Out-of-state luck

AMARILLO — Talk about out-of-state luck. A Moses, N.M., rancher today became the first out-of-state winner of $10,000 in the Texas Lottery. Rancher Danny Witt traveled to Dalhart this morning to go to the dentist. He stopped at a convenience store and bought ten lottery tickets. The third one Witt scratched off was a $10,000 winner. Witt went to the Amarillo lottery claim center for his prize. Lottery officials say the 47-year-old Witt told them his first purchase will be a new cowboy hat. He's already bought a new pair of boots. Lottery official Andy Welch confirms the New Mexican is the first out-of-stater to win big bucks in the Texas game. The Texas Lottery started last Friday.

Elvis decision due

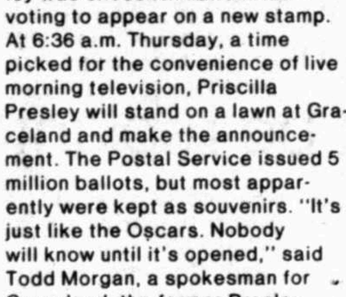

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — And the envelope please. Young rocker or jumpsuited Las Vegas star? It's almost time for the U.S. Postal Service to announce which of those two likenesses of Elvis Presley was chosen in nationwide voting to appear on a new stamp. At 6:36 a.m. Thursday, a time picked for the convenience of live morning television, Priscilla Presley will stand on a lawn at Graceland and make the announcement. The Postal Service issued 5 million ballots, but most apparently were kept as souvenirs. "It's just like the Oscars. Nobody will know until it's opened," said Todd Morgan, a spokesman for Graceland, the former Presley residence.

Curtain's down

DALLAS — The historic Texas Theatre, where Lee Harvey Oswald was captured after the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, went into foreclosure Tuesday. Joel Eastman, attorney for United Artists Theater Holding Co., said the company is expected to sell the 61-year-old theater in suburban Oak Cliff. Friends of the Texas Theatre had tried since April to raise about $50,000 to continue mortgage payments, but collected only $13,000.

Finale sets 3-way race

Clinton clinches as bruising '92 primaries end

■ Exit polls, voter surveys show strong support for Perot.

Associated Press

Bill Clinton clinched the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday and dueled Jerry Brown in California to close out the bruising 1992 primary season. The Arkansas governor and President Bush girded for a three-way race this fall against independent Ross Perot.

The Texas billionaire wasn't on any ballots, but voter surveys found strong support for his candidacy, especially in California.

Presidential politics aside, Dianne Feinstein and Rep. Barbara Boxer were projected winners in California for the Democratic nominations to two Senate seats. The Senate now contains only two women.

Clinton added New Jersey, Ohio, Alabama, Montana and New Mexico to his primary victory column, and said his triumphs should be a warning to the "forces of the status quo and forces of greed . . . the party's over, we're in for a change. We want our country back."

Clinton's support ranged from above 60 percent in Alabama and Ohio to just below in New Jersey and about 50 percent in Montana. He also led in early returns from California. With 2 percent of the precincts counted, Clinton had 53 percent and Brown 31 percent.

Brown, winless since March, proclaimed his campaign a success. He said his campaign had "never taken more than $100 from anybody. That's a miracle. It's a revolution. And, it's going to challenge the leaders of the Democratic party to get back to the grassroots."

Bush clinched the GOP nomination long ago, and fashioned one last string of primary triumphs over conservative rival Patrick Buchanan. He appealed for Republican victories this fall to end the "Washington lawmaking gridlock."

Perot, in an interview with ABC affiliate stations, said his silent support came because "the American

Navy extends investigation of sex abuse

■ Latest inquiry examines role of commanding officers responsible for incident in Las Vegas.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Navy said Tuesday it has sent the names of 70 men to their commanding officers for possible disciplinary action for their roles in the 1991 sex abuse incident at a Las Vegas pilots convention.

During the convention, Navy and Marine Corps aviators molested at least 26 women — half of them Navy officers.

Women were pushed through a gantlet of up to 200 men in a hotel hallway. Men allegedly fondled the women as they were passed up the line and in some cases removed their clothes.

Meanwhile, congressional investigators released new figures indicating that sexual harassment of women at the three military academies occurs more often than reported.

Hours after an assistant Navy secretary said the service is still pursuing its inquiry into the incident at the annual Tailhook Association convention, the Navy announced its inspector general had referred 70 names to its command.

Engineers put city drainage rules into print

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

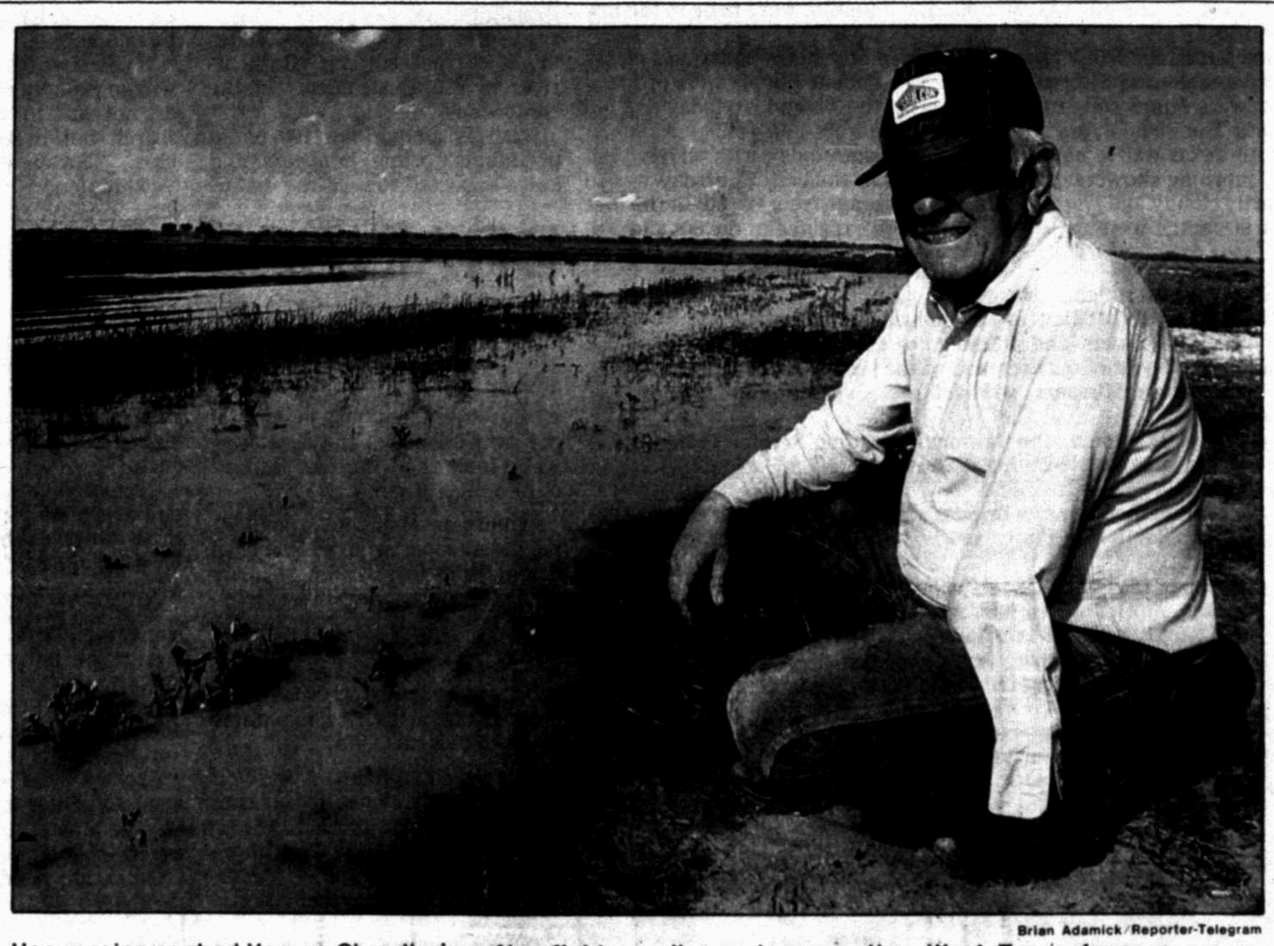

City engineers are throwing the book at developers — the drainage manual, that is.

The staff and consultants Parkhill, Smith and Cooper recently completed the new book, hoping to standardize drainage management in future development of the city. It includes city policies and pages of detailed tables that are expected to make compliance easier.

Its goal is to insure drainage plans are designed with the same calculations, said city design engineer Rene Franks.

"We wanted to do as much work up front for the engineer and put it in there," Ms. Franks said. "That way we know

Heavy rains soaked Vernon Chandler's cotton fields and turned some cotton patches into ponds. Chandler and many other West Texas farmers are replanting cotton that was washed away by the rains.

Rains have cotton farmers down, not out

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Unusually generous rains that turned the West Texas landscape from desert brown to wetlands green also converted much West Texas farmland into shallow lakes and weedy ranches into green pastures.

Much of the Midland-area cotton crop — from 25 percent to 50 percent — must be replanted because of the washout from the late May rains. Water is standing in fields.

"Some of our grounds have good swimming pools," said Vernon Chandler, who farms in the Warfield community southwest of Midland.

Despite the wet season and the rain-blessed 12-month period through May 1992, farmers will be in "pretty good shape for a (decent) cotton crop" following replanting, "if we get plenty of sunshine, which we are famous for," Chandler said. "Good sunshine — that's what we need to make the cotton now."

Chandler said he was "about ready to holler 'calf rope' on this rain."

But the farmer said he was "afraid to say 'I don't want any more rain.' I'd like to save the next one 'til the middle of July."

Chandler said his cotton was "planted and up when the third big rain came along" and soaked the land and washed much of the cotton away.

The unseasonably heavy rains and associated coolness hindered cotton farming. Cotton is a warm-to-hot-weather crop, which needs 120 to 140 days — about four to 4½ months — to be harvest-ready after planting.

And replanting — now set for early June — will bring maturing cotton dangerously close to the first-killing

Marilyn Quayle rips into Perot, defends VP

By William A. Scott
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Marilyn Quayle likens Texas billionaire Ross Perot's likely presidential bid to that of a well-funded "snake-oil salesman" running a campaign without substance because of his failure to address major issues in detail.

"I really don't think, in the end run, that the American people can be bought like that," the wife of Vice President Dan Quayle said Monday in an interview in Dallas. "It's like going back to the frontier and the snake-oil salesmen.

"You finally realize that he sold you a bill of goods. 'Trust me' only works so far. You've got to come up with what you're going to do."

Still, Quayle said the Bush campaign must view Perot's candidacy as a threat, if for no other reason than for his nearly unlimited resources to fund a campaign.

"I think you always have to be concerned with someone who can spend $300 million without batting an eye to buy the presidency," she said. "It's very sad that he would feel the American people are so gullible. And his whole line: 'I'm doing it for them.' Oh come on, he's doing it for his own little power play; that's all it is."

Perot has said he will run as an independent if voters sign petitions to put

Earth summit curtain rises; Bush, U.S. cast as villains

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The curtain rises today on the Earth Summit, and the United States has been cast as the villain.

For many, President Bush has become the No. 1 obstacle to real progress at the summit. Anti-Washington vitriol has increased as hopes fade for a tough conservation agreement.

"The United States has sabotaged the conference," said Alberto Villareal of Friends of the Earth International, an environmental group. "Bush wouldn't come if any serious agreement were going to be signed."

Greenpeace summit coordinator Joshua Karliner said Bush had "recklessly undermined the Earth Summit" and suggested the summit would be better off without him.

Lawmakers blink in bingo standoff, restore legality

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Florida legislators reversed a brief ban on bingo Tuesday, when the Senate blinked in a standoff with the House.

"You can do anything in the world and the public will forgive you," said Rep. Elvin Martinez. "But if you take away the bingo, you're a dead duck."

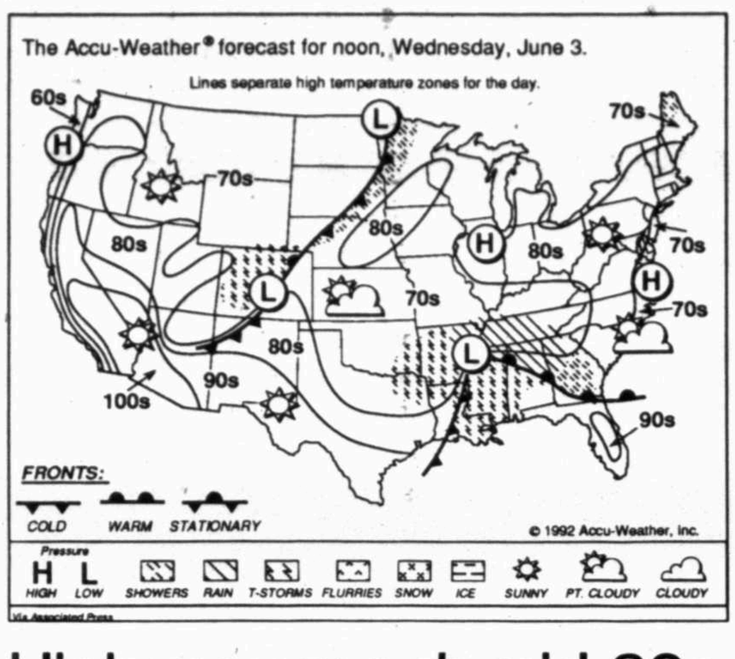

Laws authorizing bingo, which is often played for charity, passed a "sunset" deadline at 12:01 a.m. Monday, making the enormously popular game just another form of illegal gambling.

The House proposed a 30-day extension of the laws to give it time to work on tougher regulations aimed at keeping tabs on the books of bingo halls and keeping out organized crime.

But Sen. W.D. Childers, chairman of the Commerce Committee, wanted bingo exempt from an expiration deadline and blocked passage of the House proposal.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

High may reach mid-80s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-80s and variable wind at five to 15 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the upper 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high near 90.

After an overnight low of 53, Tuesday's high reached 79 compared with the record high for that date of 100 set in 1977. The record low for that date is 47 set in 1947.

STATE

Rain lingered Tuesday in Northeast Texas, but the rest of the state was partly cloudy with the most sunshine in West and Southwest Texas.

Winds were southerly at 5 to 15 miles an hour ahead of a cold front across Northwest Texas and northerly behind the front.

The North Texas forecast was for partly cloudy skies today with scattered thunderstorms in the east. It should be mostly clear tonight and Thursday. Highs today were to be in the low to mid-80s with highs on Thursday in the mid to upper 80s. Lows tonight were to be in the low to mid-60s.

Forecasters said West Texas would be mostly sunny today and partly cloudy tonight and Thursday with a slight chance of showers of thundershowers. Highs were expected to be in the 70s and 80s today and 80s and 90s Thursday. Lows were to be in the 50s and 60s.

South Texas was to have mostly cloudy skies today with widely scattered morning showers or thunderstorms in the east. Thursday was to be partly cloudy and warm. Highs were to range from the 80s in the east to the 90s in the west and south. Lows were expected in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Rain fell across much of the central part of the nation and the South on Tuesday, with flooding in Oklahoma and Texas.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the lower Mississippi Valley, the southern half of the Plains, south-central Nebraska, southwestern Missouri, west-central Alabama, and southeastern Florida.

In eastern Oklahoma, the National Weather Service issued flood warnings for at least five counties where up to 3 inches of rain fell in three hours.

Heavy rain washed out two bridges and caused minor street flooding in Oklahoma's Seminole County, but no injuries were reported, authorities reported.

Authorities in Cleveland County reported street flooding, and at least one road was impassable. In Muskogee County, Dirty Creek was at its banks and threatening to overflow.

Authorities in Port Aransas, Texas, reported that a morning tornado caused some damage at City Hall and a convenience store about a block away. No injuries were reported.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 1.32 inches at Houston; 1.28 at Corpus Christi, Texas; and 1.13 at Tulsa, Okla.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BINGO: Lawmakers reverse ban

(From 1A)

A compromise was worked out and the Senate agreed to extend the life of legal bingo until July 1, 1993. House members planned to continue work on tougher bingo regulations.

Before Gov. Lawton Chiles signed the compromise into law, playing bingo for money was illegal for 36 hours. Violators faced a misdemeanor punishable by 60 days in jail and a $500 fine.

The legislative snarl created mass confusion among bingo operators, players and law enforcement officials.

Jo Ricks, secretary of Southside Women's Club in Jacksonville, said about 200 people played bingo Monday night after she called police to make sure they wouldn't be arrested. The club raises money for scholarships.

Mike Danhi, president of Warrington Bingo near Pensacola, said he announced to players Monday night he would be closing at midnight because the law had expired. His bingo hall raises money for seven charities.

"This place went bananas. They were all booing and hissing," Danhi said. "They all called their local representatives and raised a big furor."

RIPS: Marilyn Quayle attacks Perot, Clintons him on the ballot in all 50 states. To date, he has qualified to be on the ballot in almost a dozen states, including Texas.

Quayle was in Dallas Monday afternoon before flying to Houston for the second day of a two-day fund-raising trip for Texas GOP candidates. She also took a verbal swipe at Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton and his wife, Hillary, for their remarks about the vice president's recent criticism of the TV character Murphy Brown.

"I think it's rather hysterical to have either of the Clintons — they jumped on the bandwagon pretty fast," Quayle said. "If you noticed, they weren't talking about family values until the president and vice president talked about it.

"It's rather interesting to see two people who have courted the entertainment industry," Quayle said, "and as governor and first lady of the state of Arkansas, they've not been proponents of family and family issues over the years. This a Johnny-come-lately, so it has an element of humor."

The vice president's remarks attacking the entertainment industry for "mocking the importance of fathers" by producing an episode in which the popular TV character gives birth out of wedlock drew national coverage. The remarks sparked widespread criticism from single parents and women and forced the Bush administration to walk a fine line between backing Quayle's statement and defending its strong anti-abortion sentiments.

"It doesn't help matters when prime-time TV has Murphy Brown, a character who supposedly epitomized today's highly intelligent, highly paid, professional woman, mocking the importance of fathers by bearing a child alone and calling it just another lifestyle choice," the vice president said in a recent speech in California.

Clinton, the likely Democratic nominee, was quoted in the aftermath as saying that he also believes "there are a lot of things that happen on television that are a violation of traditional family values." Hillary Clinton said Quayle's remarks demonstrate that he and the Bush administration are out of touch with the American public.

The vice president's remarks, his wife said, were taken out of context by the media.

"What the vice president said is that the problem with Murphy Brown is that they glorified being a single parent, and they eliminated any role of a father in rearing a child," she said. "And it's fine for Murphy Brown, a fictional character who isn't going to have to deal with all of the problems that a single mother does."

She said that she and the vice president had discussed the TV episode when it was first announced that the character would have a child.

"But I was in Africa when he gave the speech," she said. "I followed it on CNN international."

NAVY: Latest inquiry examines role of officers not identify, include six assault suspects, 57 people who were either at the gantlet or in nearby areas, five who may have violated conduct standards and two who possibly thwarted the inquiry.

"The inexcusable conduct of some naval aviators in Las Vegas, compounded by their subsequent refusal to assume responsibility for their conduct, has brought shame upon them personally and upon the Navy and Marine Corps as a whole," said Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III.

The Navy said the previous inquiry focused on misconduct by certain individuals. The latest investigation is examining the role of the commanding officers responsible for hospitality suites at the convention.

"Inquiry must be made as to commanding officers' knowledge about inappropriate behavior in and around those suites, and what they did about it," the Navy said in a statement.

Adm. Frank Kelso, the chief of naval operations, and Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Carl Mundy, will talk to the commanding officers to determine whether they were involved, the Navy said.

In another step, Garrett ordered two fleet commanders, Adm. Paul P.D. Miller of the Atlantic Fleet and Adm. Robert J. Kelly of the Pacific Fleet, to take a hard look at the squadron commanding officers in charge of the men.

Earlier in the day, Barbara Spyridon Pope, an assistant Navy secretary, told lawmakers angered by the incident and the stonewalling that action against the officers will be taken this week.

"It is not over yet. We are not going to let anybody walk away who was either responsible or accountable," Pope told the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on manpower and personnel.

