

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says the only thing you have no choice about is making choices.

"I try to exercise three days a week--tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow," said the procrastinator.

Crime may not pay, but in Texas it's cheap. Latest figures show that the average murderer spends less than two years in jail and a rapist only 5.3 months.

I haven't heard any Christmas carols yet, but plans for the holiday season are already being made by the retail business committee of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

The Brand's annual Christmas Shopping edition will be published Nov. 10, and local florists are planning open houses on that same day. The downtown Christmas lighting ceremony is scheduled Saturday, Nov. 16, followed by open houses by retail stores on Nov. 17.

Also on the holiday calendar are the Festival of Trees at the Hereford Senior Citizen Center, beginning Nov. 20, and the annual pre-Christmas Fun Breakfast on Nov. 21.

A columnist went huntin' for sayings and found more of 'em than ticks on a coon dog, according to Joe Hughes of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. Hughes passed along a compilation of old-time country sayings that were put together by Diane Suchetka of Knight-Ridder Newspapers.

She got so many, she said, she "felt like a hen with a hot griddle." In fact, before it was over, she was "hip to haunch and cheek to jowl with sayin's." She didn't just come up with old standbys such as "full as a tick" and "crooked as a dog's hind leg," either. Some not-so-subtle country put-downs included: "If you put his brain in a flea's suitcase, it'd rattle like a BB in a shoebox," and "She's as ugly as a mud fence daubed with tadpoles."

A few of the other selected favorites, that you may have heard, include:

--He's three pickles shy of a quart.

--If you had bird brains, you'd fly backwards.

--He's handier than a pocket on a shirt.

--Sure as the vine twines 'round the stump, you are my darlin's sugar lump.

--Better than a sharp stick in the eye.

--Busy as a one-armed paperhanger.

--Colder than a mother-in-law's love.

--Deader'n a door nail.

--Didn't have sense enough to pound sand in a rat hole.

--Eat up with... (jealousy, etc.)

--I ain't got no dog in that fight.

--I feel like a banjo--everyone picks on me.

--Live and learn, die and know it all.

--Old as dirt.

--Dull as dishwater.

--It's not pretty for nice, but it's great for good.

A lot of traditional sayings are passing away because we don't grow up swapping stories nearly as much as we used to. "Now, don't that fry your 'tater'?"

Why do retailers continue to use newspapers regularly to advertise their products and services?

A report issued a few years ago, "How America Buys and Shops," found that in any given week only a small percentage of the population buys a particular kind of merchandise, and that the great majority of purchases are not planned as much as seven days in advance.

The durable goods industry currently experiences sales of well over $100 billion. However, according to the study, 88 percent of this week's major-appliance purchases will not have been planned as recently as a week ago. Of car purchases, 83 percent will not have been planned.

In a given week, out of 1,000 adults, only 21 will buy a dress, 9 will buy china, flatware or accessories, 7 will buy carpet and only 3 will buy luggage.

What do these figures mean to advertisers? They must keep their message before the public as often as possible, in the most economical way.

The study shows that 4 of 10 shoppers who make a purchase that was not planned last week, will be influenced by advertising. Of that number, 60 percent will have reacted to newspaper advertising. This compares with 17 percent influenced by TV and only 15 percent by direct mail.

Newspapers continue to be the one media that provides broad exposure, powerful response and low cost. It reaches the curious market that is composed of a totally different group of people each retailing day.

Visitor from Wales in Hereford this week

Richard Owen, left, of Anglesey, Wales, visits with Ray Schlabs in Hereford on Wednesday. Owen is staying with the Schlabs family as part of an agricultural exchange program.

Welshman enjoys visit

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The first time Richard Owen saw a feedyard, well, he didn't quite know what to think.

"I just knew I had never seen that many animals in one place before," said the Anglesey, Wales farmer. He is in the United States as part of an exchange program between "young farmers" programs in the United States and Europe.

He's been spending the week with the Ray Schlabs family, learning the ins and outs of their operation and learning more about agriculture in the Magic Triangle area. He spent last week in Canyon, and will be going to College Station next week.

Owen is a "sheep farmer" in the Anglesey area, not far from the west coast of Britain.

"We have 1,500 breeding sheep on 300 acres," Owen, 23, said. "We also feed out about 2,500 lambs every year on grass."

There's plenty of grass to go around on Owen's place. He gets about 50 inches of rain a year, but the uplands get 100 inches or more annually.

He was still trying to get adjusted to the warm, bright weather here this week. "On a good day in Wales, the temperature is 60-65 degrees," he said.

While in Hereford, Owen is also giving programs at St. Anthony's School and to the Hereford Young Farmers, and is trying to learn all he can about the area's intense agricultural industry.

He's also having to polish his English.

"Usually at home, we speak Welsh," he said. "English is my 'second' language."

He, like many foreign visitors, is also trying to adjust to the scenery.

"I've never seen anything this flat before. There's nothing like this in Wales. Even my back yard isn't as flat as this."

House members paying off old bills, bad checks

WASHINGTON (AP) - House members, unnerved by revelations about their check cashing perks, may soon find their names posted on a Capitol wall as deadbeats who stiffed their own restaurant system.

The rogues' list of lawmakers was conceived by Rep. Pat Roberts - an overseer of House restaurants - who revealed Wednesday that some 300 current and former House members owe more than $300,000 in unpaid meal bills.

Roberts, R-Kan., and Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, think the list should be posted in the main House restaurant on the first floor of the Capitol. They made the suggestion in a letter this week to Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Administration Committee.

Oakar is chairman and Roberts the ranking Republican on the panel's police and personnel subcommittee. Rose has not responded to the request, an aide, Heidi M. Pender, said Wednesday.

Roberts did not release any names and would not say where he obtained the figures.

Roberts said: "The farmer who eats in the local cafe pays his bill. It's outrageous and he can't comprehend it."

The House members incurred the debt when they failed to pay for food they personally ordered, or when they signed for meals served to groups of constituents who failed to pay.

Roberts' figures on the restaurant bills listed $255,000 owed by 250 current and former members to Service America Corp., which operated the half-dozen House restaurants from 1987 until August - when the House Administration Committee took control.

In addition, more than 50 members and several committees owe $47,000 to the House for food service before Dec. 31, 1986, when the House also controlled the restaurants. Oakar said the breakdown includes 33 current and 17 former members.

More than 50 members owe Service America $1,000 or more, Roberts said. He also cited figures that showed Service America last June 6 listed the debt from current and former members at $667,416.

It is not clear whether the names of those owing money to Service America would be available for posting. Company officials who ran the House restaurant system could not be reached for comment.

