Avalanche-Journal Staff

UNREASONABLE salaries, in some instances netting certain county officials $22,000 for a single year, the receipt of interest from trust funds, extra compensation for services deemed in the line of regular duty, and extreme allowances given for collection of delinquent taxes, are some of the ills prevalent in Texas because of the fee system, so it is claimed in the report of the legislative committee to investigate fee officers of the state.

A report of the committees findings and recommendations was released here Saturday by Senator Pink L. Parrish, of Lubbock, chairman. The committee was appointed by action of the forty-first legislature at its second called session following efforts of Senator Parrish and others. The committee is composed of Senator Walter Woodul, of Houston, and Parrish, appointed from the state senate, and Representatives Carl Rountree, Lamesa; George C. Purl and Jack Kellar, of Dallas, appointed from the house.

Police On Alert To Prevent Recurrence Of Attacks In Retaliation For Slaying Of Rum Runners

(By Associated Press)

NEW LONDON, Jan. 4. — Police were on the alert tonight to prevent a recurrence of attacks on coast guardsmen in retaliation for the killing of three rum runners.

The district about the pier where the base is situated and amusement places frequented by guardsmen were under surveillance. The men themselves were advised to be cautious as the result of beatings given two of their number shortly after last midnight by a gang of men.

Guardsmen Hurt.

Coxswain George A. Cadorett of Pawtuckett, R. I., attached to the destroyer Arciason, was set on while taking a short cut to the base, and was cut and bruised.

One of the gang asked him if he were a member of the crew of the CG-290 which fired on the rum runner Black Duck in Narragansett Bay last Sunday, killing three men and wounding a fourth. He said he wasn't but was a coast guardsman.

"Good Enough."

"Well, that's good enough for us," was the reply and he became the target of flying fists.

Immediately after he reported the affair to his superior officers, a squad of guardsmen was sent out to search for the men.

In the meantime, a second guardsman, whose name was not learned, called New London police and said he had been attacked and beaten. Police were dispatched to the railroad yards near the base and heard the men talking on the other side of a string of freight cars. When one of the policemen slipped and fell, warning was given them and they fled.

Written on a blank of the Planters National bank, Whitewright, the check was made payable to the First State bank, at Slaton, and was signed "O. E. Sears."

Nebraska Political Leader Starts Movement Opposed To State's Present Solon George W. Norris

(By Associated Press)

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 4.—Marka Woods, Nebraska political and business leader and one of the boosters in the "Pershing for President" movement in 1920, today announced a project to "draft" Gen. John J. Pershing for the United States senatorial race.

The announcement followed a conference among Nebraskans, who Woods said, would like to see the World war chief oppose Senator George W. Norris, progressive, in the republican primaries August 19.

About to leave for Washington after a several weeks visit with his sister, General Pershing said, "You can't keep your friends from talking about you, but this is the first time I've heard of it."

Pressed for a statement on whether he would accept or refuse an offer were it actually made, he answered:

"As I say, I haven't given it any consideration."

Woods declined to name others who have talked over the "draft" idea but said at least 50 leaders including legion men, farmers and others had discussed it with him.

"I think the movement will spread over the state like wild fire," he asserted. "If there were enough popular sentiment, I think the general might be induced to run."

Odessa Store Is Razed By Flames

ODESSA, Jan. 4. (AP)—The frame building and stock of the J. M. Radford Wholesale Grocery company were destroyed by fire of undetermined origin here today. Firemen had the blaze well under control when a hose was cut by a passing freight train. Delay in making another connection allowed the flames to spread beyond control. Loss was estimated at $30,000.

Hope To Improve Lubbock Airport With Bonds Sale

City Commission Predicts Partial Disposition Of $35,000 In Improvement Bonds In Near Future

Progress Of Underpass On Avenue H Satisfactory, City Dads Are Told In Called Meeting Saturday

PARTIAL disposition of $35,000 airport improvement bonds for the city of Lubbock is expected in the near future, according to an announcement made last night following a called meeting of the city commission Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

"With improvement work started on the airport here, Lubbock will be placed in the limelight as a progressive and airminded city," said Mayor Harley D. Woods. "We will make every effort, when this work has been completed, to get Lubbock designated as a stop on some airline. Rapid strides are expected in the field of aviation in 1930 and we want to get in on the ground floor."

Hangar Considered

Improvements which are being considered at this time include marking of the field, erection of a large hangar, the laying out of runways and lighting for night work. When these improvements have been made, it has been pointed out, Lubbock will have a first class airport with all modern conveniences.

The question of charter amendments was discussed at the meeting but at this time they are not complete and decision was made to carry the discussion over until the regular meeting next Thursday afternoon. These amendments will be presented to the voters within the next three months. These amendments refer to the Board of City Development levy, the disposition of warrants by the city commission and the disposition of either the city water or light plants without a two-thirds vote of the people.

Report was made on progress of the Avenue H underpass which stated that work on the project was going forward satisfactorily and that completion was expected by May 1 barring inclement weather conditions.

Story Of Hammer Death Is Probed

Woman Tells Officers Of Being Captured And Taken Through Six Counties To Dispose Of Body

(By Associated Press)

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala., Jan. 4. Authorities tonight investigated the story of Mrs. Dovie Hicks that H. G. Culbreath killed Gilbert Ayers, stuffed the body in his automobile and carried it through six North Alabama counties before disposing of it.

Mrs. Hicks told officers Culbreath forced her to accompany him. Both men, she said, were boarders in her home.

Several Questioned

Several witnesses, including other residents of the woman's Winston county boarding house, were questioned by a coroner's jury.

The body of a man identified by Mrs. Hicks as that of Ayers, was found on Brindle Lee mountain, six miles from here late yesterday, after the arrest of Culbreath at Fort Payne. His arrest resulted from the woman's handing a barber a note while Culbreath was being shaved. The note said Culbreath had killed a man and Mrs. Hicks was being forced to flee with him. The barber called police.

Elderly Uncle Of Bomb Blast Victim Held For Loaded "Christmas Present"

(By Associated Press)

SEAT PLEASANT, Md., Jan. 4. (AP)—While the deaths from the bomb outrage on New Year's day mounted to three, police revealed today the arrest "for investigation" of an elderly uncle by marriage of Mrs. Namo Hall Brady—the 18-year-old bride who was killed by the bomb on opening a supposed Christmas package.

Clarence Brady was taken into custody last night but his identity was withheld at first. Authorities said they feared violence.

Early in the day the third fatality in the tragedy was recorded when 4-year-old Dorothy Hall, sister of Mrs. Brady, died in a Washington hospital. In the afternoon a joint funeral for Mrs. Brady and her 19-month-old brother, Samuel Hall, had been arranged.

Three other members of the Hall family were unable to attend the funeral. They were confined to the hospital with injuries received when Mrs. Brady's "Christmas present" blew up.

WARN ON LICENSES

Auto Owners Must Have New Plates By February

In view of the fact that only about 1,500 automobile owners of the 11,000 in Lubbock county have purchased 1930 license plates, John Keller, state license and weight inspector, issued a warning Saturday against operation of cars with 1929 plates after January 31.

"No excuse will be accepted February 1," said Mr. Keller. "Each auto owner may secure his license plate at the tax collector's office at the present time, and advise each to do so as soon as possible."

A. J. Clark, county tax collector, says he began registering automobiles in December in order to aid the public in avoiding the usual January rush.

New Models Shown In National Affair On Saturday

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The automobile of 1930, stream-lined, low slung, rakishly painted and equipped with all the newest in speed and luxury, made its bow to the public here today.

With more than 300 new cars and chassis models on display, the National Automobile show opened in Grand Central Palace. It will close a week from tonight, pack up and move on to Chicago, to open there January 25.

Started 30 Years Ago.

Thirty years ago, the first automobile show was held, in old Madison Square Garden. On exhibit there were 31 "horseless carriages." Fewer than 5,000 cars had been manufactured that year. In the United States during 1929, about 5,000,000 passenger cars and 650,000 trucks were built.

Slim as a greyhound is the new aristocrat of the highway, long of body and low. Lowest of all are the new front wheel drive designs, around which great crowds of visitors hovered today.

There has been developed a new kind of enamel that won't fade, with the result that it now is practicable to have one's car painted baby blue or rose color or jade green. While interior decorators and jewelers have worked on the upholstering and fittings, artists have applied the paint.

Lined up against backgrounds of gorgeous tapestry, were a town car painted pale tan and trimmed with brown and burnt orange, a sports touring car painted white with yellow trim, a jade green limousine, a sapphire blue coupe, and a roadster done in checkers outlined in tan or a brown background.

In a highly polished democracy they lined up for inspection rakish

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP) — Miss Bernice Chrysler, daughter of Walter P. Chrysler, automobile manufacturer, and Edgar W. Garbisch, former captain of the Army football team and all-American center, were married in the presence of 2,000 guests at Saint Bartholomew's church today.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. George Thompson, rector of the Episcopal church at Greenwich, Conn. He was assisted in the Episcopal wedding service by the Rev. Herbert Stevenson, assistant rector of Saint Bartholomew's.

Week's Building Tops 1930 Total

Though there are 365 in a year and only seven in one week, building valuations in Lubbock for the past week topped those of the present year by $100.

Valuations for the week totalled $38,300, while those of the year stood at $38,200.

Reason for such figures, as shown by records in the office of the city engineer, is that the first of the present year fell on Wednesday of the week with only four working days passed in 1930 while the week included two working days of 1929.

The three were injured in a train wreck December 26 at Sweetwater when an oil car crashed into the coach in which they were riding. Several other Lubbock persons were less seriously injured.

Mr. Stanton received several broken ribs and internal injuries, while Mrs. Rice sustained severe cuts and bruises.

Communications Maintained Until Unreported Fliers Are Found; Six Aviators On Expedition

(By Associated Press)

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 4. —The operator in charge of the army signal corps station at Fairbanks, Alaska, messaged the signal corps office here that one of the two Eielson rescue planes which took off 9 (2 p. m., E. S. T.) today for Nome, was lost somewhere between Nulato and Nome. The Fairbanks operator sent the message at 6:15 p. m. The message did not mention what had happened to the other planes.

Nulato is 30 miles westward of Fairbanks, on the direct route to Nome. The planes were taken into the air at Fairbanks today by Pat Reid, chief pilot of the expedition and Matt Niemenen, Alaskan pilot. The brief message did not say which one of the planes was unreported.

Making Fast Time

The fliers were making fast time toward Nome when last seen and it was estimated they would arrive at Nome about 2 p. m., Alaska time. While no word had been received here from Nome up to 8 o'clock tonight, the army signal corps headquarters here had given instructions to maintain communications until the lost plane is located.

Flying with Reid were William Hughes and Jim Hutchinson, mechanics, while Major H. C. Deckard, in charge of the expedition for the aviation corporation, and Mechanic Sam McCauley were in Niemenen's plane.

Pilot Carl Ben Eielson and Mechanic Earl Borland, objects of the search, have been missing since November 9, when they attempted to fly to the fur trading ship Nanuk, ice-bound at North Cape, Siberia.

Origin Not Known In Capitol Blaze

Spontaneous Combustion Or Careless Smoker Thought Responsible For Flames In Artist's Studio

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Completing his investigation of last night's spectacular fire in the artist's studio of the capitol beside the majestic dome, David S. Lynn, architect of the building, said he was unable to determine whether the blaze had its origin with "a careless smoker or from spontaneous combustion."

Questioned as to whether Chas. E. Moberly, artist taken unconscious from the studio during the fire, had been drinking, Lynn said he had no reason to believe that he had been.

Drinks At Noon

"He told me that he had had one or two drinks around noon, but none after that," Lynn said.

As the architect constructed the scene from the stories of Moberly and Samuel Hall, a former capitol policeman who twice called at the studio and was there when the fire started, it was about like this:

"Moberly, who had been touching up decorations in the halls of the senate wing of the capitol, went to the studio between two and three o'clock and engaged in some work and in tidying up the place. About

Two Local Stores Are Robbed Early Saturday Morning

Yeggs Escape With $111.50 Loot From Bradley Drug And Clarence Saunders Grocery Store On 19th

Breaking the lock to the front door of the Bradley Drug Store 1922 19th street, and prying the gate between that firm and Clarence Saunders grocery store, 1921 19th, robbers sometime early yesterday morning escaped with $111.50 in cash and a wrist watch.

Dial was broken on the safe in Bradley drug and when opened revealed that $70 in cash was missing while $20 was stolen from the cash register. A wrist watch also was taken from the register.

Gate Opened

Gate between the two establishments was opened and the cash register in Clarence Saunders store looted of $21.50. Efforts were made to open the safe but failed.

Officials of the store stated yesterday morning that the robbers evidently jarred a water hydrant loose and the rear of the store was flooded, water still running when employes opened for Saturday's business.

The only clue obtained late yesterday by local officers was a man's footprint on a coffee sign in the grocery store. This same print was found outside of the stores but trace was soon lost.

Paper Warehouse Crashes Down As Brick Wall Falls

Contractor And Owner Of Structure Are Arrested On Charges Of Homicide After Victims Succumb

Three Others Hurt

Piles Of Timber And Wet Paper And Heavy Press Tumble Through Opening Made By Brick Avalanche

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Weakened by a recent fire and the removal of several charred beams, a section of a wall of a South street paper warehouse collapsed today and buried five workmen, killing two of them and injuring the other three.

The men were employed rebuilding the damaged warehouse. A 15-foot section of the brick wall caved inward from above the third story and crashed through the floor.

Piles of timber and wet paper and a heavy paper press tumbled through the holes torn by the avalanche of bricks and helped to bury the five victims, working below the third floor.

Buried Under Press

Police rescue squads and firemen worked for hours to reach the imprisoned men. Two were buried under the 300 pound press, and the machine had to be taken apart before they were freed. One of them was dead and the other died on the way to the hospital.

The dead were Louis Siamarron, 27, of Brooklyn, and an unidentified man known to his employer only as "Red."

Jessie Wholmon, contractor, and Frank Colabella, owner of the warehouse, were arrested on homicide charges.

Investigation Of Bus Mishap Made

Governor Orders Probe Of Accident Claiming Nine Lives; High School Boys Die At Grade Crossing

WOOSTER, O., Jan. 4. — Under special orders from Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, state officials tonight investigated three major Ohio bus accidents which Thursday and Friday cost nine lives and injured 31 persons. The investigators had instructions that if evidence of negligence is found on the part of those responsible, to "institute proceedings to bring the guilty to speedy account."

The worst of the three tragedies was the crash of a bus and a railroad train at Shreve, O., near Wooster, Friday night, in which seven high school boys were killed and nine other persons injured.

Witnesses told the coroner a warning bell at the crossing was ringing and that the engineer on the train, a speeding Pennsylvania railroad mail and express carrier, blew the whistle as the crossing was approached.

Joseph Baker, 50, driver of the bus, said he slowed down near the crossing and looked for a train through the window on his side of the bus. He said his nephew, Willard Baker, looked out the other side, but that Willard evidently did not see the danger. Willard was one of the victims.

Local Business Men See 1930 Better Year Than 1929

Expansion Seen During Season Just Passed Will Be Increased; Building Boom Will Continue, City Men Aver

Colonization Of Territory Will Be Big Aid To 1930 Business In Lubbock, Is Forecast Made

By CHAS. C. WATSON, Jr
Avalanche-Journal Staff

EXPIRING YEAR just past has been considered a prosperous one for Lubbock and the South Plains, expressions of prominent business and professional men of Lubbock this week indicate that 1930 has a far more prosperous outlook and that conditions throughout the section will be greatly improved.

With building permits for 1929 carrying the greatest expansion program ever witnessed in the city, the concensus of opinion is that 1930 will experience even greater activity in this line.

Colonization Seen

Colonization of the unsettled territory also comes in for attention with oil activities receiving considerable interest. The old stand by, agriculture, seems destined to come into its own again, according to forecasts made and prices this year will greatly exceed those of 1929, assuring the farmer a living wage for his products. This fact is pointed out through the interest taken by the federal government in its efforts to aid marketing conditions and by the age-old law that prices run in cycles. Market peaks were reached in 1924 and since that time, it has been pointed out, prices have varied with only slight increases. Diversification is cited as one of the greatest boons to the modern farmer, living at home with poultry and cattle as a means of livelihood while crops come in as a profit.

"From every report I have been able to gather, 1929 was one of the most successful in history for merchants," said E. J. Parsons, local merchant. "Sales overbalanced those of a year ago and the volume of business, due to progressive development, has been increased. I can see no reason why 1930 will not be even a better year for the merchants. All indications point to good crops with top prices while this county's paving program will be a boost. The advertising program inaugurated by the South Plains, Inc., also is a big factor in its development, one which is instrumental in colonizing the section and bringing new buyers with money into the country."

Realtors Talk

Tom Jones and W. R. Chancellor, realtors, declare that while the South Plains at this time is leading every other section of the country in development, a few more years and even greater expansion will be seen with a progressive program instituted never before seen in Texas. "The advertising program of the local chamber of commerce has been a prominent factor in this development of untilled soil," said Messrs. Jones and Chancellor. "Oil development at this time is not quite as extensive as it will be in the near future. Within the next two years we expect to see oil in commercial quantities in several sections of the South Plains with Lubbock and the centrally located city to receive the benefits of such activity. At present 1930, to our minds, is a year with an outlook very prosperous."

W. A. Myrick stated that while 1929 was a good year from a business standpoint, money was not as free as in the year previous. "This condition," said Mr. Myrick, "was largely caused through prices on agricultural products being lower and through shortage in some areas of feed stuffs. In 1928 there was an abundance of feed with good prices while in 1929 some farmers actually had to buy their feed. I believe, however, that Lubbock as a city, and as much business last year. The depression caused by low prices on feed and cotton was more or less offset by the program of diversification. All farmers of the South Plains have been including this in their program to a certain degree and as prices on other products lower, this activity increases. The coming year seems bright from practically every standpoint. With a bottom season just passed 1930 is given a favorable start. Loan companies I understand will be back in operation and in my opinion building valuations for 1930 will be just as large as 1929. Foreign industries are due to make their appearance in Lubbock also."

Murray Forecasts Oil

"I believe that the pending oil development in this section heralds a great program of development, expansion and prosperity for all," said R. J. Murray. "With oil in commercial quantities an influx of money for land owners will be experienced which will be a decided boost to business. Agriculture also is destined to come in for a season of prosperity with the federal government taking an interest in marketing conditions and with the old rule that market prices travel in cycles. The last big price year was in 1924 and 1930 is destined to be another following. Veral of depression. The harvesting season of 1929 was much earlier than usual making land at this time ready for preparing and replanting. Despite the fact that some sections were hit hard by hails and drouth, there is plenty of feed in the country and the farmer generally is more prosperous than usual. It had been necessary for farmers to diversify all of which has been a decided advantage to them and to those associated with them.

Building Is Seen

"Though 1929 building permits issued were enormous, I am hopeful that 1930 will show an even greater figure. This hope I base on the fact that Lubbock industries are finding it necessary to enlarge their capacities to care for the development and increase of population. New industries also are needed here and I believe that 1930 will see them taking an active interest in Lubbock and the South Plains. One of the greatest industries needed is that of milling and I think that big mills will find it to their advantage to locate here. Lubbock will be the logical center for them. Lubbock county's program of road building also will have a good effect on business as it will assure employment for idle labor. As a whole I believe the outlook for Lubbock and the South Plains in 1930 is the brightest in history."

T. E. Roderick of Slaton visited friends in Lubbock yesterday. Mr. Roderick is editor of the Slaton Slatonite.

J. D. Carroll, educational director of the First Baptist church, returned Saturday evening from Dallas where he spent several days on business.

Kiwanis Club Has Active Work For Under Privileged

Mrs. Foster's Report Gives Exceptionally Busy Era For Welfare Activities; Greater Year Is Ahead

Providing for the Under Privileged Child, a feature of Kiwanis International's program enjoyed a great year in Lubbock under the direction of the Lubbock Kiwanis club, a report by Mrs. Tom Foster, welfare worker for the club, reveals. The report covers the activities of the work during the past year. J. T. Trigg acted as chairman of the committee.

After having done much good during the past year without the aid of any outside organization the Under Privileged Child work is due for a greater work in Lubbock through the assistance of the Community Chest fund.

Organizes Camp Fire

One of the major events of the year's work was the organization of a Camp Fire troop and the holding of 38 meetings during the year. The club work also conducted 15 story-telling hours for girls under Camp Fire age and held four parties for Camp Fire girls, one weiner roast for Camp Fire and story-telling clubs jointly. Mrs. Foster also attended one week of the annual encampment at Post with girls.

Visiting the sick of the city was another prominent part of the work during the year. Mrs. Foster with members of the committee visited 54 different homes with a total of 298 different visits, 66 of which were to sick children. Twenty trays of food were prepared for sick children and 28 boquets of home grown flowers were given the sick.

Children Treated

Eight children had their tonsils and adenoids removed, eyes of one child were treated, dental work for one child provide for and one child has been receiving daily treatments for the past four weeks, nurse made daily visits to sick rooms and secured treatment for them from a doctor who is not a member of the club.

One spent eight days at the Scottish Rite hospital in Dallas with one child whose operation was made possible by the club and the Masonic lodge.

Three hundred and sixty-five garments, mostly second-hand, were donated by the wives of the club members and 165 were secured elsewhere.

Besides this Mrs. Foster assisted in the delivery of milk from the Avalanche-Journal Milk and Ice fund during the summer and assisted in the securing of funds to put milk in the Sanders school for the undernourished children.

Sunday School Organized

A sunday school was organized in the Sanders school district which now has an attendance of more than 100. A Christmas tree was given the school through the donations of the club. The mens classes of the various churches have assured the continuance of the class.

Arrangements were made with the West Texas Orphan's home at Abilene to take six Lubbock children whose mother was unworthy to rear them.

Numerous other deeds for the underprivileged children of the city were recorded during the year a period of much service for the poor and needy of Lubbock.

EX-STUDENT VISITS HERE

Guy Carter, graduate of the class of 1928 is visiting friends on the campus this week. When Carter was actively enrolled in the college he was a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Southern Scholarship society and was the first president of the Pre-Law club, of which he was one of the founders. At present he is attending the University of Chicago where he is vice-president of the junior law school and a member of Delta Theta Phi, law fraternity of that school.

Pauline Patterson and her sister, Una Bernice, former students of the college are guests at 2415, 13th street this week-end. Both girls are teaching school near Rotan.

LA VENTANA STAFF ANNOUNCED

Holmes Webb, editor in chief of the La Ventana, annual publication of the college has announced the staff of the book as follows: Thomas Taylor, Bob Webb, Polly Puckett, assistant editors; Edna Houghton, art editor; Orval Burroughs, athletic editor; Leland Mast, minor sports editor; Barney Brady, snapshot editor; Margaret Trigg, club editor; Twilight Baker, class editor; Oletha Singly, administration; Solon Clements, sales manager.

Webb has announced that pictures for class sections may be made until January 14 and that pictures for the beauty section and the section for most handsome boy will be due by Saturday, January 11. He announced that over 1100 pictures have already been made. Almost all of the pictures of campus buildings have been taken and snapshots are being turned in continually. Art work is progressing rapidly.

COLLEGE REVUE

You can know them by their spats if you are hunting for a member of the Centaurs. It seems that the club has adopted the fashion of wearing spats wholesale and every member is proudly displaying them.

Classes were probably shorter the last two days than they will be at any other time of the term. Professors were making assignments and naming text books, outlining the course and dismissing classes early. However some students were complaining that the very first time they met a class they had to stay for a three hours lecture. Maybe that was the reason that several students were making last minute changes in sections and dropping some classes only to take up others.

COMPLIMENTS TECH

A letter has been received from Marjorie E. Will, president of the Texas Speech Arts association, asking Miss Ruth Pirtle, head of the department of speech, to become chairman of the college section of that organization.

Another letter has been received from Windsor P. Daggett, speech critic who visited the college during the last term, complimenting the college on the work done by the speech department. He expressed his astonishment that such advancement could be made in so short a time. Mr. Daggett has also asked for some literature on the college and Lubbock which he expects to use in a New York publication.

DEBATE CONTRACTS SIGNED

Contracts for debates have been signed with a number of Texas schools according to an announcement of Miss Anna Jo Pendleton, debate coach. The schedule includes engagements with West Texas State Teachers College, Texas Christian University, Baylor, Abilene Christian College and McMurry.

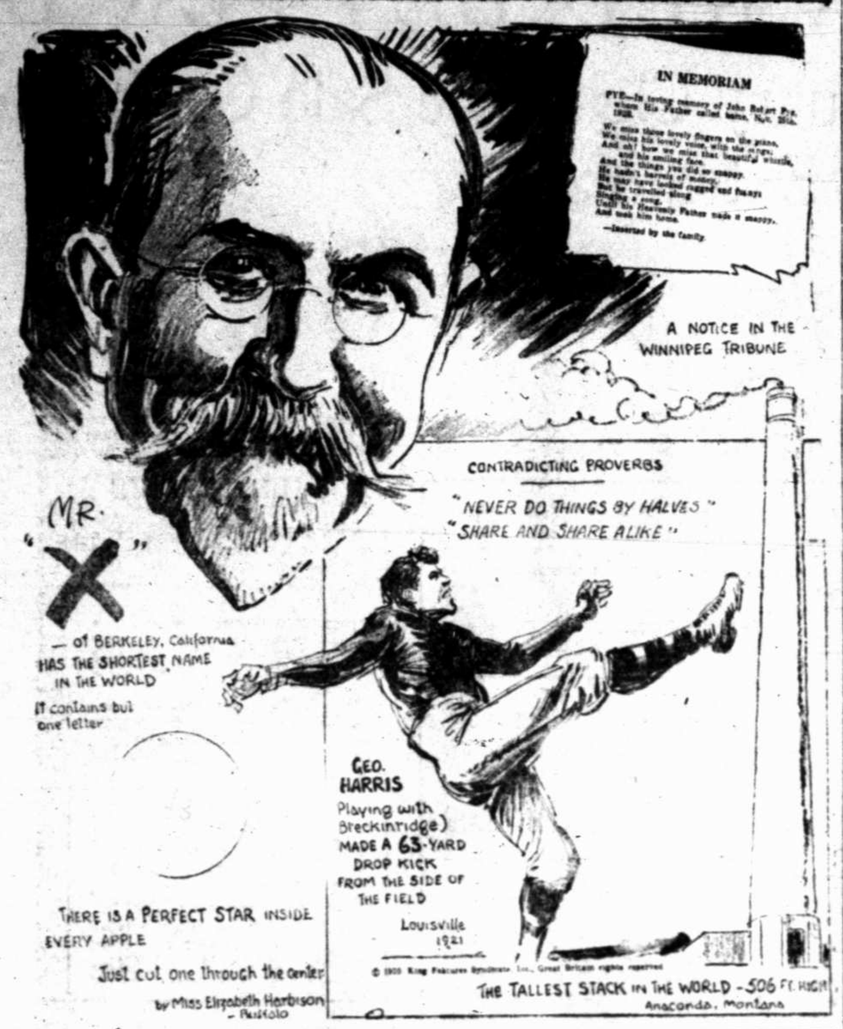

Probably the first debate will be held in Canyon when Tech will engage the West Texas teachers in the fourth forensic contest between the two schools. Other arrangements have not been definitely settled but it is expected that the Tech team will meet T. C. U. in Fort Worth and A. C. C. in Abilene. Baylor is expected to send their team here.