SUMMIT: Anti-Washington vitriol increases in Rio

(From 1A)

"Uncle Filthy," was how Veja, Brazil's biggest newsweekly magazine, referred to the United States in its current edition. "Bush arrives in Rio as an enemy of the conference," it said.

Bush is among the 100 or so presidents, prime ministers and kings expected toward the end of the 12-day conference, formally called the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

"When we go to Rio, the U.S. will go proudly as the world's leader, not just in environmental research but in environmental action," Bush said Monday in Washington.

"Our country, America, retains its place at the forefront of international environmental accomplishment," he said. "Our laws have served as a model for environmental laws the world over."

But the documents the leaders will sign have been so altered — at U.S. insistence — that ecologists fear they will be useless.

The U.S. government blocked an agreement to reduce carbon dioxide emissions to 1990 levels by 2000, saying it was overly restrictive and scientifically unfounded. European leaders reluctantly accepted a diluted draft that didn't mention levels or timetables.

Many felt the United States had an obligation to curb emissions.

DRAINAGE: City engineers complete new book

(From 1A)

somebody doesn't have a different answer.

"But we're not just looking at the convenience of the developer, we're looking at the best interest of the city in general."

When a development is planned, engineers must make a number of calculations for drainage planning. To start, they must determine how much runoff the area produces in its present state and how much the planned development will change that. Then, they must make plans to compensate for added water flow.

"We're telling them, if you do it our way, it will generally be easier for you," Ms. Franks said. Otherwise, developers may face more scrutiny of their plans — a time-consuming and potentially costly prospect.

Certain standards are set for the amount of water allowed to flow through any city street. Ms. Franks said it should not top 12 inches in all, or 6 inches above the curb.

City engineers are encouraging more use of storm sewers and their underground piping systems — a process detailed in the manual.

As water leaves a new development, standards also are set for how much it can add to existing runoff.

In fact, Ms. Franks said the golden rule of drainage is, "You shall not flood your neighbor."

Toward that end, developers need to construct a path for the flow or a pond to collect and hold excess runoff water.

Detention ponds keep water as it runs slowly through a pipe. Retention ponds collect and hold water until it evaporates, soaks in gradually or can be pumped out.

For example, a new shopping center proposed for development along north Loop 250 between Garfield Street and Midkiff Road includes a retention basin in its plans. Ms. Franks said plans of the development company — Amresco of Dallas — will actually improve the drainage in the now-vacant lot.

The new manual calculates the size and type of pond needed for a certain amount of rain.

City staffers will probably provide the manual to developers at cost, and have given copies to a few local engineers already.

Meanwhile, the staff continues working on some long-term drainage planning for the city, to be incorporated into a master plan that may be complete by the end of this year.

Ms. Franks said it will begin with a re-evaluation of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' recent flood study, breaking down the data and possibly revising the results.

Then engineers will try to "imagine" future development in the city and develop proposals to cope with it. Ms. Franks said they may begin using regional retention ponds in newly developed areas, rather than requiring a pond in each subdivision.

Bridge and channel improvements may be planned ahead of time to cope with the expected runoff of development.

"This is the kind of work cities all through Texas are doing," Ms. Franks said. "When it's complete, our material will be comparable with any other major city."

COTTON: Much of year's crop must be replanted

frost before late-planted cotton has fully matured this autumn.

The recent wetness rounded out a 34.24-inch rainfall for the year's period from June 1991 through May 1992, according to records at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The rain, mostly produced by thunderstorms carrying moisture from the Texas Gulf Coast and from the Pacific Ocean, is 2½ times the normal 13.70-inch rainfall for the 12-month period in the area.

The period's heaviest rainfall months were July 1991 and May 1992. In July 1991, the weather station measured 8.50 inches of rain. The normal for July is 1.72 inches. This May, rainfall totaled 7.63 inches. The May normal rainfall is 2.05 inches.

The recent rains that washed cotton away benefited ranchers and got the grass growing.

"It might be rough on those cotton farmers," said Bobby Matthews, who ranches north of Midland on the Lazy Z spread. "But it couldn't come at a better time for a ranch man."

For West Texas cattlemen, the spring has been very good, Matthews said. Lazy Z Ranch cattle have had about "all the weeds they could eat all spring.

"Now, the ('lifesaver') weeds kind of died off. And the rains hit just right," Matthews said. "And we are going to grow a lot of grass."

Matthews said, "It rained so much, they (the cows) have got tadpoles. We have to milk them out."

As best he can tell, "It has rained everywhere" in this part of West Texas. The grass is "not real tall yet, but it has got a lot of green in it."

C.M. Edwards, who ranches just east of town, said, "You can't beat it (the rain). It couldn't be better. There was two or three (fellows) bragging on me 'cause I didn't plant any cotton," Edwards said. "They thought I was smart."

Martin County Judge Bob Deavenport of Stanton said that a good deal of Martin County farmland is under water.

"We've got a lot to replant. In some parts of the county, we've had some extremes — heavy rainfall and runoff, particularly in the Knott area," Deavenport said. "Some of our cotton looks like it is OK." But there are thousands of acres that likely will be replanted, he said.

The inundation is very similar to the '86 floods, Deavenport said. "Right now, we need just good, clear, warm weather."

Chandler, who also farms in Martin County, said that land there was so soggy that a four-wheel-drive tractor got stuck in the edge of a pasture.

Marc Traweek, an ex-farmer who is superintendent of the Midland Farmers Cooperative cotton gin, said, "There's a lot of lakes out there" on farmland.

"If we can have some warm days, like today (Tuesday), for the next 10 days or so, we can get back in the fields and get a crop going again. The way things looked early on (before the heavy rains), it looked like we were going to have a really good year."

The forecast for the next 48 hours does call for higher temperatures, with afternoon highs expected to reach the 80s today and near 90 on Thursday. Although there is no rain in the forecast for the next two days, officials at the National Weather Service said the extended forecast calls for more rain this weekend.

PRIMARIES: Clinton, Bush gird for three-way fall race voters are concerned about keeping the American dream alive for the next generation." He told CBS his top priorities would be to rein in the federal deficit and increase jobs.

His name was not on any ballot, but the exit polls revealed remarkable strength, particularly in California. Officials in Cincinnati reported some voters were scratching his name onto the ballot, even though write-ins were not permitted.

The polls were enough to send shivers through office holders everywhere as they looked ahead to November. CBS said 68 percent of Ohio voters said the country would be better off if all the incumbents were thrown out. In California, 56 percent want to start over with new officeholders, and in New Jersey, 60 percent do.

Ohio put Clinton over the top in the Associated Press delegate survey.

A post-primary lull seemed unlikely, either for the politicians or the pundits. Bush's No. 1 man in New Jersey, William Palatucci, said of the race to come: "It's too early to tell if Clinton or Perot is going to be the main opponent in November. Today, it's Perot. Tomorrow, it could be Clinton. This is a game that's not been played before."

Democratic Chairman Ronald Brown said the party was ready for a fight. "We have a nominee and we have a tough nominee at that," he said. "We are in a general election mode. . . . This is not a rest period."

Clinton vowed an active several weeks before the Democratic National Convention in July as he sought to burnish his image at the same time he selected a running mate.

Bush had $8.3 million in the bank at the end of May, and has only until his own nominating convention in August to spend it. Strategists hinted he might embark on a post-primary television advertising campaign to bolster his ratings.

Perot is still assembling a staff and formulating issues, and may hold his own convention as he tries to do what no one has ever done.

As for the pundits, there is no shortage of Electoral College scenarios in which none of the three candidates wins a majority, throwing the election to the House.

Tuesday's elections looked like this:

In Ohio, with 90 percent counted, Clinton had 61 percent, Brown 19 percent and Paul Tsongas 11 percent.

In New Jersey, with 75 percent in, Clinton had 58 percent, Brown 20 and Tsongas 11 percent. In Alabama, with 70 percent of the precincts counted, Clinton had 66 percent of the vote, to 22 percent for uncommitted. In New Mexico, with 67 percent in, Clinton had 52 percent, uncommitted 20 percent and Brown 17 percent. In Montana, with 27 percent in, Clinton had 48 percent, uncommitted 23 percent and Brown 18 percent.

Tsongas, driven from the race in March, offered his endorsement as the last votes were cast — and said he would work for Clinton this fall. "Now that Bill is the nominee, I will support him," he said.

On the Republican side, Bush's level of support ranged from 83 percent in Ohio and New Jersey to 75 percent in Alabama, 69 percent in Montana and 63 percent in New Mexico — where 28 percent were voting uncommitted.

Buchanan did best in Ohio and New Jersey, with about 17 percent of the vote.

From the White House, Bush said in a statement voters should decide which candidate has the "best ideas for America," and determine "who do you trust to lead this country."

The president's high command predicted that Perot's support would peak as he formally enters the race; and forecast that either he and Clinton would fall by the wayside as the campaign progresses.

Spokesman James Squires observed wryly, "Maintaining interest does not seem to be much of a problem for us at the moment." Indeed not. The networks said their exit polls showed that among California Democrats, 35 percent favored Perot, 34 percent Clinton. Among Republicans, it was Bush 47 percent, Perot 43 percent. Perot finished first in a hypothetical three-way matchup in the state.

CBS said Perot might have defeated Clinton among Ohio Democrats if Perot had been on the ballot.

Brown, campaigning to the end, said he hoped the party convention this fall wouldn't become "some kind of rubber stamp of failure."

The most recent nationwide polls pointed to an unpredictable fall election and a tightly bunched three-way race for the White House.

A survey by the Washington Post and ABC News released Monday showed Perot with 34 percent support, Bush 31 percent and Clinton 29 percent. A CBS poll showed Bush at 35 percent, Clinton 27 percent, Perot 26 percent.

In California's Senate races, Feinstein was nominated to oppose Sen. John Seymour. Boxer will face the winner of a GOP primary pitting Rep. Tom Campbell and Bruce Herschensohn, a conservative former television commentator.

In Ohio, Rep. Mary Rose Oakar won renomination to a ninth term, despite 213 bad checks at the House bank. Rep. Bob McEwen, with dozens of bad checks of his own, led Rep. Clarence Miller in an Ohio duel between two Republicans.

George Wallace Jr. led in the race for a Democratic nomination to Congress from Alabama, but struggled for the 50 percent support that would avoid a runoff. There was a Reagan on the ballot in California, where former first daughter Maureen ran for the House.

The primary season's end marked a remarkable personal triumph for the 45-year-old, six-term governor of Arkansas.

He began the campaign the favorite in a field that many of the party's better-known figures declined to enter, fearful of the president's soaring popularity.

But character issues took a toll in New Hampshire and other early primary states, as Clinton battled questions about marital infidelity and his use of a student deferment in the Vietnam era draft.

He lost the first several primaries, but fared better when the contests moved into the South and then into the industrial states, where his aggressive campaigning and superior organization drove everyone but Brown from the field.

Throughout it all, he sought to position himself as the man with the best plan for change.

Thus ended the primary voting — except for an anticlimax in North Dakota next week — that began scarcely more than 100 days ago in New Hampshire and produced two seemingly contradictory results in a contradictory year.

Bush seeks to extend preferential trade benefits to China

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The White House announced on Tuesday that it planned to extend preferential trade benefits to China for another year, arguing that it was the best way to support economic and political reform in the world's most populous country.

The announcement immediately drew protests from Democrats on Capitol Hill, who argued that the president's policy of "constructive engagement" with China had produced no tangible results. In fact, they said, China has engaged in increasingly provocative acts — including the underground testing of a large nuclear bomb, harassment of American reporters, denial of visas to the chairmen of the Senate Intelligence and Foreign Relations Committees, and a failure to make any significant improvement in human rights.

Ever since the Tiananmen Square riots in June 1989, the annual extension of trade benefits to China has produced a fight between the president and Congress, which Bush has won each time, and this year will probably be no exception.

"The president informed the Congress today that he plans to extend China's most-favored-nation, MFN, status for another year," said the White House spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater. "In making this important decision, the president stressed that it is wrong to isolate China if we hope to influence China. Maintaining a constructive policy of engagement with China has served U.S. interests."

Last year, China exported $19 billion of products to the United States and imported $6.3 billion in American goods. The United States is China's largest overseas market, importing more than a fourth of Chinese exports, while China absorbs only 1.5 percent of American exports.

Administration officials acknowledged that the Chinese have made few improvements in human rights during the past year, and in recent months have taken actions that almost seemed designed to "to rub our nose in it," as one official put it.

A senior Bush administration Asia policymaker argued, however, that this behavior was the result of a "world-class power struggle" now under way in Beijing in advance of the 14th Communist Party Congress, which will take place at the end of the year.

"The hardliners are deliberately trying to embarrass the reformers," the official said. "The hardliners are arguing that engagement with the outside world only brings internal infection on human rights, endless pressures for trade concessions and the denial of China's right to sell arms where it pleases. The reformers are arguing that China has to get along with the world and that China benefits enormously from trade. The president thinks we are doing the right thing by getting on the side of the reformers."

This argument has not impressed opponents of the China policy.

"It's deja vu all over again," said Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, the New York Democrat who chairs the House Asia subcommittee. "Nothing has changed in China or in Washington. The president sticks to his view that the best way to facilitate change in China is a policy of constructive engagement. He apparently agrees with the philosopher Hegel that if theory and fact disagree, so much for the facts — because the facts simply don't sustain Bush's views."

Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, and House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., along with a bipartisan coalition of congressmen, plan to unveil their own bill on Wednesday that will make extending China's trade privileges for another year contingent on specific improvements in human rights policies. The chances of gaining a veto-proof two-thirds majority of both houses appear slim at best.

"The president's decision is wrong, inconsistent with American values, and contrary to American interests," said Mitchell.

Rep. Nancy Pelosi, who has led the House fight against most-favored-nation status for China, said that opponents may choose a narrower approach this year. They may, for example, seek selective tariff increases on specific Chinese products so they could not be exported to the United States at a profit. Lifting of these selective tariffs might be contingent on China's agreeing to release specific numbers of political prisoners, respect religious freedoms, and open prisons and labor camps to international inspection.

Government names Bazin as new leader

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT) — Marc Bazin, a conservative politician who ran a distant second in the 1990 presidential elections, was named Tuesday as Haiti's new leader.

The designation of the 60-year-old economist and former World Bank official was seen as a setback for international efforts to restore Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely-elected president who was ousted in a Sept. 30 military-led coup.

The English-speaking Bazin, once known as "Mr. Washington" because he was said to be favored by the U.S. State Department, had campaigned in 1990 on pledges that he could bring American investment to his impoverished country. He was considered the frontrunner until Aristide, a populist Roman Catholic priest, entered the race.

His appointment Tuesday by the military-backed interim government had been opposed by the 34-nation Organization of American States, which has imposed an embargo on Haiti to pressure for Aristide's reinstatement.

It was not immediately clear whether he would be confirmed by Haiti's senate or how the OAS would react to his selection as part of an effort to create a "consensus" government designed to circumvent efforts to restore Aristide to power.

"That will depend on how he interacts with the international community," said moderate Sen. Julio Larosiliere, who predicted the senate will confirm Bazin.

He said the appointment leaves open the possibility of holding elections promptly and does not rule out the return of Aristide, though he conceded that opposition from the military and the wealthy elite made that unlikely.

Shortly after Bazin's selection was announced on state-run National Radio, soldiers entered the pro-Aristide neighborhood of Carrefour Feuilles, warning residents to remain inside. Their intent appeared to be to head off any anti-Bazin protests.

Earlier Tuesday, police with riot gear and automatic weapons beat and arrested mourners during a tense funeral procession for a prominent businessman supporter of Aristide who many believe was slain by the military.

There were chants of "We want Aristide" from some of the hundreds of mourners for Georges Izmery, an entrepreneur whose assassin may have mistaken him for his businessman brother Antoine, a major financier of Aristide's 1990 presidential campaign.

Mourners scattered as dozens of police dragged some of them out of the crowd and beat them with batons and guns before throwing them into the back of pickup trucks and carting them off, some of them bleeding. By the time marchers reached the grave site, police outnumbered friends and family.

"Continue to fight! Take positions against this government, the assassins!" Antoine Izmery thundered in a defiant eulogy for his brother.

Serbs attack U.N. relief convoy in Sarajevo, one killed

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A driver was killed and second person injured Tuesday when an armed group, apparently Serb irregulars, attacked a U.N. convoy carrying baby food and other relief supplies in a Sarajevo suburb.

A United Nations spokesman had no comment on the Sarajevo radio report that Serbs were responsible, but said the attack violated a cease-fire and agreements by all parties to protect relief columns.

Serb paramilitary forces and Muslim-led defenders clashed in the capital of war-torn Bosnia-Herzegovina throughout the day. At least 32 people reportedly died in fighting around Bosnia.

The bus and mini-van escorted by two U.N. vehicles came under heavy fire in Dobrinja, seven minutes after they left U.N. headquarters in downtown Sarajevo with milk, baby food and other supplies, said U.N. spokeswoman Barbara Shannon Boyd.

The Serbian leadership, seeking to ease international sanctions, had called on Serbs in Bosnia to secure safe passage for humanitarian aid to Bosnia, and to allow the United Nations to take control of the blockaded Sarajevo airport.

The presidency of Serbia and its ally Montenegro also called for Serb militants to stop attacks on Bosnian towns.

More than a dozen truces have failed in the nearly 12-week Bosnian conflict pitting pro-independence Muslims and Croats against Serbs, who seek to maintain links with Yugoslavia.

Serbia and Montenegro are the only republics remaining in the federation, which until last summer was made up of six provinces, including now-independent Croatia, Slovenia, Macedonia and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

On the 40th day of the U.N.-imposed embargo against Serbia and Montenegro, life seemed little changed in Belgrade except for long lines snaking from gasoline pumps.

Stores in the Serbian capital remained well-stocked, and there were bustling crowds at outdoor cafes and downtown pedestrian zones.

On the gas lines, there was debate on the sanctions.

"I'm not prepared to do this for another year," said economist Nenad Stekic, gesturing toward hundreds of cars in front of him. "I think the regime should fall."

But pensioner Cira Marinkovic spoke up for President Slobodan Milosevic, widely considered a chief culprit in the Bosnian fighting.

"We Serbs are merely defending ourselves against Muslim and Croat aggression, but the world doesn't understand that," he said.

Serbian media reported at least 32 dead in fighting Tuesday around Bosnia.

The fiercest fighting was reported in Prijedor, 20 miles southeast of the Croatian border. Serbian TV said 16 Serbs were killed there.

Tanjug said six Muslim fighters were killed in the Banja Luka region, also near Croatia, and two Serbs died around Visegrad, near the Serbian border.

Serbian TV showed parts of Sarajevo in a smoky haze and puffs of smoke as Muslim mortar fire pounded Serb positions on hills surrounding the capital.

Fighting also was reported around the medieval Croatian port of Dubrovnik, where Croat and Serb artillery traded fire across the nearby Bosnian border.

Since Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted overwhelmingly for independence on Feb. 29, more than 2,300 people have been killed.

Serbs, allied with the federal army, have seized about two-thirds of Bosnia.

Danes narrowly reject treaty on European union

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (NYT) — Danish voters narrowly rejected the treaty on European union in a referendum on Tuesday, throwing into confusion the European Community's plans to build political and monetary unity on the foundations of its economic strength as the world's most powerful trading bloc.

Asked to vote a simple "yes" or "no" to the treaty on monetary and political union that European leaders agreed to in Maastricht, the Netherlands, last December, 50.7 percent of the Danish voters cast "no" ballots, and 49.3 percent voted "yes."

Fear of being overwhelmed by stronger neighbors in a federal Europe that would swallow up Danish sovereignty, a longtime concern here, seemed to be the main reason for the rejection.

Technically, the vote had the effect of vetoing the treaty, since it cannot go into effect as planned on Jan. 1.

Library project buys knowledge

Desiderius Erasmus, the 16th century Dutch priest and scholar, said, "When I get a little money, I buy books; and if any is left, I buy food and clothes."

Books are important and a library — which is literally a collection of books, manuscripts, musical scores and other literary pieces — reflects the importance that community attaches to knowledge. Midland took a step Sunday toward developing Midland County Public Library into an outstanding facility by breaking ground on a $2.5 million expansion project.

Getting to Sunday's ceremony took more than a little hard work and commitment because when the time was right for the expansion, the public mood was not favorable for a tax increase such a project would have entailed.