Ms. Pender, special counsel to Rose, said the $47,000 in old bills cited by Roberts could be inaccurate. People listed as delinquent have produced canceled checks showing payments and some bills have no documentation, she said. "I have yet to see a legitimate bill that has not been paid," said Ms. Pender.

The Administration Committee already has instituted a new policy that requires payment in cash or by credit card - either in advance or at the time the meal is served.

Texans should better prepare for minorities

HOUSTON (AP) - The growing minority population will provide the bulk of Texas' work force in 20 years, but those workers also could be under educated and unskilled, Texas A&M University economists warn.

During the next two decades, minorities are expected to provide nearly all of the population growth, Steven Murdock of the university's Texas Population Data Center said Wednesday.

"The minority population is going to present either a tremendous opportunity or a tremendous problem," Murdock said.

"If you think about it, we've got the next 20 years to get things fixed," he said.

In the coming decades, he said Texas' population, like the nation, will be largely middle-aged and increasingly made up of minorities.

Murdock was one of four Texas A&M professors who presented the Economic Outlook 1992 for A&M's Center for Business & Economic Analysis and the Texas Bankers Association.

The seminar already has traveled to Dallas and San Antonio and was to be presented in Austin today.

Demographics show about 40 percent of Hispanics are dropping out of high school, he said. In 1980, the latest figures available, 51 percent of the state's Hispanics had less than an eighth grade education, compared to 25 percent of blacks and 18 percent of Anglos.

At the same time, the mean family income for Hispanics was $15,670 and $15,573 for blacks compared to the average $24,787 for Anglo Texas families. Roughly 28 percent of Hispanics and blacks were living below the poverty level, compared to 12 percent for Anglos.

"We have to ask ourselves: 'Can Texas really be a high-tech state if a large proportion of our work force... has an eighth-grade education or less?'"

Murdock said it is up to the business community to see that minorities receive an education to keep the businesses developing and working. As the nation's population ages, he said revenues for federal and state programs will increasingly come from the minority population.

"These people who are coming into our work force are the people who will be paying for it," Murdock said of programming. "On the other side, if we can provide skills for those minorities, we will have a relatively young work force."

Jared E. Hazleton, an A&M economist, presented a bleak picture of the state's economic growth for the coming years, but he predicted the state would be well ahead of the nation in a recovery.

"Texas, at least during the recession, will benefit by the fact that it entered into the recovery in better shape than most places," Hazleton said. And while there is not expected to be much growth, there probably will not be many losses, he said.

Hazleton said growth in the energy and petrochemical industries will be minimal, defense cuts will be great and the U.S.-Mexico Free Trade Act could bring more job expansions for Mexico and a few expansions in the electronics industries in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, where up to 70,000 jobs could be created.

Many of those workers will come from those displaced by military reductions not only at bases, but also at high-tech firms like General Dynamics.

"Generally, the economy in Texas is growing again, but very, very slowly," Hazleton said. He predicted only a 1 1/2 percent growth in Texas this year and about 2 percent next year.

The energy industry will continue to suffer from flat oil prices, decreasing natural gas prices, more expensive drilling costs and a static domestic market, Hazleton said.

The petrochemical industry that has sustained many of Texas' coastal communities in the last decade will top out and could provide specialty expertise and industrial standards, Hazleton said, but it was unlikely to provide more growth for Texas.

Garth Brooks top CMA award winner

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Garth Brooks, who recorded the song "Friends in Low Places," accepted country music's entertainer of the year award as a couple of fans in high places - President and Barbara Bush - looked on.

The honor was one of four Brooks accepted Wednesday night at the 25th annual Country Music Awards show. He also won for best single for "Friends in Low Places," best album for "No Fences" and best video for "The Thunder Rolls."

Vince Gill, a tenor with pitch-perfect delivery, won or shared three awards, including male vocalist of the year. Tanya Tucker captured female vocalist of the year, and the Judds were named vocal duo of the year.

Sitting in the second row for the show at the Grand Ole Opry House were the president and first lady.

"It's easy to see why America loves country music," Bush said. "Country music loves America."

"Country music gives us a window on the real world," he said. "When I want to feel a surge of patriotism or turn nostalgic, or even when I need a little free advice about Saddam Hussein, I turn to country music."

For the 29-year-old Brooks, country music is just plain fun.

"I never understood why they call me entertainer," he said. "If you've been to my show, all it is is having fun."

Gill, 34, shared song of the year honors with Tim DuBois, his co-writer on "When I Call Your Name," and shared vocal event of the year honors with fiddler Mark O'Connor and fellow New Nashville Cats members Steve Wariner and Ricky Skaggs.

O'Connor also won the musician of the year award.

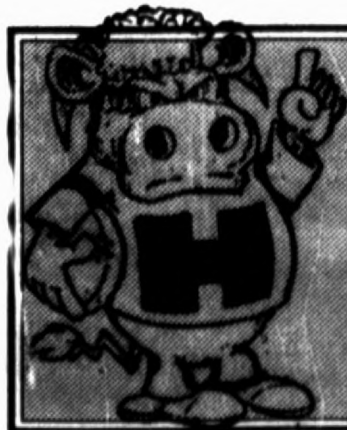

Tucker, 32, who gave birth earlier Wednesday to her second child, a boy she named Beau Grayson, caught the show from her hospital room.

"I had no idea I'd win," said the singer, who had been a runner-up for female vocalist of the year honors three previous times.

The Judds, a mother-daughter act that is breaking up at the end of this year because of mother Naomi Judd's liver problems, captured the best duo award for the fourth consecutive year.

"Every ending is a new beginning," said Naomi Judd, whose daughter, Wynonna, will pursue a solo career.

The five-member Kentucky HeadHunters won best group honors for the second straight year.

Nominee's career hangs in balance

WASHINGTON (AP) - Robert M. Gates, President Bush's nominee to head the CIA, faces a mass of evidence developed in three weeks of confirmation hearings that he misled Congress, corrupted intelligence estimates and bullied subordinates.

The nominee was returning today to the Senate Intelligence Committee to counter those accusations, with his career hanging on the credibility of his answers and senators growing increasingly skeptical.

One Democrat, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, said the evidence had pushed him from favoring Gates into leaning heavily against him. And Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., suggested that in light of the revelations, Gates would have a difficult time managing the agency if he were confirmed.

"We have a very difficult judgment to make," said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the committee chairman, who has been supportive of Gates.

Rep. Dave McCurdy, D-Okla., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, told The Washington Post that Gates should withdraw his nomination if he cannot disprove allegations that he slanted intelligence estimates. McCurdy's committee oversees the CIA but has no role in Gates' confirmation.

