

SOVIET-FINN CRISIS NEAR

MRS. FDR MAY BE WITNESS

WASHINGTON (UP) — Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today offered to appear before the Dies committee to testify in a hearing on alleged communistic activities of national youth movements.

Chairman Martin Dies said that she probably would be given an opportunity to be heard.

Dies said that Mrs. Roosevelt and Alfred Lilienthal, vice chairman of the provisional committee for American youth, probably would be given an opportunity to state their conflicting views on the question of communist control of the youth organization.

Ill at his home, Dies was asked to comment on Mrs. Roosevelt's offer to testify and her charge that Dies had never asked her for comment on statements of committee witnesses on her and youth groups in which she is interested.

Dies said he would take Mrs. Roosevelt's offer "under advisement".

Dies said Lilienthal wishes to appear before the committee to furnish "what he says is conclusive proof" that the youth congress is a communistic organization.

Student Union

Meanwhile, Hampdon Wilson of the veterans administration was before the Dies committee describing the American students' union as the vehicle for spreading communism in American schools. The students' union is a member of the youth congress.

Lilienthal had suggested that Mrs. Roosevelt appear to answer his charges about the youth congress from which his own organization withdrew. She said that she did not care to be placed "in opposition" to Lilienthal, but that she is willing to answer any questions.

Court to Take Up Dam Case

WASHINGTON (UP) — The supreme court announced today that it will consider on Dec. 16 the application of the state of Oklahoma for permission to file an injunction suit to block construction of the Red River dam, a federal flood control project in southeastern Oklahoma and northern Texas.

Gov. Leon Phillips, who opposes the project, seeks to halt all work on the dam, contending that it would flood much valuable land, highways, and bridges, and remove much property from the state tax lists.

City Alderman Seriously Ill

Killeen Atkinson, Childress druggist and member of the city council, was taken to an Amarillo hospital yesterday for treatment.

He has been ill for the past three weeks.

It's A Fact . . .

Harry Hines, state highway commissioner who will be in Childress next Tuesday for the West Texas highway banquet, will make a radio address over station KWFT in Wichita Falls Wednesday evening of this week. . . . he is requesting his friends in this section to tune in and hear his address. . . . as Hines has often been mentioned as a 1940 candidate for governor, it has been rumored that he plans to announce his candidacy in the speech this week.

Here he shows police how bank president James Hensley threw him to the floor, thus preventing the robbery. Briefs in Rail Case Are Complete

Copies of the printed briefs, which will be submitted to the interstate commerce commission by opponents of the proposed lease by the Colorado and Southern railway of the Fort Worth and Denver and Wichita Valley, have been received by the Childress chamber of commerce.

One of the briefs was prepared by City Attorney C. C. Broughton for the Childress C of C and BCD, the city of Childress, Childress county, the Texas railroad commission and the state attorney general's department.

The other was prepared by Ed Byars of Fort Worth for the Fort Worth C of C and freight bureau, the railroad commission and attorney general's department.

Both give summaries of testimony at the recent ICC hearing in Fort Worth, arguments against the proposed lease, etc.

The briefs will be submitted to the ICC, then oral arguments will be heard.

Final decision on the lease application is not expected for several months.

OFFICIAL DIES

OKLAHOMA CITY (UP)—Joe Adwon, 44, Oklahoma City attorney died today of an intestinal disorder. He was indicted by a federal grand jury last September on an accusation of evasion of income tax.

BOBBITT TO ATTEND BANQUET

Robert Lee Bobbitt of San Antonio, member of the Texas highway commission, today notified the Childress chamber of commerce that he will be in Childress Dec. 5 for the West Texas highway banquet.

Harry Hines, another member of the commission, previously accepted an invitation to attend and will be the principal speaker on the program. Brady Gentry of Tyler, the third member of the commission and chairman of the group, has accepted tentatively.

Bobbitt will also appear on the program, delivering a ten-minute address.

In a letter to Morris Higley, chairman of the banquet invitation committee, Bobbitt said, "You may rest assured that I am looking forward to this meeting with our friends in Childress and am planning to be there on the date designated."

500 Expected

A dozen Texas and United States senators and representatives, officials and civic workers from 65 West Texas counties have been invited to attend the banquet which will honor the three members of the commission and the division 25 highway engineer, G. A. Bracher.

Advance indications are that between 400 and 500 will attend the event, making it the biggest banquet of its type ever held in this section. An informal reception for members of the commission will be held at Hotel Childress preceding the banquet.

Members of the general arrangements committee and members of the county commission met this afternoon to discuss final plans for the banquet.

Clouds Fail to Bring Moisture

Old Tack's "Scotch clouds" continued to drift over this section today, but no moisture was reported. Temperatures dropped below the freezing level again last night.

Cold weather is due in the upper Panhandle tonight, with temperatures as low as 20 degrees predicted, but the frigid wave is not expected to extend this far south and the mercury will probably rise tomorrow, according to today's forecast.

PARLIAMENT TO MEET

PARIS (UP)—The French parliament today was summoned to meet in extraordinary session Thursday.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, it is the duty of every one to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and to humbly implore His protection, and

Whereas, it has been the custom of the people of the United States, for the past one hundred and fifty years, to set aside one day each year for the purpose of giving thanks to Almighty God for the many blessings and benefits extended to us during the year just past, and

Whereas, Governor Lee O'Daniel has proclaimed the traditional November 30, as an official day of observance in Texas and that the majority of our residents have expressed preference for this date for giving thanks;

Now therefore, I, C. V. Jones, Mayor of the City of Childress, without disrespect to the President's proclamation calling for an earlier observance, do proclaim Thursday, November 30th, 1939, as the day of Thanksgiving, that we all may unite in rendering unto God our sincere and humble thanks for all the benefits that have come to us.

May we especially give thanks for a country at peace with all the world, and implore God's guidance in helping us to maintain that peace at home, and bless our efforts to establish the principles of peace among the Nations of the world.

Given under my hand, at Childress, Texas, this 27th day of November, A. D., 1939.

C. V. JONES, Mayor of Childress, Texas.

Russian Threats Against Neighbor Are Increased

MOSCOW (UP)—"Finland must withdraw troops from the soviet frontier or we will throw them back." Russian workers and students declared today at mass meetings demanding stern action against "the Finnish militarists."

"We are ready to strike three decisive blows for each provocative blow of the Finnish war clique," said a typical resolution adopted by a mass meeting.

"The crowns managing the fate of the Finnish people must be reminded of the sad lot of the ill starred former rulers of Poland."

Throughout Moscow the scene was reminiscent of the days before the soviet occupation of eastern Poland as people lined up at news stands and around broadcasting loudspeakers to get the news that Finnish artillery had fired on Russian troops.

"Artillery shots against the red army prove an incitement to war," said a resolution passed by workers at the hammer and sickle plant, largest metallurgical works in Moscow, pledging increased production of national defense material.

Earl Green escaped with a fractured shoulder bone when his car in which he was driving alone overturned a few miles north of Wellington last night. He was taken to a Wellington hospital, and was expected to return home this afternoon.

Green was on his way back from Shamrock when the accident occurred. He told relatives here by telephone that the car overturned when he swerved suddenly to avoid hitting a car in front of him that had no taillight. His car was badly damaged.

