COMING SUNDAY

Coma talk

Midland's neurosurgeon, Dr. William McGavran III, has seen many severe head injuries where the patient loses consciousness for a brief period of time — the coma, a total absence of awareness. Read Sunday about comatose patients, their treatment and their families.

Play talk

It's Halloween for some, but for Pat Morgan, teacher at Jones Elementary School, Christmas season has begun. Read in Sunday's issue how the small, smiling woman takes 240 fourth grade students and creates an almost professional play. It's called attitude.

Oil scout talk

With commercial well reporting services such as Petroleum Information around, what is the future of oil company scouts? In Sunday's FOCUS, local PI manager Woody Adams, a scout who once formed his own service, looks at scouting and the oil industry.

Spain's Socialists voted into power

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Chanting "Viva Espana!" tens of thousands of joyous Socialists celebrated a momentous election victory that returned their party to power for the first time since fascist dictator Francisco Franco drove them into the political wilderness 43 years ago.

The shouts of "Long Live Spain" rang out across Madrid's 17th century Plaza Mayor Thursday night to mark the Socialists' capture of majority control in Parliament, which put the premiership in the hands of their 40-year-old champion, Felipe Gonzalez.

"Democracy and the Spanish people were the winners," Gonzalez, a Seville-born labor lawyer, told cheering supporters at a rally at the Plaza Hotel across town.

Extending an olive branch to his political foes and a military still wary of democracy, Gonzalez said no Spaniard should feel "left out of the beautiful task of modernizing Spain."

In announcing the final result, election officials said 79.5 percent of 26.6 million registered voters went to the polls Thursday. That total eclipsed the exuberant 68 percent turnout in the 1977 elections, Spain's first democratic balloting after the death of Franco.

Campaigning on a moderate platform that turned away from Marxism and shunned industrial or commercial nationalization, Gonzalez' Socialist Workers Party won 46 percent of the vote, earning 198 of the 350 seats in the lower house of the Cortes.

The party's nearest rival was the right-wing Popular Alliance, led by Manuel Fraga, 59, a hardline Cabinet minister in the Franco government. The rightists took 104 seats and 25 percent of the vote, underscoring a left-right polarization.

Popular Alliance, part of a tiny bloc that held nine seats in the last Cortes, emerged as the principal opposition party. Fraga vowed it would provide a "loyal but effective" counterfoil to the Socialists.

The results were disastrous for centrist parties.

The ruling Union of the Democratic Center led by outgoing Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo — who called the elections five months early as his coalition began to fracture — gained only 7.2 percent of the vote, according to the official tally.

Calvo Sotelo was swept away in the Socialist tide and the centrist union was reduced to 13 seats from 168 in the 1979 election, the second post-Franco ballot.

The other main centrist faction, the Democratic and Social Center, led by Spain's first popularly elected premier, Adolfo Suarez, won only two seats.

Westside standoff ends peacefully

An armed man who had barricaded himself in his family's westside home when sheriff's deputies attempted to serve a felony warrant on him late Thursday afternoon surrendered peacefully four hours later and was being held without bond in the county jail this morning.

Two deputies went to the residence at 205 N. Dewberry Drive about 4 p.m. to arrest 20-year-old Russell Eugene Reese on a probation revocation warrant.

After reportedly being told he wasn't there, deputies were searching the house when Reese suddenly appeared with a .22-caliber magnum handgun and barricaded himself in the bathroom.

Reagan changes tactics to respond to GOP letter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — President Reagan, trying to counter a Democratic attack that he says represents "sheer demagoguery," is ending the midterm congressional campaign back on the volatile Social Security issue that dogged him throughout the 1980 presidential race.

The president was trying to protect Republicans from the potential political damage of a GOP fundraising letter that mentioned the possibility of a voluntary Social Security system.

Campaigning for Republican Senate candidates on a Western swing Thursday, the president jumped into the politically sensitive Social Security fray twice.

He is winding up his campaign tour today, with appearances in Salt Lake City for Sen. Orrin Hatch, and in Roswell, N.M., for Sen. Harrison Schmitt. Both Republicans are in close contests for second terms.

The distribution of the Republican letter and the Democrats' readiness to focus on it led the president on Thursday to deviate from the economic theme that he has trumpeted at campaign appearances in 13 states since Labor Day.

"I can predict that our opponents are going to broadcast widely one of the most dishonest canards that has ever been fostered in a political campaign," the president said at a rally in a high school gymnasium in Great Falls, Mont., before flying Las Vegas for the final stop of a 12-hour day.

"They're going to tell you that we, and I really include myself because I am kind of a target of that, that, in some way, we're on our way to changing or reducing or doing away with Social Security," Reagan said.

"Now, that is sheer demagoguery and it is an outright falsehood."

He said the fiscal problems of the Social Security system must and will be solved, but "not at the expense of taking anything away from the people who are presently dependant on Social Security."

Books, curriculum separate candidates

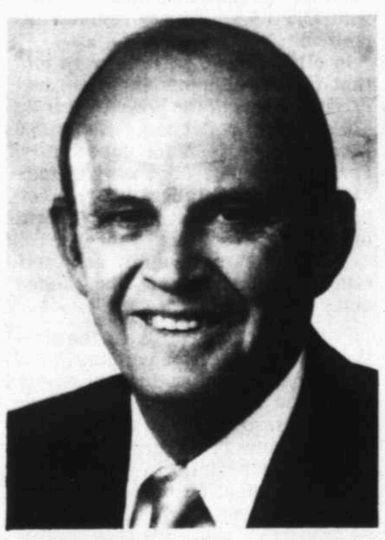
EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of an eight-part series examining the candidates and issues in Tuesday's election. Today's story deals with the race for State Board of Education 21st District.

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Textbooks and curriculum have been the principal points of dissension between the Democratic and Republican candidates for the State Board of Education 21st Congressional District. However, there has been no contention concerning a need for improving the low number of teachers entering the field, low salaries and lower morale as well as overcrowding in the classrooms.

Republican candidate J. Murphy Horton, a Midland independent petroleum geologist, and Democrat William Jennings Teel, a Big Lake independent land-leaser, face Sandra Keen, Libertarian candidate, in the race for a seat on the board that makes recommendations to the Legislature on items such as teachers' certification, salaries and curriculum.

The role sex education plays in the schools is the source of most of the contention between the candidates, along with a dictionary up for adoption this year, which contained "four-letter" words and, according to Horton, a quite blunt 11-letter word.



J. Murphy Horton

William Jennings Teel

"NOBODY USES that word," Horton said. "If a word doesn't have usage, why have it? That applies to all textbooks; let's try to get our literature standards up, get our value system up."

Teel disagreed, explaining, "I'm a Christian and I feel as far as vulgar words go, I don't think there is any place in our classrooms for vulgar words. But I'm broadminded enough to know this: We cannot build a wall to shelter our children outside of school."

Although Teel said he feels most students hear the words on the street anyway, he said, "I'm not saying take the words out (of the dictionary), but at the same time, as a former classroom teacher, administrator and a parent, I am opposed to using these vulgar words in the classroom."

Sex education in the classroom also is a subject on which the two candidates disagree. While Horton said he doesn't

Parrish says UT status report misled

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A press release, submitted by the University of Texas of the Permian Basin Oct. 8, announcing a decision made by the UT-System Board of Regents in favor of granting UTPB four-year status, was misleading, Midland College president Dr. Jess H. Parrish told the MC board of trustees during a regular meeting Tuesday.

Trustees also heard reports on fall enrollments and the athletic department's season ticket sales during the meeting.

"Reports that came out of the (UTPB) release were partially correct," Parrish explained after meeting last week in Austin with Jimmy Powell, president of the Board of Regents, and Dr. Bryce Jordan, UT-system vice chancellor for academic affairs.

According to Parrish, the release implied that regents approved a recommendation by Friends of UTPB, a citizen-group advocating four-year status for the university, when, in actuality, Powell and Jordan said regents were in favor of making UTPB a strong upper-level institution with the cooperation of area community colleges.

Parrish said he felt like he had been "conned" when he heard that committees he thought were to be formed to study ways of strengthening the two-plus-two theory had been, according to the statement issued by UTPB, changed to study ways to make UTPB a four-year institution.

Powell and Jordan clarified statements made at the regents' meeting in Arlington for Parrish, who explained, "when he showed us the entire tapes, it made it much more clear that he was talking about UTPB as an upper-level institution and not a four-year one. When you read the press release without him talking about it, it does look

Dog fight witness talks of narcotics

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The case of the pit bulldogs got shrouded in more suspicion in Midland County Court-at-Law Thursday, when Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Sue Rudie got on the witness stand.

She helped form the backup force when the Midland County Sheriff's Department raided an alleged pit bulldog fight about four miles southeast of the Midland city limits and near an abandoned house at Farm-to-Market Road 715 and County Road 145.

"Did you notice anything unusual in the house?" prosecutor Mark H. Dettman asked Ms. Rudie.

"Yeah," she replied. "There was a lot of narcotics..."

"Your Honor," defense attorney Rusty Walls shouted, as he jumped in alarm. "I object."

Thereupon, Wall, who was representing Willie Howard Whitmire, 23, the first of eight persons to be tried for cruelty to animals, rushed up to Judge Willie DuBose to argue for a mistrial. He was joined by his opposition, Dettman, and another assistant county attorney, Victor Torres, and by Court Reporter Connie Schott.

Over Wall's objections, DuBose did not permit a mistrial; furthermore, he did not instruct the six jurors — four women and two men — to disregard think sex education belongs anywhere in the school, Teel said it should take place in the classroom in certain situations.

"I THINK THERE is a place for sex education in the schools," Teel maintained. "I am opposed, and again, here is where the federal program comes in — I don't believe in mixed classes."

Teel said that when he was a high school coach, he discussed sex with his male students, "in an adult way, a learning way.

"A lot of kids don't have the opportunity to have communication with parents," he said. "That teacher is really like a second mother or father to that kid. And these are the types of teachers we want in our classroom. A student can tell when a teacher really cares, no matter how political or two-faced (the teacher is)."

According to Horton, school personnel are not qualified to handle that type of instruction, and the sex education curriculum being taught is "brutal."

"(THE TEXTBOOKS) talk about it from a strictly genital standpoint," Horton said. "There is so much more to it than that, such as affection, understanding, compassion. I think it is brutal and until it is handled in its full aspect, I think it's ridiculous. Now if you want to teach it from the point of hygiene, fine."

Sex education in the classroom should be a community decision, Horton added. Since opinions concerning sex vary with individual persons, Horton said he did not think any one person in the school system has the qualifications to teach it.

"Wouldn't a mother who had a wonderful and happy family life be as qualified as anybody to teach sex education?" he asked. "Would you ask a lesbian or a woman who was just been burned by a man to teach it? I think that is something that should be handled in the home. I just don't think public schools are equipped to do it."

While both Horton and Teel agree on a need for local control of the school, they also said that solutions for a better educational system, such as an increase in teacher salaries, a reduction of paperwork and a lessening of enrollment in the classrooms, must come from the state Legislature.

"THERE IS paperwork coming from the state level and the federal level, but TEA (Texas Education Agency) is just as much a bureaucracy as the federal government," Horton said. "We need to take a long hard look at what TEA is asking of teachers. The teachers I've spoken with say they don't have enough teaching time."

Teel, a former classroom teacher, principal and superintendent, agreed. "Teachers and administrators have too many forms and reports. Too much time is taken away from the classroom and administering of the school because of school and state forms that are repetitious. The pendulum has swung too far in this direction. We need to get back to teaching and administering policies set up by local schools. (However) there should be information available from the state for the local patrons and board — this is a must."

Discipline, a major concern voiced by teachers throughout the state, has been pulled from the guardianship of the local policies and is struggling in the hands of state and federal courts, both candidates said. Unfortunately, they pointed out, many teachers would rather allow a student to continue with disruptive or abusive behavior than face piles of paperwork that would need to be completed or, more frightening, the possibility of a court suit filed against them by the student.

"WE MUST RETURN discipline back to the classroom and keep the federal courts and judges out of our schools," Teel stated. "We should return our schools back to each school district. Let the people select the board members who will select the administrators who will select the classroom teachers. You can't beat that system and I don't think they (federal courts and judges) have any place at all in our school system."

Horton agreed, "Local problems should remain at the local level. Each school district varies. The urban schools are not like the rural schools."

Both candidates agreed that certain policies should be mandated at the state level but that the carrying out of those policies should be a local responsibility.

One problem pertaining to discipline is overcrowding in the schools. Due to the growth in the population of the state, as well as an increasing shortage of teachers, pupil-teacher ratios have soared.

Teel said a good ratio for grades 1-3 is 18 to 1 and for grades 4-6 is 20 to 1; Horton maintained that 25 to 1 in K-3 and no more than 30 to 1 in the upper grades would be satisfactory. While Teel suggests an increase in state funds for enlarging school districts, Horton recommended plans to encourage an increase in the number of people entering the teaching field.

THE LEGISLATURE is considering an increase in the amount of math and science courses to be taken at the high school level, according to Horton. While he said he supports stronger curriculum, he asked who would be teaching those additional, required classes.

"Before we start mandating things, lets make sure we have the teachers to do it," he cautioned.

Noting that there is already a shortage of teachers specializing in math and science because of higher paying recruitment efforts by industry, Horton cited programs at schools such as the University of Texas at Arlington and the University of Texas at Dallas which presently are retraining professionals in other areas to become classroom teachers. The schools, he said, are encouraging people to stop in mid-career to enter the teaching field with their math and science specialties.

Horton also suggests funds from industries for scholarships to assist teachers who wish to continue their education and obtain higher degrees. Plans for more actual experience in the classroom, beginning as early as the sophomore year in college, would be advantageous to graduates entering the teaching field, he said.

The main complaint from teachers Horton said he spoke with was low salaries. "They aren't going to put up with the kind of abuse they get in the classroom for the salaries they have," he said. "They, like everyone, are seeking status and they should have that status, they should have that respect. When teachers start getting experience, that teacher becomes valuable. She's an asset."

He added that he wasn't talking about "the starting salary, but after 10 or 15 years, teachers aren't getting paid what they should be. We've got to get those salaries up. The board can recommend these changes but the legislature is the one that passes them."

WHILE SERVING as superintendent of Big Lake schools, Teel said his major concern was the overcrowding of the classrooms and, subsequently, the new construction. "All I did was oversee new building. All over the Permian Basin, people have faced this problem with the recent oil boom. But the State Board (of Education) can help in working with the local district by providing more money for operation, salaries and transportation."

Teel said an increase in salaries is necessary to attract and retain teachers. "We're going to have to start paying them a decent living. I believe in paying as much as we can, but we cannot place a tax burden on the taxpayers. There are other means of taxation that we may have to resort to. We (state board members) can communicate with our representatives and recommend changes (to the legislature)."

Horton, a native of Lamesa, is the father of six children, all educated in public schools. A geologist with 32 years' experience "in a vocation that calls for discipline of mind, innovation, imagination and patience," he said he has had an active interest in education for many years. Graduating from Lamesa public schools, he received a bachelor of science degree from Sul Ross State University and did graduate work at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Teel, having served in schools as a classroom teacher, a high school principal and a superintendent for 30 years, said he feels he is qualified for the position. He has three children, one currently enrolled in a public school. Born and reared in the 21st District, he received his bachelor of science degree at Abilene Christian University, his master of education administration at McMurray College and did additional studies at Angelo State University, Sul Ross and the University of Texas.

the reference to narcotics.

THE NARCOTICS reportedly were amphetamines and other stimulants used to prime the dogs for fighting one another.

After the trial recessed until today for closing arguments and for jury deliberations, County Attorney J. Scott Henderson said he was not aware that narcotics and syringes were involved in the case.

"There's nothing in the (sheriff's) report about that," he said. "Nothing about narcotics. We didn't know about it." Furthermore, he said that the state does not have any proof of gambling at the dogfight scene. Were that the case, however, indictments could be sought and the case could be transferred to state district court for prosecution as a felony.

Henderson, who called the case "important," said the other defendants would be prosecuted, probably Nov. 8. But two — Randy Ray Chavez, 25, and Richard Ronald Chavez — have jumped bail. "We don't have the faintest idea where they are."

Also charged with cruelty to animals, which is a Class A misdemeanor offense punishable by a maximum of a one-year jail sentence and a $2,000 fine, are Shawn Ellen Merritt, 28; Robert Douglas Merritt; William Clarence Rich, 25; David Clinton Heard; and James Wayne Burton.

"We are going to attempt to see that they are punished a whole lot more than they (other defendants) were in Comanche County," where, Henderson said, 29 defendants who recently pleaded guilty to fighting dogs were fined $100 each. "And I think the offense of this nature deserves jail time."

IN ITS PROSECUTION of Whitmire, the state tendered three witnesses: Sheriff's Deputy B.J. McDaniel, who said he witnessed via binoculars and the naked eye men lifting dogs in and out of a plywood-enclosed pit about 11 p.m. on Aug. 29; Deputy Mike Love, who said the dogs appeared "fighting trim" and conditioned and fed well for their work — fighting; and Ms. Rudie, who spotted Whitmire near the pit and arrested him as he was running away and who thought the narcotics in the house were out of the ordinary.

But what Dettman apparently was referring to in asking the DPS trooper if she found anything "unusual" in the house were a wounded dog, apparently injured in a fight, and what appeared to be dried blood on the walls and floor of the house.

The defense called no witnesses, and Whitmire did not take the stand in his own defense.

"You and I have discussed the pitfalls and the liabilities (of testifying)," Wall told his client, and, in addressing the court, "decided not to take the stand."

McDANIEL, the state's first witness, said he was summoned to southeast of Midland after a resident there had complained of barking and yelping dogs near his house. And after the deputy had surveyed the sight of people milling and shouting around the site of the pit and after seeing and hearing barking and yelping dogs despite the roar of a generator used to supply power to a floodlight at the arena, he radioed for assistance from fellow deputies.

McDaniel, under examination by Dettman, said the dogs sounded "quite agitated."

"It wasn't just occasional barking; it was constant barking," he said. He said there was a "tone of excitement punctuated with occasional laughter."

"I could see several people milling about the fenced-in area. I could easily see they were lifting dogs in and out of this fenced-in area," he said. "I had a pretty good idea of what was taking place."

McDaniel said he viewed the activity about the pit from a distance of 100 to 200 yards.

Lawmen, riding in patrol cars with their flashing red-and-blue overhead lights, converged on the pit area and arrested eight people. Some escaped.

McDaniel said two dogs were in the carpeted pit area, which was about a 16-foot square, and "several dogs were running loose, two were in the abandoned house, and I don't recall how many were chained up."

"All the dogs were obviously underfed," McDaniel said. "The dogs' ribs were showing.

"THE DOGS obviously had been fighting with each other," the deputy said. "The dogs in the pit had several abrasions, bite wounds, puncture wounds." Blood was on the dogs in the house, and "what appeared to be blood" was on the walls and floor of the house, he said.

In a van parked near the pit were several portable cages containing "injured dogs," he said. "What appeared to be blood was on the dogs in the cages."

Under cross-examination by Wall, McDaniel said he "did not see" defendant Whitmire lifting dogs in and out of the plywood-enclosed area or going into the house.

"You can't say you saw any animals fighting on that occasion?" Wall asked.

"That is correct," the deputy responded.

Witness No. 2, Deputy Mike Love, who said he has raised and trained dogs — German shepherds and Doberman pinschers — for 25 years, said the dogs "were in fighting trim" and appeared to be well fed, were conditioned for stamina, and that their weight apparently had been watched for the work assigned to them.

"They were in good shape," Love said. "They were in the kind of shape for dogs to be fighting; they weren't overfed at all."

"You didn't see any dogs fighting one another?" Wall asked Love.

"That is correct."

THE DEFENSE counsel showed Love one of 22 color photographs, which the state offered to bolster its case, of the pit, dogs, cages and of the carcass of a decomposing dog.

"No, sir," said Love, as he viewed a photograph. "There are no dogs in there fighting."

Again, Love said the dogs "appeared" to be well fed. "All of them appeared to be cared for, yes, sir."

Wall asked the deputy if he were concerned about any injuries to the dogs.

"Well," he said, as he viewed a picture of a three-legged dog, "this missing leg concerns me some." The dog's left front leg apparently had been missing for sometime, and the deputy said he had no idea how the dog lost the leg.

Love said that several dogs on individual chains were in "good physical condition, well cared for."

"(The dogs were) well fed, well cared for," he said. "(They were) dogs that you, as a dog owner for 25 years, would not be ashamed of."

However, Love said that there was an "injured dog" in a green truck, which seemed vicious. "Actually," he said, "my main concern was not getting bit."

He also referred to the "fairly decomposed" dog about 100 yards west of the house, noted "cuts and breaks in the skin that appeared to be caused by bite marks" in another dog, and said that "some of the dogs were more vicious than others."

After the raid, Deputy Constable T. Roye transported the pit bulldogs to Tall City Veterinary Hospital but none reportedly were tested for drugs. Not long after the midnight raid, the dogs were calm, Love said.

"To me, dogs are kind of like people. When you get in a fight, you get an adrenalin rush," Love said. "When the fight is over, you've calmed down. Dogs are the same way."

Parrish says UTPB report misleading

like they approved four-year status for UTPB."

Admitting to confusion since "both sides were convinced they had won," Parrish said he wanted it made clear in a public statement that the regents were in favor of strengthening UTPB in its original position and were not pushing for a change to a four-year university.

Jordan and Powell will be at Midland College Thursday to study ways to improve curriculum between area community colleges and UTPB with Parrish, Odessa College president Phil Speegle, UTPB acting president Donald Rippey, staff members of the three schools and representatives of area independent school districts, Parrish said, adding that a press conference announcing their decision and plans for implementation is expected to follow. He noted that Howard College in Big Spring had not expressed an interest in attending the meeting.

Preceding the administrative session, a citizens advisory council will meet with Jordan and Powell Wednesday, he added.

"We gave our word, as did Odessa College, that we would fully participate and were as willing as anybody to see UTPB become a good upper-level institution," Parrish stated. "But we made it clear we are not going to participate until a statement has been made to the press that the committees are working solely for the improvement of UTPB as an upper-level college."

Trustees approved Parrish's stance and encouraged him to continue representing the college as favorable to the two-plus-two concept. "I've pledged 100 percent cooperation and support of UTPB as an upper level division knowing we need every educational opportunity we can offer the citizens of the Permian Basin," Parrish said. "But it's a two-way street, as we pointed out. They (UTPB) have never worked with us (area community colleges) very closely, but if they'll cooperate, we can help them in several areas."

He suggested plans to coordinate programs between the schools and help UTPB achieve proper funding because, under its present formula and with low enrollments, UTPB is experiencing problems, he said.

Parrish pointed out there has been an improvement in communication with UTPB since Rippey assumed his position.

In other action, trustees were told that fall enrollments this year had exceeded those of the previous year by 470 students, reflecting about a 16.8 percent increase. More importantly, Parrish said, contact hours, which indicate how many student hours a college is producing, increased 25 percent over last year.

"The increase is significant especially in a funding year," he pointed out.

Parrish said that this year the state has requested accurate enrollment figures for the summer and fall enrollments and projections for the spring semester instead of the usual enrollment estimates for all three semesters.

This is beneficial to the college because original estimates called for only a 9 percent increase, he pointed out.

"This will help us because if we're cut back in the legislative session, at least we'll be cut back with the actual enrollment and not the projected one," he explained.

Total enrollment on the last day of registration this year was 3,254, compared to 2,784 last year.

Trustees also heard reports on the upcoming basketball season and the successful sale of season tickets from athletic director Delnor Poss. According to Poss, last year's national title attracted great talent this year. The school's reputation also should be enhanced when an article on Spud Webb and the basketball team appears in Sports Illustrated, he added, pointing out that a photographer from the magazine had already visited the campus and a writer is expected to attend Tuesday's season opener.

In other action, trustees approved an appraisal district contract allowing taxpayers to divide their taxes into two separate payments and approved two personnel appointments.

Parrish also reported to board members that the city had announced it would install lights on the college's 12 tennis courts by May or June. While the original agreement called for the city to light the courts, Parrish said the cost recently was added into the 1982-83 appropriations by the city.

Cold front expected Saturday night

While it is expected to be fair tonight and warm Saturday, Mother Nature may brew up more of a trick than a treat in time for Saturday's scheduled Halloween carnivals.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight is expected to be in the mid-40s with southerly winds 5-10 mph.

And Saturday night's extended forecast could summon all ghosts and goblins with an expected ghoulish cold front, bringing spooky winds and ghastly cooler temperatures.

Thursday's high of 69 was eons away from the record high of 91 set in 1950, and the overnight low of 43 was warmer than the frigid record of 27 set in 1980.

Standoff situation ends without violence arrived at the scene. The street was quickly cordoned off to keep dozens of spectators back while negotiations got under way to try and talk Reese into surrendering.

His mother, Ellen Reese, who was in the house babysitting three small children when deputies arrived to serve the warrant, said, "He got scared and found his daddy's gun."

She said the deputies told her to take the children and leave the house. As she stood on the sidewalk staring at the brick home, she occasionally wiped tears from her cheeks as she held a trembling Chihuahua in her arms.

Asked if her son was familiar with guns, she said: "I don't know if he's ever used one before or not. He's mostly just scared."

Not wanting to risk a hostage situation, deputies refused to let Reese's 22-year-old brother, John, into the house. The brother, who arrived after the standoff began, told reporters: "We're super close. Russell would come out with me, but the cops won't let me go in.

"He's an artist and a painter. That's all he does. He's a very soft person. If they scare him too bad, he could kill himself. There could have been another way for them to come and get him. Look at all those shotguns and stuff."

The Reese home is about nine blocks from where a deputy shot and killed 39-year-old Robert Wayne Beauchamp last January after Beauchamp pulled a gun as the deputy attempted to serve a child abuse warrant on him. A grand jury, which heard testimony from Beauchamp's wife, exonerated the deputy.

At one point in the negotiations Reese asked to see his attorney, who reportedly did come out and talk to him.

Deputy Bret Grove, chief negotiator for the department's "tactical unit," and Mental Health-Mental Retardation counselor Ann Plumbee finally persuaded Reese to put the gun down and give himself up shortly before 8 p.m.

In a statement issued late Thursday night, the sheriff's department said:

"No shots were fired and no one was injured. Reese was placed (in jail) and charged with felony revocation of probation. Any other violations which may have occurred during the incident will be referred to the proper authority for review."

Deputies said they weren't sure why Reese was on probation, but family members said he had managed "The Great Cookie" in Midland Park Mall for a time and was blamed for thefts that amounted to about $10,000.

He apparently violated probation by leaving Midland in May, the family said.

Attorneys work to gather bail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Attorneys worked "diligently" to raise $5 million bail for John De Lorean before the weekend as a federal grand jury mulled evidence in the case of the auto executive who was arrested on drug charges.

The grand jury's deadline for returning an indictment in the case was today, according to a government statement released Thursday.

"We do not know when or if Mr. De Lorean will be released on bail," the brief statement added.

The grand jury heard testimony Tuesday, said Joseph Bell, De Lorean's chief defense attorney.

An indictment from the panel would supersede the charges of drug possession with intent to distribute which were filed against the 57-year-old auto innovator last week. He was arrested Oct. 19.

De Lorean, once an executive with General Motors Corp., quit GM to create his stainless steel sports car with gull-wing doors. The British government announced just hours before his arrest that the De Lorean Motor Co. plant in Northern Ireland would be closed because of financial insolvency.

Ball and another De Lorean attorney, Bernard Minsky, spoke with their client for about 30 minutes Thursday afternoon at Terminal Island Prison.

Royal family produces juicy tidbits for media

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LONDON — Whatever else may be said about the royal family, and a great deal tends to be, it is not dull. Rarely a day goes by without some titillating tidbit for newspaper vendors. And although court reporting has always been a staple of the British press, the recent lode has been regarded by connoisseurs as especially rich.

Prince Charles and Diana, princess of Wales, had their first public spat. Prince Philip raised eyebrows when he berated the people of the Solomon Islands for having too many babies. Princess Anne and husband Mark Phillips canceled plans to visit Africa together and flew off in separate directions and, of course, Prince Andrew's Caribbean tryst with soft-porn actress Kathleen (Koo) Stark turned out to be embarrassingly visible.

But one royal, as always, remained above reproach. "Isn't it quite fantastic!" exulted John Junor, editor of the Sunday Express, "that in the middle of all the turmoil, there is one member of the royal family who never puts a foot wrong, never makes a false step, never displays boredom in public and never utters a stupid, unthinking phrase?"

"Isn't our queen absolutely wonderful?"

Lest there be the remotest doubt about Queen Elizabeth's standing with her subjects worldwide, the London Times reported the following item Monday under the headline "Magician Stops Rain for Queen" by Grania Forbes, court correspondent of Britain's press association, datelined Tarawa, Kiribati, in the South Pacific.

"A MAGICIAN'S spell and the gift of a coconut leaf corset complete with mini grass skirt, made the queen's visit to Kiribati a memorable one...

"But when it came to the weather there was no faith in modern ways. Fearing that bad weather would continue, the magician Iosiabata was sent for to stop the rain. In great secrecy, the wizard said his spells and then, as custom dictates, disappeared to make them work. His powers proved effective because 10 minutes before the queen stepped ashore, the rainstorm disappeared too."

On the one hand, the British do treat their royals, appropriately, like kings and queens, paying them huge amounts of money to live in high style and perform regal functions. On the other hand, as the latest round of stories demonstrates, every peccadillo is reported, every tiff magnified by tabloids into front-page revelations. Pundits have been moved to pass judgment. "On the Palace and Dallas," The Guardian called a thoughtful editorial the other day. It compared public fascination with the fictional Ewings of the television show and the surpassing interest in "the everyday story of Buckingham Palace." In a high-stakes battle for circulation, teams of reporters compete for royal scoops. Royals sell newspapers the way that soap operas sell soap.

"Thus in grim, recession-ridden Britain," The Guardian observed, "where the life vicarious is so often more rewarding than the life of reality, the hounding of the royal family and its deferential adulation are inseparable parts of the same process."

A few years ago, it was Princess Margaret, the queen's younger sister, who scored highest on the scandal ratings. While still married to Lord Snowdon, she slipped off to the same island, Mustique, to which Prince Andrew took Koo Stark.

THE ROYAL offspring get most of the gossipy attention these days (with the spectacular exception of last summer's intruder into the queen's bedroom or Prince Philip's occasionally controversial remark).

Writing in the Daily Mail last week, columnist Lynda Lee Potter commented, "I'm entranced to see that the close-knit loving royals have the same tricky problems nearly every family in the land has to cope with over a recalcitrant son, a truculent daughter, a mulish son-in-law. I remain convinced that news of their generation's problems endears them to us even more than ever.

"It is immensely reassuring to know that the queen is in the same family boat as the rest of us, with her advice frequently unheeded, her wishes disobeyed and her ears not totally unaccustomed to that crushing phrase, 'Oh, Mother, you don't understand.'"

As it happens, most of the latest spate of revelations merely confirms the previous reputations of the various royals. Prince Andrew is widely known as "Randy Andy" in tribute to his interest in the opposite sex. (Just Tuesday, the Daily Mirror reported that "The Adolescents," an X-rated movie containing explicit sex scenes and featuring Stark, Andrew's most recent companion, was scheduled for general release in Britain next month.) Rumors of tension in Princess Anne's marriage to Mark Phillips have been circulating for several years.

One new item for readers to fret over was the reported squabble between Charles and Diana over the family vacation at Balmoral Castle in Scotland. After almost two months at the castle, including the rainiest October in memory, Diana insisted on going back to London and taking her infant son, Prince William, with her. Charles reportedly resisted before giving in.

THE SUN, one of the most aggressive tabloids, quoted "a member of the royal household" as saying, "who can blame Diana? It's been terrible weather and she's been left to mope around." Prince Charles, meanwhile, spent nearly every day hunting deer.

Back in London, Diana was photographed on shopping sprees in her favorite department stores, Harrods and Harvey Nichols, and Charles flew back to Scotland to get in the last few days of the deer season.

Predictably, the affair was occasion for analytical articles on how well Diana is coping "with the inevitable loneliness, the burdens and restrictions her marriage to the heir to the throne would impose." Ann Morrow, author of a forthcoming biography of the queen, noted that the storybook romance of the royal couple has run smack into modern emotional realities.

Some palace advisers, Morrow wrote in the Daily Mail, are saying that Diana was too young to take on the awesome responsibilities of being Charles' wife: "What they should be doing is telling Prince Charles that in today's world, wives are simply not left to their own devices, that her desires are quite as important as his.

"It is not enough to love his bride, as so clearly he does. It is also necessary to sustain her."

IF THIS was radio, there would have to be organ music.

Prince Charles attacks governments grounded in fear, intimidation, lies

MONTEZUMA, New Mexico (AP) — Speaking at the dedication of a new college to help promote world peace, Britain's Prince Charles criticized governments "based on fear, intimidation and official lies."

With the Sangre de Cristo Mountains and historic Montezuma Castle in the background, the heir to the British throne said Thursday that peace is made more elusive by totalitarian regimes that force people to live under systems that end up "crushing human relationships.

"They can mobilize huge resources, but they cannot actually crush men's souls," he said.