But the man who nominated Gates to head the spy agency was standing fast.

"I know Bob Gates and I know he wouldn't slant an estimate for some political purpose," said President Bush, a former CIA director who named Gates his deputy national security adviser in 1989.

Gates opened his testimony more than two weeks ago with a few admissions of failure and dozens of answers of "I can't recall" in response to questions about the Iran-Contra arms-for-hostages scandal.

Since then, the committee had heard from a parade of current and former intelligence officials, some defending Gates and others raising new questions about his career at the CIA.

On Iran-Contra, the intelligence committee had assembled a list of at least eight instances in which there was evidence Gates had been informed about the diversion of Iran arms sale profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, or about the involvement of the U.S. government in the scheme.

But perhaps even more damaging was a two-day marathon discussion of whether Gates had presided over, or acquiesced in, the skewing of intelligence analysis to support hard-line Reagan administration policies - particularly on the Soviet Union, Iran and Nicaragua.

A panel of six analysts re-enacted before the television lights some of the bitter battles that raged over the drafting of Reagan-era intelligence assessments.

In a startling public glimpse inside the veiled agency, opponents on Wednesday accused Gates of poisoning the atmosphere at the CIA through bullying of subordinates and "prostituting" the intelligence process.

"I don't think there's an appreciation of the feeling of intimidation that exists in that building," said Melvin Goodman, a former Soviet analyst who was forced out by Gates.

One intelligence official who worked under Gates said his underlings referred to him as "the Supreme Soviet" because of his desire to put his personal imprint on every intelligence product dealing with the Soviet Union.

Others came to Gates' defense, saying he simply applied high standards to intelligence work that were resented by some subordinates.

Lawrence Gershwin, a Soviet military analyst, said "I have heard little or nothing against Mr. Gates that was provable. There are a lot of people who don't like Mr. Gates. He makes life very uncomfortable." But Gershwin praised him for "highly ethical behavior" and "full integrity."

Republicans on the committee sought to tatter the credibility of Gates' opponents, repeatedly challenging them to provide backup for their charges and labeling the testimony secondhand speculation.

"If this were a court of law, three-quarters of this would be thrown out as hearsay," said Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

Charges become nightmare for Lewis

AUSTIN (AP) - House Speaker Gib Lewis says the misdemeanor ethics charges against him have turned into a nightmare.

After a hearing Wednesday before State District Judge Bob Perkins, Lewis said, "This is a bad dream. It's a nightmare that's happening to me."

"I'm going to wake up and it's all going to be over. I'm going to wake up in a cold sweat and say, 'Gee, I can't believe something like that could happen.'"

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has been jailed twice over the charges. The first time was days after the Dec. 28, 1990 indictments were returned when he was released on bond almost immediately.

Then on Monday, he failed to show up for a preliminary hearing in the case, and spent about 3 1/2 hours in jail.

"Everybody is always saying that we're soft on crime. Here I've gone to jail twice on a trumped up misdemeanor charge. I sure would've hated to commit a felony," Lewis said.

Lewis' indictment stems from charges that he accepted a gift from a prominent San Antonio law firm and did not report it on his public disclosure statements.

On Wednesday, Perkins refused a request by Lewis' attorneys to remove media cameras from the pre-trial hearing, and said he would rule Oct. 21 on whether the case should be handled by a lower court.

A trial date has been pushed back because of the regular legislative session and two special sessions this summer.

Perkins did not consider any other motions. Lewis' attorney, Bill Wilms, has asked that Perkins remove himself from the case, and that the trial be held in another location because of pre-trial publicity.

Attorney claims 'shortchanging' in Hispanics' higher education

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - Citizens and the G.I. Forum, are listed as plaintiffs in the suit filed nearly four years ago against the state, its university systems and the Higher Education Coordinating Board.

The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, MALDEF, is representing the plaintiffs.

"This is a case about equal opportunity for people in Texas," Kauffman said. "This case is important to the border area because of its educational needs."

The plaintiffs say there is a pattern of discrimination against residents in the border area, defined as 41 contiguous counties in the region, that has resulted in fewer graduate and professional programs.

The border has 20 percent of the state's population, but only gets 10 percent of the state's money for higher education, Kauffman said.

He added that there were only three doctoral programs in all of the border region, but nearly 600 in the rest of the state.

Also, would-be students along the border have to travel an average of 225 miles to get access to top-notch programs, while residents in the rest of the state only need to travel an average of 45 miles, the attorney said.

Richard Gray, a private attorney for the defense, said that border residents only pay about 16.5 percent of state taxes. However, the state spends about 21.5 percent of its money there.

And when the four schools created by the state constitution - the University of Texas, Texas A&M, UT's Medical Branch and Prairie View A&M - are removed from the equation, the border actually receives about 19 percent of higher education funds.

He said those four were placed in what at the time was the population center of Texas. The rest were placed in regions as they developed and the border "doesn't come close to approximating the populations of those metropolitan areas," Gray said.

He added that degree programs must originate at the university level and that the coordinating board had approved 100 percent of the region's program requests in the last eight years.

Javier Aguilar, special assistant attorney general, said the state allocates money equitably according to a long-established funding formula.

Gresham honored as Artist of the Month

By DANEE' WILSON
Lifestyles Editor

Southwest and Indians are favorite painting themes of Betty Gresham who was chosen as the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division Fine Art Committee Artist of the Month.

Gresham has been painting for nine years and has recently added pastels to the collection.

"I have always wanted to paint," she said. "I had to wait until my kids were grown before I could afford to."

Most of her painting is done on the weekends and nights because of her daytime employment.

"I usually spend a couple hours a night for about a week on each piece," Gresham said.

Gresham started painting by taking lessons from Jean Lyles, Jack Lawson, Billie Davis and through workshops.

"I usually work with oils and pastels. I can use acrylic and water colors, but I don't like to."

She enjoys Southwest and snowy landscape themes.

"I enjoy painting," she said. "I find it very relaxing."

Gresham says she hopes to someday give lesson to young people.

"I want young people to get started painting as soon as they are interested. I don't want them to wait as long as I did," she joked.

HOUSTON (AP) - Students at Jefferson Davis High School received an intimate look at first lady Barbara Bush when she shared the contents of her purse.