UNITED PRESS FORECAST Childress and vicinity: Fair, somewhat cloudy in north tonight, Tuesday cloudy.

US Women

By Sue Vinson

Since a near-serious automobile accident intervened and only one delegate from Childress Parent-Teacher associations got to Galveston for the state convention, she is likely to be kept busy the next month telling the units here what happened there.

Mrs. Frank Ehrle was the sole Childress representative to make the trip to the coast city.

One thing I'm sure the state convention didn't do, but it would have been nice if it had, was part with its prejudice against being called PTA in the press. In this alphabetical age you'd think it wouldn't mind, but local units get no credit for publicity in which the organization is called PTA instead of its unwieldy full title.

After all, everybody calls it PTA, and recognizes at a glance what the initials mean. An organization so well known could afford to be less petty. Even the president of the United States doesn't kick and scream because newspapers refer to him as FDR, but the PTA insists on maintaining its dignity or something.

None of this outburst, of course, refers to local PTA's, which have nothing to do with the policy of the national organization.

Here we go again dept.—Another report of a wedding, unsigned, has been brought to my desk and I can't do a thing about it until the writer comes in or calls to verify it. How about remembering to sign those social and personal items?

A sense of humor must be listed as one of the qualifications of Rev. J. A. Steele of Vernon, who is to present a sermon dramatization at a church here tonight. Asked for his picture to use in publicizing the event, he wrote back to Bill Alderman, president of the sponsoring class: "I shall have to deny you such pleasure, for fear someone will recognize it from a former association on pamphlets published by prison boards."

Mrs. Ehrle Brings Report of PTA Convention Talks and Business

Mrs. Frank Ehrle returned on the weekend from Galveston, where as delegate from Wilson Parent-Teacher association here she was the only Childress representative at the state Congress of Parents and Teachers.

She will give her report to associations here at meetings of the next few weeks. Some convention highlights as reported by Miss Katherine Simmons of Pampa, publicity chairman for the Panhandle district, follow:

With 1,000 delegates and 500 visitors attending, the 31st annual convention of the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers met last week in Galveston.

Chief function of citizens in a democracy is to prepare the oncoming generation to live successfully in a democracy, Mrs. Joe A. Westendorff of Richmond, state president, declared in the keynote address at the first general session Tuesday morning, at the new Stephen F. Austin junior high school.

Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president of the University of Texas, in his address, "Education for Human Relationships," said it was not necessarily a lack of knowledge of human and biological nature that makes us unable to cope with human relationship problems.

We know even more in these fields, than we can use adequately, he said, but human beings are not sufficiently developed morally, psychologically, and spiritually to handle this great scientific knowledge and power. For example, he gave the advanced knowledge in genetics, by which human stock could be scientifically improved such as we breed fine cattle, but we do not have the ability to handle such knowledge.

He lamented our organization-minded public instead of individual-minded thinkers. Examples were shown that by changing environment college students shed their false attitudes—an experiment which pointed to a new world outlook.

A symposium panel on "Self Realization through Education" led by Mrs. Rebecca O. Nelson of Tyler, state chairman of social hygiene, and a panel and demonstration on visual education led by Mrs. J. S. Powell of Beaumont, state chairman of motion pictures and education, took up the Tuesday afternoon session.

In introducing her subject Mrs. Nelson defined the topic as the development of one's self through education in fields of health, character, recreation, fundamental school subjects, and social and mental hygiene.

All speakers agreed that development in the various phases of individual activity should be correlated and that they were indeed so interdependent as to make development or retardation in one phase affect the development or retardation of all others.

Mrs. W. B. LaMaster, Perryton, a state chairman from eighth district was a panel member on this symposium.

Present at the convention were Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, state president of Women's clubs, and George B. Wilcox, president of the Texas State Teachers' association.

After the first of the year the state department of education will sponsor three radio programs, known as "Texas School of the Air."

Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillaz, Pampa, president of eighth district, and Mrs. Clarence Longnecker, of District 15, were presented national life memberships from their districts.

The dramatic monologue, "Judas Iscariot" will be presented by Rev. J. Albert Steele of Vernon at First Methodist church here this evening at 8 o'clock, preceded by special music. The public is invited.

Members of Hughes Bible class and the First Methodist choir are sponsoring the unique program as a contribution to the religious and cultural life of the community. It will be given in the main church auditorium. No admission charge will be made but an offering will be taken for the church organ fund.

A lighted cross will be the background for the monologue, which Rev. Steele, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Vernon, wrote and has given on various occasions in his home city and other places.

Music will preface the dramatization, with S. O. Murdock as soloist. The choir will sing the introductory chorale, "Into the Woods My Master Went", and an anthem, "Rejoice, Give Thanks". Mr. Murdock's solo will be "The Ninety and Nine", Miss Cornelia Maness will play the organ accompaniment.

Rev. Orion W. Carter, First Methodist minister, will read the Bible passages on which the monologue is based, and Rev. T. M. McBrayer, new pastor of King Memorial church, will give the invocation.

Miss O'Daniels, Mr. Richardson Of Tell Marry

Miss Lorena O'Daniels and James S. Richardson, both of Tell, were married Saturday evening at First Methodist parsonage here by Rev. Orion W. Carter, pastor.

The bride wore a blue ensemble for the ceremony, which was witnessed by a party of relatives including Mr. and Mrs. Joe Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. O'Daniels, Mrs. Henry O'Daniels and children.

This is the second REA allotment received by the Greenbelt Rural Electrification cooperative.

Couch said that officials of the Greenbelt cooperative believed that actual construction of the lines could be started by Jan. 1, 1940.

Work is now under way to secure a third allotment for the Greenbelt cooperative.

FOUR DIE IN FLAMES

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. (UP)—A mother and her three sons burned to death today after she had tossed two other children to safety through a second story window of their home.

Mrs. Lorette Dougherty, 40, tossed Walter, 5, and Theodore, one-year-old, to their father Elwood Dougherty, who caught them. Evidently, the mother and the other three children were trapped in the flames or overcome by smoke.

The three sons and their mother died in the flames. The two story frame house was destroyed.

Police said that an oil cooking stove on the first floor exploded when the father attempted to start it, and that the flames spread quickly.

Dougherty found he was enveloped by flames and jumped through a window to safety. His shouts aroused other members of the family.

Social Security

A private insurance company, interested in remaining solvent, would scarcely approve the United States' social security policy. It is a noble gesture to set up a system designed to bring greater security to the aged and infirm. But, unless the federal government finds a sounder financial footing, the whole plan is likely to be like scuttling the steamship to save a lifeboat.

The regular session of Congress earlier this year revamped the entire social security system, increasing payments generally, but postponing increased payroll assessments on employer and employee. The amendments will go into effect Jan. 1 of next year, and during the course of 1940 it is estimated that 900,000 persons will collect a total of $114,000,000.

Under the Security Act of 1937, the present 1 per cent payment made by the worker and matched by his employer would have been increased in 1940 to 1½ per cent. This increase has been canceled by the revisions; and, instead, it will be necessary for Congress to raise the payments to 2 per cent each for the worker and employer in 1942 and to 3 per cent in 1945.

The big trouble is that these increases are not assured. Congress simply told the Social Security Board to come back in 1942 and the legislators would see what could be done. At the moment, Congress is in no mood even to discuss further tax levies, much less pass them. And 1942 isn't so far away. The argument that the beneficiaries aren't really being taxed—that they are just casting their bread upon the waters—falls a little flat. In these days you never can tell which way the tide will turn.