His speech capped dedication ceremonies for the Armand Hammer United World College of the American West, the sixth in the United World College system and the first in the United States. The others are in Wales, British Columbia, Singapore, Swaziland and Italy.

Funded by oil magnate Armand Hammer, the school's first class has an enrollment of 102 students from 46 nations. The United World College system provides a curriculum equivalent to the last year of high school and the first year of college. It focuses on history, art and man's search for knowledge.

The $6 million school is located at an old resort near the tiny Hispanic community of Montezuma, outside Las Vegas, N.M.

About 850 people, including New Mexico officials and Hollywood celebrities like Cary Grant and Hugh O'Brien, gave the prince standing ovations before and after his address.

In his speech, Prince Charles said it was "naive to think an essentially educational program such as this" could solve the world's problems. But he said the students eventually may help alleviate the "multitude of misunderstanding" that exists between nations.

Training at the college might help students bring peace and better government to their countries, the prince said.

Prince Charles and Hammer paid tribute to the late Lord Louis Mountbatten, the prince's great-uncle who was the driving force behind the United World College movement.

Mountbatten was killed by Irish terrorists in a boat explosion in August 1979. Prince Charles became president of the college system's international council after the slaying.

Prince Charles said Mountbatten would have been pleased with the new school in northeastern New Mexico.

Eileen Brennan in critical, stable condition

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Actress Eileen Brennan, the feisty Capt. Lewis of the "Private Benjamin" television series and movie, was critically injured when she walked in front of an apparently speeding car on a darkened street, police said Thursday.

The 48-year-old actress allegedly was jay walking across a major thoroughfare in the Venice area late Wednesday evening after saying goodbye to her dinner companion, Goldie Hawn, who played the recalcitrant private in the film version.

Ronald Guajardo, 29, a grocery clerk, could not stop his car in time, police said.

A spokesman at Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital said Brennan was in critical but stable condition with multiple fractures of her lower legs and face.

Miss Hawn, who became a close friend of Miss Brennan during filming of the "Private Benjamin" movie, remained with the injured actress at the hospital until early Thursday.

Thursday afternoon, Miss Hawn said, "It was a tragic accident, but the doctors say Eileen is going to fully recover. She has an incredible fighting spirit and I am thankful she is still with us."

Christie Plank, assistant public relations director of the hospital, said doctors initially feared that Miss Brennan might have skull and pelvic fractures and a ruptured spleen.

"She's not in immediate danger now," Miss Plank said, "as long as there are no unforeseen complications that set in. She should be okay."

Police said the two actresses left the Chez Helene restaurant at 11:15 p.m. and walked to Hawn's car, which was parked on the street outside the restaurant.

After saying goodbye, Miss Brennan walked out across the street to go to her own car, police said. A temporary power outage in the area had left the street dark and Guajardo reportedly had a difficult time seeing her as she crossd at mid-block.

Officers said skid marks indicated that the motorist was going about 50 mph in a 30 mph zone. They said they would conduct a full investigation bfore deciding whether he should be cited.

Competition sparks arson

HOUSTON (AP) — A series of arson fires at nude movie houses seem to be the weapons of a war being fought among the owners of the theaters, an official of the Harris County Fire Marshal's office says.

"It's like a continuous circle," fire marshal's investigator Mario Gallegos said. "They're either fighting among themselves, or other groups are trying to muscle in. As soon as one burns, another takes its place."

Gallegos said about 50 fires have been reported at the county's nude movie houses during the past five years.

Two men associated with Lil's Saloon, an X-rated movie theater, were charged with arson last month in fires at two other cinemas, the Mini Movie House and the Burlesque Theater.

Then, two weeks ago, Lil's was set afire.

Radu Serban Luculescu, 40, of Katy, and Mike George Hanna, 23, were charged in the fires at the Mini Movie House and at the Burlesque Theater, officials said.

Will Texas A&M take to latest Aggie joke?

DALLAS (AP) — Roger Siverson is convinced Aggies won't take offense at a paper and styrofoam toy sword poking fun at a Texas A&M student's tete-a-tete with some opposing cheerleaders last year.

Siverson, a spring graduate of the Southern Methodist University graduate business school, developed the "Saggy Aggie Sabers" to hawk to SMU students before Saturday's game with the Aggies.

The $3 saggy saber is a recreation of the sword a Texas A&M Corps member brandished at SMU cheerleaders who dared step on the A&M football field during the two schools' game a year ago.

"I have a lot of Aggie friends who think this is extremely funny," Siverson told the Dallas Morning News.

"And most of them are proud of that cadet for defending an Aggie tradition. They just think that the way he went about it was bad," Siverson said.

He and the sword's co-creator, law student Mike Tomlin, hope to sell 3,000 of the hand-assembled, 20-inch saggy sabers by Saturday.

Siverson, Tomlin and SMU English professor Bonnie Wheeler came up with the idea for the toy swords over dinner after last year's Aggie game.

Siverson hopes he isn't left in the red with the entrepreneurial scheme, because officials at Texas Stadium where the game will be played are refusing to let him sell the swords there.

Even so, Siverson thinks he might make enough money to finance his job-hunting, he told The Dallas Morning News.

"I'm just doing what I learned in business school, taking an idea and putting it on the market," he said.

Siverson may wind up eating some of his $5,000 inventory.

"We should have investigated the Texas Stadium situation. Otherwise there might have been a lot of money in this," he said.

Chinese artist defects to Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A member of a Peking opera company defected with her two childrn during a visit to Japan and has taken refuge on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan, the Daily News reported today.

The newspaper said Chang Chi-yun, 49, arrived here Thursday after waiting nearly three months in Yokohama, Japan.

Man's worries eased

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A second biopsy has eased the worry for a 30-year-old man who was told last week his body was beginning to reject the transplanted heart that had kept him alive five years.

Jim Hayes, a Knoxville letter carrier, last year bicycled 3,000 miles from Tennessee to Palo Alto, Calif., where he received the heart transplant in 1976. He was fulfilling a vow made at the time of the surgery to return five years later by bicycle.

Last week, doctors at Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto told Hayes a biopsy seemed to indicate his body was rejecting the heart. But a second biopsy was done Monday, and Hayes said he was waiting in a California airport for the flight home when doctors telephoned him with the good news.

"They told me I have to be careful about catching colds or pneumonia," he said. "They said I had probably had these little rejections before and it had just not been noticed."

Singer's likeness burned

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Singer Dan Fogelberg was burned in effigy and stacks of his records were torched at a Utah State University homecoming pep rally five days after he canceled a concert here.

Ray Meyers, director of student activities, said students were angered by the postponement and later cancellation of an Oct. 22 concert. He said 1,000 students were at the bonfire Wednesday night, but it was uncertain how many took part in the record-burning.

Fogelberg's agents called USU officials 10 hours before the concert to say the singer was ill and couldn't perform, Meyers said. The agents had said they would reschedule the concert this week but then telephoned Monday to cancel it.

Students 'insure' holiday

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — High school honor students here are selling cleanup insurance against Halloween pranksters who smash pumpkins, toss eggs and decorate homes and yards with toilet paper.

"We'll cover basic vandalism, except for repairs," said Eric Hayashi, president of the Sammamish High School Honor Society.

Halloween is Sunday night. The students will take their own supplies when they clean up insured houses Monday after school. The group's members donned costumes Wednesday as they went door-to-door selling the insurance — $1 policies that cover only toilet paper attacks and $2 general policies that cover toilet paper, eggs and pumpkins.

$3 million spent on art

PARIS (AP) — Sixty-four paintings and sculptures from the personal collection of the late art dealer Aime Maeght were sold at auction for $3,279,000.

A large oil on canvas by the Argentine-born French painter Fernand Leger — his 1951 "La Belle Cycliste" (The Lovely Cyclist) — fetched the top price of $382,000.

The auction was held Wednesday evening at Drouot's.

Drugs may render teen-agers impotent

Dear Dr. Solomon: How is it possible for a young man in his teens who has had sexual relations to become impotent? I thought this only happened with much older men. — Nelson, Clearwater, Fa.

Dear Nelson: Your question assumes that teen-agers can suffer from impotence, and you are correct. Drugs, for example, can have such an effect. These include alcohol as well as marijuana and heroin addiction.

Older men may also become impotent as a result of drug abuse but, in addition, they are subject to such conditions as arteriosclerosis and prostate problems.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm scheduled to have a coronary artery bypass operation. I know you can't tell me specifically how it's going to turn out, but I'd like to know what my chances are of being able to return to work. I'm 47 years old and work in a machine shop. Can you tell me anything about my chances? — Cappy, Detroit, Mich.

Dear Cappy: A study by Dr. Nicholas Danchin, of the Cardiology Institute of Montreal, suggests that the most important factors that determine whether a patient will return to work after coronary bypass surgey are more socioeconomic than medical. For example, extended unemployment before the operation and lack of education are among the conditions that work against a person's returning to employment.

From what I know of my own patients, motivation appears to play an important role. A person who really wants to return to work will do so a lot more readily than will someone else with a comparable condition. More than 75 percent of my patients have indeed returned to work.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It's a strange coincidence that a letter on radiation exposure appeared in your column right beneath another column which headlined my late husband's philosophy. Orville and I founded "Make Today Count," a self-help organization for persons and their families living with a life-threatening illness. Orville died from radiation-caused cancer (lymphocyte lymphoma) after having witnessed 22 nuclear detonations in the Marshall Islands in our U.S. weapons testing program.

We met you when we were both guests on "Good Morning America" several years ago. We founded a second organization, which I am now carrying on with, called the "National Association of Atomic Veterans." I noted your words, "Cancer doesn't appear until long after the person has been exposed to the agents that cause it." We have been trying to get the U.S. government to recognize that these young men who witnessed nuclear blasts when they were in their 20s are stricken with cancer and dying in their early 40s. Presently, the Veterans Administration only allows claims as service-connected up to one year after discharge. They are denying 98 percent of the atomic veteran's claims. I enjoy your column. — Wanda S. Kelly, Executive Director, National Association of Atomic Veterans, Burlington, Iowa

Nancy plugs book at Lincoln Center bash

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — "No," she said heading across the room to the grand piano, she didn't think she wanted to do it without her "co-star."

"You know how it is when you're trying to help someone get started," joked Nancy Reagan.

And, admittedly, songwriter Joe Raposo wasn't Frank Sinatra, who sang with her a week ago. Neither was the Lincoln Center library's main gallery the White House. But the Nancy Reagan "To Love a Child" show went on anyway on a night earlier this week. It could hardly have been a more enraptured audience that publisher Bobbs-Merrill brought together for the launching of the first lady's new book about one of her favorite causes.

And with 300 listening in, the first lady couldn't resist joining Raposo on the song of the same title that he and lyricist Hal David wrote to help publicize the book.

Raposo played it again for her to exit on, which she did with a little soft shoe, blowing him a kiss on the way out.

Like any author plugging a new book, Nancy Reagan was on the road and looking for buyers. She did this with some well-targeted media events involving children and the elderly, areas in which she happens to be the administration's most effective spokeswoman.

"Of course, I know you're all going to go out and tell everybody what a marvelous Christmas present (the book) would make," she told the pre-party gathering of journalists and book reviewers. Then laughing, she added, "You see, I've learned about these things quickly. Somebody whispered that to me."

She learned the other night that the book already has been bought for partial dramatization on TV.

"Including ancillary rights of serialization by Family Circle magazine, and syndication, $100,000 has already been raised for the Foster Grandparents program," said Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary. Under negotiation are paperback and publishing rights. All profits from the book and the song, which has been recorded by Sinatra, will go to the program.

The guest list at Lincoln Center included two of the first lady's fashion designers, Bill Blass and Oscar de la Renta, both of whom got big hugs and kisses when they made their way through the crowd that surrounded her. Others were Pat Buckley, wife of columnist William F. Buckley and sometime traveling companion of Mrs. Reagan; and socialite Nan Kempner, who said the first lady makes her emotional. "I get all weepy-eyed," Kempner said, "she's such a super dame."

Mrs. Reagan's collaborator on the book, Jane Wilkie, was telling CBS correspondent Mike Wallace about being interviewed by Mrs. Reagan for the job.

"She took off her shoes after three minutes and tucked her feet under the cushions. I said to myself 'Thank you, God,' 'cause I knew I'd passed muster," said Wilkie.

ITT chief executive officer Rand V. Araskog couldn't have been more pleased that Bobbs-Merrill, a subsidiary of ITT, had been selected to publish Mrs. Reagan's book.

"We're going to do everything we can, because the more successful it is, the more money is going to go into the Foster Grandparent program," said Araskog.

Grace Shaw, publisher of Bobbs-Merrill, confessed to being a little nervous earlier in the evening when she introduced Mrs. Reagan to the media audience. But by the time everybody was upstairs at the party, Shaw had relaxed. Her firm had spared no expense for food, with several buffet tables laden with smoked salmon, roast beef and baked ham, much of which went uneaten.

Mrs. Reagan began the day by spotlighting her interests and support of the Foster Grandparents program with a visit to the Babies Hospital division of The Presbyterian Hospital at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

She signed autographs, posed for camera buffs and made some unscheduled stops at children's bedsides that even her highly protective Secret Service agents couldn't turn down.

"I don't know how she does it. She sees kids in the most heartbreaking condition," said her staff director, James Rosebush, as he watched the first lady talk to a young kidney transplant patient and his donor.

Mrs. Reagan visited a model program at the hospital that provides treatment and crisis intervention for abused and neglected children. A year ago, foster grandparents were brought in as go-betweens for parents and children undergoing therapy.

"It's a unique unit and needed desperately to educate not only the children, but the parents — sometimes as young as 16 and 17 years old — trying to cope with things they don't know how to handle," said Dr. Felix E. Demartini, president of The Presbyterian Hospital.

At a reception, also at the hospital, with many of New York City's 180 foster grandparents, Mrs. Reagan told them that even if they weren't in her book, "the book is about you."

In an interview taped earlier at the White House and broadcast Wednsday morning on the CBS Morning News, Mrs. Reagan told anchorwoman Diane Sawyer, "I love kids and I think that for a long time we were so youth oriented that we had forgotten about the elderly who have a great deal to give."

Copycat poisoners believed to have weak egos

BOSTON (AP) — The copycat criminals who poison medicine bottles and lately foods may be emotionally immature people, in the opinion of experts.

Psychiatrists speculate that this series of sabotage products, beginning with Tylenol capsules, is the work of people who are unduly susceptible to the power of suggestion.

"People who have difficulty running their own lives — people who have relatively weak ego structures, to put it technically — will rely upon others to tell them what to do and what to be," says Dr. Richard Galdston of Harvard Medical School.

These are people who long for their childhood days when they always had someone to tell them how to act, he says. "It is, in that sense, a re-enactment of a childhood tradition."

WHY COPY a killing? Maybe they have longed to murder.

Many people scheme and dream about doing in an enemy, but they never come close to actual violence. But the copycat criminals have poor control of the urges that society forbids.

"Individuals who have a marginal adaptation of their aggressive impulses, assuming that they haven't killed anybody but have an inclination to, respond to the suggestive stimuli of the notoriety and infamy that surrounds the Tylenol case," Galdston says.

Dr. Thomas Gutheil, director of the Program in Psychiatry and the Law at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center, said people may tussle for years with a yen to do something violent. Then they see somebody else do it.

"When certain phenomena happen," he said, "individuals who are struggling inside with impulses act as though one side of the struggle has been given the go-ahead and may act."

HOWEVER, DRAWING a profile of the person capable of spiking a medicine bottle is difficult.

"If people are poised by certain inner forces that are accumulating, a wide range of different personality types could have this potential," says Dr. Arnold Robbins, a forensic psychiatrist at Tufts Medical School in Boston.

"It would be somebody who certainly has a great amount of aggression," he says. "He might carry it around for several years. Seeing the event, seeing the killer get publicity and seeing how hard it is to catch the person could just serve to precipitate some kind of violence of this type."

Some psychiatrists doubt whether they can figure out much about these people's motives before they are caught.

"I do not believe that psychiatry has a great deal to offer in characterizing these people in advance," says Dr. Peter Kramer, director of outpatient psychiatry at Rhode Island Hospital. "There's no scientific basis for making these predictions."

SOME EVEN question whether the copycat poisoners are suffering from neurosis, psychosis or any other degree of mental sickness.

"I think it's premature to say these people are mad rather than bad," says Dr. George Murray of Massachusetts General Hospital. "Putting them in that category makes people feel better, since they don't have to think that humanity can be so inherently evil. I don't think these people have psychiatric disease."

Among the tampering cases that have emerged since the Tylenol poisonings:

—A man in Aurora, Colo., was in critical condition after he took Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules that were tainted with mercuric chloride.

—Cases of contaminated eyedrops, nasal sprays and mouthwash have been reported in several states.

—IN MINNEAPOLIS, a boy drank milk from a carton containing sodium hydroxide, a chemical used in industrial cleaners, but was not seriously hurt.

Such crimes seem random. But Gutheil says someone probably fantasized about who would be killed by the doctored drugs and had a specific victim in mind.

"It's random in fact," said Gutheil, "but in their fantasy, it's a guided missile."

The intended victim, says Gutheil, is probably the killer's mother.

Adds Galdston: "If they have somebody they want to do in but can't, the next best thing is to kill somebody whom they don't know at all. That way they can imagine their enemy in his or her stead."

Women can be successful firefighters

AP Laserphoto

Barbara Beers, a Seattle firefighter, carries a hose to an engine. Beers, the first female firefighter who had been promoted to lieutenant,joined the department in 1977. Seattle claims more female firefighters than any other city in the nation.

SEATTLE (AP) — There are more female firefighters in Seattle than any other city in the nation, according to union figures, a fact that engenders considerable pride — and some resentment — in the department.

"It's proven that given the right recruiting and training, women can be successful," said 11-year veteran Ken Norris, saying that preference in hiring and promoting women has hurt department morale.

Seattle's 27 women firefighters are the most in any department in the United States, according to the International Association of Firefighters, although last month New York City accepted more than 40 women as trainees after they passed a modified physical test.

Now the Seattle department is toughening its requirements, instituting new standards for body fat and what Pletan calls "huff and puff" strength. They go into effect Jan. 1. Both men and women will have to meet these standards or they'll be on the way out, Chief Bob Swartout said.

"It requires a certain amount of stature and lean body mass to be able to handle the equipment," said T.L. Doolittle, a professor of kinesiology, the science of muscle movement, at the University of Washington.

"It boils down to a question of stature rather than sex," said Doolittle, who developed a special training programs.

There are 942 uniformed firefighters in the Seattle department, according to Pletan. Including four women completing their one-year probation, there are 31 women in what Swartout calls "combat" positions — such as fighting fires or riding in aid cars, which assist fire victims.

But one veteran of more than 10 yearqvho asked not to be identified says, "There have been very few women that have come across as real aggressive firefighters. When somebody is hanging from a window, I feel it's my job to get them out. I haven't seen any aggressive women."

Swartout, a 23-year fire department veteran, has vigorously defended the women on his force.

"I've had personal experience with 15 or 16 (women) in recruit classes. I'd take them in my crew any time, any place," he said."If guys doing the complaining don't have the guts to come out in the open then nothing is going to happen about it."

Women are better than men in some situations, he said. Women firefighters are able to help rape victims and abused women.

"The woman who is being treated can relate better and that's a real advantage," Swartout said.

Lt. Barbara Beers, the department's first female officer, said she has not seen any discrimination but is aware of the men's discontent.

Termites threat to earth's radiation balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The insidious termite, already blamed for causing as much property damage as fire, may pose a gnawing concern for the heavens as well, government researchers say.

According to the National Center for Atmospheric Research, termites produce an inordinate amount of methane — one of the "greenhouse" gases which threaten to alter the earth's radiation balance and cause warmer climates.

Methane is a relatively abundant trace gas, although it still represents only a fraction of one percent of the atmosphere. But the center's report says it's been growing by 2 percent annually, and a large portion of that buildup may be attributable to termites — and their highly efficient digestive systems.

By extrapolating the amount of methane from control termite colonies to the millions worldwide, it appears this insect activity could account for up to half the atmospheric methane produced by biological activity, says the report, published in Science magazine.

Only a small fraction of the methane in the atmosphere comes from non-biological sources, such as leaking natural gas wells.

Thus, the report says, "Termites are a potentially important source of atmospheric methane... "They could account for a large fraction of global emissions."

Inflammable methane is the main component of natural gas and is sometimes called "marsh gas" since it is mainly the product of decomposition of vegetable matter.

Patrick R. Zimmerman and James P. Greenberg, researchers at the Boulder, Colo., facility, began looking at termites in their studies of biological contributors to the atmosphere.

"The atmosphere is formed mostly from biological activity, and unless we understand this process, we can't understand man's impact on the air," Zimmerman said in a telephone interview.

Termites are insects resembling ants in appearance and social structure, but on a much more primitive level.

They have such a profound atmospheric impact because of their highly efficient digestive systems and their numbers, Zimmerman said. The insects' digestive systems contain bacteria that almost totally use up cellulose in plant matter and leave little waste other than gases.

Tamper-resistant packages may increase price by up to 10 cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government thinks mandatory tamper-resistant packaging may cost consumers an extra penny for each nonprescription drug product. But industry estimates show the cost may be as much as 10 cents more.

Sources familiar with tamper-resistant packaging standard being drafted by the government for release early in November said that the regulation could cost the industry between $20 million and $30 million a year. The estimate takes into account the cost of acquiring new equipment to seal the packages.

A draft of the regulation from the Food and Drug Administration was sent earlier this week to the Office of Management and Budget for clearance.

The nonprescription drug industry's more expensive conclusion represents a preliminary estimate.

Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., the FDA commissioner, has promised that the agency will respond to the "wave of me-too crimes" involving product tampering by issuing a packaging regulation early in November.

FDA's proposed regulation incorporates some of the suggestions made by a special, industry Joint Committee on Product Security. FDA did not lay out detailed packaging specifications and would allow the industry to decide which type of tamper-resistant packaging is appropriate for each type of drug.

But there are several features the industry did not suggest. For instance, most types of drug products other than tablets would have to be enclosed in new packages within 90 days. There also would be a 15-month, phase-in period, after which all nonprescription drugs without tamper-resistant packaging would have to be removed from store shelves.

FDA wants the new packages to carry special label warnings to attract consumers' attention. The warnings would advise that the products not be used if the packages' protective seal was not present when the product was purchased.

Tamper-resistant packages already are used on some consumer products.

Lakes' water needed

By The Associated Press

It would be difficult to overstate the importance of the Great Lakes, and their importance is growing as the thirsty Plains and Southwest search for water for farming and their burgeoning populations.

Michigan Gov. William Milliken even has suggested water might one day become to the Great Lakes states what oil has been to the Persian Gulf.

The lakes, with a coastline longer than the Gulf Coast and Atlantic Ocean combined, supply drinking water to about 37 million Americans. They represent 95 percent of the nation's freshwater reserve.

Half of all Canadians and one in five Americans live in the area drained by the lakes. It encompasses 60 percent of Canada's national income and 25 percent of America's, says the General Accounting Office.

An estimated 10,000 to 15,000 Canadians work in jobs related to the lakes and their link to the Atlantic, the St. Lawrence Seaway. Thousands more do so in U.S. ports from Duluth, Minn., to Massena, N.Y.

In North America, hundreds of thousands of people work in mines, factories, and auto and steel plants that depend on cross-lake transportation. And Ohio officials estimate that $1 spent on lake transportation generates $2.77 in related business.

And then there is tourism.

States possessive of water

CHICAGO (AP) — Water tables are falling in the Great Plains farm states. The Southwest is getting thirsty. Western coal producers want water. But the message from the Midwest is: Great Lakes water is not for sale.

No one has proposed drawing out large amounts yet, but Midwest governors and environmental officials think it is only a matter of time before sun-parched, fast-growing areas of the South and Southwest look to the lakes.

"There are always the haves and the have-nots," said Benjamin DeCooke of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit. "Sometime in the future they (other states) are going to look to other sources for water."

The lakes are a logical place to look. Together, they contain an estimated 95 percent of the nation's freshwater reserve — 20 percent of the world's fresh surface water. And diverting the water, says DeCooke, might be prohibitively expensive but no more difficult than building the Alaska oil pipeline.

"While it is misleading to talk of a 'fresh-water OPEC,' it is certain that the Great Lakes states have...a resource for which others will yearn increasingly," says Michigan Gov. William Milliken.

Milliken sounded the warning at a summer Great Lakes Water Resources Conference at Mackinac Island, Mich., in which he and other Great Lakes-area officials set out to discourage any plans to divert water from the Great Lakes.

To prove they mean business, the officials adopted a resolution prohibiting the diversion of water without the unanimous approval of regional governments.

Their primary goal, according to Milliken and others, is to bring those who need the water to the Great Lakes rather than sending (or selling) water to those who need it.

In the words of Gov. Lee Dreyfus of Wisconsin, a state known for its beer production, "The only water we ought to sell is the kind that goes out in bottles and cans with malt and barley."

The stretcher in the death house at the Walls Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections at Huntsville where lethal injection executions will be carried out. At upper left is intraveneous needle that will be inserted into the prisoners' arms through which three chemical compounds will flow.

Injection most humane method of execution

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A drug that puts patients quickly to sleep for life-saving surgery will be used in the Texas prison death house to put prisoners quickly to death in executions.

Sodium thiopental, a chemical compound better known as sodium pentothal or truth serum, is a powerful poison that can quickly stop breathing and heart beat. It is, many experts believe, the most humane way yet found for society to execute its criminals.

"It is about as painless and easy and sure and rapid a way to go as there is," said Dr. Denis Bourke, a Houston anesthesiologist.

To assure death, two other chemicals — pavulon and potassium chloride — are added to the injection after the sodium thiopental. Pavulon is a muscle relaxant, and potassium chloride in large doses can cause musclar paralysis.

There are 145 condemned prisoners in Texas who may face death by the needle. Ronald Clark O'Bryan, Houston-area man convicted of killing his son with cyanide-laced trick-or-treat candy eight years ago, may die by a massive dose of the drugs a few minutes after midnight on Halloween morning.

He was granted a stay Wednesday by the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, but the State of Texas is appealing the stay to the U.S. Supreme Court on Thursday. If the Supreme Court reverses the stay, O'Bryan could die early Sunday morning.

Three other states, Oklahoma, Idaho and New Mexico, also have passed legislation to use lethal injection for executions, some with a combination of a barbiturate and potassium, which also can stop the heart. Washington state offers prisoners a choice: hanging or lethal injection.

The use of lethal injection was first proposed in the 1950s, but did not become a political issue until the mid-1970s. The method was strongly opposed by doctors who saw the use of an injection to kill intentionally as a corruption of medical technology developed to heal.

"Doctors elected not to participate," said Dr. Carroll L. Boone, president-elect of the Harris County Medical Society. "It would be a contradiction of our philosophy. Doctors are dedicated to preserving life, not to taking it."

Others saw execution by lethal injection as unrelated to their profession.

"This is a matter of justice," noted Dr. R. Vernon Colpitts of Houston. "It's not a matter of medicine."

The American Medical Society ruled in 1980 that doctors may not participate, but may be present to declare the prisoner dead. That created a conflict, in some states, with existing laws which forbid injections except under the supervision of a physician.

In Texas, lethal injection became the legislated method in 1977. Regulations based on the law specifically state that the injection will be administered by a medically trained individual who is not a doctor.

The Texas death chamber is housed in a red brick unit called the Walls, a prison built in the late 1800s in the classic design. Thirty-foot-tall stone walls with guard towers on each corner surround a yard and cell buildings. The death chamber is in one corner, separated from the rest of the unit by the administration building.

Once the death chamber building was known as Death Row. It contains eight cells where convicted men waited out their last days.

But after the last Texas execution in 1964, the Death Row population quickly outgrew the small facility. Now the 145 Texas convicts under death sentence are housed in two cell blocks at the Ellis Unit, 12 miles from Huntsville.

With the passage of the lethal injection law, there was another change. Officials dismantled "Old Sparky," the convict-built electric chair that in 40 years executed 361 convicts.

When "Old Sparky" was first used, in 1924, it was considered the most humane method, far superior to hanging. But witnesses who attended executions told grisly stories of burned flesh and burst blood vessels.

With lethal injection, doctors believe, the victim will merely go to sleep with the suddenness of a dropping curtain.

"If we're going to retain the death penalty," said W. J. Estelle, director of the Texas Department of Correction, "lethal injection suits our state of civilization more than electrocution."

For now, these are the plans for the final hours of a prisoner faced with execution by lethal injection:

On the day before the death date, the prisoner will awaken to a routine morning in his small cell in the Ellis Unit. After lunch, he will be shown a menu from which he can select his last meal and will have wide choices "within reason," says Rick Hartley, a prison spokesman.

In the afternoon, the prisoner will have the farewell visits with his family in the visitors' center at the Ellis Unit. ' At 5 p.m., the pace picks up. The prisoner is served his final meal and sometime in the following hours he is transferred, manacled, to The Walls unit by a van. He is escorted to Death Row and placed in a holding cell.

During the evening hours, the prisoner is visited by a spiritual advisor, if he so chooses. He is also given clean clothes which Hartley says will be ordinary prison whites.

A few minutes before midnight, the prisoner will be escorted into the death chamber.

It is a small room, poorly lighted. On one side is a wall with one-way glass. Behind that glass waits the executioner. On the other side is a closed curtain. Witnesses, all standing, wait behind the curtain.

In the room itself is a Gurney, a rolling stretcher. The prisoner is placed on the Gurney and strapped down. A prison employee inserts into his arm an intravenous needle attached to a tube that snakes down and through the wall with the one-way glass.

A clear saline solution is started flowing down the tube and into the prisoner's arm.

At a nod from the official in charge, the curtain is opened and witnesses get their first view of the prisoner.

The official asks if there are any final words. The prisoner may speak. When he falls silent, the official gives the signal. "We are ready," he says.

Behind the wall, the executioner uses a syringe to inject sodium thiopental into the tube. It blends with the saline solution and flows through the tube and into the patient.

Bourke and others say unconsciousness will be almost immediate. In routine surgery, he said, doctors use 1.4 to 2.3 milligrams of the drug per pound of the patient's weight. This produces a quick, deep sleep.

A killing dose would be of a much higher volumne, but with approximately the same sensation experienced by the prisoner.

"He would just fall asleep, perhaps a little more suddenly," Bourke said.

Nobody knows exactly how sodium thiopental works but its effects are dramatic. The muscles of the heart and the respiration system are quickly stilled. Blood stops flowing to the brain. The brain dies within minutes.

The second two chemicals, pavulon and potassium chloride, are then added one after another by syringe to extinguish any spark of life.

As witnesses and officials wait, the chemicals are given 30 minutes to drain completely from the tube into the prisoner. At that point, the doctor steps forward, examines the patient and declares him dead. The curtain is closed and the witnesses file out.

The prisoner's body is quickly loaded into a hearse and taken to a hospital for an autopsy. Afterward, the dead person's family may claim the body.

If it isn't claimed, the state buries the body nearby, in a cemetery of convicts. The tombstones do not bear names, but numbers. The plot, carefully tended, is named for the late Joe Byrd, the state's last executioner and a man who killed scores of prisoners in "Old Sparky."

Racism, anti-semitism on rise in Massachusetts

BOSTON (AP) — From a prestigious prep school to Boston's subways, acts of racism and anti-semitism are increasing across Massachusetts, state officials said.

Outlining recent violence and intolerance against blacks and Jews, state officials at a Statehouse conference offered communities help in fighting the problem.

"Unfortunately, overt acts of intolerance are on the rise in many parts of the commonwealth," Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti said at the Commission Against Discrimination.

Bellotti said the state already has successfully prosecuted a youth who assaulted two black children with a shovel and three youths who tried to drive a black family from a suburban housing project.

"Violent acts against a person's home or house of worship are serious violations of law which must be forcefully investigated and prosecuted," he said.

"In our schools, those halls of learning," said Education Commissioner John H. Lawson, "there has surfaced signs of sufficient anger and ugliness to prompt our convocation."

Lawson said he recently sent a letter to school superintendents warning that "a firm, strictly enforced disciplinary policy must be articulated with respect to acts motivated by bigotry."

Lawson listed a series of recent events: a swastika scrawled in Marblehead, a defamation painted on a Brookline synagogue, and the death of a black Boston man, allegedly chased by five youths yelling racial epithets into a Boston subway station where he was killed by a train.

"There is anti-Jewish graffiti on posters in Swampscott, anti-semitic slurs in Westwood, and in Phillips Academy, that most prestigious school, the swastika has surfaced and 'Jews must die' displayed vividly," Lawson added.

State and local leaders formed the Multi-Cultural Awareness Task Force in June because of "increasing incidents of racial and anti-semitic violence, vandalism and hatred," said Margot Kosberg, MCAD commissioner.

Getting legal for bingo

Midland County Grand Jurors acted wisely and responsibly when they voted to take no action in connection with a bingo raid at Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7208. The grand jury's decision, as noted by District Attorney Vern Martin, means that the particular case is closed.

That's as it should be because the VFW's bingo game was not a major gambling operation like some of the ones in other parts of the state. It was some of those games that motivated Rep. Lloyd Criss of LaMarque originally to get his bingo bill through the Texas Legislature, followed by the 1980 Bingo Enabling Act which authorized city and county governments to hold local option elections to approve of bingo games for charitable purposes.

