Nearly half at PHS 'risk' quitting

New program identifies potential school dropouts

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

With a high school dropout rate hovering around 4½ percent — well below state and national averages — Pampa school officials would appear to have relatively few worries about keeping students in school.

Concerned they are, though, about figures showing that close to half of the student body — including four of five black students, and two of three Hispanics — is "at risk" of joining the dropout ranks.

The figures were released last week by the district's at-risk coordinator, Sally Griffith, and show that 47 percent of Pampa High School students meet at least one of five Texas Education Agency criteria for identifying "students at-risk" of quitting school. The criteria target students who:

- are behind their age group and experiencing academic difficulty;
- are two or more years behind their grade level in reading or math;
- won't graduate in four years;
- failed at least one section of the most recent Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills (TEAMS) test; and
- face family, economic, or social problems that could affect schoolwork.

Since she was hired in August to fill the state-mandated position, Griffith, 37, has spent her time reviewing student records to determine which students meet the TEA criteria. She plans to move the program to the middle school and grade schools in coming weeks.

Once students are identified, she said, the district can begin figuring out ways to keep them in school.

"A few years ago, if you dropped out of school, you could find a job, but not anymore," she said. "The state of Texas has one of the highest dropout rates in the nation, and it also has one of the highest prison populations. Eighty-five percent of that prison population is made up of high school dropouts."

Recent studies indicate the national dropout rate is about 30 percent. In some Texas school districts, it's as high as 47 percent.

Pampa school officials already have implemented some programs designed to keep students from getting discouraged enough to drop out, including special tutoring for the TEAMS tests, the Impact drug awareness program and a basic skills laboratory at the high school.

Assistant Superintendent Jane Steele said the district is developing other, long-term approaches as potential dropouts are identified. It promises to be a long process.

Said high school Vocational Director Don Nelson: "We do not want knee-jerk reactions to this data."

Mrs. Griffith stressed that the TEA criteria probably catch a lot of good students who have no intentions of dropping out, explaining the discrepancy between the at-risk rate and the actual dropout rate. For example, a straight-A student who simply had a bad day on the TEAMS test would be considered "at risk" under the TEA guidelines, she said.

"We're trying to catch everybody that there is a possibility of dropping out," she said. "If we made the criteria (less inclusive) we might miss some of those students."

A good example, she said, is the high number of black and Hispanic students identified as potential dropouts.

POTENTIAL DROPOUTS

The following lists by grade, race and gender the percentage of Pampa High School students determined to be at risk of dropping out of school. Despite the relatively high percentage of black and Hispanic students "at risk," school officials say the actual dropout rate for these students is "about the same" as for whites:

- Freshmen — Black (88 percent); Hispanic (67 percent); White (37 percent). Male (52 percent); Female (40 percent).
- Sophomores — Black (81 percent); Hispanic (74 percent); White (49 percent). Male (60 percent); Female (47 percent).
- Juniors — Black (80 percent); Hispanic (62 percent); White (50 percent). Male (61 percent); Female (46 percent).
- Seniors — Black (81 percent); Hispanic (60 percent); White (34 percent). Male (44 percent); Female (34 percent).
- Total PHS — Black (83 percent); Hispanic (67 percent); White (42 percent). Male (55 percent); Female (41 percent).

RISK FACTORS

All high school students who fit into one of the following categories are considered at risk of dropping out, according to the Texas Education Agency. The following lists the percentage of Pampa High School students in each category.

- Behind age group and experiencing academic difficulty — Freshmen (26 percent); Sophomores (24 percent); Juniors (22 percent); Seniors (15 percent); PHS total (22 percent).
- At least two years behind grade level in reading or math — Freshmen (29 percent); Sophomores (27 percent); Juniors (33 percent); Seniors (29 percent); PHS total (29 percent).
- Won't graduate in four years — Freshmen (8 percent); Sophomores (10 percent); Juniors (9 percent); Seniors (13 percent); PHS total (10 percent).
- Failed at least one section of most recent TEAMS test — Freshmen (26 percent); Sophomores (41 percent); Juniors (30 percent); Seniors (2 percent); PHS total (27 percent).
- Total students meeting at least one of criteria — Freshmen (46 percent); Sophomores (53 percent); Juniors (53 percent); Seniors (39 percent); PHS total (47 percent).

Pampa Ranger joins elite

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Tom Ratliff says it's an honor to be one of 94 active Texas Rangers, and to begin his career with the elite law enforcement agency in Pampa.

"I'm real happy to be in Pampa," said Ratliff, 34. "The people here have just been so nice and so generous. I can't emphasize that enough."

Ratliff officially became Pampa's Ranger on Sept. 1, but he admits he hasn't been able to spend much time getting to know his eight-county eastern Panhandle region, what with shuffling back and forth to law enforcement school in Austin, and to Lubbock, where he was a state trooper before being promoted.

Lubbock is also currently home for Ratliff's wife, Ann Harral, who is in the process of completing her medical residency in obstetrics-gynecology at a Lubbock hospital. She plans to finish in June, and hopes to set up a practice in Pampa, Ratliff said.

In joining the Texas Rangers, Ratliff became a member of the oldest law enforcement agency in the country with statewide jurisdiction. It started in 1823 as a group of 10 men, financed by Stephen F. Austin to protect his small colony.

Sam Houston used the force to guard the frontier, and later it was used against lawlessness and Indian uprisings.

"I consider it an honor just to be one," Ratliff said of the legendary force.

The Texas Rangers were part of the state attorney general's office until 1935, when the Department of Public Safety was organized, Ratliff said.

He said the focus of the agency has changed since its inception.

"What we do nowadays is work on major crimes — anything that we can assist other agencies with," he explained. That includes helping local police or sheriffs solve crimes,

Wheeler sniffs out funding for feedlot

By CATHY SPAULDING

SHAMROCK — The smell of cattle crammed in a feedlot and ready for slaughter may not be very pleasant to the unaccustomed nose.

But to Wheeler County residents, the smell of feedlots, slaughterhouses and meat packing plants is the smell of money — especially when such a plant can provide up to 750 area jobs.

That's what Wheeler County officials and businessmen are counting on from the proposed Taurus Beef Inc. feedlot six miles east of Shamrock. Shamrock veterinarian Dr. Danny Vaughan, who hopes to build the feedlot, could not be reached for comment.

To help Vaughan with his venture, Wheeler County commissioners have applied for a $490,000 grant from the Texas Capital Fund Project, which is administered through the Texas Department of Community Affairs.

Wheeler County Judge Wendell Morgan explained that under the program, the county obtains the state grant and in turn loans it to a private business that meets state requirements. Morgan said the business must hire low- to moderate-income residents to qualify for the loan.

"And that could apply to 90 percent of us," Morgan said, adding that unemployment in Wheeler County is going up.

Morgan said the feedlot may hire more than 700 employees.

The county passed its first major hurdle Oct. 15 when the preliminary request was approved by the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission. The Texas Review and Comment System Committee of the PRPC approved the request Oct. 15 and sent the county's funding request to the Department of Community Affairs.

Morgan said he expects the state agency to decide on the grant request by early November.

The judge said the Wheeler County request will compete with requests from other parts of the state. Among the requests competing with the feedlot proposal is a Tulia proposal seeking $360,000 to expand its nursing home.

The judge is optimistic that the Wheeler County request will be granted.

"We have to be optimistic," Morgan said. "We can't afford

Time was critical when medical personnel at Coronado Hospital had to treat a 7-month-old fire victim.

The boy, Justin Tyler Calfy, had suffered burns over 60 percent of his tiny body after being left alone in a house that burned Oct. 6. The child's mother and older brother reportedly had briefly stepped out of their home at 607 N. Gordon to make a telephone call.

Coronado Hospital public information director Linda Haynes recalled that medical personnel spent three hours trying to stabilize the infant and to treat the wounds to his head, face and trunk.

The Pampa hospital does not have the equipment nor expertise to provide lengthy treatment in such severe burn cases. The child had to be transported to a burn

Did you set clock back?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Standard time is back.

Clocks should have been set back one hour at 2 a.m. today, shifting an hour of light from the evening to the morning.

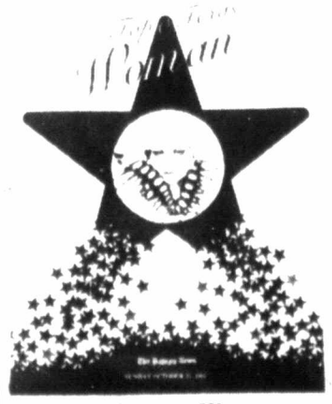

Daylight-saving time will return April 3, 1988.

The shift from standard to daylight-saving time has its opponents.

When the nation's time zones were introduced more than a century ago, they too were controversial.

The system of time zones was introduced after railroad transportation became common in the 19th century. It was designed to ease confusion caused by having every town and city set its own time.

Risk

tial dropouts. School officials believe the actual dropout rate for these students is no higher than for whites.

"They're just struggling more," Griffith said.

Griffith's husband, school Superintendent Harry Griffith, said the district doesn't currently compare dropout rates of different ethnic students. He said one goal of the at-risk program is becoming better able to track students of all races.

Dr. Griffith said the school district has denied the potential dropout problem for too long.

"If I were a teacher at Pampa High School, I think I'd be pretty frustrated about this," Griffith said. "I don't mean that as a reflection of any person in the past. That's just the way this system has been in the past."

Members of the school board agreed with Griffith, and expressed support for the at-risk program.

"I want to hear the truth," said Trustee Jim Duggan. "It's got to improve the school system."

Trustee Lonnie Richardson said he was "appalled" by the numbers.

Veteran Trustee Darville Orr said the figures are negative, but a large number of students are still in school who "should have dropped out three years ago."

Longtime Pampa High School teacher Anne McAnelly said when she started teaching, schools didn't have students "at risk" because the students didn't stay in school that long. She said a strong vocational program has kept Pampa students in school longer.

"They were given something they could see was going to do them some good," McAnelly said. "If kids can't see some value in going to school ... there's just an awful lot of them that aren't going to be there."

not to be."

Morgan said he does not know when the $20 million feedlot could be built. Whether it ever is built may hinge on passage of two state economic development proposals that voters will decide at the Nov. 3 amendments election.

Amendment 4 authorizes the Legislature to provide assistance to encourage economic development in the state.

"Even if we get the grant, it will be hard for them to build the feedlot if amendments four and six don't pass," Morgan said.

"But it won't be impossible," he added, noting that the promoters would have to use other types of bonds.

Masons

At Perry Lefors Field, pilot Ron Fernuick was preparing an airplane owned by Leonard Hudson Drilling Co. to fly the child to the nearest burn center in Oklahoma City.

But even then, Haynes said, it was uncertain whether the child would make it to Oklahoma City.

Haynes remembered: "About that time, Skeets (V.E.) Wagner and Gene Gates came to the emergency room and said, 'Let us get her to the Shriners burn center in Galveston.' They asked to speak to pediatrician Dr. Bienvenido Ignacio, and they talked for some time."

The men then consulted with officials at the Shriners Burns Institute in Galveston, which arranged to send a specially equipped plane, with a doctor, to Pampa to pick up the child.

Said Wagner: "It's a new system the burn center has. In the past, we'd get a hold of the attending physicians, and we'd take the children to the center in a private airplane."

"But this time they said they'd send a hospital plane with a staff of doctors on board," Wagner added. "That way, they can assure the child would be under a doctor's care."

The Galveston plane never made it.

Justin Calfy had died.

Haynes said the medical staff was unable to stabilize the child enough to survive the plane trip.

Tragic as it was, the incident brought out the giving spirit of Pampa residents.

For Wagner, 76, and Gates, 68, it was another opportunity to show their concern. They've done this work before, and both say they'll do it again.

The two men, both 32nd degree Masons, make arrangements to take children and their families to the Galveston burn center or to the Scottish Rite Children's Hospital in Dallas.

The hospital, operated by the Scottish Rite Masons, provides free medical treatment to children. The burn center, one of three such hospitals operated by the North America Shrine, does emergency and reconstructive work on young burn victims.

Wagner said they have not yet arranged for any children to go to the Shriners Crippled Childrens' Hospital in Houston.

Gates figured he and Wagner arrange transportation to the Scottish Rite Hospital for about 12 children each year.

If the family is not able to pay for the transportation, Gates said, the Pampa Masonic Lodge picks up the bill.

Gates could not figure out how much money the group spends each year to take the children to the hospitals.

"We just tell the club we have another load," Gates said, estimating that the annual bill can run up to "several thousand dollars."

Gates added that, until recently, it has been harder to help the young Pampa burn victims.

"Before they changed owners (before Coronado was sold to an employee stock company), they always sent their victims to the burn center in Oklahoma City, which was part of their hospital chain," Gates said. "But now the hospital is more willing to work with us."

Wagner said their main job is to be the liason between the family and the hospitals.

"We fill out the applications for the family," Wagner said.

Gates explained that he and Wagner arrange transportation on commercial airlines for children going to the Dallas hospital. In those instances, time is not as crucial, he said. The Masonic Lodge picks up the bill for families who cannot afford transportation.

The two men take turns handling each case.

Some are especially memorable to the two men.

"A nurse called me from the hospital. Said there was a baby with her legs and arms all twisted up. The mother needed help."

"And now the little girl can walk like normal," Gates said, declining to give further details to protect the family's privacy.

Then there was the sadder fate of a Michigan boy, part of a family of 17 who were visiting people in Canadian.

Recalled Wagner: "The family had a son who couldn't walk. And the doctors there told them not to bother trying to get him to walk. The mother was told to get a hold of Skeets Wagner."

Wagner had the child taken to Dallas, where doctors said the child would walk at the end of 19 months.

"At the end of 15 months, the mother said the boy was walking with a brace," Wagner said.

But the joy would not last long. Four years ago, the boy and other family members died in a house fire in Canadian.

The two men are saddened by such reports. But they are undaunted.

Wagner said they are willing to work with other agencies if the children need help.

Ranger

or responding to calls from the governor or attorney general for special investigations, he said.

Ratliff said to become a Texas Ranger, an officer must have eight years of law enforcement experience, the most recent two with the DPS. Those who wish to become Rangers then take a written exam.

Those with the top 20 scores on the written law enforcement test then face an interview board, on which they are also scored. Points also can be gained for education, experience and health, Ratliff said.

The best four or five scores are placed on a list, to be filled whenever a Ranger vacancy occurs, but the list is valid for only a year, he said.

The test and oral board are given only once a year. Ratliff described the process as competitive because, with only 94 Rangers in the state, positions aren't vacant very often.

Ratliff's appointment to Pampa was not without controversy. Michael Scott, a Houston trooper, who had hoped to become the first black Texas Ranger, said he was passed over for the Pampa post because of racism, a charge denied by the DPS.

Ratliff said he knows little about the controversy.

In addition to being a trooper in Lubbock, Ratliff also has patrolled in Midland and New Braunfels.

"I was glad to get back in West Texas," he said. "It kind of grows on you."

That wasn't the case with Ranger Steve Black, who served in Pampa only six months before returning to East Texas. Black had been named to succeed longtime Ranger Bill Baten, who retired June 30, 1986, and died earlier this year.

Ratliff said he doesn't plan to try to replace the popular Baten, whose years in Pampa he said have already made his own job easier.

"There's just no way you could take the place of a person of that character," Ratliff said. "I'm just here to do a job."

Justice received attorneys' money in pending cases

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Supreme Court Justice Robert Campbell, who pledged in his campaign for chief justice not to accept contributions from lawyers practicing in the state's high court, received a third of his 1986 campaign contributions from lawyers and firms with docketed cases.

A comparison of court records with Campbell's campaign finance reports shows he received $212,868 in contributions from firms and lawyers whose cases awaited Supreme Court action, the Texas Lawyer weekly magazine reported in a copyright story in its Oct. 26 editions.

The donations amount to 33 percent of Campbell's total contributions during the period. In some cases, the donations came just before a case reached the court, or just before a decision was handed down, the Lawyer reported. The magazine's analysis did not examine Campbell's votes in the cases.

Campbell, reached at his Waco home Friday night, told The Associated Press he had not intended for his statements at a Sept. 1 press conference to suggest he would be aware of every docketed attorney or firm who contributed to his campaign.

"The one thing that somehow never gets out in the press is that we don't know who the lawyers are until they get to the court," he said, adding that his campaign statements referred to cases in which a conflict of interest was obvious.

"I'm not going down to search the docket every morning to see who's filed a case. That's impossible," said Campbell, 52.

At the press conference in which he announced his 1988 bid for chief justice, Campbell said he would not take money from lawyers and firms with pending cases, a practice he said he followed in his 1986 re-election bid. In past campaigns, he said, his staff had screened contributions.

He told reporters he would return money from lawyers with cases "that are presently pending and those we know are coming," and those that are "in the pipeline" and headed for the court.

Of the contributions documented, Campbell received at least $45,200 in 1986 from lawyers who contributed after the court had accepted their cases for review.

Golfer involved in smuggling

BEAUMONT (AP) — A federal judge on Friday sentenced a golf pro to 10 years in prison and a $25,000 fine for his part in an international marijuana-smuggling operation.

U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb ruled that Danny Martin Loken, 28, of Hudson, Wis., could remain free on a $200,000 bond until his lawyer exhausted appeals in the case.

Loken's lawyer, Charles Hawkins of Minneapolis, Minn., said he plans to request a new trial. Loken was a golf pro at Pinewood Country Club near Beaumont in the early 1980s.

He is the last of 11 men convicted on charges related to the smuggling scheme. Two men remain fugitives — Kevin Miles Moratz, 26, and Badner Hassan, 35, a big game hunter from Belize who authorities believe is the major supplier of marijuana from Belize to the Gulf Coast.

A federal jury in August convicted Loken and three others of conspiring to distribute more than 110 pounds of marijuana in July 1982 and, in June or July of 1983, distributing about 480 pounds of marijuana.

Absentee voting on amendments ends Friday

Gray County Clerk Wanda Carter described the turnout as "fair" going into the final week of absentee voting in November's constitutional amendments election.

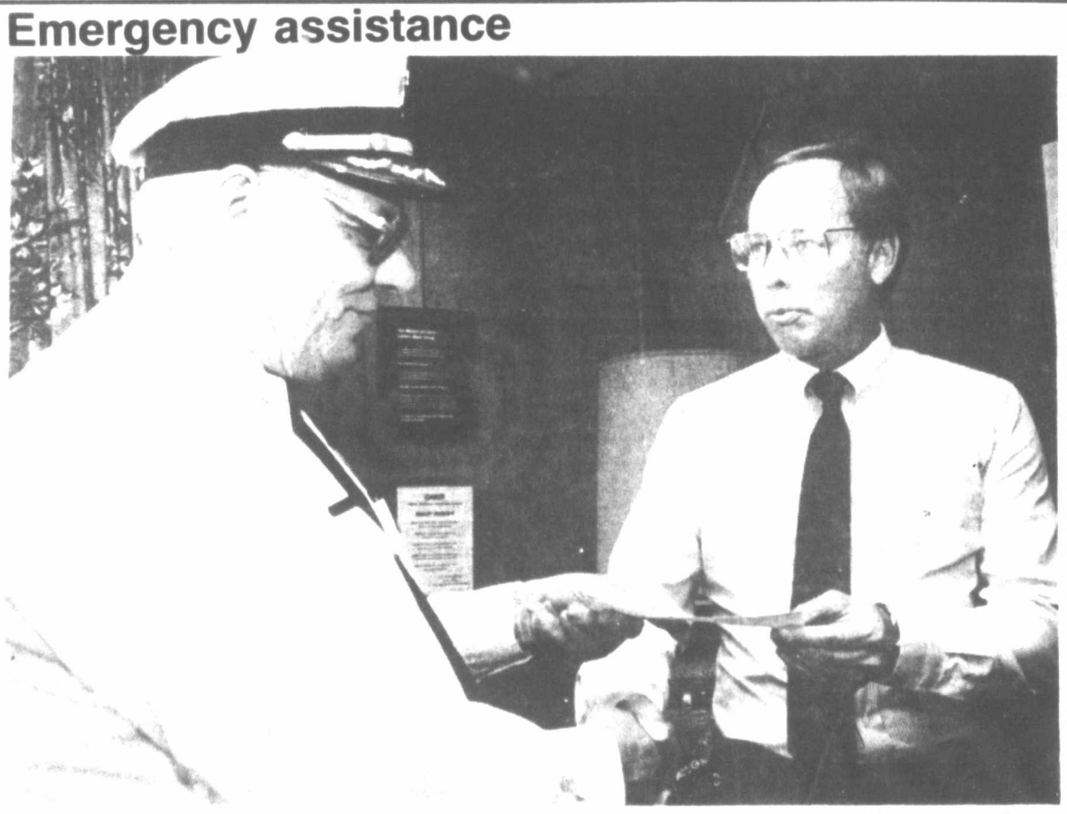

Carter said roughly 60 voters had cast absentee ballots in her office, and 24 more ballots had been mailed by mid-afternoon Friday. Tuesday is the deadline to request ballots by mail; absentee voting ends at 5 p.m. Friday.

Mail ballots will be sent upon request to those 65 and older or disabled. Also eligible to vote by mail are citizens currently living outside Gray County, such as college students, provided the ballot request comes from an address outside Gray County and is mailed to a location outside the county, Carter said.

The Nov. 3 election is highlighted by questions that would permit horse and dog racing in Texas and would return the state school board to elected status.

Locally, Roberts County voters are deciding the fate of a proposed water district, while Lipscomb and Randall County voters will cast ballots on a local horse- or dog-racing option in case the statewide measure passes.

Fisher said the donation is the result of efforts by the Community Awareness and Emergency Response Committee (CAER).

Vanna visits Austin

Wearing red shoes, a red ruffled dress and diamond earrings, White told the crowd that she had been signing autographs.

Dallas doctor to discuss AIDS

A family physician whose son died from AIDS will discuss the medical and emotional aspects of the disease during a free public meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Sponsored by the Top o' Texas Kiwanis Club, the meeting will be held in the Heritage Room at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Presenting slides and facts about the disease will be Dr. Guy B. Kindred of Dallas. He also will share his family's experiences concerning an AIDS victim.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

U.S.-Soviet Mars probe a risky deal

The Soviets have a deal for you. They want to join with the United States to explore Mars, culminating in a manned mission sometime after the year 2000. Since the U.S. space program is currently in bad shape, the offer might look good. It isn't.

The Kremlin is pushing the plan as an easy way to purloin American technology. They remember the 1975 Soyuz-Apollo mission, during which the United States revealed the intricate Apollo space-docking mechanism. That solved a sticky problem the Soviets couldn't figure out. The result: That technology enabled the Soviets to build space stations, such as the huge Mir war platform lofted into space last year. These stations now conduct space-weapons experiments — even as the Kremlin bellows against America's infant space defense program.

True enough, the Soviets today probably lead us in space, which only shows that a socialist nation can achieve one national goal at the expense of all else if it so concentrates its scientific and industrial minds. Today the goal is Soviet military superiority over the capitalist nations. Its space program is an integral part of that martial scheme.

Moreover, the U.S. space program is bad off only because it is passing through a critical transition. It's returning to the private enterprise arrangement that worked in the 1950s, before the Sputnik launch scared us into launching the costly Mercury and Apollo projects.

The Kremlin needs the Mars joint exploration scheme because it knows Soviet technicians can't solve certain critical technological problems. For example, Soviet computer and software development is an international joke. So, time to try duping the gullible Americans again.

A Soviet-American Mars shot would put thousands of America's computer and software experts to work for the Soviet military-space complex. Their research would aid the Soviets in designing better nuclear missiles and anti-missile weapons.

A Soviet-U.S. Mars shot would re-socialize American's space industry just as it is shifting back to private firms. The Soviets most fear, not befuddled NASA bureaucrats, but American space entrepreneurs.

An American Mars program, even one excluding the Soviets, would shoot down that essential transition. It would rechannel private energies for yet another high-tech government budget splurge. America has only so many space physicists and rocket engineers, and, with our record budget deficits, only so much public money. We would be foolish to employ them on a quixotic Mars mission.