If the increases in 1942 and 1945 were definite and assured, the social security system would pretty closely resemble sound actuarial management. The big difficulty is that practically the entire, gigantic scheme is based on these future rate increases—and if they're not forthcoming, there is likely to be a financial explosion that will be distinctly heard on the planet Jupiter. At the very best, the U. S. treasury would have to lay in a goodly supply of bright red ink.

As Bruce Catton recently pointed out in his Washington column, it is estimated that by 1944 the Social Security Board will have paid out about $2,093,000,000 to beneficiaries. This is approximately $1,500,000,000 more than was counted on under the original act. The annual payments are expected to increase year by year until some distant date when they will finally level off.

A program as tremendous as this can't simply be shelved after a few years if it doesn't seem to be working. And not even the United States can operate forever under a steady deficit. So, it appears that the revenue will eventually have to be raised through general taxation, instead of through payroll taxes.

If the federal government ever does this, it will also have to include everyone in the social security program—not just industrial workers—because everyone will be kicking into the kitty. Then, when the number of beneficiaries increases, the total annual payment goes up and more money will be needed. The whole thing might easily turn into a vicious circle that will leave economists dizzy and taxpayers broke.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
 United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN (UP)—Texas university is kept busy denying that the institution's oil land makes it the most highly endowed college but it looks forward to the day when it will be accorded pre-eminence in scientific research.

A long step toward this goal was made possible when the will of W. J. McDonald, Paris, Tex., banker, left the university funds to erect the astronomical observatory which bears his name. Erected in the clear high atmosphere of the Davis mountains, it is being devoted especially to a study of the mineral and chemical content of other heavenly bodies.

Dr. Otto Struve, director of the Yerkes observatory for the University of Chicago is director also of McDonald observatory for the University of Texas. Both universities contribute to its maintenance.

Next step likely will be the erection of an $800,000 laboratory capable of carrying on experiments in breaking down atoms. President Homer Price Rainey already has been in conferences on this line of research with Dr. Ernest O. Lawrence of the University of California, 1939 Nobel prize winner for research in physics. Dr. Lawrence may be added to the university staff.

In February another 1939 prize winner will become a member of the University of Texas faculty. E. L. Degolyer of Dallas, who received the 1939 award for most valuable additions to the knowledge of the petroleum industry, will begin teaching a class in the university's engineering department.

The University of Texas first focused attention of world scientists when Dr. H. J. Muller, a professor of zoology then on a small salary, discovered that application of X-rays speeds evolution's changes 1,500 per cent. Working in an inexpensive way with fruit flies (the little insects that swarm around the ends of bananas) he charted changes that astonished geneticists. He explained he used fruit flies because they were least expensive to rear. Results would be the same if horses were used, he remarked, but horses couldn't be fed on the funds available. Since then more liberality has been possible in University of Texas research.

Dr. E. H. Sellard, director of the University of Texas museum and its bureau of economic geology is making discoveries that have attracted national attention. Important recoveries of mastodon skeletal remains and other deposits have been under his direction.

Notable was the discovery near Dallas of one of the only two complete fossils of the xiphactinus audeax ever found in Texas. The prehistoric ancestor of today's tarpon is estimated to be 600,000,000 years old.

In mathematics Harry Shulz Vandiver, the university's professor of pure mathematics, is ranked as a leader. He has recently been engaged in research work.

Discoveries of Dr. Eugene Paul Schoch, professor of chemistry have brought much honor to the university and wealth to the state.

President Homer Price Rainey is probably the nation's outstanding authority on youth problems.

Strides made by the University of Texas have been possible both because of its oil wealth and because of private donations. Its Wrenn and Stark libraries are the result of generous patronage. They contain some of the world's rarest volumes as well as many of the most complete collections of the works of several noted writers. Research in welfare is the prime purpose of a large fund made available to the university this year by the late Will Hogg of Houston.

Its oil wealth comes from the state's original setting aside of large areas of land for the support of the university. Of little value in those days, the land was leased for cattle grazing. Discovery of oil changed the picture.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

V. M. REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

(This is the third in a series of 14 articles on the nine principal causes of death in the United States.)

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
 Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.
 Infection is the chief cause of heart disease among young people. Among older people, breakdown of the tissue, including hardening of the arteries, is probably most important, particularly when infections accompany this condition.

The heart beats on an average of 4,200 times an hour, which means many millions of contractions of the heart muscle every year. Each time the heart beats, three ounces of blood are poured into the large blood vessels. Six quarts of blood leave the heart every hour, which means about 36 gallons a day. The heart can develop 2½ horsepower a day, and yet it is only a mass of muscle, nerves and blood vessels, about the size of a fist.

Fortunately for most of us, we need pay little attention to the heart. If it works satisfactorily, there is not much we want to do to control it; but when the heart begins to be deficient in its activities, we become short of breath, tire easily, and find it impossible to carry on the daily activities of life.

The heart needs plenty of rest and relaxation. It needs good nutrition, since the nutrition of the heart depends on maintaining a proper condition of the blood. The blood provides all organs with nourishment, and we must watch our diets to make certain we have enough of the essential food substances.

The heart pumps blood which carries oxygen to the tissues of the body. A plentiful supply of oxygen in the form of fresh air will mean less work for the heart. With all of this, it has become possible to develop 10 heart commandments which everyone should learn if he wants to prolong his life:

1. Do not subject your heart to sudden, strenuous or prolonged physical exertion.
2. Eat regularly, slowly and temperately.
3. If you are excessively overweight, seek sound counsel as to how best to dispense with this form of handicap.
4. Try to avoid physical activity for at least 20 minutes after eating, particularly after the heaviest meal of the day.
5. Avoid emotional stress and strain. Worry is an important factor in its relation to heart strain.
6. By appropriate measures, keep your body as free as possible from so-called foci of infection.
7. Regular intestinal elimination is highly important.
8. Average not less than eight hours of sleep in a room abundantly supplied with fresh air.
9. Perennial health demands a proper balance between work, play and rest.
10. A periodic examination may often reveal defects of which you are totally unaware.

Weather:
Just a little cooler and that's all. A few scattering clouds, direct from Aberdeen, but no producers within ten thousand miles. Mr. Collman thinks that within another week we should have a major meteorological upset that might produce snow. Personally, I've about given up for '39 and '40.

Robert Taft, who is an aspirant for the presidency, was the guest of the Panhandle Republicans Sunday. Senator Taft is a fine, high-class gentleman and right now he is regarded as the leading candidate for the republican nomination. He has by far the best organization and they are beating the bushes for Taft in most every county and precinct in the whole country.

His visit here is interesting; he sure is worth looking over.

We have become a nation of aspirin tablets. It's become so that most of the people, particularly women, never venture any place without their handbags filled with aspirin.

But I've never taken an aspirin tablet in my life. I intend to take one, one of these days, just to see what they taste like.

And someone was suggesting the other day that a movement should be started to eliminate the dips, at the crossings, in our streets. But it's likely it will never be done; if new streets were built a good many of the property owners would want more dips. Those who have children who play about the neighborhood figure that the dips keep the speed boys from speeding too much.