The VFW's bingo game was illegal, just as hundreds of other bingo games being conducted around the state are illegal. At the time of the Midland raid, voters here had not been given the choice of legalizing bingo.

A lot of blame has been directed at State Comptroller Bob Bullock since his "Raiders" conducted the Sept. 23 raid. It's true he could have "looked the other way" and chosen some other bingo game in Texas to raid. But Bullock, regardless of his motives, was merely upholding the law by conducting the raid.

Bingo games like the one at the VFW were not really the target of the Bingo Enabling Act in the first place, says an aide to Rep. Criss. Prior to legislative enactment of the bingo bill, a number of large gambling operations were being conducted in various parts of Texas. Proceeds from those games were not going to charitable organizations, as Texas law requires, but to the pockets of individuals and state officials became concerned about the possibility that the bingo gambling operations would lead to the intrusion of organized criminal activity in Texas. According to Rep. Criss's aide, other states which have bingo games had experienced problems with organized crime.

In order to make certain that bingo games could be conducted in Texas for charitable purposes and to identify the organizations that could conduct the games, the bingo bill was drafted and enacted, the aide said. Another reason for enactment of the legislation was to give law enforcement agencies in the state more reason to uphold bingo gambling laws. Enforcement of existing laws prior to the Bingo Enabling Act had become lax, Rep. Criss's aide said.

Midland's VFW bingo game simply got caught in the enforcement push by Bullock's office. Bullock should not be blamed; he was simply enforcing the law. But efforts are under way currently to hold a bingo local option election in January, which if approved by voters would allow a resumption of bingo in Midland for charitable purposes.

That's good, if that's what the people of Midland want. A lot of people enjoy bingo and as long as the money is going to charity, no one should be jailed because of it.

Latin wins Nobel Prize

The Nobel Prize for literature has been awarded to Gabriel Garcia Marquez, 54, a quixotic novelist from Colombia's jungles, whose theme is nothing less than the story of Latin America's discovery, conquest and rebirth.

"One Hundred Years of Solitude," Garcia Marquez's masterpiece, parades matriarchs and colonels through a tropical rain forest. He unearths villagers' magical picture of Gypsies and cuts through political warfare to reveal the forces that make Latin American culture sprout in ripeness and rot in corruption beneath the equatorial sun.

Beneath the cymbals' clash of joy in Garcia Marquez's writing, there runs an underlying sadness and doom, as reflected by the last words of his masterpiece: "Before reaching the final line, however, he had already understood that he would never leave that room, for it was foreseen that the city of mirrors (or mirages) would be wiped out by the wind because races condemned to one hundred years of solitude did not have a second opportunity on earth."

Garcia Marquez is the best-selling author now writing in Spanish. His achievement is in telling the story of a continent to the world, and all of Latin America basks in his glory.

Staying in Lebanon

Lebanon says that it wants all foreign troops withdrawn from its soil, but it doesn't really mean all. What it means is that it wants Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian forces out, but at the same time it wants the U.S.-Italian-French peacekeeping force that it invited in expanded, with perhaps other countries contributing as well. The first group of foreign armies Lebanon sees as inimical to its interests. The second group it sees as supportive of those interests, chief among which are restoring order and reasserting national independence.

The unwanted foreign armies in Lebanon are a measure of that country's weakness. So, as President Amin Gemayel would be the first to admit, is the presence of the international force now stationed around Beirut, that Gemayel wants to see increased considerably in size and given additional duties around the country. Gemayel and others figure that it will be at least two years before Lebanon's own puny army can be enlarged, trained and equipped well enough so that it can take on the full burden of internal security. Until then Lebanon wants outside forces of its own choosing to lend a substantial hand.

Gemayal was in Washington this week to make a personal pitch to President Reagan for a larger commitment of U.S. troops. Reagan said he would think about it, and the early signs are that more Americans may well be sent to Lebanon. That is not, we think, an attractive prospect. Playing a peacekeeping role in a country where anarchy lurks just beneath the political surface is inherently dangerous. There are risks as well should the United States become too visible a prop behind a Christian president commanding a Christian-dominated army in a country where Moslems are a majority and renewed sectarian strife is an ever-present possibility.

Attractive or not, the United States could find itself with painfully limited real choice in the matter. The Reagan peace initiative, the centerpiece now of U.S. policy in the Middle East, stands small chance of getting anywhere until Lebanon is removed from the forefront of concerns. That requires, as first steps, getting all unwanted foreign troops out of the country, while simultaneously instituting measures to relieve Israel of the threat of future attacks from southern Lebanon.

An augmented U.S. military presence in the area as a form of security guarantee could emerge in negotiations as one of those measures. That is what Lebanon wants, and it is what Israel, though it prefers keeping a direct hand in southern Lebanon, might reluctantly be willing to accept. The idea of a possibly extended U.S. stay in Lebanon is not, as we said, very appealing. But given larger U.S. policy goals in the Middle East, it is an idea that Washington may find it impossible to reject.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Crime and fear increase with unemployment

WASHINGTON — The story behind the unemployment statistics — which are expected to get worse in the year ahead — is a gut story that will affect the quality of life in America.

Jack Anderson

I sent reporters to the outer edges of unemployment to talk to the people who have lost hope of finding work. The despairing talk of suicide; the desperate have turned to crime.

God-fearing, middle-class family men, believing their first duty is to provide for their families, are willing to steal to put food on the table, to meet car payments, to maintain their lifestyle. Others have been sucked into the underground drug trade.

My reporters spoke to pushers who said they are peddling drugs because there are no other jobs. One churchgoing Richmond, Va., man has already participated in a shootout with rival drug dealers.

What happens to a community with chronic high unemployment? I sent my associate Bob Sherman to two cities that appear to be polar opposites: Gary, Ind., is a typically depressed Northern industrial city. Dallas, Texas, is a Sun Belt boomtown. Yet both have spawned smoldering slums where the social order is breaking down.

Gary is an aging company town. Its economic life depends on U.S. Steel. But rising prices and foreign competition have forced massive layoffs at the corporation's Gary Works.

During the day, Gary is listless and depopulated. At night, it is occupied only by the police and those on the far side of the law. Crime in Gary has reached epidemic proportions.

Trapped in an industrial society that is changing from labor-intensive to high-technology, Gary's once-solid citizens aren't yet able to understand how they wound up on the scrap heap after years of productive, reliable prosperity.

Mayor Gordon Hatcher spends 70 percent of the city's annual budget on public safety. Yet crime continues to rise, and visitors avoid the place.

My reporter stayed four days in the only hotel in downtown Gary; he was the lone guest in this 13-story mausoleum. Surrounding stores were shuttered, abandoned by their owners. He also noticed that motorists no longer heeded the most fundamental rule for an orderly society; they didn't bother to stop for traffic signals.

Life is not much different in South Dallas, just a few blocks from the skyscrapers where cowboy-booted businessmen wheel and deal. The community is a mixture of aging one-story private homes, public housing projects and rundown rental properties.

Crime is rampant; it's part of the daily scene. Drug dealers conduct their business openly on the streets.

Bill Stoner, a tough black activist in South Dallas, issued a grisly warning that was echoed by less militant leaders. Blacks in South Dallas may not have much, Stoner warned, but they intend to hang onto what they do have.

He put the situation in ominous terms: "There are a lot of angry black Vietnam veterans out there ready to take to the streets ... They're gonna start taking some those skills they learned in Vietnam and star applying them in the streets."

But the violence won't be confined to the inner city. Black activists and social workers alike say to the upper classes that "violence is coming to your side of town."

Footnote: I have received thousands of letters from people who have been hurt by the economy. It is more mail than my staff can possible handle, but I have submitted some letters to the White House and other proper authorities. Those who want to write to me under these circumstances should send their letters to Jack Anderson, P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C. 20013.

A LOST CAUSE WINS: Fidel Castro's recent decision to free Armando Valladares surprised no one more than the prisoner himself. After 21 years in brutal confinement, the sick and crippled Cuban poet had resigned himself to death in prison.

"I don't think I will leave the prison alive," he wrote in a message smuggled out to me last February. "I know there are plans to kill me ... Now they are waiting for my health to worsen so it would seem an accident."

Valladares broke with Castro soon after the revolution, when the Cuban dictator's subservience to Moscow became obvious. In the message he smuggled out last winter — written, with poetic irony, on margins torn from the official Castro newspaper, Granma — Valladares sounded a note of hope for all those oppressed by the Soviets: "The communists forget that a diamond, the strongest of all precious stones; is made from a humble piece of coal under great pressure. And so is my body, when facing their attacks, made of diamonds."

BEST BUREAUCRATS: Threatha Bennings, a 50-year-old mother of three, is an employee of the Veterans Administration medical center in New York City, but her warm heart led her far afield last winter.

Bennings was doing her job when she notified the 78-year-old mother of a veteran that he had died in the VA hospital, and when she helped make the funeral arrangements. But she went above and beyond the call of duty a short time later when a cold snap hit the Northeast. Bennings remembered the grieving mother, Jewel Ealey, living in poverty in Philadelphia.

So she paid her own way to Philadelphia, where she found the old woman ailing and without heat. Bennings called city hall and arranged for emergency heat. "I know I'm exceeding my job," she said. "But she's old, and I have elderly parents in North Carolina. I know I would want somebody to help them. I was raised that way."

INSIDE REPORT:

Arab delegation finds strength in Reagan

WASHINGTON — Following the meticulously-prepared script for the most important White House session with Arab leaders since Israel's statehood, seven visiting Arab leaders last week did not ask one question of President Reagan that would "embarrass" him or which he would have to answer by saying "no."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

King Hassan II of Morocco, leader of the Arab delegation and Reagan's horseback-riding buddy during his Washington visit last May, extracted that agreement from fellow Arabs before the Oct. 21-22 White House talks. That it was quickly accepted even by the foreign minister of Syria added a new dimension to Reagan's Mideast peace efforts.

For the first time in its role as mediator, the U.S. under Ronald Reagan and George Shultz is perceived by Arab leaders as strong enough to resist Israeli pressures to thwart American peace plans, in this case Reagan's Sept. 1 West Bank proposals. From that follows a new mood of Arab moderation contrasted with bitter cries of an American sellout to Israel in all previous peace efforts.

The Arabs may be overestimating Reagan's freedom to negotiate a West Bank deal over Israel's opposition. The president's freedom of action, based partly on American horror over Israeli excesses in Lebanon, could be undermined Nov. 2 if the mid-term election seems a repudiation of Reagan.

But Arab confidence in Reagan was supported by his willingness to entertain Arabs in the White House 10 days before the election. Some State Department officials (not including Secretary of State Shultz) pleaded to delay last week's sessions until after the election. But Reagan, Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and national security adviser William P. Clark all rejected that counsel.

One key U.S. participant in the talks, dismissing reaction by the American-Jewish community that could hurt Republican candidates Nov. 2, told us: "Reagan sees ending the cycle of Arab-Israeli wars and getting peace in the Middle East as a political goal that outstrips everything else."

In closed-door talks with the Arabs across the Cabinet table, Reagan monopolized the conversation on the U.S. side. He displayed embarrassing gaps in his grasp of Middle East history but mastery over details of his own peace plan. Israel, he said, had "no claim" to sovereignty over the Palestinian West Bank. Asked "what clothes" the PLO has to wear to be accepted by the U.S., Reagan answered: "Recognize Israel and amend its constitution" that now calls for an end to the Jewish state.

When King Hassan told him that Point 7 of the Arab agreement reached at Fez, Morocco, "guaranteed peace" for Israel and was therefore implicit recognition of the Jewish state, Reagan said that was "not good enough." He wanted total recognition with "nonambiguity."

Behind the scenes, Reagan gave the Arabs a Cecil B. De Mille extravaganza. Overriding State Department protocol, Shultz and Weinberger met Hassan at Andrews Air Force Base Oct. 20 with military fanfare. The White House broke tradition and permitted Hassan to bring his own Moroccan tea to the State Dining Room luncheon Oct. 21.

Later, when Shultz met the Arabs at the State Department, he ignored a pile of briefing papers prepared for him by aides and instead cut through formal circumlocutions. The Arab-Israeli "problem" has been around "for 40 years and won't be solved in a day," he said, but "President Reagan has pledged to solve it and he means what he says."

Reagan and Shultz are plotting a diplomatic course different from previous U.S. efforts. Non-stop bilateral talks will replace structured conferences. Saudi Arabia and Jordan will press the PLO's Yasir Arafat to permit Jordan's King Hussein to speak for him in seeking full autonomy for West Bank Palestinians.

The first test is whether Reagan can get Israeli forces out of Lebanon. One of the seven Arab leaders told us that if the U.S. fails in this, "we are back to square one." That would doom Reagan's West Bank plan and revive those Arab fears, abandoned for now, that U.S. policy is shaped in Jerusalem, not Washington.

Children need Amendment 2

To The Editor:

There are 432 children in Midland County, 237 of them under six years of age, who need your vote Nov. 2 for the proposed State Constitutional Amendment No. 2. Although Texas ranks fourth in the nation in taxable wealth, it ranks 49th in the level of financial support it gives its needy children and their caretakers under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program.

The average payment to each adult caretaker and minor child under the AFDC program in Texas is $34 per month. The average recipient family is composed of a single parent and 2.2 children and receives $104 per month in AFDC. The maximum total from AFDC, food stamps, and all other income assistance programs combined for a family of three is $323 per month — a maximum few such families achieve.

Your vote for Amendment No. 2 will not automatically increase the money going to the needy children of Texas under this program. It would, however, allow the Texas Legislature to vote such an increase.

More importantly, 1) AFDC expenditures are already pressing against the fixed dollar ceiling set for the program by a 1970 constitutional amendment and 2) the present level of grants is dependent of 70 percent federal matching funds. If this amendment is not passed, 1) the level of AFDC payments will be forced down even lower in 1983 and lower still in 1984 as our population increases. Also, 2) the implementation of President Reagan's proposed "New Federalism" initiative would mean the complete collapse of the AFDC program.

For these reasons, the Midland Health and Welfare Association joins Governor Clements, House Speaker Clayton, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, and the Texas League of Women Voters in urging Midland to vote "yes" on Amendment No. 2 on Nov. 2 — for the children.

Who needs it?

To The Editor:

Webster's Dictionary defines "critique" as "a critical analysis or evaluation as of a literary work or play." Georgia Temple calls her "hatchet-job" of Midland Community Theater productions a review. Let's call a spade, a spade!

Ms. Temple has consistently criticized, in one way or another, every production put on by the theater. Perhaps she forgets that we are all amateurs. We receive no pay for the countless hours donated, nor do we pretend to be perfect. We receive our joy and satisfaction in presenting to Midland our best efforts. MCT has always brought top-notch plays and musicals to the people of Midland for their enjoyment, for people who cannot go to New York and see the professionals.

The critical comments of Ms. Temple we can do without! She has done a great and grievious disservice to both the MCT and the public who supports the theater. On several occasions people have told me that they did not go to a particular show because of Ms. Temple's review. Worse yet is the fact that several actors and actresses have ceased to appear, or even try-out for parts, because they were victims of Ms. Temple's petty, but viperous, attacks. I don't blame them one bit. Who needs it?

Ms. Temple would give the impression that she knows all the ins and outs of acting. Why have we never been blessed with her presence in a MCT production if she is so perfect? I am sure we could use her expertise. Let her act, or even stagemanage. A wise man once said, "If you are not part of the solution, then you are surely part of the problem."

'Change course'

To The Editor:

My crystal ball tells me on Nov. 2, 47 percent of the eligible voters will go to the polls to cast 2,851,001 votes.

Here is a breakdown on the governors race. Mark White: 1,472,525 votes. William Punroy Clements: 1,378,476 votes.

Mr. President, Texas has sent you your first message. "Change course."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 29, the 302nd day of 1982. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

Persecuted Jew writes book sympathetic to Germans

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Designer John Weitz walks over to a shelf of tiny model automobiles neatly displayed in his 24th-floor Madison Avenue studio. All are replicas of Mercedes-Benz automobiles that were manufactured, raced and sold from the mid-1930s to the early 1950s.

One at a time, Weitz brings the models down, twirls them, and puts them back. Weitz identifies each of them.

One, a palm-sized version of a black, open model seven-seater, elicits a chill from a visitor who knows the car only from newsreels and photographs showing Adolf Hitler in triumphal processions or Gestapo agents going about their business.

"My father had an innumerable string of Mercedes," Weitz, said, casually pronouncing the name Mert-SAY-dis in a thick Berlin accent.

Talking about his childhood, he recalled, "At the end of that long (Mercedes) hood was that three-pointed star, which was the love of my life. I was never so let down as when that three-pointed star turned into the other symbol."

By 1938, Weitz and his parents, Robert and Hedy Weitz, had finally abandoned their Berlin home and were living in England. Friends had helped to smuggle out jewels and cash. They were not paupers, and Hans, already using his adopted English name, John, was enrolling in Oxford.

But Weitz was not particularly happy as a 16-year-old attending England's most prestigious university, so on weekends he accepted an invitation to apprentice with a London couturier. That's how it began for Weitz, whose fashion label has been extremely successful.

Now approaching his 60th birthday, Weitz has returned to his roots — Germany during the rise of Nazism — and written his second novel, called "Friends in High Places" (Macmillan, $15.75). The theme of the book, which took him two years to write, may surprise readers, considering what happened to Weitz and his family.

The novel's protagonist, Charley (originally christened Karl-Heinz) Dorn, is a so-called good German who tried to tap dance through the rise of National Socialism. To succeed, Dorn willingly joins a branch of the SS, supposedly an innocuous branch involved with automobiles. He works for a fictional Stuttgart automobile maker, Brunzig, and eventually ends up fighting with Rommel in North Africa, where he is captured and becomes an American prisoner of war.

The novel's tension is derived from Dorn's subsequent attempt to become an American citizen, with his party membership becoming an issue. Weitz challenges the reader to look with understanding at the plight of average Germans and to examine what he called the self-deluding arrogance and "overgrown" loyalty of the German Jew. And yet, the paradox of a victim of Nazi persecution writing with a sympathetic sensibility seems, at face value, incomprehensible. Not so, said Weitz.

"It would be so nice to have a knee-jerk feeling about every German," Weitz said, "but the ironies are so unending. Nothing is black. Nothing is white. Nothing is as it seems."

Weitz' first novel, "The Value of Nothing," which is about the fashion industry, was published in 1970. In 1974, he published a book on executive style and fashion. This second novel has yet to be generally reviewed.

"This will be the first time the Germans will see a book from a Jew, which understands the terror of the times...the terror of the young man in Germany who was making his career in the big city and was faced with a choice of keeping his career and joining the party.

"The thing that began to upset me over the years was the holiness and pomposity of most people over the subject of opportunism," hegsaid. Forty years in the fashion business has made him somewhat expert in the tricks of getting ahead, he confesses ruefully. "There is nothing to be learned about opportunism in this field fashion. It consists of it."

He also said the novel is a story of a lot of people who were deluding themselves, including many of his parents' friends. "They were part of the fabric of Germany," he said, "and their reluctance to assign evil motives to the people they had grown up with was understandable."

Weitz was 12 years old in September 1935, the year he and his parents lost their German citizenship. With the adoption of the so-called Nuremberg laws, Germany's 666,000 Jews were deprived of their right to vote, barred from intermarrying and prohibited from showing the German national flag. "As a 12-and 13-year-old boy," he said, "I found myself with the loss of something very precious, and that was the security as a young German.

"I have in my vault a passport from London. The German consul general, reluctantly and unhappily and with shrugged-shouldered embarrassment, stamped it 'J,' and added the name Israel to my three very Teutonic names. Hans Werner Weitz became Hans Werner Israel Weitz."

And yet he also was quite lucky. "The entire time was a comparatively unscathed loss of one's soul and hide," he said. "It meant disenfranchisement of one's security and assurances ..."

His novel opens with a vivid description of Southampton, England, in 1954, and the acknowledged anti-Semitism of that period.

"A lot of that is gone," he said. "When I first came to (London's) East End, I visited with some people from my school days. Two or three times I mentioned I was Jewish. Because of that my host was asked not to bring me back. That attitude is gone pretty much."

He is still not totally clear what triggered within him a desire to examine the Germany of his youth. "I am very German," he said. "I have great warmth and affection for Germany and Germans. I find it an extraordinary country that is often sinned against...and often misunderstood."

And he is wary. "I am sure that a lot of American Jews who really don't know the circumstances will condemn me for my seeming apologia...but in truth no apology can be made for what happened, and conversely I cannot believe that Germany is composed of beasts, and, hereditarily, a cruel people."

School officials don't want VD mentioned in texts

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas school officials say they are considering banning mention of venereal disease from textbooks on grounds such matters should be left to the discretion of local districts.

"The bottom line issue is, when you're talking about sexually transmitted diseases, you're relating it to, 'How do you get it?'" Tom Anderson, Texas Education Agency deputy commissioner, said.

Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum last week sent letters to publishers of five series of health textbooks that were up for adoption, advising them to "delete all reference to venereal diseases and sexually-transmitted diseases."

Bynum said the VD issue was under study and no decision has been made. He said the state Board of Education meets Nov. 13 to adopt the new list of approved textbooks and he will ask then that the decision on health books be postponed until JaFury.

Anderson said, "We've got 1,100 school districts, and what may be an attitude about the public schools delivering that kind of information to students in an urban district may be significantly different from the attitude in a suburban or rural district."

The books in question are for grades 4 through 8. Texas is the second-largest public school textbook market in the nation and VD has been mentioned in two textbooks used in the state since 1974.

School board member Volly Vastine Jr. said Houston residents have been stopping him on the street, saying they don't like the proposal. "I'm a little concerned about it. In my district in Harris County, VD is on the rise," Vastine said.

Texas ranks second in the nation in per capita incidence of infectious syphillis and 12th in reported cases of gonorrhea, according to the State Health Department.

Normally, issues like this are first brought up before the agency's textbook committee, but the VD question was not raised when the committee met during the summer.

David Burton, president of the Texas Association of Textbook Publishers, charged that Bynum's letter meant that he had "arbitrarily and unilaterally" changed policy.

"It's kind of like being in some kind of an athletic contest and halfway through, the rules get changed," he said. He said the publishers followed policies set by the Board of Education last spring, and the books were approved by the textbook committee.

"There is a considerable amount of money involved, and each publisher would like to have their particular share of the money. But I think it's going to come down to whether or not the pot is worth it at some point in time," he said.

Bynum said that the agency's "total staff feels like it serves no purpose" for the VD information to be in the books. "People misunderstand and think textbooks dictate what you teach."

Donna Wood, a Plano health teacher and a member of the textbook committee, said she was "shocked and surprised" that the matter was even under consideration.

"I think especially in the seventh and eighth grade levels they need to know about it. It's a communicable disease and should be taught under that category," she said.

In Fort Worth, state Sen. Betty Andujar said deleting VD references from schoolbooks would be "irresponsible."

"While Commissioner Bynum would require increased emphasis on the danger of rabies — a disease reported in humans twice in the last 10 years — he would omit any reference to venereal diseases which will victmize about one of every four school children prior to their graduation," she said.

Restrictions may lift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Federal Aviation Administration says air traffic restrictions may be lifted several months earlier than planned because the system is rebounding from the controllers' strike better than expected.

Speaking Thursday to the National Aviation Club, J. Lynn Helms said his agency was sticking to its schedule of trying to lift restrictions at most of the 22 largest airports by the end of next year.

Owl's destruction deemed necessary

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) — A great horned owl with a 4-foot wingspan and razor-sharp claws had to be destroyed because it made "a couple dozen" attacks on people in its search for food, police say.

The owl, which had been tamed by an unidentified high school student but got too big to handle, was shot by police Tuesday night and died Wednesday. About 15 people suffered minor injuries in the owl's attacks, including a man who was struck eight times in the head.

COLLINS VS. BENTSEN

WHO WILL BE THE BEST SENATOR FOR OIL AND GAS?

"The Bentsen Tax" — The Wall Street Journal on December 18, 1979, ran an editorial naming the Windfall Profits Tax after the Senator who switched over to vote with the Northeastern liberals and assure its passage. That Senator was Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.
JIM COLLINS fought and voted against the Windfall Profits Tax.

Although the Senate passed a $178 Billion tax, Lloyd Bentsen voted in Conference Committee to add an additional $49 Billion to the tax. The additional tax passed on a 5–4 vote. The deciding vote to raise the tax was Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.
JIM COLLINS opposed this additional tax and voted no.

Bentsen voted to authorize $20 Billion in subsidies for synthetic fuel development. This synthetic fuel would result in gasoline at $2.50 per gallon to consumers when our domestic producers can provide it at half that price.
JIM COLLINS opposed this wasteful expenditure and voted no.

Bentsen led the fight to have natural gas produced and sold in Texas to be under federal regulation for the first time ever. Bentsen also voted for gasoline rationing.
JIM COLLINS opposed both of these measures.

For their records on oil and gas and other issues, leading conservative and moderate groups rank Jim Collins near the top in Congress and Lloyd Bentsen near the bottom. These groups are the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, American Security Council, Americans for Constitutional Action, American Conservative Union and the National Alliance of Senior Citizens.

Pennsylvania candidates judged on feelings for Reagan

Hearst Feature Service

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. — "It's caviar versus kielbasa."

Kolter is on the road, stopping first in Midland, Pa. to watch the sad closing of the once vibrant and bustling Crucible Steel plant which provided employment for 10,000. The fiscally busted city is being kept alive by a $35,000 dole from Sheik Mohammed al-Fassi, the Saudi Arabian prince who has been spreading his wealth around.

The town intends to give the shiek a 1921 Thompson submachine gun as a gift at special "thank you" ceremonies. At the same time, town officials intend to suggest that the flamboyant multi-billionaire purchase and operate the Crucible plant, supposedly one of the most modern in the country.

FROM MIDLAND, Kolter drives to Butler, where the Pullman Co. pulled out last year, leaving thousands jobless and where the sprawling Bethlehem Steel Corp. facilities are now employing only a skeleton crew.

Then Kolter, a husky, 55-year-old former accountant with a reputation for relentless campaigning, heads for Aliquippa, a city with 50 percent unemployment where smoke now pours from only one of the Jones & Laughlin plant's four blast furnaces. Once those furnaces burned around the clock.

Wherever he journeys in this autumn-hued district of western Pennsylvania, Kolter hears tales of economic woe.

Atkinson, a Northern "boll weevil" who supported President Reagan's economic initiatives in Congress, stirred only moderate resentment among his constituents when he decided to become a Republican last year. Since then, however, the deepening recession has caused resentment toward the congressman and one hears him branded a "turncoat" again and again in travels around the distressed area.

BEAVER COUNTY, A sprawling complex of steel mills, coal mines, small towns and farmlands that stretches along the Ohio River, for example, has more than 40,000 fewer jobs than a year ago.

Despite an influx of GOP heavies, including Vice President George Bush and presidential Counsellor Edwin Meese, campaigning and raising money for Atkinson, a White House official concedes that Kolter will likely "cream" the born-again Republican.

"Hell, Atkinson has become the No. 1 target for organized labor," adds the spokesman.

Atkinson's loss is predicted despite a $30,000 a-week-television blitz of campaign advertising which constantly reminds the voter that "Gene Atkinson is courageous and principled and fights for his constituents regardless of the consequences."

"I get out and press the flesh," Kolter says, a smile breaking wide on his face. "I attend picnics, coffee, burger and hot dog parties and canvass plant gates and union halls."

"I DON'T THINK there is a family in this district that hasn't been hurt by Reagan's policies and by Atkinson's votes for it," he adds. "Atkinson's affairs are wine-and-cheese variety and big-money fund raisers."

Atkinson's response is that people tell him "I'm doing what's right."

He insists that he is quite at ease with his Reaganite label because he feels "there's a conservative mood in the country". He says he is happy to be a Republican because Democrats have a tendency of "giving away the store every two years."

As is the case with much of western Pennsylvania, the electorate would seem primed for a backlash against the state's major Republican incumbents, Gov. Richard Thornburgh and U.S. Sen. John Heinz.

But, surprisingly, though Atkinson is in deep political trouble, the two statewide Republican candidates appear to be riding high.

"YOU HAVE TO remember that 70 percent of the people are doing all right for themselves and they are the ones who tend to vote," says Robert Gleason, chairman of a local Republican organization.

Thornburgh, 50, reportedly coasting to a second term, is being aided by several factors, including the fact that very few people in the state can even pronounce the name of his opponent, Rep. Allen E. Ertel.

Ertel will be lucky to raise $1 million for his campaign. Thornburgh, in the meantime, has piled up a $3 million campaign kitty and has been blitzing the television airwaves with his campaign ads.

Heinz is in even better shape. A multi-millionaire who has collected $2.5 million for his campaign, he is opposed by Dr. Cyril Wecht, the Allegheny County commissioner, who is spending about $300,000.

Most people have never heard of Wecht.

"NEITHER ERTEL nor Wecht stand a chance," says Carla Walker of Butler, who has just gotten through attacking Reagan for the nation's economic ills.

In her seventh month of pregnancy, she is involuntarily separated from her husband, who has moved to suburban Washington, D.C. in search of employment.

Steve Lukacs of Mercer describes the economy as "very poor," refuses to blame Reagan, plans to vote for Thornburgh and Heinz, but opposes Atkinson.

Minister thanks America

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir has thanked the United States for helping defeat the Iranian motion to expel Israel from the U.N. General Assembly, the Foreign Ministry said Thursday.

Spokesman Avi Granot said Shamir wrote to Secretary of State George Shultz thanking him "for all the effort the United States put into ensuring the failure of the Iranian motion."

Following a U.S. threat to withdraw from the United Nations and end its financial contribution to the body, 74 nations backed a proposal that no vote be taken on the Iranian motion. Only nine states voted against, and 31 abstained including most of the Arab League and Communist bloc members.

Almanac predicts turnout

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Secretary of State Norma Paulus predicts a turnout of 69 to 71 percent in the Nov. 2 election, based partly on the forecast she got from the Farmer's Almanac.

Mrs. Paulus says she found the almanac is predicting that day will be clear. "If it holds," she said, "we could get the 71 percent turnout."

But even if it turns out to be wrong, she figures the turnout will still be at least 69 percent. "A lot of new registrations are coming in," she explains.

UT to host physics conference

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An international physics conference — the Solway Conference in Physics — will be held at the University of Texas Nov. 8-12.

This will be the first time for the conference to be held outside of Brussels, Belgium, home of the late Ernest Solway, the Belgian industrial chemist who originated the conference in 1911.

The 1982 meeting is being held at UT-Austin in honor of the school's 100th birthday celebration, which begins in January.

Three men appointed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday appointed Davis Ford, Joseph Malina and Gerard Rohlich, all of Austin, to the Governor's Select Committee on Water Quality Standards for Lakes Travis and Austin.

Austin lawyer John Scanlan, a board member of the Lower Colorado River Authority, is chairman of the committee.

Lee's Rebs place playoff hopes against Cougars

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Abilene Cooper is out of the District 4-5A race with a 1-4 league mark and a 2-6 season reading, but there is not a coach in the loop who doesn't pull the bed sheets over the head at night the week they have to play the Cougars.

It will be the 8 p.m. Memorial Stadium task of the 6-2 Midland Lee Rebels to add to the loss column of the Cougars today, and Lee coach Spike Dykes knows his playoff hopeful team is not going to have an easy task.

But a victory, if not a must, is dangerously needed by the Rebels, who are tied with San Angelo and Odessa High for the league's second playoff berth. And it's up to the Halloween pumpkin to turn in a weekend trick or treat for the Rebels.

HISTORY ALSO says the Rebels will have a rough time against Cooper. The Rebs have dropped the last four Memorial Stadium matchups against Cooper. And despite the present record, many think Cooper is the best 2-6 team in the state. For one thing, the Cougars look like a college football team. They have size to burn. They are also the only team in the league to score against Odessa Permian and they did it twice.

"One thing we know for sure is that we can't control how well Cooper will play. We have to take care of our own business and play as well as we can and then we have no gripes coming," notes Dykes.

Lee stayed in the 4-5A second place chase last week with an 8-7 victory over Big Spring in the last 1:40 of play on a 55-yard TD run by sophomore Walter Jones and a two-point conversion run by Greg Woodberry. Dykes looks at that win as a positive sign and not a negative one.

"We didn't play very well and had three crucial turnovers against Big Spring. But the important thing is that we won a game we had to have with our backs to the wall and that is good for our kids. They know they can come back and win when they have to," Dykes said.

"EVERYTHING that has been said about beating Big Spring has been negative this week, but no one says anything when a team like Permian comes from behind late to win and they did that more often than not last year, and we were included in one of those games. Everyone expects it of Permian, but most thought we had lost it. But we didn't and that's important for our kids. It's a good overall sign of our program when you don't play very well, but you still win."

Despite scoring 14 points against Permian last week, Cooper gave up 56 points to Mojo. Cooper led 7-0 and 14-7 in that game.

"With the score tied at 14, we had a long TD run called back and didn't get any points. Permian scores on us to take the lead and we fumble the kickoff and they score again. It was a big psychological let down for our team," said Cooper coach Ray Overton.

"Lee is in second place and I think they have the inside track to getting to the playoffs. They have amazing speed and can burn you at any time. The Big Spring game was a good example. Lee can strike from anywhere on the field. This is a big game for Lee and that also gives them a tremendous advantage. But we are looking forward to playing Lee because we have always played good games against them."