But where there is a will, there is a way. The Friends of the Library lived up to the organization's name by raising $1.155 million in an effort that included $655,000 raised in a matching grant from Abell-Hanger Foundation. Another $500,000 came in through two anonymous gifts.

Library officials say the expansion project will more than double library space, which will mean more room for books, artwork and other materials that will give Midlanders the opportunity to expand their minds. Thus, there is little question that the expansion will be worth the cost.

The mechanism for funding the library expansion is an honorable one — individual contributions. And contributions to a library constitute perhaps the greatest individual gift of all since those dollars provide knowledge to all the community's residents, now and in the future.

There are many people who deserve special thanks for the expansion fund — those on the Midland County Commissioners Court, the Abell-Hanger Foundation, Max Perry and all the Friends of the Library, and especially Rosalind Redfern. The monetary support — from the largest contribution to the smallest — says that Midland County Public Library is important to Midlanders in their quest for knowledge.

That is the sign of a healthy, intelligent community.

School district draws fire for trying to help

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Labor Department has swooped down in full bureaucratic riot gear on a San Diego school district for violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, the law credited with ending many of the horrors of child labor.

Anderson

But what's taking place in the placid Southern California community of La Mesa is scarcely a scene from Charles Dickens.

That's why far from being greeted as liberators, Labor inspectors stand accused of gross overkill in cracking down on an innovative program that works to keep young people out of trouble, in school and on an achievement track.

For its role, the school district and mom and pop employers face an investigation and fines of up to $700 for each violation — or up to $10,000 for each business that employed underage youth (under 14) and thought it was doing a good deed. Because seven of the students are only 13, the district is in technical violation of the 1938 law.

According to local officials and families, Labor's crackdown on the 5-year-old program called "Bridges" is a story of misplaced priorities, misspent resources and mindless Big Brother-ism. It took Labor five years before the La Mesa-Spring Valley School District even showed up on the radar screen, and now it is under orders to cease and desist.

Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., recently wrote to Labor Secretary Lynn Martin to complain about the "outrageous" fines and argued that it was "a great program which builds the worth ethic." Martin has promised a prompt review. But after a recent visit by Labor officials to the school district, some local participants left the meeting disgusted by what one described as "bureaucrats in the flesh."

In the meantime, while La Mesa is under government kleig lights, the plight of migrant child farm laborers remains one of the darkest corners of exploitation in the labor market. Labor officials are still overwhelmed by the waves of migrant farm children who toil in the fields in some of the worst working conditions in the country.

Federal laws and regulations allow children as young as 12 to work in agriculture, and the illegal use of child labor on farms is considered prevalent. Government Accounting Office officials recently testified that the enforcement of federal laws regulating pesticide usage, child labor and field sanitation was "lax."

"Bridges" was born as a cooperative effort linking the school district and the La Mesa Chamber of Commerce, and the program is targeted to students who are at high risk of dropping out and could gain valuable work experience, spending money, and, above all, self-worth. Each eligible student is basically adopted by a business and works there for 16 weeks — no more than four hours a week.

The idea is to match up students fitting the high-risk profile with business sponsors who pay them $3.85 per hour for various duties ranging from floor sweeping to phone answering. Included are some unique fringe benefits — like adults aiding students with their homework or serving as counselors. The pizza parties and field-trips that are part of the experience are also not very Dickensian.

Another bizarre bureaucratic twist also hanging over the head of local businesspeople is the possibility that Labor will also penalize them for paying the youths too little. Labor claims they were receiving a "training wage" of $3.85 an hour when they should have been getting the minimum of $4.25 an hour.

For the students and their families, however, the dividends have been rolling in.

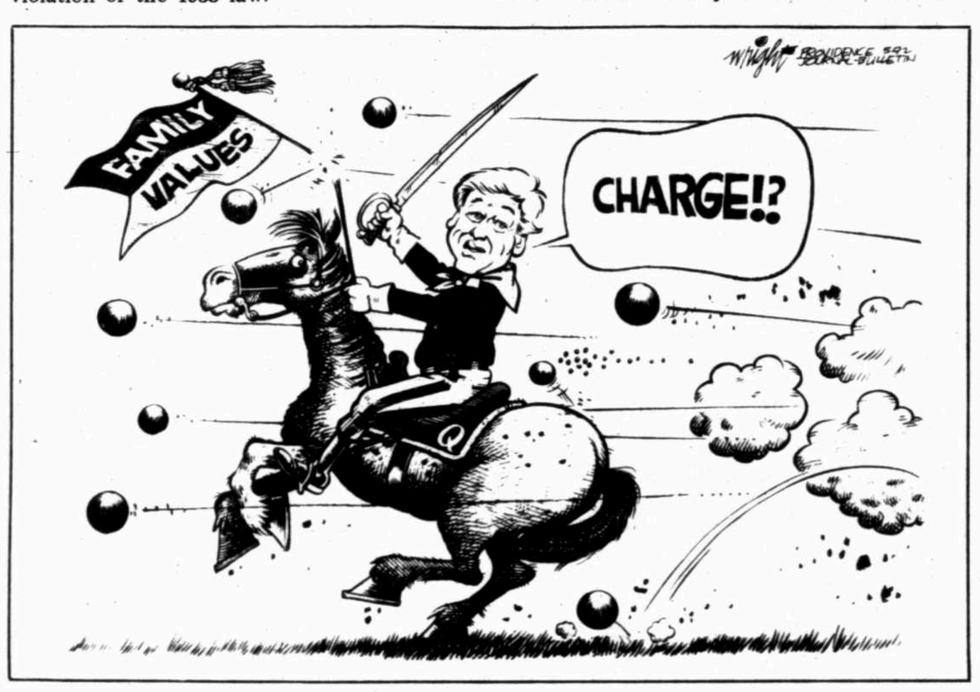

Since 1988, when tracking started of the participants, only one of the 60 students in the program dropped out of school. Most earned at least a C grade-point average, which was a marked improvement over previous classroom performance.

Local officials knew they were in technical violation of federal labor laws, and that's why three years ago they changed the state education code to permit the limited employment of 13-year-olds as part of school-related programs.

Enter the Labor Department, which argues that federal law supersedes state law, and has been brandishing threats of hefty fines for the violations. School Superintendent Warren Hogarth is vowing to fight to see the program maintained.

"The beauty of the program is that the business community and the educational community work together on behalf of the kids," explained one chagrined employer. "It's an ideal example of what does work for kids."

Ross Perot's 'hardship' mystery deepens

LONDON — Why, after nearly four decades, did Ross Perot feel he needed to present a new justification for leaving the U.S. Navy. And is Perot now telling the truth — or is he defaming the man who was his commanding officer to cover up his original reason for seeking a hardship discharge?

Safire

In our last installment, we quoted from Lt. j.g. Perot's anguished 1955 letter, forwarded by his influential father to the most powerful politicians in Texas, containing his reasons for seeking to leave the service halfway through his four-year post-Annapolis obligation:

"I have found the Navy to be a fairly Godless organization," wrote the young man who had been given a free four-year education by the taxpayer. "I do not enjoy ... being subjected to drunken tales of moral emptiness ... seeing promiscuity on the part of married men ... taking God's name in vain. ..."

Whether those reasons for early discharge reflected hypersensitivity, priggishness or the hypocrisy of an ambitious young man eager to get started on his civilian career, they were not the sort that today's candidate wants made public. So he recently set forth a different reason, that presents him in a more heroic light.

"I was in charge of the crew's recreation fund," Perot told Newsweek recently, and turned on his former commander: "He ordered me to give him part of that money to redo his cabin. I wouldn't do it. I was also in charge of narcotics and liquor. If we were at sea any length of time, he wanted liquor."

He probably assumed that nobody would check out the new story. But USN records show that during Perot's stay on the destroyer Sigourney, only two men served as captain: B.A. Lienhard and Gerald J. Scott. I advertised for their whereabouts in this space last week.

Cmdr. Lienhard's son, John, called to say that his father, who died three years ago, considered young Perot to be "his finest junior officer." Lienhard was succeeded as captain of the Sigourney by Cmdr. Scott in 1954, John Lienhard recalls; the following year, Perot visited the Lienhard home near Washington, D.C., and said he had put the new captain on report and was going to see the chief of naval personnel and secretary of the Navy.

Correspondence in the Lyndon Johnson Library confirms part of this. Perot's father, a cotton broker, sought LBJ's influence, and a senatorial staffer refers to a visit by Adm. J.L. Holloway, then chief of naval personnel. Apparently Lt. j.g. Perot had the political clout to get to the top.

John Lienhard put me in touch with Capt. Scotty Campbell, who had been the division commodore in 1954. Could he explain Perot's animus toward Cmdr. Gerald Scott in 1955? "I don't think it was based on funds to decorate the captain's cabin," he says. "I heard a different story." He zipped his lip.

Then Scott, who retired from the Navy in 1962 after 20 years of service, checked in from Sunnydale, Calif., where he had just been interviewed by CBS News.

"It's absolutely, totally untrue," he says, flabbergasted by this attack from someone to whom he gave good fitness reports and whose political petition he had just signed. "I never asked him about my cabin. You don't do things like redecorating a cabin on your own; that's handled by BuShips."

Drugs? Booze? God's name in vain? "Look, sailors will cuss, but it was of a minor nature. And as far as issuing narcotics and liquor — all that would have been audited by three officers."

Was he put on report by his junior officer? "I never heard officially or unofficially about that — I guess he must have done it on the Q.T. But then I received a commendation for my performance as captain of the Sigourney, and after that I was assigned to the Polaris program under Adm. Radford — neither of which would have happened if there were any shadow on my record."

The veteran naval officer cannot understand this personal assault from the billionaire candidate: "You never want to make yourself look good by throwing mud on somebody else."

Perot is suddenly silent. A press agent, perhaps on advice of counsel, says the former lieutenant "never publicly identified by name" the commander he now self-servingly defames.

Access to modern drugs shouldn't depend on cash

Johnson & Johnson developed the drug levamisole in the 1960s to rid farm animals of worms. A year's supply for a sheep costs $15. But when it was learned that the drug helped human victims of colon cancer, the company cashed in on the medical insurance companies that cover these patients. A year's supply for a human costs $1,495.

That's only one of many examples of outrageous profiteering by pharmaceutical firms. Here's another:

A Swedish company, Astra, is charging AIDS patients $16,765 a year for a medication. The drug, Foscavir, combats an eye disease that affects many AIDS victims. Astra says the price is justified because it spent $100 million to develop the drug. Astra first set a price of $22,627 a year. Pressure from government and AIDS activism led to the markdown.

Many drug houses worldwide cite incredible development costs to justify incredible prices, beyond the means of most who need the medication. Obviously, they're expecting governments and insurers to pick up the tab.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., wants the General Accounting Office to make Astra document its research costs. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., wants automatic discounts (as Congress now requires for Medicaid patients). They're on the right track.

Remarkable new drugs reach the market annually. But most ordinary people can't afford them. Astra promises to give Foscavir to those unable to pay — but they reserve the right to collect obscene profits from everyone else.

All drug makers should be required to justify their prices. If their figures are true, federal agencies should subsidize the research as well as mandate cut rates. Access to modern drugs should not depend on patients' bank accounts.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, June 3, the 155th day of 1992. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 3, 1965, astronaut Edward White became the first American to "walk" in space, during the flight of Gemini Four.

On this date:

In 1621, the Dutch West India Company received a charter for New Netherlands — now known as New York.

In 1808, Jefferson Davis — the first and only president of the Confederacy —was born in Christian County, Ky.

In 1888, the poem "Casey at the Bat," by Ernest Lawrence Thayer, was first published, in the San Francisco Daily Examiner.

In 1935, the French liner Normandie set a record on its maiden voyage, arriving in New York after crossing the Atlantic in just four days, 11 hours and 42 minutes.

In 1937, the Duke of Windsor, who had abdicated the British throne, married Wallis Warfield Simpson in a civil ceremony in Monts, France.

In 1948, the 200-inch reflecting telescope at the Palomar Mountain Observatory in California was dedicated.

In 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81, ending a papacy marked by innovative reforms within the Roman Catholic Church.

In 1981, Pope John Paul II left a Rome hospital and returned to the Vatican three weeks after the attempt on his life.

In 1989, Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, died.

Here're answers to life's perplexing questions

I'm trying to get my desk cleaned up before the summer. Here are some unanswered questions I found from readers:

Q. Who is shorter — Dan Quayle or Murphy Brown?

Buchwald

A. Dan Quayle, and that's why his staff never let him have his picture taken with her.

Q. What causes the most damage to the ozone?

A. Data that gets lost when someone's computers crashes. With more and more computers in operation, people are losing billions of words that can never be retrieved by the user. Since it is lighter than air, this material rises and creates big black holes in the sky.

Q. Why did Chief Daryl Gates go to a Brentwood fund-raiser when the rioting started in Los Angeles?

A. Because he wanted to be there in case the Beverly Hills' mobs attacked.

Q. We used to make babies watching Johnny Carson. Now we can't seem to do it in front of Jay Leno. What do you advise?

A. Try Ted Koppel when he's holding a town meeting of the air.

Q. What happened to the billions of dollars lost in the savings and loan scandal?

A. There is an S&L elf who scoops up all the S&L deposits in a hot air balloon and sprinkles them over the rain forests in Brazil.

Q. When a drug company falsifies its records, causing untold medical distress, and pleads no contest to criminal charges, how much money is it fined?

A. The average Justice Department penalty for a white-collar crime is $10.12, which is why so many companies are fearful of doing it again.

Q. Is Saddam Hussein as nice in real life as he is on television?

A. From all accounts he is even nicer. That's why the State Department sold him so much top-of-the-line stuff before Desert Storm.

Q. I would like to get a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. How do I do that?

A. Bring two nude photos of yourself to Jesse Helms' office and they'll do the rest.

Q. I was going to abort my baby because I didn't have a job or a husband. The anti-abortion people told me not to do that. So I have the kid but I'm still without a job or a husband. Who do I see now?

A. The tooth fairy.

Q. Bill Clinton said that he once tried marijuana but he did not inhale. Why not?

A. Clinton knew that someday he would be running for president of the United States, and he could not tell a lie.

Q. Ross Perot?

A. I don't understand the question.

Careless smoking possible cause of fire that killed 10

DETROIT (AP) — Fire roared through a boarding house early Tuesday, killing 10 people, some elderly or handicapped. Authorities suspected careless smoking.

"I grabbed my blanket and put it over my head and I got out," said Delores Strempeck, 60. Her 76-year-old roommate, Theresa Hunter, got up too, but never made it out.

Hunter had moved to the house on Detroit's west side after surviving a 1989 fire in a boarding house across the street, WDIV-TV reported.

Some residents complained they were unable to contact a 911 operator to report the fire that began shortly after 2 a.m.

Arson investigators concentrated on the kitchen of the three-story building.

"It started in the west wall of the kitchen between the stove and the sink," said Arson Capt. Donald Robinson.

Robinson said investigators were examining the possibility that carelessly discarded cigarettes started the blaze.

"There was no evidence of anything cooking on the stove or the stove being on at the time," he said.

Fire Chief Harold Watkins said the dead, four women and six men ranging in age from the mid-40s to 89, were found in bedrooms on the second and third floors. All died of smoke inhalation.

Watkins said the death toll made the fire the city's worst in his 38 years on the force.

The building was gutted. Two people were injured and four other residents and a night caretaker escaped unharmed.

Robert Berg, a spokesman for Mayor Coleman A. Young, said the house was last inspected in 1991. Several fire-code violations were found and later corrected, he said.

The home once operated as an adult foster care center, said Chuck Peller of the state Department of Social Services in Lansing. He said the state revoked its license in 1977, citing fire code, health, safety and paperwork violations.

Violations included inadequate fire extinguishers, an inadequate number of exits, a locked exit or exits, and open stairwells, the department said.

Since then, the home had been a rooming house and needed no state license, Peller said.

United Way will reduce staff, interim leader says

WASHINGTON (NYT) — In the aftermath of a management scandal that has shaken the nation's largest charity, the interim president of the United Way of America told 260 staff members Tuesday that the organization planned to reduce the staff, freeze salaries and encourage workers to resign or take voluntary leave without pay this summer.

In an interview Tuesday afternoon, Kenneth W. Dam, the president of the organization, which represents the interests of local United Ways around the country, said its ultimate size would be determined by the wishes of those local groups.

"In terms of how big we're going to be, that flows out of the 1,400 United Ways around the country," he said. "We don't have a target. We need to reduce somewhat; that seems to be a consensus around the country."

The cutback in staff is the most recent sign that the United Way has been fundamentally changed by scandal.

Investigators are looking into the transfer of millions of dollars from the charity to several organizations it controls, the purchase of condominiums with agency money and the $463,000 salary-and-benefits package received by the former president, William Aramony, who was forced to step down in February.

Cathleen P. Black, a United Way board member who is the former publisher of USA Today, heads a committee formed in the aftermath of the scandal to examine whether the organization should be run differently.

"All American institutions are having to rethink their mission," Dam said. "The same thing is happening in universities. The same thing is happening with museums. Certainly the same thing is happening with regard to most nonprofit institutions."

The organization's 260 employees were asked to state by June 19 their intention on leaving.

Judge combines 44 hand-injury suits

NEW YORK (NYT) — In a decision that creates a forum for the legal battle over one of the nation's fastest growing workplace disabilities, a federal judge in Brooklyn agreed Tuesday to combine 44 hand-injury suits into one consolidated case.

Such hand injuries — which are known as repetitive stress injuries and which medical experts say can be caused by the routine use of computers, supermarket checkout scanners and other mechanical and electrical devices — have spawned hundreds of individual lawsuits across the country in recent years.

But legal experts said that Tuesday decision by Judge Jack B. Weinstein marked the first time that many repetitive stress cases had been consolidated, a technique that has previously produced legal precedents in such areas as asbestos.

And while Weinstein's decision could be revised or overturned at a later date, the experts say the outcome of these cases could also set a precedent for future litigation.

The consolidated cases were assigned to Judge Denis R. Hurley. But before they go to trial, Hurley will have to rule on whether they have factual, legal and scientific issues in common.

At the heart of the case will be whether repetitive stress injury can be considered a general syndrome, or even whether there is any such medically recognized injury. Only then will the question of responsibility be assessed.

The plaintiffs run the gamut from stenographers, postal workers and data inputers to word processors and journalists, among others.

The workers are suing the manufacturers of the equipment they use — multi-million dollar companies like Apple Computer, AT&T, Atex, IBM and Eastman Kodak among others.

There's A Message In All Of This.

Get Your Teenagers Their Own Phone Line.

Someone's got your number. It's Bob, Peggy, Gary, Kelly, Tim, Cindy, Shawn and all the kids who leave urgent phone messages for your teenagers. Day in and day out. Messages which take you away from what you're doing when your kids aren't around to take their own calls. Sound familiar?

Then give your teenagers their own phone line, with their own private number, from Southwestern Bell Telephone. That way they'll take more responsibility for their calls. You won't have to take any more of their messages. And everyone takes care of their own business.

Call 1-800-234-BELL.

Stop running an answering service for your teenagers. Call to order a second phone line or receive a free brochure. You'll find our message very easy to take.

Amendment's prospects dim as Byrd predicts defeat

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Prospects for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, which seemed likely to sail through Congress only a few weeks ago, dimmed dramatically Tuesday when Sen. Robert C. Byrd, a veteran vote-counter and master of Senate procedure, predicted that the Senate would kill it.

As chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Byrd has decisive power over the pet projects of every senator, although he said that this influence was not being applied as he has met with one senator after another to argue against the amendment.

Tuesya, Byrd, a West Virginia Democrat, told reporters, "In the final analysis, Congress will not approve the amendment."

"Once members are really informed as to the mischief this amendment could do, and the damage it could do to the country and to the Constitution, I just have faith that enough members will take a courageous stand against the amendment," he said.

The amendment's sponsor, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said of Byrd's remarks, "It is possible he is correct" about the amendment's prospects.

Simon added: "I don't need to tell you that when the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee talks, senators pay attention. We all have things we want to get through appropriations."

The amendment has been under steadily increasing attack in recent days, and its prospects now appear uncertain at best.

Byrd and other opponents call the amendment a smokescreen that will allow lawmakers to claim action against the deficit while still postponing hard budgetary decisions. Supporters argue that all other efforts to cut the deficit have failed and it is time for the ultimate discipline of a constitutional amendment.