Some "information please," supplied by Winchell and the answers will be at the bottom of this column:

- Do all bears climb trees?
- Is the electric chair more humane than hanging?
- Should the wife or the husband be the older for an ideal marriage?
- Is tomato juice the best remedy for a hang-over?
- Does a cold hand indicate a warm heart?
- Does an adult's height remain constant?
- What is a laughing jackass?
- Are blondes emotionally more excitable than brunettes?
- Are cold baths good for you?
- Who was the author of the line, "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse?"

Don't look down before you answer the above.

Answers to the above:
No, all bears don't climb trees. The grizzly for one, doesn't. . . . It takes several seconds longer to kill a person in an electric chair than by hanging. . . . Milk or plain water are just as effective as tomato juice. . . . In a 7-year study of married couples, Dr. Leonard Cottrell Jr. and Prof. Ernest Burgess found that the percentage of marital happiness is higher in cases where the wife is a year or two older than the husband. . . . Cold hands usually indicate either nervousness or an over-active thyroid gland, and have no connection with the temperature of the blood in the heart. . . . People are taller in the morning than they are in the evening—frequently as much as half an inch. . . . Scientific tests show that there's no emotional difference between blondes and brunettes. . . . A laughing jackass is a bird, not an animal. . . . Cold baths are tough on the heart. . . . Shakespeare was not the author of "A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse." The lines were introduced into "Richard III" by Colley Cibber, an actor at the Drury Lane Theater.

A little lowdown:
A big movie company may make a picture of Coronado. If so, much of it will be filmed here in the Panhandle. And Errol Flynn probably would be Coronado.
There's sure a good chance that something will come out of it.
Interesting facts:
Maybe it could only happen in rudite Boston, but a book fair for an entire week, each afternoon and evening in the Boston Garden, outdrew any prize fight that's been held in that arena this year. One night more than 3,000 book lovers were turned away at the box office. . . . The chances are only one in 62,000 that twins will be born in a caesarian operation. . . . No accounting has ever been made of the $80,000,000 in gold that the nazis seized when they picked off Austria. . . . Research indicates that dogs in particular, but also horses and cows dream in their sleep. . . . Elliot Roosevelt has been drawing $1,200 weekly for airing his views on that program. . . . Poverty, grief and worry help to bring on arthritis, medical research shows. . . . Leslie Ford, mystery story author, asserts every person has one murder inside him—and the best thing to do is write a story about it instead of pulling the trigger yourself. . . . Easily absorbent of surrounding temperatures are submarines, which are not only shivering-chilly in wintry northern waters, but which, in equatorial climates have registered interior temperatures as high as 135 degrees. . . . Observation of a country editor: "A subscriber asks the old question of where do mosquitoes go in winter. But it's where they go in the summer that causes all the bother." . . . Benjamin Franklin didn't get around to taking an interest in electricity, in which he became at one time the world's leading authority, until he was in his 40's. . . . Dr. S. L. Katzoff, a marriage specialist, speaking: "Any woman anywhere can get married if she knows the art of attraction." And that art, he asserts, mostly consists of seeming to be "humble and helpless." . . . The 826 persons caught shoplifting in a midwestern super-market in the course of a year had pilfered only $211.61 worth of such trivial things as toothpicks, soap, milk, sardines, cookies, shoe polish, stove polish and wax paper. But the same 826 admitted past pilferings amounting to more than $2,000 worth. . . . To conserve wood-pulp for more warlike purposes, some newspapers in Germany are now being printed on paper made from potato plant fibers. . . . An eminent medical authority reports that allergy rather than infection is often the cause of repeated colds, bronchitis and other ailments of the ear, nose and throat. . . . Some 26 film companies contribute to keep the Will Hays organization operating—at current cost of $11,000 a week. . . . Because oysters from the Atlantic are more succulent than those of Pacific waters, a Seattle hotel has oysters shipped across the continent regularly from Boston, paying transportation charges on them that amount to more than the cost of the bivalves themselves. . . . An ingenious Brooklyn, N. Y. baker has developed a scheme whereby a fellow records himself uttering birthday greetings to his sweetheart, with the record and a small sounding apparatus then baked in the middle of a cake. As the birthday pastry is cut, the touching of a small lever causes her boy friend's voice to pipe up, "Happy Birthday, darling" or whatever sentiment he cares to record.

Sport Parade

By Henry McLemore.
SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—Who takes the tougher beating during a football season, the players or the coach?

After talking to Elmer Layden, in his office in the athletic department of Notre Dame, I am inclined to believe the coach does. Not because of anything Elmer said, mind you, but because of the way he looked after shepherding the fighting Irish through eight tough games on as many Saturdays.

Thinner than the thin man, down to 151 pounds, he looked more in need of a rest than any of his players I saw taking their final workout on Carter Field for the game with Southern California. They seemed to have withstood the shock of Purdue, S. M. U., Georgia Tech, Iowa, Northwestern, Carnegie Tech and the other bruising teams the Irish have met this year, much better than their coach.

Perhaps this was because human arms, legs, shoulders and backs are less vulnerable than human brains, and the last mentioned is where a coach takes his beating. I didn't realize what a terrific job it is to handle a football team, especially during a game, until I talked to Dr. Jock Sutherland, the former Pittsburgh coach, who is making his winter home in the press boxes of the country this year.

Here for the game, Sutherland sat at a table at the Notre Dame smoker and, without undue consideration for the tablecloth, outlined a few of the one thousand and one things that a coach must do while his team is engaged in battle.

"I can think of no more exhausting work than that of coach for two or three hours on Saturday," he said. "It really will wear a man out. I've played and I've coached and the beating you take on the bench is twice as bad as the one you take out there on the field, blocking and running and tackling."

A coach must ready his team for a game to start with, and that means bringing each individual to a point where he is willing and capable of giving his best.

Once the game starts he must watch two games, not one. When his team is on the offensive he must see every action of every one of his own players, but, more important, he must catalogue in his mind every move of the defense team. It is the defense of the enemy that is of first importance. This once was a simple task, as Sutherland pointed out, because there was a time when a team had but one defense. Now a team will use six, seven, or even a dozen defensive formations in one game, and it is the duty of the opposing coach to analyze each and every one of them.

"When one of our team's plays doesn't work, you must know the answer," Sutherland said. "If you don't, how are you going to instruct your quarterback when you bring them in for instructions?"

When the opponent has the ball the chief task is the study of the offense. This, too, was a simple task at one time, because offenses were simple. Sutherland explained that when he was playing for Pop Warner, one of the great offensive coaches of all time, the offense consisted of three line bucks, a reverse, an off tackle play, and two or three forward passes. Now the average high school squad has a repertoire of ten times that scope. And while studying the offense a coach must keep a careful eye on his own defense.

The coach is in charge of all substitutions. He must make them at the right time and the right place. He must keep a careful watch on his players, because for one of the players to stay in the game after he is tired may result in a missed assignment or a fumble that will cost the game.

The coach must watch the weather like a sailor. Changes of wind, changes in the condition of the turf, changes of temperature must be met with changed tactics.

The coach must hold consultations with his assistants during a game, condense their reports and utilize or discard their suggestions. A coach—but by the time Dr. Sutherland had reached this point I was so worn out just from hearing about so much work that I asked if there were a doctor in the house.

He said, yes, there was. So I asked him who was going to win the game.