Mars will be explored in due time. But it is better now to let technical and economic reality temper our ideals. If the Soviets want to waste billions of rubles trying to send one of their subjects to the red planet, let them. But our guess is that a free American, riding atop a private enterprise rocket, will land there first.

Africa becomes 'Animal Farm'

Walter Williams

Recently, I reread George Orwell's Animal Farm, the classic political fable of the 20th century. It's a story about a revolution by animals on Mr. Jones' Manor Farm. Having laid out elaborate plans, the cows, sheep, horses, chickens and pigs revolt, driving the cruel and sinister Jones off the farm. After gaining independence, the animals create the model community. They draft a constitution forbidding any animal to live in the house, drink, associate with a human, kill another animal, or, above all, walk on two legs; a democracy is created, and all animals are declared equal.

The pig Napoleon becomes their leader. Then, bit by bit, the animals lose their rights; Napoleon, surrounded by his goons, establishes a dictatorship. In doing so, Napoleon, along with the pigs and dogs, enjoys the splendor of the house while the other animals sleep in the barn, have drunken parties, collaborate with humans, and kill other animals. The pigs even learn to walk upright. The principles of the revolution are betrayed and the conditions for the animals are far worse than the pre-revolutionary days when Farmer Jones was in control.

I had first read Animal Farm during my senior year in high school in 1954. Back then, we students failed to fully appreciate Orwell's insight. The Soviet Union was the only major animal farm. Now, sadly enough, Orwell's fable is no longer fictional for a large part of the world's populations.

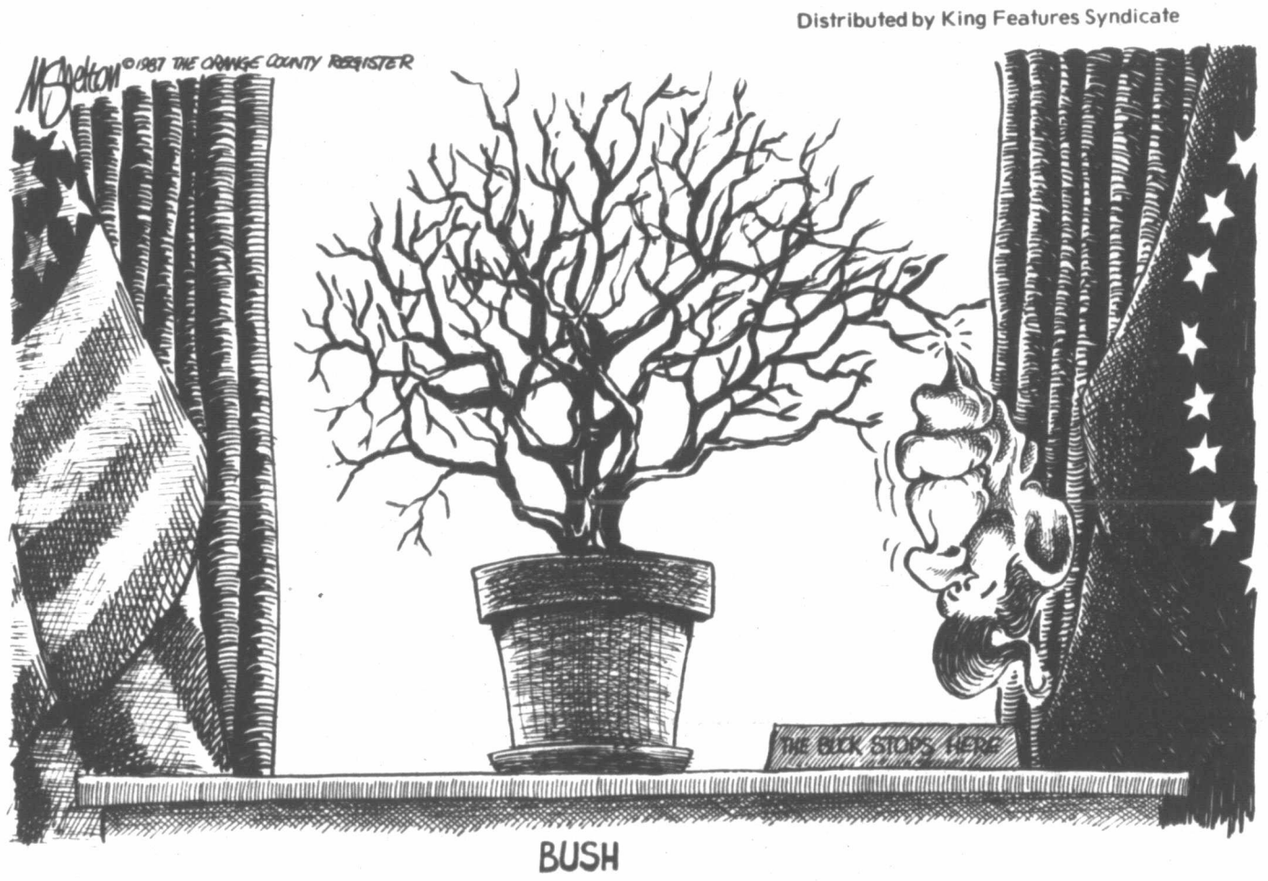

Decolonized Africa stands as a living example of Orwell's Animal Farm. In places like Ghana, Nigeria and Uganda, people were promised a new era once the Western "Joneses" were removed. The people were sold the Marxist messianic creed, promising salvation and plenty on earth — not now, but sometime in the future.

The Africans' British, French or Portuguese masters either left peaceably or were forced out. But the people, like the animals on Orwell's farm, found their new masters far worse. Sovereignty was confused with freedom. Ghana was Africa's richest country when it became independent in 1950; now it's one of the poorest. In places like Uganda, the Central African Empire, Mozambique, where the rule of law for the common man existed during colonial times, there has been mass murder and genocide. The African common man, like Orwell's animals, might now wonder whether life was better under colonization than under their new dictators.

Much of the brutality in Africa is home brewed. But the Western nations, including the United States, have been accomplices. In the name of economic development assistance, Westerners sent billions of dollars to Africa. And where does this money go? It goes to the African governments. Most of which are corrupt and abusive of their own people. Thus foreign aid helps to increase the power of those corrupt governments. It enables them to buttress their corrupt power by giving the elite political and economic rewards for their support. Foreign aid, except in the case of direct food distribution to starving people, has probably been on balance one of the worst things the West could have done for economic development in Africa.

Africa's past experience should give Western anti-apartheid activists some pause for thought. Wouldn't it be the supreme tragedy if South African blacks might ponder at some future date, like the animals of Jones' Manor, whether they were better off under apartheid? That's why blacks must ask; what's to come after apartheid? Black rule alone is no guarantee of black freedom.

Little Eddie played 'bird dog'

Lewis Grizzard

Each time I read another article about baseball pitchers scuffing the balls (which allegedly makes them curve and dip and stuff like that) I think of Little Eddie Estes.

I grew up practically next door to Eddie and his family. He was a couple of years younger than me, but we shared a common passion -- baseball.

The Baptist Church sponsored a baseball team in my hometown. This wasn't official Little League. This was blue jeans and T-shirts and lending your glove to somebody on the other team when you went to bat.

Eddie was 10 when he joined the team as its youngest member. Eddie eventually would become the best 12-year-old centerfielder I ever saw, but at 10, he was small and punchless at bat and needed much work on his defense.

So for two years, our coach played Eddie at "bird dog," a position even the most ardent baseball fans likely are not familiar with.

I'll explain.

Our team had a severe scarity of baseballs. We got two or three at the beginning of the season and that was that.

A few feet behind home plate at the elementary school ballfield where we played was a dog pen, home for two rather rowdy bird dogs.

When a foul ball was hit into the pen, which occurred quite often, the dogs immediately launched a frantic effort to retrieve it and have at it with their teeth.

Somebody had to stay in the dog pen at all times in order to get the foul balls before the dogs did, so the game, and the season, could continue.

That position became known as "bird dog."

That somebody who played it was poor little Eddie, who spent two seasons battling the dogs for the precious horsehide.

You play the same balls all season, ones that large dogs are trying their best to destroy, you know something about scuffing.

This story has a happy ending, and then a sad one.

He developed speed, and he developed power, and after spending two years fighting off two dogs for foul balls, running down line drives was nothing to him.

He made one of the greatest catches I've ever seen in a game against Mills Chapel, then turned and threw out the tying run at the plate and got his name mentioned in the weekly paper.

(I was our team's correspondent, and I compared the catch to Willie Mays' grab on Vic Wertz back whenever that was.)

I think little Eddie was 14 when he got killed. The car rounded a curve, and the driver lost control. I was a pallbearer. I still see his mother occasionally when I get home to visit the folks.

This was supposed to be about scuffing baseballs, but I got off track.

Excuse me. I think it was a lump in my throat that did it.

U.S. turns its back on Tibetans

Vincent Carroll

In a few days we will forget the Tibetans again. Their recent brave and bloody protests for national recognition will slip from Western news, lost in the silence China has reimposed on that vast territory.

We will also probably forget the shabby performance of the U.S. State Department during this remarkable episode. Incredibly, it all but sided with a communist government persecuting a minority, piously warning off critics of Beijing in the Senate.

Why such gloomy predictions? Because all over the world native peoples struggle for autonomy and even survival against encroaching central governments, and yet almost no one seems to care. Their anguish reaches our ears only when they become proxies for either the United States or Soviet Union — as happened in Nicaragua when the Miskito, Suma and Rama Indians rose up to resist Sandinista bullying.

Those Indians deserved our sympathy and support. But then so do the Tibetans; yet the same State Department that waxes so indignant over Nicaragua counsels forbearance for the even worse oppression inflicted on the Tibetans by the Chinese.

We mustn't disturb the diplomatic status quo, you know. The present relationship with China is comfortable and familiar to American officialdom. It permits the cautious, correct dialogue that in turn conveys an impression of progress — whether justified or not.

In a perverse sense, alas, the State Department may even have a point. Why bother about the Tibetans when so little is said or written about other groups threatened by national policies? Senate critics of China make much of the way Beijing colonizes Tibet with Chinese settlers. The Tibetans have become a minority in their own territory, and second-class citizens at that.

Yet China is hardly the only nation to overwhelm an independent-minded people with a flood of alien workers. Ever heard of Irian Jaya? It's what Indonesia calls western New Guinea, which Indonesia absorbed in the early 1960s. Now it is settling the area with farmers from crowded Java, dooming New Guinea natives to marginal status and perhaps cultural extinction.

The Soviet Union exploits this tactic, too, with Russians playing the role of industrious immigrants. Russians poured into the Baltic states after World War II, for example, and especially into Latvia and Estonia.

Perhaps the most obscure example of a traditional group battling to preserve its way of life is taking place in Bangladesh. It involves the non-Bengali, non-Muslim people of the Chittagong hills. According to Professor Bernard Nietschmann of the University of California at Berkeley, who has followed the tragedy, as many as 180,000 people have died in clashes so far.

Then there are the Kurds of Turkey, Iraq and Iran; the Eritrians of Ethiopia; the Bahais of Iran ... well, the list could go on and on.

In the chord of anguish sounded by so many threatened, outnumbered people, the Tibetans count as no more than a single, poignant note. We couldn't do much for them even if we tried.

Still, in those rare moments when voices of a beleaguered people break through the humdrum news, you would think our government could carefully register its sympathy rather than callously dishonor their cause.

City unfairly drops rates for apartments

To the editor:

As should be known by every house dweller in Pampa, the City Commission voted at the Oct. 13 meeting to change the rates for the water, sewer, and refuse services provided by the city to apartment residents. This was the first vote — the second vote, which is required, is scheduled for 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Four commissioners voted for the rate change proposed by the apartment owners, and one voted against.

The most recent change for these services that all residences need and enjoy was in January.

Following are some numbers to demonstrate the cost of these services to an apartment dweller, compared with the cost to home dweller. Figures are taken from 1980 rates, present rates and the proposed new rates.

In July 1980, an apartment resident paid from $2.31 to $12.02 per month for the services, while those who lived in houses paid from $15.95 to $21.03 per month.

At present rates, an apartment resident pays from $10.64 to $21.51 per month, while the resident of a home pays from $15 to $24.02 per month.

Under the proposed lower rates for apartments, the cost of services to apartment residents would range from $5 to $15.29 per month.

A one-month bill for the apartment dweller was compared with the cost of identical services for a single-dwelling unit.

Under the proposed change, single-dwelling unit costs will not be lowered.

It is apparent from 1980 figures that there was an unreasonable difference in costs. At that time, ordinances were changed so that from 1980 to 1987, rates were made more equitable. January 1987 billing changes were fairly equal, with the apartment dwellers still having lower rates.

However, under the proposed new rates, it is apparent who will be paying for these services. The single-family unit would pay twice as much or more for water and sewer than an apartment dweller.

How will the city make up for this lost revenue? If you want the answer to this and other questions, attend the 6 p.m. Tuesday commission meeting at City Hall.

Water district bill for Roberts is topic

To the editor:

Property owners of Roberts County, take notice.

There is to be a public meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the community building in Miami to discuss the pending bill to form a water district for Roberts County.

If you, as a property owner, do not know what this bill covers, you should be at this meeting to learn exactly what it proposes.

The language of the bill will take away "all" of your rights to the control of any water, above or below ground, on your property — this bill includes city as well rural property. It also gives the district the right to buy and sell land or water as it sees fit at any time.

You should be there Tuesday night to learn for yourself how it will affect you.

We don't understand the delay in building it, since the voters approved it twice.

There are about 50 of us golfers here in Miami pulling for you to get with it.

Hey, rude drivers, stay out of spaces

To the editor:

This letter is for healthy but rude Pampa motorists. You know the type I'm referring to, the ones who park in the handicapped parking spaces.

It must make you feel good to know that you are taking up one of the parking spaces that someone less fortunate (and less healthy) really needs.

Maybe you're sleeping better for it. It doesn't bother you now, but stop and think: "There but for the grace of God, go I." Or better yet: Maybe someday you'll be in their place, and someone as uncaring as you will do unto you in the same manner.

I've lived in other states and feel lucky, because if you park in the handicapped parking, fire zone, etc., they tow your car off and fine you. I think that's what we need here.

I also think the handicapped people of this town need to unite and see what can be done about you caring, loving, concerned citizens.

Ask yourself, "How would I feel?"

Thank God you don't need handicapped parking. I do.

I hope with the holidays coming up, you'll give me a chance to do some shopping too, but you see, that's up to you because I need the handicapped space much worse than you.

I'd sure trade places with you anytime.

You also are lucky in another way, besides being healthy. Every year, we are charged $1 more for license plates for the handicapped than for regular tags. Sign me, "Handicapped and limited by my fellow citizens."

Halloween parties are wicked, demonic

To the editor:

It is hard for me to understand why so many of our churches have Halloween parties. Surely they realize they are participating in one of the seven holidays of the witches.

Halloween is their most important one, being the first day of their new year. All symbols and most of the costumes the children wear for this occasion are evil and demonic.

Banking conspiracy wants total control

To the editor:

Dear citizen: Now is the time to take an investigative look into one method of public financing we call "revenue bonds" for municipal, county, district, state and national needs or services.

We finance approximately 36 different types of public projects that depend upon population demand. Citizens who own real estate properties seem to forget that each accepted bond issue places another blanket mortgage on every parcel of real estate in the municipality.

There are millions of people in the U.S. today who are fooled into the belief that they have their homes paid for when, in reality, the municipality is holding liens on those homes in the form of improvement bonds of anywhere from two to 20 in number.

When the economy drops in your city, and the bonded interest cannot be paid, a municipality will fall into federal receivership, and your home becomes theirs. There are now many communities in the U.S. that have fallen into receivership.

In reality this is what makes one mad: The receiver puts up only the worthless paper, called bonds, and he will foreclose on delinquent interest. The real wealth involved is our interest and our homes.

The Federal Reserve System is always the accommodating receiver. The Federal Reserve System is owned by the First National of Chicago, the Chase Manhattan Corp., the Bankers Trust Co., the Morgan Guaranty and the Chemical Bank, all in New York City.

The F.R.S. is never audited or taxed by our government. The F.R.S. owns and controls the U.S. Treasury, the gold, silver, federal reserve notes (green stamps), and the mints that produce the medium of exchange. The U.S. has no money, but borrows it from the F.R.S. and pays interest while using it.

My purpose in writing this letter is to call your attention to that large number of amendments to the Texas Constitution that require bonded indebtedness, coming up for approval in the November election.

Texas does not need these amendments passed. Think about these federal requests, the Super Collider and the enlargement of the Texas prison system that is being motivated by the feds. More bonded indebtedness will be required on Texas real estate. The feds are motivating other states to do the same. It appears that the feds want more bonded indebtedness on the states' real property. Through indebtedness, they will gain control of the states through the manipulation of interest and the quantity of usable money that they issue for internal trade.

Industry and real estate may fall into receivership, as it is very evident in the news media. Today, in reality, the Federal Reserve System indirectly controls the nations of this world with the exception of three. Namely: Chile, Taiwan and the Philippines.

There is much judicial, congressional, and executive effort being made to change our Constitution into a powerless piece of paper as far as voters are concerned. The target date for a constitutional convention is set for 1989.

A big banker once wrote: Once the Federal Reserve is in control of the government of the U.S. through a friendly dictator, selected by the bankers, we can then boldly proclaim the cancellation of war debts and the transfer of the U.S. government into the bankers' hands.

Citizens, we must not let this happen to our beloved nation.

Lottery better than higher state taxes

To the editor:

Did you see on television the couple winning over $46 million?

They will receive $1.4 million each year for 25 years.

That is 3 percent interest for 25 years, then it goes to the state.

Hats off to the state officials who were smart enough to put this into effect.

It is too bad that those in Austin are not smart enough to do the same, instead of raising all kind of taxes to take from the working class, retirees and those of us who are on Social Security.

Also, how many millions are sent out of Texas each year to play the lotteries in the states that are smart enough to have them?

Everyone I have talked to would rather buy $10 in tickets than have the state take $1 in new taxes.

I want to compliment my student body members on the fine beginning they have made this year.

When teachers and parents join with the students and me with equal spirit, we'll really have something.

I'm sure the public can sense the new pride that I have helped build at Pampa High School. If parent groups and teachers will support me, "You ain't seen nothing yet!"

Free camping park paid off for Pampa

To the editor:

I live on Grand Lake, Afton, Okla., in the extreme northeast part of the state, and travel in my motor home throughout six states.

I was pleasantly surprised when I drove in to Pampa, about 5:30 p.m., Oct. 19, and found free overnight parking with water and electricity available.

What a wonderful gesture on the city's part to let travelers know they are welcome.

The people of Pampa may be pleased to know of a practice that is customary of travelers like me when they find such accommodations. I did that very thing.

I bought $40 in gasoline and $20 in groceries while in Pampa.

We welcome your residents to enjoy a vacation on Grand Lake in northeast Oklahoma, where they will find friendly people and have a great time.

St. Peter had wife; could he be pope?

To the editor:

In response to the letter by a Mr. Frank Bonner in last Sunday's Pampa News, I feel it necessary to present to your readers some very important scriptures pertaining to some statements in his letter.

1. He states that the pope is the chief pastor and visible head of the church and as such is entitled to be called "Holy Father." In Matthew 23:9, Jesus says, "Call no man your father upon this earth, for one is your father, which is in Heaven."

2. Mr. Bonner states that St. Peter was the first pope. I have been informed that a pope cannot be married. Please notice these scriptures, Matthew 8:14: "And when Jesus came into Peter's house, he saw his wife's mother sick of a fever."

According to the Bible, this action took place in A.D. 31. Therefore, it is only reasonable to believe that the writer of this epistle knew there would be a deviation of the fact that Peter was married.

Another thought at this time, with regards to Peter. He is the only apostle the Bible specifically names as having a mother-in-law. Other apostles had wives, but Peter was singled out.

Please be assured I have not written these lines because of enmity or hatred but because of a sincere desire to present just what the Bible says.

Place faith in God, not words of men

To the editor:

Having recently read a letter by Frank Bonner of Balko, Okla., I don't see how quotes from the Bible could be called irresponsible journalism.

This great country was founded by men who had a strong belief in the Bible. We have several choices — to place our faith in Catholic traditions and-or the Catholic Encyclopedia, church manuals and creed books written by men, or the Bible written by God.

I want to take the Bible as my authority.

I have no ill feelings toward Mr. Bonner or any other Catholic. We are dealing with eternal truths, not personalities. But his article in the Pampa paper on Oct. 11 was based on statements he made, no real authority.

Jesus stated in John 12:48 that his "word would judge us in the last day." And Christ is the only head of the church. In Colossians 1:18, "And he (Christ) is the head of the body, the church."

The word "pope" is not found in the Bible. When Cornelius bowed down to Peter in Acts 10:26, Peter said, "Stand up; I myself also am a man." Peter did not want reverence paid to him.

Friends, we can read about the church and when it started in the book of Acts. Read and study this great book. The Bible states, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God..." (II Timothy 2:15).

If peace comes to any nation it will be because the citizens will follow and obey God's word; it will not come because of one man. What do you place your faith in?

Shuffling coaches disables programs

To the editor:

What have we voters of Pampa done to ourselves now? When we elected our school board, it seemed we had chosen a competent group to oversee and govern the Pampa I.S.D. Now it seems that they are unwilling or unable to carry out these duties. They are even uninformed in some cases.

Late last year, the board made the decision to dismiss John Kendall as head football coach and appoint him as a full-time athletic director. At the time, the board said the two jobs should be separate because they were too much for one person to handle well in a school system this size. It was a good, correct decision.

While I was not a great fan of Mr. Kendall as a football coach, I knew him to be genuinely interested in each athlete. He was concerned with the athlete's physical well being, mental attitude and educational progress. He had proven himself to be evenhanded toward all sports, both boys' and girls.' He had expressed some great ideas to improve spirit, to involve the community with our young people and to build pride in our schools, town and athletes.

There were many things he had not been able to accomplish as an A.D. because of time limitations imposed by being head football coach. Mr. Kendall seemed to be an outstanding choice for our new athletic director.

Kendall worked hard to help find the right person to become the new head football coach. He wanted to see the citizens of Pampa have what they wanted — a coach who would develop a competitive football team. He even may have found the man who could turn the football program around. Everything was great — right?

Not so!!

About the time school started, several ugly things began to surface. First the new football coach decided that he wanted to be A.D. He and the superintendent put their heads together and found a mutually satisfying solution. Make Dennis Cavalier A.D., abolish the assistant A.D. job, and, bingo — Cavalier gets what he wants and Dr. Griffith has more funds to spend elsewhere.

Suddenly Mike Lopez and Gary Cornelsen are no longer boys' football coaches. These men had proven that they could coach well. They were well liked and respected by the boys. Was this a threat to Dennis Cavalier?

The girls' track teams have done extremely well the last few years under head coach Cornelsen and assistant coach Lopez. The boys' team has not been as outstanding, but they did receive 38 points at the regional meet last year.

Cornelson has been relieved of his duties as boys' head track coach and assigned a class to teach during the boys' athletic period. Mike Shklar is supposedly going to be the new boys' head track coach.

When all this came to light, a friend of mine asked two school board members if Cornelsen had really been relieved as head track coach and assigned classes to teach during the boys' athletic period. Neither of them knew anything about it and after "looking into it," seemed utterly helpless to correct the situation. Aren't they responsible for personnel assignments and, if not, why not?

Cavalier was at his last post for six years. He was never made A.D. there. Is it possible the people of Oklahoma elect school boards that do not cave in to all demands.

Were they concerned that the "coaches" for in-season sports (i.e. cross-country track) would be coaching an off-season sport during the boys' athletic period and leaving a team unsupervised and uncoached? Isn't cross country as important to those team members as basketball? How about golf not being able to practice during the athletic period? Should off-season anything take precedence over any in-season sport?