Passage by the House is still considered probable when the amendment comes up there next week. But in the Senate, which will act after the House does, Byrd may be able to rally either the 34 votes required to deny the amendment the two-thirds majority required under the Constitution, or to filibuster successfully against it.

Two weeks ago he warned the Senate of a possible filibuster, saying, "Unlimited debate is one of the cornerstones on which this institution, the U.S. Senate, rests."

While it takes 41 votes to sustain a filibuster, some senators might find it easier to cast a procedural vote for unlimited debate than to vote against the popular amendment directly.

Simon said in an interview, "As of two weeks ago, we had the votes." But he added that Byrd's lobbying has had its effect.

Simon said Byrd would never threaten senators that their pet projects would be the first to go if the budget had to be balanced, but some senators might draw that conclusion anyhow.

An aide to Byrd insisted that when he meets with other senators he assures them that his position as chairman of the Appropriations Committee is not a consideration and that they should consider his arguments strictly on their own merits.

Another measure of opposition was sounded at a news conference in Washington by the Economic Policy Institute. The institute made public a statement of opposition signed by 447 economists, including seven who won the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics.

"When the private economy is in recession," they said, "a constitutional requirement that would force cuts in public or tax increases could worsen the economic downturn, causing greater loss of jobs, production and income."

'Nude Olympians' spared jail time

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University students who ran across town naked during the annual sophomore "Nude Olympics" were spared jail time and criminal records, but were fined and ordered to perform community service.

Each year, second-year students at the Ivy League school strip down on the night of the first winter snow, exercise a little, and go for a jog on campus.

This year, however, about 300 participants sprinted down the town's main street nude and a $1,500 restaurant window was broken.

Thirty-one students were charged with public lewdness after police studied a videotape they made. Students had been warned not to run off campus.

Nine pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct charges and were fined $150 each Friday. Twenty-two students pleaded guilty Monday. They were fined $100 each, and were ordered to perform community service.

Retiring MC employee helps fulfill dreams

■ Bill Burns has served as the college's financial aid director for 21 years.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Many years ago Bill Burns made a vow "to help someone every day for the rest of my life." In the course of more than two decades at Midland College, he has managed to help at least one person — if not 20 — per day.

After 21 years with the institution, Burns estimates he has served 36,000 students.

"So, I've got a few credits going for me," Burns said. The financial aid director announced he will be retiring in a few weeks.

Burns made it his mission to help students get financial aid — in the form of federal and state grants and scholarships.

"We now have 51 percent of our 4,100 students enrolled getting some form of financial aid," he said.

The large number of students getting aid includes many who are taking advantage of the Abell Hanger Scholarship, which is awarded to local high school graduates.

"In 1973, we spent $54,000 in financial aid for 250 students," Burns said. "This year we spent $2.5 million in financial aid for more than 2,100 students. It is vital for students."

Burns said many students would not be able to attend college without assistance with tuition fees.

"Especially in this day and time with the way unemployment is going," he said. "Some students also cannot work and attend school, especially in the health and science programs. Students need to attend class, labs and work in the hospital."

The financial aid director said he often steers students into medical professions. "That's where the jobs are," he said.

Burns also counsels adults changing careers. The director is in familiar territory when he advises on changing jobs. "My wife, Mary Ellen, and I both started out in oil-related jobs," he said.

Burns was a district representative for Phillips when the oil business went into a slump in the '60s.

"I said: 'Mary Ellen, we are going to do something else.' I got into the school business."

The new careerist then went to work for Midland College in 1971.

"Midland and Odessa College — under the old junior college system — were operating out of high schools then," he said.

Ironically, Burns attributes MC's stronghold in the community with the founding of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa.

"If UTPB had been built between Midland and Odessa, Midland College would never have become bigger than life. It would never have been established," he said.

Raymond Yell, MC dean of planning, said that Burns was hired at the college when "the financial aid office was in its infancy."

"Burns has taken the office to a high. He has really helped a lot of students," Yell said. "He's a fun guy to be around, but very serious about his job."

Burns said his job takes on a serious note during counseling sessions. "We probably do more counseling in this office than all of the counseling offices put together. We counsel about life. This office is a pivotal point of the whole college."

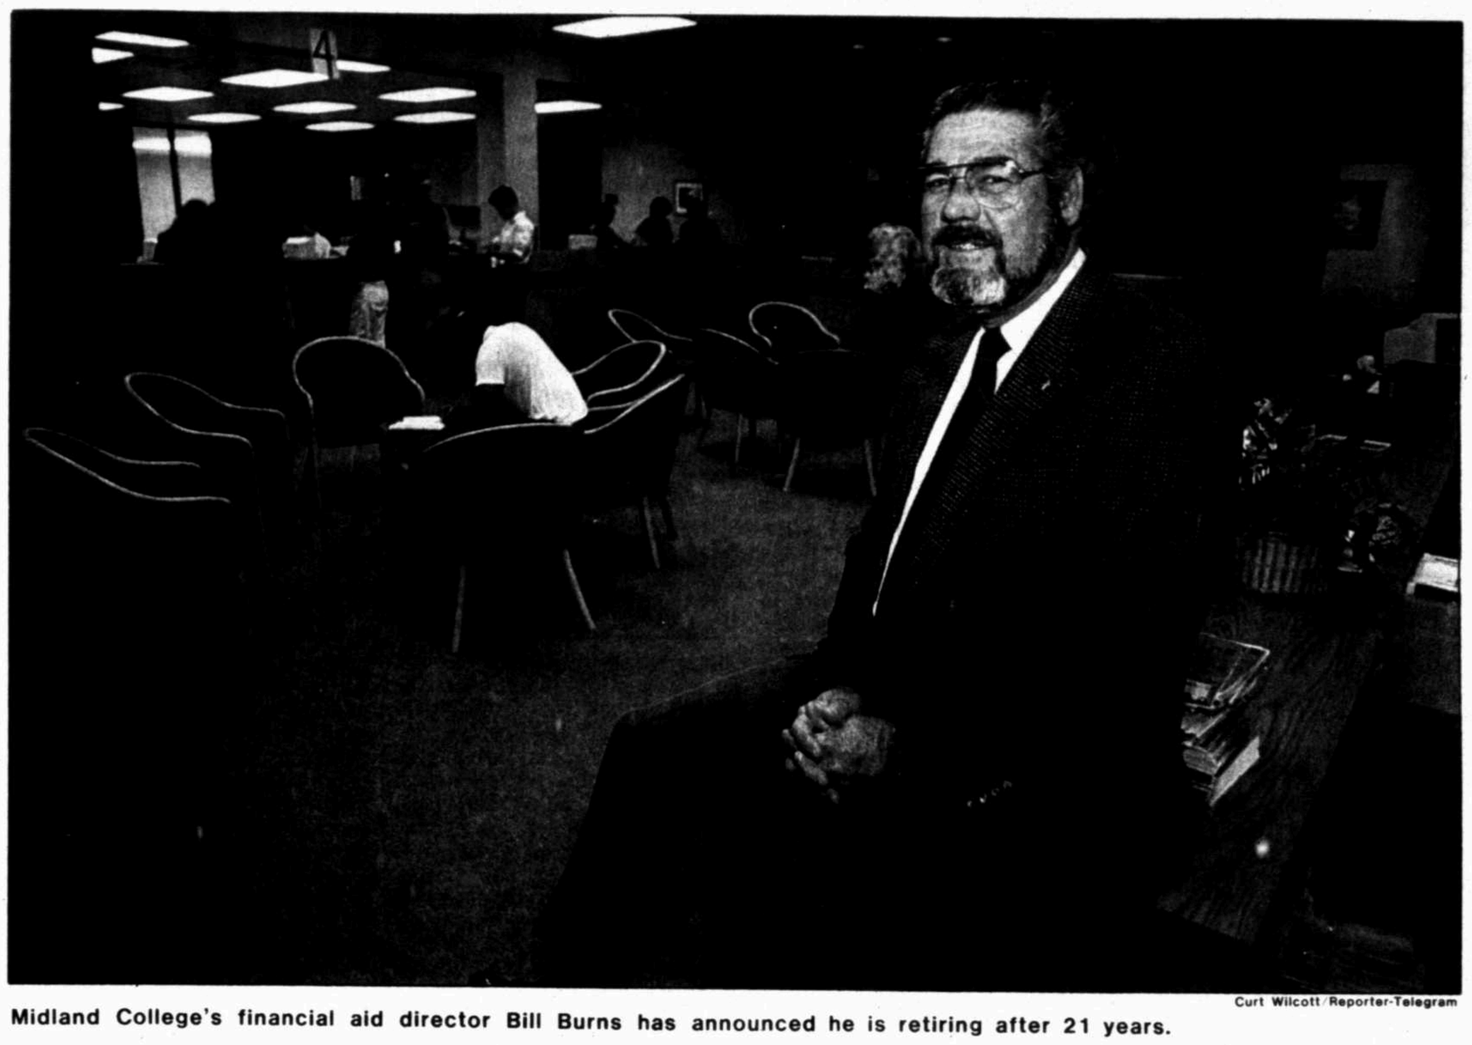

Plenty of bleak stories of financial loss and family hardship come across Burns' desk. "The challenge is to not take on those problems. It's hard. It takes its toll," he said.

The director said he will miss the challenges of his job, but "I was born in Texas and raised in New Mexico, and I haven't seen all that I want in those two states."

Burns plans to travel, hunt, fish, read Larry McMurtry novels and visit some of his property in the Davis mountains where he "hunts with a camera."

Upon retiring, Burns said he will miss all of the people at MC, "but not dealing with the state and federal regs (regulations)."

He said he owes much of his success in the department to the Abell Hanger Foundation. "They — and the Fasken Foundation, the Allison Foundation, the late Angelique Webb Harrill, the late C.R. Nallison, Hal Adams, the Easthams, the Davidson Foundation, the O'Shaughnessys, and all of the other donors — made my life easier. They helped us fulfill dreams."

12-year-old youth recuperating from rattlesnake bite

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

You now can tell the 12-year-old twins apart.

Taylor, who is on crutches, is the one with the snake-bit leg.

Justin, who ambles around like a working cowboy, is making a list of his chores while Taylor stays quiet, recovers, and builds model airplanes.

It seems that Taylor, often by accident, gets more attention than he wants.

"Taylor is the one who always gets hurt," said their father, Scott Welch, "and he (Justin) never gets hurt. Right now, he's got a list on the refrigerator of all the chores that Taylor owes him." The list includes mowing the grass, washing the dishes, carrying out the trash and serving meals to his brother.

Justin was "aggravated at first" after many of the chores on their country place fell to him, Welch said. "Now, he's keeping score."

Today, Taylor is doing well after being bitten on his right leg by a rattlesnake on May 21.

The family was at John Welch's ranch in south-central Colorado. The adults were in the dry river bed setting up camp. Justin was out gathering firewood. Meanwhile, Taylor, his 10-year-old sister, Jessica, and cousins and friends were stomping around on a bluff above the campsite.

Aside from just wandering around, they were looking for pre-Apache-era pictographs and burial grounds near the site where legendary rancher Charles Goodnight had driven his cattle in the late 1800s.

Taylor was trailing the group when he felt a sting on his right leg just above the top of his cowboy boot.

"It felt really weird," Taylor said on Saturday. "It stung a little bit."

When he glanced down and saw the rattlesnake looking at him, "I knew I was snake bit," Taylor said.

"I looked at him, and he was looking at me. I didn't stare." The snake was "pretty big," Taylor said.

He yelled.

At first, nobody believed him.

No one, not even Taylor, had heard a snake's rattle, which often is the warning signal of an impending strike.

Taylor said he turned to his cousin, Wesley, and hollered: "'I've been snake bit.'"

"'You have not,'" the cousin said.

The folks down in the camp, hearing the commotion, likewise were dubious.

"We thought he was just teasing," said Taylor's mother, Vicky Welch. But, she said, "When you listen to children, you know when their cries are real, or when they are not."

Brian Adamick/Reporter-Telegram

As similar as they are, the Welch twins, Justin, left, and Taylor, have at least one distinct difference: Taylor has a rattlesnake bite on his leg.

"'Are you sure it wasn't a stick?'" his father asked after Taylor returned to camp, Mrs. Welch said.

"I raised up my pants leg, and it was bloody" underneath, Taylor said. "It started swelling up and stuff and started turning blue."

After convincing his folks that he really was bitten, Taylor "was as calm as could be," his father said.

A bandana was tied to the leg

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff writer

A picture on an advertising circular is hoped to jump-start a stalled search for Midland teenager Elizabeth Henry, missing since August.

Miss Henry, 18, is pictured on the back of an advertising card sent this week to 52 million homes nationwide. The ad operates through ADVO Inc. of Windsor, Conn.

The young Midland woman's description and photo appear under the words, "Have you seen me?"

"Of course, we're hoping something good comes of it," said Ralph Henry, Elizabeth's father. "We have heard nothing since the results of the DNA tests came back earlier this year. It has kind of gone to a standstill."

The card urges people with information about Miss Henry to call the toll-free number of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

"We have used these type of things before, on other cases, and they have been successful," said Midland Police Sgt. B.G. Johnson, an investigator who has worked on the Henry case.

"We need anything that would lead us to where she's at or what happened," Sgt. Johnson said. "We're right now at a standstill on this and we're like anyone else, we'll try whatever is available to us."

ADVO's circular is only one of several ways the National Center has publicized Miss Henry's face and description. The center — a clearinghouse for missing-child information — regularly provides corporations and other entities with information and publishes a newsletter.

But this week's ad should reach more homes than any previous effort, said Julie Cartwright, director of media relations for the National Center.

"We find as a result of our photo distribution programs, one in seven children are recovered," Ms. Cartwright said.

According to information from ADVO, of the 400 children pictured on similar advertising circulars, 57 have been recovered through tips.

"Often times people look at these and think, 'I won't know that child,'" Ms. Cartwright said.

"But it's surprising — not only adults but children as well are recognizing the photos and calling in their information. It's working."

Callers to the toll-free hotline will be kept confidential, Ms. Cartwright said. Their information will be relayed directly to local law enforcement officials.

Miss Henry has been missing from her north Midland home since Aug. 19. That afternoon, she made a call to emergency 911 but was cut off suddenly, and when police arrived about five minutes later, the house was empty.

A group of friends found Miss Henry's truck at Midland International Airport the next day.

Local students, Realtors, the Texas Rangers and the FBI have been among those involved in the search for Miss Henry.

Walkathon to help raise funds for family shelter

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

A healthy family, both mentally and physically, is a blessing too often taken for granted.

But many children and spouses find that their opportunities for happiness and growth have been stunted by abuse at home.

The Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children houses victims of family violence on an in-patient or out-patient basis.

Employees of the local shelter know the heartache associated with domestic violence.

"Family violence today is so pervasive that rarely does someone not know someone else who is abused," said Marlene Bruce, social service coordinator.

Like many organizations, the shelter has fallen on tough financial times. But organizers of the Families Matter '92 Walkathon hope the pledges raised will help balance their operating budget.

The first walkathon is open to adults and children over age 7. Younger children can bring their bicycles, tricycles and big wheels to ride under supervision in the first Children's Parade.

Registration for the event begins at 8 a.m. Saturday, June 20. Participants will circle the Midland College loop between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m.

"We feel this is an important cause and hopefully other people will embrace it, too," said Eleanor Josting, community relations and volunteer coordinator for the shelter.

In addition to programs for battered spouses and abusive spouses, the shelter has an extensive children's program.

"Its main function is to teach children to look out for their own safety above everything else," said Ms. Bruce.

Many children, counselors say, are so busy worrying about their mother's well-being that they begin to neglect their own.

A staff of 24 works to help serve abuse victims from 15 area counties.

And although hundreds of volunteers logged nearly 6,000 hours at the center last year, incidents of domestic violence continue to haunt the Permian Basin.

On May 11 in Pecos, four members of a family were killed by a dejected boyfriend of another family member, before he killed himself.

Gilbert Dominguez had been searching for his girlfriend, who refused his marriage proposal the day before. One of the victims was his 18-month-old daughter.

In mid-April, Ian Neil Stead shot his wife in a Midland apartment complex parking lot before he was killed in an exchange of gunfire with police.

And in early-March, Angela Frescaz, 20, died after suffering four gunshot wounds 10 days earlier. Her former husband, Gilbert Rivera, has been charged with her murder.

Employees of the shelter believe there are also thousands of battered women and children in the Permian Basin.

The shelter focuses on teaching them how to break the cycle of abuse.

Experts believe violence in families passes from generation to generation by children who were witnesses to abuse or who were themselves victims of domestic violence.

To encourage participation in the walkathon, several prizes will

IBM gives grant to youth group

Staff report

IBM Corp. has provided a cash grant to the local Camp Fire Boys and Girls to purchase a FAX machine to help improve communications with staff and volunteers.

The coeducational organization serves more than 1,200 young people in kindergarten through high school in the Midland/Odessa area "to help them develop the self-esteem and confidence to make the right choices in life," according to a press release provided by IBM in announcing the grant.

"This IBM grant will help to greatly improve communications of our program to both staff and volunteers," said Cindy Ellis, executive director of Camp Fire Boys and Girls. "It will enable us to get vital information out immediately and, in the long run, will have a positive effect on the development of the youth in our community."

The grant was made under IBM's Fund for Community Service Program by Janet Arnold, a Customer Center administrator in the company's Midland/Odessa branch office.

The program provides both equipment and cash grants to help underwrite projects of community organizations in which IBM employees, retirees and their spouses are actively involved. Ms. Arnold's husband, Steve, is president of the board of directors and chairman of the group's Strategic Planning Committee.

Last year, IBM's Fund for Community Service made grants to 3,200 organizations totaling $6 million. Since it was established in 1972, the fund has made combined cash and equipment donations to 32,000 organizations in excess of $54 million.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Violent argument

Staff report

ODESSA — A argument between neighbors turned violent Tuesday night leaving two people in Medical Center Hospital, police said.

Charles Lipford, 39, and his wife, name and age unknown, were apparently beaten during a disturbance in the 3300 block of Jackson Street, police said.

Lipford was listed in stable condition late Tuesday night and his wife's condition was unknown because she entered the hospital under an alias, officers said. Officials said she had complained of chest pains.

Witnesses reported shots being fired during the melee but officers said no one was hit.

Officers were still investigating the scene late Tuesday night. No arrests had been made, police said.

Sexual assault

Midland detectives are investigating a sexual assault that occurred Monday night in south Midland.

Police were dispatched to Cottonflat Grove Apartments Tuesday and were told that the incident took place at about 11:40 p.m. Monday at 2800 W. County Road 120.

Apartment fire

ODESSA — A fire at Meadowbrook Apartments Tuesday morning is believed to have been started by a small child playing with a lighter, officials said.

The blaze caused heavy damage to one apartment and minor smoke damage to several surrounding units, officials said.

One woman suffered minor burns and was treated at Medical Center Hospital. No other injuries were reported.

just above the single-fang bite and an ice-pack was applied to the wound to halt the spreading of venom into his bloodstream.

"We were two or three miles from the pickup, five miles from the pavement, and 50 miles from town, " Scott Welch said. "They pumped sunlight in, we were so far out."

"There, you are vulnerable to the elements," Mrs. Welch said.

Less than two hours later, Taylor was in the hospital at La Junta. By then, it was too late to remove the poison, since the venom already had spread into Taylor's bloodstream, Scott Welch said.

Physicians had opted not to give Taylor an anti-venom injection unless he got sick "because the anti-venom can be as bad as the bite, or, in some cases, it has (adverse) side-effects," Scott Welch said.

Three nights and two days later, Taylor was out of the hospital and was heading home. He is still under the care of a physician and is to undergo physical therapy to regain use of his leg.

"Taylor was lucky that he had only a one-fang bite," Mrs. Welch said. A spot on his blue-jeans leg was wet with venom from the other fang that did not cut into the flesh.

Taylor's right leg is "discolored all the way down to his toes like a real deep bruise," Mrs. Welch said.

The viper's venom, which may affect the body's neurological system, can "kill the muscle and often kills the skin," his mother said. Skin grafts may be required.

After all the commotion and concern, Taylor appeared calm.

"I never did get to camp (out on the ranch) ," Taylor lamented. "Justin did and so did everybody else. I camped out at the hospital."

Mrs. Bush urges older Americans to do volunteer work

The State

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush, courting the senior citizen vote for her husband Tuesday, urged older Americans to do volunteer work and to help young people.