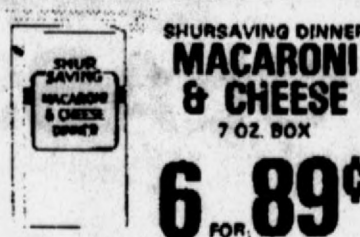

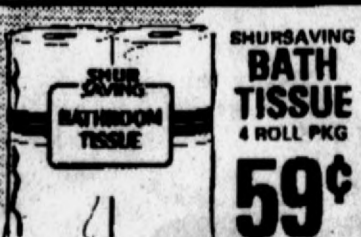

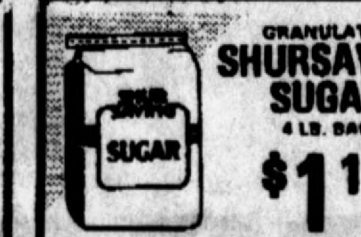

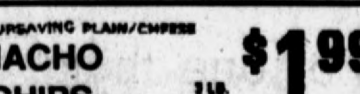

After meeting Wednesday with a dozen students in a program to keep kids in school, Mrs. Bush asked whether the teen-agers had any questions.

Hugo Tinoco, 18, said: "I've got a question and this may sound silly, but what do you carry in your purse?"

As students, reporters and photographers laughed, Mrs. Bush opened her black leather clutch bag and pulled out the contents piece by piece: a paper containing the students' names, tissue, a makeup compact, eye makeup, a perfume bottle, a pen, lipstick and some candy.

She gave the candy to Tinoco. "Any other big important questions?" she asked to applause and laughter.

Epilepsy association needs poster child

As part of observance of National Epilepsy Month, High Plains Epilepsy Association is sponsoring an area poster child contest. Any child between the ages of 10 and 14 who has epilepsy and lives in the Texas Panhandle is eligible to enter. A winner will be selected at a banquet at the Big Texan Restaurant in Amarillo. The winner will be chosen by a panel of judges who will base their decision on the child's participation in school and extra-curricular activities and the ability to meet people and discuss epilepsy.

The purpose of the contest is to demonstrate that most children with epilepsy, with proper treatment and counseling, can live normal lives.

The winner will represent the High Plains Epilepsy Association at various functions throughout the year.

and will also travel with one parent to Austin to see the state capital.

For an application to enter the contest, please call High Plains Epilepsy Association at 372-3891. All applications must be completed by October 14. The contest will be held on October 19.

Extension service launches project

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service is launching a pilot project to enhance the quality of life of Hispanic families in Texas.

The Una Vida Mejor (A Better Life) project is being funded by a $1.4 million grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Mich. Una Vida Mejor will help Hispanic families assess their needs and acquire knowledge and skills to meet them. The grant will be used to help Hispanics improve their quality of life by enhancing leadership, education, parenting skills, diet, money management and community environments.

The pilot project will be conducted initially in Hidalgo, Cameron and Webb counties in South Texas.

"Texas has a hispanic population that is growing at twice the rate of the overall population," said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, Extension Service director. "This puts the Extension Service in a unique position to address model programming for Hispanics that will have application throughout Texas and across the nation."

The Una Vida Mejor project will place special emphasis on identifying approaches to help young people stay in school, resulting in a lower dropout rate. The project also will seek to increase the leadership skills of limited-resource Hispanics so they can attain greater self-sufficiency and function from their own strengths.

The Extension Service was selected for the grant because of its strong record of education and genuine commitment to work with Hispanic audiences, Carpenter said.

"The Extension Service has a wealth of information and educational programs that are of interest to Hispanic audiences. These resources will be adapted to better meet specific needs, and additional programs will be tested during the pilot project," he said.

The Kellogg grant will be used to employ technical assistants who will recruit and train volunteers. The volunteers will teach families and youth and support local neighborhood groups with leadership and educational experiences.

"The Extension Service is in a position to foster relationships with other institutions, agencies and industries skilled in and committed to working with Hispanic audiences,"

Carpenter said. "We will be cooperating with these groups to provide new opportunities, change existing services and help secure additional resources to try to meet the needs of Hispanic families."

Project results will measure the increased leadership of Hispanics, school participation of young people from targeted areas, effectiveness of educational programs, and increased ability of the Extension Service to work with Hispanic audiences, Carpenter said. based on project results, Una Vida Mejor will be replicated across the state and, ultimately, around the country.

Herd tries to sweep non-district

The Hereford Whitefaces will try to keep their record perfect when they return home to play Levelland at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Whiteface Stadium.

Hereford is 4-0--the first time the Herd has started the season that well since the 1986 squad went 8-0 before falling to Estacado, then went on to the regional finals.

The Lobos are 3-1. "They're as good a football team as we've played," Herd coach Danny Haney said.

"They've got a real, real good tailback (Esteven Golightly). He and their quarterback (Craig Black) are their main threats. They run the option," Haney said.

Levelland's top lineman is 234-pound Jeff Nunn, who leads both the offense and the defense.

"They've got a great defense," Haney said. "That's the heart of their team. They're a real hard forcing team. They come at you hard. They're constantly coming at you with stunts and everything else."

"We could hardly move the ball against them last year," he said about the Lobos' 9-7 win last year in Levelland, "and this is essentially the same unit they ran against us last year."

"That's the key to the game: maintaining ball control and doing a good job of executing against that defense."

Injury report: For the first time this season, everyone is available.

Herd tailback Leo Brown is currently second in the state in Class 4A rushing. Brown has 650 yards on 128 carries, while leader Anthony Hubbard of top-ranked Bastrop has 702 yards on only 74 carries.

The players of the game for the varsity were Monroe Timberlake on defense and Derek Mason and T.J. Samples on offense.

Timberlake had 16 tackles, 3 for losses, 2 of which were quarterback sacks and recovered a fumble in the Herd's 15-14 win over Frenship Friday.

Samples and Mason were honored for their blocking.

"That was a rushing game," Haney said. "Their blocking was critical."

Mason graded out at 96 percent and Samples graded out at 95 percent, Haney said.

For the junior varsity, the players of the week were LB Ben Celaya and OG Brent Flood. For the sophomores, it was LB Gabriel Medrano and TE Josh Tice. The ninth-graders honored were WR Marc Haney for the White team and QB Michael Powers for the Maroon team.

Players of the week

Hereford defensive tackle Monroe Timberlake, here wrapping up Frenship running back Duane Young, was named the Herd's defensive player of the week. Sharing offensive MVP honors were guard T.J. Samples and tight end Derek Mason.

Hereford picked over Levelland

The Hereford football team should have no trouble improving its record to 5-0 Friday when it hosts Levelland, at least according to the Harris Rating System, which picks the Herd by 13 points.

Hereford continues to move up the Harris ladder slowly. They are ranked 37th in the state in 4A this week after being 39th last week. Pampa dropped to 35 this week from 26 last week despite beating Dunbar 21-14.

Hereford's power rating stayed at 183, which is now also Pampa's rating after dropping from 186.