HERE'S GRENNY LANSDELL, brilliant Trojan quarterback, who led Southern California to a 20-12 victory over Notre Dame Saturday. Lansdell, (78), is shown as he smashed over right tackle to the Irish two-yard line in the first quarter of the game. (Acme Telephoto)

BOBCATS READY TO MAKE BID FOR GRID TITLE

Electra Tigers To Be Toughest Assignment

Three more days of work on the dry sod of what was once Fair Park field and the Childress Bobcats will make their bid for the district 2AA football championship.

Faced with their toughest assignment of the season, the Cats expect to be in top physical and mental condition Thursday when they take the field against the Electra Tigers at Electra.

The game will be for the district flag. The Bobcats need a victory or a tie to sew up the honors, while the Tigers must have a triumph to earn their first championship.

At this stage, Childress leads the race by a half game. The Cats have four victories and one tie, while the Tigers have four wins and one loss.

The Tigers have a slight edge in comparative scores in conference games this season. They beat Graham 46-0 while the Bobcats ousted the Steers 25-7; the Tigers won from Wichita Falls 13-0 and the Bobcats took the Coyotes 11-7; Electra beat Vernon 9-0 while the Bobcats did no better than a 6-6 tie; the Tigers whipped Quanah 33-14 and the Bobcats nosed out the Indians 14-13; the Tigers, however, lost to Olney 20-13, while the Bobcats bounced the Cubs, 19-13.

On the basis of these records, the Tigers have a more potent offense and a little tighter defense.

The full season record of the Tigers is more impressive principally because Coach George Blair is merciless against weaker teams. He allowed the Tigers to thresh Nocona 61-13, and kept his regulars on the field most of the game last week so they might run up a 46-0 score against the hapless Graham Steers.

Another characteristic of the Tigers is their excellent physical condition. There have been no serious injuries to the regulars during the entire season and all of the men have played virtually all of every game.

The Tiger line is big and capable, and end play has been fine all season. Blair uses a running attack to roll up most of the yardage and features a trio of fine backs, Ben Ely, Gayle McLaughlin and Ledford Smith.

Except at Olney, where Johnny Collings' running and passing mystified the Tigers, and at Quanah, where Clark Wells' passes proved troublesome, the Tigers have been impregnable defensively.

The Bobcats also have a stout line that has found no superior in the district, and are offensive opportunists, turning almost every advantage into a score.

1939 ALL-AMERICA Nile Kinnick of Iowa Heads List Of All-Stars Selected by Grayson

By Harry Grayson
NEA Service Sports Editor.
The All-America of 1939 . . . stalwarts who stood up under the most exacting tests of collegiate football.

The 11 players composing the NEA Service All-America team, chosen with the aid and advice of coaches, scouts and sports writers throughout the land, measure up to the highest standard that can be asked in a game.

All-America men are not just names picked out of a hat. An athlete cannot have a single bad day and be an All-American.

This demand is qualified, too, inasmuch as a good day cannot be measured accurately in terms of statistics and touchdowns. The All-America may be cast with an undermanned squad. His club may even lose a game or two. Victory is not the principal test of greatness. All-America honors frequently are won by gridiron gladiators who stand out under adverse circumstances.

The All-America man is always a competitor. In the line, he is the player who sticks out like a sore thumb while getting his bumps. In the backfield, he is the one who does not quit when the blockers are through.

Of such players is built the NEA All-America team of 1939.

Of such stuff is built the smashing ends, Esco Sarkkinen of Ohio State and William (Bud) Kerr of Notre Dame; the towering tackles, Nicholas Drahos of Cornell and Harley McCollum of Tulane; the fighting guards, Edward Molinski of Tennessee and Harry Smith of Southern California; the perfect center, John Schiechl of Santa Clara, and the backs, Paul Christman of Missouri, Banks McFadden of Clemson, the great Nile Clarke Kinnick of Iowa and Big John Kimbrough of Texas A&M.

The 1939 NEA All-America is headed by Nile Kinnick of Iowa, the player of the year.

If Kinnick possessed more than ordinary speed, he would be one of the all-time greats.

Standing no more than 5 feet 8 and weighing only 170 pounds, this compactly constructed 21-year-old halfback was rugged enough to play 360 consecutive minutes against Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Purdue, Notre Dame and Minnesota.

High Scorer

Charles Sandidge was the high scorer last week at the T and M bowling alleys here, rolling a 215 game. For the women, Mrs. C. M. Day again was best with 131.

ALL-DISTRICT Brickey Names Three Bobcats On Dream Club

Three members of the Childress Bobcat football team, Sammy Privitt, Albert Williams and Jim Howard, were placed on the all-district 2AA team selected by Howard Brickey, sports editor of the Wichita Daily Times.

Brickey's complete team was Jack Sachse of Electra at center, Privitt and Earl Botkins of Vernon at guards, Williams and Felton Whitlow of Wichita Falls at tackles, Howard and Joe Smith of Electra at ends, Johnny Collings of Olney, Curtis Holder of Wichita Falls, Ben Ely of Electra and Clark Wells of Quanah in the backfield.

Vic Bates, Bobcat fullback who has missed most of the conference campaign due to an injury, was placed at fullback on the second team.

Brickey named Privitt as the district's outstanding performer.

Playing his third year of football, the Bobcat right guard had been a standout all season. He is the defensive "quarterback," the team's placekicker and one of the best blockers on the squad. Privitt served as co-captain of the team last year.

Not sensational, both Williams and Howard are the steady type of players and have stood out particularly on defense.

Brickey gave honorable mention to James Willeford and Morgan Goodson, backs, Junior Brown, guard, Brack Taylor, tackle, and Clifford Foster, end.

Here is a feminine quartet that dropped in, bag and baggage, on a kennel in Prospect, O., from Lincolnshire, England, in full flight from the death that faces most British dogs, either at the hands of their masters to get them out of the way, or at the hands of the enemy in bombing raids. WISE and OTHERWISE

By Fred L. Haskett

A feature of the dining room in the Dallas Athletic club is a table called the roundtable, about which are placed 18 comfortable arm chairs. Men who are prominent in Dallas and Texas affairs meet at this table on the average of four times each week, and altogether some 40 or 50 men dine at the table. There is only one thing necessary to be a member of the roundtable gang and that is never to quote any person who may make any statement.

It is the greatest contact spot in Dallas, and I believe in Texas. Here big business and professional men are themselves. They tell puns, make fun among themselves, discuss big business sometimes, commend and criticize the city, state and federal governments. But always it is done in a spirit of good humor. For five years I have dined at this table and I have never seen one person offended, because they are big men and if criticism is honest none take it other than in that spirit.

About the table is Thomas Blanton, who came here from Gainesville, and is a big shot in the fire insurance business. He was a great friend of Joe Bailey, member of the trustees of Southern Methodist university and also looks after the financial welfare of a home for aged women. Another man is John Erhard, who came here from Bastrop, the old hunting grounds of W. D. Cope who formerly lived in Childress. John Erhard is a successful lawyer, moving in from a small town. He is also assistant United States district attorney. John Erhard is one of the finest men and lawyers I have ever known and some day he will be known all over Texas. My personal opinion of John Erhard is that he is too big ever to be governor of Texas or a congressman. He is the best fitted man in Texas to wear the shoes of Senator Morris Sheppard, when that noble character goes to his reward. Younger folks remember to keep in mind the name of John Erhard.