About 43 million Americans are senior citizens, and about 5 million older Americans work as volunteers, Mrs. Bush told the American Association of Retired Persons.

"Let's double that figure — maybe even triple it," she said.

The first lady's speech opened the AARP convention, which lasts through Thursday. About 6,000 members packed an auditorium to hear Mrs. Bush, and hundreds of others watched the opening session on television monitors in the San Antonio Convention Center.

The biennial meeting has attracted approximately 30,000 people.

Mrs. Bush, 66, said she was happy to speak to AARP members because they are "my kind of folks."

"I'd like to start with a confession," she said. "Retirement sounds wonderful — in just four more years."

Mrs. Bush said helping young people by reading to them, tutoring them or being their friend is increasingly important as traditional families break up. Besides growing up without both parents, she said, children are losing their extended families.

She urged the AARP members to be the best grandparents they can be and to use their "clout" to help others. The first lady said President Bush agrees it is important to serve others.

"And you didn't think I was going to come here and not mention the world's greatest, most caring, finest, most decent man . . .," she said to applause and laughter.

Mrs. Bush also touted her husband's record in office and later told reporters the vote of older Americans is "enormously important."

Sixty-nine percent of registered voters over age 65 voted in the last presidential election.

"I think they appreciate the fact that the president has worked very, very hard," Mrs. Bush said. "There are a lot of things this president has done for the senior citizens."

'There are a lot of things this president has done for the senior citizens.'

— Barbara Bush

The first lady said Bush has held inflation to a little more than 3 percent, but she said under the last Democratic president inflation was around 13 percent.

"For people on a fixed income, that's just disaster," she said.

The visit was Mrs. Bush's second to San Antonio in a week. Last week, she spoke at a Republican fund-raiser.

Anna Perez, Mrs. Bush's press secretary, said she believed the Bush-Quayle campaign paid for both trips.

Also addressing the gathering was consumer activist Ralph Nader, who said the next election is all about the empowerment of the American people.

Nader said empowerment meant term limitations, caps on finance reforms and initiative, referendum and recall in all states.

Morales wants prison case back in court

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales, accusing plaintiffs' lawyers in the long-standing Ruiz prison lawsuit of getting rich at Texans' expense, said Tuesday he was ready to go back to court to settle the case.

Although a settlement had been reached earlier this year, Morales repeated his claims that the plaintiffs' attorneys have made additional demands he now cannot approve.

"I now see no viable or realistic prospects for resolution outside of litigation," Morales said at a news conference. "And I have directed our lawyers to gear up for trial."

The attorney general made repeated references to the "attorneys from San Francisco" who have been representing the inmates and he questioned their motives. Donna Brorby and William Bennett Turner are the chief attorneys for the plaintiffs.

"I suppose that there are those who may argue that the plaintiffs' attorneys would have no incentive to settle this litigation," Morales said.

He noted the plaintiffs' attorneys have made more than $6 million in the case — money paid by Texas taxpayers.

"Good Lord, they have become millionaires in this litigation. And we have people dying, literally dying, Texans dying on our streets. And we have a couple of San Francisco lawyers on the West Coast over there counting their money," Morales said.

"But again, given the fact that they have made so much money in this litigation, I just have to question their motivations. I'll tell you this. If we end up indeed going to trial on July 6, or whenever we go to trial, our lawyers are going to kick their $6 million butts."

Ms. Brorby called Morales' attack "just another piece of political baloney," and accused Morales of stymieing the settlement for his own political gain.

"The only thing standing in the way of a settlement is Dan Morales," she said. "For better or for worse — I predict for worse — Dan Morales has chosen to lead the charge back into court. I don't know what office he's running for."

Turner was not immediately available for comment.

Morales already had asked U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice in Tyler to dismiss the case.

Justice, who has been overseeing the prison system for more than a decade, has scheduled a hearing July 6. Morales said he is ready to fight the case then and would object to any delays.

The Texas Board of Criminal Justice, Morales and plaintiffs' attorneys have been haggling over a proposed settlement to the two-decade-old lawsuit that would remove state prisons from tight federal supervision.

Ranch-type dressing has new flavor twist

By Linda Anderson

I don't know exactly how it happened, but my young taste-testers have developed a fondness for salad — even the child who rarely likes anything green (unless it's Jell-O). And they particularily like salads that have a light coating of ranch-style dressing.

Anderson

When we saw a commercial on television for Kraft's new Caesar Ranch salad dressing, the youngest taster specifically asked me if we could do a taste-test on it and volunteered to be the official taster. You can't say no to a deal like that, which involves a child volunteering to eat vegetables.

On our next trip to our favorite supermarket, she found the Caesar Ranch dressing and reminded me of my promise, so we bought a bottle of Caesar Ranch dressing to check it out for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

A 16-ounce bottle of the salad dressing cost $2.53. (I would have bought a smaller bottle but couldn't find one on the shelves.)

According to the commercial we saw, the dressing is the first ranch-style dressing modified to be like caesar salad dressing, with eggs and other typical caesar salad dressing ingredients. (Whatever they may be. I'm no expert on caesar salads.) Sure enough, a look at the ingredients label showed eggs, grated Parmesan cheese and grated Romano cheese as some of the main ingredients.

Recently, new findings have recommended that raw eggs not be used in from-scratch caesar salad dressing because of the possibility of salmonella (which, as I understand it, causes a kind of food poisoning). Although the label doesn't say, I'm sure the eggs used in Caesar Ranch dressing won't cause that problem.

The taste-test wasn't as terrific as the young taster had hoped for. She liked the dressing alright, but discovered that she really preferred regular Ranch dressing. I think Caesar Ranch dressing had too much Parmesan cheese taste for her.

I, on the other hand, thought the Parmesan cheese taste was just right. Maybe adults will like this dressing more than children — at least, that's the way it seems to be working at my house.

I hope they come out with a low-fat, low-cholesterol version of Caesar Ranch salad dressing. That way I can indulge my taste buds with a clear conscience.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

Elderly 'cook up' therapy in kitchen

By Beverly Bundy
N.Y. Times News Service

Preparing three meals a day, every day, can be an aggravation. Getting a meal on the table is another in the list of chores wedged in with holding down a job, chauffeuring the kids, dropping off the dry cleaning and cleaning up after the cat.

But for one group of Fort Worth residents, cooking is the high point of the week — even when the mechanics are torture. Every Thursday, seven women at the Heritage Estates long-term care facility meet to mix up a recipe for therapy, both social and physical.

Cooking as exercise was the idea of occupational therapist Peggy Jones-Nichols, who began working with the Heritage Estates residents in October. New to working with the elderly, Jones-Nichols found that these patients needed a slightly different approach.

Occupational therapy deals with daily tasks: dressing, grooming, eating, washing dishes. Buttoning a blouse or lacing shoes can seriously challenge a patient recovering from a stroke or suffering from chronic arthritis.

Care facilities offer help with these chores, but the goal of occupational therapy is to encourage patients to cope for themselves.

So once a week, Jones-Nichols tries to make therapy fun by meeting with a group of her regular patients to prepare a simple recipe.

'Some of the residents suffer severe depression when they first move into a care facility. They can take their meals in their rooms and spend a lot of time alone. This session gets them to interact with one another.'

— Peggy Jones-Nichols
occupational therapist

THE HERITAGE Estate group collects around a table set up with ingredients, adjusting wheelchairs, canes and walkers. Copies of a corn bread recipe, for instance, are passed around and each resident takes some part in preparing the recipe. One person measures cornmeal, another stirs the batter, a third operates the electric mixer.

Manipulating measuring spoons and opening milk cartons can be agony for residents in their 80s, but Jones-Nichols guides the cooks into trying different ways to use motor skills.

"The cooking class is a way for me to follow up on the regular therapy sessions," Jones-Nichols said. "I can see if they're having strengthening problems, if they're favoring a weak hand or weak muscles that we've worked on in exercise sessions. Cooking is sequential. They have to go from step one to step two, so it's a good problem-solving activity."

It's also a good social activity.

"Some of the residents suffer severe depression when they first move into a care facility. They can take their meals in their rooms and spend a lot of time alone," Jones-Nichols said. "This session gets them to interact with one another.

"For many of these women now living in long-term facilities this was their life — cooking for and feeding the family. But as they've gotten older and succumbed to the aches, pains and, sometimes, limitations associated with aging, the women are now served meals prepared by others.

"This cooking group allows them to have some say in what we'll cook and it gives them a break in a week where days can all blend together."

AFTER COOKING, and while the corn bread bakes in a convection oven provided by the care facility, the women, still sitting, wash and rinse the dishes. The finished corn bread is sliced up and passed around and one of the class members gets a round of applause for managing to open a tiny tub of margarine.

Harriett Cleveland, 90, has been making this corn bread since she was 10 years old and had to stand on a wooden apple crate to reach the bowl and spoons. Cooking class attendees take turns contributing recipes.

PERFECT CORN BREAD
(Serves 6 to 8)

1 cup all-purpose flour, sifted
¼ cup sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup yellow cornmeal
2 eggs
1 cup milk
¼ cup vegetable oil

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

Sift flour with sugar, baking powder and salt; stir in cornmeal.

Add eggs, milk and vegetable oil. Beat with rotary or electric mixer until just smooth. Don't overbeat. Pour into greased 9x9x2-inch pan. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes.

(Corn sticks: Spoon batter into greased corn-stick pan, filling two-thirds full. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes. Yields 18.)

Tips can save time at dinner

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

You'll save precious minutes during the dinnertime rush if you always have cooked rice or pasta on hand. Impossible? Not if you let your freezer and microwave oven help.

Here's how: Start by cooking a big batch of rice or pasta, then rinse and drain it thoroughly.

To freeze single servings of rice or pasta, place ½-cup portions in 6-ounce custard cups. Cover with clear plastic wrap and freeze for several hours. When the rice or pasta is firm, remove the servings from the custard cups. Seal them in freezer bags or containers. Label and freeze for up to 6 months.

For family-size servings (enough for four people), place 2-cup portions of pasta or rice in freezer containers. Seal, label and freeze for up to 6 months.

To reheat single servings, return the frozen pasta or rice to the custard cups. Do not add water. Cover with waxed paper. Cook on 100 percent power (high) until the pasta or rice is heated through, using these timings:

- For 1 serving, cook 1½ to 2 minutes.
- For 2 servings, cook 2 to 2½ minutes.
- For 4 servings, cook 4 to 4½ minutes.

To reheat family-size servings, transfer the 2 cups frozen rice or pasta to a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole. Add 2 tablespoons water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) about 5 minutes or until heated through. Stir once about halfway through the cooking time.

Summer rice pilaf uses fresh herbs

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Grab your scissors and head for the herb garden. Fresh basil and parsley make a splashy statement in this 10-minute microwave side dish. To chop the herbs finely, put the rinsed herb in a deep container, such as a measuring cup, and snip away with your kitchen shears.

HERBED RICE PILAF

1 tablespoon margarine or butter
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup thinly sliced celery
1 teaspoon snipped fresh basil or sage, or ½ teaspoon dried basil or sage, crushed
1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1 cup water
1 cup quick-cooking rice
¼ cup snipped fresh parsley
2 tablespoons toasted slivered almonds

In a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole heat margarine or butter on 100 percent power (high) for 30 to 40 seconds or until melted. Stir in onion, celery, basil, or sage. Cook, covered, on high for 3 to 4 minutes or until vegetables are nearly tender. Stir in bouillon granules and water.

Cook, uncovered, on high for 2 to 3½ minutes or until water is boiling. Stir in uncooked rice. Let stand, covered, for 5 minutes. Stir in parsley and almonds. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Some things are better alone

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a little problem. I don't know if you can help me, but I figured I'd write anyway, since you give such good advice. What I'm about to write about seems to be happening more and more with young people my age. (I'm a 24-year-old, unmarried woman.)

Van Buren

I'm talking about having sex with more than one partner at a time. Like most men, my steady dreams of having two women in bed with him at the same time. He sold me on that idea about three months ago, so we experimented with another couple. My girlfriend and I sort of put on a show for the guys.

I found it very exciting, after I got over the shyness and embarrassment. Everyone had a really good time. My boyfriend said he had always fantasized about group sex, and he didn't feel any guilt and was very glad that I loved him enough to go along with it.

My only problem is that I really love this guy and he has even talked about marriage someday, but we never have sex alone anymore — just the two of us.

Abby, do you think this is wrong? I have talked to many people who have done it, and they say it strengthens their relationships. What are your ideas on the subject? — ABBY FAN IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR ABBY FAN: Your boyfriend has sold you on participating in a cheap, degrading kind of sexual game that should make you want to run as far away from him as possible. A man who truly loves a woman would never ask her to participate in such dangerous and destructive games.

Rather than strengthen relationships, it makes a sexual encounter as meaningless as a meal you ate last Tuesday.

DEAR ABBY: I am a professional woman, happily married for 18 years to a professional man. We have a wonderful son, now 13 years old.

My concern is this: My husband had a troubled marriage when he was 22 years old. It was a very brief marriage that ended in divorce. His first wife died many years ago.

Our son does not know of his father's first marriage, though certain family members and old friends do. My husband says he sees no reason to tell his son about it, as it is a painful subject he regards as part of his past.

I worry that our son will find out about this marriage on his own (the divorce is listed on our marriage certificate) or that one day a friend or family member might mention it in conversation.

Should our son be told? — UNEASY IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR UNEASY: Yes. And the sooner the better.

DEAR ABBY: Since your hobby is gathering facts about the American presidents, add this one: When President William McKinley received a cable from Adm. George Dewey reporting the capture of Manila, he had to look up the location of the Philippines on a globe.

"I could not have told where those damned islands were within 2,000 miles," he later confessed. — GEORGE P. FRANQUEY, GUAM

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a good person. He doesn't beat on me, or run around as far as I know. But we just don't get along anymore. We have little spats about everything. He says he still loves me — and I love him — but we are terrible to each other!

We have two children, and it is affecting them, too. I've even considered leaving him before we really get to hate each other, but he would never let me take the kids, and I don't want to lose them. Please help me. — END OF MY ROPE

DEAR END: You and your husband need to find out what went wrong in your marriage. Please get into counseling — both of you. You need to verbalize your feelings openly and honestly with a clergyperson, or a licensed marriage counselor. Don't wait.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HELEN BRODKEY IN OMAHA: Happy birthday, Sister!

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Mexican recipes offered in brochure

Staff report

Weekend brunch is a popular way to feed family and guests. Give the menu a Mexican accent and the food will have a fresh appeal.

The menu can be as simple or elaborate as you like. Fresh fruit or fruit juice is always a must. For the entree, serve tempting Huevos Rancheros Tostados, sunny-side up fried eggs served on crisp tortillas and topped with a peppy tomato-based sauce and shredded cheese.

For a more substantial brunch, ad Fire and Ice Sausage and Rice Bake to the menu. It blends spicy sausage and salsa with shredded mild Cheddar cheese and sour Cream.

With an increased interest in Tex-Mex food, it also is great for entertaining. Among buffet specialties are Cheesy Corn Chowder, Guadalajara Shrimp and Fajitas with Grilled Vegetables.

For these and more Mexican-style recipes for entertaining, send a self-addressed, stamped number 10 business-size envelope to Mexican Menus, Sargento Cheese Company, 1 Persnickety Place, Plymouth, Wis., 53073-0350.

Food for thought, to tickle

NEW YORK (AP) — Food is funny.

"It's universal, for one thing. Some people don't care about politics and some people don't care about sports or clothes. But everybody cares at least a little bit about food," said humorist and writer Roy Blount Jr.

He shared the stage recently with Nora Ephron and others reading short stories and poems about food, many of them very funny.

"It's something really strange about ingesting other formerly living things, and it's something that calls up all sorts of childhood and domestic memories. It makes you think of your mother and your wives and your children," Blount said in a telephone interview after the performance.

The food night, one of several themed readings held at Symphony Space theater in Manhattan, was possibly the most popular of all, producer Katherine Minton said. A night of baseball readings was probably second.

The programs in the "Selected Shorts" performances become part of a radio series that is heard on 120 stations over National Public Radio. The programs from this spring would be broadcast in the fall of 1993, Minton said.

The evening began with the director, in a waiter's apron, introducing himself: "Good evening, I'm Isaiah Sheffer, and I'll be your waiter."

He said as an "intense concern of the species," food was tied with sex and with that constant worry of New York drivers — alternate side of the street parking.

While not every reading was funny — the most notable exception being Franz Kafka's "A Hunger Artist" read by actor Malachy McCourt — Sheffer started the evening with "The Clean Platter" by Ogden Nash, a poem that ends, "When I ponder my mind, I consistently find, It is glued, On food."

Introduced by Sheffer as a "cordon bleu wordchef," Blount read from his book "SoupSongs," including odes to beans and oysters and what he called a "deeply incorrect" poem in praise of grease.

"Food can get pretty serious, and of course the absence of food can get very serious," Blount said afterward.

And McCourt's reading of the Kafka story of the long, slow death of a fasting person was just that.

Actor Tovah Feldshuh read "I Was Really Very Hungry," a story by M.F.K. Fisher in which the narrator shows up at a small country restaurant and finds herself completely at the mercy of a bossy waitress determined to get her to eat an enormous meal.

And Ephron read from "Heartburn," her novel in which the main character is a food writer, and a section about penny candy from "Boy," Roald Dahl's tales of childhood.

Sugar Association offers series of nutrition leaflets

Staff report

A new leaflet answers the question, are all calories created equal?

It also explains, now that diets are out, how carbohydrates can be a best friend for those looking to cut calories through moderation and sensible eating. Reviewed by nutrition experts, "Are All Calories Created Equal?" is the newest leaflet in a series being offered by The Sugar Association as part of their ongoing nutrition and health education program.

A calorie is a calorie, right? Literally that's right, but a little misleading for people in search of a weight management plan that can become an easy, healthy eating habit. This leaflet explains why the real key to healthful eating habit. This leaflet expains why the real key to healthful eating is filling up on carbohydrate calories as well as shy it is often a "fat tooth," not a "sweet tooth," that is the biggest obstacle.

"Are All Calories Created Equal?" includes simple recipes created to satisfy the appetite while cutting fat and calories. Traditionally high fat dishes, these recipes use healthful, high carborhydrate ingredients enhance with the modest amounts of sugar, at only 16 calories per teaspoon, for a pleasing flavor and texture.

Consumers can order a free copy of the "Are All Calories Created Equal?" leaflet by sending a self-adressed stamped envelope to The Sugar Association, 1101 15th Street, NW, Suite 600, Washington, D.C., 20005.

Make a connection between the grill, beef with hotline

Staff report

There's no doubt that grilling is a tasty way to cook up a meal all year long, but the hot summer months are an especially appetizing time to grill up delicious dishes. In fact, July is the most popular month for barbecuing. And this summer, when the heat's on you to grill up a mouth-watering meal, stay cool with the help of a grill team — "The Beef Connection" — that's just a toll-free phone call away. Sponsored by the Beef Industry Council and the Beef Board, "The Beef Connection" operators can answer your beef grilling questions.

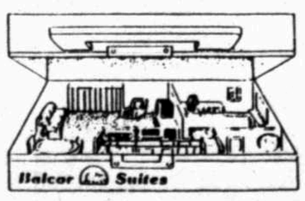

Simply call 1-800-392-BEEF, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. from June 15 through July 5, and you will be connected with an experienced home econominst who will answer cooking question on everything from lighting the fire to beef grilling times. Not sure what temperature to cook a roast on your grill? Need a quick and easy idea to spice up a tender steak for dinner? Looking for a way ato keep your meat from sticking to the grill? The operators are ready to answer these questions and more ... so just fire away.

In addition, when you call "The Beef Connection," you'll receive a free copy of the new Great Grilled Beef brochure which features sizzling beef recipes, grilling methods and important safety tips. The lines will remain open July 5-Sept. 7 for those who wich to request a complimentary copy of the brochure. Simply leave your name and address and a Great Grilled Beef brochure will soon be on its way to you.

Color my world

ATLANTA (AP) — If pastel colors can help defeat an opponent, the Atlanta Falcons will have an edge in every game at the new Georgia Dome. The visitors' lockerroom is painted periwinkle salmon.

Periwinkle salmon is sort of a purple.

"The Minnesota Vikings might be the only ones happy in there," stadium general manager Khalil Johnson said.