Friday's game is the last non-district game of the season for Hereford, and Pampa comes to town Oct. 11 to start district play.

Pampa is 4-0, but will find it difficult to be 5-0 for the Hereford game. The Harvesters will face a stern test against Gainesville when the two meet Saturday in Wichita Falls.

Gainesville, which is located near the Oklahoma border due north of Fort Worth, is also 4-0, and Harris ranks it 12th in 4A with a rating of 191. Harris picks Gainesville by 8.

All Region 1-4A teams, with rankings listed first and ratings second, are: Sweetwater, 10, 192; Big Spring, 22, 186; Pampa, 35, 183; Hereford, 37, 183; Andrews, 40, 182; Monahans, 42, 181; Estacado, 43, 181; Snyder, 68, 175; Levelland, 77, 173; Randall, 89, 170; Frenship, 96, 169; Lamesa, 101, 167; Dunbar, 106, 167; Pecos, 117, 164; Borger, 127, 162; Fort Stockton, 129, 161; Dumas, 148, 153; Caprock, 149, 152; San Angelo Lake View, 154, 148.

Besides Hereford and Pampa, all other District 1-4A teams play this week, but only Randall is favored--by a point at Frenship. Borger is an 8-point underdog in Lubbock against Dunbar, Dumas is a 6-point underdog hosting Canyon, and Caprock is picked to lose by 36 to 5A Monterey in Lubbock.

Harris' picks for other area 4A teams are Lamesa 15 over Greenwood, Snyder 21 over Seminole, Andrews 21 over Fort Stockton, Monahans 31 over Lake View, and Sweetwater 28 over Pecos. Estacado's opponent--Roswell, N.M.--is not rated, and Big Spring is off this week.

Each week Harris lists big games as High Headliners. The Pampa game makes the list, and the only other Panhandle game listed is Memphis at Wellington.

Memphis is ranked ninth in Class

A with a rating of 166, while Wellington is ranked 16th in 2A with a rating of 175. Harris favors Wellington by 12.

Rockets get Herrera from Spain

HOUSTON (AP) - Carl Herrera is finally playing basketball in Houston again and he wishes it hadn't taken so long.

Herrera, a former All-SWC performer at the University of Houston, signed a one-year contract Wednesday with the Houston Rockets after playing last season for Real Madrid in the Spanish League.

"I was kind of uncomfortable at the time it took to get everything signed," Herrera said. "It wasn't frustrating, I just wanted it to get done fast."

The Miami Heat drafted Herrera in the second round of the 1990 NBA draft and then traded him to the Rockets along with Dave Jamerson for Alec Kessler, the Rockets' first round selection.

Herrera averaged 13.1 points and 7.3 rebounds for Real Madrid last season and still had a year left on his contract, but he was released to play in the NBA.

"I'm not saying I'm really ready for the challenge but I'll be there every day, I'll listen and do everything they tell me to learn," Herrera said. "I've got a lot to learn. It's going to be an adjustment."

The Rockets earlier signed first round draft pick John Turner to a reported three-year contract worth about $800,000 per season.

Rockets general manager Steve Patterson is still negotiating, however, with guards Kenny Smith and Vernon Maxwell and forward David Wood. Rockets training camp begins Friday.

"This is a big move for the club," Patterson said of Herrera. "If he had stayed in college, he would have been a higher draft pick."

Herrera skipped his final year at Houston to enter the pro draft. He was selected by Miami in the second round and then obtained from the Heat along with Dave Jamerson.

Herrera signed a two-year contract with Real Madrid instead of going immediately to the NBA.

"I think I've got a lot of work to do, I have to adjust to the playing time," Herrera said. "I don't feel any pressure. The pressure was on me in Spain because we had only two Americans on the team."

Herrera, who attended high school in Caracas, Venezuela, was an All-Southwest Conference performer for the Cougars in 1989-90. He was second in the league in rebounding (9.2) and third with 65 blocked shots and he had a 16.7 scoring average.

The Rockets also signed former Detroit Pistons guard Gerald Henderson to a one-year contract, the player's agent, Scott Lang, told KRIV-TV.

"He's been a quality backup for a number of years," Patterson said. "He's played on some very successful ball clubs in Boston and Detroit and I think he can help us."

Henderson averaged 5.3 points in 23 games with the Pistons last season.

Toronto clinches East

By The Associated Press

The AL East is over, and Toronto was celebrating while Boston looked back at what might have been.

"This team has been called choker in the past," Roberto Alomar said Wednesday night after Toronto beat California 6-5 and clinched its second division title in three years. "But that doesn't fit this team. There are too many new faces around here."

The Blue Jays, who open the AL playoffs at Minnesota on Tuesday night, rallied with two runs in the ninth inning to seal things up. Devon White singled off Bryan Harvey (2-4) and scored when Kevin Flora threw away Alomar's grounder to second. Alomar stole third on the next pitch and Joe Carter singled past shortstop Dick Schofield for the division title.

"Nobody can say we backed in," said Candy Maldonado, whose two-run homer put Toronto ahead 4-3 in the sixth. "We put back a challenge by Detroit when they got close and we did the same with Boston."

Dave Winfield's leadoff home run in the eighth off David Wells tied the score at 4. Dave Gallagher's single in the ninth off Mike Timlin (11-6) gave California a 5-4 lead.

"It was good we could win at home and not have to back into it," Toronto general manager Pat Gillick said. "It was important to win it before the 4-millionth fan and send everyone home happy."

The game drew 50,324, which raised Toronto's season total at home to 4,001,526, the first 4-million season in sports history.

At Boston, it was a depressing end to a depressing season. The Red Sox completed their 5-3 victory after Toronto had clinched.

"We had a lot of hopes when we went ahead tonight, because we knew we could stay alive," Wade Boggs said. "But when Toronto won, there wasn't much you could do."

Joe Hesketh (12-4) was the winner and Walt Terrell (12-14) was the loser.

"We gave it our best shot to catch up," Steve Lyons said. "We got close, but we just couldn't get there. Toronto played well down the stretch. They deserve it. I wish them well."

Tony Fossas, who got his first save, may have put it best.

"As the saying goes, it's not over until it's over," he said. "And now it's over."

Brewers 11, Indians 4

Cleveland set a team record with its 103rd loss, blowing a three-run lead as visiting Milwaukee scored four runs in the seventh and five in the eighth. Chuck Crim (8-5) was the winner and Darren Holmes pitched three innings for his third save. Doug Jones (4-8) was the loser. Willie Randolph went 1-for-5, dropping his average two points to .330.