Last year's debate squad is intact with the exception of J. W. Jackson. Members of the team won a unanimous decision over the Baylor team last year. A new addition to the squad is Frank Warde. Other members include: Hal Lary, Bill Sewell, Wayne Castleberry, Ross Ayres, Bob Taylor and Alvis Ellis.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

When someone quotes divorce statistics to us we think marriage is indeed in a bad way. But when we know of marriage after marriage where husband or wife is sticking it out, trying hard to maintain a happy home in spite of the other's unfaithfulness, intemperance, temper, etc., we marvel!

"There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than were ere dreamed of' in your philosophy,' says Hamlet. And there is likewise more love, understanding and faith in the world than we can conceive in our discouraged moments.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I have been married for a number of years to a quarrelsome and extremely nervous woman of my own age. At first my love for her was so great that I overlooked her constant nagging. But, as years passed I began to lose my love for her. What kept us together was the love of the children we brought into the world.

She, detecting my coldness, accused me of unfaithfulness, which was not true.

"At that time we met with misfortune. A child of ours died, leaving my wife in a state of nervous breakdown. After she partly recovered she sued me for separation on the grounds of being unfair during her illness, and she agreed to place the children in a home for better care. I granted her wish.

"After five weeks separation we made up, and I have since learned that she became unfaithful, having affairs with three men. It surely was a hard pill for me to swallow but I tried to forgive and forget for I knew she was not in her right mind at the time.

"One year has passed. My love for her has partly returned, due perhaps, to my new understanding of life. I do my best to please her. She admits she has nothing to complain of, but hardly a day passes without a quarrel on her part.

"Her only wish now is that I leave her. If I left her I would have to put up a big fight again for the children's safety, and I hate to go through it again. What shall I do? "THE MISERABLE HUSBAND."

It's a puzzle, and I hardly know what to advise. Doesn't your wife want to keep the children and make a home for them? If she would do that, maybe it would be best, for you and all concerned, to leave her and live elsewhere, with the stipulation, of course, that you be allowed to see the children frequently. You would doubtless be lonely, but it would be better than constant quarreling.

If she does not want to care for the children by herself you should not consent to a separation, but should insist on the home being maintained for their sakes, and that situation would almost be better for the poor kids than a home in which there is constant bickering.

If she will not consent to this couldn't you take the children, get a good woman to care for them, and keep a home together? I know it is very, very hard for a man to maintain such a home without the wife and mother, but if you could manage it it would keep your home together with the children, and would give your wife the freedom she seems so much to want. Maybe she would decide, under those circumstances, that she is not so keen for a separation as she thought.

SCHOOL MARM: There may be several good reasons why the boy friend is not more enthusiastic. He may not be in a position financially to marry, and may think it is not right to be serious with a girl until he is in better shape. Or he may be the type of person who likes to be friendly to the verge of matrimony but shies away from that. There are plenty of such young men, although they get over it when they meet the certain girl. He may have to help the sister with whom he lives, financially, too, and that may cripple his prospects.

It would be perfectly all right, in view of the friendship between you to give him a modest Christmas present, if you wish to do so, but not at all necessary, especially as you have no idea whether he will give you one or not.

I wouldn't get too serious with the young man, if I could help it, if I were you. Young men in love are usualy more arduous, but he may have, as I suggested, a good excuse.

GREEN EYES: So your "gentleman friend" preferred a blonde, did he? Don't peroxide your pretty brown curls on that account, dear. There is one statement of yours that I doubt very much. And that is, that "He is really worth any trouble that I'd have to win him back." Personally, I think a boy who would throw over a good pal for a blonde vamp, and was "awfully conceited," would be worth very little effort.

The best way to win him, however, if you really want him, is to let the blonde have him and have such a good time with other boys that he wil realize what he is missing. Either that or weep and wail and let him see that life isn't worth living without him, and so feed his vanity that he will take pity on you. Don't believe you are that kind of a girl, though, now are you?

* * *

BROKEN HEARTED: I am sure I cannot tell you why the boy friend stopped coming to see you and stepped speaking. It is probably just "one of those things." Sure, go with the other boy, and you may grow to like him, and your heart will be healed.

Duncan Sums Up Successful Year Just Passed; Sees Schools Much Improved

Local Educator Sees More Progress In New Year

WHAT city does not take pride in its fine school buildings, school playgrounds, libraries and laboratories? Although the true worth of a school does not depend fundamentally upon its equipment, it is according to the equipment that the layman usually judges the school and material progress made by the Lubbock schools during the past year has been such as would impress favorably any citizen or visitor.

However, M. H. Duncan, school superintendent, in surveying the progress made during the past year, goes beyond the material things, and, from the viewpoint of an educator, tells of improvements made in classroom instruction.

Tells Of Bond Vote

"Most people would say that the greatest accomplishment of the Lubbock public schools for the year 1929 was the voting of the $650,000 bond issue,' said Mr. Duncan, "and that was a forward step to be proud of. It meant that the people of Lubbock are really interested in the education of their children and that they are going to take care of their schools in a manner in keeping with the progress of this community.

"During the year 1929 the schools have added several thousand dollars worth of books to their libraries. They have purchased all the laboratory and other equipment necessary to the highest type of work. We believe that there is not a better equipped school system in the state than ours, and the good thing about it is that the school board has determined to keep it that way.

Instruction Improves

"The thing that I am especially proud of is the progress that has been made during the year in the type of classroom instruction given in the schools and the general tone of their work. The boys and girls of the Lubbock public schools are actually learning to do independent work. They are learning to use their minds and to solve the problems that they will have to solve in their everyday lives when they leave school. They are learning to take the lead in their school work and are developing in themselves the abilities and skills necessary in their everyday lives. They no longer sit in a lifeless recitation, merely repeating the words of a book, but they are learning to take the initiative and to do things, and we all know that the only way to learn to do is by doing.

"Another thing that we are proud of as a forward step in 1929 is the fine attitude that has been built up and that prevails among students and teachers in the schools. The teachers are happy in their work because they feel that they are not engaging in a mere deadening routine. They feel that they are accomplishing something in the lives of the children. They are studying their work doing their best to improve it, and they have thus created a zeal that the average teacher does not have—a zeal that makes possible the fine spirit that everywhere prevails in the schools.

Progress Is Made

"Material progress in a school system is, of course, necessary. There must be buildings and equipment and other tools necessary. There must be buildings and equipment and other tools necessary to doing the work in a modern school system. However, we make a mistake when we think of the material equipment of the schools as the main thing and regard only that phase when we consider their progress. The most important thing in a school system is the attitude of pupils and teachers towards their work and if we do not make progress in this attitude mere material progress becomes valueless. It is this phase of the progress of the Lubbock public schools during the year 1929 that we prize most highly and it is this progress that causes our school machinery to run so smoothly and so many of our boys and girls to remain in school until they have completed the work. It is this spirit that accounts for the large graduating class of last year and for the still larger class that we are going to have at the close of the present year.

"It is our aim for 1930 to continue to improve the work and tone of the schools in every way we can and to make still better the type of work that is done in the classrooms. We are trying to make the schools a great workshop where the boys and girls are engaged in those things that will build in their lives the knowledges, skills, ideals and attitudes necessary to sane American citizenship. As another means to that end, we are going to put forth a more serious effort than ever before to make every child one hundred per cent physically. Everyone knows that the child must have a correct physical basis if he does satisfactory work in school, and it is our intention to do all we can in every department of the schools to build such a basis," he concluded.

THE TINYMITES

The bear sure had a heap of fun. He sat and made the long bike run around in funny circles. Then he'd bounce upon the seat. He waved his front paws in the air and looked as if he didn't care what happened to the bicycle. The whole sight was a treat.

The Tinymites still hid from sight. It seemed the bear was tame all right, but they all seemed afraid to stand out where they could be seen. "Oh, my," said one, "What can we do? We face a problem that is new. The bear should get a spanking 'cause he's acting very mean.

"The bike is ours. He has no right to use it. Let's make a fight. What say we make some snowballs and then chase him out of here? We can pull one of our good stunts and start in throwing all at once. Perhaps, with such excitement, it will fill him full of fear."

"Well, I don't know," another sighed. "That is a plan that might be tried, but just supposin' Mister Bear decides to stay and fight. He's big and tall and very fat and with his paws, could crush us flat. I sadly fear the snowball plan would turn out far from right."

Just then a voice came from afar. "Hey, Buster, tell me where you are. You ran away from me and now I'll punish you right quick. You only get yourself in wrong. Your sneaking out of sight was just another funny trick."

"Oh, look! A man is bound this way," cried Scouty. "I just hope he'll stay until he catches Mister Bear. Then we can get our bike." The man ran out and chased the bear. The race was something really rare. "Ha, ha," cried Clowny, "This is just the sort of scene I like."

(The bear does some tricks in the next story.)

FOR THE NEW FORD

THE NEW FORD COUPE

Flowing grace of line gives style and distinction to new, roomy Ford bodies. Now on display at dealers' showrooms

THE NEW FORD CARS, shown last Tuesday for the first time, have been enthusiastically received throughout the country. Everywhere it is realized that now, more than ever, the new Ford is a "value far above the price."

One of the distinguishing features of the new Ford bodies is the carefully planned harmony of every detail of design. From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour heretofore thought possible only in an expensive automobile.

LOOKING at the new Ford you are impressed instantly by its smart style and compact, substantial sturdiness. For there is about it a certain character or personality which sets it apart and gives it a fresh and lasting beauty. You will take a real pride in this beauty just as you find a real thrill in the alert, capable performance of the car.

All of the new Ford bodies are finished in a variety of colors, with new striping and new streamline moulding. Interiors have more leg room. Closed cars have adjustable front seats. The smaller wheels, with larger tires, bring the car closer to the road, with a consequent gain in riding comfort and safety.

An additional feature of importance is the Rustless Steel used for the radiator shell, head lamps, hub caps, cowl finish strip and tail lamp.

Southwest Basketball Campaign Under Way Tuesday

IN THE REALM OF SPORT

WITH ALLAN CARNEY
Avalanche Sports Editor

Selection of the "All-State" high school football eleven by nine sports scribes in the state is the prize joke of the year.

• • •

The usually reliable Associated Press has in this instance failed utterly to arrive at a representative mythical selection. We are not saying that the system used is wrong or that we could furnish one that would work, but that a great news gathering organization has come up lacking in an important task.

• • •

Of the nine scribes who turned in their favorites, six are located in the highly touted sections called the Oil Belt and Central Texas. Two were from the extreme south portion of the state and one from North Texas. Not one of the nine had the opportunity to see many of the strong West Texas teams in action, including the Lubbock Westerners, who undoubtedly were on a par with the strongest team in the state—a point which was never settled, thanks to the "great" sportsmanship of Port Arthur school authorities.

• • •

It so happens that the majority of those who were placed on the all-state team hail from the centers where the scribes are located. But what else could be expected? Few of them went outside their own districts to gather their information and there were dozens of capable men who were not even considered. Each of the eight districts in the Interscholastic league has its outstanding performers; some have more outstanding material than others but inasmuch as all are members of the organization, none should be overlooked when the all-state mythical eleven is picked.

• • •

Upon the suggestion of the national basketball rules committee, a new court code is being tried out by various college teams in earlier season games. The proposed change eliminates the center jump and puts the ball into play from the sidelines. At the outset of the game a coin is flipped to determine which of the two teams shall put the ball in play behind the goal it is defending. After a club has scored its opponent takes the ball out of bounds behind its own goal and play is resumed.

• • •

Those who are advocating the elimination of the center jump hold that the practice favors heights and strength rather than basketball skill. A coach that scours the woods and finds a seven-foot pivot man has quite an advantage over the team whose center wears his hair just six feet away from his toe nails and the club that gets the tip-off holds quite an advantage from the offensive standpoint. The new system, if it is put into effect next year, will cause radical changes in floor tactics and formations. It has by no means been accepted, but it is being considered seriously by the powers that be.

• • •

Necessity to enforce training rules caused Coach Del Morgan to expell two members of his basketball squad at Lubbock high school last week. One of these was a letter man from last year's Westerner quintet and the other was a promising recruit. Loss of this pair will undoubtedly hurt the high school team, but Morgan is one who believes in a strict adherence to training rules regardless of how it affects the strength of the club.

• • •

The Westerners eked out a 15-13 victory over the Santa Fe Railmen of Slaton in a practice game Friday night, but the club showed a decided weakness in making their shots count. Tuesday night the local high school cagers will meet the same team in a return bout at Slaton.

• • •

Lack of adequate playing quarters has held back Coach Morgan in arranging a schedule for the Westerner floormen. The undersized cracker box at the high school building is no place for full grown boys to attempt a basketball game; two good strides in any direction will land a player out of bounds in practically every instance. A heavy home schedule for the Tech Matadors has made it almost impossible for the Westerners to match games on the college court.

• • •

Looks like another National league flag for the Chicago Cubs in 1930, and maybe a World's championship. This may be a bit early in the year to start predictions in basketball, but the fact is the championship team of 1929 is to be kept intact and nine new pitchers have been purchased by the Chicago management in addition to Lester Bell, a third baseman, indicates Wrigley and company mean business. Lack of a pitching staff lost the World series for the Cubs last fall, but Joe McCarthy doesn't intend to let this happen again.

• • •

Tech's basketball team takes on its first college competition of the year Tuesday night at Plainview, when Coach Payne sends his Matadors against the Wayland College Jackrabbits. Then on Tuesday night the Rabbits come here for a return engagement.

BILLIES DOWN OKLAHOMANS

BROWNWOOD, Jan. 4. (AP)—Daniel Baker College took the second of a two-game series with Southwest Oklahoma tonight by a 29 to 23 score after the Oklahomans had won last night. The game was featured by the elimination of the center jump, which was said to have speeded up the play. Harlow of Daniel Baker led scorers with 13 points.

New Year Promises Much For Lubbock Fans

Eventful Period Looms For Teams Of College Here

New Athletic Regime Is Promised For Texas Tech —High School Plans Big Football Year

A new era in the athletic history of Texas Tech and Lubbock high school looms on the 1930 horizon with prospects of far-reaching developments at both institutions.

Taking a leading role in the establishment of a new athletic conference for West Texas, the Matador college appears on the verge of a turning point insofar as its competitive teams are concerned. In the event that the proposed conference fails to mature the promise for a re-organization of Tech's athletic department paints the outlook for the ensuing year with a rosy hue.

Care Season Opens.

This week the Matador hardwood artists launch their 1930 basketball campaign with one of the most impressive cage units that has ever worn the Scarlet and Black abbreviated togs. Although several weeks behind in training, the Tech basketeers are rapidly shaping into a formidable organization. Games with leading teams in the Texas conference and the T. I. A. A. are on the club's schedule for the season.

Recent action of the Tech athletic council whereby baseball is to be abolished as a major college sport will give Coach Payne a break with his track candidates. The basketball mentor will thus be able to start regular work with his cinder artists immediately upon the completion of the court schedule. Heretofore the basketball season has been a direct conflict with the early track training season, the diamond sport drawing a number of promising cinder stars away from the track.

The majority of last year's squad members will be back this year to give the Matadors a strong track nucleus. A number of promising sophomore recruits will bolster the strength of the team.

1930 Football?

Football at Tech in 1930 at present is an unknown quantity, while the last season was unquestionably a disappointment from many standpoints, college authorities have promised that a new regime next fall will institute a new era in the grid history of the institution.

The college athletic council is at present making a thorough study of the coaching situation at Tech and the announcement of its decision will come January 28, when the board of directors meets at Corsicana." President Paul W. Horn said yesterday.

Definite announcement of the 1930 coaching staff will be known in time for the grid commander to head spring training.

A district basketball championship for Lubbock high school may have to be postponed until another year, when the Westerners move into their new quarters. At present the gold and black cagers are cramped into an under-sized gymnasium with no suitable place for playing their games. Coach Morgan is working his large squad of candidates daily and indications point to another strong court crew, but not one that can easily breeze through to the title.

Spring football training for the Westerners is due to start within a few weeks, according to a previous announcement of Head Coach Henry Frnka, and this move means that the high school mentors are thinking seriously about making a bid for the district title next fall. Several outstanding cogs in the 1929 eleven will be lost by graduation, but the Frnka-Morgan forces are certain to be up among the leaders when the 1930 campaign closes.

Change In Court Rule Not Favored

Elimination Of Center-Jump In Basketball Tried Out In Game At Dallas; Slows Up Game, Is Charge

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP)—A proposed change in basketball rules, eliminating the center-jump and substituting the method of putting the ball in play from the end zone, failed to make a hit with fans who saw the system tried out by Oklahoma University and Southern Methodist University here last night.

The Mustangs and Sooners tried it for a half, then went back to the usual method of tipping the ball from center. The second half was a decided improvement from the point of action it afforded.

The chief criticism of the proposed change seemed to be that it slowed the game, which already has slowed up to a remarkable extent in recent years. During the first period, when the method was employed, the teams made only three field goals between them. Ten were made in the second half.

It at least was a novelty to see the two teams line up at the start of game. There was a resemblance to football, with one team banked solidly under its goal, ready to defend, and the other outfit at the opposite end with the ball in its possession, starting a cautious advance down the floor. The whirl of action which attend the tip-off was missing. It left the spectators cold.

Extra! Latest Details of Shires' Fights!

Bad Bill Bailey, who was knocked out by Art "the Great" Shires in Buffalo the other night, and Mysterious Dan Daly, who was kayoed by Art "the Great" Shires in Chicago a week before that, are said to resemble one another to a remarkable degree.

• • •

Another match is under way for Shires with Mike Haley. Strange as it may seem, Mike is the living image of Bill and Dan. Do you suppose they're triplets?

• • •

Still another match is bing talked up: Shires vs. Sam Staley. And just to show you how queer coincidence can be sometimes, this lad Sam is the very picture of Dan and Bill and Mike.

• • •

Daly, Bailey, Haley, Staley—
Mr. Shires kayoes them gaily.

• • •

This reminds us vaguely that Gus Sonnenberg, ye wrestling champion rassled Dan Koloff, Dan Petroff Fred Gotch, Dave Shannon, and Dan Kolman, and for the life of you a person couldn't tell those grapplers apart.

• • •

Maybe Mr. Shires is merly copying the style of the approved ringsters, Jack Britton and Ted "Kid" Lewis, and Jackie Fields and Young Jack Thompson.

• • •

Shires' Opponent Admits He "Took A Dive" In Bout

Dangerous Dan Daly Tells Interviewer He Was Instructed To "Dive Or Else"; Preferred Former

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 4. (AP)—The Ohio State Journal tomorrow will say Dangerous Dan Daly, Arthur (The Great) Shires' opponent when the baseball star entered the pugilistic world in Chicago early in December in an interview said today "he took a dive" in the Chicago bout. He refused to name the men issuing the instruction that he permit Shires to win.

Dangerous Dan Daly is Jim Gerry, a Columbus lad.

Following is the interview with Gerry:

"A few days before the fight I received a wire from Cleveland asking if I wished to box in Chicago. I accepted, without the slightest idea of whom I was going to fight. I arrived in Chicago Sunday, the day before the fight. They treated me like a king and when I worked out in a gymnasium a large crowd assembled, including newspaper reporters and photographers. I had, of course, been registered at the hotel as Dangerous Dan Daly, and was told to forget, for a few days at least, my true name.

"Monday afternoon I was taken on a sightseeing trip and one of the places visited was the county jail. There were a lot of fellows in the hospital ward all banged up who might have been slugged after being taken for a ride. Well when they told me just before the fight that I was to 'take a dive,' or else, I thought about those poor fellows in the workhouse and the fact that I had only three dollars in my pocket. I was told the crowd was larger than expected and that they would give me $150 and my expenses for my services instead of $100 as promised provided I "took a dive." It was decided that I should go into the ring and mix like we were mad at each other and then stick out my chin for Mr. Shires to hit it. They told me to fall on my face so the referee could not see my eyes. I must have done right for they patted me on the back after the fight and the next day paid me $150 and also bought me a lot of clothes."

Carnera Is Full Fledged Italian

NEW YORK, N. Y., Jan. 4. (AP)—With gestures and official looking papers, the "board of managers" of Primo Carnera, newest heavyweight novelty, made it clear today the Giant Italian is a full fledged citizen of his native land, in good standing and without complications because of a residence of several years in France. The New York Daily News in a copyrighted story had said Carnera's status was under investigation by consular authorities on the ground that he foreswore Italian citizenship for French.

Carnera and his managers exhibited documentary evidence to show that, while the boxer actually had applied at one time for French citizenship papers, these were renounced last December 16.

National League Champions Learned Valuable Lesson From Athletics In World Series And Promise Flag Drive

Nine Recruits Acquired To Bolster Pitching Staff; Lester Bell Will Plug Third Base Position

BY PAUL MICKELSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Joe McCarthy and his Cubs learned a first class baseball lesson from the Athletics in last fall's world series and learned it so well they promise to make another victorious drive for the National league championship in 1930.

The lesson was the necessity of a better pitching staff and the necessity of a thirdbaseman who could hit as well as field. With Owner William Wrigley dangling a fat purse before major and minor league magnates, the Cubs probably have done more shopping for 1930 than any major league club, keeping their 1929 lineup almost intact.

Grab Hurling Recruits

To strengthen their pitching staff, they have acquired nine recruits, including two of the best prospects ever to come out of the American Association. They are Malcolm Moss, youthful Louisville southpaw, and Lynn Nelson, pitching ace of Kansas City's championship club last season. At third base they will have Lester Bell, a natural hitter, who was obtained from the Braves for a big bundle of cash.

"We are almost certain to get two or three good pitchers out of that group," President William Veeck said, "and they will help Charlie Root, Pat Malone, Guy Bush, Hal Carlson and the other pitching veterans of the staff immensurably."

Another item of cheer for the Cubs is the promised return of Leo "Gabby" Hartnett, who failed to catch a game last season because of a lame throwing arm. Hartnett and his physician have pronounced the salary wing in perfect condition again. Zach Taylor and Fred Schulte will be back behind the plate and Earl Grace, a promising backstop, who was farmed out to Reading, Pa., last season will get another chance.

Another addition is Ray Schalk, former White Sox catcher, who will help Manager McCarthy along the coaching lines, and catch if necessary. Schalk is expected to prove of great help to the big crop of rookie pitchers the Cubs will take with them to Catalina Island.

Seven right handers and two pitchers comprise the rookie hurling staff. In addition to Moss and Nelson, they are George Bell, right hander from Mobile, of the Southern Association; Ed Lautenbacher, right hander, who was sent to Reading in the middle of the 1929 season for more experience; William McAfee, all-star right hander from the University of Michigan; Albert Shealey, veteran right hander, who was drafted from St. Paul of the American Association; Arthur Treschout, left hander from Indianapolis of the American Association; L. Wreneke, right hander from Shreveport, La., and August Walsh, who toiled for the Philadelphia Nationals in 1928 and who had a great season with Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast league last season.

Another promising prospect for the infield is Bill Jurgess of Reading. Jurgess is a shortstop and was voted the most valuable player in the New England league in 1929.

Rogers Hornsby, keystone man of the Cubs, expects a better season in 1930, too. The "Rajah" was hindered by a growth on his right heel during the closing days of the 1929 season but has had it removed and he reports he is ready for his annual collection of home runs, base hits and double play assists.

School Boy Title May Be Decided

Hopes Flare Up Again For Play-Off Between Port Arthur And Breckenridge —Dennis Comes North

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP)—Hopes that the Port Arthur Yellowjackets and Breckenridge Buckaroos would get together in a belated play-off for the state high school football crown flared anew today.

Tom Dennis, coach of the Jackets, was reported to be here, or somewhere in North Texas, prepared to confer with Breckenridge officials.

Officials of the Oil Belt school, including Coach P. E. Shotwell, said they had heard nothing from Dennis relative to the possibility of a play-off, but would be tickled to talk it over with him.

Two weeks have elapsed since the two finalists skidded to a scoreless tie on the Cotton Palace field at Waco. They played, or attempted to play, in one of the worst snow storms in the history of Central Texas. Since then, events in the schoolboy wrangle have transpired in something like the following order:

Coach Dennis of Port Arthur (immediately after the game) said his boys had gone through a hard schedule and that it was doubtful there would be a play-off. Captain Dumesnell of the Jackets said his team would like to play it off, but that they would play only at Port Arthur.

Breckenridge offered to play the game at Port Arthur, or anywhere.

Port Arthur school officials met and decided the football season already had extended long enough and turned "thumbs down" on a playoff.

An item from Breckenridge said that the Buckaroos, despairing of another game for the title, had disbanded and turned to basketball.

Letters began pouring into the Port Arthur newspapers from citizens of that city, demanding that the school board relent in its attitude and permit the Jackets to play again.

A petition was circulated among Port Arthur citizens, pointing out that it was unfair to the Jackets not to permit them to make one more stab at the title. It accumulated several thousand signatures and was presented to the school board at its weekly meeting.

It was reported that Coach Dennis was seeking a conference with Breckenridge officials.

COLLEGE COLUMN
BY CLAIRE BURCKY

Prospects for a championship track team at the University of Southern California never were brighter than they are right now.

Wykoff

Those are the words of Charlie Borah, himself a former Southern California and Olympic dash star and now sports writer on the staff of the Daily Trojan, school paper. Coach Dean Cromwell has an array of talent in almost every event and if all the athletes remain eligible next semester the Trojans should run through their schedule without defeat, believes Borah.

Southern California lost one dual engagement last season. They were defeated by Stanford, whose well-balanced squad won the I. C. 4-A championship that fans used to believe belonged wholly to Southern California.

Frank Wykoff, member of the 1928 Olympic team while still in high school, is expected to be the ace of the Trojan sprinters. Maurer Guyer and Draper are other flyers who will register many points. Williams, Bastijan and Pearson are veteran quarter-milers. Coach Cromwell anticipates a slam in all dual competition in the mile run, with Hansen, an Oregon Aggie transfer and Pacific Coast Conference champion, and Halstead and Hammatt, outstanding runners from the frosh, as consistent performers.

Borah declares Cromwell has more hurdler than he knows what to do with. They are Jimmy and Ernie Payne of last years varsity; Moffatt, Roberts, Stokes and Vignolo, fine prospects from the freshmen, and Welch, Bills and Carls, transfers.

Captain Jess Mortensen, national javelin champion, with a mark of something over 204 feet, is outstanding of the field event men. Jesse Hill is a certain point winner in the broad jump and with Van Osdel should score heavily in the high jump. Both Mortensen and Hill are football men awaiting the Tournament of Roses game with Pitt before they can jump into the abbreviated costume of the track.

Panthers To Open Spring Training Grind On March 3 At Mineral Wells; Expect Additions

FORT WORTH, Jan. 4. (AP)—Twenty-seven players, one catcher-manager, 12 pitchers, 9 infielders and 5 outfielders—are on the roster of the Fort Worth baseball club announced Saturday afternoon by Ted Robinson, president. Frank Snyder, is the catcher-manager having bossed the Panthers the past season.

Included in the players are several that probably will be traded before the spring training grind opens March 3 at Mineral Wells. When the players gather for the first time for the jaunt to the resort city only about thirty are expected to compromise the roster.

Additions to the roster are expected in the catching, pitching and outfield departments. It is certain that aid will be obtained for Snyder. Two catchers are likely as the Panther boss will be unable to spend much time behind the plate during the spring work, his attention being turned to the developing of the players. However, one or even both of the expected receivers may be rookies.

The roster follows:

Catcher—Frank Snyder.

Infielders—Dallas Clements, Bill Kelly, Norman Crosthwait, first base; Leslie Mellon, Tom Clancy, Karl Urban, second base; Chester Fowler, third base; Jack Tavener, Joseph Boykin, shortstop.

Outfielders—Dick Sullivan, Eddie Moore, Emmett Fleming, R. B. Hickcok.