The Falcons locker room has gray walls, trimmed in the team colors of black and red. Very masculine.

But when the Philadelphia Eagles visit Aug. 23 for the first preseason game in the new stadium, the will see periwinkle salmon.

Panama Ro

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mavericks guard Rolando Blackman says he will decide Thursday whether to attempt to lead his native Panama to an Olympic berth.

Blackman was on the 1980 U.S. Olympic team that didn't go to Moscow because of the U.S.-led boycott.

He told The Dallas Morning News in Tuesday's editions that if insurance and accommodations matters are settled to his satisfaction, he will play for Panama in the Basketball Tournament of the Americas in Portland, Ore., June 27-July 5.

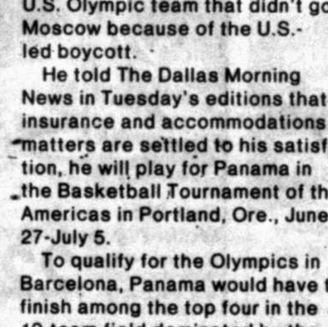

To qualify for the Olympics in Barcelona, Panama would have to finish among the top four in the 10-team field dominated by the U.S. team, which is stocked with 11 of the NBA's best players, and perennial power Brazil. Puerto Rico and Canada are the favorites to join those teams in Barcelona in July.

Parcells stable

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former New York Giants coach Bill Parcells underwent coronary artery bypass surgery Tuesday at Temple University Hospital.

The operation lasted about three hours, and Parcells was in stable condition, according to hospital spokesman Robert Villier. He said Parcells' doctors refused to release details about the former coach's condition.

The 50-year-old Parcells was under the care of Dr. Paul Addonizio, chief of cardiac and thoracic surgery, and Dr. Ezra Deutsch.

Blazers, Bulls finally meet

■ The much anticipated Chicago-Portland NBA final begins with Game 1 tonight.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — In the 1980s, the NBA matchup everyone waited for was Celtics-Lakers. In the 1990s, the most anticipated series is Trail Blazers-Bulls.

It was 1984 before Boston and Los Angeles finally brought Larry Bird and Magic Johnson together for the first of three meetings in the decade.

NBA fans aren't having to wait so long before the two most dominant teams of the early 90s, plus two of the most dominant players, Michael Jordan and Clyde Drexler, collide for a championship. Game 1 of the best-of-7 series begins at 8 p.m. (CDT) tonight in Chicago Stadium.

"Everybody's been expecting these two teams to meet in a Finals situation, and now we finally are," Jordan said Tuesday. "We haven't played consistent basketball the way we did last year, but we'll need it against Portland. It's not as flashy a matchup as the Lakers versus Chicago, but the competition is there."

"We knew we were going to face each other eventually," Drexler said. "They quenched their thirst last season. It's time for us to quench ours."

The Bulls have averaged 61 victories and the Blazers 59.7 the last three seasons, easily the best in the NBA.

In 1990, however, the Bulls couldn't stop the Detroit Pistons' drive to a second consecutive title, a run that concluded with a victory in the Finals against Portland. Last year, the Bulls rolled to their first championship, but in the Finals they beat the Lakers, who upset Portland in the conference finals.

"People have been talking about this potential matchup for three years," Bulls coach Phil Jackson said. "But Detroit still was dominating with its defense in 1990 and the Lakers came to the top last year. Finally, this year all the writers were right in picking Portland and Chicago, as much as I hate to admit it."

"If these two teams continued to play at the level of the last few years, sooner or later we were going to meet," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "The main difference is they've won a championship and we haven't."

The last time the Trail Blazers were in the Finals in 1990, the Pistons were also going for a repeat championship.

"We were in the same situation in 1990, but now we have more experience," Blazers guard Terry Porter said, referring to his team's identical starting lineup. "We were in the Finals for the first time against the Pistons. Now we've achieved everything we can achieve except winning a championship.

"The best way to become champions is to beat the champions. If neither one of us won before, it wouldn't be as special."

"We're the two best teams in the NBA, and whoever wins this series is definitely the best," Blazers reserve Cliff Robinson said.

The Bulls struggled offensively in the playoffs against Cleveland and New York, averaging 94.8 points in those two series. But Jordan believes the Trail Blazers will allow a more wide-open game.

"Hopefully, the Cleveland and New York series have prepared us for a long series in the Finals," Jordan said. "We want to control the tempo. If the game gets out of control, we have to slow it down. But we have to be ready to run if it's in our favor."

After winning 15 of 17 playoff games a year ago and finishing 67-15 in the regular season, Jackson said this year could not have been considered a success unless the team made the Finals again.

"It's been a rockier path this year for us, with a few more bumps," Jackson said.

San Jose voters go to polls on Giants

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The destiny of the San Francisco Giants was once again before the electorate, as voters in San Jose decided Tuesday whether to build a new stadium to lure the team south.

Measure G asked San Jose's 800,000 voters to authorize spending city "general funds" to help build a 45,000-48,000-seat stadium, and to pay for education and anti-drug and anti-crime programs in a package deal.

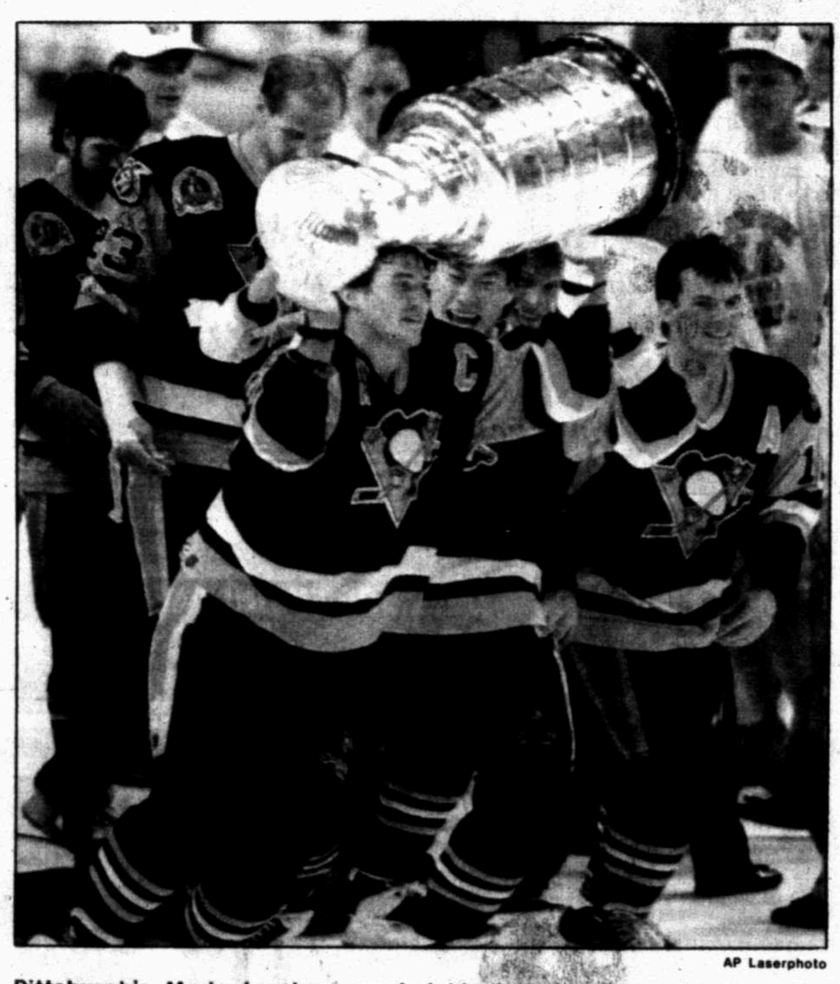

A utility tax hike of 5 percent to 7 percent has been proposed to pay for the $265 million stadium. The tax increase, not specified in the measure, would cost the average household $35 a year, and businesses thousands more.

An early count of absentee ballots showed 8,894 votes, or 53.2 percent, opposed to Measure G, while 7,831 votes, or 46.8 percent, were in favor of the measure.

This is the fourth San Francisco Bay area ballot measure to address a new Giants stadium in recent years.

San Francisco voters have twice turned down new stadium plans to keep the team, which moved there from New York in 1958 after that city refused to build a new ballpark. The team's lease at Candlestick Park expires in 1994.

Pens' Lemieux simply great

Pittsburgh's Mario Lemieux carried his team much as he does the Stanley Cup. The Penguins have now won two straight NHL titles.

Mario's supporting cast not too shabby, either

Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Los Angeles Kings couldn't do it with Wayne Gretzky. Ditto the New York Rangers with Mark Messier. Same for the St. Louis Blues with Brett Hull.

The Pittsburgh Penguins and Mario Lemieux. That's another story.

It was also a story full of adversity. Their coach died of brain cancer, they lost several key players at crucial times to injury and occasionally they even lost motivation.

They ultimately found the way to win a second straight Stanley Cup.

"I think everything we've been through kept us together," goaltender Tom Barrasso said.

With their series-clinching 6-5 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks on Monday night, a record-tying 11th straight playoff win, the Penguins proved they were one of hockey's most versatile teams. And one of the closest.

"We stuck together and that's why we've been successful," Barrasso said. "Our desire and committment was unbelievable this year. That's why we won."

It didn't hurt that the Penguins had the world's greatest player. Lemieux, who scored a playoff-leading 34 points despite missing six of his team's 21 games with a broken hand, won the

Ryan's status for next start unknown

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Nolan Ryan's status for his next scheduled start, Saturday against Minnesota, remained uncertain Tuesday, but he said he felt better after trainers worked out a knot in his left hamstring.

Ryan left Monday night's game against the New York Yankees after just 10 pitches, complaining of tightness in the hamstring. Trainer Danny Wheat worked out the knot, and Ryan gave a positive report to manager Bobby Valentine before leaving the ballpark.

Tuesday morning, Ryan went through his usual weightlifting session with pitching coach Tom House.

Valentine said he was optimistic, but would wait to see how the 45-year-old Ryan feels in the next two days before deciding on his availability.

'Horns eliminate Oklahoma

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Brooks Kieschnick got Texas started with a homer and then singled in an insurance run as the Longhorns eliminated Oklahoma 8-5 Tuesday night in the College World Series.

Texas (48-16) has had much success with the Sooners this season, beating them all five times they've met, including in an opening-round game at the CWS.

Kieschnick, the designated hitter-pitcher who earlier was named Division I player of the year by the American Baseball Coaches Association, hit his second homer of the series — and 10th of the season — in the first inning.

On Saturday, Kieschnick homered and pitched Texas to victory in the 15-3 win over the Sooners.

The Longhorns got 14 hits in that game and looked ready to romp again Tuesday, jumping ahead 4-0 after four innings off OU starter Kevin Lovingier (3-3).

Women's semifinals boast same pairing as a year ago

Associated Press

PARIS — The names and pairings are familiar for the women's semifinals at the French Open.

Monica Seles, Steffi Graf, Gabriela Sabatini and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario — the top four seeds — reached the final four Tuesday for the second year in a row.

The matchups in Thursday's semis will be the same, too: Seles vs. Sabatini and Graf vs. Sanchez Vicario.

The men's quarterfinals, meanwhile, were disrupted by rain.

Because of a four-hour delay, the match between top seed and defending champion Jim Courier and No. 8 Goran Ivanisevic was suspended by darkness with the American leading 6-2, 6-1, 2-6.

French Open

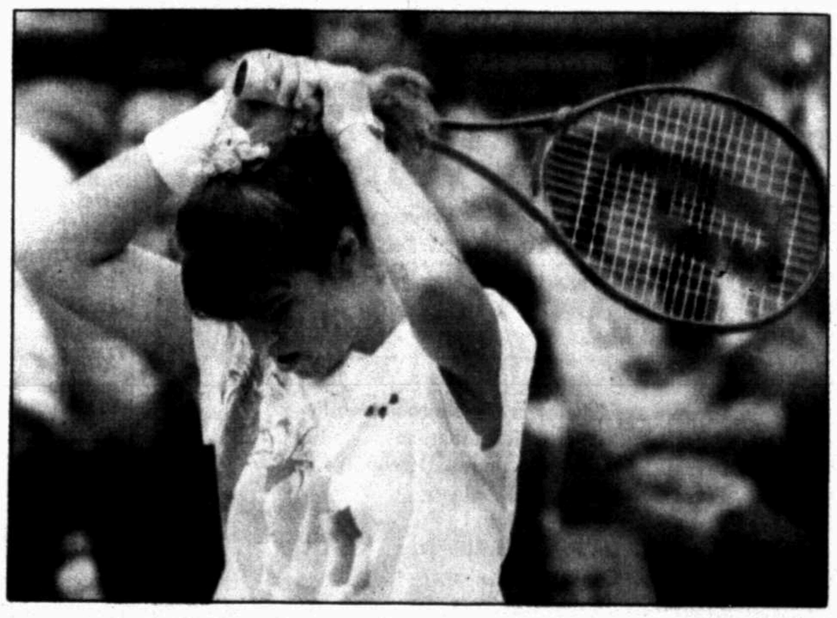

The second scheduled quarterfinal between No. 3 Pete Sampras and No. 11 Andre Agassi was postponed until Wednesday.

It was the sixth day that rain interrupted play since the tournament began nine days ago.

Seles and Jennifer Capriati waited four hours before starting their match — and both said the delay disrupted their concentration and affected their play.

"When I got on the court I kind of became dizzy," said Seles, the two-time defending champion. "I really

HOUSTON — Mark Portugal extended his Astrodome winning streak to four games with a six-hitter, and his teammates helped with sparkling defense as Houston beat the Montreal Expos 6-0 Tuesday night.

Portugal (5-2), who struck out three and walked four, benefited from a bases-loaded double play that ended the second inning and Steve Finley's leaping catch off the wall that prevented Archi Cianfrocco from getting a hit in the fourth.

Finley victimized Cianfrocco again in the seventh with a diving catch.

Portugal's complete game was only the second for the Astros this season. Daryl Kile pitched a five-hitter against the New York Mets on April 29.

Cubs 3, Padres 2

CHICAGO — Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning and Mark Grace single in the winning run in the 13th as Chicago beat San Diego.

Frank Seminara, a 25-year-old right-hander, made his major league debut for the Padres and became just the second player from Columbia University in the majors since Lou Gehrig, following Minnesota's Gene Larkin. Seminara had a three-hit shutout when he left in the eighth inning after he was hit by a line drive.

Dawson tied the game with his eighth home run after Randy Myers, who blew a save for the fourth time in 17 chances, walked Ryne Sandberg.

Then, in the 13th, Joe Girardi singled off Gene Harris (0-1) with one out and took second on Sandberg's infield single. Dawson bounced out, Pat Clements relieved and Grace pulled a single to right.

Pirates 1, Dodgers 0

PITTSBURGH — Pinch-hitter Dave Clark drew a walk in the seventh inning off Tom Candiotti to force in the only run, and Pittsburgh stopped Los Angeles' six-game winning streak.

Randy Tomlin (6-3), who had a 7.33 ERA in his previous six starts, allowed five hits over seven shutout innings for only his second victory since April 25. He was 1-3 while giving up 42 hits and 19 runs in 23 1-3 innings in May.

The Dodgers were denied their first seven-game winning streak since 1988, while the Pirates won for just the fourth time in 17 games.

Candiotti (5-4) permitted only one runner as far as third base until the seventh.

Reds 2, Cardinals 1

CINCINNATI — Tim Belcher won for the fourth time in five decisions, and the surging Cincinnati Reds cashed in on two St. Louis mistakes to beat the slumping Cardinals.

Cincinnati won for the seventh time in eight games by scoring two unearned runs off Jose DeLeon (2-5), who has lost his last three starts. Tom Pagnozzi's passed ball let in a run in the second inning, and right fielder Felix Jose's error set up Bip Roberts' sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Belcher (5-5) scattered seven hits over eight innings, losing his shutout and ending his scoreless streak at 15 innings when Ozzie Smith scored on Jose' grounder in the eighth. Belcher allowed just three hits over 8 1-3 innings of a 1-0 victory last Wednesday in New York.

Mets 4, Giants 3

NEW YORK — Eddie Murray hit his 16th career grand slam, and the New York Mets held on to beat the slumping San Francisco Giants 4-3 Tuesday night.

After scoring only two runs in the first four games of the homestand — all losses — the Mets totalled 18 in taking two games from the Giants. San Francisco has lost five of its last six.

Murray is 5 for 6 with 14 RBIs when hitting with the bases loaded this season, and 76 for 180 (.422) lifetime with 234 RBIs. It was Murray's first grand slam since April 10, 1989.

Braves 5, Phillies 3

ATLANTA — Terry Pendleton hit a two-run homer off Mitch Williams in the ninth inning to give Atlanta its fifth straight victory.

Pendleton reached Williams (2-2) for his 10th homer after Otis Nixon had singled and stolen second base.

Rangers rip Yankees for 8-2 win

ARLINGTON — Juan Gonzalez hit a two-run homer in the first inning and Dean Palmer hit a three-run homer in the fifth Tuesday night as the Texas Rangers routed the New York Yankees 8-2.

Bobby Witt (6-4) allowed six hits in eight innings, struck out three and walked two as he won his third straight start.

Tim Leary (4-4) was tagged seven runs and five hits in five innings, and fell to 2-8 against the Rangers.

Indians 4, Mariners 3

CLEVELAND — Glenallen Hill put Cleveland ahead with a two-run homer in the seventh inning as the Indians beat Seattle for their sixth win in seven games.

Erik Hanson (2-8) led 3-2 before Sandy Alomar singled with one out and Hill followed with his second home run of the season.

Dave Otto (4-3) gave up three runs and five hits in seven innings.

Royals 2, White Sox 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kevin McReynolds hit the first home run off Scott Radinsky in almost a year, a two-run drive in the eighth inning that lifted Kansas City over Chicago.

Frank Thomas hit a sacrifice fly off Mark Gubicza (6-3) that gave Chicago the lead in the eighth. Jack McDowell walked Gregg Jefferies leading off the bottom of the inning and Radinsky (2-2) relieved. McReynolds followed with his eighth home run, the first off Radinsky in 50 innings since last July 27.

Brewers 5, Tigers 4

MILWAUKEE — Scott Fletcher singled in the go-ahead run with two outs in the seventh for the second straight game as Milwaukee beat Detroit.

Detroit has lost six straight, matching its worst skid this season, and dropped a season-low nine games under .500.

Blue Jays 7, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Derek Bell broke a 13th-inning tie with a sacrifice fly as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied and beat the Minnesota Twins for their fifth consecutive victory.

With the score tied at 5, Kelly Gruber led off the 13th with a double off Gary Wayne (1-2), took third on John Olerud's sacrifice and scored easily on Bell's fly to deep center.

PENS: Injuries make Lemieux's performance more incredible

(From 1C)

Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP for the second consecutive year.

If any series could be a microcosm for Lemieux, it was the finals when the 6-foot-4, 210-pound center demonstrated the breadth and width of his game.

With five goals and two assists in the championship round, Lemieux scored more than twice as many points as Chicago's top line of Jeremy Roenick, Steve Larmer and Michel Goulet combined.

Two of Lemieux's goals came in the first game of the series to help the Penguins rally for a 5-4 victory after trailing by three goals.

Lemieux also led the Penguins' penalty-killing unit as Pittsburgh killed off 15 of 16 power plays.

What made Lemieux's performance all the more remarkable was that he was playing with a bad back in addition to the broken hand, a souvenir of Adam Graves' slash in the second-round series with the Rangers.

In their own ways, Gretzky, Messier and Hull brought individual excitement to their teams this season.