IF LEE is to keep its bright playoff flame burning through Halloween, the Rebels must stop two of the district's heavyweight runners. Cooper features junior fullback Allen Gunter at 220 pounds and senior tailback Michael T. Royals at 240 pounds. Gunter is the league's third leading rusher with 639 yards and five touchdowns while Royals ranks fifth with 466 yards and four TDs.

Lee's Paul Cox is the leading Lee rusher with less than 300 yards rushing, but the Rebels rank second in 4-5A in total offense. Lee's "No Name" attack features a bevy of running backs, seven of which have gained over 100 yards rushing this year. And now the addition of Jones gives the Rebels even more firepower and the sophomore is one of the bright spots to the Lee future.

Defensively, Lee ranks sixth overall in the eight team league while Cooper ranks seventh. That could mean a big scoring game tonight, but both teams have been involved in some low scoring outings. If there was ever a mystery game in the loop this year, this has to be the one.

WHILE THE Lee football team can't afford to caught watching the district scoreboard Friday, Lee fans will also be keeping an ear tuned to the San Angelo-Odessa High game tonight. Lee must have a loss by Odessa High in the next two weeks to keep its own playoff hopes in line. However, OHS plays Permian next week. Still, Lee would be in a much more secure stance with a San Angelo victory and a win of its own heading into the final roundup next week against Midland High.

The fans will be in for a super treat tonight. The University of Texas marching band will perform following the game and the Midland Freshman band will entertain prior to the game. Both the Cooper and Lee bands will perform at halftime.

The UT band is on its way to Lubbock for the Texas-Texas Tech matchup Saturday in Jones Stadium, and are using Midland as a warmup spot. They did this two years ago and almost no fans left after the game.

It's Halloween's Trick or Treat time in District 4-5A

MHS forces volleyball playoff with San Angelo

Bulldogs rip Lee to tie Bobcats for first place

By CHAD PUERLING

The Midland High girls volleyball team left no doubt they wanted at least half the District 4-AAAAA title as they pounded the Midland Lee Rebels 15-5, 15-4 Thursday night at the MHS gym.

The Bulldogs went into the final regular season game tied with San Angelo for the district championship with an 11-2 record.

The Bobcats were in Big Spring taking on the Steers in hopes of keeping their half of the championship in tact. San Angelo had a tougher time than Midland, but prevailed with a 16-14, 16-14 victory, forcing a single match playoff.

The district title will be decided with a best two-out-of-three game match played Monday at Big Spring High School at 7 p.m.

Both teams are in the playoffs. Monday's winner will go as the first place team and the loser will advance as the second place team.

IN THE first game, Midland pulled to an 8-0 lead and led by eight again at 13-5, before closing out the Rebels. Lee's main problem was handling the Bulldogs' service game. The Rebels failed to return a single serve until they were down 4-0.

For the Bulldogs, Sheila Christian had three service points and finished out the game with a mashing spike. Teresa Haney also served strongly for the Bulldogs with three points coming off her serve.

The Rebels started the second game much stronger, but on the scoreboard the outcome was worse.

As in the first game, the Rebels had a tough time with the Bulldogs' service game and fell behind 7-0. Their own scoring drive haulted at three points and the Bulldogs pulled to a 11-3 lead.

Lee squeezed out their final point on Susan Stone's service before Midland closed out the game.

Captain Penny Griffin led the Bulldogs with a service winner and two spikes while Christain and Laura Sherman had two service winners each.

With the victory, the Bulldogs finish the district race with 12-2 record while the Rebels fell to 3-11.

In the junior varsity game, the Rebels had to come from behind to take the intra-city rivalry 11-15, 15-9, 15-10.

IN THEIR first encounter with the Bobcats, the Bulldogs lost deisively 15-7, 15-8.

"We just froze in San Angelo," said MHS coach Linda Jolly. "But I told these girls all I wanted was for them to improve every game, and they've done that."

Last week, Midland High avenged the early season loss, defeating San Angelo 15-13, 9-15, 15-13 to tie-up the district race.

"We can play with anyone one now," Jolly said. "And I think the playoff with San Angelo is going to be a great match between two strong teams."

This year's 22-6 record is Jolly's best since taking over the helm in 1980.

In her first year, the World History teacher lead the Bulldogs to a 22-9 record and second a place finish in district. Last year the Bulldo s fell to fourth in loop play with a 17-14 season.

Lawyers take over NFL negotiations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League players' strike has moved into its 39th day with attorneys replacing players as the key figures in the dispute that has left the 1982 season in jeopardy.

Jack Donlan, the club owners' chief negotiator, met with National Labor Relations Board General Counsel William A. Lubbers for nearly five hours Thursday to explain the owners' refusal to negotiate on the union's demand for a wage scale.

Donlan was accompanied by Sargent Karch, chief counsel for the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining agent, and Betty Southard Murphy. Murphy, an NLRB chairman during the administration of President Gerald Ford, is considered an expert on how the Board operates.

On Oct. 21, Lubbers said he would seek an injunction to force the management council to bargain on the union's demand for a wage scale. Lubbers said the league's insistence that the union drop its demand for a wage scale as an alternative to individual bargaining was a violation of labor laws.

Negotiations for a new bargaining agreement are scheduled to resume Saturday in New York, ending a seven-day recess.

"We gave Lubbers an update on the talks," Donlan said. "The meeting was to give us an opportunity to give our side of the story concerning the complaint."

If Lubbers proceeds with his plans to seek an injunction in federal court and it is granted, management presumably would be bound to bargain with the union on the wage scale. In arguing against the injunction, Donlan has said the proposed wage scale would end a team's right to enter into individual negotiations with its players.

Last week, Karch said the council was prepared to battle Lubbers, if necessary, to the Supreme Court.

The injunction, if sought, would have no effect on a hearing before an NLRB administrative law judge on Nov. 15.

The hearing's purpose is to determine if the management council's failure to negotiate in good faith with the union, as the NLRB has charged, has caused the strike to be prolonged, as the NLRB has further charged.

If an administrative law judge agrees with NLRB regional director Daniel Silverman, who filed the complaint, the league would be barred from hiring permanent replacements for the striking players.

The players have been on strike since Sept. 21.

Britton nails down 11th City golf title

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Susan Britton nailed down her 11th Women's City Championship golf title at Hogan Park Thursday afternoon with a 3-2 match play victory over Mary Robinson as she continues to dominate the Tall City golf scene.

High, gusty winds and cool weather marred play somewhat, but it seems to make no difference to Britton what the conditions are or who the opponents are. She always seems to come out on top.

The only time Britton doesn't win the city title or a club title at Midland Country Club is when she doesn't enter, like the three straight years she didn't enter this event several years ago.

However, Robinson claims she was no pushover in the 1982 finals with Britton. "I didn't play all that well and I didn't have any birdies, but I want it known that I scared her (Britton) to death out there today. She is such a nice, nice lady and a great player, but I had visions of setting a little history here with an upset."

Britton took the title in stride as usual. She didn't even know if this was her 11th title or not. "I think 11 is right, but I would have to check. I know that sounds awful, but I've lost track. There was three years I didn't play in this tournament, but I've won all the other.

"The wind bothered me today. I seem to race with the wind on my swing when it is windy, but I scored pretty well in the tournament. I missed some shots, but Mary missed one more than I did and that was the difference. My only birdie was on number 10, but it put me two up at that point and that's a good place to be going into the last holes."

Britton was three strokes up with 17 and 18 left to play and that meant another title in the hip pocket. Britton also had match play victories over Nina Coalter and Jo Dickson on the way to her 11th title. Dickson won consolation honors with a 6-5 win over Coalter Thursday.

None of the match play action went extra holes Thursday, but Jane Thomas won a hard fought 2-1 win over Charlotte Marburger in the first flight and Betty Jones took a 1-up victory over Marilynn Philpy in the third flight. None of the other matches for titles were all that close.

In consolation play, Dede Plank's 2-1 decision over Helen Brandt in the first flight was close as was Jean Elkin's 1-up second flight consolation win over Clara Christy.

Fourth Flight: Phyllis Maxwell def. Edie Stahl, 6-5. Consolation: Toni McMillian def. Ruthie Owens, 4-3.

Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry paid a 20-minute visit to the Permian Basin Thursday while travelling with state comptroller candidate Mike Richards. Landry still has hopes of an NFL season.

Mustangs, Aggies to lock horns on TV

By The Associated Press

Bobby Collins and Jackie Sherrill, the two newest Southwest Conference football coaches, trade strategy Saturday in Texas Stadium before the regional television cameras and an expected 60,000 fans.

Collins' Southern Methodist Mustangs are fourth-ranked and 7-0 while Sherrill's Texas Aggies have struggled to a 4-3 ledger.

Oddsmakers have rated the defending SWC champions 10-point favorites over the Aggies in the 11:35 a.m. homecoming game which will be beamed over CBS.

In other SWC games, Arkansas was a 30-point pick over Rice; Houston was a 7-point nod over Texas Christian in the Astrodome; Texas was a 7-point favorite over Texas Tech in Lubbock; and Baylor was a 5-point favorite over Tulane in the Superdome at New Orleans.

Collins, asked about going against Sherrill, said, "This is a game between the players. I won't make a single tackle or block and I'm sure Jackie won't either."

Collins' biggest concern is all the talk about a possible showdown of unbeatens when Arkansas comes to Texas Stadium Nov. 20 to play SMU.

"We can't afford the luxury of looking past anybody," said Collins. "We've not run away with any conference game."

Collins said of the Aggies, "They continue to improve each week. Jackie had some injuries early but the mark of a good coach is not to let it get you down."

The Aggies were sure to be pumped up for the Mustangs.

"We are going to have to play our best to beat them," said center Matt Darwin.

Wide receiver Don Jones said, "There will be no trouble getting up for a team that is undefeated and ranked in the top five in the country."

Quarterback Gary Kubiak of A&M, who threw five touchdown passes last week, said "We have confidence now ... we'll need to control the tempo of the game ... the key will be to keep them off-balance."

Some 50,000 fans were expected in Lubbock as the Red Raiders break out their colored home jersies after four straight weeks on the road.

"I'll have to check and see if we still have colored jersies," said Tech Coach Jerry Moore. "Our white ones look like they have been through a war. We are going to have to replace about 15 of them."

The Raiders are coming off a 10-3 loss to Washington, ranked No. 1 at the time. The Huskies' near loss dropped them to second in The Associated Press poll behind Pittsburgh.

John thinks Billy Martin is a Yankee

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"I offered to make a bet a long time ago that Billy Martin would be back as manager of the Yankees," said Tommy John. "And if he comes back and gets fired a third time, he will come back again.

"Billy is ideal for the Yankees — the only manager I've seen in baseball who is a personality. How much was attendance down this year — half a million? Billy would make that up easily."

John, a World Series pitcher for the Dodgers and Yankees before going to the California Angels late this year and helping them into the playoffs, crossed the Hudson from his New Jersey home Thursday to visit another famous fellow Hoosier whom he had never met, Bobby Knight.

KNIGHT, basketball coach of Indiana University and the U.S. 1984 Olympic team, was in New York to a series of basketball vignettes he will air in connection with college basketball games to be shown on the Katz Sports cable network.

With baseball involved in a dizzying game of managerial "Musical Chairs," the conversation strayed from slam dunks and fastbreaks to the unstable life of baseball's dugout strategists.

"I always said I'd never take a job coaching or managing where players make more money than I do," commented Knight. "That's why I've never been tempted to go into the pros."

"I agree," said Tommy, a million-dollar all-star who has served under some of the game's best-known skippers.

Everybody was pressing Tommy on whether he thought Billy would return to Yankee Stadium after two firings and who he thought might replace Gene Mauch, who surprisingly resigned after failing to get the Angels into the World Series.

SOMEBODY SUGGESTED that there were reports Martin might wind up with the Angels.

John shrugged.

"I don't know," he said. "I know that John McNamara (former manager of the Cincinnati Reds) has been mentioned. He has the kind of laid-back personality needed for a team of all-stars such as the Angels. As I say, I think chemically Martin is ideal for New York.

"Also, if I had the decision to make, I'd think twice before not letting Clyde King stay on the job. He is one heck of a manager who came to the Yankees under a cloud that he was George Steinbrenner's stooge and and maybe a spy. He dispelled those notions very quickly.

"He's his own man, firm but fair. Ask anybody on the team — King is a fine manager."

John, 39, whose career was given new life when a tendon from his right arm was implanted in a ruptured left elbow in 1974, is a 20-year major league veteran whose career has spanned stints with Cleveland, the Chicago White Sox, Dodgers, Yankees and now Angels.

Asked if he was surprised at Mauch's sudden resignation.

"Yes, I was," he said. "I think it would have been different if Gene had told everybody right off in the playoffs that he was going with a three-man rotation — (Bruce) Kison, (Geoff) Zahn and myself. As it was, he took a lot of heat for the way he handled pitchers in losing three games after winning the first two."

JOHN SAID when he joined the Angels Aug. 31, he expected to find a manager who threw tantrums and turned over tables.

"Just the opposite," he added. "He was very controlled. He laughed and joked with the guys. I told him he reminded me of Eddie Stanky, whom I greatly admired — always analyzing, always thinking."

John said he didn't know of any tensions that may have developed earlier but he found the Angels one of the loosest and friendliest clubhouses he had ever seen.

"Everybody's a star on that team, loaded with MVPs. They're not cocky but confidently assured. No hangups.

How did they compare with the Yankees?

"The Yankees tried to change philosophies," he said. "They had always won on left-handed power because of the Stadium. They tried to shift to hit-and-run stuff and speed, but the guys didn't run."

Can Billy Martin rectify that?

"Well, Billy can't hit for them and he can't run for them," John replied. "But, if he got a green light, he might design a club fitted to the park — as Whitey Herzog did in St. Louis.

"But that may not matter. Billy is combative, aggressive. He'll put people in the ballpark. That's what George wants."

Landry is hoping there is a season

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

While his Dallas Cowboys search for the elusive wage scale money bonanza, Coach Tom Landry continues to find things to do — like hitting the campaign trail.

Landry was travelling with state comptroller candidate Mike Richards Thursday and when they hit Air Terminal for a 20-minute press conference, no one seemed too sure just who the real candidate was. Landry is always the center of attention and it would seem at first glance that the NFL player strike was a more meaty issue than whether Bob Bullock or Richards is the state comptroller.

"Since I'm kind of unemployed right now, I can help out with some of the campaigns. I'm not a politician. I'm a citizen who happens to coach a football team," Landry said.

HE STILL spends his time planning for games and hoping that the strike will come to an end soon. Still, Landry seems to be taking the strike in stride as most of the fans.

"The only real problem I'm having is finding something to do on Sundays. My wife loves the strike. She sees me every weekend," Landry noted. "The fans are adjusting. The golf courses in Dallas love the strike. They've never had so many Sunday afternoon golfers."

But can an agreement between the owners and players be made quickly enough to have any kind of adequate season? Landry thinks so.

"We really need some decision by Nov. 7. If you pass that date, I don't think we can have a smooth transition because you might have a season of less than 12 games and that might not be good. Ed Garvey (head of the players' union) says we can play through Feburary if needed, but I think you would have to see what the reaction would be from the TV people before you could say that.

"The season can be saved, and I think it will. But there has to be a breakthrough first. The best thing that could happen is if someone says we can throw away the wage scale idea and come up with a good plan of how to divide $1.6 billion that has been offered. I think I could do that. Still, I think you will see the Cowboys play again this season."

LANDRY WOULD side with neither players nor owners, saying, "I have sympathy for both sides because I've been on both sides of the fence. I was a player once, you know.

"If this season is lost, it's the players in their 30s who I worry about because they will never recapture that money. The younger players may find it tough making it this year, but their future is in front of them."

Asked how long it would take to get a team ready to play a game if a settlement is reached, Landry replied, "Well, we could play tomorrow, but it wouldn't be a very good game.

"I would feel comfortable with 10 days, but I don't think we would get that much time. I think we will play the following Sunday after a settlement. I don't think we would have any trouble with injuries if we had 10 days to prepare."

Landry thinks the Cowboys will be one of the hardest teams hit if the strike ends. "It will be harder for running teams and teams with coordinated defenses to get back in the groove and we fit both cases. I'm not saying the Cowboys will lose, just that it will be harder for us than say San Francisco or San Diego."

But Landry is itching to get back to playing football, drawing the Xs and Os of victory. But with each passing day, that possibility seems to be passing.

Landry's major comment was, "It would be a sad thing if we had to shut off the season. I think most everyone wants us to play football."

MHS Bullpups fall to Eagles, 20-14

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

What had been a low scoring struggle through three quarters of play turned into a wild finish Thursday night as Abilene High posted a 20-14 junior varsity victory over Midland High in District 4-5A play at Memorial Stadium.

Trailing 6-0 going into the final quarter, the Bullpups came up with a big break when Tom Cowles led a defensive charge and ended up blocking an Abilene High punt deep in Eagle territory and Mike Stanton fell on the ball in the end zone to tie the game at 6-6.

The Bullpups elected to go for the two-point conversion and came up with it to go ahead 8-6 when quarterback James Wellborn hit Darren Thorpe. There was only 6:26 left on the clock when MHS scored, but it started a scoring spree for both teams.

The Bullpups came roaring back down field after the Abilene touchdown and reached the AHS four-yard line with four minutes left on the clock. The Eagles dug in and held the Bullpups for the first three plays until, on fourth-and-1 on the one, Wellborn punched the ball across the goal line to give the Bullpups a 14-12 lead. The pass for two points failed.

Abilene High wasn't finished yet. Quarterback Tim Davis hit David Gonzales on a short pass completion at the MHS 30 near the sideline and Gonzales immediately turned around and flipped a pitch to Richard Hill who capped the flea-flicker by scoring the final touchdown of the game with only 54 seconds left to play. Brett Bourland added the two-point conversion on a pass from Davis.

It was Hill who broke open a scoreless deadlock with 2:23 remaining in the first half when he slipped free from the MHS defense and scored a 30-yard run. The run attempt for two failed for a 6-0 score, a score that didn't change again until the fourth quarter.

The loss dropped Midland High to 3-5 on the season and evened their 4-5A record at 3-3. Thursday the Bullpups will conclude 1982 play when they host cross-town Midland Lee at 7 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Meanwhile, the Midland Lee sophomores ended the 1982 season Thursday night with a 41-21 victory over Lamesa to complete a perfect 9-0 season.

The Lee sophs had a game scheduled with the Midland High sophomores for next Tuesday, but MHS has decided not play a sophomore game and will still face the Lee JV on Thursday.

Lee jumped to a 19-0 lead against Lamesa and led 41-7 before giving up two late TDs to Lamesa. Earl Davis scored two first half touchdowns on a 30-yard run and a 10-yard pass from quarterback Dirk Bergoon and Gabriel Payan scored on second half TD runs of five and one yards.

Randy Ellis opened the third quarter with a 25-yard TD romp. Lee also got a touchdown from Poole Webb on a fumble recovery in the end zone after a kickoff and Greg Golden was credited with a safety after tackling a Lamesa runner in the end zone. Craig Kamradt kicked two extra points in the win.

Lamesa scored a first half touchdown on a blocked punt and scored twice more late in the game to close out the scoring.

Cunningham Oilers off to fast start with two semi-pro football victories

BIG SPRING — The Cunningham Oilers, a semi-pro football team that replaced the West Texas Stockmen in Big Spring (before they even played a game), are off to a fast start, winning the first two games of the season.

Saturday, the Oilers will be after win No. 3 when they travel to Wichita, Kan., for a 7:30 p.m. game.

The Oilers posted a 23-20 victory over the Longview Trailblazers in their season opener two weeks ago and came back last Saturday with a 12-7 victory over the Oklahoma Drillers.

In that game, Midlander Ronald Geffry, runningback, opened the game's scoring with a 38-yard touchdown run for the Oilers. In the third quarter, Odessan Mark Chote blocked a punt deep in Driller territory and Midland's LeRoy Brown picked it up and carried it 20 yards into the end zone for the winning score.

The Oilers will be on the road until Nov. 20 when they will make their debut in Big Spring at Memorial Stadium.

Tony Conigliaro has pneumonia

BOSTON (AP) — Ten months ago, Tony Conigliaro had no detectable pulse or blood pressure. Three months ago, he was making progress in his speech and mobility.

But now, his cardiologist says, respiratory problems have brought his improvement to a "standstill" and put his rehabilitation therapy on "a low burner."

Dr. Max Kaulbach said Thursday a tube inserted in Conigliaro's throat shortly after he suffered a heart attack Jan. 9 that plunged him into a coma has caused scarring and narrowing of his windpipe.

As a result, the former Boston Red Sox slugger became more susceptible to infection. On Tuesday, he began his second stay in the past two months in Salem Hospital for treatment of pneumonia.

High schooler dies from injury

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — A 16-year-old Baxter Springs, Kan., football player who had been in a coma since suffering a head injury in a weekend football game has died.

Gregg Adams died Thursday at St. John's Regional Medical Center of injuries suffered in the game last Friday. A hospital spokesman said he had suffered subdural hematoma, or ruptured blood vessels near the brain.

Adams had been in a coma since collapsing on the sidelines after leaving the game against Columbus, Kan. Doctors restored his breathing and rushed him to St. John's, where he had been listed in critical condition.

Baxter Springs Coach Clark Hall said a review of game films did not reveal the cause of the injury.

The Baxter Springs coaching staff voted Tuesday night to forfeit the final two games of the season.

Peete's accuracy pays off

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Calvin Peete, noted by his peers as golf's most accurate player, again lived up to his reputation.

It was on the ninth hole in Thursday's opening round. His second shot hit the cup on the fly and he holed out a 148-yard 6-iron shot for an eagle 2 that helped him into a share of the first round lead in the season-ending $400,000 Walt Disney World Classic.

"Playing good like this for the last few weeks, I'm fired up. I'm pumped up as much as I can be."

NBA opens season with 11 games

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers start their drive tonight to become the first National Basketball Association team in 14 years to repeat as league champions, while the Cleveland Cavaliers hope to just win their first game and stay clear of the record book.

With 11 games on tap opening night, only the Milwaukee Bucks among the 23 NBA teams will not see action Friday.

The season starts with Chicago at New Jersey, Philadelphia at New York, Boston at Cleveland, Atlanta at Detroit, Washington at Indiana, Portland at Kansas City, Dallas at Denver, San Antonio at Utah, Phoenix at San Diego, Golden State at Los Angeles and Houston at Seattle. Milwaukee opens Saturday night at home against the Knicks.

Not since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics won the NBA title has a team won the championship two years in a row. The Lakers, who won in 1980 and last season, will have much the same cast of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Earvin "Magic" Johnson, Jamaal Wilkes, Norm Nixon and Bob McAdoo, and one major addition, top NBA draft pick James Worthy of the University of North Carolina.

The Cavaliers, 15-67 last season, also have virtually the same squad as last season, when they lost their last 19 games. That was one short of the NBA record of 20 set by the 1973 Philadelphia 76ers.

"It's going to be tough with no draft picks until 2003," new Coach Tom Nissalke said, referring to owner Ted Stepien's tendency to trade draft choices for veterans. "This is the toughest challenge of my career. I'm trying to convince the players of the importance of consistency. We're not going to go goofy no matter what happens."

Center James Edwards, forwards Cliff Robinson and Scott Wedman and guards Geoff Huston and Ron Brewer will start against the Celtics, who have added guard Quinn Buckner to their already powerhouse team.

In exchange for Buckner, the Celtics traded Dave Cowens, a star for Boston during the 1970s who hasn't played in two years.

Despite the addition of Worthy to a team that lost only two games in the playoffs last season, Lakers Coach Pat Riley doesn't forsee an easy road to another title.

"There are two major ingredients that contribute to the fact that an NBA champion has not repeated since 1969," Riley said. "First, everybody plays much harder against you every night. Games in December become like championship games, and it's difficult to sustain that through the playoffs.

"Second is the mental attitude. The team has to grow closer, because it will be challenged like never before. The team must form a solidarity."

NBA slashes through last minute cuts

By The Associated Press

Lionel Hollins will be playing for the San Diego Clippers this season. Kevin Porter and Reggie Carter, meanwhile, might not be playing at all.

They were involved in last-minute transactions Thursday as National Basketball Association teams got down to the 12-player limit for the opening of the season tonight.

The Philadelphia 76ers reached the limit by grudgingly shipping Hollins to the Clippers for two draft choices.

"It was a tough decision," said 76ers General Manager Pat Williams. "But to go with five veteran guards was an impossible situation from a playing standpoint. The four guards we have left are good enough. So, after long debate, we went ahead and traded Hollins."

The 30-year-old Hollins, in his seventh season, played on Portland's NBA champions in 1977 and is recognized as one of the league's better defensive guards. In return for Hollins, the 76ers will get San Diego's fourth-round pick next year and second-round selection in 1984.

The Clippers were busy Thursday. They further bolstered their backcourt by signing free agent Randy Smith, a two-time selection to the NBA All-Star Game. The 33-year-old Smith, who entered last season with a career scoring average of 18.2 points a game, averaged 10.0 for the Knicks last season.

Meanwhile, Porter was waived by the Washington Bullets along with swingmen Carlos Terry and Garry Witts. The Bullets also placed guard Kevin Grevey on the injured reserve list.

Porter, a nine-year NBA veteran guard, tore an Achilles tendon during training camp last year and was out of action the entire season. He led the NBA in assists the year before, averaging 9.1 per game.

Carter was cut by the Knicks, losing his job to rookies Edmund Sherod and Trent Tucker, the Knicks' No. 1 draft pick. The Knicks also placed forwards Campy Russell and Toby Knight on the injured reserve list to get down to the 12-player limit.

In other developments, the Cleveland Cavaliers asked for waivers on guard Lowes Moore and placed guard James Silas and forward Richard Washington on the injured reserve list. The Milwaukee Bucks placed guard Charlie Criss on injured reserve.

The Phoenix Suns put rookie forward Charles Pittman on waivers and placed second-year swingman Craig Dykema on the injured reserve list. Center-forward Eric Fernsten was placed on waivers by the Boston Celtics. The New Jersey Nets placed forward Mike O'Koren on the injured list, trimming their roster to 12.

Also, guard Terry Duerod signed a contract with the Golden State Warriors, but backcourtmen Michael Ray Richardson and Lester Connor remained absentees.

It's countdown time for SWC coaches

AN AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — If you think Bobby Collins and Lou Holtz are feeling the pressure of possible unbeaten seasons, what about the nerves of F.A. Dry and Ray Alborn?

Collins, the SMU coach, and Holtz, the Arkansas coach, at least don't have to worry about their jobs.

Dry, the Texas Christian coach, and Alborn, the Rice coach, have come increasingly under the gun as the football programs at these two private universities slip behind the rest of the Southwest Conference schools.

Dry has been at TCU six years and until this season the Horned Frogs had never won more than two games.

When TCU beat Baylor 38-14 Saturday, it gave Dry his third victory this season.

"I'm under pressure this year," Dry admits.

How many games does he have to win to save Dry's job? Nobody knows for sure. The Frogs have Houston, Texas Tech, Texas and Texas A&M left on the schedule. To be safe Dry had better win them all.

TCU

The Horned Frogs have won two out of their last three games in their "Save-F.A." stretch run. Over that stretch the suddenly hot TCU offense has averaged over 400 yards and 21 points per game. This week's Houston game is a biggie for Dry. The reason: TCU has never beaten Houston.

RICE

Alborn has run out of miracles. He has lost eight players off his first two teams to injuries and no school, least of all depth-thin Rice, can afford it. Alborn, who has two years left to go on his contract, isn't happy at Rice where he is at cross-purposes with some members of the administration. Alborn has pulled off some big upsets the last two years, including LSU, Arkansas, and Houston. But color him gone if the right opportunity comes along.

SMU

Collins is happy and SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch couldn't be more pleased with the man he selected to replace Ron Meyer.

ARKANSAS

While the lack of recruiting zest has been criticized, Holtz quiets all his critics with victory after victory. Again, speculation has him No. 1 on Ohio State's list should Earle Bruce, the current coach, get the chop. What is it Holtz says about chances? They are just temporary employees.

TEXAS

Fred Akers disarmed the anti-Akers posse by beating Alabama in the Cotton Bowl last year. But watch what happens if Texas has a sinking spell the second-half of the 1982 season. The posse will be saddling up again.

TEXAS A&M

Some columnists like to write his name Jackie $herrill. At $250,000 a year for six years or so, Sherrill says write it any way you want to. Hot money has not meant instant success for the Aggies, who are 4-3. The Aggies haven't been to the Cotton Bowl since 1967. Can you imagine what Sherrill will make if he ever gets them there?

BAYLOR

It's been a difficult season for the dean of SWC coaches, Grant Teaff, now in his 11th season. With two Cotton Bowl teams and four SWC Coach-of-the-Year awards, Teaff doesn't have to wonder where his next paycheck will come from.

HOUSTON

The highly respected Bill Yeoman is also having a down season. A steady succession of Top Ten teams such as Miami, Arizona State, SMU and Arkansas has ground down the Cougars. If Houston ever decided to get rid of Yeoman, the father of the Veer Offense wouldn't have any trouble finding a job, fast. Besides a master strategist, he's excellent at recruiting the inner city Houston schoolboys.

TEXAS TECH

After a 1-10 start in 1981, Jerry Moore has brought the Red Raider faithful three victories and almost upset the nation's No. 1-ranked team, Washington, losing 10-3. The Red Raiders did get some pleasure out of knocking the Huskies down to No. 2 in The Associated Press Poll. Moore is on solid ground with the Red Raider alumni who consider him more like one of their own, not aloof and distant as some former Tech coaches were perceived.

Judge jails Reese for cocaine use

MIAMI (AP) — Telling the former National Football League player he had "blown it," a judge ordered ex-Miami Dolphin Don Reese to prison for at least six months for violating his probation by using cocaine.

"I don't know whether this is right or wrong," Dade Circuit Judge Ellen Morphonios Gable told a courtroom packed with reporters, television cameramen and spectators. "But I have to do what I think is right."

The judge Thursday gave Reese an indeterminate sentence of six months to five years. Under the rarely-used law, the Florida Department of Corrections will determine how much time the former defensive lineman serves.

Mrs. Gable also ordered Reese to be enrolled in a prison drug program. She allowed him to remain free until Jan. 11, when he is to report to her courtroom.

Prosecutor George Yoss, who said Reese could be paroled after serving three months, told the judge he was impressed that Reese had pleaded guilty without making any deals, knowing he could go to prison for as long as 34 years and that the decision would be made by a judge with a tough reputation.

"He pleaded guilty and he wanted to face the medicine," Yoss said. "That impressed me more than what anybody else said about Don Reese."

The defense pleaded for probation.

Reese, who will testify against former Dolphin Mercury Morris next week, and ex-teammate Randy Crowder were sentenced to one year in jail and four more years of probation in 1977 after selling cocaine to undercover police officers.

In June, five weeks before his probation ended, Reese told the magazine of cocaine use in jail and after his return to the NFL with New Orleans and San Diego.

Unbeaten powers face major grid tests

Washington, Southern Methodist and Arizona State, three of the nation's six unbeaten and untied college football teams, face major obstacles Saturday, while the other three — Pitt, Georgia and Arkansas — should continue their winning ways without working up a sweat.

Arizona State, lowest of the Super Six in The Associated Press ratings — the Sun Devils are ranked No.7 — faces perhaps the biggest hurdle of all. The Sun Devils entertain 12th-ranked Southern California at night in what might be termed the Probation Bowl.

Southern Cal can be on television this season but is ineligible for the Pacific-10 Conference title and a post-season bowl game. Arizona State, meanwhile, is taboo for the TV networks during the regular season, but can win the Pac-10 title and go the Rose Bowl — or any bowl, for that matter — since its sentence expires before Jan. 1.

"We're probably the best team they've played so far this season and they're the best we've played," said Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, whose team lost to Florida and beat Oklahoma and Stanford. "This is the kind of game where talking doesn't mean a lot. You just go out and play it."

DESPITE THE records (Arizona State is 7-0, Southern Cal 5-1), the rankings and the fact that the game is at Tempe, Ariz., the Trojans are 1½-point favorites. The choice here is ... Arizona State 20-14.

Last week's score was 39 right, eight wrong and one tie for a percentage of .830. For the year, it's 280-86-11 —.765. Against the line, however, last week's record was only 12-18, .400, dropping the count for the season to 102-103—.498.

Louisville at No. 1 Pitt (no line): Louisville was trounced 55-14 by Temple, a team which lost by 21 points to ... Pitt 38-14.

No. 2 Washington (favored by 5½) at Stanford: The Huskies have been sluggish the past two weeks, perhaps looking ahead to a three-game stretch against Stanford, UCLA and Arizona State ... Washington 27-21.

Memphis State at No. 3 Georgia (no line): The nation's longest major college losing streak reaches 15 games ... Georgia 42-7.

Texas A&M at No. 4 Southern Methodist (10½): The Mustangs are coming off hard-fought victories over Houston and Texas and the spread seems a little top-heavy ... SMU 24-17.

RICE AT No. 5 Arkansas (30): You've got to feel for Ray Alborn, one of the nice guys in the coaching business; the Owls are 0-7, with SMU on deck after ... Arkansas 45-14.