Pitchers—Jimmy Walkup, Noel Haynes, Ferd Schupp, Paul Gribble, Dick McCabe, Dick Whitworth, Vincent Devaney, Charles Kearney, Leroy Blaney, William Clarkson, Henry Hardware and Edward Hynes.

Bill Roper Will Retire As Coach At Princeton U.

Albert Wittmer To Succeed Veteran Mentor As Football Commander; Is Also Basketball Coach

PRINCETON, N. J. Jan. 4. (AP)—Concluding 14 years of service as head coach of Princeton football, William W. Roper will retire after the 1930 season and will be succeeded by Albert H. Wittmer, Jr., line coach, who will enter upon a four-year contract, it was announced today.

Pressure of his business and political duties in Philadelphia, where he is a member of the city council in addition to dealing in insurance, was given by Roper as the reason.

Roper has turned out formidable football teams at Princeton since 1919 and also served successfully as head coach in 1910 and 1911.

A capable end in the days of "Big Bill" Edwards and Arthur Poe, he was graduated at Princeton in 1902. He is 47 years old.

Al Wittmer, young lawyer selected to succeed Roper, is an elder brother of Eddie Wittmer, senior at Princeton, who was the backfield star of the team for the last three seasons and is capitain of the basketball five.

In addition to his football duties Wittmer holds the position of head coach of basketball. It is expected he will continue in that capacity.

Six Championship Games Are Booked For Opening Week In Title Scramble; Porker Quintet Shows Signs Of Slipping

Conspicious Lack Of Riotous Enthusiasm As Conference Season Gets Under Way; Owls Are Given Chance To Upset Razorback Streak

By GAYLE TALBOT, JR.,
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP)—Another Southwest Conference basketball campaign will be inaugurated Tuesday night at Houston, with the Rice Institute Owls and Texas University Longhorns representing the parties of the first and second part.

There is a conspicuous lack of riotous enthusiasm as the conference cagers begin their annual scramble. This may be accounted for in part by the fact that all seven championship aspirants, up to and including the Arkansas Razorbacks, perennial titlists, have been taking it on the chin with alarming regularity since the practice season opened.

Matadors Wallop Littlefield Five In Ragged Clash

Tech Quintet Scores 38 To 20 Victory Over Hemphill's Crew Saturday Night; Fisher High

Texas Tech's basketball hopefuls gained revenge in a big way from the Littlefield Athletics at the college gymnasium last night by lambasting Andy Hemphill's aggregation, 38 to 20, in a rought exhibition that lacked most of the elements essential to the game as it is played in the best circles.

It was the second meeting of the season between the Matadors and White Elephants. And thanks to the extremely poor showing of the visitors, the Pavnemen won. Both teams displayed little knowledge as to the location of the basket. Enough shots were missed to have doubled or even tripled the score.

Getting off to a slow start, the collegians were unable to get their scoring plays in operation during the first half, the period ending with the Matadors leading 16 to 5. Both clubs opened up considerably in the closing stanza, the college crew adding 22 points and the Elephants 15. Again Coach Payne sent his entire squad into the game in an effort to find his most effective combination.

Fisher Scores Eleven.

Capt. Leon Fisher emerged with high point honors, accounting for 11 points with five field goals and one free throw. Bill Maxwell was close behind with nine points. The floor work of Dennis Vinsant, veteran Tech guard, was one of the few satisfying features of the contest. Vinsant bore the brunt of the Matadors' attack advancing the ball deep into enemy territory and himself scoring eight points.

It was the second successive defeat for the Littlefield team, which had previously won eight out of nine starts.

Tuesday night the Tech squad goes to Plainview for a deal with Frank Kimbrough's Wayland Jackrabbits. On the following Thursday night, the Bantists come here for a return combat.

Baylor Bears In 44 To 31 Victory

WACO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Featuring Jake Wilson, speedy grid star of the past season, the Baylor Bears took their second game in a row from the Orleaneans tonight, 44 to 31. Wilson was high point man with 16 points, seven field goals and two free throws.

The Bruins demonstrated beyond a doubt they have reserve power. Coming from the half the underdogs 26 to 16, the Bears began an uphill climb to triumph.

With Smith, Kiersky, Wilson and Alford available at forward Strickland at center and Wells, Runnels, Witcher, and Byerly at guards, Baylor will put up a hard fight against the Texas Longhorns Saturday. Wells counted for three ringers.

Hammonds starred for the visitors scoring 11 points.

BOBCATS TAME LIONS

SAN MARCOS, Jan. 4. (AP)—Trailing at the half, the Bobcats of San Marcos Teachers college came back to defeat St. Marks Lions of San Antonio, 42 to 30, here tonight in a slam bang basketball game. Brandt of the Bobcats and Weidland of the Lions tied for high point honors with 15 each.

Porkers Still Favorites

The lanky Razorbacks still rank as favorite, but they have displayed unmistakable symptoms of slipping. Bereft of their "wonder" coach Francis Schmidt, who piloted them to four straight flags, the Porkers barely nosed out in a couple of engagements with Oklahoma Teacher teams before the holidays. Thursday they embarked on a barnstorming jaunt through Kansas and Missouri that so far has proved far from pleasant. Drury College knocked them off, 28 to 25, Thursday night, and St. Louis University poured it on, 32 to 13, Friday night.

There is no telling how long it has been since the Razorbacks lost two straight games. Four or five years, anyway.

All of the others, Texas Christian, Texas A. & M., Texas University, Southern Methodist, Rice and Baylor have been downed a time or two, most of them by teams of secondary state colleges.

Owls Are Strong

Coach Pug Daugherity's Rice Institute five seems to stand the best chance of tearing down Arkansas' play house. The Longhorns have not quite lived up to expectations. The owls have lost two bouts, to East Texas Teachers and Sam Houston Normal.

Coach Fred Walker's Texas quintet runner-up last year and figured to be strong contender this season has not hit its stride. There has been no one so far, to take the place of Holly Brock, brilliant 1929 captain and scoring ace. The Oklahoma University Sooners knocked them off twice at Oklahoma City.

Rice's greatest claim to distinction on the eve of the campaign is a brace of victories over the Houston Triangles, annually one of the strongest independent clubs in the state. They have Holly Brock on their roster this year. The Owls' last victory over them was somewhat costly, in that Carleton Polk, sensational sophomore guard, fractured an arm that will keep him off the floor the remainder of the season. Jake Hess and Ray Hart of the Owls still look like the greatest forward combination in the conference.

Bees Heads Longhorns

Anyway, the Longhorns and Owls will unleash the tocsin—whatever that is—Tuesday night. Coach Walker will take his Texas squad to Houston tomorrow for a preliminary workout on the Rice floor. The team is captained by Nona Bees of San Antonio.

All of the other five contenders will have entered the won and lost column by the end of the week. Texas Christian will open against Arkansas Friday and Saturday at Fayetteville. The Razorbacks will face the charges of their former mentor, Francis Schmidt.

Southern Methodist, which scarcely can be considered a serious contender, will open with an invasion of the southern sector, meeting the Texas Aggies Friday night at College Station and hopping over to Houston for a joust with Rice on Saturday.

Texas and Baylor will clash Saturday night at Waco. Six games are booked for the coming week. They should give a fair idea of the direction the conference wind is blowing.

Last year the tournament here drew 16 teams and an even greater number are expected to compete this season.

Contracts To Go Out To Mavericks

Dallas Club Will Mail Out Documents To Players For 1930 Season This Week; Eleven Are Signed

DALLAS, Jan. 4. (AP)—Playing contracts for the 1930 baseball season will be mailed next week to men whose names are on the roster of the Dallas Steers, President Fred McJunkin announced tonight. Thirty-two players are listed to report to the Steers' spring training camp here on March 3. Of these, eleven already have signed. Most under contract are youngsters picked up since the close of last season.

The eleven who have signed are, Fred Morris, jr., Ennis, infielder; Lynn Griffin, southpaw pitcher from Allen academy; Bill Wilson, right-handed hurler from Birmingham who last season was with Muskogee, Okla., in the Western association; Raymond Maurer, right-handed pitcher picked by Manager Jakie Atz; Claude Robertson, former Beaumont pilot who is delegated to the first string catching job and to act as first-lieutenant to Atz; M. B. Donohue of San Antonio, young receiver; A. B. Flynn, another rookie backstop from Austin, who tried out with the Herd last spring; Carl Dixon, sensational young right-handed hurler grabbed from a Houston city league team; T. A. Schuble, young first sacker from the Bayou City and brother of Heine Schuble, former Buff shortstop; Frank J. Wilson, outfielder from Kennedy, Okla., and Harry Weston, big right handed Jewish pitcher from Brooklyn, N. Y.

Atz has a reputation for developing young players and local club magnates believe they have in this string a first class crop of rookie talent. Atz will arrive here late in February to take charge of activities. The first exhibition games are scheduled for March 15 and 16 with the St. Paul club of the American association, which will train at Mineral Wells.

Terracing Going On In Crosby Co.

Machines Active In Spite Of Lack Of County Agent; Ralls Vocational Agricultural Teacher Heads

Despite the fact that Crosby county does not have a county agent, there are four terracing machines busy in the Ralls trade territory, according to Percy B. Ralls, of that city, and wide interest is prevalent in the work of conserving soil by this method.

The terracing work near Ralls is being done under the supervision of E. E. Young, teacher of vocational agriculture at the Ralls high school, with boys of his classes doing actual surveying and making terraces.

Several Terraced

"Several farms were terraced in the Ralls area last year," said Mr. Ralls while in Lubbock Saturday, "and these tracts made from $3 to $8 per acre more than identical land adjoining, but not terraced."

One important fact has been discovered by farmers of his section, Mr. Ralls declares, that is seldom thought of in regard to benefits to be derived by terracing. It has been noticed that because of a peculiarity of soil there, following a hard rain the soil will be soaked for a depth of from one-third to one-half an inch, when a cementing process obtains and the remainder of the water runs off. By terracing the water is kept on this land until it soaks through this congealed subsoil and gives a good seasoning.

"We have more than ample rainfall during the years, out here," says Mr. Ralls, "and yet because of lack of terraced protection we lose the greater part of this rainfall. It is like what is to be noticed in low places. Water stands at these points and growing crops will therefore receive full expansion here, while fifty feet away from these spots plants will be stunted from lack of moisture."

Ralls Turns Back Panhandle, 37-12

(Special To The Avalanche Journal)

RALLS, Jan. 4.—The Jackrabbit cagers of Ralls High school had easy sailing here last night in turning back a Panhandle quintet, 37 to 12, for their second triumph in two days.

Coach Lovvorn's regulars were going at top speed in the opening half to pile up a 22 to 4 lead over the visitors and the second stringers went in to complete the massacre in the second half.

Although playing just half the game, King, Ralls center, carried off high point honors for the night with 12 points. Upham scored 6 points to lead the Panhandle five.

Tahoka Bulldogs are here Monday and Tuesday nights to meet the Jackrabbits.

New Yorker Wins First In Tourney

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4. (AP)—Braving a high wind that swept the Miami Country Club course throughout the day, Mike Brady, Mamaroneck, N. Y., professional sunk an eight foot putt as dusk fell tonight to win first day honors in the annual $3,000 Miami open golf tournament with a score of 150 for the 36 holes.

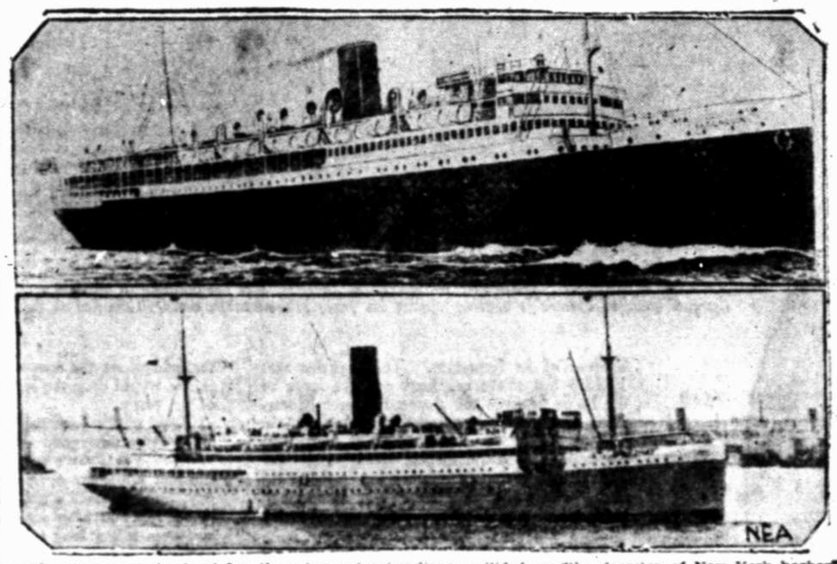

Brady was one stroke ahead of Al Horon, Reading, Pa., and Willie Klein, Miami Beach and former Miami open champion, as the 155 registrants in the 72-hole tourney finished their driving and putting for the day.

A Rammed Liner Sank In Gotham's Fog-Bound Harbor

NEA New York Bureau.

It was a calm, efficient display of seamanship that prevented any loss of life when the liner Port Victoria, steaming out for Bermuda with 255 holiday-bound passengers aboard, was rammed and sunk by the steamship Algonquin in Ambrose Channel off Sandy Hook, N. J., in a thick fog. Here you see passengers from the foundered steamer landing at the Quarantine station from the pilot boat Sandy Hook, which saved 144 persons from the doomed ship. Four investigations are under way to determine responsibility for the crash.

Enveloped in gray clouds of fog, these two out-going liners collided on "the doorstep of New York harbor"—Ambrose Channel, off Sandy Hook, N. J. A deep hole cut amidships, its boiler and engine rooms quickly flooded, the Bermuda-bound steamship Port Victoria, pictured below, capsized and sank—but not before 255 passengers had been safely removed to the decks of two small pilot boats in one of the most miraculous sea rescues in navigation history. The Clyde liner Algonquin, shown at top, was only slightly damaged. It stood by, its radio sending out frantic S O S signals for the foundering Port Victoria.

Governor Of International Training School Is Enrolled As Tech Freshman

Glen Hackney, of Sulphur Springs, who was recently elected governor for next year's sessions of the International Leadership Training School at Springfield, Mass., has enrolled as a freshman at Texas Technological college for the winter term it was announced here Saturday.

Young Hackney, recent high school graduate, will earn, partially at least, his expenses through the college by proceeds from a milch cow, which he purchased since arriving in Lubbock.

Holds High Honor

Representatives from 33 states and four Canadian provinces bestowed the highest honor within their power in electing Hackney to the governorship of the school for next year. He will return next fall to Massachusetts with all expenses paid to assist in conducting courses designed to develop a higher type of rural leadership.

Hackney says that his profits in club work within the last five years have totalled $1,800. He has won four trips to the State fair at Dallas and one trip to the short courses at Texas A and M. college. Receipts from sale of milk from a cow he raised for dairy calf demonstrations were sufficient last year to pay Hackney's board while attending high school.

He has two brothers who will also enroll at Tech as soon as they can find part-time employment.

Denton Teachers Beaten By Frogs

DENTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Unable to sink shots with any degree of success, the Denton Teachers College Eagles were defeated in a fast basketball game here tonight by Texas Christian University, 16 to 15.

At the half the frogs were leading 13 to 6 but in the second half were held to three points while the Eagles were marking up nine. Just as the game ended, Brock, Denton center, missed a crip shot to the basket which would have won the contest for the locals. Cummongs, Denton forward, was high point man with six, while Flynn, Frog forward was second with five points.

HOOKS and SLIDES

William Braucher

WINTER OF OUR DISCONTENT

It was Will Shakespeare who wrote something about this being the winter of his discontent. This seems to prove that Will, at one time or other, must have conducted a column on boxing. We have never seen a column of Will's fistic writings. Probably they were lost in the morgue. Things have a way of disappearing like that. But probably Mr. Shakespeare, under the heading of "Bill's Jabs and Jibes," wrote just that lead for a column of comment on the cauliflower talent of his period.

It was probably at a time when old London was having a tournament for a Tunney-Muldoon trophy emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the world. There had been a parade of Sharkeys, Riskos, Griffiths and others floundering, scowling, weeping, poking and talking — in fact doing everything but what was wanted—delivering a knockout clout to the snout. Will sat at the ringside through it all, saw them spit and snort and scowl and foul and shuffle and grab—and then sat down and wrote his lead, "now is the winter of our discontent." Surely it must have been that way.

WILL BECOMES DISGUSTED

Probably some other Johnny Risko and some other Tuffy Griffiths had just put on a bout that was supposed to produce a contender for the cup and the championship. They had pounded one another's chin and ribs during 10 rounds. And at the end of the thing Will couldn't for the life of him decide which had won. Neither was superior. Will was somewhat disgusted when he went to write a piece about it for the papers.

You couldn't blame him. He had sat and watched so many. From Sweden had come Otto von Porat to meet London's pride, Philip (Suffering) Scott. There had been a round of pulling and hauling after which the Von smote Philip upon the hip and Philip put on the dying gladiator act.

• • •

THE TERRIBLE SHARKEY MAN

The Jack Sharkey of that period probably wore a terrible look on his face, too. And fought terribly at times, as well. There were times when Will would wax enthusiastic about him in his "Jabs and Jibes" and other times when he felt like fighting the varlet himself.

They had to fight for Will all the time. He got into all the fights free, but he wanted at least his money's worth. Sharkey could fight sometimes; why didn't he fight all the time? Will couldn't understand how a fighter could be a dog one night and a dragon the next. So he wrote a paragraph into his story of discontent in which he said that Sharkey never could satisfy him as a heavyweight champion.

Will wanted that trip to Miami, probably, and saw no chance of getting it if the chosen gladiators were of the palooka variety then holding the spotlight.

One thing, though, there probably were no Campolos or Carneras hovering in the background when Will was doing his writing. If there had been, Will never would have written that line about "My kingdom for a horse!"

Bear "Traded In" On New Dodge

"Teddy," a 350-pound Canadian black bear turned over to the Makibben Motor Company, Dodge Dealers in Cedar Rapids, Ia., as part payment on a new Dodge sedan by Milfred Engelbert of Williamsburg, Ia., poses with William F. Velz, custodian of the Cedar Rapids Zoo. Bruin was presented to the zoo by the Dodge Dealer. Because he is a good-natured animal, trained to do a number of amusing tricks, and also because he is probably the first bear ever to be traded in for a new automobile, "Teddy" is expected to be a headline attraction at the zoo.

Hawkeyes Again Seek Admission

IOWA CITY, Jan. 4. (AP)—The third attempt of the University of Iowa to regain admittance into the good graces will be made here Thursday when conference representatives comes to Iowa City.

While the committee will visit the Hawkeye campus primarily to investigate the status of 13 athletes suspended by Old Gold officials for participation in the now famous "trust fund," Iowa officials hope their visit will open the way to the early presentation of a new petition for the Hawkeyes' reinstatement.

Twice since the Big Ten faculty committee voted to sever athletic relations with the University of Iowa, effective Jan. 1, have the Hawkeye athletic officials sought to have the action rescinded. Both attempts have failed.

STORY OF MY CLUB WORK

By Ruth Leavelle

One cold day in November, 1924, a lady visited our school. We had heard of 4-H clubs and the wonderful things they were doing, before. This lady asked the principal of our school for permission to speak to us awhile. She began by telling us she was the home demonstration agent of Lubbock county and that now we could have 4-H clubs just as other counties were having.

All my friends were joining and as I was very young, only 12 years old, I didn't even know what I was doing.

She Selected Gardening.

When I chose a productive project I chose gardening, because that was what my friends were choosing. But, considering the good derived of that project it must have been a very good choice.

In caring for my garden I was very devoted to the work and was constantly to be seen working in the garden. This year I have done more than any other year. When the lice struck my cucumbers I learned that by spraying them I could kill the lice and could have many more and much nicer cucumbers. When I was irrigating I learned to irrigate the garden at morning and night, rather than at mid-day.

I knew that if I could do more of the cooking I would learn to be more conservative and at the same time be nicer and cleaner. I found out the many different ways of preparing foods so they would retain their full food value. Mother was so pleased with my accomplishments in food preparation that, as a result of it, she now has me to do almost all the cooking.

In canning, I learned that the more I could can the better it was, so I always try to can enough now to run us through the year. I learned to can things our body needs, as well as just what we liked.

When it comes to improving the home, it seems everything I would start was something permanent so, as we don't own the place where we live I didn't try very hard to improve anything, although I learned the principles of some improvement. Next year, when we move to our own home I intend to make up for lost time in improving our home.

Considering all, my club work has a deep significance to me. It has helped me mentally, physically and morally. I feel greatly indebted to my home demonstration agents for their helpfulness in directing my club work.

Thrills of an Aerial Cameraman

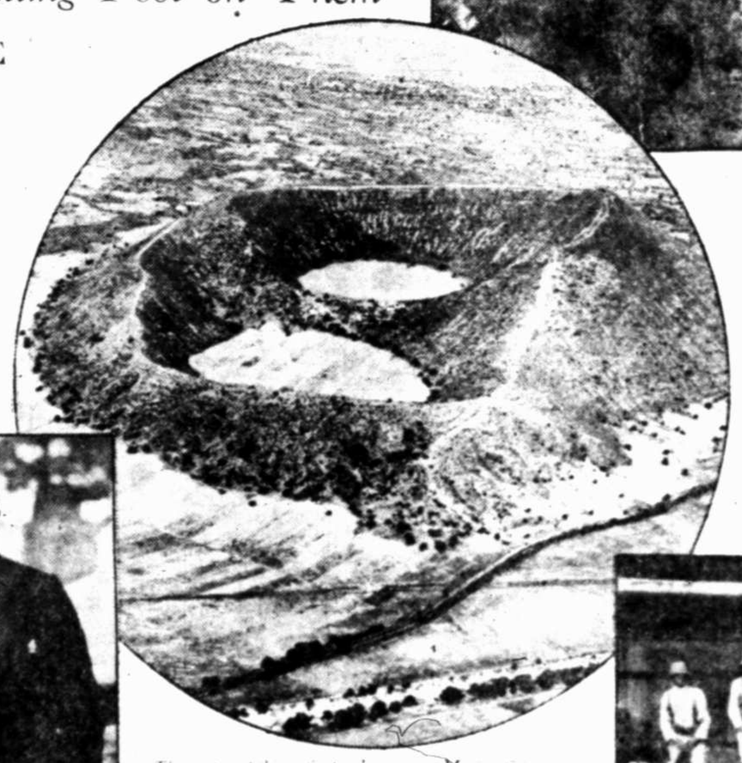

Sydney Bonnick, Who Took Pictures Of Mexican Volcanoes and Maya Ruins A Year Before Lindy's Recent Flight Of Discovery to Central America, Has Been Photographing From Planes Since 1910 and He Has Explored Vast Jungle and Mountain Regions Without Ever Setting Foot on Them

By MARION GILLESPIE

(All photos by Fairchild Aerial Surveys, Inc.)

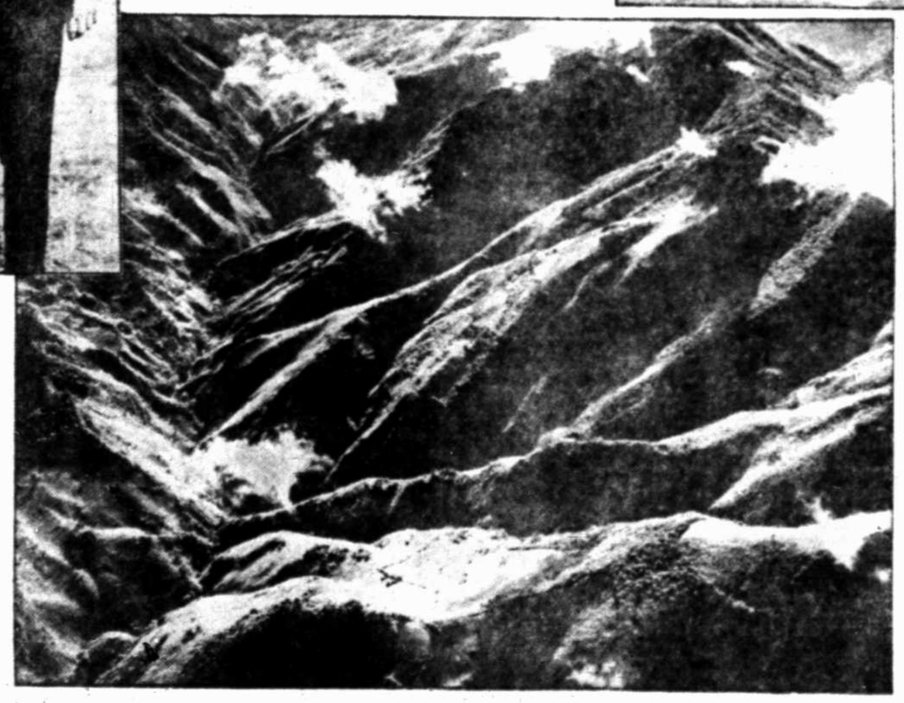

The crater of this extinct volcano near Mexico City was revealed by this air photo to be the farm home of a timorous Indian . . . safe from all his enemies.

Flying Photographer Sydney Bonnick. . . . "I feel safer flying across mountain ranges . . . than walking across city streets."

"Eight armed Federal soldiers guarded our plane . . . Owing to the outbreak of a revolution we were not to be allowed to leave the ground."

Today's Puzzle Picture: How many mistakes could you make if your motor suddenly died above this typical sector of Mexican mountains . . . and you had to pick a spot for a forced landing?

WAY back in the quiet days of 1910 Sydney Bonnick decided that he would rather be an aerial photographer than anything else on earth—or more strictly, above it. At that time this meant leaning over the side of a swaying balloon basket and taking pictures of the pleasant countryside below with an ordinary camera. It was long before the days of "flying dark rooms" and special aerial cameras. But it was thrilling business even if it didn't take one very far away from civilization.

Now, aeronautical improvements have increased the flyer's margin of safety while in the air, but additional thrills have been brought into the life of a flying cameraman by the fact that these same improvements have made all the wildest and littlest-known parts of the earth especially inviting to him.

It is now possible, for instance, for two men—the photographer and his pilot—to fly over unknown terrain and in 10 hours flying time chart a country that would have taken an engineering crew on the ground three months. The finished product of such an aerial survey is a composite photograph that shows at a glance the actual topography of the section.

Bonnick recently returned from his second aerial survey of parts of Mexico never flown over by man. His pictures show close-ups of mountains whose jagged edges could rip the plane wing from wing in the twinkling of an eye. And jungles so impenetrable that getting into them for any distance would require days of arduous labor cutting a path as wide as a Mexican's hat. His adventures included arguments with pythons, wild boars and alligators.

Bonnick's recent Mexican expedition was over an almost inaccessible region in a country inhabited by ancient ruins and hostile Indians.

"WE left Brownsville, Texas, for a destination far in the interior of Mexico," Bonnick relates. "As far as civilization is concerned it was the original and well-known 'jumping-off place.

"We were to survey some 1500 square miles of weird country—all mountains, jungles and swamps. We carried parachutes, of course, but I often wondered up there at 13,000 feet, if we should have to pile out in a hurry, which would be the best course to drift. There was small choice between snake-infested swamps and jungles and streams alive with alligators.

"We made a reconnaissance flight over the area to be photographed and went to work in earnest. A large part of the survey was shot in a flight of seven hours and 20 minutes.

"The next morning my pilot, George Kraigher, who had served in the Serbian and French aviation services during the war, rushed into my quarters to greet me with 'Shake, old man, we're in the war again! Go over and look at the plane!'