What happened to respect for seniority and loyalty. Why didn't our school board question the wisdom of making an unknown our A.D. or the justice of taking the job from one who had proven himself to be a worthy A.D.?

I have not written this letter before now because I thought the media would surely pick up on some of these things, but it seems that everything has been kept very quiet — almost secret.

My fear that we will ultimately lose some really excellent coaches over this mess prompts me to write. We do not have such an abundance of excellence in our school system that we can afford to lose men our young people admire, respect and like.

Those who are the most affected by these changes won't need to look for jobs elsewhere. Schools wanting to develop an outstanding track program will seek these men out.

There may be other sports and coaches affected that I do not know about. This year, cross country, golf and the above mentioned personnel pushed aside. What sports and people will be the targets next year? Will every student become a one-sport athlete?

In order to protect my sources and my family I am asking that my name be withheld.

AIDS policy doesn't protect our schools

To the editor:

Would it be possible to change our new school policy regarding AIDS?

As a medical person, I have been concerned about some medical documentation I have read recently. The medical journal, The Lancet, Sept. 28, 1985, carried a report by top scientists at the Pasteur Institute in France that "the agent, causing AIDS, has been isolated from body fluids (blood, semen, saliva, tears). Only a slight decrease is noted with a delay in the virus production indicating a loss of few infectious viral particles after seven days at room temperature. To prevent possible contamination by viral particles in dry or liquid form, hygiene should be increased in the general population. Indeed, these data strongly support the use of disinfectants found to be effective against the AIDS agent."

Associated Press released on Oct. 14, 1985, the Centers for Disease Control guidelines, which stated infected AIDS people should be kept "in a more restricted environment."

Dr. Richarad Restak, writing in The Miami Herald, argued that some isolation of AIDS patients is necessary to protect the public health. We do not know all the ways the virus is spread and until we do, he said, AIDS patients should be barred from schools, certain jobs, and other activities.

Dr. James Curran, a Harvard health official, has said in USA Today, Nov. 4, 1985, "This is a plague. I see nothing wrong with quarantine."

Children with much milder contagious diseases and conditions (measles, chicken pox, impetigo, and lice) are kept out of school. Why not children with AIDS?

Little children bite, share food and school supplies, and are careless in the bathroom. Any of these has the potential for communicating AIDS.

The school district should change its policy, as I feel the present one would be extremely dangerous to our community.

Why did Bentsen go against Judge Bork?

To the editor:

The citizens of the state of Texas need to reflect upon the fairness of the recent Bork confirmation hearings by the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee.

Is it right for Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., who has admitted to plagiarism, to have sat in judgment upon Judge Bork, whose honesty of speech and honor of actions have been acks8ef its mosll unbiased observers?

Is it right for Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., who fled the scene of his auto accident at Chappaquidick, leaving a drowning woman in his car unreported for 10 hours, to have sat in judgment upon Judge Bork, questioning the judge's commitment to women's rights?

And is it right for Sen. Pat Leahy, D-Vermont; who was recently removed from the Senate Intelligence Committee for leaking classified national security information to the press, to have sat in judgment upon Judge Bork's ethics?

There is something rotten in Washington when senators with disreputable morals, such as Biden, Kennedy and Leahy, can use their positions of power to destroy Judge Bork's nomination simply because they do not want another conservative jurist on the U.S. Supreme Court. Considering their past actions, Biden's, Kennedy's and Leahy's demagoguery was to be expected. But why would our U.S. senator, Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who claims to be a moderate conservative, align himself with the ultra-left wing of the Democratic Party?

Shultz says summit not required

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States will sign a treaty with the Soviet Union to ban intermediate-range nuclear weapons even without a superpower summit, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Saturday.

"I think it would be good to have it at a summit, but if there isn't a summit to do it in a timely fashion, we'll look for some other way to do it," Shultz told a news conference after briefing NATO foreign ministers on his talks Thursday and Friday with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Friday unexpectedly refused to set a date for a summit meeting with President Reagan at which the leaders had planned to sign a nuclear missile accord.

Shultz said the summit preparations had fallen apart over Gorbachev's objections to Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative to build a space-based defense against missiles, commonly called "Star Wars."

Reagan, who sees SDI as a key to ridding the world of nuclear weapons, said Friday he would not agree to bargain it away. The Soviets — and the program's critics in the U.S. — say the project could lead to an arms race in space.

America's NATO allies expressed disappointment at the breakdown in summit planning, but they said a U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms agreement appeared likely by year's end.

Hans Van Den Broek, the Dutch foreign minister, told reporters he found it "hard to understand" why Gorbachev would balk at setting a summit date, since the Soviets had said last month that both sides were commited to holding the meeting before the end of the year.

"It's obviously something of a disappointment," said British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe. He added, however, that he believed a final agreement on removing the medium-range missiles was "almost in the bag."

Said the Belgian foreign minister, Leo Tindemans: "I have the impression that Shultz wants an agreement on the missiles as soon as possible, and I have no doubt that the Soviets are willing."

Shultz said he didn't think that the Soviet Union would insist on a "Star Wars" compromise before signing a nearly completed nuclear arms deal.

Shultz said he did not know what Moscow's next move might be, but that he believed Gorbachev still wanted a summit and a treaty eliminating the superpowers' intermediate-range nuclear missiles. The missiles, with a range of 315 to 3,125 miles, are based mostly in Europe.

Shultz said an agreement on the medium-range missiles could be completed in "a matter of weeks."

For the Europeans, the summit preparations are of less immediate importance than the completion of the missile treaty. More than 300 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles are deployed in Britain, Belgium, West Germany and Italy, and more are scheduled to be installed over the next year unless the superpowers reach agreement on a ban.

Shultz said the United States could not accept a Soviet proposal — announced by the Soviet news agency Tass after Shultz left Moscow — for a moratorium starting Nov. 1 on production and deployment of medium-range missiles.

He was supported by other NATO ministers.

Chinese leaders plot future

BEIJING (AP) — Top leaders gathered Saturday and made final arrangements for a Communist Party meeting expected to plot China's future by reaffirming Deng Xiaoping's economic reforms and bringing younger leaders to power.

Nearly 2,000 delegates, representing regional party organizations, will pack the Great Hall of the People today for the start of the 13th National Communist Party Congress. With Deng presiding, the congress will begin with a report from premier and acting party chief Zhao Ziyang.

The first party congress was held in 1921 when Mao Tse-tung and 11 other young leftists met secretly. The last congress met in 1982.

Previous meetings were held in secret with details leaking out days later.

Separate attacks blast Persian Gulf targets

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An explosion wrecked the empty offices of Pan Am's sales agent in Kuwait Saturday afternoon. Earlier, an Iranian speedboat attacked a Greek-owned tanker in the southern Persian Gulf.

The ground-floor offices of Al Gharabally Travel in Kuwait city were destroyed, but no one was hurt. Al Gharabally is Pan Am's exclusive agent in the emirate.

Gulf-based shipping sources said the tanker, the Prosperventure 1, was set ablaze but there were no injuries.

Kuwait has been the scene of a series of bombings against U.S., French and Kuwaiti installations in the past four years. The sabotage has been blamed on pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists, some of whom have been sentenced to death, but not executed.

The statement said "thousands" of suicide bombers had been readied for the attacks, which would be patterned after the bombings four years ago Friday of the headquarters the U.S. Marines and French paratroopers in Beirut. Those blasts killed 241 Americans and 58 Frenchmen.

In Washington, the State Department said Friday that U.S. forces in the gulf were taking measures to guard against suicide bombings. It said Monday's U.S. attack on Iranian oil platforms had increased the likelihood of terrorist attacks against U.S. citizens and facilities.

In the southern gulf, the Iranian speedboat hit the 227,333-ton Greek ship with rocket-propelled grenades and machine gun fire off the coast of Dubai, said the shipping sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The ship was loaded with naphtha, a highly flammable petrothe Prosperventure 1 was the first ship Iran has attacked since hitting two tankers off Kuwait and a Kuwaiti oil terminal with Chinese-made Silkworm missiles in the past 10 days.

Those attacks prompted Kuwait to set up missile batteries north of its oil terminals to guard against further Iranian missile attacks.

Indian troops attack rebels

JAFFNA, Sri Lanka (AP) — Automatic rifle fire crackled and mines exploded around Indian-controlled Jaffna Fort, as Indian soldiers tried to tighten their grip on Jaffna city, a Tamil rebel stronghold in northern Sri Lanka.

The fighting was observed Friday by the first reporters allowed to visit the battlefield since Indian soldiers began fighting the rebels 15 days ago.

"The war is still on. We still have to mop it up," said Kulwant Singh, acting commander of Indian forces in Sri Lanka. "There is a lot of sniping going on by them (the rebels) and there are mines in many places."

In Colombo, 186 miles south of Jaffna, Sri Lankan military sources today said fighters of the dominant Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam militia had been ordered to attack Jaffna from positions northwest of the city.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Tiger leader Velupillai Prabhakaran issued the order himself in Jaffna by radio.

Indian troops have been trying to capture Jaffna, the Tigers' main stronghold, since October 10 in an effort to enforce a peace pact aimed at ending the rebels' 4-year-old war for a separate Tamil nation.

Market plunge shakes world

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — The stock market jolted the world this past week with a crash that left Wall Street in disarray and raised urgent questions about the future of the economy.

Despite assurances from the Reagan administration that there was little or nothing to worry about, suddenly a lot of people were worried.

To older Americans, the crash of 1987 stirred memories of the crash that preceded the Great Depression. To youthful Harvard MBAs who had never seen a bear market, there was disbelief, and dread that future affluence could be wiped out.

The market stabilized by week's end, helped by shortened hours, limitations on computer-assisted trading, some positive economic signals from Washington and just pure exhaustion. But few traders said the crisis was over.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed Friday at 1,950.76 points, for a record weekly loss of 295.98 points or 13.17 percent, eclipsing the previous record of 235.48 points or 9.49 percent set the week before.

Among broader market indicators, the New York Stock Exchange index of all listed issues closed at 139.22 for a weekly loss of 19.91, and the American Stock Exchange market value index closed at 264.21 for a weekly loss of 68.34.

The average NYSE daily volume totaled a record 459.90 million shares, more than double the previous record of 224.75 million a week earlier.

Monday: The Dow plummeted 508.32 points or 22.6 percent, wiping out $500 billion in wealth and easily eclipsing the notorious 12.8 percent drop of Oct. 28, 1929, that heralded the Great Depression.

Frenzied New York Stock Exchange trading reached 604.80 million shares, nearly double the prior record of 338.5 million shares set the previous Friday, when the Dow average plunged a then-record of 108.35 points. NYSE Chairman John Phelan called it "the nearest thing to a meltdown I ever want to see."

Tuesday: The Dow rebounded, but the broader market was battered. The Dow average closed up a record 102.27 points at 1,841.01, and NYSE volume hit a new record of 608.12 million shares.

In Washington, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan attempted to soothe the market by indicating a switch to a looser money policy.

Wednesday: Stocks recovered on a much broader front, recouping more than half the ground lost Monday and prompting Reagan to say the crisis appeared to be over. The Dow average soared 186.84 points to 2,027.85, far exceeding the one-day record gain set Tuesday.

Thursday: The market retreated sharply again. The Dow skidded 77.42 points to 1,950.43.

Market leaders resticted trading hours to ease an order backlog and limit use of computerized trading to minimize volatility.

Friday: Stocks fell again, but the slide waned as exhausted traders welcomed news about low inflation and strong economic growth. The Dow ended the day up 0.33 points to 1,950.77.

All exchanges closed two hours early.

Reagan seeks nominee after defeat of Bork

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some senators say the fight over Robert H. Bork's Supreme Court nomination not only sank Bork but also changed forever the way the Senate judges nominees for the high court. They just can't agree if that is good or bad.

"We may waltz around this Maypole one more time," predicted Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., a Bork supporter who said the president's substitute nominee likely will be "a philosophical soulmate of Judge Bork."

Reagan administration sources said the president could name a new nominee for the vacant high court seat as soon as Monday.

McConnell, although saying he would prefer to consider only a nominee's competence, achievement, integrity and temperament, contended that Bork's ordeal proves "the temptation to go for the political raw meat is just too great."

"I will treat judicial philosophy as relevant and adopt the new standard established in this proceeding, and will apply it prospectively," McConnell said before Friday's 58-42 rejection of Bork.

Other senators voiced concern over what McConnell called a "new Senate rule."

"I would hope we would resolve that we are never going to let this kind of thing happen again ... (having) nominees pinned down in advance on their opinions on matters that might come before the court," Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said.

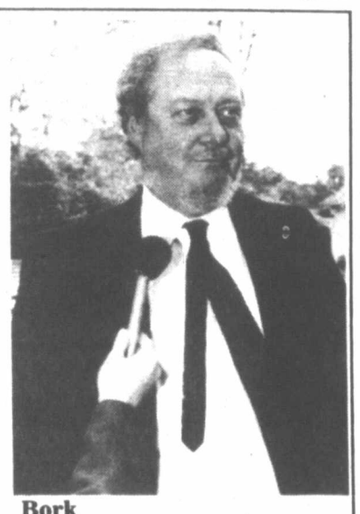

But a key Bork opponent, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said Reagan would be repeating a mistake by naming another nominee "not in the mainstream."

"This Senate is not going to buckle under," DeConcini said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, decried the anti-Bork campaign waged by civil rights and women's groups, and warned, "There's going to be outright warfare" if those groups "try to pull this on the next one."

And Sen. William Roth, R-Del., said he was troubled by the specific questions put to Bork in his record five days before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"It is not the proper role of the Senate to dictate how particular cases will be determined as a prerequsite of confirmation," Roth said.

Bork

But Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the Judiciary Committee's chairman, portrayed new concerns about the Senate's role in the confirmation process as "drivel."

"This is nothing new. We are doing our job," Biden said during the 25 hours of Senate debate that preceded Friday's vote. "When the president sets ideology and impact on the court as his rationale, the Senate has done the same."

Computer sabotaged

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — A disgruntled executive faces up to 15 years in prison for freezing the files of the company where he worked with a secret password.

A jury deliberated two hours Thursday before convicting George C. Coker Jr., 38, of extortion and denying computer access with intent to defraud. Sentencing was set for Nov. 23.

Coker punched in "WGACA" in May at Golden Eagle Group Inc. where he worked as chief financial officer, and then quit in a pay dispute.

Federal prisons to isolate 'predatory' AIDS inmates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal inmates who test positive for exposure to the AIDS virus and who display "predatory or promiscuous behavior" will be isolated from the general prison population, the Justice Department says.

The department on Friday also released statistics showing that nearly 500 prison inmates, about 3 percent of those tested under a pilot program, were found to have AIDS antibodies, indicating exposure to the virus.

In a news release, the Justice Department said the government will launch a new five-part, mandatory AIDS-testing program, but that plan drew immediate criticism from a prisoners' rights group.

As of this week, 16,372 federal prisoners had been tested for the deadly AIDS virus under a program in the prison system that began June 15. Of that number, 494 or 3 percent testified positive for exposure to the virus, the government reported. There currently are 31 cases of inmates with end-stage AIDS in the federal prison system, out of a population of more than 44,000.

Among those who will be tested under the new program are those "who have exhibited predatory or promiscuous behavior," said the statement.

Inmates in that category "who test positive for the AIDS virus will be separated from the general inmate population," the statement added.

The new policy took effect immediprison's general population, said Patricia Sledge, a bureau of prisons spokeswoman.

Inmates who exhibit predatory behavior are those known to rape other inmates, she said.

"At this point, we estimate that this group of inmates would represent less than 1 percent of the federal prison population," Ms. Sledge said.

THE DOCTRINE OF CHRIST

"Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: For he that biddeth him god speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (2 John 9-11.) The word "doctrine" means "teaching, process of teaching or thing taught". It is a word which appears several times in the New Testament with reference to the gospel of Christ (2 Timothy 3:16; Romans 6:17; I Timothy 1:3; 4:13; 4:16; Titus 2:7; etc.) Jesus said His words would be the standard of judgment in the last day (John 12:48.) Therefore, we can understand the seriousness of preaching or teaching anything other than, or a perversion of, the doctrine of Christ.

The doctrine of Christ involves more than just projecting that He is the Son of God. It involves everything that is comprehended in His Deity. By virtue of the fact that He is the Son of God, He is the authority in religion, the one who legislates and delivers His law (Psalms 45:6-7; Isaiah 11:1-5; Matthew 28:18-20; James 4:12.) Jesus Christ is the absolute monarch, the Lord of Lords and King of Kings (I Timothy 6:15-16.)

The doctrine of Christ is the New Testament, or convenant rendered effective by His death (Hebrews 9:16-17.) The word "covenant" means "a disposition of property or will." Therefore, the New Testament of Jesus Christ is simply the recording of the will of Christ, the terms or conditions which must be met if the benefits contained therein are to be derived.

When Jesus commissioned His apostles to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature", He was simply telling them to explain to the world the terms or conditions of His will or testament. Those who believed in His Deity and met the conditions of repentance, confession and baptism and the promise of eternal salvation, provided they lived faithful in His service until death (Mark 16:15-16; Acts 2:38; Romans 10:10; I Corinthians 15:58.)

AFL-CIO opens arms to teamsters

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With virtually no opposition in sight among the nation's top labor leaders, the AFL-CIO is preparing to welcome the 1.6 million Teamsters back into the fold, 30 years after expelling them as an outlaw union.

The 89-union labor federation's policy-setting executive council was scheduled to vote in a closed-door meeting today on Teamsters President Jackie Presser's request Thursday to rejoin the AFL-CIO.

Legal experts and law enforcement officials told The New York Times that a return by the Teamsters could give the union the political muscle to undercut an effort by the government to take it over and rid it of alleged mob influence.

The Teamsters are "basically trying to buy the AFL-CIO's support and get them out in front, running interference," Arthur Fox, a Washington lawyer who has represented dissident Teamsters, said Friday.

A favorable vote was considered a foregone conclusion. Most of the 35 labor leaders on the council and several other union presidents have reveled during the past two days at the prospect of instantly bolstering the AFL-CIO's membership by more than 12 percent after seeing its numbers erode a like amount since 1975.

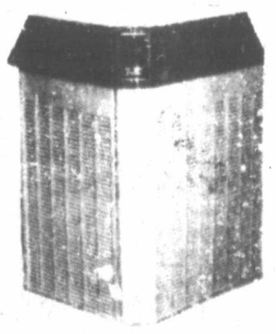

"I'm glad to see that the AFL-CIO finally saw the light, particularly in the climate that we face," said Mo Biller, president of the 255,000-member American Postal Workers Union. "They're the largest, strongest union in the country and they belong here."

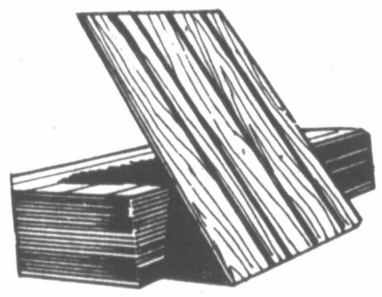

The only possible opposition might come from the United Auto Workers union, which has an elaborate mechanism of internal controls aimed at preventing abuses, several officials said.

Twins pound Cards 11-5

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Kent Hrbek's grand slam highlighted a 15-hit barrage as the Minnesota Twins came home to the Dome and pounded the St. Louis Cardinals 11-5 Saturday, forcing the World Series to a seventh game.

The Twins, who managed just five runs and 18 hits in losing three straight games in the brisk weather at St. Louis, came in from the cold to chill the Cardinals.

Don Baylor's two-run homer keyed a four-run rally in the fifth inning that knocked out John Tudor and put Minnesota ahead 6-5, and Hrbek's two-out slam in the sixth capped the comeback. The Twins joined the 1956 New York Yankees as the only teams to hit two grand slams in a series. Dan Gladden slammed one for the Twins in Game 1.

Kirby Puckett matched his total hits in the first five games, going four for four with four runs scored, an RBI, a walk and a stolen base. Tom Brunansky's RBI grounder in the eighth accounted for the Twins' final run.

"There's been a lot of talk about me and Kirby," Hrbek said of the pair's lack of production. "Don's homer lifted us."

The home team has won the first six games. There has never been a World Series in which the home team won each game. The Twins' Metrodome record of 61-25, including 5-0 in the postseason, is the best home mark in baseball. St. Louis was the top road team in the majors.

Tudor, working on three days' rest for the first time this year as the Cardinals sought to win their 10th championship, took a 5-2 lead into the bottom of the fifth. But the demons that haunted them in 1985 came back.

Two years ago, St. Louis lost Game 6 of the World Series on umpire Don Denkinger's bad call, and then Tudor was shelled in Game 7 by the Kansas City Royals.

Neither Tudor nor Les Straker, who dueled through five scorless innings in Game 3, had it in the first World Series day game since 1984.

Still, it seemed the Cardinals would have enough to win until they made the mistake of getting into a slugfest with the Twins.

Kirby Puckett's third single, an RBI double by Gary Gaetti and Baylor's home run made it 5-5. Baylor connected for his first homer since hitting a grand slam against Minnesota on Aug. 23 while with Boston, and underscored the importance of the designated hitter in the Twins' attack. Baylor's blast was the first by an American League DH since Reggie Jackson in 1978.

Tom Brunansky followed the homer with a single that chased Tudor, who gave up six runs on 11 hits in four-plus innings. Brunansky later slid home safely on Steve Lombardozzi's third straight hit, this off Ricky Horton.

Dan Schatzeder, who relieved Straker in the fourth, got the victory, which was ensured when Hrbek homered in the sixth.

A single by Greg Gagne and two walks loaded the bases with two outs. Herzog brought in left-handed Ken Dayley, who had not allowed a run in 20 1-3 postseason innings, to face Hrbek, who batted only .216 against lefties this year.

Hrbek, just 3-for-20 in the playoffs and 4-for-20 in the Series, redeemed himself on Dayley's first pitch. He sent a 439-foot shot to straightaway center field and celebrated with both arms over his head as he rounded the bases to the waves of the Homer Hankies in the record crowd of 55,293.

Juan Berenguer, unable to protect a lead for Straker in Game 3, shut out St. Louis on three hits over three innings and Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth.

Puckett, the Twins' catalyst who was 4-for-20 in the previous five games, led off by lining the first pitch for his third straight single. Gaetti then sent the third pitch into the left-field corner for an RBI double.

Cardinals pitching coach Mike Roarke came out as Tudor kicked at the mound, seeming to sense trouble. It came suddenly when Baylor launched the first pitch 403 feet into the left-field stands. The home run created a 5-5 tie, a scramble in the seats for the ball, and pandemonium inside the Metrodome.

Brunansky followed with a first-pitch single and Tudor was out, Horton in. With one out, Brunansky took second as Tim Laudner grounded out on a hit-and-run.

Cornelsen out as boys' track coach

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

Gary Cornelsen's spirits were sagging when he first learned of his ouster as head coach of the Pampa High boys' track team.

However, the veteran coach has learned to live with the decision, which was made at the beginning of the school year by PHS head football coach - Athletic Director Dennis Cavalier.

"I'll admit I was bitter and disappointed at first, but I've learned to accept the decision," Cornelsen said. "Who knows? Maybe it will take the pressure off me and I'll be able to spend more time with the girls' team."

Cornelsen retains his title as head girls' track coach, a position he has held since 1983. He led the Lady Harvesters to the Class 4A state championship in 1986 and the state runnersup title in 1987.

Cornelsen said he went through the proper channels — first to principal Oran Chappell and then Superintendent Harry Griffith — to investigate his release as boys' coach.

"They were firm in standing by Cavalier's decision," Cornelsen said.

Chappell said a new concept is being tried where more coaches will be made available for the track program.

"We feel everything is going to work out well. We've got six coaches now where we just had two," he added.

Cavalier said he relieved Cornelsen as head of the boys' team to add more flexibility to both boys' and girls' programs. He said Mike Lopez, an assistant under Cornelsen, will continue his previous duties as Cavalier plans to add more coaches to the track staff.

"Each coach has an area of expertise, which will be a benefit to both programs," Cavalier said.

