax would pass they didn't bother crusading for it.

"In a six-county area, this was the only assessment that passed. Public safety, schools, all that didn't get approved. It's amazing," said county library services director Marilyn Crouch.

Fisher earns three degrees

Eric Britony Fisher of Slaton, grandson of Vona Fisher of Snyder and the son of Greg Fisher of Kalgary, received three degrees from the University of Texas in Austin in commencement exercises on May 21.

Fisher received his master's degree in professional accounting, a bachelor of business administration in the honors program and a bachelor of business administration in accounting.

Prior to commencement, Fisher was recognized individually at the Graduate Convocation of the College of Business Administration on May 20.

While attending UT-Austin, Fisher was elected to Beta Gamma Sigma, the National Honor Society in the field of business administration, reserved for the top 10 percent of the class duing their junior or senior year.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1994 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This may be silly, but I need an answer. I have three sons, ages 5 years, 2 years and 10 months old. "Ricky," my 2-year-old, loves to play with dolls. (He has three.) Some people make wisecracks when they see Ricky with his dolls, but he would rather play with dolls than cars or trucks. I have never thought there was a problem, but some people say it would make him "funny" when he gets older.

My mother replies that if more parents would let their sons play with dolls, there would be more men willing to play the father role, instead of expecting the mother to do it all.

Ricky's "babies" are girl babies — he even tries to feed them. He watches me with his baby brother and mimics everything I do.

Is this a bad thing? Or is it good for a boy to act so maternal?

CONCERNED MOMMY

DEAR CONCERNED MOMMY: If you are really concerned that this will cause your son to have homosexual tendencies, you need not give it another thought. Homosexuals are born, not made.

DEAR ABBY: I respect your opinion and need your advice. Recently I discovered something very disturbing about my father. I came across a St. Valentine's Day card from a woman who signed her name in code to conceal her identity.

My parents have been married nearly 35 years, and all my friends cite their marriage as an example of the perfect marriage. All their children are grown, and this should be the time for them to enjoy each other — not to be going through a divorce, which is what I feel my mother may opt to do if she should learn about Dad's girlfriend.

What should I do, if anything? I was so angry when I found that valentine, I cried. I felt like vomiting!

Should I say something to Dad? I feel that if I don't say something to him, I'm betraying my mother. Do I want to be responsible for causing a divorce?

Everything in their relationship seems so normal, I don't think my mother knows. Please help me.

TO TELL OR NOT TO TELL

DEAR TO TELL: To tell what? That your father received a valentine from someone whose name was signed in code? It could have been a prank, or of no significance whatsoever. I fear that your imagination is working overtime. I advise you to say nothing, forget it — and mind your own business.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Hurt and Disappointed": Abby, I agree with you wholeheartedly. One card signed by a large group of friends and co-workers is a great demonstration of respect and friendship. You may use my name.

MARJORIE MOURNING,
LAS VEGAS

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you published an item on the word "up" — how frequently it is used, and how comical it sometimes sounds. Will you please publish it again?

MRS. F.M. DRUMMER,
KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR MRS. DRUMMER: Your letter was a real "upper." Many thanks. Here's the piece:

WHAT'S UP

"We've got a two-letter word we use constantly that may have more meanings than any other. The word is UP.

"It is easy to understand UP, meaning toward the sky or toward the top of a list. But when we waken, why do we wake UP? At a meeting, why does a topic come UP? And why are participants said to speak UP? Why are officers UP for election? And why is it UP to the secretary to write UP a report?

"The little word is really not needed, but we use it anyway. We brighten UP a room, light UP a cigar, polish UP the silver, lock UP the house and fix UP the old car.

"At other times, it has special meanings. People stir UP trouble, line UP for tickets, work UP an appetite, think UP excuses and get tied UP in traffic.

"To be dressed is one thing, but to be dressed UP is special. It may be confusing, but a drain must be opened UP because it is stopped UP.

"We open UP a store in the morning, and close it UP in the evening. We seem to be all mixed UP about UP.

"In order to be UP on the proper use of UP, look UP the word in the dictionary. In one desk-sized dictionary, UP takes UP half a column; and the listed definitions add UP to about 40.

"If you are UP to it, you might try building UP a list of the many ways in which UP is used. It may take UP a lot of your time, but if you don't give UP, you may wind UP with a thousand."