"I followed him outside and found eight Federal soldiers, with guns extended, guarding our plane, and they wouldn't let us near it! After some inquiry I found that the guard had special orders from the general in command of the district. Owing to the outbreak of a revolution, we would be unable to take our plane off the ground. We were assured, however, that our equipment would be protected.

"This condition lasted for several weeks, during which time we gazed at a cloudless sky and tore our hair. Photographic days were going by and we weren't able to take a single picture.

"The average aerial photographic time is one day in seven, and naturally our organization makes sure when a favorable day arrives that pictures will be made. It checks closely on weather reports, advance notifications of weather conditions and last-minute notice by phone or radio. If a photographer fails to turn in a roll of films after all these checks have been made, he has to furnish a first-class alibi.

"When I sent the New York office a picture of our plane resting in the hangar with eight Mexican soldiers standing guard in front of the entrance, my alibi was perfect!

"AT one time we were commanded to go aloft and make a survey of the rebel lines, and under guard of one Mexican soldier who went in the plane with us, we flew over the territory and photographed the situation. When we landed we were surprised to find 12 bullet holes had damaged our fuselage, and we hadn't even known that we were being fired on!

"Aside from this episode we took no part in the revolution, although geographically we were in the thick of it. During the time the Federals chased the rebels and vice versa, we spent our time developing the pictures we had already taken.

"At the conclusion of our mapping, we made trips between Mexico City and Tampico to secure views of the volcanoes Popocatepetl and Ixtaccihuatl, known as the sleeping lady because of its formation. This location was 18,000 feet above sea level and the scene of the battle between the Aztec Emperor Montezuma and the Spanish invader Cortez.

"On one of our flights, 16,000 feet above the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, we were rewarded with a view that perhaps no one in the world had ever seen before—the Pacific Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico at the same time, with the Isthmus stretching narrowly in between.

"After making pictures of the volcanoes, we proceeded to Merida Yucatan and took the first air pictures of the ancient ruins of Uxmal and Chicen Itza, remnants of the long-departed Mayan civilization recently visited by Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh.

"We also flew over one extinct volcano in whose crater an Indian had built himself a home and planted his small farm. The rim of the crater afforded a natural protection, and the Indian probably felt that he was fortified for life against his enemies.

"The Indians working in the fields, sighted us and ran into the house as we approached. No doubt ours was the first plane they had ever seen, and we could well imagine their consternation.

"THIS country for hundreds of miles is solid volcanic rock which absorbs the heat of the sun, and in the low altitude at which we made our pictures, there is an air condition that makes one feel there are a thousand devils trying to tear the wings from the plane.

"When I took these pictures, we struck just such an air disturbance. It knocked the camera against my face, broke a tooth and left me flat on my back on the floor of the plane with a 38-pound camera sitting on my chest.

"An uncomfortable situation in the making of pictures in tropical climates is the extreme difference in temperatures. In preparing for a flight we are obliged to wear heavy fur-lined flying suits and felt boots. We have to wear these fireless cookers with a temperature on the ground of 100 in the shade. An hour's climbing, and oppressive heat at an altitude of 15,000 feet gives way to penetrating cold. Returning to lower levels, the gas tanks, camera, and all metal is streaming with water due to the rapid condensation.

"DURING my last trip to Mexico, one of my pilots had an interesting experience. One of the oil companies had had trouble with bandits holding up the paymaster, so they decided to send the payroll out to the wells by plane.

"The paymaster loaded about 1000 pesos in gold into a leather bag, sealed it carefully, then when the pilot would swoop down over the field where the men were working, the paymaster would drop the leather bag over the side of the plane.

"The pilot's landmark was a point where two rivers converged. When he reached this spot his course lay along the river to the right. He had flown the course many times, but this day, through some error, he followed the river to the left and after some distance realized he had been flying long enough to be sighting the oil fields.

"He looked out of the cabin and was surprised to see mountains looming up on either side of the plane, and knew he was off his course.

"There was no room between the rocky walls to turn the plane around, so he kept straight ahead, hoping to rise high enough to find turning space. The mountains were rising higher and higher each moment and suddenly he sighted a sheer wall of rock some 9000 feet high rising directly in his path! It took some quick thinking and quicker action!

"He nosed the plane at a downward angle, then suddenly brought it up to complete an upside down turn. At the moment the wheels were on top, he pulled the stick, righting the plane and found himself flying out of this cul-de-sac over the route he had entered.

"When the maneuver had been successfully accomplished, the breathless paymaster managed to gasp, 'I say, old man, was that stunt absolutely necessary?' to which the pilot replied fervently, 'you betcher boots it was!'

"I HAVE had one or two thrilling experiences in the States. On July 13, 1918, my pilot and myself flew under the International Bridge at Niagara Falls to get pictures that would be different. We got them all right, and we came near getting our everlasting, too!

"We were flying a two-place Canadian training plane powered with a 90 horsepower OX 5 motor. The wind was blowing right down the gorge and some of the pictures were made from an elevation of 10 feet.

"Because of the wind condition the plane would rise only to the level of the two lower bridges and we were forced to dive under and try to rise again. It was a foolhardy venture. We achieved the distinction of being the only flyers to fly beneath all three bridges at the Falls, and it's a record that can stand as far as I'm concerned.

"All of the thrills are not confined to land flying. When we were returning from Yucatan recently, C. H. Robinson, chief pilot for the Mexican Aviation Company's Merida run, told of having seen large schools of man-eating sharks off the Gulf coast. I decided we would photograph them.

"When we were about 10 miles from shore and not more than 50 feet above the water sneaking up on the playful creatures, Robinson turned to me and asked casually, 'Bonnick, did you ever get any dope on how long one of these planes will float if the motor quits?'

"But even with the possibility of a motor going dead over a school of man-eating sharks, flying holds its fascination. There is an urge to achieve further success in a profession which has little or no competition. Whether it is flying 16,00 feet in an icy atmosphere with my fingers sticking to the camera and my mustache covered with icicles like Old Bill, or at a lower altitude photographing an estate, country club or harbor developments along the water front, the interest is always the same."

The lure of the tropics has been too much for Bonnick. His visits to New York prove, at least to his satisfaction, that flights over Mexican mountains require less dodging than crossing New York streets. He recently returned to Mexico to conduct a third survey of little-known parts of the country.

Cotton Lower; Stocks Trend Upward

Week-End Session Shows Additional Trading Saturday

Prices Turn Downward In Early Trading Following Irregular Fluctuations During First Hour

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4. (AP)—The short week-end session in cotton showed a little more activity and prices, after fluctuating irregularly the first hour, turned downward losing 13 to 14 points in the early trading on poor Liverpool cables and the report of a small cotton failure in the English market, prices rallied 9 to 10 points on reported good trade buying and firmness of spots New lows were made o nlater trading 15 to 17 points below the previous close. The market closed just a shade above the lowest. March after trading down to 17.03 rallied to 17.19 and then declined to 17.00 rallying at 17.03, or 13 points net lower for the day. The general market closed steady at net declines of 12 to 14 points.

Liverpool came in 1 to 3 points worse than due and first trades here showed losses of 1 to 7 points. Prices eased in the early trading until January declined to 16.82 and May to 17.28, or 9 to 14 points below the previous close.

Market Rallies

The market rallied on trade buying and the reported firmness of spots January recovering to 16.90 and May to 17.37, or 8 to 10 points up from the lows. It turned easy on liquidation and realising for over the week-end making new lows at 16.74 for January, 17.09 for March and 17.27 for May, or 15 to 17 points below the previous close. The close was a shade above the lowest with January at 16.71 and May at 17.29, or 12 to 1 points net lower.

Cotton Is Lower Under Liquidation

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Cotton was lower today under liquidation together with some southern and local selling which appeared promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables. It was accompanied by reports that it was somewhat easier to buy spot cotton in the south although there had been no change in the basis. March contracts sold off to 17.10 or 15 points net lower and within 7 points of the lowest price reached on the decline during the middle of December. March closed at 17.11 with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 11 to 14 points.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 3 to 9 points in response to the lower Liverpool cables. There was some local selling and a liquidation by recent buyers on the decline which extended to 16.95 for January, 17.34 for May and 17.58 for October in late trading, or 12 to 15 points net lower. Closing prices were within a point or two of the lowest.

C. L. Davis, of Austin, state superintendent of vocational agriculture for the Texas department of public instruction, was present and addressed the meeting. He spoke upon the advantage of preparing an exhibit by teachers of the South Plains, to be shown at the Dallas Fair next fall. The object of such an exhibit will be to show the type of work accomplished by these instructors on the plains.

A committee, of which Vernon Martin, of O'Donnell is chairman, was appointed to prepare detailed plans for this exhibit.

Upon invitation of O. T. Williams of Floydada it was voted to hold a grain judging contest at Floydada the first week in March. Next meeting of the association will be held during the contest here March 22, or whatever date is selected.

Metal trimmings, dash board fixtures, cigar lighters, cigarette boxes and other trinkets are more elaborate than ever before. In closed cars, a new kind of lighting fixture has been introduced. It has a tiny parchment shade, and is pulled on and off by a little chain.

There are mechanical innovations, too, besides the front wheel drive. There are motors with four cylinders, six cylinders, eight cylinders and one model with 16 cylinders.

TAXES DUE SOON

Payments Expected After January Eleventh

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—The government expects to begin receiving payments on 1929 income taxes soon after January 11, when forms for filing returns are to be made available at offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices.

The forms were printed prior to the passage of the tax reduction measure by congress. As a result "riders" will be necessary to show the reduction provided.

Steps to make certain the taxpayer receives the benefits of the reduction have been taken by the bureau. Collectors have been instructed that if payments are made on the basis of the old tax, without taking advantage of the decrease, the new scale is to be computed and notice of refund given to the taxpayer.

In no case, the order said, should taxpayers be required to file an amended return or a claim to secure the benefit of the reduction.

Bullish Activity Unimpressive In Saturday's Mart

Session Remains Strictly Professional As Week-End Profit-Taking Is Light; And Readily Absorbed

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 4. (AP)—Rather unimpressive bullish demonstrations in various sections of the list gave an upward trend to the stock market today. The market remained strictly professional. Week-end profit-taking was light and readily absorbed. Total sales 1,323,200 shares.

Vigorous efforts to rally motor shares, coincident with the opening of the New York automobile show, met with only moderate success. Late in the session, attention was turned to utility shares, where a number of upturns of 2 to 5 points were accomplished. Coppers also attracted some buying.

Week-end trade and business reviews reported little convincing evidence of a revival of activity.

While indication sas to the reception of new automobile models were as yet rather inconclusive, announcement that Ford motor had booked $20,000,000 in orders the first day the new models were displayed was regarded as auguring well for sales of lower priced cars.

With Friday's money rates carrying over the week-end, banking attention was turned to the leading foreign exchanges, which displayed a firmer tone, after the declines of the past two days.

Wheat Prices Are Jolted Downward

Unexpected Competition Is Foreshadowed As Great Britain Purchases Wheat From Russians

By JOHN B. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

CHICAGO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Wheat prices went on the rocks today, and jolted downward here nearly 3c a bushel. Purchasing of Russian wheat for Great Britain today, following a similar purchase yesterday for Italy, acted as a decidedly disturbing influence because of possibly foreshadowing unexpected competition. Disposition was shown in various quarters, to regard the Russian exports as merely a ruse by European importers toward obtaining cheap wheat from North America.

With rallies in progress, Chicago what closed nervous, 1 1-2c to 2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4 @ 1-2c down, oats 1-4c to 1-4@3-8c off, and provisions following 5c to 10c decline.

British buying of Russian wheat today was reported as consisting of 75,000 bushels of low grade at a premium of about 4 1-2c a bushel over the price of United States No. 2, dark winter wheat.

Comparative scantiness of North American export business in wheat today 600,000 to 700,000 bushels including a cargo of hard domestic wheat for Portugal, operated further as a bearish influence. Notice toward the last today was also taken of an official statement from Washington reporting accumulation of evidence that native European grain supplies have been disposed of at an abnormally rapid rate, and that recognition was being given abroad to need of greater dependence upon North America than appeared probable a few weeks ago.

Capitol Fire

four o'clock, three hours before the first fire alarm was given, he fell asleep at his desk with his head on his arm.

Moberly Asleep

Almost two hours later, Hall, who occasionally visited the artist and about whom capitol officials said they knew little, called at the studio, climbing the long winding stairway from the rotunda floor three flights below. He found Moberly asleep in his chair with his head on his deck. He left to get something to eat at a nearby restaurant and returned shortly after six p. m.

Moberly still was asleep and Hall sat down to read a newspaper. He asserted that he had not been smoking and that within half an hour or so he smelled smoke, investigated and found fire in the adjoining room where models of the capitol are stored.

Rushing to a nearby document room, he obtained a fire extinguisher and sought to put out the blaze, but was unsuccessful and notified the operator of an elevator in an adjoining hall. He then left the building, returning sometime later when he first was questioned by officials of the building.

UP TO DEPARTMENT

Opening Of Consulate At Laredo With Officials

AUSTIN, Jan. 4. (AP)—The matter of negotiating opening of the Mexican consulate at Laredo has been placed squarely up to the state department at Washington.

Governor Moody dispatched a telegram late today to Secretary of State Stimson at Washington, after having talked over the telephone with the department earlier. The governor refused to divulge the contents of his message, declaring it was the wish of the state department that it not be made public.

Leads Revolt

Fee System

in connection with fees of office is the matter of keeping records of fees and making proper reports thereof," declares the committee in its report. "The public, the state, and the various counties are entitled to know how much the various officers are earning and this cannot be definitely known when no adequate records are kept and no proper reports made."

Under present state laws, officers are not required to make any full detailed accounting of receipts of their offices, the report states. "We are of the opinion that every officer should be required to make a detailed accounting including proper and adequate records of all fees of office, and monies received of every kind in connection with said office, and an itemized report of the same to be filed with the commissioners' court, at stated intervals under oath, to be filed and a copy kept in the office of the county clerk so that any citizen will have an opportunity to see and ascertain the amount that any officer is earning from fees of office or otherwise.

Audit Recommended

"Your committee is also firmly convinced that the books and accounts of all officers in reference to fees and compensation attached to their offices should be subject to a regular audit."

If it had the coustitutional right the committee would recommend that all county officials be placed on a salaried basis and the fee system be abolished, "and proposed legislation will be offered covering these subjects at this session."

Although the bond of the officer in charge, in some counties, is only $5,000, daily balances of certain trust funds which are placed in the hands of county and district clerks to be held for special purposes are as high as $200,000. "Some county officals are placing this money in banks and drawing interest on daily balances and retaining the interest. Adequate bond should be required to protect these funds. The interest thus accrued should go to the fund itself or to the general fund of the county, and certainly not to the individual official."

Expose Extra Compensation

The committee's investgation disclosed the practices in some counties to allow certain officers compensation, in addition to the amount allowed by law, "as extra salary for doing certain work which, in our opinion, they are supposed to do under their regular salaries." For illustration the report says that some counties pay an auditor to act as purchasing agent. "We think the law should be so that no official should draw any pay except what is actually allowed him by law and the commissioners court should be debarred from allowing extra compensation for the various officers."

Opinion is expressed that laws should be changed so that all officers, regardless of size or population of the county and regardless of the character of the fees of office, will be required to make an accounting of them. "In other words, it is the opinion of your committee that officers should be required to account for all kinds of fees and compensation in every county of this state, and the amount of their compensation should be carefully defined and limited."

Scholastic Basis

Where population figures affect officers' fees the committee thinks the use of a scholastic basis in figuring populations of counties should be used, rather than the federal census reports.

Present practices of permitting officers who have retired, or gone into other offices, to draw compensation from fees should be abolished. One officer is drawing pay now, the committee discovered, for services rendered in the year 1892, while another received as compensation last year $900 for services performed in another office during prior years. "In other words, the law should be such that an officer is not entitled to fees unless the same are actually collected during his incumbency."

Our present system of collecting taxes, particularly delinquent taxes, needs many amendments, the committee finds. The present system is costing the taxpayers too much. Some counties are paying abstractors as high as 75 cents per tract to furnish names of owners and lien holders of land needed in preparation of tax suits, while other counties are getting identical service for as low as 20 cents per tract.

Because the law recently passed requiring mailing out of notices about delinquent tax suits is not specific as to when these notices should be mailed, it has been found that in many instances notices have been mailed after suit has been brought and citation issued and served. "The law allows the district or county attorney 50 cents for mailing each notice. This law should be amended so as to require notices to be mailed at least 30 days before the suit is filed, and if the taxes are paid prior to the expiration of these 30 days, no costs should acrue except said 50 cents and such as accrued prior to the sending out of the notices."

District clerks are allowed by present law the same costs in delinquent tax suits as in other civil suits. The amount of costs in many instances may be greater under present laws and out of proportion to the amount of the tax sued for. It is the committee's recommendation that a law be passed limiting amount of costs in delinquent tax suits, a miximum of $3 in any suit being named.

"In one county where there are delinquent taxes due, amounting to not less than $2,000,000, the commissioners court is paying 33 1-3 per cent under one of these contracts and the officials tell us it will be no trouble to collect a million dollars in delinquent taxes in this county which would make a commission due the holder of the contract of $333,333.00. We consider this an outrage which should be stopped. We are of the opinion that if permitted to make contracts at all, the commission allowed should not, in any event, exceed ten per cent of the amount actually collected, and even in such cases, the contract should be let to competitive bidding and if such a contract is awarded, the county attorney or the district attorney, as the case may be, should not be permitted to receive any fees of office in connection with such work. This is on the theory that the county or district attorney will not do the work and, therefore, should not receive the pay."

The committee further states it their opinion that only in the event county or district attorneys fail to make the collections should contracts be entered into for outsiders to collect delinquent taxes. Under existing law the commissioners courts are contracting with individuals and corporations to collect these taxes. It is their opinion that the amount of state taxes, alone, given away by commissioners courts over and above a reasonable 10 per cent commission, will not be less than half a million dollars.

Maps and plats of surveys are being made in several counties, in connection with collection of taxes. In one county this work cost around $65,000. "And we find that the man who had the contract sent a man receiving $200 per month to do the actual work and he hired two stenographers to do the work for him, the contractor doing none of the work himself and all of this work was done in less than a year and a half. While doing this work the same persons collected city taxes for the city and received ten per cent on city collections.

"We find that in another county of practically the same size, the same kind of a map and plat system was furnished and prepared for less than $3,000." The committee believes a limit for such work should be placed by law.

"In visiting the various counties, your committee has also found that the law and the constitution are being violated in reference to what are known as constitutional funds of the various counties. In other words, the constitution limits the amount of taxes that may be levied for general county purpoces, road and bridge purposes, jury purposes and permanent improvements. Under the constitution, as construed by the supreme court, these funds cannot be transferred from one fund to another, and the monies constituting one fund cannot be used for any other purpose. Notwithstanding this, it is the practice of the commissioners courts of certain counties to levy taxes up to the constitutional limit for the various purposes above mentioned, and then if the entire amount is not used, the surplus is transferred to another fund and used for other purposes. We recommend that a law be enacted prescribing an adequate penalty that may be assessed against commissioners courts that may be sufficinet to stop this practice."

"This committee," said Senator Parrish, "was appointed for the purpose of making an investigation with reference to fees of officers in this state who are paid fees, either in whole or in part, and to ascertain and report on the amounts earned by various officers paid on such basis and how much they retain out of fees of office or other compensation where they receive fees only in part."

Investigation by this body has been made since adjournment of the second called session of the legislature, and the report with findings will be presented to the legislature at its next session. Hearings were held by the committee at Fort Worth, Dallas, Greenville, Houston, San Antonio, Abilene, El Paso, Austin, Wichita Falls, Breckenridge, and other places. Information was procured from various sources including, among others, the officers themselves who were placed under oath. The testimony of witnesses as taken is filed with the secretary of state.

Tariff Crowded By Prohibition

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Prohibition crowded the tariff for attention today as the first of the congressional hosts returned to a firemarked capitol where they will resume work Monday in a session which promises to carry well into the summer.

Apparently pleased by moves of the Hoover administration to tighten up dry enforcement, the warring senate republican drys withheld statement-making. Prospects for early house debate on the ten year old dry law had not diminished.

Early in the session the administration's resolution for creation of a tration's resolutional committee to study reorganization of the prohibition enforcement machinery comes up in the house. With the appointment of this group, the Hoover law enforcement commission has promised a preliminary report if its investigation.

HOW DO YOU BUY?

When you enter a store to buy anything, how do you ask for it? Do you call the articles by name, or do you generalize—a can of tomato soup; a bag of flour; an aluminum kettle; so many square yards of linoleum; a meat grinder?

It is much better and far more satisfactory to specify the articles you want by name, for merchandise that is good enough to be sold by name is almost always better in quality, and usually no higher in price, than goods of uncertain lineage and less certain quality.

The advertising columns of this newspaper carry advertised names that are familiar to millions of people. Soap, flour, sugar, cereals, kitchen ware, rugs, linoleum, automobiles, etc. They represent those articles that stand for the best in their respective classes of merchandise—quality all through.

Advertising keeps the names before you constantly. Advertising is a constant reminder that the articles you want are the same articles that you see advertised day after day—that justify their being by the service they render. And advertising brings you news—of inventions, discoveries, improvements that keep you up to date.

Tell the sales-clerk what you want by its advertised name. You'll get it—and your money will purchase full value. It pays to read advertising and remember advertised names.

Funeral Services Held For Charles O'Neall Saturday

Host Of Friends And Fellow Masons Unite In Paying Final Tribute To Local Realtor; Burial Here

With a host of friends and fellow Masons uniting in paying final respects, funeral services were conducted Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the First Christian church for Charles F. O'Neall, 54, Lubbock realtor, who died suddenly of heart failure last Tuesday night at his residence, 1623 Broadway.

Rev. W. P. Jennings, pastor of the church, officiated, assisted by Rev. J. M. Lewis, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city, and Rev. Irye Townsend, pastor of the First Christian church, at Sweetwater. Burial was in Memorial Park, under direction of Rix-Sanders.

Masons Participate

El Paso, Amarillo, and local Masons participated in services at the church and at the cemetery. John Temple Rice, 33rd degree Mason of the El Paso consistery, was master of ceremonies at the church, and he was assisted by E. A. Wells, of El Paso, George Stapleton, of Amarillo; Dean J. M. Gordon and Rev. Lewis, the latter two of this city. J. A. Hughes, of Lubbock, had charge of Masonic services at the cemetery.

Rev. Jennings reviewed the outstanding accomplishments of Mr. O'Neall, emphasizing that he was a man of character, vision and culture and that he possessed a high sense of honor. The pastor, in comparison, quoted Paul's final address, in which the apostle said: "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; Henceforth, there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord shall render unto me in that day, and not only unto me but those who love his appearing."

Floral Offerings Made

Bountiful floral tributes from friends in this and many other cities surrounded the bier.

Pallbearers were D. N. Leaverton, Hiley Boyd, W. R. Blake, S. J. McFarland, James Goodman, Tom Sawyer, G. P. Kuykendall and R. D. Moxley.

Flower girls were Misses Lucille Moxley, Ann Snyder, Mary Snyder, Jean Shelly Jennings, Frances Small, Kate Boyd, Lula Elkins, Mary Lou Bayless and Louise Jennings.

Survivors are the widow, two sons, Charles F., jr., 17 and Roddy, 16; all of Lubbock; two daughters, Mrs. John Sutton, 27, Albany, and Miss Nancy O'Neall, 21, student of Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky.

Aviation Officer Called By Death

Forrest Johnson, army aviation officer stationed at Dallas, and well known in Lubbock, died Saturday morning in a Dallas sanitarium following a short illness, according to information received here last night.

Mrs. M. M. Dupre, his mother-in-law, and Dr. John Dupre, brother of the widow, left late yesterday for Dallas.

No definite funeral arrangements have been made pending the arrival of relatives. He is survived by his widow, two children, Jackie and Margaret Anne, a father and sister in Illinois.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have visited in Lubbock on frequent occasions, Mrs. Johnson before her marriage, being Miss Nancy Dupre, of Lubbock.

Miss Nita Merle Hanna, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. W. C. Hanna, has resumed her studies at Texas Tech college after spending the holidays visiting in the home of her parents.

Eldredge Britton of Comanche county, is the guest of Coy McCullough.

"Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before Them" In Assignment Book Of News Room; Events Of Year Recorded

Torn, ragged, bulging with an over supply of pages, the old 1929 assignment book of the Avalanche-Journal, an important item in the daily life of newspaper production, has been discarded. It is now as worthless as a last week's newspaper, yet within its covers are chronicled the high points in Lubbock's march of achievements during the past year.

An age-old adage tells us "Coming events cast their shadows before them." The discarded daily assignment book is full of such shadows. Every important pre-planned event in Lubbock and surrounding territory last year was recorded in the little green book—hastily scratched down with a dull lead pencil by the city editor or managing editor, and in most instances, many weeks before the actual occurrence of the event.

Furnish Parade.

This medium between the editor and the reporter furnishes a graphic parade of events. To peruse the book would be to review the happenings and rumored happenings of 1929. Many of the "tips" proved false and, of course, were never printed.

With the opening of the new 12-story Hilton hotel this past week, it seems hardly possible that its construction was only an embryonic plan one year ago. On the January 2nd page of the 1929 assignment book is found "See about rumor that Merrill hotel will be sold to give way before construction of new Hilton." This was before any official announcement had been made of the new hotel here.

A Year Ago.

A year ago today, a smeared page reveals, where the following assignments: Airport status, cotton ginnings, any deaths from "flu," condition of poor in city, liquor story, road bond interviews, Tech enrollment, national guard news, and auto license yarn.

Between its covers can be traced the development and final achievement or failure of a municipal airport, city planning, road bond election, church revivals, rail hearings, new hospital, oil activities, Farm Bureau work, civic club projects, South Plains fair and numerous others.

Nominations For New Directorate Of BCD Accepted

Polls Open After Ballots Are Circulated Saturday By Members Of Committee; Election Ends Tues.

Polls are now open for nomination of five new directors to the Lubbock Board of City Development, following circulation of ballots in the city Saturday afternoon by election committee of the organization.

The committee, composed of H. L. Allen, W. W. Royalty and B. Sherrod, mailed letters with ballots to all voting citizens. Polls will close Tuesday afternoon at 6 o'clock when the 15 highest ranking will be declared nominated and their names turned over to the city commission for final selection of five.

400 On Roster

A roster of some 400 names was included in the letter, intended merely as suggestions to voters.

Retiring members of the board are not eligible for re-election and include H. L. Allen, F. A. Norman, W. W. Royalty, Neil H. Wright and G. P. Kuykendall.

The ten hold-over members who, together with the additional five, will comprise the board for 1930 are: J. B. Maxey, B. Sherrod, S. A. Wells, Roscoe Wilson, R. J. Murray, C. E. Maedgen, H. E. Blocker, S. C. Arnett, T. P. Duggan and C. A. Burrus.

Each year five members of the board are retired and the plan adopted is to have the membership of the Board of City Development nominate three times the number to be appointed by the city commission whenever there are vacancies.

Eight Requirements

Eight requirements are listed on the ballots for a good director. These state that a good director should be open-minded and tolerant, be forceful and willing to work, be tactful and sympathetic, be non-partisan in board matters, be leader in own sphere, lend prestige to the board, not use board for personal ends and have absolute faith in Lubbock and the organization.

Bank Deposits, Postal Receipts And Transportation Totals Mount Higher In 1929 Than In Any Previous Year

Bankers See 1930 As Year Of Security; Optimistic Note Prevails As Hub Of Plains Enters New Year

WHILE Lubbock is bowing graciously to the audience of 1930, the industrial populace of the city is checking over 1929 gate receipts, which reached an unprecedented figure for patronage to the heavyweight battle of phenomenal growth.