Cavalier denied he was trying to turn the program over completely to his football assistants.

"I don't know what else I can say, other than what I've told you," he said.

Other coaches added to the track program include Sam Porter, Max Plunk and Ernie Manning, all members of Cavalier's football coaching staff. Porter has assisted with the track program in the past.

"We're going to try to continue what Pampa has done with the boys' program in the past." Shklar said. "It will be three head coaches, more or less, which is the way I like to look at it."

Shklar, a Kiowa, Kans. native, has coached track for the past 12 years at various schools.

"We've got three coaches in the girls' program and three in the boys' program," Cavalier said. "We want to combine their specialities, which will make for a better program."

Under Cornelsen, the Harvesters placed third in district last year for their best finish since 1976.

"One of my main concerns was that the kids might think I was bailing out on them. I was working hard with them last year and they were responding." Cornelsen said. "But like I said before, maybe it will be best for both programs."

Harvesters comes close to victory

By L.D. STRATE

LEVELLAND — For 42 minutes and four seconds, Pampa had the winning edge.

Levelland, however, refused to bow under and struck for a pair of touchdowns in the final six minutes to rally past the Harvesters, 28-17, Friday night in a District 1-4A game.

For the victory-hungry Harvesters, it was the closest they'd come to a win in seven outings this season. For Levelland Coach Gene Mayfield, his team's heroics near the end had the veteran coach breathing a sigh of relief.

"I tell you, I was worried. I thought we were in trouble because Pampa had shut down our run pretty good all night," Mayfield said. "We were able to get it down the field on them when we needed to the most."

It wasn't actually a running play, but a clutch pass reception by Dennis Cunningham that put the Lobos in position for the winning score after fullback David Fields had put Pampa in front 17-14 for the first time with 10:40 remaining.

After Fields' score, the Harvesters attempted an on-sides kick, but the Lobos' Dustin Humphreys covered on the Levelland 37. Three plays later, quarterback Teddy Latham fired a 22-yard pass to Cunningham, who outleaped defensive back Michael Bradshaw to haul in the catch on the Lobos' 18. With a first down to work with, the Lobos marched to score in five plays with Jay Fortner going in from four yards out on an end sweep. Benny Rodriquez booted the third of his four PATs with 6:56 left to put Levelland on top to stay 21-17.

Levelland wasn't quite finished though and added an insurance TD after Pampa stalled out on the Lobo 44. The Lobos did it quickly as Patrick Dawn broke a tackle on a sweep and outran the Harvester secondary 49 yards to the end zone.

Pampa made a valiant effort to get back into the game on its last possession, but a 15-yard holding penalty cost the Harvesters valuable yardage. After Brandon McDonald returned Levelland's kickoff 44 yards to midfield, quarterback Dustin Miller guided the Harvesters into Lobo territory on a pair of first-down passes to Robert Lopez. However, Miller's 18-yard pass to Jason Garren was called back because of a holding penalty. Minus the infraction, Pampa would have been at Levelland's six-yard stripe. Pampa could move only seven yards on the next four plays, and Levelland took control with time running out.

Statistics belied the final score. Pampa had the edge in first downs 17-13 and also led in total yardage 291-271 while spending most of the second half in Levelland territory.

"They say statistics are for the teams who lose, but we're improving and that elusive first win may be just around the corner," said Pampa Coach Dennis Cavalier. "The last three weeks, we've put ourselves into position to win a game. "This is the longest we've been in a game and still had time to score and be ahead."

Leveland used a fumble recovery and a 15-yard penalty to help set up a pair of first-half TD passes from Teddy Latham to Todd Latham. Sandwiched in between was a 29-yard field goal by Pampa's Shannon Cook as Levelland went into intermission leading 14-3.

Mayfield felt his lack of preparation for Pampa's ground game led to the Harvesters' statistical edge.

"I thought they would throw more," Mayfield said.
"I have to give Pampa credit. They ran the ball well on us.

Fields, who has been bothered by injuries since the second game of the season, appeared to be at full strength as the 200-pound junior led all rushers with 150 yards on 27 carries.

"David (Fields) not only gained some tough yardage, but he was a good blocker for our other backs," Cavalier said.

In the passing department, Miller completed seven of 17 passes for 74 yards. Robert Perez was the leading receiver with three catches for 43 yards. Troy Owens caught two for 17 yards.

Fields' one-yard TD plunge, which gave Pampa the lead, came at the end of the longest scoring drive (14 plays, 69 yards) for either team. Pampa reeled off six first downs on the drive and stayed on the ground for all but one play, a 16-yard pass from Miller to Bradshaw for a first down on the Lobo 14. Fields then broke two tackles on a nine-yard run up the middle, and three plays later plunged over the goalline.

It was sophomore James Bybee who gave the Harvesters their first TD on a four-yard plunge with 7:42 to go in the third quarter. Garren's conversion pass to Chris Wilson pulled Pampa within 11-14.

Bybee's score was set up when teammate Brad Sokolosky recovered Teddy Latham's fumble on the Lobo 21.

Bybee had picked up 20 yards on six carries when he left the game with an injury at the end of the third quarter.

"James is a good, little runner and he served us well in a situation where it did the team the most good," Cavalier said. "He has a hip pointer and hopefully he won't be out too long. It's a painful type of injury, but it's not serious."

Cavalier had several JV players suited up since the Threshers had an open date this week.

ODDS AND ENDS....

Larry Bird doesn't take his basketball skills for granted. He reported to the Boston Celtics rookie camp to get his aging body ready for another strenuous NBA season. He arrived with short hair, sans mustache, and a missing 20 pounds which allows him to again dunk the ball with two hands. "That's scary!" says Detroit Coach Chuck Daly. It is also a lesson on what athletic greatness demands of an individual.

DID YOU KNOW THAT this year marks the 20th anniversary of the first installation of Astro-Turf on a collegiate gridiron? It was at Indiana State University in Terre Haute, Bird's alma mater and Missouri Valley Conference member. Today, most professional athletes abhor the phony grass surfaces that once were a sign of athletic leadership among teams and schools. The surfaces are being blamed for increasing injuries to appendages, abbreviating careers.

Which takes us to the brouhaha between West Texas State and Canyon Independent School District, a District 1-4A member. The university is attempting to coerce that district's taxpayers into assisting with a playing surface renovation at Kimbrough Stadium that could cost them upwards of a quarter million tax dollars. The school claims that with the opening of a second high school in the CISD, the field will be unable to handle that kind of game numbers.

Best we can figure, between the two high schools and the Div. II Lone Star Conference team, the likelihood is there wouldn't be but 15 games a year on the field. Dick Bivins Stadium in Amarillo has no problem maintaining solid surfacing for an average of 20 home games per year by the four Amarillo high schools. In addition, that surface, unlike Kimbrough Stadium, gets trampled by usually two high school bands every home game, the entire Region I marching band competition, participants in track meets and various other activities.

One would think that somewhere in the University's School of Agriculture there is a knowledgeable instructor who can tell authorities how to grow grass that can witnstand that limited number of football contests. The last time I broadcasted a game at old Cobb Stadium in Dallas it was the 68th game played on that sound surface that season! And if the Pampa field can't handle both football and soccer, perhaps the County Agent's office, headed by the president of the school board, can assist with maintenance.

If not, call Ed Wilson, head of grounds and maintenance for the Amarillo athletic department, and he'll handle it.

CARLETON 37, ST. OLAF 18. The score jumped out of the game results column. It's like Rice playing Houston, Hardin-Simmons against Abilene Christian...a crosstown rivalry. And with only 12,000 population, the contest is a big thing in frigid Northfield, Minn. In fact, the biggest thing since the James-Younger Gang stormed the First National Bank.

My sister having attended St. Olaf, one of the nation's truly beautiful small college campuses, it was mandatory to attend Homecoming for the Oles four straight late November weekends in the late 1930s. That was, friends, before thermal underwear, hand heaters, and all the modern-day equipment developed by our military, which makes watching football in arctic conditions enjoyable. I can't remember who won any of the Homecoming games...only the cold!! That game result score brought shivers.

WHILE WE'RE ON THAT part of the map, did you know that the NFL Players Union was started by members of the 1956 Green Bay Packers? It started because several players asked management to provide clean, dry uniforms, socks and other clothing for each two-a-day workout. Request denied...and in December, at a meeting in New York, the Association was organized, quickly shifting focus to establishment of a pension and injury insurance. First president was Billy Howton, Packer star receiver who personally led Plainview to a 20-19 come-from-behind victory over the Harvesters in 1947 prior to enrolling at Rice.

SPEAKING OF LEADERSHIP, more and more we hear complaints from coaches that no player steps forward to become a team leader. It is not the fault of the young athlete. The blame can be placed on the face in the mirror when the coach shaves each day.

Writing in the Chronicle of Higher Education, Athletic Director Donald Kagan of Yale University recognizes the growing problem in high school and collegiate athletics:

"In football and basketball, we've taken the game away from the kids. Take basketball. Timesout should be banned in the last two minutes. Right now, with the excessive timesout, the coach is fine-tuning everything that happens out there.

"The players are not allowed to decide what to do, or to make a mistake. Athletics are supposed to be an act of mind as well as body, to be able to think clearly and sharply. Now, they (athletes) just become fodder, machinery that the coach then just winds up and sends out there.

"The thinking seems to be that the athletes will do less well than the coach would have them do. It would be as though I teach my students (as a professor of classics), and then I help them answer the questions. What kind of teaching is that? I want to train them so they can answer the questions themselves. And possibly — and this is the dream of a teacher — better than I do."

When was the last time a quarterback was allowed to select his own plays, a defensive player choose his own defenses, a team allowed to decide whether to punt or try for it on fourth down, go for one or two on extra points?

Leadership development is totally stifled and not permitted unless judged by the hardest worker in the weight room or runner of wind sprints. Leadership also includes making decisions, and correct ones. Football, and other sports, are no longer the teaching tool long claimed as coaches refuse to trust young judgements as was permitted in years past. Thus, the value of team sports is greatly reduced.

A celebration in White Deer: Panthers get bell rung 21-14

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

WHITE DEER — Over the past several weeks, the White Deer Bucks have been making noise that they are for real.

Friday night, the Bucks roared their loudest roar of the season and won their biggest game in years, downing Panhandle 21-14 in the battle for Carson County.

From the beginning, the game promised to be a no-holds-barred, blood and guts battle to the very end.

Those who came were not disappointed.

Tied at 7-7 as the third quarter began, the momentum was in Panhandle's favor until one play turned the entire framework of the game around.

With 8:49 elapsed in the second half, the Panthers faced a second and ten situation from their own 20 yd line.

Panhandle quarterback Tommy Kotara dropped back six yards and looked desparately for a receiver.

Instead of finding that receiver, what Kotara looked at was the glaring eyeballs of a fast approaching Billy Annis, White Deer's 195-pound senior defensive lineman.

When Kotara's arm cocked back for a pass, Annis' arms came up and deflected the would-be pass into the hands of Buck senior defensive end Bryan Pierce.

Pierce was able to grab the ball, hold it and run 14 yards for the score.

That crucial turnover put the Bucks ahead to stay 21-14.

"That was awfully fortunate for us," an elated White Deer head coach Windy Williams said following the game. "We just put lots of pressure on the quarterback all night. That took the air out of 'em. It took away their intensity. I don't think the momentum ever made a big shift in the ball game until then. When that happened, it made the big swing."

It was the first time in five years that the Bucks were able to come away with a win in the intra-county affair. White Deer shocked Panhandle 24-0 in 1982.

Aside from Waitman's run, Buck quarterback Bart Thomas was the igniter of the WD offense.

Thomas clawed and fought for yardage all night and ended the evening with 77 yards on 22 carries.

The phenomenal aspect of Thomas' game, though, was his third down conversion totals. Thomas was almost single-handedly responsible for seven last chance conversions on runs of 8, 7, 7, 14, 6, 7 and 15 yards.

A holding penalty nullified Thomas' most impressive run of the evening as the 160-pound junior ran around right end for a 14 yard gain. A Panther defender latched onto Thomas' jersey and for five of those 14 yards, Thomas dragged the Panther on the ground.

On this night, Thomas even outplayed all-state candidate Kotara.

Kotara had one of his typical evenings, completing 22 of 36 for 315 yards in three quarters. The senior Panther received a leg injury at the end of the third quarter and was replaced by Kent Nix.

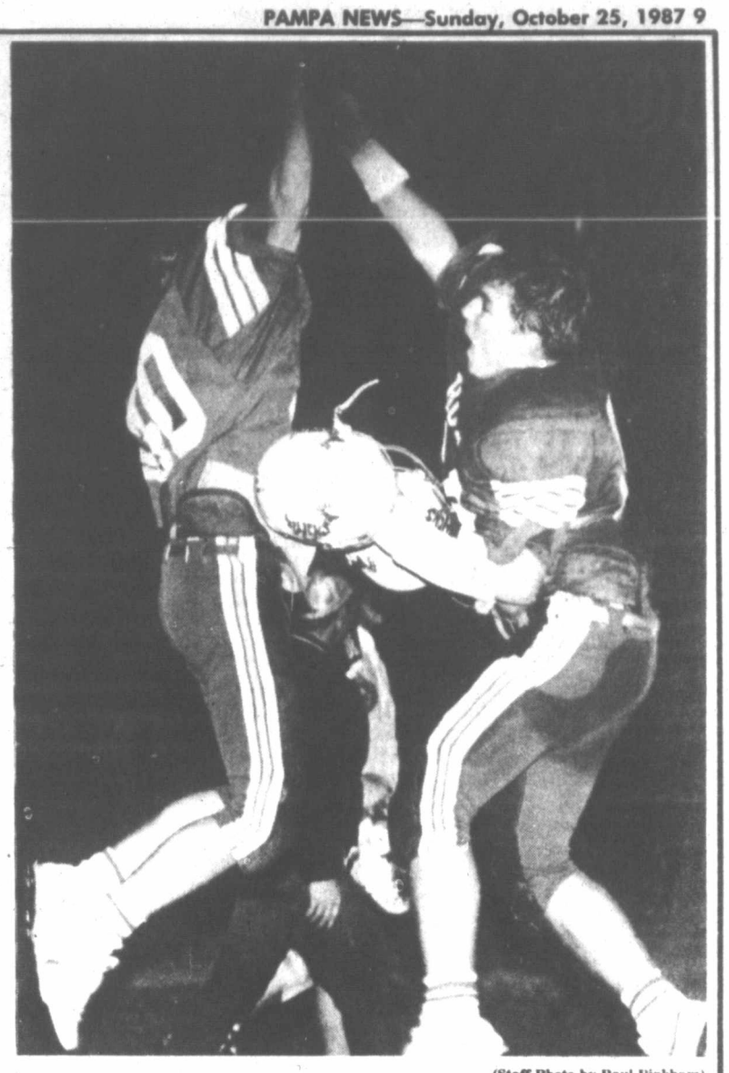

Kotara's two interceptions — the second to Lance Cross — dimmed the spotlight on his statistics. Before Friday, Kotara had averaged one interception every 35.8 passes.

The win improves the Bucks' playoff chances even though they have little chance of winning the District 1-2A title.

With two weeks left in the season, four teams are still alive in the race:

- West Texas, in first place after defeating Spearman Friday have only Gruver remaining. The Commanches are 4-1 in district play and will be open the final week.
- White Deer, 3-1 in district and in sole possession of second place visit Highland Park Friday and host tough Stratford in the season finale.
- Panhandle, 3-2 and in third place, has Spearman and Gruver remaining.
- Stratford, also 3-2, will face non-district opponent Sudan Friday and will close the season against the Bucks.

Giving much of the credit for the victory to his coaching staff, Williams said, "We're just having a good time. We're working like we've always worked. We feel like we've accomplished a lot, but we still have a lot more to accomplish."

Warriors stopped

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

HARROLD — The question a lot of people asked prior to this game was "Where's Harrold?"

The question a lot of people wondered after Miami fell to Harrold 48-46 was "When will the losing streak stop?"

The second answer is — maybe next game.

To wit, Miami:

- ✓ outgained Harrold 523-347 in total yards.
- ✓ had 17 first downs; Harrold had 12.
- ✓ outpassed Harrold 222-59.

Harrold also turned over the ball twice, while Miami hung on to it all night.

"Our ol' kids did an excellent job," McWilliams said. "They played hard. They hit. We just let 'em break three long ones on us but for the most part we shut 'em down."

Shane Fields led Miami rushers with 115 yards on 11 carries. Steve Anderson had as many carries for 83 yards.

With time running out, Miami had a chance to win the game when Fields set up to attempt a 50 yard field goal. The ball fell limply into the end zone about eight yards short of the post.

One bright spot for the Warriors was the play of the defensive ends, an area McWilliams and the team worked on all last week.

McWilliams had high grades for Fields, Chad Breeding and Brock Thompson.

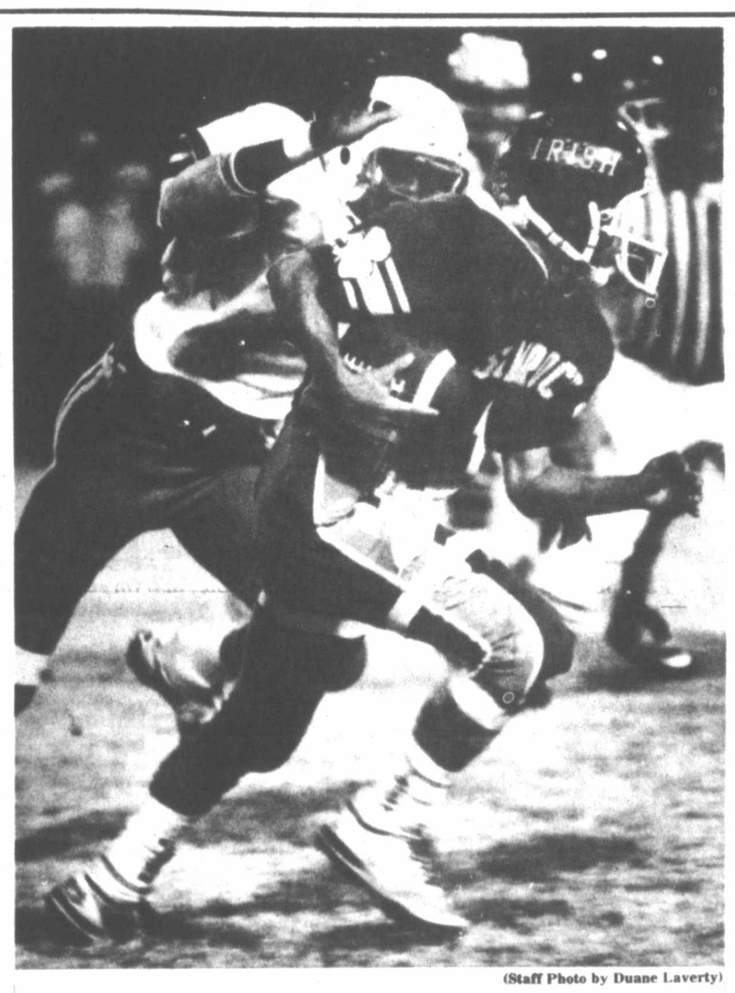

"I'm real pleased with the effort," McWilliams said. "They had more enthusiasm Friday night than in any game we've played this year."

Miami, now 3-5 overall and 1-4 in district, will host Alamo Catholic Friday in a non-district contest. The Warriors close the season a week from Friday against Lefors.

Shamrock smothered; Buchanan questions Wellington's methods

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

SHAMROCK — The Wellington Rockets scored on Shamrock Friday night. And scored and scored and scored.

That the Rockets put players over the goal line so often on their way to a 35-0 win left Shamrock head coach Buck Buchanan feeling uneasy.

"I think they kinda stuck it to us," Buchanan said. "They did some things toward the end that weren't quite right, that were hard to defend. Like lining up in an island formation. I think you could safely say (that they ran up the score)."

Curtis Nash led the Rockets with 142 yards on 29 carries. Nash also scored twice on runs of 12 and 11 yards.

Wellington's defense held Shamrock to 143 total yards — 85 of which came on the ground.

Ruben Garza paced the Irish with 35 yards on seven carries.

The fact that the Irishmen had the feeling that Wellington was too hard on them did nothing to deter the performance of the club.

"It fired 'em up," Buchanan said. "They played some good ball. The first half was great. I don't know if we get tired or physically worn out or what it is."

Shamrock's Tracy Smith went out of the game with a back injury and Todd Brashears was felled with a shoulder injury.

Freshman Daren Rushing moved into the quarterback slot when regular QB Ruben Garza transferred to fullback after the Irish injuries.

Rushing completed 4 of 10 for 58 yards in his first start.

Shamrock, now 1-7 and 0-3 in district will visit Clarendon Friday.

'Cats storm by Cyclones

MEMPHIS — The Canadian Wildcats improved their district record to 2-1 Friday night with a 35-0 whitewashing of the Memphis Cyclones.

A fierce Canadian defense held the Cyclones to just 70 yards total offense — all on the ground.

"We're a mystery," Canadian head coach Paul Wilson said. "We play well at times ... at times we don't. The defense played real physical."

For Canadian's offense, it was all Jeff Kirkland. The senior running back scored four touchdowns on his way to a 120 yard night on 20 carries.

Kirkland scored on two four-yard runs and two one-yard jaunts.

"He ran hard," Wilson said. "He's been running well all year long."

Also contributing to the Wildcats' 335 yard rushing performance was Jim David Cook. Cook rushed for 99 yards on 10 carries.

After suffering a tough district loss to Quanah last week, the Wildcats have just as tough a chore when they host Wellington Friday. The Wildcats' title chances rest on a victory over the Rockets.

Wellington and Quanah are currently atop the 2-2A title race, both with 3-0 district marks. Canadian is one game off the pace with only two games remaining.

Lee doubles up Permian

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

Midland Lee safety Jimmy Fennell intercepted two passes and recovered two fumbles — giving the Rebels' offense all they needed to dispose of district rival Odessa Permian 42-21 in the long-awaited clash of West Texas football powers.

Midland Lee was ranked third and Odessa Permian fourth among Texas' Class 5A schools, but Permian turned the ball over five times on their first six possessions and never recovered.

Elsewhere around the state, all the No. 1 teams won except for Class A leader Munday, which was idle.

Plano (5A) defeated Richardson Pearce 34-8; West Orange-Stark (4A) edged Jasper (No. 3 in 4A) 3-0 with the defending state champions winning on Russell Turkel's 26-yard field goal with 51 seconds left in the game; Cuero (3A) routed Luling 72-0, and Refugio (2A) ran past Ben Bolt 38-0.

Besides Permian, the only other ranked 5A team to lose was 10th-ranked Marshall, which lost to Longview, 34-22.

Class 4A ranked teams fared poorly. Joining Jasper among the beaten were fifth-ranked Corsicana, a 30-20 victim of Waxahachie; eighth-ranked Kerrville Tivy, which lost to Schertz Clemens, 19-17; and ninth-ranked Monahans, which fell to Sweetwater, 23-7.

In 3A, No. 7 Newton and No. 8 Kirbyville collided, with Newton emerging a 27-0 winner.

Two ranked 2A teams were upset. No. 6 Rogers lost to Manor 17-14, and East Bernard lost to Boling 14-12.

No ranked teams lost in Class A.

Odessa Permian coach Gary Gaines said, "We got beat by a good football team. They're a solid team."

Halfback Dennis Sterling dashed for one touchdown, threw for another and piled up 158 yards rushing to key the Midland Lee attack. Fullback Waymon Goodley had 115 yards and one touchdown, and halfback Joe Woodard had 86 and three touchdowns.

Permian managed only 86 total yards in the first half to 230 for Midland Lee.

Moments before Turkel became the hero in West Orange-Stark's heart-stopping win over Jasper, it appeared he was going to be the scapegoat.

With the score still 0-0 and West Orange ahead in penetrations 2-1, Jasper drove to the 26 after the fumble, but then was pushed back to the 32. With 3:04 left to play, Terrance Watts' field goal attempt from 48 yards fell short.