Mariners 4, Rangers 3

Visiting Seattle clinched the first .500 record in its 15-year history behind Dave Valle's two-run double in the seventh off Jose Guzman (13-7). Scott Bankhead (3-6) was the winner for Seattle (81-78), which had never before won more than 78 games.

Royals 16, Athletics 5

Danny Tartabull hit a two-run triple that gave him his third 100-RBI season, and Jim Eisenreich drove in four runs as Kansas City got 16 hits and rallied from a five-run deficit. Ron Darling (3-7) lost his seventh straight decision for the visiting A's, allowing six runs and seven hits in five innings. Steve Crawford (3-2) was the winner.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

Steve Sax homered off the left-field foul pole in the eighth inning against Mike Flanagan (2-7) at Yankee Stadium. Leo Gomez had tied the score 3-3 in the top of the inning off Greg Cadaret (8-6). Steve Farr got three outs for his 22nd save.

NL history may repeat

By The Associated Press

Even the Los Angeles Dodgers are finding a way to remember 1951. They may be just heading for another playoff.

Forty years ago today, the Brooklyn Dodgers lost the NL pennant to the New York Giants when Bobby Thomson hit his home run in the ninth inning. The Giants, now of San Francisco, will have something to say about the outcome of this race, too.

The NL West is all even after Atlanta beat Cincinnati 6-3 Wednesday night and Los Angeles lost to San Diego 9-4 at Dodger Stadium.

Los Angeles and Atlanta both have today off, then decide the division title over the weekend with three games apiece. The Braves will play host to the last-place Houston Astros, while the Dodgers take on the Giants at Candlestick Park.

"Bring on the Dodgers," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "We'll be ready for them. Maybe we'll make our season in three days. It would salvage something if we have a say in who wins the division. We're playing for pride."

The Dodgers aren't exactly pleased with what they're hearing out of San Francisco.

"If they wanted to beat us so bad, why didn't they beat us earlier, when it counted," said Darryl Strawberry, who hit his 28th homer and drove in three runs against the Padres. "They've got nothing to play for now."

The Padres beat the Dodgers with perhaps the strangest "big" inning of the season. San Diego parlayed two bunt singles, three infield hits, two singles to the outfield, a groundout and a throwing error by first baseman Eddie Murray into six runs in the eighth inning to snap a 3-3 tie.

"That was a tough one for us, but we're very confident going up to San Francisco," catcher Mike Scioscia said. "I like our chances. Even if we had won tonight, we would feel the same way. We would feel we have to beat San Francisco Friday night."

At Cincinnati, Tom Glavine, given a six-run lead in the first inning, became this season's first 20-game winner. Glavine scattered five hits over eight innings.

It was a near replay of the second game of the series, when the Reds scored six first-inning runs, only to watch the Braves rally for a 7-6 win. But Glavine (20-11) made Cincinnati's comeback come up short.

Lonnie Smith drove in two runs for the Braves.

"We knew if we were even or one game behind, there's going to be a good chance of at least forcing a playoff," Glavine said. "It'll be sweet to go back home and get in first place or maybe clinch it."

If there is a tie, the playoff will be Monday night at Los Angeles (9:35 p.m. Hereford time).

Cubs 1, Phillies 0

Greg Maddux pitched a three-hitter and drove in the only run with a single as Chicago beat Philadelphia at Veterans Stadium. It was Maddux's second shutout and sixth complete game of the season.

Mets 9, Pirates 6

Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer in the 11th inning off Bob Patterson to lift New York over Pittsburgh at Three Rivers Stadium. The loss cost the Pirates (96-63) a chance at winning 100 games.

Cardinals 6, Expos 4

Felix Jose hit a three-run homer and Lee Smith recorded his 47th save to extend his NL record for saves as St. Louis beat Montreal at Busch Stadium.

Astros 7, Giants 5

Craig Biggio and Andujar Cedeno each drove in two runs as Houston beat San Francisco at Candlestick. The last-place Astros won the series 2-1, tying the season series at 9-9.

Al Geiberger shot a record 59 on the second round of the 1977 Danny Thomas Memphis Classic with 11 birdies and one eagle.

Ryder stars come to Texas

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - With the pressure of Ryder Cup competition gone and the excitement of victory lingering, you might expect the American team members competing in the Texas Open to be a little lax.

But thrilled as they are, the golfers say when the $900,000 tournament starts today they won't be acting like they're on a Texas vacation.

"You've got to get back into it," said team member Lanny Wadkins. "After anything that happens - good or bad - you have to get back into what you normally do."

For Wadkins, that would be vying for position on PGA Tour's money list, where he currently is seventh with $615,495. He and four others in the top seven are competing in the historic tournament at Oak Hills Country Club, where the champion will take home $162,000.

Wadkins said the little greens on the short and sometimes tricky Oak Hills course appear to be slower this year because of deeper grass growth.

"But they're in good shape. It's fun to play," he said, predicting a controlled player like Corey Pavin will do well in the tournament.

Pavin, the PGA money leader and a Ryder Cup team player, also is competing. Pavin won the Texas Open in 1988.

Tournament organizers say the field is the best since 1987, when the Nabisco Championships were in San Antonio.

Shooting below a 60 on the par-70 course may be difficult, Wadkins said, because there only are two par-5 holes, and the par-3 holes are not easy.

Mark O'Meara won the Texas Open last year by one stroke with a 19-under 261, edging out Gary Hallberg.

For the defending champion, being part of the victorious Ryder Cup team last week in South Carolina was especially sweet. O'Meara, currently 42nd on the money list with $342,830, said he's experienced a frustrating year individually, mainly because of back and rib injuries.

"I'm glad I didn't come here as defending champion after a losing Ryder Cup team, if you know what I mean," O'Meara said.

The five Ryder Cup players competing in the Texas Open plan to take a charter flight to Washington to meet with President Bush after their rounds Thursday and return in time for tournament play Friday afternoon.

Paul Azinger said he's trying to recover from the intensity of Ryder Cup competition.

"I just can't tell you how much pressure we felt as players last week to win back that Ryder Cup, so we could prove we've got what it takes," Azinger said. "It was really tough, and I think our guys showed a lot of intestinal fortitude - something we (American golfers) haven't been given a lot of credit for the last few years."

Players have different ways to intimidate

By MARVIN WAMBLE
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) — Baylor's Robin Jones prefers the bashing method. Rice nose tackle Matt Sign simply smiles.

Texas A&M cornerback Kevin Smith uses the silent approach, while Texas Christian tight end Kelly Blackwell talks and talks and talks.

College football players use physical dominance, mind games and even tradition to intimidate, making up a game within the game that often decides the outcome on Saturdays.