Bank deposits, postal receipts, freight and express business in Lubbock during 1929 have justified the united expression of "Happy New Year."

Deposits in the three banks of the city at the close of business, Dec. 31, 1929, exceeded those of the same period of 1928 by $335,432.53. Total deposits of the institutions are $5,584,954.79, as compared to $5,249,522.26 for 1928.

Postal receipts at the end of 1929 approximated $115,980.10, exceeding the business of 1928 by $15,565.64.

Banks Give Report.

Banks report the following comparative statements for December 31: First National bank $2,314,958.76 for 1929, $2,205,456.52 for 1928; Lubbock National bank $1,273,420 for 1929, $1,460,078.27 for 1928; Citizens National bank $1,996,576.03 for 1929, $1,583,987.47 for 1928.

Satisfactory liquidation of loans and a sectional response to increased diversification have placed economic conditions in the Lubbock area on asubstantial basis, bankers say.

"The financial condition of the South Plains is better than it has been for three years," says C. E. Maedgen, president of the Lubbock National bank. "Collections have improved substantially during the harvest season.

Security Seen.

"The business personnel of the area will enter 1930 in the face of reasonable security. Hailstorms and other misfortune which spotted the section several months ago have not been felt widespreadly. The cotton crop has exceeded that of last year and on the other hand we have a good season in the ground for the start of the new year.

"Lubbock is fortunate in that the spiritual building activities of 1929 have assured adequate housing, periodically at least, for early 1930 expansion."

Drexel, Slaton Talk.

C. F. Drexel, cashier of the Citizens National bank, expresses an optimistic note over prospects for the new year. "There will be perhaps a brief season of slack in business during the early part of this year, but as a whole we can be assured of substantial conditions," he said.

O. L. Slaton, president of the Lubbock National bank, views the present encouraging business condition as the result of revenue from more diverse interests, much of which were established in 1929. "While cotton is still the major crop, we have also realized considerable rural returns from poultry and dairy interests," he said. "Our bank deposits are greater than at any time in history. We believe that 1930 will experience heartening business development."

The origin of the word "Yankee" is said to have resulted from the first attempts of the Indians of the United States to pronounce the word "English."

A bigot was originally a Spaniard who wore a beard, as distinuished from one whose face was clean shaven.

Queen Elizabeth was the first English sovereign to use a fork.

Prospects Bright For Active Social Season Among College Students

Plans For Health Work In Schools Announced Here By Mrs. Joe Smith; Will Examine All Pupils Of Wards

Survey Given Of Activities Of Past Months; Health Club And Nutrition Class Showing Good Results

THE CHANGING conception of education—the idea that education is a preparation for life, rather than the storing up of facts—is demanding that more emphasis be placed on the physical development of the pupil. Lubbock took one of the most important steps toward meeting this demand when school opened this fall by employing a school health supervisor. Mrs. Joe Smith, who devotes her entire time to this phase of education.

Each day Mrs. Smith examines some of the children in the local schools, and sends notice slips to the parents giving the age, height and weight of the child, as well as the normal weight and any recommendations that seem necessary. She also provides assistance for those not financially able to have physical corrections made.

Every precaution is taken to have contagious diseases stopped. Children with symptoms of contageous diseases are sent home, and when they are absent from school because of illness, it is required that they have a physician's certificate before they are allowed to return.

Nutrition Class

On October 11 a nutrition class was organized at Sanders school. The class was made up of 50 children, all of whom were ten percent or more underweight. The children were given one-half pint of rich milk and graham crackers each morning at 10:30 o'clock, and since the organization of the class, 24 of the children have reached normal, and the others are only one or two pounds underweight, according to Mrs. Smith. As they reach normal, they drop out of the class and allow others to fill their places. There are 40 in the class at the present time.

Health Club Formed

Another experiment is being made in Central Ward. On November 18, a health club was formed of 150 children with some type of defect—some were underweight, while some had defective tonsils, vision, or hearing. Mrs. Smith reports that improvement already may be seen both in the physical condition of the children and the type of work they are doing in school work.

Mrs. Percy Spencer is in charge of the class and meeting are held twice a week after school hours. In addition to securing medical treatment, where necessary, it is the aim of the club to keep the following rules; sleep ten hours each night, drink milk three times a day, drink four glasses of water a day, bathe at least twice a week, brush teeth twice a day, play out of doors a part of each day, eat some fruit and vegetable each day. The pupils are graded according to the way they keep these rules, and points are added to their grades if they have defects corrected.

In Mexican School

Mrs. Smith finds the conditions in the Mexican school above the average. All children in both the negro and Mexican schools have been examined and vaccinated, and very little sickness has been found in either school.

The children in both the negro and the Mexican schools are enthusiastic about their health work, Mrs. Smith said, and they carry the things they learn at school into their homes, thereby securing a higher type of family life.

Parents Cooperate

Parents are cooperating with the school more now than ever before, in having defects of their children corrected, Mrs. Smith said. About 17 percent of the parents are not able to pay the full price for

By JEAN PATOU

Written for NEA Service

PARIS, Jan. 4—That women must have some colored ornament to complete their toilette has become very evident to the couturier. Even a gaudily colored accessory sometimes proves irresistible to many. Seeing that sober colors and black are the hall-mark of elegance this season, I think it wise to allow women to express their desire for color in this manner and even to meet their wishes.

If a client is offered that right accessories by her couturier, she will not be tempted to wear or carry something that would tend to destroy the harmonious effect he strives to achieve.

Every accessory, first of all, must be in complete accord with the spirit governing present styles. That is the motive that urged me some time ago to collect a chosen number of novelties especially bags and imitation jewelry.

When Sobriety Is Smartest

An ensemble featuring several colors, either by the combining of different materials or the use of a patterned fabric, does not need to be brightened up by an additional color. To accompany such an ensemble, therefore, accessories must offer sobriety of coloring and lines. The bag, in this case, will be the principal accessory and the very best leather or skin and impeccable workmanship are demanded. These are the two important factors of a good bag.

Much attention is given by French bagmakers, whose work is comparable to an art, to the design of framework and clasps. Precious woods like "mascassar" and rosewood are now used in specially studied, modernistic designs. Crystal in the form of circles, squares and slim "sticks" forms the handle of many afternoon bags. Seal and Russian leather in many shades of brown, red and green are shown for the latest sports bags, antelope for afternoon wear and taffetas and velvet for evening.

Giving Touches of Color

It is only in the case of a plain colored or black ensemble that a call is made on the brilliant, vividly colored accessory. There are many people, like myself, who do not care overmuch for imitation jewelery but there are times when its judicious use lends the required touch of color to an otherwise mournful-looking ensemble.

A taffeta dress and cost created for the mid-season collection is shown with a jeweled pin composed of multi-colored stones. The same motif is reproduced on the black taffeta bag, thus avoiding even the slightest hint of the commonplace in either article. Eccentricity is another fault that should be guarded against whenever selecting accessories of this description.

Tryout for roles in "The Ship", which has been chosen as the winter presentation of the Lubbock Little Theatre, will be held Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. Tom White, 1629 Main street. Mrs. White will direct the production.

The play, which was written by St. John G. Ervine, shows skill in the portrayal of the spiritual crises in the lives of commonplace people.

Characters include Mrs. Thurlow, a woman of 83, who has no intention of yielding to her years; John Thurlow, her son, a shipbuilder; young Mrs. Thurlow, a soft, pliable woman, with one belief most firmly held, that happiness is only to be obtained in this world, and probably in the next, by those who never "make a fuss" about anything; Hester Thurlow, her daughter of 19; Jack Thurlow, the young son; Captain Cornelius; George Norwood; the maid.

The tryouts are ope to anyone who wishes to qualify and who will come for a reading role next Tuesday evening.

these corrections, but in these cases assistance is provided.

Mrs. Smith expects to have every child in the Lubbock Ward schools examined by a physician and dentist during this year. The four rural schools and the junior high school also will be included. The next health school is to be organized at George M. Hunt school, and will be similar to the one at Sanders school. Others will be formed as they are needed.

Rest periods for underweight children is one of the present needs of the schools, according to Mrs. Smith. In order to have these periods however, cots, blankets and room space would have to be provided.

To meet the health needs of the school, Mrs. Smith believes, it would be necessary to have a full-time school physician, a dentist, and three school nurses.

Belts Are Coming Back Into Limelight Of Fashion

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Writer for Central Press

It was only natural that when women found their waistlines belts would come back into the limelight of fashion. Unless they are so intimately related to the frock and of the same fabric, these belts are invariably of leather in varying widths posed at the normal waistline. Yvonne Carette used a wide suede belt, slightly draped, on some of her afternoon frocks. Maggy Rouff uses the belt at the normal waistline on her daytime frocks, and drops the skirt hemline to the calf of the leg.

All along the line the daytime costume is much more formal than it has been. One frock no longer does duty throughout the entire day as it did in the reign of the dapper, and accessories have moved forward to the very nth degree of importance. With this greater formality gloves are of prime importance. Long gloves reaching almost to the elbow have become the fashion in place of the short pull-on we have been used to. The browns and tans are particularly smart in gloves, shoes and handbags for street wear. Black and blue gloves are quite as smart with the tweed or matching costume worn with black or blue kid shoes.

Long Slip-Ons

One of the Paris couturieres sponsors slip-on gloves that reach nearly to the elbow. Another favors gauntlet gloves in tan kidskin, while still another offers sports frocks with gloves the musketeer cuffs of which are trimmed with flat fur matching the coat collar. Handbags and hats still match the color of the shoes. These accessories need not necessarily match the color of the costume, but they should match each other in color.

At the left of the sketch is shown one of the new cloth frocks with fitted, tailored lines, belted at the normal waistline. Grouped with this are the tailored cloth hat to match, the tailored leather belt in an interesting design with leather buckle, and an oxford shoe in matching kid, with leather Cuban heel, and suitable tailored gloves.

In the opposite grouping are shown a slightly more formal frock with dipping back and normal belted waistline, with an off-the-face felt hat, handbag and glove of the slightly more formal type, and one-strap kid shoes with medium high heel. Brown velvet or silk, with brown accessories, would be a good choice for this model. It is also a good model for black in a rich fabric.

The WOMAN'S DAY

Ordinarily I don't enjoy the servant question taken with my tea—and many an otherwise pleasant one has been ruined for me because some earnest woman insisted on telling all the difficulties attendant on running a house and keeping servants functioning, happily or otherwise.

But Mrs. Mary L. Jobe Akeley can make you neglect wafer-thin sandwiches, and cause you to let your orange pekoe grow cold while she tells you of her housekeeping experiences in Africa, where she went with her husband, the late Carl Akeley, on the Akeley-Eastman-Pomeroy African Hall expedition of the American Museum of Natural History.

In Africa there is no scarcity of servants. In fact, you have more than you know what to do with. But managing them is a different matter, for they are as helpless as children and as temperamental as prima-donnas, and they have such taking ways that unless you are careful and police your supplies, you will find that your cupboard is ever bare.

Africans, at least in the Congo section, have a passion for tea—they regard it as much more desirable than spirits, and they will bootleg as dishonestly to get it. Soap, to them, is a marvelous possession, too, though they are never known to wash either themselves or their dish towels with it.

IMPORTANCE OF COOKS

Your cook is not only responsible for your food, but he is the purchaser of it and acts as the go-between between you and the local natives. If he likes you, he bargains advantageously for you, but if he does not—then watch out for what you get, if anything.

Even the best cook needs constant praise and approbation, and much appreciation, and sometimes an extra dose will transform a poor one.

Much of the tinned foods that are delicious over here are a horrible example when served over there, and it is marvelous how a fair cook can reduce canned peaches to a state of tastelessness and positive indecency there. However, they can prepare fresh roasts and curries very well and bake bread excellently.

Mwanika, one of her most capable cooks, believed that photographing is a test of greatness in culinary achievement. Always after he had browned his loaves particularly well, or been unusually expansive about his dinner, he begged her to bring her camera to the kitchen and make their glories endure on films.

THEIR STORY TOLD

Mrs. Akeley recently has recounted many of her adventures, and those of her husband in her book "Carl Akeley's Africa," which is the story of their year in the Congo. After Carl Akeley died, she became the leader of the expedition.

Determined that the undertaking should be completed, she remained in their camp in spite of cold, constant rain, a shortage of provisions and an insufficient number of porters, and carried out the details of the mission.

In recognition of her services to science, and to the Pure National Albert, the first national park in Africa, which Akeley considered the most beautiful spot in Africa, she was decorated by King Albert of Belgium with the Cross of the Knight and the Order of the Crown.

Local Man Aiding Sweetwater Water Improvement Work

One of the major water projects of West Texas, involving an expenditure of about $900,000, which is to answer the demand for the city of Sweetwater, is being engineered by a Lubbock man, H. N. Roberts.

Associated with Mr. Roberts in the mammoth job is the firm of Hawley & Freese, of Fort Worth.

Bonds Voted

Sweetwater voted $750,000 in bonds last May for the proposal. Additional industries and a population of 12,000 have made the present supply of 1,200,000 gallons daily insufficient. During 1927-28 emergency lines were connected with the Santa Fe lake and every available water source was utilized to meet the sharp demand. Lake Trammel, constructed in 1911, and the city's wells near Roscoe, furnish Sweetwater's water supply.

Sam H. Bothwell, city manager of Swetwater, has been one of the leading proponents of the new water system.

Recommends Bitter Creek

Mr. Roberts, who had asociated with him as consulting engineer, John B. Hawley, of Fort Worth, an internationally prominent engineer, after an investigation of two moths recommended that Sweetwater develop the water supply of Bitter Creek, 7 miles southeast of the city.

Womack-Henning Construction company, of Sherman, was awarded the contract for Bitter Creek project. A dam measuring 3,000 feet in length and having a maximum height of 60 feet is being constructed. The lake will cover 700 acres and will have a water capacity of four billion gallons. Construction will require 350 days.

"A bountiful water supply is the principal asset in a city's bid for industries," said Mr. Roberts. "Cities of West Texas are now concerned with efforts to provide adequately in this source of development. When the present proposal is finished, Sweetwater will have answered a long-felt need."

Democrats Need Peace, Says Dr. W. L. Crosthwaite

Barring Of Hoovercrats In 1930 Primary Would Be Big Mistake; Waco Man Says; Harmony Needed

(By Associated Press)

WACO, Jan. 4.—What the democratic party needs for the next two years is "peace and lots of it," and if the state democratic committee in Texas adopts a rule barring Hoovercrats from the primaries next summer, "such would be a grave mistake," Dr. W. L. Crosthwaite of Waco has written Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, the Wacoan announced today. The letter was in answer to one from Roosevelt asking his views on the political situation as it affects the cementing together of national democratic party forces.

Dr. Crosthwaite wrote that after feeling out the prevailing sentiment in Texas, he endorsed the "aggressive, militant organization now operating under Mr. Jouett Shouse, referred to in your letter," but "I feel the term militant should apply only, as it is no doubt intended, to the traditional enemy, the republican party. What we need in our own ranks is peace."

He said he believed the United States "normally democratic," and "if we can get the democrats of the different sections to get together with a common cause and a mutual trust we can go before the voters with an irresistable appeal in the next presidential election."

The impression prevails here, he said, that the state democratic committee is antagonistic to Hoovercrats, and "perhaps the national committee might be able to convince our state committee of the fallacy of their possible undertaking" of barring democrats who voted for Hoover from the state primaries next summer.

Mooar Number I Has Good Showing

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

SNYDER, Jan. 4.—The E. L. Smith- J. Wright Mooar No. 1 well that had a showing of oil in the slush at 2,215 feet is continuing drilling through sandy lime formation. This well is located between two producing areas with the Ira field 18 miles to the south and the Justiceburg pool 15 miles to the north. The top of the salt on the Mooar well was struck at 750 feet and the lime at 1,000 at an elevation of 2,518 feet.

The location is C.-S. E. 1-4, sec. 379, blk. 97 H. & T. C. survey and is about three miles southwest of Dermott and 14 miles northwest of Snyder.

E. L. Smith of Mexia, who was in that field during the boom period, arrived here Friday to inspect the property.

Glance Backward At Building In Lubbock During Past Year Reveals 324 New Residences Constructed

In the face of a prediction made at the beginning of 1929, that a let-down in construction of residences was due for the city of Lubbock, a look at the figures for the year reveals that out of the past year's $3,337,041 in total building permits, $1,481,563 of this represents new residences.

Again, as 1930 starts, the same prediction is heard.

Three Phases Pronounced

There are three pronounced phases to any conjecture regarding this year's building of residences in Lubbock.

Foremost is the condition, remarked upon by many of those engaged in contracting and building work, claimed to have been brought about in the past two years from agents of building and loan concerns making loans on property beyond a conservative limit. It is said that in several instances loans were made exceeding the price of lot, construction cost of dwelling, and enough surplus cash left over to purchase a new automobile for the owner of the property.

This condition is said to have been responsible for the very marked let-up in building of residences here during the last seven months of 1929. In certain cases it is said to affect loan companies to the extent that when compelled to take property back they are faced with the problem of selling at less than loan value. Which leads to this.

324 New Houses Built

There were 324 new residences erected in Lubbock during 1929, including six apartment houses and 13 duplexes. The six apartments represented $121,000 in permits, the 13 duplexes $71,800, while 39 of the remaining 305 residences were constructed of frame, tile, stucco, or a combination of these materials, costing $90,750, leaving a grand total of 246 brick veneer dwellings to take care of $1,197,813 in permits.

During the first five months of 1929 there were 213 permits issued for residences, valued in all at $1,052,823, while during the last seven months of last year, 111 residence permits were for a total of only $428,540.

To Be Conservative

A second phase of the problem under discussion is the nation-wide movement to encourage a great building program, which will include every type of structure. This is closely related to the declaration from many observers that the building and loan concerns are to be back in the Lubbock field, ready to resume the business of financing on a more conservative basis.

The third phase is perhaps theoretical, yet the 1929 building figures for this city seem to bear such theory out very tellingly.

"We humans," goes this theory, "are exactly as the birds. When spring comes, we start to building our nests." And there are national authorities who will inform all who ask that the greater percentage of residence construction is always done during the early months of the year—every year—believe it or not.

There's One Time When The Army's Desire For Publicity Lags—That's After An Air Crash, Dutcher Says

Recent Fatal Crack-Up May Halt Congressional "Joy Rides". Writer Believes; Tells Of Censorship

By RODNEY DUTCHER,
NEA Service Writer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—About the only time the army ever shrinks from the light of publicity is when one of its airplanes crashes. On other occasions no branch of government is happier to tell all about itself and get its picture in the newspapers.

But when a plane crashes and someone is killed there's a race to get the wreckage out of sight before the photographers get there. Unfortunately, if a photographer wins the race it generally doesn't mean anything because it becomes some hard-boiled sergeant's duty to drive him off and confiscate his plates if he gets any photographs. Fatal crashes just aren't good publicity for the army air service, so the army isn't having any if it can help it.

The usual censorship was in force when Congressman Kaynor of Massachusetts, his secretary, a friend, the pilot and a mechanic were killed at Bolling Field the other day almost as soon as they had left the ground. Only one photographer manager to outwit the soldiers.

That particular crash presumably will do little to hinder the progress of aviation, but it will do much to discourage practice of one of the juiciest of congressional privileges. Quite a few members have never been bashful about requesting a free government plane when they wanted to fly home. The army turns over the best available plane, with pilot, "as a courtesy." The taxpayers foot the bill for the joyride.

But one doubts whether there will be very much more of that until Congress has had a year or two to forget about Kaynor.

Kaynor was a pleasant man, well liked in Washington.

It is hard to understand the fuss that was made over the "military secret" which General Enoch H. Crowder, retired, gave away to the Cuban sugar lobby. Crowder, the head of the lobby who employed him wrote in one of his letters read before the Caraway committee, had discovered that in case of war the general staff planned not to try to keep a traffic lane open to the Philippines. The lobby, enthusiastic at this information, planned to use it with telling effect. Lately there has been talk of punishing Crowder for his "sin." But the fact is that everyone has known that "secret" for years and that in case of a real war in the Pacific the Philippines are as good as gone.

* * *

One of the best current bets, if there are any takers, is that the Navy Department will not spank General Smedley Butler of the marines. General Butler remarked in a Pittsburgh speech that in countries such as Nicaragua and Haiti the marines had a happy way of deciding elections and officially denominating their native opponents as bandits. That was no military secret, but Secretary of the Navy Adams called for a copy of the speech and a report when the newspapers gave it plenty of attention.

The difference between the State and Navy Departments and General Butler is that in discussing such matters Butler is honest. Operating in Nicaragua, Haiti and other small republics the State and Navy Departments don't really believe they have anything to be ashamed of. It's just that they deny what everyone knows, as if the knowledge might not be a good thing for the public. But Butler was in Nicaragua and Haiti and knows what he is talking about, so it wont quite do to censure him.

* * *

The two countries which have seen most of the marines, Nicaragua and Haiti, show a marked contrast with each other today. Haiti is in bad shape economically. Masses of her people are said to be threatened with starvation. A large part of her population has left for the Cuban sugar plantations and laborers remaining make about 30 cents a day.

Nicaragua, with marines still on hand to keep order, has recovered rapidly from her last revolution. Her national debt is down to $4,000,000 and she recently reported a surplus of $2,400,000. In the last year she has established 500 new schools making about 900 in all. Roadbuilding is being pushed. A new presidential palace is about to be built in Managua and a new American legation will be erected right alongside.

Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, the Nicaraguan minister here, was given a luncheon the other day in honor of his election to the International Medical Society. He reports that he has received an inquiry about possible arrangements with an American firm for the rehabilitation of Chinandega, part of which was bombed and burned.

With sharp, grating violence Judith Cameron slipped a fresh sheet of paper into her typewriter. Her head bent lower and the keys, like vicious little hammers, began a mad dance, jumping back and forth.

Judith told herself she would NOT look around.

She knew exactly as well as if she had been watching that the four other girls employed in this particular office of Hunter Brothers' publishing house were clustered about Carla Morrison's desk. She had hear Carla's half-suppressed whisper (purposely pitched to reach Judith's ears) "Oh, don't bother Miss Ritz! She wouldn't be interested!"

Judith fully appreciated the sarcasm with which these girls had labeled her "Miss Ritz."

She went on with her typing.

Giggles and whispers came to her. All of these other girls seemed to be good friends. They chatted about dates and "boy friends" and the shows they had seen. They gathered frequently—as they were now—to exhibit new purchases of silk hose, lip sticks, hand bags and the dozen and one other objects which New York's army of girl employes find time to buy during hurried lunch hours.

Judith Cameron thought that she might have been welcomed by the other girls had it not been for Carla Morrison's scorn. She didn't honestly mean to act superior to her fellow workers. She just hadn't chosen to answer Clara's questions and so she hadn't answered them. That was the beginning of herostracism. Now, after two months in the employ of Hunter Brothers, Judith was still an outsider.

"Hey—Miss Cameron!"

"Yes, Tim."

The sandy-haired, freckle-faced office boy grinned down at the girl.

"Why ain't you in the hen party, Miss Cameron?"

Judith smiled. "Lots of work to do."

"Gee, Miss Cameron! Gee, you know I think you've got awful pretty hair."

Bless Tim Mulligan's 14-year-old heart! He was a friend in need if ever there was one.

The resentful, slightly sullen expression which had clouded Judith Cameron's face as she pounded her typewriter keys was gone. Something happened in the dark blue eyes as she raised them, making them seem wistful. Tim, eldest of the youthful Mulligans, watched her in idolatry.

"Thank you, Tim," the girl said. "I'm glad you like it. You'll be spoiling me with your flattery, though."

"Huh!—guess not!"

The boy moved away.

The fact that Judith Cameron was by far the most attractive of the five stenographers who worked in the ofice outside Arthur Knight's private quarters in the big publishing house may have had something to do with her fellow employes' disapproval. It may have had a good deal to do with it. Arthur Knight, executive of the textbook division of Hunter Brothers, was said to have shown favoritism toward the girl. This also may have worked in her disfavor.

These facts alone do not explain the situation.

To understand fully you must have a look at Judith.

The hair upon which young Tim Mulligan feasted his eyes so extravagantly was neither chestnut nor golden. It was somewhere in between the two shades, a lovely hiding place for sunbeams which seemed perpetually entrapped. It curled softly and ever so becomingly in waves which were loose and leave her clipped head distinction. In a distressing time when four out of every five girls seemed to be in the "growing-out" stage between long and short tresses, Judith Cameron's neat bob was a glory to behold.

Wispy tendrils touching her forehead called attention to the delicate oval molding of the girl's face. The eyebrows were dark, sweeping well backward as though drawn with one swift stroke. There was a faint, glowing pink which faded and then came back quickly to Judith's cheeks if she were surprised or, as she had been at Carla's remark annoyed. Her lips were coral shaded and could be either sweetly childlike or resentful.

These details, while worth noting, are still not the key to Judith Cameron's personality.

That was to be found—or rather to be sought for—in a pair of blue eyes very dark in colorine, fringed by heavy lashes and slightly elongated in outline. Those eyes were the arresting feature of the girl's countenance. They looked at you, they measured you, and they gave back not one suggestion of their owner's thoughts.

Judith's eyes were enigmatic and so was her character. The eyes were very beautiful.

They had attracted Arthur Knight from the very moment his glance had first fallen upon his new employe. On a sudden whim he had wanted to know more about the girl. Knight was not the sort of man to "carry on" with pretty stenographers who struck his fancy. He was, on the contrary, the sort of man whose private correspondence and all secretarial duties were performed by a feminine assistant well beyond 35 years of age, 15 of these spent in the employ of the publishing company.

• • •

To satisfy his interest in Miss Cameron, the girl with those odd, unusual eyes, Arthur Knight summoned his secretary, Miss Tupper.

"I notice we have a new girl in the outside office. Is she going to make out all right?"

"Why, yes, I think so, Mr. Knight. She's a beginner, recommended highly, though, by the Baldwin school, Mr. Edwards said. He hired her. Has there been anything—?"

"No, no! No criticism. Will you get me her office record, please?"

Kathryn Tupper had elevated her brows a bit as she went for the desired card. Odd that Mr. Knight should be making such inquiries! Kathryn Tupper thought that she knew her employer's mind and his moods better than anyone else in the world. She had thought that even two years ago before Mrs. Arthur Knight's sudden illness and death.

Aged 37, sallow-skinned and too thin, with spectacles protecting her weak eyes and indigestion sharpening her disposition, still the eternal feminine in Miss Tupper made her watch over Arthur Knight's well-being with hawk-like jealousy. She was a confidential secretary. She attended to personal letters and allowance checks to Knight's son and daughter, both now being submitted to expensive "educative" systems.

Each year Miss Tupper bought the larger portion of Arthur Knight's Christmas gifts—always all those for the employes. Each year she thought it a pity that he seemed so lonely, so dependent upon her judgment, and then brought her thoughts up abruptly! There was no use, of course, indulging in day dreaming. Miss Tupper was quite, quite sure that Arthur Knight, cherishing the memory of his first wife, "would never look at another woman."

Meekly she snuffed out her own smouldering hopes and told herself it was a great thing to be associated in a business way with such a fine man as Arthur Knight.

Something about Knight's inquiry concerning the new girl the day he first saw her stirred up this hornet's nest in Miss Tupper's mind.

Nevertheless she went quickly and brought him the desired card.

It was just such a record as most large commercial concerns keep for handy information about all their employes. It was a white oblong of pasteboard of the usual card index size with lines crossing it horizontally and perpendicularly. One line said "Name." Another said "Position." There were half a dozen other lines which had been filled in with neat typing.