"This was a classic," Jasper Coach Gene Walkoviak said.

"This is what it's all about," West Orange Coach Dan Hooks said.

"Both teams have good offenses," said Walkoviak, whose offense was without the services of all-state running back Chris Hunt, who was ruled ineligible two weeks ago. "But the defenses just dominated the whole game."

McLean falls

McLEAN — The hard luck continues for the McLean Tigers as they fell to Follett 49-14 Friday night for their 39th consecutive loss. The loss leaves the team one game short of tying the records for most losses ever by a Class A football team in Texas.

Rochelle lost 40 consecutive games in the 1982-85 seasons.

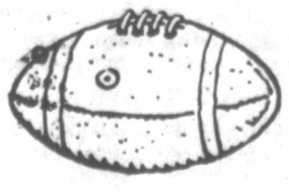

"I thought it went well," McLean Coach George Watson said. "We played a pretty good game against a good team. They have a real sound ball club.

"We played a fairly decent first quarter. It's just one of those things. I just don't know what to say."

The loss moves the Tigers' record to 0-8 on the year and 0-3 in district play.

Statistics weren't made available to either the Pampa News or the school. The team's statistician was forced to give that duty up Friday in order to pull duty as a photographer.

McLean has the week off and will close out the season at Sunray.

'Stangs remain perfect in district

SUNRAY — Grayson Benson scored three touchdowns and Bubba Smith rushed for 155 yards as the Wheeler Mustangs shutout the Sunray Bobcats 32-0.

The win sets up a crucial showdown Friday between the Mustangs and Booker's Kiowas — the only two undefeated teams in the District 1-1A North Zone.

Benson's touchdowns came on runs of 18, 8 and 4 yards. The Mustangs fullback finished the night with 12 carries for 68 yards.

Smith began the night's scoring when he rushed 18 yards for a touchdowns.

Wheeler, 6-2 on the season and 3-0 in district is one-half game ahead of Booker, who is 2-0 in league play. The Kiowas are also 6-2 on the year.

Follett has a slim chance of making the playoffs with a 1-1 in mark in district.

Naz nabs Groom 21-0

GROOM — It rained here Friday night.

It wasn't wet — there was only a gentle mist falling from the sky.

The torrent came in Swiftly from the southwest, decked in blue, white and gold jerseys. That's when the Nazareth Swifts flew into town and pushed the Groom Tigers to their third season loss — 21 to 0.

The Tigers held the Swifts scoreless through the first quarter as they gained 80 yards against Nazareth. The Tigers, led by quarterback Bruce Thornton with 44 yards, finished the game with 80 yards against the Swifts. Nazareth running back Greg Gerber managed to run for a 25-yard touchdown.

But, true to their mascot's title, the Swifts took to the air and overwhelmed the Tigers with their passing. Two of their touchdowns came from the air. The first when quarterback Chris Schmucker grabbed a 16-yard pass from splitback Heath Schulte in the third quarter. With Nazareth blanking the Tigers 14-0, Schmucker grabbed another one, this time a 16-yard pass from Corey Hoelting.

The Swifts high-flying game resulted in 13 successful passes out of 25 attempts and two interceptions. This meant 128 passing yards for the Swifts, compared to three for Groom.

Pirates pounded

HIGGINS — The Higgins Coyotes continued their rampage on area six-man teams, defeating Lefors 48-0 in a game that was called at the half due to the 45-point rule.

The Coyotes held the Pirates to just three total offensive yards on their five first half possessions.

Higgins back Jim Farris ran for 106 yards on only five carries in the shortenend game. Farris also scored on a 40 yard run and a 30 yard interception return.

Higgins Coach Larry Neighbors lifted his starters from the game after they took a 29-0 lead at the end of the first. The Coyotes final 19 points came from second stringers.

Lefors' lack of offensive output also included just one first down, minus-one yard rushing and only four yards passing.

Defensively, the Pirates were unable to contain Higgins as the scoreboard proved. The Coyotes rushed for 256 total yards and threw for 50 more.

Lefors record falls to 0-8 overall and 0-4 in district. The Pirates travel to Harrold Friday in a District 2 six-man contest.

Froggies upend Bears

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

WACO, Texas (AP) — Tony Jeffery rushed for 174 yards and two scores as Texas Christian ran to a 24-0 win over Baylor Saturday in a Southwest Conference football game.

The Horned Frogs used quick-strike first-half scores, including an 80-yard touchdown run by Jeffery, to improve to 4-3 overall and 2-1 in SWC play.

Running back Tony Darthard added 101 rushing yards for TCU. Jeffery picked up his 174 yards on 19 carries in three quarters.

Baylor fell to 5-3 for the season and 3-2 in the conference.

It was the first time Baylor had been blanked since losing 13-0 to Texas in 1979, a streak of 89 games.

It was the TCU's first SWC shutout since beating Texas Tech 16-0 in 1967. Baylor killed its best scoring chance by fumbling at the TCU 23.

TCU's first score came in the first quarter on a three-play, 46-yard drive after a 13-yard punt by Baylor's Pete Rutter, who was pressured by John Booty and Roscoe Tatum.

Quarterback David Rascoe started the 41-second drive with a 27-yard dash around right end. He ended it with an untouched 14-yard scamper into the end zone.

SWC coaches don't make grade

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — It's a good thing the Southwest Conference doesn't have a no-pass, no-play rule because the Freeman File mid-season football grade report isn't a pretty picture.

For the first time since 1967, the Southwest Conference doesn't have a team in The Associated Press Top Twenty. It can be interpreted as a sign of poor coaching or poor recruiting.

Southern Methodist University picked a good year to sit out the season. The Mustangs get an incomplete.

Here's the report card for the rest:

☑ David McWilliams, Texas, C-minus. A loss to Brigham Young at home and a pure bludgeon job by Oklahoma hardly deserves a grade out of the 70 percent range. However, McWilliams is leading the SWC thanks to a miracle catch by a 5-foot-7 receiver with three Hogs pounding him on the last play of the Arkansas game.

☑ Jack Pardee, Houston, C-minus. Aside from the opening 35-0 flogging by Oklahoma State, new coach Pardee has played everyone tough and close. Just his luck for his starting quarterback to break an arm against Wyoming. Welcome back to the SWC, Jack.

☑ Grant Teaff, Baylor, C-minus. The 34-10 blowout by Texas A&M indicates Teaff might not have a Cotton Bowl team. He's done pretty good with what he's got except for the loss to a bad Missouri team.

☑ Jackie Sherrill, Texas A&M, D. Victories over Washington and Baylor are offset by a loss to Texas Tech because Sherrill couldn't decide on one of three quarterbacks. Bucky Richardson could turn Jackie's D into an A by the time the season ends. Ask Baylor.

☑ Spike Dykes, Texas Tech, D. An upset victory over A&M is offset by losses to Baylor and Arkansas. A potential B dropped to a D when Dykes' Raiders were shut out at home 31-0 by Arkansas. They were also strummed in Waco by Baylor.

☑ Jim Wacker, Texas Christian, D. The Horned Frogs have been struggling with some of the best talent in the SWC on hand. The Frogs have yet to be the offensive powerhouse they were built up to be. They've beat Rice for the first time in three years. That hardly rates a certificate of excellence.

☑ Jerry Berndt, Rice, D. If you have the heart to give Jerry an F with the lack of talent he has on hand, go ahead. I don't have the gall. Besides, he scared Texas.

☑ Ken Hatfield, Arkansas, F. A superior Razorback team let Texas hang around long enough to pull down a collegiate football version of Roger Staubach's "Hail Mary" pass. Even the 51-7 slaughter to Miami can be excused. But sitting on the ball against the 'Horns gets Hatfield an F. However, he's still eligible to coach the rest of the semester. Extra tutoring by Athletic Director Frank Broyles could bring the final grade to a B.

In My Corner

Basketball draws near

☐ Baseball ends today with the conclusion of a wild World Series in Minnesota. The pro football season is seven weeks old and the high school season is fast winding down.

Right around the corner we have basketball. The NBA begins play in just 12 days. The high school season begins in only 19 days.

Area schools that will open the season on Nov. 13 include a McLean-Allison matchup; Lefors at Lakeview and Wheeler at Claude.

District basketball competition does not begin until the first week in January for high schoolers.

On Nov. 1, The Pampa News will begin a seven-part series previewing the eleven teams in our circulation area.

☐ More drivel from George Steinbrenner ...

The Yankee owner last week hired Billy Martin for the fifth time to manage his club.

Lou Pinella was hoisted to a general managership with the organization in order to make way for George and Billy's ridiculous relationship to continue.

With Bucky Dent as manager of the Yankee's Triple A club in Columbus, Ohio, it has been rumored that the former Yankee shortstop will be on the farm for just one more year before he is ready for the New York job.

The sad thing about the Steinbrenner-Martin affair is that the two of them have probably already decided when and how Martin will be fired again.

Martin may be a good manager but he's turning out to be an embarassment to baseball.

☐ One has to question the tactics of Steinbrenner in hiring Martin during the World Series. It was just a couple of years ago when he made a similar managerial move just prior to the seventh game of the Series.

Steinbrenner could have waited to make the announcement until after the Series so as not to detract from the real baseball news.

About all that story deserved was a "Oh yeah, by the way ..." mention.

☐ The real Cowboys return in full today when Dallas travels to Philadelphia for a noon kickoff with the Eagles.

I kind of enjoyed the replacement teams. As much as I hate to agree with Tex Schramm, they were unpredictable and exciting.

☐ Several years ago, network sportscasters began the practice of becoming silent at the end of a big sporting event because they wanted the crowd reaction to tell the story itself.

It brought to an end the sportscasters' rattling off of every cliche in the book after a big victory.

Now, they've played the crowd reaction up so much and so often that it has become a cliche itself.

DUCKS UNLIMITED
50TH

The Tenth Annual
Top O' Texas Chapter
Ducks Unlimited Banquet
Thursday, October 29, 1987
M.K. Brown Heritage Room
6:30 p.m.

Ducks Unlimited was founded in 1937 to help restore and rehabilitate prime waterfowl breeding grounds in Canada, where over 70% of North America's waterfowl are hatched. These grounds were nearly destroyed as a result of the westward expansion of civilization after World War I and the subsequent draining and cultivation of the land. The severe drought of the 1980's also contributed to the decline of continental waterfowl populations.

Since its inception, DU has completed more than 3,200 wetland restoration projects. In DU's 50 year history, more than three hundred million dollars has been spent on wetland improvement and management.

Presently, DU membership stands at approximately 587,000, most of whom have been enrolled by the more than 3,816 DU committees nationwide.

DU has reserved some four million habitat acres which provide over 16,350 miles of vital nesting shoreline for waterfowl, while at the same time offering refuge to hundreds of other species of wildlife. In 1986, DU raised over fifty-nine million dollars for wetland habitat restoration and has set a 66.7 million goal for 1987.

Your contribution to DU, through attendance at your local DU Chapter banquet, is a vital link in the chain of dollars that is reaching the habitat areas of North America's waterfowl resource.

Raiders breeze

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Texas Tech breezed to a 42-7 victory over non-conference rival Tulsa Saturday but the Red Raiders' hearts and minds were down in Austin for a pending grudge match with the Texas Longhorns.

"We did a good job, and now we can think about Texas, finally," said Raider offensive guard Jeff Keith.

Echoed linebacker Michael Johnson, "This win gets your motor running. We don't have to skip any more ball games to think about Texas."

Added defensive end Ricky Boysaw: "We're looking forward to Texas."

The Raiders, 5-3 on the year and 2-2 in Southwest Conference warfare, could keep alive their faint Cotton Bowl hopes with a victory over the league-leading Longhorns, 3-3 for the season but 2-0 in the SWC.

Perhaps more importantly to Raider fans, next Saturday's game will be the Raiders' first shot at the Steers since their former coach, David McWilliams, abandoned Texas Tech last year to return to Texas.

Ducks Unlimited schedules banquet

The Top O' Texas Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its annual banquet Thursday, starting at 6:30 p.m. in the Heritage Room at Pampa's M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Ken Fields, a TOT Chapter committee member from Pampa, said this year's banquet is also the 10th anniversary of the TOT Chapter's existence. Fields said the chapter has raised close to 10,000, which goes to the preservation of wetlands in Canada. He said the preservation program now includes 48 states, including several Texas projects.

Nationwide, this year is the 50th anniversary of Ducks Unlimited.

This year's banquet features a fundraising auction involving commemorative editions of shotguns and wildlife prints. Decoys will also be auctioned off.

A film will be shown following the banquet and door prizes will also be given out.

Wallace Fields of Pampa is the TOT Chapter committee chairman. Other committee members are Bill Rogers and Wyan Prater, both of Canadian; Bill Thornton, John Lee Bell, Terry Braddock, Tim Hutto, Fred Woods Bill Gething and David Holt, all of Pampa.

Dead Booker banker's brother reports extortion attempt

PERRYTON (AP) — Three men were arrested after an extortion attempt against the brother of deceased banker Glen Lemon, said Ochiltree County Sheriff Joe Hataway.

Perryton attorney Robert Lemon received a call on Oct. 15 from a person who threatened to turn over audio tapes and papers to an insurance company unless $150,000 was paid.

Darrell Colby, Arbie Gene Holt and Tony Charles Hollis, all of Perryton, were being held in Ochiltree County Jail Saturday, a sheriff's spokesman said.

Colby is charged with burglary of a habitation, possession of marijuana and theft by extortion, with bonds totaling $25,000. Holt and Hollis are charged with theft by extortion. Bonds of $10,000 each were set.

Hataway said that in the extortion attempt, the caller said two tapes and some notes that contained embarrassing information would be turned over to an insurance company if the money was not paid.

Glen Lemon died in a private plane crash last November at Liberal, Kan. In December, the First Bank & Trust in Booker, of which he was part owner with Robert Lemon, failed.

American Mutual Life Insurance Co. has refused to pay a $1.5 million share of $12.2 million in insurance claims allegedly owed on Glen Lemon. A trial on the issue is scheduled next year.

In a lawsuit against the Lemon family, American Mutual says the banker claimed to hold only $2.5 million in life insurance from three different companies when he bought a $1.5 million policy from them. The company said it later found Lemon was holding almost $6 million in coverage from seven different companies at the time.

American Mutual also wants to determine if Lemon's death was suicide.

Earlier this year, Lemon's body was exhumed in connection with the case. Authorities determined the body was that of Glen Lemon.

Hataway said that in the extortion attempt, the caller said two tapes and some notes that contained embarrassing information would be turned over to an insurance company if the money was not paid.

The sheriff said officers believe the items were accidentally discovered during a burglary of the Lemon house.

In fact, the items were not embarrassing or incriminating, but were Robert Lemon's explanations of the failure of the bank and of the plane crash that killed his brother, Hataway told the Amarillo Globe-News.

Hataway said lawmen staked out pay telephones across the city Monday night, with an officer at the Lemon residence.

A call came to the Lemon home about 8:30 p.m., and simultaneously a deputy observed a man at a pay phone. The man at the phone had the tapes and papers in his possession at the time of the arrest, Hataway said.

Dallas adopts deadly-force policy

DALLAS (AP) — New procedures for investigating police shootings have been proposed to erase perceptions that the department covers up details of use of deadly force.

Under the proposal, officials would brief designated minority leaders immediately on a police shooting and investigators would question officers involved about their decision to use deadly force. Police investigators would be required to tape-record statements from witnesses and officers.

The proposed procedures were prompted by complaints aired last summer at a congressional hearing on deadly force and police relations with minorities, officials said.

"The perception is that (police) are all going to get their heads together to cook up some story" about a shooting, said Capt. Rick Stone, who since the May hearing has directed the department's effort to change policies.

The proposed changes, set forth in a 50-page document, detail duties of dispatchers, criminal investigators and officers collecting physical evidence after a police shooting.

It has been delivered to Chief Billy Prince for final revisions and approval, Stone said.

Critics of the department have accused police of ignoring or covering up investigation of police shootings. Minority leaders, who requested the congressional hearings, have been especially vocal.

The new policy states in part that investigations into deadly force are among the most controversial and public confidence in the probe is essential.

The policy would apply when a police officer or a civilian is killed or seriously injured. It would emphasize securing and collecting evidence at the crime scene, isolating witnesses and officers involved and documenting their accounts by tape-recording interviews and collecting written statements.

The procedures are similar to present measures, but are far more stringent in requiring documentation of each step of the investigation, Stone said.

The policy would require dispatchers to call a minority relations director to the crime scene, Stone said. The director would contact previously designated leaders in the community to exchange facts.

Crash kills two

CHEROKEE (AP) — A New Braunfels businessman and a coworker were killed when their single-engine aircraft crashed in a field in San Saba County.

James Mack Mangum, a 38-year-old accountant, and Connie Lynn Gustafson, a 40-year-old secretary, both of New Braunfels, were pronounced dead at the site of the Friday crash.

The Cessna 172 aircraft apparently went down between 1 a.m. and 3:15 a.m. five miles east of Cherokee.

San Saba County Justice of the Peace Harvy Reeves said the plane had hit the ground, slid about 50 feet and apparently tried to go airborne when it slammed into a tree.

Reeves said it was undetermined why the plane first went down.

FOR THE LOVE OF CHILDREN

Young legs walk at Shrine center

Not only did she have to get up extra early to catch a 6:30 a.m. flight from Amarillo to Houston, but the flight was cancelled because of engine problems. The 10-month-old Amarillo girl and her mother, Karen Matthews, had to wait nearly three hours for the next flight.

Stephanie was content for most of the wait, first trying out her new teeth on a plastic airplane boarding pass, then studying a variety of colorful balloon animals that a member of Amarillo's Khiva Shrine Temple made for her. But after a breakfast in the airport coffee shop, Stephanie decided enough was enough and let her opinion be heard.

Stephanie is not the first member of her family to have the condition. Her older sister Heather, 8, had it when she was an infant, and her grandmother and great-grandmother were also stricken.

This is not the first trip that Stephanie or her mother have made to the Houston hospital. A little more than a year ago, Stephanie's brother Jessie, then 18 months old, went to the center for treatment of a dislocated hip.

Matthews and her husband hav not had to pay for any of the treatment — Shrine hospitals have no cash registers, Shriners say. And the Khiva Shrine Temple of Amarillo has picked up the bill for transportation.

But even if the care were not free, Matthews said she'd still go to the Shrine hospital.

"With the Shriners, you know they are going to be taken care of," Matthews said.

As for Stephanie, she just wanted to get to the treatment center so that she could play with the stuffed animals.

Khiva Shrine directors' staff member T.C. Latham of Amarillo said the Amarillo temple has spent more than $39,000 this year to get the children to the Shriners Hospital and to the Shriners Burn Institute in Galveston.

"We work to get kids into the hospital at no cost to the family," Latham said, adding that transportation and lodging is provided for the afflicted child and his mother.

The hospitals, in turn, treat the patient free. The money is raised through local Shrine fund-raisers and by private donations and bequests.

"We do not have any cash registers at any of our hospitals," Latham said, adding that the hospitals use no tax money.

Latham explained that the hospitals treat children from infancy to age 18, or older if the victim requires continued treatment.

The Houston hospital, which has windows overlooking the Houston zoo, is one of 19 Shrine Hospitals which treat such orthopedic problems as deformities, injuries and bone, joint and muscle problems.

Tiny Juan Garcia is at it again, pushing his little walker up and down the corridors of the second floor, making little motor-like noises as he plods along.

Applications

Local applications to the orthopedic hospital are available from the Khiva Shrine Temple, 305 E. 5th, Amarillo, or by calling 373-2845.

In the case of burned children, Pampa Shriners V.E. "Skeet" Wagner, 669-9931, and Gene Gates, 669-3147, contact the burns institute for admission and arrange for the child and a parent to be taken to Galveston. Gates says he has handled patients from throughout the area.

The two men also help children enter the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's Hospital in Dallas, which also provides free service.

Patients, parents or guardians are never charged for the treatment received at any Shriners or Scottish Rite hospital. There are no considerations for race, color, gender or national origin. Admission depends on the financial needs of the family.

Tax deductible donations can be made through cash gifts, securities or bequests. Those interested in contributing may contact the office of General Counsel, Shriners Hospitals, Tampa, Fla., (813) 885-2575.

Burn victims find hope at Galveston institute

The 9-year-old Natchez, Miss., boy is a patient at the Shriners Burns Institute in Galveston. He was taken there for treatment of second- and third-degree burns over his head, torso and right arm.

The youth was burned when he was trying to burn ants out of an anthill with gasoline. Now Shaun's head is wrapped in a netting — with openings for his eyes, ears, nose and mouth — until skin can be securely grafted to his face.

There are few people at the hospital where Shaun is staying. On Tuesday, there were about 22 young patients in the 30-bed hospital, a low census according to Melva Kravits, the hospital's director of patient services.

But that would soon change as little beds were being prepared for two more patients, one infant, one 4-year-old.

The Galveston burn center is one of three Shriners Burns Institutes in the country. The other two are in Cincinatti and Boston. The Galveston center location, surrounded by the University of Texas Medical Branch, allows it to fulfill its three-fold purpose: to treat the variety of burn ijuries children suffer, to train medical personnel in the delicate techniques of burn treatment and to conduct research into new techniques of treatment.

Tax practitioner workshops offered

A tax practitioner workshop will be held in Amarillo on Nov. 30-Dec. 1, sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Internal Revenue Service.

T... two agencies are cooperating to offer 27 general workshops in all major Texas cities, according to Joe VanZandt, Gray County Extension agent. The Amarillo workshop is the one scheduled nearest to Pampa.

There will also be 15 advanced workshops offered in major cities. The general tax workshops will concentrate mainly on personal taxes, while the advanced workshops' emphasis will be on business tax problems.

The nearest advanced workshop will be in Amarillo on Oct. 29-30.

In addition to the general and advanced tax workshops, there will be three partnership workshops, four estate planning and tax form preparation workshops, three income taxation of trusts and estates workshops, and — new this year — two workshops dealing with serving farmers in financial trouble.

The Tax Practitioner educational program has been highly successful, VanZandt said. Last year about 4,900 people participated in the statewide series. These practitioners reported filing more than 587,000 tax returns.

The two cases are examples of the variety of outreach the Shriners Hospital provides.

The hospital has an outreach outpatient clinic in the Rio Grande Valley. It is also working with Mexican authorities on a polio vaccination program.

Hospital administrator Eleanor "Teddi" Jackson said the 48 member medical and therapy staff consists of private doctors who donate their time to the hospital. There are also 61 members on the hospital's consulting staff, representing such specialties as urology, neurology, cardiovascular surgery, radiology and opthalmology.

In addition to treating children, staff members instruct and supervise residents from three affiliated medical schools — University of Texas, Baylor College of Medicine and Scott and White Clinic.

The children don't go without learning either, as the hospital works with Houston Independent School District to provide the youngsters with an education. The average stay at the orthopedic hospital is 17 days.

The soft-spoken 9-year-old sits in a wheelchair, her right leg extended in front of her. With her mother and a physical therapist encouraging her, Anja is gaining enough strength and confidence to walk on her own or on crutches.

Her mother stays at a nearby Ronald McDonald House, which provides lodging to family members of hospitalized children. It took a Shrine in Waco to bring the child and her mother all the way from East Germany.

The Shrine hospitals depend on the Shriners — the men in the funny red hats — for their support. The Shriners of North America suport the hospitals by sponsoring the patients.

They also act as a liason between the family and the hospital. Temples and clubs often help arrange and pay for the transportation of children and parents — just like the Khiva Shrine did with Stephanie.

Funding for the hospital comes from private donations, Shriner fund-raisers and a $5 hospital assessment fee which each Shriner must pay. Proceeds from the Shrine Circuses go to the individual temples.

But even in the fun, the Shriners see a serious message.

Burn

Dr. David Herndon, the institute's chief of staff, said that over the last four years, the hospital treated 23 children with severe burns over 88 percent of their bodies. More than 700 children were treated for minor burns.