Two other men who are frequent guests at the table are Charles Gilpin, head of the Morton Salt company in the Southwest. Charlie served as devil on a Texas country weekly, but he had the stuff in him that makes real men of country boys. He has a son who married a Shamrock girl. The other man is Colonel W. I. Bogardus, well known among implement dealers in Childress and the Panhandle. He has a daughter who married the son of Frank Hook of Quanah, old-time produce dealer, who sold every groceryman in Childress. Dick Soper, president of the Dallas Gas company, started out as a small town boy. He worked when a boy and instead of needing vitamins A,

Criminal Docket Of Court Opens

WELLINGTON.—The criminal docket of the district court of the 100th district opened in Wellington Monday. Only five cases are on docket.

With court entering its third week, only 11 cases have been disposed of. Of this number, six civil cases were dismissed and five divorce cases have been tried.

Only 78 cases are on the docket for this term of court, one of the lightest sessions this county has had in a number of years.

Rose Bids for Treasure Island

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—Showman Billy Rose, whose aquacade was the hit of the New York world's fair, yesterday bid $1,650,000 for control of the Golden Gate exposition in 1940.

As hope virtually was abandoned for reopening Treasure Island for a second season, Rose stepped into the picture and offered to put up the entire bankroll which creditors and campaigners had failed to raise.

Police in Omaha found slugs in the station pay telephone. Mugs use slugs even in jugs.

B, C or D, he was fortified with vitamin G, the abbreviation of the vulgar word "guts". Many young boys now finishing high school will find this vitamin far better than a college course, if they will only do as Dr. Clifford Jones says, "Use their hands to make a living."

We have some big shot fellows who make the table, that is men who can count their wealth in six figures. Not one of these men started out life with a silver spoon in his mouth. They worked from 10 to 12 hours each day and got no more than three or four dollars a week.

Marvin Cullum, one of the owners of the sporting store of Collum & Boren, for many years sold sporting goods to every hardware store in Northwest Texas. Marvin tired of being a drummer, settled down in Dallas and went in business for himself. Marvin will tell you that he has not to this day become easy in a tuxedo, but when occasion demands, and quite often, he does it and performs nicely. A good country boy who came to town and continues to be a good man and growing bigger every day of his life.

What I have told you about Dallas can be found in every American city, and in every town and hamlet. There is always room for big men at the top, but it is always best to let your life lead you to the top. You cannot force yourself up without falling off some day.

RULES and CONDITIONS

To obtain the 10 symphonies and symphonic masterpieces and the electric Record Player to be distributed in accordance with our Music Appreciation Plan proceed as follows:

First, fill in and mail the Reservation Form printed at the right. The purpose of this form is not to obligate you in any way, but to enable us to estimate the quantity of records and Record Players to have on hand to meet the demand.

Each day during this music appreciation offer we will publish a reminder coupon setting forth the date on which each symphony will be ready. You can get your first symphony (Franz Schubert's No. 8 in B Minor) at any time—come in for it today. Subsequent symphonies will be released one every two weeks thereafter. Watch the reminder coupon which will be published daily. It is not necessary for you to clip the coupons in order to get your records or Record Player.

You obtain each symphony, which consists of three or four double-faced 12-inch records, for a payment of $1.49. This payment is not for each record but for all THREE or FOUR records. Symphonies which consist of FIVE double-faced 12-inch records require a payment of $1.98 for the entire symphony or all FIVE records. The Cesar Franck Symphony in D Minor, on account of its great length, is divided into two units, each unit consisting of three double-faced 12-inch records, and the cost of each unit is $1.49, the same as for any other three-record group.

A quantity of de luxe records, known as Philharmonic Transcriptions, enclosed in beautiful record albums which have been designed individually for each particular symphony, are available at a slightly higher price.

After you have obtained all ten of the symphonies, you can secure the Electric Record Player for payment of only $3. If you want to get your Record Player earlier, you can do so—you can get it with your first group of records, your second, third or any other group, merely by making a deposit of $5. After you have obtained all of the 10 symphonies, $3 will be returned to you. Thus, whether you get your Record Player before or after you have obtained all of the symphonies, the cost to you is only $3.

For those who want a more elaborate Record Player, a Symphonic De Luxe Model, enclosed in a walnut case, is available at a higher price.

First, mail the Reservation Form to assist us in our distribution problems. Please check whether or not you want the Record Player reserved. We will acknowledge your reservation by mail. Filling in and mailing the reservation entails no obligation whatever on your part.

SERIAL STORY

5 WOULD KILL

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Questioning Douglas, Dawson discovers that the young man knows much more about the Benthorne murder than he is telling. When Flynn reports on Benthorne's bank deposits, Douglas hears "Big Red" mentioned. "Big Red" was my uncle," he tells Dawson.

CHAPTER X

AS Dawson stared at him incredulously, John Douglas continued: "I was named for him. He's been missing for years now. We have reason to believe he is dead. What has he to do with this Benthorne murder?"

"Just a minute, son," Dawson countered. "I'll ask the questions, and perhaps answer a few, too. How old would your uncle be if he were still alive?"

"Between 70 and 80."

"Ummm. And what makes you think he is dead?"

"I can't tell you all of that right now, Captain. I can't tell you all I know about Benthorne. I can't even tell you why I came here last night. But if you'll let me talk to Ara, alone, for a few minutes—"

"What possible reason could your uncle have—supposing he were alive—to kill Benthorne?"

Douglas shook his head. "Why name a dead man as a suspect?" he countered.

Dawson settled back in his chair, fished in his wallet for a folded, wrinkled piece of paper, studied it intently. At last he handed it over to Douglas, saying:

"You may as well know that your admission that 'Big Red' is your uncle, puts you in even a better spot as the No. 1 suspect of Benthorne's murder. Here, read this."

Douglas read "I will be killed tonight— . . . a woman named Ara . . . prospector . . . 'Big Red.'"

"Ara!" he whispered.

Dawson reached out, took the paper from Douglas' hand. "I've a hunch about you, Douglas, and I'll let you talk to Ara, alone. She should still be in the dining room."

JOHN DOUGLAS' precipitous entrance and his ill-considered babbling had left Ara inwardly raging. What a fool, she thought, to have come here immediately. If he had only waited until the first editions were on the streets with the Benthorne murder story.

But now, anything she might say, even the truth, would have to be proved. And Dawson was no ordinary detective.

A look of imperturbable calm masked her inward emotional turmoil as she turned back to the table. Joey di Torio stirred his coffee noisily. Krone eyed her as she sat down. Only Helen Benthorne seemed entirely undisturbed by the interruption. Ara nibbled on a piece of toast, kept her eyes focused on her plate.

After a few minutes, Joey announced: "Must have left my cigarettes in the other room. Coming, Krone?"

"Yeah, I'll go with you." The detective mumbled something in Mrs. Benthorne's direction as the two men left the dining room.

"I hope you are enjoying your breakfast," Mrs. Benthorne said, after an interval of silence. There was no cordiality in her voice.

Ara nodded.

"Just what do you plan to do now?" Mrs. Benthorne demanded.

"I know you must hate me, Mrs. Benthorne," Ara answered as she rose from the table, faced the beautiful young widow. "You have reason to. But there is nothing of yours that I want. I intended leaving here as quickly as possible. I feel only pity for you. Now, I want to forget—everything!"