From this card Arthur Knight gleaned information about his new employe with which he had to content himself. Her name was Judith Cameron. (He had not known even that much before.) She was—surprisingly!—24 years old. And she had been hired 10 days previously, and her salary was $22 a week. According to the card, Judith Cameron was "single" and her residence was in one of the East Sixties.

Knight could visualize the sort of rooming house that address would be, and his visualization was accurate.

It was an old brown stone front on one of the right streets, but in one of the wrong blocks. Distinctly a wrong block! The sort of dim and dismal long row of rooming places, all much alike, which crowd in between the neat spic and span, elegant brick edifices with awninged entrances and impeccable door men.

As a matter of fact, Judith sacrificed almost one-half of her monthly income for the doubtful privilege of climbing to the fifth floor of her dingy rooming house and calling a dim little back room there her own.

Knight didn't know of course, that Judith Cameron lived entirely alone. Most of the young women employed in the publishing house shared "furnished apartments" with one or two other girls. It was the only plan which made possible fur coats paid for in weekly installments, cheap little copies of satin and velvet frocks bought on Seventh avenue while the original gowns were still being exhibited on Fifth, new high-heeled pumps every three months, and oh, so many pairs of fragile chiffon hose.

The prosperous publisher, leaning back thoughtfully in his comfortable desk chair, studied the card in his hand. There was such incongruity between this lovely young woman—24—she really wasn't just a girl any longer—and the tawdry boarding house of his imagination.

Strange, the way her appearance had taken his fancy. Twenty-four! Arthur Knight's face sobered. He brushed one hand backward against his grayed temple. Knight had been 48 on his last birthday. The touch of gray in his dark hair increased his well-tailored, athletic good looks. No matinee idol, Arthur Knight generally won feminine attention for his handsome chin and level, friendly brown eyes.

Another glance at the card. Miss Cameron had never been employed before. She had come to Hunter Brothers on the recommendation of here business training school and it was one of the best in the city. Hunter's made rather a specialty of taking on inexperienced workers—providing their recommendations were satisfactory—and training them in the business. Old John Hunter himself had established the policy because he said it was harder to retrain a man after he had learned wrong habits than it was to teach him in the first place. Also, of course, beginners take low salaries.

There was a two-inch space at the bottom of the record card and above this blank there was the word "Remarks." Evidently in Judith's case the employment department had found no remarks worth setting down.

A vision of two shadowed, narrow blue eyes rose before Arthur Knight. He pushed an electric button on his desk and summoned Miss Tupper.

"I am going out for an hour or two. If Cunningham calls from Boston ask Mr. Fisher to talk to him. Oh, by the way, here is that record card—"

Then as casually as he came and left the office each day, Arthur Knight took his hat and departed. He did not walk through the outer office where Judith and the four other stenographers were pounding their typewriters.

Certainly there had been nothing in that morning's happenings to arouse in Kathryn Tupper's breast a dark, abiding resentment against Judith Cameron. And just as certainly that is what had happened.

Since Miss Tupper, in addition to her secretarial duties, supervised the five girls in the outer office, this was unfortunate for Judith.

There are so many ways a woman executive can make life miserable for a girl who works under her direction. Judith, who was not quick at transcribing shorthand or swift at typing, had to bear the brunt of this ill-will.

• • •

Miss Tupper would step into the outer office at 20 minutes after 11 and say, "Oh, Miss Cameron, will you copy these pages for me before you go out to lunch? It's a rush job." Or perhaps it would be a message to take to some other office in the building with instructions to "wait for a reply."

Since Judith's lunch hour was from 11:30 until 12:30 and the afternoon's schedule was already filled with work, such tasks meant that her lunch time was cut in half and, often, that when the others filed out of the office at 5 o'clock Judith Cameron was still at her desk.

Tim Mulligan was the only one who sympathized.

Once he came over to Judith's desk after Miss Tupper had departed, leaving fresh tasks, and delivered himself:

"Say, that old skirt's got a crust bringing you all the extra work. Why don't you tell her where to get off at?"

Judith was resentful herself but she couldn't show it to Tim.

"Oh—I don't mind," she said, thinking down in her heart what a liar she was.

"Well, you'd ought to mind! Gee, she picks on you all the time. Person would think these other dames are just around here for scenery. Too bad they couldn't help you a little!"

Tim's little gray eyes were directed in sharp reproof toward Carla Morrison's desk. Carla, inspecting her lips with a honeyed smile and hummed nonchalantly:

"I can't give you anything but love, Baby—"

It was something, of course, to have even little Tim Mulligan champion her cause. But it didn't help out much. Judith for a moment considered the pleasant prospect of telling Miss Tupper "where to get off at." It WOULD be pleasant! But she wouldn't do it. Oh, no—no indeed she wouldn't.

The reason Judith Cameron couldn't object when overwork was piled on her shoulders was one of the secrecies of her existence which she guarded so very, very closely.

Nobody at Hunter Brothers knew anything, really, about Judith Cameron. It was Judith's firm intention that nobody there should ever learn any more than they already knew.

She would have been glad to exchange friendly greetings, little jokes and casual pleasantries with the other girls, just as she did with Tim, if only they had been willing. They weren't—and made it plain enough.

It hurt quite a lot to be left to herself so completely. It hurt still more to listen to Carla's sneers and the sly, half-swallowed giggles of the other girls. Carla was the leader in everything which happened in that room. She was a dark, vivid creature without attractive features but an animated manner which attracted interest. Carla talked about "sugar daddies" and was forever flaunting cheap jewelry and other gifts.

Shrewdly Judith Cameron suspected that most of the talk was for effect and that the bold, restless Carla was not nearly so wild as she pretended.

Carla had been at Hunter's now for three years. A long time, she said, and without hesitation she volunteered "the low-down" on all the other office workers to her companions. Though Judith was never included in these gossip sessions, she heard most of them—which was as the speakers intended.

The three other girls were Adelaide Conway, Stella Williams and Mitzi Kraft. Mitzi's name wasn't really Mitzi. She had adopted it from a favored actress and all of the others thought it "cute." Mitzi, when the others were not about, frequently made overtures toward Judith. She asked her one night to make a fourth on an expedition to Coney Island, and was offended when Judith refused. After that the rumors about Judith Cameron's "high hat" was multiplied.

"You know there really is something funny about that girl," Carla Morrison confider to her friends one day in the wash room. "Gosh—wouldn't I like to get the dirt and dish it!"

"Do you really suspect—"? Stella ventured.

"Sure I do! Only nobody knows anything. Miss Tupper doesn't 'cause I asked her. Say—wait a minute—I've got a bright idea!"

Carla Morirson's dark eyes flashed with excitement.

"I've got a little idea I'm going to spring this afternoon. Maybe we'll learn something; anyhow it'll be fun. When I walk over to Cameron's desk this afternoon all of you listen!"

All of them were listening with both ears when, near the middle of the afternoon, Carla deliberately arose from her desk, walked over toward a window on the side of the room where Judith sat and stared for a moment at the street below. Then she turned about, saw that three pair of eyes were watching her and moved lazily toward Judith.

Her eyes dropped and she said quietly, "Miss Cameron—"

Judith looked up.

"Yes. What is it?"

Was Carla Morrison's smile mockery or friendliness?

"I saw you last night."

It happened so very quickly! Each of the girls watching saw the change and yet doubted her own eyesight. They saw Judith Cameron, the poised, the unapproachable, go suddenly white as marble, saw her tremble as though struck a blow, and clutch at her desk. The next moment color was flowing back into the girl's cheeks, her voice was at least half-steady and she was saying:

"You saw me?"

"Why, yes. I'm sure it was you! You were setting on a bus in front of the library. Guess you must have been reading last night."

"Yes," Judith's voice answered huskily. "Yes: I did read last night."

A quiet came over the room. Quiet which lasted nearly 10 minutes, until Judith, holding a handkerchief to her face as though about to sneeze, arose and left the room.

Buzzing set in at once!

"Did you see that?" gasped Adelaide. "Did you SEE it! Why, she was white as a sheet. Honestly I thought for a minute she was going to faint or something."

Me too" chimed in Mitzi. "Gosh—I was scared."

"But, girls—" Carla held the floor. "Girls, I didn't see her! I only wanted to know what she'd say to me. Don't you see that proves it? Don't you know how guilty conscience act? That girl's got something on her chest, believe me!"

The four girls hovered together. Their voices were quieter now. The sound of footsteps came from the hall, and when Judith was again in the room all of them were deep in their afternoon tasks.

The rest of that day Judith Cameron was a trifle paler than usual and she was absolutely silent.

Silence was one of the girl's distinctive qualities. It is true that there were certain facts about which she had made up her mind not to speak and which no one—not even Arthur Knight himself—could have drawed from her. Judith was a quiet girl. She had a way of sitting for long moments at a time without speaking and yet without giving any sign that there was constraint in the air.

Judith knew the precept of the French philosopher:

"Speech was invented for the concealment of thought." She approved of it.

Two persons knew the true story of Judith Cameron's private life. There was, she assured herself, not the slightest likelihood that either would ever reach the office of Hunter Brothers.

For two months now she had been leading this dreary existence. Up at 7 to make toast, dress and catch the 8 o'clock subway. Hot, stuffy, nauseating ride, and then the cool air and tramp to the Hunter building. Ten flights by elevator and into her office chair by 8:30. Work, work, work until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Home again. Supper. Bed time. The whole wearisome routine to do over again.

Of course there were brief intervals which broke the routine. There were trips to a dingy west side address occasionally. There was now and then a dinner with a foreign-looking young man who wore a mustache. There was nothing gay, nothing bright and nothing scintillating in the dull monotony into which this girl with the glamorous eyes of mystery had permitted herself to be caught.

Now and then Judith Cameron wondered. Sometimes she sulked. Too much of solitary monotony will do that.

Twenty-four, she told herself, is no age to be a pouting child. Still, at 24, Judith Cameron cried herself to sleep on more than one night.

God bless Tim Mulligan for his friendliness!

• • •

Judith was feeling rather "up" in spirits one November afternoon when Miss Tupper opened the door of the large office and came over to the girl's desk.

"Darn!" thought Judith to herself. "More night work."

It might have been better if it had been. Instead, looking like the avenging angel herself, Miss Kathryn Tupper paused long enough to remark:

"Mr. Knight would like to see you Miss Cameron."

"Mr. Knight—?"

"Yes. That's what I said. At once. In his office."

Nine out of 10 stenographers summoned without warning before their office superior would have stolen at least a second or two to pop open the mirror of a powder container and dab surreptitiously at nose and chin.

Judith didn't.

She arose, carrying her shoulders very straight and her chin very high. She moved quickly and gracefully toward the door of Knight's office.

A gentle rap.

"Yes. Come in!"

She heard him calling from the inside of the room, opened the door and stepped across the threshold. It was the first time that she had ever entered Arthur Knight's study.

That was what the room really appeared to be, so comfortably and artistically was it furnished. There was a thick, dark carpet on the dark stained floor. Walls, half wainscoted with walnut, were lined with volumes, and more were stacked above. Over near the window, the afternoon light streaming across his shoulders, sat Arthur Knight before a desk.

He looked up.

"Oh—Miss Cameron. Won't you have a chair here?"

He indicated with a wave of his hand the one which was nearest to him. Judith silently came forward and took the chair. Then having settled herself, the blue eyes met his, waited intently.

"You wanted to see me?" Judith asked quietly.

"Why, yes. Yes!"

There were traces of roseate color rising in Arthur Knight's cheeks. He looked away from the girl, clasped his hands together on his desk and then looked back at her again.

"Yes. I wanted to see you," he said slowly. "I wanted to ask you, Miss Cameron, if you would do me the honor of taking dinner with me."

(To Be Continued)

LIMA, Peru, Jan. 4. (AP)—The Chilean steamer Mapocho was pounded into a total wreck tonight after going aground early in the morning near Samanco 200 miles north of Callao. All passengers were landed safely.

He looked up. "Oh—Miss Cameron. Won't you have a chair?"

Ranching Has Old Problems; Outlook For Year Bright

Fair Prices To Be Offered This Year, Is Belief Of Cattlemen Here; 1929 Is Looked Upon As Failure

Ranchers may not wear "ten-gallon" hats, and carry guns, and wear highly decorated boots and spurs, and cowhide jackets, but to them ranching is the same problem it has always been.

There are the lean years that drain their bank accounts and stretch their credit to almost the breaking point just as there has always been. Market prices continue to rise to the peak and then invariably there comes a slump.

Rain Needed Also

But according to several of the "old-timers" there is no more gamble to ranching than there is to farming or any other business. If there is plenty of rain there will be plenty of grass and water, just as there will be good crops.

In June 1928 the price of cattle started up and continued to rise until October of that year. By that time the price was so high that people could not afford to buy beef. Then too, the price of cattle were higher in the country than at the central markets and a slump always follows as it does not always pay the ranchers to market their stock at the market centers.

Grass Scarce

The ranchers bought too high to sell at a profit in 1929 and as a result there was not much buying or trading. Grass was scarce last year too and as feed is high, interest high and the expense of holding high because of this the cattlemen operated at a loss last year. The market was only fair and prices dropped considerably.

Dr I E Barr believes that in about 90 days money can be had at a cheap rate of interest because it is coming back after the slump in the market on Wall Street. "Bankers could loan their money on Wall Street at a high rate of interest and as this is guaranteed they would not loan to ranchers at the usual low rates," he declared. "There were two reasons which I think were the cause of such a poor year in 1929," continued Dr. Barr. "The prices were too high the fall before and as money was tied up in Wall Street during most of 1929 there was little to loan except to those with plenty of margin. Money has now left Wall Street and is available for use in normal channels, and I believe that this year will be a pretty good year, especially as far as buying and trading is concerned."

Looks For Good Year

"Prices have gone up on fat cattle the last few days and if we have good grass and water I look for this yea. to be good," declared Mr. Tom Arnett, of Littlefield. He too, agreed that 1929 was not at all a good year.

Mr. Fred Snyder who operates a ranch stated that the unusual high prices on stocker and feeder cattle in the latter part of 1928, to be finished for the 1929 market, and a large amount of Mexican buying, brought across the border in the spring of 1929, caused an over production of beef cattle on the market of that year and caused the slump of two to three dollars per hundred on beef cattle. This in turn caused a depression on stocker and feeder cattle for the fall of 1929.

"These losses have about all been cleared up and cattle are now commanding a fair price and the outlook for 1930 is very promising for cattle prices to be on a paying basis. Cattle generally are wintering good and the market is advancing."

Mr. Will Murray who operates a sheep ranch is also of the opinion that 1930 will be by far a better year than 1929.

Ranchers generally agreed that 1929 was a bad year and all look forward to a very good year in 1930.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

And the heavens shall praise thy wonders, O Lord: thy faithfulness also in the congregation of the saints.

For who in the heavens can be compared unto the Lord? who among the sons of the mighty can be likened unto the Lord.—Psalms, lxxxix, 5 6.

FORECASTING NINETEEN-THIRTY

IN other portions of this newspaper today will be found various and sundry reports of 1929's business, together with numerous forecasts for 1930. In many cases citizens interviewed regarding the incoming year see conditions very much in the same light as the Avalanche-Journal. In fewer cases, we are at variance.

Over-optimism, as we see it, may re-act as disastrously as over-pessimism. For that reason The Avalanche-Journal is at variance with some of the local citizens, who profess to see in 1930 the millenium of prosperity, the hey-dey of wealth and expansion. We see a good year—with chances that it will be an outstanding one. But we do not care to forecast wildly that within the next twelve-month everyone within the confines of our territory will be rolling in wealth, which will come with little effort.

Suffice it is to say that no one on the South Plains will starve during 1930. Business should advance, more people should enter the territory, more industries should be added and, if percentages mean anything, the South Plains should experience another bumper crop year. The latter point, however, is subject to waiting until the 1930 crops are safely harvested.

Doubting Thomases may consult their maps to assure themselves that Lubbock has a great territory, filled with potentialities of future prosperity. If there is a city within a radius of many, many miles which offers the promise which Lubbock offers, we have not discovered its location. If there is one to which the average Lubbock man would like to move his family and his business—there to make his permanent home—neither have we discovered that. These two points alone speak volumes for Lubbock and its area—not only in 1930 but in every other year.

The Avalanche-Journal sums up 1930's prospects just about this way: It will be a good year for those who work, for those who plan and for those who live within their incomes. It will mark another milestone in the progress of this country and aggressiveness on the part of its citizens will make the year a winner.

What better forecast could be asked?

THE "FENCE"

The "fence" is the hidden force which foments organized crime against life and property. Why not attack the arch-employer and backer of criminals? Why not go after the "fence," who is still the greatest single cause of organized crime? Why not suppress finance that fosters crime and so reduce the cost of insurance against crime?

Hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of stolen or fradulently obtained goods finds its way into the hands of "fences" each year in the United States. Silks and furs are stolen by the truck load, freed of identifying marks, shipped to distant points for sale—with the aid of "fences." Burglar and bandit spoil in the form of jewelry is smelted and refined into bullion—with the aid of "fences" and of a United States mint that asks few questions. Diamonds and similar precious loot are daily sold in every city by unscrupulous auctioneers or fly-by-night "cash vendors" who often do business on the sidewalk—with the aid of "fences." Vast quantities of merchandise criminally obtained by credit frauds, fake fires and burglaries are resold sometimes in direct competition with the original manufacturers of the goods—with the aid of "fences."

Behind it all lurks the "fence."

Yet in the whole crime-directory the "fence" is the last man to be caught and adequately punished. There are few fences in the jails and penitentiaries although there is hardly a robbery without its "fence." And in most of the bigger robberies the "fence" not only gets the loot but plans the crime. Because he is hard to get, society and the police prefer to consider him as an unreachable figure of the underworld.

A BIG BUSINESS

It is estimated by the president of a great motor concern that there will be a demand in 1930 for 3,390,000 new cars to replace old ones that are worn out. This is not an extravagant estimate in view of the fact that there are 25,000,000 cars in use.

If the average life of a car is seven and a half years, it will take about 3,390,000 new cars to keep those supplied who already have them, without taking into account of the number of new owners each year.

It was noted a few days ago that the upkeep of the automobiles now in use costs about $6,500,000,000 a year. Add this to the cost of the new cars needed for replacements, and there is a business of something like $10,000,000,000 that can be depended on by the dealers and manufacturers.

An optimist is a manufacturer of dolls who refers to his merchandise as "indestructible."

The big question at this time, in the senate, is who is to occupy the William Vare Memorial pew.

In Utopia they paint the guest towel on the bathroom wall, it having been found that even the guests ignore it.

One disadvantage of traveling by rocket, though there may be others, is the lack of any facilities enroute for changing plans.

We'd like to hang on another 50 years or so, if for no other reason than to learn who started the World War and who won it.

Leon Trotsky must be buying himself in a geography now that his applications for admittance have been turned down by almost every well known land.

Now that football has rung down the 1929 curtain, our eminent radio announcers will have to return to the peaceful indoor realm of pugilism and polo.

Several weeks ago, the Hungarian Karolyis were admitted to this country. And, so far as we have been able to discover, America's institutions are still safe and secure.

STEWART ILLUSTRATES INDISCRETION OF PRESERVING AWKWARD LETTERS

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—How a man can be caught by a cleverly-hidden dictaphone is not so hard to understand. He does not know that the darn contraption is there, recording every word he says.

Maybe he ought to be more careful about making compromising remarks. Maybe he ought to examine the walls and look behind the pictures and under the bed before he says a word. However, the dictaphone system of detection is comparatively new. It is not yet instinctive for a conspirator to do more than lower his voice when he wants to communicate by word of mouth with a partner in one of his plots.

But it does seem as if all the inherited experience of the ages should make it almost second nature for anyone of the most rudimentary good judgment to avoid having awkward letters, with his name signed to them, knocking around.

How account, then, for the extraordinary indiscretion of as keen a business man as Herbert C. Lakin (an individual shrewd enough to have risen to the presidency of the $175,000,000 Cuba company) in leaving whole reams of such correspondence where it could fall into the hands of Senator Caraway's lobby investigating committee?—to play horse with him for days, as Caraway and his colleagues did, in connection with the sugar tariff inquiry they have been having so much fun with.

Possibly there were a few of his extremely urgent communications that Witness Lakin nsimply had to send by mail. Even so, would it not look as if he might have written in cipher, or veiled his language a little, or at least have added?—"Burn this immediately," in a postcript at the end.

Did he adopt any of these precautions?

Why he not only wrote voluminously, in the plainest terms—with no warning whatever; without so much as the notation "Personal"—but he kept carbon copies of all he wrote. He kept his answers and all—in his office files, neatly classified alphabetically, for an agent of the lobby committee to find without even rummaging.

Doubtless Witness Lakin figured that no lobby agent would do anything so unceremonious as to go digging in his filing cabinet. He was too trustful. One did.

Perhaps some people will say it was a mean trick, and maybe it was, but that did Witness Lakin no good; the committee had his letters.

Possibly Witness Lakin would have been less informative otherwise.

For instance, would he have volunteered the item that the Cuban sugar folk were mindful of Edwin P. Shattuck's acquaintance with President Hoover?—when they hired Shattuck as their $75,000 lawyers.

Would he have mentioned his scheme to mobilize Latin American ill-feeling against the United States?—as a means of holding the sugar rate down.

Would he have quoted Maj. Gen. Enoch H. Crowder?—as giving him the military tip that, "In case of war, any attempt to keep a traffic lane open between the Phillippines (with their sugar resources) and the United States would be promptly abandoned."

How much Witness Lakin might have told if the committee had not had his letters is pure guesswork—because the committee did have his letters.

Latin America is not overly friendly to the United States anyway.

The supposed inside dope concerning the general staff's plan relative to a traffic lane from here to the Philippines is not a very weighty military secret—because everyone with a lick of sense knows the United States could not possibly keep such a lane open in the event of a war of any consequence.

But it is a safe bet that Witness Lakin did not like having extracts from his letters read to him, to be questioned about.

The investigators invariably have unearthed a fine batch of letters.

Diet and Health

EXCESS POUNDAGE WILL ENDANGER LIFE AND HEALTH—DOCTOR PETERS

Suppose Nobody Cared!

"MY DEAR DOCTOR: You never heard of me and are just as happy. I never heard of you and was happy. I never heard of you and was happy, too until my wife got hold of your book, Diet and Health, with Key to the Calories. The faking of nourishment on my part since then has regularly involved a battle. Now, I ask you, what did I ever do to you? But you did a lot to me. However, the trouble is dying down. Three of the past most recent years have been dietary conflicts, but I hold my poundage, and she has gained! She claims 5 ft. 6 in. in height, and I claim 5 ft. 4 1-2 in., although when measured in succession on a regular measuring device, I proved to be one-fourth inch taller. Shows how queer mathematics can be. But she carries her 160 (clothed) beautifully, and her relatives and friends say she looks much better. I also carry my 205 (unclothed) well. I am 46 inches in the chest, 38 waist, 16 biceps, 24 thigh (what do you care?), so you see weight isn't necessarily obesity.

What do I care? A lot, Mr. E.! Anyone so cheerful as you are should be preserved, and with a weight of 205 stripped, and a height of 5 ft. 4 1-2 in., you are carrying around considerable excess fat, and excess fat is a menace to health and life. According to the rule of allowing 110 pounds for 5 ft. in height (in stocking feet), and 5 1-2 pounds for each inch over, you should be around 135 pounds. Allowing 5 to 10 per cent over this, for the heaviness of bones and musculature—we'll give you 10 per cent—you could weigh around 150. That makes 55 pounds too much of you.

I note that your waist measure is considerably less than the chest, which is as it should be in a man, so evidently you haven't the excess fat in the spot where man usually stores it. But you have it tucked away somewhere. Surely a measurement of 46 inches chest and 24 inches thigh, with your height, must include some fatty padding—it couldn't be all muscle.

Your wife is also overweight. You both had better take the little book a little more seriously.

Muscle tissue does weigh more than fat tissue, equal sized amounts being considered. So a muscular person could look smaller than a fat person and have the same weight. That also accounts for the fact that increasing the exercise may reduce measurements, while the weight remains stationary.

Another point I'll speak of, on whether a person appears fat or not, is the distribution of fat. Where it is evenly distributed, the person doesn't look so much overweight as he would if it were unevenly distributed. And it also frequently happens that a person of normal weight will look fat because of this unequal distribution.

Exercise is the answer to those who have an unequal distribution, although the inheritance of certain types of forms does seem to be a factor.

We have instructions similar to those in my book, in condensed form, for those who need instructions on how to reduce or gain. Observe the column rules, and 'twill come.

Sunday Is The Day of Rest

Today's Poem

TO SLEEP

A flock of sheep that leisurely pass by,
One after one; the sound of rain, and bees
Murmuring; the fall of rivers, winds and seas,
Smooth fields, white sheets of water, and pure sky;
I've thought of all by turns, and yet do lie
Sleepless; and soon the small birds' melodies
Must hear, first uttered from my orchard trees;
And the first cuckoo's melancholy cry.
Even thus last night, and two nights more, I lay,
And could not win thee, Sleep! by any stealth:
So do not let me wear tonight away.
Without Thee what is all the morning's wealth?
Come, blessed barrier between day and day,
Dear mother of fresh thoughts and joyous health!

NEW GYM IS SOUGHT

Agitation Starts For New Structure In Snyder

SNYDER, Jan. 4 (Special)—Agitation for a modern new gymnasium is being made here with provisions for building the plant on the high school campus. Since the building of the new $10,000 athletic stadium here last year by popular subscription, parents have been seeing the need of a modern gymnasium to be erected before the state physical education law goes into effect early next year.

Horn, Looking Ahead, Sees Year Of Success For Texas Tech If Help Of Legislature Is Secured At Capital

College President Expects Institution To Grow Up Even Further In Year Of Nineteen-Thirty

By MARGARET TURNER.
Avalanche-Journal Staff.

A GREATER Texas Technological college for 1930 with added buildings, improvements in the heating plant and water system, and additional appropriations for summer school, all of which may be realized only through a favorable legislature, are the hopes of Dr. Paul W. Horn at this time, which marks the opening of the fifth winter term. An increase of 300 students over last year's record has been observed while the scholastic increase of one of the State's younger institutions has been phenomenal since the day it first opened its doors.

"We are assured of additional sheds and barns for the livestock," said Dr. Horn, and there will be $20,000 to improve the heating plant and $7,000 to add to the water system, but we are looking forward with the greatest interest to the coming session of the legislature."

Look To Summer

If the legislature sees fit to grant additional appropriation for the summer session an enrollment of 1800 students may be expected according to the authorities, since there were 1300 enrolled for last summer.

It is proposed to reorganize the athletic side of the school and a report will be made after the Board of Regents meet January 28.

Another interesting step in the field of athletics is the proposed "Staked Plains Conference" and if such a conference is formed it has been pointed out that the greatest benefit to be reaped would come through Tech's athletic teams having a definite goal to work for.

Courses Added

Each school will add new courses to college's curriculum during the winter and spring term according to Dr. Horn, and one of the promised events which is receiving favorable comment is the coming of Dean Walter Williams, of the university of Missouri, who is to deliver the commencement address. Courses in journalism at the college are to be extended and improved.

One of the outstanding realizations of the past year was the completion of the chemistry building and the moving of the departments of physics, chemistry, biology, and geology into their respective laboratories. Offices for the faculty of the various departments were moved to the new building and the vacancy left alleviated the crowded condition of the Administration building.

Funds To Be Available.

The late George T. Morrow, for many years a citizen of Lubbock provided in his will for the establishment of a loan fund of $20,000 for worthy young men and women of Texas Technological college. The fund will be administered by a committee composed of Dr. Horn, W. T. Gaston, business manager, and E. L. Dohoney, registrar.