But regardless of the extent, Herndon said "burns are such a tragic and terrible thing to happen."

The tragedy strikes in different ways: house fires, chemical burns, auto accidents, playing with flammable substances, matches and child abuse.

"When we look at a patient, we don't try to determine whether he was or was not abused," Herndon said. "Still, if we suspect child abuse, we report it as such."

Herndon speculated that as many as 20 percent of the burn patients are suspected child abuse or neglect cases.

The emphasis is not to place the blame, but to help the child.

Like the 19 Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children, the three Shrine burn centers admit and treat patients free of charge. Children from infancy to age 18 are admitted, and free lodging for parents is provided in a nearby dormitory. The hospitals are funded through Shrine fundraisers and individual donations.

Half of the beds are geared for acute care patients while the others are for reconstructive surgery.

Because the hospital is geared toward children, it is not uncommon to see colorful animals, boats or graphics painted on the walls. The halls are now festooned with orange and black Halloween decorations.

"Halloween is a big event in our hospital," Kravitz said.

There is also a playroom, where Shaun was blasting away at the video centipede.

Treating the young burn victims is only part of the hospital's goal. Herndon said the institute is a leading burn research center.

"One of our major reserach areas is how to cover burn wounds quickly," Herndon said, adding that the center tries to graft the child's own skin to the burn wounds.

But with burns covering 80 percent of a child's growing body, doctors may have trouble finding adequate usable skin.

So doctors seek donor skin as a temporary "patch" over the burn wound. And the institute seeks people willing to donate their skin upon their death.

"There is a tremendous need for donor skin," Herndon said. "And almost anyone can donate skin, if they don't have hepatitis, acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) or other contagious diseases."

The problem is that donated skin is soon rejected. The body wants its own skin.

"We are working on ways to create skin in laboratories," Herndon said. "We are working with major corporations in creating an artificial dermis."

Children can come to the hospital for reconstructive surgery, even if they did not get their initial treatment at the burn center.

For the reconstructive surgery, a mold is made of the victim's burned area, and reconstructive artist Roland Morales works with the plaster casts to see what repairs can be made.

The hospital is also looking at ways to heal burn wounds in that most delicate part of the body, the lungs.

"The number one killer of burn victims is smoke inhalation," Herndon said. "So we are trying to develop new skin to graft onto the lungs."

The center is also finding ways to stabilize internal organs — hearts and lungs — of burn victims. The heart of a burn victim can beat two to three times the normal rate.

Herndon said the institute focuses on the mental as well as the physical well-being of the little ones.

"We're interested in how the children look at themselves," he said. "Even children with small changes in their faces are stared at by society. We are studying ways to help them adjust."

Herndon said that, despite their wounds and scars, many burn victims grow up to lead normal, if not outstanding, lives.

One of the hospital's main goals now is its new facilities. Kravitz points out that the new 30-bed facility will be larger and not as crowded.

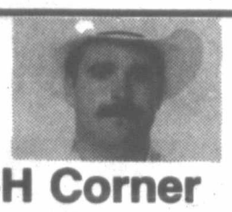

'As you can tell, we have plenty of equipment, but no room," she said, pointing out a cluttered closet.

Kravitz and the hospital administrator have been visiting with architects this week.

The $30 million cost is being picked up by the Shriners.

Kravitz admitted that it's easy to become attached to the children. And it's hard to keep from "taking the work home."

"Just look at their faces," Kravitz said.

4-H PROJECTS KEY TO LEARNING

4-H projects are the backbone of the 4-H program.

Projects help 4-H members grow because as a member studies and works, he learns by doing.

Skills are learned and developed through practice such as sewing a garment or baking a cake. Publications and other project aids, project meetings, talks with parents, leaders and others all help members learn. But projects are real-life experiences that help 4-H'ers learn to make wise decisions.

First, a member must decide which project to take. Then, he must decide a lot of things as he is doing the project. In gardening, that would include such things as the location and what vegetables to plant. These decisions help members feel responsible for their own actions and give them personal satisfaction.

Learning to work with others is another benefit of a project. The work is done in or near the home where the whole family can work and be together. As members work together, they share ideas and help each other. They learn to compare their work with what other club members are doing.

In some projects, club members own their projects. When they do, they learn to care for their property and respect others' property.

Most 4-H projects are set up to meet the needs of boys and girls of different ages. As a member grows older and makes more progress, he has a chance to make more of his own decisions and do work that he could not do at an earlier age.

Besides the development of skills in a certain area, a 4-H project offers the 4-H member fellowship, leadership growth and personal development. The 4-H project, the most important part of the 4-H program, offers 4-H club members the opportunity for head, heart, hand and health development through many avenues of participation in 4-H.

Treat peach trees for borers on trunk

For Horticulture

Joe VanZandt

By JOE VanZANDT
County Extension Agent

PINE TREES

I see that some pine trees are in the early stages of dropping their old inner needles. This is an annual natural occurrence. They do not retain all of their needles for the life of the tree.

Most pine trees retain needles for about two to three years, then as newer growth occurrs, the older needles receive less sunshine and are less functional to the tree, so the inner needles are dropped.

This process is just starting on some of the pine trees and will increase during the next month. Don't be alarmed when you see some dead needles on the inner part of your pine trees.

PEACH TREE BORER TREATMENT

If you did not use an insecticide spray treatment for peach tree borers on the trunk of your fruit trees during the summer or early fall, it is now time to forget those methods for this year.

However, these borers can be controlled by an application of paradichloro-benzene crystals applied around the base of the tree during the period of Oct. 20 to Nov. 15. The use of these crystals in the proper manner will, in most cases, eliminate the infestations.

The crystals should be applied when the soil is dry and the temperature is 55°F. or above. Weeds should be removed from around the base of the tree and the soil leveled 1 foot from the tree trunk.

Place the crystals in a narrow groove encircling the tree about 2 inches from the tree trunk. Care should be taken to keep any of the crystals from coming in direct contact with the tree.

Clean soil should be placed over the crystals so as to form a cone-shaped pile about 6 inches high around the base of the tree. When putting and compacting the soil around the base of the trees, care should be taken not to put any of the crystals against the tree.

During the winter, the peach tree borers that are at the base of the tree will be killed. In late March or early April, the cone-shaped pile of dirt should be removed from the base of the tree.

The amount of paradichlorobenzene crystals to be used is determined by the age and size of the tree. In general, ½ ounce of crystals should be used for 2- to 3-year-old trees, ¾ ounce for 4- to 5-year-old trees and 1 ounce for mature trees.

Where peach tree borers are a problem, the use of this control measure for this pest will greatly lengthen the life of the peach tree. Further information on control of the peach tree borer is available through your Gray County Extension Service.

WEEDS 'N TURF

Our recent wet, cool weather has revived several weeds in our lawns, namely dandelions and henbit.

You won't have any trouble seeing the dandelions, but the henbit is small and has just come up. If you don't know what henbit is, remember the purple flowering weeds in lawns during the springtime — that is henbit.

I would suggest that a spray application right now on some warm day with 2,4 D, dicamba or MCPP would knock these weeds down. They should be fairly susceptible to herbicide applications at this time.

If you have questions, give me a call. Follow directions on the label.

GREENHOUSE — INTERIORSCAPES CONFERENCE

The annual Texas Greenhouse Growers' and Interiorscapers' Conference will be held Nov. 10-12 at the College Station Hilton. This is the 12th year for this outstanding conference.

This year's program features over 40 speakers, covering a wide range of topics. More information is available in the Gray County Extension Office.

It isn't easy being a football coach's wife

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Being married to a high school football coach is like being married to a politician: The victories are great, the losses are awful. And like a politician, it's hard for a coach to leave his work at the office.

On the other hand, being a coach is such hard work they all need a wife to help them make it through the adversity of the day-in and day-out struggle of working with kids.

All eight football coaches in the Pampa News circulation area have wives, each a special type of lady.

■■■

June Wilson has been married to husband Paul for 35 years. For three years, the couple has lived in Canadian, where he has served as head coach of the Wildcats.

"We lived across the river from each other (in Seminole, Okla.), and we rode the same bus to school together every day. Later on, we developed an interest in each other. We really didn't like each other at first," Mrs. Wilson said, laughing. "Later on we started dating and I found out he wasn't near as mean as I thought he was."

The couple has four kids — one daughter and three sons — and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Wilson said the first years were the most difficult.

"We struggled," she said. "He went to school and worked full time in a grocery store, and I worked at a factory. That's how he got through school."

Wilson has coached in the high school ranks for 13 years — all that time as a head coach.

"If he's happy with his job," she said, "I'm happy. He's the breadwinner. I have really enjoyed it.

"I'm very down when he loses. It just makes me sick.

"Paul's a good-hearted person. He would put himself in a bind to do something for someone."

■■■

Zanetta Crim has much the same story to tell as June Wilson, in that she has known husband Johnny, head coach at Lefors, since 1955, when they both went to the same grammar school in Sidney, Texas.

The two have been together since, including when Coach Crim went through college, and she worked to help support the family.

That family consists of two children — a boy and a girl.

A housewife now, Mrs. Crim has worked in banks and as a bookkeeper, and she has seen and supported her husband in his dream of coaching.

It has been only two years since Crim began his coaching career, but he did turn around the Iradale team after only one season as coach.

"We've got a tough season ahead of us," Mrs. Crim said of the Lefors winless season. "If he can get the kiddos' attitudes changed, we'll have a good chance."

■■■

"George is not your normal coach," Louise Watson says of her husband, head coach at McLean.

"He doesn't get angry if people say he lost. The only thing that would make him mad is if they criticize his boys."

Coach Watson and his wife have had a tough time at McLean, where the Tigers are 0-6 this season.

"George doesn't criticize, he coaches."

The two have been married since 1946, when Watson began his first year as coach at Port Neches.

Mrs. Watson graduated from Abilene Christian College with degrees in English and education.

In 1981, with seven years' teaching behind her, she retired.

The couple has one daughter and three grandchildren.

Concerning her knowledge of football, Mrs. Watson said she's probably like other women married to coaches.

"I notice who carries the ball," she said. "I don't see what goes on in the line."

And on keeping active in life (both George and Louise are 66), she offered these words of wisdom:

"You have two options — you either just get older or you die."

"When we were in Grady, there was an overweight boy in junior high. Currie moved him into the center position and started calling him 'Refrigerator.' That made all the difference in the world. It totally turned that boy's life around. His grades went up, and the kids started liking him.

"Currie touches people. He makes a difference in their lives. When people say football doesn't make a difference, they're wrong. When Currie made that boy a part of the football team, that made him important. It turned his life around."

Mrs. McWilliams acknowledges there are many ups and downs in the life of a coach's wife, but said there are "more ups, more highs. It's kind of like being on a roller coaster."

The coach and his wife, married 17 years, have three children — two girls and a boy, all in the Miami school system.

Currently, Mrs. McWilliams is a secretarial aide for the school and hopes to one day finish an education she began at Sul Ross State.

"Terry (head coach at Groom High School) asks me, 'If you would just watch the guards for me,' " she said. "I said I didn't know what he was talking about. It's silly that I don't. I know the basic, basic things. I really enjoy the games. Terry likes me to be there. He always looks up in the stands to see if I'm there."

Mrs. Coffee said she knew what she was in for before they got married, in terms of the long hours a coach works.

"He laid it all on the line," she said. "It takes someone really special to be a coach's wife. You have to enjoy your own company because you're alone so much. I learned to like Late Night With David Letterman.

■■■

In their case, though, it was "Only in Oklahoma."

"Buck's mother was an Avon Lady," Mrs. Buchanan said. "She kept wanting him to go out with me, but I didn't want to go out with him. Later on in college we finally went out."

The couple met where they both went to high school, in Elk City, Okla., and after marriage found themselves in Plainview, where Buchanan landed his first coaching job.

Mrs. Buchanan said one of the most memorable times of their lives was during the coach's tenure in Plainview, when he got to work under veritable high school coaching legend Greg Sherwood.

"I grew up in a sports-oriented family," she said. "I have been very sports-conscious all my life. If I didn't know anything about football, I don't think I could be married to a coach. I'm really very interested in it."

Mrs. Buchanan did say moving to Shamrock has brought a change in their lives.

"Moving has brought us stronger together. We've had to rely on each other a lot more.

■■■

Even with bachelor's degrees in physical education, speech and elementary education and a master's degree in all-level special education, Mrs. Smith, a Wheeler native, has to find time to feed a hungry husband and three very hungry kids.

Two of the three Smith boys — Richard and Bubba — are varsity Mustangs and a third — Trey — is an eighth-grader at Wheeler. Mrs. Smith says going through a day without hearing football talk is highly uncommon.

"It's something that's a continuous thing," Mrs. Smith said. "They always talk about it."

While Mrs. Smith said her sons don't actually run pass routes through the kitchen under the direction of their father, she did say she has avoided learning too much about their activity.

"Not very much," she said concerning how much football she has learned. "I guess it's been intentional. If I don't learn a lot about it, I can't argue about it."

Mrs. Smith considers her fondest memory to be 1977, when the 'Stangs won the Class A state championship.

By day, Mrs. Smith teaches special education classes, grades nine through 12, in Wheeler. She said nowadays, she gets to see her husband more.

"For years, it was nothing for him to work until 12 at night and then get up at the crack of dawn and do it again. He's realized, though, that you can still be successful and not rob your family doing it."

■■■

They both grew up in Panhandle and graduated from high school there.

"We made the decision a long time ago that my place is in the home," Mrs. Williams said. "So far it's worked out."

Both husband and wife have family in Panhandle, and Mrs. Williams said she "never dreamed we'd be this closs. We never thought a job would come open 15 minutes from our hometown."

For a while, the Williamses had to leave the local area, as the coach landed a job under Greg Sherwood at Plainview, where they spent time and got to know the Buchanans from Shamrock.

Concerning the less-than-stable career of a high school football coach, Mrs. Williams said she has never minded the moves.

"I love it," she said. "The moving has never bothered me. My father was a pastor and late hours never bothered me."

Myers attends Girl Scout national event in New York

Shannon Myers, daughter of Carolyn and Johnnie Myers of Clarendon, was selected recently to attend "Long Island, the Atlantic Ocean and Beyond," a Girl Scout national wider opportunity sponsored by Suffolk County Girl Scout Council in New York.

Myers, a member of Quivira Girl Scout Council based in Pampa, joined 42 other Scouts from across the United States for canoeing, sailing and swimming in the Atlantic Ocean, Long Island Sound and other Long Island waterways.

After staying a day and a half with her host family in Long Island, Myers stayed at two council camps, Hofstra University dorm and Vanderbilt YMCA in New York City.

Those included in the 11-day trip met people in marine related careers and were treated to an all-day sightseeing trip to New York, where they visited the Statue of Liberty and the United Nations Building and met Mariette Hartley and Roland Smith of CBS television network's "Morning Program."

Participants also had the opportunity to help conduct a one-day event at the local day camp for Brownie Girl Scouts of Suffolk County Girl Scout Council.

Parents' actions reflect memories of childhood

WASHINGTON (AP) — When people have good memories or feelings about their childhood, they try to repeat the experience for their own children, said Vivian Boul, director of The Catholic University of America's Center for Child Services.

"If they have had negative nurturing experiences, parents will try to raise their children differently. People move toward pleasure and avoid pain — as Freud maintained," she said.

She has found that parents who were read to as children will enjoy reading to their children and those who remember taking leisurely walks with their parents will enjoy doing the same with their own children on weekends.

"Good times are not related to money, but are simple, ordinary shared experiences," she said.

Mrs. Boul observed that parents who received harsh unjustified punishment as children often maintain they will not do the same to their children.

"People who were not able to negotiate with their parents, or whose parents did not appreciate their ideas, vow not to be that way as parents," she said.

She pointed out that today it may not be the mother, but rather the stepparent or parent with primary child-rearing responsibility, who tries to repeat or re-create the good memories and the past joys experienced as children.

"When Benjamin Spock wrote his first child care book, he said mothers needed to stay home and raise their children," she said. "Today, with increased numbers of working mothers, he's readjusted his thinking."

Working "moms" shouldn't feel guilty if they can't duplicate the full-time mothering their own mothers may have provided, she suggested.

"Time may be shorter, but the essential ingredients in loving relationships don't change with the times. There's sufficient evidence that quality, not quantity, of mothering is what counts," Mrs. Boul said.

She defined quality as times when parent and child enjoy each other and take pleasure in the give and take.

"In a sense, the giving is one-sided — it's the parent's responsibility. There should be no strings attached, but unqualified unselfish giving in meeting the child's needs."

Reunions

DESTROYER ESCORT SAILORS ASSOCIATION

Former destroyer escort sailors who served in World War II and the Korean War are invited to attend a reunion and convention Sept. 2-6, 1988, in St. Louis.

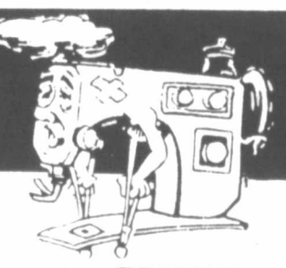

Destroyer escorts are aeknowledged for winning the Battle of the Atlantic in World War II. Many of the ships were recommissioned during the Korean conflict and used in reserve service, but are non-existent today.

They were considered obsolete for the present-day Navy and were sold for scrap iron or used as targets for torpedo-missile practice. Twelve of the ships were sold to foreign nations.

The Destroyer Escort Sailors Association was formed over 10 years ago to honor those sailors who served on board the destroyer escorts.

Local song and dance team much in demand after debut

Members of Future Homemakers, under the guidance of Gaylene Skaggs and Mariam Lynch, found an avenue for community service just for the asking. Dr. Ron Easley of Lions Club sought their help in a United Way promotion during football halftime last Friday night. Fifteen members, sponsors, Ron, Dr. Harry Griffith, Duane Harp and maybe more workers worked at breakneck speed after school to inflate and tie 800 balloons. At halftime that night, band members turned them loose for a spectacular and breathtaking display.

A new group made its debut recently. The Top of Texas Revue, a group of 20 high school students under the direction of Danny Parkerson, accepted hearty rounds of applause during the Tuesday afternoon check-in for United Way workers. Members sing as a group, some dance, Leslie McQueen and Danny soloed, and Katina Thomas danced a solo.

Several dancers known as Kansas City Dolls, dressed in full costume, danced the can-can. The group was featured throughout last Sunday afternoon as they sang Broadway tunes and danced to the delight of the crowd at the Foliage Festival in Canadian. Donations are accepted to defray expenses of the non-profit organization.

An invitation came to the Dolls from Burlington, Colorado, to appear next summer in the community's 100th birthday celebration. The calendar already includes the 4-H banquet last Tuesday; all day at Pampa Mall on Nov. 27; Westgate Mall, Amarillo, Dec. 12; city employees' Christmas party, Dec. 18.

Others assisting with the Kansas City Dolls are Madeline Graves, choreographer; Jamie Thomas, sound person; Sheryl Williams, road manager; and several parents. Watch for great things from the only group of its kind in the Panhandle! Another Pampa first-and-only.

Belated birthday wishes to Lora Barber. There was (1) a birthday party and (2) a home mortgage burning at the Pampa Club, all in the same evening.

Peeking at Pampa

By Katie

Recent visitors in Pampa ... Jewell Brown of San Diego in the home of Lois and Walter Eller ... Melissa Fields, home from Odessa University, visiting her parents, Connie and Bud Fields of Groom, grandparents Donna and Dean Burger.

The Booster Club of Lamar Elementary School recognized students for exceptional work with a trip to Braum's for ice cream. Attending were 22 students, some in special education; Tim Powers, principal; head custodian James Hallum; bus driver Dorothy Williams; special education teachers Renee Doughty and Carol Ihne; Jane Steele, on hand to congratulate the students; public relations director Lynda Queen; Booster Club pres Victoria Davis; and treasurer Maggie Betts. Picture this: Tim Powers taking individual cones back to remaining teachers, all on a warm afternoon. Renee, a new teacher in Pampa, is reported to be doing an excellent job in special education.

Bobbie West, secretary to Bill Jones at Austin Elementary School, and Charla Friday, secretary to Dr. Harry Griffith, school superintendent, put their heads together to plan a luncheon for school principals, department heads at Carver Center, in fact all bosses and secretaries in the school system to celebrate Bosses' Day. Pampa Country Club provided the setting. There was time to share the humor of Paul Payne, Tommy Lindsay, Jack Bailey, Tim Powers, Bill Jones and Ray Thornton. Jack Alexander furnished the serious note of expressing appreciation for the school secretaries. Coach Dennis Cavalier led the group in singing the Fight Song. All this in less than an hour!

Junior and senior high school students of First Baptist, Central Baptist and First United Methodist Churches attended the Petra Concert in Amarillo last Saturday. First Baptist had 60 students and sponsors Ray Mouhot, Sheila Cheatwood, Gwen and Glen Shock and Wanetta Hill to make a big busload.

Elegance was the theme of the 50th anniversary celebration honoring John and Theresa Kotara at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in White Deer recently. Theresa looked stunning in her silver-gray lace dress beside her handsome husband John, who dressed in a silver-gray tuxedo, as they walked down the church aisle to repeat their wedding vows.

Behind the special couple came their four daughters, escorted by their four brothers, as they stood as witnesses for their parents. The sons and daughters and their spouses attending were Maynard and Nancy Kotara, Mack and Joy Grange, Marilyn and L.B. Voyles, John Alden Kotara III, Gary and Sam Kotara, Robert and Gay Blaylock, Rodney and Debbie Huff, and Kenny and Laquita Kotara.

Fifty-eight other immediate family members attended, along with perhaps 200 more relatives and friends. The Kotaras have 30 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The parish hall was the setting for a gala reception and dance during the anniversary celebration. Lavish decorations by Ruth Sikes included white and gold crepe paper completely covering the ceiling, entwined with tiny clear lights and helium-filled metallic gold and white balloons with curly ribbons.

Guest table decorations included gold vases filled with heart-shaped balloons and gold and iridescent paper. A Grand March began the evening's dancing. The entire celebration was a golden, shining success!

Another big event in the Kotara family was the birth of John Jarett V, son of Tammy and John Kotara IV. Grandparents are Nancy Dunlap, Sharon and Durward Dunlap, Carol Jean Kotara and John Kotara III. Great-grandparents are Dixie and Hubert Sims, Theresa and John Kotara Jr., Loyd Wilson and Mary and Malcolm McDaniel. Congratulations to all!

See you next week.

Katie

Use strategy for gift buying

By DONNA BRAUCHI
County Extension Agent

Homemakers' News

Donna Brauchi

Now is the time to develop that gift giving strategy that will take you confidently and safely through the approaching holiday season.

How much money do you spend on gifts each year? Gifts and cards are some of the most overlooked expenses in the family budget. They may take more family income than you realize.

Families differ in the number and type of occasions for which they exchange gifts and cards. They also differ in the amount of money spent.

Recall your family gift expenses for the past year. How many occasions required a special remembrance? How much was spent? What expenses do you expect in the next two months?

When planning a budgeted amount of the family income for gift giving, you should first make a list of the approaching special remembrance occasions. Estimate the cost of cards, gifts, flowers and other remembrances. For each occasion, ask yourself these questions:

- How many friends and relatives should be remembered and how — by gift, card or party?
- How much money is available to spend? How much should be spent on each person?
- What extra expenses does the occasion involve? Have you included the costs of gifts, wrapping materials, postage, food and decorations?

Holiday gifts take a large part of the family income during November, December and January. Save time, money and frustration by planning ahead. After deciding how much money you can spend, stay within your limit. Buy or make gifts early to avoid holiday shopping crowds and higher prices.