"There is one thing I am sure you want to forget," Mrs. Benthorne's words were sharp edged. "But I doubt if Captain Dawson will let you. But let me warn you"—her voice rose—"if you try anything, if you tell anything, I'll—I'll—"

"You might kill me, is that what you're trying to tell me, Mrs. Benthorne?" Ara's eyes blazed. "I could make things rather unpleasant for you, but don't worry about it—I don't intend to. I want nothing that you can give me. And I don't hate you. My hate is dead. Nothing matters—now."

Mrs. Benthorne's face became crimson as she started to answer. "Why—you—you—" But her enigmatic smile returned when she glimpsed Dawson and Douglas leaving the study. "Be quiet, now," she ordered Ara. "Here comes the detective. I'll see you later."

And as Dawson entered . . . "Your breakfast suggestion was quite right, Captain. A little coffee has done wonders for me."

"I thought so, Mrs. Benthorne." Dawson answered. "Will you come with me, now, Mrs. Benthorne? I'll have to search the house for a gun—the gun—and I should prefer that you were along."

"If you insist, Captain."

"John, you'd better have some food, too," Dawson said. "The butler will bring you coffee and toast and whatever else you want."

JOHN ate in silence. Only when Ara rose and started to leave did he turn to her.

"Ara, the time has come to tell the truth. You and I are going to be accused of a murder, if we don't tell Captain Dawson all the facts. I know it won't be easy."

"I don't see where I am involved. I—" she began.

"But you are, Ara, and I have to know why," Douglas interrupted. "Tell me the truth, Ara and perhaps I can save you. . . . What were you doing in Benthorne's study last night?"

She turned on him angrily. "I wasn't in Benthorne's study last night. What makes you ask that?"

He drew a button—a red, peculiarly-shaped button, from his vest pocket, held it beside two similar buttons on the sleeve of her dress. "Haven't you missed this?"

She snatched the button from his hand. "Where did you find that? Does Dawson know?" Then as she became calmer: "There are thousands of buttons just like this one, why bother me with it?"

"There are three on your other sleeve." It was true.

"All right, suppose I was in Benthorne's study. I was there this morning, talking to Captain Dawson. He knows that. When did you find it?"

"I found it in a chair—it fell out of a chair—last night," Douglas answered slowly. "Benthorne was dead—did you see him last night?" He was pleading for the truth, although his own words were self-condemning.

"Yes," Ara answered slowly, as her eyes met his, "I saw Arnold Benthorne last night. But it was early in the evening—long before he was killed."

THE POET'S CORNER

A MIS AMIGOS

By Julia Moore Evans

To the friends of ours in Childress, From the ancient to the youth: When we say we learned to love you,

We are speaking sober truth.

We enjoyed the simple freedom, Where the lovely West begins. You received us very kindly, With our failings and our sins.

But the time has come for parting, When our ways must separate; You to keep the home fires burning, We to try another state.

With the Father's loving kindness, And the Father's watchful care, He will closely watch between us, He will listen to our prayer.

"Here's a sigh to those who love me, And a smile to those who hate, And with Heaven's sky above me, Here's a heart for every fate." —Tyrone, Oklahoma.

SERIAL STORY

5 WOULD KILL

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday: Douglas pleads for a chance to talk to Ara alone. When Dawson arranges it, Douglas shows the girl a button from her dress. "I found it in Benthorne's study. Were you there?" She admits she saw Benthorne but insists it was early in the evening, long before he was killed.

CHAPTER XI

HELEN BENTHORNE led Dawson toward the back stairs.

"You asked how my father got into the house," she said, pointing to the doorway across the kitchen. "He came in there, met Jameson in this hallway, and then came up the stairs to the left. Jameson's quarters open off the kitchen to the right."

Dawson glanced backward for a moment. On the other side of the swinging door he had just passed through was the dining room, and beyond that the study. If a man hurried—ran—

He followed Mrs. Benthorne up the stairs. "Here is the landing where father paused to catch his breath—" Noting Dawson's quizzical look, she added. "Oh yes, Captain, I forgot to tell you. I talked to Father after he had seen you. He told me all that he had said." She hurried on, her black gown swishing about her trim ankles.

Dawson hesitated as he reached the top of the stairs, eyed a small door recessed in the wall. "The clothes chute," Helen Benthorne explained. "A most convenient place to hide a gun."

"I'd thought of that already, Mrs. Benthorne," Dawson smiled. "Krone emptied it fully two hours ago."

"Do you really think you'll find that gun here in the house, Captain?" Helen Benthorne seemed amused at the thought. "I should think you'd be searching the grounds. Undoubtedly the murderer of my husband went out the window. While you waste time here, he's probably miles away."

"Mr. Benthorne had many enemies?"

"Arnold had no friends." She opened a door, "This is the guest room"—and nodding at the figure on the ruffled bed. . . . "My father is sleeping. . . . Poor Dad!"

The detective pushed past her, through the doorway. He took in the disarray of the room; the spread tossed back over the foot of the bed; the muddy shoes, side by side; the black raincoat in a heap on the floor; the hat, on the highboy, and the little line of water down the front of the drawers; the figure of Alston, stretched full length upon the bed, face down, outlined under the blanket. The man's breathing was steady, unnaturally loud.

"The sleeping pills," Mrs. Benthorne explained. "Must you disturb him now? This has been an ordeal for him. Won't you let him sleep and come back later?"

Dawson nodded, backed slowly from the room. Alston stirred slightly, then relaxed again, resuming his quiet snoring. Dawson turned to Mrs. Benthorne's suite.

TWENTY minutes later he was ready to admit that if Helen Benthorne had ever kept a revolver hidden in her room, she had left no trace of it. There was no tell-tale outline on flimsy underthings in any of the dresser drawers; closets, filled with hundreds of dollars of costly dresses and coats yielded no clues. Each garment was hung neatly upon a satin-padded wooden hangar—to hold the shoulders in shape, Dawson decided—and at the end of each rack were more hangars awaiting this season's frocks.

Mrs. Benthorne sat beside the window, nervously cutting an envelope to pieces with a small gold scissors. She did not miss Dawson's approving glance at the padded hangars.

"Arnold called those my pet extravagance," she said, nodding toward the closet.

"The gowns? They must have cost a small fortune," Dawson agreed.

"No, the hangars. I insisted upon them, but Arnold could never see why the ordinary wire kind—those the cleaners always send back—weren't just as good. He owned one of the companies that makes those—the wire ones, I mean."

The detective nodded, and went on with his search. Once he paused, as if listening. "Is this room directly over Mr. Benthorne's study?" he asked.

Benthorne's widow shook her head. "I wish it were," she replied. "I might have been able to hear—last night. Mr. Benthorne's room is above the study." Do you want to look around my husband's room?"

"Not right away," Dawson said. "I'll have to awaken your father now. Or would you rather?"

Helen Benthorne led the way. There was a queenly pride in her erect carriage, a calm defiance in her manner that easily explained Arnold Benthorne's longing to have this woman for his wife, and to take any means to force her into that marriage. Helen Benthorne was an aristocrat, Dawson knew, and her mannerisms never allowed anyone to forget it. She opened the door to the guest room gently, then threw it wide with a crash.