Another loan fund which will be available within a few months was left to the school by the late Dr. R. J. Hall, and is to be between $10,000 and $15,000.

Dr. M. C. Overton, local physician gave a scholarship of $200 last year to the athlete who in practice or training, whether he is a letter man or not, has by words or deeds has done the most to develop true sportsmanship, team spirit, and elevate athletics on a higher plane. Leon Fisher, of Childress was awarded the scholarship.

Col. E. O. Thompson, mayor of Amarillo, was a guest at the Hotel Hilton Saturday.

Mrs. Halton Hyde of Abilene was in Lubbock Friday and Saturday attending the opening of the Hilton.

Mrs. Lon A. Robinson and little daughter, Betty Jean, of Plainview are visiting Mrs. Robinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Young, 1308 Avenue O.

The following persons from Plainview attended the opening of the Hotel Hilton Friday evening and left for their homes Saturday morning: Messrs. and Mesdames Guy Jacobs, Gray, Frank Day, Johnny Anderson, Clark, Boden, Ben Smith, Maury Hopkins, secretary of the chamber of commerce; Gene Bedford, Guy Tomlinson and Misses Campbell and Powell.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dysart of Plainview spent Friday and Saturday in Lubbock.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—What's new in New York—George M. Cohan, the "grand old man" of the theater, has sold himself "down the river" to the talkies. . . When he hits westward for Hollywood, it will be one of the few occasions when "the Yankee Doodle boy" found himself more than forty-five minutes from Broadway. . . . He'll be connected with United Artists. . . . Incidentally, it has been a dream of Cohan's life to make a trip back to dear old Ireland.

* * *

And Louis Bromfeld, the Pulitzer prize winning author, will not go to southern France, as usual, this winter, but will appear on Samuel Goldwyn's lot as a chatter scribbler. . . . Irving Berlin is heading for a director's job in the babbling celluloids. . . . And speaking of such matters, Will Hays has frowned at such front-page goings on as recently involved the names of Clara Bow and Harry Richman. It's also said that he's urged the dialogue writers not to repeat the sort of patter which found its way into "The Cock-Eyed World."

Gladys Glad, one of the most glorified of the Ziegfeld girlies, who married Mark Hellinger, the columnist, last summer, will become beauty expert for a New York tabloid.

The "all-American" dance leaders, as selected by The Dance Magazine, are Harriet Hoctor, premier ballerina; Clifton Webb, best eccentric; Ruby Keeler, best of the girl tap dancers; Bill Robinson, male tap; Jack Whiting, best juvenile; Evelyn Laye, best ingenue dancer; Eddie Cantor, best comic; Inez Courtney, best comedienne and Violet Carlson, best female eccentric.

Billie Burke who used to line the ticket seekers up for blocks, hit another unhappy show and closed within a week. . . . The theatrical batting average for the season thus far is now about 80 per cent flop. . . . Even Otis Skinner, Will Parnum, William Faversham and similar old favorites have failed to draw. . . . Skinner, they say, will be among the Hollywood bound ere long.

Someone has discovered that the late M. Clemenceau once made his residence when in New York at a spot now occupied by Loew's Sheridan Square theater and a memorial plaque will be placed upon the theater building. . . Clemenceau was a political exile when he took up his habitat there years and years ago. . . . Carmen Lee Barnes, the youngster whose novel, Schoolgirls, caused her to be ousted from a very private girls' school, is hoping to crash the Broadway stage, the while she works on magazine pieces and a second novel. . . . Ethel Waters, who was the "toast" of Harlem, singers hasn't been able to crack dear old London's "reserve," so they say.

Jimmy Hussey, the well-known comic, finally had to go to the hills for his health. . . . Like most actors, he fought the prospect and even defied friends who tried to get him to a doctor's office.

Those Hollywood beach barbecues have made their appearance in the swanky Long Island sector as cold night bonfire feeds. . . . . Estelle Taylor drops a note that she's given up her second struggle with the now famous Hollywood diet. . . . . And the Christmas card of Irene Franklin, that grand vaudeville trouper who is now anchored here in "Sweet Adeline," gave me more laughs than did "The Specialist." . . . It's a tiny booklet, recounting the adventures of herself and husband during a pre-season vacation in Canada. . . Among other things, she describes those vegetable side dishes served in country hotels as "bird seed bowls containing certain samples."

"Illusion" Headlines Local Theatre Program This Week

Buddy Rogers And Nancy Carroll To Be Shown In Film

Picture Starts At Lindsey Today for Four-Day Run

ARTHUR TRAIN'S famous novel "Illusion," will be seen and heard in its film form at the Lindsey Theatre as the main feature the first half of the week. The story, which was serialized in the Ladies' Home Journal, deals with the fortunes of a young magician who becomes the lion of the society circles in which he practices his art as a professional entertainer. He finds himself drawn by two worlds—the world of bedizened dowagers and haughty sophisticates—and the world of troupers, show-people, his own kind.

Charles (Buddy) Rogers plays the role of the young magician. Nancy Carroll is co-featured in the role of the dancing-singing vodvil performer with whom he falls in love.

Sequences Thrilling

There are a number of thrilling sequences in the picture induced by the natural plot suspense and by the dangers of the life of necromancy which Rogers practices.

Several songs are introduced effectively in the plot. One of the principal numbers, "Revolutionary Rhythm," is sung and danced by Buddy and Nancy and is developed in a night club sequence with Lillian Roth, former Vanities star, singing and dancing it with the support of a dazzling chorus of fast-stepping chorines in unique "Revolutionary" costumes.

A cast of eminent actors, many of them veterans of the speaking stage, support the featured pair. Among them are June Collyer, Kay Francis, Regis Toomey, Knute Erickson, Eugenie Besserer, William Austin, Emilie Melville, Paul Lukas, Eddie Kane, Michael Visaroff, Katherine Wallace and Maude Turner Gordon.

E. Lloyd Sheldon adapted the screen story from the Arthur Train original. Richard H. Digges, jr., wrote the dialog and Lother Mendes, who directed the most recent Clara Bow picture, "Dangerous Curves," wielded the megaphone.

Adolphe Menjou Coming In First Talking Picture

'Fashions In Love' Comes To Palace This Week

ADOLPHE MENJOU is a new Adolphe Menjou in his great, first all-talking picture. His rich baritone voice adds a new note to his sophistication and none of his many picture-going friends will know the real Adolphe Menjou until he sees this dazzling, sophisticated star in "Fashions in Love," which comes to the Palace today.

Menjou is his own lightly humorous, smart self in "Fashions in Love" and, more than ever before, his wit sparkles in the clever dialog of this famous Hermann Bahr play. Two splendid English actresses play opposite the star, Fay Compton, Sir James M. Barrie's favorite actress, and Miriam Seegar.

"Fashions in Love" was directed by Victor Schertzinger, maker of "Forgotten Faces," "the Wheel of Life" and "Redskin," and composer of several world-famous lyrics including "Marcheta." The story deals with a dapper and noted musician who captivates audiences with his music and women's hearts with his personality. Throughout all his flirtations, he retains a fine, deep love for his wife. To curb his philandering, his wife pretends a love affair with the husband of his latest conquest. The artist immediately turns about and returns to his own fireside.

During the picture, Menjou sings a new song hit, written by Schertzinger, "Delphine," and Miss Compton sings another Schertzinger song "I Still Believe In You."

"Fashions in Love" will sweep into the hearts of those people who enjoy Menjou's previous delightful pictures "Serenade," "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" and others, and it will capture new Menjou followers. He surpasses all expectations in the new talking medium in motion pictures.

MATCH STARTED BLAST

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 4 (AP)—An explosion of gas in the Old Town Coal mine at North McAlester, December 17, which claimed the lives of 61 miners, was attributed by Miller D. Hay, chief state mine inspector today to a lighted match.

John Gilbert To Be Seen Tuesday In "Talkie" Film

Famous Play "His Glorious Night" Now On Screen

WITH A complete background of the legitimate stage, "His Glorious Night" which opens Tuesday at the Palace Theatre as a new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dialogue feature, starring John Gilbert, presents an interesting study in personalities.

To begin with, the story comes from the pen of one of Europe's most prolific playwrights, Ferenc Molnar, whose sophisticated writings have made him an international figure in the theatre world. "His Glorious Hour" is a screen adaptation of his famous play, "Olympia." Then there is Willard Mack, noted New York playwright, actor, producer and director, whose splendid adaptation of the play, adding a modern touch to the lines, greatly enhances the value of the comedy-drama in entertainment values.

Barrymore Directs

Lionel Barrymore, who directed the sparkling feature his third feature directorial effort, is, of course, known to audiences as an outstanding figure of the American stage, having won wide fame with his brother and sister, John and Ethel, in the theatre before embarking upon a screen career, reaching a dramatic triumph in his characterization in "The Copperhead," his last play.

John Gilbert, who is starred in the screen adaptation of the daring Molnar play, was groomed in stock companies before entering films and comes of theatrical lineage, both his father and mother having been on the stage.

NEGRO IS HANGED

RAYVILLE, La., Jan. 4 (AP)—Henry Wilson, young negro who criminally attacked a white woman of Rayville while carrying her baggage from the railroad station to her home last fall moaned a negro spiritual from the Parish prison gallows here today and was hanged by Sheriff A. A. Abell.

Thanksgiving Day is a custom distinctly American. No other nation in the world celebrates such a day.

Tuning in on the Talkies by Walthill

THE movie colony takes its troubles lightly. For instance: It requires only a dab of film cement to mend "Broken Hearts of Hollywood."

"Love's Old Sweet Song" never sounds so convincing after a good record has been broken.

"The Desired Woman" usually associates with "Women They Talk About."

Sophie Tucker, who sings her songs as star of "Honky Tonk," describes a night club as "a honky tonk all dressed up and no where to go but jail."

Armida

It may be true that "Love Is Blind" but when it comes to an engagement ring it is not stone blind.

"The Law That Failed" was being discussed in movies away back in 1917. It must have been some other law.

"Love Without Question" holds one great advantage. It does away with a lot of goofy answers.

For "Double Feature" Day
"Resurrection"
"He Comes Up Smiling"

"Disraeli" is another politician who refuses to quit. He continues as a talkie, starring George Arliss.

Making "Sugar" From Sap

There is an early run of sap this season. "The Sap From Syracuse" is a new play. Edward Everett Horton is "The Sap" starring in Warner Bros. current talkie.

A baker's dozen consists of 13.

George Bancroft Coming In "Wolf Of Wall Street"

Stock Market Film Raises Star To New Heights

ALL OF THE feverish excitement and hysteria that accompanies a "bull drive" on the Wall Street stock market has been captured in George Bancroft's new starring picture for Paramount, "The Wolf of Wall Street," coming to the Lindsey on Thursday.

To accomplish this, Paramount went to unusual lengths in cast assembly and set construction. The interior of the New York Stock Exchange was duplicated in detail for one of the major sequences of the story and Hollywood and Los Angeles were scoured for men who were familiar with brokerage methods on 'the floor.' These men, many of them recruited from down-stairs offices in the financial district, were eager to see the interior of a motion picture studio and to play before the camera, and their enthusiasm, coupled with the directorial ability of Rowland V. Lee, brought out convincing performances from each of them. The scenes on the floor of the stock market are declared to be highly dramatic and authentic portrayals of what actually happens daily in this "financial heart of the world."

Baclanova, Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas, among others, are included in the cast playing in Bancroft's support. The story of "The Wolf of Wall Street" was written for the screen by Doris Anderson.

That James Norman Hall never gets tired of Tahiti.

That Henry F. Hoyt, author of "A Frontier Doctor," is spending the winter in the Philippines.

Story Of New York Is Revealed In "Manna-hatin"; 300 Years Told

THE STORY of New York City, told in many histories, in every new day's news dispatches and yet never fully told, holds deep interest for every American and for the people of other nations.

"Within three centuries a miracle has been wrought, says the foreword to the latest story of New York. "Where stood a few straggling tepees, now towers the great metropolis of a nation, the first commercial city of the world."

Story Traced Back

The thread of the story of how New York City came to be, can be traced not only for 300 years but back to 1453, when the City of Constantinople fell before the victorious Turks and the trade routes between "The Indies" and Western Europe were barred to commerce.

That is where the story begins, but through the subsequent years its thread is woven into a fabric of adventure, hardships, enterprise, romance, heroism and gigantic achievement unique in the annals of the world.

That is the tale told in "Manna-hatin." The Story of New York a book which has just been published with rare appropriateness by one of the city's oldest financial institutions, The Manhattan Company, which was chartered in 1799 and which, therefore, has witnessed the growth of the city from the time when it was a town of 60,000 people.

Walker Comments

"Manna-hatin," The Story of New York, carries "An Appreciation" by Mayor James J. Walker in which he comments on the fact that the City of New York was one of the original shareholders of The Manhattan Company and was represented on its board of directors for more than a century.

There are forty-two chapters in the book, some of which, to indicate the scope of the story, are entitled: Only a River; Hudson Finds "Manna-hatin" The Indians Sell "Manna-hatin" How Wall Street Began; New York Wins Freedom of the Press; British Capture New York; The First Stock Exchange; The Great Fire of '35; The Birth of Greater New York; New York and Tomorrow.

Jabotinsky Writes

When Horace Liveright publishes in late January Judge and Fool, based on the story of Samson and Delilah, the name Altalena, which appears on the title page, is the pen name of Vladimir Jabotinsky, the head of the Palestinian Jewish Foreign Legion during the war, and more recently come into prominence when on September 26th of this year he split with the main Zionist Organization in Palestine, and under the title of the Revisionist section indicated that he would demand from the British, permission to organize special Jewish defense units there. The Jabotinsky faction issued a statement denouncing what they described as "weak leadership" by Dr. Weizmann and announcing the creation of an independent executive.

High Proposal

One of the high spots in the career of Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson, author of "The Corral of Death" (Houghton Mifflin Company), was celebrated on the top of Eiffel Tower where after two hours he persuaded a young lady to marry him. Major Wheeler-Nicholson was soon afterwards ordered to Germany and the wedding took place in Coblenz. For further details see Major General Henry T. Allen's "My Rhineland Journey." General Allen gave the bride away and very fittingly described the occasion in his memoirs.

Plays Published

Two of the most important plays of the present New York season have just been published in book form by Horace Liveright. They are Strictly Dishonorable, a charming comedy by Preston Sturges and The Criminal Code by Martin Flavin who incidentally for the first time since the days of Clyde Fitch and Avery Hopwood had three plays running on Broadway at the same time.

Did You Know—

That Mary Agnes Hamilton, M. P. whose new novel, "Three Against Fate," will be published on January 24, has just arrived in this country for a lecture tour.

That Worthington C. Ford is editing a selection of the "Letters of Henry [illegible]" for spring publication.

That Jessie B. Rittenhouse is the wife of Clinton Scollard.

That a new edition of Mary Austin's "The American Rhythm" is in preparation.

That Yo Pet, Florence Ayscough's Chinese dog, can ride in an airplane without getting seasick.

That Thames Williamson has written a juvenile, to be called "Opening Davy Jones's Locker."

That A. Edward Newton thought he would never live to read as fine a study as Edward Wagenknecht's "The Man Charles Dickens."

That Gamaliel Brandford's next book will be called "Daughters of Eve."

That a brochure on Havelock Ellis will be supplied to his admirers free of charge.

That Oliver LaFarge's New York apartment shows a decided Navajo influence.

That Phyllis Bottome, author of "Windlestraws," has left her home in the Austrian Tyrol to spend the winter in Nice.

That Sophia Clough, whose next novel is entitled "Song-Bird", is living next door to Thackeray's granddaughter on the Isle of Wight.

Turns Of A Bookworm

Book News Notes For This Week

Lists Ambitions

Alan Hugh Hillgarth, author of the new murder mystery, "What Price Paradise?" (Houghton Mifflin Company) lists his literary ambitions as follows: 1. To produce novels that are darn good stories and at the same time have observation and study of character. 2. To show that a novel of action need not necessarily be badly written and can thrill even if it is unhurried. 3. To write with a background. In other words, to show not only the influence of one character on another or the influence of personal actions on character but also the influence of a big situation or a big movement on various characters within its reach.

Vast Improvements Seen In Science And Art Of Radio

Industry Has New And Larger Plans For Broadcasting

Television's Debut, Radio In Planes, Educational Radio Classes And Other Work Is Listed

NY NEA SERVICE

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Authoritative statements from heads of the radio industry predict rosy things for radio's immediate future. Next year you can look for a better radio season and many of the ideas under development during radio's past few years will emerge from their development chrysalis into the perfection stage.

First of all, there'll be better programs, made possible by better music, loudspeakers, and receiving sets. Broadcasting stations, according to common opinion, will strive to their utmost to present the highest type of programs.

A few of radio's guiding lights predict the debut of television. Static elimination, according to one leader will be experimented with more extensively and probably a remedy will be found. International broadcasting will be done on a much larger scale with networks releasing regular international programs.

Radio will make great strides in aviation and education and at the end of 1930 there'll be the "two-radio" family, similar to the "two-car" family in the automobile world.

More Music Appreciation

The predictions of the two large network heads, M. H. Aylesworth of NBC and William S. Paley of Columbia are interesting. Says Aylesworth:

"The most important development in radio in the coming year will be the organized promotion of music appreciation. The American public is manifesting a continuous increase in its desire for broadcasting over nation-wide networks of the works great musicians."

Says Paley:

"The formation and adoption of a concrete plan or curriculum for a broad scheme of education by radio will, in my estimation, be radio's greatest achievement of the 1929-1930 broadcasting season."

H. P. Davis, vice president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, is one of those who think that television will probably enter the field next year.

"Visual broadcasting" he says, "is rapidly forging ahead and may prove to be one of the important advances of this art in 1930 if developments now under way are successful so as to provide more practical receiving equipment than is now in existence."

International Broadcasts

From Dr. A. N. Goldsmith of the Radio Corporation of America comes the statement:

"It is anticipated that during the coming season there will be a notable increase in the quantity and quality of international broadcasting and a widened interchange of programs between various European countries and the leading broadcasting agency in the United States."

Dr. Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce, classes radio as the "world peacemaker." He says:

"We may expect that at some future date it will be possible to listen in on regularly scheduled features from distant parts of the earth. Latin-American growers will advertise their coffee. Spaghetti manufacturers will give us broadcasts from Milan. And all of this will promote world good will."

So much for the things that are expected to happen in broadcasting. Now for things that are assured the waiting ears of radio fans.

"Better broadcast programs, better sets, further improvement in loudspeaker performance, greater uniformity of performance in receivers, calibrations on receivers so that listeners can immediately identify any station they hear and greater improved method of volume control," are promised by Powell Crosley, president of the Crosley Radio Corporation.

"The next great step in radio development will be the elimination of man-made static," promises E. A. Earl, president of the Earl Radio Corporation. Herbert H. Frost of Kolster Radio predicts a further development of the remote control idea, recently introduced, so that sets can be turned on from any place in the home.

Following are further pertinent remarks of several prominent radio men pertaining to radio development:

"We may expect to see tremendous development in aircraft radio." —Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor, U. S. Naval Research Laboratory.

"In my opinion, the most important radio development this year will be that the strong manufacturers will grow stronger and the weak ones weaker."— E. F. McDonald, jr., president of Zenith Radio Corporation.

"Technical developments will doubtless lead to an international exchange of programs and further progress in the field of television in 1929-1930." — Martin P. Rice, manager of broadcasting, General Electric Company.

Harold A. LaFount, Federal radio commissioner, in discussing present-day radio programs, is of the opinion that despite their acknowledged fineness, they are yet lacking in something.

"Radio, I fear, is coming to be just a side issue," he says, "something to be taken for granted. How then may we refashion broadcast presentations into something more than casual entertainment?

"The goal I would set for radio combines the transmission of culture, useful knowledge and inspiration through the medium of entertainment. This high standard cannot be attained by taking away any of the attributes now present in radio programs unless they be replaced with factors which have a positive tendency toward the new objective."

Radio as a means of education has many sponsors and one of the most sincere is Walter Damrosch, noted musical leader, who has conducted a musical appreciation series over a NBC hookup for some time.

"If children hear a sufficient amount of fine music when they are young, they will not be content to live without it when they are older," he says. "This can be accomplished through that great invention of the age — radio broadcasting."

To sum it all up, according to M. H. Aylesworth of NBC:

"Radio in America has attained heights not approached elsewhere on the globe. Here it had its inception. Here it has had its most rapid development. Here it has achieved its highest degree of stability as an industry and its finest exposition as an art."

Two Important Radio Improvements Planned in 1930

The class listening to a radio lesson, herewith, is a forerunner of what may be extended over the entire country in 1930. The television receiver which Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson of General Electric is shown here operating, may also set the pace for 1930. And it is certain that radio in aviation, as personified by Pilot E. D. Allen of the Boeing Systems, in inset, will also cut a big figure.

BEFORE The MIKE

Don't fear, fans, you're almost sure of getting your baseball by radio in 1930. Although nothing definite came out of the big baseball convention in New York on this question, the silence alone is consent. It seems that it's being left to individual clubs, whether or not the games will be broadcast and so far only one official has taken a stand on the negative side.

Miss Jones

Grace Jones is a daughter of one of those men who went "down to the sea in ships." She gets few opportunities to talk to her father, Capt. Hugh Llewelyn Jones, of the S. S. President Lincoln, but she does get the chance to entertain him often over a San Francisco radio station. She plays the piano.

NBC recently signed Reinald Werrenrath, one of the best voices in America, as vocal supervisor of its whole network. The appointment of Werrenrath, along with Walter Damrosch, musical counsel for the NBC, puts two men at the head of NBC's musical departments who will add distinction as well as talent to all NBC's offerings.

If you're a mid-west listener, you can't have missed "Bernice," stellar entertainer at WJR some two years ago. The young lady took to the stage for a while with Thelma Bow. But they're back at WJR again, playing a Wednesday evening stand.

Listen to "Marmonica Mac" at WLW, Cincinnati, some Wednesday evening and know that Charles McCormick, who plays this role, has 40 different harmonicas, one for each key and more for the spaces.

The butcher, baker, candlestick-maker have all sponsored radio programs. The only one who hasn't taken the air for advertising yet is the undertaker. And he probably figures that radio advertising or no radio advertising, he'll get us all in the end.

Studio ickuns: Frank Black, Happy Wonder Bakers' conductor, was graduated from college at the age of 16—and he's still a chemist. Sammy Watkins, popular Cleveland bandster of WTAM, has signed with NBC. Roxy's famous for his sign-off, "Good night, pleasant dreams. God bless you." Paul Specht, known as "The Angel of Tin Pan Alley" is going to WLW, Cincinnati, for a stand.

Taylor

One announcer all the commercial men are clamoring for is Deems Taylor, ex-show man, composer, entertainer and other things. But Taylor only handles high class programs, as befits his talent and demand. His recent announcing of the recorded program on Thanksgiving day made his voice one to associate with radio's greatest announcers. Taylor is also heard announcing the present series of Puccini operas.

Leopold Stokowski and his Philadelphia symphony are reported to have received $100,000 for their three radio concerts and to get $100,000 for another three.

Chrysler Runs 69 Days Minus Stops

Motor Runs Constantly To Establish New Endurance Records; Drive Rolls Up Total Of 53,710 Miles

With the motor running constantly for 69 days, two hours and three minutes, a Chrysler "65" stock sedan has shattered all endurance records on the Avus Speedway track near Berlin by rolling up a total of 53,710 miles.

Details of this record—an accomplishment that has stirred European motor circles by its demonstration of the dependability and quality of American manufacture—have just reached the Chrysler Export Corporation. The long run which started on September 25, was abruptly halted when the car turned over in a dense fog to avoid a collision. Although no serious damage was done, the control committee officially terminated the run the following day with the engine still running smoothly.

Car Not New

The Chrysler selected for this run was not new, already having approximately 4,400 miles on the speedometer. It was built and assembled from standard production parts in the Berlin Chrysler plant, and the run was intended solely to prove that efficient transportation is available in cars of moderate price.

The average speed maintained during more than two months of driving time was 32.4 miles an hour. Gasoline consumption which actually decreased as the miles rolled by, averaged approximately 17.5 miles to the gallon.

Col. Art Goebel "Back To Earth"

KENOSHA, Wis., Jan. 4.—The country's great air lines have lost—temporarily at least—one of their best known and most consistent customers. But in this instance, the air's loss is the open road's gain and the whole transaction looms up on the credit side of the American transportation progress book.

For when Col. Arthur C. Goebel, the pioneer pilot and transcontinental champion whose work has done so much toward the development of motors generally, wheeled his new and specially equipped Nash Twin-Ignition Eight cabriolet away from the Nash factory yard, he declared that he intends to stay on the ground until he has tested out every detail of its advanced mechanical features and its unequalled performance attributes.

Eschewing his favorite, mile-high mode of travel for the smooth and effortless flight of the new straight-eight, he swung into the Lincoln highway for an overland run to Kansas City and thence south through Oklahoma and Texas for an old fashioned bear hunt in Old Mexico. He plans to drive the car on to California, following his Mexican visit, and to use the new Nash as his official car for aviation work on the coast.

Lubbock, as "The Hub of the Plains," takes leaders ip again with information that this county, with 739 members, heads the 254 Texas counties in membership in the state's principal cooperative cotton marketing organization, the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association.

The "Hub" idea again is carried out magnificently when it is revealed that this county is the center of the state's most active development in cooperative cotton marketing. The greater South Plains area, for instance, with only 14.3 per cent of Texas ginnings for the season of 1928-1929, made 44.3 per cent of all deliveries of cotton, by contract, from members of the Farm Bureau Cotton association in the state.

Only Fourth Of Members

The remarkable thing about these figures is the fact that this area boasts only 25.4 per cent of the Bureau's membership, totalling 5,850 out of the state's approximate 23,000.

Ginnings for the 1928-1929 season for this area totalled 706,648 bales of the 4,937,455 produced in Texas for that period. There were 115,225 bales delivered by contract to the Farm Bureau last year and up to Dec. 1, 1929, 22.5 per cent of all deliveries in the state were made in this section, the number of these being 22,636 bales. A total of 100,472 bales were delivered to the association in Texas up to the same date.

Operate And Own 28 Gins

Farmers belonging to the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association cooperate in more ways than marketing. They own and operate 28 gins throughout the state. Of this total this section has 21 gin plants valued at $840,000, which is 67.2 per cent of all gin properties in the state, or of $1,250,000 approximately.

Loaded with the foregoing statistics, and others, which have been prepared by H. J. Bowen, professor of agronomy at Texas Tech's school of agriculture, in cooperation with M. H. Payne, field representative of the Texas Farm Bureau Federation in this area, Dr. Paul W. Horn, president of Tech, will leave today for Austin where he will present them to Alexander W. Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board.

See Concentration Point

Chairman Legge and Carl Williams, cotton member of the Farm Board, will be in Austin for a conference with Governor Dan Moody, and others, Monday. Dr. Horn will present an appeal to the board members to locate a cotton concentration point at Lubbock for that organization.

Williams is scheduled to speak on the opening day's program at the Texas Tech Second Annual Farmers' Short Course, which will be held here next month.

This greater South Plains area includes six districts, taking in 46 counties, about half of which produce hardly any cotton at all.

Following is a resume of these districts, giving counties, members of the cotton association, deliveries last year, deliveries to date this year, total ginnings last year, number and value of Farm Bureau gin plants:

Poultry To Bring Profits In 1930

Smaller Supply And Increased Demand Seen As Favorable Signs

ASBURY, N. J.—Nineteen-thirty gives every promise of being one of the most prosperous years in the history of the American poultry industry, is the encouraging prediction of Harry R. Lewis, president of the National Poultry Council.