Use these money-saving tips to reduce gift expenses:

- Take advantage of sales and specials. By planning ahead, you may purchase most gifts at bargain prices.
- Use your imagination in choosing gifts. Try new types of stores and items. Instead of one large present, consider several small, related gift items or combine purchased gifts with homemade items.
- Make your own gifts if you sew, bake, paint or are skilled in other ways. These gifts may mean more to the receiver than purchased ones.
- Buy holiday cards, supplies and decorations for the following year during after-season markdowns.
- When the family group is large, consider drawing names for Christmas. Consider drawing names for a secret friend or relative that lasts for the entire year.
- Set aside a place at home for storing gift items, cards and wrapping supplies. Knowing where to find your supplies will minimize additional purchasing. Keeping these supplies in order and neatly stored will make them suitable for giving regardless of when you purchase them.
- Be realistic in the amount of money you budget for special occasions. Spend only what you can afford. Substitute money with time, effort and skills.

Gift giving should be a joyful experience for the giver and receiver. Don't kill the pleasure by wrecking the family budget.

A. My dog's breath would knock you down from 20 paces! I think his teeth might be part of the reason. They used to be nice and white, and now are covered with a brown film. He's only 3 years old. Could I clean his teeth with a toothbrush and correct this problem? How about doggy "Certs"?

A. Sorry, I don't know of any breath fresheners that would correct your dogs problem. I'm sure your dog's teeth do need cleaning. Unfortunately, a toothbrush will not remove the hard tarter you see now. What he needs is to have his teeth cleaned professionally, and then you certainly can brush his teeth with a brush. I'd recommend one made specifically for dogs and cats. There are several flavors of toothpaste available which will make the job more pleasant for you and your dog. As dogs (and cats, too) get older, their teeth do accumulate the ingredients for tarter: food particles and bacteria, leading to plaque and then tarter. Under that tarter, bacteria set up housekeeping, and that infection is constantly being picked up by the bloodstream and carried to the internal organs, especially the heart and kidneys. Naturally, next to vaccinations and proper nutrition, in my opinion, dental care is the most important thing you can do to keep your pet healthy. Speaking of dental care...In keeping with our Anniversary Health Clinic, for the remainder of October, we will be offering Pet dentals for $20.00 (including the anesthetic and ultrasonic cleaning.) Extractions and antibiotics will be additional. This represents about a 50% savings. To take advantage of this once-a-year savings, call 665-1873.

Gray County 4-H presents awards at banquet

Becky Reed and Mary White received the Gold Star Awards and Grace Sutton was presented the Rookie of the Year Award at the 1987 Gray County 4-H Awards Banquet, held Tuesday, Oct. 20 in the Heritage Room of M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Reed, 15, who was also 1987 Mistress of Ceremonies at the awards banquet, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe VanZandt of Pampa. She has been a 4-H club member for six years, and her projects have included foods and nutrition, clothing, food preservation, recreation, sheep, leadership and family life.

She has served as teen leader in foods and nutrition and clothing projects, leading her own projects groups of younger 4-H'ers. She has been a member of the Gray County Recreation Team, which has provided recreation training to 4-H'ers at various county, district and state levels over the past two years.

She has participated in State 4-H Roundup, State 4-H Congress, District Electric Camp, Longhorn Recreation, State Make-It-With-Wool Contest, Special Interest Camp and a Texas-Illinois interstate exchange program.

Reed is currently serving her second term as chairman of the Gray County 4-H Council. She is a sophomore at Pampa High School.

White, 15, is the daughter of Carol White of Pampa and is a sophomore at PHS. She is in her fifth year in the Gray County 4-H program. Her strongest project is in recreation, and she is a member of the Gray County 4-H Recreation Team. Along with her team members, she has provided recreation training to over 580 4-H'ers, parents and leaders at club, county and district levels over the past two years.

White has also been active in the clothing and foods and nutrition projects. She has attended the Longhorn Recreation Lab at Brownwood.

The Rookie of the Year Award, won by Sutton, recognizes an outstanding first-year 4-H member who has an excellent participation record in 4-H projects and club activities.

Nominations for Rookie of the Year are made by 4-H club leaders. The Awards Committee, composed of one leader from each of the seven 4-H clubs in the county, decides who will receive the award.

Sutton finished first in her division at the county fashion show. She competed in the method demonstration contest, finishing second in the foods and nutrition category at District Roundup.

She exhibited items in this year's Gray County 4-H project fair, and completed a record book in Home Environment which received a blue ribbon at the district level.

Outstanding leader awards were presented to John Oxley and Judy and Dennis Williams. Recipients of the awards are determined by the Gray County 4-H Councils. The president and council delegate of each of the seven county 4-H clubs make up the Council.

Oxley has been a 4-H leader for four years and has been active in the Gray County 4-H Horse Project. Since he became leader of the horse project group, several horse project activities have become annual events.

He helped establish the 4-H Trail Ride four years ago, and under his direction, the Gray County 4-H Horse Project group has conducted a "Special Rodeo" for mentally handicapped persons in the Pampa area for the last two years. Special Rodeo participants are from Pampa Sheltered Workshop and Activity Center, and the special education department of Pampa Independent School District.

The Williamses are leaders of Star Pirate 4-H Club in Lefors. They moved to Gray County about two years ago and started the Star Pirate club at that time. The club now has over 20 members.

Dennis Williams has started a shotgun project in Lefors, with safety and practice sessions as well as a father and son pheasant hunt last fall. He also helps supervise various livestock project animals in the Lefors area.

Judy Williams is currently chairman of the Gray County 4-H Adult Leaders Council and is leader for the foods and nutrition, arts and crafts and clothing projects.

Teen leaders have assumed full leadership roles of a project group. The outstanding junior and teen leaders were nominated for the awards by their 4-H club leaders.

The I Dare You award was presented to Heather Kludt and Sherri McDonald. Winners of this award are selected in recognition of excellence in character and well-balanced personal development, as well as leadership potential.

Danny Parkerson, manager of M.K. Brown Auditorium, received the Friend of 4-H Award, given each year to individuals or organizations outside of the 4-H program who benefit the Gray County 4-H program.

Former girlfriend should let this sleeping dog lie

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about a married man's former girlfriend sending the man's wife all the intimate love letters he wrote to that girlfriend during a long-distance affair?

The married man lied to the girlfriend during the whole affair — saying he was not married. Would it be too harsh to notify the wife in this manner? The evidence is overwhelming. The man could never talk his way out of it in a million years.

CONSIDERING IT

DEAR CONSIDERING: Although the man doesn't deserve to be let off lightly, I would not send his wife the damning evidence. It would punish her more cruelly than him — and she didn't wrong you.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This concerns a 25-year-old man who wears a partial plate consisting of a retainer and two front teeth. Regardless of where he eats, he takes this retainer out of his mouth and places it on the table in front of him — then proceeds to eat. Needless to say, I think this is disgusting, and it ruins my appetite.

Granted, he probably can't eat with this retainer in his mouth, but why should the rest of us have to put up with his bad manners? Since he eats at my table quite often, would it be proper to suggest that he put it out of sight during the meal? I am embarrassed having friends for meals when he is here.

He is my daughter's boyfriend. Abby, I have asked her to speak to him about this, but she says she can't hurt his feelings.

REPULSED IN CANADA

DEAR REPULSED: Feelings, schmeelings, this is no job for you. Assign it to your daughter; he's her boyfriend. It's time he learned that this is not acceptable, and she's the one to teach him.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two small children and am separated from my husband. I was very lonely after I got on my own, and I entered into a relationship with a man who became so possessive and jealous that I stopped seeing him. Then he started circling the block around my house and slowing up when he passed my place to get a good look. After a while, he started to pull into my driveway and park there, waiting for me to come out. If I didn't come out, he'd sleep in his car all night! Abby, he doesn't leave me alone.

I feel like a prisoner in my own home, as I don't want to come out while he's there. I went down to the police station and made out a report, but they said there is nothing they can do until this man commits some kind of crime.

I am afraid of him. Can you help me?

DESPERATE IN DETROIT

DEAR DESPERATE: This man is harassing you. Furthermore, when he drives into your driveway and stays there for hours, he is invading your privacy. Call the police again when he is parked in the driveway, and let them deal with him.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Didn't you once compare people who dominate every conversation with pigs? And if so, what was the exact quote?

D.J. IN TULSA

DEAR D.J.: "The person who makes a habit of hogging every conversation is no better than a pig who comes to the table and eats all the food."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My father is a wonderful man in almost every way, but he is a chronic fault-finder when it comes to my mother. He tells her she is too fat, doesn't dress right, doesn't wear her hair right, etc. Mom is quite used to his criticism and takes it all with a grain of salt, but his latest gripe takes the cake: He told her that she embarrasses him in public restaurants because when she eats her dinner roll before dinner, she butters the outside of the whole roll and eats it just like that. He said she should break (or cut) it in half, and butter only the inside of the roll like "normal" people. I say, "Who cares?"

MOM'S CHAMPION, WOODLAND, MAINE

DEAR CHAMPION: Your father is correct concerning the proper way to eat a dinner roll, but that does not excuse his manner of criticism. But in my opinion, kindness should take precedence over table manners.

* * *

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

BRIDAL BOUQUETS

by Sherry Thomas

THANK-YOU NOTES

Let's face it, writing thank-you notes is a chore; but it's also just a small reflection of the love and good wishes that went into planning and shopping for the gifts you receive. Here are some tips for making your thank-you writing easier and more appropriate.

* * *

No law says the bride alone is responsible for the thank-you notes; the gifts are for both bride and groom, so both can respond. Although you may want to write personally to close friends and relatives, it's usually wise not to divide up the writing chores by "your family" and "mine"; it's better to alternate.

* * *

Notes don't have to be formal. Address the person as you usually do — "Aunt Sue," "Jimmy," etc. If you are writing a note to your husband's friends or relatives, find out how he usually addresses them, and use that name.

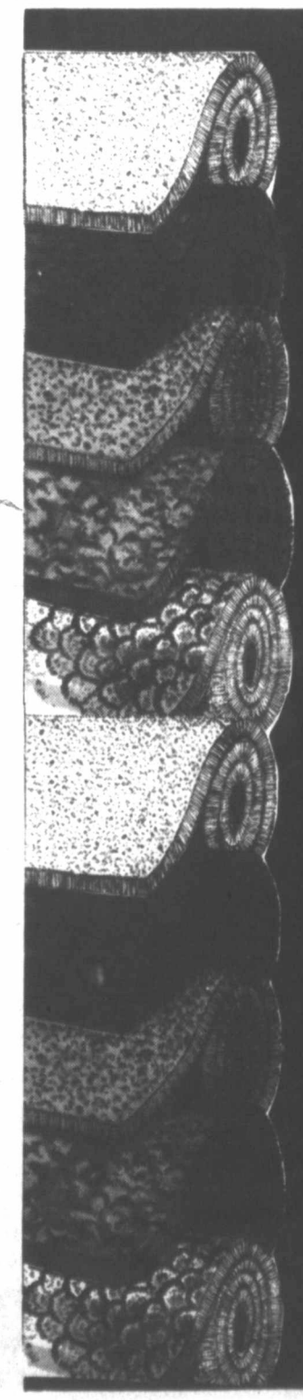

* * *

Thank you notes, with a personal touch, are always necessary - whether or not you've said it in person, whether or not you've got printed cards to send. However, it is okay to wait a little longer to write thank-you's for gifts personally delivered; the folks who sent gifts by mail or by store delivery will be the most anxious to know if you received them.

'Tunnel of Love' takes Bruce on a different road

By PAUL PINKHAM
Senior Staff Writer

Before you ever open Bruce Springsteen's Tunnel of Love, you know it's bound to be different.

The Boss — who has appeared on the covers of past albums dressed in a sleeveless jersey, a black leather jacket or a greasy undershirt — is sporting a white shirt and western string tie on this one, while leaning against a '60s model car.

Tunnel of Love is not Born in the USA, Born to Run or The River. There are no "Jungleland" anthems, and nothing near as fun as "Cadillac Ranch."

The album — though not without a degree of social consciousness — also lacks the biting social commentary of Born in the USA.

If comparisons need to be made, Tunnel of Love probably most closely resembles Nebraska — by far Springsteen's most introspective work — or the somber tones of "I'm On Fire" and "My Hometown," from the commercially successful Born in the USA.

The shuffling ballad, "Two Faces," and the album's first release, "Brilliant Disguise," talk about the masks all of us wear in relationships, and how the altered personalities behind the masks seek to destroy the love we've found.

Honest introspection isn't the only comparison that can be made with Nebraska. Gone, like before, are Clarence Clemons' wailing sax solos that helped make Springsteen's Jersey Shore Rock unique. In fact, The Boss performs many of the instrumental tracks on Tunnel of Love himself.

Clemons, the longtime co-star of the E Street troupe, makes but one appearance on Tunnel of Love, singing back-up on "When You're Alone," a simple statement of pervasive loneliness.

And on the new album, Springsteen reverts to the storyteller of old on a few cuts, like "Cautious Man," a possibly autobiographical song about a "cautious man of the road" who falls in love and eventually marries.

"On his right hand, Billy'd tatooed the word love, and on his left hand was the word fear. And in which hand he held his fate was never clear," Springsteen writes.

"Spare Parts," the hardest blues-rocker on the album, also tells a story — about a girl, a boy and their illegitimate child. It's a somewhat common Springsteen theme, though plenty different from "The River."

Nebraska had no hits, and Tunnel of Love probably won't have many either. Not because the music's not good — it is — but because Springsteen is merely stepping back from the passion for awhile to look at life in a new way.

Tunnel of Love opens with Springsteen singing a cappela on a bouncy "Ain't Got You," kind of a modern-day folk parallel to the jazz classic "I Can't Get Started." The upbeat tune belies the title as The Boss chants about having everything in life a man could want, except "I ain't got you."

"Tougher Than the Rest" and "All That Heaven Will Allow" are working-class tales of love, lost and found.

But melancholy introspection steals the day, and The Boss proves he can still turn a phrase like no one else.

The album's strongest cut is the title song, on which Springsteen blatantly returns to his Jersey Shore roots. The "Tunnel of Love" is an amusement park ride that symbolizes this roller coaster ride called life, complete with real-live fun-park screams from the roller coaster at Point Pleasant Beach, N.J.

The park is fun and scary at the same time.

"It ought to be easy, ought to be simple enough. Man meets a woman and they fall in love," the Jersey poet writes. "But the house is haunted and the ride gets rough. And you've got to learn to live with what you can't rise above if you want to ride on down in through this tunnel of love."

The theme is the same on "One Step Up" and "Valentine's Day," two more songs about trying to hold on to love in the face of temptation, fear and loneliness.

But Springsteen reaches deeper inside himself than ever before on "Walk Like a Man," a tribute to his father, with whom he has had a stormy relationship. The autobiographical song tells of Springsteen's fleeting thoughts on his wedding day, as he hopes that he can walk in his father's footsteps, like he did as a child trying to "Walk Like a Man."

Those searching for some deeper meaning to life and love won't find it on Tunnel of Love, but they'll sure be reminded that they're searching.

However, those seeking the infantile drivel that generally resounds from the pop airwaves these days will, as usual, be disappointed by The Boss and his latest effort.

Hotel robbery exciting story

THE MAN WHO ROBBED THE PIERRE. By Ira Berkow. Antheneum. 310 pages. $17.95.

If you find yourself staring at the same familiar titles in the mystery section of your bookstore, take a turn over to the nonfiction section for Ira Berkow's The Man Who Robbed the Pierre.

The reader who enjoys the amiable rogue will find the characters in this real life caper as colorful as he or she would want. A cut above the normal thugs of the police blotter, Bobby Comfort is the kind of hood who tips the hotel employees left bound and gagged in a depleted vault.

Fans of the police procedural school will find a fine story of how a case is really broken. A piece of luck here and a stupid mistake there and the biggest hotel robbery in history is solved.

There's no surprise ending. The case is history, and the reader knows how it is going to turn out.

But the characters, the detailed plotting of the heists and Berkow's skills as a storyteller keep the reader's interest as we follow Comfort as he grows from young hood to master criminal.

Unlike the criminals of fiction, Comfort is a family man who lies to his wife when he leaves home for a job and calls home on New Year's Eve, the night before he steals millions in cash and jewels from one of New York City's most exclusive hotels.

Jim Belushi changing act in new roles

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — It's surprising to find Jim Belushi occupying an office in the Myrna Loy building at Lorimar studios — or any office, for that matter.

Belushi behind an executive's desk? He would seem more in character behind a row of beer bottles at a saloon.

Yet he can be found these days in the White Horse Productions suite of the Loy building. Lorimar, new owner of MGM studios, has renamed landmarks after MGM immortals. Just so you won't think that he has gone too straight, the office contains such mementos as a football autographed by Chicago Bears stars and a genuine Jim McMahon headband.

It does appear that Belushi has changed his act, despite a recent misdemeanor battery and assault charge stemming from a traffic incident. He's even billed as James Belushi in his new Tri-Star film, The Principal.

Belushi stars with Lou Gossett Jr. and Rae Dawn Chong as principal of a seemingly unsalvageable inner-city high school. He describes his role of Rick Latimer as "a lost soul, as I was a few years ago."

"I got fired from Saturday Night Live at the same time as I was getting a divorce," he said. "It was a period of my life when I wouldn't grow up. It was the same thing with Rick Latimer. You need something to turn you around, and the responsibility of the school does it for Rick Latimer; he realizes that these kids need a lot."

Belushi admitted that the 1982 drug death of his brother, John, contributed to his tailspin. Jim dabbled in the drug culture during his "hip period" in the 1970s, but has not had a drug problem. Beer was something else.

"I did this play in which I drank three beers a show, eight shows a week," he said. "After the show I'd have a couple of beers. I was in that show for four months, and by the time it ended I was a heavy drinker.

"Then I went on Saturday Night Live, and it had gotten away from me. At one point I got fired. It wasn't because I was drinking ... I wasn't playing the game; I wasn't playing by the rules. ... I was being a punk.

"When I got fired, it really slapped me around," he said.

For a time Belushi seemed in danger of becoming a carbon copy of his famous brother. That changed last year. In the highly dramatic Salvador, he played a hard-driving rock disc jockey. About Last Night cast him as an obnoxious foul-mouthed participant in the singles scene.

"As a result of both pictures, Tri-Star and Lorimar said, 'OK, let's gamble on him,' " said Belushi. His company is developing projects, one of them a script about Welsh poet Dylan Thomas.

Book exposes murders and swindles

THE CBS MURDERS. By Richard Hammer. Morrow. 220 Pages. $16.95.

In the spring of 1982, New York City was gripped by one of the strangest, ugliest and most sensational murder cases in the city's modern history.

The victims were three men, respectable citizens and all employees of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and an attractive woman newly hired as a bookkeeper by a Manhattan camera service shop. They were all shot to death at a West Side parking lot.

That wasn't all. The woman's body vanished. And though it wasn't known at the time, a female friend of the bookkeeper had disappeared earlier and probably also had been slain.

The publisher promotes The CBS Murders by Richard Hammer as a story of "greed and violence in New York's Diamond District." That it was — and then some.

But it was the killing of the three CBS men, all innocent of anything except trying to aid a woman in distress, that horrified New Yorkers beyond measure.

It led the mayor and top city officials to order no resource spared in snaring the perpetrator — fast. Yet it was to prove not so easily done. It came very near being the perfect crime.

In time, however, an appalling tale of multimillion-dollar swindles in the jewelry industry was to unfold. Some of the revelations were so astounding as to be near unbelievable.

Hammer has done a superb job of pulling all the incredible facets of the bizarre case together in such a way as to keep the reader truly spellbound.

Brazosport plant processes Texas Gulf Coast crab meat

JOHN MITCHELL
The Brazosport Facts

CLUTE (AP) — Ray Wittman wants to bring a little bit of Chesapeake Bay flavor to the Texas Gulf Coast.

The Maryland native has been operating what he says is the only crab-processing plant in the area since July with the help of his wife, Elsie. They hope the endeavor will culminate in the marketing of their own brand of crab meat products.

Wittman said he and his wife discovered after moving to Brazosport that there was no local outlet to get the fresh seafood that made Maryland famous.

"I noticed there was a big demand for crab meat," he said, "but nowhere to get it."

"It's surprising how these folks go out of state to get their crab," he said. "There is quite a need in this area."

The great local demand for crab is matched by a good supply. Wittman said because the supply is so steady, prices for the crabs have remained the same for the last few years. More money can be made during the off season, which in the Gulf is from late December to February.

The former Bechtel Power Corp. engineer opened the Brazosport Boulevard processing plant, Brazosport Seafood Specialties, which also serves as a retail seafood business, after getting an education in the business from his parents, who owned a restaurant in the Free State.

The opportunity didn't come without a share of doubts, especially when Wittman learned that Texas rules for processing crabs are different from those to which he was accustomed.

"From Maryland to here, it was learning to do it all over again," he said.

Of particular difference, Wittman said, are requirements governing the cooking. The Texas Health Department acts as a watchdog over crab-processing plants across the state, he said, because the chance is greater with crab than with other seafood that contamination can spread during the preparation.

"You've got to be very careful with crab meat and the way you handle it," he said. "It's a delicate seafood."

Although he chooses not to rock the boat, Wittman contends studies have shown that Texas regulations for processing crab can increase the chance of contamination as opposed to the methods he learned in Maryland.

The processing cycle begins when the seafood is brought to the back door of the business by three different local crabbers, who make their catches throughout the waters of the southern part of the county.

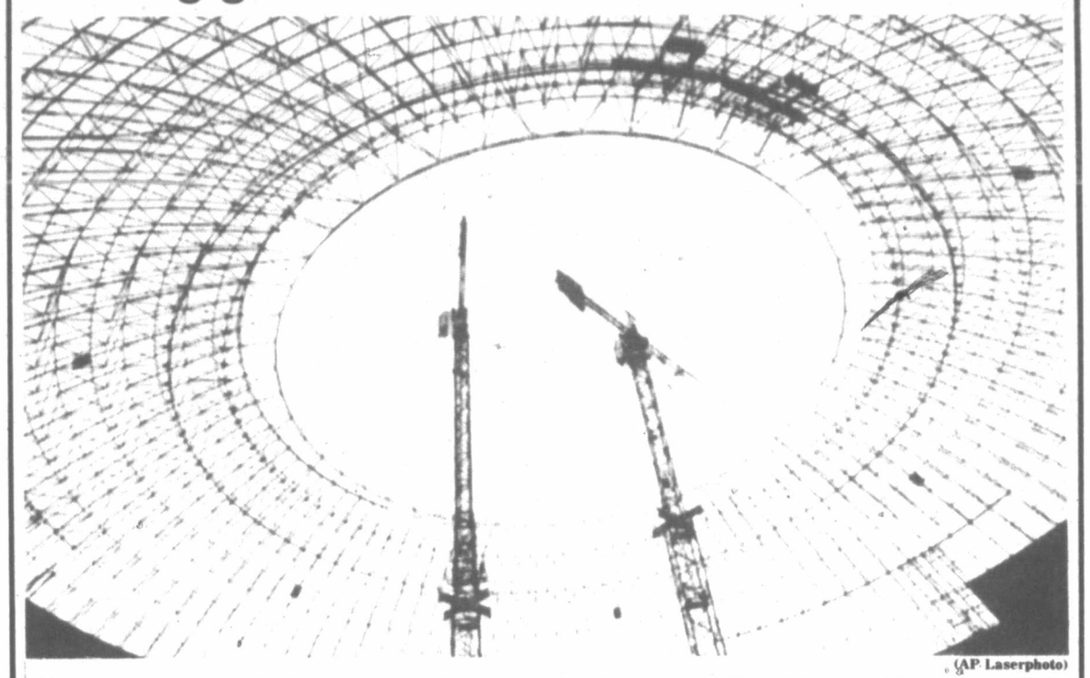

Male and female crabs, stunned by cold after being kept overnight in a cooler, are separated and steamed in a large vat that holds up to 200 pounds. Wittman said he is able to turn out 200 pounds every half hour and now processes about 400 pounds of crabs per day.

After being cooked and flushed with water, the crabs are cut up and torn apart according to types of meat by four to six different pickers. Wittman will sell deluxe, jumbo and body, or extra meat, as well as the claws.

The time and skill needed to prepare the crabs, he said, are probably the main reason there aren't more plants in the area.