No. 6 Nebraska (24) at Kansas: The Cornhuskers may be hurting, but not as badly as the Jayhawks ... Nebraska 34-7.

No. 8 Penn State (7½) at Boston College: B.C. has surprised Texas A&M and Clemson this year, beating the former and tying the latter. But after struggling with Rutgers and Army the past two weeks, the Eagles may be out of their league against ... Penn State 24-14.

No. 9 Alabama (14) vs. Mississippi State at Jackson: Wich is the real Crimson Tide: the one that flattened Penn State or the one that stumbled against Tennessee? Probably somewhere in between ... Alabama 27-17.

Maryland at No. 10 North Carolina (7½): Maryland is 5-2 and has won five in a row, but the Tar Heels figure to be too tough ... North Carolina 27-10.

Oregon At No. 11 UCLA (22): Oregon goes from one of the worst passing teams (Notre Dame) to one of the best in ... UCLA 38-14.

Mississippi at No. 13 LSU (11): When is LSU's bubble going to burst? Upset Special of the Week ... Ole Miss 27-24.

NO. 14 Florida State at No. 16 Miami (2½): The Seminoles won't score on the Hurricanes like they did against Southern Illinois and East Carolina ... Miami 24-17.

No. 17 Oklahoma (22) at Colorado: The Sooners have gone to the 'I' formation, and the 'I' has it ... Oklahoma 35-10.

No. 19 Auburn at Florida (4): Just what the Gators' crippled secondary needs; a running team ... Florida 21-14.

Minnesota at No. 20 Michigan (21): The Big Ten Conference no longer is the Big Two and the Little Eight, it's the Mediocre Three — Illinois, Ohio State and ... Michigan 42-14.

Texas (7) at Texas Tech: For good measure, a Fourth Upset Special ... Texas Tech 24-21.

California (9) at Oregon State: Getting carried away now. Fifth Upset Special ... Oregon State 21-17.

SAN REMO, Italy (AP) — Marvin Hagler doesn't consider the possibility of losing his world middleweight boxing title when he fights Venezuelan challenger Fulgencio Obelmejias in this Italian Riviera resort.

"It cannot happen. I already defeated Obelmejias once and it is usually easier for me to down an opponent in the second fight," Hagler told The Associated Press Thursday after completing preparation for his fifth title defense.

Hagler said he was prepared to go the full 15 rounds on Sunday, but added, "I am certain that the bout will not last more than 10 rounds. I am going to win by knockout."

Hagler, who postponed the fight with Obelmejias twice — first because of a sore rib and then because of his daughter's illness — was one pound above the 160-pound limit as he ended hard training.But his manager, Goody Petronelli, emphasized there was nothing to worry about.

"We deliberately keep Marvin slightly overweight before the fight. He will be all right by Saturday's weigh-in," Petronelli said.

Both fighters have knockout power. Hagler has stoppeed 46 of 59 career opponents while Obelmejias has knocked out 35 of 40.

ClayDesta National off to solid start

By DAVID C. SODAMANN
Energy-Business Editor

ClayDesta National Bank became Midland's newest cache for cash when its doors opened for business Friday morning. The bank, located at the corner of Wadley and Big Spring, is the city's nineth.

Clayton Williams, chairman of the ClayDesta National board, said the one word he best likes to use when describing the new bank is "solid."

"We're in it for the long pull," Williams said. "It's going to be a quality, solid — solid outfit.

"We're interested in 10 years from now, rather than next year. We're not in a hurry to grow, we want to do it right ... step-by-step."

Williams, who pursues the oil business with panache, is taking a gray flannel approach to banking.

He said when he puts his wild catter's hat on, "sometimes I'm a wildman," but when he dons his banker's cover he's as conservative as they come.

"We're going to be a square shootin' bank," Williams said.

David Jones, the bank's president, elaborated on Williams' solidness theme. "No Midland bank has ever started with as much capital as we did," Jones said.

ClayDesta National is being built on a $4 million financial foundation. In comparision, Midland American Bank, another of the Tall City's new banks, opened last summer with but $1 million in the coffers.

In addition to starting off solid, ClayDesta National is starting off big.

The bank is staffed, Jones said, by seven officers and 16 other employees. A typical new suburban bank, he explained, would more likely employ a staff of six or seven.

The large staff is an expression of the philosophy of solidness. Jones said it is easier to start solid than it is to try to achieve solidness later.

Further building on the solidness theme, Jones said the bank's seven officers have, between them, 102 years of banking experience.

"This bank was conceived as an integral part of, and a service for, the ClayDesta development and the tenants," Williams said.

However, both Williams and Jones emphasized the bank's doors are open to everyone.

"We'll have every service in the bank," Jones added, "to serve both large and small."

ClayDesta National will provide a full range of services to its customers, however; "it will be tied to oil and gas in every way," Williams explained.

Williams predicted the bank will grow along with his ClayDesta development, which is intended to become a small city-within-a-city.

Jones wouldn't throw out any numbers, but, he offered, "I think our growth is going to be geometrical."

The bank will probably enjoy, Williams said, "better than average growth in commercial and oil and gas (lending)."

One thing the bank has going for it, Jones said, is its location.

"This is probably the best corner in town," Williams remarked.

ClayDesta National will operate from the "drive-in facility" for several months, until the main bank and office complex is completed next July or August.

Until the main office opens, Jones said, ClayDesta National customers will receive a full range of services inside the auto bank.

Both Williams and Jones agree, now is a good time to spud a bank, despite the somewhat dismal economic conditions that engulf us. The pair said they believe it will be much easier to get off on the right foot now, than it would have been during the hustle and bustle of the late boom.

Williams said a lot of extra investment is being put into the ClayDesta project. He said he believes spending for "first class" now, will insure the development will be first class ten years from now.

The ClayDesta National auto bank bespeaks the notion.

Williams and Jones are two of the bank's board members. Others are Modesta Williams, Aaron Giebel, James W. Winkel, Bob Smith; and bank officers David N. Jones, J. Robert Elliot, and Ronnie D. Henry; all are from Midland. Ted G. Gray Jr., Austin, is also a board member.

Before learning the combination to ClayDesta National's vault, Jones was executive vice president and head of lending for the American Bank of Waco.

credit officer.

Smith was an investment officer with First National Bank of Midland.

Reynolds comes to ClayDesta National from Permian Bank & Trust, Odessa, where he was vice president and cashier.

McKissik was assistant auditor at Amarillo National before moving to Midland.

Money market fund assets up

NEW YORK (AP) — Assets of the nation's 258 money-market mutual funds rose $1.19 billion to a record $229.94 billion in the latest week, said the Investment Company Institute.

It was the third straight weekly increase and came despite continued declines in interest rates.

The Investment Company Institute, a trade group, said the funds' gain followed a rise of $1.3 billion a week ago and an increase of $2.8 billion in the previous week.

The funds pool investors' money to purchase short-term securities such as bank certificates of deposit and Treasury securities. A popular aspect of the funds is that the money can usually be withdrawn without charge at short notice.

Tylenol poisons maker's profit

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Johnson & Johnson has reported that part of the cost of withdrawing Tylenol capsules from the market was reflected in an estimated $50 million, or 27 cents per share, reduction in third-quarter earnings.

All Tylenol capsules were pulled from store shelves after Extra-Strength capsules laced with cyanide were linked to seven deaths in the Chicago area.

Johnson & Johnson, the parent company of McNeil Consumer Products Co., which makes Tylenol products, included in its third quarter earnings statement Thursday an estimated $50 million extraordinary after-tax charge it associated with the withdrawal of the pain reliever.

That extraordinary charge reduced worldwide net earnings to $96.5 million, or 51 cents a share, a 26 percent drop from $129.9 million, or 69 cents a share, a year earlier.

Johnson & Johnson reported worldwide sales in the third quarter of $1.48 billion, an increase of 10.4 percent over the 1981 third quarter sales of $1.34 billion.

Johnson & Johnson spokesman Robert V. Andrews said the withdrawal of Tylenol capsules will negatively affect Tylenol sales and overall company earnings in the fourth quarter and "into 1983."

Tylenol was the best-selling non-prescription pain reliever in the country prior to the Chicago crisis.

Business more productive

WASHINGTON (AP) — In its best showing of the year, productivity in the nation's private business sector advanced at an annual rate of 4 percent in the third quarter, the Labor Department said.

The productivity growth, occurring in the midst of a deep recession, was the highest since this measure of economic performance jumped at an annual rate of 5.6 percent in the first quarter of 1981.

But in its report, the Bureau of Labor Statistics noted that the "gains in productivity reflected declines in hours and employment."

The 4 percent gain, based on preliminary, seasonally adjusted figures, followed a 1.4 percent annual rate of increase in the second quarter and a 1 percent decline in the first, it said.

Productivity measures the volume of goods and services the economy produces in each hour of paid working time.

Profits show auto industry has learned to cope

DETROIT (AP) — Two of the nation's Big Three automakers, rolling up profits of more than $1 billion for the first nine months of 1982 despite slumping car sales, have "learned to cope" with fewer customers, analysts say.

"Certainly (the profits) are not a victory from volume," Arvid Jouppi, an independent analyst in Detroit, said Thursday. "There is no evidence of a recovery in the industry ... The industry has learned to cope."

Although Ford Motor Co. lost money in the third quarter, it was an improvement over last year, and both Chrysler Corp. and General Motors were in the black.

Cost-cutting and manufacturing efficiencies were responsible for the profits, considering car and truck sales remain behind 1981's already depressed levels, Jouppi said.

"In a volume sense, there wasn't any recovery," agreed Harvey Heinbach, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York. "A tremendous amount of cost-cutting has gone on."

Their comments came after Chrysler reported it made $9.4 million, or 3 cents per share, in the third quarter of the year. That compared with a loss of $140.1 million, or $2.01 per share, in the same 1981 quarter.

It was the first third-quarter profit for Chrysler in five years and the first time since 1977 that the No. 3 U.S. carmaker posted three consecutive quarterly profits.

"Chrysler's performance in the third quarter is especially impressive, coming at a time when the company also had to bear the cost of its 1983 product launch, endure a severe disruption in the important Mexican auto market and overcome occasional work stoppages caused by the national rail strike and by scattered walkouts at some of our plants," Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said in a letter to shareholders.

Some Chrysler autoworkers walked out in September before the United Auto Workers union and company agreed to a tentative contract. The pact later was rejected by workers, who wanted to regain the $2.50 per hour difference between their base pay and that of other Big Three autoworkers.

But they voted Tuesday by a margin of more than 2-1 to resume talks, set for January, thereby averting a strike.

So far this year, Chrysler has earned $266.6 million, or $3.23 per share, versus a loss of $408.7 million, or $6.21 per share, in 1981.

Chrysler was near bankruptcy between 1979 and 1981, however, and received aid from banks and the federal and state governments which will have to be repaid in coming years.

General Motors earned $129.4 million in the quarter, compared with a $468.2 million loss last year, and has made $817.7 million so far in 1982 versus $236.7 million in the first nine months of last year.

Ford lost $325.4 million in the third quarter, compared with a loss of $334.5 million for the same quarter a year ago. It has lost $422 million so far in 1982, compared with a loss of $713.8 million by this time last year.

Each automaker attributed the year-to-year earnings improvement to cost containment and better efficiency. All have slashed white-and blue-collar jobs, closed plants and tightened budgets as U.S. vehicle sales and then sales worldwide fell during the past three years.

GM's worldwide factory sales in the first nine months of 1982 were down to 4.8 million units, off 6.2 percent from 1981 levels; Ford worldwide sales were at 3.26 million units, down 3.5 percent from last year, and Chrysler sales were 926,152 units, a drop of 5.7 percent.

The Big Three lost $3.97 billion in 1980 and $1.2 billion in 1981. As a group, they could be in the black this year, analysts said.

Mobil extends discount plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Mobil Corp. has thrown a new twist in gasoline marketing by extending nationwide its discount-for-cash program and authorizing its dealers to begin accepting all competitors' credit cards at Mobil gasoline stations.

Several other major gasoline marketers, including Exxon Corp. and Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), are encouraging their dealers to give discounts to cash buyers. As part of those programs, the companies are cutting prices to wholesalers and charging dealers a fee for processing sales made on credit cards.

The discounts usually range from 2 cents to 4 cents a gallon and are determined by individual retailers at the recommendation of the supplier companies. Mobil, for example, suggests its dealers offer a 4-cent-a-gallon discount.

But none of the companies with discount-for-cash programs are accepting competitors' credit cards. Of the major marketers, only Shell Oil Co. and Sun Co. have said they will accept other oil company credit cards. The Sun offer is limited to purchases of $30 or less and is effective only through Dec. 31, while Shell is accepting other credit cards only in markets east of the Rocky Mountains.

Neither Shell nor Sun is asking its dealers to offer discounts for cash purchases.

Harvester owners Ok scheme

CHICAGO (AP) — Stockholders of International Harvester Co. have approved, as expected, a key provision of the company's latest financial restructuring plan.

However, Louis W. Menk, chairman and chief executive officer, warned that even though the truck and farm equipment manufacturer is fighting for survival, there's no guarantee for success.

"I must stress that your management does not know if the company can avoid a filing under the federal Bankruptcy Code," Menk told about 500 stockholders assembled Thursday for a vote on issuing new stock.

The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of the new issue, which is a key feature in an agreement by the firm's 200 creditor banks to convert up to $350 million of its debt into Harvester securities. This is to be done at a rate of $3 for every $1 in concessions granted by the company's suppliers and dealers.

More autoworkers laid off

DETROIT (AP) — The number of U.S. autoworkers reported on indefinite layoff this week rose to its highest level in six months, reaching 247,767, while U.S. car production declined, according to industry reports.

The five major domestic automakers attributed the increase in layoffs from last week's 243,300 to more furloughs at the Big Three in light of sluggish vehicle sales.

It was the most workers reported on indefinite layoff since 248,183 were on the lists in the last week of April.

Temporary layoffs in the industry this week fell to 28,650 from 35,000 last week.

The domestic automakers will build an estimated 106,060 cars in the United States this week, a decline of 6.6 percent from last week's 113,598 and down 10.2 percent from the 118,117 built in the week last year, Automotive News said Thursday.

So far in 1982, the automakers have built 4,314,574 cars, down 21.9 percent from 1981's 5,523,802, the trade journal said.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 213 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $1.25 billion to $227.2 billion for the week ending October 27, 1982.

The funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 8.87% from 9.09%. The funds' 30-day average yield decreased to 9.23% from 9.38%.

The funds' average maturity figure remained at 39 days for the fifth week in a row.

Publisher William E. Donoghue says, "Individuals investing in the stock market sufferd a dose of realism as the stock market plummeted this week, but the Merrill Lynch money funds alone grew over $900 million. The Merrill Lynch gain represents three-quarters of this weeks' gain. The assets of money funds are up on all fronts, but 87% of this week's activity involves the funds of two sponsors-Merrill Lynch and Dean Witter."

Chamber committee says MoPac to repair rail crossings

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Within the next three weeks, the Missouri Pacific Railroad will begin work on all railroad crossings in Midland, thanks to the work of a Chamber of Commerce committee which made MoPac aware of the problem.

"This is the best indication we have had yet of what our (new) committee structure can do," said Chamber President Larry Bell. "It's really taking the needs of our community to task and being positive and aggressive, to see that things get done. It's just a matter of letting these people know what the problems are."

Announcement of the $500,000 project was made at the chamber's monthly board meeting Thursday by Kingdon Hughes, chairman of the chamber's transportation committee railroad task force.

Fixing the city's rail crossings was the task force's number one priority. The group inspected all crossings from Fairgrounds Road in east Midland to the Warehouse Road crossing on West Industrial Boulevard.

The task force then wrote a letter to MoPac headquarters in Saint Louis, Missouri, accompanied by photographs showing the extent of deterioration of the street crossings. Hughes said his group received "an upbeat and very cooperative" response, including telephone calls from MoPac officials at the Dallas regional office.

Hughes gave regional manager Leon Miller a tour of Midland's rail crossings and Miller realized the magnitude of the problem, Hughes said.

MoPac's "attitude is superb; they are anxious to rectify these railroad crossings," Hughes told the group. "They really didn't realize the problem we had."

Railroad officials met with Hughes, city councilman Tom Sloan and Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright to discuss the logistics involved in bringing the crossings up to what the railroad calls a superior rating. MoPac said it would rectify the problem if either the city or county could help by providing dump trucks and other heavy equipment as needed. This was agreed to by the three parties, Hughes said.

The project is expected to take about six months and will involve an outlay of close to half a million dollars by the railroad, he said. The railroad will order and install prefabricated crossings, beginning the work about Nov. 15.

The first crossing to be done will be at Main Street, with Marienfeld to follow as soon as possible. The railroad has said work on each crossing would take about a week, necessitating rerouting traffic.

In other action, the chamber accepted a recommendation from the Small Business Council, a project of the chamber and Midland College, to offer a $250 scholarship for business students at the college.

The money will come from income from seminars on small business sponsored by the Small Business Council, a new chamber project.

Midland's elementary school population has grown by 13 percent, school board president Parker Humes told the chamber. Most of the growth seems to be coming from families living on the south and west sides of the city, rather than from the northwest, as school board officials had earlier projected. As a result, 18 new portable classrooms will be installed in the next few weeks; six each at Travis, Rusk and Burnett elementary schools, Humes said.

In addition, work on the new Quanah Parker and Bluebird schools is progressing; they are scheduled to open in the fall of 1983. The school district still has $2.5 million available from last year's bond issue passed by Midland voters. The money will be used for another elementary school, possibly on the northeast or east side of Midland, Humes said.

The board is already looking to the future, he said, when elementary school students reach junior high school age. A fourth junior high may have to be built, requiring another bond issue, he added, although no definite plans have been made by the board yet.

Grant Billingsley, head of the chamber's economic development department, was awarded designation as a certified industrial developer (CID) by the American Economic Development Council earlier in October, it was announced. The designation is not given until a candidate has participated in three years of courses and passed a rigorous test, said chamber executive vice president Paul Harvel. "It is not given lightly." Billingsley thus becomes one of 375 active CIDs in the United States. Midland's only other CID is Douglas B. Henson, president of TDC Enterprises and vice president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's task force on air transportation continues to work on better air service from the city, particularly to the West Coast. The group has been in contact with officials at Continental Airlines, now merged with Texas International, about maintaining and improving Midland's air service. One Continental afternoon flight has been changed on the airline's schedule to become a one-stop flight to Los Angeles with the stop being in El Paso.

City councilman Steve Davidson told the chamber that Midland has been awarded recognition for being the Texas city with a population of 50,000 or more with the fewest workmen's compensation claims filed. The award came at a recent meeting of the Texas Municipal League.

The chamber also announced it will sponsor a "Pack Chaparral Center Night" on Tuesday, Nov. 9, to show Midland's support for the N.J.C.A.A. basketball champion team, the Midland College Chaparrals. Free tickets will be available from any chamber member.

Fed sees gloomy prospects for economic recovery in '83

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board is gloomier than the Reagan administration and most leading private economists about prospects for a moderate economic recovery and declining unemployment next year, according to a confidential forecast.

Government sources say an economic outlook prepared in early October for the board of governors of the nation's central bank predicts the economy will expand at a slow rate in 1983, with unemployment remaining in the 10 percent range.

The forecast suggests that the economy will grow only about 2 percent over the next 12 months, after adjusting for inflation, according to the sources, who did not want to be identified.

Although 2 percent growth would represent the best economic performance the country has experienced since 1979, it still would be anemic for a post-recession period. Prior recoveries since World War II typically had growth rates of 5 percent a year or more.

The Federal Reserve's tight money and credit policies for fighting inflation have been held responsible by most economists for driving up interest rates, which subsequently triggered the recession that began last summer.

The new internal forecast indicates that slow economic growth and high unemployment remain as unavoidable tradeoffs for keeping inflation low so that interest rates will continue coming down.

In contrast to the central bank's outlook, the Reagan administration and a consensus of 42 private economic forecasters expects the economy to grow at an annual rate of 3 percent to 4 percent next year — just enough to bring unemployment below the double-digit mark — but not by much.

The jobless rate in September reached a 42-year high of 10.1 percent and many economists expect it to hit 10.5 percent soon.

On Thursday, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said he still expects the economy to grow between 3.5 percent and 4 percent next year. He declined, however, to predict whether unemployment would rise further.

Of late, administration officials and private economists have become more optimistic about the prospects for a sustained recovery because of the recent slide in interest rates, which they attribute to an easing of credit conditions by the central bank.

But the lower interest rates have not made bank officials so bullish. "We didn't have an optimistic forecast," said one senior official at the central bank. The official, who did not want to be quoted by name, added: "It's hard to see a decline in unemployment."

Asked why the bank seemed less optimistic about the outlook than the administration, the stock market and private forecasters, the official said: "Maybe we're a little ahead of everyone else."

However, a congressional economist familiar with the bank's forecast argued that the Federal Reserve may be a little off the mark.

"The Fed's forecast is gloomy because they're talking to the wrong people," said the economist, who also did not want to be identified. He contended that the bank's survey of business conditions overlooked brightening developments in housing, autos and retailing that suggest a much stronger recovery in 1983.

MorRocCo owner Joe Moore with a specimen of Selenite Gypsum from Mexico. There are hundreds of beautiful rocks, minerals and cut stones at the shop, as well as custom-crafted jewelry and equipment for geologists, rock hounds and lapidarists. Come by 2407 W. Indiana and spend some time browsing through this fascinating shop. You might discover an exciting new hobby.

Rocks for fun and profit

If you want a fun hobby which could also be profitable, then rock hunting is the perfect hobby for you. The seasoned "rock hound" can always count on finding a treasure each time he or she goes on a hunt, according to Joe Moore, rock hound extraordinary, and owner of MorRocCo.

Moore explains that the term "treasure" doesn't always mean a rare mineral or fossil, but there is usually some specimen which will be found that can be used to fashion innumerable decorative objects and jewelry. In fact, this can make the rock hound hobby one of the few hobbies which can pay for itself.

"If you're out rock hunting, you might bring back some cactus, or find some unusual types of wood from which to make decorative plaques. You can also take fascinating photographs while out in the country rock hunting," says Moore. This makes rock hunting a family affair, as other members of the family can enjoy being with you and having fun of their own, even if they don't particularly like hunting for rocks.

Moore explains why this hobby can pay for itself. "Rock hunting can lead very easily into lapidary, which is the art of rock cutting and polishing; and this in turn can lead to jewelry making."

Another art which, according to Moore, is quickly learned if you have an able teacher, is the art of faceting. "Faceting is the art of cutting faces on gemstones, such as diamond cutting," says Moore. "I can teach anyone to facet in about four two-hour lessons." In fact, during last year's Midland Gem and Mineral Show, 13-year-old Sherri Byrd of Imperial learned how to facet during an demonstration at the show.

This year's Midland Gem and Mineral Society Show will be held Nov. 20 and 21 at the County Barn on E. Hwy. 80, and Moore invites anyone who might be interested in rock hunting, lapidary, or jewelry making to come out during the show and see the many displays of the art there.

"You don't have to be knowledgeable about rocks and minerals in order to be a rock hound," says Moore. "It's a common misconception that you have to be a geologist or have special training to enjoy this hobby." Moore says local rock hounds range from mechanics to doctors and housewives. "This hobby knows no age limit, either. We have teenagers who are enthusiastic rock hounds, as well as people in their seventies."

Moore has been a resident of the Permian Basin for almost 40 years. Among his professional credentials are memberships in the AIME, AAPG, Texas Academy of Science, Midland Gem and Mineral Society, Faceter's Guild of America and Fellow, American Geographic Society.

Moore's love for and interest in rocks led him to learn the art of lapidary. His hobby then became so important to him that it became a full-time job, as he realized there was a need for a good supply source for the serious lapidarist as well as the casual hobbyist in Midland.

MorRocCo has a complete supply of rock cutting, polishing and lapidary equipment, and probably the biggest supply of faceting equipment in Texas. Moore, along with his associate, expert silversmith Mickey Taylor, are available to advise you when you purchase any of this equipment.

MorRocCo specializes in faceting colored stones. According to Moore, these are considered any type of stone except the diamond. For example, rubies, sapphires, touralines, malines and unusual stones such as tanzanite.

Moore has many fine stones from which to choose for rings, earrings, pendants, bolos and belt buckles. The mountings can be custom-designed by Moore or Taylor, or if you have a specific design, they can create the jewelry for you in 14K gold or silver. The lost wax process is used in making the differen mountings and a mold is kept of each mounting. MorRocCo has hundreds of mountings from which to choose.

MorRocCo has evolved into a mini-museum and is a joy to visit even for the non-enthusiast. For the geologists, jewelers, rock hounds and home crafsmen, however, it is a treasure shop. From picks, books, magnifiers and microscopes for the geologist to rock hound books and magazines, MorRocCo has something for everyone.

Come by MorRocCo, located at 2407 W. Indiana, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. You'll find a visit there is a fun way to spend an afternoon, and possibly find yourself a brand new hobby.

Delicious purified water made from tap water

More than 5,000 homes in Odessa and Midland now have a Home Spa water purifier. By running your water through the activated charcoal filter in the Home Spa, you get delicious purified water for less than two cents a gallon.

Acme Marketing, the national distributors for the Home Spa, gives you a guarantee in writing, stating that if you are not completely satisfied with the performance of the Home Spa, you can return it for a full refund, no questions asked.

The Home Spa is one of the most efficient, economical, portable and simple-to-operate water purifiers on the market today. The activated charcoal filter does the work. It is much larger than filters in units that attach to faucets and others that sell for four and five times as much.

The Home Spa filter removes the chlorine that is used in city water to kill the bacteria, sulphates, pesticides residue, rust, algae and especially foul taste and odor. Hardness in tap or well water is reduced, making it a pleasure to cook with Home Spa water. The difference in the taste of coffee and tea when using water filtered through activated charcoal is unbelievable.

House plants thrive on Home Spa filtered water. Flower shops locally and nationwide are using water filtered through activated carbon (charcoal) for the health of their plants and flowers. According to Gene Hurt, the Old Pro of horticulture, "Odessa water kills more plants than all the insects combined." (from the Odessa American, Dec. 28, 1978); and Midland water comes from the same source.

Many dealers nationwide are selling the Home Spa for $29.95 to $39.95; however, Tony, of Acme Marketing, has low overhead and can sell the Home Spa for the low retail price of $24.95 for a limited time.

Replacement filters for the Home Spa should be changed about every 400 gallons, or six to nine months, depending on the amount of water used. These are usually $8.95 each, but are now on sale for three for $21.95, or six for $34.95. Now is the time to stock up at these low prices. Shelf life on these filters are forever.

Acme Marketing also has filters for automatic ice makers on home refrigerators, ice machines and drinking fountains. The filter will not only purify ice cubes, but will keep your ice maker from clogging up, saving huge plumbing bills.

Other products sold by Acme Marketing at discount and wholesale prices are Dr. Willard Water, Aloe Vera Juice, DMSO (dimethyl Sulfoxide), and Spirulina. Both Willard Water and DMSO were featured on "60 Minutes".

Call Tony at Acme Marketing, 3103 E. 31st, Odessa, or call 367-6977 for further information and free local delivery. Out-of-town orders can be mailed for a handling and mailing charge of $2 per unit on any of the above products.

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, shows just how easy and simple it is to transform tap water into delightful, spring-quality water without electricity or plumbing with the Home Spa.

Vending machines — contraptions Amercians love to hate

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — Henrietta Hovitch definitely was not accustomed to having a vending machine talk to her.

And this one was being particularly vocal. The big red Coca-Cola machine was politely but firmly admonishing the Glendale, Calif., woman for failing to insert the right coins.

"Please put in the correct change," it said repeatedly as she continued to push the "select" button.

She was surprised, amused and finally a little embarrassed as a small but fascinated crowd gathered around her and the machine in the supermarket.

Finally, she inserted another dime, and received not only a soft drink from the machine, but a cheery "Thank you" and "Have a nice day."

Larry St. John, assistant manager of the Safeway store, looking a bit chagrined, explained that the store had never had a soft drink vending machine before, let alone one that talked and was fast becoming a celebrity.

COCA-COLA U.S.A. recently introduced 3,000 of the vocal machines nationwide, in keeping with its theme, "Coke Is Fun" and in hopes of boosting vending-machine sales. Some of the machines have been programmed to suggest purchases from a nearby snack machine, and all can be for the personalized with just about any message of the retailer's choosing.

Coke also has some other vending surprises for customers — such as vending machine that plays video games. Customers get not only a refreshment, but also a chance to position a "route man" so that he can catch cans tossed by a monkey in a palm tree. If the cans are missed, the monkey laughs.

Then, there are models that speak Spanish, French and Japanese as well as English.

Coca-Cola, which is leading the way in such technology with business partner Sanyo Vending Machine Co. of Japan, also is using vending machines that change dollar bills, dispense coupons, offer volume incentives and play a lively rendition of "Greensleeves" and "Home on the Range."

And if all this machine personalization is not enough, the National Automatic Merchandising Association has declared this National Vending Machine Week. Posters on strategically located machines across the country invite customers to hug, kiss and pet the little devils. (Or pat them on the back if you're the shy type).

The idea caught on when William Buckholz, a Reading, Pa., vending company owner, offered free drinks and candy bars to customers who gave his machine hugs.

THE TRADE association's statistics indicate that Americans don't need much encouragement. Last year, they spent more than $14.6 billion on vending machine products — or almost $66 for every person in the country — up from $13.9 billion the previous year. Each minute of every day, 190,000 coins are plunked into the gizmos. Californians alone spent $1.5 billion last year on vended goodies — more than residents in any other state.

Soft drinks accounted for $5.4 billion of national sales, followed by cigarettes, $3.2 billion; confections, $1.9 billion, and hot drinks, $1.2 billion.

"Americans have a love affair with vending machines," says Walter Reed, the trade association spokesman, explaining that a recent survey by Motivation Research Inc. found that Americans "overwhelmingly felt that vending machines belonged to the jet age, were great to have around during emergencies, were reliable and fun."

They also are the butt of a lot of jokes. Comedians and TV-movie scriptwriters have enjoyed amplifying on the machines' shortcomings — such as keeping the change, not delivering the goods, tipping over cups and giving you more hot water than hot chocolate.

Not that consumers don't try to get back by beating the machines half to death, vendors lament.

WILLIAM FISHMAN, president and chief executive of Philadelphia-based ARA Services Inc., one of the largest vending companies in the country, recalls the time he saw a man kicking one of his vending machines at a Chicago airport. "I walked over to his suitcase and started kicking it," Fishman recalls. "The man asked me what I thought I was doing. I told him I'd stop kicking his suitcase if he'd stop kicking my machine. He did and I did," Fishman said, chuckling.

About the only time consumers don't complain about machine malfunctions is when one hits the jackpot — an industry term for when the machine goes berserk and spits out coins or every Hershey bar and Tootsie Roll in the machine.

The machines became a legitimate business in the 1930s, when slug-ejector mechanisms were invented to prevent "free" samples. But it wasn't until the 1950s that the machines really became a part of the American lifestyle.

It was then that businessmen, concerned about productivity, began installing coffee-vending machines in record numbers, so that employees would stay on the premises.

Soon, vending machines began to offer not only food and drink, but such things as silk stockings, perfume, prophylactics, games, balloons and stamps.

TODAY, VENDING machine sales are even used by some as economic indicators.

"We'll be the first to know when there is an upturn in the economy," contends George Lane, vice president of Greenwich, Conn.-based Servomation Corp.'s Western region in Long Beach. "People will start working more overtime, companies will rehire laid-off employees, and, as a result, our sales will increase."

Of the roughly 5,000 vending machine companies in the United States, most are small, local or regional companies with annual sales ranging from $350,000 to $10 million. Only a handful, including such major companies as ARA Services Inc., Greyhound Corp., Canteen Corp. and Interstate United Corp., operate nationwide.

In the last several years, the high cost of labor, trucking and materials has eaten into profits, vendors say. Most say they work on a small margin — an average of 3.5 percent to 6 percent of gross sales.

Competition in some areas of the country gets downright vicious with vendors preparing elaborate presentations to snare new customers. These promotional shows include eloquent sales pitches, banquets, taste sessions and even promises of a cut of the machine profits for companies agreeing to contract for the vending services.

VENDING MACHINES not only mirror the economy, but also are an indicator of America's taste buds, industry experts note.

For example, Servomation Corp., a Greenwich, Conn.-based vendor, tried to place health foods such as sunflower seeds and granola snacks in its vending machines in the early 1970s, only to discover that "no one would buy them," said Servomation's Lane. "But now such things as avocado and sprout salads, nuts, fruit drinks, natural bread sandwiches and preservative-free items are among the best sellers."

Aside from the new "talkies," the innovation that has most increased vending machine sales in recent years is the glass-front merchandiser, said Bill K. Walsh, president of Orange County-based Continental Vending Corp. The machine, which clearly displays the product, is credited with increasing sales as much as 30 percent at some locations.

Also expected to increase business in years to come is special packaging that will allow vendors to sell a wider variety of perishable products without refrigeration.

But Fishman of ARA Services says the industry must make even more significant marketing and technological changes if its past rate of growth is to continue. The industry has not kept pace with demographic changes in U.S. business, he says, pointing to statistics showing that 70 percent of U.S. workers are employed not by large factories but by smaller service-oriented firms such as banks and insurance companies. Yet, vendors continue to concentrate their machines in factories, he said.