Lewis, in an address here before the New Jersey State Poultry association, based his statement on figures gathered on a nation-wide scale. The indications point to an increasing prosperity for poultrymen because there are fewer hens on farms, a greatly increased demand for baby chicks, and better prices for eggs and poultry meat. Equally important he advises, is the fact that there is no evidence of price breaking surpluses.

"All indications point to good time immediately ahead and a spirit of optimism prevails in the poultry industry," Prof. Lewis asserted. "After suffering serious economic disturbances as a result of over-expansion and surpluses in 1928, the law of supply and demand has operated effectively to bring about an economic balance in all branches of poultry production.

Hens Decrease in 1929

"The year of 1929 has witnessed a remarkable come-back. During the current year hen population throughout the country has probably been from 5 to 10 per cent below that of 1928. This substantial decrease has been a valuable factor in bringing about stabilization.

"Right now the egg situation looks very promising from a production standpoint as prices have advanced during the past few months somewhat more rapidly than usual. Moreover, egg prices throughout the year have been on a higher level than a year ago. Present cold storage holdings are considerably lower than the five-year average.

"With poultry meat the situation is also favorable. Roaster prices this fall are averaging three to five cents a pound higher than they were last year at this time. Fowls are selling for prices considerably higher than those of a year ago.

Pullet Market Up

"Pullets for sale as egg producers have shown great strength during the past year, the result probably of an effort of many people to re-stock and re-enter the egg production field, being attracted to it by the return of the poultry industry to a stabilized condition. The supply this fall has nowhere near met the demand and prices have been at a very satisfactory level.

"There is every indication that the poultry industry will experience a very satisfactory and prosperous year in 1930. We are now in the midst of an upward climb to maximum poultry prosperity. Feed prices will probably show little or no change. Egg production continues to increase, which will help the general price level."

A villian was at first a farm laborer, a quiet, inoffensive individual; but in the course of time the name has come to mean something entirely different.

The most primitive method of recording the hours was by means of a sun-dial. After this came the hour-glass, the clepsydra, or water clock, the burning of candles, and the clock.

Harry R. Lewis . . . predicts poultry prosperity.

POULTRY PROJECT STORY

By Geraldine Wicker

I joined the club two years ago because others had told me how instructive and helpful it had been to them and the trips and cash prizes won. I joined also because I knew I needed to learn how to cook and sew and that my joining would be helpful, not only to me, but also to my parents and community.

The productive project I chose was poultry. I chose this because I thought it more profitable and there is always a ready market for chickens, and I thought I would enjoy working with chickens more than any other project.

Did Her Own Work.

I set my own hens and set eggs at the hatchery. I bought my own feed, fed my chickens, cleaned the hen house and chicken yard, kept my house well ventilated to prevent the chickens from getting overheated, and kept the brooder burning for small chicks. I oiled my house with kerosene and lubricating oil to prevent lice. I penned my second year chickens and, with the aid of mother, culled them and sold all culls. I also kept a complete record of the feed bought, chickens and eggs sold and the amount of eggs laid each day.

I have learned the essentials of an adequate diet, which I believe is very important because many people do not eat the right kind of foods. I have learned the right fods to cook and the best way to serve it.

Learns To Cook, Also.

I can cook vegetables, sweet breads, salads, salad dressings sauces and soups.

In canning, I have learned how to use the pressure cooker and sealer, to use cold pack methods, and have learned new recipes for both fruits and vegetables in glass and three cans of tomatoes in tin, using the puree. The value of this is $11.25.

For interior improvement I have refinished my bed room. I refinished an old chair, made a foot stool, made curtains for window and clothes closet, stained the floor, framed the pictures, helped to build a clothes closet and paper the walls.

Beautified The Yards.

For exterior improvements I planted numerous varieties of flowers and cared for them daily, also kept the front and back yards clean.

I have learned to make different seams and finishes, also the fitting and cutting of patterns. I have learned to do plain hemstitching, Bermuda fagating and weaving.

Makes Own Clothing.

I have made a suit of underwear consisting of the French panties and brassiere, also a gown and hemstitched towel. I am secretary of the club and attend the meetings regular. I attend the Dallas fair and the Farmers' Short Course.

The 4-H club has been a great value, not only to me, but to my family. I have learned to sew, cook, can and raise poultry. I feel that in another year I can do most of my sewing, which will be a great help and give mother more spare time. I sell some of my poultry each year and help buy the largest part of my clothing. I have learned how to beautify the home, exterior and interior. I find that the club has been a pleasure as well as educational and I am proud to be a 4-H club member. Value, as in record book, on poultry project, $117; on canning, $11.25, and on clothing, $1.53.

Colorado was admitted to the Union in 1876 and since then has been called the Centennial State, that year marking the one-hundredth anniversary of American independence.

McClung Home Demonstration Club

By Mrs. J. W. Allspaugh, Secretary

The McClung club is the youngest of the Home Demonstration clubs. It was organized March 4, 1929 with six members present. We were rather discouraged at the beginning, but our club has grown to fifteen members and most of these are active workers.

This club was organized too late to enter the Yard Improvement contest; but each member has done some work along this line. Our club is interested in home improvement, and several labor saving devices have been purchased. Four homes have installed lighting systems. Five homes have added power washing machines. Eight homes have gasoline irons, while seven homes have pressure cookers with Burpee sealers.

Many Quilts Are Made

A number of members have been interested in quilt making. A number of quilts have been reported, but Mrs. C. C. Houchin is our champion. She has made seventeen quilts this year. Mrs. D. S. Rucker has pieced seven and quilted ten.

Nearly every member made a canning budget and has filled it during the canning season. Mrs. E. R. Slater leads the club in canning greens. She has canned 100 cans of greens alone, besides 250 cans of other vegetables, and has canned 340 quarts of fruit. She says, "I think we all have a better appetite for having a vegetable meal every day, and we have not been sick so far."

Poultry Raiser Is Busy

Mrs. D. S. Rucker seems to be our bird financier. She has a beautiful flock of standard-bred white leghorns that net her a neat sum each week. There are 550 birds in this flock and Mrs. Rucker knows how to make them pay for themselves.

Mrs. Frank Crossland reports a good profit on the sale of cream and she reserved a good supply for home use.

Our club served the Achievement Day dinner for the 4-H club members at Lubbock. This dinner was financed by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, and the proceeds will go to buy a few books for our club library. The remainder will go for the stage equipment of our new auditorium to be built at McClung in the near future.

4-H Club Boy Markets His Turkeys At Double Price Of Local Markets

Following the instructions he had received from a big packing concern, on how to kill turkeys by sticking them at a certain spot in the mouth which would pierce the brain and loosen the fowl's feathers so it could be picked dry, netted 13-year-old J. L. Irish, of County Line, 34 cents a pound on 20 turkeys.

This 4-H club boy's poultry project, by its unusual success, brought him approximately twice the amount for his turkeys than he could have received by selling them ono the local markets. He shipped them to Denver at the time the local price ranged from 14 cents to 16 cents per pound, his 20 head averaging almost 9 pounds and bringing $59.84.

Starting with one turkey hen of the Bronze variety, J. L. set 19 eggs on April 25, 1929; 12 eggs on May 1st, 18 on May 25 and 13 on June 15. From this total of 53 eggs set he secured a hatch of 37. From his original output of $10 for this first hen, he spent $2.50 for feed and figured a labor cost for caring for them of $1.10, total expense being $13.60.

Value of market poultry sold, 20 turkeys, $54.84, with six turkeys on hand, valued at $28, and one at $10, a profit of $84.24 was made during the year by this club boy.

Sugar cane was first cultivated in the United States about the year 1751.

Four New Eights Leading Automobile Parade Of 1930

Larger Sixes, A Sixteen, Another Front Drive And English Small Car Add To Motor Novelties Of New Year

Hudson, Dodge, Oakland, And DeSoto To Put Out Eights; Others Improved Over 1929 Models

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Four new eights, two larger sixes, an additional six in an old established line, and a 16-cylinder luxury automobile are the outstanding novelties at the opening today of the New York automobile show.

The new eights are: Hudson, Oakland, Dodge, DeSota.

The larger sixes: Erskine, Essex.

The additional six: Dodge

The sixteen: Cadillac.

Two of the new eights, Hudson and Oakland, mark the demise of the sixes these names so long have represented. Only the Oakland is a V-type eight. The Cadillac is a V-16.

Two additional new automobiles are being shown in New York for the first time, although not at the automobile show and not for the public eye. These are the front-drive Gardner Eight, marking number three in front-drive passenger cars, and the new Austin, Americanized copy of the well-known English small car. None of these will be ready for production until some time in spring.

Outstanding features of the new cars at the show are:

Hudson Great Eight: Straight eight; high compression engine of lower displacement, but more power and greater economy than the Super-Six; dual oil pump, lubricating engine from both ends equally; individual compression head whereby incoming fuel cools exhaust valve and prevents detonation; Lanchester vibration damper; suction crankcase breather; tapered pistons to prevent piston slap; four rings, two compression, two oil; redesigned manifold; sturdier chassis; offset driving pinion to equalize the load on the differential bearings.

The Hudson bodies: In 10 types, five on 119 inches wheelbase, five on 126 inches; larger, wider, lower; modernistic instrument panel and hardware design; one-piece windshield opened by means of a toggle lever or elbow at center. Available in any of six color combinations.

Essex: A six having many of the mechanical improvements of the Hudson Great Eight—dual oil pump; high compression, larger motor; sturdier chassis; new type cylinder head; suction crankcase breather; Lanchester balancer; tapered pistons; improved manifolding and offset pinion drive. The clutch, still in oil, is larger and has 88 instead of the old 72, cork inserts. Transmission gears widened.

Essex bodies also are wider and longer; dash and hardware designed modernistically; windshield opening by toggle lever; also available in any of six-color combinations.

Dodge: A straight eight L-head engine of 76 maximum horse-power, downdraft carburetor with automatic adjustable accelerator pump, air cleaner and manifold heat control; fuel pump; single dryplate clutch; full pressure lubrication with spray to cylinder walls from oil jet in connecting rod bearings; internal expanding hydraulic brakes; long semi-elliptic springs mounted in rubber; four double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers.

Dodge bodies are all steel "monopiece," with floor boards mounted directly on the frame and center of gravity lowered, considerably; V-scraper design of dash instruments, lamps, bumper tie-pieces and hardware.

The new Dodge six also has all-steel mono-piece bodies of similar design. Engine develops 61 horsepower. Full pressure lubrication.

Oakland: A V-eight of 85 horsepower out of 231 cubic inches displacement, making one horsepower every 37 pounds of weight; accelerates 10 to 35 miles an hour in seconds; new self-energizing brakes; bore and stroke almost equal permitting a short, stiff crankshaft; piston throws 180 degrees opposed; vibration avoided by unique arrangement of springs and tie-rods; carburetor in the V above, with downdraft manifold; horizontal valves close to cylinder bores, making compact arrangement and leaving more room for cooling; full pressure oiling; automatic oil pump control; cross flow radiator; metric spark plugs; automatic starting motor.

Oakland bodies are particularly individual from front, with a double ribbed V-type radiator; indicator lights on front fenders operating directly with headlights; vibrator horn under left headlight; slant-vision windshield.

Cadillac V-16: Luxury brother to the V-8; two eight-cylinder banks in a 45-degree V, developing 165 to 175 horsepower; overhead valves with silencer at each rocker arm to compensate for expansion and clearance of valves; vacuum assistance to permit ordinary pedal pressure for brakes at high speeds; all instruments, under hood and outside; chromium plated or highly enameled; two Cadillac carburetors; two vacuum tanks and pumps; many automatic and thermostatic controls to relieve the driver; Cadillac's silent mesh transmission.

Cadillac V-16 bodies are special Fisher designs; on 148-inch wheelbase and 59-inch tread; luxuriously finished inside and out.

DeSoto: Straight eight in the less than $1000 price field; downdraft carburetor; L-head engine developing 72 horsepower; rubber suspension; full pressure lubrication; internal expanding mechanical brakes; silver spring shackles; all-steel mono-piece bodies; military sun-visor; broad-band radiator shell; modernistic dash and fitments; wired for radio.

Other Chrysler products: The three Chryslers, 66, 70 and 77, having only recently been newly introduced remain unchanged. Plymouth, a four, boasts 28 refinements added during 1929.

Pontiac: Has added several chasis and body refinements; increased crankcase rigidity; rubber suspension metric spark plugs; automatic starter; automatic oil pump control; improved cross-flow radiator; reduced brake pedal effort; reduced deflection rate of springs for better comfort. Bodies are lower and sleeker; windshield slants; pedal slot openings are rubber shielded; cowl lights set below molding so as not to break streamline.

Erskine: Smaller, but more powerful engine, furnishing more power per pound of weight; new type "acoustic" muffler eliminating back pressure; change from vacuum tank to fuel pump; Lanchester vibration damper added; duo-servo mechanical brakes; improved steering, clutch and ignition; wheelbase lengthened from 109 to 114 inches; larger but lower bodies; wider doors; bodies coming in seven types.

New Chevrolet Of '30 Is Announced

Introduction Of New Model Comes At End Of Most Successful Year In History Of Company

The Chevrolet Motor company today announces a new car for 1930 known as "The Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History."

Announcement of the new car today comes right at the close of Chevrolet's greatest year, for the sensational success of the six-cylinder Chevrolet, introduced just a year ago, resulted in an output of 1,250,000 cars this year, breaking by a wide margi nall former Chevrolet annual production records.

Predict Records

In making public Chevrolet's plans for 1930, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, declared that with the improvements incorporated in the new car, Chevrolet was anticipating a volume of business that will equal, if not surpass, the phenomenal record of 1929. And, in order to accommodate an early demand, production is being speeded with all the haste consistent with the precision methods for which Chevrolet manufacturing operations are famous.

New car shipments have been going out to dealers for the past ten days, with deliveries to owners scheduled to start today. The cars went on display this morning in thousands of Chevrolet showrooms from coast to coast, while at the same time the announcement of the new car was being broadcast through the advertising columns of more than 6,500 newspapers.

Many Improvements

Scores of distinct improvements have been made in the 1930 Chevrolet line, the factory announces. Greater beauty, added safety factors, improved riding comfort and better all-round performance with added power, and faster acceleration are announced as features of the new line.

Larger tires, small wheels, Delco-Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers at all four wheels, Fisher slanting non-glare VV windshield and vastly improved four wheel braking system are some of the highlights.

Comment Drawn by New Oakland Cars

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Among the new offerings which drew especial comment from automobile enthusiasts at the opening of the New York Auto Show today was the latest product of the Oakland Motor Car company—the Oakland V-type Eight, a fast, powerful car which stands alone as the only automobile in the moderate price field using this design of motor.

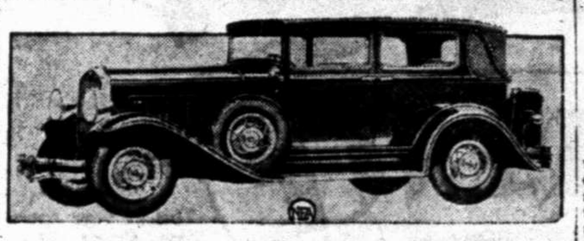

With the new Oakland Eight and the newly-styled, mechanically improved New Series Pontiac Big Six the Oakland Motor Car company offers products of fresh appeal to a wide range of buyers. Besides being exhibited at the New York Auto Show, the new Oakland-Pontiac line also is being displayed simultaneously at many other points throughout the United States. Factory officials assert that all dealers throughout the country will be stocked with the new models before January 11.

Seven models including two open body types, are offered on both the Oakland Eight and the Pontiac Six chasis. Both cars offer ample reserve of power. The Pontiac develops 60 brake horsepower from an engine of 200 cubic inch expansion at 3000 r. p. m., while the Oakland Eight displacement is 251 cubic inches. Credit for the remarkable speed and accelleration said to mark the performance of the new Oakland is attributed largely to its high ratio of power to weight. The new Eight develops one horsepower for each 37 pounds of car weight.

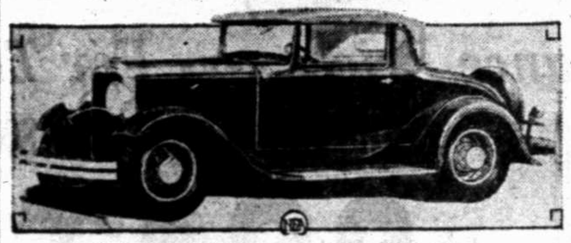

TO INSPECT POSTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. (AP)—Brigadier General Edward L. King, assistant chief of staff for operations and training, will leave Washington next week for an inspection trip of army posts in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico.

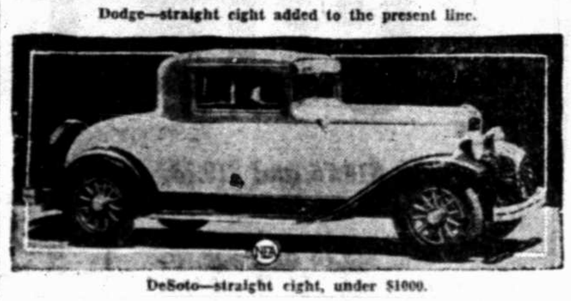

What 1930 Brings In New Models

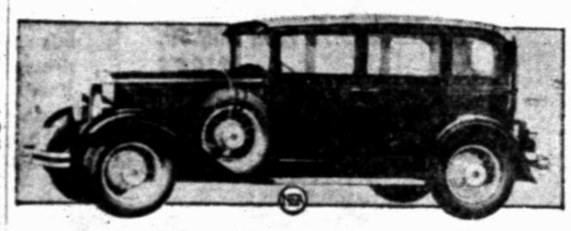

Hudson—straight eight, replacing the six.

Dodge—straight eight added to the present line.

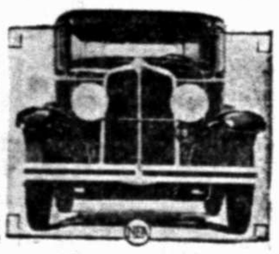

DeSoto—straight eight, under $1000.

Erskine—a larger, more powerful six

Pontiac—much improved

Oakland—a V-type eight

The new Essex—larger.

HOW'S SHE HITTIN'

By ISRAEL KLEIN

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
NEA Service Writer

Much overdone as it is, the axiom, "Haste makes waste," stands repetition to bring home to motorists the importance of taking their time when starting their motor cars of a cold morning.

There is a way of stating a cold engine in winter that saves fuel, avoids ill temper and trouble and marks the experienced motorist. It is quite simple and easy to remember.

Very little fussing with the choke or throttle is necessary. The engine won't stall under the circumstances and there will be no undue strain on it.

• • •

With the automatic spark now on most cars, this starting is made even easier. All that's needed is patience and a few extra minutes in the morning.

The plan is to retard the spark if it is not automatic, and advance the throttle at the wheel or dash a little, not all the way. Pull out the choke lever all the way and then press the starter button.

As soon as the engine has started, push the choke control half way back, advance the spark and let the engine warm up slowly, with the choke in the halfway position until it operates smoothly.

With the throttle keeping the engine going a little faster than idling and the choke control halfway out, the combustion chamber walls will become heated sooner than under ordinary running conditions and so enable the fuel to burn more thoroughly. When this occurs the throttle can then be pushed back to idling and the choke pushed in on the dash.

The choke should be out only so long as is required for the engine to idle without danger of stalling. As soon as this is possible, the choke should be put into its normal position. Thus there will be no waste of fuel.

• • •

The air that is taken into the fuel mixture by the carburetor is warmed up quickly by its passage alongside the exhaust manifold before entering the carburetor. This permits the fuel mixture to become volatilized sooner and so leave little to be wasted. In many cases the entire mixture is warmed by the exhaust.

As a result, the warming up process nowadays is much shorter than it was in previous years.

• • •

It should be remembered that too much choking will overflood the carburetor, besides overflowing the cylinders. This not only causes much of the unburned fuel to seep down to the crankcase, where it dilutes the lubricating oil, but it allows whatever water there is in the fuel to collect in the bottom of the carburetor.

When a cold snap comes along, this water residue freezes and then there is real trouble in starting. The frozen water clogs up this important element, keeps the fuel from entering and prevents operation until it is thawed down and drained out.

That's a job for an auto mechanic or a nasty one for the motorist. The judicious use of the choke, therefore, is essential.

Because of greater danger of oil dilution from overflowing fuel, it is good practice to test the crankcase oil every 500 miles. Diluted oil is thinner than a lubricant should be and it contains black sediment.

If the oil is too thin and contains such sediment, it should be drained out and replaced with fresh lubricant. This should be thinner than the oil used in summer, for the cold weather tends to thicken it and retard its circulation.

Spark On Plymouth Is Semi-Automatic

Semi-automatic spark advance has been adopted on to Plymouth car in spite of its higher cost, because Plymouth engineers feel that it will enable owners to take advantage of the performance that is designed into the car. It is useless to design a high-compression engine which is intended to obtain the maximum output from the fuel drawn into the combustion chamber, and then throw away the advantage of high compression by having the spark occur later than it should.

"Control of the spark should be in the hands of the driver," says H. E. Heath, Plymouth service manager. "Full automatic advance without any driver control, must necessarily be a compromise because no automatic system can be devised that will take care of all circumstances encountered by the driver."

ON AUTO ROW,

CHANGES ADVANCED

Fords and Chevrolets forged their way into the automobile spotlight during the past week with initial showings of the new 1930 models, the occasion for which brought thousands to the show rooms of the Lubbock Auto company and Kuykendall Chevrolet company.

FORD CHASSIS LARGER

Featuring a larger chassis, new body lines and a roomier interior, the new Model A Ford which went on display at the Lubbock Auto company Tuesday, was scrutinized by approximately 3,000 motorists and prospective motorists during the first day's showing. Only one car, a two-door sedan, has arrived in Lubbock but this one machine has shown motor enthusiasts all the new features of the 1930 Ford product.

RADIATOR NARROW

A radiator with six inches more depth and several inches narrower gives the 1930 Ford an entirely different appearance from the front view. This feature together with the extra length of the body shows the machine to be much larger. No changes were made in the motor. First deliveries on the new car will be made this week, it was announced yesterday by Geo. E. Benson, manager of the local agency.

KUYKENDALL OPENS

Saturday morning Kuykendall Motor company opened its doors to the public for the first inspection of the 1930 Chevrolet, which is being acclaimed as the "Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet history." While the body of the new Chevrolet is practically unchanged, a number of important mechanical improvements have been made including a new Delco Love-Joy shock absorber, new pistons, heavier front axle, self adjusting spring shackles, all brakes completely enclosed and a heavier rear end. The capacity of the car has been increased 50 horse power but the wheel base and body lines are practically the same as the 1929 Chevrolet Six.

MANY CARS SOLD

Figures released recently by General Motors reveal that more than 1,300,000 persons bought the 1929 Chevrolet Six. The crowds that surged through the show rooms of Kuykendall Motor company yesterday at the initial showing of the 1930 Chevrolet indicated that the local concern is in for another big year.

KENT IS BUSY

Since taking over the Buick agency here last June, Frank Kent, former Fort Worth automobile figure, has delivered 71 new Buicks in Lubbock and vicinity. In addition to this sale of new machines, the local firm has sold 104 used cars during the seven months of its operation here.

USED CARS SOLD

Activity at the Caprock Motor company, local De Soto and Whippet agency, during the past two weeks has been concentrated on an extensive used car sale. Managers Price and Massey have had their entire sales force working on used machines in an effort to clear their car lot for the beginning of the new year.

STAFF REORGANIZED

A complete re-organization of the sales force of Gough Motor company local Studebaker organization, has been recently affected. Several new names have been added to the payroll while others have been shifted to the sales department from the mechanical rooms. B. A. Fox, formerly of Dallas, has been made manager of the used car lot. Other members of the sales force are: I. W. Hanson, Jimmy Cole, M. H. Brownlee, L. B. Forbus and G. C. Crosby. J. O. Smith, until recently a local Studebaker salesman, has left the concern to accept the position of manager of the new Hilton Hotel Drug store, which opened Friday.

COMPANY IN SUIT

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 4. (AP)—Suit which was filed in the federal court here December 13 by W. F. Scott of Kansas City against Ralph R. Lewis, with the sale of stock in the Grayburg Oil company came to light today when it developed that the corporation and its former President, F. L. Thomson also were named as parties at interest.

Farmer Tells Of His Experience

"I Truthfully Say That Orgatone Has Helped Me More Than Anything I Have Ever Taken", He Says

"I have been suffering with a sluggish liver and just couldn't find a medicine that would get rid of my troubles," said H. C. Hague residing on Rural Route 3, Lorena, Texas.

"I suffered from bilious attacks and would frequently have dizzy spells. My stomach troubled me also, and the food I would eat would sour on my stomach causing gas pains and bloating spells. I was tired, restless and nervous and didn't have the proper amount of energy. I felt listless and really didn't enjoy doing my work as I should have.

"Orgatone was helping so many people and everybody was talking about it, so I decided to try it. My relief is hard to describe and it did so much for me. I am not bothered in the least with indigestion and the gas pains and bloating spells are a thing of the past. Those dizzy bilious spells have left me, and I have lots of pep and energy and go about my work feeling fine and like a different person. Orgatone has proven a great benefit to me, and I certainly got my money out of the first bottle I have taken and I am glad to recommend it."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Lubbock at Bowen's Drug Store. Adv.

D. S. Eddins New Manager Of Olds

Announcement of the appointment of D. S. Eddins as general manager of Olds Motor Works, manufacturers of Oldsmobile and Viking automobiles, has just been made by I. J. Reuter, president and retiring general manager.

In his statement of the succession of D. S. Eddins to the position of vice president and general manager of Olds Motor Works Mr. Reuter said: "General Motors Corporation has called upon me to take over the responsibility for the operation of Adam Opel, A. G., a General Motors unit located at Russelsheim, Germany. The fulfillment of this assignment requires that I leave for Germany. Though Mr. D. S. Eddins will succeed me as general manager of Olds Motor Works, my assignment to the Adem Opel organization is not of a permanent character and I shall, therefore, continue to be president of Olds Motor Works.

"The appointment of D. E. Eddins as general manager of Olds Motor Works assures the continuation of those policies and practices which have contributed to the success of the Oldsmobile-Viking organization during the past few years. Mr. Eddins has played an important part in the past in the conception and execution of these policies during the four and one-half years he has served Olds Motor Works in the capacity of vice president and general sales manager."

Railway Freight Of Buick Heavy

The railroad freight business produced by the plant of the Buick Motor company in Flint, Michigan, is greater than the tonnage hauled for an entire average city of thirty or forty thousand population. It has been conservatively estimated that Buick originates more freight business than any one hundred miles of line on the Pere Marquette railroad.

Situated on the main line of the Pere Marquette, this vast motor plant is served with a huge web of spurs and sidings that have a total length in excess of seven miles. Three locomotives are kept busy constantly hauling in carloads of materials, shifting them into the proper sidings for unloading and hauling out the cars newly loaded with automobiles and parts to make up the long trains destined to every city on the North American continent.

The first man who appeared on the streets of London with an umbrella was not only laughed at, but was actually pelted with stones.

Don't Gamble

With Father Time

The old boy may let you "get away with it" for a time, but sooner or later he'll catch you. The cost to you of putting off until tomorrow what you could well have done today, is written in the history of individuals, states and nations. One need only read the "master" writers of bygone ages to appreciate the mistakes of individuals and states. Procrastination is written on the brow of all of us to some extent, but those individuals and firms who procrastinate—put off until tomorrow what could have been done today—are gambling with father time, and some day will get mowed down.