"My father 'is gone!" she screamed. Dawson darted into the room.

It was true. The bed was empty, the covers thrown back. The shoes were still there, neatly placed side by side, half under the bed.

Dawson rushed to the head of the front staircase, searched the hallway and entrance beneath.

"Krone! Krone!" he shouted, and as the patrolman rushed through the half-open front door, "watch this stairway and the hall there. Stop everyone. I'm coming down the back way."

DOUGLAS and Ara were still at the table when Dawson pushed through the swinging door. "Anyone go through here in the last 20 minutes?"

"Not a soul, Captain," Douglas answered. "What's the matter now?" But Dawson had hurried on.

The detective bumped into Krone a second later at the door of the study. "What is it, Captain?"

"Alston—he's disappeared!"

"But he was upstairs, sleeping."

"Yes—yes—I saw him not 20 minutes ago, sound asleep. But he's not there now. Did you see him come down the stairs?"

"I'd just stepped outside with Joey for a smoke—I'd have heard him—"

"He left his shoes by the bed—What were you doing outside?" Dawson thundered. "Search the house. Call in a couple of those men on duty in front—get me a dozen more. Where's Flynn? What—"

The words died in his throat. "Were you looking for me, Captain Dawson?" The door of Benthorne's private hallway to the street opened and Alston emerged from the long corridor. The detective stared at him, open-mouthed.

"I awakened suddenly, with an idea," Alston explained. "I came down quietly, and I think I found something you'll want to see." He handed the detective a smudged, water-stained cigar, half burned and crushed. "Most interesting," he went on slowly, his breath rasping in his throat.

Oklahoma Couple Trapped in Fire

MAUD, Okla. (UP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Sears, who live southwest of Maud, were in a critical condition today from burns suffered when their house caught fire Saturday night and took the lives of two of their children.

One of their children, Vernon, 10, died in the flames. A seven-year-old daughter, Louise, died last night of her burns in a hospital.

The condition of Mrs. Sears, 45, was described today by nurses as "very low." The father, 72, was given a chance to recover.

Four other children were away when the house caught fire, apparently from an overheated oil stove.

Mining Area Is Unhealthful, Report Shows

NEW YORK (UP)—Inadequate measures for the control of silicosis and tuberculosis make the tri-state lead and zinc mining area of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma a plague spot which menaces the public health of the entire nation, the national committee for people's rights reported today in a special survey.

Investigations made by the tri-state survey committee cover a period of two years in which every phase of life in the area was studied.

"Lack of local interest in preventive measures is largely responsible for the continuation of conditions which could have been improved years ago," the report said.

According to statistics, roughly one out of every five miners in the district had silicosis and one out of every 27 had tuberculosis, the survey said.

Social workers, medical authorities, specialists in silicosis and various government officials who participated in preparing the survey concurred in their statements that the menace of tuberculosis and silicosis was aggravated by a number of factors which combined to make the area "in the lowest bracket of the submerged third of the nation which is ill-fed, ill-clothed and ill-housed and generally uneducated."

These factors are extreme poverty, economic insecurity, inadequate health facilities, lack of sanitation and general ignorance of the nature and cause of pulmonary diseases, the study revealed.

JOPLIN, Mo. (UP)—Lead and zinc mine operators today charged that a report of conditions in the tri-state area was "biased, exaggerated and contained many downright misstatements of facts."

Evan Just, secretary of the tri-state zinc and lead ore producers association, made the statement after release of the survey made by the national committee for people's rights described the section of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma as a plague spot that menaces national health.

Operators said they considered it "significant" that the survey was released one day before 50 mine owners must appear before the regional office of the national labor board in Kansas City to consider charges made by the international mill, mine and smelter workers of America (CIO).

Russian—

"Evidently the war mongers have lost their heads and forgotten they are dealing with the soviet union."

HELSINGFORS, Finland (UP)—The government announced today that soviet troops had been firing trench mortars along the Finnish border, and if any soviet troops were killed, their own shells killed them.

Official quarters showed little alarm over a Russian note charging that Finnish troops have killed four Russian soldiers and injured nine others in an artillery barrage.

An official statement said that all frontier points had been checked, and no such attack had occurred.

On the other hand, it was announced that Finnish troops observed the Russians start hand grenade exercises at 3 p. m. yesterday. (The Soviet note said the Finnish attack was at 3:45.)

The grenades were fired by mortars, Finnish officials said. They did not say the mortars were aimed at the Finnish side, but they denied categorically that the Finns had done any shooting.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S CLINIC TO BE HELD

PERSONALITIES TODAY'S PROFILE

By The United Press

Karl Krueger, youthful conductor of the Kansas City Philharmonic Orchestra, is one of the few native-born musicians to achieve distinction in this country.

Most of the top-notch symphony orchestra directors were born in Europe and achieved fame there before coming to the United States. But Krueger—born in New York City and reared in Atchison, Kan.—is so thoroughly American that he once refused the directorship of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra when it was offered him if he would become an Austrian citizen.

"I would as soon change my profession as my citizenship," Krueger is said to have replied.

Krueger has only one standard, and that is the highest. To him music must be the best, played by artists, or it is painful to the ear.

He will explain that jazz, and even "good" music when it is poorly played, is only so much noise, and to sensitive ears is as painful as the screech produced by scratching a fingernail on a pane of glass.

On the rostrum Krueger's manner is simple and dignified and he believes that most persons pay too much attention to the manner in which the leader directs the orchestra, rather than to the conductor's interpretation of the music.

As top musicians go, Krueger is young. He was born in 1894. His father was a professor of languages at the University of Basle who came to this country when he was 36. His mother was Sophie Sprick, daughter of a pioneer Kansan of Atchison.

The Kruegers settled in Atchison and it was here that the family of four sons was reared. The elder Krueger was something of a musician and he was determined that his sons should learn the violin. At times he even locked the boys into separate rooms and required them to practice. But when he learned that Karl was thinking of taking up music as a career, he set his mind against it and ordered him

A clinic for crippled children is to be conducted at Wichita Falls on Dec. 7 by staff members of the crippled children's division of the state department of education, workers from the state department of public welfare, and Wichita Falls doctors.

Mrs. Frank Givens of the county welfare office here was notified by the welfare department of the clinic, which will be conducted in the First Methodist church building, 10th and Travis streets in Wichita Falls, beginning at 8 a. m.

Parents of crippled children in need of aid are free to take them to the clinic, the notice said. The purpose is to discover crippled children who can be helped, to check the condition of those who have had some hospitalization, and to interview parents so that application for hospitalization may be made where help is needed.

Residents of this county may secure further information from Mrs. Givens at the welfare office.

Young Krueger attended the University of Kansas, where he studied law and obtained his M.A. degree. Later he studied at the University of Heidelberg and the University of Vienna.

While at Heidelberg he decided to abandon law and began studying music in earnest.

Krueger remained in Europe from 1919 to 1925. In 1923 he married Miss Emita McCormick Jewett, a daughter of the late Samuel R. Jewett, a Chicago lawyer, and a cousin of Harold McCormick of the Chicago harvester family.

Although Krueger speaks four languages and is almost as at home in Europe as he is in this country, he is unassuming and unpretentious.

Krueger came to Kansas City in 1933 to organize the Kansas City Philharmonic. Under his direction the orchestra has received wide acclaim.