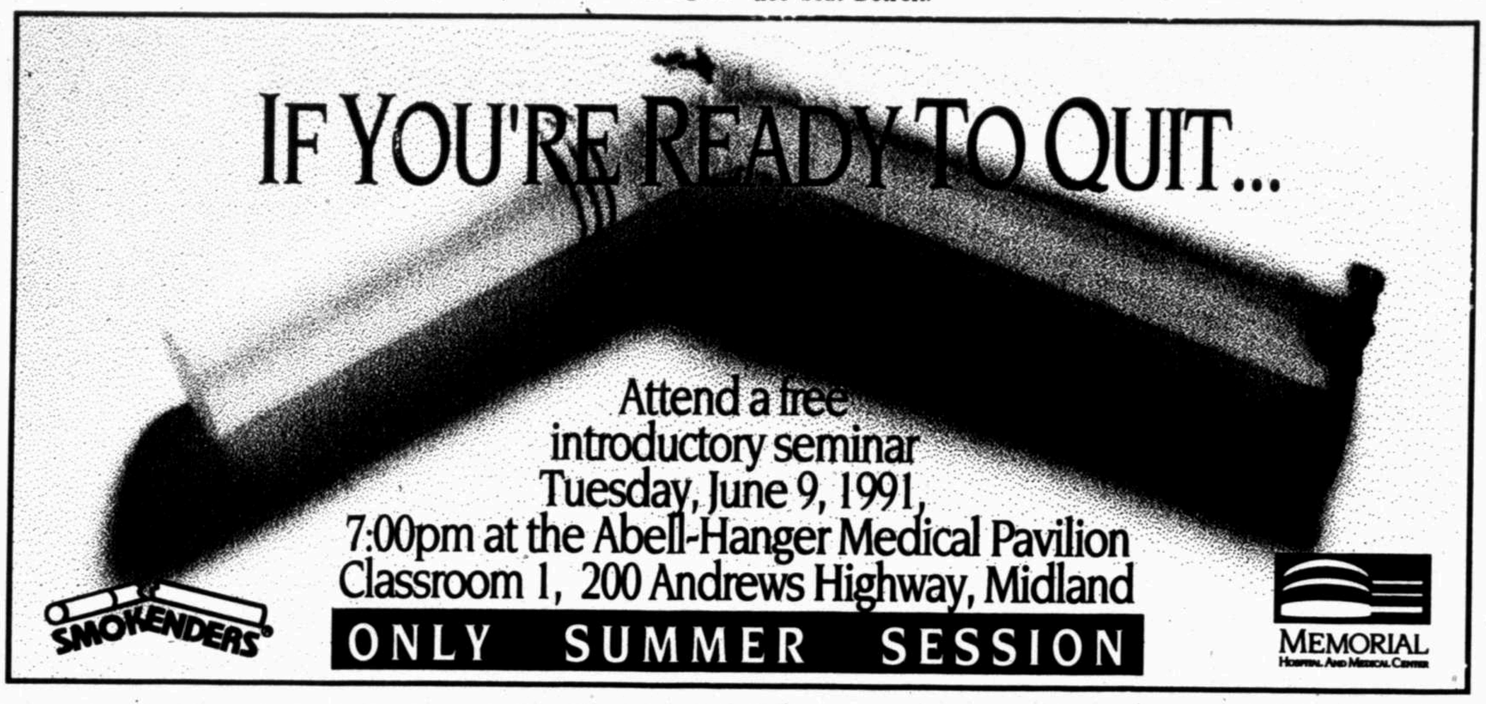

But it was ultimately apparent that Lemieux's supporting cast was better than any of those other superstars.

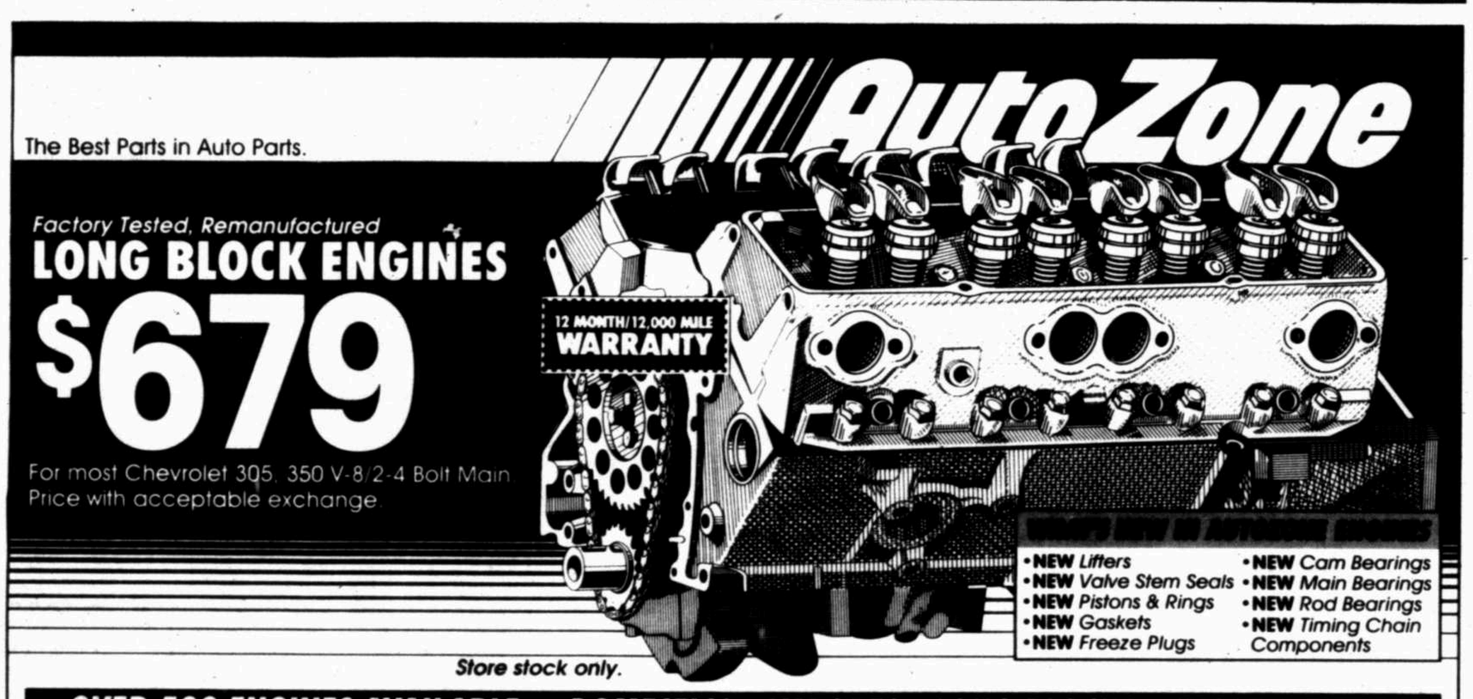

This season, the Penguins were a team that could beat you any number of ways, and they gave a clinic to the Blackhawks in the finals.

Chicago had come into the championship series with the best defensive record in the playoffs. Yet it was the Penguins' so-called "no-name" defense that outplayed Chicago in the clutch.

When they have a mind to, no one in hockey defends a lead like the Penguins. Witness Game 3 of the finals when Kevin Stevens scored in the first five minutes and the Penguins went on to a 1-0 victory. Witness Game 4 when the Penguins clung to a one-goal lead for nearly nine minutes of the third period.

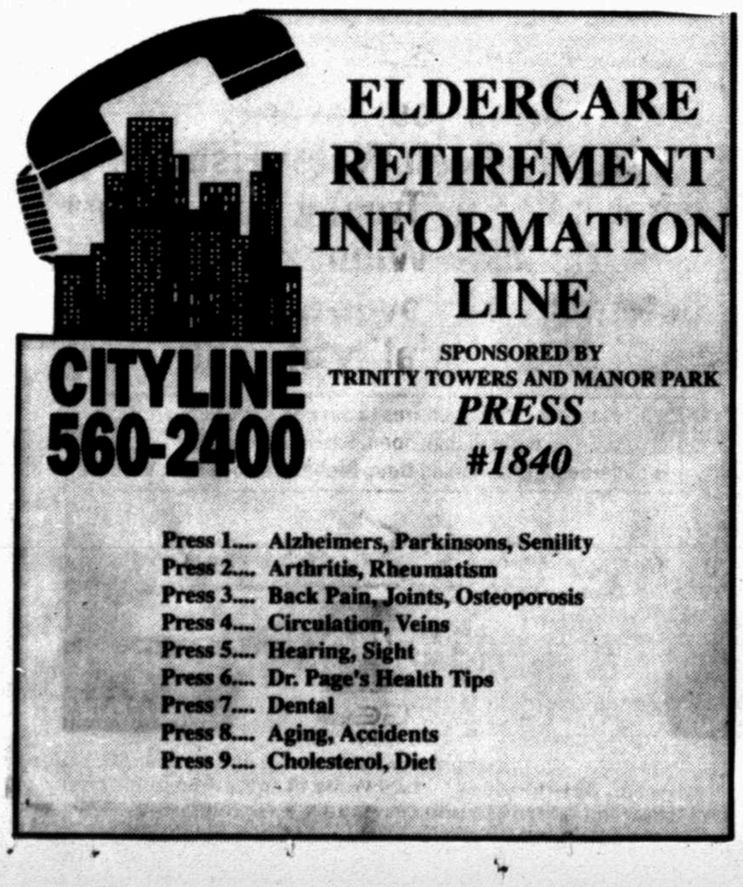

When the Blackhawks decided to open up their offense in Game 4, the Penguins simply went with the flow.

TENNIS: Rain slows play in men's field was disoriented, I guess from waiting a long time. After that I told myself to relax, put the ball in play and not go too much for my shots because it was cold and windy."

(From 1C)

After trailing 2-0 in both sets, Seles came bach each time to take six straight games and win 6-2, 6-2, in one hour.

"In the beginning I felt very optimistic," said Capriati, the fifth seed. "After that I don't know what happened. Just like that it was over. I know that I could beat her and I have beaten her before. To lose without a real battle, it is disappointing."

A turning point in the first set came when Capriati, up 2-0, lost her serve after leading 40-0. She double faulted once and committed three straight unforced groundstroke errors as Seles broke.

Leading 2-1 in the second set, Capriati double-faulted twice to lose serve. She did the same two games later. Seles, meanwhile, made few mistakes.

"She just kept the ball in play and moved me around, waited for me to miss it," Capriati said. "I felt everything was just heavy and slow out there, even the way I moved."

In another one-sided match, Sanchez Vicario beat Manon Bollegraf of the Netherlands 6-2, 6-3.

But Graf and Sabatini had to fight back after losing their first sets of the tournament.

Graf, a two-time French Open champion, beat Natalia Zvereva of the former Soviet republic of Belarus 6-3, 6-7 (7-4), 6-3. Sabatini defeated seventh-seeded Conchita Martinez of Spain 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Graf led 5-3 in the second set and served for the match at 5-4 before Zvereva came back to win in a tiebreaker.

"I just gave her the chance to get back in," the German said. "I wasn't playing the right shots at that moment...I was not taking enough time between points. She likes it when you play fast. She always had a good answer on a fast shot."

But Graf reasserted her dominance in the third set and Zvereva became less aggressive. "For some reason I played a bit maybe too safe," she said.

It rained steadily through much of the match.

"It was a bit slippery, but it didn't really matter," Zvereva said. "I was really into the match and I didn't care if heaven would fall on me."

Graf has won all nine of her matches against Zvereva, starting with her 6-0, 6-0, rout in the French Open final in 1988.

Sabatini, who had won five straight matches against Martinez, suddenly found herself down one set and 0-3 in the second.

"I wasn't doing anything until then," Sabatini said. "I was a little bit tense, a little bit nervous at the beginning. She was controlling the match."

CWS: Fullerton rolls

(From 1C)

Calvin Murray, picked in the first round by the San Francisco Giants on Monday, had a run-scoring single, an RBI double and scored twice for Texas. The double followed Robert DeLeon's leadoff triple in the eighth inning with Texas ahead 6-5. Kieschnick singled in Murray for the Longhorns' final run.

Chris Gaskill (6-2), the third Texas pitcher, picked up the win.

Texas (48-16) advances to Thursday night's semifinals against third-ranked Pepperdine (46-11-1), which won both CWS games on shutouts. eaten with two shutouts at the CWS.

Mike Smedes hit his fourth homer for Oklahoma (43-24) and had three hits, while Scott Marr had two RBIs with a double in the fifth inning.

Cal State Fullerton 6, Florida State 0

Mike Parisi and Paco Chavez combined on a four-hit shutout as Cal State Fullerton eliminated Florida State.

Parisi (5-1), a freshman, gave up only two hits in six innings and no Seminole got past second base until Chavez allowed a pair of singles to start the seventh. A double play and a ground ball got the Titans out of the inning and Chavez held them off the rest of the way for his fifth save.

Phil Nevin, picked first overall by the Houston Astros in Monday's major-league draft, drove in the only run Cal State Fullerton needed with a single in the first inning.

Nevin, the Baseball America college player of the year, also scored on Steve Sisco's RBI double in the fifth to make it 3-0.

Scisco had another RBI in the fifth-ranked Titans' three-run ninth.

The Titans (44-16) advance to Wednesday's game against top-ranked Miami (55-8), 2-0 in the CWS. Fullerton has to beat the Hurricanes twice to reach Saturday's championship game.

The Seminoles (49-21), who snapped a five-game CWS losing streak with a 5-4 victory over California Sunday, lost 7-2 in Friday's first round against Fullerton.

Chris Roberts (8-4), the No. 18 pick by the New York Mets in the first round, took the loss for Florida State. He was the first of five Seminole pitchers, who gave up 11 walks.

Johns takes third in Milwaukee

Staff report

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Permian Basin Road Runner Club member Sue Johns overcame a broken finger to finish third in her age group last weekend at the Road Runner's Club of America 8K national championship in Milwaukee, Wis.

With a finishing time of 50.03, Johns' standing was the highest ever for a PBRRC member.

Johns' injury came during her competition in the trail run, held two days prior to the championship race.

National champions in the 8K race were Bill Rodgers and Don Kardong.

Other local finishers were Carla Warden, 18th in her age group, and Francis Johns, who finished with a time of 41:20.

Missions Baar Angel win

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Bryan Baar, who entered Tuesday night's San Antonio-Midland game hitting just .114, homered twice — including the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth — as the Missions downed the Angels, 3-2.

The loss was Midland's third straight and 30th of the season in 48 games, and was the opening of a 12-game road trip to the Mission City and El Paso.

Baar, called up from Class A last month, had collected just one hit in 31 at bats for San Antonio before starting a four-game hitting streak last Thursday.

Baar's ninth inning blast came on a 1-0 pitch from loser Brett Merriman (2-4). His first shot put the Missions up 1-0 in the fifth.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Professional and social activities compete for your attention. Striking a good balance between work and play leads to a happier, healthier lifestyle. If adverse conditions prevail in late fall, stand firm. You will have earned that vacation you take in December! A legacy or financial windfall makes home improvements possible early in 1993. Exciting new developments affect romance in a positive way next spring.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singer Josephine Baker, actor Tony Curtis, actress Paulette Goddard, poet Allen Ginsberg.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your siblings and other relatives are more cooperative now. Avoid bookkeeping errors and overspending. Visiting someone confined to a hospital or nursing home will make you both feel better.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A subtle approach is favored in business today. Seek guidance from experts or influential friends. Do not be gulled into acting by someone's forceful urging.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Private meetings bring out the genius in you. You sense where your luck lies — take your best shot. A literary or educational project deserves extra attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Today's pace is upbeat and harmonious. Work independently for maximum success. Cultivating a potential business or romantic partner takes time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Proceed with caution. When dealing with people at a distance. Postpone making major career decisions. An evening of socializing or putting your house in order boosts your spirits.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Airing your creative ideas in the workplace today will impress associates and higher-ups alike. Powerful forces are at your command. Your gift for good public relations is admired.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are skilled at putting your ideas across with verve. Approach the top brass today. A date promises to be a stellar event. Use diplomacy to keep a love connection intact.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What you seek may be seeking you! Friendship and good will abound. New allies or clients will help improve the bottom line. Get out and mingle at least one night a week.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Play it safe in all relationships today. No matter what pressures you are under, you must be keeper of the peace. Young people need guidance. Blow the whistle on a reckless act.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Something you hoped for could come through — thanks to your friends. Show your gratitude. You could be asked to help someone in great need. Focus on rental payments, tax matters and loans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A business boom is featured. Help with a charitable campaign. Cooperation is essential for allies, desirable for adversaries. Financial agreements are favored. Curb a tendency to buy things on impulse.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasize a good neighbor policy, even in a hard-to-handle situation. Waves of support come from a special group. Be bolder in romance. Honesty pays off.

TODAY'S CHILDREN: Academic work is easy for these quick-witted Geminis. They need a framework without too many rules. Count on them to prefer solo endeavors to group projects. Variety is not always good for these easily distracted youngsters. These Geminis' hobbies usually reflect their strong love of beauty and the outdoors. Wise parents will encourage these restless children to participate in active sports even if they are not athletically inclined. Even as adults, they will feel much better following a brisk walk or vigorous game of tennis.

Opening lead: Queen of ♣

The club captain found it impossible to leave Trump Coup Tommy off the team for the interclub championship. A run of freak hands had made Tommy the biggest winner at the club, and to overlook him would have caused internecine strife, even though everyone knew Tommy played well only when trumps broke badly; on routine hands he had a marked tendency to commit the most egregious of errors. The decision paid off in the very first match, when this hand cropped up.

Everyone was amazed at how skillfully Tommy handled the auction. In effect, Tommy had opened with a strong two-heart bid and, after West raised, started a cue-bidding sequence. When North showed first-round diamond control, Tommy tried the Grand Slam Force, asking partner to bid seven hearts with two of the three top trumps. North could not oblige.

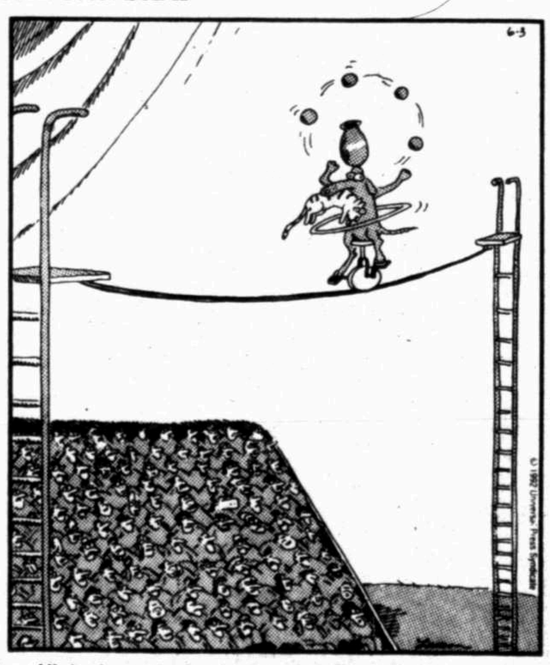

Declarer won the opening club lead and got matters off to a good start by leading a trump to the king. West's club discard brought out the best in Tommy. He ruffed a club, cashed the three top spades and crossed to the jack of diamonds to ruff another club. The king and ace of diamonds were cashed, setting the scene for the final denouement.

Declarer led a club from dummy and, down to only three trumps, East had to ruff. Tommy underruffed! Now East was forced to lead away from the queen of trumps into declarer's combined ace-jack tenace.

Jazzman Lionel Hampton leaves hospital, to resume performing

NEW YORK — Jazzman Lionel Hampton left Mount Sinai Hospital on Tuesday after 10 days of rest and observation.

Hampton checked into the hospital after returning from Paris, where he had become ill on stage on May 20. It initially was believed he had suffered a mild cerebral hemorrhage, but doctors have concluded the 84-year-old vibraphonist was exhausted, publicist Chuck Jones said.

Jones said Hampton would appear as scheduled at a Lincoln Center concert June 23, but has canceled a June 16 date in Boston. He also canceled a series of July dates in England, and will instead perform at clubs in the New York area, Jones said.

NEW YORK — Charles Osgood wants to leave the "CBS Morning News" to work full time for the network's radio service, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Osgood

"It's not a major shift for me," Osgood told the New York Post.

No date has been set for his departure and no successor has been announced for the co-anchor spot opposite Meredith Vieira, said CBS News spokesman John Bianchi.

Osgood, whose CBS radio commentaries "The Osgood Files" are broadcast four times a day, has co-anchored the network's morning television news show since 1987. His flights into verse resulted in his book, "Nothing Could Be Finer than a Crisis That is Minor in the Morning."

• • •

LONDON — Rod Stewart became a father Tuesday for the fourth time. The rocker and his wife, Rachel Hunter, had a girl.

Renee Stewart was delivered at London's Portland Hospital and Stewart was present.

It's the first child for Hunter, 23, a top model who married Stewart, 47, in December 1990.

Stewart has two other children from his first marriage, to Alana Hamilton, and a daughter by his former girlfriend Kelly Emberg.