Good times are in the offing for you in the year ahead. In several areas where you previously met defeat, you will now achieve victory.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Friends are prepared to do nice things for you today, provided they don't feel it's something you expect from them. Be grateful, not grabby. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In your commerical dealings today, something may be offered to you that could have strings attached. Don't be afraid to look a gift horse in the mouth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Detach yourself from associates today who are not in complete harmony with your aims and purposes. You're capable of getting what you want on your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This can be a very productive day for you, provided you don't do important assignments hastily. Be patient and thorough with each task you undertake.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Benefits from a shared venture are possible today. Just make sure that everyone involved protects the other guy's interests and not just his or her own.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your second thoughts might not be your best ones today, so don't discount your early conclusions. It would be a shame to water down good ideas.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Before farming out work today to costly repair people, re-examine the problem to see if it's something you can do yourself and save the expense.

Big farm program payments help farmers, hurt suppliers

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the favorite words — some say a non-word — of Agriculture Department economists these days is "input," meaning something that goes into the production of crops and livestock, such as fertilizer, machinery, energy and hired labor.

Plainly put, many of the input people are having a rough time, just as the nation's farmers are pulling out of the worst, sustained economic nosedive since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

Huge spending on federal farm programs helped boost the net cash income of farmers to a record $52 billion in 1986, and USDA economists say it could peak again at $54 billion to $58 billion this year.

Three agency economists — LeRoy Hansen, Harry Vroomen and Stan Daberkow — take a look at some of the effects farm commodity programs are having on inputs, recognizing also that the payments have helped boost net cash income to record levels.

"Yet farmers who participate in these programs are required to reduce planted acreage, which in turn reduces the demand for agricultural inputs," says their report in the latest issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine.

"While past programs often increased commodity support prices and encouraged additional input use, the current programs lower support prices to foster U.S. competitiveness in international markets."

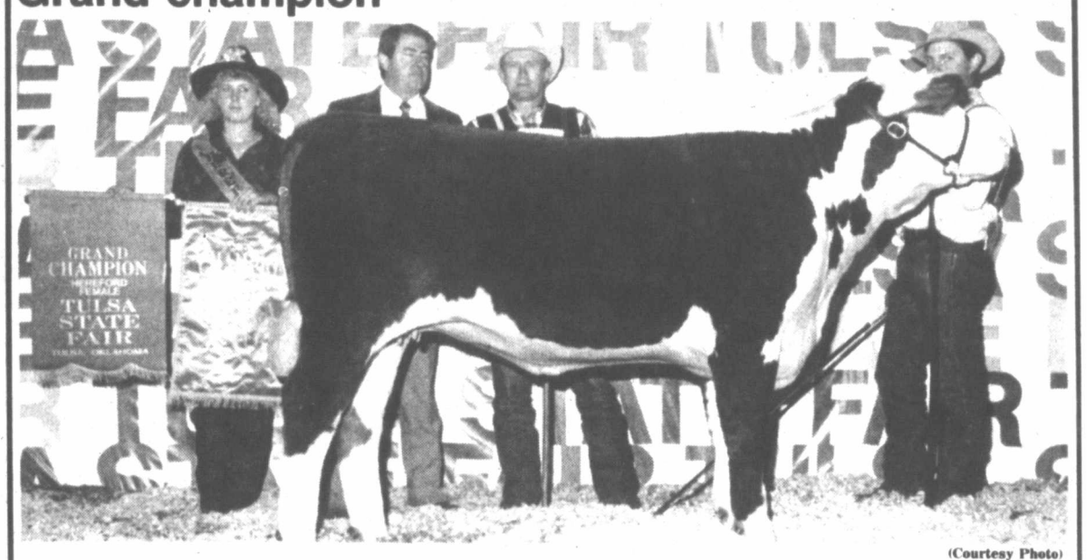

The report added: "Input industries, which once enjoyed higher demand for their output from farm programs, have had to adjust to a new environment."

Manufacturers' profit margins are being squeezed by lower sales and by pressures to reduce prices or hold increases to a minimum. In many cases, that has translated into layoffs and plant closings.

"Farm cash expenses in 1986 for manufactured inputs (pesticides, fertilizers, electricity and fuels and oils) were 29 percent below 1981," the report said. "Farmers' expenditures for seed were down 12 percent from 1981. Real expenditures for farm machinery in 1986 were only 27 percent of the 1979 peak."

The planted acreage of U.S. crops peaked in 1981 and has fallen gradually since. There was a dramatic fall in acreage in 1983 due to a one-shot push to curb plantings under a PIK, or payment-in-kind, program, and a rebound in 1984. But the report said those were exceptions to the trend. By last year, the planted acreage of crops was down 12 percent from 1981.

Large inventories will keep meat prices down this fall, next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Livestock producers are seeing prices weaken this fall as more cattle, hogs and chickens head for market, and Agriculture Department economists say the outlook is for more of the same next year.

On the average, Americans in 1988 can expect a record per capita supply of 221.9 pounds of red meat and poultry, retail weight equivalent, up from an average of 215.9 pounds this year, also a record level, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday.

Despite the weaker livestock sector, farmers nationally in 1987 are still headed for a record year in terms of net cash income, the report said. No projections were made for income in 1988.

Overall, the agency projected 1987 net cash income from farming in a range of $54 billion to $58 billion, up from the previous high of $52 billion in 1986. That was unchanged from the agency's forecast last month.

The new outlook report, a summary of one to be issued later, indicated that 1987 livestock cash receipts might total $73 billion to $75 billion, slightly less than had been forecast previously. Crop sales were unchanged at $58 billion to $60 billion.

"Competition among meats probably will keep beef prices from rising, despite smaller beef supplies," the report said. "Hog output is expanding, and pork production in 1988 may be up 10 percent from 1987. Broiler production continues to increase and may run 5 percent higher next year, with lower prices expected."

In its latest projections, the agency said 1988 commercial red meat production could be almost 38.6 billion pounds, up from just under 38.2 billion pounds this year.

PRAIRIE DOG DEMONSTRATION

Remember that this next Thursday is our Prairie Dog Control Field Day.

The demonstration site is located one-half mile west of the intersection of Loop 171 and Highway 70, just north of Pampa. The prairie dog town is located just north-west of the old farmstead in that vicinity.

The program starts at 10 a.m. and will be presented by Rick Gilliland, wildlife damage specialist from Amarillo.

He will also take orders for the two primary control materials — a pelleted fumigant or poison grain. Persons wishing to order either of these materials will need a certified private applicator's license as these products are restricted use pesticides.

Prairie dog control work needs to be done on an area-wide basis. This is one activity that definitely requires neighbor cooperation. Control won't do much good if only a few prairie dogs are left in the vicinity or across a fence line.

Prairie dogs travel great distances and easily re-infest old town sites. Land owners need to put out some extra effort to eradicate their dog towns. It seems that the prairie dog population has really increased during the last year or so. Help get all of your prairie dog neighbors involved.

BEEF COW-CALF SEMINAR

On Tuesday, Nov. 3, a seminar on "Timely Management of Beef Cows" will be held in Pampa at the Clyde Carruth Livestock Pavillion.

This is an up-date program aimed at cow-calf producers. The program starts at 9:30 a.m. following registration at 9 a.m.

Dr. John McNeil, Extension beef cattle specialist, Amarillo, is the lead speaker, discussing "What Management Factors Are Economically Important In Cow Herd Management."

At 9:45 a.m., a session on "Herd Health Management Programs" will be presented by Dr. Charles Deyhle, D.V.M., Clarendon, and Dr. David Woods, D.V.M., McLean.

Dr. John Beverly, Extension reproduction specialist, College Station, will discuss "Optimizing Reproductive Performance of Cows and Replacement Heifers", at 10:30 a.m. He will be followed at 11:30 by Dr. Dave Hutcheson, research nutritionist, Amarillo, discussing "Native Grass Might Not Be As Good As We Think."

There will be a free Dyers Bar-B-Que lunch at noon, courtesy of the companies with display booths at the seminar.

Following lunch, at 1 p.m., a session on "Fly Tag Resistance — What Are My Options?" will be presented by Dr. Carl Patrick, Extension entomologist, Amarillo.

At 1:15 p.m., the discussion topic will be "What Do Feed Yards and Packers Really Want" and will be presented by Les McNeill, Carson County Feed Yard, Panhandle, and Ed Wright, Ed Wright Cattle Company, Amarillo.

The last session will start at 2:15 p.m. on "Cow Body Condition and Reproductive Performance". Dr. Beverly will handle this discussion, which will feature live animal demonstrations. The program will conclude by 3 p.m.

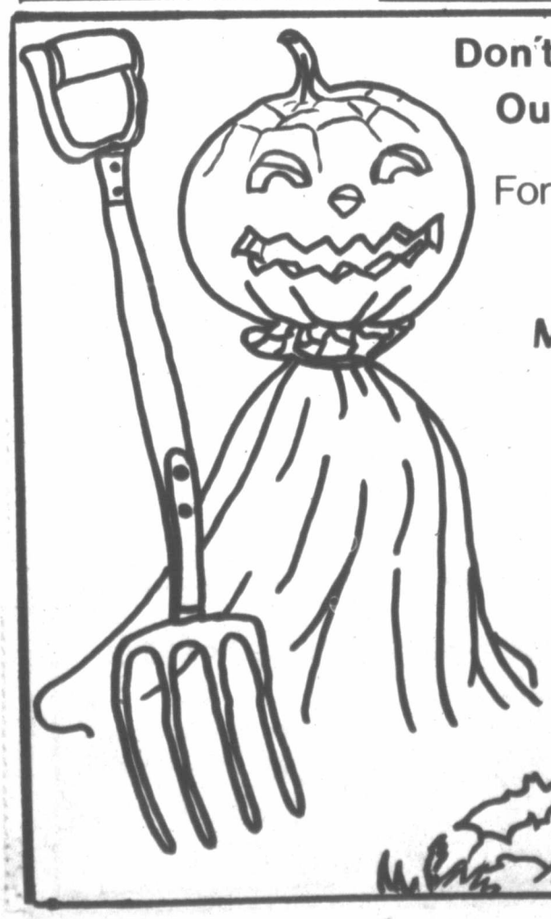

Cow-calf operators need to mark this date on your calendar and plan to attend.

Oilman says independents should look 'down under'

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Midland Reporter-Telegram

ABILENE (AP) — The future for American's independent oilmen may be "down under" says a West Texas oilman who plans to drill on what he calls Prudhoe-style possibilities in Australia.

"Australia is vast, unexplored and has a stable government. Oil and gas exploration is just getting under way there, and there are only a handful of independents working there," says Bill Tindell, an Abilene geologist and former chairman and chief executive officer of Abilene-based Westico Energy Co. He calls Australia one of the few places left where an independent oilman can "roll the dice on something big."

"Tindell along with a group of independents from three states is preparing to explore a 7,344,000-acre drilling concession which was recently awarded to the group by the state of Queensland, Australia. In size, the drilling concession is equivalent to almost 20 percent of the Permian Basin.

Beginning in April, the oilmen from Texas, Oklahoma and Illinois will drill wildcats on five of 13 subsurface structures identified as potential oil producers within the concession. The subsurface structures were identified by Landsat satellite imagery and later confirmed by magnetic surface mapping.

Tindell said the independents are excited not only by the area size of structures, but also the closure or thickness of the formations.

Closure, the distance from the top of a formation to the point it closes on a contour map, range from 250 feet on one structure to 400 feet on another.

In area, the smallest structure to be evaluated is 16 square miles in size and the largest 42 square miles. He noted that the subsurface structures in the Australian concession are much larger that those that led to the discovery of many major West Texas oilfields.

"The area reminds me of West Texas prior to the discovery of the first fields 70 years ago. At that time, the only geology was surface structure data which led to the discovery of many fields," Tindell said.

He said well control for geological data was practically non-existent, adding that more wells had been drilled in West Central Texas' Jones County than in all of Australia.

Nearet production to the drilling concession is 300 miles to the south in the Jackson field which produces from the highly permeable Permian and Jurassic sandstones, and contains wells that have completed for 5,000 barrels per day on initial production.

The independents are also encouraged by the fact that wildcatting in that area of Queensland has shown a 47 percent success rate, compared with about 10 percent in this country.

While geologist Dr. Jan Cannon, one of the investors in the Australian venture, feels similar production could be found in the subsurface structures selected by the group, he also believes that reserves similar to those in Alaska's Prudhoe Bay could exist in the Granite Wash formation beneath the sandstones. "Dr. Cannon and the rest of us are very excited about the possiblities of big reserves to be found," said Tindell.

The Abilene wildcatter sees unlimited petroleum possibilities for the independent oilman in Australia, whicch he describes as the very best place in the world to explore for oil and gas.

"Oil and gas exploration is just getting started in Australia, and there is plenty of room for independent oilmen. All of the major oil companies are there, with very few independents. But the area is so big there is room for everyone," said Tindell.

He said independents also stand an equal chance with majors in the bidding process. Seventeen oil companies, including majors, competed with the Abilene group for the Australia concession, but Tindell says his group won the authorization to prospect (ATP) because of their committment to drill.

"Australia is interested in granting ATPs to companies that have sold drilling plans, and have demonstrated a track record for drilling," says Tindell, who has drilled two previous exploratory wells southwest of Brisbane, Australia.

Oklahoma oil well will be named for Midland toddler

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The world watched and waited while rescue workers in Midland, Texas, tried desperately to get 18-month-old Jessica McClure out of a dry well.

Now there's another well in her future after a Texas company said last week that it plans to drill the Jessica McClure No. 1 in Oklahoma's Seminole County.

United Petroleum Resources Inc. of Dallas said it also plans to give the girl a 1-percent interest in the well that bears her name.

Sheryl Pratt, president of the oil company, said the gesture "is my gift to them." She said the family will be able to use the money "any way they see fit."

Ms. Pratt said she could not say how much money will go to Jessica. The amount depends, Ms. Pratt said, "strictly and solely on the amount of oil and gas that will come out of the ground."

Rescue workers pulled the child from the abandoned well Oct. 16 after she had been trapped for 58 hours.

Is mummy Joseph?

Mummy of an ancient Egyptian minister named Yuya, found in 1905 and kept in the Cairo Museum, could be the biblical patriarch Joseph who led the tribe of Isreal into Egypt, says researcher Ahmed Osman in a new book, "Stranger in the Valley of Kings."

Pari-mutuel vote will decide one of state's oldest controversies

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans on Nov. 3 will vote on whether to allow pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog racing, deciding one of Texas' longest-running controversies.

The years have done little to alter the arguments.

While proponents claim approval of the measure would boost the Texas economy by $1.2 billion, opponents insist such projections are overblown and that legalized gambling would lead to crime and corruption.

"The horse racing industry has a long history of over-promising revenues, attendance and jobs," contends Sue Cox of Texans Who Care, the leading opposition group.

"We don't have to convince anybody. We just have to get them to vote," counters Ricky Knox, executive director of the Texas Horse Racing Association. "I'm 99 percent sure it will pass."

The binding referendum on the statewide election ballot would authorize pari-mutuel wagering on a county-by-county, local option basis for the first time in 50 years.

Residents of 56 counties will vote on pari-mutuel betting for their counties at the same time they cast votes for statewide approval.

Cameron County residents will vote on both horse and greyhound betting. Local option wagering for greyhound racing will be on the ballot in Galveston and Nueces counties. The other counties will vote on horse track betting.

Pari-mutuel is a system in which those who bet and win are paid in proportion to the total amount wagered on a given race. Racing historians say the system began in Paris, and the first state to adopt it was New York in 1887.

Texas had pari-mutuel betting on horses at state-approved tracks in 1905, but it was outlawed in 1909 as part of a nationwide protest against gambling. Race track betting made a comeback during the Great Depression, presumably as a source of revenue.

It was legalized again in Texas in 1933, and Vice President John Nance Garner joined a crowd of 12,000 at Arlington Downs to watch the return of the sport.

In 1937, during a special legislative session ordered by Gov. Jimmy Allred, the betting law was repealed. Pari-mutuel betting on dog racing never has been legal in Texas.

A half century later, over the objections of a governor who said he would vote against the proposal, Texans got the chance to decide on resuming pari-mutuel betting.

Then-Gov. Mark White in 1986 allowed a bill on pari-mutuel wagering to become law without his signature. It was that legislation that put the question on the ballot this November.

"All of my personal and religious values are against it. There is no place for it among what I believe is good and right and best," White said. However, he added, unless the issue was put to a majority statewide vote, "this divisive issue will come back again to tie up — and even plague — future sessions of the Legislature."

Gov. Bill Clements, who defeated White last year, has delayed appointing members of the Texas Racing Commission, pending the Nov. 3 vote.

Texans Who Care, a coalition which has received significant amounts of money from Methodist and Baptist churches, has campaigned against betting at the track, claiming it will lead to organized crime and public corruption; animal abuse, and compulsive gambling, which will tear families apart.

"It's a dying business that raises almost no money for the state," said Ms. Cox, campaign manager for the opposition group.

Statements filed with the secretary of state's office showed that the Dallas-based Texans Who Care had spent nearly $100,000 by late last month in its campaign. The coalition paid for Alabama lawyer Dale Wallace to fly to Austin to describe the financial woes of the Birmingham Turf Club, the nation's newest track.

Pari-mutuel supporters, including the Texas Horse Racing Association and Texans for Economic Development, maintain that betting will generate tax revenue for the state; boost the horse industry, which would create jobs, and provide entertainment that Texans have said in repeated public opinion polls they want.

Texans for Economic Development reported expenditures of nearly $85,000

A study for the racing association projected a boost to the Texas economy of $1.2 billion as a result of pari-mutuel betting. The Texas Department of Agriculture has estimated horse betting would create more than 9,000 jobs in the farm economy by the year 2000.

Those figures are disputed by Texans Who Care.

A Texas A&M poll sponsored by Harte-Hanks Communications showed 69 percent favoring pari-mutuel betting, with 27 percent against. This week, however, Texans Who Care said a statewide poll of likely voters by KXAS-TV of Dallas-Fort Worth showed a 12 percent loss of support for pari-mutuel gambling since spring.

Without offering any predictions, political scientist Richard Murray of the University of Houston, said: "Everybody's mind is made up."

Man asks for second sentence

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A convicted burglar received an eight-year prison sentence after he told a judge the original punishment of seven years was bad luck.

David Gaitan, 22, told State District Judge David Berchelmann Thursday that he feared seven was his unlucky number.

The judge continued with the court docket and about 30 minutes later, asked Gaitan if he still wanted an increased sentence.

People say they believe in hard work — this man lives it

ORANGE (AP) — It is a popular saying that when people really want to find work, they can — no matter the odds.

Were people who hold that belief ever to organize, a 44-year-old cobbler in Orange named Autry Beaty might well serve as the group's president.

Beaty has worked as a cobbler in Romano's Shoe Shop in Orange for six years now. He has never missed a day, and has been late for work perhaps 10 times.

While that average may not astound many people, Beaty's circumstances might. In order to arrive at work at all, Beaty travels 45 miles each direction from Silsbee over Highway 69, Highway 96 and Interstate 10. And he does it, mostly, by hitchhiking. On one leg.

In 1977, Beaty was 33 years old and in his 20th year as a logger. He was cutting logs in Corregan, when his company, according to Beaty, "skidded logs in the wrong place, right under the saw hand."

In court, it was decided that Beaty's missing left leg was worth $35,000.

But Beaty doesn't spend much time bemoaning his loss. Most Orange area residents who travel the highways in the early morning have seen Beaty, waving at passing cars, smiling at everyone.

"Well, sometimes I'm friendly and sometimes I'm not," he said. "But mostly, I wave whether people wave back or not. It's a theory I have. And I just like to be friendly."

After his logging accident, Beaty found he couldn't work in the only trade he knew. He eventually found work at Goodwill Industries, repairing bicycles. Then, in his hometown of Silsbee, "I met a man who repaired shoes. And I showed up for work."

He worked there a year before coming to Romano's. When he first started hitch-hiking to Orange, he said it was a little tough.

"Saturdays and holidays were the hardest," he said. Now, he works only five days a week, Monday through Friday, starting each day with a Greyhound bus ride to Beaumont before sticking out his thumb for the rest of the trip.

"I almost catch the same ride every morning now," he said. "A lot of guys work at Du Pont, and I ride in with them."

At work, Beaty re-soles and re-heels boots and shoes. He takes the nails out of boot heels, the stitching out of the soles, glues on new soles, puts the shoe or boot on a press — which literally presses the new sole to the old shoe — hammers on a new heel, and sands it to trim.

It is a three-man shop, one of two shoe repair shops in Orange, and Beaty is the chief cobbler. He can complete a job from start to finish in about an hour.

"I like this," he said, hammering nails into another boot. "It's a good thing to be into."

When he wields the hammer, his biceps, big as saucers, hardly ripple in evidence of the six years he has spent on crutches.

Beaty and his wife, Shirley, have seven children, 16 to 23. They also have a car. "But my mother-in-law is 83 years old," the cobbler said. "It's easier for me to hitch-hike than to leave them without a car to face a medical emergency."

Jessica McClure's story touched people as few news events do

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer

MIDLAND (AP) — On a day when the Dow Jones average dropped 108 points, Nancy Reagan was preparing for a breast cancer biopsy and Iran attacked a U.S.-flagged tanker, the news at the top of many broadcasts and front pages concerned the fate of an 18-month-old girl stuck in a well.

Jessica McClure's dramatic rescue Oct. 16 was the lead story on that evening's "Nightline," which relegated to the backseat segments on the Persian Gulf war and the stock market drop.

The first lady told Jessica's parents she put off preparing for the next day's surgery to watch the televised rescue. Reporters from countries as far away as England, Argentina and Australia called Midland for updates on the effort to get the girl out of the abandoned water well.

When volunteers finally liberated the toddler after 58 hours, Midlanders poured into the nearly deserted streets, jubilantly honking their horns as they cruised around Midland Memorial Hospital, where Jessica was being treated.

Jessica's plight seemed to touch people as few news events do. Las Vegas, Nev., resident Jim Henley, who was visiting his sister in Midland, said tears welled in his eyes when the gauze-wrapped girl was pulled out of the hole and into the glare of television lights.

Journalism students are taught that three factors influence a news story's prominence: the number of people affected by the event, its degree of unusualness, and its proximity.

In Jessica's case, only a few people — relatives and close friends — actually were affected by her plight. A child falling into a well is unusual but not unknown, and hundreds of children are injured daily in accidents of all kinds. And Midland is a remote city.

"We tend to gravitate and react to the things that are closest to the heart," said sociologist Sheldon Ekland-Olson at the University of Texas in Austin.

"It's a very personal, as opposed to a very distant, type of thing. It's like these adopt-a-child programs. When someone says there are 300,000 children starving in Ethiopia, that problem seems so overwhelming. It's just that single, helpless child that springs us into action."

"We can't comprehend thousands. We can comprehend one," echoed UT psychologist Janet Spence. "We often understand tragedy on a concrete level when it happens to individuals rather than in the aggregate."

UT-El Paso sociologist E.R. Stoddard said people were concerned because of Jessica's innocence and inability to help herself.

"She's 18 months old," he said. "A 7-year-old might not have had as much sympathy. Here you had a little girl suffering and there was no one to help. She was highly vulnerable, and I think the vulnerability is something everybody can identify with."

Events like war in the Persian Gulf and falling stock prices are too remote and ambiguous for most people to passionately care about, Ms. Spence said.

"There's nothing ambiguous about a small child and a human tragedy," she said. "It has a lot of drama and a lot of human pathos in it."

Much of that drama and pathos came from the little girl's actions. Through a microphone inserted into the well, rescuers could hear Jessica crying for her mother and softly singing, "Winnie the Pooh."

"What inspired me was as young as she was, our Lord took care of her," Henley said. "That courage was just planted in her."

"She will never be forgotten, that's one thing," said Henley's sister, Bonnie Gragson of Las Vegas. "You wanted to cry, you wanted to laugh, you wanted to cheer."