"The mental game is totally hidden from the fans," said Blackwell, a senior All-America candidate with a reputation for talking and playing an excellent game. "It's demoralizing when you're beaten and someone tells you about it. When your mind is down, your body goes with it. It takes you totally out of your game."

That's the essence of intimidation. "Any time you have people competing, whether it's horseshoes, marbles or boxing, intimidation can be a factor," TCU defensive coordinator Marc Dove said. "Confidence is a big factor in an athlete playing successfully. When they don't feel confident, there is a less of a chance for them to be successful. And intimidation affects that confidence."

The quarterback is the natural target of intimidation.

"I can't think of a better person to rattle than the quarterback," Houston senior quarterback David Klingler said.

But methods to badger, bait and humiliate an opponent are used at every position.

The most common method of intimidation is physical.

"I try to go out on the first play and punish someone," said Jones, a 6-3, 266-pound defensive end and All-America candidate from Hillcrest High School nicknamed "Big Cat."

"A player is never as strong after you lay a good hit on him," he said. "You take something out of the guy. You set the tempo."

Jones' big-hit style of intimidation is the one most coaches prefer.

"We do it by contact," said Baylor defensive coach Pete Fredenburg. "An aggressive defense has a chance of intimidating people with outstanding hitters and good tackles."

A&M defensive coordinator Bob

Davie said: "The only kind of intimidation we ever talk about is style of play, which is playing hard."

The physical dominance of a team can have an effect even before the game begins.

"During the week's preparation, those receivers, quarterbacks and running backs are sitting there and watching our defense play," Davie said. "And we try to intimidate them by what they are going to see on that film. When one of the previous team's receivers comes across the middle we would hope that the receivers from the team we're going to play would take notice of how he was hit after he caught the ball."

"I just do a lot of smiling," said Sign, a 5-10, 225-pound nose guard from Arlington. "I don't want them to know what I'm thinking. No matter what happens, I just give him a big grin or maybe ask him how his day is going." Sign rarely talks on the field, but when he does it's not to congratulate anyone. "If I make a big play I might tell him, 'You've got to do better than that.'"

While most wanna-be intimidators are large in stature, A&M's Smith is only 6-0, 180. Smith said he held extensive conversations with receivers when he was a freshman and sophomore. But as a veteran, he has changed his approach.

"Mine is not a physical deal in terms of knocking guys' helmets off when they catch the ball. I just try to annoy the receiver," said Smith, rated as one of the best defensive backs in the country. "One time I might say something to him, the next time I might compliment him or pat him on his back. It's all a mind game."

Smith said he likes to "mess with receivers. Even if the ball isn't thrown their way, I'm always pulling on their jerseys or tapping on them, just so they know I'm there."

Holding ongoing conversations with the opponent is a large part of Blackwell's game. But it's not just mindless jabbering.

"If you defeat the other person's mind, it makes your job easier," he said.

Blackwell said if he driveblocks his opponent 10 yards downfield, he immediately tries to break down the player's confidence by asking the first question that comes to mind, such as, "Don't they have somebody better on the bench?"

Blackwell's teammate, defensive end Roosevelt Collins, is also a talker and proud of it.

"The things I say you can't put in the paper, but I'll say anything I can to get them out of their mind set," said Collins, a defensive end. "You try to get every advantage you can," Collins said. "When I get in a good shot, I tell him about it."

A typical line?

"You don't want to come this way again. I'll be here all day."

While players enjoy the verbal warfare, some coaches believe it can backfire.

"I don't think people are intimidated by talking," Dove said. "I think it's a real motivator. Everybody wants to look at Miami and say they try to motivate with their mouths, but once you look at the film, you see exactly how they intimidate. They are one of the hardest-hitting teams in the country. I really think they talk to motivate themselves."

While most intimidation is executed at the individual level, it can work against an entire team.

Ask anyone who has played Miami at the Orange Bowl recently, where the Hurricanes have won 39 consecutive games.

"Miami is probably the first team that comes to mind," Dove said. "They are an intimidating team, along with Notre Dame and Michigan. And in past year, A&M has been intimidating defensively."

Miami players know their style of play and the aura of playing in the Orange Bowl gives them a pre-game edge.

"When we come out of the field, we've already won 25 percent of our games," said Hurricanes linebacker Jessie Armstead of Carter High. "It's just like Mike Tyson, when you go in to fight him, he's already won the fight. That's how we are."

Burns shakes up Vikings

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota coach Jerry Burns may finally be fed up with the highly paid but underachieving Vikings.

In his biggest shakeup in six years as coach, Burns has replaced three starters, including quarterback Wade Wilson.

Rich Gannon will get a chance to revive the Vikings' sluggish offense, which has scored just 49 points in five games and hasn't scored a touchdown in its last 10 quarters.

"We thought we needed to make a change," Burns said Wednesday. "Our point production hasn't been what it has to be if we're going to be successful."

But Wilson wasn't the only player getting the blame for the Vikings' 2-3 start. Burns also demoted Todd Kallis and Al Noga. Brian Habib will replace Kallis at offensive guard and John Randle will replace Noga at defensive end.

"There are no sacred cows," Burns said. "If any of them don't do their jobs, there'll be a change, and that applies to everyone on the club."

According to a recent newspaper report, the Vikings have the highest payroll in the NFL. Their salary per player, including bonuses but not incentives, is $549,100. Their salary per starter is $803,100.

But they haven't performed like a highly paid team. Since losing 41-13 to San Francisco in the first round of the 1989 playoffs, the Vikings are 8-13.

"I know the general perception of the public is going to be that Wade is responsible for the situation, but that's entirely wrong," Burns said. "We have had dropped passes. We've had illegal procedure penalties. We've had missed assignments."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a newlywed, working full-time, and my husband and I have been figuring out how to divide the chores. He's in construction and doesn't have the energy to expend doing housework. We tried many different ways to divide the household chores fairly, but nothing seemed to work. He just doesn't like housework. I don't like it either and furthermore don't want to be burdened with ALL of it myself.

It didn't seem fair that I had to do it all while working at my regular job, so we agreed to hire a maid to come in every two weeks. Although it was affordable, I got to thinking about why I resented doing the housework--it wasn't so much that I hated the chores, but that it wasn't my job. I already have a 9-to-5 job. I thought if I were being paid for the work, I would feel it WAS my job and wouldn't mind it so much. The "house account" now gives me $30 a week for my three hours of chores.

I've been doing this for six months now without complaint and love the extra spending money. I'll bet if you printed this a lot of working wives would pick up on the idea and it could help their marriages as it did mine.--L.C. in San Francisco.