RALEIGH, N.C. — Sen. Jesse Helms was scheduled for heart bypass surgery today and replacement of a leaky heart valve.

The heart problems are only the latest ailments waylaying the conservative, 70-year-old chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Last year, Helms disclosed he has a rare disorder that weakens and deforms bones, and prostate cancer, which required months of radiation treatment.

Dorothy Helms said her husband will have the surgery at Rex Hospital in Raleigh.

OTTUMWA, Iowa — Marguerite and Charles Canny won't have to watch Tom and Roseanne Arnold's movie "Graced Land" on television. They're seeing plenty from their front porch.

"It's something that doesn't happen every day," Mrs. Canny said Monday of the ABC movie being filmed next door.

Bill Bixby is directing the movie about a woman, Joyce, who has a spiritual relationship with Elvis Presley in 1982. Tom Arnold plays ex-husband to his real-life wife.

Arnold grew up near Ottumwa, about 90 miles southeast of Des Moines.

The Arnolds are building a $4 million mansion outside nearby Eldon, where painter Grant Wood found the house that made the backdrop for his classic "American Gothic."

NEW YORK — E.J. Kahn Jr. sees little remarkable about the fact that his writings have been published in the New Yorker in every decade since the 1930s, making this the seventh decade in which he has appeared in the magazine.

"That is not so many years," he said the other day by telephone from his home in Truro, Mass.

"There were several of us in our seventh decade of writing for the New Yorker, Brendan Gill, for example, Emily Hahn and E.B. White, I think."

Actually, White, who died in 1975, first appeared in the magazine in the 1920s, making him ineligible for the exclusive circle by a few years.

Kahn, 75, joined the New Yorker four days after graduating from Harvard in 1937, but he had already written a piece for it while in college.

NEW YORK — CB$ News has signed Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the Allied forces in the Persian Gulf war, to a three-year agreement to host a series of news documentaries and specials.

Eric Ober, President of CBS News, made the announcement Friday at the 38th annual CBS affiliates meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in Manhattan.

Schwarzkopf has already been involved in the current CBS World War II series that includes "The Year of the Generals," to be broadcast Thursday, the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Midway.

"He is obviously a brilliant analyst and a brilliant communicator," Ober said at the meeting. "The man is very eclectic, and I think you will be very pleased with what you see us do with him over the next three years."

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Prices gain

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices settled mixed Tuesday in uneventful technical trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in July, which lost 8 cents a barrel Monday, added 8 cents to settle at $22.11 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Analysts said trading began with a technical rally, which soon fizzled. But prices started to climb from their lows late in the session, supported by a rise in crude prices. Traders were positioning ahead of the latest statistics from the American Petroleum Institute, which was scheduled to release regular weekly data on oil stocks after the market closed Tuesday.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in July settling at $1.652 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 0.8 cent.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, lower-grade sour crude for delivery in July settled at $20.41 per barrel, up 13 cents.

After the oil markets were closed for the day, the American Petroleum Institute reported that that the nation's supplies of gasoline and crude oil fell last week, while the stockpile of home heating oil rose and the nation's refineries raised their operating capacity.

American blocked

CHICAGO — American Airlines' plans to expand its number of slots and reach parity with United Airlines at O'Hare International Airport have been blocked by a bankruptcy court.

The court in Delaware ruled Monday on a complaint from United Airlines that American cannot take over Trans World Airlines' slots at the Chicago airport without court approval and that any airline could bid on the slots.

United, which currently leases 16 of TWA's 40 slots at O'Hare, said it may bid for the 40 slots, which are takeoff and landing rights. But American said it intends to pursue its agreement with TWA and thinks United could not get government antitrust approval for the gates, because of its dominance at the world's busiest airport.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mostly higher on world currency markets Tuesday after early returns from Denmark's referendum showed voters rejected a treaty on European political and economic union.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 127.48 yen, up 0.70 yen from Monday's close.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.8240 from $1.8220 late Monday.

Probers: $1 billion in claims slips away

■ RTC, FDIC could be filing many more lawsuits against officers of failed banks, S&Ls, investigators say.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government is letting slip at least $1 billion in potential civil claims in bank and savings institution failures because of inadequate staffing and poor management at regulatory agencies, congressional investigators said Tuesday.

Harold A. Valentine of the General Accounting Office said the Resolution Trust Corp. and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. could be filing many more lawsuits against officials of failed banks and S&Ls plus the accountants, lawyers and appraisers who worked for them.

The agencies estimate wrongdoing was present in more than 75 percent of failures, yet the FDIC files civil lawsuits in 20 percent of failures and the RTC in 41 percent, said Valentine, the GAO's associate director of administration of justice issues.

Both agencies have been slow to hire attorneys, he told the Senate Banking Committee. And the FDIC lacks a system for finding the assets, such as real estate and bank accounts, of potential defendants, he said. Identifying the assets is crucial to deciding whether someone is worth suing.

"We believe much more both could and should be done . . . " he said. "The agencies simply have not put a high enough priority on this program. This is evidenced by staff shortages, which continue to this very day."

Spokesmen for both the FDIC and the RTC disputed the GAO charges and said their agencies were doing a good job of pursuing civil suits in which there is a hope of a recovery. Criminal cases, when warranted, are prosecuted by the Justice Department regardless of the chance of recovery, the spokesmen said.

Valentine praised the agencies' field attorneys, who he said are working nights and weekends, racing to file lawsuits within the legal deadline of three years after an institution's failure.

But, he said, "The problem is with the management system . . . and in some sense . . . with the management itself."

"There has to be a recognition of this problem by the people in charge," he said.

"Something is wrong topside," agreed Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich. and the committee chairman.

"There is always a tendency to play these problems down during election years . . . " Riegle said. "I certainly hope that's not going on here."

Valentine noted that, since 1989, the RTC and the FDIC have recovered nearly $1 billion from the people they've sued, a return of about $3 for every $1 spent on legal costs.

He said it was impossible to say exactly how much more could be recovered if the agencies were more diligent but, when pressed by Riegle for an answer, said, "well into the billions."

Caryl Austrian of the FDIC said the agency was satisfied with its civil liability program and said it was not reasonable to expect the government to sue everyone suspected of wrongdoing.

Gauge rises, but economy's far from robust, experts say

■ Increase of 0.4 percent marks 4th consecutive monthly advance.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's main economic forecasting gauge rose a better-than-expected 0.4 percent in April but sales of new homes remained in the doldrums.

Economists said the two reports Tuesday depicted an economy that is not in danger of toppling back into recession but is far from robust.

The 0.4 percent increase in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators marked the fourth consecutive monthly advance, the longest stretch since this time a year ago.

However, the gains have been far below the normal range for the early stages of an economic recovery.

In an even bigger disappointment to analysts, the government said that sales of new homes eked out a tiny 1.3 percent increase in April, which did little to recoup from a 15.9 percent plunge in March and a 6.7 percent February decline. The March drop had been the biggest in more than a decade.

Analysts blamed the home sales weakness on rising mortgage rates and an anemic economy that is not generating enough jobs to allow people to buy homes and make other big-ticket purchases.

"We are in a recovery that looks sustainable, but it is plodding and slow," said Lawrence Chimerine, a senior economic counselor at DRI-McGraw Hill Inc.

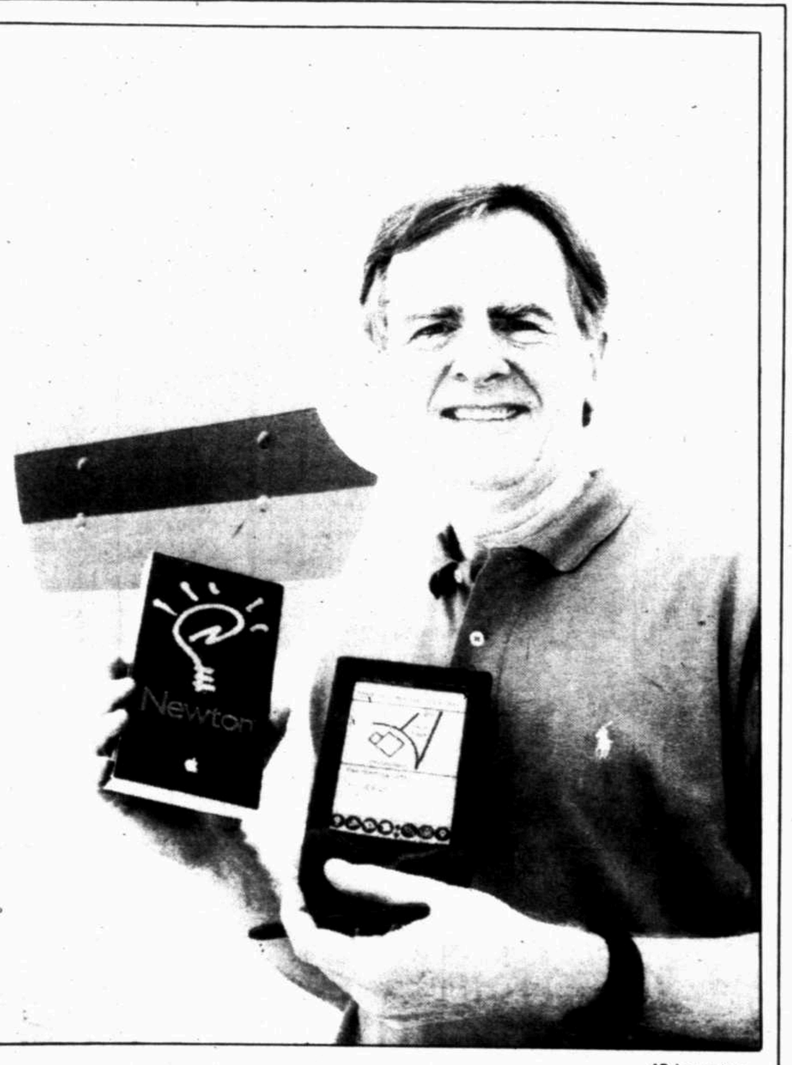

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, said the leading index should be rising at rates of 2 percent or better during this stage of a normal recovery.

"The increases we have been getting are extremely sluggish," Evans said. He said he has cut his own growth forecast for the second half of the year from 3 percent to 2.5 percent, as measured by the gross domestic product, because of a belief that rising oil prices and other inflationary pressures will keep the Federal Reserve from cutting interest rates further to stimulate the economy.

Such an outcome would be a blow to the Bush administration, which is counting on further Fed rate cuts to bolster the recovery before the election.

Analysts were uncertain whether the three months of weakness in new home sales meant this key sector was faltering or simply catching its breath before posting further gains in the months ahead.

Robert Brusca, an economist at Nikko Securities in New York, said he believed that after a pause housing would post further gains, contributing to better growth for the overall economy in the second half of the year.

Forecaster: Advertising spending should grow 5 percent this year

NEW YORK (AP) — Domestic advertising spending is starting to recover from its deepest slump in a half century and should rise 5 percent this year, one of the industry's most widely-followed forecasters said Tuesday.

The increase projected by Robert J. Coen, a senior executive at the ad agency McCann-Erickson Worldwide, was lower than his December estimate that ad spending would rise 6.2 percent this year.

But even the revised advance to $132.7 billion would more than make up for ground lost a year ago when ad spending fell 1.7 percent, its first decline in 30 years and its sharpest drop since 1942.

"It certainly is a lot better than we saw a year ago. Things are on their way back," he told a news conference.

Coen has been faulted in the past for being too optimistic on spending projections, but his forecasts — which he has been making for 19 years — nonetheless attract the industry's attention.

A different view from Coen's came from Richard Kostyra, media services director at J. Walter Thompson USA, who said he detects only slight a improvement, if any, in ad spending.

"Personally, I find any projections, particularly those with decimal points, to be no more than guess and possibly even hopes. The fluidity of this marketplace is such that no one has been accurate in estimating spending levels on a consistent basis," he said.

Coen said the downward revision in his estimates reflected the erratic economy. He said the economic recovery has clearly begun but the improvement started a month later than he expected when he compiled his December forecast.

A 5 percent increase in ad spending would be the biggest since an identical rise in 1989, but below the 7 percent-plus gains earlier in the decade.

Milken testifies about his crimes

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Milken appeared at peace with his past as he testified against a longtime friend Tuesday, calmly describing his own crimes and admitting he made mistakes that led to a 10-year prison term.

In the trial of a former protege, Alan Rosenthal, Milken detailed a series of illegal trades in 1985 and 1986 that eventually became part of his celebrated Wall Street trading scandal.

"In retrospect, if I had more opportunity to think about it I wouldn't have executed those transactions," Milken said under questioning from Assistant U.S. Attorney Nelson Cunningham.

Milken, 45, appeared strikingly different without his usual curly, black toupee. The 1980s star of trading firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. is cooperating with prosecutors in hopes of winning a sentence reduction.

Portrayed by his lawyers as a financial genius with a tragic flaw, Milken has served 15 months in a minimum-security prison near San Francisco. Current sentencing terms make him ineligible for parole until 1994.

Milken's testimony is considered important to the case against Rosenthal, who is charged with fraud, conspiracy and embezzlement for activities related to some of the six criminal counts Milken pleaded guilty to in 1990.

Consumers shouldn't just swallow what labels say

By Jennifer Dixon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The label says "Very Cherry," but the fine print says the bottle holds mostly white grape and apple juice. And the "papaya juice" you've paid dearly for may really be pineapple, a consumer group said Monday.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest surveyed more than two dozen fruit-juice products and found that the truth about what's inside is usually hidden in small type on the back of the bottle.

Dole's Pure and Light Orchard Peach juice has more grape, apple and lemon than peach, the consumer advocacy group found, while the main ingredients in After the Fall's Maine Coast Blueberry juice are apple juice and apple puree.

Maine Coast Blueberry sold at one Washington supermarket for $2.39 a quart, compared to a unit price of $1.45 per quart for a half-gallon bottle of Motts pure apple juice.

"The food industry is cheating the American consumer out of hundreds of millions of dollars annually by passing off what is mostly apple and grape juice as more expensive kiwi, peach, strawberry and cherry juice," said Bruce Silverglade, the group's legal affairs director.

"The name of the juice on the front of the label is not what the consumer is purchasing in many, many cases," he said.

Silverglade says that because consumers spend more than $9 billion a year on fruit juices and drinks, "people deserve the facts."

But John R. Cady, the president of the National Food Processors Association, said the group's survey amounts to nothing more than a "disinformation campaign."

The association and the Center for Science in the Public Interest are also wrangling over a proposed labeling regulation that would require manufacturers to list the percentage of each juice used in blends.

The Food and Drug Administration must finalize the new labeling requirements by Nov. 8. Juice manufacturers would be required to begin using the new labels by May 1993.

The National Food Processors Association contends that listing the percentage of each juice is almost certain to lead to cluttered labels and "info-glut," said Alan Matthys, the group's vice president of regulatory affairs.

"If CSPI had its way, food labels would consist of nothing but green lights, red lights, sirens and warnings," added Cady. "There would be no room for the brand name or picture."

In addition to the total percentage of juice in the drink, the new labels would also require a full nutritional analysis and a listing of the juices in order of concentration, Matthys said.

"Adding to the label the percentage of each individual juice in the drink will give the consumer no useful additional information — or any health or nutritional advantage," Matthys said. "In fact, it distracts from the key nutritional information."

The labeling requirements will also require manufacturers to reveal how much juice is actually in a bottle of "juice drink" or "juice cocktail."

As a result of that proposal, many manufacturers are moving toward bottling beverages that are 100 percent juice, Silverglade said.

Man's redwood signs catch on in Texas towns

By Zeke MacCormack
Associated Press writer

PFLUGERVILLE — Ron Spell couldn't take the rigid schedule of an accountant's life, so he quit the profession and founded a sign company in 1986.

"It's not a real exciting life, but I had a problem with people telling me when to wake up every morning," Spell said.

Now, however, he may have to hire an accountant of his own to help him handle his trade in distinctive redwood signs, inspired by craftsmen in his native state, Louisiana.

"They're warm and classy. It's more classy to have your logo on redwood then on plastic," he said.

After sandblasting numerous signs for area golf courses, apartment complexes and businesses, Spell entered the "city-limits" business in 1990 with a "Wilkommen" sign he made for Pflugerville.

"I've just found a little niche," said Spell, 35, whose Falcon Signs office is on the outskirts of Pflugerville.

"We liked it because of the distinctive style," said Pflugerville Parks Director Glenn Holzer, who installed a solar collector and lamp on the sign off Farm Road 1825.

That sign caught the attention of Hutto Mayor Jeff Phillips, who lobbied the Hutto Chamber of Commerce to buy two signs featuring the old-west skyline of East Street in Hutto.

"He did a fantastic sign for us," Phillips said. "We've gotten letters from people saying the signs are real nice."

And then Spell heard from Taylor Mayor Don Hill.

"We'd been looking around for signs in a lot of places and we liked what we saw in Hutto," Hill said.

"We think it's great," Hill said of the two "Welcome to Taylor" signs erected last week on the western and northern limits of the city.

Spell estimated he has sold 1,000 redwood signs ranging in price from $75 to $4,500, which he says can last up to 25 years.

Because he's not artistic by nature, Spell relies on a computer to help shape the letters on many projects.

Signmaker Ron Spell puts finishing touches on one of his latest sign projects recently in Austin.

And despite his last name, Spell also learned — the hard way — to doublecheck his spelling.

A large sign he once erected at a Houston business featured the word "financial" spelled as "fianancial," he said.

He left it up until he had a chance to finish a new sign, he said, noting, "Most people couldn't tell. They don't know how to spell financial."

LEGAL NOTICE

Region 18 Education Service Center will accept sealed bids for acoustical office dividers until 3 p.m. on June 10, 1992. Bids will be received at REgion 18's offices at 2811 LaForce Blvd/Air terminal, Midland, Tx, until the deadline. Bid forms and specifications are available from Jerry Pickens at REgion 18 ESC. Region 18's mail address is P.O. Box 60580, Midland, TX 79711-0580. Telephone (915) 567-3212.

SEALED, CONTRACTOR PROPOSALS addressed to:
ATTENTION:
JUDGE MICHAEL A. HARRISON
REEVES COUNTY COURTHOUSE
P.O. BOX 749
PECOS, TX 79772
will be received until 3:00 p.m. on June 9, 1992 at the above address and then opened and publicly read aloud in the Reeves County Commissioners Courtroom, for furnishing labor, equipment and material for the following:

Removal of existing metal roofing material at the Reeves County Law Enforcement Center located one mile west of the intersection of Highway 17 and Locker Road in Pecos, Texas, and replacing it with approximately 535 squares of standing seam roofing material, 26 squares of PBR "R" panel metal roofing material and appurtenances. Removal of all air conditioning equipment, ventilation equipment, flashing, gas pipes, conduit, electrical and other items above the roof elevation. New roof system will include light gauge framing, purlins, sheets, trim gutters, all new roof curbs and flashing and reinstallation and hook up of all existing equipment.

Bid/Contract Documents, including Drawings and Technical Specifications are on file at the office of the Engineer, Frank X. Spencer & Associates Consulting Engineers, 505 South Oak, P.O. Box 1087, Pecos, Texas 79772.

Copies of the Contract Documents may be obtained at the office of Frank X. Spencer & Associates Consulting Engineers, located at 505 South Oak, P.O. Box 1087, Pecos, Texas 79772, upon payment of $40.00 for each set. There is an additional charge of $10.00 per set for mailing.

Any unsuccessful bidder or non-bidder, upon returning such documents promptly and in good condition within ten (10) days after the Bid Opening, will be refunded $20.00 of this deposit.

A bid bond in the amount of 5% of the bid issued by an acceptable surety shall be submitted with each bid. A certified check or bank draft payable to Reeves County or negotiable U.S. Government Bonds (as par value) may be submitted in lieu of the Bid Bond.

Attention of bidders is particularly called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract.

Bids may be held by the County of Reeves for a period not to exceed thirty (30) days from the date of the bid opening for the purpose of reviewing the bids and investigating the bidders qualifications prior to the contract award.

All prices must be stated both in script and figures on the forms provided. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any formalities in the bidding. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating prices in bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction therof, or to reject the bid.

Bidders shall inspect the site of the Work and inform themselves regarding local conditions. Each bidder shall attend the Pre-Bid Conference and site inspection at 2:00 p.m. on June 1, 1992.