"VENDORS HAVEN'T served those smaller markets well, mainly because machines were designed for the larger volume and it just wasn't profitable to service the small companies," Fishman said. However, new machines demanding less frequent attention and fewer repairs now have made it lucrative to go after small accounts, he said.

Computerization of the machines, just now beginning, is another must, said Reed of the national trade association. Such machines have built-in information-retrieval systems enabling vending-machine employees to merely wave a wand in front of the machine and within five seconds record such information as the types and quantities of products sold, how many replacements are needed and whether there have been any unauthorized entries. Back at headquarters, this information is fed into computers and the routes are then serviced.

He hired a research company to conduct tests of vending machines in nine cities. The results, he says, showed that the machines were very trustworthy — with only malfunctions in every 100 transactions.

But, Reed acknowledges, "Vending machines are like elevators. No one pays any attention to them until they don't work."

Or until they say something.

Town hopes to duck obscurity

BOTHELL, Wash. (AP) — This community caught between the suburban sprawl of Everett and Seattle doesn't want to lose its identity, so it's ducking obscurity by adopting mallards as mascots.

As many as 200 ducks can be found any day at the town's Bothell Landing park on the Sammamish River, says Gay Paris, leader of a flock of town promoters.

Earlier this year when town business leaders were brainstorming ideas for a town theme, "A number of people started talking about ducks," Ms. Paris said recently.

Now local cars sport bumper stickers with the "ll" in Bothell spelled with a pair of webbep ieet. Stores near the park sell "duck food" crumbs to encourage fattening up the mascots.

A person in a duck costume attends public events with a sign that reads, "Honk if you love Bothell." The resulting noise can be deafening, says Ms. Paris.

Retailers put duck stamps on envelopes holding stationery that carries the slogan, "Duck into Bothell and take a gander."

Local bookstores sell duck posters and duck T-shirts, designed by Bothell artist Ron Spears, who also did the bumper stickers.

Bothell, an incorporated town of about 8,000 people, is surrounded by subdivisions and sees commuter traffic rush by each day en route to Everett and Seattle.

Hospitals pledge aid in case of war

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston hospital official says a new plan under which civilian hospitals are promising space for military casualties in case of war makes a great deal of sense.

"There's no need to spend considerable money beefing up military hospitals when civilian facilities exist," said Garrett Graham, president of the Greater Houston Hospital Council, after 49 area hospitals committed about 3,000 beds to the program Wednesday.

The pledge brought to more than 50,000 the number committed nationwide, area coordinator Col. John Stephenson said.

The Civilian-Military Contingency Hospital System will allow casualties to be sent to the United States from foreign countries and will provide for civilian doctors and medical workers to staff domestic military hospitals in the event of a war, he said.

"During World War II and other conflicts, a similar thing was accomplished," said Stephenson, who is associate administrator for planning at the Air Force's Wilford Hall Medical Center in San Antonio.

Nicole Lipson, communications director for the Greater Houston Hospital Council, said the beds would be freed in ways such as postponing elective surgery.

Stephenson said another phase of the agreement provides for civilians to staff stateside military hospitals in cases of emergency. He said that will ensure that active duty forces, not reserves, would be sent to the scene of a war.

The system could also be put into action in case of a natural disaster such as a tornado or flood, he said, but added that it was designed for use in wartime.

Hospitala would not be required to turn away civilian cases to meet their commitments, Stephenson said.

"The medical staff at individual institutions would tell us how many casualties they could take," he said.

Sexual harassment suits insured against

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of British companies are insuring themselves through Lloyd's of London against sexual harassment suits, even though the legal actions that have made U.S. headlines still are uncommon here.

Business is said to be so brisk that one insurer says he can't find time to tap what is seen as a booming American market.

Standard policies covering a company's cost in suits alleging unfair dismissal and race and sex discrimination are offered by a variety of companies.

For the past five years, Employers Protection Insurance Services Ltd. also has been selling a comprehensive policy that — for the equivalent of about $20.40 per employee per year — covers legal costs and compensation awards stemming from sexual harrassment suits, said managing director Brian Raincock.

So far, about 10,000 companies have bought the policies, underwitten at Lloyd's by a consortium of insurers, Raincock told The Associated Press in an interview.

"I've not yet paid out an award for sexual harassment," he said. "It's only a matter of time.

"We have noticed in recent weeks an increased awareness of sexual harassment, I think because it's such a live issue in the United States," Raincock said.

Raincock, a 42-year-old former Royal Navy commander, said also his company has introduced the comprehensive insurance to the Irish Republic.

"We have had a lot of interest from other countries, including the United States, but frankly we've been so busy in this country we've not been able to give the time necessary to export it," he said.

One of the first suits alleging sexual harassment was filed last week by three women employed by the Daily Mirror newspaper. A spokesman for the government-funded Equal Opportunities Commission said vague laws may be the reason why more such actions have not been undertaken.

"This is a very important case," the commission spokesman said. "We welcome it as the first chance to test in court whether the Sex Discrimination Act (of 1975) covers sexual harassment.

"Sexual harassment is not specifically referred to in the act, and women have been reluctant to come forward because they did not realize sexual harassment was unlawful," the spokesman said.

Two of the Mirror's first female editorial messengers claim they were subjected to a war of nerves, including obscene abuse, in bid to force them out of their jobs.

Despite his success, Uris never favorite with critics

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

ASPEN, Colo. — From their living room window on Red Mountain, just east of the hub of this resort town, Leon and Jill Uris have a view that commands a golden, aspen-dotted vista of the Roaring Fork Valley. It is a grand view — one that suggests a creme de la creme slice of the good life in America.

But neither this outpost of Nirvana nor the commercial success that has made it possible has come easily for best-selling novelist Leon, 58, or for Jill, who at 35 has just had her third documentary book of color photographs published.

Leon, author of a string of best sellers including "Exodus" (1958) and "Trinity" (1976), saw his first book, "Battle Cry," rejected a dozen times before G.P. Putnam accepted it. And before meeting him, Jill, who is six months younger than Leon's oldest daughter by his first marriage, chose the genteel poverty — by Aspen standards — of teaching elementary school and photographing tourist skiers.

An improbable alliance of Baltimore Jewish poor and Boston Brahmin, they're a handsome couple. His is a craggy visage, furrowed by battles with publishers and years of on-location research, with gray hair spilling out from under the cowboy hat he likes to wear in the mountains. She's slim, with a model's good looks enhanced by clear blue eyes and just a touch of gray.

WITH FAME and fortune assured, the Urises could easily milk the celebrity scene, either in this jet-setters' mecca about 200 miles west of Denver, or in more frenetic New York literary circles. But they choose not to, and are not into any "scenes" but their own.

Both ski well enough to be certified ski instructors, and Jill is an excellent tennis player. But neither is into running or any other Aspen fitness-religion. And their at-home preference over the local scene puts them out of sync with the typical Aspen lifestyle and its premium on high visibility.

"When you've got this at home," said Leon, motioning toward his wife, "who needs to go out? Since I've been with Jill, I've changed my style. Years ago, I was into chasing broads and — when in Aspen — drinking at the Red Onion. I don't need that today. My values are different now. I used to be into motorcycles and sports cars, but I've gotten rid of them and sold my last bike in March."

When they must get away, it's usually not to some exotic locale in Europe or the Middle East but to what they call their "cabin," an apartment near Cheesman Park in Denver. During normal National Football League seasons, the Urises use the cabin when they come down for Broncos home games. Jill, whose father played football for Harvard (class of 1934), had been an Ivy League football fan until meeting Leon.

Leon, who calls himself a "Roosevelt Democrat" — "actually, I'm a liberal and a reactionary at the same time" — is an ex-Marine with "old-fashioned" values like love of country, a stiff attitude toward Russia and a high regard for family and loyalty. "Jill helped mellow me out," he noted. "I was much more a chauvinist pig before we met."

Their seven-room home is an eclectic blend of Southwest and Middle East modes. You won't find any modern art, since they believe much of what's represented as "modern art" is the work of a phony establishment that perpetuates mediocrity.

LEON, WHOSE work habits are "relatively undisciplined," manages to work a fairly steady six hours a day, starting at noon. He writes directly on an IBM Selectric typewriter which, he says, is a big improvement over the old manual he used. He refuses even to consider a home computer.

"Rewriting is what makes you a writer," he observed. "I may have to rewrite a passage 20 or 30 times until it's right. This is the stage that saps most people."

In pursuing her photographs, Jill has been in the middle of urban guerrilla warfare in Belfast, and she found Jerusalem — where she was threatened by both Arabs and ultra-orthodox Jews — only slightly less menacing.

Leon was 46 when he married 22-year-old Jill Peabody in 1970 — her first marriage, his third. But even after a dozen years, a visitor can see the genuine love and affection that flows between them.

Leon insists that "total enjoyment is being at home with Jill, who happens to be my best pal as well as my wife and working partner."

LEON BELIEVES their closeness is not unrelated to the fact that his novels, which have sold in the millions, have received consistently chilly receptions from literary critics.

"I tend to enrage critics," he said. "For several reasons. First, I'm successful. Second, I have a few bucks in the bank. Which isn't the same as having your books sell well — as evidenced by Norman Mailer. Third, I'm in love. Critics, who are often unhappy people, can't seem to abide that. And last, we don't go to the right cocktail parties."

For all their success and happiness today, the Urises haven't exactly had a charmed life. Jill suffered a near-fatal recreational vehicle accident in 1970 that called for delicate brain surgery and left her unable to photograph for nearly a year. Last spring, she miscarried a child that would have been their first.

In August of this year, Leon underwent "make or break" surgery in Denver that removed a possibly cancerous tumor from between a lung and his heart. The tumor, the "size of a baseball," proved benign, sparing him the subsequent trauma of chemotherapy. But it reminded the couple how fragile are the threads holding even an affluent life.

Now she is working on another photographic collection — set, this time, in America — and he's completing another blockbuster-sized novel that's already two years late on Doubleday's timetable. It's set in the Middle East as a sequel to "Exodus."

And they're "definitely" working on a family.

"We talked about it for years and it was only a year ago that we decided to have children," said Jill.

"IT WAS HER idea, but the more I thought about it — having a second family when my first three children are in their 30s — the more intrigued I became," said Leon. "Somehow, I feel a lot more ready to have a family today than I did the first time around. Ten years ago, I would have felt too old to have a second family. Today, I feel differently and the prospect of that kind of renewal is exciting. And a sense of renewal is important to both of us."

...Calls himself a "Roosevelt Democrat, actually, I'm a liberal and a reactionary at the same time"...an ex-Marine with "old-fashioned" values like love of country, a stiff attitude toward Russia and a high regard for family and loyalty."

Born in 1924 to Russian-Jewish parents with an affinity for left-wing causes, Leon grew up in a poor Baltimore neighborhood, in a home that was broken by the time he was in his teens. His parents did, however, pass along to him a love for literature and the leftist politics that were rife in the Depression '30s. A poor student, he failed high school English three times before leaving school to join the Marines at age 17, a month after Pearl Harbor.

It was Uris' World War II experience that provided the basis for "Battle Cry," his first book that fulfilled a lifelong dream to write. An upbeat, pro-Marines account of the war, the book sharply contrasts other best-selling World War II genre novels. "Every one of those novels," he said, "Mailer's 'Naked and the Dead,' Jones' 'From Here to Eternity,' Heller's 'Catch-22' and all the others whine about 'why I hated the f— war.' Like most human beings, I hated the war. But I believed in what we were fighting for and, unlike most modern novelists, didn't hate the men who fought that war.

"It was a different era then. I respected my officers and value the memory of the time I served," he said in total seriousness. "The Marine Corps forced me to find strengths I never knew I had and laid a foundation for the stamina I'd later need to be a novelist. I had two sons and wouldn't want them to go to war — least of all a war like Vietnam. But they also lost something, some sense of discipline that I had."

After his marriage to Marine sergeant Betty Beck in 1946, Uris settled in San Francisco, working as a newspaper home-delivery district manager. But, determined to be a writer, he drifted from rejection to rejection, until "Battle Cry" (which he completed in 1950) finally was published in 1953. During that time, his young daughter Karen had a near-fatal bout with polio, but later recovered.

Grim times continued, this time in Hollywood working on a screenplay for Warner Bros' version of "Battle Cry." With Marine Corps support that was necessary to do the film, Uris eventually prevailed in opposing the studio's changes.

FOLLOWING THE release of "The Angry Hills" (1956), Uris got involved with Israel, where he still had family on his father's side.

The Sinai War of 1956 cut short exhaustive research for "Exodus," but the eventual book became one of the all-time success stories in American publishing history. There were 50 regular translations into foreign languages, plus at least a dozen "unauthorized," or "pirated," editions smuggled to Soviet bloc countries.

"Exodus" contained an account of the ill-fated Warsaw ghetto uprising of 1944, when poorly armed Jewish civilians fought German tanks and artillery for weeks. It became the basis for "Mila 18," the work in which Uris takes the most pride. "Everyone advised me not to follow with a ghetto story after 'Exodus,'i" he recalled. "It was the one thing I wrote not caring if it sold 10 or 10,000 copies. I simply had to tell the story."

In 1964, Uris completed "Armageddon," about post-war Berlin and the Berlin airlift. By this time, he was separated from his wife and living in Aspen, where he'd been skiing since the early '60s.

Then, during an Acapulco vacation, Uris met and befriended one Phillipe Thyraud de Vosjoli — a French diplomat who'd defected from the de Gaulle regime. The diplomat's papers on French intelligence activities led to "Topaz," which wasn't published until 1967 after long legal hassles. Though Harper & Row backed away from publishing the book, ostensibly because the publishers feared libel suits (Charles de Gaulle and Fidel Castro both came off badly), Uris to this day remains convinced it was pressure from the U.S. State Department that originally blocked publication.

In 1968, Uris married former New York model Margery Edwards, a woman described by one Aspenite as "quite beautiful — not outdoorsy like Jill. But you could tell she was troubled."

SIX MONTHS after the marriage — for unknown reasons that have fueled speculation ever since — Margery Uris committed suicide with a gun in Aspen.

Enter Jill Peabody, who was co-directing the Center of the Eye photographic institute in Aspen. Born to an old New England family, Jill enjoyed summers on Cape Cod but rejected the secure world of her parents in favor of trying to get a photographic career off the ground in Colorado. After meeting Leon at a dinner party given by a mutual friend, she comforted him at a low point in his life — and helped him struggle with "QB VII" (a book about the trial of a Nazi war criminal who'd later turned respectable in England) when his heart was hardly in it. In February 1970, they were married at the Algonquin, New York's famed literary hotel.

So where do they go from here?

"In a sense, we've already done it all," said Leon.

But in 30 years, the literary establishment has never seen fit to favor him with a Nobel or a Pulitzer. "Simply having survived 30 years in this business is an accomplishment in itself," he observed. "I've already outlived one generation of critics and am working on the second."

Can't fly rented Jet

NEW YORK (AP) — You can rent a jet for as little as $100, but don't expect to fly anywhere. This Jet would be one of the New York Jets of the strikebound National Football League.

The Jets are looking for odd jobs such as appearances and promotions. Kelley Lyons, wife of defensive tackle Marty Lyons, is acting as jobs broker.

She calls her one-woman company "Rent-A-Jet," and says, "You can get one for practically anything."

Mrs. Lyons says she's made about 10 placements since business got under way Sunday.

Center Joe Pellegrini, at the bargain $100 rate, will speak next month at Baruch University in New York, she said.

Selectmen celebrate Halloween early

WAREHAM, Mass. (AP) — The Board of Selectman celebrated Halloween a bit early, as one member wore a rubber mask, another came dressed as a Mexican Groucho Marx and Selectman Lionel LaCasse came dressed as a woman.

The costumes at the meeting earlier this week were all the idea of board member Judith wearing a rubber mask.

Selectman A. Clayton E. Fuller looked like Groucho Marx imitating Mexican revolutionary Pancho Villa. His costume featured a pair of black glasses with attached nose and a Mexican sombrero.

Mrs. Montminy had urged her colleagues to wear costumes, giving the impression that she intended to to the same.

It wasn't clear why Mrs. Montminy didn't show up, but the other selectmen didn't appreciate her absence. To show their displeasure, they voted to give her more work to do.

MMH board OKs care policy

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Because of a change in Midland Memorial Hospital's indigent care policy, more Midland County residents may qualify under the new guidelines.

In the MMH governing boards meeting Thursday, the board of directors approved an updated indigent care policy. Also, the board of trustees approved three new trustee members, the hospital president's 1983 objectives and a report on the hospital's 1982 accomplishments.

In other business, the trustees announced Jim Deuvall as administrative director for the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center. Deuvall, of Atlanta, Ga., will begin his new post Tuesday.

In the directors meeting, the board approved a modified indigent care policy which will be reviewed every year with the budget.

TRUSTEE CHAIRMAN Roy Campbell presented the new indigent care financial classification guidelines which the hospital's finance committee "has wrestled with for several months."

"The indigent care policy has not been modified since 1977," Campbell said. "Because of inflation and the cost of living in Midland, we thought we should make some adjustments."

Depending on the patient's family size and take-home income, the old policy qualified a person for no payment, 35 percent of payment, 65 percent of payment or full payment. The modified policy is based on a percentage of the patient's gross income, or the total hospital bill, whichever is less, with deductions for previous visits in the prior 12 months.

Campbell explained that guidelines will be set to determine the indigent patient's maximum payment.

ONE OF THE reasons for the change in the policy was spurred by the increase of bad debts — 9.8 percent of the hospital's gross revenue for 1981-82 fiscal year.

"We think that some of the bad debts could have been classified as indigent," Campbell said.

According to Dale Miller, MMH vice president of finance, "the increase (reclassification) in the indigent care will be offset by the reduced bad debts."

In addition, the hospital's vice president of finance, president or board of directors — depending on the aggregate per month — will be given the authority to qualify a person "needy and indigent" in special circumstances.

In the trustees' meeting, the board approved three new trustee members. Those filling the empty seats will be Bob Jones, executive vice president of Midland National Bank; Carson Smith, personnel manager for Texas Instruments; and Dan Mendell III, the Mid-Continent division manager at Exxon.

TRUSTEE RAY Moudy, who was a member of the nominating committee, said all three are anxious to sit on the trustee board and each will bring his particular expertise to the board. According to Moudy, Jones, appointed for a three-year term, has general business experience; Smith, appointed for a two-year term, has knowledge in human relations; and Mendell, also appointed for a two-year term, has general management expertise.

Also, the trustees approved MMH's 1983 fiscal year objectives, specifically, MMH and the hospital's major objective "No. 2."

The objective is an "action plan to address interim solutions to doctor and patient demands for in-patient beds to minimize the possible capacity problems during the period between Oct. 1, 1982, and the date the new 77 beds (expansion plan) are available for operation."

After approving MMH President Ray Branson's fiscal year 1982 accomplishments, Branson highlighted the hospital's days of revenue in accounts receivable. He said they were reduced by 17 percent — from 83.6 percent in October 1981, to 69.3 in September 1982.

"THIS REDUCTION represents a significant increase in cash flow in that one day's revenue currently represents approximately $71,000," Branson stated in his report.

He said a 70 percent goal for days of revenue in accounts receivable is set for this year.

Midland forms arts council

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

Until Thursday Midland was the only community of its size in Texas functioning without an arts council.

Not any more.

After a long and arduous two-year labor, the birth of the Midland Arts Assembly became a reality Thursday at the organization's premiere membership meeting with the election of its first board of directors.

Tom Roberts

Traditionally, an arts council functions as an umbrella organization for a community's arts programs, offering such services as granting support money, providing information on how to secure funds, coordinating special programs, publicizing local events, and encouraging individual, group and community endeavors.

The need for an arts council here has long been recognized and even attempted on several occasions since the late 1960s. The groundwork for an operable and effective council had been laid prior to Thursday's election of officers through the diligent work of a provisional board of trustees, led by the Rev. P.D. Peterson, headmaster of Trinity School.

Elected as officers for the Midland Arts Assembly at the organization's meeting held at Midland Community Theatre, were Tom Roberts, president; Ann Goff, vice president; Dorothy Perkins, secretary; and Maridell Fryar, treasurer.

Serving as organizational representatives are Donna Gore, Permian Civic Ballet Guild; Anne Sherburn, Museum of the Southwest; Fran Birdwell, Midland Camera Club; Ms. Fryar, Midland Independent School District; Peterson, Midland Symphony & Chorale Association; Ruth Radcliffe, Midland Arts Association; Zuma Renaud, Renwood Inc.; Don Bachmann, Midland Community Theatre; Homer Fort, Permian Basin Petroleum Museum & Library Hall of Fame; and Ms. Perkins, Midland Community Concerts Association.

The term of office for all board members has been established on a rotating basis.

The articles of incorporation written last year mandate that the Midland Arts Assembly address the needs of both the individual artists and organizations.

Purposes for the Midland Arts Assembly can be divided into four major categories. These include facilitating cooperation between organizations fostering the arts, promoting coordination between such organizations, ascertaining the needs of the arts and aiding orderly progress toward their fulfillment.

After much discussion and review, the attention of the Midland Arts Assembly has been focused upon initially providing three services.

These services include compiling a master list of all persons sensitive to the needs of the arts, working with the Midland Chamber of Commerce in providing information about the arts activities to the community as well as visitors, and, finally, coordinating a city wide celebration of the arts to be held in 1984.

White says he's close to touchdown

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Asserting that he is closer to a touchdown than opponent and incumbent Bill Clements, candidate Mark White said his recent polls show him ahead in the gubernatorial football game, but that Clements seemed to think the game was over about two quarters ago.

White, during a brief stop at Midland Regional Airport Thursday, said that when Clements' staff began passing around accusations about White's court record as attorney general, it was only halftime.

According to White, big cases such as the prisons and the bilingual cases won more recently by the attorney general will determine the winner.

"At the end of the game is when we see if we won or lost," White said, adding that on Tuesday, "I think we'll be able to celebrate pretty early."

Despite the fact that Republican supporters include a former professional football player and a current professional coach and that White jokingly admitted having only one person in his campaign entourage that had said he was a football star in high school, a recent survey by White's staff showed him five percentage points ahead of Clements, he said.

Alleging that public school teachers "know Bill Clements is not saying the truth" when Clements claims he was instrumental in raising teacher salaries over the last four years, White said he thinks the majority of teachers will vote his way Tuesday.

Citing a need for an increase of teachers, specifically in areas of math and science, White said while industry will probably continue to offer high wages, the education field must be competitive.

"We have to try to encourage (teachers) and build morale," he said, adding that it was necessary in order to keep top quality teachers in the state.

Declaring his concern for the farmers of Texas, White alleged it was "30 days before election before he (Clements) even knew there were farmers in Texas" and that Clements treats the water plan "almost on a joking basis.

"The people rejected his first water plan," White said. "The second plan was to steal water from Arkansas, and that's what he said."

According to White, the governor of Arkansas sent Clements a one-gallon jug of water and said "That's all he's getting."

White claimed that he supports research and funds for the development of new irrigation techniques, while Clements ignores them. "New technology and irrigation would be helpful in cutting down evaporation with a drip system," White explained, adding that costs would be cut across the board by decreasing the amount of water farmers use as well as the amount of water they have to lift.

"I will work to make sure the farmers get a fair break," he pledged.

Maintaining his stance against the fuel adjustment rate, White said that by eliminating it, utility companies would be forced to search for cheaper fuel. As it is now, he said, there is no incentive for utility companies to look for less expensive supplies of fuel and utility customers are continuing to pay for what he called "bad management that should be at the cost of the company and not the cost of the taxpayers."

The fuel adjustment rate was put into effect in 1975, "when there was an energy crisis," White said, adding that while he wants to eliminate it, Clements is in favor of retaining it.

"Bill Clements turned his back on the University of Texas of the Permian Basin," White charged, adding that he was in favor of the University of Texas Board of Regents' decision to give UTPB four-year status. However, he said he thought it should go into effect sooner than the regents have planned.

While Clements' campaign manager Jim Francis continues to charge that the 98 percent winning record of the attorney general's office is based mostly on cases that were routine or uncontested, White shrugged it off as Clements' way of "trying to divert from the real issues."

Mark White

And, White said, the publicity pertaining to his DWI charge while a student at Baylor, "is more of a reflection on his (Clements) character than mine."

Bentsen attacks opponent

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Candidate for re-election to the U.S. Senate Lloyd Bentsen verbally attacked opponent Jim Collins during a brief stopover at Midland Regional Airport Thursday that included a confrontation with a representative of Fund to Restore an Educated Electorate.

Bentsen said the race contains two main issues, effectiveness and responsibility, and repeated his oft-repeated assertion that Collins is ineffective because he has never passed any legislation.

He added that he is confident he will win the election. "The polls show me in good shape, but it's the people who vote," he said.

Johnny Stewart of FREE, based in Waco, asked Bentsen during the press conference about the windfall profits tax, which Stewart termed "the $12,000 million dollar Bentsen tax" and said was "a clear case of massive fraud upon American consumers."

Bentsen replied that the chairman of the Republican Party in Texas had written "me a letter and said (I had done a good job)" on such legislation.

Stewart later told The Midland Reporter-Telegram that he was monitoring public figures and publishing reports so the public will know which persons are threatening the security of the nation. He said he believed some public figures in the nation are working toward "a one-world Socialist dictatorship, a new world order."

Stewart on Wednesday had appeared at a Bentsen news conference in Sherman, and when Bentsen aides spotted him Tuesday, one of them warned, "I can call airport security over here right now." Stewart replied, "Go ahead — that'd look real good in the newspaper."

And, when Stewart asked Bentsen about his involvement in the controversial Trilateral Commission, a second aide rushed to Bentsen's rescue by stepping in front of reporters and saying, "Senator, we've got to be in town in 10 minutes."

"The Trilateral and the Council on Foreign Relations is the real enemy, and they use people like Bentsen," Stewart said later. "I'm not attacking Bentsen, I'm attacking the system that corrupts people like Bentsen."

Stewart said he was spurred into his present activity in 1978 when he began to fear that "if somebody didn't do something we were headed for deep trouble...If I didn't do this, and those who are fighting for freedom don't win, then (my son) and his children won't grow up in freedom."

Tony Dorsett to highlight United Way report rally

An appearance by Dallas Cowboys All-Pro running back Tony Dorsett will highlight the United Way's fourth quarter report rally Nov. 5 when campaign leaders and the general public gather at noon on the south lawn of the Midland County Courthouse to celebrate campaign progress.

"We are extremely fortunate to have Tony Dorsett here to rally our volunteers for their fourth quarter effort," Campaign Chairman Joe Kloesel said Thursday. Dorsett served as United Way volunteer during the 1981 season when he appeared in nationally televised United Way public service announcements on behalf of youth groups.

Kloesel said employee groups have played a significant part in this year's campaign, and the rally will be in appreciation of their efforts. Several major employee groups will be recognized at the rally.

In addition to campaign volunteers, the public is invited to meet Dorsett and celebrate campaign progress. Free hot dogs and soft drinks will be provided.

Tony Dorsett

To reach the campaign goal of $1,612,000 scheduled by Nov. 10, Kloesel pointed out volunteers have more than $500,000 yet to raise.

Dorsett's appearance was arranged by Joe Henderson of Southwestern Drilling Mud.

Reese wants return to economic basics

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Charley Reese, syndicated newspaper columnist and political conservative, analyzes the nation's economic history much like a bankrupt player might view the latter stages of a Monopoly game.

Both are of the opinion that while all participants began the game on equal footing, somehow power, influence and destiny are eventually vested solely with the owners of "Park Place" and "Boardwalk." As a result, the average player is forced to scrape what meager existence he can from "Community Chest."

Before about 250 persons at Midland High School Auditorium Thursday night, Reese suggested that the nation "advance to Go" — the economic principles favored by the country's founding fathers — before the real "game" of capitalism grinds rapidly to a halt.

REESE, GUEST speaker for the Midland Society of University Women scholarship benefit, said the country's founders plotted a system of capitalism based on economic freedom.

In its early days, 90 percent of the country's citizens owned property — a business or a farm — and only 10 percent worked for wages, he said. "Only by owning the means by which a person can sustain his life can he be free," said Reese. "Political freedom is meaningless without economic freedom."

Reese cited economic freedom, morality and growth financed by savings as sound principles behind the country's fledgling form of capitalism.

After the Civil War and during the Industrial Revolution, the country made an infamous turn toward concentration of ownership and growth financed through credit, he said.

AS EVIDENCE OF concentrated ownership, Reese cited statistics that show while the country boasts approximately 200,000 corporations, 55 percent of all corporate assets rest with a scant 100 firms.

Reese also lamented that today, 90 percent of the country's citizens depend on others for their livelihood while entrepreneurs account for only 10 percent.

The shift to "finance capitalism" — which he said "places freedom of economics over people and principles" — balanced the nation's economic future precariously on the answer to one, continually asked question: "If it will make money, do it.

"We're creating a climate for socialism," he said, of the trend toward concentrating ownership, wealth and power among an elite group of individuals centered predominately on the Eastern seaboard.

"WE'VE BEEN eroding away that middle class," he said. "All those people can vote. They may not be able to live, but they can vote. Those are the kind of people that are going to vote for socialism some day if we don't change our system."

To compound matters, Reese said powerful financiers are mortgaging the country's financial well-being by offering loans to developing countries, sometimes with little prospect of return payment. Or, he said, they barter the livelihood of American workers for cheap, foreign goods.

"A lot of people in our country today are richer than they are smart," he

Charley Reese stirs emotions with views

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Thursday afternoon's press conference was scheduled with Charley Reese, a syndicated newspaper columnist who stirs the emotions of many with his less-than-liberal views.

"Excuse me, there's supposed to be a press conference scheduled today with the raving, conservative cyclops...er...I mean...Mr. Charley Reese."

The doorman's directions led to a green, high-backed chair containing a diminutive, dark-haired man. Surely there was some mistake.

His handshake was that of a regular sort, the smile apparently human. He settled back in the cushioned throne and began complying with questions in soft, level tones.

Although he wore an accountant's button-down shirt and dark blue suit, Reese boasted the footwear of an old-school journalist — heavy-soled black shoes with mismatched laces, one brown, one blue.

As the movies would have it, Reese's association with the printed word began at 13, when he toiled as a printing plant janitor. Later a printer and then a reporter, he's covered the gamut from screwball pitchers to curveball politicians.

Today, Reese, 45, labors as columnist and editorial board member at the Orlando, Fla., Sentinel Star. Forty newspapers — mostly medium-size, Sun Belt publications — carry Reese's musings on the state of whatever.

One of many public speaking engagments placed him in Midland Thursday as guest speaker for the Midland Society of University Women scholarship benefit.

When asked an obligatory question about presidential performance, Reese said President Reagan's actions have failed to measure up to his conservative, political words.

Reese said Reagan is adept at formulating policies and using his showmanship to peddle the political goods. But Reagan, like his predecessors, relies on Washington's "old-boy" network of foreign policy and financial advisers and the status quo results, he said.

"I think that's one of the reasons people get apathetic," said Reese, who offered the president a backhanded compliment. "He has one virtue as far as I'm concerned — he's not Carter." Carter, Reese stated simply, "is the worst disaster the country has ever had."

He said that while news coverage of Reagan's administration has been fair, the execution leaves much to be desired.

"There's a tendency to cover the president, any president, as a celebrity," he said. And "when you've got an army like that, where it takes two airplanes to carry the press, it turns into a circus atmosphere."

He said his experience in politics revealed how easily the news media can be manipulated, and he urged his colleagues to be ever watchful for political hype. In Vietnam, Reese noted, Buddhist monks bent on self-immolation would schedule their events to accommodate news media deadlines.

Reese said he has no desire for elected office himself, although he gained valuable insight into the workings of political machinery by spending six years working on campaigns.

"I also know what you have to do to be a politician, and I don't like doing it."

Reese said that after the thumping Democrats suffered in 1980's election, he now witnesses some Democratic presidential aspirants "trying to bring liberalism up to date."

Although Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy and former Vice-President Walter Mondale are political "dead ducks," Reese said Colorado Sen. Gary Hart and the other Massachusetts senator, Paul Tsongas, are exploring territory largely untrod by liberal Democrats.

Reese predicted that Ruben Askew, former Florida governor, may be the most likely future Democratic presidential candidate. He said Askew has already quietly made political forays into all 50 states in anticipation of 1984.

A much-touted potential candidate, Ohio Sen. John Glenn, lacks the necessary charisma, said Reese. A presidential candidate "has to be able to generate real excitement among people — at least among his supporters."

Cappadonna severs all ties with MMH

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Because of potential conflicts of interest, Mickey Cappadonna, president of the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center Advisory Regional Council, has cut all advisory ties with Midland Memorial Hospital after almost 12 years of service.

Cappadonna, of Mid-West Electric Co., said in a letter to the MMH board of trustees Thursday that "there seems to be at least one situation per week that brings up 'conflict of interest,' in my mind, concerning Midland Memorial Hospital."

Consequently, Cappadonna stated that he "must...immediately resign from my remaining Midland Memorial connections as follows: planning committee, building committee, Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center Advisory Regional Council and honorary governor."

Roy Campbell, MMH trustee chairman, and Ray Branson, MMH president, along with the board members expressed their regrets.