DEAR SAN FRAN: What an excellent solution to a pesky problem.

It certainly is unique. Thanks a heap for sharing. It's sure to catch on.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you have received many letters from parents who have runaway children. But I've never seen a letter in your column about runaway parents.

My mom left town six years ago without a phone call, letter or anything. She just disappeared. It took me a long time to accept the fact that she wasn't coming back.

This has been terribly hard on me. I worry about her constantly. My children miss their grandmother. I don't know if Mom is sick or well or if she's in trouble, in jail or what. Every time I see someone on the street who looks like Mom, I stare, hoping it's her.

To make matters worse, my father walked out on us, too. When he and Mom got divorced, he broke all ties with us. He married again and has a new family. I located Dad a few years ago. He said he still loves us but he can't have anything to do with his old family because he has a new life now and we should forget him. Easier said than done, believe me.

Please tell all the parents who read your column that the family doesn't end when the kids are grown. We need them in our lives forever.--S.F.,

Riverside, Calif.

DEAR RIVERSIDE: What a sad letter. You've presented your case eloquently, and I'm sure the message got through. Please let me know if you hear anything.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My boss constantly rattles his pocket change. When it's just the two of us, I can ask him to please stop. But when he's with other people, I just cringe. Once, while he was making a speech, I was embarrassed to death because the microphone was picking up the rattle.

How can I get him to break this annoying habit?--Rattled in Santa Barbara

DEAR RATTLED: Your boss needs to be weaned off the habit. He should carry his change in his suit coat pocket and keep some gum balls in his pants pocket for "rattling". Gum balls make very little noise.

Do you have questions about sex, but no one to talk to? Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," is frank and to the point. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.65 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60621-0562.

Few people realize that the asparagus is a member of the lily family. If allowed to grow, the asparagus tips would throw out tall stalks and crown them with six-petaled flowers, the trademark of the lily.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: Last year my mother had a very severe, recurring yeast infection. She used several different medications, but the infection would never go completely away. It would flare up again when she discontinued using the medicine.

Finally, a woman told her that she had been troubled with the same thing and her doctor decided that it could be connected to a hormone imbalance. When they started treating her for this, her yeast infection went away.

My mother asked her doctor about this, and he said that it was a possibility and began treating her for hormone imbalance. Within days, her yeast infection was gone completely and hasn't recurred.

DEAR READER: Yeast is everywhere and, in limited amounts, does not cause any problems. Most women will have some yeast organisms in the vagina. The problems start when the yeast multiplies to the extent to cause inflammation and symptoms.

The normal acidity of the vagina, and friendly bacteria that are in the vagina, help to control yeast growth. After the menopause, when a woman's estrogen level falls, the cells in her vagina atrophy. Many of the normal protective factors against all vaginal infections, including yeast, is lost and she becomes susceptible to vaginal infections. The dry, friable lining bleeds easily, may cause itching and may lead to painful intercourse. This condition is called atrophic vaginitis.

Hormone-replacement therapy in these instances will help the vaginal lining regain its normal characteristics and protects against yeast and other infections.

I have discussed this point under "Atrophic Vaginitis" in my new Special Report 103, Vaginal Discharge, Itch and Odor, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/103, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

There is a bit of a paradox here, which is not unusual in medical situations. The increase in vaginal moisture with estrogen, as during pregnancy, may also increase the chances for yeast multiplication. So in one instance, hormone replacement is indicated, and in the other, the hormones may be a factor in causing the problem.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I had a complete hysterectomy last year. I went in for my yearly Pap test last week and they called me and said it was positive for Chlamydia. They said it is a sexually transmitted disease. I have been with the same man for 15 years. I haven't been with anyone else and I would bet my life he hasn't either. They put me on antibiotics and said for him to take half of them. Neither one of us had any symptoms. Is it dangerous?

DEAR READER: Chlamydia is the most common sexually transmitted disease in the United States -- approximately 4 million new cases every year. In the young, sexually active individuals who have multiple partners, as many as 20 percent have Chlamydia.

Frequently it causes no symptoms, or the symptoms are so slight they are not noticed. It can cause a vaginal discharge with inflammation of the cervix. And it can involve the tubes resulting in sterility. You and your partner have undoubtedly had Chlamydia for years without symptoms. It can cause pelvic inflammatory disease in women and epididymitis (inflammation of the tubular portion of the testicles) in men. But antibiotic therapy will almost always cure the disease. So neither of you should have any complications from it.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am confused about atrial fibrillation. I thought after hearing about President Bush's atrial fibrillation that it was not a very serious thing. Then, much to my surprise, I developed it myself. I, too, was short of breath. At first my doctor thought I might have pneumonia. But when he took a heart tracing and found I had atrial fibrillation, he said it was congestive heart failure.

He studied my thyroid and said it was entirely normal and was not the cause of my atrial fibrillation. Instead, he said I have coronary artery disease. He put me on Lanoxin, and the shortness of breath went away and my heartbeat is now regular. But he did say it might not stay that way and put me on aspirin. He told me the aspirin might prevent my having a stroke if my fibrillation begins again.

Now that scares me. It is bad enough to find out I have coronary artery disease without having a stroke too. What is so different about my atrial fibrillation and President Bush's? I'm 69 years old.

DEAR READER: Atrial fibrillation can be caused by many different things. In fact, most cases are not from an overactive thyroid gland. The significance of the atrial fibrillation depends on what causes it. It can be temporary from an acute illness such as diarrhea or even from alcohol. The most common cause is coronary artery disease.

Coronary artery disease is also the most common cause for congestive heart failure, which does cause shortness of breath. The Lanoxin helps to control or reverse atrial fibrillation in many cases, and it also helps to correct congestive heart failure from coronary artery disease.

I have discussed atrial fibrillation in greater detail in About Atrial Fibrillation in THE HEALTH LETTER 38-05, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send $3 with a long, stamped (52 cents), self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/38-05, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077.

The aspirin is a good idea until your doctor can be certain that you are not going to have a recurrence of your atrial fibrillation. It prevents clots from forming in the heart that can pass to the brain and cause a stroke.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.

New Deaf Smith County precinct lines drawn

Boundary lines for Deaf Smith County commissioner precincts were adopted Monday by Commissioners' Court and will be submitted to the U.S. Department of Justice for approval.

The City of Hereford, top map, is divided among all four precincts, allowing nearly equal distribution of the county's 19,153 population in the four precincts. The map of Deaf Smith County marks the precinct boundary lines outside the city. The dotted lines identify the city, as shown in the top map.

Re-drawing of precinct lines, based on the 1990 U.S. Census, is required by federal law and must be submitted to the Justice Department for preclearance.