FRANK S. ENDICOTT

DEAR ABBY: I just turned 13. I was at my grandparents' house with my two sisters, Molly and Maggie. My grandpa said that he would pay 3 cents for each dandelion weed we pulled. I pulled 350 weeds in one hour. That's $10.50. Right? Molly pulled 305 weeds. That's $9.15. I don't know how many weeds Maggie pulled.

Abby, I was taught to trust my elders, but when it was time to pay us, Grandpa offered each of us only $6. After Molly accepted the offer, he dropped it to $5. She accepted the $5 — Maggie and I didn't.

I wasn't going to take $5 because I thought Grandpa was unfair to change the deal after the work was done. What do you think?

TRUST GONE WRONG
IN MINNESOTA

DEAR TRUST: Shame on Grandpa. Children are raised to believe that adults can do no wrong — especially grandparents. You were right to show your disappointment when Grandpa didn't live up to his end of the bargain. He set a poor example for his grandchildren.

L. Nix added to honor list

Lisa Nix of Snyder has been added to Western Texas College's President's List for the 1994 spring semester.

To be eligible for the President's List, students must be enrolled in at least 15 semester hours with no grade lower than A, a 4.0 grade point average.

"Family Focus"

by James C. Dobson, Ph.D.

Q.- Our 15-year-old son literally seethes with hostility at home — at his mother and me, at his sisters, and at the world. Believe me, we have done nothing to provoke this anger, and I don't understand what has caused it. Other parents of teens report the same problem. Why are so many adolescents angry at their families? Sometimes they seem to hate the people who love them the most.

Dr. Dobson: At least part of the answer to that question can be explained by the "in-between" stages of teens. They live in an era when they enjoy neither the privileges of adulthood nor the advantages of childhood.

Consider the plight of the average 15-year-old. All of the highly advertised adult privileges and vices are forbidden to him because he is "too young." He can't drive or marry or enlist or drink or smoke or work or leave home. And his sexual desires are denied gratification at a time when they scream for release.

The only thing he is permitted to do, it seems, is stay in school and read his dreary textbooks. This is an overstatement, of course, but it is expressed from the viewpoint of the young man or woman who feels disenfranchised and insulated by society. Much of the anger of today's youth is generated by their perception of this injustice.

There is another side to this issue of adolescent volatility. I'm now convinced that the hormonal changes occurring in a developing body may be more important to feelings than we thought earlier. Just as a woman's emotions are set on edge by premenstrual tension, menopause and extreme fatigue, it is entirely possible that the adolescent experience is largely hormonal as well.

How else can we explain the universality of emotional instability during these years? Having watched thousands of children sail from childhood to early adolescence, it still amazes me to witness textbook characteristics suddenly appearing on schedule as though responding to a preprogrammed computer.

Q.-Alright, so my kid feels disrespected and hostile. I still have to impose some limits and discipline on him, don't I?

Dr. Dobson: Yes, but it is possible to lead teenagers without insulting and antagonizing them unnecessarily.

I learned this lesson when I was a junior high teacher. It became clear to me very early that I could impose all manner of discipline and strict behavorial requirements, provided I treat each young person with genuine dignity and respect.

I earned their friendship before and after school, during lunch and through classroom encounters. I was tough, especially when challenged, but never discourteous, mean or insulting. I defended the underdog and tenaciously tried to build each child's confidence and self-respect.

However, I never compromised standards of department. Students entered my classroom without talking each day. They did not chew gum, behave disrespectfully, curse or stab one another with ball point pens. I was clearly the captain of the ship, and I directed it with military zeal.

The result of this combination of kindness and firm discipline stands as one of the most pleasant memories of my professional life. I loved my students, and I had every reason to believe that I was loved in return. I actually missed them on weekends (a fact my wife never quite understood).

At the end of the final year when I was packing my books and saying goodbye, 25 or 30 teary-eyed kids hung around my gloomy room for several hours and finally stood sobbing in the parking lot as I drove away. And yes, I shed a few tears of my own.

Please forgive this self-congratulatory paragraph. I haven't bothered to tell you about my failures, which are far less interesting.

Questions are excerpted from the book, "Dr. Dobson Answers Your Questions." Dr. James Dobson is a psychologist, author and president of Focus on the Family, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the preservation of the home. Correspondence to Dr. Dobson should be addressed to P.O. Box 444, Colorado Spring, Colo., 80903.