"We talked to him many times about the conflict," Campbell said. "He's a man of strong principle. I recommend we do exactly what he's asked for."

Branson agreed, adding that Cappadonna would still be consulted.

However, in a telephone interview Thursday afternoon, Cappadonna said this was not possible.

"It's a personal thing," he said.

Cappadonna said he felt a conflict of interest after the hospital and four doctors made a bid on the same land.

He explained that he entered a business arrangement with the physicians who intend to build a professional office building. Apparently, MMH — without knowledge of the physicians' plans — also had proposed plans for a professional building. As it happened, the particular lot was offered to MMH, which declined the offer, and then to the physicians, who accepted.

"The thing with the lot was just one more thing," Cappadonna said. "Here, I was part of the hospital...they (hospital officials) tried to convince me it was all right, but I plan bidding on future (MMH) projects and with me being on that planning committee it would constitute a conflict of interest.

"My presence may look like we (Mid-West Electric Co.) have an unfair advantage," he said. "If in 1983 we become bidders it would be better if I was not associated with the hospital."

Cappadonna sat on the trustee board from 1970 to 1981, when he resigned. He was then appointed an honorary governor.

He was president (now titled chairman) of the trustees during the 1977 formation of the hospital district; secretary/treasurer in 1972; vice-president in 1980; and was elected president of the Allison Center Regional Advisory Council in 1980. In addition, he has continued to serve on the hospital's building and planning committees.

said. "They're making decisions on pure economics. They don't really care what happens to the people of this country."

In line with the theme of his address, "Rediscovery of an American Dream," Reese proceeded to suggest that some basic political and economic assumptions may require reexamination in order to inject equality back into capitalism.

"I think we have to try and move our country back to the original plan," he said. "We're going to have to make things issues that are not now issues."

HIGH ON THE list of potential issues is the Federal Reserve system, which Reese said bears much of the blame for all-too-frequent booms and busts in the nation's economy.

Reese said the system places regulation of the money supply virtually beyond the control of either Congress or the President. "They can turn that spigot on and off and they do it entirely on their own," he said.

He suggested that the federal government reassume control of the issuance and flow of currency. Also, he said taxpayers should pressure elected officials to hold down the nation's debt.

Reese advocated a flat, 9 percent income tax, which drew applause from the audience. He also suggested placing tariffs on imported goods that undercut businesses at home.

"If we have to grab politicians by the throat and get uncivil, let's do it," he said. "If there's a conflict between what's profitable and what's right, let's do what's right.

"What I'm trying to do tonight is stimulate you to think about these things."

In closing, prior to a standing ovation, Reese encouraged the group to "fight for our vision in America."

Reese said that whether the "fight" involves working in a political campaign, writing to elected representatives or simply studying issues, "when you go home, make this resolve: Think about giving an hour of your day to your country."

MMH board OKs care policy, approves three new members approved a $69,676.73 indigent care payment and a $363.76 payment to the Midland County Tax Appraisal District for legal fees in collecting the taxes. The board also approved $71,131.50 in equipment bids, and $10,555.50 for equipment already purchased to open the same-day-surgery unit.

In other financial matters, the $2,263,551 revenue for September was a favorable budget variance of $486,784. Salary expense varied unfavorably $703,298 for the month.

MILLER SAID the hospital staff completed and put into operation a payroll "Benefit Accrual" system in September which accrues dollars and hours of vacation and holiday the employees have earned, but have not taken.

As a result, an additional $269,991 of payroll expense was entered in the September books.

Miller said this is a one-time entry and will be adjusted on a monthly basis by the computer.

The remaining $433,307 unfavorable variance is a result of "FTEs (full time equivalent) being over budget by 85 and the salary adjustments made effective June 1," Miller said.

Bad debts for September totaled $443,941 with $29,068 in recoveries. Other operating expenses which varied unfavorably by $246,330 in September include:

Administration, $43,412 to AA & Co., Kieburtz and Marshall & Stevens; plant operations, $56,307 for utilities and $25,000 to Service Master; personnel, $11,307 for recruitment and $12,788 for moving expenses; business office, $5,009 for telephone and $25,040 for bad debt collection fees; data processing, $11,819 to McAuto; liability insurance, $8,332 to Professional liability; and Allison Center, $36,646 to Varian Maintenance contracts.

Mail sacks mislaid

WADDY, Ky. (AP) — The mail — some 500 pieces of it — should have been delivered in 1920. But somehow two sacks full got mislaid until this year when the building that served as the post office here from 1869 to 1914 was remodeled.

Never ones to shirk a chore, postal authorities did make an effort to get that mail through. After eliminating the advertising circulars, the Dead Letter Office sent out 300 pieces of mail.

According to Lawrence Dasenbrock, manager of the Cincinnati Dead Letter Office, many of the letters did go through.

Girl suspended for wearing mum to suffer if she defies rule

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A 12-year-old girl kicked out of school for wearing a forbidden football mum will be suspended again if she defies the rule next week, School Superintendent Lee Williamson says.

Geneva Fry, a seventh-grader at Zundelowitz Junior High School, was suspended from school Thursday for wearing the corsage and plans to continue wearing the mums to games, her mother says.

School board members banned the mums from elementary and junior high school functions last week after officials said the mums had become a distraction to classes.

Some students were leaving classrooms crying because they could not afford the mums and others were wearing six or seven corsages, Williamson said.

"It has been a escalating sort of thing and creating trauma-types of situations on the days when some kids get mums and some don't," Williamson said.

"A boy whose father didn't give him the money for a mum for his girlfriend stayed home. When it reaches the point where it's distracting in the classroom, it comes time for the principal to act."

The girl was to be reinstated Friday morning, said her mother, Linda Fry, who delivers flowers for a wholesale florist

DEATHS

Clois E. Wynn

Services for Clois E. Wynn, 69, of 4302 Bedford, will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Owen Cosgrove, minister of the North Midland Drive Church of Christ, officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Wynn died Thursday night at his residence following a brief illness.

He was born July 2, 1913, in Estelene. He grew up in Turkey. He moved to Lubbock in 1960 and to Midland in 1966. He retired two years go from Mr. C's. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Survivors include three daughters, Carol Jean Kemp and Karen Lee Wynn, both of Midland, and Kathy Lynn Prickett of McCamey; a brother, Virgil Wynn of Lubbock; four sisters, Alda Raye McDougal and Inetha Terry, both of Smyer, Lynn Hawkins of Shreveport, La., and Faye Miller of Odessa; and six grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

W.T. Boadle

BIG SPRING — Services for W.T. "Bill" Boadle, 81, of Big Spring will be at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial in Mount Olive Memorial Park.

He died Wednesday in a Big Spring hospital.

Boadle was a retired carpenter and a lifelong resident of Big Spring. He was Catholic.

Billie Hunt

Services for Billie Hunt, 54, of 3208 Franklin, will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Ross Payne, minister of the Cottonflat Baptist Church officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park.

She died Thursday in a Midland hospital.

Dabney Cogner

LAMESA — Services for Dabney Cogner, 82, of Lamesa were to be at 10 a.m. today in Branon Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Bill Schockley, pastor of Northside Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to follow in Five Mile Cemetery under the direction of Branon Funeral Home.

He died Thursday in a Lubbock nursing home.

Cogner was born Feb. 27, 1900, in Jasper County and moved to Dawson County in 1924. He married Ruth Kate Terral Nov. 18, 1946, in Lovington, N.M. He was a retired plumber and a member of Second Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife; a sister, Romilla Harris of Dallas; and two brothers, Homer and Jake Cogner, both of Big Spring.

Lazaro Reyes

Lazaro Reyes, 32, of Route 2 Box 176-A, died Monday from injuries suffered in an accident four miles east of Midland.

Services were to be at 2:30 p.m. today in the Thomas Funeral Home chapel. Burial was to be in Fairview Cemetery.

He was born June 3, 1950, in Mexico. He had lived in Midland for the past nine years.

Survivors include his wife, Maria of Midland; a son, Lazaro Reyes Jr. of Midland; two daughters, Rachel and Ester Reyes, both of Midland; his parents, Ramon and Ester Reyes of Otello, Wash.; three brothers, Armando Reyes of Midland, and Javier Reyes and Raymon Reyes, both of Washington; three sisters, Elsa Montahano, Maria Reyes and Sonya Reyes, all of Washington; seven nephews and two nieces.

Renalond Harris

WACO — Renalond Harris, 85, of Waco, father of Elder M. Nichols of Midland, died Tuesday morning.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in Little and Sons Funeral Home in Waco.

Other survivors include two grandchildren of Midland.

Purolator security guard killed by robbers in suburban Dallas

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — An armored car security guard whose partner was killed in a holdup attempt last Christmas Eve was gunned down by robbers who took a bag of money he was carrying from a suburban Dallas supermarket.

Purolator Armored Car Co. guard Billy Perkins had stopped at the north-side Skaggs Alpha Beta store Thursday morning when the gunmen attacked him and escaped with the undisclosed amount of cash, police investigator Donnie Watts said.

"The men were waiting for him in the entryway, playing video games," Watts said.

"As he started walking toward the exit, they started shooting. They didn't give him any warning, or ask for the money, they just saw him and — bang-bang-bang."

Perkins drew his gun as he approached the men, but did not shoot, said a Purolator spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous.

"He must have had some indication something was going down," the spokesman said.

The men grabbed the money bag as the guard staggered back into the store while horrified witnesses stood by. Perkins died at a hospital an hour later. The gunmen fled in a truck parked behind the store, police said.

Perkins, the father of six children aged 1 to 6, had worked for Purolator for 16 months. His wife, Suvilla, an electrical assembler for Rockwell International, described her husband as "strictly a family man."

He took the day off to go shopping with his wife and missed being involved in the robbery that claimed his partner's life last winter.

"He was a loving and a sweet person," Mrs. Perkins said. "I warned him to be careful and watch. They didn't give him a chance. They just started shooting."

Odessa officer burned in fire

ODESSA — A city police officer suffered first- and second-degree burns to 50 percent of his body when the heating system of his mobile home exploded early today.

Patrolman Larry Bartlett, 37, of rural Ector County, was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital this morning.

Fire officials said a faulty heater apparently allowed gas to accumulate. The explosion occurred when Bartlett, who has been with the Odessa Police Department 11 days, attempted to light the heater's pilot light about 7:20 a.m.

Fire damage was moderate and no other injuries were reported.

Clayton missing person in Democratic unity show

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas — Democratic Speaker Bill Clayton is the obvious missing player in his party's show of unity for next Tuesday's gubernatorial election.

Big-name Democrats — even those who don't like each other — are hustling votes for Democratic nominee Mark White, but Clayton has been quietly jabbing at White and praising Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

No one in current Texas politics ignites more rumors than Clayton.

The speaker's non-stance in the governor's race may be due to the fact that he can't vote for the man he'd really like to see in the governor's mansion.

"Billy Clayton thinks he is more qualified to be governor than Bill Clements or Mark White. He thinks he is the most qualified in the state to be governor," said Bob Slagle, Texas Democratic Party chairman.

The speaker is not running for anything this year. Rumors early in the year had him running for any of several positions, as a Democrat or a Republican. Over the years, Clayton has been the subject of party-jumping rumors.

Clayton, some polls show, now suffers from "high negatives" as a result of his Brilab troubles, even though he was cleared of bribery charges.

"It disappoints me that he won't come out for the whole Democratic ticket," said Slagle. He said Clayton harbors some animosity towards White from their service together on the Legislative Redistricting Board last year.

Clayton's non-endorsement could hurt his future as a Democratic candidate for statewide office, Slagle said.

David Lindsey, White's press secretary, said Clayton's shots at White have not hurt because the party mainstream is unified. But Tony Garrett, Clements' press secretary, said it's got to be "disconcerting" to White.

Clayton has been sniping at White throughout the campaign.

Earlier this week, Clements' campaign workers, hoping for an endorsement, told reporters they might want to be at Clayton's speech to the Texas Oil Marketers Association.

There was no endorsement, just more of the same. Clayton, without mentioning names, said a campaign ad run by White "just turns my stomach." He told the TOMA members to look at the candidates' records.

"Just because I'm quitting public office doesn't mean I'm going to lose my concern for what's happening and what's going on. And I'm not going to be caught straddling any fences," Clayton said.

But he straddled enough to avoid an endorsement.

"I like people to make their own minds up about candidates," he told reporters. "All I want them to do is get through this hogwash ... and look, White's not the only one putting out that type of advertisements. Clements is, other candidates are."

After the speech he was asked if he agreed with Clements that White is incompetent as attorney general.

"I have to agree," he said. "Have you looked at the number of cases he's lost because of incompetent attorneys or non-licensed attorneys he sent or untimely filing of appeals."

Clayton, who advised the TOMA folks to vote for the man with the best record, told reporters Clements has the better record. But he wouldn't say if he would follow his own advice.

"I just always figured the ballot box was my secret place," he said.

He confused the issue even further by reminding reporters, "I'm still a Democrat."

Democrat enough to vote the straight party ticket?

"I don't believe I said," Clayton responded.

"I never have voted any other way," he said as he walked away.

An Analysis

Andrews citizens to meet to discuss ambulance service

ANDREWS — Ellen Hoffman is initating a movement to get a new ambulance service in Andrews, and she and other citizens will meet at 7 p.m. Monday in Old Country Club here to discuss the situation.

The police department has held the responsibility of handling the ambulance service for several years. Ambulance runs pre-empt their regular duties.

Police Chief Doug Gaines agreed that the service was an extra burden on his force. "Anytime you make anything extra it's going to be a burden," he said.

County Judge Roy Bennett said the county could foot its share of the $100,000-$125,000 needed for an independent ambulance service with only one and one-half per cent of its budget.

Former county constable charged with murder

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A controversial former Ector County constable has been charged with murder in connection with the shooting death of an Odessa man at a motel here late Thursday night.

Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee set $50,000 bond on 37-year-old Leonard Garcia Jr. of 426 W. May St. Garcia, who served briefly as constable in 1977, is charged with shooting 36-year-old William T. Dowd at the Imperial Motel on West Second Street about 10:30 p.m. Thursday. Garcia was arrested at the motel a half-hour later.

According to police, Dowd had been shot once in the head at close range and was found lying on the floor of room 111. Judge Lumpee pronounced him dead at the scene and ordered an autopsy. An argument over a debt is believed to have caused the shooting, police said. Dowd's body was taken to the Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home.

Garcia was appointed to the constable's post Sept. 16, 1977, but was later disqualified for not completing the required law enforcement training program, according to district court records.

He was subsequently defeated in the May 1978 Democratic primary race.

During the height of the 1978 Larry Lozano case, Garcia was found slumped in his car in a field near Midland Memorial Hospital. He said he had been drugged, kidnapped, beaten and left for dead because he had "inside information" in the Lozano death that "certain Ector County officials" didn't want divulged.

Garcia was later fined on a misdemeanor charge of filing a false police report after an investigation disclosed he had been seen in the company of a young woman at various local lounges the night he said he had been drugged and kidnapped.

Lozano, a 28-year-old Mexican-American being held in the Ector County jail, died Jan. 10, 1978. Then-Sheriff Elton Faught said he had committed suicide by beating his head against the metal window frame in his padded cell.

An El Paso pathologist ruled out suicide, however, and a justice of the peace inquest later ruled he died accidentally at the hands of six to eight law enforcement offiers who said they had gone into his cell to subdue him after he created a disturbance.

The results of a weeklong federal grand jury probe in July of 1978 were turned over to Justice Department officials, who declined to prosecute the case.

Mike Richards upstaged by campaign chairman

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

During a 20-minute news conference in the Chaparral Aviation lounge at Midland Regional Airport Thursday afternoon, state comptroller hopeful Mike Richards found himself upstaged by his own campaign chairman: Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry.

After brief opening remarks — in which the 44-year-old Republican banker and state senator from Houston blasted incumbent Bob Bullock for being pro-union — Richards opened up the floor to questions, most of which were directed at Landry.

Landry, named Richards' honorary campaign chairman before last spring's primary race, fielded such questions as how long the football strike would last and what its effect on the game would be, then said:

"I'm not the Dallas Cowboys. I'm a citizen who has the right to support anybody I want to. I support people with high character and integrity."

Richards, who read his remarks from a prepared statement handed out to reporters prior to the start of the news conference, said:

"My purpose for being here today is to reveal to you perhaps the single biggest difference between Bob Bullock and Mike Ricahrds — that final, critical difference that separates the two of us.

"As chief paymaster of over 170,000 state employees, Bob Bullock has time after time in the last eight years tried to unionize our state employees.

"In July of 1979, Comptroller Bullock told a convention of the AFL-CIO in Austin that: 'The public employees of this state need a friend. They need to be represented by the AFL-CIO.' At the same time he encouraged them to fight for unionizing state employees and assured them that they would win 'because your cause is just.'

"Then, in 1980, Bullock decided to withhold union dues from state employee paychecks.

"And now, just this week's issue of Texas Business Magazine explains why that was so significant. Dues check-off is the first major step that a union must take — and Bob Bullock took it for them.

"Just last Friday, Mr. Bullock said in a televised interview that he had never said that he was for unionizing state employees. You know, there's only one thing worse than having a state comptroller who supports unionizing state employees — and that's having a comptroller who can't remember what he said or who just can't afford to tell the truth about his real intentions.

"As a state senator I fought against unionizing state employees. As comptroller, I'll see to it that it doesn't happen."

Following his prepared statement, Richards compared the football strike to the prospect of state employees going on strike:

"It's unfortunate that due to a strike we can't see a football game on Sunday afternoon or Monday night. But I think (it would be) tragic because of a strike not to have a highway patrol car when you need one or a teacher in school."

When it was noted that collective bargaining for public employees can exist in Texas without the right to strike — which is the case with El Paso's police and fire departments — and that police officers nationwide have banded together in groups and associations that do not sanction walkouts, Richards said:

"The thrust of Mr. Bullock's objective of collective bargaining and dues check-off is the AFL-CIO, which is clearly defined as a union and not an association."

On the question of his chances of beating Bullock, a confident Richards said he was "a point or two behind at most," but that "by 10:30 or 11 o'clock Tuesday night, Mike Richards will be the state comptroller."

More municipalities move to ban trick-or-treating

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

Discoveries of needles in fruit, sabotaged candy and a threatening letter prompted more towns to ban trick-or-treating, and New Jersey promised jail terms to any "sick or twisted" person caught booby-trapping Halloween handouts.

As Halloween approached, reports of tampering surfaced Thursday in cities in New York, Connecticut, Florida, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York.

And the Food and Drug Administration reported Thursday that since the seven Chicago-area deaths from cyanide-laced Tylenol one month ago, there have been 270 reports of possible product contamination and 36 "hard-core, true tamperings."

"Recent events have made it all too clear that there are, out in our society, people who are sick or twisted or criminal or a combination of all three, who would ... put some foreign substance or poison in the candy that may go to our hildren on Halloween," New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean declared Thursday.

HE SIGNED A BILL rushed through the Legislature mandating jail terms of six months or more for anyone who tampers with holiday treats.

"We will spare no expense tracking down the perpetrator," Kean said.

But on the same day the bill became law, pins were found in candy in Howell Township, N.J., and authorities were investigating Snickers candy bars and Reese's peanut butter cups sold in Mount Holly, N.J., that burned the mouth of the people who ate them.

Doctors performed preliminary tests Thursday but were unable to identify the liquid.

"They have ruled out cyanide and strychnine and they've ruled out 200 other dangerous drugs," said Mayor Dud Nance. Officials said they would cancel Halloween if the substance is proved to be toxic.

AUTHORITIES IN OTHER states were investigating spiked drinks, sabotaged pills and contaminated food, with the reports heightening fears about children going door-to-door in search of treats.

"We're kind of holding our breath about Halloween," said Dr. Charles Wetli of Miami, chief assistant medical examiner for Dade County. "This is the kind of thing that can drive a country crazy."

Conneaut, Ohio, joined more than 40 towns nationwide that have canceled traditional trick-or-treating after Mayor Edward Griswold received an anonymous letter threatening the town's children.

"When you get letters like that, plus the Tylenol episode, it's pretty hard to turn your back on it," said George Adams, saftey service director.

"Beggar's Night" also was called off in Logan, Ohio, in part because a teen-age couple in the town south of Columbus were found murdered and decapitated earlier this month.

Florida officals announced an ad campaign headlined "A Little Consideration About Product Tampering. Authorities in the state continued their investigations of instances of adulterated candy, orange juice, punch, laxatives and other drugstore items.

"WE'RE ALSO TRYING to help defuse any sense of public panic," said Danny Pietrodangelo of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

In Phoenix, Ariz., a 54-year old clown with four children of his own is reaching into his pockets to provide a safe Halloween treat Sunday for local children — free ice cream cones at a store.

Alphonso the Clown, who doesn't want to be known by any other name, paid in advance with a blank check and said he doesn't care about the cost.

"I'm sick and tired of reading all this stuff in the papers about Tylenol and poison," he said. "I know something might happen on Halloween to hurt the kids. And I just don't want to see any of he get hurt."

The Standard-Times newspaper of New Bedford, Mass., was also offering a Halloween alternative for children — a party Sunday with cartoons and magicians.

Residents of Vermont were being warned Thursday not to take Anacin capsules as state health officials checked to see if a tainted bottle found in St. Albans was an isolated incident.

HEALTH COMMISSIONER Lloyd Novick issued the warning late Wednesday after tests found that an unidentified substance was added to three of the capsules. Two women complained of fever and upset stomachs after taking the capsules.

In Dublin, Ga., Eirlys Berryhill, 50, who drank Pepsi-Cola spiked with bleach, was treated and released at a hospital, said Laurens County Sheriff Ronnie Rogers. Pepsi-Cola Co. officials checked local distributors and found no other tainted bottles, but nevertheless warned residents to be "extremely careful."

In Detroit, Hygrade Food Products Corp. announced that a razor blade fragment found Tuesday in one of its hot dogs had been put there in a "deliberate sabotage" possibly by a "misguided employee."

An investigation showed the blade could not have been inserted as a result of the manufacturing process, the company said.

ODESSA — Police here today are investigating the reported Thursday night armed robbery of a 10th Street liquor store.

A clerk at 10th Street Liquors, 1101 W. 10th St., told officers a man came into the store about 8 p.m. Thursday, brandishing a small caliber blue steel revolver. He got away with an undisclosed amount of cash after telling the clerk: "Hurry up. I don't wanna use this thing."

The man was described as olive-skinned and about 30 years old. He was 5 feet, 4 inches tall and was wearing a dirty tan cap and long-sleeved blue coveralls.

Students vote for status quo in nationwide mock elections

BALTIMORE (AP) — Even though the results don't count, Republican congressmen fearing big GOP losses on Capitol Hill next Tuesday can take heart from student votes in a nationwide mock election.

Elementary and high school students and their parents left the political complexion of Congress virtually unchanged in the National Student-Parent Mock Election held Thursday. Republicans gained one Senate seat and lost only three in the House of Representatives, said Dan Ray, tabulating results here on a home computer Thursday night.

But Democrats dominated gubernatorial contests, as students returned George Wallace to Alabama's top post and re-elected William Clinton in Arkansas. Republicans held onto several governorships, but took none from Democrats.

The organizers admit the vote is very unscientific, even though a similar tally in 1980 predicted Ronald Reagan's victory over Jimmy Carter. The point isn't to gauge public opinion, organizers say, but to promote student interest in politics.

"The results of the election are not that important to us," said Renee Silverman, of Teachers Guides To Television, a New York-based nonprofit group that organized the election.

"We don't even care how accurate it is," Ms. Silverman said. "Our main purpose is to encourage citizenship and get students and parents to work together."

"It is being done to find the way to get at the problem of a constantly declining vote in a democracy," said Gloria Kirshner, editor of Teachers Guides To Television.

Trial participants ready to listen to Chagra tapes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The government passed the midway point in its case against three people charged in U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.'s assassination as workmen began equipping the courtroom to play secret tape recordings of the defendants.

FBI agents have brought to court 10 "composite" tapes containing the crux of jailhouse conversations of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra which prosecutors deem most important to their case.

Joseph Chagra, Jimmy's brother and an El Paso attorney who was recorded in the tapes, could also testify as early as today, said attorney Warren Burnett.

Prosecutor John Emerson said he was not sure whether the tapes would be played today before the weekend recess.

Emerson said technicians overnight were to install individual headphones for jurors to listen to the tapes. He said the recordings also would be audible to spectators and news reporters.

The composite tapes were boiled down from hundreds of hours of conversations contained in 914 reels of tapes brought to court in 11 cardboard boxes.

Prosecutors indicated they want to play only three of five hours of the conversations that they allege contain relevant talk about the contract killing of Wood here on May 29, 1979. But defense lawyers have indicated they may insist on playing other portions that would benefit their clients.

U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions said Thursday that the trial, which began with jury selection on Sept. 28, may continue past Thanksgiving.

Sessions told an inquiring defense attorney he plans to conduct court on Veterans Day, Nov. 11, then added: "We'll take Thanksgiving off. For that, you can give thanks."

Prosecutors had called 65 witnesses and introduced more than 60 exhibits at the end of 13 days of testimony Thursday in the trial of Charles V. Harrelson, 44, his wife Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, and Chagra's wife, Elizabeth, 28.

The government has reportedly lined up 120 witnesses, while defense attorneys said they would call enough witnesses to run the total to more than 200 in the trial that could last up to two months.

Jimmy Chagra, 39, who will be tried for murder in a separate trial, is charged in hiring Harrelson to shoot Wood to death for $250,000 to prevent the tough federal judge from presiding at Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial.

Mrs. Chagra is on trial for conspiracy to murder and obstruct justice, and Mrs. Harrelson is accused of conspiring to obstruct justice.

Most of the tape recordings are of conversations that Jimmy Chagra had with his wife and Joseph Chagra between Oct. 10, 1980 and Jan. 26, 1981, by telephone and in the visiting room of the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan.

Joseph Chagra, 35, pleaded guilty to murder conspiracy on Sept. 15 and agreed to be a prosecution witness in exchange for a prison sentence which reportedly will not exceed 10 years. His wife, Patty, appeared at the courthouse Thursday and said her husband was upstairs in the federal marshal's office, but that she did not know when he would take the stand.

On Thursday, the government introduced another piece of Harrelson's writing into evidence.

"Since death is certain I should only be credited with speeding up a natural process," Harrelson allegedly wrote during a standoff of several hours with West Texas lawmen on the day of his arrest on Aug. 31, 1980. "My marker should only read, 'He did his part for ZPG — Zero Population Growth.' "

An FBI agent testified he reassembled a motel picture postcard containing the quotation which had been torn into 16 pieces and thrown to the ground where Harrelson was taken into custody at Van Horn, Texas.

Earlier, government attorneys introduced a diary in which Harrelson wrote on Aug. 30, 1980, "I've never killed a person who was undeserving of it."

Harrelson testified during a pretrial hearing that he feared he was going to be killed the day of his arrest, without explaining whom he believed would kill him.

Inmate says he was high when warden was killed

GALVESTON (AP) — Texas prison inmate Eroy Brown said he had had been smoking marijuana the day Ellis Prison Unit Warden Wallace Pack was killed during a fight with the convict, a witness testified.

Testimony opened Thursday in Brown's retrial on a capital murder charge in the death of Pack, who was drowned in a creek that flows through the grounds of Texas' toughest lockup.

Brown, who says he killed Pack and prison farm manager Billy Max Moore in self-defense, is on trial for a second time in Pack's death. His first trial ended in a mistrial last March when jurors deadlocked, 10-2, for acquittal.

Prosecutors say Brown will be tried later on a capital murder charge lodged in Moore's shooting death.

Brown, 31, caused a disturbance and was being taken to another part of the Ellis prison farm when the killing took place April 4, 1981, according to William Allens Jr., 54, an agricultural supervisor at the Ellis unit.

Allens said he was supervising a group of inmates doing agricultural work when Brown flew into what he called a "tantrum."

The supervisor said he asked Brown what his problem was and quoted Brown as saying he had been smoking "a weed."

Allens said he put Brown into a pickup and drove to a pond nearby, where Moore was fishing.

Moore took the wheel of the pickup and drove to a farm shed, Allens said.

Allens said he asked Brown several times where he got the marijuana and quoted the inmate as saying it was growing near one of the farm buildings.

Another witness, Richard Bustka, an assistant warden in the Coffield Unit who was fishing with Moore and Moore's brother, Benny, said he saw Moore drive away with Allens and a black inmate.

Bustka said he and Benny Moore saw Pack drive past the pond a few minutes later. Shortly afterward, an ambulance and a truck filled with armed guards raced past the pond in the same direction taken by Pack.

The assistant warden said he and Benny Moore ran to a pickup and followed the ambulance. They arrived at a bridge spanning Turkey Creek in time to see Pack's body being carried up the bank.

On the other side of the bridge, Bustka said, was a covered body.

Bustka said Benny Moore ran to the body, realized it was his brother and began to weep and hug the dead man.

Moments later, said the witness, Benny Moore collapsed and was taken to the prison infirmary.

The special prosecutor handling the case, Mack Arnold of Houston, said Thursday he plans to present no new evidence in the case and predicted the retrial could take considerably less time than the four-week proceeding earlier this year.

Arnold introduced several photographs of the scene where the bodies of Pack and Moore were found, including closeups of blood spots on the bumper of Pack's car.

New precinct's very quiet

FORT WORTH (AP) — The newest election precinct in Tarrant County may also be its quietest — it's a cemetery.

Tarrant County commissioners have voted to designate Olivet Cemetery as an official precinct. The new precinct does have three voters — all living — registered for the general election Tuesday, said County Clerk Madrin Huffman.

"A caretaker and his family live within the cemetery," Huffman said. "To avoid having a polling place only for them, they will vote in an adjacent precinct."

Beaumont banker Lonnie Weir hugs his wife, Vita, after returning home Thursday following his attempt to fulfill two extortionists' demands. The two men, whom the FBI has joined the search for, strapped a back vibrator to Weir and told him the "bomb" would explode if he tried to remove it. Weir went to the bank where he is president and collected over $150,000 to pay the men.

'Bomb,' $50,000 parts of Thursday abduction

BEAUMONT (AP) — The FBI has joined the hunt for two gunmen who strapped a fake bomb to a bank president after abducting him and tying up his family in a $50,000 extortion attempt, police said.

The banker escaped after the gunmen botched the kidnapping attempt Thursday, police said. The bomb turned out to be a back vibrator, wrapped with duct tape so that it appeared to be an explosive.

Police have few leads on the stocking-masked gunmen, who forced their way into Lamar State Bank President Lonnie Weir's home in an affluent westside neighborhood about 7:45 a.m, Police Lt. Bruce Thomason said.

One of the men was waiting beside the door when Weir's 13-year-old daughter Margaret opened it to leave for school. He stepped inside and was joined by the other man, both armed with pistols, Thomason said.

"They were very polite at all times, but they told Weir they would kill his wife and daughter if he didn't cooperate," Thomason said.

The men buckled the battery-operated vibrator around Weir — telling him the device would explode if he tried to remove it — after binding him, his wife, Vita, and the family's maid, who was not identified.

The men told Weir they would hold his family hostage while he went to the bank and picked up $50,000 in ransom money.

"That's how much he grabbed in the bank," Thomason said of the cash. "He just grabbed wads of money until he was sure he had enough. He grabbed handfuls of bills, and he only missed his calculations by about $119,000."

Weir was told he had only 4½ minutes to get in and out of the bank, apparently so that he would think he was being watched, Thomason said.

"When he walked in, he said, 'I have a bomb on me; stay away from me, I don't have time to explain,' " Thomason said.

Although authorities called the extortion attempt "very well-planned," Weir did not find a Frito bag the gunmen said would contain a note telling him what to do with the money. He drove home to find that his family had freed themselves and that the gunmen had left in his second car.

"They messed up with the bag. We found it after it was all over," said Thomason.

The typewritten note directed Weir to go to an apartment complex parking lot about a mile away, where he would have found the car the gunmen left in, Thomason said. A second note in the car told Weir to leave the money there and drive his other car to Houston to pick up his wife and daughter in a motel.

"They never had any intention of being anywhere near Houston, of course," Thomason said. "They just wanted that delay of several hours before Weir contacted police."

Weir called police from the bank chairman's home about 8:45 a.m.

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell customers in Texas will begin paying a 10 percent surcharge on intrastate long distance calls about Nov. 15, according to a company spokesman.

Dale Johnson said Thursday the company would charge the additional amount until the company earns the $16.7 million in added revenues approved by the courts. He estimated it would take about three months.

A Public Utility Commission spokesman had said Wednesday the increase approved by the commission Monday was effective immediately.

The telephone company asked for a $326 million increase in 1980, but the commission approved only $114. State District Judge Harley Clark of Austin ruled the PUC order was $16.7 million too low.

Supreme Court to decide fate of 'Candy Man'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is expected to decide today whether Ronald Clark O'Bryan, dubbed the "Candy Man," can be executed as scheduled on Halloween for the poisoning of his son with cyanide-laced candy in Texas.

Justices will consider in conference a request by state officials that they overturn an order by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals staying O'Bryan's execution, officials said.

Assistant Texas Attorney General Leslie A. Benitez asked Justice Byron R. White on Thursday to lift the stay and permit the execution to proceed, but White referred the case to the full Supreme Court. The court had refused to review O'Bryan's conviction in 1980.

"Nobody likes to see an execution occur," Texas Attorney General Mark White said earlier. "Our job is to see that the law is upheld, and that's what we're doing."

A three-judge panel in New Orleans on Wednesday had blocked the execution to give O'Bryan time to pursue further appeals.

A state district judge had sentenced O'Bryan to die in the first U.S. execution by lethal injection. There has not been an execution in Texas since 1964.

The appeals court panel, in its 2-1 decision, also ordered expedited hearings on the issues raised in the appeal — including the way some jurors were excluded from O'Bryan's 1975 trial in Houston. The panel also agreed to declare O'Bryan a pauper in a move to defray some legal expenses.

An appeals court clerk said the case will be heard the week of Jan. 24, but no specific date has been set.

The former Deer Park, Texas, optician was nicknamed the "Candy Man" by his fellow inmates on death row because of the 1974 Halloween murder of his 8-year-old son.

Five people have been executed in the United States since the Supreme Court revived the death penalty in 1976.

In the latest execution, Frank J. Coppola was electrocuted in Virginia less than three months ago. Recent tallies show there are more than 1,000 inmates on death row in the United States.

The appeals court majority concluded that a "substantial question" was raised by O'Bryan's claims that his trial was not fair because three people who expressed reservations about the death penalty were excluded from the jury.

"A significant segment of the American population harbors serious reservations about the death penalty," the appeals court ruled, "and...the exclusion from jury service of persons who have such reservations would result in a jury unconstitutionally composed because it is not representative of the community."

White's opposition to the stay was criticized by Texas Civil Liberties Union executive director John Duncan.

"We find it reprehensible and deplorable that White has chosen to again attempt to execute an inmate before the November election," Duncan said.

He said that White went to the U.S. Supreme Court on Aug. 17 opposing a stay of execution for another Texas death row inmate.

State District Judge Michael T. McSpadden, in ordering the Halloween execution, told O'Bryan he picked the date because O'Bryan "ruined Halloween for everyone."

On Monday, only five days before the scheduled execution by lethal injection, O'Bryan's lawyer brought the case to the New Orleans court.

Spending holdup wanted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas College Coordinating Board on Thursday recommended that the 1983 Legislature not spend general revenue money for construction at schools within the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems.

The board recommended that the Legislature wait until some action is taken on a possible proposal to include those schools within the financing of the Permanent University Fund.

Several campuses with the UT and A&M systems do not receive PUF money.

If the Legislature authorizes spending general revenue money, the board said, some schools could get "double funding."

Washington widow lives unusual life

By STEPHANIE MANSFIELD
Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — At 83, Edith Cummings Munson, former national women's golf champion (1923), first woman on the cover of Time magazine (Aug. 25, 1924), big game hunter in the Yukon, debutante, heiress and dodger of bullets in World War II as a Red Cross volunteer, says things might be getting the teensiest bit dull lately.

"Oftentimes," she confides, "I feel that if I just saw one vulgar person it would be kind of fun."

She giggles, the nooks and crannies of her sun-weathered face crinkling under clear gray eyes. Her hair is a halo of snow, paler than the pearls clipped to her earlobes. On the table of her Georgetown mansion is a vase of freshly cut, yellow Gerber daisies. On her finger, a large square diamond. On her walls, etchings, watercolors and other paintings by Gaugin, Dufy, Sargent, de Chirico and Corot. On the wide-plank hardwood floor, the skin of a zebra she shot in Africa.

EDITH MUNSON, a Washington widow whose adventures might have made a classic Katharine Hepburn movie, has quietly donated $500,000 to the National Trust for Historic Preservation to refurbish the old Decatur House stables, known as The Carriage House, on Layfayette Square near the White House. She is giving the money in memory of her Naval commander husband, Curtis Munson. Recently, the National Trust honored her with a star-studded dinner.

Munson has a hard time believing that she should be honored. In fact, she spent much of the evening talking about her late husband, a Naval intelligence officer under FDR, World War II hero and soldier who was absolutely furious when they told him he couldn't go to Korea — at the age of 62.

"They don't take you at that age," says his widow, perfectly serious.

Born Edith Cummings in Chicago, she was the oldest of three children. Her father was a wealthy businessman, who taught his tomboy daughter how to play golf at an early age.

She took up sculpting ("fortunately, I knew how bad I was"), rode horses and left her Lake Forest home at age 14 for Westover, a toney girls boarding school in Connecticut.

"TO PLEASE FATHER, I went into golf. Quite a few women played then, but not the way they do now. There was no kind of rough and tumble tough stuff. It was thoroughly what I call 'a nice game.' Of course, there were no women professionals in those days."

Golf, she says, "teaches you more about life. I also think it's the most mental, physical game there is. You have to have complete control of your nerves and mind. It isn't any dumbbell's game."

During World War I, she sold liberty bonds and in 1921 went to England to play in the women's championship.

Tall and slim, with warm brown hair, she was one of the prettiest young society women of her day. But the seemingly charmed life had its sorrows. She flips through an old scrapbook, cluttered with dried flowers, dance cards, programs from Vernon and Irene Castle dance exhibitions.

There was one tragic love affair.

"His mother was a proper Bostonian," she says. "They called her the Czarina. Quite protective and jealous. She thought that Chicago people were outside the realm of what she wanted for her son. Can you imagine? And it was a very sad thing because he didn't want to give me up and I finally said, 'Fish or cut bait.' But then he kept coming back, reopening the wound, you see. This is what kept me from meeting anyone else for a long time."

He never married, she says, and eventually "went mental."

A newspaper clipping of the time summed Munson up as "a noted society sportswoman ... one of the most popular girls in Chicago society since her debut in 1919. She is well-known in Palm Beach, Jamaica, Arizona and European smart resorts. At home, she has been hostess to many well-known people."

She pooh-poohs the socialite label. "I never was completely satisfied (with that). I thought it was a nice diversion and a way to meet people, but I never gave myself over to what I call 'vapid society.' I was a little too serious for that."

At the age of 29, she says her life was endangered by tumors on her uterus.

"When I came out of the ether the doctor said, 'No cancer, but no babies.' " They had removed her uterus. "Of course I realize that as a woman it's a very important thing that I missed. But I'm not anybody who sits around moping or regretting. I'm much too progressive in my life to have regrets about anything."

IN 1931, SHE MET Curtis Munson at a dinner party given by a friend in Lake Forest. She was 32. He was 39, divorced and the owner of coal mines in the Canadian Rockies. No, she says, it was not love at first sight. "It amused me because I was sitting next to him and he burnt a hole in the lovely tablecloth and just moved a plate over it," she laughs.

Two years later, they married and stayed married for 46 years. "I think the important thing about marriage is that you simply can't live without somebody. Instead of, 'Can you live with him?' "

When her husband went overseas for World War II, Edith Munson went with him, serving as director of staff welfare for the Red Cross in Europe. "I drove a 1 1-2-ton truck from London to Paris with a mobile kitchen behind it. It took me 13 days," she says, "13 days."

She feels sorry for the women who stayed behind in America. "They had a lot of work to do and none of the glamor. I had a lot of very scary experiences, like those buzzbombs, the jets that the Germans established to synchronize with the landing of Normandy. They aimed them, with no pilot. They were like a witch on a broomstick."

One of them she says, came straight for her and missed the house she was staying in outside of London by five feet.

AFTER THE WAR, she and her husband returned to Washington, where they lived in the rectory of Christ Church and continued their spirited life. They traveled often to Canada, and one day while skiing up a frozen river near Alberta passed by a beautiful spot 200 feet above the water, dotted with spruce trees. The next day they bought it, 700 acres at $42 an acre, and built a vacation home overlooking the water.

They camped out in 25-degree weather, cooked on a campfire, shot ducks, geese, prairie chickens and Hungarian partridge. "This is the way I love to live in the outdoors," she recalls wistfully.

A year ago, plagued by high blood pressure and her bad hip, she decided to sell the land. "That is why I'm able to give this money in memory of my husband. It was a just a gold mine, that land."

Now she's busy writing a family history, playing bridge with friends, and attending concerts at the Kennedy Center. She divides her time between here and Florida, and is saddened by the recent loss of her three best friends, one of them a suicide. "I don't think you make friends as easily after 65," she says softly.

SHE ISN'T EXACTLY enamored with the latter part of the 20th century. "Life used to be so agreeably simple compared to now," she says. "We had water that tasted good instead of chlorine. The fresh, unpolluted air. Television and the planes are a very bothersome thing."

But these things are minor annoyances. Yes, she says, she is lucky to have lived 83 years. Lucky to have had such an interesting life. Maybe even a fascinating one. "I think you make your own life," she says, the autumn sun shining through her window. "You have to be lucky in certain things. But you usually get what you deserve."

Edith Cummings Munson takes a swing on the links in 1922.

Paul Hayes, specialist in makeup and hair, was in Midland this week conducting private consultation at the Christine Valmy Salon. Hayes' freelance work in New York has earned him the title of one of the best beauty makers by Town and Country Magazine for three consecutive years.

"The eyes have it," Hayes said. "More emphasis is on the eye in a rounded pattern effect because it looks good on most everyone." Color is used not only for shadow color but for soft definition for this effect. "It has been a long time since the color spectrum has been so varied, but it's wonderful because it really lets a woman play with color," Hayes added.

"Hair for fall, whether long or short, should show volume. A nice shoulder length cut adds versatility," he said.

Some of the celebrities Hayes has worked with are Carrie Fisher, Olivia Newton-John, Susan Lucci of "All My Children," Randall Edwards of "Ryan's Hope," Isabella Rosillini, Gelsey Kirkland, Mikhail Baryshnikov, Susanne Farrell of NYC Ballet, Merrill Ashley of NYC Ballet, Barbara Cook, Jessica James, Dara Sedaka, Van Halen rock group, Bette Midler and Tasha Thomas. His work has appeared in the magazines Vogue, Harpers Bazaar, Town and Country, Self, US, People, Glamour, Mademoiselle, German Vogue, Italian Bazzar, Gracia (Italy), Charme (Germany), Time (cover May, 1978), Dance Magazine, Claudia (Mexico) and After Dark.

Whether you drive in the Sun Belt or the Snow Belt, a little dirt is a dangerous thing.

"A dusty windshield, smudged sunglasses and dirty headlights can seriously impair your ability to see and be seen," said Eric Birch, vice president of Optical Products for Corning Glass Works.

"For every driver at the site of an accident who says, 'I just didn't see the other car,' it's quite possible that one or more glass products between him and the other driver wasn't properly maintained," said Birch. "We know, for example, that dirty headlights can lose up to 50 percent of their output and as much as 70 percent when dirt is coupled with bad weather conditions. We've also found that glare from sun, snow, fog and oncoming headlights is intensified by dirty windshields.

"Here are some suggestions from Corning on ways of assuring your seeing what's ahead while driving:

• Clean the inside and outside of windshield and the rear view and sideview mirrors once a week. Keep a spray can of window cleaner and a roll of paper towels in the car.

• Replace windshield wiper blades as soon as they're no longer working effectively. Streaked windshields intensify the effects of glare.

• If it's snowing, make sure your headlights, taillights and the front and rear bumpers below them are kept clean. Remove snow from roof to avoid having chunks fall down while you're driving and block your vision.

DAYLIGHT DRIVING

• Wear sunglasses during daylight hours to cut glare and avoid squinting and eyestrain. Get into the habit of cleaning your sunglasses and putting them on before turning on the ignition. Never wait until the sun is directly in your eyes before fumbling through glove compartment or pocketbook for them.

• Don't store road maps or other papers above sun visor. If you suddenly need the extra protection and pull down the visor, a cascade of papers blocking your vision can cause an accident.

TWILIGHT HOURS

Dusk is the most dangerous time for drivers. The largest number of fatalities occur at 6 p.m. in winter. Be prepared by:

• Removing sunglasses as soon as the sun sets.

• Turning on headlights one hour before sunset (or earlier if visibility is poor due to rain, snow or fog).

NIGHT DRIVING

• Never wear sunglasses, even lightly tinted ones, at night.

• Make sure all headlights are clean, working and properly adjusted. Check headlights and taillights regularly. A broken taillight cover creates a spot of bright white light that can affect the vision of the driver behind you.

Even for funeral directors, times are changing

By IVAN SHARPE
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Remember how funeral directors used to favor black silk hats, striped trousers and magnificently somber morning coats? Even — so the joke went — when they went to bed.

Proving this stereotype was long ago buried, the 500 morticians attending the convention of the National Selected Morticians in San Francisco wore a splendid variety of clothes. Although dark suits were favored by most, there were enough bright red jackets, yellow trousers and pea-green sweaters to give the impression that this was a meeting of hot-shot salesmen.

Alas, the business of disposing of the dead is not what it was. Here, for instance, was Rick Berardinelli of Santa Fe, N.M., wearing blue jeans and open-necked shirt, sitting with an arm around girlfriend Glynnette Somberg as he listened to a nostalgic speech about the "good old days" when funeral directors symbolized faith, love and moral values.

That, of course, was before author Jessica Mitford, helped by a militant consumer movement, exposed much of the funeral business as hypocritical and greedy.

Once morticians were content to be simply businessmen. Now, as the convention revealed, they talked knowledgeably about the "psychology of death" and hire ex-ministers as counselors to the bereaved.

Berardinelli is, perhaps, typical of the younger breed of funeral director. He took a lot of gibes as a youth because his father owned a small mortuary, so he went to culinary school and became a restaurant chef.

After two years of dishing up meals, he grew tired of "working my butt off for little money." Though his friends thought he was crazy, he asked his dad for a job and spent a year learning the business at San Francisco's College of Mortuary Science. That was eight years ago.

Now 30, he claims he spends less time dealing with bodies than he does in coping with human emotions. And he likes it. "Grief," he says earnestly, "is not something we make up. It's a very real thing."

He favors burials over cremations — a troublesome issue among the mortuary moguls these days. "Cremation is sweeping emotions under the rug," he claims.

He is not as liberal as his blue jeans suggest, however. At funerals, he still wears dark suits. The jeans are for when he relaxes.

Frank Miller, the NSM's executive director, is another example of changing trends in the funeral business. A professor in counseling and psychology at Northwestern University for 25 years, he had never been a funeral director when he assumed the NSM's top-paid post eight years ago. Yet his efforts to push national research into death and grief have been generally applauded within the profession.

As Miller explains it, past efforts to expose sharp practices in what author Mitford termed "The American Way of Death" was not such a bad thing. Hypocrites, he says, exist in every profession, and not every mortuary owner is a "sharpie or crook." He said that the NSM limits its members to those with the highest standards. The "Selected" in its title means exactly what it says, he claims.

Its 950 member firms — dues are up to $740 annually — handle just 5 percent of the funerals in this country. New members must be proposed by three existing members and thoroughly investigated. Last year, the NSM accepted 27 new members, while 19 resigned or were terminated. Between 60 and 65 proposed new members were quietly rejected, Miller said. Many of NSM's members are small mortuaries — chain-type mortuaries are unwelcome.

NSM convention delegates spent their time debating and learning about funeral alternatives, computers and tax shelters. They also heard an account of how the NSM leadership had led the funeral industry struggle to modify Federal Trade Commission rules — approved last July after 10 years of debate — that would force funeral directors to itemize prices and types of services.

Catalog shopping changing

By IRENE GARDNER KEENEY
Hearst Feature Service

If the calendar hasn't reminded you that Christmas isn't too far off, your mailbox probably has. Christmas catalogs seem to arrive simultaneously with the first hint of chill in the air.

Mail order shopping has changed considerably since the first mail order catalog was published in 1872 by Aaron Montgomery Ward, and rural families eagerly awaited the arrival of their "wish books." Today's mail order catalogs cater to collectors, gourmet cooks, joggers, left-handers, weavers, wine lovers and just plain lovers. The variety of goods seems endless.

Mail order shopping has become big business. Last year, more than $36 billion worth of goods and services were sold through the mail. This year, the figure should reach $40 billion, according to Donna Sweeney, director of communications for the Direct Mail Marketing Association, a trade organization of mail order companies.

Why the burgeoning business in the face of today's economy?

"A number of reasons," Sweeney suggests. "Two-income families, working women who have less time to shop, different lifestyles." But perhaps the greatest catalyst for the growth in mail order buying are the catalogs themselves — slimmer, trimmer, updated versions of the old wish books.

"The specialty catalogs probably started the trend to more mail order shopping, and that trend encouraged more companies to take advantage of the increased market," says Sweeney. "Sears Roebuck, Saks Fifth Avenue, Bloomingdale's, Spiegel's, Montgomery Ward, all are now doing more specialty catalogs than they did 10 to 20 years ago. There's a definite trend to the one product category catalog."

One significant reason for the move to smaller, specialty catalogs is cost. Publishing costs and delivery costs for the old five-pound mail order tomes have skyrocketed in recent years. Another reason is the advent of the computer age.

Sweeney says that the big books published by the major catalog companies cost $4 to $5 apiece. "The customer who receives that 1500-page catalog may enjoy browsing through it, but buys only clothing. Now, because of computers, the company can track its customer's buying preferences and send only the catalog it thinks may interest that buyer. It just makes more sense in today's economy," she points out.

Computers have changed the way that Sears Roebuck Co. selects recipients of its catalogs, says Ted Erfer, director of media relations for Sears. "We have 25 million persons buying from Sears catalogs, but with computers, we can target special interests and send them the catalogs we think they will use," says Erfer.

"It's fun to get a package in the mail," says Sweeney of the DMMA. "That's probably the part of mail order shopping that hasn't changed since the days of the old wish books."

Some Jewish couples seeking changes in Israeli marriage laws

By JON BERRY
Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — When a Reform or Conservative Jewish couple gets married in Israel, they must go through two weddings. One is for the bride and groom, and has the rabbis, ideas and trappings of their choice.

The other wedding is for the state, which recognizes only one branch of Judaism — Orthodox — the oldest and most traditional branch, for the purposes of marrying and divorcing Jewish Israelis.

For the Reform couple facing an Orthodox wedding, it means in all likelihood a ceremony conducted by rabbis they don't know, who preach ideas they do not share, says Rabbi Uri Regev, 31, a Reform Jew from Jerusalem. "It is as if," he says, "all Americans were deprived of the church of their choice for a wedding and referred to a Catholic priest."

Regev was here as part of a campaign to rally support for broadening Israel's marriage laws — an issue now pending before Israel's Supreme Court. He is secretary of MARAM, Israel's Council of Progressive Rabbis. Last year, two leaders of MARAM filed a petition with the Supreme Court, demanding that the government and chief rabbinate office show cause why Reform rabbis should not be allowed to perform marriages.

To Regev, the Israeli mandate of an Orthodox ceremony detracts from the richness and value of the "unofficial" wedding and goes against Israeli values.

"It is a hypocrisy," he says."Marriage is not just a civil matter, but an emotional and meaningful religious practice. It goes against conscience to do it twice."

The Israeli declaration of independence guarantees freedom of religion for all citizens. To accomplish this, Israel has separated civil and religious laws, giving religious bodies jurisdiction over such events as marriage and divorce.

In 1953, the Knesset, Israel's parliament, decreed that the best way of doing such was granting each religion — Jewish, Moslem and Christian — power over its own congregation. At the time, only Orthodox Jews numbered significantly in Israel, so Orthodox rabbis were given exclusive jurisdiction for all Jews.

Registered dieticians help dieters

By LOUISE COOK
AP Writer

Trying to figure out what to eat these days is enough to drive you to drink.

Improper eating habits — including the consumption of too much salt, sugar and fats and not enough fiber — have been linked to health problems including heart diseases and many forms of cancer.

There's no shortage of advice on nutrition, whether you are trying to change your diet to improve your health, your appearance or both.

Reliable advice is a different story, however. And the New York Heart Association is trying to help people sort out some of the conflicting claims.

The association has published "A Consumer's Guide To Choosing and Using the Nutrition Counseling for Cardiovascular Health." It is available from the New York Heart Association, 205 E. 42nd St., New York, N.Y., 10017. There is no charge, but you should enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope at least 8½ by 4 inches with your order.

The guide is designed for readers who are particularly worried about dietary dangers that can lead to heart trouble, but it is valuable for anyone who is confused about food.

The guide points out that the first step is a visit to the doctor. The problems start after the doctor has made his or her diagnosis and recommended a course of action. Most people need someone who can help them implement the changes that have been suggested and make it easier for them to adapt their lives to new eating habits.

That "someone," says the heart association, should be a registered dietician — a nutrition expert who has been certified by the American Dietetic Association. Qualifications for registered dieticians include passage of a national examination and a minimum of a baccalaureate degree in foods, nutrition or a related science.

Many registered dieticians call themselves nutritionists or food or nutrition counselors. People who are NOT registered often use similar titles, however, and those titles may be meaningless. To avoid problems, look for the letters "R.D." after the individual's name.

Some dieticians specialize in particular diseases or conditions. To find someone who suits your needs, ask your doctor for a recommendation. If he or she cannot help, contact the Consulting Nutritionists in Private Practice, a division of the American Dietetic Association, at P.O. Box 345, Cold Spring, N.Y., 10516. If you are looking for a dietician who specializes in cardiovascular problems, check your local chapter of the American Heart Association.

Don't expect an instant analysis and solution of your problems. You probably will need a diet designed for you. Many dieticians will ask patients to keep a "food diary" to use as a basis for a new eating plan that fits your taste, budget and lifestyle. You generally will need at least two visits to the dietician — one for evaluation and one for follow-up counseling.

The cost of diet advice varies; a reputable counselor should be willing to explain the fee structure with you in advance. If you have been referred to a dietician by a doctor, the bills may be covered by medical insurance; check your policy.

Sheik offers Pennsylvania town $3 million to vote against Reagan

MIDLAND, Pa. (AP) — Residents of this dusty old mill town say they're startled by a Saudi billionaire's offer to give Midland $3 million if all its voters pledge not to support President Reagan in 1984.

Sentiment was mixed Wednesday over whether the town pf 5,200 should seriously consider Sheik Mohammed al-Fassi's proposal. And authorities said the sheik's offer could be a violation of federal election laws.

Sheik al-Fassi

"This town is 90 percent Democratic. For that 10 percent, he's going to give $3 million? He could own the town for that kind of money," said Frank Cohara, 66, a retired steelworker who added he wouldn't sign a pledge against Reagan.

"I'd go door to door to get names," Jesse Torres, 35, an unemployed steelworker, told his laid-off friends at the United Steelworkers Local 1212 hall.

"You can't blame Reagan. I voted for Reagan last time. But I'd sign a petition. Basically, we've been ripped off," said unemployed steelworker Fred Oberg, 32.

The 27-year-old sheik, known for his lavish lifestyle and for donating thousands of dollars to U.S. cities, said Tuesday he would give Midland $3 million if all its registered voters would sign a pledge not to vote for Reagan.

Midland officials on Monday deposited a $35,000 check from Fassi, who made the donation after reading about the town's economic plight. The town's largest employer, the Crucible specialty steel plant, was closed Oct. 15. At its peak, the plant employed more than 5,000 people.

Fassi said he was upset with Reagan for allegedly ignoring pleas from Midland's residents to save the plant.

"I told him President Reagan is doing the best he can do under the circumstances," said the sheik's attorney, Richard Hirschfeld. "At that, the sheik became a bit irate and said he's (Reagan) doing nothing. Then he laid out his plan to wire $3 million to this borough.

"I don't know what motivates him," Hirschfeld said. "I've known him for quite a while, but I don't know what makes him tick.

"I advised him not to get involved in the American political process," Hirschfeld said. "I think he's making a mistake."

About 82 percent of Midland's 2,200 registered voters are Democrats. But borough Secretary Ed Cilli, a Democrat, doubts everyone will line up against the president.

"Even before 1932, in the midst of the Great Depression, people still voted for Hoover," Cilli said, "and I'm pretty sure that there would still be people who will vote for (Reagan)."

Justice Department spokesman John Wilson said the Voting Rights Act of 1965 prohibits anyone from knowingly paying, offering to pay or accepting payment "either for registration to vote or for voting." Violation carries a maximum penalty of $10,000 in fines and five years' imprisonment, Wilson said.

The provision applies mainly to presidential and congressional elections, Wilson said.

Cilli said the sheik hadn't contacted borough officials about his latest offer, which became known here through reporters.

"Everybody's talking about it, though. Someone came in today and said, 'Hey, the sheik has adopted Midland.' "

Despite his Democratic allegience, John Kovarik said he wouldn't sign anything against Reagan.

"I don't like the idea of selling my vote," said the 59-year-old unemployed steelworker.

NATO exercises planned

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — About 9,000 soldiers from six countries will take part in NATO exercises in northern Greece Nov. 10-Dec. 5 to test the readiness of the European mobile force, the NATO military command said Thursday.

Belgian, West German, U.S., British and Italian forces will join with Greek units in simulated combat operations.

"As with all such exercises, it has a purely defensive character, the NATO announcement said. "Its purpose is not to create any tension in the area but to demonstrate the defense readiness of the allied forces involved."

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Veteran actress Ruth Gordon and Henry ("Fonzie") Winkler of "Happy Days" share this birthday with you. Also born on this date: President John Adams, poet Ezra Pound and the late, great WW II naval commander, William "Bull" Halsey. Business ventures will prosper in the year ahead. Financial worries lessen and you share in a loved one's good fortune. Those in school who play sports enjoy unusual success. You find a coach who appreciates your quick intelligence as well as your physical skills. Parent-child relations become better than ever. Your actions inspire trust. Be sure romantic partner shares your commitment to family life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are too concerned about your appearance today. Romance may have you on edge. Relax and enjoy yourself. Help a child attack a school problem before it escalates into something serious.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Parents get unexpected help with their children. Spend some time with a friend or relative who has been out of circulation recently. A new relationship could change your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Check to be sure that doors are locked when they should be. Good news arrives from far away. Keep your social plans flexible. Follow up on a blind date.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A family member calls for help. Postpone your social plans. Do not be afraid to become involved in loved ones' problems if you can help them find the right answers.

LEO (July 23-Oct. 22): You need your wits about you to get out of a domestic jam. Money could be at the root of troubles with mate. A sudden change in romance suits you just fine.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Set goals for both yourself and other family members. A child wants to be included in your plans. Use the weekend to work on projects that will bring you pleasure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People could mistake your enthusiasm for bossiness. Fulfill your obligations to family members, neighbors. A small informal gathering at home can be both fun and inexpensive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make this a family day! Spending time outdoors has tremendous appeal. Bargains abound for those doing early Christmas shopping.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Teamwork is the key to greater success. A letter or phone call brings unexpected pleasure. Business partnerships enjoy favorable influences.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do your own household repairs to save money. Developing a cottage industry is a sure-fire way to add to the family coffers. Entertaining at home holds great appeal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A promising real estate opportunity crops up. A relative or an old friend may help you out if you are temporarily short of funds. Romance becomes more satisfying than in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Focus on self-improvement activities. Others will show you more respect when you display greater self-reliance. Catch up on paperwork related to school or business.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ◇	2 ♠	6 ◇
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

Entries are precious. Don't squander them recklessly!

We will be kind and describe South's decision to enter the auction as a flight of fancy. In spite of the opponents' partscore, the requirements for an overcall do not change materially, especially at the two-level. More often than not, action of this kind simply prolongs a disastrous rubber. After West offered a competitive raise, North made an eminently reasonable leap to six diamonds!

Luckily for the defense, South's declarer play matched his bidding. He ruffed the opening spade lead in dummy, crossed to the jack of clubs and then took the ace and king of trumps. Muttering about bad breaks when East showed out, declarer then tried to run clubs in the hope that something good would happen. Nothing did. Down two.

Even South's knowledge of the odds left something to be desired—four cards rate to break 3-1 significantly more often than 2-2. There is a simple line of play that must succeed if trumps are no worse than 3-1 and clubs are 3-2.

After ruffing the opening lead declarer crosses to the jack of clubs—that guards against a 4-1 distribution of that suit. But now declarer should cash only the king of diamonds, leaving the ace of trumps in dummy for an entry later, then start on clubs. Declarer discards his remaining two spades on the next two round of the suit. If no one ruffs, declarer continues clubs, discarding his heart losers.

Sooner or later, a defender will ruff a club. But that leaves only one trump outstanding. Whether the defender returns a heart or a spade, declarer can win—either the ace of hearts or by ruffing a spade in hand. Declarer can then get back to dummy with the ace of diamonds, drawing the last outstanding trump in the process, and run his clubs to discard his remaining heart losers.

A doctor's prescription is required

Marilyn Fiske spends some time with her 11-month-old daughter, Jamie, time which may be all too short-lived if the Fiskes can't find a liver donor for their daughter. Jamie suffers from jaundice and doctors fear she won't live much longer. Her father went to New York Thursday and asked a meeting of the American Association of Pediatrics for aid.

AP Laserphoto

For Jamie Fiske, living depends on someone else

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Little Jamie Fiske grinned hesitantly as she batted her long eyelashes and focused her big dark eyes on the nurse checking the tube running into her arm.

For Jamie, a cheerful 11-month-old, the most serious thing in the world appeared to be whether her mom would give her another Cheerio.

But her entire body is yellow from jaundice, her doctor says she faces death within a month unless she gets a new liver, and Jamie is waiting at University of Minnesota Hospitals on the chance that a donor might be found for a transplant.

"Basically, we're racing against time," her father, Charles Fiske, told a doctors' group in New York on Thursday.

MAKING a plea for his daughter to 400 physicians attending a meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics, he asked them "as the one group of people who see trauma before anybody else, to keep your eyes and ears open for the possibility of a donor for my daughter."

Because a large liver wouldn't fit into a small body, the organ must come from a 15- to 17-pound baby, said Jamie's mother, Marilyn Fiske. "There can be nothing diseased about the baby and the blood type must match," she added, sitting at her daughter's side.

"The fact that it's somebody else's tragedy that saves Jamie, that makes it hard to appeal to the public," Mrs. Fiske said.

Jamie was admitted to the Minneapolis hospital on Sept. 15 after two operations for biliary atresia at Children's Hospital in Boston.

NEITHER operation corrected the disease, in which bile backs up into the liver due to malfunctioning ducts. The victim dies from an inability to digest food, a buildup of toxins in the blood or clotting failure.

The disease occurs once in 10,000 births and usually kills by the end of the first year. Jamie was born last Thanksgiving Day.

Dr. Harvey Sharp, her Minneapolis doctor, told the Fiskes that Jamie could die within a month without a transplant.

At first, the yellowing in the whites of her eyes was the only evidence of jaundice. Now the yellow has spread and her abdomen has swollen as her liver enlarged and fluid built up inside her body.

Because liver transplants are relatively rare, Mrs. Fiske said, doctors and the public often don't think about the need for livers as donor organs. There is a well-established system for finding kidney donors, but not livers.

"It just hasn't been done long enough," she said. "Five years from now I think it will have been, and then there wouldn't be such a problem."

"They describe her as remarkable, friendly, generally interactive and a cheerful infant," he said. He described Jamie's favorite toy, a stuffed musical Mother Goose that plays the song, "You Are My Sunshine."

He began reciting the song to the hushed audience, but as his voice caught, he quit before the last line, "Please don't take my sunshine away."

"She is my sunshine," he concluded. "I love her."

About 70 child liver transplants have been performed. The success rate has been about 30 percent to 50 percent, but has been improving recently with advances in overcoming organ rejection.

Mrs. Fiske, 34, who quit her job as a remedial reading teacher in Stoughton, Mass., so she could be with her daughter, says Jamie is sometimes fussy or apparently uncomfortable, but mostly is happy and laughing.

"She's very alert and playful in spite of everything. She's very tough," Mrs. Fiske said.

Fiske, 36, an administrator of a psychiatric program at Boston University School of Medicine, planned to make his fourth trip to Minneapolis in six weeks today to visit his wife and daughter.

Fiske and a son, Daren, 2½, have stayed at home in Bridgewater, south of Boston.

"WE'LL do anything we can for Jamie. That kind of strength and energy I have," Mrs. Fiske said. "I can't get discouraged. Daren knows his sister is sick...

"Something like this could only be done for someone we love as much as Jamie."

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Tight-lipped Soviet negotiators are refusing to say how much U.S. grain the Kremlin plans to buy over the next 12 months in response to President Reagan's offer to boost exports to the grain-starved Soviet Union.

"No firm figures were given," Undersecretary of Agriculture Seeley Lodwick said today. Lodwick headed the U.S. delegation to the grain talks with the Soviets that ended here Thursday night.

After the talks, chief Soviet negotiator Boris Gordeev told reporters it was a good bargaining tactic not to commit the Soviet Union to specific purchase amounts in advance.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14¾% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 145%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16.75%

Your ERA Real Estate Specialist is now offering a worry-free way to buy and sell a home-the Sellers Security Plan.

First, the Sellers Security Plan can advance up to $100,000 on the equity in your present home to use as a down payment on your next home, providing you purchase that house through an ERA approved broker and your present home qualifies.

Then if your house hasn't sold after 210 days, ERA will buy it, at a price and terms you agree to when you accept the plan.

A minimal application fee and certified appraisal are required to see if your home qualifies.

The ERA Sellers Security Plan. Equity advance and assured sale at a price you can live with.

ERA® REAL ESTATE

*Some conditions and limitations apply. To see if you qualify, call your ERA Real Estate Specialist and review the Sellers Security Plan contract.
